Focus on Glory

*SCRIPTURE:"Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Philippians 3:13-14

Introduction

Have you ever started doing one thing, but found yourself doing something else before you finished the first task? In such instances we usually exhaust so much time and energy on the secondary task that we never get back to our original task.

Consider the young hound dog who was eager to go on his first hunting trip. He pleaded with the old dog for a chance to go on the next hunt to show off what he knew. He was young and his instincts were sharp and fresh. Being young he could pick up a scent in the air and trail it to the ground and get to his prey long before any of the old dogs. His first hunt was a bear hunt. The young dog picked up the trail and moved ahead of the others barking and running. The old dogs sniffed the ground and kept running. Soon, the young dog picked up the scent of a young deer that had cross the trail. He stopped, changed directions, and went barking after the deer. As he neared the deer, he caught scent of a rabbit that had crossed the deer trail. He stopped, changed directions and ran after the rabbit. The rabbit carried him through dense forest areas and thick brush, but the young dog never gave up, that is until he caught another scent in the air and and chased after it. In this fashion, the young dog continued all day until at the end of the day the old dog came upon him, having successfully cornered the bear, and told the young dog these words, "Son you're a good dog, I've known you since you were a pup, but if you're going to track bear and you don't want to fail, you must keep your nose to the ground and your feet on the trail."

Remaining focused is a difficult task in life. Many young people graduate from high school and college and begin life with great dreams of success and fortune. Many never accomplish their dreams. Often the reason for their failure has nothing to do with their ability or skills, intellect or attitude. Many fail to succeed because they are unable to remain focused on their original goals and waste time and energy on frivolous preoccupations that divert their attention and energies from their original intent.

As Christians, we have set a goal for ourselves in life. That goal is to receive a golden crown of achievement from the savior. We are often tempted along the way to meander to the left and right, we have decided to press on toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of Jesus Christ.

Exposition

The text focuses on Paul's Epistle to the Church at Philippi. While imprisoned in Rome he wrote this letter to the Christians in Philippi to tell them of the joy of serving the Lord and to encourage them to keep their minds focused on their purpose in life. These passages reflect three dominant themes that permeated Paul's ministry: Humility, intense focus, and a sure goal.

Paul remained humble, throughout his life. Obviously, God had endowed him with great talents and gifts, but he always received them with an attitude of humility. Although Paul was a learned scholar who spoke many languages fluently, and was well versed in the scholarship of his day, he told the Philippians, "I count not myself to have apprehended," that is to note that while he had learned much in life, he was keenly aware that he did not know everything. He counted heavily on the Holy Spirit to reveal many things to him and to call others to his remembrance. Knowing that God spoke and moved through him, Paul was always humble to know that he had not accomplished anything alone, but it was always God working through him.

Secondly, Paul's life was intensely focused on his goal. He chose not to focus on his past accomplishments, which included his education and training, conversion on the Damascus Road, three missionary journeys, and the conversions of countless numbers to the faith. It would have been very easy for him, especially considering his confinement and approaching death, to dwell on the past and constantly reflect on his achievements. He chose to focus on the future rather than on the past. Whatever was done in the past remains as history, he chose, even in a moment of crises to always look to the future.

Lastly, Paul knew what he wanted and where he was going. His goal was the prize of the high calling of God. It did not lay in the praise of men, or the accumulation of worldly things. He concluded that he would not be dissuaded in his journey. In Romans 8:35 he asked, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?" Then he answered in verse 37, "Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." His goal in life was set, it was clear and in focus, he had decided to use his life as witness to the power of God .

Focusing on Life's Challenges

With respect to life's challenges, what does it mean to focus? It means to concentrate all of our energies on one objective or goal. It is the intense pursuit of a single aspiration by directing our time, talents and resources toward achieving its end. When life's goal is clear and the direction of our energies is sure, we are said to be in focus. We are in focus when we know what we want in life and we direct all of our time and energy and talents to achieving that end, avoiding any efforts that side track us.

It is easy to focus on a goal in life. It is more difficult to stay in focus. Those who have tried to take pictures with a camera know that an image in the lens can be sharp and clear, but if the subject comes closer or moves away, adjustments have to be made to keep the image in focus. Likewise, in life it is easy to focus on a goal while standing still, but as the constant ebb and flow of life impacts our points of reference,, adjustments have to be made to stay in focus.

AVOIDING BLURS. If we lose sight of our objective, our energies and activities are spread out over a variety of patterns that are blurred and unclear. Moreover, even if we keep our objective in sight but fail to concentrate our energies, our lives still become a blur. These two truths are best represented by the considering the nature of the:

NEAR SIGHTED: The near sighted can't see their goal because they can only see things that are close to them; they live for today. Therefore their energies are not concentrated on achieving a goal because all they can see is today. They follow the general creed that they should eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow may never come. The result: a blur.

FAR SIGHTED: The far sighted person is just the opposite. He or she is able to see the goal, but can't see how to manage the daily flow of time, talents and resources to achieve the goal. They see their goal but can't discipline themselves to make it happen.

ASTIGMATISM: These are those who can't see the goal and neither can they direct the energies of their lives. They wander aimlessly in a blurred existence.

The young begin life with a focus on success in all of its varied qualitative and quantitative measures. The achievement of these objectives will require an intense concentration of time, talent and resources. The objective must always stay in sight and the focus clear.

Focusing of Glory

While succeeding in the secular world requires us to maintain a focused life, this text today, reminds us that the Christian's primary focus is to achieve the prize of the high calling of God which is in Jesus Christ.

Paul said simply that he was pressing on toward the mark! He chose to focus on Heaven and its promise of joy everlasting!

He chose to focus on Jesus and his promise of everlasting life!

He chose to focus on Glory!

Those who focus on glory never lose sight of what they really want to do with their lives and that is to serve and please God. When in focus their daily activities, the use of their talents and monies and everything they do will work to help them achieve their ultimate goal of entering into that blessed city one day.

Staying in focus may mean getting closer to some things and moving away from others. To stay focused on glory will mean avoiding ungodly activities of every kind. It may even mean backing away from some job opportunities because they will take you away from your main goal, which is to see Jesus.

But staying focused may also mean that from time to time you need to get closer to keep yourself in focus with God. There will be times when the swiftness of the world takes you so fast that you lose sight of glory. As life begins to blur that's when you bring it back into focus by walking closer to God.

Walking closer to God helps keep life in focus when the world becomes a blur. Walking close to God builds strength for troublesome times and answers troublesome questions. No wonder the songwriter says, "Just a closer walk with thee. Grant it Jesus if you please, daily walking close to thee. Let it be, dear Lord, let it be!"

Daniel's life journey took him thousands of miles from home, but he never stopped looking toward Jerusalem and praying three times a day because he was focused on glory!

The Three Hebrew Boys' lives took them in and out of the fiery furnace, but they remained focused on glory!

Paul was beaten, jailed and criticized, but he declared, "Nothing shall separate me from the love of God." He was focused on glory!

Jesus, the precious Lamb of God, endured the hardships of life, temptations of Satan and the rejection of man, but he never lost his focus on glory!

He was so focused that he died on Calvary for the sins of men and arose from the grave in victory!

Graduates, press on toward the victory, but stay in focus!

Achieve high heights in life, but stay in focus!

Dream the impossible dream, but stay in focus!

Beat the unbeatable foe, but stay in focus!

Focus on Glory and the power of an almighty God will move within you and lift you up ...to higher ground!

D.W.I.

(Daily Living While Under The Influence)
A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe

March 29, 1983

SCRIPTURE: "And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit;Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord;Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ;Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God." Ephesians 5:18-21

Introduction

Have you ever seen a drunk driver? Drunk drivers drive erratically and often cause pain and suffering to themselves and others. In fact, nearly 40,000 people a year lose their lives because of drunk drivers. Police officers pull them over by the thousands daily and issue citations charging them with D.W.I or driving while under the influence of Alcohol. Despite the high fines, many return and do it all over again.

It is estimated that nearly 15 million Americans live daily under the influence of alcohol. It destroys families, careers and lives. Because it is a depressant, many who drink, do so even when they don't want to, or don't even like the taste. They are hopelessly hooked.

While we know of millions who are influenced by liquid spirits, how many church members could really get a ticket for D.W.I.-that is "Daily living under the influence of the Cross?" How many of us are so influenced by the cross and the Christian life that it noticeably affects our daily living? Consider the true story of a St. Louis lawyer who lived daily under the influence of alcohol. It controlled him and almost ruined his great legal mind. One day a client, at the end of their business session, asked him a question: "Why aren't you a Christian?" The lawyer confessed that he knew a lot about the bible but he was a slave to alcohol. He daily lived under its influence. The client talked to him about Jesus, Calvary and salvation and together in their law office they prayed the prayer of faith. The lawyer said, "Lord, forgive me and help me to overcome the power of this terrible habit in my life." From that moment forward the lawyer felt a new power in his body. He never drank another drop, but influenced by another power, he applied his great knowledge of the bible in ways he never expected and today the C. I. Scofield Bible, which bears his name is one of the most respected reference Bibles in the world.

As Christians, we have seen both sides of life. We have been influenced by the world and we know the joy of living for God. Under the influence of the spirits of this world we will never achieve all that God has in store for us. However, if we are led daily by the spirit of God, the prospects for living a full and happy life are as sure as the rising of the sun.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes to the church in Ephesus giving instructions about the Christian lifestyle. Paul urged Christians to walk in love, avoid uncleanliness of body and mind and to keep themselves focused on God. Those who are in the faith are encouraged to make the "walk of love" (v2) avoiding certain pitfalls that have trapped others. Among the habits of the worldly that should be avoided are: 1) Fornication, which involves a wide range of sex sins including incest, male and female prostitution, 2)Uncleanliness, 3)Covetousness 4)Foolish daydreams about doing ungodly things, 5)Vulgar jokes 6)Whoremongering, and 7)Idol worship. All of these should not be a part of the lifestyle of the Saints.

Paul warned that many have had the wrath of God poured upon them because they have involved themselves in these kinds of activities (v6).Paul characterized these acts as the works of darkness (v11) and should not be a part of the lifestyle of those who claim an inheritance in the kingdom of God. The abominations he referred to characterized the lifestyles of those who were influenced by the spirit of Satan rather than the spirit of God.

What happens when we are influenced by the spirit of God? Paul urges Christians beginning at verse 14 to awaken themselves to the light of God's love and walk circumspectfully (v15), not wasting time but living according to the will of God (v17). Therefore, the life that is under the influence of the spirit of God is not characterized by drunkenness or excesses, but by exhibiting the qualities of those who are saved by the grace of God. Our conversation should be inspirational and refreshing, clean and wholesome, as are the psalms of David. Our hymns and spirituals should give praise and thanksgiving to God. They should be exemplary of our faith. Those who live under the influence of the Holy Spirit exhibit temperance, moderation and a generally clean life whether in the language they speak, songs they sing, or activities in which they choose to engage themselves.

Those who are empowered by the Holy Spirit may appear strange to others. In Acts 2 the Apostles were filled with the spirit of God and were able to speak in languages they had not studied and were excited. The people thought they were drunk at first, but then concluded that they were being led by the power of God. Under the influence of the spirit many of them went on to accomplish great works for God, resisting temptations, bravely tackling evil leaders, and building up the kingdom of God.

Living under the Influence

Today, every Christian should strive to live daily under the influence of the Holy Spirit. Satan is wagin a constant battle for control of our lives even when we are at peace with God. Just as he tempted Jesus in the wilderness with dreams of power, fame and personal accomplishment, he never gives up trying to control us as well.

He gains influence over us by using the people and the things around us. A co-worker that constantly tells dirty jokes, can influence even the best person to join the crowd and laugh along with a foul joke that has no redeeming value. An associate who always fantasizes about doing some "unseemly" thing can influence the weak in spirit to go along. Many good natured people have found themselves in worlds of trouble because they have been influenced by evil forces to do that which they would not normally do. There are many who are influenced by such abominations and turn to lifestyles that involve homosexuality, beastiality, and fornications of every kind. When they are under the influence of evil spirits, the end is almost always predictable.

Under the influence of Satan the world has become a confused place where right is substituted for wrong.

Consider the rising demand for homosexual rights. While every person is given the right by God himself to choose a life of obedience or defiance, homosexuals have organized themselves into massive blocks of voters in an effort influence lawmakers to endorse their deviance. They constantly promote the passing of laws that go beyond acknowledging their right to deviate, but actually place the general society in a posture of giving legal approval to lesbianism, sodomy and homosexuality.

Consider the rising divorce rate in our nation. Influenced by new age thinking, the sanctity and permanence of marriage has been diminished to a trial and error partnership that lasts as long as it feels good. As a result, the definition of family has changed and its strength weakened. The idea that Paul referred to in verse 31, that of a man leaving his mother and father and cleaving unto his wife and becoming one flesh, has been substituted for a disposable relationship that can be discarded like a used paper napkin.

As the world continues to be influenced by Satan it has become drunk under his influence. It wobbles and weaves and cannot walk a straight line.

Maybe that's why James Weldon Johnson in his epic song "Lift every voice and sing" cried out in prayer to God "Thou who has by thy might led us into the light, keep forever in the path we pray. Lest our feet, stray for the places our God where we met thee. Lest our hearts, drunk with the wine of the world we forget thee.."

There are many who are living under the influence of Satan. Under the influence of the devil we want to be:

—Loved but we can' stop hating; Paid, but we don't want to work.

—Lead, but we don't want to follow; First, but we don't want to be last;

—Go up, but we are always pulling down; Forward, but we are always looking backward

Influence of the Cross

While Satan influences, we are reminded that there is another, more powerful influence in the world, it is the influence represented by the cross.

There are many influences, but none of them equal the influence of the cross.

The Moon influences the rising tide, but the cross influences the failing soul.

The Sun influences the ripening of the crop, but the cross influences, the fertilization of the spirit.

The clouds influence the quantity of rain, but the cross influences the quality of our character

The seasons influence the condition of the weather, but the cross regulates our feelings and brings us all together.

If the World lived daily under the influence of the cross:

—Jailhouses would become prayer houses; Bitter words would become Sweet Whispers;

—Dissenters would become agreeable; Peace breakers would become fence menders;

There is power in the cross! At the cross, I first saw the light and the burden of my heart rolled away!

Those influenced by they cross are influenced by Jesus:

—Heaven's proclamation and the Epitome of Power!

—Proximate Cause of perpetual motion

—Protagonist of every story; provider of needs —Protector of rights; paternal father, Propeller of Good —Procurator of Justice, Prosecutor of Evil;

—Proponent of Eternal Life and Mercy's Probate Officer

I don't know about you, but I've decided to live for Jesus, who died for me!

Live for Jesus and don't turn back!

Live for Jesus and don't turn back!

No. 451-Mother's Day

As An Eagle Beareth Them On Her Wings

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 9, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings: So the LORD alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him." Deuteronomy 32:11-12

Introduction

Motherhood. It is remarkable, unfathomable, and mystifying! Have you ever considered what it must take to be a good mother? Beyond health and strength, it takes love, patience, courage and a plethora of other virtues that are all needed to make a successful mother. How can anyone say thanks to good mothers for all of their sacrificial service?

Consider the three daughters who pondered what they would buy their mother for Mother's Day. She had everything she wanted and her house was a maze of whatnots and gadgets received over the years. They looked at jewelry boxes and perfume; things they had given before. They considered mother's rings and appliances, but they had done that too. Between them, they had bought their mother the best that money could buy. Then one day they stumbled upon a picture of an eagle in its nest. There were three baby eagles in the nest with their mouths wide open. The mother eagle hovered over them with her wings spread as she fed them one by one. They saw the look of need on the faces of hungry eaglets. They saw the look of love in the face of the mother eagle that said what they wanted to say. They wrapped the picture and wrote their mother a note inside of the card. The card read: "As this Eagle stretches forth her wings to protect her young, you have helped us, fed us and protected us. When we were in need of food, you loved us. When we needed protection from the frailties of life, you fought off colds, diseases, and enemies. When it was time for us to leave the nest, you loved us enough to push us out and taught us to soar in the sky!" The mother saw the picture and sat with tears in her eye. One daughter asked, "What's wrong mother, did we do something wrong, why do you cry?" The mother answered, "I just praise God that he helped me to teach you to fly!"

Good mothers often spend a great portion of their lives protecting and nurturing their young. Their greatest joy comes when they watch their little ones stretch their own wings as they claim their future.

As Christians, we know that the Bible compares God's love to his love for his people. Like a mother eagle hovers over her young, feeds and protects them, God does the same for his own. Even when it's time to move on, God stirs the nest but stays close by to catch us if we fall.

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as he gives his final sermon and instruction to Israel before they depart to enter the Promised Land. He paints a picture of the nation's long struggle under the watchful care of God and compares their present situation to that of a Mother Eagle stirring her nest.

For Israel, the nest had been the sheltered care of "Goshen" a special land next to Egypt that God seemed to personally nurture and protect. When plagues came upon Egypt Goshen was protected. When Egypt's waters turned red with blood, waters in Goshen were clear. When food supplies dwindled, and locust devoured Egypt, Goshen was a haven of safety. Even though they suffered the humiliation of slavery, they found a sense of comfort each night as they returned to Goshen. What began as 70 people who came to Egypt to wait out a famine had grown to over 500,000 and the nest of Goshen was becoming crowded.

Moses said God stirred the comfortable nest of Goshen and was leading them toward the Promised Land. Like the ever protective mother Eagle, he would spread forth his wings to bear them up if they fell along the way.

It would not be the only time that God would draw similarities between the realities of life and the eagle. The days of man are compared to the Eagle: "They are passed away as the swift ships: as the eagle that hasteth to the prey." (Job 9:26) Riches, no matter how hard to come by are said to fly with wings of eagles. " ..for riches certainly make themselves wings; they fly away as an eagle toward heaven." (Proverbs 23:5). The righteous are reminded that if they are patient they shall take the wings of eagles. Isaiah 40:31 says, "But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary, and they shall walk, and not faint." Using the reference to the eagle as a symbol of God's love is therefore not unusual.

In this text, God's love for Israel is compared to that of a mother eagle for her eaglets. The mother eagle stirs them, protects them, and then as they stretch their wings for the first time and take their journey, flies beneath them to catch them if they fall. It was God's assurance to Israel that though they were going to a different land and taking on new challenges he would still be there to protect them whenever they needed him.

Nature of the Nest

Eagles are peculiar about their nests. They are usually built with sticks high on the mountains. Those who study eagles report that they are not simply satisfied with sticks, but while they are in use mother eagles attempt to decorate their nests with fresh green leaves. Every year the nest increases in size as the mother eagle continues to decorate and beautify.

The instinct to make a house a home must be shared by all good mothers. It is something about a mother's hand that can take a shotgun house with ugly wooden floors and unpainted walls and turn it into a home. It's something about a mother's hand that can take a rundown apartment and turn it into a place of warmth and love. The instinct to make her house livable, presentable and clean seems to be a great characteristic of mothers. It is rare to find a good mother who can tolerate a dirty, unkept house. Whether the mother is a housewife or a professional working mom, her natural instinct is to decorate, clean, and beautify the nest, by whatever means necessary.

Fluttereth Over Her Young

Mother eagles are protective. They sit in their nests until their eaglets are 11 or 12 weeks old. They are fed with food that is brought by the father eagle, but she never leaves because she knows they cannot fly. During this time, she cuddles them beneath her wing, keeps them warm and protects them from elements by absorbing rain, snow, sleet, and heat into her own body.

There are many mothers today who have given of their strength, youth, and health to provide for their young. Often the sacrifices made were without thought of pain, injury or death, only the safety of a child. Consider the little boy who was going to kindergarten for the first day. He did not want his mother to bring him because she was disfigured, with burns on her face and hands. Hurt, the mother sent the boy to school by a neighbor. But along the way the neighbor had a talk with the little boy. "You really hurt your mother." She said, "You are right, she is disfigured, but do you know how she got that way?" The boy shook his head saying, "no." The woman explained that when the boy was only six weeks old there was a fire in their house and he was trapped in a room that was blazing. Firefighters were fighting the blaze, but they couldn't find the boy. The mother braved the flames, found her son on a floor and threw herself on top of him to protect him from the flames. They both survived, but she suffered burns on her face and hands. After hearing the account, the little boy said, "stop the car!" He got out and ran down the street to his mother and said, "Mama, I'm sorry. You can take me to school any old time!"

Countless mothers have endured personal sacrifices while fluttering over their young. Some have given up careers, passed up fortunes, injured themselves in a variety of ways, all for the sake of their children.

Stirreth Her Nest

Probably the most difficult part of mothering is stirring the nest. When an eagle stirs its nest, it pushes the inexperienced eaglets out of the nest and teaches them to fly. First, they learn to flap their wings a bit. Then they fly in circles that get wider in distance, while the mother Eagle flies beneath them to catch them if they fall. When the eaglets can fly and feed themselves, the mother eagle turns away as her siblings fly off into the sunset. When they can fly, her job is done!

After many years of protecting and caring for the young, many mothers find it hard to let go of their little ones. Some find it hard to stir the nest and teach them to fly. Even after some have established nests of their own, sometimes even good mothers can't resist the temptation to continue to dabble in the affairs of their children. However, the good mother is always concerned and will be there in time of trouble. She resists the temptation to interfere as their children attempt to soar, and glide through life as they have been taught.

Every good mother hopes to inspire optimism and faith in her children. Every mother's desire is to see their children fly through life with the grace of eagles and the assurance that if they fail, God will be there to catch them.

Mothers, the love you share with your children is the same kind of love that God has shown to the world. He loved us so much that he gave his only begotten son who came, died and rose again that we might have the assurance that come what may, "Lo I am with you alway, even until the end of the earth"

It is an assurance to know that God is with you always.

In the midst of blessings or despair, he is always by your side!

In the midst of riches untold or poverty and despair, he is always by your side!

No wonder the songwriter declares: "Be not dismayed what er' betide, God will take care of you. Beneath his wings of love abide, God will take care of you. God will take care of you, through every day, over all the way; he will take care of you!

In moments of frustration, he will take care of you!

In moments of sadness, he will take care of you!

God will take care of you!

Grandma's Faith

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 8, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also. Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands." 2 Timothy 1:5-6

Introduction

If there is one quality of life that you could pass on to your children, what would it be? If given an opportunity to select a trait of a parent or grandparent and claim it as your own, what would you select? Every person that passes through life exhibits an array of character traits for the world to see. Some are enviable; others are not. Parents often try to teach admirable personality traits to their children. The lessons seem endless: be honest, be positive, show gratitude, don't boast, stay clean, etc. Our children and grandchildren see our lives and many of them will try to duplicate what they perceive to be our finer qualities in their own lives.

Consider the grandchild who had always been impressed with the way grandma made pound cakes. Now a newly married microwave bride, the grandchild decided to make a pound cake, just like grandma made. She went up and down the aisle at the grocery store getting ingredients that she remembered sitting on the counter at grandma's house. When she came to the spices, she stood there for a long time reading every box and bottle, searching for something. An elderly woman stood nearby and watched the young woman who seemed frustrated at her inability to find for which she searched. Finally, the elderly observer approached the young woman and asked if she could help. The frustrated grandchild turned quickly and said, "I'm trying to find something grandma use to put in her cakes, but I can't find it!" Puzzled, the woman asked what it was, only to hear the young lady respond: "She called it scratch!" The old woman responded: That's love and patience baby, you won't find it on a shelf, it came from her heart.

The enviable qualities about every person are often difficult to emulate and recreate. The life of a good mother, grandmother and Christian woman has all the makings of a good pound cake. The children and grandchildren who are left behind who want to reproduce that life must find the one ingredient that made it all work for her.

As Christians, we know that there is one ingredient that, when mixed with all of the challenges of life, produces peace and happiness. That ingredient is called faith. Like "scratch," it does not come in a package and can't be found on a shelf because it comes from within. It is based on an unfaltering trust in God. Christian mothers and grandmothers seem to have it and depend upon it dearly. Those who follow them should aspire to get it because life could be much easier if they just had a touch of "Grandma's faith."

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's words of advice to young Timothy, who was about to begin a ministry of service. Paul, writing his last epistle while under Roman arrest, was about to be executed for crimes he did not commit by order of Nero, the emperor. His advice to young Timothy was designed to leave the lad some inspiration and encouragement to continue in the work of the Lord, even after his death.

In this text, Paul told Timothy three important truths: 1)That he had unquestioned faith in God; 2) That the type of faith he possessed was the same as that of his mother and grandmother, and; 3)He should stir up the gifts and use this great faith for the benefit of the kingdom.

Timothy was a young man of great faith. Since Paul's first missionary journey to teach and preach about Jesus, he had grown in the faith. He even journeyed with him as he traveled and watched as the man of God withstood hardships and persecution to deliver the word of God. Being young, Timothy had to draw from those around him who were examples of faith in action. Apparently, he learned well, for Paul said he exemplified "unfeigned faith" meaning it was free of dissimulation and pure. It was a unique and unusual faith for a young man to possess.

Paul noted that the faith that Timothy displayed was familiar. He first saw it in Timothy's grandmother Lois and in his mother, Eunice. Lois was a grandmother who stepped out on God's word, lived in obedience to his command and lived a Christian life. Her great faith implied that she trusted in God completely. What grandmother learned, she passed it on to her daughter Eunice who emulated her mother's faith in every way possible. The great trust that each of them had was passed on to Timothy, who was now being challenged to emulate the faith of his mother and grandmother in his own life. Paul encouraged Timothy to "stir up" grandma's faith which was now a part of his own being and use it to do great works for the Lord. He was challenged to do more than simply refer to his grandma's faith or to his mother's faith. He was challenged to use that which they had taught him for the great work that God had in store for him as well.

In retrospect, Paul recognized the great spiritual qualities of this grandchild, reminded him that these virtues were taught by his grandmother and mother, and then he was told to use them. In verse seven he charges the lad, "For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power and of love and of a sound mind." In faith, Timothy was challenged to act courageously, keep a spirit of love always applying sound thinking and doctrine to every situation.

This was not a new lesson that Paul gave Timothy because the young man had heard it before because it was a part of "Grandma's faith."

Know What You Have

Those who knew our parents and grandparents can recognize their traits in us. There is an old saying that an "acorn doesn't fall far from the tree." This is a great truth, especially as it relates to what we learn from the example of our parents. Paul told Timothy that he recognized his faith, to let him know that he too had great faith. Timothy knew his mother had it, and so did his grandmother, but it was important that he knew what he had.

The children of Christian families need to be able to recognize what they have. The clean lives they live, the goals to which they aspire, the manner in which they handle tragedy, all exemplify a lifestyle of devotion and obedience to God. It is good to know that mother has the love of God in her heart and that grandmother trusted God more than anything else in the world. It is good to know they had it, but it is even better to know that you have it too. Often we live it, speak it and act on it without recognizing it, until somebody who knew grandmother tells us that we too share her strength of character as well.

Know Where You Got It From

If it is important to know what you have, and it is equally important to know where you got it from.

Unlike salvation and eternal life that are gifts of God through Jesus Christ, faith is not given from God. (Romans 6:23) The very nature of faith is ambiguous. By definition, faith is, "The substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen." (Hebrews 11:1). Where does it come from? Romans 10:17 says "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Where does a child first hear about trusting God? Not at church, but at home! Where does a child see faith and trust in God in action? He or she sees it in the example of his mother and father. Since faith is acquired by the precept and example of those around us the first, and most influential, teachers that we have, Concerning faith in God, are our parents. Sometimes children may be irritated by the faith that our parents keep talking about. Sometimes their repetitious sermons may seem monotonous: "Trust in the Lord, child, and he will provide;" "The Lord will make a way somehow;" "I know the Lord will answer prayer." They all seem like empty phrases until you watch how mother or grandmother steps out on that faith and stands tall, even in the face of danger, sickness, and death. They remain confident that all things will work to the good of them that love the Lord. If you are a man or woman of faith today, know where it came from, and give God the praise.

Use what you have

Paul told Timothy what he had and where it came from, but he didn't stop there, he told him to use it!

If our mothers and grandmothers have taught us the value of Christian living and what can be accomplished when we completely trust in God, we should use that faith in our daily living. What was good for mother, and what was good for grandma should be good enough for us. No wonder the songwriter would declare, "Gimme that old time religion it's good enough for me!"

Grandma's faith carried her through a depression and great periods of war..it's good enough for me!

Grandma's faith helped her to be loyal to her husband and a pillar of strength for her family ... it's good enough for me!

Grandma's faith gave her courage in the midst of sickness and helped her to smile in the face of death ...it's good enough for me!

Those who mourn today should face the sadness of this hour by reflecting on Grandmas' faith. Even as the tears roll from your eyes declare with an unfeigned faith "I trust in God, wherever I may be. Out on the land or on the raging sea. For come what may, from day to day, my heavenly father watches over me!

"I trust in God, I know he cares for me. On mountains bleak or on the stormy sea, Though billows roll, he keeps my soul, my heavenly father watches over me!"

On Tuesday May 4, 1993, Willie Mae Dyer Williams went home to be with God. She left behind a perfect example of a grandma's faith.

The 212 Member Usher Board

A sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 28, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "Altogether, those chosen to be gatekeepers at the thresholds numbered 212. They were registered by genealogy in their villages. The gatekeepers had been assigned to their positions of trust by David and Samuel the seer." I Chronicles 9:22 (NIV)

Introduction

Have you ever wished there were more people on your usher board? Have you ever had an occasion to serve when there weren't enough ushers to go around? That was a time when the same usher who held the door, collected the offering and greeted guests as well. Somehow it's always on such days that Sister Cassie Bell decides to shout, and there's no one to take her out or Brother Bubba says he wants a fan, but he never takes one from a man. It wouldn't be so bad, but Miss Jennie keeps asking for her change and Lucretia keeps looking at you strangely. We got to put chairs down the aisle, we can't let the visitors stand...oh Lord if you can hear us, we could use a few more hands! Being short handed is a frustrating experience for church ushers. One prayer that most ushers have in common is please Lord, send us a few more willing hands.

Most Usher boards today are small groups of faithful workers who serve as gatekeepers for the Lord. They are servants of the congregation, who have accepted the responsibility of making worshippers comfortable and happy during worships. The nature of the station causes many people to shy away from what appears to be a menial place that is often thankless and without honor. The average board may have 10 to 20 active ushers at a time, depending on the congregation's size. Some large congregations may have as many as 50 in the service on any given Sunday. Today that would be considered a remarkable accomplishment for any local congregation.

If you think a board of 20, 40 or 50 members is great, then how would you like to be a part of a 212 member usher board? Not only to be a member of the board, but to be commissioned by the king! That would be an honor! Believe it or not the forerunner of what we would call an usher board is noted in 1 Chronicles 9:22 when it refers to the 212 "porters" or gatekeepers appointed by the king to serve the house of God. These "ushers" were commissioned for life to serve the house of God with all of their mind body and soul. Because it was a royal appointment, the 212 members, of this unique, all male, usher board, served every day of their lives gladly.

Today, those who usher on various boards may not have a board of 212, but they all have been selected by the king. They too have a royal appointment and they have responded to the call by saying, "If the Lord needs somebody, here am I, send me."

Exposition

This text considers a small number of Israelites as they return from exile in Babylon to re-establish the worship and ritual at the temple in Jerusalem. The Jews had been conquered and scattered throughout Assyria and the Babylonian empire and had been given leave to return to Jerusalem. The Book of Chronicles, which is a brief history of the Jewish people, highlights their return. A more detailed account is also contained in the Book of Ezra.

Ezra, like Nehemiah before him, had a difficult time getting Jews to return to Jerusalem. They had become comfortable in Babylon and a generation grew up that had never known their homeland. Of the millions of Jews in exile, however, there were some who came forth and answered the call. To be properly maintained, those who returned for this purpose had to be Levites because they were a special tribe selected for this special work.

When he returned Ezra came with 1,760 chief priests, 1 Chronicles (9:13), 220 temple attendants, an unnamed number of singers and 212 doorkeepers and their families.

The assignment of duties in the house of the Lord was one of the last great works of King David before he died. He spent his entire life trying to secure the land and build a temple for God, but was unable to complete the job. Beginning at 1 Chronicles 23 there is a detailed account of David's assignment of duties to the Levites. The descendants of Moses were the priests. Other groups were subdivided and assigned tasks for their families by the toss of a coin. Among the duties decided were: singers or canters, priest' attendants, and doorkeepers.

The family of Levites selected as doorkeepers was a large one. There were 212 major families involved. The head of each family was designated a doorkeeper and his family was charged to assist him in carrying out his duties, thereby involving literally thousands of people. These 212 families were subdivided into four smaller groups and assigned specific duties that included: 1) Oversight of the doorways and gates (v23) 2) Collecting the offerings (26), 3) Opening up and closing up after each day's worship (v27), 4) Storing and caring for the vessels and instruments of worship (v28-29). When a family's head died, the next head of the family took his place and the remainder of the family served as usual.

Those who returned to Jerusalem with Ezra were Korahites, descendants of Korah whose family drew the responsibility of being doorkeepers. Verse 22 refers to them as "porters" which is translated from the Hebrew word "Sho'er" which means doorkeeper. As Levites, the doorkeepers were called out from among the general community to serve the house of God. They were exempted from taxes, military service, or common labor. They only had one job to do and that was to serve the House of God.

Serving The House of God

The job of doorkeepers has changed over the years, but generally it was expected that their service be restricted to serving the House of God. As each family took its turn in service, they meticulously took care of the details relating to serving the temple itself.

In that tradition, we too have seen the job of ushering change over the years, but as its Old Testament predecessor, it has remained restricted to serving the house of God itself.

Long before any of us could remember our forefathers were ushers in the old country church. Their duties involved 1)Heating up the stove to have the building warm for meetings 2) Insuring an ample supply of catalogs for the outhouse 3) Keeping the horses and the wagons for the worshipers, 4)Marching the congregation for offerings, 5)Carrying out shouters, and 6) Seating and helping visitors. The duty of the usher was taken seriously.

In all of its seriousness, however, these dedicated servants did not envision themselves as doing anything that did not relate to serving the house of God proper. Many saw no need to attend Sunday school because it wasn't germane to what they perceived as their area of service. Neither was bible study essential because they were not planning to be teachers, neither was prayer meeting because they weren't planning to be deacons, neither was evangelism because they weren't planning to be preachers!

Many ushers today, do a great job on the board, but they do not tithe, attend Sunday school, prayer meeting, Bible study or otherwise commit themselves to any Christian service other than ushering.

As we grow in the faith, hopefully, more will come to see the post of doorkeeper as springboard to service rather than a service within itself.

Serving The Lord

The first ushers perceived themselves as men and women who were chosen by God to serve the building and that's all!

Our service should go beyond just service in the building, but should extend to the bounds of the great commission to "Go ye therefore" and "teach, preach, and reach" men and women for the Lord.

The first temple they served was built by Solomon, but it was destroyed and the 212 member usher board found itself without a job.

The second temple was rebuilt by Zerubbabel but it too was destroyed by invading armies and the doorkeepers had no doors to keep.

The third temple was built by Herod, who restored it to much of its original beauty, but it too was destroyed leaving the 212 ushers with nothing to do.

When these 212 ushers found that there was no temple to serve they were in a bind.

But, I hear Jesus declare in Matthew 12:6 as he talked with men and women married to the ritual of the temple, "That in this place is one greater than the temple."

The temple that man builds is made of rocks and stones!

The temple that man builds is held together with mortar and clay.

Jesus reminded them that there will come a day when not a rock or stone of this man-made temple will stand.

Jesus pointed them to himself as the temple that would be everlasting. In John 2:19 he said, "Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up." Somebody answered that it took 46 years to build this building, how can you raise it in three days?

Jesus wasn't talking about a building made from rocks or stones, but he was talking about a building not made with the hands of men, but was touched by the hand of God.

If you've chosen to serve in the house of God:

— Don't let your service get limited to mortar and bricks!

— Be determined by the color and style of the uniform!

— Don't be selective about which places you will serve!

— Don't worry about whether you can hold an office

— Don't restrict your service to things made by man!

I heard Dr. Watts declare, "To serve this present age my calling to fulfill, oh may all my powers engage to do my master's will!"

I don't know about you, but I've found out that good things happen when you serve the Lord.

Serve the Lord who can take the darkness and turn it into light!

Serve the Lord who can take defeat and turn it into victory!

Serve the Lord who can take sadness and turn it into gladness!

Serve him as an usher, but also serve him as you teach in the Sunday school!

Serve him as an usher but also serve him as you minister to the needy!

Serve him as an usher but also do the work of an evangelist and tell a dying world about Jesus!

Jesus, who died on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose on Sunday morning!

Tell them he's alive today and forever more!

Dragon Fighter

A sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 25, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "Thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder: the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet." — Psalms 91:13 "And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years," — Revelation 20:2

Introduction

Monsters and Dragons! Every childhood is filled with the story book tales of great beasts, angry monsters and the great heroes that rose to fight them and save the day. Most who hear these stories aspire to grow up to fight dragons, become a hero, and save the day.

Dragons did not really exist, but people believed in them. According to legend, dragons were giant fire breathing serpents with wings like a great bat. Dragons were said to be so ferocious that they could swallow a man in a single gulp.

If there were dragons, every country seemed to have its dragon slayer. In Greece the great dragon slayers were Hercules, Apollo and Perseus. The Germans and the Norse said Beowulf and Sigurd were the great dragon slayers. The English were so captivated by the legend of how Sir George saved the princess from the mouth of a dragon that he was named "Saint George."

Although Sir. George was a real man, the legend about the dragon slaying was make believe. Sir George was a Christian and he often had to fight the forces of evil to keep his faith. On April 23, 303 he was put to death and became known as St. George the Dragon Fighter.

There are dragons in the bible too. Usually dragons are used as symbols of evil things, evil acts and evil people. Satan is described as a dragon repeatedly as he brings trouble, confusion and death on the people of this earth. He is even pictured in some places as being a dragon with many heads, hard to kill, and ferocious. Without a doubt Satan does cause us many problems and difficulties. He is a horrible dragon that breathes the fire and smoke of hatred, confusion and death.

However there is a way for us to fight the dragon. There is one who is on our side that can and will defeat the dragon that pesters us now and prevent them from every bothering us again.

Brothers and Sisters, boys and girls ...Meet Jesus, the dragon fighter!

Exposition

This text focuses on David's Psalm of praise which emphasizes confidence that God will empower us to be successful in overcoming the impact of evil.

Evil forces are represented in this psalm as a "terror by night" and the "arrow that flieth by day" (v5); "pestilence" of darkness and the "destruction" of the day (v6). In verse 13 lions and serpents or young lions and dragons are used as metaphors for the great presence of evil. God, speaking through David, reminds the righteous that many of their contemporaries will fall prey to influences but he will empower the righteous to be strong enough to escape. This point is emphasized in verse 7 "a thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee."

The reason the righteous will overcome evil is cited in verse 9: "Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the most High, thy habitation." Evil will not be able to make us fall (v 10) and will avoid the places where we live and spend our time if we continue to abide in the place of the most high.

Dragons have been used in scripture as metaphors of symbols for evil. The common people believed in the myths of two kinds of dragons: sea monsters and giant land serpents. The Hebrew word "Dragon" is "Tananin" which means a great serpent. At the very least, when the term dragon was used it referred to something big and evil. So it was often used as a symbol for evil presences on land and at sea. In Psalm 74:13 the drowning Egyptians in the Red were described as "dragons in the water." In a similar comparison, Isaiah 51:9 calls upon God because he "wounded the dragon" of Egypt in times past. Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon is compared to a dragon in Jeremiah 51:34 because of the way he swallowed up and conquered through the Babylonian conquest. Whatever the evil presence God promises to be such a powerful presence with us that if we will abide in him he will help us to overcome its influence.

Young Christians should pay close attention to verse 13 of this text because it is within this passage that God has a word of encouragement and inspiration:"..the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet." When faced with lions and dragons of youth, young believers can and will be victorious. Important spiritual battles that are won in youth last a lifetime. Youth who slay dragons will be able to stand against monsters in later years.

Matthew 4:6 shows Jesus as a young adult fighting his own dragons. Satan, quoting from Psalm 91, tempted Jesus to stray from his course and seek worldly power and fame. While Satan quoted verses 11 and 12 of Psalm 91 he tactfully left out verse 13, which would have reminded Jesus that he would trample Satan by the power of God. Jesus overcame his temptation, slew the dragons of his youth, took on the monster of Calvary, death and the grave.

What are the dragons of youth? The dragons that youth face are on the inside, hidden from the eye. Theses dragons include fear, and insecurity. Many of the problems associated with youth can generally be traced to fear, and insecurity. They are monstrous dragons that work from the inside to destroy every young man or woman.

Millions of youth live with fear daily. Many are stricken with the fear of being laughed at by their friends, and will do almost anything to belong. It's the fear of being called chicken that prompts some boys to drink or take drugs to prove their manhood. It's the fear of being called names that prompts some youth to involve themselves in delinquent behavior. Verse seven of this text reminds us that thousands of young people fall prey to this evil, but young believers can and do overcome their fears, with God's help.

It takes courage for a youth not to involve themselves in wrong doing, even though everyone else is doing it. It takes courage to say no to "popular evils" knowing that you will be criticized and ostracized because you do. There is a certain amount of fear that you feel on the inside, but each time it comes we combat fear by remembering the word of God from Psalm 27:1 "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

Insecurity is the next dragon that growls at every young believer. Every youth wants to belong and be accepted. Youth need to feel secure at home, to know that they are loved and that their position in the home is not threatened. They also need to feel secure in their interpersonal relationships and group associations. Even more importantly, youth need to be secure within themselves, knowing who they are and where they are going in life. Youth who are conquered by this dragon are not sure of themselves. They feel the need to impress others by extravagant dress and frills. Some involve themselves in pre-marital sex to hold on to someone that's important to them. Some become delinquents at school and eventually wind up in jail.

Only those who are sure of themselves will be able to conquer the dragon of insecurity. Those who believe and trust in God will be able to trample on this dragon because they know they are special people, chosen by God to do a good work. Believers, whether young or old, have the assurance from our master that he will work it out.

Jesus The Dragon Fighter

Finally, youth should remember that they cannot fight spirit dragons themselves because the nature of the enemy is spiritual and not physical. Paul writing in Ephesians 6:12 reminded them in these words: "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places".

The dragons of fear and insecurity on the inside that threaten our spiritual lives cannot be defeated by our own power, but we need a spiritual dragon fighter.

Israel when faced with the approaching armies of Egypt found that our God is a dragon fighter as he opened up the red sea.

Gideon surrounded by enemies on every side with just three hundred men in his army proved that even when out numbered that the Lord is a fearsome dragon fighter.

E lijah waged a spiritual war against the prophets of Baal and proved that when pitted against the forces of evil our God is an awesome dragon fighter.

The great hope of every Christian is that one day our Lord will come back again and take hold of Satan, lock him away for a thousand years, then he will be released, defeated and thrown into the lake of fire and brimstone where he will burn forever.

Glory Hallelujah! This is our faith. This is our hope!

In these troubling times the only hope we have is in Jesus!

When the dragons are reaching out and trying to claim your soul, stand for Jesus!

When temptation is all around you..stand for Jesus who died for you on calvary and rose triumphant.

I don't know about you but I share the song writer's testimony, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid, rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!

Lifestyles of the Save & Sanctified

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 18, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." Acts 2:42

Introduction

Have you ever been curious about how other people live? Have you ever wondered about how your favorite actor, sports hero, or other celebrities live? If you have, you are among millions of people who are generally curious about the life styles of people in the public eye.

This curiosity we have about the lifestyles of those in the public eye has spawned whole industries. Magazines like Ebony show us the lifestyles and beautiful homes of famous African Americans to satisfy our curiosity. Magazines by the thousands pour out countless pages of photographs that paint a picture of the luxurious lifestyles for us. There is even a late night television show called the "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous" which shows us the fabulous living arrangements of the rich. We see everything from golden bathtubs to glass homes in the mountains. We are shown how the rich entertain themselves with get-a-way vacations to far-a-way places. The entire idea is to arouse our curiosity and pander to our desire to know more about how people with money spend their leisure.

We know a lot about the life styles of the rich and famous, but how much do we know about the lifestyles of those who may not be materially rich or nationally well known. What about the lifestyles of the those who know the Lord. The lifestyles of the saved and sanctified are snapshots of joy. These lifestyles reflect the peace that comes with knowing Jesus and assurance of his promise to be with us continually.

As Christians, we are comfortable with our lifestyle. It is one that involves the study of God's word, fun and fellowship, breaking of bread with fellow believers, as well as worship and prayer. Our lifestyle differs from that of the rich and famous in that while we may have many material goods at our disposal, we can be just as happy without them. Ours is a wonderful life, and we gladly spend it in the fellowship of our lord.

Exposition

This text focuses on the members of the early church in its first weeks of operation. Chronologically it takes place after the resurrection and ascension of Christ. Jesus appeared to his disciples on several occasions after his resurrection instructing them to teach and preach about the kingdom of God and to show love for him through service to others. As Jesus left he promised them a special empowerment to carry out the mission (Acts 1:8). Strengthened with power from on high, they began to live the powerful life of a Christian in their own communities in such a way that in its first days it drew thousands to the fold. On one occasion 3,000 united on the first day (Acts 2:41).

As members of the body of Christ each person discovered that he or she had been saved to serve. They set about immediately developing a lifestyle that reflected these ideas. There were four traits that generally identified the life styles of the saints. 1) They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine. They constantly studied the word as taught by the apostles. In a nutshell, the apostles taught them to obey and trust God (Acts 5:29 "We ought to obey God rather than men.), use the power he gives them to demonstrate good works (Titus 2:7 In all things showing thyself a pattern of good works:), and to bear witness to the power of God (Acts 1:8 "ye shall be witnesses unto me). 2)They continued in fellowship. They shared experiences, leisure, and learning together and thus drew strength and inspiration from each other as the entire church drew from the Lord. 3)They continued in the Breaking of Bread. They came together to remember the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ by observing the communion service on a regular basis. 4)They continued in prayer as they prayed for the sick, and the building of the kingdom. Those who saw the saints were able to recognize them instantly by their lifestyle for it was unique and peculiar. The lifestyle of the Christian is one of study, good works, fellowship, communion and prayer.

What is the Christian Lifestyle?

The early church clearly set the pattern for the lifestyle of the saved and sanctified. That pattern has not been altered by time. It is the same today. The lifestyle of the Christian should be one that is consistent with the word.

LIFE STYLE OF STUDY AND SERVICE. Every Christians should continue in the doctrine of God, demonstrate good works and praise God continuously. No Christian should neglect bible study. Sunday morning bible study is an essential part of our growing process. As we learn to understand the word of God and its meaning for us. Any additional bible studies that the church offers should provide even more opportunities for us to study and learn. Moreover, our works in the community should also be an example of the Christian lifestyle. The lifestyle of every Christian should contain some element of Christian service. The type of service may range from helping provide shelter for homeless people to volunteering for the Red Cross. It may be as simple as serving as a hospital volunteer, or in serving on governmental panels and boards. Each provides an opportunity for the Christian to demonstrate the force of character and sensitivity to people that identifies him or her as a Christian servant. In every thing we do we give God praise continuously for his mighty works.

LIFE STYLE OF FELLOWSHIP. A unique quality of the Christian is that he or she is usually in the company of other Christians frequently as they fellowship and share life experiences.

A man or woman comes to the cross alone, but once there he or she finds millions of others who are also standing at the foot of Jesus. Those who share a common faith should fellowship frequently with one another. The old colloquialism is true in this respect as well "Birds of a feather, flock together."

The idea of frequent fellowship goes beyond just shaking hands and exchanging hugs but it extends into the daily lives as well. Fellowship is a sharing of mutual concern. Fellowship means we rejoice in each others victories and accomplishments, support each other in moments of frustration and failure, and comfort each other in moments of personal loss. Frequent fellowship requires frequent informal contact. The advantage of the Christian fellowship is that others who stand at the cross know how difficult your journey is and share every aspect of your life with you.

Remembering the Cross

If there are final aspects to the lifestyle of the saved and sanctified they are that they know how to pray and they never forget the cross.

Never has there been a faithful believer in God who did not believe in the power of prayer. Show me a Christian woman and I'll show you a woman who knows what prayer can do. Show me a Christian man and I'll show you a man who can testify that prayer can change things.

Moses learned that even when faced with the Red Sea that a small prayer can build a bridge over troubled water.

Joshua learned that even when the sun is about to set on your victory that prayer can make the sun stand still Hezekiah learned that as time dwindles and life fades away, that prayer can add years to your life.

Daniel prayed three times a day and he learned that prayer can turn lions into kittens.

The Three Hebrew boys learned that even when faced with the fiery furnace that prayer put a fourth man in the fire.

Show me a Christian and I'll show you a man or woman who knows the power of prayer.

Prayer can change enemies into your friends!

Prayer can turn midnights into noon days!

Prayer can reduce mountains into molehills!

Prayer can make rough places plain and crooked places straight!

A Christian prays because he can never forget the Cross.

Show me a Christian and I'll show you a man or woman that can never forget the agony of the cross. The sacrifice of Jesus on Calvary is always on his mind.

Show me a Christian and I'll show you somebody who can never forget his body which "was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." (Isaiah 53:5)

Show me a Christian and I'll show you somebody who can never forget the blood. No wonder the song writer declares "I know it was the blood. I know it was the blood that save me. One day when I was lost, he died upon the cross, I know it was the blood that saved me."

Show me a Christian and I'll show you somebody who can tell the old story like it was yesterday.

How Jesus died on Calvary but rose on Sunday morning!

He rose giving us the promise of a new life filled with power! I'm glad that he gave me a new lifestyle!

I'm glad that he gave me a new walk and talk!

Because of Jesus, I have a brand new life!

Why Seek Ye The Living Among The Dead?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 11, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead?" Luke 24:5

Introduction

Do you serve a living God is your god counted among the failed faiths of lost generations? Many today serve a god of some kind. Often they find their gods powerless to help them to live better, climb higher and achieve their goals.

Consider the man and his daughter who visited a museum of great religions while on their summer vacation. In the museum, there were statues of the founders of many of the great world faiths. There was Buddha who taught his followers about inner peace. He has 245 million followers. There was Confucius, the great Chinese thinker and wise man whose ideas dominate the Eastern part of the World. There was Muhammad who taught Islam to millions saying he was the last prophet of God. As the little girl moved from statue to statue depicting even the mythical Greek gods: Zeus, Thor, Hera and others. After strolling down many hallways and reading the notes on the religious shrines of the past, she asked her father a question:" Father, where is the statue of Jesus?" The father responded: "These are the failed gods of the past. Buddha was great but he's dead. Confucius was wise and influential but he's dead. Muhammad was a mighty leader but he is dead. If you want to find Jesus, you can't find him here because he is alive. He lives within your heart."

Today there are many who entrust their faith to dead gods that offer them only defeat and failure. Even though the things they have trusted have proved empty and valueless, many still cling to them in vain efforts to find happiness and success. Whether these gods are represented by great ideas, or mere creature comforts, all of them have proven to be void of life.

However, we serve a living God that is with us every day. That is the joy of Christian Life. There is no place where the body of Christ is on display. There is no crypt that holds his body for awe stricken crowds to file by in wonder. Those who travel to the place where he lay in the Holy Land expect to find just what they see, an empty tomb, for he is risen.

This season of the year reminds us of the living faith we have been given as sons and daughters of God. It is a faith that keeps us looking toward the future and helps us turn our backs on the dead works of our past.

As Christians, we remind ourselves constantly that we serve a risen savior who has given us new life and power on this earth, as a foretaste to the great rewards that are to come after this life is past. When we want to realize the power of God, we don't look in the powerless, dead experiences of this world for we can find him in a moment because he's only a prayer away.

Exposition

This text considers the events that took place immediately after the crucifixion of Christ. Three days and three nights earlier Christ had been crucified and buried in a tomb belonging to Joseph, a friend of the cause. The women, including Mary Magdalene, Joanna and Mary the Mother of James (Luke 24:10), prepared spices to anoint his body and waited until both the Sabbath involving the Feast of the Passover and the Weekly Sabbath had past then came to the tomb to complete their task "very early" in the morning on the First Day of the week. They found that the stone had been rolled away and that the body of Jesus was missing.

The women were perplexed. They fully expected to find a body in the tomb because they came prepared to anoint it. When they found no body, the women were disturbed. John's record of this same event (John 20:13) shows Mary Magdalene telling the angel that the body of Jesus had been removed and they did not know where it had been taken. It never dawned on her that Jesus had risen from the dead. She wept because she could not find the body. Mary wept and the others were afraid. In their fear, two angels appeared, and told them not to be afraid. Then they were asked the probing question: "Why seek ye the living among the dead?"

The tomb was the place of the dead. The angel's question and explanation prompted them to remember the words of Jesus. Had they believed them when he spoke them they would not have come expecting to find a body, but an empty tomb. However, since they did not believe him fully, a body is what they fully expected to find. If they had accepted the truth that Jesus was the Son of the living God and was the same as the father they would have come expecting an empty tomb. However, they came to the place of the dead, looking for the dead.

The angel told them "he is not here, but is risen." The angel explained how Jesus predicted his resurrection and how its fulfillment resulted in the empty tomb. When the women remembered his words, they returned to the disciples excited an inspired as they told what they had seen. They had come to the place of the dead seeking a dead leader and they left knowing that they were serving a living God.

Dead gods only frustrate the living

Today many people spend their lives in frustration devotion to dead gods. They bow at the altar before them and pledge to them their time, talent and resources. How many have given their all in pursuit of fame and glory, only to find that it is a dead god? How many have sought wealth with all of their might only to learn that wealth is a means to an end, not an end in itself? How many have bowed themselves low before the god of career success and have devoted all of their time and energy to achieve the ever elusive "success" without considering once that success is relative and its degree depends upon the standard of measure. Fame, glory, wealth, power, and success are among the dead gods of this generation. Each of them is powerless to bring a living faith to adherents that goes beyond frustration.

Our present dilemma is like that of ancient Israel that sought to achieve success by looking to the dead gods worshipped by others around them. Since others seemed successful worshipping "Baal" they too gave everything they had toward the worship of this dead god. God caused a great showdown of faith between the false system of gods represented as "Baal" and the living God. 1 Kings 18:21 finds the prophet Elijah challenging the people atop Mt. Carmel in a demonstration of power that should have proven finally the power of the living God. His words were striking: "And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, How long halt ye between two opinions? if the LORD be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word." Two altars were erected with sacrifices and the real God was asked to respond by consuming the altar with fire. The living God responded with fire from heaven. Too many today seek to find a living God from among the available "dead" gods of modern times. Good times and juking has become a god to some. Inebriation, whether by drugs or alcohol, has become the god of others. While still others worship at the altar of their fishing boat or some other leisurely pursuit that, in order or priority, always comes before the living God. If the Mt. Carmel test were applied today and each of these were called upon to fully satisfy our longings and desires, they would all prove themselves "dead" for all practical purposes.

There is no life in dead works. There is no joy in living unless our living is in union with the divine end. All of our works are "dead" if we do them in pursuit of a dead god. That's why Hebrews 9:14 challenges us to let the blood of Christ "purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God."

Serving A Living God

Unlike the women who were at first discouraged by the empty tomb, we are encouraged by its emptiness. It reminds us that we serve a risen Lord who has not been held down by the powers of death and grave. Paul writes in 1 Timothy 4:10 "For therefore we both labor and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Savior of all men, specially of those that believe."

It was faith in a living God that prompted Abraham to prepare to sacrifice Isaac before he found a lamb in the bush.

It was faith in a living God that led Moses and Israel across the Red Sea.

It was nothing but a living God that:

—Encouraged Daniel though thrown into the Lion's den —Protected the three Hebrew Boys while in the fiery furnace

—Kept a widows woman's barrel from running dry

Today there are many who can testify that we serve a living God because only a living God could:

—Take our valleys and raise them to mountain tops

—Take midnight's and turn them into noon days

—Take our briny tears and turn them into mighty cheers

—Defeats and turn them into victories

—Take our losses and turn make them work for our gain

If the resurrection has any real significance it is that it reminds us that we serve a living God.

Because Jesus rose, those who believe on him have an opportunity for new life today and continued life in the hereafter.

Because there was a resurrection morning we have the assurance that the God we serve is not just another relic of religious history, but a living presence with us every day.

It is no wonder then that the songwriter would say, "Because he lives, I can face tomorrow. Because he lives, all fear is gone. Because I know, he holds the future and life is worth the living because he lives."

Today we celebrate the victory of life over death and joy over sadness.

Today we celebrate because we know the God we serve is alive and well!

Though Satan tempted him in the wilderness, betrayed him in the garden and crucified him on an old rugged cross.. he lives!

I serve a risen savior; he's in the world today. I know that he is living no matter what men may say. I see his hand of mercy. I hear his voice of cheer. And just the time I need him, he's always near.

H*e lives, He lives! Christ Jesus lives today. He walks with me and talks with me along life's narrow way. ...Ask my how I know he lives, he lives within my heart!*

Hosanna!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 4, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"And the multitudes that went before, and that followed,cried, saying, Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest." Matthew 21:9

Introduction

What kind of people are worthy of praise? People are praised when they display a variety of admirable traits including: heroism, benevolence, and mighty achievements. We salute such traits in a variety of ways. Our heroes are showered with ticker tape parades like those given the returning soldiers from Desert Storm or the winners of World Series or Super Bowls. Those who show outstanding benevolence and charity are give public accolades such as those given to Mother Teresa and Martin Luther King. Those who perform mighty works are praised in the media and great awards programs. On such occasions give accolades and sometimes we sing: "For he is a jolly good fellow" and we shout "hip hip hurray" and we give three cheers and other signs of our appreciation for their work.

When it's time to praise a hero we know exactly how it is done. There are books and manuals that lay out the routine step by step. When its time to salute a benevolent person or to award a person for an accomplishment, we have an idea what to do. But how do we praise someone who has been heroic, benevolent and performed mighty works at the same time? Suppose that same person was the Son of God?

That was the dilemma of the people of Jerusalem when they heard that Jesus was coming to town. It was a heroic act because there were plots to kill him. His compassion in healing the sick and feeding the hungry was well known. His mighty work in raising Lazarus from the dead was witnessed repeated as those who attended the funeral of Lazarus watched him walk and talk among them. They were excited at the prospect that a man from God was among them to save them. Even the Harvest feast of the fall they restaged the festive and joyous spirit of the Feast of the Tabernacles, cut palm branches and shouted "Hosanna!" to Jesus as he entered Jerusalem. It was their way of saying "For he's a jolly good fellow! and Hip Hip Hurray!"

As Christians, we know that Jesus is worthy to be praised. He is worthy because of his mighty works. He is worthy because he has shown use mercy everyday. He is worthy because he heroicly died for our sins. The people on Palm Sunday shouted Hosanna but soon forgot him. We strive to shout his praises daily and never forget him.

Exposition

This text focuses on the praise and acclamation that Jesus received when he made his entrance into the city of Jerusalem. It occurred shortly after Jesus had raised Lazarus from the dead. On his way to Jerusalem he stopped again in Bethany to eat supper with Mary, Martha and Lazarus (John 12:2). The word spread among the crowd of people which had grown to hundreds of thousands because of the upcoming Passover celebration. As he approached Jerusalem, the crowds praised him and took branches from the palm trees and went forth to meet him shouting "Hosanna!" and praising him.

The term "Hosanna" is an Aramaic transliteration of the Hebrew word hoshi-ah-na which means save us. It appears a total of six times in the Gospels and each is connected with Christ's entry into Jerusalem. In this text and in Mark 11:9 it stands absolutely. In Matthew 21:9,15 it is followed by the phrase "to the son of David". Matthew 21:9 and Mark 11:10 follows it with the phrase "in the highest." It was a term used only during the Feasts of the Tabernacle. During this time the people would bring the first fruits of their harvest to the temple in a great celebration. During the celebration the people would repeat Psalm 118:25 once each day for six days as they made a solemn processional around the sacrifice. Psalm 118:25 says:"Save now, I beseech thee, O LORD: O LORD, I beseech thee, send now prosperity." On the seventh day repeated it seven times. It was a solemn chant like recitation that was given in hopes of salvation and prosperity to come. Their plea to God was that he would hoshi-ah-na or save them and bring them prosperity.

The Old Testament ritual which drew from Psalm 118 was prophetic because while it appealed to God for salvation and prosperity in verse 25, other verses pointed with prophetic accuracy to the coming of the Messiah. Verse 22 which says "The stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner." was quoted by Jesus in Matthew 21:42 as referring to himself. The people sensing that Jesus was the promised one of Psalm 118 quoted the Psalm but this time with joy instead of solemnity. Then they added verse 26 of the Psalm which says "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." They shouted it instead of chanting it in dry monotones. They rejoiced greatly and took their cloaks and threw into the street to welcome one they expected to save them and bring them prosperity. It was no longer a dry empty ritual but a living hope and therefore a reason for joy!

As the people praised Jesus they took what was a sad and solemn expression which was more like a plea "Hosanna" and turned it into an expression of joy and hope for salvation and prosperity. This new hope was supplied by the coming of Jesus who was the object of all their praise.

Praise Him Because of His Mighty Acts

Jesus was praised because of his mighty acts among the people. They knew about his raising of Lazarus from the dead, healing the sick, giving sight to the blind, feeding thousands with handsful of fishes and bread, and therefore they praised him and shouted Hosanna!

Today we should praise him because we too know of his mighty acts in our own personal lives. We have seen him take the jangling discords of our lives and bind them into a bond of meaning and purpose. We know about his mighty works. We, who have suffered defeat and felt the sting of failure and have been lifted to our feet again by his amazing power, can tell you of his mighty achievements. We, who have risen from our sick beds in defiance of science, know that he has done mighty works in our midst. We, who have overcome frustrations caused by Satan and side stepped the ditches and potholes he has created for us by the grace of God, can testify that he can truly move mountains of adversity. We who have felt his warm embrace in times of loneliness and his strong hand of assurance in times of weakness, should gladly join the throngs that praise him, because he is worthy to be praised.

Salvation & Prosperity

When David, through the inspiration of God, penned the 118th psalm he was looking for salvation and a chance for prosperity. He turned to God and looked forward to the coming of the Messiah that would bring perpetual salvation. They marched around the sacrifice in a sad empty ritual looking for salvation. However, the Saints of the New Testament rejoiced because the source of salvation had come.

Today those who are looking for salvation have a reason for hope. There is a reason to be of cheer because Jesus is in our midst.

Jesus came to this world so that he could save us and show us the way to abundant living.

John 3:16 reminds us that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son so that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Not only did Jesus come to save the lost but he also came to provide every believer with the power to live fruitful and happy lives. In John 10:10 he said: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

When the new Testament saint cries out Hosanna it is not a plea for God to save us, but it is a shout of joy because he has saved us! It is not a pitiful cry from a hopeless creature looking for happiness and prosperity but the joyful exclamation of the exuberant and triumphant who have already experienced the abundant life!

Matthew 21:10 says the people began to shout Hosanna and somebody in the crowd asked: "Who is this?" that the people are shouting about.

David answered it in Psalm 24:8 Who is this King of glory? The LORD strong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battle. Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in.

A blind man answered by proclaiming, that he is the light of the world because I was once blind, but now I see.

A lame man answered, he told me to take my bed and walk

Lazarus testified, I was dead and in the grave and he gave me a brand new life.

Hosanna! Hallelujah! Praise The Lord! The King cometh!

The Jews rejoiced when Jesus came into their city, and they shouted Hosanna!. But every saint's testimony is that "I'm so glad that one day Jesus made a triumphant entry into my life."

Since that day I have found out that there has never been:

—A battle that he could not win! Hosanna!

—A burden that he could not lift! Hosanna!

—A heartache he could not feel! Hosanna!

—A loneliness he could not comfort! Hosanna!

—A Promise he could not keep! Hosanna!

He died for me on Calvary! Hosanna!

Rose after three days! Hosanna!

He's alive today!

Hosanna in the highest!

A Good Name

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 28, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favour rather than silver and gold." Proverbs. 22:1 "That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth;"And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. Philippians 2:10-11.*

Introduction

Have you ever forgotten someone's name? That's a time when personal names are reduced to "whats-his-face", and things become "thing-a-ma-gigs" and "what-cha-ma-call-its." On occasion, everyone has forgotten the name of someone or something.

There are some names we wish we could forget. They are like nightmares before us staring and glaring at us. They bring haunting memories and recall moments we would rather forget. There are other names we always want to remember because they bring to mind pleasant thoughts, inspiration and encouragement.

Consider the new teacher whose first day at school was a challenge. She did not know a single child in the class and expected to get acquainted on her first day. Then she met an incorrigible kid named Dennis. He threw spit balls and she said politely "Dennis, sit down!" He pulled a little girl's hair and she quietly but forcefully said "Dennis, please stop." Every five minutes or so her class presentation was interrupted by an ever ending chain of commands "Stop Dennis! Quit Dennis! Sit Down Dennis" finally at the end of the day her husband asked did she get to know her students she replied, "I'm sorry to say there were 30 children in my class, but I only got to know one name: "Dennis."

What do people think when they hear your name? Do they smile? do they frown? Do they laugh in ridicule? Do they stare in space with a blank expression? When people hear the name Homer Simpson, they think of a dead beat dad. Bart Simpson is a smart mouth, scheming son. When we hear the name "Urkle" we think of nerds. "Sting" means strong, "Vandross" means love and Michael Jackson means dancing machine. That's what people think about their names, but what about you?

As Christians, we strive to live before men in such a way that they will proudly refer to us as children of the most high God. When the world sees us, hears us and deals with us, it should bear a good reflection upon our Lord. After all, we do wear his name!

Exposition

This text is one of the bits of wisdom given to King Solomon by the inspiration of God. It speaks of the importance of maintaining a good reputation, referred to as a "name." In two references to the importance of maintaining a good reputation, Solomon compares a good name to riches in this text and in Ecclesiastes 7:1 it is compared to an expensive ointment. Riches and precious ointments were both desirable in biblical times and both were hard to come by. A family reputation on the other hand was inherited and difficult, if not impossible, to alter.

The importance of a good family name is underscored when the tough standard of the law is applied. Breaking the law of Moses was the way to get a bad name both in the eyesight of God and with the people. Breaking the law gave a family a bad reputation that, in some instances, took 200 years or more to live down. Deuteronomy 23:2 says people who conceived children outside of marriage brought a curse or a bad name on their family. For 10 generations, roughly 200 years, the children and grandchildren of the offending couple bore the stigma of their grandparents indiscretion. Deuteronomy 27 went further describing other ways to bring a curse or a bad name on one's family through: worshiping idols, stealing land, adultery, incest, crimes against nature with animals, and murder. These were just a few of the ways that people could bring a bad reputation on their families. Offending parties would often cause their children and grandchildren to bear the brunt of criticism, jokes and ostracism for years afterward.

In this context, Solomon found that a good name was more valuable than money because it was something that could not be bought or sold commercially. A good name is earned and is a valuable asset to pass on to succeeding generations.

Under the Mosaic law there was no way for a person to absolve himself of a bad name. It was his tag of infamy, a part of his inheritance, regardless to his own deeds, he was simply stuck with a bad name and doomed by the faults of his ancestors. However, under the new covenant, no person is held responsible for the deeds of another. Paul writing to the Romans said: "..we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ." (Romans 14:10). He went further in verse 12 and added: "So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God." (v12). While the stigma of previous misdeeds of the family may never be forgotten in the minds of men, Christ does not consider the spiritual state of others in determining whether he will save us, neither will he consider the deeds of others in judging the extent of our reward. Under the new covenant, every person gets a chance to establish his own name and is judged accordingly.

Keeping a Good Name

Many young people are not aware of the value of a good name. Some are frustrated at the attempts of their parents and other adults to help them develop a good reputation. Despite the best efforts of parents there are some youth who have already begun to develop reputations among their peers. Some are known as cheats, thugs, thieves, gangsters, dealers, hot mama's and cool daddies. Some have already developed reputations of being unreliable, uncontrollable and even incorrigible. Unfortunately, once that reputation has been established in a peer group, it is very difficult to change.

A good name opens doors of opportunity that would be otherwise closed. Opportunities for advancement, employment and secular success avail themselves to those who have a good name. Those who follow in the path of brothers and sisters who have left a good name find doors have already been open for them, while those who must follow in the footsteps of a relative that left bad impressions have a hard time because they must expend extra efforts to prove that they are not the same as the ones who came before them.

Getting a new name

While it may be difficult to rid ourselves of bad family names among our friends and neighbors, there is a way to get a reputation change that will be recognized even in battlements of glory. There is a name which, when spoken, means forgiveness and compassion. There is a name which means understanding and salvation. That name is the name of Jesus.

The Lord can and will give you a new name. Jacob developed a reputation as a trickster and cheat. All who knew him whispered at the way he acquired his property and success. He even cheated his brother Esau out of his birthright. He had a bad name, but one night he wrestled with an angel of the Lord and was blessed with a name change and he became known as "Israel." Saul persecuted the church and spent a great part of his life trying to destroy Christianity, until one day he was traveling down the Damascus Road and met the Lord in a blaze of light, his past was forgiven and he was given a new name, Paul. When Jesus met Simon he was a rough cut, hot tempered, fisherman who was doomed to mediocrity, but Jesus changed his name to "Cephas" or Peter because he saw something in him that resembled the strength of a rock.

If youth of the today are trying to develop a good name, there is no better name to be called than to be called a child of God.

It's good to be identified with a strong school mascot such as a Bulldog, Wildcat, Tiger, or Lion, but its even better to be recognized in heaven as a child of the King.

Brothers and Sisters those who are in the family of God are blessed with a powerful family name, the name of Jesus.

Acts 4:12 says "neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

The name of Jesus opens doors of opportunity. For Jesus said in John 14:13 "And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son."

The name of Jesus is known around the world and even in heaven. For Philippians 2:10-11 says: "That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth;"And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

Some call on Buddha, Krishna and Muhammad and bow down before them, but brothers and sisters, there is nothing like calling on the name of Jesus.

You may be sinking in the sea of life but when you call on Jesus you'll be able to sing "Love lifted me, when nothing else could help, love lifted me!"

Jesus, the King of Glory;

Jesus, the Lord mighty in battle!

Died on Calvary on rose on the third day. He established a name upon which we can call.

Call him in the morning! Call him in the midnight hour!

Call Him!

.. And tell him what you want!

A Cup, My Cup & This Cup

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 21, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "...This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you." Luke 22:20

Introduction

What has been your lot in life? A crystal stairway? A rugged road? What have you chosen to do with that God has given you? These are important questions for every person to answer. What we have been given to work with is considered a "lot" in life, or our cup. Some have cups filled with sweet nectars satisfying flavors, but all have a few bitter dregs.

The late Daisy Godwin was a saintly soul who spent her life humbly working in the service of others. She often spoke of her youth when she served as a maid in the home of her rich employers. Sister Godwin said she noticed that at each of the social gatherings of the affluent that she served coffee and tea to the guests from thin tea cups. These cups were entirely different from the cups at her home. They were white, thick and heavy. Somehow, she connected the size of the tea cups to social status. Those who drank from thin teacups appeared affluent. Those who drank from mugs were poor. Her goal in life became to work to where she was a "thin teacup" person. In her old age, she reflected on those years and her youthful quest to reach "thin teacup" status. When she died, her house was decorated with literally scores of fine porcelain teacups from around the world. She never became materially rich, but she had grown to a level of spiritual wealth that was unmeasurable. She died with very few earthly possessions except her teacup collection. She had been the recipient of a, happy and prosperous life. Her cup of blessings overflowed. Spiritually she had become a "thin teacup" person in the eyes of the Lord.

When God gives gifts and blessings the type of receptacle we have is not a consideration. A silver cup, a thick mug, porcelain china or a tin drinking cup, are all the same in his sight. It's not the kind of cup we have, but what's in the cup that counts. Whatever God has put in our cup is our lot in life. We can take what he has given us and use it or we can complain that our cup is not as pretty as those of others. What is for sure is that the premium is on the contents and not on the cup.

As Christians, we have learned to accept the mix of blessings, challenge and struggle that God has given us. Whatever challenge life has placed in the cup before us we should freely drink from it,for it is good to the last drop!

A Cup

In Psalm 75:8-9, David depicts God as holding "a cup" in his hand. The contents of God's cup are the elements that contribute to the quality of life. There is the sweet red wine, representing our joys, successes, achievements, and victories. This mixture when received results in happy days, success in business, love, and social affairs. Most of the contents of the cup in God's hand is filled with this mixture. However, the cup also contains a small portion of "dregs" which represent the discomforts of life. The dregs result in hatred, racism, murder, theft, ill feeling, war, uncertainty, distrust, and deceit.

As God pours from his cup, every person receives a large portion of the sweet opportunities for success and happiness and a small sprinkling of dregs as well. No person receives only the red wine, neither does any person receive only the dregs. Each receives a fair portion of each. David declared that the godly man is keenly aware that the successes of life always carry with them the propensity for evil.

The godly receive the blessings of life fully aware that with each blessing there is the prospect of evil if he becomes careless. With each victory, there is the fear that we may become lifted up in pride. With every success, there is the prospect that we may become conceited. As we prosper materially there is the prospect of becoming miserly, selfish and possessive. 1 Peter 5:8 warns the godly to be careful or sober in our handling of prosperity and circumstance and to be "vigilant" because " your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." In the next verse we are encouraged to resist steadfastly in faith.

The ungodly man receives certain initial blessings and opportunities from God. The difference between the ungodly and the godly is in the way they drink from the cup of life. The ungodly man makes no effort to separate the prospect of evil from each opportunity and drinks down the blessing and the dregs too. He drains the cup! The ungodly seize each blessing as an opportunity for evil, because they did not separate the dregs from the blessing.

God has a cup in his hand from which he pours out opportunities for good and tendencies toward evil. We must be careful, as we freely receive, that we do not drink the dregs as well.

My Cup

The second text verse focuses on an individual testimony as David testifies to his personal blessing received from the hand of God. He declares "thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over."

My cup represents the blessings that we have received from the providence of God. It is individualized and serves as a testimony to God's goodness to all who do not know him.

Has God done anything for you lately? Certainly! That's why David was so quick to respond that his cup runneth over with bountiful blessings from God.

Considering God's benevolence the song writer wrote: "Count your blessings, name them one by one, count your many blessings see what God has done."

Counting our blessings doesn't require a mathematics degree, it only requires us to look around and see how the Lord has taken our:

—Darkest nights and turned them into our brightest days

—Most despairing weaknesses and followed them with our most profound times of strength

—Most difficult circumstances and turned them into blessed accomplishments

—Fiery furnaces made seven times hotter by adversaries and has always been the fourth man in the fire!

—Empty cupboards and filled them with his everlasting supply

No wonder the song writer declares: "I get a blessing every day!"

My cup runs over daily as God takes the bitter and makes it sweet; the foolish and makes it wise; childish and makes it mature; and the hateful and makes it love.

We thank God for the blessings he gives us and for the continuous guidance of the Holy Spirit to help us to discern the blessings from the dregs.

I've had some good days and I've had some bad days, with many hills to climb, but like the song writer "I won't complain" because the Lord has been good to me!

This Cup

The final text verse focuses on Jesus as he speaks not of "a cup" in the hand of God, or "my cup" of blessings that over flow, but of "this cup."

In sharing the final meal with his disciples Jesus told them that he would not eat with them until the kingdom building mission is complete. He broke bread and blessed it and urged his disciples to eat bread in this way as a memorial to the sacrifice of his body. He presented them with a cup of wine and urged them to view it as a memorial of his blood which would be shed to seal the new agreement that God was making with all men of every race and nationality who believe.

"This cup" was to become the cup of salvation. It would be sweet and savory to every one who tastes of it because Christ will have drank the bitter dregs himself.

"This cup" would seal the promise of power and greater blessings made to every Christian.

"This cup" when shared in true faith by believers would make: forgiveness possible, hope thinkable, the past bearable, the present liveable, the future faceable, heaven obtainable.

"This cup" shared by every believer washes away the sins of the world. For Galatians 4:4 declares "for in the fullness of time, God sent forth his son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem to redeem them that were under the law..."

"This cup" answers the song writer's question: "What can wash away my sins?" by answering "Nothing but the blood of Jesus!"

Oh precious is the flow that makes me white as snow, no other fount I know, nothing but the blood of Jesus!

Jesus, the burden bearer because he lifts the burdens of oppressed!

Jesus, the good shepherd, for he searches for his lost sheep

Jesus, the faith friend, for he was willing to lay down his life for a friend

Jesus, the bright and morning star, for he guides lost travelers along the way!

Jesus, the fountain of living water, for he refreshes those who are weary. No wonder the song writer declared "I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad"

Jesus who died out on Calvary and rose early Sunday morning!

Jesus, who has all power in his hands!

All Power!

All Power in his hands!

Hang Out Your Sign

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 14, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "And the superscription of his accusation was written over, THE KING OF THE JEWS." Mark 15:26; Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven. Matthew 5:16

Introduction

What is your witness for God? How do you let men know that you serve a risen savior whose power is evidenced in your life daily? By your words? By your deeds? How?

Just before leaving this earth Jesus commanded his disciples to be witnesses of him throughout the world. The witness Christ wanted was not a slick marketing strategy or advertising campaign, but a testimony evidenced by great works that he makes a difference in their lives.

Consider two men who set up a shop at the end of death valley. Both decided that they would meet travelers who had crossed the desert with a message of hope. The desert was hot and the journey was long. The travelers would certainly be drawn to a message of hope. The two men set up small booths at the desert's end and each put up a sign to attract hot, tired, travelers. As the day progressed one man noticed that all of the travelers were stopping at his friend's booth and not at his. They were both located at the edge of the desert and they both distributed the same materials, yet a crowd gathered at the other booth. What was the difference? He walked around and looked at the signs. His sign read "Jesus Loves You." The other sign quoted John 7:37 "If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink." He gave them materials about the love of God while he gave them cool glasses of water. One talked about love, then gave cooling water. The difference between the two booths was not in the signs but in the service.

