It would have been cheaper to use other materials for the hinges. No one would see them. There were alloys of iron that could have been used that would have been stronger. But Solomon wanted the doors to have "hinges of gold!" Gold was valued and used because of its rarity, beauty, and workability. It could be melted without harm and shaped to meet many needs. Thus it can be used for casting objects, inlays, or overlays. The hinges for the doors of God's house had to be made of gold. The great doors that led to God hung upon them. They were important, because they opened the way to the presence of God.

Ushers Are Like Hinges

Ushers are known as doorkeepers in today's worship service. Like the hinges of Solomon's temple they serve an important purpose because worshipers and visitors perceive the open doors of the church in the context of their reception by the church ushers. The success and spirituality of any worship service hinges on good ushers known their responsibilities and carrying them out to the fullest.

A HINGE WORKS BECAUSE IT HOLDS FAST TO BOTH THE DOOR AND THE FACING. A hinge works because both of its arms are secured tightly to both the door and the door facing. A hinge that becomes disconnected from either the door or the door face will lose its pivoting ability. The door will hang or drop if either of its hands loses its grip.

Good ushers are those who have one hand in God's hand and the other on their post. It is extremely important for ushers to be Christians. Ushers must read their bibles, attend Sunday School, prayer meeting and otherwise live a godly life. Ushers should know and trust God for themselves. Their hand should always be in God's hand. No matter what the situation, their hand stays in God's hand. No matter what comes upon them, their hand stays in God's hand.

At the same time they must pay attention to their post. They must not neglect the importance of their station as they attend the needs of worshipers assigned to them. If an usher holds on to one and lets go of the other, the effectiveness of his service is minimized. An usher that holds on to God but lets go of his service is a self serving usher. An usher that pays attention to their station but lets go of God, is lost. Every usher should hold to God's unchanging hand as he remembers 1 Corinthians 15:58, "...be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

A PERFECTLY GOOD HINGE CAN BE LOOSENED. A perfectly good hinge can loose its grip. In this circumstance the hinge doesn't change but the screws that hold its arms in place become loose. When that which holds the hinge in place gets loose, the hinge loses its pivoting power and the doors begin to sag.

There are times when the best ushers get slack in their service. Somehow they lose the fire of their original commitment as they wrestle with a plethora of family problems, spiritual voids, and financial crises. Some are being besieged by temptations. Others have simply neglected their spiritual lives so long that their service has lost its attraction. The signs are impossible to ignore. They are frequently absent from their station, offering first one excuse then another. Then they reach a point when they are simply absent with no explanation at all, that's when we know that a good hinge needs to be tightened. That's when the board and the church goes into prayer and asks God to reignite the fire of enthusiasm in this weak member. Ushers who find themselves slacking should say what David said to God in the Psalm 51:10 "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

SOME HINGES WORK IN ONLY ONE DIRECTION: There are hinges that open only to the outside and others that open only to the inside. Such hinges are restricted in that the doors they serve can only be opened one way.

In the same sense, there are ushers whose cordiality and warmth is restricted to the inside. They smile and greet visitors warmly inside the church edifice. They are the perfect picture of Christianity when they are in uniform standing in their place of service. However, many have difficulty carrying that same spirit of warmth, love and cordiality on the outside. On the outside of the church they may curse, grumble, complain, argue, fight, drink, smoke cigarettes and otherwise give a bad example.

On the inside, they shout and praise the Lord. But on the outside they are an embarrassment to the cross.

On the inside they sing "Swing Lo Sweet Chariot, Stop and let me ride!" But on the outside they sing "Shorty swing my way, you sho' look good to me!"

On the inside they study the Book of Daniel but on the outside the look for Jack Daniel.

On the inside they are promising to go and tell but on the outside they are looking for motel!

What God needs is a hinge that swings both ways. It's the same on Monday as it is on Sunday!

A spiritual hinge that serves a God that is the same today as he was yesterday and will be forever more!

Hinges of Gold

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that what God needs is not only ushers who will be good hinges, but he needs hinges of gold!

A gold hinge is valuable and hard to get.

A gold hinge is important because it has been tried in the fire!

A gold hinge is a beautiful hinge that never stops looking good! If Solomon had asked for hinges of Silver things would have been different. Silver looks good for a while but with time it begins to tarnish and requires someone to stroke and polish it, to keep looking good.

But a gold hinge doesn't need stroking are polishing it looks good all by itself!

A gold hinge is malleable, which means it can be change and is easy to adapt! An usher who is a gold hinge might work the front door one Sunday and the back door on another Sunday. A gold hinge usher may be asked to work the center isle one Sunday and be asked to sit out a Sunday to give a newcomer a chance! A gold hinge won't mind cause they shine even when they are sitting down!

As I close, I'm reminded of Oil Can Harry, the mentally challenged man who went around town carrying an oil can. Wherever he found a door that seemed to squeak he would squirt it with oil. In the grocery, public buildings or even in homes along the street, Oil Can Harry would tip his hand and squirt a little oil. One Sunday morning he was climbing the steps when he overheard the usher at the door complaining in about the president and grumbling about being taken lightly. When old Harry reached the door the usher forced a smile and gave him a program. When the service was over someone asked, "Harry where is your oil can? You never leave home without it!" Harry said, "Whenever I see a door that seems to be squeaky I put a little oil on the hinge. When I came to church this morning, there was a squeaky hinge on the door and I gave her the whole can!"

Every good hinge needs a little oil! The spirit of God keeps us from squeaking!

Whenever you have God's spirit, things are not the same!

God's spirit can take:

Heavy burdens and make them light; Fears and turn them into courage!

Despair and turn it into hope; Sadness and turn it into gladness!

Failure and turn it into success; Defeat and turn it into victory

Sin and turn it into salvation!

Every good usher should be a hinge of gold because gold gives evidence to the truth that "My father is rich in houses and land and holds the wealth of the world in his hand!"

A good usher should be a gold hinge because a gold hinge knows how to tell the story! He may not preach from a golden pulpit or play a golden piano, but he knows how tell to somebody how God woke "woke me up this morning and started me on my way!"

He knows how to tell the world about Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose after three days!

I don't know about you but I've decided that come what may, from day to day, I'm going to keep my hands wrapped in the winding chain and tell the story!

Tell the Story!

Tell the Story!

Get Yo' Shine On!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Matthew 5:16

Introduction

Have you ever had someone to completely embarrass you? Most people have had an occasion or two in which a friend, family member or associate either said something or did something that was completely the opposite of your positions in life. You stand for honesty, they stand for dishonesty. You stand for truth while every word they speak is a lie. You stand for progress, while they stand for retrogression. This is the person that goes into the movie with you and yells at the screen when everyone else is quiet. This is the person that acts a complete fool in a restaurant or public place. This is the drunkard husband that loses control at an outing. Maybe it's the flirtatious wife at the company party. The situations are endless, but most people have had at least one occasion when someone has embarrassed them so badly that they wanted to hide themselves forever. On the other hand, there are other persons whose actions represent everything we stand for. We proudly own them as our own. They reflect our ideals and represent the virtues in which we believe. Whether we are embarrassed or not, therefore, depends on whether those around us have the same vibes as ourselves.

Supposed a person called himself a Christian, but did very few of the things not associated with Christianity? How would that be received? Consider Willie and Charlie, two friends who had shared most of their lives together from teenagers to grown men. They played basketball on the neighborhood court in high school. They enjoyed nights of entertainment and joyous occasions together. They talked late into the night, shared vacations, double dated and were involved in many projects. One day Willie was talking to Charlie about some music he described as "kickin!" As he scrabbled through his bag to show Charlie a new CD, a copy of a book entitled "Living the spirit filled life" fell to the floor. Charlie picked up the book and read the cover, then he saw other books in Willie's bag. "How to live for Jesus and love it" and others. With a puzzled look on his face Charlie said, "Willie, I been knowing you all these years, I didn't know you were a Christian?"

Is it possible that the people we are close to cannot recognize us as Christians outside of a church environment. At school, do your activities quickly identify you as a Christian. Would the music you listen to or "don't" listen to, suggest that there is something different about you? Would the places you go, books you read or movies that you rent all testify to your faith in God and your Christian life?

There are many today whose professed life does not equal their practiced life. There is a husband somewhere whose wife is saying, "Gee darling, I didn't know were a Christian?" There is a wife somewhere whose husband is saying, " Gee darling, I didn't know you were a Christian." These are the cases in which that which is professed does not equal that which is lived.

As Christians, we strive to live for God. We show our life quest in actions and conversations. Those who know us don't say, "I didn't know you were a Christian!" but rather "You never said it, but I could tell you were a Christian!" That happens when we let the love of God shine through us as a living testimony of God's grace. That's when what we are shines through free and clear!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he commands his disciples to let their life style and works glorify God in every way.

Throughout the journey of the Jews God told them repeatedly that they were his chosen people. He intended for their survival, deliverance and success to be a light for all of those in the world who did not know God. Isaiah 49:6 says, "I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth." Thus, God made it clear that he intended for the entire life experience of a believer to be a witness to people everywhere. He did not expect them to do anything except serve him and obey and love their fellow man. The world would take notice of their humble acts of obedience.

In the New Testament, Jesus repeats the same principal. In Chapters five and six of Matthew, Jesus seems to give a conflicting directive to believers. In Chapter 5 he urges every believer to do good works that they may glorify God. Yet, in Chapter six he seem to urge believers to do what they do in private, not to be seen of men. This left some believers puzzled. Should they let their light shine or should they simply keep a low profile and hide their works?

While Matthew 5:16 says, "Let your light shine" chapter 6:1-3 says, if you do a good work and give to help the poor, do so in secret. Matthew 6:3 says, "But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth."

While Matthew 5:16 says, "Let your light shine" chapter 6:5-8 says, if you pray and talk to God, do that in secret or at the least in humility. Matthew 6:6 says, "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly."

In Matthew 6:16-18 Jesus says that when we fast, do that in secret. We are encouraged to fast but to avoid demonstrations in the sight of men that let them know that we have been fasting. Matthew 6:18 “That thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret: and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.”

In matters of service, benevolence, prayer and personal sacrifice we see Jesus instructing us to avoid calling attention to ourselves.

The irony of this avoidance is that the very fact that we don’t call attention to what we do attracts notice, but the notice we receive is not personal. People are able to see God working in us and through us.

Thus, we are encouraged to do good works before others for the purpose of glorifying God. Those who help the needy, do so not for personal glory. Those who live righteously, do so not for personal glory, but to glorify God. Those who achieve a great success while doing a good work were not seeking the fan fare that accompanies success, but were doing the work itself, thus God gets the glory.

To let our light shine means each believer must assume a humble walk. We do that which must be done because of our calling, but we do it with humility.

Our eternal song whenever praise comes our way, is “to God be the glory for the things he has done!”

How to get your shine on!

Young Christians are learning the difficult task of the humble walk. It is difficult because the world teaches each person to walk in pride. A popular song among youth uses the phrase, “Get yo’ shine on!” encouraging them to stand out, look good, be “bout it,” etc. The idea of letting our light shine certainly appeals to Christian youth because they are taught to let their lives be a witness to others for Christ.

As Christian youth, how can you get your shine on? How can you let God’s light shine everywhere you go?

Every substance responds to light in one of three ways:

REFLECTION: Some people, like some materials, only reflect the light. When a substance reflects light, it in essence rejects it. It does not let it through! God stands poised to help every boy and girl become the best that they can be, but there are so many that send God’s love right back to him, without a response. God offers friendship, but when certain youth receive his offer they bounce it right back. God offers his presence, but many simply bounce it right back to him, preferring to operate alone. God offers his love, still others send that back too, preferring the love of those around them to the love of God. There are many youth today who simply reject God and send his offers of warmth, help, friendship and companionship back to him without a response.

Many youth know of adults who are not associated with their families who have gone above and beyond the call of duty to help them. There are teachers who are trying to help youth improve their grades. Coaches that are trying to bring out their best athletic skills, civic workers who are trying to improve their social skills and others attributes. These persons are trying to help you to get your shine on! However, many young people reject the help of those who are trying to help them only to continue to walk in darkness.

ABSORPTION: There are other youth that absorb the light, but still won't let it through. There are substances such as dark colored clothing that do not reflect light, they simply absorb it and hold the light. It goes no where! These are the young people who have not rejected the light. They listen to their teachers and advisors. They have received what has been said. They have absorbed it but they have not used it. They know the truths but they are not acting on it! They know their capacity but they are achieving their fullest potential.

Spiritually it is the same. There are many who know the word of God. Many have committed it to memory but simply won't let God work with them! They know that Jesus said in Matthew 6:33 "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." They know what it says but they won't let God's light through! They know Philippians 4:13 that says, " I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." They know it, but they won't let it through!

Youth should remember that "you can't get your shine on, until you act on that which you know to be true!"

TRANSPARENT: There are youth who allow God's light to shine through them and as it shines, others see it! A young boy about nine years old went with his parents to Europe one summer. Part of their tour was visiting the great old cathedrals of the past. As he would visit cathedral after cathedral he saw the massive stained glass portraits of the disciples and of other saints. He was so impressed as he stood in these great empty halls looking through the beautiful stained glass windows.

Upon return, when asked by his Sunday School teacher to define a saint, he thought for a moment about those massive beautiful stained glass windows and said, "A saint is a man the light shines through."

That literally defines the believer and explains Matthew 5:16 at the same time. When we bask in the light of God's word we do not reject or simply absorb it and hold it, but we act on it. As we do that which we believe for the work's sake alone, we let God's light shine through us, others will see it and God will get the glory!

Beyond simply letting God's light shine through us the Christian becomes a magnifying glass which intensifies the light as it passes through and brings, power, energy and heat into every situation in which he or she focuses the power of God. There is so much power and energy that it becomes obvious that it is not the magnifying glass but the light source that deserves the praise.

Get your shine on!

Finally, consider what Jesus said to his disciples and to every believer today. Matthew 5:14-15 says, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house."

If every believer is expected to be a city on a hill that cannot be hid, then you need to get your shine on!

Whenever there is an opportunity to demonstrate the love of God, it's shining time! It's time to get your shine on!

Whenever you are needed to help someone in distress, it's shining time! It's time to get your shine on!

Even when it gets tough at school and students and teachers are getting on your last nerve, it's shining time! It's time to get your shine on!

Young believers let your light shine!

When Puff Daddy talks about the "Victory", It's time to get your shine on, tell the world that God has told us that we are "more than conquerors" in him who loves us!

When Master P starts talking about "I got the hook up!" That's when you know it's shining time. That's when you let the world know that we serve a God who can hook us up with everything we need. Whatever I need God's Got it!

When LL Cool J starts talking about "Father," that's when its time to put your shine on! Only a child of God can say it right... Father! I stretch my hand to thee, no other help I know, if thou withdraw thyself from me, whether shall I go!

No wonder the song writer said, "This little light of mine, I'm going to let it shine! Everywhere I go, I'm going to let it shine!

We have to tell the world about Jesus!Who died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning he opened his eyes...

I can hear him saying in my mind..

It's time to get my shine on!

All These Things Are Against Me

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

May 3, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "And Jacob their father said unto them, Me have ye bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are against me." Genesis 42:36

Introduction

Do you ever reach a point when it appears that everything is working against you? There are periods in life when the chain of events and circumstances seem directed against us, especially when they occur in succession. Those are the times when everything that can go wrong does just that. Those are the especially trying times when all news is bad news and it seems to come in floods! When these kinds of times appear they prompt us to feel like the slogan on the Morton Salt box which says, "When it rains, it pours."

We become especially frustrated when we experience a string of bad experiences because somehow, deep down, we expect God to walk us around the valley of the shadow of death and to shield us completely from evil and temptation rather than delivering us from evil. Our carnal understanding of life is that every circumstance should be for us and nothing should work against us. We were told that once we became a Christian that everything would work for us...something is wrong! Isn't it? These troubles are not part of the deal!

Consider Caldonia, who was a fine, plump hen in the chicken yard, but she was a bit naive. Her feelings were often hurt because the rooster wouldn't let her get close to the farmer when he came inside the gate. "You push me back every time he comes in the gate. All of the other hens always get the best feed and I always get what's left. Some even get put in the special coop. They are fed well and don't have to scratch for worms and chicken feed. I think its unfair of you to work against me so much." The old rooster liked Caldonia, even though she was a bit slow. "Caldonia, you are a fine, good looking chick but sometimes you don't think. Have you ever seen a single chicken that was put in the coop return to this yard? It may seem that I'm against you from Monday to Saturday, but I'm trying to save you from being somebody's Sunday dinner!"

So it is with the Christian experience in life. We often complain about that which appears at the moment to be against us. We are so close to our life's experience that we cannot conceive of any way that such negative and painful experiences can ever be anything but something that works against our best interest. Just as a child that is not allowed to keep company with unrowdy friends or attend questionable social events can't understand why parents work against them so much, we often interpret that which is meant for our good as actually something that is against us.

As Christians, we must always remember that any experience we encounter is one in a series of encounters designed for our betterment. We trust God in the experience, knowing that when it has passed we will have gained from that which we once thought was against us.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jacob as he interprets an unfortunate string of events as something that was working against him.

Jacob, at the time of this text, was an elderly man. For over a decade he had mourned what he thought was the untimely death of his son Joseph. He brooded over that loss as he also wrestled with the domestic problem of scarcity of food. He decided to send his sons to Egypt to purchase grain for the family. There they encountered Joseph, the younger brother they had sold into slavery 12 years earlier, but did not recognize him. Joseph was moved when he saw them but did not reveal himself to them. Instead, he told the brothers to prove themselves honest men and not spies. He took one of the brothers, Simeon, and held him hostage until the brothers returned home and brought their younger brother Benjamin with them. In this, they would prove that they were not spies, but honest men as they claimed.

When the brothers gave this report to Jacob he was disheartened. He responded that "Joseph is not." "Simeon is not and ye will take Benjamin away." When he considered what was before him, Jacob responded by saying, "All these things are against me!"

Jacob's response was based on misconceptions. When Jacob concluded that events were working against him, his was a response to what he perceived to be adversarial situations. Jacob believed that Joseph was dead. He was presented his son's beautiful coat of many colors, stained with animal blood. He believed Joseph to be dead and he suspected his older sons, who were jealous of Joseph, to have played a part in his death. He counted Joseph's loss as something that worked against him. The famine caused a tremendous problem for Jacob. He had a large family as well as many workers. In his old age, dealing with scarcity of food was a great strain. He counted that as something else that worked against him. The incarceration of Simeon was also considered to be just another example of life working against him, only to add the possible loss of Benjamin as well. When he looked at the events, he dropped his head in bereavement and concluded that, "all these things are against me."

In actuality, none of the events that Jacob lamented were working against him, although they appeared that way at the moment. Joseph's disappearance was not against him. By being sold into slavery, God eventually placed Joseph in a position of trust in Egypt that would mean help for his family 12 years later and a comfortable existence for his father for the remainder of his days. It looked to be against him, but it was actually working out to Jacob's benefit. The famine turned out to be the catalyst that pushed Jacob to send his sons to Egypt where they eventually met Joseph and reunited the family. At that moment, the famine appeared to be against him, but it too served a useful purpose in God's plan. Even the incarceration of Simeon and the request to bring Benjamin were not working against him. They would lead to moments of greater joy, although that purpose could not be seen. Certainly, Jacob had a misconception about God's movement in his life.

Jacob ignored the past. When Jacob said "all things are against me" he spoke with a very short memory. If anyone should know how God operates in the course of human events, it should have been Jacob. It was Jacob who was placed in the uncomfortable position of working 14 years to get the woman he loved. It was Jacob who turned that experience into a profit as he left his uncle's employment after two decades and returned home a rich man. It was Jacob who wrestled with an angel and walked away with a new name, and a great blessing from God. It was Jacob who was successful at every venture to which he put his hands. Obviously it was inaccurate for Jacob to suggest that "all these things are against me." In a great way, God had shown Jacob how he can take any circumstance, even one that appears adverse, and make it work to the advantage of those that trust in him. Had Jacob remembered this truth he would have probably concluded that, "all these things will work to my benefit" instead of "all these things are against me".

Isaiah, responding to a similar circumstance, gave the proper response in Isaiah 38:16, "O Lord, by these things men live, and in all these things is the life of my spirit: so wilt thou recover me, and make me to live." His was expression of hope and faith in God rather than an expression of despair.

Thus the believer is encouraged to remember that despite the appearance of negative circumstances, "so wilt thou recover me, and make me to live!"

Everything is Against Me

Today there are millions of people who believe the world is against them. They suspect everyone and everything. There are even some who suffer from spiritual paranoia. They suspect that God has forsaken them and that they are being overwhelmed by a stream of circumstances that are working against them.

These are the individuals who sing the song (to the tune of Jesus love me):

God doesn't love me, this I know my misfortunes tell me so if things are good it won't be long fo' everything starts going wrong
everything is against me
everything is against me
everything is against me

my misfortunes tell me so

While some sing the song of misery and defeat Christians should remember:

WHAT MAY APPEAR TO BE AGAINST US MAY NOT BE SO: When misfortunes happen we struggle to understand why they happen. On one day thousands of people pray to God for a financial blessing. Instead of raining dollar bills from heaven, God sends hail stones as big as baseballs. There are broken windows, dented cars, smashed roofs and tremendous damage everywhere. Some are tempted to say, "everything is working against us," until they realize that after the repairs are made there will be enough left over to solve that financial problem for which they prayed. What often appears to be against us, usually turns out to be for us.

A family devastated by criminal behavior can be torn apart when a son or daughter is arrested and jailed. But when that child arises a better man or woman as a result of the experience, we remember that what appears to be against us, often turns out to be for us!

The prophet Jeremiah was shown a great truth at the potter's house. There he saw a potter making clay pots. However, each time there was a flaw in the clay the potter tore down the entire mold and started over again. In a similar sense, sometimes God allows some things to happen to us, like flawed clay pots, that require us to be completely reshaped. It appears destructive at the moment, but God has a greater intent in mind.

NO MATTER HOW NEGATIVE SOMETHING APPEARS, GOD IS BEHIND THE SCENES. Every believer should remember that no matter how bad a circumstance may appear, God is always present with them and is secretly working behind the scenes in many ways to help us. Often we do not even know that it is happening!

Believers are not promised immunity from unfortunate circumstances. We are never promised that there will be no auto accidents, sicknesses, financial troubles, marital ripples, and personal frustrations. We are never promised that we will always have a job. Neither are we promised financial security. We are promised that regardless to what comes our way, God will be there for us!

If we are struggling with troubles that have put our livelihoods at stake, it may seem that the world is against us, but the believer takes hope in God's promise in Psalm 37:25 "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

If we are besiged by troubles on the left and problems on the right, we don't worry too much about it, because as long as God is on the case I can, "Lift up my eyes unto hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth!

If we believe in God, trust in him, and walk in his way, he will work every negative situation out to our advantage. We e know this to be true because of what God has promised in his word. Romans 8:28 reads, "And we know that all things work together for good to those who love God, to those who are the called according to His purpose."

God will make a way

Finally, every believer must keep one assurance in mind. He should remember that no matter how difficult the path or dangerous the road, God is still in control. He will make a way!

We have the assurance that although we do not know exactly what each circumstance means, God still holds the reins of life and will steer every situation so that we come out stronger and better because of it!

When Jacob's son finally realized who Joseph was, it was then that he realized that God had turned a bad thing into a good thing!

When Jacob saw all of his family reunited and plenty of food on the table it was then that he realized that God had taken what he thought was a bad thing and turned it into a good thing!

When Jacob was able to put his arms around the son that he thought was dead, then realized that instead of working against him, God had been working for him all along!

When Israel left Egypt they stood at the mouth of the Red Sea. The Red sea was in front of them and Pharaoh's army was behind them. The were caught in the middle with no place, that's when they discovered that Lord can make a way out of no way!

Somebody can testify how God can take a bad thing and turn it into a good thing.

We serve a God who can take a bad thing like:

FAILURE and turn it into success; DEFEAT and turn it into victory!

SADNESS and turn it into gladness; SORROW and turn it into joy!

HATRED and turn it into love; LOSSES and turn them into gains!

TROUBLES and turn them into triumphs; BROKEN HEARTS turn them into happy souls!

Because we serve a God who specializes in taking bad situations and turning them into good, we don't worry because we know the Lord will make a way somehow!

We serve a God who understands what it means to have troubles on every hand!

They sat him down and taunted him all night long, but he kept looking forward to the day that every knee would bow and every tongue would confess that Jesus was Lord of Lords!

They put a crown of thorns on his head, but he kept looking to the day when the angels would cry out, "bring forth the royal diadem and crown him, crown, Lord of Lords!

They stretched him out wide and drove nails into hands but he never said a word. He just looked forward to the day when he would stand with all power in his hands!

On Golgotha's hill God took a bad thing and turn it into a good thing!

He took an old rugged cross, an emblem of shame, and turned it into a symbol of hope!

He took the death of one man and turn it into life for millions!

He died out on Calvary! But Early...Early Sunday morning..

God took a bad thing.....

SCRIPTURE: "Hearken unto thy father that begat thee, and despise not thy mother when she is old. Buy the truth, and sell it not; also wisdom, and instruction, and understanding. The father of the righteous shall greatly rejoice: and he that begetteth a wise child shall have joy of him. Thy father and thy mother shall be glad, and she that bare thee shall rejoice." Proverbs 23:22-25

Introduction

What is the best way to please your mother? As Mother's Day approaches each year children scramble to find unique ways to make their mothers happy. Many kitchens are ruined on the second Sunday in May as little hands try their skill at frying water and boiling bacon to make mother a breakfast served in bed. Many mothers are humbled by the thought as they dread the prospect of cleaning up the kitchen after their breakfast in bed. Others buy beautiful cards, flowers, gifts and a plethora of other symbols of love and respect. As the nation honors its mothers families will pay tribute in a variety of ways that include: Wearing red roses to signify our mothers are living still and white roses to signify those mothers who have passed on; making long distance phone calls; attending church with them or dining out with them. The ways to symbolize a family's love and respect for mother vary. They all seem insignificant when compared to what mothers have given of themselves in sacrifice for their families.

How successful are our efforts to please mother? Consider the mother who had a daughter who was faithful, studious, and hardworking with a deep sense of morality. At home, she was often criticized for her unwillingness to lower her standards and for her sense of personal pride and ethics. To succeed in the corporate world however, she lowered her standards considerably and was the subject of rumors at the company. It was said that she would do anything to succeed. Unfortunately the rumors made it home more often than she did. One Mother's Day the daughter came home and showered her mother with expensive diamond earrings and a pearl necklace. The mother hugged her and expressed thanks. As the mother talked, she continued to stare at a picture of her daughter in her youth and an empty frame that sat next to it. She had taken selected pages from an old family bible and made matts for the frame. She often stared at the empty frame. Occasionally she broke a smile. The daughter sensed something was wrong and inquired. Staring at the picture said, "I appreciate the gifts, I really do." Then she asked her daughter to read the verse that would fall just underneath any picture that was put in that frame. The daughter read the words, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thy own understanding." At that the mother said, "What would really make me happy would be to see the little girl in this picture, grow big enough to fit this empty frame."

Each mother works to provide a framework for her children. That framework consists of certain values that will square their lives. Those values certainly include: morality, hard work, positive spirit and faithfulness to God. Most mothers spend their entire lives trying to help their children fit the frame. They lecture, beg, plead, pray, argue and use every resource available to them to help their children reach a point when they are able to fit the frame. There are many today, long after their mothers have left them, who are still struggling to fit the frame, even as they pay respect to memories of mothers gone to be with the Lord.

Would she have been happier if there had been more flowers? Could you have brought a bigger smile if the gift you purchased had cost just a little more? Does our checkbook capacity bring her joy? Probably not. Many mothers would gladly exchange all of the flowers, candy, gifts and cards just for the knowledge that their sons and daughters are safe, secure, happy, fulfilled and that their lives fit the frame.

As Christians, we give thanks to God for mothers. They have been the source of our inspiration and joy. Our quest is to live our lives in such a way their life's work is justified, knowing that we have finally grown big enough to fit the frame!

Exposition

This text focuses on great words of wisdom that share how to please our parents and to bring joy to our mothers.

Proverbs, a great book of wisdom and knowledge, often addresses the subject of children and parents. This is done often to draw parallels between our relationship between our parents and that which also exists with God. This is the case with verses 24 and 25 of Proverbs 23.

The scope of the instruction in Proverbs is that believers should seek to be honest, truthful, obedient and wise. Having done these, every believer pleases God and brings joy. In the same way that a son or a daughter gains the praise and admiration of his father and mother, believers also gain the praise and admiration of God when we seek after truth, live righteously and act wisely.

While describing what pleases God, Proverbs also describes what brings joy to our earthly parents. What pleases God is that every believer lives a righteous life.

What pleases parents most is to know that their children are doing the right thing with their lives. Children who live and act wisely are the source of perpetual joy to their parents. Their actions constantly bring gladness and cheer into both parents.

Verse 25 adds an interesting footnote. "And she that bare thee shall rejoice!"

It is a striking contrast to Proverbs 17:25 that notes that instead of bringing joy to the woman who bore them, a foolish child brings "bitterness to the one who bore him."

The word translated "rejoice" in this text is the Hebrew word "Giyl" (Gheel) which means to delight while trembling in fear, awe and respect.

In the 44 times in which this word is used in the Old Testament, it is mostly used in the context that a person is receiving joy in response to the power, mercy, benevolence and intervention of God. For example, Psalm 2:11 says, "Serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling." Those who rejoice in this context do so because they are aware that it is only the powerful hand of God that moves around them that protects and blesses them. Psalm 13:5 says, "I have trusted in thy mercy, my heart shall rejoice in thy salvation." Those who rejoice in this context do so because God has rewarded their trust with salvation. Each time they think about it, their joy is renewed. Psalm 31:7 says, "I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy for thou hast considered my trouble; thou hast known my soul in adversities." In this context a believer rejoices because God has been merciful in times of trouble.

Thus, when the text notes that a child that lives wisely, truthfully and honestly, a mother is prompted to rejoice, it suggests that the mother is glad, but with a sense of trembling, awe and respect for God because it is through him that there is hope for life!

What Pleases Mother

The emphasis of Mother's Day is to show our mothers our concern and love on one special day. However, what can we do to please our mothers, beyond Mother's Day. Obviously, it is not practical to buy gifts every day or to even go out to dinner every day. What can be done on a daily basis to turn every day into a mother's day?

CONSIDER HER COUNSEL: The wisdom of a mother's experience can often be the difference between success of failure for a son or daughter. She would be thoroughly pleased if she knew her children followed her counsel. Mothers provide invaluable counsel and advice to their children in matters of love, understanding of people and pitfalls to avoid. It doesn't matter what profession a child may choose, if it involves people sooner or later mother's counsel will play a part. That's the time when you will remember how mothers taught you to be careful how you treat people because the same people you trample on your way up, you may meet on the way down. It doesn't matter how sophisticated your chosen occupation, if it involves concentration, dedication and perseverance, sooner or later, mother's counsel will play a part.

That's when you remember how she told you once you have begun a project don't quit until it is done. It doesn't matter how complicated and involved your life pursuit is, if it requires perfection, you'll hear mother's voice saying, give nothing but your best, accept nothing less than the best.

Mother's may not know much about what it is that you do. However, their experience has taught them about people, which is where most of us mess up. Her counsel can save us much embarrassment and disgrace.

REMEMBER HER EXAMPLE OF INDUSTRY: The good mother rejoices when her children are gainfully industrious. A mother rejoices when it appears that her example of doing honest and praiseworthy work is followed by her children. Every mother wants her children to know how to take care of themselves and to provide for their own food, clothing and shelter. From childhood she has encouraged each to employ themselves at some form of praiseworthy industry. Mothers are not picky. They are just as proud of the daughter that waits tables as they are of the son who is a school teacher. What pleases her is that her children are able to stand for themselves. Those who are not able to do so draw her smiles, each time they try, even thought they may fail in their trying.

REMEMBER HER WHEN SHE IS WEAK: Often mothers give the impression that they are pillars of strength. In actuality many have destroyed their health and strength trying to insure the strength of their families. A mother is happy to know that in her hour of weakness that her children do not forsake her, but will provide for her care. Physical sickness, emotional crises and aging are three maladies that eventually catch up and overtake even strongest mothers. These are times when a mother rejoices to know that those that she loves have not abandoned her or forsaken her. These may be times when she may seem difficult to deal with as she struggles with the frustration of advancing aging or failing health. Inside, however, her soul rejoices that her children stand by her, even in the face of her weakness.

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider the source of a mother's joy.

A Christian mother's happiness comes from seeing her baby's smile, but that's not the source of her joy, because babies don't always smile

A mother is glad when she sees a son or daughter reach a high point in life, but that's not the real source of her joy, because children don't always reach high points, sometime they fall flat on the faces.

A mother is excited when she hears good news about one of her children, but that's not the source of her joy, because sometimes she hears bad news.

A mother is elated when she hears words of praise from her child, but that's not the source of her joy, because sometimes what she hears breaks her heart.

A mother is ecstatic when her child becomes a success, but that's not the source of her joy, because sometimes her child sees nothing but failure.

A mother is elated when her children perform good deeds, but that's not the source of her joy, because sometimes children do bad things!

A mother is impressed when her children are pictures of perfection, but that's not the source of her joy, because children make many mistakes.

Moments of happiness are man made, but a mother's joy doesn't come from man-made moments, but it comes from knowing the Lord.

A mother who knows the Lord, can withstand the greatest of life's storms!

A mother who knows the Lord, can find strength in the midst of her own weakness!

A mother who knows the Lord, can fight back the tears of disappointment and greet a failing child with a smile!

A mother who knows the Lord, can show courage in the face of family problems that bring fear to the heart.

A mother who knows the Lord has a joy that bubbles from the inside that cannot be extinguished by the circumstances of life. Maybe that's why the song writer declared, "This joy I have, the world didn't give it and the world can't take it away!"

The believing mother affirms, that this joy I have:

Lifts me up when I feel down!

Comforts me when I feel lonely!

Cheers me when I feel sad!

Every child who has a Christian mother should watch your mother's walk then tell the Lord, "I want Jesus to walk with me..You walked with my mother, now walk with me!"

You know Jesus don't you?

Jesus, who carried and old cross for you and me!

Jesus, who was stretched out between two thieves!

Jesus, who looked down from the cross at Mary and all mothers to come and said, "Woman, behold thy son!"

He died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

He has all power in his hands!

All power!

SCRIPTURE: And she said, Truth, Lord: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' table. Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour. Matthew 15: 27-28

Introduction

Have you ever felt yourself praying for a blessing? Any kind of blessing will do, even a small itsy bitsy one! Those are the times when you're simply not choicy about the size and type of blessing. Any blessing will do! Not a million dollars, just $20 will do! Not a new car, but you'd be happy if the one you have would just start! Not a new house, but just getting the squeaky door on this one repaired would be fine! Not a big high paying job with an office and a window overlooking the city, just a few less hassles on this one would be fine! If you've ever had those kind of moments then you know what it's like to experience the spiritual trauma that creates the illusion of a "blessing drought!" That's when things get so bad that you stop troubling God about the big things and would be happy just to get a little something from heaven.

Sometimes, even the best of us get pretty selective in what we ask God for. Not shoes, but designer shoes! Not food, but expensive cuisine! Not an automobile, but a stretch limousine! Not our daily bread, but the entire bakery! As God provides our daily needs for us, believers must be careful not to be too specific and demanding in what we request of God. Sometimes our blessing is not in a new car, but on the city bus. Our blessing may not be in the appointment or promotion that we seek, but in another job, even with another company! Our blessing may not be in the fact that we received a "Gold Card" in the mail, but the real blessing may be in the letter that turned us down!

Consider the homeless woman who came into millions by what appeared to be the grandest stroke of luck. Her house was filled with fine furniture and her closets were filled with the best that money could buy. However, people were puzzled that an obviously wealthy woman would continue to wear a pair of run down old shoes one her feet daily. No matter what the occasion or the style of dress, she wore the same pair old shoes. Finally a friend asked why she continued to wear the old tattered shoes. She was inspired by her answer. “I was poor and homeless.” She began. “I. was tired of searching the alleys and trash barrels for food every day. I was cold and had no shoes on my feet. One day, I sat quivering and talked to God saying, “Lord, I ain’t never asked you for much, but right now I need a big one!” Later that evening she found an old pair of tattered shoes in a trash barrel. She shouted “Thank you Lord” as she put the shoes on her feet. She tipped into a church prayer service that night and sat on the back row. After the service she was met by a kind wealthy woman who gave her a job in her home. She attended the woman for many years and they became friends. Upon the woman’s death she left all her fortune to her former homeless maid. “Now even though I have dozens of dresses and can buy anything I want to put on my feet. I wear these old shoes, because one day I asked God for a big blessing, but all I got was these old shoes! They walked me to the house of God and put me in his care. Ever since that day, I hardly ever take them off my feet because I’ve been walking on my blessing every day!

How many of us are walking on our blessings every day? We didn’t get the big one we asked for but God sent us just what we needed! How many can testify that when we asked God for our daily bread we were disturbed when we all we received were crumbs! How many of us have lived to see how God worked with the crumbs and made them into bread?

As Christians, we have witnessed the power of God. We know he is able to bless us with just a touch of his garment, a word from his lips, or with a crumb from his table to provide for our need! Our prayer daily is, “Give us this day our daily bread!” But if not the whole loaf..a crumb will do!

Exposition

This text focuses upon a gentile woman whose faith in Christ demonstrated that even a small blessing from him would be sufficient.

The woman upon which this text focuses was not of the people of Israel, of whom came the patriarchs, and prophets, and the parents of the Lord Jesus Christ according to the flesh; of whom the Virgin Mary herself was, who was the Mother of Christ. The text makes special note of the fact by noting that as the Lord, “departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, and behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts,”(v22) and with the greatest earnestness begged of Him the mercy to heal her daughter, “who was grievously vexed with a devil.” Tyre and Sidon were not cities of the people of Israel, but of the Gentiles; though they bordered on that people. Though she was not a Jew, she cried out, and boldly knocked.

God’s original plan of Salvation was for Christ to come and offer the great blessing of redemption only to Jewish people, referred to as the “lost sheep of Israel.” Though he contained himself mostly in the Jewish community giving blessings of healing and hope to all that would hear, word of his mighty works spread outside of the Jewish community. The outsiders, those who were not Jews, were called a variety of names by the Jews. They were sometimes called "swine" and often called "dogs" because they were idol worshipers or ate foodstuffs from swine.

Most of Jesus' personal ministry was focused on the House of Israel. After they rejected him and crucified him, he commissioned his disciples to reach out to the entire world. When the woman of Canaan came to him asking for a blessing Jesus' reply was, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

In verse 26 Jesus said, "It is not meet to take the children's bread, and cast it to dogs." A full understanding of the text requires us to focus on three words, "children", "bread" and "dogs."

Children. People who were Jews considered themselves the children of God. Jews and Jews alone considered God as their father and the people as his humble offspring. They also considered themselves the descendants of Israel and thus his "children." The reference to children was not a reference to a single child, but a reference to their race as being special before God.

Bread. In his discussions with the Jews he often compared himself to the bread that was rained down from heaven by God upon Israel when it wandered in the wilderness for 40 years. That bread was called "manna." He characterized himself as the new bread from heaven. His was a blessing of salvation and hope to the people.

Dogs. Anyone who was not a Jew was considered a dog or an outsider. At the least, he is a non-believer. At the most he is prohibited from enjoying the full blessings of a benevolent God.

Thus Jesus response to the woman meant, "It is not good to take the blessings of healing and hope that are intended for the people of Israel and give them to outsiders."

The woman was not intimidated by the reference to 'dogs" she quickly used the same statement in an illustration, "yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' table."

Her faith was so intense that she believed that just a small portion of God's grace would be sufficient to resolve her need. It was the same attitude that a woman who had been afflicted by an issue of blood for 12 years assumed. She felt that if she could just touch the hem of his garment, it would be sufficient. The woman of Canaan didn't want a lot, just a crumb! Not a whole dispensation, a crumb would be sufficient!

Her faith in the power of God resulted in the healing of her daughter. It was achieved but by asking for something big, but just from a crumb from the master's table.

The Power of Crumbs

Today there are millions of people who are overwhelmed by the fact that all life seems to have given them are crumbs. They have assumed the attitude of the poet who said that life is a "crust of bread and a corner to sleep in, a minute of joy and an hour to weep in..." Many have made themselves miserable lamenting the fact that all they ever seem to get in life is crumbs!

Initially, when we think of crumbs, we usually think of small particles of food left on a plate, scattered on a table or dropped on the floor. We think of crumbs as a useless by product, more of a nuisance than a resource.

Mr. Webster reminds us that the "crumb" of a slice of bread is the soft inner part, while the crust is the hard outer part. The "crumbs" are the small pieces of the crumb that become separated from the whole. With that in mind we should consider that:

THERE IS POWER IN THE CRUMBS: The power of God is unimaginable. What we enjoy today are only the crumbs of what he is able to do. We have learned how splitting a single Plutonium or Uranium atom can cause a chain reaction that can kill millions of people and with fallout that lasts for years. That's from splitting one atom. But each human body contains millions of atoms. There are many atoms in the world that they cannot be counted. This indicates the immense power of God. God's power is so great and intense that if he actually gave us all he was capable of giving, we couldn't stand it! For our sake, we have been given crumbs! If we received much more we would injure ourselves.

OUR BLESSINGS ARE BUT CRUMBS: Whatever we have accumulated in this life are just crumbs! Take an inventory, whatever is found is just crumbs, when compared to the storehouse of God. In Psalm 50:10-12 God reminds believers that the whole world is his including, " every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains: and the wild beasts of the field are mine. If I were hungry, I would not tell thee: for the world is mine, and the fulness thereof." Everything we have is but a small crumb from the great storehouse of God's goodness.

DON'T TAKE YOUR CRUMBS LIGHTLY: Perhaps you have noticed that some homemakers are studious about collecting your bread scraps. The reason is those crumbs and scraps have value. They take the old bread crumbs and crush and season them and turn them into dressings and puddings and scores of other uses. An entire industry has evolved among those who don't take crumbs lightly. They sell bagged crumbs for dressings and salads and other epicurean uses and make millions. All they sell are crumbs!

What crumb has fallen into your life from God's immense storehouse? What are you doing with it? Are you leaving it upon the plate of life, waiting on a whole slice instead? Perhaps your crumb is a special talent or ability. Perhaps your crumb is an attractive personality that inspires people. Maybe your crumb is a quiet comforting manner. Whether your crumb is genius or ingenuity, don't take your crumb lightly! Gather up the idle crumbs of skill, personality, talent, faith and hope and prepare to use them. There is a whole world waiting for someone like you who can take their crumbs and turn them into dressing!

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider who can expect to receive crumbs from the master's table.

If this text does anything, it makes it abundantly clear that anyone who has faith in the Lord can get a blessing. The woman of this text was a Canaanite. She was a direct descendant of Ham, the son of Noah, most notably identified with the African people.

The woman in effect said, "Lord I'm not a Jew, but all I want is just a small blessing; a crumb from the table!"

When the Lord looked upon her he didn't see a woman of African descent. He didn't see a woman buried under a sea of stereotypes and racial nicknames! What he saw was a human being with a believing heart!

The Lord doesn't care whether you are a Caucasian-American or an African-American. He doesn't care whether you are a Hispanic-American or an Asian-American. It doesn't matter to God whether you are an American at all! What counts most is whether you have a believing heart!

That's why Jesus told the woman of Canaan, "O woman, great is thy faith!"

Faith can show us how to take the crumbs that life gives us and turn them into delicious dressings!

Faith can take the hog guts that life throws us and turn them into "chitterlings!"

Faith can take the bread scraps of life and turn them into bread pudding!

Faith can take the lemons that make life so sour and turn them into lemonade!

There is more power in the crumbs that fall from the master's table than the whole loaf in the devil's bread box!

Consider the man who was taken as a prisoner during the great war! As the soldiers broke into his house he grabbed a piece of bread and stuffed into his pocket. Blindfolded, they marched him all night long to a secret camp. As he walked along the road, he crumbled the bread and punched a whole in his pocket. Ever so often he dropped a few bread crumbs along the way. That night he and several comrades managed to escape but didn't know how to get home. He ran boldly in the right direction and never missed a turn. Once they were safe, they asked him how he was able to find his way back and he answered, "I just followed the trail of the crumbs!"

When someone wants to know the source of your blessing, tell them to "follow the trail of the crumbs!"

I may be wearing a decent looking, suit but it's just a crumb from the master's table!

I may be driving a brand new car, but it's just a crumb from the master's table!

If you want to know where the blessings come from, follow the trail of the crumbs!

Follow that trail to a little town in Bethlehem!

Follow that trail to a carpenter's shop in Nazareth!

Follow that trail through the winding streets of Jerusalem!

Follow that trail to a cross sitting on a hill!

When you get to the end of the trail say, Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, feed me till I want no more!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead with all power!

All power in his hands!

Tall Trees Need Deep Roots

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 24, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." Psalm 1:3

Introduction

Do you ever dream of reaching high heights? How high have you set your sights? Youth have a multiplicity of dreams that range from becoming movie stars, fashion designers, professional athletes to politicians, business persons and millionaires. Dreams are the substance of ambition. Those who reach high goals in life begin with great dreams. What does it take to grow tall enough to reach one's dreams? Simply height alone? Reaching high goals will take more than simply dreaming. Success does not come from idle fantasies. Those who dream of reaching high heights learn what it takes to make it to the top, then once there, to stay at the top.

Certain qualities are needed for anyone to reach the high heights they seek. Those who would go high need only to the lesson of nature, which gives one simple but profound lesson, "tall trees need deep roots." In the Bible, godly people are often likened to trees. Joni Eareckson Tada wrote about this in her book Diamonds in the Dust: "The branches of growing trees not only reach higher, but their roots grow deeper. It's impossible for a strong tree to have high branches without having deep roots. It would become top-heavy and topple over in the wind."

A high school graduate is a seedling in the forest of life. The graduate has been standing with the help of his family that has propped him up to help him grow straight and tall. She has been held in place, watered and protected from strong winds. The little seedling has been nurtured, fed and shielded from hurt harm and danger. At graduation, many families literally present the little seedling its life in a flower pot. What happens to the future of each graduate is similar to what happens to any seedling.

Young Christians have in the bible have been compared to young seedlings. They are often encouraged to plant themselves by the rivers of water where their roots can grow down as their branches reach up. Many of the great sages of biblical history send one message to the youth of each succeeding generation, "if you would grow tall and reach the sky, send down your roots in fertile soil!"

For any believer this is also true. Those who would grow in the faith and knowledge of God should prepare deep roots that will dig deep in an active faith, service and belief in almighty God. The world will solicit every seedling to plant in its dry, sandy soil. As it becons, the seedling must resist the temptation to plant itself anywhere except fertile ground.

As Christians, we have learned what it means to enjoy fertile ground. In the fertile ground of God's love we have found assurance. In the fertile ground of God's grace we have found shelter from the storms of life. As our arms continually reach up to God in praise every day, our roots must grow deeper because...tall trees need deep roots.

Exposition

This text considers how the word of God compares a believer's life to trees.

David, writing in the first Psalm suggested that trees planted in the right place would grow and prosper. Thus he compared the believer's life to such a tree, planted by the rivers of water, bringing forth fruit at the right time, with leaves that are fully watered. Leaves that should be beautiful and green in the spring and summer, wither if they are not nourished and sustained. Yet David, said trees planted by the rivers of water don't wither but flourished because they are always fed. Spiritual prosperity and happiness follows such a person, who is happy regardless to their estate in life.

Building on this same idea Jeremiah in 17:8 compares the righteous man to a tree planted by the water that sends out its root by the stream. When heat and drought comes, it is always green. It is planted in the right place.

Each emphasizes the importance of being planted near the rivers of water, symbolic of the word of God.

Believers who trust in God continually and stay close to his word, keep the faith, are like such trees. Their leaves will not wither out of season and spiritual prosperity will follow them.

What Trees Need

Today there are millions of youth about to begin another phase of their lives. They are little seedlings that want to be big one day. If that is the case, then each should closely observe just what a tree needs and what it does to grow tall.

TREES CANNOT GROW TALL IN THE POT: Often small seedlings are given as gifts in small flower pots. The pot contains just enough soil to maintain it for a short term. However, as the tree grows, it will require its own space. To grow tall, it must take root in fertile ground. It cannot grow tall in the pot.

No matter how comfortable they become, there comes a time when every young seedling must take root in its own space. It cannot grow tall in the pot. Parents will do as much as they can to help their children resettle. They often help them find apartments or acquire a few of the essentials to get them started on their own. They are not putting them out or casting them aside, but they realize that true growth comes only outside of the pot.

TREES THAT GROW TALL NEED FERTILE GROUND: Where do you plant a tree so it can grow tall? Trees that grow tall need to be planted in fertile ground. Fertile ground is conducive to growth. It supplies all that the tree needs to live and mature.

One of the most frequent mistakes of most youth is that they try to grow tall in dry ground. They plant themselves around friends, associates and social surroundings that cannot sustain them. Rather than fertile ground, many plant themselves in dry ground and their growth, if not their lives are stunted.

EVERY TREE DOESN'T GROW TO THE SAME HEIGHT: A fact of life that nature documents is that all trees don't grow to the same height. The Giant Sequoias in California's Sequoia National Park grow to a height of 257 feet, yet there are other species in the world that are fully grown at 13 feet. What is tall for a pigmy sized pine may not be tall for an Oak.

Each youth, making his or her own mark on the world must accept that their goal in life is to reach their fullest potential. To be the best that they can be. When your best has been achieved, you have reached your highest point, even though it may not be as high as a friend or an associate. The quest is to grow to the fullest of your potential, when that is done, each youth will have accomplished a great task.

Parts of a tree

Looking closer at the growth of a tree gives even more parallels.

Leaves. Every tree has leaves of some sort. Leaves are not decorative. They serve a specific purpose. Leaves take the carbon dioxide out of the air and mixes it with the water within its own cells to make enough energy for the tree to grow. Leaves feed the tree growth energy. What's left from the process is called Oxygen, which is breathed in by humans. Leaves perform this task of energizing the growth of a tree, but it cannot be done without light. The process is called photosynthesis.

Every believer today must keep this in mind. The energy we need to grow tall enough to reach our goals cannot be obtained if we walk on the dark side of life. We must walk in the light. In John 9:5, Jesus said, "I am the light of the world." We must strive constantly to walk in the light even though the world will give us many temptations to do otherwise, the energy, blessings and grace we need to reach our goals only comes when we are walking in the light. Our photosynthesis occurs when we mix what we learn in school, with the truths that we learn in life and place it all in the light of God's word. That spells energy! Growth and blessings!

Bark: Bark is the outer protection of tree trunks. It often peels off easily because it is composed mostly of dead cells. On the inside another, living layer exists. It is the one that constantly feeds the tree with food. As the tree matures it makes new layers and sheds its old outside bark.

The same is true of every youth. Each is constantly growing, learning, maturing, shedding old ways and replacing them with new ones.

As children, youth acted very foolishly at times. Sometimes their antics and attitudes were incorrigible. Some they were selfish. Some were rebellious. However, just like a tree sheds bark, there comes a time when every youth must put the child like things aside. Paul writing to the Corinthians said in 1 Corinthians 13:11, " When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things."

Roots: Trees are held in place by anchoring organs called roots. In addition to anchoring the tree, roots also absorb water and minerals through tiny structures called root hairs. From the roots the water and mineral nutrients are carried upward through the wood cells to the leaves.

The taller a tree grows the deeper its roots must be. In the constant search for minerals and water to feed the leaves, the roots constantly grow, down and out wrapping themselves tightly to anchor the tree against strong winds.

No one should expect to go very far in life without a life that is anchored. An anchor keeps a ship from drifting away. An anchor holds an object in place.

Youth who dream of reaching high heights must not cut themselves loose from their roots. Our roots represent our faith in God. Our roots represent the sum total of all that we have been taught about what is good and right about life. Our roots represent the best of grandma's wisdom, mothers's advice and father's vision.

Our roots represent our trust in God and obedience to his word. For 18 years graduates have been taught to trust in God and learn the word of God. As the young seedlings begin to grow in life the roots must go deeper. Simply sitting in a church service or singing in a choir won't be enough! You must actively study the word! Step out on the word! Live by the Word and let God guide you every day.

Anchored lives are what the song writer had in mind when he wrote, "In times like these, you need a savior. In times like these you need an anchor! Be very sure. Be very sure, your anchor holds and grips the solid rock!"

When Trees get a second chance

Finally, we must consider that even though a tree grows to its maximum height, there are times when it bears no fruit and appears to be useless.

One of the realities of life is that there are some young people who will plant themselves in ground that will keep them alive but will not allow them to produce fruit. Fruit bearing needs a delicate combination of conditions to exist. It not only needs a mature enough tree, but it needs the proper environment and soil conditions.

It is possible to have a fully grown pear tree in your yard, but have no pears!

It is possible to have a fully grown pecan tree in your yard, but still have no pecans!

Jesus addressed this idea in Luke 13:6 when he began a parable of a fig tree that did not bear any fruit for three years. When it was decided to cut the tree down the dresser of the vineyard pleaded to give him a year to dig around it and fertilize it...that tree, like us, was given a second chance.

Thank God for a second chance! For there are many adults today who can testify that they heard words similar to these in their youth but ignored them and they experienced a barren period, but God gave them a second chance! When they removed the weeds and nourished themselves on the word of God they began to bear fruit!

Thank God for a second chance!

Gladys Talbot tells the story of three little trees who wanted to be something in life. The first tree wanted to be a pretty cradle when it grew up. One day some people came to the forest and cut the tree down. The tree was hewn into rough pieces and carelessly put together to form a manger in a stable in Bethlehem. The little tree was disappointed because it was shoved into a dark cave with no one to see it but some cattle. One day however, God laid there His own Babe - the Son of God. the manger quivered with delight. "Oh, this is wonderful! In all my dreams I never thought to hold a Baby like this. This is better than all my planning. Why, I am part of a miracle!"

Years passed by, and men came to the forest to cut down the second tree. This tree aspired to be a great ship when it grew up. But the little tree did not do great things. It was not made into a great vessel, but instead it became a tiny fishing boat, owned by a simple Galilean fisherman named Peter. The little boat was most unhappy. One day it stood by the shores of the Sea of Galilee dejected and disappointed. A crowd had gathered by the shore and because of the multitude, a Man, called Jesus, stepped into the little boat and taught the people from it. "This is wonderful!" it whispered. "In all my dreams and planning I never thought I would be used as part of a miracle."

After some months, men came to the forest to cut down the third tree. This tree just wanted to remain on the hillside and point to God. But men did not leave the little tree alone. They tore away its branches; they cut into its bark, and deeper, into its very heart. They hewed it apart and put it together again, in the form of a crude cross. The little tree quivered through all its being.

"This is terrible!" it whispered. "They are going to hang someone. Oh, I never wanted this to happen to me - I only wanted to point to God! This is awful!"

One day, outside of Jerusalem, a great crowd gathered. In the midst of the crowd was Jesus and beside Him was the cross. After nailing Him to the cross, the little tree heard words of forgiveness and peace that were offered to the whole world. Then Christ completed His work of redemption and "gave up the ghost."

He died and arose again on the third day.

Today little crosses like the one on that hill that day still point millions to God.

Would you be a tall tree?

Get deep roots!

..and let your life work...point people to God!

I Got Da Hookup

(Holler if you hear me)
A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Empire Church of Deliverance
Monroe, La.

May 25, 1998

SCRIPTURE: And it was told king David, saying, The LORD hath blessed the house of Obededom, and all that pertaineth unto him, because of the ark of God. So David went and brought up the ark of God from the house of Obededom into the city of David with gladness. And it was so, that when they that bare the ark of the LORD had gone six paces, he sacrificed oxen and fatlings. And David danced before the LORD with all his might; and David was girded with a linen ephod. 2 Samuel 6:12-14; "The woman then left her waterpot, and went her way into the city, and saith to the men, Come, see a man, which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?" John 4:28-29

Introduction

Have you ever felt disconnected? We feel disconnected whenever we start to sense that we are not hearing what we think we should hear, getting what we think we should get, or doing what we think we should be doing. When we don't have a job, we know we are disconnected from the work force.

When we have a job and there is whispering behind our backs, we begin to feel disconnected. When we feel disconnected, we know something is wrong!

The popular Rap Singer Master P has a hit song that is playing around the country. It has a simple title, "I got da hook up, holler if you hear me." The song talks about a man who has finally got it together. It has no redeeming religious qualities, but its constant repetition of the title and beat have caught the imagination of youth.

With the bass turned up loud, quiet neighborhoods are suddenly awakened and windows begin to shake as the unsuspecting hear the vibrating sounds of Master P saying, "I got da hookup..holler if you hear me!"

If the title were passed through a theological filter however, its title would mean something different to the Christian mind.

Christians can remember times when they were disconnected, separated and apart from God. They were unhooked, to say the least. Now that each has truly found the Lord in all of his fullness, each can truthfully say, "I got da hook up!" Each now has something to holler or shout about!

As Christians, we know the significance of being truly connected with God. When we are connected, he blesses us. When we are connected, we are in position to receive blessings. That's what Jesus meant when he said in John 15:7 "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."

With this experience as part of our testimony, every Christian, whether young or old can testify, "I got da hook up!" "If you are hooked up too..holler if you hear me!"

Exposition

This text focuses on instances in which a nation and a person had been disconnected from God, but rejoiced when hooked up again.

Israel placed great importance upon the Ark of the Covenant. To them, it symbolized the presence of God in their lives. They carried it into battle and worshiped before it.

Enemies, thinking it to be a good luck charm of sorts, stole it and carried it into foreign lands, only to return it when they found more bad luck than good luck as they carried it from city to city.

After being crowned King in Hebron, David decided to return the Ark of the Covenant to Jerusalem. It would symbolize the restored presence of God among the people. As David made it to the city, he was so excited about bringing the Ark back to the city that he stripped his clothing down to a cloth ephod or girdle and danced in the street. He was excited and filled with joy.

The desire to be hooked up is what prompted the rich young ruler to come to Jesus and ask what he must do to be saved. When he learned that he had to sell all he had, he left unhooked!

Another ruler asked the same question and was told to love his neighbor as he loved himself. He too left unhooked.

But when Paul and Silas prayed in jail one night and the doors opened, the jailer wanted to know what he had to do to be hooked up. He was saved that very night. He went and hooked up his entire household. There was joy everywhere!

That's the same joy that the woman at the well must have felt when she met Jesus. There she learned that he offered her living water and told her all about herself. She was so excited about meeting the promised Christ face to face, that she ran throughout the city yelling and hollering, "Come see a man!"

Whether it is a nation disconnected like Israel, or an individual that is disconnected, there is a certain sense of joy once disconnected parties are hooked up again.

Getting Hooked Up!

There are many people whose lives are miserable because they are unhooked from God. Many have great wealth and material possessions but they are nevertheless miserable because they don't know God.

Many youth are members of churches, sing in church choirs and carry on the semblance of the Christian life, but secretly they know they are not hooked up!

While many are worshiping God through the ritual of the church, they are partners with Satan Monday through Saturday. They are simply unhooked.

Many youth have unhooked themselves from Sunday School.

Unhooked themselves from prayer meeting.

Unhooked themselves from Bible Study.

Unhooked themselves from youth activities and some even come to church but they come late and leave early.

They are unhooked from the things of God!

There is a danger in being unhooked. We don't know the day or the hour in which the Lord will return, therefore, we cannot run the risk of being unhooked when he returns.

He will come as a thief in the night. We do not know the day or the hour. If we are unhooked, the doors will shut and we will be on the outside!

There is a blessing in being Hooked Up

While there is a danger in being unhooked, there is a blessing to being hooked up!

There is a blessing whenever we are fully connected with God.

Those who are hooked up are free of blame for past wrongs. The truly connected, are those who have been forgiven by God. That's why Romans 8:1 says, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

Not only are those who are hooked up free from blame, but they are recipients of God's grace. The forgiving grace of God is one of the greatest parts of the Christian life.

We are not worthy of being saved, but Grace gives us another chance!

We should be condemned but grace opens up the arms of forgiveness!

Those who are hooked up receive the gift of eternal life. Romans 6:23 "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord!"

Those who are hooked up receive power from God to carry out his great work. Acts 1:8 "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

These are powers to discern spirits, use healing hands, communicate with others in languages unfamiliar, intense optimism, and to pray fervently.

Being hooked up has its advantages, but brothers and sisters you must be hooked up to get them! Jesus said: "John 14:6 Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me."

You Must Be Hooked Up!

You must be hooked up!

If you buy a phone to get messages from friends, it's no good if it's off the hook. Even if it's on the hook it's no good if it's disconnected! You gotta get hooked up!

You may buy a beautiful home with a great interior, but the home is no use to you until the utilities are hooked up!

Beautiful chandeliers and crystal lighting fixtures are nice, but they are no good unless the electricity is hooked up!

Although there is a cable line going to your house, you can't get a picture unless you get hooked up!

You can have a computer with all the right equipment. It can have a powerful modem, large disc capacity, huge memory reservoirs and fast connections to surf the World Wide Web, but you can't get any information unless you first get hooked up!

The best toys in the world can't bring a child any joy if someone forgets to bring fresh batteries. Even a toy is no good if it is not "hooked up!"

A boxcar may be able to carry a heavy load but it can't go anywhere unless its hooked up to a good engine!

Many people are having problems in life because they have unhooked themselves!

Too many things are getting unhooked!

Our homes are being vandalized because some doors are left unhooked!

Teen pregnancy is on the rise because too many zippers are being lowered and dresses are being unhooked!

Fathers are trying to get out of child support payments, vainly trying to get off the hook!

Our resolve should be that nothing will unhook us!

"Nothing shall separate me from the love of God"

Holler if you hear me!

When you have been hooked up, it's hard to hold your peace.

When Israel was hooked up again with the presence of God, David danced in the streets!

When the woman at the well realized that she was hooked up with the King of Kings, she went running through the streets, saying "come see a man!"

If you've been hooked up, you can't hold your peace!

The Lord woke me up this morning and clothed me in my right mind, I've been hooked up!

The Lord blessed me with the articulation of my speech and the movement of my body. I've been hooked up!

The Lord put food on my table and a few coins in my pocket. I've been hooked up!

I don't mind telling the world that I've been hooked up, wrapped up and tangled up in the love of God!

I am so hooked up that I don't mind telling the world about Jesus! Do you know him?

He's the Lily of the Valley! He's the bright and morning star!
He's the Fairest of Ten Thousand!
He died out on Calvary and rose Early Sunday morning!
If you know the Lord, holler if you hear me!
If the Lord has been good to you, holler if you hear me!
If he's been a doctor in your sick room, holler if you hear me!
If he's been a lawyer in your courtroom, holler if you hear me!
If he's been a bridge over your troubling waters, holler if you hear me!
Holler!
Holler!
If God has been good...
Holler if you hear me!

Three Drops of Blood

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 7, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "Then shalt thou kill the ram; and take of his blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about." Exodus 29:20

Introduction

Have you ever felt inadequate for a task which you assumed? When you were asked to do it, was the first thought that ran through your mind about your inability to measure up to its demands? Did you compare your education, training, experience or qualities, against those of others who might have been asked and wonder "Why me?" Many who have begun great endeavors felt inadequate at the onset. They considered themselves unworthy as they looked upon others who appeared more suitable. Each looked at the enormity of the job before them and felt small, certainly not large enough, to tackle the task.

What qualities do we need to measure up to the demands of each day God sends? Consider the man who had the strange custom of eating peas with a knife. It was so strange a custom that all of the people on his job would stare when they saw him eat his lunches, which included peas and kernel corn, using only a knife. That fascinated his co-workers. The idea that he actually ate peas with a knife, and balanced them perfectly without ever dropping one amazed them. Eating peas with a knife was actually how he was hired at the plant. There were hundreds of workers applying for jobs but during his interview the man told the supervisor that he had one quality others didn't have, "I can eat peas with a knife." The supervisor hired him for some reason he did not understand. He noticed that over the years the man was his hardest worker. He never complained about working overtime, extra days or doing odd jobs. However, every day at lunch, included in his meal was a portion of peas, which he ate with a pocket knife. Curious, after many years, the supervisor asked the meaning of his motto, "learn to eat peas with a knife!" The man told the supervisor how he was homeless for many years. He often never knew the origins of his next meal. One day he prayed to God for help and God showed him a pocket knife left in a trash bin. On occasion, he was given a can of peas or corn by some compassionate person and he would open the can with his knife. With no fork or spoon, he learned to eat cold peas with his knife, never dropping a single precious pea. "I had to balance what was given to me me with what I had to work with." Said the old man. "Every new day is like a new can of peas, I've still got to balance what each day brings with what God has given me. It would be easier if I had a fork or a spoon, but I've got to use what God has given me which is the knife that is my life."

Everyday life presents each of us with a fresh new can of p's. You know them: Problems, Persecutions, Predicaments, Pain, Pressure; even Pleasure, and Play. Tom Hanks portrayed the movie character Forrest Gump who said, "Life is like a box of chocolates, you never know what you're gonna get!" If that logic applies then certainly it would be equally true that every day presents us with a new can of peas. Some feel that each day's peas should be already opened, warmed and served in a dish. Others complain that they have no can openers and cannot tackle the day's peas. Others, with peas in hand, complain that they have no fork or spoon. But then there are those who say, "Thank God for the peas, I'll tackle them even if I have to eat them with a knife!"

Those who are servants in the kingdom must approach their service with an attitude of humility and gratitude tempered with faith in God. It is the attitude that whatever problems that life presents, I will use every power at my command to resolve them. We may not have a Harvard University diploma that suggests we have heard from the best in the world, but I have ears that can hear the commands of God. We may not be highly skilled craftsmen, sought after by the world, but we have hands that can be used to help those in need. We may not be world travelers, who have circled the globe many times, but we have feet that carry us daily to do the master's will. The humble servant is not intimidated by what he does not have, but uses what he has to tackle the can of peas that life presents each day.

As Christians, our desire is to serve God. We want to use our eyes, ears, hands and feet to build his kingdom every day. We pledge ourselves to that service and pray for power to tackle each new day's problems and opportunities with the spirit of confidence we gain from our faith in him.

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as he consecrates Aaron, the high priest, and his assistants, who were his sons, for roles as servants in the temple.

The Priesthood in the Old Testament primarily involved sacrificing at the altar and worship at the shrine. The entire tribe of Levi, consisted of families who dedicated themselves to the service of God. The descendants of Aaron served as priests. Others served as assistants in a variety of respects that ranged from families of doorkeepers to singers. While the Priests alone handled the sacrifices, there were literally thousands of assistants in the tribe of Levi that carried out other non-priestly functions such as teaching, blessing and assisting in various ways.

The consecration of those who served as Priests and assistants in the biblical context was elaborate. It required each person to acknowledge his own sin, make atonement and then make a total commitment to live fully for God.

The consecration of priests involved three sacrifices: (1) The sacrifice of a bullock, as a sin offering; expressing his own consciousness of personal guilt. (2) The sacrifice of a ram as a burnt offering. The ram was to be wholly burnt, in token of the priest's dedication of himself to God and his service. The sin offering was first to be presented, and then the burnt offering; for until guilt is removed, no acceptable service can be performed. (3) There was to be a peace offering, called "the ram of consecration" (Ex 29:19-22). The first ram was sacrificed to the glory of God the second ram symbolized the priest's personal covenant with God, sealed with blood sprinkled around the altar and three separate drops placed on his ears, for him to ear God, on his right hand to do God's work and on his right great toe to symbolize his walk with God

God promised Israel, in Exodus 19:6 that if it remained a faithful nation it would one day become a Kingdom of priests wherein every man and woman was a priest because it would be a Holy nation.

1 Peter 2:9 makes it clear that in modern times every believer is his own priest. "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should shew forth the praises of him who has brought you out of darkness into his marvelous light."

Today every man is his own priest, but certain men and women among us are called out to assist in the ceremonies and to serve God on a higher order than the rest.

The call to consecration, while not with blood of bullocks and rams like in Old Testament times, is still clear.

Each person must consecrate himself to service with the blood of the lamb. The blood should be applied to the ears that they may hear, to the hands that they may serve and to the feet that they walk at his place.

From both the Old Testament and the New the word is the same, those who would serve God must be washed in the blood.

Hearing the Word of God

Every believer should love to hear the Word of God. It is through God's spoken word that believers get direction, instruction and inspiration. Through his written Word they get understanding, strength and guidance. The written word is the test of the spoken Word, confirming its truths.

Those who lead in the congregation of the Saints should have a special love for the Word. They should study the Word themselves and love to hear the Word preached.

Hearing the Word of God preached builds faith. Romans 10:17 reminds us that "..faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God."

God directed Moses to place the first drop of blood on the ear of the first servants of the temple. It was to remind them to always be directed by the commands of God. Henry David Thoreau was famous for saying that he "marched to the beat of a different drummer." So it is with every person who steps forth to lead the people of God. They must march to the beat of a different drummer.

From heaven on high, God sets the cadence and tempo. The consecrated leader listens closely for the sound of his voice. The voice of God is not in every passing fad, nor in the obvious. Elijah found that God was not in the earthquake, nor was he in the fire, but listening close he found the voice of God to be a still small voice.

The song writer declares, "I hear God, in every robin that sings. I hear God in every church bell that rings. He's in control, the captain of my soul. I hear God!" That's the way it must be with every believing leader. Listen to the preached word, confirm it in the written word and listen to the majesty of God's creation as God speaks his will.

Servants who Help Sort Things Out

The question was asked of Jesus in Matthew 18:1, "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?" In Matthew 23:11 came the answer, "But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant!"

Moses placed the second drop of blood on the thumb of the right hand of the servants to remind them of their obligation to serve the people.

In the New Testament the word that describes both the preaching elders and those who assist in the ministries of the church is "servant." In Greek, servant is Diakonos (dee-ak'-on-os) which refers to one who runs errands, waits tables, or performs as a servant. Diakonos is generally translated as: deacon or deaconess, minister, or servant. Each is expected to function in the humble role of a servant.

The servant helps the congregation of believers "sort out" emotional and intellectual problems. As believers we get upset, we need someone to help us sort it out. Sometimes we are turned off, we need someone to help motivate us. Sometimes we are off track, we need someone to help us get back on track. Sometimes we get excited or depressed — we have all kinds of emotional problems. Sainted servants help, members sort it out.

While there may be times when the servant performs custodial tasks or functions as a carpenter or even a taxi driver for a member in trouble, the greatest service that he or she offers to the congregation is to "be there" for individual members in times of trouble, to help them sort it out!

The greatest servant is the one who serves the most. Those who help others sort it out are usually "sought out" the most and become great in the minds of the faithful!

Walk with God

Finally, Moses placed a drop of blood on the great toe of the servant's right foot! It was to be a reminder that they must continually walk with God.

The journey of those who lead in the congregation of the Saints is not an easy one, but it is one that requires each traveler to walk with God.

The Word of God says in Romans 6:4, we "..should walk in the newness of life"; Romans 8:4 says, we should, "walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." ; 2 Corinthians 5:7 reminds us that we "walk by faith, not by sight!"

Ephesians 4:1 says, "I ... beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called"

Walk with all lowliness! Walk with all longsuffering! Walk forbearing one another in love!

Walking with God means to lean and trust on him constantly.

Enoch walked with God and did not die!

Elijah walked with God and was carried home in a chariot!

The Hebrew Boys walked with God and survived the fiery furnace!

Daniel walked with God and watched God turn hungry lions into purring kittens!

Consider the little boy who walked to school every morning but was afraid to walk home from school in the broad day light! Every day he'd walk down the long dusty road but was never afraid. Yet every day when school was out he'd cry standing at the school door, afraid to walk home. One day the teacher asked, why is it that you walk to school each morning and you are not afraid, but you are afraid to walk home from school at the end of the day. The little boy explained that when he leaves school he's afraid that the big boys might attack him and he'd be all alone. However, when he walks to school in the morning "My father walks with me and he holds my hand! I'm not afraid as long as I'm holding his hand!"

I don't know about you but I've found out that it doesn't matter how dark the road might be, if I walk with God, I'll always see the light!

It doesn't matter how long the journey, if I walk with God, everything will be all right!

No wonder the song writer declared, "I want Jesus to walk with me. While I'm on this tedious journey, Lord, I want Jesus to walk with me!"

Jesus, the sweet Rose of Sharon!

Jesus, the precious Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, the fairest of ten thousand!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary but arose Early Sunday morning!

I want Jesus to walk with me!

Little But Wise

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 9, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"There are four things which are little upon the earth but they are exceeding wise: The ants area people not strong, yet they prepare their meat in the summer; The conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks; The locusts have no king, yet go they forth all of them by band; The spider taketh hold with her hands and is king's palaces." Proverbs 30:24-28

Introduction

The grasshopper and the ant were friends but they were truly of different characters. During the summer the grasshopper enjoyed the warm days, danced, played and sang. It was great fun! Day after day the grasshopper kept singing and dancing and relaxing in the sun.

One day the grasshopper met his friend the ant. He invited him to enjoy the sun and the good times with him. He was disappointed when the ant said he did not have time because he was going to work to gather crumbs for the winter. "For the winter?" replied the grasshopper, "That's a long time a way!" He laughed at the little ant.

Daily, the ant worked dragging crumbs into the ant hill, while the grasshopper laughed. While the grasshopper made fun of him, the ant kept working until his storehouses were filled.

Soon the winter came and the green grass was gone. The snow fell and food supplies for the insects disappeared. The grasshopper found himself out in the cold, with no food to eat. But he thought about his friend the ant and went to visit him. The ant appeared warm and snug and was nibbling on a morsel of corn.

"Please help me Mr. Ant, I don't have anything to eat." He said.

But the ant replied: "In the summer you laughed at me because I worked to prepare myself for winter. Now I laugh at you because without my help you won't live to see another summer!"

Then the grasshopper saw the foolishness of his ways.

This ancient tale by Aesop is still true today. There are many young people who dance away the summer of their lives, while others prepare for winter.

There is much to be learned from the ways of the little creatures of nature. The bible urges us to study them closely and we'll be wise.

As Christians, we learn from the ant that it is best to work while it is day, for when the night cometh, no man can work.

Exposition

This text is lifted from the proverbs. It gives a description of four creatures which are small but wise. This description comes on the heel of the verses that precede it in which four great and powerful things are listed as well as the wisdom that is gained from them. The four creatures of this text are small in bodily size but yet exhibit wisdom in their actions.

Between them the four creatures: The ant, conies (country mice), Locust, and spider are listed as creatures whose social or work habits should be studied and emulated. The text suggests that there is wisdom and strength even in the smallest of creatures, even though, on the surface they appear weak.

The Ant

The Ant is a small but extremely industrious creature. It works tirelessly to build and provide. Despite their small size ants carry more than their own weight, build and defend their domains and provide for themselves in unseasonal months.

The great lesson that ants teach us is industry. They show us that by working continuously and conscientiously we can achieve despite our size.

There are many young people who are already learning this lesson. They are not full grown adults, but many of them work continuously in school, at home and in part time jobs. They are working to build a future for themselves. Despite their youth many of them have astonishing accomplishments already, as they work daily to build their futures.

The ant is hard to discourage. Sometimes people or animals knock down ant hills that have been carefully constructed, but ants are not dissuaded or discouraged. They immediately rebuild and continue to work. Likewise, young people should not be discouraged by set backs. There will be times when the best efforts and labor will be destroyed or put down by others. Don't be discouraged, keep working.

It is easy for young people to get discouraged, because they are not sure of themselves. They need the support and praise of adults, who strive to see them for what they can be rather than focus on the error or failure of the moment. They should be reminded that when there are set backs that God is still on the throne. The song writer wrote: "Be not dismayed whatever betide, God will take care of you."

Conies

The Conie, described in verse 26, is a country mouse. It is a small and weak creature and is often considered a choice menu item for the evening supper of many creatures in the field. However, the conies, knowing their vulnerability seek protection in the rocks and hills where their enemies have difficulty getting to them. That is wise.

The lesson of the conie is that we learn to know our own short comings and then seek a higher protection from them. The conie knows what it can do and what it cannot and acts wisely in light of this knowledge.

Youth are learning, as they mature, the extent of their own shortcomings and gifts. Some can sing like a nightingale, others croak like frogs. Some dance with the grace of MC, and others dance as if they had three legs. Some can paint beautiful pictures while others even have trouble drawing stick people. Some can run the football and score a touchdown, others have trouble picking up the football. Learning your limitations is a part of growing up.

One of the greatest truths you will learn is that you have not failed if you are not as good as the other fellow. You have failed, if you have not done your best. If you have failed to give your best effort in life, then you have truly failed.

When the conie seeks protection it looks to the rocks and hills. That's a wise example. Every Christian should know that his help and protection does not come from man but from God. That's why David wrote: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord, who made the heaven and earth." We are weak and feeble creatures and look continuously to the Rock of Ages for our salvation. I hear the song writer declare: "Rock of Ages Cleft for Me, let my hide myself in thee."

Locust

The Locust is a small creature. It can be squashed under foot and is a helpless creature when it is alone. But when it is in the company of an army of locust, with which it usually travels, Locusts are awesome. They can destroy entire crops, fields and countrysides. Without a queen, like ants or a king, like men, they march in amazing order and organization to accomplish their goal.

The lesson of the locust is teamwork and organization. Alone, one boy can do a great work, but a team of boys working together can do wonders. Whether in sports, civic work or church work, teamwork is the essential. Teams have one leader and followers. Young people who can learn to work on a team will go far in life. Sports stars may get individual glory, but it's the team that helps win the game. Professional teams of athletes may pay millions for a Micheal Jordan or Joe Dumars, but only because they have talent and can function in a team situation. Corporations pay high salaries to talented people who can be a part of their team.

To work on God's team you must remember two things: "You can't be the star and work in God's show", because he is the bright and morning star. Secondly, "You don't have to be a star to be in God's show" he looking for workers who are willing to surrender their all to the cause.

Spider

The spider is creature of art and anonymity. It works painstaking to construct geometrically perfect webs, often out of the eyesight of men. It gets no glory, usually is feared and attacked, but yet works artfully and craftfully day after day.

The lesson of the spider is excellence without notoriety. There will be many times when youth will not receive the credit or praise for their work that they deserve, but like the spider, they should do their best anyway. Often when men see their work, they may laugh at it or try to destroy it, but they should continue to pursue excellence.

The value of your contribution cannot be judged by ribbons or trophies or medals. There may be no medals to mark your efforts but pursue excellence anyway. The spider could probably half build a web and still catch a fly or two, but no matter how often his web is swept away he continues to rebuild with the same quality as before.

In service to God, give him your best. Give him of your strength. Give him the best of your creative ability. Give him the best of your talents! Give him the best of your time!

That's why the song writer declared: "Give of your best to the master, give of the strength of your youth. Clad in salvation's full armor, join in the battle for truth. Jesus has set the example. Dauntless was he young and brave. Give him your loyal devotion, give him the best that you have!"

If You See A Turtle On a Stump

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 14, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "Thou shalt keep therefore his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee this day, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, which the LORD thy God giveth thee, for ever." Deuteronomy 4:40

Introduction

Many young people have been honored for outstanding accomplishments across the nation, how did they achieve their goals? Was it through their own initiative, hard work or study? Were they born self motivators who naturally pushed themselves to achieve greatness among their peers? The Valedictorians that sat on stages at thousands of graduations, how did they get there? The honor society members, how did they manage to maintain their grades? The scholarship winners, athletic champions, Eagle Scouts, student leaders and others in hundreds of categories of youth excellence, how did it all happen? The young survive and succeed because adults believe in them and devote time and energy to helping them become the best they can be. Very few youth are able to achieve without a mentor in the wings helping them. That mentor is the one that God uses to help them mount up on wings and fly!

Every youth must remember that each level of success is achieved by a combination of individual effort, family support and the help of people in the village who make dreams happen. Consider the young man who bragged about what he had in life. He amused himself by putting down young friends who could not wear designer clothes or jewelry and those who did not have his level of popularity, smarts and opportunity. One day as he played the dozens with some associates, an old man was sitting on the porch listening. The youth constantly bragged about his position at school, club memberships and belittled those around him. After the boy was alone, the old man questioned him about his tendency to brag. The boy responded, "the truth is the light!" The old man talked the boy into walking with him to a nearby wood. All the way the boy continued to justify why he had a reason to brag. The old man said nothing but quietly walked forward until he came upon a turtle sitting on a tree stump. The old man pointed at the turtle and said, "That's you boy! But if you see a turtle sitting high up on a stump, then you know he didn't get there by himself!" Every person who achieves anything does so with the help of someone else! No one has a right to brag because no turtle can get on a stump unless an unseen hand lifts him and puts him there!

There are millions of unseen hands that God is using to lift our children and place them on the stump. You may call them "teacher", "piano instructor", "coach", "scoutmaster", "Drill Sargent" or "Aunt Sally" but each serves the same purpose which is to prepare, protect and promote them to the best of their ability!

As Christians, we thank God for those unseen hands that have touched our own lives and for those that are touching the lives of our children! It is our challenge to lift our children to the stump. Once there, each child must remember that it was nothing but the spirit of God that worked through people that placed them where they are today!

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as he gives instruction to Israel about teaching God's laws to children.

Moses had received the ten commandments and hundreds of other ceremonial laws from God to give to the people of Israel. During the course of his 40-year leadership of the people, Moses tried to show them what God wanted and expected of them. In Deuteronomy, he repeats many of the laws and instructions that had been given to the people for their instruction and guidance. They were instructed to teach these laws to their children, to prepare them for lives of obedience to God. Preparing the next generation was a command with a promise. Those who did as instructed were reminded that they would extend their own life expectancies as they showed the next generation the commands of God.

Thus, God gives each generation a blessing for teaching his truths to the next. The recipients are blessed by receiving the instruction.

Prepare Them

Today the biblical mandate that was given to Moses is just as clear. Every generation of adults has the responsibility to teach the children by precept and example. Moses was ordered to teach the children God's law and their responsibilities under the law. They were to be taught morning and night. That obligation still exists. We must teach the children.

Children cannot excel unless they are taught the basic rudiments of life, which include self respect, respect for others, obedience, vigilance and morality. Respect must be taught. It doesn't simply drop from the air. Children acquire respect because they are taught how to respect themselves in their dress and grooming habits, speech and decorum. They are taught to respect the rights and properties of others as well.

Children must learn obedience. Those who are taught well at home understand that disobedience carries a punishment and obedience has a reward. Vigilance and persistence are essential to achieving goals; quitters don't win and winners don't quit. Every child must learn that simply beginning a project has no reward unless it is carried out to the end. Every child should have a sense of morality. It's the basic instinct or little voice that whispers to them and tells them when something is inherently good or bad.

These are the basics that every child needs to get on the stump, but they can't get what they need unless adults make it possible. Every child needs somebody. Children need someone that will prepare them for life by teaching them respect, obedience, vigilance and morality.

If you see a child who is well disciplined, exhibiting good character, working hard in school, obedient and mindful of the rules, sitting high on a stump...there is an unseen hand somewhere that has made it happen.

Protect Them

In Matthew 18:6, Jesus said, "But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea." His words imply to all of us that we have an obligation to protect our children.

In August 1925, some 54 representatives from different countries gathered together in Geneva, Switzerland to convene the first "World Conference for the Well being of Children", during which the "Geneva Declaration Protecting Children" was passed. The proclamation made a strong appeal for the spiritual needs of children, relief for children in poverty, prevention of child labor, reassessing the way that children are educated and other issues related to the welfare of children around the world. After the conference, various governments around the world established a day to promote the cause of children. It is different in each nation, but in America it is the 2nd Sunday in June. It is the time when the nation focuses on the needs of children.

Delivering the keynote speech at "Stand for Children Day," June 1st, 1996, Children's Defense Fund leader Marian Wright Edelman called on the nation to ensure that "all our children" enjoy a "healthy and safe passage to adulthood.

Hilliary Rodham Clinton, repeated the words of an old African proverb in a book she wrote entitled, "It takes a village." Many have taken issue with her acceptance of the African proverb that it takes an entire village to raise a child. They claim it only takes one good set of parents. A good set of parents is the beginning but it takes the preacher, teacher, coach, grocer, doctor and they lady down street to protect and nurture a child once he walks the lonely streets of the village.

Our children need protection. They need protection from themselves! Being very young they do things that might hurt themselves out of pure curiosity. The child who sticks his finger in the fan does so out of curiosity. The teenager who steals an item out of a store, often is not criminally inclined, but does it just to see if he can get away with it?

Children need time to be "children" before it's time to put away childish things

Children need protection from abuse and abandonment. Children need advocates to speak for their protection, because they cannot speak for themselves.

If you see a child that appears to be doing well, with a sense of family, purpose and personal security, look close behind them, there is an unseen hand that causes that to be. Remember, if you see a turtle on a stump, it didn't get there by itself!

Promote them

In Matthew 19:14 Jesus said, "Suffer little children and forbid them not!" Thus, we are given an obligation to promote our children. We are encouraged to do things that will inspire and motivate our children rather than kill their spirits and discourage them! There are two essential elements to promote children: time and resources.

It takes time to promote children. Many adults are supportive of children's causes and programs but are unwilling to give the time needed to help them. Even in families, time is important. Children need an active support group that sits in the stands and cheers them along as they try to find their way. They need parents, uncles, aunts and others who watch what they do and help them put their best foot forward. In a world where available time is a premium, it is a precious gift to give to any child.

If you see a young lady being presented as a debutante, it means someone has given her ..time! If you see a young man being praised for leadership abilities, it means someone has given him time!

Not only is time essential, but so are resources. Promoting children does have a price tag. Promoting, encouraging and supporting children is very expensive, but it is less expensive than the alternative. Recent reports from the Children's Defense fund show that the government on average, spends about $20,000 per child per year to keep children in juvenile jails. It does that without an argument. But its only willing to spend $3,500 a year per child to give them an educational "Head Start." One of the fastest growing industries in America is juvenile detention centers. Every time one is built, it is being built by private companies to make money.

Children need adults who are willing to invest in their promotion! Children need churches that will provide them with a quality program of youth activity. Children need government officials that are willing to spend more to keep them out of trouble than they are to lock them up.

If you see a child who is doing well and has avoided the criminal system for the most part, look closely behind him, for there is an unseen hand that has played a part in promoting his interests. If you see a turtle on a stump, you know he didn't get there by himself!

The Unseen Hand

Finally brothers and sisters we must remember that there is an unseen hand operating in the lives of every believer.

That unseen hand moves quietly but effectively in the lives of people who put their trust in God. The movement of that unseen hand bears witness to God's mysterious activity in the lives of believers. When we consider the journey that we have had to travel in life to reach our present point and the obstacles that we have had to overcome; we know that it was literally impossible, unless there was a God somewhere!We who were born into poverty, reared in segregated neighborhoods, nourished on breast milk and chewed up mustard greens, know that there must be a God somewhere!

When we see where we are now and where you used to be, we say, Lord you've sure been good to me!

There was a time when we didn't have money to buy lotion, but grandma would grease the girls legs with chicken fat before they went out of the house!

There was a time when we couldn't afford to buy new clothes, but grandma would put patches over the holes in the boy's overalls and newspaper in the soles of their shoes!

There was a time when girls didn't have hair rollers, but grandma would take strips of paper bags and roll and curl the girls hair!

There was a time when we couldn't buy deodorant, but grandma would get a box of soda and dap it under our arms and then mix a little salt with it and use it for toothpaste to brush our teeth!

There was a time when we didn't have soap, but grandma would take the left over grease from her cooking and mix it with the ashes from the fire place and make lye soap. It was tough on the skin it got the job done!

There was a time when there were no washers and dryers, there was only a big black pot in the back yard in which clothes were boiled and a rub board to get them clean.

There was a time when there were no showers and inside bath tubs. Family members bathed in number 10 tubs that were hand filled with foot tubs of water, heated on the stove. In the winter sometimes all of the children bathed in the same water.

If you see a child of God that is living half way well, remember he didn't get there by himself, but there has been an unseen hand moving in his life!

The unseen hand of God, prepares him! The unseen hand of God, protects him!

The unseen hand of God, promotes him!

If you hear a saint stand and testify that he is saved, holy and sanctified he's able to do so not because of his own good, but because he's been washed in the blood of the lamb! If you see a saved soul, that soul is saved because 2000 years ago Jesus, paid the price!

He died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, he got up with all power in his hands!

If you see a saint enjoying the blessings of God every day, you know there must be a God somewhere!

Thou Art But A Youth

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 28, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "And Saul said to David, Thou art not able to go against this Philistine to fight with him: for thou art but a youth, and he a man of war from his youth." 1 Samuel 17:33 "David said moreover, The LORD that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine. And Saul said unto David, Go, and the LORD be with thee." 1 Samuel 17:37

Introduction

Have you ever been prohibited from doing a great work because you were too young? One of the most frustrating pronouncements to hear is "come back when you have some experience!" Most youth usually ask, "How am I suppose to get any experience unless someone gives me a chance!" Youth and inexperience are two conditions that seem to go hand in hand. Often young people are misjudged in their ability, maturity and skill levels because they are not judged by their abilities but by their age. It seems in the world of employment that everyone wants someone that is 22 years old with 23 years of experience. How does anyone get experience unless someone makes an opportunity available?

Some adults have a condescending if not cynical view of young people. They have a tendency to lump all of them in a pile and dismiss them as insalvageable. Many share this opinion of youth, "Our youths love luxury. They have bad manners, contempt for authority-they show disrespect for their elders and love to chatter in place of exercise. Children are now tyrants, not the servants of their households. They no longer rise when their elders enter the room. They contradict their parents, chatter before company, gobble up food, and tyrannize teachers." That statement was made by Socrates, in 400 B.C.

Granted there are many young people who are more than wet behind the ears, in fact there is a fountain of immaturity flowing behind some of their ears. However, there are thousands of youth who are waiting for the chance to prove themselves. Some get a small job and prove themselves invaluable. Some are given a responsibility that requires a great deal of skill and maturity and measure up to the task with amazing ability.

Many of the great changes we have seen in life came by young men and women who dared to focus their intense energy on a goal and defied the critics who said it could not happen. Loren Cunningham once said, "Young people do the impossible before they find out it's impossible, that's why God uses them so often." The bible is sprinkled with instances in which God used young men in their 20's to fight battles or some as young as seven years old to become king. Young men and women are willing to tackle the impossible! -That's why God uses them! They move quickly and never blink at the thought of failure or defeat.

As Christians, we thank God for the chance to serve him. We have made some mistakes gaining our experience, but the grace of God harnessed us in a way that kept us from running away with the plow!

Exposition

This text focuses on David who was given a chance to prove himself despite his lack of battle experience.

David was the youngest of the 12 sons of Jesse. His older brothers were seasoned shepherds and experienced in war. David was both young and small and was often given the assignments associated with his age. One of the assignments he was given was to tend his father's sheep because it was considered relatively simple and safe. It required no special skills and very little experience. Most of the time the sheep dogs would do most of the work, thus David's lack of experience would not be much of a factor.

David was considerably responsible and mature, even for his young age. He tended the sheep daily and never left them unattended while he played youthful games or other pursuits. While it wasn't expected to happen, on more than one occasion David found himself defending his father's flock when it was attacked by a bear and a lion. In each case, he proved himself to be both strong and bold.

Had there been a serious problem with bears and lions in the area, David probably would not have been sent to guard the flock, but an older brother instead. David was considered too young and too inexperienced to tackle such a task. Yet, when they occurred he proved himself able to handle the job.

When the prophet Samuel came to Jesse's house, seeking to anoint the next King of Israel, the father lined up eleven of his sons for Samuel to inspect. After considering them all, Samuel asked if there was another, and Jesse reluctantly called in his youngest, most inexperienced son, David. It would appear that if God sought a man to anoint as King that he would look for one that was strong and tall and could inspire others from his presence alone. Even Samuel himself was impressed with Jesse's older son Eliab and thought to himself that he would make a great King, but God saw what Samuel could not see and judged character rather than appearance. 1 Samuel 16:6-7, "And it came to pass, when they were come, that he looked on Eliab, and said, Surely the Lord's anointed is before him. But the LORD said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart."

God's refusal of Eliab does not cast a bad reflection on him. Neither does it suggest that experience should not be a factor in qualification. It does suggest that "potential" and "character" which are unseen qualities also weigh into the process. Unlike Samuel, God knew what lay ahead for the man he selected. Character, courage and faith would be needed more than anything else. Whatever physical shortcomings he might have, God would handle.

David was given a chance by God, when Samuel selected him. It was a chance given despite the absence of numerous physical qualities.

David was given a chance by Saul, when he was allowed to tackle Goliath. At first Saul told David that he could not fight Goliath because he was but a youth. The irony in his reasoning was that he praised Goliath because he had been fighting since his youth. Someone in Philistia gave Goliath a chance. When would David get his shot? Saul gave David his shot. He gave him a chance. It was a chance given, despite his lack of experience on the battle field.

David was given a chance by the people, when they crowned him King on two separate occasions. It was chance given, despite his lack of experience in government.

He was a young man who was given a chance and proved himself worthy of the opportunity that was given to him.

Earning The First Chance

There are millions of young people today who are looking for a chance to prove themselves. Whether it's in the National Basketball Association, National Football League or their first job at McDonald's, each is looking for a chance to show what they can do.

Those who take a chance on young people have very little to go on. Their professional resume's are very short. A young man trying to get his first real job with a couple of zeros in the salary probably has a resume' that lists: mowing yards, washing cars, delivering pizzas or waiting tables. Often there is nothing in the job titles themselves that would make a difference until a potential employer decides to check out the references. The background check goes beyond the fact that one waited tables, but it reveals "how" it was done. The background check helps reveal character: "If hired will the person give an honest day's work for an honest day's pay!" Is he a hard worker or a malingerer? Does he show up on time or is constantly late? Is he trustworthy? Is he prone to complain and file suits? Many decisions to give young people a chance are based on qualities not found on application forms, but lie in the unseen.

SHOW THYSELF A MAN: As David himself prepared to die he told his son Solomon in 1 Kings 2:2, "Be strong and show thyself a man." The same words could equally apply to a woman. Be strong and show the qualities of womanhood and manhood that will open doors and give opportunities. That was important to David because he was naming a younger son, to be his successor, not the older brother. Young Solomon would have to prove himself.

How one handles the small things often determines whether or not an opportunity is given to do big things. That's what Jesus had in mind when he told the parable of the talents. It demonstrated how God looks at the way we handle the little we have as he decides whether we should handle more. Matthew 25:21 records the overriding thought, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord."

CHARACTER COUNTS: Experience on the job is something that youth do not have. They may have skills and aptitude which give them a chance, but a major consideration for many who take a chance on youth is "character!"

Character is not revealed on the application form. Character is shown by the way one handles himself among others. Does she steal? Can she be depended upon to be loyal to the team? Will he be helpful? Is he friendly? Can he follow leadership? Does he waste? Is he respectful of the property of others? All of these are questions that, once answered, tend to reveal character traits.

These are the questions that will be posed to persons who know you best. Many youth have lost their chance, not because they were not eligible or talented, but because a check into their character revealed traits that were unattractive to those with opportunities to offer.

Character begins at home and exhibits itself in small but visible ways. Is he or she clean and neat in their dress and appearance? If given a household chore to complete, is it performed in a timely manner? Are assignments carried out without grumbling and complaining? Can you be counted on to perform the task without taking shortcuts that would undermine the quality of your work? Can you operate under pressure? These and many other questions, suggest character.

CONFIDENCE: David had another quality that helped him get a chance. He had confidence. Yet consider that his confidence was not "self" confidence. Self confidence is faith in yourself and your own abilities. Self confidence is a belief in yourself. Self confidence is trust in yourself.

David had confidence, but he did not have "self confidence." As he told the king of his accomplishments in killing a bear and a lion, he indicated the source of his confidence in 1 Samuel 17:37 "...The LORD that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine..." His confidence was based upon his relationship with God, not in his own ability.

Youth who know the Lord, know that if they prepare themselves with the skills necessary for life, God will have help them in a mighty and powerful way. They are confident that no matter what challenge life brings them, God will help them meet the challenge.

Confidence in God is not cockiness. Cockiness suggests a person who is absorbed in himself. Confidence in God suggests a person recognizes that "without God, I can do nothing, without him, I'd surely fail, Without God I would be drifting, like a ship without a sail!" But with God all things are possible!" Confidence in God means to prepare and train well and know that God will do the rest!

And the Lord Be with Thee

Finally, brothers and sisters, after King Saul finished his interview with David and heard his enthusiasm and confidence, dipped in faith, he gave him his chance and said at verse 37"... Go, and the LORD be with thee."

His words suggest to every believer that is about to face obstacles that he should be like David in this instance. You should prepare, train well and then take the Lord with you!

Are you nearing the time for your first full time job? Prepare, train well and take the Lord with you!

Are you seeking appointment to a position or post? Prepare, train well and take the Lord with you!

Are you seeking a promotion to a place of leadership? Prepare, train well and take the Lord with you!

Wherever you plan to go in life, plan to take the Lord with you!

There will be some dark days ahead, but if you take the Lord with you, he'll brighten your path!

There will be some rough places ahead, but if you take the Lord with you, he'll make the rough places plain!

There will be some crooked places ahead, but if you take the Lord with you, he'll make the crooked places straight!

There will be some mountains ahead, but if you take the Lord with you, he'll bring every mountain down low!

There will be some valleys ahead, but if you take the Lord with you, he'll take your feet out of the valleys of despair and plant them on solid ground!

As you go forward looking for your chance, go forward with the confidence that the same God who heard you when you prayed for help on your final exam; the same God who answered you when you prayed in your moment of trouble, that same God will is able to make a way for you!

Not only does God give us an opportunity for success in life, but he also gives us a chance to inherit eternal life! For John 3:16 says, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life!"

When he carried his cross up Calvary's hill, he did it to give us a chance!

When he died on an old rugged cross, he did it to give us a chance!

And Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with ....

All opportunity!

All Chances!

All Prospects!

All Power in his hands!

After This Manner Therefore Pray Ye

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 12, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen." Matthew 6:9-13

Introduction

Have you ever heard someone pray a powerful prayer and wished you could pray like that? There are many who have the ill-conceived notion that one needs special skills to pray. They believe that an effective prayer is one that has all of the right words in all of the right places. What does it take to get a good prayer through? A loud voice? A powerful delivery? To pray is to speak to God about the concerns of one's heart. To get it through, all one needs is a believing heart.

Often we forget that when we speak to God, he is not concerned with how we phrase our words. He is concerned about what we are actually saying. God is more concerned with what we have to say than how we say it! Consider the country church that tried every kind of program conceivable to raise funds and searched for a new one. Finally it came upon the idea of a praying contest. The contestant that prayed the best prayer would be awarded a fine, plump chicken.

An old deacon took offense to the program but participated to teach the others an important lesson. The final contestants were "Praying Sam", "Blow Your Horn Billy" and the old deacon.

Billy blew his horn! "Lawd, I thank you that my bed last night was my bed of rest and not my cooling board! Lawd, I thank you that my kivver was not my winding sheet!" Lawd, Prop us up on every leaning side! Now Lawd, when we comes to press a dying pillar, help us to cross the chilly Jordan at a calm time!" Amen.

Praying Sam was at his best!

`"O Lord, give Thy servant this mornin' the eyes of the eagle and the wisdom of the owl; dip him down in the sweet waters of your word; connect his soul with the gospel telephone in the central skies; Look down through the telescope of time and shine a light on his soul; 'luminate his brow with the Sun of Heaven; possess his mind with love for the people; turpentine his imagination; grease his lips with 'possum oil; loosen his tongue with the sledge hammer of Thy power; 'lectrify his brain with the lightnin' of the word; put 'petual motion on his arms, fill him plum full of the dynamite of Thy glory; 'noint him all over with the kerosene oil of Thy salvation and set him on fire. Amen!"

When both had finished the old deacon bowed and prayed his prayer in one sentence! "Lord, forgive us, for we know not what we do!" Amen. The old deacon won the prize!

As Christians, we have learned that prayer is the sincere desire of the heart. Just as one person may not speak as fluently as another, one prayer may not have the same ring as another. Each prayer, no matter how fancy or plain, gets the same consideration from God. Every believer's prayer, regardless of its simplicity, will get an answer from our father in heaven who hears and answers all prayers.

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he gives his disciples an example of what should be included in a prayer request to God.

The Lord's Prayer is often called the model prayer because it provides an outline of what any person who prays should say to God. Because it is a model, it is not expected that the exact words of the prayer should be repeated, but it should be used as guide to prayer.

The Lord's prayer is usually divided into six parts or petitions: the first three relate more expressly to God and his honor, the last three to our own concerns, both temporal and spiritual.

This prayer model includes the general teaching of Christ that we should seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and that all other things shall be added. After the things of God's glory, kingdom, and will, we pray for the needful supports and comforts of this present life. Each of the six petitions contains a lesson.

Our Father

Any prayer should be directed to the source of blessings. Blessings come from God, therefore our prayers are directed to him as the Father of all creation and humanity.

The phrase "Our father" also suggests the brotherhood of all mankind. It acknowledges that each of us has one common source of life, liberty and happiness and that is God who is our father.

We respectfully call upon the name of God because we recognize that his name is "Hallowed" or holy. We do not approach God irreverently or in jest but in a serious manner. "Hallowed be thy name" is our statement of the sovereignty and power of God.

Thy Kingdom Come

The kingdom of God lives in the hearts of men and women. Those who pray the words, “thy kingdom come” express a desire to see the love of God lived out in the lives of every believer. Believers yearn for the kingdom and they seek to help it become realized in life. They work, seek and pray for it to become a reality.

Establishing the kingdom of God in the hearts of men and women is a prerequisite to the establishment of the Kingdom of Heaven on earth. Each believer prays that both the kingdom of heaven and the kingdom of God will come.

Thy will be done

Essential to any prayer request is the acknowledgment that God’s will supercedes our own. It is God’s will that is supreme. It is God’s will that is divine. The believer makes requests of God with the full knowledge and acceptance that God’s will is supreme on earth in the affairs of men as it is supreme in heaven.

We may desire opportunities, but only those that are in God’s will.

We may desire certain changes, but only those that are in God’s will.

The believer wants the will of God to come first and prefaces or amends any requests of God to acknowledge the fact that God’s will must be done!

Our Daily Bread

We ask God to meet us at our point of need. “Our daily bread” suggests our daily needs. Our daily needs may include a variety of ingredients including, food, clothing and shelter. They may also include our daily spiritual needs as well. We ask only for bread; not for what we do not need. We ask for our bread; that teaches us honesty and industry and it teaches us to constantly depend upon Divine Providence.

Each day we renew our request to God to give us what we need to complete the day fulfilled, safe and secure. That might require an extra portion of wisdom. It might require extra strength. It might require an extra financial blessing or two. “Give us this day”compels each of us to ask God for the essentials need for the abundant life this day.

Forgive us Our debts

We ask God for mercy and forgiveness for our shortcomings. Despite our best efforts we often come up short. There are times when our spirit is willing but our flesh is weak and we simply miss the mark. These are the instances when we call upon the merciful nature of God to forgive us for our shortcomings.

However, our request for forgiveness should hinge upon our willingness to forgive others. There are many people who ask God to forgive their shortcomings, but they are unwilling to forgive the shortcomings of others. In Jesus' model prayer, he included the words "as we forgive our debtors" making it clear that we should forgive those who have wronged us before asking God to do the same.

Lead us not into temptation

Each believer is exposed to temptation on a daily basis. Temptations are those things that we desire to do, but should not do.

Temptations are those situations that prompt us to act in a way that is against our best interest while appealing to our baser instincts and more prurient or carnal interests.

The believer's prayer to God is to be kept away from temptation.

In addition the believer asks God for deliverance. It is expected that Satan will attempt to trap every believer in some way each day, thus the believer prays that God would deliver him from evil. Every day the believer asks God for deliverance.

Power of Prayer

Finally brothers and sisters, it should be noted that Lord's prayer is short a prayer with a lot of power. The Lord's prayer contains only 66 words. It is short but powerful. It not powerful because of its longevity obviously, but because of what it says.

One of the most powerful and effective prayers in the world was also one of the shortest on record. It is the "Peter Prayer" When Peter walked on the water he did the impossible for a few steps. However as his faith waned, he began to sink and he cried out "Lord, save me!" Those three words are known as the Peter Prayer. They illustrate that even a short prayer, without any formality or great wisdom can get an answer from God, for in the very instant their Peter prayed he received an answer and was saved!

Peter prayers are powerful. We are familiar with them because we pray them ourselves!

Lord, help me!, That's a Peter Prayer! We don't have to say much because we know that Lord is my help in a time of trouble!

Lord, direct me! That's a Peter Prayer! We know he'll direct us because the word says "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths."

Lord, hide me! That's a Peter Prayer! That's all we need to say, because we know that "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me.." Psalm 27:5

Lord, teach me! That's a Peter Prayer! We know if we are taught the word that "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Psalm 119:105

I don't know about you but I am convinced that prayer changes things!

Prayer can take that which is:

IMPOSSIBLE and make it possible; IMPROBABLE and make it probable!
DEFEATED and turn it into victory; FAILURE and turn it into success!
CROOKED and make it straight again; BROKEN and make it like brand new!
Prayer can take your old lady and turn her into your loving wife!
Prayer can take your old man and turn him into your darling husband!
Prayer can take your house and turn it into a home!
Prayer can take a wayward child and bring him home again!
Prayer can take your sickness and turn it into healing!
Prayer can take your empty billfold and stuff it full of blessings!
In John 14:13 Jesus said, "And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do."
In the name of Jesus!
Jesus, the problem solver!
Jesus, the mediator!
Jesus, who died out on Calvary!
Jesus, who arose Early Sunday morning!
No wonder the song writer said, "Jesus is on the mainline tell him what you want, call him up and tell him what you want!

Looking For Elbethel

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe,La.

July 19, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "So Jacob came to Luz, which is in the land of Canaan, that is, Bethel, he and all the people that were with him. And he built there an altar, and called the place Elbethel: because there God appeared unto him, when he fled from the face of his brother."Genesis 35:6-7

Introduction

Do you remember where you were when you met the Lord for the first time? Not the time you united with the church, but the time you first acknowledged God in your own heart? How did you feel? Was that a precious moment in your life? Was there a special place or event that marked that moment? The day of our salvation is truly an important day. It is the day that we made comittments to God about our life and our future. On that day we put our hand in God's hand and pledged our loyalty to him.

Unfortunately, many met God in a special moment in a special place, but haven't seen him since. There are some who have many unfulfilled promises to God. In fact, there are many who have forgotten what they promised. It has been so long ago. One of the significant truths about homecomings and reunions is that they tend to stir memories of special moments. If those memories are pleasant then homecomings are joyous occasions. If those memories are sad, then we try to avoid them.

It is human nature to desire to find things just the way they were. In fact, we can get a little unsettled if things have changed too much. Consider the Jack leg who passed himself off as a preacher in the back woods. No one in the back hills knew that he wasn't a preacher, cause he preached so good. They called him Rev. "Fresh Air." It seems that the would be preacher could not perform his act unless he had a sip or two of white lightning which he kept under the back door step. In the middle of his sermon, while people were really warming up, he would often stop and say "Hold it sister right there, while I get me some fresh air!" He'd then run out the back door, take a nip and come back preaching harder. He did this repeatedly throughout his sermon interrupting it several times. Some of the church boys saw him one night and they hid his bottle. When the preacher tipped to the back door and found his bottle wasn't where he put it, he ran back into the church and shouted, "Hold it sister right there, somebody done stole my fresh air!" Folks get really upset when things are not the way they left them!

Nostalgia! It is wonderful. It reminds us of the good times! It reminds us of our blessings! It reminds of how far we have come! It reminds us of the journey and how blessed we have been by God along the way.

As Christians, we walk in the path that leads toward heaven. We are constantly looking for God and remembering our vows to him. It is his goodness to us and our need of him that stirs our souls every time we return to Bethel- the house of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jacob as he returns to Bethel, the "house of God" and leaves finding "ElBethel" the "God of the House."

When Jacob fled from his brother, Esau, en route to Leban's house, he fell asleep along the way by a city called Luz. There he saw a vision of a great ladder ascending into heaven. Upon the ladder he saw angels both ascending and descending. He was inspired by what he saw and immediately arose, took the stone that had been his pillow, anointed it with oil and erected it as a pillar of commitment. He promised God that if he protected him and insured him a safe journey that this stone would be "The House of God" when he returned. He named the spot "Beth-el" meaning House of God.

Jacob made a safe journey and lived with Laban many safe and prosperous years. He returned with two wives, children and a great fortune. While he was away, he remained Godly himself, although he tolerated many ungodly things in his presence and among his family members.

This passage finds God "calling in his marker." Jacob is commanded by God to return to Bethel. Bethel, was at the time, a name only Jacob knew about. The city was called Luz by everyone else. But Bethel was a particular spot where Jacob met God and in so doing it was a special, private, place to Jacob. God's call was for Jacob to come home to the place where he met God and where he promised him his service.

Before returning, Jacob took all of the strange gods and idols of those in his family and hid them under a tree. He had been tolerant of many strange things in his family. As he planned to return home he demanded that all in his company give up their strange gods.

Jacob returned to the place called, the "House of God." It was just as he had left it. But it wasn't long before he built an altar, consecrated himself and renewed himself fully with God. Instead of the "House of God" -Bethel, he renamed the same place "El-Bethel"- The God of the House or the God of Bethel. More important than the spot itself, he had found the God that the spot symoblized.

Where he went-Bethel

Today there are many who share the Jacob experience. Many have erected Bethel Stones that represent milestones in their lives.

THE PLACE WHERE WE PROMISED GOD: There are many who met God at a special moment in their lives. That special moment may have been during a church service. It may have been in a quiet moment at home. It may have been as they sat by the bedside of a loved one in a hospital room. It may have been the moments immediately after an accident when death appeared certain and the future dark. It may have been a moment of great joy and excitement. During such special moments, many have made promises relating to their own behavior.

Like Jacob, God has blessed us immensely. Like Jacob, some of us have forgotten about the promises we made God, while the blessings constantly continue to flow. Most of us have more material possessions than we have ever had in our lives. While we are not nearly all that we can be, we are much more than we were. The reason for our prosperity is that God is blessing us in powerful ways.

The call to return to Bethel is a call to come home.

It is a call to remember our promises to God.

THE PLACE WHERE HE EXPERIENCED GOD: At reunions and homecoming, it is traditional to return to the "House of God." Even as we walk in the doors memories begin to stir. Our eyes scan for familiar faces, rituals and atmosphere. Our return to the House of God stirs emotions and pleasant memories.

When Jacob returned to Luz he found a simple stone marked the place that he said would be the House of God. He had done little to help it become anything more. It marked a place where he had an experience and made a promise but it was little more.

Many have the mistaken notion that there is salvation in the "house of God" itself. They think that simply participating in the services, sharing in holy communion, observing the liturgy and other particulars brings salvation. However, there is no salvation in simply sitting in the House of God. There is no salvation in the rituals: standing, sitting, passing little cups of grape juice and chewing on small portions of bread or crackers.

The rituals and ordinances of Bethel offer no salvation in themselves. They are significant only if they represent the completion of pledges and promises of union between believers and God himself.

The call to return to Bethel is a call to once again experience God in our lives. It is call to commitment and service.

The call to return to Bethel is a call to do more than simply participate in rituals but to experience the love of God as it reflects itself in service to others.

THE PLACE WHERE WE MET GOD: There is a special time in every believer's life when the undeniable truths about God become real. That's the time when we come to know him more than we have ever known. It's the time when all of the bible stories we've learned in Sunday School and the songs we've learned during thousands of religious services take on a new meaning!

Bethel marks that magical moment when God became real to us. Somebody shouted on that day! Somebody cried! Somebody else simply spent the entire day with a warm feeling of renewal and happiness.

Like Jacob, however, many of us in our prosperity, have not forgotten God completely but the matters relating to God have become less important.

We still believe in God, but it does not bother us any more to skip a Sunday or two of worship.

In many ways we are like Jacob, we have allowed many strange influences into our family circle and into our hearts.

But the call to return to Bethel is more than just a call to return to a place, but it is a call to return to point in our lives when God was everything!

No wonder Andre' Crouch would write, "Take me back! Take me back dear Lord, the place where I first believed!"

The call to Bethel is a call to return to a point of spiritual renewal.

What he found-ElBethel

Finally, brothers and sisters, Jacob returned to Luz looking for the "The house of God" but what he found was "El-Bethel" -The God of the house.

He returned looking for a place and found God. When he found God, he built an altar and completed his pledge made in Genesis 28:22. He gave a tenth of possessions and committed himself fully to service of God.

It was at this point in Jacob's life that he found God again. False gods were buried. Promises made were renewed and joy was restored. It was at Bethel that God told Jacob in Genesis 35:10, "Thy name is Jacob: thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name: and he called his name Israel."

In moments of reunion and homecoming, we may find our way back to the House of God, but we need to make sure that we find the Lord of the House.

Make sure that we find the Lord!

When we find the Lord great things happen in our lives. When we find the Lord what we thought was:

DARKNESS turns into light; INSECURITY is turned into confirmations!

SADNESS is turned into gladness; HARD TIMES is turned into good times!

A QUESTION is turned into an answer; BAD FEELINGS is turned into good feelings!

FAILURE is turned into success; DEFEAT is turned into victory!

When we find the Lord, coming home means more than just a reunion! It means more than just reflection on the past! It means getting together again with God!

No wonder the song writer wrote "Coming home, coming home, never more to roam. Open wide thine arms of love, Lord I'm coming home!"

When you get home you'll find many happy faces!

But when you get home you'll also meet Jesus!

Jesus, the joy of every homecoming!

Jesus, the inspiration of every spiritual reunion!

Jesus, the pinacle of all our hopes! Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose Early Sunday morning!

Come back to the House of God, but don't leave until you find Jesus and know God for yourself!

Naughty By Nature

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 26, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." Romans 7:20

Introduction

Have you ever did something that was wrong? Did you know it was wrong when you did it? Most people have done a few things wrong in the course of their lives. Not simple mistakes, but actual wrongs. If the truth is told, most people would confess that they have either told a lie, stole something, cheated, misrepresented the truth, injured someone, or failed to keep their word somewhere in their lives. If the truth is told, there have been times when we have thought about doing wrong things in advance, considered the consequences, and did them anyway. Why did we do it? We knew it was wrong but we did it anyway! Why did we do it? A while back, comedian Flip Wilson had an answer. In his comic routine each time his famous character "Geraldine" would do something wrong it was explained by saying, "The devil made me do it!" As audiences rolled with laughter there were some who understood that the humorous statement was closer to the truth than it was a simple comic line. When we do wrong, the devil does influence our actions, although he doesn't "make" us do anything!

A while ago rapper Snoop Doggie Dog produced a CD entitled, "Naughty by Nature" The top selling CD contained a selection of raw songs about sex, violence and drugs. This love of sex, drugs and the wild life was explained in the collection of rap tunes as being caused by a natural instinct to be "naughty." It was almost an excuse for bad behavior and wild living. Of course, like most of his songs, they became instant hits with many in the younger generation. Snoop's CD like other song writers before him gave those who may have been troubled by their actions an explanation, "It's natural!" Such was the answer to the lyrical question, "Why must I chase the cat? Nothing but the dog in me!"

There are certain actions that are natural to certain creations. It is natural for a dog to bark, a chicken to lay eggs and a cow to give milk. It is natural for babies to cry, birds to fly and for living things to die. It is the nature of a hungry bear to roar! It is the nature of a rooster to crow! It is the nature of a dog to howl! No matter how tame a domesticated animal becomes, there is an element of the wild within him that could, at any time, develop into a full beast. Those who work with them know the possibility and they remain on guard.

The story is told of the man that found a snake frozen in the ice. The man brought the snake into his cabin and nourished it and warmed it in front of the fire. As time passed, the snake began to move and revive itself. The man cuddled the snake in his chest and rubbed it ever so gently. He fed it and nourished it back to full health. One day as the man held the snake close to his chest and rocked in his chair, the snake bit him in the chest and released a poisonous venom that critically injured the old man. As he was dying the man said to the snake, "I took you in out of the cold. I held you in my arms. I fed you and warmed you! Why did you bite me of all people?" The snake looked at the dying man and said, "You knew I was a snake when you took me in. I did what snakes do!"

It is the nature of people to sin. We were born with a sinful nature that despite our best efforts, causes us to do wrong things. Snoop Doggy Dog and his followers have used this nature as an excuse for reckless living. Others have turned to God for help in controlling the powerful urges within.

As Christians, we have learned that we are powerless alone to defeat this mighty enemy. We cannot do it alone. We give thanks to God for giving us the power to resist this evil presence within us every day. It is this resistance that gives us the victory in Christ Jesus our Lord!

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he tries to explain the forces that operate within the spirit of every believer, one for God and one for Satan.

New converts to the Christian faith were confused about the nature of their conversion. Some thought they should instantly be free from any desires for worldly pursuits. They felt sin should run from them and they would be absolutely free from temptations and spiritual flirtations with evil. Paul tried to explain to them that they were born with the spirit of sin or evil in their lives. They have been given the spirit of Grace through Salvation. Now, the two spirits live within each person, battling for control.

At times, like a sleeping lion, the evil spirit disappears and the good spirit from God prevails. However, on occasions the evil spirit within us awakens and prompts us to sin.

Paul says that as a Christian, redeemed by the grace of God, there is now something within him that wants to do good, that agrees with the Law, that says that the Law is right. The law spoken of here, is not the law of your community or laws made by the United States Government. It refers to the laws of God, specifically to those laws that were given to Moses by God when Israel was in the desert. They began with the 10 commandments and included many others. Those who believe in God want to obey God's law. There is something within every believer that says what the Law tells them to do is right, and they want to do it. But also, he says, there is something else inside every believer that rises up and says "No!" It says, "Do not obey the law!"

When this occurs, Pauls says, despite the fact that we have determined not to do what is bad, we suddenly find ourselves in situations where our determination vanishes. Our resolve is gone, and we end up doing what we had sworn we would not do.

These text verses attempt to discover the source of the problem. Paul tries to help us figure out what is wrong. Paul's explanation is, there are two forces living inside of us, one which wants to do what God says and another which only wants to please Satan. What Paul is suggesting here is that the redeemed spirit never wants to do what God has prohibited. It agrees with the Law that it is good. And yet there is an alien power, a force that he calls sin, a great beast that is lying still within us until it is touched by the commandment of the Law. Then it springs to life, and we do what we do not want to do.

Put in modern terms Paul asks the question, "What's the matter with me? Why can't I do what is right? Why do I give way when I get into this situation? Why am I so weak?"

This inability to control ourselves frustrates us. It confuses us. Paul described this frustration in verse 24, "What a wretched man I am! Who will rescue me from this body of death?"

The answer to the question from Paul's perspective is Jesus Christ. It is he and he alone that gives us the power to overcome the power of evil in light of his glory and excellence!

Doing What I Don't Want to Do

Verses 15-17 explain a modern paradox: "For that which I do I allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I. If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law that it is good. Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me."

These three verses explain how a good Christian youth can get caught up in an evil act. It explains how a person can want to do what is right but end up doing wrong every time. He or she knows the law of God and believes that the law of God is right, but does wrong anyway! How is it that this happens? The answer is sin that lives inside.

Having sin living inside you is like having a miniature demon, perhaps a Gremlin or a little "Chuckie" sitting on your shoulder every day. Each day the little demon keeps suggesting evil things for you to do. It speaks in your ears and says how it would not be very bad if you broke God's law. It keeps suggesting and pushing until at some point, if you are not careful, you do exactly what the little voice says.

Why I Do Wrong!

The next three verses explain why we do wrong when we know we shouldn't! "For

I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not. The good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do. Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.
"Romans 7:18-20

Inside us there is an evil presence somewhere. We can't see it. That's the evil presence that makes us lose our temper so easily. It's the evil presence that makes us talk back or say things that get us in trouble. It's the same evil presence that makes us disrespect our elders, or disobey those who have authority over us. Paul said, it's obvious that there is something within us that makes us do wrong things. That presence is sin.

Good is at War with Evil In Me

The next three verses show how good and evil are at war inside of us. Not just youth, but all of us! "I find then a law, that, when I would do good, evil is present with me. For I delight in the law of God after the inward man: But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members." Romans 7:21-23.

There is a war being waged for the mind and souls of today's youth. The word of God speaks loudly trying to get youths attention, but often youth cannot hear the word of God because Satan has a way of pumping up the volume, drowning out the Word of God!

If there is a war going on inside of us, we must fight evil with the Word of God. 2 Cor 10:3-4, "For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh (For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds"). Our weapons are spiritual. That's why we come to Sunday School! That's why we come to bible study! That's why we work so hard to let God use us, so we can defeat him using the most powerful weapon we have, which is the "Word of God!"

Who can Deliver us?

Finally, every young believer must consider Paul's last question. Not only did he ask an important question but he provided an important answer. After describing the bad situation, Paul asked, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?

I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin." Romans 7:24-25.

Today, youth may be asking the same question. There are negative influences all around us, who can deliver us?

Drugs are all around us. There are dealers on our school campuses and many of our friends are users, who can deliver us?

Violence is all around us. Our friends carry knives and some carry guns. We stand in danger of being a victim of violence if we do not become violent ourselves, who can deliver us?

Sexual temptation is all around us. If we watch television or listen to the radio our heroes tell us to have sex but simply be safe. Who can deliver us?

Youth today are being asked the same question that was asked of the three young Hebrew Boys about to be thrown into a fiery furnace, is your God able to deliver you?

I don't know about you, but I've discovered that God is able!

God is able to take that which is bad and make it good!

God is able to take that which has been destroyed and rebuild it again!

God is able to take our setbacks and make them opportunities!

Young believers gird yourselves in faith in God and have a ready response when the world starts talking to you!

When "Usher" starts talking about "My Way" you telling them that it's not my way, but God's way, for Jesus said "Nevertheless, not my will but thy will be done!"

When Master P says "Make em say Uhhh", you tell them that "I'm not worried about making them say Uhhh, but one day, every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that Jesus is Lord of Lord and say Hallelujah!

When Will Smith says "Get Jiggy With it!", you tell tell Will, I don't have to get Jiggy with because what I really need is to make sure I've got Jesus with it ! If Jesus is with it, everything thing will be all right!

When 2 Live Crew talks about coming to the 2 Live Party, where you and "Luke" can "Raise the Roof" tell them them I don't need the 2 live party to raise the roof, because I got the hookup with Master J and I'm on my way to see the King of Kings!

Holler if you hear me!

He died out on Calvary!

He arose after three days!

God is able!

He's able!

Put Your Pot Out!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 9, 1998

SCRIPTURE: And it came to pass, when the vessels were full, that she said unto her son, bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her, there is not a vessel more. And the oil stayed.' 2 Kings 4:6

Introduction

Have you ever prayed for a blessing? When you prayed did you actually expect to receive the blessing you requested? There are many who pray for blessings but they don't expect anything to come of their prayer. These are the ones that pray for a job, apply, but miss the call because they didn't expect to be hired. They are the ones who enter a competition with no expectation of winning. They invest in an opportunity, without an expectation that it will exceed.

The essence of faith is expectation. Those who expect, look forward to a promised event or experience as if it were about to happen. They faithful anticipate the fulfillment of the their request with the enthusiasm of a child who has asked for a toy and spends a sleepless night on Christmas Eve, knowing full well that the toy will be under the tree on Christmas morning. Have you not heard of the God fearing community that was being inundated by a long and tortuous drought. The drought had ruined all of the crops, streams had dried, water was being rationed and death from heat and drought loomed every where. The community decided they had only one other recourse. They decided to pray. The entire community gathered at the town hall. They came in wagons on horseback and in cars. They all shared the look of defeat and despair. It was too hot to even talk, yet they decided to try praying, since they had tried everything else to no avail. Much to their surprise, the pastor of the community church arrived dressed strangely. He wore thick rubber boots, a bright yellow rain coat and on the back of his wagon was a boat and a life jacket. His first words to the crowd were, "If you came to ask God for rain, why didn't you bring your umbrellas?" Those who ask God for a blessing in faith, should be prepared for a down pour!

Expectation is the mental attitude of the faithful. The saint who prays for better times in his life, assumes the attitude that happy days are just around the corner. The believer besieged by problems, assumes that "weeping endures but a night, but joy comes in the morning." The believer who trusts God for an answer, expects it to arrive at any moment from any direction. The attitude of the faithful is one grounded in the knowledge of God. A believer with a little faith believes God "can" bless his people. A believer with a great faith, believes God "will" bless his people.

As Christians, we have come to expect great blessings from our God. Despite our circumstances we expect God to do what is best for us. Left alone, our requests are often self centered and short sighted, thus when we pray for a blessing, we ask God to do what is best for us. We always get a blessing from Him, even when we don't recognize them as such. He has blessed us immensely in the past, that's why we expect blessings in the days ahead!

Exposition

This text focuses on God working through the prophet Elisha to respond to the need of a widow woman.

Two great prophets of the Old Testament are Elijah and Elisha. Elijah was known for demonstrating God's power over nations. He challenged King Ahab and Queen Jezebel. He challenged the prophets of Baal on Mt. Carmel. He prayed and a drought came upon the land. He prayed again and the rains came. Elijah was the prophet of fire and thunder.

After Elijah went to heaven in a fiery chariot, his student, Elisha received his mantle of authority. Elisha was used by God in just the opposite way. While Elijah was the prophet who demonstrated God's power over nations, Elisha demonstrated God's power in response to individual need. Elisha is often seen as the instrument God used to bless individuals, raising the dead, or otherwise responding to personal woes of people in distress.

This text focuses on Elisha as he responds to the financial distress of a widow who was about to lose her son because she could not pay a bill left by her deceased husband. Her husband, not enjoying the lucrative profits of business, had nothing but a professional income, which, in that irreligious age, would be precarious and very scanty, so that he was not in a condition to provide for his family. Creditors came to collect the debt by seizing one of her sons to work as a bondsman.. By, a creditor was entitled to claim the person and children of the insolvent debtor, and compel them to serve him as bondmen till the year of jubilee should set them free.

The woman explained her situation to Elisha who in return asked her what she had in the house. She had only a pot of oil.

Oil in biblical times was considered a blessing given by God. It was valuable because it was used to prepare food, and make medicines. It was also used as fuel and in religious ritual. Most of the oil was pressed from olives. Most was stored in small pots called cruses. Anyone who had large amounts of oil would find ready buyers because it was used in so many ways. The more oil she had, the greater her blessing.

The widow woman had one cruse of oil. She had something. She was then ordered to find as many vessels as she could. She was encouraged to borrow vessels from her neighbors and friends. She was expressly told not to have just a few vessels but to get as many as she could find. The woman had no idea what was happening. It was not explained why she was being asked to gather so many vessels, she simply did everything she was asked. She and her sons gathered vessels until there were no more.

Elisha closed the door and ordered the vessels filled with oil from the one jar the woman had. As they went from the vessel to vessel the oil never stopped flowing. As long as there was an empty pot the oil kept flowing. When there was nothing else to receive oil, then the miraculous flow of oil ceased.

Thus, God demonstrated in this instance how believers should respond when in need. They should go to God in humility, do what they can do, and expect God to respond to their need according to his will.

How to get the oil to flow

Today millions are distressed about personal circumstances. Some have completely thrown up their hands and decided that life is not worth living. Bill collectors, health problems and a plethora of other discomforts have made life miserable for many. Many are stressed out and suffer anxiety attacks, high blood pressure and depression as a result. Each of us can easily become the widow woman of this text. God's response to her need is the same way he responds to our need.

CRY OUT: Every believer, faced with difficult situations should turn first to God. There are many that turn to God last. They consult horoscopes, witch doctors, voodoo experts, palm readers, psychics, shrinks, psychologists and even their beauticians and barbers, before they seriously go to God in prayer. How many people in financial need have consulted a long list of alternative sources before they consulted the main source.

The widow in this text cried out to Elisha, who represented God. Her plea was not so much to Elisha as it was to God himself.

It's the cry to God that sparked the Hymn writer to say, "Father, I stretch my hands to thee no other help I know." In Psalm 4:1 David called upon God and said, "thou has enlarged me when I was in distress, have mercy upon me and hear my prayer!"

USE WHAT YOU HAVE: Most of us have at least one resource upon which to draw in times of trouble. We may not think much of it, but we have it nevertheless. Moses, as he was about to begin the task of leading Israel, complained that he was ill equipped to challenge Pharaoh. God asked him "What's that in your hand?" Moses answered, "A rod!" He was told to use what he had. Gideon only had 300 soldiers, but God used the 300 to defeat thousands! He used what he had!

The widow of the text had only one cruse of oil. God used it. The family in response to the command of Elisha went out and did what was necessary to get their blessing. Today, every believer should be prepared to do whatever is necessary to get your blessing. There should be no honorable work or moral task considered beneath your standards.

If you have health and strength, use what you have! Mop floors, wash dishes, shine shoes, sell pop corn, wait tables, mow yards! If you are confined to a wheel chair and can only look out the window and talk on the phone then become the one woman neighborhood watch consultant! Use what you have!

There is a great truth that we should remember, God has shown a tendency to help fill the pots of those who are willing to go out and seek as many opportunities as they could. He has been known to bless the applications of those who sought jobs, but first they had to prepare themselves and apply!

LIVE IN EXPECTATION: Those who live by faith don't know what will happen but they live in expectation that God will handle their situation. The widow woman of the text followed God's commands to the letter. She had no idea what was about to happen or how God would respond to her problem. The easiest way would have been for the prophet to simply make money appear out of nowhere. She didn't know what would happen but she expected something to happen!

Every believer who is trusting God for an answer should expect God to answer! Gathering pots was a strange way for God to answer, but she gathered them without question. God may not respond to our need in the way we anticipate, but we should expect him to answer in one way or the other!

We should expect God to move in our time of need because the Word says he will! We expect him to act because the Word, in Philippians 4:19 says, "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

We expect God to move because the Word reminds us in Psalm 37:25 "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread."

As Long as there is need, the oil flows

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that the oil flowed as long as there was an empty vessel. That simply suggests that as long as there is a need there is a blessing.

Each new day always presents new challenges and new needs. There is never a day when we don't receive a blessing or two.

I'm glad to know that I serve a God who is in the blessing business. I heard a song writer declare, "I get a blessing every day!" On Monday, I get a blessing! On Tuesday and Wednesday I get a blessing...I get a blessing every day!

If we have learned anything from the widow in this text, it should be that should we tell God about our problems then put out the pots.

If the week is about to begin with financial troubles looming everywhere, tell God about it and put your pot out!

If there is a problem in your family that you can't solve, tell God about it and put your pot out!

If there is job that you are trying to secure, tell God about it and put your pot out!

If there is an opportunity looming on your horizon, tell God about it and put your pot out!

After you put your pot out, step back and watch God work!

God can take bad situations and turn them around! Put your pot out!

God can take unemployed hands and help them find work! Put your pot out!

God can take empty purses and filled them with blessings! Put your pot out!

God can take failures and turn them into successes! Put your pot out!

God can take sicknesses and turn them into examples of good health! Put your pot out!

There has never been a problem that God couldn't solve!

There has never been a valley too low for God to pull you out!

There has never been a mountain to high for God to climb!

There has never been a river so wide that God couldn't cross it! Put your pot out!

Call on Jesus!

Jesus who died out on Calvary!

Call on Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

Just a little talk with Jesus makes it right!

Looking For God On Life's Left Hand Side

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 16, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "Behold, I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him: On the left hand, where he doth work, but I cannot behold him: he hideth himself on the right hand, that I cannot see him:But he knoweth the way that I take: when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold." Job 23:8-10; "And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left." Luke 23:33; "And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in paradise." Luke 23:42-43

Introduction

Do you know any left handed people? Left handed people share a unique frustration. The entire society is geared toward their right handed friends and for the most part they are completely ignored. The handicapped have special parking privileges and access to buildings. Minorities, seniors and other special groups all seem to get consideration from the general community. However, the left handed are left to wallow in their frustration without a fair hearing.

It must be frustrating to be left handed in a right handed world. Because 90 percent of the people of the world are right handed, everything appears centered around the majority as if the minority does not exist, or at the least, is not important. At school, the left handed person finds most desks are made for right handed people. A left handed seamstress has trouble using scissors because they are made for the right handed. Right handed baseball gloves can be a problem if you are left handed. At dinner, traditional etiquette calls for each person to put his left hand under the table, which is a real problem, if you are left handed. In America, even the cars drive on the right hand side of the street instead of the left as they do in the rest of the world.

Added to the frustration of being left handed is all the stigma that society has added. The word sinister or evil also means "left handed." Those with extremely unorthodox views are said to be out in "left field" and every left hander dreads hearing the judgment that because they are left handed they "owe the devil a days work." Sometimes a left handed person is frustrated even when he reads his bible. In scripture the left hand is frequently associated with the less preferable of alternatives. Joseph protested against his eldest son being blest with Jacob's left hand (Gen. 48:13-19). A fool's heart inclines to the left (Eccl. 10:2). In the day of judgment when the sheep and goats are separated, the goats' place of judgment is at the left hand side.

While most of us may not be left handed, we do know what it means to be stigmatized, criticized, ignored, frustrated and stereotyped. We know the frustrations of being isolated. We know what it means to be treated as if we do not count. Life is uncomfortable on the left on hand side.

Yet, despite their problems those who live on the left hand side of life have managed to overcome. While the world laughed at them, the likes of Leonardo Da Vinci, Isaac Newton, Albert Einstein, Babe Ruth, Benjamin Franklin, Charlie Chaplin, Wynton Marsalis and millions of others have over come the stigma that the world has placed on them and risen to high heights of achievement. Still others who have shared their left sided stigma have been able to rise as well. Life on the left hand side for them was not a condemnation but an opportunity which they seized and used to their advantage.

As Christians, we are aware of what it means to live on the left hand side of life. We are often frustrated and criticized because of our insistent faith. The great truth we have learned as we consider our plight in life is that we serve a God who operates on both the left and right sides of life. When frustrated by the left sided slant that life seems to give us, we have learned to look to the Lord. Even on the left side of life, he is still God!

Exposition

This text focuses on Job one whose life answers the question of why the righteous suffer. This question was prominent in Job's day, for ancient society believed that human suffering was the result of one's sin or at least a god's displeasure. Even the meaning of the name Job (the persecuted one) seems to support this suggestion, but that may not be all that is involved in the book. Job's life illustrates for us the nature of true faith, both from the point of view of people and of God. For humans, it is trusting in God as the creator and sustainer of life, even when all is not going well and when He is not visibly present to help us. From God's point of view, the story proves His faithfulness to His creatures despite their weaknesses and inability to understand what is happening.

In this text Job is frustrated over his losses, which included his children, wealth and health. He was completely overwhelmed with trouble that seemed to surround him, though he had attempted all of his life to live a righteous life. Surrounded by the signs of failure and depression, Job sought help from his friends who came to him and advised him that he should repent of his sin. Even that advice frustrated Job because he had not committed any sins and was recognized as a perfect man.

In his frustration he sought God but was so caught up in his grief and frustration that he could not really find him. When he looked forward or backward, God was not there. When he turned to the left, where God had been known to work, he could not find God. Neither could he find him on the right. Among those who were having either bad times or good times, Job couldn't find God.

He was completely consumed with personal self pity. He had lived a relatively righteous life only to be destroyed by the very forces that he fought against all of his life. He was being unduly criticized by his friends and associates. He endured considerable hardship and impoverishment. He was becoming acutely aware that the left hand side of life was less than desirable.

However, when he came to himself he realized that God would consider his plight. Even though he was trapped on the left hand side, God would deliver him eventually and he would come through his ordeal as pure Gold.

He was rescued from his dilemma when he remembered that the God who worked for him on the right hand side was still in control. On the right hand side, God had brought him prosperity, a large family, fame and notoriety. On the right hand side, God had blessed him immensely. When he considered that God is no less God on the left than He is on the right, he reminded himself that God is still God. So he sought desperately to put himself in communion with him, to find him and get his blessings again.

Despite being on the left hand side, he decided that finding God and staying close to him would be the solution to his situation. He arose determined to come through as pure gold.

In Luke, a similar circumstance is presented. As Christ was being crucified a special mention is made of one being on the left and another on the right. The malefactor on the right hand side is referred to first and then the left. Most scholars agree that the thief on the left, being the second one reference, showed an understanding of the nature of the kingdom of God. He asked for salvation and received, in his dying hour, the acknowledgment of the savior, "this day ye shall be with me in paradise." Even on Calvary, the Master displayed that He is a God who operates on the left hand side!

Today there are millions of believers who are frustrated over the reality that despite their best efforts to live right, things seem to go left.

Some are frustrated over the fact that although they attempt to give God their best, they are besieged with problems. A plethora of frustrations have come their way ranging from personal finances to family problems. Enemies seem to revel in their fall and those who live less virtuously seem to succeed while they are bogged down trying to do right. It is such moments that make us feel that we are turning right but heading to the left side of life. We feel like Job in many ways. Yet, in our frustration, we should recall Psalm 37:1-2, " Fret not thyself because of evildoers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity. For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb."

There are many who have enjoyed the right hand side of life with its blessings of health and prosperity. From time to time, even the strongest of believers, have found themselves on the left hand side of prosperity, health or social advantage. These are the moments when personal or family illnesses slow our pace. These are the times when our finances are in total disarray. These are those irritating times when our families are strained with discord. These are those times when we are drowning in personal weakness, overcome by our flaws, temptations and doubts.

When such times come we know that the pendulum of life has made a dramatic swing to the left. What do we do? Look for God! On the left, Job looked for God but could not find him for a while because he was so consumed with his personal problem that he could not find him on the left or the right, forward or backward.

When he stopped to think however, then he realized that God knew his situation. He knew his heart and intentions. Even in his frustration, Job shook himself out of his self pity long enough to remember the greatness of God. He determined to keep doing right. Keep believing. Keep the faith. Therein is our example. When on the left, we should resolve to keep doing the right things. If money is tight, to resist the temptation to steal. If our marriages are strained, to resist the temptation to find comfort in the arms of others. If our troubles are overwhelming us, to keep our faith in tact!

Even in bad times keep sending the praises up for when the praises go up the blessings come down, even if you are on the left hand side of life!

Develop and Ambidextrous Faith

Finally brothers and sisters, we must consider that while some people are right handed and others are left handed, there are others who are ambidextrous. An ambidextrous person can use his left hand just as well as his right hand. He can pitch or hit a ball with either his right or his left hand. He fights conventional style or as a Southpaw. He can write with either his left hand or his right.

The goal of every believer is to have an ambidextrous faith. This is a faith that is just as strong on the left hand side of life as it is on the right.

This is a faith that can see beyond the darkness of the left hand side and remember that “weeping endureth but a night but joy comes in the morning!” Psalm 30:5

This is the faith that is not frustrated by the temporary setbacks of the left hand side but remembers that “The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want” Psalm 23:1

This is the faith that holds firm in hard times because “I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread.” Psalm 37:25 must have been what Paul had in mind when he said, "I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need. I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Philippians 4:12-13.

While it is good for us to maintain an ambidextrous faith, it is also good for us to remember that we serve an ambidextrous God, who is the same on the left hand of life as he is on the right!

When Daniel was lowered into the lion's den, he was on the left hand side of life, but his skeptics soon found out that the same God that Daniel worshiped in the palace could operate in the lion's den!

When the Hebrew Boys were thrown into the fiery furnace, they faced the heat of the left side of life! But they soon found out that the same God who stood with them in good times, stood with them also in the fiery furnace!

No matter what side of life you may experience, God is there. That's why David said in the 139th Psalm, "If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me."

When things are going good in your life, call on the Lord and praise his name!

When things are going bad in your life, call on the Lord and praise his name!

When your deep freezer is full, call on the Lord!

But when you have nothing in refrigerator but ice cubes and cold water, remember God operates on the left hand side!

Somebody can testify, "I was on the left hand side of life, sinking deep in sin, sinking to rise no more, but the master of the sea heard my despairing cry and from the waters lifted me, now safe am I"

"It doesn't matter whether you are on the left side or the right, there is power in the name of Jesus! Call on Jesus who can:

Turn darkness into light; Turn Sorrow into Joy;

Loneliness into love; Fear into faith

-Wickedness into righteousness; Sickness into health

Jesus, who carried an old rugged cross up Calvary's hill with somebody on his right hand and somebody on his left. I know it must have been the voice of the millions of believers on the left hand side of life that cried out "Remember me, Lord!

I don't know about you but when I'm struggling on the left side of life I want the Lord to remember me!

He died out on Calvary! They buried him in borrowed tomb!

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with

With all power in his hands!

Keep Your Eyes On the Rock

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 23, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "In God is my salvation and my glory: the rock of my strength, and my refuge, is in God." Psalm 62:7

Introduction

Have you ever been distracted? Those were the times in which you lost your focus, even if it was just for a short period of time. Distractions can be dangerous. Distractions can result in a loss of opportunity, property and health. Sometimes they are fatal. A distracted athlete cannot give his best on the playing field. A leader besieged with personal problems cannot fully focus on the problems of those who follow him. A student's academic performance drops once he or she is distracted. A person driving an automobile can cause a serious life threatening accident if he is distracted. Distractions have a way of slowing progress at the least, and totally derailing activity at the most. Thus, it becomes extremely important for those who are trying to succeed in life to remain focused on their immediate and long range goals. Even the smallest distraction can steer them off the course.

Keeping focused is essential to success. Losing focus can be costly. The story is told of two men crossing the rugged Sierras on horseback. As they came to a large and swift-flowing river, the older and more experienced man said to the younger, "As we get to the deepest and swiftest part, be sure not to look down and from side to side at the swirling water around you, it will only make you dizzy." "Listen to me," the older man continued sternly, "See that huge stone on the other side? Keep your eyes focused on that stone!" "OK" said the younger man. As the men then crossed, they quickly approached the swift and turbulent midstream waters. The horses began to struggle, the spray of the icy waters splashed against their faces. The young man began to center his attention solely on the waters swirling angrily around horse and rider. Becoming dizzy-headed, he began to struggle to remain on the saddle. The older man looked back, and noticing the young man laboring hollered out, "Keep your eyes focused on the rock! Keep your eyes focused on the rock!" The young man, barely able to hear, desperately and with great difficulty focused his eyes on the rock. Soon his head began to clear, and soon they were on the other side safe and sound. Once safe, the old man said to the young boy, "Crossing this river, like making it in life is easier if you keep your eyes on the rock!"

It is easy for the concerns of the world to distract us and for our life walk to shift from a faith walk to a secular walk. Like Peter who lost focus for just an instant while he walked on water, many of God's best people take their eyes off him while they respond to the demands of the world. Sometimes their distraction is short. Sometimes it is extended. Too often, regardless of the length of time, the period of distraction is too long. The end result is sometimes tragic.

As Christians, we have learned to constantly trust in the Lord. Our experience has taught us to trust in him at all times and in all situations. When we trust him, he will provide for all of our needs.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he encourages believers to keep trusting in God, the rock of our salvation.

David's life is filled with examples of the great way in which God works in the lives of individuals that completely trust him. The importance of trusting in God completely is a truth that David learned over a lifetime relationship with God that proved to him that as long as he remains focused and trusts in God he is assured of great blessings from God. However, his experiences also taught him that those times when he allowed himself to be distracted from the perfect will of God he experienced failure.

The visible example of distraction in David's life occurred when his head was turned away from God by the beauty of Bathsheba, who happened to be another man's wife. David turned his eyes away from God and toward this beautiful woman. During this period his kingdom experienced an all moral low. It wasn't until he acknowledged his wrong and begged God for a clean heart that he refocused himself and once again enjoyed the fame and glory that was due him as king.

Those who stay focused on God walk in the way both of duty and comfort because they wait upon God. They cheerfully give of themselves, becoming instruments of his will and wisdom. It is in such times that we see the wisdom of remaining focused on him. We see that there is power in trusting him. When we stay focused on him, he helps even the weakest among us to do much more than we could do alone.

For the believer there is ground and reason of this dependence. By his grace he has supported us, and by his providence delivered us. He only can be our Rock and our salvation. As creatures we are nothing without him, therefore we will look above them to him.

Four Reasons To Stay Focused On The Rock

Youth today should heed David's advice and stay focused on God, trusting in him immensely. As the school year begins, each Christian youth must remember why they are going to school and keep focused on the real reason they attend school: to learn to use the gifts God has given them that they may be used for the furtherance of his kingdom. That may require study of what may appear to be strange and unnecessary subject matter at the moment, but God has a purpose for everything, including the subjects youth hate the most.

Christian youth are often surrounded by non-Christians on the school campus. It is important that each young believer not be distracted by what the crowd is doing but keep focused on the power within you which is replenished daily by the Holy Spirit. Thus every believer should leave home everyday saying, "I will keep my mind focused on my goal and I will release the power of God within me!"

Verse seven of this text gives four clear reasons why believers should remain focused on God:

HE IS MY SALVATION: Each school day, youth will be bombarded by a number of forces claiming to offer freedom and fun. Many of the offers will come from sources that are not advisable. We have read of the accounts of youth who have been overwhelmed by the temptation to involve themselves in Satanism and many other strange beliefs. For some, these distractions proved fatal. For others they served as diversions that kept them away from their stated goals. All of the distractions offered fulfillment and salvation in one of its varied forms.

However, there is no other worldly source of salvation. There is no involvement or occupation that offers our souls the joy of salvation. Only through God can we ever hope to receive a chance to everlasting life. This is what Acts 4:12 meant, "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Keep your eyes on the rock because he is the only source of Salvation.

HE IS MY GLORY: It is important to stay focused on Christ because he is the source of all Godly accomplishment. Those who achieve academic excellence do so in part because of their hard work, but the glory they earn comes mostly from the power of God working within. No honorable goal can be achieved without the blessings of the almighty

. Whatever high accomplishments we hope to achieve can only be done so in light of his grace. 1 Corinthians15:10 " But by the grace of God I am what I am: and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me." When we are honored for academic excellence, it is not us, but the grace of God which is in us! When we are praised for excellence in art, music, literature and dance, it is not us, but the grace of God which is in us! Any glory we receive is through the working of God within us. All grace and praise is given to God for his excellence working through us!

While the world may offer great opportunities, none of those can compare with what God offers. Keep your eyes on the rock because the rock is the source of your glory!

HE IS MY STRENGTH: The faithful remain focused on God because he is the source of all of their strength and abilities. When a Christian football player has played four quarters of a tough game and every bone in his body is screaming for rest, where does he get the energy? Certainly not from Gatorade! When a Christian student is trying hard to complete a class project and energy just runs out as the eyes begin to droop and power just seeps away, where does the energy to complete the program come from? When your brain takes a rain check and your body clocks out, where do you get the energy to keep going? That's when believers lean hard on the power of God to keep them going.

Even when weakness approaches, young believers still remain faithful because God restores waning strength with new vigor. The Word identifies the source of a young believer's power. Isaiah 40:30-31 says, " Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall: But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

Keep your eyes on the rock because there is strength in the rock!

HE IS MY REFUGE: A refuge is a place of hiding, healing and help. Every young person needs a shelter when storms blow at school. Sometimes there are storms of confusion. Storms of violence. Storms of temptation and misunderstanding. Whenever the storms blow, young believers need a place of refuge. Those who stay focused on him can expect him to serve as their hiding place, their source of spiritual healing and their help in times of trouble. It does not matter to God that the person needing help is only a teenager or a college student. Age ain't nothing but a number to God. That is what David had in mind in Psalm 27:5 "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock."

Keep your eyes focused on the rock because the rock provides safety and help in the time of trouble!

Keep your eyes focused on the rock because the rock:

SATISFIES thirsty hearts and feeds hungry souls. That's what Dr. Watts had in mind when he said "Bread of heaven, bread of heaven, feed me till I want no more!

SHELTERS weary souls from the storms of life. Did you not hear the song writer proclaim, "When the storms of life are raging stand by me. When the world is tossing me like a ship out on the sea, Thou who rulest wind and waters, stand by me!"

GUIDES lost and confused souls through the mountains and valleys. If we stay focused on the rock we can say like David, "Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil for thou art with me!"

Have you ever noticed a rock badger? It is a bit larger than a prairie and is gray, the color of the rocks. As long as the rock badger, is on the rock sunning itself, it's almost impossible to see. When a predator comes to attack, the rock badger will run into a hole, the crag in the rock. If a vulture or an eagle wants to sweep down on the coney, it has to knock down a mountain to get at it.

One thing about rock badgers, they know where their security lies. If a rock badger decides to go off on the prairie, venturing away from the rock, then it's vulnerable. It doesn't matter how courageous the coney is. It doesn't matter whether or not it's been taking body building lessons at the local gym. The most courageous coney falls victim to the smallest wolf or lion. When it wanders away from the rock, a rock badger is dead meat.

They would have said, "If you have the wisdom of a rock badger, you'll know where your security and stay close to the rock!"

Young brothers and sisters stay close to the rock!

When I say keep your eye on the rock, I'm not talking about the Rock of Gibralter that protrudes into the deep waters

When I say keep your eye on the rock, I'm not talking about a children's song that says "Rock a-bye baby on the tree top, when the wind the blows the cradle will rock!"

When I say keep your eye on the rock, I'm not talking about Elvis Presley and Jail House Rock!

When I say keep your eye on the rock, I'm not talking about Little Richard, and Bo Diddley, master minds of rock and roll!

I'm not talking about a rhythm and blues golden hit that encourages you to "Rock around the clock"

I'm not talking about Areatha Franklin who wants you to "Rock Steady baby!"

I'm not talking about Master P who wants us to "Rock The House!"

I'm talking about Jesus, my rock weary in weary land!

Jesus, my strong tower!

Jesus, my bridge over troubled water!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary...

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

Keep your eyes on the rock and everything will be all right!

Don't Mess With the Blessed

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: "Behold, I have received commandment to bless: and he hath blessed; and I cannot reverse it." Numbers 23:20

Introduction

Have you ever received a blessing only to have someone try to take it away from you? One of the most frustrating experiences in life is to strive to achieve a goal, attain a height or otherwise receive a blessing and then have it taken by the evil deeds of others. Sometimes thieves deprive us of financial blessings. Sometimes insensitive people steal our sense of security by making us afraid. Sometimes there are those who enjoy cheating us out of our good names and reputations. Often opportunities for advancement are taken from us. Even business opportunities have been known to slip through our fingers because there are people who are virtual blessing burglars. Such moments are extremely frustrating, but they are realities that every Christian faces daily. They never stop trying to turn our happy days into sad days.

Sometimes our blessings came in the strangest ways. A bad moment turned out to be a blessing. A loss opened the door for even another blessing. Blessings when received are intended to be shared with others. At a church meeting a very wealthy man rose to tell the rest of those present about his Christian faith. "I'm a millionaire," he said, "and I attribute it all to the rich blessings of God in my life. I remember that turning point in my faith. I had just earned my first pay day and before I could spend it, I was robbed of everything but a dollar. A whole week's work and all I had was one dollar left. I went to a church meeting that night. The speaker was a missionary who told about his work. I knew that I only had a dollar bill and had to either give it all to God's work or nothing at all. So at that moment I decided to give my whole dollar to God. I believe that God blessed that decision, to give all I had, and that is why I am a rich man today."

He finished and there was an awed silence at his testimony as he moved toward his seat. As he sat down a little old lady sitting in the same pew leaned over and said to him: "You say you are a millionaire?" The man nodded yes. The old woman said, "I dare you to make that decision again." Many find it easier to share blessings in their poverty than they do in their prosperity.

What God has blessed cannot be reversed by anyone or anything. At times it may appear that God has abandoned his promises. It may even appear that instead of being blessed that we are actually being cursed with one string of adversities after another. However, the faithful always remember that God is true to his word and his promise. There is no power on earth that can stop a blessing that is intended for you.

As Christians, we have come to know that what God has for us, we will receive. Others may try to cheat us out of what he has in store for us, but he will eventually see to it that we get what he intends for us to have. Once we receive his blessings, we should share them with others, over and over again.

Exposition

This text focuses on a professional prophet by the name of Balaam who was asked by the king to curse Israel after God had blessed them.

Balaam was one of many prophets of eastern religions who worshiped all the gods of the land. In many instances they proved to be prophets for hire who knew the intricacies, rituals and beliefs of all of the surrounding religious community. Many of these false teachers had great power and influence. When they pronounced a blessing or a curse, it was considered a true prophecy.

When Moses led his people across the wilderness, he journeyed north on the east side of Jordan where King Balak of Moab faced the invasion of Israel. Balak sought a strategy other than battle to stop Moses. He decided to use a prophet to curse Israel. Balaam was chosen. Balak sent his messengers with fees to secure Balaam's services. Balaam asked God's permission to curse Israel. Permission was refused, but Balaam journeyed to confer further with Balak. On this journey, Balaam's donkey talked with him as he traveled a narrow trail (Num. 22:21-30). Here Balaam clearly understood that an angel's drawn sword enforced his obedience to speak only God's message to Balak.

In four clear and precise messages Balaam insisted that God would bless Israel (Num. 23-24).

The people of Israel were being blessed because they were living godly lives. In 23:21 Balaam said God had considered the ways of Israel and was pleased with their righteousness. Moses had insisted that they live according to the law of God. Their righteous living drew praise from God and resulted in a blessing that could not be reversed.

In 23:21 Balaam noted that Israel was blessed because they were strong in their faith. The phrase "strength of a unicorn" was another way of saying that the people were as strong as oxen. Strong faith and dependence upon God had led them out of Egypt. It also led them across the Red Sea and the River Jordan. Over 40 years of wandering and dependence upon God had made them strong and bold in their faith.

Baalam concluded that the people were protected by the blessings of God. No magic spells, enchantments or special potions could be used against them because they were protected by the hand of God. God was performing signs and wonders as he guided their paths. The walls of cities were falling. The sun seemed to hang in the sky prolonging the days of their battles. Their enemies were falling by the thousands. They were a protected people that could not be stopped by any tricks the king hoped to have played upon them.

Balaam could not curse Israel. However, they brought curses upon themselves by their willingness to commingle their faith in God with that of others around them. While Balaam could not curse Israel, he taught the Moabites to bring the men of Israel into Baal worship with its immorality. For this God would punish Israel. What Balaam could not accomplish with a curse he did so through seductive means.

When Blessed Expect A Test

There are millions today who are frustrated victims of dirty tricks, plots, schemes and plans of some person or group trying to undo blessings that God has destined them to receive. Some have blamed themselves, wrongfully, for the ungodly acts of others. The righteous must consider what kind of behavior elicits God's blessing and then remember when God blesses, nothing stops that blessing from reaching its intended destination.

LIVE RIGHT AND GOD WILL FIGHT: Believers must remember that God blesses the righteous. Those who try to live for God can expect him to bless them immensely. David realized this when he wrote in Psalm 5:12 "For thou, LORD, wilt bless the righteous; with favour wilt thou compass him as with a shield."

God blesses the righteous. Those who live according to God's laws and incorporate them into their daily living can expect to draw the favor of God. He is always mindful of the acts of the righteous and keeps them in his protective arms. In Psalm 1:6 the word says, "For the LORD knoweth the way of the righteous: but the way of the ungodly shall perish."

Those who strive to live righteously will find that God will stand with them in the face of life's battles. Live right and God will fight the battles.

STRONG FAITH OPENS GATES: Believers who exercise strong faith are blessed by God. Many opportunities that God makes available to believers can only be achieved through strong faith. In the same sense that Israel would not have been freed from slavery or crossed the Red Sea without faith and confidence in God, modern believers cannot expect to have all of the blessings God has in store for them unless they exercise strong faith.

It is an abundance of faith that opens doors of opportunity that God has unlocked. The person who never steps forth and tries for fear of failure, never claims that which God has in store. If not for faith, Abraham would not have been a great and successful patriarch. Neither would Noah have been saved from the flood. Only those who believe what God says and then step out in confidence can expect to reap his blessings. The key is to remember: Strong faith opens the gate!

ONCE BLESSED GOD DOES THE REST: Believers should not be intimidated by turns of events that seem to indicate that they are being cursed instead of being blessed. God is in control of the events of our lives.

Joseph was blessed by God to eventually become a great man in Egypt. Even as a boy God showed Joseph in dreams the great blessing that was to come. Along the way, Joseph had many frustrating moments that appeared as if God had forsaken his promise and that instead of being blessed he was cursed. He was thrown in a pit by his own brothers. He was sold into slavery. He was jailed for a crime he did not commit. It appeared that instead of blessings, all he was receiving was curses. Everything that could go wrong was going wrong. Soon after, he was eventually promoted to oversee the agricultural reserves of the entire nation. He became an important man in Egypt, just as God had promised. However, Joseph discovered the simple truth that "once blessed God does the rest."

David was anointed King of Israel by the prophet Samuel while he was still a shepherd boy keeping his father's flocks. Since the moment he was promised that blessing he experienced one difficulty after another. The king threw his spear at him frequently. He was chased around the countryside like a criminal. He was hated by the King and those in authority. It appeared that instead of being blessed he was being cursed with the life of a fugitive. A few years later, he was named the undisputed King of both Judah and Israel, just as God had promised. David discovered that once blessed, God does the rest.

Both Joseph and David followed the formula for continued blessing from God. They continued to live right and to exercise strong faith, even in the face of difficult times.

This truth applies to all believers. If God has promised believers a blessing, it is a sure promise. No circumstance can stop it from becoming a reality. Once blessed, God will do the rest!

If Given A cross There will be a crown

Finally, brothers and sisters, every believer should keep in mind that blessings that come from God are not separate from hard work, difficulty and struggle. There will be obstacles along the way but the presence of obstacles does not mean that the promise will not be realized.

Every believer will have a cross to bear before he can expect to achieve the final victory. We can't stand in the winner's circle without having first run the race. We can't share the ecstasy of winning without also sharing the agony of the contest.

There will be times when the blessed must endure mess. These are times when the believers are falsely accused and called everything but a child of God. But I hear the word of God say in Matthew 5:11 " Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake." Don't mess with the blessed!

There will be times when the blessed seem to have less. These are the times when even the blessed seem to ride in smaller cars, live in smaller houses, and survive on smaller amounts. Those who are at war with the blessed should be careful, because we serve a God who has promised us more and his promise will not remain unfulfilled. John 10:10 says, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Don't mess with the blessed!

There will be times when the blessed must face a test. These are times when difficulties seem to mount and believers find their faith pushed to the very limit. No enemy of the faithful should celebrate during their hour of trial. They are knocked down but knocked out. Job 23:10 says, " But he knoweth the way that I take: when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold" Don't messed with the blessed!

There will be times when the blessed seem to regress. These are the times when believers feel like they make one step forward and the world pushes them two step backwards. Be careful when you try to push believers backward because we have a different walk. 2 Corinthians 5:7 says "For we walk by faith, not by sight"- Don't mess with the blessed!

Every believer should remember, if we are given a cross there will be a crown!

If we are given a sip of sadness, there will be a gallon of gladness!

If we are given a taste of failure, there will be a touch of success!

If we experience a few days of sickness, there will be years of good health!

If we share a day of defeat, there will be a year of victory!

Don't mess with the blessed because we have been promised that if we endure to the end, we will receive a crown!

Don't mess with the blessed because "God has smiled on me, he has made me glad!"

Don't mess with the blessed because God has given us a new song to sing that the angels cannot sing, "I've been washed in the blood!"

Don't mess with the blessed because the Lord said, in John 10:28 "And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand."

Don't mess with the blessed because Jesus came and died to claim them as his own!

Don't mess with the blessed because Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave to claim them for his own!

Don't mess with blessed because one of these days he is coming again to claim their righteous place in glory! When he is crowned king of kings and Lord of Lords!

Living Above "See" Level

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: 2 Cor 5:7 (For we walk by faith, not by sight:)

Introduction

How do you see life? What is your perspective? How we perceive each day depends heavily upon our perspective. There are many who make them selves miserable because they interpret every incident that occurs in the run of a day as a sign of the end. They subscribe to the "Chicken Little" school of thought in which every drop of rain that touches their heads is a sign that the sky is falling. Others whom the same raindrop touches see it as a sign that God is blessing and refreshing the earth. One man sees a fallen tree and sees only its death. Another looks at the same tree and sees an opportunity to build a fire. How we see life depends heavily upon the attitudes we bring to bear upon any situation. Life is what we make of it!

Often we are unable to see how God moves and operates in our lives. No matter how we try we simply can't understand his ways. Consider the two men who had walked many miles in the forest but could not kill anything to eat because their fine, shiny rifles were out of ammunition. There were natives in the forest who followed them for days, attracted to their shiny rifles. Beautiful hunting rifles like theirs were priceless in the backwoods. Anyone who possessed one would be extremely fortunate. The natives waited for an opportunity to get them. After several days, the men were out of food and hunger weakened them. As they lay asleep, the natives slipped from behind the trees, took their rifles and left a closed bag in their place. When they awakened, one of the men realized their rifles had been stolen and complained and cursed. The other man opened the bag and found two young fryers, that looked ready for the skillet. Though he missed his rifle he said, "THROUGH grace, God gave us those rifles but we ran out of bullets. Now he has given us these chickens and a chance to SAY grace, a few more times!" It is how we see things that makes the difference!

As Christians, we have learned to trust God continuously. We do not understand how he arranges things but we trust him to take care of our needs every day of our lives.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains what it means to live by faith rather than trusting in any other means.

Those who are not born of God walk by sight. In other words, they depend heavily upon the senses. They trust only that which they can see, feel, taste, smell and hear. Those outside of the faith are highly empirical about life. They demand to see it, smell it, taste it, touch and hear it. Each of these is a reaction to stimuli. None are pro active. The person who walks by sight is one who has to see the miracle performed before he acts. Thus he has to see the waters of the Red Sea roll up, taste Manna in the wilderness, touch the hem of the Lord's garment and hear the voice of God as a still small voice himself, before taking any action.

Paul, explaining the nature of walking by sight, noted that those who walk in this fashion usually find themselves worrying about success or failure in this life. They are overly occupied with concerns of this life without observing that if anything happens to this body, in this life that God has another building, not made with hands, prepared for those who believe.

Trusting only in what appeals to the senses, logic and reasoning is not an indicator of trust in God.

They that live by faith, walk by faith. But what is inferred in this? John Wesley says it means, " They regulate all their judgments concerning good and evil, not with reference to visible and temporal things, but to things invisible and eternal."

Those who walk by faith, are aware of physical influences and often use them. However, those who walk by faith, are not limited only to those experiences that appeal to sight, hearing, touch, smell and taste. They consider visible things to be of small value, because they pass away like a dream; but, on the contrary, they account invisible things to be of high value, because they will never pass away. Whatever is invisible is eternal; the things that are not seen, do not perish. So the Apostle says: "The things that are seen are temporal; but the things that are not seen are eternal."

What's Your See Level?

Today there are many people who live at one level of faith or another. Our level of faith controls the depth of our involvements, commitments and hopes. There are at least three comparisons germane to this subject:

DEAD SEA LEVEL: The surface of the Dead Sea, at 400 m (1312 ft) below sea level, is the lowest water surface on earth. It is fed by many small rivers but its main source of replenishment comes from the River Jordan which empties six million tons of water every day into the Dead Sea's waters. Despite the fact that it receives so much water, its level never rises more than 10 feet and it has no outlets to empty water anywhere else. All of the water that it receives from other sources is quickly evaporated or is made useless by its high salt content. Nothing lives in the dead sea.

There are no fishes. No algae. Nothing.

There are many today who live a dead sea existence. They are constantly striving to acquire but no matter how much they acquire they are not happy. Happiness seems to evade them. No matter how much they party, they have to have another party and another. No matter how much they drink they always need another. No matter how much others try to love them, the love is never returned...it simply evaporates. They receive but they never give back.

The dead sea experience is a faithless experience. It represents a life that is lived outside of God. It considers its own passions. It considers its own desires. It considers only what appeals to its own sense of sight, touch, smell, taste and hearing.

Too many can only see life on this level. They can only see that which can satisfy their own passions. The walk of faith however, requires us to die to our selfish demands and walk in the newness of our faith in Christ. Matthew 16:24-25 "Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it."

There are millions who have chosen to rise above their dead "see" experience by accepting Christ. They sing with new meaning, "I have decided to follow Jesus, no turning back. No turning back"

MEDITERRANEAN SEA LEVEL. The Mediterranean sea represented Israel's feelings of inadequacy and fear. The Jews were not a seafaring people. They could even describe them as a sea-fearing people. Their nation had most of its origins in desert wanderings. Their efforts at sea faring usually ended in failure. Their fear of the sea was frequently used to show God's power over the unknown. Solomon used the sea to bring in timbers for the temple, but he made deals with other countries to have it done. King Jehoshaphat's attempt to build a Jewish navy ended in disaster after all his ships wrecked in the harbor. The Mediterranean Sea was a constant reminder of Israel's fear of the unknown.

Today, there are millions that operate on the Mediterranean "see" level. This is what can easily be described as the level of "fragile faith." They have a semblance of faith but it is fragile. They are afraid of the unknown or to pursue anything that has not been tried before. They have witnessed many failures in the experiences of others and have chosen the "safe" route for their future. The safe route does not require any real faith on their part. It requires only that they stick with what they know. Walk the path that has been well beaten and stick with recipes that have been proven true over the generations.

However, the word of God says in Psalm 27:1 "The LORD is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

The believer is inspired to trust God to bring all unknown things into a clearer understanding. We do not know what the outcome of an endeavor may be, but we trust that God controls our destiny to a point that every end shall eventually be for our advantage.

We may not know what the future holds, but we know who holds the future and we know who holds our hand. Maybe that is what the song writer meant when he wrote: "Farther along we'll know all about it. Farther along we'll understand why. Cheer up my brother walk on the sunshine, we'll understand it all by and bye!"

RED SEA: The Red Sea represents what we have seen God do with respect to the barriers that stand between ourselves and our goals. We believe God can roll back the waters, but we're not doing anything until God makes the first move. God moves first then we move. God destroys Pharaoh's will then we leave Egypt. God opens the Red sea, then we cross over. Not until we see it first! Those whose faith operates on the Red Sea level have a "Cautious Faith." They believe in God to a degree, but they think it is prudent to use good sense and logic rather than completely and totally depending upon God. They only depend upon God totally as the last resort. They adhere to the motto, "After you've tried the rest, try the best." Even then they wait for God to move first before they act.

Yet, the word teaches us that waiting for God to move first does not exemplify faith. Faith, by its very nature, represents the "Peter" in us that will that prompt us to step out on the water without giving it a thought. Hebrews 11:1 " Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

Those who live on this level of faith should strive to move up higher. They have a form of faith, but not one that moves the unmovable, dreams the impossible, stops the unstoppable or achieves the impossible!

Finally, we must consider that while some live below "see level" and others operate at "see" level, trusting only their five senses, there are millions of believers that have learned to live above "see" level.

Living above "see" level is not the same as living at or below see level. The man who lives below "see" level doesn't trust anybody or anything. The man who lives at sea level trusts only what he can see, hear, taste, smell and feel. But the man who lives above "see' level" trusts completely in the Lord.

Living above see level represents the idea of walking by faith and not by sight. It is the level in which the believer moves first, in faith that God will act!

Ascending from sea level to above "see" level heights requires an adjustment in the attitude that makes one able live above see level. Those who are not accustomed to life above "see" level can find themselves suffering from altitude sickness.

If you have traveled in the mountainous areas of Colorado, the Alleghenies or the Great Smoky Mountains, you have probably noticed that as you climbed your ears stopped. At night you probably found it hard to sleep. Some had an increase in blood pressure and others found it hard to breathe. However, the people who lived in those areas seemed to have no problems at all. That's because they have learned how to live high above sea level.

When you see a saint smiling happy although living under intense pressure it's because he has learned to say, “Whatever I need, God will supply!”

When you see saints giving freely to the church and to others even though they don’t seem to have much themselves, it’s because they have learned that “My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.”

When you see a saint trying to do the impossible, without a doubt that it can be done, it’s because that saint remembers Matthew 19:26 “..with God all things are possible.”

Living above “see” level, means walking by faith and not by sight.

Living above “see” level means trusting in the Lord!

When the Three Hebrew Boys stood before the fiery furnace, all their critics could see were the red-hot flames, but they lived above see level and proclaimed, “Our God is able to deliver us!”

When Daniel faced the Lion’s Den, all that others saw was a Den full of Hungry lions, but Daniel lived above “see” level and knew the words of Psalm 27:5 “For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock.”

Walking by faith means living the words to the old song, “I will trust in the Lord, until I die!”

Through good times and bad times, trust in the Lord!

In daytime and night time, trust in the Lord!

When you are weak and when you are strong, trust in the Lord!

When you don’t understand what is going on, trust in the Lord!

When you can’t see your way and the road gets dark, trust in the Lord!

In the midst of sorrow and tears run down your eyes, trust in the Lord!

Call on Jesus!

Jesus, who looked at me and saw more than a wretched sinner, standing in need!

Jesus, who looked at Calvary and saw more than just an old rugged cross!

Call on Jesus, who looked at the grave and saw more than the sadness of a dark and gloomy tomb!

They buried him below see level!

The guards watched his grave, at see level!

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave! They couldn’t understand it because what he did was

Cross Bearers

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

September 20, 1998

SCRIPTURE:"And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross"; Matthew 27:32 "And they compel one Simon a Cyrenian, who passed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross." Mark 15:21

Introduction

What is your attitude about your life's responsibility? How we view the circumstances we face each day determines the quality of the experience. There are some who face each Monday with an, "I sure hate to go to work" attitude. There are others who say to themselves, "Thank goodness it's Monday, Get back Satan and watch God work!" Are you the person who gives more than the minimum or do you go beyond the call of duty? Do you malinger or do you look for ways to help your employer succeed? When you face a difficulty, do you constantly complain about it or do you view it as another opportunity for God to demonstrate his power? It is important for every believer to bear his or her own cross. However, it is equally important that each believer bear his or her cross with the right attitude. Our savior not only considers our deeds, but the spirit we bring to bear as we carry out our daily responsibilities.

Who cares how we bear the cross, as long as we bear it? Our Lord cares! The reward that comes with carrying the cross is not in the shouldering of the burden alone. The spirit in which even a good deed is performed plays a part in the way it is received by our Lord. Consider the lesson the waitress learned one day on the job. It so happened that Winnie the Waitress was called to work on her off day. She was really disturbed about having to give up the one day a week she had to work in the restaurant, even though she understood the reason she was called to work. As she waited on each table that night she'd look at her watch and let her frustrations be known to each customer by singing the words, "I feel like going home. I feel like going home!" After she waited on each customer, Bennie the bus boy would clean up the dishes. The bus boy worked with energy and enthusiasm and was a joy to watch. As he worked, he kept singing,"I've got joy, joy, joy, joy down in my heart! Then he would sing a lively version of, "I don't feel no ways tired." The two worked each table singing their theme songs. One by one Winnie noticed that as her customers left they walked to the bus boy and gave him the tip instead of leaving it on the table for her. Finally, Winnie stopped one of the customers and asked. Why did you give him my tip? Didn't I do the job? Didn't I take your order? Didn't I bring your food? The customer looked at Winnie and said. We watched you work and we watched him work, "He sang a better song!" There are many today who grudgingly carrying out their Christian responsibilities. They say the right words, do the right things and give the right amounts, but sing the wrong song!

As Christians, we should strive to bring positive attitude to our Christian service. Are you an Usher? Do more than hold your post. Are you a deacon? Do more than simply hold a title! Are you a Preacher? Go beyond simply throwing something together to go through the motions. Are you are pew member? Do more than just list your name on the roll. Are you a Choir member? Do more than grudgingly show up! If we approach our areas of service without a feeling of commitment, then we are all...doing the right things, but singing the wrong song!

Exposition

The text focuses on Simon who was forced intothe service of the Master, to help bear his cross.

The Roman soldiers were commissioned to take Jesus out to crucify him. On the way from Pilate's judgment seat, as they went down the Via Dolorosa, the "way of sorrows," through the streets of Jerusalem, Jesus stumbled and fell. The second time he stumbled, the Roman soldiers grabbed an African man who was in the crowd and compelled him to bear the cross of Jesus.

Simon was from Cyrene, a country in North Africa. He had come to Jerusalem with his two sons Rufus and Alexander to celebrate the Passover, having studied the Jewish religion and become impressed with their God. That was significant at the time, for the predominant religion of most in Africa was not Judaism. However, many had come to learn about these people with one God, called Jehovah, as the Roman Empire stretched across the known world. Simon came to learn more about the God of the Jews, before that day ended, he would know him better than he ever imagined. He didn't plan it, but circumstances would demand it. He would help Jesus carry his cross.

Circumstances changed what should have been a learning vacation into a life changing experience for Simon. He was compelled, yet the result of the experience changed his life forever. There is evidence in the Scripture that this event had a tremendous effect on Simon's life. In the book of Acts he was there on the Day of Pentecost and very likely did become a Christian as a result of this sudden interruption of his plans. Mark makes clear to us that Simon was the father of Alexander and Rufus, who are well-known to the Gentile believers to whom Mark is writing. In Romans, Chapter 16, he mentioned Rufus with whom he was very closely associated and whose mother had been very kind to Paul. It is evidently the same Rufus.

Mark simply brings out Simon's attitude of unwilling involvement in the crucifixion of Jesus. However, his involvement changed his life forever.

What Does Bearing The Cross Mean?

Today there are many who are bearing a cross in life, but they are not doing so by choice. If any of us had a choice, most would gladly stand on the sidelines and leave the business of cross bearing to someone else. Like Simon, most of us have our own personal agendas each day. However, life often gives us circumstances that compel us to carry the cross. Those are the interruptions that seem to grab us and place a load on our shoulders that we would rather avoid. The burden of a huge responsibility crashes down upon us with such weight that we question our own ability to stand. We could run, but where would we hide? We don't have much choice.

When a member of the family is stricken with an illness, we are compelled to carry our cross.

When financial troubles encroach, we are compelled to carry our cross.

When we are unfairly attacked, persecuted and assaulted, we are compelled to carry our cross.

When compelled to carry one or more of life's crosses, believers should approach our crosses with all three of the following attitudes:

TORCH BEARER: In Biblical times the torch bearer went before the King to light the path before him. Those who carried the torches, went forth into the dark; their lights brightened the path for others who followed. We should strive to approach our burden with a torch bearer's attitude. That which you do often makes life better for someone else. Your sacrifice, pain and trouble often lights the dark path for those who are walking close behind. Jesus reminded every believer to remember that each of us is a light that is set upon a hill that cannot be hid. Others see our light, walk toward it and gain warmth and strength from our example. That's why every believer loves to sing the words of the song, "This little light of mine, I'm going to let it shine. Let it shine! Let it shine! Let it shine!"

STANDARD BEARER: The standard bearer was important in every battle. The standard bearer marched close to the front and bore the coat of arms, insignia or flag of the king. Those who saw it immediately knew the identity of the army and of the king.

As we carry our crosses, each should remember that we are standard bearers for our Lord. We represent the Christian Army of soldiers whose training, discipline and faith has prepared uf for life's battles. Our Lord is our general and we are his foot soldiers. Each day we go into the battle for truth carrying his banner. Our attitude, disposition, commitment and drive instantly identify our army.

No wonder the song writer declared, "We are soldiers, in the army. We've got to fight, although we've got to cry! We've got to hold up the blood-stained banner, we've got to hold it up until we die!"

ARMOR BEARER: The armor bearer often wore or carried the king's armor for him until he prepared to enter the battle. He had to be strong and brave because the king seldom fought without putting on his armored battle uniform. Every believer is reminded that we should put on the whole armor of God. That's why Ephesians 6:13-17 says, "Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God:"

We must approach our cross fully armored and ready for whatever may come. We know the nature of the enemy and therefore we do not take him half hearted.

We cannot be caught with our guard down when we are fighting a serious illness.

We cannot be caught without our armor when we are struggling to help our children overcome.

We cannot be caught without our armor when we are trying to overcome a temptation.

We must approach the struggle with a spirit of victory, knowing that no power on earth can defeat us if God's will and our will are one and the same!

Cross Bearers Reward

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider the reward of bearing the cross.

The scriptures suggest to us that while Simon was compelled to carry the cross. The experience changed his life for the better. Not only was his life changed, but that of his two sons was also changed. He was a better man. A stronger man and no doubt a more spiritually secure man after he bore the cross.

Those who successfully shoulder the burdens that life has placed upon them in faith, will receive a great reward from our Lord. Repeatedly the Word indicates that cross bearers will receive a reward.

Paul told the Corinthians that the burden of preaching and witnessing was his cross. In 1 Corinthians 9:17 he said, "For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward:"

Revelation 3:21 says, " To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne."

Revelation 21:7 says, "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

Those who bear the cross in faith undergo a life changing experience. They will never be the same.

Those who bear the cross, talk a different talk and walk a different walk!

Those who bear the cross, live a different life and think different thoughts!

Those who bear the cross have different ways of handling responsibility. They have a different feelings for the trials and troubles of others!

Those who bear the cross in faith say, Lord I'm willing and ready to:

GO wherever you send me; GIVE whatever you require of me!

DO whatever you want me to do; BE whatever you want me to be!

HELP whomever you want me to help; STAY wherever you put me!

Simon came to Jerusalem looking for the Lord, but he didn't find the Lord until an unforseen circumstance compelled him to pick up his cross!

Somebody here today didn't find the Lord until they were compelled to carry a cross! Ever since that day they've been singing a brand-new song, "At the cross, at the cross, where I first saw the light and the burdens of my heart rolled away, it was there by faith, I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!"

When Jesus carried the cross to Calvary, he changed things in the lives of every cross bearer that would follow him.

Because Jesus carried the cross, every:

TROUBLED cross bearer can now have peace!

LONELY cross bearer can now have comfort!

SAD cross bearer can now have everlasting joy!

HOPELESS cross bearer can now have hope!

DEMON POSSESSED cross bearer can now be delivered!

AFFLICTED cross bearer can now be delivered!

FINANCIALLY EMBARRASSED cross bearer can now enjoy the riches of heaven!

As Jesus stumbled under the weight of the cross I hear the song writer ask, "Must Jesus bear the cross alone and all the world go free? -No there's a cross for everyone and there's a cross for me!"

He bore the cross of my iniquity!

He was crucified on the cross for my sin!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave in the shadow of the cross, with all power in his hands!

Under New Management

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 4, 1998

SCRIPTURE: " 2 Cor 5:17 Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.

Introduction

Have you ever noticed the sign posted on a familiar business.."Under New Management?" Perhaps it was your favorite restaurant or service station or some other merchant. When we see that sign, it means something is different. Sometimes we can notice the difference immediately. Our favorite caf, has a new look. Our favorite grocer has rearranged the placement of merchandise. Places that were once drab, now boast flowers. A fresh coat of paint has changed the decor. New uniforms for the waitresses. New equipment. It all means that something is different!

New managers have a new way of seeing things. They offer a fresh approach and go out of their way to impress their customers. That's why many people are attracted to visit an establishment that has a sign, "Under New Management." They want to see what's different! They expect to see a fresh approach!

While "Under New Management" does mean something is different, it does not always mean that what's different is guaranteed to be better. Simply putting out the sign may attract new customers but it won't take long for the customers to figure out if the service matches the sign. Consider the Northern couple that decided to come South and open up a steak house. They were impressed with the Southern way of doing things and they bought a fine restaurant called, "The Big Hat." Outside, they put up a sign, "Under New Management." They advertised in the newspapers and on television until a giant crowd appeared on their opening night. Texans were there from everywhere. They came in and ordered huge steaks and plenty of drinks. However, it wasn't long before they noticed that the service was slow and the steaks were tough to chew. One by one the customers left, vowing never to return. On the way out the door, one looked at the other and summed up the new restaurant, Texas style by saying,"Big Hat-No Cattle!" The Northerners couldn't live up to promise of their sign.

There are many today who profess Christianity. They promote that fact everywhere they go. But under close scrutiny, too many are turning out to be a case of "Big Hat-No Cattle!" The old timers among us phrased it this way, "All smoke, no fire!" The bible put it another way "All faith, no works!"

Those who intend to live for Christ must become better managers of their lives. Our time, energy, talent and resources are best used when we apply them toward kingdom building work. Getting the most out of our time, talent and resources is what management is all about with respect to building the kingdom of God.

As Christians, we have learned that we get more out of the Christian experience when we allow God to manage our lives. He is an expert at taking over lives and helping us put out new signs that show while we may have the same old name, we are under new management. Old things are passed away, and all things are become new!

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains the regenerating effect of being "in Christ."

A person who is "in Christ" goes beyond simply acknowledging Christ in a public confession of faith. Being "in Christ" goes even further than simply being associated with the visible church. "If any man be in Christ," as George Whitefield puts it, means to "partake of the benefits of his sufferings. To be in him refers not only to an outward profession, but by an inward change and purity of heart, and cohabitation of his Holy Spirit."

A person who is truly "in Christ" places his or her entire life in the hands of God, to manage, control, direct and order. It is an internal management shift that reflects itself in outward changes that often are visible to the casual observer. The idea of being a "new creature" does not mean that the person is physically altered in any way. It does suggest that some other power is in control of the thinking and actions of the converted soul. It becomes evident in their actions.

Persons who turn over the management of their lives to God immediately change course. The qualities and temperament of the mind change so much that we must entirely forget what manner of persons we once were. For all practical purposes, a person who is "born again" literally places his or her soul in the hands of God.

Liability or Asset

Today there are literally millions of people who are spiritually bankrupt. They are the victims of mismanaged spiritual lives. Generally, we are considered bankrupt when our liabilities continue to exceed our assets.

Our liabilities are numerous. They include our fears, failures, frustrations. The biggest liabilities we have are our sins. They weigh heavy in the scale. Every person has a liability column with respect to their personal lives. Those who thrive spiritually don't do so because they have no liabilities, but because they insure that their assets are greater than their liabilities.

The Saint's assets include: A strong prayer life, Bible reading and bible study, public worship and praise, faith building activity, and fellowship with other saints. Saints who pray often, read their bibles and regularly participate in public worship and praise activities usually are stronger, bolder in the faith. They actually put their faith to work on a daily basis and strive to demonstrate a spirit of brotherly love and compassion that is beyond measure.

Spiritual Manager

Just as the growth and prosperity of a business is determined by the quality of its management, the quality of our spiritual lives is impacted in the same way.

MANAGERS PROMOTE GROWTH: In a business, the manager promotes company growth. Some managers are aggressive they advertise and promote the company to a point that it increases sales. Others are not aggressive, but take a slow steady path that is reliable and dependable. The approach may be different but the goal is the same, increase assets. A good spiritual manager promotes growth. Those activities that will increase spiritual maturity become the focus of their attention. Some are more aggressive than others: they sing louder, pray longer or shout harder. Others, while not as aggressive, consistently study, worship and fellowship in a way that promotes spiritual growth.

Those who mismanage are those who plunge themselves into activities that do not build treasures in heaven. Jesus said in Matthew 6:20, "But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

MANAGERS INSURE QUALITY OF SERVICE: The manager of a business determines the quality of its service. A company's management decides that it will stand behind its workmanship, guarantee that food is tasty or that a teller calls you by name at the local bank. Management teams that support poor service delivery, usually lose customers. In a similar sense, the quality of our spiritual management generally reflects itself in our service to our church and fellow man. If we sing in the choir, do we give our best? If we preach, do we take time to prepare? If we are deacons, do we actually serve people or sit on a board? If we are committee members, do we do our part? If we are members of the congregation, are our names simply "on the roll" or do we serve? Jesus set the attitude for each believer when he described his own service in John 9:4, "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work."

Those who mismanage are those who allow the quality of their service to depreciate. They have become content with simply doing just enough to get by!

GOOD MANAGERS CAN MAKE TOUGH DECISIONS: The best managers are those who are able to make tough decisions that produce results. A company with a large amount of expense will find a way to reduce the expenses or increase its income. Good managers will not simply allow the expenses to continue to outweigh income. That often requires tough decisions that have one goal in mind, increasing the "bottom line." In a spiritual sense many people have a growing list of liabilities. The good manager is one that can take an inventory and realize that something must be done before it's too late. Sometimes it's a bad personal relationship that is the liability. It may be an addiction. It could be a negative attitude. Whatever is causing the loss, a good manager is able to do what is necessary to eliminate loss. A good manager acts decisively to counter bad habits and trends before they do irreparable damage.

Those who mismanage allow liabilities to continue to grow until it is too late to make repairs. However, the good manager can make the Joshua choice: Joshua 24:15 "...choose you this day whom ye will serve;...but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD."

GOOD MANAGERS GIVE AN ACCOUNT: Managers in large companies generally answer to persons who are their superiors. It means that while they carry the keys, handle the money, hire and fire, and run the company from day to day, they don't own the company! They must give an account for whether theymanged the company according to the rules and policies of its owners. Spiritually, every believer remembers that we have been given a life to manage. We run the day to day operations, we make the decisions, we handle the company money and we are allowed to accept or reject many of life's offers. At the same time, however, we remember that we must give an account for our stewardship. In Matthew 12:36, Jesus said, "But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." Nothing that we do or say is final! It is coming up again!

Those who mismanage forget that they must account to their superiors. They assume the attitude that management means ownership and they are often fired!

Under New Management

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider the undeniable fact that we are actually unable to manage ourselves! We have tried to take our lives under control but somehow we have always ended up in a spiritual deficit, on the edge of a spiritual crises or bordering a spiritual bankruptcy! We have tried, but our best efforts have failed.

Maybe this is what Paul had in mind in Romans 7:14-17 when he talked about his efforts to do right, but he always ended up doing just the opposite.

We want to manage our spiritual lives better but are frustrated because we can't seem to make it work.

How is that we seem to do so well at managing our corporate or carnal affairs, but fail so miserably in our spiritual lives? How is it that we seem to know how to get the light bill paid, get the rent in on time, keep the phone connected, provide for life and health insurance, and keep records of important transactions, but yet have so many problems managing our spiritual lives?

When a corporation realizes that it has a problem beyond the ability of its manager to handle, it starts looking for a new manager!

I submit to you that there is a resume in your mailbox, of someone who wants to apply to be your new manager!

Who is this applicant?

Name: El-Shaddai, "The Almighty God.";Jehovah-Jireh "The Lord will Provide"; Alpha and Omega, "The beginning and then end."

Address: I live everywhere, the earth is my footstool and the heavens surround my shoulders. If you take the wings of the morning and fly in the sky or move to the bottomless deep, I am there! If you ascend into heaven or even make your bed in hell, I am there!

Phone: Simply dial area code 111-PRAY. One for the father! One for the Son! One for the Holy Ghost. "Jesus is on the mainline, tell him what you want!"

Prior Employment: I created the universe! I put the galaxies in place! I formed man from the dust of the earth! I made the Pine tree point its finger to the sky! I hollowed the valleys out and bulged the mountains up! Right now I've got the whole world in my hands! The song writer said, "He's got the whole world, in his hands! He's got the whole wide world in his hands!"

Character References: 1 John 4:16 says, "God is love."; 1 John 1:5 says "God is light and in him there is no darkness"; John 14:6 says, "I am the way the truth and the life, no man cometh to the father, but by me!" If that's not enough, James 1:5 says I am the source of great wisdom. John 8:32 describes me as the truth that shall make you free!. Philippians 4:19 describes me as a provider for it says, "My God shall supply all your need..!"

Availability: I am willing to step in your life and begin to put things in order. I want to build up your assets and cut down your liabilities. I want to bring spiritual balance that you might have life and have it more abundantly!

Salary Requirement: You don't have to worry about what my services will cost because I'm holding in my hand a check to pay for all my services. It is a check drawn on the bank of heaven, written in the blood of Calvary, and signed with the hand of Jesus!

No wonder the songwriter declared, "Jesus paid it all. All to him I owe. Sin had left his crimson stain but he washed it white as snow!"

He paid it all out on Calvary!

He paid it all on an old rugged cross!

He paid it all in a borrowed tomb!

But early Sunday morning, got up with all power in his hands!

Dealing With The Issue

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 11, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "And, behold, a woman, which was diseased with an issue of blood twelve years, came behind him, and touched the hem of his garment: For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole. Matthew 9:20-21; "With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible." Matthew 19:26

Introduction

How do you approach the problems that you face every day? Are you a procrastinator? Do you simply put them off until a more convenient time? Do you delude yourself into thinking that your problems do not exist or that they will go away? Or do you tackle them head on and solve them to the best of your ability? For some people problem solving is basic and elementary. There are others whose lives are considerably frustrated by an inability to solve the problems that confront them daily. The matters that concern each of us differ. While some are concerned about family matters, others are faced with problems on the job. Some have legal problems. Others have financial problems. Many youth have problems at school concerning teachers and other students. The question is not whether the faithful will have problems, but how the faithful will respond to problems. There is a best-selling book on the market that deals with the subject of "How to deal with the issues of life." The book is the Holy Bible. It gives us the blue print to dealing with life's issues and how to approach them as they occur.

As a general rule professionals suggest that problem solving requires at least five steps: 1) Make a clear statement of the present problem and the desired result 2) Gain as much information as feasible 3) Consider potential solutions 4) Weigh the consequences 5) Make a decision. These steps, tend to lead to a logical resolution of any problem that may confront an individual or a group. Believers add one step that professionals often overlook. Just before making any decision, believers pray and then make decisions.

When dealing with the issues of life the world often overlooks the God factor. However, experience has shown that no problem solving plan can be complete unless one considers the "God" factor. When doctors in a sickroom have tried every technique known to man, they are derelict in their duty if they don't also remind their patients of the "God" factor. Marriages facing considerable strain and difficulty could be dismissed as unsalvageable if it were not for the "God factor." Lives discarded as too broken to be repaired would be completely lost if it were not for the "God factor." Believers never exclude God from their problem solving method. He is the answer to every question and the solution to every problem.

As Christians, we strive to deal with whatever issue life gives us. We tackle that which is impossible and improbable because we are aware that we serve a God that can make the improbable probable. We serve a God who specializes in doing the impossible. How do we deal with the issue? We take it to God!

Exposition

This text focuses on an incident in the life of Christ in which a sick woman was healed by exercising her faith.

The incident tells of a time in which Jesus was surrounded by a crowd of people as he passed, only to be touched by a single woman who received a healing blessing as a result.

According to added insights into this incident provided in Luke 8:43-47, the woman had an "issue of blood." That's another way of saying she had a hemorrhage of some kind. Her condition had existed for 12 years despite the fact that she had consulted all of the best physicians of time. No one was able to cure her disease.

Receiving a healing became quite an issue with her. The hemorrhaging complicated her life considerably and she sought a resolution. Adding to the complication was the fact that people who shared her illness were considered unclean under the Mosaic law. Not only was she considered unclean because of her "issue" anyone she touched was considered unclean as well. The unclean were forbidden from public socialization and forbidden from participation in any part of Israel's public worship life.

The woman had heard that a healer from God was in their midst. She made up her mind to deal with the issue of sickness by taking it to the Son of God. Defying all of the laws, she made her way through the crowd, no doubt touching many people as she forged through. She felt she probably wouldn't be able to get a personal interview with him, but concluded in her mind that if she could simply touch the hem of his garment that she would receive the same blessing. After all , God's healing power certainly would not be limited by such a small thing as a personal interview.

The woman's faith was not a perfect faith, based upon a great knowledge of Jesus, for she knew no more about him than what she heard. What had she heard? Perhaps it was accounts for his miraculous healings and cures! Perhaps it was testimonies of others who had seen him perform mighty acts. It became obvious from what she heard that Jesus was some type of man of God who was being used to do mighty acts. She heard about Jesus, she knew about God. Her faith was in the power of God, whom she knew much about. She knew that God had the power regardless of the man. Her faith in God was strong.

When the woman touched Jesus' garment, he immediately felt something. With hundreds of people around him, obviously pushing and shoving out of curiosity, he was able to "feel" the prayerful touch of a woman who had been sick for many years. He felt power going out of him. He sensed that someone had just been healed.

When it became known that someone had been healed by the master the woman told her story to the amazement of the crowd. Jesus responded to her by saying that her faith had made her whole.

Her attempts to deal with the issue were futile. She tried every way she knew to solve her problem but had no success. When she heard that Jesus was close by, she took her issue to him. She found healing when she stopped dealing with the issue herself and gave it to Jesus!

Dealing With Issues

Most of us deal with the issues of life from one of two mind sets: faith thinking or logical thinking. Regardless of problems or situations our response usually falls in one of these two categories. Our mind set determines the way in which we will deal with any issue that we face whether it is health, finances, family, business or personal relationships.

LOGICAL THINKING: Those who think logically use tried and tested processes to achieve an end or solve a problem. They isolate the problem to determine its exact causes then move quickly to eliminate its cause. Repairmen use logical thinking. After learning that there is a problem, they isolate it by narrowing down all of the possible sources of the problem until they get to the right one. Then they fix the problem and send us the bill! There is nothing wrong with logical thinking., scientists, doctors, and a plethora of professionals in thousands of discipline use logical thinking successfully every day.

Logical thinking, by its nature, excludes the possibility of anything that is not empirical. The auto mechanic does not consider any possible cause for a mechanical failure other than something physically connected to the failure. He won't accept that your car won't start because the "devil got into it!" He excludes that explanation as a possible source of the problem. Moreover, he also excludes the possibility that anything other than a mechanical solution will solve the problem. He will not accept that a believer can lay hands on the car, pray the prayer of faith and it will work perfectly again.

While everyone is encouraged to be logical, purely logical thinking has a tendency to exclude all other possibilities. As we mature, we learn to think logically. A child has not fully learned to think logically. He accepts the possibility of a man in a red suit who flies around the world in one night and slides down chimneys that do not exist. He accepts the possibility of a "Daffy Duck", " Tweedy Bird", and a "Mickey Mouse." In a child's mind, everything is possible! ...Until he learns to become logical!

In dealing with the issues of life everyone is encouraged to be as logical as they can. However, believers are reminded that logic solutions have limitations. It is limited because it proposes solutions and projects outcomes based upon available data. For example, the gloomed faced doctor may meet with a family and say, "All the tests are in. We have the E.K.G., the X-rays and blood tests. Every thing has been tried. Your loved one has about three days!" His prognosis is based on the available data. He is limited to what he can expect because logical thinking leaves him no other alternative.

FAITH THINKING: Faith thinkers begin with logical thinking and use all of its processes. However, the faith thinker does not close the door to possibility! Faith thinkers are those who accept the logical thinking process but consider possibilities that may not be supported by the data. The faith thinker hears the doctors report and accepts the data. However, the faith thinker is not limited to the doctor's prognosis! The faith thinker keeps open the possibility that there is a power greater than the situation that can alter the outcome!

That is the essence of faith. Hebrews 11:1 says, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." What that means is that faith is the sum total of all the things you believe are possible even though they are not supported by available facts and data!

In dealing with the issues that life presents to us, we must become faith thinkers. Faith thinkers are logical, but they are not limited in their expectations!

The faith thinker is not a fanatic. Neither are faith thinkers mystics or conjurers!

Faith thinkers are those who are not intimidated by the improbable or who act cowardly in the face of the impossible!

Faith thinkers are logical thinkers who have the added dimension of trusting God!

Touching the Hem

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that those who are dealing with tough issues in their lives, should take them to Jesus.

The woman with the issue of blood dealt with a silent issue in her life for many years. However she could not successfully resolve the issue until she took it took it to Jesus.

There are many people today who are dealing with issues in their lives, but they are frustrated when they do not succeed.

The disciples came to Jesus and said we have a finance problem. We can't pay our taxes. Jesus told them what to do. He told them how they should go fishing and would find enough money in the mouth of the fish to meet their finance obligations. Somebody here today is dealing with the issue of personal finances. If you take it to Jesus, he will show you the way!

A lame man was brought to Jesus who had not walked in many years. His friends brought him to Jesus and lowered him through a roof and found healing that very day. Somebody here is dealing with the issue of personal sickness. If you take it to Jesus, he will give you an answer!

A crazy man ran naked through the tombs and his life was possessed by demonic spirits. No one could deal with the issue so they let him run wild. One day he ran upon Jesus and the evil spirits left him. Somebody here today is dealing with issue of being possessed by bad habits and evil tendencies. You've been trying to deal with it by yourself but you were unsuccessful. Give it to Jesus! He will turn things around!

Are you dealing with an issue in your life? Push your way through crowd and give it to Jesus!

Don't say in your mind, "I am insignificant!" or "He doesn't know who I am!"

Don't say in your mind, "I haven't been as faithful as I should have been!"

Don't say in your mind, "I can't get to him because there are others closer to him!"

Push you way through the crowd and say, "If I can but touch the hem of his garment, I will be made whole"

If you are dealing with the issue of:

FAILURE, he can turn failure into success;

SADNESS, he can turn sadness into gladness;

SICKNESS, he can turn it into good health!

BURDENS, he can take your burdens and make them light!

DEFEAT, he can take your defeat and turn it into victory!

LOSSES, he can take your losses and turn them into gains!

HEARTACHES, I know a God who specializes in mending broken hearts!

TROUBLE MARRIAGE, I know a God who can turn your old lady into the first lady, who can turn your old man into the King of the Castle!

LOST GENERATION, I know a God who can take Gangsta Rap and turn it into a Saint's testimony!

Push your way through the crowd; reach out and touch the hem of his garment and his blood shall make you whole!

If you want to deal with the issue, push back your fear of embarrassment or insignificance and give it to Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who was buried in borrowed a tomb!

Jesus, who arose early Sunday morning!

If you want to deal with the issue, give it to Jesus and everything will be all right!

We're Doing A Great Work And We Can't Come Down

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 18, 1998

SCRIPTURE: And I sent messengers unto them, saying, I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: why should the work cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you? Nehemiah 6:3; So the wall was finished in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul, in fifty and two days. Nehemiah 6:15

Introduction

Have you ever started a great work but stopped before you finished? There are many who begin even the smallest of projects or tasks but never finish. Their lives are littered with the tombstones of unfinished endeavors. A house remodeling sits idly. A spring cleaning once started, waits in the chill of autumn for completion. A business endeavor's plan lies idly on a desk top. A campaign to champion a worthy cause, once vigorously discussed, is tucked away amongst our personal drawers filled with good intentions.

The reasons a great work is often unfinished are numerous. Sometimes there are so many interruptions that completion is delayed. Sometimes we lose focus of our original motivation and inspiration. Sometimes passions such as anger, fear, hatred and love play a part as we put our work on hold to pursue a course dictated by one or the other. Many people are familiar with the experience of starting but never completing a great work. It is a frustrating experience.

Each person has a life work, the greatness of which is only inherent in its completion. Some parents have made the nurture and education of their children their life's work. There are many that have made helping the elderly their life's work. There are some who are committed to projects and causes that help children. The environment consumes the energy of some, while others have plunged themselves into causes that would save animals. What is your life work? Helping the homeless? Defending the poor? Beautification? Saving the race?

Life has much more meaning when it is defined through the perspective of one's life work. When we are involved in that which we perceive to be our life work a certain level of energy is generated that is not demonstrated with other projects or tasks. Our associations, friendships and memberships are all determined by our understanding of our life's work.

Even our church membership, to a large extent, reflects what we perceive our life's work is all about. For example, those who see their life's work defined in terms of service to others, lifting fallen humanity and championing the causes of the oppressed are most comfortable in a church congregation that generally responds to that area of service. On the other hand, a person who perceives that his life work is to achieve personal wealth, fame and glory, might be uncomfortable in a setting where service without publicity and notoriety is the most salient of its attributes.

Like people, churches undertake great works. Like people, churches must be careful not to lose sight of their original motivation and to keep their goals in sight.

As Christians, we strive every day to work the work of him who sent us while it is day. When we are prompted to slow our work and to abandon it all together, every believer must look at the importance of their personal mission and their promise to God and say, "I'm doing a great work, and I can't come down!"

Exposition

This text focuses on the people of Israel whose commitment to rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem resulted in it being done far ahead of schedule.

Almost 100 years after the Jews had returned from Babylonian exile to Jerusalem, the walls around the city and the gates had remained in ruins. The people were disillusioned, in debt and intimidated by the awesome commitment that rebuilding the walls would require. They had excused their failure to rebuild the walls on fierce opposition from surrounding nations and their poverty.

Nehemiah refused to accept their excuses and despite the danger inspected the walls at night (2:15). He then called an assembly and convinced the people of the need for a building program. He was an excellent leader who demonstrated engineering knowledge and brilliant organizing ability (ch. 3). He encouraged them while reminding them that they would have to watch, fight and pray. The work began.

Trouble arose from without and from within. Sanballat, in league with other leaders of the area, opposed Nehemiah's rebuilding of Jerusalem. If the Holy City regained prominence, it would erode the powers of the surrounding cities. It was a political contest designed to keep Jerusalem from becoming the economic power and influence of its golden years.

Sanballat and his friends tried to stop the work, but without success (ch. 4). The trouble from within was economic. Building the walls caused a labor shortage; farms were mortgaged. Many could not work on the walls or support the building program because they were plunged into their personal financial woes. Even this did not dissuade Nehemiah. He sat out to improve the financial condition of the people so they could turn their interest toward rebuilding the wall. Some received direct financial aide that helped them become strong enough to help.(ch. 5).

The people had a mind to work and the massive task of rebuilding the walls was continued. It was massive work requiring thousands of workers, spread out over miles of landscape. Even as the people worked, enemies both within and without kept a steady stream of delaying tactics flowing.

As in the past, Sanballat had done all he could to stop their work through ridicule and threats. He then sent word to Nehemiah, saying: Come, let us meet together in one of the villages in the plain of Ono (Nehemiah 6:2), about 28 miles from Jerusalem. But Nehemiah sent messengers to them, saying, I am doing a great work, and cannot come down. Why should the work cease, while I leave it, and come down to you? (6:3).

After Sanballat had made five attempts to meet with Nehemiah, he finally resorted to accusing him of rebelling against the king of Persia (6:5-7). When this failed to stop Nehemiah, Sanballat hired a prophet to prophesy Nehemiah's death. Nehemiah did not yield to their threats for he had faith that the God of Heaven . . . will prosper us. . . . So the wall was finished . . . in fifty-two days, far sooner than even they themselves had imagined.

Theirs was a great work and continued despite opposition, in the name of the Lord.

Attitudes About Works

Today, many people have varying attitudes about their life work. The attitudes range from "It's no big deal" to "It's extremely important."

SOME THINK THEIR WORK IS INSIGNIFICANT: There are some who feel their contributions are small and insignificant. They consider their work unspectacular. They want to do big things and they judge "big things" by the volume of notoriety attracted. There is no small work in a united effort. Rebuilding the walls required hundreds of tasks to be executed with precision. Some actually stood on the wall and laid the brick. Others gathered the straw and tromped in the mud to make the brick. Hundreds of others brought water to the workers. Some never came close to the wall itself, but baked the cakes of bread that fed the workers. Each person carried out tasks with precision. It succeeded because each person considered their contribution important.

Jesus reminded his disciples about the reward of the faithful servant in Matthew 25:21, "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord."

As Church workers pause at anniversaries and look at the wall that has been completed, each person should know that the part they played in helping the church reach its milestone is important. The janitor that cleans the floors, the widow that gives a folded dollar, the lay member that prepares food in the kitchen or the person that is seen out front on a program; each does a great work. The work is not measured by the volume of its notoriety, but by the appreciation of the one person that matters...God!

SMALL WORK IS GREAT IN THE RIGHT HANDS: There are some people who fail to do anything because they consider themselves too small. They feel that anything they do would be a waste because they don't have the size or resources of others. They see others who participate have cars, education, jobs and other resources. From their perspective what they have to offer is too small to measure. Their potential is minimized because they have a "grasshopper complex" they see the task as being so huge that they are grasshoppers in comparison.

Yet, the question that God asked Moses in Exodus 4:2 when he spoke of his lack of resources, is still important, "What is that in thine hand?" Moses only had a rod but God said use what you have! What you have may seem small, but in the right hands it is big enough. Can you imagine how ridiculous that little boy with the two fishes and five loaves of bread must have appeared to the apostles? They were trying to feed 5,000 and he offered his family's lunch. How could such a small contribution matter against such a huge problem? Does the widow's two mites matter? Even the smallest of contributions of time, talent and resources goes further when we contribute it to an idea, movement, organization or ministry that has been blessed by God. He has a way of blessing it to expand creatively, far beyond what we could imagine.

Your small work, in God's hands, can make a world of difference!

Maybe that's why the song writer said, "The work I've done. It seems so small. Sometimes it seems like nothing, nothing at all. But when I stand before my God, I want to hear him say well done. May the work I've done, speak for me!"

I Can't Come Down

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that Nehemiah was so convinced that he was doing a great work that he turned down every request to slow his pace by saying, "I'm doing a great work and I can't come down!"

His mind stayed focused on the objective. That objective was to get the wall completed before the enemies of the people attacked them. He marshaled the people together, and together they plunged themselves into a great work and none of them would come down!

The church should not be dissuaded from its mission. It is doing a great work and must not come down!

The church that shows sympathy to the homeless and the helpless, should say, "I'm doing a great work and I can't come down!"

The church that teaches and reaches the masses with the word of God should say, "I'm doing a great work and I can't come down!"

The church that feels the pain of the poor and wounded and responds with love should say, "I'm doing a great work and I can't come down!"

The church that embraces children and the elderly through programs that promote and protect them should say, "I doing a great work and I can't come down!"

All of the Patriarchs before us have done great works, like them we should not come down!

Noah's Great work was to build the ark. Though critics assailed him, he was doing a great work and would not come down!

Moses' Great work was to lead the children of Israel to freedom. Though many doubted him and wanted to return to Egypt, he was doing a great work and would not come down!

David's Great work was to secure the kingdom of Israel. He was tempted on every hand to hang up his sword and shield, but he was doing a great work and would not come down!

Solomon's Great work was to build the temple. Though discouraged at complexity of the task and the complaints of the people, he was doing a great work and would not come down!

But there was another great work that we need to tell you about.

It was a great work that did not seem like a great work at all, but more of a disgrace.

Come and go with me out to Calvary and see a great work in progress!

Hanging out on the cross, a great work was being criticized and despised!

I hear the critics at the cross saying your great work seems to be:

A battle lost; A horrible defeat; A pathetic end to a glorious beginning

It didn't seem like much, sitting out ona hill, but the great work of redemption was underway!

The cross was a great work because it was the greatest of all victories

The cross was a great work because it was the highest of all accomplishments!

The cross was a great work because it was the finest of all hours!

The cross was a great work because it was the noblest of all events!

I heard somebody say to Jesus, "If you are who you say you are, why don't you come down?"

Jesus didn't say a word, but he must have remembered Nehemiah's words, "I'm doing a great work and I can't come down!"

He didn't come down, but Early Sunday morning, he got up!

With all power in his hands!

Jesus Great work was to save my soul by going to Calvary!

It's Time to take care of business

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 25, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Luke 2:49

Introduction

When did you finally wake up and decide it was time for you to get serious about life? Most of us have memories of a period in our lives when we were literally "Lost in Space." We moved from one experience to the next with little knowledge of where we were going or what we were doing. It's a strange experience that overwhelms some as they become plunged in the flow of the crowd, moving with the flow, while not knowing from one day to the next where the flow is leading. Our wanderings have varied our perceptions of life and for the most part, our reception of God and humanity. One day, however we woke up to the reality that we must assume our rightful role in the grand scheme of things, even though the current of life continues to flow in a different direction. That is the point that where we say in our own mind, "It is time for me to be about my father's business."

"Taking Care of Business" is a colloquialism that generally means assuming responsibility and doing that which is necessary and right. The young king Joash was only seven years old when he came to the throne, but he learned quickly that it was time for him to take care of business. David was just a lad when he faced Goliath in a face to face contest. Even though he was just a youth, he learned that it was time to take care of business. The bible is literally sprinkled with episodes of individuals who have, at young ages, assumed a serious and mature attitude about life and began to take care of business in a sober and responsible way that both shocked and surprised the adults around them.

In modern times we have read accounts of youth who have assumed adult roles in their families, out of necessity. We have heard of girls who have learned to manage homes and rear their brothers and sisters after a family crisis thrust them into the leadership role in their family. We are familiar with accounts of young boys who have assumed adult roles in their homes upon the sudden sickness or incapacitation of a parent. Each instance prompted a young person to assume an adult role in their family, much sooner than expected.

While there are extreme circumstances that prompt some youth to begin to take care of business earlier, the vast majority are not catapulted into the forefront so abruptly. Most youth in America get a chance to enjoy a period of childhood and adolescence in which they are not expected to assume the "business" of their fathers and mothers, only to learn the skills and information that will prepare them to do so, when the time comes.

The day that a child fully comprehends the importance of life and their own role in its cycle, is the day of his or her awakening. The day that a child understands the value of studying, doing their best in every endeavor and striving for spiritual perfection, that day marks their personal introduction into the adult world. Paul addressing this point of awakening in his own spiritual development said, in 1 Corinthians 13:11, " When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things."

As Christians, we have come to know that his business is the business of helping, serving, witnessing and saving. The day we awoke to the joy of salvation was memorable in deed. That was the day we turned our backs on the world and said, "It is time for me to be about my father's business."

Exposition

This text focuses on the life of Christ as a boy approaching adolescence, plunging himself into his life work, which was the salvation of mankind.

Luke paints three pictures of Christ. We see him as Christ the baby, small and fragile, destined to spiritual greatness. We see him as a boy, accepting the challenges of manhood. Finally we see him as an adult, shouldering the responsibility of the world as he carries the cross.

While Jesus was God incarnate among men, he was also flesh and blood. He grew, matured, learned and responded just as most youth his age. Verse 40 notes "and the child grew" indicating that His life expanded like other human lives. He learned as other boys;. He obeyed as other children., as he waited patiently for growth. We don't know the details of Christ's childhood, but certain assumptions can be drawn from the outcome. His boyhood in Nazareth must have been a quiet life, but its sinless purity was so great that it made John the Baptist feel his own unworthiness compared to it (Matt. 3: 14). His demonstrations of maturity and restraint must have been so grand and sweet that even his mother moved with confidence when he spoke at a wedding demanding pots of water that would be turned to wine.

Unlike most women, Mary had the unique privilege of knowing in advance that her son would be great. She knew he would save his people one day. She knew he was the Son of God and enjoyed a special anointing from God while he was still in her womb. She knew he would be great, but she did not know when or how his greatness would be accomplished.

As a boy, Jesus learned many things expected of boys. Joseph was a carpenter, thus he immediately learned to be a carpenter in the Jewish tradition. He learned the scriptures early, committing them to memory as he prepared for his manhood. Yet there were other things that he was learning too, which was not common for poor boys. We know he learned to write for John 8:6 gives us an instance in which he wrote on the ground. There is little doubt that he was able to read both Hebrew and Greek. He was obviously maturing rapidly, concentrating on that which he would need to fulfill his life mission.

The Law required all Jewish men to appear before the Lord God at three major feasts in Jerusalem every year: The Passover, which included the Feast of Unleavened Bread; the Feast of Pentecost; and the Feast of Tabernacles (Exodus 23:17; Deuteronomy 16:16; Luke 2:41).

The Passover Feast, which brought devout Jews, such as Mary and Joseph, to Jerusalem, was in memory of the Israelites' deliverance from Egyptian bondage through the blood of the Passover lamb hundreds of years before. But, for Jesus, who at the age of 12 was about to enter manhood, it spoke of His greater sacrifice yet to come - His death on the cross for the sins of the world. This accounts for His special interest in being about the business of His Father in the Temple - sitting in the midst of the doctors (teachers of the Law), both hearing them, and asking them questions. And all that heard Him were astonished at His understanding and answers (2:46-47). In the midst of the doctors indicates that Jesus was sitting in the place of authority, for teachers would sit surrounded by their students and would both ask and answer questions.

In all of the preparation for returning to Nazareth, Mary and Joseph were under the impression that Jesus must be in the company of others traveling in the caravan. Up to this time in His life, being perfect as He was, they had never had any reason to question the absolute obedience, submission, and cooperation of Jesus. They assumed that He was in the company until that evening, when they discovered He was not with them.

When they found Him, Mary's words were: Son, why have You thus dealt with us? Behold, Your father and I have sought You sorrowing (2:48). They implied thoughtlessness on the part of Jesus. However, this was not the reason for His being in the Temple. He was there because He was now ready to be about the business of His true Father. And He said to them, Why is it that you searched for Me? Didn't you know that I must be about My Father's business? (2:49).

Even as a youth Jesus had concluded, that it was time for him to "take care of business."

Taking Care of Business

What is the 'business' of today's youth? In a more simple time, that question could be answered by saying, the business of youth is to learn a trade plus the three "R's" of reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic. That's all that was needed then. What does the modern youth need to take care of the business? A youth who takes care of business:

LEARNS SELF DISCIPLINE: Self discipline is the ability to control our time, temper, talents, and temptations. That is difficult for adults. These four "T's" are extremely difficult for youth, but they are necessary to take care of business. Learning to use time wisely is important because there are only so many hours in a day. Each hour must be used to gain as much information and inspiration as possible. Unproductive hours can never be recouped. Tempers that run out of control can be destructive. The youth who learns to control his temper learns to take care business. Talent development requires self discipline. God given talents require constant training to develop. The youth that invests time and energy into developing God given talents, learns to take care of business. Resisting Temptation is essential to growth. Youth face many tempting opportunities but each must be met with an equal amount of resistance that comes from self discipline. To take care of business in modern times, youth need to develop self discipline.

POSITIVE ATTITUDE: A positive attitude means that we see the bright side of things. To take care of business youth should view their growing experience from the bright side. Those who see the dark side take a "the world is against me" attitude. They believe everyone is against them including their family, teachers, and even most of their "homies." The positive attitude is different. This attitude responds to every life situation with the phrase "this is going to work out for my good!" When teachers seem hard, the positive youth says, "this is going to work out for my good!" When parents seem to be unusually rigid with unbending rules, the positive youth says "this is going to work out for my good!" Even when a romance doesn't work out and the world seems to cave in, the response is the same..."this is going to work out for my good!"

Christian youth can have this positive attitude because the word of God promises that, no matter how tough a teacher seems; no matter how bad people talk about you; n o matter how tough your teen-aged life seems to be, if you love God, "it's going to work out for my good!" That's what Paul had in mind in Romans 8:28 "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Those who develop positive attitudes are not discouraged easily. If they are knocked down, they get up and try again, for even the knock down, will work out to their good!

QUEST FOR EXCELLENCE: The youth who learns to take care of business, strives for excellence and is uncomfortable with anything less than his or her best! Whether it is an athletic competition or a small speech in an assembly program the quest for excellence drives the youth that has learned how to take care of business. The youth that has learned how to take care of business never goes on the football field without learning the plays, never goes to class unprepared, never takes on a task that will not be completed, never assumes a responsibility that will not be carried out...and will give each undertaking their best effort! Those who learn how to take care of business are those who develop a distaste for mediocrity and an appreciation for excellence in every area of endeavor.

My Father's business

Finally, brothers and sisters every youth must understand that for a Christian youth, our business and our father's business are one and the same.

When Mary and Joseph found Jesus, he announced to them that it was time for him to be about his father's business.

Today, every youth, lost in the crowd of today's fast paced times must find himself a place in the kingdom of God and announce it is time for me to be about my father's business.

The kingdom of God needs youth who are not afraid to witness about the goodness of God to their generation.

The kingdom needs youth who are willing to give as much time and attention to studying and learning the word of God as they are to learning reading, writing and arithmetic!

The kingdom needs youth who are willing to be about the business of helping the poor, setting the captives free and declaring the acceptable year of our Lord!

The kingdom needs youth who are willing to be about the business of fighting evil, lifting up good and glorifying God!

Every child of God whether they are 13 or 113 needs to be about our father's business.

My father's business is the business of helping those who cannot help themselves!

My father's business is the business of reaching out to those who are in need of a helping hand!

My father's business is the business of reminding those who are:

AFRAID, that the Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear?

WEEPING, that weeping endures but a night, but joy comes in the morning!

DEFEATED, that he that overcometh shall inherit all things!

IN NEED, that the Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want!

FACING DEATH, that yea thou I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil!

My father's business is the business of telling a world that is in darkness that Jesus is the light!

My father's business is to let my light shine so that men might see my good works and glorify the father which is in heaven. No wonder the song writer declares, "This little light of mine. I'm gonna let it shine, let it shine, let it shine!"

My father's business is to tell the world about Jesus, the son of God and the Bright and Morning star!

Tell the world how he came here for 33 long years and died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave, completing his father's business with all power in his hands!

They Are Singing My Song!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 1, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid: for the LORD JEHOVAH is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation." Isaiah 12:2

Introduction

Do you have a favorite song? There are literally millions of songs that have been written over the years. We have heard thousands over time. However, there are one or two that are special to each of us. In fact, they become so special that we label them as "my song." If we hear it on the radio, in a concert or in a church service, a smile comes to our face as we think to ourselves or mumble aloud, "that is my song!"

A song is a thought or feeling, set to music, that expresses a belief, mood, or feeling. There are different types of songs. Those who like to drink in rowdy groups have a drinking song. School athletic teams have fight songs. People who are making their final appearance are said to sing their "swan song." Movies have theme songs. Some who work in large groups have "work songs." Romantics have love songs. Different cultures express their uniqueness with folk songs. Those who want to express their love for their country sing "patriotic songs." Those who focus on spirituality sing "Godly songs!"

It is possible to have a favorite song but not have the voice to sing it! That's the beauty of having a favorite song. We don't have to be able to sing it ourselves, but simply hearing it stirs us to action, changes our mood or strengthens our belief. As Americans, for example, the words of the National Anthem stir most of us, but few of us can sing it as it is actually written. "My song" is the song that expresses, my mood, my belief and my feeling. I do not have to sing "my song" myself.

Those who do have a voice to sing are at their best, when the song they sing, is "their song." That is when the words have meaning to them because they express a personal experience or feeling. Consider Singing Sally who often stirred the church with her moving voice. She moved the whole congregation when she began to sing her signature song, "Yield not to temptation.." For a spell Sally disappeared from the choir. In fact, no one in town saw her for over a year. Then one Sunday Sally came to church holding a little baby, a little over a year old. She sat in the pews and dropped her eyes whenever anyone looked at her. For five years Sally sat in the pew. She refused every attempt to get her to sing in the choir again. One day a deacon approached her and asked her the reason she did not sing anymore. She explained that five years earlier the 'devil stole my song." On his way out the door the deacon left Sally a note to read after he left. The note said "but he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." The next Sunday Sally sat in the choir stand. As she rose, she looked at the old deacon, smiled and began to sing "I know it was the blood. I know it was the blood that saved me. One day when I was lost he died upon the cross. I know it was the blood that saved me." Sally shook the church that day. That was the Sunday she realized that God had given her a new song!

Those who know the Lord have a new song to sing. It's a song that the angels cannot sing: "I've been washed in the blood of the crucified lamb. I've been redeemed."

As Christians we sing a new song today. It is a different song than the one we sang before we came to know the Lord. Our new song expresses our new mood. Our new song expresses our new belief. Our new song expresses our new feeling. Our new song expresses our new direction in life. It comes from Jesus, the devil didn't give it, and the devil can't take it away!

Exposition

This text focuses upon the prophet Isaiah's prophecy that Israel would sing a song of victory once it received the promises of God.

The nation of Israel was split into two parts. Its Northern Kingdom consisted of ten tribes and was called Israel. Its Southern Kingdom was called Judah which consisted of two tribes. A succession of kings sat on the thrones of Israel and Judah but none could unite the nation, few tried, even fewer wanted it to happen. Isaiah often prophesied about the day when the nation would finally be reunited to enjoy its glory. After telling of the eventual fall of the Northern Kingdom by the Assyrians in Chapter 10, he begins to look to the day that the nation would be reunited under someone who would come like a rod out of the root of Jesse. He spoke of their day of reunion and victory.

When that day comes, he said the nation would once again sing a special song that had become 'their song" of victory.

The song that is referred to in Isaiah 12 is called "my song." It is the same song that was sung by all of Israel when they enjoyed the victory fellowship on their march out of Egypt. In Exodus 15:2 there is reference to this song. After 400 years of slavery and racial discrimination they marched out of Egypt singing the Lord's song, which became 'my song.' That song was sung around campfires and hummed by women as they kneaded the bread for evening suppers. That was the song that was sung by singers and historians as they told the story of their deliverance. As each person sang the words of the song, it expressed their faith and confidence in God. It became "their song."

Israel was divided and easily conquered by world powers. During their period of exile, their mood was gloomy. They felt defeated and deserted. They felt they had no hope. They hung their harps on the willow trees and refused to sing. Their captors, who were familiar with the great songs associated with this once joyous people, would ask them to "sing us one of the songs of Zion." They responded in Psalm 137:4 "How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?"

However, the people were reunited again and they were about to sing the Lord's song again. Psalm 118:14 is the song they sang as "my song." It is the song that speaks of the strength of the Lord and his power to overcome evil. When they returned to Jerusalem and rebuilt the walls, they sang a new song. It was a song of victory. The words were extracted from David's own personal testimony of victory and restoration in the Lord after being surrounded by both enemies and detractors. Even for David, the fact that the Lord was his strength was his song.

As Isaiah expressed it in Isaiah 12, "my song" is a song of trust (v2). It is a song that expresses how believers trust in God and will never doubt his purpose and power.

'My song" is a song of courage in the face of fearful situations. It attests to the believers ability to enter into fearful situations with the full confidence that God is in control. This confidence is the basis of the believer's song.

"My song' is a song of strength in the face of weakness. It expresses the believers knowledge of the source of his power and ability, not coming from himself but from God.

"My song" is a song of salvation in the face of sinfulness. It expresses the believers joy over being saved from sin. His song is one that shows how he has been given one more chance.

Thus, at verse 5 Isaiah tells Israel and all believers, "Sing unto the Lord for he hath done excellent things..."

My song is a song that express my belief, faith and confidence in God. My song expresses my mood of joy. My song expresses my hope of restoration through the presence of the Holy Spirit in my life!

My song should say something!

Today there are many people who enjoy songs. However there is a growing number of people who appreciate songs for how they sound rather than what they say. In fact, many popular songs don't say anything, they simply sound good. We are attracted to the heavy beat and the sound of the music rather than the power of the words.

Most of the songs of the psalms of David's time were written to a five note scale. They were simple. The attraction was not in the beauty of the music but in the power of the words. Therefore those who sing should remember that:

SONGS OF THE LORD ALWAYS HAVE WORDS: In the secular community music is appreciated for its sound and technique. In the community of believers sound and technique are important but fall second place to the words. Even instrumental solos in the religious community are songs that have words for the people to visualize in their mind as the musician plays alone. The most important part of any song is the words. While some claim that they don't pay attention to words, most songs would be meaningless without the words. They are essential because the words tell the story. The words express the feeling. The words state the case.

Choirs that sing should make sure that the words of their songs are clear and understandable. Even before they are sung to an audience, choir members themselves should know the meaning of the words they sing. Metaphors, similes, allegories and other symbolic language often used in religious songs should be explained to every choir member. Words that are extracted from scripture should be especially understood by going to the scripture and reading the actual words. Some of the best choir members are great bible students because they understand the meaning of the words and language of their songs. Choir directors have the challenge of both directing their choirs and teaching the Word of God at the same time.

There are some choir rehearsals in which there is very little singing at all, as choir members listen to spirit filled directors, sometimes called ministers of music, pull out the meaning of the songs to make it real to them. Anyone can stand in front of a well-trained choir and wave their arms. However, it's the ministry of witness, words and wisdom that precede that moment that makes the song live in the lives of those and sing and hear "my song."

YOUR SONG SHOULD REFLECT YOUR FEELING: Your song should reflect your feeling, attitude and mood. An audience, whether it's one person or one thousand has the advantage of both watching and hearing a singer or a group. The feeling or mood of a song should be reflected in the expressions of a singer. In fact, those who hear good songs are moved most by people who can both sing "my song" and sing it like they mean it! The choir that sings the words, 'This joy I have, the world didn't give in and the world can't take away!" misses the point if their collective facial expression looks as if they just left a funeral. The song expressed a feeling of joy, but the singers didn't. If God has blessed us, then we should let the world know it through our expression.

YOUR SONG SHOULD REFLECT YOUR LIFE: A person who sings "my song" has the greatest impact on others if their song reflects their life. A person who loses hope, quits attending worship, and strays away from the Christian walk during periods of trial, can't sing 'Have you been tried in the fire?" It is not their song, even though they have the voice to sing it. The choir member that rarely gives to support the church and stingily supports choir based finance efforts has a hard time singing "The more you give, the more he gives to you, just keep on giving because it's really true, you can't be God giving, no matter how you try!" Every choir member should strive to live the life they sing about in their songs.

Your song is your witness

Finally, bothers and sisters, every believer should remember that our song is our witness. It is our testimony about the goodness of God.

Those who have a story to tell should have a song to tell their story. If the Lord has done something for us, we should be willing to testify. No wonder David said, "Let the redeemed of the Lord, say so!"

Singers should remember that when they stand to sing, they stand to testify about the goodness of God. Whenever the choir sings a song about goodness, they are singing somebody's song.

The person who is struggling to make sense of a life situation, in the face of misunderstanding friends, is encouraged when he hears the words, "He'll understand and say well done!" That believer says in his heart, they are singing, "My song!"

You're singing "my song" if I'm trying to find my way through the night and you sing "Precious Lord take my hand, lend me on, let me stand!"

You are singing "my song" when I look at the calendar and see more years behind me than I do in front of me and you sing, "I have heard of a land on a far away strand, tis the beautiful home of the soul. Built by Jesus on high, there we never shall die, tis a land where we'll never grow old!"

You're singing 'my song" when the hurricane force gales of life toss me from one side to another and you begin to sing, 'When the storms of life are raging, stand by me!"

You're singing "my song" when you say, "Take your burden to the Lord and leave it there!'

You're singing "my song" when you remind me that I may be at the end of my rope but I should "Hold on a little while longer, everything will be alright!"

You're singing "my song" when you testify that, "My soul is anchored in the Lord!"

You're singing "my song" when you testify that, "He's an on time God yes he is!"

You're singing "my song" when you try to do the best you can and your friends don't understand and you sing, "May the work I've done speak for me."

You're really singing my song, when start singing "Jesus, Jesus, Jesus, sweetest name I know. Fills my every longing and keeps me singing as I go!"

You're really singing my song, when you remind me about, "Calvary, Calvary, surely he died on Calvary!

On Calvary he died, but Early Sunday morning he arose and gave me a new song "He lives, He lives, Christ Jesus lives today. He walks with me and talks with along life's narrow way. He lives. He lives! Salvation to impart..

Ask me how I know He lives!

He lives within my heart!

One Window

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 15, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "You shall make a window for the ark, and you shall finish it to a cubit from above." —Genesis 6:16

Introduction

Have you ever been surrounded by troubles and searched for that one window of opportunity? Life provides us with numerous opportunities to advance, achieve, overcome, profit and excell. The opportunities usually come when we least expect them and in ways that we would never suspect. The trick is to stay alert and on guard to seize the moment when it comes. Such moments are call windows of opportunity. They are the precise moments in time when an opportunity presents itself perhaps rarely to appear again.. The chance to get a job promotion comes rarely! The chance to get a business opportunity comes rarely! The opportunity to climb the ladder of life presents itself ever so often. These small windows present the most opportune time for persons to move up and improve themselves. Sometimes the window is a way out of a problem. Sometimes it is a way into a better life. The idea behind life is to prepare for the day that our window of opportunity opens and then boldly seize the day!

Windows of opportunity often present themselves in ways we least expect. Consider the eccentric old man who had placed a sign in his window that read, "Opportunity Available, apply in side!" A young man applied and was given the job description. He was to collect all of the trash cans in the building, take them to the cellar and sort the contents piece by piece into similar types. Then he was to bag all of the trash in plastic bags and take them to the dumpster. The young man agreed. At the end of the day the young man reported that he could not complete the task because it was cold in the cellar. He was paid for the day but told not to return. The sign was again placed in the window and a young lady applied. She was given the same assignment. In the cellar with no one observing her, she quickly emptied all of the trash cans into the plastic bags without sorting them and placed them in the dumpster. At the end of the day she reported that despite the cold and darkness of the cellar she had completed the task. She was paid but told notto return. Again the sign was placed in the window. Another young man applied and was given the same task. The young man carefully went through each trash can and sorted each paper item, bagged them properly and returned at the end of the day. The old man asked, "Did you finish your assignment?" As he had asked the others he added, "Did you find anything unusual during your day?" The young man answered, "Yes sir, when I sorted the bottom of the last can I found this $100 bill which I figured someone must have lost!" The old man smiled and said, "I have no child to which to leave my company. I placed a sign in my window looking for an honest hardworking person young person that I could mentor and leave my fortune. The person who found the $100 bill would show me energy. The person who reported it, would get the chance to own this business one day!" That young man found his opportunity in a trash basket, that others passed by.

Opportunities for blessings come in disguises. Sometimes an opportunity for success comes disguised as a doomed project. Sometimes failures present opportunities to try again and claim victory. Sometimes losses present opportunities to gain.

As Christian, we have learned that every life event is an opportunity for God to act if we will simply allow him to act in his own way. No matter how dark the situation, there is a window of hope. That window allows us to see our way, and for the Light of God's love to shine in!

Exposition

This text focuses on the Ark of Noah and the way God provided for its ventilation and light.

The history of Noah's Ark is steeped in the ungodliness of men. While the first five chapters of Genesis tell of the wonder of God's creation, they also tell about the sinfulness of man. That sinfulness disturbed God so much that he regretted his decision to create man. God warned Noah of His intentions to destroy the earth because of the wickedness of humanity. Noah was commanded to build an ark to God's specifications to save his family and representatives of all animals from the flood (Gen. 6:18-19).

Because the Ark would save Noah and his family from destruction, it has become a symbol of faith on the part of Noah and a symbol of grace on the part of God (Gen. 6:8,22).

According to Holman, the shape of the ark was unusual. Although the Bible does not give enough detail to enable a full model to be made, the ark was apparently not shaped like a boat, either ancient or modern. The shape more closely approximates a giant block. The length was 300 cubits (about 450 feet), the width was 50 cubits (about 75 feet), and the height was 30 cubits (about 45 feet), overall dimensions that resemble the dimensions of a giant house (Gen. 6:15). The ark had three floors filled with rooms (Gen. 6:14,16).

Some have estimated that the Ark was bigger than most steamships with a storage capacity so large that it could have easily stored 600 freight cars on board filled with a combined tonnage of 90 million pounds.

The ark was built of Gopher wood (Gen. 6:14) which may have been a variety of Cypress.

Despite its great size the Ark only had and one window and one door (Gen. 6:16).

That fact has marveled those who have studied the Ark for centuries. A three story luxury liner sized boat with only one door that had to be sealed and opened from the outside and one 25 inch window seemed impossible. They questioned how so many animals could survive for so long without light or air. Although the text only refers to "one window" some scholars seem to think that this would be an impossibility, sense air and light would be needed to sustain life on board a giant boat for one year and 17 days. They suggest that there was probably one window on each floor. Even if they were correct, three 25 inch windows for a boat that size would still be a miracle.

They survived the darkness, with only one window!

They survived the stench of life, with only one window!

They overcame every imaginable reason why they should fail, inspired by the light of only one window!

The window was so small that the only thing that Noah could see when he looked out was the waters God saved him from and heaven from which would ultimately come his help and salvation.

Since there was no large body of water nearby on which Noah could have floated such a large boat, its very construction attested to Noah's unwavering faith in God. When he constructed the Ark there was no obvious or visible need for such a vessel. To have built such a vessel at that place, and at that time was clearly an act of tremendous faith in the message of God that the vessel would be needed (Gen. 6:17-19). Noah dared to believe that he had properly understood God and that God could be depended upon (Gen. 6:22).

The fact thatthe ark only had one small window underscores Noah's faith, enough to lock himself within and trust God for light, air and deliverance.

Lives In God's Hands

Today, believers around the world should take heart when the read the account of Noah's Ark in the bible. It refers to how God saved a family in biblical times and in a greater sense it shows how God works with believers today, faced with the difficulties of troubling times.

The ark showed God saving believers from a world that would self destruct. It showed God providing miraculous ways for those believers to survive, multiply and prosper because of their faith.

Since the Ark is a type of believer, believing families, and believing congregations, believer should look closely at what the ark did NOT have as a source of inspiration for the present moment.

THE ARK HAD NO RUDDER: The rudder of a boat determines its direction. A skillful captain can use a boat's rudder and change its direction. Noah's Ark had no rudder. Like Noah had no control of the direction of the Ark, each believer puts the direction of his life completely in God's hands. While preparing himself for whatever direction God carries him, the believer chooses to direct himself or to pursue his own will. His testimony is, "Thy will oh Lord, Not Mine." When the troubling waters covered the face of the earth, God's hand guided the ark and took it eventually to safe ground. Every believer has the same assurance, God will guide. This adds greater meaning to the old hymn, "Guide me oh thy Great Jehovah, Pilgrim through this barren land." Our quest is to let God lead us and guide us every day in the words of the song writer, "Lead me. Guide me. Along the way. Lord if you lead me I will not stray. Lord let me walk each day with thee. Lead me oh Lord, lead me!"

THE ARK HAD NO SAILS: The sails of a boat helped to move it from one place to another. Boats that do not have sails have a source of propulsion whether it's a motor, special oars or just a single paddle. The ark did not have sails or oars. There was no out deck to operate them and no portals for oars. The ark moved whenever God wanted it to move.

Every believer's life is the same when it is in God's hand. There are millions of believers who have more than adequate education, training and experience in many walks of life who refuse to move in any task or undertaking without receiving the life giving instruction and direction from God. They know that no matter how hard they row, the boat will not move until God literally pushes it along with his finger.

Our life efforts are futile unless God blesses our actions. Nothing we attempt will be able to succeed unless God gives his blessings. In God's hands, we wait for his command.

THE ARK HAD NO LIFE BOATS: Any boat the size of the Ark would certainly carry life boats. Life boats assume that there may be an accident, causing the ship to sink. Maritime laws require such boats to have enough life boats to provide a safe escape for everyone on board. The Ark had no life boats. There was no expectancy that it would sink. It was God's boat. The Great Titanic had the reputation of being a ship that even God himself could not sink. Noah's Ark was just the opposite. It was a boat that could sink, but God himself would not allow it to sink!

Believers don't need faith life boats. A faith life boat is a "just in case" faith. A "just in case" faith takes some faith actions but holds back on others "just in case." When Noah built the ark he left no room for doubts. He placed his faith in God. Hebrews 11:7 says, "by faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house..." He put his whole life in God's hand. That's what the song writer had in mind with the words, "I have decided to follow Jesus, no turning back. No turning back!"

THE ARK HAD ONLY ONE WAY OUT: The ark only had one door. It was the only way out. The door to the ark was on its side. It could not be opened from the inside because it was sealed from the outside by God himself. Genesis 7:16 says, "And they that went in, went in male and female of all flesh, as God had commanded him: and the LORD shut him in." Considering the weight it carried the door was probably covered by water at all times. There was no way out. The door could not be opened unless God opened it. There was no way out unless God made a way!

Every believer should consider his own circumstance and remember that the way out of any situation is in God's hand. Even when Noah looked out and saw the ground he didn't leave until God unlocked the door and commanded him to leave. God makes a way for all of his people. He stands at the door announcing, "I am the way the truth and the life, no man cometh to the father except by me!"

Only One Window

Finally, while we've looked at what the Ark did not have, we must also look at what it DID have..one window! It was only 25 inches high, but that was more than enough for God!

If the window of the ark had been larger, Noah would have spent all of his time looking out instead of letting God's light shine in!

If the window had been larger, one of his family members might have been tempted to crawl out instead of waiting for God to open the door!

That little window at the top of the ark, kept the believers on board looking up!

No wonder David declared, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven's and the earth!" Psalm 121.

Somebody here feels a bit overcome by the rising tides of trouble in your life!

Somebody here is overwhelmed at the flood of troubles that seems to be destroying life!

Somebody here is inundated by the unending torrents of trouble that rains all around them!

No matter how difficult the times there is safety in the Lord and there is a window of opportunity!

In the darkness and gloom of the ark, there was one window of hope!

In the loneliness and depravation of the ark, there was just one window of comfort!

In the frustration and anxiousness of the ark, there was just one window of assurance!

When you look up to the window of hope you are reminded that God knows your limits!

There will never be a:

HILL that is steeper than you can climb!

BURDEN that is heavier than you can bear!

ENEMY to difficult for you to withstand!

PROBLEM that is greater than a strong faith can solve!

RACE that is longer than you can run!

NIGHT that is darker than you can endure!

No matter how dark the days might become there is always a light in heaven. No wonder the song writer said, "Beams of heaven as I go. Through this wilderness below. Guide my feet in peaceful ways. Turn my midnights into days. When in the darkness I would grope. Faith always see a star of hope. And soon from all life's grief's and danger. I shall get home someday!"

There is window through which I can look up to heaven!

There is a window through which God looks down on me!

This is the same window through which God pours out showers of blessing!

This is the same window through which God hears and answers prayers!

This window of hope was created on a little hill called Golgotha!

This window was designed in the pain and agony of Calvary!

This window was opened through the death of Jesus, who died for me and you!

The world tried to close this window, by pulling the curtain of the crucifixion to hide it!

But early Sunday morning, Jesus arose from the grave, pulled back the curtains of eternity and opened a window of hope!

Open up the windows of heaven Lord and shower down a blessing on me!

Send the praises up! Open up the window and...

Watch the blessings come down!

Half on a Baby

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 22, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "And the king said, Divide the living child in two, and give half to the one, and half to the other. Then spake the woman whose the living child was unto the king, for her bowels yearned upon her son, and she said, O my lord, give her the living child, and in no wise slay it. But the other said, Let it be neither mine nor thine, but divide it. Then the king answered and said, Give her the living child, and in no wise slay it: she is the mother thereof." 1 Kings 3:25-27

Introduction

Have you ever felt as if you were been pulled in more directions that one? These are the times when it appears that every opportunity or influence in the world is presenting itself to you at the same time. Imagine being a youth, facing a multitude of life choices and situations at the same time. It could be extremely frustrating. The family, Sunday School teacher and school offer one direction and the peer group offers another, often conflicting choice. The rapid increase in the number of choices available to the young also increases their frustration to the point that they often feel like they are being torn apart.

For teens, one of the most difficult choices involves sexual responsibility. Everything that is good inside them suggests that the right thing to do is to listen to God's word and abstain from sexual involvements until they are married. At the very least, they are urged to plan for safe sex. While everything inside of them says "abstain," all of the influences around them say "indulge."

Such is the case with the popular tune by R.Kelly that appeals to many youth entitled, "Half on a baby!" Kelly appears in the recording's video outfitted in semi-sheer drawls and flowing robe as he dances through his large and spacious home with the fire place burning calling out to a woman saying he has "half on a baby." The adult mind sees the video and dismisses it as "cute." The young mind is instantly plunged into a world of fantasy. Body temperatures begin to rise and the tug of war between right and wrong begins.

There is a war being waged over our youth. Their families, churches and teachers are trying to shelter them, teach them and prepare them while other influences are trying to entice, seduce and market them for a profit. Caught in the middle are millions of innocent youth who are mere pawns in a deadly game of profiteering. The signals are confusing. The conflicting images of superstars such as R.Kelly make it even more confusing. What many don't understand is that in the battle for profits and big money, there is no right and wrong only what sells and what does not sell. Thus the same singer that inspires them to reach high in, "I believe I can fly" and offers a shoulder of hope with Kirk Franklin and Mary J. Blige in, "Lean on me" also encourages them to put "half on a baby." It's not that the singer even believes the ideas, but that the ideas sell and make money. Youth struggling to do the right thing are divided down the middle as the line that separates right and wrong loses its distinction in the mad war for profits where youth are the primary marketing target.

As Christians, we know the world is pulling at the heart strings of all that is good. We count on the Lord to lead us and strengthen us as we strive to do the right thing. We put our trust in the Lord, who demonstrated in no uncertain terms that he was willing to go more than just half on our salvation, but to pay it in full!

Exposition

This text focuses on Solomon as he discerns a real mother from an imposter.

The immediate importance of this text is reflected in its history. Solomon had become king of Israel ahead of his brother. There were many who accused him of being young and inexperienced, having risen to the throne only because he was the favorite son of King David who named and installed him as king before his death. The text focuses on one of many decisions Solomon made as king that was dramatic enough to demonstrate that he was truly wise enough to serve as king.

Two women both had infant children the same age and lived in the same quarters. During the night, one of the women rolled over atop of her child and killed it. In the night the mother of the dead child switched babies with the other. The switch discovered, the two women disputed each other's claim to the live baby. Their case came before Solomon, acting in his capacity as judge. He heard the claims of both women. Obviously one of the women was lying. The guilty mother faced certain death if she admitted to her part in the lie, so she continued her claim. Solomon decided to resolve the dispute by cutting the baby in half, giving one half to each. The guilty woman said that was a fair action. It was a matter of survival. At least she would not be slain or convicted in the process. The real mother did not consider herself at all, but instantly threw herself before the king pleading for the life of the child.

Her action immediately identified her as the real mother. Solomon gave her the whole baby uncut.

The action established Solomon's wisdom in the mind and hearts of the people as it was repeated to their hearing.

The guilty woman had made a mistake. However, to cover her mistake and the error of her ways she was willing to destroy the life of an innocent child to insure her own survival. She took no thought of the life she would terminate, only her own safety and well being. To guarantee that safety, she was willing to go half on a baby, especially since the baby involved was not her own and meant nothing to her. The baby was simply a means to achieve an end. The baby was a ticket to freedom. If cutting the baby in half could accomplish what she needed then she was satisfied.

The real mother on the other hand had the concern of her child at heart. She would prefer to have a whole baby alive than half of a baby dead. She would prefer to see her baby alive and well in someone else's care than to have only half a baby. That was the level of emotional commitment that Solomon hoped his act would elicit: an out pouring of sympathy and love that would be unparalleled. When the appropriate time came, real love would be displayed, even at the expense of the mother's life.

The guilty mother's disinterest in the welfare of the child represents the way the world receives every person: a means to achieve an end. Generally, Satan enters a life, uses it and tears it apart. It does not matter to him whether a life is lost or ruined, only that his purpose is achieved. Much like the possessed man who ran naked through the grave yard was not considered beyond how he could be used, so Satan destroys every life in which he can get a grip.

The real mother demonstrates God's love for his people. Not selfish in its intent, God's love moves men to raise themselves to higher levels of respect for life and being of others. In no way would God's love seek only half of a being. He seeks to preserve every part of his creation as a complete and whole being.

Sin cut mankind in half. When Jesus went to Calvary, he reconciled man unto to God and made him whole again!

Torn Apart

What contributes to the development of a whole person?

Each person is a complex mixture of physical and the metaphysical; the seen and the unseen. A fully developed and well rounded person is one who has developed physically, mentally, emotionally, and spiritually. Usually physical development comes first. It is natural and requires little help and assistance from anyone.

MENTALLY TORN APART: Mental development is shaped by experiences and training. Each experience whether actual or through artificial stimuli, contributes to the development of mentality. Youth who observe, a large number of murders whether in person or on television, develop an insensitivity to murder. At the least, they see a murder as sensational, at the most, it becomes a raw deal. The same is true of sexual experiences. By means of television and other stimuli youth witness scores of sex acts each week. At the least, they become fascinated with the act. At the most, they are tempted to try it themselves. The massive dose of mental stimulation is not mentally healthy for youth and contributes to an increase in violence and pre-marital sex among teens. The negative stimuli that youth receive is not confined to these two examples alone. There are hundreds of others.

Youth continue to see negative images of themselves. Schools continue to relate to them in ways that are non-productive and their educational performance declines. The sense of racial identity and self worth has been shattered as less emphasis is placed upon the importance of culture.

EMOTIONALLY TORN APART: Emotionally youth are being torn apart. They are often exposed to extremely stressful life situations that are contributing to a growing depression in their generation. Increasingly dysfunctional families are making it hard for youth to cope as they learn to live without a father or mother after a divorce. In the "my week-your week" rotations of custodies, the emotional stability of youth is often shattered. The range of emotions caused by dysfunctional family life ranges from feelings of abandonment, frustration, worthlessness to fear and anxiety.

At alarming rates Black teens are committing suicide. There was a time when Blacks associated suicide with whites, but no longer.

A recent Center for Disease Control and Prevention study on teen suicide says African-American teens are increasingly not able to cope with the "stressful" family environments. The study shows the suicide rate of African-Americans between the ages of 10 and 19 has increased by 114% since 1980. In southern states, the rate has grown by 214%.

Given the collapse of urban family and educational institutions, should we be surprised at the spiritual emptiness which causes our young people to make often fatal choices? Whether they passively drift into the gang-war lifestyle or defiantly turn deadly weapons on themselves, the result is the same: A lack of self-esteem turning into self-hatred turning into self-destruction.

Unless a commitment is made to strengthening the basic family unit, reforming our urban schools and re-energizing the spirituality of our communities, these awful numbers will only increase."

SPIRITUALLY TORN APART: Many youth are growing up in homes that are spiritually empty. Mothers and fathers have no religious life. Children know a church when they see one, but are distant from its teachings, ideals and standards because they rarely attend. Sunday School, worship and church activity for many children is becoming a passing fad rather than a standard practice. To an increasing number of youth, God is not real. Like the man behind the curtain in the Wizard of Oz, they accept God as a fantasy creation of adults on the same line as the Easter Bunny, Santa Claus and the Tooth Fairy. There is a growing absence of Bible instruction for youth in Black families. Memorization of scripture, even the Lord's prayer and the 23rd Psalm, once required learning in every Black family are becoming extinct. The absence of God and the godly lifestyle in the lives of youth contributes to a feeling of despair, especially when they have questions that seem to have no answers, problems that have no solutions, and feel lost without direction.

A Whole Person

Finally, we must consider that while the world is concerned about youth in part, God is concerned about the whole person.

God is concerned about the whole person and seeks to share his love, healing and saving power to make every person completely whole.

When Jesus saw the man sitting by the pool for 38 years he asked him in John 5:6, "Wilt thou be made whole?"

The woman with an issue of blood came before Jesus physically torn, but he said "Thy faith has made thee whole" Luke 8:48

Paul writing to the Thessalonians, said his prayer for believers is that their whole spirit and soul and body be preserved until the return of Christ. 1 Thessalonians 5:23

No one should be satisfied with half of anything.

Young people listening to the provocative overtures of the world should keep in mind the whole picture before they settle for half.

Young men who proudly quote the gospel according to R. Kelly and claim they have "half on a baby" should consider whether they also have half on 18 to 21 years of child support.

One night's thrill is only half the picture. Even if he has half on a baby does he have half on the medical treatments and eventual funeral bill that results from sexually transmitted diseases such as AIDS?

He may have half on a baby, but does he also have half on the cost of pampers, baby sitters, school clothes, school fees, food, clothing and shelter of the baby?

He may have half on a baby, but does he also half on the health insurance costs, college tuition, music lessons, cheer leader uniforms, braces, after school tutoring, car insurance of the baby who grows up? Does he have half the cost of that teen-aged baby's Air Jordan Tennis or Tommy Hilfiger Shirts?

Does he have both halfs of an education? Both halves of a job?

Every believing youth must keep the whole picture in mind. And as the whole picture comes into focus, every youth must remember that God is concerned about them completely and wholly.

When we sing "Yes Jesus loves me" he doesn't love me because he's trying to get something from me, he already owns me because we have been bought with a price!

Jesus loves you for who you are and what you are!

Jesus loves you despite what others say or think about you!

Jesus loved us so much that he came to this weary world to make a payment for our salvation

It wasn't half on a soul, but he paid it all!

It wasn't half on salvation, but he paid it all!

It wasn't half on a chance to everlasting life, but he paid it all!

When he died out on Calvary, it wasn't half, but it was all!

When it he arose on Sunday morning, he had paid it all!

No wonder the song writer declared: "Jesus paid it all, all to him I owe, sin had left its crimson stain, but he washed it white as snow!

Ending The Silent Treatment

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 6, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "Unto thee will I cry, O Lord, my rock; be not silent to me: lest, if thou be silent to me, I become like them that go down into the pit." Psalm 28:1 "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds; Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high" Hebrews 1:1-3

Introduction

Have you ever received the silent treatment? One of the most frustrating feelings in the world is to be the recipient of the "silent treatment." It is an often used as a tactic in cold war. Whether it is between two people, two organizations or two nations, the silent treatment can inflict excruciating pain and discomfort without a word being said. In fact, it is the absence of words that prompts the frustration. When nations disagree, they often decide to break off relations. They won't talk anymore; ambassadors are pulled from one nation and all relations are cut off. When disputing parties in a negotiation get angry they stop talking and something disastrous usually happens. In families, a husband and a wife get angry with each other and do the same thing. Add in a child that gives his parents the cold shoulder and the formula for frustration is very clear. The silent treatment can hurt.

Sometimes the silent treatment can be worse than an argument. In an argument, at least the emotion is vented, the steam is let out and the anger is given a chance to dissipate. But in the silent treatment there is no release of steam, it just builds. Consider the cheating husband who made a habit of stopping by his girl friend's house every day before he came home. One day he stayed longer than his usual pit stop and was very late coming home. His wife had cooked an especially delicious meal. There were candles. Romantic music. After several hours had passed and her husband had not come home the wife was tremendously angry. When he walked in the door he had his story together, but she never said a word. If she said anything to him he would lay out his well prepared alibi, but she only looked at him. There was venom in her eyes. Steam seemed to come from her head as he looked at the withered candles. He rehearsed his speech so well, anticipating her rants and rages, that he was completely off guard by her silence. So he yelled "Honey, don't you look at me in that tone of voice!" -He would have been happy if she had said anything!

Sometimes the lines of communication are even humourous. The husband says to his son "Ask your mother what is wrong." The son turns to his mother and asks, "Dad says what is wrong?" The mother answers, "Tell your father nothing is wrong, I'm not speaking to him!"

Usually the silent treatment results from someone breaching a trust or not meeting an expectation, whether real or imagined. It is the first phase of an emotional cold war. The silence does not indicate peace, but absence of peace. It does not indicate that a problem has been solved, only that a confrontation has temporarily been avoided.

What if God gives the world the silent treatment? Suppose the world became so bad that God became so angry that he simply did nothing for a while. What would be our fate if God became angry at our excuses, complaints and stubborness and decided to give us the silent treatment?

As Christians we want to talk to God and we want to always let God speak to us. We can't give God the silent treatment, and we certainly can ill afford to have him ignore us. We need him every day and hour.

Exposition

This text finds David expressing his hope that God would not give him the silent treatment.

His cry to God was simple, do not be silent! Speak to me! Send me a word! If not he feared that he would become as a dead man, unable to respond, move or take control of his life.

When David killed Uriah, committed adultery with Bathsheba, and tried to lie to the people and to God, he received the silent treatment from God. His kingdom was threatened. He contracted a venereal disease and he cried out, "Create in me a clean heart oh God and renew in me a right spirit!"

In Jeremiah 8:14 the sins of Israel brought down the wrath of God. Jeremiah told the people "let us enter into the defenced cities and let us be silent there: for the Lord our God hath put us to silence and given us water of gall to drink, because we have sinned against the Lord." The nation received the silent treatment and they were eventually taken away into captivity.

Over the centuries God has spoken to his people in many ways. In the beginning he spoke directly to leaders such as Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. He gave them instructions and they were relayed to the people. In other times he spoke to Prophets and Kings with divine direction. Neither would rarely move until they had heard a word from the Lord.

That's why the writer of Hebrews writes, "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets.." (1:1) God always spoke to the people in one way or another. That's why many were confused at 400 years of silence that ensued from the writing of the Book of Malachi in about 450 B.C. to the events of the Book of Matthew in about 3 B.C.

There were 400 years of silence in which the people essentially heard nothing from God. There were no prophets. There was no spoken word. There was no written word. They were silent years.

During this time they had three phases of existence. The Greeks led by Alexander the Great dominated them for over 100 years. The sacred scriptures were re-written in the Greek language and their temples were turned into places of worship of the Greek Gods. Their priests were forced at the threat of their lives to offer sacrifices to Zeus, the Greek God. There was a silence in heaven.

The second phase occurred Judas Maccabeus led a revolt and freed the land from the Greeks. The Jews ruled their own land for a while; ut there was still no word from the Lord.

The third phase occurred 63 years before Christ was born when the Romans took control levied and taxes but allowed them to continue observing their religious practices.

During all of this time they desperately sought a word from the Lord. They searched the scriptures for signs to explain God's silence.

Then suddenly the silence broke and a voice from God was heard crying in the wilderness saying, repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand!

The silence had ended. Someone was coming that would tear down the wall of silence between almighty God and sinful man. In the last days, says the writer of the Hebrews, that person came.. That person would be none other than the Son of God himself, the mediator who had the job of bringing God and mankind back together again!

Dealing With The Silence

Today there are millions of people who are struggling as they attempt to deal with the silence. Dealing with the silence requires certain understandings:

THE SILENCE INDICATES SOMEONE HAS BEEN OFFENDED: Whether unintentionally or by design, silent treatments are usually the result of an offense by one party or another. Whether by accident, misunderstanding, or intent, the reason behind the use of the "silent treatment" is rooted in hurt feelings. We offend God often. Each time that we disobey his commandments, ignore his directives or otherwise disrespect him, we push closer to getting the silent treatment.

Amos warned the people about unjust business practices and personal deception. Malachi warned them about robbing God. They continued and for 400 years, Israel received the silent treatment.

Can we afford to offend God? Can we afford for God to give us the silent treatment in response?

When we call upon him, wouldn't it be tragic if he would not answer? If we need him wouldn't it be sad if he did not respond?

If we sense that our actions have caused God to give us the silent treatment then we must realize that someone has been offended. Obviously, God cannot do any wrong. Then, we must have offended him. If we have offended him, we must take the next step.

SILENCE CAN LEAD TO LOST BLESSINGS: A home in which there is a silent war being conducted is not in the mode to receive blessings. Partners involved in cold war both take their sights off God and in the meantime lose out on the opportunity for great blessings while they feud. Richard Armstrong in his book "Make Your Life Worthwhile" told the story of a man in Wales England who tried to win the affections of a certain lady for 42 years before she finally said "Yes" and the became husband and wife at age 74. It appeared that 42 years earlier he had said something to offend her and she gave him the silent treatment. He never spoke to her and she never spoke to him. The man was rather shy so every week for 42 years he went to her home and slipped a love letter under her door. She continuously refused even though the man wrote beautiful letters. After writing 2,184 love letters without ever saying a single word, the man finally got enough courage to knock on her door and say "I'm sorry." There were married a short while later. It was a silent treatment that lasted 42 years.

THE OFFENDING PARTY MUST START TO MAKE THINGS RIGHT: Whomever it is that receives the silent treatment should do what is necessary to make things right. Unfortunately human beings are stubborn creatures. Once the talking has stopped it almost takes an act of Congress to bring silent partners back to the table of mutual concern. Someone has to start making things right. During Israel's 400 years of silence there were a few, Judas Maccabee and some priests that took actions to make things right with God. They took back their temples, threw out idol Gods and restored their worship. It was a small step but it was a step.

Breaking the Silence

Finally, we must consider that anytime there is a break down in the peace talks, a negotiator, arbitrator or mediator usually comes into the picture.

The mediator's job is reconciliation. His job is to get the two sides back to talking again. His job is to bring two divergent parties that are enduring the silent treatment born in the bowels of sin, back together again.

When the leader's of Iran and the United States gave each other the silent treatment over the Iranian hostages, neither the President or the Iranian leader would pick up the phone and talk to each other. The Reverend Jesse Jackson went in person and became the mediator that brought hostages home.

When another war threatened recently with Iraq, President Clinton and Saddam Hussein both gave each other the silent treatment, the head of the United Nations became the mediator between two countries and got them to talking again an avoided a war!

After 400 years of silence the relations between God and mankind were strained. The Persians, Greeks and Romans were turning the masses away from him. The Greeks worshipped everything known and even worshiped an unknown God. The Romans worshiped power. The Jews seemed to do whatever was necessary to survive.

God and mankind were at odds. No praises went up, no blessings came down!

In the past, God would speak to the people through a prophet or leader, but now there was silence.

When sin covered the earth like a blanket, there was a word from heaven to Noah, to warn them of a flood, but now there is only the silent treatment.

When the people worshiped a gold calf and turn away from God, there was a word from heaven, for God told Moses what to say to he people, but now there is only the silent treatment!

When the prophets of Baal seemed to dominate the world scene, there was a word from heaven as Elijah challenged the prophets of Baal atop of Mt. Carmel; but now there is only the silent treatment.

In the past God had sent a word from heaven through David, Solomon, Hosea, Nehemiah, Isaiah and Malachi, but now there was a silence in heaven.

Without a word from heaven, there is nothing to break the silence!

Without a word from heaven, there is no balm in Gilead to heal the sin sick soul!

Without a word from heaven, there is no light at the end of the tunnel!

Without a word from heaven, there is no healing of the wounded heart!

Hebrews says that in the past God had always spoken through prophets, but in these last days the people heard from heaven, from the word himself.

Galatians 4:4 puts it this way, "But when the fullness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law"

He didn't send a word, but he sent "The Word" John 1:1 reminds us that "In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God and the Word was God." Then John 1:14 says "and the Word became flesh"

When relations between sinful mankind and the all powerful God became strained, there was the Word from heaven that came down to break the silence.

1 Timothy 2:5 says, "For there is one God and one mediator between God and men, the man Jesus Christ."

Do you sometimes feel like God has been silent in your life? If you've been at a distance from God and have not heard a word or feel your blessings have been cut short, there is a word from heaven!Down in Bethlehem, God broke the silence! What God had to say, he said through Jesus!

What Jesus said was , "Come unto me..believe in me....Your sins are forgiven... go and sin no more... follow me... you will receive power, go and make disciples!"

Tell the world about an all powerful God! Tell the world about Jesus!

Tell the world how he was born in a manger, crucified on an old rugged cross!

Tell the world how he was buried in a borrowed tomb!

Tell the world that Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!Go tell it on the mountains that the silence is broken..let earth receive her king!

Show Me the Road to Zion

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Zion Hill Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 6, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping: they shall go, and seek the LORD their God. They shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us join ourselves to the LORD in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten." Jeremiah 50:4-5

Introduction

Have you every left home and had to ask directions to find the right road back? Often when we travel , we carry maps to help us find our destination. When its time to go home, those who have never traveled the way before can get turned around trying to find the right road to get home. Often we can get home if we can just find our way to the main highway, but even that can be puzzling in some cities. Like every animal, we have a homing instinct. We have a natural urge to go home. Unlike animals, we can't always find our direction without help. Birds instinctively know which way is South for the winter. They also know how to get back home. A dog, taken in a car 100 miles away from home will somehow make his way back to your front door. Humans want to go home but can't find directions without help. Animals know the way home but don't need maps or road directions. Finding one's way home is not an easy task.

There is a natural desire to go home. Home is where the heart is. Much has been said about the home, most of which explains why coming home is important to each of us. What is home?

Home is a place our feet may leave but our hearts always want to return to

A man travels the world in search of what he needs and returns home to find it!

J.H. Payne said it and Dorothy in the Wizard of Oz made it famous, "There is no place like home!

Home is a place where the great are small and the small are great!

A good house is built by man, but a good home is created by the hand of God!

It's no wonder then that when we are away from home we often get homesick. There are thousands of people who have moved to other cities to find jobs and to pursue careers. But there is not a day that goes by that they do not talk about, think about and yearn to go home, if only for a few days!

Some want to go home but have lost their directions. They need to find the right road. They need to know which land marks to look for on the way. Those who are searching are doing so as the hope and pray that God one day they'll find their way home again.

As Christians, we know that this earth is not our home. We enjoy our existence but we want to find our way back home. Some have left, but there are others that know the road to Zion begins at Zion's Hill.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jeremiah has he foretells the day in which God's people would return home through the eventual fall of Babylon.

The Jews were held captive in Babylon for many years. They had become the vassals of the Babylonian Empire. They were in a strange land in which they could not rejoice or find any hope. Every waking moment of their day seemed spent thinking about home, talking about home and praying for God to get them home.

The prophet Jeremiah, known as the weeping prophet, often cried over the Jew's predicament. He cried so much that his Lamentations consumed an entire book of the bible.

Judgment was foretold upon Babylon, the empire that appeared to be invincible. But its magnificent splendor and fortifications posed no doubt in the heart of the faithful prophet Jeremiah, who said: The Lord spoke against Babylon (the capital) and against the Land of the Chaldeans. . . . Declare among the nations . . . Babylon is taken, Bel (patron god) is confounded (put to shame), Merodach (Bel) is broken in pieces. . . .For out of the north there comes up a nation (Media) against her, which will make her land desolate, and none will dwell there (50:1-3).

Even today, more than 2500 years later, the ruins of Babylon remain a witness to the accuracy of Scripture. Almost as much space in the Bible is given to the judgment upon Babylon as to all the other nations combined. Babylon was destroyed so the people could go home.

Following the prophecy of the destruction of Babylon and the release of Israel from captivity, Jeremiah showed the people the road home. There must be a genuine repentance and conversion. Then and only then would God show them the road home.

"They shall ask the way to Zion" Jeremiah said in Jeremiah 50:5. They will want to know the way home. They resolved to join themselves together in what was called a perpetual convenant or a new pledge to worship, praise and obey God that will never be forgotten.

In response, God started a miraculous work that would result in the people finding their way home.

Finding the Road Home

When we speak of finding the road home, immediately our minds focus on strips of land. When we think of roads, we think of geography, terrain, and strips of land that extend from where we are to where we want to be. In a biblical sense roads were important. The rugged geography of Palestine made one concerned with taking the right road.

If the road home went through the desert regions, the traveler had to know the location of wells to get water.

If the road home was around the hilly spines of central Palestine then the traveler had to consider whether to walk on foot with a light load or to carry a heavy load with pack animals.

If the road home required crossing streams and rivers, often travelers had to do it without their pack animals, that could not ford the streams.

If the road home was frequented by highwaymen and thieves, then travelers had to constantly be on guard.

If the road home was in the marshy wet areas, travelers had to know the location of solid ground.

If the road home would carry them through the sandy dunes of the desert, then travelers knew to carry an ample supply of food and water.

When Israel cried out "show me the road to Zion" they were asking for directions home, but were also prepared to do whatever was necessary to get there!

Finding the road home

The Jews spoke of Zion as home. Zion was actually a fortified hill in the region outside of Jerusalem. Zion is a reference not only to Jerusalem but to the entire area that they called home. Their desire was to return to Zion's Hill. They wanted to see the beauty of Zion's Hills and Valleys, lakes and streams. They wanted to recall the memories of times past and bask in the shadow of the greatness.

Today, believers are still trying to get home, but it's not a return to Jerusalem, but to the new Jerusalem, the city of God.

Our journey is not to a place on this earth, but to a city not made with hands

Our journey is not to a building construction in the imagination of men but to a place so beautiful that song writers could only write, "How beautiful heaven must be!"

Our journey is not to a structure of wood and concrete, but to a city that is built by the hands of God, and placed on 12 foundations.

To get to Zion every believer must first find the:

ROAD TO REPENTENANCE: You can't get to Zion without repentance and becoming a new creature. When Nicodemus asked, "What must I do to be saved?" Jesus answered, "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again" Being born again makes you a new person on the inside. It is the epitome of what the scripture means when it says, "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature, behold old things are past away and all things become new." 2 Corinthians 5:17. The road to repentance is the same road that Saul was traveling on the way to Damascus. There on the Damascus Road he met Lord.

ROAD TO PRAISE AND GRATITUDE: Those who expect to get to Zion must have an attitude of gratitude. The attitude of gratitude prompts every believer to remember what the word says, "In everything give thanks." We thank the Lord for everything, because he didn't have to do what he did! We thank you for Sunshine and rain and the harvest of grain.

We praise him because he is worthy to be praise. From the rising of the sun until the going down of the same he is worthy. Those who travel this road are like the one leper that returned to tell Jesus, I want to say thank you for healing me!

ROAD TO SERVICE: Every believer who expects to get to Zion must find the road to service. It's not enough just to be saved and show gratitude but we must serve God through serving our fellow man. Whenever the poor are surrounding us, we should show the love of God ministering to the poor. Whenever there is a lonely heart we must serve that empty soul. This is the Road traveled by the Good Samaritan on the Jericho Road. He helped a stranger without thinking of himself.

No wonder the song writer declared, "If I can help somebody as I pass along, then my living shall not be in vain. If I show somebody that he's traveling wrong, then my living shall not be in vain."

The Road To Zion Must Lead to Zion's Hill

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that in order to get home, we must take the right road.

An old man took his small grandson on a trip to what grandpa called home. The little boy fascinated with the fine highway. He loved count to lines in the highway and see the pretty cars as the raced by. After a few hours however, his grandpa turned on an old dirt road. Gone was the hard pavement, brisk traffic and brightly colored lines. The road was bumpy. It wound through trees and went over hills. At some points it was filled it pot holes. The little boy asked his grandfather, "Why did we have to take this ugly road with all of these mud holes. Nobody is on this road? Why could we stay on the pretty road with all of the cars" The grandpa looked over at his grandson and said, "Look up on the top of that hill, that's we're going. There's only one road up that old house and it goes straight up that hill. The highway is pretty, but it won't take me where I'm trying to go!"

We can't get home without taking one final road. It is a road that leads to salvation.

The road to glory begins in repentenance, gratitude, praise and service, but it ends at Zion's Hill.

When David talked about Zion's Hill he referred to a hill in the Southern Region of Israel. But when a believer talks about finding the road to Zion's hill he's talking about a little hill outside of Jerusalem that became famous not for its geography but because it became the cross road.

No believer can get to the New Zion in glory, without traveling the road to Zion's Hill!

On Zion's Hill there is a sign post to eternity that points the direction glory.

No wonder the song writer proclaimed, "On a hill far away, stood an old rugged cross, the emblem of suffering shame. And I love that old cross where the dearest of and best, for a world of lost sinners was slain. So I cherish the old rugged cross, till my trophies at last I lay down. I will cling to the old rugged cross and exchange it some day for a crown!"

Show me the way to Zion! For at the cross there is:

Strength for those who are weak; Victory for those who have failed!

Love for those who have been hated; Comfort for those who feel lonely!

Cheer for those who are discouraged; Peace for those who feel troubled!

Forgiveness for those who have sinned; Salvation for those who were lost!

Show me the way to the cross on Zion's Hill for it, "was there by faith I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!"

On Zion's Hill, Jesus, Mary's baby, died for my sins and your sins

On Zion's Hill, Jesus, died to reconcile lost mankind!

On Zion's Hill, Jesus, the Son of the living God, died!

But Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

He blazed a road through Bethlehem!

He walked a road through Jerusalem!

He walked the road to Zion's Hill

He showed us the road to Zion and every saint is on that road.

That's why we love to sing, "Come we that Love the Lord, that never knew our God, join in the song of sweet accord, join in the song of sweet accord and thus surround the throne of God, in the beautiful city of God.

"We're marching to Zion... where every day will be Sunday!

"We're marching to Zion...where it's always howdy and never goodbye!

"We're marching to Zion...a land where we'll never grow!

The beautiful city of God!

My Soul Doth Magnify The Lord

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 13, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "And Mary said, My Soul doth magnify the Lord!" Luke 1:46

Introduction

Have you ever received an honor which you felt you didn't deserve? Often we are praised for accomplishments and achievements with the accolades of friends and associates. We are honored with plaques, certificates, gifts and praises whenever significant activities are noted by our contemporaries. There are times however, when we feel unworthy of the praises received. A movie star that receives an Oscar or a Grammy is quick to thank a team of people from directors and producers to wives and husbands, writers and agents. They know their accomplishment, while noted by millions as extraordinary, is really the handiwork of unseen persons behind them that are responsible for their success. Many were nobodies who became "somebodies" because of the investment of time and talent of others to catapult them into the limelight. Those who have risen from humble beginnings to great heights are reluctant to receive honors. They are humbled by them because they, more than anyone else, realize their dependence on others. They feel the honor they receive is a tribute to all of those who contributed to their success rather than a tribute to their individual greatness.

Humility is a virtue that is praised in scripture. It's the ability to avoid getting caught up in the praises of the moment, but know what truly counts. Marian Anderson, the Black American contralto who deserved and won worldwide acclaim as a concert soloist, didn't simply grow great; she grew great simply. In spite of her fame, she remained the same gracious, approachable lady — never one to "put on airs" — a beautiful model of humility. A reporter, while interviewing Miss Anderson, asked her to name the greatest moment in her life. The choice seemed difficult to others who were in the room that day, because she had many big moments.

Her conductor Arturo Toscanini announced, "A voice like hers comes once in a century." In 1955 she became the first Negro to sing with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York. The following year her autobiography, "My Lord, What a Morning," was published — a bestseller. In 1958 she became a United States delegate to the United Nations. On several occasions during her illustrious career, she received medals from various countries around the world. There was that memorable time she gave a private concert at the White House for the Roosevelts and the King and Queen of England. Her hometown, Philadelphia, had, on one occasion, awarded her the $10,000 Bok Award as the person who had done the most for that city.

In 1963 she was awarded the coveted Presidential Medal of Freedom. There was that Easter Sunday in Washington D.C. when she stood beneath the Lincoln statue and sang for a crowd of 75,000, which included Cabinet members, Supreme Court justices, and most members of Congress. Which of those big moments did she choose? None of them. Miss Anderson quietly told the reporter that the greatest moment of her life was the day she went home and told her mother she wouldn't have to take in washing anymore. That's humility personified.

Those who are humble recognize the fragility of their life situation. They do not brag or boast but live in a continuous state of gratitude. That's important because it means they always feel unworthy of honor because they are not the sole source of their accomplishment.

As Christians, we recognize that our blessings come from God. It is He who gives us our power and strength. We magnify him! We glorify him...because he's worthy to be praised. !

Exposition

This text focuses on Mary as she sings a song magnifying and glorifying God.

Mary was about 15 years old at the time she learned she was pregnant with the Christ Child. She was awed and afraid at learning that God had selected her and that she was already pregnant. "How can this be?" She asked. He answered her that the Holy Spirit would come upon her so that the child's conception would be divine. And then he gave Mary the added confirmation that nothing is impossible with God by telling her that her kinswoman Elizabeth who was old and barren was also pregnant.

When she saw her kinswoman Elizabeth, her soul leaped with joy. It was a confirmation of what the angel had said. She immediately recognized that God was about to change the course of all human history; the most important three decades in all of time were about to begin.

She was awed that God would occupy himself with two obscure, humble women- one old and barren, one young and virginal.

Mary was so moved by this vision of God, the lover of the lowly, that she broke out in song—a song that has come to be known as the Magnificat. "My soul magnifies the Lord, and my spirit rejoices in God my Savior, for he has regarded the low estate of his handmaiden. For behold, henceforth all generations will call me blessed; for He who is mighty has done great things for me, and holy is His name.

Mary's song was a song of humility. It was an expression of her feeling of unworthiness for her selection and her appreciation that God would even notice her.

The passage makes three distinct expressions. First, there is Mary's expression of what she feels in her heart (verses 46 and 47), namely joy. Second, she mentions what God has done specifically for her as an individual, (verses 48 and 49): regarded her lowliness; did great things for her and thus gave her an enduring reputation for blessedness. Third, she described the goodness of God in general. This general character of God accounts for why He has treated her the way He has in her lowliness and thus leads her to rejoice and magnify the Lord.

The goodness of God is the overriding reason that she desires to magnify and intensify the focus of her praise toward God. His goodness was simply too great for ordinary praise.

He Considers the Lowly

Today there are many people who believe that God does not consider the lowly. They are stricken with a multitude of complexes that force them to assume that their lack of status and power relegates them to the corner of God's consideration.

Mary and Joseph were poor people. They lived in a city called Nazereth, it was the metropolitan equivalent of a one red light town that barely gets a spot on the map. Their region of the country was not known for anything great. Neither had any great personalities hailed from the area. Mary was a poor teenager, about 15 years old, who hadn't accomplished anything in life. She was not a great lady ofthe King's court or even the elder daughter of a great family. She was obscure.

That is why she was so overwhelmed that God selected her to serve as the surrogate mother for Jesus.

Why Me?

There are two times when believers ask the question why me? One is when tragedy comes to persons who have lived according to the word. The other is when an overwhelming good fortune comes to an obscure member of a great crowd.

When we reflect upon life, we can easily see that God has favored us in many ways.

We, who are the great grand sons and daughters of slaves and share croppers have been raised from the cotton fields to positions of power and influence.

We, who have built the roads, cooked the meals and served as nanny to millions, have been raised from the backyard basketball court to the Supreme Court from slaves and dejected men to congressmen.

Why me? Because the scripture record suggests that God has an unusual compassion for the underdog. He has demonstrated consideration for the persecuted and downtrodden, helping them overcome the odds to achieve lofty goals.

Mary's testimony could easily be the testimony of any person who has managed to keep his head above water in the troubling seas of life:

Verse 50: "He has mercy on those who fear Him" Mercy is God's grace. It is an undeserved favor received by individuals who should have received worse. When we consider what we deserve from God, based upon our obedience, loyalty and respect for him, we immediately recognize that we should not receive anything. We have fallen short. Yet because we respect God and fear him he has shown mercy upon us and blessed us in ways we do not deserve.

As Mary pondered the coming of the Christ Child she also looked at her own situation and praised God for having mercy on her, despite her short comings. Like Mary, we too are looking toward the coming of the Christ Child and in our hearts we are praising God for showing mercy on us.

Verse 52: "Exalted them of low degree." God takes the lowly and often exalts them to high position. Joseph was a prisoner in Egypt but was taken from prison and made the Minister of Agriculture in the Egyptian government because of the power of God. David was a shepherd boy, a singer of songs, whom God raised to be King of Israel. The bible is sprinkled with examples of how God has exalted the lowly and humble and lifted them to places of honor.

As Mary considered her life situation she could only praise God for selecting her because she was of such a low degree. Like Mary, we too must consider the lonely road we have traveled in this life. Some who were living on the streets now have a safe roof over their heads. Some have been blessed enough to own a house, a car and few creature comforts. Some have reasonable health and strength after years of battling sickness. When we think about the goodness of God, we like Mary conclude, "My soul doth magnify the Lord!"

Verse 53: "He has filled the hungry with good things." The word of God indicates that those who live righteously will never be forsaken. God puts food on the table in miraculous ways. He has a way of opening doors, making opportunities available that did not exist. Whether it is a soup chicken, the homeless ministry of a church or a seven course meal in the luxury of your own home, God will make a way for the faithful. That's why Psalm 37:25 says, "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

When Mary considered the approaching birth of the Son of God, she was overwhelmed with the great gift that God was giving those hungry from salvation...the bread of heaven. Like Mary, we too are overwhelmed and we sing the old hymn, "Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

Mary's soul magnified the Lord because the birth of the Christ child demonstrated in her life that God was mindful of her and had considered her low estate.

Magnify the Lord!

Finally, we must consider Mary's statement that her "soul" magnifies God. How does a soul magnify God?

When a mouth magnifies God there are words of praise. There are sounds and words that expressed the glory of God. When a mouth starts magnifying God it may speak. It may shout. It might sing or scream. A mouth that magnifies praises God intensely. That's what David had in mind in Psalm 109:30 "I will greatly praise the LORD with my mouth; yea, I will praise him among the multitude." It is easy to see how a mouth could magnify the Lord, but how does a soul magnify the Lord?

When hands magnify the Lord they come together in applause, join together in prayer, and link together in service. Hands that magnify God help others. They are the hands that feed the poor, help the needy and extend God's mercy to everyone in need. These same hands join together in prayer, touching and agreeing to ask God's grace and mercy on the masses. These are the hands that are lifted up in praise to God for his power! These are the "holy hands" of 1Timothy 2:8 lifted up to an all powerful God.. These hands clap! These hands wave! These hands are excited about the goodness of God! It is easy to see how a hand can magnify the Lord, but how does a soul magnify the Lord?

If feet had to magnify the Lord, they would walk the lonely trails of life, "carrying the sunshine where darkness is rife." If feet had to magnify the Lord, they would walk into the cesspools of poverty and despair to bring a message of hope. When feet magnify the Lord, they go! They go when they feel like it and they go when they don't feel it! Feet that magnify the Lord are propelled by a sense of mission to "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost!" But how does a soul, magnify the Lord?

If eyes magnified the Lord, they look for him in every hidden corner of the earth. The eye that magnifies the Lord looks beyond any tragedy and sees the glory of God. David, surrounded by despair said in Psalm 121, "I will lift up mine eyes until the hills from wench cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth." When eyes magnify the Lord, they see his glory even in the worst of situations. That's why the song writer wrote "Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of Lord...his truth is marching on!

But what happens when a soul magnifies the Lord?

The soul is the essence of all that we are. The soul is our inner spirit, our virtual command center that sends out signals to the rest of us!

When a soul magnifies the Lord, it tells the left hand to meet the right and clap in praise of God!

When a soul magnifies the Lord, it tells the tongue, the lips and the voice box to join together and lift him up!

When a soul magnifies God it tells the left foot and the right foot to come together in a mighty cadence that does the work of God!

When a soul magnifies God, it shows a vision of the power of God to the eyes so they testify, "I see the stars. I hear the rolling thunder and marvel at the power thou hast displayed."

When a soul magnifies God, everything it controls begins to praise God. No wonder the song writer declared "then sings my soul, my savior God to thee. How great thou art! How great thou art!"

My soul magnifies the Lord because only he can take a:

Drunkard and make him sober; LIAR and fill him with truth

THIEF and make him an honest man; PERVERT and make him pure again!

SAD HEART and make it glad again; WEAK SPIRIT and give it new strength

LOST SOUL and him find his way; BROKEN HEART and make it whole again!

My soul magnifies God because only he loved the world enough to send his only begotten son into it!

My soul magnifies God because of a Little town called Bethlehem and a baby wrapped in swaddling clothes.

My soul magnifies God because one day out on Calvary, Jesus...

Mary's Baby! The Rock of My Salvation

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, Fountain of my joy!

Died on an old rugged cross!

My soul magnifies the Lord because, Early Sunday morning he arose from the Grave, with all power in his hands!

I don't know about you but, My soul!

My soul!

My soul...magnifies the Lord!

The Gift that Keeps On Giving

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 20, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger Luke 2:12; "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John 3:16

Introduction

Have you tried to buy a gift that would last? One of the great truths of holiday gift giving is that many of the gifts that are received won't last the length of the season. Many parents have been frustrated to see an expensive toy laying dormant because it became inoperable just hours after it was given. It was expensive but it didn't last. The doll looked so pretty in the box, but she now needs a paramedic to restitch her arm. It was pretty, but it didn't last. The excitement and appreciation that a gift offers is often directly related to its usefulness and longevity. That is why many people are trying to give gifts that last beyond the moment but bring joy and happiness for longer periods of time. Those who give gifts like to know that their gifts are appreciated and bring continued happiness and fulfillment long after the moment of giving has passed. Everyone appears to be searching for the one gift that keeps on giving, all through the year.

Recent news accounts of two men in Otwatanna Minnesota shines a humorous light on the subject. Roy Collette and his brother-in-law have been exchanging the same pair of pants as a Christmas present for 11 years - and each time the package gets harder to open. This year the pants came wrapped in a car mashed into a 3-foot cube. The trousers are in the glove compartment of a 1974 Gremlin. Now Collette's plotting his revenge—if he can get them out.

It all started when Collette received a pair of moleskin trousers from his brother-in-law, Larry Kunkel of Bensenville, Ill. He did not like them so he wrapped them up and gave them back to Kunkel for Christmas the next year.

The friendly exchange continued routinely until Collette twisted the pants tightly, stuffed them into a 3-foot-long, 1-inch wide tube and gave them back to Kunkel. The next Christmas, Kunkel compressed the pants into a 7-inch square, wrapped them with wire and gave the "bale" to Collette. Not to be outdone, the next year Collette put the pants into a 2-foot-square crate filled with stones, nailed it shut, banded it with steel and gave the trusty trousers back to Kunkel.

One year Kunkel had the pants mounted inside an insulated window that had a 20-year guarantee and shipped them off to Collette. Collette broke the glass, recovered the trousers, stuffed them into a 5-inch coffee can and soldered it shut. The can was put in a 5-gallon container filled with concrete and reinforcing rods and given to Kunkel the following Christmas. Two years ago, Kunkel installed the pants in a 225-pound homemade steel ashtray made from 8-inch steel casings and etched Collette's name on the side. Collette retrieved the pants a cutting torch.

Last Christmas, Collette found a 600-pound safe and decorated it with red and green stripes, put the pants inside and welded the safe shut. The safe was then shipped to Kunkel.

Last week, the pants were trucked to Owatonna, 55 miles south of Minneapolis, in a drab green, 3-foot cube that once was a car with 95,000 miles on it. A note attached to the 2,000-pound scrunched car advised Collette that the pants were inside the glove compartment. They keep giving each other the same pair of pants. The gift just keeps coming back.

Others, more seriously, try to make a lasting impression. They want to give a gift that will be around later. Many give to churches and charitable organizations by setting up endowments and annuities that will fund scholarships or make contributions toward their favorite programs long after the fanfare of the original gift has diminished.

Even merchants have adopted the idea. In November of 1998 Wal-Mart and Sam's began issuing a merchandise gift card valued at $5 to $1,000. A person receives the card as a gift and can use it like a credit card until the amount is gone. The best part? The card is renewable. In the mind of the Wal-mart marketing experts, it's a gift that keeps on giving!

What if we received a gift from God? Would it last? Would it stop working as soon as the batteries run down? Or would it keep on giving?

As Christians, we celebrate the birth of the Christ Child because it reminds us of the gift that God gave the world that day in Bethlehem. Though the angels that announced the birth are no longer seen. The shepherds have long since gone. Though the birth site itself is just a tourist attraction. The gift of the little baby, wrapped in swaddling clothes is a gift that keeps on giving!

Exposition

This text focuses on Luke's account of the birth of the Christ child, wrapped in swaddling clothes, God's gift to the world.

Mary and Joseph had been told of the birth of Christ by an angel. They knew his birth was special. More than simply special his birth would be God's gift to a troubled world. It was his way of reconciling a distant world to a loving father.

The gift of the Christ Child was a sign from God that he still loved the world enough to allow a part of himself to assume human form and absorb the punishment for their sins.

The gift of this child was doubly significant because he would be the first of the millions that would come after him that would reflect the hope, love and passion for humanity that the Christ Child would reflect as a man.

Through disciples and believers over the centuries that gift God gave in Bethlehem would continue to be given to people of every generation, nationality and color.

The message of peace and hope would be given repeatedly as others echoed his words of love and reconciliation.

The message they would echo would be the same message of John 3:16. That God loves the world. He loved it so much that he sent his only son for a ransom to redeem the lost to himself.

This message of hope is what the world waited to hear and still desires to this day. It is the message that despite man's shortcomings and failures that God is forgiving for all who are truly repentant and turn to him for mercy.

God's "gift" is available to everyone. It will never need to be returned because it "fits" everyone and is complementary to all colors. Scripture tells us that "...when that which is perfect is come, that which is in part shall be done away." That which is perfect came to us in the form of Jesus Christ and from that day to this, He has remained a "Giver."

Giving Meaningful Gifts

Today as believers we should strive to reflect the spirit of that night in Bethlehem as we give those we love a few meaningful gifts that "keep on giving."

THE GIFT OF TIME: It cannot be placed under a Christmas tree but the best gift a parent can give to a child is quality time. Watches break. Clocks ultimately run down. However, a parent that spends quality time with children gives a gift that keeps on giving. It's the decision to participate in the school life of our children, beyond just their grades. It's the commitment to join the P.T.A., attend school programs, cheer for them as they perform, exchange ideas and dreams and share planned quality time activities as a family. For some it would be easier to give money. However the gift of time, is a gift that keeps on giving!

THE GIFT OF UNDERSTANDING AND COMPASSION: Millions of families across our nation are torn apart because of misunderstandings and a lack of compassion and concern. The Christmas trees of such families will be filled with thousands of gifts except the one gift needed most: Understanding and compassion. Consider the little boy who sat sadly on Christmas morning. The tree was decorated brightly and there were toys everywhere including a computer, computer games, a play station, a bicycle and many other gifts. He was still sad. When prompted for the reason by his mother the boy responded. "I didn't get what I wanted." Angry the mother yelled, "What more can you want?" "I wanted you and daddy to stop arguing and fighting. I wanted us to be a family again." -The sad little boy would have traded all of the gifts under his tree for the gift of understanding, compassionate and loving parents. It's a gift that keeps on giving!

GIFT OF A RELIGIOUS UPBRINGING: No one should underestimate the value of a religious, God-fearing home. It is a very special gift. Many today have been able to endure difficult times and experiences because of truths they were taught in a God-fearing home. It was at Papa's house that you learned to say your prayer's at night. It was at mama's knee that you learned to give thanks for everything. It was in that religious home that you learned how to lean and depend on Jesus. Yes, it was in that God fearing home of your youth that you found out that if you trust God, he will provide. Parents who bring their children to church, give them a gift that will be with them all of their lives. Those who teach their children the fear of God and respect of others, give them a gift that will help them as they travel life's stormy paths. Give them the knowledge of God and you give them a gift that keeps on giving.

The Gift That Keeps on giving!

Finally brothers and sisters we must consider that while there are many kinds of gifts we give each other, God has given each of us the gift of the Holy Spirit.

It is God's spirit that moves and directs us each day. We are blessed so that we can be a blessing to others. We are helped so we can help others. We are encouraged so we can encourage others. We are fed so we can feed others.

The Holy Spirit is the power of God moving within us, it is a gift, given by a loving God.

When God looked down on the pitiful state of the world's affairs:

He saw Scribes not talking to Pharisees. He saw Jews not talking to Gentiles!

He saw Romans not talking to Greeks. He saw the upper class not talking to the lower class!

He saw the healthy not dealing with lepers. He saw the learning making fun of the unlearned!

He saw the poor scrapping for food, while the rich threw food in the trash!

He saw the innocent crucified and fed to the lions, for the sport of blood thirsty mobs.

He saw that the world seemed to be in disarray, everybody had become someone else's enemy

He decided that it was time for him to make a peace offering among men. It was time to give mankind a gift.

Sometimes a gift is a peace offering. When Jacob had wronged his bother Esau, he sent him a gift to show his desire to bring peace.

Sometimes a gift is a sign of thanksgiving. When Noah had been on the ark for over a year. When he touched the ground, he built an altar to say, "Thank you Lord for being so good to me!"

Sometimes a gift is a sign of admiration. When the Queen of Sheba came to visit Solomon. She brought him gifts from the heart of Africa. Her gift demonstrated her admiration for his great wisdom.

But what does God give the world when he wants to give the people a gift? He can't go to the shopping mall of creation and buy something and stick it under a tree.

Can't you hear God in your imagination, trying to make a decision!

"I could give them the stars, but soon the stars would stop twinkling!"

"I could give them the moon, but after awhile, the moon would cease to shine!"

"I could give them the warmth of a summer day, but summers last only for short and then comes the fall!"

"I could give them silver and gold, but there will come a time when they will lose their value!"

"I could set them afloat on the calm seas of life!" But there will come a time when storms will rise!

"I want to give them a gift that will be with them always, even until the end of the world!

"I want to give them a give that will give them:

STRENGTH when they are feeling a little weak; COMFORT when they are feeling all alone!

VICTORY after they have suffered a defeat; HOPE when all hope is gone!

LIFTED HEAD when they are bowed down low; SIGHT when they can't see their way!

What kind of Gift can God give? John gave us the decision:"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!"

He gave the gift that keeps on giving!

He was born in a manger, but he kept on giving!

He was wounded for our transgressions, but he kept on giving!

He was bruised for our iniquities, but he kept on giving!

They whipped him and tried him all night long, but he kept on giving!

They put a crown of thorns on his head, but he kept on giving!

Thry hung him up high and stretched him out wide, but he kept on giving!

He died but even in death, he kept on giving!

Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

I'm so glad that God gave me a gift that keeps on giving!

I get a blessing every day because....

He keeps on giving!

And When They Had Seen It

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 27, 1998

SCRIPTURE: 'And when they had seen it they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child." Luke 2:20

Introduction

What did you get for Christmas? That's one of the first questions that is asked by anyone who knows you at Christmas time. Depending on who is answering the question, the answer varies. Children who are asked that question instantly begin to rattle off a litany of gift varieties that range from baby dolls to Play Stations. Some were immensely blessed at Christmas. They received clothes and toys. As we relate to others what we received smiles come to our faces. Our countenance lights up. There is a certain brilliance about us that strains our sense of humility to the limit. We want to share our excitement about our model cars, video games, designer clothes, games and other gadgets. We are just bubbling over with joy telling anyone who asks. We stayed up half the night pondering what we would find and now that we know, we simply must tell somebody. Once we tore the wrapping paper away, shredded boxes to bits and waded through a sea of paper and cartons, we actually saw the gift itself. If there was more than one box we probably went from one box to the next jumping and shouting. Our faces reflected our joy! We finally saw it!

After we have seen it, the next best part of the Christmas gift is to tell others what we received. Telephones are busy on Christmas day. Whether it is across town or across the world, we feel the need to share the joy of our gift with someone else. You called him, and he asked, "What did you get?" He called her and she asked, "What did you get?" Then came the answer. You were so excited that your listener could feel the joy bubbling through the phone receiver. Half the joy of receiving a fine gift is the ability to tell somebody what you received. It would be no fun at all if you received it then could tell no one. No one answers the question, "What did you get?" with the answer "I can't tell you, it's a secret!" Sometimes we are so excited we tell others what we have received before we are asked. "Aren't you going to ask me what I received?" That's what our faces say when no one asks.

If you received a gift from God, what would you do? Would you peek at it and then keep it to yourself? Would you remain silent and tell absolutely no one what you received? Christmas Day marks the day God gave the world a gift. Many people have heard the good news and received the gift, but say nothing about it. In fact, many people claim that they have the gift of the Holy Spirit, Salvation and special ministry gifts, but don't seem too excited about it!

As Christians, we are grateful that the world has been given the gift of the hope through Jesus Christ.. We are also glad that we have received the gift of God's spirit and eternal hope in our personal lives. It is exciting and we want the world to know the good thing that God has done!

Exposition

This text focuses on Luke as he details what the shepherds did after they experienced the birth of the Christ child.

The shepherds that were watching their flocks by night were given the opportunity to experience the birth of the Savior first hand. After going to the manger and observing the Christ Child the shepherds had concluded their Christmas experience. They were finished. It was over. Luke details the aftermath of that experience.

"And when they had seen it" says the scripture, they told everyone they saw everything they had seen and heard concerning the Christ child.

The shepherds responded by recognizing that it was truly a sign from God. They admit that it was the Lord that sent this message to them in verse 15. The angels were simply the messengers of God, and were not to be worshiped themselves.

Secondly, the shepherds hurried off. They didn't wait around until daybreak or until they made sure everything was secured. This was more important than their daily earthly concerns. They interrupted everything they were doing and starting waking up the sleeping, making unpopular announcements at strange hours of the night.

They must have ran through the streets, yelling and knocking on doors. The sight they saw had a tremendous effect on them.

Finally, the shepherds spread the word. They saw Jesus, and recognized that what the angels had said about him was true, however ironic. Jesus, the baby, was truly the Savior and the Christ and Lord. Even though they didn't see him do miracles or didn't fully understand what this all meant, the shepherds trusted that what the angels said was true, and they acted on that trust and told others.

Luke notes that those who received the shepherd's message were not overwhelmed with joy. In fact, he noted in verse 18 that the best response the shepherds were able to get from anyone they told the message to was "wonder." The verse says "And all that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds."

They told of the angels, and the people wondered!

They told of seeing the Christ child, and the people wondered!

They told of their excitement, and the people wondered!

They told of God's miraculous presence, and all the people wondered!

The people wondered but they did very little else. Mary herself meditated upon the experience and rolled it over in her mind. Luke notes that she was so impressed with the greatness of the moment that she simply soaked them in and "pondered them in her heart."

After the shepherds told everyone they saw, they gave a demonstration, as to what others should do... "They returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told to them."

When Christmas ended, they praised God!

When Christmas was over, they glorified him in gratitude!

When Christmas was ended, they returned but they returned different, more radiant than they were before!

After Christmas, What next?

Now that Christmas is over there are literally millions who are completely lost. They are let down because they have or have not received what they hoped for at Christmas?

What did you get for Christmas?

SHOES THAT WALK TOWARD GOD: Many people received new shoes for Christmas, but it would be even better if those shoes are the ones they plan to use to go to God's house or to do his work among your neighbor's shoes. What kind of shoes were they? Shoes that look good? Wear well? Do they make us stand out as people of prestige and worth. Many received shoes that are party shoes. Others received running shoes, but they won't take them toward God. You received a great gift if you received inspiration to walk toward God after Christmas.

FOOD FOR MY SOUL: There is plenty of food at Christmas time. Turkey, duck, chicken and dressing and cranberry sauce. The menu items are tasty sounding, fattening, diet busting and good! What about the cakes and the strawberry pie, potato pie, chocolate pie, pecan pie and lemon pie? They were food for our tummies. While many of us ate, there were some that were so busy eating that they didn't even have a family prayer before they ate. The best that some gave is "Good food, good meat, good Lord, let's eat!" Yet, the story of Christ's birth and the hope that his presence among us brings, is food for our soul. The thought of preparing food for the souls as well as food for the tummies, slipped by the minds of some. You received a great gift for Christmas, if you were moved to a greater appreciation for the love of God for all humanity. That love is food for your soul!

THINGS TO DO: Many gifts received at Christmas time represent things to keep us busy. Whether it's the child that plays house with baby dolls and play houses or the boy that is glued silently to his play station and joy stick. Whether its the father who is enjoying his new television set or the mother who is kept busy trying out every one of her new appliances, many have received gifts that will give them many things to do. Yet, the birth of Christ gives us some meaningful things to do and occupy our time, in addition to our new video player, dishwasher or automobile. Among the things we have to do is to share the love of God with others in ways that are unique and meaningful. You received a great gift for Christmas, if some how you were motivated to help the poor and needy; to lift spirits that are broken; or to bring joy to someone who is struggling, you received the gift of useful spiritually directed things to do.

The week After Christmas

It's how we celebrate the week after Christmas that really tells our Christmas story. After Christmas the excitement is gone! After Christmas, the real world sets in. It's best characterized by this anonymous little poem:

'Twas the Week After Christmas

'Twas the week after Christmas and all through the house
The new computer was silent - the dog ate the mouse.
The kids like their toys, but before they can play
We need fifty more batteries (size double A).
We all stuffed our faces, our tummies still ache,
And we're still a bit tipsy from Grandma's fruitcake.
The floor's full of needles, the tree's nearly bare,
And there's tinsel embedded in everyone's hair.
Then what to my terrified eyes should appear,
But the bills for the things that I purchased this year.
I tried to control all my spending, and yet
The total could pay off the national debt!
The weather was awful, outside there's a gale -
And then I remember the post-Christmas sales.
Those clearance-sale bargains are starting to call -
So it's dash away! Dash away! Out to the mall!
On Visa! On Mastercard! Sears and Discover!
There's American Express and few limited others!
There's pushing and shoving, there's screaming and yelling -
We're lined up for miles to buy what they're selling.
There's boxes and bargains, but no Christmas cheer-
I stop and I ask myself "Why am I here?"
Then I saw a manger scene high on a shelf -
And I cried when I saw it in spite of myself.
I'd forgotten it's not about clothing or toys
The child on the hay is our reason for joy.
We're so unworthy, yet God sent His Son
To offer Himself for the things we had done.
The meaning of Christmas is God coming near -
The holiday's gone, but the Gift is still here!

After Christmas we should emulate the joy of the shepherds. They experienced their joy at the cradle, today we should do they same because we have both the cradle and the cross!

We have the cradle that tells the world that hope is not diminished!

We have the cross that tells the world that redemption is finished!

We have the cradle that reminds us that God heard us and came!

We have the cross that tells the world that God felt our misery and absorbed our pain!

The cradle and the cross, what a story to tell!

After Christmas, let's tell it, everywhere we go!

No. 736-New Year

Pass The Peas

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 3, 1998

SCRIPTURE: " Praise waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion: and unto thee shall the vow be performed. O thou that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come. Iniquities prevail against me: as for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away. Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple. Psalm 65:1-4

Introduction

When you have finished one year and begin a new one, what can you do for good luck in the year to come? Our society has a variety of good luck rituals. These are the things we do to bring ourselves good look. The gambler thinks blowing on the dice will bring him luck. Someone else wants to rub the hand of a "lucky" person to get some of their luck rubbed onto themselves. There are others who wear rabbit's feet t on key chains for good luck. Some even wear dimes around their ankles.

Looking for luck is universal. On New Year's day it is said that a helping of black eyed peas on the plate guarantees good luck. Many people laugh at the custom, but serve the peas anyway, just in case there's some truth in the old saying. The African-American community celebrates Jubilee Day on January 1st. It is the day that freed slaves in rebelling states on January 1, 1863. To commemorate jubilee day Black folks eat the food of slavery: Hog Jowls, Chitterlings, Hog Maws and Tripe. It is said that those who forget where they came from and choose not to eat the memorial meal on Jubilee Day would have bad luck and be returned to slavery.

Depending on cultural backgrounds, different foods come with a new year: cabbage, herring, honey, sardines, and salt are seen as good luck signs in some areas of the country. The Japanese eat long noodles. The Greeks bake a special bread. In Spain, the custom is to eat 12 individual grapes in the 12 seconds leading up to the new year. Anthropologists say that eating certain foods to change one's fortune dates back to ancient Babylonia.

Looking for luck, even those who claim not to believe, say "pass the peas!"

While some spend their time looking for luck by eating peas, dashing salt and killing hogs, there are others who don't count on luck, they look to God for their blessings. He was the source of the blessings in years past and will be the source of blessings in the years to come.

Peas or no peas, God can bless those who love him!

Peas or no peas, God delivers for the faithful who call on him!

Peas or no peas, God continues to open doors for those who trust him!

As Christians we are overjoyed as we face the new year. We enter it with optimism because the God we serve is all powerful. He blessed us immensely last year, and he can do the same in the year to come. The good thing about our God is he doesn't decide whether to bless us depending on whether or not we ate black eyed peas!

Exposition

This passage of scripture focuses on the children of Israel as they gave thanks to God for a great year and they look forward to renewed blessings in the year to come.

This passage is written at the conclusion of a great year. The people assembled themselves and looked back at the wondrous way God blessed them in the previous year and gave thanks. Success in biblical times depended heavily upon the rains. If there were no rains, then no matter how hard they worked their efforts would be in vain. There had been prosperity. The rains had come, poured down, as it were, from heaven.

At the end of the season, therefore, they assembled to consider the year ahead.

The meaning of the passage is associated with five words all of which begin with a "P" within the first four verses.

Praise (v1) waiteth for thee. As the people looked forward to the coming of a new season God is pictured as the future coming toward them, armed with good things. The people are pictured as standing waiting silently for the great things God was preparing,. They were waiting to shower him with praise for his wonderful works. They did not perceive themselves as walking into an unknown in this passage. They saw God, whom they knew very well, coming toward them and they were ready to spend the year praising him for everything that comes.

Performed (v1). As they looked to future they remembered the vows they made during the difficult times of the preceding year. They remembered the silent promises they made to God in their moments of frustration. They remembered the decision to break bad habits, tear down false altars and remain true to God. Thus, they approached the new season with a renewed commitment to keep their promises to God and to live up to their various pledges.

Prayer. (v2) They looked to the new season with a resolve to be prayerful. Their united voice said, "thou that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come." They looked into the unknown with assurance that no matter what it brings, that talking to God could enable them to face any circumstance. They resolved to enter the new season with a prayerful spirit. They believed that God heard the prayers of his people and thus they looked at the new year with courage and hope, understanding that prayer can change anything as long as God is on the throne.

Prevailing (v3) Despite their optimism the people were aware that every new season brings with it certain inequities and iniquities. Inequities being those things that come upon us unjustly and iniquities being those things that we bring upon ourselves. The word "prevail" seems to suggest that our iniquities and faults will overpower us and be victorious at first reading. However, the Hebrew translation of the word prevail is "gabar" which means strong, mighty and powerful. It does not mean victorious as in the English. It means troubles may give believers a hard fight as they always do, but picking a hard fight and winning a hard fight are not one and the same.

Purge (v3). "As for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away." This answers the questions raised about what will happen to the strong inequities and iniquities that will come against believers. "Thou shalt purge them away." The people had no doubt there would be short comings and flaws in their collective character that would surface, but they were assured that the grace of God would purge them away. They were confident that in the new season there would be errors, misjudgments and critical mistakes made but the people concluded that "thou shalt purge them away."

Collectively these five "P's" demonstrated the people's attitude as they entered into a new year. It was an attitude of optimism dipped in gratitude. It was an attitude of expectation, for they looked forward to the great things that lay ahead and were waiting to give God the praise and the glory!

Three P's that Hinder Progress

As believers look to the new season we are faced with a few "P's" in our own experience. They represent some attitudes and feelings that will hinder us in the new season. They include:

PROCRASTINATION: Nothing hinders progress more than procrastination. We procrastinate when we set goals and keep putting off every step necessary to achieve them. There can be no progress unless we first decide to move toward our destiny. One writer put it this way, "the best way to start realizing your dreams is to wake up!" Millions of dreams are lost each year because of procrastination. The procrastinator is the person who has the wisdom to know what to do, the skill to know how to do it, but lacks the will power to get up and do it! Surrounded by frogs, Pharaoh was given an opportunity to obey God and remove them immediately or wait. He said he would do it tomorrow! Thus he spent another night with the frogs. (Exodus 8:10). Putting things off until tomorrow is condemned in scripture. Proverbs 27:1 says, "Boast not thyself of tomorrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth." If there is a "P" we should leave behind it should be procrastination.

PAST: Too many try to march into the future dragging the past with them. As Israel moved toward their promised land, their month long march became a 40 year journey because they tried to bring the past with them. They constantly brought up life in Egypt and God let them wander until there was no one left to bring up the past. Today there are millions who want to begin a new year but they keep dragging up Egypt. Family disputes, marital problems, financial difficulties, which caused problems in the past are dead weight if they are dragged into the future. "..forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Philippians 3:13-14.

PAIN: No year finishes without families experiencing some level of pain. Whether it is sickness, death, finances or disappointments, every person experiences some pain in his life. Yet we should not carry the fear of pain or the memory of painful moments into the future. They have a tendency to absorb us and destroy us. Lot's wife tried to walk forward. She was given a chance to climb the mountain but the pain of loss possessions, lost dreams and acquaintances overwhelmed her and she stopped, turned and looked back and found herself completely absorbed in the pain of the moment and she was turned into a pillar of salt. Has there been a painful moment in your life in the past year? Carry the happy days into the new year, leave the pain behind! His there been a bitter experience? Leave it behind or it will drag you down. Psalm 55:22 says, "Cast thy burden upon the LORD, and he shall sustain thee: he shall never suffer the righteous to be moved."

Pass the Peas

Finally, as we consider the new year we must do as the children of Israel in Psalm 65. We must focus on the P's.

Like Israel we stand on the threshold of a brand new season. When we look back over the year that has passed we recognize that we've had some good days and we've had some bad days, but the Lord has showered down blessings on us that cannot be measured.

We need to approach the new year with some new P's. Not the pain, procrastination and focusing on the past that we have done in other times, but we need some new P's.

We need a positive attitude for the new year! This is the attitude that says nothing will stop me from achieving my goals, because "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me"

When Israel assembled itself at the beginning of the new season, the people looked back over the road they traveled but they looked forward with expectation of even greater things from God.

They didn't focus on the negative "P's" that would be out there: Problems, Prevarications, Perplexities, Pundits, and Power Hungry Pontificators.

They were not consumed by the pale painted pictures of the prophets of doom. Neither were they overwhelmed by the precise but profane presentations of pagan prognosticators.

They were not influenced at all by any negative feelings about the future. They simply kept their eyes on the P's. They came together at the first of the new season and talked about five P's that would bring them blessings.

Not black eyed peas!

Not purple hulled peas!

Not English Peas!

But five words that defined their expectations. Those same five words should guide every believer today.

They talked about the "P" of performance. If we do what God wants us to do. If we go where he wants us to go; there is a blessing coming our way. Can't you hear him saying in John 15:7 "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."

They talked about the "P" of prayer. We know that God is a prayer answering God. If you call on the Lord he will answer, bye and bye! There is power in prayer! There is strength in prayer! Prayer changes things!

They talked about the "P's of prevailing over temptation! Temptations come and temptation's go, but it doesn't matter what comes because the Lord won't allow those who trust him to be overtaken. Didn't the word say, in 1 Corinthians 10:13 "but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will, with the temptation, also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." The Lord will make a way!

The fourth "P" was praise. They praised God before the year began for what he was going to do! In essence they offered praise in January for February! They offered praise on the first Sunday in January for what would happen on the last Sunday in December.

We should praise the Lord because his:

Grace is always sufficient; Love is always abundant

Mercy is everlasting and; promises are sure!

We should praise the Lord for the burden he's going to lift off our shoulder!

We should praise the Lord for the hill he's going to help us to climb!

We should praise the Lord for the bills he's going to help us to pay!

We should praise the Lord for the job he's going to help us to find!

We should praise the Lord for the home he's going to help us to buy!

We should praise the Lord for the old man who's going finally to start acting like a husband!

We should praise the Lord for old lady who will finally want to become a wife!

For everything that God is going to do, we ought to praise the Lord!

Come here Hebrew boys, bring me that "P"-They were in the fiery furnace and God protected them! He will protect you and he will keep you. Psalm 27:5 says, "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock."

Come here widow woman, bring me that "P"-She was down to her last cup of meal and oil and God "Provided" for her every need.

Come here Paul, what did you tell the Philippians? "But my God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus!"

The last "P" was the "P" for purged. Even though the Lord blessed us last year.

We ought to be glad that our sins didn't follow us over into the new year, for they have been purged and made pure.

What can wash away my sin? What can make me whole again? Nothing but the blood of Jesus! Oh precious is the flow that makes me white as snow, no other fount I know, nothing but the blood of Jesus!

Jesus, the prized son of Palestine

Jesus, the epitome of perfection

Jesus, who is the Prince of Peace

Jesus died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

There is Honey in the Rock

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 10,1999

SCRIPTURE "He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the fields; and he made him to suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock" Deuteronomy 32:13

Introduction

Do you know someone who has become bitter over the years? Many are beginning the year by bringing the failed bitter attitudes of the past into the new year. Some failed in love and romance and the bitterness of the experience has made them intolerable, untrusting and void of compassion. Some have had friendships betrayed and have vowed never to trust again. Some have brought deep rooted feelings of dissatisfaction into the new year. Some feel used. Others feel neglected. Still, others feel unappreciated. Whatever the reason, there are many who are bringing their feelings of bitterness into the new year. Their bitterness has already robbed them of the rush of enthusiasm that usually comes with a new year as they conclude that the new year offers no new hope of changes, just business as usual.

Why does an otherwise optimistic person become pessimistic? Why does the hopeful lose hope? Why does the ambitious cease to struggle? .Those who are bitter were not always bitter. What made them so resentful? What made them so angry? What made them so exasperated? So indignant?

Those who have allowed life's frustrating experiences to make them bitter have lost their grasp on those things which make life sweet. The late Jackie Gleason, known for his role as Ralph on the 50's television comedy "The Honey Mooners" had a favorite line he used when he began every night of his famous "Jackie Gleason" show. A pretty woman walked on the stage and brought him a cup a coffee. Gleason looked at the woman and as she walked off the stage and said, "How sweet it is!" "How sweet it is" became the code words for recognizing and enjoying the goodness of life. Those who are bitter have lost the ability to say, "How sweet it is!" Their pessimism becomes so great that they can't see the good in anything. Even when they see a dog hit by a speeding 18 wheel truck get up and walk away on three legs, they complain because he's hopping around. They fail to understand that it is better to be a cripple dog hopping on three legs than a dead dog with all four legs sticking up straight in the air.

What makes life sweet, despite its difficulties? The goodness of God makes life sweet. God is the essence of sweetness. His presence makes even the most bitter circumstance, palatable at the least and unusually sweet at the most. Every new year brings with it the prospect of difficulties and troubles. That's why every Christian prepares to face the new year armed with faith in God. A strong faith in God is sweeter than honey according to Psalm 19:8. It is sweeter than honey to the mouth says Psalm 119:103. The scriptures are clear, trusting in God is what makes life sweet, despite any hardships that may come. Conversely, failing to trust in God can make life bitter and hard.

As Christians, we approach the new year as we do any year, with our hand in God's hand. When life throws bitterness our way, we respond with our faith in God. We go to the Rock that is higher than I, because there is honey in the Rock!

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as he writes a song about the future of Israel in the promised land.

The journey of the people from Egypt to the shores of the Jordan River had taken them 40 years. It was filled with difficulty but was sprinkled with demonstrations of God's goodness and special fondness for them. Although there were over 600,000 fighting men and nearly two million others, they were sustained with food and water throughout their 40 year journey. They wore basically the same clothes for the entire time. They existed without planting a single crop or building a single house. They existed for 40 years on the Grace of God alone.

This entire journey was supervised by Moses, who was often shown great visions by God. In the final month of his life, Moses was directed by the Lord to write a song about the future of the people in the promised land. He was told to teach this song to the people. Those who were unable to read it from the scrolls would at least know its words as they listened. Moses was commanded to teach it to the children of Israel . . . that this song may be a witness for Me (Deuteronomy 31:19).

This song was prophetic in that it told how some would let the prosperity of the new land turn them away from God. In the new land, some would lose their original commitment to God. Thus, Deuteronomy 31:20 says, " For when I shall have brought them into the land which I sware unto their fathers, that floweth with milk and honey; and they shall have eaten and filled themselves, and waxen fat; then will they turn unto other gods, and serve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant."

Moses' song addressed two venues of life. One that was sweet, sustained by the power of God himself and another that would appear to be sweet at the offset but would lure them away from God and end in their destruction. It dwells primarily on the future misery, distress, and troubles that would be Israel's downfall if it failed to trust in God's Word. This song showed how some of the people would allow the sweetness of their blessed arrangement to become bitter and sour. But, Moses also foretold of the blessings of prosperity and happiness which could be theirs through living in obedience to the Word of God (33:6-29). He sang of the joy they would know if they believed in God and kept their promises to him. He sang of the opportunities that would be available to them, if they remained faithful to God and resisted the temptations that were sure to come in the new land. He sang of the reward of the faithful.

Thus, the song that begins at Deuteronomy 32 begins by singing of the greatness of God. He is the Rock (unchangeable), His work is perfect (32:3-4; II Samuel 23:3; Psalms 31:3; Isaiah 17:10). The Almighty Rock, who will never forsake the faithful, is perfect . . . a God of truth and without iniquity (Deuteronomy 32:4). The Israelites were to daily consider His purpose for their lives and set their priorities in light of His will: They were to set their hearts to all the words which were commanded them by the words of this Law (32:46-47).

Moses' song told Israel, in no uncertain terms, that once in the promised land there would be some of them that would try to find their happiness from other sources. Those efforts will end in bitter experiences and failed efforts. Others, he said will remember that the real honey of life is in the Rock of their salvation.

Vinegar Experiences

Today there are many who have begun the new year with fresh enthusiasm and commitment. They are excited about living the Christian life and look forward to the sweetness of life. Too often however, that which should have been sweet becomes bitter. Great positive attitudes sour and values once held strongly begin to weaken. Satan has a way of working on us to turn what should be sweet into something bitter.

HOW GOOD FRUIT BECOMES BITTER: Galatians 5:22-23 says, "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, Meekness, temperance: against such there is no law. The fruit of the spirit, like any fruit, is susceptible to all of the influences of life that cause it to decay. A handful of plums placed in a jar will decay and will ferment to a point that what was once fresh plums becomes plum brandy. But when the plum brandy is allowed to ferment, a bacterium is introduced and what was a sweet tasting wine brandy becomes a bitter tasting vinegar. There are many who watch love change to bitterness of hate. They have observed as their peace became confusion. Instead of longsuffering, many now have short patience. Instead of gentleness some are now brash. Instead of goodness some have become basically bad. Some have lost their faith, they have become abrasive rather than meek and they have lost all semblance of temperate behavior.

Just about any fruit, because of its sugar content, can become a vinegar. The more sugar a fruit has the better. Vinegar is the final result of spoiled fruit. In the same sense, the most likely people to become bitter are those who once were sweet. The worst enemies are often those who were at one time best friends or lovers. The most pessimistic person is one who was once very optimistic. Bitterness breeds on those who have a quality of sweetness about themselves. Even the sweetest honey, if allowed to ferment can become vinegar.

Satan looks for an opportunity to take a usually sweet person and make him bitter. That's why 1 Pet 5:8 says, "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour:"

PRESERVING FRUIT KEEPS IT SWEET: There is a way to keep the fruit of the spirit sweet, free of contamination and guaranteed not to become vinegar. The method is similar to the way our great grand parents canned peaches, pears, figs and plums. Do you remember how they would take peaches, peel them, cover them with sugar and cook them until those peaches had a sweet syrup surrounding them? Do you remember how she would sterilize those Mason Jars and pour those peaches to the jars and seal them tight? Then she would take those jars and put them into a big pan filled with super hot water and let them sit for a while. When she finished, we had something called preserves. They would last for years!

If our sweetness is to be preserved we must do something similar. We must peel away anything that could influence us to do evil. Cover ourselves in the sweet love of God, then seal ourselves in the protective care of the Grace of God. Ephesians 4:30 says we are "sealed" until the day of redemption. That means those who want to keep the sweetness of God in their lives must act to preserve it in the new year.

Fruit that has been sealed does not turn to vinegar!

Fruit that has been sealed does not go sour!

Fruit that has been sealed does not spoil!

Honey In the Rock!

Finally, brothers and sisters we must also consider that while there will be many tempting situations that will arise in this new year, every believer should remember that whatever we need, God's got it...there is honey in the Rock!

The new year offers many challenges. It is a weary land. Yet there is a rock in the weary land!

In the days ahead there will be some scorching summers, but the Rock is a shade on your right hand, for the sun shall not smite thee by day nor the moon by night!

Believers can expect to be attacked in the days ahead, but the Rock gives them a special vantage place, a higher ground!

There are some dry days ahead, but there is also refreshment in the Rock! That's what Israel found out when God brought water for a thirsty nation from a rock!

When times are difficult and bitter experiences tend to change our attitude, it's good to remember that there is also honey in the Rock!

Those who understand that there is honey in the Rock, have reached a point when they have accepted that life's circumstances are not terminal because "Our God is able!"

The world doesn't understand how believers live so sweetly even though they don't always have the best of everything!

They don't understand how we can be so happy but:

Our bank accounts are so low!

We are not driving a Rolls Royce!
We don't have expensive furniture in our homes!
Our closets are not filled with brand-new clothes!
Hard times seem to come your way so often
Death just left your door
What they don't understand is, the one thing all of us do know that we serve a God who specializes in taking the bitter things of life and making them sweet!
I don't know about you but I've found out that God can take my:
WEAKNESS and turn it into strength; DEFEATS and turn them into victories
DARKNESS and turn it into light, HUNGER and turn it into satisfaction
SADNESS and turn it into gladness; EMPTINESS and turn it into fullness!
SORROW and turn it into joy; SIN and turn it into salvation!
It doesn't matter what the new year brings, I found out there is honey in the Rock!
Rock of Ages, Cleft for me, let me hide myself in thee!
This Rock is Jesus, who died out on Calvary!
This Rock is Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!
Be very sure your anchor holds and grips the solid rock because...
There is honey in the Rock!
No wonder the song writer declare "He's sweet I know! He's sweet I know. I've found a savior and he's sweet I know!

Table Talk

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 17, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me. After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." 1 Corinthians 11:24-26

Introduction

What do you talk about at the dinner table? The family dinner is becoming an endangered entity in America. Only a few families actually observe a daily family meal in which all members of the family are present for at least one meal a day. While most families strive to achieve this goal, it seems increasingly harder to accomplish. At the table, the family communicates its hopes and dreams. At the table there is fellowship and interaction. The meal is the reason for the gathering but the most lasting impact is the interaction between family members. Much is learned around the family table.

Sometimes table talk can be revealing. When Little Eddie told the family about his day at school at the family dinner, it revealed a lot about him. "Miss Jones said she would pick one person to sit on the front seat and be the class leader. She said me and Johnny were her final choices." The family listened as they passed food around the table. "She decided to give us a test to decide which one," Eddie said "because she said we were about the same in everything." Eddie revealed that when the test ended that Miss Jones picked Johnny to be the class leader even though both of them missed one question, it was number 10, on the test. "I went to her and I asked why she picked Johnny over me. We both missed the same question and received the same score. What's the difference?" The father then asked, "What did Johnny have as his number 10 answer?" Eddie then answered, "He wrote, 'I don't know! and I wrote "neither do I?" Table Talk can be revealing.

A few church women were sitting around the table talking, and the subject turned to their husbands. One lady said "My husband just won't go to church with me, I think he's going to hell." This led to talk around the table about the spirituality of their husbands. One complained of a husband that wouldn't go to bible study. Another complained of a husband who never participated with the other church men. Another said her husband never participated in family prayer and devotions. It was generally agreed that, for one reason or another, all the husbands were going to end up in hell. So, then the church women started speculating about themselves. One woman said "I try to be good - I'm sure I'll make it to Heaven." Each talked of reasons why they were good wives and were all going to heaven. They noticed that one of the ladies wasn't saying anything. They looked at her and said "You're such a nice lady, surely you're going to Heaven...?" She said, "No, first thing in the morning, I'm going to buy me a ticket straight to hell!" They were shocked and asked why. "Well if what you say is right, then only women will be in heaven. If I get my ticket now, I'll be the only woman in hell and...it will be heaven!"

When we gather at the Lord's table, what should be on the mind of every believer? What should concern us and occupy our thoughts? At the Lord's table we focus on the reality of his death, and the assurance of his return. It brings us hope and renewal.

As Christians, we grow stronger when we fellowship together at the Lord's table. It renews our faith and hope that one day our savior will return and will bring with him our reward!

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he gives instructions to the Christians at Corinth about the proper observance of the Lord's Supper.

In this passage Paul gives the Corinthians a good talk about the table or the Lord's supper and exactly what it means to every believer.

He began by explaining what the Lord's supper was not. He noted that it was not a feast and eating was not the primary reason for the observance. The Corinthians expanded the Lord's supper to a point that observances had become giant feasts and pot luck dinners. Those who came, brought baskets of food and stuffed themselves at the weekly meetings. Those who were fortunate had plenty of food. Those who were not so fortunate watched as the others ate. They actually stuffed themselves. They drank so much wine that they became drunk.

Paul noted that an observance in which eating food and getting drunk is the primary reason, is not observing the Lord's supper. In 1 Corinthians 11:20-21 he wrote, "When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's supper. For in eating every one taketh before the other his own supper: and one is hungry, and another is drunken." In verse 22 he said those who want to eat full meals should go home and eat, but the Lord's supper was a symbolic reminder rather than a feast.

The purpose of the Lord's supper is to recall the sacrifice made by Jesus for the remission of sin. The bread represents his body. The wine represents his blood. Taken together, they remind believers of his life and substance, both of which were given for the remission of our sins.

Paul noted that the Lord's supper is a time of spiritual reflection, self examination, and thanksgiving.

Spiritual reflection. Verse 26 notes "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." The elements of the Lord's supper prompt every believer to remember that salvation is conditioned on a sacrifice given by Christ himself. They remind each believer that the sacrifice made required real blood and the loss of a real life. In making the sacrifice for us at Calvary, Jesus paid for our sins. The Lord's supper causes every participant to reflect on that sacrifice.

Self Examination. Verses 27-29 remind every believer of his personal covenant and promise to God. Each believer is to approach the Lord's supper with an attitude of seriousness and self judgment. Paul notes that no believer should participate in the Lord's supper unworthily. Unworthiness in this context implies irreverence. It refers to a person who participates in the observance and takes it lightly or "not discerning the Lord's body" which means the participant forgets or ignores the fact that the observance is extremely sacred because it represents the Lord's body. The self examination is one of motives and intentions. It is personal. It is private.

Thanksgiving. Verse 24 shows what Jesus himself did at the Lord's supper. He gave thanks. He gave thanks for Calvary. He gave thanks for the difficulties ahead. He gave thanks for the troubles to come. He even gave thanks for his death. Showing gratitude is expected from every believer. Give thanks to God for everything.

Table Talk

As believers, what do we talk about when we assemble at the Lord's table? Current events? Other people? The latest fashions? Are some a bit hungry and wish for larger portions? Are some a bit thirsty, with a taste for larger wine glasses? Table talk, to a large extent depends on the setting.

Luke 14:1-24 gives an instance in which Jesus himself talked a whole lot at the table. As he dined with friends, he talked about, being sensitive to the needs of others, being humble, sharing with others and taking advantage of opportunities. Jesus talked a lot at the table. His conversation was interesting, informative and positive.

However, when Jesus approached the last supper his conversation shortened. When he talked, he talked about Giving thanks to God and Calvary! Thus, from Jesus we get two subjects to talk about at the Lord's supper: thanks and Calvary. From Paul's letter to the Corinthians, we get the third, self examination.

GIVING THANKS: When Jesus talked at his last supper, he gave thanks. Yet, the thanks he offered was not for anything he had received in the past. He offered thanks for a crucifixion and death that was coming the next day. As he took the bread and broke it, he said it symbolized his body, he gave thanks for the bread and the sacrifice.

At the Lord's table we too should give thanks for everything. We should thank God for protecting us from dangers, but we should also give him thanks for difficulties that lie ahead. 1 Thessalonians 5:18 says, "In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." In every situation, we should give God thanks. Not only do we thank him for the new job, but we also thank him for getting fired. Why? Because Romans 8:28 says, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

When saints gather for the Lord's supper there is plenty of thanksgiving, testifying and praising of God for his goodness and mercy are everlasting.

SELF EXAMINATION: The Lord's supper is a serene time when we hear not the voices of others but we hear "self talk." It's the time when we examine and talk to ourselves about the life we live and our true intentions and motivations. Self talk comes in our quiet times, when we have removed all other considerations. Self talk looks deep and asks many questions. Among the questions that a saint examining himself will ask are, "Am I involved in a sinful practice for which I have not repented?" "Am I doing my very best to be true to the Christian faith?" "Is my life-style at the present, at odds with what Christ expects?"

Paul said, after self examination a person should not partake in the Lord's supper if his own self examination shows he is unworthy at the moment. Instead of the blessing normally derived from participation, the unworthy participant brings damnation on his own soul. 1 Corinthians 11:29-30 he said "For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body. For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep."

When saints gather for the Lord's supper there should be a time for self talk and examination.

Talk About Calvary

Finally, when saints get together for the Lord's supper, not only should there be plenty of talk around the table about blessings the Lord has given; what the Lord is doing now, and blessings that are coming in the future. The saints must talk about Calvary!

Calvary is the essence of the Lord's supper. What happened there is the reason for our salvation. There, on Calvary, Jesus became the ultimate sacrifice for our sins, dying in our stead to give us a chance at the tree of life.

When saints get together at the Lord's supper there will be plenty of table talk.

In the secular world there are plenty of rules that govern table talk, but we find that it is hard to follow those rules when we get around the Lord's supper table.

The world tells us not to talk about problems and troubles at the table, because that will stop your food from digesting properly.

But saints have a problem with that rule because anytime we are in the presence of the Lord we can tell him about our problems and he will hear and answer prayer. Jesus said in Matthew 11:28-30 Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

That's why the song writer said, "Let us have a little talk with Jesus. Tell him all about your troubles ...just a little talk with Jesus makes it right!"

The world says when we come to the table we should not whisper to the person next to us and point because it is ill mannered.

Yet when we come in the presence of the Lord we have to keep breaking that rule because everything about us points to the goodness of the Lord!

If we talk about our family, that points to the goodness of the Lord!

If we talk about our job or career, that points to the goodness of the Lord!

If we talk about our health and strength, that points to the goodness of the Lord!

An old lady was destitute and starving and she prayed to God for help. One day the king saw her lowly condition and decided to help her as an example of his benevolence and good will. Later, she received an invitation to a banquet where she would sit at the king's table as one of his guests. In preparation, a matron warned the old lady that it was considered an insult to refer to the king or any of his good works at the dinner table. If called upon to speak she should be cordial but never refer to the king.

Sure enough, the old lady was called upon. Surrounded by Nobles and Lords she couldn't help herself. "I want you to know there is a man at the table that has turned my life around. He has put clothes on my back and brought me out of the darkness into the light!" As she sat down the matron frowned and said "You will probably lose everything you have, you were not suppose to talk about the king." The old lady answered "When I said there was a man at the table, I was not talking about the king, I was talking about the king of kings. I don't think he'd mind too much if I told the world that he will make a way!"

Today, brothers and sisters there is a man at the table...and it's all right to talk about him!

It's all right to tell the world how the Lord picked you up and turned you around!

It's all right to tell the world how he planted your feet on solid ground!

The world says it's not polite to talk with your mouth full, but that's the best time to tell the world about the goodness of the Lord, when he has anointed your head with oil and your cup runneth over..tell the world!

Tell the world about Jesus!

Tell the world how he died!

Tell the world how he was buried!

Tell the world how Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

A Spirit Led Drum Major

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 19, 1991

Scripture: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." Luke 4:18-19; "Now the Lord is that Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." 2 Cor. 3:17

Introduction

Have you ever watched drum majors? It is a fascinating experience to watch as they strike up the band, blow their whistles and lead the parade. The drum major sets the pace of the march, signals the cadence for the drummers, and directs the band as it plays and marches.

Martin Luther King characterized his role in history as that of a "drum major." There were many instruments of freedom in the movement that included the Urban League, C.O.R.E., N.A.A.C.P, and Black Panthers, that were playing tunes and warming up. The various players stood ready but there was no single person that could "strike up the band" and get them to march for a single purpose, until Dr. King arrived. Refusing to take much credit for his actions in his last words to America he said "If any of you are around when I meet my day, I don't want a long funeral. I'd like somebody say that Martin Luther King, Jr. tried to give his life serving others...yes if you want say that I was a drum major, say I was a drum major for justice..peace..righteousness." As a drum major Dr. King pricked the conscious of America and challenged the dormant players of our ethnic leadership to take an active and even dangerous step toward breaking down the barriers of hatred in America.

As America salutes the memory of this great man we, who knew him, must resist the attempts to tame his image by glorifying him as a mystic dreamer, a godlike hero image to be worshipped and idolized while the sacred principles for which he lived and died are continuously desecrated. By focusing the emphasis on Dr. King as a futuristic dreamer rather than as an activist that stirred the world to take action against racism, poverty, and war, the established powers have sterilized his legacy and made it safe for public consumption. If the focus remains on the abstract nature of the dream, then less emphasis will be placed upon the activism that was necessary in King's time and is needed now to fulfill the dream's demands.

As Christians we understand the role of prophets of God. We know that each was raised up by God to respond to the crises of the hour. Each was empowered by the Spirit of the Lord to lead the march for freedom and justice in their generation. While Dr. King was a great man, we do not elevate him to a godly statue, we give thanks to God for using him to help facilitate the blessing of increased liberty for all.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he selected a passage of text to read during a service at the synagogue. It has been described by theologians as Christ's inaugural address, or first sermon, in which he set the tone for his ministry. He read a passage from Isaiah and pronounced to the leading religious scholars of his day that the scripture was prophetic of himself and would be fulfilled in his ministry.

The overriding idea of this short announcement message was "liberty" or freedom. Jesus said it was his mission to show those who are captives the way to freedom; to encourage those who had given up to continue the struggle, to give a renewed vision to those who were blinded by circumstance, and to announce the year of the jubilee. Liberty is what Jesus talked about and some in the audience immediately recognized the tenor of the message and immediately applied their own interpretation to his challenging announcement.

A captive people, the Jews were treated as second class citizens. They could meet among themselves but major decisions about their destiny were made by the Romans. They were not in chains, as they were in Egypt, yet they were not a free people. They were taxed but they had no representation in the democratic government of Rome. The laws that respected the rights of every Roman did not apply to them. They lived in segregated sections of the city, and assumed a second class status. They had fought many times to be respected as first class citizens during the period between the Testaments with varying degrees of success. The revolt of the Macabees and other conflicts raised spirits but ended in domination by the Romans. At the time of this text they were dispirited, broken, and resolved that if there was to be a change in their status it would be so gradual that their generation would never see it to fruition. Others had become blinded by the shear power of the Roman presence with legions of soldiers and its infinite military might. They saw no way possible for their efforts to succeed. Barabbas and other militant personalities had been jailed, and only a handful of zealots dared even talk about liberating the people, and certainly not in public.

On this backdrop of social circumstances Jesus makes a public proclamation that he would bring "good news" to the poor, raise their spirits, liberate the captives and announce the acceptable year of the Lord, or the Jubilee when all captives are set free. He did not intend to jump into such a task because he wanted to make a name for himself, but because the Spirit of God was upon him. Paul wrote the Corinthians and explained that wherever the spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom and liberty. So, Jesus stepped forward as a drum major for freedom, led by the spirit of God to challenge the established order and change it forever, even at the expense of his own life.

King's Spirit

The social conditions that prompted Martin Luther King to step forward from the ranks of his generation and sound the clarion call are similar to those of this text. African Americans were socially ostracized. We did not have full voting rights, or legal protections under the law. We still rode buses on the back seat, sat in colored waiting rooms, drank water from colored fountains, and were served through the back entrance at restaurants and hotels. Many of our people had given up hope that conditions could change in their time. Some lost the vision and while the Black Panthers took arms to defend themselves and Malcom X promoted "freedom by any means necessary" in some parts of the country, for the most part African Americans were resigned that freedom was a distant dream.

In I954 a young 26 year old preacher began his first pastorate in Montgomery, Alabama. He was empowered by the spirit of God with a tremendous flow of words, and an overwhelming sense of purpose. A year later, in December of 1955 he was called upon to lead the Montgomery community in a struggle that changed the world. He was reluctant, because he waited on divine guidance and once it was received he jumped in with both feet. He borrowed the social techniques of Ghandi and the Spirit of Christ as he challenged the poor masses of America to stand up and resist unjust laws. He lifted the hopes of the broken hearted to the point that they marched in the heat, endured beatings by police, bombings of their homes and churches, riots, and the long hot summers of the 60's.

He raised the consciousness of America so much that the FBI trailed him looking for and on occasion, finding personal flaws to use against him. But in his public position he was led by the spirit and there was no stopping him. To those who had lost sight of the possibilities he gave new vision by pronouncing "I have a dream." Many people believe that the passage of the 1964 Civil Rights Bill, and 1965 Voting Rights Act was, with respect to the legal system, a year of Jubilee for African Americans. We were legally free.

Real Freedom

The impact of Dr. King's life was that he served as a drum major who was led by the spirit of God to set the wheels in motion to help us gain freedom under the law. True freedom would only come when we are free on the inside. The legal shackles that held us were snapped but freedom for every man woman and child would only come when we are guided by what Thoreau called the "beat of a different drummer."

When Jesus spoke he challenged Israel to become free of the restraints of the law and turn to God. Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom. Jesus challenged Israel to seek the truth because the "truth shall make you free." Truth crushed to the ground will rise again!

The truth is, that all men are created equal and endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Crush it to the ground and it will rise again!

The truth is, that God is not a respecter of persons and whether red, yellow, Black or white we are all precious is in his sight. Crush it to the ground and it will rise again!

The truth is, the God we serve is still on the throne. He sits high and looks low and can move mountains out of our way. Crush it to the ground and it will rise again.

No wonder the song writer wrote: "Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord, He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored. He has loosed his fateful lighting and his terrible swift sword, his truth is marching on. Glory, Glory hallelujah, his truth is marching on!

This is the truth that was taken to Calvary; nailed to a Cross and buried in a borrowed tomb.

This is the truth that was crushed to ground and trampled!

But early Sunday morning, truth crushed to ground said:

"I'll rise again!"

Winning Life's Super Bowl

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "Now therefore send, and gather to me all Israel unto mount Carmel, and the prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the groves four hundred, which eat at Jezebel's table.So Ahab sent unto all the children of Israel, and gathered the prophets together unto the mount. And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, How long halt ye between two opinions? if the LORD be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word." 1 Kings 18:19-21 "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Ephesians 6:12

Introduction

Do you ever feel like you are in a struggle with someone or something all of the time? Most people sense that each day of their lives they are in a contest of some kind against some opponent, seen or unseen. Planing to overcome the enemy, defend against his darts and launch our own offensive gets to be the core of our routine. Every believer leaves home on a daily basis, prayed up and confident that they will return the victor in the fight against the unseen forces of evil that would destroy the quests, dreams and hopes of the people of God.

Perhaps that explains our fondness for contests. Any kind of contest: Boxing, basketball, baseball, or water melon seed spitting. We thrill at watching two equally matched opponents demonstrate their skills in the competitive arena. Some even spice up the contest by placing bets on which one will win. We get excited in face offs whether its between David and Goliath, Billy the Kid and Pat Garrett or Luke Sky Walker and Darth Vader. We love the thrill of the contest because in a small way we can project ourselves into the arena. For one reason or another we associate with one competitor or another. We can see ourselves in the arena! When our team wins, we win! When our team loses, we feel as though we have personally lost.

On Super Bowl Sunday churches scramble to find ways to relate. Last year reports in the media told of churches where the ushers were dressed in referee stripe shirts, the pews were marked off as yard lines and the church service began with the deacons in a huddle and a toss of the coin between the ministers to determine who would preach. Wouldn't it be something if our love for Christ dwindles to the point that to maintain a worship service on Super Bowl the church would have to equip its Mother's Board with pom poms and mini-skirts to be cheerleaders? Will the choir need to dance down the aisle singing "Drop kick me Jesus, through the goal posts of life?" Will we penalize deacons for long prayers for "delay of game?" Will we have to give every usher yellow flags to throw at people who refuse to sing? Instead of hymns will it be necessary for the choir to sing the fight songs of both Super Bowl competitors? If the service lasts beyond the time that the televised pre-game show begins, will the head deacon need a whistle to blow to give the preacher a two minute warning? For some people, deciding to attend worship on Super Bowl Sunday is tough, but not for others. For them, every Sunday is a Super Bowl Sunday! The cause of Christ is matched up against Satan week after week! Guess what? Our team always wins!

When your team is up against a powerful foe, who do you want on your side? If it's the 7th game of the World Series - bottom of the ninth inning - bases loaded - 2 outs - you are down by 1 and you can choose anyone in baseball history to be your next batter - who would it be?

If it's the last minute of the Super Bowl, you have the ball, you are down by six and you can choose anyone in football history to be your quarterback - who would it be?

If it's the last 10 seconds of the final game of the NBA playoff - you have the ball - you are down by one and you can choose anyone in basketball history to take your last shot - who would it be?

In such a moment none of us would pick a rookie. We want somebody who has proven themselves in tough situations.

As Christians, we enter a super contest for our souls every day. We're glad to know that we have Jesus, the MVP of the universe on our team!

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Elijah as he challenges the people to watch a contest between God and the prophets of Baal.

The wicked King Ahab and his wife Jezebel established Baal worship throughout the land. The people had relegated God to a second place status in their lives. Some had discounted him altogether. Baal worship was growing in the land, promoted by the king and 450 Baal prophets.

According to Holman, Baal worship revolved around two themes that represented the conception of Baal his worshipers held. Baal was both the sun-god and storm-god. He was worshiped as sun-god when the people wished to express thanks and gratitude for light and warmth and fertility. Worship of Baal as storm-god took place to appease the destructive nature of Baal, demonstrated by drought and storms that devastated the vegetation of the worshipers. The efforts to appease Baal whenever adverse conditions prevailed culminated in the sacrifice of human beings, usually the firstborn of the one offering the sacrifice. Baal worship was as diverse as the communities in which he was worshiped. Each locality had its own Baal, who was named after the city or place to which he belonged. Baal was considered the owner or possessor of the land on which his followers lived.

Elijah challenged the prophets of Baal to put up or shut up. A super contest was planned between all 450 of Baal's prophets and Elijah the prophet of God. The actual contestants would be the false god Baal and the real God Jehovah. As each called on their God, the true God would answer by raining down fire from heaven. An added, unspoken, expectation was that the real God would end a drought that devastated the land

The first half of the contest was dominated by the prophets of Baal, all 450 of them. They danced their ritual dances, sang their chants and called on Baal to consume their sacrifice with fire from heaven. As they danced, Elijah taunted them on the sidelines, amused that Baal must have been hard of hearing or out to lunch.

After the false prophets failed, Elijah wet the wood on his altar by pouring four jars of water over it three times. In response to Elijah's prayer, Yahweh rained fire from heaven to consume the wet wood. It became obvious that Elijah's God was the real God. Elijah ordered the false prophets killed.

Elijah next prophesied that the drought was soon to end (1 Kings 18:41) after three rainless years. From Carmel, Elijah prayed and shortly after the rains came.

The real God had won a super contest on Mt. Carmel and in the hearts of the people. The test contrasted his power and the impotence of Baal. It showed the moral superiority of God and the inferiority of all others.

For the people, the contest meant they underwent three years of drought, calling on the wrong God. Their personal battle was one of survival. The help they needed was always close by, but they were calling on a helpless, useless, source that could not assist them when they really needed help.

Facing life's challenges

On a daily basis, most of us face huge life challenges. The nature of the challenge varies but the adversary is still the same. Decisions concerning finances, marriage, school life, employment opportunity and morality face us each and every day. The pressure of dealing with these challenges is immense. Sometimes they even seem insurmountable and the odds seem stacked against any form of success.

There are some who try avoid the challenges, while others recognize that problems must be tackled head on!

Christians study, pray, and verbalize a general love and dependence on God. We sing regularly, "I will trust in the Lord.." When problems come, it is put up or shut up time. All of the pre-game hype and promotion that comes with our Sunday school class professions of faith comes to a head on the day when faith must come face to face with adversity. When problems come, each of us enters the super bowl.

When Elijah went into his put up or shut up situation he followed three steps that helped him to emerge the victor. He was a 450 to one underdog. It had'nt rained for three and one half years. He was meeting his opponents in front of their home crowd. When put up or shut up time arrived, he entered the contest using three steps that might be useful to us today:

FACE OUR CHALLENGES WITH CONFIDENCE: Just as Elijah refused to be intimidated and actually reveled in the moment, every believer should face each of life's challenges with confidence. Confidence is a faith-based virtue. Those who exhibit confidence know God's power. They are not intimidated by the odds because God + one equals a majority. With confidence Elijah quietly prepared his altar. (V 30-35)With confidence he ordered four barrels of water and ordered his sacrifice to be soaked four times. We should also face our challenges with confidence that comes from the word: "I can do all things through Christ which strengthens me" Philippians 4:13. God's people have always been outnumbered, but they have always arisen the victors. They have always been the underdogs, but they have always won!

REMEMBER GOD'S CAPABILITY: It is easy to be overwhelmed by a problem if we forget our capabilities. We can be restrained and detained for great periods of time if we can be tricked into forgetting our capabilities. A baby elephant is tied to a cement pole in its early life in the circus. The baby elephant pulls against the pole but is not able to escape. As the years go by the elephant grows in size with enormous power. In the circus, that same elephant is often tied to the back of a tent by a little rope. Why doesn't the elephant pull the tent down? Because his mind is still tied to the cement pole. He cannot focus on his present capability. Believers facing challenges don't' focus on the size of challenge, they focus on the size of God. When David stood before Goliath he didn't worry about Goliath's height, but kept remembering what God had done for him in the past. The 12 spies who reported on the prosperity of the promised land said they could take the land despite the problems. There is no mountain too high for God to climb! No river too wide for God to cross! God specializes in doing things that are impossible!

TALK TO GOD BEFORE YOU ENTER THE ARENA: When Elijah faced his challenged he did what every believer on record has been known to do, he talked to God. He said "..let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word." (v36). Before Israel crossed over the Red Sea, Moses prayed. When they face starvation and drought in the desert, they prayed. Name the challenge and watch believers go into prayer before they enter the arena. The believer's prayer is not for victory, but that God's will might be accomplished. The Hebrew Boys stood before the fiery furnace confident that God was able to deliver and committed to the point that they declared even if he did not deliver them they would not be defeated or intimidated. They wanted to accomplish God's will. Before the battle pray, because prayer changes things. Pray because prayer can cause the impossible to become possible.

Get ready to rumble

Finally, brothers and sisters every believer must be ready when he or she steps into the arena. We must be ready, mentally, physically and emotionally.

No contest can be won unless the competitor enters with the right frame of mind. It is important to know the nature of your adversary and to remain focused. That's why Paul writing to the Ephesians said, "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." (Ephesians 6:12). When we are focused we remember "greater is he that is in me than he that is in the world!"

Don't attempt to enter life's super bowl without the right equipment. Paul said in Ephesians 6:13 " Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand"

Every Super Bowl competitor who expects to avoid serious injury wears the right equipment.

—Underneath every competitor's uniform, unseen by the observing eye is a GIRDLE. It helps to keep everything in place. Every believer that steps in the arena of life must wear the girdle of truth. It is important to have "right" on your side. This is what Paul referred to as having your loins girt about with truth.

—A good HELMET protects the head from collisions that are sure to come when we butt heads with the enemy head on. Paul called it the helmet of salvation. Every helmet comes equipped with a chin guard . The saved life is like a good helmet. It helps believers withstand the attacks of Satan. The holy spirit is like a built in chin guard. When things are down, it reminds us to keep our chin up, everything will be all right.

—A MOUTH PIECE is essential in the contest. For believers a mouth piece keeps us from saying the wrong things or even saying the right thing but at the wrong time! This is what David meant in Psalm 39:1 when he said, "I will take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my tongue: I will keep my mouth with a bridle, while the wicked is before me." Don't go into battle without a mouthpiece!

—SHOULDER PADS protect the shoulders of those who are receiving hits and delivering blocks in the contests. This is what Paul referred to when he said, "having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness"

—CLEATS are special shoes that help competitors to grip the ground. Paul told the Ephesians to keep their "feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace." Gospel shoes don't slip and slide as other shoes do, but they grab the turf and hold on! When life gets tough, they hold on!
If thunderstorms break out and the turf is wet, they hold on!

Every good competitor enters the contest prepared to play until the game is over! There is no praise or reward for those who quit before the end. I hear Revelation 21:7 say, " He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

Every saint should be able to say, "Today is Super Bowl Sunday, but tomorrow will be super bowl Monday!" Every day we come up against Satan is super contest. However, we can say with assurance, "Our team will win!"

We know our team will win because of the line up!

At left end there is GENESIS at right end there is REVELATION.

At tackle and guard is Matthew, Mark, Luke and John at center is Malachi!

At half back is faith and hope! At full back there is prayer!

But my team always wins because, my team has the best quarterback!

The quarter back of my team wears jersey number 1-1-1. One for the father, one for the Son and One for the Holy Ghost.

My quaterback knows how to play the game because he's a super bowl veteran!

One day, 2,000 years ago he met the forces of Satan out on Calvary, died on an old rugged cross!

But just before the game was over, Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

You don't have to wait until the battle is over...shout now!

Your super bowl team has already won!

Adam, Where Art Thou?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 7, 1999

SCRIPTURE: And the LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?Genensis 3:9

Introduction

Where are the Black men? It seems that many people are concerned with what popular conversation calls the sudden disappearance of Black men. In the last three decades there has been a growing trend toward beating up on Black men to the point that there is a generation among us now that has completely accepted as fact that there are no Black men of substance in America. Today, whenever Black men assemble in sizeable numbers America stops and watches because the very assembly defies the myth of the diminished Black man. Can you imagine the awe that the 1995 gathering of one million Black men in Washington must have had on those who believed that Black men were either all dead, drunk or in jail? Can you imagine the powerful inspiration of such a sight as it put all of the pundits to silence? The sight of so many men brought the myth into question: If there are no Black men, where did all of these come from? Why weren't they conforming to the images seen in the media? Why weren't they drunks? Why weren't they drug dealers? Why weren't they wearing prison clothes?

Earl Ofari Hutchinson, author of "The Assassination of the Black Male Image" writes that the image of Black men in America has been carefully shaped by the national media which has pounded, twisted, and slanted Black male stereotypes into sensational headlines and T.V. sound bites who combined message is that Black men are non-achievers, brutes, shiftless, lazy and criminal.

The only images that America projects forcefully of the Black man is that he is either the ignorant Sambo or the hate filled Savage. When Hollywood wants to make a movie about Black life that shows Black men, the men in the movies will reflect one extreme or the other, the ridiculous antics of Step-in-fetch it or the sheer rage of "Boyz in the Hood."

Sambo or Savage, that's the choice that African American women and children are given, when they consider the image of the Black man in America. Black men do face challenges.

There are troubling trends that are developing that are threatening their very existence. The trend toward violent crime is making young Black men an endangered part of our society. Three out of every five Black boys is expected to have a run with the law, be in jail or dead before they reach the age of 30. That's staggering. According the United Negro College Fund, the number of Black men attaining college degrees since the 70's has been outpaced by the number of Black women who have increased 55 percent while Black men have increased only 20 percent. Black men are having women problems as they are viewed less eligible by a more educated professional Black woman who refuses to marry down to a man who is not her equal.

Black men have problems like men of all other races, but the problems are not thematic of the entire gender. The image of the Black man is under attack. Gone are images of the strong Black father of yesteryear who took nothing but grabbed a shotgun to protect his wife, children and land. Gone are the images of men so proud that they would rather die free than live as slaves. Gone are the images of the hard working, God fearing Black man who believed in teaching his children about God, keeping his word and giving an honest days work for an honest day's pay. Gone are the images of the Black father who understood the value of a dollar and saved to provide a future for his children. Because that image is not shown to us in the media, does not mean that the picture of the Black man has changed.

There are still millions of strong Black men in America. There are men who will stand in the front door of adversity and defend their wives, children and land. There millions of God fearing men who still teach their children the importance of God and family and giving an honest days work for an honest day's pay. Even though it's not shown there are millions of Black men who live and breathe in professional circles and have mastered the art of investment and providing secure futures for the families.

Where are the Black men? Somewhere between the myth of non-existence and the image of Sambo and Savage is Today's Black man. Present, but unseen. Active, but unfelt. Growing, but ignored. Fortunately, God is not impressed with the media images of Black men. God knows there is something other than Sambo and Savage. God knows there is something else to our men other than the intoxicated images flashed to mindless masses.

Today, as in biblical times, God asks the same question he asked the first Black man, "Adam, where art thou?" As he beckons him to come forth and shoulder responsibility for his mistakes and rise above unfortunate circumstances and carve out a glorious future.

As Christians we are compelled to remember that God knows who we are and where we are at all times. He speaks and we respond to the sound of his voice. He asks and we answer. Today he asks, "Adam, where art thou?" and we are compelled to answer, "Here Lord, ready to serve!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Adam as he attempts to hide from God after disobeying the command not to eat from the forbidden fruit. Adam and Eve were given full permission to eat of all of the fruits of the Garden of Eden with the exception that they were not to eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. When they both disobeyed they became fully aware that they had broken a sacred trust with God.

One day God's presence moved through the garden and Adam could hear God asking "Where art thou?" God asked a question even though he already knew the answer. Because God is omnipresent, omnipotent and omniscient, he knows all. God asked Adam the question not to gain information but to indicate to Adam that he was out of unity with his divine purpose.

He was some place he was not supposed to be. He was hiding, shriveling and disconnected. God asked Adam three questions: Where art thou? (v9) Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat? (v11) The three questions form basis of God's dispute with Adam: That he was not where he was supposed to be, that he listened to what others had to say rather than what God said, and that he disobeyed God's command. In asking these three questions, God both condemned Adam's poor stewardship and reminded him of his potential at the same time.

Where art thou?

The first question God asked Adam prompted him to consider his present circumstance, just as it prompts Black men today to consider our present circumstance. Where art thou? Sociologically, where art thou? The Black man is changing. He is more educated than his father and grandfather. He has more opportunities available to him than has ever been imagined. Despite the obvious frustrations of the social order, the American Black man is living in a virtual Garden of Eden when compared to other nations of the world. Yet, societal expectations of Black men are changing.

There are challenges to his manhood on every order. There are challenges to his safety, even his survival on every hand. Race discrimination still exists. He remains the target of institutionalized attempts to destroy his credibility. In light of social affluence and the growing problems of our community the Black man must not be found hiding in the garden.

When the question is asked, "Adam, where art thou?" The answer should be "I am busy doing your work Lord!" The Black community, which goes beyond mere geography, needs men who will use their increased social skills to help improve the plight of others that follow them.

Men are needed to join and form organizations of men who work to improve the plight of the community of African-Americans specifically and the entire community as a whole. We need men who will volunteer to help the homeless, feed the hungry, mentor children, teach investment techniques, promote literacy, fight crime and generate stronger leaders to build up the broken walls of our community.

Who told you, you were naked?

The second question God asked Adam, questioned who he had been listening to. A large part of his problem derived from the fact that he had been listening to the wrong person, Satan. For the most part the myths about Black men are being promoted by enemies of our community. The idea is to promote the weaknesses among us as examples that represent us all.

If we constantly show ourselves images of fallen Black men, it won't be long before we begin to think that the fallen represent us all. In moments of frustration we even find ourselves internalizing those fallen images.

Who told you there were no Black men? Why did you believe it when you look around and see men driving cabs, buses, working in offices, holding positions in government, working in high finance and making life and death decisions across this nation. Who told you there were no Black men? Who told you that a Black man ain't nothing! Why did you believe that when the legacy of nearly every Black family includes stories fathers and grandfathers who gave their lives on farms, serving as Pullman Porters, butlers, janitors, teachers, preachers and professionals to keep their families together?

Who told you that a Black man is shiftless and lazy when you see millions of Black men get up and go to work every day on jobs that no one else wants and millions of others stand in line looking for work that they can't find?

Who told Black youth that all they need to succeed in life is athletic skill? Why do you continue to believe when you know that nearly every NBA or NFL superstar has a college education an even the rapper Master P, was one of the smartest students in his high school class?

Who told you that you are basically dumb and stupid, so just concentrate on building your arm and leg muscles but not your brain power?

The world keeps focusing on the negatives of Black men, constantly showing them how naked they are and many men go into hiding, forcing their women to come up front.

Disobeyed the command

The third question God asked Adam was why he did not do what he was told. He was told NOT to eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, but he did it anyway.

He was told to take dominion over every thing God put in his hands and he failed to do that too! Genesis 1:26 the Adam family was given the charge to have "Dominion" over all creation. Dominion means leadership and responsibility.

If Black men are failing today it is in the area of leadership. There is no shortage of men biologically. There is no shortage socially. There is however, a growing shortage of men in leadership of the home, church, school and the general community.

It is no mistake that a growing number of communities are seeing their women rise up to fill vacancies created by the absent of men in leadership.

Where there is a son or a daughter there is a father somewhere, but mother is providing the family leadership in many cases. Where there is a church, women are rising to chair the committees and shoulder the responsibilities of men.

In the community, an increasing number of women are becoming elected officials on school boards and other civic bodies because of a leadership vacuum..

Adam, Where art thou?

Adam was chastised because he wasn't where he was supposed to be and was not doing what he was told to do!

Adam, rise up and be a father to your children, without a court order!

Adam, volunteer to lead community efforts!

Adam, stand tall in the community of saints to champion the cause of Christ! Adam, where art thou?

Adam needs to know the voice of God

Finally, we must consider that as God called on Adam in the garden there are two truths that cannot be overlooked. God knew Adam and Adam knew the voice of God.

If ever there was a time when Black men need to know God that time is now! No man should become so comfortable in the pursuit of his career that he has little time or interest in the things of God. A black man in business for himself, soon finds that he can't succeed in the business world unless God sends the customers!

A black man climbing the corporate ladder, soon finds that he can't maintain his upward climb without the Blessings of the Lord! A black man striving to lead a family soon finds that his job is made much easier when he and the Lord are on good terms! It doesn't matter whether you are male or female, everyone needs a blessing every now and then!

When we need a blessing it good to know the voice of God! When we know the voice of God we hear him ask, Where art thou? But if we listen closely we can also hear him ask: Do you need anything? That's when we answer "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want!

Sometimes the question may be: Adam, are you afraid? And we answer "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear. The Lord is the strength of my life of whom shall I be afraid? Adam, why are you looking down? And we answer: "I'll lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth!"

Adam, why are you sad because you don't have all the resources you want? That's when Adam remembers, "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

Adam, why are you worried? That's when the Adams of our generation rise to sing, "Why should I be discouraged, why should the shadows come? Why should my heart be lonely and long for heaven and home. For Jesus is my portion, a constant friend is he! His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me!"

The first Adam was in the garden hiding behind a tree, but the last Adam stretched out wide on a tree!

The first Adam was hiding from God, but the last Adam was raise up high for all men to see!

The first Adam disobeyed God, but the last Adam said, “not my will but thy will be done!”

He died out on Calvary! But Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Adam, where art thou?

Adam, are you working on his program? Adam, have you given your life to him?

Adam, where... Where... Where art thou?

To Be Continued...

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "His name shall endure for ever: his name shall be continued as long as the sun: and men shall be blessed in him: all nations shall call him blessed. Blessed be the LORD God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things." Psalm 72:17-18

Introduction

Have you ever watched your favorite movie or television series only to find out that you had to wait until next week to find out its conclusion? Those were the times when you really became interested in the story line. You followed it from the beginning. You were enthralled with the plot. Then, just as you were sitting on the edge of your seat, the words "To be continued" came across the screen. For most people, those words are a giant "let down." Something good was interrupted. To find out the conclusion the viewer has to wait until the next episode.

While "To be Continued" is an interruption it is better than some of its alternatives. Sometimes we lose the picture because we lose the signal altogether. In this case we will never know what happened for ourselves. There is no continuation. We can lose the signal if there is trouble with the cable, a power failure, or transmission difficulties. Whatever the reason, once this happens, we lose the moment forever.

In this context, "to be continued" is better than never getting to see the end at all! Consider the farmer who decided it would be a good idea to have baked hen for his Sunday dinner.

The farmer looked at all of the chickens in the coop and there was not a single one that was as fine as Hattie the Hen! Hattie would bake good, even though she did have a reputation for being rather smart for a chicken. The Farmer heated up the pot of water real hot. He got his hatchet and caught Hattie under his arm! As he held her down and aimed his hatchet at her neck the farmer was amazed to hear Hattie talk! "Please pardon the interruption sir, but I think I would be much tastier, if you allowed me to freshen up a bit!" The farmer was amazed. He had a talking hen. He was so amazed that he put down his hatchet and allowed Hattie to go freshen up. The farmer waited for her return so he could finish his chopping.

When Hattie did not return for a while he sent his son looking for his prized talking chicken. Finally the son returned and said "It's amazing what Hattie has done!"

"What else has she done son?" Asked the farmer. The boy answered "Well chickens dont't talk. Hattie did. Chicken's don't fly either, but your prized talking chicken just flew the coop!" This farmer would have preferred a "to be continued" situation, but all he got was an empty baking pan!

There are many who suffer setbacks in life and never continue. Some fail. Some encounter sickness. Some experience death. There are many who lose their signal and never get a clear picture again.

As Christians we know life offers us many challenges. However, because we know the Lord we are not defeated by their enormity. Generally we pause, respond to the demands of the moment, and then return to our service as we continue doing what we do best... serving and praising the Lord!

Exposition

This text considers David as he speaks of the wonderful works of God that deserve continuous uninterrupted praise.

David, in an inaugural style psalm, points out to his son Solomon the importance of continuous praise and service to God for he is worthy of praise. In a Messianic phrase that begins at verse two and ends at the close of the psalm, David testifies to the greatness of God and to the beauty of Christ's reign as the Messianic Lord.

In verse 17, which is the focus of this text, David said our Lord's name will endure forever and his name "shall be continued!" The Hebrew word used for continued is NUWN (Noon) which means to resprout or shoot out repeatedly! The indication is that there will be times when circumstances will attempt to eliminate his name from the face of the earth, but regardless to what is done it will continuously resprout and shoot out again. Men will continuously be blessed by him.

Locked into the meaning of this simple phrase "shall be continued" was the secret of David's success as King, which he was passing on to his son. In his own life there had been moments when he was brought low, both in the eyes of men and in his own eyes. Despite his circumstance, David continued to resprout in his praise to God. When he was hunted by Saul. He found safety only in the hills. Prompting him to write "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth." Despite being hunted as a vagabond, David resprouted and praised God more. When he was caught up in sin with Bathsheba and reached a low moral point in his life, he reached another low point. Here again, resprouted and saying "restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and renew in me a right spirit!" When his son was ill, he reached such a low point that he covered himself in ashes and sat in mourning every day, tears flowing from his eyes. However, once his son died, he arose, washed himself and resprouted, continuing his duties. Those who did not understand him wondered how this could be so. He responded by saying when there was hope that the child might live he mourned, but once God acted there was no reason to mourn. "I can go to him, but he cannot come to me."

In these contexts David's life was the epitome of resprouting and continuously giving God praise. This quality is what he hoped to give his son Solomon who would follow him on the throne. This is the quality that faced each hardship, setback and letdown with a notation "to be continued" or "I shall return." It is an attitude molded and shaped by a lifetime of trusting and believing in God.

David said God would be praised continuously by the faithful, we would be retarded in the movement but would resprout to praise the Lord as long as there is a sun in the sky. Why will this happen? Because God only does wondrous things and those who believe in him know this truth and trust him continuously, despite their circumstance.

Life's Pauses

How do people respond to personal tragedy? Those who are non-believers have a different response than those who believe. Non-believers, those who are unfamiliar with the Lord, tend to be overwhelmed by their tragedies and are crushed by them. At the very least their optimism is dimmed. Sickness and the difficulties that attend it are frustrating. Financial misfortune is an immobilizing factor for many. Failed efforts at achievement sidelines some of the best. But the most devastating of tragedies is the death of a husband or wife or other immediate family member. In such moments a person has not only lost a friend and life partner, but a piece of themselves as well. After such a loss, those who are not strong in the Lord roll up into a cocoon and disappear from life forever. Their whole existence comes to an abrupt hault. Everything stops. They are defeated by a lack of faith.

It is as if they were watching the story of their life played out before their eyes and someone pulled the plug. They lost a wife, a husband, a friend and they are alone. So they sit daily and stare at life's blank screen. This is view of the defeated and the faithless.

However, the believer views difficulties and tragedies differently. Rather than view sickness, misfortune and death as terminal events that leave his screen blank, the believer assumes an automatic pause posture, placing himself on hold for a moment or two while he submits to the will of God. The believer doesn't view his life as unplugged and his future as a blank screen. On the contrary the believer says "wait a minute life, let me put you on hold, God is calling." After submitting to the will of God, enduring tragedy, and overcoming misfortune, he releases his pause button and continues his life of praising God.

For David, resprouting, or continuing meant continuing with his duties as King of Israel. It meant writing more psalms, and living the kind of life that made him a man after God's own heart. For Job, resprouting, or continuing meant living his life in faith that God would do what was best.

This ability of the believer to respond to personal loss with renewed praise for God is rooted in his or her belief that Christ has already given the ultimate victory over life and its problems. Like the Hebrew Boys they are confident that "My God is able to deliver me." Like Paul they rest on the persuasion that nothing will separate them from the Love of Christ for " in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." Romans 8:38-39 says " For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Even in the face of death, the believer is not completely without hope. Why? Because he or she lives daily on the promises of God. Jesus promised every follower that belief in him meant eternal life. On the occasion of the death of Lazarus he made a point to remind Martha of this truth: " Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?"John 11:25-26 Those who believe Jesus' words know that while death of the body is unavoidable, death of the spirit and soul, which is the whole essence of life, continues for those who believe in God.

Standing on the Promises

Believers stand on the promises of our Lord! We believe them and therefore when we experience the death of a loved one who is a believer, we don't view it as a life unplugged, ended and abruptly stopped, but one that came to a point where we saw the words "to be continued" on the life's screen!

We live with the full knowledge that in God's own time, we'll live out the final episode of life's experience, in a different place, in a different way, with one long continuous flow of love, peace, and joy.