Today there are signs everywhere. Along the road, on curb sides, on houses, atop buildings and even on space ships. Each is trying to get a message across that will reach as many as possible. In secular life the public is attracted by a sign to a service being offered. That service may range from auto repair to medical treatment. Usually its the sign that attracts the public to the service. The general rule is: to attract a crowd, put up a sign.

As Christians, we know that if our intent is to witness for Christ, the emphasis is not on the signs, but on service because the "service" is the "sign." That's why Christ says "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works." The best sign of the Christian life is not what we say we are with our lips, but rather what we do with our lives.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he tells his disciples the nature of the people of God. Included in the sermon on the mount, Jesus made two general comparisons or similitudes that describe the children of the faith. He said they should be "salt" that savors and seasons the earth (v13). Since salt both seasons and preserves foods, the people of God are expected to be a presence on earth that both gives new spiritual flavor and acts as a saving moral preservant as well. In verse 14 Jesus said believers were to be the light of the world, bringing hope and inspiration to an otherwise dark and hopeless experience. At the center of being the salt of the earth and the light of the world is Jesus' emphasis on "good works." In the community of the unsaved the acts and deeds of the saved are expected to be bring savor and light to a world that would normally go lacking otherwise.

The purpose of these good deeds is to glorify God. This theme is repeated through the New Testament. Titus 2:14 reminds us that Jesus gave himself for us, "that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." In Titus 3:8 we are encouraged to do good works constantly "that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men." Paul writing to the Ephesians said in Ephesians 2:10 that we reflect the workmanship of God "created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."

Every good deed or act of benevolence we perform is like hanging out a sign that advertises the goodness of God. Our challenge is to hang out a sign with our deeds that bears witness to the goodness of the Lord.

Points of Light

George Bush, during his presidency, challenged Americans to rise and brighten the hopelessness of the national dilemma by becoming what he described as one of what he described as "a thousand points of light" helping to brighten life in the community where they live. Almost daily some citizen was noted for being a point of light. Lord Baden Powell, in forming the Boy Scouts, challenged every boy to "do a good turn daily," thus in a small way they improve the world around them.

Jesus challenges us to bring light, savor and inspiration into the world.

Hanging Out Your Sign!

What sign do you hang out for the world to see? Does it glorify God and serve as a positive example of what the love of God is all about? Some signs we displayed before we met the Lord included:

DO NOT DISTURB: It is the sign that suggests that we are unavailable to help or to serve. Too often it suggests that we are occupied with our own pursuits and get frustrated when our leisure is interrupted. In Luke 4:34 the devils that disturbed a man told Jesus to "Let us alone."

KEEP OFF PRIVATE PROPERTY: It was the sign that suggested that we considered our possessions as our own and reserved for our personal use. Our talent, time, and money were considered our private property, until we learned what 1 Corinthians 6:19-20 meant when it said "ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's."

When we came to know God we took down our old signs and started hanging some new ones:

GOING OUT OF BUSINESS: It is the sign that announced that we have turned from our worldly ways and have begun anew. Philippians 3:13-14 "forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT: It is the sign that lets the world know that we may be in the same building but things won't be the same because we are under new management. 2 Corinthians. 5:17 "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

There Must Be A Sign Post

Finally brothers and sisters we are challenged to be men and women of good works spreading light and love through the quality of our works. Each good work we do helps us to hang out a sign to the world that testifies to the greatness of our God.

When you bear the burdens of the weak, you hang out your sign!

When you help the sick and afflicted, you hang out your sign!

When you help somebody as you pass along, you hang out your sign!

If we are going to hang out a sign, we must have something to hang it on. If there's going to be a sign there must be a sign post.

The sign post holds up the sign for all every one to see

We need a signpost that is strong enough to withstand the wind and rain.

We need a signpost that is lifted high enough so that it can draw all men and women

We need a signpost that is secured with a firm foundation.

Brothers and Sisters our signpost is Jesus.

He's a signpost because, not only can he withstand the wind and rain but the wind and waves obey his will!

He's a sign because he draws all men for he said "And I if I be lifted up from the earth will I'll draw all men unto me!"

He's a signpost because he is a sure foundation.

No wonder the song writer declared "my hope is built on nothing less than Jesus' blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but holy lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!"

I talking about Jesus, the signpost, that the prodigal son saw welcoming him back home!

Jesus, the signpost, that Saul saw while riding down the Damascus road, that pointed in him a new direction

Jesus, the signpost, that the woman at the well saw and cried out come see a man!

When Jesus was born the world hung out a sign and declared there is no room!

When Jesus died on calvary they hung a sign over his head ridiculing him as the King of the Jews.

It was a sign that became a signpost!

He died and rose from the dead, but he's lifted up high for all men to see, showing them the way.

I don't know about you but I've decided that "this little light of mine, I'm going to let it shine!

Everywhere I go, I'm going to let it shine!

Let it shine!

Let it shine!

Cursed Blessings

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 7, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to heart, to give glory unto my name, saith the LORD of hosts, I will even send a curse upon you, and I will curse your blessings: yea, I have cursed them already, because ye do not lay it to heart." -Malachi 2:2 " Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith. " Gal 3:13-14

Introduction

Have you ever wished for something, received it, and once you received it, wished you didn't have it because it caused you so much trouble? That's one of those times when what should have been a blessing turned out to be a curse. Sometimes it's a car, a house, a job, or even the companion of your dreams that causes all of the trouble.

Consider the Greek Mythological character Midas. According to the Greek Legend Midas was granted one wish from the gods in return for a favor he had performed. Midas loved gold, and although he was king of Phrygia and had plenty of gold in his treasury, wanted more gold. He used his one wish from the gods to have bestowed upon him the golden touch; the ability to make gold of everything he touched. Instantly his wish was granted. He touched the cushion on his throne and it turned to gold. He touched the draperies, and furnishings and they turned to gold. He walked through the garden which was filled with hundreds of beautiful roses and touched them all and they turned to gold. Midas was fascinated with his new blessing from the gods. That evening however, he learned that his blessing was really a curse. He ordered food to eat, but as the food touched his lips, it turned to gold. He tried to drink water, but it turned to solid gold in the golden cup in his hand. His sadness was complicated more when his daughter ran into the throne room holding a golden flower and cried "father, someone has changed all the beautiful flowers in the garden to gold. They were so full of life but now they are just cold and lifeless." She ran to her father to embrace him and the moment he touched her she turned to gold. Midas, saddened, turned to the gods and asked them to take back the blessing. As his roses began to bloom again and his daughter began to breathe he learned an important lesson: blessings without an appreciation for the important matters of life can very well be a curse.

As Christians, we receive the blessings of God with humility and in obedience. The sacred trusts of time, talent and resources are blessings he has given us for our happiness and spiritual growth. However, should we choose to use what he has given us in a way that is inconsistent with his will, our blessings could very well be our curse. Let us resolve to give God our best and to keep him first in our lives. In this way we avoid the prospect of "cursed blessings."

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Malachi as he warns the people of Israel, including their religious leaders, to maintain their faithfulness to God. Malachi, often called a minor prophet, because he did not commit many of his prophecies to writing, constantly challenged Israel to remain holy before God. In Malachi the people are reprimanded several times for polluting their worship (1:7) replacing it with hypocritical acts of public crying and pronouncements that were not being received in heaven (2:13). They had even begun to use that which belonged to God for their own personal use and generally robbed God (3:8). The priests, in this text were verbally chastised for their tendency to support the people in their disrespect for the things of God.

The people were warned by God, through Malachi, that if they did not repent from their rebellious actions that he would curse them in a very unusual way. He would not take their blessings away from them and strip them to nothing, but he would simply curse their blessings. "I will send a curse upon you, and I will curse your blessings," said God in this text.

This was a different approach than that which had been taken on other occasions. Generally, when Israel sinned he stripped them of their possessions and desolated their land. A once profitable kingdom was torn into and the people were carried into slavery. Now Israel had returned to their homeland, restored the city of Jerusalem, with its worship, ritual and law. God said, their new punishment for disobeying him would not be the loss of what they had, but what they had would lose the blessings it enjoyed from God.

So they remained in Jerusalem, the worship continued, but it turned out to be a curse. The city of Jerusalem with its high walls and material wealth became a prize for conquering nations. The Greeks came and left them with the city and their ritual, but without the freedom to govern themselves. The Romans came and dominated them. The temple stood and life appeared as usual, but they were generally unhappy with their plight. The sheer beauty of Jerusalem itself had become a curse, attracting a succession of conquering nations and second-class citizenship. Truly, what was designed to be a blessing for them had become a curse. They still had material possession of the claim, but without God's sanction upon it, they were unable to enjoy it as freely and fully as before.

How does a blessing become a curse?

A blessing is a gift from God that brings peace and joy. Sometimes blessings involve physical things, at other times they involve the aesthetic. A new car, a house, clothing, jewelry, a rewarding job, are examples of a physical blessing. A creative mind, a driving spirit, and a compassionate spirit are examples of aesthetic blessings, which are real but cannot be seen.

A Blessing is only a blessing when it brings peace and joy. When either of these elements is missing, a blessing becomes less of a blessing and more of a curse. A new house is a blessing, but stops being a blessing if struggling to pay the monthly note becomes a source of confusion and pain in the home. A good job is a blessing, but it is less of a blessing if its demands rob you of peace of mind and an enjoyable spirit. A good-looking husband or wife is a blessing, but despite how well they look, they become a daily migraine if neither ceases to bring peace and joy.

Peace and joy come from God; they are not bestowed upon us by the mere possession of things. Jesus, speaking to his disciples had them to know that peace comes from belief in him and obedience to his Lordship. In John 16:33 "These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." Paul writing to the Galatians reminds us that peace and joy are a part of the "fruit of the spirit." Galatians 5:22 says "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law.

A blessing becomes a curse when it is used wrongly. The people had been given financial gifts from God but they refused to obey God and while allowing them to keep their resources, he took away the peace and joy that should have come with having it.

There are no absolute blessings or curses. Whether something is a blessing or a curse depends upon God and our relationship to him. If we are experiencing prosperity at the moment, that prosperity is not an absolute, whether we get all from what we have depends upon the quality of our relationship with God. Peace and Joy flow from the throne of heaven.

God can take cursed things and make them blessings.

Just as God can curse our blessings and make them empty at the least or work against us at the most, God can also take cursed things and turn them into blessings.

Those who consider themselves dogged by misfortune because it seems to follow them every day of their lives can get that curse turned into a blessing.

Those who feel that life is going against them every day and there is no way out, can get that curse turned into a blessing.

Those who feel trampled upon by circumstance, rejected by fortune, and cast aside by fate, can get that curse turned into a blessing.

Friends, we serve a God who specializes in turning the curses of life into blessings. Jesus said, “I come that they might have life and have it more abundantly”

Jesus came to take the curse of our:

-Tragedy and turn it into triumph!

-Defeat and turn it into victory!

-Despair and turn it into hope!

-Sadness and turn it into joy!

-Failure and turn it into success!

-Weakness and turn it into strength!

A blind man, cursed with blindness from the day of his birth, found that Jesus can change the curse darkness into a marvelous light.

A lame man, who never made a step in his life, found that Jesus can take the curse of lameness, and give a crippled soul and brand new walk.

A woman standing at the well found that Jesus could take a soul lost in sin and save it and make it whole again.

Lazarus, who died and was buried in his grave found that Jesus can take the curse of death and give a brand new life.

Jesus took the curse of the cross and changed it from a symbol of defeat to a sign of eternal triumph.

That which was once a curse is now a blessing!

The cross says to the world that there is power in the name of Jesus!

No wonder the songwriter declares, “At the cross at the cross where I first saw the law and the burden of my heart roll away. It was there by faith I received my sight and now I’m happy all the day.”

When Jesus rose on Sunday morning, the curse of death lost its sting! The curse of the grave lost its victory!

When Jesus rose from the grave the curse of weakness vanished forever; for all eternity heard him declare:

“All power is in my hands!”

“All Power”

“All power is in my hands!”

What Is That In Thine Hand?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 28, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "And the LORD said unto him, What is that in thine hand? And he said, A rod."
Exodus 4:2

Introduction

What will it take for you to be a success in life? What will you need to claim the prize that awaits you just beyond the horizon? Many of those who have succeeded in life found that they had what they needed for many years and often didn't know it. Once they discovered that they had the key all along, the rest of their story became a historical footnote.

As we study the history of our people this month, a common thread runs among many of the heroic deeds of our ancestors: they were able to use what was available to them and shape it into the materials for success.

Booker T. Washington became nationally famous for a speech he gave in Atlanta Georgia in which he urged African-Americans not to complain but to use what was available to forge a future. Included in his speech was the memorable illustration of a ship lost at sea. Mr. Washington said a ship that became lost at sea contained many sailors that were dying of thirst. Seawater was not drinkable and they were completely exhausted. As their ship drifted upon the waters, they came upon another ship that was passing by. The thirsty dying sailors sent out a signal that said, "Water, Water, send us water!" The men on the other ship sent back the message: "Cast down your buckets where you are!" The thirsty men sent back another message "Water, water, send us water" but they received the same answer again: "Cast down your bucket where you are!" Finally, after receiving the same message several times, the thirsty men let down their buckets and pulled them up. To their astonishment, they were filled with fresh water. Their ship had drifted into fresh water and while they were dying of thirst on board, there was fresh water all around them. All they needed to do was "cast down their buckets."

As a people, our history tells us that we have drifted through the bitter and salty waters of slavery, legal proscription, segregation and racism. We have survived our three hundred year drift clinging to the hope that one day we would enjoy the fresh flowing waters of justice, freedom and opportunity. Today, a generation of youth is pleading for an opportunity to succeed, literally thirsty for a chance at success. They are crying out "Opportunity, Opportunity, give us a chance!" The response echoes across the centuries: "Let down your buckets where you are!"

As Christians, we know that God has given each of us special gifts, talents, and personality traits that we can use, with his help, to grow in the faith. Christian youth who are looking for a bright future, should first look to God for help and then "let down your buckets where you are."

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as he learns how God can take weak things and make them powerful.

When God told Moses to lead the Children of Israel out of bondage, Moses was an 80 year old, former prince of Egypt who had been a shepherd for the last 40 years. Moses, looking at his situation, thought it was impossible so he began to give reasons why he could not succeed. He offered God four major excuses: 1) He said he was not important (3:11); 2) He lacked authorization (3:13); 3) He did not have the power (4:1); 4) He was not a good speaker (4:10). These four excuses formed the basis of Moses attempt to convince himself that God had chosen the wrong person.

When Moses complained of a lack of importance and authorization, God had an answer for him. God told Moses (3:12) that He would be with him in this great undertaking. Though he may have considered himself a lowly shepherd from Midian, he would be much more when the God of the universe was by his side. Even though people might question his authority, God told Moses, to simply tell them that "I Am That I Am" (Yaweh) sent him. When Moses complained that he could not speak well, God commanded his brother Aaron to talk for him.

This text focuses on how God overcame Moses' complaint of a lack of talent, power and ability. When Moses complained he would not have the power to convince Pharaoh or the people that he was from the Lord, God answered by asking him a question, "What is that in thine hand?" What Moses carried was a simple shepherd's rod, hardly any thing that could be considered a tool for the liberation of an enslaved people. However, God told Moses to take the rod, throw it down and watch it become a snake when it is on the ground and a rod when in Moses' hand. A hand that became leprous, and water that turned to blood were other signs of how God was going to use Moses to do a great work.

God's question to Moses recognized that He knew more about Moses than Moses had recognized himself.

While Moses complained about what he did not have, God looked at what he had. Moses had 1)Forty years of training in the best schools of Egypt 2)Military experience as the conquering prince of Ethiopian conquest 3)The ability to lead men 4) A Humble spirit that caused him to move at God's command. God wanted Moses to do a great work. He did not call upon him to use anything he did not already have, but simply to use what he had at his disposal.

Young America, What is That In Thine Hand?

Today there are millions of young African-Americans who are pondering their future. Some have been challenged by their parents, teachers and admirers to tackle big dreams. However, there are still some youth who are not convinced that they can do great things because they constantly focus on what they don't have rather than what they have.

Those who feel insignificant and powerless to do great things, are in Moses' dilemma. Those who complain that no one will give them a chance, or believe in them should hear God responding to Moses: "Certainly I will be with thee.." (3:12). They should hear the voice of Christ saying, "And lo, I will be with they alway." When God is with you, you can do much more than you ever expected because he takes the simple things in life and uses them for his purpose. God often takes simple, insignificant, foolish and weak things and uses them for his purpose. "But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: That no flesh should glory in his presence." 1 Corinthians 1:27-29.

What is that in thine hand? The world may laugh at the insignificance of what is in your hand, but consider what it can become when its used for God:

A Pencil-in the hands of men like Alex Haley became a tool for great writings which have shaken the world. It was only a pencil, but when touched by God it became the Autobiography of Malcom X and Roots. What is that in thine hand?

A Child's Poem-in the hands of Women like Maya Angelou became an outlet for intense and powerful ideas that have inspired our nation. It was only a poem but when touched by God it became "Still I Rise." And God raised a simple poem so high that should on the same platform as the President Bill Clinton to declare its "Morning" time. What is that in thine hand?

A Sense of humor-in the hands of men like Bill Cosby became a tool to teach and reach millions with a message of pride, brotherhood and accomplishment. It was just a sense of humor that seem stupid at the time but when blessed by God it became "Fat Albert and The Cosby Kids" and "The Cosby Show"

A Will To Run-in the hands of Wilma Rudolph became a quest to be a track champion despite polio, scarlet fever pneumonia and legs strapped in braces. However, her crippled legs when touched by the hand of God were healed and she rose to win three gold medals in the Rome Olympics.

What is that in thy hand? For Malcom Jamal Warner it was a television script. For Sugar Ray Leonard it was a boxing glove. For Micheal Jordan it was a basketball. For Whitney Houston it was a silky sensuous voice.

Youth of America, what is that in thy hand? God has great things in store for those who will trust him to take the little that they have and turn it into fulfilled dreams.

Touched by the Master's Hand

Finally, every child of God should remember that successful service in the kingdom of God does not depend on what you have in your hands, but whether or not your hands are in God's hand.

When your hands are in God's hands the impossible becomes possible; the improbable becomes probable and the unthinkable becomes thinkable.

When your hands are in God's hand there is no limit to what you can do and to how far you can go! "But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." 1 Corinthians 2:9

Consider the drunk who searched the garbage for a taste of wine and found what he believed was an old fiddle. "It's nothing but an old fiddle" he thought and tossed it aside. A second scavenger came and found the old fiddle, he tried to play it but he got was screeches and scratches and he threw it away because it had no value. A third scavenger sold the fiddle to an antique store whereupon a great violinist happened upon it. The violinist tuned its strings and gently rubbed the bow them. Out came the finest sound, much to the amazement of all. As the violinist bought the fiddle and walked out of the door, the owner remarked "it was just an old fiddle, until it was touched by the master's hand."

Brothers and sisters, it is not important what you have in your hands. However it is important that what you have has been touched by the master's hand.

It does not matter that you only have a little with which to work. It does matter that you let God work with what you have for his service.

When you've been touched by the master's hand, nothing can stand in your way! Feel free to dream the impossible dream! Fight the unbeatable foe!

I heard the song writer declare: "He touched me! He touched! And oh the joy the floods my soul. Something happened and now I know, he touched me and made me whole!"

He touched me, and sadness turned to joy!

He touched me, and failure turned to success!

He touched me, and defeat turned into victory!

He touched me...

..and now I am no longer the same!

A Good Looking Man

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 21, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"But in all Israel there was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty: from the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him. — 2 Samuel 14:25

Introduction

There are many women today who spend a tremendous amount of time looking for a man. What are they looking for? Depending on the person asked, what women are looking for varies. Some are looking for a man that is dependable, hard working and honest. Others are searching for a Romeo who has talent, charm and a romantic flair. Still others are looking for someone with money and can offer them a ticket to the easy life.

One common characteristic that all women seem to want in a man is one that is "good looking." At the least, they want him to have a pleasant physical appearance. Bulging muscles, a broad chest, soft clean hair, dreamy eyes, sensuous lips are physical attributes that fall on most want lists. Every woman has her own definition of a good looking man: Tall, short, stout, or slinky.

What makes a man look good? Clothes? Car? Jewelry? Hairstyle? No one can deny that a fine set of tailored or designer clothes, expensive jewelry and a sleek hair cut actually enhance a man's appearance, but they don't make him a good man, only a good looking man. A good looking man has an attractive outer appearance which may or may not be equaled by an attractive character. Some of the best looking men in history were good looking, but inside they were sinister and evil. The old saying, "never judge a book by its cover" might well apply to the search for a good man.

When God looks for a good man he doesn't judge by the appearance. In picking a king for Israel he rejected the tall good looking brothers of David and chose the younger, smaller and "ruddy" shepherd boy to be king. Why? The scripture says man judges on the outward appearance, but God judges from the heart.

So it is when God searches for a good man to stand with him, he looks at the heart.

As Christians, we should always be mindful that God is not impressed with our clothing, jewelry or ornaments. These only enhance our appearance. God evaluates us by the content of our character, which cannot be changed by what we wear. When he looks for a good man or woman to serve in the kingdom of God, he starts by looking for a heart that "is" good rather than a face that only "looks good."

Exposition

This text focuses on Absalom, the third son of King David. It gives a striking example of a man with the beauty of presence without the added dimension of beauty of spirit.

Absalom is described in scripture as a man whose beauty had no equal in Israel. He has been described as being tall of statue, with long flowing hair which he cut only rarely. His hair was so long that when cut it weighed over three pounds. Absalom had the unique gift of personal charisma. However, his character came into focus as he reacted to the rape of his half sister by his brother Amnon. Absalom brooded with anger for nearly two years. One day, at a banquet, he rose from his seat and cut his brother's throat in full view of all the guests. He fled to Gershur in Aram for three years and then returned to Jerusalem to make up with his father only to talk against him for four years.

Finally, Absalom led a rebellion against his father in hopes of making himself king. Despite Absalom's rebellion, King David refused to lift a finger against his son, hoping that he would have a change of heart. When he heard that Absalom's forces were coming to storm Jerusalem, David even left the city rather than fight his son. Absalom and his army caught up with David in the woods of Ephraim and it became apparent that while Absalom had a beauty of presence that could attract crowds, he did not have military skills because there in the woods the generals of King David defeated his powerful army. As Absalom fled for his life, his head became entangled in the fork of a tree limb and he hung literally by his hair, dangling in the air. Alone and defenseless, the generals of King David, killed him as he dangled by his hair.

Absalom was killed by arrows of soldiers that day in the field, but he was killed by his own looks, many years earlier.

What It Takes To Look Good

Eddie Murphy in the Movie "48 Hours" played a character that was a criminal and a hustler who made it a habit to dress impeccably and to drive fancy cars. When called to task about the apparent conflict between his lifestyle and his dress, Murphy's character responded, "Yeah but I looks good!" Typically, there are many today, both men and women that are fascinated with "looking good" for their friends, regardless of whether or not it is a reflection of their true character.

Ideally, what we see on the outside should be a reflection of our character, values and status in life. Many of us work hard to acquire the symbols of success rather than success itself. Having the symbols without the substance is the tragedy of the man obsessed with "looking good." It suggests a distorted value system that puts more emphasis on the superficial than the real. Many men (and women) spend disproportionate amounts of time trying to look good rather than "be" good.

What good is it to buy a Porsche, one of the ultimate symbols of financial success, and then park it in front of a shotgun rent house every night? What good is it to wear designer clothes on top of dollar store personalities? Too many people forget that clothes, jewelry and fine cars don't make the man, they only enhance inner qualities.

Absalom had the works. Being the king's son he had money, clothes, popularity and an appearance that was unequaled in all the land. Absalom had looks but he did not have "the look." What is "the look" that measures a real man? The look that God searches for in every man is on the inside, not on the outside, because God searches the heart.

What God looks for can't be seen by the human eye, but it can be discovered given time. Consider the case of Bertha Mae who was the prettiest girl in the neighborhood who married the ugliest man in the neighborhood. All the women laughed at Bertha Mae and said she had a paper sack husband; because he was so ugly that he needed to keep a paper sack over his head. They would often shake their heads and say "what a waste." After many years one neighbor asked Bertha Mae why she married the ugliest man in the neighborhood. Bertha said "At first he turned me off. Then I learned that he was gentle. I liked that. In time I learned that he worked hard, and saved his money. I liked that. I also learned that he lived clean, was honest and faithful and that he loves me. I liked that. While I have seen some good looking men in my time, none of them looked as good on the inside as he does. "The more I got to know him, the better he looked." Bertha turned with a look of confidence in her eye and said, "I don't care what other people say; he's a good looking man!"

What It Takes To Look Good To God

Good looks without the love of God is nothing!

The best looking man is but an empty shell if the love of God is not in his heart.

Samson was a good looking man who not only had good looks, and long flowing hair, but he had rippling muscles, and a body that could not be matched anywhere in the world. Yet one morning, as he lay on Delilah's lap with his hair freshly cut, he awoke to find that he still had his looks on the outside but the power of God, which moved on the inside of him, was gone. Good looks without the Lord is nothing.

Solomon was a good looking man who found that though he had 300 wives and 700 concubines that it was all "vanity" without the Lord. He resolved that what really counts and makes one beautiful is obedience to God. "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." Ecclesiastes 12:13

Men and women who want to look good to God must present themselves with a clean heart. No wonder David declares: "Create in me oh God a clean heart and renew a right spirit within me." Psalm 51:10

How do you tell a good looking man?

Watch his eyes. Don't look at their color or size, but watch where they look. David declared, “I’ll lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth.”

Watch his lips. Not their size or shape, but what comes out of them. For Psalm 51:15 declares, “O Lord, open thou my lips; and my mouth shall show forth thy praise.

Watch his hands. Don’t look at their size, but watch what they do. The man who looks good to God declares, “Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know, if thou withdraw thyself from me, oh whether shall I go?”

Watch his feet. Don’t look at his shoe size but watch where he goes. Psalm 37:23 says, “The steps of a good man are ordered by the LORD: and he delighteth in his way.”

Watch his knees. A man with strong knees is a praying man. He believes that when things are difficult “just a little talk with Jesus makes it right.”

Watch what he wears. Don’t consider the fine jewelry and designer clothes on his back. Don’t consider the golden cross that he wears. For it’s not the cross that he wears, but the cross that he bears that makes the man.

Jesus said any man who is willing should deny himself, pick up his cross and “follow me.”

A good looking man is a man that is willing to follow Jesus!

If we follow Jesus, he’ll lead us beyond the problems of this world into his marvelous light!

Follow Jesus! Take no chance in getting lost!

If Jesus can’t take you to the top, there’s nobody else who can!

A Freedom That Lasts

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 14, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." John 8:36

Introduction

When will we really be free? That question has been asked by oppressed people throughout the ages. African-Americans have also been asking the same question of our creator, "Lord, when will we be free?" Our heroes and champions have kept us looking to the day when we will be able to stand and universally declare that we are truly liberated with a lasting freedom.

The African-American experience is uniquely similar to that of the Old Testament Jews. Our struggle for freedom and independence, as well as our subsequent meanderings has closely paralleled that of the ancient Hebrews. What biblical history has revealed is that the Jews thought they would be free if they could escape the chains and shackles of slavery in Egypt. Real freedom for them meant to leave Egypt and to enter a new era where they would have an opportunity to enjoy the good life. Externally the oppressor was Egypt, which they saw as the cause of their bondage. In the wilderness, Moses came down from Mt. Sinai with 10 commandments that would set the tone of their morality, which would help them fight an even more powerful oppressor, the internal forces with the potential to destroy them with moral decadence. Largely, the Jews embraced the call to fight oppression externally, but often failed to acknowledge the need to defeat the enemy within. Once, in the Promised Land, they soon found themselves enslaved again, not by one oppressor but by a series of oppressors that dominated them. In Egypt, they found freedom but it was not a freedom that lasted very long.

African-Americans have a similar story. For generations our main quest was to free ourselves from external slavery. Our leaders, including Frederick Douglass, Sojourner Truth, Nat Turner, Harriet Tubman and others fought against a system that legalized slavery. To many of us freedom meant the ability to walk out of Egypt. Like the Jews however, we soon found that though the chains were gone, still we were constantly facing the risk of re-enslavement. On one hand, our enemies were seeking to re-enslave us by political disenfranchisement, social segregation and economic deprivation. On the other hand we, like the Jews, strayed away from the God who delivered us, and began to deteriorate internally, thus re-enslaving ourselves. On January 1, 1863 we were freed from slavery. However, the years since have proven that it has not been a freedom that was lasting.

As Christians of African-American descent, we have come to learn that we will never truly be free until both the external and internal vestiges of slavery are abolished. To this end, we look to Jesus, the source of our faith and hope. In Jesus, there is neither physical or spiritual slavery nor the desire to enslave. In Jesus, Satan is defeated and true freedom exists. As more people turn to Jesus, the propensity for slavery is diminished and the day is quickened when all humanity will be able to sing with new meaning "Free at Last, Free At Last, thank God almighty, I'm Free At Last."

Exposition

This Text focuses on Jesus as he explains to the Jews the nature of real freedom. He explained to them that his ministry on earth sought to show them how to free themselves from their servitude to the law and its ritual. In verse 32, he noted that those who believe the truths he taught would be truly free of the influences of sin and spiritual death.

The Jews, hearing Christ speak about being truly free told him that they were descendants of Abraham and "were never in bondage to any man, how sayest thou, ye shall be made free?" (v33). The fact that the Jews considered themselves free was a part of their problem. Even at the moment, they spoke they were a conquered people, living under Roman authority. In their history, they had been taken into bondage and slavery by the Egyptians, Philistines, Midianites, Ammonites, Assyrians, Babylonians, Persians and the Greeks. Nationally they had a long history of periods of slavery and short periods of freedom and subsequent returns to bondage. After leaving Egypt and making a covenant with God in the wilderness, all of the times that they were re-enslaved were directly related to their return to sinful lifestyles.

In the book of Judges alone the Jews were enslaved seven different times, enjoying moments of freedom and then periods of slavery that ranged between eight years and 40 years each. Sprinkled throughout the Book of Judges is the cause of their repeated bondage: "And the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the Lord..." (6:1,10:6;13:1) They were free and then re-enslaved in an endless cycle that began in Egypt and continued to the moment they spoke to Christ. Yet, standing face to face with the master they lied about their present and past condition saying "we have never been in bondage to any man?"

Even though the statement they made was far from the truth, Christ ignored it and gave the definition of spiritual servitude: "Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin."(v34). The cause of the repeated troubles of the Jews was their tendency to do "evil in the sight of the Lord." Enslavement to sin kept them individually and collectively committed to a way of life that would keep them in bondage. Jesus noted that those that believe on him would be set free from sin and would be truly free.

History of Recurring Enslavement

If the experience of the Jews of the Old Testament were types of the African-American experience, then their attitudes about freedom in the New Testament must also be typical.

We have had a history of recurring enslavement. Once freed from slavery in America, we found that we were free but yet we were still enslaved. We were re-enslaved by ignorance. Unable to read and write, without cultural graces, and vocational training, with few exceptions, we were re-enslaved. Share croppers worked for years only to find that at the end of every year, they still owed their souls to the general store. There rose from among our ranks one Booker T. Washington who challenged us to train our hands, work hard, and be honest and formed a school at Tuskegee that the African-American ex-slave might rise from his own dust and become a truly free man.

As we found ourselves rising from cotton fields and enjoying new freedoms the case of Plessy vs Fergurson in New Orleans would make new laws in America that legalized segregation when the Supreme Court in 1896 agreed that "Separate but equal" facilities was the law of the land. We were re-enslaved to a second class status that meant colored schools, colored waiting rooms, and colored facilities that were everything but equal. Some among us like Marcus Garvey, said "let's leave America" and go back to Africa to be free. Others like Daddy Grace and Father Divine and Elijah Muhammad turned to religious cults as a response. But from among the ranks of disillusioned came men of the caliber of Roy Wilkins of the NAACP and Thurgood Marshall who challenged the law in 1954 and broke the legal hold of segregation on America. Once again we thought we were free at last. Some thought the 1954 decision gave us freedom but others said, we are not truly free.

Young Martin Luther King joined coalitions of African-American leaders such as A. Phillip Randolph and others to push for passage of civil rights law and a voting rights act that would give us freedom in the eyes of the law. King pushed with crusade tenacity pointing to the day when we would be free at last. In 1964-65, the Civil Rights and Voting Rights Acts were passed respectively. Yet we still were not free.

We registered to vote in large numbers and elected African-Americans to public office as mayors of big cities, judges, and thousands of local officials in our struggle to get free. We even made serious bids for the presidency, broke through barriers in corporate America, integrated formally all-white neighborhoods, corner shops and space ships.

Today, like the Jews, there is a generation that believes the struggle has ended and we are truly free. Some ignorant of the past, claim never to have been in bondage at the most and brush aside the impact of their bondage at the least. They are in a pitiful estate because they don't even know the nature of their enslavement.

We have been exposed to moments of freedom, but our history has proven that none of our experiences have given us a freedom that lasts.

Our quest is to be free at last, but first we must secure a freedom that lasts!

A Freedom that lasts

Today there is only one hope for a freedom that is truly free! That hope is in Jesus.

True freedom comes when all of mankind accepts the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

True Freedom can come only when the world turns to Jesus.

When Jesus reigns as the supreme Lord, freedom bells will ring for "at the name of Jesus, every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess." He will bring a freedom that lasts!

I heard Jesus declare in Luke 4:18, "The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised.." Jesus came to bring us a freedom that lasts!

The sting of slavery may linger for a while, but the freedom found in the love of God will continue forever, because it's a freedom that lasts!

The nauseating stench of racial prejudice may pollute our times, but the sweet smell of a God who is no respecter persons will free us forever, because it's a freedom that lasts!

To secure our freedom many have given of themselves, but to secure the freedom that lasts Jesus laid down his life and picked it up again.

He died out on Calvary and rose in triumph with freedom in his hands!

Those who want to sing "Free at last" with a new meaning should get to know Jesus and get a freedom that lasts!

Reclaiming The Missing 5th

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 7, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"Now when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, Yet lackest thou one thing: sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, follow me." Luke 18:22

Introduction

Do you ever get the feeling that, as a race, something is missing in the social and moral fabric of African-America? In our homes, our community, and spiritual life, as a people, is there something missing? Is it possible that we are struggling on the social order because something is missing? Is it possible that we are struggling on the moral order because something is missing? If so, what happened? We, who formed the cradle of civilization and introduced into the world the marvels of the pyramids, science and technology; we, who once sprang forth from God fearing homes, raising high our hopes while bowing low before our Lord, are missing the crucial elements that have contributed to our past success. If we are missing something, what happened to it? We either lost those elements crucial to our survival or someone stole them from us. At any rate, we must reclaim the missing elements that help us to truly be free men and women.

Some things were taken from us. We were stripped from our motherland and brought to America as slaves. The U.S. constitution in 1787 indelibly inscribed our fate into history, stating that we were only three fifths of a man in the eyes of the law. Since that time we have spent generations trying to reclaim the missing fifths. With the passage of the 14th amendment, the 1964 Civil Rights Act, the Voting Rights Act of 1965 and the election of thousands of African-Americans to posts across the nation, it has become obvious to many that we have reclaimed one of the missing fifths, our legal status as American citizens.

While our legal status was taken from us and we have worked hard to reclaim it, there is a fifth estate, which was not been taken from us, but we have lost on our own. This fifth estate relates to our love of God and the family of man. It is the moral order. Though our rights were taken from us and we were trampled under foot, we never let go of our love of God. Though beaten and hung from trees, sprayed with water hoses and thrown in dingy jail cells we never let go of our love of God. However, in recent times it appears that what generations of slavery and persecution could not take from us, we are losing, little by little.

As Christians, our struggle is to work to help the lost know that our salvation will come when we acknowledge and accept Jesus as our Lord and follow him from day to day. It is through Jesus and the truth of his being that we can truly expect to be free men and women.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he encounters the rich young ruler. This young man had spent the entirety of his life striving to meet the demands of the Mosaic law with its moral laws and hundreds of social, health, ethical rules as well. Jesus had raised the curiosity of many as he spoke about the kingdom of heaven and the prerequisites for life in its realm. The young ruler wanted to know what it took to measure up to the kingdom's requirements.

Jesus began with the obvious: Do you obey the law of the land? He listed five of the ten commandments as examples of the mosaic law to which he referred: "Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Honour thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." (v20).The young ruler responded that he had obeyed the law since he was a child and felt that he measured up to any standard that Christ might set. He boldly asked what more is required of him to meet the savior's requirement.

Jesus told them there was still one thing missing out of his life. To become a part of the body of Christ it would be necessary for him to humbly follow Christ in blind obedience to his word. Jesus said it bluntly, "Yet lackest thou one thing:" The ruler had every thing necessary except for one missing element. Complete and total obedience to the word of God. The test was in the command to "sell all you have and, give to the poor." We know it was a test because poverty is not a criterion for discipleship. Christ does not require us to be poor to be Christians. In fact, he wants just the opposite because he said, "I came that they might have life and have it more abundantly." When Jesus said blessed are the poor in spirit, he didn't mean blessed are those who are poor in their pocketbooks. In reference to the rich he noted he would be hard for many to enter kingdom because they trust in their riches. Further emphasizing that there is no ban on possessions among Christians, Paul in 1 Tim 6:17-19 said, "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life.

When Jesus gave the command to sell all and distribute to the poor it was a test of whether or not he would put obedience to God before anything else. Faced with a choice between following Christ and his material possessions, the ruler chose the latter and missed his chance to make heaven his home. He left Jesus with his head down. He had all of the pieces necessary for the abundant life, except the companionship of the almighty God.

One Thing Missing

The quest of African-Americans has been to reclaim that which was taken from us through years of slavery, and segregation. Legally we have reclaimed one of the missing fifths that have stripped us of citizenship. Most of us, with a few exceptions, are doing better now than we have been in the past. Very few of us still go to the outhouse or keep slop jars by our bed side. Very few of us ride in mule drawn wagons, or swat mosquitoes with smoke from burning rags while sitting on the garrett on hot summer nights. We have achieved a level of prosperity that has become so dangerous for us that the pursuit has become the sum total of our interest.

Our zest for conspicuous consumption has too often resulted in a shift in our priorities. To get more, have more and live more comfortably, many of us have joined the ranks of millions who have put treasures of this world before our love of God. Is it possible that in our zeal to get more, that our desire for the things of God has diminished? Is it possible that we are putting more trust in our jobs, the courts, and our investments than we do in God. Is it possible that in all of our accomplishments as a people that there is still one thing missing?

We have made great strides in reclaiming our legal rights, but what about that last missing piece, our obedience and allegiance to God? Rising crime, suggests that there is an increase in persons willing to disobey God to get what they want. Murder, robbery, illegal drugs, and prostitution are growing among us at epidemic rates. Violence is increasing. Husbands are beating their wives, children are being abused, and even at school, teachers are becoming jail keepers just to have a few moments to give a few words to the wise. It is becoming painfully obvious that there is something missing.

Despite our great accomplishments as a people there is still something missing.

We have African Americans on the Supreme Court. We surround and advise the president, make decisions in corporate America, command the armies of the nation and soar into space, but there is still something missing.

We Must Trust The Lord

Three fifths of our quest has been to gain acknowledgement as human beings. One fifth of our quest has been to gain equal opportunity under the law. With four fifths in hand, however, it is extremely important that we don't neglect the last estate. We won't ever truly be free until we know and trust the Lord.

Jesus told the rich young ruler "one thing thou lackest...come and follow me."

Today, more than ever, we need to reclaim that which many of us have lost along the road to freedom and prosperity. Despite our troubles, we have always put our trust in God, we should reclaim that lost faith.

When the master's whip slashed across our backs we sang, "I will trust in the Lord until I die."

When the depression dropped the nation to its knees and the rich and powerful committed suicide, we kept on singing, "I know the Lord will make a way somehow!"

When war troubled the land and fear spread everywhere we kept singing, "I'm so glad that trouble don't last always."

If we have learned anything from our historical journey it should be that our God is able to deliver us! If we trust him, he will provide!

God will take our pain and turn it into pleasure.

God will take our doubts and turn them into assurances.

God will take our failures and turn them into successes.

God will take our sadness and turn it into joy.

No matter where our journey takes us we need to trust in the Lord. Job said, "Yea though he slay me, yet will I trust him."

We made it through trouble times, when were not recognized as human beings because we trusted in the Lord.

We made in through dangerous times, when we had no rights of citizenship, because we trusted in the Lord.

If our history teaches us anything it should be that we need to keep telling the story..of how Jesus..

—The Lily of the Valley

—The Bright and morning star

—The Fairest of 10,000

...died for our sins and rose early on Sunday morning

I don't know about you, but I've decided that come what may, from day to day, I will trust in God. Wherever I may be, out on the land or on the raging sea.

Though billows roll, he keeps my soul

My heavenly father watches over me!

Caught Between A Rock And A Hard Place

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 7, 1980

SCRIPTURE:"And between the passages, by which Jonathan sought to go over unto the Philistines' garrison, there was a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side: and the name of the one was Bozez, and the name of the other Seneh." — 1 Samuel 14:4

Introduction

Have you ever had to make a decision in a tough situation? A tough decision is one made in the midst of a dilemma where you are surrounded with adversity on all sides and crucial choices must be made. Deciding what to do comes easy for some, but for others it is a difficult situation.

Consider the Farmer who hired a man to work. The man was young and strong and appeared quite able to handle any chore that he was given. First, the farmer assigned him to paint the barn, a job he thought would take about three days. To his amazement, the hired man finished the work in one day. The next day he asked his worker to cut a pile of wood and store it for use in the woodshed. It was a large pile, so he assumed that the job would take at least four days to complete. However, the worker, completed this job too in just one day. Finally, the farmer presented the worker with a pile of potatoes and told him to sort them into three stacks. In one stack he wanted those that could be used as seed potatoes and replanted in the field. The second pile should consist of those that were good enough to be sold in the market. The third stack was to consist of those that were not fit for seeds, or to be sold, but could only be fed to the hogs. The farmer figured this task should take a few hours, especially since his new worker was so quick on the job. However, at sundown the farmer returned and not a single potato had been separated. Instead of three piles, there was still only one large pile of unsorted spuds. The farmer was baffled. This was the worker who painted the barn in one day and did four days wood cutting work in one, but yet he had not sorted the potatoes by the end of the day. When he asked the worker the reason, his stumped worker responded: "I can work hard and fast and do anything that I am told. I'm sorry sir, but I can't do anything if I have to make a decision." Likewise, many people have considerable trouble making a decision.

The bible presents us with many examples of people who had to make great decisions, some were good and some were bad ones, but yet they had to make them. Adam and Eve decided to disobey God and brought sin into the world. Jesus decided to obey God's plan of salvation and went to Calvary to bring salvation to all who would accept him.

As Christians, we are often called upon to make decisions. At times, we feel as if either choice we make will be insufficient. It's like being caught between a rock and a hard place. In such situations, we have learned that the best decisions are those we make after we let God guide us in the decision making. When caught between a rock and a hard place we have found that the best way out is to "lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth."

Exposition

This text focuses on Jonathan, the son of King Saul, as he finds himself between a rock and a hard place trying to free Israel from its oppressors.

The new nation of Israel was constantly at risk of invasion or was the subject of invasion by outside enemies. Chief among its enemies were the Philistines. At the time of this text, the Philistines were the conquering forces in Israel. The swords and spears of the people had been taken from them. All Blacksmiths had been removed from the land to prevent them from making swords and spears to wage war against the Philistines. Very few in Israel had weapons, including the soldiers in King Saul's armies. As the Philistines pressed the people of Israel on every side, King Saul stood powerless with 600 of his weaponless soldiers. According to this text, the only person in this group that had a sword was Jonathan, the king's son.

When a Philistine scouting patrol was spotted on a mountainside, Jonathan considered their vulnerable estate and decided that even though he had only one sword that he would take on the entire garrison of Philistine soldiers. With his amour bearer at his side, he began to climb the rugged terrain to the Philistine camp. He soon found himself in a physical strait that was symbolic of his political position: either way he turned in his climb to the top there was a hard rock on both sides. It was the same dilemma he faced in reality; death at the hands of his enemies at the top, or death at the hand of his enemies at the bottom. He was between a rock and a hard place. Faced with that choice, Jonathan chose to go up. Once on the mountain top he took on the Philistines single handedly, slew 20 men himself, and sent the others running in a panic. He was in a peculiar and awkward position, but he chose to go forward in faith and God rewarded him with the victory.

Double Adversity is Hard To Handle

There are many today who are quite capable of handling adversity..as long as problems come one at time. One problem at a time, makes problem solvers out of many. However, many do not fare very well when problems come from all sides and plummet us with a rapidity that is mind-boggling.

Double density problems are mind-boggling. The man that is working hard to deal with financial misfortune in his family has a big problem. He is trying to find a source of income to maintain his family and is trying to stay economically alive. It is extremely difficult when that problem is compounded by another major problem at the same time, such as ill health, which complicates matters even worse..

The woman that suffers sex discrimination in the work place and is persecuted outside her home has a major problem. At work, she has to fight to maintain her respect and keep the forces of institutionalized sexism from diminishing her worth as a human being. However, if at the same time that she is fighting battles outside of her family she has to come home and fight battles in her family or with her family, the situation is made even worse.

Add to situations similar to these: failure and death, and there is a mixture of situations that many people find impossible to handle. Some give up. Some take their own lives. Some drag alone in awe.

In such situations, we are undoubtedly between a rock and a hard place. What we should do when caught with double density adversity coming from every side, is follow Jonathan's example: when he couldn't go to the left or right because rocks were on every side, he chose to go up. Likewise, we should go up into the consolation of God.

Some Have Climbed Down

Even the best people on occasion were not able to make strong decisions when they were caught between rock and a hard place.

David, when caught between the possible public scorn of a king that had committed adultery and the wrath of God climbed down to murder and killed Uriah.

Peter faced with the apparent destruction of the cause of Christianity and his own possible persecution, climbed down and disowned Christ three times before the cock crowed

Aaron faced with the disappearance of Moses into the top of a mountain for 40 days and the cries of the people for a god they could see, climbed down and helped them with their ungodly acts.

There are many when caught between a rock and a hard place choose to do the wrong thing as the right choice. Instead of climbing up they climbed down.

Some have climbed up

While some falter when caught in tough situations, others have decided to climb up.

When faced with the tough decision about leading the people, Moses climbed up into the mountains to talk with God, and God spoke to him and showed him the way.

Abraham, a man of great faith, took God at his word that his family would be blessed and would multiply and went up into God's will.

Daniel refused to be intimidated by the prospect of hungry lions and went up into God's protection.

The Hebrew Boys faced with death in a fiery furnace or eternal shame before God chose to go up into God's perseverance.

These men, when caught between a rock and hard place, with no place to turn, decided it was best for them to go up to God.

When we go up to God, he will show us the way!

When we go up to God, he will take our:

—Questions and give us answers!

—Problems and give us solutions!

—Indecisiveness and give us decisions!

—Rough places and make them plain!

—Mountains and turn them into molehills

I don't know about you, but I am convinced that no matter what the problems, God has a solution!

No matter how big the battle, God has a victory!

No matter how wide the chasm, God can help us to cross it!

No matter how big the adversary, God can help us to defeat him!

We serve a God who takes hollows out valleys and levels mountains!

We serve a savior who walks on water, floats on clouds and sits on the right hand of God.

When in distress, just call him.

Remember, God is still on the throne!

After the Rain
The Son Will Shine

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 23, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the LORD: his going forth is prepared as the morning; and he shall come unto us as the rain, as the latter and former rain unto the earth." — Hosea 6:3 (KJV) Be patient, then, brothers, until the Lord's coming. See how the farmer waits for the land to yield its valuable crop and how patient he is for the autumn and spring rains. You too, be patient and stand firm, because the Lord's coming is near.— James 5:7-8 (NIV)

Introduction

How do you feel when the rain comes? These are the times in your life when your greatest plans are dashed, hopes are suspended and anticipation wanes. These are also times when activity is interrupted, progress ceases and life marks time and anxiously waits. What do you do when the rain comes?

Consider the townspeople of a certain village who were devastated by a lengthy thunderstorm that went on for days. After the first day the waters had risen and their crops were flooded. After the second day the river overflowed its banks and waters crept up the steps of their homes, took possession of their valuables and carried them floating atop the currents. By the third day the townspeople were in sheer panic, everything they had was gone and it seemed as though all their life work fruitless and wasted, washed away with the torrents of rain.

As the townspeople assembled atop of the one single hill that was not covered with water and saw only the rooftops of what was once a beautiful valley, the minister of the village stood holding his bible in his hand, which was the only thing he was able to salvage from the storm. The people mourned and cried out and one woman came to minister with a water drenched faced looking for a word of hope from the aging preacher, who only stood and watched the waters. "Tell us man of God, what shall we do?" The elderly man of God looked at their faces, drained of hope or faith and said, "After the rain ..the sun will shine!" And he continued to look at the waters. That day the rain ceased, the clouds dispersed and the warming waters of the sun began to shine again. As they began to clean up one of the neighbors came to minister and said, "Thanks preacher, for reminding us that despite the rain, God is still in control.

The troubles of life vary from failure and defeat to sickness and death. When they come, sometimes it is hard for us to see our way out and we wonder whether we will survive. Storms, no matter how strong only last for a little while and they too will pass.

As Christians, we pride ourselves in our faith in God. We know that into every life a little rain must fall and sad moments will dampen our day. However, those who know the Lord have one great reason for hope ..."after the rain, no matter how great or devastation is...the sun will shine!"

Exposition

These text verses focus on instances when people of God have been told to hold firm in their faith in God, despite the rains and storms of life.

Hosea was a prophet whose message was directed toward the 10 tribes of the Northern Kingdom. About 200 years before Hosea arrived on the scene the people had broken from the two tribes of the South and formed their own, separate nation. In their new nation, Israel underwent a dark period in its history. In was gloomy, misty and hidden from the promising sunshine of God's love and favor. Hosea came with a message to the faithful who remained among the nation of Israel that despite the rains of the spring and autumn, the sun would shine again on Israel as a nation. His coming forth is as sure as the sunrise in the morning and a new and brighter day was promised.

Similarly, James in the New Testament writes a word of encouragement to the faithful. The faithful were experiencing hard and difficult times. They were being oppressed by hard economic times, persecuted as believers and it became hard for them to see the light. James rose to remind the faithful not to lose faith in God when frustrating and difficult times come, but to be patient and faithful. Just as the farmer endures both the rains of the spring and autumn with full knowledge that the harvest will be great, every Christian is encouraged to look beyond the rains of this life to the bright promise given to us by Christ our Lord.

The promise for Old Testament believers is symbolized by God's promise to Noah after 40 days and nights of rain and flooding. God promised the world that he would never destroy it again by water and gave his rainbow as a sign of remembrance. The message of the rainbow is quite simple: "If the rain has brought you low, don't give up hope, remember the rainbow!" Even today, following every rain shower, when the sun appears, the rainbow makes its appearance as well.

Together, these old and New Testament examples show how God urged people of old and Christians today to keep the faith, despite set backs and difficulties, storms and rains. The faithful of the Old Testament were promised that they would once again see the light of God.

The faithful under the new covenant are given an even stronger reminder. That when the frustrations of this life flood our souls like great rivers of despair that we should remember that after the rain the "SON" will shine.

Rainy Seasons Expected

Today, just as in biblical times, we should expect and prepare for rainy seasons. In Palestine, there were two rainy seasons: the early rains of October and the latter rains of March. Between autumn and spring the Jews expected the rain to fall in large quantities and prepared themselves for its coming. The winter rains often brought thunder and lightning, strong winds that toppled houses and caused destruction. However, knowing how God operates they prepared themselves. Jesus told his followers to become doers of the word for by so doing they would build for themselves houses built upon strong foundations that would be able to stand when the rains came. Hosea, in this text verse, suggests that those who know the Lord know how to respond when the latter and former rains come, for they know that after the rains have passed, the sun will shine again.

Every Christian family knows and expects life's rainy seasons. Sometimes it is represented by personal struggle, economic survival and sometimes it is the presence of sickness and death that paints blue skies grey. Families that have enjoyed the sunshine of life, experienced its moments of renewal, joy and happiness, know about the goodness of God. Many of the fondest memories held are from these happy days when youth abounded and health was without measure. But just as each family has its days of sunshine; it also should expect its rainy season, a period of crises, death, and sadness.

The Christian's response to these moments when they come, reflects his or her faith that God's love for us has not been diminished by the circumstance of death. Faithful patience will prove that even though the lightning flashes and the thunder rolls and the rain pours ...after the rain, the sun will shine again.

This faith is evidenced by the Christian family's resolve to be still until the storm is passed. In the not so distant past, many families had the habit of stopping all activities when it rained. Mirrors were covered, children stopped playing and whole families sat quietly waiting for "God to finish his work." Though they sat still in the storm, each knew the sun would shine again. In the crises' of life, we should also resolve to be still and humble ourselves before God, confident that he has not abandoned us.

When the storms of life begin to rage the Christian responds "my soul is anchored in the Lord" as we trust in his word. His word reminds us that after the rain, the sun will shine again.

When the rains come, we remember Romans 8:28 that "all things work to the good for them that love God."

When the rains have fallen for a long time and we have become weak; we are strengthened when we remember that God said "my grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness"

When the rains come, we remember that even in death Romans 8:37 still remains true: "in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."

When the rains come and the storms rise, it is important for every Christian family to have Jesus on board. When his disciples were traveling by boat, Matthew 4:37 says a storm of wind and rain broke out. Many began to panic and lose heart because of the fierceness of the storm and pounding of the rain. After awakening the savior he stood and spoke to wind and the rain saying "peace be still."

As long as Jesus is on board, we have the assurance that no matter how rough the storm, the sun will shine again!

Even death, whose sting seems eternal and the grave whose victory seems final, lose their power in face of the savior for he asks: O death, where is thy sting? O Grave where is thy victory?

Even in death, those who keep the faith, know that the sun will shine again!

Today the rain paints a trail of tears on our soul, but after the rain, the sun will shine!

Today the rain burdens our hearts makes our souls heavy, but after the rain, the sun will shine.

After the rain, storms will pass and crying days will end

After the rain, sadness will fade and storms will subside

After the rain, the SON will shine!

When the Son of God shines hope is renewed!

When the Son of God shines faith is revived!

When the Son of God shines Happiness is restored and joy will never end!

Storms may rise, strong winds may blow, the rains may come, but I am persuaded that nothing shall separate me from the love of God which is in Jesus Christ because..

...After the rain, the SON will shine again!

The Black Father's Burden

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 21, 1981

SCRIPTURE:"And the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate, and wept: and as he went, thus he said, O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son! 2 Sam 18:33 A son honoureth his father, and a servant his master: if then I be a father, where is mine honour? and if I be a master, where is my fear? saith the LORD of hosts unto you, O priests, that despise my name. And ye say, Wherein have we despised thy name? Mal 1:6

Introduction

The day is coming when millions of Black children will say, "I don't have a father." Likewise, the day is also coming in which Black mothers will say, "I don't need a man." Whether we believe it or not, that day will be upon us sooner than we think.

A growing tragedy in the Black family is the lost presence of the Black father. Across America, millions of Black children are told each day "You don't have a father," "Your father is dead","Your daddy is a no count and a no good." What was once a national embarrassment is no longer a badge of shame, as families proudly own the fact that there is no father in the home. Female headed families have become an acceptable standard in our community. Equally acceptable is the idea of absentee fathers. These are the fathers who have abandoned the family physically or have remained but have not assumed their place of family leadership. Their absence has become expected at places where families usually gather: Church, school and civic activities. Too often, it's the mother who brings the children to church, attends school meetings and oversees the family's involvement in civic activities. Fathers are too often absent, or uninterested. This absence of Black fathers in the life of the family soon leads to a family that learns to operate without him. It also leads to children who develop a coping mechanism that accepts as truth that fathers are not important to the growth of the family. Mother is expected to be constant. Father is rarely depended upon because too often fathers are perceived as transient, temporary or at the least irrelevant presences in the family.

The burden of the Black father is to be the strong presence in his family that God intended him to be. Each father has the responsibility to chart a course for his family that involves his physical presence in the joys and triumphs as well as the failures and sadnesses of each family member. The absentee Black father must assume a greater role in his family if the Black family is to survive as we know it today.

As Christians, we know God has given a divine blessing to the family. Any father, regardless of color has an awesome responsibility that cannot be shrugged off or set aside. It is a responsibility to lead, share and care for his family as Christ cares for and loves the church. That is the goal of every father, and it is also the burden each is called to bear. Praise be to God however, it is not a burden that is too heavy for us to bear because with Christ, all burdens become light!

Exposition

This text gives us the picture of David and Absalom as an example of a failing relationship. Absalom was the third son of David. He loved his son greatly but was often consumed with the affairs of state. He provided for his education training and care but was rarely present in the purest sense of the word.

Absalom was ambitious and at times hot headed. He killed his half brother Amnon to avenge the ruined honor of his sister Tamar. He was exiled for his misbehavior and he gathered all of the miscontents of the nation into a force that would fight against his father in an attempt to seize the throne. In battle however, he was killed as his hair snagged in a tree leaving him dangling at the mercy of David's soldiers that killed him.

The strained relationship between this father and son developed over years. Part is attributed to the fiery nature of Absalom himself. The other part is attributed to David's personal failure to play a leading role in the personal development of his family. While he served with honor as a king, his role as father, often left much to be desired. He was present, but uninvolved in the nurture of his children. The result, at least on one of them, was fatal.

Black men can't afford the Luxury...

Today, more than ever, the fate of Black America will rest squarely on the shoulders of millions of Black families who, for the most part, have survived through 400 years of bondage despite the conspicuous absence of the Black man in the family unit as patriarch. The challenges that face our people, the endless succession of setbacks, heartaches, obstacles and road blocks, make the need for a strong Black family more pressing today than ever before.

No longer can the Black man enjoy the luxury of allowing the Black woman to pull the plough for his existence, but the challenge of these times dictates that the Black man must strap himself into the harness and begin to till the infertile soil of despair in the field of destiny.

This need for the Black man to come forth is the Black father's burden. It is the need for Black men to assume their place of leadership in the Black family circle. Too many like David, are present in their families but are busy with the affairs of state. Others have abandoned their families altogether. There is too much at stake for Black men to continue the luxury of absentee fatherhood, and absentee husbandhood.

There is a pressing need for Black men of this generation to address the social ills that face our people, but too few are answering the call. Our children are failing in school, but yet our Parent Teacher Organizations, where they exist, are female dominated. Very few schools expect to see Black fathers present in parent counseling sessions and when something is needed teachers send notes home saying "tell you mother to send...." The champions of the rights of tenants,welfare recipient and senior citizens in many areas of the country. The same is true for Sickle Cell Anemia, Heart Fund, March of Dimes and other social outreach efforts. Most of them are represented by our women.

As the social ills of the day intensify, increasingly it has been the Black woman, even today that has shouldered the burden, working for change. When Black men, protective of their social position, jobs, and sacred leisurely pursuits, have failed to come forth, the Black woman has surfaced to pull his burden as family, civic and community leaders.

Undoubtedly, it is the time for the Black man to share his portion of the burden and assume his rightful role.

Fathers in the Family

While there is a pressing need for Black men to become involved in the resolution of social evils, there is also an immediate need for the increased presence of the Black man in the family unit. There are simply too many families in the Black community that are being headed by women. Instead of the number of female headed households diminishing they are gradually increasing.

Jacquelin Jackson reports in her book "Family Organization and Ideology" that in 1960 only 22 percent of the Black families were headed by women. However, by 1977 the figure had increased to 39 percent. Most of the increase of female headed households has been attributed to an increase in illegitimacies..children born to mothers, not married to their fathers.

Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan, in his famous report to Congress noted that illegitimacies among Blacks was 25.5 percent in 1965 but by 1978 the rate had increased to 53.2 percent. The national Average rate for illegitimate births is 16 out of 100 but for Blacks it has risen to 53 out of 100.

The figures are staggering but they indicate that more and more, Black Americans are beginning to adopt a new social more' that first, accepts the fact of illegitimacy, secondly the absenteeism of the father and thirdly, the denigration of the fatherly role from loving provider to that of romantic stud.

We should remember that boys who get the babies might be daddies, but it's the daddies who stay and take care of the babies that are fathers.

When the man is absent from the family he causes a peculiar set of problems. His children have only a female role to emulate which affects directly their aspirations and desires. Discipline often becomes weak as the ability of the mother to administer needed chastisement and correction gives in to inner feelings.

The bible is very clear on the role of the man in the family. He is the undisputed head of the housyehold. Wives are urged to submit themselves to his leadership and children are urged to obey and honor him as temporal father even as they would their heavenly father.

In Louisiana, even the law designates that the man is the head of the household. It names him as the "head and master" of the home, much to the dismay of the women's right advocates. He is the trustee of the family's fiscal integrity and the official agent for its legal affairs.

Such responsibility is immense, it is staggering and the possibilities for failure are unfathomable.

The Father is our Guide

We only have one to look to as our guide and that is our heavenly father.

He gave us the road map and the plan.

Our father, stood with us in the wilderness of our despair and brought us through.

Our father, has seen that there is was always bread on our table and shoes on our feet.

Our father, has wiped tears from our eyes and has strengthened us in times of weakness!

Our father loves us!

He loves us so much that he " gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Our father is our guide!

Black men are challenged to love!

Black men are challenge to rise up!

..And when things get tough, we should never forget that ..

Our Father is always by our side!

Blessed Are the Pure In Heart

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 10, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"There is a generation that are pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness." Proverbs 30:12 (KJV) "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God." Matthew 5:8

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when you could not feel the presence of God in your life? Has there ever been a time when something seemed to stand between you and God? Has something or someone ever clogged up the flow of power that comes to you from heaven? If so, then you know what its like not to be able to see God.

Among the many legends that surround the great artist, Leonardo da Vinci, is one that focused on his painting of the Lord's Supper. According to the legend, da Vinci painted the picture quite freely and easily. On occasion however, his attitudes interrupted his work. Angry with an associate, he tried to punish him by giving the image of Judas his associate's face. Each time he tried it, it would not work, the flow of inspiration that drove his great talent stopped. When he repented, the flow began again. Just before he began to paint the face of Christ, some boys came into his studio to admire his works. One of the boys knocked over a stack of canvases. The artist was upset and angry. He threw his brush and some harsh words at the little boy who ran out of the studio crying. Returning to his painting the artist tried to resume his work. He tried to paint the face of Jesus, but he could not do it. The image that he saw so clearly in his mind was fuzzy and blurred. Instantly he knew what was wrong. He put down his brush and walked the streets until he found the little boy. He told the boy "I was wrong for treating you that way, please forgive me even as Christ forgives. I have done something worse than you. You knocked over the canvass in my studio, but when I became angry I cut off the flow of God into my life. Now I cannot see his face." He brought the boy back to his studio where they talked and he showed him many of his works. Later that day he took his brush in hand and the face of Jesus came naturally from his brush. His anger had stopped him from seeing Jesus.

Zacchaeus climbed in a tree where he could see Christ passing by. Isaiah declared that "in the year King Uzziah died, I saw the Lord." The crowd blocked Zacchaeus' way. The fear, threat and magnitude of the power of Uzziah stopped Isaiah from seeing the Lord. Sometimes even less stops us from "seeing God."

As Christians, we know that we can feel the presence of God only if we have a pure heart and a clear conscience. Our desire is to live before him in a way that always makes it possible for us to see him in our work, in our worship and in our daily living. Let us strive therefore to keep a clean heart because the "pure in heart shall see God."

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he begins his great "Sermon On the Mount." In it he lays out the basis for the kingdom of God and tells the nature and character of those who desire to be citizens in the new heavenly order. The Old Testament ends with a curse, but Christ begins his New Testament ministry with blessings that are to be shared with every person who is willing to walk in the way of holiness and humility.

The eight blessed or "happy" states that Christ lists in Matthew 5 are directly opposite to the common opinion of the world. The general opinion of the world is: "Blessed are the proud for they shall never go crawling before their enemies; Blessed are they who never show emotion for they shall be called pillars of strength; Blessed are the strong for they shall never be called weak; Blessed are they who hunger for victory at any price for they shall go down in history; Blessed are the hard hearted for they shall obtain much; Blessed are the hypocritical for they shall deceive the masses; Blessed are those who trouble the waters for they shall be known as revolutionaries; Blessed are those who persecute their enemies and say all manner of bad about them for they will eliminate their competition." When Christ gave his version of the Christian's character and attitude in these situations, it was just the opposite of what the world commonly expected. Generally, the world believed that happiness meant riches, honor and many days of easy living. Christ gave a different formula that caught many of them off guard.

Christ promoted the idea of humility, or being poor in spirit and meek; compassion, or being merciful and peacemakers. He promoted a lifestyle that was completely opposite of that promoted by the high and wise of his time, and even today.

Among the ideas that Christ preached was the truth that "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see, God." In this truth, Christ promises a present and future blessing to all who will follow his teaching. Those who are pure in heart will be happy in this life and they will be able to enjoy fellowship with God in the kingdom of heaven." Things which are pure are unmixed. In stating that the pure in heart shall see God, Jesus forged an unbreakable relationship between holiness and happiness, purity of lifestyle and the blessedness of living in the presence of God.

If we want to see God and feel his presence in our daily living and in the life to come, we must approach life with pure motives, and honest intentions.

Give Up-

Today there are millions of people who cannot see the beauty of God because something is in the way. They have a faith in God but it is not a pure faith. They have a religious life, but it is not a pure religious life. At best, they are a mixture of mostly good and a little bad, or vice versa.

We will be able to see and feel the presence and influence of God in our lives when we approach him with a pure heart. A thing is pure when it contains only its constituent elements in the right proportion. Water is pure only when there are no other chemicals present and when its elements: hydrogen and Oxygen are present in the right proportions. Even though it may have no other contaminants present, water is not water if it does not have two parts hydrogen and one part oxygen, it is something else! Approaching God with a pure heart means to be free from the contaminating influences of the world and also to keep those elements of faith and service that make us pure in the right proportions.

To become pure in heart, we must be willing to give up anything that is hindering us from pursuing the faith wholly. Giving up a hindrance is a personal experience that humbles us before God. That which we need to give up may not always be something evil, but it may be a hindrance toward your faith building experience. Gold is considered pure when all other elements are removed by fire. A diamond is considered pure when there is nothing in it that hinders the reflection of light. We can be considered pure when there is nothing in us that hinders God from using us for the advancement of his kingdom.

Some people seem to be happier in the Christian life than others. They seem to get more out of the worship service, the sermon and even the devotion than others. If that is so, it may be that they have removed the hindrances that have kept them from praying, studying their bibles and serving God actively. Now they are able to see and feel his presence better than before. Their hindrances may include business, profession, education, romance, politics, leisure or a number of other innocent but cumbersome undertakings. Hindrances have a way reducing our service to God to a blur. We are not able to see him clearly. To see him clearly we will need to give up our hindrances.

Take Up

It is difficult to give up something, unless there is something greater in sight! That's where many people find the Christian life difficult. They see the "give up" but they don't see the "take up" of our faith. To maintain a holy relationship with God, that is two parts faith and one part service and free of contaminating influences, we must take up a Godly cause. To be faithful and unworldly is one part of our role but service is the other. James reminds us that "faith without works is dead." We must take up a Godly cause with the intent of making a difference in the name of our Lord. The types of causes may involve the homeless, feeding the hungry, teaching children, aiding the sick, fighting injustice and a plethora of other ills. Once we have plunged into a godly work we easily give up time, money and talent to it, without even thinking about it.

Martin Luther King, reflecting on his life's work that was plunged into the pursuit of freedom and justice, said, "If a man has not found something he is willing to die for, he is not fit to live." To be holy requires us to give up something, but being pure in heart also requires us to take up something.

Robert Schuller in his book the "Be Happy Attitudes" put it this way, "You can live without something, if you have someone to live for."

Brothers and Sisters, I suggest to you that we have someone to live for.

He is the one who lit the fire of the sun; and put the glow in the moon.

He is the one who:

—Puts the twinkle in the stars and put clothes on the lilies of the field

—Knows everything about everything!

—Taught the birds how to sing, and paints the grasses of the field with the morning dew!

—Can shut the mouths of hungry lions, unlock prison doors and tear down the mighty walls of fortified cities!

—Can take the heat from fire, walk on water, and cause the dead to live again!

—Who can lift your burden, no matter how heavy they may be!

—Who can build your confidence, no matter how shaky it may seem now!

We have someone to live for and He is Jesus!

Jesus said blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God. I want to see:

Jesus, the mediator between God and man!

Jesus, whose blood is sufficient to redeem us!

Jesus, whose power is sufficient to keep us!

Jesus, whose touch is sufficient to heal us!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and rose on Sunday morning!

Jesus is someone to live for!

I don't know about you, but I want to see him, see him face to face. Tell him all about my troubles trying to run this race!

It's Morning Time!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 5, 1993

SCRIPTURE: For his anger endureth but a moment; in his favour is life: weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. Psalm 30:5 And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun. Mark 16:2

Introduction

Have you ever been offended when someone failed to greet you in the morning? Among the remnants of Southern tradition is the custom of saying "good morning" to those we meet at the beginning of the day. It's just considered the neighborly thing to do. Many people are offended if they are not greeted with a hardy "good morning" from those they meet, so "good morning" is an expected greeting in many quarters. A hardy "good morning" can also set the tone for the day, indicating the nature of our mood.

In some places, saying "good morning" can make you feel silly. Consider the country boy that was visiting in the city. He noticed that everywhere he went people looked at him strangely. In every shop, in the buildings, on the elevator or in crowds the city people kept staring at him. He thought his dress might be a tell tale sign that he was not a city boy. He checked himself in a mirror and his dress was similar to countless others that passed. He checked other particulars and couldn't find anything different. Finally, after getting hundreds of strange stairs, he stopped the man he had been walking with and asked, why so many people looked at him so strangely. "Why am I standing out?" He asked. His associate answered: "When you got in the cab you said 'good morning' to a driver you didn't know. As you walked along the streets you said 'good morning' to everyone you met even though you didn't know them. In the elevator, on the halls and all along the way you greeted everyone you saw by saying 'good morning.' This is the city. Nobody speaks to anyone unless they know them, saying good morning identifies you as country boy and you stick out like a sore thumb." The country boy told his friend he didn't really know there was something wrong with saying "good morning" so immediate he stopped saying 'good morning' to each person he met; he started saying "Have a nice day" instead.

Good morning means the night is past. Good morning means a new day has begun that we have never experienced before and we enter it in gladness. As Christians, we travel the dark paths of this world feeling our way, one step at a time. We look forward to the morning, for the night will be gone and we will share the glory of it all together. It may be out of place in some circles but those who are bursting with joy find nothing wrong with saying "good morning." After all, Saints have to keep in practice, because where we are going it will always be "howdy" and never "goodbye."

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he gives a variety of reasons why he should give praise to the Lord regardless of our circumstance. He reflected on the various stages of his life to show that regardless of our condition there is a reason to praise the Lord. Each of the reasons that he offered were personal and were an indication of the attitude of worship that permeated David's life.

In Psalms 30:1 he noted that God should be praised because when he was down God lifted him up. During the course of his life that was certainly a reality for he was hunted as a vagabond and treated as a common criminal yet he was lifted up to become king. The fact that God lifted him is a reason for praise of his name, David said.

Moreover, in verse 2 David noted that God had been a healing and consoling presence in his life, which was a reason to praise him. When he was dispirited and had given up hope for surviving the tricks and plots of his enemies, meditations on God encouraged him. When he was physically wounded, God healed him and put him on his feet again.

In verse three David remembers the times in his life when he was standing at the brink of death because of the adversities that he faced, but yet God helped him to triumph. When faced with bears and lions he overcame. When faced with Goliath the giant, he overcame. When faced with enemies in battle, he overcame. The Lord helped him survive. This too is a reason for praise, he concluded.

What should a child of God do when enduring a hardship, trouble of heavy burden? David concluded in verse four that we should "sing unto the Lord, O ye saints of his, and give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness." The reason David suggests that we should continue to praise God even in the middle of our sadness is that such difficult days last but a moment, like a watch in the night. The joys that come with his favor last for a lifetime.

Therefore David concluded by noting that "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

The image of the morning is one that depicts freshness, life, renewal and a new start. It suggests a period of prosperity, health, and happiness. The coming of Jesus is represented in the Old Testament as a "morning without clouds." The glory and hope of the resurrected Lord is best witnessed when Christ himself is characterized as the "Bright and Morning Star." The morning is a time worth waiting for because whatever ill suffered in the night will be forgotten in the brilliance of the morning light.

The night he pictures is a picture of trouble, frustration, pain and death, but in the morning it will all end.

Three Cycles of Christian Life

The Christian life has three cycles, that encompass the entire framework of the Christian experience.

MORNING: The morning of our life represents our youth when our strength is at its greatest level and thoughts are virtual incubators of wisdom and idealism. In the morning we see endless possibilities and experience great triumphs. David conquered Goliath in the morning of his life. Solomon built the grand temple and displayed his greatest wisdom in the morning of his life. Hosea shined in the morning and Joshua led hundreds of thousands in the morning of his life.

No matter who we are, we soon find out that morning doesn't last. After the morning of life, there will be an evening.

EVENING. In the evening of life we are strong, but not as strong as we once were. Reflection becomes one of our greatest assets as actions diminish. Sometimes the evening even represents a decline in health and mobility. It was in the evening of life that David told his son, "I go the way of the earth" but "be strong and show thyself a man." It was in the evening of life that Paul said, "I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness.."

This life encompasses just a morning and an evening and it is completed. However, the Christian has another dimension of life, he enjoys the prospects of one more morning! It will be a morning that will never end. It will be a morning that will never see a sunset or see its brilliance diminished.

MORNING AGAIN: What will this new morning be like? The women found the answer to this question when they went to the tomb on the morning of the resurrection. The scripture says they went "early in the morning" and 1) Found that the grave was empty. In the evening a body was laid in the grave, but in the morning that body had risen to a new life. Jesus promised every believer that thou death would overtake this body, they would enjoy eternal life with him. In the morning, when he comes back, there will be millions of empty graves because the Saints will be risen to new life. 2)The women were excited and filled with joy. The women saw an angel of the Lord that told them to fear not and this presence excited them. They ran to tell others of the great news that Jesus had risen. We don't know all the details about what the morning of the Christian life will consist of, but we do know that there will be some empty graves and happy souls, in the morning.

In the Morning

When there has been a long hard night, nothing is more welcomed than the morning!

When we have endured sickness, discomfort, pain, that's a night time experience. Sometimes we even find ourselves checking our clocks in the middle of such nights to see how much time is left before morning. When darkness and clouds cover the sky we look for the morning star and we can see it shining through we know everything is going to be alright.

In the morning there will be:

—Blessing for my burden; Deliverance from my failures

—Strength for my weakness; a Home for my wandering soul

In the morning, crying days will be over!

In the morning, My mountains shall be made low!

In the morning, my valleys shall be exalted!

In the morning, the crooked places shall be made straight!

In the morning, the rough places shall be made plain!

In the morning, the glory of the Lord shall be revealed!

No wonder the song writer declared: One glad morning when the this life is over, I'll fly away!

One of these mornings we'll hear the Lord say, "Servant have you been through the night!

You have you given me your best in on the battlefield of life!

I have seen your tears, I have watched your earthly climb, come on up its morning time!

No more heartaches and pain ...it's morning time!

No more troubles and sorrows...it's morning time!

No more shedding of briny tears..it's morning time!

Joy will never end, its morning!

Come on up servant, its morning time!

No. 430- New Year

Stand By Me

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 3, 1993

SCRIPTURE "..thou hast been my help; leave me not, neither forsake me, O God of my salvation." Psalm 27:9

Introduction

What will you need in the New Year to have peace and happiness? More money? A bigger house? A better job? Many have already made resolu tions to make changes in their lifestyles that will position them for greater success.

Consider the three homeless men who sat on the park bench musing about their lives. The first, who had been homeless for many years, said "If only I could get me a good cardboard box this year, I'd be happy just to have a roof over my head." The second agreed that having a cardboard box would be a luxury, but he added that he would also like to have a nice fire to warm him every day. They both agreed that such things would make the new year much more prosperous for them. The third man, just like the others had neither a place to stay or warm fire but he told his friends all he wanted was a church bench to sit on. Puzzled his friends asked him why. He told the men "at one time I was close to God but I left him, chasing my own rainbows. Since that time I've had my ups and downs. I've slept in the rain and have come through the cold of winter. I have survived hunger and the threat of death. As we were talking about what we need, I considered that if the Lord has kept me through the cold and rain and I haven't even tried to give him anything back, I could have been much more if I'd been a little closer to him. If I get close to him I won't need a cardboard box because he'll be my shelter in a time of storm. I won't need to pray for a warm fire because he'll be like a fire shut in my bones. I don't want a cardboard box because I can find one anywhere. I don't want a fire that goes out with the first rain. I am saying a church bench to sit but what I really want is to get closer to God and praise his name. He's helped me before I know he can do it again."

Among the resolutions that millions make at the beginning of a new year, most involve temporal things such as "cardboard boxes and warm fires." Few actually resolve to give themselves over to God and let him have his way. We should meet the new year with one resolve: that whatever it brings we will stay close to God. He has helped us in times past, and he can and will see us through this year as well.

As Christians, let us renew our commitment to give God our best. When we give him our best, he'll take care of the rest. Even in a new year we have never seen before, his promise still remains true. He promised never to leave us, never to leave us alone.

Exposition

This text focuses on the expressions of confidence in God that were verbalized by David. David's life is a type of the Christian experience. As a youth he grew up in the fear of the Lord. He sung his praises in the fields as a shepherd boy, keeping his father's flocks. He was confident that with God as his guide that the most ferocious of adversaries could not defeat him as he stood to protect his father's flock

This 27th Psalm of David is an expression of his confidence that as long as God remained by his side that no danger, whether seen or unseen, nothing would destroy him. He felt confident that whatever problem would arise God would empower him to overcome it and he would arise victorious. He began this series of confident expressions by noting that "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?" (v1). David did not expect to be shielded from trouble, but rather he expected God to deliver him out of trouble. He wrote in verse 5 "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his Tabernacle shall he hide me..." In verse 9 he looked back over the years and remembered that God had helped him so many times. The lions and bears that attacked his father's sheep were just types of the big enemies he would face as he assumed the leadership of God's people as their king. God helped him then, he would be successful in this new endeavor as well, as long as God stayed by his side. David said "thou hast been my help; leave me not, neither forsake me, O God of my salvation." His confidence is expressed even further as he pointed out that he expected God's support even when his parents couldn't come through for him.

David's conclusion as he faced the new challenges of his life was to face the unknown with courage and confidence. He said he would "wait on the Lord" (v14) because God would strengthen his heart and empower him to triumph over any adversity that might come his way.

Expect A Little Trouble

As we enter a new year we should carry the three attitudes of David, expressed in this psalm, with us. The first of these three attitudes is that we should "expect a little trouble" but we should also expect to be delivered out of trouble.

We don't know what the new year will bring, but experience has shown that no year comes without bringing with it a portion of trouble, adversity and difficulty. We should not be so naive that we believe we will be shielded from any trouble. Even some of God's best people were surrounded by trouble. Job suffered health problems, financial difficulty and death in his family. David fell into temptation. The three Hebrew Boys were thrown into the fiery furnace. The prophet Elijah experienced a lapse of faith. Peter was jailed and Paul was persecuted. Even Jesus was surrounded by trouble unto his last day.

God will deliver us out of trouble. Job was delivered out of trouble and was happier than he had ever been. Elijah was fed by raven and called out of the wilderness. The Hebrew Boys were delivered out of the fiery furnace, Peter was released from jail and Jesus rebuked every single attempt of Satan to spoil his mission.

We don't know what the future holds, but we do have one assurance that if we let Jesus lead us we will make it through. The songwriter said, "I do not know how long twill be, nor what the future holds for me, but this I know, if Jesus leads me. I will get home, someday."

Remember What God Has Done

The second attitude of David we should take into any new and untried situation is our memory of God's help in times past. David said "thou hast been my help." As we face the uncertainty of a new year we should remember the lions, bears and giants that God has helped us overcome in the past, knowing that he can help us do the same this year.

Over the years we have seen sickness, but God brought us through. We have experienced family problems that have troubled us in the night, but God brought us through. We have suffered the pain of death, but yet we have survived. Some of us failed in certain efforts but like a ball thrown down hard, we have bounced up even higher. Our past experience with God has shown that when we needed him, he has been there for us. He didn't stop the lion from attacking David, but when it did, David got a few scratches and won. Good memories help us to count our blessings and build our faith for the unknown. Maybe that's why the song writer said, "When upon life's billows you are tempest tossed. When you are discouraged thinking all is lost. Count your blessings, name them one by one. Count your many blessings and see what God has done."

Go Forward With Courage

Finally David expressed an attitude of Confident Courage. He asked God to stand by him and not forsake him and concluded in verse 14 that we should take courage for as long as God is by our side, he will strengthen our heart.

Moses found himself faced with the Red Sea, but found that sea waters can roll back and make a dry path, when God is stands by your side.

Joshua found himself faced with the high walls of Jericho, but found out that even high and well fortified walls can tumble down when God stands by your side.

A widow woman whose barrel of food had run low found that, there is always bread from heaven when God stands by your side.

Hezekiah received his death notice and all the family was called in, but he found out that even death has no power, when God stands by your side.

When the Lord is with you, it won't matter how rocky the road or how high the mountain. When the Lord is with you there is:

—Peace in the midst of your Problems

—Calm in the midst of your crises

—Gladness in the midst of your sorrows

—Assurance in the midst of affliction

I don't know about you but I have decided that I need the Lord to stand by me. If the Lord stands by me, he'll give me a:

—Light to shine in my darkness

—Straight path to walk, when I can't find my way

—Lift up when I've fallen down

—Strong hand to hold, when I'm feeling weak

No wonder the old warriors sing "Lord, hold my hand, while I run this race, I can't run this race alone!"

As the new year begins, we should make ourselves a commitment to stay with the Lord.

Jesus, is a way maker, bride builder and problem solver

Jesus, who died and rose from the grave will stand by your side if you'll just call him!

When the storms of life are raging, stand by me!

When the world is tossing me, like a ship out on the sea, thou who rulest wind and water...

Stand by me!

Returning Gifts

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 27, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "And the word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,)full of grace and truth. John 1:14; "He came to his own and his own received him not." John 1:11

Introduction

Have you ever received a gift you did not like? On occasion, everyone receives a gift from a well-meaning friend that simply does not suit his or her fancy. They were glad to know they received a gift but they just did not like it for one reason or the other. As the Christmas season ends the lines in stores and shops will be filled with customers returning gifts.

Why do we return gifts? Sometimes it's because the gift is the wrong size. Many receive pants that are to narrow in the waist, dresses that are two sizes too small and shoes that fit too tight. Sometimes gifts are returned because we don't like the way they look, or the way they make us look. We want to look thin and the new dress makes us look larger. We want to be in style and the clothing we received only makes us look ordinary. Still others return gifts because they already have one of the same kind and have no need for another. There are still others who return gifts to get a cash refund. They valued the gift only for what they could get out of it. No sooner than they received it, they were in line the next day trying to redeem it for cash. There are many reasons gifts are returned, all of which are logical and understandable.

God gave the world the gift of his son, but unfortunately, there are many who return the gift as soon as it is offered. Why? Some say they don't like the way salvation makes them look to their friends, you know, it makes them look "holy." Others say Christianity has too tight a fit and it cramps their lifestyle. They feel there are too many places to go and things to do and they need room to explore rather than binding spiritual relationships. Some use their gift for what they can get for it: social promotion, business contacts, so they cash in on being members of the right church to get the most for their religious commitment. Still others return the Lord Jesus because they already have a Lord and have no need for another.

As the Christmas season ends and a new year dawns, Christians should remain committed to keeping the gift of Jesus as a real and valued presence in our lives. God gave us the most valuable gift of all, his son, that we might have a chance to know him and be saved. He was the greatest gift of all, let's keep him in our hearts, all through the coming year!

Exposition

This text considers John's account of the incarnation of Christ and the response of the people to his birth and life.

John's account differs from those of the other Gospel writers. Matthew focused heavily on the genealogy of Joseph. Luke detailed many of the events surrounding the birth of Christ. Mark skipped the first three decades of Christ's life and began his account with John the Baptist in the wilderness. John started at the beginning, with the WORD and details how the WORD took on the form of man and became flesh when Christ was born of Mary.

Jesus came as a light from heaven to show men the way to salvation. Verse 5 characterizes him as a light that shines in the darkness but the "darkness comprehended it not." He came as a gift from God to an undeserving world, given by God out of love. This love is spelled out by John in 3:16 when he declared, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

He was not wrapped in special paper, but swaddling clothes. He was not an object to be admired but a person to love and be loved. He was, by any definition, a gift to man. He was the embodiment of man's hope to reconcile himself with God and live with him forever. The law, which could not be kept perfectly, only brought the prospect of death. However, Christ brought man the hope of renewed life. This is what prompted Paul to write to the Romans in 6:23 "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Christ Jesus." He was a gift because he was being offered freely out of love. There were no strings attached. He only wanted the people to accept him as their Lord and Savior.

Jesus was the perfect gift, given by God. Despite his perfection, the people rejected him as expected. Hundreds of years before he came, Isaiah painted the picture of the coming world rejection when he said: "He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not." — Isaiah 53:3. David pictured him as "The stone which the builders refused" in Psalm 118:22. Even in his own home town the people would not accept him. Matthew 13:58 concludes with these words "And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief."

At his birth in Bethlehem the people admired him. However, just eight days after he was born the people started trying to re-wrap and him and send him back to God. His family had to flee to Egypt to hide. His hometown shunned him. Some of his brothers and sisters doubted him. The leaders planned to kill him and one of his disciples deserted him, another betrayed and those who he came to save shouted "Crucify Him!"

He was a gift from God but he found many people more than willing to exchange him for something else. The more they heard the more they concluded that his was a gift that should be returned.

The Gift Returned

Jesus comes to us as a gift from God containing four special presents from the father, all wrapped in one package, and offered to each of us out of love:

MIRROR: The first of the gifts that Christ gives is a new look. Our old look was worldly and it appealed to the base instincts that the world recognizes. While this mirror shows us the same physical features we had before we accepted the gift of God, it reflects a part of us that has changed for the better. One of the great gifts that God gives us is a change in character and spirit, which affects the way we appear to others. Galatians 5:22-23 puts it this way: "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." With these new qualities, God gives us the gift of a new look. This new look is guaranteed by 2 Corinthians 5:17 which says: "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

GLASSES: The second element that the gift of Christ gives is sharper vision. In the world, our eyes were open but we could not see. We saw but we could not understand what we saw. We were often confused and frustrated. This is what Isaiah 42:20 describes as "Seeing many things, but thou observest not; opening the ears, but he heareth not." Later Isaiah explains that Satan shuts the eyes of those who follow him. Isaiah 44:18 puts it this way: "They have not known nor understood: for he hath shut their eyes, that they cannot see; and their hearts, that they cannot understand." Jesus, referring to Isaiah's conclusions, said in Matthew 13:13-16 that closed eyes and ears keep people from knowing the real truth. "But blessed are your eyes, for they see: and your ears, for they hear." he added (Matthew 13:16)

LIGHT: A third element that the gift of Christ includes is light. We didn't really know how to live because we were in the dark. We couldn't have a good time without a drink and couldn't be happy unless we were in a smoke filled night club-in the dark. We were in the dark about the real meaning of life. When we accept the gift of God which is Jesus,he lights up our lives and shows us how to really live. Then he reminds us in Matthew 5:16 to "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

CROSS: The last element of the gift of God is what really makes the difference. He gives us the gift of salvation, through his blood that was shed on Calvary. It is the gift of eternal life that can only be received by trusting and believing in his word. The cross is a symbol of his great sacrifice for us, and he calls upon all of those who will accept his gift to bear the cross with pride. Matthew 16:24 "Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me."

Many Have Returned The Gift

There are many today who have returned God's gift. They were not ready to accept him and each time he has offered it they have refused.

Nicodemus came by night and asked how a man could be born again. He secretly believed but publicly returned the gift.

A rich young ruler came to Christ one day and learned that he had many of the qualities needed to equipt him for the kingdom of heaven. But when he heard Jesus say "one thing thou lackest...sell all you have, take up thy cross and follow me." He returned the gift unopened.

The gift of God is available to men today. It is free to all that will accept him

Jesus came as the gift of God to a dying world. He came, saying to the:

—CORRUPT, if you accept my gift, I'll make you pure.

—FOOLISH, if you accept my gift, I'll make you wise.

—WEAK, if you accept my gift, I'll make you strong.

—TEMPTED, if you accept my gift, I'll help you overcome.

—LOST, if you accept my gift, I'll help you find your way.

—SINNER, if you accept my gift, I'll save your soul!

Jesus met a woman at the well and told her that the gift of God stood in front of her. He offered her living water that she would never thirst again.

She didn't talk about giving it back!

She didn't talk about what it would cost!

She rain through the city shouting, "Look what I got, Come see a man!"

Come see a man, who died out on Calvary!

Come see a man, who rose on Sunday Morning!

Come see a man who saved my soul!

In The Still Of The Night

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 20, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "It is a night to be much observed unto the LORD for bringing them out from the land of Egypt: this is that night of the LORD to be observed of all the children of Israel in their generations." — Exodus 12:42 "And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night." "And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." — Luke 2:8,10,11

Introduction

How do you tell the night from the day? Some probably answer by saying, the night is distinguished by darkness and the day by the presence of light. Whenever it is dark, except for an eclipse, it is night and when it is light it is day. Right? That answer is only partially true.

People who live in the Northern areas of the world, such as Iceland, Alaska and the Arctic Circle know that night does not always mean darkness. These areas undergo what is known as "white nights." Between March 21 and September 22nd every year people who live in these areas never see any darkness. It is always light for exactly six months, even at night. Then starting on September 23rd just the opposite happens, darkness begins, 24 hours a day. Even at high noon it is pitch Black outside. For the Alaskans, Eskimos and others who live in this region, darkness and light are not the same as "day" and "night."

Whether things are light or dark depends on how close the area is to the sun. If it is close to the sun it is always light, even at midnight. If it is away from the sun, it is always dark, even at high noon. Whether it is day or night is insignificant in Alaska. What is more important is whether the region is close to the sun, because that will determine light or dark.

Today there are many people who have "white nights." In the midst of the day they are in darkness, because they are so far away from the source of light. In spiritual terms that source is the SON not the SUN. Those who find themselves in this predicament are the worst of sorts. In the middle of the day they are in the dark.

As Christians, we too share a part of the "white nights" syndrome, but our situation is just the opposite. Even when in the midst of the night we have learned that if we stay close to the SON and it will never get dark.

Jesus was born into a world that suffered from day-time darkness. He came with a message that if we would draw close to the SON and his message of peace and salvation, that even in the still of the night, he would be the light of the world.

Exposition

These texts focus on Israel at two episodes in its long and colorful history. In each instance the nation is waiting patiently but eaglerly to step out of a long dark period into a new and glorious era.

Israel had been in bondage in Egypt for about 400 years. It suffered humiliation, physical enslavement and rejection at the hands of the Egyptians. Its national morale had been low, but on this night it was high. God sent a great leader to the people in the person of Moses. Moses challenged Pharaoh nine times to let the people go but Pharaoh would not listen. As a result God prepared to send his 10th and final plague on Egypt. Expecting to see an end to their 400-year span of spiritual darkness, Israel was packed and ready to go forth.

As Moses commanded, they killed a lamb and took its blood and spread it over the door posts of their doorways. When the death Angel of God came through the city, those who gathered beneath the sign of the blood would be saved. Those who were not under the blood would die. As the screams of death went out all over Egypt, the Israelites stood firm bursting with hope that soon they would be leaving. God told Moses that this night, a night when Israel stood still in silence and watched the salvation of the Lord, should be remembered for all times. Accordingly, a feast was inaugurated to remember the day. It was called the feast of the Passover. It marked that special night when God passed them over and gave them a new life.

The New Testament passage finds Israel about fourteen hundred years later. The nation had been freed from slavery in Egypt, returned home built a mighty nation under David and Solomon only to see it fall as the great armies of Assyria and Babylon rolled over them. They were the vassals of a steady stream of conquering nations including Persia, Greece and the Romans. As the New Testament opens Israel had run the complete circle of being free, great, defeated and now they were subjugated again. It was another dark period in their history. But even in the darkness, Israel retained hope because they looked forward to the coming of the Messiah, as promised in the scriptures.

In the still of this long, dark era, Israel still had hope! No matter how dark it appeared for them, their hope rested in God that he would send them a savior. When the shepherds heard the announcement from the angels their joy echoed in the silence and quite of night, it was an announcement that the savior was born. He was coming to bring light to a nation groping in darkness for hundreds of years.

Darkness in the Day

Like Israel, we have seen many dark periods in our history. We have seen wars, depressions, and destruction everywhere. Our hearts have been troubled by this long dark era where ungodliness is flourishing and faith is on the decline. It is certainly dark in these times. The normal expectancy of life is that there will be a little darkness, matched by an equal amount of light. We expect a few tough times, matched by an equal number of great times. That is the expected order of things when we maintain the proper relationship with the SON. It doesn't work that way when our relationship with him is out of balance.

Nationally, we are gradually moving further away from God. The further our nation gets away from the SON the darker our times appear and the longer our night of pain and suffering lasts. Our courts have made it almost illegal to call on the name of God in public places. Our homes are without moral strength. Crime is rising. Murder and death are everyday occurrences. Our food supply is contaminated and our water is polluted. Jobs are scarce, money is tight and times are tough. We are in a long, dark and painful period of our national history as we move further from the Son.

Some have a personal dilemma that is similar. There are some among us who have moved away from God during the past year. The further they moved away from God, the longer their periods of darkness. Instead of a few bad times and a few good times, some have entered a long dark period. This is characterized by riotous living, ungodliness of assorted kinds and a general decline in our respect for the things of God. David endured this kind of darkness when he sinned with Bathsheba. However, David knew that the darkness in his life came primarily because he had moved away from the will of God. He said "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, who made the heavens and the earth." When he turned his face to God asking for a clean heart and a renewed spirit, David concluded that "weeping endures for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." The long night of our spiritual despair ends when we move closer to the SON.

In the Still of the Night-Jesus Came

Despite the darkness of Israel's dilemma God never abandoned them. In Egypt he sent Moses. In Canaan, he sent Joshua. When faced with the Philistines, he sent David. When Baal corrupted them he sent Elijah. When faced with persecution he sent Esther.

When the walls needed rebuilding he sent Nehemiah.

In the still of the night, with darkness everywhere, God sent his only Son Jesus, to bring light to the world.

In the still of night he came. He came:

—Not dressed in fancy robes but wrapped in swaddling clothes

—Not to a royal palace, but to a lowly stable, tucked away in a cave

—Not to a silk and satin lined crib, but to a straw filled manger

—Not with wealth and riches, but in poverty and humility

—Not to hurt but to heal; Not to cast down but to lift up

—Not to bind up but to deliver; Not to condemn but to save

—Not to frustrate but to clarify; Not to hate but to love

He came to bring light in a dark world that those who would believe on him might walk in the light.

No wonder the song writer declared: “We’ll walk in the light, beautiful light, ...shine all around me by day and by night, Jesus the light of the world!”

I don’t know about you, but in the still of my own night, Jesus came and gave me a mission and meaning.

He came to save us from our sins and to be our eternal sacrifice.

He came to help the blind see!

He came to help the deaf to hear!

He came to help the mute to talk!

He came to help the lame to walk!

But, he also came to go to Calvary!

He was born to die, but he died to rise!

If it’s dark in your life, get close to the Son. It won’t matter whether it’s day or night, because Jesus will light your life with the light of his love!

In the still of the night, call on Jesus!

Call on Jesus!

Call on Jesus.. and he’ll answer every time!

SCRIPTURE: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." — Isaiah 9:6 "The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree. Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins." — Acts 5:30-31 (KJV)

Introduction

Have you ever wondered what you were cut out to be? These are the times when you look at all the possibilities and wonder why God put you here. Often we spend our entire lives trying to be something that we were not cut out to be. Sometimes we even think we have failed because we didn't do what we planned for ourselves. We never stop to consider that just maybe God's plan for our future is different from our own.

Consider the two little trees that wanted to be important. The first tree dreamed of being a fine piece of furniture, smooth and well polished, it would sit stately in a well kept living room. One day some people came to the forest and cut the tree down. The tree was hewn into rough pieces and carelessly put together to form a manger in a stable in Bethlehem. The little tree was disappointed because it was shoved into a dark cave with no one to see it but some cattle. The little tree complained and thought itself a failure until One day however, God laid there His own Babe — the Son of God. The manger quivered with delight "If I had been a stately piece of furniture in a well kept living room, I would not have had the chance to hold a baby like this. This is what I was cut out to be."

The second tree only wanted to sit on the hill and point to heaven. That was his dream! Many years after his friend had become a manger some workers came through the hillside looking for a good tree. One yelled "This one is perfect for the job." The tree cringed. This tree just wanted to remain on the hillside and point to heaven. But the men did not leave the little tree alone. They cut it down and rebuilt it into a cross. The tree felt humiliated because now he was a symbol of disgrace and shame. One day in Jerusalem giant nails were pounded into it and a man being crucified on him died and gave up the ghost. The man was the Son of God. The tree quivered and thought: "On the little hill I would have just pointed to the sky with a pointed finger. But I was cut out to be a cross, and now I point to God with an outstretched hand to all!"

There are many today who cut out for greatness in life, but they have yet to discover what it is that God wants them to do. Such a discovery is difficult if all we see for ourselves is what we want instead of what God wants for us.

As Christians we know that each person has a purpose that is divinely appointed. Daily we surrender ourselves to God and say to him "not my will but thine be done." That is when God can use us best to be what we were cut out to be.

Exposition

These text verses focus on the nature of Christ's mission on earth. Combined they show that the birth of Jesus and his sojourn on earth was not a mere accident but a planned arrival.

Isaiah, seeing the difficulties of his times, made prophetic projections about the future. He told the people that God would send a Savior to Israel that would save the people from destruction. In Isaiah 7:14 he said the birth of this savior would be a sign: "a virgin shall conceive and bear a son and shall call his name Immanuel." In the main passage of this text he expands further by adding: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." (Isaiah 9:6) The Christmas story opens with all of Israel anticipating the coming of the savior promised by God through Isaiah as the Prince of Peace.

In the New Testament passage, Peter and the Apostles were brought to trial for witnessing about Jesus after being warned to keep silent. Peter told his accusers that Jesus was one who had been "raised up" by God himself for the purpose of saving sinners and to be a mighty ruler. He described him in the words of Isaiah the prophet, as a "Prince."

Both the Old and New Testament refer to Jesus as a prince. A prince in biblical idioms, was a mighty ruler, great power, and one destined to be king. Both the Old and the New Testament bear witness to the truth that Christ was born with twofold purpose in mind, to save people from their sins and to become a mighty ruler in the kingdom of God.

Without any doubt the preponderance of scriptural reference points to the fact that Jesus was born to be king.

Born to Serve

The Christmas story focuses on the birth of Christ who came to this earth for two reasons: to save men from their sins and to establish himself as Lord in the spiritual domain called the "kingdom of God."

The double intent of the earthly life of Christ is not uncharacteristic of God but it is unique. Just as Christ came to earth with a special purpose, so does every child that is born today.

Even though sometimes we may feel that our lives have little purpose and meaning, we have a special purpose; to be instruments of the divine will of God. Often we judge ourselves by worldly standards and feel that we have failed without considering that we may just be doing exactly what God intended for us to do.

The woman who is depressed because she hasn't become a starlet, but has ended up caring for her husband and children should consider that maybe it is not her purpose in life to be a starlet, but to be a great mother.

The man who feels like a failure because he didn't succeed at his self appointed mission in life but is doing well in another should not feel bad. He should consider that his self appointed mission may not have been what God intended for him to do in the first place.

We are equipped for our mission in life from birth. When God called upon Jeremiah to begin a great mission as a spokesperson for righteousness, he told him that he was given his divine appointment while he was still in his mother's womb. In Jeremiah 1:5 God says "Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations." It was many years before Jeremiah did what he was put on earth to do, but he had the character traits and talents that were necessary from birth. The same is true with people today. God has given us a mission and our job is to discover what he wants us to do and then commit ourselves to doing his will.

When our mission is in line with his will then all the powers of heaven are unleashed for us giving us unmeasured success at what we do. People will marvel at the relative ease in which you do what you do, but it is only because God moves through you to carry out his purpose. Consider what the Word of God says:Rom 8:28 "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

Born to King

There have been many who have been born to fulfill the purposes but none of them equal the purpose for which the savior came.

In the midst of the darkness of his time, with slavery and racism everywhere, God heard the cries of his people and for freedom and independence. Moses arose despite the national genocide to lead his people to freedom. Moses was born to be a great leader, but he was not born to be the savior of humanity.

In the midst of the sin and Baal worship of his day, Elijah was born with a steel will and temperament tough enough to challenge a king and queen to repent or suffer the wrath of God. Elijah was born to be a prophet but he was not born to be Lord of Lords.

The young boy Josiah (1 Kings 13:2) was predicted to be a ruler 322 years before his birth. He was born to be a ruler but not to be a divine authority.

David was born into a shepherd's family and was called a man "after God's own heart." He ruled Israel for 40 years. While he was born to be king of Israel he was not born to be king of Kings.

Those who are born to be king, have royal blood flowing in their veins. Jesus was born to be King of Kings because he has royal blood. Matthew 1:2 begins by tracing his royal blood. Abraham begot Isaac and Isaac begat Jacob. This royal line includes Booz and Ruth, Jesse, David, Solomon, Eliud and Eleazar all the way down to Joseph the husband of Mary the mother of Jesus. Through 42 generations the royal line was unbroken proving Jesus was born to be king of kings.

When a king is born, the people shout "long live the king." But when the king of kings is born, not only do people shout, but all of heaven rejoices. When Jesus was born the angels in heaven began to shout "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." There is another day important to the saints and that's the day Jesus was born into their lives. That was the day that they sang with new meaning"

"What a wonderful change in my life has been wrought, since Jesus came into my heart. I have light in my soul for which I long sought, since Jesus came into my heart...floods of joy over my soul, like sea billows roll, since Jesus came into my heart." When Jesus, who died and rose for my salvation, came into my heart, my soul joined the heavenly chorus when it declares: King of Kings, Lord of Lords.

Go tell it on the mountains, over the hills and every where. Tell every body that Jesus Christ is born.

But not only that but tell them that he was born to be king!

Short Bed With Narrow Covers

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 13, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it: and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it." - Isaiah 28:20

Introduction

What kind of bed do you like? Some like beds that are soft and cozy. Some like tall beds that reach from the floor and allow their feet to dangle. Some like a bed to themselves with plenty of room. Others like single beds with just enough room. In the winter, there is nothing better than a warm bed with plenty of covers.

We have experienced many kinds of beds in our history. From the corn shuck beds of slavery, called pallets, to cotton mattresses on crude bedsteads made of wood. We have moved up to bunk beds, single beds, king size and queen size beds with feather filled pillows. Each kind of bed we acquired represented a stage in our growth and prosperity.

Some, who are from large families, know about sharing beds. In such instances, it was not unusual for three or more people to sleep in the same bed. There was a constant struggle to hang on to a comfortable corner and for your share of the cover. There always seemed to be a foot uncovered or an arm that couldn't quite squeeze under the warmth of grandma's homemade quilt. One of the first luxuries desired of those who spent sleepless nights in crowded beds, was to get them a big bed with plenty of cover!

In the Bible a great Black King named "Og" (Duet. 3:11) had himself an especially constructed iron bed that was 13 feet long and six feet wide. He had to have a big bed because he was a giant. He thought himself secure in the Canaan land and secure in life, just as he felt safe in his big bed. However, he found out that even his 13-foot bed was too short to secure him from the wrath of God. He had a short bed with narrow covers.

Today there are many who are like King Og. They have great lifestyles that they are developing for themselves and they have creature comforts that designed to protect and give themselves comfort. They have large homes, good jobs and fine soft beds. However, some today, do not have the love of God in their lives. These will be those who will learn, the hard way, that all that they have, when it really comes down to the point of reckoning, is “a short bed with narrow covers.

As Christians, we give God thanks for every privilege he has allowed us to enjoy. We thank him for the pallet and we thank him for big beds and soft pillows of life. Most of all we thank him for Jesus, who gives us the assurance that in the time of our trouble we won’t find ourselves in a bed too short, with covers too narrow!

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he prophesied to the people of Israel warning them that dependence on material things for security would spell trouble. Israel understood that it enjoyed a favorite nation status with God. Because he loved the nation so much he handpicked it from among the nations. He freed the people from slavery, cleared out a homeland for them, and built them into a great nation. For the most part, Israel was unaware of its relative smallness compared to other world powers of the time. These national powers included Egypt on one side and Assyria on the other. They were so huge that Israel was a minuscule presence before them. Despite the prospect of utter destruction at the hand of its enemies, Israel depended on God to destroy them. They considered themselves protected against political failure because these invading countries were the “foes” of God and therefore he would defeat them. Isaiah, in the 28th chapter prophesied to Samaria warning of its impending doom at the hand of the Assyrians. They listened and laughed because the reasoned that they were the chosen people of God and he would defend them.

The truth that Isaiah spent many years trying to get them to see was that God would not defend Israel just because they were his people, but that God would be on the side of righteousness. It never entered into their collective mind that God could or would support a nation that normally would be his adversary against his chosen people. They believed that their favorite nation status with God gave them a comfortable position. They believed God was compelled to support them against all enemies because he was the God of Israel only and not a God for other nations. This belief made them comfortable and safe. It was a warm bed of security against any danger, because of who they were, not what they were doing. Isaiah warned them in this text that such misguided comfort would prove to be a bed too short with covers too narrow.

This idea of God supporting righteousness and not a special people was new. Since Abraham, they knew they were God’s chosen, but Isaiah was suggesting that God could actually use evil forces and conditions to work against his chosen people. Isaiah noted that this idea would come to service when the Messiah comes. In verse 16 he says “behold I lay in Zion for a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation, he that believeth shall not make haste.” It was a picture of Jesus who would come to call and accept anyone willing to do right and accept him, whatever his or her race or national status.

Short Beds

There are many today who have short beds that will prove unable to hold them and give them rest and security when the chips are down.

HARD PALLET ON A COLD FLOOR. (CHURCH MEMBERSHIP) Many, like Israel, believe that there is a certain protection they receive by being a member of a church. They think it's like a good luck charm that can be worn around the neck and will bring them good luck. Church membership is seen as a means of shielding ourselves from difficulties and guaranteeing success.

Those who are counting on their church membership alone to gain them the favors of God will soon discover that what they thought would be warm, safe and secure will be no more than a hard pallet on a cold floor. At its best its makes for restlessness and anything but a good night's sleep.

ROLL-A-WAY RELIGION: Others consider God a God of convenience. They feel they can simply call on him whenever they need him, and despite their lifestyle, he will simply provide them with a soft bed of security. When they are finished with him they feel they can "roll him away," tuck him out of sight and sit on their religion until they need him again. At such time they will simply roll him out again. God is not a roll- a-away God.

BUNK BED RELIGION: There are still others who have a bunk bed concept of religion. Bunk beds are designed to allow a person to have two beds in the same floor space. This is done by simply making the beds so that one can fit atop the other. The use of two bunk beds allows more space for other things in a room.

There are many today who have a small amount of faith in both God and Satan and they try to worship them both at the same time. Sometimes they sleep in Satan's bunk on the bottom or God's bunk on the top. This arrangement, they feel leaves them plenty of room in their lives for the best of both worlds. But Jesus said no man can serve two masters! Those who want bunk bed religion will soon find that it is a bed too short with narrow covers.

BIG BED IN A SMALL ROOM: There are still others who desire God to provide for them a big bed of comfort and security but they are not willing to provide enough room for God to act. King and Queen size beds take up plenty of space. They require larger rooms than doubles or singles. However, many are not willing to make enough room in their lives for God to act. They can't seem to find enough time to serve or enough money to give in support of God's program. At the least, those who expect big things from God need to make room in their lives for him to act and move.

A True Foundation

Isaiah pointed Israel to a new truth that it had not discovered that God was not supporting their status but commitment to him. They learned the hard way that God expects righteousness from his people. Those who expect his support on their behalf otherwise are sleeping on a short bed with narrow covers.

There are some who have trusted in the world and found that the world has let them down.

It's dangerous to count on the worldly means for help and support because it can only give us a short bed with narrow covers.

But I heard Isaiah declare: "Behold in Zion..there is a foundation" Over in Zion there is a tried stone! Over in Zion there is a sure foundation!

This sure foundation is none other than Jesus!

Jesus, who can take those who are:

-sad and make them glad!

-losers and make them winners!

-slaves and set them free!

-weak and make them strong!

Anything less than Jesus can't bring real rest. It's a short bed with narrow covers! But, I heard Jesus declare, "Come unto me all ye that burden and heavy laden and I will give you rest!"

Come and go with me to my father's house!

In my father's house, there is rest, peace and joy!

Madness, Murder & The Cross

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 6, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "And Cain talked with Abel his brother: and it came to pass, when they were in the field, that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and slew him. — Genesis 4:8; "And he that taketh not his cross and followeth after me, is not worthy of me. he that findeth his life shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." Matthew 10:38-39.

Introduction

Crime and violence are increasing across the nation. Burglaries, armed robber ies and murder are becoming so common place that they are reported in statistical lists in obscure corners of the nation's newspaper. There is seldom a day that goes by when we do not hear of senseless murders, mass killings and destruction across the land. Why is there so much violence? What, if anything can be done to change the collision course on which we seem to be headed?

Some of the violence that we see is a response to social conditions. Just as much of the rioting and disturbances of the 60's in Watts and other areas was prompted by mounting social frustrations, to a degree, much of the violence we see today is a response to social conditions. Poverty, unemployment and hard times create conditions where violence is cultivated. However, poverty and unemployment and hard times do not always spell violent responses. As a people we have seen hard times but have not always resorted to violence. We have survived slavery, depressions, race discrimination and extreme poverty, yet as a whole, we have not resorted to violence. Even when we considered a violent response to our frustrations in the 50's and 60's God sent great men such as Dr. Martin Luther King, A. Philip Randolph and others to show us better ways to respond. Adverse social conditions can breed violence only if the moral fabric of the society has degenerated to point that respect for Godly principles and human life has declined. As respect for Godly principles decreases the incidence of violence increases.

Society's immediate response is to build more jails to house the criminals and murderers and get them off the street. This is a response to the symptom. As these are jailed the valueless society in which we live is producing still more to take their place. The values of honesty, loyalty, kindness, thrift, cleanliness, helpfulness, obedience and respect are slipping away from us and the resulting product is violence and crime.

As Christians it would appear that the solution is to vigorously promote the values of God. We should help helpless homemakers, wandering children and the thoughtless come to know and respect God, themselves and their neighbors. It is an awesome task that will require the church to roll up its sleeves and compete for the mind and soul of a lost generation. The only hope we have is Jesus...persecution is great, but we have this hope, in its in Jesus!

Exposition

This text focuses on Cain and Abel the first two sons of Adam and Eve as they presented the fruit of their labor for the approval of God. Cain, a farmer, brought before God the first fruits of his crops and offered them in a sacrifice. Abel was a herdsman and brought a sacrifice to God from the best of his flocks. Both men presented God with a grand sacrifice. However, God found one sacrifice acceptable and the other unacceptable. God showed respect to Abel's sacrifice and received it while rejecting Cain's. God explained to Cain in verses 6-7 that he had no real reason to be upset. If he came before God in the same way his work could be blessed too. He warned him in verse 7 however, to beware because the presence of evil was waiting for an opportunity to seize him. He was warned to be on guard.

Rather than reorder his sacrifice and make himself more acceptable to God Cain lured Abel to an open field, talked with him for a while, and then killed him. In the aftermath Cain tried to hide his sin from God who asked "Where is Abel thy brother?" Cain answered God's question with a question: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

Thus Cain became the first murderer. Abel, his victim, was his own brother, who crime was that he was hard working and humble and presented his best self to God and it was accepted. Cain remained unrepentant and a marked man for the rest of his life, just as his descendants were after him.

Three Questions

The tragedy of rising crime, murder and disrespect for human life is epitomized by the three questions asked in this text.

Why art thou wroth? This was the question that God asked Cain. Why are you angry? Today the same question can be posed to those disposed to bring hurt on others: Why are you angry?

Cain's anger was rooted in the fact that Abel was successful at getting God's blessing and he was not. What made Abel's sacrifice acceptable was not the type of offering but Abel's attitude of faith and humility. Hebrews 11:4 says "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous..." Rather than change his attitude, Cain became jealous and envious of his brother.

Even today there are people who are angry with others because they seem to live a blessed life. God appears to accept your sacrifice and he has given you a few comforts to make life easier and there are those who are angry, envious, and jealous of you because God likes what you are doing. Some of them become so angry with you that they work to destroy you. Sometimes that destruction is literal, in the case of physical murder, sometimes it is more subtle as they work to destroy your life's work, reputation and image.

Most of the murders which are occurring today are the result of anger and frustration. Involved in the anger, in many instances, are envy, fear, and jealousy. Many are choosing to go the way of Cain in that they are attempting to improve their condition by worsening yours. Somehow they think status life is graded on a heavenly curve.

"Why are you angry? Why is thou countenance fallen?" God asks. Cain and none of those who follow him, never fully answered.

"Where is Abel thy brother?" This is the question that God posed to Cain after the murder. Cain's response indicates a second underlying cause of murder and violent behavior in our society. Cain responded to God's three questions by asking "Am I my brother's keeper?" He felt no obligation for the protection and care of his brother. Neither was there a respect for the value of his life.

Among this present generation there is little appreciation for the value of human life. Incidental to that increase in murders that we see are the thousands of unsuccessful attempts that do not make the headlines. When one man beats another with a steel pipe and wounds him, and another is stabbed several times but lives, these hundreds of thousands of attacks on human life suggest that we think nothing of ending a life in our moment of anger. Cain's circumstance had one advantage over our present dilemma: "at least he accepted Abel as his brother!" Today many do not accept the fatherhood of God and brotherhood of all men. We extend brotherhood to some people of the same neighborhood, family, gang and race. The other millions that make up the world community are simply nameless, faceless targets.

God asked the questions, Cain would not answer but only asked another question.

One Answer: Jesus

There are three questions at the root of our present dilemma but there is only one answer and that is Jesus. The world may be growing more violent and man's insensitivity to man may be getting worse, but there is still an answer! The answer is Jesus.

Who is Jesus? He is the essence of truth, honesty and Godliness.

Who is Jesus? He is the embodiment of kindness, love and mercy.

Who is Jesus? He is the sum total of everything good that exists in our world.

Since Jesus is the answer his followers must vigorously promote him in the midst of a generation that only knows him at a distance. We can no longer afford to be "just" the people that go to church down the street, but we must become a vibrant living force for change in the name of Jesus!

When Abel recognized his own unworthiness he came before God humbly. He brought the first fruit of his flock (maybe a lamb) and gave it for his sin. God accepted it.

Today our nation is troubled by the madness of murder, but I still hear a voice from heaven saying: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." (2 Chronicles 7:14)

Brother's and sisters, the only hope we have is in Jesus!

Jesus, who has never found a —BATTLE that he could not win!

—DARKNESS he could not brighten!

—PROMISE he could not keep!

—HEARTACHE he could not heal!

—PROBLEM he could not solve!

—MOUNTAIN he could not move!

—LONELINESS he could not comfort!

Jesus is the answer for the world today, without him there's no other, Jesus is the way!

Jesus, who died on Calvary!

Jesus, who rose Early Sunday morning!

When it seems like there is no way, call Jesus..he can make a way out of no way!

My Appointed Time

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 3, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come." — Job 14:14

Introduction

Have you ever been impatient; impatient to the point that you could not or would not wait your turn? There are many who have experienced this feeling. It is the desire to move quickly, act now, even if poor timing would make such a move inappropriate. Such feelings often come with excitement or when we experience unpleasant circumstances such as pain, sickness, or failure. In such cases we want to hurry and end it all. It is precisely at such moments that we should exercise our faith to let God move in his own way in his own time.

Consider the grandmother who sat at the train depot with her granddaughter waiting for the passenger train. The girl, who had never ridden a train, was excited at the prospect of riding a train for the first time. She had seen pictures of trains and had watched them rumble past her neighborhood, but she had never ridden one herself. It was hard to contain her excitement. Finally the train came down the track and she tugged at her grandmother's hand to get on board. However, the grandmother would not move, and the train passed. Time passed and the girl became even more impatient. Finally the train came again, yet the grandmother would not move. On the third and final time the train came the grandmother looked at her watch and her ticket stub and stood to her feet. She and the girl boarded the train. As the train pulled off the little girl looked at her grandmother with a puzzled eye and asked: "Granny, why is that when the train came the first time you would not get on. Then it came the second time and you would not get on. Then when it came the last time you got on." The grandmother looked at the puzzled little girl and pulled out her ticket that had 11:00 a.m. stamped as her time of departure. She said "it was the right train, but it was the wrong time."

In a similiar sense there are many today who want to act prematurely instead of allowing God's plan to work itself out. Especially when impatience is prevalent, we are tempted to get on the right train but at the wrong time. Such an error can put us on the right train but could carry us to a totally different direction in life.

As Christians we strive to "move at God's command" and to march to cadences set in glory. God has great blessings in store for all of us. However, we have come to know that we only receive them fully when we are patient enough to wait for our appointed time.

Exposition

This text considers Job, a man who had reason to be impatient with life but chose to wait on God.

Job is described as a righteous man who lived in the land of Nod. He was the subject of a trial of faith. God allowed Satan to test the strength of his faith by removing all of the comforts that sustained Job's hope. Satan described these comforts as a "hedge" God built around him. The purpose of the test was to demonstrate that Job's faith in God was not artificial but was rooted in a belief that God would not forsake him, regardless of the circumstance.

As Satan began to move, tragedy struck Job's family. Members of his family were killed. His vast fortune, invested in cattle and huge herds, was stolen by bandits. Almost overnight his entire financial situation changed to the point that he was no longer wealthy but bordered on poverty. Still, however, he refused to curse God or to forsake him.

Going even further, Satan decided to attack Job personally. He infected his body with boils. Job physically deteriorated to the point that his entire life was so painful that he wished himself dead. He cursed his mother's womb. He cursed the day on which he was born. He lashed out at his friends. His patience grew short with his friends, his wife and all who tried to comfort him. He was in pain and was terribly impatient with life. He wanted an end to his situation.

Refused to Blame God

Despite all of the trouble that he endured, Job refused to blame God for his troubles and he refused to reject him as his wife and friends advised. He concluded that though he was troubled by his circumstance, that it would be better for him to wait until God changes his condition in his own appointed time. The pain he felt could be relieved in death, and he was tempted toask God for a speedy death to end it all, but he decided it was better to wait. His words, therefore, comprise the basis of this text: "If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change comes."

Time for Everything

Solomon, in Ecclesiastes Chapter 3 reminds us that there is a time for every thing because everything has a season. There is a "Time to be born and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted; a time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up; a time to weep and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance; a time to cast away stones together;a time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing..." In essence, Solomon made it clear that there is an appointed time for every phase of life. Each phase and event has its own appointed day and hour. God has an appointed time for every phase of our lives. He has ordered our steps and numbered our days, just as he has counted hairs on our heads.

A time to be born

There is an appointed time for every man to be born. Generally, it is believed that a woman can carry a fetus to term in nine months. On occasion however, God has his own appointed time. When it is time for life to begin, God gives the nod. Life and all of its activities all operate by the command of God, for it is in him that we have our life and being. The moment when life begins is determined by our creator and only he knows the secret moments that will determine the events of our lives once it has begun.

A time to die

If there is an appointed time for man to begin in this life, then there is also an appointed time for him to die. Nothing happens in this life before its appointed time. People have been shot in the head, but they lived, then died years later of a cold. Men have survived the ravages of war, only to come home and die in an auto accident. The point is nothing happens before its appointed time.

While we cannot make things happen before their appointed time, neither can we extend life or its experiences beyond their appointed time. When its time to begin, it is time. When it is time to move on, it is time.

A time to live again

For those who are unsaved life just has two phases: birth and death. However, for those who know the Lord, there is more than simply life and death. There is a third dimension and it comes after death. There is a time to live again!

Jesus promised every believer the gift of eternal life. He said those who believe in him have the hope of the resurrection that will bestow upon them eternal life. He gave us a hint of the possibility of this promise when Lazarus, who had been dead for several days, was raised to new life. The difference is that what he promises believers goes beyond the Lazarus experience, because he promises that we shall rise to everlasting life. In God's appointed time, even the dead shall rise again. The unrighteous shall rise to judgment and the faithful shall rise to their reward.

The knowledge that there will be a resurrection is the Christian's motivating force. It is what allows him to face the pain, sorrow and loneliness of death, with pleasant patience as he resolves to "wait until my change come."

When we have everything in order it is not difficult to be patient. When we have prepared for life and prepared for death as well, we can stand with a strong face and say to God "I am ready."

A pilgrim traveled alone as he went on his way to an unknown land. Without any essentials he moved from town to town on his never ending journey. One night he stopped at a hotel to rest and get a good night's sleep. Without a watch he worried how he would wake up on time the next morning. Then a thought came into his mind, check in at the front desk! He made a call to the front desk and the shortly after laid down to a peaceful sleep. At five o'clock the next morning the phone rang in his room. The desk clerk said "it's 5 a.m. sir, this is your wake up call!." He couldn't wake himself but he was confident that he would get a wake up call.

We are pilgrims traveling through this life. We don't know whether or not we will wake up or not so we say our child's prayer "Now I lay me down to sleep.I pray the Lord my soul to keep. If I should die before I wake. I pray the Lord my soul to take."

I don't know about you, but I know that if I register at the front desk over yonder, one glad morning, when this life is over, I'll fly away!

I'll fly away!

When my appointed time comes, I'll fly away!

Be Strong And Show Thyself A Man

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 2, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "I go the way of all the earth: be thou strong therefore, and show thyself a man And keep the charge of the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and his testimonies, as it is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself: — 1 Kings 2:2-3

Introduction

What does it take to be a man? A pair of pants? A check book? The capacity to father a child? There is one truth that we have all come to know: all who are males are not necessarily men.

A tall pine tree stood for many years in the great forest. Its branches spread in all directions. It loomed high over the other trees and its thick trunk suggested it had endured many years. At the foot of the pine there was a little pine cone that lay around on the ground. He boasted to the other seeds that lay around that he was a mighty pine and would someday grow strong and tall. Meanwhile, he simply lay around and enjoyed the shade from the father pine's strong branches. The father pine constantly talked to him to show him what life was all about. However, the cone was content to know that he could one day be a pine and he idled away his time.

One night, lightning struck the mighty pine and down it fell with a mighty thud. In the days that followed the pine cone stood in same place where the mighty pine stood and tried to take his place. He stretched out his arms, but they were not huge branches. He gave off no shade and did not tower over the other trees as did the mighty pine. His heart dropped in frustration. Then he heard the voice of the mighty pine whistling through the wind, "within you is the potential for greatness, for you are the offspring of a pine. But to achieve your greatness, you cannot lay around. You must bury yourself in fertile soil, take root, sprout and grow with a made up mind. Then you will be a tree my son, then you will be a pine."

Three things contribute to the making of a man: The right crowd, strong roots and a made up mind. Many young men with great potential are lost because they plant themselves in infertile soil, have no strongly rooted principles, or cannot discipline themselves to do what is necessary to achieve their life goals. Every good father tries to teach these three truths to his children. With a monotonous redundancy his words ring in the ears of his sons even when he is no longer able to speak them himself: “Be strong, and show thyself a man.”

Exposition

This text focuses on David in the closing days of his life. It targets the advice that he left with his son Solomon who would have to stand in his shoes and carry on the kingdom work after his death. His advice to Solomon was that he should “be strong and show thyself a man.” He then explained what he considered necessary for Solomon to “be strong.” In verse three he begins to list off the requirements for the strength that he urged Solomon to acquire. He told Solomon to: 1) Walk in the Way of the Lord, and 2)Keep his commandments. The reward for living a life in fertile circles based upon Godly principles was noted: “That thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whitersoever thou turnest thyself.”

David’s advice came from his own experience. He was raised in a God fearing home. He was blessed to have a good father and mother that provided for him in every way. David was taught the way of the Lord when he was young and he exemplified courage and faith at a young age as he took on the giant Goliath. He was both courageous and humble. In his own life he tried to do what was right, but also learned a very good lesson: that despite age or experience that a man never out grows temptation. Even inhis flirtations and weaknesses, David talked privately with God and asked for forgiveness, a clean heart and a clean spirit.

David could advise his son about strength and character because they were hallmarks of life. He was honest, hard working, humble, and a man of principle himself. In the latter years of his life he achieved a degree of comfort. However, he spent a great part of his life in the humility of pasture and in the company of the common people. He was not always in line with the will of God, for on occasion he strayed. Yet he was the kind of man that was “after God’s own heart.”

By any sense of the word, David was a man. He had earned the designation not by the mere fact that he was male, but because he proved he could shoulder responsibility, remain true to his word, admit and correct his mistakes, and humble himself before God and men. Although others saw him as king and ruler, David saw himself as father and husband. His constant advice to his two remaining sons: Adonijah and Solomon, was that they should strive to live lives of virtue and value, tempered with discipline and respect. These were the essentials of being “strong.” As the grand old man went to his grave the words of their father echoed in their ears: “Be strong and show thyself a man.”

Strength is One Measure of A Man

How do you determine a good man? Is it by looks, physical attributes, money?

One measure of a good man is strength. While there is great value in physical strength, it is not the strongest measure of a real man. Some men can bench press weights and lift 300 pounds easily, but crumble under the weight of the first family crises. Some can out wrestle the strongest competitor but cannot wrestle with challenges that life brings.

Measure a man by his strength of character. If the chips are down, can he think straight and keep his family on a steady course? When he himself faces life threatening sickness, failure or defeat, can he weather the storm? Can he resist the temptation to succeed by evil devices or triumph at the expense of others? These are questions which form the basis for an analysis of strength. A man of strength displays character when it is needed most. It is an inner strength that is hidden from the naked eye but is displayed in moments of crises.

Measure a man by the strength of his commitment. There are many men who have come up short with respect to commitment. A real man has a commitment to his wife and children. Measure him by his faithfulness to his wife. Measure him by his willingness to stand by her in sickness and health, for better or worse, and to protect and provide for her with every ounce of his being. Measure him by his willingness to forsake all others and put her first. Also measure him by his sense of commitment to his children, to provide for them and to care for and protect them. There are many men who have weak commitments to their wives and some have even weaker commitments to their children. A strong man assumes the responsibility for the care and protection of his family, despite circumstances.

Measure a man by the strength of his faith. Faith, is acting on the unseen in hope that God will take over and make a way. Strong men are good planners, providers and sober thinkers. However, strong men are also men of faith. They are men who know and acknowledge that there are some things they cannot control that God must provide. These are men who learn to lean on the Lord. These are men who join with the song writer and declare: "I learned how to lean and depend on Jesus. And I found out that if I trust him he will provide." Faith is being told that you have a cancer, but being confident that God would put you back on your feet again. Faith, is holding the hand of a sick mother knowing that despite her age, God would make a way. Faith is holding the hand of hospitalized son, knowing that God would give you another chance to talk with him. With faith, we can achieve the impossible! With faith, the improbable becomes probable! With Faith all things are possible.

Measure him Right

If we are to truly measure a man, we must measure him right. We must not measure him by how he died, but how he lived? We must measure him not by what he gained in life, but what he gave to others!

We must measure him not by asking the question "what was his station in life?" but rather by asking:" Did he have a heart? Did he play his God given part?"

We must ask whether he was one to complain and pout or did have something positive to talk about?

When we measure him, we must not measure him by the size of the church to which he belonged, but by the strength of his creed. Has he befriended those who were in need?

Measure him by whether he believed in the power of an almighty God.

A God who told us that weeping may endure for a night but joy comes in the morning!

A God who gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!

Measure him by his hope -built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness.

Measure him by his commitment to say come what may: "on Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand! All other ground is sinking sand!"

On Friday, November 27, 1992 Herbert Reed went home to be with God. He was a towering pine in his family. He was a faithful husband and an example of manhood for his sons. This essence of his message to them will whisper in the rustling of the wind in the trees: "Be strong, and show thyself a man."

No. 422-Pastor's Anniversary

After All These Years What Shall I Preach?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Trenton Baptist Church
West Monroe, La.
November 15, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears." 2 Timothy 4:1-3

Introduction

An old Native American proverb says that people should never judge a man until they have "walked a mile in his moccasins." The same is true for the pastor of a church. Ministers are the most talked about personalities in the local church, which is rightly so, but most of the talk is sometimes negative and untrue. He is often called a variety of names, and charged with a variety of faults. He gets the blame for all of the bad and the credit for some of the good that the church does.

Those churches that pause occasionally to salute their minister, do a good work because it encourages him along the way. In so doing, the church also honors the minister's wife because often she is subjected to more unintentional abuse than her husband. Visitors to her home expect to find it immaculately kept regardless to the hour of day or night they arrive. They expect for her to be immaculately groomed and dressed, even if they don't always expect the same from her husband. In fact, sometimes the women of the church expect more from the minister's wife than they do from the minister himself in this respect. So it is good that the church should give a word of praise occasionally to its spiritual leader-family.

If we could walk a mile in the pastor's shoes we would see him answer the calls for help and assistance that come in the middle of the night from members, their relatives, their friends, and friends of friends of relatives who are referred to "my pastor." One mile in the pastor shoes would usually reveal a man who spends much time helping other families grow, sometimes to the neglect of his own, and solving problems of his membership until he is worn thin in many respects. If we could walk a mile in his shoes we would find a man who wakes up earlier each morning or stays up later each night just to find a quiet time to talk to God to get direction and guidance.

As Christians we should praise God for good pastor's wives. We should pray for them constantly and hold them in high esteem. Each day they walk a long mile on behalf of others. Our prayer should be that as he makes each step along the way that God would be with him all along the journey. The song writer declares "While I'm on this tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus to walk with me." So it should be with for the good pastor.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul at the close of his personal ministry giving advice to a young preacher, Timothy. His advice served as both encouragement and a charge for young Timothy. Earlier in 2 Timothy 2:15, Paul had encouraged Timothy to "study" so that he could rightly divide the words of truth. Now his attention turned to the matter of consistency in the preaching of the Gospel and the full intent of his ministry.

Timothy was encouraged to "preach the word." To preach or prophesy means to speak to people in ways that will edify or build them up, inspire them or comfort them. However, to preach "The Word" means that Timothy was to preach, but always in the context of the Word of God. His teaching, instruction and words of comfort were to always be based on the Hord of God as revealed to him by the Holy Spirit.

Not only was Timothy encouraged to "Preach the Word" but he was also encouraged to be "Instant." To be instant is to be sharp, quick and always prepared. "Instant," in this context, suggests that Timothy was to be constantly prepared for whatever situation that might arise with a ready and suitable response from the Word of God. The instantaneous nature of his response further suggests he should be ready for any occasion or situation. Paul told him to be instant "in season and out of season." He was to constantly be prepared with a ready response. This response may come at times when people want to hear. At other times they may not want to hear, but Timothy was encouraged to preach anyway, regardless to whether the people wanted to hear what he had to say or not.

His message to the masses was to span a variety of areas including: reprove and rebuke, that is to take issue with ungodliness and urge correction. Not only was Timothy to correct and rebuke but he was also urged to inspire and encourage the people, being careful always to stay within the confines of proper doctrine.

Paul's admonition to Timothy therefore, was that he should continue to study and preach the word to the people. He should continue to rebuke when necessary but constantly encourage and inspire them to continue in the faith by giving them words from God. Even after many years in the Gospel, Timothy was encouraged to simply "preach the word."

Words to Preach

Many members of a church congregation feel that they know what the preacher is going to say before he says it. Some have heard him so much that they can almost recite his proverbs, illustrations and colloquialisms to the letter.

Pastors usually struggle to find a fresh, new approaches to tell the same story because there are those in the congregation that need the inspirational strength that comes from hearing the Gospel message fresh and anew.

After a pastor has served in a congregation for many years, what can he preach that has not been preached? What biblical texts can he expound on that have not been preached before?

As the years go by, many a pastor finds himself asking: "What shall I preach?' Pastors who study the word always have a message. Often their struggle is not what to preach but "How" to present it in a way that is fresh and inspirational. Often they draw on the scholarship and works of others for fresh approaches.

The careful pastor always waits to be guided by the Holy Spirit, even though he may be using resources from a variety of areas.

I am reminded of the young preacher that went to the national convention and heard one of the great national speakers use an illustration that sounded great. The speaker said "I spent the night in the arms of another man's wife!" The speaker gave a long pause and looked at the audience's surprise. Then he repeated his claim: "I spent the night in the arms of another man's wife!" After another pause the speaker added "..and that woman was my mother!" The young preacher saw the response of the audience and he said to himself "I'm going to use that!" No sooner than he came home, he popped that line into his Sunday morning message. He stared at the members of his congregation and said "Members I want you to know that I spent the night in the arms of another man's wife." His congregation looked at him in shock, especially when he forgot the joke and said "..I spent the night in the arms of another man's wife, but for the life of me I can't remember who she was?"

The preacher needs words to preach, but they should always be Words from God!

Sometimes Frustration Sets In

Even the strongest minister often gets frustrated. The stubbornness of some church members can cause some ministers to give up and throw in the towel, especially after several years have passed and it seems that no one is gaining from his ministry. Consider the preacher who announced to the congregation that he was retiring after 20 years and was going into the funeral home business. When one deacon asked him why, the pastor responded:

"Well I spent five years trying to get John to stop drinking but he still is an alcoholic and won't straighten out. I spent another five years trying to get Willie to be faithful to his wife but he's still an adulterer and he won't straighten out. I spent 10 years trying to help mother Jones' children stay out of trouble and they ended up in jail and wouldn't straighten out. With all of my preaching the people just wouldn't straighten out. At least as a funeral director, when I straighten people out, they stay straightened out!"

After many years of preaching pastors should not be discouraged but should continue to preach the word and plant the Gospel seed, God will do the watering.

After all these years, what shall I preach? The answer to the question is simple, Preach the word!

After all these years, tell them that the wages of sin is death but the gift of God is eternal life!

After all these years, tell them that God is a good God who is a shelter in a time of storm and bridge over troubling water!

After all these years tell them that the God we serve can scale the highest mountain and span the widest valley. He can lift a bowed down head and can traverse the loneliest wilderness!

After all these years, tell them about Jesus!

Jesus,the lily of the valley and the bright and morning star!

Jesus,the fairest of ten thousands and a rock in the wilderness!

After all these years, tell them about Jesus!

After all these years, tell them about Calvary!

After all these years, tell them that Early Sunday morning Jesus rose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Tell them about Jesus!

Strong Medicine For Tough Times

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 15, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine be done." Luke 22:42. "And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; for this my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Matthew 26:27-28*

Introduction

Have you ever had to take bad tasting medicine? If so then you know what it means to hear someone say "It may not be good to you, but it sure good for you!" That's what they say just before they start giving you a variety of bad tasting medicines that make you sick just to think of them. Today, most medicines are coated and treated to make them more palatable. However, there was a time when the best medicines were those that tasted worse! Despite a plethora of modern cures, many older homemakers still cling to the old treatments for colds, fevers, and internal disorders.

Chief among the bad tasting medicines was Castor Oil. One comedian once joked that Castor oil was so nasty that even the spoon held its nose! It was so nasty that the taste lingered in your mouth for days, no matter how it was diluted by drinking juices or other liquids later. Almost equally as nasty was something that tasted like it was straight from the devil's medicine cabinet, called "666" or three sixes, the number of evil. It made your face curl up! It made your tongue hang out and various other facial expressions of disgust. There were others too. They weren't as bad but they didn't win any popularity contests. These included Cod Liver Oil, Black Draught and Epsom Salts. They all were handy remedies that got the job done for homemakers of yester-year.

It appeared that the worse the condition, the nastier the medicine. However, it was also true that the "nastier the medicine the surer the cure." Castor Oil could clean out the insides, cut fever and resolved a host of problems. It was nasty but it got the job done. It could not be sugar coated or mint flavored. It contained no tiny time capsules or chocolate taste, it was just plain nasty. But it got the job done!

As Christians, we have come to know that the sins of the world required a remedy that the sweet idealism of philosophy or the sugar coated compromise of government could not provide. It required the shedding of blood which was strong medicine. On our behalf Jesus took the cup of suffering and drained every drop. We thank God every day that Jesus was willing to drink from the bitter cut of pain and sorrow to give us another chance. The cup of suffering was strong medicine! It was a bad tasting medicine! However, it was the only cure!

Exposition

This text verses focus on Christ as he prepares to take some bitter medicine. Jesus went to the Mount of Olives, just before the crucifixion, to pray. He left his disciples behind and he went alone and talked to God. John gives a more detailed account of what he said to God but Luke simply sums it up by saying that Christ talked to God trying to find another way to provide salvation for mankind other than the way of the cross. He referred to his crucifixion and death as a "cup."

The prospects of death on the cross was a bitter thought. He would be ridiculed, beaten, nailed and killed in a horrifying experience that was necessary for the redemption of mankind. It was necessary because mankind had sinned and the law required a sacrifice. As the lamb of God he had come into the world to become the eternal sacrifice to provide hope and forgiveness for the lost. However, the sins of the world were so great, that only the strongest medicine possible could cure its ills. The death of Christ on the cross and his eventual resurrection was strong medicine. It was bitter medicine. He looked for another, equally effective, alternative but there was none. His final conclusion was: "never-the-less, not my will, but thy will be done." As he reached this conclusion, Jesus decided that Calvary, although a bitter experience, would be good for the healing of the nations.

Diagnosis: World Is Sick

Today, we are faced with a sick society. It is sick in the sense that the cancer of sin is growing daily and the patient won't come in for treatment.

Diagnosis: There are some who on occasion get sick and go to see the doctor. The doctor usually takes steps to diagnose the problem. A diagnosis is a process where he or she checks the nature of a sickness. To assure accuracy, numerous tests are run, before the doctor finally reaches a conclusion about the extent of the problem. At the end of the process the doctor will diagnosis the problem and tell what is wrong. Today we know there is something wrong in our society. Crime is escalating at an all time high. People are becoming prisoners in their own homes with bars on their windows and burglar alarms on their cars. Women and the elderly are purchasing guns to protect themselves. Some teenagers are acquiring guns too and they are dying in record numbers. Pornography is on the rise. Daytime television, once rated G because it was clean melodrama for lonely housewives, is now rated X. Rarely a day passes without hot love scenes, murder and crime in the daily "stories" that never end. Teen sexual activity is on the rise, as even children from God-fearing families fall prey to lure of sexual activity under the guise of safe sex. Murder is becoming an every day event and the value of human life is diminished to the point that murderers get less time in jail than armed robbers. Violent attacks on the person of another are considered so lightly people think little of solving a dispute by taking a pipe and hitting another across the head. The fine is small and some think its worth the small fine to teach their enemies a lesson.

What is the diagnosis? Doctor what is the problem? The problem is that as a nation we have strayed away from God and are wallowing in sin. Godly values are no longer promoted in school, homes leave decisions about religious training to their children, and each coming generation grows progressively worse than then the one preceding. The diagnosis is that this world is sin sick.

The prognosis or the prediction of the outcome is simple. If uncorrected eternal doom is the result, but if treated properly it can be turned to a different direction. Romans 6:23 puts it this way: "The Wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Prescription: Jesus!

Following any diagnosis, there is usually a prescription which spells out a course of action. The doctor will tell the patient exactly what must be done to counter effects of their sickness.

What is the prescription for a sin sick world? Solomon asked that same question and in 2 Chronicles 7:14 was given this prescription:"If my people which are called by my name, shall humble themselves and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

When we are sick in body, we can go to drug store and get prescriptions filled.

When there is a headache....Extra Strength Excedrin

When there is a stomachache ...Pepto Bismal

When there is a fever ...Tylenol

When there is irregularity ..Ex-Lax

Our Lord has given this world a prescription that can only be filled at calvary.

What this world needs is medicine strong enough to counter to effects of sin, but it can only be found at one place; at the foot of the cross!

At Calvary there is strong medicine! At Calvary the:

—WOUNDED CAN BE HEALED. Isaiah said "he was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace is upon him, and with his stripes we are healed.

—BAD IN ATTITUDE CAN BE CHANGED: A centurion soldier who had heckled Jesus had an attitude change at Calvary, for he cried out "Surely, he must be the Son of God."

—GUILTY CAN FIND FORGIVENESS: For I heard Jesus cry out "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do!"

—BURDENS OF THE WEAK CAN BE LIFTED: For Jesus said come unto me all ye that are burdened and heavy laden, and I will give you rest, my yoke is easy and my burden light.

—SINNER CAN FIND SALVATION: The song writer declares "There is a fountain, filled with blood that flows from immanuel's veins. And sinners plunged beneath the flood lose all their guilt and stain.

I don't know about you but I'm glad that Jesus decided to drink the bitter cup to save us from our sins.

I'm also glad that he didn't stop there. He told us that he has drunk the bitter cup but he has left us a little reminder, to keep us in good spiritual shape, reminding us of the strong medicine of calvary.

Some people give credit to the doctor when they healed. Some thank the hospital. Some call it luck!

But I heard a song writer declare: "I know it was the blood. I know it was the blood that save me. One day when I was lost, he died upon on the cross. I know it was the blood that saved me.!"

It was Jesus who died out on Calvary!

It was Jesus who rose on Sunday Morning!

I know it was the blood that saved me!

What Time Is It?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 8, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word." 1 Kings 18:21; "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven: a time to be born and a time to die; a time to plant and a time to pluck up that which is planted; a time to kill and a time to heal; a time to break down and a time to build up..." Ecclesiastes 3:1-3.*

Introduction

Do you remember when you first learned to tell time? That was a difficult task. The system seems confusing because it never made sense that although the big hand was pointing at "2" it was 10 minutes after the hour or if it pointed at 11 it was 5 minutes before the hour. The little hand always made sense, if it pointed at eight then it was eight, but the big hand was always complicated things and made telling time awkward.

Learning to "tell" time was a major task for a child. A sign of maturity and responsibility came when a child received his first watch, complete with Mickey Mouse's big hand and little hand. As children became men and women the Mickey Mouse brands were traded for Seikos, Elgins and diamond studded Rolexes. No matter what the age, the watch helps them to keep time.

Learning to tell time is important. As simple as it may sound, it is also important for every person to know the hour of this age and to understand the times in which he or she lives.

There are many adults today who can't tell time! Not on their watches, but in their lives. Many have experienced great blessings from God, yet they remain outside of an active service in the church. Many have survived tough times and endured the droughts of depression and storms and winds of war, yet they still live separate from God.

As Christians, we learned long ago that we need the Lord on a daily basis. We reached a cross roads in our lives and we decided that it was "time" for us go a different route.

"What time is it?" It is time for those who have not committed themselves to the service of God to accept him ...while there is still time.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Elijah as he challenged the people of God to make a decision. This text is in response to a great drought that God had caused upon the land to show his disapproval for the ungodly acts of Jezebel and King Ahab. There was no rain for three years and there was devastation everywhere. The people of Israel had strayed from God. They were worshipping one or more of the idol Gods of the land all described as "Baal." The rains were stopped to give them a sign that God was displeased, yet they persisted in Baal worship.

Elijah staged a demonstration atop Mt. Carmel that was designed to show the people the real God. He assembled the 450 prophets of Baal on one side and himself on another. Each built an altar and placed upon it a sacrifice. Elijah's challenge was for the real God to respond by consuming the sacrifice with fire. His challenge to the people was that they should "choose ye this day." He said the people should consider the demonstration and then make a decision about whom they would serve. Making it more difficult, Elijah drenched his sacrifice with water many times to prove to the people the power of God. After many incantations and dances the prophets of Baal gave up, receiving no answer. Then Elijah prayed a small prayer and God answered from heaven, consuming the sacrifice completely.

When the people saw it, they were able to understand the sign and verse 39 records that they "fell on their faces: and they said, The Lord, he is the God; the Lord, he is the God."

Elijah's demonstration helped them to understand that it was time for them to make a decision. They believed in God, but they were fascinated by Baal too. When they saw the signs, however, they knew it was time for them to move.

The Little Hand-God's Anger

Knowing the times spiritually is a simple as telling the time on your clock. Consider the little hand and the big hand.

The little hand suggests God's anger. Just as the little hand on a watch points to one of 12 hours, there are 12 conditions of the spirit that can anger God.

Today there are many who anger God by their lifestyle but they don't know it because they can't tell time.

STUBBORNESS. (Exodus 4:14) God had a job for Moses to do but yet he stubbornly gave excuses. Stubborness angers God for even today he has a job for many to do but they stubbornly refuse to respond.

IDOLATRY (Exodus 32:19-22) God is angered when other things become more important than he, just as he was with Israel for its occasional idolatry. Even today there are many who put other things before God and he is angered.

MURMURING (Num. 11:1,10) Israel complained tremendously, though God had blessed them immensely, just as some today continue to complain about what they don't have and refuse to give God credit for that which has been given them.

LUSTS OF MEN (1 Corinthians 6:9) God is angered by sex sins, and immorality, but yet there are many who continue despite his anger daily.

PRIDE (Proverbs 16:18) We are reminded that "pride goeth before destruction." Although we know God despiseth the proud we boast daily of our personal accomplishments, void of the intervention of God.

DISOBEDIENCE (Numbers 22:22) God was frequently angry with Israel for its disobedience and even today we anger him by our tendency to disobey him whenever it is to our convenience.

REBELLION (Numbers 32:10-13) God is angered when we fight against his will and resist his direction, just as he was angry with Israel for its rebellious nature when he tried to help them in the wilderness.

BACKSLIDING (Galatians 4:9) Those who have known the things of God anger God when they turn from them.

HYPOCRISY (Job 42:7) It angers God for his people to be hypocritical, to profess one thing but live another.

WICKEDNESS (Psalm 7:11) Those who are wicked in their character and dealings with others anger God "every day."

DRUNKARDS (1 Cor. 6:9) Those who are either drunk with liquor or the wine of the world, anger God.

SIN (1 John 5:17) Sin is any transgression of God's law and it angers him in all forms.

There are many who see how the little hand points, but yet they still cannot tell the hour.

The Big Hand Points To God's Grace

It is clear that the little hand points to God's anger and wrath. However, I'm glad that the clock of salvation doesn't just have a little hand. Because while the little hand may tell us the general hour in which we stand, the big hand tells us where we are right now.

I'm so glad that the clock of Salvation, doesn't just have a little hand that condemns me for what I use to do, but it also has a big hand that tells me where I stand right now. I'm so glad that Romans 6:23 doesn't stop with the little hand that says "wages of sin" is death but there is also a big hand that points out that the "gift of God is eternal life."

The big hand of God's grace points to the outstretched hand of God that we see in our lives every day.

At 1 O'CLOCK God's grace, took your sadness and turned it into joy!

At 2 O'CLOCK God's grace, took your weakness and turned it into strength!

At 3 O'CLOCK God's grace, took your burdens and made them light!

At 4 O'CLOCK God's grace, took your loneliness and told you he'd be with you always.

At 5 O'CLOCK God's grace, took your sickness and put you on your feet again!

At 6 O'CLOCK God's grace, took your failure and gave you the victory!

At 7 O'CLOCK God's grace, took your tear drops and dried your weeping eyes!

At 8 O'CLOCK God's grace, took you from the gutters of life and gave you a new glory!

At 9 O'CLOCK God's grace, took your fears and gave you courage!

At 10 O'CLOCK God's grace, took your confusion and gave you peace!

At 11 O'CLOCK God's grace, took your darkness and gave you his marvelous light!

At 12 O'CLOCK God's grace, took your despair and gave you new hope!

Although we have angered him hour by hour, God's grace has continued to bless us, minute by minute.

Somebody is able to tell the time. They can see that "I have sinned, but God has blessed me" If God has been a good God then I need to stand up and give him my life.

What time is it?

It's time for those who are:

—Asleep to wake up; Behind to catch up; Without Courage to stand up; — Downtrodden to look up; unchurched to join up!

It's time for the undecided to make a decision for Christ!

Recognizing that all we had was the little hand of God's anger, Jesus decided to that in the midst of these troubling times he would go to Calvary to give us a big hand.

He died on on Calvary with his head at 12 O'clock and his feet at 6 O'CLOCK. He died with hands stretched wide at 3 o'clock and 9 o'clock.

But he rose on Sunday morning to let the world know that he is with us every minute and hour!

A Good Nail In A Sure Place

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.
November 1, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"And I will fasten him as a nail in a sure place; and he shall be for a glorious throne to his father's house." Isaiah 22:23*

Introduction

Have you ever had a good plan but you knew something was missing? This is one of those instances where no matter how you tried the things you tried to do would not work out because there was something missing. What was the missing element?

Consider the builder who sat alone side the road with his head in his hands looking despondent and sad. As he sat, a peddler came along and asked about his sad mood. "Why are you sad?" The peddler asked. The builder said "I am a builder but I have no materials with which to build." The peddler sought to cheer him up and opened his wares and gave him tools that included a hammer, saw, and level and then went on his way. The builder sat again with his head in his hands looking despondent. Soon a lumberjack came by and asked why he was so sad. "Why are you so sad?" came the question to which the builder responded "I have tools, yet I don't have what it takes to build." The lumberjack gave him some lumber from his wagon. "This lumber is fresh from the mill. This should help you to build." The builder arranged the wood according to plans but soon sat with his head in his hands. The peddler returned and asked "why are you still looking so ill, did I not give you what it takes to build? The builder responded that he had tools and lumber but could not put them together. Looking in his wagon again the peddler presented him with a leather bag. "In answer to your plea, I have what you need. Your effort to build will not prevail unless your hammer has a good nail." At that he handed him a bag of nails and the builder happily began to build. He had tools and materials, but something was missing.

There are many today who try to build lives for themselves by simply assembling all of the tools and materials in front of them. These tools and materials may include education, job training, and life experiences. Alone however, they are no good. Something is needed to hold the pieces together, to bond the diverse timbers that comprise our hopes and dreams.

As Christians, we have found that "something" to be Jesus. He is like a good nail that holds us together to work successfully. Similarly, so should we allow ourselves to become the nails that hold together the work of kingdom building. Whether we are railroad spikes or just common nails, the Lord needs a good nail in his service!

Exposition

This text focuses on Shebna, a man who held a position of power and influence under King Hezekiah. In comparison to modern times he could be called the Secretary of State of the administration of King Hezekiah. Shebna had power, influence and control in his position of power. He was surrounded by people who moved at his command. He even began the building of his personal tomb, carved out of stone for his final resting place in his death.

For all practical purposes, Shebna had everything a man could want. He felt that he was safe and secure in his position. However, the prophet Isaiah came to prophesy that God was not pleased because he was not operating according to the will of God. The prophet foretold how this great man, with instruments of power at his fingertips, would be brought down.

Shebna's sense of false security was like a nail fastened in an unsure place. However, Isaiah prophesied that God would remove him and replace him with Eliakim, another man in the king's court that was faithful to the cause of God's people. Those that depended on Shebna, thinking he was a sure thing, would also fall.

Shebna fell and Eliakim rose to a position of prominence in the kingdom. However, unlike Shebna, Eliakim rose to become one whose hopes and aspirations were linked not to his political wits but to will of God. He was a good nail, in a sure place.

God Is Looking For A Good Nail

Today God is looking for some good nails. Men and women of faith, like Eliakim in this text. He is looking for people that are willing to use their lives in his service and give him their best. The nails that God seeks are not all the same, but have different gifts and roles that he needs them to play.

GOOD NAILS: The Lord needs nails that can be used. What makes a good nail? A good nail must be straight, have a sharp point, and a good head.

Straight. If we want to be used by God, we must be straight. Being straight means that we are not walking a crooked path. It is almost impossible to use a crooked nail. However, lives once bent out of shape by life's tough times, can be straightened by the power of God. The word reminds us that all who accept Christ are "new creatures" and old things are passed away and all things become new.

Sharp points are needed to do God's work. After accepting him, the next step is to learn as much about God's word and kingdom work as possible. It begins with Sunday School and bible study and special studies that help sharpen our points. 2

Timothy 2:15 reminds us that we should always "study to show thyself approved."

God needs those who are willing to come to him with a good head. There are many today who have their "heads bad." They are drunk with the wine of the world and they forget about God. God needs men and women that are willing to come to him with a clear thinking "good head" that can withstand the pounding temptations that the world will give.

COMMON NAILS: These are nails of various sizes that are used in the ordinary work of building. They have different lengths and sizes that range from the number two common to the giant sized number 50. If God needs anyone, he needs people with plain common sense. Jesus was often criticized because he made his headquarters among the common people. He did so because there is a need for people who have the common touch in the service of the master.

FINISHING NAILS: These are small nails with small heads. They are often used by carpenters when they need a nail that can do what a nail is supposed to do, but not be seen. God needs people in his service who don't have the "big head." He needs those who are willing to be a good follower, carrying out a mission without thought of whether their name will be called. Such a person requires a humble spirit that places service to God before self glorification.

CONCRETE NAILS: These are tough nails. Ordinary nails will bend when faced with concrete. But these nails are so tough that they can bore through solid concrete and hold fast. In the same sense, God needs followers with a will of steel that can shatter walls of resistance and push his kingdom building plans through. These are not intimidated by a challenge and will go forward despite opposition.

GOOD NAILS MUST BE GALVANIZED. Even the best nails can get rusty when exposed to the elements. Some nails, especially those used in roofing are: "Galvanized" or specially treated to make them rust resistant. A nail that is exposed to the storm and the rain and then rusts and gives way is not much good. God needs men and women who are willing to be dipped in the blood of the lamb, and sealed by the holy spirit.

Even Good Nails Need A Sure Place

While it is good have all the right qualities of personality and spirit, to be of service to God they must be properly applied. Shebna, in this text, thought only of himself and relied heavily upon his on his own abilities. He was a good nail, but he hung his hopes in an unsure place.

Even the best nail needs a sure place. One of the first lessons that amateur carpenters learn is that nails that are driven into a secured surface may drive harder, but they hold sure.

Too many today have good qualities but they are trying to make a place for themselves in life the easy way. They are like good nails, in unsure places.

I don't care who you are and how much you know, everybody needs something to hold on to.

A good nail needs a sure place!

If you are looking for a sure place, I recommend Jesus. I hear him call out: "Come unto me all ye that are burdened and heavy laden I will give you rest." He'll give you a safe, sure place to rest "For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

He is a sure place because no matter what your condition, he can give you something to hold on to.