Since we know that God has great things in store for us, believers must continue doing what they do best!

We must continue in service. The poor, the needy, lonely and broken hearted still need our help. We must continue to demonstrate the love of God in the community of the saints and within our own family circle.

We must continue praising God, resprouting from setbacks, misfortunes lifting him up even higher!

We praise God because he is worthy to be praised! We praise God because of the many wondrous things he has done in our lives!

Like Job, we must respond, " though he slay me, yet will I trust him!" (Job 13:15)

We will continue because we know that despite our personal loss, God still loves us. He has not and will not abandon us or forsake us!

Let us continue to praise God to the highest! Let us praise him in his sanctuary!

When we praise God:

--Burdens are lifted; souls are enriched!

--Questions are answered and confusions are cleared

--Sorrows are removed; joys are received!

--Hopes are restored, angels are excited

-Devils are confused!
Praise God for giving us hope that transcends tragedy.
A hope that supersedes sadness.
A beautiful hope that sets us free!

The Burdens & Blessings of Eve

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. Genesis 1:27-28 And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee. Genesis 3;15-16.

Introduction

Have you ever been served a full plate of food that contained several foods you liked, but at least one item that you found distasteful? Was that broccoli? Spinach? Brussel sprouts? Did you find yourself picking around the distasteful items and eventually leaving them on your plate? Every believer is given a full plate every day. On that plate are many blessings, but there is also a burden or two. As parents tell children, eat your vegetables they are good for you, so does each person face the challenge of accepting life's full plate of burdens and blessings in full stride.

The African-American woman is more sensitive to this truth than most others. She has been served a plate with several distasteful items, but it is working out for her good. History has placed the African-American woman in the strange paradox of being a woman and Black. Women have a difficult time and it seems African-American women have a tougher time. You know you are an African-American woman when: You are up every night until 10 p.m. vacuuming, dusting, wiping, washing, drying, loading, unloading, cooking, driving, flushing, ironing, sweeping, picking up, changing sheets, changing diapers, bathing, helping with Black history reports, paying bills, budgeting, clipping coupons, folding clothes, dragging out of bed every day, brushing, chasing, buckling, feeding them, stopping school buses, rushing to work, waiting in traffic, rushing from work, picking up children, playing catch, cuddling dolls, music lessons, lighting the stove, picking up, putting back, yelling and screaming, cleaning up, never still a single minute in the day... but somehow you manage to gain 10 pounds! Women seem to have a full plate that always contains a whole lot of the bad stuff!

African-American women face what Patricia Hill in her book "Black Feminist Thought: Knowledge, Consciousness and the Politics of Empowerment" calls a trifold matrix of problems that stem from the fact that she has to deal with Race, class and gender problems. White men only face Class problems. White women deal with class and gender. But Black women must deal with all three and it becomes an unusually difficult burden that makes their plight in America more frustrating. While women have succeeded in dealing with these three frustrations, there is still much to be done. While progress has been made, much still remains.

Black America received a wake up call to this truth with a recent incident at Louisiana State University. Dianne Piper, a 43 year old Black attorney on staff at LSU dropped in to talk with associate dean Richard Nelson about the possibility of lecturing at another university. While attempting to explain her position, Nelson grabbed Piper, pulled her across his knee and began spanking her while chanting, "You're a bad girl." It didn't matter that Ms. Piper was highly professional, had never become "friendly" with Nelson, and had a prestigious legal back ground, she was viewed as a woman and Black, and thus fair game. Of course Ms. Piper, being a lawyer, promptly sued Nelson and the University. The incident underscores the depth of the struggle African-American women still face in America.

Despite the distasteful items on the plate of the African-American woman she has still managed to grow and succeed beyond the expectations of many. Even the bitter experiences of her history have made her stronger, bolder and more able to stand in these perilous times.

Whether male or female, every life experience has a little rain sometimes. The beauty is that after the rain the sun will shine. Christian women endure the rain because even in the storm they know the SON will shine.

As Christians, we have learned to take the bitter with the sweet that this life offers. Every believer has the joy of knowing that for every burden there is also a blessing that comes from God.

Exposition

This text focuses on both a burden and blessing that God gave Eve after the fall in the Garden of Eden.

Adam and Eve were given a great blessing from God in the beginning. Both Adam and Eve were blessed with authority and dominion over the earth. Both were invested with the sanction of heaven as they ruled God's creation. The blessing that God gave them in Genesis 1:27-28 was never revoked or rescinded. It remains in force to this day.

Satan interceded in the beginning and tempted Eve to sin. As a result of her sin, God placed an "enmity," hatred, or strife between Satan and woman and her seed that would last many years, as Satan would always attempt to bruise the heel of women and their seed.

However, there would come one of woman's seed that would finally bruise the head of Satan. This is a picture of Christ who would be the only power able to deter Satan in his attacks on woman and her Seed.

Christ will ultimately defeat Satan and his forces, destroying his presence forever.

It will also be Christ that will negate the influence of Satan in the lives of every believer until that day arrives.

Eve's Burden

Today there are many African-American women who are struggling with an Eve Complex. They feel as though they are operating under a curse that cannot be removed. They live in a white male dominated society that seems to work against them because they are Black. They are even more frustrated when they come home to a world where Black men, who should know their frustration, dominate and discriminate against them because they are women.

SHOULDERED THE BURDEN OF THE MOTHERHOOD: Until recent years it was almost unheard of in the Black community that mothers would abandon their children. African-American women have been icons of strength in motherhood throughout our history. They have been examples of what the bible calls a "virtuous woman" even in their worst states. Motherhood is a burden that African-American women have bourn with dignity and respect.

STOOD IN SUPPORT OF HER HUSBAND: Even before Tammy Wynette made the phrase popular, Black women have known the value of standing by their man. They have refused to allow anything or anyone to lower their estimation of and respect for the Black man. They felt his pain. They felt his sorrow. They felt his hunger for freedom and a better life. Thus, they stood by him through difficulties and good times.

KILLED HER DREAMS TO LET OTHERS LIVE: Perhaps the hardest burden of all for the African-American woman has been that of watching her personal dreams wither on the vine as she worked to promote the dreams of her family. Millions of African-American women, even today, have placed their personal dreams of being doctors, lawyers, businesswomen and educators on the back burner of life so that they might help others in their families achieve their own. Silently, many moan within themselves. Silently, many cry out for a chance to live their own dream with decency and respect.

NEW BLACK WOMAN'S CHALLENGE: The new Black woman is operating on a revised playing field, which presents her with a new challenge. She is no longer expected to watch her personal dreams die and as prerequisite to motherhood. She is no longer expected to walk behind a man, in fact many are assuming the burden of raising a family without a man at all. While she is playing on a different playing field than the African-American woman of the past there is one thing she still needs that all women before her had to have ...she needs the power of God!

She may work in corporate America, but she still needs God!

She may be a professional, clerical worker or drive a city bus, but she still needs God!

Every African American woman should rip that page out of our history, if nothing else and resolve "as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord!"

Eve's Blessing

While life gives us a certain number of burdens, believers have the consolation of knowing that we never have to deal with them alone.

The African-American woman and every other believer has been able to endure the difficulties and frustrations of the past because they always remembered that they were not in the struggle alone.

We have been isolated, but we were not alone!

We have been frustrated, but we were not alone in our frustration!

We have been persecuted, but even in our persecutions, we were not alone!

The same power that sustains the African-American woman, sustains every believer today. That power is the power of God.

The knowledge that God is with us has helped our people overcome the historical negatives that have destroyed others. We have withstood because we have found our blessings in the Lord!

The women of our past bowed low so that their children today could stand tall!

The women of our heritage, did what they had to do, so that we could do what we want to do!

The women of our experience, took the bitter scars of discrimination, hatred and sexism and bathed them with healing waters of God's grace and emerged, stronger, bolder and dedicated to marching on!

One thing the African-American woman learned to do very early was to pray!

She prayed when her back was bent and sweat poured from her face!

She prayed when she had to take the scraps from the master's kitchen to feed her family!

She prayed when she had to watch her children sold on auction blocks like cattle!

They took many things from us but the one thing they couldn't take was our faith in God.

They took our names, but God gave us new names!

They took our history, but God gave us a new story to tell!

They took our villages, and houses, but God has given us new homes!

They took our freedom, but God gave us truth and we found out that "the truth shall make you free!

Despite the burdens of today, every believer should march on singing the words of our anthem: "God of our weary years, God of our silent tears, thou who has brought us thus far along the way, thou who has by thy might, led us into the light, keep forever in the path we pray!"

If we stay on the right path God will be for us. Romans 8:31 reminds us that "If God be for us, who can be against us!"

If we stay on the right path, it won't matter about the burdens because Romans 8:37 says, "In all these these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."

If we stay on the right path, it won't matter how many barriers are placed in front of us because we remember that Philippians 4:13 says, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me"

If we keep our hands in God's hands, our blessings will overpower our troubles and we will continue to rise, 2 Corinthians 4:8-9 "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed, we are perplexed but not in despair, persecuted but not forsaken, cast down but not destroyed."

It doesn't matter whether you are a man or woman, it makes a difference when you know the Lord is with you!

When you know the Lord is with you, you can:

Resist the devil

--Overcome temptation

--Bear a heavy burden

--Conquer a bad habit

--Fight a good fight

--Stand the heat

--Survive the storm

When the Lord is with you, you can call on him, like great grandma did! "Lord, I'm down here waiting, please don't pass me by!"

Walk with me Lord, Walk with me! While I'm on this tedious journey, I want Jesus

Who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who was buried in a borrowed grave!

Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

I want Jesus to walk with me!

Out of the dust we rise!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 21, 1999

SCRIPTURE: He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory: for the pillars of the earth are the Lord's and he hath set the world upon them." 1 Samuel 2:8

Introduction

Have you ever felt insignificant? There are times when even the greatest among us feels insignificant. These are the times when the accomplishments of others seem so much greater than our own. Those are the moments when we wallow and bathe in self pity as we consider our own worthlessness. Historically, we have lived in relative poverty. We have possessed relatively little. We have influenced relatively little. There are times when it dawns upon us that in actuality we are very little, but for the grace of God. Considering the totality of God's creation, the stars, moon, sun, flowers, trees, mountain, and rich soil, we appear to be the least . . . the dust of this creation.

What comes to your mind when you think of dust? Some think of that thankless chore that seems to thrust itself upon us no matter without invitation. No matter how well a home is kept sooner or later dust appears and it has to be dusted. Dusting is repetitive and frustrating because no matter how much one dusts, it will appear again, as if out of no where.

In comparison to the rest of God's creation, dust appears to be one of the most useless aspects of God's creation. Scientists say that there are more than 100,000 particles of dust per square foot of the average home. Dust floats in the air and left alone settles on table tops, Venitian Blinds, chairs and buries itself in the fabric of chairs, sofas and clothing. Nothing grows in dust. Nothing holds on to dust. It appears unable to sustain life. Dust simply gets in the way and makes life difficult. It has no value.

The story is told of the Little Johnny who heard a lot of talk about "dust" on the same Sunday. After church, Johnny tells his parents he has to go and talk to the minister right away. They agree and the pastor greets the family. "Pastor," Johnny says, "I heard you say today that our bodies came from the dust." "That's right, Johnny, I did. "And I heard you say that when we die, our bodies go back to dust."Yes, I'm glad you were listening. Why do you ask?" "Well you better come over to our house right away and look under my bed 'cause there's someone either commin' or goin'!" If God made dust, there has to be reason. Something is either going or coming!

In his great novel 'The Grapes of Wrath" John Steinbeck shows an American family that had been reduced to nothing in "dust bowl" of the great American West. Their land could not produce because of a drought that reduced them to equals with the dust of the earth. The novel showed how one family rose above its dust experience and persevered.

Our historical experience as African-Americans has been a "dust" experience. Our community of families has endured the dust of this life as we have struggled to overcome obstacles place before us. Like the families of the Steinbeck novel, we have risen above our dust experience by the grace of God.

Only the grace of God could take millions of families, crushed to the earth by racism and prejudice and raise them to new life.

Only the grace of God could take the dry dusty bones of broken and shatttered families and sustain them through 300 years of mistreatment until the bottom rail family begins to emerge on top.

Our families have wallowed in the dust of the American experience. Yet, still they rise!

As Christians, we are strengthened by knowing that God knows the condition of the poor and downtrodden all over the world. The poor, the rejected, the beggar, the homeless and even those of means crushed into the dust of life's draining experiences, revel in the knowledge that God knows their plight and will raise them to a greater glory, if they will trust him!

Exposition

This text focuses upon has low view of herself until God raised it up.

Hannah was a barren woman, a fact which caused her considerable frustration and difficulty. She was the wife of a man named Elkanah. This man had two wives. The other wife was a prolific woman, who taunted and mocked Hannah in her barrenness. The barrenness of Hannah is very symbolic because it illustrates the spiritual state of Israel at this time. This people to whom God had manifested himself had fallen into a state of utter infertility and barrenness. Hannah described her own state as being that equal to the dust. She felt worthless because she could have no children.

After being ridiculed beyond her ability to bear it by her husband's other wife, she went forth alone, and knelt before the Lord at the sanctuary and prayed inaudibly. Eli the high priest, who sat at the entrance to the holy place, observed her, and said to her, "Go in peace: and the God of Israel grant thee thy petition." A while later Hannah gave birth to a son, whom, in grateful memory of the Lord's goodness, she called Samuel, i.e., "heard of God." After the child was weaned (probably in his third year) she brought him to Shiloh into the house of the Lord, and said to Eli the aged priest, "Oh my lord, I am the woman that stood by thee here, praying unto the Lord. For this child I prayed; and the Lord hath given me my petition which I asked of him: therefore I also have granted him to the Lord; as long as he liveth he is granted to the Lord" (1 Sam. 1:27, 28, R.V.).

In a greater sense the entire nation was symbolic of her state. The priesthood which God had set up with the tabernacle and the rituals was on a decline. Generally the people had turned from God and were involved increasingly in activities that would please God.

Hannah prayed to God for relief. God heard her prayer and opened her womb and she was able to bear a son, Samuel. Looking back on her barren days, Hannah wrote a song that described her low estate and how God raised her up.

Although she characterized herself as "dust" because of her infertility, God blessed her to five more children besides Samuel, three sons and two daughters.

She had risen from the dust to a position of glory of women. Her childless family had been lifted from shame to that of honor..

Dust Experience

The African-American family's struggle for survival is a dust to glory experience. Our families have been under attack, torn asunder by social forces oblivious to our concerns or problems. For the most part the Black family has survived by sheer will power and faith. Despite our experience in the dust, the Black family will rise.

DUST IS NOT TOTALLY USELESS: While dust consists of fine particles of materials floating in the atmosphere, it should be noted that it contains organic and inorganic materials that include: animal and vegetable fibers, pollen, silica, bateria and molds. We are able to see colors because dust particles scatter light. Without dust there would be no rain, mist, fog or clouds because dust serves as the nuclei for the condensation of water vapor.

There is a tremendous value in the Black family. Even though it may appear to some as a powerless and useless vehicle, it still has tremendous value to our people. The family is the primary unit of society. It teaches values, respect for rules, promotes tradition, life skills and transmits history. Without families society as we know it would be inalterably different.

IF LEFT ALONE, DUST WILL SETTLE: Dust is always present but it is usually unseen until it is stirred or until it settles. In many ways American society is generally afraid of what it calls the "Browning of America." It is the settling and growth of large numbers of Black and Hispanic families. Already one American in four defines himself or herself as Hispanic or nonwhite. If current trends in immigration and birth rates persist, the Hispanic population will have further increased an estimated 21%, the Asian presence about 22%, Blacks almost 12% and whites a little more than 2% when the 20th century ends. By 2020 the number of U.S. residents who are Hispanic or - nonwhite will have more-than doubled, to nearly 115 million, while the white population will not be increasing at all. By 2056 the "average" U.S. resident, as defined by Census statistics, will trace his or her-descent to-Africa, Asia, the-Hispanic world, the Pacific Islands, Arabia — almost anywhere but white Europe.

The reality is there is a move afoot to keep scattering the dust. Stable "Colored" families contribute to growth and there are many sectors of this nation that are not happy with the prospects so they work hard to keep Black families scattered internally and every move to settle in traditionally non brown areas is resisted.

DEALING WITH THE DUST: Since there is no way to prevent dust from settling or making it disappear, the most obvious thing to do is to learn how to deal with the dust. African-American must deal with the crises that faces our families. Our churches, civic organizations and think tanks must sponsor more efforts to help families grow and mature.

More workshops are needed to teach family skills that include: conflict management, parenting, health concerns, relationship building, financial management, education of the young, care for the aging, spirituality and parental roles.

The dust experience is real, but continued focus on the nature of the problem helps everyone involved adequately deal with the dust.

From Dust to Destiny

Finally we must consider that even though our families have endured a dust experience, there is a way to move from dust to destiny. That way is provided by our faith in God.

The book of Genesis tells us how God gathered the dust the earth, formed it into a human body. That body did absolutely nothing until God breathed on it.

"Spirit" and "breath" are the same word in a number of languages, including Greek and Hebrew. God's breath is his Spirit. He exhaled his breath, and the figure that he had formed inhaled it and became a living being.

Mankind rose from the dust when the spirit of God breathed upon the dust of the earth.

The picture we have of God laboring over a large lump of dust and breathing life into it is the same picture that we see when Ezekiel was placed in the Valley of Dry Bones. In the Valley he saw dry and dusty bones everywhere and was asked the question "Son of man can these bones live?"

The African-American family has been scattered and kept apart by slavery, racism and faulty social programs, but it has been kept alive by the spirit of the Almighty God.

If there is a power that can turn dust into destiny it is the power of the almighty God.

Maya Angelou says we have forgotten our ancestors and our children no longer honor our old people.

We have lost the path and our children cannot find their way.

We have banished the God of our ancestors, our children can not pray.

The African-American family must pledge to:

To embrace our lowliest,

To keep company with our loneliest,

To educate our illiterate, To feed our starving,

To clothe our ragged; to be brothers to our sisters.

In all of our actions we should never lose hope, for out of the dust we shall rise!

Thus, every family has the responsibility keep the love of God!

Every grandmother and grandfather must teach their grandchildren the old path and the love of God.

Every father and mother must demonstrate the love of God in good times and bad times.

Every child must learn that it has only been through the grace of God that they have been able to survive these troubling times.

We are living in a time when people want to: Succeed but they don't want to prepare; Conquer the world but can't control their own homes!

Protect the innocent but they can't defend themselves; Teach without going to school; Preach without study and preparation; Lead without learning to follow

Chair without demonstrating they can be a good member; Sing without coming to rehearsals

Strength without invoking the power of God!

Though these times have crushed us down, like the dust of the earth, out of the dust we shall rise, if we keep our hands in God's hands!

Great granddaddy didn't have much education, but he learned the value of the Word of God

Great Grandma didn't have a college degree, but she graduated from the school of two knees! She learned how to trust in the Lord!

Every God fearing family hears the voice of our ancestors telling us, the Lord will make a way!

We have been able to rise out of the dust, because we have learned how to call on Jesus!

With chains around hands and feet, we learned how to call on Jesus!

With crosses burning in our front yards, we learned how to call on Jesus!

As we stared and white and colored drinking fountains, we learned how to call on Jesus!

From seats on the back of the bus we learned how to call on Jesus!

The same Jesus, that grandma called!

The same Jesus, who died out on Calvary! The same Jesus, who arose early Sunday!

That same Jesus calls upon us to rise up out of the dust, stand on your feet, and March on till victory is won!

A Path Finder's Reward

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

February 25, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "Thou wilt show me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore." Psalm 16:11

Introduction

Have you ever found yourself in a strange location that required you to ask someone else for directions? Many who travel, plan meticulously, only to get lost before they reach their destination. It doesn't take much for that to happen: a wrong turn here or a wrong turn there can confuse the best navigator. Many have had the experience of asking directions of someone on the street only to find out that they didn't know either. They turned, looked in the sky and scratched their heads, but often had no answers. One sure fire way to find directions is to ask those who know the neighborhoods well: policemen, cab drivers and bus drivers know the street because they have driven them daily for years. In fact, there aren't many places in the average city they are not acquainted with to one degree or another.

It's important to make sure that you are going in the right direction. Consider the pedestrian that was walking down the street minding his own business when he was suddenly hit by a car. As he flew through the air he felt instantly that he was breathing his last breath and wouldn't make it. As he lay on the sidewalk a minister ran to him and after calling for help, talked to him. The minister starting asking him to make his peace with God and renounce the devil and all his deeds. The man said, "Lord, forgive me for all my sins!" The minister said, "that's good but you need to renounce the devil and all of his deeds!" The man lay on the sidewalk quietly, then whispered, "Lord, forgive me for all my sins, I believe!" Again the minister said, "You must also tell the devil that you renounce him and all his deeds!" The man looked up at the preacher and said, "Until I know where I'm going, I don't think it would be a good idea to aggravate anybody!" Even at the point of death there are some that don't know which direction they are going!

Often we require the help of others to find our direction. The young need the assistance of their seniors to chart the right course for themselves. The untrained benefit from an apprenticeship with a skilled artisan. Every student learns best when directed by a wise and insightful teacher. Very few have found their mark in life without the benefit of a mentor, guide or counselor that helped them chart a proper course on the rough sea of life.

Even in our lives as believers, many have found it difficult to learn the Christian way without the guidance of the more experience saints who have traveled the meandering roads that challenge faith and assurance. Many find it difficult to keep their eyes on the path and lose their direction until they are helped to find the right path again by someone who cares.

As Christians, we know our salvation lies in walking the right path. In the right path we find security and grace. We ask God to show us that path that we may turn in the right direction. In answer to our prayer, God sends us sainted souls, path finders, whose whole purpose in life is to point the lost in the right direction and to give hope to those aimlessly wandering the corridors of life. Every path finder has a life task that is noble and blessed. The task was assigned at the throne of God from the beginning. In like manner, the path finder will receive his reward...at that same throne by the Grace of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he gives "golden" advice about finding the path to everlasting life.

This psalm has the title "A Mitcham of David." Five other Psalms have a similar title. There is no conclusive evidence as to what exactly is meant by 'mitcham'. Many think it refers to its literal meaning "Write in gold letters," indicating that it is truly a 'Golden Psalm.'

One of the golden nuggets in this psalm is in verse 11: "Thou wilt show me the path of life!" This is the path that man has blindly groped for ever since he has been on earth. It is a right of way into the presence of God. The singer of this psalm tells of ONE who has found the way through, presumably a messianic reference to Christ.

The path of life begins with our inheritance in Him (v5). David notes that those who would enjoy life to its fullest participate in the divine inheritance. They consider themselves heirs of the King and thus see life from the perspective of those who are sons and daughters of the King of Glory. We are children of God and thus heirs to his promise made to Abraham. This is the meaning of Galatians 3:29 "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

The way of life is within the boundaries. He has set for us. (Vs.6.). God blessed David, as he does every believer. The way of life is to know where our blessings end and those of another person's begin. An awareness of the boundaries of our blessing and its inherent limitations is a formula for life. Each person has been given gifts and resources by God. The use of those resources with restraint demonstrates our faith in him and helps us better walk the path of life.

The way of life depends on guidance deep within. (Vs.7.). Those who seek the path that leads to life learn to let God guide them from within. Being led by the spirit is not an empty phrase because God is a spirit and those that worship him worship him in spirit and in truth. The way to life is to constantly be guided by the Holy Spirit in all of our daily affairs.

The way of life is in having a single objective. (Vs.8) Those who want to find the path to everlasting life must make finding it the single objective of their lives. They should never stray from it but pursue it with vigor and a sense of purpose.

The way of life is in joy (Vs.9); even in the face of death, sickness and hardship. Those who find the path of life face life's difficulties with a sense of assurance that no matter where the path leads they will come out in God's hands on the other side. That path leads straight through death, and hell, and the grave..

Thus, David asks God to show him the path to everlasting life. He said finding that path would guarantee him a life of joy in the presence of God and after this life, pleasure, as he sits at the right hand of God!

The Path finder's Method

Today, there are many believers who serve as path finders. These are men and women whose presence among us provides a sense of security and direction. The 16th Psalm gives us clear indicators of what is necessary to accomplish this end.

A PATH FINDER IS A COMPASS: A compass helps those who are lost to get a sense of direction by showing them one direction constantly. A compass points North. The traveler may walk South but the compass continues to point North. The traveler may point East but the compass only points one direction and that is North. In a similar sense those who are path finders are those who point to the direction of truth, honesty, integrity and godliness. Psalm 16:8 says, " I have set the LORD always before me: because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved." The path finder keeps the principles of godliness before him constantly and is attracted to them regardless where he is in life. He simply changes his direction until his life lines up with the will of God. That compels path finders to sometimes stubbornly resist innovations that may tend to encourage deviation from the true path, whether that deviation is real or imagined. They insist on doing things right, even when it is more popular to bend the rules. They insist on being truthful even when it is more popular to twist the facts. They insist on obeying God rather than following after every fad or fantasy followed by man. Whenever the masses stray from the well worn path of truth and godliness, path finders continue to point the right direction.

A PATH FINDER IS NOT INTIMIDATED BY THE NIGHT: Some find it easy to find direction in the day, but stumble in the night. Like sea navigators who chart their direction by finding the North Star and other points of reference in the sky, a path finder can find the path even in the night. This unique ability is given by God himself. David said in Psalm 16:7 "I will bless the LORD, who hath given me counsel: my reins also instruct me in the night seasons." We are familiar with the nights. These are the times when we are frustrated, troubled, confused and feel lost. In times of sickness, financial disaster, trouble and death we see only the darkness. In times like these path finders are invaluable. They help us to see that "weeping endureth but a night, but joy comes in the morning." In night of our sickness, the path finder whisperS a word that reminds us that God is a healer. In the night of our confusion, the path finder reminds us that God has an answer. In the night of our troubles, the path finder reminds us that the Lord will make a way somehow. Because path finderS have a reference point in the heavens, they are not intimidated by the night. They move with assurance because they are focused on the Bright and Morning Star.

PATH FINDERS WATCH THE SUN BY DAY: Path finders know the movements of the sun and can chart their direction by its position. They know the sun rises in the East and sets in the West. Thus, they instantly know that if the sun shines their faces in the morning they are traveling East. If it is at their backs, they are traveling West. They keep themselves oriented by watching the sun. In a greater sense believers also orient themselves not so much by the SUN as they do by keeping a fix on the SON. It is the son of God that keeps every believer oriented properly as we walk through this life. Path finders keep their direction by watching the sun and tell the time of the day by watching how the sun makes shadows on fixed places on the ground. Path finders are sensitive to the times. They watch them closely like David who noted in Ecclesiastes 3:1 "To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven." Even in their own lives, the path finder watches the sun and senses when it is going down and prepares every detail, for he knows the words of the old chant, "it's getting late in the evening and the sun is going down."

PATH FINDERS KNOW THE TRAIL: Path finders have the benefit of knowing the trail. They know the trail because they have walked it for years. They know the signs that are invisible to others. They see the broken twigs, the leaning grass, the ruffled leaves and the bruise bark that indicate the unseen path. Life experience is invaluable. Situations change, but human nature never changes. The path finder is ever cautious in matters of faith, politics and interpersonal relations, drawing on years of experience as he ponders the overgrown forest looking for trail signs that point the way. They have passed through many life circumstances in the course of their lives and are familiar with the trail. They know the trail of tears that follows loss, pain and disappointment. They know both the danger of thoughtless pursuit in youthful eagerness and faithless reluctance in old age. They know the trail that leads to a happy and successful marriage. They know the trail that leads to a fulfilled life and they aware of the road to destruction. Path finders are invaluable because they know the trail and help point others that way.

Path finders follow Trail Blazers

Finally, we must consider that there is a difference between a path finder and a trailblazer. A trailblazer is the one who makes a path when there is no path. A path finder finds the sure path that has been blazed. A trailblazer ventures into territory that has never been charted and leaves a path. A path finder follows in the path of those who have blazed the trail into uncharted areas.

Path finders have a sense of history. They know the trail. They also know the trailblazers.

Christian path finders know the path to glory, but they also know they did not blaze the trail.

A Christian man who serves as a deacon, Sunday School teacher, choir member, trustee or spiritual advisor, helps others find the path, but he is keenly aware that he did not blaze the trail.

He may know the way to the path, but he did not blaze the trail.

He may help others find the path, but he did not blaze the trail!

Whenever we seek a good spiritual path finder, we must be sure to find one who knows the trailblazer!

Despite our origins and backgrounds, we can find the path to eternal life, if we know the trailblazer.

Even if we come from an obscure background of poverty and despair, we can find the path if we know the trailblazer!

We can overcome the barriers of race and class and educate our ourselves and put others on the right path, if we know the trailblazer!

We can endure the agony of defeat and ecstasy of victory in politics, government and other paths of life, if we know the trailblazer!

We can dash through the path of youth with vigor, and carefully meander the lonely trails of aging with grace and assurance, if we know the trailblazer!

Though our voices once strong diminish to a whisper. Though our steps once bold become short and restrained, we can still walk the path, if we know the trailblazer!

While there are many who are path finders and know the right path, there is only one trailblazer. 1 Timothy 2:5 says, " For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus.

Jesus, every path finder knows him by name!

Jesus, follow his path and it will carry us to forgiveness, clean hearts and humble spirits!

Jesus, follow his path and it carry us to repentance and praise of God!

Jesus, follow his path and it will show us the way to salvation!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and arose after three days, blazed a trail from Calvary to Glory!

He has blazed a trail from the finite to the infinite.

He has blazed a trail from this life to eternal life!

He has blazed a trail through this life, and beyond death, to a place where the path finder sings at last, "How beautiful heaven must be!"

There, at the end of that trail, is the path finder's reward!

Living a Lovely Song

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the King David #1 Baptist Church
Vicksburg, Mississippi

February 26, 1999

SCRIPTURE:"And lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely song of one that hat a pleasant voice, and can play well on an instrument: for tey hear thy words, but they do them not." Ezekiel 33:32

Introduction

Suppose your life matched the way you sing, would the world be happier or saddier? Some people are gifted with beautiful voices that resonante and leave positive impressions. Others have voices that even frogs would find unattractive. The voices of some people resemble song birds while the voices of others sound like those of crying crickets. For some, their lives would be a marked improvement if they were lived the way the sing. For others, there would be a marked decline in the quality of their life experience if their lives were made to match the quality of their singing voice.

While there is no real correlation between our life style and voice quality, there are times when what we sing, expresses just what we are thinking and feeling. Consider Sipping Sam at the revival. Sipping Sam had been brought to the revival because the evangelist was known for being so overpowering that he often talked wineos into giving up their bottles. This revival was being held by the river. Sipping Sam saw the preacher talking about the dangers of whiskey and one by one he saw wineos getting up and giving him their wine bottles. Each time a wine bottle was turned in the preacher would empty its contents into the river. Behind one wineo he sang, "I've been washed in the blood." Behind another he sang, "Jesus paid it all." Each time one came forward Sam took a sip from his bottle until it was dry. Sam became thirsty. After several hours of hard preaching the only wineo left that had not come forward to repent was Sipping Sam. Since Sam would not come up the preacher called him up front and asked him why he was waiting so long. Sam stared at the water then said, "I don't know, but if I joined up with you, could I pick the song everybody gon' sing?" The preacher agreed that was a small price to pay for saved soul. "Sure, what is the song?" Sam gave the preacher his empty bottle and started singing, "Take me to water! Take me to the water!" Sometimes our songs reflect just what we are thinking about.

The best songs are those that seem to fit the person that sings them. In essence, the words of the familiar tune apply: "Let me live the life I sing about in my song."

In this case it is not the quality of the voice that becomes our song, but genuine beauty of our lives that sing a song that is heard and appreciated by others every day.

If each of our lives is a song, what does God hear? Does he hear the blues? Are we always complaining about this or that? Each time our friends see and hear us are we singing that same old "Somebody done me wrong song?" Does he hear your rap? Are our life experiences fast paced, disconnected, rapid fire spurts of something here and there that can barely be understood? Do people understand what our lives say, or do they just listen to the beat? If our lives were songs would God be pleased with what he hears? Would our song be sweet, laid back and soft? Would be hard pounding rock filled with screams and yells? Would God find us singing our song at all or would he finding singing shower songs, rough imitations of someone else's life song?

Whether we want to accept it or not our lives do sing a song. What it sings depends on how we choose to live our lives before God. It can be a sweet melody or it can a ball of confusion. It can be a sound of hope in troubled times or it can be the fanfare that announces doom and gloom. It can be the voice of peace or it can be a battle hymn that means trouble for everyone around.

As Christians, we strive to make our lives a love song that expresses the joy and love of God in everything we do. Deep in our hearts, we believe that's what God wants to hear?

Exposition

This text focuses on Ezekiel as he expresses the thought that he is perceived by the people as a beautiful song, but they are unmoved.

Ezekiel was a great prophet who constantly warned the people about the pending doom yet they did not listen. After they were taken away into slavery in Babylon Ezekiel continued to live justly before them and tell of the need to repentance but they would not listen.

He was a fine and eloquent speaker. They enjoyed listening to him speak. He actually lived what he talked about. While they enjoyed listening to him, very few heeded what he had to say.

This prompted him to say in verse 32 that he is viewed as a person who sings a lovely song or plays an instrument. They are enjoyed, but not heeded.

That was a description that could well apply to many of the prophets. Paul preached to many who loved to hear him preach. They enjoyed him, but heeded him not. Even Christ himself was enjoyed by thousands, but when the song ended, even today many heed him not.

The comparison of a person's life to a song is striking and meaningful. Ezekiel said the people enjoyed his life song and ignored what he tried to say, but they heard and recognized the song.

The song our lives sing

Since each of our lives are songs that means that our lives have all of the elements of a song?

Every good song has a message. The central part of any song are its words. The words reflect the message and overall theme of the song. They are the meat of the song. Without words the song's meaning is diminished.

Likewise each person's life should have meaning and substance. There should be principles and ideals to which each person subscribes in life. A vindicate person spends his life singing an "I'll get you back" song. A hateful person's life literally sings "I hate the ground you walk on." Life ideals are important. They become our song. In Christian homes the children see that song lived in the lives of their parents. They see them work hard to be honest. They see them strive to educate themselves and reach for goals. They even see how those ideals apply when they differ. The children listen and they learn the message of their parent's song. Every child knows mother's life song. Hers is the life that sings of concern and compassion for each of her children. Hers is the bitter voice of scorn when they have gone astray. Mother's song is always full of hope. Her life message seems to say, "Climb every mountain, ford every stream, follow every rainbow until you find your dream!"

Songs have a cadence or beat. Usually songs are set to a cadence or beat that allows so many notes to be sung in a certain frame of reference called a "measure." To insure that the song is played at the right beat, music writers indicate the time and the cadence on a sheet of music. Little markings that look like fractions tell how many beats should be in each measure of the song and how long certain beats should be held. Every life song has to be sung to the right beat. The cadence must match the message. Singing "Amazing Grace" to the beat of "Good Golly Miss Molly" simply would not work.

Likewise we must live our lives with a steady beat that matches message of our life's song. Measuring our actions and words is necessary if our lives are to be acceptable. Those are the songs we sing when we act according to our age. One great song writer said, "When I was 17 it was a very good year.." he described the passions of 17 and he continued the numbers through his adult life. The song that is properly timed fits neatly into each of life's measures. The words and the message seem to fall in place.

Our life song should reflect our passion. A good song stirs the emotions. A person who has traveled abroad is stirred by words "God bless America" when he returns home. A veteran of the Civil Rights movement is moved when the crowd sings "We shall overcome!" A good song moves people to cheer, applaud, cry, smile, shout, or scream. A good song is filled with passion. No one who hears it will remain unmoved.

Likewise every life should have some sense of purpose. Martin Luther King once said, "If a man hasn't found something he's willing to die for, he's not fit to live." A sense of purpose in life brings passion into it. The person whose life song is passionate plunges into what he does with enthusiasm and vigor. They bring an excitement to any project in which they are involved. They are a joy because they are so passionate about what they do! They are energetic! They smile with a happiness that beams! They bring joy to the hearts of everyone they touch! Our life song should be one that is filled with passion and purpose.

Every song needs a melody. We appreciate songs because of their message and the passions they stir. We remember songs because of their melody. The melody is a set of notes played in a way that expresses the theme of the song in a memorable way. Every child knows the melody of "Happy Birthday to you!" Even if the words are not spoken, the melody is there. Even if we can't see the face of the person singing the words, the melody is still there! There is nothing more frustrating than hearing someone sing a song in which they change the melody. It loses something. The melody is the lingering theme of the song that stays in our hearts long after the music has left our ears.

In the 1960's there was a popular television show called "Name that tune." Contestants won prizes if they could identify a song, when only the first two or three notes of the tune were played. Many went home rich because they were able to "name that tune." Each person's life plays a few notes on the scale of life. Some lives hit the right notes in a way that we can never forget. There are some who are always positive, smiling, playing light notes. The same person, when rubbed could go sharp or flat in an instant. Combined, the chords of our daily lives comprise our melody or tune. Long after we are gone, our tune will be heard. Children can hear mother's words in their hearts, long after she can no longer speak. They know her tune. Long after she is gone they will see the first few notes of life circumstance and immediately hear mother's tune and the advice she gave. Each person should be careful about the tune our lives play, because they will be replayed again in the lives of everyone who comes in contact with us.

Singing A song of Faith

Finally, there is one aspect of a song that is unique to those who trust in the Lord. Those who trust in the Lord, sing a song of faith.

Ezekiel spoke of a "lovely" song, but what makes a life lovely to God?

A lovely life is one in which we exhibit a general love for God, respect for his Word and order our lives according to his will.

A lovely mother can take her sons and teach them to love God, respect themselves and others.

A lovely sister can inspire honesty and integrity and vision among her siblings.

A lovely believer is one that can battle an illness willing to accept the will of God with a smile on her face!

A lovely believer keeps singing the same song despite the circumstance.

When difficulties come and times are tough, the lovely saint knows how to sing, "The Lord will make a way somehow!"

When friends don't understand, the lovely saint knows how to sing, 'He'll understand and say well done!"

When the trouble is on every hand, the lovely saint knows how sing, "When the storms of life are raging, stand by me!"

When the way gets clouded and the road is hard to see, the lovely saint knows how to sing, "Guide me oh thou Great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land!"

When provisions get low and there's no place to go, the lovely saint knows that "his eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me!"

Why does the lovely saint sing? I hear the song writer answer..

"I sing because I'm happy! I sing because I'm free! His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me!"

I sing because when I'm weak he gives me strength!

I sing because when I'm lonely he comforts me!

I sing because when I'm failing he gives me victory!

I sing because when I'm falling he picks me up!

I sing because when I'm filled with sadness, he gives me gladness!

Even when I face the chilly arms of death I will put a smile on my face and sing "To God be glory, to God be the glory for the things he has done! With his power he hath raised me! With his blood he has saved me! To God be the glory!

Glory, for his life on this earth!

Glory, for his death out on Calvary!

Glory, for his rising Early Sunday morning!

To God be the glory for the things he has done!

On Monday, February 22, 1999 Rita Queen Trice walked into the chilly arms of death with a smile on her face. Her life was lovely melody, which will linger long after she is gone!

Do Not Disturb

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 7, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "Saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God. And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him.And when the unclean spirit had torn him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him. And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him" Mark 1:24-27

Introduction

Have you ever seen the sign hanging on a door knob: "Do not disturb." Generally it means that someone is occupied and does not care to be interrupted. Life is filled with interruptions. They seem to be unavoidable. You are busy in your kitchen preparing a meal, but before everyone takes their seat there is a sudden knock at the door? So much for a quiet family dinner. You settle down to read your bible or to get a few moments to yourself when the phone rings. So much for quiet time! Interruptions happen. They are the flat tires that mar your otherwise perfectly planned day. They are they trains on the track that throw you off schedule. They are the cars that won't start or the person who drives 15 miles per hour in front of you when you are almost late for work. Interruptions can be so frustrating that you want to turn around go back to bed and start over! If you can't do that then you are tempted to wear a sign marked in bold letters "Do not disturb!"

There is barely a day in anyone's life in which there are no interruptions. Generally, we are interrupted by unforeseen circumstances or well meaning friends and acquaintances. Sometimes the worse time to generate any productivity in the work place is during working hours because there are too many interruptions. Co-workers who tell you about their exploits the night before when you are preparing do whatever it is you are paid to do, can sometimes become interruptions. Pop-ins, drop outs, and unsolicited call-ins are also interruptions. Most folks can take a hint and know when they are interrupting: 1)When your telephone conversation is one way and there is little or no response to your questions or statements, it could mean you are interrupting; 2) When the person you are talking to suddenly has a change of tone and says, "Well O.K. then..." it could mean, you are interrupting. 3) When you drop into an office without an appointment and your party meets you standing up and doesn't ask you to sit down, you could be interrupting. 4) If you are slow to take a hint and your party continues with their scheduled chore looking up to say a word to you here and there, you could be interrupting. 5) If your party is holding a sign marked "Do not disturb" and waves it in your face...well, you get the picture!

While interruptions are frustrating, annoying and even depressing, there are times when we are blessed by interruptions! A "Blessed interruption" breaks into your normal programming to give you late breaking news that is extremely important! An interruption is blessed when you are benefitted by the interruption and blessed because of it! When you sat down to dinner only to be interrupted by the knock at the door, you were pleasantly pleased to find it was your insurance agent personally delivering your settlement check. He says, "I hope I'm not interrupting" and you say, "Interrupt me any time you get ready!"

There are times when God interrupts us. Whenever God interrupts us, it is a "blessed interruption." He often has great news for us! He sometimes has new instructions for our lives! Sometimes he simply wants to point us in the direction of the hidden treasures of this life when we are straying far away from the right places. Too often God gets ready to tell us late breaking news from heaven and we have a sign posted "Do not disturb!" Sometimes we entertain him but we give him the signal that we'd rather he allow us to continue doing what we were doing. Sometimes we are in his presence, but we are not fully present in mind and soul. For all practical purposes many people miss blessings because they post signs that say "Do not disturb! "Let us alone!"

As Christians, we strive to live our lives in such a way that we always have an "Open Door" policy when it comes to God. He's always welcome and his presence is a blessing at anytime!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he exorcizes an evil spirit from a man.

Mark gives us a picture of Christ demonstrating his authority over physical conditions and pain. Jesus is shown moving throughout the community making miraculous demonstrations of his authority. His demonstrations prompted his critics to ask the source of his authority as they were astonished and amazed at his great works.

In the instance of this text Jesus came upon a man who was possessed by an unclean spirit. The evil spirit had been left alone to destroy the man from the inside for quite some time and no one had bothered to interrupt..until Jesus came.

When Jesus began to teach in the synagogue, the truth of his statements disturbed those who were at peace with the status quo. The reaction to the man possessed with the evil spirit was typical of the response of all who were disturbed by Jesus' actions. They were disturbed. They could not stand the interruption and yelled, "Let us alone!" Jesus hadn't spoken to them directly. He spoke of God's truth in general but the truth disturbed and interrupted them. The demons were tortured with truth, and they broke out in this angry interruption: "What have you to do with us, Jesus of Nazareth? I know who you are, the Holy One of God!" And Jesus rebuked him and commanded him to be silent.

Through all the centuries since, the only name demons have ever feared is the name of Jesus. It is Jesus who sets men free and delivers the oppressed. Each believer saw a demonstration in this text of what happens when Jesus interrupts a demon's activity. Demons leave. It is Jesus whom demons fear because he has the authority to command the unclean spirits to obey.

The demonic spirit had succeeded in controlling the possessed man until it was confronted with truth and hope and the renewal of spirit brought by Christ. In a similar sense this is the same spirit that gave a similar response in a whole nation of people in Exodus 1:12. Here, Moses kept speaking to the people about the possibilities that await them if they maintained a faith and hope in God. That idea was disturbing to some and they responded: "Is not this the word that we did tell thee in Egypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? For it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness." They wanted to be let alone in their fear. They wanted to be let alone in their faithless state, but God, through Moses, kept interrupting.

Dealing with Interruptions

While there are times when we give instructions, "Do not disturb!" There are also several qualifiers. We list off certain circumstances that must exist before an interruption is allowed: Certain calls are received regardless to the time of day or what's going on. Certain information is welcomed whenever it is received. Certain visitors are the "stop what you are doing" kind. There are ways to deal with interruptions that require the right attitude and perspective.

Sometimes an interruption is directly from God. God sometimes interrupts our life to gain our attention, and other times allows interruptions in our lives to teach us, redirect us, challenge us. Sometimes these interruptions give us opportunities that he has especially for us and no one else.The believer wants to be interrupted by God. When God knocks his presence is not seen as disruption of that which is good. His actions in our lives are not corruptions of experience but eruptions of hope and opportunity. We should welcome God's interruptions When God spoke to Abraham and told him to leave his homeland and go to a place he would show him, that was an interruption. Things were going good, but God interrupted him with something that would be even better. Abraham heard the voice of God and acted upon it. That's the way a Christian responds when God steps into a life. "Thanks for the interruption, I'll get right to it!" is our general response.

Bob Gass wrote the following prayer which illustrates this point. "Disturb me Lord when my dreams come true, only because I dreamed too small. Disturb me when I arrive safely, only because I sailed too close to the shore. Disturb me when the things I have gained cause me to lose my thirst for more of YOU. Disturb me when I have acquired success, only to lose my desire for excellence. Disturb me when I give up too soon and settle too far short of the goals you have set for my life." Have you been interrupted by God lately? When is the last time you were interrupted and thought, "Could this be God? How might God be using this interruption in my life?"

When the interruptions of life introduce fearful circumstances, remind yourself that the Lord is with you. Sometimes our interruptions are really irritating. Hot water heaters burst. A sick child cries. A financial disaster looms. All seem to frustrate us. It's times such as these that believers remember that they are not alone. Like the disciples in the boat who panicked when the storm came, we need to be reminded that the Lord is right there in the boat with us. Like Gideon who feared for his life and felt all alone and deserted by God, we need to open our eyes and ears and perceive that the Lord is with us. The next time an interruption comes, hear the Word of God, "The Lord is with you."

Some interruptions in life result in our safety. That slow driver may have been placed there by God delaying your trip so that an accident is averted. Balaam was riding a donkey enroute to do an ungodly act. God put an angel in the road to change his direction but he didn't see it. God eventually had to make the mule talk for Balaam to get the point. The interruption had a purpose! That annoying telephone call that interrupted your favorite television show, may have been used to deliver some bit of news which may seem insignificant now, but may prevent you from taking action which will result in terrible consequences. What it it that has interrupted you? Might it be something that is serving to protect? When the traffic cop gives you a ticket for driving 85 in a 65 zone might that interruption be the very thing that saves your life?

When we see impossible situations arising out of the interruptions of life, we need to be reminded that nothing is impossible with God. We may see no way. We may not understand how this interruption could possibly be a good thing. We may not begin to see how, but we need to trust that with God nothing is impossible. When Sera heard that she would have a baby though she was about 90 years old, she laughed and thought it was an impossible situation. But the response to Abraham was "Is there anything too hard for God? No matter how impossible an interrupting situation may seem, all things are possible with God.

When God Drops In

Finally, brothers and sisters, every believer must realize that sooner or later the Lord is going to move in every person's life. No man or woman can expect to live his entire life without a visit from the Lord. Even the ungodly get a visit from the Lord, every now and then.

Belshazzar was a great king who had a great party with all of his important friends using the golden vessels from the temple. The party went well until he had a visit from the Lord and read the handwriting on the wall.

The Pharaohs had mighty armies and kept the Children of Israel in bondage for 400 years, until the Lord interrupted the building of the mighty pyramids with the voice of Moses saying "Let my people go."

The people of Babel were building a great tower to reach to heaven. Their vain and selfish activity succeeded until it was interrupted by a visit from the Lord who confused their languages.

Every saint needs to remember that God often interrupts the devils activities in our lives.

When the king planned to throw the three Hebrew boys into the fiery furnace, his plan was interrupted by the Lord who put a fourth man in the fire, who looked like the Son of God.

When Daniel was thrown into the Lion's den, the plan to kill him was interrupted when God made the hungry lions as gentle as lambs.

No wonder Psalm 110:1 says, "sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool!"

Somebody dug a ditch for you last week, but the Lord interrupted the plan!

Somebody was plotting on you, but the Lord let the secret get back to you!

Somebody was working against your program last week, but the Lord had another plan!

Many people have been putting up a sign that tells God they don't want to be bothered. They don't say the words, but their actions speak louder than their words!

Some people skip their Sunday worship, because they think Sunday worship is an interruption of their Sunday rest!

Some people don't have a daily devotion because daily devotion is an interruption of the planning process for their day. They forget that the word of God says "this is the day that the Lord has made, let us rejoice in it!"

If serving Lord is an interruption in the grand scheme of things for us then we have placed a great sign on lives that says, "Do not disturb!"

I don't know about you, but I've found out that when it comes to the Lord, it's best to take the sign down!

I don't what the Lord will say to me everyday, but I don't want him to come to bless me and find me to busy to receive him.

I don't want the Lord to see a sign posted on my life that says "Do not disturb!"

I don't want to:

Stay in the dark because when the Lord came to show me to the light, I said "Do not disturb"

Stay in my poverty because when the Lord came to show me the way out, I said, "I don't feel like going today!"

Stay in my loneliness, because when the Lord came to be a comfort to me,I said, "I'm Tied up at the moment!"

Stay in in frustrations, because when the Lord came to show me my alternatives, I said, "Come back at another time!"

I don't know about you, but I don't want the Lord to pass me by! "Pass me not oh gentle savior! Hear my humble cry! While on others thou are calling, do not pass me by!"

When the Lord calls:

Bowed down heads are raised; Slow feet mount up on wings!

Deafeated hearts are filled with victory!; Depressed spirits are inspired again!

I so glad that 2000 years ago that the Lord stop by this old world and interrupted our corruption!

I so glad that he interrupted our condemnation to give us salvation!

I'm so glad that he interrupted our failure to give an opportunity to success!

I'm so glad that he interrupted our weakness to give us renewed strength!

I'm so glad that he interrupted our blindess to give us new sight!

I'm so glad that he picked up an old rugged cross...

Died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, he interrupted the silence of the night and arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Got Me Going In Circles

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 14, 1999

SCRIPTURE:"And ye shall compass the city, all ye men of war, and go round about the city once. Thus shalt thou do six days. And seven priests shall bear before the ark seven trumpets of rams' horns: and the seventh day ye shall compass the city seven times, and the priests shall blow with the trumpets. And it shall come to pass, that when they make a long blast with the ram's horn, and when ye hear the sound of the trumpet, all the people shall shout with a great shout; and the wall of the city shall fall down flat, and the people shall ascend up every man straight before him."—Joshua 6:3-5

Introduction

Do you sometimes feel you are just going around in circles? Do you feel like your life is taking you to New York when you're trying to go to California? Are you sailing West trying to get to the East? Often we doubt our life's direction and question whether we have made the right choices. These are the times when we feel as if our best efforts are fruitless because we are no closer to our goals today than we were two years ago. Even the repetitions themselves start to irritate us after a while as we search for ways to break the monotony of doing the same things all the time with very little prospect of change. Going in circles often suggests confusion, frustration and loss of direction.

Many people spend their entire lives doing a lot of everything but accomplishing little or nothing. They have no goals or direction. A man or a woman without a goal is like a ship without a rudder. Each will drift and not drive. Each will end up on the beaches of despair, defeat and despondency. John Henry Fabre, the great French naturalist, conducted a most unusual experiment with some Processionary Caterpillars. These caterpillars blindly follow the one in front of them. Hence, the name. Fabre carefully arranged them in a circle around the rim of a flower pot, so that the lead caterpillar actually touched the last one, making a complete circle. In the center of the flower pot he put pine needles, which is food for the Processionary Caterpillar. The caterpillars started around this circular flower pot. Around and around they went, hour after hour, day after day, night after night. For seven full days and seven full nights they went around the flower pot. Finally, they dropped dead of starvation and exhaustion. With an abundance of food less than six inches away, they literally starved to death, because they confused activity with accomplishment.

There are many ways to go around in circles. People who have fail in love despite their best efforts often feel like they are going in circles. Parents who fail at motivating their children to do their best often feel they are going in circles. Business efforts that see more dead ends than runways often go in circles. Anytime our efforts seem to be fruitless, we have a tendency to feel we are going in circles.

Yet, there are times when the circles we travel are divinely inspired. These are times when something inside of us keeps leading us in a direction that is totally opposite from that which we desire. It is frustrating because we can't see the purpose. It is troublesome because it is seems an endless, thankless, unrewarding spiral that has no known purpose or direction.

As Christians, we have resolved to let God lead us. We have pledge to follow his direction regardless. "Wherever he leads me, I will follow...I go with him, with him, all the way!"

Expositions

This text focuses on the people of Israel as they marched in circles around the walls of Jericho.

God promised Joshua and the people that he would give them the victory if they proceeded into Canaan and followed his instructions. That took a great deal of courage because the city's of new country were well fortified and filled with skilled soldiers. Israel's soldiers were untrained and untested in battle.

God told the people he would provide the victory, but he did not tell them how. They simply were to march forward on faith alone.

God's instructions were that the entire army would march around Jericho once a day for six days. Half the army would lead the way as a front guard. They would be followed by seven priests, each blowing on a shofar, a trumpet made out of a ram's horn. Priests carrying the ark of the Lord would come next, and then the rest of the army would serve as a rear guard to complete the procession. On the seventh day that processional would continue seven times around the city. At the end of those times the priests were to give an extra long blast on the shofars, and then the entire nation, all two million people, were to shout at the top of their lungs. God promised that the walls would then collapse, which would make it easy for the soldiers to enter the city.

The people must have felt a little foolish marching around the city blowing horns. The people of Jericho must have been amused watching this untrained army march around their city walls blowing on trumpets. They would make easy targets for sure. They had few weapons and it seemed all they knew how to do was blow on trumpets.

Even the Israelites themselves must have felt a little silly. It would have been easier if they had known the plan, then they would have understood why they were marching around the walls, but they didn't. If Joshua had at least given their generals some direction other than simply marching around the wars they would have been more comfortable. They had no idea what they were to do other than march around in circles. God had the plan and he knew exactly how he was going to accomplish the outcome.

God had a plan in New Testament times too? In John 6:5-6 when Jesus was faced with five thousand hungry people in the Galilean highlands, He asked Philip, "Where are we to buy bread, that these may eat?" Jesus knew how the problem was going to be solved: He would feed the people miraculously. But the he tested the faith of his disciples to follow his instructions. They were confused for a moment, but decided it was best to follow Christ's instructions and the rest is history, 5000 were fed with much left over!

From a human perspective, God's plan for the conquest of Jericho was foolish, however. God delights in using plans and people that seem foolish to the world. That truth is at the heart of 1 Corinthians 1:26-29: "For consider your call, brethren; not many of you were wise according to worldly standards, not many were powerful, not many were of noble birth; but God chose what is foolish in the world to shame the wise, God chose what is weak in the world to shame the strong, God chose what is low and despised in the world, even things that are not, to bring to nothing things that are, so that no human being might boast in the presence of God." Whether it's Joshua with these trumpets, Gideon with torches and pitchers, or David with a sling, God delights in using weakness and seeming foolishness to defeat his enemies and glorify his name.

Strange Ways of God

Today there are many believers who are frustrated because it seems that life is carrying them in circles. Nothing they try to do seems to succeed and they seem to be wasting valuable time accomplishing nothing. When we are troubled that our goals seem to elude us and obstacles seem to block our path continuously, consider three ideas while you walk the circular path God has given you.

If you have placed your life in God's hands, trust Him completely. The strange, roundabout march of Joshua illustrates that God sometimes accomplishes his purposes in mysterious ways. He may not lead us in obvious paths when He intends to show His power.

Scottish pastor and author George Matheson (1842-1906) wrote, "There are times when I get work to do, the good of which I cannot see. Sometimes . . . there is put into my hands a trumpet when I think it should be a sword. Sometimes I am sent on a long circuitous march when I am expecting to be retained for the assault. These moments are very hard for me. . . . Help me at such moments, O Lord, to say, 'One step enough for me'!" We are not to ask, "Why the long march when we could be fighting the battle?" "Why the noisy trumpet?" It is enough to know that God is leading. Although we cannot always see the promised land, yet we may trust the guidance of the promised Hand.

Placing our lives in God's hand completely means closing our eyes and depending on him to make the walls fall down, even if it means doing something that others call silly like walking in circles and blowing my horn.

Faith without works leads us in circles. We must consider the possibility that we may be going in circles because we are not fully following God's plan. God has devised a perfect plan for our lives. We may not be achieving what he expects because we may be partially implementing what he told us to do.

A Christian man worked each day transporting tourists across a lake. On occasion he would present the Gospel and its implications for life in a most unusual way. He had painted the word "Faith" on one of the oars of his rowboat and "Works" on the other. When they got quite far from shore, he would stop, then, beginning to row with only the one oar marked "faith," he would cause the boat to go in circles to the left. Reversing the process, he would pull on the other oar marked "works," and they would circle in the opposite direction. By this time the bewildered passengers were waiting for an explanation. This afforded him a wonderful opportunity to give them the truth concerning discipleship and the Christian life. He always concluded by saying, "You see, neither faith nor works can stand alone. They are twins that cannot be separated!" (James 2:20) Faith without works leads us in a circle. Works without faith takes us in a different direction but still in a circle.

Sometimes God leads us in circles to accomplish his will: If the account of Israel at Jericho does anything, it reminds us that God sometimes has us to walk in circles to accomplish his will. There may be a reason that only God knows why we keeping ending up at square one every time we try some big venture. We are familiar with the hymn God, "Moves in a Mysterious Way." It has been a source of great comfort and blessing to many of God's people since William Cowper wrote it in the 18th century. Yet few people know of the unusual circumstances that led to its composition.

William Cowper was a Christian, but he had sunk to the depths of despair. One foggy night he called for a horsedrawn carriage and asked to be taken to the London Bridge on the Thames River. He was so overcome by depression that he intended to commit suicide. But after 2 hours of driving through the mist, Cowper's coachman reluctantly confessed that he was lost. Disgusted by the delay, Cowper left the carriage and decided to find the London Bridge on foot. After walking only a short distance, though, he discovered that he was at his own doorstep! The carriage had been going in circles. Immediately he recognized the restraining hand of God in it all. Convicted by the Spirit, he realized that the way out of his troubles was to look to God, not to jump into the river. As he cast his burden on the Savior, his heart was comforted. With gratitude he sat down and penned these reassuring words: "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform; He plants His footsteps in the sea, and rides upon the storm. O fearful saints, fresh courage take, the clouds you so much dread are big with mercy, and shall break in blessings on your head."

Another old hymn urges us to continue despite disappointments saying, "farther along we'll know all about it. Farther along we'll understand why, cheer up my brother walk in the sunshine, we'll understand it all bye and bye!"

Where God Leads

Finally, brothers and sisters, following God's will may seem to take you in circles but it will always carry you to the right destination.

There are times when obedience to God appears fruitless and illogical but it always proves to be the right thing to do!

Moses must have felt like he was going in circles. He spent 40 years as a Prince of Egypt thinking he was somebody. He spent another 40 years as a shepherd in Midian believing he was a nobody. Then he spent his last 40 years leading Israel, realizing that God can take a nobody and make them somebody.

Jonah must have felt he was going in circles. God told him to go into Ninevah and he tried to go a different direction. He bought a ticket to sail on a ship but got a first class seat in the belly of a giant fish before he turned himself around and decided, "I'll do what you want me to do!"

David must have felt like he was going in circles. He started out his life as a shepherd boy saying, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want" and was praised by the king but before it was all over he was hunted as a criminal, exiled in a strange land, only to be returned as king and a man after God's own heart.

Naaman must have felt like he was going in circles. He'd been to one doctor after another trying to find a cure for his leprosy, but then the man of God told him to go wash in the river seven times. He must have felt ridiculous bathing seven times in muddy water, but when he came up the seventh time he realized that his life had gone full circle. He had gone down in leprosy but he had come and brand new man.

Somebody here today can testify that your life has gone full circle. There was a time when you were filled with:

DOUBT, but you have learned how to lean and depend on Jesus!

FEAR, but you have learned that the Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear?

HATRED, but the Lord has taken your hatred and turned it into love!

Have you gone full circle?

Have you learned that the Lord can take your:

QUESTIONS and give you answers; WORRIES and give you consolation!

BITTERNESS and give you sweetness; WEAKNESS and give you strength!

FAILURE and give you success; DEFEAT and give you victory!

I don't know about you, but I've found out that the Lord can take your life around in circles, then take you where you are supposed to go!

I've found out that he'll pick you up and turn you around. He'll plant your feet on solid ground!

The God we serve is a full circle God!

He can pick us up from nowhere and carry us anywhere!

He can push us from back here and put us over yonder!

He can lift us from down here and put us up there!

He’s a full circle God who left the heaven, came down here for 33 long years!
Died out on Calvary!
Arose from the Grave..
But one day he took flight on cloud and went back home again.
I hear the voice of the angels asking, “Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven!”
The circle is still not complete because he’s coming back again!
I don’t know about you, but I want to be ready when he comes!

The Measure of My Days

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

March 13, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "LORD, make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know how frail I am" Psalm 39:4

Introduction

How do you measure the impact of our lives? Sometimes we feel that our lives are insignificant when compared to the great names we study or heroes whose life stories a part of our folklore. Sometimes the really great accomplishments of life are not made by our hands but by the hands of those we touch along the way; those whose existence and success we make possible through our unselfish efforts. How do you measure the impact of such a life?

Sometimes the decision not to withhold love is the difference between whether or not the world receives a gift God has sent. We never know how God intends to use the lives he puts within our trust. How would you advise a mother who was pregnant with her fifth child based on the following facts: "Her husband had syphilis. She had tuberculosis. Their first child was born blind. Their second child died. Their third child was born deaf. Their fourth child had tuberculosis. "The mother is considering an abortion. Would you advise her to have one?" In view of these facts, some would agree that she should have an abortion, but if this mother had she would have killed the great composer Ludwig von Beethoven!"

Measuring the importance of a life has little to do with longevity, but the long life of a caring person has plenty of time to do great works.

We cannot measure the life of a saint using yard sticks or measuring tapes. These only measure the outward growth of the body. Neither can we measure it using weights and scales they only measure accumulated substance. The life of a saint must be gauged by a different measure. It is a measure that is not empirical. It does not quantify by natural means and does not register on the scale of the natural order.

The life of a saint must be measured by God's standards, for he is the righteous and just judge.

As Christians, we strive to remember that Psalm 37:23 reminds us that "The steps of a good man are ordered by the LORD: and he delighteth in his way." The measure of our lives is the degree to which we have ordered our steps in the way of the Lord.

Exposition

The 39th Psalm paints a picture of a quiet elderly saint, who had lived a measured life.

The psalm, written by David, is a testimony of a good life lived before God. It is a picture of the mature saint who has learned to measure days and remain at peace despite the raging storms of life.

Though enemies surround the saint and troubles appear on every hand, David said in verse two, "I was dumb with silence, I held my peace." The quiet saint David described was sometimes difficult to measure for the quiet saint was silent even in good times, praising God within, and occasionally a show of expression gave a hint of the fire that burned inside.

The quiet saint referred to was David himself, who had earned the right to speak in retrospect. God had been good to him and opened many doors for him. There were times when he could have spoken out against enemies but held his peace. On other occasions he could have lifted a hand against his adversaries, but he remained silent. Then in his senior years, David recognized that his life was measured. In verse five he notes, "Behold thou has made my days as a handbreath." That is, they are short and easily measured. A hand breadth is the amount of space that one hand covers, minus the thumb. Like the four seasons, of spring, summer, autumn and winter, his life is but a hand breath.

The measured life is one that recognizes the omnipotence of God in every respect. It is measured in hand breaths of spiritual qualities that indicate the nature of one's spiritual walk, including faith, humility, service and salvation. These four mark the measure of the saved life.

Measuring A Saint

Since David suggested that our days are measured in hand breaths or by four fingers, how do we measure our lives? What are four standards that could be used to measure a saint's life? What is our hand breath measure? If we measure the life of a saint, we would find:

SMALL HEAD: The world is preoccupied with those who measure their importance by their status. Many seek to be the richest, smartest, fastest, and greatest, thinking that is the only way they can leave a lasting impact on the world. In the process, many get the big head as the accolades of the world fill their ears and they are unable to resist the steady flow of praise from men. However, the measure of a saint is not in the big head but just the opposite. Saints are measured by the degree of their humility. Matthew 20:26 says, "But it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." One measure of a saint is in her ability to do works of charity and love without requiring or expecting praise or recognition. The humble saint never thinks more of themselves than they really are in the sight of God. The humble saint wears a small hat because he or she has a small head.

STRONG HANDS: We also measure a life by its industry, ie.,whether or not a saint, when able, spent his or her time wisely engaged in gainful employment that would glorify God. 1 Thessalonians 4:11 says, "And that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you." Whether the hands are those of a laborer or those of a humble custodial worker. Whether they were the hands of one who could lift great loads or those of one who carefully cooked and baked fine foods for family, church and friends...the hands of the saints are busy hands, that were dedicated to the service of others in the name of the Lord. Busy hands are those that help the poor and the needy. Busy hands are those that work to lift the burdens of others. Busy hands are those that feed the homeless, and care for the lonely. Busy hands are those which work constantly, while they can. These are the hands that John referred to when he said, " I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work."

GRACIOUS HEART: What measure of a saint would be complete if it did not measure a saint's heart. A measure of one's heart is a measure of one's compassion. Compassion is the sum total of a person's affinity with charity, forgiveness, mercy, sympathy, and kindness. A saint who is not merciful, forgiving, and sympathetic doesn't measure well at all. A saint who is inhospitable and irritable, showing no lasting feel for the least of God's kingdom, measures small in the grand scheme of God's plan. If you want to measure a saint, see whether or not she was willing to help others, despite not having much herself. Measure whether or not she was willing to share her resources to help somebody along the way. Was her heart always reaching out to some lonely child? Were her arms always stretched forth to give an understanding embrace? Was she usually gracious, even in strained circumstances? Gracious hearts are those enlarged by the love of God. They will run over with the joy of the Lord.

SAVED SOUL: The greatest measure of a Saint's life has nothing to do with anything temporal, but is purely spiritual. The greatest measure has nothing to do with the extent of one's education, the amount of property accumulated or the extent of one's travels and knowledge about the world. The greatest measure of a Saint's life is whether or not the saint had a "saved soul."

It is the saved soul that measures well in the sight of God.

It is the saved soul that endures difficulties and tough times content that God will make a way somehow!

It is the saved soul that lives through wars and depressions and civil disorder with confidence and assurance, knowing God is in control.

It is the saved soul that weathers storms and turbulences by anchoring their souls to the word of God.

It is the saved soul that feeds on the word of God...

It is the saved soul that cries out "Guide me oh thou Great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land!"

If we are to measure the soul of a Saint, measure their faith in God's Amazing Grace!

It was that grace that provided for our salvation out on Calvary!
It was that grace that withstood the pain of death on an old rugged cross!
It was that grace that awakened the eyes of a sleeping savior early one Sunday morning!
It was grace...that brought us thus far and grace will see us through!

On Sunday March, 7, 1999 Sister Annie Broadnax was called to be measured by God. She had a humble spirit, working hands, a gracious heart and a saved soul!

Shared Bread

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 21, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body. He took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins."Matthew 26:26-28 " For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16

Introduction

What do you do with a great blessing? Do you keep it to yourself or do you share it with someone else? If God has blessed us to receive blessings we have two ways to respond, keep them to ourselves or share them with others. If the blessing was a new house, do you invite others to share or do you keep it to yourself. Can a person who has no transportation ride in your new car? Did you get a financial blessing? Did you keep it for yourself or did you share it with others? When you gain strength from an experience do your share your experience and testimony to strengthen others or do you keep it to yourself? Sharing is an act of passing on or distributing a portion of that which one has obtained. It is the essence of the Christian experience to share what God has given us with others.

While there are many people who share today, there was a time in our community, especially in more rural areas, when sharing was personal. When a farm family killed a hog, folks all around were rejoicing as family members made personal visits and left smartly wrapped packages of smoked ham for a neighbor. A good watermelon didn't taste well unless a neighbor close by was given a taste of that melon you said was so sweet that sugar dripped from the rhine. Sharing is personal and sometimes it is confidential. A friend in need often avoids a great loss when something of value is privately shared to help avoid a catastrophe by someone else who cares. Sharing is contagious. One shared chocolate cake has a tendency to draw a potato pie or some other treat in return. People who share life's experiences together grow closer together.

There are some people who pride themselves in being stingy. In fact they have refined stinginess into an art form and they live by a creed that forbids them from sharing with anyone. Consider the old miser that had the reputation of being the stingiest geezer in the hills. A young boy decided to study the old miser and learn the art of being stingy from a pro. One day he visited the miser's house and took a gift of watermelon seeds, no sense wasting good melon on an old miser. The miser wasn't in but his wife was and she was stingy too, but not as stingy as her husband. She received the young boy's watermelon seeds and offered him a cup of coffee while he waited. She returned with only a cup, no sense wasting good coffee on a guest. The young boy thanked her and complimented her on her house saying, "You sure have a.." then cut it short, no sense wasting a perfectly good compliment when she knew the rest. Enjoying the boy's skill, the wife said, "You must be hungry, Sir, Here is a big cake; please eat it." At the same time she drew a circle with her hands and set a plate of imaginary cake in front of the boy. The boy was outdone. This woman was the stingiest person she had ever seen. Then the old miser himself came in. He became angry with his wife when he realized what she had done. He snatched back the imaginary chocolate cake and drew a half circle with his hand and said, "This is a boy, not a man, a half a chocolate would do just fine!" There are some people who won't even share with others, even that which is being shared will cost them nothing.

We should be thankful that God is willing to share the bounties of heaven with us. We are so undeserving but he doesn't give us slices of blessings based on our worthiness, if so our slice would be too small to imagine. God shares blessings with us to show his love for us.

As Christians, we recognize that the greatest way God shared a blessing with us came when he shared his only begotten Son with us. It was personal. It was sacrificial. Now, we must share him with others.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he gives instructions to his disciples concerning the elements of the Lord's supper.

The bread and the wine of the last meal were originally prepared to observe the Passover. Jesus, observing the Passover with them, took the occasion as an opportunity to emphasize how his life would be given as a sacrifice.

He took the cup and shared it with his disciples, saying it represented his blood, shed for the remission of sin. He took the bread and shared it also with his disciples. It would represent his body which would be given for the remission of sin.

The emphasis of the action is upon the fact that Christ "gave" to his disciples. He gave both in the Lord's supper and in life. He gave of himself to others.

In receiving what was given the disciples also received the mandate to give of themselves in an unselfish way, through sacrificial living and service to others.

Sharing Our Substance

Today there many people who have learned that some of their greatest experiences are those which were shared with others. There is no happiness that can exceed that which is derived from sharing a blessing with someone else.

The bread and the wine of biblical times was the embodiment of community effort. In the time of our Lord the work of many families, even of whole communities, was that of growing grain and cultivating grapes. As these families worked in the production of grain and grapes their whole lives became involved in the process. Their hopes, their associations with each other, their intentions, their good deeds, and their attitudes toward each were all intertwined in the bread and wine they produced.

Thus, when Jesus took bread and wine and blessed it and shared it with his disciples, he in essence urged them to give of themselves to others as he would soon give of himself. The Lord's supper became a call to sacrifice. It also became a call for believers to share the essence of themselves with others.

EVEN A LITTLE IS A LOT TO GOD: Sometimes we feel that what we have is of little significance. This is the attitude of those who forget that even a little is a lot to God. In John 6:8 there is an account of a boy with five loaves of bread and two fishes. Jesus took this small bread, offered from a believing soul, and made it feed five thousand people, with plenty left over. God has done the same for believers today. The mother who struggles to maintain her home with meager resources, but offers a hand to help others, seems to always have enough for her family. The man with little spare time who takes what little he has and shares it with some child as a mentor, tutor or listening ear, seems to always find more time somehow. The housewife who prepared enough food for six plates, seemed to have enough to prepare a seventh plate for the widow woman that lives next door. God has a way of blessing the resources of those who share of themselves with others. We don't exactly know how he does it, but it is amazingly true, that the more we give, the more he gives to us!

GOD WORKS THROUGH PEOPLE TO MEET NEEDS: Our actions are the embodiment of answered prayers. Someone has prayed that God would help them with housing, financial or medical problems. The answer to that problem often comes through the actions of God's people. God has no hands but our hands. He has no feet but our feet. When God responds, in most cases, he uses the skill and resources of his people to answer the prayers of those in distress. When Israel cried out to God for deliverance from Egypt, he could have simply clapped his hands and set them free. Instead, he used Moses to begin the process. God could have batted his eyes and created the temple at Jerusalem, but he chose to use Solomon and the people of Israel to accomplish his will. That's why the song writer's words are so important, "Make me a blessing. Make me a blessing to someone today!" It is a plea of every believer to be an instrument that God uses to bring sunshine in the lives of those struggling in darkness.

GOD BLESSES WHAT IS SHARED AND THOSE WHO SHARE: God blesses our meager resources so that they become abundant blessings. He blesses what is shared and the person who shares. When we share our home with another person, give lodging to a stranger, or provide a meal to a hungry person, God blesses both what we do and we personally receive a blessing for our action. The action is being recorded. Matthew 25:37- finds Jesus speaking of the reward of the righteous. They were being rewarded for feeding Christ when he was hungry, giving him water when he was thirsty and clothing him when he was naked. The question was asked, "When did we do this?" The answer came, "..as ye have done it so to the least of these my brethren ye have done it also unto me." Each act of sharing is observed and recorded by God. Each act of kindness is recorded in God's book of records. When we stand before God our willingness to share and help others will be noted. Revelation 14:13 "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them."

Shared Bread

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that God gave us the best example of sharing when he shared his only begotten son with the world.

Sharing is most meaningful when the recipient realizes that he has received something of value at considerable risk of life and substance.

When David was being pursued by King Sau, he was hungry and afraid. He knocked on the door of the priests, who took their lives into their own hands by sharing the sacred bread that had been set aside for the worship of the Lord. The bread they shared with David, saved his life that day, but it does not compare with the bread God shared with the world.

Elijah met a widow who was down to her last cup of meal and cruse of oil. Her barrel was empty and she was about to eat her last cake of bread and die. Yet, in her poverty she was ready and willing to share her last piece of bread with a stranger. God blessed her empty barrel so that every time she went to it, it kept producing enough to make one more pan of bread. The bread she received sustained her life, but even that bread does not compare with the bread God shared with the world.

When Israel wandered in the wilderness, it complained of a lack of bread and water. God moved in a miraculous way to put meat on their tables every day and he rained down bread from heaven to sustain them. Yet, even the manna of the wilderness cannot compare to the bread God shared with the world.

Jesus said in John 6:32 " Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven. For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world. Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread. And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst."

The bread that God shared with the world is a wonder working bread!

God's bread gives:

STRENGTH to those who are weak; INSPIRATION to those who are frustrated and confused!

HOPE to the hopeless; RENEWAL to those who are in despair!

PICKS UP those who are let down; LIFTS UP those who have been let down!

SAVES those who are lost and gives NEW ENERGY to those who wait on him. For

I hear the word declare that “they that wait upon the Lord shall mount up on wings as eagles, they shall run and not be weary. They shall walk and not faint!”

God’s bread is QUICKER that hoe cakes. While we are still praying, our help is on the way!

LIGHTER than light bread. Those who wander in the dark will find that he is the light of the world!

SWEETER than raisin bread. His goodness takes the bitterness of hard times and sweetens its taste. No wonder the song writer said, “I found a savior and he’s sweet I know!”

MORE ASSORTED than corn bread. Corn bread is good with greens, rice and gravy, stew meat or chicken. If there is nothing else, corn bread goes good with just corn bread and gravy. But God’s bread goes with every situation. In my days of happiness, God is there! In my moments of sadness, God is there too! When my soul is hungry, God is there! No matter what my situation, God is there!

God’s bread is better than wonder bread because he helps us to grow in many ways. No wonder the song writer declared: “Bread of heaven, Bread of heaven, feed me till I want no more!”

When God saw a world hungry for the bread of life, he decided to share his only begotten son to feed them the power of salvation!

One evening, 2000 years ago, Jesus, the bread of heaven, took an old rugged cross and carried it to Calvary!

He died on that cross so that we might live!

But early Sunday morning, Quicker than instant biscuits in a hot stove!

Early Sunday morning, faster than light bread browns in a hot toaster!

Early Sunday morning, God’s shared bread arose from the grave with....all power in his hands!

Put Your Eggs In The Right Basket

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 4, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain..but now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." 1 Corinthians 15:12-14,20. "He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay." Matthew 28:6

Introduction

Have you ever wondered whether or not you have this religion thing just right? Most believers have experienced a time in their lives in which they questioned whether or not they were actually in the right religion? Some believe that Budda is the way. Others believe in the order and power of Islam. Even among Christians there seems to be some who say that even though we believe in Christ we are doomed to hell if we don't worship on a certain day, speak in a certain way, or offer praise with the same intensity and fervor of the next person. That gets to be confusing for some people who have trouble sorting it all out. Many have privately asked the question, "Am I doing this thing right? Am I in the right religion?" Believers have come to know that true religion is a matter of faith. It's what you believe about God and your relationship to him as it is revealed to you through the written word and through your own life experiences with him. We believe that if we trust God fully and follow his word completely that his spirit will lead us to the truths. We need to do those things which are right in this life as we prepare for the next.

One of the great truths that makes us certain that we are on the right path is the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Believers acknowledge and celebrate that truth every Lord's Day. The world wide family of believers recognizes it on the first Sunday following the first full moon of spring. The world calls that day "Easter." The celebration takes on many means of expressions, many of which come to represent new life or the newness of life. Brightly colored eggs, a completely secular tradition, has come to represent renewed hope. There are other symbols too, such as bunny rabbits, known for their fertility, new clothing and a plethora of other seasonal innovations.

Eggs often represent the essence of life for many people. They are fragile and can be easily broken. If properly fertilized and nurtured, eggs can be the source of new life. In simpler times, one of the main chores of children was to gather eggs on the farm. A clumsy child learned an important lesson very early...never put all of your eggs in one basket. If you happen to fall and break them, there are still some remaining.

There are many who have adopted this philosophy in life. In finance, they diversify their investments, seeking to shield themselves from the complete failure of one investment over another. There are some who even use that idea in their personal relationships, choosing to have two or three relationships going on at the same time, just in case one or the other falls apart.

Unfortunately, there are also many who approach their spiritual lives in the same manner. They are afraid to put all of their eggs in one basket. They will not put their entire trust and faith in God. They put a few eggs in God's basket and a few are placed in the basket of their own understanding and effort. That makes them feel comfortable because they feel they have successfully hedged themselves against failure. "Because I show up at church a few times a year, I have a small investment in heaven. Because I have invested my time, talents and resources wisely, I have a secure investment in the world." They feel they are safe because they don't put all of their eggs in one basket.

As Christians, we see the empty tomb as a miraculous inspiration. It is a reminder that we are on the right track. It is a reminder that faith in God is the right basket and that all of our eggs, should be put in the basket of his care and compassion. It is a vivid expression of how hope, though crushed to the ground will rise again. True believers have all of their eggs in the basket of God's love and care!

The Right Basket

Today there are millions who are not sure whether trusting in God is the right basket. Even if it is they are not sure it is wise to put all of their eggs in that basket. One of the great messages of the resurrection is the reassurance to the faithful that God is still in control and can do everything that he has promised. People who put their trust in him are in no danger of losing anything.

THE EMPTY TOMB IS EVIDENCE: We know we are on the right track because of the empty tomb. If our faith is based upon the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the grave, then we would be putting our eggs in the wrong basket if it turns out that Jesus did not rise from the grave. Paul, speaking to the Corinthians said the same words in a different way. 1 Corinthians 15:14 says, "And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." However, the biblical record shows that we are right to trust God's resurrecting power because Christ is risen from the grave. When the women came to the tomb on Sunday morning to dress the body of Jesus they received great news. "He is not here. He is risen. Come see the place where the Lord lay." The women saw an empty tomb. The disciples saw an empty tomb.

The soldiers saw an empty tomb. Everyone involved realized that he did exactly as he said. He had risen from the dead after three days and three nights.

The empty tomb is evidence that those who believe can trust the power of God to overcome any obstacle to keep his promises to us, even the obstacle of death. It should also encourage those who believe in God that in our worst moments God can lift us from the jaws of peril, death and persecution and breathe new life into our dreams hopes and ambitions.

The empty tomb shows us a living Christ, who defeated Satan and arose triumphantly. It means that since Christ arose, I can sing with renewed hope, "I'll rise again!"

THE TESTIMONY OF THE WITNESSES IS EVIDENCE: We know we have our eggs in the right basket because of the testimony of the witnesses. The list of witnesses who could verify the truth of the resurrection experience was long. Luke 24:10 tells of Mary Magdalene, Joanna, Mary the Mother of James and others. All 11 of his disciples, two men who walked down the Emmaus Road, and countless others all became witnesses of this great truth. Their testimony is a witness to a great work God performed on that Sunday morning.

There is no greater assurance that any believer has about the power of God than the testimony of persons who have been touched by the hand of God themselves. The testimony of the faithful reassures others that they have their eggs in the right basket.

When God has touched a life and a testimony is given, it is an encouragement to others who are also trusting in God to know that what he has done for you, he will do for them too!

One man who is sick is encouraged to hear the testimony of someone God has healed!

Someone who has been experiencing a difficult time is encouraged when they hear how God helped someone else climb up the rough side of the mountain!

THE PRESENCE OF RESURRECTED LIVES IS EVIDENCE: We know we have our eggs in the right basket because of the evidence seen in the resurrected lives around us. When Christ arose from the dead there were many people who actually, physically arose from the dead with him. Matthew 27:52-53 says, "And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared to many." When the believers saw the dead saints walking and talking again, they knew they were not believing in Christ in vain.

Today we have seen hundreds of examples of lives resurrected through the power of God. Each one of them reaffirms that we are putting our eggs in the right basket.

When we see marriages that have crumbled into the dust of divorce, restored, renewed and rejuvenated through the power of God, we know we have our eggs in the right basket!

When we have seen youth who have come to a greater knowledge of God and watched their entire lives turn around. That's when we know we have our eggs in the right basket!

When we see people who were once slaves to alcohol and drugs, completely turn their lives around by the power of God, we know we have our eggs in the right basket!

When we see people who had buried themselves in self pity and wallowed in bitterness step out of their self imposed tombs to a new life and a new spirit in Christ, we know we have our eggs in the right basket!

When we see people turn their backs on sinful life styles, amoral living, adulterous relationships, and immorality, we know we have our eggs in the right basket!

What God did that Sunday morning, he's still doing today!

He's still rolling stones away from lives entombed in faithless living!

He's still raising dead spirits with a new joy and enthusiasm!

He's still raising new hope and new spirit among all who believe! That's why we know we have our eggs in the right basket!

Giving God Everything

Finally, brothers and sisters, there comes a point when we know we have the right basket and we decide to put all of our eggs in the right basket.

To put all of our eggs in the right basket means to completely trust and depend on the Lord.

It means to look at the evidence of the resurrection and realize that Christ died and is alive today!

It means to consider the testimony of those who have had dealings with the Lord in their own lives.

It means to look at all the people we know, who have changed their walk and talk after knowing God for themselves.

When Israel came into the Promised Land some folks tried to put some of their eggs in God's basket and others in the basket of the Canaanite gods. But I hear Joshua telling them to put their eggs in the right basket, "As for me and my House, we will serve the Lord!"

Elijah had a great contest with the Prophets of Baal. He asked the question, "How long, halt ye between two opinions?" He said if Baal be god, then follow him. If God be God then follow him! You got to put your eggs in the right basket!

Isaiah said, if the Lord needs somebody, here am I send me. He put all his eggs in the right basket!

Giving God everything means, giving him your:

FAILURES and trusting him for your success; QUESTIONS and trusting him for the answers!

DOUBTS and looking to him for confirmations; TIMID SPIRIT and trusting him for a new boldness

BURDENS and trusting him to make them light; DEFEATS and trusting him for victories;

WEAKNESS and trusting him for renewed strength;

Consider Sanctified Sally's Easter Basket. Every Easter Sunday Sanctified Sally came to church carrying an empty Easter basket, much to the amusement of the members. Somebody finally asked her the meaning of the empty basket. She said "There was a time when I carried around a full basket of burdens. I had Black eggs that represented my troubles. I had red eggs that represented my sins. I had brown eggs that represented my lost hope. I had gray eggs that represented my sad spirit. But one day I heard Jesus say, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy burdened and I will give you rest! I gave him all my burdens; all of my sins, all of my lost hope! All of my troubles and sadness! It may look funny to you today, but I may have an empty basket, but my burdens sure are light!"

Somebody here today is carrying a heavy load! You need to take that load and put it in the right basket!

Somebody here today is struggling with the guilt of sin! You need to take that load and put it in the right basket!

Somebody here today is crying in the midnight hour! You need to take that worry and put it in the right basket!

We know it's the right basket because we have the evidence of the resurrection!

We know it's the right basket because we have the testimony of the saints!

We know it's the right basket because we see the wonder working power of God in the lives of the saints!

We know it's the right basket because we know the story!

It's the story of Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who stayed in the grave for three days and nights!

Jesus, who arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

You can put your trust in him because he is alive!

No wonder the song writer said, "He lives, he lives, Christ Jesus lives today. He walks with me, he talks with along life's narrow! He lives, He lives, salvation to impart. You ask me how I know he lives.

He lives within my heart!

What could you possibly see in me?

SCRIPTURE: "In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another 1 John 4:9-10; "Make my joy complete: be of the same mind, having the same love, being in full accord and of one mind. Do nothing from selfish ambition or conceit, but in humility regard others as better than yourselves. Let each of you look not to your own interests, but to the interests of others. Let the same mind be in you that was in Christ Jesus."Philippians 2:2-5

Introduction

What could your mate possibly see in you? The humble must struggle to discover the salient features about themselves that would attract others. The vain person has no problem. Their vanity responds: It is my good looks, charm, giving spirit, generosity, remarkable body, wit, intelligence and of course, my modesty. Those who are single spend a great deal of time looking for a mate. Some do so without asking, what about me is attractive? Some are married but have no idea what it is that their mate sees in them. Is he attracted to your looks? Hopefully not, because looks are so fragile, shapes are so unpredictable and muscles turn to flab so easily. Is it your income? Hopefully not because what is rich today can easily be poor tomorrow. What is it that our friends or spouses see in us that makes us attractive to them. What could they possibly see in us?

Sometimes we can't see for looking. Consider Beautiful Beneatha's choice. Beneatha was the most beautiful woman in her one red light town. She could have had any man she wanted because she was a feast for the eyes and a sight to see. When she married Bennie the blind man everyone in town was shocked. When asked why, of all the men could have had, she chose to marry blind Bennie, she said, "Even though he has no eyes, he looked deep into my soul and loved me despite what he saw!"

The success of any relationship depends upon what one sees when he or she looks deep into the soul of the other. That look goes deeper than outward beauty and other superficial considerations. It considers the essence of what makes us who we are. Often “who we are” is entangled in webs of confusion, uncertainty and doubt. Sometimes “who we are” is hidden behind an obnoxious personality that makes it hard to see. Sometimes attituds can muddy the clear waters of our spirit so much that “who we are” is hidden almost completely from view. Those who love us, see the mud, the tangled web of personality, and the attitude shifts that represent all of our faults. They love us because they also see the “who we are” that really defines us and makes us special to them.

As Christians, what we look for in each person, especially in a soul mate is the love of God. We have learned that there is no happiness that can come from a relationship if the person with whom we share the secret of “who we are” is not one and the same with us in our love for God. We cannot experience love unless our search through the soul of our mate finds God. Where God is, there is love, for God is love!

Exposition

This text focuses on John as he gives instruction about the fullness of a believer’s responsibility to love.

John, in this epistle, points out that God demonstrated an attribute of his Godliness when he sent Christ to this earth. He demonstrated his love. His love was so complete that he sent his son to pay for our sins. It is a demonstrationof Godly perfection.

It is the same spirt that Paul suggested for every believer’s relationship when he wrote in Philippians 2:2-5 “make my joy complete: be of the same mind, having the same love, being in full accord and of one mind. Do nothing from selfish ambition or conceit, but in humility regard others as better than yourselves. Let each of you look not to your own interests, but to the interests of others. Let the same mind be in you that was in Christ Jesus”

When man sinned it left an emptiness in the divine order. Christ came to complete the arrangement and to restore man to sonship with God.

We should see a friend

What could you possibly see in me? Is it possible that your spouse or the person with whom you are sharing a relationship sees you as a friend? There are millions of people today who are married to someone that is not their friend. Friendship is vital to the health of any relationship. Your spouse should be your friend before becoming your sexual partner, provider, husband or wife. Your friend is your confidant, buddy, colleague, associate, partner and your ally. Your friend is a person who peers deep into your soul and knows you for who you really are and despite what is discovered still sticks with you anyway. Your friend knows your flaws, shortcomings and irritations and still sticks with you. Your friend dares to differ with you, tells you when you are wrong, tries to keep you from falling, but is ready to pick up the pieces if your stubbornly fall flat on your face.

Our friends sometimes anger us because of their truthfulness.

Our friends sometimes disappoint us because they do not flatter us as do others.

Our friends call it straight and we know it. They are our mirrors because they reflect who we really are not what we say we are.

Marriages work when each partner is a friend to the other. They fail when friendship ceases. Those that begin outside of friendship are doomed to fail even before they begin.

More than a lover, your soul mate must be your friend. That's what one of Solomon's wives told the Daughter's of Jerusalem in Song of Solomon 5:16 "His mouth is most sweet: yea, he is altogether lovely. This is my beloved, and this is my friend, O daughters of Jerusalem."

We should see the perfection of ourselves

What could you possibly see in me? Is it possible that your spouse or friend sees qualities in you needed to complete themselves? No person is created as a turn key package, complete with everything we need or feel we need to be balanced. Most of us lack something. Our soul mates, despite their frailties and shortcomings in other areas fill in the empty blanks in our lives. They complete us by helping us to become the men and women God intends for us to be.

This perfecting presence is what brings out the best in each. Just as a wife will pick the lent off a husband's suit before he walks out of the door, he covers an uncovered slip strap before she leaves. Each works in greater ways to perfect the other by supplying that which the other needs. The wife of the blind man becomes his eyes. The husband of the lame woman becomes her legs. She becomes the ears for the husband who is deaf and he reaches for life for the wife who has given up hope. One finds perfection in the other.

In Ephesians 5: 25-28 Paul wrote, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish. So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself. "

The idea here is that Christ was willing to do whatever was necessary to perfect the church to the point that it could stand before God without spot or wrinkle. What Paul suggests is that every couple watch the relationship between Christ and the church and do the same.

Husbands perfect their wives by speaking to them in forms other than grunts. Husbands who represent Christ in a Christian marriage should communicate with their wives as Christ does with the church through his word. Husbands should share their hopes, dreams and fears with their wives, even though the conversation may seem trivial at the time. She is perfected when she knows how her husband thinks and feels.

Wives perfect their husbands by making them know they respect them. The church accepts the leadership of Christ and Christ alone, so should every wife follow her Christian husband's lead. Her HUSBAND, not her pastor, Sunday School teacher, or favorite person is her leader. He is perfected when he knows he has the complete followship of his wife. Their marriage is perfected because they mutually respect each other.

Husbands and wives perfect each other by doing things together. There is no greater perfection for a marriage than a husband and wife who operate as a team, in every respect and endeavor. They come as a package becomes one perfects the other, like ice cream and cake!

Husbands and wives perfect each other by discerning each other's desires and needs and helping to satisfy them. The husband who didn't get a complete education often finds perfection when his wife walks across the stage. They are both perfected when she works to help him do the same if it is his desire. A marriage is perfected when one partner seeks to fill in the void that makes the other's life incomplete.

We should see the power of God at work

What could you possibly see in me? Perhaps your soul mate sees the power of God at work in your life. Your soul mate knows your frustrations, difficulties and problems, but more than any other person can see the power of God at work in your life.
There is no force that can build a relationship better than the power of God.
A Christian woman is drawn to a Christian man because she can see how God is using him to bring her to spiritual fullness. A Christian man is attracted to a Christian woman for the same reason: He can see how God uses the energy, enthusiasm, practices, habits and beliefs of this woman to make him a better man. He sees the power of God at work in her and how that power, when it comes through her, builds, strengthens and empowers him to be a better man.
When your soul mate is a person of character that's an evidence of God at work.
When your soul mate becomes an instrument of God for the building of the kingdom, that's the power of God at work.

When your soul mate becomes a walking advertisement for what the Holy Spirit can do in the life of a believer, that's the power of God at work! What could you possibly see in me? Maybe it's the power of God at work!

What does Does God See In Us?

While we ask questions of our soul mates about our own worthiness, we could very well ask that same questions with respect to our relationship with God. What could God possibly see in me?
We are creatures who are recklessly going out of control. What could God possibly see in us?
David in Psalm 8:4 asked the question, "What is man, that thou art mindful of him?

and the son of man, that thou visitest him?" What could God possibly see in us?
"For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour." What could God possibly see in us?
Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet.All sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field;
The fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas." What could God possibly see in us?
When we should be doing right, we end up doing wrong. What could God possibly see in us?
When we should be:

GOING FORWARD, we often going backward; STANDING UP we often somewhere sitting down;

SPEAKING AND TESTIFYING we never say a word; QUIET AND SILENT we are somewhere running our mouths.

CLIMBING HIGHER we often falling down; GETTER BETTER most of the times we are getting worse

SOBER AND CLEAR HEADED we are somewhere getting drunk; DOING RIGHT we are somewhere doing wrong

What could God possibly see in us?
We lie when we should be telling the truth!
We complain when should be giving thanks!
We show more greed than we do gratitude!
With all of these faults, what could God possibly seen in us?
I heard a song writer declare: "He looked beyond my faults and saw my need."
He looked beyond all my faults..
All my shortcomings..disappointments!
What God saw was a world that needed more love!
He saw lonely hearts that needed comforting!
He saw lost souls that needed saving!
So, 2000 years ago he sent his only begotten son to die out on Calvary!
He died!
But, Early Sunday morning..
He arose up from the grave with all power in his hands!

Doggie Bag Blessings!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 18, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "Then said the LORD unto Moses, Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather a certain rate every day, that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no." Exodus 16:4; "And Moses said, Let no man leave of it till the morning. 20Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and stank: and Moses was wroth with them." Exodus 16:19-20

Introduction

Have you ever dined out and asked for a doggie bag? Depending upon the restaurant, the response from the waiter may have ranged from blase to insult. In fine restaurants, where chefs regard themselves with the greatest amount of dignity and pride, a patron's request for a doggie bag is an insult. It is an insult that the customer did not eat the food and a double insult if the customer actually plans to take the chef's painstaking creation home to a dog! In general, those who dine at a cafeteria or a very casual cafe, may not draw any attention if they ask to take the TSO chicken home in a "doggie bag." Even doggie bags for the fine breads and cookies offered at some cafes are considered good taste. Don't try that at an exclusive restaurant. The chef himself may come to the front to give you a piece of his mind as he wonders to which side of the Jed Clampit family you are related.

Some people live by the doggie bag. If they are guests at your wedding reception or your dinner, they ask for doggie bags! If they go through a reception line, they want a doggie bag! Some will even ask for the food from your plate and then ask for a doggie bag to carry home your left overs.

Health inspectors these days are very careful to encourage patrons to follow what is known as the two hour rule. Food taken out of a restaurant must be eaten or refrigerated within two hours or deadly germs begin to form that could result in sickness or death. That's when some recognize immediately that there may be "death in the doggie bag!"

Why do they call them doggie bags anyway? A generation or two ago people actually requested table scraps to feed their dogs. They raked the scraps into the dog's bowl and the hungry pets would gulp them down without hardly a swallow. Today, however, doggie bags are rarely for the dogs. There are no scrap bags for the poor doggies! In fact, the dogs probably wouldn't eat them anyway, especially after they were raised on "Nibbles and bits!" and Purina products. "Doggie Bag" is just a phrase that means I, not my dog, plan to nibble on the bits when I get home.

Is it possible for us to desire more than our share of blessings from God? Even though we pray, "Give us this day our daily bread" is it possible for that some of us may want a little more for our doggie bag? Our daily bread is what it takes for us to live with reasonable comfort and security every day. Yet, even with such an assurance, there are many that have convinced themselves that they need more than just their daily bread...they must have a "doggie bag!"

As Christians, we have learned that God provides all of our needs through Christ Jesus. Whatever we need, he supplies to insure that we will never be in want or desperation. In very secret and compelling ways, God moves to provide for us on a daily basis. He presents us with a daily buffet of blessings that satisfies our every need. Because he is our God we end each day completely satisfied. We rejoice exceedingly because when God gets through blessing us, there's no need for ....doggie bags!

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as he explains the command of God with respect to the manner in which they would be fed.

Israel was about to witness a daily miracle of God that would happen so frequently in the lives of some that they would not even recognize it as a miracle, but as a chance of nature. They were trapped in the wilderness without the ability to care for themselves. God announced his place for their care.

RAIN DOWN BREAD FROM HEAVEN: God decided to provide for the daily needs of the people. He would arrange for wafer like bread morsels to appear each day in sufficient enough quantities to feed them. The bread was unlike any other bread. White like coriander seed, it tasted like wafers made with honey. "What is it," the people asked when they first saw it. In Hebrew they said, "Man hu?" What is it? "It's the bread the Lord has given you to eat." What is it? Man-na. That's what it is. Bread from heaven, from the hand of God. God is gracious. He provided daily bread for his people, His hand fed them in the wilderness, even when his people grumbled against him. The manna was a perfect food for the wilderness. It was renewed every morning. They had to carry nothing. Wherever they went in the wilderness it was there.

GATHER AT A CERTAIN RATE: Even though the people found manna laying around everywhere, every morning they were instructed to gather their bread by a rate prescribed by God. Each family was to gather no more than they needed each day. They were to gather no more and no less. At verse 16 Moses said, "gather of it every man according to his eating, an omer for every man, according to the number of your persons; take ye every man for them which are in his tents." An omer is just over a half gallon in size. The rate set by God was more than sufficient to supply the daily bread need of any person. An omer was to be collected for every person in the tent, meaning there would be sufficient enough supply for the day. In case some person miscalculated and gathered less than was prescribed God multiplied what little they had to make it sufficient for the day. If someone gathered too much he found that there was nothing left over. What he gathered would be what it took. Moses was ordered to measure what he collected to insure that no one broke God's law by getting more than their daily bread, but obviously some tried.

TAKE NOTHING AWAY: Their instructions were to take no more than necessary to make each day. Once their tables were set they were to eat everything without attempting save a little for the next day. There were to be no "doggie bags!" Verses 19-21 "And Moses said, Let no man leave of it till the morning. Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and stank: and Moses was wroth with them. And they gathered it every morning, every man according to his eating: and when the sun waxed hot, it melted."

A TEST OF OBEDIENCE: While God could have allowed the people to gather as much as they liked and preserved what they gathered to prevent it from spoiling, that wasn't his purpose. Preservation of resources was not beyond his power. Israel wandered in the desert for 40 years with the same shoes on their feet. They were preserved by the power of God. Obviously, God could have preserved the manna until the next morning, but it was not according to his purpose. His purpose was spelled out in Verse 4.." that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no." The entire idea of God providing and the people trusting in him and obeying him was a test of their willingness to follow him. If God said he would provide then he wanted the people to trust his word and obey his command rather than to attempt matters on their own. Their forty year journey proved that God would supply their needs. As they entered the promised land God increased the rate each man was blessed as the manna ceased. By this time they had witnessed that God's word was dependable and sure.

How God Blesses

Today there are millions of believers who have discovered that their lives are wilderness experiences much like that of Israel. Some approach that experience like Israel, grumbling and complaining. Others approach it with a sense of trust and faith, knowing God will help them every step of the way. For Israel, Manna was the substance of their everyday need. Today, our daily need for food, clothing, shelter & transportation becomes the essence of our "bread." Just like Israel, we look to God to supply that need.

FROM ABOVE YOUR HEAD, THERE'S BREAD: Just as God promised Israel that it would rain bread daily, God promises showers of blessings to believers. In Ezekiel 34:26 God said, "And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing." Just as loaves of bread did not literally fall out of heaven, there were, never-the-less, ample supplies of bread stuff floating like wafers in the air, so it is when God promises us showers of blessings. Don't look up and expect to see money drop out of the sky. Don't look for a job to be delivered to your door by a winged Angel. However, we should expect God to keep his word and provide us with showers of opportunities, openings, ideas and breaks, that will provide everything we need, according to God's appointed time and purpose. When rain drops fall, they fall in large quantities, only a portion of which any one individual needs to supply their need for nourishment and refreshment. The same promise that God made to Abraham in Genesis 12:3 he makes to believers today, "I will bless them that bless thee and curse them that curse thee." Our challenge is to trust that God will do that, even while we are waiting for him to provide.

BLESSED TO TEST: Israel found out that God constantly tested the nation. Often they measured up to his test, but they often failed as well. When he showered down blessings upon them, even that was a test to see how well we would respond to his instruction. It is the same for us today. The showers of blessings that we receive are tests of our ability to follow God's instruction, even while we are being blessed. When we get a new car, do we stay home to wash it or use it to come to worship? When we get a new house are we overly absorbed in decorating it and ignore our kingdom building responsibilities. If we acquire a new job or business opportunity, does it distract us from the work of the kingdom? It is possible that our blessings are tests of our obedience. In Matthew 25:23 the good servant was told that he was being doubly rewarded because he was "faithful over a few things" so God was making him ruler over many. The test of stewardship often comes with each blessing. If a believer can tithe on a dime and a dollar, then maybe he's ready for a thousand. The test of obedience often comes with each blessing. Does one remain faithful to all of the commandments of God after being blessed? Is he chaste? Is his morality in tact? Does he still worship, praise and maintain private devotion? The test of gratitude comes with each blessing. We should be ready to praise God for whom all blessings have come.

TO INCREASE THE RATE INCREASE THE FAITH: God has apportioned each person's gifts, material blessings and opportunities initially. Israel was supplied manna by the rate of one Omer per person. If in obedience someone did as they were commanded but fell short, they always came home with enough. Those that tried to get more, still came home with just enough.

There are many today that are still wrestling with the question of, "how much is enough?" Some are frustrated because no matter how much they gather, they never seem to accumulate anything. They work two and three jobs but still can barely make ends meet. They work more and it takes everything they get just to make ends meet. The believer who trusts God says, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want." He counts on God for his daily bread and let God take his little bowl of manna and makes it sufficient for health, safety and happiness.

Some have looked around at the opportunities for prosperity that surround them and have taken the doggie bag approach to life. They try to increase their rate without increasing their faith. They try to get it all but have difficulty doing so because it never seems to be enough. When they try to get more than God has apportioned, it tends to slip away from them, eaten up by taxes, bills, and a plethora of other liabilities.

True believers have learned that as they increase their faith, God himself increases their rate. He simply supplies all of their needs and then some, according to the display of a believer's faith.

Daily Bread

Finally, brothers and sisters, every believer must remember that God supplies our daily need, and there is no need for doggie bags.

Whatever we need God supplies it in quantities sufficient to supply our need.

The problem with doggie bag blessings are that they assume that having an over abundance of material things can bring happiness. Thus, we try to get as many things as we can. More cars. More houses. More land, More money. Bigger barns!

But I hear Jesus telling Satan, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God!"

We need bread, but we can't survive on bread alone!

We need a house, but it takes more than bricks and wood to make it a home!

We need clothing, but it takes more than cloth and fine stitching to clothe us in righteousness, because we need the whole armor of God!

We need bread, but we can't live on bread alone.

The one who orders the doggie bag, is the one that is paying the bill. We can't order a doggie bag on our blessings because we are not paying the bill.

True believers wait for God to tell what to do with the left overs.

When Jesus fed 5,000, there was much food left over when they finished. Jesus told his disciples to gather up the fragments and put them in baskets. He could order the doggie bag because he provided the blessing.

I have found out that I can't live on yesterday's blessing, everyday I need a blessing from the Lord!

I can't take yesterday's life and save some for today. I've got to get a new blessing of life every day!

I can't take yesterday's health and put what was left in a doggie bag and use it today. I've got to get a new blessing every day!

I can't take yesterday's success and put it in a doggie bag, but I must succeed again every day!

That's why the song write wrote: "I get a blessing every day!...On Monday and Tuesday and Wednesday...I get a blessing every day!"

Man cannot live by bread of alone, but he must be sustained daily by another kind of bread.

This bread, gives strength to those that are weak.

This bread, gives power to the powerless!

This bread, gives hope to the hopeless!

This bread, gives inspiration to those that are frustrated!

This bread, gives food for hungry souls

This bread is Jesus, who said “I am the bread of life” He is the bread of heaven!

No wonder the song writer said, “Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, feed me till I want no more!”

This bread was prepared in heaven. Kneaded on Calvary! Placed in the grave for three days!

But Early Sunday morning the world found out that it was “Self rising bread!” because he arose with all power in his hands!

If You Want to Know An Usher

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 21, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing. John 20:27

Introduction

How can you be sure that the person sitting next to you is a Christian? That person may belong to the same church, serve on the church Usher's Board or sing in the choir..but how do you know the person is a Christian? He might be a fellow deacon. She could work with you on a committee or give her time to benefit a worthy cause, but how do you know that the person is a Christian? Does a choir robe make a choir member a Christian? Does an usher's uniform and station make a person a Christian? By definition, a Christian is a person who is Christlike in every way. The best way to determine whether or not a person is a Christian is to look for signs that the person thinks, acts and talks in a Christlike manner. Christian character is difficult to hide. It shows and those who see it are instantly convinced that we are what we say we are.

Today, the need for authenticity is always present. We want to be sure that the person with whom we are dealing is for real. So a plethora of methods have been devised to protect ourselves. When someone knocks on our door we begin by asking, "Who is it?" We peep through security holes, key holes and curtains to get a visual confirmation as well. Stores require identification before they will cash checks. ATM cards require PIN numbers before withdrawals are allowed and many computer programs require pass words before access is allowed. An entire science has developed around our need to authenticate. Finger prints are used by criminologists. DNA and fiber samples are used by forensic scientists. Voice prints, eye tracts ane even breath analysis is being used to help establish a proven identity. Even after accepting all of these methods, some are still leery because the experts tell us that no system is fool proof.

Most of today's identification methods don't identify a person. Generally, they do well at excluding a person from consideration. If a murder victim had type B blood and a suspect was found with Type A blood on his clothing, this suspect could be eliminated. If the suspect had type B blood it only indicates "he could be" the suspect but it does not identify him. The same is true of DNA, it works well to exclude a person from consideration by showing that he is not in a category of possible suspects, but even DNA could not specifically identify the person beyond the shadow of a doubt.

If it is hard to identify a person by sight, finger print, DNA sample, blood, or voice, think how hard it is to discover more secret truths about a person that are not visible to the naked eye.

How do my fellow usher board members know that I am more than just a person who wears a uniform, comes to meetings and stands on the floor during church worships? How can they know that I am a Christian?

Jesus dealt with this idea of authenticity in Matthew 7. In this chapter he said there would be many that would come and point to their areas of service as indicators of their Christianity. In Matthew 7:22 he said many will point to their great and wonderful works as evidence. In verse 20 Jesus gave the undeniable way to test whether or not a person is a true Christian when he said, "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."

As Christians, we strive to grow good fruit. We strive to demonstrate love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance. They testify to our salvation more than the uniforms and labels we wear.

Exposition

This text consider Jesus as he presents evidence to his disciples that he is the risen Lord.

After the resurrection the disciples were wounded in spirit and afraid. The Lord Jesus, they supposed was dead. Suddenly the risen Christ slips through the closed doors and appears before his despondent disciples. But they don't know him. He spoke to them, as he had spoken so often before, saying "Peace." But they still don't know him. Then, John says, "He showed them his hands and his side" (John 20:20). He showed them his scars and then, only then, they saw, they rejoiced. Those who saw his scars immediately knew his identity for the sight of them was still fresh in their collective mind.

Thomas shows up a little later. He wasn't with the other disciples for the resurrection morning appearance. When they told him about it his first reaction was a normal one - he did not believe it. Thomas had a healthy scepticism, and like most people who have a healthy scepticism, he would not believe until he first had some proof, and he did not hesitate to tell the others that.

The other disciples tell him of the Risen Christ, but Thomas says, "Unless I see the mark of the nails in his hands, and put my finger in the mark of the nails and my hand in his side, I will not believe" (John 20:25). His absence from the original meeting gave reason for his doubt. Had he been there the outcome would probably have been different.

A week later, the Risen Christ again surprises the disciples. Thomas is there and Jesus obliges, "Put your finger here," says the Risen Christ, "Do not doubt but believe."

Tradition has it that later in life Thomas became the apostle to the nations east of Israel, and that he died a martyrs death in India. Because he saw the risen Lord with his own eyes - he believed, and he went forth to do what all the other disciples did, he went forth and spread the good news about Jesus, that Jesus died so that we would know the love of God, and that he rose from the dead so that we might know that God's love is forever and that all who follow him receive eternal life.

The testimony of the scars convinced Thomas. The scars will convince those who do not know our Lord in every generation.

The testimony of Our Experience

Today, there are many who lay claim to the Christian life. They join churches and some of them join usher boards. Not long after they join however, the actions of a few raise doubt about their Christian experience. Even though they are ushers, their informal talk, private lives and public decorum indicates everything other than a born again Christian. Beyond the uniform, what is the evidence of an usher's Christian Life experience.

LOOK AT HIS HANDS: Jesus, told his disciples to look at his hands. They were a great testimony of not only who he was but the extent of his love for them. They were the testimony of his work on earth: healing, lifting and holding up the cross.

We can identify an usher by observing his or her works. Beyond membership on a board, an usher is a servant of the Lord and ministers to people on behalf of a loving God. Ushers have working hands. They help the poor and needy. They feed the hungry, hopeless and helpless. They extend themselves to those who stand in the need of help.

With or without a uniform, the Usher is a Christian lady and gentleman. They are willing to extend the love of God to any person, not only on Sunday, when they are wearing the usher's uniform.

Watch real ushers. They'll find themselves doing the work of saints seven days a week. Even at work they are helping people, showing love to those who feel neglected. At home, their discussions are filled with concern for others and perfecting ways to help others.

The service of an usher identifies them quickly as one who is in the service of the Lord. They work vigorously and passionately. Why? "Because I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day. When night comes, no man can work!"

LOOK AT HIS FEET: Jesus' feet, like his hands were nailed to the cross. He traveled to the homes of the rich and poor and walked a straight path all of his life. He did not tell them to look at his feet, but they, never-the-less, would have been a great testimony if only the disciples had looked.

We can identify an usher because of his or her stand. Most ushers spend most of their time standing on their feet. When everyone else is sitting down, ushers stand.

With or without a uniform, usher's stand for truth. In every walk of life believers take stands against wrong doing. They stand against evil any place they see it. That's why Paul in Ephesians 6:11, said, "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." In verse 13 he says that we should put on the whole armor of God, but after having done all to...stand!"

Stand for righteousness! Stand for Holiness! Stand for truth!

The willingness of saints to stand up for the kingdom of God whatever the cost, identifies them as believers in the cross, even if they are not wearing a uniform.

The scars tell the story

If there is a final evidence, it is in the scars.

The most convincing aspect of Jesus' appearance to his disciples was his scars. They saw the pierce marks in his side. They saw the nail prints in his hands and that was sufficient enough to convince them of his true identity.

We can identify any person who is a believer by the testimony of their scars. Our scars tell our story in a way that nothing else can. Every scar has a story.

Some of us have survived troubled childhoods and dysfunctional families. That experience left a scar.

Some of us have endured troubled, abusive relationships. That left a scar.

Some of us have been down to a point when we couldn't see our way and we tasted the bitterness of despair. That left a scar.

Many athletes, and soldiers date their battles and victories by their scars. One scar was made in a running winning touch down. This scar was received in the midst of a great battle.

In our battle with Satan many of us have come forth as new men and women, and we have the scars to prove it.

There are some who have wrestled with God and like Jacob who wrestled with an angel all night long and walked away with a limp, we have the scars to prove it!

If you want to see a Christian look for the scars!

Consider the mother whose son had gone off to war. She had not seen or heard from her son for over 20 years. The government sent her a letter saying he was missing in action. But every day she kept going to the door, waiting for him to come home. The children were worried that their mother might be losing her mind. She was convinced their her boy was somewhere on his way home.

One day there was a knock at the door. There stood on the steps a tattered man who seemed to have no face. His head was bald and he was very crude in his appearance. He could not talk, so all he did was stand at the door and he stretched out his hand. The mother took the stranger by the hand and set him down at the table. She rushed to get him something to eat as her daughters complained that she was taking a chance letting a stranger in the house.

The mother said, "That's no stranger. That's my son! When he was just six years old he fell and skinned the palm of his hand. When it healed it left an "S" looking mark in the palm of his hand. I couldn't see his face but when he raised his hand, I knew that was my son!"

Somebody here today has been wounded on the battlefield of life, nobody knows but you and the Lord...and your scars tell your story!

If you want to know a Christian let their scars testify!

They'll tell you of a time when they wallowed in sin only to be saved by the grace of God!

If you want to know an Usher don't look at the uniform!

If you wan to know an Usher don't look at what you see on Sunday!

Look at the journey they have traveled and listen to their testimony. That's when you'll hear them say, "I came to Jesus as I was, weary, wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad!"

I f you want to really know an Usher, follow them down tothe house of prayer, and they'll tell you a story of how God picked them up and turned them around and planted their feet on solid ground!

If you want to know an Usher ask them about Jesus!

They'll tell you how he came to this old world. Died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning. ..he arose from the dead with all power in his hands!

No. 753-Youth

Little Posse, Big God!

By Roosevelt Wright, Jr

SCRIPTURE: "And he said unto him, Oh my Lord, wherewith shall I save Israel? behold, my family is poor in Manasseh, and I am the least in my father's house. And the LORD said unto him, Surely I will be with thee, and thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man." Judges 6:15-16

Introduction

Have you ever felt out numbered? Are there times when it looks like everyone else is having all of the fun and you're all by yourself? Many times there are only a few youth who are willing to stand up for God at school or in the community. Sometimes it gets hard being the minority. Often we wonder why God does not make his people the majority more often.

It seems like every neighborhood has a posse of some kind. Whether it's a Northside Posse, Southside Posse, Eastside or Westside, it seems that every "hood" has a posse. Some of them are pretty large too! It seems that every "G" has to belong to some posse or another. In some areas, the bigger your posse, the safer the members, because others will be afraid to bother the member of a large neighborhood posse.

Christians are different. Christians are often criticized because they don't participate in some of the activities of other youth in the neighborhood, especially if those activities are questionable. Christian youth don't look to neighborhood posses for protection.

There are only two members of our posse, ourselves and God. We have a little posse, but we are bold enough to be different because we have a Big God!

God doesn't need many people to do his work. In fact, sometimes God works better in small groups. If He works with us in small groups or as individuals, we will know that what we have accomplished was not because of our own size or power, but because of Him.

A Little Posse in the Bible

A Big God can do mighty things with a small "believing" posse!

One good example is Gideon. He was a leader of Israel who is referred to in the 6th Chapter of Judges. He was given the task of delivering the Israelites from their enemies, which had armies with many thousands of soldiers. Gideon was given the task of delivering the Israelites from the Midianites and Amalekites, desert nomads who repeatedly raided the country. Their use of the camel allowed them to ride in, destroy crops, take plunder, and then escape back into the desert with such speed the Israelites could not catch them. Gideon was not a willing volunteer. Although he knew the will of God, twice he laid out the fleece in what seems was an effort to avoid the will of God by imposing impossible conditions. God met his conditions both times and then set out the strategy that would guarantee victory for Israel.

Gideon had an army of about 32,000 men, but God told him that number was too big. To reduce their number, two tests were given to the 32,000 men in Gideon's army. This was done that Israel could not claim victory by any other means than continued dependence upon God. Those who were afraid and those who knelt down to get a drink of water were sent home. The number was cut to 10,000. Still God said that was too large!

Finally, the number of men in Gideon's army was reduced to 300 men. It was 300 men against thousands and thousands. The remaining 300 were given pitchers, torches, and trumpets, and placed around the Midianite encampment. The strategy was one of terror: at Gideon's signal the pitchers were broken, the torches then became visible, and the trumpets sounded, giving the enemy the impression they were surrounded. They took flight, their leaders were killed, and the Midianite oppression was brought to an end.

Gideon's army had been reduced to a very small posse but it had one big advantage...it was led by a Big God! Before morning, Gideon's little 300 man posse had won the victory without even losing a single man! He had a little Posse, but he also had a Big God.

We have God On Our Side

Today, youth of the Chosen Generation, may feel out numbered because there are so many non-Christians at school and in the community. There are many forces trying to influence God's chosen. But in every community and at every school, there is a small group of believing teens who will stand up for God. They have one big advantage. They have God on their side.

Those who stand up for God are bold, despite the fact that they are few in number!

They tell the truth when others find it easier to lie.

They are obedient when others find it easier to break the rules.

They show respect for others, when others cop attitudes!

They dress neatly and with good taste, even when others tend to stretch the boundaries of good taste in their choice of clothing.

They are careful to act like Christians each and every day, even when those around them seem not to bother.

We Belong to God

Vol 8-1922

The fact that Christian youth try to be "Christ like" makes them seem peculiar or odd to others on campus. Those who obey the school rules, respect their teachers and study hard are often ostracized by the vast majority of students. Sometimes they are even called names and insulted for only trying to do their best. "Nerd", "Geek" and "Bookworm" rank high among the names that are used to describe those youth who dare to be different and excel.

But when the world calls a Christian "peculiar" it usually means something strange. However, when God calls a person peculiar it means that person belongs to Him.

Do you know what peculiar means? Often when "peculiar" is referred to in New Testament scripture it refers to being completely owned by God. In 1 Peter 2:9 believers are referred to as "a peculiar people." It means we are God's purchased possession.

As believers, we should not be worried about the large number of ungodly people. Psalm 37:1 reminds us to "fret not" when it to comes to them. Don't lose any sleep over what they are doing.

Don't worry over how many of them it seems to be!

As a believer, remember, you may belong to a little posse of Christian youth in your community.

But ...it's a little posse with a Mighty Big God!

How Big is God?

Finally, every Christian youth should remember that the God they serve is a big God. How big is God?

God is so big that he can be everywhere at the same time. It doesn't matter where we are, God is there. If we are at school, at home or playing with our friends, God is there!

David said in Psalm 139:8-10 "If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there.

If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me." That means God is everywhere!

How big is God? God is so big that he can lift any burdens we may be carrying and make them light!

How big is God? God is so big that he can solve any problems that trouble us!

How big is God? God is so big that he can defend us against any enemies that attack us!

How big is God? God is so big that he can help us to achieve any divinely inspired goal we seek to attain!

Consider the little boy who was given a Sunday School assignment to find out where God lives. The little boy searched all week and seriously tried to find the answer. As he walked home, he looked at little tadpoles swimming in a ditch. He looked inside an empty car. He looked inside some empty card board boxes. All along his journey home he discovered all the places where God could be. That night the little boy prayed asked, "God where are you?" He received no immediate answer but in his sleep he saw a card board box, a little tadpole in a ditch and a playground and heard the words, "Whereever you go, I am!" The next Sunday the boy was ready to answer the teacher's question. She raised a crisp new one dollar bill and offered it to any student that could tell where God lives. The boy waved his hands wildly and said, "I've looked in the weeds and in all my favorite places, and discovered every where I went, God was there. Miss teacher, I'll give you my last lollipop if you can tell me where God ain't." The teacher smiled and gave the boy a hug. She knew the little boy had found the answer. He found out God lives in his heart.

Don't worry about the odds, God is with you!

Don't worry about what people will say about you, God is with you!

God love us so much that he gave his only Son for us on Calvary. That son died and rose again to live in the heart of any person who will let him live with them, help them, advise them and help them achieve in life.

If you let Jesus live in your life you may not have a big posse but you'll have a big God on your side!

The Place Where Edges Meet

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 2, 1999

SCRIPTURE:"And they took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness. And the LORD went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; to go by day and night: He took not away the pillar of the cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night, from before the people." Exodus 13:20-22

Introduction

If you live on the edge of night, battle to survive the secret storm, and deal constantly with "All my Children," where do you find God? Many people sleep on the edge of the bed, walk on the edge of their shoes, sit on the edge of their seats, and walk boldly on the edge of life and never know the joy of finding God in their own lives. Living on the edge of life is pushing it to its limits. It's like taking a big bungy jump into the unknown, hoping that the cords are as strong as they were for the last jumper. Living on the edge is like standing on the ledge of a skyscraper holding one foot in the air singing "I believe I can fly." Many people live their entire lives on the edge, snugged somewhere between "I should not" and "I will," or sandwiched between "safety" and "insanity." Living on the edge fascinates the young and titillates the old. To some, living on the edge is what makes life interesting. To others, living on the edge is the epitome of foolishness.

Some live on life's edges to gain notoriety. It gives them bragging rights. Did you hear of the three mice that loved to live on the edge. Each time they did some foolish thing they met at a bar took a drink and bragged about how tough they were. One evening the three of them met and started drinking. It wasn't long before they were all bragging about which one lived farthest toward the edge. The first mouse slammed a shot and said, "I play with mouse traps for fun. I'll run into one on purpose and as it is closing on me, I grab the bar and bench press it twenty or thirty times." Now that's living on the edge! The second mouse slammed a shot and said, "That's nothing. I take those Decon tablets, cut them up and snort them just for the fun of it." That's living on the edge! The third mouse slammed a shot, got up and walked away.. The first two mice looked at each other, and then turn to the third mouse and asked, "Where do you think you are going?" The third mouse stopped and replied, "I'm going home to eat. I invited the cat for dinner!" That's living on the edge! Some enjoy living on the edge, especially if they live to tell about it!

However, there is a point at which all of the edges meet. There is a point where the excitement of the night meets the reality of the day. There is a point where health meets sickness, joy meets sorrow, success meets failure and life meets death. There is a point where all of the edges that define our lives come together in one place, at one time, in one moment. The place where the edges meet; where we finally see the day break rather than the darkness of night, that's the place where we meet God, decide to follow him and our lives are changed forever.

As Christians, we have experienced, to a degree, what it means to live on the edge. Sometimes circumstances of life pressed us to the edge. Sometimes we were foolish and actually lived there for a while. But we also know what it means to find God at life's edge. Just when we stood on the edge of despair we saw hope, because we found a loving God!

Exposition

This text focuses on Israel as the entire nation packed up to leave Egypt and return to the promised land.

There were 600,000 men plus women and children in the nation of Israel at the time of this text. God, through Moses, had issued an ultimatum to Egypt. That ultimatum, "Let my people Go" was finally heeded as Moses led the children out of Egyptian Bondage toward the land of promise. There were four points in Israel's journey when it found itself on the edge. Each is followed by an encounter with God. Each experience demonstrates to believers, what happens when the edges which envelope us meet in the presence of God.

At Succoth, They were led to the edge

When Pharaoh allowed the children of Israel to leave Egypt after 400 years of bondage, they took all of their possessions and left the land of "Goshen" where they had lived a slave's existence. God led them away from a bad situation and they journeyed to the edge of the Wilderness of Zin. The camped at Succoth on the edge of a new experience. At the edge of this wilderness they met God's presence. He appeared before them as a pillar of cloud in the day time and as a pillar of fire at night. Whenever the cloud moved, they moved. Thus, at the edge of a new experience they met God and followed him.

When we follow God he will lead us to new and higher experiences. He will lead us out of bondage situations that make life miserable for us and will make his presence known. There are many of us that have been in bondage to people, places and things that have enslaved us. Though we wore no chains on our hands and feet, we were slaves never-the-less.

An alcoholic is in slavery. A drug addict is in slavery. Both are addicted to a substance that robs them of their freedom, health and happiness.

Many have found themselves involved in relationships that have become bondage relationships rather than sources of joy.

Today, many are standing on the edge of a new experience, having made the crucial decision to break the bondage and follow God. Some have made a decision to stop smoking. Some haven't had a drink in quite some time. Some have broken off adulterous relationships. Some have made great faith decisions that have brought them to the edge of a new experience.

Like Israel, they are about to enter areas unknown to them. At the edge, God appeared to Israel to show the way. Believers moving in a new direction should do the same. Let God lead them both by day and by night.

At the Red Sea, They were pushed to the edge

After camping at the edge of the Wilderness for a time, Israel came to another Edge, the Red Sea. The sea was a formidable challenge. It stood between where they wanted to go and where they had been. Without building materials to build bridges or ferries to take them across they were literally standing on the edge of the river with no bridge on which to cross.

Complicating things, Pharaoh was on the move. Although Pharaoh allowed Israel to leave, he had second thoughts about it. His slaves and builders were gone. He began to feel he had made a bad decision. He sought to find the Israelites and return them to slavery and send his elite force of 600 chariots to retrieve them.

At the Red Sea, Israel found itself pushed to the edge. The people had their backs against a watery wall. But there, at the Red Sea, the place where their past bondage and their future hopes met, God acted. He rolled back the Red Sea and allowed them to cross on dry land destroying their enemies as well.

Just because believers have walked away from bondage situations doesn't mean that the situation will turn them loose without a struggle. Often Satan attempts to reclaim those who try to free themselves from bondage. The person who decides to quit smoking finds himself drawn to it again. Cans of beer seem to sing the names of people who are trying to quit. Temptations seem to increase at the very moment we are trying to walk away.

The evil presence that dominates this world will not give up a single convert without a fight. His efforts will push every believer to the edge.

However, at the edge we have the joy of knowing that we are not alone. At the edge God will open a way out of no way. He will roll back the Red Sea and allow us to cross on dry ground, if we would but "stand still" and see the salvation of the Lord.

At Mt Sinai, They ran to the edge

At Succoth God led Israel to the edge. At the Red Sea Pharaoh pushed Israel to the edge. At Mt. Sinai, Israel went over the edge, on its own!

Moses climbed Mt. Sinai to receive instructions from God about directing the people. He was gone for 40 days and nights. At the foot of Mt. Sinai the people went over the edge. They believed Moses was dead so they built themselves a golden calf, worshiped it and plunged themselves into immoral acts that angered God. In the aftermath, the anger of God rumbled as God spoke to them through Moses. Those who went over the edge were slain. Others who did not participate themselves but only observed the lewd actions of others, were forced to drink water laced with gold. The punishment for going over the edge was tremendous and lasting.

There are many today who allow themselves to go over the edge. Like Israel, many are paying a heavy price for their sin. Some are behind prison walls at this very moment. Some have lost their health and strength as a result of their activities.

Each individual must remember that a day comes when we must account for going over the edge. That day is not always in the distant future. Sometimes we pay instantly.

What is the price we pay for an experiment with drugs? What is the price we pay for criminal ventures? What is the price we pay for hot tempers, cold shoulders, and luke-warm persuasions? Many have paid dearly for going over the edge. Like Israel, some have paid with their lives. Some are still paying.

There are many who have learned that when they stand on the edge of godliness and sin and choose to go over the edge, they will incur the wrath of God. Romans 6:23 says, "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

At Jordan, They Wandered around the edge

When Israel came to the River Jordan they stood at the edge of their dreams. They were so close but so far away. Across the river was a land flowing with milk and honey. The opportunities of a life time were there, waiting for them to claim them. However, a negative report from the majority of 12 spies that scouted the land told them of the problems they would have making their dream become a reality. Foremost among the problems was the fact that they felt like small grasshoppers in front of their enemy. As a result they wandered on the edge of Jordan for 40 years. When they came back to Jordan the second time, 40 years later, they were at the edge again. This time they asked for and received divine direction from God.

At the edge of Jordan, God moved in a powerful way and rolled back the waters of the Jordan so that they, like their forefathers, crossed on dry land. At the place where their edges met, they met God.

Today, there are many people who are standing on the threshold of their future, afraid to go forward because of negative reports. Like Israel, many are wandering on the edge of their future afraid to make a decisive move. Many wander so long that it is nearly impossible for them to make their dreams come true. Often those dreams involve business pursuits, educational opportunities, and other endeavors. Many are lost in the process. They stand on the edge and wonder. At the point where we stand on the edge of indecision between our dreams and inaction we meet God.

I don't know about you but I've found out that God has a tendency to show up at the right place at the right time.

The same God that rolled back the waters of the Jordan for Israel, is still rolling back waters today.

It doesn't matter what kind of edges we experience God can meet us at the edge and show us the way.

There are some who have:

ROUGH EDGES, things just won't go right in their lives and everyday seems to be rougher than the one before. But we serve a God who specializes in making the rough places plain JAGGERED EDGES, things are disordered, out of shape and nothing seems to go right. But we serve a God who can take our crooked places and make them straight.

DULL EDGES, we can't seem to get anything done. Nothing seems to work. If our lives were knives we'd be butter knives trying to cut steak!

Whenever we are standing on the edge, prepare to meet the power of God!

At the edge of night, we meet the break of day!

At the edge of despair, we meet the prospect of hope!

At the edge of loneliness, we find companionship!

At the edge of frustration, we find patience!

At the edge of hunger, we find food for the soul!

At the edge of defeat, we find the victory!

At the edge of sickness, we find a restored health!

At the edge of eternal death, we find a chance for eternal life!

When mankind stood on the edge of destruction for its sin, an opportunity for salvation appeared.

At the edge of separation from God, God made a way!

On a little hill outside of Jerusalem, God made a way!

Jesus, the lamb of God, came and died that we might have a chance to eternal life!

When he arose on Sunday morning he stood on the edge of time and eternity with all power in his hands!

Are you on the edge of a decision? Let God move in your life and he'll show you the way!

The place where edges meet is in the mercy, strength and hope that comes from God

Hand Me Down Love

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 9, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also." 2 Timothy 1:5

Introduction

Have you ever worn hand me downs? One of the unique facts of life in a family in which you are not an only child is the inevitable presence of hand me downs. If you were a second, third, or last child of the same sex you probably became affected by the "hand me down syndrome." That means, you probably rarely received anything new, generally it was handed down to you after your big sister or brother outgrew it or refused to wear it. Since the oldest was usually the largest it seems that the oldest always received the new clothing and then they were stored away in some secret place and appeared again, just when you thought you were about to get something new! There are many adults today who shower their children with new things because they remember what it felt like to only receive the hand me downs.

Generally, hand me downs are perfectly good items of clothing. As a rule, they still look well, are just as durable and fashionable. What they don't have is a new price tag. Usually someone has outgrown an item, develops a distaste for an item or simply doesn't want it anymore. Often there is nothing wrong with the item itself. The fact that it is a hand me down is more of a mental response than a response to quality. No matter how we rationalize it, very few people like receiving hand me downs.

There are a few however, who receive hand me downs with honor. They are proud to wear their mother's wedding dress on their wedding day. In some instances it was the same dress, with a few alterations that was worn by a great grandmother. Many are proud to wear a necklace given to them by a beloved grand parent. There are some items, when handed down, assume a value of their own, beyond any numerical figure that can be affixed. There is no value that can be placed upon great grandma's bible. It was handed down from generation to generation. You can sit in granny's old rocking chair and almost feel her presence. It's a hand me down and doesn't fit exactly into your decor, but who cares...it is priceless. There are some hand me downs that we cherish and never want to lose.

Every mother gives her children hand me down proverbs. It is almost like mothers went to class and learned the same phrases as their mothers and then passed them down to their children.

Your mother said them, her mother said them because her mother said them. Have you heard these? “How many times do I have to tell you...don’t throw things in the house!”,”Close the door behind you — were you born in a barn?”,”Don’t talk with your mouth full!”,”Always put on clean underwear in the morning, in case you’re in an accident”,”I’m not just talking to hear myself talking”, “A hard head makes a soft b-”. Everyone remembers the classic hand me down phrase of nearly every mom who’s had to deal with hard headed children, “I brought you in this world and I will take you out.” A new one that hasn’t been handed down too many generations goes like this, “You can call the child protection number on me if you want, but it’ll be the last number you dial!” Hand me downs have a little history.

As Christians, we are aware of the importance passing on things that are important. Christian mothers, pass on many things to their children that have helped them in life. The one thing that has helped them the most is their faith in God. That’s a hand me down that no one minds receiving!

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes to a young minister encouraging him to be strong in the faith. It is a faith that was handed down to him by his mother and his grandmother.

When Timothy received this letter, Paul was imprisoned in Rome for the second time and he expected to be executed. Nero - the psychotic tyrant who murdered his mother, wife, stepbrothers, and many others - was emperor at the time. Accused of having set the fire that burned Rome in 64 AD, he blamed the Christians. That initiated the first general persecution of the Church, a period which has been described as a “carnival of blood”. It was a time when being a Christian was not just unpopular or difficult, but genuinely dangerous, especially to the leaders of the church, such as Timothy.

The theme of Paul’s letter is don’t compromise, don’t quit. Paul encouraged Timothy not to compromise the Word of God, but to “hold fast the form of sound words” which he had learned from Paul. His faith and commitment came from examples that were lived before him by his mother Eunice and his grandmother Lois.

In the opening verses of this letter, Paul reminds Timothy of his spiritual roots. Timothy was walking in the footsteps of the faithful. One important line in Paul’s lesson suggests that Timothy had a great faith that had been handed down through the generations. “I am reminded of your sincere faith, a faith that lived first in your grandmother Lois and your mother Eunice and now, I am sure, lives in you.” We do not know a great deal about those women, but in that sentence we get a picture of two very special people.

No one knows where Lois and Eunice came from but it is known that they eventually settled in Asia Minor, in the rural Roman town of Lystra. They had been born Jewish, but whether or not that meant too much in their home we can only guess. I would tend to think not, frankly, because Eunice married a Greek, a gentile, something just not done even to this day in Jewish families where religion is taken seriously.

Something happened to Lois and Eunice. Somehow, some way, they heard about Jesus Christ. They came to realize their need of a Savior and accepted Jesus as Lord of their lives. Scripture does not record exactly what Timothy heard, but it is relatively safe to assume that he heard and saw everything both his mother and his grandmother heard. Between them there was probably 40 years distance between himself. But there were years of faith, pass one to another that he was just trying for the first time.

The faith of his mother was a living faith, but it was handed down to her. The faith of his grandmother was a great faith. She acquired it first and passed it down.

Over the generations

Today we have memories of three types of mothers among us. Depending upon a person's age, the memory of at least one of these types is as clear as yesterday. Their methods of mothering have changed over the years but, each has handed down important truths about life to the next generation.

THE WOOD STOVE MOTHER: She operated during a time when her daily tasks required more physical strength than is required today. She often chopped wood and prepared meals on a wood burning stove. She was the mother who washed clothes on a rub board, made lye soap and insisted on cleaning unpainted and polished wood floors until they glistened because "cleanliness is next to godliness." The wood stove mother couldn't read, but she seemed to know every word in the bible. She didn't operate a business but she seemed to manage every single affair of her household.

She saved pennies for the society dues and some for a rainy day. She was always saving.

The wood stove mother would often have 15 to 20 children and love them all. She and her husband spent the evenings talking and listening to the children. She fed them from chickens in the back yard and made their pillows from cotton sacks. In the winter they cuddled together in their cabin and listened to the wind and as it breathed through the newspaper covered walls. She prayed long prayers, out loud. The children could see her on her knees and they heard her pleas.

The wood stove children saw her smile when all of them sat at the table. She looked proud when her husband quoted from the bible and lead the family in prayer. She road the wagon to church. She had a hat on her head. She wore a plain dress with no makeup. She always seemed to shout.

At the close of the day, even though she couldn't read a word of it, she sat with her bible on her lap and glow of the fire in her face and would often be heard saying, "Thank you Lord, it's been a mighty good day!"

Her daughters watched her every move and recorded her strength in the corridors of their minds. Every day, mama was handing it down.

GAS STOVE MOTHER: Gas stove mothers were truly modern. They had gas stoves and didn't have to chop wood. Fancy washing machines replaced the rub boards and dryers replaced clothes lines. They had vacuum cleaners and electric can openers. There were new contraptions that were stuck in the windows called air conditioners, and electric Frigidaires took the place of the ice box.

She was a modern mother, but she had a few things that were hand me downs. She could read and she read the bible a lot. She also read the Chicago Defender and Jet Magazine like they were the bible. In the evening she and her husband gathered their family of six to 10 children and they talked, but not as long..things kept getting in the way, first a radio then a new thing called television.

Like her mother she saved and managed well. She saved 50c a month for the church and she put a dollar in the burial envelope for the insurance man behind the door. There was also a few dollars tucked away under the mattress. She was saving for a rainy day.

Her family loved her cooking. All the stove's eyes would burn at full blast as the smell of fried chicken and collard greens filled the air. They had something new called "T.V." dinners but she didn't care for warmed over food. A new place called McDonalds selling something called fast food..who would want that?

She wore a pretty hat to church and lipstick with a flowered dress. She wore every color but red, for some reason. With her husband on her arm she carried the family to church in a big Buick. The preacher preached until he sweated. Like grandma..she often shouted.

At the close of the day she drank a cup of fresh perculated coffee and read from the bible. She prayed on her knees. It was hard to hear what she said. It must have been powerful though because she always seem to cry.

Just before she went to sleep at night the children could hear her say, "Thank you Lord, it's been a mighty good day!" She was a gas stove mother but she was handing it down!

MICROWAVE MOTHERS: The microwave mothers move fast. An instant cup of coffee, Pop Tarts in the Microwave and rush the kids out of the door. Telephone answering machines, cell phones, beepers make communication easy, but there is so much to do.

She is a 21st century mother but she has a few things about her that were hand me downs.

She still manages. She has a career and an income. She has her own Visa, Master card and ATM access. But she still saves a little in her own private place..saving for a rainy day. Grandma's old cookie jar has been replaced with 401 K plans, annuities and stocks and bonds. But it amounts to the same thing.

The family of one to three children gets together in the evening. They don't talk much but they sit in the same room and watch T.V. The stove gets a good work out once a week in between there is chicken from Popeye's and burgers from the place Grandma said would never make because it was too fast...McDonald's.

She attends church regular, although she often skips Sunday School. She says she steals a few minutes from God to be by herself. At church, she doesn't wear a hat. Sometimes she wears red dresses. She doesn't shout but she raises her hand a lot and says "praise the Lord!"

At the close of the day,she drinks a cup of instant coffee, checks her email, answers her voice mail, then reads a page or two from her bible.

In her bed at night she stares at the ceiling and says, "Thank you Lord, it's been a mighty good day"

Hand me down Faith

Though times and methods have changed there are some things that every mother hands down to her children that are still good.

Every good mother knows the value of hand me downs!

Every child should consider himself fortunate if he has a mother. A hand me down mother reaches back and picks up a little of the old way and mixes it with the modern way. She believes in the idea of "something old and something new, it was good enough for me and it was good enough for you!"

Hand me down mothers, still believe that:

Cleanliness is next to godliness!

We should give an honest days work for an honest days pay!

We should save for a rainy day!

We should put our trust in God and he will make a way.

As I close, I'm reminded of the little boy who came to his mother and said, "Mama, why is it that you don't love me like you love the others. I never get anything new. All I get is hand me down love." When the mother heard that she burst into tears.

The grandmother took the little boy and sat him in a chair and said, "You're right, she never bought you new clothes. But you should be glad she gave you hand me down love."

She said, "You may call it hand me down love, but it was that hand me down love that made her carry you in her womb for nine months instead of going to an abortion clinic!"

It was hand me down love, that made her run along side your bike to teach you how to ride when she could barely catch her breath!

It was hand me down love that made her get up from her sick bed and come to Mother's night at your school, because she didn't want you to be the only one whose mother didn't show!"

It was hand me down love that made her pawn her wedding ring to buy you a clarinet to play in the school band.

Grandmother said, "Son remember, new things come with a price tag, but that what you call hand me down love has already been paid for!"

God invented hand me down love!

For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!

This hand me down love was handed down from the firmaments of heaven!
Handed down over 42 generations!
Handed down in a manger in Bethlehem!
Handed down on an old rugged cross on Calvary's Hill!
But Early Sunday morning the love of God arose from the grave!
Today, he's ready to hand it down to anyone that will accept him!

Survivor's Benefits

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

May 15, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "Bless the LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases;Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies; Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's. Psalm 103:2-5; Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death of his saints. Psalm 116:15

Introduction

Have you ever felt empty? The feeling of emptiness usually comes after we experience a great loss. Sometimes it comes as a companion to loneliness. When we feel empty, it is as if everything we have has suddenly disappeared. We feel empty when we reach for that which has always been there and it is no longer there. Nothing can create the feeling of emptiness and spiritual poverty like the death of a loved one. We're at a complete loss when that happens. We don't know what to do. We become weary and our souls wander.

Even when we feel empty, we are never really without the benefit of God's mercy and love. Consider the old prospector who had spent his entire life in the mountains looking for gold. After nearly 40 years of searching, he finally struck gold. He located sacks he had brought with him 40 years earlier and filled each until it could hold nothing else. Then he loaded them on his mules. He hadn't left the hills in 40 years. Things had changed. The familiar land marks he once knew were gone. As he traveled day after day, trying to get back, he found himself hopelessly lost. He traveled in circles. Tired and exhausted, he took the cover off his mules to inspect his treasure. To his dismay, he was completely devastated to learn that his entire fortune was gone. The old sacks had given way and all that remained were dozens of empty, worn sacks. The old prospector was distraught. He was hungry, lost and broke. All he had to show for his 40 years of work were dozens of empty sacks and the prospect of death by starvation and thirst. That night he sat and considered his losses. It was the first night of the full moon. When the moon was high he saw what seemed to be a trail in the night. The gold that leaked from his sacks left a trail in the wilderness, which he followed until he returned safely to his cabin. Those empty sacks, showed him the road home.

Many today are able to enjoy a better life because someone emptied themselves to show them the road. Perhaps it was a father, who worked quietly to provide a home, education and an opportunity for his children. Perhaps it was a mother, who gave of herself until there was nothing else to give. There are millions of people who can testify of how they found a better life because someone gave them the best they had, even to the point that they strained their health and loss their strength to accomplish it. They gave the richness of their lives in making it possible for others to find the way.

When death comes what do survivors have left? Non-believer see only empty sacks! However, believers know they have much more. Survivors have the benefit of being the recipients of a lifetime of love and devotion. Even though the sadness of the hour makes it dark, survivors look at the golden trail and find a reason to praise God.

As Christians, we praise God for the rich experiences that he allows us to share with a husband or wife or with a parent. When this life ends and all we have left is empty sacks, then we thank him for the benefit of the golden trail home.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he considers the benefits he has received from God.

The background of this Psalm is unclear, but what is clear, is a desire on the part of David to praise God for all that He has done. David praised God for all of his benefits. By benefits David referred to the blessings he received as a result of God's dealings with him. His relationship with God was extensive, especially as it relates to the blessings that he received. David's entire life was one of dealing with God close up when he was a shepherd boy, from a distance when he sinned with Bathsheba and intimately as he neared death.

In all of his dealings, David concluded that God should be praised, because he all of his dealings he had been merciful and loving.

Between verse three and nineteen David lists 30 benefits that every believer receives from God, included among them are forgiveness of sins, healing, blessings of good things, assurance of justice, mercy and even chastisement is seen as an evidence of his God's benevolence and his love.

David's summary is that every believer receives benefits from God in every situation. It may appear everything but a benefit at the moment but God in his infinite wisdom, makes every circumstance a benefit to the those who love and trust him.

With all of the benefits that God provides for us, David maintains that even in his saddest hour the believer finds reason to thank and praise God.

If all that is left is the empty sack, then the believer simply praises God for the golden trail.

Survivor's Benefits

Believer's who study God's word have come to learn that Christian survivor's have many benefits. These benefits go beyond any benefits that man can provide. We are accustomed to survival benefits related to insurance, various employment plans and Social Security. However, God has a survivors plan that goes beyond Social Security and insurance.

A SURVIVORS BENEFIT WITH GOD IS NOT PAID IN A LUMP AND THEN FORGOTTEN. In certain circumstances the Social Security will pay a survivor a huge lump sum and then close the case. That ends the assistance forever. God never closes the case. Jesus, speaking to his disciples, said "And lo, I'll be with you alway, even unto the end of the earth." God never forgets those who trust in him. He remembers them and provides for them long after their loved one has been called home.

A SURVIVOR'S BENEFITS ISN'T DEPENDENT UPON ANYONE'S WORK BUT OUR OWN. Survivor's benefits in social security are based on the amount of work of the deceased. The amount of assistance that a person receives is related to amount that the deceased actually earned in his lifetime. Thus, your benefit is dependent on his work. However, when God considers the saints, he does not base what he does for us on anyone else's service and faith. Each believer can expect to receive the love and support of God that is the result of their own faith, not the experience of faith of the father, mother or spouse.

A SURVIVOR'S BENEFITS ARE NOT PRORATED BY FAMILY SIZE: With Social Security there is a maximum amount of benefit a family of survivors can receive because the total amount of the benefit is divided by the number of family members. Survivors in a large family expect to receive less individually because the total benefit is divided by the number of eligible survivors. But in the kingdom of God there is no limit to God's benefits to survivors. There is not limit to God's benevolence. He will open up the windows of heaven and pour out enough blessings to handle every believer that trusts in him.

A SURVIVOR'S BENEFIT IS NOT TIME SENSITIVE: With Social Security, the deceased must have paid premiums on wages for a set number of quarters before his survivors are eligible for benefits. No minimum, in most cases six quarters, is not negotiable. But in the kingdom of God the survivor's benefit is not time sensitive. It doesn't matter whether you have known the Lord six quarters or six minutes, the benefits are the same. Jesus gave a parable of a workman that hired some of his workers at the beginning of the day and others at the close of the day. However, he paid all of the workers the same wage. He emphasized the point that in his eyesight every believer is the same and can expect the same reward.

There Must be a life certificate

Finally, to receive Social Security benefits the survivors must file a death certificate. It marks the day, time and place in which the deceased left this earth. The only way Social Security will give any benefits is that there must be a death certificate on file. It bears an official seal, and is properly signed and notarized.

However, brothers and sisters, to get God's benefits we don't need a death certificate, but we will need a life certificate.

Our life certificate, marks the day and the hour that we came to know the Lord!

That's the day we testified, "I came to Jesus as I was, weary, wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad!"

When you know the Lord, you can raise your family and in the respect of God with a humble spirit!

When you know the Lord, you can overcome obstacles to educate your children and rear them to adulthood!

When you know the Lord, you can remain faithful to your wife for four decades and continue to hold her in high esteem!

When you know the Lord, you can undergo sickness and frustration with quiet strength and minimum of complaints.

Our life certificate is guaranteed by Christ himself because he said, "I came that you might have life and have it more abundantly!"

Our life certificate is no good unless it has been signed.

I'm glad that one evening, Jesus went out on Calvary, and died for our sins! With his blood he signed our life certificate as he died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with our life certificate, signed sealed and delivered!

On Monday, May 10, 1999 William Gill went to be the Lord. He left behind a golden trail that points the way home.

I'm Drinking from my saucer cuz my cup done overflowed!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

May 16, 1999

SCRIPTURE:"Thou annoinest my head with oil; my cup runneth over." Psalm 23:5

Introduction

Can you remember a time when you or someone you knew drank their coffee from a saucer? Believe it or not there was a time in the African-American community when it was common practice to pour one's coffee out of the cup right into the saucer and then slurp it from the saucer. Some say it was done to let the coffee cool. Others say we couldn't find any use for the saucer. Since we had to wash it, we may as well use it!

There are only few in our culture who still drink their coffee from a saucer. It has generally gone the path of eating collard greens with our fingers and sucking on neck bones. It was good until someone outside our culture told us it wasn't dignified. Somehow the greens don't taste quite as well if you can't eat them with your fingers. You can't get to the grissle of neck bones without sucking them and coffee doesn't taste as good if you can't drink it out of the saucer! In fact, there was a time when we felt truly blessed if we could eat grits and gravy for breakfast, mixed in with a little fried hog brains and eggs. We were living the life if we could dip a slice of corn bread into a glass of buttermilk for lunch and wash it all down with a big Nehi or RC...In fact, you were the richest man in the world. We didn't know we country because we sopped our syrup with the biscuits, broke wish bones, licked our fingers. All we knew about life was that we were doing pretty good! We enjoyed drinking our coffee from our saucers. We were thankful because our cups always seem to overflow!

Think about your life for a second. Have you been blessed? When you stop to think about it, the only times you are really unhappy with yourself is when someone or something makes you unhappy with what you have and where you are. Most people have full cups right now. Given our age, training, education, skill level and health, most of us have more than we can handle right now! Many of us are swimming an ocean of opportunity, if a single cup more were to be poured upon us would drown in prosperity. The truth of the matter is we are drinking from a saucer because our cups have overflowed!

An anonymous writer wrote the following poem which seems to epitomize this thought so clearly:

I've never made a fortune and it's probably too late now;
But I don't worry about that much, I'm happy anyhow.
And as I go along life's way I'm reaping better than I sow;
I'm drinking from my saucer 'Cause my cup has overflowed.

Haven't got a lot of riches and sometimes the going's tough,
But I've got loving ones around me and that makes me rich enough.
I thank God for his blessings and the mercies he's bestowed;
I'm drinking from my saucer 'cause my
cup has overflowed.

O, remember times when things went wrong My faith wore somewhat thin;
But all at once the dark clouds broke and sun peeped through again.
So Lord, help me not to gripe about the tough rows that I've hoed;
I'm drinking from my saucer 'Cause my
cup has overflowed.

If God gives me strength and courage
When the way grows steep and rough,
I'll not ask for other blessings,
I'm already blessed enough.
And may I never be too busy to help others bear their loads;
Then I'll keep drinking from my saucer
'Cause my cup has overflowed

As believers, we praise God the overflow! We thank him for his anointing that has made our lives spiritually rich and rewarding. It is the gift of grace, that fills our cups till they overflow!

Exposition

This passage focuses on David's appreciation for the abundant blessings God gave him.

Psalm 23 shows how God responds to our needs by using two different images. In the first half of the psalm, the image of a shepherd and sheep is used. God is pictured as a good shepherd and his people as the sheep. David shows how God takes care of the sheep leading to green pastures and settling them besides still waters.

The second image is that of a banquet host and a guest. God is pictured as the host and his people are depicted as the guest.

God prepares a table for his guest and does so in the presence of all of the guest's enemies. While those who try to oppress his people watch, God blesses them royally in a demonstration of heavenly hospitality. Then he anoints the guests head with oil, which was the custom of all hosts in Eastern culture.

In Eastern cultures a host would often demonstrate that his guest was very welcome by tokens that suggested that nothing was being spared to provide for the comfort and happiness of the guest. One of those symbolic gestures involved the host asking the guest to hold up his drinking cup. The host would then pour wine and keep on pouring wine until it would overflow the cup and fall on the banquet floor to the laughter and applause of other guests.

By this expression the guest knew he was doubly welcome! There was more available than he would ever consume and his host was willing to shower it all upon him to the point of overflow if necessary!

Thus, David paints a picture of a loving God who pours out blessings upon us until they overflow. He not only quenches our thirst but does more than enough to meet every need of those who trust and follow him!

More than enough

Today, there are millions of people who are frustrated because others seem to have more of everything and they have less. Believers on the other hand, are secure in the knowledge that whatever they need, God will supply. Believers have found that in every way, God is more than enough!

GOD IS MORE THAN ENOUGH TO MAKE OUR EFFORTS FRUITFUL: We have seen numerous demonstrations in the lives of believers to know that God is more than enough to provide for our needs. Often we are frustrated because of our inability to meet goals, make provisions or otherwise succeed. When the believers are tempted to give up, we remember that God will help us if we will invite him, to make our apparently vain efforts fruitful. In Luke 5:4-7 Jesus was in the boat with Simon who had been fishing all night long. Jesus told him to let down his net one more time and prepare for a "draught." When Simon obeyed God's command, he blessed his work so much that he caught so many fish the nets almost broke. He had more than enough! Believers who are involved in Godly pursuits, should constantly remind themselves that God is more than enough to make that effort successful. Call on the Lord, then step back and watch God work!

GOD IS MORE THAN ENOUGH T0 PROVIDE FOR OUR PHYSICAL NEEDS: We often worry about our physical need for food, clothing and shelter. It is good to remember that God provides that too. Israel wandered in the wilderness for 40 years. There was no way for them to make new clothes or shoes, but God provided for them by allowing their clothes to last, in perfect condition, for 40 years. In Matthew 15:36-38 Jesus took seven loaves and a few fishes and multiplied them enough to feed the crowd and leave seven baskets of leftovers. When Israel moved into the promised land they lived in houses they did not build and ate from crops they did not till. In every instance, in the nick of time God provided more than enough for their physical needs. Whatever we need, God has helped believers obtain, not barely enough, but more than enough to sustain us!

GOD IS MORE THAN ENOUGH TO PROVIDE FOR OUR SPIRITUAL NEEDS: Often our physical condition is tied to our spiritual condition. Sin often stands in the way of many of our stated physical goals. God responds by addressing our spiritual needs. In Mark 2:9-12 Jesus meets a man with the palsy. Instead of addressing his physical need he told him, "Thy sins are forgiven thee..arise take up thy bed and walk!" Not only did he receive forgiveness, but he received more! He received physical healing as well. Paul was a great ambassador for Christ but he was troubled by what he described as a "thorn in the flesh." He asked God three times to remove the thorn but his answer was, "My Grace is Sufficient for thee!"

When we have God's grace, we have more than enough!

When we have God's grace, the barrel is never empty!

When we have God's grace, we never walk in a courtroom with an able attorney!

When we have God's grace, we never enter a sickroom with a first class physician!

When we have God's grace, we have more than enough!

Drinking from a saucer

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that today most of us can truly testify that, "I'm drinking from a saucer, 'cause my cup done overflowed!"

Despite our numerous complaints about one thing or the other, we're doing better today than we have ever done before. The Lord has been good to us in so many ways. He has filled our cups until they have overflowed.

Whatever we have needed God has provided more than enough!

If we needed to:

CRAWL, God gave us more than enough, because he helped us STAND on own our two feet!

SING, God gave us more than enough, because he helped us to sing, but then gave us something to sing about!

SHOUT, God gave us more than enough, because he not only helped us to shout, but gave us something to shout about!

SEE, God gave us more than enough, because after he opened our eyes he gave us a vision of the beautiful city that sits on 12 foundations, with streets of gold. He helped us to see the homeland of the soul!

EAT, God gave us more than enough, because he eat helped us to eat the bread of heaven! He heard us sing that old song, "Bread of heaven, bread of heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

DRINK, God gave us more than enough, because not only were we filled, but he showed us a fountain that was filled with blood, that flowed from Emmanuel's veins, and sinners plunged beneath the flood lose all the guilt and stain!

I don't know about you, but I'm drinking out of my saucer because my cup done overflowed!

Every time you sit at your table and eat a full course of your favorite dish, tell yourself, "I'm drinking out of my saucer because my cup done overflowed!"

Every time you see your family doing well and everyone is in reasonably good health, tell yourself, "I'm drinking out of my saucer because my cup done overflowed!"

Every time you are tempted to complain, count up your bad days, then count up your good days then tell yourself, I'm drinking out of my saucer because my cup done overflowed!

What you are drinking out of the saucer is life, but not just life, but life more abundantly!

What you are drinking out of the saucer is peace, but not just peace, but peace that transcends all understanding!

What you are drinking out of the saucer is happiness, but not just happiness, but the joy of God's salvation!

What you are drinking out of the saucer is love, but not just love, but God's love!

It is a love so complete that God sent his only begotten Son to fill the cup of salvation!

He died out on Calvary and arose Early Sunday morning!

Today, he's pouring out salvation to a world that stands before the throne grace singing "Fill my cup, till it overflows!

Fill my cup till it overflows with love!

May The Force Be With You

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the New Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 23, 1999

SCRIPTURE "The things which you learned and received and heard and saw in me, these do, and the God of peace will be with you." Philippians 4:9

Introduction

Have you ever felt guided by a higher power? Most of us can remember a time when we made a decision because we felt almost compelled by something within us. We have numerous names for that inner spirit. There is the notorious "something" that tells a variety of things. "Something told me I should have done this or that." Then there is our "first mind" which usually tells us to do the right thing but some times we don't listen. Some call it a conscience, or the voice of their upbringing that speaks and reminds them to do those things which are right. Whatever name is used, it seems to describe the same circumstance, the presence of a higher power within us which speaks and offers us directions concerning our life's course.

George Lucas, a famous film maker is expected to earn over a billion dollars on the latest in his Star Wars Movies. Those a bit older probably remember the first three, "Star Wars"," The Empire Strikes Back" and "The Return of the Jedi." His latest installment is a prequel that takes place before the first three in time. It is called the "Phantom Menace." Whatever the attraction is to Star Wars movies there have been lines around the country at movie theaters. People are sleeping in tents, sleeping bags and in card board boxes, just to get tickets. Movie theaters are jammed with Star Wars fans who want to see the next episode regardless of the cost.

While critics agree that the movie is short on script and heavy on special effects, the one thing it does have that is unique to all Star Wars movies is the presence of something Lucas calls "The Force." The Force, which is never defined clearly is an energy presence which exists with every person. This energy force guides, protects, empowers and emboldens those who follow its dictates. The force has a dark sight and a light side. The dark side is evil and sinister. The light side is the epitome of moral correction. The dark and the light side compete for heart and soul of characters in Lucas films, most of the times the light side wins, but not without giving up a few life essentials.

As characters depart from one level, station of point of entry to another, the statement is generally heard, “May the force be with you.” By that they mean whatever force that guides you.

Of course Lucas himself is not a believer in God. His use of the generic term “Force” is pregnant with market potential. It was so generic that young people in nearly every denomination in the world could relate to the “force” as being the presence of good in their lives and the dark side being the presence of evil.

Every child that leaves home packs suitcases of clothing and other essentials. Some will carry their bibles with them and will read and become stronger as they grow and mature. There will be some that with them the voice of their parents, Sunday School teachers, pastor and teachers. Some will remember the warnings, heed the advice and as they let the inner power within them guide them to the light side.

As Christians, we know there is an inner force that guides us. When we were children we did not fully understand why we felt uncomfortable doing wrong, or why we enjoyed doing certain other things. We did not know then, but we do know now. We have been guided by the hand of God himself, who proved himself able to keep us from falling.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he encourages the Christians at Philippi to follow the examples they have seen as they attempt the Christian life.

Paul made three missionary journeys. In that time he established churches in many towns and cities, one of which was at Philippi. While in their presence he constantly taught them and demonstrated what it meant to be a Christian. In a great sense, he was their father in the faith. They were bold while in his presence. They were restrained while in his presence. They were reserved while in his presence. However, Paul was a great distance from them and his time was running out.

This letter was designed to be an encouragement to remember the things he had taught them. It is a benediction; or a final thought before parting company. The fourth chapter’s benedictory rehearses everything Paul had taught them one last time. He did not write them again. Scanning the fourth chapter Paul encouraged them to: 1) Rejoice in the Lord always (v4) and always find a reason to give God praise in any situation, 2) Don’t worry about anything but trust in God (v6) because doing so would give them a peace that “surpasseth all understanding.” 3)Think positively, focusing on whatsover things that are honest, just, pure, lovely and of good report. 4)Be content (v11) regardless of the circumstance, God is God in every situation. 5)Don’t Doubt your ability, (v13) because any worthy Godly inspired challenge that you meet can be conquered because “I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me”; and 6)Count on God for the supply (v19) he is the source of all your blessings and he has promised to bless those who abide in him. “My God shall supply all your need..” was his constant reminder.

Verse nine is an encouragement to the Philippians to take to heart all that they have learned in the course of the short Christian experience. He told them to take four things with them in life: What they learned. They had learned Christian practices that included, gathering on the Lord's Day, sharing in The Lord's supper, singing Psalms of praise, supporting each other in the faith, and participating in Christian fellowship. These practices were easy to follow as long as they were in Paul's presence, what he suggested is that they take with them into life, even outside his presence, what they have learned.

What they have received. They had received material and spiritual blessings while under Paul's instruction. They received an abundance of God's spirit and often received material blessings as well. The memory of how God has blessed them in the past would be a source of strength for them in the future.

What they have heard. They had received in countless study sessions, sermons and lectures the fine points of the spiritual life. They had been taught God's viewpoint of love, hate, damnation and the good life. Repeatedly they had received the lectures until they rang in their ears. Now, on this benedictory note, Paul tells them to take what they have learned with them into life and remember it all.

What they have seen. In the course of their experience they witnessed God's power in action. They saw many miraculous things happen that confirmed the power and majesty of God. The sick had been healed, the downtrodden had been lifted up and prayers had been answered in front of their very eyes. Paul encouraged them to remember what they had seen and take that with them.

His final benediction is that the "Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.." Or that the merciful presence of God should follow you where ever you go!

What to take with you

Today, millions of youth are beginning their own journey into life. Many have dreamed about the day they would leave home, free from the rules, regulations and watchful eyes of their parents and loved ones. Some approach this with excitement and anxiety, not sure of what lies ahead. Paul's reminder to the Philippians in this text should be a guide to young believers as they prepare to enter the next phase of their lives and answer the question: "What shall I take with me?"

WHAT I HAVE LEARNED: Young believers have learned many practices at home that they should take with them. They have learned to pray before they go to bed at night. They have learned that every Sunday morning that they should find a Christian assembly and pray and fellowship with the Saints. There will be many temptations pointing believers in a different direction, however they must do as they have learned. They have learned to stay away from the night clubs, juke joints and honky tonks because the environment does not encourage Christian living. They learned to frequent those kinds of activities that will help them grow in the faith. As each youth begins life much distant from the firm rule of their parents, each is encouraged to take the practices they have been taught with them.

WHAT I HAVE RECEIVED: As you begin your own life, remember how God has blessed you already. He put you in the caring hands of parents or wards who guided you and protected you. He blessed them with enough strength and resources to provide for you, nurture you and sustain you. God has blessed you with knowledge, special abilities, skills, personality, charm, wit, charisma, outward beauty and intelligence. Many have received great opportunities to learn, grow and achieve. These opportunities only came because God is in the blessing business and he rewards those who strive to put him first in their lives.

WHAT I HAVE HEARD: Youth heard many lessons from parents about life. Many of those lessons were learned in the "School of hard knocks" an unforgiving and unmerciful classroom that takes no prisoners. They know the proverbs of their parents and grand parents from memory. They know their pastor's teaching line by line, word by word. They have studied their lessons well. What they did not learn in a Sunday School class youth group or Bible School, theylearned from watching how God worked in the lives of the people that surrounded them. They have learned that ...serving the Lord will pay off after while.

WHAT I HAVE SEEN: Youth have had many opportunities to see God in action. They have seen heal people who were sick and watched those people recuperate and resume their lives in front of their very eyes. They have seen him take people who were thought to be failures and turn them into successes. They have seen God literally jerk them from the mouth of danger. They have seen the miracles that God has performed in their lives. They have seen the glory of the Lord working in the lives of millions and they now know that they serve a mighty, and powerful God.

Take The Lord With You

Finally, brothers and sisters, while George Lucas encourages youth to "take the force with you" I have something more reliable than the invisible force of "Star Wars."

The Force of Star Wars has a dark side, but I want to recommend someone that only has a bright side!

The Force of Star Wars did not have a name, that just called it the force. But I want to recommend someone that is called by many names. Somebody called him:

El-Shaddai, the almighty God!

Jehovah-Jirah, The Lord will provide!

Jehovah-Ropeka, The Lord is our healer!

Jehovah-Rohi, The Lord is my Shepherd and I shall not want!

As you go out in life don't worry about taking the "force" with you, but you should be sure that you take the Lord with you!

When David went out to fight Goliath, they tried to give him the King's armour and sword. They were all amazed when David faced the mighty giant with only a slingshot and five smooth stones. He didn't take anything with him but what he had learned, what he had received, what he heard and what he had seen about the Lord. When he took the Lord with him, Goliath had to fall!

When you take the Lord with you, powerful things can happen!

When you take the Lord with you:

Doors that were closed, will find themselves open!

Evil that tries to overtake you will fail because your prayer to your body guard is “lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil.”

Trouble that comes won’t bother you because you know that in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion. In the secret of his tabernacle, he shall hide me!

Storms may rise and winds may blow, but the Lord your God is still in control!

Take the Lord with you because he promised never to leave you, never to leave you alone!

What shall I take with me?

Take the blood of the lamb with you!

This is the blood that was sacrificed out on Golgotha’s Hill.

This is the blood that was shed for the remission of sin!

Wherever your journeys take your testimony with you!

Tell the world that you serve a savior who died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose with all power in his hands!

Don’t worry about the force...take the Lord with you!

Praying With Power

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 17, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." James 5:16

Introduction

Do you know how to pray? Some, when asked that question will immediately respond, yes! Others will hesitate for a moment and consider the full nature of the question. Since prayer, by definition, is the expression to God of the sincere desires of the heart, every Christian should know how to let God know exactly what he or she wants. Praying is talking to God.

Praying with power is talking to God in a way that gets action. How do you get action from God? Is it through correctly worded prayers that are linguistically correct? Is it through loud, long and lavish prayers that appeal to the ear? What kind of prayers really get through to God?

Consider the three men who had become lost in the woods and could not find their way out. As they stumbled around aimlessly they came upon an abandoned church building which had a bell in its tower. It came to the men to ring the church bell to let any search party that might be looking for them know where they were. In the bell tower, each took his turn at ringing the bell. The first, a quite dainty fellow, seized the rope politely taking care to keep his pinkies in the air and to follow all of the rules of etiquette. He gave a slight tug, but the bell made no sound. He waddled away saying, "It's hopeless, the bell won't ring, we are lost!"

The second man tried. He wasn't concerned about his pinkies or whether he followed the right form. He grabbed the rope and pulled it with a single, powerful tug. The bell sounded loudly! The man said, "That's the way to ring a bell!" A search party that had been seeding the three heard the bell toll, but could not locate their exact position. It waited for another chime but it did not come.

After a while the second man concluded that ringing the bell wouldn't bring any help. Finally, the third man, who was older and very short, came to the rope. He jumped into the air, grabbed the rope and dropped to his knees, still holding on to the rope. The bell chimed and pulled him into the air. He dropped to his knees again. Repeatedly, he pulled the rope and dropped to his knees.

When the search party finally located the three men they found that the old man was still holding on to the rope and toning the bell. His knees were bruised and calloused and his hands were scarred with rope burns, but he kept ringing the bell. The leader of the search party told him, "we were able to find you because you didn't stop ringing the bell!"

As Christians, we know that the way to get a prayer answered is not by fancy, flowery language; nor by occasional tugs, but through fervently repeated, sincere prayers, that keep going up until an answer comes down!

Exposition

This text focuses on James as he explains to the church how to put its faith in action through prayer. This reflects the entire message that James gives to the church which is that it must put its faith in action. This is evidenced by active service, patience and prayer.

Throughout the book of James, Christians are encouraged to use God's special formulas to achieve success. He suggests to us (James 5:20) that an active faith uses the formula (F+W)*U2=A. Interpreted it means that your faith plus your works times the number of people "U" influence equals action. In James 1:3 he suggests that our faith plus our trial equals patience (F+T=P). Here James gives us another formula, this one results in Powerful prayers that get through. James's teachings seem to say: Our faith plus a saved life-style, combined with action on our part, multiplied by the intensity and frequency of our prayers equals "much" or (F+R+E)*P=M.

The key to understanding this truth is to look closely at James 5:16B "...The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." The words "Righteous", "Effectual", "Prayer", and "much" are the key elements of James' formula for powerful prayer. The unlock the great secrets of getting prayers through to God.

The Righteous

James, addressing the church lays down a prerequisite for powerful prayers: they must come from a righteous man or woman.

This does not imply that prayers are only answered from people who have never committed any sins or have no spiritual imperfections. The term righteous used in this context refers to those who have been saved and justified by the blood of Christ. These are men and women who certainly have flaws and shortcomings but who have been saved and forgiven by our savior himself. The righteous are those who live their lives in communion with God. They obey his commandments and strive to live according to his word on a daily basis.

It will be difficult for a person who is living out of communion with God to get a prayer through, until that person has first been justified. The preponderance of Old testament scriptures follows Psalm 66:18, "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me:" The New Testament follows John 9:31, "Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth." The prayer the sinner should pray first, and it will be heard, is "Lord save me."

The very first step to getting a prayer through is to get in communion with God! That can be done only by accepting Jesus Christ as your savior, and repenting for sins.

Effectual Means Doing Your Part

James uses the word "effectual" as he tries to explain to the church how to get a prayer through. Effectual means actions or deeds that bring about change. In the Old testament the word "effect" connotes "deeds." In the New Testament the word effectual is used to refer to "effective work" as in 2 Thessalonians 2:13 or Galatians 2:8.

Since the book of James emphasizes active faith, it becomes clear that by using the word "effectual" his formula for powerful prayers, James indicates that the person praying should have an "effective work" himself. Having an effective work means that we have done all that we can do to change our circumstance. We have done all that our hands know how to do! The person who prays to God should have done, or be in the process of doing everything humanly possible to resolve his or her crises, performing an "effectual work.

We should not ask God to do for us what we have not attempted to do for ourselves. We should not pray to God to give us a job, for example, and we have not applied. We should not ask God to give us good health, while we do little to protect that which we have. We should not ask God to bless the sick or shut-in when we have not visited, called or responded to their circumstance in any way ourselves.

James reminds us that our prayers complement our "effective work" or our efforts to resolve a situation. Conversely, he seems to suggest that we should not pray for that which we have shown no concern for ourselves.

Fervent Prayer

James says our prayers should be fervent. Fervent means sincere, passionate and from the heart. Our prayers should reflect our real concern about the circumstance as reflected in our active efforts to resolve the situation.

Fervency refers to intensity and frequency. Those who pray fervently do so with unparalleled intensity. They pray regularly for the same blessing. In suggesting fervency in prayer, James simply reiterates the teachings of Jesus, who taught that we should be "importuning" in our prayers. To emphasize this principle, in Luke 11:8 Jesus gave the illustration of the knocks at midnight to drive home the point that even though a man had settled in his bed and locked his doors he arose because a neighbor kept knocking on his door. The same is true, he said for those who ask fervently from God.

However, we must remember that no matter how fervent our appeals to God, what we ask, must be in accordance with the will of God. Sometimes we know that we are asking for something that is against the will of God because he has said so in his word.

The ladies man who prays that he will be successful at conquering some innocent lass is an example of someone who may pray fervently but won't get an answer because that request is against the will of God. James 4:3 says "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts."

The righteous always want God's will to be done and graciously bow to it. When times come when we don't know the will of God for our situation, we ask, accept, and claim. Ask for what we want, accept his answer, and claim the victory because we know his decision in our circumstance will work to our advantage in the long run.

"Availeth Much"

Finally, James reminds us that prayer, coming from a person who knows the Lord in the pardoning of his sins, and has demonstrated an effective work, availeth much. To say that such a prayer "availeth much" is another way of saying what our grandparents put another way...prayer changes things.

Prayer can turn situations around and make the darkness light.

When there is something that seems beyond reach, prayer can reach the unreachable!

When someone has gotten out of touch, prayer can touch the untouchable!

When there is a circumstance that resists efforts to change it, prayer can change the unchangeable!

When there is a stumbling block that will not move, payer can move the unmovable!

When there is a problem that cannot be solved, prayer can solve the unsolvable!

I don't know about you but I've found out that prayer can change things!

If there is hatred, prayer can turn hatred into love!

If there is confusion, prayer can turn confusion into harmony!

If there is disappointment, prayer can inspire hope!

If there is fear, prayer can turn fear into courage!

Within your bosom you have the phone, call up the Lord, he's still on the throne!

He died out on Calvary, but early Sunday morning He arose from the grave!

No wonder the song writer declares "Jesus is on the mainline, tell Him what you want!"

Call Him!

If you're sick and you want to get well...

Call Him....and tell Him what you want!

She Shall Be Praised

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: Charm is deceitful and beauty is passing, But a woman who fears the LORD, she shall be praised. Proverbs 31:30

Introduction

What are you afraid of? Most people are afraid of one thing or another. Some are afraid of snakes. Others are afraid wild animals. There are still others that are afraid mice or spiders. Strange as it may seem there are some who are afraid of falling in love, some who are afraid of the dark, some who are afraid to walk under ladders and still others who fear Black cats that cross their paths. What we fear is said to be our own private phobia. It is the one part of our nature that we keep essentially close because it reveals our vulnerability.

While everyone fears something, everyone does not fear the same thing. The same man that is afraid to sleep in the dark may jump out of an airplane in a parachute jump. The same person that is afraid of the sight of blood, loves mountain climbing as a hobby. There is no pattern to our fears. That's why a person can scream at the sight of a mouse but show no fear in another circumstance.

That's why some people do not find it hard to disobey God, they do not fear him. While they fear many other things, they don't fear God. They fear being fired from work if they don't perform. They fear losing a lover. They fear being disavowed in a will. They fear any and everything except God.

It would appear that living in the fear of the Lord would be an attribute associated with every church member. Yet there are many who associate with churches and denominations who have no fear of the Lord. That lack of fear is demonstrated in the behavior of those who snub their noses at God and walk proudly in their sins.

Not long ago there was a generation among our people that lived in fear of the Lord. Whenever it rained, the sheets were pulled over windows. Radios and television sets were turned off. Children who were playing had to sit still and wait because, "God was doing his work." This same generation feared their dress and speech in the house of the Lord. They were afraid to work on Sunday and often refused to indulge in any recreational activity on Sunday, afraid that they may unintentionally do something that would displease God. There was a general reverence for the Lord and those things and people that worked to represent his cause. That fear has greatly dissipated.

However, those who manage to maintain a healthy fear of the Lord, stand to gain favor with God. Those who fear him, respect him and usually obey him. Those who fear him fear him usually hold his name and being in reverence and work to defend his cause with their own lives.

As Christians, we strive to come before the Lord with fear and with trembling. We know that those who come before him with respect and fear will gain his praise and adulation. Any man or woman that orders their lives according to the will of God has the joy of knowing...he or see, shall be praised.

Exposition

This text focuses on the attributes of what is described as a "virtuous" woman. Virtue in this context refers to moral and mental qualities, combined with a spirit of love, industry and fear of the Lord.

Verses 10-31 are an acrostic. Every verse begins with a different letter of the Hebrew alphabet.

Aleph is for woman full of virtue,Beth refers to the trust her husband shares, Gimmel is for work she does to help you, Daleth stands for how she seeks her wares.

This continues through all 22 letters of the Hebrew alphabet. In this manner 22 separate virtuous of a good woman are combined to show a woman who is complete and worthy of praise because she fears the Lord.

Proverbs describes the virtuous woman in a very detailed analysis that leaves little to the imagination.

The virtuous woman has four character traits that are unique. All four are listed in verse 26 which notes: strength, honor, wisdom and kindness as the marks of the ideal woman.

Her loyalty and Devotion to her husband is another identifying trait of the virtuous woman. Verses 11 and 12 say: "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil. She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life." Despite her other qualities a good woman is measured by her loyalty to her husband, according to the scripture. Her actions toward him are of such a nature that he can "safely trust her," meaning that his trust will not be breached..

She is also measured by her loyalty to her family. Verses 13-21 describes a very industrious woman who seeks ways to provide the best for her family yet be economical. She considers the meats and foodstuffs needed for her household and secures them. She saves, pinches and economizes in every way possible to make the family's resources go further. When she cannot buy what her family needs she makes it herself, to the best of her ability. Neither weather or seasons will stop her from providing for her household. Verse 21 says "She is not afraid of the snow for her household: for all her household are clothed with scarlet."

Not only does she care for her husband and family, but she also works very diligently to help the poor and the needy. Verse 20 says: "She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy." The virtuous woman is concerned about the sick. She visits the hospitals, prepares food for shut-ins, gives to help the less fortunate and gives of herself to help lift the burden of those who are in a position of need. "She reacheth forth her hand" suggests that she does not wait until the needy make an appeal to her, but takes the initiative to reach out and touch someone with compassion.

The character trait that distinguishes her from all other women is the fact that she fears the Lord. This fear and reverence of the Lord permeates her being, family relationships and interactions with others.

Because she fears, the Lord, verse 30 says..she shall be praised.

Women Who Fear The Lord

Today there are many great women in the world, but the woman who fears the Lord deserves extra attention and praise. Perhaps that's why Proverbs 31:29 notes that there are many great women, but the woman who fears the Lord excellest them all. What are her characteristics of such a woman? Why should she be praised?

SHE IS NOT ANXIOUS ABOUT THE FUTURE: The woman who trusts in the Lord does not worry about the future but is content to let God do those things she cannot do herself. She thinks about the future. She plans for the future but she does not worry about the future, because much of the future is in God's hands. Thus, in the present, she prepares for the winter or the coming of bad times. Verse 21 notes that she is not afraid of the snow because she is prepared.

SHE LIVES BY PRACTICAL WISDOM: There are many great women who have many degrees but they lack the ability to know and live by practical wisdom. The Woman who fears the Lord practices wise living and then shares her wisdom with family members in family gatherings, over the telephone and every other opportunity that presents itself. Verse 26 says she openeth her mouth with wisdom. The wisdom she accumulates is lived by example in front of her family. She lives by a set of old wise rules that have been the hallmark of great mothers over the years, "spare the rod and spoil the child," "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," "Be careful of the dog that brings you a bone of information, because the dog that brings a bone will also carry a bone," "A penny saved is a penny earned," "Waste not, want not!" There a very close connection between a practical, gracious wisdom and freedom from anxiety about the future.

SHE IS STRONG: Women who fear the Lord are strong. Strength as noted here, is not necessarily in a physical sense, but they are strong in the moral and spiritual sense. Verse 17 notes that "She girdeth her loins with strength, and strengtheneth her arms." These women are those who have the moral strength to resist those things which would operate to her detriment. They turn away from certain crowds, distance themselves from certain activities and avoid association with evil practices. Moreover, her fear of the Lord prompts her to build her intellectual strength. She studies the word in every way that is available to her. That study builds her ability to resist temptation and to stand for God. Many women who fear the Lord live well past the pivotal three score and ten years that the bible seems to promise and by reason of the strength see four score and beyond. The strength developed by such women is developed over a life time of faithful dependence on God.

Each small storm that God sees us through, builds strength for those that come with hurricane force.

Each small stream that God helps us to cross, builds strength, for the Red Sea that will block our path to the promised land.

Each small problem that God helps us to lift, builds strength for the heavy burdens that are sure to come.

SHE LIVES FOR OTHERS RATHER THAN HERSELF: One of the great distinctions of women who fear the Lord is that they seem to live for others. They give of themselves constantly. These are the women who know that the Lord has no hands but their hands and no feet but their feet. They seem to live for others because they believe they should do the work of the Lord. She seems to lose herself in the providing for her husband and children. She often denies herself to assist them, not because it is required but because it is her nature to do so. The Woman who fears the Lord reaches out because she remembers that Christ has taught that what we do to the least of these, we also do unto him. Thus she reaches out in grand and small ways to help those outside of herself family while doing the same for those inside of her family. She seems to live by an imbedded motto: "If I can help somebody as I pass along...then my living shall not be in vain."

No Fear Of Death

The virtuous woman fears the Lord, but she has no fear of meeting him.

There are many who approach their final years with an anxiety and lingering fear of the unknown that makes them afraid for the day when they will be called to meet God.

The woman who fears the Lord and has lived her life in respect for his word, is not afraid to meet the Lord. She is not afraid of the judgment books or what may be written in her record for she knows that her name is written down in glory.

When your name is written in the Lamb's book of life, there is no fear of death. I hear David declaring "Yea though I walk through the Valley of the Shadow of Death, I will fear no evil for thou art with me!"