If you are crooked, Jesus can straighten you out!

If you are unclean, Jesus can wash you up!

If you feel like you are a loser, Jesus can even up the odds and make winners out of losers, champions out of weaklings, and victors out of victims.

He's a sure place, because when you have Jesus you have somebody that can:

—Out-run the wind; Outshine the Sun; Out-shout the thunder; and Out-Shake an earthquake

He's a sure place because only Jesus can take a:

—Sapling and turn it into a tree; an egg and develop a chicken

—A boy and turn him into a man; Sinner and turn him to a saint!

Jesus who died on Calvary!

Jesus who rose with the victory over death and grave!

Jesus, he is a sure place that will never let you down!

Totally Crossed Out!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 25, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"A double minded man is unstable in all his way" James 1:8; "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleans your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded;"-Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord and he shall lift you up." James 4:8,10.

Introduction

Have you ever been in a situation where you could not make up your mind? Those were the kind of situations where you found yourself torn between two directions, each compelling you to make a choice. Today many young people find themselves in that situation. Many have become totally confused and have freaked out.

This indecision is best reflected by the popular singing group Kriss Kross. These two young men emerged from the plethora of rappers in today's music world to become instant hits with young people across the nation. Their songs are simple and rhythmic, but what gets your attention is the fact that they wear their clothes backward. Their shirts, hats, pants, even their underwear are worn backwards. They present a picture of confusion, and indecision as they sing about "Jump" and "I missed the bus." Their album "Totally Crossed Out" has been scooped up by millions of young people, making these two Junior High School students instant stars and millionaires. Like long hair became youth's symbol of the sixties revolution against the traditional materialistic values of the times, Kriss Kross has caught the imagination of many young people. Many would wear their clothes backward if it were not for school rules and the stern eyes of their parents.

There are many young people who are, to say the least, "totally crossed out." They are totally confused about life and find it difficult to make decisions. Some give up on school, family and even their personal goals in their confusion. Frustration is the end result of the dilemma and troubled spirits is the final product.

Christian youth, while in the world are not of the world. They hear and listen to the songs of their peers but are not impacted by the negative messages. As Christians, they don't suffer from double mindedness. They know whom they serve, where they are going and what it will take to get them there. Though the world may be totally crossed out, confused and troubled, they have decided to live for Jesus.

Praise God for Christian youth that serve God with love, commitment and a made up mind!

Exposition

This text focuses on James, the brother of Jesus, as he writes words of encouragement to Jewish Christians and to others that were scattered abroad. His message encouraged them to be strong in the faith and exemplify their faith through their good works.

In the first eight verses of James 1 he encouraged Christians to expect many temptations and tests that would serve to build their faith in Christ. In verse two he began by explaining that Christians should expect moments of temptation and should be ready for them. His phrase "divers temptations" is used to suggest that the world will attack persons trying to live the Christian life from all sides. Verse 3 addresses the attitude that Christians should have when the tempting moment comes. We face temptations with the full knowledge that the "trial of our faith worketh patience."

James' message to Christian Jews was that they should ask God for wisdom and faith to face their moment of trial with a made up mind, without wavering from one side to another.

In a very blunt statement, James told the Jewish Christians that they should approach their faith with a made up mind. He warned that a "double minded man is unstable in all his ways." His message was directed to members of the church who knew the right way to go but were often victims of temptations and tricks of the devil. He reminded them that double minded people were unstable, unsure and unpredictable.

In Chapter 4:7 he urges those who tend to be doubled minded to submit themselves wholly to God and "resist the devil, and he will flee from you." One way to resist the devil is suggested in verse 8: "Draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh to you." Those who are confused, living in both the world and the church at the same time are urged to "cleanse your hand ...purify your hearts"

Finally James suggests that the double minded person should make up their minds, and "Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord and he shall lift you up." There is no blessing in being mixed up, confused and crossed out. There is a blessing in making up your mind to live for Jesus no matter what.

As for James, historians tell us that in the year 62 A.D. that the Sanherin Council commanded James, who was the leader of the Church, to proclaim from the galleries of the temple that Jesus was not the Messiah. Instead James cried out that Jesus WAS the Son of God as loud as he could. His enemies reportedly hurled him to the ground and stoned him to death. Even in the face of death James refused to turn back. He had decided to follow Jesus and there was no turning back.

Criss Crossed lives

In the early days of the telephone, operators connected calls by taking the wire from your phone line and placing it in the jack of the caller. Sometimes when busy, the operators would get the calls criss crossed and the right call was sometimes plugged into the wrong jack.

Today there are many people who have their wires crossed. They have the right line in the wrong jack. As a result their lives are just the opposite of what they want them to be. They may not wear their clothing backwards, but they are strange aberrations of what they claim to be.

Homosexuality and lesbianism are clear examples of criss crossed values. Although the word of God clearly speaks against the homosexual life-style, there are hundreds of thousands of men and women who claim to be Christians and at the same time publicly announce their pride in being. 1 Corinthians 6:9-10 plainly says that the effeminate or others with such crisis crossed values cannot not enter the kingdom of heaven.

Even clearer than that, there are millions of people who claim to be Christians but engage in sex without being married, drown themselves in alcohol, steal from their employers, and backstab their friends. The fact that they know about Jesus and have pledged to live for him is the right line, but when they become practicing sinners, it's the right line in the wrong jack. The result is criss cross lives.

Today that same challenge is given to those who are living the double minded life.

Those who are filling the night clubs and discos on the weekends and filling the church pews on Sunday morning..how long halt ye between two opinions?

Those who are wrinkling hotel sheets with another man's wife, then sit angelically in church beside your own, how long?

Those who boogie and disco until the wee hours of the night and then shout all day in the name of the Lord, how long?

The end result of the Criss crossed life is confusion, frustration, death and destruction

Criss Crossed Lives Can Be Straightened out

Those who are totally crossed out, live their lives inside out, bottom side up, top side down, backwards, sideways and every way except the right way.

But I'm so glad that a life that has been totally crossed out, can be changed. Paul told the Corinthians that while they were practicing sinners they could not get in the kingdom of heaven but in 1 Corinthians 6:11 he added "And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus.."

James in 4:8 showed us how to untangle a criss crossed life. "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you..cleanse your hands, purify your hearts...humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord and he shall, lift you up."

I'm so glad that I'm not what I use to be!

I'm so glad that the Lord saved my soul!

There is a way to untangle a criss cross life! You can trade your criss cross for the old rugged cross!

The old rugged cross is not a crissed cross, for a criss crossed life only brings evil while the old rugged cross brings you good.

A criss crossed life brings you:

—Confusion, but the cross of Jesus brings you understanding —Defeat, but the cross of Jesus bring you the victory

—Tears you down, but the cross of Jesus builds you up

—Sadness, but the cross of Jesus brings you joy

Don't worry about crissed cross, but get your mind on This cross!

No wonder the song writer declared "At the cross, at the cross, where I first saw the light and the burdens of my heart roll away. It was there by faith I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!"

At the cross, there is hope in your moment of despair!

At the cross, there is strength for your moments of weakness!

At the cross, there is love when the whole world hates you!

So much love that Jesus, picked up an old cross and died out on calvary and rose early Sunday morning with all power in his hands.

Power to raise up a bowed down head!

Power to straighten out a criss crossed life!

All Power!

All Power!

A Blank Check On The Bank Of Heaven

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 18, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "But my God shall supply all your needs, according to his riches in glory in Christ Jesus." Philippians 4:19

Introduction

Suppose someone gave you a blank check, how would you feel? Consider the young boy about to leave on a journey of great distance. There was a sickness in his family and his presence was needed. He didn't have much money and was unsure of his finances for the journey. He decided to go anyway. Just before his departure a woman came to his home. The lady told him that she was aware that he was about to make a journey with meager means. The lady was strange to the neighborhood, but heard of the boy's plight.

After talking to him briefly she placed a check in his hand. It was made payable to him and signed, but there was no amount filled in. "If, along the way you need something, use this check and fill in the amount." The boy looked at this strange woman with skepticism and amused her by pretending to believe her words. He folded the check and went on his journey. Along the way he encountered many obstacles that challenged him. At the close of each day he had not place to lay his head because the hotels required money. He hungered. Finally he became sick almost to death. When his family located him and brought him home, he was a frail and puny. On his sick bed the woman came to see him. "When you were hungry, why didn't you use the check to put bread on your table? When you had no place to lay your head, why didn't you use the check?" The boy said "I didn't believe anybody would just give me blank check, I thought it was a joke. I never used it because I didn't think it was any good." The woman shook her head as she told him "Son, my father is the head of the bank. This check is drawn on his account. I am a signer on his account. If this check, with my name on it, would have been presented at my father's bank, regardless to the amount, it would have been paid. You had it, but you wouldn't use it, what a shame."

Did you know God gives each of us a blank check drawn on the bank of heaven? It's a promissory note that pledges to save us from sin and to provide unlimited blessings from heaven. Unfortunately, some of us have it, but we don't use it.

As Christians, we are grateful to God for the opportunity of salvation. We know that God has promised to save and protect us and has given us the assurance that whenever we need him, he'll answer our call. It's a blank check, waiting to be used!

Exposition

This text focuses on a letter, written by Paul, while imprisoned in Rome. He wrote to the Church in Philippi with an urgent tone. He encouraged them to remain full of joy despite their circumstances. It had been 10 years since their sufferings and persecutions began. Paul wrote them words of encouragement to rekindle the flame of joy that burned in their hearts.

Throughout all of his life Paul cared very little for financial gain. He worked as a tent maker and supported himself by his trade. He never requested or burdened any of the congregations he founded to sustain him. However, he knew it was legitimate for any bearer of the Gospel to live out of the Gospel. Some used the fact that he never asked for anything as a rational and theological basis to claim that nothing was due to others. Therefore on occasion, Paul accepted donations from those who wanted to help him. In this letter, Paul was under house arrest in Rome and had received one such offering from the Philippians. They had sent two when he was in Thessalonica and seemed constantly concerned about his welfare. In his words of thanks, Paul said he was grateful for the offering not because he needed the money but because it was an evidence of fruit credited to their account (4:17).

Imbedded in his response is a great truth: every believer has an account in heaven which is increased by the exercise of his fruit. In this specific instance Paul suggested that they were blessed by their kind act of trying to help him. It added to their account, as did any deed that reflected the attributes of love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance.

However, if their accounts were somehow overdrawn, Paul reminded them that "My God shall supply all your needs.." In essence Paul told the Philippians: Your faith in God and works builds up your account in heaven. But if for some reason, you are faced with circumstances that are too large for your stores of faith and boldness, remember, God gives you a blank check. This blank check is an unlimited line of credit to obtain all of your needs.

A Blank Check From Heaven

Today, many people use checks for the convenience of making purchases without carrying large sums of cash with them. The first consideration about the worth of a check is the name of the bank.

NAME OF THE BANK. The name of the bank suggests its stability and dependability. Large American Banks such as Citibank and Chase Manhattan bank are known for their stability. The probability that they can weather financial storms is great so people feel safe when they get a check drawn on a stable bank.

If we feel safe with a check from a stable bank then we should feel even safer with a check from the bank of heaven. It is older than time and is supported by the riches and glory of God. Unlike man's bank, which only responds to financial demands, a check from the bank of heaven is good for many things. God told Moses "I am that I am" and certainly the bank of Heaven is good for exactly that: finances, "I am that,"; healing, "I am that!" Whatever you need, the bank of heaven can make it happen.

DATE. The date of the check is important. It lets the bank know when it is authorized to pay the check. It is a common practice today to "Post date" a check. This means that the person issuing the check does not have enough funds to back it up at the present but will on a certain day. The check is no good until that day.

The date on God's blank check to those who believe in him is dated "NOW." 2 Corinthians 6:2 reminds us that "now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation." The blessings that God offers each of us is not postdated to some later date, but is available exactly when you need it, right now!

PAY TO THE ORDER OF: This line on any check tells the bank the name of the person that can collect. Businesses, organizations and individuals can cash commercial checks, but not checks on the bank of heaven.

The blank check that God gives us is made payable only to believers! John 3:16 reminds us that God loved the world so much that he would give his son to save the world. Whosoever believes on the Son would receive a blank check, made payable to him, drawn on the bank of heaven. The check is made payable to "Whosoever Believeth" which means me and you!

AMOUNT. An important part of the check is the amount. It tells exactly what you are to receive. The top line says in numbers how much you are to receive, but the second line spells out in words, exactly how much you are to get, so that there is no confusion! Romans 6:23 says the gift of God to all believers is eternal life. To be sure that we understand that, on a check from heaven it is spelled out "Eternal Life." This includes all of the blessings and gifts that come with eternal life.

SIGNATURE: If a check has no signature it is completely worthless. It could be made out for $1 million, in your name, payable today, but if it has no signature it is worthless. Banks are responsible only for paying checks that bear the signature of an authorized signer on the account.

John 1 tells us that the Word became flesh and dwelled among men. In so doing, he countersigned a blank check for anyone who believed in Christ. In John 1:12 he gave them access to the riches of the bank of heaven as if they were direct sons and daughters of God!

Why We have this check

The “For” line on a check explains the reason the check was or identifies the account to which it is to be applied. At your local bank this line might indicate rent, utilities or groceries. However, the “for” line on our blank check says we have received it is because of the love of God.

Romans 5:8 notes that “While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.”

He loved us with a love that was:

—Higher than the heavens; Deeper than the oceans!

—Sweeter than honeycomb; Greater than the universe!

—Stronger than the wind; Fresher than the morning dew!

It was love that prompted him to pick up and old rugged cross and die for our sins! It was a love that challenge to taste death for three days and nights, but to rise in victory!

He arose with all power in his hand, offering blank checks to any that will receive him!

But when you go to a bank to cash any check you must submit some identification to prove who you are!

You need to be able to say “I know I am a child of God, although I move so slow!”

I know I am a child of God because I heard his call and responded “If the Lord needs somebody, hear am I, send me!”

Give The People What They Want

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La., 71202
October 11, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "And the LORD said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them. — 1 Sam 8:7 "For God So loved the world,that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." John 3:16

Introduction

How do you distinguish between your wants and your needs? In 1938, noted sociologist H.A. Murray in his work "Explorations in Personality" estab lished that our needs involve both physical and social concerns. Needs are those aspects of life that are essential to survival. Physical needs involve: food, clothing, shelter. Our social needs may involve our need for achievement, recognition, status, power etc. Dr. Murray describes our wants as "psychogenic" secondary products of our needs. Wants are linked to needs, but are not necessary to satisfy needs, except in our own mind. We need a place to live, but we want a big house with five bathrooms. We need to eat, but we want to dine lavishly on fine cuisines. We need clothes to wear, but our want for designer clothes is linked to our need for recognition and status.

One mark of spiritual maturity is to know the difference between needs and wants. This maturity also enables us to set our priorities in a way that will meet our needs and satisfy our wants. Unfortunately there are many people who spend their entire lives chasing after their wants and neglecting their needs. Want based happiness is derived from the desire to keep up with Joneses. "Keeping up with Joneses" is a life draining experience that leads to unhappiness and discontentment. The story is told of Abraham Lincoln who was once seen walking down a street with two little boys who were screaming and yelling. A friend yelled out the window at the man who would be president and asked "What are those fellows yelling about Abe?" Mr. Lincoln looked at the two boys and answered "One of the boys has some nuts and the other one is going nuts trying to get them." Many today are "going nuts" trying to get wants that far exceed their needs.

As Christians, we have learned the crucial difference between our needs and our wants. We are not tempted to spend our time in meaningless competition to achieve more "wants" than others. We constantly remind ourselves of Philippians 4:19, that “my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory..

Exposition

This text focuses on Samuel who served as a judge over Israel for 40 years. In meeting with the people Samuel always kept them focused on God’s will. The leadership he provided was a theocracy in that God led them in every aspect of their lives.

Samuel established a school to teach young men beginning in the prophetic field. As he began to age, he appointed his sons as Judges but that proved a failure since they were wild and greedy. The leaders of the tribes, who had watched the nations around them for years, wanted to emulate the national organization of their neighbors. They seized upon the failed leadership of Samuel’s sons and demanded a king for Israel. Since Samuel was about 60 years old, they reasoned that it was in the nation’s best interest to establish a government that could protect the people from its enemies. Samuel was displeased at the request of the leaders. He felt it was a rejection of his leadership. He had called upon the Lord for them in battle against the Philistines and had given them his best. It appeared that they were rejecting him as their leader and he was hurt. God told Samuel to give the people what they wanted but not without warnings of the impact of their decision.

Despite his reservations Samuel did as God ordered. He told the people that if they established a monarchy that it would place a heavy burden upon the people because of the costs. He warned them how they would be taxed, brought into military service. He told them that their tradesmen would be called upon to use their skills in the service of country and king as they provided the food for his table and diplomatic guests.

Although Samuel’s warnings were clear the people still insisted on having a King. 1 Despite his own inclinations, Samuel listened to the voice of God and told the people that God would give them a king.

Some Don’t Know What They Want

Today there are many who have difficulty choosing between their wants and their needs. As frustrating as that may seem, they are fortunate because at least they have something to work toward. There are too many people today who don’t know what they want!

Solomon didn’t know what he wanted. One day he was into building projects. He built a fine palace, temple and other great works. The next day he was studying astronomy, where he studied the sun, moon and stars. One day he was into music and hired the finest musicians of his time to play for him. The next day he was deep into the world of commercial investment and chasing after the dollar. One day he was into parties and good times and hosted grand parties and feasts.

Like Solomon, there are many today who do not know what they want, but they are looking for something. They jump from one thing to another trying to find happiness. They are not exactly sure what they are looking for, but they feel compelled to keep looking ,hoping to recognize happiness when it comes. Solomon spent his entire life searching and concluded that what he was looking for was right there all the time.

Some Don't Want What they Have

If it's frustrating not to know what you want, consider those who have something, but don't want what they have!

The prodigal son was at home with a family that loved him. There was a roof over his head and food on the table yet he didn't want what he had. He wanted something else and went into the far country where he wasted his life in riotous living.

Similarly there are many today who abandon what they have while they spend their time chasing after rainbows and mirages.

Homes have fallen apart and personal fortunes have been lost as some have simply walked out on families, careers and productive futures. They don't want what they have, and don't know what they want.

God Gave the people what the Needed

They confuse what they want for what they need. They use "want" and "need" interchangeably as if both had the samemeaning. There are many who need:

—love but they want sex, from any warm body that will provide it.

—joy but they want goodtimes. They look for it in an endless succession of nightclubs, discos and bars.

—Friendship but they want sunny weather buddies who share with them as long as the sun is shining but disappear when storms rise.

—Character but they want an image of respectability.

—Salvation but they want a denomination

—A cross to bear but they want a cross to wear.

A long time ago God looked down on the world and found it to be in need. He heard the prayers of Israel as it asked for what it wanted. Israel wanted a leader that would help them in war. Israel wanted a revolutionary that would be their champion against the Romans. They wanted an earthly kingdom to rival the splendor of Solomon.

However, God decided to answer their prayer. He decided to give the people what they needed instead of giving them what they want.

The world needs

—patience in the midst of its problems;

—Support in the midst of its suffering;

—Hope in the midst of its hardship;

—Shelter in the time of its storms

—Song in the middle of the midst of its midnight hour

God's response to the world was simple. Basically what he said was "I know what you ask me for, but because I love, I not going to give you what you want but, I'm going to give you hat you need.

For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life.

The world wants laughter, fun and excitement, but what it needs is Jesus who brings genuine joy that is unspeakable, unmatchable, unmistakable and unmeasurable!

The world wants possessions, luxury and wealth, but what it needs is Jesus who offers treasures from heaven that are, unlimited, unfailing, unreserved, and unconstrained!

The world wants position, power and prestige, but what it needs is Jesus who offers:

—Assurance in the midst of affliction

—Strength in the midst of weakness

—Courage in the face of a challenge

—Boldness in the midst of a battle

No wonder the song writer declared, "You can have all this world, but give me Jesus!"

Jesus, the Lilly of the Valley!

Jesus, my rock in a weary land!

Jesus, who died on Calvary and rose on the third day

You can have all this world, but give me Jesus!

Jesus is all the world to me, my life, my joy,my all. He is my strength from day today, without him I would fall. When I am sad he makes me glad, he's my friend!

Out On A Limb

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.
October 4, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth." — Jeremiah 23:5; "And, behold, there was a man named Zacchaeus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich. And he sought to see Jesus who he was; and could not for the press, because he was little of stature. And he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see him: for he was to pass that way. — Luke 19:2-4

Introduction

When was the last time you took an action on pure faith alone? Were you a little anxious about the outcome? If so, then you know what it's like to be "out on a limb."

Consider the little boy whose home caught fire in the middle of the night. As the stairways leading to the ground collapsed, he soon found that there was no exit except to climb out of his window. Afraid, the boy could not move and stood motionless in the window as people below screamed. An unknown man climbed up a drain pipe to reach the boy's room, but the pipe fell under his weight just as he reached the top. The man spotted a limb hanging close to the window and recognized it as the only way down. He told the boy to hold onto him as he made a desperate leap for that limb. As the man's hands held onto the limb, the boy realized he had burned them severely, but the man said nothing. Once on the ground the man disappeared. No one knew who he was or where he came from. He appeared and simply disappeared into the night.

Weeks later, the town's people gathered in a meeting to decide who would care for the little boy since his parents had died in the fire. A wealthy man, a farmer, and a businessman came forward to offer to rear the boy as their own. The little boy simply gazed at the floor as each of them talked. Then a man entered the room and stood in the crowd. When he removed his hands from his pockets the boy who had never seen his face, recognized those hands as the hands of the man who saved him. The little boy ran to the man and hugged him with great compassion. The others competing for the child sat as the town leader spoke to the little boy. "Son," why do you want this man to raise you? The little boy answered: "All I know sir, is that when I was in trouble, he went out on a limb for me." Custody of the child was given to the man, without comment.

As Christians, we can appreciate the love that Jesus has shown for us. He loved us so much that he put his own life on the line that we might have a chance to a better life. He did more than just go out on a limb. The little boy's testimony could very well be our own: "When I was in trouble, he hung on a tree for me."

Exposition

This text focuses on Zacchaeus, a tax collector who lived in Jericho. Jesus chose to pass through Jericho as he preached about the kingdom of heaven. Jericho was a city of priests and religious leaders, known for its large population of clericals and others who ministered to the law of Moses. Zacchaeus, on the other hand was a hated tax collector and a publican. He was classed with the prostitutes and harlots because he collected taxes for the Romans.

When Jesus made his arrival into Jericho, Zacchaeus wanted to see him and learn about him. He was pushed aside and lost in the crowd as people pressed from all around. However, for just one look, Zacchaeus climbed a Sycamore tree and from its limbs saw Jesus as he approached. With all the priests and clerical types surrounding him, Jesus saw Zacchaeus, out on a limb. He told him to come down because he would sit with him that evening. The priests were insulted that this great teacher would come to their city and shun them to dine and fellowship with a tax collector and publican. They wanted to know what redeeming qualities did Zacchaeus have that cause Jesus to take such note of him. Jesus never gave them an answer to their satisfaction. He simply went about his way.

Zacchaeus, met the Lord, because he went out on a limb.

There are many people today who have had bad experiences in the past and are hesitant about going out on a limb. Most of these bad experiences have involved misplaced trust. There are those who went against their better judgment and co-signed loans for friends and relatives, only to have them abandon their commitment. The same is true for people who lent their good name to causes and enterprises and then found that others misused them. Some have taken the lead in civic causes and social issues as the masses encouraged them. Later, they discovered that sometimes "people will put you there on that limb, and then saw it off."

Going out on a limb requires considerable confidence and trust. Those who go out on a limb with men, run the risk of getting left out there alone, because men cannot control the variables that impact their lives. This is not to suggest that we should become virtual paranoids, suspecting everyone and trusting no one. It does suggest however that we should seek God's guidance before we climb out on a limb. Such was the case with Gideon who wanted to be sure that he had God's support before he led an army of men into battle. He asked God to send him an undeniable sign that his decision was the right one. Samson would have lived longer if he had not gone out on a limb and trusted Delilah with the secret of strength. He went out on a limb and she cut it off. Had he talked it over with the Lord, his decision might have been different.

When we are deciding to whether to go out on a limb in life, it is better to talk to God about it first. Otherwise we might find ourselves out there all by ourselves.

Some Have Trouble Trusting God

Once a person has been left on a limb alone, it is difficult for them to trust again. Those who have loved and had their affections trampled by others, are hesitant to love or marry again. Those who have confided in friends only to have their friends betray them, are hesitant to trust others again. Having been hurt once, they do not want to be hurt again.

It is understandable, therefore, why some hesitate to make a decision to turn their lives over to God. Some have been let down before and they don't want to be hurt, dumped, or rejected again. When they hear the voice of God urging them to arise and take active service, some turn a deaf ear, out of fear that they will lose more than they will gain from another misplaced trust.

There is a big difference between trusting in men and trusting in God.

Men will let you down, but God will hold you up!

Men will leave you by yourself, but God will never leave you alone!

Men will abandon you when the going gets tough, but God will be a shelter for you in a time of storm.

David when out on a limb for God and built a great nation. Listen to his conclusions trusting God:

"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding." Proverbs' 3:5

"Oh Lord my God, in thee do I put my trust, save me from all them that persecute me and deliver me." Psalm 7:1

"What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee..."Psalm 56:3

Today, Jesus is calling for men and women, boys and girls to put their trust in him. He will save their souls, lift their burdens and guarantee them place in the kingdom of heaven. This is the same Jesus that Jeremiah referred to as the righteous branch of David.

Jesus, as the righteous branch, wants to take our:

—Worse and give us his best

--Hatred and give us his love

—Burdens and give us his blessing;

--Sorrows and give us his joy

—Guilt and give us his grace;

--Weakness and give us his strength.

Those who want to get to the branch, must be willing to go out on the limb of faith and reach for him. You can't get to the righteous branch without first going out on a limb! Zacchaeus wanted to see Jesus, but he had to climb the tree of faith and go out on a limb!

Those who put their trust in the Lord and accept him have found that there has never been a time that he has left them out on a limb!

Strong winds may come, but he'll never leave you alone. He promised, never to leave me, never to leave me alone!

Before we were asked to go out on a limb for him, Jesus went out on a limb for us. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Jesus went out on a limb when he came to a cruel world to offer himself as a sacrifice.

Not only did he go out on a limb, he went even further. For one day he picked an old rugged cross and went out on Calvary and died. He died that he could rise on the third day with victory and assurance that those who trust in him will have victory too!

Go out on a limb for Jesus, he'll be by your side!

Go out on a limb for Jesus, he'll wipe tears from your eyes!

Go out on a limb for Jesus, he'll make way out of no way!

I f you want to see Jesus, step out on faith and he'll never let you down

Cinderellas & Cinderfellas

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.
September 27, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "And he sent, and brought him in. Now he was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to. And the Lord said, Arise, anoint him: for this is he." 1 Samuel 16:12; "And the king loved Esther above all the women, and she obtained grace and favor in his sight more than all the virgins; so that he set the royal crown upon her head, and made her queen instead of Vashti." Esther 2:17; "..Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man, the things which god hath prepared for them that love him." 1 Corinthians. 2:9

Introduction

Is it possible for a person, born in poverty and obscurity to rise to high heights in these times? Are the rags to riches accounts of great men and women exceptions to the rule or examples to be studied and emulated? Can today's Christian really expect to overcome the odds and reach plateaus of success? It is being done every day by men and women who believe in the power of God!

Most of us are familiar with the story of Cinderella, the poor girl who had a chance to attend the prince's ball with a little help from her fairy Godmother. While there she danced with and enchanted the prince before rushing back home before midnight. We are familiar with how the prince sought after her and found her by matching her feet to a glass slipper she left behind. She provided the stuff dreams are made of when the prince married her and they lived happily ever after. Likewise, we are familiar with Oliver Twist, the poor boy who was living in poverty in England, struggling for food every day but rose to prominence as the child of a wealthy English family once he was discovered. Stories such as these have fed the imaginations of young people for years.

But there were some real lives, touched by the hand of God, that the Bible presents as example of God's ability to make cinderellas and cinderfellas out of every true believer. The life of David and Esther, two Old Testament characters who rose from obscurity, overcame racial and social barriers and succeeded in life with the help of God. Just as these young people were chosen to rise in biblical times youth today can rise to high heights as Christians if they will allow the attitude of Christian service to take first place in their lives and give life their best shot.

What God has in store for those who trust him dwarfs anything we can imagine. The sky is the limit for our potential with God on our side because "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Exposition

This text focuses on two special biblical characters that are clear examples of God's history of blessing those who trust him, despite the limitations of their circumstance.

Esther was a beautiful Jewish girl. She was bright, intelligent, and one of the most beautiful women of the land. However, she was a Jewess. She was part of a captured race that was ward to the Persians. When Xerxes ordered a beauty pageant held from which he would select a wife, Esther entered, confident that despite her race, she could win and become queen of all Persia. She entered and won. In 476 B.C. she became queen of all Persia. While on the throne she influenced the king to save the Jewish people from plots to destroy them. She arranged for another Jew, Mordecai, to move up and become the prime minister of the country. Their influence paved the way for the return of the Jews from exile. Hers is the story of a teenager who never doubted that God could make things happen for her, despite her social circumstance. She did the unthinkable and achieved the impossible. It was a real life cinderella story.

David was a shepherd boy who was courageous, poetic, and ingenious. He guarded the fields of his father and spent weeks at a time in the mountains. He was far removed from the glories of battle, the pomp and pagentry of the royalty and thoughts of such things were just faint dreams. Even in his family he was the least likely of his brothers to achieve great success. They were older, better known, and were soldiers. He was just a shepherd boy. However, God sent the prophet Samuel to the House of Jesse to anoint a future king. When this ruddy, but handsome young man came in from the hills, God told Samuel, he was the one that would one day be king. It did not matter that he was a virtual unknown or that he was just a teenager, he would be king. It would not matter that the only battles he had fought were with wild animals and were not against enemies of the kingdom, he would be king. Years later, this young man rose up from obscurity and became one of the greatest king's of Israel. He was not a member of the royal family. He was not from an influential family. He was just a farm boy who became king. It was a real life cinder-fella story.

Each are clear examples of what can be done by those who trust and believe in God's word. Paul, writing to the Corinthians, said no one can even imagine the good things God has in store for those who trust him. He can take the obscure and bring it to full recognition. He can take rags and turn them to riches. He is a mighty and powerful God.

Blessings Waiting To Happen

Today there are millions of rags to riches stories that have unfolded in front of our very eyes. It is evidence that God is still in the rags to riches business, taking those who were least likely to succeed and making successes out of them.

The roll call is endless:Arthur Ashe, who started playing tennis on a segregated playground in 1950 learned to succeed at what is generally respected as a white man's game. Over a 30 year career he climbed over racial barriers and stereotypes to become the first Black man to win Wimbledon in 1975. Bill Cosby was born in Philadelphia during the depression, when people were having a hard time keeping their heads up but he became successful making them laugh. A comedian, who never uses rated x scripts, he never stopped studying and earned a Ph.D in education and today earns over $100 million a year. John Johnson rose from the obscurity of Arkansas City Arkansas, overcame racism and poverty to become publisher of Ebony, Jet and president of Johnson publications. He is listed as one of the 400 richest men in the world by Forbes magazine. Cicely Tyson, whose character "Miss Jane Pittman" and scores of other noble Black women rose from the poverty of New York City to become an Emmy award winning actress summed up her account by saying that one day it became apparent to her that God had something big for her to do "I pushed myself away from the desk and announced to the world that I was sure God didn't put me on the face of this earth to bang on a typewriter for rest of my life...I wasn't sure what else was out there for me to do, but I certainly was going to try to find it." She stepped out on faith and found an exciting career on stage without nudity, profanity or taking any role that would detract from her proud African-American Heritage.

The list of rags to riches accounts is endless from the five brothers who danced and sang their way out of Gary Indiana as the Jackson Five to Mega stars Micheal Jackson and the Jackson family. The list could include the Jordans, Sugar Ray Leonards and even Ray "You Got the Right One Baby" Charles, who overcame blindness and drug addiction to make it to the top.

Todays youth can see examples all around them of men and women who have risen from obscurity, overcome obstacles and have become successful in their respected areas. But it is not necessary to go as far as New York of Philadelphia to find such accounts. Look around in your own family and the imprint of God's powerful hand on your family can be seen. Your family may not be listed in the Forbes Magazine top 400 richest families, but look what the Lord has done for you. Listen to the accounts of your grand parents as they tell of the hardships and barriers they endured in their youth.

Look at grandpa, who had doors slammed in his faced, opportunities denied to him, but yet he had enough strength to raise up his children and lift them on his shoulders so that they would have a better chance.

Look around you and see where God has brought you from! He has lifted our families from obscurity and isolation to the threshold of success!

Look where he has brought us from!

Eyes hath not seen

Youth today should remind themselves that God is still in the blessing business. In every generation there are some Cicely Tyson's who conclude: that God has something more for me than a life of welfare, food stamps, unemployment and obscurity. I don't know what it is but I'm going to find it!

The same words Paul said to the Corinthians ring true today "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard,neither hath entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him"

If you trust in the Lord, he will make a way for you!

He started making that about 2000 years ago. He made that way when he died on Calvary and rose on Sunday morning!

He will lift you and your family out of your social circumstance and bring you to a better day!

If you trust in the Lord, He will..

—Open doors when you knock!

—Satisfy you when you are in want!

—Reward you when you give him your best!

—Give you your dreams when ask —Hear you when you pray!

No wonder the Song writer declared "I will trust in the Lord, till I die!"

For Whom Do I Carry This Cross?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 20, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread." Matthew 4:3

Introduction

What motivates you to serve God? Why do you sing in the choir? Why do you want to be a deacon? Why do you preach, usher, serve on a committee, witness or teach in the church? Is it out of love, commitment or dedication to the cause of Christ or is there another reason, kept secret that only you know.

Consider the ancient teacher who was known for the strange ways that he taught his students the important issues of life. One day he and two of his students walked along a stony road as he lectured to them about the importance of serving others. He stopped and asked each student to pick up a stone and carry it for him. The first student picked up the largest stone he could find. The second picked up a small pebble. The teacher said nothing but simply walked and talked about commitment and service. About noon the teacher sat his students down and gave each of them bread and water in proportion to the size of the stone they carried for him. To the first who had been carrying a huge heavy stone he gave an entire loaf. To the second, who only carried a pebble he gave a crumb of bread, about the size of a fingernail. They ate silently and the second student hungered. As they walked along the road the teacher talked about obedience, service and commitment. Again he asked his students to pick up and carry a stone for him. The first student did as before he picked up a relatively large stone and placed it under his arm. This time the second student picked up not one but two large stones and placed one under each arm. At the close of the day, after walking many miles the teacher asked each student to throw their stones along the roadside. The first bowed humbly to his teacher and went home. The second complained. "I carried these stones all that way and there is nothing? No bread?" The teacher stared the young student in the eye and asked "For whom did you carry the stones?" Nothing more was said.

As Christians we must always strive to keep "service to God" as the reason that we work in the church, serve our fellowman, and give of our time and energy. That which we share with others is not for personal glory, quest for power or for personal advancement, but only for the advancement of the kingdom of God. Jesus has asked every disciple to pick up his cross and follow him. We must daily ask ourselves the question: "For whom do I carry this cross? For myself or for the glory of God?" No one can provide the answer for us, we must answer that question ourselves.

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ during his wilderness trial. Just before he began his public ministry Jesus retreated into the wilderness to pray, think and make important decisions about the course of his ministry. This lasted 40 days during which time Satan appeared and posed several alternative courses of action which were available to him. Each alternative showed Jesus how he could use his great faith and powers to promote himself. If he was willing, said Satan, he could submit himself to Satan's direction and bow down to him and the result would be fame, glory and power. In another instance, Satan tempted Jesus to use his invincible nature to rise above any opposition, army or foe that man could bring against him because if any harm would come to him the angels of heaven would quickly come and protect him from danger. The prospect of being a leader, impervious to pain and death would make Jesus the most powerful man on earth. The most tempting of all however, was Satan's appeal to Jesus to use his power to satisfy his own carnal needs. Satan challenged Jesus to take stones and turn them into bread.

Jesus' response to all of Satan's challenges was simply to quote scripture and to put Satan's thoughts out of his mind. The reason for his wilderness retreat was to make a commitment that would carry him all the way to Calvary. His was a decision of whether or not to pick up the cross of salvation and carry it to the end. Moreover, he had to also decided whether the ministry he would begin would be for himself or for the sake of fallen mankind. If his ministry was to be self promoting then he could use his powers to build great armies, world empires and remain invulnerable to death at the same time. If his ministry was to provide a means of redemption mankind doomed to punishment because of its sins, then he would have to reject all of Satan's appeals.

His ultimate decision was wrapped up in his dismissal of Satan by saying "Get thee behind me Satan. It is written, man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." He decided to carry the cross, not for himself but for fallen mankind.

These Stones

The stones with which Satan tempted Jesus represented personal opportunity. His dilemma was to choose between obedience to God and his chance to rise to fame, fortune and power. Today there are many that find themselves in the same dilemma.

In the wilderness of introspection each of us is called upon to decide whether or not our service to God is out of obedience or other personal reasons. Do we give because we believe it is right to do so or is our giving limited to special efforts headed by special friends of ours. Do we seek membership in a church because of its networking potential and propensity to help our career or do we do so because we want to study the word of God. Do we work in our auxiliary that men might see our good works and praise us, or do we do what we do because we want to glorify God?

Just as Jesus took time to consider his motivation for ministry and service, each of us should do the same. Each should ask, "Am I am doing what I do in church for the pastor, a favorite deacon or friend, or am I doing it for the Lord?" When we answer "for the Lord" then certain things become unimportant. It is unimportant if:

—We do not receive publicity for our effort.

—We are not showered with praise for our involvement

—Our names are not called and highlighted

Those who serve for the praise and glory of God carry out their responsibilities not for personal glory and fame but they carry them out to serve the Lord.

Today individual church members are called upon to choose between "these stones" and "this rock", personal glory or unselfish service.

There is a difference between the what stones can offer and what the rock offers. The stones can award service, but the rock can reward service.

These stones can award with:

—Praise of men, but cannot reward with glory from God.

—Medals and awards, but cannot reward with a crown of Life

—Crowds and companionship, but cannot reward with friendship and fellowship

—Applause and cheers, but cannot reward with a "well done" from the Lord of Host.

These stones offer hallow glory void of a heavenly endorsement.

This Rock

At the conclusion of his wilderness trial Jesus looked out across time and saw millions of lost souls and decided against personal glory. He decided to pick up the cross for the lost generations of mankind.

For whom do you carry this cross? Jesus carried his cross for those whom the world:

—Curses, to show them that God is still blessing them

—Rejects, to show them that God is still receiving them

—Forsakes, to show them that God is still upholding them

—Condemns, to show them that God is still forgiving them

—Hates, to show them that God is still loving them

John 3:16 says God loved us so much that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!

In times like these we don't need empty stones, but we need "this rock." Millions have found that there is power in this rock.

This rock:

—Revives the weak and makes them strong

—Reshapes tragedy and turns it into triumph

—Restores faltering faith and rekindles the flame of hope

—Reduces mountains and turns them into molehills

—Relieves pressures and eliminates pain

—Replaces despair and rebuilds lost hope

No wonder the song writer declares: "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!"

In times like these, stand on the rock!

This rock is Jesus, whose perfection never declines

Jesus, whose goodness never decreases

Jesus, whose truth never changes

Jesus, whose peace never ceases

Jesus, whose faith never fluctuates

Jesus, whose power never weakens

I'm so glad that Jesus carried the cross for me!

I'm glad that he rose on the third day!

I have decided to stand on the rock!

Come what may...Stand on the rock!

A Good Old Age

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: "And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age. — Genesis 15:15

Introduction

What is the secret to a long and fruitful life? Is there a special diet or manner of living that can produce longevity as its end product? How do you live to a "good old age?" Some say exercise keeps them going. Some point to a special diet. Some say its their energetic spirit that allows them to defy time and live beyond their expected three score and ten.

Consider the little boy who came to his grandfather while he was working in his garden and asked "Grandpa, how do you live so long, you must be about a hundred?" The old man kept working in his garden and didn't answer. The boy asked repeatedly and finally the grandfather looked at a row of Purple Hulled peas he was planting and said "peas." The boy thought that was a strange answer and a while later he asked the same question again. This time the old man looked at the row of squash he was planting and said "squash." When the boy asked a third time the old man answered "Lettuce." By this time the boy thought his grandfather was growing senile saying peas, squash and lettuce were the secrets of long life. When the grandfather finished, he took the little boy on his knee and said "If you want to live a long life plant yourself a row of p's that is Patience and Prayer so that you can wait for God to move in his own time. Plant you a row of squash, so you can squash out wild and loose living and squash evil thoughts and deeds. Plant you a row of Let-us: that is "Let us praise God every day." "Let us live by his law." "Let us have faith that no matter what comes he will provide for your needs." The little boy stared at the garden then looked at his grandfather as the old man said "It's all in what you plant, for whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap."

Those who desire to live to a good old age should prepare themselves by living lives committed to service to God and mankind, temperate but optimistic and secure in the knowledge that God will provide for their every need if there is faith, trust and obedience to his word.

As Christians, we place our faith and trust in God. We sow in faith, wait with patience and pray for God's will. We work diligently to squash evil from our lives while always facing life with an optimistic spirit that helps us to weather the storms that life brings. How can we live a long life? The answer is simple. Peas, squash and Lettuce give us a clue.

Exposition

This text focuses on a promise of long, fruitful and abundant life that God made to his servant Abraham. Abraham, who has been characterized in scripture as a man of great faith and trust in God was only one of three men in scripture that have been described as men who lived to see a "good old age." Gideon, the great warrior who reduced his forces to 300 men on the command of God and faced his enemy on faith alone,was described as one who died in a "good old age." David, whose life was characterized by strength, action and humility before God was also described as one who died a "good old age." The only other person described in this manner was Abraham. Abraham lived a life devoted to God and his family. Even in his golden years he found favor with God and learned that even in his 90's there was still work for him to do.

There is apparently a difference between "old age" and a "good old age." This is clear when it is noted that Abraham was in his mid 90's when God spoke to him in this text and made him a promise that he would have a child, a great family and many blessings. Abraham was elderly, but there was still work for him to do. The description of a "good old age" was applied to the three men whose dedication, service and faith excelled above all others. In Genesis 25:8, over 80 years later, Abraham died and his death is recorded this way: "Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full years; and was gathered to his people."

Act on faith

Each of the three men who were described as dying in a "good old age" shared common traits that could be helpful to those today who desire to do the same.

All three were men of great faith. Perhaps one truth that time teaches all people is that God is true to his word. What is for us we will receive. Many spend most of their lives squandering time, struggling to acquire, climb, achieve and get ahead of the next person. Our accomplishments are often achieved at the expense of our health, family and personal well being. We act, but we seldom act in faith, but on total dependence on our own capabilities.

Those who lived to see a "good old age" exercised faith in trying moments realizing that God had the capacity to bring all of his promises to fruition. It took faith for Abraham to part with his family and follow after a promise of land and prosperity given to him by God. It took even greater faith to prepare to sacrifice his son Isaac at God's command, knowing that God would provide a way for his will to be executed. It took faith for Gideon to take on huge enemies with just a handful of soldiers. These men shared this common characteristic of faith in God.

Therefore, one key characteristic of those who live to a "good old age" is the exercise of faith in God. This is the kind of faith that allows us to weather storms, and endure hardships.

It's the kind of faith that helps us to look adversity in the face and proclaim "It is well, with my soul."

Constant Praise

These three men constantly praised God. Among them David was the best known for his praise of the almighty. He enjoyed praising God and wrote scores of Psalms to praise him for his goodness, mercy and benevolence.

Those who live to a "good old age" seem to get a special joy from teaching, discussing and testifying about the goodness of God. We are blessed when we tell about the goodness of God. We are blessed further when we take time to teach and witness to others about his benevolence and goodness. Those who have experienced the goodness of God have no problem talking about him. Whether in a Sunday School class, sick room or in a convalescent home, a Saint of God who has felt the touch of his hand will seize every opportunity to tell what the Lord has done for them.

Abraham praised God for every thing. He built altars and bowed before God. In a similar sense, those who know the Lord enjoy being in his presence and they constantly bow to his will. Their testament seems to be "Thy way oh Lord, not mine. Thy will be done, not mine."

Those who live to a "good old age" seem to enjoy praising God. It is the kind of praise that is based on a history of mountain top experiences wherein each person has recognized the role that God has played in his or her life.

At peace with God

The final quality that all three men shared is that each of them lived lives "at peace with God." The text verse finds God promising Abraham "And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace.."

To be at peace with God is to have a life that is in accord with his will. Such peace requires that jangling discords, frayed relationships, and questionable lifestyles be brought in line before we go to meet the Lord.

To be at peace with God is to know that if death comes this very hour every thing is in order and our lives and souls are aligned with the will of God.

This peace provides hope in the midst of despair!

This peace gives stability in the midst of transition!

This peace gives us courage in the face of danger!

Those who live to a good old age all seem to be at peace with God.

It is a peace that declares "yea thou I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil for thou art with me."

It is a peace provided for a Saint that has been washed in the blood of the lamb, by Jesus himself.

It is a peace that perpetually gives thanks to God for every good thing and even in the face of death declares: "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

It is a peace rooted in the knowledge that when this life is over and crying days have ended, there is land over yonder where tear drops will never fall and joy will never end.

Over yonder, the wicked will cease from troubling!

Over yonder, the weary will be at rest!

Over yonder, every day will be Sunday and it'll always be howdy and never goodbye.

Down here some may live to a good old age, but "I've heard of a land on a faraway strain, it is the beautiful home of the soul ...tis a land where —The streets are made of Gold!

—The ambulance wheels won't roll

It's a land where we'll never grow old.

On Sunday September 14, 1992 Earling Little, Sr. , like Abraham, "gave up the ghost and died in a good old age. He was an old man, full of years, who was at peace with God.

Come See A Man

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: "Come see a man that told me all the things I have ever did. Is this not the Christ?" John 4:29

Introduction

Where did you meet the Lord? At Church? In a hospital room? At work? What did it take for his message of love and salvation to get through to you?

Dale Evans, wife of famous cowboy star Roy Rogers, wrote the story of her life and her conversion to Christianity in an autobiography that caused quite a stir with her publishers. She told the story of how she and Roy found Christ and were saved from what she described as a life of sin and shame. Her publisher objected to the title of her autobiography's title "The Woman at the Well." Her publisher insisted that she was not an immoral woman like the woman at the well in bible and she should not called her life's story "The woman at the well." Evans insisted that while she was not immoral or unfaithful like the woman at the well that Jesus broke through all the barriers that separated her from him and saved her soul, just like he did the woman at the well. Despite the objection of her publisher, the book hit the markets and was a success. It's title: "The woman at the well."

Many people have distanced themselves from personal encounters with Christ. They have avoided his touch by avoiding his presence. They are involved in questionable lifestyles that trouble them so they keep their distance the savior's presence. Some can't find him by no reason of their own, but because barriers have been erected by society that prohibit them because of their race or sex. The great opportunity that salvation offers is often missed because the barriers around us keep it out of reach.

Wherever Christ broke through the social, racial, and moral barriers that separated you from him and touched your soul with his message of salvation, that place is your well. For the woman in the scripture, it was Jacob's well. For us that place could have been a restaurant, a bus stop, or quiet moment at your kitchen table.The place we meet the Lord is not as significant as the meeting itself. That meeting will hold a special place of importance in your life for years to come. The woman at the well was so excited about her encounter with Christ that she ran through the city asking everyone to “come see a man!”

As Christians who have met the Lord at the well ourselves, we too should be excited by Jesus and seize every opportunity to tell the world to “come see a man” who saved our souls!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he met with a woman at Jacob’s well in Samaria. Traditionally, Jews had no dealings with Samaritans. They were viewed as traitors to the faith and social contacts were forbidden. The division between the two had developed over several centuries. The Assyrians had conquered Samaria in their sweep of the Northern Kingdom. The Assyrians then sent colonies of Assyrians to live in the formerly all-Jewish towns of the region and began to spread Assyrian culture throughout the area. Priests who had been captured were sent back to Samaria to conduct Jewish religious ritual, but with an Assyrian twist. Many of the Assyrian religious rituals were incorporated into the Jewish ritual. In time, a generation of Samaritans grew up with Assyrian and Jewish social and religious standards. They worshipped Jehovah and also recognized the gods of Assyria as well. They were considered social and religious half breeds, guilty of spiritual miscegenation. that had desecrated the faith. Jews cut off contacts with them. Although journeys from the North to the South would have been shorter by traveling through Samaria, Jews crossed Jordan and went around Samaria rather than meet or speak to them.

However, Jesus came to Samaria and broke through several barriers to bring his message of salvation to the woman at the well. He broke racial barriers but he also broke gender barriers. Jewish women were the subjects of many prohibitions that treated them as second class. They were subjugated, and their prohibitions were so strictly enforced that they were not even allowed to speak to a man in public places. Only in the privacy of their homes could they speak, and even there with extreme caution. Jesus engaged in discussion with the woman at the town’s most visible meeting place, Jacob’s well, thus challenging long standing taboos that were centuries old.

Moreover, Jesus broke the morality barrier as well. This woman was marked for her low morals. She had been married five times and was living with a sixth who was not her husband. By Jewish standards she was a harlot. Priests and the devout of the city had no contact with her. She was considered an outcast. Jesus offered her the living water of salvation and an opportunity to everlasting life. The woman was so that she ran through the streets of the city proclaiming “Come see a man that told me all the things I ever did, is this not the Christ?”

Social Barriers Separate Some From Christ

Today there are many barriers that separate us from Christ. Among those barriers are racial and class differences. Some Blacks will not follow Jesus because they contend that Christianity is the "slave master's" religion. They say Jesus is white and therefore we should have no part of a faith based on belief in him. This line ofthinking, made famous by the late Elijah Muhammad and Malcom X, separates some Blacks from Christ racially. In reality, Jesus while a Jew by nationality, was composite of many races that range from Moabites, to Jews (Matthew 1). His message is not restricted by race. He ordered his disciples to go to "all nations" with his message of salvation. He removed the racial barriers that separate men from himself. Although we consistently try to rebuild them he continues his appeal: "any man who will, let him come."

Class barriers have divided us as well. Many only want people of a certain class to follow Christ. They accept those in their social and economic class and reject others. The middle class only appeals to others of the middle class to accept Christ and is reluctant to extend that appeal to others outside of their circle. Jesus broke down the class barrier. He ate and socialized constantly with the poor and dejected. He embraced the ostracized and the uncultured too. James 2:1-9 underscores his teaching that we should not be respecters of person but should treat all people equally before God, regardless of their position in life.

Gender is also a great barrier to discipleship. Women, enslaved by hundreds of years of discrimination, are generally forbidden full fellowship in the faith. Although Christ commanded all of his disciples to preach, teach and reach, society has excluded women from the formula by tradition, not by scriptural mandate. In scripture God has called upon women to be warriors such as Deborah, deacons (Greek for servant is "diakonon" same word used for deacon) such as Phebe (Romans 16:1) or church leaders such as Priscilla, who along with her husband played a leading role in the church that met in their home (Romans 16:3). Galatians 3:28 finds Paul tearing down racial and gender barriers when he proclaimed: "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, thee is neither male or female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." All are equal partners in the faith within the context of the "Eden restrictions" where God cursed the man to shoulder the responsibility of leadership and the woman to have pain in childbirth and followship (Gen. 3:16). Jesus removed all gender barriers that excluded women from the faith.

While social and class barriers are erected by others to exclude some, moral barriers are self imposed. There are some who have been rejected so much by the world that they cannot envision themselves acceptable to God. However, Jesus made it clear that there is no sin, short of disbelief, that is so great that it can keep a person out of the kingdom of God.

Come See A Man

Once the barriers that separate us from Christ have been removed there is excitement and joy. We are completely filled and refreshed at knowing the power and presence of God in our lives. The woman at the well ran through the city shouting and proclaiming "Come see a man!"

Today when we think about the goodness of the Lord we too shout a great testimony, “come see a man!” Come see a man who took my:

--Loneliness and gave me comfort!

--Midnights and turned them into noon days

--Defeats and turned them into victories

I don’t know about you but I’ve found out that there is nobody like Jesus. Come see a man who is like:

--Coke, because he is the real thing

--Ford, because he has a better idea

--Allstate, because when you’re with Jesus you in good hands

--State Farm, because like a good neighbor, Jesus is there!

--VO5, because he holds through all kinds of weather

--Scotch tape, because you can’t see him but you know he’s there

--Tide, gets out the stains that others leave behind

--G.E.,because he lights our path

--Sears, because Jesus has everything

--Rolaids, because his name, J.E.S.U.S, spells relief!

--Hallmark Cards, because he cares enough to send you the best!

--Ever Ready Batteries, because he’s got power to spare!

--Dial Soap, aren’t you glad that you know him!

I’m so glad that I know him!

Except Some Man Should Guide Me

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 6, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "And Philip ran thither to him and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest? And he said, How can I, except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him." Acts 8:30-31*

Introduction

When you read the bible, do you understand what you read? Can you comfortably explain the meaning of what you read to others without fear of contradiction? Do you understand the nature of the church, its mission and your role as one of its members? Increasingly, people are answering "no" to at least one of these questions, pointing out the need for instruction and training in bible study and the application of its principles in the life of the church.

Those who read the bible and don't understand what they read should consider the butterfly and the bee as they talked about their adventures at the end of the day. The butterfly bragged that he had touched every flower and plant in the garden and knew them by name. "Wonderful" said the bee. "I too have been to every bloom in the garden, but I refused to leave until I dove into the bell of the flower and came forth with my thighs laden with pollen and my stomach filled with honey to take back to my hive. Mr. Butterfly, it's not how many times you can flit over the flowers that matters, but how much you take home that counts."

There are many today who have read the bible stories and passages for many years, but have gained little understanding from their reading ..no honey to home to the hive.

Christian Education's main purpose is to teach Christians to be Christlike. Through bible study and leadership training Christians learn the principles of God's Word and then how to apply these principles in the operation of the church and in service and witness for Christ outside of the fellowship of the church. Those who are members of the church have an obligation to learn all they can about God's word and how they can best apply what they have learned to real life situations.

Those who lead, bear an even more important responsibility to know the nature of their service and how it is applied in daily living. Church leaders who are too busy to train themselves in the doctrine of our faith and the application of doctrine do an injustice to themselves, the church, and to those whom they lead. Jesus spent much of his time "teaching" those who followed him. When he selected 12 disciples he taught them. When he left this earth he commanded all who followed him to "Go ye therefore and "teach" all nations.."teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you.." (Matt 28:19-20). The command to teach implies that we all have an obligation to study and learn as much as we can.

As Christians, we must strive to study both the word of God and the best ways to apply what we learn in the word to real life situations. We should strive to become spiritual honey bees, leaving every worship, Sunday School Class, or study session with honey to take home and savor.

Exposition

This text focuses on how God emphasized the importance of the training of one man by another man who was important to many people. The central characters of this text are Philip and an unnamed Black man. Philip had been conducting great city wide revivals in Samaria wherein thousands came to know Christ, evil spirits were cast out and "great joy" was brought into the area. In the midst of the great revivals God spoke to Philip and challenged him to go from Jerusalem into the wilderness of Gaza. In obedience, Philip did as a the Lord commanded and came upon a Black man, described as a Eunuch and a person of high position on the continent of Africa in his native country of Ethiopia. The Eunuch was riding in a chariot and reading from the Book of Isaiah.

The spirit of God moved Philip to approach the chariot and talk to the man and in the course of their conversation Philip learned that the man was reading from the Holy Word but was not clear about what he read. Reading from the 53rd Chapter of Isaiah he wanted to know the identity of the person referred to by Isaiah. Philip taught him, then preached to him about Jesus and then upon the Eunuch's request he man was baptized.

Historians note that not long after the message of Christ reached the African continent. How it got there, no one is certain, but many point to this African convert in the middle of the desert, a Black man who wanted to know, as the source of the message.

It is important to know that Philip left a revival involving thousands to teach one man in the wilderness who carried the Gospel message to tens of thousands. Without instruction the eunuch would not have received the inspiration of the Gospel account. Without a willingness to teach, Philip would not have left the crowds to teach in a classroom with just one student, in the heat, in the middle of the desert. Because of there was both a desiring student and a willing teacher to guide, the Gospel message was continued and many souls were saved.

Some People Want to Know

There is a growing trend among African-Americans which is shifting away from a desire for a general education to utilitarian schooling wherein we learn just enough to get by. This trend is leading us to acquire only as much education and training as fits our peculiar purposes. Thus, a race which once placed education high among its priorities now has a different view about it. Once every child aspired for a college education, now that aspiration has dwindled to getting only that amount of education that is required to make a living. People are reading less, focusing only on those materials they need for their purposes.

Unfortunately that trend is moving into the church. Although congregations today are more literate than ever, they read the bible less than previous generations which had fewer reading skills. Many read the bible only when its necessary, ie. for class, sermon preparation or public worship. The trend is to know just enough to get by. With respect to training in the doctrine and methodology of the church, many look for utilitarian instruction (just enough to get by).

There is still another group among us that sees no need for training in church work at all. Some feel their secular education is sufficient. Some public school teachers, trained in methods of preparation and presentation of subject matter, feel they need no further training for the church. They forget that secular methods are definitely useful, but their college training did not orient or prepare them for service in the kingdom of God.

However, there are many who sincerely want to know. Like the Eunuch in the chariot they desire to learn, not just enough to get by but all they can about their faith. Some are trying desperately to teach themselves and are confused and frustrated. There are people today who want to know more about Jesus. These are those who understand the song writer's words: " More about Jesus let me learn, More of his holy will discern; spirit of God my teacher be, showing the things of Christ to me. More, more about Jesus, More,More about Jesus; more of his saving fullness see, more of his love who died for me."

Someone to Guide Me

The eunuch confessed that he could not understand the things of God without someone to Guide him. Philip, a man accustomed to great crowds of people, sat down to teach one man and show him the way. This underscores the need for men and women who know the way to make themselves available to show the way to others. Philip heard the voice of God and moved at his command, we must do the same.

While Philip taught the Eunuch directly, it was not Philip's words or instruction that really motivated this man to go home and tell others about Christ. It was not the charisma of one teacher in the desert that provided the ground swell of enthusiasm that set this man's soul on fire. It was the power of the holy spirit.

Those who study and train in God's work look for more than just enough to get by, they study about, pray for and wait for the anointing of the Holy Spirit.

College and vocational school give us certificates to hang on our walls, but the Holy Spirit gives us a stirring in our Souls.

When the Holy Spirit comes even the smallest amount of training is expanded upon and enlarged upon. When the Holy Spirit comes we understand what was once confusing, and go beyond our limitations.

We can't successfully function in the kingdom, except there is someone to guide. That someone is not the preacher, or the deacon, but our prayer should be Lord, guide me, show me thy way!

I don't know about you, but I've found out that I can't do it by myself, but I need somebody to lead me. I need somebody to guide me.

No wonder the song writer declared "Lead me, guide me, along the way, Lord if you lead me I will not stray. Lord let me walk each day with thee, lead me oh Lord, lead me."

When the way gets tough call on him and he will answer. "Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land. I am weak but thou art mighty hold me in thou powerful hand."

Christian educators, keep telling the story about Jesus!

Tell the world that he died on Calvary!

Tell them that he rose on the third day and is alive for ever more!

Dream Weavers

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.
August 23, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "The Lord appeared to him in a dream that night and told him to ask for anything he wanted, and it would be given to him! "— 1 Kings 3:5 (TLB)In Gibeon the LORD appeared to Solomon in a dream by night: and God said, Ask what I shall give thee. — 1 Kings 3:5 (KJV)

Introduction

Do you have a special dream that you want to come true? What are you doing to make it happen? There are many who are working very hard to make their dreams become realities. There are others who seek short cuts and quick tricks that can help them find success. Those who seek the short route will always find someone that is willing to steal their dreams.

Consider the children's story of the Emperor's New Clothes. The Emperor of a small nation had a dream of being the best dressed man in the nation. Two swindlers came up with the idea of getting rich from selling the Emperor clothes made out of invisible material. The Emperor was told that people who could not see the material were ignorant.They said he would achieve two purposes with his new clothes: he would achieve his dream of being the best dressed and he would also be able to know the ignorant people in his kingdom. Each day the swindlers presented the king their empty palms which they said contained fine material. Not wanting to appear ignorant himself the Emperor raved about the quality of the material and acted as if he saw the material. Those who stood in the court yard also pretended to see the material. On occasion, the Emperor would go to the swindlers' work room. They pretended to weave the material that would make the Emperor's dream come true. Of course the Emperor said he saw the invisible cloth. When completed, the Emperor put on his invisible garments and called a great parade to show off his new clothes and to discover the ignorant people in his kingdom. As he marched naked through the city, the people raved at his new clothes and pretended not to see his nakedness. That is until one little boy yelled out "He doesn't have any clothes on" then the Emperor realized the swindling weavers had tricked him and had stolen both his dream and his reputation at the same time.

As Christians we trust God to weave the fabric of our daily experiences and opportunities into dreams come true. We can trust him with our dreams. If we put him first and seek to do his will, our dreams can become our realities.

Exposition

This text considers Solomon at the beginning of his reign as King of Israel. Solomon, who succeeded his father David on the throne of Israel, became King at a very young age. He was awed by the complexity of the job of being King and was troubled by his lack of leadership maturity in such a capacity. One night God spoke to Solomon in a dream and told him to ask anything that he wanted from God and he would receive his request. Solomon asked God to give him wisdom and understanding to lead the people in the ways of God.

God was so pleased that Solomon did not ask for riches or fame, but only asked for wisdom that he decided to give him what he asked for, in addition to some of the things that he did not ask in his request. With the wisdom he received from God, Solomon was able to attain all of his life's ambitions. He dreamed of building a kingdom the splendor and grandeur of which could not be equaled in the world. He dreamed of building a great temple for the worship of God, and a great palace second to none in the world. He dreamed and God made it happen for him, although at the time it seemed impossible for him to accomplish.

Don't Let Anyone Steal Your Dreams

Woodrow Wilson, the 28th president of the United States, did not begin school until he was nine years old. Despite that slow start he harbored a dream of being the President of the United States. Once educated and matured he became a college president, governor and was finally his name was submitted for as a nominee of the Democratic Party. The party turned Wilson down 46 times until he was finally nominated and elected President of the United States.

Concerning the achievement of dreams Wilson said:

"We grow great by dreams. All big men are dreamers. They see things in the soft haze of a spring day, or in the red fire on a long winter's evening. Some of us let these great dreams die, but others nourish and protect them; nourish them through bad days till they bring them to the sunshine and light which comes always to those who sincerely hope that their dreams will come true." Don't let anyone steal your dreams!

Today there are many young people who will begin to weave the fabric of opportunity on the loom of life to make their dreams come true. As school bells begin to ring again, young people are faced with the challenge to seize the opportunities provided in school and weave them into learning experiences that will help them move closer to realizing their goals.

However, youth should be careful and remember Woodrow Wilson's advice: "Don't let anyone steal your dreams!" There are many ways that your dreams can be stolen from you, but the ones that happen most often involve negative self talk, misplaced opportunity, and twisted visions.

NEGATIVE SELF TALK: Negative self talk refers to "putting yourself down" or under estimating your own ability to achieve. The young man who dreams of being an airline pilot must not convince himself that he can't achieve his goal. If he constantly tells himself it can't be done, he steals his own dream. The young lady who considers the amount of study required to become a nurse, steals her own dream if she starts to tell herself that she's not as good as others who have achieved the same goal.

The road the leads to your selected dream may be bumpy and difficult, but it begins with Positive self talk. I can make it. If they can do it, so can I. The secret is to learn your dream as possible, find out what you need, and then be willing to set out on a course to make it happen, regardless of what others say.

As Christians we constantly feed ourselves with positive self talk. "I can do all things through Christ that strengteneth me."

MISPLACED OPPORTUNITY: Some miss the chance to realize their dreams because they failed to use the opportunity to prepare themselves. Though it may not appear important, all information you learn today may help you seize an opportunity tomorrow. There are millions today who are singing a sad song. They are saying "If only I hada" each time they see theiropportunity pass them by. Today the subjects you learn in school may seem unnecessary and even boring, but learn them anyway. It is better to have it and not need it than it is to need it and not have it.

TWISTED VISIONS: Some have their dreams stolen from them. Like the Swindlers who cheated the emperor some will never achieve their dreams because they are convinced that taking a short cut can make it happen faster. Some athletes have lost dreams because they took short cuts, taking steroids to boost their natural capacities. Some professionals have chosen to steal and cheat their employers ruining career. Some sell drugs. Some use drugs. It is the devil's nature to attempt to steal your dream. When the devil steals your dream, it is no longer a dream, but a nightmare.

God is Our Dream Weaver

There is a great truth we should all know. God can take dreams that seem impossible and make them come true. Joseph dreamed that one day he would be so important that all the people of the land would bow down to him. His brothers ridiculed his dream and talked about him. Finally they tried to steal his dream and placed him in a pit. But God showed how he could take the jangling ends of circumstance and weave them into opportunity. Joseph was raised from obscurity to an important place in the kingdom.

I am reminded of a young girl who was talented and smart but who refused believe in God. One night she dreamed she paid a visit to the shop of a man called the "dream weaver." His shop was filled with a variety of cloths of different colors, which he explained was the "stuff" that dreams are made of and the cloths represented the dreams of the world including hers. The girl asked to see hers and the made, with nail scarred hands, reached into a box and pulled out two pieces of cloth. "This red cloth represents your dream of happiness. This gold one represents your dream of success." The weaver told her that he has not worked on her dream for a while and the girl asked why. The mans ansered: "If you notice in this room, every set of dreams has a patch of blue, which represents your faith in God. Well, between success and the happiness that you ask for there must be a lot of faith in God. I can't make your dreams come true because you haven't sent me any blue!"

There are many young people who dream about happiness and dream about success, but they haven't sent up any blue!

There are many who are placing their hopes on material gains and have forgotten about God. But I hear the song writer declare "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness."

God is the eternal dream weaver!

He makes the impossible possible; the improbable probable; the unthinkable thinkable, and the unreachable reachable.

Call him what you will: Dream Weaver, Way Maker, Problem Solver

Jesus! He came, died and rose from the dead that we might have the opportunity to dream and hope of the abundant life. Give him your dreams!

Therefore, climb every mountain! Search high and low. Follow every by way every path you know. Climb every mountain, ford every stream, follow every rainbow until you find your dream!

Soul Food

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 16, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." John 6:35

Introduction

What comes to mind when you think of "soul food?" Immediately we see images of neck bones, pig ears, pig feet, pig tails, ox tails, chitterlings, hog jowls, hog maws, tripe, mustard greens, collard greens, turnip greens, corn bread oozing with butter, black eyed peas, and bar-be-que ribs dripping with sauce. That's the first thing that comes to mind when most of us think of soul food. "Soul Food" in the common vernacular refers to the foods peculiar to African-Americans, greasy, spicy and tasty.

This unusual diet of African Americans can be traced to our slave roots. Masters, who ate the choice parts of a hog would throw the guts, feet, ears and stomach linings away or feed it to their slaves. With the choice of eating or dying, the slaves took what was thought to be discards and, by the grace of God, cleaned, boiled and spiced the scraps into gourmets. Eventually, the entre' list got longer, including: brains, tongue, hog head cheese, and even chicken feet. As slavery continued succeeding generations of African-Americans grew up on diets that could have killed them with high blood pressure and heart disease alone, but somehow our entire race emerged in tact, sheltered by the hand of God. Therefore when we think of soul food we think of people who took nothing and made it into something that could sustain them while their souls cried out to God.

While there is soul food, there is also food for the soul. Food for the soul has nothing to do with food types in the physical sense, but it refers to those experiences that feed the soul and bring us into a closer relationship to God. In this respect soul food would not include physical items such as butter beans or fried chicken, but spiritual delicacies that would tend to make the soul stronger. Food for the soul is any experience that helps us grow in our understanding of, and appreciation for, the things of God. As Christians, we may or may not like soul food, but we should all strive to acquire as much "food for the soul" as we can. The better we know the Lord, the more able we are to stand for him and witness to his goodness to an unbelieving world.

Exposition

This text focuses on an episode in the early portion of the Jesus's ministry in which crowds of people followed him wherever he went in hopes of catching a glimpse of one of his famous miracles, or better still to be a participant in a miraculous event. On this occasion, a crowd of several thousand people had gathered to hear him and there was no food available to feed them. One lad in the group had brought along two fishes and five loaves of bread. Jesus had the men in the crowd to sit and he took the little fish and bread that was available, gave thanks for it, and began to distribute it to his disciples. As they distributed it among the crowd it never ran out until all had been filled; and even then there were leftovers.

The people were so excited about what they had seen that they immediately wanted to make Jesus their king because they envisioned feasts for everyone under his administration. They wanted more fish and more bread. Jesus rebuked the crowd for following their growling bellies, seeking food. He offered them food, but it was not of mere fish and bread. He told them that just as Moses gave them manna or the "bread from heaven" in the wilderness so had the father made it possible for them to have a greater bread.

He summed up this truth by telling them "I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." What Christ told the crowds was simple: "if its fish and bread you seek, keep looking; but if its food for your soul that you want, I can satisfy your needs."

Vitamin A

Beside its appeal to the pallet, one of the chief functions of food is to provide nutrients, carbohydrates and vitamins to the body. Without the proper nutrients the body would soon shrivel and die. The main vitamins for human growth are vitamins A, D, C and B; without them life would be difficult if not impossible.

VITAMIN A: Without vitamin A the physical body would develop dry and hard skin. In addition a condition develops called dry eyes and the eyes are unable to see the light when things get dark. Often blindness can occur. Vitamin A is found in certain food types that include: Carrots, Sweet Potatoes, Spinach, and milk. Spiritually there are some that have a Vitamin A deficiency. They have a bad case of hard, cold, and dry personalities. They lack a sense of humor, touch of compassion and visible emotion. They suffer from the dry eyes. It's bad to have a vitamin A deficiency because when things get dark, you can't see the light and lose all hope.

Spiritually, Vitamin A is found in the A-nointing of the Holy Spirit. When the Holy Spirit anoints it is hard to have dry eyes, dry personalities and cold dispositions. On the day of Pentecost when the Holy Spirit made His arrival there people were shouting and rejoicing every where. Their souls had been fed, food from heaven and they were ready to meet the challenge.

Vitamin D

VITAMIN D: Without Vitamin D in the physical body the bones would fail to harden. Conditions such as bow leggedness can develop. The key foods that provide Vitamin D include: Milk, Butter, Eggs, and Fish Liver Oil. However, even though a person may consume sufficient quantities of all of the right ingredients, the Vitamin D component is not triggered unless the person is exposed to the sun. Without sunlight, even though a person eats the right foods, a VITAMIN D deficiency will still exist.

Spiritually, there are many people who never get rooted in their faith in God. They grow up in the faith with brittle bones that are broken with words rather than sticks and stones. They live a clean life but are not as strong as they should be.

Spiritually, Vitamin D is obtained by attending Worships, Sunday School, and bible study. This is the way to take in the right vitamins, but they can't be triggered without the SON. When we have been regular in our worship, bible study and prayer, and we are exposed to the presence of the Lord, we grow stronger in the faith. Carrying a bible in our hands without the Lord in our heart is worthless because its Jesus in our life not the book in our hand that is the moving force.

Vitamin C

VITAMIN C: Without Vitamin C the body would lose its ability to fight against colds and influenza. It would also lose its ability help in the healing of wounds. The key foods that provide Vitamin C include: Oranges, Cantaloupes, Strawberries, apples, cabbage, or potatoes. Vitamin C is different from the other vitamins in that it cannot be stored in the body, it must be ingested daily. We cannot fight today's cold without yesterday's orange juice. We cannot heal today's wound with yesterday's fruit supply. Each day needs its own supply of nutrients. This gave rise to the old saying "An apple a day keeps the doctor away."

Spiritually, there are many people who have problems living the Christian life because they only have the fruit of the spirit occasionally instead of daily. Galatians 5:22 says the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." These are sources of spiritual vitamin C. We can't fight off Today's:

—hate with yesterday's love; confusion with yesterday's peace.

—Troubles with yesterday's longsuffering; rudeness, with yesterday's gentleness; Wrongness with yesterday's goodness; despair with yesterday's faith;

—belligerence with yesterday's meekness; temptation with yesterday's temperance.

Spiritually that famous old saying could be modified to say "The fruit each day, keeps the devil away!"

Vitamin B

VITAMIN B: Without Vitamin B which is a group of vitamins, the body would fail to grow, there would be a loss of appetite, hardening of the arteries and nervous conditions could develop. The components of the vitamin B complex come from foods such as: lean meat, whole grain cereals, milk products, and fish.

Spiritually, there are many people who have been in the church for a long time but they have failed to grow, have lost their appetite for active service and have become set in their ways. They get a nervous condition when asked to pray, witness or testify about the goodness of God. It all indicates that they have a Vitamin B deficiency.

Spiritually, Vitamin B1 could be called the body of Christ and Vitamin B2 could be the Blood of Christ. Both of these spiritual vitamins help us to remember our commitment to Christ, continue to grow in grace and maintain our appetite for the Christian struggle.

When we remember the body and blood of Jesus, it is food for the soul. Jesus said "I am the bread of life, he that cometh to me shall never hunger" The bread of heaven is soul food!

No wonder Dr. Watts declared: Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

Jesus, bread when I'm hungry!

Feed me till I want no more!

And I Promised Him That I

A sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

August 9, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "I will go into thy house with burnt offerings: I will pay thee my vows which my lips have uttered, and my mouth hath spoken, when I was in trouble. Psalms 66:13-14.

Introduction

Have you ever made a promise to God? How well are you keeping that promise? Many people make promises to God when they face troubling situations only to go back on them after the moment of crises has passed.

Consider the man who took on the tough challenge of climbing a mountain alone. As he moved carefully up the side of the mountain the ground became distant and he realized that there was no turning back. Suddenly his foot slipped, his line broke, and he was tumbling down the side of the mountain. As he was falling he called out to God. "Lord if you save me, I'll change my life!" Despite his plea he continued to fall. He cried out again "Lord if you save me, I'll come to church every Sunday!", but he continued to fall. The ground came closer and he could see his life slipping away as he tumbled in the air. Finally in one last desperate plea he called out to God again "Lord, if you save me, I promise you I'll serve you till I die!" After he made that promise, the man's fall was interrupted by a tree limb that caught his clothing. As he realized that he wasn't going to die he suddenly thought about all that he had promised and quickly shouted "That's alright Lord, a tree limb has saved me first!"

How many of us today make pledges and promises to God and then back down with it seems as if the conditions have changed. In essence we say "That's alright Lord, I didn't need your help after all the doctor made me well" or the "Lawyer won my case!" God delivers on all his promises in ways that we rarely expect, but the question that faces us is whether or not we will deliver on the promises that we have made to God. Though our pledges may seem unnoticed in heaven, God read our thoughts and hearts in our moments of trial. He heard our secret prayers and pledges and answered them often even before we have finished thinking. In good faith God delivered for us, but often we fail to make good on our commitments to him. As Christians we have promised him that we would serve him faithfully. In return for our promise, God has blessed us abundantly, and showered us with substance, support

This text considers David as he reflects upon the goodness of God and re-dedicates himself to the service of God. In this Psalm David sings about the abundant blessings that he has received from God and he invites men to to consider the reasons why he has decided to keep his vows to God.

First David challenges men to "Come and See" the goodness of God at verse 5. He lists some of the mighty works of God: he dried up the Red Sea, he watches the nations, he holds our soul and suffereth are foot not to be moved, and through afflictions, hardships, fire and water he delivers our souls. David said these mighty virtues alone made God worthy of worship and praise. Morever, at verse 16 he continues to note the goodness of God by challenging all who will to "Come and hear" about his goodness. David said when he "cried unto him with my mouth" he heard his cry despite his own feelings of inadequacy God attended unto his needs.

David, who experienced the full gamut of service to God, made several promises to God following his great sin with Bathsheba. Here he reflects on how good God has been despite his own iniquity and pledges to keep his promises to God as God has kept his promises to him. Like David, those who made promises to God in biblical times took them very serious. In fact they were viewed so seriously that entire sections of the Book of Leviticus deal with the procedures for persons to use to keep their vows to God. Hannah vowed to God that if she could receive a child she would return him to God. Nazarites made vows to God neither to drink strong drink or cut their hair. When they broke their vows they usually suffered dearly such as Samson's loss of strength when he broke his vows by both drinking and finally allowing his hair to be cut.

On Occasion there were some who made foolish vows such as Jephthah who in Judges 11:30 promised God that if he was victorious in battle he would sacrifice the first person that walked out of the door of his house. When he returned home his daughter ran out to meet him, and Jephtah had to offer her in sacrifice to keep his vow. Annanias and Sapharri pledged to sell all of their property and give the proceeds to the church, but they lied about their actions and dropped dead because of their deceit. Vows in scripture were taken seriously by God and by those who made them. Children were not allowed to make vows and wives who made vows without the consent of their husbands could have the annulled. Moses warned in Deut 23:21 "When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord thy God, thou shalt not slack to pay it: for the Lord thy God will surely require it of thee; and it would be sin in thee." Solomon, underscoring the seriousness of vows, put it this way: "Better is it that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and not pay." Eccl. 5:5.

Many Have Made Vows

Today there are many people who have made vows to God to secure favors or blessings. Like Jacob, who made a vow to sanctify himself and to pay a tithe if the Lord helped him make it to his father's house in peace, many of us have made vows to God. Sometimes the vow was made in connection with our personal persuit of a job, position or attainment of a particular goal. Often in crises, we make vows to God that we would make certain changes in our lives or great promises. Some of us promise God that we would give up certain bad habits and reform ourselves significantly. In such cases we told the Lord either verbally or internally that we would do certain things if he allowed us to realize our expectation.

In the biblical record, in every instance where vows are made, God delivered that which was requested, but held those making the vow responsible for breaching their vows. Solomon made it clear that no believer is required to make a vow, but a vow, once made, is expected to be paid. The Word of God makes it clear that the Lord takes vows seriously and is prompted to act quickly in response to a request made through a vow. Likewise, the record shows that God is angered when vows are not kept. Many have made vows and once they have received what they requested have had second thoughts about keeping their vows. Today men attempt to rationalize and put forth great reasons why it should be acceptable that they not fulfill their vows. Proverbs 20:25 echoes the warning that it is folly to receive a blessing from God and then worry about what you promised to receive it. Jesus reminded those who were vowing to take up the Christian struggle to "count the cost" before beginning. He warned those who join the Christian community not to put their hands on the plough and then turn back on their decision.

Reasons to Keep Our Promise

Those who keep their promises recognize that God has been good to them and has answered their prayers. The entire 66th Psalms testifies to the mighty works which God has done for David personally and for his people. He pledges to keep his promise out of gratitude for the mighty blessings God has showered upon him. Today brothers and Sister we keep our promises to God because it is our way of saying "thank you" for being so good to us!

We give thanks to God for:

—Muzzling the mouths of lions that came to devour us!

—Quenching the flames of fires that tried to destroy us!

—Conquering the enemies that came to destroy us! —Penetrating the walls built to divide us!

—Unlocking the prisons designed to hold us down.

The Lord we serve is worthy to be praised and worthy of the fulfillment of any promise that we make.

A traveler approached three men he passed on the road and gave them each a small key and made each one promise him that regardless of what they met along the road they would take the key and hold onto it until the morning. As the night passed they came upon a forest fire that raged with a fiery. Consumed by the heat one of the men turned around, the other two continued. However they came upon a great storm which bent the trees and nearly buried both men in torrents of water. The second man turned back. However the third man clinched his fist around the key and kept going. In the morning he met another traveler who asked him "Have you been through the fire? Have you been through the storm? Do you still have the key?" To these the man answered yes. The traveler responded "you have earned the reward of Gold that this box contains. But tell me, what made you go on?" The man answered "I've been through the storm and the rain. I've been through fire, but I had to keep going because I promised that I would hold out till the morning comes!"

I don't know about you brothers and sisters but I promised the Lord that I would hold out until the morning comes!

When the morning comes, crying days will be over

When the morning comes, lonely days will come to an end

When the morning comes, the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest.

I heard a song writer declare: "I'm on the battlefield for my Lord, and I promised him that I, would serve him till I die!

I've got keep telling the story!

Strong winds may blow, but I must tell the world about Jesus!

Jesus, who died on Calvary!

Jesus, who rose on Sunday morning

I started in Jesus and I'm going through!

When The Fish Won't Bite

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 2, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing — John 21:3

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when you went fishing and didn't catch a thing? What was wrong? Was it the pole? The bait? The Spot? Or was it just the wrong day of the week? Even the best fishermen have had a time or two when it seemed that the fish had posted an "out to lunch sign" and were not biting. Good fisherman check out all the possible causes for their failure, revamp and try again, most often with better luck.

Consider the city boys who decided to have some fun by fishing in the country side. They went to a sporting goods store and purchased expensive and flashy fishing gear. There was a fly reel, a cabinet full of lures, hip boots, and other fancy equipment designed to make fishing exciting and fun. Once in the countryside they came in an area where an old man was fishing. He did not have a fancy reel or any of the equipment to equal that of the boys. In fact, all he had was an old cane pole and a can full of bait. The two boys cast their lines and were dazzled at their shiny rods as they reflected in the sunlight. They turned their music up high and laughed and played all day as they tried out more of the gadgets. About noonday they noticed that while the old man said nothing he had pulled in several large fish with his cane pole while they had caught nothing. They changed sides of the pond, changed lures and continued to cast, but still they caught nothing. At the close of the day they went to the old man and asked. "Sir we noticed that you sat in the same place all day with just your cane pole and caught many fish. Why is it that we have all of this fancy fish equipment and we caught nothing?" The old man looked at their shiny gear and their empty buckets and responded "You see son, you boys were fishing for fun and counting on your rod and reels but I was fishing for my dinner and counting on the Lord." What do we do if the fish don't bite? Perhaps we should re-evaluate the reason we went to fish in the first place.

As Christians, we are keenly aware that all blessings comefrom God. If our goal is in accordance with the master's will, then we can expect to catch big fish. If, for some reason, we have gotten off track, even our best efforts won't make the fish bite.

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he shows himself to his disciples after the resurrection. He had appeared to Mary Magdalene at the tomb. He had also appeared to ten of them during a Sunday gathering which was missed by Thomas. In this text Christ appears for the third time to seven of the disciples as they returned to their daily occupation which was fishing. This was the first time that Jesus had made an appearance, after the resurrection, on a day other than Sunday. He appeared to these disciples on a regular weekday while they were occupied in their personal profession.

Each time Jesus appeared to these fishermen at work, it was at a time when, for whatever reason, the fish were not biting. In Luke 5:1-11 Jesus appeared to them after they had toiled all night and caught nothing. They had given their best efforts but were empty handed, but following his command they "launched out into the deep" and caught so many fishes that other boats had to be called to haul them to shore. After that encounter, Jesus challenged them to "follow me." Now, in the context of this text, Jesus appears to them again but after the resurrection. Again they were at their daily profession and were in a situation where the fish were not biting despite their best efforts. These seven depressed fisherman, who thought their glorious mission was lost since the crucifixion, were fishing to reflect and think, but not with a zeal to catch fish. They aim was more to pass the time and forget their tragedy of losing their moment of glory than anything else.

After they fished all night and caught nothing, Jesus came. He called out to them "children, have ye any meat?" When they answered no he responded by telling them to cast their nets on the right side of the ship. When they heard the voice of Jesus, and obeyed his command, instantly the fish starting biting and they caught a "multitude" of fishes.

They Heard The Voice of Jesus

Like these disciples, there are many today who are meeting frustrations as they attempt to pursue individual goals. The disciples were frustrated because Jesus was not there. Their enthusiasm diminished and they soon found that their work was becoming unproductive. Sometimes our circumstance is similar. We can't seem to get motivated to do our best work.

The occasions when you try your best but nothing seems to "click" for you, are days when the fish won't bite. These are days that you seek employment in scores of places but never get a response. These are times when your business is sagging and you can't seem to get a handle on the decline. These are days when your best efforts to improve the quality of life of your family seem to miss the mark. These are times when the fish won't bite. It is not because there has been no effort, often we show great effort, but yet we are fruitless. We should remember that effort alone does not produce success. There is no success in life without the help of the Lord. We may plant the seed by our effort, but its germination is totally dependent upon the power of God.

The disciples, who were able fishermen, were having a dry spell. They were dispirited until they heard the voice of Jesus on the shore, calling out to them.

There are many today who are going around in circles, with plenty of activity but are accomplishing little. Those times when the fish won't bite may be the times when we need most to listen for the voice of the Lord.

Elijah was troubled by indecision and sought to hear from the Lord. When the Lord spoke it was in a still small voice.

Samuel heard the voice of God in the still of the night, calling him to serve.

Saul heard the voice of Jesus in a blaze of light on the Damascus Road as it called out to him "Saul, Saul, why persecuteth thou me?"

When we are besieged by failure all around us, and frustration and defeat pace along the horizon ..listen for the comforting voice of God.

No wonder Dr. Watts would declare: "I heard the voice of Jesus come unto to me and rest. Lay down, the weary one, lay down thy head upon my breast."

They Obeyed His Command

But not only did the disciples hear the voice of Jesus calling out to them from the shore, but they immediately obeyed his command and cast their nets on the right side of the boat.

One reason the fish won't bite for us could be that we work hard but we are not fishing from the right side of the boat. The disciples worked hard but they worked on the wrong side of the boat and caught nothing. It didn't seem significant to consider which side of the boat to fish from. A school of fish underneath a boat had no boundary line which they observed, so there was no obvious reason to think anything would come from obeying Jesus' command. However, without thinking or argumentation, they started fishing from the right side, in obedience, and immediately they caught fish!

When we consider why the fish won't bite, therefore, we must consider whether or not what we are doing is according to the will of God. Are we obeying him? We are working and making money, but are we showing that we are ready to handle large sums, by giving him the tenth that he requires? We are busily pursuing admirable goals in life but have our goals become so all consuming that we have little time for prayer, bible study, and worship? We are helping people in our service, but is our work because we love the cause or to benefit our private agenda? If we ever find that we are not obeying him then we need to cast our net from the right side of the boat. Those who obey God and act with pure conscience usually find that there is a greater reward or catch, from fishing on the right side of the boat.

When you fish on the right side of the boat get ready for a great blessing.

When you cast your net from the right side of the boat:

It won't matter how many are against you because Romans 8:31 reminds us that "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

It won't matter how great your need because Phillipian 4:19 says "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in Glory by Christ Jesus."

It won't matter if you seem all by yourself because Hebrews 13:5 says "..For he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee"

When you obey the commands of God get ready for a down pour of blessings because 1 Corinthians 2:9 says "..eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

I don't know about you but I've found out that when things don't go right and all you have to do is call Jesus.

When you call Jesus, he can take:

—Failure and turn it into success; Discouragement and turn it into inspiration —Pain and turn it into pleasure; Burdens and make them light

—Sorrows and turn them into joys!

Jesus, in the midst of my loneliness, he is my friend!

Jesus, in the midst of weakness, he is my strength!

Jesus, in the midst of my hunger, he is my bread from heaven!

Jesus, in the midst of my troubles, he is my rock in a weary land!

Jesus, in the midst of darkness, he is my light!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who rose on the third day!

When the fish won't bite, call Jesus, and he'll make it right!

I'll Be There

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 26, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee." — Isaiah 43:2 "... and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen. —Matthew 28:20

Introduction

Mariah Carey has a hit song on the charts that has caught the imagination of a generation of young people, it is entitled "I'll be there!" It is a song of a young woman's love and commitment to a boyfriend that has not returned that affection. Carey sings of her unwavering love for her boyfriend, even though he has found another. In her song she tells him that if the other girl disappoints him in anyway she will be waiting for his return. She cries out to him soulfully "just call my name, and I'll be there!"

Long before Mariah Carey spoke those words about her boyfriend, Michael Jackson put that same song on the charts. Of course he gave a male version of the words, but the thought was the same, his love was never ending and would stand despite being jilted by his girl. He mouthed the immortal words "just call my name and I'll be there!"

However, long before Mariah Carey or Michael Jackson even thought to make such expressions of love and commitment, our Lord spoke those same words to every generation of believers. When Israel abandoned the love of God and went after others, God ordered one of his prophets, Hosea, to marry a prostitute to illustrate his love for the people who went off with other gods. His message to them was simple. Though you have abandoned me, I have not abandoned you "just call my name, and I'll be there." Jesus in his parting words to his disciples sent them into the world as missionaries, and his words to them were encouraging because he told them that whatever conditions they would face in life he would be with them always. God's love for us is unconditional. His desire is that we return his love with obedience, and faith. Sometimes we don't meet his expectations and fall considerably short in comparison to the love he has shown us. Despite our shortcomings however, his love for us is constant.

As Christians today we should be encouraged to know that the God we serve is always by our side. He will not abandoned us, although at times we have not been as faithful to him as we should have been. His constant reminder to us has been: "Just call my name, and I'll be there!"

Exposition

This text brings into focus two examples of the divine commitment to stand by, protect and empower the people of God. The first example shows God's commitment to the children of Israel. . Isaiah reminds Israel of God's commitment to be with them regardless of their circumstance. Nationally, Isaiah looked toward rough times which were ahead. War and captivity loomed but God wanted the people to know that even though rough times were coming he would still be with them. God's words to Israel were clear: "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee..when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned." These words emphasize a clear commitment by our Lord to be with his people in their time of need.

Likewise, Jesus giving a final charge to his disciples before he returned to heaven charged them to go, preach and teach what they had seen and heard in all parts of the world. Regardless of the difficulties that were to come he reminded them that he would be with them always, even unto the end of the earth.

In Over Your Head?-He's With You!

The complexity of life today makes it easy for anyone, especially young person to get in over his or her head. "Getting in over your head" is an expression that refers to getting into situations too tough to handle. There are at least two kinds of deep water situations: those prompted by tempting circumstances and those prompted by mounting anxiety. The increase usage of drugs, alcohol and other stimulants by many young people poses a peculiar challenge to those who are striving to live the Christian life. The challenge is to know just how far to go, when to say yes and when to say no. Youth who are not careful can easily get themselves into situations that are difficult and entangling. Experimenting with a little booze, a little dope and a little sex can soon get you in over your head. These can easily be described as quick sand situations because the "more you wiggle, the deeper you sink." God told Israel that when it went through the waters, he would be present with them to keep them from being drowned, "they shall not overflow thee." Since God is the same for every generation, youth today can expect him to be with them in tough situations when they appear to be over their heads. These are the situations where one voice says "stop, don't do it" and another voice says "do it, baby do it right now." Deep water represents those tempting moments when opportunity makes it easy to indulge a variety of sins and the will to resist is weak.

Moreover, deep water can also represent those moments in life when you just don't know what to do or where to go. These are moments when it appears that only a few people understand your situation and all are powerless to help. Some face life-decisions and are afraid of making a mistake. Some are afraid of the future and others are just uneasy about life and seem overwhelmed by all the problems that it seems to present. Its deep water. However, no matter how deep the water, God is still with us and he will be our guide.

Today young people should know that when they feel themselves getting into the deep water of temptation they should follow Jesus' example and remember the words of Christ "Get thou behind me Satan." When discouraged, Christians should remember that the Lord will carry them across the flood to dry ground. When the waters of circumstance appear to deep, I hear God saying "even in deep waters, just call my name, I'll be there!"

In the Fire-God is There!

Have you ever had troubles? Real troubles? That's a time when you reach out for somebody, anybody, to help you. Troubles are always around, lurking behind every corner, waiting for an opportunity to besiege the unsuspecting. Troubles cause us plenty of worry, hardship and anxiety. Some people age before their time because of trouble. When trouble comes, even the strongest Christian can feel the heat of the fire.

If even mature Christians need extra strength to handle troubles, think how tough it must be for young Christians when they find themselves -in the fire. The three Hebrew Boys were young believers who were trying to believe in God. Their faith was tested when they were challenged to pledge allegiance to the king rather than God. When they refused they were thrown into a fiery furnace, but the flames did not consume them or even singe their clothes. God was with them in the fire. Young Christians should always remember that God is with them and will not abandon them regardless of their circumstance.

If you are falsely accused-God is with you!

If you are the victim of cruel jokes-God is with you!

If you are ostracized from the crowd-God is with you! Like the three Hebrew Boys, they may talk about you, call you all kinds of names and ridicule you but they won't be able to hurt you because...I'll be there! When you get to where it seems unbearable, "Just call my name and I'll be there!

Just Call Him-He's Right There!

Finally Brothers and Sisters, Christian youth should remember that whatever the circumstance the Lord is always present and is only as far as a prayer away.

The world will continue to put you in deep water situations, making you feel like you can "Warm It Up" (Kriss Kross) by "Giving him something he can feel" (EnVogue). That's the time you need to do like Shanice and say a "Silent Prayer" as you remember Luther Vandross and Janet Jackson's words that "The Best Things in Life are Free." That's when you can tell the world like Patti LaBelle "When you've been blessed" you can do just like CeCe Peniston says and "Keep on Walking."

When the world presses, Jesus says just call my name, I'll be there! "Lo I'll be with you alway, even unto the end of the earth."

I hear the Lord declaring, wherever you go I'll be there! Psalms 139:7-12 declares "Whither shall I go from thy spirit?...If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold thou art there!"

He was there when:

—The Sun first began to shine; and the moon first began to glow! —Moses led Israel across the Red Sea; When Hezekiah received 15 more years!

Paul and Silas called to him in a midnight prayer meeting! —John was shipwrecked on the Lord's day out on the Isle of Patmos.

I don't know about you but I'm glad to know that Jesus is still there!

When your burden's get heavy "just call, my name and I'll be there!"

When you facing an extreme danger "just call, my name and I'll be there"

Jesus, who carried an old rugged cross.

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who rose from the grave after three days, is still saying "I'll be there!"

Whenever you need something from the father, just call my name ...and I'll be there!

How Long Before You Come Home?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 19, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "Who is there among you of all his people? his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the LORD God of Israel, (he is the God,) which is in Jerusalem. — Ezra 1:3;"..For How long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return?.." Neh 2:6;"And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? Revelation 6:10.

Introduction

When are you coming home? Have you ever heard that question asked before? It is a universal question that is asked millions of times a day by people in all walks of life.

Consider the young man who had become successful in New York and was heading a successful corporation. There were hundreds of people on his staff and his responsibilities were immense. He called his mother on a routine basis to tell her of all his accomplishments. The mother listened quietly as he told of her great meetings with the presidents of corporations, million dollar budgets, and the powerful people he meets daily. He was a rising star in his industry and his mother sat quietly and listened at the great accomplishments of her son. Finally the young man noticed that his mother had not said anything as he listed his triumphs, so he asked "Mother are you there? Did you hear about all of the great things that I have done?" The mother responded "All that's good son, and I'm proud to hear you're doing well, but when are you coming home?"

If a loved one has been away for a while, the question will be asked "When are you coming home?" If you're late getting home from work your spouse will ask: "When are you coming home?" In today's mixed up world occasionally children have to ask an absentee parent: "When are you coming home?"

People who have been outside of the church for many years, having drifted for one reason or another often run into a church member who asks them them a similar question: "When are you coming coming home, we need you." Like a proud parent who watches with intense interest the various secular accomplishments of his children our Lord occasionlly interrupts our hurried chase for success by asking directly or sending someone to ask on his behalf that very important question: "When are you coming home?" Many respond: "I am building a business" or "I'm working on my degree and it has tied me up" or "I've been involved in a very important undertaking." Still however, the question comes "When are you coming home?"

As Christians we want to keep our hearts focused on the kingdom of God. Our goal is to make it to heaven one day. Our course is set our journey has begun and we won't stop until we get home.

Exposition

This text first considers three questions posed in three separate circumstances, In Ezra, Nehemiah and the Revelation. The first question posed was put forth in Ezra. Israel had been in exile for many years in Babylon. The mighty temple built by Solomon had been destroyed and the people were given permission to go home and renovate or rebuild the temple. Ezra's question to Israel was simple: "Who amongst you is willing to go up to Jerusalem and help rebuild the temple of God?" Many came forth to answer that challenge. Bringing their gifts and sacrifices they made the journey home and completely renovated the building and restored it so well that it was a sight to see and testament to the greatness of God.

The second question is in Nehemiah. About 70 years after the temple had been rebuilt, Nehemiah received word that while there was a beautiful temple in Jerusalem the people had become slack in their service and the remainder of the work that had to be done was being neglected. What was left was the rebuilding of the walls. Nehemiah asked and received permission from the king to go home and help with the work of rebuilding the walls. The king asked him a question: "How long will it take you to get home? and when are you coming back?" Nehemiah gave no answer but he was prepared to get home as quick as he could and work until his job was done.

The third question is found in the Revelation of Jesus Christ to John. The Saint's of God who had been slain and persecuted during the great tribulation were waiting under the altar in the this vision. Impatient to receive their rewards in glory the Saints asked "How long?" They wanted to know when the gates of glory would swing open and they would receive the reward for their sacrifices. Together the three questions address our occasion: Who is willing to come home? How long will it take for you to get here? and "How long before we all go home?"

Where Is Home?

Every Christian today has three questions to answer with respect to home. Where is home? When are you coming home? Why should I come home? Where is home?

In the broadest sense of the word, home is where the heart is. In the spiritual context home is the place where the flame of faith first began to flicker. It is the place where you learned the meaning of being saved and gave your committment to serve God without hestitation. You may climb the prodigious hillsides of New Hamshire, discover the meandering valleys of the Mississippi or bask in the sunshine of warm beaches of California, but there is no place like home. Your soul may be lifted high with power of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir or rocked with the rhythm of the Florida Mass, but there is no place like home. You may consort with kings, be greeted by great princes and feast your eyes upon the Tajah Mahal. You may visit the Pyramids of Egypt, and dine in splendor atop the Eiffel Tower, but there is no place like home. Home.

The transplanted urban cowboy, confined to city life sings about it. "Home home on the range where the deer and the antelope play, where seldom is heard a discouraging word, and skies are not cloudy all day." Home.

The lonely Christian pilgrim muses about it and understands what the song writer means when he writes "I've got a new home over in glory and its mine, mine, mine!"

When Are You Coming Home?

While its good to know where home is, it is even more important to answer the question, when are you coming home? The elegance of the temple was a sight to behold, but there was so much work to be done. Nehemiah was asked the question: "How long will thy journey be, when wilt thou return?" How long will it take you to get home?

Today our churches have beautiful and comfortable structures with all of the modern conveniences, but there is so much to be done. The same conditions that troubled Nehemiah call out today "When are you coming home?" Hungry minds gather to stare at your empty teacher's chair every Sunday morning, when are you coming home? Trembling voices slump without your strength and talent; beneath the melody of their song I hear the echo in hearts "When are you coming home?" There are young people wandering aimlessly, without enough leaders. There are sick and despondent masses, who yearn for a visit or a call. The elderly are starved for a moment of attention; the homeless cry out for a crust of bread and a corner to sleep in. The social deterioation of times demands a collective Christian response. Our babies are having babies. Our young men are dying while they are still boys. Our children are failing in school. Many of the saints of God who have the gifts and talents that God requires are occupied in Babylon and have turned deaf ears to the cries of the masses who are asking: "when are you coming home?"

Why Should I Go Home?

Finally, there is a third question that must be answered, "Why should I go home?" The question "why" prompts us for an explanation, rationale, and reason for an action. "Why should I go home?"

Nehemiah, though successful at landing a big job with influential friends, decided he needed to go home because there was work to be done. Today there are many who need to come home to help with the work. I should come home because I told the Lord that I would be a soldier in his army. I promised him that I would serve him till I die.

Jacob answering the question "Why should I go home?" would respond: "I need to go home to mend a few fences and to rebuild a few relationships with my family." Somebody here is doing well in life, but there need mend a few fences with the Lord. The Lord has been good to them but they have not given him their best. Somebody here needs to say Lord you have been better to me than I have been to myself, starting this day, I'm coming home!"

The Prodigal son responded in his destitution: "If I go home there will be food to eat. If I go home, there will be somebody to love me. If I go home, somebody will help me!

If you ask Jesus to answer he would tell you "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am, ye may be also."

I've got to go home and get your mansion ready!

I've got home to get a polished shine on your starry crown!

I've to go home to get your robed pressed and ironed!

I just just can't go straight home!

I've got to stop by upper room and share my least meal.

On my way home, I've got to meet some brutal soldiers and let them whip me all night long.

On my way home, I've got to carry an old rugged cross!

On my way home, I've got to be crucified on Calvary's Hill!

On my way home, I've got to be resurrected after three days!

On my way home, I've got to catch a cloud and go back to glory!

But one of these days I'm coming back again!

I'm coming for my church!

One of these old days, I'm going home!

God's Dream Team

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe,La.

July 5, 1992

*SCRIPTURE:"Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." — Matthew 16:24; "And straightway they forsook their nets and followed him." Mark 1:18

Introduction

How would you like to assemble a team of the best of the best? Some have played local athletics either in school or sandlot. Occasionally some players mused over the prospects of having some of the best players in the area on your team. Imagine what could be done if the best bowlers, football or baseball players around were all on the same team, it would be awesome! Such a team would truly be a "dream team."

As the United States prepares to enter the 1992 Olympics in Basketball that's exactly what has been done. It has assembled what is being called a "Dream Team." Some of the nation's greatest basketball players have been named to the squad, including: Patrick Ewing, Michael Jordan, Magic Johnson, and other basketball legends, all assembled on the same team. Fans say its a team made in basketball heaven, that is sure to win the gold in the Olympics.

Today God needs a dream team! Not a basketball team, but a team of believers who can work together effectively to defeat Satan and win the world for Christ. The church needs a "dream team" of elders and leaders who are giving 100 percent to making the kingdom of God a reality. Moreover, it needs members who have a spirit of followship that prompts them to work together in such a way that God's team wins, regardless to who attracts the cheers of the crowd.

As Christians we are reminded that God is still looking for men and women who are willing to give of themselves for the kingdom of God. He has selected us and we have responded by answering his call. We must continue to work for the development of the kingdom, giving God the best that we have.

Just as Christ walked through the countryside assembling the best men he could find for his "dream team" his call is still going out today "take up your cross and follow me."

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he selects and gives the criterion for the selection of those who would share in the kingdom of God. Matthew 16:24 sets the main criterion for kingdom builders: he or she must be willing to deny themselves, pick up their cross and follow after him. The true believer must be willing to follow Christ.

Christ personally selected 12 men who were to help him to initially build the kingdom of God on earth. Later on he would select 70 others in 35 pairs and send them in various direction with the same message. Of the initial 12, four were fishermen, one was a publican, one was a political militant and the others were just ordinary God fearing men whose peculiar occupations were not identified.

As Christ approached each of them his appeal to them was simply to "follow me." The 12 of them, impressed with the mission, decided to follow Christ in his quest to establish the kingdom of God. Although it might seem peculiar, Christ also hand picked Judas Iscariot who would betray. Judas had a role to play in the building of the kingdom. As the devil's advocate, he initiated a string of activities that helped Jesus accomplish his main purpose for coming in the world, to provide salvation to mankind through death on the cross.

This special team had all the qualities Jesus needed to help build the kingdom. Peter, whom Jesus called the "Rock", became a strong force in holding the church together, along with his brother Andrew. John kept the faith boldly and often referred to himself as the one Jesus loved. James and John who Jesus called the "Sons of Thunder" stood boldly for the faith. James was the first to die at the hands of King Herod in A.D. 44. Philip constantly sought ways to bring others to Christ. He brought in Nathaniel whom the Lord saw first while he sitting under a fig tree. Thomas the cautious skeptic in the group was slow to be convinced but a fireball once he was sure he was right. James son of Alphaeus, called "little James" because of his statue but was big in faith. Simon the Zealot and Matthew the tax collector were complete opposites in belief but sent a message to all that the kingdom of God was free of secular and political biases. Thaddaeus carried the message to Syria, Arabia and Mesopotamia at the cost of his life. It was a dream team of the finest order.

Followship Is Important

Peter, in this text, took issue with Christ's main mission and challenged it. Verse 22 notes that when Jesus announced that his main mission was to go to Jerusalem, suffer, die and rise on the third day, Peter "took him" to the side and rebuked him for taking that course. At first he frequently objected to Christ's program. Christ would say "I'm going to Jerusalem", Peter took issue with that. Christ decided to wash his disciples feet, Peter took issue with that. Christ surrendered himself to the temple guards and Peter took issue with that too and cut off a soldiers ear.

It took Peter quite some time to understand the importance of followship. Sometimes he'd follow up close, and when things got rough he followed at a distance and even denied he knew Christ.

The deacon, as a member of the leadership team, recognizes God as the owner and manager of the team and the pastor as its coach. One of his greatest virtues will be his ability to catch the vision and assist the pastor in carrying out the mission of the church according to the game plan which has been revealed to each individual pastor. That's why the Apostles in the selection of deacons suggested that they should be men who are "full of the Holy Ghost." Men who are directed by the Holy Ghost will be able to sense the influence of the Holy Spirit in any undertaking and will be guided accordingly.

The duties of the disciples ranged from providing a buffer between Jesus and the crowds, allowing him time to retire to the mountains, to preparing the table for the last supper. Likewise, the first deacons were in a similar posture. Their duties ranged from settling squabbles among Greek women over "tables" to teaching, prayer and church management. In every instance, whether it was a disciple that followed Christ directly, or a deacon that served as the Apostles assistant, followship was key essential to the call.

Following Christ in Duty

What is a deacon's duty? Put in the common vernacular, his job is simply to "D.E.A.C." At his best the deacon is a:

(D)EVOTIONAL LEADER: The deacon leads the church in devotion and worship. Whenever the church gathers to sing, pray or to hear the word preached the deacon leads the way and is instrumental in involving others in the praise and glorification of God.

(E)DIFIES THE WORD: The deacon assists the pastor in edifying, or building up the spiritual strength of the church. To edify means to promote those things which will promote finer Christian living and to point out those things which are inconsistent with the will of God. The deacon must be strong enough to stand up for that which is right and stand against that which is wrong.

(A)DVISOR TO THE PASTOR: As an assistant to the pastor, the deacon is an advisor to the pastor with respect to church affairs and the execution of the details of the church's mission. The deacon owes the pastor the benefit of his best thinking, private reprimand and public support. His ultimate aim, with respect to his pastor is defined by three P's: Protect him from danger, Provide for his sustenance, and Promote his well being.

(C)HRISTIAN GENTLEMAN: More than anything else the deacon is a Christian gentleman and an example in Christian living. He is not expected to be above others, for he is human, but is expected to be a model to others of his age and generation of Christian living in success, failure, suffering, temptation, and hard times.

Following Christ To Glory

Every good deacon follows Christ in carrying out his duty. Following Christ is not without its rewards, for those who follow him in duty can expect to follow him in glory. I hear Jesus telling his disciples in verse 27: For the son of man shall come in the glory of his father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."

All the righteous of all generations have taken a firm stand for the Lord and have chosen to be on his team!

I hear Joshua declare "As for me and My house, we will serve the Lord." Isaiah announced to the world "if the Lord needs somebody,here am I send me."

It means if I follow Jesus, when I am:

—STUMBLING in the dark, he'll be my guide

—DISCOURAGED and feeling low, he'll be my inspiration —VULNERABLE and defenseless, he'll be my strong tower

—TROUBLED by the storms of life, he'll be my refuge!

—BURDENED he will lift my heavy load —SURROUNDED by adversaries, he'll prepare a table before me in the presence of mine enemies!

No wonder the song writer declared "Where he leads me I will follow. I'll go with him, with him, all the way."

I don't know about you but I've decided to follow Jesus.

On mountain peaks or on stormy seas I'm going to pick up my cross and follow Jesus!

I'll follow him to Calvary!

I'll follow him to the lonely tomb!

I'll follow him to the resurrection morning!

No turning back!

No turning back!

The Missing Link

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 19, 1992

Scripture:"I remember the days of old; I meditate on all thy works; I muse on the work of thy hands. I stretch forth my hands unto thee: my soul thirsteth after thee, as a thirsty land. Selah. Hear me speedily, O LORD: my spirit faileth: hide not thy face from me, lest I be like unto them that go down into the pit. Cause me to hear thy loving kindness in the morning; for in thee do I trust: cause me to know the way wherein I should walk; for I lift up my soul unto thee. — Psa 143:5-8

Introduction

There are many today who have no link to their past. They are completely cut off. They know where they want to go but have forgotten where the came from. Consider the poor farmer who by chance became a great statesmen. He was known as a peculiar kind of fellow because he always carried a hoe, a coin, and prayer book nearly every where he went. After many years a friend asked him privately, why it was it that he always carried these items wherever he went. The statesman responded: The hoe reminds me that I must always appreciate the value of a hard days work. The coin reminds me what it feels like to be down to my last penny. The prayer book helps me to remember the long walk to success began on my knees. These, said the young man, are my links to the past. If I ever lose my way, they'll always get me back to the right path.

The pioneers among us are our links to the past. They share the experience of their journey with many who are not familiar with earlier trails. They remind us of times when men conquered and succeeded with fewer opportunities and conveniences. They inspire us to overcome our petty grievances and strive for higher goals. They remind us of times when we have succeeded with fewer resources. They are constant reminders of the power of prayer and preserving power of God. The pioneers among us help us to remember. They are the important link that keeps us in touch with ourselves.

As Christians, we should always remember the great works that God has done among us. We should revel in his greatness and always remember how far he has brought us along this tedious journey.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as King of Israel as he meditated upon God and expressed his desire to reclaim the joys of past relationships with him. David's rich past had a great many joys and sorrows. There were the joys of his boyhood as a shepherd, guarding his fathers flocks playing on his harp and singing his own songs. There was the excitement of defeating Goliath and hearing the people call his name and sing about him: "Saul has killed his thousands, and David his ten thousands." There was also the sadness and loneliness of being a vagabond, moving through the hills running from the king's army while being protected daily by the power of God. There were also the lessons he learned about sin and its penalties when he stole another man's wife, and suffered diseases and pain. This text, written in David's old age remembered the old days, not necessarily as the "good old" days, but simply the old days. David declares that his remembrance of God's mighty works from the past inspired him to continually lean upon God's Grace because his soul thirsted for his presence. Moreover, in the closing years of his life, he declared that he "lifts up" his soul to God when he thought about his goodness.

The results of David's reflection on God's great works was a spirit which humbled itself before God. He said "I stretch forth my hands to thee..I thirsteth after thee." Such is the nature of anyone that remembers the great works of God and has experienced his goodness in their lives, they want to feel his powerful presence again and again.

Links to the Past

George Satayana said in 1905 "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it." This is most important because every generation needs its link to the past such that it might know the great lessons that can be learned from prior experience.

Many in the church today enjoy fine buildings, beautiful sound systems, computers, electronic musical instruments and a plethora of other modern conveniences. Most of what we have was foreign to the membership that comprised its previous generations. There are some who remember the cold nights when the smell of firewood circulated through the building and the whistle of the wind in the rafters sent a chill down their spines. There are some who remember the joyous days when ministers wore preaching suits with tails that dangled to the ground and preached until the whole house would shout. They remember the pride of the people and their desire to own something of their own; fondly recalling how they saved pennies and dimes and bought land, erected buildings and paid for it all without much formal education or schooling in high finance.

There are many who have been with the church through the immorality of the 20's, the anxiety of the depression, the fear of death brought on by the great war, the civil rights marches, assassinations of great leaders, the restoration of our race and even through the present day. These fine soldiers are our links to the past. Each time we complain that our budget of $100,000 or $1 million is insufficient, their presence reminds us that there was a time when we had much less and did more, for it was a time when we believed that "my God shall supply all your needs." Each time we complain about the color of the carpet of the fabric of the drapes, their presence reminds us of time when there was hardly a floor and no place to hang drapes, but yet we found the Lord, not in the instruments of worship but in our hearts. As we worship God today in the silence of our intellect, their presence reminds of the time when "church was church" and people knew the joy of the Lord; they knew how to "make a joyful noise unto the Lord."

Sometimes when the pioneers tell us about the past they wet our appetite for the spirit of simpler times when life seemed less complicated, faith was unquestioned, and the spirit of God was unquenched. Their words stir a thirst and a growing hunger for the essence of the good times they speak of to be realized today. They remind us constantly that true believers get their strength from God and not from the things we bring before God.

The Show Us How We Got There

The old warriors keep reminding us how we arrived at our present destination, and sometimes when we get off track, they show us the way back.

David himself got off but he found the way back and declared "restore unto me the joy of thy salvation."

We, who often look for solutions to problems in the complexities of compromise, negotiations, budgets, and agreements, sometimes forget that the simplest answers usually come in a moment of prayer.

We, who are often stumped by the difficulties of operating in these complex times, sometimes forget that the tallest mountains can still be moved at God's command, if we keep the faith.

Every now and then its good to hear from somebody who has been there to remind us that God is still on the throne!

It's good to hear from somebody who has been there, that there is no valley that's too wide for God to cross!

It's good to hear from somebody who has been there, that there is no hunger that God cannot satisfy; no burden that is too heavy for him to bear.

It's good to hear from somebody who has been there, that there is no problem too complex for God to solve!

When we forget the majesty and power of God, it's good to have somebody who in the quietness of their own faith, remind us that we serve a God who has never seen a:

—Request that is too impossible for him to grant

—Mountain so steep that he could not climb it

—Battle so tough that he could not win it

—Soul so lost that he could not save it!

It's good to have somebody who has experienced both sides of the pendulum's swing; who has been on the mountaintop and also knows the loneliness of valley but yet is able to rise and declare "Oh Lord how excellent is thy name in all the earth!"

The great pioneers of the church link this generation to our past. They show us where we have been and how we got where we are. But if there is a joy in knowing where we've been there is a greater joy in knowing where we are going.

The great testimony of every pioneer to the young is "find the missing link!" Get wisdom, knowledge and understanding, but find the missing link! Get houses, land, and material wealth if you will, but be sure to find the missing link!

The word teaches that there is one mediator between God and man and that is Jesus.

If you don't have Jesus there is something missing! You have a past and a present but you don't have a future!

I hear the old warriors declare "You can have this whole world but give me Jesus!"

If I have Jesus, yea thou I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil for thou art with me!

If I have Jesus, my past or my present state won't matter any more because "one glad morning when this life is over, I'll fly away!"

On Wednesday June 17, 1992 Sister Leola Davis Fortson went home to be with God. She was a pioneer member of this congregation;a link to our past, who shall never be forgotten.

"Keep Within The Reach Of Children"

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 14, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou riseth up." Deuteronomy 6:7

Introduction

When you were a child were there ever things that you wanted toget into but they were always out of your reach? The things that were high on the shelf seemed more interesting. Those little bottles that parents always told us to stay away from carried a special fascination. Then there were certain books and magazines we were not supposed to read and some kinds of movies were forbidden. Today medicines come in child proof bottles that are designed to require a level of strength and dexterity that would prevent little children from getting into them. It is good to keep dangerous things out of the reach of children. Every parent's nightmare is perhaps the fear of the day that a child may get into a dangerous substance or in harm's way without being aware of it.

But what if there is something good for you? What do you do then? Consider what happened a few years ago when the "Save The Children" Foundation decided to raise money by selling bottled water from the River Jordan. In return for a generous donation to the foundation each donor would be given a small bottle of water that had been blessed and which came from the very waters of Jordan. An aide quickly went out to find some bottles. He found a friend of the cause who donated thousands of unused medicine bottles and the water was packaged and sent around the world. Months passed and the officers noticed that not a single donation had come in, Not one! Concerned, he inspected the label on the bottles and found they had pharmaceutical labels that read at the top: "Save The Children", but at the bottom the label read inbig read letters: "Keep Out Of The Reach Of Children!" It was a blessing for the children, but no one purchased a bottle because of the warning!

As Christians, we know that there are some things in this world that should be avoided. However, there are many aspects of life, and faith that should always be within our reach. As we teach our children the ways of the Lord, we should keep faith, prayer, and God's word always within their reach; for in them is the secret of life.

Exposition

This text is extracted from the commands that Moses gave Israel concerning teaching and inspiring Godliness and respect for God in children. Historically, it occurred at the close of Moses' life as he reflected on the entire scope of Israel's experience in Egypt, its wilderness journey, and its survival. The Book of Deuteronomy itself means a "second look." In it Moses repeats earlier commands he had given the people in the books of Exodus, Leviticus, and Numbers. After repeating it all for a final time Moses instructs parents to teach its central theme and particulars to the children.

The central truth that parents are encouraged to teach children by precept and example is found in verse 5: "And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart and with all thy soul and with all thy might." Moses commanded Israel to teach Godliness to children while they are young and to make it a perpetual teaching process such that they will hear it every where they go. Verse 7 notes that we should talk of God's truths when we sit down at home, when we walk along the way, when we retire for the night and when we wake up in the morning. These truths will serve as frontlets or blinders that will help to focus them upon the important matters of life, without which they will go astray.

Religious and moral instruction should always be kept within the reach of children such that they will be able to draw from it later in life.

Keep Out Of Reach

Children are extremely vulnerable to the influences of the world. Many who think of themselves as wise and smart are none- the-less gullible to every influence of life. This increases the importance of training and guidance in their lives. This training comes from parents who, in many instances, think for them when they are unable to think for themselves.

For the first 12 to 15 years of a child's life, parents spend considerable time and energy trying to keep dangerous associations out of the reach of their children. Knowing that they will experiment with any and every attractive curiosity, without the ability to read and comprehend the warning label.

RAT POISON. Bad Company should be kept out of the reach of children. When the elderly suspect a person is evil or that something is wrong they respond "I smell a rat." Unfortunately children are often unable to smell the rats and parents spend considerable time keeping them way from individuals and experiences that will be poison to them. It is frustrating for children when parents are selective about the company they keep. In many instances it is simply a parent trying to protect their children from bad associations and reputations by screening the company they keep. The simple truth is, we are known by the company we keep. The old maxim's are usually true: "Birds of a feather, flock together." Children who associate with thieves, drunkards, dope heads, or rowdy individuals will be influenced to some extent by their behavior. Bad company needs to be kept out of the reach of children until they are able to read the warning labels of life and choose friends and associates by character rather than by popularity.

EX-LAX EXPERIENCES. Experiences that appeal to prurient instincts should be kept out of the reach of children. Like Ex-Lax, it looks good on the surface. Its sweetness is often mistaken and many children have become seriously ill after being caught by its appeal. "Prurient" refers to the desire for lewd and lusty things. Encounters that appeal to these interests stir up an "Itch" to pursue them. They usually present themselves in movies with a heavy sexual content, sexually oriented literature and suggestive music. They have an appeal that is difficult for young people to resist without help. Some want help because they can't say "no" by themselves.

DRANO EXPERIENCES. Influences that will encourage young people to consume substances that are unsafe and unhealthy should be avoided. These are draino experiences. Drano is helpful for opening clogged drains, but it is not to be consumed. Likewise draino experiences should be kept out of the reach of young people. They should be taught the dangers of smoking, drinking alcoholic beverages, taking cocaine, crack, heroin or even sniffing glue and other intoxicants. These are draino experiences that lead to sickness and dependency. The word of God asks: "What, know ye not that your body is the temple of Holy Ghost..and that ye are not your own but were bought with a price." Intoxicants and hallucinagents should be kept out of the reach of children until they are able to understand life's warning labels and avoid them on their own.

Keep In Reach

If there are experiences that we should keep out of the reach of children, there are some things that we need to keep within their reach. These are the experiences in which they demonstrate their love and respect for God and family.

ONE-A-DAY VITAMINS: Every child should have within his reach, access to some spiritual One-A-Day Vitamins. 1)Attitude. We should help our children foster positive attitudes about life and living by demonstrating our faith that come what may, God will provide for his own. Its an attitude that assumes that the God we serve is able to save and deliver his own. 2) B-Bible. Every child should have a basic understanding of the Word of God. Scriptures should be committed to memory and bible study should be regular. The Word declares that we should "study to show thyself approved, a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the words of truth." In times of need he'll remember "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want." When he has strayed he remember "Create in me oh Lord a clean heart and renew in me a right spirit." When he can't see his way he remember "I'll lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the help Lord who made the heaven and earth."

But every day a child of God needs vitamin C-that comes from Calvary.

When I think about Calvary, I think about Jesus and I'm glad that he's always within my reach, for he's only a prayer away.

He's so close that he can bring: Joy to the saddened; hope to those who despair; freedom to those who are in bondage and salvation to those who are in sin.

I don't know about you but I'm glad that Jesus is always within reach. Call him in the morning! Call him in the evening! Call him in the midnight hour and he will hear and answer pray.

Tell the children about Jesus, the lily of the valley!

Tell the children about Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Tell them how he died, but early Sunday morning rose from the dead!

Tell them that he has all power!

All power in his hands!

Blessings From Blunders

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.
June 7, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God and are the called according to his purpose." Romans 8:28.

Introduction

Have you ever made a mistake? Most people have. The question is not so much whether we have made mistakes but whether we able to turn our blunders into blessings. The same is true with misfortune or "bad luck" occurrences; whether we are able to turn them to our advantage is a matter of supreme importance.

Even the worst blunders and misfortunes can actually turn out to our advantage. Consider the story behind Ivory Soap, which is known as the "soap that floats." It is the oldest and one of the most successful soaps on the market today, but its success was the result of a serious blunder. Years ago this soap was just another brand among many. Then a factory foreman blundered by leaving a batch of new soap unwatched in the cooking vat during noon hour. His lunch was delayed and the soap overcooked.

Rather than report the mistake and run the risk of dismissal, the foreman decided to make the best of it. He shipped out this new batch anyway. It seemed to clean just as well — although now much lighter. The results surprised everyone. Rather than complaints the company was deluged with orders for this floating soap. The foreman was not fired but promoted when he cooperated with company chemists to revise and modify the old formula for "the soap that floats."

The same was true the Thomas Edison as he labored for 10 years trying to make his idea for a storage battery work, someone's blunder in his workshop burned the entire company to the ground and with it 10 year of notes and labor. Starting from scratch, Edison rebuilt his company and without his old notes, found fresh ways to attack his problem and came up with a way to invent the storage battery that are so prevalent today. It was the blunder that caused the fire that was a blessing in disguise.Charles Colson a former presidential aide went to jail because of his illegal activities. In jail he found the Lord and has since become one of the most energetic revivalists in the country. His mistakes at the White House landed him in the jail house and now he witnesses for Christ from house to house. His blunders turned out to be blessings.

As Christians we know that it is possible to make something better out of something bad. When things look their worst is when they can actually become a resource for our improvement.

That's the way God works with us. We don't often do right the first time, but He's always ready to salvage the situation no matter how bad we make it. He can take our blunders and make them blessings if we will trust him as our Lord and Savior.

Exposition

This text finds Paul explaining to the Romans the nature of the Christian experience as it relates to setbacks and persecutions. He explained to the Romans that the entire life of man is a suffering experience designed to move him toward a glorious end which is in heaven. The entire 8th Chapter of Romans, believed by some to be one of the most inspirational books of the bible, focuses on the Christian's need to be guided by the spirit. It is the spirit of God that will guide and keep us, despite the frailty of the human flesh and will.

In verses 12-17 Paul notes that while we are saved by grace, we should strive with every fibre of our being to live right and do the right things. When we are striving to do right, the Holy Spirit automatically locks in on a spiritual cruise control that insures that we maintain the right course. Verses 18-25 emphasize how setbacks, mistakes and adversities should be expected by every Christian because it is the nature of the struggle.

Paul notes that we should concentrate on the end, rather than the means of any experience. The central thought of this text verse is that we should focus on the final outcome of a matter rather than the troubling details of the moment. This powerfully short verse, when coupled with the rest of the 8th Chapter suggests that the Christian should approach each event of life looking at the end rather than the means, confident that as long as he is guided by the spirit of God that all things would work "together" for his good and he will eventually profit from every situation not matter how frustrating in appears at the moment. In verse 31 Paul summed up the central conclusion of the chapter, "What shall we say then to these things, If God be for us, who can be against us?" With that knowledge and assurance concluded that nothing would discourage him in his service of God, not prospect of life or the threat of death, the power of governments, fears of past failures and present trials, nor any other situations would be successful in separating him from the love of God. His focus remained on the end and rather than the means. He always projected that we are "more than conquerors through him that loved us."

Good Intentions

What is a blunder? Simply put, a blunder is a side tracked good intention. It is an effort which had a noble and rightful intent but somehow got off track an ended in trouble, adversity, persecution or heartache. We have seen many examples of good intentions leading to serious troubles once they were exposed to human frailty.

No one is immune to blunders in judgment, but the key element in the analysis of the crises, is the "intent." Paul's writing to the Corinthians suggested that if the Christian is guided by the Holy Spirit and his intent was to do the right thing, but somehow it became tangled and backfired, God will work it out for the Christian's advantage in the long means. We may foul up the "means" but God controls the "ends." He promises us that it will be to our advantage end the end.

Think about the last big mistake you made in your life? How can you know whether or not it will work out to your advantage? the concluding phrase of verse 28 gives the key: "according to his purpose." The question to ask is whether or not the action we made was in line with the general purposes and will of God? If we are trying to act in accord to God's will and fouled up, God will take care of it.

Overcoming Blunders & Hardships

Christians who have made blunders and mistakes in life should not wallow in self pity, but remember that those who make honest mistakes won't be completely devastated unless they lose hope. In verse 24 Paul makes it clear that we keep going because we are "saved by hope." This hope is rooted in our faith that despite circumstances, no matter how frustrating they may be, God will work it out to my advantage in the long run.

God will show us the way to capitalize on apparent failures, mistakes and wrongs. Consider the young man who went to work in the Potato fields of Idaho and found out on pay day that he was not paid in money but in Potatoes. It was a mistake not to find out how he would be paid. With hundreds of pounds of potatoes around him the young man said "Lord, show me a way, I have hundreds of pounds of potatoes, what do I do." Suddenly he had a great idea, thanking the Lord as he loaded the potatoes. He cut up some of the potatoes and fried them in grease and sold them as "French Fries". He mashed up some of them and sold them as mashed potatoes. He thinly sliced others, deep fried them and sold them as potato chips. Still others he marketed as hash browns. Before long he had a thriving business and more money than he could count because he capitalized on a mistake and turned it into a success.

No wonder Paul would say "all things" work together for the good of them that love God."

God has given us many great blessings out of the blunders and mistakes of life.

Paul,as a young man made a blunder when he set out to persecute the church, but along the Damascus Road, the Lord turned his blunder into a blessing.

Peter, hid himself and denied Christ three times in a great blunder that was both troubling and humiliating, but the Lord took that blunder and turned into a blessing so great that Peter became the head of the church. It was blunder turned into a blessing.

David, described as a man after God's own heart, made a blunder when he fell prey to temptation and took another man's wife, but it was a mistake that he recognized and told the Lord "Create in me oh Lord a clean heart and renew in me a right spirit." It was blunder that was turned into blessing.

I don't know about you but I'm glad that God can take my blunders and turn them into blessings!

I'm glad that he can take my failures and turn them into successes!

I'm glad that he can take my weaknesses and turn them into strengths!

But the most glorious blessing that mankind has received is the blessing of salvation as a result of the blunder of Calvary!

Mistaken for threat to Rome, Jesus was sentenced to death!

Mistaken for a great prophet who challenged Moses, Jesus was given an old rugged cross!

It was mankind's blunder which God turned into a blessing!

It was a blessing because Jesus died, but rose up early Sundaymorning with the victory in his hands!

Going on "Lo!"

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Greater Ideal Baptist Church
Dallas, Texas

May 31, 1992

SCRIPTURE*: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." Matthew 28:19-20.*

Introduction

Have you ever been given a job to do, but at the same time received little to do it with? What was your response? Did you shy away from your mission because you had little to work with, or did you go forth in faith?

A certain cook was famous for his fine recipes and gourmets. One day he received an order from the king to prepare the food for the king and his lords. It was both an honor and a scourge at the same time because whenever a lowly cook was selected for such an assignment he had to provide the food as well as prepare it, which made it even more difficult. The cook had only one egg in his pantry, but he was so honored to be selected that he set out on his journey confident that providence would help him. On the way, he met a man who offered to trade him a cow for his egg because he had broken one of his master's dozen and would rather part with his own cow than face his master's wrath over the loss of a single egg. They traded.

Later the cook met a farmer who was holding his favorite cat. The farmer complained that the cat had nothing to drink, all he had was fields of vegetables, none of which the cat would eat. The cook traded the farmer a pail of milk from the cow, which he traded for the egg for a wagon of vegetables that he pulled along by hitching it to the cow. On the way he met a butcher and a baker who had walked many miles, they offered to work for him if he would just give them a ride. So the cook gave the butcher a ride in the wagon of vegetables that he traded for a pail of milk from the cow he traded for the egg.

The king saw the arrival of the cook, laden with a cow, a wagon of vegetables and a butcher and he was amazed at the variety the cook brought with him. As the cook prepared to make the king's bread he realized that he had no eggs, but then there was a knock on the kitchen door and lo, there was the lad who traded him the cow delivering the dozen of eggs for the king's pantry. With beefsteaks from the cow, cold milk, bread and an assortment of vegetables, the king rewarded the cook, who gave all the credit to a little faith and a single egg. "I was running low, but I was on a mission a mission for the king, and I knew the Lord would make a way." said the Cook as he smiled and received his honors.

As Christians, we are on a mission for the king, we may have reservations about resources at times but, we should always remember that the Lord will make a way while we go forward on his promise never to leave us alone.

Exposition

This text is known as the great commission. It occurs after the resurrection as Jesus speaks to the eleven disciples giving them their final assignment. He told them to get the word out about salvation and redemption to the entire world, to baptize believers and then teach them the way of life prescribed for Christians. While Jesus gave his disciples a mission he did not give them any special equipment except his words of promise in these closing commands. This commission inclues two important words: "Go" and "Lo." As Jesus gave his disciples the command to go, inclusive of all of the hardships and sacrifices that "go" would entail, he also gave them a "Lo" which was a promise of his perpetual presence with them regardless of their circumstances or peculiar situations.

This commission that Christ gave his disciples, in a few short years resulted in the expansion of the faith to Asia Minor, the Cities of Greece and to nearly all of the known world of their time. It appeared to be an impossible mission, given to penniless disciples who had nothing to move on but faith and the "Logo" of God.

Today's Mission: "Go!"

The church today still has only one mission, to spread the good news about the kingdom of God to all the world. It has a mission to "Preach," "Reach," and "Teach" the world about Christ through administration of the Word and through the example of our Christian compassion.

PREACH THE WORD.The Church has a responsibility to provide for the preaching of the word of God. At home it is done through providing for ministers to administer the word and declare it to us. But the responsibility for the preaching of the word goes beyond the home front. It also extends itself to the missionary field in distant places.

There are still places in the world, despite all of our modern technology, that have not heard the word of God. Our mission, is to provide for the preaching of the Gospel on foreign shores. Today there are missionaries who are working in Africa, Europe, South America and on every continent of the earth trying to get the message across. The supplies they need, including bibles and materials must be supplied by believers back home. Our mission is to "go" and if we can't physically "go" the next best thing is to "send -go" and contribute freely to the missionary efforts of our convention.

REACHING THE LOST. The church also has a responsibility to "Reach out" to those who are both lost and hopeless. While our mandate to "Preach" extends both far and wide, our mandate to "reach" begins at home. It begins with the lost members of our family and neighborhood. It begins with the lost in our own community. That mandate suggests that the church must promote Christian Charity at home, or home mission. Unlike foreign mission, which primarily supports the preaching of the gospel in foreign lands, home mission combines the gospel message with Christian action on the home front. Home missions includes: Food for the hungry, shelter for the homeless. It includes education, crime prevention, and a show of compassion for children, victims, and the helpless of every race and nationality. In this regard, we follow Christ's example by first meeting the people at their point of need, responding to that need and then working to save their souls. People are more inclined to listen and respond when the church seems to respond to their peculiar needs. Missionaries who carry out this charge can sing with real meaning: "If I can help somebody as I pass along then my living is not in vain....If I cheer somebody with a word or song, then my living is not in vain."

TEACHING THEM. Preaching and reaching the lost are two essential elements of the command to go, but there is also the command to teach them "whatsoever things I have told you." This introduces the third missionary objective of the church, which is Missionary Education. Those who come to the church must be taught what Christ wants them to do and trained so they can reach others themselves. 2 Timothy 2:15 reminds us to "Study to show thyself approved, a workman that needth not be ashamed." That underscores the importance of Christian Education and Mission Education in the missionary process.

There's No Go Without "Lo!"

Today there are many who are striving to carry out the mission that Christ has given them. Though their treasuries are meager, there are many who do the best they can to support the work of missionaries, help the poor and needy and to teach the masses.

While some complain constantly that they have no resources and moan about how it can't be done, there are others who heard the voice of Jesus calling for laborers and responded "Here Am I send me."

One truth that every saint who has step out on God's word has discovered is that if the Lord gives you a "Go" there is always a "Lo." For every "Go ye therefore" there's is always a "Lo, I'll be with alway."

Lo represents the promises of God:

When storms rise, "Lo" means he'll say peace be still.

When sickness comes, "Lo" means he'll be a doctor in your sickroom

In the middle of failure, "Lo" means he will give you victory.

In the middle of doubt, "Lo" means he'll give you assurance. No wonder the song writer declared "Blessed Assurance, Jesus is mine oh what a foretaste of glory divine"

A traveler drove his automobile through the plains and the desert. But when he came to the mountains his passenger wondered how such an old car would make the high mountains. The traveler looked at his passenger and said “When I travel the plains, I can make alright, but when I make it to the mountains, I put it in low and away I go”

I don’t know about you, but I have found out that you can do amazing things when you remember the promises of God and count on lo!

A Widow woman who was down to her last barrel found she could eat on lo!

A woman sick with an issue of blood found she could be healed if she touched lo!

Peter found that as long as he kept his eyes on Christ he could walk on lo! When your mountains get high, just remember Jesus said, “Lo” I’ll be with you!

When your burdens get heavy, just put it on Lo! and remember Jesus “Come unto me all ye that are burden and heavy laden and I will give you rest!”

Lo, I’ll be with you, even until the end of the world!

Hands On The Plow

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.
May 28, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "And Jesus said unto him, no man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." Luke 9:62.

Introduction

A phrase from an old Dr. Watts hymn says "to serve this present age, my calling to fulfill, oh may all my power's engage to do my master's will." The words seem to epitomize the need for people who are willing to serve in the service of the master. Some have mixed up notion about service. They think the work of servants should be done by somebody, anybody, and everybody but them.

Consider the city boy who inherited 500 acres of prime farm land which he was told was worth a fortune, but could not be sold. The city boy asked a neighbor what he needed to claim his fortune. "What you need is a plow" said the neighbor and the city boy bought a shiny new plow and set it in the field. He watched if for several days and still nothing happened.

The neighbor said "of course you'll need some mules for the plow" so the city boy acquired mules, hitched them to the plow as he spread out his handkerchief on the ground and sat waiting to see his fortune appear. The neighbor passed by and saw him sitting on the ground watching the plow and mule and laughed. "Son, you're going about this wrong, you have 500 acres of rich farm land that could make you rich one day, but us ain't worth a dime to you if you don't put your hands on the plow!"

Unfortunately there are many who assume the city boy attitude about work in the church, and especially activity in any of its service components such as ushering, singing in the choir or committee work. They want to watch from a safe distance, but they don't want to put their hands on the plow. They want the benefits of a successful program but they are not willing to put their hands on the plow.

As Christians, we made a commitment to live for Christ on a daily basis. There is a great reward for those who plow, sow and plant in the kingdom of God. Those who work faithfully in the kingdom have put their hands on the plow and they have decided not to quit until their day is done.

Exposition

This text considers Christ as he explains the commitment necessary of those who choose to serve in the kingdom. It involves three individuals that are presented with an opportunity to serve in the kingdom, one requested to serve and two were asked to serve but all were awed when they discovered what was expected of a servant in the kingdom.

One man volunteered to serve and made a bold pledge to go wherever he was needed. He pledged to follow Christ "withersoever thou goest." It was a bold pledge and Christ sensed that he may not have understood the extent to which he was committing himself, so he explained the prospects of hardship, poverty and homelessness that might come upon those who truly follow him. He noted that even foxes have holes and birds have nests, but Christ, and those who follow him have neither. Whether the man was intimidated by these conditions it is not said, but no one that is truly a Christian would be dissuaded by the price of following Christ.

The second man was asked to serve, but he had family concerns and wanted time to take care of them. The immediate concern was the death of his father and he wanted time to bury him, which by Jewish would have taken a week because of the purification period required in the law. Jesus responded that he should "let the dead, bury the dead" as a way of saying that the things of the world should be taken care of by the people of the world, but those in the kingdom must concern themselves with kingdom building.

A third man was also asked to serve, but he took his service as a suicide mission of sorts and needed time to say farewell to his family and friends. He wanted time to set his affairs in order because he considered that he may never return. Jesus rebuked him for his hesitation and his slow response to heaven's invitation.

In these three examples Jesus underscored that those who commit to serve and go back on the pledge for reasons of family, business, or friendship are not fit for the kingdom. The greatest servant is the one that puts his hands on the plough and does not turn back.

Ushering Calls for Commitment

Today there are many who volunteer or are asked to serve in the ushering ministry of the church, who offer a variety of excuses for not completing their commitment.

Some Make bold commitments without counting the cost. These join the board and pledge to attend meetings, serve when needed and go whenever the board needs them. It is a bold commitment that requires a great sacrifice on behalf of ushers because when there is a funeral, church program, special activity or worship service, ushers are expected to be present. They are the church's "Minute Men and Women" who are ready to move in a minutes notice to their field of service. Wherever the church goes, ushers are expected to be present. Whenever the pastor is on to preach it is usually expected that his ushers will follow him. Whenever other ushers are celebrating anniversaries or special events the usher is expected to be on the move. Many make ambitious commitments to follow "withersoever thou goest" only to find that it boils down to "sometimes", and for some its even "seldom." Christ's warning to the ambitious young man who volunteered is the same that could be given to any new usher, "this is not an easy road, it will require many nights away from home and extended stays at worship.

Some are Fair Weather Servants. While most ushers are dedicated to the their field of duty some are fair weather ushers, who come to serve only if the conditions are perfect and if there is going to be a large crowd. When the crowd leaves, they leave and the lonely job of returning chairs, picking up and storing extra bulletins, and other unspectacular but necessary job is left to others. These ushers are reminiscent of "Old Charlie" the mule. Whenever Old Charlie was hitched to the plow he dropped his head and grudgingly pulled that plow. He did it, but appeared such a drudgery.

But when he heard the master say, "Hook Charlie up to the buggy, we're going to town" Old Charlie lifted up his head and he pulled that buggy with a lively trot and raised up head. People were amazed at Old Charlie's the beauty and grace of when he pulled the buggy. It seemed he got a chance to show off and liked it. Back home however, when hitched to the plow again, Old Charlie dropped his head and grudgingly trudged through the furrows. There are many "buggy ushers" that are good for the show, but they don't like to serve when there is no crowd, limelight, pretty uniform, or chance to showcase. Today, we should remember that the reward is not for the buggy but for the plow.

The call for committed ushers is a call for men and women who are willing to be servants despite the demands on their time by their family, community and friends. What Christ wanted from each person he asked to follow him was a total commitment. The harvest is truly great but the laborers in the field are few.

To Plow Straight, Keep Jesus In Sight!

Today, Jesus is still looking for servants who are willing to put their hands on the plough, and serve him without regrets. He is searching for the usher, choir member, deacon, teacher, or member at large that is willing to answer his call and give him a full and dedicated life in the Christian service. It's what the song writer had in mind when he wrote: "Jesus is tenderly calling thee home, calling today, calling today!"

However, simply putting your hands on the plough won't guarantee that you can plow a straight row, and do the job of a Christian service well. Those who have served as ushers for many years have learned the secret and spiritually they know how to plow.

It's the same secret that the small boy learned as he watched his father plow the fields with a one man plow. He noticed that his father put his hands in on the plow, stirred the horse and plowed straight ahead. His rows were always straight, it seemed easy. One day the father gave the boy his chance to plow a straight row. His father went to the end of the field and said, "keep your eye on me." The boy stirred the horse and the plow moved. He kept his eye on the blade of the plow and watched out for stumps and rocks. He looked back to see how far he had come and amused himself at what an easy job it was. When he made it to the end of the row his father showed him his handiwork, instead of a straight line, the boy had plowed an "S" because he took his eyes off his father, looked down, around and back. His row would have been straight if he had kept his eyes on his father.

I don't know about you brothers and sisters but I've found out that the only way to make it in this Christian journey is to keep your eyes on Jesus. The Lord will guide your footsteps and take hold of the reins.

If you keep your eye on Jesus, you'll find out that the Lord will be a Lighthouse that will guide you in the stormy bay. I hear Jesus declare "I am the way, the truth and the Light, no man can enter into the kingdom, except by me."

I've decided to follow Jesus, there's no turning back!
Storms may rise, but there's no turning back!
Winds may blow, but there's no turning back!
I've started out in Jesus and I'm going through!.

Rocks In Your Pocket

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:"And he took his staff in his hand, and chose him five smooth stones out of the brook, and put them in a shepherd's bag which he had, even in a scrip; and his sling was in his hand: and he drew near to the Philistine." 1 Samuel 17:40. "To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven...A time to cast away stones and a time to gather stones.." Ecclesiastes 3:1,3a.

Introduction

When opportunity knocks, be ready to answer! When your chance for success comes, be ready to seize the moment and step into tomorrow! We spend a fourth of our lives gathering information, learning skills, and gaining experiences that will prepare us to do one thing: be able to answer when opportunity knocks. If we learn as much as we can while we can, we are better prepared for the great opportunities that will come our way, once we step out into the world on our own.

A young boy walked along the trail one day and he heard a voice speak to him. The voice said: "Gather as many stones as you can and tomorrow you will be both glad and sad." Seeing no one, the boy kept walking and he heard the voice again, repeating the same message. After hearing the message a third time, the boy decided to pick up a few small stones and put them in his pocket. After doing so the voice stopped. The next day the boy walked along the trail and he heard the voice again, with the same message. He decided he had spent enough time picking up stones and wasn't going to spend any more. On the third day as he was going through his pockets he found the five stones he picked up the first day and turned to diamonds, rubies and emeralds and were extremely valuable. He jumped up with joy. He was excited over what he had. Then he felt his pocket from the second day and remembered that he didn't pick up any stones that day. It was then that he heard the voice again: "Gather as many stones as you can and tomorrow you will be both glad and sad. Glad that you picked up some, but sad that you did not pick up more."

Students who have reached the point of graduation have listened to the voice of their upbringing and picked up a few stones of learning on their journey through life. Some will continue to study and learn as much as they can while they can. Others will stop. Tomorrow they will be both glad and sad.

As Christians our quest is always to strive for the best without fear of failure because we know our Lord is always by our side. If we learn all we can while we can, he will help us turn what we have learned into great opportunities for success if we trust him and put him first in our lives.

Exposition

This text focuses on young David as he went forth to challenge the giant Goliath. As a young shepherd boy David had many encounters with wild animals that were trying to destroy his father's flock. He had successfully defeated them because he asked God to help him and then used what was available, usually rocks or stones, and killed animals as large as lions and bears. When David visited the camp of the Israelite soldiers and heard the challenge of the giant Goliath in the enemy camp he was amazed that the soldiers were afraid to go and fight him. He went to the king and volunteered to fight the nine foot tall Goliath and win the victory for Israel. He tried on the king's armor and tried to hold the king's sword and shield but they were too heavy. He told them he would not use their methods but he would trust in the same Lord that helped him ydefeat lions and bears. He picked up five smooth stones from the brook and put them in his pocket and moved toward Goliath.

As the mighty giant laughed at the pint sized David, the young boy used one of the stones in his pocket, put it in a leather slingshot and felled the great giant with one great effort. He had selected five stones, he only had to use one, because he was not even counting on the stones themselves, but on God to guide them to their mark.

Many years later David's son, Solomon wrote the book of Ecclesiastes in which he mused over opportunity. In chapter 3 he noted that there is an appropriate time and special moment for everything under the sun. In the 5th verse he noted that there is a time to cast away stones and a time to gather them. The opportunity and the special moment is represented as its time and in the course of his life, Solomon noted that doing the right thing at the right time pays off with great rewards for the wise.

The Right Equipment

Today more than ever, there is a need for preparation, training and skill. The world is increasingly dependent upon technology, which is requiring a highly trained individual to master its demands. While the demands of the work force are changing the demands of life are constant. Young people making another step in life today need the same traits as those of past generations.

If there were some stones that young people could pick up along the way that would magically change their lives they would most certainly include:

—APTITUDE: Aptitude refers to ones capacity to learn and grow. There have been many attempts to measure aptitude with a variety of Intelligence Tests that try to measure whether or not a person has acquired enough knowledge to enter certain areas of work.

While there are few tests that can accurate measure all you know, it is extremely important that youth learn all they can while they can. Unfortunately the things we need most are those we dislike. Reading is essential and young people must strive to read any and everything of value they can get their hands on.

—MAGNITUDE: Magnitude refers to capacity and volume. It refers to size. Today we need young people with big dreams and an even bigger willingness to put out the time and energy it takes to make big dreams come true. What propels us through life is the dream that lingers on the horizon. We must never lose the capacity to dream big. While its alright to dream of owning a house, don't rule out dreaming of a mansion. It's good to dream of having a job, but don't rule out the dream of owning the company! Only few have been able to go beyond the dreams, but even fewer have achieved big successes with small dreams. Aim for the moon, if you miss at least you hit the stars!

—LATITUDE: Latitude refers to distance, or how far you can go to the left or to the right. In the quest for success. Many people have failed because they could not handle latitudinal situations. Dealing with latitude means that you know when to say yes and when to say know, when to come and when to go. Many have ruined themselves in life because they went too far to the left or the right. Some could not achieve their goals because they were not willing to go far enough. Latitude judgments require us to know the boundaries and then move safely within them.

—ATTITUDE: Attitude refers to our viewpoint about life. It refers to how we interpret the events of our lives and what they mean to us. Two attitudes prevail: positive and negative. Those who see things negatively believe they are doomed to failure, accept second class status and suspect that the world is out to get them. Those with a positive attitude see everything for what it could be. They are the eternal optimists, they see the good in everything and everybody. They even see difficulties as another opportunity for success. Obviously, attitude will have a great bearing on the success of any young person, the wrong attitude will mean defeat.

—ALTITUDE: Altitude refers to heights and expectations. Altitude refers to your desire to climb higher and constantly reach toward something better. It is a constant quest for excellence in everything you do whether it is being a shoe repairman, computer specialist, or school teacher. Strive for the best! When you have reached a summit in your climb, reach for the peak! Go for the Gold!

What Is Most Important

As Christian young people, you will face Goliath. The Goliath you will face will not be a flesh and blood giant 9 feet tall, but it will be a future full of unknowns and uncertainties. With what will you try to defeat Goliath? Sword and spear? That's unlikely, what you will need will be five stones!

You will need a Christian aptitude. A knowledge, rooted in the word of God, that no matter what comes against me, if I am right, God is on my side. Study all of God's word that you can, pick up a stone and put it in your pocket!

You will need to know that there is no dream so big that you and God cannot accomplish it. He has the whole world in his hands. Dream big and expect big things from God, pick up a stone and put it in your pocket

Whatever direction you go in life, keep saying "if I will put him first he will direct me" for word declares "In all thy ways acknowledge him and he will direct thy paths." Let him guide you and advise you, pick up a stone and put it in your pocket

Even when things don't go right for you, never forget that God is by your side. He never put more on you than you can shoulder, because he knows how much you can bear. Pick up a stone of Christian optimism and put it in your pocket.

Success will be yours if you put God first, no altitude will be beyond your reach for I heard Jesus declare: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and its righteousness and all of the other things will be added unto you!" Put God first and pick up a stone!

The voice that spoke to the little boy on the trail now speaks to you: "Gather as many stones as you can ...and tomorrow you be both glad and sad. Glad that you did, but sad that you did not gather more."

Close Encounters Of The Third Kind

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 10, 1978

SCRIPTURE: "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." 2 Corinthians 5:17

Introduction

There are many people who believe in extra-Terrestrials, or beings from outer space. In one form or another people have reported spotting them in places around the world and some have even claimed to have been in contact with them mentally or physically. Books have been written about the subject and people around the world have been fascinated by the possibility of life on other planets coming to this earth.

Capitalizing on this fascination, a recent movie entitled "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" depicts a situation where the movie's hero has a "close encounter" with space beings. His close encounter goes beyond mere sightings and reaches the third level in which he actually meets and comes in physical contact with a being from another planet. This encounter of the third kind is said to be the ultimate experience and far exceeds all of the others because it is physical and personal and leaves and impression that will never be forgotten. The desire of many star watchers is to have a close encounter. Not simply a close encounter however, but a close encounter of the third kind.

How can we really get to know God? There are many who are familiar with him on a superficial level. They read about him and know of his presence subconsciously. They encounter him at a distance which only requires them to sense his being. Others see the handiwork of his creation and know him on the level of acknowledgement. Still Others have had personal experiences with him and their encounters are much closer and more personal than any others.

As Christians, we know God personally. We have had several close encounters with him, especially the close encounter of the third kind, where we have come to know him as our own guiding hand and light. Our quest is to show his love and grace to others who do not know him as we do. Our desire is that they too might have a close encounter of the third kind.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul writing to the Corinthians for the second time and emphasizing the nature of the Christian experience. He underscored the spiritual nature of the Christian life, noting that after having known Christ in the spiritual level that we respond to life in general on a spiritual level.

Paul addresses the level of our involvement by indicating that when we were in the world we approached life from a carnal viewpoint, but after having experiences with Christ personally we now approach life in a different, more spiritual context. This close experience with Christ has given us a totally new perspective on life and our relationships with people have changed.

The conclusion that Paul reached was simple: People who have had the ultimate experience of really knowing Christ, on the level of belief and acceptance, are different from those who may simply know him but have not accepted him. He described them as new creatures, because their close encounter with the Christ has led them to accept him as both Lord and Savior. This encounter is such a strong experience that "old things are passed away and behold, all things become new."

First Encounter: Sensitive To The Presence Of God

There are many today who have shared in the first level of encounter with God, they are conscious of his presence. Those on this level recognize the existence of God and they are sensitive to his presence. In a sense they "hear" God in a variety of ways.

Some hear God by studying their bibles regularly and through prayer and meditation. The study of the Word of God allows God a chance to speak to the soul in a way that is audible to the spirit. Bible study opens that channel of communication with God. While some hear God through bible study; others hear God by listening to the preaching of the Gospel. The preached word is another way God communicates with his creatures and shares his message of love and salvation with them. Many attend church services regularly and listen to sermons on television and radio. In this way they hope to hear God's message.

In Bible history the great and the small have heard God in similar ways. The Ethiopian Eunuch rode in a chariot reading God's word from the book of Isaiah. His desire was to hear God and once hearing it and having it explained, desired to be baptized. Jesus told the parable of two builders who built houses on the sand and on the rock respectively. The builder on the sand were like people who only heard the word but did not live by it. The builders on the rock were people who applied what they heard to their lives.

The first encounter with God is to hear him and do what he says. Hearing God gives us a sense of connection with God and with the universe. No wonder the song writer would declare: "I hear God in robin that sings, I hear God in every church bell that rings. Billows may roll storm clouds assail, my anchor holds, God doesn't fail, he's in control the captain of my soul, I hear God."

Second Encounter: Believe in God's Power

While there are some who have experienced the first level of encounter with God, there are others who have gone beyond just being aware of God's presence and listening, but they have accepted the evidence of God's handiwork and believe.

There is considerable evidence in the world of God's power. The sun, moon and stars all give proof of his majestic power and awesome nature. The universe itself inspires belief. It's that kind of inspiration that prompted the song writer to declare: "Oh Lord, my God as I in awesome wonder, consider all the worlds thy hands hath made ..then sings my soul, my savior God to thee, how great thou art, how great thou art!"

When we consider the work of God in our own lives we know that he is real. We have seen him move in our moments of sickness and distress. We have seen demonstrations of his love for us as he constantly blessed us although we have consciously worked against him. The blessings keep coming day by day and it lets us know that we are the recipients of his favor. This continuous flow of blessings may be what the song writer had in mind when he wrote: "Count your blessings, name them one by one, count your many blessings, see what God has done."

Those who have the second level of encounter with God have seen the evidence of God's benevolence and power and have reacted with reluctance. Although they have seen his blessings, know of his power and believe it they constantly put off making the final step and accepting him as their personal Lord and Savior. It is the same situation as Felix and Drusilla that heard the word of God and believed it but put off making a decision for him until a "more convenient season." It is the same procrastinating spirit of Agrippa who heard the word of God, believed it in his heart but refused to accept it saying he was "almost" persuaded to be a Christian.

Third Encounter: Accept And Believe

While it is good to have close encounters with God where he talks to you and also where you acknowledge his goodness and blessings, it is better to have the close encounter of the third kind.

Those who have the close encounter of the third kind are those who accept Christ as their personal Lord and Savior. These go beyond the mere hearing of the word, but they want to be doers of the word. They want live for Christ completely and turn their entire life around that they be new creatures for him.

This was the experience of Paul on the Damascus Road, who encountered the Lord in a blaze of glory that changed his life forever.

There have been many close encounters but none of them have been like the close encounter of the third kind.

Moses had a close encounter as he faced God at the burning bush, but it cannot compare with the close encounter of the third kind.

Elijah had a close encounter as the Lord rained down fire for him atop Mt. Carmel, but it could not compare with the close encounter of the third kind.

Jacob wrestled with an angel in a close encounter but it could not compare to the close encounter of the third kind.

Peter, James and John had a close encounter on the mount of transfiguration, but it was not comparable to the close encounter of the third kind.

When there is a close encounter of the third kind there is a:

—Stream of loving flowing from your heart

—New spirit in your song

—New fire in your prayer

—Vigorous clapping in your hands

—New running in your feet

When there is a close encounter with God we are guided daily by his still soft voice. One song writer said: "I met God one morning, soul feeling bad. Heart heavy laden, with a bowed down head. He lift my burdens and now I'm so glad, all that I know is, there is something within."

When you know Jesus you have something within!

You can't read about it, or get it from watching or listening, you must have a born again experience and know him personally.

"You got to know Jesus, know God for yourself. If you know Jesus you don't need nobody else"

Try him!

Try him!

Try Jesus!

He will never let you down!

Empty Water Pots

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 17, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "His mother said to the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it. And there were set there six waterpots of stone, after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece. Jesus saith unto them, fill the waterpots with water. And they filled them up to the brim." John 2:5-7.

Introduction

Looks are sometimes deceiving! Sometimes the happiest person on the outside is really sad and lonely on the inside. Sometimes the people who appear to lead exciting and full lives are actually empty shells of happiness.