Consider the old slave woman who was the ward of an unusually tough slave master. The master was known to punish slaves whenever they failed to meet their quotas or disobeyed the overseers. This year he promised the slaves that any one that picked 400 pounds of cotton per day and met their daily chores would be set free and given a wage to work on the plantation. Nobody believed the master would actually free a slave but one old slave woman sweated in the sun every day to pick 400 pounds of cotton. She picked until her hands were blistered. She hoed her assigned rows long after the others had gone into their cabins. At the end of the season, most of the slaves were afraid when the heard the master was coming, except the old slave woman. She began singing and smiling. “Don’t you know the master is coming, why are you singing?” She was asked. The slave woman replied “I have picked my bales, I have hoed my rows, I have toiled in the heat of the day, when the master comes...I’m going to be free!”

The woman who fears the Lord doesn’t fear death because she has picked her bales! She worked the works of him who sent her while it was day!

The woman who fears the Lord doesn’t fear death because she has hoed her row! She has finished her course.

She came meet the master with a smile to receive her crown!

It is a crown she earned for being a faithful wife!

It is a crown she earned for being a caring and devoted mother!

It is a crown she earned for being a loyal church member!

It is a crown paid for by Jesus himself, way out on Calvary!

For 2000 years ago he died and rose again, promising life eternal to those who will believe and trust in him!

On Saturday May 22, 1999 Luella McNeal went to meet the master. She lived the life of the virtuous woman and she shall be praised.

Don't Throw In The Towel

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 6, 1999

SCRIPTURE: And he said, "Listen, all you of Judah and you inhabitants of Jerusalem, and you, King Jehoshaphat! Thus says the LORD to you: 'Do not be afraid nor dismayed because of this great multitude, for the battle is not yours, but God's. 16Tomorrow go down against them. They will surely come up by the Ascent of Ziz, and you will find them at the end of the brook before the Wilderness of Jeruel. 17You will not need to fight in this battle. Position yourselves, stand still and see the salvation of the LORD, who is with you, O Judah and Jerusalem!' Do not fear or be dismayed; tomorrow go out against them, for the LORD is with you." 2 Chronicles 20:15-17

Introduction

Have you ever felt like giving up? Those are the times when you asked yourself the question, "What's the use?" There are times in the best of lives when the temptation to quit is overwhelming. Everyone likes to succeed at goals that they establish. They are encouraged when there are indicators that their efforts are not in vain. Nothing is more discouraging than a series of defeats, failures and setbacks. Those are time when we are overwhelmed by the odds and feel like giving up. Just as in the sport of boxing a fighter that cannot continue signals defeat by throwing a towel into the ring, many otherwise confident Christians find themselves throwing in the towel when they face odds that seem unbeatable.

What generates this feeling more than anything else are tough situations that seem unsolvable despite our best efforts. Dealing with tough situations takes a whole lot of adjusting. Some folks never get ready for tough times and they simply throw in the towel.

Consider the day the Devil decided to visit the church. Before he arrived, the members gave brave testimonials about their willingness to be tried in the fire. That Sunday the devil decided to come to church carrying a big bucket of fire and hell. As the members saw all the problems and troubles and headaches the devil had in his bucket they all started running. First it was the members in the pews. They tried to hold on but the fire in the bucket was too hot. They threw in the towel and left. The choir members tried to sing, but as the devil walked toward them, they all left, followed by the choir director. The musicians left, finally even the deacons threw in the towel. The fire got so hot that the preacher left. When the devil looked around the whole church was empty except one old man. The devil walked over to him and asked, brother why aren't you throwing in the towel like the rest of the church members?

Don't you know who I am and what's in this bucket? The old man looked in the bucket and then looked up at the devil and said, "That's all you got in that bucket? I get more hell than that at home? I do believe that woman I married, must have been your sister! Some have been through so much they can stand just about anything!

As Christians we are comforted to know that if we stand for that which is right, our battles are God's battles. If we do the right things and stand for God, we are not lonely soldiers standing isolated on the battlefield but we have the knowledge of knowing that our God joins us in our struggle and promises us the victory through his power.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jehoshapath as he learns that his battle will be fought by God.

Jehoshapath was the King of Judah who found himself surrounded by a coalition of armies that included the Moabites, Ammonites and Edomites among others. These vast armies had assembled themselves and were in the process of attacking the people of Judah.

The presence of such a large force of enemies in view of the fact of is inability to repel this host of invaders, Jehoshaphat felt his only refuge was at the horns of the altar. He resolved to employ the aid of God. He called his subjects to observe a solemn fast at the sanctuary. It was customary with the Hebrew kings to proclaim fasts in perilous circumstances, either in a city, a district, or throughout the entire kingdom, according to the greatness of the emergency. On this occasion, it was a universal fast, which extended to infants (2Ch 20:13; see also Joe 2:15,16 Jon 3:7).

He led the people in prayer. At this time recalled how the enemy they faced was present only because God commanded Israel when it left Egypt not to destroy these nations. The people were obedient and allowed the Moabites, Ammonites and others to live. Now, years later, they were united together to destroy Judah. Jehoshapath's appeal to God was to remember that their present trouble was the result of their previous obedience to God.Then it concludes with an earnest appeal to the justice of God to protect those who, without provocation, were attacked and who were unable to defend themselves against overwhelming numbers.

As they prayed God answered them through the prophet Jahaziel who told them that the battle that was about to be fought was not their battle but God's. In fact while it appeared that Israel would be the primary participant in the battle, they would not even fight, but would arise the victors.

Hearing this, Jehoshaphat bowed his head and expressed thanks and gratitude to God

Without a doubt the people began preparations for the celebration. They ordered the singers to prepare a special song and a procession was arranged similar to the ones used when the people celebrated a victory. The songs and celebration that were being prepared were victory songs. The praises were announcements of victory. The Levites led the procession with their musical instruments; and singing the 136th Psalm, the people went on, not as an army marching against an enemy, but returning in joyful triumph after a victory.

The moment they began to sing praises to God the Lord went to work. Just what happened has been debated for years. The scripture says ambushments occurred. Some have argued that God sent angels to ambush the Ammonites and Moabites and made it appear as if one had attacked the other. Others claim that there may have been arguments among the confederates.

Whatever the case animosities sprung up, which led to widespread dissensions and fierce feuds, in which they drew the sword against each other. The consequence was, that as the mutual strife commenced when the Hebrew procession set out from Jerusalem, the work of destruction was completed before Jehoshaphat and his people arrived at the battlefield.

When Judah finally made it to the battle scene, they saw the field strewed with dead bodies, so that they did not have to fight at all, but rather to take possession of an immense booty, the collection of which occupied three days. On the fourth they set out on their return to Jerusalem in the same order and joyful mood as they came.

What are God's Battles?

Today, there are many who are fighting daily battles for one reason or another. Battles are small confrontations that are only a part of great wars. Sometimes battles can be pivotal in determining the outcome of the war. The great American battles at Vicksburg and Gettysburg during the Civil War were pivotal because a victory or a loss would affect the final outcome of the war. In a similar sense, each of our small battles pivotal. They may not be the whole war but they can set up a series of events that determine the end.

When Jehoshaphat faced his coalition of enemies, he recognized them as people that Israel could have dealt with in their own way and avoided the trouble. However, the people obeyed God. Because the people obeyed God and did not destroy the Moabites and Ammonites when they left Israel, the resulting battle in the aftermath was not their battle, but God's battle and he proved himself quite able to win his own battles.

Many of a believer's battles are God's battles. These are battles that occur in your life because you tried to do what was right and ill feeling, misunderstanding, confusion and even serious trouble resulted. You tried to help someone and they turned on you. You gave your honest opinion and it wasn't received well. You refused to participate in an ungodly activity. You fell into financial trouble by no fault of your own. These are small battles that besiege believers every day.

The word of God reminds that these daily battles will occur because Satan brings them against us. "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. 13Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand." Ephesians 6:12-13

Believers who are being attacked because of their attempts to do the right thing should remember the words of Jesus In Matthew 5:11-12, "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

When you are trying to do right and meet frustration, you are in a godly battle! Don't throw in the towel! That battle is not yours, it's the Lord's!

Pre-Battle Prayer

Those who see a battle coming should follow Jehoshapath's second example, don't throw in the towel, Go down in prayer before the battle.

When Jehoshapath brought the country together in prayer, they talked to God about their approaching trouble. It was not a "can" prayer filled with metaphors and flowery words, it was one of those "driving in your car, stalled at the red light in deep thought prayers!" The people really talked to God. !

Throughout the Old Testament great Kings would often call in the prophets to talk to God about battles that were about to fought. If God indicated that he did not favor their involvement the wise kings avoided conflicts the unwise went into battle anyway. That's what happened to Jehoshaphat's friend, King Ahab.

He prayed and then was told to avoid the battle, but Ahab went into battle anyway....and it cost him his life. Having observed what happened to Ahab, Jehoshaphat knew the wisdom of talking to God before going into any battle.

As he talked to God...God told him how the battle would be fought!

When we pray, God will give us the answer. God will tell us how the battle is to be fought, if we have to fight at all!

In prayer we may learn that we must be like Joshua and march around the walls of Jericho!

In prayer we may learn that we must be like David and slay giants without a sword and shield!

In prayer we may learn that we must be like Gideon and face large numbers with just a handful!

Then there are times, when God may answer us and say...don't do anything! Like Moses standing at the Red Sea, he may say "Stand still and see the salvation of the Lord! Don't say a word! Don't raise a sword! Don't put up a defense! All of your battles are my battles, but this battle is all mine!

That's the time when God says be still till "I make your enemies your footstool!"

That's the time when God prepares a table for you in the presence of your enemies!

Prepare For the Victory!

Finally, every believer facing difficulties, frustrations and problems for God's sake, should not throw in the towel, but prepare for the victory!

When Jehoshaphat received an answer from God, he never doubted his word, but he prepared for the victory.

The people prepared for the victory celebration and ordered the choir to write a victory song!

It doesn't matter whether God fights the battle for us, or whether God fights the battle with us, those who fight in the name of the Lord are guaranteed the victory!

That's what Romans 8:37 means when it says, "..we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."

Are you facing a time of trouble? Don't throw in the towel because "in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion. In the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me."

Are you feeling helpless? Don't throw in the towel! Say like David, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth!"

Are you feeling alone? Don't throw in the towel! Jesus said in John 14:18, "I will not leave you comfortless. I will come to you!" .."And lo I'll be with you alway even unto the earth!"

Are you feeling trapped with no way to turn? Don't throw in the towel, because the Lord will make a way out of no way!

Are you feeling weighted down by a heavy load? Don't throw in the towel! Take your burden to the Lord and leave it there for Jesus said in Matthew 11:30, "my yoke is easy and my burden is light!"

Are you feeling overwhelmed by the odds? Don't throw in the towel! I hear the word declaring, "He that overcometh, shall inherit all things!"

Do you feel like giving up and just want to throw up your hands! Don't throw in the towel! Instead of throwing up your hands, say "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know. If thou withdraw thyself from me, whether shall I go!"

Don't throw in the towel, but get ready to praise the Lord!

Israel praised the Lord for the victory that was on the way!

Praise God for the blessing that is on the way! When the praises go up, the blessings come down!

In good times and bad times, praise the Lord!

When tears roll from your eyes, praise the Lord!

You don't have to wait until the battle is over..you can't shout now!

Shout because God is still on the throne!

Shout because God still hears and answers prayer!

Shout because God sent his Son to command the outcome of our battles!

Shout because Jesus demonstrated that we may have our Garden of Gethesemenes

We may have times when we are nailed to the cross!

We may have times when it looks like we are defeated and buried in our graves!

Shout because when the battle the battle is over...we will rise again by the power of God!

Don't throw in the towel, call on Jesus!

Don't throw in the towel, trust in the Lord!

Sing the words of that old song, "I'm on the battle field for my Lord. And I promised him that I would serve him till I die. I'm on the battle field for my Lord!"

If Then I Be A Father, Where Is Mine Honor?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE: "A son honoureth his father, and a servant his master: IF THEN I BE A FATHER, WHERE IS MINE HONOR? and if I be a master, where is my fear? saith the LORD of hosts unto you, O priests, that despise my name. And ye say, Wherein have we despised thy name? Mal 1:6

Introduction

Have you heard the phrase, "Giving honor to God who is the head of my life?" It is a familiar phrase in church circles which seems to suggest that theperson speaking is bestowing honor upon God by the use of the phrase. At church programs, these speakers usually preface their remarks with this phrase which usually elicits an 'Amen" or two from the audience. However, a closer look at the phrase reveals another truth. Honor is DEMONSTRATED by obedience, respect, reverence and praise. Thus, a person can honor God through actions that demonstrate that he or she is obedient, respectful and grateful for his benevolence.

However, GIVING HONOR to God suggests that honor is being BESTOWED. Honor is bestowed from a larger entity onto a smaller entity. The King honors a subject with an invitation to the palace. A citizen is honored by the nation. A member can be honored by the church. A member who gives honor to the church is a member who is so renowned that his presence gives honor to the church. A citizen can honor give honor to the nation if he is greater in renown than the whole of the country. A human being can only GIVE honor to God if he is bigger more powerful and has more renown than God himself. Thus, God is honored to see him in a worship service. In simple terms, when honor is given, it is given from the big thing down to the little thing. Thus when we say, "Giving honor to God" we are suggesting that we are the "big thing" bestowing honor upon God the little thing. The problem is not in honoring God, it is trying to GIVE God honor.

Consider the little boy who came into his father's room crying on father's day. The lad was drenched in tears as he came to his father's bed. "What are you crying about, son?" As the father as he wiped the tears away from his eyes. Raising his big round eyes the boy said, "I can't find anything to give you for father's day. I was going to get you a razor but you have one. I was going to get you a tie but you have many. I was going to get you some cologne but have that too. Everything I want to give you, you already have." The father smiled then embraced his son and said. "Every day you give something I had the day before but don't have each day until you show me and that's your love, obedience and respect. Keep being a great son and you'll give me a new gift every day." We can't give God anything that he does not already have, except daily love, respect and obedience.

Then how is God honored?

God is honored through the way we live our lives every day. He is not impressed with our words and lip service if they are not indicative of our daily actions.

In the same manner, we cannot honor our parents with mere words. A father whose children disobey his every command, disrespect his house, and fail to keep holy his sacred things, does not hear words from his children that express their love and appreciation for him. They honor him with their lives. Everything else is just icing on the cake.

As Christians, we see God as a type of the perfect father. We see him strong, loving, compassionate, kind, warm and benevolent in spirit. We honor our fathers the same way we honor God, not with empty words of praise or tokens but through the way we live our lives before him. Long after our fathers are gone, many still honor them, by following their instructions, respecting their values and praising their memory. How do we honor our fathers? Not with our lips and gifts, but with our lives!

Exposition

This text emphasizes the truth that God deserves the reverence due him because he is both a father and Lord.

The priests of Israel became very slack in their implementation of the laws of Moses with respect to the sacrifices. They allowed polluted, lame and sick animals to be offered as sacrifices in violation of the law's requirement that all sacrificial animals be "without blemish." This angered God who made it known that he would prefer having no sacrifices at all than to have impure offerings. Although God had a great reputation among the nations as a powerful and just God, the priests in Jerusalem debased the worship by their lax procedures. Their actions disgraced God although their lips gave him praise.

While the people gave lip service to God without the accompanying actions, God himself had been good to them. He deserved their reverence as both a father figure and Lord.

With their lips the people hailed God as their father, but God, through the prophet Malachi questioned whether their words were meaningless or really truthful.

His question seems to suggest that God is truly honored by those who study to act the part of both an obedient child and a faithful servant.

OBEDIENCE: The obedience paid to God as a father in the context of this passage is described as "honor." "A son honoureth his father, and a servant his master. If then

I be a father, where is mine honor? and if I be a master, where is my fear?" The honor that a father receives from a son is obedience. God expected it from Israel. He demands it from all who follow him. God told the people that they honored him with their lips but they were being disobedient to him especially when it came to the way they lived.

FAITHFUL SERVANT: Those who honor God assume the role of a faithful servant, willing carry out the will of his Lord. This willingness to do what God wants do is called "fear" in this passage. To honor God is reverence mingled with honor and fear. Those who honor God do what pleases him, even without the threat of hell looming over them. They are true and faithful servants.

As a father, God is honored by obedience to his word and reverence to his name.

As a Lord, God is honored by carrying out his will among the nations.

When God asked the question, "Where is mine honor?" Israel could not answer. They neither obeyed his commands or reverence him by carrying out his will. Their words were empty and the praises were hollow and empty.

To honor God, words are not necessary but actions are the true sign of a life devoted to God.

How to Honor Our Fathers

Today, there will be many that will attempt to honor their fathers in traditional ways. Among them will be a plethora of gifts including, shavers, neckties, cologne, shirts, etc. Some dads will be treated to lunch or fellowships.

In addition to the traditional tokens of love that are demonstrated on father's day, believers can best honor their fathers on a daily basis by displaying three characteristics: Obedience, respect and faithfulness.

OBEY YOUR FATHER: In nearly every home the fathers usually becomes the parent that has to "lay down the law." In addition, the father usually has to enforce the rules of the home. Good fathers spend considerable time explaining the family rules and the rules of life to their children. The rules involve respect for life, property and the rights of others. They may also involve interpersonal relationships, solving problems and other disciplinary measures.

Children honor their fathers when they obey their father's rules. Since a good father is a type of our heavenly father in the home, we model our obedience to our father after our obedience to God. A good father does not make rules that will harm him family, in the same way that God does not make laws that would hurt his people. We honor our fathers most by obeying their rules and directives without question. That's why Ephesians 6:1 puts it bluntly, "Children obey your parents..."

The picture of young Isaac obeying Abraham even as he was laying himself on the altar is striking. With no sacrificial lamb in sight and death apparent, Isaac still laid himself on the altar and obeyed his father. Even as the blade swung into the air, perhaps aimed at his heart, he laid still in obedience. While that is an extreme, today, children can do far less and honor godly fathers by obedience to their rules and directives.

RESPECT YOUR FATHER: Obedience and respect are different in nature but both are drawn from acceptance of the same truth. That truth is that we should submit our ourselves to higher authority. In biblical times there was an extreme amount of respect for parents. That respect was so intense that children acted in certain ways in the presence of their parents, especially their fathers that was a marked difference from their usual behavior. Ham drew the wrath of his father Noah when he mistakenly saw him naked. There were certain ways that a child could even look upon his father that were deemed disrespectful. Even in the context of African-American history, the respect for father and grandfather was immense. Today that respect is declining. There is much lip tucking, eye rolling, fist balling and talking back among children today. The role of father has been talked down so much that there is very little respect for fathers in many homes. What, at one time was respect, has been reduced to tolerance.

Children can honor their fathers by respecting them daily. They can speak well of their fathers and be at their best when in their presence. Respect does not mean a child will agree with everything his father will do or say, but he continues to hold his father in high regard, despite differences of opinion over matters of style, taste and procedure. Children who respect their fathers, even into adulthood honor them in the greatest of ways.

CARRY OUT YOUR FATHER'S WILL: Often father's give their children special duties and responsibilities. Sometimes however, children are negligent when it comes to carrying out their father's will. We honor our fathers' when we honor their wishes and do what we have been asked to do. Whether it is a simple errand or an instruction to make peace with an enemy, those who carry out their father's will praised by him.

One of the quickest ways to anger a father is to fail to carry out an instruction. Conversely, one of the best ways to please a father is to carry out an instruction expeditiously and meticulously. Father are honored by children that he can count on to do what he says, exactly like he says.

What happens when father is honored

Finally, brothers and sisters every believer should consider what happens when father is honored.

When a father is honored by his children he is pleased and will stop at nothing to insure that they are happy and fulfilled. A good father will use everything in his power to provide for children who honor him with obedience, respect and faithfulness.

If our earthly fathers will stop at nothing to provide for children that honor them, how much more will our heavenly father bless children that obey and praise him.

Malachi told the people that if they obey God, pay their tithes and respect the Lord that he would open up the windows of heaven and shower down so many blessings upon them that they would not be able to contain them.

What happens when we honor God by obeying him?

What happens when we honor God by doing his will and praising him?

Jesus seemed to answer that question when told his disciples that if they abide in him and his spirit abides in them that they could ask what they will and the father would provide!

When we praise the father he is honor!

When we obey and praise the Lord he responds by making good things happen in our lives!

When God is pleased, he:

Takes our burdens and makes them light!

Takes our questions and gives us answers!

Takes our mountains and turns them into molehills

Takes our broken spirits and makes them whole again!

Takes our failed efforts and turns them into success!

Takes our low expectations and raises them beyond imagination!

When God is pleased he opens doors of opportunity that have been closed in our faces!

I don't know about you but I'm not ashamed to let the world know about "Our father!"

Our father, turns keeps food our table!

Our father, makes our enemies our footstool!

Our father, makes a way out of no way!

Our father, is a bridge over troubling water!

Our father, is rock in weary land!

Our father is a loving father! He loved us so much that he sent his only begotten son that we could have a chance to ever lasting life!

Thank God for the father!

Thank God for the Holy Ghost!

Thank God for the Son, who carried an old rugged cross up Golgotha's hill and died for our sins!

But early Sunday morning he arose from the dead!

He's alive!

He's still providing!

Every day of my life I'll call on him!

Father I stretch my hand to thee, whether shall I go! If thou withdraw thyself from me, whither shall I go!

No More Remixes!

SCRIPTURE: "The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun.Is there any thing whereof it may be said, See, this is new? it hath been already of old time, which was before us. " Ecclesiastes 1:9; "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." 2 Corinthians 5:17

Introduction

Have you ever heard a new song by your favorite artist, only to be told that it's not really new but a remake of someone else's song? Many youth have had discussions with their parents about an exciting new song on the market only to hear their parents say, "That's not new, that came out in 1965..." Although the song is new to the children, to their parents it's simply warmed over soup. The trend toward remakes is not confined to just the record industry, it is widespread. In nearly every area of endeavor there is very little that is entirely new. In many cases that which is promoted as new is just a remake of something that was popular in another time.

There are remakes of popular movies, television shows, and hair styles. Even clothing styles are targets for remakes. The new Ford Mustang is a remake of the popular car of the 60's. There is even a remake of the Volkswagen. The idea behind a remake is to keep the essence of the original then add a touch of creativity to give it a new look and feel. So, today's Yo-Yo is nothing new except that today's Yo-Yo lights up or plays music instead of just going up and down. The Hoola Hoop is not new, it's the same old Hoola Hoop except that the new ones make sounds and glow in the dark. Barbie Dolls are not new, except that she wears new clothes and accessories. When Denzell Washington and Whitney Houston starred in the movie, "The Preacher's Wife" many thought it was a new story, but actually it was a remake of a 1950's era movie with an almost identical story line. Even the legendary biblical epic, "The 10 Commandments" starring Charleston Heston wasn't new. It was a remake of a 1923 movie by the same name. Many are old enough to remember the originals and can spot a remake instantly. There is a constant comparison between that which claims to be new and the model upon which it is based.

The same is the case with today's popular music, whether it is secular or Gospel. Many of popular songs on the market today are actually remakes. The popular term in the music world is "remix." A remix is a song that is built upon the melody, rhythm or lyrics of another song that was popular in another time. Rapper M.C. Hammer publicly acknowledged that he based most of his popular songs on the base lines of music created by James Brown. Even Gospel entertainer John P. Kee uses the hard funk of James Brown in his gospel recordings. Those who hear the current recordings are constantly reminded of the song upon which it is based and respond, "That's not new. I've heard that before."

What about those who are church members? Are we "new releases" or remixes? Have we simply added a new layer to our same old attitudes, behavior and morality and called it church membership? If so then what we have is a remix. We go to a different place on Sunday and do a few things differently, but at the core of our lives, the daily rhythm of things remains the same. On the other hand, if we are we new releases, there is a completely new rhythm, totally different from any we have heard in our lives. There are no traces of the old and everything becomes new.

As Christians, we praise God for giving us a new lease on life. We thank him for a new talk, a new walk and new sense of self. We are not remixes but the love God has made our lives a new release that's a hit in heaven!

Exposition

This text focuses on Solomon as he reflects on the inability of man to do anything that is completely new.

In the course of his life Solomon tried to find happiness, only to meet with one conclusion after every effort..all is vanity. As king, he spent the majority of his life looking for happiness through building construction, accumulation of riches, music, extensive study, music, and cultural pursuits.

In all of his searching Solomon concluded that his efforts were not new. He built a beautiful, expensive historic temple to worship the Lord, but his effort was not new. The Egyptians, hundreds of years before his time built pyramids and elaborate temples to their gods. The idea of great temple wasn't new.

He studied astronomy and the movement of the stars, but even that too was done long before he set out to study them. Star gazers and astrologers were charting the course of the celestial bodies for centuries before Solomon. The fact that he could do it, was nothing new.

He sought after beautiful women. married hundreds of them and kept hundreds more as concubines. But the pursuit of women was not new either.

No matter what the area, Solomon learned that anything he attempted, any direction he attempted to go and any goal he tried to achieve had, to one degree or another, been performed before.

Not only did Solomon notice that there was nothing new under the sun but he also noticed that there was a repetitive nature to all occurrences. In essence, he noticed that whatever we experience today has been experienced at another time by someone else. Whatever is done in one time has been done in another time by someone else. That's what he meant in verse 9 when he said, "The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun."

That's the way it is with man's efforts, imaginatively repetitive, resourceful but not creative, ingenious but not original.

Any truly new thing comes from God. He is the only power that can create something new without building upon anything else. In Isaiah 43:19 the Lord declared, "I will do a new thing..I will make a way in the wilderness." In Jeremiah 31:22 there is another prophecy along the same line as God promises to do a new thing in the earth, as he projected the birth of Christ.

When Paul wrote to the Corinthians about the nature of the Christian experience he spoke to them about something that was foreign to them. The idea of being a new person with respect to attitude, direction, motivation, and morality was completely foreign to those of his time. They were familiar with persons who had adopted the gods of their neighbors by simply adding new gods to a long list of others. They were also familiar with persons who had adopted new ways and mannerisms. However, Paul said people who accept Christ, in every way except physical, become new people. All of their former dispositions are passed away.

Something totally new comes only from God. Man's best efforts can only produce a remix of the same person acting, for a while, in a different way.

Remixes

There are many people in the world today who Christianity, have been baptized and are members of churches, but the are new creatures. They can best be described as remixes because they have added a few things to their lives, change a few others around, but basically they are the same. A remix keeps all of the recognizable features of a song and imbeds them into a different arrangement.

TUNE: There are many who are claiming to be Christians, but they are still singing the same tune they sang before they came to Christ. Though the Christian faith teaches us to, "Don't worry, be happy" there are many whose mouths say, "My God shall supply all your need" but their actions sing, "Every day I got the blues." Even though we sing in the choir, hold a church membership and attend worship service every Sunday, our lives simply remixes if we still carry the same doubts, fears and apprehensions we had before we came to God. In truth, a true believer sings a brand new tune! He boldly approaches each day, confident that "greater is he that is in me than he that is in the world!"

RHYTHM: There are others who claim Christianity but the rhythm of their lives still remains the same. Our life's rhythm represents the places we go, the activities in which we participate, and the people with whom we associate. There are many who hold church membership while the rhythm of their lives is still same. They work in church ministries, attend revivals and volunteer in church missionary work. However, the rhythm of their lives remains the same. They still go places that are questionable. They still participate in activities are suspect. Many of the people they associate with are less than admirable. Even though they have added a layer of church membership to their lives, the recognizable rhythm that identifies them is the same.

LYRICS: The lyrics of our lives represent the things we say and the ideals that we espouse. There are many who claim the new life of Christianity but their manner of speech does not reflect their new life. Many still curse, use vulgarities and sprinkle the conversations with expletives and four letter words. Moreover, there are others who life ideals are extremely worldly. Their beliefs do not reflect the positives of life but its negatives. Paul, writing in Philippians 1:27 said, "Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." If the things we talk about do not become the Gospel of Christ then our church membership is simply a remix. We've added a few new things to our daily routine but the lyrics are the same.

A New Release

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that a man or woman that simply joins a church makes a decision to remix himself. However, a person who decides to accept Christ into his life asks God to do a new thing in his life and make him a completely new release.

A new release is not a remix of the same old song, but we become entirely new creatures in Christ.

A remix leaves traces of the old intertwined with the new!

A remix keeps the essence of what was and continues in a new way!

A remix maintains the sum total of what we were and presents it in a picture of what we are!

Everything that looks new may not be new at all!

When Lauryn Hill sang "Killing me softly" it was only a remix of the original song by Roberta Flack

Natalie Cole is famous for her song "Unforgettable" but it was a remix of her father, Nat King's Song by the same name.

When Mariah Carey sang "I'll be there" it wasn't new, but only a remix of a hit song by Micheal Jackson and the Jackson Five.

When Whitney Houston hit number one on charts with her son "I will always love you!" It wasn't her song, but a remix of country and Western Song written by Dolly Parton

When M.C. Hammer released "Super Freak" to sensational crowds, it was only a remix of an Old Rick James song.

When B.B. and CeCe Winan sang "I'll Take You there" it was only a remix of Mavis Staples and the Staple Singers.

When Jayzee rocked the nation with a little tune that chanted "It's hard knock life" it was actually a remix of the theme song from the musical "Annie."

Everything that looks new is not always new!

But I have found out that when God touches a man's life he becomes a brand new creature!

When the Lord touches your life, he takes your:

Failure and turns it into success

Doubts and turns them into assurances

Defeats and turns them into victories

Sins and washes them away!

When God looked at the sins of the world flooded it and then allowed Noah's family to repopulate it. But what he received was the same old world, with new faces.

But 2000 years ago God looked at the world and decided "no more remixes!" He decided to do a new thing!

This new thing would happen in a little town called Bethlehem!

This new thing would grow up in a little town called Nazereth!

This new thing would carry an old rugged cross!

This new thing would be named Jesus, the Son of the living God!

He would die out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he would rise from the dead!

God's got a blessing in store for the believers that won't be a remix!

I heard John declare "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea"

No more remixes, I've got a brand new walk!

No more remixes, I've got a brand new talk!

No more remixes, I've got a brand new song to sing!

"I've been washed in the blood of the crucified lamb. I've been redeemed!"

God Uses Four Letter Words

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 11, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16

Introduction

Have you ever heard people use four letter words? (Of course you have never used them yourself). Often those who used the four letter words were trying to make a point, under score a truth or simply insult someone else. Four letter words are what generally call "expletives." An expletive is then an outburst that is obscene, vulgar or in extremely poor taste. Four letter words generally express an emotion of anger or frustration.

The term "four letter word" has become a generic way to describe every possible way that a person could refer to an entity in a negative or obscene way. Many recordings that are played on popular radio broadcasts are sprinkled with "bleeps" which take the place of actual words. A popular television broadcast, "The Jerry Springer Show"is so riddled with expletive deletions that many cannot understand a word that is being said on the show. A typical Springer script might say, "Look , you better watch your *mouth before I come over there and whip your *. I don't have to take this *.. Four letter words are everywhere.

Sometimes four letter words are used to to show how frustrated we are. Consider the student who studied every possible answer to a test about birds. Confident that he had covered every possible scenario about birds, the student approached his classes proudly. He was ready and he knew it without a doubt .He entered the auditorium and took a seat in the front row. On the table in the front was a row of ten stuffed birds. Each bird had a sack covering its body, and only the legs were showing. When class started, the professor announced that the students were to identify each bird by looking at its legs and give its common name, species, habitat, mating habits, etc.

He looked at each of the birds' legs. They all looked the same to him. He started to get angry. He had stayed up all night studying for this test and now he had to identify birds by their LEGS? The more he thought about the situation, the angrier he got. Finally he reached his boiling point. He stood up, marched up to the professor's desk, crumpled up his exam paper and threw it on the desk. "What a ridiculous test!" he told the prof. "How could anyone tell the difference between these birds by looking at their legs? This exam is the biggest rip-off I've ever seen!" He began to spout out four letters words as he spake. Then he turned and stormed toward the exit. The professor was a bit shocked, and it took him a moment to regain his composure. Then, just as Joe was about to walk out the door, the prof shouted out, "Wait a minute, young man, what's your name?" He turned around, pulled up his pant legs and hollered, "You ought to be able to look at my legs and figure that out. Otherwise get the (bleep) out of my face and leave me alone!"

Did you know God has some choice four letter words that he uses? The four letter words that God uses have nothing to do with expletives. In fact, God's four letter words are often spoken in frustration over our failure to be obedient However, instead of stooping to obscene guttural responses, God uses a different set of four letter words that show us how he really feels about us at any given time in our life's experiences. God takes words that negatively describe us and turn them to our good.

When there is despair, God gives us the four letter word called HOPE. When there is Fear God uses a four letter word and tells us to be BOLD.

When the world tells us to us to look at our loss, God uses a four letter word and show us our GAIN. Sometimes it takes a four letter word to describe our God because, "God is GOOD" all the time. Good- that's a four letter word every believer should use to describe God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains that God's response to the world's sin was send love.

There is debate among the scholars as to whether those words were uttered by Jesus or by John the Apostle. It appears however that in, John 3:16, the "for," ties the verse into the verses before it, and these were undoubtedly uttered by Jesus. So our Lord's discourse in response to the questions posed to him by Nicodemus the Pharisee runs clear through Verse 21 of this third chapter of John. Then, beginning with Verse 22, the chapter concludes with a confirming word by John the Baptist, whom John the Apostle again quotes. Verse 36 says: "He who believes in the Son has eternal life; he who does not obey the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God rests upon him." (John 3:36)

Jesus is the Word of God personified. He is God's response to his frustration and disappointment over the way mankind has responded to his directives and laws. If some sometime respond to frustration with four letter words, then Jesus is the way God responded to the world in his disappointment.

God's response is a guideline as to how believers ought to respond to people who do not know God, who frustrate us, to those who are living careless, indifferent, often sinfully wretched lives. We ought not to come shaking our finger at them, pointing out how terrible they are and what evil things they are doing to themselves. We ought to come sensing the agony, the hurt, the inward shame, the loneliness, misery and anguish they are going through. That is the way God feels and that is the way we should feel too.

The verse has four words that indicated God's response, "Loved, gave, have, life." These four words summarize the way God has responded and continues to respond to his wayward children. He loves us. He provides for us and he wants us to have life!

Paul puts this very beautifully in his second letter to the Corinthians: "God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself, not counting their trespasses against them," {2 Cor 5:19 RSV}. That is why, in every vignette we have of Jesus in the gospels where he is dealing with acknowledged, open, blatant sinners, we never hear a word of condemnation. Witness the woman taken in adultery, or the woman at the well of Samaria. She had five husbands and was now living with a man outside of marriage. Jesus was courteous to her. He did not attack her, blame her, or judge her. There is no condemnation.

Four Letter Words

Today there are many who respond to the failures of others or themselves with a plethora of four letter words. However, this text seems to highlight a few words that should be important to every believer.

LOVE: The central part of the text is God's love. God's love is AGAPE. It is unconditional love that goes beyond mere mutual respect and courtesy. When the world snubbed its nose at God and disobeyed his commandments and precepts, God's response was to us a four letter word....Love! The world cursed God and he made the sun to rise everyday anyway! The world ignored him, but he put foot on their tables every day! The world rejected God but he continued to shower blessings upon them daily! There is no doubt God was angry with the world. Once he became so angry that he flooded the earth with water. But his overall response to the world has been a four letter word called... "love." Every believer must learn to do the same. We must assume the AGAPE love attitude of our Lord. It is easy to use this four letter word with those that love us, but it also applies to those who do not love us. Jesus showed us the way which has been immortalized in the words of the song, "Oh How I love Jesus, because he first loved me!"

GAVE: A central truth of life is that God provides for those who trust in him even though there are times when he is not pleased with our behavior. Just as there are times when children disappoint their parents but the parents continue to give to them, God's response to his children is the same. He continues to provide. The parable of the Prodigal Son makes this very clear. A father had a son who insulted him, but he gave him his inheritance anyway! He gave him the opportunity to lead his own life! When the Son failed, the father also gave him a chance to return home. Today, God continues to do the exact same thing. He gives! He provides! Every time we turn around God is making away! Despite our wayward actions, God continues to give! Despite our mean spirit, God keeps making a way!

HAVE: One of the main truths of our faith is that God responds to us with the four letter word "Have." It is a truth that God wants us to have. What is often confusing to some is determining exactly what God wants us to have. In John 10:10 Jesus says, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." The context of "Have" from God's perspective is that God wants all of his people to possess the essentials to joyful and fruitful living. Unfortunately, some have interpreted have to mean God wants you to have "things." Therefore anything they see they feel that God wants them to have it. Just as a wise parent cares for a child by seeing that they have what is necessary for their growth and well being, God insures believers that they will have the essentials to joy and fruitful living. We cannot have everything we see just because it is there. What God does is to make our lives rich and fulfilled, regardless to our physical state. We count on God to provide us with all of our needs knowing that he will also supply many of our wants. Psalm 23 puts it simply, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want!"

LIFE: Among the greatest gifts that mankind has received from God is a four letter word called, "life." His response to death that this world offers is "life." Romans 6:23 says, "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.." Life is a four letter word that comes directly out of the mouth of God. It involves more than just living and breathing literally, but it also involves the entire process of energizing humanity. Our God can give new life to withered dreams, failed quests, crumbling marriages and broken relationships. His response to death of aspiration is to remind that we should not write our epitaph when there is a failure. Instead of saying, "I could just die" we should say, "I believe I can fly!" God gives life to those who dispirited, its one of his favorite four letter words.

God's Four Letter Words

There are many today who are overwhelmed by four letter words, but for every four letter word that the word has, God has an answer.

The world curses us and tell us we are DEAD, but God has his own four letter word called, "Live." I hear him asking Ezekiel, "Son of Man, can these bones live?" They can live but only by the word of God.

The world hits us with the four letter word PAIN, but God has his own four letter word called, "Gain." That's why James 1:2 says, "My brethern, count it all joy!"

The world hits us with the four letter word "LOST" but God has his own, called "Save." That's why Romans 10:9 says, "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."

The world hits us with FEAR, but God answers with "BOLD." We are bold because the word teaches us that, "Lord is my light and my salvation whom shall I fear. The Lord is the strength of my life of whom shall I be afraid!"

The world hits us with SICK, but God answers with "HEAL." That's why 2 Chronicles 7:14 says, "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

The world hits us with DEAF, but God answers with "HEAR" God hears and answers prayer. That's why the song writer wrote, Jesus is on the mainline, tell him what you want!"

The world says ball up your FIST, but God answers with KNEE. Prayer Changes things! Not by might, but by my word saith the Lord!

About 2000 years God decided to send the world a four letter word that had been around for a long time. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God."

This four letter word which was spoken out of the mouth of God became flesh and dwelled among men!

This is the Word that was born in Bethlehem, and raised in Nazareth!

This is the Word that picked up an old rugged cross and carried it to Calvary!

When he dropped his head, Satan claimed victory and used a four letter word and exclaimed he DIED!

The command was given to BURY him in a borrowed TOMB. Another four letter word was placed on the tomb ...SEAL!

But early Sunday Morning I see an "R" meeting up with a "I" and a "S" and an "E."

At the tomb there was a meeting of the four letter words Rise, Life, Live

Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Today he has one final four letter word! Come! Come! While you have time!

Come to Jesus and everything will be alright!

Laughing When You Feel Like Crying

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 25, 1999

SCRIPTURE:A cheerful heart is a good medicine; But a broken spirit drieth up the bones." Proverbs 17:22; "

Introduction

Have you ever laughed to keep from crying? There are often times when we find ourselves laughing aloud to keep from crying. Those are the times when every thing that can possibly happen, happens- in succession! When those times come we have two choices, we can either laugh or cry. Have you had them? The radiator on your car runs hot, the fan belt breaks, a head gasket is blown and to top if off, there is flat tire! That's a situation where you laugh to keep from crying. There was also the time when the power was shut off, the freezer defrosted, and the food was spoiled. To top it all off the hot water tank busted, your house flooded and your homeowner's insurance expired the day before. You may as well laugh! Nothing else can happen. There are some situations in which it is easier to laugh than it is to cry!

We enjoy comedians. They show us the bright side of crying situations. The great comedians of our times including: Will Rogers, Bob Hope, George Burns, Bill Cosby, Flip Wilson, Johnny Carson, Moms Mabley, Sinbad and others all share one common trait, the ability to make us laugh at our ourselves and see the light side troubling situations. When comedian Richard Pryor became wheelchair stricken, he kept thousands laughing about the difficulties and advantages of life in a wheelchair. Moms Mabley and George Burns were famous for their jokes about the problems of old age. Bill Cosby and Sinbad helps us to see the light side of family life. When the President or some government official gets in trouble comedians like Johnny Carson, Jay Leno and Chris Rock are quick to point out the humor of their mistakes and give us a reason to laugh rather than cry. There are others who need a little help seeing the bright side, so their favorite comedians are the likes of Ruddy Ray Moore, Chris Rock and the Def Comedy Jam crowd. Even though their routines are studded with vulgarities and four letter words, the objective is the same, to get us see the light side of a dark situation.

A recent Robin Williams movie entitled, "Patch Adams" is a true story about a medical student who wanted to be a clown and a doctor. He believed that laughter was therapeutic and contagious and defied the medical profession by mixing medicine and humor. He was both a clown and a physician. When he graduated from the Medical College of Virginia he founded the Gesundheit Institute. He used wacky surprises to make his patients laugh and promoted their healing. He believed that doctors should treat people not just diseases. It was nothing to see Adams enter a hospital room filled with gloomy family members dressed like a gorilla, or fill a room with balloons just to get one smile from his patient. He kept his patients smiling and began a flow of positive feelings that sped up their healing.

Patch Adams taught the world of medicine that the Word of God recorded thousands of years before he wore his first gorilla suit: "A cheerful heart is a good medicine, but a downcast spirit dries up the bones."

Who is it that doesn't enjoy a good laugh? There are so many different things that make us laugh. What sends some people into hysterics leaves others scratching their heads. There are as many different types of humor as there are different types of people. Many people find humor in seeing people get buckets of paint spilled over their heads and pies squashed in their face, and then getting whacked by boards and falling over. The Three Stooges and other slapstick teams have always found a big audience. Others find it hilarious to see public figures and institutions satirized—the more irreverent, the better. Others find humor in puns and word play. And then there are situations where something strikes us as absurd.

Sometimes we have to laugh at ourselves. Everybody told the preacher that his sermons were great. Nobody had the heart to tell him that he really put everyone to sleep. One day he was searching his closet and found a small box containing three eggs and one hundred $1 bills. He called his wife into the closet to ask her about the box and its contents. Embarrassed, she admitted having hidden the box there for their entire 25 years of marriage. The pastor asked her, "WHY?" The wife replied that she hadn't wanted to hurt his feelings. He asked her how the box could have hurt his feelings. She said that every time during their marriage that he had delivered a poor sermon, she had placed an egg in the box. The pastor felt that three poor sermons in 25 years was certainly nothing to feel bad about, so he asked her to explain the $100. She replied, "Each time I got a dozen eggs, I sold them to the neighbors for $1." He couldn't do anything but laugh at himself!

Sometimes we say some dumb things that are just unbelievable. That was the case with the little boy in the Sunday School class who claimed to know God's name. The teacher offered a sweet prize of frosted donuts to anyone in the class that could tell God's name. The little boy, anxious to win the prize waved his hands in the and jumped up and down yelling, "I know, I know!" "What is God's name?" was the question. The little boy shouted, "Andy." When the teacher said the answer was wrong the boy insisted that "Andy" IS God's name. The boy said the church was his witness because everyone sang his name in the morning hymn, "Andy walks with me, Andy talks with me, Andy tells me I am his own.'" What children say sometimes makes us laugh!

Deeply rooted in a believer's laughter is faith and assurance. When a believer laughs at a situation or at himself, it is a sign that he or she has just remembered who they are, children of the most high God. No matter how difficult their situation gets, a believer knows that because God is still in control, one day they'll look back and get a good laugh about the thing that's worrying them so much today!

Exposition

This text focuses upon the advantages of a cheerful heart on the human spirit.

Solomon wrote most of the Book of Proverbs with the intent of passing on to the next generation what he had learned about life. The Proverbs are a collection of truths, most as short as one sentence,some as long as an entire chapter, from his life's experience.

This proverb highlights two truths: those who possess a cheerful heart lighten the impact of their burdens, troubles, difficulties, sicknesses or other maladies. Cheerfulness is a result of being able to see the bright side and the light side of a situation. The bright side sees that there is hope. The light side sees the humor of the circumstance

Solomon noted that the person who is unable to demonstrate a cheerful spirit is usually pessimistic, bitter, sad and defeated. Such a spirit of pessimism "drieth" up the bones. The Hebrew word "gerem" (gheh-rem) translated "bones" in this context means: "strong ..self." The person who cannot see the bright side dries up the essence of his strength and sense of self worth.

An ability to see the bright side and light side of any situation is "good medicine."

Job obviously saw the bright side of his deprived situation when, despite his condition, he said, "Yea thou he slay me, yet will I serve him." He espoused a great hope when he considered his losses and said, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

Paul showed us how to look at the bright side of difficulty by saying in Romans 8:28 "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." In essence, God's going to work out difficult situations to a believer's advantage.

Jesus saw the humor of his situation often. One day he considered how he left the mansions of glory and came to earth to walk around among mankind without any resources. While he was helping many put their lives together, he had to try to scurry daily to find lodging. One day in obvious frustration, Jesus laughed at the situation and said, "Foxes have holes and birds have nests, but the Son of man hath no place to lay his head."

Solomon learned this truth early and reminded believers that a positive outlook and a sense of humor is ..."good medicine."

Occasions for laughter

When is it good to have a good laugh? Whenever we are able to see the light side of a situation. Believers are often cheerful in difficult situations because they are assured that God is in control of things, thus everything will work out for the best. So, why not laugh about it?

Sometimes we laugh when we doubt. There are times when we consider the prospects of many avenues of life but we are overwhelmed with pessimism. At that point we begin to lose confidence that we can do anything; achieve anything or rise to any reasonable height. Some thoughts we push out of our minds with a chuckle by saying, "yea right!" When we doubt we laugh. Often we doubt God's abilities to make our dreams come true and laugh at the thought of being a successful professional. When we tell our dreams to others, they laugh in doubt that you could ever achieve such a lofty goal.

Friends laugh with us, enemies laugh at us! Our friends are those who share our faith, common interest and hope. They are generally those who are able to laugh with us in our troubling moments. They shared our fear, danger or peril. They know what we feel and they empathize and sympathize with us. When friends laugh together, they laugh in joy and assurance because their laughter reminds each other that it is not as bad as it seems. They remind each other that there is a bright side and light side to life. Our enemies on the other hand laugh at us. Their laughter is focused on our miserable condition rather than on our eventual restoration. Thus, not everyone who laughs in our troubles is laughing with us, some are actually laughing at us!

Our sinfulness gives God a good laugh! Did you know that God gets a good laugh whenever we try to deceive him. He laughs hard, then prepares to administer punishment. Psalm 37 describes how the wicked operate in the dark and appear to flourish. However, their actions only give the Lord a good life." The LORD shall laugh at him: for he seeth that his day is coming." Psalm 37:13.

God gets a good laugh every time we try to pull one over on him!

When pull the curtains at our favorite hide-a-way motel...God rolls over laughing at our stupidity because he knows whatever is done in the dark is coming to the light!

When we steal from our boss on the job and think we have gotten away, God gets a good laugh because he knows its coming up again!

When we dig ditches for others and stab them in the back, God gets a good laugh because he knows that God is not mocked, "Whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap!"

It's a humourous thought, bordering on pathetic for the creature to believe that any of his actions can escape the all seeing eye of the creator.

When we do wrong we laugh that we got away for the moment, but God gets the last laugh!

"He who laughs last, laughs the loudest!"

God laughs at impossibilities

Finally, we must consider that God not only laughs when the wicked think they are getting away, but God also laughs at the very thought that there is a problem that is impossible for him to solve.

Sarah listened outside of the tent of Abraham and heard the angels pronounce that at the age of 89 she was going to conceive and bear a child. That was too funny a thought for her to consider, so Sarah laughed, only to be rebuked when the angel asked, "Is there anything too hard for God?"

God has demonstrated repeatedly that there is nothing impossible for him to do.

God laughs at things we think are impossible!

God laughs at the fact that Pharaoh thought his 600 chariots and the Red Sea could keep Israel in bondage. God must have been laughing all the while he opened up the Red Sea and forged a path for the people on dry land.

God laughed at the fact the River Jordan stood between his people and the promised land. He must have been laughing when he rolled up the waters of the Jordan and ushered the people across to camp ground.

God laughed at the fact that something as feeble as the walls of Jericho were thought strong enough to protect the enemies of God from his wrath. He must have laughed at the looks on the faces of the people of Jericho when the walls came tumbling down!

God laughed at the fact that the people doubted that the dry bones of Israel could ever come together again! But I hear the Word of God declare, Son of Man, can these bones live?

God laughs at the fact that people think you are in an impossible situation!

Is there a Red Sea in front of you and a marching army behind you? Are you in an impossible situation, God still opens up ways out of no way. He's still making paths through the Red Sea!

Are there walls that stand between you and your dream. Nothing is impossible for God, put it in God's hands and watch the walls come tumbling down!

Have you given up open of ever rising again! Put it in God's hand and the dry bones of your life can come back together again!

Even if people are laughing, remember God can do the impossible!

Don't worry about what others say, God and his people will get the last laugh!

They laughed at Jesus when the whipped him all night long!

They laughed at Him as he hung out on the cross saying, "He saved others, but he can't save himself!"

They laughed at Him, when he died out on Calvary!

They laughed at Him, when they buried him in a borrowed tomb!

They laughed at Him, when they rolled the stone in front of His grave!

But Early Sunday morning, God got the last laugh! He arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Reaping What You Sow

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 8, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" Galatians 6:7

Introduction

Have you ever wondered whether your hard work is in vain? There are times when each person considers whether or not all of their efforts to do the right thing are worthwhile. Many have lived right all of their lives, but have seen very little of the reward they expected to receive for their work. Some have spent decades teaching their children Christian values and wonder whether or not their efforts have been in vain. Many have had opportunities to bend the rules and excel in their profession but chose to do right. Now they see others excelling and the wonder if they made the right choice.

These thoughts pass through the mind of believers when we see the unrighteous prosper and the godly have what appears to be long and difficult "rows to hoe."

We are reminded in the word of God not to fret or be overly concerned about the apparent success of non-believers, but to focus on our faith and believe in God.

As Christians, we are content to know that God knows our hearts and our needs. It is God that we aim to please. He will, in the final analysis, reward those who are faithful to him.

Exposition

This text focuses on the importance of every Christian understanding that whatever they do in the present will come back to them in a more intensive way, in the future.

Paul, in Corinth, wrote this letter to the churches of Galatia. In the thirteenth and fourteenth chapters of the book of Acts it is noted that these were churches begun by Paul when he was on his very first missionary journey, traveling with Barnabas into the cities of Antioch, Iconium, Derbe, and Lystra.

Paul wrote to these churches about the importance of spiritual growth as opposed to growth in carnal things. He encouraged believers to invest in those things which are spiritual, expecting an eventual reward.

Paul tries to explain this truth of by comparing the Christian experience to sowing and reaping. The eventual truth is that regardless to what one says he is sowing, there will come a time when what he has actually sown will come up. If he has sown good seed, he can expect to reap well. If he sows bad seed, then he should expect to reap a bad harvest.

Paul notes that there are two kinds of harvest, one of the flesh and the other of the spirit. Those who live a carnal, sensual life, must expect no other fruit from such a course than misery and ruin. But those who, under the guidance and influences of the Holy Spirit, live a life of faith in Christ, and abound in Christian graces, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.

Believers are encouraged not to tire in doing good because God observes and will reward the good that is being done. Those who persevere are promised a joyous response. Believers are encouraged to take care to do good in our life-time, and make this the business of our lives.

Seven laws of sowing and reaping

This short little verse is pregnant with biblical truth. Just as it spoke to the Galatians, it speaks to this generation. There are at least seven truths that this text reveals for today's believers.

WE ARE ABLE TO REAP BECAUSE SEEDS HAVE BEEN SOWN: Whatever reward a man receives is a direct result of what has planted. Believers can only expect to receive exactly what they have sown. We reap blessings in many instances because of seeds that have been sown by others before us. It is their good seed that make our lives more comfortable today. This is the meaning of John 4:38, " I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labour: other men laboured, and ye are entered into their labours." We enjoy the opportunity for salvation because of a seed that was sown by the life, death and resurrection of Christ.

WE REAP THE SAME TYPE OF SEED SOWN:. We cannot expect to plant one seed and produce a crop of a different kind. We get back the same kind of seed we plant. Those of us who plant seeds of love expect to receive love. Seeds of forgiveness usually produce a compassionate response. Seeds of Godliness usually produce a great spiritual reward. Conversely, those who plant who plant wordly seeds usually get carnal results.

We don't plant watermelon seeds and expect to get collard greens, we can expect to reap only what has been sown. We don't expect godly well mannered children, if all we give them is an ungodly home life. We don't expect to become honor roll students, if we never study. We reap only what has been sown.

WE REAP MORE THAN WE SOW: Not only will believers reap ONLY what is sown, they will reap more than what was actually sown. Those who plant a row of purple hull peas, know they will reap more than the row they planted. They expected bushels of peas. If we only receive back the same seed we planted, no one would be a farmer. This is the law of the harvest. The harvest is always greater than the seed planted.

Those who do good works, can expect to receive more in return. Conversely those who sow bad seed can expect to receive more than what they have sown. Good works produce an abundant harvest of good works. Bad seeds sown will produce an abundant harvest of bad fruit.

WHAT WE SOW IS REAPED IN A DIFFERENT SEASON: No seed that is planted comes to harvest instantly. It is planted one day, then reaped in another. This truth sheds light on two truths for believers: Serving the Lord will pay off after a while and, "What's done in the dark will eventually come to the light." No seed is reaped at the same time that is planted. There is a period of germination. Sometimes it appears that the seed will not come up, but sure enough, given adequate time, it does come up. The teacher who takes the time to instill study skills in a talented youth won't see fruit of her work until many years later when that hard headed student becomes a college professor. She planted in one season but the reward was reaped many years later when received a card of thanks from that same student.

Likewise, our bad seed comes up in a different season. No man can turn up his nose to God and get away with it. Life's bad choices, sooner or later, will catch up with us. Thus, there are many today who are afraid to be still because their past may catch up with them. What is planted today may not come up until tomorrow, but it is coming up again.

WE REAP IN PROPORTION TO WHAT WE SOW: While every believer expects to reap more than what is sown, another truth is that we reap in proportion to what we actually sow. We reap more than we sow because God multiplies whatever seed we sow. This truth underscores the truth that the more we sow, the more God has to multiply for us. Believers who serve God in faith sow seeds. The more faith actions they take, the more God multiplies. Whether the faith action is in time, talent or finances, the seed that is planted will be multiplied by God. What is reaped will be in direct proportion to that which was planted. We must sow all the good we can then leave the multiplying process to God.

TO REAP, YOU MUST WORK YOUR CROP: Those who want to reap a good harvest must constantly work to achieve it. While Christians do not work to be saved, because Salvation is free, we do work to increase our reward. To reap any harvest we must work the crop. Weeds will grow without any work at all. Gardeners testify that a good gardener works constantly to keep the weeds out. Weeds will grow naturally, and in a short period of time will take over a garden without anyone doing anything. Believers who neglect bible study, worship, fellowship, allow a situation to exist in which weeds can grow in the garden. For a while the beauty of the flowers is still seen but soon, the weeds will grow taller than the blooming flowers and take over. To reap, we must work the crop.

WE CAN'T CHANGE LAST YEAR'S HARVEST, BUT WE CAN WORK ON THE NEXT: There is nothing we can do today that will change our past. Whether our lives have been failures or successes, productive or barren, cannot be changed.

While we can't change last year's harvest, we can do something about the next.

There are two truths to note here:

Those who have not planted as they should cannot afford to brood over the fact that they have had a few bad seasons. They must forget those things which are behind and press on toward the future. Too many worry about the fact that somewhere in the past they have had a bad season or two. Turn it over to God, mindful that while God forgives us for our shortcomings, we the truth of the word remains. We will still reap what we have sown, but once we turn it over to God, we'll have a little help at harvest time. The prisoner who finds God, still pays for his crime, but the punishment is easier to bear because he found the Lord. The unmarried couple that produced a child out of wedlock, must still reap what they have sown, but it is made easier knowing that God has forgiven. Bad harvests can't be changed, but the next harvest can be changed.

Changing the Harvest

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that if we have had a several bad season we must consider ways to get a good crop.

Farmers who repeatedly produce bad crops make immediate adjustments to improve their harvest.

INSPECT THE SEED: One of the first steps a good farmer takes is to inspect the seed to insure that he is planting good seed. There are many today who are getting bad crops because they are planting bad seeds.

You know you are planting bad seeds if the only:

Books movies you watch have ungodly themes!

Activities you attend are those that do not promote spiritual growth!

Places you go are those where the righteous never frequent!

Music that moves you is lusty and worldly!

People that inspire you are those who have riches, power and fame!

Books you read are those other than the word of God.!

If you want a good harvest you must change your seed!

CHANGE THE FIELD: Sometimes farmers have good seed but it cannot grow because the soil in which is planted is void of nutrition. There is not enough there to help the seed to grow. So farmers who planted soybeans in a field one year may plant sweet potatoes in the same field the next year.

How many people find that they can't get a harvest because they have planted good seed in a field that is drained of nutrients. How many churches still do things the same way they did them 50 years ago? If we do things in the same way, we get the exact same results! If you want a bountiful harvest, keep rotating crop!

Sing your songs in a different way!

Study the word in a different way!

Plan ways to fellowship, in a different way! Rotate the crop!

But after we have planted the seed and done everything we know how to God we must put it all in God's hands! We must pray to God for the increase!

Lord, I've done all I know how to do...it's in your hands!
Lord, I've done the best I could...it's in your hands!
Shower down the blessing Lord...my life is in your hand!
If we sow the seed of belief and faith, God will provide the increase!
If we sow a pure heart, we will see God!
If we sow meekness, we will inherit the earth!
If we sow a believing life, we will receive the gift of God which is eternal life!
It is gift, guaranteed by Jesus, the Son of God!
He died out on Calvary, and arose Early one Sunday morning!
If we sow in faith, he will come again to bring us the harvest!
We'll know it's harvest time when we hear him say, Servant! Servant! Well Done! Well Done!

When God Hyphenates Your Life

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 14,1999

SCRIPTURE: "We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." 2 Corinthians 5:8

Introduction

Does it ever appear to you that the best times of your life are those that don't last long? Was it a birthday party? A reunion? An evening with a close friend? Didn't the time pass quickly? It seems that the times when we have the greatest enjoyment in life come and go very quickly. On the other hand, those dull and uninteresting times, seem to linger forever, dragging, tugging and hoovering over us in a never ending vigil. Good friends, like good times, never seem to stay around long enough. We enjoy their company. They excite us. They make us laugh. They brighten our day. We can talk with them until the wee hours of the morning and still not tire. We hate to see them leave!

When a friend or family member that has been close to us is no longer around we are surrounded by questions and we desperately search for answers. Consider the little boy who had trouble with English Grammar. His problem seemed simple to the other students, but it wasn't simple to little Johnny. He could not seem to understand how punctuation marks were read in the course of a sentence. He would never raise his voice when he came to a question mark, he would say "question mark." Instead of getting excited when he saw an exclamation point he would say, "exclamation point." If a hyphen appeared in a word at the end of a line he would say the word then "hyphen." It was funny to everyone in class except his teacher, Miss Faye. He liked her because she seemed to understand him. She gave him little things to say to remember what each punctuation mark meant. When she came to the hyphen she said, "The hyphen in a word at the end of a line means that you have seen the good part but the best part is still coming so watch for it!" One day, Johnny came to class and everyone was crying. Miss Faye had been killed in an automobile accident. The class was in tears. No one could bear the thought of a life being cut off so short, until little Johnny stood before the class with tears running from his eyes and said, "Miss Faye was in an accident and her life was cut short. But God put in a hyphen and that means the good part is still coming...so watch for it!" With that the class understood.

Often God punctuates our lives for various reasons. There are question marks that show the many answers that we seek. There are explanation marks that show our moments of excitement. There are commas that show the times when we had to pause; colons that show the times that we went from one activity or another. There were even periods, marking those times when we came to complete halts.

As Christians, we thank God for his punctuation marks in our lives. They help us to understand ourselves and our relationship to him as we read our own lives in the book of time. Even when we look around for a friend or family member that is absent from the family circle, we know the meaning of a spiritually hyphenated life.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains what happens to a believer at the point of death.

On various occasions Paul made it known that he was prepared to leave this life at a moment's notice, with the full knowledge that because of Christ's promise of eternal life, he would be instantly in the presence of the Lord. He lived each day in danger of persecution and death and expected fully to be interrupted by death. He prepared himself for that day, both physically and spiritually by recognizing that in any instant he could be absent from this life. When that time came, he taught believers to know that he, like all believers, would resume life, instantly, in another place in the presence of the Lord.

In the preceding verses to this text, he noted that the body in which each person lives is subject to moaning and groaning, pains and deterioration. That moaning and groaning is not defined by age, but by physical circumstances beyond mortal control. Paul noted that believers should be consoled in knowing that their insurance against mortality is that they have another building not made with hands, waiting for them in the heavens.

While believers who are absent from the body have not gone to face a judgment, they are nevertheless before the Lord. The time of judgment will be the day that believers will participate in heaven's official awards day ceremony. It's the time that they will receive the honors for their works on earth. The believer who is absent from the body, waits for this day, in the presence of the Lord, having escaped eternal death.

Believers whose lives on this earth are interrupted are not truncated or cut short but are simply continued in a different place. There is nothing final, like period. There is no mystery that would require a question mark. It is as if the Lord himself applied a hyphen at just the right place indicating that the life that appears ended is being continued someplace else.

Where is this place? What does "absent from the body, present with the Lord" actually mean?

Believers who are absent in the body are instantly in the presence of God in heaven. This heaven is the place referred to in 2 Corinthians 12:2 as the "third heaven;" the first heaven being the atmosphere, the second being the stratosphere or the stars, and the third being the home of the heavens (Matthew 24:36). Thus, the believer who is suddenly absent from our midst is instantly present with God, Christ and the angels in the "third heaven."

Believers will be in the full sight of our Lord. In this life we see Christ "through a glass darkly." Believers see him through the reading of his word. Believers see him move in the hands and feet of the saints. In this life we see Christ only vaguely, like watching foot prints on the beach without ever seeing the person that makes the steps. But believes who are transported to be in the presence of our Lord at death, see him face to face. Not in terror and trembling. Not in fear but in rejoicing and celebrating. The believer who is absent sees Christ in his fulness, while we see him only in the glimpses of glory that flash past us on our journey.

Believers will experience perfect conformity with Christ. In this life believers, especially the young and fragile, have difficulty conforming to the will of God. Their spirit is willing, but their flesh is weak. The frustrations that believers face as they win one battle with Satan only to lose another is often evident. These are the battles that have them praising God one day and on their knees asking forgiveness for sin in another.

When the believer comes before Christ however, he will be in perfect conformity with the will of God. There will be no battles or frustrations. There will be nothing that will place wrinkle in the relationship between the believer as servant and Christ our Lord.

Believers who are absent from the body enjoy the fellowship of heaven immediately.

To be in the presence of the Lord means happiness and joy. It means singing and celebrating. It means enjoyment and happiness, which can only come from being in the presence of God. Believers will enjoy a fellowship like none they have ever known as Christ draws from the infinite deep vaults of heaven and shares the riches of love with them, that have been there from eternity.

We sing, "Oh how I love Jesus" but the believers who are absent are able to express their love to him, in an infinitely better manner than ever they could while in the body.

Thus, in the words of Jonathan Edwards, "they shall eat and drink abundantly, and swim in the ocean of love, and be eternally swallowed up in the infinitely bright, and infinitely mild and sweet beams of divine love."

Thus, believers who are absent from our midst, no matter how suddenly, are not dead or lost. The eternal life that was promised them continues in the presence of the Lord.

Make Sure We Can Be Hyphenated

Today every person should strive to order the syllables or components of their lives so they can be hyphenated! There are several thoughts to consider concerning the hyphenated life:

A HYPHENATED LIFE IS CONNECTED TO SOMETHING: Hyphens are connectors. Generally a hyphen connects the parts of a compound word. Whenever you see a hyphen between two words, it means that the two go together. A life that can be hyphenated is a life that can be connected. Every believer is connected to God and the things of God. It is a rare occasion when a believer is not associated with the things of God. If you see a choir singing, look for a believer to be in the crowd. If the crowd is praising God, look for a believer to be in the midst. If the church is celebrating the goodness of God, look for a believer to be in the midst.

Believers and worship are closely connected.

Believers and churches are closely connected.

Believers and prayer are closely connected.

Believers and faith are closely connected.

In fact believers are so connected that they feel strange on Sunday morning if they are not in a church. They are so connected that they hitch rides, catch buses and some even walk to be in the presence of the Lord.

SOMETIMES A HYPHEN IDENTIFIES A PERSON'S CULTURE AND PEOPLE: It is common today to see people with hyphenated racial descriptions such as "African-American" or "Irish-American." The hyphen connects the person with his cultural roots on one side and his country on the other. The hyphenated name of a married woman points to her family, history, heritage and upbringing on one side and that of her husband on the other. Christians have a hyphenated named called "Child-Of-God." The hyphens tell who we belong to, where we are going and how we plan to get there!

HYPHENS ALLOW PREFIXES: Even when a believer strays and is caught in a sinful moment the Holy Spirit puts a hyphen in front of the name "Christian" adds a prefix and calls that action "un" Christian without changing the meaning of the root word which means to be "Christ like." That's when we remember that not just any word can get a prefix and hyphens are only applied to prefixes that precede proper nouns. Even when a believer has erred, there is a hyphen that God places in front of his life that lets him know he is on the wrong track. The Holy Spirit busily worries that believer until they get back on right track. That's what happened to David, whose holy life was hyphenated with a prefix of "un" when he committed adultery. When David repented he told God, "Create in me a clean heart O' God and renew a right spirit within me." (Psalm 51). Because a believer is connected, the hyphens in his life keep him connected to God and the hyphens before him warn him when he about to do wrong.

SINGLE SYLLABLE LIVES CANNOT BE HYPHENATED: A single syllable life is one that is selfish and sinful. It is the life that says, "Not God's will, but my will be done." The single syllable that defines such a life is "sin." Sin means living contrary to the will of God. Such a life can't be hyphenated. There is no insertion point. No room has been made for the Holy Spirit to act or move. While "SIN" can't be hyphenated, "SALVATION" can be easily be hyphenated. The saved life has at least three places in which in can be hyphenated, in youth, adulthood or the golden years. At any of these points, should a saved life reach the end of line. The Holy Spirit inserts a hyphen.

When you see a hyphen

Finally brothers and sisters, we must remember that whenever we see what looks like a break in the flow of the Christian life, look for hyphen. It is the sign that they have been saved. When you see the hyphen, then look on the next line!

That's what Paul meant when he said in 2 Corinthians 5:1 "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens!"

Millions of saints had hyphenated lives. Enoch walked with God and ..was not! Moses talked with God and was buried by the angels! Elijah prayed with God and taken up in fiery chariot! Each walked among men until one day the reach the end of the line and God inserted a hyphen and carried them home.

So the saint declares, If you miss me from...

Working with the little children and teaching them God's songs...look for the hyphen!

Singing in choir and singing my favorite songs...look for the hyphen!

Amusing you with my jokes and funny faces, ...look for the hyphen!

Behind the hyphen there is joy instead of sadness
Behind the hyphen there is peace instead of confusion!
Behind the hyphen there is victory instead of defeat!
Behind the hyphen there is love instead of hate!
Behind the hyphen there is a land and a man!
The man is Jesus, who died on Calvary and arose early Sunday morning!

If you miss me from singing down here, come on up to bright glory, I'll be singing up there!

On Friday, August 6, 1999, Uganda Rhodesia Kyles lay in a hospital bed in Shreveport, La. From her hospital bed she lifted her voice and sang, "To God be the glory" and "I'm on my way!" Then God inserted a hyphen- her life continues on glory's next line!

Dealing With Look Bad/Feel Bad Situations

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 15, 1999

SCRIPTURE: And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt.." Mark 14:36

Introduction

Have you ever faced a situation that was really bad? What is a really bad situation? Life threatening situations are really bad because they bring our very existence into question. Financial disaster, the dissolution of a relationship, imprisonment or failing health, are all examples of facing a really bad situation. Each of them create an uneasy, disturbing feeling on the inside. What can make matters worse is the fact that sometimes the situation looks just as bad as it feels. When it feels bad and looks bad, we are in a situation that needs all the help we can get.

Sometimes a bad situation would be easier to deal with, if we could keep it from looking bad as well! Even simple things feel worse when they look bad too. If we run a stop light, we feel bad that we broke the rule. But when the police officer pulls us over to the side of the street and keeps her flashing light on the whole while she's giving you the ticket, the feel bad situation starts to look bad too! A person who has been injured feels pretty bad. There is pain all over his body. However, he feels even worse when the doctor walks in and says, "I'm going to tell you straight, it looks pretty bad!" That's what can be called a feel bad/look bad situation.

Politicians and major corporations hire public relations specialist whose job it is to keep feel bad situations from looking bad. They are called "spin doctors." These are people who are good at putting a good face on a bad situation. If the oil barge has leaked 1 million gallons of oil, the spin doctor will let you know that it has been contained. Even though nothing will live in those waters for years, at least for the moment it doesn't look so bad. Even if the President of the United States is caught having a relationship with a young girl, the spin doctors get busy to keep it from looking too bad. They point out that the woman was an adult and the relationship was immoral but consensual. After all, the spin doctors will say, he was caught with a woman, it could have been worse, he could have been caught with a man! The idea is that it's not all bad if it can be made to look better than it actually is!

Feeling bad and looking bad is a double whammy! That's why some women go to the mall when they feel bad. If they come home with a new hair dryer, it means they were feeling bad. If they come home with a dozen pair of shoes, six new dresses and new hair do, they will be looking good but their husbands will be feeling bad...really bad!

As Christians, we have learned that life often gives us feel bad/look bad situations that must be endured. We can't avoid them because our Savior couldn't avoid them. We drink from our cup, endure our circumstance and know that in the end God's will, not our will be done. If we do what God wants, in the end, the believer will always be blessed no matter how bad it looks or feels at the moment.

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he dealt with a situation that felt bad and also looked bad.

The occasion was just prior to his crucifixion. In prayer, Christ came to grips with the painful realities of what he had to do. The law required the shedding of blood for the forgiveness of sin. Animals were being used to achieve this purpose. Jesus himself, according to God's plan, would become the ultimate sacrifice that would make it possible for him to offer salvation to all who would recognize him. However, the full meaning of that sacrifice had not become real until this time. Now, the terrors of the crucifixion and its attendant humiliations were becoming clear.

Crucifixions were the method of punishment for enemies of the state, in Jesus' time. They were anything but feel good situations. According to Holman, the accused was "scourged (beaten with a whip consisting of thongs with pieces of metal
A tablet detailing the crime(s) was often placed around the criminal's neck and then fastened to the cross, this made it look worse. Then to add insult to injury the accused person's body was left to rot for days, with carrion birds allowed to degrade the corpse further.

In light of the terror and horror of crucifixion, Christ did two things: He talked to his father and he accepted his will. His conversation with the father was more an emptying of the soul than anything else. He was fully aware of the plan. He was fully aware that his death would provide redemption for mankind, but he sought another way to achieve this end, short of Calvary. He told the father how he felt. Yet, while he described his hesitancy to go to Calvary, he also told of his willingness to do his father's will. He concluded his prayer with the decision to carry out his father's will rather than his will.

Calvary was a feel bad/look bad situation, but Jesus faced it, endured it because it was his father's will. In the end he arose victorious over all of his critics and enemies. He arose to a better situation because he was willing to endure a feel bad/look bad situation for God.

Feel Bad Situations

Since believers are human, they face every problem that anyone else in the world faces. Believers have family problems, health, financial problems and other difficulties that come like bumps in the road of life. The difference between a believer and a non-believer is how they handle situations.

LOOKING GOOD BUT FEELING BAD: It is possible to look good, but feel bad. Looks are deceiving. Often we see neighbors and co-workers who live in fine houses, drive beautiful automobiles and wear the finest clothes. Yet, we are surprised at times to learn of so many who come to work dressed "to kill" but are feeling bad. Many are troubled, distressed, frustrated, and afraid. The fine appearance of some, acts as a thin veil that hides the terror or pain they feel on the inside.

Looking good but feeling bad, is a difficult situation. David had such a situation. After he committed adultery with Bathsheba and arranged the death of her husband, he tried to resume his Kingly duties as usual. He put on his finest clothes and sat on his throne. To any observer, he looked good, but he was disturbed on the inside. He did not feel good about himself until he straightened things out with God and confessed his sins.

In a similar manner, there are many today who will never feel as good as they look until they get things straight with God.

LOOKING GOOD, FEELING GOOD AND DOING BAD: There are some who look good all the time and they feel good but they are really doing bad and either don't know it or don't care! The thief who steals your valuables makes himself look good and feel good. The man who steals your wife, is looking good and feeling (at least until you catch him!) good. Neither cares about the fact that they are doing a bad thing. Sometimes the apparent success of a situation can hide the fact that it is not a positive involvement. A person that gambles and wins frequently is both looking good and feeling good. In fact, they don't even notice how they gradually increase their gambling activities in both frequency and amounts risked. They are in a bad situation but can't see it because they are feeling good and looking good too!

When Samson laid his head on Delilah's lap, he was feeling good. She was a beautiful woman. He was strong and powerful with rippling muscles. He was the perfect picture of a man that was looking good and feeling good. But he was actually doing bad. He didn't know how bad until he woke up one morning to learn that the beautiful woman he trusted had betrayed him. Only when he came to himself and had a talk with God did he regain his strength.

LOOKING BAD, YET FEELING GOOD!: There are times when situations look extremely bad, especially with respect to appearances. Sometimes a son or a daughter is falsely accused of a crime. Sometimes your family is viciously attacked and falsely accused. The bad publicity, rumors, ugly statements and comments of critics and enemies begin to paint a bad picture. Believers have a strange way of feeling good even though things look bad. A believer's co-workers are amazed that they keep their composure and hold their head up even though things look so bad.

What makes a believer feel good even when things look bad is the knowledge that persecutions, false accusations and a degree of unsolicited trouble is an expected part of the Christian life. The believer remembers Jesus' words in Matthew 5:11-12, "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.

A woman with an issue of blood for 12 years was in a feel bad/look bad situation. She was sick and she didn't look good, but dealt with the problem by bringing it to Jesus. She said, "If I could but touch the hem of his garment" she believed she would be made whole.

Give It to Jesus

Finally, brothers and sisters, if God has given you an agonizing situation, which both feels bad and looks bad, do not despair, the same God who gave you the burden, will help you bear the burden and reward you in the end!

Your burden may look bad to the public eye. It may feel bad as you live through it!

Our God knows our burden bearing capacity, and he won't put more on us than we can bear.

Maybe that's what Roberta Matin had in mind when she wrote: "Think of times you've asked the question, down in your heart, now just what should I do. Then you confide in your friends and loved ones, but they have troubles too. There is is God who rule earth and heaven, in Him there's relief from every pain and care, for he knows! Yes, he knows just how much you can bear!

When we get in look bad/feel bad situations, it's not always easy to:

Start over again after the rug has been pulled from under you!

Face yourself in the mirror after you've messed up and made yourself look bad!

Clean up your act and live right after you have lived in gutters of sin!

Stay cool when things are heating up around you!

Trust God when everything things to be going wrong!

That's the time when we should say, "I trust in God, wherever I may be. Out on the land or on the raging sea. Thou billows roll, he keeps my soul, my heavenly father watches over me!"

Standing at the Red Sea, Moses was in a look bad/feel bad situation. But he said "Stand Still and see the Salvation of the Lord!"

Faced with advancing age in a new an uncharted territory, Joshua was in a look bad/feel bad situation, but he said, "As for me and My house, we will serve the Lord!"

When both his health and wealth left him, Job was in a feel bad/look bad situation, but he said "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord!"

Down in the Garden of Gethsemene, Jesus found himself in a look bad/feel situation. He prayed to his father. Father, I don't want to go to Calvary, but never-the-less not my will but thy will be done!

They whipped him and spit upon him!

They placed a crown of thorns upon his head!

They placed a purple robe on his shoulder marched him from judgment hall to judgment hall!

Calvary was a feel bad/look bad situation!

He died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning!

What once looked bad started to look good!

What once felt bad started to feel good!

Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Power over every situation!

Power!

All Power in his hands!

A Godly Grandparent's Blessing

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

September 12, 1999

SCRIPTURE: Blessed is every one that feareth the LORD; that walketh in his ways; Yea, thou shalt see thy children's children, and peace upon Israel. Psalm 128:1,6; " Children's children are the crown of old men; and the glory of children are their fathers. Proverbs 17:6

Introduction

What is your fondest memory of your grand parents? Grandparents are special people. They seem so wise and so patient. Unlike parents, grandparents seem to have a soft spot for grand children, except when they are pinch hitting for parents. Then, again grand parents can be really tough when they have to be. Grandparents whole special places in our hearts because grandparents do secret things for us that our parents never know about. They let us watch television beyond curfew a few times. They always seem to have time to bake cakes and pies. They listened to us tell about our exciting moments and seem to hang on our every word. Every good grand parent holds a fond place in the hearts of their grandchildren.

There is a mystique about grandparents. They teach life lessons in some of the strangest ways. Consider the little boy who was absolutely amazed at his grandfather's ability to make a lot of sense by saying nothing. Grandpa would always say, "Never assume anything or you'll make a fool out of yourself." One day the grandson understood just what his grandpa meant when he and his grandpa were sitting on the porch counting all of the green colored cars that passed. There was a hound dog laying in the yard. Their serene day was interrupted by a door to door salesman who was working the neighborhood. "Excuse me, sir, but does your dog bite?" said a salesman who stood at the fence. The grandpa stopped counting cars for a minute and replied, "Nope." As soon as the salesman stepped out of his car, the dog began snarling and growling, and then attacked both his arms and legs. As the salesman ran out of the gate he yelled, "I thought you said your dog didn't bite!" Then the grandpa answered, "That ain't my dog."

Increasingly, grandparents are becoming primary care givers out of necessity. In fact, grandparents raising grandchildren or grand nieces and nephews are becoming commonplace in our society. The 1995 U.S. Census Bureau Report estimates that four million children live in a household headed by a grandparent, which is a 40 percent increase during the past decade. For 1.3 million children, a grandparent, often the grandmother, is their primary care giver; 46 percent of these children are African American, almost 42 percent are Caucasian, and 12 percent are Hispanic. Kinship care givers, usually grandmothers and fathers or grand uncles and grand aunts are generally over the age of 50 and make up more than 50 percent of the kinship care providers in the nation, according to a study commission by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Resources.

When grandparents double as parents they take on a difficult task. Their tempers are shorter. Their patience grows thin. Their nerves are fragile. They are disturbed easier and stress builds faster. Sometimes they face a myriad of challenges, such as their own declining health or the need to provide support to the absent parent of the grandchild. Other challenges include lack of support and respite services, affordable housing and access to medical care, as well as other physical, emotional and family strains. But, if it were not for grandparents, millions of children would be denied the opportunity to grow up in stable homes and communities.

Across the nation, grandparents who are doubling as care givers are forming support groups to share information and concerns and to advocate activities and programs that would enhance their own quality of life.

As Christians, we know that the godly person who lives by God's laws is often blessed with the presence of loving grandparents and kinship care givers. Morever, those who stay close to God may even get the ultimate of blessings which is to live long enough to see their own grandchildren grow and mature in front of their eyes. One is a great blessing. But to have had wonderful grandparents then to become a grandparent oneself, is a double reason to give praises to God.

Exposition

This text focuses upon one of the rewards of righteous living: grandparents, grandchildren or both.

David, writing in the 128th Psalm, said those who live truly holy lives derive one of the great blessings of holiness, which is happiness. Happiness, in this context, is not measured by material possessions but by an abiding appreciation for the great gift that God has given to every believer who aspires to the holy life.

David said one of the great benefits of living the Godly life is the ability to reap some of the benefits of his life's work. So, verse two finds him noting that the righteous man will "eat the labor of thine hands." The labor of one's hands is the essence of all that one has tried to achieve for himself and for his family. This involves both the material and the spiritual. Those who are righteous and godly are blessed when they are able to see the work of their hands, like seedlings that take root, grow up before their very eyes. This feeling of accomplishment, brings a happiness that exceeds anything that can be offered by material means. That's why David says, "it shall be well with thee."

The believer who strives to live according to God's law can expect children whose nurture and growth parallels that of olive trees. That is significant because the growth of a productive olive tree only occurs when a part of the root stock of the mother plant is grafted on that of a young inferior seedling. In less than 10 years the young olive begins to flower or show potential. However, one is not able to see the full results of an olive tree until it reaches 40 or 50 years old. Thus, it is not an accident that David says a believer's children are like "olive plants" about the table. He meant that a believer's children, although growing in the wild, have grafted in them the essence of their parent's training, background and morality. At a young age they show the potential, but what they really become doesn't really show itself until they become 40 or 50 years old.

Proverbs 17:6 echoes the thoughts of Psalm 128. Solomon records that one of the greatest honors of a believer is to have grandchildren who are walking in the steps of their strongest virtues while avoiding their weak points. Even more important and pleasing to a grandparent is to watch a young "olive" flower and know that not only does a grandchild follow the family virtue but has the potential to exceed their own level of accomplishment, advancing the reputation and strength of the family as they follow the will of God.

Solomon adds a note that David does not add. He notes that while it is a joy to have grandchildren, a grandchild who can enjoy the presence of a godly grandparent is also blessed. Those who have them are able to see the rootstock from whence they have been grafted, and can see it from a distance.

Combined, Psalm 128 and Proverbs 17:6 tells us that a person that lives a godly life is often blessed to see grandchildren or at the very least to enjoy the presence of godly grandparents who revel and rejoice each time they demonstrate another example of budding potential.

Grandparents are a blessing to grandchildren

Grandparents are a blessing to every family for a number of reasons. Some of the reasons make us happy some of the reasons trouble us, but they are blessings never-the-less.

GRANDPARENTS REMIND US BE PREPARED: If there is one thing that troubles many grandchildren, it is hearing their grandparents constantly referring to their deaths. References to "When I'm gone," and "It won't be long" are unsettling but serve as reminders of our own mortality. Our grandparents show us how to live the golden years, one day at a time, in faith, prepared to meet the king. Preparation is the key otherwise even a grandparent might end up like the two 85 year grandfathers whose grandchildren carried them to a baseball game. As the two, Joe and Doug, watched the game, Joe said, "You know how we have both loved baseball all our lives.

Doug, you gotta do me one favor. If you go before me, somehow you've got to find a way to get a message to me to tell me if there's baseball in heaven. I want to keep going to games with my grandchildren." Doug agreed that would be a good idea and asked Joe to do the same. As fate would have it, Joe passed on first. At midnight a couple of nights later, Joe heard a voice in his sleep whispering "Joe..Joe!" Joe sat up straight in his bed and said, "Doug, is that you?" Doug answered, "Yes, I want to know I'm trying to keep our deal. I've got some good news and some bad news for you. The good news is that there IS baseball in heaven." Then Joe asked, "O.K. What's the bad news?" Doug said, "The bad news is that you're up to pitch next Tuesday!" A godly grandparent teaches us to be prepared for life's eventualities.

GRANDPARENTS CONNECT US WITH OUR PAST: Grandparents, through their oral histories connect us with our past. Through them we understand our family and its history and how God has moved and worked through our family to change lives, save souls and help others. It's through grannies recollections of deeds and misdeeds of the family over the years that we learn of the strengths and weaknesses of the family. We learn the kinds of traps that have injured our family in the past and how to avoid them in the future. When we listen to our grandparents we gain an appreciation for our parents, why they believe what they believe and better understand how God has used them to nurture us in the knowledge of him.

GRANDPARENTS SHARE THE WISDOM OF THEIR EXPERIENCE: One of the greatest contributions any grandparent makes to the family is the wisdom of their life's experience. Since this experience deals with values not affected by time or changes in technology, their advice is priceless because it is applicable at any time. Many grandparents try to advise their children and grandchildren about the value of saving their money, avoiding waste, protecting their name and reputation, choosing the honorable route rather than the road to least resistance. Many grandchildren have heard the same instructive words from godly grandparents, "Trust in the Lord with all thy heart, and lean not unto thine own understandings."

How Grandparents are blessed

Finally brothers and sisters, while it is true that grandchildren are blessed to have godly grandparents, it is also true that every godly grandparent gets multiple blessings from the Lord.

Those who have walked the rugged road know the danger of the journey. They know the importance staying close to God.

It takes a godly grandfather to tell how God helped him provide for his family through hard times and difficulties. It wasn't easy heading a family when a man had to scratch out a living in a system that kept its foot on his head. But with God's help, grandpa kept food on the table.

Grandpa didn't have much education but he knew enough to know that you should treat people the way you want to be treated. He didn't have much money, sometimes hardly enough to buy coal oil for the lamps, but he'd rather starve than steal.

It takes a godly grandmother to tell how God helped her rear her children despite frustrating times. Godly grandmothers spent much of the time praying for their children and grandchildren and the other part trying to make them happy.

Only God knows the number of nights that grandma spent on her knees praying for her children.

Those who have weathered the storm know the power of God.

Those who have seen the rough side of the mountain don't become upset when the storms begin to rage because they know a man who can speak to the wind and waves and say "Peace be still."

Those who have who have soaked their pillows with tears, wrestling with the tragedies of life, have learned that "weeping endures but a night, but joy cometh in the morning!"

Those who have who watched bare cabinets and survived on light bread and air pudding, know that if they keep the faith, that Lord will make a way somehow!

Those who have stood face to face with sickness and risen from their sick beds time and time again know that God is able!

Ask any grandparent and they'll tell you...God is able!

God is able to take our:

BURDENS and make them light; DISAPPOINTMENTS and give us renewed hope!

FRUSTRATIONS and give us encouragement; DOUBTS and give us confidence!

Weaknesses and give us strength; FEARS and give us courage!

Those who have walked the Christian journey can testify that God is a prayer answering God. They sing with confidence the words of the old hymn, "I know the Lord will answer prayer, for I tried him for myself!"

Every godly grandparent needs to keep telling the story!

Tell your grandchildren about the goodness of the Lord! Warn them about the dangers of loose living!

Tell your grandchildren that they must know the Lord for themselves!

Tell them about Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Tell them how early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

Tell them in the morning!

Tell them in the evening!

Tell them in the midnight hour!

Tell them ,,,,not matter what comes their way...

God is able!

The Water and The Blood

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 19, 1999

SCRIPTURE:"But one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came there out blood and water." John 19:34; "This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood. And it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth." 1 John 5:6

Introduction

What is one of the first acts of new business? They put up a sign to let people know they are in business! In the same sense, people who begin new lives in Christ, post signs to the entire world that a new, born again, life is about to begin. They don't buy bill boards to announce it. They don't carry a huge cross down a city street. They simply acknowledge it to the world through what the religious world calls "baptism." It is a sign that the new life is in business. The old life is out of business and its assets have been completely liquidated. Baptism is the outward symbol of this new life. It is a sign that is only meaningful if it truly represents a change of direction or is an affirmation of commitment.

Water baptism lets the devil know that he has lost another battle over a soul. A hellish, disobedient, contrary, troublesome, sinful person spiritually dies, and a new person rises from the watery grave. The devil is frustrated and defeated in his battle to win that person's soul.

The story is told of two boys who went on a nature hike in the hills picking up nuts. Along the way, they filled their small pails and then started to fill their pockets and shirts. When they could hold no more nuts, they started down the country road until they came across a cemetery. The boys decided that would be a good place to stop and rest and divide out the nuts. The two boys sat in the shade of a large oak tree and unloaded their pockets and buckets by dumping all of the nuts in a large pile. In the process, two of them rolled away and rested near the road. The boys then proceeded to divide out the nuts. "One for you. One for me. One for you. One for me." As they were doing this, another boy was passing by and happened to hear them. He looked into the cemetery, but could not see the boys, because they were obscured by the tree. He hesitated a moment and then ran back to town. "Father! Father!" he yelled as he entered his house. "The cemetery. Come quick!" "What's the matter?" his father asked. The boy and his father ran up the country road and stopped when they reached the cemetery. Then the father asked his son what was wrong. "Do you hear that?" he whispered. Both people listened intently and heard the Scouts. "One for me. One for you. One for me. One for you..." The boy then blurted out, "The devil and the Lord are dividing the souls!" The father was skeptical but silent — until a few moments later as the boys completed dividing out the nuts and one boy said to the other, "Now, as soon as we get those two nuts down by the road, we'll have them all." Yes, the devil is busy trying to gain our souls and he even has his eye on us, the nuts by the road.

Baptism is an act of faith that symbolizes our decision not to let Satan win in our lives. For some it means that Satan has been cut loose and cast out. For others it means that the doors have been shut and Satan won't get a chance. In either case, it represents a life that is being fully and totally committed to the kingdom of God.

As Christians, we approach our baptism with optimism. It is an important moment in our lives. The water marks the day our humanity yielded to God allowed the blood of Christ to save our souls.

Exposition

This text focuses on the strange event that occurred after Christ died, the pouring of water and blood from his side.

John records that after Christ died, a Roman soldier pierced him in his side with a spear. To his surprise water and blood gushed from the puncture. Medical experts have been trying to explain this occurrence for centuries. Most agree that the fact that water and lumps of blood flowed from the wound indicated that there had been a rupture of the pericardium, or the membrane around the heart that contains water, before Christ died.

Since every aspect of Christ's life was significant, the strange case of the water and the blood has been the object of study for centuries. Most agree that the flowing water and blood seemed to represent the humanity of Christ, with respect to water, as well as his divinity with respect to the blood.

By the water, our humanity and imperfections are made ready for the kingdom, through an outward act and profession of faith. The water is the essence of everything human in us that needs the power of God to perfect its nature.

But it is the blood that justifies, reconciles and presents us righteous before God. According to Matthew Henry, "By the blood, the curse of the law being satisfied, the purifying Spirit is obtained for the internal cleansing of our natures."

When his side was pierced, both water and blood came forth. The human frailty and divine power was demonstrated.

In 1 John 5:6 John makes the point that water is significant, but the water alone is not sufficient to redeem mankind. It takes both the water and the blood to accomplish this end.

In that the water, with respect to baptism, marks a point in which we have accepted Christ and have given an outward sign of acceptance, it is not the water, but blood of Christ that does the actual saving, reconciling and atoning for sin.

The divinity and power of God are witnessed on earth by the presence of the Holy Spirit, a body of baptized saints, and the reality of the blood of Christ. 1 John 5:8 says, "And there are three that bear witness in earth, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one."

These three in a true believer are in agreement and are the same. A believer who is baptized in the water and washed in the blood of Christ is guided daily by the presence of the Holy Spirit.

Combined, the spirit, the water and the blood, bear witness to power and glory of God in heaven.

The water does not save. It is the blood. The water is a sign.

A life washed in both the water and the blood, is powered by the Holy Spirit. That life is a dramatic witness to the power of God that cannot be denied.

The Water

Water represented everything human in Christ. It represented basic human needs for survival as well as human passions, faults and failure.

WATER REPRESENTS FRUSTRATIONS AND OBSTACLES: When Israel stood at the Red Sea it came to a point of frustration. The sea of water in front of them posed an obstacle to their ultimate goal, which was to reach the promised land. It was frustrating because they marched out of Egypt with high hopes, only to be stalled at the Red Sea by a huge body of water. Today, we are often faced with obstacles but the God we serve helps us to overcome them.

WATER REPRESENTED HUMAN NEED: In the wilderness Israel cried out for water. They had marched for days without water. Their bodies needed nourishment. It was out of need that they complained to Moses that they had no water. Responding to that need God provided them water to meet their needs. Today, each of us has a need. The same God that met Israel's need meets ours.

WATER REPRESENTED NEED FOR SPIRITUAL RENEWAL: When Naaman was told to wash in muddy water seven times to receive a healing, he complained about the water. He said it was muddy and dirty. What he needed was a spiritual renewal and faith in the Word of God, the water itself only symbolized his need. The woman at the well met Jesus and learned that he offered her "Living water" that would cause her never to thirst. In this context water represents our need for spiritual renewal. We need spiritual renewal to survive in these dangerous times.

WATER REPRESENTED THE NEED FOR FORGIVENESS: When the people cried out for the blood of Christ, Pilate asked for a bowl of water. He washed his hands to absolve himself for the blame of Christ's death. He washed but the guilt would not go away! Today, our past, though written indelibly in the minds of our neighbors are forgotten once God has forgiven us.

WATER REPRESENTED OUR NEED FOR REPENTANCE: When John the Baptist baptized in the Wilderness of Judea he gave a call to repentance. Those who were baptized did so to acknowledge a turn from their wicked and evil ways. Jesus, although he had no sin, came to be baptized as well. He was baptized, in one sense, to set the example for those who would follow. In obedience to the command of God he came to the water. Today, if we repent for our sins God will be willing to forgive us.

The water represents our emptiness.

The water represents our need for the power of God.

There is nothing in the water. It has no saving grace. It serves to remind us of our frailty and need for God.

The Blood

Finally, brothers and sisters, while there is nothing in the water, there is power in the blood.

The water from Jesus' side represented his humanity, but the blood from his side represented his divinity.

It was through the shedding of blood that sins are forgiven, justification secured and lost sinners are restored and reconciled to God..

It is through the blood of Christ that we are saved and brought before God spotless and worthy for the kingdom.

The water gives us the witness, but it is the blood of Christ that does the saving. That's what John meant in 1 John 5:6, when he said, "not by water only, but water and blood."

There is a new life that should accompany every person who has been dipped in the water. The new life comes only by the power of the blood.

If all you have is the water, but you still don't know the Lord through accepting his blood: There is a table from which you cannot eat, but the power of the blood, brings you to the table!

There is a fountain from which you cannot drink, but the power of the blood brings you to that fountain!

There is a promise that you cannot claim, but the power of the blood allows you to claim that promise!

There is a hope that you cannot enjoy, but the power of the blood allows you to enjoy that hope!

There have been many who have been baptized in the water, but still don't know the Lord!

They want to be a member of a church like everyone else, but they still know nothing about the Lord!

They've been dipped in the water, but they still lie and steal!

They've been dipped in the water, but they still disobey God in matters of lifestyle and morality!

They've been dipped in the water, but they are so frequent at the Motel 6 that the desk clerks know their names!

They'd been dipped in the water, but they still shacking, getting drunk and running from club to club looking for Mr. Goodbar!

There are many who have sung the words, "Take me to the water!" but they never learned, "There is a fountain filled with blood that flows from Immanuel's vain. Sinners plunged beneath the flood, lose all their guilted stain!"

After you have been washed in the blood you have a new song to sing, "God gave me a song. That the angels cannot sing. I've been washed in the blood, of the crucified lamb, I've been redeemed!

When there is a dirt in our clothing, we can wash it out!

When there stain in our carpet, we can buy a stain remover!

When we have ring around the collar, we can shout it!

But what can wash away my sins? Nothing but the blood of Jesus!

What can make me whole again? Nothing but the blood of Jesus!

Oh precious is the flow that makes me white as snow, nothing but the blood of Jesus!

When you've been washed in the blood, you sing with new meaning, "I know it was the blood. I know it was the blood that saved me."

I know it was the blood that took my hatred and turned it into love!

I know it was the blood that took my despair and turned it into hope!

I know it was the blood that took my disgrace and turned it into honor!

I know it was the blood that took my enemies and turned them into friends!

I know it was the blood that took my worries and turned them into confidence!

One day when I was lost, he died!

He died up on a cross! I know it was the blood that save me!

He died to give me a chance to turn my life around!

He died to give me a chance to get a clean start!

But early Sunday morning arose, to guarantee my salvation!

Let's Talk About The Preacher

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

September 26, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "Therefore whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the housetops." Luke 12:3; Now the end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned:" 1 Timothy 1:5

Introduction

Do you know people who talk behind your back? One of the great American pass times is "back talking." Co-workers, talk about each other, behind the other's back. Acquaintances, business associates, and even family members talk about each other outside of the ear shot of the other. One of the most popular pass times among church folk is talking about the preacher. He's probably the most talked about person in the entire congregation. It seems everybody has something to say about the preacher from the little child that just loves him to those who criticize his every word and action.

Not everything that is said behind your back is bad. Neither is everything said to your face all good. There are people who speak well of you, promote you, and defend you. There are others who berate everything about you, no matter how honorable your effort.

The question is not whether or not people talk about you, but what they say. Whatever is said, sooner a later you will know. Consider the little farm boy who had heard his parents complaining about the preacher. They said he preached too long and used bad English. In addition, the said he was grouchy. One Sunday the parents invited the preacher to their home for Sunday dinner. Just before leaving to come to their home the preacher smiled a big grin and asked, "I've been invited to your house, what's for lunch?" The little boy, with innocent eyes said, "Goat!" The preacher said, "Are you sure?" The boy said, "Yes sir, I know it's true because I heard my daddy say, 'Let's have the old goat for dinner!"

We should be careful what we say too, because we don't know who's listening. Consider the two women that went to a program and sat two rows behind the pastor of the church. The two women whispered to each other about the preacher. "They say, he used to be great a long time ago!"" One woman said. The women shook their head in pity. The other added, "They said he's a bit senile too, can't even remember the day of the week." They shook their heads in pity again. "They say, he and his wife are having trouble." They continued for a while as the whispered, pointed and shook their heads in pity of the preacher's problem.

Finally the preacher rose from his seat and greeted the women with a big smile. Then he leaned over and whispered to them, "They also say that he's hard of hearing, do you think that could be true?" The women were out done. He had heard every word they said.

Appreciations are times when the church gets together to talk about the preacher. Generally it's a time when the church says something good about him to his face. What they want to talk about is everything about him that glorifies God! They want to talk about his strengths and vision! They want to talk about his ministry and message. It is a time of edifying, glorifying God and giving thanks for his rich blessing.

As Christians, we talk about our pastor and other saints too. We talk more behind their backs than we do to their faces. The difference is what we say.

Philippians 4:8 tells us exactly what to say, "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

As saints we speak well of our church, other saints and our pastor. That's what the Lord would have us to do!

Let's Talk about the Preacher's Service

This text focuses on Paul writing to a young man in the ministry with advice for his service.

There are two sets of letters that Paul wrote to pastors in the bible. They are called Epistles. One of the Epistles is Paul's letter to Titus who was the pastor of Crete and Timothy who was the pastor in Ephesus.

Ephesus was a city that was devoted to the worship of the Goddess Diana , the patroness of sexuality. The Gospel message of sexual abstinence and purity of spirit was controversial and different for the people of Ephesus. There were many people talking about young Timothy. Some were saying good things some were not. Timothy was encouraged to preach the word to the people with love and a pure heart. (V5). What they said was not important as long as he knew that both his words and actions were ordained by God.

Paul encouraged Timothy to do three things, each of which would give the people something positive to talk about.

STAY UNTIL THE JOB IS FINISHED: In verse 3 Paul urges Timothy to stay in Ephesus. And carry out the mission. The mission was certainly a difficult one. Timothy was carrying them in a different direction than they had been accustomed. They were being challenged to give up habits and practices with which they had become comfortable and while they loved him, they talked about him behind his back. Sensing that young Timothy may be tempted to leave and go to areas more acceptable to the message, Paul encouraged him to stay until the job is finished.

One of the criticisms that people have of ministers is that they often have no sense of commitment. Many appear mercenary in that they must have the dollar before they holler. The congregation that pays the most gets their attention. Thus, many don't stay long enough to get anything done. This doubt about commitment causes some churches to take a wait and see attitude about the preacher before they jump into major changes of direction. The pastor that would lead his congregation through unknown paths as he charts a new course, is best served to make the people know that he plans to stay until either the job is finished , God gives clear direction otherwise or until God calls him home!

STAND WITH CONFIDENCE ON THE TRUTH: Paul encouraged Timothy to stand on the truth and correct any false teachings or misconceptions that may come. Truth is what determines whether not a church becomes a theater or a place of worship. "Without truth" an unknown author wrote, "what we call worship blurs into entertainment or emotional catharsis or feel good experience. Without truth, teaching and preaching becomes either ear tickling or guilt provoking. If we ignore the truths of God our teachings become legalistic."

Yet standing on the truth will get people to talking. Some will say good things. Others will say bad things whenever the pastor stands on the truth.

KEEP A GOOD CONSCIENCE: Lastly Paul encouraged Timothy to keep a good conscience. What matters most is that he had exercised what God has commanded. He had spoken that which God has inspired and charted the course that God has given.

This is the spirit that Paul himself demonstrated at the close of his own life when he wrote, "I have fought the good fight. I have finished my course."

The preacher who has a clear conscience sleeps well at night and even though people may be talking about him one way or another.

Let's Talk About What the Preacher Does

Let's talk about what the preacher does on behalf of the Lord.

The primary job of the preacher is to preach the Gospel of Jesus and to declare the acceptable year of our Lord.

In the name of Jesus, the preacher says and does things that inspire and motivate the people of God to rise to their fullest potential.

In the name of Jesus, the preacher comforts those who are lost, disappointed or dejected and brings them hope.

In the name of Jesus, the preacher performs simple acts that God often empowers beyond their simplicity.

A widow woman met the preacher one day. She was down to her last cup of meal and her last jar of oil. But after the preacher talked to God, the barrel never ran dry.

A poor lady who didn't have a dime to pay her bills was about to lose all she had, when the preacher came with a word from God. The preacher said, put your pots out.

What the preacher does is remind us that the Lord is a wonderworking Lord!

Let's About What The Preacher Talks About

Finally, brothers and sisters, as we talk about the preacher, let's talk about what the preacher talks about!

The subject that is first and foremost on the mind of every good preacher is the goodness of the Lord.

If we start talking about the goodness of the Lord, that's a subject that will occupy our time both morning and night. That's what the preacher likes to talk about.

It doesn't matter how many times we hear him say it, because each time he tells us that God is good, it reaffirms our faith. That's why Romans 10:17 says, "Now faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God."

If we want to talk about God's goodness, that is something to talk about.

It's the goodness of God that takes the bitterness of life and makes it sweet.

It's the goodness of God that takes the:

HARDNESS of life's troubles and makes them tender;

WRONGS that life has handed us and makes them right

LOSSES that we have sustained and makes them gains;

NOBODIES of life and makes them somebodies

UNDERDOGS and turns them into champions;

WEAKNESS we've developed and gives us new strength

Every good preacher likes to talk about the power of God. When the preacher talks about the power of God he reminds us that God has all power in his hands. No matter what our circumstance, his grace is sufficient.

His grace is sufficient to keep us!

His grace is sufficient to forgive us!

His grace is sufficient to cleanse us!

His grace is sufficient to satisfy us!

But more than anything else, every preacher likes to talk about Jesus!

We like to talk about Jesus because he is the author and finisher of our faith!

We like to talk about Jesus because he gives us a reason to rejoice and be glad!

We like to talk about Jesus because he gives us the:

Power to overcome sin and Satan; Grace to live holy and righteous

Strength to make it from day to day; Courage to walk in the face of fear!

We like to talk about Jesus because there is "none other name under the heavens whereby we must be saved, except the name of Jesus!"

In the name of Jesus, broken spirits have been restored!

In the name of Jesus, shattered lives have been put together again!

In the name of Jesus, the down trodden have overcome!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who stayed in the grave for three days and nights!

If you want to talk about something talk about how got up, early Sunday morning!

Preacher! Keep talking about Jesus!

If they say good things about you, keep talking about Jesus!

If they say bad things about you, keep talking about Jesus!

Preach the word! In season and out of season, keep talking about Jesus!

The Will To Pay The Bill

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 26, 1999

SCRIPTURE:"Saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done." Luke 22:42

Introduction

How would you like to have someone who paid all of your bills for you with no strings attached? How would like to open your mail one day and get a letter that announced that all of your bills, current and future have been paid in full? Think about it! Your house note, rent, college tuition, school fees, furniture bills, telephone bills, grocery bills car notes, Visa Card, Master Charge, American Express, Diner's Club, club dues, television, cablevision ..everything paid in full! That may sound too good to be true but there are millions of people in America who are looking for just that! They are looking for someone to pay the bills!

There is a growing sentiment among youth and young adults that rejects permanent arrangements, as temporary couples partner for the expressed purpose of expense sharing. Most are familiar with college students who get apartments of their own and share the expense with a roommate. Many friendships have ended when a roommate became a burden rather than a help. Whenever a roommate reached a point where their part of the rent was always due and never paid, we knew it was time for someone to move out!

Today the search has gone beyond roommates. Interpersonal relationships have entered the picture. We have before us today what can easily be called couples who "play for pay." In essence there are millions of relationships that are being built upon the, "I let you play, as long as you pay" mentality.

We have evolved from the chivalry of the 50's and 60's. That was a time when no self respecting girl accepted gifts from a man; and no real man would allow a woman to take care of him and be proud of that fact. Today, there is a growing "what's in it for me" feeling that is damaging relationship potentials of young adults across the nation.

Today, both men and women are saying, "You can play if you pay!"

There are many women who are looking for someone to pay their bills. They agree with the spirit of the hit song by Destiny's Child entitled "Bills, Bills, Bills" about a woman who became disenchanted with her lover who started out spending heavily on her, but suddenly started asking her for support. When it became obvious that he couldn't or wouldn't spend money on her, she wrote: "

You triflin', good for nothing type of brother
Silly me, why haven't I found another
A baller, when times get hard
Need someone to help me out
Instead of a scrub like you
Who don't know what a man's about
Can you pay my bills?
Can you pay my telephone bills?
Can you pay my automo-bills?
If you did then maybe we could chill
I don't think you do
So, you and me are through

Some men are looking for a woman who will work for them and help them pay their bills. They believe that a woman should have a good job and take care of the man's bills. This spirit is best represented in the lyrics to the song "No bills" by "Sporty Thieves" In this song the man wants to be on the receiving end of the relationship. Any woman that can't deliver is described as a pigeon.

"You triflin',good-for-nothin' kinda pigeon
Silly me,thinkin' I could help a chicken
I need a lady,who'll work to nine-to-five to help her man out
Not a pigeon,who just lay around,just lookin' for a handout
I can't pay your bills,I can't get your hair done
I can't pay your rent,and I can't take care of your son
I-don't-trick-my cash,so...pigeons do not ask
(for my dogs,for my dogs)
I can't pay your bills,I can't pay your cell phone
I can't pay your car, no I can't help out with your home
I-don't-trick-my cash, so...pigeons do not ask "

One final song by Missy asks this question, "Why you all in my grill? You be all in my grill! Can you pay my bills. Let me know if you will 'Cause a chick gotta live." The Beastie Boys tapped into this thinking when they wrote, "I got the skills to pay the bills" as an advertisement to girls who want what is described as real man.

Each song suggests that many people are looking for someone who has the will and skill to pay the bills!

As Christians, we hear these songs, but they take on a different meaning to us.

We hear the question asked, “Can you pay my bills?” And we think of Jesus, who has proven that he has both the skill and the will to pay the bill!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he prays and talks with God about the prospect of dying on the cross.

Mankind had sinned greatly in the eyesight of God. Nearly every sin that could be imagined had been committed against heaven. Everything from sex sins, theft, and lying to murder had been charged against the human race. Mankind had accumulated a huge bill, for which God was ready to exact a payment.

The payment for man kind’s sin had to be made in blood. Jesus came to earth to substitute himself for our sins. When he died on Calvary his death would substitute for our death and our bill would be paid.

This text focuses on Christ as he withdrew about a stone’s throw into the garden, which some reckon to be about fifty or sixty paces. He prayed that, if it were the will of God, this cup of suffering, this bitter cup, might be removed from him.

However, he knew the plan. He also knew what God’s will was for the salvation of mankind. Thus, he said, “not my will” but “thy will” be done. This is spirit of every believer which David records in Psalm 40:8 “ I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart.”

By demonstrating a willingness to do what was untasteful and unbearable to carry out the desire of his father, Jesus showed that he had the strength of character needed to carry out the plan of Salvation.

Truly, he had the will to pay the bill!

Who Pays The Bill?

While there are many today who are looking for another person to pay their bills, many right thinking believers understand that Christian’s don’t put their trust in any man or woman to provide for their daily needs. Believers have learned to trust in God.

PLAY FOR PAY IS PROSTITUTION: Christians should be warned that trading “play” for “pay” is just another form of prostitution. It begins with little girls who want boyfriends that can buy them presents. It begins with little boys who expect girls to do their homework or pay their way to the movies. Then it graduates something bigger. A man who trades companionship and sexual favors for a place to sleep, food to eat and access to a charge card is just as much a Gigolo as the man who charges by hour! A woman who trades her virtue and chastity for a $75 hairstyle, $60 pair of false fingernails, free rent and a cell phone may as well place an ad in the local paper that reads, “Wanted, young man, single, divorced or free, you can sleep in my bed but you can’t sleep for free!” Whether on a street corner or under fine sheets by Dan River and Cannon, the end result is the same...prostitution!

Every believer’s salvation has been paid for by the blood of Christ, we cannot sell to someone else for the price of a light bill, what belongs to God. 1 Corinthians 6:19-20 says, "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price:therefore glorify God in your body, in your spirit, which are God's."

BE CAREFUL WHO PAYS YOUR BILLS: There many who have developed a new morality that supports that the idea that everything is moral which achieves a desired end. In other words, there are those who believe, "It doesn't matter who pays the bill, as long as it gets paid." This has been a moral issue for centuries. In the famous play "The Devil and Daniel Webster" the devil is more than willing to pay the bill for a man who wanted everything and was willing to trade his soul to get it. However, there came a day when the promissory note made to the devil was due and he came to collect. We must be careful to guard our integrity and keep our soul.

Jesus asked the all important question, "What doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his own soul."

The devil pays bills. If we just want bills paid, the devil will pay your bills, but not without a price! Sometimes the price is a life behind bars. Sometimes it's an addiction we can't stop. Sometimes it's a reputation that is soiled! Sometimes it is an education that is lost!

The devil even offered to pay Jesus' bills. For 40 days and 40 nights he tried to get Jesus to let him take care of things such as turning stones into bread only to hear Jesus say, "It is written, man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

WE PAY FOR OUR PLAY: Every believer should remember that while we play for pay, we will also pay for our play! Every sin we commit exacts a toll upon us. We will give an account one day for the way we play. Just as a credit card bill details every charge with a date, place, amount and sometimes a detailed description of what was purchased, we too will be presented with a bill for our play. It will list every sin that has been charged against our account.

The word of God says we will pay. Romans 6:23 made it clear that, "The wages of sin is death but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Jesus Can Pay The Bill

Finally, brothers and sisters we are encouraged to know that while we may have many charges on our account, Jesus has the skill and the will to pay the bill!

I suggest to you that while the world is looking for someone to pay its bills, we who know the Lord can testify that we have found a man who can pay the bill!

The world has placed many charges on our account, but we have found a man with the will to pay the bill!

The world knocked us down, but we found a man who had the will to pick us up and turn us around!

The world gave us despair, but we found a man who had the will to take our despair and turn it into hope!

The world gave us sadness, but we found a man who had the will to take our sadness and turn it into gladness!

The world gave us failure, but we found a man who took our failure and turned it into success!

The world gave us weakness, but we found a man who took our weakness and turned it into strength!

But somebody is a doubter! That somebody is asking, "I know he's got the will, but can he pay the bill?"

Can he pay my light bill? David said, "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life of whom shall I be afraid?"

Can he pay my water bill? I see a woman sitting by the well, worried about getting water. I heard Jesus tell not to worry about water from the well because he could give her living water and she would never thirst again!

Can he pay my grocery bill? I heard Jesus say, "I am the bread of life" No wonder the old hymn says, "Bread of heaven. Bread of Heaven. Feed me till I want no more.!"

Can he pay my doctor bill? Ask the man who sat at the pool for 38 years. He told me to take my bed and walk!

Can he pay for my telephone bill? Can he establish a line of communication that won't be cut off? Can I send up a prayer in the morning, noon or night? I heard a song writer declare: Jesus is on the mainline, tell him what you want!

Can he pay for my sin bill? Isaiah answered that question, "he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. "

No wonder the song writer wrote, "Jesus paid it all. All to him I owe. Sin had left a crimson stain, but he washed it white as snow!

One evening 2000 years ago, he went up a hill and paid my bill!

He died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning he arose with the canceled note on my soul marked paid in full!

If you are looking for someone who can pay the bill, don't look for a man. Don't look for a woman!

Call on Jesus!

He's got the will to pay the bill!

And Now
A Word From Our Sponsor

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 3, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "Hear, O my people, and I will speak; O Israel, and I will testify against thee: I am God, even thy God." Psalm 50:7

Introduction

Have you ever watched your favorite television program only to have it interrupted by a commercial break? It seems like commercial breaks always come at the wrong time. Just when you were about to learn the answer to a secret or the villain was about to be captured, then comes a commercial! How frustrating! In the 1960's the late Alfred Hitchcock was known for interrupting his weekly suspense programs with these words..."And now a word from our sponsor." Like it or not, there had to be a break because the sponsor had to have a word.

While some listen to the sponsor's message, others take it as a convenient time to go to the refrigerator or bath room. To get us to listen to words from our sponsors, advertising agencies go to extremes, using everything from talking frogs to beautiful models advertising everything from hotels to swimsuits. It is extremely difficult to get us to hear a word from the sponsor despite the fact that the average television viewer is exposed to over 500 selling messages (commercials) per day! That amounts to over 182,500 selling messages per year or 2.1 million commercial words from the time you begin the first grade until your high school graduation day.

What's amazing about the messages of sponsors is brevity. Most commercial messages are between 30 and 60 seconds in length. They rely heavily upon repetition to get the message across. Thus, the same commercial may appear more than once in the same time block. Even within the commercial itself the name of the product is repeated visually or audibly several times. The sponsor will use a variety of techniques to get our attention: slogans such as "You're in good hands with Allstate", or jingles such as, "Like a good neighbor State Farm is There", animals such as the Budweiser frogs or humorous characters such as Energizer Bunny are often used; whatever it takes to get the message across. If the viewer enjoys the commercial but can't remember the sponsor then the sponsor failed to get the message across, no matter how cute the commercial.

If commercial sponsors bombard us with hundreds of words a day, how does a believer hear a word from his or her spiritual sponsor? When and how does a believer hear a word of inspiration, instruction, comfort or hope from our heavenly sponsor? Unfortunately, God has to compete for advertising time to get in a word to some of us. When he wants to speak to us he often finds that others have bought up all the messages in the program called our life. So he puts his message on a religious channel, but even that has to compete with the world and it is often unheard.

Sometimes God has to do exactly like Alfred Hitchcock. He thrusts himself in the middle of our program and has an unexpected circumstance to say to us..."And now a word from our sponsor!"

As believers, we have come to know that we need to hear from the Lord. We need to hear him for daily inspiration. We need to hear him for correction and instruction. We need to hear him for comfort and hope! We allow God to speak in our lives because we recognize that without the sponsor...there is no program. In him we live, move and have our being, he is our sponsor and saving souls and enriching lives is his product!

Exposition

This text focuses on God telling Israel to listen to his words as he gives encouragement, reassurance and reprimand.

The collective national life of Israel was very similar to that of individual believers. There were times in Israel's national life when they were prosperous and did well. Often, in their prosperity the people would not listen to God and found little time for worship. In difficult times they turned to the methods and techniques of the people around them, often ignoring the one and true God altogether as they worshiped idol gods.

There were long periods when they would not hear the prophets and ignored the place of God in their lives. Strangely, they did this while continuing to carry out most of the rituals that they had begun to perform mechanically, with little feeling or spirit. They made sacrifices, participated in the rituals and came to the right places on the Sabbath Days, yet they were not keeping the vows that they had privately made to God. They would not pay attention to God's messengers, so God interrupted their prosperity and brought them a word.....first hand.

One way to understand Psalm 50 is to read it from the context of God interrupting the national chain of events with an attention grabbing moment such as that described in verse 2 and 3. The second way is to see God interrupting the flow of our individual lives with an attention grabbing moment that speaks to us individually instead of Israel as a whole nation.

What is the message that God wanted Israel to hear?

He told Israel then and now believers by comparison, that he was aware of how they adhered to the requirements of the Mosaic law. He said he understood and appreciated the sacrifices they made toward him. However, he wanted them to know that the glory is not in simply participating in the ritual of sacrifice, but in sacrificial living and living with an attitude of gratitude. Thus from verse 7 to verse 13 he says that he doesn't really need their sacrifices. He is not hungry and does not need the nation to give him of that which is already his.

The point that he wanted to make is imbedded in verse 14-15, if we want to please God we must offer him continuous thanks and praise, and then keep our vows to him. Moreover, when we are in trouble, we glorify God when we allow him to deliver us. He is glorified through our deliverance.

Matthew Henry puts it this way, "God demands the heart. How can human inventions please him, when repentance, faith, and holiness are neglected? In the day of distress we must apply to the Lord by fervent prayer. Our troubles, though we see them coming from God's hand, must drive us to him, not drive us from him. We must acknowledge him in all our ways, depend upon his wisdom, power, and goodness, and refer ourselves wholly to him, and so give him glory. Thus must we keep up communion with God; meeting him with prayers under trials, and with praises in deliverances."

There was also a word for the unbelievers too.. God is not pleased. But verse 23 makes it plain that those who praise God best glorify him by ordering his life "aright" to receive the full benefit of God's salvation.

We have a Sponsor

Today, every true believer acknowledges that they live sponsored lives. Most will acknowledge that they are unable to accomplish anything on their own without the power of God, who is the wind beneath their wings. Paul speaking to the philosophers of Athens as they pondered the unknown God, tried to help them understand that our God is not distant but personal and responsive. In Acts 17:28 he said, "For in him we live, and move, and have our being..." God acts as our sponsor in three ways:

HE MENTORS US: A mentor is a person who teaches us what we know, then uses his influence to create opportunities for us to advance. A mentor takes us under his tutorship and shows us the ropes of our life's walk, points out the pitfalls and helps us to avoid the dangers. Those without a mentor find it more difficult to succeed. Elijah and Elisha are the perfect example of the mentor/tutor relationship. Elisha walked with Elijah constantly. He observed and learned from the old prophet. When Elijah prepared to go home to glory riding on a fiery chariot, Elisha asked for a double portion of gifts and Elisha's mantle fell upon him.

God mentors every believer in the same way. The student of the Word walks with him and talks with him on a daily basis. When the right time comes, God opens doors for his proteges who have prepared themselves to walk in the light.

CO-SIGNS FOR US: Those who are young or unable to stand for themselves often need a co-signer. Co-signers are persons who pledge their resources and good names to give others the opportunity to establish their own resources and good names. The co-signer actually makes a loan in which another person gets the money but they assume the legal responsibility. Many young people have been able to get their first car or furniture for their homes, thanks to co-signers who put up their good name to help them establish a name.

Spiritually, Jesus says tells every believer that if we lose ourselves in his will that he will co-sign our life's needs. John 14:13-14 puts it this way, "And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son.

UNDER WRITES US: An underwriter is a person who takes care all of our expenses. The underwriter is the provider or producer.When we see God as our provider we understand why Abraham described him as Jehovah-Jireh or "God will provide." Believers across the centuries have learned that God does sponsor and underwrite the needs of his people. David wrote is Psalm 23, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want." The word sponsor could easily replace shepherd and God's role as our provider becomes clear. Paul writing to the Philippians put it this way in Philippians 4:19, "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Combined, the preponderance of scripture teaches that God is truly the underwriter of our life's experiences. This makes the words of the song writer even more meaning "Without him I could do nothing. Without him I'd surely fail. Without him my life would be drifting, like a ship without a sail!"

A Word From Our Sponsor

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that since we all live sponsored live, every now and then we must hear a word from our sponsor.

Only the foolish believe they can ignore their sponsors and still enjoy the same level of sponsorship.

It's a foolish child that believes he or she can ignore their parents by walking way, shutting up in a room or turning the music up loud. It's foolish because the shoes they walk on, the door they shut and the music they turn up loud are all provided by their sponsor. At home, every now and then, there has to be a word from the sponsor.

It's a foolish employee that fees he can enjoy a decent salary but skip staff meetings and ignore the instructions of the employer. Some would rather go fishing or lay back in their home. It's foolish because it's the sponsor that provides the income to pay the note on both the boat and the house. At work, every now and then, there has to be a word from the sponsor.

There are many who treat God the same way. He is our sponsor, but many feel they can ignore him, refuse to be in his presence and neglect listening to him speak and still enjoy his sponsorship at the same time.

We should be careful in this because, "it's not nice" to ignore your sponsor. When we put our fingers in our hear and tell God we don't want to hear, he has a way of interrupting our program whether we want him to or not and announce:

"And now a word from our sponsor.!"

Sometimes, God interrupts our program to give us a word that provides us with direction! Jonah didn't want to hear that word and only heard it after he spent three days in the belly of a great fish!

Sometimes, God interrupts us to give us a word of encouragement. That's what the disciples found one night as they were wrestling with empty nets. Jesus came walking on the water saying

"Be not afraid, it is I." In the midst of our troubles the word from God is, "Be not afraid!"

Sometimes, God interrupts our mourning of loved ones to bring us a word. It's the same word that David heard when he wrote in Psalm 121, "I will lift up my eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and earth!"

Sometimes, God interrupts us as we feel sorry about our empty barrels and gives us a word. It's the same word he gave a widow woman one day, trust in the Lord and keep going to the barrel, he will provide!

When the world became self consumed and felt it did not need God, our sponsor decided to interrupt the flow of events on earth and send a word!

John says "In the beginning was the Word, and Word was with God and the Word was God"

Today, brothers and Sisters there is a word from our sponsor!

The word from our sponsor brings hope for the hopeless!

The word from our sponsor brings peace in the midst of confusion!

The word from our sponsor brings, confidence in the midst of doubt!

The word from our sponsor brings, joy in the midst of sadness!

One day the word took up an old rugged cross and carried it to Calvary!

He died for our sins but Early Sunday morning he arose to complete our victory!

Thank God for a Word from Our Sponsor! Jesus...the word of God!

Bloopers

Scripture: "Then I said, I am cast out of thy sight; yet I will look again toward thy holy temple. And the LORD spake unto the fish, and it vomited out Jonah upon the dry land." Jonah 2:4-10

Introduction

Have you ever said or done something, then wished you hadn't? Most of us can remember a time when we said a few words that we later wished we hadn't said. There were even times when we did some things that we should not have done. They proved to be mistakes. Sometimes they were serious mistakes that altered relationships or whole life directions. Any person who strives to accomplish anything in life is bound to make mistakes. The only ones who can completely avoid mistakes are those who attempt nothing in life. Mistakes are inevitable and unavoidable. It has been said that if mistakes were drops of water, each person living would need a swimming pool to contain all of our blunders and errors. Mistakes are an undeniable fact of life.

Mistakes are not limited to the ignorant and uninformed. Even our brightest and smartest make mistakes. Consider the case of the mistaken scientists. A group of the world's smartest scientist concluded that enough scientific data and machinery existed to resolve any human problem scientifically, eliminating the need for God. Since science could match anything that was expected from God, the need for churches, prayer and praise and even God himself had outlived its usefulness, in their view. They drew straws and decided which of them would tell God that he should butt out of the daily affairs of mankind. The one that was picked walked up to God and said, "God, we've decided that we no longer need you. We're to the point that we can do everything you do. We can make it rain. We can predict the weather. We can fly in outer space. We can even clone people, so why don't you just go on and get lost." God listened very patiently and kindly until the scientist finished talking. Then God said, "Very well, how about this, let's say we have a man making contest." The scientist conferred with his associates and they agreed to the contest with God. The contest was to make a man. The rule was they had to make a man just like God did it in the old days with Adam. The scientists set up a lab, brought out their machinery and prepared for the contest. When the buzzer sounded one scientist quickly reached down and grabbed a handful of dirt to put into his machine when suddenly God looked at him and said,. "I said we were doing this the way I did it with Adam, You got to get your own dirt!" That's when the scientist realized they had made a mistake.

In the 1980's there was a television show that focused on the bloopers made in movies. These were the out takes or mess ups actors made while making the films. They were humourous. They made us laugh because we knew the actors got a chance to shoot the scene again and do it correctly. The director simply called for, "Take Two!"

Wouldn't it be nice if we could receive a "Take Two!" every time we commit a serious blunder in real life? On one level, such second chances are not possible. Because time is irreversible, we cannot neatly undo our mistakes. We cannot cast our real-life bloopers on the cutting room floor. Wouldn't it be nice to hear life's director say, "Take Two!" which would give us another chance to relive certain parts of our lives that we sort of messed up? On the second take we'd probably shoot the scene without our initial blunders.

As Christians, we are happy with the truth that God gives us second chances spiritually. It really doesn't matter how bad we messed up the scene, he has graciously provided us with another opportunity through offering us mercy and forgiveness. Have you made any mistakes? If you're willing to spiritually try again, God will gladly say, "Take Two!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Jonah as God gives him a second chance to accomplish his will.

Jonah was a great prophet who was given a command by God to preach to the enemies of his people for the purpose of avoiding God's anger and restoring them to the righteous path. Jonah did not like his instructions. He thought there was better use for his life than to simply waste it on the enemies of his country. Moreover, Jonah did not actually want his enemies to repent. If they did, they would be spared the promised destruction of God. Whatever his reasons were, Jonah decided to rebel against God. He refused to go to Nineveh and tried to sail in a different direction. That proved to be a big mistake

On board a ship sailing away from the course God had given him, Jonah came face to face with the power of God. God caused a huge wind to shake and rock the ship in such a way that everyone present feared for his life. In desperation, the men on board cast lots to determine which of them had caused the great storm by offending their god. That person would be sacrificed to their god. Jonah decided to participate in the lottery...that too was a mistake. The die fell upon him by some miraculous stroke of destiny. The men reluctantly threw Jonah overboard to satisfy the demands of his God. Jonah thought death by drowning would help him escape the will of God.

That was a mistake too, because he fell into a fate worse than death. He was swallowed whole by a giant fish. In the midst of darkness and digestive juices, he came to himself and realized that it was a mistake to run from the power of God.

He said, "When my soul fainteth within me" that he would seek the Lord. It took three days and three nights of darkness and utter desperation before he repented for his mistake. Jonah told God to give him another chance and he would "Pay that that I have vowed," promising a reversal of direction if he was given another chance.

Despite the fact that Jonah had disobeyed him and openly defied him, God forgave him and caused the fish to spit him onto the bank. Armed with a second chance from God, Jonah went forward to do as God commanded. Eventually the people of Nineveh were saved. It happened because Jonah listened to the words of God and was given a second chance.

The idea of a second chance is best illustrated by Jonah who lived a godly life most of the times, but on at least one occasion defied him. Jonah, representing the modern believer, shows how God can take us in the middle of our wrong doing and give us a second chance.

Two Types of Mistakes

Today, many of us share Jonah's dilemma. Propelled by a desire to accomplish our own will rather than God's will, often we ignore the warnings of relatives, spiritual leaders and others who mean us well and set a life course in the opposite direction than the one God has chosen for us. For some, these choices have resulted in serious mistakes. Two types of mistakes made are:

IGNORING GOD'S WILL IS A MISTAKE: There are many believers who have attempted to ignore God's will for their lives while they chart their own personal course. These are the instances where we sense what God wants us to do but refuse to do it because it conflicts with our personal agenda.

We sense God wants us to teach, but we reject that because it won't bring fame and riches.

We sense that God wants us to marry and settle down, but we reject that because it limits our options.

We sense that God wants us to lead a more sacred life, but we reject that because we fear it will minimize our fun.

Ignoring God is a serious mistake. From Adam and Eve's decision to disobey God in the Garden of Eden to Israel's numerous rebellions against God in the wilderness, the biblical record shows that it is a mistake for believers to ignore the will of God because it can have tragic and disastrous outcomes. David is one of the bible's best examples of a good man almost destroyed by mistakes. Adultery and murder ranked highest among his mistakes, but David came to himself and asked God to "create in me a clean heart oh God." In Psalm 143:10 David wrote, "teach me to do thy will for thou art my God, thy spirit is good, lead me to the land of uprightness."

Jesus set the example. In the garden, faced with his own desire to take an easier more comfortable path through life rather than go to Calvary, he told God, "Nevertheless, not my will but thy will be done."

TRYING TO RUN FROM GOD IS A MISTAKE: If the lesson of Jonah teaches us anything, it is the truth that running from God is a mistake. It is a race we can't win. Being a prophet, Jonah knew the nature of God. The voice that spoke to him in the night could not be out distanced by simply moving to a different city. God is everywhere. Running from God is fruitless, because when God gets ready for us, he will find us. Elijah discovered that truth when he hid from God in a cave, only to hear God speak to him in the silence of his cave, in a still soft voice. Though he hid behind trees in the Garden, Adam discovered that he couldn't hide from God. We should pay close attention to Jonah because his flight from God endangered the lives of others. The wind and waves that tossed the boat upon which he rode was not intended for the other men on the boat, but others were being threatened by his vain attempts to run from God.

Moreover, we should note that running from God is futile because there is no place to go. The immortal words of Joe Louis are applicable in this instance, "You can run, but you can't hide." There are many who attempt to avoid God by staying away from worship services and keeping their distance from religious activities. By doing so they hope to run from God. Some don't run at all, they casually assume a nonchalant manner and stroll about their own business. To get their attention, God often has to rock the boat! That often has tragic consequences.

When David tried to run from God he came to the conclusion that he wrote in Psalm 139:8-10 "If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there."

A Second Chance

Finally, brothers and sisters, while most of us have made our share of mistakes, we are encouraged to know that despite our mess ups, God does offer us a second chance.

The second chance is the opportunity to shoot the same scene again, using the original script but to get it right this time.

Does your present relationship represent a second chance? The mistakes of your first relationship have been edited from the final run. You now have a chance to play the part by God's script, without the bloopers that destroyed previous efforts?

Are your family affairs enjoying a renewal? That's God's second chance at work.

Are you embarked on a business venture that slumped or failed in your first try. God's second chance is at work!

Have you started a new course in life after trying a life of club hopping, one night stands, and going no where relationships? Then you know what it means to have a second chance!

The beauty of the Christian life is that we give our lives to a God who is willing to give us a second chance!

A second chance, gives us an opportunity to do right instead of wrong!

A second chance, helps us to stand for something this time, instead of falling for everything!

A second chance, helps us find strength to overcome our weaknesses!

A second chance, helps us elevate principle over practicality!

A second chance, give us the faith to achieve the impossible and to dream the improbable!

Consider the slothful young woman who suddenly became active in her church. Members were surprised to see her in prayer meeting, bible study and volunteering in church ministries. When asked the reason for her sudden change she said a few months earlier she had been club hopping one Saturday night, when we was accidently shot by a bullet intended for someone else. The bullet lodged near her spine, but doctor's didn't remove it. "They told me they couldn't move it because it was too close to my spine. They said be careful, because any move in the wrong direction could end my life. When I saw I was able to walk out of that hospital. I decided God was giving me another chance. I decided it was time to move in the right direction!"

I'm glad God gave me another chance!

Another chance to praise him for his wonderful works!

Another chance to glorify him for being so good!

Another chance to lift him up for saving my soul!

Another chance to tell somebody about Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Another chance to tell somebody how he arose from the grave!

Another chance to tell somebody how he lives in my life today!

I'm so glad, God gave me a second chance!

When Doves Stretch Their Wings

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 16, 1999

SCRIPTURE: And I said, Oh that I had wings like a dove! Then would I fly away, and be at rest. Psalm 55:6

Introduction

Have you ever wished you could just get away from it all? There are times when even the best of us envy the birds of the sky and wish we had lives that were as care free as theirs appear. We struggle with goals and objectives, successes and failures, pros and cons, do's and don'ts and they seem to just fly with ease, without a care in the world. We wrestle with bills, troubles, misunderstanding, problems and confusion and they seem to rise above the clouds and float out of sight. In moments when we are feeling low, we often envy the birds and want to fly.

For some, even flying in an airplane would be different. Consider the back wood couple that always watched airplanes from their shack in the woods. Pa wanted to fly. Each year they went to the county fair with their hound dog "Duke" and saw the fellow who offered plane rides. Pa wanted to ride but Mama said it cost too much. Pa said, "Ya know Ma, I'd like ta get a ride in that theah aihplane. And every year Ma would say, "I know Pa, but that aihplane ride costs ten dollahs.... and ten dollahs is ten dollahs. When he tried to insist she grabbed him by the ear and pulled him away. For several years she told him the same thing, "Ten dollars is ten dollars!" twisted his ear and pulled him away. Finally Pa said, "By Jeebers, Ma, I'm 71 yeahs old. If I don't go this time I may nevah go." Ma replied, "Pa, that there aihplane ride is ten dollahs...and ten dollahs is ten dollahs. " The pilot over heard them and said, "Folks, I'll make you a deal, I'll take you both up for a ride. If you can stay quiet for the entire ride and not say ONE word, I won't charge you. But one word, just one word, and it's ten dollars." They agreed and up they went. The pilot did all kinds of twists and turns, rolls and dives, but not a word was heard. He did it one more time; still nothing. So he landed. He turned to Pa as they came to a stop and said, "By golly, I did everything I could think of to get you to holler out, but you didn't." Pa grabbed hold of old Duke and said, “Well, I was gonna say something when you turned upside down and Ma fell out...but ten dollahs is ten dollahs! ...Some want to fly real bad.

Believe it or not, like the birds of the sky, every believer has flying power. Flying power in this context is not the kind that allows you to take to the air like a bird but the kind that gives each believer the ability to soar above the concerns of this life where they can see from a different perspective. Flying Power helps us to reach beyond this life’s troubles and woes and peek into the sublime. Flying Power even gives us the ability to take spiritual wings, when the time comes, and leave this world behind.

Generally, young believers are compared to doves. Like young believers their lives are fragile and short lived. They flutter with beauty, coo with innocence and the poets tell us that while we often see doves as they fly, that dove’s cry. The average dove lives between three and five years about the same as (25 to 30 human lives). In this time doves develop a homing instinct that is unique and peculiar. No matter how far away a dove strays or is taken away from home, doves can always find their way home. The female usually lays two eggs and nourishes them until they hatch. She keeps them close to the nest until they develop a homing instinct themselves. After a few years a dove may leave the nest perched high and never return. High in the sky she may be seen soaring on the wind, never to return again.

As believers, we know we possess flying power. It is the power to soar above our circumstance. We always stay prepared for we don’t know the day or the hour that the Lord will send a message that it’s time to come home. We know the way. It’s in our very soul. When the time comes, like a dove, we stop whatever we are doing and stretch our wings and fly!

Exposition

This text focuses on David who expressed his desire to simply soar above the problems of the world and fly away.

David was a young man when he killed Goliath and became a national hero. Some scholars think he was just a teen. As a young adult he battled life and always tried to do the right thing. Yet he was often misunderstood and ostracized. He was hunted by the king and targeted for execution. At times, his tug of war lifestyle frustrated him to the point that he often lamented. In the 55th Psalm he vented his frustration and said he wished that he could just be as free as a dove and simply fly away.

Doves are regular figures in biblical history. Writers have referred to them in a variety of ways to express a variety of emotions through the use of metaphors. When Noah floated on the ark for over a year he sent out a dove to see if there was hope of dry land soon. He knew the bird would return, because doves are actually small homing pigeons. When he opened the window and the dove did not return, he knew the dove had found dry land and stayed there long enough to call the new place home. When the dove did not return, Noah knew the dove had another home. It was a strange case where the bird’s failure to return was actually a sign of hope.

Doves symbolize promise, peace and humility. When Jesus was baptized the dove's presence above him symbolized God's promise. When Jesus sent out his disciples through the world, he told them to be as wise as serpents but as harmless as doves.

Doves are peaceful! Doves are harmless!

However, at the right time, doves can stretch their wings and fly away!

Homing Instinct.

One of the main responsibilities of parents is to help their children develop an appreciation for family and home. That does not come naturally, it is taught by precept and example.

Parents teach their children the importance of family unity, brotherly love and respect. These values are essential to the development and growth of a family.

People who buy doves and try to raise them in their own homes learn a unique thing about their nature. The first thing they learn is that their homing instinct is portable. In essence, if you buy doves in California and bring them to New York, the doves learn that their new home is New York in time. Those in the dove raising profession call the process "homing." By this they mean teaching the doves to know their new homes.

In a similar sense, Christian youth are taught to know the ways of home and the way home on two different spheres.

THE WAYS OF HOME: Young people don't learn the way a home operates out of a book. They don't study a book. They watch their parents. Christian parents know that the best gift they can give their children is the example of a Christian home in operation. Fathers show their children how to love a wife, provide for a household and live honestly and decently. Mothers show their daughters how a wife should be and their sons see in her, the fine qualities they should seek in a wife. Youth who are reared in Christian households soon learn the ways of home. They see how a home celebrates. They see how a home handles trouble and crises. They see how a home mourns. They learn the ways of home.

THE WAY HOME: One of the first things a parent teaches a child that reaches the proper age, is to know their address and phone number. They want that child to know where they live and be able to tell someone else how to get them home if they get lost along the way. Knowing the way home is important, so some families play games with their children to see if they can give directions to someone to tell them how to get them home.

SPIRITUAL INSTINCTS: While every good parent wants to be sure that their children know the way to their physical address, they also want them to know the Lord. That's a part of their home training. Good parents take the time to see that their children attend church, Sunday School and participate in learning activities that will help them to know the ways of their other home, the one not made by hands.

Good parents want them to know how to pray, to respect God and the people of God. Good parents work hard to spiritually "home" their children because they know the day is coming that they may be called to it and they want them to be prepared.

Understanding the ways of the kingdom of God is learned at home, but good parents also want the children to know the way home.

Despite the best efforts of parents, children may not do things that they have been taught. Like the Prodigal Son of the bible, there are some that simply feel they must travel into the far country. Some don't attend church as they should. Some, once away from their nest, attempt to fly without parental support and go in every direction except the way they were taught. Knowing this truth, many good parents, spend considerable time with their children while they are young trying to make sure that they know the way home! That's important because, even if the child drifts away from home and gets distant from home, he knows the way back!

Like the dove, once the homing instinct has locked in, it doesn't matter how far away life has taken them, believers know how to stretch their wings..

...in a second, before a breath can be drawn,

..before a heart can take a beat,

...before an eye can blink... they know how to stretch their wings and fly!

When Doves Fly

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that when doves don't return to your house, they are on their way home!

That's the message that Noah learned on the Ark. Even though the dove found dry land upon which to rest its feet, it would have still returned to the ark if it considered the Ark home. If the dove did not return, it had made another home.

At some point in every believer's life he or she accepts the reality that he or she needs a house down here and a home over yonder.

Jesus said no man knows the day or hour that we shall be called to our home over yonder, so each believer is encouraged to watch day and night.

Any day or second we may be called home. We must constantly be ready to stretch our wings!

Believing parents can rest easy when they have taught their children how to stretch their wings!

That's why good mothers tell their children so much about Jesus! How he died out on Calvary and arose to give them a new home in glory!

Daughter, In the face of failure, stretch your wings!

Son, In the face of difficulties, stretch your wings!

Children, In the face of persecution, stretch your wings!

When people talk about you and put your name on the highway... stretch your wings!

When your way gets dark and you can't see your way, say, "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know. If thou withdraw thyself from me, whither shall I go?"

When disappointments come look at the little bird in the sky and say, "Why should I be discouraged? Why should the shadows come? Why should my heart be lonely and long for heaven and home. For Jesus is my portion. A constant friend is he. His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me!

Children be ready, for one of these days, it may be morning night or noon! It may be on a quiet afternoon while you're talking on the phone...You don't know when! You don't know where....there will come a call from glory....be ready to stretch your wings!

One glad morning when this life is over, I'll get a call from glory!

In that moment, in the twinkling of an eye, I'll put the world on hold, drop the receiver and stretch my wings and..

Fly!

Fly!

Fly Away!

Ain't No Danger in God's Water

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 17, 1999

SCRIPTURE: Paul said to the centurion and to the soldiers, Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved. Act 27:31

Introduction

How close are you to achieving your goals? Have you ever stopped to measure your own progress. Most organizations pause occasionally to review their progress toward stated goals. Whether it is the corporate sector or private enterprise, it always helps to know that you are sailing on the right ship and that the ship is going in the right direction.

Sometimes those who pursue a certain course in life give their best, but feel that their best is not enough. Sometimes, overwhelmed by the plethora of problems and frustrations that surround them, they simply give up and abandon ship.

On July 4, 1952 Florence Chadwich, aged 34, waded into the water off Catalina Island and began her 21 mile swim toward California. If she had completed her journey, she would have been the first woman ever to accomplish this feat. The water was ice cold, and the fog was so heavy, that Florence could hardly see the boats in her own party. Sharks often began to attack Florence as she swam and men armed with rifles in the boats surrounding her had to drive them off with carefully aimed shots. But the constant numbing cold of the water was her toughest problem. Fifteen hours after she began, she asked to be taken out, her muscles sluggish and unresponsive due to the frigid water. Her mother and trainer, along side in the boat, told her they were near land. They encouraged her not to quit. But as she looked ahead, all she could see was the dense fog.....so she gave up and asked to be taken out of the water. When they pulled her out, she was only a half mile from the California coast! Only a small fraction of her journey was incomplete....she almost did it. Later, when Florence's body began to thaw, the shock of failure finally hit her. To a reporter she blurted out, "Look, I'm not excusing myself. But if I could have SEEN the land, I might have made it."

There are many today who give up personal pursuits because their efforts seem fruitless. Coaches burdened with losing teams throw in towel when the team continues a losing streak. Corporate executives resign for top paying jobs because it appears their efforts are in vain. Even individuals abandon worthy causes, noble projects and great undertakings because it seems that no one cares or pays any attention.

There are many church members who began their journey on the Old Ship of Zion but have lost their zeal and inspiration. Many who were once on fire to change the world, champion the poor, lift up Christ and live cleaner, holier lives have dulled enthusiasm. Instead of the fireballs of energy they once were, they have shriveled to fleeting shadows of what they once were. There were some who came to Christ under the false notion that it would mean riches, prosperity, health and wealth. They were not prepared for the storms that were to come and many have abandoned the ship.

As the church celebrates its anniversary, it looks back at the distance traveled to measure its progress. Anniversary celebrations look back, but they also look forward to remind every traveler on the sea of life, that the goal is near, the time is short and there is less time in front of us than there is behind us.

As Christians, we celebrate anniversaries to see where we have been and where we are going! We know that our salvation is not in abandoning the Christian life and the church, but our salvation comes only if we "abide in the ship." If we abide in the ship, the waters may become treacherous but we will not fear because, "there ain't no danger in God's waters."

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul onboard a ship whose crew had become disenchanted and were about to flee.

Paul was on board the ship, as a prisoner, along with 275 other people. He was being sent to Rome to appeal his case to Ceasar. On the way, the ship was accosted by two weeks of violent storm that battered the 276 people on board. Not only did they face the terrible dangers of the storm, but, as they drifted they heard the frightening roar of breakers in the distance. They did not know where they were nor what kind of strange land they might be coming upon nor what kind of shore it would have. When it was pitch dark, in the middle of the night, their fear increased as they heard the breakers pounding against the rocks. They feared their lives were in danger of being lost so they cast down four anger to slow the drift of the ship until they could learn where they were.

If they could have seen their location in the dark it would have been easier. If they could have plotted their position by the stars they would have known where they were, but they couldn't see their location, adding to the stress of the moment.

The sailors on board felt their efforts were useless. They had given their best and the ship still appeared to be aimlessly drifting to destruction. Even though God had revealed to Paul that they would make it to dry land without the loss of one, they were nevertheless disheartened. Paul kept saying, God has promised them that each would make their destination without the loss of a life, but they were not listening.

The sailors decided that continued effort was futile, so they decided to abandon ship and save their own lives, leaving the rest to survive the best way they could. Paul learned of their plan to abandon ship and told the centurion that was in charge of the ship, "Unless these men stay in the ship, you cannot be saved."

Ultimately, the people on board all made it to shore, without the loss of one, just as God had promised.

The winds subsided. The turbulence of the sea quieted. God's word and prediction of safety for those who remained on the ship was proven true.

Where are we going?

Every member of a church is happier and more at ease when they know the direction the ship is taking. They are even more encouraged when they can see some signs of progress toward stated goals and objectives.

At anniversaries the local church lifts itself above the fog of everyday circumstance to take a bird's eye view of its journey past, present and future. It's a way of peering above the clouds, to see the land. With respect to the functions of the church, are we getting closer to the land or should we abandon ship.

EVANGELISM: The main function of any church is to save souls. It is the great measuring rod of ministry. As the church looks at its journey, it remembers Jesus' great commission in Matthew 28, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost.." Have the evangelism and outreach efforts of the congregation shown any progress toward reaching stated goals? Buildings, budgets and activities are generally meaningless if they do not ultimately result in the saving of souls. Is the church going in the right direction? Any congregation that reaches out for the lost with a missionary zeal will see souls saved, the larger the number of its membership that shoulders the task the greater result. The church IS saving souls! It IS going in the right direction. Stick with the ship!

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION: Jesus said, "teaching them to observe." The teaching ministry of every congregation must be meaningful, and far reaching. Its aim should be discipleship or making Christians prepared to serve. Moreover, its secondary objective should provide instruction to the congregation in Christian living, family improvement, single living, personal management, Christian careers and other areas that help individual members grow and learn. Is the church going in the right direction with respect to Christian Education? Is there a strong program of Christian Education involving leadership training, Sunday bible schools and regular bible study? The church IS teaching! It IS going in the right direction. Stick with the ship!

MISSIONS: The great commission also called upon the church to become missionaries. Its aim should be to support the preaching of the Gospel on the missionary fields in Africa, Asia and other areas of the world while at the same time supporting missionary fields in the local community. Many churches have mistakenly labeled mission work as that of the "Women's Department" but the church has a mission, not just the women. The mission is not to sit around and read books about mission and sip coffee!

The mission is to DO mission work. Mission work is seeking ways to help the poor, needy and downtrodden to help themselves. Mission work is helping the helpless and providing assistance to the homeless. Is the church marching toward its missionary objective? Is the support for the foreign mission and home mission strong and vibrant in the congregation? If it is then, then the church IS going in the right direction. Stick with the ship!

FAMILY DEVELOPMENT: The program of every church congregation should be family friendly. It should involve activities that encourage family unity, cooperation and growth. Families want to know if the church is reaching our children. Is the church helping to provide opportunities and activities that will challenge and motivate them to reach their highest potential in Christian living, bible knowledge and personal development?

Churches should provide growth opportunities for singles and married couples seeking ways to grow stronger in the Lord through workshops, retreats and other activities designed to improve their quality of life. Churches should respond to the needs of the elderly, infirmed, and families dealing with the special problems of aging while providing adequate opportunity for seasoned members of the congregation to use their skills and talents in its ministries. Is the church moving in this direction? If it is, then the families on board would do best to stick with the ship!

WORSHIP AND PRAISE: The center piece of every congregation is bible centered worship and praise. Through worship the congregation lifts up the name of Jesus in ways that are meaningful to each generation and to each person. An atmosphere must exist where the believer that wants to lift holy hands can feel free to do so. The person that wants to beat a tambourine, stand and clap holy hands, shout or do the holy dance should feel free to do so. At the same time the church must promote a respect for the truth that God is also worshiped in the reverence of silence and meditation.

While the church encourages praise and adoration it must not forget that there are those who believe what the word says in Zechariah 2:13, "Be silent, O all flesh before the Lord, for he is raised up out of his holy habitation!" The church must appreciate the worship style of choice of every person without stigmatizing them with labels one way or the other. Worship and praise is important to the life of every congregation.

Members who neglect public worship and hearing the Gospel preached, usually dry up on the vine and receive little support in their quest to live the Christian life. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" Romans 10:17. If the church is moving in the right direction, then it is best to stick with the ship!

Ain't no danger

Finally brothers and sisters, the greatest reason to stick with the ship of Zion is that King Jesus is the captain!

When Paul told the Centurion Soldier, "Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved.," the words ring true to every believer today. Those who try to achieve personal goals and ambition by abandoning the church and their active involvement in its ministries are headed for disaster!

Abandoning ship has never been an option for the Saints, because they knew their only hope of surviving and triumphing over difficulties was to stay close to God.

Job, though surrounded by death, sickness and difficulty, refused to abandon ship. He said, "Yea thou he slay me, yet will I serve him!"

Joshua faced an impetuous crowd of people who wanted to go back to Egypt rather than tackle the promise land. Yet Joshua would not abandon ship, he said, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Saints don't abandon ship because as long as Jesus is the captain of the ship, there ain't no danger in God's water.

In the face of fear, faith in God gives us courage. There ain't no danger in God's water!

In the face of defeat, faith in God gives us victory! There ain't no danger in God's water!

In the face of failure, faith in God shows the way to success! There ain't no danger in God's water!

When Jesus is the captain, it doesn't matter how the storms of life rage!

When Jesus is the captain, it doesn't matter how the winds blow!

When Jesus is the captain, trials may come on every hand, but we stand firm because their ain't no danger in God's water!

Jesus! Somebody knows him!

Jesus! Mary's baby!

Jesus! The sweet Rose of Sharon!

Jesus! Our rock in a weary land!

Died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Don't worry about the winds and the waves!

There ain't no danger in God's water!

O Ye Dry Bones, Hear The Word of the Lord

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 24, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts." Ezekiel 37:11

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when you just didn't care anymore? What happened? Did you lose your enthusiasm? Energy? There are times when even the strongest believer throws up his hands in defeat in the face of overwhelming odds. These are times when the chance of victory seems remote; as the forces against us dwarf more the power we have to mount a reasonable defense. At such times we are likely to throw up our hands and lose hope.

Like a helium filled balloon that gradually loses air, a person who once floated on a high of inspiration and motivation can gradually descend to an untimely landing. In the work place, in school, homes and even in the church, there are millions of people who seem to have lost their will to go forward or pursue a course they once felt driven to follow. For all practical purposes, such people are dead to the causes they once held dear.

Even our society in general is beginning to reflect deathly symptoms. There appears to be a decline in godly inspired family values and morality in general. Those truths we once held dear have degenerated, for the most part into a mere shell of what was once important.

How dead is our society? Even a casual review shows a culture that has distanced itself from what we once believed to be true. We know our society is declining when we see:

-Teenagers deliver live babies and then leave them to die in a dumpster!

Black women described by black men and themselves as "hoes" and noone gets angry!

-We protect doctors who murder babies in mother's wombs and then prosecute men who kill animals.

-Some of the most beautiful girls are becoming lovers of other girls; while some of the most handsome men are holding hands with other men.

- Many youth praise the holy master on Sunday then pay tribute to another Master the remainder of the week!

Sometimes parents, frustrated over the failure of their children to excel in school give up hope. Marriage partners struggling in unresponsive relationships often dismiss their union as beyond repair and divorce. Schools completely dismiss some students as beyond hope and expell them. Society writes off the same children, and locks them away in detention centers for the rest of their lives. Educators feel frustrated when even their best efforts to revive test scores and student performance, result in dismal results.

Whenever a person or a society as a whole loses hope, it loses the breath that keeps them living and afloat, they diminish to a state similar to that of dry bones. They are lifeless. Their daily activity is minimized to simply getting through another day, without zeal, enthusiasm of motivation.

Is there hope for the generation? Is it beyond saving? If a person reaches such an all time low, can he be revived? Can she be motivated to rise up to live again? Is there any hope for the next generation?

As Christians, we are convinced that the word of God provides the answer to all of life's dilemmas, including our feelings of hopelessness. We know that if we hear the word of the Lord and act on it, his word shall provide the breath of inspiration we need to continue with vigor, despite the enormity of the tasks we face.

Exposition

This text focuses on Ezekiel as he gives a message of hope to the people of Israel.

This text is best understood in the context of its historic background. This text was written during a period when the Babylonian King Nebuchadnezzar had invaded Judah the second time (597 BC) to put down a rebellion by King Jehoiakim. But Jehoiakim had died (or was killed) and his son Jehoiachin who had ruled only eight months was taken captive to Babylon.

The Babylonian King took Israel's youngest, brightest, and most talented men and women back to Babylon. Among the 10,000 prominent leaders, soldiers, craftsmen and scholars was was Ezekiel, then 25 years old and in training to be a priest Ezekiel settled in his own house in a village near Nipper along the river Chebar in Babylonia. He prophesied for at least 22 years.

Not only were the Israelites reduced to second class existences in a foreign land, but they felt utterly isolated, utterly cut off from the God of their ancestors. YAHWEH, God of their people, had given their ancestors a land, a good land flowing with milk and honey, and had always been available to them through the temple built strong and solid in the heart of their land.

Now their land had been devastated and they had been torn from it. Their temple had been utterly destroyed, its vast wealth removed and callously hauled off to distant lands.

The people of Israel felt lost, forsaken, desperate. In their own words, "Our bones are dried up, and our hope is lost; we are cut off completely."

Even the young men like, like those in Ezekiel's age bracket, lost hope. They gave up trying.

Then God gave Ezekiel another of several visions two of which have become famous of the years: "The Wheel in the Middle of the Wheel" and the vision of the "Dry Bones in the Valley!"

This vision depicted the people of Israel who had been scattered into different lands. There spirit of national unity had reached an all time low. Their people were in Assyria, Judea, Babylon and many other places. They gave up hope of ever seeing their homeland again!

For many that feeling of hopelessness translated into a feeling of personal defeat as well. Known for being a people of great enthusiasm and inspiration, they hung their harps on the willow trees and asked, "How can we sing Zion's songs in a strange land?"

Ezekiel's vision portrayed a people completely restored, fully alive and living for God, once they decided to hear and abide by the word of God.

Dry Bones Situations

Today there are many who face dry bones situations daily. They face seemingly hopeless scenarios that frustrate them immensely. How do we face the dry bones?

DRY BONE STUDENTS: Often teachers express their anxiety at the lack of motivation, intellect or concern of some of their students. Often there are troublesome students in the classroom who seem to constantly disrupt the normal instructional flow. There are others who seem beyond reaching. Sometimes teachers dismiss problem students as hopeless and focus their attention on those who respond to their best efforts. Once any student accepts the designation of hopeless, they don't improve they get worse. If mother says, "You're just like your no good daddy!" If teacher says, "You're rotten to the core!" If adults say, "He's a bad apple!" It won't be long before that student starts to act accordingly. There is nothing more dangerous or troublesome in a school environment than a hopeless student. Hopeless students are not intimidated by any of the threats of the school system. Expulsion? So what, if the student is failing anyway! Suspension? It's a needed vacation for the hopeless student. Jail? It's no big deal for the student who has given up hope on being anything else except a criminal. The only solution is to inspire hope. This cannot be accomplished electronically or by any artificial means. It must come from the heart and soul of educators. Students must sense that someone believes in them. This is why coaches have more influence over students than even some parents. Some parents are often unsupportive or negative toward those activities that help inspire hope and self esteem in students...coaches fill the gap! For many students the coach is the one source of hope they know! God asked Ezekiel, "Can these bones live?" God's answer was "Yes!"

DRY BONE RELATIONSHIPS: Today there are millions of couples that are enduring what they feel are "dry bone" relationships. These may be marriages or courtships that are only shells of what they once were. Some marriages have reached a point where there is little if any communication between spouses. Many only share the same address, but don't even sleep in the same part of the house. Some are just hanging on out of respect for tradition or for the benefit of children. There are even dry bone courtships. These are relationships that are going no where. Partners are going in different directions and each is inconsiderate of the feelings and needs of the other. Hurt feelings, jealousy, tears and frustration are the a hallmarks of such relationships. The principals still see each other, but for all practical purposes the relationship is dead. Can such relationships be salvaged? Can they live again? Can they enjoy the happiness, fun and companionship they once knew? Any fire can be rekindled if there a few coals left. Where there is love there is hope! Why, because in "Love" there is "God" because "God is Love!" Though invisible to the naked eye, love is a powerful reality. Where there is love there is hope. Love endures. Love expects! Love appreciates! 1 Corinthians 13:7 puts it this way, "Beareth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." Can these bones live again? Yes, if they hear the word of God.

DRY SPIRITUALITY: There are many today whose spirituality has declined to meaningless ritualism. Rituals are part of liturgical process. They involve singing hymns, reading scripture, standing or sitting in certain ways and at prescribed times. The complement spirituality and provide a means for its expression, however, ritualism is not a substitute for spirituality. Believers who have a deep sense of spirituality go beyond the ritual to find God. They know him through their daily relationship with him. God is more than a meaningless tradition but a living presence. They serve him best by letting him live through them. Believers who lose sight of the great commission to go, teach, preach and minister to masses of the world, lose their sense of divine mission and calling. When that happens their entire religious experience is reduced to ritual. The man or woman who feeds the hungry senses God's presence in every bowl of food. There is a sense of mission in every kind act done in the name of the Lord. There is closeness to the divine that is developed from carrying out the divine will. Those who distance themselves from living out the mission of the Lord, usually experience a reduced spirituality. As they make noise and pretense in worship, they make plenty of smoke, but there is seldom a blaze of service.

Absent service to others there can no be real spirituality or knowledge of God. For when we merge with him we become his hands and feet for the mission. Can these bones live? Yes, if they hear the word of the Lord!

Hear The Word

Finally brothers and sisters, we must remember that bones, though dry, can live again!

Ezekiel was asked whether the bones in valley could live again. His response was "thou knowest!"

Despite his dismay at the miserable estate of the bones, Ezekiel knew that even dry bones can live again if empowered by the word of God.

What was told to Ezekiel is that the people could be restored first if they repented and then hear the word of God and then acted on it!

When they heard the word of the Lord, they were able to live again.

No matter how hopeless a situation appears, things change when God gets in the picture.

A family that seems on the virtual of destruction changes, when God gets in the picture!

A relationship that is on the rocks, can get a reprieve, when God gets in the picture!

A situation that seems beyond salvaging can be improved, when God gets in the picture!

The key for the dry bones was to "hear the word of the Lord!"

Today the solution is no less true, O' ye dry bones, hear the words of the Lord!

Are you looking for a fresh start and forgiveness from God? Hear the word of the Lord!

"If my people, which are called by name, shall humble themselves, and pray and seek my face, then will I hear from heaven, and forgive their sins and heal their land!"

Are you feeling alone? Hear the word of the Lord!"

"And Lo I'll be with you always, even until the end of the world!

Are you plagued by difficulties in your past? Hear the Word of the Lord!

"Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before"

Are you feeling dejected because of a lack of possessions? Hear the word of the Lord!

"I am come that they might have life and have it more abudandtly!"

When we hear the word of the Lord, the bones can live again!

The bones can come together because he lives!

Because Jesus came!

Because he died and arose!

These bones can live again!

Singing Noonday Songs At Midnight

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 7, 1999

SCRIPTURE:"And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them." Acts 16:25

Introduction

Have there ever been times when you could tell that you were going to have a bad day? What were the signs? Sometimes you can sense it before you get out of bed, especially if the time has changed and you forgot to set your clock or you discover that your hot water tank has burst! You know a bad day is coming when you're out of toothpaste, you burn your toast, or have no toast at all, your car won't start, the train sits on the track, but you finally get your child to school on time, only to learn that it's Saturday and there is no school! That's the beginning of a bad day!

On bad days you feel like the prisoner who escaped from a Florida jail and ran through the swamps all night long. He fought off snakes, mosquitoes and hound dogs. He made it through rows and rows of barbed wire and successfully eluded search lights before he dozed off to sleep. When he awoke the next morning, he found himself surrounded by men pointing guns at him. He had broken out of jail and in the darkness broken into a prison. That morning, he knew he was having a bad day! Bad days frustrate everyone, even those who thought they had a good night!

When we feel a bad day beginning, we often want to go back to bed, get up and start over! Bad days drain us and challenge us at the same time. That's when the darkness comes and it feels like midnight at high noon.

On good days we sing a merry song! We glide through the day singing, "We're Blessed, We're Blessed, We're Blessed!" On good days our response to everything is, "God is good all the time!" On good days we sing about the goodness of the Lord! On good days, we assume our places at work or school with unparalleled enthusiasm. On good days our faces smile and our personalities radiate! There is a brilliance about us that illuminates us. Everyone around us can sense that we are having a great day!

However, when we sense that there is a bad day coming and things are not going to be great, what song do we sing? When the midnight is approaching and we can see things getting dark, what is our response. What happens to the big beaming smile? The great feeling of victory we took to work on that great day, does it disappear on a bad day? Are we grouchy? Are we sad? If we had to sing a song when we face a day that is obviously going to be dark and dreary, what do we sing? There are some whose repertoire of midnight songs are best represented by B.B. King's best seller, "Every Day I Sing The Blues!" They cannot find a way to be cheerful in the midst of trouble. Believers on the other hand, hear the good news, see the clues and choose, rather than sing the blues, to praise a God who rules both the night and the day in the same way! Armed with the knowledge that God is in control of both the night and the day, believers approach midnight experiences different than non-believers. A believer's faith teaches him how to sing noon-day songs at midnight. In essence, we learn how to sing God's praises on bad days, just as we sing them on good days!

As Christians, we have learned that the God we serve is just as good at midnight as he is at noon. Whether it's the lion's den, fiery furnace or a shipped tossed on the waves of life, we can still sing his praises because, he is a good God all of the time!

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul and Silas as they demonstrated what it means to sing noonday songs at midnight.

One day the two men came upon a slave girl who had an evil spirit that enabled her to predict the future. The slave girl was extremely valuable to her owners, who were not concerned that she was possessed by an evil spirit. They were only concerned that her predictions, evil or otherwise, turned a profit for them.

Paul cast out the evil spirit "in the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 16.18). At once she was healed. The healing had economic consequences - she could no longer foretell the future. Her owners complained about their loss of fortune.

The Philippian businessmen told the Roman authorities that these Jewish visitors were teaching a religio illicita—an illegal religion. "These men are. . . advocating customs unlawful for us Romans to accept or practice," they said. And as a result, they added, "These men are. . .throwing our city into an uproar" (vv. 20-21). The apostles were disturbing the pax Romana, in other words. Additionally, the owners were appealing to the racial snobbery of the Philippian authorities. Philippi was a Roman colony whose residents, mostly Romans, were proud of their heritage and their government. They thought they were superior to everyone else. "These inferior Jews have come here to trouble us and teach us a religion that is illegal," the slave owners were saying.

Paul and Silas were seized and dragged before the Roman officials on the charge that they were Jews who were breaking the law which forbade proselytizing Roman citizens. They were stripped, whipped and thrown into the inner cell. That day had all of the markings of a real bad day.

Despite their circumstance, the two men still had positive spirits. Despite being jailed, beaten and falsely accused they remained joyful.

"About midnight Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns to God, and the other prisoners were listening to them" (v. 25).

The end result of their midnight worship is that God answered their prayers and praises by causing an earthquake that opened jail doors and led to their ultimate release.

Their ability to pray at midnight impressed the prisoners and the guards and won converts for Jesus!

Their ability to praise at midnight shined a light of hope that everyone around them could see.

They gave evidence, in this final moment, of how important it is to be able to sing noonday songs at midnight!

Preparing to Sing

The best way to deal with bad days is to prepare for them on good days. Just as those who prepare for musical presentations take certain steps, believers also prepare themselves for the storms of life, while the skies are clear. Good singers follow several steps, among them are:

KNOW THE WORDS: Good singers are those who know the words to a song. Very few entertainers sing our favorite songs to us using musical sheets. Good singers know the words of their songs. They sing best when the words also have a meaning for them. The words testify to truths and principles upon which the singer believes and thus they become alive for him or her. Thus a singer who sings, "He's an on time God," knows the truths represented by the words. That singer knows God and what he can and will do.

To be prepared for the storms of life every person must know the Word and "words" of God. Since John tells us that, "In the beginning was the word and the word was with God and the word was God." It is important for everyone to know "The Word" of God. Knowing God means to understand how he operates. When we know how God operates we are not intimidated by the storms of life because we know that although he appears to be asleep in the midst of our trouble, he will present himself in the nick of time and say, "Peace be still." Not only do we know "The Word" of God, we make sure that we know the "words" of God. When we know God's words, then we know what he has promised us and we are encouraged. We are encouraged because we remember that he promised, "never to leave me, never to leave me alone."

Our past experience with God helps us to know him. Our study of his written word helps us to know his words. When know God and his words, we are better prepared for the midnight.

WE MUST REHEARSE: All singers know the value of rehearsal. At rehearsal singers learn the expression of the song. They feel its mood and get a feel for its flavor. During rehearsals singers learn how their part fits in with those of others. At rehearsals they learn to read the signals of the director and know the silent but universal language of choir directors that indicates when they are to keep going, when to return and when to come to a halt. After a good rehearsal, singers are more confident of their ability to handle the demands of the presentation and are able to lift their voices in praise with boldness!

To sing noonday songs at midnight, believers must not miss the rehearsals. The word "rehearse" means to rehear. We are able to withstand the trials and troubles that life presents in the midnight with an upbeat spirit because we have built up our faith in the noon day! Romans 10:17 puts it this way, "Now faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." That means the more we hear the word of God, the more our faith is strengthened. The more we hear that God will make a way, the more we strengthen our faith to carry it out!

Those who are able to stand strong in the time of trouble, do so because their faith has been built upon years of "hearing the Gospel" and building their faith.

WE MUST BE ABLE TO SING THE TUNE, EVEN IF THERE IS NO MUSIC: The best singers are those who can sing with or without music. Under the best conditions, singers are accompanied by great musicians who embellish their songs with beautiful orchestrations and vocal accompaniment. These are usually described as backup. It is great to have backup, but the best singers are those who carry the melody in their hearts. With or without backup, they are still able to sing the tune, because the melody is in their heart.

When the melody is in his heart, a believer knows what to say and when. In the morning noon or midnight, a believer knows that it doesn't matter what the day brings, as long as God is still on the throne, all things will work to his good. She recites that at noonday and she remembers it at midnight.

What to do at Midnight

Finally brothers and sisters, this text gives us an example of what to do when midnight comes.

It illustrates the attitude that we should take into every midnight situation, which is the attitude that God is in control here as well.

In 2 Corinthians 4:8-9 Paul said, "We are hard-pressed on every side, but not crushed; perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not abandoned; struck down, but not destroyed." In 2 Corinthians 6:9 he said Christians were "known, yet regarded as unknown; dying, and yet we live on; beaten, and yet not killed; sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; poor, yet making many rich; having nothing, and yet possessing everything."

Thus, the word reminds every believer: "In the midnight, remember who you are!"

Even if circumstances plunge us into dark moments when we are tempted to get our heads bad, we should remember Ephesians 5:18, "Do not get drunk on wine, which leads to debauchery. Instead, be filled with the Spirit. Speak to one another with psalms, hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making music in your heart to the Lord, always giving thanks to God the Father for everything in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Thus, the word reminds us: "In the midnight, remember to sing your noonday song!"

Believers who face the midnight, face circumstances where they must stand alone. There is no backup. Friends have disappeared! Co-Workers who boldly encouraged us in the day are no where to be found at midnight! When your family and friends misunderstand you and those who are close to you doubt you, that's the time when it is hard to hear the music!

At midnight, we often to come to the reality that some whom we thought were our friends were not our friends at all. At midnight, it's hard to hear the music!

At midnight, the evidence of our failures flashes before us like neon lights for all the world to see! At midnight, it's hard to hear the music!

At midnight the Godly walk seems frustrating and unrewarding, because we see the ungodly doing so well! At midnight, it's hard to hear the music!

At midnight the saints act a little different than the rest of the world. People wonder how you are able to continue, although you are operating under such a heavy load.

They know you are shouldering a burden all by yourself, but you seem to demonstrate a confidence that could only come from God himself.

They know the music and the fanfare that once surrounded you and the crowds of friends that once backed you up have disappeared! The wonder what keeps you going!

At midnight, even if there is no music, believers still have the words inscribed upon their hearts. Though times get tough, they still know how to sing:

"If the world from you withhold of it silver and its gold and you have to get along with meager fare. Just remember in his word, how he feeds the little bird, and take your burden to the Lord and leave it there!"

Midnight is the time, when those who once helped you are no where to be found! Folks who know you are mystified that you keep praising God despite being alone.

What they don't know is that at midnight, even when we can't hear the music, believers can still sing the tune, "What a friend we have a Jesus. All our sins and griefs to bear. What a privilege it is to carry, everything to God in prayer!

Midnight is the time when everyone says, "I don't understand how you can be so high spirited! You have trouble all around you and nobody seems to be looking out for you! How can you be so happy?"

What they don't know is that midnight, even when we can't hear the music, a believer can still sing the tune, "Why should I be discouraged? Why should the shadows come? Why should my heart be lonely and long for heaven and home? When Jesus is my portion. A constant friend is he! His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me.."

I sing because I'm happy!

I sing because I'm free!

For his eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me!

At midnight every believer needs a song sing!

When trouble turns your bright day into darkness, you should be able to sing, "I'm so glad that trouble don't last always!

When the way gets dreary and you can't see a way to escape, we should be able to sing, "The Lord will make a way somehow!"

At midnight when the storms of life are raging, stand tall and sing, "My soul is anchored in the Lord!"

Out on Calvary the sky turned black!

Jesus hung with nails in his hands!

At midnight, somebody wrote a song for him sing!

"Go ahead, laugh at me!

"Go ahead, drive the nails in my hand!

But I'll rise again! Ain't no power on earth can keep me down!

It may look like midnight right now, but because he lives every believer can sing, "I'll rise again!

Living Single In A Married Church

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 13, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "But I would have you without carefulness. He that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord: But he that is married careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife. There is difference also between a wife and a virgin. The unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit: but she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband. And this I speak for your own profit; not that I may cast a snare upon you, but for that which is comely, and that ye may attend upon the Lord without distraction." 1 Corinthians 7:32-35

Introduction

Have you ever considered marriage? There are thousands of single believers who spend much of their time looking for a marriage partner. Men are looking for the ideal mate who has beauty, body and brains. The ideal woman for such a man is the woman who has the beauty and body of Miss America and the brains of an MIT honor scholar. With such high standards, many men are still looking for that ideal woman. Women are also looking for that ideal person. The want a man who has the muscles of Mr. America, a wall street check book, and the looks of Billy D. Williams. They want a man like Stella's, who can help them get their groove back. Many, both males and females find it difficult to live single in these difficult times. The temptation to step outside of the bounds of morality threatens at each term. Considering marriage is a serious step for a single person.

Some people are single by choice. Others don't have much choice. Consider old man Charlie. He was the oldest member of the Happy Hearts Baptist Church. Not only was he the oldest member, he was the only member who had reached his golden years without being married once. That fact amazed the members who finally asked him on his 90th birthday, why he was still single. He gave the members a toothless grin and said, "When I was young, there wasn't a woman anywhere that looked good enough for me!" When I was middle aged, I couldn't see where I was going for looking at every woman I saw. Now that I'm old, even if I see what I'm looking for, I can't do nothing with what I git, so I might as well stay single!"

The image of the single man or woman is that of a happy go lucky, wild, rolling stone that moves from place to place, and relationship to relationship with little thought of what it might mean for their personal future. While that is the image, it is not necessarily the case for every person who is single. There are millions of singles that contradict the stereotype.
They are moral, chaste, and conservative with their time, talents and resources. They are careful in their relationships and serious about endeavors in which they are involved. Being single is not a curse of youth or a state of being a victim in old age, it is an opportune time to be of greater service in the kingdom of God.

As Christians, we strive to give God the best we have everyday. We pray, worship and praise him constantly. We lift him up perpetually. The fewer our personal involvements, the more time we have to focus on the building of the kingdom, with the knowledge that in the fulness of time God will send the proper mate for the single man or woman who wants to be married to the work of building of the kingdom of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he gives a personal opinion on the advantages of the single life.

In writing to the Corinthians on this subject, Paul made it clear that he had not received a direction from God to speak on this subject, but offered them the advantage of apostolic counsel on the subject of single living.

Paul made it clear in his counsel that living single is not a moral issue at all. Persons who live single commit no sin or do wrong, simply because they choose to live the single life. In earlier passages he discussed the handling of sex drives and sexual immorality for either married or single. However, in this context, there is no discussion of morality as it relates to being single because simply "being single" is not a moral issue at all.

Since there is no moral issue involved, the Lord was silent on this subject. The Lord had not spoken to this either publicly during his ministry or in private in the revelations he gave to the apostle. Therefore, Paul says he does not speak with a command of the Lord. But he suggests that he is given this as a subject to be settled by apostolic guidance. Thus, Paul makes it clear that he is offering prayerful advice on the handling of singles with respect to the work of the church.

Paul's counsel is that the single life has its advantages.

Those who ae single are flexible and can adapt more quickly to changes or sudden crises or catastrophes. Paul referred to the perilous times of the biblical setting but it also applies to any perilous times, noting that those who work for the kingdom are better able to respond if they are single to any need for missionary outreach.

While Paul extolls the advantages of single living, he is not trying to put down marriage. He is trying to lift up singleness as a perfectly proper way of life. Those who choose it are not secondary citizens, he is saying. They are exercising an option that is available to every person. Each adult has the option of marrying or remaining single.

Those who marry, said Paul, have "worldly troubles" or increased responsibilities. These responsibilities, decrease one's ability and availability to respond to the outreach and evangelistic needs of the church.

Single living makes it easier to put the church and its work at the top of one's personal priority list. While the mandate to put God first applies to everyone, it is less difficult for those who are single, who do not have to make choices regarding the needs of a husband or a wife, weighed against the needs of their church.

Thus, Paul gives strong advice to the churches: promote single living because it is the opportune time for service to the outreach needs of the church.

Living Single

There are many today who are single, in a church that is married to Jesus Christ. There are some who are comfortable doing just that. Consider what happened when two men, both divorcees, were sitting around talking. One said he had joined an organization called "Marriage Anonymous." The other said he had heard of "Alcoholics Anonymous" but he had never heard of "Marriage Anonymous." "Well", said the first, "Marriage Anonymous" is for those of us who have married so many times and flunked out each time. What they do is give us this phone number. Each time we start feeling like we want to get married they send a woman to our homes, dressed like our former wives and saying the last thing we heard them say. The woman stays and does whatever it was that irritated us over and over again, until that marriage feeling disappears!"

We have the choice of being single or married but those who choose the single life are part of the church, the body of Christ, which is married to Jesus Christ himself. Thus we have the responsibility to make the following considerations:

LIVING SINGLE IS NOT FREEDOM TO LIVE IMMORALLY: While the bible encourages a person to live single, the purpose is not to encourage immoral living, but the freedom to work for Christ without the entanglements of marriage and family. Those who are single have the same obligation to live morally pure lives as those who are married. Fornication, adultery and other forms of immorality are just as unacceptable for singles as they are for everyone else. 1 Corinthians 6:15 puts it this way, "Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ? shall I then take the members of Christ and make them the members of a harlot? God forbid! Single living offers freedom from complications, but it does not offer the believer the freedom to be immoral.

LIVING SINGLE GIVES TIME FOR SELF DEVELOPMENT: Many singles have discovered that they are not ready for a mate, because they have not yet developed wholly into the Christian they desire to be. God is preparing a Christian mate for every Christian man and woman, but single believers may not be ready to receive what God has prepared, unless they themselves have progressed in their own spiritual development. Spiritual maturity implies the ability to prioritize our lives in a way that would please God. A spiritually mature life puts God first (Matthew 6:33). It is the life that places self in the background and pursues the wishes and demands of God first. Believers need time to assume this attitude. Once the kingdom of God has become a top priority, then a single believer is ready to receive the mate that God has prepared. Remember, while God is preparing a mate for you...he is also preparing YOU for somebody. Neither of you are ready for each other until both have assumed the attitude of following Christ fully. Singles who have not yet matured in their spirituality, may not even recognize the man or woman that God has prepared for them because they are looking for qualities that are not spiritual. However, once a believer sanctifies his or her life, they see life and their potential mates with a different eye, that does not always consider looks, money or any physical characteristic at all.

SINGLE BELIEVERS ARE MARRIED TO THE CHURCH: While a single believer is not married to an individual, he or she IS married to the church. It may sound strange, but every believer should follow Christ's example in this respect. Christ was single! He had not wife or mate, yet he was married to the church, referred to in Revelation as the "Bride of Christ." That means that single males work to provide for the church, protect the church and to see that the church grows in spirituality. Male singles love the church and its ministries to the point of sacrifice with respect to time, talent and resources. Female believers are also married to the church. They care for the church and nurture its children in the faith. They become the virtuous woman of Proverbs 31 with respect to the church. They are loyal to the church and seek to promote its ministries until death separates them. As the bride of Christ, they keep themselves spotless, always living in hope and faith.

Living in Faith

Finally, brothers and sisters, whether believers are single or married, they share one common bond, they are both trusting and believing in Jesus Christ!

It is just as easy to live a single secular life as it is to live a single spiritual life. But the reasons people give for not joining the church are similar to those given by those who refuse to get married.

There are some who say they don't want to get married because they are turned off by the marriage of others they have seen. They have seen cheating husbands and wives that slip around, so they don't want to get married.

There some who don't want to come to unite with Christ because they have seen so much cheating.

They have seen preachers, deacons and so many members who are married to the church but run around with the devil!

There are some who do not want commitments. They like the convenience of packing up and moving on whenever they feel like it. They won't marry anyone because they want to be like a rolling stone.

In the same sense there are those who shy away from hooking up with the church. They don't want to make any commitments. They want to be ready to move from one church to another, whenever the feeling hits them.

There are some who are afraid to fall in love. They are afraid if they let themselves go that they may give their hearts and souls away. Anytime they get close to making a commitment, they back away!

There are many who stay away from the church for the same reason. They are afraid they may fall in love!

There is a man that is in love with but us, but many of us are afraid to let him love us!

There is a man who wants to provide for our every need, but we are afraid to hold his hand!

There is a man who wants to give us life and give it more abundantly, but we are afraid to give him our lives!

Is there such a person?

Is there one who would love us so much that he would lay down his life for us?

The word of God says, "For God so loved the World that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on him, should not perish but have everlasting life!"

You can be single, but be married to church!

You can be single, and give your life wholly to God!

Whether you are single or married, God is still God!

He's the same God that wakes you up in the morning and puts you to sleep at night!

He's the same God who wipes the tears from your eyes and raises up your bowed down head!

Keep your hand in his hand!

Walk with him and talk with him!

For he loves you!

He loves you so much that he picked up and old rugged cross!

Died out on Calvary!

Arose after three days!

...And he's coming back again!

Whether you single or married...

He's coming back!

He's coming back!

For all who love him!

Jesus Loved "Sister"

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 19, 1999

SCRIPTURE:"Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus." John 11:5

Introduction

Have you ever wondered whether God cares about you and your family? At times it appears that God is not aware of our families. There are times when it appears that other families are spared hardships, trouble and frustration because God seems to care for them in ways that he has not cared for us. They appear happier, healthier and less burdened by the troubles of the world. It appears that God smiles on others frequently and often ignores our struggling family, its problems and frustrations. Even within our families, there are times when individual members feel that God has favored a sister or a brother more than another and they compete to win what little attention is available. When sickness, death, misfortune or failure comes to a family that tries hard to live the honorable life, the soul is tempted to ask, "Does God care about us?" Why is this misfortune falling on us? There have been many who have quietly asked that question.

In ancient times the common view of God was that he was distant and impersonal. The Greeks believed that there were many Gods who lived on Mount Olympus, under the leadership of Zeus. Even in their mythological concept of God, they rarely viewed him as personal in any way.

The idea of a personal God that blesses, curses, hears and answers prayers of individual humans was a new concept, introduced by the Children of Israel who perceived themselves as special in the world, as God's chosen people. Through Israel, God demonstrated that he is not distant, but personal. He showered them with blessings, protection and unusual national success for generations. Moreover, he demonstrated that he responds to the needs of individuals for food, clothing, shelter, spiritual growth and maturity.

There is no one that can escape the love of God. The kings in a palace or the bag woman on the street are both loved by God in the same way. He causes the sun to rise on all of his creation and does not selectively eliminate those who consider themselves disfavored. He showers us with love, even when it appears that we have been neglected, ignored or even rejected. God loves everyone with equal intensity.