Have you ever felt empty? The times when you felt that way only a very few people knew it, those close to you and know you well, others only saw the outside which was presented to them in a warm package of happiness and joy.

Such was the case when the artist that was asked by a church group to paint a picture of an unhappy family. The artist worked on the picture for several months giving it his best interpretation. The group members amused themselves speculating on how the artist would paint an unhappy family. One expected to see a picture of a husband and wife screaming at each other. Another expected a picture of rebellious children, or perhaps a family on drugs or alcohol. Still another suggested a cheating wife or husband as the perfect picture of an unhappy family.

Finally the artist completed the picture. On the day of the unveiling the committee waited anxiously to see the results of the artist's work. They wanted to know which of them was right. As the canvass came back they saw the picture of a husband, wife and two children smiling and embracing each other warmly. In the background were symbols of the family's success: their home, jobs, degrees, and bank books. Puzzled, one of the committee members asked: "How is this a picture of an unhappy family?" Everything is in place, nothing is wrong in this picture." The painter told the group that the picture was a study in paradox. The unhappiness of the family could not be judged by what was in the picture but by what was missing. Although all of the symbols of secular prosperity were present, those do not make a family happy. This was a picture of a family without Christ. It is bound together by a thread of trinkets instead of the eternal love of God.

As Christians we constantly seek to fill our lives with the love of God. Whenever we feel empty, we pray for his Holy Spirit to fill us with his love. It is through the love of God that we can hope for lives filled with happiness and love.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he performs the first miracle of his ministry. His mother called upon him at a wedding to provide wine at a wedding they attended when the wine ran out. She told the servants of the house to do whatever Jesus commanded them to do. In a short while they brought before him six huge water pots. Each water pot was made of stone and was empty. Each had a capacity to hold about two or three firkins apiece. A firkin is 9 gallons so these pots were big enough to hold between 18 and 27 gallons of water each. There were large water pots like these at the wedding because the Jewish ceremonial laws required frequent washing of the hands so they could cleanse themselves. They believed that evil spirits could be warded off by constant washing of the hands. The crowd, so large had used up all the water in the ceremonies.

Jesus commanded the servants fill the water pots with water and without question they took the pains to fill the pots, no doubt making frequent trips to the well to fill them. Once filled, Jesus performed the miraculous work of transforming plain water into the finest aged wine. The guest marveled at the wine, and praised it. They had no idea at all where it came from, how it came about. All they knew is that they were drinking mighty fine wine!

This text shows the spiritual emptiness of Israel. Like the wine that ran out at the wedding, Israel had lost its inner joy and had lost its hope. All it really had were empty Mosaic ceremonies and rituals that could not satisfy their hunger for a lasting hope. Christ showed them through this symbolic act, that a working faith in him could change their empty existences into meaningful ones.

What the crowd never saw

Today, it is possible for a man or woman to be running spiritually low and the rest of city not even know it. Like an empty gas tank doesn't show to the public until a car spits, sputters and stops running, many people can never tell from just looking that one's life is empty. The guests at the wedding never knew the wine had run out. The servants knew. Jesus and his mother knew. The guests simply enjoyed the party unaware that the spirits were about gone.

The word of God acts as an indicator for us and lets us know when we are riding on empty. There are at least six signs that indicate that we may be running low on spiritual fuel. 1) Our prayer life disappears. Either at home or in public our appreciation and respect for the importance of prayer diminishes. We begin to avoid prayer like a plague and unless called upon in a group situation, pray very little on our own. 2) Industry slackens. Our work in the church slackens. Our service diminishes. Our places of service are abandoned. 3) Bible Study slips. We begin to neglect the study of the bible. We neither read it in our own quite time, study it in class, or even bring it to a worship service with us. 4) Compassion wanes. Our feeling for the condition of others has becomes impersonal. Increasingly we become insensitive to the needs of the sick, poor and hurting who are around us and limit our involvements to only those acts which are absolutely necessary for our station. 5) Increased insensitivity to sin. We become more tolerant of sin and less disturbed by its intrusions into our lives. 6) Decreased joy. We do more but enjoy it less and very few things bring us a surge of satisfaction that is real and from the soul.

All six of these measures give us a gauge of our spirit level.

The people at work or in our community may never know, when they look at us, that we are running low, but those who are close to us will, especially those who frequent the word of God, because they know how to read the gas hand.

What do you do in such a case? Turn it over to Jesus!

Do What He Tells You!

Mary told the servants to do whatever Jesus told them to do. They immediately followed his instructions to the letter, even though it was tiring and difficult and seemingly meaningless. They did what he said.

If we want to fill our lives with the spirit of God we should bring our empty vessels before God and do exactly as he says.

If we want lives full of joy, happiness and purpose, then we should do exactly what he tells us to do to fill our vessels. What he wants us to do may be require us to put forth more effort and it may seem lack a useless exercise, but do it anyway. Studying your bible requires extra time on your part, but do it anyway. The perfect place for bible study is Sunday School because it provides a forum to get questions answered from your week of private study at home. Give some time for service in your area of church work. Spend more time in prayer, personally and with others. Never lose the feel for the needs of people who are more than simple statistics but human beings with needs and cares. Serve God with a zeal according to knowledge and he will give you a great joy and thirst for living and serving that will never die.

When about to run low, find Jesus

A family had considerable trouble as they took their summer vacation. A child injured herself at a theme park. The car's engine developed a malfunction and it seemed everything else that could go wrong was going wrong. As they were driving along the highway the father became aware that he was running low and looked and looked for a place to stop. Finally he saw a church on a hill and pulled to its front door. He and his family filed into the church and sat on the back seat there was a meeting in progress. He told the deacons that he had just run out and they looked for a place to stop. The deacons met quickly and between them they handed the man enough money to fill up his gas tank. The man responded, "Sir, my daughter has been in an accident, my car's been down, my wife has taken ill and trouble is all around me. When I said I had just run out, I meant our family's spirit is running low and we looked for the first church we could find, we don't want your money, we just want to talk with the Lord, because just a little talk with Jesus makes it right!"

I don't know about you, but I've found out that when I'm running low, Jesus can fill me up! When I'm drained he can revive me!

No matter what kind of empty water pot you bring before Jesus, is able to fill it with what you need!

In sorrow, he is joy in the midst of despair!

In weakness, he is strength in midst of failing faith!

In Heartache, he is hope in midst of a broken heart!

In darkness, he is a light, because weeping endures for a night but joy comes in the morning.

In a time of storm, he is a strong tower and a shelter in a time of storm.

In loneliness, he is a constant friend, for he declared "and lo I'll be with you alway, even until the end of the world.

I don't know about you, but every now and then when I get low I cry out in my soul "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know, if thou withdraw thyself from me, oh whether shall I go!"

I'm so glad that there is a fountain for empty cups!

I'm so glad that there is a filling station for empty souls!

It's on Calvary, at the cross!

There is a fountain filled with blood that flows from Emmaneul's veins. And sinners plunged beneath the flood; lose all their guilt and stain!

When Justice Miscarries

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 3, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "But let justice run down as waters, righteousness as a mighty stream" Amos 5:2

Introduction

How did you feel when you first heard the jury's verdict in the Rodney King trial? If you were among those who disagreed then you probably felt frustrated, angry, and helpless. Police stopped Mr. King in March of 1991 for speeding in Los Angeles. Police shot him twice with electric stun guns, and beat him mercilessly with their nite sticks. One officer hit him 45 times, others kicked him with their feet and pushed him. All of America watched the events via a video taped recording by a citizen that was aired around the world. When a jury, that had no African-American members, returned not guilty verdicts there was a national outcry. Riots broke out in Los Angeles, which reported over 1,000 fires. Atlanta, New York, and many other cities witnessed the largest public outcry of pain, violence and frustration since the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King in 1968. The reaction of nearly all African-Americans was one of shock and dismay at what obviously was a miscarriage of justice. Some took to the streets, others screamed and yelled at authority figures. Still others, in frustration, gave up all hope that African(c)Americans would ever receive just consideration in America.

The violent reaction to the decision in the King case reflected a break down in what every American expected from the criminal justice system, that: 1) Victims of crimes will be vindicated 2) Offenders will be held responsible, and 3) The common good of all will be promoted. Instead of being vindicated, Mr. King was made the villain of his own assault. Instead of being held responsible for their actions, the police officers involved were exonerated. Instead of thinking of the common good, the jury ignored the need of the public for reassurance that the victims of police brutality can receive justice. All three public expectations failed. Order is maintained by either a show of force or respect for the system of justice. When justice failed and the force and will of the law enforcement became questionable, public rage spilled over into the streets.

As African-American Christians we share in the frustration of this moment, however we do not endorse the violence and destruction that has come in the aftermath of the "just(c)us" of the King verdict. Though we are frustrated, we should not give up hope, because the God we serve is still on the throne. We must continue to constructively work, fight and pray until the day comes when "justice will run down like waters and righteousness as mighty stream."

Exposition

This text considers the prophet Amos as he prophesies to Israel about its evil nature and hypocrisy. Unlike the other prophets of the Old Testament who came with messages condemning Israel for its sins against God, Amos had a glaringly different message. While Isaiah, Hosea and others spoke of the sins of the people that were against God, Amos spoke of the nation's sins against the poor and disenfranchised; pointing out in commanding imagery that their unjust treatment of each other was not acceptable to God.

Wile some of the prophets seemed to address many subjects in the course of their ministries, Amos only had one: oppression and injustice. He walked the streets of the cities, saw it, and appealed to the leaders of the land to eliminate its effects upon the people. The injustices inflicted upon the people was a subject addressed by all of the prophets, however, it was the only subject addressed by Amos. Daniel had visions of the 70 weeks of seven and the last days, but Amos focused on injustice. Hosea targeted the backsliding ways of the people and how they had abandoned God for other gods, but Amos focused on injustice. Isaiah made majestic prophecies about the sufferings of the Messiah and how he would be wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities while he trumpeted God's disfavor with the idolatry of the times; but Amos only talked about injustice. Jeremiah envisioned the fall of Jerusalem and worked to save it from destruction. During its fall, he wept and a lamented over its demise, but Amos had just one focus (c)(c)the oppression of the people. Amos's message therefore was not unique, but he was the only prophet that had this single subject as the focus of his entire ministry.

Amos stubbornly pointed to the inconsistency of Israel's show of religious zeal while at the same time working to oppress and suppress the efforts of the poor and the oppressed. He prophesied against those who acted as judge and jury over the oppression of the poor and though able to counteract and stop oppression allowed it to continue and even promoted it for their own ends. Amos talked against those who filled the synagogues on the Sabbaths, conducted great religious feasts and programs but at the same time were supporting an atmosphere that endorsed the subjugation of the poor and oppressed. He projected widespread destruction would come if the oppression and miscarriages of justice continued. He painted pictures of a prosperous nation that would be destroyed from the inside if it could not develop a taste for justice and fair play for all of its citizens. His plea for justice rather than empty religious symbols is the same truth of the New Testament which reminds us that all of our efforts to appear and sound religious are empty if it does not reflect itself in our relationships with people we can see, while professing a love for God whom we cannot see.

A Plea for Justice

Many years ago Ephraim Tyler of Shreveport, La. wrote a book of poems that caught the imagination of African-Americans because they seemed to say what many felt so close to heart. Among his collection was one that was recited in Negro school rooms across America. The closing lines of his poem entitled the "Black Man's Plea" for Justice reads:

"I seek not for special favors, what I seek for is no task,
I seek not for social dealings, justice men, is all I ask.
I seek better education, in a better Negro School"
I am seeking no relations, save those in the Golden Rule.
As ye would that men should treat you, do ye unto them likewise,
Every man within your domain ought to have a chance to rise.
At the Shrine of this great nation, reverently I meekly bow
Ruling powers of this nation, will you give me justice now?

Hear me statesmen, I am pleading to defend the Black man's cause
Will you give me the protection outlined in your domain laws?
Will you let my colored lawyer plead my case within your courts?
I'm a citizen; I'm loyal; will you recognize my vote?
I pay dear for transportation over all your railroad tracks.
I come up to all requirements, and I always pay my tax
When I don't fill in the blanks correctly, will you kindly teach me how Ruling powers of this nation, will you give me justice now?

Amos called for Justice in the land. His plea was for our claims of religious fervor and respect for God to be reflected in our relationships with each other. The land should be watered with judges, juries, and government officials who desire to insure that the demands of justice are served. Justice once achieved should flow like mighty streams, purifying itself; unstoppable as it moves with a mighty force to set at balance the wrongs afflicted against innocent victims.

Langston Hughes asked a probing question: "What happens to a dream deferred, does it dry up like a raisin in the sun, or does it fester like a sore and run? Or does it explode?" The Black Man in America has dreamed of a day of justice but too often he has seen that dream dry up like a raisin. A Bureau of Justice report released in 1989 gave startling figures that trouble us: There are 609,690 Black men in the criminal justice system, 23 percent of all Black men between 20-29, compared to only 436,000 Black men of all ages enrolled in college. Most of those on death row are Black, all are poor and nobody seems to care. Many of us live in fear of our system of justice. We are so afraid that some of us panic when a policeman stops us because we don't want to be another victim. Some of us have seen arms and legs scarred by police dogs, ribs crushed, permanent injuries inflicted often unnecessarily at the hands of those responsible for justice and panic at the thought that we might be the next statistic. We dream of a day when we shall receive justice, but the picture we see from the Scottsboro Boys to Rodney King is one of a system of laws that is Just-For-Us. Hughes put it this way: "Justice is Blind goddess; to this we Blacks are wise: Her bandage hides two festering sores, that once perhaps were eyes. What happens when the dream of justice turns into a nightmare? Some dry up in disgust and shake their head. Others fester like a sore and run sour with hatred. Some explode.

There is hope

What do we do when that which we dream about evades us? Dry up? Fester and become bitter? Explode? None of these. We should continue to work to change conditions, but never give up hope that the dream of a just society can be achieved.

The man who has lost hope in both God and man lashes out at everyone; his neighbors, friends, and anyone near as he vents his rage. He does so because he has no place else to turn and is frustrated.

Amos, after telling Israel of his distaste for injustice, always ended his prophecies by reminding them that there is a reason for hope. In his closing chapter, Amos says the day is coming when all of those responsible for injustices against God's people will reap what they sow and they shall be removed. Out of their demise will rise the fallen Tabernacle of David(v11). When the destruction of cities, brought on by hate and injustice has ended, from the rubble and waste will rise a new and restored land and people.

Amos' message seems so fitting for our times. There is injustice everywhere but there is hope! There is oppression of the poor and aggression against minorities in our land, but there is hope!

Our hope is not in the powers of this land. Our hope is not in the influence of government, the electoral system or the Congress of the United States. Our hope is alive because we know the Lord is still on the throne. I heard a songwriter declare: "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!

"I have hope when trouble comes my way!" Storms may rise, but I have hope! Winds may blow, but I have hope! It's a beautiful hope that sets me free.

We don't have to burn buildings, or loot to show our frustration because "We are our heavenly father's children..in times such as these "just ask for strength and keep on toiling though the tear drops fall. We have the joy of this assurance, we're never left alone to bear it all for he knows, yes he knows, just how much we can bear!"

Get on the Goodfoot

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 26, 1992

SCRIPTURE: Turn not to the right hand nor to the left: remove thy foot from evil.— Prov 4:27; Psalms 1

Introduction

In the late 1960's one of the many hits of R and B singer James Brown was a selection entitled "Get on the Goodfoot." Included among the screams and grunts of the song were Brown's urgings that we should do what is right, get our act together and walk upright. In combination with other hits which described lifestyle as a "bag" he suggested that everyone should get themselves a new "bag," get on the good foot, say no to drugs and be Black and proud. He called it all getting on the good foot. At the time Brown was praised for his positive message to young people. It was clear, and because it had a beat, it was heard.

However, Brown's message of getting your life in order and walking in the paths of righteousness was not new then and it is not unique now. MC Hammer, Brown's contemporary to this generation, also sends messages to the young about staying clear of the obstacles that can get them in trouble or misdirect their ways.

Starting out on the right foot has nothing to do with literal feet or walking specifically. It has a lot do with lifestyle, living, how we choose to live it and with whom. These are important life choices that every young person must make at some point. There are many influences in the world that are at work trying to urge young men to be criminals or thugs and young ladies to be women of the night or some hybrid in between. Drugs, sexual promiscuity, alcohol, cigarettes, and a plethora of other evils await them on every corner. The images on television popularize temptation and the messages of some songs make vulgarity amusing and acceptable while forcing youth to lower themselves to gutter lifestyles to achieve any element of popularity and acceptance. Some youth have fallen prey to the influences that tempt them and are walking on the "wrong foot." They are dropping out of school, running in gangs, stealing, fighting, and killing. Others are developing attitudes of defiance that are leading them in the same direction. Now, more than ever, it is important for our young to get on the good foot and stay on it throughout their lives.

Christian youth are not immune to the temptations of the world. Church membership does not insulate them from temptations. Even though they have begun life on the right foot, they must always be aware of the influences in life that get them off track and on the wrong foot. There is a blessing for those who walk in the way of the Lord, but those who walk through life on the wrong foot can expect an end that is not desirable. Christian youth, stay on the goodfoot and God will bless your life richly!

Exposition

This text first considers David, writing in the Psalms, giving advice to the godly about life choices. He writes the first of what is called the "beatitudes" of the Old Testament which prescribe blessings for those who choose to live godly lives. He compares those who choose to live according to God's will to a tree that is planted by the river; its roots grow deep into the fertile soil and it is nourished regularly and withstands the great winds that sometimes topple other trees. The fertile soil is his study and meditation upon the word of God, upon which he reflects day and night. However, He compares the ungodly to dry grass which grows in the dust and then is blown away by the wind. It is withered, unwatered and unrooted and therefore blows away with the first wind that blows because it is not rooted in eternal truths.

David suggests that those who want a secure future will not take advice from the people who are themselves without root or godliness. His verbiage put it this way "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly." It was not to suggest that we are to avoid contact with the ungodly but rather that we should not take advice or pattern ourselves after those who are on the wrong foot themselves. The ways of the righteous are known and are pleasing to God, but the unrighteous shall perish.

Solomon in proverbs makes David's message even simpler: Don't turn to the left or to the right, don't put one foot on an evil path. Solomon's advice was to follow the right path and stay on the "goodfoot."

Both David and Solomon spoke from experience, having seen what happens when they lived on the "badfoot" and walked evil paths as well as having walked the paths of righteousness themselves. Both fell into adulterous relationships at one time or another and both felt the wrath of God upon their kingdoms for the error of their ways. They learned to fear God and keep his commandments for this was the whole duty of man.

Getting Off On A Badfoot

How do you get off on the badfoot? It usually starts with a negative attitude. Bad attitudes and low self esteem set the tone for the direction youth take in life. Youth who think little of themselves, have low aspirations and have lowered their self expectations to fit their self image. Some have accepted failure as their plight in life and have given up on school, dreams and their own personal success. They usually remain mad with the world and assume an apathetic attitude toward life. It usually shows up in their behavior in school and in other social contacts.

Marva Collins, the great Chicago teacher, in her book "Marva Collins' Way" describes how she and a troubled young student started out on the badfoot but ended up on the goodfoot. A nine year old boy sat in her class with evil eyes and refused to take of his coat. He had a history of expulsions and transfers and fully expected to prompt another expulsion. When he brought his defeatist attitude into Ms. Collins' class he came in on the badfoot, but she charmed and disarmed him and before the school year ended he was on the goodfoot, quoting Emerson and doing well in school.

Youth who pursue life with negative attitudes are starting out on the badfoot. Like weeds that blow in the wind, they have no rooted convictions or truths upon which to build their futures and are swept away by the ill winds of life. Negative attitudes color your opinion about life. Consider Big Buddy who lived on the farm and was a hard worker. However, Big Buddy had a bad leg that pained him on occasion if he pressed on it in a certain way after sleeping on it at night. He went to great pains to insure that he always got out of bed on right side so his good foot would hit the floor first, but sometimes he slept on his wife's side and when that bad foot hit the floor first he was mad all day and nothing was ever right. People would see him and say "Old Buddy musta got up on the wrong side of the bed today, he's on his bad foot again." When youth enter life expecting anything but success they start off on the badfoot. It's as if everyday of their lives they get up on the wrong side of the bed and step out on their bad foot.

Those youth who have decided to live the Christian life should beware of taking advice and suggestions about life, from those who are on the badfoot themselves. What wisdom is there in patterning after people who have failed themselves and don't even know it? It makes little sense to ask the student who has failed every test since school began for advice about test taking! It is not wise to ask the dope dealer how to have a good time! When you ask the hottest mama on the school campus how to become popular the answer is predictable. When you ask the sugar daddy how to have fun, the answer won't be something you'd talk about in Sunday School. Those who are on the badfoot in life are doomed to perish even though they appear to succeed at perish. David said it bluntly "The way of the ungodly shall perish."

Get On The Goodfoot

If the way of the ungodly shall perish, there is a blessing for those who strive to live life on the goodfoot, ie.,according to God's word.

What are the advantages of pursing life on the goodfoot. David said in Psalms 1 that those who strive to do right shall: 1)Bright forth his fruit in his season 2)His leaf also shall not wither 3) And whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.

Anxious youth who aspire to achieve success should be patient. Those who follow the godly way know that what God has in store for you will come, but only at the right time. Plums, peaches and pears are common fruits, but none of them can be obtained until the right season comes. The greatness that youth want from life is approaching, but it will only come in due season. Those who put God first will find that their success will be lasting and will not wither with fleeting fame or notoriety. Those who choose to walk with God shall prosper because he gives them a great appreciation for even the smallest accomplishments in life. Even so, they shall prosper both physically and spiritually.

Walking with God begins with putting your best foot forward and deciding that you can't walk this way alone that you need, the Lord to guide you and protect. Walking on the goodfoot begins when you say in your heart that Jesus is the Son of God and you accept him as your savior and commit yourself to live by his rules. Walking on the goodfoot begins when you decide to put God first in your life and to give him your best.

I don't know about you but I've found out that I need the Lord to walk with me. When the Lord walks with me my attitude changes. Instead of:

--FAILURE, I think of success, for "I can do all things through Christ that strengthens me."

--INSECURE SHAKY GROUND, I think of the Solid rock, for "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand.

--DARKNESS, I think keep seeing the bright and morning star. No matter how dark my times I remember that weeping endures for a night but joy comes in the morning!

--SADNESS, I think about unspeakable joy. I heard a song writer declare: "This joy I have, the world didn't give it and the world can't take it away!"

I don't know about you but I want Jesus to walk with me! All along life's tedious journey, I'm going to put my best foot forward, but I want Jesus to walk with me!

No. 391-Easter

I Will Rise Again

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 19, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;" Phil. 3:10 And they shall scourge him and put him to death and the third day he shall rise again." Luke 18:33 "

Introduction

What do you think of when you think of Easter? Bunnies, bonnets, eggs? There are a multitude of symbols associated with Easter that catch the imagination, but the one that means the most is the empty tomb of Jesus Christ. It is a reminder to us that despite the apparent victory of evil over good, that truth crushed to the ground will rise again. It is a testament that the struggle for that which is right will eventually be triumphant.

The resurrection of Christ wasn't the original intent of Easter. Originally, Easter was a pagan fertility ceremony saluting the goddess Eostre who was the god of the dawn and of the Spring. The direction in which the sun rose in the morning was named "East" after her and the celebration of the freshness of spring was named "Easter." The Jews celebrate the Passover during the same time every year because its date is fixed in the Mosaic law. Easter is a floating holiday that always falls on the first Sunday after the first full moon of Spring. Spring begins on March 21 Easter always comes between March 22 and April 25th every year. When it began Easter had nothing to do with Christ or the Resurrection. In fact, when it began it had nothing to do with Christianity at all.

The resurrection of Christ gave Easter a new meaning. While the Jews see this period as the Passover and celebrate their deliverance from Egypt and the Pagans still pay tribute to the goddess of the East, Christians look around and see the renewal of life all around us and use the day as a grand opportunity to celebrate Christ's resurrection from the dead and triumph over failure, doom and gloom! Christians around the world simply took over the Easter celebration and changed its focus. Easter did not begin as a Christian celebration, but today only a few people think about the goddess Eostre, most have never heard of her. What they do know is that Easter salutes the victory of Jesus Christ over death and the grave! Today, Easter and the Resurrection have come to share the same meaning.

As Christians, the resurrection of Christ stirs our spirit and renews our faith in God and in ourselves. The Easter story, wrapped in its trappings of personal failure, tragic defeat and ultimate success stirs us when see how Christ overcomes and rises above what even his best disciples thought was a failure. We are inspired because his resurrection gives us encouragement to handle similar failures with an air of hope. Because he was successful despite apparent failure, we who follow him can also expect to triumph over failure and defeat. That, my friends, is a pretty good reason to celebrate!

Exposition

This text considers Christ as he makes a prophecy about the remainder of his life. He notes that he would be delivered into the hands of Gentiles, ridiculed, scourged, and put to death, but he would rise again. The disciples, who heard him as he talked about his coming troubles were confused. Verse 34 indicates that the true meaning of Jesus' statements were hidden from them until the proper time.

When Paul wrote to the Phillipians in 3:10 he said his desire was to know Christ, the power of his resurrection and the fellowship of his sufferings. The great inspiration of every Christian comes when we read the three truths of this text backwards. Read in reverse order what Paul said was: 1) Like Christ we have died to this world and sin and through Baptism have shared his experience. 2) Since our Baptism and the emergence of this new life we have suffered in many ways. 3) These things serve as reminders to us that we have been buried with him in Baptism, suffered with him through sacrificial living that we can also expect to share in the power of his resurrection. In short, every Christian should be inspired since the one we serve has endured and conquered defeat, we who are recipients of the same power he received can expect the same.

Conquering Failure

Any account of the life of Christ that ends with the crucifixion is incomplete. Ending at Calvary focuses on what appears to be the failure or the low point. The beauty of the Christian experience is both the agony of Calvary and the ecstasy of resurrection morning. One talks about the failures and shortcomings of mankind and the other focuses on man's triumph over his own inequities.

How do you assess your own life at this point? Are you a winner or a loser? There are many today who feel the world has crucified them and burdened them with crosses too heavy to bear. Some have stumbled under the load and marriages have crumbled, businesses have failed, friendships have dissolved, and hopes for the future have dissipated. Some are not excelling as they should, while others seem to be at a standstill. Some see themselves as the victims of a terrible knockout punch and they are down for the 10 count. How do you keep going, when it is so obvious to everyone around you that you are defeated, washed up and through? How you assess yourself depends upon how you are connected with God!

Those who have been baptized into the faith expect to encounter a flurry of disappointments and setbacks as a part of life. Consider the country mouse who came to visit his cousin in the city. He had heard about the ease of cheese in the city and wanted to see for himself. On one occasion his cousin had him to feast on some cheese but before they could get back to their hole they stumbled on two traps, were chased by a cat and almost poisoned to death. The country mouse said "Cousin, you are right, there are plenty of opportunities in the city but it looks a little dangerous." The cousin simply replied: "It comes with the territory!" In a similar sense, setbacks and frustrations come with the territory of every Christian. Christ suffered many setbacks and disappointments but he knew they did not spell the end. While Calvary was part of the story it was not THE story, it simply came with the territory. It was necessary to provide redemption and salvation for men. If Jesus had to endure sufferings we, who have become like him, should expect no less.

The great joy every Christian shares at Easter is the reminder that though life sometimes gets us down, we shall overcome! Though we are frustrated by circumstances beyond our control we shall prevail! Though we are setback in the pursuit of our goals we will eventually triumph! Though we have failed on occasion, we are encouraged because our Saviour's triumph over defeat helps us to say "I will rise again!" The world laughed at Christ as he hung on the cross. He was counted among the failures. Sometimes it appears that we have failed as well, but everytime we think of the resurrection of Christ we say to the world, don't count me out: "I Will Rise Again!"

Look at the people the world has counted out, but they rose again! Baseball's Ty Cobb was known for his ability to successfully steal basis, but he was thrown out more times than anyone in history. Each time he was thrown out he came back and tried again. Babe Ruth was a great home run king, but he struck out more than 99 percent of the players in the major leagues. The crowds laughed at his strike outs but no one laughed at his home runs. Thomas Edison's teacher said he was a dunce and he failed 14,000 times in his efforts to perfect the light bulb. Abraham Lincoln failed twice in business, had a nervous breakdown, lost his sweetheart, and lost seven elections but kept coming back until he became president of the United States. Albert Einstein the worlds' greatest mathematician, flunked out in math in elementary school. Henry Ford died a millionaire but at age 40 he almost gave up on life because he was broke with only a dream in his heart. Anita Whitaker lost nine pageants before she even made it to the Miss Louisiana pageant which she lost twice before finally becoming the first Black woman to hold that title.

Each of these people had a never give up spirit that said it's not over until it's over!

I Will Rise Again

The same power that raised Jesus from the dead, is the same power that saves, inspires, and motivates Christian's today. Jesus did not raise himself from the dead, he was raised from the dead by the power of God. Likewise we cannot rise above our circumstance alone, but we need the power of God to raise us and lift us higher!

As Christians, our hope to triumph over defeat and death is tied to the resurrection of Jesus! When we see the empty tomb, we are reminded that he lives. Because he lives I know there is no:

--Battle the Lord cannot win; Burden the Lord cannot lift

--Loneliness that the Lord cannot comfort; Promise the Lord cannot keep.

--Dark Cloud the Lord cannot brighten; Heartache that the Lord cannot soothe.

No wonder the song writer declared: "Because he lives, I can face tomorrow. Because he lives all fear is gone. Because I know, who holds the future, ..and life is worth the living just because he lives."

I don't know about you but I'm glad there was a Calvary, but I'm even happier to know that after Calvary there was a resurrection morning.

Jesus told his disciples that he would be talked about and crucified -"but I will rise again!"

When Jesus told the scribes that his temple, once destroyed, would be rebuilt in three days, they laughed. But I can hear him say in essence "go ahead, laugh at me if you please, but I'll rise again"

As they drove nails in his hands I can hear him declare: "go ahead, drive the nails in my hands and lift me up, but if I be lifted up from the earth, I'll draw all men until me. You might nail me to a cross-but I'll rise again!"

Bury in a borrowed tomb! Put a seal on my grave, but early Sunday morning I'll rise again!

Go ahead drive the nails in my hand, laugh at me where you stand.
Go ahead me and say it isn't me, the day will come when you will see.

Cause I'll rise again, ain't no power on earth can tie me down.
Yes I'll rise again, death can't keep me in the ground

Go ahead and mock my name, my love for you is still the same
Go ahead and bury me, very soon I will be free,

Go ahead and say I'm dead and gone, but you will see that you were wrong
Go ahead and try to hide the Son but all will see that I'm the one Cause I'll come again. Ain't no power on earth can keep me back. Ye's I'll come again, Come to take my people back.

No. 390-Palm Sunday

When The Crowds Call Your Name

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 12, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "And when the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest. And when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved, saying, Who is this? And the multitude said, This is Jesus the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee." Matt 21:9-11; And they cried out again, crucify him. Then Pilate said unto them, why, what evil hat he done? And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him." Mark 15:13-14.

Introduction

How do you feel when people praise you? Important? Happy? Success ful? Among the various feelings you experience should be caution, because one of the weakest moments of a person's life is when he is the object of flattery!

Julius Caesar returned to Rome after a great victory and heard the crowds yelling his name and praising him. It is said that his attendant noticed that as he rode along he waved to the crowd but his smile was half hearted and without spirit. Later the attendant asked him why he seemed so shallow as the crowds showered him with wreaths and called out his name. His response was: Today the crowds would raise me high and praise me, tomorrow the same crowd would hang me high and scorn me. A short while later Caesar was stabbed to death by Brutus and several other close associates who were among the crowd that praised his greatness.

Praise, especially when it becomes flattery can be dangerous. Consider the nit-witted bullfrog who sat on the giant lily pad. It was the best pad in the pond and all of the other frogs wanted that spot but could never get it while the bullfrog sat on his pad. So a crowd of the small frogs paid a daily visit to the nit wit and they made it a point to tell him what a great frog he was. Each time they praised him his head inflated and he puffed himself out in pride. The more they praised him the bigger his head became. One day his head got so big that he burst wide open and the other frogs quickly pushed his remains aside and happily sat on his giant pad, made available by a successful frog who died from a bad case of the big head.

We should never be consumed by the praise of men. The praise of men is like perfume, we should smell it and enjoy it but never swallow it. It is not the praise of men that we seek as Children of the King, but rather the praise of God. So we work for him diligently, knowing that if we are faithful there is a crown for us in the end.

As Christians, let us continue to work for the kingdom, unmoved by the scorn or the flatteries of men. We should keep our eye on the prize, which is the high calling of Jesus Christ and heaven will be our reward.

Exposition

This text considers Jesus as he makes what has been called a "triumphant entry" into Jerusalem. Jesus had taught and healed for three years throughout the region and his reputation had spread from village to village. Many thought of him as a great prophet, healer and divine teacher and were drawn to greet him as he entered Jerusalem. He entered Jerusalem riding a colt. As he entered, the multitudes greeted him and threw their garments along the road to honor him. Others cut down branches from the palm trees and waved them in the air and shouted praises to him as he passed. They shouted "Hosanna" which was Aramaic for "Save Us." The shout of Hosanna was customary for the feast of the Tabernacles that was celebrated at this time. According to the law, during this feast they were to march for seven days around the altar with palm leaves in their hand. The eighth day was described as the "Great Hosanna" where the people marched and shouted praises to God and "Hosanna." The shout of Hosanna therefore, was hardly unusual, but it was unusual for them to shout such praises to a carpenter, riding a donkey, that they had never seen before and knew very little about. Their perception of him was based on their own agenda and not the true reason that Jesus came to Jerusalem.

Upon his arrival into the city the people praised him as the one who would save them. However, just a few days later the same crowd that praised him shouted demands for his death. The high priests and other religious leaders were displeased at the praise he was receiving and they consorted on ways to turn all the shouts to doubts. They accused Jesus falsely, produced false witnesses, and used their political influence to destroy him. Ultimately the same crowd that called his name in praise also called out his name in condemnation. The lips that shouted Hosanna on Palm Sunday cried out "Crucify Him" a few days later.

Praise of Men-Empty Shouts

What were the people shouting about? Most of them didn't know why they were shouting because they did not understand Jesus, his purpose or his message. They were shouting to be shouting. Often that is the case today, people are shouting on Sunday and crucifying the Lord afresh after the Sunday service ends. In a humourous way this poem characterizes the situation:

What You Shouting Bout?

When the singing gets good and; preaching comes to a head
When your hearts been lifted and your soul's been fed
When the spirit is moving and there's music in the air
When your soul gets lifted and there's a feeling everywhere
It's time to have yo' self a shout
But you better be sho,
what you shouting bout!

Miss Lucy got a good one, she dives across the pew
Miss Lula gets as stiff as board after a song or two Miss Annie throws her purse and gives the ushers a fit
Ushers are kinda scared of her,They scared they might get hit
It's great to have yo' self a shout
but you better be sho
what you shouting bout!

Ain't no harm to shout on Sunday, if the spirit is for real
But if your shout can't last to Monday then it wasn't such a big deal
You can whoop and holler all you please but if the spirit is not there
Then you wasting time, jumping pines and spitting snuff everywhere
It's great to have yo' self a shout
but you better be sho'
What you Shouting bout!
Wright '92

Often the praise that we offer God doesn't go beyond Sunday Shouts and Amens. Like the people in Jerusalem, some of us are singing his praises but we have no idea what we are singing about. Some are calling him Lord, Lord with no idea what that entails.

Jesus Not Influenced By the Crowds Words

Despite the beauty of their sound Jesus was not influenced by the words of the crowd. Certainly it was good to hear the crowd yell: "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord!" It must have been pleasing to hear them shout "Hosanna" but Jesus was not carried away by the empty praises of men, he knew his mission and while he enjoyed their praise, he was not consumed by it.

As we look to his example the Biblical record gives us a clear indication of the fickleness of public praise. When Moses came forth to champion the cause of Israel in Egypt they sung his song and praised his name. However, no sooner had they reached the Red Sea than did the people scorn him for having led them out of Egypt.

The praise and flatteries of men are momentary.

When men give us too much praise other men can get jealous. When David Killed Goliath the people shouted "Saul has killed his thousands but David his 10,000" and David became enraged with jealously because someone received more praise than he. Even today many people will lose friendships because someone cheated them out of praise that they thought they deserved. If their names are not listed concerning a successful project and they are not recognized in some special way they are offended. There are others that wouldn't be offended at all if their names are not called, as long as no one else is praised either. In verse 15 the high priests were displeased because the crowd praised Jesus instead of them.

Praise Of God Preferred

Although it was good to hear the crowd calling his name, Jesus knew it was only for the moment. What he wanted to hear was the praise of his father saying "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

When the crowds call your name, don't get carried away at what they are saying and the beauty of their words, always remember that what we really want to hear is not the praise of men but the praise of the father who is in heaven.

I don't know about you but I'm listening for another crowd to call my name, because this crowd can love you today and crucify you tomorrow!

The crowd at Jerusalem called his name but that wasn't the crowd that Jesus heard. He was lifted by the voice of a different crowd across the horizon.

In Jerusalem Jesus heard the crowds call his name and ask in mystery, "Who is this?" But he heard the voice of a different crowd asking a different question. John said he saw a great throne room, surrounded by the four beasts and the 24 elders. They all shouted who is worthy? And the crowd cried out "Thou art worthy because thou was slain and has redeemed us to God" By thy blood and stripes we are healed.

In Jerusalem the soldiers made him a crown of thorns and shouted "A King needs a crowd", but Jesus heard a different crowd shouting over in glory "All hail the power of Jesus name, let Angels prostrate fall, bring forth the royal diadem and crown him, crown him, Lord of all"

In Jerusalem Jesus heard the people shout "Crucify him, Crucify him" but Jesus heard the Angels declare "He's is not here, he has risen from the dead!"

The Hand That Rocks The Cradle

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 10, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"Then said his sister to Pharaoah's daughter, Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee? And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, go. And the maid wend and called the child's mother. And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it." Ex. 2:7-9

Introduction

The lives and careers of most successful people have been guided by the unseen but ever present hand of someone who made great sacrifices that they might have a chance to achieve. In many cases that hand is that of a loving mother.

When Harry and Ada Mae Day had their first child, they had traveled 225 miles from their farm to El Paso for the delivery, Ada made brought her baby, Sandra, home to a difficult life. The four-room adobe house had no running water and no electricity. There was no school within driving distance. Harry had a dream of going to Stanford University but it never materialized as he and his wife were trapped in a life on the farm. Ada Mae determined that little Sandra be great despite their circumstances. Although there was no school around, she taught her all she knew at home. As Sandra grew she bought newspapers, magazines, and books for the child to read. She wanted her to see life beyond the farm and so one summer Ada the entire family crowded into its car and traveled to the state capital of every city West of the Mississippi. They saved and scrapped and enrolled Sandra in the school of her father's dream, Stanford and Ada Mae told young Sandra that the she was destined to be great one day. With those words ringing in her eyes Sandra Day O'Conner became the first woman justice on U.S. Supreme Court. On the day of her swearing in with millions looking on, Sandra looked through the crowd and found her father and then fixed on her mother and smiled. It was a smile that instantly remembered a mother reading to her as a child, scampering up the steps of state capitals and telling her "you're going to make it one day." Her smile recognized the influence and contribution of the "hand that rocked the cradle."

As Christians we recognize the influence of Christian mothers, those who give of themselves to provide the best for their families. Their influence is phenomenal and far reaching. Mothers, who themselves are guided by hand of God, can shape the future, change lives and make an impact that change the quality of life the world for years to come.

Exposition

This text focuses on the role of a mother who was an unsung hero in the lives of three people who influenced the destiny of an entire nation. Her name was Jochebed, the children she birthed were Aaron, Miriam and Moses. She is scantly mentioned in the chronicles of history, but she had the opportunity to birth, nurture and shape the attitude, personality and direction of her son in a way that God could use him for a great and mighty work.

Historically, the Pharaoh of Egypt had become disturbed at the rapid increase in Hebrew slaves and he feared their potential to over throw the Egyptian government since there were several hundred thousand of them. First he ordered the mid-wives to destroy all males born but the mid-wives refused. Secondly, he ordered he soldiers to take all baby boys and drown them in river. This destruction of potential fighting men was meant to head off any eventual rise of the slave class in revolt as thousands of boys became men. While there may have been other babies that survived Pharaoh order, the biblical record only focuses on one mother's great faith and ingenuity. Jochebed acting on shear faith alone made a basket for her son of three months and placed the basket to float on the river where it would pass near Pharaoh palace. Pharaoh's daughter found the basket, was impressed with the child and decided to adopt it as her own. Moses's sister, watching on the side, quickly asked whether or not the princess would need Hebrew woman to nurse the child and she was ordered to get one, and thereby Moses' own mother was selected to nurse him and get paid for it at the same time.

While the great mathematicians, scholars and educators of Egypt taught Moses all of the learning of Egypt, there was another influence in his life that many had over looked, the influence of a Hebrew woman who had rocked his cradle as a baby and perhaps served as his nanny for many years. Exactly how Jochebed influenced Moses is not written, but it is evidenced in character traits that were not easily associated with the Egyptians. He had compassion for rather than hatred of the Hebrews. He often defended the weak against the strong as he did when an Egyptian was about to kill a Hebrew and when some helpless women were being attacked by rowdy men in Midian. He came to the knowledge of his Hebrew heritage and chose to associate with them as brothers. Acts 7:22 sums up Moses' education by saying: "And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds." What was not written was that his attitude and personality had been influenced forever, by the hand that rocked the cradle.

A Mother's Influence

A mother's influence on the life of her children is immeasurable. She teaches subtle lessons about life that inscribed on the invisible subconscious in ways that leave an indelible imprint. This is perhaps the idea Dorothy Holt referred to when she suggested that: Children who live with criticism learn to condemn; when surrounded by hostility learn to fight; when bombarded with ridicule learn to be shy; when raised amidst shame learn to be guilty. But if a child lives with tolerance he learns patience; lives with encouragement, learns confidence; lives with praise, learns to appreciate; lives with fairness, learns justice; lives with security, learns faith; if he lives with approval he learns to like himself; if he lives with acceptance and friendship he learns to love the world! All of these are attitudes which are shaped, especially in early youth, by the hand that rocks the cradle, mother.

It took forty years for most of her teachings and influence to reveal itself. Without revealing her identity Jochebed impressed on her son the inequity of man's injustice to other men. She gave him a perspective of slavery that no Egyptian could have given him and though he continued in Pharaoh's court for 40 years, her message was deep in his mind. Each day he assumed his role as a prince of Egypt and seemed oblivious to the pain and suffering of the Hebrews. Jochebed, no doubt, thought she had failed. There are many mothers who at time feel they failed to make an impression on their children only to find out many years later what an impact they actually had. It took 40 years for Jochebed to know the effect of what she taught Moses as a child.

Jochebed taught Moses to know himself. Mothers, more than any other influence in life, help children to realize their own potential. She shares her hopes and dreams for her child and then latches on to his dream and does her best to help him bring it to fruition. To accomplish this end mothers influence them to know that despite their humble ancestry, God can use them to do a great work. They set the course for attitude adjustment today that will help them advance in the future. Moses, once he came to a full knowledge of himself, accepted his destiny and turned his back on a life strange to his own destiny and responded to the influence of the hand that rocked the cradle. There are many Jochebeds today, who have lived to see their sons or daughters come to the full knowledge of their potential, change their whole attitude about life and step out in new and challenging directions. When Moses acknowledged his kinship with slaves, Jochebed knew she had accomplished her mission. It took 40 years, but she had been successful.

When Jimmy Carter was president, he acknowledged that his mother "Miss Lillian" was a great influence upon him, even as president. Likewise today, many great many who influence cities, states or even entire nations, acknowledge that they are still guided by principles instilled in them by the unseen hands that rocked them in the cradle of youth.

As our society becomes less personal and delegates an increasing amount of its responsibilities to others, it is dangerous for mothers to delegate their responsibility to influence their children in a positive way to others. Pharaoh's daughter delegated her responsibility to someone else, just so happened God was in the picture. Moses could have grown up with Egyptian attitudes and beliefs, but he reflected the values of the hand that rocked the cradle. Today, mothers may not be so fortunate if they delegate that responsibility to the day care center, next door neighbor or baby sitter. The person who teaches the child its values, rocks the cradle. Young mothers might consider the importance rearing children, setting good examples and spending quality time teaching, and sharing values as they consider career and lifestyle choices. Each mother must be keenly aware of the impact of the hand that rocks the cradle.

A Mother's Faith

All he knew about the God of the Hebrews he learned from his mother. Moses would not know God for himself until late in his life when he would encounter him at the burning bush. What he knew about God was reflected in the faith of his mother. It was her constant life of godliness before him that led him to know that there was something greater, and more powerful in the world than the lifeless statues of Egypt. In many ways the faith of mothers today is the best witness for a growing child. More than the lessons of the classroom or formal lectures, the active faith of a believing mother inscribes on the heart of her children that there is something important about belief in God. It may be years later before the child knows fully what is meant but the truth of that is learned lasts forever.

It is impossible to be a good mother in these times without a strong faith in God. These are times when people steal your children from the playground and put them pornographic films. These are times when children are molested by people in their own homes. These are times when death waits around the corner in the form of a potential rapists, drug dealer, or mugger. Mothers more than ever, need the Lord.

No wonder the song writer declared: "In times like these, you need a savior. In times like these you need an anchor. Be very sure your anchor holds and grips the solid rock."

The hand that rocks the cradle is stronger if it is holding on to God's hand. When you hold on to God's hand there is no:

--No mountain you cannot climb
--River you cannot cross
--Problem that you cannot solve
--Obstacle you cannot overcome

No wonder the slaves chanted: "Lord hold my hand while I run this race, I don't want to run this race alone."

Precious Lord, take my hand lead me on let me stand, I am tired I am weak, I am worn. Through the storm through the night, lead me on to the light. Take my hand precious Lord and lead me on!

Bearing The Cross

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.
April 5, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"And he said to them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." Luke 9:23-24.

Introduction

Have you ever considered what it really means to be a Christian? Have you ever gone beyond simple church membership and denominational association to find out what it really means to follow Christ? As Christians each of us is a cross bearer for Christ, but there are too many who have no idea what that means.

Consider the two wealthy women who sat in a parlor discussing their jewelry. Each wore very expensive clothing and wore diamonds, pearls and other precious stones rather freely. The first pointed to a dazzling 24 karat gold plated cross that dangled from her neck on a chain of gold so thin it could hardly be seen. She said it was imported and belonged to an English duchess. She bragged because it was so precious. "I paid $5,000 for it" she said admiringly. Her friend also wore a cross. It was made of pure gold and studded with diamonds and rubies. It was dazzling to see. "Of course" she said, "it is a masterpiece and I paid $10,000 for the designer's touch." The two ladies laughed and talked as their servant came in the door. She was a poor woman who attended a quaint little Baptist Church out in the country. The women showed the maid the gold and the diamond studded crosses and asked her opinion. The maid asked to speak frankly without the threat of being fired and once given permission she said, "Well you paid $10,000 for your cross and all you can do is count its diamond crowns. And Ma'am you paid $5,000 for your cross and all you can do is look at the gold. But a long time ago I gave myself to the Lord and he gave me a cross. I can't wear it but I sure can bear it." It don't shine like gold but its good for my soul. And you want to know the best part for me? Jesus paid it all and it was absolutely free!"

As Christians we know that while it is not sinful, there is no salvation in wearing the cross. Our salvation comes from bearing the cross of Christ daily. Crosses of gold, silver and special designs may make beautiful ornaments to symbolize our faith, but they are from the cross of faith we bear everyday. We bear the cross gladly because we know that if there is no cross, there is no crown for us in glory!

Exposition

This text considers Jesus in three circumstances: as he enquires what men think of him, as he considers his own suffering and death, and as he prompts his disciples to consider their sufferings for him. In considering public opinion Jesus found that the public saw him in every image except the one he wanted to project. The public saw him as Elijah, John the Baptist or another great prophet, but his disciples recognized him as the Son of God. Concerning his sufferings, Christ told his disciples not to dwell on the fact that he was the Christ, his works through suffering, death and resurrection would testify to his deity. His disciples were told to prepare for a life of self denial and suffering, noting that any that were not willing to make sacrifices to help build the kingdom could make no claims to salvation.

In these three instances Christ painted a picture of the nature of the work, the manner of the testimony and attitude of the disciple. The nature of the Christian service will often be misunderstood as the public forms its own opinion of what a Christian is supposed to be, regardless of the facts. Christ healed many, fed crowds, and performed miracles and public opinion put him in every category other than the one he wanted.He was often frustrated by what people thought but was consoled to know that those close to him understood the true nature of his work. Moreover, he encouraged his disciples not to devote their time to shaping his image because his deeds and eventual suffering on the cross would make his sonship evident to all. So he “straitly charged them, and commanded them to tell no man that thing.” He wanted the works to testify of his sonship in a way that the people came to conclude that he was Lord. Thirdly, he told his disiciples that if they were to share in the kingdom it would require considerable self denial on their part. The disciples took the challenge and went far beyond what Christ required and even gave their lives. The disciples and the Apostles that followed him knew the meaning of self denial and took it at face value:

Matthew suffered martyrdom by being slain with a sword at a distant city of Ethiopia. Mark expired at Alexandria, after being cruelly dragged through the streets. Luke was hanged upon an olive tree in the classic land of Greece. John was put in a caldron of boiling oil, but escaped death in a miraculous manner, and was afterward branded at Patmos. Peter was crucified at Rome with his head upside down. James, the Greater, was beheaded at Jerusalem. James, the Less, was thrown from a lofty pinnacle of the temple, and then beaten to death with a fuller’s club. Bartholomew was flayed alive. Andrew was bound to a cross, where he preached to his persecutors until he died. Thomas was run through the body with a lance at Coromandel in the East Indies. Jude was shot to death with arrows. Matthias was first stoned and then beheaded. Barnabas of the Gentiles was stoned to death at Salonica. Paul, after various tortures and persecutions, was at length beheaded at Rome by the Emperor Nero.

The public had no idea, but Jesus knew the cost of bearing the cross and he wanted each of his disciples to know that bearing the cross could be costly, but there was no reward unless they were willing go all the way.

Public Opinion

While Jesus was curious to know public opinion, he was not influenced by the crowd. Today there are many whose direction in life is too easily influnced by public opinion. In places of high government and even in local communities there are still men and women who are leading us who wait to test the popularity of a cause before acting rather than evaluating its rightness. The public was wrong about Jesus, and often the public, based on limited information gets and gives mixed signals about the issues of the day.

It's good to know what they say, but it is not good for any person to chart his course in life based on the opinions of others. If you build a house, in the minds of others its too small, to far removed or in the wrong neighborhood. If you buy a car it is the wrong brand, too old or too new for you. If you take a job they say you should have waited, and if you wait they say you should have seized the opportunity. Trying to please the public only frustrates and complicates life. Jesus knew the direction he was headed and he held stedfastly to his mission, despite what the crowd thought.

Testimony of His Works

The disciples knew Jesus intimately as the savior, but Jesus commanded them not to spend time arguing with people trying to convince them that he was the savior. He said his works: miracles, suffering and death, and his resurrection would tell the story. If you have done a great work there is no need for anyone to say that you are great- they can simply point to the work and it will speak for itself. Greatness is not a title that is conferred but is earned by accumulated good works. That's why Jesus warned his disciples not to focus on building his image, the work would be the image.

Today those who would follow after Christ, would do best to concentrate on the work rather than the image. You don't have to say "I'm a good choir member" your service with the choir speaks for itself. The same is true in any area of work, the work shapes the image. Maybe that's why the Consolers words carry so much meaning: "May the work I've done, speak for me."

Bearing the Cross

What is the work of a Christian? It is promoting the Christian ideal even in unpopular circumstances. It is giving of oneself until it hurts. It is resisting the temptatation to go with the flow and do that which is right at any cost. Being a Christian sometimes requires costly choices. The Christian Businessman may lose a profit edge because he refuses to sacrifice quality of goods and service for quantity of profit. Professionals may lose out on advancement chances because they refuse to compromise principles for a promotion. Some are ostracized in social circles because they simply will engaged in certain kinds of unChristian activities.

Jesus never said to his disciples that bearing the cross would be easy, only that it was necessary.

Jesus was not afraid of the cross and he carried it to Calvary! But must Jesus bear the cross alone and all the world go free? There have been many who have turned down the cross!

There are many who turn down the opportunity to bear the cross, despite its many blessings.

The Rich young ruler turned down salvation because he wanted it without taking up the cross. Must Jesus bear the cross alone?

Felix and Drusilla turned down the cross because they wanted to wait until a more convenient season. Must Jesus bear the cross alone?

Agrippa turned down the cross although he was almost persuaded. Must Jesus bear the cross alone?

I don't know about you but I found out that "there's a cross for everyone and there's a cross for me!" Brothers and sisters there is power in the cross. At the Cross the:

—Neglected get attention and the outcast finds a new home!

—Problems find solutions and lingering questions find evasive answers.

—Heartaches go away and hurts will be healed

—Crying eyes will be dried and burdens will roll away!

No wonder the song writer declared: At the cross, at the cross where I first saw the light and the burdens of my heart roll away, it was there by faith I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!

Something To Sing About

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 25, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"..But be filled with the spirit; speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord; giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ" Ephesians 5:18b-20.;"And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God king and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. 5:10

Introduction

Have you ever noticed that on any given Sunday there are scores of people who never sing? Ever wondered why? Consider the case of Sad Sally who came to church frequently but rarely moved her lips whenever the congregation sang. She sat politely and stared at the choir and other members, but never sang a word herself. She continued this practice for many years and it disturbed some members who entertained bad thoughts about her because she would never sing. One Sunday however, the entire church was pleasantly surprised when they saw Sad Sally singing. Her face lit up and she was beaming with enthusiasm. After the service several members surrounded her and asked why she seemed so jubilant. Sally told her friends that she had been fishing the day before and was caught out in middle of lake when a storm suddenly came up from no where. It blew the waters and topsized her little boat. She prayed to God for mercy because she knew she was seeing her last day. Just as quick as the storm started it stopped and soon she could see the sun again. When she was plucked from the water and brought to shore she thanked the Lord.

"This morning I had to sing along when I heard the choir say 'When the Storms of life are raging..stand by me.' I've heard it many times but somehow I understood it when we sang 'I was sinking deep in sin far from the peaceful shore, very deeply stained within sinking to rise no, but the master of the sea heard my despairing cry and from the waters lifted me, now safe am I.' I almost shouted when I heard the words "Love Lifted me!"

When you saw me grinning, it was because the choir was singing "There's a bright side somewhere. My lips couldn't be still when I heard the choir say "Amazing Grace how sweet the sound that saved a wretch like me. Because I was lost but now I'm found, blind, but now I see."

At that point the church members knew why Sally was singing so much in the service ....She had found something to sing about.

As Christians we have plenty reason to sing. We serve a loving God who has showered us with blessings. Even in our moments of difficulty, frustration and pain, we can still sing his praises because he has given us his Son, Jesus, and that's something to sing about.

Exposition

Paul writing to the Ephesians encouraged them to praise the Lord continuously by being filled with the spirit and singing his praises. He urged them to sing one of three kinds of songs when moved by the spirit of God: Psalms, Hymns and Spirituals. These were offered to Christians as alternatives to the drunkeness and lewdness offered by the world. In them, Paul notes Christians who walk circumspectfully in the world "redeem" their time and use it wisely using every opportunity to witness for Christ, which includes the songs they sing.

The first of the three kinds of songs Paul mentioned are Psalms. These are great collections of poems, mostly written by David, that express gratitude and thanks to God for his mercy and goodness. When the early church sang Psalms the reference was to the 150 selections that were taught in the synagogues. These included: "The Lord is My Shepherd, I shall not want" of Psalm 23 and "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble" of Psalm 46. These songs, in modern times, are called anthems and sing to God and praise him for his goodness, greatness and graciousness to mankind.

Paul also noted the Hymns. These are expressions of faith in the cause of Christ whose ultimate purpose is to inspire us to continue in the Christian struggle. They often speak of his trial, suffering and triumph as well as our continued faith that his victory will lead us to a better and brighter day in the kingdom of God.

Thirdly, Paul encouraged the Ephesians to sing spirituals. These are songs that express the mood of our soul and spirit in hard times, frustration, failure, and death. They tell how we feel at the moment, but also express our faith that despite the frustrations of the hour, hope still lingers on the horizon.

Paul encourages every Christian to make melodies in their hearts that give praise to God, and express our faith. Even in our darkest hour, he suggests that we should give "thanks always for all things unto God."

A few years ago noted Blues Singer B.B. King wrote a song entitled "Why I sing the Blues." He said the song was in response to the many questions he received about the thousands of songs he's written that are best described as "somebody done somebody wrong songs." The blues, said King, reflect the poverty of spirit and body that touches the lives of so many people. At best the blues is depressing because it offers no hope, only a way to cry out in pain.

Christians have difficulty singing the blues. We continuously look forward to peace that follows the storm, the stilling of troubled waters, and the opening of closed doors. In contrast to B.B. King, there are the sentiments of the late Mahalia Jackson who turned down lucrative contracts to sing Rock and roll by explaining "Why I sing Gospel Music." She said she sang about the Lord because he had been such a wonderful God and blessed her in so many wonderful ways. She noted that every day she woke up she found another reason to sing for the Lord.

People who enjoy singing in the church, usually have something sing about! When they sing "Count it all Joy" with a smile on their face, it's not because they like the beat of the music and the chords, but because they can witness to the truth of the message. They have seen hard times. They know what's like to squeeze your family into a small trailer, cook on a hot plate, and shiver in the winter when there is no gas. They have seen the waiting rooms of countless doctors offices and suffered the painful discomfort of surgeries, pills and hospital beds.They understand hard times, but also know that "all things work to the good of them that love the Lord." Those who have shared that experience can reach out with bellowing alto's and tenors and say "everything in Christ is joy."

When you have seen both sides of life and have come to know the joy of the Lord, you have something to sing about! When you have experience emptiness of living for the weekend, squeezing in crowded smoked filled clubs, surrounded by fair weather friends, foolish fantasies and wasted opportunity; you have something to sing about when you leave it all behind. A person who has witnessed others become alcoholics, drug addicts and criminals when they chose to live without the Lord, can sing with a spirit of committment "I moved from my old house, I moved from old friends, I moved from my old way of life...I got a brand new life." When you have come through the experience and found a better life, "you've got something to sing about!"

When the Lord blesses us we have something to sing about! If we count the ways that God has blessed us, all of us have should have something to sing about. However, there are special blessings we have received we have even more to sing about! When you ask the Lord to give you a job and help you stand on your own two feet and he does it, you have something to sing about! When you ask the Lord help you point your children in the right direction and place in safe hands and he does it, you have something to sing about. When you ask the Lord help you keep a smile on your face, despite the pain and frustration you feel repeatedly, and he does it, you can sing like nobody else can sing "I know the Lord will answer prayer because I've tried him for myself" you've got something to sing about!

In a Jail cell Paul and Silas found something to sing about. I don't what they sang but it must have been something like "He'll open doors for you!" They could sing because they had faith, and faith gives you something to sing about!

Jesus finished the Lord supper and sang a hymn before going out to the garden. As he carried the cross up to Calvary the women cried and sang. I don't know what they sang but the words of Dr. Watts would have been appropriate: "Must Jesus bear the cross alone and all the world go free, no there's a cross for everyone and there's a cross for me."

Is there sadness all around you? Sing! "When peace like a river attendeth my way, when sorrows like sea billows roll. Whatever my lot, thou has taught me to say, it is well, it is well with my soul!"

Is there trouble in your life? Sing! "I'm so glad that trouble don't last always"

Is it dark right now and you can't see your way? Sing: "The Lord will make a way somehow!"

When you have Jesus you have something to sing about. You have:

--Peace in the middle of confusion; Hope in the midst of despair

--Strength in midst of weakness; Inspiration in the midst of discouragement!

When you have Jesus you have something to sing about because he promised "never to leave me, never to leave me alone"

"Why should I be discouraged, why should the shadows come. Why should my heart be lonely and long for heaven and home. For Jesus is my portion, a constant friend is he, he's eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me. ...

I sing because I happy!

I sing because I'm free!

For his eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me!

On Saturday March 21, 1992 Thelma Dianne Coffey moved from her old house into a brand new house not made by hands. Even in her sickness she kept a smile on her face and kept singing, because she had something to sing about!

There Is Room At The Cross For You

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 22, 1992

SCRIPTURE: So that servant came, and showed his lord these things. Then the master of the house being angry said to his servant, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind. And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room. — Luke 14:21-22

Introduction

Have you ever had a problem but failed to bring it to the attention of someone who could help because you thought your problem too small? If you called your mayor, governor or senator do you expect to get an answer, or do you consider your matter insignificant. Often people find that officials and people of importance have little time for small concerns therefore they consider their problem insignificant. Soon they stop asking altogether and miss opportunities for help.

Consider the poor boy who found the prince in the woods, hungry, hurt and lost. Together with his family they took the prince into their one room house, fed him and nursed him to health again, without knowing he was a prince. Upon leaving, the prince gave the boy his medallion and thanked the family for making room for him in their home. Two years later the family fell upon hard times and they faced starvation. The boy, full of optimism, decided to go to the king and ask for help. His family members were amused because they felt the king was busy dealing with the affairs of state and had little time for the concerns of a peasant family. However they allowed him to go anyway. Once inside the palace the boy noticed the long lines of dignitaries that commanded the king's attention and felt awed by his little problem, but he started to walk toward the king anyway. The palace guards caught him by the arms and dragged him as he was streaming and yelling "I want to see the king."

The prince saw the boy and from a distance recognized the medallion hanging around his neck. He ordered the guards to bring the boy to the front of the line. The prince turned to his father the King and said "This boy and his family made room for me in their one room shanty. There is always room for him in the palaces of the kingdom." The king heard the boy's trouble and said to him. "Because you made room for my son, and you bear his medallion, you shall have the desire of your heart!" The king ordered the boy and his family to be housed and employed in the palace for as long as they wished because "they made room for my son."

As Christians we have made room in our lives for the son of God. He has given us his seal and assurance that whenever we need him he will be there. No problem is too small for him and there is always plenty of room for us at the front of the line!

Exposition

This text considers Christ as he gives another explanation of the nature of the Kingdom of God. The context of this parable finds Jesus giving instructions that true believers should show kindnesses to all and make room for even the poorest and the least expected. Since he was in the home of a Pharisee and knew full well that every word he spoke was being inspected, Jesus gave an illustration of the Kingdom that had both a primary and secondary meaning. He told of a certain man who had a great supper and invited many of the nobles and important people of the kingdom to share. However, each had excuses that ranged from business demands involving land purchases or newly purchased oxen, to a man who was a newly wed who wouldn't be available for a year. None of the invited came. The master then told his servant to go into the street and invite those who least expected an invitation: the blind,halt, maimed and the poor. The servant issued an invitation to all he saw and after all who were coming were in the hall, the servant reported that even though great numbers had responded to the call, "yet there is room." The master ordered them to go into the highways and byways and seek others until the banquet hall was filled, because there was plenty of room left for more.

Jesus' initial application of this parable was to the Jews themselves. His offer of the kingdom of heaven had been made first to the Jewish people, but they were rejecting him in every theological circle. As the "certain man" of the parable he offered Israel an exclusive claim to the kingdom but it refused. So the Gospel message was extended to include all races, creeds, nationalities and persuasions, because of Israel's rejection. The secondary application has to do with us today. It points out that many people have been offered the opportunity for salvation, but have rejected it. The gospel today has been offered to people all over the world. While millions have responded to its call, even 2000 years later, "yet there is room" for more.

Plenty of Room For Youth

A young lady was once asked, "Why don't you become a member of the church?" and she responded: "I have to wait until I get older and tomorrow becomes today." She said stopped attending church because she felt there was no place for her generation, because adults always sees her generations as seeds of the future rather than flowers about to bloom in the present.

Today's youth have often been erroneously referred to as the "church of tomorrow" and have generally been ignored as an important part of the church's program in congregations across America. The "church of tomorrow" label has usually meant that youth are generally shut out of the church's emphasis today as they wait "their turn" to come tomorrow. The level of importance we place on our youth sometimes leaves the impression that there is no room for them in the church of today.

Youth have an insatiable appetite for activity. In the social attitude adjusting years of their life they require frequent opportunities for Christian fellowship and fun. The frequent words they speak are "go","do" and "what's next?" What the church does not satisfy leaves a void that the world promises to satisfy all to quickly. Knowing this many church budgets and calendars still plan youth activities on an adult body clock-once per month or once a quarter or even less. The calendar is full of plans and programs important to adults that some youth get the impression that there is "no room" for them.

Youth who want to participate in the affairs of the church require extensive transportation. How many find that they can neither get to Sunday School, rehearsals or other fellowship opportunities because the church offers no transportation mechanism to get them there. Very few young people drive and among those that do, only a few have their own cars. When the church plans an activity without considering the transportation of its youth and others similarly situated, it suggests to them that there is "no room."

The truth of the matter is that there is plenty of room in the kingdom for all people who want to give God their best.

In Christ's parable, the servant reported that even though many had responded to the call to come to the master's banquet table, there was still plenty of room. That truth still rings true today: There is plenty of room for any and all who want to be fed at the table of the master and enjoy his fellowship.

You Must Have Room

The reason the servant had trouble getting people to come to the master's banquet wasn't because of a shortage of room, but it was because most of those he invited had no room for him.

Today, the question is not whether or not there is enough room in the kingdom for you, but whether or not you have room for Christ in your heart. The servant looked in the highways and byways trying to find any person of any age that would come to fellowship with the master, but found few who had room. Today there are still many who have no room.

Why is it that so many people have no room for Jesus? Maybe the 3 year old's answer to her mother can explain the reason. A mother was surprised when her three year old said to her: "I've got Jesus in my heart." The mother said it was good that she had Jesus in her heart. Then the child asked "Does daddy have Jesus in his heart?" and at hearing that he did she said "I thought so!" Then the little one came to her mother and looked into her face and said "I wish Jesus was in your heart too!" The mother was troubled. What had she done that would suggest to her daughter that she was not a Christian? “Why do you think Jesus isn’t in my heart?” Then her daughter shifted her eyes down to her mother’s abdomen, which had swelled in the eighth month of pregnancy and pointed a little finger and said: “Well, mommy, that baby’s getting so big, there’s no room for anyone else in there.”

We can’t make room for Jesus if our lives are already full with the world ...there’s no room for anyone else in there! Jesus says “Behold I stand at the door and knock.” He wants to come into your life if there is room! If you have room in your heart for the Son of God and decide to accept his invitation, you’ll find plenty of room at the cross.

I’m so glad that there is still room at the cross!

--Matthew was a hated tax collector but he found there was room at the Cross.

--Peter denied Christ three times, but he found that there was room at cross.

--The woman at the well lived sinfully but found there was room at the cross

--Saul persecuted the church with a passion, but he found there was room at the cross!

--A jailer tried to lock up the Saints of God, but he found there was room at the cross!

--A soldier who doubted Jesus and questioned his deity, found there was room at the cross.

There’s room at the cross for you! Though millions have come, there’s still room for one. Yes there’s room at the cross for you!

Weight Lifters

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 15, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "..Let us lay aside every wight, and the sin which so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." Hebrews 12:1b

Introduction

Have you ever been burdened by a heavy weight? The weight of daily burdens has sidelined many good people who found it increasingly difficult to live under the heavy frustrations of life. What do we do when the combined weight of our problems and cares seem to get us down? The best thing to do is to look for a weight lifter!

Consider the woman who was frustrated because she had no way to provide another meal for her children. In the middle of the night she prayed to God to lift this heavy weight from her shoulders. Just before daybreak she arose and read a passage from her bible. Quickly, she wrote down the words and as she wrote the words it seemed as if the weight of her burden shifted to that piece of paper. Later that morning she entered a grocery store and asked the owner for enough food to make a meal for her children. When he asked how much she could afford, she answered, "My husband was killed in an accident. Truthfully, I have nothing to offer but a little prayer." Although the man was unmoved at first, he thought of a clever response to the woman's simple request. "Write your prayer on a piece of paper and you can have its weight in groceries," he said sarcastically. To his surprise, she plucked a folded note out of her pocket and handed it to him saying, "I already did that during the night while I was watching over my sick baby." Without even reading it, he put it on one side of his old-fashioned scales. "We shall see how much food this is worth," he muttered. To his dismay nothing happened when he put a loaf of bread on the other side. He was even more upset when he added other items and it would not balance. When all of the items she needed to make several meals were finally placed on the scales, it balanced. The owner was puzzled at how such a small piece of paper could balance the combined weight of her groceries. He opened the paper and read the words she had written: "My God shall supply all your needs...Amen." That owner commented: "That was a mighty heavy prayer!"

If you are carrying a heavy load, give it to Jesus and he will make your load lighter. He said "My yoke is easy and my burdens are light" he will gladly help you carry your load! He is the world's best weight lifter!

Exposition

This text tracts Paul's letter of encouragement to the Hebrews. It follows on the heels of the entire 11th Chapter which encouraged them to have faith. There he detailed the examples of great faith that have been demonstrated by all of the great patriarchs of the Old Testament: Abraham, Joseph, Joshua, David, Gideon and Rahab. These were given as clear examples of how keeping the faith would eventually result in victory for the Saint. With the 11th Chapter as an introduction, Paul begins the 12th chapter by saying "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about so great a cloud of witnesses.." or put another way: "Since we have so many Old Testament Examples of God's mighty power to deliver despite adverse circumstances.." let us continue in the struggle to live the Christian life, patiently.

Paul suggested that as we strive to live the Christian life there are two things that we should lay aside: weights and sin, both of which easily come to any person who is trying to be a Christian. The Greek word for weight in this verse is ONKOS which means a bulk or mass that proves to be an encumbrance. In 2 Cor. 4:17 the word BAROS is used to explain that weights cause us to stand stronger. Talking to the Corinthians about the weights of afflictions verse 16-17 read: For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." If weights trouble us along the way, so will sin. Paul encourages every Saint to lay aside sins too, if they intend to successfully run the race of this life with patience.

The prime example for every Saint striving to lift and set aside every weight that comes before him is Jesus Christ himself, who is the author and finisher of our faith. Jesus, on earth as a man, had even greater weights and temptations than we, but yet endured and is now at the right hand of God in glory. With Jesus as our example, Paul declares, that we should proceed boldly after the prize that comes to the victors's of life's Christian race.

Lifting Weights

If we glean the truths of Paul's message to the Hebrews in this text, we come away with the feeling that every Christian should learn to lift and remove weights, or encumbrances that get in the way of a Christian life. Like it or not, every Christian must become a spiritual weight lifter. To get an idea of what we must do spiritually we only need to look at what Olympic Weight Lifters do to train and gain increased strength.

WEIGHT LIFTERS ARE DIET CONSCIOUS: They eat foods that build muscles and avoid those that contribute to fat. So it is with the Christian who is spiritual weight training. The foods of the soul are related to the study of the word of God and prayer. Prayer is the appetizer of the Christian diet. It creates a climate and hunger for more food, but it slows the consumption rate because you are partially full already. Bible Study and the Preached Word make up the main entre' of the Christian's spiritual diet. A little Gospel music, a few hymns, Christian dramas and other artistic expressions are a few of the deserts that help us take in ideas and truths that will help us build strength. Unfortunately, some Christians are becoming spiritual fast food junkies. Our bible study is limited to occasional scanning, we hear the preached word only occasionally and spiritual diet gets completely out of balance. To gain strength to lift weights when they come we must consume the truths of the faith that build strength.

WEIGHT LIFTERS START WITH THE LIGHTWEIGHTS FIRST. Olympic weight lifters have amazing strength, but none of them began by lifting huge weights first, they began by mastering small weights. They increase the weights they can lift as they master smaller ones. We are unable to handle major weights in life unless we have first learned to master small problems. Some heavy weights of life involve: Death, major sickness, extended illness of a love one, and failure in life, love or occupation. These are big league heavyweights. Success in handling smaller weights prepares us to deal with heavy weights. A person who has experienced the death of friend once is better equipped to handle it if it comes again. Those who have undergone surgery or mastered a family problem once are better prepared to handle them again should they occur. This gives a clear meaning to 2 Cor 4:17 "For our light affliction...worketh for us a far more exceeding weight of glory." These small weights that we have today prepare us for even greater weights should they come.

POWER LIFTERS CAN HANDLE TREMENDOUS WEIGHTS EASILY. Olympic Power lifters are able to lift tremendous weights in three different ways. Some use the dead lift in which the lifter picks up hundreds of pounds and snatches it above his head in one sweep. Such a lift takes tremendous power. Those who are strong in the Lord can do the same. No matter what comes their way they simply grab hold and lift it out of the way. Elijah was a master of the dead lift. He challenged the prophets of Baal head on at Mt. Carmel and rose the victor. The second measure of weight lifting ability comes in the bench press. It shows how much strength the lifter has when he is flat on his back because he must lift the weights to an arm's length while on his back. If dealing with problems and the weights of life is tough when you are on your feet, it is even tougher when you are on your back. How much can bench press? Hezekiah, flat on his back, faced death and bench pressed until he received 15 more years on his life. The third measure of the weight lifter is the Knee bend. When given his weights the lifter must bend his knee to a squat, get under his load and then rise. There are some problems in this life that will bring down the strongest of Christians, but the man or woman who is powered by the spirit of God only goes down as far as his knees.

Power From Bended Knees

Strange things start to happen when you get down on your knees.

--Samson in his blindness found renewed strength, when he got down on his knees.

--Daniel in the Lion Den found renewed courage when he got down on his knees.

--The Hebrew Boys found protection in the fiery furnace when they got down on their knees.

Prayer changes things!

Paul said when the weight of the world starts to get you down, Look to Jesus and follow his example!

With the weight of the world on his shoulders, Jesus went to the Garden and prayed to his father, saying "let this cup pass, but nevertheless not my will, but thy will be done."

Father, the sin of the world is a heavy load for one man to bear!

Father, the redemption of mankind is a heavy load for one man to bear!

Father, the burden of saving the lost is a heavy load for one man to bear, but I will lift that load until salvation's price is satisfied.

But I hear Jesus saying "And I, if I, be lifted up I will draw all me unto me!"

The buried him in a borrowed tomb, but Early Sunday morning he bench pressed the grave and the stone was rolled away! He rose and took death in his hand with dead lift and raise it for the world to see!

Oh Death, where is thy sting? Oh Grave Where is thy victory?

Are you struggling with a heavy load? Don't give up the faith but keep on struggling.

Remember no matter how strong the weight lifter, there is always a spotter standing right by him in case he falters under the Lord. Every child of God has the assurance that our heavenly father knows the load we are trying to carry and is right by our side.

No wonder the song writer declared:" Though the road gets heavy, you're never left alone to bear it all. Ask for strength and keep on toiling though the tear drops. You have the joy of this assurance. The heavenly father will always answer prayer and he knows.."

Yes, he knows!

Just how much you can bear!

Bethesda (House of Mercy)

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 8, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"Now there is at Jerusalem by the sheepmarket a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda, having five porches. In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water." John 5:2-3.

Introduction

Have you ever cried for mercy? That was the time you knew you deserved punishment but you appealed to a compassionate spirit. "Lord, Have Mercy" those are the words that every Saint has whispered at least once. They are words of indictment as well because they suggest that the person who speaks them knows they deserve a harsher penalty than they request.

This was perhaps the case of the three thieves who were brought before an infamous hanging judge. This judge was hated lawbreakers but was known on occasion to spare the lives of criminals who appealed to a certain weak spot in his hard nature.

The first thief, who was caught stealing a horse, notice that the judge was Black and he struggled to appeal to the judge's slave ancestry by crying out: Freedom! I stole the horse so I could ride to freedom for there is nothing so precious to a man as his freedom. The judge stared at him and remarked, "you sought freedom but you stole to get it and so now what freedom you had will be taken away" and he ordered the man hanged.

The second thief, who was caught robbing the bank, that foreclosed on his farm, noted the judge's humble beginnings and cried out: Justice! I stole the money from the bank to get justice. It was wrong for them to take a man's house and home in the name of profit. The judge peered at the man and remarked, "You may be right that the banks are wrong to take the properties of the poor but stealing from them in retaliation is not justice it is vengeance." The judge saying angrily,"Now justice demands that you be punished for your crime!" He ordered the man hanged.

The last one was a woman, who was caught stealing milk from a neighbor's cow. She didn't have a trick to try but just fell on her knees and cried out: Mercy! Your honor I stole the milk. My children were ill and I didn't have anything to feed them. I stole the milk from the cow so that they might have a chance to see another day. I was wrong and I know I may pay with my life. Please have mercy on me." The judge peered down at the woman whose tears streamed down her face and said: "You broke the law and stole from your neighbor. You had freedom and you abused it, but yet you don't seek justice?"

The woman looked up and responded: "No sir, I don't want justice. If I received justice I'd hang with the others. But when you decide my case, let your heart be your guide."

The judge found the woman guilty. But instead of hanging, he sentenced her to repay the price of the milk, and to never steal again! Her cry for mercy had saved her life!

When we are distressed and feeling low, let us turn to Jesus and bow humbly before him. When we say with a sincere heart "Lord, have mercy on me!" he will hear our prayer!

Exposition

This text considers Jesus as he heals a man on the Sabbath at Bethesda. According to the text many people lay ill in one of the five porches, or large empty rooms, that surrounded a pool of rising mineral water. According to Jewish tradition, this pool was known as Solomon's Pool in the Old Testament and received its waters from the Fountains of Shiloh, all of which was traced back to the Fountain of Miriam that was provided for Israel in the wilderness. Any pool or water supply that was fed from the Fountain of Miriam, even remotely, was thought to be a special pool with healing capacity.

On occasion the water in this pool would bubble and rise and it became known that those who desired healing could receive it if they moved quickly for length of the troubling of the waters was brief. The people in this text came to the pool waiting for its healing movement. The subject of this text had been waiting his opportunity for 38 years, but had been unable to get there before the time lapsed.

The focus of this text is on the place and the types of people who came to the place, rather than on the single man and his healing. This place became known as a place of healing and hope and it attracted people from all spheres of life.

It is called Bethesda, which means "house of mercy." The Hebrew prefix "beth" means "the house of." Jacob, after seeing the wonders of God in a vision of a great ladder extending to heaven, named the place of his vision "Bethel" which means the House of God. Jesus was born in the City of Beth-lehem, which means "House of Bread." That was fitting since the Christ child would become the bread of life, filling the empty souls of the lost. Since it was a source of healing and hope lame, halt, blind and deaf, this pool surrounded by its porches of waiting souls who often found help was called "Bethesda" for it was a place where God's mercy was shown in a great way.

The Weak Seek God's Mercy

Bethesda is clearly a symbol of the merciful nature of the God we serve. Many are drawn to him because he dispenses help and salvation with mercy and compassion.

Like the people of this text many are drawn to the Savior because it is known that when there is an outpouring of the Spirit of God, great things have happened. The church attracts many kinds of personalities, all of which desire to be present when there is a moving of the spirit in a mighty way.

The Impotent come to the house of mercy. Impotent, means without power. Many today come to Bethesda because they don't have the ability to accomplish their goals. They have the will but not the strength that goes along with the will. They have a plan that can work but they can't work the plan. Sometimes this lack of power is evidenced by apathy and a general lack of motivation. This is the feeling we get when we can't seem to get going. How can we receive power from God? Samson, lost his power and strength because of sin but he turned his dungeon into Bethesda a "house of God" as he pleaded for a renewal of his gift. David lost his moral force when he fell into sin with Bathsheba but he turned his prayer room into Bethesda, a house of God, and cried out to God for a clean heart and right spirit. The Apostles received power when the Holy Ghost was upon them. Those who come to God seeking power can find it, if they allow the Holy Spirit into their lives.

The Blind come to the house of mercy. At Bethesda the blindness suffered was physical. Today that blindness is not so much physical as it is psychological. There are some who want to see with spiritual eyes what they have not been able to see with their physical eyes. They want God to give them great insights into the meaning of life and its circumstances. Helen Keller, the great lady who was born deaf and blind but who became one of the world's greatest scholars, was asked how it felt to be blind her response was always "It is not so bad not to be able to see because you have no eyes. What is bad is to have eyes and still not be able to see." Many today have eyes, but still can't see! They see someone in need and instead of seeing an opportunity to serve, they see only the beggar who appears disgraceful. When they receive a reward, a raise or a bonus in life, they don't see a blessing that comes from God, they see only a necessary payment for their own hard work. They see, but they can't see. Saul had a sight problem too, until he came to a spot on the Damascus Road that could be called Bethesda and God gave him a new way of seeing things that changed his life forever. There are many who come to Bethesda seeing life one way, but when they have understood the Grace of God, leave singing "I once was lost but now I'm found, blind but now I see."

The halt and the withered come to the house of mercy! The halt at Bethesda were so called because they often had to stop walking because of lameness. The withered were those who simply deteriorating and literally drying up. Today the halt and the withered still come to the house of mercy. These are those who have come to abrupt stops in life, literal dead ends. Something has happened to cripple them financially, emotionally, or physically and they have halted all productive activity. Others have been inactive for so long that they are beginning to wither away. The lame man that Jesus healed was both halt and withered but at Bethesda he found what it took for him to get on his feet again and so can those who come to Bethesda today.

Waiting on the Lord

At Bethesda there was a multitude of people of all walks of life, but they all came for the same purpose, to wait "for the moving of the water." When the water moved it meant that God's angel was in the building and they had a chance to receive God's mercy.

This lame man received God's mercy when Jesus said take up thy bed and walk!

A blind man received God's mercy when Jesus made him whole again.

The woman at the well received God's mercy and she cried out "come see a man" who told me all I've ever done.

It's a good thing to receive the mercy of the Lord. God's mercy looks beyond our faults and sees our needs.

God's mercy turns our:

--Torments into triumphs;weakness into strengths

--Rags into robes; darkness into light

--Hurt into healing; Losses into victories

--Heartaches into Hallelujahs; Sins into fountains of forgiveness.

The mercy of the Lord was so great that he took an old rugged cross and carried it to Calvary and cried out "Father forgive them for they know not what they do.!"

I don't know about you but I'm glad the Lord had mercy on my soul!

Majoring In Minors

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 13, 1980

SCRIPTURE:"I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go: I will guide thee with mine eye. "Be ye not as the horse or as the mule, which have no understanding: whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle, lest they come near unto thee. Many sorrows shall be to the wicked: but he that trusteth in the Lord, mercy shall compass him about." Psalms 32:8-10.

Introduction

Have you ever plowed with a mule? It is an interesting experience to watch those who have done it for years work with horses and mules on the farm. Mules that have been around for a while seemed easy to work with, but those that were young had to be taught the way. The old farmer said: "You see, after the mule has been taught all I have to say is 'Haw' or 'Gee' and that mule with turn to the right or to the left. I don't even need the lines any more he just hear's my voice." So the old mules worked well moving at the commands of their owners. Giddi-up mule! Whoa Mule! Gee Mule! Haw Mule!

It wasn't so easy with the young mules. They had to be trained and working the field was a difficult task for them. A bit had to be placed in their mouths. To get them to go left or right the owner would have to pull the bit and say Haw or Gee at the same time until the mule began to understand. Sometimes the young mules were stubborn. They refused to move to the left or the right and owner had to pull at the bit to get them to move, instead of simply stating his desire.

The word of God in Psalms 32:8-10 notes that people who are taught and are willing to be instructed in the ways of the Lord find a happier experience. However, those who refuse to accept instruction are like those mules and horses that have to have bit and lines about them to get them to move at their owners command. David in giving this instruction said: "Be ye not as the horse or as the mule, which have no understanding: whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle.."

There are some people with Common sense, that leads them to make rational decisions. There are some who have "Horse sense" that has been learned in the school of hard knocks by bridle and bit. However, there are others who have spiritual sense, which has come from a serious study of God's word and leading a life of prayer. Spiritual sense, is knowing when to following the commands of God, without the need of a bit and bridle. Spiritual sense is knowing the will of God and following it on command.

If the mule can learn to respond to "Haw and Gee" then Christian Education can help us to know the will of God such that we can carry it out with all of our soul and being.

Exposition

This Psalms finds David giving instruction to the those who would follow about the wisdom of obeying God. David himself spoke from experience since he was a penitent and had been forgiven by God for a number of sins which included adultery. He notes with metaphoric words the same truths that God says to his people today: "I will instruct thee and teach thee in thy way. I will instruct thee in the way in which thou shalt go. I will guide thee with mine eye." It is a clear metaphor about the way that God teaches us today, by guiding us with his eye. According Matthew Henry: God teaches us by his word and guides us with his eye, by the secret intimations of his will in the hints and turns of Providence which he enable his people to understand and take direction from as a master makes a servant know his mind by a wink of his eye." From his ignorance and foolishness David learned the error of being as stubborn as a mule and he warns others to learn God's way such they follow him freely without requiring and bridle and bit to force to go in the right direction. The people, according to David, must be taught such that they can be better followers of Jesus Christ.

Universal Pursuit of Knowledge

Following the instructions of the Psalmist, believers around the world have delved into the pursuit of biblical knowledge in addition to secular knowledge. The pursuit of knowledge is universal. Many view it as the panacea for the world's problems. Those who have mastered it have revered in literature and the sciences. These include the great minds of Socrates, Aristotle, Plato, Confucius, Kent and Rousseau. Knowledge brings information to the mind. However, it does little to affect changes in the world without a regenerated heart. What should go along with knowledge is understanding and submission to the will of God. It is incumbent upon the church to transmit to its components the knowledge of God, coupled with understanding and the necessity for submission to the Will of God.

Focus of Christian Education

The primary focus of Christian Education should be to help believers know the will of God and to differentiate between the majors and the minors. The main focus of Christian Education is to teach Christians how to be Christ-like. Beyond that is a secondary focus which is leadership or membership training in the particulars of operating in the structure of an organized church.

Christian Education which focuses on the majors helps the believer know those things which are important to his salvation and those which are strictly ceremonial. This is important because many times believers spend a great deal of their time majoring in minors which have nothing all to do with our main goal as Christians.

Believers who seek to avoid the Christian Education process are like the mule of this text that cannot be made to go in the right direction with a bridle and bit. Those who attempt to live the Christian life without a knowledge of the word of God and the sustenance that is derived from it and empty. Those who try to go through life without ever attending Sunday School, bible class, or other study opportunities rob themselves of the opportunity to know and understand the word and will of God.

Leadership Training Gives Understanding

What is the purpose of leadership training? Is it just to clasp a tender sheepskin that will later be folded away or stuck against a wall? Is it vain and idle pursuit of a course card, gold seal or a certificate? No, it is more than that. Leadership training is the way we learn to apply the principles of Christian Education to the practical operation of the church in all of its various ministries. The cards, certificates and proofs of study are all superficial, but the important focus is on learning to apply Christian values as we function as Christian in God's Church. Through study, the pursuit of knowledge about the way of God, through discussion and the realization of the word of God we become trained Christian workers, more able to defend the faith as move in today's challenging times.

It is Difficult To Teach Yourself

Leadership training is necessary because it is difficult for an individual to teach himself. An Ethiopian Eunuch rode along his chariot reading the 53 chapter of Isaiah. He could read the words well but he did not know what they meant until he met Philip. After the word was explained to him and he obtained a full meaning of God's plan, the Eunuch wanted to be baptized. However, despite his learning he was not able to understand without someone to teach him.

Likewise, it is difficult for any Christian today to learn the word of God by being self taught. Just as it is difficult to hear the word of God declared without a preacher.

Focus on Ministries

Christian Education also teaches us to focus on the major areas of the church's responsibility instead of simply looking at the minor areas. What are the church's major ministry responsibilities. There are many ways to perceive them but generally the church ministries are defined as: Cultivating Worship, Promoting Christian Education, Equipping Others To Serve, Missions, Saving Souls, Christian Charity, Fellowship and Church Administration.

What Christian Education does is to sharpen our focus on the needs of these various ministries and wets our appetite to do more in each of these specific areas. The more we know, the more we do. The less we know, the less we do.

We Learn Humility

Without the need for a bridle, Leadership training teaches us to be good stewards of our time, talent and finances. In short, it teaches us to be humble. Those who have been trained understand their role and observe it parameters. Their testimony is the same the song writer that declared:"Thy way o Lord, not mine, thy will be done not mine. Since thou for me didst bleed, and now doth intercede. Each day I simply plead, thy will be done."

We must avoid the danger of majoring in minors.

Able majored in humility rather than the minor of pride.

Abraham majored in faith rather than the minor of doubt.

Moses majored in the pursuit of freedom rather than the minor of painless slavery

Joshua majored in forward progress and spent little time on the minor possibility that the walls of Jericho might not fall down.

Samson majored in strength until the sweet titillating voice of Delilah caused him to major in his minor weakness.

Nehemiah majored in determination instead of minoring in Despair.

Job majored in Longsuffering rather than the minor of rejecting God.

Jesus majored in self sacrifice rather than the minor of self engrandizement.

He majored in Calvary!

He majored in Salvation!

And Early Sunday morning he majored in Victory rather than defeat for he declare: "All power" is in my hands!

Anointed Lives

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 1, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water; and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him, and lo, a voice saying, this is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Matt. 3:16-17

Introduction

What do believe about your baptism? For many people baptism is simply a ceremony or meaningless ritual that is a requirement of church member ship. Others may not know what to believe.

Consider the old wineo that came to a country church revival. The preaching was good and the wineo was moved to go and sit in the chair and join the church. The church didn't want to pass up a chance to save this old wineo so they hurriedly prepared to baptize him. The deacons got their poking sticks and waded into the river and staked it off. They dressed him in white and moved out into the river. The old wineo was a little nervous because the water seemed high and he couldn't swim. After the singing and praying the preacher took the wineo under the water and brought him up quickly asking "Do you believe?" The wineo responded "No sir I don't". So they prayed and sang some more and the preacher took him down again but held him a bit longer. When he came up the preacher asked again: "Do you believe?" The wineo said "No, sir I don't! This time the church sang extra hard and the deacons prayed an exceptionally long prayer and the preacher took him down one last time. He held him so long that the wineo's arms began to flap and he began to struggle. Bubbles came up from the river! Finally he brought the wineo up and asked "Now, do you believe?" The wineo responded "Yes I believe. I believe you trying to drown me!"

There are many who don't know what to believe and they have adopted a childlike understanding of the entire process. That's what the children demonstrated one Sunday when they rushed home from a church baptism service to play church at home. One child played the preacher and tried to reenact the ceremony, saying: "I bapi-tize you in the name of the father, in the name of the Son, and 'In the hole you goes!"

As Christians, we understand that our Baptism is a symbol of the change in our lives. It tells the world that we have turned from our wicked ways and have accepted a new lifestyle and manner of living that is based on our faith in Jesus Christ. The water baptism is a symbol to world, but we pray constantly for the baptism of the Holy Ghost that will empower us and help us as we struggle to live for Christ from day to day. We know that there is no salvation in the water itself, but the real power is in the anointing of the Holy Spirit that comes for every true Christian as a gift from God.

Exposition

This text considers Jesus as he is Baptized in the River Jordan. John The Baptist preached in the wilderness of Judea urging Israel to repent from its sinful ways. His watch words are now known universally: "Repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Those who came to John for Baptism acknowledged their sins and expressed a desire to turn from them. Their baptism was a sign of their repentance. As Jesus began his public ministry he found John Baptizing in the wilderness and stepped forward to be baptized. John recognized him and was humbled by his presence. Those who stood in the baptismal line were confessed sinners, but Jesus knew no sin. He desired to be baptized so that he could begin his ministry properly. Another record of this event, John 1:29 finds John the Baptist saying: "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world." John felt unworthy to Baptize Jesus. He felt Jesus should be baptizing him instead.

John told those who heard him that he baptized men with water, but the Savior would go even further, he would give them the Baptism of the Holy Spirit. Never-the-less John Baptized Jesus in the Jordan. His procedure was simple, he went down into the water with the candidate and carried them under the water momentarily and then brought them "straightway out of the water" (v16). Following Jesus' water Baptism he was acknowledged and anointed by God and empowered to do some great things. The voice of God spoke as Jesus came out of the water say "This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased."

Empowered by the spirit of God, Jesus went into the wilderness to be tested, performed great miracles, went to Calvary for the sins of mankind, and was risen by the same Spirit to live eternally!

What's In The Water?

Many people today have the mistaken notion that there is great power in being baptized in the water. They feel that after being baptized in the water that they are empowered by God to become stronger Christians and to do mighty works. Moreover, there are others who believe that the act of being baptized itself saved them and guaranteed them a place in the kingdom of heaven. Both are mistaken notions that have led to confusion and misunderstanding.

Water baptism is a symbol of a repentant life. Baptism does not save, it is sign to the world of a saved life. Those who are baptized are not baptized such that they can be saved, but because they are already saved. The two key requirements for baptism are belief in the saving power of God through his Son Jesus and repentance of sin. Those who are baptized without both elements are simply dunked in the water. It is incorrect to suggest that they were baptized. The water in which they are baptized does not save them, because their faith and repentance saved them, long before they were baptized in the water. The water baptism is an outward sign of an inward change of life.

Water Baptism is not essential to salvation. It is possible, as the thief on the cross proved, to be saved without being baptized in the water. Water baptism does not save people, neither does it lead them to be saved. Paul, writing in 1 Corinthians 1:14-21 addressed this issue noting that while many look to their baptism as the saving power, it is the preaching of the Gospel moves men to salvation. Once a person hears the Gospel truth, repents and believes he can be saved without being baptized in water, but he will neither believe or repent unless the Gospel is preached. Romans 10:14 asks the question: "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" Clearly, water baptism is not essential to salvation, but the preaching of the Gospel is essential. All activity in a church should cease when the Gospel is preached. Money counters should stop counting, meetings should cease and all other activities should be halted when the Gospel is preached because we recognize it as the power of God unto salvation.

Those who have been baptized in water have stated their belief in God, their repentance from sin and their desire to live the Christian life. Having made that statement, they should expect nothing further from water baptism, because it is not a saving agent.

Baptism of the Spirit

More important than water baptism is baptism of the Holy Ghost or the baptism of the spirit. The baptism of the spirit is the empowering presence of God in your life. This baptism can come before or after your water baptism, there is no special time to receive the Baptism or the Holy Ghost. In Acts 10:44-48 Peter preached the Gospel to the Gentiles and they were baptized with the spirit first, and then they were baptized with water. However, the usual order is: water baptism and then the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

What is this Baptism of the Holy Ghost? What does it do? When we are baptized with the spirit we are given special spiritual power from God to do great works for the advancement of his kingdom. This special power does not come with water baptism as it is general thought, but it comes from the Baptism of the Holy Ghost. In 1 Corinthians 12:8-10 Paul lists the gifts that can be bestowed upon persons who are baptized in the Holy Ghost. These gifts include: Increased wisdom about life, knowledge of the Word of God and the world around you, intense faith, capacity and aptitude for healing, the capacity to do that which men think is impossible, to communicate with others (prophesy), an understanding of the nature of the human spirit, and the ability to understand and speak in the languages and tongues of diverse cultures.

Those who have been baptized with water should pray for the Baptism of the Holy Ghost. Water Baptism is great but the anointment of the Holy Spirit is even greater.

Powerful things start to happen when the Holy Ghost comes.

--PETER WAS IN JAIL, But when the Holy Ghost came jail doors swung open!

--JOHN WAS ON THE ISLE OF PATMOS, but when the Holy Ghost came, he saw great revelations of the kingdom of heaven

--SAUL WAS WALKING THE ROAD TO DAMASCUS, but when the Holy Ghost came, he walked a new walk and talked a new talk.

--THE APOSTLES WERE WAITING PATIENTLY, but when the Holy Ghost came, they went all over the world.

When the Holy Ghost comes the:

--TIMID become BOLD; and the PROUD become humble!

--ENEMIES become FRIENDS; and HOUSE WRECKERS become HOME BUILDERS!

--UNUSUALLY QUIET become UNUSUALLY NOISY

No wonder the song writer asks: "Spirit of the living God, fall fresh on me, Mold me, Make me, bend me, shape me, spirit of the living God, fall fresh on me!"

I don't know about you, but I'm glad that I've been baptized in the water, but I'm more than that I'm so glad that I've been baptized with the Holy Ghost.

Every now and then I can feel him moving in my hand! I can feel him moving in my feet!

When the Holy Ghost comes I've got to tell somebody about Jesus! Tell them how he died!

..Tell them how he rose from the dead!

I don't know about you but every now and then I can feel the Holy Ghost moving...

Moving!

Moving on the altar of my soul!

Can You Hear The Voice of the Blood?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

February 16, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"..The voice of thy brother's blood, crieth unto from the ground." Gen. 4:10b;"And he said unto them, this is my blood of the new Testament, which is shed for many." Mark 14:24;"And they cried with a loud voice, saying, how long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not jude and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?" Rev 6:10.

Introduction

What is the price that has been paid for liberty? Has it come as a cheap, clearance sale commodity, or has it been purchased with a high price? The freedoms that Americans enjoy generally, and Black People share specifically, were purchased by the blood of thousands who stood at the forefront of physical confrontation at the risk of the their lives and fortunes.

James Weldon Johnson's classic hymn that symbolizes our quest captures the enormity of the sacrifices of our forefathers in the second stanza of "Lift Every Voice and Sing" when he wrote: "We have come over a way that with tears has been watered. We have come, treading our path thro the blood of the slaughtered. Out from our gloomy past, till now we stand at last, where the white gleam of our bright star is cast." As Johnson's poem depicts, we have come to this point in the journey with the blood of our forefathers fresh on our shoes. Those who died for the cause are limitless: Nat Turner, Malcom X,Emmitt Till, Medgar Evers, Martin Luther King, are but a few of the African-Americans that gave their lives in the struggle, but they were not alone. Hundreds of abolitionists lost their lives in the fight against slavery, scores of white freedom riders were beaten, bombed and murdered as they came South to join in the struggle against segregation.

Their blood painted the pavements of the South like crimson colored mosaics. Even the simplest freedoms we enjoy today such as eating a hamburger at a public lunch counter, riding on the front of a bus, or reading a book from a public library, were not purchased without the blood and tears of many who fought in their own ways to make it happen. No wonder then that Johnson would write: "We have come treading our path through the blood of the slaughtered." What semblance of freedom we enjoy today has not come without the shedding of much blood for our benefit.

But there is a voice crying out to us today. It is the voice of the blood of our fathers.

The blood of the slaughtered cries out for a continued response from those who walk today's new paths. It is a voice that cries out for a thirst for justice and freedom from succeeding generations. It is the voice of those many races who sought equality and freedom for all, even at the expense of their own lives. This voice commands and demands that we do not walk forward without a sense of appreciation for the quest that paved the way.

As African American Christians, we are aware of the price paid for our liberties as Americans. We are equally aware of the power of the blood of Christ to bring all men to the truth and freedom that salvation brings. So we continue to promote the cause of Christ and to seek truth knowing that "the truth shall make you free."

Exposition

These three text verses consider individual instances of shed blood and a collective expectation of a response for that shed blood.

Cain and Abel both made approaches to God by making sacrificial offerings. Abel's offering was accepted, but Cain's was, for some reason, not acceptable. Cain rose up against his brother in vengeance and killed him. When God asked of Abel's whereabouts Cain asked a question that has been asked many times since: "Am I my brother's keeper?" God said that Abel's blood cried out from the ground for God to make a response. Abel's blood cried out for God to take action to avenge his death.

John looking into the future envisioned the saints waiting in glory, asking "How long?" before their deaths would be avenged and they would receive their reward. They, like Abel, were the innocents. They were the ones persecuted for righteous causes. They were the ones whose blood, sweat and tears, were given sacrificially to help achieve the kingdom's end.

In both instances the blood of the slain expected a response, the question was not will God respond, but "how long?"

The blood of the Slain

There have been many people who have given their lives for the struggle for freedom. Like Abel, they have been struck down unjustly, and their blood cries out for a response, not only from God but from succeeding generations.

What is the response of this generation when it hears the voice of the slain masses?

Thousands have died for the right to vote. Our history paints a gloomy picture of thousands of our fathers and grandfathers who were carried off into the middle of the night by hooded klansmen and hung from trees because they chose to demand the right to vote. Our homes were burned, husbands shot, and children maimed and tortured because of our quest to go to a ballot box and cast a vote as American citizens. But the blood of those slain for this precious right cries out from the ground! Was it shed in vain? Today, there are millions of the grandchildren of those who gave their lives for this right who think little of their forefathers sacrifice. Among this generation of the grandchildren of men and women who could not read and write but were motivated by an inner pride and dignity, are some who trample on the blood of their forefathers and for reasons of their own, will not register to vote. They give reasons such as: "My vote won't do any good. I don't have time. I haven't got around to it yet. But the blood of our ancestors cries out even to this generation asking "how long" will it be before this generation appreciates our sacrifice and responds accordingly.

If thousands of our people have died in the quest for the right to vote, then even more died to get the right to a sound education. Our history shows a picture of a people so hungry to learn that they would go to great extremes to learn to read and write. Booker T. Washington, in his autobiography told of his desire to learn to read after living as a slave and becoming free. He noted how he worked all day in a coal mine and then took his earnings and walked ten miles every night to a teacher he hired to teach him to read in write. Slaves who learned to read were tortured and even killed. Whites who taught slaves to read were scorned. We built our own schools and operated them in our churches. We paid for community schools out of our shares of the crops, and cried bitter tears when we saw them burned to the ground. The blood of those who died trying to acquire this precious privilege cries out from ground: How long? Was this blood shed in vain? Today there are millions who have little respect for the privilege of education. Today there is a generation that rides to school rather than walks, Writes on paper, rather than slates, eats hot breakfast and lunch rather than cold biscuits and syrup carried in crude buckets and has the finest of everything. Despite the opportunities available today there so many who trample on the blood of their mothers and grandparents who gave all they had to achieve but one goal, to see their children get an education. Today the student drop out rate is staggering. Many who remain learn more about violence and guns than they do about their studies. Yet the voice of those who work so hard in the past cries out: "how long" before this generation gets an appreciation for the educational process and responds to let us know that we did not die in vain?

The quest for freedom has had many who were willing to give up their lives in the endless battle against injustice. Some we read about in history books, but many are the silent heroes of each of our families: Fathers who gave up their lives defending the honor of the wives and children; grandparents who went barefooted to send their children off with a descent chance to live. But have all these sacrifices been in vain? Is there a sense of appreciation for their offerings to us, or do we simply trample upon them?

The Response Of The Blood

Abel's blood in Genesis is a testimony to the crimes of men. It testified to man's insensitivity and to man's inhumanity to man. It testified to an injustice given to a righteous man.

Naboth's blood cried out in a testimony against Queen Jezebel and Ahab as they killed him to seize his vineyard. Naboth's blood gave a testimony to God of how the righteous have been over powered by the strong and wronged.

Uriah's blood cried in a testimony against David, who put him in the front of the battle so that he could steal his wife. It testified to the treachery and deceit of mankind.

But there is another blood that cries out today. It is not the blood of Able, Naboth or Uriah, but yet it cries out with a testimony.

The voice I hear comes from the blood of the lamb!

The blood of the lamb gives us:

--Help when we are helpless; Inspiration when we are discouraged!

--Confidence when we are afraid; Guidance when we are lost

--Victory when we are defeated; Joy when we are sad!

No wonder the song writer declared: "I come to the garden along, while the dew is still on the roses, and I the voice I hear falling on my ear the son of God discloses. And he walks with me and he talks with me and he tells me I am his own. And the joy we share as we tarry there, none other has ever known."

Abel's blood cried out for vengeance, but I hear the voice of another blood, saying "forgive them for they know not what they do"

The blood of the lamb was shed for the remission of sin, it cries out even today with two watch words, "forgive them" and "go ye therefore."

This blood began to speak about 2000 years ago when Jesus went to Calvary!

It cried out then and it still speaks today "come unto me all ye that are labor and are heavy burdened and I will give you rest!

Strange Samaritans

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright,Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe,La.
February 9, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"And the king of Assyria brought men from Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from Ava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israel: and they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof.— 2 Ki 17:24

Introduction

Do you get the feeling that we have lost something as a people? Despite our advances and successes, there seems to be a void we have left unfilled. Though African-Americans today are more educated than our ancestors, we don't know as much about life as our great grandparents. Many of us have kitchens full of food, but we can't cook in our traditional way because the techniques are being lost to modern conveniences. We have money, but unlike our great grandparents who would save for years to own a piece of land, we spend ours as quick as we get it in our hands. We claim a national brotherhood, but yet we destroy each other with Black on Black crime and we murder each other daily.

With respect to our afro-centricity, or our focus on our African-American Heritage, we have lost much. We run the risk of becoming strangers to our own heritage and enemies to our own culture if we are not careful to keep it alive. When Carter G. Woodson started the idea of Negro History Week, it was promoted as a week of celebration and focus on our cultural accomplishments. It was a week when teachers and churches focused all of their year's teaching into a celebration of our greatness. It was not designed to be the only week of the year in which afro-centric expressions were made. Even in our celebration of Blackness we have lost something over the years.

Even when it comes to our relationship with God it seems we have lost something. We sing with power and volume, but we rarely sing from depth of the soul. We pray, but the greatness of our education, has sterilized our prayers to the point that we no longer pray with our mind on God, but on the selection of our words and the proper use of the rules of speech. We go to church, but we don't go to participate in the worship, we now go to observe from a distance. We have bibles, but instead of being tattered and torn from constant use, they are seldom carried, read or studied despite the increase in our education. When it comes to our relationship with God there are many signs that suggest we have lost something.

As African-American Christians, there is one common strand among us that still unites us in the faith, it is our belief in Jesus Christ. We should never lose that relationship. While we change and the world changes, our Lord does not change. He is the same today, yesterday and forever more, let us continue to celebrate his mighty works in all we say and do.

Exposition

This text introduces the historic developments that led to the cultural miscegenation of the Samaritans. The Jewish kingdom was generally thought of in three sections: Galilee, Samaria and Judea. The Judeans were received better than all three. People from Galilee were not frowned upon but neither were they respected for great potential. The Samaritans were considered the trash of the race. The rest of Israel had little to do with Samaritans and all went out of their way to avoid contact with them.

Though of the same race, the Samaritans were culturally diluted. They looked like Jews and had Jewish ancestry, but very rarely did they act like Jews. They were rejected completely because of their difference. This text marks the beginning of their hatred for Samaritans because Samaritans were not always hated among Jews. Once Samaria was the capital of the Northern kingdom. It was the political and religious center of the North as Jerusalem was the center of the Southern Kingdom. The Samaritans were strong, God fearing people, who strayed on occasion, but were never-the-less proud of their ancestry and heritage.

When the Northern Kingdom was defeated by the Armies of Assyria the victors carried their conquests back to Assyria as slaves. Others were shipped to other cities. Wherever they were moved, the Samaritans maintained a stubborn pride and rose up in rebellion. To eliminate any possibility of further rebellion the Assyrians began an elaborate plan to rob the Samaritans of their culture and religion. The Assyrian plan, generally referred to as cultural miscegenation: sent in people from Babylon, Cuthah, Hamath and other cities to live in Samaria as colonist. They brought with them the Samaritan gods and customs and their purpose was to control the conquered people by permanently changing their view about the enemy, while secretly keeping their own culture untouched. The end product of this invasion of the Samaritan culture is called "Cutheans" in the Hebrew manuscripts. In the New Testament they are called Samaritans.

It was an elaborate plan which resulted in the enemy working side by side with the conquered in an arrangement that appeared friendly and congenial. Their ungodly practices were slowly worked into social fabric of the people of Samaria. Whenever it appeared that they were being rejected they sent for captured priests to come and teach them the Samarian customs and traditions so they could learn the proper approaches to win them.

Cultural miscegenation worked for the Assyrians. It isolated the people of Samaria from other Jews and cut them off from their god. It worked so well that when Assyria was later conquered by Alexander the great that he sent in Greek transplants and mixed in Greek mythology and beliefs. Now the people of Samaria were part Jew, part Assyrian and part Greek in their culture. Making matters worse the Romans repeated the same practice. The Samaritans lost every semblance of their culture, religion, and national pride. They worshipped god when it was convenient. They became tolerant of deviant lifestyles and as a result were hated by all Jews. They were strangers among their own people. Their alienation reached the point that one of the best ways to insult a person in New Testament times was to call him a Samaritan. They were strangers in their own land.

A Strange Generation

As African-Americans we should constantly beware of attempts by those outside of our culture to rob us of those things which make us who we are. Some among us have already forgotten their roots and behave strangely.

Cultural miscegenation has always been a tactic of conquering people. This is the process where our enemies approach us as friends, convince us to shun our heritage and to revel in the culture of our oppressors. The Babylonians tried this approach with the three Hebrew boys. They brought them to Babylon, taught them Babylonian manners and even tried to change their taste for food to Babylonian cuisines. They resisted and were eventually thrown into fiery furnace because they would not go along. They were able to survive because they knew who they were and refused to allow their cultural integrity to be infiltrated.

To survive, the culture of our people must be promoted and taught regularly. The school system should promote multi-cultural activities on a regular basis. We should learn an appreciation for the major cultures of our community as a part of the planned school activities and curriculum. Churches should promote cultural awareness through programs, music, drama, and instruction on a year round basis, not just during Black History month. The ranks of our community must ban together and promote our culture throughout the year and not simply one month when white America says its O.K. to sing “Lift Every Voice and Sing” at an assembly program, or to promote programs of Black awareness.

Ideally, what we should seek to achieve in America is not a melting pot, where all cultures blend together, lose their hue and become a pale shade of white, but a salad where every culture brings its own unique flavor and attributes to the blend and making a pleasing entre. When standardized tests reflect elements of intelligence respected by one culture over another it implies that the cultures not included are not important. It suggest that the only way to survive is to abandon the least important and learn the dominant culture of the land.

Once a people loses its cultural identity, it loses its will to fight. When we lose our own culture we take on the culture of the oppressor. We identify with the enemy, but the enemy doesn’t identify with us. Our oppressors have mastered the art of, as Malcom X called it, “shooting us with sugar coated bullets.” When we get so mixed up that we think the enemies are really our friends, we lose the will to resist and to struggle. Frederick Douglass’ words still ring true to day as they did over 100 years ago “Where there is no struggle, there is no progress”

Samaritans Meet Jesus

In New Testament history, Jesus was a great equalizer. He never saw a man or woman as a Samaritan or a Gentile, because he knew that it was the system of evil that made them what they were. When Jesus encountered Samaritans he shocked everyone by treating them as brothers and sisters.

Ten men who were filled with leprosy were healed by the master, only one of them returned to say thanks to man from Galilee. He was a Samaritan.

Of the three travelers who passed an injured man on the Jericho road, only one stopped to help, he was a Samaritan.

When Jesus met the Samaritan woman at the well, and gave her a chance for new life she ran every where shouting "come see a man!"

As a people we are losing much of our rich heritage. Much of our rich past is drifting from us, but we should never turn loose our love for God. In Jesus, there are no Galileans or Samaritans, no whites or Blacks. In Jesus, all men are brothers under the fatherhood of God.

I don't know about you but I have concluded it has been the goodness of God that has brought us this far and his goodness will see us through.

The last stanza of our national anthem should be our creed: "God of our weary years, God of our silent tears, thou who hast brought us thus far along the way. Though who has by the might, led us into the light, keep us forever in the paths we pray. Lest our feet, stray from the places our God where we met thee. Lest our hearts, drunk with the wine of the world we forget thee. Shadowed beneath thy hand, may we forever stand, true to our God, true to our native land."

It's So Hard To Say Good-Bye

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 3, 1992

SCRIPTURE:"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith"; "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing. 2 Tim 4:7-8; "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you." 1 Cor 16:23

Introduction

How do you say good-bye? As simple as it is, "Good-bye" is a hard word to say, when it marks the parting of loved ones, friends and close associates. Every nationality has its own peculiar way of saying it: "Bon-voy-age" might the word the French would use, while "A-ree-va-der-chi" may be the Italian response. "Gooten-Tach" might by the German way and "A-di-os" may be the Spanish response. All people have their way of saying good-bye, and depending on the circumstance "good-bye" means different things to different people. A woman searched for a get-well card for a friend who was ill. She looked under the section labeled Get-Well and picked a cute card with "Snoopy" on the front and rushed to purchase and sign it without taking time to read its message. When the friend received the card she was shocked at the message which read "Sorry to see you go, good-bye from all of us!" Embarrassed, the woman later found out that the card had been misplaced and was actually a card for a person retiring. It was a clear case of a misplaced "good-bye."

The word good-bye has its roots in biblical history. Among other variations, it is also a shortened version of the common New Testament closings of the Epistles of Paul which asks that the Grace of God "be with you." "God be with you" soon came to be "good-bye" in the common usage. There was nothing solemn about the saying it, it was an expression of good will. Upon leaving, one friend said to another-"God be with you." So in his Epistles to the Corinthians, Romans, Philippians and others Paul traditionally closed with his trademark expression "the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen."

As Christians, we are able to handle benedictions and good-byes with the same grace that we handle salutations. When the moment of parting comes we can still find the strength to say "God be with you" to those that we leave behind. Though the tears roll from our eyes, we know that the God we serve is wise and understanding. Therefore, even in our sorrow we are able to ask for his peace and grace upon those left behind.

Let us praise God for his abundant mercy and blessings for it is his grace that has allowed us to make it thus far. In moments of sorrow let's ask him for strength, for even the saved soon discover that "it's so hard to say good-bye."

Exposition

This text considers the Apostle Paul as he sits in a Roman prison writing a final letter to a young minister Timothy. He had written many letters in the course of his life but this was sure to be his final communication with the Saints because his execution date had been set. After living a full life, on both sides of the cross, Paul reflects on his life with no regrets and puts things in order. He gives Timothy a list of instructions, advice, and warnings that he is asked to remember. Moreover, Timothy is charged not to worry but to carry out the mission set before him.

As for his own life Paul concluded: "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course." In these short verses we see the picture of a man who is satisfied with himself and content to accept the realities of death and the glories of life to come.

This text is Paul's final good-bye. He had made other farewells on other occasions, but this was his final benediction. But even with death in sight Paul somehow did not find it hard to say good-bye because he was moving on to receive his "crown of righteousness" that has been prepared for all the Saints. At the close of his final letter to Timothy he left is signature closing "Grace be with you. Amen." His encouragement to the young Timothy was "God be with you, Amen." Amen, means so be it. It is an acceptance of the will of God. Paul suggested to Timothy that he go forward with his life, overshadowed by the grace of God. After writing his last lines and preparing his letter for delivery, he waited his appointed hour.

Having Things In Order

Paul's departure from life is marked by many salient features. One of those outstanding points is that he was able to make such a grand fare-well to his friends because he had things in order. What does a man have to do to have his life in order with God? First, at some point he must have had a personal encounter with God himself and made a decision to turn from his wicked ways. For Paul, it was a moment on the Damascus Road when he met the Lord in a blaze of a sunlight that changed his life forever. Every person should have a similar experience, or special moment when he decided to give his life to Christ. That would be the moment that he decided give up the world and walk a different path. The personal encounter with God is different and is rarely the same for every person. Some share a Damascus Road trauma where they met the Lord suddenly. Some grew to know him out of tragedy. Some learned of him while they were children. Regardless of how one achieves the encounter with God, it is essential if one expects to get his house in order with God. When Paul met the Lord he acknowledged him, asked for forgiveness and then gave the Lord his commitment to carry out his will. Once that commitment was made the scales fell from his eyes and he was given a new vision and a new purpose in life.

To have one's life in order is to have an assurance about things to come. Paul could write and talk confidently about his departure because he was sure that when this life ended that he would leave and go to a better place. In his final letter to the Corinthians (5:1) Paul wrote: "For we know that if our earthy houses of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Likewise it is easy for a person to say goodbye if he is confident about his destination and is sure that he has left things in order for those whom he leaves behind.

When a man prepares to leave this world, he can say good-bye with ease if he is sure of his own salvation, has arranged his own affairs, and is confident and comfortable with his destination. The unsaved have difficulty at death because their entire life has been committed to this earth and the things they possess. Their treasure is on this earth and they don't want to turn loose. They find it hard to say good-bye because they have given their entire lives to preparing to live on earth, giving no time or thought to their final destination. When that moment approaches they are neither willing or ready to say good-bye. The sinner finds it hard to say good-bye because sin has:

--Polluted his mind
--Disturbed his peace
--Hardened his heart
--Weakened his faith
--Damaged his character

It is hard to say good-bye if our affairs are not in order, but it's easy if they are fixed and ready.

Until We Meet Again

Pastor Jeremiah Rankin, was pastor of the First Congregational Church of Washington D.C. in 1882. He was preparing a study on these words Paul wrote so often: "grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with you" and understood this to suggest that God would be with those who have departed. Pastor Rankin, a noted hymn writer, thought of the hope of every Christian for life to come and wrote these words: "God be with you till we meet again. By his counsels guide, uphold you, with his sheep securely fold you. God be with you till we meet again. Till we meet, till meet. Till we meet at Jesus feet. God be with you till we meet again." What his song said epitomizes the survivors hope. It is what we look forward to and it helps us to bear the burden of the loss of a loved one. Though we hear the words of our loved one's final instructions and words ringing in our ear; though we hear his final prayer for our safety and happiness; though we hear his final good-bye; we also hear the voice of the angels declaring: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." (1Thes. 4:16-17).

When the Christian says good-bye, he says God Be with you, till we meet again! I am leaving this place, going to a better home. God be with you, until we meet again! I have my life in order and I'm waiting on my appointed hour. God be with you, until we meet again!

Till we meet on the other side of Jordan..
Till we meet in the city that is bordered by 12 gates.
Till we meet in the city that has streets of Gold
Till we meet in the city that sits on 12 foundations
God be with you, till we meet again!

A short while ago Robert Carter saw his appointed time coming. He set his house in order, and gave his wife his final advice and a good-bye. On January 29, 1992 he closed his eyes for the last time. God be with you, till we meet again!

2 legit 2 Quit

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 27, 1992

Scripture:"We are pressed on every side by trouble, but not crushed and broken. We are perplexed because we don't know why things happen as they do, but don't give up and quit. We are hunted down, but God never abandons us. We get knocked down, but we get up again and keep going. 2 Cor 4:8-9 (LB)

Introduction

The popular rap singer MC Hammer and James Brown recently combined their talents to produce a popular song entitled "2 Legit 2 Quit" in which Hammer raps about his decision to continue in his profession despite his critics and detractors. Brown, who plays an Oz like character, challenges Hammer to live up to the challenges of the world, rise above his critics and "bring back the glove." Mixed between the driving pulse of Hammer's music style, daring special effects, laser lights, aerobic style dance steps, and sweat is a subtle and powerful message to young people. Unlike the messages of Smut rappers like Two Live Crew, this message, when repeated by youth gives them some positive "self talk" when seen in a Christian perspective.

What is the message? It is that "I'm too legit to quit." While many young people sing the words to the song as they ride the bus to school or as they chill out at home, some are not aware of the deeper implications of that short message "I'm too legit to quit." "Legit" is an abbreviated version of the word legitimate. Legitimate means a legal or rightful claim. It is best understood in contrast: Millie Vanilli had risen to the top of their profession as great singers and were awarded Grammy for their music until it was revealed that they were fakes. They had a Grammy but no rightful claim and were stripped of their fame and award. Those who have a legitimate claim are those who have a right to possession by virtue of circumstances prompted by inheritance or hard work.

Christian youth are often the subject of jokes, abuse and ostracism in school. Some young people are discouraged at the difficulty of living the Christian life on campus because it often puts them at odds with the crowd, which appears to have more fun. Frustrations come like a flood, while encouragements are few. Despite these difficulties, Christian youth should say to themselves "I will not give up the faith." Why? Because they have a rightful claim on the kingdom of God, which is their goal.

When the world gets its tentacles into youthful enthusiasm, the best response is "I won't turn back" because "I'm too legit to quit."

Exposition

This text finds Paul writing to the Corinthians examining the nature of the Christian ministry. He writes words of encouragement to them, addressing those who might have been considering the difficulty of the Christian life-style and its seemingly impossible task. He stressed that the Christian life is an honest ministry which every Christian has received out of the mercy of God (v1). In verse two he lists some acts of Christians who have: 1)Renounced hidden things. Christians have ceased dark and secret activities which they once did in the dark and tried to hide from public view. These might have included immoral or illegal activities that punctuated their life-style before they met the Lord. 2)Not Walking in Craftiness. Seeking ways to cheat and deceive others was once the life-style of many Christians before they learned a better way. 3).Not handling the Word of God deceitfully. Some sought to twist the truths of the bible to fit their ungodly activities to no avail. 4)Living By Truth. Christians have decided to base their lives on the truths of God and be guided by conscience in every deliberation.

In short, Paul tells the Corinthians that the Christian life is right, and necessary. He establishes the legitimacy of our ministry and message in verses 3-6, pointing out that we are witnesses of Jesus to a world that is blinded by a preoccupation with its own self perpetuation.

Because of our legitimate role as witnesses for Christ and the reward we expect to receive in the end, Paul reminds every Christian that though we are troubled on every side, perplexed, persecuted, and knocked down, we should never quit, because we are ambassadors of the King of Kings. We are troubled, but not distressed, perplexed but not in despair, persecuted but not forsaken, cast down but not destroyed. We arise from every circumstance with new determination to go on, because, in the common terms we are "too legit to quit."

Don't Give Up

Today there are millions of young people who are under estimating the value of their talents and gifts and are willing to abandon them when faced with pressure from their peers. These gifts represent their legitimate claim to success in life yet others criticize them unfairly. Honor students have a hard time in school. Other students, often jealous of them talk them down and suggest that they are nerds because they excel scholastically. Honor students have a legitimate claim to whatever rewards they receive and should not be intimidated by the sneers and jeers of those who could do the same but lack the initiative and discipline to achieve success. Youth who choose a moderate life-style are also given a hard time by their peers. Those who don't drink, smoke, party hard, engage in sex, or take drugs are often frowned upon by the infamous “in crowd.” They stare at them as if they were freaks and snicker behind their backs. However, Christian youth who choose a life of moderation should be commended for not selling themselves cheap simply to win the praise of the masses. Because Christ died for our sins and Christian youth have accepted him as their savior they have a legitimate reason to expect a reward from God for their life choice. It is too legitimate a claim to give up in frustration.

Giving up a legitimate claim can be costly. Consider Jacob and Esau who were twin brothers. Esau, the oldest brother had a legitimate claim, by birthright, to the estate of his father and to the promised blessing for the family through his grandfather Abraham. He was a skilled archer and hunter by trade and usually brought home plenty of venison for the supper table. Once, however, he was not successful and in hunger and frustration sold his birthright and inheritance privilege to his brother Jacob for a bowl of porridge. In one failed swoop he gave up his rightful claim to the family and his future for a plate of food that could only satisfy him for a few hours. He was legit, but he quit. Because of his decision, the blessing that should have been his was transferred to his brother Jacob. The great generations which are remembered today as the legacy of “Abraham, Isaac and Jacob” could have been “Abraham, Isaac and Esau” except that Esau quit.

Those who have begun to live the Christian life should become even more determined not to quit. Why? Because winners don’t quit, and quitters never win! Success, both spiritually and secularly, comes in “cans”: “I CAN” be an honor student! I CAN become a successful athlete! I CAN achieve my dream! I CAN be a Christian! If success comes in cans then failure comes in “Cants”. I can’t succeed, I can’t achieve, I can’t be an honor student, I can’t be a Christian. Negative self talk develops a negative self image that leads to failure and defeat. The best strategy for success in any sphere of life is to study the things that failures don’t like to do and then make a habit of doing them yourself. For example, spiritual failures don’t like to read the bible so they quit. They don’t like attending worship services, so they quit. They don’t like to pray, so they quit. Whatever a failure doesn’t like to do is the key to your success, if you make it your habit.

As a Christian, success is your birthright! As a member of the family of God you have a legitimate reason to expect the best out of life. Jesus told his disciples in John 10:10 “I am come that they may have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.” In Matthew 7:7 he says: “Ask and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.” In Philippians 4:19 Paul declares: “But my God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.” As a Christian youth, you have a legitimate claim to expect to succeed in life because you are backed by the powers of heaven as long as you trust in God and give God your best.

No wonder the song writer declares: “Give of your best to the master, give of the strength of your youth, clad in salvation’s full armor, join in the battle for truth.”

Too Legit To Quit

There is a good reason not to quit. John told the seven churches of Asia minor

"he that overcometh shall inherit all things."

If we overcome our fears and doubts we shall receive a blessing from the Lord that can:

--Build hope out of the rubbles of hopelessness

--Reduce mountains of discouragement into molehills

--Reshape tragedy into triumph

--Regenerate troubled souls

The Christian youth who stands at the cross roads should renew his commitment to God by affirming that "That I've decided to follow Jesus, no turning back, no turning."

In closing, I'm reminded of the teacher who gave the final exam to three of her students. She told them not to be intimidated by the 100 questions on the test but to do their best. "Whatever you do, don't quit" she told them and the outcome would be better than they expected. The first student saw the difficulty of the first page and quit and failed. The second breezed through the first page but did not know a single answer on the second page. Realizing that missing 33 answers meant failure the student stopped and turned in his paper. The last student struggled through each page, frustrated but determined to finish. He remembered that the teacher said the outcome would be better than expected. On the last page, item #100 contained these words:"The race is not given to the swift, nor to the strong, but to those who can endure to the end. This test was not about knowledge but about determination. Give yourself an A because you did not quit."

I don't know about you but I've decided not to quit!

I'm determined to live for Jesus. Through hard trials, tribulations, persecutions, I am determined to live for Jesus!

I going to live for him because he died for me. One evening he carried a cross up Calvary's hill and refused to quit until my salvation was secured.

Somebody said "come down" but he was too legit to quit until he finished the work and early Sunday morning he rose from the grave!

I've decided to follow Jesus, no turning back!

No Turning Back!

Living On The Right Side of Jordan

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 12, 1992

SCRIPTURE: "For we will not inherit with them on yonder side Jordan, or forward; because our inheritance is fallen to us on this side Jordan eastward." — Num 32:19

Introduction

Have ever had an opportunity to make a needed improvement and failed to make it because you were satisfied with your present situation? There are some people who find it extremely difficult to let go of old practices even if their quality of life depended upon the decision.

Consider the three drunk fishermen who fished all day in a rickety boat. When the boat sprung a leak they tried their best to bail out the water. The more they bailed the faster the water filled the boat. Finally one drunk man said "Somebody better pray because none of us can swim." Two of the men looked at each other strangely. Neither of them knew how to pray. Since they had never been to a church and knew nothing about God, they appointed the third man to pray because he was once a church member. "I stopped going to church because I love to drink and party and I have no intentions of quitting." The third man said. "That's fine" they answered "but right now we are drowning and you are the only one who knows how to pray." "But its been 15 years since I've been to church or even said a prayer" he said trying to get out of his task. His friends were unrelenting. They demanded that he pray, so finally the drunk backslider stood and offered this prayer: "Lord, its been 15 years since I bothered you the last time, but if you get us out of this mess, I promise you I won't bother you for another 15 years!" Some people find it hard to turn loose, even if turning loose could mean a better life.

Although a new year has begun there are many people who have brought their old natures over into the new year. They have a special liking for their peculiar habits and despite the promises of the abundant life that the Godly life offers they have chosen to hold on where they are rather than let go.

As Christians, we take every opportunity to rid ourselves of things that will burden us down. While the new year is a unique opportunity for resolutions to surface we are constantly reminded that this world is not our home. We are on our way to Canaan land and nothing we have is worth giving up our chance to make it to heaven one day. Life on this side of Jordan is great, but we do whatever is necessary to make sure that we don't lose our stake on the "right side of Jordan."

Exposition

This text considers Israel a while before crossing the Jordan river to claim the promised land. Reports had been received of the beauty of the promised land and all of the opportunities that it offered. Each tribe numbered and armed its men of war to join the armies of Israel as they prepared to march and claim the future that had been promised to them by God.

As Moses prepared the people for what lay ahead, the leaders of three of the tribes: Rueben, Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh approached him to say that they did not want to go to the promised land. They had come to enjoy life where they were. They explained that there was land enough for them to graze their cattle and for them grow food on this side of Jordan. They notified Moses that they would not go. Moses found himself in a predicament and after they reasoned about the impact that this decision would have on the others, they concluded that the three tribes would bear the expense of battle, fight and otherwise do their part to help the nation win its inheritance, but even in victory they still wanted no part of the promised land. They insisted on territorioal grants on the "wrong side of Jordan."

Moses granted their request with regret. He had regret because he knew that the land they were choosing for an inheritance had not been promised by God. It was not a part of the blessing promised to Abraham and though they enjoyed it, it was not their destiny. The promise was made and Moses saw to it that Joshua understood the promise. When Israel crossed into Canaan the three tribes sent its soldiers to fight, but when the fighting was over they refused to claim an inheritance in the promised land and insisted that Joshua honor the word of Moses. Joshua allowed them to live on the other side of Jordan, which they did for many years.

On the other side of Jordan they soon ran into problems. They found themselves constantly at war as they tried to secure the area. The lands they were able to secure were not enough for all of them. They returned to Joshua and asked for more land, but were told to return to what they claimed and be happy with what they had. When the enemies of Israel began to pounce upon the nation, the tribes of Rueben, Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh that lived on the "wrong side of Jordan" were the first to be destroyed by the Assyrians and taken into captivity.

They rejected the land of promise and lost all claim to that which they had. Though Israel also experienced considerable problems in the years to come they always had a home to return to because they staked their claim on the "right side of Jordan."

Staking A Claim

Many today have staked a claim on one side of Jordan or the other. Some have considered the rewards that this world offers and have decided to stake their claim in this world. All of their energy, resources, and talents have been committed to prospecting for the rich life in this world.

Two prospectors panned for gold in California during the 1849 gold rush. One staked a claim in a pretty valley with plenty of running water. The other staked his claim in an adjacent hillside. After a short while the valley prospector realized that the gold vein he sought was in his partner's claim so he plotted to cheat him out of it. Each night he went into his own claim and spread nuggets of fool's gold all around. The next day he allowed his partner to see him as he discovered "gold" and attempted to hide it. He did this daily until he caught the eye of his partner who became jealous because he had not found a single nugget. The partner came to supper one day and made him a great proposal:"I hate to see you struggling so hard, why not sell me your claim and I'll sell you mine?" The valley prospector attempted to resist then said "Alright, you sold me, but don't come back later hankering to switch." The valley prospector had to work hard to find the vein in the hillside, but he found it and struck gold. His poor partner came up with handsful of dirt and a few nuggets of fool's gold, because he staked the wrong claim.

Abraham and Lot experienced a similar situation. As the two of them parted companies Abraham told Lot to choose a direction and he would go the other. Lot chose the beautiful cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. They were well watered, secure and well constructed. There was considerable sin in them but it did not matter. Abraham took the hillside. In a short while God came and destroyed the wickedness of the Sodom and Lot lost all his personal goods. He staked his claim in the wrong place.

On which side of Jordan are you staking your claim? Have you decided like the Reubenites, Gadites and Manessah: "I'll come to church occasionally. I'll even pay some money now and then to help you, but I like it in the world and I'll stake my claim there?" The three tribes were allowed to do as they wished and they prospered a bit, but they never achieved what the other tribes achieved. While Israel enjoyed nation building, peace and prosperity for hundreds of years, these three tribes were struggling on the other side of Jordan. They had a bit of success but not like those who staked a claim on the right side of Jordan.

There is a danger in staking our claims on the wrong side of Jordan. Lives built on the wrong side of Jordan, eventually become:

--Victims of their own circumstances and Products of their own problems.
--Casualties of their own choosing and Servants of their own shame
--Fugitives of their own fears and prisoners of their own passions
--Creations of their own corruption and a mess made out of their own mistakes.

Right Side of Jordan

If there is danger in building on the wrong side of Jordan, there is security when you stake your claim on the right side of Jordan.

If there is despair for those on the wrong side of Jordan, there is hope for those who stake their claims on the right side of Jordan.

The right side of Jordan represents the promised inheritance to every child of God.

The right side of Jordan represents the place and the reward promised to us by Jesus himself.

On the right side of Jordan there is:

--Wisdom to solve our problems; Assurance to calm our nerves

--Joy to relieve our sadness; Hope to dispel our despair.

On the right side of Jordan mountains will be made low and valleys will be exalted, crooked places will be made straight and the glory of the Lord will be revealed.

On the right side of Jordan the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest.

No wonder the song writer declared: "I'm on my way to Canaan land"

I don't know about you but I've decided to stake my claim on the right side of Jordan because over yonder, bye and bye, crying days will be over!

I heard the song writer declare: "On Jordan's stormy banks I stand and cast a wishful eye to Canaan's fair and happy land, where my possessions lie. O who will go with me? I am bound for the promised land!"

It's alright down here but "I have heard of a land on a far away strand its the beautiful home of the soul. Built by Jesus on high, there we never shall die. Tis a land where we never grow old!"

Ye Have Not Passed This Way Before

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 5, 1991

Scripture:"Yet there shall be a space between you and it, about two thousand cubits by measure: come not near unto it, that ye may know the way by which ye must go: for ye have not passed this way heretofore." — Josh 3:4

Introduction

Roy Rogers and Dale Evans became famous as a television cowboy and cowgirl. At the end of each show the duo would ride off into the sunset singing "Happy Trails to you until we meet again!" The next week they were on television again on another trail that always ended happy.

Each new year places us on a new trail. In the year before we left a trail that others will follow. Whatever we did or said left a clearly marked path of deeds and misdeeds that will be recited, rehearsed and studied by others curious about the path we walked. Such trails cannot be hidden. Where we have trod, the lives we have touched and the way we touched them cannot be relived, retouched or repeated. Last year's trail, with its strange twists of successes and failures, glories and embarrassments has been permanently recorded in the annals of history.

Today we stand on new ground. There is no trail for us to follow because no one has passed this way before. At the beginning of each new year we become trailblazers, going into new frontiers where no man has been. We don't know what lies beyond the next horizon. If asked to go back, we know that trail well, because we have walked that path before. However, faced with the prospect of the future many are uneasy. News reports of job layoffs, and expected difficulties give reason for apprehension. The prospect of clearing a path and making a trail through hostile territory is often unsettling. Breaking new ground on this frontier will be challenging but it will not be impossible.

Our hope is that the new trail we blaze this year will be a "happy trail" filled with victory, joy and happiness. We have been given the right to expect the victory by our Lord who has given us the victory. We expect joy because we know that all things will work to the good of them that love the Lord according to his purpose. Regardless to what we encounter along the way we will count it all joy.

As Christians we have a right to expect "happy trails" this year. We serve a God who helped us blaze unknown trails in year's past and he is the same today as he was yesterday. As long as God is still on the throne we should not worry about the future or what it will bring because is still in control.

Happy Trails!

Exposition

This text considers Israel as it prepared to enter the land of Canaan. It had wandered in the wilderness for 40 years and was ready to claim the land God promised to Abraham in Genesis 12. It's journey had been long and hard. It's path was filled with triumphs and failures: The Red Sea, Quail meat in the Wilderness, Bread from Heaven, and its many faith lapses of faith. All these combined to make this final step a historic one because God was about to act for this generation as he had for generations past.

Joshua told Israel how it was to be done. The Ark of the Covenant was to go just over a half mile in front of the people and then they were to follow. It was a different command because the Ark was always in the center of the people as they camped or moved, it was never in front. Since Egypt, there was always the Pillar of Cloud by Day and the Pillar of Fire by night. It led them in the right direction and at times protected them against the advance of enemies. That was the way God symbolized his presence with past generations, but God had a new way of symbolizing his presence for this new generation of people. The pillar of fire and cloud would no longer be present. They would be going into a different situation but God would still be with them as in the past, through the medium of the Ark of the Covenant.

It was a point of uncertainty for them because their old leader was dead and generally they had a new leadership commanding them. Only two men from the generation of their fathers were with them, Joshua and Caleb. Despite their insecurities they were told how to get over Jordan: "Keep your eyes on the Ark." The Ark, for the most part, was simply viewed as an instrument of worship and sacrifice. It marked the spot where God resided among them as they worshipped, but was rarely revered for symbolizing the power of God himself. However, without the cloud and the fire, Israel was challenged to reach within itself and find the presence of God and bring it to the forefront. In telling Israel to follow the Ark, Joshua was telling them to follow the Lord. They were urged to follow the ark because they had never traveled that way before and only the guiding had of God's presence could insure that they would make it safely through.

Traveling New Paths

Many people are creatures of habit and travel the same ground routinely. Some travel at the slow pace of a millhorse, going around in circles slowly, while others travel at the speed of the race horse on the track, but never-the-less traveling the same ground, just faster. A new year for such individuals comes as just another page torn from the calendar, crumbled away and tossed into the basins of time. Since they plan to do the same this year as they did last year with little change, the New Year is a pleasant novelty that brings inspiration but little impetus for apprehension, since they have few plans of changing their course.

There are others who are taking a new path in life altogether and are uncertain about the future. Some young couples are making important decisions about life, career and family. Those leaving school are preparing for a totally different experience. Those who are just entering are dealing with the butterflies in their soul as they face the unknown. Some are traveling this new path alone and have not fully adjusted to their new walk.

While the path for some may not change, they share the same dilemma as those facing a new direction. The path itself may not change but what lies around the corner makes even the well traveled path, an unknown path because we face unseen dangers. Unseen dangers make all of us cautious about the future. Even if you walk the same path it's the prospect of trouble or failure that makes even the beaten path a trail which has never been blazed before. The traveler on the Jericho road knew the road well, but he never knew when a highwayman would attack and make him a charity case for the Good Samaritan. Likewise we don't know what the future holds for us although we may follow our same routine faithfully. We may begin this journey and stumble along the way, or find new strength and climb even higher.

Every day of our lives is actually the first day of a new year, because it is the first day of the rest of our life. Each day God protects us from and through the unseen dangers on our path. If we could have seen the unseen dangers that God has protected us from, just today, we could better understand the nature of our Journey because then we would know the many ways that God has already made our journey safer because we are under his protective care.

Reach From Within

What was Israel's prescription for anxiety about traveling a new path? They were told to reach within themselves, find the presence of God, put him in front and follow him! All through its wanderings, Israel kept the Ark of the Covenant in the center of the people. Now it was challenged to reach within itself and put God in front and follow him.

The command to Israel is our command today. Reach within and find the God you have respected, and loved, and go one step further: put him in front and follow him! Many of us know the Lord and keep him in our lives. We try to be faithful and religious because we can feel the presence of God in our soul and he tugs at us regularly. We pray to him at night, meal times and other times of the day. We sing about him and discuss him in Sunday School. The Song writer adequately describes our feeling when he wrote: "Jesus, you are the center of my life." We know him and all that's good and perfect comes from him. However, as we face a path we have not traveled before, we are challenged to keep the Lord in our lives but to move him from being the object of our respect to the person we will follow into untraveled territories.

The coming year will demand that we put Jesus first, because he alone knows the way!

Put Jesus first, because he can guide us safely through.

We don't know what Jordan's we'll have to cross, but we do know that we have an ark, which is Jesus, who can lead us through.

I'm reminded of the story of some travelers who followed a trail to a town high in the swiss mountains. They were warned that sudden snows could wipe out the trail and they might get lost. The guide told the travelers not to worry but to keep looking for the cross! Soon a storm came and the paths were covered. The people panicked because the covered trails and because their guide was walking in the horizon looking for a cross. They felt doomed. As they all gave up hope the guide returned shouting: "Follow the cross, follow the cross." He pointed to a giant lighted cross high on a hill in the horizon. It had been erected by the townspeople to guide travelers lost in the storm.

The storms of life might cover your path, but keep your eye on the cross!

Ye have not passed this way before, so keep your eye on the cross. I heard the song writer declare: "Follow Jesus, take no chance in getting lost ...if Jesus can't take you to the top nobody can!"

Another song writer put it this way: "Where he leads me I will follow. I will follow, follow, fallow him!"

Follow Jesus: the truth that never lies; friend that never forsakes, fountain that never runs dry, the way that never deceives, and anchor that never fails!

I don't know how long twill be nor what the future holds for me, but this I know, if Jesus leads me, I shall get home someday!

What Doth The Lord Require?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 21, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"..What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God? Micah 6:8

Introduction

A young boy asked his grandfather: "Grandpa, how will I know I am a man?" The grandfather showed the boy a chest filled with gold. The old man said "You will be a man my son, when you have passed the tests of the box of gold. You will pass the first test when you know the value of the box." The boy only saw shiny coins but did not understand their value. As years passed he came to his grandfather and said: "I understand that these gold coins represent the important issues of life. They are precious to all that possess them." The grandfather nodded his head and smiled. The young man who was now in his teens asked: "Am I a man now grandfather?" The old man responded: "You must grow strong enough to carry the box before you can become a man." Although the boy was in his early teens he was still quite thin and he labored every day to become strong enough to pick up the box and carry it from place to place. After a great while the young man burst into his grandfather's room carrying the heavy gold filled chest on his shoulders and said "Look grandfather, I can carry the box from room to room and across the yard." The grandfather sat in his chair, his breath was short and sensed that his time was near. "Carrying the responsibilities of life is one trait of a strong man my son. You have done a good thing." The young man who had grown tall and muscular realized that his grandfather was dying and he asked: "Am I a man now grandfather?" The old man responded: "It takes wisdom to understand the chest. It takes strength of character to carry the chest. However, it takes humility to carry the chest and not let the chest carry you. You will be a man when you know when you know the necessity of carrying the chest and when to put it down. You will be a man when you know when to say yes and when to say no, when to hold on and when to let go." With that the old man closed his eyes and went to glory.

With tears rolling from his eyes the boy looked at his grandfather who have never traveled far or attained many worldly accomplishments and responded "My grandfather, was a great man!"

Among the measures of the Christian life are our capacity for love and mercy, justice and humility before God. While many spend their entire lives trying to discover the meaning of life or struggling to shoulder their load, there are others who have discovered the joy of life, lived it fully and then graciously and humbly put it down with gratitude to God for the privilege of the experience.

Many great Christians may never see their names illuminated in lights or recorded in the annals of history. Their deeds may never be sung in ballads or form the substance of legends, yet their greatness is recognized in heaven for every true Saint knows that greatness before is measured by what God requires. What God requires is that we do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly before God.

Exposition

The text considers the prophet Micah who spoke to Israel about the three essential elements needed for the nation to meet the approval of God. Micah prophesied while three kings were on the throne: Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah. Of the three, Ahaz was a wicked king, which gave Micah the opportunity to experience life under a good king, watch its fall from goodness and see how it returned to goodness under Hezekiah. In the midst of its wickedness and apostasy Micah made the declaration that has become known as a standard by which the righteous are judged. With wickedness all around, Micah raised the question: "What doth the Lord require?" He answered it by noting that God requires from his people that they do justly, love mercy and walk humbly before God. These three elements comprise the measure of the godly man.

To "do justly" means to do those things which "right" requires. According to Micah, God requires that his people strive to do the right thing in matters pertaining to family, business and inter-personal relations. For Israel these were principles that were becoming old fashioned as the nation abandoned its allegiance to God and adopted a "succeed at any cost" philosophy of life. Doing right was equated with doing the necessary, so the scales were weighted, the people cheated and the poor oppressed. Yet Micah came calling for men of conscience to adopt a godly lifestyle that would encourage them to "do the right thing."

If "do justly" means to do those things which right requires, then to "love mercy" a man must do those things which "love requires." The laws of Micah's time permitted certain injustices. It was legal to take the land of widows, or to leave children homeless and orphans. It was legal to suppress the oppressed and to subjugate the weak. It was right, by legal standards, but Micah called upon the people to do what love requires, show mercy and compassion to the poor, hungry and to all who stand in the need of help. His call was for the people to rise above the legalisms that perpetuated poverty and despair and respond to a higher law that came from God. This law was the law of love that is dipped in mercy and compassion.

Micah's final call was that the men and women of Israel and Judah would return to a spirit of humility that they showed under King Jotham. His advice to them was to keep God foremost in their lives and humble themselves before his will and they will receive his blessings daily. His challenge was for every father to lead his family back to a humble walk before God. It was for every husband to lead his wife in walking the godly path. It was the final measure of righteousness that would decide whether the people would succeed in regaining the grace and protection of God.

The Qualities of the Righteous

In retrospect, what are the qualities of a righteous man? How do we assess the life of an individual whose experiences reach deeper than we understand and farther than we can imagine? As mere mortals, we do not know. However, we do know what God requires of any man. As New Testament Christians we also know the requirements of salvation. We know the answer to the question: "What must I do to be saved?" When we look at what God expects of the lost to be saved, and of the saved to receive his favor we can only conclude that God requires that we: Accept Christ in the pardoning of our sins, be fair in dealings with our fellowman, respond to the needs of others with love, and always bow humbly before the will of God.

The epitaph of the Christian husband and father is that he dedicated his life to meeting God's requirements. His life story will speak of the moment that he himself met the Lord and gave his life to Christ in the pardoning. Reflections upon his life will suggest that he tried to be just and fair in his dealings with others and taught that principle to his daughter and grandchildren. His words will ring in their ears, "do right", obey the law, stay out of trouble, be honest and don't steal from or cheat any man. His epitaph will tell how he gave of himself to help others, even when he himself had little. Compassion and mercy were hallmarks of his life.

The godly father and husband's epitaph will also record his willingness to worship, praise and obey God. The godly father knows that he cannot carry the responsibilities of this life with just his intellect, wit and knowledge. The godly father knows that he cannot shoulder the awesome responsibilities of life, complete with its heavy loads, deep valleys and tall mountains, by his physical strength alone. The godly father knows that life's journey must be a walk with God and he tries to teach that, by example to his wife, child and grandchildren.

Before his wife he stands as a loving husband, provider and friend. Before his daughter and grandchildren he stands as a shining example of what it means to be a Christian. It is more than simply knowing what's in life's chest, or being strong enough to pick up a few duties and carry them out, but it is also knowing that regardless of his strength, or knowledge and wits he cannot carry the load by himself! The godly man knows that even if her lips never speak the words, that the eyes of his daughter study him to learn what it takes to stand on the gospel truth. Her heart seeks to glean from his life experience what it takes to be a woman of the word in these troubling times. His grandsons watch him in strength and in weakness, in life and even at the point of death and they ask "Grandfather, what does it take to be a man?"

The message that every godly man seeks to leave to those who mourn him is: Live justly, love mercy but most of all "Walk with the Lord." Through trials and troubles, mountains and valleys keep your hand in God's hands.

If we walk with the Lord he will give us:

—Glory instead of gloom and Strength instead of weakness!

—Joy instead of sadness and hope instead of despair!

—Lighter burdens, because he declared "my yoke is easy and my burdens are light!

—Comfort in the face of death, for I heard John declare "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes!"

—Control of our fears, for David declared "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear, the Lord is the strength of my life, whom shall I fear?"

I heard the song writer declare: "Walk with me Lord, Walk with, while I'm on the tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus to walk with me. You walked with my husband, my father, grandfather ...now walk with me! While I'm on this tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus to walk with me!

Wednesday December 11, 1991, Amour Beavers went home to be with God. He understood the nature of life, picked up his chest of responsibilities and carried it with pride. He knew when to say yes and when to say no, when to hold on ..and when to let go!

Born to Die-Died To Rise

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 15, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." Luke 2:11;"..The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men and be crucified, and the third day rise again." Luke 24:7

Introduction

Have you ever asked yourself the question: "Why am I here?" At some point each person wants to know the reason for their existence and some spend lifetimes trying to find an answer. Sometimes we might feel like the two fryers on the chicken farm that pondered the same question. "What are we doing here?" asked one young fat fryer. The other one just stared and looked as he cackled on. "We get up every day, they feed us, clean our coop and we roost at night. We do the same thing repeatedly day after day. Why are we here?" The other one never said anything, he just listened and occasionally looked down the road. "We get the best of everything, food, shelter. Why? We don't lay eggs, and they won't even put us on the ground to scratch worms. There has to be some reason for our existence!" he complained. The other fryer kept watching the driveway, but never said a word. "Life has to be more than just sitting around all day and getting fat, why are we here?" The young fryer asked. As he spoke a giant truck turned into the driveway loaded with hundreds of empty crates. On the side of the truck were the words "Church's Fried Chicken." The young fryer's beak dropped in shock. The silent fryer finally looked at the speechless young fryer and asked "Does that answer your question?"

Everyone has a purpose in life although it might not be completely clear to us at the moment. Each of us has a manifest destiny, or divine purpose for which we were place on this earth. This was explained by Jesus when Scribes and Pharisees asked him about a blind man who was blind from birth. Was he blind because of his parents sin or his own? Jesus answered them by noting that the man was born blind for one purpose, that he might be standing in a certain spot on a certain day in his life to provide an opportunity for Christ to glorify God by healing him and giving him back his sight. That was the whole purpose of his blindness and the purpose of his life to accomplish that one single objective. Likewise, each child is born with a purpose in life. Often it is not clear for many years as the grand scheme of heaven unfolds, but God has a reason for everything that happens to every person on this earth.

As Christians we realize that God had a purpose in mind when Christ was born.

This little child was born to die, but not just to die, but also he was born to rise again. This great purpose would provide salvation for the lost and an opportunity for believers to enter into the kingdom of heaven. What a blessing it is to be a recipient of this great blessing that we celebrate on Christmas day!

Exposition

This text, in two short verses, summarizes the entire story of the life of Christ, encompassing his birth, life's purpose, death and resurrection in just 42 words. It begins with an angel announcing his birth in Luke 2:11 and ends with an Angel announcing his resurrection in Luke 24. There has never been any doubt in scripture why Jesus was born. It has never been hidden and the reason was told by Isaiah hundreds of years before his birth and foretold by Angels months before his birth, even to the day he was born. Jesus had one purpose for coming to this earth and that was to save men from their sins and give them a chance to enjoy eternal life. His mission is explained in the familiar words of John 3:16 "For God so loved the world that he gave his only Begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." His purpose was to provide the opportunity for eternal life for all men. His birth in Bethlehem was a means to achieve that end.

Even more insight into the reason for Christ's coming is found in Galatians 4:4-7. Galatians records that Christ came "made of a woman" and under the law of Moses that he might save us from the penalties of the law and give us a chance to rejoin the family of God as adopted Sons and Daughters. The law of Moses set the penalty clear: "The wages of sin is death." The conclusions were simple: break the law and suffer the ultimate penalty, death. Men who broke the law were out of communion with God, for the Mosaic law came from God. Lawbreakers had no way of returning to God's good graces. Jesus came to give us a way back. Instead of simply the "wages of sin is death" Romans 6:23 gives us "..but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

How can we return to the family of God? Through spiritual adoption. We rejoin the family of God when we accept Christ and commit to live by his principles daily. As adopted sons and daughters we enjoy 1)Unobstructed access to God or the ability to come "boldly to the throne of Grace" Hebrews 4:16. 2) Being the objects of God's divine care and protection. We are able to say the "Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want" Psalms 23:1 or "..my God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" Phil 4:19. 3)Chastening of the Lord's guiding hand because we know "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth" Hebrew 12:6. As his adopted sons and daughters God punishes us and brings us into repentance by his ordering of circumstances and events that effect us. 4)A Glorious Inheritance as his adopted children because we know that "he that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." Rev. 21:7.

The purpose of Christ's coming was to provide this chance for spiritual adoption for us. To accomplish this end he had to pay the penalty for sin that the law of Moses required which was death. That is why our text verse in Luke 24:7 says "The son of man MUST be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again." Christ was born to die, but he died to rise again to give us hope of renewed life in the kingdom. His life on earth had great purpose. Today his life offers even greater hope to those who live according to his purpose for their lives.

Lives With A Purpose

What is your life's purpose? Have you ever thought about it? Is it to make money? Build a fine home? Become successful? Generally a person's life purpose consists of the main reason he thinks God has placed him on this earth. It's easier to discover the life purposes of others than in ourselves. Martin Luther King's life purpose was to champion the cause of the downtrodden and to quicken the day of their liberation. Marian Anderson had one talent that she felt was a gift from God and she used it to benefit her race. Jesse Jackson seems to have one purpose and that is to lift the aspirations and expectations of African Americans to achieve their highest potential in life. It is easy to see the purposes for the lives of others, but what about me? What is my purpose in life? Jesus was born to die, and died to rise again! That was his purpose, but what about me?

Every person should have a "mission statement" which summarizes why you think God put you here and the mission you feel obligated to accomplish before you leave this earth. You may not know your mission but God has often ordained you and equipped you with the tools for your mission before you were born. Jeremiah complained that he could not be a prophet and God reminded him that "before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee.." Jeremiah 1:5. It is certain that God has never given anyone a mission to be a drug dealer, thief, crook, alcoholic, adulter or some other deviant life type. If your mission is from God it will have reedeming characteristics that will uplift, build and strengthen life in one or more persons. Often the Saint finds himself agreeing with the Song Writer who pleads "Make me a blessing, make me blessing. Out of my life let Jesus Shine. Make me a blessing oh Lord I pray, Make me a blessing to someone today." Another song writer put it this way: "If I can help somebody as I pass along ...if I can cheer somebody with a word or song then my living will not be in vain."

A Child With A Mission

There have been many babes born with great missions as their purpose, but there has never been a child like Jesus who was born to die and died to rise again!

Jacob and Esau were twins, both became fathers of great nations. Esau headed deviant tribes and Jacobs 12 twelve sons became known as the children of Israel, they were born with a mission but their mission was small when we think about Jesus!

Moses was born in slavery but rose to become a prince of Egypt, and a deliverer of his people. His name is repeated throughout history as a man whose mission it was to redeem his people. His mission is small when we think about Jesus!

John the Baptist was born with a mission to be one crying out in the wilderness, repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. His mission was small when we think about Jesus!

Down in Bethlehem a little child is born with a mission. His mission was to Bring:

--Hope to disillusioned and Salvation to the Lost

--Life and provide it more abundantly

--Peace on earth and goodwill toward men

--Comfort in the midst of calamities & Strength in weakness

--Assurance in the midst of agonies & Power in the midst of problems

--Safety in times of trouble and Shelter in time of storm!

Down in Bethlehem a child was born, his name was Jesus!

Go tell it on the mountains, over the hills and every where that Jesus was born in Bethlehem, but that's not all, tell them that he died on Calvary.

Tell them that Early Sunday morning he rose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Christmas Lights

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 8, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"He was not that light, but was sent to bear witness of that light. That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John 1:8-9.

Introduction

What is Christmas without lights? One unique feature of the Christmas season is the presence of beautiful lights everywhere. On city streets, Parkways, boulevards, and front lawns there is an abundance of lights at Christmas time. Some homes are trimmed with bright colored lights, and the skylines of many cities reflect a Christmas spirit as giant skyscrapers light up to send a Christmas message of cheer to those who view it from airplanes above. Some go to great extremes when they light up at Christmas. Al Copelin, the New Orleans owner of Popeyes's Chicken, creates a great stir in his neighborhood every year when he puts on a lighting display that consists of millions of lighted ornaments and decorations that draw tourists and visitors from all across the country. Copelin had so many lights and so many visitors that his neighbors went to court to try to stop him from lighting up at Christmas time. Truly Christmas lights are an important part of the celebration. Without its brightly colored lights, some people believe Christmas wouldn't be Christmas.