He loves the seen and unseen, the great and the small, the known and the unknown, with equal passion.

It is easy for believers to accept God's love when his actions bring us joy. It is more difficult for us to understand that he still loves us, when his action or lack of action seem to bring pain and difficulty in our lives. That's why Paul found it necessary to remind believers in Romans 8:28, "... that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

As Christians, we have come to know that God loves us. He blesses us in ways that we cannot see. He sustains us in the course of this life with physical and spiritual nurture. However, when this life becomes too much of a burden for us, he also loves us enough to carry us to a better life.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he demonstrates his love for a special family that experienced pain and death.

Jesus was away when Lazarus, a personal friend, became ill. This family was greatly favored by Jesus who showed it great personal attention. Martha, Mary and Lazarus were well known in the community and were often blessed with the opportunity to fellowship with Jesus personally. They were aware of Jesus' special ministry and his divine nature. Their fellowship had grown beyond casual acquaintance. They were Jesus' friends.

When Lazarus became ill, the sisters sent word to Jesus to come and heal him. When Jesus received their message, he continued his ministry and did not come to Bethany immediately. He waited.

When he finally arrived, Lazarus had been buried for four days. The sisters were distraught. They were frustrated because it appeared that Jesus had ignored them. They assumed that his delayed response to their time of need caused the death of Lazarus. In their pain, they lashed out at Jesus saying, "Lord if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died!" (v.21)

Despite their frustration, John notes that, "Jesus loved Martha, and her sister and Lazarus!" The individual nature of John's statement is of peculiar importance. John's statement meant Jesus loved the family. By accentuating each member of the family by name, it underscored the fact that Jesus not only loved its members as a family, but also loved them individually.

Jesus explained that his apparent delay in responding to their call was not a delay at all, but an opportunity for him to demonstrate the resurrection power to the world. Afterwards, despite the doubts of all those around, Jesus went to Lazarus' grave and spoke words that caused him to walk from the tomb alive!

His delay was not a delay at all. What appeared to be neglect was not neglect at all. The family learned that Jesus in fact, did love them individually and as a whole, despite the appearances of the moment.

Jesus Loves The family

Today, every believing family should consider the underlying message of this simple text. God loves our family and he loves every member of the family. Despite circumstances, difficulties, frustrations, sickness and even physical death, Jesus still loves the family. Taken separately, the meaning of the text becomes even clearer.

Jesus Loves Marthas!

Jesus loves the Marthas of the family. Martha was the doer in the family. She took charge, expressed hospitality and showed a unique ability to get things done and achieve. She was not the older sister and found her name often listed second in the order of age and priority. Yet the family depended upon Martha because of her history of achievement, to make sure that obligations were met and details were satisfied.

In every family there are Marthas. They are the achievers. They are the ones who seem to rise to meet every challenge, overcome every obstacle and survive! The Marthas of the family often receive the accolades and praise. The Marthas are usually the best known, even though they may not be the oldest members of the family. Somehow they shine.

Sometimes the Martha's of the family get frustrated and become emotional with others who are not as precise or as concerned with obligation and responsibility. That's what happened once when Jesus was a guest at their home and Martha became upset with her sister because it appeared that she was not as hospitable to Jesus as she should be. In Luke 10:38-40 she even asked Jesus to speak to her sister about her apparent lack of interest in the details of the service, choosing to listen and absorb the truths being taught by Christ rather than actively being involved in the service. Martha wanted her sister to be more aggressive in the service, but she chose a quieter, almost invisible course for herself. Yet Jesus responded in Luke 10:42, that her sister had "chosen a good part which shall not be taken away from her."
Jesus loves the Marthas of the family!

Jesus Loves Lazaruses

Jesus loves the Lazaruses of the family. The name Lazarus means "One whom God helps." Lazarus came to represent those members of the family that always seem to need support. Two people in the Bible were named Lazarus. Both of them seemed to need help. One was the subject of a parable told by Jesus of a poor man who begged for bread for crumbs that fell from the table of the rich. He begged for help. Lazarus in this text was sick and had been dead for four days. He received help from Jesus in a most unusual way.

In every family there are Lazarus members. These are the family members who try their best but cannot stand without assistance. Sometimes they even find their best efforts buried, dreams crushed and ambitions destroyed. Often these family members find themselves buried in depression, and self pity.

It is these members of the family that God often uses to show the world and other family members how he revives defeated lives, changes pessimistic attitudes and restores lost ambitions. These are the family members who have experienced the bitterness of failure, divorce, disillusionment and career dissolutions. It is these family members that appear to be beyond help that God can use to demonstrate his power by standing before the tomb of their failed experience and declaring, "Lazarus come forth!"

Yes, Jesus loves the Lazaruses of the family!

Jesus Loves "Sister"

Jesus loved "Sister" or Mary. Mary knew the Lord and gained notoriety for her humility. This was the Mary that was so humble that she stooped to washed Jesus feet with precious oils and dried them with her hair. Designating her in this passage as "sister" generalized her status to represent those who know God in a humble, almost invisible way, but are always willing to do that which is necessary to further the ministry, but their names are seldom called or identified with the ministry.

In every family there are "Sisters." The Marys are the quiet members of the family. They do their part, but are not as visible as others. The Marys seldom get their names in the paper and are almost never seen on television. "Sister" represents that army of family members who contribute to the family through their warm smiles, loving spirits, caring hearts and humble natures. Often their work is done outside of the public eye. Those close to them know of their heartfelt love and devotion and humble spirit.

"Sister" knew the Lord. She was raised in a God fearing family that understood how God operates.

"Sister" paid attention to living the Godly life. In every aspect, she is recorded as one who carried herself in a godly fashion and espoused Godly characteristics.

"Sister" believed in finding Jesus. When she learned that Jesus was in town, Mary found Jesus and went to him to share her hurt with him. He felt her pain! He felt her anguish and John 11:35 records that "Jesus Wept!

Jesus loved Sister!

Jesus loved Martha and Lazarus!

Jesus loved the whole world! John 3:16 says, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!"

To demonstrate his love for the world, Jesus died on Calvary and arose alive and strong to keep loving every member of the family!

Today, we rejoice because we know that Jesus loved Sister!

Jesus loved Sister enough to bless her with a warm and caring spirit!

Jesus loved Sister enough to encourage her in her hours of loneliness!

Jesus loved Sister enough to lift her when she stumbled in life!
Jesus loved Sister enough to carry her when she could not stand!
Jesus loved Sister enough to strengthen her when she was weak!
Jesus loved Sister enough to surround her with sisters in her final hours!
Jesus loved Sister enough to save her from her pain and continued agony!
Jesus loved Sister so much that he saw her declining health, failing spirit, and troubled soul and called her home!

On Sunday, November 14, 1999, Evelyn Gunn Burrell, lay in a bed surrounded by her sisters in a nursing home, uncomfortable, and troubled. In that moment, Jesus loved "Sister" ...enough to carry her home!

SCRIPTURE: "And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it." Genesis 28:18

Introduction

How do you commemorate events that mark turning points in your life? Sometimes there are photographs of childhood accomplishments that seem small by adult standards: our first steps, first birthday party, or high school graduation; they all marked important moments. Sometimes there are certificates and plaques that line our walls that mark the achievement of a life time goal, completion of a professional quest or our retirement from an area of endeavor. Sometimes there are what-nots on a shelf that are small mementoes of travels and good times. To others these mementoes are simply match books, salt shakers and empty glasses, but each has a special meaning to the person who owns them. Each memento has its own story that describes a range of emotions from excitement and depression to courage and fear. When these mementoes mark significant moments, they are usually referred to as "Milestones." Each life has its milestones.

Our milestones tell the story of our journey. They even reveal aspects of our lives that are otherwise obscure. Sometimes milestone moments reveal secrets. Consider the couple that celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. It was a great milestone of accomplishment and the entire family joined them as they renewed their vows after 50 years. As the couple stood at the altar to mark this historic occasion the minister had to speak loudly because the wife was hard of hearing. As they exchanged vows, the husband told his wife, "After 50 years, I've found you to be tried and true!" The wife couldn't hear and she said, "What did you say?" This time the husband shouted, "I said, After 50 years I've found you to be tried and true!" The wife said, "Don't feel bad, after 50 years, I'm tired of you too!"- Sometimes mile stones reveal long kept secrets.

If someone could retrace our life's journey, what would we learn from reading the inscription of each of our milestone moments? They would see the times we succeeded. They would see the times that we celebrated! They would see others that marked our failures and disappointments. They would see the moments that we stood alone and those that marked our greatest frustration. If they read all of the stones that marked our journey they would see the point which we reached a decision to rise above our apprehensions and seize the moment. They would see stones that marked turning points in our lives.

As Christians, we acknowledge that our lives have not always been what they are since we entered into covenant with Christ. The day we met him, was an important milestone that changed our lives and our destinies. The day we gave our lives to Christ is perhaps the most important mile stone in our lives, because it marks the beginning of a new direction in faith and mastery of personal frailty.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jacob as he erects a milestone to acknowledge a turning point in his life.

Jacob, a patriarch of Israel, began his life endowed with many gifts. He had a deep an introspective mind, a keen sense of timing and a sense of destiny. When he left his father's house, he traveled to live with his uncle Laban. However, along the way he stopped to rest, using a stone for a pillow. During the night, God showed him a ladder reaching to heaven with angels ascending and descending. The vision, though prophetic in nature, had personal implications to Jacob. Even though the vision projected Christ as the ultimate mediator between God and man, giving mankind access to God, Jacob saw the ladder vision as a sign indicating that he could reach as high as heaven, with respect to his personal growth.

That dream marked a turning point in his life. It marked his decision to pursue his life dream with an evangelical zeal. He took the stone that he had used as his pillow and set it upright until it formed a pillar, poured oil over it and sanctified that place. At that point in his journey, he recognized no limits to his potential.

Others who passed the simple stone pillar on the road would not recognize it as important. The stone pillar only had a meaning to Jacob. He saw the vision alone. He met the turning point alone. To all others, Jacob's milestone was simply a stone sitting on its side.

Jacob's use of the stone to mark an important occasion was not unique. When Israel crossed over the River Jordan, Joshua commanded the people to take 12 stones out of the river bed and set them as an altar on the bank. Joshua said the stones would serve as a remembrance to future generations who would ask, "What mean ye by these stones?" The stones would provide the opportunity to tell the story of what God did for the people in this place.

A thousand years later, the Romans would build roads, well paved with stone, between the chief cities of their eastern provinces. Common travelers on the Roman built road often marked their journey by the erection of markers called, "mille passus" (Latin for "A thousand paces") The purpose of the "mille passus" or milestones was to indicate to the traveler how far he had traveled, giving him an idea how far he had to go to complete his journey.

Jacob's stone was unique because it was not a mile marker, or a "mille passus." A mile marker is not placed along the road by the traveler, but by the one who builds the road. It only counts miles traveled. A stone of remembrance, however, is placed by the traveler himself to note an important occurrence along the way. It was a stone of remembrance. It was Jacob's stone. It identified his experience. Had it been his brother that had placed the stone it would have been Esau's stone. His father's stone would have been Isaac's stone. It was personal and meaningful.

When Jacob began his life journey he set up a stone of remembrance. Years later, when he was on his way home, he came back to the very same stone and remembered what he had promised God and what God promised him.

He wrestled with God that night. He came to grips with his destiny and left, much older and not as healthy as he began, but stronger with respect to his relationship with God and with those around him.

When Jacob went home, he left his stone, a visible epitaph for others to see and perhaps ask, "What is the meaning of this stone?"

What Do Your Stones Say?

Every person is a traveler along the road of life. While the years that pass mark our "mille passus," there are points when each individual erects his own stone of remembrance. It marks a personal turning point in our lives for better or worse.

STONE: LISTENING TO GOD: When Jacob slept, he slept on a hard rock. While sleeping on a hard rock God showed him his possibilities. Believers have learned that despite the obscurity of our humble beginnings that all things are possible when we put God first. Like Jacob, a young man who had nothing but a hard way to go and an uncertain future, God can lift us from the realms of obscurity and place in positions of prominence, importance and power. The ladder Jacob saw, inspired him! In the same way, every believer reaches a point in life in which he or she believes that the sky is the limit! It may have been the inspiring words of a favorite teacher, preacher, coach or family member that helped us achieve that confidence, but once acquired, like Jacob, we scaled the ladder of life with steadfast commitment! The day we decided to get an education and pursue one course in life or another, is an important stone of remembrance because it marks the point when we accepted the possibility that, despite our circumstances, we could achieve, with the help of the Lord!

STONE: DEDICATION TO GOD: When Jacob awoke he took his pillow and turned it into a pillar. That pillar became a point of dedication. It designated a time and place where he decided that his life work would be dedicated to God and that which is uplifting rather than that which is destructive and ungodly. Like Jacob, there are many who have also decided to make their life work one that reaches and teaches others to rise above circumstances and be the best they can be. The pursuit of any life goal requires dedication and a sense of destiny. Too many begin their life work with one controlling thought in mind, "how much will I get paid." It is dedication that drives and motivates us to go beyond just the superficial and strive to climb life's letter with enthusiasm and zeal. Those whose life work directly touches the lives of people such as educators, ministers and others should be prepared to do what is necessary to help raise the quality of life of God's people without hesitation.

STONE: WRESTLING WITH GOD: Along the course of his life journey, Jacob had to come to grips with himself. His life had gone full circle. While he had many admirable traits there were other things about his past experience that troubled him. Before he could go home, Jacob wrestled with an angel of God. In essence, he wrestled with himself all night long, deciding his life direction. He emerged a blessed man! Similarly, every person reaches a point in their own lives when they must search their own souls. In the course of that soul searching we see every mistake we have made, every error we have made and we grab hold to the God of our salvation and we hold on until we are forgiven, renewed and restored! "I won't let you go until you bless me!" Jacob told the angel. Once blessed, Jacob met his future with boldness and spent his remaining days as a great witness for the Lord!

The man who wrestles with God and walks away lifted, inspired and renewed, knows he has been blessed! His stone of remembrance marks the time and the place when he lost his match with God, gave himself over completely to his mission and said, "If the Lord needs somebody, here am I, send me!"

Milestones

Finally brothers and sisters, there is one last stone of remembrance that every believer wants to leave behind, it's the memory of a life lived for the Lord.
Every believer leaves behind a stone of remembrance that tells the story of his journey! Every Saint from ancient times unto the present erects a stone of remembrance!

There was a stone of remembrance erected by Moses. His stone tells how he spent 40 years thinking he was somebody in Pharaoh's court, then spent another 40 years learning he was nobody watching the herds of Midian, and then spent his last 40 years learning that God can take a nobody and turn him into a somebody!

Joshua had stones of remembrance. These stones mark the day that the Lord rolled back the waters of Jordan! These stones show how God brought us over on dry land!

David had a stone of remembrance. They tell the story of a little boy who faced a giant with only five smooth stones and a slingshot! It tells of a man so comfortable with God that he could write, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want!"

Elijah had a stone of remembrance! It tells of the day that I climbed Mt. Carmel and challenged the prophets of Baal!

A Widow woman had a stone of remembrance! It tells of the day that she was down to her last barrel of meal and her last cruz of oil. It tells how she trusted in God and her barrel never ran dry!

Paul had a stone of remembrance! His stone stands in the middle of the Damascus Road. It tells of a man who tried to fight against God until he met him face to face!

Paul had a stone, his was "Paul's stone"

David had a stone, his was "David's Stone!"

Joshua had a stone, his was a “Joshua Stone!”

But if there was a Milestone, what would it say today?

It would say a man passed by here who had his own faults and failures, but despite his own weaknesses, he tried to help somebody as he passed along! He tried to cheer somebody with a word or song and his living was not in vain!

If there was a Milestone it would mark the place where a man of the world became a man of God!

If there was a Milestone it would mark the place where a school teacher became a Christian Educator!

If there was a Milestone it would mark the place where an accomplished musician became a powerful pulpiteer!

If there was a Milestone it would mark the place where a tired traveler decided that I’m tired of walking this tedious journey, I’m gonna get me a ticket on a heaven by train!

I’m going to place where the wicked will cease from troubling! Where the weary will be at rest!

I’ve got a ticket that was bought and paid for a long time ago, on a hill called Calvary!

Jesus paid for that ticket, when he picked up an old rugged cross!

Jesus paid for the ticket, when he died out on Calvary!

Jesus paid for that ticket, when arose after three days and nights!

Jesus paid it all!

All to him I owe!

Sin had left a crimson stain, but he washed it white as snow!

On Tuesday, November 16, 1999 Richard O. Miles, Jr., stood at the depot of time to board the heaven bound train. Those who don’t know his story, can read it on the Milestones he left behind!

I've Got To Tell Somebody

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 21, 1999

SCRIPTURE:""And he took him aside from the multitude, and put his fingers into his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue; And looking up to heaven, he sighed, and saith unto him, Ephphatha, that is, Be opened. And straightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain. And he charged them that they should tell no man: but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it;" Mark 7:33-36

Introduction

Have you ever had something to happen to you that was so good that you just had to tell someone? Suppose one of the conditions of acceptance required that you keep it a secret? It is extremely difficult to hold on to good news. The person who gets a new car wants to drive it around town for a few days to let others see. What good is a new dress, if no one ever sees it! If you receive a huge diamond ring for your anniversary, it's of little value if you can't let anyone know that you have it! It is human nature to want to share good news and suppress bad news. We want everyone to know about our blessings. We are not excited about the prospect of our failures, like dirty laundry, being hung out for the world to see. It's just the opposite with our blessings and successes. Part of the joy of such moments is being able to share them with others.

Even if secrecy is a condition of receiving a gift, we are still tempted to let it slip. Consider the little boy who always wanted a television set in his room. Every one of his friends had a television set in their rooms and they constantly teased him by telling him how they could lay back in their beds and watch their favorite television program. The boy was in complete anguish. After several months of begging, his parents told him they would get him a television, but they were disturbed about the reason he wanted one. "If we get you a television, you must promise not to tell your friends that you have one," his father said. That was disturbing to the youth, what good would it be if he couldn't tell them? Reluctantly, the youth agreed. The television set came in a big box.

After unpacking the box the youth sat and watched his set. He laid back on his bed and used his remote control. When the telephone rang, he watched but couldn't tell his friends anything. The promise he made was killing him, but he never said a word. A few days later some of his friends came over to his house and blurted out, "We came over to see JJ's new T.V.!" Angry, the father carried JJ into a side room.

"I thought you promised never to say a word to your friends!" The boy looked at his father with a devilish smile, dipped in sincerity, and said, "I knew you would want me to have a clean room, so I cleaned up my room real good..and I put the television box on the side of the street! I didn't say anything, they saw my box!" He had to tell somebody, even if we just show the box!

During the life and ministry of Christ there was a time or two when he blessed people and told them not to tell anyone! It was hard for them to do. Some did, but some could not keep it! In modern times however, no one is told to keep their blessings from God a secret. In fact, those who are blessed are told just the opposite. They are told to make a joyful noise and shout from the rooftops if necessary. Each believer is encouraged to make sure that the world knows about the goodness of the Lord!

As Christians, we know that all of our blessings come from God. We give thanks and testify to his goodness every day. In fact, we're glad that God doesn't tell us to keep his blessings a secret! It would be extremely difficult to do! The tears would flow! Our hands would clap wildly and we'd act strangely. In our own way, we'd have to put out the box for the world to know about the goodness of the Lord!

Exposition

This text focuses on a man who was healed by Jesus, but couldn't keep it to himself!

An anonymous man met Jesus and needed a healing. He was both deaf and dumb. He could neither hear or speak. We are not told anything about the man whose ears and tongue didn't work. We don't even know his name. He was one of the many hearing impaired, living in silence, struggling daily to communicate with people whose ears did work. He'd never heard the sound of laughter or music or God's Word.

What we do know is that he came from the region of the Decapolis, the "ten cities" in Gentile territory. The Decapolis was the place where Jesus had cast a legion of demons out from a man and into a herd of pigs who subsequently jumped off a cliff into the sea. The people asked Jesus and his disciples to leave. But word had spread about Jesus' power over demons and diseases, and so the next time he showed up, the people actually sought him out.

That's how Jesus and this man whose ears and tongue didn't work got together. In the process, Jesus pulled the man aside and took his fingers and stuck them in the man's ears. Then he spat on his fingers and touched the man's tongue.

Jesus looked upward to heaven and spoke a word. St. Mark gives us the Aramaic original: Ephphatha! Be opened. Be released. Jesus wasn't simply speaking to his ears, he was speaking to the whole man. "Be released from your bondage. Be free." Jesus was releasing him from everything that held him bound and captive. At the sound of Jesus' word, Ephphatha! the man's ears could hear and his tongue was freed and he spoke plainly and clearly.

Then a strange thing happened. Jesus ordered everyone not to speak or tell anyone of his healing. He did not want to be known as an ear and tongue specialist, or some miracle healer. Those who saw him in that light missed the point.

God came in Jesus Christ. He came to save us by absorbing into himself all the sin and evil and brokenness, all that had gone wrong with us, all that had come into creation because of sin. He came to take up our sicknesses and diseases into his own body, to battle the demons that darken our lives, to take up the devastation the crushes us. He came to free us from everything that binds us. He came to unchain us from sin, from death, from the devil. He came to bring in a new creation with His own dying and rising, a new creation in which blind eyes see, and mute tongues speak, and the lame leap, and water flows in dry, desert places.

That's why Jesus didn't want anyone to say anything about what happened. It was too small, too soon. There was much more of Jesus to come. His death on the cross. His open, empty tomb. His ascension to glory. The outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. Then His disciples would speak, openly and plainly.

But yet the people of the Decapolis told everyone about what happened. The more Jesus tried to quiet them, the more they spoke. People were overwhelmed at the power of Jesus' words. With a simple word Jesus did what no man could do, and yet he did it in such a human way. Through His humanity came the power of God to save, to set free, to release from bondage. And people just had to talk about it. "He has done all things well," they said. "He even makes the deaf hear and the mute speak."

What they experienced was simply too good not to talk about!

We Should Testify

Today, believers are called upon to testify about the goodness of the Lord! We have even more to say abut Jesus than the man in this text. Since we have experienced salvation after Calvary, we have more to give thanks for than healings.. Jesus has died for us, risen from the dead for us, reigns over all things for us. He lords His death and resurrection over our sin and death. We have something to testify about. We should testify about:

HOW GOD HAS PROTECTED AND PROVIDED FOR US: When Saints talk about the goodness of God we should readily tell everyone we see that He has provided for us and protected us. More than anyone else, the saint knows three things about God that are extremely useful in tough times. Those three things are embodied in Psalm 46:1, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."

We can testify that our experience has been that in times of trouble we have been able to turn to God for protection against the storms and he has been our refuge. In our times of weakness he has been our source of renewal and revival. We can also testify that in times of trouble, God has been "present" and available to satisfy our needs.

We can also testify with David, that God has provided all of our needs and most of our wants.

It is difficult for the man who has been through the storm not to give thanks when the sun rises!

It is difficult for the family that has sustained a prolonged attack from its enemies not to give thanks when the enemy retreats!

It is difficult for the family that has seen its finances dwindle to an all time low, then bounce back again, not to praise God. We've got to tell somebody! We've got to tell somebody about the goodness of the Lord!

HOW GOD HAS BLESSED US: The saint recognizes every accomplishment and good work as a blessing from God. It doesn't matter what it is, the saint is always praising God for his goodness and blessings! It's hard for a saint to keep quiet about a blessing from God! When David was blessed by God he said in Psalm 105:1, "O give thanks unto the LORD; call upon his name: make known his deeds among the people."

We can testify that in our experience God has been a blessing God. In the course of our short lives God has given us better homes, better jobs, bigger happier families and has sustained us in ways that we could not do ourselves! There is a tee shirt slogan that seems to epitomize what every believer feels about what God has provided. The slogan says, "Too blessed to be stressed!"

The ungrateful man complains that his house is too small, the saint says, "Lord thank you for blessing me with a house!"

The ungrateful man complains that his job doesn't pay him enough. The saint says, "Lord thank you for blessing me with a job when so many are unemployed!"

The ungrateful woman complains about not having new shoes. The saint says, "Lord thank you for blessing me to be able to walk in the same old shoes!

The ungrateful man complains about having a bad day! The saint says, "Lord, thank you that all of my good days, outweigh my bad days, I won't complain!

When a saint has been blessed he finds it hard not to tell somebody how good God has been!

HOW GOD HAS SAVED US: The saint recognizes that it is only the Grace of God that has given him the opportunity for eternal life not his own power and strength! We tried to reform ourselves but couldn't, it was only the power of God. That's what Titus 3:3-6 means when it says, "For we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.

But after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared, Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost; Which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour;"

We can testify that we are not what we want to be. We are not what we ought to be, but thank God because of Jesus, we are not what we used to be!

There was a time when our idea of a drink was measured in six packs, 40 ounces, fifths and pints!

There was a time when our idea of a good night was to get a quick roll on cheap sheets with a one night stand!

There was a time when our idea of fun was to bump and grind on a dance floor, take a few drinks, then go back for more!

There was a time when our idea of reading was confined to magazines with pictures of naked men and women!

There was a time when our idea of manhood was to have as many women as we could without marrying them, caring for them or paying child support!

There was a time when our idea of womanhood was to use what we had to get in his head, lay in his bed, pick his pocket, play him hard and charge up his credit card!

But God has saved us from these life draining attitudes and experiences. 1 Corinthians 6:11 puts it this way, "And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God."

Tell Somebody!

When God has been good to us, it is extremely hard for believers to keep their peace! We've got to tell somebody!

Jesus healed ten lepers one day and they all went away, but one turned around and went back to him to say, "thank you!" Jesus asked, "Were there not ten? Where are the nine?"

The leper had to tell Jesus himself, thank you!

Thank you for making me whole again!

Thank you for giving me another chance at renewed life!

He couldn't keep it to himself! He had to tell somebody!

Jesus met a woman at the well, he told her all about her herself! He offered her living water! On that day she was in the presence of the Lord!

She had to tell somebody! She ran through the streets shouting, "Come see a man who told me all that I've ever done!"

She had to tell somebody that she had met a man, who looked into the abyss of her soul and saw something worth saving! She had to tell somebody!

I'm reminded of the old woman they called, "Bitter Garret Gracie!" She loved to dip Bitter Garret snuff and to say Amen in church. When Gracie moved to another town, there was only one church in the little community. The folks in that church didn't say Amen or dip snuff. She was always out of place on Sunday when the preacher started talking about the goodness of the Lord and she'd shout "Amen preacher!" The members were disturbed that this newcomer didn't know how to be quiet. Quietly the deacon chairman went to her and offered her a year's supply of snuff if she'd just be quiet on Sunday. Gracie loved snuff! She took the deal. The very next Sunday the preacher began to talk about the goodness of God and Gracie began to skirm in her seat! The preacher said "God had was good God in a time of storm!" She skirmed more! Finally, she started waving her hand wildly in the air! The preacher interrupted his sermon and asked, "Sister Gracie is there something you want to say?" Gracie looked over at the deacon and said, "Reverend I sho loves Bitter Garrett suff and I'm trying to keep quiet. So if I can't say a word...I'll just wave my hand!"

I don’t know about you but I’ve got to tell somebody! If I can’t say a word, I’ll just wave my hand!

I’ve got to tell somebody that God will pick you up and turn you around!

I’ve got to tell somebody that God will answer your prayer!

I’ve got to tell somebody about Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

I’ve got to tell somebody that early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!

I’ve got to tell somebody that he’s alive today!

I’ve got to tell somebody that’s he’s coming back again!

I don’t know about you, I’ve got to tell somebody!

The First and The Last Word

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 5, 1999

SCRIPTURE: In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. John 1:1;" I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last." Rev. 22:13

Introduction

Have you ever known anyone who felt they had to have the last word in every discussion? The person who has the last word is generally thought to be an authority on the subject or the dominant personality whose experience or wisdom transcends that of others. In a company, the chief executive is the last word! In a school system the school board is the last word! In matters of law the Supreme Court is the last word! There are many who feel like their opinion, conclusion and resolution about a problem or an issue should be considered the "last word" thus their word becomes the word for the day!

Psychiatrists have discovered that there is an association between what we secretly think and the first word that comes to our mind. Thus, word associations have become a meaningful tool in psychoanalysis, as doctors ask patients to say the first word that comes to their mind when a randomly selected word is spoken. A youth that responds "jail" to the words, "school, police, home, and future" may suggest a lot about what he actually believes about himself and his future.

What is the word that best describes how you feel about your church? Consider Cassie Bell's Answer to that very question. Cassie Bell believed every thing is better if there is less of it. When she drank beer she wanted a lite beer! She bought lite potato chips! She used lite salad dressings on her salad! So when Cassie Bell started looking for a church home, the word that described which church she joined would naturally be "lite." She went from church to church but all of them seemed to be too heavy until she came to the Lite House Baptist Church. The Word light seemed to jump out at her, especially when she heard the welcome from the pastor who said, " Welcome to the Lite House Baptist Church. Has the heaviness of your old fashioned church got you weighted down? Try us! We are the New and Improved Lite Church of the new millennium. We have 20 percent fewer people making commitments and 30 % fewer programs. If you worship with us you can get out in half the time because we promise you a 35 minute worship service, with no song longer than two minutes, no prayer over one minute and no sermon longer than seven minutes, including the whoop! We believe in lite! We are the only church in our community that specializes in the 7.5 % tithe, the ten minute Sunday School and doggie bag altar prayers. We have only six commandments, your choice! In our new King James Version lite edition of the bible there are only Genesis, the 23rd Psalms, three gospels, Acts and the last two chapters of Revelation!" The pastor was really enthusiastic when he said, " Yes, we are the New and Improved Lite House Baptist Church. We are everything you want in a church... and less!!

Cassie Bell heard that and became so excited she waved her hand and said, "I want more of that!" The preacher said we can't give you more of anything because we believe that he came to give us life and give it more litely!"

Cassie Bells said, Well just save my soul then! Then the preacher said. We can't do that either because that would require your being washed in the blood, and here at the lite house we believe in the quick dip, fast dry and permanent press! Cassie asked one more question, "Can you get me to heaven then?" The preacher answered, "Well there is heaven regular and heaven lite. Heaven regular has streets of gold, pearly gates, fancy mansions and eternal life!. Heaven lite has no streets, no gold, no mansions and no life!" Cassie, getting a little disturbed said, "What ya'll got that can save and is lite too!" The preacher said, "That's easy, the word is Jesus! Because he said my yoke is easy and my burden is light!" Cassie said, "I'll take two of them!"

What if you were asked to say the first word that comes to your mind when it comes to God? What would it be? Most would instantly think of security, salvation, heaven, mercy, etc.

As Christians, we have come to know that God is our everything. He is our all and all. He is the first word we think about each morning and the last word we think of at night. He is truly the first and the last word!

Exposition

This text focuses on John as he shows the Word of God as both the source of all beginnings and the only end of salvation.

The Hebrew mind set considered "Word" as both a verbalized utterance and an event. A word was seen as a concentrated, compressed unit of energy. As the word was spoken, this concentrated, compressed unit of energy was released and surged throughout the world, changing altering and destroying.

Modern thinking is that words effect emotion, but don't alter reality. In the Hebrew mind however, the conviction was different. Words changed things, especially if it was the Word of God. The psalmist writes, "By the Word of God the heavens were made." God speaks and the galaxies occur.

Because words were seen to have power the Hebrew language only contained about 10,000 words. In comparison the Greek language contained about 200,000 words. So they used words sparingly, carefully, and thoughtfully.

When John began his Gospel with "In the Beginning was the Word" he introduced what he knew the Hebrew mind would accept as the power of God. However, when he wrote this gospel he was living in the city of Ephesus. John was Jewish; his readers, however, were chiefly Gentile. In speaking about Jesus Christ, the Incarnation of the Word of God, John looked for a word which Gentiles would understand, yet a word to which he could also marry the full force of the Hebrew understanding of "word." The word John chose was LOGOS. LOGOS is the Greek word which had been in use for a little over 600 years, introduced by Heraclitus, that refers to the divine plan of things that co-ordinates a changing universe. In essence the LOGOS is the secret of how something works.

Thus two ideas existed. The Hebrews saw "Word" as the power of God released. The Greeks saw "Word" as the secret plan of the divine for the ordering of the universe.

What John did was to bring the Hebrew and Greek concepts together when he stated that Jesus Christ, the babe of Bethlehem, is the Word or logos of God.

What John said very simply was that the power to get things done, and a plan by which it would be done had come together in the person of a little baby born in a manger in Bethlehem. "And the Word became flesh and dwelt among men." (V14).

Jesus, in Revelation 22, underscores the meaning of his incarnation when he noted that not only was he the spoken word of God, but he is the last word, the Alpha and the Omega, the first and the last letters of the Greek Alphabet.

This is the great good news of Christmas, the power and plan of God is now available to anyone who will be bold enough to claim them both! The full power of our faith is that the power of God has been made available to us for every circumstance. He is the first and the last word!

The First Word

The world has a way of suggesting negatives. Our times are becoming so difficult that it is easier to associate negatives rather than positives. Usually, that happens because Satan has a way of trying to get the first word in the affairs of men. His first word is usually unsettling. It disturbs and depresses us. Some of Satan's First Words include:

FEAR: As the year's end approaches there are many who have heard the word..fear! They are afraid of what the new year will bring. They are afraid of the unknown. They are uncertain of the unknown future. The spirit of fear comes from Satan. He keeps putting that word into our heads. This happens each time a believer is faced with a challenge or sizeable task. The spirit of fear has a way of making a creeping entry into every situation. Name the challenge and the spirit of fear will appear. But this spirit is not of God. 2 Timothy 1:7 says, "For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." When David approached Goliath, he did not know what to expect. He had never faced a giant before. But he did not approach him with a spirit of fear, but one of confidence. Years later David would write in Psalm 27:1, "The LORD is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

DOUBT: Name the challenge and the first word to many is fear's first cousin..doubt. Skepticism surrounds every new idea ;every uncharted course; every circumstance that poses the possibility of failure. Doubt is the first word that Satan tries to put into the head of a believer when they receive an inspiration from God. Has not God, inspired some believer to take an unknown direction and the first word Satan brings to mind is doubt. Doubt is sometimes aimed at the probability of achieving the result. There are also times when doubt is aimed at the capacity of the believer to achieve themselves. Often the sheer size of the mountain in front of us awes us. We can hear the words of the Master addressing this same subject. In Matthew 21:21 the Master says, "If ye have faith, and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig tree, but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; it shall be done"

SADNESS: No matter how joyous the occasion, Satan has a way of bringing up the spirit of Sadness. When we should be rejoicing, Satan tries to get in the first word. Sadness has a way of turning what should be a joyous occasion into a sad moment. When that happens, Satan has managed to get in the first word! Satan has found that days like Christmas, Easter, Birthdays and other holidays are the best times to make some people sad. When there has been a death, a divorce or other abrupt changes in our family circle, it's easy for Satan to speak the word of Sadness. Once he speaks, Christmas becomes sad! Birthdays become sad! Every holiday or family gathering also become sad! Those who do not want to have a sad Christmas should resolve not to allow Satan to bring in the spirit of sadness. Despite a past loss, believers refuse to allow Satan to prevent them from rejoicing in the Lord. Despite the loss of a loved one, believers remember Psalms 30:5, "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." When memories of better times bring tears to your eyes, don't let Satan get a foot hold, "Count it all Joy!"

The Last Word

While it is true that Satan often tries to get in the first word to dampen our spirits, weaken our strength and destroy our resolve, it is also true that Satan does not have the last word!

Every believer faces life with the full confidence that no matter what troubles approach our lives, Satan does not have the last word!

Enemies may dig ditches to try to destroy you, but their ditches and attacks are not the last word! What is the Last word? Isaiah 54:17, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper" That's the last word!

Temptations and frustrations may try to separate us from God, but this world's temptations and frustrations are not the last word. For Romans 8:37-39 says, "... in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. " That's the last word!

Sometimes competitors seem to outdistance us and beat us to every opportunity. We always seem to come in second or near the end. Those who come in first don't have the last word! Mark 10:31, "But many that are first shall be last; and the last first." That's the last word!

Hezekiah lay down on his bed after receiving word that he had to die. But he turned his face to the wall and told the Lord in essence, "I heard your first word, but Lord, oh Lord, I want your last word to be merciful to me!" Hezekiah received 15 more years on his life. That was the last word!

The king sent out a word that anyone who prays to his God will be put in the den of lions, but the king's word wasn't the last word! The next day they found Daniel sitting among the lions. That was the last word!

The Three Hebrew boys received word that their faith would cause them to be thrown in the fiery furnace. A short while later they emerged from the fire without even the smell of soot. That was the last word!

A little old lady went to court with her grandson who had been falsely accused of a crime. As he was found guilty in every level of the court system, she kept a big smile on her face. When the District Court, Appeals courts, State Supreme Court, Federal Appeals Court and even the U.S. Supreme Court turned her down, she kept that same smile on her face. As her grandson remained in prison that old lady never stopped smiling. One day a young man walked into a police station to turn himself in. He said many years earlier he had committed a crime that resulted in another man facing life in prison. He said he had become a Christian and could not let another man pay for his crimes. That week the lawyer carried the release decree to the little old lady, but he had to ask her a question, "Why is it that you never stopped smiling?" The old lady said, "Each time we lost a case I kept smiling because they did not have the last word! On the first day, a long time ago I got down on my knees and talked to the man who told me "I am the Alpha and the Omega. I am the beginning and the end. He told me everything was going to be alright! He has the last word!"

When doctors say there is no hope...they are not the last word!

When teachers say there is no help for your child, they are not the last word!

When your situation has been condemned by both friends and family, they are not the last word!

Let me tell you a strange thing, he who is the last word is also the first word. In the beginning was the word ...and 2000 years ago, the word became flesh and dwelled among men!

They put a cross on his shoulder...but that wasn't the last word!

They hung him up high and stretched him out wide, but that wasn't the last word!

They buried him in a borrowed tomb, but that wasn't the last word!

Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave, but that wasn't the last word!

I heard the angels declare, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing into the heavens, this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

It doesn't matter what anyone else in this world says, as long as God is still on the throne, he will have the last word!

Something to Believe In

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 12, 1999

SCRIPTURE:"And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his names Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest: the Lord God shall give uno him the throne of his father David: And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Then said Mary unto the Angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? Luke 1:31-34; "But as many as receive him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." John 1:12

Introduction

Have you ever believed in something only to find out that your beliefs were misplaced? There is a natural desire in human nature to believe in something. Every person instinctively lavishes hope in or on something. Some believe in people and place all of their hope and trust in other human beings that range from a close friend to a parent or spouse. Others believe in ideas. Lives have been sacrificed by those who believed in an idea so strongly that they were willing to die to achieve its fruition. Freedom, has been such as idea. It has claimed the lives of millions who have rallied to its defense. Some believe in power, and the vehicles that are attendant to power such as money and political influence. Some believe only in themselves and then not completely. It appears that around the world, people are searching for something to believe in. In the course of that search people believed in Hitler, Mussolini, Jim Jones, David Kuresh and even the tooth fairy and the Easter Bunny only to find out that their beliefs were misplaced.

There are two ways to believe in something. We can see it in action and base our belief on our experience; or we can hear accounts of its action and base our belief on what we have heard from others. For many people seeing is believing. Consider the faith healer who sat alone at a cafe. As he sat alone customers pointed at him as they identified him as a faith healer. One customer, who had a bad leg, bought the faith healer a cup of coffee and he limped back to his seat. Another man, who was nearly blind, hearing that there was a faith healer in the cafe, sat at his table and they talked a while about beliefs. Just before leaving, the man bought the faith healer's dinner. A third man entered who walked on a cane and wore a brace on his back. He talked with the faith healer and was convinced that the man was exactly what he says. When he left he paid for the faith healer's dessert. Each of them was convinced that the faith healer was genuine. Upon leaving the faith healer stopped at the table of the first man and said, “Because you believe..” then healed his leg, and the man ran from the cafe, shouting. He stopped at the table of the second man and said, “Because you believe” then touched his eye and the man shouted, “I can see again!” But as the faith healer came close to the last man’s table, the man jumped up and shouted, “Because I believe, please don’t touch me!” Astonished, the faith healer asked why, the man answered, “Because I’m drawing disability!” He saw the faith healer in action, and he believed!

Children are very vulnerable in areas of faith. They need something to believe in..desperately. Some, wrestle with troubling home lives, dysfunctional families and personal insecurities. They need to believe that there is someone, somewhere that has the answer to their troubles, perhaps in the back of a sleigh! Often the feeble attempt of adults to wet their imaginations and bring a smile to their faces, clumsily result in imaginative characterizations of great truths. A good old man who gives toys to children, is something to believe in, but it requires a series of lies to create the fantasy picture. Reindeer that fly, Elves that live in the sub freezing, unliveable conditions of the North Pole feed the imaginations of children and give them something to believe in, but it’s accomplished at the price of lowered confidence in the believability of anything a parent says.

Some adults never turn it loose! According to a poll taken by KRC Research in 1996 and cited in U.S.News & World Report, nine percent of American adults say they really do believe in the jolly old man in the red suit. Perhaps that’s not surprising when we realize that at no other time of the year do we focus so much attention on a single theme as during the Christmas season. The fictional character of Santa Claus has become an integral part of the celebration in our culture because he symbolizes the spirit of giving. We want to believe in giving and sharing, thus there are millions in America that still believe in Jolly Old St. Nick.

As admirable as that spirit may be, there is something more grand and life-changing to believe in. At Christmas we need to focus on one single great truth: God doesn’t wear a red suit, live in the North pole or ride reindeer, but he does give gifts. In fact, on Christmas day we celebrate the greatest gift he could give anyone, the gift of his own son!

As Christians, we have found someone to believe in! He has given us something to believe in and that is the hope of eternal life! If you are looking for something to believe in...we recommend Jesus!

Exposition

This text focuses on Mary as she wrestles to understand and believe a promise of God concerning her life that she found difficult to believe.

Mary had been selected to serve as the surrogate mother for Jesus. This idea of surrogate motherhood was unheard of in biblical times, even though it was quite common for wives to have their maids or servants to have children for their husbands. The idea of giving birth to a child without benefit of sex was hard to believe.

It was the conception that Mary does not understand. God permitted her to ask the angel how this should be. Mary asks, with holy confidence, since God thus favoured her, how the thing should be accomplished, outside the natural order.

By posing her questions to God, she found the answers that explained her circumstance and gave her something to believe in!

Seeing Is Believing

Today there are many who hold to the old adage that "Seeing is believing." There is more to that adage when we consider it seriously, especially for believers. Consider these three truths:

WE SEE WHAT WE EXPECT TO SEE: As a general rule of human nature, we see what we expect to see. Thus, our expectations play a major role in our ability to see. We respond to what we expect to see. Paul speaking to believers in 1 Corinthians 13 says love thinks no evil, expects the best, believes all things and hopes for all things. In essence, those who love expect the best. When expectations are low, we are not surprised with low performance levels. When expectations are high, we are challenged to reach them. If we expect to see improvement, then our eyes have a tendency to focus on every component of an idea or activity that demonstrates improvement. If we expect mediocrity, we get just that! What do you expect out of life? Maybe your expectation is the same as that of the Black poet who wrote: "A crust of bread and corner to sleep in a minute of joy and an hour to weep in and that is life." Regardless to your persuasion, we see what we expect to see.

IT IS DIFFICULT TO SEE WHAT YOU DO NOT EXPECT TO SEE: There are many today who have very low expectations of themselves and others. We can't see anything better because we do not expect to see anything better. After the resurrection, Jesus walked along the Emmaus Road. He talked with two men who had witnessed the crucifixion and listened to their conversation. The one thing he noticed as they walked along the road is that neither of the men recognized him. They looked him in the face and did not see his true identity because they did not expect to see it! In a similar sense we often cannot see things because we do not expect to see them. If we can't see the good in a cause, a person, or some great movement, it may simply be because we do not expect to see anything good and therefore cannot see anything good!

Believers should expect the best! If we teach students, we should expect them to perform! If you coach a team and you do not expect to win, defeat will be your ultimate end. In the same way, a life is lost to God's purpose if believers do not expect God to do great things in their lives.

Just as we must constantly upgrade computers and other equipment, we must upgrade our expectations out of life. There are some who refuse to upgrade because it is expensive and time consuming. They prefer to continue using their old model. Sooner or later something will break in the program forcing a new direction, but the new programs won't work with old expectations, something must be upgraded!

We must see ourselves differently! We must expect more of ourselves!

Believe Without Seeing

Finally brothers and sisters, if we see what we expect to see and believe; and if we fail to see because we do not expect to see; then greater is the person who believes and has not seen at all!

Jesus, speaking to his disciples, told them of the great blessing in store for the man or woman that believes but has not seen.

Believing in God without seeing is the essence of faith. Hebrews 11:1 says, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen!"

The things not seen are the focus of our faith!

We have seen the tears of frustration, but we have not seen the happiness of accomplishment that God is preparing for us!

We have seen the mountains that crowd our way, but we have not seen how God is preparing to take our mountains and turn them into molehills.

We have not seen most of what God is planning for us... but we expect to see it! Because his word has promised us that eye hath not seen nor has it entered into our imagination all of the things God has in store for us!

I did not see it, but I believe that an angel spoke to Mary and told her that she would have a son!

I did not see it, but I believe that Mary gave birth to a son and a laid him in a manger!

I did not see it, but I believe that wise men traveled from afar to see the birth of this child!

I did not see it, but I believe this boy lived for 33 long years!

I did not see it, but I believe that one day he died on an old rugged cross!

I did not see it, but I believe that he arose from the dead, with all power in his hand!

I don't know how he'll do it, but I believe that he will keep his arms around me!

I don't know how he'll make it happen, but I believe that he will make a way for me!

I don't know all of the details, but I know somehow, someway, because of something that happened one Christmas morning a long time ago, that God gave his only son for my life!

That is something to believe in!

The Stranger In The Manger

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 19, 1999

SCRIPTURE: "And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn." Luke 2:7 ;"He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not." John 1:10

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when you were treated like a stranger? One of the most peculiar and uncomfortable feelings is to be received by others as a stranger or a foreigner. A stranger receives an ambivalent reception in our country. He is neither a friend or an acquaintance; enemy or rival. A stranger is unknown, untried, and unusual. A stranger usually makes us uncomfortable. Even if we are not strangers, we can be received as such and that too can make us uncomfortable. When we move into a new neighborhood, we feel like strangers until someone welcomes us, then we know we are accepted as new, but not strange. If we are in a new city, it is good to know that we are newcomers but not strange. If we visit a church we feel better when folks tell us we are not strangers in God's house, we feel at ease when our presence doesn't make them uncomfortable. Being a stranger can be an uncomfortable experience.

Our response to strangers is to stay away from them. Every child is warned to beware of strangers, not to go with them, follow their instructions or take things from their hands. Children, who have the tendency to place everything in neat categories simply describe strangers as "bad guys" and those with whom we are familiar as "good guys." Persons who want to persuade a child to go with them need only convince them that they are not a stranger, but really one of the good guys. A child will ask, "Are you a stranger?" The stranger will answer, "No" and the rest is history. As adults we have learned that life does not always lend itself to such simple characterizations. We now know that every stranger is not a bad guy and every familiar face is not always a "good guy."

We have discarded many of our childish ways. We have put aside our Barbie and Cabbage Patch Dolls, bicycles and yo' yo's, but there is still one instruction that lingers from our childhood that we hang on to, that is our parent's instruction to: "Beware of strangers!" That which is unknown to us is kept at a distance. People who are unknown to us still make us uncomfortable.

For some, even the concept of a loving God is strange. Even stranger to them is the idea of the Son of God being born in a manger.

To the man or woman who does not know Christ as Lord and Savior, the Christ Child is a "stranger in the manger" an unfamiliar, unknown, foreigner who operates outside of his sphere of existence. To that person, Jesus is not real but an anomaly.

As Christians, we have come to know Christ in the three ways that puts him in the "good guy" column. Thus we are ready to follow him, obey him and take that which he gives us. He is not a stranger, he is our friend.

Exposition

In this text John focuses on the fact that Jesus came into the world but received a stranger's welcome; the world received him not.

In 14 verses between John 1:1 and verse 14 John makes it abundantly clear that Jesus existed in the beginning but came to dwell among men as a light that would show them the path to eternal life. When he came among his own, the Jews, and in a greater sense the world, he received a stranger's welcome and was treated coldly, rebuffed and finally crucified.

The mystery of his birth underscores his stranger's role during his life time. He was born in the house of strangers, the Inn. As C.H. Spurgeon puts it, "In the early and simple ages of the world every man considered it an honor to entertain a stranger; later, as traveling became more common, many desired to share the honor and pleasure with their neighbors; wherefore they could continue the dignity of hospitality."

The Inn where Mary and Joseph came to finally rest was not the same as is expected in modern times. The Inn was not a commercial establishment operated for profit, bolstered by the explosion of tourism and travel. The Inn was just the opposite. In Old Testament times the Inn was not a building at all,,but a rest stop used by travelers to warm their food, water their animals and bed down for the night. It was a gathering place for strangers who usually became acquaintances before the night ended. There was no charge for the rest stop, it was provided as courtesy of the host people of the land.

As time progressed each town and village appointed special keepers who were expected to entertain strangers in the name of the rest of the town. That evolved into the provision of a huge square block, in the town (caravansary), arranged into rooms for the travelers, the guests were on the second floor and the bottom floor was reserved for the animals, with a certain provision of water and in some cases chopped straw for the animals, the traveler would make himself as comfortable as he could. He did not have to purchase admittance to the caravansary, for it was free to all, and the stable especially so.

When believers traveled to observe the Passover, it was expected that those along the way would provide for them free housing for their journey. In return the traveler would leave a tip as a way of saying thanks for the courtesy. The tip often consisted of the vessels used in the Passover or the skins of animals slain. Even when Christ and his disciples came to observe the Passover they found such a room, made available to them free of charge, to observe the feast.

While there were special keepers who had guest chambers in their homes, there was also the general caravansary, also called the inn, in which large numbers of strangers could expect to find rest, especially among the animals.

When the Christ Child was born in the Inn, he was born among strangers in a place that was free to all.

He dwelt among men and was received by his own as a stranger. He died as a stranger, but he arose offering hope to all.

Stranger's Rules

Today, there are many who relate to Christ as if he is a stranger. They keep their distance from him and won't allow him to get close to them and become their friend. They distance themselves from worship, churches, and those things associated with the church. They are extremely cautious, because, after all, Christians are a strange set of people. However, this restrained attitude about God prevents many from receiving the benefits of God's gift to the world. Jesus came to dwell among men. From the very beginning he came offering blessings, but was often received as a stranger. Revisit the rules that children are given with respect to strangers. Many are typical of the world's response to Christ.

DO NOT GO ANYWHERE WITH A STRANGER: Those who view Christ as a stranger, are cautious. They won't go anywhere with him. While believers sing, "Where ever he leads me, I'll go" and "I have decided to follow Jesus" non-believers are cautious. They distrust him. They distrust where he may carry them. To receive the blessings that the Christ child came to offer the world, it is essential that we trust him and follow him. As long as Christ is received as a stranger, the element of trust will be absent. Even in marriages and friendships, partners trust each other only because they know each other. Those who trust God do so because they know him. He is not a stranger. They trust their health, careers, and safety to him.

David made certain that God knew that he trusted him. In numerous Psalms David wrote, "In thee O Lord do I put my trust." In Psalm 7:1 he trusted God to protect him from persecution. In Psalm 16:1 he trusted God to preserve him in the face of sorrow. Psalm 56:11 sums up his attitude, "In God have I put my trust: I will not be afraid what man can do unto me."

We follow Christ because he is the good shepherd and we are his sheep. Jesus said in John 10:5, "a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him for they know not the voice of strangers." We know his voice and the work of his hand. Where ever he leads, we'll go.

DO NOT OBEY STRANGERS: Those who view Christ as a stranger have difficulty obeying him. Rarely are children taught to disobey adults. One of the few times that disobedience is allowed, even encouraged, is in the case of strangers.

Children are told never to obey strangers. Those who perceive God as a stranger, have difficulty obeying him. They do not know him. They have no experience with him. They do not trust him. They have found it better to be safe than sorry. Those who really know the Lord, have no trouble obeying him. The elements of the universe know him and obey him. After Christ calmed the storm, the men on board asked, "What manner of man is this that the winds and the sea obey him?" Mark 1:27 notes that even unclean spirits obey him. The wind, the waves and even unclean spirits have no trouble obeying because they know him.

Obeying God at times may appear sacrificial. When Abraham placed his son on an altar, ready to sacrifice him, it was sacrificial to the edge of fanaticism. But Abraham knew God would provide. Obeying God can often isolate you from your family. Job 19:15-17 finds Job saying, " They that dwell in mine house, and my maids, count me for a stranger: I am an alien in their sight. My breath is strange to my wife, though I entreated for the children's sake of mine own body." Sometimes obeying God can appear financially impractical. Thus many saints are ridiculed by those with less faith because they obey God and bring a tithe to the store house. They obey him because they know him. They believe him when he says in Malachi 3:10 that he will, "open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Those who know God have no trouble obeying him.

Let Him Bless You!

TAKE NOTHING FROM STRANGERS: Those who view Christ as a stranger are suspicious of his gifts. However, those who know him and have no problem at all receiving gifts from him because he is gift giving God who is in the blessing business. Good parents teach their children to be suspicious of gifts they receive from strangers and to accept no expensive gift from persons of the opposite sex. The receipt of gifts under these circumstances implies insecurity and distrust. A daughter who receives an expensive watch or ring from a male suitor, usually finds mother encouraging the return of the gift. Gifts like that come with strings.

However, those who know the Lord do not have a problem letting him bless us. We know that blessing believers is a part of his nature.

We don't have a problem letting him bless us because we read in Psalm 23:1 "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want!"

We don't have a problem letting him bless us because blessing his children is part of what he does every day. Philippians 4:19 says, "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

Those who know the Lord, know the little babe in Bethlehem is not a stranger in the manger!

They know him as the Lord who goes with them into hospital operating rooms and wraps his hands around those of surgeons and guides every move and stroke. Every Christian doctor knows that it doesn't take but one slip of the hand to lose a patient, that's why they whisper a prayer, "Precious Lord take my hand!"

Those who know the Lord, know the little babe in Bethlehem is not a stranger in the manger!

They know him as the Lord who goes with them into the courtrooms of this land. He guides his defense attorneys, inspires ideas for their briefs, and directs their defense strategies. That's what 1 John 2:1 means when it tells us that we have an, "advocate with the father" it means that he will speak for us when we are wrongfully prosecuted.

Those who know the Lord, don't call the babe in Bethlehem a stranger in the manger!

They don't call him a stranger because they know that when they are:

WEAK he provides them strength; DOWN he picks them up!

DEFEATED he gives them the victory; DISCOURAGED he gives them hope!

LONELY, he gives them comfort; TROUBLED he gives them peace of mind?

The blind man, didn't view him as a stranger!

The woman at the well, didn't see him as a stranger!

After 33 years, a life begun as a stranger in the manger, ended as a friend who held out to the end!

He died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning he arose from the dead!

He is no stranger!

He is our friend!

"We Will Remember The Name of the Lord"

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 2, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will remember the name of the Lord our God." Psalm 20: 7

Introduction

Have you ever forgotten anything? Most people have forgotten a few things in the course of their lives. There are those who have forgotten the whereabouts of items such as their keys, glasses, purse items or other specialties. There are some who forget instructions, while others forget directions. Some who are successful have forgotten from whence they have come. Others who have crossed over, have forgotten the bridge that brought them over. Some have trouble remembering the day of the week, not to mention the date. Some two timers, call the wrong name in the middle of the night! In effort to remember, some time a string around their finger to remind themselves not to forget, then forget why they tied the string around their finger in the first place. Most of us, at one time or another, have forgotten something!

Some even problems remembering when to talk and when to keep our mouths shut. Consider what happened to the family that couldn't remember to keep its mouth shut. This man and his family had been followed by a patrol car for about 30 minutes now. Getting nervous the man pulled his car to the side of the road and a police officer stepped out and walked up to the driver's window. "Good afternoon sir." Said the officer. "Good afternoon officer, any problems?" The driver answered. "No sir, none at all. I have been following and observing you for a half an hour now. You have not committed one single traffic violation, you have not gone over the speed Limit. You were courteous toward the fellow drivers on the road. Therefore, as a part of our new "Better Driving Program," I would like to present you with this check for $100.00" The driver let out a big sigh of relief.... "Wonderful good! Now I finally have enough money to pay for my driver's license." The driver said. The man's wife saw the officer writing something and she said, "Don't listen to him, officer, he always talks nonsense like that when he has been drinking...." Grandma, who's a little hard of hearing adds from the backseat, "You see, you see! I told you not to go in a stolen car again?" About this time the trunk pops open and a head peeks out, "So, are we over the border yet?" As the officer led the man away to jail, it dawned on him that it would have been much better if had remembered to keep his mouth shut.

As a new year begins, believers need to forget a few things, while remembering others. Paul writing to Philippians in 3:13-14 said, "..forgetting those thing which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." We need to forget our doubts, failures and frustrations and troubles. We need to remember that even in those frustrating moments God has been our refuge and strength. Remembering what God has done for us, gives us confidence to press forward into another year. The God who brought us through last years will see us through the year ahead.

As Christians, we remember the bridge that brought us over. While some may trust in the resources of this world, believers remember to trust in God! We will never forget how he has blessed us in the past. Neither will we forget his promise, never to leave us alone!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he stands prepared to face the challenge of the unknown.

Psalm 20 is a victory Psalm. It offers an expectation for success against the Ammonites and Syrians, who came with a vast number of horses and chariots to fight Israel. (2 Sam.10.6-8) It is an expression of how David advanced into the unknown, surrounded by odds that were against him and succeeded by remembering the name of the Lord, his promises to him, and calling upon him to strengthen him. At the conclusion, David looked back in 2 Samuel 10:18 and noted,"And the Syrians fled before Israel; and David slew the men of seven hundred chariots of the Syrians, and forty thousand horsemen, and smote Shobach the captain of their host, who died there."

Psalm 20 therefore, shows David magnifying God for blessing him, while at the same time demonstrating how the faithful should approach the unknown ...with confidence.

In The Day of Trouble

As we begin a new year, we are entering a time of trouble. Despite our advanced technology, there are increased chances of wars, pestilence, and global disaster. The believer approaches the new era, just as David did in 20:1, "The Lord hear thee in the day of trouble; the name of the God of Jacob defend thee." This is a statement of two realities: There is trouble on the horizon and there the person who faces it is imperfect being."

Who was Jacob? He was third of the patriarch's: Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The memory of each usually refers to characteristics they possessed that applied to the situation. What did God do for Jacob that is applicable here?

God defended Jacob and blessed his life, despite his personal flaws, cheating heart, and mercenary spirit. When Jacob lived with Laban his uncle, he was blessed and protected. When he returned home to meet his brother Esau who had promised to kill him, he was defended. It was Jacob who wrestled with God and left slightly crippled but blessed.

Jacob, the maneuverer, the manipulator, the wheeler-dealer, the Big Time Operator. He thought he always had to maneuver everybody, to manipulate them, in order to bring a situation around to the way he wanted it. He depended upon his wits, his wisdom, his cunning, in order to accomplish what he wanted. The result, for people like that, is always that they are constantly short-changing themselves. The very thing they think they are protecting — they end up destroying.

But God found a way to set Jacob free from that kind of thinking. Jacob had a God, and his God finally taught him, lesson after painful lesson through the years, to abandon that way of life, that way of thinking, and to come at last to trust and to worship. Hebrews 11 tells us that Jacob was one of the great heroes of faith because he finally learned to lean on the top of his staff and wait on God and worship, while God acted. That is why God is called here "the God of Jacob."

In the time of trouble the God of Jacob will defend those of us who certainly share some of Jacob's characteristics.

Help From The Sanctuary

Before approaching a new direction, every believer should resolve to regularly meet God in a place of worship.

The "Sanctuary" in the biblical context is the place where believers meet God. It is the appointed place and time where God and man have a little talk with each other.

David said in Psalm 20: 2 "Send thee help from the sanctuary" That means those who face the unknown are helped by their personal chapel talks with God.

Each person should have at least two sanctuaries, one personal and the other corporate.

In our personal sanctuary we praise God in meditation and prayer. It's the time that you talk to God and give him time to talk to you. Usually God speaks to you during your personal bible study. The time when you read scripture and let God speak to you. Often in prayer, we do all the talking, we spend little time listening.

President Woodrow Wilson, the 26th president of the U.S. once wrote: "I am sorry for men who do not read the Bible every day. I wonder why they deprive themselves of the strength and of the pleasure? It is one of the most singular books in the world, for every time you open it some old text that you have read a score of times suddenly beams with new meaning. There is no other book that I know of, of which this is true. There is no other book that yields its meaning so personally, that seems to fit itself so intimately to the very spirit that is seeking its guidance."

The second sanctuary is corporate. It is pubic worship with other believers.

Again, however God speaks through the word. As the word is preached and taught, believers receive help. Sometimes that help is by way of encouragement. Sometimes it is by way of chastisement. Sometimes it is by way of comfort.

David approached the unknown with confidence because he had received helped in his sanctuary meetings with God.

Others, thousands of years later didn't use the same words they simply sang a little song that said, "Just a little talk with Jesus makes it right."

Remember Your Sacrifices

The believer that steps forth into the unknown does so with the confidence that God will remember both his offerings and personal sacrifices made in the past.

In Old Testament times believers brought offerings of meal and corn other staples. They made sacrifices with rams, lambs and oxen. The intent of both was to be obedient to God and to demonstrate their love for him.

In modern times our offerings involve: "Time, talents, & finance." Many believers give liberal offerings of their time, talent and finance for the promotion of the kingdom of God. Many give them sacrificially, to the point of endangering themselves.

It is these offerings and sacrifices that believers know God will consider as they approach the unknown. Thus David records in, 20:3 a confidence that God will "Remember all thy offerings, and accept thy burnt sacrifice; Selah.

Bless Your Plans

The believer approaches the unknown with the knowledge that if he designs a plan or strategy that is according God's will, God will bless that plan and success is inevitable.

Psalm 20:4 says, "Grant thee according to thine own heart, and fulfil all thy counsel." The word "Counsel" here means plans or strategy. When one has sought the Lord day by day, his desire is to please and serve the Lord. When that happens, he is assured that God will give him the "strategy" or desire.

When our hearts have been cleansed by the word of God and by prayer, then what is left is what God wants for us. Every true believer wants what God wants. We are one spirit with him. And what do we want?

What we really want is to be happy, whole people. We want to be confident, courageous, able to cope with situations, able to handle what comes, and to be trusting and loving. That is our heart's desire. Psalm 37:4 "Delight thyself also in the LORD; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart."

Remember The Name of the Lord

Finally brothers and Sisters, those who approach the unknown, do so calling on the name of the Lord.

David said in 20:5 that he would set up God's banner and lift it up high. In 20:6 he said he would march boldly forward knowing that God will "save his anointed." David said, God would hear the cry of the faithful from his holy place on high and answer.

No wonder the song writer would write, "Onward Christian Soldiers, marching as to war, with the cross of Jesus, going on before!"

As we prepare to enter a new era, we must take David's words in 20:7 to heart. "Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will remember the name of the LORD our God."

I don't know about you, but I have decided to trust in the Lord!

Some may trust in the stock market and Dow Jones Industrial Average, but I will trust in the Lord!

Some may trust in technology and information systems, which are all good in their place, but I will trust in the Lord!

Some may trust in medical science, X rays and brain scans, which are all blessed in their place, but I will trust in the Lord!

Some may trust in their education, in their Master's degrees and Phd's, which are blessings from God, but I will trust in the Lord!

I will trust in the Lord because he has brought me from a mighty long way!

I will trust in the Lord because he has taken my:

Burdens and made them light; Bowed down head and lifted it up high!

Defeats and given me victories; Despair and given me comfort!

Losses and given me gains; Weaknesses and given me strength!

No wonder the song writer wrote, "I learned how to lean and depend on Jesus. He's my friend and he's my guide. And I found out that if I trust him, he will provide!"

I will trust in the Lord because he has made a way for me out of no way!

I will trust in the Lord because in the time of trouble he will hide me, in the secret of his Tabernacle he will hide me!

No matter what the future holds, trust in the Lord, he will remember your sacrifices!

No matter how dark it gets, trust in the Lord, he will remember your offerings!

No matter how difficult the way gets, trust in the Lord, bless your plans!

No matter how lonely it becomes, meet him in your sanctuary! Just a little talk with Jesus makes it right!

Trust in the Lord because he loved us enough to give his life for us!

He died and rose again that we might have life everlasting!

I will trust in the Lord!

I will trust in the Lord!

I will trust in the Lord until I die!

The Church That Meets In My House

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and shall be joined unto his wife and they two shall be one flesh. This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the Church. " Ephesians 5:31-32

Introduction

How do you rate your marriage? What about your family? If a test were given for every married couple and every family to see how well they were doing how would your marriage rate? If you think your marriage is doing just fine, does your spouse think so? If you think your family is great, do the other members of your family have the same opinion? What do your children think of the relationship between you and your spouse? Children, how do your parents rate you? Such a rating would be difficult to fix by external sources, unless there is a model by which we can measure ourselves. What one person calls the ideal marriage, another calls a catastrophe. What one family calls a well adjusted happy family, another calls a ball of confusion. To really rate our marriage and family relationship, a standard is needed.

Often, when children are small, there is a measure or mark made to show their growth. The child stands next to the mark and can see how much he or she has grown since the last measurement. Sometimes it's an inch or two. Sometimes, there has been very little growth at all. In a similar sense, marriages and families need a measuring device that is accurate and true. Simply comparing themselves to others is insufficient because every family seems to have a different standard of good and bad, right and wrong.

Consider Uncle Eddie's secret. Uncle Eddie was 90 years old and the men of the church were amazed at how well he looked. He looked robust, strong and virile. He had the look of one who spent much time in the outdoors keeping physically fit. The men of the church sat and they talked about doing the right things in their marriage when Uncle Eddie abruptly stood and gave the men the secret to his fine physical shape. "Brothers!" He said. "I have been married for nearly 70 years. My wife and I made an agreement when we were first married. We agreed that whenever one of us was wrong that we'd cool off by going outside and chop a chord of wood. Brothers,

I want you to know that the secret to my good looks is that for seventy years I've chopped a chord of wood everyday!" They had a way of measuring their conduct.

Believers have a reliable measuring tool! It is fixed. It does not change. It is fair. It is inspired by and supported by the Word of God. Those who are married or those who are leading families in the Christian context, know that every marriage and every family can only be judged by one single standard and that's the word of God. It is reliable. It is true.

A Christian marriage and family is a prototype of the relationship between Christ and the Church. The church is the bride of Christ or the wife of Christ. Each family member helps make up the body of Christ. The husband or family head is a symbol of Christ, the husbandman of the family. Those who want a standard to measure the quality of their marriage or relationship need only compare your family relationship to that of the body of Christ, the results are sometimes amazing. At the very least they are revealing.

As Christians, we enjoy our relationship in the body of Christ. We have committed to serving God with our mind body and soul. We relish the words of Joshua when he said, "As for me and my house...we will serve the Lord!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains the peculiar relationship between a Christian marriage or family and the body of Christ which is the church.

Paul taught that the marriage between a man and a woman was typical of the relationship between Christ and the church. Each party in a Christian marriage represents a particular facet of the relationship between the church and Christ.

Wives and any resulting offspring represent the church. The church, in scripture is described as a major part of the "Bride of Christ," which also includes the raptured Saints, and Old Testament believers. It was John, for example, who saw Christ returning as a bridegroom coming to receive his bride.

It is assumed that a Christian marriage contains both a Christian wife and a Christian husband who both desire to order their lives and their marriages by the word of God. The Christian wife sees herself as representative of all believers in the world. The husband sees himself as a representative in his home for Christ himself.

Both husband and wife, with respect to mutual interests, are urged to respect each other's views and opinions, prayerfully yielding to the choices that best represents the will of God. (v 21) The opinion of both the husband and wife are equally important. When they differ, the couple submits themselves to God in a prayer for direction. In the eyesight of God, both husband and wife are equal. When there is a difference, couples who bring their case before him in prayer will receive direction through divine revelation to one or both parties and confirmation to all through signs and wonders.

God is not a respecter of persons. In a marriage, both partners are equal before God. However, since a Christian marriage represents the relationship of Christ to his church, certain roles are defined so the relationship distinctions can remain clear.

It is for this reason, and this reason alone that wives are told in verse 22 to submit themselves to their husbands, as unto the Lord. In essence, wives are told to follow their husbands as their husbands follow Christ. In verses 23-24 Paul explains the relationship: The husband represents Christ and Christ is the head of the church. Since the church is subject to Christ and wives and any subsequent offspring represent the body of Christ, wives are told to submit themselves to their husbands.

Paul's command does not take anything away from either the husband or the wife, but it does place an awesome responsibility on both of them.

For women, the responsibility is to follow their husbands as they follow Christ. For men it is even more demanding. Every man is compelled to love his wife as Christ loved the church. Christ provided for the church, protected the church and then proved himself willing to die for the church. Very few women have problems following the leadership of a man who lives a godly, spirit filled life, works to protect her, provide for her and is willing to lay down his life to secure her future.

Thus, Paul makes it clear that a Christian marriage or family relationship is styled after Christ and the church. Those who want to measure their growth need only compare their relationship to that of the church for the answer.

My House and The Church

How do we measure up when Christ and the church is the standard? How far are our marriages away from the mark? How much work is there to be done? Comparing "My House" or my marriage and my family relationship to that of the church, there are several measuring points that indicate whether we are on the mark or need improvement.

LOVE: The most important ingredient in any marriage is love. Just as love is the main ingredient in a church, it is essential in marriage. Love consists of four components that can easily be described as "Tata" -Talking, Attitudes, Touching and Actions. If a marriage is going to succeed there must be a little "ta-ta!" People who love, talk freely. They dream together, brain storm and they share. Their attitudes represent the best of 1Corinthians 13, in that they hope for all things, believe all things, endure all things, think the best and look for the good. People who love, touch each other. In marriage there is physical touching in a community they touch each other's existence and they feel each other's joy and pain. People who love, do things to demonstrate their love. Any marriage that has no "ta-ta" is doomed before it starts.

WORSHIP: Every marriage and family must have worship, since it is a type of the church. Worship is the means by which the church comes together to praise God for his mercies and goodness. It is also the means through which the church talks to God. In families worship occurs when the family sings, reads scripture and prays at home. Further, worship occurs when the family goes public and joins others and worships God together. Husbands and wives should read scripture and discuss scripture together. They should pray together because their relationship and family life is like that of the church.

MINISTRY TO OTHERS: Every marriage and family should have a mission. It should be involved in the fight against evil, pain and suffering on some level. Husbands and wives who lose themselves in service to others, find themselves in the joy of fulfillment. A husband and wife or family that returns home fresh from the battle front of fighting poverty, feeding the hungry or relieving the diseased and afflicted know the meaning of the song, "I may not have done all, that I wanted to do, but Lord it's been a mighty good day!"

STEWARDSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES: Just as a church exercises stewardship, so do families. Many marriages have crumbled over management disagreements. Christian families recognize that all they have belongs to God and manage finances, time and talents with painful precision. Is it possible that there are some marriage partners who have let time slip away? Some have filled their roledexes with so many appointments and meetings that all possible opportunities for quality time with their families is completely eliminated. Many have talents that are never used. Some have awfully mismanaged their resources to the point of bankruptcy and beyond. Marriage and family is greatly improved when there is sufficient time, resources and opportunities to use talents.

FELLOWSHIP: Every marriage needs fellowship. Fellowship is another way of saying "socializing." For children, fellowship simply means fun. Every marriage deserves the excitement of being a fun experience. Every family member should share an excitement about their family because their family knows how to have fun! How many marriages have gone stale because there is no fun? Take a trip, even if it's just to the neighborhood park to sit on a blanket and eat sardines and crackers! Laugh a little! Eat some cotton candy! Stand in the front yard and let your children or grandchildren soak you with a water hose! Have some fun! The spirit filled life is a life filled with joy and happiness. People who are happy and joyful know how to have fun! Marriages are invigorated and renewed when both husband and wife, have a little fun!

Keep Your Hand In God's Hand

Finally, if marriages are to succeed and grow we must be determined to keep our hands in God's hand! In good times and troubling times, marriages require both husband and wife to hold to God's hand.

The Christian marriage is at its best when it is founded on the principles of love!

The Christian marriage is at its best when it is powered by faith based worship!

The Christian marriage is at its best when it is invigorated by meaningful service!

The Christian marriage is at its best when it is sustained by an attitude of stewardship!

The Christian marriage is at its best when it is revived by a generous spirit of fellowship and fun!

Families that weather the storms of life do so because they are inextricably bound to the will of God.

Marriages are a matter of will power. They only dissolve when at least one partner loses the will to continue. They are sustained when both partners make up in their mind that, come what may, they are determined to work things out in a beneficial way!

There are times when relationships are triumphant. These are the time when a couple rides through life on the shoulders of prosperity and world shouts Hosanna!

There are times when relationships are strong. These are the times when a couple stands strong against its enemies, ignores its critics and says, "Get thee behind me Satan!"

There are times when relationships are strained. These are the times when one partner feels like he or she is being crucified.

There are times when relationships are painful. These are times when one partner looks in the cup of life and earnestly prays that God would "let this cup pass from me!"

There are times when relationships are lonely. These are the times when friends go to sleep on you and your associates, on whom you have depended upon and confided betray you with a kiss!

There are times when relationships are embarrassing. These are the times when you are stripped naked and hung out on a cross for the world to see. These are the times when even the best partner sometimes cries "Father, why hast thou forsaken me!"

There are some who have endured so many troubles; so many frustrations; so many disappointments, so many nails driven in their hand, that one partner cries out, "Into thy hands I commend my spirit!"

The devil is busy! He'll try to bury your marriage in the first empty tomb he can find!

He'll stand guard around it to try to keep you from reviving!

But a marriage that is rooted in Christ, can stand, even though shrouded in thorns!

A marriage rooted in Christ can stand, even though it appears to have been destroyed!

How do I know?

Because I know a man who went into the garden one day and told his father, "Father let this cup pass from me! But nevertheless, not my will, but thy will be done!"

His name is Jesus!

He died out on Calvary to secure the salvation of his bride!

But early Sunday morning when, when the world thought the wedding would be called off, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

I don't know about you, but I've decided that come what may, I'll keep my hands in God's hand a dn stick with the Lord!

In sickness and in health....I'll hold to his hand!

For better or for worse.....I'll hold to his hand!

Richer or poorer.....I'll hold to his hand!

Hold to his hand!
God’s unchanging hand!
Build your hopes on things eternal and hold to God’s unchanging hand!

Back This Thing Up!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger! Luke 15:17

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when you were not yourself? That was the time when you acted in a way that was not typical of your usual behavior. Did you scream or yell at someone when you didn't mean to? Did you hit or push someone when that was not your intention? Did you do something completely stupid, that was outside of your normal way of doing things? If you've ever done anything that does not fit your self definition, then you know what it means to be something other than yourself.

One of the most difficult lessons for youth is to define themselves. Childhood and adolescence are difficult years because they are years of uncertainty. Children have no definite idea about who they are, why they are here and where they are going. As soon as they think they have defined themselves, the definition changes. Since most youth have not clearly defined themselves they tend to look for role models. These are the people whose lives impress them. They watch and observe their role models closely. They study them, learn their habits, strengths, weaknesses and history. Often they begin to dress like them, and repeat slogans phrases and catchwords used by their role models.

Because youth have not clearly defined themselves, many allow themselves to be defined by their peer group. Their friends determine what brand of clothes they will wear, what television shows to watch and even their radio station choices. They depend heavily upon the opinion of others to reassure themselves that they are doing the right thing and going in the right direction.

Young adults are awakening to the reality of who they are. Many have pursued their storybook images of their idols, only to discover that what works well for their television, music and sports industry role models doesn't alwasys fit well with what they are feeling about themselves on the inside. Maturing young adults are better able to define themselves. As a result have a clearer understanding of who they are, why they are here and where they are going.

Christian youth who suddenly find themselves able to define themselves by the standards of God, know that there have been times when they have been everything except what God intended for them to be. Those were the times when they "were not themselves." Christian youth, know what God expects, they desire to do what is right and judge themselves by his standards rather than those of their friends.

As Christians, we strive to know ourselves better. Once we discover that we are off track, we quickly halt our movements in the wrong direction, back up and start over again! We know who we are. We know where we're going. We're children of the king, on our way home!

Exposition

This parable illustrates the impatience of youth and the love of God.

Jesus related the parable of the prodigal son to demonstrate God's love. The father, in the context of the parable, represented God's love, had two sons. The younger son demanded his share of what would be his inheritance while his father yet lived. By law, the younger son could expect to receive one third of his father's properties. However, he was only entitled to his share after his father's death. The son asked for his part early.

The son, totally focused on himself, demanded and received his share. Upon receiving his share he left and lived in what is described in verse 13 as a "far country." There, he wasted his substance on riotous living. After spending his inheritance he fell upon hard times only to learn that those whom he thought were his friends had abandoned him. He deigned to feeding hogs which, for a Jewish boy, was the lowest of insults. In hunger, he reached a point in which he considered eating the slop of the hogs until "he came to himself" in verse 17.

When he came to himself, the prodigal realized how far he had drifted from his family's instruction. Then he determined that he would stop, go back home and mend fences with his family.

Once home, he found his father waiting to receive him and celebrating his return.

The Desire To Be Free

This parable reflects the feeling of many teenagers today, who privately say, "I can't wait until I leave this house! I want to be free!"

Generally, teens want to be free of the demands that parents make on them.

They want to be free of restrictions on the use of the telephone. They want their own phone.

They want to be free of rules about cleaning the house. They want their own house that they can clean when they feel like it, if ever!

They want to be free of the constant scrutiny of their clothing. They want to wear what they want, wherever they want to, whenever they get ready!

They want to be free of rules that require permission to move. They want their own houses where they can set their own time to come and go.

They want to be free from being puppets dangling on a string, jumping and scratching for the right to drive a car, go to a movie or just to be let alone.

The prodigal of the parable wanted to be free from all rules and restrictions. He wanted to be free to choose his own friends and chart his own destiny.

He wanted to have fun!

Freedom is not free. This is a fact that many young people forget. Someone pays for freedom.

The freedom to use the telephone comes when one pays the monthly bill for the phone, the house note or rent where the phone is connected, the utilities that make the phone feasible, etc.

Freedom is not free! Someone pays! Many youth desire freedom without the responsibilities that go with freedom!

The prodigal left home because he wanted to be free!

Wasted his substance

The parable notes that the young man wasted his substance in riotous living.

What is his substance? It is more than the money that he received from his father. His substance was the very essence of his character, home training, energy, talents, abilities, skills, knowledge, and potential. All of these comprised his substance. They were much more valuable than the mere money he received.

At home, his parents were helping him to build up a substance reserve of character, training, and discipline that would be useful once he left home at the appropriate time. These intangibles, added to the inheritance he was due, would give him a fighting chance to survive in a cruel world.

Yet, in the "far country" the prodigal, wasted everything that he needed in what is described as "riotous" living.

Away from home, this youth found himself involved in excessive and addictive "substance abuse." The essence of his identity was being destroyed. His personality! His character! His reputation! He was both the victim and the perpetrator. While he wasted his substance in the far country...he was everything but the young man of character and discipline that walked out of his father's door! He was everything but the scholar and youth bubbling with potential that felt the warm embrace of his mother as he walked away from the place he called home.

He was free but he was not himself!

What is riotous living? A riot is an activity that is out of control. Riotous living is a lifestyle that is destructive, in opposition to laws and rules. It is dangerous! When it is over, all resources are depleted. There is often death and destruction associated with riotous living. Today, riotous living usually is associated with drinking, drugs, sexual promiscuity, and thrill seeking. Those who involve themselves in riotous living live on the edge of death and move from one life threatening situation to another in search of fun and thrills.

Those who embrace the riotous life style live dangerously and walk on the wild side. These are the those who now live outside of the homes of their parents, and defy every rule they have been taught. They stay out till the wee hours of the morning, drink, party with the wild set, and come dangerously close to life threatening situations by frequenting places where death, drugs and destruction are common.

The prodigal learned that riotous living brings temporary satisfaction. It only lasts as long as one has the money to look good, dress good, eat good and drive good. Popularity is generally associated with one's ability to continue looking good and helping others to look good and party hard as well. Once resources are depleted, the world drops even its most popular! "Out of money" and "out of luck" go hand in hand!

When the prodigal found himself broke, hungry and alone, feeding hogs for a living, he learned the price that he had paid for the "freedom" to be "free."

He was a broken man. He was a destroyed man. He certainly was not himself.

Back this thing up

Finally brothers and sisters, the parable notes that the son reached a pivotal point in his life's direction. The text says, "when he came to himself." That is the point where he must have said to himself, "I'm going in the wrong direction. It's time to back this thing up!"

He made a 360 degree turn and began the long walk back to that which he knew was right!

Those who want to back up and get on the right road need only to watch this young man and learn a lesson in how to "back this thing up!"

First, the young man had to regain his "right" mind!

Those who regain their right mind are able to see things with a clearer eye. They are able to understand the way the world works and the value of their own life's experience.

That's not always easy to do, because the world is full of people who are:

Perpetrating instead of relating.

Ganking and yanking instead of banking and thanking the Lord for being so good!

It's hard to get your mind right, when everyone around you, who claim to be the real deal, lives outside of God's will!

It's hard to get your mind right, when your spirit is willing but your friends are chillin and grilling!

They are in your face and on your case, trying to get you to do their thing and go "bling! bling!"

It's hard to live the good life when everyone around you is singing, "It's a hard knock life!"

It's hard to get your mind right in a shake and bake "give or we take" world, where only the strong survive!

But I heard David declare in Psalm 37:1-3, "Fret not thyself because of evildoers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity."

Secondly, that son decided that before he back this thing up that there were some things he had to straighten and others he needed to turn loose. He said "I have sinned against heaven and before thee!"

If we want to back this thing up, there are some things that we need to turn loose.

If you want to back this thing up, but you are involved in Drugs, you need to turn them loose and drop it like it's hot!

Illicit sexual relation, turn them loose and drop it like it's hot!

Drinking and running the club scene, turn them loose and drop it like it's hot!

Homosexuality, turn it loose and drop it like it's hot!

Stealing and buying stolen merchandise, turn it loose and drop it like it's hot!

Finally, that son decided that he would back up and go home!

At home, somebody loves him!

At home, somebody would forgive him!

At home, somebody would give him a second chance, even though he hadmessed up real bad!

Can't you see that son, walking down the road singing that old song, "I wandered far away from God, now I'm coming home! Too long the paths of sin I've trod, Lord I'm coming home!"

That father met his son, with his arms wide open!

This is my son, who was once lost but now he is found!

I suspect that every parent has walked the shoes of the prodigal son in their own lives. But we're so glad to have a heavenly father who loved us so much that sent his only begotten son to die out on Calvary!

Early Sunday morning he arose to welcome us with arms wide open!

Come on home!

Never more to roam!

Come on home!

Half Time Is The Right Time

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 30, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the LORD go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle." Zechariah 14:2-3

Introduction

Have you ever supported a team that didn't do well in the first half of the game, but came back to win in the second half? It happens very frequently. A team seems overwhelmed at the beginning, often giving the appearance of a mismatch. There are fumbled balls, missed passes, poorly executed plays, and a series of mistakes that makes the entire team effort appear to be a comedy of errors. Sometimes, what appears to be a poor first half performance is part of a team's strategy. It allows its opponents to become confident reveal their best plays and attacks first, then the team responds with its own offensive action in the second half. This happens in nearly every sport. Former Heavy weight champion Muhammad Ali, became famous for his "rope a dope" tactic of laying against the ropes, appearing to be tired, while his opponents pounded away at his gloves and shoulders. In the second half of the fight, Ali would rebound, dancing and jabbing to punch himself to another championship. In football and basketball, everyone waits until the second half before they pass judgment on a team's performance. Some come out of the locker room, fired up and ready to win.

Why would half time make a difference? What happens in the locker room that could motivate a team that is losing to come back and win? What could help a team that is leading to maintain its lead? More than any other person, the coach is extremely valuable at half time. He is the one person able to say the right things to fire up his team. The coach reviews the plays of the first half, praises the right moves and points out the bad moves. He analyzes the performance and gives suggestions. On some occasions he may even switch key players. He sometimes goes to the blackboard and reviews the game plan, and how each new play is to be executed. When he is finished, the coach reminds the team of its ultimate goal which is victory! He fires them up! They come out of the locker room with new enthusiasm, a revised game plan and confidence that they are the superior team!

Before a game in most competitive, organized team sports like football or basketball, the coaches get together and pick the plays they feel will work well against their opponents. The plays are collected into a play book and these are the plays the team works on in preparation for the game. These plays, including when they will be executed, are a part the team's game plan. The job of the coach is to train the team to learn the plans, then during the actual game to execute the plan itself.

Did you know that God has a game plan for every person who believes in him? God worked out a game plan, from the beginning, that guarantees salvation and victory to everyone on his team! He wrote out the plan in a play book called the bible. In the course of life's events he has sent in many plays from the play book. Some of them we have executed well. Other plays we have fumbled.

Half time, is the time we stop long enough to hear a word from the coach as he reviews the plays, reminds us of our strategy and sends us back into the game, with victory on our mind!

As Christians, we are happy to know that God has a game plan for our lives. We have learned that to insure victory, it is always wise to listen to the coach rather than play our own game. If we listen to God in the locker rooms of life, we'll come out more than conquerors in him who loved us!

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Zechariah as he speaks to Israel about the coming victory of the Lord, despite what appears to be a long period of setbacks and disappointments.

Zechariah and Haggai were among the last prophets of the Old Testament. Israel had risen and fallen. It had enjoyed freedom and national prominence. It had also experienced a long period of exile and destruction. Haggai's job was to motivate the people to work. Zechariah's job lead them to rebuild the temple.

As the Old Testament was just about to close, and the New Testament was set to begin, Zechariah's message was similar to that of a coach's locker room pep talk. He had to inspire confidence in the team.

The returned captives were becoming disheartened and depressed because God had not made it possible to restore Zion and rebuild the temple. The foundations of the latter had been already laid, but as yet there was no superstructure (Ezr 3:8-10). Zechariah was coaching a team with a broken spirit. He reviewed the play book to reaffirm the game plan. His message: We are behind, but the big push comes in the second half.

He encouraged them to listen to the prophets, to follow God's ways, and encouraged them in their work of rebuilding the temple. He covered the entire future of Israel, beginning with his own day and on to the time when the Messiah would come to Jerusalem and be rejected by His own people. He gave a picture of the condition of the nation after the rejection of Christ; then showed them the time of Christ's return .

He told about the Gentile nations ruling over Jerusalem and how God will finally deal with these powers. The last siege of Jerusalem and what is associated with that siege, the tribulation, the deliverance by the visible coming of the Lord, and the resultant kingdom. It is a complete prophetic history of Israel and the times of the Gentiles, from the captivity to the end of time.

Zechariah reviewed the divine game plan and showed the people the ultimate victory which would come through Jesus Christ.

The Plays

Suppose our lives were like athletic contests. What would we need to win? We would need to be in good shape, possess some level of skill, and have a game plan and a good coach. The objective of the game is to win. The objective of the game of life is victory! That rarely comes without these team components.

GAME PLAN: Every person should have a life goal. A life goal is the major objectives one seeks to accomplish before the end of their lives. Some have devised a life plan or game plan which outlines the steps they plan to take to accomplish their life's goal. The game plan includes several special plays as well as offensive and defensive strategies in case of sudden death situations. For example a man's life goal may be to find the cure for the common cold. To accomplish that goal he designs several major plays or objectives needed to accomplish the goal. Included on his list are education, self discipline, selected internships and quality experiences. Everything he does moves him in that direction, including what parties he attends the kind of woman he marries, and where he chooses to live. Getting a house and a job are just plays in his play book. Finding the cure for the common cold is his goal. Unfortunately, while a game plan is a good idea, there are many who have some plays in mind, but they do not fit into a game plan. A person who says "I plan to grow up and make lots of money and own a big house" is usually describing a play. A game plan defines the goal and the strategies. The play book, outlines the plays that will be used when certain situations occur. Life without a game plan usually ends activity without purpose.

SANDLOT APPROACH: Many approach life with the attitude of a sandlot athlete. The sandlot athlete plays for the joy of the moment. Whether it's basketball or football, wrestling or running, sandlot athletes simply get together and have fun. The sandlot player wants to win and jumps into a game to do just that. There is rarely any thought of injury protection, game strategies or play books, the players simply make up the plays as they go along. Sometimes, they luck up and win. Often they lose. Sandlot players often have a good time but the sandlot games have nothing more to offer than, the joy of the moment. Aesop's fable of the ant and the grasshopper made the point. The ant had a plan and stuck to it. He collected food all summer and prepared for winter. The grasshopper had no plan, he lived for the moment. In the end, the ant survived, but the grasshopper faced the chill of hardtimes without provisions.

There are many today who have a sandlot approach to life. They have no special plan,except to live for the moment, There is no game plan, play book or coach. They simply get up every day and decide what they'll do, one day at a time.

GET IN SHAPE: Every athlete must be in shape to compete. In life being in shape means more than simple physical fitness. It also means being educationally prepared and job ready. The best athletes have disciplined themselves to train rigorously. We've read the stories of athletes who rise at 4 a.m. in the morning, run five miles a day, lift weights or otherwise train themselves. That requires special discipline.

In life, we also need discipline. Those who can discipline themselves train both the body and mind. They study hard, read regularly and prepare themselves for the contest. They also train themselves spiritually. They study their bibles, feed themselves spiritually and stay prayed up. Their spirituality affects their attitudes about life, thus they discipline themselves to begin each day with the "breakfast of champions" which is the word of God.

A GOOD COACH: Whether a person competes in a team sport or individual competition, a good coach is essential. The coach is the person responsible for teaching the plays, executing the game plan, disciplining the team and motivating them when they lose sight of their goals or stray from the game plan.

Very few teams can win contests without a good coach, he or she is essential to the process. The coach provides the standard for the team and is often the source of inspiration that keeps the team going!

The best coaches are men and women who have "been there" themselves and succeeded. The best coaches have been in the arena themselves and ended their playing careers with high levels of achievement. They have something to share with others.

It's Half Time

Finally, brothers and sisters, I suggest to you that there is someone who has reached a point in his life in which he or she is considering different options. It's half time for someone today, and there is someone today looking to make some changes while they still have time to win the game.

Somebody has made it to half time! Unlike a football game where half time marks the half way point of the game, in life, half time is that point when you go into your personal locker room and evaluate your direction and come out with a new game plan!

Somebody has made it to half time!

There is someone here today who is tired of the sandlot approach to life, simply doing things without a purpose.

There is someone today who is tired of being a player without plan!

There is someone today who wants to discipline himself or herself to begin each day with the breakfast of champions!

Someone here today is tired of posting losing seasons.

Whenever a team has a losing season one of the first things it does is find another coach!

In December of 1998 the football world was rocked when five coaches were fired in the same day.

When Ted Marchibroda posted a third losing season with the Baltimore Ravens, the team said "I'm sorry but we've got to change the coach!"

When Dave Wannstedt posted a losing season with Chicago, the team said, "We're sorry but we've got to change the coach!"

When Don Capers found it impossible to turn around Carolina's losing record, the team said "We're sorry but we've got to change the coach!"

They loved Ray Rhodes in Philadelphia but when the team began to post a losing season, somebody said, "We're sorry but we've got to change the coach!"

They really loved Dennis Erickson in Seattle, but when he posted a losing season, they said, "We're sorry, we've got to change the coach!"

There is someone today who is a looking for a coach! They are looking for someone who has been there! Someone who knows the agony of defeat but who has also heard the crowds shout "Hosanna!"

I know a coach who is looking for a team! I heard him say in Revelation 3:20, "Behold I stand at the door and knock, if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him and will sup with him and he with me!"

His first official act as your new coach is to change the quarterback. Instead of calling your own shots, he's going to send in the Holy Spirit as your new quarterback!

The new coach is Jesus!

He is the one!

He's signed up on a multi-year contract, for I heard him say, "and lo I'll be with always, even unto the end of the earth!"

Jesus, who died out on Calvary !

Jesus, who arose after three days and night!

If it's half time in your life, let him lead you in the second half, and he'll carry to victory!

When Trouble Returns

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 6, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "Moreover the Philistines had yet war again with Israel; and David went down, and his servants with him, and fought against the Philistines: and David waxed faint. ..." 2 Samuel 21:15-17

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when a problem you thought had been solved, reoccurred? We'd like to believe that once we emerge victoriously from our troubles that we will never see them again. However, experience has taught, that trouble has a way of finding its way into even the strongest fortress. There are some who once whipped their smoking habits, but they came back! There are some who have been wounded in failed relationships. Just about the time emotional recovery appeared eminent, there was a knock on the door and it returned! The same is true for some sicknesses that seem to grant a period of remission, then return. How many struggled with financial storms for years before they were finally defeated, only to see them return again? Despite our best efforts trouble and difficulties, once defeated have a way of coming back again, in a different shape and form, but just as dangerous as before.

As African-Americans, we celebrate our heritage by remembering our history. We celebrated the end of slavery with great fanfare, thinking that it had ended forever. As slaves, we were often forced to sing, "Happy Songs" such as "Dixie." To the amusement of our masters and his guests we'd sing "I wish I was in the land of cotton, old times there are not forgotten, look away, look away Dixie land." Even as we sang, our backs bore the stripes of the master's whip; our women bore his children and our lives were scarred for generations. When slavery ended, we thought we had heard the last of Dixie. We thought we had seen the last of the Confederate battle flag, which was etched in our collective mind as a symbol of our oppression. It became a reminder of a period in our history when we were humiliated and trampled upon, our ideas stolen from us, our fathers hung from trees, our friends sold off and our women raped. When General Lee gave General Grant his sword at the close of the Civil War, we thought we had seen the end of the bitterness the flag represented. We were mistaken.

The men who flew that flag nearly 140 years ago were defeated, but today their great great grandsons and daughters have returned to wave that same flag in our faces, in the name of history and regional pride. Just as it stirred pride in Dixiecrats 140 years ago and motivated them to fight to preserve a way of life that depended upon the enslavement of others, it stirs an equal amount of resentment from those who are great-great-great grandsons and daughters of slavery. We thought trouble had gone away, only to see it return with a vengeance.

Whether socially or personally, no person should expect evil, once defeated, not to return. On the contrary we should expect, prepare for and guard against the return of evil influences, that return with the same and often greater vengeance than they did at the beginning.

As Christians, we know we must constantly be on guard against evil. We should watch constantly for the devil to attempt to destroy our personal lives and our community. When he returns he will often come in differently, but just as dangerously, with our destruction as his goal. Thus, we should be cautious against the return of evil, lest we are caught off guard and become its victims.

Exposition

This text focuses on David when he came face to face with a problem he thought he had defeated 40 years earlier, that almost killed him.

Toward the end of his long and prosperous reign, some 45 years after Goliath had fallen, David was forced to lead his army out against the Philistines. David had become famous as the giant killer of Israel. Even though it happened 45 years earlier the people still sang, "Saul has killed his thousands, but David has killed ten thousand." He was a folk hero and a king. He was a man known for his ability to kill giants.

1 Samuel 17:40 records the events of that historic day. David gathered five smooth stones to use in his sling shot. Why would a young man so confident that God would lead him to victory, need five smooth stones, rather than one? Did he think he would miss four times? Some scholars think he may have prepared himself for the inevitable. It would only take one stone to kill Goliath, but he had heard that Goliath had four sons. One of the five stones, therefore, was for Goliath, the other four were for his sons should they come to avenge him.

On the day David killed Goliath there was a shout of victory. The people celebrated and David put away the unused stones because the sons of the Giant never made a move against him.

For 45 years David never heard a word from Goliath's sons. They made no attempts to destroy him. They existed but left him alone.

However, this text records that the Philistine army decided to try to dominate the people of God once again. They were led by four great champions, the sons of Goliath, the fallen hero who was slain by David.

And in the dust and fury of the battle he was confronted, face to face, and challenged by one of Goliath's sons. His name was Ishbi-benob.

David went into battle with him and was confident of victory. If he had slain

Goliath with a puny pebble, how much more the son of Goliath with a mighty sword. (2 Sam 21:15-17)

But David found himself hard pressed against this enemy. Isbi-benob fought David with a new weapon. He dominated with great strength and with the power of his new weapon. David's arms ached. His legs threatened to give way. Fear began to fill his heart. He gave ground as he fought in desperation. The Philistine realized that he was slowly wearing David down. Just as he was about to deliver the fatal blow to David, Abishai, one of David's faithful soldiers, moved in, distracted the Philistine and killed him. Later on in the war the remaining 3 sons of Goliath were also killed. (2 Sam 21:18-22) Had it not been that he had a little unexpected help, David might have been slain.

Goliath Has Sons

Have you conquered some "Goliath" in your life? Some fearful sin, some dark oppression or affliction that challenged your Christian experience and threatened your fellowship with God? One of the greatest joys of the Christian experience is winning a victory over Satan. One of the greatest thrills, is to know that Satan did not win! However, each believer should be reminded that Goliath has sons!

The temptation that we thought we had defeated...has sons! They do not go away completely but others come to take their place. Therefore believers are urged to stay on guard. That's what 1 Corinthians 10:12 means when it says, "Let he who thinks he stands take heed, lest he fall."

When David fought Goliath he carried enough stones to kill each one of Goliath's sons. However, in this text David stumbled upon Goliath's sons unprepared.

We should always be prepared for the attacks of the evil one. He never sleeps. He is a like a lion prowling to and for, seeking to destroy us.

Goliath may have been conquered but his sons are waiting their turn.

Ishbi-benob used a new sword!

Ishbi-benob came after David with a new sword (v.16). It was different than David's sword. The Philistines controlled the production if iron and allowed no one in Israel to learn the secret of its production. (1 Samuel 13:19)Their long, iron swords, made them formidable enemies. Thus, David tried to tackle the son of Goliath on his own terms, not realizing that the son of Goliath was using a new weapon.

When David faced Goliath he carried only a slingshot and refused a sword. He was confident that God would protect him. However, before Ishbi-benob, he placed his confidence in his bronze sword, without knowing that the giant had a new weapon.

Often we are tempted to rely on our own swords. We rely on our education, financial investments, influence and personal resources to attack problems. We take these into every battle without realizing that when the sons of Goliath come, they come with new swords that have better education, more influence and more resources at their disposal.

When the sons of Goliath come every believer should remember how he slew the first giant, not with his own sword but by the power of God. Zechariah 4:6 put it this way, “Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit saith the Lord of hosts.”

Goliath’s Sons are Patient

The sons of Goliath are very patient. In David’s case they waited 40 years before they made their return. Even then, Ishbi-benob waited until David was fatigued to make his attack.

Weariness decreases our defenses. When we are weary we are most vulnerable to Satan’s attacks.

When are we most likely to give people a sharp response or an insulting answer? When we are tired!

When are we most likely to dread going to choir rehearsal? When we are tired?

When are we most likely to avoid participating in church related ministries? When we are tired!

When do we say and do things in our marriages that we are sorry for later? When we are tired!

Fatigue is the best time for Satan to attack. That’s why it is a good idea for every believer to have a time of refreshment?

Thousands of believers are defeated by the Sons of Goliath who wait for them to get weary before they attack them.

Church leaders should refresh themselves regularly. If not, the joy of ministry can easily become a chore.

A tired preacher, no longer takes the time to research, study and prepare, he simply throws something together and tries to hide it behind a whoop!

A tired choir, no longer takes joy in the execution of difficult but inspirational songs, but is content to throw something together to get by.

Tired deacons, no longer participate in prayer, visit the sick or minister to the congregation, they just choose themselves a front seat and sit down.

Tired ushers, no longer greet visitors with joy, if they stand at all, they are grumbling about how long they stand.

Tired members, drag themselves to worship! They drag themselves to auxiliary meetings and church ministries. David asked God to “renew in me a right spirit.” That would help him stand strong in the face of the sons of Goliath!

We Need A Little Help!

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that no one successfully tackles a giant without a little help!

Whether you stand before your Goliath with a stone or with a sword, you will need some help!

Everybody needs a little help sometimes!

It doesn't matter whether we graduated from a day care center or whether we have a Phd, everybody needs a little help sometimes!

It doesn't matter whether you have a jar full of pennies or a bulging stock portfolio, everybody needs a little help sometimes!

When David fell faint in front if Ishbi-benob, Abishai came to his rescue the same way that the Lord comes when a believer is in trouble!

When you are in trouble, and the sons of Goliath are attacking, you don't call on your college diploma!

When your health is failing, and the sons of Goliath are attacking, you don't call on your financial resources!

When you are being attacked and falsely accused, and the sons of Goliath are attacking, you don't call on your circle of influences!

When a believer is in trouble he calls out, Lord! Oh Lord! Have mercy on me!

David said, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth!"

Don't worry about the sons of Goliath, just stay prayed up and know that God is still on the throne and help is on the way!

With a little help from the Lord..the weary can be at rest!

With a little help from the Lord..the lonely can get comfort for their souls!

With a little help from the Lord,.the weak can find new strength!

All my help comes from the Lord!

He lived down here for 33 long years!

He died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave

With all my help in his hands!

The Lamp Lighter's Mission

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 13, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "And thou shalt make the seven lamps thereof: and they shall light the lamps thereof, that they may give light over against it " Exodus 25:37

Introduction

Have you ever been afraid to walk in the dark? We are often afraid to travel certain streets in the dark because of a fear of unknown dangers. We feel safer on streets that are lighted well because they help us to prepare for dangers lurking behind a corner or around a bend. The more light the better. Even in our homes, it can be a scary feeling to awaken in the middle of the night and try to move toward a bathroom when all of the lights are out. Walking in the dark is a scary feeling.

We feel a little better when someone goes before us and turns on the lights. When the lights are on we feel more secure. We are bolder..more courageous, when the lights are on!

The person who turns on the light is a very important person. When we are walking in the dark the person who carries the flashlight is extremely important. The person who enters a dark room first and turns on a light for us to see, makes us all feel better.

Before electricity, the streets of most cities were lighted by gas lamps that stood on high poles. Cities hired people who began work at sundown walking through the streets lighting the street lamps. Sometimes the lights were out of reach. The lamp lighters would use long poles or walk on stilts to help others to see. The people were dependent upon the lamplighters to walk about at night in safety. Without light, the streets were dark and ominous - almost impassable. Many who walked the well lighted streets never actually saw the lamp lighters. If they did, they rarely knew their names. However, they were eternally grateful to them, because their work made it possible for others in the city to walk a brightly lighted path.

In our life's journey, there have been many times that we have stumbled upon dark areas of experience that would have otherwise been frightening had it not been for the fact that someone turn on a light to help us see.

Lamp Lighters. We have them in every area of endeavor. These are the men and women who move into an area of experience first and make it easier for others to follow them. These are those who move into the darkness of the unknown, strengthened only by an unfaltering faith in God, and seize opportunities that open doors for others.

In matters of faith there are also lamp lighters. These are those who inspire hope in a faithless generation. These are those whose life experiences show those who come after them that despite the difficulties of their own life experiences, that "weeping endures but a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Spiritual lamp lighters help those who follow them to approach the unknown with the full knowledge that God has led others through this path, and will lead them too!

As Christians, we praise God for his light and his salvation. As we try to let our lights shine, we know that part of the shining process, is to help light the lamps of others. Giving light and lighting lamps...that is the lamp lighter's mission!

Exposition

This text focuses on the instructions given to the priests about lamps used to light the Tabernacle.

In the wilderness, Moses received instruction from God about the construction of the Tabernacle, which was a magnificent tent, in which God himself resided. Every minute detail of the Tabernacle was spelled out by God himself, and carried out by Moses.

The 25th Chapter of Exodus, in part, focuses on the instructions for lighting the Tabernacle. Moses was instructed to make a great candlestick (v. 31) with six branches that came out of its sides (v. 32) and a seventh on the top of the shaft which ran through the middle of it.

The candlestick, with its seven lamps has been said to represent many things in our dispensation. To some, these seven lamps represent the several gifts and graces of the spirit, often called the seven spirits of God. To others, these lamps represent the perfection of the church in its ministries as represented by the seven churches of Asia Minor. Still others contend that the seven lamps, spread in every direction, suggests the spreading of the church's mission into every place of darkness.

While this passage is quite detailed as to the nature of the materials of which the lamps are to be made, how they are to be designed and other construction particulars, it leaves one area to conjecture: Just who was suppose to light the lamps!

Verse 37 says, "and they shall light the lamps." However, in none of the preceding verses has "they" been clearly defined. Verse 10 implies that, "they" refers to the people. In practice, it was Aaron and those that came after him who drew the responsibility of lighting the lamps.

Each was ordered by God at verse 40, to pay strict attention to every procedure and step laid out by God himself, "after the pattern" that was given on the mount.

The lighting of the lamps was important to the Tabernacle because it had no windows. There was no way, because of the manner of its construction, for any light to enter unless it came from the inside. Those who drew the responsibility of lighting the lamp made it possible to see how to order themselves before God.

What began with Aaron and his descendants in the Tabernacle as a simple ritual of lamp lighting has now continued into the present dispensation. The command, "and they shall light the lamps" still lingers, but it refers to the spiritually strong of every generation. They are commanded...light the lamps, but follow God's direction in doing so!

Let Light Shine

In Matthew 5:16 Jesus said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Thus, every believer is challenged to have a light and let it shine before men themselves. Before a person can serve as a lamp lighter,he or she must first have a light themselves.

What kind of light do you have?

CANDLELIGHT: Candles provide a small amount of light, but the light source is fragile. A gust of wind can easily snuff a candle. Similarly, there are people who have lights that shine like candles. They serve until the first gust of wind blows them away. The slightest difficulty or frustration discourages them and they give up in despair. The church needs candlelight people, just as it needs every person with a light. We must be aware of those who are extremely sensitive, and fragile lest we snuff out their candles before they get to shine.

FLASHLIGHTS: Flashlights are most handy in times of emergency or darkness. In a time of trouble or need we often reach for a flashlight to light the way. However, a flashlight is only as good as its batteries. The batteries of flashlights must stay charged up. In every generation, there have been flash lights among us. They have risen in times of emergency, crises, and peril to show us the way. Flash light personalities among us have one unique quality, they seem to always be "powered up" and operating on a full charge. For believers, this means we must constantly be prayed up and ready to face whatever situation that comes in the name of the Lord.

SEARCH LIGHTS: Search lights are used to scan large spans of dark areas. They are used to help find someone or something that is lost. They are powerful. They are bright. Today, there are millions of people who have lost their way. In education, business, civic affairs, and personal development. The search lights among us are those who have been endowed with special gifts to seek and find the lost and bring them to shore. The search lights are those who deal with wayward children, minister to those imprisoned or trapped in the vicious cycle of drug and alcohol abuse. God needs search lights to win the masses.

FOG LIGHTS and NIGHT LIGHTS: Fog lights are the small lights on automobiles. They don't provide the same intensity of light as the headlights but when visibility is low, fog lights help drivers avoid accidents. The same is true for night lights in the home. They are small lamps that would hardly be seen in the day, but at night provide just enough light to help a family member moving in darkness to avoid an accident. There are many among us who are not gifted to be search lights or flood lights. Their gift is small but at the right time, their advice and counsel, like a fog light, can help us avoid accidents. The fog light people are not the leaders but the faithful followers to do their part in the ministry. They are not big idea people but they are gifted in wisely carrying out details once formulated. It's the thousands of fog lights and night lights that help us make it through times when visibility is low without a collision. Thank God for fog light people.

BRIGHT LIGHTS: Those who travel dark roads need bright lights. Automobiles usually come equipped with a light fixture that has what is known as a low beam and a high beam capacity. The high beam can cast a beam of light 500 feet or more ahead. Bright lights are needed to help the driver see up the road. However, every good driver knows that there is also a time when the low beams must be used. When two automobiles meet each other and both are beaming bright lights, both are in danger of an accident unless both of them dim their lights. While bright lights are needed among the lost, those who are saved gain nothing for engaging in "bright lights" contests in which we promote our church, denomination or non-denomination over another and spend our time trying to out shine the other. In a world of darkness, those who have bright lights should keep their high beams on the dark road, and dim them when approaching another who has lights but is coming from a different direction.

Light a Lamp

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider the truth that each person who has a light bears a responsibility to not only shine a light, but to also light a lamp!

Those who have achieved and realized a degree of satisfaction and success in an endeavor shine a light, whether they want to or not. They have a responsibility to mentor someone as they themselves were mentored. We have to reach back and help somebody, like somebody helped us!

If we have learned anything from history as a people, it is that we stand on the shoulders of those who have lighted a path before us.

Phyliss Wheatley, Sojourner Truth, Harriet Tubman, Rosa Parks, and Mary McCleod Bethune, were all lamplighters. They pointed the way in poetry, the quest for freedom and in education!

But so was Lucy Campbell. She's gone on to glory but the lamps she lit in song still shines brightly. In thousands of churches people still sing..."Something within me that holdeth reins, something within me I can't explain, all that I know there is something within!"

Mahalia Jackson was a lamp lighter. She made the words of Matthew 6:33 true to millions; that if you, "seek ye first the kingdom of God and its righteousness, all these things shall be added unto you." She showed that a woman could give her talent to God alone and still be rich and famous and in so doing lit the lamps of a generation of young women who would follow in her path, singing only for God and his glory.

Lamplighters have lights to shine, but where do they get their light? For the answer take a good look at the moon. It shines brightly at night, but it has no light of its own. It reflects the light that comes from the sun. Without the sun there would be no light.

That's why the Psalmist wrote, "The Lord is my light and my salvation, who shall I fear. The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid."

That's the way it is with a believer. He or she would not have any light, if were not for the SON!

Every believing lamp lighter is powered by the Son!

That's the only way they can keep on shining!

They are able to keep working in education, because they are powered by the Son!

They are able to keep serving in the community, because they are powered by the Son!

They are able to keep on witnessing because they are powered by the Son!

Somebody answered that question, "Where do lamp lighters get the light?" in the words of a song that said, "Jesus gave it to me, and I'm going to let it shine!"

All in my home, I'm going to let it shine!

Everywhere I go, I'm going to let it shine!

Shine, Shine, shine! I'm going to let it shine!

Jesus, Mary's baby!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and arose after three days!

Jesus gave it to me..and I'm going to let it shine!

Who Will Stand In The Gap?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 20, 2000

Scripture: "And I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it: but I found none. " Ezekiel 22:30 "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus." 1 Timothy 2:5

Introduction

Have you ever needed someone to intercede for you? There are occasions in each life in which we find it necessary for someone to say a word on our behalf. A person who intercedes has a special influence that could help create opportunities we desire. If your employer is hiring, it is not unusual that you should get a call from a friend asking you to put in a word for them. Those who must stand before a judge, it is not unusual for a defendant to encourage everyone who may know the judge privately to speak a word in his or her defense. Sometimes children beg their mothers to stand between them and a punishment that has been promised by a father. Most of us have had an opportunity or two to seek an intercessor.

One of the most dramatic plots of the theater is found in the play, "Cyrano de Bergerac" a French drama in which one man, who has good looks but no intellect gets his friend who has a flow or words but a giant nose, to write love letters to a beautiful woman named Roxane. Roxane fell in love with the thoughts of the letter, without knowing that they were not the thoughts of the man who read them. In the same way, many friendships have been broken by best friends who were trying to intercede in troubled relationships.

Good or bad,we've had some experience with intercession. Consider the guy who arrived at the pearly gates, and waited to be admitted. A clerk read through the Big Book to see if the guy's name is written in it. After a few minutes, the clerk closed the book, and said "I'm sorry, I don't see your name written in the Book."

"How current is your copy?" he asks.

"It's updated every ten minutes," The clerk replied. "Why do you ask?"

"I'm embarrassed to admit it, but I was always the stubborn type. It was not until my death was imminent that I cried out to God, so my name probably hasn't arrived for your copy yet."

"I'm glad to hear that," the Clerk said, "but while we're waiting for the update to come through, can you tell me about a really good deed that you did in your life?"

The guys thinks for a moment and says, "Hmm... Well there was this one time when I was drivin' down a road and I saw a giant group of biker gang members harassing this poor girl. I slowed down, and sure enough, there they were, about 20 of 'em torturing this poor woman.

Infuriated, I decided to intercede. I got out my car, grabbed a tire iron out of my trunk, and walked up to the leader of the gang. He was a huge guy; 6-foot-4, 260 pounds, with a studded leather jacket and a chain running from his nose to his ears. As I walked up to the leader, the bikers formed a circle around me and told me to get lost or I'd be next. "So I ripped the leader's chain out of his face and smashed him over the head with the tire iron. Then I turned around and yelled to the rest of them, "Leave this poor innocent girl alone! You're all a bunch of SICK, deranged animals! Go home before I really teach you a lesson in PAIN!"

The clerk, duly impressed, said "Wow! When did this happen?"

"About three minutes ago." The man answered. Certainly, he knew the meaning of intercession.

Often we call upon friends to intercede for us with other people, but who can we call upon to intercede for us when we need special consideration from God?

As Christians we have come to know that when we need someone to help us get a prayer answered, we must call on Jesus he will stand with us and for us in our time of need.

Exposition

The text focuses on the Prophet Ezekiel as he appeals for men to intercede for Israel as the gap between God and the nation widened.

The prophet Ezekiel ministered to Israel in two spheres. In the first 23 chapters of his prophecy he gave warnings of a gap that was being created between the people and God by the sinful actions of the nation. In the remaining chapters, which were written after God destroyed Jerusalem and allowed them to become captives, Ezekiel detailed ways the nation could re-establish itself with God.

The idea of a growing gap between God and man was promoted heavily by Ezekiel. The nation began to feel that the temple in Jerusalem was a "good luck" charm for them. As long as they had this billion dollar structure, the home of God, no enemy could trouble them. After all, they believed that God lived in Jerusalem and would not allow anything to happen to the place where he resided.

The essence of Ezekiel's prophecies were to detail how God is bigger than humanity and does not need mankind to maintain his existence. God's anger at the sinful people and the constant disobedience by the people of God, created a widening gap that would end tragically for the people.

In desperation, Ezekiel preached, advised and counseled those who listened. He said the nation needed men who would lead the nation in repair the breach or gap in the hedge of protection that once surrounded Israel. Repeatedly, the call was given for men to come forth and intercede between the people and God. No one came forth. No man answered the call.

Spiritually, no man was able to do so.

1 Timothy 2:5 makes it clear that those who seek access to God cannot succeed without an intercessor. It says, "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus."

The sinful nature of mankind that existed from Ezekiel's time still exists. There is no man who can bridge the gap on his own merits. Those who are successful at doing so must go beyond their own humanity and be empowered by Christ himself, who is able to keep us from falling and willing to intercede for us with the father in heaven.

The Gap

Today, it is becoming increasingly evident that there is a gap between what God expects of us and what we actually do. Like the people in Ezekiel's we are trusting heavily on our rituals, church buildings and ceremonies to protect us from the enemy. A broad gap exists between what we say and what we actually do as believers.

GAP BETWEEN NEEDS AND DEEDS: There is a service deficiency among believers. Today, there is a growing need for men and women of God to respond to the cries of the helpless, hopeless and homeless. There is a need for someone to help our children survive the onslaught of negative influences designed to destroy them. Despite the fact that poverty is all around us and ignorance is clutching its cold and unforgiving fingers on the minds of our youth, there is a surprising gap between what needs to be done and what the people of God are doing! Is it possible that we are spending a disproportionate amount of our time praising and worshiping instead of ministering and meeting the needs of others? As we focus our attention upon what we can personally get from God through praise and worship, is it possible that we are neglecting the service? Is it possible that, like Israel, we are operating on the false notion that our ritual is sufficient to meet the need?

Just as in Ezekiel's time, the cry still goes out.."Is there a man who can stand in the gap?" Is there church community willing to close the gap between needs and deeds? Is there a congregation willing to roll up its sleeves and vigorously work to improve the community in which in lives?

GAP BETWEEN OUR TALK AND OUR WALK: There are many believers who talk a good game, but rarely act on what they talk about. Very few men will take issue with the fact that every home needs the active presence of a father. In our discussions, meetings and fellowships every believing man says that the family needs a strong male presence to give guidance, support and protection to the family. That is our talk. Often our walk is different from our talk. Many families see a very diminished male presence, especially in middle class homes where career goals often clash with family needs. Often the same man whose talk is "family first" finds himself in a dilemma when it's time to walk the walk instead of just talking the talk. Children hear their fathers talk about the importance of God in their lives, but each time worship and service opportunities occasion themselves, father is not there. It's easier to talk the talk than to walk the walk.

Walking the walk closes the gap and demonstrates faith. That's why James 2:20 says, "Wilt thou know oh vain man that faith without works is dead!" Simple profession of faith without the works that demonstrate faith is useless. It's a classic case of talking the talk without walking the walk.

GAP BETWEEN OUR SOULS AND OUR SAVIOR: Many men today have a keen sense of business, order and goal achievement, especially in the middle class. However, some of these same men are unable to close the gap between themselves and God. These are the men who climb the career ladder quickly. These are the men who receive promotions on the job and burn the midnight oil to prepare themselves for their careers. Sometimes though, when they are alone, the secretly know that they are not as close to God as they should be. There are some who are not worried about their stock portfolios, annuities, 401K plans because they will take care of themselves. They are worried about closing the gap between themselves and God.

Across the nation men are realizing the importance of getting closer to God. That's why a few years ago, one million black men gathered in Washington D.C. to atone for their distance away from God. That's why Promise Keepers is attracting so many men. That's why the National Baptist Men's Movement is growing by leaps and bounds. Men everywhere want to close the gap between themselves and God. We can't get closer to our wives and children until we get closer to God.

Who Will Stand in the Gap?

Finally brothers and Sisters, we must consider that there is a need for someone to help us close the gap between ourselves and our God.

It has been established that there is a growing gap between our carnality and our spirituality, but who will stand in the gap?

There is a gap between husbands and wives, but who will stand in the gap?

There is a gap between parents and children, but who will stand in the gap?

There is a gap between what is and what ought to be, but who will stand in the gap?

When it comes to gaps that exist between humanity and inhumanity we can work to close those gaps!

We can give of ourselves and close the gap between the haves and have nots!

We can reach down and help someone and close the gap between the more fortunate and the less fortunate!

We can reach and close the gap between the touched and untouched!

However, when it comes to closing the gap between God and Man, we are helpless to do it all by ourselves!

The people of Sodom lived apart from God. Abraham tried to stand in the gap for them. He begged God to save the city if he could find 50 or even as little as 10 good men. The people were so adverse to God that the city was destroyed.

There are many today who have created big gaps between themselves and God!

In the past, Grandma and Grandpa have stood in the gap for them!

When they couldn't pay their bills on time, grandma and grandpa stood in the gap!

When they couldn't manage their own affairs, grandma and grandpa tried to stand in the gap!

When they had to stand in front of mean judges, grandma and grandpa, raised money for their defense, and tried to stand in the gap!

When it comes to closing the gap between a man and his God, who will stand in the gap?

Grandma can't stand in the gap!

Grandpa can't stand in the gap!

Paul told Timothy, there is one mediator between God and man...his name is Jesus!

If you need somebody to stand in the gap, call on Jesus!

If you need somebody to forgive your sins, call on Jesus!

Jesus, who died on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

Call on Jesus..he will stand in the gap!

Audit Trails

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 5, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things. But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." Matthew 12:35-36

Introduction

If an angel from heaven came to conduct a spiritual audit, how would you fare? If you receive a call today to say that your stewardship of the time, talent and resources that God has given you will be audited today, what would be your response? Would you be ready? Would you be afraid or would you be able to stand confident that everything is the way it should be? Audits reveal truths about our activities. That truth is discerned as auditor's reconstruct our actions through a trail of activity buried in our personal records. An audit of our spirituality would reconstruct the trail of our stewardship activities. If a stewardship audit could be conducted today, it would reveal in painstaking detail, the quality of our service to God.

Audits are conducted on many levels. As a general rule, whenever someone allows someone else to manage a business concern on their behalf, audits are conducted periodically to insure other parties that their interests are being protected and that their affairs are being managed properly. In large corporations, the stockholders are the company owners. They want to know if the company is operating according to recognized standards. In a very small company the owner may be a person. In a home, audits can be as simple as a husband or wife reading the check book ledger behind the other.

Scrapbooks and diaries tell a history of our lives. There is another history however, that paints a more detailed picture of who we are and what we really believe, that's our old checkbook registers. (A shoe box full of old receipts tells the same story for those who do not have checking accounts). The entries will read like a family history book. They chronicle every major event—births, deaths, and illnesses—and quite accurately reflect our tastes, habits, and interests.
They record our vacations, travels, and other moves. They also tell much about how expensively we dress or how extravagantly we eat. The total spent in each category will pinpoint the things that make the greatest demands on our income— either because of need or by choice.

If a checkup was made of our stewardship, what would it show? If the extent of our heavenly reward depended on an audit of the last full month of our life, how would we stand? Would it show time, talent and resources managed according to the divine order? If our time log shows many hours watching rented videos or television, involvement in career building activities and attending social events, but very few or no hours in the service of the kingdom, what would that say about our stewardship? If our audit talent log, shows that talents and skills we possess are rarely used in kingdom building but are generally restricted to our personal development, what does that say? If our financial contributions for the support of God's work are irregular and small in relationship to how we've been blessed, will a spiritual audit suggest we need to examine our values?

As Christians, we recognize that each of us must account for our stewardship of the resources that God has given us. Our goal is to be audit ready, for we know not the day or hour when the savior will return and call us to account for our stewardship.

The Bible and Stewardship

The bible teaches that mankind two great truths about the world's resources.

EVERYTHING BELONGS TO GOD: Everything in the world belongs to God. We know this because he declares in Psalm 24:1 "The earth is the LORD'S, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." This means that everything that we possess or come in contact with belongs to God. Nothing is our own. Everything is his. This truth is important because, men often feel they can give God something. There is nothing we can give him, because everything we have already belongs to him.

WE ARE MANAGERS OF HIS RESOURCES: While God owns the world he delegated the management of the world to humanity. In Genesis 1:26 the word says, "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." The reference to "Man" is to humanity not gender. In verse 27-28 he clarifies that by "man" in this context he meant male and female and both were to have "dominion" over the earth and were charge to subdue it. We are held responsible as managers of the resources that God has provided for this earth.

Our entire understanding of our stewardship responsibility is based on these two truths: Everything belongs to God and we are called upon to manage it according to his rules.

God's Basic Management Rule

The basic rule that God gives us it to manage ecological, corporate and personal resources in a way that conforms to the moral order.

As it relates to us personally, there are two sets of instructions. The first is found in the Old Testament. In Numbers 18:20-32, God provided that all believers set aside a tithe or a 10th of the resources that he has given them to manage to provide for the efficient operation and support of the sanctuary and its support staff, the Levites. The Levites had no land or inheritance, their entire existence depended totally on what was provided through the other tribes. The tithe was God's system to take care of them. Every third year there was a second Tithe collected for the purpose of taking care of orphans, widows and foreigners in addition to the Levites. The remainder of the resources managed by each family was left to their discretion.

The second set of instructions is found in the New Testament. Jesus reprimanded the religious leaders for promoting the tithe as an end in itself rather than a starting toward living a fully committed life predicated on faith, justice, mercy, compassion and giving. In Matthew 23:23 he noted that they emphasized minimum compliance with the law without understanding that more weightier matter which was total commitment to God with the tithe as a starting point. In the Old Testament it was understand that a person could use the 90 percent for their own purposes. Jesus suggested that a believers purpose and God's purpose should be one and the same, thus a person is not limited to just the tithe but even more if necessary to accomplish God's purposes.

Thus, the New Testament believer uses the tithe as a starting point and then blesses God even beyond, if it is necessary to accomplish God's purpose. His basic management rule is: "sacrificial living for the purpose of promoting God's purposes." He is not locked in by a 10 percent limitation. She is not married to a percentage etched in stone. But believers are committed to giving of their time, talents and resources, even to the point of sacrifice to help advance the kingdom of God. That is what he meant in Matthew 8:34-36 when he challenged every believer to deny himself, take up his cross and "follow me."

The Audit Trail

An audit trail is the record of how we manage what God has given us. With respect to spirituality it has to do with three areas: time, talents and resources.

TIME: Each believer is a time manager. God gives us 24 hours a day to manage. One day we will be called upon to give an account for our time management. According to the old Testament at least 2.4 hours a day is owed to the purpose of kingdom building. This may be bible study time, volunteer service to the needy or worship. In the New Testament context, we would not be bound by the 2.4 hour limit but would give whatever amount of time necessary to help accomplish a Godly purpose. While many are careful in other areas of stewardship, they are stingy when it comes to their time. When Jesus gives the call for believers to serve there are many who give excuses because they have other uses for their time. In one parable, Jesus told of a Lord who had a banquet and asked persons to attend but each offered excuses because they had other concerns that demanded their time and attention. They lost their blessing because they were not available. The same is true today.

TALENTS: Each believer is a talent manager. Every believer has a special gift which falls in one of nine categories of gifts listed in 1 Corinthians 12:8-10. These categories are: Wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discerning spirits and language and its interpretation. In the world they are called talents. In the Body of Christ they are called Gifts of the Spirit. Every believer has at least one, some have several to one degree or another. Jesus told the parable of the talents to illustrate that he expects everyone to use their gifts. There will be a day of reckoning in which we will be called upon to show how we used our gifts. To those whom much is given, much is required, but everyone is expected to do more than simply report the gift back to God unused for the kingdom.

RESOURCES: The resources we manage include our money and investments, properties, and possessions. All of these belong to God. The New Testament steward views everything that he owns as an instrument that can and will be used for the advancement of the kingdom, if necessary.

In the Old Testament mentality, he would only give only a tithe. But because his purpose is now God's purpose, the New Testament Steward perceives everything he or she has as being available for God's use. Giving less than a tithe is unthinkable, giving more than a tithe is usually the order of the day!

A Good Audit Report

When an auditor finishes his investigation of our affairs it all ends with an auditor's report. Everyone wants to hear the auditor say everything is in order.

An auditor's report may show that everything is accounted for, but the its extreme value comes with the management letter. The management letter shows areas of weakness that need to be improved.

A spiritual audit report may show that a believer has good intentions and wants to obey God, but his management letter may show areas where he needs to make improvements.

Before the report is given to the owners, the manager is given a chance to adjustments to his management procedures to show good faith efforts to make things right!

Everything we do leaves a trail! All of our time leaves a trail!
All of our talents leave a trail!
All of our money and resources leave a trail!
If you want to know where we are going in life...just follow our trail!
Follow any believer's trail and it will point you to the kingdom of God!
Follow that trail and it will take you to Calvary!
Follow that trail and it will take you to an empty tomb!
Follow that trail and it will take you to a living God!
If you want to know where I'm going...follow my trail!

It's Your Move

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

March 12, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth. Psalm 121:1

Introduction

Have you ever played a game of checkers or chess and found that you had run out of moves? It's frustrating when your opponent has all of your board pieces and has you cornered on all sides with no way out. Those or the times when you are outnumbered, your kings are gone and every place on the board will result in a tremendous loss. In Chess, it's the time when he has placed you in a position of check. Your opponent has all of the Knights, bishops,Kings and Queens and you find yourself a defenseless pawn, surrounded on every side. That's the time you hear the chilling words..."It's your move!" When there are no moves left, and defeat is imminent, some throw in the towel to save time. Others continue to play despite the fact the outcome was determined earlier in the game.

There are often times in life when we hear those words, "It's your move" and know instantly that we must make a dramatic decision. We must act or face a consequence. Consider the professor at the university who had a reputation for being very strict. With over 200 students in his class he had little time for those who procrastinated. On exam day he told the class that he would not accept any exam that was not on his desk exactly two hours after the exam began. "I have told you my rule, It's your move, " said the professor. A half hour into the exam, a student came rushing in and asked the professor for an exam booklet. "You're not going to have time to finish this. No exam papers will be accepted after the test time ends. What are you going to do? It's your move?" the professor said.

"I'll take my chances," replied the student. He then took a seat and began writing.

After two hours, the professor called for the exams, and the students filed up and handed them in. All except the late student, who continued writing. A half hour later, the last student came up to the professor who was sitting at his desk preparing for his next class. He attempted to put his exam on the stack of exam booklets already there.

"No you don't, I'm not going to accept that. It's late."

The student looked incredulous and angry.

"Do you know WHO I am?"

"No, as a matter of fact I don't," replied the professor.

"DO YOU KNOW WHO I AM?" the student asked again.

"No, and I don't care." replied the professor with an air of superiority.

"Good," replied the student, who quickly lifted the stack of completed exams, stuffed his in the middle, and said, "It's your move" as he walked out of the room!

Whether it is ping pong, checkers, football, tennis or the game of life, sooner or later the ball of life is going to be on our side of the court and someone will say, "It's your move!"

Often life gives us some challenging plays. We make our best moves but it seems like things just line up against us. We give some efforts our best shot and there are times when they don't succeed. Then there are times when we play our best game and rejoice not in hearing the words, but in saying the chill inspiring phrase "it's your move!"

That principle even applies to our spirituality and our relationship to God. God gives to us and we slap him in the face with disobedience. God makes a few big moves and takes away a few of our comforts and pleasures, so we try to punish him by withdrawing our praise and service. Move after move we play a dangerous game with God. It's a game we can't win, because he knows how we are going to move! At some point in our lives he sets up the board where we have no other place to turn ...then we hear the chilling statement..."It's your move!"

As Christians, we know that the essence of who we are resides in Christ. Our next move is to do what he wants, because "in him we live and move and have our being" (Acts 17:28)

Exposition

This text focuses on the Pilgrim song of Israel, which was usually sung by those on the move.

Pilgrims came to Zion to worship, pray and ask God for help. Many journeyed for days just to sit in the presence of God in the Holy City to ask divine blessings upon their actions and souls. They trusted God immensely. Thus, as they moved closer to Zion, they sung of their anticipation to receive help from God once they reached Zion.

Psalm 120 through 134 are called Psalms of degrees, accents and Pilgrim songs. They were usually sung by those on the move, about to be moved or desiring to move to Zion. These were the songs of the exiles in Babylon as well as the Pilgrims enroute to Jerusalem to worship. These were the songs of hope and inspiration that inspired them to reach higher and trust God more as they made one move after another.

Certainly David, the author of this Psalm, knew about making moves and looking to God for help.

David, as a young man, was constantly on the move. His life was filled with strategic actions that placed him in one position or the other.

He moved from the safety of his father's house to the obscurity of a pasture. It turned out to be a good move. Here, he learned to trust God to help him fight lions and bears as he protected the sheep.

He moved from the pastures to the battlefield, facing Goliath. That turned out to be a good move. After slaying Goliath, he became extremely popular as the people sang, "Saul has killed his thousands, but David his ten thousands." His victory elevated him in the eyes of the people but also drew the scorn of King Saul.

He moved from being a national hero to being a fugitive. When the king became jealous of the praise that he received, he sought to kill him personally. David made a move. He sought protection in the hills of the region. This too, turned out to be a good move, even though he was a wanted criminal. The people embraced him, followed him and loved him even more as he became a living legend among his countrymen.

He moved from being a Vagabond to being king. That was also a good move. As King of a united Israel and Judah, David was positioned to do many great things for the Lord. He defeated the region's enemies and united the people in battle. Under David the land was secured and an atmosphere of peace was created.

As King, David made a move on the wife of one of his soldiers. That was a bad move. It distressed him and convicted him with the burden of being both an adulterer and a murder conspirator.

He then moved to bring himself back to God and earnestly prayed that God would renew in him a clean heart and a right spirit. That was a good move.

Whenever the people made a move, they usually looked to God for help. They found that he was always awake, quick to answer and strong.

Making Moves

Today, there are many people who are making moves. Some of the moves they plan to make will benefit them. Others will increase their chances of failure.

SOME WILL MOVE AWAY FROM GOD: There are many who are contemplating some strategic life moves that will benefit them in some ways, but will ultimately take them away from God. There are some that are contemplating career moves that will put more money in their pockets than they have ever known. At the same time, some of the options available to them will place their spirituality in danger because of decreased time and emphasis on those things that will sustain their spirituality. Moving closer to career while moving away from God and family is counter productive. Yet, there are thousands today that are sacrificing God and family to move closer to their career objectives. When assessing such moves, each believer should consider that in addition to their skills and abilities, there are certain character traits and attitudes that they possess that make them attractive to others. Many of those traits are nurtured in a happy home and wholesome spiritual environment. Take away either of those and what was attractive, after a brief time becomes ugly, as personalities, attitudes and motivations change to adjust to the atmosphere around them. Jonah discovered that moving away from God has its down side. Not only did he discover that personal goals could be thrown overboard but that even simple efforts can dry up on the vine without God. That's why the song writer wrote, "Without God I could do nothing. Without him, I surely fail. Without him, I would be drifting. Like a ship without a sail!"

MAKING MOVES TOWARD GOD: While some are moving away from God, there are others who are deciding that it is time for them to move closer to God. They have lived a life away from God and see where it has carried them. They know the worldly scene. They've done the club scene. They've played the dating game and the waiting game. They have tried the independent life, free of church membership, prayer, worship and bible study. All of these have left them with an empty feeling. It is a feeling that, "Something is missing." That's the point where Jacob decided that he would return to his homeland. That's the point where the prodigal son said, "I will arise and go to my father." The point when we begin to move toward God is the point that we make up in our mind that we will make a radical move in our lives. It's the point in which we decide to move toward God rather than continue moving away from him. There are many who already belong to a church, but they have been drifting away in small increments. There are some who were reared in religious environments and carried the teachings of home in their hearts, even though they rarely acknowledged them..now they want to move closer to them. There are others who have known God for themselves and they desire to move closer to him.

SOME DON'T MOVE WITHOUT HIM: There are some who never make a move without God. They consult him in prayer and seek his advice on a daily basis. Every major move in their lives is the result of consultation with God. If they desire to buy a car or a house, they talk to God first. If they want to change jobs or careers, they talk to God first. Even if they want to take out a loan or contemplate other changes of direction, they talk to God first. Some have experienced difficulties in their marriages and personal lives but found workable solutions when they decided to talk to God first. This is the biblical example. People of God, talk to and consult him before they make major moves. Kings that went into battle, talked to God first. Prophets, about to make major pronouncements, talked to God first. Even widows who were destitute with no where to turn, talked to God first. Very few, in the biblical record, moved without talking to God. Those that did, met with undesirable ends. Those who talk to God have learned that he has always provided the direction they needed. Sometimes he even nudged them in the right direction by slamming some doors in their faces while opening others. Individuals should talk to God first. Families should talk to God first. Churches and communities should talk to God first. Believers should never make a move without God!

God Moves You!

Finally, brothers and Sisters, we must consider that while some take long periods of time to make their moves, there is one truth that cannot be ignored, when God gets ready for you, “you’ve got to move!”

There are many who simply procrastinate. They put off doing what they know they should do, until a more convenient season. They put off what needs to be done today until tomorrow. But when God get’s ready, you got to move!

Abraham was satisfied living in his homeland, but God showed him a land of promise and pointed him in the direction of his future, despite his old age, Abraham found out that when God get’s ready, you got to move!

Elijah hid from his enemies in caves, and was fed daily by ravens by a brook. He resisted efforts to come forth and show himself. But when God got ready, the brook ran dry and the raven powered room service he enjoyed stopped, then he returned to his mission. He learned that when God gets ready, you got to move!

Saul persecuted the church and put many of its believers in jail. He resisted following Christ himself and traveled in a different direction; but when God got ready, he caught him out on the Damascus Road and give him a new direction. When God gets ready, you got to move!

That’s why Isaiah resolved, “If the Lord needs somebody, here am I, send me!”

Somebody here, has been trying to move away from God!

Somebody here, has been trying to move without God!

Somebody here, has been trying to move with God!

No matter who we are, there comes a time when we have to make a move!

If you put your trust in God he change your:

Defeats into victories.. It’s your move!

Failures into successes..it’s your move!

Enemies into your friends..it’s your move!

Stumbling blocks into your stepping stones..it’s your move!

Somebody here today has made a bad move or two and thinks that the game is over!

But the word of God tells me that there was another move made in heaven 2000 years ago!

Jesus, the son of God, came down and died for our sins!

He moved up to Calvary!

He moved into a borrowed tomb!

And early Sunday morning he arose up from the grave!

Now...salvation is complete!

Now...opportunity for eternal life is available!

Now...you have a chance to live a spirit filled life!

Now...you can play a winning game!

It’s your move!

If You Can't Be With The One You Love

(Love The Ones You're With)
A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 13, 1971

SCRIPTURE: "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you. A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another. John 13:33-35; "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" 1 John 4:20

Introduction

Have you ever heard the phrase, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder?" It seems to suggest that when a person is away from the person they love they yearn for them and desire them to return quickly. In the absence of a loved one, we cling to the memory of every pleasant moment as we await their return. This constant focus on the object of our love intensifies our feeling of commitment and concern..at least in theory.

In modern times it seems that there are some who have developed their own response to this idea. Instead of "Absence makes the heart grow fonder" they say "Out of sight, out of mind." Indicating that their loves last only as long as they can see the object of their love. If he or she stays gone too long, then love is gone.

What do you do when the one you love out of sight? Often when a spouse or a person with whom we are romantically inclined is out of sight, the lines of communication are kept open. Letters are written on occasion, although many are not writing letters as they have in the past. In addition, phone calls are frequent, despite the increased costs. The intent of the letters and phone calls is to keep in touch with the one that is out of sight?

What happens if the object of our love is out of sight and communication is little or none? That is a formula for failure.

A popular song made a suggestion that seems to be accepted by many, "If you can't be with the one you love, love the one you're with." Those who adopt that mentality have concluded that the proper response to an absent lover is to share a meaningless physical experience with someone else until the real object of love returns. Such is the case with those who love on the rebound. Those who feel rejected or are otherwise wounded often share a brief relationship with someone else for the express purpose of tiding them over a wounded feeling until either their relationship is fully restored or the wounds have healed.

Real love does not provide a "Love the one you're with" escape. However, the love of God has a response that is similar: "If you can't be with the one you love, love the ones you're with." The implication is simple, in the absence of Christ in the flesh, until his return, loved the persons whom you come in contact with everyday!

As Christians, we understand the importance of loving God. We also know the importance of loving our fellowman. We must do both if we truly love God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains to his disciples what they are to do after he returns to heaven.

Jesus made it clear that he was about to leave. He was going to prepare a place for them and all believers. At this point, the disciples would not be able to go with him, but at a later time he would return and catch them up to be with him.

In his absence, the disciples were told to "love ye one another." By loving each other, each of them would demonstrate that they are truly children of the king.

Attitudes about love

One of the most peculiar power of mankind is his ability to love. This capacity is one of the ways that he stamped in the image of God. One of the most difficult challenges we have in life is to learn to love as God loves, with an "Agape" or universal Godly love for everyone. It is challenging because we have been called upon to have dominion over the world in which we live, while at the same loving everyone and everything in it.

The spiritual love that God has given us has a dynamic meaning. By this love we are also called to redeem and transform the world through the same power that raised Christ from the dead..

Love has become everything other than what God has intended for it to be. There are many who are puzzled by the spiritual dilemma that prompts them to ask the question: "If everybody loves or tries to love, why is it that we are not made happy and redeemed by all of the constant effort? " The answer probably lies in the truth that all that seems to be love is not so in reality.

Have you heard the child's definition of love: "Love is a feeling that you have when you feel like you've got a feeling that you've never felt before and will never feel any more!

Have you heard the romantic's definition? "Love is when two people lay siege to capture each other's hearts. When the siege is over and the hearts are captured the marriage is complete.

Have you heard the poet's definition? " Love is a sensation that leads to temptation that increases the population for future generations."

With notions such as these, it is not difficult to understand why so many people can claim to love without an evidence of the same. None of them describe real love

False notions

There are many who harbor false notions about love such as:

ROMANTICISM: The romanticist enters a subject to object relationship. A person who has the attitude about love views others in the relationship as things, commodities which can be used exploited, enjoyed then cast away. This attitude looks for the perfect object that is worthy. The with this attitude often feels like the only person that feels, think, enjoys, wills ,desires or commands. The feelings of others are beside the point. Romanticism is really an escape from the commitments that real love requires. The romantic usually refused to enter into real relationships which would make true love possible.

EGOTISM: The egotism reserves the love that should be expressed and related to others only for oneself. Related closely to romanticism, the egotist feels you should be honored to be in his presence and should count yourself fortunate to be among the number of persons in his company. He will have difficulty relating to the snapshot of others who desire love because of the wall size photo of himself that is always in the way.

AUTHORITIANISM: Others are viewed as imperfect "things" unworthy of a full relationship. Once perfection has been achieved, then and only then are they worthy of the effort required to love. Such a person has difficulty focuses on people but on the greater picture. He can love the family as a whole but not the family members individually. He can love the nation but not the people in it. He can love the church building but the people. The choir or ushers but not its members. Once the individuals come up to his standard of perfection, then they can be loved, but until then love is reserved for the greater picture.

True Love Requires and Death and a Resurrection

True love requires both a death and resurrection to be properly demonstrated. What Christ wants from believers is true love. He wants both a death and resurrection. Thus, true love requires that a person "deny himself" or die to his own impulses and give himself completely and totally to another.

True love requires more than simply waiting until the person another person becomes perfect.

It requires more than simply giving a person the chance to love you.

It requires more than making someone an object to be worshiped.

True love requires a person to die to himself. To completely lose himself in another person.

There are many of have died in themselves and found themselves in something bigger, more powerful and greater than themselves. Martin Luther King once said "If a man has found something for which he is willing to die, he is not fit to live."

For believers this truth is extremely important because it suggest that in order to truly love God we must be willing to die to ourselves. Our will disappears and becomes his will. Our desires vanish and lose themselves in his desires. Our goal becomes to abide in him as he abides in us.

But just as we die to our own interest we rise to his commands directions and purpose.

We die in ourselves and become resurrected in him. He becomes our all and all. He becomes our everything!

Love the ones you're with

Finally, brothers and sisters, when Jesus left the earth he told his disciples "I go to prepare a place for you" but in leaving he charged them to love everyone until he returns.

In essence, what he said to us is "You can't go where I'm going. You can't be with me, but what I want you to do is to love the ones you're with."

Every time you see a hungry man, love that man by showing him how to feed himself as well as giving him bread!

Every time you see a lonely person, show them I'm concerned by being a friend for them!

Every time you see a dejected person, show them compassion and by opening your heart to them.

If you can't be with the one you love, then love the one you with!

Love them in the choir, even they rub you wrong way!

Love them on the usher board, even when they make uneasy!

Love them on your job when they get on last nerve!

The greatest example of love was given by Jesus himself!

He loved the world, although it spit in his face!

He loved the world, although it mocked him and ostracized him!

He loved the world, although it nailed him to an old rugged cross!

I'm glad to know that he also loved the world enough to get up that Sunday morning, with all power in his hands!

He's gone to prepare a place for us! We can't be where he is right now....but if you can't be with the one you love... Love the ones you're with!

Cross Roads

Scripture: "And he bearing his cross went forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew Golgotha: " John 19:17

Introduction

Have you always been where you are now? Most people will readily admit that their lives are much different than they were several years ago. While we still have quite a ways to go to reach the levels that we seek, most of us have improved upon our past condition. We are not what we want to be. We are not what we should be. But thank God, we are not where we were. Most of us have come a long way from where we once were.

For everyone, the way has not always been easy. Consider the wealthy old man who was catching an airplane to New York from California. As he prepared to board, he heard the janitor grumble under his voice about how such a rich man probably never worked a day in his life. A ticket taker said something similar, so did the shoe shine man. The old man took note of the three and once in New York sent each of them a registered letter. He told each that were the recipients of $1 million provided they could be in his office in New York, one week from the date of the letter at 12 noon. One minute late would mean forfeiture of the $1 million. A week later the janitor was in the office. He looked weary and red eyed. The ticket taker was there too. His clothes were tattered and torn. The shoe shine man made it, but he was badly bruised.

The old man, holding the checks in his hand greeted the three who immediately recognized him. The man asked each to tell about their journey. The janitor said he drove the entire distance by himself, almost none stop, with little sleep. The ticket taker man said he caught a ride with a man who beat him, robbed him and left him for dead. On crutches and with one leg in a cast he thumbed a ride to New York. The shoe shine man left California, his car broke down, but he hid himself on a trailer full of chickens that was bound for New York. He was smelly and hungry, he said, but he arrived on time. The old man said as he handed each their checks, "A week ago you criticized me in the airport, on the basis of the way I looked. Today, you are millionaires but you look like you're not worth a dime. Let this be a lesson to you. Never judge a man by where is now, but by the road he had to travel to get there and to make it own time!"

What roads did you travel before you finally came to the cross? If the truth is told, some of us can testify that we were once thieves, adulterers, fornicators, liars, gamblers and murderers. Some have come over a way that has been watered by tears of frustration. Some have come over a way that has been haunted by an incestuous childhood. Some have traveled a lonely secret road where they still hear the hidden screams of aborted babies strewn along the road to their success. Some of us have traveled the fast lane of gamblers, prostitutes, dope dealers and users. Some of us have even joined church but find ourselves making u-turns, going back to what we are trying to get away from.

Believers have roads they have traveled and stories to tell. Some of those stories represent the Holy Spirit's best work and kingdom's grandest testimonies. That's what 1 Corinthians 6:11 means when it says, "And such were some of you..." But since finding the road to the cross you have been washed, sanctified and justified in the name of the Lord.

As Christians, we know that we are traveling the right road. It is road that began at the cross, but will lead us to eternity.

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he continues in a series of stops on his way to Calvary.

Pontius Pilate, the Roman Procurator, heard the appeal of the crowds as they called for Christ's death by crucifixion. Pilate, in an apparent attempt to avoid an insurrection, patronized the crowd, yielding to its call for the crucifixion of Christ. His decision to authorize the crucifixion marked the beginning of the journey to the cross.

The points along the final road to Calvary have been invariably described by some as stations of the cross. The stations of the cross mark significant places on the journey to Calvary that highlight certain events in scripture. The stations generally include: the place where Jesus was sentenced, given his cross, the place where he fell the first time, where he was helped by Simon, talked to women, nailed to a cross, buried and rose. There are others, but these mark the significant points along the trail to the place called Golgotha and afterwards.

The road followed by Jesus on the day of his death was a real road. It still exists today. Millions of people each year travel to Jerusalem to retrace the road to the cross and to touch and feel the station's of the cross.

It is by following the way of the cross that believers have come to a deeper appreciation of what the carrying of the cross was really like. "Via Dolorosa" or "Via Crucis" designates a stretch of road between the Antonia fortress and Golgotha, along which Jesus Christ walked bowed under the weight of the Cross. The fortress, which stood near the north-west corner of the Jewish Temple, was the starting point for Jesus' painful walk toward Calvary, which at that time was outside the city walls.

John notes in the text “and he bearing his cross went forth..” (V17) noting the actual start of Jesus’s physical journey to Golgotha. Each stop or noteworthy moment along the way seemed to mirror the same struggles of believers everywhere who carry their crosses on a daily basis. It indicated the heaviness of the load, the need for help, expectation of punishment and the final victory that every believer knows all too well.

The road to the cross was not an end to itself because Christ’s journey did not stop there but continued to other stations: which were the grave and eventually to the empty tomb and heaven.

For believers the journey is significant. In retracing the steps of Jesus, we walk a mile in his shoes and feel his pain. Because we have felt his pain, he walks with us daily and shares our pain.

Falsely accused

The first stop on the Road to Calvary was the point where Jesus was falsely accused. False witnesses were brought forward to accuse the master of speaking seditious words against Roman authority. It was not true.

Every believer can expect the same. There will be many times when believers will be falsely accused of deeds and misdeeds. Some will even be falsely accused of crimes and may receive punishments they do not deserve. The fact that Christ himself endured false accusations on the road to Calvary, indicates that he understands the disappointment and frustration we feel when we are falsely accused for doing that which we believe to be right. In Matthew 5:11-12, Jesus gave us the key to handling false accusations for doing right things, “Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.”

Needed A Little Help

Carrying the cross, Jesus bore a heavy physical load that was too much for one man alone. He fell on several occasions. Luke 23:26 notes that Simon of Cyrene was drawn from the crowd to help Christ carry the cross to Calvary.

On the road to glory, every believer will need some help. Jesus, bearing the cross, understood what it meant to shoulder heavy loads and need help. He was God’s son, but by his own design, was a man with all of the weaknesses of a man. Shouldering the burdens of life is a difficult task. Sometimes burdens overwhelm even the strongest saint. Everybody needs a little help some times. When burdened David wrote in Psalm 121, “I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth.” Knowing that believers carry heavy burdens, Jesus promises to help shoulder our burdens and lighten the load. That’s what the song writer had in mind when he wrote, “Bring it to me, I'll bear it. Bring it to me I'll share it. If there is need in your life...bring it to me!" Jesus put it this way, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest!"

Nailed to a cross

At Golgotha Jesus endured a tortuous physical punishment. He was nailed to a cross with spikes in his feet and hands. He was ridiculed and helpless at that point, but remained confident that he would make it to his final glory. He felt forsaken, but never stopped calling on God.

Often, along the road to glory, believers experience failure and frustration. These are the times when everything seems to crash around you, despite your best efforts to sustain them. Your hands seem helpless to solve problems as if they are nailed in place. Your mobility is limited and your very ability or willingness to make things happen is severely limited.

Jesus, nailed to a cross, crying out to his father, indicates his empathy with our feelings of helplessness and frustration. In pain and frustration he cried out, "Father, why hast thou forsaken me?" Having done this himself, he understands our feelings of frustration.

Believers who feel forsaken have a great assurance, Jesus promised never to leave us alone. In Matthew 28 he said, "And lo I'll be with you alway, even unto the end of the earth."

Road to Glory

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that while the road to salvation takes us to the cross, the road to glory begins at the cross.

The road to salvation, forgiveness and justification take us to the cross, but the road to resurrected lives, new hope and new beginnings, begins at the cross!

Many who should be enjoying renewed life and happiness, cannot achieve it because the road to renewal begins at the cross.

There is a song that says, "There's a highway to heaven. None can walk up there but the pure in heart. There's a highway to heaven, I'm walking up the king's highway!"

While there is a highway to heaven, there is only one on ramp! We must come by cross.

Jesus said in John 14:6 "..I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me."

Somebody is standing on the cross road of life, trying to decide which way to go!

I don't want to mislead you! You won't see everybody walking the road to glory. You won't see the crowd's walking this road because broad is the road to destruction, but strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life and few there be that find it!

I'm not going to tell you that if you get on the road to glory that you'll be rich and prosperous, but I will tell you that "whatever you need, God will supply!" For the word of God says in Philippians 4:19, "But my God shall supply all of your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

I'm not going to tell you that you that you won't have any problems, but I will tell that the God we serve is a problem solving God!

I'm not going to tell you that you will never failure, but I will tell you that the God we serve specializes in taking failures and turning them into successes!

I'm not going to tell you that you won't cry a few tears, but I will tell you that every heaven bound traveler has found that "weeping endures but a night and joy comes in the morning!"

Jesus knows the difficulty of walking the road to Calvary, but he also knows what its like to walk the road to glory!

Jesus knows what it means to be nailed to a cross and buried in failure, but he also knows what it means to have new resurrected experience!

He knows what it means to watch a life experience die, but he also know what it means to live again!

He knows because he died out on Calvary..

Was buried in a borrowed tomb...

And Early Sunday morning arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

No. 797-Cross

Cross Crowds

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 9, 2000

Scripture: "And a very great multitude spread their garments in the way; others cut down branches from the trees, and strawed them in the way." Matthew 21:8

Introduction

Have you ever been a part of a crowd? Crowds are large groups of people that gather at a particular place for a purpose. The identity of a crowd is fluid. While it is composed of a variety of people, it takes on the personality of the dominate personalities that influence its direction. Crowds gather for gather for various reasons. Crowds gather to watch or participate in an event. Sometimes crowds get out of control and become mobs. Crowds are often attracted to anything out of the ordinary: a parade, the arrival of a celebrity, a protest or something free. When crowds are large and disorderly they can become dangerous. People have been crushed in crowds, especially those that panic. Most who were part of a crown were glad when they were able to get out.

Crowds can often be rude and disrespectful. Consider the small town store that advertised a great sale it called "Christmas in July." Everything in the store had been marked down by 75 percent, no questions asked. On the day of the big sale a huge crowd had formed in front of the store. Customers had come from miles around and had stood outside for several hours, waiting for the store to open. As it approached opening time, the crowd became unruly. A large commotion began when a small man pushed his way to the front of the line, only to be pushed back. The crowd cursed him in a loud and colorful terms. The man tried again. On his second attempt, he was punched in the jaw, clubbed with an umbrella, knocked around a bit, lifted up and passed hand to hand until he was thrown to the back of the crowd. As he got up he yelled one last time, "That does it! If this crowd doesn't let me through, I'm not going to open the store!" Often crowds are thoughtless.

It is possible for a person to be lose IN the crowd. That's when we lose our personality and identity and simple do what everyone else does. The quest for individualism is lost. Henry David Thoreau was known for promoting the idea of individualism. He suggested that there is virtue in being different or "marching to the beat of a different drummer." Those who are lost in the crowd, move with the crowd, follow the crowd and act, not as a matter of conscience, but simply because the crowd acts.

It is also possible to be lost TO the crowd. Those in a crowd are often inconsequential to the main body. The crowd is not concerned about the individuals that make up its numbers. They are simply nameless faces that do what every one else does. If there is hurt, anguish, pain or trouble, the crowd notices, only to the point that one man's difficulty interrupts the movement of the masses.

How does God relate to us? Are we simply faces in the crowd? Of the millions of believers, does he know us or care about us? We are more than faces in the crowd to our Lord. He knows each of us by name and is concerned with every detail of our lives. He listens when each of us prays and grants prayer requests on a individual basis. We may worship him in a congregation, but he sees us as individuals. We may gather in great assemblies, but he responds to us personally.

As Christians, should be reassured to know that God knows us and cares for us. We are a part of a great crowd of people that met him at the crowd, but even in our anonymity, he died that we might have life and have it more abundantly.

Exposition

This text focuses on the final crowd that gathered with Jesus. He had seen many in the course of his three year ministry, but this crown was an important crowd.

Jesus had seen crowds before. The presence of a crowd was not unusual.

When Jesus went to Peter's house, where he healed Peter's mother-in-law, great crowds (Matthew 8:18) or the whole city (Mark 1:33) were present.

When Jesus ate with the tax collectors, a large company of tax collectors were present (Luke 5:29).

When Jesus went out and sat beside the sea, all the crowd followed him (Mark 2:13).

After Jesus healed the man with the withered hand on the Sabbath, many followed him when he withdrew from there (Matthew 12:15).

When Jesus began his ministry in Galilee, "great crowds followed him from Galilee and the Decapolis and Jerusalem and Judea and from beyond the Jordan" (Matthew 4:25).

When he preached the Sermon on the Mount, it was to a great crowd (Matthew 5:1-7:28; Luke 6:17).

When he raised the widow's son from the dead, a great crowd was present (Luke 7:11).

When the woman with the issue of blood touched Jesus, Jesus was amidst a large crowd (Mark 5:21,24; Luke 8:40,45).

When Jesus saw the crowds on one occasion, he said, "The harvest is plentiful, but the laborers are few" (Matthew 9:37).

A great throng of over 5,000 listened to Jesus teach by the shore of the Sea of Tiberias and were fed with five loaves and two fish (Matthew 14: 14-21; Mark 6:34; Luke 9:11-17; John 6: 2-14).

When Jesus healed the deaf mute, a multitude was present (Mark 4:33).

A great crowd of over 4,000 came to Jesus on the mountain where they were taught by Jesus and fed with even loaves and a few small fish (Matthew 15:29-39; Mark 8:1).

When Jesus foretold of his impending suffering and death, a multitude and his disciples were present (Mark 8:34).

When Jesus healed on the Sabbath, a great multitude was present (Luke 14:25).

When Jesus ate with Zacchaeus, Zacchaeus had to climb into a tree in order to see Jesus over the crowds (Luke 19:3).

When Jesus entered Jerusalem, crowds spread their garments on the road and went before him and followed him (Matthew 21:8).

The Contentious Crowd

Just as there were crowds drawn to Jesus' early ministry, in that final week of his life there were other crowds that followed him. The types are the same kind of crowds that follow believers all over the world.

The contentious crowd was the first hostile crowd Jesus encountered. Despite all of the good he had there were people who were willing to kill him and destroy him. This crowd was called a great crowd (Matthew 26:47) and its members came with swords (Matthew 26:47; Mark 14:43), clubs (Matthew 26:47; Mark 14:43), lanterns, and torches (John 18:3).

The crowd came up to Jesus after Judas betrayed him, laid hands on him, and seized him (Matthew 26:50; Mark 14:46) and bound him (John 18:12).

In the same context, believers can also expect that doing right can generate enemies and hostile elements in your family and community. The crowds we meet are contentious, bent on our destruction.

The Courtyard Crowd

The next hostile crowd they met was the courtyard crowd. This is the crowd that watched as Jesus appeared before Pontius Pilate, the governor (Matthew 27:15-26).

This crowd was composed of Jews that had gathered in Jerusalem for the annual Passover feast. They were accustomed to having a prisoner of their choice released to them by the governor during the feast. When Pilate asked the crowd which prisoner he should release, Barrabas or Jesus, this crowd said, "Crucify him," "Give us Barrabas!"

This is the crowd that could have helped Jesus if its participants had simply spoken up for him or called his name.

This happens many times today. There are many still standing in the courtyard. Neighbors who witness a wrong doing, an evil deed or dangerous act, but say nothing are standing in the courtyard. Often crimes in neighborhoods could be reduced if the neighbors would simple watch out for each other and be willing to speak up. Criminals could depend on those in the crowd to keep silent. They could depend upon their fear. The righteous in the crowd did nothing and in so doing allowed its rowdy elements to dominate the decision.

The Cruel Crowd

The next hostile crowd that Jesus encountered was the crowd of cruel soldiers inside the palace.

Jesus had already been sentenced to scourging and death, but they decided to add insult to injury...they became extremely cruel and tried to humiliate him as well.

When the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the palace they stripped him, put a scarlet robe on him, placed a plaited crown of thorns on his head, and put a reed in his hand (Matthew 27:28-29; Mark 15:17; John 19:2). They then kneeled before him and mocked him saying, "Hail, King of the Jews" (Matthew 27:29; Mark 15:18; John 19:3). Then they spat upon him and hit him on his head with the reed from his hand (Matthew 27:30; Mark 15:19) and stuck him with their hands (John 19:3). He was then stripped of the robe, his own clothes put back on him and led away to be crucified (Matthew 27:32; Mark 15:20).

In a similar way, there are many today who are treated cruelly by others. It's bad enough to stumble upon hard times, but it is worse when the crowds around you get cruel. It's bad enough not to be able to pay a utility bill, a mortgage or a car note on time, but it's even worse when those around us make fun of our situation and discuss it in their phone conversations. It's bad enough to face an unjust judge and jury or suffer a tragedy, but it's even worse when others grind salt in the wound.

The Crucifixion Crowd

Another crowd Jesus encountered was the crucifixion crowd. These were the men and women who wanted to se him dead.

This crowd was composed of Roman soldiers, the chief priests, scribes and elders, Jews attending the Passover; curious bystanders and those who doubted him.

As Jesus hung on the cross, some in this crowd derided Jesus, wagging this heads and saying, "You who would destroy the temple and build it in three days, save yourself! If you are the Son of God, come down from the cross."

The crucifixion crowd is the crowd that works to destroy you!

The crucifixion crowd wants to see you down on your back!

The Crucifixion crowd wants to see you literally nailed to the cross, without a chance of ever getting up again.

Cross Crowd

Finally, brothers and sisters there was another crowd that followed Jesus, it was the cross crowd.

These were the men and women who were in the crowd but not of it. The cross crowd consisted of those who had been touched by the master's hand!

Anytime a man or woman has been touched by the master personally, that touch has a tendency to separate you from the crowd!

Anytime the Lord has lifted you up out of the miry clay and planted your feet on the solid ground, that saving moment has a tendency to separate you from the crowd!

The crowd at the cross is not saying crucify him!

The crowd at the cross is not saying nail him to the cross!

In that crowd are millions of souls that testifying, "he touched me and now I'm no longer the same!

In that crowd was a man who said, "I was once lost but now I'm found, blind, but now I see!

In that crowd was a man who sat by a pool for 38 long years and ended his stay by the pool of Bethesda when Jesus said, "Take thy bed and walk!"

In that crowd was woman who ran through all the city saying, "come see a man who told me all I've ever done!"

In that crowd was a little boy who came to Jesus one day with two little fishes and five loaves of bread!

Some came in the crowd but even while he was on the cross, Jesus called them out of the crowd!

The thief on his right hand said, "Remember me" and Jesus "This day shalt thou be with me in paradise!" He was called out of the crowd and to the cross!

When it was all over a centurion soldier cried out "surely, he must be the son of God" he was called from the crowd to the cross!

A crowd watched as they hung him up and stretched him out wide!

A crowd watched him as he dropped his head and died!

A crowd watched him as they buried him in borrowed tomb!

But early Sunday morning, when no one was watching he got up from the grave with all power in his hands!

I don't known about you, but I want to be in the crowd when he comes back again!

Seven Women Who Followed One Man

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Riverside Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 9, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "And many women were there beholding afar off, which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him:" Matthew 27:55

Introduction

What would you think if you heard that seven women, some of them married, were all following one single man? Would you raise an eyebrow if you heard that they followed him wherever he went. If he talked to a group of men, they were close by. If he walked down a city street, they were close behind him. If he stopped to help someone, they were nearby. If such a group of women existed, there would be many suspicions raised as to their motives.

In the last days there will be a shortage of good men. Women will be looking hard to find a good man. Those who have found one, will hold on to him tightly. In fact, Isaiah 4:1 says, "And in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel: only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach." In the last days it won't be odd to see more than one woman with an eye on the same man. Some of that has already begun. Many marriages have been wrecked, friendships dissolved and lives have been lost because more than one woman had her eye on the same man, who proved to be the wrong man.

Recently Bishop T.D Jakes sponsored a "Woman Thou Art Loosed" rally in Atlanta. Over 75,000 educated, middle incomed women flew, drove and chartered buses to come to the Atlanta for the rally. The highlight of the conference was the appearance of Bishop Jakes himself. One man who watched the event on television said, "Look at that 75,000 women all looking for one man!"

While the comment drew a laugh, the truth is, the women were not looking so much at Jakes as they were the man he represented. In a sense the comment was true, there were 75,000 women looking for one man, but the man was Jesus, the son of God.

Today, Christian women are still following one man. He is a man they have found to be faithful, a good provider, always there for them and supportive. They have found him to be strong, personal and caring. They have learned that he loved them enough to die for them. When women find a man like that they follow him wherever he goes.

As Christians, we have a friend in the person of Jesus. Like the women at the cross, we have pledged to follow him, wherever he goes.

Exposition

This text focuses on a short verse which notes the presence of many women at the cross who observed the crucifixion of Christ from a distance.

Throughout his ministry, there was a faithful group of women that followed Christ wherever he went. From beginning to end, these were the women who had totally committed themselves to Jesus and his ministry. Through thick and thin, good times and bad, these women were always there, ready to assist and help Jesus in any way that they could. Seven women are mentioned in scripture, by name, as being followers and/or active supporters of Jesus and his ministry:

MARY MAGDALENE: Mary followed Jesus because she was one of the women that Jesus healed of evil spirits and infirmities (Luke 8:2). She was said to have had seven demons cast out from her by Jesus (Mark 16:9, Luke 8:2). When Jesus was crucified on the cross, she was one of the women who stood afar off. She was present at the tomb when the stone was rolled away. She was there when Jesus appeared outside the tomb.

JOANNA: This Joanna was the wife of Chuzas, Herod's steward (Luke 8:3). She was one of the women that Jesus healed of evil spirits and infirmities (Luke 8:2). She supported the ministry of Jesus from out of her means (Luke 8:2). She went to the tomb of Jesus after the Sabbath, toward the dawn of the first day of the week, and witnessed the great earthquake and the angel rolling the stone away from the tomb of Jesus (Matthew 28:1-2; Mark 16:1; Luke 24:10).

SALOME: Salome was the wife of Zebedee, the mother of the two apostles James and John, and the sister of Mary, the mother of Jesus (John 19:25). She ministered to Jesus when he was in Galilee (Matthew 20:20-28; Mark 15:40-41). She was so close to Jesus that she sought seats of honor for her sons from Jesus (Matthew 20:20-24; Mark 10:35-40).

MARY OF BETHANY: She anointed the head of Jesus with an alabaster jar of expensive ointment and wiped his feet with her hair. She had a brother named Lazarus whom Jesus raised from the dead. Mary, Martha and Lazarus were among those whom Jesus loved (John 11:5).

SUSANNA: She was one of the women that Jesus healed of evil spirits and infirmities (Luke 8:2). She supported the ministry of Jesus from out of her means (Luke 8:2).

MARY, "THE OTHER MARY": This Mary was the wife of Clopas and the mother of the apostle James the younger and Joses (Joseph). She was present at Jesus' afar off with several other women. She was also present at the tomb of Jesus when Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus rolled the stone to the door of Jesus' tomb (Matthew 27:61; Mark 16:47; John 19:38-42). She went to the tomb of Jesus after the Sabbath, toward the dawn of the first day of the week, and witnessed the great earthquake and the angel rolling the stone away from the tomb of Jesus (Matthew 28:1-2; Mark 16:1; Luke 24:10).

MARY, THE MOTHER OF JESUS: Mary was the earthly mother of Jesus (Matthew 1:18,25). Mary's husband was Joseph (Matthew 1:18), a carpenter by trade. She and her four sons, James, Joses, Judas and Simon - and at least two daughters (Matthew 13:55-56; Mark 6:3) followed Christ's ministry from the beginning to the end.

Why They Followed Jesus

The seven women who were named and others followed Jesus for the same reason. He had touched their lives in some way. Some of the seven women had been healed of evil spirits. He gave others new hope. Some followed him because he accepted women on a different level than had ever been before.

Until Jesus came on the scene, women were treated as inferior beings.

* In the Mediterranean region and the near East, women were viewed as inferior beings because of the Patriotarcial society.

* In the Greek society women were held as inferior to men and destined only for procreation (childbearing).

* In the Roman society a wife was the property of her husband.

* In the Jewish societies, women were only sexual beings, servants of their husbands, with limited religious roles. They were not required to make the annual pilgrimages to Jerusalem for the feasts. They didn't go to school where the Torah was taught. They were not allowed to read or recite scriptures.

After Jesus began his ministry, his treatment and acceptance of women caused problems with the Jewish leaders, his apostles, and others who had allowed women to become stereotyped as lower class beings. The women Jesus met were astonished at his attitude and acceptance of them

He defied the establish traditions when he talked to the woman at the well in public. When a woman was caught in adultery he related to her with compassion and told her to go and sin no more.

Women Must Follow Jesus

Women today follow Jesus for the same reason they followed him in biblical times. They follow him because he has touched their lives in a powerful way.

The women who followed Jesus supported his ministry with their time, talents and resources. Whether it was bathing his feet with oils, supplying food for he and his apostles, or giving of their time to follow and support him, the women gave him every fibre of their spiritual being.

Today, the ministry of Jesus still needs women. He needs women who are willing to give of their time to help expand the kingdom of God.

He needs women who will help promote the kingdom through the use of their special spiritual gifts.

He needs women who will give of their finances to help underwrite the expense of kingdom building.

The women who followed Christ were not looking for a HUSBAND, but they were trying to be a part of the BRIDE OF CHRIST, the spiritual body of believers that will live with him eternally!

The women who followed Christ were not looking for a BOYFRIEND, but they were looking for a FRIEND. The song writer knew how they felt when he wrote, "What a friend we have in Jesus, all our sins and grieves to bear. What a privilege to carry everything to God in prayer!"

The women who followed Christ were not looking for a LOVER, but they were looking for the LOVE OF GOD. It's the love that John 3:16 talks about when he said, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have eternal life."

The women who followed Christ were not looking for a ONE NIGHT STAND, but they were looking for a PLACE IN ETERNITY! They were looking for a place where the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest! A place not made by hands!

The women who followed Christ were not looking for a man to pay their LIVING EXPENSES, but they had accumulated a huge spiritual debt and they needed the son of God who had the will the pay the bill!

The followed who followed Jesus, followed him through sunshine and rain!

They followed him through hostile crowds and jeering mobs!

They followed him as he picked up an old rugged cross!

They followed him as they hung him up high and stretched him out wide!

They followed him as they buried him in a borrowed tomb!

And early Sunday morning, the women who followed him heard an angel say, "He is not here, why seek ye the living among the dead. Come see the place where the Lord lay!"

Whether you are male or female...follow Jesus!

Take no chance of getting lost!

Follow Jesus!

Follow Jesus!

Cross Talk

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 16, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "Jesus said unto them, Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? 40But to sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared." Mark 10:38-40; "And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise." Luke 23:43

Introduction

Have you ever noticed that every walk of life has its own conversation? Those who walk in certain circles usually find themselves exchanging ideas about the same kinds of things. They are so in tune with each other that they often abbreviate references because most people in their circle of acquaintances know the meanings. Those outside of our walk of life often hear what we say but have only a faint idea what we are talking about because they don't understand our talk. They know the words, but they don't understand what the words mean.

For example, those who move in medical circles have their own talk. They live in a world of EKG's, IV's, ICU's, OR's, Code Blues, charts, and STAT. The terms and initials represent procedures, levels of medical care or emergency situations. Those who become associated with the medical profession by training or while attending to someone receiving medical care learn "doctor talk" pretty quickly.

Women are often frustrated when their husbands talk sports talk. Some watch their husbands glued to television sets listening as sports announcers use words like, T-formation, Blizt, TD, End Sweep, goal to goal, first and ten, backfield in motion,"hut hut" and a variety of other words and utterances that have little meaning to anyone who does not understand the game.

Ever talked to a computer junkie? If so you probably needed a dictionary to understand them. They live in a world of gigabytes, megahertzs, Ram, floppy disks, hard drives, CPUs and internets and service provider. It's a world where "Windows" has nothing to do with glass, a "mouse" is not a rat and if you're told to "back that thing up" you're not being told to dance.

Some parents are frustrated trying to talk to their kids. When their children say something is "tight," the parents think it doesn't fit, but the kids mean its good. It's a world of Hot Boys, fly girls, glocks, hatin',ganking, rocks, and jamz that is "da bomb" to kids but is totally confusing to parents.

Our talk often suggests our walk. A person who regularly talks about joints, crack, detox, hits, getting high, and OD, suggests that he or she is familiar with the drug scene as either a participant, care giver or association. A person who refers to lockdowns, isolation, ID's, 10 to 20, 25 to life, death row and variety of similar terms is associated with the penal system in some way either from the perspective of an inmate, law enforcement officer or incidental acquaintance.

If every walk has its talk, then what do those who walk the road to the cross talk about? Just like any other walk, believers have their own talk which we take for granted but those outside our walk find it quite baffling. Terms such as: regeneration, sanctified, and justification are utterly confusing to those outside of our walk of life. Phrases such as "working out my soul's salvation," "born again", "my spirt man and my flesh man", "The word", "Going up yonder" and "walk by faith not by sight" have great meaning to those who walk in a believer's circles, but are confusing to those who don't share the same walk.

While every walk has its talk, everyone who knows the talk may not be walking the walk. Just as there are people who learned the meaning of medical terms without being doctors, football language without being athletes or understand computers and other walks without actually being in that world themselves, there are some who are in the church, who know the talk, but do not walk the walk.

. Jesus came to show us the way to heaven. It is the way of the cross.

As Christians, we walk with Christ on a daily basis. In our walk with him, we talk with him. That daily talk is inspiring and encouraging. We understand it. We look forward to it. It is the talk of the cross.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains his approaching judgment, death and resurrection. He said the words, but his disciples did not understand what he was talking about.

As Jesus was approaching the final week of his life, he took his disciples to the side and began to explain to them what would happen to him in Jerusalem. He said once in Jerusalem he would be arrested, taken before the chief priests and Jewish leaders and sentenced to die (v33). Moreover, he added that he fully expected to be mocked, spit upon, whipped and ultimately killed. After three days, he said, he would come back to life again. Two of his disciples, James and John, known as the sons of Zebedee heard Jesus talk, then asked a favor. They wanted seats on his right and left hand once he came into power in his kingdom. Their statements indicated that they did not understand what Jesus was talking about.

In all of his talks with his disciples, Jesus referred to two spheres of spiritually.

One is described as the Kingdom of God. The other is described as the Kingdom of Heaven. When he referred to the Kingdom of God he meant the spiritual union between believers on earth in the present moment. When he referred to the Kingdom of Heaven he spoke of a literal place where believers would spend eternity with him. The favor asked by James and John indicated that they did not understand anything Christ talked about. They interpreted his entire reference to a kingdom to mean that he would use his miraculous power to build a worldly kingdom among men. When he spoke of his death and resurrection, they assumed he meant a political death and a political resurrection. Even if a physical death was meant, they felt that it too would ultimately result in the establishment of a kingdom in this world, of which they wanted positions of power. So the lobbied him, based on their understanding of what he talked about.

Jesus sensed that they did not understand him. He asked, "Can you drink the same cup that I must drink?"

In essence he said, you are able to talk the talk, but can you walk the walk?

The term "cup" in this context had more than a literal meaning. It meant more than a simple chalice or drinking cup. It was a reference to his suffering. It was a reference to the pain and humiliation that he would endure. The cup was his destiny. Could they drink from this cup? Could they share this destiny?

They answered that they could, not knowing what he meant.

What Jesus Meant

Those who follow Christ today are fully aware what he meant when he asked, "Can you drink of this cup." We understand the meaning of the cup and we also know the meaning of the cross. As we walk the believer's walk there are things that believers talk about. Those who walk the way of the cross seem to talk the same language anywhere in the world.

WE TALK ABOUT REPENTANCE: Every true believer talks about a time his or her own life experience when they were not in the faith. True believers talk about repentance. Repentance refers to the point which you turned away from the world and focused on Christ. It is the time that you released yourself and caught hold to God. This is the time that 1 Corinthians 6:9-11 refers to when it dictates a long list of worldly involvements including thievery, adultery, and drunkenness and concluded by noting, "And such were some of you."

WE TALK ABOUT BEING BORN AGAIN: True believers are not the same people they once were. They have become different personalities with different goals, ambitions and manners. In every esthetic and spiritual way, they have been reborn. In circles of believers the phrase "born again" is talked about in conversation and is the emphasis of many of our songs. It is the theme of the message that Jesus gave Nicodemus when he told him that anyone that enters the kingdom of God must be born again.

WE TALK ABOUT BEING BAPTIZED. Believers talk about baptism a lot They talk about a water baptism that signifies their change from direction and spirit. They also talk about their spirit baptism, that empowers their gifts, inspires them and motivates them and energizes them when they are working to build the kingdom of God. John told his disciples that he would baptize them with water but one coming after him would baptize them with more than water, but with the Holy Ghost's fire.

WE TALK ABOUT THE HOLY SPIRIT: Those outside our faith don't understand us when we talk about the Holy Spirit. They don't understand that we actually refer to the presence of God within us. The Holy Spirit is not an "it" but a "He." Those who don't understand our talk sometimes see a person excited, shouting or praising God in a bold way and say, "she caught the Holy Ghost" as if the Holy Spirit was some mysterious spark floating in a room that lands on a person and causes them to respond. When we talk about the Holy Spirit, we talk about God's power within us. One song writer said the Holy Spirit "makes you move, makes shout and makes you cry within!" It is definitely true that every believer asks for the Holy Spirit's guidance every day.

WE TALK ABOUT BLESSINGS: If there is one thing that believers talk about, its blessings. A blessing is a gift from God. It is not the same as good fortune. Good fortune is pure luck that one stumbles across in life that is always pleasing. A blessing is an experience that works to our advantage whether it is pleasing or not, because it comes from God. Believers see our days of health as a blessing. We also see our days of sickness as a blessing. We even see the homegoing of a loved one as a blessing. It sounds strange to those who do not know the Lord. They can't understand why a person laying in a hospital room, hardly able to breathe can mumble the words, "God is Good All the time, All the time God is good!" They can say it because, they have learned that "All things" work to the good of those who love the lord and are the called according to his purpose. If you want to get a believer started just talk about blessings and they'll be on roll.

Cross Talk

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must note that believers have a great testimony because Jesus gave us something to talk about!

Jesus did a lot of talking in his ministry. He talked to crowds on the side of mountains, on beach heads and from boats. He talked to tax collectors and prostitutes. He talked to scribes and pharisees. He talked to blind men, lame men and to political leaders.

Many people heard him as he talked while he walked.

There is great value in talking and walking with the Lord.

When you talk with the Lord, He:

—BREAKS CHAINS that bind you; HEALS HURTS that pain you;

—CLARIFIES THING that frustrate you; LIFTS BURDENS that hold you down

—CHANGES EARTH'S SHAME into heaven's glory; TURNS OUR SORROW into unspeakable joy!

No wonder the song writer said, Just a little talk with Jesus makes it right!

Jesus talked with his disciples along the way. Today I still hear the song writer's words, "I come to the garden alone, while dew is still on the roses. And the voice I hear, falling on my ear the son of God discloses. And he walks with me and he talks with me and he tells me I am his own, and the joy we share as we tarry there none other has ever known."

Even in our times of trouble Jesus gave us something to talk about!

In his dying hours, there was some cross talk!

When there are nails in your hands, a crown of thorns on your head, and nails in your feet, what do you talk about?

Jesus showed us what to talk about, not only when the crowds our shouting Hosanna but when we are being nailed to the cross..."Father forgive them for they know not what they do!-That's cross talk!

When we feel all alone and deserted by the world the human side of us cries out sometimes. That's the kind of talk we sometimes hear from those on the cross. "I thirst" I yearn for more. I desire more.

Sometimes on the cross we can hear a believer say, "Father, why hast thou forsaken me?" That's cross talk, but even while we're asking we hear Jesus words say, "And lo I'll be with you always, even to the end of the earth!"

When there is no place to turn and no where to go, what is the cross talk? "Into thy hands, I commend my spirit!" That's why a believer who is being nailed to the cross can drop to his knees and declare, "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know. If thou withdraw thy hand from me, whether shall I go?" -That's cross talk!

Even on the cross the dying thief inspiring cross talk, he heard the master say, "This day, you shall be with me in paradise!"

He dropped his head in the locks of his shoulders...

And he died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

That's something to talk about!

Every day he walks with me!

That's something to talk about!

Every day he blesses me!

That's something to talk about!

The Stone Roller

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 19, 2000

Scripture: "And, behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it." Matthew 28:2

Introduction

Have you ever been on the outside wondering how you would get in? There are many times when we have faced barriers, real or imagined, that make it difficult for us to go forward. We often find ourselves wondering what we will do to overcome the barriers. The most common situation involves locking ourselves out of our cars and houses. The more complex situations involve being locked out of opportunities and chances to progress and to succeed by barriers. Barriers are coming down. New laws now require buildings to be handicapped accessible, providing wide doorways, toilet stalls, ramps and rails, all designed to make it easier for the handicapped to get in. It is definitely a relief to those who worry about such things, to discover that the barriers they fear have already been removed.

On any given Sunday a variety of people attend worship services. Many bring with them the cares of the world. Ushers should always be careful when greeting visitors because they never know where the visitors come from. Consider the ushers of one the finest churches in Walawala. The huge church attracted visitors from many miles and its ushers were constantly encouraged to be friendly. A new usher on the board had recently finished her ushering class and wanted desperately to convince the other ushers that she could handle her assigned area. On her first Sunday of service there was an unusually high spirit in the worship service. The spirit really moved. As the service ended the new usher noticed a man spread out over three pews in the back of the church. The man was breathing heavily laying flat on his back. The usher came over and said, "That's very rude of you, sir, don't you know that you are in the Lord's house.Don't you have any respect? Where did you come from?" The man looked up helplessly and said, "The balcony!" We never no where the people who attend a worship are coming from!

One of the chief concerns of church ushers is to remove any barriers that will make it difficult for a person at worship to experience God's presence. That is an important ministry because often believers approach the church building itself weighed with fears and worries that dramatize their anxieties. As many walk from their cars to the very doorway of the church, they pray that they will find answers to problems, reassurance and strength. Ushers, remove artificial barriers that could prevent a person at worship from getting close to God. Like the angels, at the tomb, they roll away stones.

As Christians we have learned that most of our fears and worries about life have been unnecessary. Much of what we worried about in life was really as bad as we thought. God made it there before we did and roll the stones away. The great truth that the resurrection of Christ brings to mind is that every obstacle or stone that is put in front of God's will for us, without a doubt will be rolled away! Those who assist worshipers in learning this truth about God are like God sent angels...stone rollers.

Exposition

This text focuses on events that took place after the crucifixion as the women came to anoint the body of Christ. According to the text, Christ had been in the grave for three days and nights as he predicted in Matthew 12:40. Early on the first day, which was Sunday morning, Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of James and Salome set out to anoint his body with spices. While enroute the thought came to them that there was a stone covering the entrance of the tomb. This was no small pebble or lightweight rock. It was a huge stone, taller than a man, and requiring the services of several men to move. It had been placed in front of the tomb to keep Christ's disciples from coming in the middle of the night, stealing the body, and claiming to the world that he had risen from dead. The intent of the stone was to keep believers away from Christ. As they walked toward the tomb they became concerned about "who shall roll for us the stone away?" Although they were concerned, the women were not dissuaded, they went forward anyway! Once there, they learned that the stone had already been rolled away. An angel, which appeared as a young man, told them not to fear because Jesus had risen. They were told to go and tell the disciples about his resurrection.

The women left excited because not only had the stone been rolled away from the tomb, but the stone of doubt and fear had been rolled away from their hearts.

It was no doubt in their mind that although they met an angelic face at the door of the tomb, it was God him that rolled the stone away.

Rolling Stones

Today, many believers approach the presence of God on a regular basis. They are often met by the radiant angelic presence of the church usher.

The angel at the tomb could very well be a type of the first church usher.

THE USHER IS OFTEN THE FIRST PERSON SEEN: The first person the women saw was the angel. The first voice they heard was the angel. The first hint they received that everything would be alright, came from the angel. Likewise, many people attend a worship service from various walks of life. Usually, the first person they see is the church usher. Sometimes, the first voice they hear is that of the usher. What the usher says and does can either inspire confidence and hope or stir fears and anxieties. A warm smile and a friendly handshake are often the very courtesies that are needed to set the tone for a great worship experience. Ushers who frown, appear angry or grouchy do more damage than they do good.

THE USHER SHOULD BEAM AND RADIATE: The angel was radiant and beamed, so should the usher that meets and greets guests. The usher should radiant a sense of inner peace and unity with the body of Christ. It is not difficult to pick up bad vibes. Visitors can sense when there is something wrong. Ushers should be at peace with themselves, with other members of their board, the pastor and the general congregation. Good ushers should be willing to reach out and touch a visitor. Often a handshake, a hug or other casual greeting breaks down barriers that allows visitors to know that they are welcome to the presence of God.

THE USHER SHOULD NOT APPEAR TROUBLED: The angel at the tomb did not appear troubled by the stone or the empty tomb. In fact, the angel sat on the stone which, by its very presence, had frustrated the thoughts of the women as they journeyed to the tomb. Ushers must be confident themselves that God is still on the throne. If the women who came to the tomb were upset about the stone, their fears disappeared when they saw the angel sitting on top of the stone. In a similar manner ushers must demonstrate an inner strength to those who are coming to worship that they are on top of things. Whatever stones that are in their own lives, they are on top of them, with the help of God. Therefore, ushers who are overwhelmed with personal problems should be the object of the prayer of others on the board. Those who are weak should be strengthened through active support and fervent prayer. When ushers stand at the door their very presence should say, "no matter what stone is front of my way, with God's help, I'll be on top of it."

The Stone Roller

It is true that usher at the door is typical of the angel who the women met at the tomb. The usher at the local church may be seen smiling, greeting and rejoicing. He or she may be seen radiating confidence and faith. The usher may also be seen sitting on top of their own mass of daily problems. However, the usher is not the stone roller, only the person who introduces each worshipper to one who has the power to roll away stones.

Who has the power to roll away stones? Angels? Guards? Machines? Only God himself can roll away stones. The angel rolling away the stone represented the power of God himself to roll away stone.

The message of every usher to those who worship should be the same as those of the angel.

FEAR NOT: No matter where we have come from or what road we have walked, we should enter the house of God without fear. David put the matter of fear in perspective when he said, "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear. The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid." Fear is cradled and nurtured in doubt. Those who come to the presence of God should have no doubts that God is able to respond to their personal need.

I KNOW THAT YE SEEK JESUS: If we enter the house of the Lord we should be prepared to worship. Every person who comes to a worship does not come to see the decorations, enjoy the atmosphere or share a seat with a friend, believers come to worship to find the Lord. One song writer concluded: "I don't know what you came to do, but I came to praise the Lord." Those who seek Jesus will find him for he is only a prayer a way!

HE IS RISEN: Every believer needs to know that the God they serve is a living God. He sits high but he looks low. Not only is he alive but he is aware of the various needs of every believer. Believers should come to worship confident that God is able to do the impossible! God is able to turn conditions around! God is able to solve problems! Because God is alive and able, every believer should expect to leave their worship service motivated to set the world on fire!

Go Tell Somebody

The final words of a good usher to any worshiper come as they leave the building. The final words are the last words that a believer hears as he or she leaves the sanctuary. Those final words are similar to the angel's words... go and tell somebody about the goodness of the Lord!

Every believer should have a testimony and a story to tell.

We should be ready to testify about the power of the Lord!

We should be able to tell the world that we have met the Stone Roller!

Who is the stone roller? Where can he be found?

The Blind man testifies...I had the stone of blindness covering my eyes. But one day I met the the stone roller.. He rolled the stone away. Now all I can say is, "I was once blind, but now I see!"

The woman at the well testifies...I met the stone roller at the well and he rolled the stone of guilt away in my life. "Come see a man who told all I've ever done."

The little boy testifies...I met the stone roller on a crowded hillside and he rolled the stone of hunger away for a crowd of 5000 people with two little fishes and five loaves of bread!

Who is this stone roller?

Who is this man who is taking our fears and giving us courage?

Who is this man who is taking our weakness and giving us strength?

Who is this man who is taking our failures and giving us succcess?

Who is this man who is taking our losses and giving us victories?

Who is this man who is taking our sins and giving us salvation?

His name is Jesus!

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley and the Bright and Morning Star!
Jesus who died out on Calvary!
He was held down by a stone of hatred!
He was locked down by a stone of prejudice!
He was blocked down by a stone of death
But early Sunday morning, the power of God ...
Rolled the stone away!
Go quickly and tell

An Empty Cross, A Vacant Tomb and A Living God!

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 23, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "But He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; The chastisement for our peace was upon Him, And by His stripes we are healed." Isaiah 53:5; He is not here; for He is risen, as He said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay." Matthew 28:6

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when you paid a bill in full? How did you feel? One of the most frustrating feelings is to be in debt. When we are in debt there is a load on our shoulders, our patience grows thin, our sense of humor dulls and we are extremely sensitive. Debt robs us of the freedom to do what we want to do because even when we get our paycheck it is already spent. If there is a feeling worse than being in debt it is being in debt and not having the money to pay our bills. That's really frustrating. That's when the bill collectors start calling, knocking on the door and sending us notices in the mail. Because debt places a heavy load on our shoulders, we feel a sense of relief when a debt is paid in full. The car seems to drive a little better once it's paid in full. A bed sleeps better when we have paid for it. Without the weight of so many bills on our shoulders, we walk lighter each day.

Sometimes the bills just add up. Consider the man who wanted to do something special for his father's funeral he since was unable to attend. He called his brother who did not always play with a full deck. "Do something really nice for papa. I mean make it really nice. Don't worry about the cost, just send me the bill." He said. The nit-wit brother followed his brother's directions to the letter and the funeral was a beautiful and memorable occasion. Later however, his brother got a bill for $300, which he paid without a thought. The next month, he got another bill for $300.00, which he also paid. He figured this was a late bill from the funeral service. But bills for $300.00 kept arriving every month. Finally. the man called his brother again to find out what was going on.

"Well," said the other brother, "you said to do something nice for Dad. So I rented him a tuxedo. It was a good deal too. It was only $10 a day until it is returned!" Sometimes the bills just keep coming!

Our sin bill is like that! Acting very foolishly, we keep adding one sin after another to our sin bill. It just keeps adding up! No matter how we try, the bill just keeps getting bigger and bigger and bigger!

What makes the resurrection of Christ such a joyous occasion for believers is that it reminds us of the fact that our sin bill has been paid in full. We see the reminders and know that it is paid in full. The empty cross and the empty tomb serve as clear reminders to us that we have been given a clean slate and a chance for a brand new start.

As Christians, we celebrate Easter with excitement and enthusiasm. More than any other time of the year we are reminded that hope lives and faith remains strong. Each time we see an empty cross, we are reminded that our debt has been settled and our sin bill has been paid.

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah's prophecy that the Messiah would one day be wounded for the sins of the world.

Isaiah's words were prophetic indeed. They were spoken hundreds of years before the birth of Christ and described almost to the letter the details of Christ's death.

The essence of the passage lays out in clear detail how Christ would be wounded, chastised and abused while paying the price for our transgressions or sins. The payment Christ would make on Calvary would be sufficient enough to substitute for our sins. His blood and death would pay the price for our atonement.

On the cross, Christ would suffer humiliation on our behalf.

On the cross, Christ would be further wounded on our behalf.

On the cross, Christ would be the symbol of defeat, death and doom!

On the cross, Christ would pay the awesome price for our liberation. It was a shameful yet rehabilitating deed. There was no other way that the payment for the sin of man could be made except for the shedding of blood...on the cross.

The image of the debt being paid is often depicted by a cross with a likeness of Christ on the cross, called a crucifix. A crucifix is a cross bearing a painted or sculptured image of Christ. They first appeared in the 5th century, and from the 9th century on medieval artists increasingly aimed at a realistic portrayal of Christ's suffering. The artists of the Renaissance seemed focused on the suffering and the pain that result from sin, thus they often depicted Christ on the cross in their masterworks. During the Reformation, Protestants generally repudiated the negative focus on the suffering and disassociated themselves from the crucifix. Thus, most Protestants, even today, refuse to wear crucifix ornaments or display artwork that suggest the crucifix as the symbol of the church.

Contrasting the image of the defeated mission with Christ hanging on the cross is the image of the empty tomb and the empty cross. On the first day of the week, the women came to the tomb to anoint the body of Jesus. To their surprise, the stone that had blocked the tomb's entrance had been rolled away and an angel sat upon it. The angel's announcement "Come see the place where the Lord lay" was a declaration of victory and closure to a divine mission. When the women saw the empty tomb, they knew Jesus had risen. It also meant that all other promises he had made them were still possible! They were overjoyed to say the least as they ran to tell others this great news.

The fact that the tomb was empty became a clear reminder that the debt for the sins of mankind had been paid in full.

Rather than focus on the enormity of the debt, the empty cross reminds us that the debt has been paid, that every believer has a clear line of credit in heaven, and the endorsement of the heavenly father to do any and everything within his will.

The Empty Cross

Today, the image of the empty cross towers above us. Believers around the world wear empty crosses around their necks as jewelry, dangling from the ends of key chains or swaying from side to side on the rear view mirrors of automobiles. The empty cross has a powerful meaning to those who believe in the promises of God.

HOPE FOR OUR HARD HEADEDNESS: The empty cross reminds every believer to keep the faith and never give up hope. The empty cross is a symbol of triumph over difficulty. In that respect, the empty cross serves as a reminder to each believer that there is always reason to hope as long as God is on the throne. Today, there are many who are experiencing their "point of pain." The point of pain is what the crucifix depicts. It shows the results of our foul ups, goof ups and dumb decisions. It shows the penalty for our sins. This is why Isaiah 53 points out that he was "wounded for our transgressions...bruised for our iniquities." He took the penalty for our goof ups, mistakes and down right sinfulness upon himself. He took our whipping and gives us a chance to start again! The empty cross reminds us that no matter how bad we have been in the past or what we have done wrong, there is still hope! The empty cross says, you are not condemned forever! There is hope. That's what Romans 8:1 means when it says, "There is therefore now no condemnation to those which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

POTENTIAL FOR PEACE: The empty cross reminds us that we can still be at peace with God. The crucifix reminds us of our "Point of Provocation." It focuses our attention on the payment for provocation which is misery and estrangement. The empty cross goes beyond what happens when we are provoked to lose our peace, but reminds us that peace can be restored. Isaiah said, the "the chastisement of our peace was upon him." That means that whatever needed to be done to allow us to make peace with God when we have fouled up has been done. Jesus did it! Consider the two children who played with a doll. The little boy was unusually rough with his sister's doll and while playing, inadvertently turned the head completely around. The sister cried and was angry with him. The little boy took the doll to his mother and said, "I was bad. I broke the doll." The mother gave him a hug and turned the doll's head around and kissed it as she gave it back to the boy. When the boy gave it back to his sister she was all smiles. They played together all day that day. That's what Jesus does for us. When we come to him and say, "I was bad. I messed up. I broke this life you gave me." He turns our head around and points us in the right direction and gives us a new chance! When we are not going in the right direction, we are not at peace. We often attribute it to many things, often to other people, but too often the reason we can't sleep at night and seem so troubled is that we are moving in the wrong direction. The empty cross reminds us that we have the potential to make peace with God available to us. It's a matter of saying, "I broke this life you gave me, can you turn my head around?"

HEALING FOR OUR HURTS: The empty cross reminds us that whatever hurts us, can be healed. The crucifix reminds us of hurt, and the pain and anguish that come from our hurts. The empty cross does not focus on the hurt, but on the fact that we can overcome hurt and be healed.

Many things contribute to our hurts. Family troubles hurt us. Whenever a husband or wife is living less that their potential, one or both marriage partners hurt. Children sometimes hurt their parents by their disobedience. Parents often hurt their children in the name of love. We hurt each other, often without even knowing it, we bruise the feelings of friends and co-workers. Most often we hurt and critically injure ourselves. Jeremiah 8:22 asks the question, "Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no physician there?" Is there any healing for our hurts? On the cross, Jesus endured the punishment for our hurts. Isaiah said, "with his stripes we are healed." The empty cross reminds us that the great physician who took a blind man and helped him see again, restored a lame man's movement and gave new life to the dying is still alive. That same power that healed and revived these souls, lost in despair is still present and available today. When you see an empty cross let it remind you that there is healing for our hurts.

A Living God

Finally brothers and Sisters, the empty cross and the vacant tomb, remind us that we serve a mighty living God!

When the angel said, "He is not here, for he has risen as he said, come see the place where the Lord lay." That was a proclamation of victory!

The empty cross testifies that the world may try hold back the people of God, but if they keep the faith, nothing can hold them down!

Thorns of disappointment may be crushed upon our heads!

Nails of failure may puncture our hands!

Spikes of mistakes and bad judgment may rivet our feet!

But if we can just "hold out until tomorrow!" everything will be alright!

The empty tomb told the world, that anyone who follows Christ is serving a living God!

I don't know about you, but I've found out that there are some benefits to serving a living God!

Because he lives, I can face tomorrow!

Because he lives, I know that if falter, he pick me up and turn me around again!

Because he lives, I know that if I shed a tear, he'll dry my weeping eye..for weeping endures but a night but joy comes in the morning!

Because he lives, I know that if trouble comes my way, that he will hide me! In the secret of his tabernacle, he will hide me!

Because he lives, I know that if run a short of this or that, "my God shall supply all my need according to his purpose in Christ Jesus!"

No wonder the song writer wrote, "Because he lives I can face tomorrow!"

Because he lives all fear is gone!

Because I know he holds the future and life is worth the living because he lives!

Because he hung out on the cross, I have a chance to everlasting life!

Because he died out on Calvary, my sins have been forgiven!

But Early!

Early Sunday morning!

He arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Say My Name, Say My Name!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 30, 2000

SCRIPTURE: " For whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels." Luke 9:26

Introduction

Have you ever been the "other woman" or the "other man"? If so then, you know how it feels for someone to express their love for you, but want to keep it a secret. As amusing as the idea sounds, there are millions of people who daily wrestle with the problem of being the "other" man or the "other" woman. This generally happens when a person is attracted to something about us, but is ashamed to let others know. Sometimes the reason for secrecy is because one aspect of our personality is attractive, but the rest of the package is repulsive. Then there are those who like what they see, but they don't want to let go of what they have, so they play both ends against the middle. It is extremely frustrating to be the other person whose name is never called in public.

If you've ever been the "other woman" or the "other man" then you know that there is a certain feeling of insecurity that develops around this type of relationship. What makes the "other" person relationship so insecure? It is insecure because it is based on mistrust and deceit. When a person becomes the "other" in a relationship it is because at some point the person has been convinced that the other partner is not linked with another or the link is broken or is so loose that it can be broken. For teens, the fact that a person to whom they are attracted is already socially linked is insignificant. Girls who already have the names of several boys on their caller I.D. box, will add another quickly. He'll ask, "Do you have a boyfriend?" She answer, "No" and the hookup with #15 begins. its generally a challenge just to see It is based on the belief that even if the other person is linked that it can be broken. It gets more complicated with adults, especially if the other man or woman is married.

One tale tell sign that you may be in an "other" woman or "other" man situation is when your friend wants to keep the relationship a secret. A popular song by Destiny's Child is entitled "Say my name." In it, a woman suspects that there may be an "other" woman when she calls her man on the phone and he talks in a manner that suggests that there is someone else in the room and he doesn't want his other woman to know he has another woman. The woman presses him to say he loves her and to say her name out loud, the chorus of the song says, "

Say my name, say my name
If no one is around you
Say baby I love you
If you aint runnin game
Say my name, say my name
You actin kinda shady
Ain't callin me baby
Better say my name!

While there are many who have "other" women or "other" men. There are still others who have other gods. The principle operates the same. There are some who are attracted to certain aspects of their relationship with Jesus Christ, but he remains the "other" God. On Sunday, the worship him and praise his name highly. The lift him up and glorify him, but at school or outside of Church circles his rarely mentioned. It's a one day a week relationship.

Yet God is speaking to every believer when he says in Exodus 20:3, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me."

In essence he is challenging believers and putting them on the spot. "Say my name!" If you are not in love with the world like you say...then when you are surrounded by them, say "Jesus I love you!"

When you are on the school campus.."say my name!"

So you are about to go "Clubbing" with your other god..."Say my name!"

So you are getting ready to party hardy at the prom..."Say my name!"

So you've booked a room for graduation night..."Say my name!"

As Christians, we acknowledge God in every way possible. We lift him up and praise him everywhere we go. We are not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ or to say his name!

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he reminds believers that he expects them to boldly witness for him among their peers.

As Jesus spoke with his disciples about his approaching death and the establishment of the kingdom, he warned them that being a true believer would be unpopular. It would mean that at the very least they experience loss of popularity and possessions. At the most, they could lose their lives for following him.

The challenge that Christ gave his disciples was to make a full commitment to the cross. He challenged them to deny themselves. That means, he challenged them to put aside what they wanted and to seek those things that would benefit the kingdom. Persons who did what he asked were characterized as "taking up their cross" because doing what Jesus asked meant he would most definitely be criticized and ostracized for his actions. The woman that lives for Jesus, doesn't expect to be popular to others, but pleasing to God. The man that follows Christ may be snubbed by associates but is "secure" in Christ.

Jesus challenged believers not to be ashamed of what they believe or to be identified with others in the kingdom. Being ashamed of him in this life to gain the favor and approval of others won't mean much if we lose the opportunity for eternal life by doing so. Thus, Jesus asks what advantage can there be if a person gains the praise and thanks of the world, but loses his soul in the process.

Those who are embarrassed to be identified with Christ, the kingdom's work and the words of Christ, will find that he will be ashamed to speak for them in the day of judgment. It is only the fact that he speaks for us that save us. If he is ashamed to own us before his father, then we will lose our place in glory.

Every believer therefore is challenged to witness boldly for Christ in this life with the assurance that he will witness boldly for us in the day of judgment and rewards.

Recognize God

One of the first lessons that youth learn is to recognize God. We recognize God in everything we do and say, with the full understanding that if we recognize him, he will reward us and guide us. Proverbs 3:6 says, "In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths."

Recognizing God begins with simple things...saying our prayers at night and saying grace over our food. Those are simple ways to recognize God.

As youth get older they learn that they also recognize God when the live by his teachings every day, even when they are at school. When we recognize God, he recognizes and rewards us.

We should never be ashamed or afraid to tell the teacher, principal, coach or school mate that we are workers in the kingdom of God. That means there may be times when my work for the kingdom conflicts with my school or the social demands of my friends. When those times come, they know we will be absent because we are kingdom workers who have made working for the Lord our top priority.

We recognize God not by simply saying his name frequently, but living according to his rules every day.

Saying the name of Jesus

Destiny's child was not the originator of the idea of "Say my name." Jesus told believers 2000 years ago that those who love him should "say my name"

WANT FORGIVENESS? SAY MY NAME: Every person who has done something wrong can be forgiven. How? "Say my name!" Acts 10:43 says"...that through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." and I John 2:12..."...because your sins are forgiven you for his name's sake."

WANT TO BE SAVED? SAY MY NAME: A person who desires to be saved from sin and wants to begin a new and wonderful experience with Christ can make this happen. How? "Say my name!" Acts 2:21 says,"...that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved." That salvation we received cleans us and makes us whole. That's why I Cor. 6:11 says"...ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the spirit of our God." We are even guaranteed eternal life through the name of Jesus. I John 5:13 says, "These things have I written unto you,that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God."

Say My Name

Finally Brothers and Sisters we must consider that saying the name of Jesus is an access code.

Jesus told his disciples to pray to God but to pray in his name. That means that there is something special about the name of Jesus.

The name of Jesus opens opportunities for us. John 15:16..."...that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you." Then, John 16:23-26 says, "Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name: ask and ye shall receive that your joy my be full."

When we face our enemies, God says, "Say my name!" Moses asked God "Who shall I say sent me!" And the answer came tell them "I am that I am." When Pharaoh asks, just "say my name!"

The name of Jesus opens the doors of heaven.
At the name of Jesus, demons run and devils hide their faces
At the name of Jesus, evil takes a vacation and trouble takes a holiday!
Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!
Jesus, the Bright and Morning!
There's something about the name of Jesus that turns:
FAILURE into success; WEAKNESS into strength
SET backs into opportunities; STUMBLING BLOCKS into stepping stones!
There's something about the name of Jesus that lifts up a bowed down head!
Jesus, who died on Calvary!
Jesus, who arose from the dead!
Jesus, Jesus!
The sweetest name I know.

Life Gets Slippery When Its Wet

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 7, 2000

SCRIPTURE: But as for me, my feet were almost gone: my steps had wll nigh slipped. Psalm 73:2; "Until I went into the sanctuary of God: then I understood I their end." Psalm 73: 17

Introduction

Have you ever been tempted to do something wrong? Often we are met by people who tell us how they have made money using one great scheme or another. The scheme sounds good and looks like its working for everyone who tries it. It gets tempting. Sometimes we hear of businesses that play cruel games on the public to make a dollar, they advertise one thing then switch the product once a steady stream of customers arise. Some in business see this under handed tactic and and seriously consider it as a prosperous move. Children in school see students turn in home work as their own but it has been completed by their parents and get rewarded with high grades. They are tempted to follow suit and get someone to complete complicated projects for them as well. One man tells another how he cheats on his wife and successfully hides it from her. Soon the idea seems workable for his friend too. Most of us have been tempted at one time or another. Getting involved in evil plans, plots and tricks is like walking on a slippery ground.

There are the times when the life of the ungodly is attractive. It appears that the ungodly win the awards, trophies, salutes and praises of men. It apears that those who ignore the laws of God and flirt with evil daily reap the best rewards. They seem to drive the biggest cars, live in the biggest houses, wear the finest clothes and attract all of the noteriety of the public. They do everything wrong and yet seem to prosper.

Conversely, while we see a few of the righteous in the circles of the materially prosperous, for the most part, material prosperity eludes the masses of the righteous. Most are comfortable, safe and happy, but rarely approach a lifestyle of luxury. The righteous base their lives on the moral law of God and as such seek sure foundations rather than existences filled with risk.

Sometimes, in a moment of weakness, the righteous get just a little envious of the free wheeling lifestyle of the ungodly. Some are even tempted to experiment with ungodly practices that promise quick returns. They are tempted to walk on slippery ground.

Everything that works for one person may not work for another. Two women talked about training their husbands to do clean up work. The experienced wife said I train my husband by waiting until he comes home to start mowing the yard myself, he'll feel sorry for me and get the point. Then I start sweeping the sidewalk and he takes the broom and does it for me. Try it! It works she told her friend. Her friend decided to follow her advice. When her husband arrived home that day, he found her seated in the tall grass, busily snipping away with a tiny pair of sewing scissors. He watched silently for a while, then went into the house.

He was gone only a few moments and when he came out again he handed her a toothbrush. "When you finish cutting the grass," he said, "you might as well sweep the sidewalks."What works for other people may not work for you!

The ungodly appear to walk on sure ground, but it is slippery. If believers follow in their footsteps, they will share their fate.

As Christians we have learned that there is wisdom in trusting God and following him. Following God is solid ground. Following anyone but him will lead to our own demise because such a life is slippery when its wet.

Exposition

This text focuses on Asaph, the musician, who was tempted to follow the wicked until he had a talk with God.

Asaph was song writer, singer and musician who often spoke boldly in song about the power of the Lord. He was the father of the clan of Temple musicians who served under many kings of Israel, both before and after the exile. Asaph, as his songs reflect, trusted and served God intensely. He believed in the all consuming power of God to deliver and protect his people. His musical presentations were so intense that at times they were presented as "prophesying" (1 Chron. 25:1-7). Even after his death, later generations sang the songs of Asaph.

He had only one job...praising and worshipping God. David arranged for all of the singing and worship to take place in Jerusalem were the Ark of the Covenant was kept. In Gibeon, however, the people gathered to make their sacrifices. Asaph's job was to praise the Lord continuously (1 Chronicles 16:37-43).

It was was Asaph who wrote 12 of the 150 Psalms.(50, 73-83) His words of of power gave a strong witness to the power and majesty of God.

It was Asaph who said in Psalm 50:1 "The mighty God, even the LORD, hath spoken, and called the earth from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof."

It was Asaph who looked back over the rocky road that he had traveled and wrote in Psalm 74:1 "For God is my King of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth."

It was Asaph who often lifted up his voice to God in prayer and wrote in Psalm 77:1, "I cried unto God with my voice, even unto God with my voice; and he gave ear unto me."

It was Asaph who encouraged Israel to sing joyously before God and wrote in Psalm 88:1, “Sing aloud unto God our strength: make a joyful noise unto the God of Jacob.”

Though David constantly called upon him to lift God’s names in praise, there were times when Asaph was overwhelmed with frustration. That frustration was reflected in the 73rd Psalm.

This psalm shows one of God’s strongest and most spirited saints at a time when he was frustrated over the apparent successes of the ungodly, while his own piety seem unrewarded. He was so overwhelmed at the prosperity of the wicked that he began to be envious of them and yearn to walk in their paths. His feet “were almost gone” and he “slipped” as he considered the ungodly walk.(v2)

What made him consider the walk of the ungodly? He details what he envied about the ungodly between verses 3-12. He said the ungodly appear to be prosperous and only lightly effected by death (V3-4). They appear to escape trouble and the law, they are often loud, cocky and violent (v5-6). They are often crooked, corrupt and possess everything their eyes can see and hearts can desire. They talk wicked talk and are confident in their own abilities. They give little credit to God, yet seem to flourish.(v 7-11)

In verse 12, he summed up his frustration: “Behold, these are the ungodly, who prosper in the world; they increase in riches.”

In verse 14, he noted how the prosperity of the wicked frustrated him so mucht that he was plagued and chastened constantly.

In verse 17, Asaph snapped out of his admiration for the wicked. In the sanctuary of God he awakened to a new understanding of the ultimate end of the righteous. “Until I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their end.”

In the sanctuary, or in the presence of God, Asaph regained the power to sing with assurance.

In the sanctuary, he understood God’s plan and wrote in verse 18, “Surely thou didst set them in slippery places: thou castedst them down into destruction.” He saw the true picture of the life of the wicked. Those who reject God find that he actually allows them to drift into slippery places.They walk daily on slippery, unstable ground. It is the walk of destruction.

He confessed his foolishness and ignorance (v22) and realized that God had been with him continuously, holding him in every way with the power of his hand (v23).

In the sanctuary he asked himself the overpowering question, “Whom do I have but God?” There is noone in heaven or earth that provides and takes care of me like God. (v.25) “God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever.” (v.26).

He made a final determination in verse 28 “But it is good for me to draw near to God: I have put my trust in the Lord God, that I may declare all thy works.”

In the sanctuary, Asaph saw the light and was able to sing again!

There is a slippery side of life

We are able to relate to Asaph because there are times we have thought the very same thoughts, considered the same alternatives, but reached the same conclusions.

Life does have its slippery unstable side.

The drug dealer seems to live the good life. He rides a fine car, is surrounded by beautiful women and has plenty of money. Yet despite his apparent success, he walks on the slippery side of life.

The student in school that cheats on exams, plagarizes homework assignments and receives the applause and accolades of the school, appears to be the role model. Yet by failing to adequately prepare himself, that student walks on the slippery side of life.

We have seen women acquire posessions way beyond their financial means by befriending several men to provide for both their wants and their needs. They dress well, look good and seem to live the good life. We have seen do the same. Yet, despite what appears to be a successful life of fun and gaiety, they are walking on the slippery side of life because those that provide for them, do so with a price.

Youth are fascinated with Gangsta Rappers who were $80,000 necklaces, diamond studded rings on the pinkey fingers and gold plated teeth. They seem to defy all of the rules and ride big cars, make millions of dollars without the frustration of acquiring an education, obeying rules and other limitations of society. Despite the glitter and the bling bling, there is a down side. They are walking the slippery side of life.

The ungodly seem to live charmed lives. They don't seem to have long term sicknesses. When they die, it's by accident or they are the victim of some assault. They rarely suffer extended sicknesses and troubles, it seems.

That is exactly what Satan promises anyone who follows him. Fame, popularity and riches. But there is a price! You must give him your soul and walk on the slippery side of life until the dreadful day that you fall.

Jesus asked the question: "What doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his soul?"

As we observe those who walk the slippery side of life, we should be careful not to allow our frustration over their apparent success, to steal our song

Insight in the Sanctuary

Asaph found a resolution to his dilemma in his sanctuary.

A sanctuary is the place where man and God meet, commune and abide in peace. Nearly every church building has a sanctuary. It is different from the other parts of the church building because it is the special place where believers expect to meet God, hear from him and abide in peace. Yet, the church sanctuary is not the only sanctuary. Every believer has a private place, a special place where it seems talking to God is easier.

What is your sanctuary? Is it a special room in your house? A special chair in your back yard? A special corner of the library? Your sanctuary is the special place where you and God connect and you can feel it happening.

In the sanctuary is where God reveals to you the ultimate end of the slippery walk. In the sanctuary, we talk to God and pour out our souls to him.

In the sanctuary we open up and he he fills us up with his grace, mercy and love!

In the sanctuary we hear God speak to us clearly, "Fret not thyself because of evil doers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity, for they shall soon be cut down like the grass and whiter as the green herb!" (Psalm 37:1-2)

In the sanctuary, we are reminded of the goodness of God. For it is in our sanctuary that we hear God say, "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord: and he delighteth in his way. Though he fall he shall not be utterly cast down for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand. I have been young and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread" (Psalm 37:23-25)

God Holds our hand

Finally brothers and sisters, we must remember that though life is slippery when it's wet, we can make it through, if we hold to God's unchanging hand!

Asaph looked around at the ungodly and then at his own situation. At this point he relized that everyday of his life, God was holding him by the hand!

At verse 23 he noted that he and God were constantly together. When he started to put things in perspective he had to discern whether it was better for him to immulate the ungodly and focus on houses and land or take the low road and walk constantly with his life in God's hand!

Don't ever let anyone play down the significance of walking with God.

Abraham walked with God and he pledged him the promised land!

Moses walked with God and he showed him he promised land!

Joshua walked with God and he carried him to the promised land!

Enoch walked with God and "was not!"

No wonder the song writer declared, "And he walks with me and he talks with me and he tells me I am his own. And the joy we share as we tarry there. None other, has ever known"

Life gets slippery when its wet!

Jonah tried to disobey God and was thrown into an angry sea and swallowed by a fish. There, inside the belly of a great fish, he found out that life get's slippery when we try disobey God. Life gets slippery, when we try to move against his will. Life gets slippery when its wet!

Peter walked on the water but before he reached the Lord he found out that life get's slippery when we take our eyes off Christ. Life gets slippery when the first time we begin to doubt! Life gets slippery when its wet!

I don't know about you, but I've found out that if you keep your hand in God's unchanging hand, he'll guide you to the solid ground!

Life may be slippery sometimes, but if we keep our hand in God's hand, he'll guide us through to on dry ground.

No wonder song writer declared, "Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, Pilgrim through this barren land. I am weak but thou art mighty, hold me with thou powerful hand!"

Life might have its slippery twists and turns, but that's when a child of God stands on the solid rock.

On Christ, who died out on Calvary!

On Christ, who was buried for three days and nights!

On Christ, who arose with all power and magesty in his hands!

When life gets slippery...

On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!

No. 804-Mother's Day

If It Be So, Why Am I Thus?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "And the children struggled together within her; and she said, If it be so, why am I thus? And she went to enquire of the LORD." Genesis 25:22

Introduction

Have you ever felt that your mother was watching you, even though you knew she was no where in sight? It is said that mothers have a sixth sense that is almost surreal. It has yet to be proven scientifically, but there are millions who would argue that mothers have a connection with their children that enables them to sense danger, pain, trouble and even moments of joy in their children, even though they are miles away. No one has been able to accurately describe how it works, but millions of children testify regularly that they have received cards, letters or calls from mothers who seemed to sense the exact moment that some great pain or joy was happening in their lives. Still others feel their mother's eyes peering over them, though she has been in glory for many years. Mothers seemed to have a special gift that allows them to connect with their children, despite time and distance.

This gift does not appear reserved for just biological parents, but to those who are mothering. It is a unique gift that only mothers seem to have, non-mothers don't need, and fathers can't understand.

This unique gift for feeling the pain and joy of there children is one of things that make mothers special. Since May 10, 1908 Mothers around the nation have been honored and praised in what we call "Mother's Day." It was founded by Anna Jarvis in tribute to her mother, Ann Marie Reeves Jarvis. The first fully organized Mother's Day program was held at the Andrews Methodist Episcopal Church in Grafton, Taylor County, West Virginia, on May 10, 1908. The honored mother had already laid the foundation for such a day in the last fifty years of her life.

The purpose of Mother's Day was announced in the first ceremony: "...To revive the dormant filial love and gratitude we owe to those who gave us birth. To be a home tie for the absent. To obliterate family estrangement. To create a bond of brotherhood through the wearing of a floral badge. To make us better children by getting us closer to the hearts of our good mothers. To brighten the lives of good mothers. To have them know we appreciate them, though we do not show it as often as we ought...

Mother's Day is intended that we should salute the one who feels our struggles, admits her own fallibility and turns to God for answers and strength.

We wear a red rose to salute living mothers. We wear a white rose to embrace the memory of a deceased mother. Dr. Jacquelyn Simmons suggests that those who wear both a red and a white rose suggest that the spirit of mother lives on in the presence of the descendants.

As Christians, we understand the importance of strong Christian mothers. It is the Christian mother, more than any other that can feel the struggle of her children, wrestle with her own doubts, flaws and failures and turn to God for answers and strength.

Exposition

This text focuses on one mother's experience with feeling the struggle of her children and how she turned to God.

Rebekah is a snapshot of many mothers in many ways. She was young and beautiful, devout, faithful to her husband, industrious and protective of her children. She was the sister of Laban, married to Isaac. She is first presented in Genesis 24:1 where the beautiful story of her marriage is related. (B.C. 1857.) For nineteen years she was childless: then Esau and Jacob were born, the younger being the mother's companion and favorite. (Genesis 25:19-28)

She demonstrated great faith when she never gave up hope that she would bear children even after 19 years of failed efforts. But if she was a woman of great faith, when it came to one of her children should proved herself capable of devious means to assist him in gaining a foothold in life. It was Rebekah who suggested the deceit that was practiced by Jacob on his blind father. She directed and aided him in carrying it out, foresaw the probable consequence of Esau's anger, and prevented it by moving Isaac to send Jacob away to Padan-aram, (Genesis 27:1) ... to her own kindred.

While carrying Jacob and Esau, Rebekah was troubled by an unusual movement in her womb. She had no idea what the movements meant and they could not be explained by the midwives and women who assisted her. Her husband, Isaac asked God to bless his wife with a child (v21) and the Lord answered by allowing her to conceive, not one child but two.

The unusual movement prompted Rebekah to question whether or not her pregnancy was a blessing or a curse. "If it be so, why am I thus?" If this pregnancy is a blessing from God, what explains the complicated struggle going on inside her. She could feel the intensity of the movement. She sensed an atmosphere of battle. If her condition was of God, blessed and sanctioned by him, she wondered, "why am I thus?"

For an answer she asked God and he answered and gave her peace. She was told that she was carrying twins, both of whom would be the fathers of great nations that would struggle and compete with each other over generations. “Two nations are in thy womb and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels: and the one people shall be stronger than the other and the elder shall serve the younger.” (v23).

From the onset, Rebekah felt the life struggle of her children. It was abnormal and unusual. She wondered how she could be the recipient of a blessing from God if such abnormal activity was a part of her being. No one else could feel what she felt. She sensed their destiny and was not assured of it until she talked to God.

When Rebekah talked to God, she received an answer that helped her understand the children she would bear and her role in the process.

Because she was told that the younger child would be the leader of the family, Rebekah became the instrument that God used to insure that this unusual occurrence came to fruition. It was truly unusual because, the oldest son was always the recipient of the inheritance of his father. She protected and specially groomed the younger son throughout his life. When the time came for Isaac to bestow the blessing of family leadership upon his oldest son, Rebekah helped Jacob, the younger son receive the blessing by disguising himself as his older brother.

History records Rebekah’s role in the deception as an example of devious motherhood. However, in light of God’s prophecy to her, even before the children were born, some agree that “she was thus, for it to be so.”

A mother senses her children’s struggle

Rebekah felt the struggle of her children, even before they were born. In a similar manner, mothers seem to sense the struggles of their children even today. Whether that struggle is physical or emotional, mothers seem to possess an unusual ability to perceive that something is good or bad in their lives of their children.

It is not that mothers love their children more than fathers, it is that mothers are divinely connected for the purpose of nurture, more than fathers. Since the rearing of children is one of the chief responsibilities of womanhood, it seems that God equipped each mother with a “mothering” instinct that functions automatically unless it is aborted by external sources, foreign to the nature order of things.

To sense her children’s struggle a mother must have the capacity to love. Love is an expression of godliness for God is love. Mothers who know God can best demonstrate love. Mother’s who love their children can sense their feelings. That ability comes from God. A mother took her six-year-old boy into a doctor’s crowded waiting room. The little boy was naturally inquisitive. He had a need to know. As they waited their turn, he began to ask her all kinds of questions. In half an hour he managed to cover almost every subject known to humanity. To the wonder of all the others sitting in the room, his mother answered each question carefully and patiently. Inevitably, he got around to God. As the other people listened to his relentless “how’s” and “why’s,” it was plain to see by the expressions on their faces that they wondered: “How does she stand it?” But when she answered her son’s next question, she answered theirs too. “Why,” he asked, “doesn’t God ever get tired and just stop?" "Because," she replied after a moment's thought, "God is love; and love never gets tired."

Mother's sense their children's struggles because they empathize with them. Mother's feel the hurt, embarassment and pain of their children. They can do this because they are able to put themselves in their children's shoes. They can visualize each step a child makes and put themselves in their children's places. Sometimes, when they should be angry they show love in the strangest ways. Consider the mom who spent a year cultivating a special rose to enter into a contest. Her daughter enjoyed working with her and often imitated her mother's actions as she pulled up weeds and replanted seedlings. As time passed the beautiful rose blossomed. Visitors to the home were astonished at its beauty and took pictures as they assured her that it would win a blue ribbon. The three days before the contest, the mother was horrified. Her daughter stood in the back door with her prize rose crumpled in her hand and said, "Look mommy I pulled up the weeds, just like you!" On the day of the contest the mother entered her a rose in the contest. When the judges came to her entry they found a picture of her daughter attached to a stick. When the audience her story, she didn't win the prize, but the rose that was not a rose won a standing ovation. Here was a mother who could feel her child's need for understanding, love and forgiveness more than her own sense of loss.

Whether her children struggle for life or the pursuit of their dreams, mothers sense that struggle and more than any others, connect with that struggle in ways that only mothers can.

Why Am I thus?

Yet, there are times when motherhood becomes burdensome and troubling. Rebekah, "If it be so, why am I thus?"

This is the same question that mothers ask when the are frustrated. These are the times when the children which were supposed to be a blessing from God actually caused her more trouble and pain than she desired. That's when she says, "If these children are my blessing, why am I so frustrated?"

Nothing frustrates a mother more than to watch her children squander opportunities, live recklessly or waste talents.

Some variables are controllable. Poverty may be a circumstance, but some mothers have managed to overcome its disadvantages and give their children great opportunities. Racial discrimination make certain opportunities difficult to attain, but some mothers have worked around them. Some, without much education themselves have struggled hard to help their children attain high educational standards.

But when children fail to use their talents, become discipline problems and demonstrate a lack of appreciation, mothers are frustrated. That's when they look at the children who were supposed to be their source of their joy and ask, "If it be so, why am I thus?"

Good Mothers Talk to God

Finally, brothers and sisters, it should be noted that good mothers are sustained and rewarded in motherhood, because they know how to talk to God.

A believing mother knows how to talk to God in a way that gets an answer. When Rebekah asked the question, "If it be so, why am I thus?" She then turned and talked to the Lord.

Every good mother should know how to talk to the Lord.

Consider the daughter that asked her mother to teach her to pray. "I can't seem to get a prayer through" said the daughter. "It looks like I have to keep asking for the same things over and over." The mother looked at her daughter and said, "You jiggling baby!" Surprised the daughter asked for an explanation! The mother said, "The other day your car wouldn't start and you asked me to turn the ignition while you jiggled the wire on the battery. When you started the car you brushed off my suggestion that we take it to a mechanic and get him to tighten up the post. You said it would take too long. After a while however, you did what I said and you don't have to jiggle any more." The daughter was still bewildered and could not make the connection. Then the mother said, "If you want to get blessings from God you can't jiggle the wire, you must tighten up the post!"

If read your bible quickly then ask God for a blessing, that's jiggling the wire!

If you come to church once or twice then expect a blessing, that's jiggling the wire!

If you rush through a quick prayer before a test or in a moment of need, and neglect your regular prayers that's jiggling the wire!

But every good mother knows that if you want to get a prayer through and keep your blessings flowing, you must tighten up the post!

When a mother is worried about the whereabouts of her children, she has learned how to talk to God and say, "In thee oh Lord, do I put my trust!"

When a mother is worried about putting food on the table, she has learned to talk to God. She'll testify that, "I have been young, but now am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread!"

When a mother has done all that her hands know how to do, she has learned how to talk to God and say, "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know. If thou withdraw thyself from me, whether shall I go!"

When a mother seems to run out of resources to provide for her children, she has learned how to talk to God. We can hear her say, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want!"

When mothers get old and feeble they still know how to talk with the Lord, for I can hear many great grandmothers declare, "Yea thou I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil for thou art with me!"

If we could hear every mother's prayer over a loud speaker, we'd hear her say, "Lord! Lord!

Bless my children! Keep them safe every day!”

Good mothers know how to call on the name of Jesus!
They know how to say Jesus!
Good mothers know him!
Jesus, who died out on Calvary!
Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!
If you want to know, “If it be so!” Call on Jesus!
If you want to know, “Why am I thus!” Call on Jesus!
Call him up and tell him what you want!

Four Cups of Wine

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 21, 2000

SCRIPTURE: Wherefore say unto the children of Israel, I am the LORD, and I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, and I will rid you out of their bondage, and I will redeem you with a stretched out arm, and with great judgments: And I will take you to me for a people, and I will be to you a God: and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God, which bringeth you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians. Exodus 6:6-7 "And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves: For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come. 19 And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me. 20Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you." Luke 22:17-20

Introduction

Have you had a little nip? Just a little bit? There was a time when some believers were in the world and indulged at the fountains of insobriety! While there are a few exceptions, most have had a taste of whiskey, wine, scotch, gin, Vodka or beer. Whether it was at a teenage party, a fraternity or sorority rush, or while fishing in the bayou, there are many who have had a nip, even if only a "little nip." Once we became believers, Baptist pledged to stop nipping and sipping because our little nips might cause someone to become a drunkard.

Folks outside of our faith think Baptists are a little too conservative. What's wrong with a little nip? "A little wine is good for the belly," they claim. In fact, there are many denominations of believers that do not go as far as the world's Baptists. They don't promise not to nip or sip or drink a fine wine with their dinner. They have no prohibitions against a nightcap or sherry every now and then. They say the Baptists are a little backward and behind the times.

On the other hand we understand the problems that alcoholism causes. We know that alcoholism impairs a person's judgments, and emotional stability. It causes loss of appetite, skin problems, stomach ailments, sexual impotence, liver disease, heart damage and memory loss, just to name a few. Armed with this knowledge, we have voluntarily given up our privilege to drink alcohol because our "nip" or "sip" might serve as an encouragement to a brother or sister not strong enough to stop at a "nip."

Paul set the standard in 1 Corinthians 8:13 when he said if eating certain kinds of meat would cause another person to stumble, then we should refrain. With that in mind Baptists pledge not to nip or sip buy or sell alcoholic drinks as a beverage.

Most of us know at least one person who can't stop at a little nip. There are some places where it has been reported that some even need a nip to make it through the work day. Most find it very hard to restrain themselves. They must have another nip. Consider the town drunk who left a church revival and decided to stop drinking. However, he felt he wasn't strong enough to stop cold turkey, so he decided to reduce his drinking and stay sober longer. On the way home from the revival he stopped by the local bar and sat at the counter. "I am a new man" said the town drunk. "Yes sir, bring me four bottles of Johnny Walker Red!" The bartender brought four full bottles of the cheap wine and everyone at the bar watched as the town drunk emptied each bottle one after another. He gave a slight hiccup. The ordered again. "Bring me three bottles of Johnny Walker Red." To the amazement of everyone around he summarily drank all three of the bottles in what seemed like single gulps. As he wobbled on the seat and struggled to keep from falling, he struggle to straighten himself and said, "Bartender, bring me two bottles of Johnny Walker Red!"

Everyone in the bar stopped and watched as the town drunk emptied two more bottles of red wine." Finally, the drunk held up one finger. Hardly able to sit on the stool he said, "Bring me one bottle of Walker Red Johnny." He sat on the stool a long time and stared at the bottle. Then he told the bartender "I made up in my mind to drink less so I could stay sober longer, but something ain't working. I ordered four bottles, then three, then two, now one. Something ain't working because it seems likes the less wine I order, the drunker I get!" Some people don't know when enough is enough!

Have you wondered why the glasses are so small in the communion tray? There was a time when people observed the Lord's supper (1 Corinthians 11:20-34) with big parties. There was plenty of food and lots of wine. People actually became drunk at the Lord's supper. He told them that the purpose of the wine at the Lord's supper is not for people to get drunk! The purpose of the bread is not for participants to get full! Paul encouraged them to eat and drink at home, but not at the Lord's supper. The purpose of the Lord's supper is to help believers remember!

The bread helps believers remember Christ's physical sacrifice!

The little cup of unfermented wine, just enough to taste, is to help us remember the blood of Christ!

As believers, we observe the Lord's supper to remember what Christ did for us. Through his body and blood we are redeemed and given a chance to enjoy eternal life.

Exposition

This text focuses upon Jesus as he adds a new twist to the Passover celebration, giving it a new meaning.

For 1500 years the Jews celebrated the Passover following one traditional procedure that had been passed down through the generations since Moses. When they were slaves in Egypt, they were given explicit orders to prepare to leave out of bondage as God's hand moved in their affairs. They were told to kill a lamb and to take the blood of that lamb and spread it over the door posts of their houses.

In addition, the Jews were told to prepare a memorial meal that was to commemorate this important day. The ritual was continued for centuries without change or interruption. It was followed to the letter.

In general, here is the procedure when there was a temple. The Passover sacrifice was managed by groups of men usually 10 to 20 in number who took lambs that were at least eight days old but not more than a year old and prepared to participate in the Passover. Representatives of each group of men would be admitted inside the temple court where they held their lambs until the priests blew the trumpet three times. After the third blast of the trumpet the lambs were slain and the priests caught the blood in gold and silver bowls, which were passed from hand to hand, until their contents were dashed on the base of the altar.

The lambs were dressed, the fat was removed and offered by the priests on the altar. While all of this was taking place the Levites who were appointed the singers sang from Psalm 113 to Psalm 118) repeatedly.

The lambs were then taken to the homes of the men in each group and roasted on a wooden pit, with pomegranate wood so there would be no sap. No bone was allowed to be broken and the meat was not tocome in contact with any foreign substance, if so that portion must be cut away. The meal was not eaten until midnight.

Four Cups of Wine

A part of the meal was wine. Each passover participant was served four cups of red wine. If a person was poor and could not afford the wine the person was expected to sell his clothing, or pledge himself as a laborer to acquire his four cups of wine. If unable to work, then the wine was to be provided from the public treasury. In addition to the wine, the meal consisted of bitter herbs, unleavened cakes of bread, and the Passover lamb.

Participants at the Passover followed a specific order or ritual. Exodus 6:6-7 formed the basis of the use of the four cups.

I WILL BRING YOU OUT: As the ceremony opened the first line was recited or chanted "I am the Lord, and I will bring you out from under the yoke of the Egyptians." It was a reminder of God's promise to Israel that he would free them from their 400 years of bondage. After the opening chant everyone drank the first cup of wine.

I WILL FREE YOU: After the second cup was poured, the son of the house or someone who represented him would ask "Father, what does this mean?" Then the father would explain the story of Jewish slavery and how God lifted them from slavery and allowed them to leave Egypt and come to the promised land, crossing the Red Sea on dry land and surviving desert journeys. After the story is told, then the second line of Exodus 6:6-7 would be recited "I will free you from being slaves to them." Then the family would drink from the second cup of wine.

I WILL REDEEM YOU: The meal was eaten at this time. After the meal an, after meal grace, was given and the third cup was filled. The third cup was preceded by reciting the third line from the Exodus text: "I will redeem you with an outstretched arm and with mighty acts of judgment."

I WILL BE YOUR GOD: Then a fourth and final cup was poured, with the 4th line of the text, "I will take you as my people, and I will be your God." When they drank the last cup they sang Psalm 115 to Psalm 118, which closed the observance.

Four Cups in One

Finally, brothers and sisters, When Jesus met with his disciples in the Upper Room he met to observe the traditional Passover. The bitter herbs, unleavened bread, wine and Passover lamb were all present, but they were to take on a new meaning from that time forth. There would only be bread and wine. No bitter herbs. No lamb. Jesus himself would be the lamb. The bread would represent his body and the wine would represent his blood shed for the redemption of sin.

This marked the day that the Passover became the "Lord's Supper" in the Christian community.

He gave us a four in one cup that compresses the original four cups into one cup. However, this four-in-one cup was still to serve as a reminder to believers about the God we serve. It should remind us that:

God will bring you out! It does not matter what part of Egypt has kept us enslaved, this cup should remind every child of God that God can and will bring you out! The Three Hebrew Boys were asked as they were about to be thrown into the fiery furnace, "Is your God able to deliver you?" Their answer is our answer today. Our God is able!

Let this cup remind you that our God is able, to open up a way out of no way!

Let this cup remind you that our God is able, to be a shelter in a time of storm!

Let this cup remind you that no matter what you may have gotten yourself into, God can bring you out!

God will set you free! It doesn't matter what type of chains hold you in bondage God is able to set you free! Jesus met a lame man who had been struggling under a crippling bondage. He told the man, "thy sins are forgiven..rise up take thy bed and walk!"

Let this cup remind you, that you don't have to suffer under bondage for something you did a long time ago! God will set you free!

Let this cup remind you, that whatever guilt that you are suffering based on something that you have done wrong, God is able to set you free!

I heard Jesus say, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free!"

God will redeem you! No one should ever forget that our God is the God of the second chance. He will redeem us from our sins. Jesus told the parable of a man who came upon a fig tree that was not bringing forth figs and the owner gave word to have it cut down. But the garden worker asked for permission to fertilize and work with the tree and it was spared destruction. In the same way Jesus gave me and you a second chance!

Let this cup remind you that God is still giving second chances to those who have walked in the wrong direction!

Let this cup remind you that God is still offering a second chance to those who have fallen and can't seem to get up!

I'm glad that God gave me a second chance!

Finally this cup should remind us that God is still God!

Despite the trials and tribulations that may suggest otherwise, God is still God!

He still sits high and looks low! He wants to be our God, and he's only a prayer a way!

Let this cup remind you that whatever comes your way that "God is still on the throne!"

Let this cup remind you that Jesus died on an old rugged cross!

Let it remind you that he was buried in a borrowed tomb!

Let this cup remind you that after three days and nights that he arose from the grave!

God is able !

God is able!

When Does Life Begin?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "..I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." John 10:10

Introduction

Have you ever reached a turning point in your life? A turning point is usually defined as a critical point in which a major decision is made that impacts direction. In the course of every life there are many turning points. At each, we make crucial life altering decisions. The first major turning point in every life comes at the time a youth completes adolescence and becomes a young adult. A flood of choices rises with tidal wave intensity, involving college, careers, relationships, independent living and spiritual decisions. Reaching young adult life is a major turning point for every youth. It is the beginning of a seven year period of self discovery and soul searching which will change their lives for ever.

Graduation marks a major turning point. Many will argue that it impacts not only the students, but their entire families. Students are happy because they have graduated, their parents are happy for a different reason. Three people: a Sunday School teacher, a sociologist and a mother of 10 children, were discussing when life begins. "Life begins," said one, "at the moment of fertilization. That is when God instills the spark of life into the fetus." Said the Sunday School teacher. "We believe," said the sociologist, "that life begins at birth, because that is when the baby becomes an individual and is capable of making its own decisions and must learn social skills."

"You're both wrong," said the mother, whose last child had just graduated from college, "Life begins when the children have graduated from college and all have moved out of the house and you finally have a minute to yourself!"

Somewhere in between all of the ideas, life in its fullest meaning requires a "conception" and breath. Life is fully realized when there is both. Even the idea that is conceived in the mind of a creative person lies dormant until it has breath. It is the breath that animates, invigorates and makes that which is conceived become a reality. To a large extent, we incubate, grow and have movement in a social womb that feeds, protects and nurtures us. However, life really begins when we get a hard slap of reality and we take our first breath without the umbilical cord of dependence that has sustained us for so long. It is a brand new experience! We often cry at the very moment that life really begins!

Every believer understands this idea very well. We have been given physical life, but it is the breath of God that moves and pushes us to realize life in its fullest. It is his spirit and power that makes life meaningful and abundantly happy.

As Christians, we know what it means to live the happy fulfilled life. When does it begin? At graduation? It begins the day we turn that which we have conceived for our lives over to God. He breaths the breath of life into our dreams and the abundant life begins!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains that belief in the new covenant would lead followers to an abundant life.

Jesus was often criticized by the chief scholars of his time because his ideals challenged the status quo. One of the most controversial ideas that Christ introduced was the idea that everyone who followed him would be new freedoms from the strict requirements of the law of Moses.

Under the Mosaic law, there were very few freedoms and very little room for individual decision making. Moses attempted to address every possible situation that could concern the every day life of believers. The laws multiplied from the original 10 given on Mt. Sinai to hundreds of laws that dealt with every aspect of life.

Life, under the strict interpretation of the priests and judges, was at the least a burden because there appeared to be a law that addressed every possible situation, good or bad. Life was restrictive at the least.

Jesus was controversial because he proposed to give those who believed in him only one law, and to introduce them to greater liberties than they had ever known before. As far as Jesus was there was only one commandment important for believers to follow, it was the command to love God, love your yourself, then love your neighbor like you love yourself. In that context, Jesus summed up all of the hundreds of laws that comprised the Mosaic law into one general law, “love ye one another.”

Those who followed Christ began a new experience. They were being introduced to a way of life that would less intrusive, less obstructive, and more libertarian. Believers were being freed to make their own decisions about their course of life with only one rule in mind, “love God, love yourself, and love others like you love yourself.”

Those who followed this course in life were promised a more fulfilling and complete life that Christ described as the “abundant life.” By abundant life, Christ did not promise believers that they would have large accumulations of material things, but that they were being given the opportunity to exercise options, seize opportunities and achieve.....with only the spirit of love to guide them

Those who followed him began a new life experience, with a new perspective. They were given one hope. This hope is the hope of life eternal through Jesus Christ.

Even though some of the disciples were men in their 30’s and 40’s life began for them, the day they decided to follow Christ. The sought his simple promise: “I come that they may have life and have it more abundantly!”

The Formation

As a general rule, young lives experience two periods of incubation. One occurs at conception and lasts until birth. The other begins at birth and lasts through childhood and adolescence. During each of these periods they are protected and nurture with an expectation of future growth and maturity.

The first 18 years of a young life are occupied with the shaping of ideas, learning information, developing skills, assimilating values and developing social discipline. During this time the society in which a young person lives gives them special treatment. There are free schools provided for their education. There are special apprenticeships designed to help them learn skills. There are special rules designed to shelter them from certain types of language, ideas and visual stimuli. Movies, music and television broadcasts are labeled to warn parents of hazardous content. Medicine has protective caps to shield them. Toys designed for them have safety features, cars must seat them in special seats, and people who teach, coach them and lead them must follow rules designed to protect from abuse. Even when they make mistakes and involve themselves in petty criminal activities they are protected by withholding their names and confined in centers that often have all of the embellishments of home.

Many youth find the first 18 years of their lives restrictive. As they get older they complain about the rules of their home, church and school. They challenge the system that strains to contain them and virtually dare it to attempt to contain them.

Many have silently sat in their homes and dreamed of the day that they would be free of the rules and constraints of adolescence. Like the quarry slave, peering out of a dungeon window, they often yearn for the day they would be “free” to live their own lives independent of their parents.

The Slap

Just as there is an incubation period, there is also a point in which every youth gets a wake up call. The wake up call is the slap that suddenly announces the end of incubation.

For many young adults, high school graduation is a wake up call! It is society’s way of announcing the end of the sheltered existence.

Certainly the shift from youth to young adult life is a wake up call. Society takes off the wraps and begins to respond to the same young person in all new way.

Youth who make mistakes suddenly find that their names are listed in the paper and they go to jail instead of customized “centers.” They are suddenly old enough to go to war, vote and are expected to pay taxes.

With the new freedoms come responsibilities. Responsibilities are wake up calls that many youth have been sheltered from all of their lives.

Many have not had to worry about food, clothing and shelter. If they worked, their money was generally their own. Responsibility is a sobering slap that introduces youth into the real world of forms, documents, record keeping, loan payments, contracts, leases, insurance and liability. Many who have not been properly introduced to various nuances of independent living, find themselves in a world that responds to them with coldness rather than warmth and affection.

This rude introduction into the adult world is a slap that is bone chilling and often frightening. It is sobering to say the least.

The Breath of Life

Finally, we must consider that even though there is an incubation period and a slap of reality, life does not begin until the first breath is taken.

There are many young people who are socially "still born." They live 18 years but never take the first breath on their own. They drop out and disappear from productive life.

The Christian young adult strives to live the abundant life, not simply to be free from restraint but free live abundantly.

Dreams need power to animate! Every bird needs wind beneath its wings to fly! Every engine needs fuel to operate.

Every believer knows that it takes the power of God for a life to take flight!

Jesus said he came that those who trust in him and give him first place in their lives might know might be free but also enjoy Godly support!

The dream of being a teacher is formed in childhood, but that life doesn't begin until God breathes upon the dream!

The dream of being a doctor or nurse is formed in youth, but it begins to live when God breathes upon it.

The dream of being a businessperson or achieving in the arts remains just a dream until it comes to life when God breathes upon it!

Every Christian graduate needs to remember that no matter how talented, witty, smart and intelligent they are at the moment..none of their dreams can become reality until God breathes upon them!

When does life begin?

The abundant life begins the first day a child of God places their lives, hopes and dreams in God's hands. At that point life begins!

Life begins when we realize that anything that will help us to glorify God, build his kingdom and strengthen the cause of Christ can be accomplished.

Life begins when we step out on faith into the utter darkness of our own horizon with the full confidence that as long as we trust in God and do his will...no weapon formed against us shall prosper!

Life begins we resolve that no matter what comes our way, we will trust in the Lord!

On university campuses, in trade schools or on new found jobs...trust in the Lord

On the highways and byways of life...trust in the Lord!

Trust in Jesus, who died and arose from the dead to give us eternal life!

No wonder the song writer wrote, “I will trust in the Lord, I will trust in the Lord!” I will trust in the Lord until I die!”

Leaving Before The Benediction

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "The lord bles thee and keep thee: The Lord make his face shine up thee: The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee and give thee peace." Numbers 6:24-26

Introduction

Have you ever left an activity before it ended? Was it a movie? A football game? An exciting basketball game? How did you feel? If you are like most people, you felt an emptiness when you were required to leave an exciting activity before it concluded. Can you imagine sitting on the 50 yard line at the Super Bowl, the score is tied, with two minutes left to play in the game, then your partner says, "let's go so we can beat the traffic!" Can you imagine watching your favorite movie, but just before you discover the secret plot, your group says, "it's time to go?" That would be a bummer!

Those who read a suspense novel are glued to its pages. They can be terribly upset if someone stops them from reading those last five pages. They wouldn't even think about moving until it has been completed. By nature, we want to see how it will end. That's when we get a feeling of satisfaction.

No one likes an enjoyable experience interrupted. In fact, people have been known to stand in the rain and snow to see an experience through until the end.

When it comes to the things of God, shouldn't our resolve be the same? Those who are excited about their service to God, are very disturbed if asked to interrupt a blessed experience before it ends.

In the body of Christ there are many worship and service opportunities. There are generally two blessings offered: One at the beginning of the activity and the other at the end. There are many who push themselves to be present at both and would not think of having it any other way.

As Christians, we seek the blessings of God on all of our actions. We live our lives in expectation of his blessing and vow constantly that we will "run on to see what the end will be."

Exposition

This text focuses on the benediction offered by priests after sacrifices were made.

The Mosaic law provided for many sacrifices. The procedures for offering each sacrifice were often spelled out in the law.

Numbers 6 refers specifically to the Nazarite's blessing, but its general procedure was common to all. Those who sought a blessing from God came to the place of worship, and presented both a sacrifice and an offering. Then they waited for a blessing that came from priests. Even though sacrifices and offerings had been offered they waited patiently for the confirmation blessing that came from the priest who announced the words of the text, "The LORD bless thee, and keep thee: "

They waited for the benediction for it represented an acceptance of the sacrifice and offering and a confirmation that blessings would follow. Despite the length of their journey home, there is no record of people who left before the benediction.

Time for God

There are many good Christians who are trying to grow as it relates to giving God time to act in their lives. Three thoughts may be important to consider:

MANY PENCIL GOD IN A SMALL WINDOW OF TIME. There are many who believe and trust God but they expect God to operate within the context of their calendar of events. These are the people who will praise God intensely and sincerely within the window of time they have reserved for him. During that time they will give him everything they have and will serve him religiously. However, if God's praise or work every requires time beyond that which has been provided for him, they often decide to abandon him to pursue personal interests. A look at the weekly schedule of some believers will reveal their expectations.

There are at least two groups of believers. One group always pencils God in its calendar of activities, however, the amount of time he is allowed is often truncated as they schedule other activities immediate following the time block they have provided for God's service and praise. The average time block those in this group provide for God is about 60 to 90 minutes an activity. During this time, they will give their attention and energy to his worship and praise. However, if the worship or service to God is not completed within their allotted time, they become impatient and will generally leave the worship or service activity before it concludes. The second group pencils God in their schedule but they take pains not to schedule anything immediately following the activity. God moves in his own time and way. Those who serve him are aware that he cannot be hurried, neither can he be contained in any time sphere. Thus many believers may schedule an activity immediately following a worship or church based service activity but they warn others that they may be late for secondary activity. Only an extreme emergency could prompt such believers to leave a divine service or worship before the benediction. They know that the blessing is given at the end of the service and thus they plan to stay until it is received. In a similar request, they resist penciling in a proscribed amount of time for God to respond to prayer requests. God moves at his own time schedule. When Mary and Martha complained that Jesus did not come when they called him to the death bed of Lazarus, they soon learned with the resurrection of Lazarus, that he did not come when they wanted him to, but when it came, it was on time.

MANY WANT THE BLESSING WITHOUT THE SACRIFICE. There are many who come to a worship or service activity just in time for the blessing. We have seen these individuals, they slip in the back of the worship service and ease into a seat, just in time to hear the sermon or perhaps just the benediction itself. These have assumed a "show my face" attitude with God. In this respect they have concluded that it is sufficient to simply "show their faces" at a worship or service activity and that will merit the blessing. That's the way some politicians approach the Black community in some areas of the country. They invade a worship service long enough to show their faces, then leave. Their intent for participating was not worship, but politics. A "show my face" attitude is not sufficient with God.

Such individuals are types of individuals who want the reward of the Christian life without making the sacrifices associated with the life. It is true that the Christian lifestyle promises a crown of life. But the blessing of a crown is closely associated with an individual cross. Each believer, at one time or another, must bear his own cross. Bearing the cross requires sacrifices of time, talent,and money. It requires an enduring spirit and a determination to give God our best despite circumstances.

A close look at numbers 6 however, reveals that the benediction given by the priest was based upon the sacrifices and offerings that were given. A person could quickly run and stand in the crowd as the priest offered the benediction, but he did not receive the blessing because the blessing was tied inextricably to the sacrifice. If there was no sacrifice or offering there was no blessing. Simply put: If there is no cross, there is no crown.

MANY GIVE UP HOPE BEFORE GOD MOVES. Those who leave before the benediction are symbolic of the millions of people in the world who are impatient. They want God to bless them, heal them, inspire them or otherwise do whatever he plans to do..quickly. Allowing time for God to work his plan for our lives is essential for every believer. We can't push God's clock faster than he wants it to go. When some don't receive the answer to their prayer request in a certain time frame they become impatient and take matters into their own hands. When God seems slow about answering our prayer for steak and eggs, we get impatient and start buying stolen pork chops that were a real deal. Some begin to steal a little here, and slip a little there, all in an attempt to make something happen, because God moves to slow. Sarah had this problem. God promised her a child, but as she progressed in age without a child she became impatient with God and tried to help him out by ordering her slave to mate with her husband to bare him a son. When it comes to the things of God are we impatient. Patience is a virtue that is based on faith. Those who are patient know that God will move in his own way, thus they faithfully wait for him to act. This is the message that Isaiah projected to Israel, in Isaiah 40:31 "But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint." Those who leave before the benediction are often impatient. Those who are impatient usually miss the blessing associated with the real patient spirit.

Don't Miss The Blessing

Finally, brothers and sisters, while there is no blessing without a sacrifice, it also well that we remember that those who make a sacrifice, don't mind waiting for the blessing.

While Numbers 6 focuses heavily upon one type of sacrifice, those of the Nazarites, the ritual pattern was followed in most sacrifices. Thousands of people stood in line to present their sacrifices, then waited patiently for the Priest to offer the blessing. Depending on the number of people, this process could be quite time consuming, but the people came for a blessing and they were not leaving without one.

Jacob wrestled with an angel all night long. As the sun began to rise Jacob held on to the angel who demanded to be released. Jacob said he would not let go, until he was blessed.

There are many today who have been wresting with a problem, decision, or a family issue. It's been an uphill struggle, but strong believers have decided not to let go until their blessing comes.

When Job faced difficulty and troubles on every hand, his friends encouraged him to let go. Even his wife gave up hope, but Job steadfastly refused to let go until his blessings came.

With sores on his body, he would not let go!

Through financial ruin, he would not let go!

Job said, "all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come."

When Jesus prepared to return to heaven, he assembled his disciples and told them to stay in Jerusalem and wait until the blessing came. With the blessing would come the power of the Holy Ghost.

When the Holy Ghost came they were filled with power to speak in languages they had not studied. They were given power to perform signs and wonders that certified them as true apostles of Christ.

When the blessings come, every believer is lifted, empowered and motivated in a way that only God can do!

When God blesses your life, his power is evident.

At the benediction, God is asked to bless you! God is in the blessing business! When God blesses, that which has:

--FAILED becomes a success; FALLEN is picked up again!

--DIED is revived and lives again; CEASED begins to move again!

At the benediction, God is asked to keep you! We can't make it from week to week without protection from God, because we live in troublesome times. But I heard David declare in Psalm 27:5 "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me..”

At the benediction, God is asked to be gracious to us and let his light shine! No matter who we are or how important we think we are, we can’t make it without God’s grace!

Grace wakes us up in the morning!

Grace puts food on the table!

Grace puts us to sleep at night!

At the benediction, those who have made the sacrifice, say I can’t go forward, without the Grace of God!

It’s the grace of God that keeps us!

It’s the grace of God that secures us!

It’s the grace of God that gives us one more chance!

This grace was paid for out on Calvary!

This grace was delivered through an empty tomb!

This grace keeps blessing us everyday!

Can Any Good Thing Come Out of Nazareth?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 25, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "Zebulun shall dwell at the haven of the sea; and he shall be for an haven of ships; and his border shall be unto Zidon. Genesis 49:13; And Nathanael said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see." John 1:46

Introduction

Have you ever wished you lived in another place? On occasion, most of us have entertained that thought. Not only have we wished we could live in another city, but some have even wished they could have been born in another class or race. In many instances, tn appears that those who are successful in life seem to have prestigious histories that have begun in some far away place removed from their rural existence or poor inner city neighborhoods. Our day dreams sometimes paint a picture of life the way we think it would have been had we been fortunate enough to have had a different history.

Those who live in small towns, poor neighborhoods or disadvantaged situations are generally perceived as culturally deprived and somewhat unequal to the rest of the world. In general, the world questions whether anyone born outside of the cultural centers of America has a competitive chance. Minority youth have even less of a chance, say the skeptics. Very few good things can come from such situations, they contend.

It's no small wonder then, that millions of youth feel it is useless to attempt to achieve anything. They are not expected to achieve by their circumstance! When expectations are low, poor performance follows!

The world promotes its doubts boldly. To each question, we supply an answer. "Can anything good come from a Black child, born in poverty and deprived of cultural opportunity?" Certainly. Ask The Reverend Jesse Jackson for that answer. He grew up in the midst of poverty with only newspaper to cover the walls of his home. Despite poverty he rose to become a world leader, spokesman and advisor to presidents.

Can children born with physical handicaps ever expect to do anything with their lives? Ask Wilma Rudolph who struggle with a crippling disease as a child and could barely walk. Yet rose above her handicap to become an Olympic Gold Medal winner.

Can a boy with a severe speech impetiment ever hope to become a great actor? Ask James Earl Jones, who could barely speak when he was a child because of a severe stuttering problem. Now his voice and command presence has made him a star of stage and screen.

Can an Black athelete for a small town ever dream of being a quarterback in the NFLl? Ask James Shack Harris who marched his way from the bayous of Louisiana to become the first Black Quarterback in the NFL.

Can a Black man expect to excell in sport dominated by whites? Ask Arthur Ashe the tennis champion or Tiger Woods the greatest Golfer of all times. Both of them made history by doing the impossible.

Can a kid from the ghetto ever dream of being a Four Star general in the Army? Ask Colin Powell.The more we ask, the more examples we receive of those who have dispelled the myth that a person must be from "somewhere else" to make a significant contribution to the world community. The place where anyone is from, is somewhere else, to someone else!

One of the frustrations of youth is the feeling that life would have been better if circumstances would have been different. Why wasn't I born to a rich family? Why couldn't I have the physical appearance of others? Why can't I do as well in my studies as others? Some even ponder the thought that life would be better for them if they had different parents and a different home. Some youth create a virtual fantasy world in which they attempt to apppear more than they actually are. They want to dress as if they are rich, brag about things they do not have, invent experiences they have not known, and generally live a fabricated existence.

Poverty, handicaps, race and lack of cultural experiences does have a tendency to place us on the outside lane of the field of life without the advantage of head start. We start our race with a more difficult course ahead of us. It does not mean that we can't win, but it does mean that we must have a tremendous amount of discipline and will power to achieve our goals. Even more than the person who runs the inside lane.

That's where God comes in the picture. Whether we are running the inside track or the outside lane. Whether we are born into poverty or to a life of relative comfort, the greatest achievement comes to those who put God first. Many have achieved some level of success without God, but those who let him control their lives have gone even higher than they could have imagined.

As Christians, we have come to know that God is able to lift us from obscurity to the pinnacles of success, if we will allow him to work through us to benefit his kingdom. Whether we were born in a mansion or a shack, there is no limit to what a child of God can do or where he or she can go. It's all in God's hand.

Exposition

This text focuses on Nathaniels question, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?"

The greatest understanding of the text comes from realizing that it is rooted in a history that began with Jacob in the Old Testament. Jacob had twelve sons: Levi, Simeon, Judah, Joseph, Issachar, Dan, Benjamin, Asher, Gad, Naphtali, Rueben, and Zebulun. These twelve sons all received an inheritance from Jacob who also added blessings to some of them.

Among the least of the inheritances is that given to Zebulun. Zebulun, remember him? He was the sixth and last child of Leah, whom Jacob was forced to marry after working seven years for her younger sister Rachel. He was told that his descendants would be those who would dwell by the sea, at the very edge of land of promise. Hundreds of years later as the Children of Israel overcame slavery and marched into the promised land, the 12 tribes divided up the new land. In keeping with the blessings of Jacob, the tribe of Zebulun was given an area of land that was near the sea of Galilee. It appeared to be a very mediocre inheritance.

While his brothers received inheritances that included mountains, fertile fields and pasture land that could support sheep and cattle, all Zebulun received was an address. A small area of land next to the sea that would not be able to grow anything or produce much profit. His brothers appeared the more prosperous. His family appeared the losers.

The land that Zebulun came to inherit was one of the most despised places among the people of God. His land was way in the north, way at the very top; his land was bordering the sea on one side, and Sidon of the Gentiles on the other side, it was a long way from Jerusalem where the king would come to live lives, where the leaders would come to reside. His land is far removed; perhaps once a year he would go there. The historian Josephus notes that Zebulun's lands reached on the one side to the Lake of Gennesareth and on the other to Carmel and the Mediterranean. On the south it was bounded by Issachar, whose inheritance lay in the great plain or valley of the Kishon; on the north it had Naphtali and Asher. Thus, it was remote from the center of government.

By any standard Zebulun was so far North that it rarely participated in tribal decisions, central government or other activities. For the most part, it was what we would consider "backwoods" or a "one red light" town. Morever, it was assumed that those who came from Galilee or any of the cities of that area, they were generally considered what we would call "hicks", "unlearned","uncultured" with little or no chance of achieving success.

At the least, those who were descendants of Zebulun were disappointed. What they had was very small. It was nothing to speak of, but it was theres. It had been given to them by God himself.

The descendants of Zebulun took their small inheritance by the sea and turned it into a prosperous way of life, that profited from the sea. They became industrious in many ways that used the resources that were available to them. Although despised by the rest of the nation, they silently worked to being a successful existence for themselves, even while everyone else laughed.

One of its hard working families bore a child that would put their little area on the map! The mother was Mary. The Stepfather was Joseph. The son who would make the town famous was Jesus.

Thus, when Philip spoke to Nathaniel under the fig tree about the Messiah, coming from Nazareth, a city in the land of the Zebulunites, it was funny. Nothing good comes out of Nazareth—except that which has blessed by the power of God!

Philip's answer was simple...."Come and see!"

Overcoming Circumstances

Zebulun worked against the odds. The chances of succeeding in such a remote area were very low. Very few doubted that the tribe would even continue to exist let alone thrive. Yet, Zebulunites used what was around them and succeeded anyway.

Today, youth face similar situations. By virtue of birth, many are operating in very difficult situations. Some youth are operating without both parents. Some go to school everyday with little or no sleep because their home lives have been interrupted by fighting, drugs and violence.

Still other youth have been sexually abused and misused. Some have been discarded and trampled upon so much that they feel like door mats.

It's difficult to think of yourself in any way but a failure when everyone seems to think you are a Zebulunite or a good for nothing!

Zebulunites, however, are overcomers! They achieve despite the odds! They excel despite their detractors! They make it to the top despite their critics!

DISCIPLINE: Every Zebulunite needs discipline. This is the ability to force oneself to do what is necessary to overcome. It may mean forcing yourself to read to improve reading skills. It may mean studying math when everyone else if playing basketball. It may mean watching less television and doing more to achieve.

WISDOM: Every Zebulunite needs wisdom. Wisdom goes beyond mere knowledge. It is the wise application of knowledge. Many youth have opportunities to excel in life but blow their chances by making unwise choices that send them on a meandering trail far away from what God intended. Dr. Ava Pierce, says wisdom is knowing, "When to say yes, When to say no, when to hold on and when to let go!"

DETERMINATION: What Zebulunite can ever hope to achieve anything without determination? Determination is the unquenchable fire that fuels the quest for success. It is that inner push that resolves to go forward despite obstacles. If you put a Zebulunite in a boat that is sinking, he will keep searching until he finds a way to plug the hole and bail out the water or swim for the shore. He won't sit still and drown!

When God Blesses

Finally, brothers and sisters, those who go forth out of Nazereth must remember one truth, when God blesses, it doesn't matter where we live, or the extent of our circumstance, he's able to see it through.

The Zubulunites didn't have much, but what little they had was blessed by God.

When what you have has been blessed by God, it doesn't matter who you are or where you are from, the power of God makes the difference!

All Moses had was a rod, but when it was blessed by God it turned water to blood and opened up the Red Sea!

All Elijah had was a mantle on his shoulders, but when it was blessed by God it performed hundreds of miracles!

All a widow woman had was an empty barrel, but when it was blessed by God, that barrel never ran dry.

All the lame man had were two legs that would not walk, but when blessed by God those legs were able to walk!

When Philip came to Nathaniel he said "come see the savior." Immediate Nathaniel wanted to know, where is he from?

Did he come from Jericho, known for its high and lofty walled cities?

Did he come from Bethlehem, riddled with many taverns and inns?

Did he come from Emmaus, along whose road many great men have walked and talked?

Did he come from Bethany, in whose gardens many pious and devout men have prayed?

Did he come from Jerusalem, whose temple echoes the voice of God?

When Philip responded that he was from Nazareth, the question responded, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?"

Philip could only answer...come and see!

Come and see and I'll show you a man out of Nazareth, who is making the lame walk again!

Come and see and I'll show you a man out of Nazareth, who is making the blind see again!

Come and see and I'll show you a man out of Nazareth, who is raising the dead!

Somebody here has been told that they will never amount to anything. Tell them "wait and see"

I know a man who came from Nazareth who specializes in doing the impossible!

He's name is Jesus and he is in the blessing business!

He was born in Bethlehem!

He was raised in Nazareth!

He died in Jerusalem!

But early Sunday morning..he got up from the grave with all power in his hands!

If you want to know what good can come out of Nazareth, come and go with me to my father's house!

Come and go with me...

To my father's house!

SCRIPTURE:"The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Romans 6:23

Introduction

Have you ever heard an offer that sounded real good..in fact it sounded too good to be true? When we hear such offers we usually look for qualifiying conditions. Qualifying conditions usually reduce the offer from its initial "too good to be true" category to something less. A letter comes in the mail and announces that you have won a $1,600 Florida cruise for six days and seven nights, including transportation and food. Sounds good? Yes, until you find out that the cruise costs $4,000 and the $1,600 is a discount coupon. Many people were excited to see ads in newspapers that they could get full computer systems for only $400.00. Many ran to the store with $400 in hand only to find out that you had to pay the full price for the computer, sign up for several years of intenet connection with Microsoft, then get a rebate check later. Professionals usually remind the public to beware of offers that are uncharacteristically generous. The rule is, "If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is."

A popular singing group, N Sync released a new album a few months ago. It's lead song bears the name of the album "No Strings Attached." It seems to say "world here we are, just as you see us with no strings attached." Whatever the message, the album has sold 10 million copies in just over two months. There seems to be a demand for simplicity and honesty in every generation without qualifiers.

Strings are qualifying conditions or limitations that are connected to promising situations or opportunities. The purpose of the string is generally to persuade us to involve ourselves in circumstances, situations, projects or opportunities that are often more advantageous to the solicitor than to us. If there is a costly commitment involved, it's a string. Whether it's a telemarketer trying to sell us something on the phone or a man who offers a free case of cokes just to let him vacum one room of our house free of charge, there is a string attached.

Strings are even attached to things at home. Most parents have learned that whenever their children start using phrases like "you are the best mom in the world" -there is a string attached. Somebody wants something. When a sister or brother volunteers to do the chores of another- watch out, there may be a string attached.

Consider the son who learned about strings real early in life. When he received his driver's license he wanted a chance to drive the family's new car around town, take out his girl and generally chill with some wheels. He asked his father, if they could discuss his use of the car. His father said "Yes!" The son was excited at the answer but before he could enjoy it, there was a string attached. "If" said the father "You bring your grades up, study the bible a little, and get your hair cut; then you can drive the car" For an entire month the son studied hard in school and brought his grades up to honor roll status. Every night he read his bible and learned many bible stories. Feeling he had done enough, a few months later the boy came back and again asked his father if he could use the car. His father said, "Son, I'm really proud of you." As he looked at the report card. "Your Sunday School teacher tells me that you have become a biblical whiz kid." By this time the son could see himself driving off into the night in the family car. "However" said the father, You didn't get your hair cut- two foot tall afros went out with KidNPlay!" The son waited a moment and then replied, "You know dad, I've been thinking about that. Samson had long hair, Moses had long hair, Noah had long hair, and even Jesus had long hair." His father replied, "Yes son, and they walked everywhere they went!" There are strings attached to everything-even the family car!

Sometimes relationships come with strings attached. There are many who have entered relationships looking for love, only to find themselves entangled with so many strings that they can't get loose. A young man who gives an expensive gift to a girl usually gets a frown from her parents, because they know that such gifts usually come with expectations of ownership and control that form strings of attachment that will be hard to break later. It's hard to love if someone is always pulling strings.

What about God's love? Are thee any strings attached? When he promises to love us, is it conditional? Does it depend upon whether or not we love him the same way he loves us? God's love for us is truly unconditional. There are no strings attached. He may not be happy with our present condition and will certainly work for our improvement, but he loves us anyway.

As Christians, we are happy to know that God loves us unconditionally. Our faith is based on the knowledge that God's Grace is given to us freely without demand or deception. It is what it says it is...a free gift to all who will receive it!

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul writing to the Romans, explaining that God's love is an unconditional gift given to mankind.

Unconditional love is difficult for the carnal mind to comprehend. Our culture and tradition teaches us to that anything received received is earned, whether it is good or bad.

Those who lead sinful lives earn a payment or a wage. They will receive a just punishment for their sinful life and actions. That payment is death. Even though death is not desirable, it is accepted as a payment for a lifestyle. It is earned through lives live in defiance to the Word of God.

Eternal life, on the other hand, is not earned. Mortal men, despite our best abilities cannot do enough good to earn ourselves a place in heaven. No amount of good will, charity or good works can earn heaven. Eternal life is a gift. It is free and comes with no striings attached. It is an act of mercy on behalf of the Father to accept us into the kingdom, although we don't deserve to be there!

Salvation Has No Strings

There is a difference between "strings" in its purest connotation and "conditions." Generally, strings are considered to be conditions and limitations that are revealed after the fact or not revealed at all. Strings point to ulterior motives associated with an act or persuasion. Not all conditions are strings. Conditions that are explained to us prior to entering an agreement or relationship are generally viewed in good faith. They allow us to enter into our relationship with the full knowledge of the possibilities.

SALVATION HAS NO STRINGS: The promise of eternal life does not come with strings attached. There is nothing a person has to do once it has been received in order to confirm salvation. However, there are some preconditions that each believer is aware before receiving the gift of salvation. There are four pre-conditions to salvation.

Believe. Each person must believe in Jesus Christ. They must believe that he is the Son of God and that God raised him from the dead. (Romans 10:9)

Confess. Each person who wants the gift of life must confess with his mouth his belief in Christ. It is not sufficient for a person to be a good man, a good woman, a good boy or a good girl. They must confess (Romans 10:9)

Repent. Believers who want the gift of God must turn from their wicked ways. Repentance is not a string that we learn about after we are saved it is a precondition of our salvation. That's what Peter meant in Acts 2:38 when he said, "... Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Repentance is essential.

Baptism: Baptism is also essential to salvation. Those who want to be saved no of the condition before hand. It is not a string that comes later, but every believer is asked to acknowledge his acceptance of Christ through baptism.

After the gift of life has been bestowed, it is complete. There is nothing else to do. Many works, signs, wonders may occur after a person is saved but they do nothing to increase his salvation at all.

The World Has Many Strings

While salvation has no strings attached, the world has many strings attached to its relationships.

PUPPET STRINGS: Puppets move and seem to talk only when someone else who is out of sight pulls their strings. They move their moves but speak only when the puppet master speaks. There are many people who have reduced themselves to being mere puppets. On the job, in the community or in government, pulling strings has become a way of life. While there are a few exceptions, most politicians generally fall into two categories: puppets or puppeteers. Candidates who seek office are judged as much by what they say and do as are the puppeteers who work out of sight dictating their programs, plans and ideas. Many receive promotions on their jobs, then later learn that promotion comes with strings. Some are frustrated when they discover they are expected to dangle on the company string void of individualism. Many spouses, though married still dangle like puppets on strings controlled by their parents.

Believers don't like being puppets. We believe the words of Acts 5:29, "..we ought to obey God rather than men." We dangle only on his string, he is our master and we have committed ourselves to serving him.-There are no strings attached.

PURSE STRINGS: There are many who are held hostage by purse strings. There are marriages that are held together because of purse strings. We have heard the threatening words of purse strings: "If I leave him, I will have no place to live. If I leave her, I'll have to find me a job. If we break up, I'll lose my part of this fine house and automobile. If I divorce him, grandpa will cut me out of his will." There are many who control others through their financial resources. Individuals who have large full purses have the capacity to wield tremendous influence because of purse strings. The federal government forces states to comply with federal laws through its purse strings. Employers force workers to do strange things in the name of, "its my job" because they control the purse strings.

Believers are aware of purse strings but choose to follow the Godly path even if it means cutting purse strings. We have tied ourselves to the purse strings of God. We walk daily with the faith of Philippians 4:19, " But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus"-There are no strings attached.

APRON STRINGS: Many couples experience tremendous difficulty because one or both parties are tied to the apron strings of a parent. Parents sit on the side lines and dictate the lives of their children, spelling out every detail. Even when they marry, apron strings are often not cut and wife finds herself competing with her husband's mother or a husband finds himself in the losing position of being at odds with his wife's parents. While it is difficult to do, one of the greatest gifts that parents can do to a child who has married and begun a new family is to cut the apron strings of dependence upon parents rather than spouse for emotional support. While there are exceptions, generally apron string marriages are strained and difficult. Parents can make it easier by quietly pointing their son or daughter toward their spouse as they cut the apron string that dominates their children's spousal decisions.

We believe that there are no paternal or maternal apron strings. Each family stands on its own because the word teaches in Genesis 2:24, "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh"-There are no strings attached.

God's Love-No Strings Attached

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that the love that God has for the world and each of its inhabitants, has no strings attached.

While man usually attaches post conditions and hidden strings to relationships and opportunities, when God says "I love you" there are no strings attached.

When we deal with mankind we must be sure to read the fine print and the details for the strings are often hidden in the small letters. But when God says, "thou shalt be saved" there are no strings attached!

When the worlds invites us into a relationship we proceed with caution, because every invitation usually has another motive under the surface. But when the Lord says, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." There are no strings attached.

When the world makes great expressions of love, we often take a wait and see attitude. But when we read that, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life"-There are no strings attached!

I'm so glad that God's blessings don't come with strings attached. If that were the case, most of us wouldn't be blessed at all!

When God hangs out the sun each day, I'm glad there are no strings attached. If he required all of us to be perfect, then we'd all be walking in the dark!

When God sends down the showers every month, I'm glad that it doesn't just rain on the worthy, because no one would receive any rain!

When God sends down blessings for mankind, I'm glad that he doesn't just bless those who deserve it, because none of us would receive anything!

When God says, "I love you!" there are no strings attached!

When Jesus healed the blind man, there were no strings attached!

When told the woman at the well all she had ever done, there were no strings attached!

When he raised Lazarus from the grave, there were no strings attached!

When he carried my cross to Golgotha's hill, there were not strings attached!

When he died between two thieves on an old rugged cross, there were no strings attached!

I'm so glad that early Sunday morning he arose from the dead, with all power in his hands!

He's offering salvation today, to anyone who will accept him with...

No strings attached!

Whoa!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the New Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 23, 2000

SCRIPTURE:"Woe unto the wicked! it shall be ill with him: for the reward of his hands shall be given him." Isaiah 3:1; "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter! Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight! Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink." Isaiah 5:20-22

Introduction

What do you think of when you hear the word "Whoa?" Depending upon your perspective, it can mean different things to different people. To some, "W.H.O.A." is acronym for the "Walking Horse Owner's Association of America!" These think instantly of walking horses. Those familiar with rural life, probably associate "Whoa" as a term yelled at mules who pull wagons and ploughs in the American farmland. If a horse is pulling a wagon and the driver wants the horse to stop, he doesn't say, "OK Bessie you can stop now!" He shouts, "Whoa!" To a horse, "Whoa means stop!" However, if you are familiar with the Hip Hop subculture, "Whoa" means none of the above. "Whoa" is a term that means just the opposite of what anyone could possible suspect. It doesn't mean stop, slow down or quit, it means you're doing great, "keep going!" It means spectacular, sensational, acceptable, and pleasing!" Such is the topsy turvy world of Hip Hop, in which this generation of young believers is trying to mature into Christian adulthood.

A popular rapper in the Hip Hop scene is "Black Rob." His hit video and CD has effectively coined a new word for the Hip Hop Generation. Rob says, anything that is "ill" is "whoa!" That can be really confusing to those not familiar with Hip Hop terminology that changes flavas quicker than the eye can see. A young man born in 1976 was ten years old in 1986 when "Run-DMC" coined the phrase "You be illn!" In 1986 "illn" was a word that meant obnoxious or unacceptable. But a decade or so later the Beastie Boys described themselves at the "Most Illn'est" boys around. Now "ill" means to be great or desirable.

Can you imagine the confusion of a teenager who reads the words of Isaiah 3:11 and finds the word woe and ill in the same sentence. "Woe unto the wicked! it shall be ill with him: for the reward of his hands shall be given him." It's a simple statement that seems to be straightforward, unless the person who reads it understands the reading by its Hip Hop definitions rather than its standard English reading. The words, “Wo”,”Woe”,”Whoa” when used as interjections, in standard English imply: caution, stop, slow down, warning, or trouble. Whenever we hear them spoken then are associated with negatives: “stop, quit, slow down, and trouble!” The verse should mean, “Trouble is in store for the wicked, it shall not be good for him, he lives by trouble and he shall receive the same trouble, by which he lives.” But by Hip Hop standards the verse means just the opposite, “Great is the person who is wicked. Life shall be great for him and he shall be rewarded for his wickedness.”

Definitions of words and values are often reversed in every generation of adolescence. Teens are often encouraged to do just the opposite of that which is right. It’s a guaranteed fact, that the most popular teens are those who seem to do the opposite of the mainstream culture and get away with it! If the culture says don’t smoke, it becomes popular to smoke! If it says don’t have sex before marriage then its popular to have as much as possible! If they are taught that the bible says everything must be done decently and in order, then the slouchiest dress style will be the most popular, complete with untied shoelaces, sagging pants and general untidiness. It is not unique to this generation. Adolescence is a time when every teen become like Alice lost in Wonderland, a place where good is bad and bad is good! Like Alice, however, they must wake up to the reality of the real world!

As Christians, we know that what God says he means. What is good is good. What is bad, is bad. There is no middle ground! We praise him for being the same yesterday, today and forever more.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he chided the people of Israel for blurring the line between right and wrong as they attempted to ignore God and live according to their own standards.

The nation had seen its clansmen in the North besieged by the Assyrians. They watched as their cities were destroyed and some of their strongest men were carried away into captivity. The Southern Kingdom was the next target of Assyrian threats. Isaiah warned that these attacks were the result of sinful living and gave warnings that destruction would follow if they did not correct their behavior.

The 5th chapter of Isaiah depicts Israel as a vineyard that is about to be abandoned by God because of the sins of the people. Many accumulated vast estates and great wealth as a result of their riotous living. Their sins included: greed, injustice and drunkenness. Many had grown rich by exploiting the poor. There was little attention paid to morality issues as every person became absorbed in the pursuit of the good life, often achieved at the expense of others.

Isaiah predicted woe and destruction to those who lived against God’s rule in 3:11. He said they would receive exactly what they gave to others...trouble!

Isaiah warned the people using the term “Woe” six times in chapter 5. “Woe” was a warning. It was also a prediction of difficulties to come.

In verse 8, he used “woe” to predict troubles for those who were covetous, who joined their lands together in such a way that they owned all of the lands, robbing the poor of opportunities.

In verse 11, he used "woe" to warn the people about the evils of drunkenness and drinking.

In verses 18-19, he pronounced "woe" on those that multiplied sins, adding bad ones on top of already bad ones.

In verse 20, he denounced those who blurred the line between right and wrong by calling wrong right and right wrong. He said "woe" would follow those who called evil good and good evil, for confusing bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter.

In verse 21, he used 'woe" to describe those who are conceited in their own eyes. It is a blindness that makes them think their sins are insignificant.

In verse 22-23, he pronounced "woe" on them that do evil things then justify themselves, especially when those evils are against the poor and distressed.

Isaiah gave a warning for the people to be cautious and repent. They ignored him. A hundred years later, the national morality declined to a point the Babylonians raided them, took their best citizens prisoners and destroyed everything that was special to them!

"Woe" was given as a warning, but the people would not listen.

Blurring the line

Youth today face a social order that is strikingly similar to that of Isaiah's time. There is an atmosphere of drunkenness, greed and immorality that is weaving itself into the fabric of our national order. Millions of youth have adopted an "in your face" attitude to God's laws, while they follow the lead of adults before them and plunge head long into a subculture of violence and immoral living. Yet, even as millions of their peers, fall astray, there is a core of young believers who hear the word of God and strive to heed its warning. Like Isaiah's time, a new morality is developing that teaches:

DARKNESS IS REALLY LIGHT: Youth are constantly bombarded with signals that conflict with God's standard of morality. These signals suggest that "darkness" or defiance of God's moral order is really the "right" thing to do. Violent behavior is promoted with a passion among our youth. The video games that feature the most violence are the most popular. Movies that feature "action" a code word for "violence" are the most successful among youth. They usually involve people dying in grotesque ways that range from stabbings to explosions. Much of the music targeted toward youth suggests violence, defiance of authority and immorality. The result is an attitude among youth that "violence is right." Youth respond with a litany of violent responses to nearly every situation. If a person cuts them in the lunch line in school, a violent response is likely to follow. Teachers and administrators are often showered with a sea of vulgarities for even suggesting an unpopular action. In the extreme, there are even some youth who respond by getting them a "rock" and a "glock" (gun) and "busting a cap" on anyone who differs. The subculture supports these response as the right thing to do!

Young believers should remember is never right to do wrong. In Acts 5:29 Peter and the Apostles faced a similar question. Their response was, "We ought to obey God rather than man." 1 John 1:6 says, "If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth:" There is no revised definition of "right" and "wrong" that creates a situation where wrong is right. There is never a situation where disobedience, insolence, immorality is right! The words of Isaiah are applicable even to this generation: "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter" It is never right to do wrong!

LIGHT IS REALLY DARKNESS: Young believers are constantly berated by some of their peers because they choose to walk in the light. They are given names and labels that ostracize and ridicule them because they choose the Christian lifestyle. They are criticized for living by God's standards of morality and decency. Those who do not drink or use drugs are often frowned upon. Those who wear their clothing to acceptable standards are not considered sexy or fashionable. Those who study hard, live clean, avoid sexual encounters and speak without vulgarities are usually ridiculed by a large part of their peer community. Unless reminded, it won't take long for young believers to get the notion that there is something wrong with doing right. The world tries to convince young believers that walking in the light of God's word is really darkness! The world sends the signal that those who live for God are missing the fun in life. In actuality they say, light is really darkness! To those who blur the line, Isaiah's words apply, "woe to them ..that put darkness for light, and light for darkness"

Yet, young believers are reminded that many in this generation do know God and walk in darkness. "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light!"

It's Alright to Walk In The Light!

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remind ourselves that despite what the world says, its "alright to walk in the light!"

The world may tell young believers that it wrong to do right, but the word of God is tells us that it is alright to walk in the light.

1 Thessalonians 5:5 says, "Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

1 John 1:7 says, "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin"

But Jesus said it best when he said, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid.In today's context Black Rob says, "Whoa" means something is good! It means something is great and wonderful! It means something is desirable! He says Whoa means Go!

Today Christian youth need a little horse and mule sense. A mule isn't known for being very smart, but he knows when he is told to "Haw and Gee" he should turn to the left or to the right. He knows when he's told to "Whoa!" it means he should pull back and stop.

We need to use a little horse sense. When God says WOE then we need to WHOA, pull back and come to a stop!

If the world says steal, children of the light should say "WHOA" because Exodus 20:15 says, "Thou shalt not steal!"

If the world says talk back to your parents, we should say "WHOA" because Ephesians 6:1 says, "Children obey your parents in the Lord for this is right!"

If the world says lie, children of the light should say "WHOA" because Exodus 20:16 says, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor"

If the world says engage in premarital sex, children of the light should say "WHOA" because 1 Corinthians 6:18-20 says, "Flee fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body. .."

That price was paid by Jesus, the Lamb of God!

That price was paid on a old rugged cross on a hill called Calvary!

That price was paid when he died between two thieves!

But Early Sunday morning Jesus arose from the grave to give us the victory!

If you've been walking in darkness, Whoa! Try walking in the light!

Jesus gave me a light and I'm going to let it shine! Let it shine! Let it Shine! Let it Shine!

Angels Watching Over Me!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 6, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways." Psalm 91:11

Introduction

Do you believe in angels? Do you believe that there are special beings that God has created who touch our lives in different ways? There are millions of people today who have more than a passing curiosity when it comes to angels. The television show "Touched by and Angel" has contributed greatly to the renewed interest in angels. In this series, angels are dispensed from heaven to help those who are weak, frustrated, living in fear and are threatened. The show depicts angels as spiritual beings that resemble people, with a special, personal mission that plunges them into the world with the express purpose of making life better for the recipients of their favor. Even those who do not consider themselves devout or Christians, find the show inspiring at the least. Belief in angels gives us hope that there is someone outside of ourselves able to control circumstances that seem to be out of control.

Where do people get their ideas about angels? Some get their ideas from the bible. In nearly every part of the bible angels are mentioned, sometimes by name. They make announcements, carry messages, defend, fight and even destroy. While some get their ideas about angels from the bible a large number of people get their information from movies and television. "Movies such as "Angels in the Outfield", "Angels in the Backfield" and the "Sixth Man" all project angels as baseball, football and basketball players. Others such as "City of Angels" and "The Preacher's wife" show angels falling in love with the mortals they are assigned to protect. Too many people depend on Hollywood to tell them about angels.

What is certain is that angels are real and on occasions they are assigned to get into our business. Consider the preacher who was hard on his members when they skipped Sunday worship. He told them they would burn in hell for putting the world before God. The same preacher had a love for the game of basketball. Whenever the urge hit him he had to play. It was a compulsion. On the day of the church's big anniversary program the urge to play basketball struck the minister. He tried to shake it off but it would not go away. Despite the fact that it was a very important Sunday at his church, he made up an excuse and skipped. He drove a hundred miles away from the city, to a place where no one knew him and jumped into a game and began to play. Two angels that watched him from heaven shook their heads. He's going to make the chief angry by skipping church to play ball. The other angel said, "Don't worry he'll be punished real good. Suddenly both angels received instructions from headquarters to go down and assist the preacher with his basketball game. As the preacher took his first shot from half court his angel grabbed the ball and guided it smoothly into the goal. The preacher was amazed. When he made three pointers they all went in. He sank his free throws and lay ups. He never missed a shot. He found that he could use a sky hook that would shame Kareem. When he stuck out his tongue and jumped, he soared into the air, higher than Micheal Jordan, making slam dunks with 360 degree turns. When the game was over he had scored 68 points. It was the best game of his entire life. The first angel said to the other, "I thought you said he would be punished for skipping church. We helped him play the best game of his entire life." The second angel said, "He is being punished. He just skipped church to play the best game of his life ...who's he going to tell?" Yes angels do get in our business, sometimes they even teach us lessons.

Angels are God's messengers. He uses them to protect, push us and position us to accomplish his will. Sometimes we see them but fail to recognize them. Often we don't see them at all, but we know they have touched our lives in ways that only God can do.

As Christians, we believe that God still has angels. We believe he uses them to accomplish his will for us. He works through them to make his will apparent in the world. We feel safe and secure in the knowledge that all night and all day, angels are watching over us!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he tells of blessings the righteous can expect.

David, writing from his own experience, related that those who believe in God and abide in him enjoy a special relationship with God. A life of communion with God shelters every believer from the worries, anxieties and fears associated with life's problem.

The 91st Psalm is particularly directed towards believers. It is their assurance that regardless of the circumstances that life presents, God has their personal destiny in control.

In the preceding 10 verses he noted that the righteous are privileged to be under God's protection. He noted that the righteous would be delivered out of the hands of those of the powers of darkness. They would not escape the experience, but are assured of deliverance.

The text presents the mechanism God plans to use to accomplish the protection succor of the righteous. The righteous shall be the wards of heavenly angels that will assist them in not only surviving difficulties, but in the eventual victory over difficulty.

David makes a statement of fact, “he will give his angels charge over thee.”

The word angel in both the Hebrew (Malak) and the Greek (Aggelos) languages has the same meaning, “a messenger.”

Angels were created by God before the foundations of the earth (Job 38:4-8). There are Godly angels, those who do God’s work, and there are fallen angels, those who do Satan’s work. Satan himself is a fallen angel. God has prepared a place of punishment for these fallen angels (Matthew 25:11) who often disguise themselves to appear as God’s anointed.

There are millions, perhaps billions of angels. Rev. 5:11 gives a snapshot of the angels surrounding the throne. In just that one moment there would be 100 million angels on hand. It has been said that there are so many angels that at any given time every person on earth could have a special private angel and still others would be left with waiting for something to do.

Biblically, angels have two appearances. Angels are spirit beings and have no form of their own. They have been recorded in scripture as appearing either as winged creatures or as men. In some instances they are seen as winged creatures, known as Cherubim (four wings, Ezekiel 1:4-15) and Seraphim (six wings, Isaiah 6:2-4). In other instances they have been recorded to appear as men. There is no record where angels appeared as women, but since believers have each been dispatched an angel, it is logical to assume that angels appeared as women as well. In Genesis 18:1-4 angels appeared to Abraham as normal men. Luke 24:3-5 shows angels appearing to the apostles in the normal form of men.

Angels have been recorded as they appeared at special times in the lives of believers:

Special births: The births of Christ, Samson and John the Baptists were announced by the appearance of angels.

Special deaths: The home going of Elijah was of such a great significance that angels driving chariots of fire swept him into glory.

Special points of decision: When great decisions about life direction and life paths must be made, angels have been recorded to be present. Such was the case with Jacob who wrestled with an angel and would not turn loose until he was blessed.

Special difficulties: Angels are present at moments of great difficulty and trial. When Abraham was commanded to sacrifice his son, a angel called from heaven to give him the good news that he would not be required to slay his son. (Genesis 22:11).

Special dilemmas: When the women came to the tomb after the crucifixion, they were met by an angel that told them to “fear not.”

Thus, David reminds the faithful of a biblically documented truth, God will dispense his angels to protect and provide for his own.

My Guardian Angel

Without a doubt there were angels in biblical times, but should believers today expect God to do the same? The word of God gives believers an assurance that God still sends angels in modern times:

PROTECTING ANGELS: God sends angels to protect those who inherit salvation. Hebrews 1:14 refers to them as "ministering spirits" that are "sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation." Generally God's protecting angels protect those who are carrying out the work of God, according to his purpose. Thus the Apostles, on some occasions were stoned and jailed, but were protected from serious injury and permanent incarceration until they had fulfilled God's purpose. Thus we read of jails being opened and men escaping mobs miraculously because of God's protection. Even in our work for God, he still will send ministering spirits to assist those in the work to continue without hurt or harm, according to his will.

MESSENGER ANGELS: God sends angels, who often take on the appearance of humans, to bring messages to us from heaven. An Angel told Philip to go into the desert. Once there he found an Ethiopian Eunuch who was struggling to understand a passage of scripture. Philip received a message from heaven, once acted upon resulted in the Eunuch being baptized and a continent being evangelized. (Acts 8:26-29). Today, God's sends us messages through angels. Sometimes we receive the message from the lips of a person we have never seen before. Sometimes God's messages bring us words of comfort and joy. Sometimes they bring warning. God sends his angels who do their work, then disappear.

ANGELS ARE SENT AS A RESULT OF PRAYER: Angels are sent as the result of the prayers of the righteous. The biblical record is sprinkled with instances in which either a believer prayed to God personally or on behalf of someone else resulting in an angel being dispatched. Elizabeth prayed for herself and an Angel came in answer to her prayer to announce the birth of John the Baptist. Sara prayed for a child, then laughed when an angel came to bring the news that she would mother a son despite being in her 90's. Abraham prayed to God for the cities of Sodom and Gomorra and his prayer resulted in angels escorting Lot and his family from the city before it was destroyed. In Acts 12:5-8 Peter was imprisoned, but constant prayer by the church resulted in an angel being dispatched to awaken Peter, swing open his cell doors and loose him from his chains. Believers continue to intercede for others through prayer. We don't know the countless times that others have been protected on highways and even in their homes by unseen angels of God that insure our safety, according to the will of God.

Seen or Unseen, God is still blessing

Finally, brothers and sisters we should be reminded that it does not matter whether we have physically encountered an angel in our lifetime, but it is important to know that, whether we see them or not, God has his angels watching over us.

We have no way of knowing how many times angels have been driving our vehicles for us after we fell asleep at the wheel.

We have no way of knowing how many times an angel of God forced us to turn in a different direction to avoid a catastrophe.

The song writer wrote, “If you could have seen the unseen dangers” that God has protected us from, then we would be praising God!

Praising God for his goodness!

Praising God for his mercy!

Praising God for being better to us than we have been to ourselves!

I’m reminded of the old lady who was seriously sick but lived all alone. One night in the winter, she was stricken with pneumonia, and could hardly breath. There was no one to help her. The old lady turned to her side and reached for her bible and starting talking to the Lord. As she prayed for help, there was a knock on the door of a doctor about 20 miles away. It was persistent and could barely be heard because of the wind storm. When he answered the door a woman told him there is a woman that needs your help. The doctor made excuses but the woman insisted, “there is somebody that needs your help.” When the doctor arrived he treated the old lady in the nick of time. He told her she was wise to send someone for help. The old lady said she didn’t send anyone because she had no phone and could not move. When a puzzled look came over the doctor’s face the old lady smiled and said “I was sick, but I didn’t worry, because all night and all day, God’s got an angel watching over me!”

Every saint should be glad to know that “all night and all day” God’s got an angel watching over me!

In the midst of hard times and trouble...God’s got an angel to help me remember that trouble don’t last always!

In the midst of my failure...God’s got an angel to help me turn my failure into success! In the midst of my weakness..God’s got an angel to help me turn my weakness into strength!

In the midst of my fears...God’s got an angel to help me turn my fear into confidence!

In the midst of my questions.. God’s got an angel to help me find the right answers! In the midst of my defeats...God’s got an angel to help turn my defeats into victories!

Everybody can’t get an angel! David said, “he that abideth in the temple of the almighty God”

On television, a man who doesn’t believe in God can get an angel!

On television, folks who have never stepped foot in a church can get an angel!

On television, the worse sinner can get an angel!

The word of God teaches that ministering spirits are sent to those who are heirs to salvation!

If you want to get an angel, you got to know Jesus. You got to know God for yourself.

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley! Jesus, the Bright and morning star!

Jesus, who died on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning, arose from the grave!

If you want to get an angel all night and all day...you got to know Jesus! All night. All Day! He’ll be a hedge all around you!

Peanut Butter & Jelly

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 31, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "Man that is born of a woman is of few days, and full of trouble. Job 14; "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock." Psalm 27:5; But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, Meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." Galatians 5:22

Introduction

What's your favorite kind of sandwich? There are many kinds that tickle our fancy. Many of us like a simple balogna sandwich. It tastes good and is simple to make. Others require a little more extravagance. Salami, roast beef and a few other meats make good sandwiches. A familiar cartoon strip, Dagwood, featured a man who loved to make giant sandwiches. Sometimes the sandwiches in the cartoon stood over three feet high and contained every kind of meat and topping imaginable. The sandwiches were called Dagwoods. Today, any oversized sandwich is often referred to as a Dagwood. Perhaps, the most famous sandwich of our time is the peanut butter and jelly sandwich. It seems everyone gets a thrill out of making and consuming peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. Recent reports have shown that the peanut butter and jelly sandwich is the most consumed sandwich type in the world. We love peanut butter and jelly!

The recent movie Forrest Gump, was a blockbuster hit for its simple logic. One statement Gump made in the movie was, "Life is like a box of chocolates, you never know what you're going to get." The phrase was catchy and it helped many people understand the uncertainties of life. If we could coin another phrase for Mr. Gump we could also say:

"Life is like a peanut butter sandwich, it's hard to swallow without a little jelly." That sums up a way to approach the Christian experience. There are difficult moments and periods in every person's life, yet these difficult times are easier to handle through the grace of God.

Life is like a peanut butter sandwich! Our existence is sandwiched between our birth and death. Somewhere between the two, we experience the substance of our lives. Our substance consists of the every day concerns that we handle: acquiring food, clothing, shelter, health care, education, romance, etc. Often these everyday concerns can be frustrating, infuriating and exasperating. They make each day a challenge. It's these challenges that can get sticky and hard to swallow.

As much as we like peanut butter sandwiches, they taste much better and are easier to swallow when there is a little jelly! So it is with the frustrations of life, they are easier to handle and swallow when accompanied by a healthy, vibrant and energized faith in God. An active faith makes life's sticky issues easier to swallow!

As believers we know that the saying is true, "into every life a little rain must fall." We prepare for life's difficulties and trials. We know that when we place God first in our lives, he will make anything that comes our way...easier to swallow!

Exposition

These three texts point to the reality that any person's life can expect trouble, which can be overcome with the spirit of God.

Job is the perfect biblical example of the righteous man or woman. He was a perfect man who observed the laws of God in spirit and in truth. Yet, despite his perfection, he experienced considerable trouble. Financial loss beset him after he lost all of his cattle. Family woes troubled him at the sudden death of his children. His own health began to fail him. In the midst of these woes, his wife and friends chided him constantly, suggesting that his troubles were the result of some sin. Without a doubt, Job was dealt a difficult hand. His own faith however, remained in tact. He was not swayed by the skepticism of his wife and friends. He concluded that no man that is born of a woman can expect to live without trouble. His time on earth is short, and most of that time is filled with trouble. Job gave us a fine example of how to deal with trouble, he endured it with a steadfast hope. In the end, his reward was great. His health was restored. His finances were greater. There were even more children born.

David was not the perfect man that Job was. He was a more worldly. He made many mistakes but remained loyal and faithful to God. He was more like the average believer, strong in some areas, weak in others. His loyalty to God earned him the nickname, "a man after God's own heart." Despite being a man after God's own heart, David had troubles. He was king of Israel, but he had troubles. They did not evade him. From his youth through his tenure as king, David's years were filled with the "sticky" issues of life. He found however, that God often hid him from his enemies and protected him. It prompted him to write many psalms about God's protective grace. He managed to keep a positive perspective on his difficult experiences by remaining focused on God. On one occasion the spirit of God prompted him to write in Psalm 121, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth." David was able to digest difficult times by keeping his eyes focused on God, the source of his help.

Paul, writing to the church at Galatia, reminded them as he reminded all Christians: remain focused on the strengthening nature of the spirit of God. In each life experience the traits of love, joy, peace and other virtues of the Christian way of life, make life more palatable. It is the presence of God in our lives that helps each believer overcome difficult times and look forward to brighter days.

Combined, these texts show believers that "sticky" difficult, and troublesome times should be expected by even the strongest believers. However, the spirit of God mingled with each trouble, makes it easier to swallow.

Peanut Butter Situations

There are circumstances and situations that make life sticky. They are tense, dramatic and traumatic at times. They are often difficult to swallow.

PERSONAL WOES: Personal dilemmas are numerous. These are the situations that present us with difficult choices, that often spell the difference between success and failure. Lack of courage, shattered self confidence, and diminished capacity are among the personal woes that many face. Any one of these three has the propensity to elicit feelings of personal woe. Any one of them can make each day hard to face and life hard to swallow.

FINANCIAL FAILURE: Financial failure is emotionally devastating. It often ushers in changes of lifestyle that are unwelcomed. In addition, it creates a diminished emotional capacity that reduces personal productivity and enthusiasm. The loss of a job, failure of a business, or other means of financial loss can be so devastating that some have even considered committing suicide. The loss of financial security is certainly a sticky situation. It too is hard to swallow.

DEATH: The death of a loved one is inevitable. It one reality that is sandwiched between the divergent ends of life. Yet, death disrupts the normal flow of our lives. It abruptly destroys links of dependence that have sustained us for years, and as a result we are lost when its chilly fingers touch the core of our lives. When death comes, no matter well prepared we may seem, it is always hard to swallow. It's a sticky situation.

ROMANTIC FAILURE: When a man or woman experiences a failure in marriage or close personal relationship with another, it can render a personal totally dysfunctional. It becomes hard to sleep, eat, concentrate or focus on even the simplest tasks. Divorce, estrangement or difficulties in relationships can place a severe strain upon an individual, to the point of emotional burnout. Like the others, this too is a peanut butter situation. It's hard to swallow

A little Jelly Makes it easier

Just as a little jelly makes a peanut butter sandwich a little sweeter and easier to swallow, there are several spiritual qualities, once acquired, that can make even the toughest situation easier to swallow. Just what is jelly anyway? It is usually made up of fruit and fruit pectin. It sometimes contans additional sugars for sweetness. It makes our taste buds happy and makes peanut butter digest better too. In a peanut butter sandwich, jelly clarifies and sweetens.

That's the impact of the grace of God on each believer's life. Paul referred to the fruit of the spirit. These qualities are like jelly, they sweeten and make even difficult situations easier to swallow.

A joyful spirit, a spirit of longsuffering, an attitude of hope, a humble approach, good motivations, and a tempered response to all of life' situations, make them easier to digest. Some have found that they present sweet opportunities for God to work in their lives. Instead of complaining they "count it all joy" because they are confident that all things, even peanut butter situations, will work to their good.

The fruit that makes life's jelly comes from the spirit of God. It's the kind of stuff that preserves saints.

He's Sweet I know!

Finally, brothers and sisters we should remember that we serve a God who specializes in taking bitter situations and making them sweet!

Life offers every believer some very difficult challenges. But each challenge is made easier by the outpouring of God's spirit.

God takes bitter experiences and makes them sweet!

Joseph was thrown into a prison and left for dead, but God took the bitterness of a lonely pit, and prison and turn it into the sweetness of the palace!

Moses was exiled from Egypt as an outcast of Egyptian royalty, but God took the bitterness of a dry barren desert and turn it into the sweetness of victory that let Israelites go free.

Naaman found that the bitterness of his leprosy could be sweeten by seven dips in waters touched by the hand of God.

The Lord is a sweetener! He can take any bitter situation and make it easy to swallow!

Are your funds running low? Has it made life hard to swallow? God can fill empty wallets! Are your hopes waning? Has it made life hard to swallow? God can renew lost hopes! Are your fears increasing? God take our fears and give us renewed courage!

Are your doubts multiplying? God can take our doubts and give us assurances!

No wonder the song writer wrote, "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine. Oh what a foretaste of glory divine! This is my story! This is my song! Praising my savior all the day Lord!

I don't know about you, but I serve a God who has taken situations in my life that were hard to swallow and given me renewed hope!

Maybe that's why the song writer declared, "He's sweet I know! He's sweet I know! I've found a savior and he's sweet I know!"

His name is Jesus! He's sweeter the blue berry jam!

His name is Jesus! He's sweeter than strawberry jelly!

His name is Jesus! He's sweeter than home made peach preserves!

His name is Jesus! The Lily of the Valley! The Bright and Morning Star!

He died out on Calvary! But Early Sunday morning...he arose from the dead!

Dark clouds may rise! Strong winds may blow! But I've found a savior and he's sweet I know!

Get What You Need And Leave

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 20, 2000

SCRIPTURE:" "This is the thing which the Lord hath commanded, Gather of it, every man according to his eating. An omer for every man, according to the number of your persons; take ye every man for them which are in his tents. And the children of Israel did so, and gathered, some more, some less. " Exodus 16:16-17

Introduction

Have opportunities ever passed you by? Have you ever wondered why? Often we find ourselves surrounded by opportunities, but we are unable to seize the moment. There are a variety of reasons that we fail to capitalize on opportunities, most of them can be attributed to our own short comings. Sometimes we are passed over because of influences beyond our control. Whatever the reason, it's a bad feeling to miss out on a big chance to achieve a goal, or improve our condition.

Sometimes opportunities seem to pass us by, especially if we are minorities or women. Consider the homeless dog that wandered the streets until he saw a sign posted in a window that read: "Help Wanted: Must be able to type, work a computer and speak more than one language." At the bottom of the sign were the words, "An Equal Opportunity Employer." The dog became excited and went in the office. When he began pointing at the sign and barking, the owner understood that he wanted to apply for the job. The dog hopped in a chair, wagged his tail and waited for his interview. The owner said, "You must be able to type." The dog quickly jumped from the chair, grabbed a sheet of paper, and quickly typed a perfectly typed letter at 75 words per minute. Not convinced the owner said, "You must also know how to use a computer!" The jumped down, turned on the computer and demonstrated perfect use of Microsoft Word, Excell, Lotus 1-2-3 and Word Perfect. "Amazing" said the owner. "But you are a dog!" The dog pointed at the words on the sign, "Equal Opportunity Employer!" Trapped by his own sign, the owner said, "Yes, but the sign also says you must be able to speak two languages!" -Then the dog sat up in the chair and said, "Es-Panol","Paw-la-boo Franc-ee","Spre-can-shee Dusch?" and capped it off by saying "Yo, dog! I be a Black dog, I can speak Ebonics too!" At that owner said, "Sorry, you're over qualified for the job!" Sometimes, no matter what we do, opportunities pass us by!

How does God provide blessings and opportunities for believers? He provides them, one day at a time! Every day believers approach the world with an attitude that God will provide our needs this day. This is what Jesus taught us in the model prayer. "Give us this day our daily bread." That means give us whatever we need for sustenance, this day. Sustenance includes food, clothing, shelter, emotional support or opportunity. Our request to God is to provide blessings and opportunities for us one day at a time. As we act on each blessing we maintain the faith that the same God who provided bread and opportunity for us yesterday, will do the same today.

As Christians, we have learned to walk by faith. We trust that God will provide us with what we need, no more and no less. Since he has never let us down, we have no doubt that he will provide for us if we continue to live...one day at a time.

Exposition

This text focuses on the children of Israel as they received blessings every day.

At the beginning of the wilderness journey they began to complain and worry about what they would eat and drink. There had only been about two and one half months since they left Egypt (Ex: 16:1) According to Exodus 12:38 they had plenty of cattle and supplies with them when they left Egypt. They carried flocks and herds and "very much cattle." At the time of this text, with sufficient supplies on hand, they began to worry and complain about what could happen up the road. They doubted their ability to sustain themselves in the wilderness much longer. Some wanted to return to Egypt while they still had enough supplies to sustain themselves on the return journey.

The Israelites complained and murmured to God because they had very little to eat in the wilderness. They asked for bread and God responded by sending them bread prepared in heaven. The bread would serve two purposes. It would be a test of whether or not Israel would walk in God's laws. It would also be a reminder to them that they were brought out of Egypt and sustained in their journey by God himself.

Manna was a miraculous bread from heaven. Some point to a plant that grew natural in the Sinai region as being the source of Manna. But it could not be true, because of the nature of the occurrence. It came consistently for six days of every week, did not appear on the Sabbath, and continued in the same manner for 40 years. It spoiled if left over night during the week, but maintained its substance if kept overnight on the Sabbath eve. It was obviously not the product of a simple plant that was growing in the area because the shear amount would have made it improbable. There were an estimated 600,000 or more Israelites. Each person gathered an omer, which is about 3/4 of a gallon. On a daily basis it has been estimated that some nine million pounds of Manna had to fall on each of five days of the week and on the Sabbath eve, 18 million pounds of had to be collected. Such a requirement could only be met by God himself. Manna was quite mysterious too. It could be baked, boiled or eaten raw. While it could be boiled or baked in a cooking process, it melted away in the heat of the sun if not cooked or used. It was obviously a miraculous provision from God, not a natural occurrence.

Each day God provided for Israel. In addition to Manna he also provided them with sufficient meat and water. He even fixed their clothing so that it would not wear out or need replacing. They wore the same clothes for 40 years. Without a doubt, every new day they saw was a blessing. Most of the people counted on God daily for renewed blessings.

Responding to Blessed Opportunities

Today we share a similitude with Israel. Like Israel we are pilgrims in the wilderness of life. Many of us have moved out of personal Egypts which once held us in bondage. We are free from drugs, alcohol and a variety of other amoral habits, but yet we yearn occasionally for a return, if only a brief one, to Egypt. We complain to God constantly about what is not available to us and he has answered us in a variety of ways with "bread from heaven." Every day he provides us with sufficient opportunities for food, clothing, and shelter. Studying how God responded to Israel reveals the following truths:

WHETHER A DOLLAR OR DIME, BLESSING COME ONE DAY AT A TIME: God provided for Israel according to his time schedule. He could have provided them with large reserves of food and water, but in the meantime they would have forgotten about him. So, he chose to provide their blessings, one day at a time. In the morning he provided them Manna. In the evening he provided fresh quail meat every day without fail. On the Sabbath he gave them enough to sustain them for two days. Every day God provided their needs. Every day Israel constantly remembered that God was the source of their blessing. Today, believers should look at Israel and remember how God works. He provides exactly what every believer needs, one day at a time. There is a storehouse, but it is not on earth. He maintains the warehouse that stores our blessings and delivers them on a daily schedule. Each day when we rise, it shouldn't take us long to recognize that God is blessing us. In addition, each day God makes limited opportunities available to us. These opportunities, issued one day at a time, lead us to open doors where even greater opportunities lie. Each day, believers live and walk by faith. Whether the blessing we receive each day is a dollar or a dime....they still come, one day at a time.

WITHOUT TOIL BLESSINGS SPOIL: Each day God blessed Israel with a sufficient supply of nourishment for that day. However, there was a measure of commitment necessary from each believer. God delivered the blessing, but it was their responsibility to go out and bring it in. Exodus 16:21 says, "and they gathered it every morning, every man according to his eating: and when the sun waxed hot, it melted." If by midday they had not acted on the blessing, the Manna melted away. In the same sense, God blesses us with special opportunities and blessings. However, we must toil or they will spoil. A job opportunity remains available for only a short time. If unanswered it melts like Manna in the sun. A business opportunity, chance for advancement or personal improvement is never permanently available, but only for a short time. We either act on the blessing opportunity or lose it. Without a little toil, blessings spoil. The opportunity to learn is showered on every student daily, but without toil the blessing spoils. The opportunity to work is often showered upon us, but we must diligently apply ourselves to find and maintain employment. Without toil, blessings spoil. Truly God blessed Israel every day with sufficient supplies for their needs, but they had to act upon the blessings or they would melt away!

SATISFY YOUR NEED NOT YOUR GREED: Israel had the opportunity to gather what was needed for every household. Each household member could gather up to 3/4 gallon of Manna, according to each person's eating habits. Moses warned each family, not to gather more than it could eat because it would spoil. Some gathered more than they needed anyway. In verse 20 we read, " Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and stank: and Moses was wroth with them." Even today there are many who are overworking themselves to gather more than they need, only to watch their efforts deteriorate. Many families are paying a high price for luxuries they are seeking to acquire above their basic needs. How many marriages, relationships with children and personal health conditions have bred worms and begun to stink as a result of family partners that choose to give up quality family time in pursuit of gathering more manna? We must remember that cell phones, cable vision, Big Screen T-V's, fishing boats, internet access, new vehicles, manicured finger nails and a plethora of other excesses are, in many cases, more luxuries than needs. Yet in pursuit of these luxuries many husbands have become strangers to their wives. Children have been cut off from their parents and too many family relationships have begun to bred worms. Some believers have even truncated their spiritual lives in the quest to gather more manna than needed. Some are frequently absent for worship, bible study and other spirit based activities, leaving themselves vulnerable to spiritual decay. While God makes opportunities and blessings available to us we should gather enough to satisfy our needs not our greed. Anything else we gather will be void.

When you get what you need, be pleased!

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember this truth, "After you get what you need, be pleased!"

Many in Israel complained even after they had received what they needed. They said, all God has given us is this "bread from heaven" and this quail meat. They received but were not pleased and continued to grumble.

Our attitude should not be like Israel's. We should remember that 1 Thessalonians 5:18 says, "In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."

God still sends a little bread from heaven and our attitude should be receive and be pleased!

If God gives you a car, but it was not a Lexus, then drive your little Volkswagen all over town and say "Thank you Lord!"

If God gives you a house, but it is not a mansion, then walk through your little house and say thank you Lord for Living room! Thank you Lord for the bed room! Thank you Lord for the Closets!

If God gives you food but its not Filet Mignon, then praise the Lord for the mustard greens, rice and gravy, corn bread and friend chicken!

Whatever bread you get from heaven...receive and be pleased!

While God provided manna for Israel, to meet their PHYSICAL NEEDS, there is another bread from heaven that satisfies our SPIRITUAL NEEDS.

God fed manna to Israel to feed the OUTWARD MAN but there is another "bread from heaven" feeds the INWARD MAN.

In the wilderness, Manna was eaten by all the Israelites and some were WICKED, but NONE BUT THE RIGHTEOUS can partake of the "bread from heaven."

In wilderness, manna could SPOIL, but there is another bread from heaven that is always as FRESH today as it was yesterday.

In the desert Manna could only be found on CERTAIN DAYS of the week at certain times a week. But there is another bread from heaven that can always be found, ANYTIME you need him.

In the wilderness, many who ate manna for years EVENTUALLY DIED, but those who eat of the new bread from heaven shall LIVE THROUGHOUT ETERNITY.

Who is this bread of heaven?

John 6:35 answers this question because Jesus said, "I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst."

No wonder the song writer declared, "Bread of heaven, Bread of Heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

This bread is Jesus, the son of God!

This bread died for the remission of our sins!

But Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave all power in his hands!

Bread of Heaven!

Feed me!

...Till I want no more!

Keeping Cool When It Gets Really Hot!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 3, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego: therefore he spake, and commanded that they should heat the furnace one seven times more than it was wont to be heated."; "Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king. Daniel 3:19,24-24

Introduction

Have you ever been in a hot situation? Hot situations are those times when you face danger of a traumatic loss of life, liberty or the pursuit of those experiences that make life happy. Generally, hot situations occur whenever you are forced to make choices that will drastically impact the quality of your life or that of someone close to you. Sometimes we create hot situations. However, many hot situations are not of our own choosing. Hot situations are the testing ground upon which we discover the extent of our professed faith. There are many who have professed a faith in God which simply withers like an ice cube in the sun, at the first sign of difficulty.

If nothing else, hot situations can bring out the best or worse in us. Consider the new pastor who wanted to improve the spiritual life of his congregation. The young pastor was tall and especially attractive since he was an obviously good looking man. One week the pastor posted notices in the church bulletin and in the church lobby, "Anyone who is dealing with a hot situation can talk to the pastor about it after services any Sunday." For several weeks there was a steady stream of members who came to the pastor's office to talk about hot situations. The pastor listened attentively and appeared to give sound advice despite his young age. Families facing legal troubles. Youth unsure of themselves. Men who faced business and career failures. The pastor dealt with them all. Then one Sunday a young woman walked into his office. The church secretary, who happened to be the pastor's wife, listened in on the intercom. She was extremely attractive, dressed to accentuate her sexuality and spoke in a soft Marilyn Monroe whisper. "I have a problem." She told the young pastor. "It seems that I can't keep my eyes off young, tall, attractive pastors." At that, the pastor broke out in a sweat." The woman placed her hand on the pastor's hand and said. "I just can't keep my hands to myself when I see good-looking men of God." At that a voice announced over the intercom and announced, "Pastor, there is a fireman in the next room!" The pastor dashed to the next room and asked his wife, "Where's the fire?" She said, "It's sitting across the desk from you. Either you put HER out or I'll come in there and put IT out!" --He was in a situation that was getting hotter by the minute!

Is it possible that some of our hot situations are meant to test us? Job faced a number of hot situations only to learn that God was testing the strength of his faithful. Abraham, atop of a mountain faced a hot situation, only to learn that God provides for his children, all of the time.

As believers, we have come to know that regardless of our circumstance that God will provide for us. Our situations may seem difficult and hot. We are able to remain cool because we know that no matter how hot it gets, God remains able to deal with hot situations!

Expositions

This text focuses on three believers who were delivered from a hot situation because they chose to obey God rather than man.

The King of Babylon conquered all of the region of Judah and carried most of its craftsmen, scholars and thinkers back to Babylon. He began a three year program to repatriate these Jews so that they would accept the Chaldean customs. Among the three, were four men, commonly known as Daniel, Meshack, Shadrack and Abednego. The four were adamant believers in God's kingdom. They prayed regularly and even refused the king's efforts to reeducate them to the Chaldean political viewpoint and life-style. Daniel interpreted a dream for the King. In so doing Daniel was given the opportunity to serve as a prime minister or leader of governors in the land. It was a position that he refused. However, he recommended similar positions for the three young men who were with him.

As foreigners and powerful political leaders in the land, the three young men and even Daniel himself were often the subject of efforts to oust them from power. One such move came when the King erected a statue of himself and sent out a decree that said when certain music was played that everyone should bow and worship his image. Those who refused to do so would be punished by being cast into a fiery furnace the same day. The king's Chaldean advisors made certain that the resistance of the three was noted. The Chaldeans, who denounced Daniel and his associates to the king, were astrologers who wanted to predict a happier future for the king and his realm.

When the music played, as expected, three of the nation's highest governmental officers refused to bow. The king addressed them by asking whether they understood the order and the punishment for those who defied the order. They acknowledged that they understood, but they still refused to obey the order.

The King ordered that the furnace be prepared, but this time that it should be prepared seven times hotter than it had been on other days. The three young men were thrown into the furnace but were not burned by the fire. There was no smell of smoke or fire on their clothes as well. As the people waited for them to scream, there was silence. Instead, the king look in and called out to them. He then noticed an astonishing revelation. Instead of three men in the fire, he saw four. The four one, he said, looked like the Song of God.

The King was so impressed that he passed another decree, placing sanctions against anyone who even spoke against the God of Meshack, Shadrack and Abednego.

Faith is not intimidated by fire

Those who choose to live the Christian life-style and adhere to its moral code can expect to face the fire. In the days of this text, religious persecution was a common occurrence. Today it is not politically correct to persecute individuals because of their respective religious beliefs, but it happens daily. Millions of believers have lost opportunities for promotion because they chose to stand for truth rather than fall in the trap of ungodliness. While some have missed promotions and other advancement opportunities, some have actually been threatened with the fire! The company "whistle blower" is the person who risks everything to do the right thing.

Those who have a strong and abiding faith in God are not intimidated by the fire. Nebuchadnezzar, pointed to the kilns as a ,reminder to anyone who chose to breach his order or defy his commands in any way. Our society has a way of pointing to its fires too intimidate the faithful Faith stands firm even though your fraternity or sorority may blackball you!

Faith stands firm though your political career may be jeopardized!

Faith stands firm though you're your financial future may be threatened!

No matter how hot the fire, believers are not intimidated by the heat. The word of God rings in their ears, "We ought to obey God rather than men."

Faith is not diminished by fire

Hearing the threat of fire is one thing, but seeing the flames is another. Nebuchadnezzar ordered that the intensity of the fire for the Hebrew Boys be seven times hotter than normal. Normal was enough to destroy them completely! Ordering the fire to be seven times hotter while they were waiting was probably designed to diminish their faith and make them squirm in the face of a sure and certain death.

How often it is that believers, faced with the fire, are taunted because of its heat and intensity. Job's friends saw him going through his "fiery furnace" experience and questioned why he would remain faithful to God in light of his loss of finance, health and the life of so many loved ones. Job's response should be typical of that of every believer, "yea thou he slay me, yet will I trust him!"

We should expect trials by fire. 1 Corinthians 3:13 says, “Every man’s work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man’s work of what sort it is.”

Believers who experience death in their families, sicknesses, tragedies, financial failures and other woes should see themselves as standing before the fiery furnace. Though its flames lick out toward them, even the intensity of its heat should not diminish our faith in God. Neither should it cause us to forget that “all things” work to our good, even fiery furnaces. In the midst of our fires, God is able to deliver us!

Faith Proven in the fire is rewarded

Believers who survive the fire are stronger, more intense in their beliefs and are rewarded in ways that only God can know!

The Hebrew Boys held high positions in the kingdom. As a result of their fiery furnace experience they were elevated to even higher positions. The king promoted them. The same king who condemned them, praised them and lavished adulation upon them. They were rewarded after the fire.

These men were typical of today’s faithful believer who faces difficult experiences. Those who come through as pure gold are rewarded. There are many believers at this very moment who are plunged in the midst of the fire. By all standards, you should have been destroyed financially, but you are still standing! Considering the sicknesses that you or members of your family have endured, you should have given up the ghost, but you are still here! Considering how you have been plunged through an endless stream of setbacks and disappointments, you should have thrown up your hands in defeat, yet you are still praising God!

This promise of reward applies to all believers, not just the Hebrew Boys. Revelation 2:26 says, “And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations,” But Revelation 21:7 goes even further, “He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.”

Fourth Man In Every Fire

Finally, brothers and sisters we must remember that there is a fourth man in every fire!

The witness of the Hebrew Boys was powerful. It gave God a chance to work in full view of those who doubted him. Nebuchadnezzar proclaimed that there was no god that could take the Hebrew Boys out of his hand. He pronounced himself almost invincible! Yet, when he threw the Hebrew Boys in the fire, he said, “ Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.”

They were bound and thrown into the fire, unable to move, yet he saw them loosed!

To be loosed is to be set free of anything that binds us or holds us down! The king looked in the fire and saw them loose!

Today, the critics of believers are scratching their heads in amazement!

How is it, that with all of the burdens they shoulder, they are still walking around..loosed!

How is it, that with all of the troubles in their family, they still walk with their head up high...loosed?

How is it that despite of their sicknesses and family tragedies they still keep a smile on their faces and walk around ...loosed!

I know their hands were tied but they are loosed!

I know their feet were tied, but they are loosed!

The Saint's have a secret to surviving spiritual fires; We keep our lives located close to the fire station! When a fire breaks out, we need a fire fighter!

The fire fighter knows the nature of the fire. He sees the blaze but keeps an eye out for the back draft!

Consider the little boy who was trapped in a burning building. Fire fighters searched for him but could not find him. Just before the building began to collapse, the little boy appeared on a fire escape and began to make his way down. Asked afterwards how he made it to the fire escape the little boy gave thanks to the fire fighter. They asked the boy to point out the fire fighter who saved his life but the boy could not find him in the group. The boy said, "He's not here. The man who saved me had hair like lamb's wool. He had feet like brazen brass! He was dressed in a long white robe! He picked me up and said everything is going to be all right!"

I don't know about you, but when I get into the thick of the fire, I want somebody that knows how to put out the fire!

He's name is Jesus! The lily of the valley!

Jesus, the bright and morning star!

He died out on Calvary; but Early Sunday morning arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

His name is Jesus! He'll be with you in the middle the fire!

Faith for The Lion's Den

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 10, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt. Then was the king exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he believed in his God." Daniel 6:22-23

Introduction

Have you ever noticed that Godly seniors always seem to remain calm although the world around them panics? It is an inspiration to study the life of Godly men and women who have weathered the storms of life and continue to do so with a grace and style that is enviable. Godly grandparents are great examples of grace despite the pressures of life. They seem to sail through life without worrying much or suffering bouts of depression or fear. They have survived a multiplicity of difficult times, overcome storms, droughts and disasters. They have seen God act in so many positive ways that seem unmoved by any new storm that life brings.

Godly Grandparents and those who have acted as grandparents, are unique. They are living examples of faith in action. Character studies of these men and women, if written, would reveal lives that are rooted in faith that God will make a way. Since 1978, the nation has paused to salute grandparent figures for their example and contribution to the development of family life in America.

Erma Bombeck, an American humorist and columnist died in 1996. Before her death she wrote the following about grandparents, "What is a grandparent? They can always be counted upon to buy anything you're selling ... from all-purpose greeting cards to peanut brittle ... from flower seeds to cookies ... from transparent tape to ten chances on a pony.

A grandparent buys you gifts your mother says you don't need.

A grandparent pretends he doesn't know who you are on Halloween.

A grandparent will put a sweater on you when she is cold, feed you when she is hungry and put you to bed when she is tired.

A grandparent will check to see if you are crying when you are sound asleep.

A grandparent is the only baby-sitter who doesn't charge money to keep you.

A grandparent will believe you can read when you have the book upside down.

Perhaps the saddest words in all the world are, "I never knew my grandparents."

Even better than simply knowing grandparents, is knowing God fearing grandparents! God fearing grandparents seem to believe that no matter how bad things get "God will work it out!" Sometimes grandparents seem a little out of touch as they dismiss any crises with the words, "I just put that in the hands of the Lord!" They seem distant, but yet are so close because the trust God to resolve every difficulty of life. No matter how the winds blow! No matter how the lions roar, the godly grandparent has learned, and teaches us by example, that ..God is still in control.

As Christians, we have come to learn that faith in God is a character trait that is intrinsic to our nature as believers. In difficult times, our faith is evidenced. Over the years our faith is disciplined. Our mature mentors give us evidence of faith in action. It is a faith that has been tempered by time and remains untouched by the volatility of our times.

Exposition

This text focuses on Daniel, a senior mentor of his time, as God delivers him from the Den of Lions in response to his faith.

Many years passed between the close of chapter three and the beginning of chapter six. In Chapter three Daniel and the three Hebrew Boys were young men. The King was a Babylonian who came to know the power of God by the witness of the three Hebrew Boys. Nebuchadnezzer is now off the scene. Even his descendant, Belshazzar is history. He was the one who saw the had writing on the wall, announcing his kingdom's destruction. When this text begins, most of the major Babylonian characters familiar to the Fiery furnace or Handwriting on the wall experience have come and gone. Who remains is Daniel, who survived it all and even in his senior years remains unmoved in his commitment to follow God and be obedient to him.

The king at the time of this writing is Darius, who heads up the leading world power of the day. Darius was a great political strategist, organizer and leader. Since Medio-Persia ruled the known world at the time, he divided the empire into 120 provinces called "Statraps". The 120 Statraps each had a governor and were organized into three commissions which were administered by one of three commissioners. Daniel was one of the three commissioners.

Daniel's skills and talents were recognized by every King that came on the throne: Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, and Darius, all found him to be a great asset in the administration and organization of the kingdom. Despite the fact that he was a foreigner, no one even considered moving him because he helped them accomplish their administrative goals.

Daniel began his service as a teenager. Now he is around eighty years old. For nearly 70 years Daniel helped governments succeed. In the course of that time he did everything he could to cooperate, except when cooperation meant going against God. He was unmoved by threats of political reprisal, loss of his job or position or death. He simply did his job well and counted on God.

The attitude of peace that Daniel achieved was accomplished, in part, by his habit of talking to God three times a day. Every day, seven days a week, he paused in his day for prayer, reflection and meditation. Every day, three times a day, he would open a window and face Jerusalem and tell God, himself that he would never forget from whence he came and where he planned to go. Three times a day, he reminded himself and God that he was a stranger in a foreign land, surrounded by changing times,and changing gods. Everyday, he reminded himself that his strength came from his obedience to God that helped over the years.

Certain ones among the king's advisors wanted Daniel removed from his position. The exact reason is not specified. Daniel had survived past attempts that were aimed at his ethnic background. Now, for certain, age was also a factor. In addition, Daniel was being considered for a promotion to prime minister which would place him as the most powerful political leader in the kingdom, short of the king himself. However, there was no flaw in his work and he seemed destined to live much longer than anyone suspected. A plan was developed was designed to entrap Daniel. The advisors, pushed the king to make a decree making it illegal for anyone to pray to any god or man, besides the king, for 30 days, under penalty of death. Daniel's detractors, having recognized his habit of praying three times a day, knew he would not alter his lifestyle to fit the new law and would be removed from his position.

Daniel was aware of the decree. When he heard of it he went to his chamber (v10) and began to pray as usual, ignoring the decree. His detractors quickly pointed out to the king that Daniel defied his order and must be killed because the king's decrees are irreversible.

The king was upset when he discovered that his actions meant the death of a trusted aide whose only fault was that he was of another race and was a senior citizen as well. Public opinion would not allow him change the decree. Despite his reluctance, Daniel was thrown into a Den of Lion's, where he was expected to be instantly killed. In the morning the king inquired about Daniel and was gladly surprised to hear Daniel answer him that, "My God sent his angels to shut the Lion's mouths." Daniel was removed from the den and his detractors and their families were thrown into the den in his place. They were consumed by the hungry lions.

The salient qualities that accentuate Daniel's character is that for 70 years he loyally did his work well. He was able to do that work because, for 70 years he maintained a strong faith building relationship with God that helped him remain fearless, even though the Lion's of life roared.

Faith for the Lion's Den Was Developed Way Back When...

Today, there are many senior mentors that demonstrate faith, despite the pressures of life. However, the faith for their experience was not developed instantly, but over a course of years. Daniel had faith for the lion's den, but it was a faith that began when he was a teenager and practiced at every stage of his life.

Every believer has had a senior mentor of sorts. Small children focus on certain teenagers as their senior mentors. Teens focus on young adults as the senior mentors. Young adults see maturing adults as their senior mentors. Maturing adults see the mature as their senior mentors and mature adults remember the words and deeds of the mature adults before them as their guide.

At age 80, Daniel's faith had reached a level of maturity in which he was unmoved by anything that happened around him. Today, there are senior mentors among us that share a similar resolve. They have seen wars, depressions, several presidents, good times and bad times. They have seen droughts, floods, hot summers and cold winters. In all that they have seen, they have learned that God is still under control. That's why David, reflecting would write, "I have been young, and now am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed, begging for bread."

Fearless Faith is an outgrowth of Flawless Service

Daniel was demonstrated faith in the face of the lion's den because of his flawless service to both God and man.

Over 70 years, Daniel was able to grow in his secular life because his secular service to the king and his spiritual devotion to God. He never worried about threats to move him from his job, because of his service. He never worried about threats on his life, because of his devotion to God.

Today, this quality of faith under pressure is one of the admirable treats of our senior mentors. They seem unmoved by the circumstances. They have tremendous faith and have mystified others at their ability to out last supervisors, owners and company mergers. Many have worked at their companies longer than their supervisors. Most are unmoved when they hear of possible layoff or cuts. It's not stupidity on their part...it's confidence and faith. That faith is based on two things, just as Daniel's case. It is based on a record of flawless service and loyalty to the employer, and a flawless devotion to God.

Flawless service is what made Daniel inexpendable. No king even considered trying to operate without him. He was loyal and flawless in his occupation and profession. In respect to God, he was also flawless. He prayed daily and remained faithful to the values important to his spiritual development.

You Can't Fight Lion's With A Switch

Finally, we learn from Daniel another great truth, we can't fight lions with a switch.

President Theodore Roosevelt was famous for his adage that America should "Speak soft and carry a big stick!" With that in mind, he suggested that the nation should build a strong enough military that would keep anyone from trying to attack us.

In life, we have found that when the Lion's come to roar, whatever weapons we attempt to use to defend ourselves are but mere switches. Our education, training, intellect, skills are insignificant against the lions of life. They are little switches that cannot ward off the devil.

But we do serve a God who speaks soft and carries a big stick!

When we face the lions den of life, we need more than a switch, we need God on our side!

Can't you see Daniel's enemies smiling as he is carried to the Lion's den?

Can't you see Daniel's critics rejoicing as the lions begin to roar?

I'm so glad that we serve a God who knows how to fight lions!

He's a God that's so powerful that he can lift our heaviest burden!

He's a God that's so sensitive that he can hear our slightest prayer!

He's a God that's so forgiving that he can take our worse mistake and replace it with forgiveness!

He's a God who can take our lost opportunities and give us another chance!

He' a God that can silence the roars of our enemies and protect us through dangers of night!

When King Darius came to the den he asked the Daniel a question, "Was your God able to deliver you?"

That question is being asked of believers everyday!

Was God able to deliver you when you down to your last dime?

Was God able to raise up your head when you were overwhelmed with grief?

Was God able to heal you when you were struggling with sickness and pain?

Was God able to promote you when others tried to keep you down?

Our answer today is the same as it was yesterday, Our God is able!

He's able to take my weaknesses and turn them into strength!

He's able to take my doubts and turn them into confidence!

He's able to take my defeats and turn them into victories!

He's able to take my short comings and turn them into long opportunities!

He's able to take my ship wrecked life and plant my feet on solid ground!

He' able because 2000 years ago, he died out on Calvary!

He's able because, Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead!

He's able...

He's able...

He's able!

Faith for the Fight

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 17, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "And what shall I more say? For the time would fail me to tell of Gideon, and of Barak, and of Samson and of Jephthae, of David also, and Sameul, and of the prophets. Who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of aliens." Hebrews 11:32-34

Introduction

Have you ever faced a formidable challenge only to find yourself a bit nervous? We often face challenges that require us to rely upon every ounce of faith at our command. Somehow, we never seem to have the same level of faith as others. They seem so confident, while we seem unsure of ourselves. The challenges we face everyday are real. They are awesome, but they are not invincible. They can be overcome. If we are nervous, it is because we focus on all the things that can go wrong. We ponder our possible failure instead of bathing in the prospect of success. Those who are prepared for the challenge stand boldly, without fear of failure. They are confident that God is able to deliver them in any challenge.

It is easy to believe that others have more faith than ourselves. Somehow, we believe that the preacher, because he stands in a certain spot on Sunday; or the deacon because he sits on a front seat; or the usher because she wears a uniform, possesses more faith than others. We believe others have greater dispensations of faith than ourselves because they look confident. They look sure. The basis of that confidence is faith.

Sometimes we think of ourselves as faithless when compared to others, only to learn they are as weak as we are. Consider the man who had cheated on his wife but had reconciled with her. It bothered him so much that she was so faithful and he was a cheat. One night, he dreamed he and two of his friends had arrived in heaven. Before he was admitted, a big book was opened and he heard the question, "Have you ever cheated on your wife?" The man answered, "Yes I have, but it was only once and we have reconciled." Because he only cheated once and it was forgiven he was allowed into heaven and given the keys to a gold Rolls Royce to drive around. His friend was asked the same question, but he answered, "I have cheated two or three times, but my wife and I have straightened things out. All is forgiven." Because it was only two or three times and he was forgiven, the friend was given the keys to a Chevrolet to drive through heaven. The other friend was asked the same question, "Have you ever cheated on your wife?" He answered that he had many affairs and chased every skirt he saw, until he repented. Because he cheated so much he was given the keys to a small Volkswagen Bug. Several days later the friends saw their buddy sitting by his Rolls Royce crying. They wanted to know what could be so bad? "You're in heaven, you're driving a Rolls Royce, what could be so bad?" The man answered, "I cheated one time and they gave me Rolls Royce. You cheated two times and they gave you a Chevrolet. You cheated many times and they gave you a Volkswagen Bug. Well, I saw my loving faithful wife the other day...she was riding a skateboard!" -Those we think are faithful may not be as faithful as we think.

Among the great characters of the bible is Samson, an extraordinary man, who was able to do great things when he exercised his faith. Often he did not use it as he should. He was not always faithful to his vows to God, but in the end he relied on his faith to defeat his enemies. Samson was similar to most of us. We don't have great faith and often are not as faithful as we should. When we act in faith and keep the faith, we have found that God always gives what we need.

As Christians, we revel in the fact that God empowers us to do mighty works in his name. We rejoice in the knowledge that he uses our lives to build his kingdom. Thus, we face each day's challenge with confidence that God will deliver his own. Every day God gives us...faith for the fight.

Exposition

This text focuses on men of great faith that the Lord used to do great works.

The writer of Hebrews focused on the nature of faith in the 11th chapter. Beginning at the very first verse he defines faith as the "substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

Many biblical heroes of the Old Testament are referenced as he explains the nature of faith and how it works. Verse 32 however, lists Samson as an example of faith. This is unique because Samson is not usually referred to as a man of great faith and godliness, but rather one of great strength. While Samson exercised faith in his last days, most of his life was spent at odds with his people and his faith.

At best, Samson's faith was an example of the ordinary man because he was an ordinary man who was able to do extraordinary things with God' help.

Samson was a Nazirite. Nazirites were individuals whose lives were consecrated to God. They neither drank strong drink, touched unclean things, or cut their hair. Their abstentions symbolized their vows to God. Individuals became Nazirites in one of two ways. First, their parents made vows to God about how a certain son would be raised. His nurture would reflect the vow made by his parents to God. While the parents made the vow, it was not a certainty that the life planned for the son would be actually lived. Hannah pledged that her son Samuel would be a Nazirite. He lived out his mother's vow. Samson's parents vowed that he would also be a Nazirite, despite their best efforts, he did not live up to the ideal. Secondly, a person can take the Nazirite's vow himself. In the New Testament, Paul took the Nazirite's vow for a short time (Acts 18; Acts 21:21-26) It was voluntary on his part and not a life long commitment as is the case when a parent makes the vow.

Samson, while being pledged to the life of faith by virtue of his vow, violated most of its components. He had a fascination for foreign women, considered unclean by Jewish standards, often drank wine, and was seen as a man of the world by his peers. Yet, in all of his worldliness, Samson still had a small element of faith and faithfulness to God. This single strain of faith is symbolized by his refusal to cut his hair, a condition of the Nazirite's vow.

Despite his worldliness, God stirred within Samson on numerous occasions and he was able to perform great physical feats. Removing the gates of Gaza, slaying a lion with his bare hands, and slaying a thousand Philistines with the jawbone of an ass are but small examples of the power Samson displayed when he allowed God's spirit to move within him. He was an ordinary man, with ordinary faith, who often proved unfaithful. Whenever he used his faith, God helped this ordinary man to do extraordinary things.

Samson's demise was tied to his worldliness. A beautiful Philistine woman tricked him into violating the final covenant he had with God. He had literally divorced himself from his people and become a virtual resident of Phlistia. When Delilah cut his hair it was the concluding act of a process that had begun in Samson many years earlier. He arose with his hair and his power cut off. He became as any other man. He lost the faith for a while and lost his power as well.

The Common Man's Faith

Today, there are millions who are like Samson. There are millions of common people. There are also millions of common believers, many of whom, like Samson, have abandoned much of what they have been taught about God, faith and religion as children. Like Samson, we still have a small portion of what we were taught and on occasion can still perform extra-ordinary feats of skill, wisdom or intellect.

There are many today whose parents and grandparents made pledges to God concerning the nurture of the children and grandchildren. They promised God that they would raise their children in the fear and respect of all things godly. As a result, we raised to read the bible, say our prayers at night, attend Sunday School and worship, obey laws, respect elders and live clean, morally pure lives. During our life's course, like Samson, we abandoned some of the things we were taught. There are however, still a few that we cling to faithfully. Yet, even though we cling to them we constantly face the Delilah like temptations to part with that which we know to holy and special.

Many have not completely disconnected themselves from God. They maintain a semblance of holiness that allows them to keep the aurora of spirituality, despite our increasing worldliness. On occasion God's spirit moves in us and we are inspired, empowered and otherwise motivated to do extraordinary things despite being plain mortals with no powers of our own. Even while God works through us, our spirituality declines as our flirtations with world increase.

When we suffer the Samson syndrome, we walk the fine line that separates our godliness from our worldliness. Because we are able to continue doing extraordinary works, even though we have spiritually digressed, we are deceived into even more digressions; which, in the end, will prove to be our destruction.

In such instances, faith is exhibited in minuscule amounts. We do great works, but not in the proportion to what we could do if we were spiritually closer to God.

Extra Ordinary Capacity

In that Samson was an ordinary man, it should have been obvious to all around him that his strength was not in his physical statue. Samson himself knew the source of his power and prayed to God for the power to do extra-ordinary things.

Each of us has the capacity to do extra-ordinary things, with God's help. There is nothing that we cannot achieve with God. There is no obstacle that is too difficult for us to overcome, with God's help. We have the capacity to do the extra-ordinary, despite being ordinary people.

What gives us this capacity is our faith in God. Through faith in God we march in the terrains that have not been traveled before. We try the impossible. We challenge the invincible. We tackle the unbeatable foe. Our boldness is grounded in our belief that if we abide in Christ and he abides in us that we can accomplish anything that is in his will for us.

This faith must be nurtured through worship, prayer, bible study, Christian fellowship and moral living. It is also nurtured through hearing the word of God preached. That's why the word says, "Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God." Romans 10:17.

Samson did mighty works, but could have done even greater had he remained close to the faith that gave him his strength.

When God Leaves

Finally, brothers and sisters, Samson gives us a clear picture of what happens to a person when faith fails and God leaves us.

When Delilah cut the seven locks of Samson's hair she awakened him out of his sleep. He quickly jumped up thinking that he had the same capacity as before. "He wist not that God had left him." When God left him, he was alone.

It is a terrible thing when God leaves us.

When God leaves us our:

-Homelife turns into a catastrophe

-Peace and tranquility turns into turmoil

-Order and routine turns into confusion

-Safety and security turns into disaster

-Quiet days and slumbering nights turn into violent storms

-Home turns into a house
-Husband turns into an old lady
-Wife turns into an old lady!
When God leaves us, we're too weak to fight
No wonder the word says, "Seek the Lord while he can be found!"
No wonder the song writer says, "Without God, I can do nothing. Without him, I'd surely fail. Without him, my life would be drifting, like a ship without a sail."
Down in the valley of despair, with his eyes out and strength gone, Samson found, once again, the faith for the fight. He asked God for strength one more time. That's when his enemies found out that his strength was not in his hair but in God.
Our help does not come from our college degrees!
Our help does not come from technical training!
Our help does not come from our intellect or mental capacity!
Our help comes from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth!
If you want to know the source of our strength, it's in Jesus!
Jesus, Mary's baby!
Jesus, Ezekiel's wheel!
Jesus, My rock in a weary land
Jesus, My bridge over troubling water
Jesus, My doctor in a courtroom!
Jesus, Who died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning, arose from the dead!
Follow Jesus and get strength for the fight!

SCRIPTURE: "And the vessel that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter: so he made it again another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it." Jeremiah 18:4

Introduction

Have you ever met people who considered themselves perfect? The perfect person is the one who is absolutely correct on every subject, never makes a mistake, does everything right, is never late and generally lives by the book 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Most people spend their lives looking for Mr. and Miss Perfect. Single men and women have devised a checklist of everything they want in a partner, only to find that they can't seem find anyone that can meet everything on the checklist. The longer they date, the more they discover that their partner is less than perfect. It's disappointing, because we'd like to believe that someone is perfect. What about the preacher? Deacons surely must be perfect. Choir directors, ushers and church leaders are all very spiritual, shouldn't they be perfect? What about mom and dad? Aren't they perfect? Don't they know everything about everything and do everything right? One of the greatest disappointments in life is to discover that those we thought were perfect were actually human after all.

Perfection is a goal that every person pursues but often achieves. The truth of the matter is that we are seriously flawed. Unfortunately, we can't see the flaws in ourselves as well as others. It is easier for us to spot the flaws in another person than we can in ourselves. Generally, we know our own weaknesses, but we are slow to admit without justification. When we see the same tendencies in others we recognize them quickly. Often, we erroneously attribute our bad habits to others, assuming how they will think and act in a situation, because that's the way we think and act.

Who is really perfect? Ask a man and he'll tell you, men are perfect and women mess up everything. Ask a woman and she'll tell you that men are not even remotely close to perfection. A certain church had a marriage retreat designed to help couples explore sensitivities. In one session the presenter said, "There was a perfect man who met a perfect woman. After a perfect courtship, they had a perfect wedding. Their life together was, of course, perfect. One snowy, stormy Christmas Eve this perfect couple was driving along a winding road when they noticed someone at the roadside in distress. Being the perfect couple, they stopped to help. There stood Santa Claus with a huge bundle of toys. Not wanting to disappoint any children on the eve of Christmas, the perfect couple loaded Santa and his toys into their vehicle. Soon they were driving along delivering the toys. Unfortunately, the driving conditions deteriorated and the perfect couple and Santa Claus had an accident. Only one of them survived the accident without injury. Who was it?" A woman raised her hand and said. "The perfect woman?" When asked why she thought so she said, "Well everyone knows there is no Santa Claus, and there is no such thing as a perfect man." Before she should finish her answer a man raised his hand and said, "If there is no perfect man, and there is no Santa Claus, the perfect woman must have been driving the car. That explains why there was an accident in the first place!"-No one is really perfect!

The reality of the matter is that no one is perfect. Biblically, we learn in Romans 3:23, "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." That passage means that we all have defects, short comings and flaws. Nothing about us is perfect. We are a work in progress. That's what the popular song meant with its lyrics pronounce, "Please be patient with me, God is not through with me yet! When God gets through with me, I shall come forth as pure gold."

As Christians, we know that we are far from perfect. In fact, we acknowledge our imperfections to God on a daily basis. Our prayer is that God will have his way with us. We want him to shape us and mold us after his will as we overcome our imperfections and work out our soul' salvation.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jeremiah as he tells the people that God is aware of their imperfections and will tear them down and rebuild them again.

In the days of Jeremiah, Judah was a nation which had forgotten God. It reveled it its own success and depended heavily upon its military strength and political alliances for national security and prosperity. Corruption was widespread in government, morality was constantly declining, evil infected the people, and the life of the nation gradually becoming more and more hellish. Frustrated with the response of his chosen people, God told Jeremiah to deliver a message to the nation, through its leaders.

Jeremiah was told to visit the work station of a potter and to observe his operation. After watching the potter, Jeremiah would understand the nature of his message to the people. Potters were common in that time, because most of their utensils were examples of fine pottery. As potters shape and mold the clay with which they work, they exert their will and their skill over the clay . If the potter chooses, the vessel can be squashed back into a lump so that a different vessel can be made.

At the potter's house, Jeremiah saw the clay being shaped and molded into a vessel. As he watched he also saw an amazing thing, an imperfection in the clay spoiled it in the potter's hand, and the potter crumbled it up, and began anew the process of shaping it into a vessel that pleased him.

Observing the Potter, Jeremiah understood that God was the Great Potter, with absolute right over the clay to make it what he wanted it to be. Paul argues this with keen and clear logic in Romans 9: "Will what is molded say to its molder, 'Why have you made me thus?' Has the potter no right over the clay, to make out of the same lump one vessel for beauty and another for menial use?" Of course he has.

So Jeremiah, watching, learned that an individual or a nation is clay in the Great Potter's hands. He has a sovereign right to make it what he wants it to be. And if there is some imperfection in the clay, something which mars the design, spoils the work, the potter simply crushes the clay down to a lump and begins again to make it a vessel according to his own mind.

Jeremiah saw the wheel turning constantly, bringing the clay against the potter's hand. That wheel stands for the turning circumstances of our lives, under the control of the Potter, for it is the potter's foot that guides the wheel. The lesson is clear. As our life is being shaped and molded by the Great Potter, it is the circumstances of our life, the wheels of circumstance, what Browning called "this dance of plastic circumstance," which bring us again and again under the potter's hand, and molding finger that shapes the vessel according to his will.

Defects In the Product

We are familiar with product defects and product recalls. We have witnessed defects that have been caused by a variety of sources.

We vividly remember the defects in the Product Tyelenol which resulted from someone tampering with the original packaging and injecting poison that killed many people.

We have seen recalls of baby cribs, children's toys, food items and even recently automobile tires when a defect in the original design resulted in the loss of life.

We have been tremendously disturbed to learn that the cigarette industry has designed its product with a defect intended to addict its users for the purpose of profits.

Generally, when products have a defect they are recalled voluntarily by the manufacturer or by government mandate. The purpose of the recall is to remake the product so that it can be used without the loss of life or the threat of injury by consumers.

Man Made Perfectly/Satan Corrupted Him

Mankind was made without a defect. When God created the world and mankind, he looked at all that he had made and said, "That's good." God's original creation was perfect, which is reflected in Psalm 139:13-14, "For you created my inmost being; you knit me together in my mother's womb. I praise you because I am fearfully and wonderfully made; your works are wonderful, I know that full well." In the garden, Satan tampered with the product and each succeeding generation has been born with a defect, called sin.

In each life, God wants to begin the process of rebuilding the perfect man or woman. Just as a potter spins the wheel upon which the clay sits, God spins the wheel of our fortunes and molds us in his hands. He controls every aspect of our lives and can determine the outcome. On occasion, he sees flaws in us that are so ugly, troublesome and burdensome, that he has not choice but to crumble us and reshape us again.

The potter not only spins the wheel of our lives, he has a passion for shaping clay. He loves the putty so that with his loving touch the clay responds to the touch so that the putty/clay comes out in the most beautiful design that could be.. He remakes the putty in the image that he desires.

He made us without anger, but Satan tampered with our package. The potter may find it necessary to tear us down to remove that spirit of anger!

He made us without hatred, but Satan tampered with our package. It may be necessary to completely reshape us to remove our hatred.

He made us without fear, jealousy, bad spirits and evil tendencies. These flaws are often the reason that the potter finds it necessary to break us down..so he can build us up!

We are the Clay

Our destines are in God's hands. It often explains why things happen the way they do. It could very well be that God is turning us on the wheel of circumstance, shaping and molding as he turns us to get us to be exactly what he wants us to be!

Clay that is watered is easier to shape. Very few potters attempt to shape, hard, dry clay, even if it hasn't been fired. The clay has to be wet. The water of our spirituality is the presence of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit makes us soft and moldable in the hands of the master Potter the living God. The Spirit of the Lord make us soft and responsive to his touch. It is then that we yield ourselves to him and say, "Have thine on way Lord!"

The dry individual is the one who does not listen to the Word of God, ignores worship, is skeptical of the value of bible study and completely rejects the things of God. Dry clay leaves God but one choice, to break it down and destroy. Because there is no spirit, once broken is rarely remolded again.

We are but clay in the master's hand. Let beg him to mold us and shape into his will.

God Has Issued A Recall

Finally, brothers and sisters, we want to remind you that while Satan has tampered with our packaging, God has issued a recall for imperfect lives.

When a company announces a recall, anyone who has a defected product can find the nearest dealer and get a repair, replacement or an upgrade.

Today, brothers and sisters, God has issued at recall announcement to any person that will allow him to come into his life, saying, “Behold, I stand at the door and knock!”

Do you have a life that isn’t perfect?

Do you seem to turn on the wheel of circumstance?

There is a recall announcement for those who are spiritually lost.

When Tylenol was damaged, it issued a recall and then produced a tamper resistant package. It is not tamper proof, but it will let you know when something is wrong.

God wants to take our shattered lives, and give us tamper resistant packages. It won’t stop the devil from messing with us, but the Holy Spirit will let you know when something is wrong!

Somebody wants to know why? Why am I having such difficulty? It’s because Satan is tampering with your package!

Why is my husband acting the way he’s acting? It’s because Satan is tampering with your package?

Why is my wife acting the way she does? It’s because, Satan is tapering with the package!

God is issuing a recall for imperfect lives!

He wants us to have tamper resistent packages, secured by grace and sustained by the Holy Ghost!

The recall notice is from a God who specializes in restoring broken lives.

The recall notice is not from Firestone, or Tyelenol or from the federal government; its from a man named Jesus!

He died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning he arose with all power in his hand? Are you suffering with a heavy burden of imperfection?

Take you burdens to the Lord and leave it there!

SCRIPTURE: For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not. For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do. Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me. Romans 7:18-20

Introduction

Have you been disappointed with yourself? Most believers, while generally striving to live a positive productive life, reach a point at which they are disappointed with themselves in one respect or another. Although we are living an obviously blessed life, there is disappointment, not in a friend or co-worker that let you down, or in a situation that failed, but disappointment in ourselves. We experience self disappointment whenever we fail to do that which we think we should do in the way we should do it. Dealing with self disappointment is a private war, an internal struggle that is not seen by others but is felt by every believer, from time to time, as we measure where God what wants us to be and where we really are.

Unless we tell someone else, other than God himself, the only other person who knows about our self disappointment is the man or woman in the mirror. The man or woman in the mirror reminds us of what we promised ourselves that we will be and what are actually doing about that promise. The face that keeps changing in mirror, keeps pointing out the size of the gap between our ideals and reality, and that disappoints us.

John Ortberg, in his book "The Life You Always Wanted," describes how we often feel when he writes: "I look in on my children as they sleep at night, [and] I think of the kind of father I want to be. I want to create moments of magic, I want them to remember laughing until the tears flow ... I want to have slow, sweet talks with them as they're getting ready to close their eyes. I want to chase fireflies with them, teach them to play tennis, have food fights, and hold them and pray for them in a way that makes them feel cherished. "I look in on them," he writes, "and I remember how the day really went. I remember how they were trapped in a fight over [a game] and I walked out of the room because I didn't want to spend the energy needed to teach them how to resolve conflict. I remember how my daughter spilled cherry punch at dinner and I yelled at her as if she'd revealed some deep character flaw; I yelled at her even though I spill things all the time and no one yells at me; I yelled at her - to tell the truth - because I'm big and she's little and I can get away with it. I remember how at nights I didn't have slow, sweet talks, but merely rushed the children off to bed so I could have more time to myself."

Often we see life as a game. As such, we get caught up in its thrill and excitement, to the point that we do that which we know that we shouldn't...to win, to conquer, to emerge victorious. In the aftermath, we disappoint ourselves because we have stooped to a level of life that embarrasses us and often hurts others. Britney Spears, a popular musical artist in the youth scene, has a very popular song that has made her rich. It portrays a girl who enjoys toying with boys in a way that leads them on. She enjoys the game, without really wanting to do any harm, but realizes she does. When she breaks another heart she brushes it off by saying, "Ooops, I did it again!"

I think I did it again I made you believe, we're more than just friends
Oh baby
It might seem like a crush
But it doesn't mean that I'm serious
'Cause to lose all my defenses
That is just so..so typically me
Oops!...I did it again I played with your heart
Got lost in the game
Oops!...You think I'm in love
That I'm sent from above
I'm not that innocent.

Just like Britney Spears, most of us find ourselves trying to play off our disappointments by saying, "Oops, I did it again!"

We lied when we promised ourselves, we wouldn't lie...oops, we did it again!

We lost our temper when we promised we would be in control...oops, we did it again!

We cheated when we said we would be faithful..oops, we did it again!

We lit up another cigarette after telling ourselves that the last one was the last one...oops, we did it again!

As Christians, we struggle daily with our self disappointment. Our only redeeming grace is the knowledge that, while the God we serve is not happy with our personal failures, he is forgiving and merciful. Despite our flaws and short comings, he blesses us continually. That's why we praise him continually. Even when we said we would keep our joy to ourselves, it comes out in the wave of our hand and the praise that falls from our lips. We said we wouldn't tell anybody but...oops, we did it again!

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains the nature of the believer's life in Christ as opposed to the law.

Generally, Romans focuses upon the believer's sanctification. It is his personal struggle to perfect himself and come closer to the Godly ideal. Romans presents individual struggle from the perspective of one who is a believer. In other writings, the perspective is that of a sinner struggling against God, fighting him in every way. It is personified best in the life of Paul himself as he fought against the advancement of the church. However, wants a non-believer gives himself over to God, his battle shifts from a lift that is opposition to God's laws, to one that is struggling measure up to God's expectations as reflected in God's laws.

Non-believers reject God's laws and thus, God himself. Their fight is to do it their way, regardless of what God says. They reject him and the need to know him.

Believers accept God's laws but fight a different fight. Our fight is not against God, but against the remnants of sin within us that prompt us to act in ways that are deviant to God's laws.

Paul recognizes his fundamental agreement with the Law. He concludes that the law is good (verse 16). The law shows that the source of the problem which is the strength of sin. Nothing good indwells Paul''s flesh, but sin is present in him. Paul''s flesh is naturally opposed to God, to His Law, and to anything righteous. Paul''s flesh is responsive to sin. Paul''s flesh (his fallen nature all that he was before he came to faith in Christ) has become sin's sanctuary.

Deep within himself, Paul wishes to do that which God''s Law defines as good. The spirit man within him desires not to do that which the Law calls sin, but the carnal man rebels. His desires conform to God's Law. He is almost schizophrenic in his spiritual life. A spiritual Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde. What Paul is doing, he is doing against his own will! Paul has been taken prisoner by sin. Sin has taken advantage of the weakness of his flesh and has perverted the Law to entice men to sin, rather than to keep them from sin.

This inability to control that "sin-person" within himself constantly caused him to do that which he did not want to do, again and again, making him a wretched man indeed.

In the midst of his disappointment however, Paul found a reason for hope. In v.25 we read, "Thanks be to God through our Lord Jesus Christ!" Though disappointed he saw an opportunity for victory in Christ. While the law condemns those who measure up to death. Christ forgives those who give life their best, but yet still fail to measure up to every letter of the law.

It is best recognized in Romans 8:1 "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." It means, we may fall short of the high standard that God's law holds us to, but those who give life their best and trust God for the rest, will not be condemned in the end. It is not a license to excuse sins, but it is a reprieve that is offered to every believer by the grace of God.

For that reason, Paul said he praises God constantly and gives thanks! He has been merciful to the undeserving, which is a reason for praise.

Again and Again

Today, there are many believers who are frustrated over their inability to stay on the right path. The fact that it bothers us means that we are no longer at war with God. We accept his moral standard, we're simply angry and frustrated with ourselves.

THE LAW SHOWS WHAT WE SHOULD BE: The laws of God tell us what we should be. They set the high standard which we are to live and govern ourselves. The moral code, reflected in the 10 commandments teach us clearly that we should acknowledge God and him only, reverence our parents and live morally pure lives, void of cheating stealing, and murderous tendencies. The 10th commandment, thou shalt not covet, even deals with how we should maintain our thoughts and desires. When each of us stands before the law, we fall short. We see our errors and know immediately how miserably we have live d up to the ideal believer's life.

The law sets the standard for each of us. It is rigid and unchanging. It says live up to this standard or die. There is no room for compromise or compassion. The letter of the law must be carried out in every circumstance.

THE HOLY SPIRIT PUSHES US TO BE ALL WE CAN BE: While the Law sets a standard for each of us and says live up to it or else. The Gospel of Christ shows us the standard, and motivates us to measure up in every way that we can, with the full knowledge the in the areas that we fail, that the Grace of Jesus Christ will make up the difference. Every waking minute of the day a believer is pushed by the Holy Spirit to reach higher, remove imperfections and strive to become better.

Over and over again, we find ourselves messing up, saying, "Oops, I did it again!" That's when we feel the Holy Spirit working on us. Hebrews 12:6-8 gives this insight. "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons." The work of the gospel picks up every time we say, "ooops I did it again." It whips us and torments us until we correct ourselves. It's goal is to help us "be all that we can be." When we have done all, the grace makes up for the rest.

CHRIST SHOWS US WHAT WE WILL BE: What Christ does for every believer is to look beyond what we once were. He even looks beyond how we measure up at the present moment. He looks to what we will be. A plastic surgeon knows how to alter a disfigured image. However, he needs to have before him a picture of what the image will be. He may have to cut, graft skin from one place to another, but the end result is always in mind. So it is with believers. Christ looks beyond our faults and short comings and sees what we will be. He has the final picture in his hand and is shaping us through the Holy Spirit to go beyond being, "all that we can be" to what we will ultimately be in Christ... a completely new, regenerated and saved man or woman who is worthy to stand before God, not because of his goodness but because of the grace of God.

Oops I did it again!

Finally, brothers and sisters, Paul says God's saving grace excites him so much that he must give thanks. We know how he feels, because believers get so excited about God's grace and mercy that we have to keep praising him again and again!

When it refers to our weakness, "Ooops, I've done it again" refers to an instance in which we breached the faith.

When it refers to the carnal man of sin within us, "Ooops I've done it again" refers to an instance in which we did what we did not want to do!

But when it refers to our gratitude to God, the same words take on a different meaning. It's hard to hold your peace when we think about the grace of God.

Consider the old lady who moved in with her great grandchildren up North. They were wealthy professionals who attended a big city "quiet" church. Her grandchildren went to church regularly but they asked grandmother to remember that she wasn't down South. "Folks up here don't say Amen and stuff" like they do down South. Don't embarrass us." Every Sunday the old went to worship and tried her best to keep quiet as the name of Jesus was glorified. Her grandchildren would give her the eye and she would hold her peace. They didn't mind the funny looking red coat she wore. They didn't mind the flower that dangled from hat. If she'd just sit quiet, they'd be happy. A guest preacher from down South was in the pulpit. He started talking about the goodness of the Lord. As he talked the flower started dangling on the old lady's hat as she moved from side to side. Her heels started clicking on the floor. Before she knew it she was standing on her feet shouting, "praise the Lord." As her embarrassed grandchildren stared at her along with whole church, she put her hands on her mouth and said, "ooops, I' did it again!"

I don't know about you but there are times when we just can't keep it to ourselves, we've got to tell somebody!

All we can say is, "Ooops, I've done it again!

Tell somebody about the goodness of the Lord!

I've got to tell somebody about a savior who picked me up and turned me around!

I've got to tell somebody about a risen savior who tells me I am his own for he walks with me and talks with me!

He's name is Jesus!

He died out on Calvary!

Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!

He saved my soul! "I said I wasn't going tell nobody, but I couldn't keep it to myself!"

"Ooops, I did it again!

From Whence Comest Thou? Whither Dost Thou Go?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "For the land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs: But the land, whither ye go to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven A land which the LORD thy God careth for: the eyes of the LORD thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year." Deuteronomy 11:10-12.

Introduction

Have you ever stopped to consider just how far you have come to reach your present point in life? Each of us has traveled a long and meandering road to reach this milestone on life's journey. Our paths have brought us through a myriad of experiences that have included successes and failures. Along the way, we have witnessed many changes and have learned to take them in stride. Our joy is to know that despite the road that we have traveled that there has been one constant in life that has never changed...that is the love of God. It never changes.

We've come a long ways. The most senior among us have seen the most miles, tallest of mountains and the deepest of life's valleys. The younger among us have traveled a journey too. It is just as real to them as the distances traveled by those who walked before them.

How far have you come?

If you were born in the 1930's, you were born at time when a round steak cost 42 cents a pound; and a half gallon of milk was 25 cents. It was the time when Social Security began and Mary McCleod Bethume was a prominent Negro leader. It was a time when Jesse Owens was a national Olympic Hero and Will Rogers made America laugh with his homespun humor. It was the time when Dick and Jane Books were used in nearly every public school, Joe DiMaggio was the baseball hero and the Monopoly board game was invented.

The times changed, but God remained the same.

If you were born in the 1940's you enjoyed Buster Bob on The Howdy Doody Show, marveled at Tupperware, and saw men wear funny looking Zoot Suits, wrapped things in Aluminum Foil, and tried your hand at dancing the Boogie Woogie and listening to Ella FitzGerald and Billy Holiday. You were probably upset over Pearl Harbor and heard your folks talking a lot about Franklin Roosevelt. You probably remember your folks saying the minimum wage was 43 cents an hour.

The times changed but God has remained the same.

If you were born in the 1950's, your mom probably sent you to the store to buy a loaf of bread with 14 cents. You heard of a woman named Rosa Parks who refused to give up her seat on a bus while you played with Barbie Dolls. It was the decade in which Drive-in Movies; Blue Jeans, Poodle skirts, hoola hoops; Elvis Presley, Jerry Lee Lewis and Little Richard fascinated the kids, and The Edge of Night, All My Children, The Guiding Light captivated our parents on television.

The times changed but God remained the same.

In the 1960's the minimum wage was $1 an hour; Well paid teachers earned $5,174; Gloria Steinem lead the Feminist movement; GI Joe, Skate Boards; Go Go Boots, Nehru Jackets; the Black Panthers, Malcom X and Martin Luther King were dominate political figures; Prayer in school was ruled unconstitutional; Hippies paraded at Woodstock, Men walked on the moon; and the teen idols included the Beatles, Temptations, Jimi Hendrix and James Brown. As a child you laughed with The Flintstones and watched big ears of Dr. Spock on Star Trek.

The times changed but God remained the same.

If you were born in the 1970's, you were born at time when Bread was 24 cents a loaf; a Quart of Milk was33 cents; smart kids played with Rubik's Cube, cute girls wore Hip Hugger pants; and almost everyone had a Video Cassette Recorders and a boom box.

The times changed but God remained the same.

Those born in the 1980's learned that the Minimum wage was $3.10; watched Jesse Jackson run for president; played with Cabbage Patch Dolls, watched the movie E.T., played Pack Man; witnessed the dawn of Cablevision as Rap Music became popular; LL Cool J, Millie Vanilli; Oprah Winfrey;

If you were born in the 1990's: You probably have heard that the minimum wage is $5.15 an hour; and that a gallon of gas is $1.55. You live in the world Email, The World Wide Web, Microwaves, Cloning, Rodney King, O.J. Simpson, School Uniforms; Tommy Hilfiger, Liz Claiborne and FuBu, Beanie Babies. Forrest Gump and Microsoft.

As Christians, we have seen the times change. We've seen things come and go. Gone are Drive in Movies, Full Service gas stations; 8 track tapes; 45 and 77 rpm records; Manual typewriters, push lawn mowers, Wide seat bicycles, Doctor's house calls; disco dancing, taps on shoes, returnable pop bottles; Home milk delivery; The Afro Pick, Afro Sheen, and the Jeri Curl. But remains the same.

Expositions

This text focuses on Moses as he reflects on Israel's journey and considers the road ahead.

Moses, at 120 years old, had a wealth of experience. He served 40 years as a prince of Egypt. He served another 40 years as a humble shepherd. He spent the last 40 years leading Israel out of Egypt toward the promised land. In the course of that time he saw many changes.

He saw the people change their life-style from slaves in Egypt to nomads. He saw them change their diets to accommodate the manna, or bread from heaven, that fell everyday. He saw them move from a people who called on God faithfully and continually in Egypt, to one that complained incessantly. In his experience, Moses saw children grow into adults, opponents of God's work swallowed, and miracles performed in front of his very eyes. He saw the Red Sea roll up and manna provided from heaven. He watched God provide, food, water and clothing for the people in miraculous ways. He had witnessed many changes.

As they paused, just before going into the promised land, Moses wrote, through the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, the Book of Deuteronomy. The name means "A Second look." In it, he reminds them where they had been and then points them to where they are going.

In this text he notes that where they are going is different from where they have been. Things will change. In Egypt, they spent much of their time building manual irrigation systems because there were infrequent, if any, rains. They tapped the resources of the Nile River and worked hard to keep themselves fully watered by the wisdom of the Egyptian engineering system. However, the land to which they headed would be a different place. Whether they succeeded in the new land would not be dependent so much on their own skills and labor, which would still be needed, but upon the grace of God. The Land of Canaan was an uneven country. It was a land of hills and valleys. The only river in it was the Jordan and it was not a shadow of the size and magnitude of the Nile. The land would be appear to drink water straight from heaven. In due season, God promised to provide his people with the rains needed for their survival and prosperity. Things were about to change.

Moses warned the people that as things change and opportunities of the future avail themselves, to remain faithful to God. He warned them not to forget where they had come from, and how they made it to their present destination. The only way they could lose the benefit of God's blessings would be to turn to ungodly living. Change is going to come, Moses said, but the people should not change their belief and faith in God.

From Whence Cometh Thou?

Every believer should be keenly aware of the road they have traveled. Individuals, families, organizations, and institutions all share one common trait, they build upon the work of others.

Those who are upwardly mobile, climbing to the top of the ladder should remember life and the bottom of the ladder empathetically. Since we have been there, we should understand what is needed as we explore way to further our climb?

INDIVIDUALS: Should also look back over the journey they have traveled. Today, many are ministers, deacons, deaconesses, and prominent church personalities. That has not always been the case. There have been changes. That's why 1 Corinthians 6:11 says, "and such were some of you:, but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God."

FAMILIES: Families should always remember the old warriors. Those whose eyes are dim, but whose wisdom has grown sharper over the years. Likewise the memory of ancestors who charted a course for your family should always stay foremost in every family. Every family, upon reflection should see that God has brought your family a mighty long ways. The resolve of the family should be the same as Joshua's as he spoke to Israel about their journey. Those who came into the promised land wanted to change gods to keep up with the times. Old Man Joshua told the people these words in Joshua 24:15, "And if it seem evil unto you to serve the LORD, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD." Families that look back, know that it was only the Lord that brought safely through.

CHURCHES: Churches should strive to remember "from whence cometh thou?" The humble beginnings of every congregation in comparison to its present always reminds a congregation of the great work that God has done through its members. In addition, congregations that reflect, also see how God has lifted them and related to them in a personal way that has magnified his name and their greatness in his eyes. Churches are encourage to remember to continue striving to advance the kingdom of God with the reward in view. The reward is promised to the churches in Revelation 21:7 "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son"

Wither thou Goest

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that regardless to where we have come from in our past, we'll need God to make it through.

When Moses spoke to Israel he constantly pointed them to the land before them, with the ever present reminder that as long as they stay close to God the blessings from heaven will continue to flow. The implication of Moses' comments were simple: Turn away from God and expect trouble, stick with God and expect an enriching experience.

The times change, but God never changes. In Malachi 3:6 God said, "I am the Lord and I change not..." Hebrews 13:8 makes it clear that the nature of God never changes. It says clearly, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever."

God does not change.

HE IS STILL OMNISCIENT: God has not changed. He still knows all about us. That's why the 139 Psalm declares, "Thou knowest my down sitting and mine uprising, thou understandest my thought afar off..." God knows what we think. God knows what we feel. God knows our doubts. God knows our fears. He also knows just how much we can bear.

HE IS STILL OMNIPRESENT: God has not changed. He's still available to us wherever we go. That's why the Psalmist declared, " If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If, I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea" thou art there. If I'm riding in an airplane, God is there. If I travel to a far away place God is there. We know he's there because Jesus promised in Matthew 28, "And Lo I'll be with you alway, even until the end of the earth!"

HE IS STILL OMNIPOTENT: God has not changed. He's still all powerful. There is nothing God cannot do. When Sara doubted God's ability the angel asked, "Is there anything too hard for God to do?"

I don't know about you but I'm glad to know that God does not change!

He's brought me from a mighty long way!

I'm glad to know that, when I've failed, he still turns failure into success!

I'm glad to know that, when I'm weak, he still turns weakness into strength!

I'm glad to know that, when I have questions, he still provides the answers!

I'm glad to know that, when I am frustrated, he still gives me hope!

In the past, he's been with us, but I'm glad to know that wherever I go, He'll still be by my side!

All I have to do is call on his name! His name is Jesus!

Jesus, who carried an old rugged cross!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose early Sunday morning!

He's coming back again to take us to a land! A land where we'll never grow old!

The #1 Stunter

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:" Thus saith the LORD, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches: But let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the LORD which exercise lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things I delight, saith the LORD." Jeremiah 9:23-24

Introduction

Have you ever met a person that loves to show off? That's the person who has to let everyone know what he has and tell the world in an "in your face" kind of way. The show-off is the person who calls attention to the fact that he or she has achieved. Whether it's the graduate that tries to dance across the stage at a high school graduation or the football star that does a special dance for the crowd after a touch down, show offs are all around us. There are adult show-offs who love to brag about how much money they make, what kind of car they drive and how much education they have attained. There are youth show-offs who enjoy the fact that they wear the latest, most expensive fashions and wear them first. In school there are show-offs. Many classes are often interrupted by students who try to grab attention by getting a laugh on a cheap corny joke or wise crack. Showing off is nothing new. It's been around for a long time, like an infection that invades every generation.

While adults use the term show-off, youth call it "stuntin." A stunter is a show stopper, an attention grabber who does something that calls attention to himself. Sometimes what is done is truly difficult and amazing. Sometimes what is done is simply stupid. Either way, a stunter successfully grabs the attention and credit for a deed that thrusts him into the limelight, if only for a moment. The person who is the most successful at performing such stunts is called the "#1 stunter."

In the Hip Hop world there are a group of artists from New Orleans who have taken the art of "stuntin" to its highest level. In 1992 Brian "Baby" Williams and has brother "Slim" started Cash Money Records and began a Southern Phenomenon that has made millionaires out of kids who were once poor. Groups like Juvenile, BG, Lil Wayne, Hot Boyz, and Young Turk have taken the nation by a storm, all wearing the famous "Cash Money" diamond studded dollar sign necklace around their necks. "Baby" himself sports $100,000 worth of diamonds in his teeth and throws cash money from the stage at his concerts. Flossing and "Bling, Bling!" are the name of the game as the cash money crowd promote themselves as the "#1 stunters." Their message is simple, "if you have it-show it off, brag about it, let everyone see it!" That's the message behind all the stunting. The young men of Cash Money should be applauded for their business sense and ability to lift themselves from poverty by using natural talents. Yet, one must wonder whether, the reckless abandon with which they "show-off" and encourage others to do the same is a flawed formula that has caused the demise of many millionaires who shined for a moment and disappeared into obscurity.

Across America, young people hear the message and dream of being #1 stunters. The goal is to become rich and famous, then brag and show it off to others. Even Christian youth hear the message. It surrounds them at school and on the college campus. It is in their music and videos. It is reflected in their fashions and literature. As Christian youth try to sort out right from wrong, good from bad, appropriate from inappropriate, they seek answers that will help them understand the world in which they live. Christian youth know that if they seek ye first the kingdom of God, the other things will come. Figuring out what to do with "all these things" is a dilemma of Christian youth, some of whom are trying to decide whether its O.K. to be a "#1 stunter."

As Christians, we rejoice in the fact that God blesses us immensely. Yet, in our rejoicing, we remain humble, because we know that all things come from God and not from our own abilities. We can't comfortably brag about our successes because, without God, we would have failed!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jeremiah as he warns Judah not to become to confident in own accomplishments.

The people of Judah were caught in the middle of world history. It was a prosperous nation that survived under the world domination of the Assyrians and the Eyptians before them. A new world power was on the scene, Babylon. The people were confident that they could not be conquered because they had three things about which they boasted and bragged. The bragged about their intellect and knowledge, reputation that was earned under Solomon. They bragged about their armies and fortified cities. Jerusalem itself was surrounded by mighty walls. Even if their own armies failed, they had political alliances with other nations such as Egypt to insure they could stand. Moreover, they had money. Lots of money!. Its king kept great storehouses of gold and silver and bragged about its wealth. If trouble came, the nation's leaders felt they had enough money to buy themselves out of danger.

Jeremiah spoke to the leaders and people of Judah about a coming judgment from God because of their sinfulness. Jeremiah's words were often ignored because the people were self confident. They could not imagine the downfall of the kingdom. They pointed to their superior knowledge and wisdom their strength and political alliances and to their vast riches as evidence that they were able to ward off any impending attacks by would be enemies.

Yet Jeremiah chided them for boasting. He said the wise man should not boast in his wisdom, nor the strong man in his strength or the wealthy in their riches. All of these come from God. The man who wants to boast, should boast about God, because it is God that exercises judgment and dispenses blessings as a part of his lovingkindness and mercy.

They were encouraged not to revel in their own achievements because those achievements were attainable only by the grace of God. Jeremiah reminded that when the same God that allowed them to achieve gets angry at their actions he could, just as easily, take away the very strengths they boasted about.

Three ways to be a stunter

Today, youth should glean from Jeremiah that there are at least three ways to be a stunter, some of which may be unacceptable to God.

GLORYING IN WISDOM AND KNOWLEDGE: Some Christian youth have been given the gift of wisdom and knowledge, both of which are listed in the categories of gives in 1 Corinthians 12. Wisdom and knowledge are wonderful gifts that come from God. Youth who exercise wisdom are able to make difficult and complex life decisions, act wisely and prudently and seem to always come out on top. Those with the gift of knowledge seem to excel in their studies without much effort. Their names are constantly on the school honor roll, they are members of the honor society and they are constantly praised for the knowledge. Should a smart student brag about their smartness? Should they belittle other students who must work hard and study long hours to make the same grade? The Christian student who has the gift of knowledge and wisdom, resists the temptation to become a "stunter" because the Christian student recognizes that the glory for their academic success comes goes to God. He's the one that helped them pull off the stunt. He's the one that called to their memory that which they had learned. God gets the glory. The Christian student hears the praise of others, but is never carried away but the accolades of teachers and fellow students. They simply will not take credit for God' work in their lives. The Christian student doesn't stunt, but responds in the spirit of Proverbs 3:5-6, "Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding."

GLORYING IN STRENGTH. There are students who have special physical endowments that give them physical strength, or personality traits that give them persuasive strength, or organizational gifts that give them political strength. We see the powerful presence of athletes who seem to dominate and control their sport. We see the popular students who always rise to the top of student leadership. These students have great gifts of strength and personality that make them extremely popular on campus. No matter how others try, they never seem to have the same level of strength of these gifted students. However, the Christian athlete knows that his strength is not achieved in the weight room. The Christian student leader on campus knows that his ability to lead students as a student council member or class officer is not a result of his own hard work. The popular Christian student knows that her popularity is not a result of anything she has done. All recognize that their help and strength comes from God. It's what David had in mind when he said, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth."

GLORYING IN RICHES. There are many students who enjoy material blessings. Some are fortunate to live in a fine home in a comfortable and safe neighborhood. Some are blessed with a comfortable life that is affording them many pleasures. Christian students recognize that every blessing they have received has been provided by God as he blesses the efforts of their parents to provide for them. A Christian student who has no job or legitimate source of income, never brags about his ability to wear designer clothing or keep up with the styles because, he knows that none of what he has, comes from his own efforts. The Christian student may wear fine clothes, but never brags about them or belittles others who cannot or chose not to do the same. The Christian students doesn't brag about how much money his family has or how poor someone else's family is. Neither does he brag about the quality of his neighborhood and berate and belittle those who have not been blessed in the same way. The Christian student doesn't enjoying stunting because he knows he is not the source of his own blessings. He has no right to brag.

The #1 Stunter

Finally brothers and sisters, while belivers don't brag on themselves, they do have someone to brag about!

Jeremiah warned Judah not to brag about their own wisdom.

He warned them not to brag about their strength or riches.

However, Jeremiah said, if we must brag then brag on the Lord. If we must brag, then give God the glory. That's what he meant when in verse 24 when he said, "But let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the LORD.."

The problem with be a stunter, is that the person who stunts, takes credit for that which he has not control. He writes himself in the robe of conceit and declares, "I Am this" and "I am that!"

I am a great football player!

I am a great scholar!

I am a member of a sorority or fraternity!

Everything that we have comes from the Lord. We can't take credit for anything, because without him we could do nothing. Without him we would surely fail. Without him our lives would be drifting, like ships without sails!

The believer chooses not to be a stunter because he knows he's not the source of his own accomplishments. He can't say "I am this" and "I am that" because there is a main man who is #1 in his book who says:

"I am the way, the truth and the life!"

"I am the bread of life!"

"I am the lily of the valley and bright and morning star!"

If we just have to brag on someone who has done good things. Let's brag on the Lord and make him the #1 stunter!

Jesus said when a man stands in church a prays a show place prayer, he's just stunting because he prayers go no where. The #1 stunter is not the man who can pray a fine prayer but the one who can answer prayer!

I know a man who can answer prayer! Call him in the morning! Call him in the midnight! He's always there!

James said some folks come to worship and they wear fine clothes that will get them a front seat. Often times they are simply stunting. They may be stunting but they are not the "number one stunter" The #1 stunter is not the one who wears the fine clothes but the man who provides the clothes you wear!

I know a man who can provide all we need. Someone asked the question, "Is thy God able?" The answer came..Yes, he's able!

Scribes and Pharisees spoke to a blind and accused Jesus of performing a publicity stunt when he healed the blind man. The blind must have responded, "If it was a stunt or not, I don't know, but if it was a stunt, he'd have to be the number 1 stunter, for I was blind but now I see!"

The woman at the well proclaimed it may have been a stunt, but "come see a man who told me all I've ever done"

The number one stunter isn't on the Cash Money label!

The number one stunter doesn't have diamonds in his teeth but holds the wealth of the world in his hands!

His names is Jesus!

He's the number one provider!

He's the number one healer!

He's the number one savior!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead with all power!

All power in his hands!

Where Scary spirits live

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 29, 2000

SCRIPTURE: And when he was come out of the ship, immediately there met him out of the tombs a man with an unclean spirit;" Mark 5:2; Howbeit Jesus suffered him not, but saith unto him, Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee;Mark 5:19

Introduction

Have you been afraid of the things that go bump in the night? As children, many of us were literally taught to be afraid of certain places and certain times. We were often told that certain abandoned houses in the neighborhood were haunted. We were told that the ghosts of its previous owners lived in these houses waiting for intruders. We walked fast each time we walked past those houses to escape the scary spirits that live there. Every child remembers being told that the "Boogie Man" would get them if they did wrong things or went into certain rooms of the house. The Boogie Man lived under beds, hid closets and other dark and scary places. We learned the children's stories of witches who baked little children in ovens, goblins and trolls that waited to gobble up innocent kids. Even though we grew up, many of us have the mental scars of a frightened childhood. Millions of adults, still sleep with a light on and are horrified when they come close to a place where they believe scary spirits live.

Certain times of the year promote scary things. Scary movies attract millions of people who pay to have themselves frightened. Movies. The scary movie began in 1922 with the black and white version of Count Dracula and his vampires who sleep in caskets by day and prowl the streets at night. The litany of scary movies began.The Mummy shows us living mummies from Ancient Egyptian tombs. The Nightmare on Elm Street series, featured Freddie Kruegar, who lived in your dreams at night and tormented you in real life. "The Invasion of the Body Snatchers" had people afraid of their neighbors who might have been replaced by Aliens, and the 1973 movie "The Exorcist" had little children afraid of demons that live inside little girls. In the 1990's Scream and Scream2 scared the living day lights out of millions. The horror that was "Scream" was replaced by the ultimate horror of the Blair Witch project about boys who went into the forest to verify a witch legend and never returned.

Monsters. Scary things. Where do they live? According to our legends they live in closets, under beds, in dark rooms, and in grave yards. They are the essence of what is to be feared from the things that go bump in the night. The monsters of children's tales and movies, they exist only in our imagination..or so we are told.

There are some evil spirits in this world, but the only ugly face they have is our own. There are some monsters, but they are not in the movies, but rather represent our worse inclinations and most serious weaknesses. There are some scary things of which we should be afraid, but they are not the kind that we see in movies. Where do they live? Where do the evil tendencies, bad thoughts, hatreds, bad feelings live? They live within us.

As Christians, we have come to know that Satan works constantly to get control of us. On our best days we have him in control. On our weakest days, he runs loose and we act unpredictably. We find peace and tranquility only at the feet of Jesus, as long as he fully dominates our lives, Satan has no place to live.

Exposition

This text focuses on Mark's account of evil spirits that lived in a man until he found Jesus.

The text gives an account of a man in terrible shape. He was a violent mental case. He refused to wear clothing or to live in a house; he lived naked in a cemetery, screaming and yelling at all hours of the day and night. Whether he was a danger to others or just frightened people to death, we don't know, but he constantly injured himself with rocks. All attempts to restrain him failed: he was very strong and no one was able to overpower him. People were so afraid of this man that they had attempted to chain him down, maybe while he was asleep, but he was so strong that he broke the chains! He was not controlled until he met Jesus.

This account is told in Matthew 8:28 and Luke 8:27 as well. In Matthew, an account is given of two men who ran wild in the tombs, both possessed with demons. Luke and Mark seemed to focus on one of the men who was possessed with an unclean spirit. This unclean or unholy spirit is alternatively called "unclean" in one place and "demons" in another.

The Mark text focuses upon the "demons" or unclean spirits that were in one of the two men.

The fact that the word "demon" is used, has been given a variety of meanings that range from monsters within to aliens.

"Demon" in the context of New Testament scripture refers to:

EVIL SPIRIT: Demon is used to indicate the presence of an evil spirit. An evil spirit indicates the presence of a tendency to act against the will of God. Such tendencies can be many or legions, that show themselves in a variety of avenues of human behavior. A demon is a spiritual agent associated with amoral act. Every amoral has a corresponding "demon" associated with it. Adultery, lying, thievery, envy, etc., all have evil spirits attached to them.

SEDUCING SPIRITS: Demon is also used to refer to "seducing spirits" 1 Timothy 4:1. These are spirits which disseminate false information and errors among believers under the guise of truth. They are constantly referred to in the New Testament because their presence divided the faith and allegiance of believers. One of these spirits promotes the idea that they can speak to the dead, a practice that is outlawed in scripture (Isaiah 8:19, Leviticus 19:31).

UNCLEAN SPIRITS: Demons are also characterized as spirits which tempt men with unclean thoughts and to some extent control the actions of individuals as suggested in Matthew 10:1 and Luke 8:27-29.

Combined, demons refers to the presence within a person of a spirit that is contrary to godliness that influences actions and thoughts of individuals in an ungodly way.

Christ met such a man in his journeys. The legions of unclean spirits within him confused his mind and caused him to act uncontrollably. However, in the presence of Christ, even the legions of unclean spirits within the man had to yield to the wonder working power of God.

Once out of the man, found peace in the presence of Jesus. However, Jesus commanded the man, free of evil spirits to return to his homeland, armed with a new spirit, and tell everyone what the Lord did for him.

Where scary spirits live?

Where do bad spirits that scare us live? Not in dark corners or the shadows of the night; they live within us. Demon possession is not like the movies. Don't look for monsters with ugly faces, long sharp nails, pointed tongues, cat eyes, and slim dripping from their bodies. Demon possession, in reality is the present of a bad spirit within a person that impacts the way they think and act in uncharacteristic ways. A man or woman possessed with a demon looks just like everyone else, but acts contrary to the will of God. The demon possessed are marked by:

PERSONALITY CHANGES: One of the first tell-tale indicators of the presence of a bad spirit, is a severe personality change. The demoniac in this text is one who is totally consumed by another power. In the same sense that an intoxicated person seems to become someone else when they are under the influence, a person under the influence of a bad spirit. It reflects itself in a severe personality change. A person who was once loving, acts just the opposite. A person who was once very talkative and open is now a recluse and shuts everyone out. A person who was once friendly is now angry with the world. All of these suggest that a bad spirit is taking hold. When another power takes over our identity and we become something that we are not, our individuality is swallowed up by legions of bad spirits, for one invites others. Personality changes are observed by those outside the person, but affected person exhibiting the negative behavior seldom is able to recognize it themselves. They usually attribute their actions to an understandable and justifiable reaction to something the bad spirit within them as identified as questionable action of others. Thus, the man running through the tombs was unaware of his situation, but the legions within him did.

TENDENCY TOWARD SELF DESTRUCTION. The man of the text constantly did things to harm himself. Verse five notes, "And always, night and day, he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones." It indicates that the bad spirits within him pushed him to act in ways that were self destructive. Those who are possessed by bad spirits do things that are self destructive. A man with a happy marriage, begins an affair that he knows will destroy his home in the end, acts to destroy himself. A woman who involves herself with a married man, knows the relationship will end in hurt feelings and disappointment, but she plunges headlong anyway. The man who gambles away his paycheck, the student who mouths off at a teacher, or the person who uses drugs is fully aware that the actions are destructive, but the bad spirit within them is overpowering and controlling. Like the man in the text, they act wildly and are out of control.

AFRAID OF JESUS. The bad spirit of the man in the text kept him wandering, wildly, loosely and out of control. The one thing bad the spirit feared was exposure to God. In the presence of Christ, the bad spirit was identified and removed. One of the most difficult things to do is to get a person who is under the influence of a bad spirit to come in the presence of any situation where the bad spirit might be challenge or expunged. A marriage affected by a bad spirit in one partner is strained at the least. One of the most difficult things to do is get the partner with the bad spirit to agree to counseling or even to come to a worship service. Bad spirits know that in the presence of God that will be revealed and eliminated, thus they avoid encounters with God as long as possible.

CASTING OUT BAD SPIRITS: The bad spirits in the man of this text were unable to stand in the presence of God. The word of God was such a powerful presence, the bad spirit could not continue in the same circumstance. When we know that a brother or sister is being overtaken by a bad spirit our response should take two directions: 1) Bring their situation before God in private intercessory prayer. Paul, in Romans 8:27, "And he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God." An intercessory prayer is one that is prayed on behalf of someone who doesn't know to pray for themselves or even feel the need of prayer. Private prayer brings the situation and the bad spirit before God. Bad spirits can't stand to be before God. Secondly, we must confront the bad spirit in person. Matthew 18:15, says we should confront person overtaken by a bad spirit, personally and in private. If the bad spirit persists we should gather the spiritually strong. A true believer, the face of that much "spirit man" presence will find that bad spirits will leave.

BAD SPIRITS LOOK FOR SOMEWHERE ELSE TO GO. When bad spirits leave one person they look for somewhere else to go. In this text, it was a herd of swine. The point is underscored one person may overcome their bad spirit, but then another person starts acting strange. It is a constant struggle to defeat Satan. We are reminded to put on the whole armor of God and to constantly be on guard because, "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." (Ephesians 6:12)

Peace with Jesus

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must note that while bad spirits can make us do some scary things in scary place, there is no fear in Jesus.

The wild man of the text ran wild in the tombs, but in the presence of Jesus

He stopped his ranting and raving

He came to grips with himself

He stopped his self destructive acts

He had his peace of mind restored!

At the foot of Jesus, a man who was once lost was not found!

At the foot of Jesus, a man who was once crazed had regained his sanity!

No matter what storm prevails in our lives there is peace in the presence of the Lord!

In the presence of the Lord:

Confusion is turned into understanding; destruction is turned into construction

Heavy hearts are comforted and heavy burdens are made light!

Questions and met with answers and Problems are met with solutions!

In the presence of the Lord those who have been living a horror movie, that unfolds every day like a nightmare from which they cannot awake, find a new relief

In the presence of the Lord those lives have been the victims of spirit stealing vampires that have robbed them of their ability to live life freely, find a second chance!

In the presence of the Lord, those whose bodies have been snatched by alien bad spirits, can get a new life!

It's a new life that has been promised by Christ himself, "for any man that is in Christ is a new creature, old things are passed away and all things become new!"

A child sometimes is afraid to sleep in the dark because he is afraid of the scary things. It looks like the walls are breathing. There seem to be footsteps in the attic. Every noise outside seems to be inside, but then somebody would turn on the light.

Are you afraid of scary things, Jesus said, "I am the Light of the world"

Scary things that can't live in the light!

Walk in the light!

Live in the light!

This light is Jesus! He is the one!

He died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the dead, with all power!

All power in his hands!

It's hard to sing the melody, if your life is out of tune

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 5, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord." Ephesians 5:19

Introduction

Have you ever picked up your favorite album only to discover that the wrong recording was inside? Back when 33 1/3 rpm albums were popular, the album covers were beautifully decorated and contained photographs of recording artists and other information. For many of the popular recording, the album covers became collector's items. Even as Compact Discs permeate the scene today, there are still millions of homes that have the old albums in music bins, or decorating walls. On occasion, we may pull out an old album to stroll down memory lane, only to learn that what's on the inside does not match what's on the outside. Many frantically go through every album they have and find that somewhere in the stack there is another one with the wrong record inside. It happens with compact discs, video recordings and other articles in which it is possible for what's inside to get separated from what's outside. It's frustrating to some, in fact, it's so frustrating that it they won't stop until they can straighten it out.

A generation ago there was a song that said, "Let me live the life I sing about in my song." To a large extent, the songs we like are extension of ourselves. They reflect our emotional state at the moment and generally our temperament. Recording artists who sing love songs, have a general reputation of being lovable if they are having trouble achieving the idea. Even rappers have to represent. Will Smith, the fresh Prince, raps with rhyme and intelligence. His life-style also reflects his rap. Gangsta Rappers like Mystikal and Snoop Dog, talk mean, tough and ugly. Their fans wouldn't follow them if they always appeared wearing three pieces suits and weren't really what they rapped about. Whether its good or bad, we expect singers to live the life of their song.

Every song we sing should be meaningful. Consider the church choir that traveled to New York for an appearance on a national television show. The church, proud of its choir, bought an entire floor of a hotel for them, and sent the keys and registration information in advance to the director. All they had to do is get to their and rooms rest before the broadcast. When they arrived in the city, they were brought to an extremely fancy hotel and told that their rooms occupied the entire top floor of the 50 story building. Just as they prepared to go up, the elevator broke down. That meant they would have to take the stairs. The director told the choir, "all things work to the good" and with good spirit they decided to sing as they went up the fifty flights of stairs, each of the 49 choir members would lead a song and the director would sing the last song. As they began they sang, "We're marching to Zion." At the 10th floor they sang, "We are climbing Jacob's Ladder", at the 30th floor they sang, "We're climbing up, the rough side of the mountain," at the 40th floor they sang, "I won't complain." When they made it to the 50th floor the choir director began to sing, "Nobody knows the trouble I see!" The choir members asked why, at the top of the stairs he chose to sing such a sad song instead of a song of victory. The director dropped his head and said, "I left all of our keys at the front desk!"-The choir members looked him and said in unison, you sang the right song!

Every believer is part of God's choir. We sing his praises on a daily basis. Our album jacket is full of beautiful pictures of the goodness of God. Our title attracts those who see the cover. They are interested. They are curious. They watch and the listen to the melody that is played for them to hear.

What if the melody of holiness and godliness that we sing about in our song is out of tune with our lives?

The goal of every believer is to keep it real. To make the songs of praise, thanksgiving and faith that they sing about on a daily basis, a reflection of what they really believe and apply in their lives on a daily basis.

As Christians we strive to sing praises to God. We want the praises we sing however to reflect the melody of life and love that is in our heart.

Lives in tune can sing the melody

It is difficult to sing songs about the Christian faith with enthusiasm, unless our lives our in tune with the Lord. The words come out but without meaning. A sound comes out of our mouths but without power and witness. This text suggests several measures Christian believer should take to stay in tune with God and give meaning to the melodies their lives sing.

SINGING IS TO BE FROM THE HEART: If a church choir held an audition, it wouldn't what would be the criterion? The criterion should be whether or not a person is a great singer, for most church choir singers are not, but they are individuals who have a heart for the songs they sing. Verse 19b: "... singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord." Many think of the church choir as a show place to make a name for themselves. The do just the opposite of verse 19, instead of "singing and making melody with your heart" they "sing and make melody with their mouths. The phrase "with your heart" signifies that you mean what you sing and you feel it!

SINGING IS TO BE TO EACH OTHER: In the shower, a believer sings to himself and for himself. Those who sing in public should sing to each other. They should look at the people they are singing to and reach out to them. Look at Verse 19 again, ". . . speaking to one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord." We can't obey this teaching in solitude. God calls us to speak in song to one another.

To sing to each other we should get together and sing as a congregation and as small groups. We should sing in each other's hearing and want to be heard by each other. The second implication is that it is justifiable to sing songs that are not directed toward God but toward each other for the purpose of testimony, edification, and exhortation

SINGING IS TO BE "TO THE LORD." Singing to the Lord implies that songs should be God centered or Christ centered. This means that what we sing should reflect our nature, that our lives are God centered. Everything we do and say is centered around our central beliefs about God and his Son Jesus Christ. Our songs are a reflection of that belief. What we choose to sing should be worthy of presentation to the master. Because what we sing will be presented to the Lord, those who sing should feel compelled to rehearse such that they always present God their best. Without proper rehearsal and preparation, then what is presented "to the Lord" is less than the best and is a negatively rather than a positive reflection on the singers. No singer should be happy with themselves if they sing with the choir but fail to block out time to adequately prepare. Singing to the Lord is serious business. It comes from roots that are deep in faith and impact the spiritual growth of the church.

SINGING SHOULD VARY IN FORMS: Those who sing should be trained to sing in various forms and styles, delivering the same witness in a variety of ways. Verse 19 says, ". . . speaking to one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs..." Those who sing to the Lord and to others select the style of song appropriate for the moment. The psalms, what we call "Anthems" speak dramatically about the power of God. Every singer should know how to witness with the power of the word transcribed into anthems. Hymns attest to the greatness of God as he relates to us. They are standards that have survived the test of time and linger long in the hearts of believers around the world. Spiritual songs are those that speak from the soul and experience of believers. They testify about what God has done in the life of a believer. They are about blessings received, hope renewed and prayers answered. Trained music leaders usually insure that varied forms are represented in every worship, hymns, psalms and spiritual songs. This too represents the course of every spiritual life: a devotion to God, dealing with God, and Testimony about God.

When life is out of tune

Many people in the choir are not strong singers. In any given church choir, most will testify that while they can blend in with others, it is hard for them to carry the melody unless there is a strong person in their section to set the tune. When that person is missing, they sing but sing softly, afraid they may sing out of tune.

So it is in life. Many believers, whether they admit it or not, depend upon each other to stay in tune. Outside of the body of Christ it is easy to start singing another tune. It is easy to get distracted and get our lives off track. We depend upon each other, to stay on track.

We depend upon that phone call from another believer who questions our sustained absence. We depend upon words of encouragement and even the words of chastisement we receive from our teachers and ministers to help keep us in tune. We depend upon the support of friends of the faith who have the melody to keep us in tune we lose our note.

For this reason we must constantly pray for those who set the tune for us. We must constantly pray for our pastor, teachers, musicians and choir leaders. Church musicians are those who believe in God and testify with their instruments! Choir directors don't just wave their hands, they testify with their lives! We should pray that they stay in tune with God!

Those who have been on the journey, know that it is extremely difficult to sing a melody to the Lord if our lives are out of tune with his word.

It is hard to sing about faith, if we know we have no faith.

It is hard to sing about strength, if all we show is weakness.

It is hard to sing about our hope in the Lord, if we have given up on God ourselves!

It is hard to sing about walking the narrow road, when we are running down road to destruction.

Filled with the Holy Ghost

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that in order to stay in tune, every believer needs to stay in touch with the Holy Ghost!

Verses 18 and 19: "And do not get drunk with wine, for that is dissipation, but be filled with the Spirit,. This means that Christian singing is not natural, but supernatural. The Holy Spirit is God. He is supernatural. He comes and he fills his people and moves them to act in certain ways.

Simply singing without letting the spirit sing through you, is not always pleasing to the Lord Amos 5:23-24, "Take away from Me the noise of your songs; I will not even listen to the sound of your harps. But let justice roll down like waters and righteousness like an ever-flowing stream." There is religious singing that is offensive to the Lord, namely, singing that is not a work of the Holy Spirit along with his other fruit.

You get a glimpse of what being filled with the Holy Spirit is by the comparison in verse 18 with being drunk. "Don't get drunk with wine, be filled with the Holy Spirit." Getting drunk with wine means being controlled by wine. It masters you and makes you feel and act in certain ways.

When you get drunk with alcohol, the liquor controls your song.

When your head is bad you may sing, "Every night I sing he blues" but when you are filled with the spirit you may sing, "All day, all night, angels are watching over me!"

When your head is bad you may sing, "Shake it fast" but when you are filled with the spirit you may sing, "Only what you do for Christ will last!"

When you head is bad you may sing, "The thrill is gone!" But when you filled withe spirit you may say, "Every day with Jesus is sweeter than the day before"

I don't know about you, but I've found out that you may not have the best voice in the world but when you sing from the heart and God gets in your song, it always comes out right!

When we you know the Lord, you can sing his song!

When you know the Lord, you can lift him up in praise!

When you know the Lord, you can sing, "I've tried the man and the man's alright!

When you know the Lord, you can sing, "The Lord will make a way somehow!"

When you know the Lord, you can sing, "I don't feel no ways tired, I don't believe he brought me this far to leave me!

From Whence Cometh Our Help?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 8, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth." Psalm 121:1

Introduction

Have you ever needed someone to help you? At some point in life, most people have needed someone to assist them in personal and career development. Very few people can truthfully say that they have achieved anything alone. We all need someone, sometime. Whether it was a parent who worked hard to provide an opportunity for us or a coach who gave extra assistance that helped us achieved, most of us have received assistance along the way.

No one can exist without some level of assistance from other human beings. Neither can anyone distance themselves from the obligation to give assistance to others. What happens to one, inevitably happens to another. We are so intertwine that the misfortunes of one, diminishes us in the same way that the good fortune of a friend enriches us. John Donne, in his epic poem put it this way,

"No Man is an island, entire of itself;
every man is a piece of the continent a part of the main;
if a clod be washed away by the sea, Europe is the less,
as well as if a promontory were,
as well as if a manor of thy friends or of thine own were;
any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind;
and therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls;
it tolls for thee."

Everybody needs somebody. Everybody gets help from somewhere. Consider the country preacher who was known for his spirited preaching. He had a habit of stopping in the middle of his sermon from time to time and singing, "All my help comes from the Lord!"-then running out the back door. The members inside didn't know that he had a bottle of whiskey under the back step. After a good drink, the preacher returned and preached boldly saying, "My help is come!" A few minutes later he would sing again, "All my help, comes from the Lord!" and run to get another drink.

The boys at the church followed him outside and saw him take a big drink. When the preacher returned the next time his bottle was gone. The boys had taken it. Dry, the preacher was lost for words and could not continue. All he could say was, "Help me Lord." Then, he looked out of the window and saw the boys standing on a hill waving his whiskey bottle. The preacher smiled and raise a finger as he ran out of the church saying, "Ya'll excuse me, I got to lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help!" Help is on the way.

God helps us in a variety of ways. Most often, he uses people to accomplish his will for us. He places a child in the care of loving parents and blesses their hands to care for, discipline and nurture us. God moves through people to make opportunities available to us. Immediately we see their hand and feel the touch of their lives impressed upon our own, but our help doesn't really come from them, but from the Lord.

As believers, we are strengthened when we remind ourselves that God is our refuge and our strength. We see the people he has used to bless our lives and bless him for touching through the lives of the ones who loved us.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains the nature of the believer's help and assurance in the faith.

The believers are urged to remember the source of all blessings. That source is God himself.

For Israel, the mountains and hills of Palestine afforded them protection against enemies and a certain sense of security. The Psalmist, pointing to the hills, was not implying that the assurance of every believer is in the literal mountains and hills around them, but in the power of the God who provides the protective environment in which they are able to sleep secure each night.

The God we serve protects us and keeps us continually. Our first line of reference is the hills themselves, but beyond that, it is God's hand, moving through the hills that brings our greatest assurances.

In most translations "from whence cometh my help" is a question, which places the psalmist in the position of asking where his help comes from. Without the question, KJV points to the hills themselves. The hills are symbolic.They represent the way God provides help. They are not the help themselves.

Often hills and mountains meant the same to those who made references to them. Those who knew the environments often referred to them as hills. Those who were foreign to a locale often referred to the same region as mountains.

Whether they were mountains or hills, David declared in this psalm, that a believer's help and security comes from God, not the hills and the mountains.

What the hills meant to believers

The hills and mountains of Palestine had special significance for the people of Israel. They were the places that offered them protection from enemies, places of worship, the points of sacrifice, and sanctuary from the storms of life.

In a similar sense God uses people to reach out and touch believers. Like the biblical hills, many believers have been touched by touched by individuals who have been used by God to strengthen their life experience.

The immediate way that God helps us is through the family. Those who are fortunate enough to have strong families, learn that God touches a mother and father in such a way that they are able to provide unique sustenance for their children, beyond mere food and drink.

For young believers, mothers and fathers are strong, like mountains and hills. They stand for strength and control. They protect us from enemies, teach us how to worship, help us to learn the meaning of sacrifice and provide a home life that gives us a sanctuary from the storms of life.

Yet, even mothers and fathers, as strong as their presence has been in our lives, are not the source of our blessings. Our help comes from the Lord.

Things get their names from the hills

In the bible, many places received their names from the hills around them. Great ideas were born among the hills. Great challenges were accepted in the hills and historic moments were birthed in the hills. So places like the Gibeah or hill of Saul, marked the place where Saul returned king of Israel or the Gibeah of Phineas or the Gibeah of God, and numerous others received their names from what happened on a certain hill.

There are many children today who are making a name for themselves, but that name results from the instruction, love and nurture received at the hands of a loving mother and father.

No matter how great the personality, the names that represents who they really are, came from those who touched their lives in special ways.

A child who becomes a great teacher, coach or basketball player, may earn great recognition for themselves. However, it is not their success that gave them their name, it is their name that made their success possible. The elements of personality, self esteem and confidence needed to achieve are acquired in the setting of a home environment that promotes success, inspires and motivates. At home, good parents spend a great deal of time instilling values into their children. They know that values are more important to success than even skill and education, Thus, they make sure that character goes in before the name goes on!

Good parents teach their children to live up to or improve upon the family name. Proverbs 22:1 says, “A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold.” A good name is not determined by riches and wealth. There are thousands of rich people who have bad names and reputations. A good name is not determined by success in a profession, for thousands have achieved great works but brought shame to their family names. Honesty, integrity, humility and godliness, despite all of the other things a person may accomplish contribute to a good name.

The children of good parents should praise God for the lives of their parents. Through them, God blesses their lives immensely. The young of every God fearing family is taught and remembers that they already have a name, the world just doesn't know it yet.

The hills represented high country

In Palestine there are different types of terrains. There were plain, valleys, mountains and hill country. Hill country represented high ground. It wasn't too high, but it was elevated.

The life of those in the hills and mountains was different from those in the plains. The life-style of the hill people was different from those of the plains. The air was thinner and it was challenging.

Good parents teach self esteem to their children. The Christian parent teaches their children to be different from the crowd but never to look down on the crowd. The idea is to rank yourself among the best but never lose the common touch. Be a hill that no one has to climb, while you think and aim high in life. The idea is not to be high and mighty, but to high and humble. The goal is not to be a mountain that is formidable and obstructive, but a hill that is lofty but yet accessible to all. Rudyard Kipling captured this spirit when he wrote:

"If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with kings-nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you;
If all men count with you, but none too much,
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And-which is more-you'll be a Man, my son!"

The spirit of humility is what every parent teaches their children. It is the spirit of Micah 6:8 "What doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

Help comes from the Lord

Finally, we should remember that God gives us good parents to guide and protect us, but all of our help comes from the Lord.

David, writing this Psalm, understood the source of every believers help. He looked up to the hills, but he knew his help came from the Lord.

His help came from a God who neither slumbered or slept.

His help came from a God who watched over him by day or by night.

In the same sense every believer should remember that through our parents, teachers and associates God has helped us along the way and we love them dearly, we have not been left helpless, when they are called home, because our real help has always come from the Lord!

In the frustration, as we deal with the reality of death, every believer should adopt an attitude of praise.

We thank God for a mother and father who provided a happy home for us!

We thank God for parents who placed their lives on whole and invested their entire substance toward helping us to achieve!

We thank God for a mother whose towering influence gave us a bold sense of family pride and self esteem!

We thank God for a mother whose optimistic spirit showed us how to live a long and happy life, endure challenging set backs and to count it all joy!

We thank God for parents who showed the way to the hill!

Not to a mountain peak or elevated blocks of land in a distant place but to a hill called Calvary!

We thank God that we had a mother who knew not to look at the hill, but to cross on the hill.

That's why the song write wrote: "On a hill far away stood an old rugged cross, the emblem of suffering and shame....So I'll cherish that old rugged cross and exchange it someday for a crown!"

That man on the hill was Jesus who died and rose again that we might always know that come..that despite death, sickness or tragedy.. He is our help!

Our help comes from the Lord, who made the heaven and earth!

God's Debt Payment Plan

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 12, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors" Matthew 6

Introduction

Have you ever stretched out all of your bills on a table or desk and wished they would just disappear? Those who run household are often overwhelmed with how much debt we have accumulated in such a short period of time. In many cases it seems like the only mail we receive is a bill from another creditor. There are many who are reluctant to answer the phone for fear that it may be a bill collector. The excitement of going to the mail box is dulled by the reality that it's going to be filled with what the old timers call "due bills." It seems that our debt is an endless vacuum that sucks up all of our resources and makes it impossible to sleep comfortable at night.

When we consider the enormity of our debts we are often frustrated. Tennessee Earnie Ford had a hit song in the 1950's. It was called "Sixteen Tons" that was popular in the fifties. It told the story of a coal miner who worked hard and could mine as much as sixteen tons of coal a day. The community he lived in was dominated economically by the coal mining company, which charged exorbitant prices. So this hard-working miner could never earn more than it cost him to live. Though it was many years ago the chorus of that song lingers:

"Sixteen tons and what do you get?
Another day older and deeper in debt.
St. Peter, don't you call me 'cause I can't go—
I owe my soul to the company store."

There are two types of debt. An over simplified explanation is this: We have current debts and long term debts. Current debts are those we deal with on a current, regular basis. They may include your utilities, phone, cablevision, your internet connection bill, etc. Long term debts may include your mortgage or car note, bank loans and others that are extended over long periods of time. We are said to said to be solvent when the sum total of our debts is less than our assets. Most folks are solvent but they have cash flow problems. Cash flow is accounting term that means a person can't get enough cash every month to pay their due bills even though they have enough assets to cover the debt. (Sometimes we reluctant to sell a piece of property or our second T.V. to satisfy a debt, so a creditor sues us and orders it seized).

When cash flow is the problem, there are professionals called debt counselors who help families work out plans to manage their debts. When there are high debts without assets to cover them, sometimes bankruptcy is the only option left. Dealing with debt can be frustrating.

Like financial indebtedness, spiritual indebtedness is equally frustrating. We are spiritually in debt when what we owe for our sins is more than we can pay. We run up a sin bill on a daily basis, but don't have the capacity to meet the daily due bill for our transgressions. Over the long term, we have a huge sin debt. We are spiritually bankrupt! Our sins outweigh our ability to pay.

A debt consolidation plan won't help us. Our problem is not "cash flow", our problem is insolvency. We desperately need a way to pay off our debts and become debt free.

As Christians, we rejoice in knowing that our sin debts have been covered. We no longer have long term sin debts from our past, and a spiritual mechanism is in place which covers our current sin debt. We know it because the word of God says, "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities and the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes, we are healed.."

Exposition

This text focuses upon Jesus as he tells believers to ask for forgiveness of debts by the same measure that they are willing to give forgiveness for death.

The text is extracted from the Lord's prayer, which is model prayer for believers. In it Jesus sets for the principles of a model prayer, teaching his disciples what they should and should not do in the course of their prayers. With respect to forgiveness, Jesus said, believers should not ask for God's forgiveness of their personal transgressions, unless they are also will to forgive those who have transgressed against them.

The only person who can forgive our sin debt is God. He alone has the capacity to cancel that debt and mark it paid. Often our debts to God are more than we are capable of paying, thus, what we seek from him is mercy and grace. The debts that we accumulate against God are staggering.

God has a plan for man's debt to be paid.

It would be purchased by another, who would pay its full price, then give each person who applies an opportunity to begin again with a fresh start.

That plan involved the death of his Son on an old rugged cross, to pay the price for man's debt to God. Those who apply with him, will be accepted and all debts to God will be canceled.

Stewardship Requires Debt Management

Those who act as stewards over their resources, must be able to manage those resources. This includes the ability to manage debt. Debt management is a necessary skill for every believer operating in the secular world. Consider:

DEBT OFTEN ALLOWS US TO GIVE A FALSE APPEARANCE OF OPULENCE: Those who are wealthy buy expensive things freely without worrying cost. The opportunity for debt tempts the "not-so-wealthy" to acquire the same lifestyle and symbols of the wealthy. The difference is that the truly wealthy person doesn't worry about the cost of opulence because he can afford it, the pseudo wealthy worry as soon as the bill comes. In other words, you can use your credit card to get things that make you look and feel rich without thought of what's going to happen when the bill comes. Millions of otherwise strong believers have fallen prey to the temptation to use their American Express, Gold and Platinum Visas to acquire things they would not normally buy otherwise.

DEBT MAKES US LOSE SELF CONTROL: The fruit of the Spirit is self-control or temperance (Galatians 5:23). The availability of easy credit tempts us to loosen the reins a little. You can get out beyond the parameters of control. That makes it easy. A lady once commented, "I love credit cards; they go so much further than money." We should constantly be on guard. It makes impulsive buyers. You walk by a window. You see something. The money's not there, but you've got the card. You can get it. "Ah, let's buy it honey. The Lord will provide at the end of the month."

DEBT FREQUENTLY CAUSES MARITAL PROBLEMS: Every year thousands of marriages feel the strain of an increased debt load. Husbands and wives, dealing with the frustration of escalating debt, often become enemies as one blames the other for creating the debt or inability to manage it properly. Debts are incurred to impress the neighbors or associates, make the kids happy for a day, or to satisfaction a variety of itches and impulses. When the bills in the home begin to escalate, marriages are strained to the limit.

DEBT TEMPTS US TO RESORT TO UNLAWFULNESS: When we want more than we can buy, and owe more than we can pay, many are tempted to consider ways to make the ends meet that border on unlawfulness. There are many that actually do unlawful things. There are some that embezzle from their employers. There are others that steal merchandise from their employers and sell them to get extra cash. There are others who may not go that far, but they rob "Peter" to pay "Paul." Unfortunately there are still others, who find it convenient to rob God! They use funds that should be given for the promotion of the kingdom of God to satisfy personal debts. They are funds that are rarely paid back. Malachi asked the question, "Will a man rob God?" And the answer came that there are many who robbed God by using their tithes and offerings for personal purposes.

How to get our of debt

Finally, while most of agree that we are certainly in debt, thanks to our Lord and Savior, there is a way to get out of debt.

The only real way to get out of debt is for the debt that is owed to be satisfied.

Every debt we make must ultimately be satisfied.

The man who steals, has a theft bill, that must be paid.

The man who cheats on his wife, has a adultery bill that must be paid.

The man who lies, has a false witness bill

The woman who wants more than she can pay for has a greed bill, that must be paid

The woman who talks about a friend behind her back, has a back stabbing bill that must be paid.

We can't pay our sin bill with silver or gold.

We can't transfer title to our cars or deed over our homes.

Romans 6:23 says, "The wages of sin is death."

To pay our debt something has to die.

But every believer needs to remember that , no matter how numerous our sins, God has payment plan.

God announced that he would allow a ransom to be paid our behalf. In essence, God announced that he would allow somebody to pick up the note!

Can't your hear the call go out from heaven, "Is there anybody out there, who can pick up the note for man's debt of sin?"

Moses said, "Lord I can't do it, I got my hands full dealing with the Children of Israel!"

Elijah said, "Lord, I can't do it, it's taking all I have to wrestle with the Ahab, Jezebel and the prophets of Baal"

Ezekiel said, Lord, I can't do it, I'm over my head in the valley of dry bones!"

Daniel, said, Lordi, I can't do it, it's taking everything I have to deal with these lions in the Lion's den

Three Hebrew Boys can you do it? They were too busy walking around the fiery furnace

But I heard a voice from saying, "If the Lord needs somebody, here am I send me!"

Jesus came down to this earth in the form of a man!

He died out on Calvary!

He paid the price for sin debt!

And Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands and set me free!

Recount Your Blessings

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the New Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 19, 2000

SCRIPTURE: Praise ye the LORD. O give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever. Psalm 106:1-2

Introduction

Have you ever felt that those who are less faithful than yourself seem to get more blessings? There are times when even the strongest believer thinks God is unfair to the faithful. These are the times when you look at the ungodly people all around you and consider their prosperity despite their ungodliness. In comparison, we sometimes feel that if they are doing well in the midst of their ungodliness, then we should be doing even better because of our godliness. We secretly think there should be a correlation between godliness and prosperity. It is not until we stop and review our actual circumstance, the good and the bad, that we reach an understanding about the nature of our blessings. When we start accusing God of short changing us, that's when we should consider a recount to learn whether our claim is really true.

We're learning a lot about recounts these days. The presidential election of 2000 will be enshrined in history because of its close outcome, necessitating, at least in the minds of some, a recount of the votes of certain counties in Florida and other areas of the country. The initial counting process in most places in the country uses an automated process that can give a quick result, but is subject to error, especially if the instruments used to record the vote are not used according to their design, or those who report the findings are in error. Because there is a likelihood of error, either human or mechanical, close elections usually include a demand for a recount. The idea is to revisit that which has been done and to authenticate the results. Sometimes the results of an election are confirmed. Sometimes those results are overturned as flaws, errors and miscounts are discovered and discarded.

When believers think that the ungodly have outvoted them with the favor of God, maybe it's time for a recount. When we begin to feel that our blessings are diminished despite our godliness, maybe we should revisit what God has actually done. If we have these feelings, we would not be the first. There have been others. Psalm 37:25 found David frustrated over the apparent success of the wicked until he concluded, "I have been young and am now old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." After recounting his blessing David concluded that although the wicked seemed to prosper, the righteous are always the eventual winners with God.. Therefore, we are constantly urged to count and recount our blessings to remind ourselves of the goodness of God.

As Christians, we have learned that God blesses us continually. Even the experiences that seem to work against us, eventually bless us. Truly God is good and his mercy endureth forever. The initial count may seem to favor the wicked. But when we recount our blessings, God gets the victory and praise!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he recounts the ways that God blessed Israel, despite themselves, prompting him to conclude that God is deserving of thanks and praise.

Generally, the 106th Psalm is a historical narrative of the many ways that God blessed Israel despite their own stubbornness and tendency toward unfaithfulness and sin. It recounts God's blessings from the point of their liberation from Egypt to their arrival in the promised land. As their national history is recounted, their own flawed experience is revealed and God's charity and mercy is seen clearly.

Beginning at verse 7 David began the recount. He noted how God blessed Israel in Egypt, even though the people did not clearly understand the various ways that God was dealing with them in their experience. The phrases, "understood not" and "remembered not" are given as the reason for their constant frustration.

David's recounting of God's action, looking at each one slowly and meticulously, revealed what the people could not understand and did not remember. It showed that in moments when they felt God had forsakened or abandoned them, God was actually blessing them. At the Red Sea, for example, it appeared that God had brought them out of Egypt to allow them to die at the hands of the Egyptians. They did not understand how God works. Even when God opened the Red Sea and they crossed on dry land, they still did not understand completely how God was blessing them.

They complained that God was helping their enemies to triumph over them, until the recount. However, at verse 10, after the recount they saw how God defended their cause and defeated their enemies.

As they wandered in the wilderness, they couldn't see how that was a blessing, until they recounted it! After the recount they realized that God was preparing them as a nation for a greater blessing that was to come.

When they had no food, they complained that God had forsaken them. After the recount, they remembered how God provided both bread and meat for them in midst of their wilderness experience.

In the process of recounting, they saw some things they didn't like about themselves, which increased the importance of God's blessings in their own sight. Verses 13 and 14 show how the people soon forgot about God and lusted after their own pursuits in the wilderness. When they considered their own stubbornness, then they realized what a blessing God had bestowed upon them, despite themselves.

Verses 21-22 make it abundantly clear that the people rushed to judge God without counting the great things he did for them in Egypt, such as providing protection for them in the Land of Goshen where their crops grew and the terrain was protected for plagues, drought or pestilences. Many among them only saw the fact that they were slaves. They did not count how God blessed and sustained them despite their servitude. Many saw the Red Sea as a stumbling block against the success, but not how God acted at the Red Sea. Many saw the high, walled cities of the Promised land, but did not count how God made those walls come tumbling down.

Verse 43 sums up a litany of instances in which God blessed the people, but they provoked him by ignoring him and plunging into iniquity.

When the final count was complete in verse 48, David declared, "Bless be the Lord God of Israel from Everlasting to Everlasting. Let all the people said Amen. Praise the Lord!"

Why Should We Recount?

Whenever we find ourselves complaining and questioning whether God has blessed us, it may be necessary for each of us to demand a personal recount. In so doing, we may learn some things.

Sometimes we learn in the recount that we simply did not count it right. In other instances we may find that we gave Satan credit for work actually done by God. We should recount because we may find that some of our life's experiences may not have been counted as blessings. Counting them correctly gives us a brand new outlook!

HOW DO WE COUNT TROUBLE? There are many that do not count trouble in their lives as a blessing. We consider trouble as a curse rather than a blessing. However James 1:2 "Count it all Joy when you enter into divers temptations." It simply means that many of life's troubles are actually blessings. Many who have spent time in prison, or have been fired from jobs, or have undergone marital strain can testify that at the time of their occurrence these seem more like curses then the blessings they turned out to be. However, looking back, they now see how God used the experience to edify them to his glory and praise. Thus, those who do not count their troubles as a blessing should recount those experiences and see what the Lord has done!

HOW DO YOU COUNT LOSS FOR CHRIST? There are many who have lost job opportunities, and chances for personal advancement toward life goals because they held firm to biblical principles. Many Christian women could have received promotions on their jobs if they had catered to the sexual advances of some of their superiors. There are others who easily have become rich, if it were not for the fact that they would not sacrifice their integrity to attain riches. For the sake of the cross there are many who have lost friends and have been ostracized from clubs, civic groups and certain social circles, because they refused to go along with an immoral practice. How do you count such losses? Philippians 3:8 finds Paul saying, "Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ," Those losses were actually blessings received for standing up for the excellency of Christ. Those who do not count their losses for Christ sake as blessings, should recount them and give God the glory!

HOW DO WE COUNT PROLONGED HARDSHIP? Those who have endured a personal sickness of that of a loved one for a long period of time, sometimes see the experience as a burden. When they count their blessings, they don't place this hardship in the blessing category. Yet James 5:11, addressing a similar situation says," Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy." The very ability to handle the hardship in itself is a blessing. It indicates that God is providing strength beyond the ordinary for each person to handle the prolonged hardship, sickness, or personal struggle. It doesn't look like a blessing but it is. That's why James points to Job as reminder that Job's hardship didn't appear a blessing either. In the end however, God blessed him beyond expectations. Those who refuse to count their hardships as a blessing, should recount their blessing and see what the Lord has done.

HOW DO WE COUNT THE APPARENT SLOWNESS OF GOD TO ACT? When God answers our prayers immediately we immediately recognize the inherent blessing. We lift our hands in praise and glorify him intensely. However, when God seems to be slow to respond to our prayer request, we don't put that in the blessing category. Did you ask God for something? Are you frustrated because it appears that he has not answered? 2 Peter 3:9 reminds us "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." If you have failed to count what appears to be a slow response by God in the blessing category, you need to count again. That's what happened to Mary and Martha. When Jesus did not come to Lazarus' bedside during his sickness, they chided him for being late. When he raised Lazarus from the dead, they learned a lesson that we now know, God may not come when you want him, but he's always on time. Count every prayer request that seems to be unanswered, but the answer is already on the way!

Demand A Recount

Finally brothers and sisters, those who have counted their blessing, but still think God has cheated them, should demand a recount.

There are some who have surveyed the world around them and have miscounted the goodness of the Lord.

I suggest to you that there somebody here today is the victim of a miscount.

They have looked back over the tragedies and mishaps of this year and concluded that it has been filled with everything but blessings.

This is what happened to Job. His life appeared riddled more curses than blessings. He lost his wealth. He lost his health. He lost most of his family. Yet in all of his losses, Job did a quick recount and concluded, “Yea thou he slay me, yet will I serve him!”

You know you are the victim of a miscount when your tally of the year’s experience leads you to believe that God has abandoned you and left all alone!

You are the victim of a miscount if all you can see is the number of days you spent in the hospital, the money you lost in a business venture, a failed relationship, missed opportunities and broken promises. If that’s all you can see, then you are the victim of a miscount.

If there has been a miscount and it favors the adversary, the adversary will usually oppose a recount, because it may change the result..

When we start complaining about how much we have lost..

When we start complaining about how much sickness we have endured..

When we start complaining about the burdens of death we’ve borne...

The adversary says stop the count right there! Shut the process down!

When a believer starts recounting blessings, there is no doubt that God will always come out the winner!

When we count our blessings we find out that God that God has taken our:

Stumbling blocks and turned them into stepping stones!

Failures and turned them into successes

Tears of sadness and turned them into smiles of joy!

Defeats and given us victories!

Disappointments and given us hope!

When we count up our good days and our bad days, our good days will always out weigh our bad days.. We have no reason to complain!

God has been good to us! He’s opened doors we could not see!

I won’t complain about my blessings because I know that the Lord is still in the blessing business.

He blesses me in the morning. He blesses me in the noon day. He blesses me in the midnight!

One day, 2000 years ago, he blessed the World by giving his Son to die on a old rugged cross!

On that dreadful it didn’t look like a blessing!

When the buried him in a borrowed tomb, it didn’t look like a blessing!

When they rolled a stone in front of the tomb, it didn’t look like a blessing!

But Early Sunday morning Mary ran and told everybody, if you’ve counted him, you’d better recount!

Early Sunday morning he arose up from the grave, with all power!

All power in his hands!

What Manner Of Child Shall This Be?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 10, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "And all they that heard them laid them up in their hearts, saying, What manner of child shall this be! And the hand of the Lord was with him. "Luke 1:66

Introduction

Have you ever watched a child and made predictions about what he or she would become? The little industrious girl who studied hard in school was told by her graduating class that she was the most likely to succeed. The little bad boy that was constantly in trouble, suspended from school and displayed criminal tendencies was told that he would count for nothing in life, prison was his destiny. The child born with a physical handicap, what kind of life did we predict for that boy or girl? The Black child or the poorest white trash, what chances do we give them to succeed in life when the odds seem stacked against them. Poverty, ignorance, and social proscription seem to define the existence and their future. Yet, despite the obvious, many have watched their predictions shattered. They have seen girls who were not very industrious in school, become great leaders. They have seen the bad boys of the elementary schools become the great businessmen and leaders of their generation. They have seen the physically challenged win Olympic competitions, write books and challenge the world. They have seen many loose themselves from dire expectations of poverty and rise to heights never imagined by those who doubted the possibilities. We have learned, through experience, never to second guess what God can do with a life that is placed in his hands.

There are certain unalterable truths about young people that seem immutable. How far children go as adults is directly related to their experiences as youth. What children see, hear and experience in their youth weighs heavy upon the productivity of their lives as adults. What adults do to children, say about children, and do for children, will affect them the rest of their lives.

Dorothy Knolte made this important observation. "Children learn what they observe.

If children live with criticism, they learn to condemn and be judgmental.

If children live with hostility, they learn to be angry and fight.

If children live with ridicule, they learn to be shy and withdrawn.
If children live with shame, they learn to feel guilty.
If children live with tolerance, they learn to be patient.
If children live with encouragement, they learn confidence.
If children live with praise, they learn to appreciate.
If children live with fairness, they learn justice.
If children live with security, they learn to have faith.
If children live with approval, they learn to like themselves.
If children live with acceptance and friendship, they learn to find love in the world.

It is obvious, therefore, that we can shape the future of every child by surrounding them with love, home, attention, and expectations.

Dan Pursuit mused that to a great extent, most youth were a sign that reads, "I want to be important NOW." Many of our juvenile delinquency problems arise because nobody reads the sign.

What does God have in store for the child whose life has been placed in his hands? We don't know exactly, but we know what it means to be in God's hands. It means that God gently guides us to realize our fullest potential, if we will allow him to do so.

As believers, we don't know what the future holds for children, but we know, that children who allow God to use their lives can do great things. That's why we place our lives and the lives of our children in his trust and care.

Exposition

This text focuses on the awe inspired by the birth of John the Baptist.

John is one of several biblical children whose birth was promised and whose contribution to the world was destined to be great. At birth he appeared to be an ordinary child. However, even as he grew those around him could sense that he was different from other children, thus destined by God to greatness.

The mystery that surrounded John did not begin in his adult life, but in the very circumstances of his birth. He was from a God fearing family that ministered regularly before the Lord. His parents had prayed for many years for a child but were frustrated that years passed without conception, yet they prayed.

The parents sensed that once John was conceived that he would be endowed with some special gift or would accomplish some special purpose. They had been told by Angelic vision that the child should be named "John" (v13) because he would be an instrument of God's grace. Not only would the child of Zacharias and Elizabeth bring them joy, but he would do great works.

The prospects for the child were immense. The angels told Zacharias that the child would be special because it would be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from its mother's womb (v15). Moreover, many people would come to know the Lord in a different way because of his life, that will be endowed with the power of God to challenge people to repent and turn to God (v16).

Zacharias doubted that his son would be able do so many powerful things. He was a man of poverty himself. Though he attended the affairs of God religiously as a Levite, he still could not conceive of a child, born of old age, doing such a mighty work through the power of God. He demanded a sign that would confirm what he had heard. The only sign he received was a restriction on his own abilities. He could not believe, so God froze his own movement; his ability to minister, work and carry out his duties, until what was promised came to fruition. From that day forward, Zacharias became dumb, unable to speak, not permanently, but until he could recognize the work of the Lord in his life.

When the child was born relatives, friends and neighbors came to assist Elizabeth. They had their ideas about what the child should be and offered to do what had not been done in the biblical record, name the child after his father. Biblical names were significant in that they represented great truths or expectations that the child symbolized. The record is replete of any accounts of a David, Jr. or a Solomon, II or a Samuel, Jr. Yet here, the neighbors proposed to name this child after his father, giving tribute to him for this great work of bearing a son in his old age.

Elizabeth refused the good intentions of the neighbors and relations. She said the child would be named "John" (v60). Not understanding why Elizabeth should not be honored to name the child the child "Junior" or "Zacharius the second", they went to Zacharias himself. Unable to speak, Zacharias no longer doubted what he had been told by God and wrote on a slate, that the child should be named John. He immediately recovered his ability to speak (v64). The sign he had asked for had been given.

When the people saw Zacharias speak. When they saw Elizabeth and her dumb husband both decide upon the same name in independent situations, they knew something special was about to happen in this family. They were not sure exactly what would happen, but they knew something would happen that would be great.

The friends and relatives left this aging husband and wife and their little boy and wondered "what manner of child shall this be?"

The would soon receive their answer because the hand of the Lord was with him.

What manner of child?

Today there are millions of people who have prejudged children and condemned them to failure because of the circumstances surrounding their birth. For many years, society frowned upon children born of unmarried parents by calling the child illegitimate. It was a misnomer. The child may be have been the product of an unsanctioned, unblessed relationship, but it was certainly not illegitimate. The relationship was illegitimate but, not the child. Such children lived through life, marked by an insensitive society. The circumstances surrounding John's birth should draw our attention to several considerations:

NEVER DOUBT THE POTENTIAL OF A CHILD: Zacaharias, even though he was told by angel what his child would become, doubted what he heard. As a result his own growth and activity were limited until he became a believer. Today, millions of parents don't really expect their children to achieve greatness. Many hope that they will stay out of jail, get a job, have children and make some money. The idea of greatness is foreign to many parents. When Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Conner was a little girl her mother assumed she would be great. On that assumption she took it upon herself to teach her things she would need when greatness came. Among the many great things she did was to carry her daughter to every state capitol in America and to help her learn, American History and government. She doubled her efforts to send her to law school and gave everything she had to help her become a judge. When she was sworn in as the first woman judge, O'Conner said she didn't see the crowd, she searched for her mother who believed in her. The crowd cheered as she looked at her mother. Her eyes said "thank you." Parents should expect their children to be great and do what is necessary to help them develop the character and skills to acquire greatness. Zacharias should be a warning as well. His momentary doubt caused him to be dumb for nearly a year. Parents who doubt that God has selected your child for greatness and chuckle at the prospect, display a doubt similar to that of Zacharias. Such doubt can lead, it has been shown, to interruptions in parental grow and flow, until the potential is realized.

IGNORE THE LOW EXPECTATIONS OF NEIGHBORS AND FRIENDS: Very often the people around us, who attempt to be our friends, do us more damage than good. Parents who believe their children destined to greatness, will often ignore the opinions of their friends and relatives. Elizabeth's friends told her what she should name her son. Elizabeth knew greater things were being planned for him, she named him John. There are many today who condemn children to be just like their mothers, fathers, uncles. Many of them were not bad people, but were not great people either. When born in poverty, no one expects the poor child to be anything except poor and ignorant. When born into a non-achieving environment, very few expect the children of such circumstances to exceed their history. Believing parents should ignore sociologists, doubters, skeptics and even friends who doubt the prospects of greatness for their children. When God has blessed, nothing but greatness can result. Parents such as these invest in the potential of their sons and daughters. They struggle against the jokes of their friends to help their children achieve. They seek out organizations that help instill character. They seek out activities that will instill discipline and scholarship. They look for churches that help mold and shape their spirituality. No matter what the world says, they believe in their children's potential and tell them so repeatedly.

When the hand of the Lord is upon us.

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should never under estimate our potential when the hand of the Lord is upon us.

The hand of God is the essential element in realizing potential. That's why Hannah brought her son Samuel to the temple and placed him in the hand of the Lord.

That's why millions of families each year bring their infant children to the altar and place them in the hands of the Lord.

In the hands of the Lord, lives that have been shattered by the circumstances of poverty can be restored agin

In the hands of the Lord, gifts that are ever so humble can become mighty tools. In 2 Kings 3:15, the hand of the Lord was upon a musician and he played with power

In the hands of the Lord, the impossible becomes possible. In 1 Kings 18:46, the hand of the Lord was upon Elijah he performed mighty miracles.

In the hand of the Lord, doors are opened for us. In Ezra 7:6, Ezra was granted his every request in life because the Hand of the Lord was upon him

A life place in the hands of the Lord, changes other lives. In Acts 11:21, the hand of the Lord was upon the Apostles, and many believed.

In the hands of the Lord, even the most humble can become great!

In the hands of the Lord the:

Weakest can rise to become the strongest

Losers can overcome odds to become winners

Faithless can be encouraged to become bold

Lost can find themselves

The disappointed can find new reason for optimism

Disheartened can find new reason for hope!

In the right hands, the good can become better!

In the right hands, the average can become superior!

In God's hands, the lost can find salvation!

These are the hands that were stretched out on Calvary!

These were the hands that were pierced and nailed!

These are the hands of one who died for our sins!

These are the hands that raised, Early Sunday morning, in victory over death and grave!

These are the hands of Jesus of Nazereth, who has all power! All power in his hands!

Star Search

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 17, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "..Where is he that is born King of the Jews? For we have seen his star in the east and are come to worship him" Matthew 2: 2

Introduction

Have you ever waited for something promised to you but it took a long time coming? Most of us have been recipients of promises. Many of us have waited, what seemed to be enormous amounts of time to receive something promised. There are some that are waiting on promised employment raises that seem elusive. Some are waiting on marriage proposals. This season of the year, many children are waiting on a special day when they have been promised an exciting day, in return for a year of good behavior. It's a day that seems to come so slow. The clock seems to tick slower. The nights seem to get longer. The closer it gets, the slower that magic day seems to come. Whether we are children waiting for toys or bigger boys waiting for larger toys, when we are waiting for something, it seems to come slow.

When something has been promised, we look for it. Consider the young man who was a little nervous about making a promise to be faithful to his wife forever. Just before the wedding ceremony he met the pastor in the hall and asked him to skip the part of the wedding vow about being faithful until death. To insure the deal the young man slipped three crisp new $100 bills in the pastor's hand. Secure that he wouldn't promise anything that he was not willing to deliver, the groom marched down the isle with a big smile on his. His wife also had a warm smile on her face. Both of the them were extremely happy. However, when the minister reached the part of the vows that asked the groom to respond he said, "Do you promise to wake up your wife each morning with a sweet morning kiss, serve her breakfast in bed, grant her every wish and never look at another woman so long as you shall live?" With the entire church staring at him and seeing the big grin on his wife's face, the groom whispered, "I do." Immediately the groom leaned over to the pastor and said, "Say, you promised. I thought we had a deal!" The pastor gave the groom the three $100 bill back and said, "You know why your wife is smiling so much? She made me a better deal!"
We look for whatever has been promised and are disappointed when it doesn't come.

God made the world some promises. For hundreds of years the world waited for those promises to come true. God made many promises, since most of them had been fulfilled, the Jewish people had no reason to believe that this promise would not be fulfilled. God promised Noah it would flood, and it did. He promised a rainbow, it came. He promised Joshua that sun would stand still, it did. He promised Moses that the Red Sea would roll back and it did. He also promised the world that he would send a savior, whose birth would be announced by a shining star. The people took him at that promise too and started searching for the star that would be the sign that God's promised had been fulfilled.

In biblical times wise men searched for the savior. They searched by looking for his star. When they found the star, they knew that God's promised would have been fulfilled. Today, wise men are still searching. They are searching, not necessarily for a specific star in the heavens, but for a sign that God is keeping promises made to the faithful.

As Christians, we rejoice in the knowledge that is not slack in his promises. We know that what he promises, he delivers. It may seem like a long time coming, but a promise from God is good as a blessing received.

Exposition

This passage focuses on the search of the astrologers and wise men for the baby Jesus.

Matthew divides the account of the birth of Christ into five stories that begin at Matthew 1:8 through the end of chapter two. The first story, begins with an angel making an announcement to Joseph about the forthcoming birth of Christ. Chapter 2:1-12 begins the search of the wise men and Herod's attempt to kill the baby boys. The third story begins at 2:13 detailing how God moved Joseph and his family to Egypt for safety to avoid the genocidal plans of Herod. The Fourth story recalls how Herod's decision was similar to that of Pharaoh that caused great weeping in Rama. The last story begins at 2:19-23 and details Mary and Joseph's return from Egypt and move to Nazereth after the death of Herod.

This text focuses on the second of the five Christmas stories, the search of the wise men.

In Babylon and Persia there were men who studied the formation and the movement of the stars. They were called then, as they are today, astrologers. While astrologers today focus on the science of star movement, in biblical times the astrologers ascribed significance to those movements, specifically as they relate to revealing secrets about the future, personal growth or destruction. They were familiar with Judaism and its prophets by virtue of many Jewish leaders, such as Daniel, the Three Hebrew Boys, Ester, Nehemiah, and others having served in high places in their kingdoms. Most rose to prominence because of the mighty acts of an unseen God who had no statues or images. This raised their curiosity and they searched for information about this God.

Among the writings were several predictions by prophets that a King would be born in Israel and that his birth would be predicted by a star. In Numbers 24:15-19 they saw prophecies that a star would rise up out of Jacob with a kingly scepter that would begin kingdom building efforts. They read in Micah 5:2 they that the new king would be born in Bethlehem. The astrologers watched the stars constantly looking for something different that would indicate the fulfillment of these predictions. When they finally saw a different star appear in the horizon, they immediately associated it with the scriptures they had read and predictions made. They began a journey, that would take them almost two years to complete, to find the new king and present him with symbolic gifts. The knew where to go, because the scriptures pointed the way. When they found him they expected to worship him.

The text places significance upon the star. It is called "his Star." It indicates that they believed the star they saw was not simply an astrological phenomenon but a special appearance with a personal application. The astrologers made their observances without benefit of telescopes which were not invented until 1672. When they saw "his star" they saw it with the naked eye and drew their conclusions from their observations.

To single out "his star" is significant because there are billions of galaxies in the universe. Each galaxy has billions of stars. The galaxy which includes earth has over 100 billion stars in it. Yet with 100 billion stars, many of which can be seen with the naked eye, they astrologers saw "his star."

They made the designation that what they saw was "his Star" without the knowledge that light travels at the speed of 186,000 miles per second.

The light that formed the star they saw began its journey long before they saw it appear. The closest star is said to be about 4 light years away. How far away is a light year? A light year is the distance that light can travel in one year. In one minute a beam of light can travel 11 million miles. In one hour it can travel 669 million miles. In one day it travels 16 billion miles. In one year a beam of light travels 5.8 trillion miles.

Since the closest stars to earth are about 4 light years away, if the star the wise men saw was among the closest, there would be at least a four year gap between the time that star twinkled and the time the astrologers saw it with their naked eye, traveling some 24 trillion miles. In essence, there was a large span of time between the wink that began in heaven and the twinkle of the star the astrologers saw on earth.

The promise was real. The astrologers knew it. They searched for it. Knew where to go. And prepared worship the Lord when they found him.

They Searched

Today there are millions who are still searching for something in life. They are not quite sure what it is they want, but they are searching. They believe that God has something for them but they can't quite put their hands on it. Look closer at the wise men and their search for "his Star" can reflect upon our own life search.

THEY KNEW WHAT TO SEARCH FOR: The wise men knew what to search for. They looked for a star in the heavens. Today, there are millions who are looking for something but I have no idea what they want. Some men want a beautiful woman, they get her and start looking for another. Some look for happiness in a house or certain automobile; once achieved they are still looking. Many spend aimless years searching the aisle of life opportunities but can't seem to find just what they are looking for. Solomon had the same dilemma. He spent his entire life searching for happiness. He tried education, music, partying, women, wealth, science, building construction and a plethora of hobbies, only to conclude in Ecclesiastes 12 that the only thing that really brings true happiness is to "fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." Even though they were non-believers, the astrologers knew what to look for because they studied the Word of God. What are you seeking? Matthew 6:33 says we should seek the kingdom of God first and make other things secondary. When we know what we are looking for, we have made the first step toward finding it.

THEY KNEW EXACTLY WHERE TO GO: The wise men saw the star and knew where to go! The headed for Bethlehem. The star did not shine a light straight to Bethlehem, the word of God pointed them to Bethlehem. What course should we take in life? Which way should we go? As one year ends and another looms on the horizon, where should we go? The spirit of God should be our compass. Paul wanted to minister in Asia Minor. It was an obvious choice for him because it was close and cost effective. Yet, the spirit of God led him into Macedonia where his ministry sky rocketed and spread. Phillip was led into the desert to minister. It was unpopulated. Yet one man came along riding in a chariot. That man was baptized and scholars believe started a movement that brought Christianity to Africa. We may not know where we should go in life or what we should do, but God knows. The spirit of God will tell us exactly where to go in life if we will follow him.

THEY KNEW WHAT TO DO ONCE THEY GOT THERE: The wise men knew where they were going, who they were looking for, and what to do once they arrived. They brought offerings and prepared to worship. There can be no real joy unless believers have learned to worship and praise the Lord with sincerity and truth. What to do once "we get there" is a problem that has plagued believers over the years. When Israel finally made it to the promised land, they spent years in frustration because they didn't know what to do when they arrived. Many African-Americans, newly freed from slavery had prayed so long to be free, when it finally arrived, many didn't know what to do and stayed with their former masters. What do we do once we have achieved some of the goals we have set for ourselves? If the wise men are example we should bring offerings and prepare to praise the Lord! Praise him for his goodness. Praise him for his mercy!

The Blessing Is On the Way!

Finally, brothers and sisters, this text reminds us that just because you haven't seen your star, doesn't mean the twinkle hasn't begun!

The star the wise men found shined bright in the night sky, but its twinkle began at least four years and possibly hundreds of years earlier.

Today, there are millions of believers who also searching for their own stars. Many are looking for answers to prayers and blessings. In their frustration there are many who have given up on God thinking their star will never shine; and their blessing will never come! Yet, no one should be completely frustrated if it appears that everyone's star is shining but yours, because the fact that your blessing has not arrived, does not mean it is not on the way.

If the birth of Christ has any real significance to believers it is that it reminds us in so many ways not to give up hope, help is on the way!

In the darkness of our silent nights, the stars give new life to our withering hopes!

It's tough to be in the dark, but it's even tougher when you can't see the stars! It's hard to see the stars, if there are clouds in the way. Clouds of doubt make it hard for us to believe that we have any opportunity to overcome.

When difficulty comes in the night, clouds overspread the sky and its hard to see the stars!

When death comes, it's hard to see the stars, that remind us that God shall wipe all their tears away!

When trouble comes, it's hard to see the stars, that remind us that "trouble don't last always!"

When tears well up in our eyes, it's hard to see the stars, that remind us that "weeping endures but a night, but joy comes in the morning!"

That' why when God was ready to send the world a message of hope, he moved the clouds out of the way! I heard the song writer declare, "It came upon a midnight clear, that glorious song of old" Another song writer said, "O holy night, the stars are brightly shining!"

The wise men didn't spend time searching for their own star in the heavens, they searched for his star. They put their lives on hold and traveled half way around the known world, looking for fulfillment of his star.

That should say to everyone today, that you can't find your star until you find his star! His star is what Moses talked about when he referred to a star that would rise up out of Jacob!

His star is what the wise men referred to when they said, we have seen his star in the East. His star is what John talked about in Revelation as the "root and offspring of David, the bright and morning."

A star is a self contained unit that generates its own light and energy. Unlike the moon that reflects light from the sun, which is a star, a star generates its own light.

His star represents the power of the Lord, independent of all other powers. Our God is able! A star is active 24 hours a day. You may not be able to see it, but it never stops shining!

His star is just like that. He never shining. He shines in the morning. He shines in the evening. He shines in the midnight. That's why David declared, "he that keepeth Israel neither slumbers nor sleeps."

That God for the bright and morning star!

His name is Jesus! Wonderful Counselor! Almighty God!

He was born in Bethlehem, but died on an Old rugged cross!

But Early Sunday morning, the clouds were rolled away and the world saw his star shining!

If you are struggling on the edge of night!
Put your trust in the man behind the star! His name is Jesus!

How Big is the Baby?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 24, 2000

SCRIPTURE: "And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn." Luke 2:7

Introduction

How much do you weigh when you were born? Were you a scrawny little thing, barely tipping the scales? Were you an average sized baby? Or, were you a larger than usual? One of the first questions that we usually asked about a new born child, is, "How big is the baby?" If we hear the baby that the baby was four pounds, we start to worry, six to seven pounds, we smile. At eight to nine pounds we put our hands over our mouths in disbelief. When we hear 10 pounds, we sit down. Everyone seems curious about the size of the baby.

While we know that the size of a baby at birth is not a sure sign of anything in the future, people are never-the-less curious. We have seen the scrawny baby grow up to be a strong man. We have seen the biggest babies grow up to be only averaged sized men and women. Birth weight is not a true indicator, but we want to know any way. Consider the folks in the mountain country who knew very little about the facts of life. The old farmer watched his pregnant wife get bigger and bigger, until she looked as if she would burst. When it came time to deliver they sent for the doctor who came in the black of night. The doctor told the farmer, to hold the light while he delivered the child. Soon the doctor delivered a bouncing baby boy. Then the doctor yelled, "You better hold that light down here again, then he produced a second baby boy. Then the doctor yelled, "You better hold that light down here again, then he produced a third baby boy. When the doctor called for the light a fourth time the farmer look at his lantern then said, "Doc, do you think you could do this in the dark, this light seems to be making them come out, one after the othern.'

Why do we celebrate the birth of a baby? They don't really do much. The kid just sort of lays there. Why do we make such a big deal out of babies? They can't walk, can't talk, can't even take care of themselves. Why do we make such a big deal out of their arrival? Why do we ask the question, "How big was the baby?" Perhaps because we want to believe in the baby's potential. Even though it doesn't always work out as we think, knowing how big the baby is, gives a mental snapshot of the future, at least at the present.

More than anything else, babies are bundles of potentiality. The potential is not always revealed in physical size. Samson must have been a big baby, he grew to be strongest man that every lived. Yet, David might have been a small baby, being the smallest of his brethren, not strong in appearance, yet it was David that killed Goliath, not his bigger, stronger brothers. We celebrate the birth of babies because of what they can be.

In the sense that babies have so much potential, that they change the people around them. Good parents recognize that they may be holding in their arms a future president, congresswoman, teacher, minister, or the one person that God has sent to the world to find a cure for cancer. Because babies represent so much potential, they change people. Good parents become active in church, because they realize the importance of a spiritual life and want to make sure that their babies get a solid spiritual foundation. Because of babies, life-styles change. Working habits are adjusted, romance, and sacrifices are made because we want to be sure that the potential we saw in our babies, the first day we held them in our arms, is realized.

In a manger in Bethlehem, a little baby was born, with great potential. He was just a little baby, kicking in the air, crying, wetting, burping, and warming his parents with toothless grins. He wasn't powerful. He didn't perform any tricks or do anything out of the ordinary. Yet shepherds stopped what they were doing and gathered at a cave like stable and celebrated the birth of a baby. A great, big, bundle of potentiality! It was the baby's potential that raised hopes. It was the idea that laying there, in that manger, was hope for the future, that brought everyone to their knees.

As Christians, we celebrate the birth of the Christ child, because that birth brought the world the potential for peace, joy, love and good will toward all men. He was just a little baby, laying in the manger, but his potential overshadowed the circumstances of his birth.

Exposition.

This text focuses on the birth of Christ, in a manger in Bethlehem.

Mary and Joseph came from Nazereth to Bethlehem to register to pay their taxes. It was a long and tedious journey on foot, but the couple arrived in Bethlehem, only to find that there were no rooms available for them in what served as hotels of their time. However, they were provided a chance to house themselves in a stable. Mary was obviously pregnant and considerably tired. Even a stable was considered a blessing at that moment.

That night the labor pains began. It was uncomfortable. The child moved inside her. As she groaned, it was if the angels in heaven heard her cries. They announced to shepherds, who were watching their flocks, that the hope of Israel was being born in a stable in Bethlehem. The shepherds came and bowed in the presence of the baby and its parents. They bowed at the potential of what God was going to do through this child for Israel.

The hope they saw in the Christ child was not aimless musing. It was grounded in promises made by God. In Isaiah 9:6-7, the prophet raised the nation's expectations when he said, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this."

Why we celebrate?

Today, there are some who might ask, why do we celebrate the birth of a child who was born over 2000 years ago. Why is the world in such a frenzy over something that happened so long ago? The answer today is the same as it was then, the birth of the Christ Child represents the hope that we will triumph over the difficulties of our times to achieve a better and brighter future. He was just a baby, but he was a little baby with big potential. Today, we are drawn to him for the same reasons... for the potential and hope that he represents for our lives. To many he represents the:

POTENTIAL TO REALIZE DREAMS: The presence of Christ in a believer's life, represents the potential to realize dreams. Possibilities are limitless. One of the major differences between adults and children is that adults place limits on what they can do in life and call it reality. Children have no limits. They dream of becoming astronauts, firemen, Presidents and mail carriers. They can dream because they accept the truth that all things are possible. The late Robert F. Kennedy represented this idealism when he said, "Some men see things as they are and ask why, I dream dreams of things that never were and ask, why not?" The birth of Christ inspires this kind of thinking because he said in Matthew 7:7-8, "Ask, and it shall be given you, seek and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: For everyone that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." It is through Christ that we realize our greatest potential. We have learned, that, "I can do all things through Christ which strengthens me."

POTENTIAL TO OVERCOME OBSTACLES: The Christ child fuels our hope that despite obstacles in our way, we shall over come. Believers stubbornly pursue goals and are not easily dissuaded. This is true because believers have an unwavering faith that with God, we can climb over, walk around or tunnel through any mountain in our way. We believe that if really gets down to it that God can and will literally will move mountains out of our way. The Christ child represents the embodiment of what the scriptures teach, that "no weapon formed against us shall prosper." This hope makes us bold! Some call us cocky because we walk up to the Red Sea of difficulty and expect it to roll back. We wander in our wilderness of trial and expect the Bread of Heaven to feed us until we want no more. When our enemies hide themselves within the safe and secure walls of Jericho and shoot arrows at us, we raise our voices to God in a shout and expect the walls to come tumbling down. The birth of the Christ Child inspires this kind of hope because he said we are blessed when we meet obstacles of persecution, trouble and difficulty and great is our reward in heaven.

POTENTIAL TO RE-CREATE OURSELVES: The Christ child fuels our desire to correct our mistakes and start again. Even the best person makes mistakes. It is expected. That's why pencils come with erasers, type writers come equipped with erasure ribbons and computers have spelling and grammar checkers. Mistakes are inevitable. Believers are encouraged by the birth of the Christ child because it means that we have the hope of forgiveness. Despite our best efforts, we often fall short of God's expectations. We often fail to do what we should do and then do poorly what little we do. What draws us to Christ is the opportunity to begin again. Not only is it an opportunity, but starting over is almost a requirement. He said, "Except a man be born again" he cannot begin life in the kingdom of God. We are inspired by the truth that believers who are in Christ are "new creatures." Old things are passed away and all things become new. The potential to begin again is exciting. It lifts the spirits and it provides us hope of a brighter future. The birth of the Christ child inspires this hope because we know that as a man and as the son of God, he looks beyond our faults and sees our needs.

How Big is the baby?

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider the answer to the question that was initially asked, "How big is the baby?" Every believer responds with the answer, he's big enough.

The fact that the little baby in the manger in Bethlehem was the son of God should have been enough, but there are still those that ask, "How big is the baby?" It is not a new question, but one that has been asked of God for many years, "Is thy God able?"

When the king prepared to throw the three Hebrew Boys into the fiery furnace, he asked, "Is thy God able to deliver thee?"

When Elijah challenged the prophets of Baal on Mt. Carmel, what was really being asked is, "How big is your God?"

How big was the baby in Bethlehem? We have no records of pounds and ounces, but all we know is that he was big enough!

He was big enough to feed starving masses and heal the sick and disheartened.

He was big enough to turn water into wine and walk upon the sea!

He was big enough to lift the scales from a blind man's eyes and call Lazarus from his tomb!

How big was the baby?

He is big enough to take all of my failures and turn them into successes!

He is big enough to take all of my shortcomings and turn them into opportunities!

He is big enough to take all of my weaknesses and turn them into strengths!

He is big enough to take all of my defeats and turn them into victories!

How big is the baby?

He is big enough to hold the whole world in his hands. I heard David say, "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof." The song writer must have heard him because he said, “He’s got the whole world in his hands! He’s got the little bitty babies in his hands!”

How big is the baby?

He’s big enough to love the whole world! John said, “For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosever believeth on him, should not perish but have everlasting life.”

He’s big enough to pick up an old rugged cross and carry it to Golgotha’s hill!

He’s big enough to die out on Calvary!

How big is the baby?

He’s so big, that early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

How big is the baby?

He’s big enough to give us a blessed presence and a bright future!

Traveling Directions

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 7, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "And he said unto the people, Pass on, and compass the city, and let him that is armed pass on before the ark of the LORD." Joshua 6:7 "And it came to pass at the seventh time, when the priests blew with the trumpets, Joshua said unto the people, Shout; for the LORD hath given you the city." Joshua 6:16

Introduction

Have you ever traveled in the wrong direction but thought you were right? Those who have planned trips, often take the time to map their course, plot their journey, select the best routes, check the roads for detours and delays and take every precaution. Sometimes, passengers sense that they are traveling in the wrong direction but are rebuffed when they attempt to correct the driver. It's hard for anyone who thinks they have their route perfectly planned to admit that, despite their best efforts, they are still traveling in the wrong direction. We sense it when we notice that the road signs and land marks familiar to this course are missing. The foolish will continue to drive in the wrong direction, hoping the road will connect to something, somewhere. The wise will reroute themselves, turn around and put themselves back on course.

There is a reason for everything and a predictable result for every decision. That's the point a Sunday School teacher was trying to make to her class of seven year olds when she told them the story of Moses leading the people in the wilderness. Moses, the teacher said, led the Israelites for 40 years in the wilderness. The teacher asked the question, "What was the reason Moses led the people around in circles for 40 years?" One boy stood and answered, "Because God wanted them to appreciate the promised land once they made it there." Another girl, said, God wanted to let the people know that had to depend on him." The teacher was real pleased with the answers until one little boy waved his hand and stood with this answer, "Moses carried the people around in circles for 40 years, because he wouldn't stop and ask directions!" —That was the reason he saw.

Have you been moving around in circles and getting nowhere? Has it frustrated you? Moving in circles is not a real problem, as long as God has given you direction to move in circles. Often airplane passengers hear the pilot announce just before landing that the plane is in a holding pattern until a run way clears or conditions permit the plan to land. In these circumstances, the plane flies in circles but its circling pattern is sanctioned by the tower, for the purpose of insuring a safe landing.

In any given year, God gives his people moving directions. For Israel, those instructions came through the forming of a stationary and moving pillar of fire by night and cloud by day. For Elijah the directions came as a still voice. For Jonah the directions were heard clearly even though he lingered in the belly of a great fish. The believer's quest is to make sure that any direction taken is godly inspired, no matter how others think. When God inspires our march, we are assure to reach our destination without harm.

As Christians, we strive to follow God's directions every day. As a new year approaches we ask him for guidance to plan our route, then check along the way to make sure we haven't made a wrong turn, then drive forward at a steady pace keeping our heavenly destination in sight!

Exposition

This passage focuses on God's direction to Israel as they moved into the promised land and faced the armed fortresses of Jericho.

The Israelites were a people who, for the most part, were led by the spirit of God. For 40 years they had conditioned themselves to move at God's command. In the wilderness, they moved at an instant whenever the pillar of cloud that led them by day lifted itself and moved. Even if the pillar, which was fire by night, began to move in the middle of the night, they were quick to move. It did not matter when God would tell them to move, the people stood ready to move instantly at God's command.

They never knew where God would take them, when he would tell them to move, or how long they would be traveling. They simply moved at his command.

This text is one of a series of commands that God gave to a new generation of believers. They had heard the old stories about how God moved for their parents and grandparents. Now God prepared to demonstrate his directing power to a totally new generation.

After the death of Moses, the people no longer wandered in the wilderness. God gave them a brand new direction. The first route that God gave Joshua was short and simple. The command was to move into Jordan and occupy it. It was a simple directive until the people recognized that there was a wide, swollen river, that separated them from the land of promise. However impossible it seemed, the people prepared to march right through the river at God's command. However, as soon as the feet of the priests touched the water, the river waters rolled back and they crossed on dry land.

Once in Jordan, this text finds God giving the people another impossible, even foolish sounding set of directions. They faced the impossible task of driving out the people of Jericho who were fortified behind high walls of security. Instead of telling them to prepare for war the Lord gave a very ridiculous sounding directive. He told them to march around the city without making a sound, with the sole exception that seven priests would blow upon trumpets. The sound of these trumpets marked God's declaration of war against the people of God. They had nothing to do except follow

God's command and circle the city.

They were to march around for six days. However, on the seventh day, they were told to march around the city seven times, after which they were to let out a great victory shout.

It sounded strange, but the people followed God's direction. Circling the city every day and then seven times on the last day. Every day they were probably taunted by their enemies who thought them a pitiful, defenseless mob of untrained, unskilled, and more importantly, unarmed peasants, seeking to steal their land.

On the last day they were probably taunted even more by the by the residents of Jericho for their ridiculous appearing act. Whomever lead them could have given them better directions! An army of over 600,000 men attacking at full force from every side would have a fighting chance against Jericho. Had they been directed to strategically attack the city from various vantage points with foot soldiers and cavalrymen, showers of arrows and flaming oil drenched stones, they might have an even better chance. Any number of directions would seem more plausible than simply marching around the city. It seemed like an open and shut case of weak leadership and bad directions. Yet, while their enemies laughed, the Lord moved in the shouts of the people and the walls of the city came tumbling down.

Their destination was sure. Their method was unorthodox, but they followed God's directions in the new land and found victory and something to shout about

Directions for the journey

Today, believers face similar dilemmas. Entering a new year there are many obstacles that lie ahead. They are formidable, overwhelming, and burdensome. As believers prepare to travel into this new year, each should adopt the attitude of the Israelites who also wandered into the unknown. Each person should resolve to receive his or her traveling directions from God, regardless to how those directions may be received by their neighbors and friends. Those who travel into the new year will probably adopt one of four attitudes:

TRAVELING WRONG AND THINKING YOU' ARE RIGHT: There are many that will enter the new year traveling wrong, but thinking they are right. At the very least, they will convince themselves there is no problem with the route they have chosen. Last year, these are the ones who convinced themselves that their absence from worship, bible study, and active participation in the Lord's ministries was excusable. They reasoned in their mind that they were serving a greater good through their political service, community involvement, fraternal commitments, attention to family needs and personal financial growth. With this mindset, they travel at a full speed last year, without checking a road sign or a map to consider whether they route they had chosen carried them closer to God or further away. They slept well, convinced that God would not hold them accountable for the lack of commitment because, after all, they served a greater good. They believed themselves to be traveling right. Proverbs 16:25 says, "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." The litmus test is to question each route decision to ask, whether or not this decision takes us closer to God or further away. If we are children of God any direction that takes us further from the ideal that God desires, is a wrong direction. It is a way that "seemeth" right to us, but it will take us to damnation.

TRAVELING RIGHT AND THINKING YOU ARE WRONG: There are many are considering new directions in the new year, operating under the misguided notion that they were traveling wrong in the year's past. These are those who have considered the prosperity of unbelievers around them who seem to flourish traveling without making the spiritual material sacrifices of the believer's life. They have evens seen members of the church who seem to do well without attending worship regularly, paying a tithe, attending Sunday School or even maintaining a regular prayer life. There are some who have been paying close attention to their spiritual development over the years who have become frustrated at the relative success of so many people who are not following God's direction. Their success is so glaring that many begin to think that they are traveling wrong, even though they know they are traveling right. Someone today, is considering joining the band of the unrighteous because it appears that their direction is more rewarding. It appears that they are being blessed without singing in the choir, coming to Sunday School, participating in youth activities, or serving in church ministries. If they can be blessed without being fully committed someone has decided that this is an easier, less demanding route to take. Yet the word of God addresses this feeling in Psalm 37:1, "Fret not thyself because of evildoers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity." In 37:8 we are warned to, "fret not thyself in any wise" or not to even consider following the example of the ungodly or even that of believers who are not fully committed to kingdom building. They are traveling in the wrong the direction and shall "soon be cut down." Those who are one the right path, stay the course and received God's ultimate reward.

TRAVELING WRONG AND KNOWING YOU ARE WRONG: There are many who traveled in the wrong direction last year and knew it was wrong. These are the individuals who have seen the road map, know the route needed to get to their destination, but have traveled the opposite direction knowingly. Why would a person travel opposite the direction they want to go? There are some like Jonah, who know which direction they should travel but have their own reason for avoiding the route. Instead of going to Ninevah, Jonah tried to travel on the right ship with full knowledge that he was traveling in the wrong direction. Like Jonah, there are many today who have their own reasons for traveling in the wrong direction. Each reason they give seems justifiable and satisfactory to them. In Romans 7:20, Paul explained how a person can do wrong, knowing full well that it is wrong. He said, "Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." He said the presence of sin in any person's life pushes them to do wrong, with the full knowledge that it is wrong. Paul said the only way such a person can redirect themselves is to allow Christ to come into their lives. He will make each person a new creature.

Traveling Right and Knowing You Are Right!

Finally, brothers and Sisters, there is a word for the last group. This is the group of believers that is traveling right and knows that it is traveling right!

It must be frustraing to be traveling wrong but thinking you're right.

It must be equally frustrating to be traveling right and thinking you're wrong

It must be debilitating to travel the wrong direction and know you are traveling wrong.

If these scenarios are frustrating, then think of the joy of the man or woman who is traveling right and knows that he is traveling right.

The man or woman that is traveling right is confident, and assured regardless to the uneasiness of those around him. That's why the believer sings, "Blessed Assurance, Jesus is mine oh what a fortaste of Glory devine. Heir of Salvation, Purchase of God, born of spirit and washed in his blood!" The believer on the right road declares, "This is my story this is my song, praising my savior all the day long."

The man who is traveling right and knows that he is right can say with Job in Job 19:25, "I know that my redeemer liveth."

Those who travel on the roadways of life must pay attention to the roadsigns because they let you know when you are traveling in the right direction!

Every believer needs know how to read the signs of life.

HIGHWAY SIGN lets you know the number of the highway upon which you are traveling then lets you know whether traveling North or South. It's possible to be on the right highway but be traveling in the wrong direction!

YOU MUST UNDERSTAND THE SIGNS because the numbers have a meaning. If you are traveling highway 20 and see signs reading "220" or "620" those first digits indicate there is a bypass coming. This bypass will carry you around an area.

An even numbered bypass number like 220 or 620 means that that the bypass will hook you up on the the same highway, in the same direction on the other side!

An odd numbered bypass number like 320 or 520 means that the bypass will carry you around but it will probably carry you in a different direction on a different highway.

Somebody is worried that last year life seem to have thrown them into a loop. They are worried because it seemed that they have been trying to live right but they are going around in circles.

If God has put you on a bypass, if you're living right, that by pass will hook up on the other side, on the same highway, going in the same direction!

WATCH THE SPEED LIMIT because if you travel the wrong speed, you can hurt yourself! Those who know travel know you can get a ticket for going to fast, but you can also get a ticket for going to slow! The Holy Spirit is a speed cop. If you're going to fast, he'll slow you down. If you're going to slow, he'll speed you up!

LOOK FOR A PLACE TO REST if you are tired. If you watch the signs you see one that says there is food, fuel and place to lay your head.

On the highway the children look for the Golden Arches. If there is a McDonald's, there's going to be a Burger King. If there's a McDonald's and a Burger King there's going to be a gas station!

Every Sunday morning, believers traveling the highway of life, look high in the air and look for the sign of the Cross and they make a pit stop!

"Somebody told me that you serve food for the soul..bread of heaven, bread of heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

"Somebody told me that I can rest my soul here, ...I came to Jesus as I was, weary wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad!"

The children of Israel marched around in a circle seven times on that last day, but when they sent up a shout, the walls came tumbling down!

When God blesses us, we have something to shout about!

When we get close to our destination, we have something to shout about!

If you've been on the road a long time and you get close to home, every time you see a new road sign showing you are 100, then 55, then 20 miles from home, you feel like shouting!

I don't know about you, but when I think about the year ahead, I feel a shout coming on!

When I think about everything God's going to do this year, I feel a shout coming on!

Every time I think about Jesus, how bore an old rugged cross for me; I feel a shout coming on!

Every time I think how he died out on Calvary, I feel a shout coming on!

Every time I think about him staying in the grave for three long days and nights! I feel a shout coming on!

But every time I think about Early Sunday morning, how arose from the dead, I feel a shout coming!

Stay on the battlefield!

Keep your hands in God's hand!

No matter how high the walls!

Send up a shout and the walls will come tumbling down!

I Have A Dream

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the New Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 14, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "And they said one to another, Behold, this dreamer cometh" Genesis 37:19

Introduction

Do you have a dream? Our dreams are the manifestation of our hopes and wishes. They represent the positive pictures that we have painted about our futures. We dream of business success, professional achievement, family unity, peace, and spiritual power. We dream of victory! We dream of history making accomplishments. We dream of lazy sunny days on the fishing pond, when the fish are biting and the weather is fine. We dream of walking on the beach with love of our lives and sharing eternal moments. If our dreams represent our positive thoughts, nightmares would represent our worse fears. Our nightmares paint dark, muddied pictures of failure, defeat, death, poverty, gloom and doom. Every person has both dreams and nightmares, depending on our statue, those dreams may go beyond the ordinary to the extraordinary.

In 1963, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. delivered his famous, "I Have A Dream" speech in front of over 200,000 people at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C. He spoke of his personal dream, it was so broad and sweeping in its appeal that any of the millions of Negro Americans that watched him on television could have easily substituted themselves each time he said, "I have a dream!"

"I have a dream that the State of Mississippi, a desert state sweltering in the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and love."

"I have a dream that one day my four little children will live in a nation where they will be judged, not by the color their skin but by the content of their character!"

"I have a dream, that one day the sons of former slaves and the former slave owners will sit down together at the table of brotherhood..."

Martin Luther King's expression of his dream for America, was instantly embraced by millions because it represented the hopes and wishes of millions in America, both Black and White.

What was different about Dr. King's dream and our dream? What was different about the dreams of Ghandi, Thoreau, or Emerson? What made their dreams different from our dreams? Ghandi dreamed of a united India, free of oppression. Thoreau, dreamed of a liberated individual who marched to the beat of a different drummer. Emerson, dreamed of the ideal balance between man and nature at peace with each other. Each dreamed great dreams that are the subject of study and review by countless generations.

But what makes their dreams differ from our dreams?

Were they any different from the dreams of your great-great grandfather, who may have sat in the middle of a cotton field, with sweat dripping from his brow, callouses on his hand and scars on back, dreaming!

If you would have asked great-great grandpa, what he was thinking, he too would probably say, "I have a dream!"

Ask, Great-grandma, who scrubbed floors through a depression, and washed the dirty laundry of millionaires for pennies as her beautiful face became rubbery and dark, and her cold black hair turned silver and grey. Ask grandma, and she'll probably say, "I have a dream!"

Martin Luther King said his dream was deeply rooted in the American dream, "we hold these truths to be self evident that all men are created equal and endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights, among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

But great grandpa, didn't know anything about Thoreau or Emerson. He didn't know anything about the philosophy of Locke or the noble writings of Benjamin Franklin or Thomas Jefferson. But grandpa could say, "I have a dream!" that is deeply rooted in the Word of God!

I have a dream that one day that the first shall be last and last shall be first!

I have a dream that the bottom rail will one day come to the top!

I can hear great grandpa, breathlessly mutter, I have a dream that one day "Ethiopia shall stretch forth her wings and fly" again!

Dr. King, Thoreau, Emerson and great-great grandpa dream dreams, but they were not personal dreams. Their dreams had grown beyond themselves and embraced entire nations, and even the entire world. When they dreamed, they dreamed an all inclusive dream that dwarfed themselves and embraced the hopes and futures of all man kind.

While we dream of a house, a car, a job and a successful career for ourselves. They dreamed of a nation that provides opportunities for everyone to have a house, a car, a job, and a successful career without artificial barriers. Our dreams are generally for us. They dreamed the big picture and brought us all into the circle.

As Christians, we also dream. Like great grandpa, our dreams are rooted in our faith in God, that day will come when a person's color will be an important distinction but not a discriminating factor. Like Martin Luther King, we too can say, "I have a dream!"

Exposition

This text focuses on a description of Joseph by his brothers, as the dreamer.

Joseph was the favorite son of his father Jacob. That favorite son status often drew the envy of his brothers who were jealous of his position. Joseph's position became dangerously imperiled when he shared his dreams with them. The dreams exacerbated the problem because they depicted the brothers in a surbordinate role to Joseph, bowing down to him and treating him as their lord Dreams in the Old Testament are rarely mentioned, except in the Books of Daniel and Genesis. In these instances, dreams are characterized as instruments used by God to depict future states. God used a dream to give Solomon an opportunity to ask for anything he wished in 1 Kings 3:5. He also used dreams to speak to the Babylonian King about his ultimate fall from grace. Prophets were often given directions in dreams.

In the New Testament, references to dreams were very few. It appears that The New Testament placed very little importance on dreams. They were certainly mentioned much less than in the Old Testament. There are only six references and one citation to dreams or dreamers. It is significant that all these references are in the book of Matthew and still more significant that Jesus nowhere refers to dreams, evidently attaching little if any importance to them as instruments by which God would speak to individuals. The references in Matthew are confined entirely to warnings and announcements. The one citation is in Acts 2:17 which referred to an Old Testament prophecy about old men dreaming dreams and young men seeing visions.

While dreams were diminished as a communication tool of choice, there were grand visions in both the Old and New Testaments. Prophets painting sweeping pictures of the destruction of Israel, as well as its restoration. Jesus didn't use dreams, but spoke of the Kingdom of God and the Kingdom of Heaven in a way that painted a futuristic picture of the advanced state of all believers.

Many of the dreams of the Old Testament were personal. The Butler's dream, interpreted by Joseph was personal. The baker's dream was personal. They both dealt with the personal fate of individuals and focused on them. The biblical trend seems to suggest that God gradually shifted from speaking "in" dreams to "giving" dreams or visions. That is, grand visions for the good of the people were given to the people, but not necessarily in a dream. Thus, Ezekiel was carried to a valley of dry bones, in a vision. The vision was not about Ezekiel but a broader, grander picture than simply one man in a valley of bones. It was about the restoration of an entire nation.

The Kingdom of God characterized by Christ is bigger than one man. It involves the whole world. It also involves a dream powered by the spirit of God. As such, the dream of transforming the world by one carpenter and a rag tag collection of unlearned men from the most non-productive region of the nation, could be realized. It could be realized, not because they wanted to make a name for themselves, but because what they wanted was the same as what God wanted and he helped make it happen.

The great biblical leaders had visions, rather than dreams. Those visions moved an entire nation to believe in trust in God more fully and freely.

Personal dreams

Today, most Americans have a dream. Yet, most of our dreams rarely extend beyond petty wish lists that are purely "self" oriented.

MANY HAVE A CHILD'S DREAM. Today there are many who have dreams, but they are the child's estimate of dreams. They are personal and self centered.

Ask any child, to stand and give their own I have a dream speech and it may sound something similar to this:

"I have dream. I have a dream that one day I'll be living in a mansion with servants waiting on me hand and foot!"

"I have a dream that one day I will be flossing gold chains on my neck, diamonds on my fingers, and gold on my grill"

"I have a dream that my four little children will be banking so big that the whole world will go bling bling!"

"I have a dream that one day we'll be able to live out the true meaning of freedom, which means freedom to party and rock the house!"

"I have dream that all of God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics will join and sing the words of that Old Negro classic, "Shake it fast! Shake it Fast! Thank hip hop and Mystikal I can shake it Fast!"

Such dreams are not the exclusive property of the young. There are many adults whose dreams are equally personal and rarely extend beyond themselves.

GODLESS DREAMS STAY PERSONAL: Our dreams remain petty until God gets in the picture. Without God we dream of a turkey on the table. When God gets involved we dream of the day when everyone gets something to eat. Without God we dream of having a comfortable home. When God gets into our lives, we dream of the day when every person who does not have a roof over their heads, will have some place to call home! Without God, we strive to advance ourselves. When God gets in the mix we dream of the day when everyone shares the same opportunity to advance and achieve. Without God, we feel that we have failed if we do not achieve ourselves, but with God, we consider ourselves successful if we played a part, even in small part, in helping the dream become a reality.

RISK IS ESSENTIAL TO THE DREAM: Those who believe in a dream are willing to assume a certain amount of risk to make it happen. Even though a family may not know what the next 30 years will bring, many risk their financial futures when they sign a 30 year mortgage to buy a house. Risk is essential to the dream. A young man who dreams of becoming the MVP in the super bowl is willing to risk the prospect of breaking a leg, dislocating a shoulder or being paralyzed in quest of that dream. Those whose dreams are personal are only willing to risk that which is essential to accomplishing their personal dreams. Those whose dreams reach beyond that which is purely personal, risk more. A parent or grandparent that dips into their own retirement savings to sustain a child, places their own security at risk. They do so because their dream reaches beyond themselves and embraces their family. Those who promote dreams beyond the relative safety of personal pursuits assume greater risks. Thus, every person that strives to change the community, or the world, also assumes the risk of defamation, incarceration, or assassination in one of its many forms.

Those whose dreams are personal, usually find it difficult to risk anything for dreams that are ideological such as freedom and justice. Yet, these are the ideals that have changed the world. Those who promoted them believed in them so much that they would place their own safety in jeopardy to achieve them.

Martin Luther King once said each person must search for that one something that he is willing to die for. If there is nothing that we are willing to die for, then we are not "fit to live." What we are willing to die for indicates the extent of our dreams. Many will risk death to protect our television set from a burglar, but we would not risk jail to protest a civil injustice. Some would risk death to protect our child, but not the nameless children of others. Whether the dream is global or personal, risk is essential to its fulfillment.

Dreaming bigger than ourselves

Finally, brothers and sisters, I suggest that every believer must dream dreams that go beyond themselves and embrace the kingdom of God.

One secret to happiness is to lose yourself in a cause that is greater than yourself. While helping others find themselves, we find ourselves.When we find ourselves, we find God!

That's why the song writer wrote, "If I can help somebody as I pass along then my living will not be in vain! If I can cheer somebody with a word or song, then my living shall not be in vain."

Powerful things begin to happen when a man with a dream, hooks up with the Lord!

The miraculous begins to happen when a woman with a vision, allows the Lord to get in the picture!

When God gets in your dreams, they become so overpowering that you rise above your inadequacies.

Paul had a vision of carrying the gospel message to Macedonia! He pursued that dream on three dangerous missionary journeys despite having personal problems of his own. He asked the Lord, three times to solve his personal illness, but each time the Lord answer, "My Grace is sufficient!"

Some parent today, is trying to make a dream happen for their children, but is frustrated at all of the difficulties along the way! I hear God's answer, "My grace is sufficient!"

Some grandparent today is saying, "I have a dream!" It's not for me, but I want my family to be secure and safe!" But encroaching age seems to slow down my pace! I hear God's answer, "My grace is sufficient!"

The grace of God makes dreams happen!

It’s the grace of God that has brought our families across the Red Sea of legal segregation!

It’s the grace of God that has brought our people through the wilderness of second class citizenship!

It’s the grace of God that has caused many of the barriers against opportunity to come down!

It’s the grace of God that has brought us from slavery to our present state!

It was God’s grace, that picked me up and turned me around!

It was God’s grace, that planted my feet on solid ground!

One evening, 2000 years ago, God’s grace picked up an old rugged cross and marched up the tear stained trail to Calvary!

God’s grace was buried in a borrowed tomb!

But early Sunday morning ..God’s grace arose from the grave!

Food For The Journey

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 21, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "And as he lay and slept under a juniper tree, behold, then an angel touched him, and said unto him, Arise and eat. 6 And he looked, and, behold, there was a cake baken on the coals, and a cruse of water at his head. F132 And he did eat and drink, and laid him down again. 7 And the angel of the LORD came again the second time, and touched him, and said, Arise and eat; because the journey is too great for thee." 1 Kings 19:5-7

Introduction

Have you ever packed food for a long journey? What did you pack? Often when we take long journeys by automobile or train, we may carry food stuffs along with us. The items we carry are designed to tide us over until we reach our destination or a restaurant. Sometimes, drivers are armed with a variety of snacks, juices and water for the journey as well. Sometimes sandwiches are prepared for picnics at rest areas. It's even good time to put left overs to use as well. We generally consider the length of the journey and stock pile enough food to make to our primary rest stop.

Not long ago African-American families planning long trips across country packed considerable amounts of food for the journey. Racial segregation made the prospect of stopping at restaurants and cafeterias none existent. McDonald's and Burger King did not exist. To compensate, many families fried large boxes of chicken, wrapped in aluminum foil. Large pickle jars were filled with ice water and few fruits were sacked for the journey. Along the long bumpy roads, fried chicken became a gourmet. The pickle jar of water was usually passed from one person to another. Somehow, just as the last piece of chicken was consumed, the family was pulling in the drive way of its destination. Such was the nature of preparing for the long journey over land.

How do we prepare for our life's journey into a new direction? What do we pack? How do we insure enough of the essentials to carry us where we need to go? Every believer is on a journey that is long and meandering. Without the power of God to carry us and motivate us, many have found it impossible to make even the shortest journey. He is the energy source. He is the power! Without him our journey comes to a screeching halt.

As Believers, we've come to recognized that our life journey needs God's grace to sustain it. We need the power of God to refresh us and nourish us. Our prayer is that God will always stay close to us every step of the way.

Exposition

This text focuses on Elijah as he prepared for the journey with food and drink.

Elijah was one of the great prophets of the Old Testament. Perhaps the greatest moment in his life is epitomized by his challenge of the prophets of Baal atop Mt. Carmel. Elijah was the prophet of record during the reign of King Ahab and his wicked queen Jezebel. Jezebel worshipped an idol God named Baal and influenced her husband, the king, to do the same. This displeased God, who moved Elijah to challenge Jezebel and Ahab. On numerous occasions, Elijah went before the queen and pronounced judgment on the royal couple's wicked ways. Obviously, she was not pleased. A unit of the king's soldiers was sent to arrest Elijah, but the great miracle worker, called down fire from heaven and consumed them at God's command.. Jezebel threatened Elijah with death. It is an understatement to say that she hated him.

In a great contest on Mt. Carmel, Elijah completely humiliated the prophets of Baal. He challenged the false prophets to get their God to answer them by answering from heaven with a fire that would consume an animal sacrifice. Despite the dancing, wailing and pleading of the Baal prophets, there was no answer. When his turn came, Elijah quietly called on God and he immediately answered with fire from heaven that consumed the sacrifice as requested.

Afterwards, Elijah became a hunted man. He won a great victory on Mt. Carmel, but he was also a defeated man. He was tired of running and was fatigued. He laid himself by a Juniper tree and simply hid from Jezebel. He cried as he hid under the Juniper bush, "Lord, I have had enough. It was bad enough facing four hundred priests of Baal but when this one woman gets after me, that is too much." She was threatening his life. "Lord, I have had enough - take my life," . For a while a raven brought him food and he quenched his thirst from water in a brook.

Yet, while he retreated God sent an angel to bring him food to eat and water to drink. He was awakened by the angelic voice to the words "Airse and Eat." On a second occasion, the angel provided him with food to eat again. This time the angel noted that Elijah should eat because the journey ahead of him was great. For Elijah,the journey ahead was to rediscover the power of God within himself. The man who had called down fire from heaven was hiding under a bush. His journey was the journey of self discovery. Elijah ate as commanded. The strength from that food and drink carried him 40 days. At the end of the 40 day journey, hiding in a cave he rediscovered that God does not always move through earthquake, fire, and thunder - but many times through the still, small voice of a committed spirit and dedicated heart.

God knew what was ahead for Elijah. He could not have made it without the power of God supplying him. The food and drink he received represented the power of God. It was under that power that he was able to complete the journey.

The Journey Ahead

Like Elijah many believers today had an eventful year last year. We had a few mountain top experiences in which we tasted victory. There were also times when we saw ourselves in retreat under our own personal Juniper tree. While we were talked about and abused, threatened and challenged, God sustained us and fed us, out of his own hand. While we reflect upon the past with nostalgia, there is still a journey ahead. There are mountains to be climbed and rivers that must be crossed. That journey will require strength. It will require more strength than we have to offer. Believers who are preparing to make the journey into the future must be prepared spiritually. The road ahead may be a road filled with challenges. Like Elijah, it could be the road to self discovery. At any point it will require spiritual nourishment to make the distance.

Food for the Journey

Nutrition experts have divided the food groups into five categories and arranged them into a pyramid that represents the best way to eat and remain healthy. While the nutritionist categorized food into five areas (The old wheel used four groups which promoted variety) there are actually six sections of the pyramid. The smallest, nonessential items are located at the top and the most essential items occupy the broad base at the bottom. These groups are remarkably similar to the nourishment the spirit person within us needs to sustain the journey.

JUNK FOODS: At the top of the food pyramid are junk foods. They are not considered a food group at all. They contain fats, oils and sweets. They have a tendency to produce temporary energy surges but contribute little to the overall health of the individual. Candy, chips and most snack foods fit into this category. There are many believers whose spiritual lives are maintained by junk food experiences. In these experiences they get just enough to get a small surge, but nothing sufficient to maintain them. These are those who attend Sunday School but arrive in the last 10 minutes before dismissal. They attend worship but arrive only in time for the surge, skipping the devotion and offering. . They get a rush for the moment, but not enough to sustain them on a long journey. Junk foods are placed at the top of the pyramid with the indication that they should be avoided, or at the least used sparingly.

MILK AND MEAT: The first level of the food pyramid are milk and meat food items.These include, milk, cheese, yogurt, meat, fish, eggs, etc. In the spiritual sense they are also the beginning level of spiritual nutrition. Milk experiences are those that are easy to digest, don't require must digestive work and are easy to swallow. That's the level in which we learn bible stories and learn to sing songs and participate in the ritual of worship. In 1 Corinthians 3:2 Paul said, "I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able." Thus, he indicated that those who are new to the faith are nourished first with milk then with meat. First we learn to read the bible, then we learn to study the bible. First we learn to say the Lord's prayer then we learn to pray for ourselves. First we learn to hear the gospel then we learn to live the Gospel. Both are needed to sustain the believer on life's journey.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES: On the food pyramid, it is suggested that it is better for us to have more fruits and vegetables than milk and meats. They are packed with the necessary vitamins and nutrition to ward off disease and promote immune system resistance to illness. In the spiritual life, fruits and vegetables take on special significance. The three Hebrew Boys, locked in a Babylonian jail, chose only to eat vegetables and refused food from the kings table. They chose obedience to God and faith in his promises, rather than submission to the will of the King. Obedience and faith are certainly two elements that every believer needs to make the journey ahead. Like the Hebrew Boys, many have discovered that it is better to obey God rather than man. Likewise it important for every believer to exhibit the fruit of the spirit. Galatians 5:22-23 says, "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." These are essential elements for the journey; without them, what should be a simple pilgrimage becomes of slow march to destruction.

BREADS & CEREALS: The largest part of any day's food consumption is represented by the base of the food pyramid which includes breads, cereals, rice, pastas, etc. While junk food is only sparingly recommended even discouraged and, milk and meat requires 2-3 servings a day; and fruit and vegetables require 3-5 servings; breads require 8-11 servings per day. In the mind of the nation's nutritionists, breads are needed most to nourish the human body and maintain health. Ironically, it is also bread that is needed to sustain the spiritual life of believers. Jesus said in John 6:35, ".. I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." The presence of Christ in a believer's life is essential to satisfying life's hungers. He meets all needs and satisfies all desires. In John 6:51 Jesus expands on this characterization by saying, "I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world."

Body and the Blood

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that those who wish to nourish themselves spiritually, must arise and eat of the body and the blood!

Those who intend to make the spiritual journey must be prepared spiritually. That means they must acquire the power that is generated by the presence of God in our lives.

When Christ met with his disciples he told them to host a memorial meal in which they reaffirmed their commitment to kingdom building and remembered his sacrifice. He said the bread would represent his body and the wine would represent his blood.

The two elements represent the sum total of the believer's commitment to serve and glorify God. When believers eat the memorial meal, they indicate that they are in full communion with God.

While the nutrionists say there are five food groups, the word of God only gives us two for spiritual person and that is the body and blood!

Without the body and blood there would be no:

-Regeneration available for the ruined; COMPASSION available for the condemned

-Deliverance for the depressed; Cleansing available for the corrupt

-Strength available for the weak; REST available for the weak and tired!

Every now and then you get a little tired, but when you start to think about the body and the blood and the goodness of the Lord, you start to sing the words of that old spiritual, "I don't feel no ways tired, I don't believe he brought me this far to leave me!"

The body and the blood represent the presence of the Lord. If we are going to make this journey we must do so in the presence of the Lord!

If you take the Lord with you, your greatest enemies can be conquered!

If you take the Lord with you, your greatest obstacles can be overcome!

If you take the Lord with you, your gravest doubts can be overcome!

If you take the Lord with you, your heaviest burdens can be lifted!

If you take the Lord with you, your highest mountains can be climbed!

Nutritionist say that even though we eat from the five food groups we can stay in shape for life's journey if we get a little exercise. They say you don't have to jog! You don't have to run! But if we just walk a little while it will help!

The body and the blood makes you want a little exercise. For I heard Isaiah declare, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up on wings as eagles, they shall run and not get weary they shall walk and not faint!"

If you want to make this journey, you got to walk with the King!

Storms may rise, but you got to walk!....

Winds may blow, but you got to walk!

All along this tedious journey, tell the world, I've got to walk with the King!

Who died out on Calvary!

Who arose Early Sunday morning!

I've got to walk with the king!

Big Victories Need Little Plays

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 28, 2001

SCRIPTURE:" His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord." Matthew 25:23

Introduction

To win a game, which is more important, making one or two big plays that win or a succession of well-executed little plays? Depending upon who is asked, there are many that will argue that only the big plays count. No matter how well contested a match up may appear, the big play supporters argue that it is the team that is able to make the big plays that walks away the victor. Conversely, there are those who say the little plays count most. Without the little plays that keep the contest so close that one or two big plays can make the difference there would be no big play victory. Which is the most important will continue to be debated in athletic circles for generations as strategies are outlined for contests.

Any athletic contest, especially between champions, will match up great players who are able to make the plays that count. Many of the plays that count will bring cheers from the audience. There will be scores of others that won't be seen by every spectator, shown on the big screen or flashed back in an instant replay, but the play counted. This year, both the New York Giants and Baltimore Ravens have earned the right to play for the most cherished trophy in American sports. Both teams may be deserving of the prize, yet only one will walk away as the victor. Only one team's members are the champions. To become the champion of the Super Bowl one team must win a game that will consist of about 150 offensive and defensive plays combined between the two teams. Add in plays made by special teams on both sides and there will be between 175 and 200 total plays that will determine the winner. Most of those plays will be little plays. They won't be talked about in the years to come. They won't even be remembered. About five percent of the plays of the big game will be the big plays . . . these will be talked about the most!

We remember the big plays. In Super Bowl 34, Isaac Bruce caught a 73 yard bomb that beat the Titans near the end of the game. That was a big play! In Super Bowl 23, late in the game Joe Montana threw the ball to a leaning John Taylor in the end zone to win that game! That was a really big play! Those are the plays we remember! Those are the ones that will be replayed on ESPN and NFL films for years to come!

There will be many little plays that seem insignificant throughout the game. These are the plays that set up the field goals, or hold the opposing team to a margin where a single touchdown, interception or successfully thrown pass can make the difference. These are the plays that mark the slow march to the end zone through grunts, growls, sweat and pain! They may not make the replays, but without them there would be no replays because there would be no big plays to watch!

Every believer is striving to win a victory for Christ. What is important? Making the big plays or focusing on individual effort? When believers focus on giving God their absolute best, they create a succession of small plays that make it possible for a big play to happen! It's a little play to work with a difficult child. When that difficult child grows up to be the one who finds the cure for cancer, he will make the big play, but the little plays of his childhood made it possible.

As Christians, we recognize that if we are faithful over a few things, that God will make us the master over many things.

Exposition

This text focuses on a parable Jesus gave that emphasized the importance of the faithful execution of the smallest gifts.

The truth was emphasized in a story Jesus told about a traveler who left a portion of his fortune entrusted to three of his servants. He gave the first, five talents. To a second, he gave two talents. The third received only one talent. When the traveler left, two of the men became industrious with their talents, (a talent was a large amount of money.) However, the third man protected his talent but did nothing with it.

When the traveler returned, he asked for an account of how the talents had been employed. The first reported that he had taken his five talents and used them so well in the marketplace that he now had ten talents. The second reported an equally rosy answer. He had taken his two talents and doubled them to four. However, the third said he was afraid he would lose his talent so he dug a whole in the ground and buried it. He had not lost what was given to him, but he had not used it either.

The traveler was pleased with the actions of the first two. He praised them for being faithful servants, using what they had been given in an industrious way. Even the servant who only had two talents was praised, because he doubled what was given to him. He told them that because they had been faithful over a few things, that he planned to entrust them with even more. The third servant drew the traveler's anger. He had not used that which was given to him. As a result, the little he had would be taken from him and given to those who made great use of their talents.

In the parable, the traveler is Jesus. The servants are believers in the kingdom of God. Each is given a measure of talent or ability. The talents that each believer possesses may differ. One may be gifted to sing and another gifted with an artistic eye. One may be a musician while another has been entrusted with a discerning spirit. Each believer, having been given at least one talent, is expected to use the talent in a productive manner.

Even the servants who received five and two talents, were praised for being faithful over a few things. What they received was immense only in comparison to each other. When compared to the wealth of the traveler, what they had was very small. So, although they appeared to have been given a considerable amount, that amount was not very much when weighed against what the master had available to give them. Even though five talents were given, the master had much more to give to those who could prove themselves faithful over a "few" things.

The parable emphasizes how our Lord observes how we handle and execute the gifts and talents that we have been given to determine whether we should be placed over a larger store of gifts and talents. Every believer, as the parable notes, who works with what has been given can expect not only to be praised by the master but also rewarded handsomely for diligence.

The servants thus, were given praise and a promise. They were given praise for their good works and a promise greater reward. They were told to "enter into the joy of the Lord."

The joy of the Lord, is a reward that goes beyond possessions. It is an attitude that makes even the smallest possession a treasure. To receive the joy of the Lord, is to receive a blessing so great that it makes each day happier, brighter and filled with intense joy.

However, it begins with the faithful execution of the smallest of gifts. When done with the help of the Holy Spirit, it multiplies itself immensely. Christ emphasizes that the measure of our reward will depend greatly upon our ability use the gifts he has given us in a way that will glorify him and build the kingdom of God.

Work With What You've Been Given

Today, there are millions of believers who are frustrated because they don't have the same gifts and talents as others. Even within households there are brothers and sisters that envy the talents of their siblings, while frustrated at their own endowments. We equate our gifts with our ability to do great things, especially since society seems to heap the greatest praise upon those who do the most spectacular things! Our frustration is deepened when we conclude that our gifts are insignificant because they do not accomplish the spectacular.

We should resolve to work with the talents and gifts that God gives us, with the full knowledge that what we do will either create a spectacular moment, or make a spectacular moment happen.

There are two biblical references that make this point clear:

THE RAVENS: 1 King 17:4-6, shows us a team of ravens at work. The great prophet Elijah was told by God to sit by a brook and drink from its waters while he waited for God to move. In the interim God commanded a team of ravens to bring him bread and meat for breakfast and supper on a daily basis. Since ravens are small birds each raven could only bring a small portion of meat and bread to fulfill God's command, yet each did its part methodically. The ravens executed a very small part of a big plan. God had great things in store for Elijah, but the ravens role was to simply bring the meat and bread every day.

When Elijah left the side of the brook he went on to challenge the prophets of Baal atop Mt. Carmel. It was a successful contest that resulted in the people restoring their faith in God and the destruction of the prophets of Baal. The event itself was spectacular. Four hundred prophets of Baal danced and pranced and pled to an unanswering god. Then Elijah calls down fire from heaven. It was obviously a sensational scene that has been talked about ever since. What is rarely mentioned is the role of the ravens. These were the little birds who nourished the prophet for days bringing him tiny morsels of meat and bread that sustained him in the wilderness. The ravens by the brook made the mountain top challenge possible. If there were no ravens there would have been no challenge and victory.

Today, there are millions who are like the ravens. They exercise their talents in the way that God has given them. They are the people that make the big plays possible. The cooks, bus drivers, Sunday School teachers, janitors, secretaries, and maintenance workers who perform thousands of small tasks with precision and dedication, are the ones that make big plays possible.

Yet, even the ravens who worked in obscurity are not forgotten. Luke 12:24 says "Consider the ravens" how God feeds them and takes care of them. He does the same for every believer who carries out his mission with care. These are the ones the song writer had in mind when he wrote, "His eye is on the sparrow, and I know he watches over me!"

THE GIANTS: While 1 King 17:4 points us to the raven, 1 Kings 17:4 points to the giant Goliath. David, was a young man of very small statue who attended his father's sheep. As a youth he had been assigned to carry out a very mundane and obscure task, which was to protect his father's sheep. Isolated, out of the public eye, David took his task seriously and fought bears and other wild animals that came to feed on his father's sheep. Because he acted bravely in the face of fear and executed many small plays well, he was given the opportunity to execute a very big play. He answered the challenge of the giant Goliath by facing him armed with a sling shot and five smooth stones. As the armies of Israel and Philistia watched, the young boy made the big play. The score was Israel 0 and Philistia 0. The people watched and were on edge until David swung his sling shot and killed the giant with one fatal swing.

It's interesting to note that David's motive in life was not to make the big play. He did not come to the army camp destined to make a name for himself. He came, executing another small play. He came to bring food for his brothers who were in the army. While there he was asked to do another small and thankless task, to play and sing for the king; which he also did well. The opportunity to make the big play came because God put in the right place at the right time. Because he had successfully carried out many small plays, he was given a chance to make the "play of the day."

Today, there are many believers who are thrown in the spotlight because they made big plays. A house burns and someone dashes in to save a life. They didn't come to make the headlines, they did what they normally do, and but did it in a spectacular moment. Someone has a heart attack and a citizen responds with emergency CPR. Their face made the evening news. They carried out an obscure task in a spectacular moment. Some volunteer rings the bell for the Salvation Army, then makes the front page of the paper the next day. It was an obscure act of charity performed in a newsworthy moment.

Every believer should strive to use his talents in such way that it will benefit the kingdom. It should be done with the attitude that the master needs the service, not whether or not it will be on the evening news. We execute the plays life's circumstances require. God decides whether what we do will be the play of the day!

Serving the Lord has its rewards

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must note that serving the Lord does have its rewards.

In the parable Jesus gave, each believer was praised for good service and then told to enter into the joy of the Lord.

What is the joy of the Lord?

Beyond the material rewards that believers receive for service, is the satisfaction of knowing that their little part helps to build the kingdom of the Lord. This satisfaction leads to a spiritual peace of mind that has been described as the joy of the Lord!

It's the satisfaction that a little boy felt when he saw his five loaves and two little fishes used to feed five thousand!

It's the satisfaction that the good Samaritan felt when he watched the injured man walk away from a battered situation after weeks of love and care!

What is the joy of the Lord?

Those who live in the joy of the Lord, are recipients of his goodness and are instruments of his compassion! When you know the joy of the Lord you know the goodness of the Lord.

It is the goodness of the Lord that transforms our:

—BURDENS into blessings; CARES into comforts

—DEFEATS into delights;; HEARTACHES into hallelujahs!

—PROBLEMS into praises; HOUSES into homes

—SORROWS into songs; SADNESS into gladness

It's the goodness of the Lord that prompted David to write in Psalm 106:1 "O give thanks unto the Lord for he is good and his mercy endureth forever!"

What is the Joy of the Lord?

The joy of the Lord is going into battle and knowing that before the battle begins the victory is won!

The joy of the Lord is knowing that no matter how tough the enemy we will be the victor!

The joy of the Lord is knowing that weeping might endure for a night, but joy comes in the morning!

The Joy of the Lord, turns SADNESS into GLADNESS; WEAKNESS into strength; DEFEAT into victory!

The joy of the Lord is the assurance that storms may rise and winds may blow, but God is still on the throne!

That's why the song writer declared, "Victory is mine, victory is mine, victory today is mine. I told Satan to get thee behind..victory today is mine!"

Over 2000 years ago there was a Super Bowl type contest between good and evil as Jesus shouldered an old rugged cross up Golgotha's hill! When he was buried in Joseph's tomb it looked like the contest was over!

Early Sunday morning Sunday the ground began to shake, the stone rolled away and heaven rejoiced as he arose from the grave with all power in his hand

Can't you hear angels celebrating the victory chanting, "Bring forth the royal diadem and crown him! Crown him! Crown him Lord of all!"

Wondrous Works in the Land of Ham!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

February 4, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "They forgat God their saviour, which had done great things in Egypt; Wondrous works in the land of Ham, and terrible things by the Red sea." Psalm 106:21-22

Introduction

Do you ever think about the wonderful blessings that God has given you? Sometimes, in the midst of our complaining we actually forget how good God has been to us. Despite the difficulties of our past, and obstacles that have been placed in our way, God has blessed our people in a wondrous way. We have made the treacherous climb of the mountain of slavery. We have forded the streams of racism. We have survived the bitterness of genocide and economic depravation. Despite these and other difficulties, we can truthfully say, God has blessed us with wondrous blessings.

The world has seen wondrous works that have resulted from the mind and soul of people of African ancestry. The bible often points to the great accomplishments of the African peoples, but we often miss the references in the blur of geography that passes us very quickly. Yet, in the bible itself, the record of the wondrous work that God gave the world through African peoples is evident. Some of the greatest achievements in early world history were the wondrous works of the people of Africa, as the bible so precisely notes.

Since the bible is color blind, the color of its characters is of little importance. In the Old Testament, nearly all characters were people of color. The beginnings of civilization itself, according to the great anthropologist Louis B. Leaky, began in the heart of Africa. Some of the oldest remains of human life have been discovered in Kenya which is on the African Continent, leading to the logical conclusion that the first people themselves were nestled on the African-Continent, which according to Genesis 2:13-14 was the location of at least a portion of the Garden of Eden.

While color was of little importance, the bible does make repeated mention of nations and geography, which identifies the heritage of the principal characters. Egyptians, despite the attempts of Hollywood to say otherwise, were Africans. Men and women of dark skin, kinky hair and broad noses. These were the great minds that built the pyramids, gave the world paper, embalming, and a variety of other mathematical and scientific based discoveries that still inspire awe thousands of years later.

The travels of the Children of Israel were in what is known as the "Land of Ham" whether it was in Egypt (Psalm 78:51) or the Land of Canaan which was a son of Ham. The three most illustrious Hamite nations-the Cushites, the Phoenicians and the Egyptians-were greatly mixed with foreign peoples. The military, commercial, architectural and institutional genius of the Hamite nations is epic and historic. It is an obvious indication that God himself, has moved in the mind and soul of the his nation to achieve a great end.

As African-Americans, we point with pride to the traces of African heritage in the biblical record. We have seen how God has blessed our heritage experience. We have seen him move in mighty ways to lift us up, protect us from our enemies and to bring us down when we got beside ourselves. For all practical purposes we see ourselves in the splendor and strength of the Egyptians and African nations. Yet, we also see ourselves as a shadow of the people Israel, broken, strayed and enslaved by enemies, and freed by the hand of God.

We cannot help but reflect upon the wonderful blessings that God has given us, despite ourselves. We should never forget his wondrous works, timely intervention, and the uninterrupted flow of blessings that fallen upon from the throne of God.

As Christians, we remember God's compassion and benevolence. We see his hand and mercy and give him praise for he has done wondrous works for those who journey began in the land of Ham!

Exposition

This text focuses on David giving a variety of reasons while Israel should praise the Lord.

In this Psalm David takes a nostalgic look over the long, meandering path taken by the Israelites to reach nationhood. David recounts their struggles in Egypt, the crossing of the Red Sea and the numerous miraculous acts God performed for the people while in Egypt, wandering in the wilderness and while in the Promised Land itself.

The Psalm suggests that many have forgotten where their loyalties should lie. They have failed to see God in the light of provider for national security and prosperity. They have forgotten his mighty works on their behalf.

Thus, this text finds David suggesting that the people have forgotten how God helped them in Egypt, at the Red Sea and in the Land of Ham in general.

He summizes that once the people remember what God has done, they will find a renewed reason for rejoicing.

Great Things in Egypt

David notes that Israel forgot the great things God did for them in Egypt. What great things could have been done for them? The skeptical mind would say, "They spent 400 years in slavery building great pyramids, palaces, sphinxes and architectural wonders for which they would never receive credit, what great things could God have possibly done for them?

In the midst of their slavery God did a wonderful thing for Israel, which they almost always forgot. He blessed the land of Goshen. The Northeast sector of the Nile Delta was an inundated area that was hardly able to support any kind of habitation, let alone nearly a million people. This was the area which was assigned to the Israelites from the time of Joseph until the exodus. Although it was supposed to be inhabitable, God blessed Goshen as a refuge against the atrocities that others outside Israel. In Goshen the people survived miraculously. They were sustained and protected by the hand of God himself.

Our experience is similar. African-Americans have shared our own Goshen experience. Our side of the social track has always been the uninhabitable and most undesirable. Our lot in life, historically, has been that of disadvantage, but yet, more than any other, it appears that God has given us a Goshen experience.

Only in Goshen do railroad tracks run next to residential housing. But when others are awakened by the rumbling of the big trains, we the people of Goshen, learned how to sleep soundly even though the whistle of the train blows loudly and its rumble shakes the house. Instead of waking us, it rocks us gently and we sleep soundly.

Only in Goshen could we take shotgun shanties and whitewash the floors, decorate the walls with newspaper, stuff rags underneath the doors and windows in the winter, and jump into one bed with all of our children and say "there's no place like home!"

Only in Goshen could we take what was supposed to be the scraps and turn them into a gourmet. When the master at the ham he threw away everything else. In Goshen, what he threw away became our gourmet. The master ate the ham, but in Goshen we boiled the pig's ears and tail. We pickled his feet. We fried his skin and called it cracklings. We cooked his stomach and even washed and cleaned his intestines, drowned them in spices and called them "chitterlings!" Only in Goshen!

Plagues that killed the Egyptians did not exist in Goshen!

Hard times that almost destroyed the rest of Egypt, never touched Goshen! God blessed Goshen in ways that made its inhabitants able to sustain themselves and grow stronger instead of weaker.

Despite the fact that we have experienced over 200 years of slavery in America and another 140 years of second class citizenship, we have a reason to praise God! He has been good to us!

Some may complain, but those who know the Lord, can say with the song writer, "All of my good days, outweigh my bad days and I won't complain!"

Terrible Things by the Red Sea

When Israel was freed from slavery, they marched toward the promised land with a quick pace, but God led them to the Red Sea instead of through an inland route that would have been the logical choice. Trapped between the Red Sea and Egypt, the armies of Egypt pursued them with the goal of returning them to slavery in mind. At the Red Sea, God performed a wonderful act that was awe inspiring to the Israelites and terrifying to the Egyptians. He opened the Red Sea and allowed the Israelites to cross over on dry ground and drowned their Egyptian pursuers in a watery grave.

Had Israel returned to the promised land without the Red Sea experience, their history would have been totally different and less dependent upon God.

So it is with African-American families today. Had it not been for our Red Sea experiences, we would not be a close to God as we are today. It's the fact that we are accustomed to Red Sea experiences that we stay close to God.

Historically, our faith in God has conditioned us to adopt two attitudes: 1) We expect Red Sea experiences and 2) We expect God to roll back the waters for us to cross over on dry land!

Millions of African-American families know that we are technically free from slavery. However, we also recognize that while the chains are gone, our freedom is constantly threatened. Pharaoh's army is pursuing us with haste.

As we marched toward freedom, we saw legalized lynchings in America as a Red Sea, but God rolled back those waters and took away its authority. Racial segregation was a great divide. It forced us to sit on the back of the bus, drink from colored water fountains and sit in the colored sections of movie theaters, doctors' offices and in public place. They were Red Sea experiences, but God rolled back the waters.

Today, we have come to expect Red Sea experiences. Those who know the Lord have also come to know that whenever a true believer faces a Red Sea, God will make a way!

There is no Red Sea that we can face that God cannot conquer. There is no approaching army that can hope to successfully vanquish a believer that God has blessed!

Wondrous works in the land of Ham

Enroute to and in the Canaan Land God performed a multitude of wondrous works that Israel should not have forgotten.

In the wilderness, God fed them manna every day that appeared miraculously six days out of every week, with a double portion on Friday.

In addition, God provided quail meat for the entire nation six days a week.

They wore the same clothes for 40 years without the material wearing out. The same robes. The same hats. The same shoes...for 40 years!

When they were thirsty God provided them water from dry rocks!

Once in the Promised Land, he rolled back the waters of the River Jordan for them to cross on dry land, just as he had for their fathers.

He caused the walls of Jericho to fall down and when the daylight for their battles was about to fade away, God held the Sun in the sky long enough for them to be victorious.

David's conclusion for Israel was that there is sufficient reason for Israel to praise God because of his wondrous works, not just in Egypt; not just beside the Red Sea but in the land of Ham!

Today, believer have sufficient reason to praise God.

We ought to praise the Lord because in our Egypt experience he fed and sustained us!

We ought to praise the Lord because in our Red Sea experiences he made a way for us out of no way!

We ought to praise the Lord because even today, he is blessing us!

Somebody here today can testify that we don't have to look back to our slave experience to know that God is in the blessing business. We can look at our own experience and say with truth and meaning God has performed some wondrous works in the land of Ham.

Every day, God is blessing us!

Every day, God is still opening doors!

Every day, God is still wiping weeping eyes!

Every day, God is still raising bowed down heads!

Every day, God is still putting food on our tables!

Every day, God is still making a way out of no way!

We should praise the Lord because he has brought us a mighty long way!

He has brought us out of darkness, into his marvelous light!

We ought to tell somebody that our Good is a good God!

We ought to tell somebody how he raised us; and how he saved us!

He raised us by bringing us out of slavery to this present day!

But don't tell how he raised us without telling how he saved us! He saved us on an old rugged crossed out on Calvary's hill!

But Early Sunday morning he arose from grave giving us new hope and determination!

Now "facing the rising sun of our new day begun, let us march on till victory is won!"

What Women Want

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 11, 2001

SCRIPTURE: Some Greeks who had come to Jerusalem to attend the Passover paid a visit to Philip, who was from Bethsaida in Galilee. They said, "Sir, we want to meet Jesus." John 12:20-21

Introduction

Have you ever wished that your mate knew exactly what you wanted and would act on it? Women often complain that men know nothing about their needs. They say it's as if the two of them lived on different planets like Mars or Venus, one knowing very little about the other. But wouldn't it be something, if women could run upon a man who knew exactly what they wanted and then would act upon it?

Mel Gibson raised the issue of male sensitivity to the needs of women in a recent movie entitled, "What women want." In the movie, Gibson played a marketing executive who had a rather negative and stereotypical view of women. However, a freak accident changed his whole perspective when he found himself able to read the thoughts of women. Being able to get inside the heads of every woman he met helped him advance his career and gain certain advantages. The movie was humorous, but the idea of men trying to understand what women want is serious. It lies at the root of millions of dysfunctional relationships, as frustrated women conclude, "He just doesn't understand me!" or "He does not know what I want!"

What do women want? Thousands of articles have been written on the subject but the women's want list seems to depend upon the nature of the subject and whose doing the asking. For example an article in a women's magazine recently listed the following as some of the most wanted qualities women seek in a relationship: Women want a man who is interesting to talk to; clean, well-groomed, with a sense of humor. Women want a man who listens when they talk, projects self confidence, has a flair for conversation with decent social skills and fair intelligence. They want a man who is passionate about something, half way decent to look upon, is in reasonably good shape and drug free. He doesn't need a lot of money, but it would help. A religious preference would be a plus, as long as he is not too religious. However, If he drives a fancy car, has a valid gold card with unlimited funds and is good looking, single and sexy all of the other qualifications are unnecessary!

No one really knows what women want. Even women seem confused about what women want. The feminist say women want the right to choose. Pro-lifers say women want the right of an unborn baby to be protected. One group says women want professional careers in which they can advance themselves in the economic arena. Another group says women want to raise families, nurture children and love their husbands. Everyone seems to be an expert on what women want.

What about Black women? What do they want? What has been the history of Black women? Have they been successful at getting a few of their wants, while securing their needs? While Black women may differ about what they want, the history of the African-American woman's struggle has been one that has revealed that historically the Black woman has always wanted to love and be loved.; to care and to be cared for; to protect and to be protected; to live respectfully and to be respected. At the center of her struggle for self determination, the Black woman still wants parity in the eyes of those who see her, work with her and embrace her.

What is certain is that no human will ever know what a woman wants, even women themselves, but God knows. God knows about each of his creatures large and small. He knows us better than we know ourselves. When we are tempted to forget whom we are and whose we are he reminds us that we are his children and we have been bought with a price.

Believing women have found that faith in God has minimized their want list in life. It is an attitude that helps them to truly say, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want!" What do believing women want from life? Many have come to say in the words of the old Negro spiritual, "You can have all of this world, give me Jesus."

As Christians, we may not understand each other's wants and needs, but God does. Our desire is to be blessed by him, for in him everything we want and need becomes a reality.

Exposition

This text focuses upon an appeal to see Jesus by the Greeks in Jerusalem.

In the passion week, just prior to the crucifixion, an account is given of the Greek men and their wives who were among the proselytes to the Jewish faith. By name, the Greeks of this text are not called. There has been considerable speculation about their identity. What is known is that they were probably Gentiles who wanted to know more about the Jewish faith. They worshipped with the Jews, but because they were uncircumcised, they were not allowed to participate in the Passover.

After the crucifixion and the establishment of the church we don't hear much about them except when their women started complaining. In Acts 6 it is recorded that the Greek women began complaining. They complained that they were not being treated fairly. They said the Jewish women and the Africans were receiving an unequal portion of the shared community resources. They wanted fair treatment.

When they appealed to the Apostles, the Apostles decided to appoint seven men to serve as deacons over the Greek affairs,handle the complaints of the women and, as much as possible to give the women what they wanted.

In Jerusalem however, what the Greeks wanted was not position, fame or honor. They wanted to see Jesus. They met Philip and made it known..”we want to see Jesus!” They wanted more than just to see him. No doubt, they had seen Jesus as he walked along the streets, surrounded by crowds of men and women. Their request to see him was not just to look upon him but to meet and have a conversation with him. They wanted to see him. After seeing him they would never be the same.

Black women

The African-American woman has struggled for generations on two fronts. She has struggled as a Black American and also a Black American woman. The quest of the Black woman has reached several levels, among them being:

THE QUEST FOR PARITY: Women want to be treated equally. Our history is wrought with examples of Black women shouldering two burdens, blackness and womanhood. While the world sought equality for the white woman, it forgot about Black women. This point was brought out by SoJourner Truth in 1851 at a women’s convention in Akron Ohio. She said, “That man over there says that women need to be helped into carriages, and lifted over ditches, and to have the best place everywhere. Nobody ever helps me into carriages, or over mud-puddles, or gives me any best place! And ain’t I a woman? Look at me! Look at my arm! I have ploughed and planted, and gathered into barns, and no man could head me! And ain’t I a woman? I could work as much and eat as much as a man - when I could get it - and bear the lash as well! And ain’t I a woman? I have borne thirteen children, and seen most all sold off to slavery, and when I cried out with my mother’s grief, none but Jesus heard me! And ain’t I a woman?” The African-American woman, fighting two battles for equality, wants parity. She wants to be equal before the law, both as an African-American and as a woman.

When believers, male and female come to Jesus, they come because he offers them parity. There are no pre-defined differences that establish superior and inferior classes in Christ. Christianity offers no race or sex distinctions. Galatians 3:28 says, “There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.” The Christian Black woman who seeks equality, begins with the full knowledge that with respect to her relationship with God, neither race nor her sex matters. Grace is not apportioned by sex or race. Salvation is not reserved for a special class. Everyone enjoys parity before God.

THE QUEST FOR OPPORTUNITY: Women want equal opportunity. It is not an unfair request. It is not unreasonable for anyone to want the opportunity to work and serve in the capacity that best represents their talents and skills. African-American women, moreso than Black men, have been given limited opportunity in a historical perspective. Black women worked as domestics when Black men couldn’t get a job. Black women worked as house slaves when their men were relegated to the fields. The quest for opportunity extended to a variety of areas but has seldom come without a struggle. This quest is best represented by the indefatigable service of Mary McCleod Bethune. She began a school in 1904 to teach Black girls educational skills. She led marches and campaigns for the African-American woman's right to vote in the 1920's even when African-American men were being denied the vote themselves. She defied the Ku Klux Klan and rode a bicycle from house to house and raised enough money to pay the poll tax for Black voters, then taught them the answers to tough questions designed to stop them from voting. She wanted opportunity!

When believers come to Jesus they too want "opportunity." It's what happened when a woman came to Jesus with an Alabaster Box filled with fine oils. When she proceeded to serve him by anointing his feet with oil, Judas complained that she was wasteful. He said the woman was using her resources unwisely because, if sold it could be used to feed the hungry. What the woman wanted was an opportunity to serve Christ by giving the best she had to him. Jesus rebuked Judas, and allowed the woman to serve. The opportunity to serve as a member of the family of God is not restricted, but is open to all. If women want opportunity, then Christ offers them exactly what they want!

THE QUEST FOR RESPECT: Women want respect! That was the theme of a popular song by Aretha Franklin that sold millions of copies a generation ago, and is still sung today, "R-E-S-P-E-C-T." Despite her strength, beauty and intrinsic power, Black women have found it difficult to get respect. Zora Hurston in her book "Their eyes were watching God" painted a picture of grandmother who wanted her granddaughter to achieve what she called "high ground" reaching a level of living that would bring her respect. She kept her granddaughter away from men who would not respect her or would lead her away from the high ground. The "high ground" has been elusive for Black women. Slave masters used them at will. Black men neglected them and society ignored them. Even today, Black women endure the stinging insult of a generation of men who think it's humorous to refer to them as garden tools (hoes) or female dogs (bitches). Despite her best efforts, the Black woman still craves just a little of what Areatha Franklin sang about, "Respect!"

Women who came to Jesus, found that despite their race or social status, he treated them with respect and dignity. A woman who had a bad reputation in the community, who had been caught in the very act of adultery was brought to Jesus. She was the lowest of the lowest in social status, yet he treated her respect. He told her to go and sin no more!

Women want to see Jesus for the same reason men want to see him, he treats every soul with the same level of importance. Everyone gets respect!

He knows what women want

Finally, brothers and sisters, while most men don't have the slightest idea what women want, I know a man who knows exactly what women want!

God knows what women want, but he also knows what men want. He knows what we say we want, but he also knows what we really want!

Psalm 139 says, " O LORD, thou hast searched me, and known me. Thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising, thou understandest my thought afar off." He knows what we are going to think, before we think it. He knows what we are going to say, before we say it! He knows what we want.

That's what the woman at the well found out! "He told me who I was" but he told me what I wanted...the living water. "Come see a man who told me all I've ever done!

A widow woman said, "All I wanted was enough meal in my barrel to make it another day" but Lord touch her little barrel and it never ran dry!

I'm glad to know that God knows when the barrel runs dry!

I'm glad to know that God knows when we need a little help!

A woman with an issue of blood, said "All I want is to touch the hem of his garment!" When she touched his garment she became whole!

God is still in the garment business! Just one touch makes it all right! No wonder the song writer wrote: "Shackled by a heavy burden. Neath a load of guilt and shame. Then the hand of Jesus touched me and now I'm no longer the same! He touched me! He touched me! Now I know, he touched me and made me whole!"

Mary and Martha told Jesus what they wanted, and received more than they asked for. When Jesus didn't come during the sickness of Lazarus, they chided him for not coming "right now!" But when Lazarus was raised from the grave, they got more than they asked for!

When you ask God for something, be prepared for an answer! If he decides to answer your prayer.. you may get more than you asked for!

Elijah asked God to receive his sacrifice with fire, but the fire consumed the sacrifice and licked up the water. He got more than he asked for.

Solomon asked God for wisdom, he received wisdom, riches fame and 1000 women, he got more than he asked for!

A lame man asked the apostles for silver and gold, but they responded, "Silver and Gold have I none, but such as I have, give I thee!" When the lame man walked away, he got more than he asked for!

When you ask God for rain, get your umbrella and your boots.. you may get more than you ask for!

When ask for shower of blessings, get ready, you may get more than you ask for!

What women want is a man who can overcome adversity!

What women want is a man who can keep his word!

When Jesus died out on Calvary, they buried him in a borrowed tomb!

Early Sunday morning the women came to the grave site. What they wanted was the embalm his body, but they got more than they asked for! What they found was an empty tomb and folded clothes..an angel said, "He is not here he has risen from the dead!"

They got more than they asked for!

If you want something from the Lord! Tell him!

Jesus is on the main line tell him what you want!

Call him up and tell him what you want!

SCRIPTURE: "And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" Acts 8:36

Introduction

Has there ever been anyone or anything that has stopped you from doing something important? Most people have learned to deal with obstacles and hindrances in the path of their goals. Sometimes there are people who work against your best efforts, especially if you are trying to chart a new course that breaks from tradition. Sometimes there are legal barriers and limitations that are placed upon us that limit the exercise of our abilities and skills. Then there are social reasons why we are often hindered such as poverty, discrimination and lack of opportunity. Hindrances retard progress and often bring movements for change to a grinding halt.

African-American men have made great achievements over the years despite hinderances. Depending upon whom is asked, what hinders men differs. Men may cite the lack of opportunity, job skills and access to power. Women may have a different view. If a woman is asked what is the greatest hindrance that men have, some answer. Men pay them no attention or listen to what they say. Consider the woman who driving down the highway going in one direction and she met a man who was driving on the same highway going in a different direction. The man was traveling very fast when he saw the woman stick her hand out of the window and start to wave. As she got closer the woman stuck her head out of the window and shouted "Pig!" The man was instantly insulted. Before she could pass completely by he stuck his head out of the window and shouted, "Witch!" as he sped off. Traveling at a very high rate of speed he suddenly slammed into a object on the road. His car was ruined although he was unhurt. He had hit a pig in the road. The woman drove up, looked at the wreck and said, "That's why men can't get anywhere, they just won't listen!"

Black men have made remarkable accomplishments over the years, despite a history of deprivation, slavery, racism and denial of equal opportunity. These accomplishments have been made despite the circumstances that exist.

The future for Black men is only limited by their ability to see beyond any obstacle and discern that God has plan for the renewal, restoration, preservation and elevation of their race and gender. Black men who want to achieve should seek God and he will send them answers. They should not be deterred and God will show them a way!

As Christians, we rejoice in the knowledge that God helps us overcome hindrances. Whether we are male or female, no obstacle placed in our way is more powerful than an effort that carries an endorsement from heaven. He that overcometh shall inherit all things!

Exposition

This text focuses on a question asked by an Ethiopian eunuch, who desired to be baptized.

After churches were establish in Samaria, and all of the ministers in place, Philipp waited for a new assignment from the apostles. He probably expected to move into new territory to begin churches. Instead, in a dream he was given a directive, by an angel, to go South to Gaza, into a desert region. It was the most unlikely place for an evangelist. A desert, with very little water, no roads, and most importantly, no people. Phillip followed the angel's direction and when he approached the desert region he came upon an Ethiopian man, riding in a chariot, reading a Jewish religious scroll from the Old Testament. The man was reading the 53 chapter of Isaiah and was puzzled at what he read. He wanted to know and God sent an answer in the person of Phillip.

After hearing Phillip testify about the goodness of God, his mercy and his love, the eunuch wanted to know more. He was told about Jesus and his sacrifice. He was told about baptism and salvation. Then the eunuch looked around, saw water and asked, "What doth hinder me" from being baptized. Following his baptism he rejoiced and returned to his native land.

Who was this Ethiopian man? The word for Ethiopia in Greek means "burnt face." Also known as Nubia or Cush, Ethiopia was south of Egypt, stretching southward from Aswan to Khartoum in Sudan. Black people lived there, as we read in Jeremiah 13:23. While the fact that the eunuch was Ethiopian indicates he was Black, it is no guarantee. However, the odds against him being Black in biblical times was great. What is certain is that he was African.

The king of Ethiopia was considered to be descended from the sun. Because he was considered to be most holy, he did not engage in the secular affairs of ruling his country. That task in Ethiopia belonged to the queen mother, known by the title Candace, which is a title similar to Pharaoh, Caesar, Ptolemy, and Abimelech.

This eunuch was the minister of finance for Candace. He probably was an emasculated official in the royal court, similar to Hegai, the eunuch in charge of the royal harem, referred to in Esther 2. This Ethiopian eunuch was a VIP, a high official of the royal court of Candace. As the minister of finance, we can deduce that he was highly educated and a person of great moral integrity, because one must be trustworthy to be the head of a treasury. I am sure he was also well-born, powerful, and very rich.

Yet we can also deduce that this Ethiopian eunuch was thoroughly disappointed and dissatisfied with his life. His education, nobility, power, position, and temporal riches had all failed to satisfy him and he was unhappy and restless, longing for joy and internal peace. But the eunuch could find no peace in Ethiopia, so in this passage we see him traveling from his own country in search of a cure for his problem.

When he found what he was looking for he asked, "What doth hinder me?"

Not hindered by race

The Eunuch was not hindered by his race. Although he was African, obviously different in color and nationality than the Jews, his race did not hinder him. What hinders African-American men from achieving? Should it be a matter of race or ethninticity? Historically, we have legions of examples of men who have achieved success despite the animosities, indifference and resistance their color generated.

The racial barriers have made it difficult for African-American men to achieve. Stereotypes of Black men precede. It was believed that Blacks were unable to think creatively, lead meritoriously and plan to strategically. We given credit for being able to eat watermelon, dance and father babies. The very thought that an African-American man could achieve anything of excellence was foreign to the powers that existed. Doors of opportunity was closed shut, even before many Black men knocked.

Literally thousands of African-American men have overcome the barriers imposed upon them by racial concerns.. George Washington Carver, was a great agricultural scientist. The world came to recognize his greatness when he discovered over 450 ways to use the peanut that has produced thousands of industries in America. He worked daily for the praise of God, reading his bible and making new discoveries. He refused to place a patent on any of his discoveries. Despite his race he remains one of the world's greatest scientists. He was not hindered by the idea that Black men could not think creatively

Thurgood Marshall was not hindered by race either. He was an outstanding orator, legal strategist and jurist who argued land mark cases before the Supreme Court. As a lawyer he led the legal team that reversed discrimination laws in the United States. Despite the fact that no man of color had ever been a member of the Supreme Court he became the first, opening the doors for other minorities in the generation to come. He was not hindered by the notion that Black men could not think strategically.

Jackie Robinson stepped up from the Negro Leagues to become the first African-American major league baseball player. His achievement of excellence came despite his color. So did others. Tank Young and James "Shack" Harris, both of Grambling State University challenged the sports world when younger became the first Black NFL player and Harris became the NFL's first Black quarterback. When Doug Williams stepped into the super bowl as a champion, he joined a legion of men who dispelled the men that Black men can't perform under pressure or lead white men. They were not hindered by the preconceived notions of others that Black men could not achieve.

Not Hindered by Circumstance

The Eunuch was not hindered by his circumstance. He was thousands of miles from home. He was riding alone in a chariot, reading a book that he could not understand, without a teacher. Yet, he was not hindered. African-American men have been similarly challenged and have not been hindered.

Slavery, ignorance, and poverty and lack of opportunity have been the main hindrances to the achievement of African-American men. Despite these hindrances, however, African-American men have excelled.

Frederick Douglass was not hindered by the circumstance of slavery. He arose from slavery to become a great abolitionist, news paper publisher, statesman and politician. The peculiar institution of slavery threatened him but did not hinder him. It haunted him but it did not stop him from achieving excellence.

Booker T. Washington spent his life fighting ignorance. A former slave, he challenged the notion that blacks could not achieve and established Tuskeegee Institute to promote higher learning for Blacks. Industrial education was his forte. W.E.B. DuBois went even further as he promoted the education of the whole man, both his hands and his intellect. Both men achieved despite the ignorance of that surrounded them and rose to high planes in the fields of education, philosophy and civil rights.

Ray Charles and Stevie Wonder are extremely talented African-American men who were not hindered by circumstance. Both born blind, they achieved greatness in the area of music creativity in their respective generations. Blindness could have easily been received as a hinderance, but both used it to their advantage and achieved greatness.

Opportunities to achieve in business, sports and politics have been limited for African-American men but yet they have not been hindered. John Johnson didn't have many great opportunities in the world of business, he created them when he developed the Johnson Publishing Company empire. Tiger Woods didn't find a great door of opportunity opened for him in the world of golf, but he created one. When Julian Bond and Jesse Jackson ran for president of the United States they created opportunities for hope for others in the area of politics. None of these men were hindered by the lack of opportunity..they simply created an opportunity and achieved.

Not hindered by limitations

The Eunuch was not hindered by limitations. He asked "why not?" This is the same question that Robert F. Kennedy asked America as he ran for president in the 1960's, "Some men see things as they are and ask why, I see things that never were and ask, why not?"

Why not?

Why not create a way to help young African-Americans to regroup and help themselves out of poverty? That's the question Dr. Leon Sullivan asked when he started OIC in America? He dared to ask, "why not?"

Why not become a great actor? So what that as a youth I stuttered and was very shy, why not? That's the question that James Earl Jones asked as he rose to become one of the nation's greatest actors. Why not?

Why not take boys and girls who sing on street corners and in school talent shows and make them millionaires? That's the question that Berry Gordy asked as he founded Motown Records and sailed into the history books and financial success.

There have always been limitations imposed upon Black men, yet those limitations have not been able to hinder them from progressing and achieving.

For the Eunuch the fact that he was in a desert, alone with alone a small pool of water available was not perceived as a hinderance but an opportunity.

Black men today, should see opportunity in every situation and ask like those before them, "why not?" Why not invent a stop light? Why not pioneer open heart surgery? Why not blaze new trails in science and technology? Why not? What hinders me?

The only constraints that have stopped Black men from achieving in the past have been self imposed. Those who defied the limitations have been able to achieve greatness.

What Hinders Me?

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that once the eunuch found the knowledge of the Lord, he would let nothing stand in his way!

In Jeremiah 29:13 God says, "You will seek me and find me when you seek me with all your heart." The eunuch was seeking God with all his heart. Without reference to cost or troubles, he began his pilgrimage to faraway Jerusalem because he wanted to find the Lord

Here was a Black man who wanted to find the Lord. Finding out more about God was not an easy task. He could not go to a bookstore and purchase a copy. He couldn't get one over the internet. But he found a way to find out about the Lord!

Somehow the Ethiopian eunuch also secured a copy of the book of Isaiah. He may have brought it with him from Ethiopia, because there were many Jewish people in Egypt and other places near Ethiopia. In fact, the Hebrew Bible was translated in Egypt into the Greek Septuagint version. In his relentless quest for God, he must have spent quite a bit of money to buy this papyrus scroll containing the great prophecy of Isaiah. He wanted to know God for himself. When men have a thirst to know God and to do his will, money is not hindrance.

When men resolve to accomplish a Godly goal, nothing should hinder them! Such was the resolve of Naaman who was told bathe seven times in muddy water! He wanted to be healed so badly, that even his dislike of the muddy water was overcome as he resolved that nothing would hinder him from being cleansed!

What hinders men from becoming better husbands?

What hinders men from becoming better fathers?

What hinders men from developing stronger relationships with God?

Romans 8:38-39 seems to announce the believing Black man's resolve, " For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

When I was a boy we watched a television broadcast of "Superman." When he worked at the Daily Planet newspaper, he was just Clark Kent, a mild mannered reporter. But when he went into the phone both and put on his blue and red suit with a big "S" on his chest he became "Superman"

They called him superman because he was able was faster than a speeding bullet!

They called him superman because he was more powerful than a locomotive!

They called him superman because he could leap tall buildings in a single bound!

They called him superman because with his x-ray vision he could see through closed doors; with his strength he could bend steel bars like pretzels; and bullets bounced off his chest!

Brothers and sisters, a man who knows the Lord is a superman!

A man who knows the Lord finds that Problems bounce off his chest like rubber bullets!

A man who knows the Lord finds that he leaps tall difficulties with a single bound!

A man who knows the Lord can grab hold to a tough situation and bend it like a pretzel!

The only thing that hindered superman was Kryptonite. It made him weak! It took away his power!

The only thing that hinders a believing man is losing his faith in God and losing faith in himself!

As long as a man or woman trusts in God, nothing is impossible, because God will take our:

—Questions and give us Answers; Frustrations and give us confidence —Weaknesses and give us strength; Failures and give us success!

No wonder the song writer wrote, "I will trust in the Lord! I will trust in the Lord till I die!"

A man who knows Jesus, cannot be hindered because he knows that the Lord has promised that "no weapon formed against thee shall prosper!"

A man who knows Jesus, cannot be hinder because he knows that he is never alone, for Jesus has said "And lo, I'll be with you alway, even until the end of the earth!"

Nothing should hinder men because Jesus, the man of God has paved the way!

He died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with the victory in his hand!

A Different World

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 25, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." Matthew 28:19-20; "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14:2-3; ".... for the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light." Luke 16:8

Introduction

Have you ever listened to stories of great men and women of the past and wondered if they could be just as heroic in a different setting? If there is a certainty about the coming generation it is that they will live and operate in a different world than the one experienced by their parents and grandparents. The tools necessary to function in that world must be grasped, while they are available.

There is no doubt that youth live in a world that is already different from that of their grandparents.

In grandpa's time the Black community was well defined. Everyone lived on one side of the track. Everyone who lived on the other side of the track was either white or a traitor to the community. Children today, live in a different world. Communities rapidly being defined by economics rather than by color. The people on the other side of the track are no longer defined by color but by economics.

In Grandpa's time folks knew their neighbors by name. Neighbors shared food, cared and supported each other. Children today live in a different world. Very few neighbors know the names of every family on the block, very few exchange food and hospitalities, and even fewer support each other in times of frustration and difficulty.

In Grandpa's time Sundays were set aside for worship. All businesses except those providing essential services shut down on Sundays. Attending movies, baseball games and playing cards on Sunday was considered a sin, even by those who didn't go to church. Children today live in a different world. Mom and dad often leave for work on Sunday just as they do on Monday. Malls are open and Sunday afternoon football has become the religion of choice for millions of men who bow reverently before the altars of ESPN, CBS and NBC.

In grandpa's time children were expected to be children until they were grown.

Children didn't listen to adult conversation and could not legally watch sexually explicit movies, read dirty books or even be in the presence of unhealthy activity. Today's world is different. Youth see sex and murder and crime in every movie they watch. If they are banned from watching x rated movies then they see it when they watch the daily soap operas with grandma every day on television. In today's time children are doing what was once considered adult things: going to prison at age 12, blowing up schools, selling drugs, threatening teachers and violently defying the slight symbol of authority.

It's a different world. It's so different that preteens now get pregnant, condoms are distributed in schools, and teen-agers are attending Alcoholics Anonymous meetings. It's a world where every home has burglar bars or an alarm system. Even though grandpa slept with only the screen latched on his door, today's world is different. If grandpa sleeps at all, he has five dead bolt locks on his door and a magnum under his pillow.

It's a different world. It's a world so different that the singers who win Grammy awards are those who curse, insult women and give the world the finger! The talk shows which are most popular are those with lewd and personal revelations that result in fights, cursing and vulgarities. Comedians are not funny unless they curse, swear or use vulgarities. Even the most popular cartoons and video games are the ones drenched in violence and blood.

Bill Cosby tries to make us laugh about how different the world of youth has become. A created a television show about a funny mix of students on a college campus who bring a variety of attitudes and situations together in special weekly show Cosby calls, "A Different World." It is humorous, but Cosby who has a PhD, uses it to show us a very important reality...youth are living in a world totally different from that of their grand parents. Once they leave the protection of home, they see it more vividly than ever before.

On the backdrop of this different world, God is looking for a generation that is willing to prepare youth for a world that is more different than the one in which they live. Our Lord has a different world in mind for believers. He challenges us to prepare for it, because it will be one that will be completely out of this world!

As Christians, we know God is preparing a better world for us. It will be a different from the world this world. It will be a better world than this world. As we live in this world we should do so in preparation for the world to come. It will be different and because Christ will be there, it will be a glorious world for us all!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus giving instructions to his disciples to go into the world with the good news.

For three years Jesus taught his disciples about this world and another, far different, world that would come, called the kingdom of heaven. In preparation for the Kingdom of heaven, Jesus told his disciples to teach, preach, baptize and witness in every part of the world to create a prototype of the kingdom of heaven on earth.

He called his prototype...the kingdom of God.

As whole communities accepted Christianity, the world around them changed. It effected their business dealings, interpersonal relationships and general life-styles. The new world that Jesus sought was one in which the great priority of life would be placed upon the value of the heart rather than on the material things. Jesus' world would certainly be different.

It would be highlighted by those who denied themselves pleasures to seek the common good of all.

It would be a world in which each citizen loved his or her enemies and prayed for those who spitefully abused them.

It would be a world of active nonviolence in both thought and deed.

It would be a world of total dependence upon God and faith in his ability to supply needs.

Each disciple was challenged to go and deliver the message about this new world to the present world and to make preparations themselves for life in the world to come.

While teaching his disciples, in Luke 16, Jesus compares how the unjust operate in their context of their world to some half hearted believers. In his parable he pointed to an employee who was harsh to the customers of the business. However, the employee feared that the owner, when he returned, would not be pleased with his work so he called in all of his boss's customers and cut the bills in half, which pleased the customers. The employee provided for himself a haven among the boss' customers who would receive him warmly, if he were terminated. He created for himself a place in another world, just in case his present world changed.

Jesus said his disciples were aware that the present world order was about to change, but were not pursuing it with the same amount of vigilance that those outside the faith use in their world. In essence, Jesus said, if the ungodly man has enough sense to make preparations when he suspects a change in his world, shouldn't the children of light do the same?

Jesus left this life reminding his disciples that in his absence the new world is being prepared. When he returns, it will be time for the faith to enter a new a completely different world!

Preparing to live in a different world

Youth today must prepare to live in a different world. It will be economically, socially and politically different from the world they have historically known. The challenge is to be ready for it when it comes.

A DIFFERENT ECONOMIC WORLD: Today's youth will live a different economic world than their parents. They will earn more money than their parents and have the opportunity for an even higher standard of living. However, in preparation for that world youth must begin to practice for a different using values from the past. In the past, parents and grandparents understood the value of saving. Nearly all of our grandparents had some type of savings account, even if it was in the sugar bowl or stuffed in a mattress. They had a rainy day fund.

Youth will earn more but will have less unless they prepare now for a different world. Teens should begin by saving pennies, perhaps a nickel or dime out of every dollar. Learning to save and manage money will be essential.

Grandpa stuffed it in money in a mattress and hid it in coffee cans, but youth must learn to let their money work for them. Today's youth must understand the investment instruments available such as mutual funds, stocks, annuities, bonds, 401K's and other tools that go beyond what grandpa did.

Grandma learned early, that the Lord blesses every penny managed well, so she paid her church dues. Youth must build upon grandma's understanding and set aside, and pay a tithe to God in obedience to his command.

A DIFFERENT SOCIAL WORLD: Grandpa's world was all Black. His friends were all Black. Nearly everyone he knew believed in Jesus. Most of his neighbors were Baptist or something close to it like church of God in Christ (sanctified) or Methodist. They were all Black too. However, youth are being prepared for a different world. It's a world that won't be all Black, like grandpa's world.

In the new world order Muslims and Christians will work side by side. Blacks, whites, Pakistani, Jews, Chinese and Japanese will study at the same schools, marry each other and have children with mixed heritages.

In preparation for this different world youth, both Black and White must have a greater appreciation for the culture of those with whom the work. Those who teach them have a responsibility to prepare them in the context of their needs rather than the context of the teacher's social perspective.

Martin Luther King observances should not be all Black experiences..

Black heritage programs should be a part of every teaching curriculum, regardless to the number of Black students in a school. In the same sense, we should celebrate with the Irish, Hispanic, Italians, the Jews, the Arabs, and Asian Community and others. A school system that promoted months of study to the major ethnic groups in the local community would not be out of place.

It will be a different world that will not be Black or white, but will be so different that one will not be able to recognize one part of their heritage for the other. Those in the Black community who were upset with golfer Tiger Woods when he refused to be identified as Black because his father and mother are of different heritages, did not understand that he lives on the cutting edge of a new world order that cannot call every person with dark skin Black, and neither can it call every person with slanted eyes Asian. Racial definitions will blur in the new world order.

A DIFFERENT POLITICAL WORLD: Grandpa's world was a world of Black folks voting together to elect Blacks to office. Grandpa felt if a Black man became mayor, governor or senator the Black man would remember from whence he came and help other Blacks. Youth today will not live in grandpa's world. In their world a Black man who is a city council member, school board member, mayor or governor is not guaranteed to think "Black" just because he is Black. In the new world, youth will study voting records and past performances of candidates as the prepare to select leaders of their generations. That means, in the world ahead, the best representatives of the interest of the identifiable Black community may not be Black, but someone who champions the causes common to the populous.

The political world of youth will see more women holding office and leaders of African-American causes who are not from the traditional African-American community. It will be a different world that will be challenging for all who encounter its components.

A World of Difference

Finally, we must consider that no matter what condition the world is in, one youth can make a world of difference. When Jesus spoke to his disciples he spoke mostly to young men and women who were being charged to go into the world and make a difference, under the power of the Holy Ghost. The challenge to go to the world and teach, preach, baptize and observe was immense then, and it is still immense today.

One believing youth can make a difference and change the world!

Jacob was a just a youth, but he pursued his life with dedication and excellence. He became the Patriarch of a family known as the children of Israel and changed the world! Joseph was just one youth who made a world of difference. Despite hardships and difficulties he arose to become prime minister of Egypt and saved a nation from starvation and changed the world! Samuel was just one youth who made a world of difference. As a child he came before God and learned his ways and his advice effected the direction of Kings and Queens. David was just one youth who depended upon God to help him slay and giant. He was just one youth, but he helped establish a kingdom that changed the entire face of the earth.

Solomon was just one youth who trusted in God developed a whole nation into a show piece of excellence for the world to see. He was one youth who made a world of difference

But there is another youth who made a world of difference.

He was born in a manager in Bethlehem and reared in a little town called Nazereth..he made a world of difference!

He saw a world filled with hatred and tried to bring love!

He saw a world filled with defeat and brought a message of victory!

He saw a world filled with weakness and brought a message of strength!

He saw a world filled with darkness and challenged it to walk in the light!

They called him Jesus..he made a world of difference!

Before he left he told his disciples to stay ready because “I’m going to create another world!” That “where I am ye may be also!”

In that world...every day will be Sunday and the Sabbath will have no end!

In that world...It’ll always be howdy and never good-bye!

In that world...hearse wheels will not roll!

No wonder the song writer declares, “When we all get to heaven, what a day of rejoicing that will be! When we all see Jesus, we’ll sing and shout the victory!

In that world we’ll see Jesus, who died out on Calvary and arose Early Sunday morning!

God's Home Improvement Plan

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabeernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 4, 2001

SCRIPTURE:"Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." 1 Cor. 13

Introduction

Have you ever looked around your home and wished for a few improvements? No matter how happy we are with our house or apartment, there is always room for improvement. Should the carpet on the floor be replaced? Is there paint peeling from the ceiling? Can the outside stand just a little touch up? There are some who know it's time for a few improvements. Every time it rains, the pots and pans that catch the water play a tune. When we start hearing crickets in the house and feeling the wind blowing through cracks in the door facings, we know its time for a few household improvements.

As winter begins to pass, many focus their attention on household improvements and get ready for spring cleaning. The list is already being prepared and each day it grows longer. Since the house is a major investment, it is of extreme importance to family members who want to do all they can to get a more than adequate return on their investment. Household improvements are necessary and recurring because, even with the best of care, the regular wear and tear of a busy house breaks, wears and strains even the most well built structure. Every house, even one that is brand new, can stand a little improvement.

Household improvement decisions involve deciding whether to add more space, upgrading cabinets, counters, appliances, and fixtures; creating a floor plan that's customized for your life-style, improving energy efficiency with new windows, doors, insulation, and climate control systems; and increasing the resale value of your home. A family that decides on household improvements, does so with the full knowledge of its costs and with full picture in mind of what the family wants to achieve.

Those who own houses know that household improvement is a must. Maintenance keeps things as they are, but improvement makes them even better.

If a house can stand improvement, what about our homes? Can your home stand a little improvement. Are there a few things that need to be spruced up, changed around, redecorated, repaired, expanded or remodeled? If your home is like most homes, the regular wear and tear of daily life takes its toll. Often relationships break down or hang on the hinge waiting to fall any day. Even newly established homes need maintenance.

While our houses, condominiums, apartments and rental units represent major investments, these investments in no way equal the investment made in building a happy home. A tremendous amount of blood sweat and tears has been invested in the creation of a strong family.

Christians are home builders. When they all get together they form churches, which are really home builders associations. Home builders are people who associate together to learn ways to live the Christian life better and to build better homes.

When building or remodeling a house, one key consideration is financing. Without financing, building a house or making improvements to a house is impossible. When building or remodeling a home, the key ingredient is not finance.The key ingredient is love. Without love there can be no home building or home improvement.

As Christians, we have learned that if we allow the power of the Holy Spirit to guide us, we can make home improvements that will increase the value of our family relationships. With God, who is love, we can improve. Without him, our homes will lose.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he makes it known that love is the most essential ingredient in relationships.

The 13th chapter of 1Corinthians is the second of three chapters in which Paul addressed the importance and use of spiritual gifts. In Chapter 12 he noted that each believer has special gifts, according to God's purpose. He warned believers not to become overly occupied with the quantity and type of gifts because all gifts come from God.

In chapter 13 Paul notes that the most essential element to any believer is love. Without love, which is translated "charity," that the unique nature of a believer cannot reveal itself. He emphasized this point in the first three verses by citing several of the gift categories, while noting that each gift is nothing without love.

Even if he could speak every language as fluently as an angel, without love that gift would be useless. If he had prophetic gifts of discerning spirits or the gift of giving and did not know how to love."it profiteth me nothing."

Beginning at verse four Paul begins to describe the attributes of love that are essential for any relationship to exist. These form the basis for an explanation of love that supersedes the carnal.

When all else is said, Paul concluded, love will arise as the greatest component of a believer's life.

Love is essential to home improvement

No one can build a home or make improvements to a home without love. It is the crucial ingredient.

A woman came out of her house and saw 3 old men with long white beards sitting in her front yard. She did not recognize them.

She said, "I don't think I know you, but you must be hungry. Please come in and have something to eat."

"We are home builders. But we can't come in until your whole family is together." The old men sat in the front yard.

In the evening when her family had assembled, she told her husband what had happened. "Go tell them we're here and invite them in," he said. The woman went out and invited the men in.

"We do not go into a house together," they replied.

"Why is that?" she wanted to know.

One of the old men explained: "His name is Peace and Understanding," he said pointing to one of his friends, and said pointing to another one, "He is Happiness and Prosperity, and I am Love." Then he added, "Now go in and discuss with your husband which one of us you want in your home."

The woman went in and told her husband what was said. Her husband was overjoyed. "How nice!!," he said. "Since that is the case, tell happiness and prosperity to come in. Prosperity is what this family needs, we've been down so long."

His wife disagreed. "It could also use a little understanding

Their daughter said, "Why not invite love? Then be filled with love!"

They took the daughters advice and the father said, "Go out and invite Love to be our guest."

The woman went out and asked the 3 old men, "Which one of you is Love? Please come in and be our guest."

Love got up and started walking toward the house. The other two also got up and followed him. Inside, each of the three wave their hands in the air and turned to leave.

Surprised, the lady asked," You told me you were home builders and I invited Love to come in. Why did you all come in? What about my home?"

The old men replied together: "If you had only invited happiness and prosperity or peace and understanding, the other two of us would've stayed out, but since you invited Love, wherever He goes, we go with him. We entered a house but left the ingredients to make it a home. Where there is love, peace, understanding, and happiness follow. Whenever these exist the potential for prosperity is never far behind... if you have love, my daughter, your house becomes a home!"

Home Improvement Punchlist

Contractors who build or remodel homes use what is called a "punch list" to insure that everything that needs to be done is done. Before the job is considered complete, the punchlist is reviewed to see whether or not everything has been done properly. In verses four through seven, Paul gives believers a spiritual punchlist to check the quality of a home essential ingredient which is love.

LOVE IS FOR THE LONG RUN: In verse four Paul uses the term "suffereth" in the context of commitments. Commitment is the difference between those who shack and those who marry. Without a commitment for the long term then partners have a house but not a home, but partners in a home commit for the long term.

LOVE IS KIND: Kindness reflects an attitude and disposition. A family that responds to each other with kindness and understanding builds a sense of security. Families where members yell at each other, curse and insult each other, create a hostile atmosphere that is abrasive. If kindness is lacking, it may be time for a little home improvement.

LOVE IS NOT ENVIOUS: Family members are not competitors they are partners. Unfortunately there are many families that suffer because one family member succeeds and others are envious. If one family member makes a goal, the entire family celebrates, even if others have not completed their own goals. If there is envy in your family, it may be time for a little home improvement.

LOVE DOES NOT BRAG: Being "puffed up" means to brag. Family members don't get the big head, especially at the expense of the feelings of other family members. A brother or sister who does well in school does not brag about personal brilliance while putting down the ignorance of a brother or sister. Love is humble and thankful. Those who love don't make fun of the misfortune of those they claim to love. If this is the case in your family you may need some home improvement.

LOVE BEHAVES PROPERLY: Simply put, those who love each other don't clown each other and act like complete fools. A man who loves is wife doesn't call her names and clown her public. A woman who loves her husband make a scene for all the neighbors to see and hear. People who love each other don't clown each other, make embarrassing scenes and ridicule each other. If this has been the case in your family, then there may be a need for some home improvement.

LOVE IS NOT SELFISH: Family members consider the wants and needs of other family members, not simply one individual's desires. What is good for the family becomes the essential ingredient, rather than what's good for me. It's selfish for one family member to insist on having it his way or her wall all of the time. Those who love, consider the needs of the entire family, if this is not the case in your family, maybe there is a need for some home improvement.

LOVE IS NOT EASILY PROVOKED: It is possible to disturb a family that loves, but it's not easy. Gossip, rumors, lies and untruths often destroy families that allow provocations from the outside to provoke. Sometimes the provocations come from in-laws whose well intended advice works to turn husband against wife and interferes in the development of a home. It is difficult to provoke a family that loves. If your family is easily provoked by outside influences, then it may be time for some family improvement.

LOVE IS NOT SUSPICIOUS: A key element of love is trust. Family members who love each other trust each other. However, trust extends to the limit of past experience. Those who have no negative experience trust without question. Others trust with one eye open. Love promotes and respects trust which smothers suspicion. If you have little trust in your family, you may need some home improvement.

LOVE DOES NOT REJOICE IN FAILURE: A family that loves gets no joy out of the downfall of a family member. Every member of the family, even those that are the proverbial "black sheep" are objects of a family's love. If a family member is caught in a negative situation and experiences a set back, families don't rejoice. They are wounded by what they experience. If there are members of your family who celebrate the downfall of other family members, you may need a little home improvement.

LOVE BEARS AND ENDURES: Family members who love each other both bears and endures all things. They accept the good and the bad. They love, despite flaws and short comings and seek the good of every family member. A family that loves can bear the burden of sickness, poverty, misfortune, death and a plethora of other ills. A family that is not willing to bear the flaws of its weakest members, is a family that may need a little home improvement.

Home Improvement Contractor

Finally, brothers and sisters, when home improvements are necessary, it's a good idea to call in an expert.

When a house needs improvement, many people save money by doing it themselves. You may be able to repair a torn screen or fix a leaky faucet yourself. You may be able to replace broken tiles or even patch a leaky roof yourself.

But when it comes to home improvements, it's not a good idea to try do it yourself methods.

Regardless to your education and training there are some things you can't do yourself.

A lawyer is trained in the legal craft, but when a lawyer needs a lawyer, he goes beyond himself. In fact a lawyer who represents himself is generally said to have a fool for a client.

A doctor is trained in the medical profession. He may be the best in his profession but when the doctor needs surgery, it's not a good idea for him to try to do it himself.

A psychiatrist is trained at analyzing the mental condition of his patients, but it's not a good idea for the psychiatrist to try to analyze themselves.

When we build a house or make improvements, many people will hire a contractor or a home improvement expert, to make sure the improvements are done according to plan.

When we need home improvement, if we go to the home builders association, they'll tell you name of a good contractor.

If you go to a child of God and say, "We need a home improvement expert, can you make me a recommendation?" Every child of God will recommend world's best home improvement team...1-1-1- Home builders, run by the Father, Son and the Holy Ghost.

When they make a home improvement they begin with love.

I know it's based on love because John 3:16 says, "For God so loved the World that he gave his only begotton Son"

When the Lord makes an improvement, he turns:

—DISTRUST into trust; CONFUSION into peace!

—DISUNITY into unity; ENEMIES into friends;

When the Lord makes a home improvement he does it without a fee because it has already been paid for...all we have to do is call him up!

If you family is sick and wants to get well, call up and tell him what you want! He's name is Jesus! He died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning he arose from the dead with all power in his hands!

Call him and tell him what you want!

Is Your Home Heaven or Hell?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 11, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "The smallest family will multiply into a large clan. The tiniest group will become a mighty nation. I, the LORD, will bring it all to pass at the right time." Isaiah 60:22

Introduction

How would you describe the atmosphere in your home? Is it happy, warm, caring, friendly, safe, and secure? Is your home the place you can't wait to get to and feel terrible about being away from? Is your home like a warm fire in the winter, and a cool breeze in the summer? Does that describe your home? If so, your home is a virtual heaven. Many people have another definition of home. When many people think of home they think of some place that is cold, uncaring, unfriendly, and insecure; more like icebergs in the winter and blazing fires in the summer. For some, home is heaven. For others, the very thought of home is hell.

There are many people today who live in unhappy homes. They are what Isaac Hayes described in the early 1970's as "One Big Unhappy Family." An unhappy family is a miserable family. It is people who live in the same house but feel insecure, afraid, unloved and sad. The unhappy families of America contributed to a 700 percent increase in the number of divorces between 1960 and 2000. In 1960 there were 393,000 divorces. Last year, there were an estimated 1.2 million divorces. This year alone over 1 million children are expected to be involved in a family that breaks up. A new course is taught to children of divorcees. It is taught by other children of divorces, it involves how to play one parent against the other and get everything you want.

There are three divinely ordained units of society: the home, government and the church. The devil is out to destroy our entire society and he begins by working on the most powerful unit of the three which is the home. The old saying is true, "so goes the home, so goes the church; so goes the church, so goes the government, so goes the government, so goes the nation, so goes the nation, so goes the world."

How does the devil destroy a family? There are many ways to destroy a family, but one way is to make it unhappy! An unhappy homes shifts from a heavenly experience to a living hell.

A certain husband was frustrated with his wife. He felt she was insensitive and made his home life miserable. So he paid a visit to his doctor and gave his doctor a

$1,000 tip to talk to his wife. . Afterwards, the doctor took his wife aside and said, "Unless you do the following things, your husband will surely die." The doctor then went on to say, "Here's what you need to do. Every morning make sure you serve him a good healthy breakfast. Meet him at home each day for lunch so that you can serve him a well balanced meal. Make sure that you feed him a good hot meal each evening and don't over burden him with any stressful conversation, nor ask him to perform any household chores. Also, keep the house spotless and clean so that he doesn't get exposed to any threatening germs." On the way home, the husband asked his wife what the doctor said. She replied, "He said that you're going to die!"

How happy is your home? On a scale of one to ten would you consider your home a "one" which is very sad or a "10" which is very happy? Nick Stinnet, Chairman of the Department of Human Development and Family at the University of Nebraska researched thousands of families in the 1990's and concluded that strong and happy families had several common traits:

Families that rate tens are happy families because they:

-Love one another and are committed to one another.

-Spend time together and care for one another.

-Regularly expresses appreciation to each other and makes every family member feel important.

-Communicate well and truthfully.

-Work through ever crisis as a team, regardless to the hurt felt by individual members.

-Have strong beliefs in God and count on him for strength and guidance.

The goal of every Christian family is to grow stronger in the Lord. One way to do that is to learn that the key component of a strong family is to have a "happy" family. Happy families endure! Happy Families survive! Happy Families thrive!

As believers we have found the blueprint for a happy family. It is rooted in faith and belief in God. A family that lives in the joy of the Lord, is a happy family.

Exposition

This text focuses upon Isaiah as he looks to the future state of Israel and the world.

Isaiah made a majestic prophecy about the coming state of the kingdom of God beginning with its smallest units, its families to the entire nation.

The entire 60th chapter carries this optimistic tone..that God is going to build a happy, prosperous, safe and secure nation of believers that will inhabit the earth.

Isaiah tells how the nation itself will be enlightened (v1-2), that will grow and join in the service of God (v. 3-8), that it will be great in honor and reputation (v 14-16), that it shall enjoy peace and happiness (v. 17-18), and that its joy shall be everlasting (v 19-21).

The rebuilding and strengthening of the nation would not begin on a national scope, but would begin in its smallest units and spread forward. The Living Bible records verse 22 in this manner, "The smallest family will multiply into a large clan.

The tiniest group will become a mighty nation. I, the LORD, will bring it all to pass at the right time."

The world of peace and happiness begins in the home and will multiply until it sweeps the entire nation.

Five L's of a Happy Family

The key elements of a happy family rest on five principles that are unalterably true.

HAPPY FAMILIES EXERCISE LOVE: No family is stronger than the affection of its weakest member. Love is the binding glue that holds a husband and wife together with children. Real family love is impossible outside of God. Families can have a multitude of relationships, but real happiness is only attainable through love..the bible says, God is love. A family without God is a family with love.

HAPPY FAMILIES LIVE LIFE TOGETHER: Families grow and bond when they share common experiences. It is difficult for families to function if each family member operates separate from the other. If your husband is involved in an effort, so is the wife and children. When your children are involved in activity at school or church, both mom and dad should not be far behind. When mom is at the forefront, the entire family pitches in to do its part. Families spend time together. It is so important to a happy family that every family should insure that its calendar of career, social and employment obligations does not crowd family time out of the picture. The happy family goes out to dinner, the movies, attends sports activities, the theater, travels, explores and discovers life..together!

HAPPY FAMILIES LIFT EACH OTHER UP. Families that are happy are havens of appreciation. Why do children love grandma and grandpa so much? Because as a general rule, grandma and grandpa, pour out praise and affection with a passion. In happy families, appreciation is expressed often, even for the little things. Yes, taking out the garbage is a chore, but it feels better when it looks like everyone appreciates the way it's done. Yes, washing dishes is a chore, but it makes it much easier when family members show appreciation for the dishwasher. Cooking is a necessity, but it makes the cook feel better about it when it looks like everyone appreciated what was prepared. Families that are happy are not stingy with the praise! They lift each other up!

HAPPY FAMILIES LAUGH TOGETHER: It's a sad family that has no laughter. Happy families laugh when they remember their good times. The laugh at their past. Happy families even laugh at their mistakes, bloopers and mess ups. Strong families laugh with each member, not at each member. No family should be so serious that it cannot enjoy a good laugh. One mark of happy families is the willingness of its family members to do crazy things together. It's not unusual in a happy family, to see a dad who is an important community leader, crawling on the floor with his children. It's not unusual to see a mom who is quiet and reserve in public, scream to the top of her voice in a family sing along... Families have fun! They laugh together!

HAPPY FAMILIES LISTEN: Communication is important to every family.

Families that are happy spend time listening to each other. Listening involves a focused effort to hear, appreciate and understand what another family member is saying, free of distractions. Listening while watching the game on television is not really listening, it's hearing, but it is not focused. Those who listen get inside the personality of the person speaking to the point that they share the frustration, joy, sadness or pain of what is being said. Good listeners are those who can both hear and empathize at the same time.

Families rooted in Christ last

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should note that families rooted in Christ, last.

The foundation of every strong family is that family's faith in God. Belonging to a church doesn't make families happy, faith in God makes families happy and reflects itself as happy families share their joy with other families in the body of Christ.

Happy Families last. The average family experiences a variety of crises and conflicts. Crises vary from a child failing in school, to an unwanted pregnancy, major illnesses, or financial disasters. Happy families last. Happy Families out last difficulties. The purpose of loving, lifting, laughing living it up and listening together is to help the family last through storms.

Christ told a parable of two families that built homes. One built their house on the sand another built their house on a rock. When the storms came the house on the sand collapsed, but the one on the rock stood.

Families that last can withstand the blast because their families are founded on a rock.

When a house is built is done with the expectation that it will be able to endure the weather conditions of the area. A house built in an area that rains regularly, is expected to be water resistant. If it is windy it is expected to be strong. Eskimos build igloos because they live in the ice and igloos can withstand the cold and keep them warm at the same time.

A strong family expects a storm and is prepared to offer shelter for its members in a time of storm.

Families don't fall apart because they are poor..that's a storm, but a family rooted in the Lord..out lasts the storm!

Families don't fall apart because someone loses a job..that's a storm, but families rooted in the Lord out last the storm!

Families don't fall apart because someone in the family slips and breaks the law...that's a storm, strong families out last storms!

Families don't fall apart because there are problems..problems are storms, but strong families out last the blast!

Strong families need church families that help them grow even stronger.

Strong families need a church family that loves each other and shows it in good times and bad.

Strong families need a church family that spends time with its children, cares for elderly and sick and promotes the growth and strength of its adult members!

Strong families need a church family that recognizes the importance of every member's contribution and makes every person, even those performing the most trivial task, feel important.

Strong families need a church family that laughs together, travels together, celebrates together and creates memorable moments.

Strong families need a church family that will be there for them in times of family crises and struggle to lend a helping hand and say and encouraging word!

Strong families need a church family that will help them learn more about the love of God and his mercy!

The more a family knows about the Lord, the more your family becomes a heaven on earth.

If family members don't love each other, there's not much heaven there, but a whole lot of hell!

If family don't appreciate each other, there's not much heaven there, but a whole lot of hell!

If family members don't have time for each other, there's not much heaven there, but a whole lot of hell!

If family members don't laugh and have fun together, there's not much heaven there, but a whole lot of hell!

If family members don't share each others burdens in times of crises, there's not much heaven there, but a whole lot hell!

If family members don't know the Lord, there's not much heaven there, but a whole lot of hell!

No matter how strong a family is, it cannot stand unless it knows the love the Lord!

A family that knows the Lord may not have much, but they can sing the words of the song writer, "I sing because I'm happy! I sing because I'm free, his eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me!"

A family that knows the Lord, knows that storms may rise and winds may blow, but God is a shelter in time of storm!

A family that knows the Lord, holds on to the solid rock!

This rock is Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

This rock is Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

This rock is Jesus, the only one! Be very sure! Be very sure!

Your anchor holds and grips the solid rock!

Happy Meals

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 18, 2001

SCRIPTURE:"Then he said to me, "Write: 'Blessed are those who are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb!' " And he said to me, "These are the true sayings of God." Rev. 19:9

Introduction

Do you think there will ever be a day when families will eat their meals standing up, at separate times, in the car, on the run, or in different rooms of the house? If that question had been asked forty years ago, there would have been laughter everywhere. The thought of families eating at separate times was unthinkable. The prospect of family members taking a plate and eating in separate rooms or in the same room but in different places only existed for in the imagination of science fiction writers. Warming of meals instantly with the push of a button was not imaginable. It was just as unimaginable as microwave hamburgers and French Fries, Pop Tarts, and Chinese food. It was unimaginable because 40 years ago, meal time was not so much about food as it was about family fellowship, communication and memorable moments. While it was unimaginable 40 years ago, that scenario does exist today. The family meal, which was once the focal point of the day, is now reserved for special occasions. In fact, Thanksgiving has become one of the most sacred holidays in the nation, not for its spiritual implications, but because its one of the rare opportunities for the entire family to sit down at the same table and share a meal.

The family meal is becoming a dinosaur. It has virtually disappeared from the regular ritual of most families. This anomaly is reflected in the architecture of many homes, which choose not to waste an entire room for dining that happens only once a year. Dining rooms have become off limit rooms, dining tables have become home work tables and family dining has become so rare that if a family has a "sit down" dinner the children may ask, "Is it Thanksgiving already?" A family that buys fine China today, usually expects to use it once or twice a year, at Thanksgiving and Christmas. Even special guests in the home, will find it a really rare treat, if the hosts, instead of taking them out to dinner, treat them to an old fashioned sit down dinner with the whole family present.

According to the Food Marketing Institute, only 40 percent of American families eat meals together, and then no more than two or three times a week. What is happening to the family meal is a reflection of what is happening to our society in general, whether it is good or bad depends upon whether you have ever known anything better. Speed, distractions, and individualism are the hall marks of today's society. The general society wants everything fast, it is preoccupied by a growing number of distractions and the tendency toward individualism. Thus, the family meal takes too long, does not allow an opportunity to eat and indulge in a distraction, and works against an individual's desire to do his own thing and eat at the same time. Because of these limitations some believe, this generation may be among the last to remember the traditional family meal. Even the last traditional sit down meal, Thanksgiving is often rushed because it happens between the Christmas parade and the kickoff of someone's favorite televised football game..

Family meals are important, not just nutritionally, but they are important because they give the family a chance to fellowship, bond and participate in a memorable moment. Meal time is also what educators call a "teachable moment." It's a time when at least one truth can be taught, when guards are down.

The family meal is a happy time, but in today's society it takes plenty of planning and a strong family leader to make it happen. The forces outside of the home are tremendous. Getting everyone to the table at the same time requires a level of energy and will power that some family leaders have dismissed as unattainable. Is it worth the effort? Sociologist think so, because it builds strong families. Margaret Mackenzie, a nutritional anthropologist, says, "The family meal is much more than food on the table. You are creating warm, happy memories and meanings your children will carry with them the rest of their lives."

The seniors among us probably agree with Ms. Mackenzie. They remember meal times as happy times. There are some who remember the family breakfast, the family lunch and the family supper. They remember drawing the anger of their mothers if they were late for any of the three. As they became older they watched the family lunch disappear. As mom entered the work force, they saw the family breakfast reduced to a few sips of coffee, a bowl of cereal or a roll and a glass of juice, as family members rushed out of the door. The last to survive was the family dinner which fell prey to work schedules, television, school activities, church activities, and a plethora of other distractions that closed the window of time for the evening meal. The happy times disappeared altogether, that is ....until Thanksgiving.

It is a happy time because the family laughs and talks. It is a happy time because the family bonds. It is a happy time because it creates memories like time grandpa was trying to eat corn and his false teeth fell in the coffee cup. Or the time the new baby spit his baby food into grandma's oatmeal and she didn't know it. After tasting a spoonful, grandma said, "This is the best oatmeal I've ever had!" It's a happy time because mom smiles. It's a happy time because the children giggle and the troubles of the world seem to disappear. Unfortunately the only happy meal that some young people know is provided by McDonald's. To them a happy meal means a hamburger in a beautifully decorated box with a toy.

The old folks had rules about family meals. Family meals were safe. A child who made a bad grade wouldn't get criticized at the dinner table. There was no business discussed at dinner. No lectures, arguments or sulking was allowed at the family meal.

The family meal was light. It involved the funny things that happened at school and work. It involved talk about family plans for vacations, trips and weekends. It involved fellowship that made everyone feel good. Anyone who broke the rules would surely hear one of the older family members say, "not at the dinner table...this is not the place."

It's also a time that the head of the family, acting as the family minister, offers prayers for his family's safety and strength. It's a time when the family sees dad or the mom whose wearing his hat, in a spiritual light. They see the family leader as God's representative in the home.

We lose a lot, when we lose the family meal. We lose an opportunity to see ourselves, in one setting, as special units in the kingdom of God.

As believers, we enjoy the fellowship of family and friends who dine at the banquet table of our Lord. It is a happy time, and time of rejoicing for it is a time of promise.

Exposition

This text focuses on the last meal time listed in scripture, which is depicted as a time of rejoicing.

John, sharing the Revelation given to him by Christ, points to a time during the last seven years of time when the marriage table of Christ and his church will be set. He depicts this time as a "blessed" or "happy" occasion in which there will be great celebration.

Meal time, in the biblical context, was a very important time. Families were brought together, victories were celebrated, memorials were undertaken and great fellowship existed.

Five of the great celebrations of the Old Testament were celebrated with great family and communal meals. They included: The Passover, Pentecost, Purim, Feast of the Tabernacles and Purim. All of these were sacred times, but also happy times and fun times.

When someone was married, there was a happy meal..a feast planned. Such a feast was planned by Samson when he married a new wife in Judges 14:10.

When birthdays were celebrated there were happy meals..feasts. Such a birthday party was given by Herod in Matthew 14:6 and Pharaoh in Genesis 40:20

On special religious observances the meals lasted for as long as a week, with an endless stream of food, family and fellowship. Such a fellowship was ordered in the law in Leviticus 23:40.

In Deuteronomy 16:11-14 the people were commanded to observe the festival of Shelters for seven days as well as other memorable events that celebrated their deliverance from slavery. In verse 14 the command read, "This festival will be a happy time of rejoicing with your family, your servants, and with the Levites, foreigners, orphans, and widows from your towns."

Without a doubt, meal time, was viewed as a happy time for family and friends.

A Happy Meal

Finally, when Jesus observed the Last supper with his disciples, it was not a solemn occasion but a happy meal.

Jesus sat with his disciples around him and told them, what was once the Passover would become a memorial to his life and death.

It was the last happy meal.It was a happy meal because it celebrated the fulfillment of God's promise to mankind. It was the last happy meal but it wasn't his first happy meal.

When Jesus began his public ministry he attended a wedding feast. When the wine for the feast ran out, Jesus turned the water into wine. The wedding celebration was a happy meal.

Jesus was often accused of sharing happy moments and meals with people of ill repute, prostitutes, tax collectors and publicans. He taught them great truths as they shared bread from the same table. Those meals were happy meals.

Anytime a saint of God can celebrate the goodness of the Lord, it is a happy time.

When a widow woman found herself down to her last cup of meal and last cruz of oil, even though she though she was eating her last meal, it was a happy meal because she knew the Lord would provide.

Anytime a saint of God gets a blessing from the Lord it is a happy time!

I don't know about you, but I believe every child of God should have something to talk about, when you think about the goodness of the Lord!

When you think about how the Lord brought you out of darkness into his marvelous light, it ought to be get happy time!

When you think about how he picked you up and turned you around, it ought to be get happy time!

When you think about how he came to your hospital room and rolled you out to your bedroom, it ought to be get happy time!

When you think about how he took you from your doctor's hand and put you in his own hand, it ought to be get happy time!

That's when you get the family together!

Come here children! I've got some collard greens and corn bread, Black eyed peas, rice and gravy, fried chicken, candied yams and a passel fresh cabbage greens.

Come here children! I've got a whole pot of pork steak, smothered beef tips, and hot buttered biscuits!

But what's on the menu is not what I'm happy about. Sit down children and let me tell what I'm happy about!

I'm happy because he wakes me up each morning and clothes me in my right mind!

I'm happy because in a time of trouble, he's a shelter in a time of storm!

I'm happy because when I was down and out he picked me up and turned me around!

No wonder the song writer wrote, "I sing because I'm happy! I sing because I'm free! His eye is own the sparrow and I know he watches me!"

Sit down children let me tell about the goodness of the Lord!

He saved me and he loved!

He loved me so much that he picked up an old rugged cross and carried it to Calvary!

Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

I'm happy!

I'm happy!

I'm happy in Jesus!

What about you?

The Lord Hath Need of Him

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 8, 2001

SCRIPTURE: And saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him, and bring him. 3 And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye that the Lord hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither." Mark 11:2-3

Introduction

Have you ever wondered what church folk were like before they became Christians? On any given Sunday there are millions of believers who sing in choirs, lead worship and deacons, serve as ushers or otherwise diligently work in the church? There are some in the crowds that we know because we grew up with them. But there are others that we don't know? What were they like before they became Christians? The believer who says amen and seems so holy today, has that believer always been so pious? The church mother who is the stern task master, the preacher who condemns sin, the Sunday School teacher that constantly lectures us about doing what is right..were they always the way we see them now?

On any given Sunday there are millions of believers around the world that shout hallelujah, praise the Lord and lift up holy hands. Yet, in every crowd that shouts Hosanna are individuals with a story to tell of how knowing God actually changed their lives.

When Christ rode into Jerusalem, scriptures tell us of the crowds of people that followed him along the way praising God. They also teach us about those that met him in the city. They all cut down palm branches and covered the streets from him to enter. Among those that met him were many whose lives had just recently been changed for ever because his presence.

As Christians, we too can testify that on any given Sunday, as we praise God, we are living witnesses of lives that have changed. We are not totally pleased with our present level of spirituality. But there is one thing we know for certain...since the day he touched us..we have never been the same.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he selects a donkey to ride into the city of Jerusalem. When Jesus prepared to come into Jerusalem he instructed his disciples to secure him a young "colt" donkey upon which he would ride. The instruction he gave identified the donkey that he wanted. It was to be untamed, tied and never been ridden before. He told the disciples that if the owner asked why the colt was being taken, they were to respond, "The master has need of him."

While much attention has been focused on the events leading up to and following Jesus' triumphant entry into Jerusalem, little attention has been paid to that simple instruction he gave to his disciples.

The donkey in the bible is the bible is the symbol of the hard working but unrefined. Often God has used images of donkeys to make certain truths known to men. When Balaam was enroute to attempt to curse Israel, God opened the mouth of his donkey and caused the donkey to speak. When Israel strayed away from God, the entire nation was characterized as a wild donkey pulling against God (Jeremiah 2:24). As a general rule the donkey was an animal that carried heavy loads and has often been called a beast of burden.

The kings of Old Testament times, before the wide spread use of horses, rode donkeys in parade procession. When Zechariah in Zechariah 9:9 foretold the triumphant arrival of Jesus into Jerusalem he said, "Rejoice greatly oh daughter of Zion behold thy king cometh unto thee, he is just and having salvation, lowly and riding upon an ass, upon a colt the foal of an ass."

Thus, the donkey came to represent the burdened, but wild nature of the people of God. It was strong but untamed and difficult, moody, edgy and easily frightened. When Jesus told his disciples to find a donkey and insisted on an unbroken unridden colt, he did so to fulfill the prophecy of Zechariah and at the same time symbolize his own relationship with a stubborn mankind.

Asking for a colt that had not been ridden by a man, meant the young donkey was wild and unpredictable. The loud noise of the crowd could easily provoke him and instead of a triumphant entry, the crowds could easily have seen something similar to a modern bronco rider in a rodeo.

The fact that Jesus not only asked for the donkey but was able to ride into the city on his back without any incident, bucking and resistance has an important meaning for those who are sometimes guilty of making a donkey out of themselves. There was a crowd and donkeys are sensitive to crowds and loud noises and wild donkeys will resist being ridden. Yet Jesus rode triumphantly through the city.

Donkey Training

The bible doesn't say how Jesus was able to mount a wild donkey and ride him, but those know what's needed to break a donkey enough to ride him, are quick to point out that the steps involved in the training the donkey are the same steps God uses to get men and women to carry the burden of the King of Kings.

Professional donkey trainers say before you can break a wild donkey it enough to ride him several things must be done. Together these help establish a relationship between the trainer and the donkey. Good trainers build relationship.

If there is a little donkey in all of us and Christ wants to use us in his service, then whatever he did to get that donkey to let him ride, he is probably trying to do for each of us.

THE TRAINER MUST GET THE DONKEY TO LOOK AT HIM: Donkey trainers report that before you can break a wild donkey the trainer must be able to get the donkey to his head and watch him. The same is true with our relationship with God. Before he can really do anything with us or for us, we have to look at him. There are so many today who refuse to look God's way.

They'll watch a football or basketball game but they won't look God's way

They'll watch the stock market, the opposite sex, or their television sets but they won't look God's way!

They'll watch the world over and see its every nook and cranny, but they won't look God's way!

In our wildness and stubbornness, if we would but look upon his face, we'd take the first step in changing our lives

THE TRAINER MUST GET THE DONKEY TO STEP TOWARD HIM: Often trainers will stand in front of donkeys that recognize them and attempt to get the donkey to make one step toward him. Just one step, that's what begins the Christian's journey to glory...one step! It's a small step but a mighty step. Those who stubbornly resist Christ are reluctant to take even the smallest steps toward him. The rich young ruler asked, "What must I do to be saved?" then failed to make the first step, when he heard the answer. Many today resist taking even the smallest steps, such as attending a worship service, reading a bible or religious material, or even talking about their spirituality. But building a relationship with Christ requires those of us who are as stubborn as donkeys to make that first step toward him and he will do the rest.

THE TRAINER MUST BE ABLE TO TOUCH THE DONKEY: If the trainer can get the donkey to allow him to touch him and rub him he is on his way. There are many people who have never been touched by the hand of God. They have never opened themselves in a way that the Holy Spirit could touch and move in their lives. Once Christ has touched a person's life, they are different. A woman met him at the well one day. After just a brief conversation, she ran everywhere telling everybody..come see a man who told me all I've ever done. The song writer wrote: "He touched me. He touched me and oh the joy that floods my soul. Something happened and now I know, he touched me and made me whole."

PICK UP THE DONKEY'S FEET: The trainer really develops a closer relationship with the donkey, when the donkey allows the trainer to pick up his feet. One at time the trainer talks to the donkey and lifts one foot at a time. Even the stubbornest person opens up to God when God does something to pick him up when he has fallen down. When the jailers who were keeping Paul in prison found out that the jail doors had been opened and prisoners could have escaped, he prepared to kill himself. When he saw the awesome power of God displayed by the opening of the jail cells, he instantly wanted to be saved...and convinced his whole family to be saved as well. God can and will pick up and restore shattered lives, lost opportunities and broken spirits if given the chance.

GET THE DONKEY TO FOLLOW: The next and hardest step for the trainer is to get the donkey to follow him and allow himself to be pushed to the left and to the right and stop when he wants him to. That's essential. Any person who wants to be a servant in the kingdom of God must be a follower of God. When we allow God to guide our lives we allow him to tell us when to go to the left and when to go to the right. Such a person also learns how to stop and go at God's command. That's the idea of proverbs 3:5 "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not to thine own understanding." An old Gospel song says, "Lead me, guide me along the way. Lord if you lead me I will not stray. Lord let me walk each day with thee. Lead me oh Lord lead me!"

The Lord Have Need of Him

Finally, brothers and Sisters we should consider that when Jesus came into Jerusalem he performed a minor miracle that was noticed only by those who knew the difference

When Jesus rode into the city there were many that marveled at the crowd shouting "Hosanna." There were others who marveled at the thousands of country folk who laid palm branches in the way. However, there were others who noticed a small miracle that went almost unnoticed, as he rode into the city on the back of an untamed donkey that carried him as if he wasn't even there.

Many of Christ's miracles were easy to recognize but there were thousands of unseen miracles.

Everybody at the wedding saw him turn water into wine, but when he came into Jerusalem there was an unseen miracle.

Everybody saw the lame man at the pool get up and walk, but when he came into Jerusalem, there was an unseen miracle!

Everybody saw the blind man who was able to see again, but when he came into Jerusalem, there was an unseen miracle!

Everybody saw Lazarus come forth from the grave, but when he came into Jerusalem, there was an unseen miracle!

While every body saw the crowds that cheered as he entered the city, the miracle that folks didn't see was a donkey that was once wild, in the service of the Lord!

Among the millions of believers today are many who were just like that donkey. If the truth is told, there are millions who are sitting in worship services today praising God who were once wild and untamed.

There is somebody singing in the choir today, who just a few years ago would have been to worn out from Saturday night parties to even wake up. That's a little miracle!

There is somebody on the usher board today, who just a few years ago would have been too hung over to stand up, let alone stand at an usher's post. That's a little miracle!

There is somebody in the pulpit, deacon board , mother' s board and congregation today, who is saying amen and praising the Lord, but just a few years ago, was running wild and loose in the city. That's a little miracle.

It took a little unseen miracle to take wild and untamed lives like our ours ,and harness them in the service of the Lord.

When we consider what we once were, then we understand what Paul meant when he said, "And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." 1 Cor. 6:11

Today the Lord is still sending out the command, go into the city find me a man or woman.

He may be a little wild and untamed, but that's alright!

He may be a little rough around the edges, but that's alright!

If anybody questions why you are recruiting this man or woman, tell them, "The Lord hath need of him"

Isaiah said, "Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me." Isaiah 6:8

I don't know about you, but I've decided that "if the Lord needs somebody..here am I Lord..send me!"

Send me and I tell everybody that you are a mighty good God in a time of trouble!

Send me and I tell them that you can:

–TAKE WRONGS and make them right again!; TAKE WHAT'S DOWN and bring it up!

–WHAT'S DEFEATED and give it the victory!; TAKE WHAT BROKEN and put it back together again!

Send me and I tell them how you carried an old cross up Golgotha's hill!

I'll tell them how you died out on Calvary!

I'll tell them how early Sunday morning you arose from the grave!

If the Lord needs somebody, here am I...send me!

If You Take It Fast, You Better Watch Yourself

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For God's Family Church

April 12, 2001

Scripture: "And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living. 14 And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want. 15 And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine. 16 And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat: and no man gave unto him. 17 And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger! 18 I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee." Luke 15:13-18

Introduction

Have you ever noticed that there are some people who live fast? Living fast is a way of saying that we are racing through life at a pace that is so dangerous that we threaten to collide with something somewhere. Many young people, and many adults for that matter, live life extremely fast. It is not unusual in modern times to see pre-teens wearing stockings and lipstick. It's not unusual for 13 year olds to go out on dates and for teenagers to drink alcohol, have sex and to have babies. The world invites them to live fast and die hard and young.

Living fast is dangerous and it is wasteful. Those who are attempting to live fast should watch themselves and take heed from those who have unsuccessfully tried the same life-style.

When Solomon wrote the book of Ecclesiastes he summarized his youthful experiences. There were many to summarize. He lived the fast life for a great while. He spent money wildly. He stage great parties and invited some of the nation's greatest musicians to play at his parties. He married beautiful women and put hundreds more into his official care. He built buildings, studied a little, wrote and explored life to its fullest. In his senior years, he scribbled the words of the Ecclesiastes Chapter 12, "Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth.." He later added, "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter, fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man."

Those who speed through life run the risk of missing the real important things that it offers. The most important thing life offers, is a relationship with Christ. Thus, youth should be warned, “If you take it fast, you better watch yourself!”

The Prodigal Wanted To Live Fast

There are many youth today who are like the prodigal in this text. They want to take life fast. The prodigal asking his father for his inheritance before his father’s death was a staggering request. It is equivalent today of a child asking his parent to cash in insurance policies, sell properties that might be included in an inheritance and divide up all resources that would be forthcoming in the future.

That was an awesome request, but yet the son in the text wanted just that. Surprisingly, the father concurred with his request and gave him the cash equivalent to his inheritance in advance.

For the prodigal, the “far country” represented a distant unnamed place. For youth today, the “far country” is anywhere there is action.

The far country is where there are plenty of lights, parties, thrills and chills. That seems to be the place to live. It is different than the boring routines of home. Many youth find their own lives boring and the routines imposed by their parents symbolic of the slow life. They want to live life free and fast.

Today, many young people are like the this young man they want to take life fast. The regimentation of their father’s house is too great and they want it fast. It is not unusual for this generation. It likes everything fast. It wants fast food, the faster the better. It wants fast information, fast fun, fast love and fast living. It is a generation obsessed with speed that borders on recklessness. Included in this fast living syndrome is also the desire to live recklessly.

Living fast requires youth to neglect education, which disciplines the mind.

Living fast requires youth to forego any means of restraining themselves for the future, because it emphasizes living in the now.

By necessity, living fast also leads to wasted substance.

There are many today that are living “large” off the fruit of someone else’s labor. Living “large” diminishes with resources. There are many who have discovered, like the prodigal, that when their money runs out, so do their friends and associates. People party hardy when the money is flowing. But when it is gone “so called” friends usually are no where to be found.

As long as a person has money to buy a nice ride, floss a while and shine, he’s an all right “G.” But when he’s broke he is all alone.

Living fast usually entails reckless consumption. Consumption without saving and restraint only leads to despair. Consumables only last a short period of time before they are “consumed.”

Flashy jewelry, cars, wild parties and spending binges all cost money. It doesn’t take long to deplete a stash of cash if everything is going out and nothing is coming in. A person may start out “banking” but end up “ganking.” There is no worse feeling that the thud one feels when he hits the bottom after falling from the top.

When the money runs out

What happens when the money runs out? Youth who live large but suddenly run out of money get an instant "reality" check. Without money their whole life changes.

In the text, the prodigal sold himself to slop hogs. What is that like?

Many seniors who lived on farms are familiar with slopping hogs, while youth are not. Country living was frugal and nothing was thrown away. When the family sits at a table to eat, nothing that was edible was thrown into the garbage. Somewhere in the house, usually in the kitchen, a large bucket was kept to contain all the scraps of food and left overs off every plate. It was called a slop bucket. Once the slop bucket was filled someone was assigned the task of taking the slop out to the hog pen. Hogs in real life are not like the ones in movies. In the movies hogs are shown pretty and white, cute and cuddly. In reality, hogs are muddy, smelling, and nasty. Hog pens are usually muddy, and smelling. The slop is pour into a trough in the hog pen and the hogs would almost trample each other as they gobbled up the slop.

In the text, the prodigal was reduced to slopping hogs, which for a Jew was the lowest of jobs, because they were scripturally unclean.

Even today some youth who live fast have been reduced to low levels of existence just to survive. Some activities they involve themselves in, may even border on being illegal. There are teens who are couriers for drug dealers. Others involve themselves in petty crimes to keep the money flowing. They reduce themselves to "feeding the swine" just to "maintain."

He came to himself

Youth should pay close attention to the prodigal's experience. "He came to himself" marks the turning point in his life. The turning point is when he reviewed his own life situation and realized that he had reached its lowest point. When he came to himself, the prodigal thought about his father and concluded that if he returned home he could have a better life, even without an inheritance. When he returned he found a forgiving father waiting with open arms.

Youth today should consider their own far country experience. Does it live up to the hype? Is there a better way? Is it too late to start again?

The answers are simple. The far country life never lives up to the hype. It is hyped up to be a life of fast fun, filled with chillin and grillin. It turns out to be a life that is dangerous, treacherous and dog eat dog.

There is a better way. Youth never escape the world but they learn to be "in" the world but not "of" the world. The better way is to live a life dedicated to the living for Christ.

It is not too late! As long as a person is living and breathing it is not to late. Anyone who desires to do so, can do just as the prodigal did, and say in his own heart, "Father I have sinned" and salvation will be offered when connected with a repentant spirit.

Youth who have wandered through the fast life of this world....come home!

Youth who have strayed away from the teachings of their youth....come home!
Youth who have given some of their best years to the hood.....come home!
Youth, who have lowered their sights from the divine to the worldly....come home!
I hear the song writer clearly, "I've wandered far away from home. Now I'm coming home. Too long the paths of sin I've trod, Lord I'm coming home!"
Come home and Jesus will meet you down the road...
"Open wide thine arms of love...Lord I'm coming home!"
Come home and Jesus will give you new life!
It is a life he went to Calvary to secure!
It is a life he arose from the grave to guarantee!
All you need to do is say!..."Lord I'm coming home!"

What A Difference A Day Makes

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE:Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you. John 20:19

Introduction

Have you ever had a bad day? A bad day is extremely frustrating because everything that can go wrong does! On bad days cars malfunction, keys get lost, children get sick, deadlines are missed, opportunities are lost, reputations are tarnished, mistakes are made, lies are told, wounds are inflicted and pain is endured. Bad days are unavoidable. They often come unannounced and give us little opportunity to respond to them. Bad days, at the very least, are aggravating.

Bad days don't discriminate. Children have bad days. Adults have bad days. People of all races cultures and creeds, all have experienced those irritating times when everything that could go wrong did go wrong.

Consider the man who went to work after an especially bad day. The people in the office could always tell when Tom was having trouble at home. One friend said, Tom, how was your day? Tom said, "I had very bad day. Me and my wife got into it. We argue like cats and dogs." The friends shook his head and said, "You did have a bad day.!" Then Tom added, "But before the day was over with she came crawling to me on her hands and knees!" Impressed the friend asked, "What did she say to you?" Tom answered, "She said, Tom, come out from under this bed. Don't you make me come after you are I'll whip you all over this house with this rolling pin!" -Tom had a bad day!

You can't tell what kind of day it'll be by the way it begins. A day that starts off great can very well end up a bad day. Some days start bad and end the same way. Then there are other days that start out bad but before the day is over, end better than they began. We know it's been a bad day if left home with plenty of money but came home broke. If we leave broke and come back broke, it's still a bad day. But if we leave broke and come back with our pockets full..then we've had a good day.

No condition in life is permanent. Neither success or failure is fixed. Both are conditional.

On July 3, 1776 America was a colony of England, but on July 4th, one day later, the whole world changed. What difference a day makes!

On Wednesday, October 23, 1929 millionaires in America were dancing in the street. The next day, Thursday, October 24th, the stock market crashed and millionaires instantly became beggars. Hundreds jumped from windows in anguish over their sudden poverty. What a difference a day makes!

One day a man is a lowly janitor. They next day he wins the lottery and is a multimillionaire! What a difference a day makes!

Have you seen the television show that sings this song? "Come and here the story of man named Jed. A poor mountaineer, barely kept his family fed. Then one day he was shooting at some food and up from the ground came a bubbling crude.. Oil that is, black gold" One day they were hillbillies, the next day they were living in Beverly Hills! What a difference a day makes!

There are some days that are different from others because they are turning points. They are days that mark transitions, shifts, and life-style changes. These days are important because of the way they initiated change our lives. The day we decided to get married instead of shacking. The day we decided to stop smoking. They day we decided to tone down our wild and reckless pattern of living..all of these were important days because they made a difference in our life-style.

Today, we celebrate an important day. Today, we celebrate the resurrection of Jesus Christ. It is a day that changed the entire world and the lives of millions of people.

What a difference a day makes!

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ at the end of the resurrection day.

The crucifixion of Christ a tremendous blow to his disciples. They had high hopes of establishing the kingdom of God on earth with Jesus as King and themselves as his royal court, some sitting on his left and others on his right. As the stone was sealed in front of tomb, their hopes were also sealed away.

Early Sunday morning the women came to the tomb to anoint his body with spices. They had hurriedly wrapped him without completing the process. When they left home they fully expected to find Jesus' body just as they had left it. Instead, they found the stone rolled away. John's account tells how the women saw Christ himself risen and spoke to him. Other Gospel accounts tell more details.

In Matthew the women are told by the angels that Jesus had risen. They said, "come see the place where the Lord lay."

In Luke 24 the women are told not to be afraid, but are asked, "why seek ye the living among the dead?"

Mark 16 identifies Mary as the first person to see Christ alive.

All of the Gospels describe the same great event, one with more detail than the other.

While many focus on the beginning of the day, John focuses on the end of the day in a peculiar way. The disciples enclosed themselves in a room and shut the doors. They were afraid for their lives. Since Jesus had been crucified, some concluded they would be next. It was a striking contrast to the boldness they had shown just a few days earlier. Peter was so bold that he cut off a man's ear at the garden and swore he would never reject he Lord. Now he was huddled with the others, shivering and afraid. What a difference a few days made.

Their fear was equaled by their surprise when Christ appeared himself. He challenged them to look at his hands and his feet, to bring him something to eat and even invited them to inspect the nail prints in his hands and feet.

The appearance of Jesus made their day. What began as a bad day of low spirits and defeat, ended in victory Together, the gospels give us an account of one amazing day that began with women making a sad pilgrimage to the tomb, only to find it empty. It ends with the 10 of the disciples seeing Christ in his glory standing in triumph. It began with defeat, fear and hiding. It ended in celebration, praise and renewed faith.

What a difference a day makes.

They Began with Low Expectations

The women who came to the tomb, came with low expectations. They expected to find Christ dead, even though he told them repeatedly that he would rise in three days. They woke up expecting a bad day. There are many people today who begin each day with low expectations. Attitudes set the tone of every day of our lives. The attitudes that we carry to work, school or community service have a great effect on the way we appreciate every day. It is dangerous to prejudge the day before it begins. In the same manner it is also troublesome to prejudge every situation before it actually unfolds.

When Israel stood at the banks of the Red Sea there were many who had already prejudged the situation and concluded that they were lost. Pharaoh's army was behind them and the Red Sea was in front of them, making the possibility of survival very slim. The wind was blowing, but they didn't understand why. The waves on the water were rippling but they didn't understand why. They saw all of these signs, expected defeat and began to complain. Moses told them to stand still and see the salvation of the Lord.

When Jesus carried Mary and Martha to the tomb of Lazarus they expected the worse. Lazarus had been dead for four days. They accepted what they considered to be reality. They began to complain to Jesus, "If you had been here, my brother would not have died." They did not expect to see their brother again, despite the fact that Jesus was by their side. They approached the situation with a low expectation.

On the other hand, a woman who had an issue of blood heard that Jesus would be passing by. She felt that if she could push her way through the crowd and touch the hem of his garment she would be healed and made whole.

It didn't matter that there was a big crowd. She expected to see Jesus!

It didn't matter that she was old and sick; she expected to be satisfied!

It didn't matter that she had an issue of blood for 12 years; she expected to see Jesus!

Today, there are many who are living through personal droughts. Some are spiritually dry! Some are praying for a shower of blessings but they leave home every day with low expectations. If you pray for rain, and rain is in God's will...carry your umbrella, boots and a rain coat. If you pray for blessings, and blessings is in God's will, it doesn't matter how your day begins, expect a shower of blessings.

Their Day began to change when they saw Jesus

The women came to the tomb expecting to see the body of a dead rabbi, but the ended up seeing the living Lord. The text elaborates that Mary looked into the tomb, saw two angels sitting and the head and foot of the slab where Jesus lay. She saw Jesus but didn't not recognize him, thinking he was a gardener. Finally she recognized him as the risen Lord and she became excited.

No matter how bad an experience may be, it always looks a little better when we can recognize the hand of God working in that situation. Like Mary, who saw Jesus but did not recognize him at first, there are many today who cannot recognize the hand of God working in every situation of their lives.

Believers approach each day with the full knowledge that God is working in every situation. If we succeed, God is working. Yet, if we fail, God is working that situation too. If we get a promotion on the job, God is working, but if we are not selected for promotion...God is working that situation too! Romans 8:28 reminds us, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

Believers understand that sometimes God has to trouble the waters, to roll back the sea for us. Sometimes he has to heat up the kitchen of our experiences to put food on the table. God's hand is in every experience of believers. The prophet Elijah sat by a brook and was fed daily by ravens and drank from a brook. When Elijah wouldn't move, God dry up the brook and called the ravens home. Elijah recognized the hand of God in his situation and moved on with his life.

Believers must see God's hand in every situation. When we are able to see Jesus and recognize him, what we think is a bad day, may not be so bad after all.

The man who missed his flight, thought he was having a bad day until he read how those who caught the flight were stuck for days in the snow! He praised God for missing the flight

The man who thought he was having a bad day because he had a flat tire but as he changed the tire he notice his gas tank had a slow leak that could have caused an explosion and killed him. He praised God for the flat tire!

Whenever we can see God working in a situation, our attitude about it begins to change.

Bad days become Good Days

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that bad days become good days when Jesus shows up!

The disciples, unaware that Jesus had risen from the dead, were locked in a room. They were trembling and afraid, but suddenly Jesus showed up. When Jesus showed up, everything began to change.

It doesn't matter how bad things are, things change the day Jesus shows up.

A lame man sat by the pool for 38 years, that's 13, 870 days, but one day Jesus showed up and told him to take up his bed a walk. What a difference a day makes!

A blind man had never seen the light of day, but one day Jesus showed up and the blind man was able to see. What a difference a day makes!

The disciples were fishing in their boats and couldn't catch any fish. It had been a bad day, but when Jesus showed up, he told them to cast their nets on the other side and they caught so many fish they broke their nets. What a difference a day makes.

Believers should not count on the praise of men to determine whether they are having a good day, but put their trust in the Lord. People will praise you one day, and turn against you the next.

One day Jesus rode into Jerusalem and the crowd cheered saying "Hosanna" in the highest. The next few days, that same crowd was saying "crucify him." What a difference a day makes!

One day Judas was among the faithful disciples, the next day he was betraying Christ with a kiss. What a difference a day makes!

One day the people were ready to put a royal crown on Jesus' head, the next day the giving him a crown of thorns! What a difference a day makes!

One day your boss gives you plaque and calls you the employee of the month, the next day you are fired for being incompetent. What a difference a day makes

One day your husband says, "I love you forever" the next day he's running after a hoochy mama! What a difference a day makes Saint should never be intimidated by the events of any experience. Every day is a good day.

That's why David wrote, "This is the day that the Lord hath made, let us rejoice and be glad in it!"

No matter how bad the day looks at the beginning, it's a good day to be glad!

It might be cloudy outside, but I'm glad!

It might be a time of storm, but I'm glad!

When Jesus was arrested and carried before three courts, it looked like a bad day; but God was working his plan!

When they put a crown of thorns on his head, it looked like a bad day, but God was working his plan!

When they nailed him to an old rugged cross, it looked like a bad day, but God was still working his plan;

When he died out on Calvary, it looked like a bad day; but God was still working his plan!

When Mary and the women came to the tomb they were expecting to have another bad day.

They didn't know that God had taken what was supposed to be a bad and turned it into a good day!

Early Sunday morning, God took the sting out of death!

Early Sunday morning, God removed victory from the grave!

Early Sunday morning, he arose from the Grave with all power in his hands!

One day he was in the grave, but the next day he was alive! What a difference a day makes

One day he was down, but the next day he was walking around!
What a difference a day makes!

Expect the Best-Nothing Less

SCRIPTURE: "And David said to Achish, "Surely you know what your servant can do." And Achish said to David, "Therefore I will make you one of my chief guardians forever." 1 Samuel 28:2

Introduction

Have you ever completed an assignment and knew it was not your best? Often we are guilty of giving "less-than-our-best" in a variety of areas. In school, teachers often given homework assignments with the idea that the assignment will encourage additional study. Often students rush through the work to complete something. Science and Social Studies Fair presentation boards are often generally thrown together at a quick pace barely reflecting the student's abilities. Often athletes attempt to play games without using their best skills. Tests are sometimes taken without giving adequate time for preparation. Even household chores are sloppily performed as beds are half made, dishes are half washed and floors get a "hit and miss" rather than a thorough sweeping. When we have not done our best, we know it. Conversely, when we have done less than our best, we know that too.

Mediocrity once accepted becomes a standard. That is the example of the television cartoon "The Simpsons." Homer Simpson is a 36 year old safety inspector at the Springfield Nuclear Plant. He is obviously an educated man but tries to get by doing the least amount of work that he can. His ten year old son, Bart has two role models, "Radioactive Man" and his father, Homer. But is an under achiever. He's smart, but his family only expects him to "pass" so when he brings home "D's" on his report card, Bart his praised. In a family of educated people, the Simpsons represent a family that has accepted mediocrity as a standard. Just as it became a standard in the cartoon family of the Simpson, mediocrity has become a standard in many real life households, as millions of youth, subliminally adopt the Simpson's standard response, "I didn't do it, you didn't see it, you can't prove it," attitude.

Mediocrity, once accepted doesn't just reflect itself in the classroom, it shows in a variety of areas, even in service to God. There are many believers, both adults and youth, who believe that it is acceptable to give mediocre service to God. Mediocre service is "just enough to get by." It's "show your face" mentality that prompts believers to give less than their best in their areas of service to God, then make excuses to explain their lackluster service. The mediocre preacher, never prepares what he will preach. The mediocre choir member rarely rehearses it songs to perfection. The mediocre usher rarely attends practice. The mediocre deacon shows up but gives little service otherwise. The mediocre church member "shows his face" occasionally bur rarely gives any quality service. Once mediocrity is accepted it becomes the standard and very little is expected otherwise.

God expects our best and nothing less. He knows exactly what we can do and is not pleased with anything less. Cain and Abel made sacrifices to the Lord. They both made sacrifices but Cain's sacrifice was rejected, while Abel's was accepted. In anger, Cain killed Abel. Theologians tell us that not every act of service or sacrifice that we make is acceptable to God. Cain killed Abel because his God rejected his sacrifice for some reason, rather making another, better sacrifice. Isaiah 1:10-15 makes it clear that God is not please with mediocre sacrifices. He calls such service "vain oblatians" in Isaiah 1:13 making it clear that God is not pleased with mediocrity. He wants our best.

As believers, we remain committed to giving God our best. Even our youth should resolve to give of their best to the master in the strength of their youth. Then God will be pleased and their sacrifice of time and talent accepted because God expects the best and nothing less.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he asks for an opportunity to show what he can do.

David was a shepherd boy who was not expected to achieve much in life because he was the smallest and most gentle of his father's sons. Yet, he demonstrated great potential each time he was given an assignment by his father. Often he was assigned to guard a portion of the family's sheep herd. He protected the sheep by killing lions and other predators that pounced upon them. When he was assigned to take bread to his brothers in the army, he braved the long journey, without excuses, to bring them food, even though he himself was denied the opportunity to serve because no one thought he had the ability. Then he killed Goliath, the champion of the Philistines, enemies of the people of God. When that happened David became an instant national hero.

It became obvious to many that David would be great one day. Soon, 600 men and their families followed him wherever he went and his popularity grew. Anything David did was great and successful. The people came to expect excellence from him, even though he was hunted as a criminal because the king feared him.

Attempting to hide from King Saul, David went to another country and hid for a while under the protection of King Achish. David feared that the King would be intimidated by his reputation so he faked insanity causing the King to pity him rather than fear him. About a year later, Saul came to fight against King Achish and the King told him that his 600 men may be needed. David then said the classic words, "Surely you know what your servant can do." In saying these words, David acknowledged his abilities without committing himself to fight against his own king.

Achish knew what David could do. He had heard of his exploits and knew his potential. He knew of his reputation for strength, courage and valor. If needed, he expected the best from David and felt he would receive it.

In the New Testament Jesus emphasized a similar principle. He noted that God knows the heart and soul of every believer and knows their capacity as well. Thus, God judges not only a man's actions but also his motives. God sees what is done, but also knows whether what is done is being done out of sincerity or out of a sense of routine.

In Matthew 6:33 Jesus set the standard, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all of these things shall be added unto you." This is not simply a statement that suggests believers should acknowledge God as they pass the kingdom enroute to their personal pursuits, but that believers should give God first priority in the use of their time, talent and resources. If the motive is the build the kingdom, then the actions will follow and the standard is set. If our motive is to promote our own agenda, then matters of the kingdom will always be second place.

God knows our abilities. He also knows when we are giving him our best.

God Knows What We Can Do

Today, there are many young people who perform less than their level of ability. Millions of youth perform poorly in school, church and the general community without any sense of dissatisfaction. Yet, in the sports arena, the same youth would not dare think of giving mediocre performances. They are so driven that they practice their skills at every opportunity. What is the difference? Why will youth push themselves beyond physical limits to be an athlete or a member of a championship cheerleader squad, but will come to their classroom or church and give only a "show your face" presentation. The answer lies in the standards and motivations.

LOW STANDARDS: Youth rise to meet whatever standard is set. Every student has at least one tough teacher. This is the teacher that reads their homework, demands that they perform and will accept nothing short of their best. Even though students usually hate the teacher, they work harder for this teacher than the others, because the teacher has set a high standard of expectation. There are other teachers who have lower standards. Homework is rarely checked, poor performance is accepted, and many opportunities are given to cover poor performance by bonus activity. As a result students accept the teacher's standard and rise. Churches get lackluster performance from youth, if the church program has low standards. If churches reach a point where they are so glad to see youth that they will not challenge them, then the youth will rise only as high as the demand.

The standard for anyone should never be measured by what others do. In the educational community, youth are measured by the performance of others. Thus, tests such as the IOWA, California Achievement, ACT and SAT, compare one youth's performance to that of others. A true test of an educational system would be whether the program of the local school challenges each student to reach his or her maximum potential.

Every home should promote excellence and frown on mediocrity. Youth should strive to set a high standard for themselves in everything they do. Gifted students should strive for perfection, even if it is not achieved. Average students should strive to become a notch higher. No one should be satisfied with mediocrity.

God knows what we can do. While others may be happy with our mediocre performance, every youth knows, and God knows when the best has been done. 1 Samuel 16:7 says, ": for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart." God knows if the "C" we received is our best, just as we know. He also knows if our once a month appearance at Sunday School or worship is our best. He expects the best and nothing less.

MOTIVATION: Motivation is a key to performance. Youth must be motivated and inspired to seek excellence. Motivation is a big word that means "why you do the things you do." If an attitude of excellence exists among youth, then these youth develop a sense of pride that pushes them to do their best in every endeavor. They are not satisfied with lackluster performances in school, home or church. They want to give their best.

Good teachers are those who are able to motivate. Just about anyone who has graduated from a college can stand In a class and recite information and grade a report. However, it takes a unique person to motivate students. Good teachers are those who constantly seek ways to motivate students..not just make it through the day. These are the ones that turn on the light for millions of children everyday, encouraging them to reach higher and achieve more.

What is the value of a coach? Mostly in his ability to motivate players to give their best. There are millions of coaches that can design plays and demonstrate executions. The best of them are the ones who can motivate players to "want to be the best."

While coaches motivate players to be the best, the church should worked to motivate youth to do their best..there is a difference.

God doesn't expect us to win.. he expects us to do our best!

God doesn't expect us to be the champion, he expects us to give our own championship performance, which is the best we can do!

God doesn't expect us to be first, he expects us to give everything we have in the pursuit of being first...when we have done our best, he is pleased.

This is a crucial difference between what the church teaches and what the world recognizes. The world recognizes the victor, the winner and the champion. God recognizes the competitor who gives his best in the process.

The world gives trophies, praise and sometimes dollars.

God gives everlasting life in the kingdom of God.

That's why Jesus encouraged believers to seek first the kingdom of God. Getting the praise of God is important to a believer, winning is secondary. We are praised by God if we play by the rules and give our best...even if we lose the contest.

The motivation of every youth should be to hear God say, "Well done my good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things now I will make you master over many."

Seeking Excellence Pleases God!

Finally, brothers and sisters, every young believer should remember that when they strive to do their best, they please God.

When Moses told the people that God wanted a sacrifice, they were surprised to hear that God didn't want just "any" sacrifice, he wanted their best. He wanted the first fruits of their labor.

The people were told that sacrifices made at the temple could not include animals that had been injured or diseased, God didn't want just any sacrifice..he wanted their best.

In building the temple, God told Solomon that even though the people had given gold and silver to support the building of the temple, he still wanted more. He wanted committed lives from them. Thus God told Solomon, "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land. " 2 Chronicles 7:14

Thus, God doesn't just want a person to sing in the choir, that's just enough to get by. He wants a person who lives the life they sing about In their songs. God wants the best, and won't accept songs sung to him if they come from uncommitted singers.

God doesn't just want a person who attends a worship service for an hour or two a week. He wants a person who lives the believer's life 24/7. He expects the best and will not accept anything less.

Young people who have committed themselves to living for God may not receive the praises of their school or community, but their sacrifice service will be recognized in the one place where it counts and that's in hallowed halls of heaven.

Serving the Lord pays off.

God is a good God who knows when we are doing our best and he knows how much we can bear!

That's why every believer is challenged to live out the words of the hymn, "Give of your best to the master, give of the strength of youth. Clad in salvation's full armour, join in the battle for truth. Jesus has set the example, dauntless was he young and brave. Give him your loyal devotion, give him the best that you have!"

When we give God our best, he'll take of the rest!

It doesn't matter how many obstacles get in your way, give God your best, he'll take of the rest!

It doesn't matter people talk about, give God your best, he'll take of the rest!

It doesn't matter how unrewarding it may seem at the time, give God your best, he'll take care of the rest!

He will open doors that have been closed in your face!

He will pick you up when you fall down!

He will make a way for you out of no way!

Give the Lord your best, because he gave us his best.

The word says, “For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life.”

Give you your best because one day of Calvary, he gave us his best!

He died on an old rugged cross, but Early Sunday morning arose from the dead with all power in his hands.

Give God your best and nothing less!

Love Letters

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:" For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." John 3:16

Introduction

Have you ever written or received a love letter? Perhaps it was a little children's exchange that began with the words, "Roses are red and violets are blue, sugar is sweet and I love you." Elementary children write love letters with simplicity. Sometimes they come complete with little boxes to check if you like me, or if you don't. As simple as they are, love letters are complicated, especially as the writers and the recipients mature. Love letters grow beyond simple novelties and cute expressions. They are windows into the soul of the writers. They float across the hard exterior of face to face encounters and rest in the heart of each person who reads them. Love letters are personal. They are private. They special.

Can you remember the last time you wrote a love letter to anyone? What was it about? Some love letters are written in courtship and combine discovery with revelation as trust is being built. Some write letters to apologize for mistakes made and to reaffirm sincerity. There are even love letters ask for second chances, forgiveness and renewed opportunity. Husbands and wives often send each other love letters.

Cyrano de Bergerac is the classic 1640 tale of two men who loved one woman by the name of Roxanne. One of the men, Cyrano had a gift for words and wrote beautiful letters. However, he had a very long nose that detracted from his looks. The other man had a beautiful face but could never say how he really felt. In a bizarre twist Cyrano expresses his love to Roxanne through love letters he writes for the other man. Roxanne fell in love with feelings expressed in the letters thinking they were coming from the other man.

Elizabeth B. Browning enchanted us with her question, "How do I love thee, let me count the ways." Shakespearean sonnets like "Shall I compare thee to a summer's day" and others were great expressions of love expressed with words that stir emotion and cement bonds. Last year, a book entitled, "I love you Ronnie: the Love Letters of Ronald Reagan to Nancy Reagan" was published. It contains love letters that the former president wrote his wife over a 50 year period which she kept in a shopping bag. During important presidential meetings dignitaries thought the president was taking notes, but he was often writing a love letter to Nancy whom he called "Mommie Poo Pants." She never threw away a single letter, some of which were written on napkins from state dinners and others on bits and pieces of paper.

There are some letters that begin as love letters and end up something else. That's what happened to the little bad boy who wanted a bike. His mother tried everything she knew to get him to improve his behavior, but the boy was incorrigible. When he wanted a bike for his birthday, the mother knew she had discovered a way to get him to look at his behavior differently. She said, "Write a letter to God and tell him why you should get a bike for your birthday." The boy sat down and wrote "Dear God, I've been a good boy and I deserve a bike for my birthday." After thinking about it the boy knew God would know that wasn't true so he rewrote the letter to say he was a "half way decent boy" then revised it further to say he was trying to do better. None of those would get by the big man, so the boy asked permission to go down the street to the Catholic church on the corner. Once inside, when no one was looking he went up to the altar and stole the statue of the Virgin Mary and put it in his book bag. At home, he wrote God a final letter, "Dear God, I got yo' mama. If you want you want her back you better send me a bike."

Suppose God wanted to send the world a love letter, how would he do it? Across the nation, there many bill boards which are cropping up with messages from "god." They say things such as, "Don't make me come down there," "I forgive you, now come home," or "I'm waiting up for you." The idea is that persons who would never go to a church will read the billboards as they pass by and get a quick thought that reflects what God has said to the world.

However, if God wanted to send the world a love letter, even a bill board would be insufficient. It would not be sufficient enough for him to write a letter in the sky for all the world to see, some might dismiss it as an atmospheric anomaly. He would need a means that would be lasting. It would need to be so moving that it could never go unnoticed or be easily forgotten. It would have to be personal, special, and revealing of how God really feels.

When God prepared to send the world a letter, he inspired holy men to write down his words to the generation. The bible gave the world a record how God feels about the world and how he has interacted with others in the past. The bible is a letter from God that he wants everyone to read.

However, when God wanted to give the world a love letter, he did not write it down, he sent it in person. Jesus was God's love letter to the world.

As believers, we are happy we have received God's love letter. We listen to him speak and we receive his words with joy and with praise.

Exposition

This text focuses on John explaining the reason for Christ's incarnation.

Jesus was asked to explain the nature of being born again. In the process, he explained that a person who wants to be a part of the kingdom of God must be born of both the water and the spirit.

The 16th verse of John is perhaps one of the most memorable in scripture because it indicates the depth of God's love for the world. In more than one instant God had attempted to communicate his love for his creation but they were all rejected.

Sending the living Word to dwell among men was the way God chose to finally say, in a way that could not be denied, that he loved his creation.

Unlike the seven letters written to the churches of Asia Minor by Christ in the Revelation, the Word he sent to the world would not be on paper or scrolls, it would be in the person of Jesus himself...a living love letter from God.

God's Love Letters

God has been sending love letters to the world from the beginning of time, but they have often been returned unopened, ignored and marked returned to sender.

Have you received a love letter from God letter? He leaves them everywhere so we won't miss them.

The sun the rises in the morning, is a love letter from the Lord!

The stars that twinkle in the night, are love letters from the Lord!

Sometimes, God's love letters are just like our love letters they state just how he feels about us at the moment.

Some letters say, "You made me mad but I changed my mind" That's how God felt after he created the world and mankind began to sin. Their actions angered God and he wanted to destroy his entire creation. He sent a flood that destroyed most of his creation. Then in an act of love, he changed his mind and placed a love letter in the sky in the form of rainbow. It was God's way of saying, "You made me mad but I still love you!"

Some letters say, "You've been doing me wrong but I still love you anyway." That's how God felt about Israel after he had given them his best, they continued to cheat on him with other gods. God to Hosea to go and marry a prostitute. Hosea's love for Gomer was the same as that which God had for his people, "You're been doing me wrong, but I still love you!"

Some letters say, "You may have made some mistakes, but I won't hold it against you." When Jesus preached about the kingdom of God a woman was brought to him that was caught in the very act of adultery. Her accusers stood around with stones in their hands asking Jesus what to do. Jesus looked at the woman and then wrote an unknown love letter in the sand. He looked up and said he that is without sin among you, let him cast the first stone. It was his way of saying "You may have done something wrong, but If you stop, it won't be held against you!"

Some letters express love and frustration at the same time. That's what God said when he wrote a love letter to the church in Laodicea. He said I can't tell whether you love me or you hate me. You are lukewarm. I wish you were hot or I wish you were cold. Yet despite his frustration God still love the church.

But the time came when God tired of sending love letters that were not being read.

—When he opened the Red Sea for Israel to cross on dry land, that was a love letter.

—When rained down bread from heaven for them in wilderness, that was a love letter.

—When he made the sun stand still for Joshua in the Canaan land, that was a love letter.

How does God love me love? Let me count the ways!

He loved me enough to wake me up this morning, and clothe me in my right mind!

He loved me enough to put food on my table!

How do I love thee? “God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son...”

One night in Bethlehem God’s letter was delivered in manger!

One evening on a hill called Calvary the last line of God’s love letter was read, “Into thy hands I commend my spirit...It is finished!”

But sometimes letters don’t end at the end. There is a Post Script.

At the bottom of God’s love letter was a P.S.

Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave, announcing to the world..”I still love you!”

It doesn’t matter what you have done, I still love you!

No. 845-Mothers

With These Few Sticks

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 12, 2001

Scripture: "And as she was going to fetch it, he called to her, and said, Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thine hand. 12 And she said, As the LORD thy God liveth, I have not a cake, but an handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse: and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for me and my son, that we may eat it, and die. 13 And Elijah said unto her, Fear not; go and do as thou hast said: but make me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and after make for thee and for thy son. 14 For thus saith the LORD God of Israel, The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail, until the day that the LORD sendeth rain upon the earth. 15 And she went and did according to the saying of Elijah: and she, and he, and her house, did eat many days. 16 And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by Elijah. 1 Kings 17:11-16

Introduction

Have you ever wondered how mothers manage? Good mothers are great managers who seem to know how to take the smallest amount of resources and use them for their family's nurture. Those who were blessed to have good mothers in their families have watched these sainted women take meager resources and stir them in a way that would provide sustenance for their families for as long as possible. Most mothers are able to provide because their thoughts are always on ways to help members of their families. Thus, good mothers manage well, because they are always thinking ahead.

If personal management could receive a college degree, all good mothers would have Phd's. In the grocery store, she only has a few dollars, so she labors over product labels to get the most for each dollar. In the process, she learns the difference between two ply tissue and four ply tissue. She knows instantly if the sale on sugar is really a sale. At home, she saves pennies with efficiency. Those pennies are stored away for rainy days, emergencies and hard times. Some mend and sew, others find ways to repair what is broken rather incur the cost of buying something new. They may take worn shoes for shoe repair rather buy new ones. The money saved is applied to other family needs.

With just a few dollars, some mothers do it all: house notes, utilities, food, clothing, shelter, insurance, and even a few luxuries. The management skills of good mothers can probably put a Harvard MBA to shame. He wouldn't know anything about taking old bread and turning it into bread pudding or dressing. He'd read his paper, but he probably would think of saving the rubber band. When his soap bar became small, he'd reach for a new bar, and probably never consider taking all of the small pieces meshing them together until they make another big bar. Some mothers can stretch a dollar so far that if they have a run in one leg of a stocking, they save it until there is run in another pair; they then wear the good leg of each pair and no one knows the difference. The Harvard MBA may pay $500 for a suit, but smart mothers wait for him to gain a few pounds and buy it at his family rummage sale for $5.00. If there is a degree in management, good mothers deserve the honors.

What has been the key to mother's seemingly magical ability to make ends meet for her family? Believing mothers will quickly tell us that the answer is their faith and reliance upon God. The Christian mother is one who does what she can to manage what God puts in her hands, then counts on God to do the rest. She is aware that she cannot do it alone, but is humbled daily as she watches how God blesses her efforts. All she has to work with is a few resources, and God does the rest.

As believers, we have seen God take little things and carry them far beyond their capacity. That's how we can appreciate how God worked through our mothers to bless us. He took her meager resources and stretched them enough to provide for our needs. Praise the Lord.

With only a handful of resources, mothers have trusted God and saved their families. Even in short times, they have shared their last resources with others, trusting God to provide, with these few sticks available to them, mothers have sustained strong families.

Exposition

This text focuses on a widow woman who trusted God and was the recipient of his care as a result.

Elijah was a great prophet who had been commanded by God to speak out against the evils of his time. He challenged King Ahab and his evil wife Jezebel for their evil ways. Idolatry was prevalent in the land. There was a general disrespect for God. Elijah told the king that there would be no water in the land until he adjusted his ways. The prediction angered the king and a death warrant was issued for Elijah.

God took care of Elijah while he was in hiding. In one instance God arranged for a raven, considered an unclean animal, to feed him everyday while he was by a brook until it was time for him to move on.

Then God sent Elijah into the land of the Gentiles. He was told to go to Zerepath, a city in Sidon. It was a foreign country for sure, but yet Elijah followed the command. The drought that he predicted for Ahab, extended even to this land. By going to Zerepath, he became the first prophet to minister to gentiles.

God commanded a gentile woman to provide for Elijah. It must have been a difficult command for the woman because she was a widow, with a sickly son, barely enough fuel and food to live upon herself, yet God wanted her to share what little she had with a stranger. God could have certainly picked a better person to provide for Elijah, but God did not consider present circumstance because he could alter circumstances at will. The widow would suffice to demonstrate obedience and faith for the world to see. The widow wandered the streets trying to find enough wood for a fire that could bake her last cake of bread. She was an unlikely source of resources for a hungry, thirsty and tired traveler.

The widow had little, but used what she had to provide for her family. She didn't even have a fuel supply but God seemed to keep the fire going. She had only a little fuel. The text mentions "two sticks" which was a figure of speech for "just a few." She had "just a few" resources but she was willing to throw herself, trustingly, into the hands of God. It took a considerable amount of trust because the prophet was promising a miracle. It wasn't that God was going to supply her needs, but that he would do it in a miraculous way, the barrel of meal would not run out and neither would the oil. Believing Elijah's statement and trusting God took immense faith on her part.

Even in her impoverished state, she was willing to trust God with the last cake she could make, on the last fire she could build. She took a small portion of the meal and made Elijah a "little cake." That little cake demonstrated a willingness to trust God for the unknown. In response she was blessed.

This mother, placed the future of her life and that of her son, in God's hands.

For months, she and her son survived and prospered living on pure faith alone.

What began for her as a few sticks, a cup of meal and a cruse of oil, turned out to be a blessing from God that protected her household for years to come.

Put Your Life In God's Hands

Like the widow of this text, there are many mothers today who have placed their whole lives in God's hands.

What does it mean to put one's whole life in God's hands? It means to literally commit ourselves to doing his will no matter what. The widow of this text was not a Jew. Yet she believed in the God of the Jews. This belief surely prompted a level of rejection from members of her community, who were Gentiles are probably resented her persistent, open, belief in the God of the Jews.

In many ways there are other Godly mothers who have endured ridicule, harassment and difficulty as they chose to obey the will of God rather than follow the easier path of less resistance. These are the moms who endured difficult times but refused to steal, accept illegal items or survive on ill gotten gains. These are the moms who made it known that they would rather endure difficult times than be known as less than a godly woman. They are the ones that made the apostles words in Acts 5:29, ring true.." We ought to obey God rather than men."

Not only have mothers placed their own lives in God's hands, there are many who have also placed the lives of their children, in God's hands. When Jocebed realized that her son could be drowned, she made him a straw basket and placed the baby Moses in it. When she let that basket float on the water, she was placing little Moses in God's hands. When Hannah, carried young Samuel to the priests to be trained as a priest, she placed him in God's hands. Even while many mothers carried us in their wombs they were whispering silent prayers to God, placing us in his hands. Sometimes mothers have been overheard praying, "Lord, place take care of my child."

When the widow of the text decided to obey the God of Israel, she placed her own life, and the life her child in God's hands. Her life or death was solely up to God. Many mothers today have placed the fate of their families in God's hands. They have resolved to live according to his plan, regardless to the outcome, and thrown themselves whole heartedly into his hands.

Do what you can, trust God for the rest

The widow woman of this text was blessed because of one admirable characteristic that she displayed. She made the best of what she had, without complaining and trusted God for the rest.

Two sticks, a cruse of oil, a small portion of meal, all of these suggested that she didn't have much but found a way to make it last. In much the same way good mothers found a way to manage and stretch a few resources further than could normally be expected.

Many mothers prayed to God for an automobile, but while waiting on God to deliver walked or rode the bus to work everyday; only to come home and cut the callouses from the feet.

Many mothers prayed for washing machines but while they waited, scrubbed clothes on rub boards, walked to washaterias and even rang out sheets on their hands and hung them across clothes lines to dry.

Many mothers prayed for new clothes for their children, but while they waited, sewed buttons on shirts, patched holes in papers and lined the bottoms of worn shoes with newspaper.

Many mothers prayed to God for a variety of food but while they waited, cooked grits and butter for breakfast, and grits and gravy for supper.

Many a mother learned a thousand ways to cook a potato by boiling it, mashing it, French frying it,meshing it into hash browns or one of hundreds of other ways to stretch an inexpensive food item a long ways. That's why so many households ate plenty of beans, spaghetti and soup. Mama knew she could stretch these food items seemingly forever and make ends meet.

These were the mothers would not dare assume the attitude of Sara who tried to help God out, but rather that of women who were willing to do whatever was necessary to provide for their households while they waited for God to extend their efforts to their maximum.

Her whole house was blessed

Like the widow of this text, there are many mothers whose faith and diligence has resulted in their whole households being blessed.

The widow put her life in God's hands, did what she could and trusted God for the rest, and her whole house was blessed.

Those who have had the benefit of having a good mother in their home, know the truth of this passage. The efforts of a diligent God fearing woman in nearly every instance we can name has resulted in most of the family reaping the rewards of her labor.

What successful son or daughter doesn't walk across the stage at a high school or college graduation and look for his mother's face in the crowd! What man receives a high honor in life without thinking of the words of mother as he grew up.

Mama had a strange way of doing it but she taught us some things that helped us to be blessed. They were complicated subjects but she had a way of saying it that everyone remembered.

Mama taught us to look into the future, she said, "Be sure to wear clean underwear, in case you have an accident."

Mama taught us about time travel, she said, "If you don't straighten up, I'm going to knock you into the middle of next week!"

Mama taught us to respect authority, she said, "I brought you into this world and I will take you out!"

Mama taught how to know a real problem, she said, "You just keep crying, and I'll give you something to cry about!"

Mama taught us to be individuals, she said, "I don't care what the other children are wearing, you ain't walking out of this house looking like who'da thought it!"

Mama taught us to suck it up and take criticism, she said, "You can poke out your mouth if you want to, I'll knock it off!"

Mama said many things that blessed us, but one thing that she taught blessed us more than anything else, she said, "Whatever you do, no matter how high you get, don't forget about the Lord!"

What blessed the widow woman's house was the presence of the Lord!

Somebody understands what it means to blessed because of mama's prayers. Verses 11-12 tells how this woman was blessed with barrel that never ran drive and oil that never ran out. But when you consider verse 17 and those that follow you see another way that God blessed her house.

The son she loved and worked so hard to protect, became ill unto death. The widow woman found the prophet Elijah and asked God through him to restore her son. Elijah came back and stretched himself over that son, and God raised him from the dead.

Somebody here today has been risen from a mortifying deadly life, because of mama's prayers!

Somebody here has been literally pulled from the gaping jaws of riotous living, because of mama's prayers!

Somebody here has been snatched back from the chilly grips of alcoholism, drug abuse, and criminal activity, because of mama's prayers!

Some mama somewhere fell down on her knees and cried, "Lord you didn't give me much, just these few sticks; but I've tried to do the best I could. I didn't have a lot of money, but I gave you my all, If it be your will,

Lord, save my son!
Lord, keep your arms around my daughter!
With these few sticks, I tried to put clothes on their back!
With these few sticks, I tried to put food on their table!
With these few sticks, I tried to make their lives happy!
With these feeble hands I tried to hold on!
With these feeble lips I tried to tell them never to forget the name of Jesus!
Jesus, who died out on Calvary!
Jesus, who arose Early Sunday Morning
Hold my hand Lord, Hold my hand!
I'm doing the best I can, hold my hand!

Stand Still

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "Stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord." —Exodus 14:13

Introduction

Have you ever been in a situation that caused you to panic? We panic when we can't figure a way out of a situation and we envision the worst. In a crowded theatre, the word "fire," shouted loudly can incite panic. As people look for exits and crowd isles, each person envisions himself suffocating and dying a horrible death. At that point many lose control, climb over others, scream, cry, run, punch and struggle for survival. Many have lost their lives in panicky situations, not all of them were life threatening, but they appeared to be. Crises can prompt a panic. Loss of a job or source of income can also be a panic situation. A health emergency can also promote panic. Whenever panic occurs rational thinking and faith based actions are difficult. Often a response made in panic is more dangerous than the threat itself.

Generally, we panic out of fear. We see the worst that can happen actually occurring and we attempt to avoid that situation. When we panic there is disorder, disunity, distrust and chaos. Even faith gets challenged when we panic.

A man was walking in the mountains just enjoying the scenery when he stepped too close to the edge of the mountain and started to fall. In desperation he reached out and grabbed a limb of a gnarly old tree hanging onto the side of the cliff. Full of fear he assessed his situation. He was about 100 feet down a shear cliff and about 900 feet from the floor of the canyon below. If he should slip again he'd plummet to his death.

Full of fear, he cries out, "Help me!" But there was no answer. Again and again he cried out but to no avail. Finally he yelled, "Is anybody up there?"

A deep voice replied, "Yes, I'm up here."

"Who is it?"

"It's the Lord"

"Can you help me?"

"Yes, I can help."

"Then help me!"

"Let go." Looking around the man became full of panic. "What?"

"Let go. I will catch you."

"Uh... Is there anybody else up there?"

Is there a personal or family situation that is reaching the panic stage in your life? Are you about to lose it? Have you begun to show the first signs of panic as you see no way out of a steady spiral of trouble and difficulty? Before you push your panic button, why not try one last thing... stand still and see the Salvation of the Lord.

As believers, we have learned that God has an amazing way of making a way out of no way. He has carved pathways through seas and brought us over many mountains. Before you lose control and panic, do what you can, then stand still and watch God work.

Exposition

This text focuses on Israel in a state of panic at the Red Sea.

The journey to the Promised Land was eventful for the Israelites. It had stressful moments and a number scary turn events. Among the first of their stress test events was the challenge at the Red Sea.

Pharaoh released the Israelites after enduring ten plagues placed upon by God to force their release. However, after Israel was released, Pharaoh changed his mind and pursued them.

At the Red Sea, the people saw Pharaoh's armies and were frustrated. They were trapped in a situation that seemed inescapable. Behind them the armies of Egypt were approaching. In front of them was the Red Sea. On both sides of them there were mountainous ranges, too steep for a large number of people to pass. Trapped, some of the people panicked. They complained about their situation. They spoke of the "good life" they enjoyed in Egypt and constantly compared it to their present circumstance.

When they saw the armies of Egypt they imagined an angry and vengeful Pharaoh, who would destroy them for leaving. In front of them was the Red Sea, wide, deep and uncrossable. If they went forward they would drown. If they returned to Egypt they envisioned death. Large mountainous terrain bordered them on both sides. They felt trapped and panicked.

In desperation, the people complained to Moses. They vented their frustrations on him. They lost control and all sense of reasoning. They saw trouble and Moses, they felt, was the instigator.

Their panic was unnecessary. They had acted on faith by leaving Egypt at God's command. The followed his directive until they reached a point beyond their control. At the Red Sea, God did the rest. He opened up a path for them to cross on dry land and destroyed their enemies in the process. When they looked back, they realized they had no real need to panic, God was in control.

Panic: When Faith is overwhelmed by Fear

When are we most likely to panic? Usually, we panic whenever our measure of faith is overwhelmed by our fear. The ideal spiritual situation is to have more faith than any fear generated by a particular circumstance. On occasion the strongest Christian stares a giant sized fear in the face and does not have an equal amount of faith to match.

SOCIAL PANIC: Many people panic easily. Even preparations for a social event can panic them. Someone didn't bring the flower arrangement on time or the decorators brought blue trimmed tablecloths instead of the pink ones ordered. Wedding gowns that won't zip, rings that have been lost, and food that didn't arrive for the guests, are all among the variety of social panics that have given some people high blood pressure attacks, stress attacks and even more. The event planner is suddenly stricken with the fear of failure. He or she visualizes the negative talk after the event and begins to push the panic button.

Believe or not there was a panic situation of this type in the bible. Jesus and his mother attended a wedding party. A large crowd of thirsty guests arrived and it was not long before the wine was gone. The hosts hit the panic button-there are guests and no refreshments. However, Mary remained cool, calm and collected, why? Jesus was in the midst. She went to her son, who had never performed a miracle in public and called on him to provide wine for the wedding. Huge barrels were filled at his command and water became wine. Even in social settings, there is no need for believers to panic as long as Jesus is one board.

Our fear sees a failed experience that will be the subject of gossip. Our faith sees an opportunity for the God in us to turn the situation into an opportunity.

Our fear sees a catastrophe. Our faith draws upon the presence of godliness within us to respond with a positive action rather than with defeatist reaction.

PANIC IN CRISES: Whenever there is a crisis, many people panic. There are many kinds of crises that include everything from financial failure to tragedy? How do we respond to the disability of a loved one? What do we do when there has been a fire, automobile accident or death in the family? If our fear of the unknown is greater than our faith...we are likely to panic.

That's what happened to the disciples when they were aboard a ship and a storm developed. The shipped rocked and turned and many on board envisioned themselves as dead men. There was no escape. The winds were too strong and they were too far away from the bank to swim. Death appeared imminent. Then someone remembered that Jesus was on board.

Awakening him they asked, "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" Jesus came to the deck, unmoved by the storm and said, "Peace be still."

Our fear sees the worse that can happen. Our faith knows the best that can happen.

Our fear sees the downside of the situation. Our faith sees every situation as an opportunity to stir the dormant power of God within us that speaks to the storm and says, "Peace be still."

POCKETBOOK PANIC: Many panic when they face a financial crises. When they are laid off work, or lose their benefits or otherwise face a financial crunch, many people panic. They see the worse about to happen. They can't imagine anything better happening, so they fall to pieces.

It gets tough when the money runs out and it strains every inch ones being just to keep his senses. When the power company truck and the water company and the gas company, rent collector and everyone else is threatening to cut-offs, for some it gets very close to panic time.

Luke and John both record an instance when Simon and several of the disciples were distraught. They were fishermen by trade and had caught no fish. No fish meant no money. They had done their best, toiled all night but caught nothing. They were about to hit the panic button. Then Jesus appeared and told them to cast their nets again on the "right side" of the boat. When they followed his instructions their nets came up full.

Pocketbook panic results when our fear is greater than our faith. We have sought employment unsuccessfully, fear creeps in. Yet the master says try one more time!

We've tried every resource we know to get assistance with a major financial dilemma but met failure every time. Fear sets in. Yet the master says, try one more time!

Faith says, before you panic, remember God is still God and he will make a way!

God Will Make A Way

Finally, brothers and Sisters we must remember that when we reach a panic button situation, the Lord can and will make a way!

The important lesson that Israel learn sitting at the Red Sea is that no matter how impossible the situation appears the Lord will make a way somehow!

When troubles come, feed on your faith rather than fan your fears!

Moses told Israel to stand still and see the Salvation of the Lord!

Stand still was a command not to panic!

Stand still was command to pause and reevaluate!

Stand still was an admonition to stay in the present rather than concern yourself with how much worse the situation can get!

When Israel stood at the Red Sea wasn't the only time we hear these words "Stand still." In Numbers 9:8 the people were about to panic because some of them had touch dead bodies and were unclean. As they began to panic Moses said, "Stand still" let me talk to God about it!

If trouble erupts in your home, Stand still, and talk to God about it!

If there is a question whose answer seems to evade you...Stand still and talk to God about it!

When Joshua reached the River Jordan, it was too wide for the people to cross, but God told Joshua, "Stand Still" on the banks of the Jordan while God made a way?

Have you reached a Red Sea? Are you faced with a River Jordan? Have you done all you know how to do? Don't panic, Stand Still and watch God work!

Stand still means to wait with patience and give your fears time to pass. That's why Isaiah said in 40:31, "But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint. "

The voice of despair said, “Lie down and die,” but the voice of God says, Stand don’t lay down and die. If you want to lie down, “Lie down, lie down, thy weary one thy head upon breast and I will give you rest!

The voice of defeat says, “Give it up!” but the voice of God says, Stand still, and don’t give up! Don’t give up, just look up! “I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth!”

The voice of frustration says fold your hands in frustration. But the voice of God says, Stand still! Unfold your hands and say, “Father I stretch my hands to thee no other help I know, if thou withdraw thyself from me, whether shall I go!”

When the storm rages, stand still and see the Salvation of the Lord!

When trouble is all around you, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the Lord...stand still!

When your worries overwhelm you, stand still; God will take care of you! Through every day over all the way, he will take care of you!

God will take care of you!

Stand still and think about the goodness of the Lord!

Think about how he died out on Calvary!

Think about how he arose Early Sunday morning!

Think about how he has brought you a mighty long way!

When you feel like giving up, stand still and say, “I don’t believe he brought me this far to leave me!”

Stand still!

Stand still!

Stand still!

Maters and Taters

SCRIPTURE: "For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light" Ephesians 5:8

Introduction

Between potatoes and tomatoes, which do you prefer? America has a love affair with the potato. In the toughest times, our families have survived, thanks to the potato. Think about it, there are mashed potatoes, French fried potatoes, scalloped potatoes, hash brown browned potatoes, baked potatoes, potatoes and beans, potatoes and rice, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, etc. If a family could get its hands on a few potatoes, a smart cook could stretch a meal for days. Tomatoes are common too. While not as utilitarian as potatoes, some folks have found plenty uses for tomatoes, including eating them raw, right out of the garden. Fried green tomatoes is a Southern delicacy, tomato soup, tomato catsup, and no spaghetti dinner is complete without tomato sauce. We see both tomatoes and potatoes often and for the most part have developed a taste for them.

In the South, especially in rural areas, country folks were just a little lazy when they talked. When they referred to tomatoes, they cut it short and simply said, "Maters." Potatoes had the same fate. They became "Maters." There are still many Southerners that proudly refer to these items as Maters and Taters!

What if I told you that there is a connection between Maters, Taters and Christians, could you see it right off? It can't be in the looks or color, that wouldn't have anything to do with living the Christian life. Taste wouldn't be a factor either, since taste is usually subjective.

Maters and Taters are connected to the Christian life in the way they grow and respond to the light. One grows in the dark, under the ground. The other grows in the light.

As believers we are encouraged in scripture to walk in the light and not in darkness. The success of our efforts to grow in the faith has plenty to do with where we walk, where we talk, where we spend our time and what we do to grow in the faith.

It's like maters and taters! Those who grow in the dark respond one way. Those who walk in the light respond another way?

As believers, we are encouraged to walk in the light and not in the dark. Our blessings come when the light of Jesus shines in us each and every day?

Which are we: tater people who grow in the dark, or mater people who thrive and grow because they live in the light?

Exposition

This text focuses the manner in which Christians live, in the light.

There were seven churches in Asia Minor at the time of this text. The book of Ephesians was immediately addressed to the Christians at Ephesus but was ultimately carried to all seven, as was the custom. It began the second of the great themes reflected in the New Testament.

In Paul's first four letters, Romans, 1st and 2nd Corinthians and Galatians, the idea of "Christ in you" is promoted. These letters, in great detail, show how the indwelling presence of Christ in our lives is really supposed to operate. The removal of condemnation, forgiveness of sin and the shunning of evil practices is characterized by the Christian who operates with "Christ in you" mode. In essence, the first four letters describe what happens when "Christ is in you." They describe how we turn from the world and gradually develop a distaste for the things of the world as we grow in the faith. That's Christ "in you."

However, beginning with the book of Ephesians, the theme changes from "Christ in you" to "You in Christ." Whereas the first four shows us what happens when Christ is in us, the remaining books, with the exception of Revelation, show us what should happen when we are "In Christ." It teaches us to understand with greater clarity, what it means for us to be a part of the body of Christ and the church.

One thing that is special about being "in Christ" is that we learn a different way of living. The "Christ in us" changes our tastes, ways, direction and goals. But being "In Christ" refers to what we do after we have let Christ in.

This text points to one thing we do...we strive to walk in the light and do those things which are reflective of "Children of the light."

For all practical purposes, one part of our Christian experience is Jesus give believers a light.-Christ in us. The other part of our experience is our decision to let it shine- "In Christ." The song, Jesus gave me a light, is the perfect example. It says, "Jesus gave me a light" (Romans, 1st and 2nd Corinthians and Galatians)..and "I'm going to let it shine." (Remainder of the New Testament, except Revelation).

Walking in the light and being children of the light is Paul's way of saying that we should reflect that we are "in Christ." In essence, we are encouraged to move from simply having "Christ in us" to a point of being "In Christ." Not to simply have a light in me, but to let it shine in my daily living.

"Walk as children of the light" means that we don't simply sing the song, and talk the talk, but we also walk the walk of those who are truly "in Christ."

Tater People

There is a parallel between what Paul teaches in this text and Maters and Taters.

TATERS LIVE IN THE DARK: Taters are products of the dark. They grow off the work of other plant components, the leaves, which are above ground doing all of the work. Yet in the church, there are millions of "tater people" who sit in the dark and let others do all of the work. They let others study the bible as they try to pick up a little bit here and there as they talk to them. They let others, do the praying, fellowship and work of building the body of Christ, while they sit in the dark. They are not sinful people, they have Christ in them, but they have not reached a point of being "In Christ."

TATERS WILL ROT IF LEFT ALONE: Although taters live in the dark, the very darkness they enjoy will destroy them if they are not uprooted in time. A tater, left in the ground too long will rot. Once that happens, that tater is not worth anything to anybody. Tater people are the same way, that's why God's Holy Spirit constantly tugs at them to get them to move out of the darkness, into the marvelous light. In the dark, their fate is sealed. In the light, there is life!

TATERS HAVE EYES BUT THEY CANNOT SEE: Taters have lots of eyes but they can't see a thing. There are many tater people who are the same way, they have eyes but they can't see a thing. They can't see how God operates in their lives. They can't see God's plan for them. They can't understand God's ways. Neither can they "see" God's vision. That's what Dr. Watts had in mind when he coined the phrase, "Amazing grace that saved a wretch like me. I was lost but now I'm found, blind but now I see."

TATERS MUST BE PREPARED TO BE USED: As a food, taters generally are not ready, just as they are. To get a tater ready to eat it must be fried, or baked, or boiled or mashed other otherwise prepared. While there are a few folks who like them raw, most folks stay away from an unprepared tater. Tater people are the same way, they are not useful just being taters, they must be prepared first. Sometimes God prepares tater people by exposing them to just enough heat in life to make them usable. He doesn't fry the French fry until its black, but just enough! He doesn't boil a potato until it falls apart, but until its soft enough to mash. There are some tater people who have hard personalities, terrible ways and corrupt attitudes. They are not ready yet, God is still turning up the heat and he's not through yet. Even then, taters need a little seasoning. That's where believers come in...we are the salt of the earth!

TATERS MUST BE CUT UP TO GROW: Taters are strange. Rarely will they grow unless they are cut up into small pieces and replanted. Tater people are the same way. Many have not grown spiritually. They are the same today as they were a few years ago. Some grow however, after something happens to "cut them up" into small pieces. The ways are numerous, sometimes they are accidents, sicknesses, family dilemmas, and plethora of other maladies that bring Tater people to a new reality. Many find a new relationship with God after an ordeal. It is then that evolve from being a Tater Person.

TATER PEOPLE HAVE A VARIETY OF NAMES: The Tater personality usually results in a variety of descriptions. There is Dick-tater, he wants to tell everyone what to do. There is Agi-Tater, who always stirs up dissent. Hesi-tater, who always puts off doing that which is necessary; Ro-tater, who moves from one thing to another.

Tater people, by whatever name we call them, seem to reflect darkness rather than light. They have a light, but it never shines.

Mater People

If there are tater people who live in the dark, then there are also mater people who live in the light.

Maters are different from taters, not just in looks.

While taters live in the dark, maters live in the sunshine. Maters bloom in the garden, grow on the vine and abide in the word of the Lord! That's what Jesus meant when he said in John 15:4, "Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me."

MATERS ARE READY TO SERVE. While taters must be prepared to serve, maters live ready to serve. A gardener get walk through the garden, see a fine mater and pick it right there. It doesn't have to be cooked. He can cut it up in a salad, place it on a hamburger, or use it to garnish a dish. Maters are ready. If he wants to do more he can. He can refine a mater into a sauce or a paste or he can drink it as a juice.

Mater people are ready to serve the Lord. Maybe that's what Isaiah 6:8 means when it says, "Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me.

The continuous testimony of a true believer is, "Use me Lord in Your Service"

If you need me to pray, use me!

If you need me to sing, use me!

If you need me to wave my hand, use me Lord in your service!

MATER PEOPLE HAVE MANY SEEDS: While taters have to be cut up before they can grow, Maters have seeds. They have plenty of seeds. Seeds for growth and seeds of faith. Mater people are always planting seeds for their growth and prosperity.

Maters are known by a variety of names, we may know a few of them of them. There is:

ANI-MATER, who takes things that don't usually move and makes them come to life. If you have a program that is dead, you need an ani-mater to get it going again!

AMALGA-MATER, who takes things that are loose and unconnected and brings them together

ESTI-MATER AND APPROXI-MATER, two folks who always have an idea of what it will take to get a job done!

ACCLI-MATERS, those who help others to get adjusted in a new situations. They have a special touch that settles rather than disturbs, inspires rather than confuses.

We need to be careful in life, because there are some taters that try to look like maters; they are generally called "imi-tators!"

One thing about mater people is that they can be sealed by the Holy Ghost.

Someone remembers grandma, picking maters in the garden!

Someone remembers grandma going to the store to buy the Mason Jars!

Someone remembers grandma boiling those jars in hot water while she'd get her peaches, pears together. Somewhere in the bunch, grandma would also include a few maters. When the jars were sterilized, the maters are put in the Mason jars while the water is hot. Grandma would say, "Don't screw the top too tight, wait for it to pop!" When it pops she'd say it's time to lock it down.

When the maters were sealed in the Old Mason Jars, grandma would store them away. It didn't matter how, long because they were sealed.

That's what Ephesians 1:18 meant when it says, "...after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise."

When we are sealed with the Holy Ghost we have a testimony to give and a story to tell!

It's a story how he brought me out of darkness, into his marvelous light!

It's a story of how he picked me up and turned me around!

It's a story of how he died out on Calvary and arose early Sunday morning!

Jesus gave me a light and I'm going to let it shine!

Let it shine! Let it shine! Let it shine!

Every step up is from the Lord

SCRIPTURE:" For promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south. But God is the judge: he putteth down one, and setteth up another." Psalm 75:6-7

Introduction

If you had to make an acceptance speech and thank those responsible for your accomplishments, who would make your list? Every year we watch the Academy awards, Emmy and Tony awards on television and watch as the stars rattle off a list of names of persons they want to thank for helping them reach the pinnacle of their careers. Some name their producers, directors and agents. There are others who come with prepared lists, to make sure they are politically correct, not missing anyone. There are a few who do not feel it necessary to thank many people at all, but think they achieved their success on their own. Whenever we accomplish anything in life, our accomplishment is not independent of others. Everyone has had a little help along the way. If we were to thank everyone that helped us, our list would be too long to read.

Graduations give us an occasion to reflect upon our journey. Along the way, there have been many people who have assisted us in the learning process, from teachers to coaches, religious leaders and the lady down the street. The graduate that believes his accomplishments are the result of his own singular effort graduates in ignorance and is doomed to a similar ignorance throughout his life, if he is not careful. Consider the moron who dropped out of school without learning to read or write. He married a woman who encouraged him to work hard and save his money and nobody would pay attention to the fact that he dropped out of school. He opened a bank account and signed his name by writing x two times. As the years went by he saved his money, bought a fine home and kept going to the bank with all of his savings. He opened many businesses and made lots of money. Finally he was beginning to believe he was somebody. One day his banker came by to see him. He had a hand full of checks. The banker said he was concerned because for years the moron had signed his checks with two xes. This week, however, the bank received checks signed with three xes. The moron told the banker, "That's alright, My wife said since we have made it, I deserve to have a middle name!" He started out ignorant and stayed ignorant all of his life.

The foolish man believes that his achievements are the result of his own work. A graduate may have studied for tests, turned in home assignments, and completed official requirements, but the success of our efforts were not the result of our own handiwork. If we had to stand with an acceptance speech for accomplishment of a godly ordained goal, it would begin and end with thanks and praise to God.

Believers acknowledge one truth: Whatever promotions or blessings we receive in life come from God. Every kind act shown to us by a teacher, coach, relative or friend is the result of God touching that person's heart and motivating them to help us. Believers don't live in ignorance; we know the source of all our blessings.

As Christians, we thank God for every step up, whether it is a high school graduation or completion of other life goals. Every step up, every promotion we receive in life comes from the Lord because we are in his hand.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains how success is in God's hands.

David, the author of this Psalm, offered praise to God for his advancement in life. His advances were epic in proportion. He moved from a lowly shepherd boy to the king's musician. While being heralded as the King's musician he suddenly became a national hero after he killed Goliath. Years later, he was first named the King of Judah, then King of Israel.

Reflecting on that amazing string of promotions and advancements, David wrote the 75th Psalm, giving praise and thanks to God, whom he credits as the real source of his promotion and elevation.

In praising God alone for his promotion, David notes how those outside of the believer's circle often give praise to external sources for their success. In verse 4 he refers to those who credit sources other than God as the reason for their success as "fools" who proceed through life with "stiff necks" believing their success has come by some efforts other than God alone. Referring to them as persons who "lift up their horns," David urges believers not to follow their example, but to humble themselves as they pursue life.

His summary of success, promotion, graduation and all other accomplishments is that they come from God.

In verse 6 he paints the picture clearly, success does not come from the South, East or West. Specifically, he referred to those who relied on alliances with neighboring nations for Israel's national success. Some looked to Egypt and Ethiopia to the South for political support. Others looked to the wisdom and wealth of the people of the East. Still others depended upon the large military forces of the nation's of the West. In these areas, David's advisers told him, Israel would be secure.

In the same verse it should be noted that the 'North" is omitted. David notes the South, East and West, but he omits the North. North of Jerusalem were desert states that had nothing to offer and no help was expected. North represented the unexpected, chance or luck. There is no promotion that comes from sheer luck alone. It was not even considered.

In verse 7 David makes it plain that providence, the eventual ebb and flow of our lives, is in God's hands. The cup of daily occurrences, chance, success and failure is in God's hands. In the course of any life he pours out some sunshine and some rain. He pours out some victory and some defeats. Ultimately, every believer will receive the richest of God's blessings, while non-believers can expect, in the end, the dregs.

Thus, David makes it clear to believers, whatever our advancement in life, it will come from God, for our future is in his hands.

The Next Step

Our promotions in life are steps toward success., We may do the climbing, but God provides the steps.

Have you ever tried to reach for something that was just out of reach? Maybe you stood in a chair, but it was still out of reach. Did you have a ladder but found it too short? That's what David means when he says, promotions are from the Lord. Some goals we seek may be out of our reach, but they are attainable if he provides us the steps needed to get there. Without a ladder high enough, we will never reach the goal, no matter how hard we strive to reach the top.

Being Ready for the Next Step

God opens doors for believers every day. He provides highways in the wilderness. Each opportunity or step that God provides for us is our chance to step up, but we must be prepared to take the next step when opportunity knocks. Education, discipline and faith are three essentials to seizing these opportunities when they come. Moses received a superior education in the classrooms of Egypt and in the mountains of Midian. He learned discipline and self control as he battled against himself in long mountain stays. He learned to depend upon God in every situation.

Education for life boils down to this: "Education is knowing what you gotta know, to do what you gotta do." It is learned in three schools: school room, Sunday School and the School of Hard Knocks. Each teaches important essentials for living. Secular schools teach the theory, history and bodies of knowledge necessary for understanding the world around us. Sunday School helps us to understand how what we learned in the classroom effects us as children of God. But it is the school of hard knocks that teaches the hardest lessons. In the school of hard knocks we learn what It means to work, sweat, pay bills, meet obligations, fail, succeed, and suffer disappointment. It is a tough school, but its graduates, usually arise ready to take the next step.

Discipline for life is generally imposed, but works best when it is self imposed. If education is knowing "what you gotta know, to do what you gotta do" then discipline means, "doing what you gotta do, to get what you gotta do, done." Initially, parents imposed discipline, they tell you what you "gotta do!" They picked your clothes, decided whether you would go to church, and be in a school activity. Your parents forced you to study and achieve. That is imposed discipline. The hallmark of discipline is when it is self imposed. It's when you force yourself to do "what you gotta do, to do what you gotta do."

Faith for life is learned through experience. As a child, youth placed much of their faith in their parents. Children don't worry about paying the rent, utilities, or putting food on the table. They have faith that mama or papa will take care of it. At this juncture however, each child learns mama's secret, which is to have individual faith in God. Faith is the "evidence of things unseen." It's not knowing how you are going to do what you gotta do, but believing that "God's gonna do what he's gonna do, to help you do what you gotta do."

In God's Hands

Finally, we should consider David's conclusion, that our future success is in God's hands!

The 75th Psalm has taught us clearly that God is in control of the events our lives and that our successes and promotions come from him. We are in his hands.

We have seen believers of all walks of life promoted from obscurity to the highest levels of success, when they place their lives and destinies in God's hands.

Joseph was raised from being a slave boy to the prime minister of Egypt, because his life was in God's hands.

Aaron was raised from being a mere slave in Egypt to being a high priest of Israel because his life was in God's hands!

The three Hebrew Boys were raised out exile to become great leaders in the Chaldean kingdom.

Daniel was lifted from a lion's den to high esteem because his life was in God's hands!

When our lives are in God's hands, he creates the steps for us!

He opens the doors!

He makes the opportunities!

He baffles the critics who doubt our abilities.

He mystifies the skeptics who said, we were doomed to failure!

He intensifies our commitment and builds our strength

When our lives are in God's hands, he breathes his Holy Spirit on us and promotes us higher and higher.

That's why the old warriors used to sing, "We are climbing Jacob's ladder, We are climbing Jacob's ladder, Soldiers of the cross...every round goes higher higher!..Soliders of the cross!"

Somebody else sang, "Step by step, we'll make this journey, but the way seems hard, hard, hard. Step by step we'll make this journey, but we must put our trust In God!"

Trusting in the Lord means asking God to hold my hand!

As I move from level to level, hold my hand!

As I take the next step in my life's journey, hold my hand!

I may be young but I know the meaning of the old song, "Lord hold my hand, while I run the race, I don't want to run this race alone!"

Trust in the Lord, he will never let you down!

Trust in the Lord, who died for you out on Calvary!

Trust in the Lord, who arose after three days with all power in his hands!

Trust in the Lord because he holds your future in his hands.

Raise Your Roof

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 10, 2001

Scripture: "And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the roof where he was: and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay. When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee. " Mark 2:4-5

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when someone told you that you could not achieve a goal? How did you respond? As children, many of us had dreams of doing great things in life, only to have our dreams shattered by someone who told us about the impossibility, impracticality and improbability of our dream. Can you imagine a student who failed in school ever dreaming that he would become a world renowned scientist? That's what happened to Albert Einstein. who mastered the theory of relativity! James Earl Jones was told he'd never be an actor because he stuttered as a child! When we dream, there are many who attempt to lower our expectations, to what they call something more realistic. There are thousand of people whose growth has been stunted because of lowered expectation.

Sometimes, we get no more out of life than we expect. If we expect failure then failure is what we get. If we expect a bad day, then a bad day is exactly what we get. Much of what happens in life depends on what we expect. While traveling home from a business trip a man traveling at 60 miles an hour in a 45 mile an hour zone topped a hill just in time to see a state trooper turn on his flashing red and blue lights. As the police car pulled out behind the man's car the man thought to himself. "I can outrun this guy." and increased his speed to 70 miles an hour. With the police still in pursuit he accelerated to 80, then 90, then 100 miles an hour. Before long he decided it was of no hope and pulled over to the side of the road. He was a smooth talker however, and he expected to talk his way out of the situation. The officer walked up to the side of the man's vehicle and shouted "I have had a very bad day and am in no mood to stand out here in this heat giving you a ticket. Just give me a good reason why you were driving so fast and I'll let you go." The man thought for a minute, then said. "Well, officer. my wife left me about three weeks ago for a state trooper. When I saw your lights come on. I thought you were him and you were trying to bring her back." "On your way," said the officer. -It turned out just like he expected.

Too many people have condemned themselves to lives of quiet desperation because they gave up on their dreams. The youth who dreamed of being a doctor gave up because someone said they didn't have what it takes. The woman who dreamed of owning her own business gave up because someone said she was a minority andthat odds are stacked against both women and minorities. Someone told the workman that he could never own a business like his employer and he believed it.

Each time a person tells us that we cannot succeed, in effect, they lower our expectations. However, our God does just the opposite. The word of God teaches us to raise our expectations! It gives us the confidence to expect miracles when we are sick; expect a job when we are unemployed and to expect answers when we have questions. On a daily basis, believers raise the roof of their expectations higher, with boldness and confidence that anything is possible a-nd nothing is impossible which is within the will of God.

As Christians, we thrive on the knowledge that God will make a way. Despite difficulties and frustrations that make success appear improbable, we stand assured that God will make it happen for us. Instead of lowering our expectations, we raise them higher every day!

Exposition

This text focuses on five men who expected a healing from God and received it.

Jesus was teaching in a private home. When a crowd suddenly appeared outside the home he continued to teach them about the kingdom of God.

A man who was afflicted with Palsy believed Jesus was a healer, He and four friends concocted the idea of getting close to Jesus to be healed. His friends carried him on a cot to the house where Jesus taught, but when they arrived the crowd was so thick that he could not get close.

The four men climbed to the roof top, and raised the sick man to the roof. They tore a hole in the roof that caught Jesus' attention as he saw the lame man being lowered in front of him. Impressed, Jesus forgave the man's sins and he was healed.

Raising The Roof

Today, there are many people who have shelved their personal dreams because they have been told that it cannot be done. Some have not even asked God, because they don't expect him to grant their request. A close look at the five men of this text shows what happens when believers raise their expectations and dare to succeed, relying on faith in God alone!

THEY DARED DIFFICULTY -. Success is accomplished by those who are not intimidated by difficulty. That is the lesson these five men teach. It was not an easy task for these five to get close to the Lord. They had to carry him through the streets only to find that the doorway was block. Carrying a full grown man, even for four men. is not an easy task. Raising him to the top of the house without dropping or injuring him was even more difficult, yet they were not intimidated. Believers who are pursuing life goals should not be intimidated by. difficulty. The road to success is paved with difficulty, frustrations and bumps. Our farmly histories are filled with accounts of how our ancestors overcame difficulties of slavery, poverty and ignorance to achieve. Any person who expects to succeed should expect difficulty and live constantly armed with a plan "B." "There is a way! If there is no way, God can create a way, if we trust him.

THEY DARED TO BE DIFFERENT: Sometimes, the road to success compelsus to be different and to take approaches that are different than others. The five men of the text took a very unorthodox approach to their healing. They were not limited by the fact that it was not at all customary to breakup a roof. When they found that the door was blocked they immediately sought ways to get close to the Lord, even though every traditional way was blocked. They risked the disapproval not only of the owner of the house but also every person thereby interrupting the meeting in order to get their friend to Jesus. They took a very unorthodox route, but it led them to their goal.

The believer often searches for a way to accomplish a goal and is not afraid to try a different approach. Dare to be different! That is easier said than done, because being different usually carries with it the stigma of nonconformity. Yet, one of the most salient features of the lives of great men and women is the fact that they had the courage to be different from the rest of the crowd marching toward mediocrity. Climbing to the top of a house with a sick man was certainly different.

They defied the status quo. Those who saw the five men must have thought them crazy, yet they continued. In the same sense, any person today who is faced with a challenge should search for an approach that leads to a resolution. That approach should not exclude the untried and unorthodox. Whatever works for your situation...works!

THEY DARED TO DO THE COSTLY: Success never comes without a price. Those who pursue it must be willing to pay the cost. The men of this text were well aware of the costs they would incur tearing up a roof. Removing brick and dirt and creating a large hole in the roof of a stranger, was costly. Financially, it would cost. They had no idea how the homeowner would respond either, but they were willing to shoulder the cost. Jesus, speaking to his disciples encouraged them to count the cost before pursuing the Christian life. He showed them the rewards, but he also told them that the rewards would not come without a price. That price would not be in dollars., but in many intangibles that could include life, liberty and pursuit of secular dreams.

Those who succeed, dare to incur the cost, A business enterprise won't succeed without some risk of financial loss. A change of careers in mid-life won't happen without the risk of security. To grab and hold one pursuit often means letting go of another. It is risky, but those who succeed, calculate the cost and then make their move. That's the essence of faith; the willingness to step out on the water trusting God to help do the impossible.

Expect God to Act

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should learn from this text that we should live expecting God to act in our lives.

There was never a moment in the experience of these five men when they did not expect the savior to act. They encountered each obstacle with the full knowledge that if they made it to a certain point they would see the savior face to face!

If we are acting in accordance with the will of God, there is no reason for any believer to doubt that God will act to open doors of opportunity or shut doors of defeat. The question is not whether God will act, but whether we will trust him to act and do what's necessary to bring ourselves before him.

Believers should approach God with determination, knowing that he has the power to make it happen.

The woman afflicted with an issue of blood, expected to receive a blessing if she could touch the hem of his garment!

The Centurion soldier, whose child was ill, came to Jesus expecting a blessing, if Jesus would say the word!

Believers don't know how it will be done, but they expect God to make a way!

Those who have lowered the roof of their expectations should not give up on God, raise your roof!

Those who have given up on achieving the impossible should not give up on God, raise your roof!

Those who have accepted defeat and have thrown in the towel should not give up so quickly, raise your roof!

Trust in the Lord!

Those who trust in the Lord, find that God usually acts in the appropriate way at the appropriate moment. The old folks said it correctly, "He may not come when you want him, but always on time!"

I don't know about you, but I have learned never to second guess the Lord!

Believers we should resolve, "I will trust in the Lord! I will trust in the Lord until I die! "

We can trust him because he loved us!

We can trust him because he died for us!

We can trust him because early Sunday morning he arose from the grave for us!

We can trust him to do what he said he will do!

Crossed Fingers

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 24, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." Psalm 23:4

Introduction

Have you ever faced a decisive moment and crossed your fingers? What did you mean when you did it? We've seen it happen on thousands of occasions: A team, in the final minutes of a game is down to one final shot that will determine the victor, many supporters in the crowd, cross their fingers. A person who is hoping to receive good news in an upcoming announcement, secretly crosses his fingers. A crossed finger in these instances is a form of body language that expresses hope and faith. When a person is expressing a false hope or is attempting disguise a true feeling, he or she often crosses his fingers, but does so behind his back. It indicates that the words being spoken are not really a true expression of how one feels; they are a lie. Crossed fingers give insight into depth of our desires and emotions.

Nearly everyone has experienced an occasion in which they have crossed their fingers. Most however, did not know that the crossed finger first originated with Christians. When it was first used, it had nothing at all to do with luck. It was a secret code. In the early days of the Church it was dangerous to be a Christian. Our faith was unpopular and illegal. Many who believed were tortured and fed to lions for sport. There were times when Christians were hated so badly that even a casual association with followers of the cross could mean death. When those who were Christians, met another Christian they would use "body language" or crossed fingers to indicate that they too were believers. If someone approached that they were unsure about, they would quickly hide their crossed fingers behind their back to disguise their identity.

Crossed fingers represented the Cross of Christ. It indicated that a situation had been placed in the hands of God. It suggested that the believer was hoping and praying for victory in Christ. The blessing associated with crossed fingers for many was, "May Christ be victorious in my hour of need!"

That's significant, especially in light of the words of the text from Psalm 23. We read the words, "though" I walk through, the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil. There are two words that leap from this passage, "though" and "through." The only difference between the two words is the letter "r". In American Sign Language, the letter "r" is made by crossing the middle finger over the index finger. It's the sign of the cross.

The difference between our "though" situations and our "through" situations is the "r" the presence of Christ victorious in our hour of need. When the cross, there is no "through" only a though.

Though we may walk in the darkness of the moment, our hope is that Christ is victorious in our hour of need so, we walk through the dark moment fearing nothing, our hope and trust has been placed in God's hand.

As Christians, we may not cross our fingers as much as the early believers, but we do maintain hope and faith, that in any given situation, Christ will be the victor. We don't hide that hope or faith behind our backs, but only declare to the world, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus' name. On Christ, the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand."

Exposition

This text focuses on two words of the 23rd Psalm, "though" and "through."

David wrote freely about his faith in God despite difficult times. It is a psalm of confidence and determination. It positive, forward looking and without a doubt, filled with faith.

The essence of the psalms is derived from two words "though" and "through", which if it were not for the "r" would be the same word. It is the "r" that makes the difference.

Life's "Though" Experiences

David's psalm was realistic. It showed that he was keenly aware that there are dangers, misfortunes and misunderstandings lurking around every corner. "Though" seems to represent unknown difficulties, without an "if" but with a certainty that unknowns will come.

What are "though" experiences? In this Psalm David praises God for prepared tables, quiet waters, overflowing cups, green pastures, and anointed heads.

Yet our "though" experience, underscores the fact that there are periods in life with when the waters are not quiet. In fact, there are times when the waters are turbulent and dangerous. When quiet waters become rapids, that's a "though" experience.

There are times when our cups do not overflow. Overflowing cups implies prosperity. It indicates those times when you have more food than you need, more clothes than you can wear, a soft bed to sleep in, and a few nickels in your pocket. Yet life does not always present us with overflow situations. Sometimes there are times when our cup is not overflowing. In fact, there are times when we may find our cup has only a few drops in them. When those times come, they are "though" situations!

There are times when we do not have green pastures. For sheep and cattle a green pasture means an abundance of grazing opportunities. There are times when we seem to always be in the right place at the right time, to take advantage of opportunities. That's when pastures are green. When everything seems to work the way it should..that's when pastures are green! As great as they are, there are also times in life when the pastures are not green. There are times when opportunities seem to pass you by. These are the times when you always seem to be in the right place but always at the wrong time. Instead of green pastures, there are no pastures at all. These are "though" situations.

There are times when we can feel the strength of talents and gifts as we perform a great work. The anointed head is the one that has been touched by the power of God. When we operate under the anointing, we feel God working through us. When we sing under the anointing, God sings! When we play an instrument under the anointing, God plays! When we work in a ministry under the anointing, God works beside us! Yet there are times when have allowed ourselves to slip from under the anointing power of God. That's when we sing, but it is not God singing through us. That's when we minister but do it without God. It is a barren time when the artist has no inspiration, the writer stares at a blank page, and musician loses his creative touch. These are the times that can be characterized as "though" situations.

There are times when we are victorious despite the efforts of our enemies to defeat us. For a time, we appear to be charmed, unbeatable, and unmovable. Each person has a host of detractors and a few enemies, none of whom relish the idea of his success or prosperity. Yet, God often provides a "table" of blessings for believers in the presence of their enemies, frustrating and confusing them. There are many believers who have received promotions despite the efforts of co-workers to stop it from happening. Others have received appointments or special opportunities, despite barriers erected to retard their efforts. These are situations when it becomes obvious that God has prepared a table for us, in the presence of our enemies. Life, however, is not always "win-win" situations. There are times when we suffer defeats, lose battles and watch our enemies walk away with life's trophies in a moment of triumph. There are even times when we walk in the valley of the shadow of fear, death, depression and trouble. These are the kinds of situations covered by "though."

Though is a word of caution in the context of this psalm. It reminds us of the realities of life. It reminds us that the devil is busy and is constantly looking for opportunities to seek and destroy believers.

For every "though" there is a "through"

Believers bring an "r" into every "though" experience. The "r" is our faith and hope that "Christ will be victorious in our hour of need!" –It's our crossed finger! It's our faith, based upon experience, that God can change a though situation into a "through" situation.

What is the difference between “though” and “through?” It is only one letter!

If a difficulty in life gets you down, it may be because you can only see the “though” and not the “through.”

When you get fired off your job, it’s a time when you can only see the though, and don’t know how you’ll get through!

When your car breaks down, a household item gets out of control, it’s a time when you can only see the though, and don’t know how you’ll get through!

When the love of your life is acting up and doing the “fool thing”, it’s a time when you can only see the though, and don’t know how you’ll get through!

When all of your bills are due, but you’ve run out of money, it’s a time when you can only see the though, and you don’t know how you’ll get through!

Though indicates a time of trouble. Through points to a time when trouble will end.

Though indicates a time of weakness. Through points us to renewed strength.

Though indicates a time of defeat. Through points us to a time of victory.

This is the faith that helps a believer say, “Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil for thou art with me..”

Though I was born poor with all of the odds against me, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me!

Though I am discriminated against, persecuted and belittled, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me!

Though I am besieged by troubles on every side, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me!

The difference between a though situation and a “through” situation depends heavily upon what believers take into a situation. Believers have learned to take the “cross of salvation” with them and “thoughs” become “throughs!”

The believer’s hope is not in the storm, but in coming through the storm!

His hope is not in the darkness, but in coming through the darkness into the marvelous light!

His hope is not in his oppression, but in coming through oppression into liberation!

It’s the idea of the song writer who asked the question, “Have you been tried in the fire? Did you come through like pure gold?”

That’s what Job had in mind when he said, “Yea though he slay me..yet will I serve him!”

The song writer had it right when he said, “I’m going through. I’ll pay the price, no matter what others say or do! I’m going through!”

Whenever you get into a tough situation, take the Lord with you, because there is power in the cross!

There’s power in the cross, because one day, over 2000 years ago, Jesus was lifted up on an old rugged cross!

He died nailed to a cross!His blood was shed on a cross!

But early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Take the Lord with you and everything will be alright!

Bought With A Price

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 1, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." 1 Corinthians 6:20

Introduction

As Americans, we celebrate freedom, but are we really free? In the land of the free and the home of the brave, do we really enjoy unrestricted freedom, liberty and independence? While we celebrate our national independence and exercise certain individual liberties, it doesn't take much for us to realize that we are not really "free."

"I wants to be free!" That was the chant of slaves who worked in the fields of America producing its crops and maintaining its Southern agricultural economy. We spoke of our desire to be free, but many had no notion what freedom actually meant. For most, freedom, meant that ability to avoid the most responsibility possible.

For a time "I wants to be free" meant the end of slavery. That's when men like Frederick Douglass traveled the nation questioning whether or not our celebration of independence was real. In 1852 Douglass asked this pointed question, "What, to the American slave, is your 4th of July? I answer: a day that reveals to him, more than all other days in the year, the gross injustice and cruelly to which he is the constant victim. To him, your celebration is a sham; your boasted liberty, an unholy license; your national greatness, swelling vanity; your sounds of rejoicing are empty and heartless; your denunciations of tyrants, brass fronted impudence; your shouts of liberty and equality, hollow mockery; your prayers and hymns, your sermons and thanksgivings, with all your religious parade, and solemnity, are, to him, mere bombast, fraud, deception, impiety, and hypocrisy - a thin veil to cover up crimes which would disgrace a nation of savages."

American Independence from Britain certainly cut the political umbilical cord connecting this continent from Europe, but it did not bring true freedom and it certainly did not come free.

Even today, we are not completely free but what we have has been bought with a price.

Our national record is sprinkled with limitations, restrictions and prohibitions, that limit us, but even the freedoms that remain, are bought with a price.

The very first person to pay the price for American freedom, was a Black man, Crispus Attucks, who was killed protesting the British.

What of the others? Historians tells us that five signers of the Declaration of Independence were captured by the British as traitors, and tortured before they died. Twelve had their homes ransacked and burned. Two lost their sons serving in the Revolutionary Army; another had two sons captured. Nine of the 56 fought and died from wounds or hardships of the Revolutionary War.

They signed and pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.knowing full well that the penalty would be death if they were captured.

Whatever liberties we share as Americans, they were bought with a price. Thousands gave their lives, both Black and White that we have a chance to exercise certain options, considered inalienable from the human spirit: life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

We are free, but there are limitations, restrictions and prohibitions related to our freedom. This is the spirit of what Paul talked about when he wrote to the Galatians. In Galatians 5:1 he wrote "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."

Spiritually, Jesus came to set us free from bondage, but just like American Independence, it is not complete freedom It has restrictions. Also like American Independence, it did not come without a price.

The price of our spiritual independence was paid by Christ on Calvary.

Salvation is available without a charge, but spiritual freedom was not free, it was bought with a price, which was paid by Jesus Christ himself.

As Christians, we celebrate whatever level of freedom we enjoy, with the full knowledge that no freedoms come without responsibility. We our spiritual freedom from bondage was purchased by Christ and as such we owe him our allegiance.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul explaining the nature of the spiritual relationship of each believer to Christ.

This letter was written to believers who lived in the city of Corinth. It was a city that was infamously known for its loose morals, fast living and low moral standards. The idea of "if it feels good do it" was the dominant philosophy. It controlled the actions of most of the citizens. Until Paul arrived in Corinth there had been very little resistance or challenge to the immorality of Corinth. It was accepted as a way of life. Incest, homosexuality, drunkenness, lesbianism, cheating, extortion; all of these were the hall marks of the Corinthian way of life.

Paul took the unpopular position of challenging the status quo of Corinth, damning those who participated in immoral activity under the guise of individual freedom. It was an extremely unpopular opinion, especially in a city that prided itself upon a "Live and let live" attitude. "You do your thing and I'll do mine" was the idea that prevailed and very little was said by anyone until Paul became to teach and preach in Corinth.

In his first letter to the Corinthians and later to the Galatians and Romans that believers in Christ are spiritually free, but that free should not and does not insinuate that they are free to conduct themselves anyway they want; do anything they want; or involve themselves any activity they want. They are free, but there are limitations.

Beginning at verse nine Paul produces a checklist, which is not all inclusive, but is certainly representative of our limitations: ÿ"Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God."

His explanation of freedom is characterized in verse 12. He notes that the spirit of freedom gives believers the option to participate in a variety of activities without restrictions written in a spiritual legal code that itemizes each and every activity with intricate detail. Paul said, while he knows he, as a believer has a right to indulge in any number of activities, just because he has the right does not mean that it is "expedient" to exercise the right. It is not necessary simply because the opportunity is available.

Specifically, Paul notes that our freedom comes with restrictions that are self imposed. Without a list, we evaluate circumstance in terms of its spiritual value and choose or reject participation based upon our goal of being active citizens in the kingdom of God.

The freedom that Christ gives falls in three categories:

1) The freedom from the compulsion to do what the world dictates (Gal 1:4)

2) Freedom of living a life that only self oriented but elevated to a level that wants to please God (Gal. 2:20)

3) Freedom from the curse of the law (Gal. 3:13)

The overriding principal is for every believer to remember that we are not our own, we are bought with a price. We have freedoms and liberties, but we children of the King, purchased by his own blood. As we exercise our liberties, we must do so in the light of our relationship with Christ, who paid for our salvation with his own blood.

Freedom

Freedom does not come without restrictions. As believers we have conditional freedom, just as we have as American citizens.

We have freedom of speech, but we cannot say anything we want without injuring the rights of others.

We have the freedom to assemble, protest address government leaders but we don't have the freedom to disrupt the orderly flow of commerce or activity.

We have freedom of the press but we can't knowingly write false statements of fact that injure the ability of others to pursue their profession.

We have freedoms but they do not come without restrictions.

In a spiritual sense, this still remains true. We have a plethora of freedoms but those freedoms do not give us the right to indulge in worldly activities, because we have been saved.

For many years in the African-American religious community there was an unspoken belief that two persons who were both saved enjoyed special freedoms that allowed them to participate in sexual activity without penalty as long as both parties were saved. The idea said, “Two clean sheets can’t dirty each other.” Following that notion, many preachers, deacons, and believers involved themselves in a variety sexual escapades, always careful to make sure that both parties were “saved.”

We have freedoms, but there should be self imposed restrictions upon our freedoms.

As believers, we have the freedom to go any local club, get on the dance floor and hunch and grid. The question that Paul asks is does that activity strengthen or weaken our relationship with Christ, to whom we spiritually belong.? We have the right, but is it expedient?

As believers Adam can leave Eve and find Steve and they can hug, kiss, hold hands and engage in other unmentionables. In light of God’s word, will their relationship strengthen or weaken their standing with Christ, to whom they are spiritually indebted?

Believers who choose to live together without being married, have that freedom. Believers who choose to drink excessively, brawl, steal or engage in malicious gossip, all have the freedom to do so. but freedom has both limitations and consequences.

A man may have the right to wave his hand in the air, but the first time that his hand hands another person’s nose his rights end and there is a consequence.

While Christianity does not give us a list, etched in stone, in matters of conscience we are encouraged to exercise our freedoms with prudence. Thus, a believer can go to a night club, but he only chooses to exercise that freedom if his participation will please God. A believer has the freedom to engage in a variety of activities, but only chooses to exercise the freedom, if doing so will please God.

Our freedom is limited only by our desire to please God. If pleasing God is not a high priority in our lives, then the types of activities church members involve themselves in could be unfathomable.

Independence

While we celebrate our independence from England, as individuals we are highly dependent.

Not a single one of us can survive long in modern times without the assistance of another person. Even those who pride themselves in their lack of dependence on others must face the reality that we are irrevocably tied to others.

We depend upon others for the food that we eat. We need farmers, truckers, grocers, chemists, administrators and check out cashiers just to get food for our table.

We depend upon loggers, mill workers, truck drivers, carpenters, plumbers and electricians just to get the homes and apartments in which we live.

We depend on doctors, nurses, orderlies, LPNs, ambulance drivers, EMS professionals, pharmacists hospital intake clerks for treatment when we need medical attention.

We claim that we are independent, but even independence has its limitations. We are independent only to the extent that we can make something happen without the assistance of someone in the chain events.

If that is the case, all of us are tremendously independent.

Dependence carries a responsibility, limitations and even intrusions. A family that lives in public housing can find that the dependence upon government subsidized housing places limits on their liberties and rights. When a member of that household violates a law many face eviction.. Welfare recipients often have to reveal every detail of the personal lives, including the identities of their sexual partners. Even free lunch in school requires a family to reveal all of its financial vulnerabilities and weakness which are plugged into a computer transferred from database to database. A child may have a driver's license, but that child is totally dependent upon their parents for the authority to drive a vehicle, because they have not reached a majority age.

Dependence carries responsibilities and restrictions.

More than we depend heavily upon God for the air we breathe and the very life in our bodies. We count on God for everything. But that dependence does not come without responsibilities and restrictions.

God gives us finances, but we must exercise responsibility in how we spend those finances. He gives us talents, but there is a responsible expectation of prudence in the use of the talents he has given us.

God blesses us, but he cannot expect for him to bless us without expecting certain type of behavior from us. Because we are dependent upon him for everything and cannot bless ourselves, there are some restrictions that he places on us, if we want to continue getting his blessings.

Many have discovered what the song writer found out when he wrote, "Without God I could do nothing. Without him, I'd surely fail. Without him, my life would be drifting. Like a ship without a sail."

Solomon made it clear when he said, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understanding."

A final song writer said, "I learned how to lean and depend on Jesus. I found out, if I trust him, he will provide."

Bought With A Price

Finally, brothers and sisters, even salvation is not really free, it has been bought with a price.

The society we live offers many things which appear to be free, but actually have either a hidden cost or is being paid by in an indirect way.

We see sales in stores that say, "buy one get one free." But is that second pair really free, or only half price?

Free lunch is provided in school but is it really free?

Every time you look at your paycheck, there is a section in which your federal income tax is deducted. That's the place where the free lunch is paid for. That's also where the free federal interstate highway system is paid for.

Anything that is free has a price, hidden or otherwise.

Somebody has to pay the price.

Consider the young man who lived a wild life and always disobeyed his mother. One night he took a gun and left home. His mother was concerned about him and started walking the streets looking for him. When she walked into a local convenience store she was horrified as saw her son standing over the body of man her son killed in a robbery. The mother took the gun from her son's hand and pushed him out of the door. She pressed her finger on the trigger and fired one shot into the floor and stood over the body with tears running down her face. When police arrived, they found the mother standing over a dead man, holding a fired pistol in her hand. When asked to make a statements she said, "A crime was committed, a price has to be paid." When the son found out that his mother was going to jail. He tried to tell everyone that he was the guilty party, but no one would listen. She was sentenced to life in prison because all she would say, is "a crime has been committed, a price has to be paid."

The son came to visit her in prison and asked why she did it. She said, "Son, you took a man's life and a price had to be paid. I'm paying the price for you to give you one more chance at freedom. Every time you think about doing something wrong, remember your freedom has been bought with a price! Every day that would waste in idle living, remember that day of freedom was bought with price!"

Brothers and Sisters, That's what Jesus did for us! He paid the price for our salvation.

Jesus paid it all. All to him I owe. Sin had left a crimson stain but he washed it white as now!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave, with all power in hands!

He paid it all!

He paid it all!

All to him I owe!

Looking for Home in a City Full of Mansions

A sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 15, 2001

SCRIPTURE:"And Jesus said unto them, Foxes have holes and birds have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." Luke 9:58; "In my father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you, I go to prepare a place for you." John 14:2

Introduction

Is it possible to sleep on silk sheets at night, in a house worthy of the tastes of kings, and still be homeless? Is it possible to live in a fine apartment with all of the amenities that make life comfortable, but still homeless? Is it possible to eat your food from silver trays, drink your coffee from fine China and still be homeless? Those who answered "yes" understand the true meaning of homelessness, which is typified by absence of a dwelling, but in a greater sense has nothing at all to do with dwellings but abandonment.

There are thousands of men, women and children in America who are living on street corners by day, and sleeping in alley ways and card board boxes at night. Politically, they are described as homeless. Often that description is inadequate. There are some who live on the street who are not homeless, but are houseless. There are others who are truly "homeless."

What is the difference between a homeless person and a houseless person? A truly homeless person is totally disconnected from all sources of support and affection. By chance or design, a homeless person has noone who cares. A houseless person, on the other hand, may have a home, but not have a house. In some cities, it is not unusual for entire families to live in card board boxes on city streets or in abandoned building. They have no house, but they have a home.

But an equal paradox exists. While there ere are thousands described as homeless because they have no place to lay their heads, there is an equal number of people who have a place to lay their heads, but are still homeless. They have a house, but they do not have a home.

If the identifying factor of being "homeless" in the larger sense of the word is "disconnection," then there are many who are spiritually homeless. They are disconnected. They wander from faith to faith. One day they are Baptists, the next they are Charismatics. One day they are Methodists and the next they are Seventh Day Adventists. There are some who have wandered through all of the available faiths and still have no place to call home.

Some have even disconnected themselves from faith based connections completely.

As Christians should strived to remain connected to home that God has provided for us, through worship,service and prayer.

Exposition

Our text first considers Christ as he responds to the request of a certain man to follow him in the Christian way. Jesus reminded him of the sacrifices that would physically be required of those who joined his missionary travels.

Jesus said though the animals of the forest, foxes, birds, etc., have places to call home, while on this earth, he had no permanent place to call home.

David in the 104th Psalm said Storks live in the fir trees, (v17) goats live in the high hills (v18), Conies live in the rocks, and holes, caves and forests provide homes for other wild beasts, but yet the son of man hath no place to lay his head.

This characteristic of Christ is consistent throughout the Gospel accounts of his life, he lived a life of poverty. He did not own a house or a piece of land. In Bethlehem, he was born in a borrowed Stable. In Nazareth he lived in his mother's house. In his ministry he existed on borrowed things. He lived in borrowed houses. He Rode borrowed mules. He ate his meals in borrowed upper rooms. He was even crucified on a borrowed cross, and buried in borrowed tomb.

Therefore when Jesus referred to his not having a place to lay his head he made specific reference to the sacrificial nature of his ministry. It was not about accumulation of wealth, but about declaring the good news about the Kingdom of God.

Although Jesus had no place to lay his head, it would be a mistake to describe him as homeless. He did not have a house, but he certainly had a home. This the home he describes in John. Because he has a father who cares for him, Jesus could say, "In my father's house." He was never disconnected in any way from the love or affection of his father. They kept in touch. He may not have had a house but he certainly had a home.

Homelessness is being disconnected

Homelessness is not defined qualitatively by the kind of house we live in or quantitatively by whether we have a house at all.

The truly homeless are those who have no one to care about them. There are only two ways that a person who once suceeded in the business world can be on the streets, no one cares or the person doesn't care to be connected.

Believers will never be spiritually homeless because God stops caring. God always cares about his own. He keeps up with us as too. The psalmist says he neither slumbers nor sleeps. He knows our downsitting and our uprising. He knows every thought we think and is aware of our whereabouts at all time. We never leave the presence of God. He cares and keeps us with us.

Whenever a child leaves home, a concerned parent keeps up with them. Letters, telephone calls and visits, demonstrate that concern is there. A child that is away from home, is always on a parent's mind. That's the way it is with God. We are always on his mind. The porchlight is always on and their key still works.

Isreal was exiled in Babylong but they were never without a home. Messages came on a regular basis from back home and they continued to pray for the restoration of the homeland.

God does not disconnect a beliver, he maintains a constant vigil to keep in touch.

While there are persons who have no one to care for them, there is a large number of people who have family that is concerned about them, but they chosen to disconnect from them. They don't call home. They don't write home. They don't go home. They distance themselves from home.

They have a home, but they have disconnected themselves.

Having a home but not touching base is frustrating. Connections are necessary.

A beautifully decorated telephone that is not connected is useless.

An all electric home with the power disconnected is no good.

Having a home but being disconnected is like having no home at all.

Too many today, have allowed themsleves to become disconnected from their spiritual "home." God has not cut us off, we have cut ourselves off from him. There are members of churches across America that are literal strangers to the church family. They offer no service, do not participate in church ministries and do not pay their fair share of the operating expenses of their church. They are literal strangers, who have cut themselves off from the daily life of the congregation. They have time for every imaginable endeavor, except the church.

Today there are many who are homeless in a city of mansions. They have much, but have so little

In that respect there are many today who have a place to lay their head but are never-the-less, homeless.

These are those who drive fine cars and wear the best clothes, but have no place to call home.

These are those who live in houses of brick with carpet floors, and a wealth conveniences and appliances, but still have no place to call home.

These are those who have a summer house in the South and Winter house in the North, but still have no place to call home.

These are those who have a place to lay their heads but there is something missing in the house: Mother doesn't seem to like father, and father doesn't seem to care; sisters don't like brothers and brothers are happy to be left alone. They have a place to lay their heads, but no place to call home.

There are many who still have a place to lay their heads, but have no one who cares You got to have somebody who cares.

I'm so glad that I serve a God who cares.
He cares enough about me to wipe tears from my eyes.
He care enough about me to lift up a bowed down head.
He cares enough about me to pick me up when I'm falling
He cares! Yes he cares!

We have a home

When Jesus said that he had no place to lay his head he was not implying that he was homeless and rejected by his father.

We know his father still loved him because on the day of his Baptism the spirit of God came as a dove and "This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased."

When Jesus said he had no place to lay his head, he was not a man without a home, but he was a man away from home:

-Not a man journeying to find a home, but a man on his way home.

-Looking a for a home to buy, but a man looking for friends with whom to share his home.

Jesus was on a pilgrimage of love, preaching the coming kingdom. But this earth was not his home, but only his dwelling place. His home is with the father in the heavenly city.

Every child of God is a pilgrim on his way to Canaan land. The place where you lay your head is only your dwelling but its not your home!

Down here, Jesus didn't have a place to lay his head, but he wasn't worried about it, because I heard him say "in my father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told"

Come and go with me to my father's house!
Come home with me and I'll show you a place:
-Where hearse wheels never roll
-Where tears never fall
-Where tempers never rise
-Where doubts never appear
Come and go with me and I'll show you Savior who cares about you!
He cares about you whether:
-You drive a Lincoln or a Lemon
-Its GED,PH.D or no degree
-Your clothes of French sale or rummage sale!
-You pay with VISA or ask with Please Suh
He cared so much that John 3:16 says that God gave his only begotten Son.
He cared so much that died on Calvary!
He cared so much that rose on Sunday morning!
Come and go with me to my father's house!

The Hiding Place

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 22, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "Thou art my hiding place; thou shalt preserve me from trouble; thou shalt compass me about with songs of deliverance." Psalm 32:7

Introduction

Have you ever had a secret hiding place? Most children have some kind of hiding place. It's that place with children go to escape if only for a short while. The hiding place is a secret place known only to those who are privy to its whereabouts. There are no designated places. Just about anyway can be a hiding place. For an adventurous youth, a tall tree is a good hiding place. Perched high in such a tree, a boy can escape the pressures of the world, if only for a few minutes. Closets make perfect hiding places. There have been many children who we have found their closets to be safer refuges from grown ups and siblings that do not understand when they just want to be alone.

It is not only children that have hiding places, adults have hiding places too. Maybe adults do not hide in cardboard boxes or climb to the top of trees but nevertheless they still have hiding places. These are the places where we find solitude and a few quiet moments to compose our thoughts and to commune with God.

Sometimes it's fun to hide. The children of many generations have played the game called "hide and go seek." One person serves as a caller. The rest of the children hide themselves in obscure places and try, to the best of their ability, to race home before being found by the caller. The caller closes his eyes, turns his back and begins a familiar chant: "Last night, night before, 24 robbers at my door, I got up and let them in. Hit em in the head with a rolling pin." Then the caller with yell a question: "all hid?" the project on the game was for that caller to find your hiding place before you were able to make it to home base. Some even played the game at night and called it kicked the can." It was a fun game but no one really enjoyed being discovered in their hiding place.

Yet, in our despair, no matter how distant or troubling our circumstance, God hears and answers our prayers.

Hiding is fun until our hiding places us dangerously out of distance from God. Like the child who seeks to avoid the demanding eyes of parents, often we are drawn to believe that we can hide from God without considering the words of the 139th Psalm, "Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence?

If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there.ÿIf I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; ÿEven there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me."

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he glorifies God for securing for him a hiding place where safety and blessings are guaranteed.

David wrote this Psalm From the perspective of a man who were had a variety of experiences with God. In the course of his life David knew what it meant to be both a vagabond and a favorite of the King.

In this text, David summarizes the course of his own life experiences as a man who tried to hide things from God, was hidden by God, and ultimately found security in God.

As a young man David had the unique experience of sharing the power of god's protective hand. King Saul became jealous of David because the people praised him as a national hero. They sang songs that praised David greatly while giving only marginal praise to Saul who was king. The king set out to destroy David. His armies chased David through the valleys and hill sides of Palestine without success because God hid David from his enemies. As Saul would approach him David would escape. Though his numbers grew so large that at trail was obvious, still God hid him. In Psalm 27:2 David refers to this when he said, "when the wicked even mine enemies and my foes came upon me to eat my flesh they stumbled and fell." David survived because he was hidden by the hand of God.

There was a point in David's life where he attempted to hide his actions from God. When he committed murder during his adultery with Bathsheba, David thought his actions were hidden From both God and man. God sent the prophet Nathan to remind him that he had committed a great sin for which the nation would pay dearly. Convicted, David changed course, and instead of trying to hide from God, He turned to repentance. In Psalm 51 he cried out to God, "Saying create in me a clean heart Oh God, and renew a right spirit within me." In verse five David points out that he had to acknowledge his sinful acts. He said he had to confess his wrongdoing before the almighty. After a confession, David said his sins were forgiven.

For the remainder of his life, David found joy in hiding himself in God, rather than trying to hide from God. David found the tremendous joy In giving his life to God, And reveling in the joy of salvation. He discovered that those who hide themselves in God rather than in mankind, learn to fear and trust God. Those who fear and trust God are blessed by the protection of God. In Psalm 31:20 David says, "Thou shalt hide them in the secret of thy presence from the pride of men; thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues." David's joy was that God would cover him and secretly sustain him from the malicious actions of others if he continued to fear him, respect him and live according to his commands.

David's conclusion of the matter is in the last verse of the 32 Psalm which says,

"Be glad in the Lord and rejoice, ye righteous and shout for joy all ye that are upright in heart."

Hiding From The Lord

There are millions of people who are playing the frustrating game of hide and go seek with God. On A daily basis there are many who spend a considerable amount of time trying to either hide illicit actions from him or trying to evade service on his behalf. Playing hide and go seek with God is a game With a predictable outcome. The winner in such a game will always be God Because there is no place that we can go that is outside of the vision of God.

Hiding from God is impossible. The very nature of God is that he is everywhere at the same time as well as being all knowing. Thus, there is no place a person can go that is outside of the eyesight of God. Despite our best efforts to conceal are worldly activity, God still sees everything. Ezekiel 8:7 gives the account of an attempt by the ungodly to hide actions from God behind closed doors. In public they appeared religious but they had a private life that they tried to hide. God took Ezekiel and created a hole in the wall to show him what the people were doing in the dark, outside of the view of their neighbors and supposedly, the scrutiny of God. Just as Israel attempted ungodly acts behind closed doors, there are many church members (as opposed to Christians) who are religious zealots on Sunday but who gamble, fornicate, steal, and indulge in many other vices when they are outside of the view of the religious community. Numbers 32:23 gives us a stern warning, ".ye have sinned against the LORD: and be sure your sin will find you out."

While some try to hide sins from God, there are others who are not trying to hide sins but they are evading active service in the kingdom, hiding behind a plethora of excuses and secular involvements. There is no hiding from God, he knows our hearts. When Jesus asked several men to follow him, some tried to hid behind family obligations, citing a recent death of a family member. Others cited business obligations. Each was looking for something to hide behind. God told Jonah to preach to people of Ninevah, and the prophet tried to evade his call to service by going in the opposite direction. It was only after he was swallowed by a giant fish that Jonah decide that it was better to follow God's direction. There are many today who evade active service in the kingdom pointing to their obligations to their families, their place of employment, the club, fraternity or sorority or some other worthy and noble cause. Yet, while the excuses flow, the master still issues the call for servants to help minister to the sick and bereaved; comfort the wounded, religiously educate the children, feed the hungry, visit the jails, build Christian families, administer to affairs of the kingdom, promote praise and worship, and generally nurture the faithful. The harvest is great, but the laborers are few.

It is impossible to hide from the Lord. Jonah discovered that. Nathaniel, sitting under a fig tree also found that without looking Jesus saw and heard him. The call to serve is so great that it cannot be shut out. The song writer said, "Jesus is tenderly calling today. Calling today! Calling today. Jesus is tenderly calling today!" When Isaiah heard the call he said, “Here am I send me!”

Hidden by the Lord

While there are some who spend their lives hiding from the lord, there are others who acknowledge that the only way they have been able to achieve any semblance of success and security is because they have been hidden by the Lord. To be hidden by Lord simply means that a person has been sheltered, protected, secured, and maintained by the mercies of God. It means that while a person should have experienced a devastating outcome because of circumstances and conditions that existed, God intervened and hid that person from the negatives that should have resulted. But in another way, God has built a hedge of protection around believers that has resulted In a spiritually sheltered existence.

When Pharaoh issued a decree that all boys would be destroyed, It meant certain death for the baby Moses. The young child was in a circumstance he could not control. His life was in danger. His future was gloomy. His prospects were dim. Yet, in this context, God responded by hiding him from trouble. As Moses floated In little basket down the Nile river it was the hand of god that hid him From soldiers seeking to kill him. It was also the hand of God that hid him from mercenaries that would have betrayed him for a reward. He was hidden by God, sustained by God and then used by God to do a great work.

In a similar sense, many today have been hidden by God. We have been sustained in our poverty. We have obtained celebrity despite obscurity; achieved greatness despite our apparent anonymity; and have grown strong despite the weaknesses reflected in our history.

This is the truth that accounts for the protective hedge that seems to surround believers. It explains how we survive and thrive despite the efforts of our enemies to defeat us. God hides us from the plots, tricks, plans, schemes, and traps of those who would destroy us. There are times when we feel like we have been abandoned. That’s when we should re-read David’s words in Psalm 31:22, “For I said in my haste I am cut off from before thine eyes, never-the-less thou heardest the voice of my supplication when I cried unto thee.” David said in essence, “I started feeling sorry for myself until I looked around and realized that everytime I got in trouble I called upon the Lord and he hid me.”

Hidden in the Lord

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should consider the rewards of being hidden IN the Lord.

Being hidden in the Lord is significantly different from being hidden from the Lord or being hidden by the Lord. When we are hidden from the Lord the implication is that we are trying to be out of his sight. When we are hidden by the lord the implication is that an outside force is acting upon us to achieve an end. However, when we are hidden IN the Lord it suggests that we have put ourselves under the trust and care of the almighty.

Those who are hidden in the Lord develop a sense of confidence that is unequaled by non-believers.

Those who are hidden in the lord are able to weather storms, regardless of their ferocity!

Those who are hidden in the Lord are able to endure difficulties because the know the Lord will make a way!

Job was hidden in the Lord. Though he faced difficulties, sickness and loss of his possessions he said, "Thou he slay me, yet will I serve him!"

Daniel was hidden in the Lord. Though he faced sudden death in the lion's den, he remained confident in God and prayed every day!

The Hebrew Boys were hidden in the Lord. Though they faced the crippling heat of the fiery furnace, that still maintained God is able!

If you are hidden in the Lord, whatever it is, let God take care of it! If you are hidden in the Lord it also means that you have hidden BY the Lord!

If God has hidden you under his protective grace, it means that he is working things out!

In the game of Hide and Go Seek, there are some who can hide themselves so well that the caller never finds them. The only time a person who is well hid is discovered, is when they decide to stick their head around the corner! Then they were tagged out!

If God has hidden you under his protective grace, don't mess things up, by sticking your head out and trying to handle it yourself!

If folks have stabbed you in the back, but they haven't killed your spirit, it means that God has hidden you in his grace, don't stick your head out!

If your enemies have laid traps for you, but you have never fallen into a single one, it means that God has hidden you in his grace, don't stick your head out!

If people have called you all kinds of names, but your reputation is still in tact, it means that God has hidden you! Don't stick your head out!

What does it mean to be hidden in the Lord?

To be hidden in the Lord means to keep your hand in God's hand!

To be hidden in the Lord means to keep trusting God every day of your life!

To be hidden in the Lord means to stay close to God! Stay close in prayer! Stay close in study! Stay close in Worship!

In the game of Hide and Go seek there is always one player that refuses to hidebut tips up behind the caller and stands right behind him. As soon as the chant is finished, the player touches home base!

That's the way it is with God. Those who stay close to the Lord, always make it home!

No wonder David declared, "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me."

Because he has saved me and forgiven me...

Because he has hidden me from my enemies...

Because he has hidden me from dangers seen and unseen, I can't help but tell his story!

I got to tell somebody how he died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

The Millionaire Next Door

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the New Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 5, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. Matthew 6:19-21

Introduction

Have you ever taken time to add up your net worth? If you added it all up, what are you worth? Throw in everything, your car, house, furnishings, savings,business property, investments, gadgets? What are you worth? Some of us could add those numbers quickly. Others would take a while. What is your net worth? $10,000? $50,000? What about $250,000? Over a million? What would surprise many people is the number of persons in America who have accumulated more than $1 million in assets. Think of it, the person sitting next to you could secretly be a millionaire and you've never known it?

In 1997 Drs. Thomas J. Stanley and William Danko startled America with their book, "The Millionaire Next Door." In it they released the results of a study that showed that there are over 3.5 million first generation millionaires in the United States. They generally live on seven percent of their worth, drive American made cars, look for bargains, save 15 percent of their incomes, and work hard to keep from looking, dressing, eating, or otherwise acting like millionaires. They operate on the philosophy of spend less and invest. The study showed that the millionaire next door doesn't live an extravagant life style. If necessary he could live for 10 years out of his savings account and investments without going to work a single day.

Among that number are hundreds of thousand of Christians. Like the others they save, invest, spend wise, live frugally and have amassed considerable resources. The difference between the Christian with resources and the others is that the Christian acknowledges its source and operates with the full knowledge that it all belongs to God and, "you can't take it with you."

Many people focus totally on accumulating "things." There are many people who store up treasures as if they could take them with them. Consider the old miser who saved a considerable amount of money in the course of his life. The thought never crossed his mind that it wasn't permanent until he lay on his dying bed. That's when he called in three of this best friends: His doctor, his minister and his broke brother in law. He gave each of them two personal checks, one for $100,000 that they were to keep for themselves and another for $100,000 that they were to have placed in his casket so that he could take it with him. At the funeral each man, came and placed an envelope in the old miser's pocket as they paid their last respects.

After the funeral the three of them talked. The preacher said, "I have to confess something to you fellows. Our church roof sprang a leak, just over the place where the old man used to sit. I took most of the money and fixed the roof and made some other repairs. I didn't put anything in the envelope. The doctor was relieved. "I too have a confession. I probably could have saved the old miser's life if I had one machine that I didn't have then. Knowing that he wouldn't anyone else to die from the same problem, I spent money to buy the machine. My envelope was empty too."

The broke brother-in-law became angry. "I can't believe you guys would go back on your word and spend this man's money. He gave us $100,000 of our own, just to make sure that he could take some of his wealth with him. How could you cheat a dying man?"

The two asked the brother in law did he really put the whole $100,000 in the casket. To that the brother in law answered, "I sure did. My envelope was not empty. I wrote him my personal check for $100,000, which he can cash as soon as gets where he's going!" The old miser never took a dime with him!

What's valuable in one country may not be valuable in another. When a person leaves one country and enters another his currency must be exchanged for the currency used in his destination country. The value of currency varies from nation to nation. A man may leave France with 7 francs but they are only worth 1 U.S. Dollar. He may leave Italy with 2,191 Lire but when he gets to America he'll only have $1. He may leave Korea with 1,280 "Won" but he'll only have $1 when he gets to the U.S. He could leave Tanzania with 886 Shillings but would only have $1 when he made it to the shores of the U.S. He could leave Vietnam with 14,953 "Dong" and still have just $1 when he made it to. America. That same man could leave America with $100 and be a millionaire in Vietnam because his $100 American dollars would exchange to $1.5 million "Dong"

What is the value of all the "things" we accumulate on earth in heaven? Do our worldly possessions have any value in heaven? I suspect that what we call value on earth will have very little value in heaven. There is an obvious difference, since the streets are paved with gold in heaven, meaning gold has very little exchange value in gloryland. Yet, on earth, gold is the standard upon which currency is based.

As Christians, we plan to make heaven our home. Our goal is to find out what is considered valuable in the kingdom of God, then store up treasures that will have value in the sight of God. These are treasures that will not decay or devaluate. Unlike gold or silver and paper dollars, we can take them with us!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus explaining what is considered valuable in the kingdom of God.

Matthew 6 is a continuation of Jesus' sermon on the mount. The sermon on the mount details attitudes and actions that believers should undertake to gain favor in the kingdom of God. It is literally a guide to how to amass treasures in heaven.

In verse 1 Jesus warns believers not to do good works simply to be seen. Those who work in the kingdom may be seen by others but they should not do good works for the purpose of being seen. The work itself is the reward. The reward is minimized whenever it is done for the publicity and not for cause. In Matthew 5:16 believers are told to let their light shine before men. The meaning is that whenever believers are seen they should be seen doing good works. However, believers don't do good works to be seen.

Verses 2-4 addresses how to amass treasures in heaven by giving. The person who makes a big show out of their giving does not receive a reward from God, no matter how much is given. We are warned not to "sound a trumpet" when we give. If it gets out that we have given, that does not diminish the believer's reward because it was not given for that purpose. Those who give generously and secretly, build up treasures for themselves in heaven.

Verses 5-13 show prayers that build up treasures. Long public prayers are frowned upon in heaven. Jesus attacks the motivation of such prayers, noting that they often draw attention to the person praying rather than focusing on the request. Verse 5 says people who pray such prayers "have their reward." He then provides a model prayer in 9-13 as an outline of the model prayer.

Verses 16-18 addresses the fact that fasting for public praise is also frowned upon in the kingdom of God. Those who fast do so to reach a spiritual consensus. The impact of the fast is diminished if attention is focused on the fasters themselves. The person who fasts builds up treasures, if his fast is done in secret. Men may learn of his fast, but publicity is not the motive.

Verses 19-21 summarize what Jesus teaches about treasures. The idea is selfless service to God through investing time, energy and talent into the very act of helping others. We build treasures on earth through our work to help others, our private giving to support kingdom giving, our secret devotions, our private prayers and meditations, our short but meaningful public prayers, serious personal fasting and moral living. In these ways, Jesus says we build up treasures in heaven. They are they are the currency which makes a believer a millionaire in the sight of God.

How to be a Millionaire in the Kingdom of God

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that we may not be listed among the 3.5 million first generation millionaires in America, but if the person who lives next door to you is true believer, there's a millionaire next door.

How can a person become a millionaire in the kingdom of God:

HELPING OTHERS: Those who help others build up treasures in heaven. Believers are becoming millionaires in the kingdom because of their willingness to help others without the necessity of pay or recognition. Every good deed adds to the treasure. Matthew 9:41 reminds us that even the man that gives a cup of water to stranger in the name of Jesus, gets a reward. Those who help the homeless, help the infirmed, visit the sick, feed the hungry, heal the hurts of families, and respond to personal needs and crises, build up treasures in heaven.

LIBERAL GIVERS: Those who support kingdom building by liberally giving their time, talents and money build up treasures in heaven. Every minute that a believer gives is rewarded. Those who give time, talents and money at a sacrifice get "over time" pay in kingdom dollars. That's why the church at Thyatira was told in Rev. 2:19, "I know thy works, and charity, and service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works; and the last to be more than the first." That's overtime pay! How do believers become millionaires in the kingdom? They give their time even at a personal sacrifice. They give their talents, even at a sacrifice. They give their money, even when it hurts!

GIVES THANKS: A salient feature of every spiritual millionaire is that he or she is eternally grateful to God and seeks ways to show his thanks. True believers praise God by living morally pure lives, keeping their promises to him and joining with others in public worship of him. That's what David meant in Psalm 116:12-14 when he said, "What shall I render unto the LORD for all his benefits toward me? I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the LORD. I will pay my vows unto the LORD now in the presence of all his people." The millionaire next door is rich because he is a child of the king.

Currency Exchange

Every heavenly traveler needs to remember that we are on our way to the Canaan land. The heavenly traveler already has a passport that identifies him as a child of the king on his way. But like any traveler to a foreign country the heaven bound travelers need to exchange our earthly riches for heavenly riches.

What's valuable down here won't be valuable up there unless it can translate into heavenly dollars.

Our Porsche and other imported vehicles are extremely valuable, but when we get to glory they won't be worth a heavenly dime.

Our Rolex watches are worth thousands down here, but when we get to heaven no watch will have any value because time will be no more.

Our tailor made suits and designer clothing, may fill our closets down here, but when we get to heaven the angels won't be wearing Tommy Hilfiger and Liz Claiborne and FUBU. I'm going to put on my robe and tell the story!

Our designer shoes won't have any value up there, because we're going to put on golden slippers and walk all over God's heaven!

Our diamond rings and pearl necklaces will have no value when get to heaven, for the very foundations of the city will be made precious stones and the 12 gates of the city will be made of giant pearls!

Our 401K and our IRA, Stock Portfolios and investment plans are good down here, but it won't mean anything in glory, because there my father is rich and houses and land and he wholes wealth of the world in his hand!

If you need heavenly dollars you have to cash in your service!

Cash in your giving! Cash in you worship and praise!

I don't know about you but I'm working on my million in the kingdom! Everyday I'm sending up timbers, one by one!

I'm telling every body about Jesus, who died out on Calvary! Jesus! Who arose after three days!

I'm telling the world that I'm a millionaire in the kingdom of God!

The Rhythm and The Blues

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 12, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven: A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted; A time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up; A time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance; A time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones together; a time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing; A time to get, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away; A time to rend, and a time to sew; a time to keep silence, and a time to speak; A time to love, and a time to hate; a time of war, and a time of peace." Ecclesiastes 1:1-8

Introduction

Do you follow a routine in your life? Is there a set pattern by which you govern your affairs and order your life on a daily basis? Some of us are more regimented than others. We awaken at about the same time, groom ourselves in the same way, and follow a regular routine that may consist of leaving home, going to work and doing basically performing the same duties every day. We have a day routine. We have a night routine. We have a weekend routine. We have a Sunday routine. Whether we are students or retirees, most of us fall into a regimen that repeats itself with regularity. The ebb and flow of our daily lives establishes a cadence by which we govern and pace ourselves. We march to our own set of cadences that set the tone for our lives.

On occasion, life's events can interrupt our fragile rhythm and set a new tempo. A phone call in the middle of the night signals trouble. A police car or fire truck parked in front of our home with lights flashing and sirens blaring does the same. Sickness, death, and trouble all serve to change the tempo with which we live our lives each day. Just as trouble changes the tempo, so can good fortune. A marriage, a promotion, a birthday, a party, a reunion all have the effect of adding cymbal crashes of excitement into the normal cadence of our day, changing the tempo and the rhythm of our daily experiences.

When a negative life event or a series of life events occur at the right time the pace of our lives can be altered dramatically. When this happens our tempo doesn't just change. It doesn't just speed up. It almost comes to a complete halt! When our rhythm comes to a complete stop.that's when we have the blues. Something happens in our lives that upsets us so bad that our entire life rhythm simply stops. Loss of love and affection can create a feeling of depression and blues Those who have been hurt in love lose all sense of timing and they are unaware of the cymbal crashes they encounter. They cannot seem to respond to the cadence. They sulk. They sink into complete depression. The same is true for those who have experienced death, sudden unemployment, financial crises, family disruptions such as divorce and separations. It is extremely difficult to re-establish a cadence, a rhythm and routine that is unique and peculiar. When we have the blues we have no rhythm at all.

A believer's life has a special rhythm. There is special cadence to which a believer marches that sets the tempo of each day. It is punctuated with cymbal crashes, drum rolls and taps on the high hat. Yet, believers approach each day with the full understanding that during the course of that day, they may have to slow their tempo, change their cadence or alter their rhythm to find events that come their way. God is the drum major who calls the cadence, we march to his beat. When life appears to have brought a believer to a halt, he views it as "parade rest" not a complete disruption. He waits patiently for the signal from heaven to resume the ebb and flow of life.

As believers we know that there are certainties in life. Because we know the flow of life we expect a little rain after days of sunshine. We expect to stumble and fall and we expect to get up again. We expect death, sickness and disappointment, as well as life, health and happiness. Knowing how God operates, helps us to enjoy the rhythm without experiencing the blues.

Exposition

This text focuses on Solomon as he explains the ebb and flow of life.

Ecclesiastes is an account of Solomon's search for happiness and peace. In these 12 chapters he records the feeble attempts of his youth to live by his own rhythm and cadence. He entertained a variety of experiences that he thought would move him from one pace or another. Music, parties, accumulation of wealth, knowledge and fame, were a part of his great plan for himself.

In his senior years, upon reflection, he acknowledged that life has its own rhythm; its own special the tempo and syncopation of which is ordered by God.

The rhythm of the physical man is depicted in the first four pairs of rhythms in verses 1-3. There is a

-a time to be born, and a time to die;
-a time to plant, and a time to pluck up what is planted;
-a time to kill, and a time to heal;
-a time to break down, and a time to build up; {Eccl 3:1-3 RSV}

The steady rhythm cannot be better seen than by ebb and flow of birth and death, planting and harvesting, war and peace, building up and tearing down. The exact time for each is dictated by God himself. Solomon learned later in his life that the rhythms of planting and harvesting, death and birth, were all part of life controlled by God himself.

If is a time to laugh, there will also be a time to weep. It is in the rhythm of life. Likewise there is a time to mourn and a time to dance in celebration. Each of these are according to rhythm.

Even in the areas of spirit and soul which control our thinking, feeling and choosing as we carry out the social encounters and interrelationships of life there is a rhythm:

-a time to weep, and a time to laugh;
-a time to mourn, and a time to dance.

The rhythm of life is not all steady beats. There is weeping as well as laughter. There is mourning as well as dance. We know its true for mortals because Christ himself was described in Isaiah 53:3 as a "man of sorrows" yet we see him full of gaiety and fun as he participates in a wedding in Cana of Galilee.

Life's rhythm shows us that life not confined to receiving. There is a time of giving. In essence a time to gather stones and a time to cast stones away. There is a time to seek and a time to lose. There is a time to hold on and a time to let go. There is "a time to keep and a time to cast away," (Eccl 3:6b) There is "a time to keep silence, and a time to speak," {Eccl 3:7b RSV).

There is even a time for us to hate evil with a passion and time to love good with an equal passion.. There is "a time for war, and a time for peace," {Eccl 3:8b RSV}.

Solomon's lesson was clear: There is a certain rhythm in life that includes good times and bad times, sunshine and rain; day and night, strength and weakness, sickness and health. The exact cadence of the rhythms we play in life is called by the heavenly father.

Solomon learned in his senior years that it was vanity to expect the rhythm not to be uninterrupted or to expect it to continue with pauses and rests.

The believer who trusts God knows the ebb and flow of life. He is not overwhelmed by its risings and fallings because God is calling the cadence.

Our spiritual life requires rhythm

The maintenance of a productive spiritual life requires a rhythm. Every believer should have a regular routine or rhythm that promotes spiritual growth.

Regular bible reading at a set time each day establishes a rhythm, a pattern and a routine that regularly feeds the soul. Psalm 119:105 says, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." As such a believer who has no pattern of bible reading runs the risk of walking in the dark.

Prayer at a set time each day and more if need be establishes rhythm. There are many believers who have a prayer time. For some it is early in the morning. For others it is late in the evening. Yet, there is a set time and schedule. The word teaches us to prayer regularly and with fervor. James 5:16 says, "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. "

Bible study should be a part of a believers set pattern and rhythm. The easiest bible study is Sunday School. In the company of other believers the scriptures are discussed, questions are answers, and God's word is made applicable to real life situations. Bible study should be a part of the regular rhythm of every believer. 2 Timothy 2:15, reminds us to "study to shew thyself approved." Those who fail to study, break their spiritual rhythm.

Worship is a necessary part of the believers rhythm or weekly pattern. Very few real Christians are uncomfortable when they are repeatedly absent from worship services. Hebrews 10:25 warns Christians not to "forsake" or "skip" public worship. Worship inspires Christian living. It motivates service. Those who frequently skip public worship break their spiritual rhythm.

Whenever a believer's spiritual rhythm is interrupted it is difficult to maintain the Christian because it requires a steady pattern of prayer, bible study, worship, service and praise.

We Do not control the rhythm, but how we respond to it

The Christian life has a special beat that is different from others. Believers march to a different cadence than others. Yet there is a rhythm to our lives. We should not expect a steady, uninterrupted beat of progress without a few setbacks, and success without a few failures.

Believers respond to life's rhythm with an attitude of expectancy and are not overwhelmed by the pauses, changes in tempo or cadence. The word of God teaches us that no matter what life's rhythms may be, those who are faithful will be rewarded. James 1:12 says, "God blesses the people who patiently endure testing. Afterward they will receive the crown of life that God has promised to those who love him." (New Living Translation). We may not be able to understand it all but we know that despite any difficulties or frustrations, our steady march will lead us to unimaginable blessings. That's what 1 Corinthians 2:9 meant by "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

If our day begins with a quick pace but slows to marking time, there is a reason.

If there is a delay or break that seems immeasurably long. There is a reason.

If there are problems and difficulties that beset us, there is a reason.

We can't control the events that occur every day. However, we can control how we respond to them. If they overwhelm us we get the blues. If we keep the word of God in mind, we are reminded that no matter how difficult the day may seem, it will work to our advantage. That's why Romans 8:28 says, " .. all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

Just as we do not control the rain or the rising of the sun, we can't control the ebb and flow of any day's events. We can respond to the rhythm without the blues.

Why we don't have the blues

Finally brothers and sisters, we should consider that the rhythm of the believers life doesn't give him time to have the blues.

B.B. King had a hit song once with the title, "Why I sing the blues." Every believer should be able to do just the opposite, that is, write a song saying "Why I never sing the blues."

Since the blues is an expression of despair, believers never sing the blues. 2 Corinthians 4:8-9 says, "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair;ÿPersecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed;"

Since the blues is an expression of hopelessness, believers never sing the blues. When believers encounter hopeless situations they always have hope. Romans 12:12 says, "Rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer;" We have the rhythm but we don't have the blues because the song writer has declared, "my hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name."

Since those who have the blues can't see their way, believers never have the blues because we know that the Lord will always make a way. When we can't find a way after looking to our right and to our left than we remember the words of David, "I will lift up mine eyes until the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth."

Since those who have the blues have no one to love them, believers never have the blues because there is never a time when God doesn't love us. John 3:16 says, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosever believeth upon him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Since those who have the blues have no where to hide, believers never have the blues because Psalm 27:5 says, "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me."

Since those who have the blues have feel like they have been hit by a rock, believers never have blues because we have been saved by the rock. That's why the song writer wrote, "be very sure, be very sure, your anchor holds and grips the solid rock!"

We have don't have time to sing the blues about what we don't have because we are so busy praising God for what we do have!

We don't sing the blues because we don't have a new car, we just praise the Lord for having bus fare!

We don't sing the blues for not having t-bone steaks, we just praise the Lord for pork chops and pig tails!

We don't sing the blues because we don't own a home, we just praise the Lord for being able to make the rent!

We don't sing the blues because of what we lost, we just praise the Lord for what we are able to hang on to!

David said there is a time for everything and for everything there is a season.

That means there is a time to praise the Lord.

There is a time to lift up holy hands! There is a time to say amen!

There is a time to give thanks!

Thank you, for the rising and setting of the sun!

Thank you, for the food on my table!

Thank you, for Jesus who died out on Calvary!

Thank you, for Sunday morning!

We don't need to see blues, for God gave me a song, that the angels cannot sing, I've been washed the blood of the crucified one.I've been redeemed!

A Prepared Table

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 20, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Psalm 23:5

Introduction

Have you ever waited at a restaurant, while your table was prepared? On certain days in restaurants there is busy crowd and available tables are few. As soon as one party finishes a meal the bus boy or waiter quickly prepares a table for the next guest. They rake off crumbs, wipe tables free of debris and stains, clean seats and rearrange the notions on the table. When all is ready, then you are ushered to your seat. While you wait, portions of the meal are served, such as bread and butter, water and other niceties. Very few patrons would dine at a restaurant that would attempt to serve them at an unprepared table. On some rare occasions, some patrons who were impatient about waiting have been known to help waiters prepare tables to speed up the process, but even then the table is prepared for diners before the meal is served.

Professional waiters, now called servers, earn a living by insuring that patrons at restaurants are pampered. They work hard at the trade because most parts of the restaurant industry only pays a basic wage of $2.25 an hour to waiters. They earn their money through the generosity of their patrons. Tips make up the bulk of their pay, which for some gets as high as $200 a day. To earn that tip, waiters learn to pamper guests. Among the ways that guests are pampered is the waiters ability to secure them a well prepared table, clean, convenient and quiet. Food seems to taste better when served on a well prepared table.

Some folks will argue that a well prepared table can do miracles. Consider Tater Pie Eli who would do anything for a slice of Sweet Potato pie. One day all the family had gathered around Eli's bed for it appeared he was about the draw his last breath. Funeral arrangements had been made and the family members had already begun cooking as they waited his last moment.

Then suddenly there was a miracle. Eli opened his eyes and sniffed the air. He said, "I dreamed that I died and went to heaven and there was a table prepared up there. It had collard greens, corn bread, fried chicken, corn on the cob and sweet potato pie." Uncle Sweet Pea answered, "You were dreaming Eli, but you were right. Miss Mable done set the table and it's got all that you mention on it..including her famous sweet potato pie."

Eli, decided to take advantage of all of their concern and said, "Tell Miss Mable that Eli has come back from the dead and would love to have some that sweet potato pie." When Uncle Sweet Pea returned he was empty handed. "Where's the pie?" asked Eli.

Apologizing, Uncle Sweet Pea said, "Miss Mable says there is food on the table, but its to be served AFTER the funeral. If Eli don't die, won't be no sweet potato pie!"

If we all enjoy the prospect of dining at a well prepared table, we should enjoy the table that God has prepared for those who believe and trust in him. It's more than a table of pork chops collared greens, black eyed peas and okra. It's a table with more than food stuffs. The table that God has prepared for those who believe in him is a table of blessings, prepared in heaven's kitchen daily and served by angelic waiters who only expect a 10 percent tip.

As Christians, we thank God for his blessings every day. We graciously sit down to sup with him and share the blessings we have received. He prepares a table for us and invites to share our blessings with anyone who is willing listen and hear. We expect great things when we dine at a table prepared by the Lord because 1 Corinthians 2:9 says, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains how God prepares blessings for believers despite adverse circumstances.

The situation that prompted Psalm 23 is believed to be based on an incident recorded in 2 Samuel 17:28-29. David had been drawn into the wilderness after the rebellion of his son Absolom. Absalom's advisors had devised two plans to destroy David. One involved slipping to David's camp and killing David alone. The other involved amassing a giant army that would overwhelm the king and his men and destroy them on the battle field. The latter plan was approved and Absalom's armies tracked and found David famished forces.

They found David at last. His soldiers were with him. They were tired, hungry and exhausted to the point of despair. Those that sought to destroy him surrounded him on all sides, and no doubt were aware of his weakened position. As they watched and waited for his destruction, God caused a miraculous thing to happen. Three men, who were not even Israelites, Shobi, Machir, and Barzillai, appeared and brought beds, basins [so they could wash and refresh themselves], and earthen vessels, wheat, barley, meal, parched grain, beans and lentils, honey and curds and sheep and cheese from the herd, for David and the people with him to eat; for they said, "The people are hungry and thirsty in the wilderness."

As his enemies watched the entire army enjoyed fine food, slept on soft beds, washed themselves from freshly filled water basins, ate foodstuffs of grain, meal, barley, beans and other fine foods. To the amazement of his enemies God literally prepared a table before him in the presence of his enemies.

Thus when David writes this portion of Psalm 23, he draws on his own life experiences to know that God will truly provide for the faithful, despite the difficulties they experience.

Comparing believers to sheep, David's entire psalm, known as the shepherd's song, painted a picture of God caring for his sheep as a good shepherd. Among the items in the shepherd's care would be the provision for the nourishment and safety of sheep, which God does for believers everyday.

God Prepares a Table For Me

God is in the blessing business. Each day of our lives he prepares great opportunities for those who believe and trust in him. He is already working on tomorrow, while we live today.

It is said that a shepherd, before allowing his sheep to graze in a field, will first go into the field and prepare it for the sheep by pulling up poison weeds, and chasing off any harmful animal. When the field is rid of the dangers the sheep are allowed to graze.

God works that way with us. Often we are prevented from going in some directions because there is something ahead that will harm us. The condition is not conducive to our growth. We have witnessed this truth as we have seen jobs in certain areas denied to us in one company, but given in another. There may have been other obstacles unseen to us that our shepherd had to clear before allowing us to graze.

Thus, we should be careful about insisting that we graze in green pastures before talking to God about it. Proverbs 3:6, "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he will direct thy paths."

As we grow in grace we learn to wait until God prepares our table.

Wait until God prepares the table for the new houses we seek.

Wait until Our shepherd will never lead us into harm's way.

The shepherd may need to go before us and prepare the pasture before we graze.

My Enemies See What's Prepared For Me

Not only does god prepare a table for me, but often he allows my enemies to see what he's doing for me.

The Hebrew word for enemies is tsarar {tsaw-rar'} which literally means to make narrow or to cause distress, vex and harass. Thus, a believer's enemies are those forces that cause them distress, harass them and make life difficult for them.

There are three natural enemies of every believer:

1: The World: The world around us works against the spirit person trying to live within us. The world is the plethora of temptations that constantly surround us: night clubs, opportunities to live fast, wild and loose; as well as dangerous living. It is an enemy to any person trying to live a spirit filled, holy life. 1 John 2:15 says, "Love not the world, neither the things [that are] in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Thus, the world is seen as the enemy of God's people.

2. The Flesh: The Flesh is constantly at war with the spiritual person. It desires and craves. It reaches for the forbidden with a yearning. It is sexual passion, greed, jealousy, hatred. The flesh represents our carnal nature. It represents our prurient instincts. Galatians 5:24 says, "And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." The flesh is an enemy to those who are Christ's.

3. The Devil: Satan is constantly looking for ways to destroy children of God. 1 Peter 5:8 says, "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour:"

In the presence of these three enemies, God prepares a table for believers. He blesses them with comfort, peace and joy despite the fact that they have not participated in the world, yielded to the flesh, or been discouraged by people influenced by Satan's bad spirit.

My enemies see how good God is to me.

They see his hand working out victories for me!

They see him lifting me up when I have fallen down!

They see him encouraging me when I have shrunk to an all time low!

Yes, In the presence of my enemies, he prepares a table for me!

He Prepares Me for the Table

When God prepares a table for us, the job is still incomplete. It is not complete until he prepares US for the table.

No matter how well prepared a table may be, there is usually something we must do first, to prepare ourselves for the table. We must wash up!

You've worked on cars all day, your hands are filled with grease and grime. You come home to a well prepared table, but you must wash up first.

You've worked in the office, counting money, typing, filing papers and handling various items. At lunch you are escorted to a well prepared table, but you are not ready for the table. You must wash up first.

Some of us sit down and eat without washing our hands. We look at our hands and we don't see or feel any dirt, so we sit down to eat without cleaning up. Those who can see the dirt usually wash. Others may not be able to see it, but they know it's there. They wash up anyway!

Spiritually, God anoints believers with the Holy Spirit. In the Old Testament anointing with oil is symbol of the Holy Spirit. When David says, "thou anoinest my head with oil" he draws us to observe how the Holy Spirit prepares us for the table that is set.

The Blood of Christ is the flow that washes us, and the Holy Spirit that directs us toward repentance and restoration.

There are many blessings that God has in store for each of us, but we are not prepared to receive them. The Holy Spirit prepares us! The anointing of God's power opens us! It illuminates us! It creates a proper spirit within us, so that we become worthy vessels for him.

Yes, God has prepared a table for us, a table even our enemies can see, but he also has to prepare us for the table.

God is able to make a bountiful table

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must note that God is able to prepare a bountiful table!

Whenever God prepares a table, it is an overflowing table.

One day Peter and others were out fishing but had not caught any fish. Jesus told them to let down their nets on the on the other side of the boat. God had already prepared the fish, but Peter's faith had to be prepared. When he let down the boat, he caught more than the nets could hold.

On another day Jesus spoke to 5,000 people. There was not food to feed such a large crowd, they only had two little fishes and five loaves of bread. But God had already set the table. There was enough food to feed the multitude with plenty of leftovers!

Maybe that's where those old fashioned mama's get the idea. When they cook, they cook for the neighborhood.

It's not one two or three or slices of bacon, but whole slabs of bacon!

It's not one or two pieces of chicken, but enough to feed the family for days!

It's not an ear or corn or two, but there's corn on the cob for days!

That's the way God prepares our table.. he's got more than we need!

God prepared a table of replenishment for Elijah sitting by the brook. It was just meat and bread, brought by ravens but it was more than enough!

God prepared a table of nourishment for a widow woman who was down to her last cup of meal and cruise of oil. It was more than enough!

God prepared a table of restoration for Peter while he was asleep on a roof top. He showed him a basket filled with every kind of food and said, "Rise Peter Slay and Eat." It was more than enough!

One evening Jesus assembled his disciples around a supper table in an upper room. He prepared a table of remembrance. He Hold them to eat this bread in remembrance of me! Drink this wine, in remembrance of the blood that would be shed for them!

In the Upper Room there was a prepared table, and Savior who was ready for the Table!

As Saints eat from the Lord's table, they are eating from a prepared table.

To prepare the table, Jesus had to live among men for 33 long years!

To prepare the table, he had to suffer the humiliation of his critics!

To prepare the table, he had to pick up and old rugged cross and carry it to Golgotha's hill.

To prepare the table he had to die out on Calvary!

Knowing God on a First Name Basis

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them? 14And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you. 15And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name for ever, and this is my memorial unto all generations. Exodus 3:13-15;And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them. Exodus 6:3

Introduction

When do you know a person well enough to refer to them on a first name basis? One of the first lessons that youth learn, especially in the south, is to address only those persons who are you peers on a first name basis. In the Southern section of the country it is often considered an insult for a person to refer to someone that is not a close peer without the appropriate title. A person from the South can be culturally shocked when he travels outside his region and sees persons addressing each other without the appropriate title. “Yes Sir” and “No Ma’am” are considered the only appropriate way to show respect in the south and in the military.

In our society, we generally refer to those we do not know by using a title and their last names. Mr. Jones, Captain Jones, or Doctor Jones are signs of respect. They may be seem small but there were times when newspapers and official documents in the South would not refer to African-Americans by any title that showed respect, including something as simple as “Mister.”

While we refer to those who are not our peers by their last names, we tend to refer to those who are closer to us by their first names, often without the titles. This is common among friends. Friends not only refer to each other by first names, but often by “Nicknames” they have been known by for years. Sometimes nicknames are humorous such as “Pooch”, ”Spike”, ”Snake”,”Snooky”, ”Chee=Chee” and a variety of others. When a person earns a nickname in a group, it usually means that person has formed a personal identity, good or bad, within the group or family unit.

People who want to establish a closer relationship with others are aware that titles create barriers, so many invite those they meet to "Just call me Albert" or "Just call me Mary." Often at conferences, name tags are distributed that include only the person's first name in large bold letters. This allows other participants to refer to him as if they knew him. It's an artificial way to break down barriers. Often telemarketers call prospective customers and ask for them by their first names to avoid the appearance of a salesperson. Even sales letters can be programmed by smart computer programmers to repeatedly refer to a person by their first name, as if the letter was personal instead of being a mass duplicated letter.

There are families in which the relationship between parent and child is informal. It is so informal that some children refer to their parents by their names without the usual titles of "mama","daddy", "big mamma", or the famous "Muh-dear." Whenever someone in the south hears a child referring to their parents by a name other than the traditional title, they frown and usually say, "You call your mother by her first name?" Inside those family circles where this is a practice the children mean no disrespect, it is just a family tradition.

We are all the children of God. He is our father. What do we call him? Mister? Your honor? Your Excellency? What is God's full name? When do we know him well enough to speak to or refer to him on a first name basis? What relationship must exist between God and man for us to comfortably refer to him on a first name basis?

As we read the bible we see believers have referred to God by many names. Those names seem to suggest how they viewed God at the moment. Yet, historically, believers have held the name of God in such high respect that many trembled when they called his name and feared death if they invoked his name in any way that would profane his deity. Yet, God encourages believers to call on him regularly and freely. The bible record gives us clues of what to call him.

As believers, we have great respect for the deity of God and the name of God. We do not use his name irreverently and neither do we abuse our relationship with him by calling his name foolishly. His name is a holy name and as such we approach him with the greatest respect, even though he has given those who believe in him permission to speak to him on a first name basis.

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as he hears God tell his name for the first time.