The Christmas season points to the birth of Christ who is the "light of the World." While there are many decorative lights in our homes and neighborhoods, the real light of the Christmas season is Jesus. While we anxiously set up hundreds of lights around our homes and businesses to light up the season, we should remember that the real Christmas lights don't hang on a string of wire and are not powered by electricity. The real Christmas Lights are the lives of men and women everywhere that radiate the love and joy of Jesus to men and women everywhere.

What is Christmas without lights? As Christians we know the answer to that question. Jesus is the light of the world, and without him there isn't any reason for the season. As each of us lets the light of God's love shine in our heart, we light up the season. Without the love of God shining everywhere, Christmas would be a dark and dreary occasion filled with doom and gloom rather than joy and hope. Let us keep our lights shining this Christmas, not so much on the tree or around our homes, but in our lives.

Exposition

This text focuses on the historical setting and condition of the world at the time Christ was born. John, described it as a world of darkness, so dark when Jesus the light of the world came that it comprehended him not. To describe the times as darkness was not an overstatement. The Romans domaninated the world. However, with all of their learning they had over 300 gods in the city of Rome, one of which was the Emperor himself. The Greeks speculated in religion so much that they became convicted with their own ignorance about God. In Athens they erected a statue with the inscription, "To the unkown god" noting that their wisdom and philosophy had burned itself out. The Jewish religion had become a dry and empty ceremony that was filled with pomp but offered no hope to those who looked to heaven for an answer. Truly it was a period of darkness. It was during this period that Christ, the true light, came to shed light upon the confused state of the world. In his coming however, so many were not able comprehend or understand the meaning of his presence. "The light shineth in the darkness, but the darkness comprehended it not." He came to bring a message of hope to those who were struggling in the despair of darkness, but those who were in the dark, could not see him.

Christ's function was universal yet personal. He would provide light for the darkness of the world by causing every man who receives him to light up and bring light into an otherwise dark world. John in verse 9 says Jesus was the "true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." As each man or woman who is touched by the master lights up, he becomes a microcosm of the light of Christ. He lights up the world through the faith and action of his believers and followers in every generation.

Lighting Up The World

In the context of the Christmas season, each Christian should be a Christmas light. President George Bush talks about a spirit of volunteerism that exists among Americans. He refers to each person who displays the spirit of charity and concern for humanity as one of a "thousand points of light" that shine across the country. If Christmas is dark and drear around the world its because there are no Christmas lights. Not those that twinkle around our homes or wink at us from Christmas trees, but those that live out the creed of Christ daily.

In 1966 Ron Kerenga challenged African-Americans to light up the seven principles of a great people and let them live in our lives daily. He called the celebration Kwanzaa, which is a seven day Black Heritage celebration which focuses on our decision as a people to light up our conciousness and appreciation of our heritage and destiny. During Kwanzaa, each Black family meets daily for seven days and lights a candle to discuss the seven ways in which we, as a people, can light up the world.

1) Unity. The first candle is unity. As Black Americans we can bring no light to the world without a unified spirit. Unity is the sense that what happens to a Black man in Chicago happens to me. What happens to a Black woman in Soweto South Africa also happens to me. We must shine a light of unity for all the world to see. 2) Self Determination is the ability to decide your own course without the manipulations of others. We deserve the right to chooose our own leaders, decide our own educational curriculums, set our own cultural standards. 3)Collective Work and Responsibility. We must emphasize to each succeeding generation the importance of industry and work. Whether a man or woman is a stock broker in New York or a ditch digger in Mississippi there is value in work. Concerning industry we should also emphasize the importance of responsibility for our actions and resist the temptation to blame our failures on others. Responsibility means taking the credit and the blame for our successes and failures. 4)Cooperative Economics, the idea of supporting our own economically, is an essential point of light in the Black community. If we are to survive as a community we must develop a consciousness that seeks to work with others of our own culture. The modern extension of that idea also hinges on the idea of reciprocity, getting something back from those who we support economically who are not a part of our community. Unless we as Black Americans continously nurture this flame, it will be blown out with the first gust of mesegenated wind. 5)Purpose. Our motivation for the struggle should always contain an element of unselfish comittment to the "movement" or our cultural purpose. That is important today, since so many are directing themselves toward an upward social climb without ever once raising the question whether they will be useful to the movement toward liberation of our people or whether they will assume the role of oppressor with a Black face. Our cultural purpose should be in the subconscious of this generation as it was the goal of every person in the past generation to be a "credit to his race." 6)Creativity flows from the soul of African Americans. It is a light that should never go out. The expression of our soul in art, music, dance, theater reflects our rich heritage. It is a source of light for this world and we should resist all attempts to abandon our creative expression for the empty shells that have become the tombs of other cultures.

Light of Faith

The final light that every Black American must ignite is the light of faith.

No people have been able to endure and survive the hardships of our people on their own power. The only way we have been able to survive is by faith. Faith is a great light that we bring to this world that is covered with darkness and disbelief. Faith is that glimmer of light that speaks to the world and says there is still hope.

Faith in the power of God has helped us:

—Move the unmovable and Endure the unendurable

—Love the unlovable and Forgive the unforgiveable

Faith has:

—Delivered us in times of difficulties and disasters

—Strengthened us in times of trials and temptations

—Sustained us in times of sickness and suffering

—Kept us in times of poverty and persecution
—Led us in times of darkness and despair

What is Christmas without the true light? What is Christmas without Christ?

Jesus said "Ye are the light of the World" a city that cannot be hid. He is expecting every child of God to brighten up your corner of the world. "Let your light so shine that men might see your good works and glorify the father which is in heaven."

I don't know about you but I've decided to be A Christmas light and a New Year's Light and an every day light for the Lord. The Song writer declared: "This little light of mine, I'm going to let it shine. ..Everywhere I go, I'm going to let it shine"

Let it shine!
Let it shine!
Let it shine!

How Much Do I Owe Him?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 7, 1976

SCRIPTURE:"So he called every one of his lord's debtor's unto him, and said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my Lord?" Luke 16:5

Introduction

Can we ever repay God for all of his kindnesses to us? What's his charge? The story is told of the little boy who was always angry because his mother kept giving him a list of chores to perform. He felt it placed too many demands on his time and therefore should be paid for what he did. So the little boy left his mother a bill on the kitchen table that read: "Johnny's Bill: Emptying the trash, $1.00; Sweeping the Floor, $1.00; Making my bed, $1.00; Washing Dishes $2.00; Dusting, $1.00. Total you owe me $6.00" It was signed Johnny. The mother came home and read the note on the table and sat down and cried. After a few moments she pulled herself together and decided to write her son a bill. With tears dropping from her eyes she wrote: "Mother's Loving Bill: For carrying you in my womb nine months, no charge; For tucking you in at night, no charge; For holding your hand when you fail and cheering you on when you succeed, no charge; For all the little things that I do for you that you never see, no charge. For loving you with all my heart, no charge!" She signed your loving mother.

God loves us more than a father or mother loves their children. In fact, John 3:16 says "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." In return for that great sacrifice, God has no charge for his goodness or for the expressions of love he has shown us over the years. Salvation is free, but as Christians we always remember that we are bought with a price, and therefore we are in constant gratitude to God for all his blessing.

How much do we owe God? The question itself implies that there is a point in which we repay him and be completely free of any obligation to him forever. Better stated, the question would ask:"In what ways can I show gratitude to God?" We show gratitude to God by obedience to his word and loving a fellowman. That's the best way.

As Christians, we know we are indebted to our Lord for our salvation. It is a debt we can never repay. But we can give him the best of time, talent and resources and return for his list of blessings which are all marked: “No Charge”

Exposition

This text gives insight into the actions of a sorry steward who tried to hide his slothfulness from his master’s knowledge. This parable of Jesus’ is usually called the parable of the “Unjust Steward” because it involves an overseer or steward who had been trusted to run the farm of a rich man but tried to cheat him in the process. The steward had a free hand in giving, collecting and enforcing contracts. His job was to maintain the land in a profitable manner for the owner. However, this steward had become lazy. He had not be frugal with the affairs of the land’s owner and he feared that the master would discover his flaw and fire him. He pondered his choices if he were fired and concluded that he could not beg or resort to hard labor. He decided to cover his bases by making friends among the tenants insuring that someone would take him in if he were fired at worse, or that they would not tell of his laziness at best.

The steward called in all of the tenants and gave them new contracts. Some of the new contracts were as much as half of the original contracts. With collected new contracts in hand, the steward would have the appearance of having done a good job with the master’s property. The master would never know because the tenants would not tell about their great fortune. If the master did discover his folly, certainly some among the tenants would glady take the steward in. It was a good plan and he pursued it carefully. He succeeded in fooling the master who commended him for his hard work. He was an unjust steward because he had misused the authority and property which his master gave him.

Jesus told his disciples that people who have been given small responsibilities as they are represented by our land, finances, time and talents are judged on the bases of how they are used. Those who “have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches? And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man’s, who shall give you that which is your own?” If a man cannot be trusted to handle the small affairs of another, he should not ever expect to receive larger sums to manage under the same conditions of his own.

Levels of Stewardship

Each Christian is a steward of a portion of God’s estate entrusted to his care. We are expected to use what he has given us wisely that we can be a good report when he returns to estate. This estate that God has given us involves 1)Real Estate 2)Intellectual Estate and 3)Moral Estate

Real Estate. Each person is entrusted to a certain portion of God’s real or material estate. This estate includes the lands we own, car we drive, house we live in, and the money in our pockets. He has entrusted us to handle that portion of his goods for him. Some have been given more in this respect than others. Some have great farms consisting of thousands of acres, others have just a 50x100 lot. Some have great sums of money while others have little. Each person is given a different portion of God's real estate holdings of land and resources. Each is expected to multiply his holdings and use it wisely. Jesus illustrated this fact when he told the parable of the talents in which he rewarded servants that took their talents and multiplied them and reduced the holdings of the servant who would not use his talent.

What portion of God's Real Estate does God require for his use? His instructions are that 10 percent of his real estate holdings be placed in the care of the church. The steward is instructed that 90 percent can be used at the Steward's discretion. However, many today have become modern versions of Ananias and Sapphari who chose to lie to the church about the amount of their giving. Too many today are mismanaging God's property and keeping for themselves portions designated for the church. How Much do I owe Him? We owe God complete obedience to his instructions and the best use of that which has given us.

Intellectual Estate. Each person is endowed with varying levels of intellect and wisdom. There are many people who excel in various areas of pursuit: arts, science, scriptures, or history. This ability to excel in the intellectual estate is a gift from God because all knowledge belongs to him and he has control of it all. But whatever intellectual talents God has allowed us to use must be used according to his purpose. How much do I owe him? We owe God the benefit of our best thinking, and wisest deliberation. We owe him the most creditable use of our intellectual faculties that is possible. In this respect young Solomon prayed to God for "wisdom" to act fair and justly with the people. Wisdom is a great estate of God, entrusted to each of us. We owe him the prudent use of this great estate.

Moral Estate. Each of us has a moral responsibility to God. This responsibility demands that we live according to a higher law. This higher law demands that we do right even though others do wrong. It demands that we look beyond the superficial and seek truth over untruth. It also demands a high degree of abstinence from passions that disrespect the fact that our bodies are the temple of God. 1 Cor. 6:9 reminds us "What, know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost, which ye have in you, which ye have of God and ye are not your own?" The fact that we are not our own, that we belong to God, suggest that we have a stewardship trust over our moral estate. We owe God our best in this respect: to "Flee fornication" and imperfections of every kind and seek to achieve a level of moral integrity that will be acceptable to God.

Spiritual Estate

If there are three estates to which we are directly held accountable to God as stewards, there is a fourth estate for which we are also responsible: Our spiritual life. The spiritual freedom that God has given us demands that recognize that we will be held accountable for how we use it. God never forces us to do right, but he gives us a choice. He does not drag us to the cross, but he gives us the choice. We will be accountable for the choices we make.

Every Christian can testify that once he was spiritually dead! Lost and living wayward, until he found the Lord!

Saul worked against God and was spiritually dead, until he met the Lord!

The demonic man ran through the grave yard naked, until he met the Lord!

We all can share the testimony of the song writer who declared: I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore, very deeply stained within, seeking to rise no more, but the master of the sea heard my despairing cry, from the waters lifted me now safe am I."

I don't know about you but today I'm safe on the peaceful shore because of Jesus who died out on Calvary!

Jesus! Who took away my sins!

Jesus! Died in my place!

Jesus! Who saved my soul!

How much do I owe him? More than I can pay! But every day of my life I'm going to give him my best because he died for me!

I'm going to keep on praising him because he was buried for me!

I'm going to keep on praising him because Early Sunday morning he rose from the grave with all power in his hands and announced to the world, come unto me all ye labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest!

What's the cost?

No Charge!

He Did It Once, He Can Do It Again

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 1, 1991

SCRIPTURE: But the angel said unto him, Fear not, Zacharias: for thy prayer is heard; and thy wife Elisabeth shall bear thee a son and thou shalt call his name John. Luke 1:13

Introduction

What are the chances of great opportunities coming your way repeatedly? Some would say looking for that to happen is like looking for that "fat chance." They ask, does lightning strike the same place twice? Some describe their good fortunes as anything but miraculous and attribute them to everything except divine intervention. When others see a truly amazing accomplishment, they won't believe it until they see it again.

The Great Harry Houdini is recognized as the greatest magician and escape artist of all times. He repeatedly mystified audiences with his ability to escape almost magically from all kinds of safes, jails, and locks. A boy who watched him perform one of his tricks was amazed at how he was locked in hand cuffs, tied with ropes, chained at the feet and then held upside down in full view of the public and then escaped. Thinking it was a freak chance, he walked up to Houdini after the demonstration and said "I bet you can't do that again!" With the news media and hundreds of people watching, Houdini promptly had himself rechained and did the trick again. What he did once he could do again.

One thing we learn as Christians is that what God does once he can do again. God is not a "one time use" deity that acts miraculously once but cannot do it again. As we enter the Christmas season we focus on the great blessings that Christ gave mankind. We have seen his handiworks in the lives of others. This evidence recalls the words of the song writer who wrote: "It is no secret what God can do, what he's done for others, he'll do for you"

Exposition

This text first shows how God repeated a miracle he performed in the old Testament in answer to a devout believer's prayer. Zacharias belonged to a priestly family. His was one of 24 family divisions that routinely took turns tending to the necessities of the temple. He was married to Elizabeth, which was permissible for priests if they married within the race, and preferably someone who was also from a family of priests. Elizabeth was a descendant of Aaron.

Despite their goodness however, the couple was not able to have children. It distressed them greatly that others who were not as righteous as themselves could have children but they had none and as their old age advanced they thought the possibility of ever having a child was completely gone. What they did not know is that God had a plan in mind for them. They were to have a child, but not just any child, one who would have a special purpose in life. They would know he was special from the very beginning from the circumstances surrounding this miracle baby.

Many people have been caught off guard when they learned that they would have children at age 40 or 45. Some had to take a break to get a grip on themselves. Imagine then the shock that this old priest had when he heard the news that he and his wife were going to have a child, in their old age, with his wife barren as well. Being a priest, Zacharias knew very well not to doubt the Word of God delivered by his angel. Having read the record of Abraham and Sara he also knew the folly of laughing and making fun of God's timing. He knew God knew exactly what he was doing. He had blessed Abraham and Sara with a great blessing, and if he gave a miraculous blessing once, then certainly he was powerful enough to do it again. He was told to name the child "John" which means "Jehovah shows favor" or "God Blesses."

Multiple Blessings

One year a gray haired great grand father had the joy of having all of his family gather at their farmhouse for Thanksgiving. Nearly 100 people had crammed onto the farm, sleeping in cars, hallways, and anywhere they could find a space with the single purpose of making GrandPa's dream come true. As he sat across the table and stared at all his descendants a flood of tears rolled from his eyes as he gave thanks to God for such a blessing. One of his great grands asked "Why are you crying grandpa? " and he answered "Because the Lord has blessed me so much, my cup runneth over." Trying to be helpful the little girl picked up a coffee cup off the table and said "don't cry grandpa, here is another cup!"

After thanksgiving many people have full cups. They have counted all the blessings that God has given them and are full. Thanksgiving is nostalgic, it causes you to look backward and give thanks until your cup runs over. It prompts you to count the blessings that God has given you with miserly precision and to rejoice in every great miracle God performed in the past. With grateful hearts, Thanksgiving carries us on a trip down memory lane that wells joy in our soul and inspiration in our hearts.

Now that Thanksgiving is over and our cups are running over, there is good news from heaven: Get another cup because God is going to do it again!

The entire purpose of John The Baptist's life was to announce to the world that God was about to bless Israel again! God blessed them once with Moses who brought them from Egypt, but he would bless them even greater this time with one greater than Moses.

The message to Israel was to prepare for even greater blessings in a very short while!

The message to Christians as we look toward the Christmas season is similar: God is about to do it again! Get another cup!

As the word begins to focus on the birth of the Christ Child it suddenly realizes that there are more blessings to come. It realizes that if God:

—Stopped wars in the past, he can do it again!

—Put food on the table of hungry before, he can do it again!

—Untangled troubling circumstances, he can do it again!

As Thanksgiving passes and the birth of Christ dawns, the world looks forward with great anticipation to bigger, better and greater things.

Every Christian has the same expectation. Whatever God did for us that filled our cups in this year, he can do that and even more next year. If you enjoyed a margin of success in business, family relations or spiritual growth, this year: The message of the Christmas season is:"Get another cup!" The blessings were not by chance or freak accident of nature, but flowed from the very fountains of heaven themselves, so get ready, for what God did once he can do again and bigger!

Three Times is Sublime!

When God blessed Abraham and Sarah that was good. When he blessed Zacharias and Elizabeth with another miracle child that was even better. But God was about to do it again: Twice is nice but three times in sublime!

Isaiah declared it: "His name shall be called, Wonderful! Counselor! Almighty God! Prince of Peace"

His name is Jesus. He blessed me once by his birth, twice by his death and resurrection and everyday with the presence of his spirit.

I don't know about you but the Lord has brought me through:

—Valleys of loneliness and vales of tears

—Winds of Persecution and Storms of Opposition —Nights of Despair and Days of Frustration!

But I'm so glad to know that if he did it once, he can do it again!

Thank you Lord for turning my:

—Failures into success

—Enemies into friends

—Sorrows into Joys

I'm so glad that there is still a fountain filled with blood that has not run dry. Thanksgiving has past and my cup ran over, but I need you today more than I did yesterday.. Here's another cup!

Copping the Right Attitude

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.
November 24, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." 1 Cor. 15:58.

Introduction

What's your attitude about life? While there are many definitions the story of the father and the sailboats tells it best. A father took his son sailing for the first time and the son learned an important lesson about life. They noticed that there was a strong wind blowing to the East but most of the boats on the water were going West. "If the wind powers the sails, then why are the boats traveling East?" Asked the boy. The father explained that sail boats are made so that the sails can swing around and catch the wind, despite its direction and use it to their advantage. Therefore even if the wind blows West, by changing the set of the sails, a sailboat can go East, said the father. He recited to his son a poem that said:

"One ship drives east and another west, with the self-same winds that blow;
Tis the set of the sails and not the gales that determines where they go.
Like the winds of the sea are the ways of fate
As we voyage along through life
Tis the set of a soul that decides the goal and not the calm or the strife.
Rebecca Williams.

Your attitude is the "set of your sails" in life. It represents the state of your mind, behavior and purpose in life. The optimist has decided to take the high road to success in life. If the winds of chance blow in a different direction his course is still set toward success. The Christian has decided to take an even higher road toward heaven. The set of his sail, or his attitude, is not affected by what others say or do or what may come against him in life. When a person's state of mind and behavior changes abruptly, it is said that he has "copped an attitude" or has developed an "attitude" problem. Those who "cop attitudes" are overwhelmed by the situation and allow it to blow them in directions they don't want to go.

As Christians, our purpose in life is to glorify God and prepare for life in the kingdom of heaven. That is the set of our sails. We have copped an attitude but its an attitude toward making heaven our home.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's words of encouragement to the Christians at Corinth. The essential message he gave them was to keep the faith. He assured them that Christ died on the cross, rose from the dead and is alive. He went further to remind Christians that we have a great hope in this faith because one day we shall all see him again face to face. In reassuring the faith of the Corinthians he reminded them to keep the right attitude about Christ and not be influenced by critics of the faith or persecutions that would come. Paul focuses on three aspects of the Christian attitude that help us to continue despite obstacles. They are characterized in the phrase: "steadfast, unmovable... abounding in the work of the Lord."

Paul encouraged the Corinthians to be steadfast. The word translated here as steadfast is from a Greek word which means "Firm in purpose." The message to be "firm in purpose" was an important one for the Christians at Corinth because it was a seafaring city where the "vices of east and west met." Strange ideas flourished among them and immorality and decadence were common place. Many who started out in the Christian faith were influenced to change their attitudes about Christ by the loose morals of the world. Paul's encouragement to them however was: be ye steadfast.

He also urged them to be unmovable. The word unmovable here is distinguished from the word immovable. In this context "unmovable", which is drawn from a Greek word that means "firmly persistent", refers to the mind set or attitude of the believer. Immovable would refer to vain efforts of outside influences to affect the believer. When Paul suggests that Christians be "unmovable" he points to an attitude that is "persistent" in the believer. It is a frame of mind that speaks to circumstances and says "I will not be thrown off course" and firmly sticks to it.

Pointing to the last aspect of Christian attitude Paul urged the Corinthians to "abound" in the work of the Lord. To abound in the Work of the Lord refers to behavior and actions. He urges them not simply to do the work of the Lord but to "abound" in it. He urges them to excel, exceed, and to be such a glaring example that people take notice. This attitude of displaying the Christian attitude in our behavior was important because of all others, it was the most visible witness of the truth of our salvation.

Wrong Attitudes Lead to Failure

There is a danger in copping the wrong attitude. There are many young people today who have copped an attitude about life that is dangerously affecting their potential for success. Some have assumed bad attitudes about their homes, church, school and aims in life. Their attitudes are often reflected in their words and behavior. 1) Young people who are unwilling to participate in the team effort of their family by sharing in their part of the household responsibilities have adopted a selfish attitude. Selfishness simply means "if its not something that I can gain from in some way, I won't do it." However, the Christian attitude encourages "unselfishness" to the point of assuming a responsible role even in areas that may not be of interest to us personally. 2) At school, some young people have copped an attitude of rebellion in the classroom. Such students constantly "sass" or talk back to their teachers, cause disturbances, fight, crack jokes during class time, or otherwise disrupt the learning process. They have selected a course in life that is doomed to failure. Christian youth are different. Their attitude is that teachers are trying to help them succeed, rules are necessary for order and respect is due to those who have rule over them. 3) With regards to the faith, there are some youth who have assumed an attitude of tolerance rather than acceptance. When it comes to church there are some who have copped an attitude even about worship. They come to church because it is a requirement of their family and they dodge every church activity possible that is not required. It reflects a mind set that believes success in life can be obtained by belief in God, but worship, tithing, praying, bible study and Sunday School are not necessarily components of the good life. So they assume an attitude of tolerant clock watching, biding their time until they can do what they really want to do. The Christian youth has learned however that belief in God is just the beginning. Knowing more about his word, praising him in worship and obeying his commands are also essential parts of our salvation.

Copping a bad attitude leads to a destructive end. Cain and Abel both began with positive attitudes about God. When Cain found that Abel's sacrifice was more acceptable to God than his own, he copped an attitude of jealousy and killed his brother. Absalom was a favorite son of King David and Absalom loved his father. However, when he was punished by his father for killing his half brother, Absalom copped an attitude of rebellion that eventually led to his death hanging in a tree by his own hair.

Jonah was a believer in God and was faithful until God told him to preach salvation to Israel's enemies. Then he copped an attitude of defiance forcing God to have him swallowed by a fish and other hardships before he changed his mind.

There are many in the world who have copped an attitude on the Lord. Bad attitudes have made:

--Honor students turn into failing fools
--Model youth turn into embarrassing examples
--Favorite Children a source of family shame

Not only that but a bad attitude can take a:

--Rich man and make him a beggar, Wise man and make him a fool!
--Brilliant man and make him stupid, Trustworthy man and make him dishonest!
--Young girl and make her live like an old woman
--Young boy and make him think like a dirty old man

Copping bad attitudes can only destroy all the good that God intends for his people. They are negative influences wherein God wants us to focus on the positives of his love.

Right Attitudes Lead Us to Jesus

Paul told the Corinthians that there is a reasonable basis for the platitudes of our attitudes. We assume the Christian attitude of surety of purpose, firm persistence, and abounding work because we have an assurance that there is a higher reward waiting for every child of God.

Paul told the Corinthians that the Christian attitude and lifestyle is not in vain because we know that the Resurrection of Christ is real and just as sure as he rose from the grave he's coming back again!

Our attitude is positive and forward looking because we he's coming back again and we want to be ready when he gets here!

Christian youth, keep a positive attitude at home, school and in worship, your labor is not in vain!

Set your sails toward success! When the winds of peer pressure blow in another direction, keep your sail set toward success!

Paul told Christians to remember his creed: Nothing shall separate me from the love of Christ. Paul said my sail is set and "I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels nor principalities, nor powers nor things present nor things to come, nor height nor depth or any other creature, shall be able to separate me from the Love of Christ!"

When the classmates at school act fool, say in your mind, the wind is blowing wrong, but I'm sailing right, because I'm on my way!

When challenged to use foul language, steal or behave in an unchristian like way, say in your mind, the wind is blowing wrong, but I'm sailing right, because I'm on my way!

I've decided to follow Jesus! No turning back!

Jesus, the author and finisher of my faith!

Jesus, the light of my soul and my guiding tower!

I've decided to follow Jesus! No turning back! No turning back!

Man Doth Not Live By Bread Alone

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 17, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"And he humbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, and fed them with manna, which thou knewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live." Deut. 8:3

Introduction

A Self Made Man had one focus in life, earn money and nothing else mattered. One night he had a dream that he was being served in a fine restuarant filled with rich and important people. He ordered a variety of fine cuisines and dishes for himself and his guest that were expensive and prepared by the world's finest chefs. However, each time the waiter brought out his tray instead of the fine foods he ordered, all he was served was a slice of bread.

"There must be a mistake" he told the waiter noting that he had ordered several fine selections. The waiter said there had been no mistake. Angry, the man left and went to several other restuarants and at each place all would receive was a slice of bread. Finally the man went to the owner of the restuarant and asked for an explanation.

The owner said the customers of the shops in this land can only be served by the concerns of their heart. "You see customers here with meats and sweets because their lives are concerned with substance and compassion. You see some with cooling drinks and tasty entres because they drink from the fountain of life and commune regular with the Saints." The man looked ate his plate and asked "But why did you give me just a slice of bread?" The owner responded, "because your sole interest in life is making a living and acquiring the material possessions that life has to offer." The thought "I have to have more than just a slice of bread every day!" Then the man looked at the face of the owner and recognized the face of Jesus and he woke up from his dream. Disturbed, he opened his bible to read and fell upon this verse: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

As Christians we know that there are things in life more important that possessions, money, power and influence. These things come from God. They are means to achieve an end but they are not an end in themselves. We cannot live happily with just what this world offers us. There is a more evasive but substantive truth we all know, that to be really happy we must walk in the Lord, and cling to every word that proceedeth out of his mouth.

Exposition

This text focuses on God speaking to Israel explaining the reason he caused them to endure the hardships of the wilderness and the good things that can follow if they obey his commandments.

At the time of this text Israel had wandered in the wilderness about 40 years on a journey that should have taken weeks. They were moving from slavery toward a brighter future. Along the way they were exposed to a variety of troubling setbacks that frustrated them, troubled them and delayed their entrance into the promised land for years. Enroute to the promised land they were pursued by enemies, scorched in the desert, exhausted from the lack of food and water, and plagued by internal rebellion. God in this text says all of these hardships were intentional. They were part of grand design that was arranged to teach Israel the one lesson they would need to enjoy the great things that would be availabe in the land God was preparing for them. They would need to learn humility.

In the midst of each struggle God had to teach Israel, just as it stood on the border of the promised land that it should always remember the source of any opportunities that come its way and never become high minded. When they feared that they would be recaptured and returned to slavery, God opened up the Red Sea and saved them. When they feared that they would starve to death for lack of essential nutrition, God sent them quails for meat, rained down bread from heaven and caused water to spring out of a rock when there were no streams. In total disorganization, disputing among themselves, he caused them to wander into they could number and organize themselves, establish a system of leadership, repell rebellious influences and band together behind one leadership for a common cause.

God's intent was not to destroy Israel but to humble and season Israel as a nation that it might be prepared for the great opportunities that were going to be available to them and still be God's people at the same time. So, although it appeared at once that they would be recaptured and returned to slavery, God opened the Red Sea to allow their escape to let them know, that they survived only because there is a God in heaven. They complained about meat and water and God supplied it in a way that they knew had to come from God and him alone. They had no bread and God did not lead them to green pastures where they could grow the wheat themselves and mistake the source of their blessings, he rained down bread from heaven, such that there would be no mistake. He made his purpose altogether clear: "that he might make thee know, that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live."

Preparation for the Promised Land

How do we understand the climate of our times, in light of God's word? As African-Americans how do we explain the sudden resurgence across America of racial hate groups, reactinonary forces and political lynch parties? Is there a word from the Lord? For an answer we only need to look at Israel. They were a people enslaved for 400 years and God had miraculously freed them but before they were ready for the promised land they had to be taught a few lessons which are sources of evaluation for our people today:

--The only thing that separates us from the enemy is the presence of God. While Israel marched to freedom Pharoah attempted to put them back in slavery but could not get to them because of a Pillar of Cloud by Day and Pillar of fire by night. We should never be lulled into thinking that Pharoah has given up on trying to enslave. Some of us, fresh from Slavery already have lost sight on the nature of the enemy. The enemy is not a color, it is a system of things that is postured to survive at our expense. That system never sleeps and seizes every opportunity to keep the disadvantaged, disadvantaged. It is only God's presence standing between Pharoah's army and Israel that keeps it going. This was a lesson Israel had to know.

--A united effort would be required to realize the promise. Israel was a mass of about 600,000 people unorganized and disrespectful of leadership. They had a commonality of origin and circumstance but did not share the same agenda. They had to organize themselves with every man registered and counted for battle-that's what the Book of Numbers is all about. They had to put down rebellions among themselves, prompted by those who wanted to return to the old days and those who wanted to go after the future. There was also internal strife among the leaders. God destroyed those who lead rebellion among the people and once Miriam and Aaron stopped speaking against Moses they were able united behind a common agenda.

The ill winds that blow across the land today are perhaps more by design than by chance. If we understand God's word clearly, it can only be a sign that God is using evil presences to keep his people humble. Faced with the perception of an evil presence his people unite! Faced with the perception of an overpowering enemy about to destroy them, his people will rally behind a common agenda and realize that their only hope for making it is in a united effort powered by the Spirit of God himself. Without God there isn't any pillar of fire or cloud, or opening of the Red Sea! Without God there is no bread from heaven, only the dry morsels and crumbs of human know how that are insufficient to get us to the promised land.

Not By Bread Alone

All of these serve to remind African-Americans that we cannot achive what we desire by our own strength, wisdom or ability. We cannot gain it through attaining the material goods and methodology of this world alone, but by depending totally on the truths of God as they relate to our specific circumstance.

When we get jobs, we must always remember where it came from!

When we sit down and eat a steak, we must remember where it came from!

When we enjoy new found freedoms, we must never forget from whence we have come.

I heard a song writer declare: "We have come this far by faith, leaning on the Lord.

Trusting in his Holy Word, he has never failed me yet. Oh, can't turn around we've come this far by faith"

Along the way we have learned that we can't depend on this bread alone, but by every word that comes from the mouth of God which is the bread of heaven!

The bread of heaven is the power of God!

The bread of heaven is Jesus!

Jesus: My help in time of touble! Comfort in times of Crises, Glory in times of grief! Victory when it looks like defeat is all around me! Jesus!

"Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

Have You Lost Anything?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 10, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"And when she hath found it, she calleth her friends and her neighbors together, saying, rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost." Luke 15:9

Introduction

Have you ever lost anything? Consider the couple that struck it rich and decided to celebrate by renting a Penthouse on the 29th floor of a luxury hotel and then painting the town. It was beautiful layout with several rooms, exquisite furnishings, a breath taking view and an atmosphere that was heavenly. Dressed in new clothes they sped off in limousine to see the town. On their return they learned that the elevator was out of order. They were given the option of sleeping in a first floor room without the elaborate trappings of their Penthouse or climbing the steps to the 29th floor. Considering the beauty of their Penthouse the couple decided to walk the 29 floors. There was exhaustion, frustration, fatigue, and disgust as they moved from floor to floor in what seemed an endless succession of steps that spiraled for miles. Finally at the top, the husband searched his pocket for the key and realized that he must have lost the keys in all of the merriment. Through all of their hard work to get to the top, they had lost the key!

Likewise there are many people today who are working hard to succeed in life. They are striving to acquire the American dream of financial security, leisure and freedom of opportunity. To achieve this dream many are climbing the steps to success in an often tiring, and frustrating climb. However, some who are making the climb have forgotten the key to happiness. It is still at the front desk.

As Christians, we are ever mindful of the fact that the essential element to happiness, success and joy is Christ. We have discovered that houses, cars, finances, romance and other incidentals contribute to comfort but not joy. We have also learned that church membership is desirable, but aside from salvation, a sanctified soul and service it is a long hard climb without the key! Jesus is the key to salvation! In your climb up have you misplaced the key?

Exposition

This text is the second in a trilogy of parables Jesus used to explain why he spent so much time with publicans and sinners. In verse two the Pharisees and Scribes criticized Jesus for "receiving" or associating with the low class people of the community who were generally viewed as deadbeats. He was even criticized because he was often seen eating with them in their houses and receiving them as his guests. It was believed that if Jesus was the Son of God as he claimed that he would make himself available to the elders of the community and associate with those who had more to offer the kingdom building process.

To explain the nature of his mission and the nature of man's relationship with God also, Jesus told three parables. One spoke of a shepherd who had 100 sheep and realized that he had lost one and went out to find it. Another spoke of man who had two sons and one went into far country and wasted his life in riotous living. Another, which is the focus of this text involved a woman who had ten coins and lost one in her house. The woman searched and swept her house until she found the lost coin and celebrated thereafter. The coin itself was called a "drachme" and was equal to about a days wages for their times. It would be same today as if someone had $500 in $50.00 bills and had lost one somewhere in the house. The woman could not rest until she had searched everywhere in the house and brought light to every dark place as she searched.

The sheep wandered away from the fold. The prodigal son left home. However, the coin neither wandered away or ran off into the world. The coin was lost "in the house." Using these three parables Jesus showed that his mission was to find the lost and to search for them. At the same time he showed that there is concern in heaven for lost things. With the sheep, Christ showed that God will go after those who have lost their way and are simply confused and don't know the way back. With the prodigal son, Christ showed that God patiently waits for those who leave the faith for the world and will warmly welcome them back. With the coin, Christ shows that God is disturbed at the loss of those in the faith and seeks to shine the light of hope into whatever darkness that has caused them to hide in the corners of the kingdom instead of actively enjoying its fullness.

Losing Things Can Be Frustrating

Losing things can be frustrating. Perhaps some of the most frustrating moments in life are those when we can't find something we have lost. Losing keys or other valuables troubles the mind and there is no rest until they are found. Usually losing things causes more worry for the owner than for lost object because that which is lost usually doesn't know that it is lost. The sheep that wandered away from the fold did not know it was lost, but the shepherd did. The coin that was lost in the house did not know it was lost, but the woman did. The prodigal son did not know what he had lost until he came to himself, but his father knew all the time. Sometimes those who are lost don't know it, while others all around them see it sharp and clear.

As a people, have we lost anything? Is our sense of community the same as it was a generation ago? Dr. James Evans, president of the Colgate Rochester Divinity School said recently that one of the causes of the rise of Black on Black crime is our loss of the spirit of fraternalism that existed during slavery and came to its height in the 1960's. This sense of community recognized every Black person as either a fellow slave or a "Soul Brother" or "Soul Sister." Since the idea of the "Soul Brother" has faded, the new generation does not perceive every Black person as a brother. Those who commit Black on Black crimes view their Black victims as just convenient targets. As a people, the loss of the spirit of brotherhood and sisterhood has affected us in many ways. Today the Black community has lost much of the spiritual energy that has made us strong. Those new to the community probably don't know that anything has been lost, but those who have been around know that we have lost something.

In our relationships, have we lost anything? In our marriage or courtship do we still have the same sense of commitment that we once had? Is there still a fire that burns deep in your soul or has the blaze withered to smoldering ashes, only a vision of what it once was? There are millions today who live in marriages and other interpersonal relationships where at least one partner knows something has been lost. It's not what it use to be! It is frustrating because the partners that are lost do not perceive of themselves as lost although all around can see it as plain as day.

Personally have we lost anything? Has there ever been a time when we felt spiritually stronger? Has there ever been a time when we read our bible more, attended Sunday School, sang in choir, or served in a special position of service with intensity and vigor? Has there ever been a time when you actually enjoyed serving the Lord, looked forward to meetings with other brothers and sisters in the faith and were excited about the fellowship? There are millions of church members who share the circumstance of the lost coin, they are lost in the house. They have not wandered into the highways and byways nor roamed into the world they are lost in the house!

Those who are lost in the house have misplaced the key to spiritual happiness! When we evade Sunday Bible Study, sleep through the worship, endure the singing and constantly glance at our watches it suggests that we are lost in the house. We have misplaced the key! David has been described as man after God's own heart, but yet there was a time when David lost something! He lost the key to joy. It was a long time before David realized that he had lost something but once he came to himself he cried out to the Lord: "Create in me a clean heart O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy holy spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation and uphold me with thy free spirit." (Psa. 51:10-12).

Jesus is the key to our joy!

Those who are tiring of their service have misplaced the key! Why do you attend Sunday School? It's not to sit in a chair for 45 minutes and be present, but to learn about Jesus! Those who sing don't sing for show or fashion but they want to worship Jesus! Those who teach and are involved in outreach do so out of a sense mission for Jesus! Take away Jesus and Sunday School is boring, church service is a burden, and your singing becomes a show which emphasizes the performance rather than expressing a relationship with Jesus. Take away Jesus and you soon start feeling that the entire church experience is a waste of time.

Brothers and Sisters its dangerous to misplace Jesus!

When you misplace Jesus there is no:

--Light in the middle of darkness or hope of Success in failure

--Forgiveness for faults or strength in midst of weakness

--Direction for travels or joy for your sorrows

Jesus like the good shepherd is looking for the lost!

Jesus, like the loving father is waiting for the prodigal to come back home!

Jesus, like the woman searching for her lost coin is searching for a lost soul that needs to be found.

A little girl was lost in a shopping mall and refused to answer when she heard the page: "Will the little girl named Mary who is lost, please come to the courtesy desk, your mother is looking for you!" When asked why she would not respond the little girl answered, they asked for a girl that was lost, I knew exactly where I was, so I figured it must have been somebody else. The mother responded: when I said lost I did not mean being lost from yourself, but being lost from me, I worry when you are not by my side."

When the voice of heaven rings out: "Will all lost souls report to the nearest church!" there will be some who will hear the message but respond: "it's not for me, because I'm not lost!" When the Lord seeks the lost he means those who have misplaced the key to salvation and happiness and are distanced from him.

I heard the song writer declare "Jesus is tenderly calling today, calling today, calling today, Jesus is tenderly calling today!"

I don't know about you but I know what it means to be lost on the sea of life and I'm so glad that Jesus gave another chance. Maybe that's why the song writer declared: "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore, very deeply stained within sinking to rise no more, but the master of the sea heard my despairing cry and from the water lifted me now safe am I."

Love lifted me!

When I was lost and could not find my way, Love lifted me!

When I was sinking in the world, love lifted me!

When nothing else could help, love lifted me!

Sealed Until He Comes

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 3, 1991

Scripture: "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise" Ephesians 1:13; "Grieve not the Holy Spirit whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." Eph. 4:30

Introduction

The hearts of Americans were touched a few years ago when they learned of the dilemma of a little boy who had to live in a bubble or die. It appeared that the boy was born with a congenital immune deficiency that made him highly susceptible to disease. The smallest sickness, a cold, virus, or even a cut on the finger could have meant death for him. To protect his life, doctors encased him in a plastic-like bubble, where the air was purified and he was safe from diseases. His toys, games and other distractions were placed inside the bubble. Inside the bubble he was safe. Outside the bubble his chances of survival were nearly non-existent. The boy continues to live and grow, but only because he's safe inside the bubble, without its protection he would contract a disease and die.

In a spiritual sense, all people all born with certain deficiencies of character that make them susceptible to sin. We were born with these vulnerabilities. We are threatened by their presence everyday because even the smallest infraction of God's law, unredeemed, means eternal death. Romans 6:23 paints a two part picture of our dilemma: "The wages of sin are death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Without Christ our very nature will cause our spiritual death. With Christ we are placed in a protective "bubble" that protects us from the influences of sin. The Christian's protective bubble is not made of plastic. Neither can it be seen with the eye of felt with the hand. It is the presence of the Holy Spirit in his or her life that constantly protects the saved man or woman from the death dealing influences of sin. It is the moving force of God within us that leads us, corrects us, revives us and motivates us to live the Christian life. Thank God for the bubble! Thank God for the Holy Spirit! We are safe as long as we are surrounded by the bubble. Outside of the Holy Spirit's protection we would surely face spiritual death.

As Christians, we know that it is impossible to live a decent and upright life without the guidance, encouragement and protection of the Holy Spirit. He is our guide and our defender in times of trouble. He keeps us safe and secure until our Lord comes back again.

Exposition

This text considers Paul writing to the Ephesians reminding them that they have been given the gift of the Holy Spirit that has sealed them in the faith until the return of the Lord. In biblical times the use of seals was common from Babylonian antiquity to Roman civilization. Paul's use of the term "seal" to indicate the presence of God in the life of a Christian, drew upon a common practice familiar to most people of his time, that being the use of seals. Paul's distilled thought on this matter is that the seal of the Holy Spirit serves a threefold purpose for the Christian: authentication, identification, and destination.

In the purest sense, the seal was originally a sign of authentication. Usually made of wax, letters and other documents were authenticated when the king placed his ring or signet into the warm wax to signify his consent to the contents. If it was sealed with the king's ring it was assumed official. When Jesus was buried the stone placed in front of it was sealed with the mark of the pharisees to prove that it had not been opened. If it bore the seal it was the real McCoy.

The seal was also a sign of ownership or sanctification. Items that bore a certain seal were considered owned by the person whose seal they bore. Therefore Paul writes to Timothy in 2 Timothy 2:19 saying "..having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his." Paul suggested to Timothy in this text as he did to the Ephesians that those who have the seal of God should sanctify themselves or set themselves apart from the world because they belong to Christ. In 1 Corinthians 19-20 he reminds Christians "..ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price.." The presence of the Seal of the Holy Spirit in our lives shows Sanctification.

The seal is also a sign of destination. In Ezekiel 9:4 the Lord told Ezekiel to go through the city and to find those faithful to God and put a mark on their foreheads to protect them from coming destruction. These, who bore the mark, were destined to make it through the tough times ahead in safety. For Christians, the presence of the Holy Spirit is the promise of our future destination in heaven with Christ. The seal of Christ is our hope for a place in the kingdom of heaven when Christ returns.

Insufficient Seals

Today there are many people who have good hearts, and the best of intentions but they are missing something. They are in the same predicament as the Rich Young Ruler who lived a decent and obedient life but found out from Christ that there is "one thing thou lackest" before his spiritual life could be complete. He had to be born again of the water and of the spirit. Likewise, many today try to live the good and decent life, without the sealing power of the Holy Spirit.

What effect does the Holy spirit have on our lives? It directs, guides, corrects and inspires us. But it also helps to protect our spiritual strengths. The sweetest cake or the freshest light bread won't last long if they are not sealed tightly after use. The influences all around us will corrupt us and make us stale and hard. Many people today have become hard. They lack the vitality that freshness brings and their real sweetness or vitality cannot be appreciated. They have become hard because they lack God's moving presence in their lives.

While there some who have never been sealed and grown hard, there are others who have what appears to be the seal of God but it is only a weak substitute. These are man made seals that prove insufficient to sustain us, even in the strongest of times.

LIGHT BREAD SEALS. Some church people have light bread seals and not the seal of God. Light bread is sealed, but it allows the user to remove the seal and put it back on again indefinitely. Even with the best of care, light bread becomes dry and stale if the loaf packaging is often opened and closed. Many church people have a light bread seal instead of the Seal of Christ. They are in and out! They are in for a while and they are out for a long time. Their seal is opened and closed so much that they have grown stale in the faith. Is our allegiance to God and in and out affair? Is it desirable for us to meander in the faith so frequently? 1 Corinthians 15:58 answers these questions this way: "..Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain."

POP TOP SEALS: Some church people have pop top seals, rather than seals from God. These seals are like soft drinks that are strong and powerful as long as their tops are never popped. They have plenty of power: If shaken it builds; if things get hot it builds even more, as long as they are sealed. If the seal is broken all of its power is lost in one flurry and fizzle. Likewise many Christians have a great testimony to tell, song to sing, and prayer to pray. They appear to have plenty of power until something or somebody pops their top. It may be an angry response, or even a failure that pops their top but when it happens they lose all of their power and have as much spirit as day old soda pops: every now and then they can work up a bubble or two! In verses 25 through 5:18 Paul enumerates a variety of situations that can cause us to pop our top: Lying (v25); Letting a day close in anger with someone (v26); Stealing (v28); Ill feelings toward others (v31); fornications and filthiness (5:3-4); and drunkenness (5:18).

CANNED FOOD FAITH: Those who are truly sealed have discovered that there is safety, security and strength for those whom God protects. The old mothers knew how to make ends meet and one way they did it was to can food. The essential element to canning food required removal of all harmful organisms and an airtight seal. Food was often precooked and placed in hot sterilized Mason jars. Once the food had cooled down the moveable center on jar top was pressed down to remove the air that help any organism from growing. Once sealed canned foods could last for years. Those who are sealed in Christ are like canned food items, which in modern times are placed cans. The tough seal that protects them allows them to remain intact even though they may be dropped, kicked, rolled around or tossed. They may have a dent or two but they are almost indestructible.

When you have been sealed in the faith nothing can separate you from the Love of God. In Romans 8:35 Paul asked the question:"Who shall separate us from the Love of Christ? Shall tribulation or distress or persecution or famine or nakedness or peril or sword?" He answered his own question with our testimony: "I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels nor principalities, nor things present nor things to come, nor height nor depth nor any other creature shall be able to separate me from the Love of God which is in Jesus Christ."

Seal Shows Your Destination

While the seal shows who you are and to whom you belong to, it also shows where you are going. If you have been sealed by the Holy Spirit you are being kept and protected until the Lord comes back again.

It's important to have the right seal, because its the seal that will tell the conductor which way you are traveling and where you are going.

In Revelation 7 John said he saw 144,000 Jews from the 12 tribes of Israel all bearing the seal of the lamb. Beyond that he saw another crowd which no man could number, whose robes had been washed in the blood of the lamb.

If you bear the seal of the lamb, it lets the world know that you are on your way to the Canaan land.

I don't know about you but I'm on way to a place where:

--Graves never open and gates never close

--Hearts never break and dreams never fade

--Tears never fall and tempers never rise

--Hopes never diminish and Happiness never sorrows

--Friends never part, flowers never fade

--Doubts never rise, Joy never ends

When Jesus comes again the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest!

When Jesus comes again we'll be caught up to meet him in the air!

Oh don't you want to be in that number!

Crying days will be over!

Joy will never end!

My Mind Is Playing Tricks On Me

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 27, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient;" Romans 1:28

Introduction

Suppose you had two brains and both of them tried to tell you what to do? That was the subject of a 1972 movie entitled "The Thing with two Heads" in which Roosevelt Grier played a Black convict whose head was transplanted onto the body of a white racist doctor. The two heads could not get along. If one said go left the other said go right. In 1983 Steve Martin was in a similar dilemma in his movie, "The man with two brains." In either case, the presence of two minds in the same body caused considerable trouble for everyone involved.

While most of us don't have the "two heads" or "two brains" to trouble us, we do have two spirits within us that struggle constantly to gain control of our mind. One spirit represents all that is moral and just. The other spirit is a reflection of all that is immoral and evil. Both are competing for control of our mind.

Satan is a cunning deceiver. To get control of our mind and soul he will use whatever deceptions are necessary to accomplish his goal. A popular song by the Geto Boys entitled "My Mind Is Playing Tricks On Me" has this idea in focus as it suggests that there is a deception underfoot that is making it hard to believe what you see and hear. In the garden Satan deceived Eve into thinking she would not die if she ate from the forbidden fruit. In the wilderness he tried to deceive Jesus to worship him and to turn stones into bread.

Many youth today have believed the deceiver. He has presented them with a mirage of life, an exaggerated caricature of possibilities, that does not reflect reality. They live daily by his rule: Live fast, move quick, and don't look back. Following Satan's deception some youth are failing in school, getting in trouble with the law, and dropping out of life.

However, some have realized the deception and now say "My mind is playing tricks on me" as they look for a better way.

As Christians, we rejoice in knowing that we once had a mind to practice sin.

However, we have renewed our mind through Christ and have turned to a better life. Our collective mind is staid on Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith.

Exposition

This text considers Paul's writings to the Christians at Rome. It was written three years before his actual arrival in the city and is generally accepted as a treatise that fully explains the Gospel. He told the Romans that all men are guilty of some infraction of God's law but some had demoralized to a state that their actions have been totally rejected by God. Their actions were so offensive to God that in three places Paul says God "Gave them up" to themselves. In verse 24 God "Gave them up" to uncleanness. In verse 26 God gave them up to homosexual and lesbian behavior and in verse 28 God gave them up to a "reprobate" mind.

The term reprobate usually refers to a state of mind or character that is not acceptable to God. Jeremiah 6:30 speaks of the ungodly as "reprobate silver" because God had rejected them. 2 Timothy 3:8 refers to those in the church who have mixed their own views with those of the faith to justify their actions and have become reprobate. Titus 1:16 speaks of those who acknowledge God but are constantly disobedient to him and fail to show good works. They are characterized as reprobates because their actions are conflicting with the spirit of Christ. Each speaks to a different variety of reprobation: Outright rejection of God (Jeremiah 6), Mixing ungodly ideas with the truths of the scripture to justify ungodly behavior (2 Tim.); and professing to know God in speech but denying him in practice (Titus 1).

The reprobate mind is one that sometimes switches frequently between good and evil. It often thinks good thoughts but does bad things. On other occasions it thinks and does ungodly deeds. The reprobate himself is often a confused personality that does not know which way to turn or go. He is often the victim of his own degenerated mind playing tricks on him.

When Your Mind Plays Tricks On You

Often what we describe as our "Mind playing tricks on us" is the result of one spirit or the other trying to speak to us and we are confused. Pharaoh dreamed about seven fat cows swallowing up seven skinny cows repeatedly. He could not sleep at night and was disturbed about it and his mind played tricks on him, until he learned the meaning of the dream from Joseph. Nebuchadnezzar dreamed of a great tree that was cut down to the stump and found out that God planned to punish him with insanity for several years. Soon afterwards he lost his mind and started thinking he was an animal and began eating grass walking around on all fours. His mind played tricks on him. Jesus ran upon a demonic man who ran naked through the graveyards screaming in the night. Demons were running him wild and his mind played tricks on him. Even Jesus had the same experience. In the wilderness Satan appeared before him and played with his mind showing him all of the possibilities available if he would serve the "dark side" of "the force." Therefore it is not uncommon for today's Christians, especially youth, to be victims of the mind games of the world.

Often young people are torn between the voices that speak to their mind. I hear America' youth cry out:

There is the voice of God and morality, but its sandwiched between VH1 and MTV. They've changed my channel, erased my tape, messed with my fate and my mind is playing tricks on me.

Preacher say don't and my partners say do. If I could I would but I don't, not because I won't, but because my mind is playing tricks on me.

Safe Sex, No Sex, Free Sex and AIDS if I do. Everybody's knows what's good for you: the Sunday School teacher and Two Live Crew. Nine minutes, 9 months and a date with VD, and I'm all messed up because my mind is playing tricks on me.

The school says don't be a fool, be cool, obey the rules, you got the tools, but its easier to cop out, dropout, grab a ball and have a ball, and through it all my mind is playing tricks on me.

Boom boxes preach, videos teach, and the world is filled with sneaks and freaks, and stomping Greeks saying party down to eternity. My Christianity sees absurdity and I resist with all ability but my mind is still playing tricks on me.

I want to let go, but "its so hard to say goodbye." I wanna fly beyond the sky. I want a new home when I die, but every day I hear a voice from hell saying come here son let me ring your bell..and my mind keeps playing tricks on me.

I'm scolded, folded, molded and blindfolded and can't see what I want to be. The faithful are hopeless, Catholics are popleless, Nighttime T.V, is soapless. Jails are full, pockets are bare, people with pull won't even share, nobody cares, and my mind is playing tricks on me.

Paul referred to this dilemma in Romans 7:15-20 when he noted that with one mind he wanted to right but with another he wanted to do wrong. He recognized that it was the voice of evil that kept him confused. He asked a question in verse 24: "who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" He answers (v25) by giving thanks to Jesus for freeing his mind to follow the will of God because in the flesh he would always follow the law of sin.

The answer to those who are suffering from confused minds, is Jesus!

If there have been two voices speaking to you and pulling at your soul, confusing and frustrating you, we invite you choose Jesus.

Romans 12:2 says "And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." 2 Timothy 1:7 reminds that "God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and love and of a sound mind."

The Answer to A confused mind is a Made Up Mind

While there are many young people who are confused by the world, there are others who are not touched by the confusing signals the world gives them, because they have a made up mind. They have decided to follow Jesus.

Nebuchadnezzar lost his mind, but when he decided to listen to the Lord, his mind no longer played tricks on him.

The demonic man ran naked through the graveyard but when he met Jesus, his mind no longer played tricks on him and people were amazed at how his life had changed.

Amazing things happen when a man or woman meets Jesus. When you meet Jesus:

--Proud become humble, discouraged are inspired

--Weak become strong, and lonely get a friend

--Questions are answered, and bad habits are broken

--Doubts are settled, and lost joy is restored

I don't know about you but I've found out that when you know the Lord he gives you:

--Courage to fight your battles

--Rest for your weary soul

--Peace in Middle of your storms

--Success in the midst of failure

--Gladness in the midst of Grief

--A song to sing in the midnight

No wonder the song writer declared "I woke up this morning with my mind staid on Jesus. Walking and talking with my staid on Jesus, he's my friend!"

If your mind has played tricks on you, try Jesus!

If the world has confused you, try Jesus!

Jesus, who died for you on Calvary, will give you a second chance!

Thank God For The Rock

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Peter's Rock Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 20, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"For who is God save the Lord? or who is a rock save our God? Psalms 18:31

Introduction

A little girl was traveling with her parents on a boat down a certain river. The water was moving at a brisk pace and the boat began to rock to the left and right. Suddenly the small boat capsized and the entire family spilled over into the water. All of the family members made it to shore except the little girl. The mother panicked as she saw her daughter, held up only by her life preserve, floating down stream. All through the night they searched for her and could not find her. Exhausted, they had almost given up. As the sun rose they looked down the river and saw what looked like a red life jacket and the moved toward it quickly. Sure enough they found the girl with her arms wrapped around a huge boulder in the river, holding on tightly. Just beyond the boulder was a waterfall. As the father pulled his daughter to shore, he hugged her close to him and cried. The mother looked at the water fall and then looked at the boulder and her only response was "Thank God for the Rock."

Where would we be today if it were not for the rock?

We have traveled many dangerous paths and meandered many torrential streams.

We have flirted with failure, frustration and death so many times we cannot count them. The only presence that has sustained us in the middle of our struggles over the years is the presence of the almighty God. When we failed he encouraged us to go on. When we stumbled he picked us up. When we were confused he showed us the way.

It is no wonder then that the Psalmist would write: "In the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me upon a rock." Psalms 27:5. Most of us would have gone overboard if it were not for the rock of our salvation standing firm in the midst of troubling water giving us something hold on to.

As we celebrate our accomplishments and achievements in life we should always give thanks to God for being there for us. His constant presence in the life of the church and every member, gives us all, something to hold on to that is secure and lasting.

Exposition

This text is best described as David's hymn of thanksgiving. It was written on the occasion of his ascension to the throne following the death of King Saul and his sons. It was a particularly grand moment for David because he had been a fugitive from Saul for so many years and was unable to enjoy his freedom or popularity. The people sang "Saul hath killed his thousands and David his 10,000" but yet he was unable to enjoy it all because of his constant flight from Saul. Now at a very important moment in his life he looks back over his long journey from a shepherd boy, harp player to the king, fugitive and slayer of Goliath and gives God the glory and the praise. The thoughts of this psalm are repeated in II Samuel 22. Both texts repeat the same truth, that whatever accomplishments David made it was not his own doing but God's.

In explaining his praise David said God was a rock, his strength, his fortress, his deliverer, shield, horn and high tower. Whenever he need God he found him to be rock in the wilderness and a shelter in a time of storm.

What Accomplishments Have We Made?

As churches celebrate anniversaries there is a tendency to become nostalgic. We often attribute to the founding fathers, past pastors or outstanding members the credit for the successes that the church has enjoyed. While it is good to remember the veterans who helped paved the way we should always remember that they were only the instruments God has used to bring us to the journey. The real strong rock of our past and presence is God.

He has been and will be our high tower, refuge and strength.

As every church celebrates the milestones of its journey we must keep our eye focused on the nature of the challenge ahead. We may have come a long ways, but there is still along ways to go.

As long as there are lost souls the church still has work to do. As long as there are needy, spirits hungry for the word of God there is still much to be done. The accomplishments we note today should not be tombstone markers but milestones that simply note the completion of another phase of the journey.

Old Testament Rocks Types of Christ

The symbol of the rock in the Old Testament, in many instances are types of Christ. As a symbol of security and protection the writings show these rocks as prototypes of what the Christian sees in Christ.

There were times when this journey seemed impossible when this congregation cried out for leadership, inspiration and guidance.

There times of confusion and doubt, but thank God for the Rock!

Israel made a great journey from Egypt to the promised land, but in the wilderness it became thirsty and complained to Moses about having no water. When Israel complained to Moses, he talked to God and God told him to go to Horeb and there to "smite the rock and there shall water come out of it." Moses carried the people to Horeb and although he became angry and took credit for the great miracle of water God caused it to come out anyway. When there stomachs were filled the people looked back and responded in kind "Thank God for the Rock!"

When David often found himself in trouble he retreated to the rocks and hills of his homeland for safety. He wrote countless Psalms he which he said he would run to "the rock that is higher than I." In the 121 Psalms he declared: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from which cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord which made the heaven and the earth." When troubles come your way its good to know that you have the rock.

Israel drank from the rock and David hid in the rocks, but today brothers and sisters I'm glad that we can stand on the rock of salvation and not be moved.

Jesus told Peter that "thou art Peter and upon this rock I'll build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Which means that come hell or high water the church will stand because it stands on the rock.

Those who are here today can remember times when this church experienced difficulties. There were times when it looked as if the road was dark, but yet today the church still stands,because it is built on the rock.

No matter what comes your way, stick with the church.!

No matter how strong the opposition, stick with the church!

No matter how tempted you are to leave, stick with the church!

Stick with the church because God' blessing is upon it. If you stick with the church you there will be:

—Answers to spiritual questions
—Defeat for your demons

The church has survived the crusades and dark ages!

The church has survived civil wars and depression because it has the rock!

Every Christian should see to it that you have the rock, because the rock can open doors for you.

I'm reminded of the traveler who moved from city to city without ever carrying money for food. When asked why the traveler took out a large palm sized rock from his pocket and said this rock feeds him three times a day. Puzzled a friend watched as he knocked on the first door he encountered. "Madam would you give me food" he asked but "no" was his response "My cupboard's are bare and I have no food in my house." As the woman was closing the door he took out his rock and said I want to show you how to make rock soup. Her curiosity aroused the woman invited the man in and asked for his recipe. He asked for a pot of water which she prepared. Then he asked for spices and a few vegetables which she found a prepared. Then he said the recipe called for a little meat and some potatoes too. She quickly added those to the brew. After it had boiled for a while he took the rock from his pocket and washed it clean. Then ever so gently he put the rock in the pot. They talked for about an hour until she poured the both of them a big bowl of soup. She went outside and invited his friend in as well and they all were amazed at this great tasting food. Upon leaving he scoop up his rock, washed it and put it back in his pocket. Outside he looked at his friend and said "She said there was no food, but thank God for the Rock!"

I don't know about you today, but every day I say "Thank God for the Rock!"

He wakes me up in the morning and he lies me down at night, "Thank God for the rock!"

This rock is Jesus, he is the one. Be very sure your anchor holds and grips the solid rock!

Thank God for the Rock!

Thank God for the Rock!

Hung Up For Our Hangups

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 20, 1991

SCRIPTURE: "But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." Isaiah 53:5

Introduction

What's your hangup? There are two ways to describe hangups. First a hangup can be described as preoccupation or keen sensitivity to a particular persuasion. In the colloquial, it is often called a "thing." Some people have a "thing" about wearing certain colors, making their bed in a certain fashion, wearing stylish clothing, dating people of a certain color, or driving certain kinds of cars.

Some have a "thing" about tidiness, efficiency, cleanliness and a wide range of ideals that range from the simple to the sublime.

This preoccupation even involves political thought, and philosophies of life as people develop a "thing" about Democrats or a "thing" about Republicans. Their philosophy is often prefaced with the phrase "My thing". An expression of individualism is often called doing "your own thing." In this sense hangups are not bad or good they are just expressions of individual taste.

There is a second kind of hangup.

This kind of hangup refers to acts or thoughts that obstruct the smooth flow of our lives. These hangups destroy rather than build, confuse rather than explain and contribute to failure rather than success. These are the kind of hangups that snag us and force us off the right course in life. This kind of hangup can have a destructive effect upon our lives, especially if we cannot come to grips with its impact.

Sometimes our hangups cause us to transgress God's law. It is at these times that our hangups become spiritually dangerous.

When our hangups push us across that invisible line that separates right from wrong we draw the scorn of heaven and lean toward disfavor with God.

As Christians we have we have some "good" hangups. We are hungup on loving God and our fellowman. We are hungup on the goodness of God. We are always grateful for Jesus who considered our helpless state and allowed himself to be hungup for our "bad" hangups that we may enjoy the benefits of everlasting life. Because he was hung up, we are caught up, wrapped up and tangled up in the faith every day of our lives.

Exposition

This text was written several hundred years before the actions it depicts every happened. It was written by Isaiah, under the inspiration of God, to paint a prophetic picture of the nature of the life and suffering of Christ. Isaiah himself has generally been regarded as the prophet of Jerusalem. Born in the year King Uzziah died, he continued to urge Judah to repent or face the oncoming vengeance of God.

The vengeance came 150 years after he spoke these warnings as the nation of Babylon destroyed the great city, partly because of its sinful living. Isaiah himself was punished for his morbid predictions and was tied between two planks and sawn in half.

This text paints a picture of Christ suffering for our sins. Although it does not mention Christ by name, there is no other person in history that so fully met the requirements of this prophecy from its very beginning at verse one with a suggestion that he would grow up among men as a tender plant in dry ground (v1)to its conclusion at verse 12 with his crucifixion on the cross between two thieves. (v12) It continues with the notation that he was despised and rejected among men who were ashamed to own him. (v3)

The reasons for his suffering are listed beginning at verse 4. He was afflicted for our: grief, sorrow, transgressions, and iniquities. The words "grief" and "sorrow" might suggest to some that Christ was crucified because of our sadness. But the Hebrew term for griefs,"choliy" (Khal-ee), also means bodily pain. In the same sense the Hebrew term for sorrows is "makobah" (mak-o-baw) means both sadness of spirit and physical pain.

The words transgressions and iniquities in this text both refer to the sins of mankind. Isaiah therefore projects that Christ withstood physical pain originally intended for us because of our sins. In that all men are like sheep and have gone astray, the crucifixion of Christ was one universal sacrifice for the common sins of all. In essence, he was hung up for our hangups.

Hungup on Hangups

Today there are many people who are hungup on their hangups. They have difficulty overcoming lifestyles that put them at odds with Christ. Christ met the rich young ruler who would have been saved were it not for his hangup about his power and position.

Solomon, with all of his wisdom had a hangup about women and collected 300 wives and seven hundred girl friends over the course of his life.

Jezebel had a hangup about power and dominance and acted to destroy anyone who got in her way.

The wise fool had a hangup about accumulating possessions and tore down his barn to build bigger barns only to the master ask the question:" What doth it profit a man to gain to the whole world and lose his own soul."

Like these biblical examples, many today who have spiritual hangups that are keeping them from living the Christian life. Some have had bad experiences in the past and have chosen to live outside of Christ. Some are more concerned with the opinions of their friends than they are the Lord, so they refuse to accept Christ because they are ashamed.

There are some who simply do not believe there is a God, and if they do accept his existence do not believe that their obedience and worship is necessary to gain his favor. Then there is the final set of people who are caught up so tightly in their lives outside of Christ that they have little time or interest in salvation.

These four hangups have hungup generations of people but today I suggest that it is time for us to hangout the hangups. If anything stands between us and the Lord we should get rid of it. The scriptures teach that if our eye gets in the way we should pluck it out, because it is better to have one eye and be saved and have both eyes and be lost.

In the rural areas people still use the old fashion method of washing and drying clothes. Clothes lines and clothes pins are used to hang out the wash. Today maybe we need to take our sins to Jesus and let him wash them in his blood and hang them out to receive the presence of the Son held tightly in place by the clothes pins of faith and grace.

1 Corinthians 6:9 gives us a clear listing of some hangups we should rub out and washout so we can hang them out: "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived, neither fornicators nor idolaters, nor adulterers nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, thieves, nor covetous, drunkards or revilers or extortioners shall inherit the kingdom of God." We need to hang out our hangups once and for all.

Hung Up For Our Hangups

But there is a unique truth about hanging out clothes, that is just like our faith and that is: that you don't hang out dirty clothes, but only those that have been washed and rinsed and are ready for the sun.

How can you wash and clean the sins of men?

If it were simply dirty clothes we were talking about we could wash it with Tide, New Blue Cheer or Oxydol.

If there were stains we could "Shout it out." But when it's not clothes but souls that concern us, what can cleanse the souls of men.

I heard a song writer ask: "What can wash away my sins, nothing but the blood of Jesus! What can make me whole again? Nothing but the Blood of Jesus! Oh precious is the flow that makes me white as snow, no other fount I know, nothing but the blood of Jesus!"

I don't know about you but I'm glad that Jesus took the penalty for my sins out on Calvary. Sin gave me a:

--Burden but I'm glad that Jesus gave me a blessing!
--Rain but I'm glad that Jesus gave me sunshine!
--Weakness but I'm glad that Jesus gave me strength!
--Miseries but Jesus gave me Miracles
--Foolishness but Jesus gave me Wisdom
--Darkness but Jesus gave me the Light
--Cares but Jesus gave me comfort
--Losses but Jesus gave me the victory
--Sadness but Jesus gave me unspeakable joy

When Jesus died on Calvary what he told heaven is "today is Heaven's wash day. Bring me you dirty spiritual laundry and dip in the cleansing flow".

No wonder the song writer declares: "There is a fountain filled with blood that flows from Immanuel's veins, and sinners plunged beneath the flood lose all their guilt and stain."

When Jesus died on Calvary he washed out our:

--Failures and hung them out!
--Short comings and hung them out!
--Mistakes and hung them out!
--Misunderstandings and hung them out!
--Bad judgements and hung them out!

I heard Isaiah say he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities and the chastisement of our peace is upon him.

After hanging out our sins on the line of salvation I heard Jesus voice ring across the heavens' "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto me.!"

I'm so glad that Jesus lifted me!
Satan had me bound but Jesus lifted me!
I'm glad!
I'm glad!
I'm glad that Jesus lifted me!

High Rollers At The Cross

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 13, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"And they crucified him, parted his garments, casting lots: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, they parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots." Matt. 27:35

Introduction

How often do you take chances? Americans are fascinated with the prospect of gaining something for nothing and indulge in a wide range of speculative ventures from the stock market to street corner dice games. We enjoy taking chances!

In 1865 Mark Twain wrote a story called the "Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County" in which he described a character that was a betting man. He fact he'd bet so much that if he saw two birds sitting on a fence, he would bet you which one would fly away first. In the depression era Black people devised ghetto lotteries call the "numbers" and many placed their hopes on hitting the right number as they used every number they could think of from numbers in the bible to telephone numbers to hit the jackpot.

They put Blacks in jail then, but today the government does the same thing, under the guise of supporting a good cause.

Today people bet on horses and dogs that race, chickens that fight, rats that run, frogs that jump, football, basketball, fights and wrestling matches. We bet on who will win, who will lose and how much they will lose by. Churches promote bingo, clubs promote raffles and governments promote casino gambling as a way of raising revenue. We enjoy taking chances!

While there are many people who take chances with their money, there are some who are taking chances with their souls. These are the ones who put off making a change in their lives until another time. They take a chance that they have time. They play Russian Roulette with their souls and gamble that they can make a change before their time ends.

As Christians we recognize that God has given us two chances. Most of us botched up our first chance taking chances. We are happy though because God gave us a second chance, which was a sure thing. Now we sing with great joy: "Follow Jesus, take no chance in getting lost" because we know our salvation is secure.

Exposition

This text considers the soldiers at the cross of Jesus as they cast lots to decide who would receive his robe. Traditionally, it has been thought that the soldiers gambled for the robe in the sense of modern explanations of "shooting dice." Howver, casting lots had a different, almost spiritual, meaning in biblical times even for those who were not Christians.

There were three ways that the ancients sought to learn the will of the gods, through: dreams, prophets and the casting of lots. It was believed that whenever God spoke to man it would be revealed in his dreams as with Nebuchadnezzar's dream of a great statue; or through prophets, such as Daniel and others who were used as instruments to send a message to mankind. The way final God spoke was through the casting of lots. The highpriests carried a special set of lots called Urim and Thummim (Ex. 28:30) which they used to ask God's will on difficult matters.

When they sought to identify criminals both the Gentiles and the Jews had a practice of casting lots to consult the gods.Jonah tried to hide on a Phoenecian ship and when the storm broke out they cast lots to identify the person who caused the storm. Lots were cast to make appointments. Many times the ancients have cast lots to learn the will of God regarding appointments. When a vacancy was created among the apostles because of the suicide and treason of Judas, they prayed and cast lots to choose Matthias the newest member (Acts 1:26). Lots were used to divide property. When Israel came into the promised land Joshua cast lots by divine order to decide how the promised land would be divided among the tribes (Jos. 13:6)

The soldiers at the cross, one of whom had expressed his faith that Jesus was the Son of God, wanted his robe. They cast lots to determine the will of the gods as to ownership.

Taking Chances

How can you discover God's will for your life? Is it as simple as a roll of the dice, consulting your horoscope or a palm readers projection of your fortune? When Israel wanted to know the will of god they prayed and cast lots. Today people are rolling the dice of fate but it is not to ask God's advice. Many are staking their futures on the chance that they can live recklessly but still straigten up in time to gain God's favor.

Those who try to live outside of Christ take a terrible chance with their souls. They gamble with the devil without considering that he always plays with loaded dice, stacked decks, and marked cards. Those who cheat on their husbands or wives take a chance that they will not be caught. Those who steal from supermarkets, buy hot merchandise, or give a false witness against their neighbor take chances. Those who choose to ignore the teachings of the savior about the reality of hell's fire, take a chance. Those who choose to believe that the bible has been tampered with and that its truths are questionable, take a terrible chance with their souls.

Then there are those who are waiting until they have had all the "fun" they can have before they give their lives to God. These are the ones who say there is one more party, one more drink and one more fling I need to make before I come to Christ. They are like the eagle that saw a piece of meat floating ontop of a chunk of ice. The eagle swooped down and began to eat the piece of meat. He noticed that the chunk of ice was floating toward a water fall but the eagle did not fly away because he summized that "I have time." Little did he notice that the longer he sat, his talons became imbedded in the ice. Just as the ice began to go over the side, the mighty eagle tried to flex his wings only to learn that he was hopelessly stuck. He had waited too late. No wonder the songwriter then writes: "Don't wait too late before you get your household straight, the Lord is coming back real soon. If you hesitate it might just be too late, won't you be ready when Jesus comes."

Getting A Second Chance

The soldiers at the cross stood at the feet of the cross. They rolled dice to find out which of them would have his robe, but none of them wanted Jesus.

There are many who are taking a chance that they can make it without the Lord. But I heard a song writer declare: "I don't know what I'd do without the Lord. I can't even raise my hand without the Lord. I can't even say my prayers without the Lord!"

Somebody has taken a chance on the world but found that when they play poker with the devil they always get a losing hand. We need to be careful to avoid taking chances with sin. If we give sin a chance it will take your:

--Love and give you hate; Joy and give you sorrow

--Comfort and give you pain; Peace and give you confusion

--Hope and give you desperation; Virtue and give you vice

--Blessings and give you burdens; Light and give you darkness

--Friends and give you enemies; Life and give you death

If you have been taking chances but have somehow missed the mark, there is a way to get a second chance.

This second chance is not a gamble because the odds are all in your favor.

This second chance is not a speculation because you don't have to guess, you know what the end will be.

Romans 10:9 reminds us that: "if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."

If you want a second chance come to Jesus!

A jailer found the lord at midnight and asked Paul and Silas what must I do to be saved. In the middle of the jail, that jailer received a second chance!

The woman at the well received a second chance and ran telling the world, come see a man who told me all I've ever done!

The blind man received a second chance and must have told the world in the words of Dr. Watts: "Amazing Grace how sweet the sound that saved a wretch like me. I was lost but now I'm found, blind but now I see!"

When Jesus gives you a second chance he takes your:

--Anxiety and turns it into assurance! Blessed assurance Jesus is mine oh what a foretaste of glory divine!

--Despair and turns it into hope!

--Sorrow and turns it into joy!

--Pride and turns it into humility!

--Frustration and turns it into patience

--Sins and washes them away

--Despisements and turns them into love!

No wonder the song writer could declare: "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore, very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more, but the master of the sea heard my despairing cry and from the water lifted me now safe I am I"

Love lifted me! When nothing else could help Love lifted Me!

We have a second chance because Jesus took our failed first chance and carried it to calvary!

I'm glad that God gave me a second chance!

No. 361-Men's Day

God's Mountain Men

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Piney Grove Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 6, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"Now therefore give me this mountain.." Joshua 14:12

Introduction

What do you think of when you think of mountain men? The first images that usually come to mind are those rough and rugged looking characters we have read about in American Folklore. These were such men as Grizzly Adams and Jeremiah Johnson. They were rugged men who spent their entire lives living in the mountains. They learned to survive in the mountains and to adjust their lifestyles to the peculiar demands of the mountain.

In biblical times mountain men were common. Entire clans lived in the mountains. It was not unusual for men to leave their homes for days as they climbed mountains to herd sheep, pitch their tents or just search them out of curosity. Mountains were often scaled to make sacrifices. They were familiar sites of worship. Sometimes the people that lived on the mountains were safer than those on the ground, because the mountain provided them with protection from enemies. In biblical times, therefore, Mountain men were common.

Today, there are not many mountain men left, especially of the type of Grizzly Adams. They are a rare breed that has diminished in number with every generation. As modern technology takes over the desire and skills for mountain living have also deminished. If you can find a mountain man today, he will be a rarity.

While there may not be many mountain men today in the physical sense, if mountains represent the obstacles and troubles that we face in life, God still has mountain men. For every mountain there is a mountain man. For every trouble, God has a solution. For every problem God has a solution.

As Christians we are faced with many obstacles in life. Sometimes these obstacles seem very difficult. We should remember, however, that no matter what mountain we face, God has a man for every mountain who is able to lead to a great victory in his name.

Exposition

This text considers Caleb as he stakes a claim for a piece of ground that was promised him when he was young. The Israelites, now having passed over Jordan were in the process of dividing up the land. As each tribe was given its particular stake in the promised land Caleb, although at the age of 85, insisted on being given a mountain for his inheritance.

The younger men thought it was foolish of him to request a mountain at his age because it would be difficult to settle and would require much more energy and strength than Caleb would have to give. However, Caleb was not intimidated by the size of the challenge he simply insisted repeatedly "Give me this mountain."

His request was a statement of his personal faith in God's ability to deliver, protect and save him from harm. The size of the challenge did not bother him. He wanted to claim that which was rightfully his.

Three Mountains for Black Men

In the spirit of this text Black men today face three peculiar mountains which represent the challenge before our people. Like Caleb, we should not run from the size of the mountains but rather we should claim them and tame them so they can be used to our advantage:

Moses-Mountain of Survival

Moses was a great Mountain man. On Mount Sinai he talked to God and received instructions about challenging the physical and institutional slavery of the Jewish people. It was a challenge because Egypt was a great power of the world. Its military arsenals were packed and its might chariots, 600 in number, had been used to destroy many armies. Moses went to free them from slavery and bring them to the promised land. That was a tall order for one stuttering man and his brother to accomplish. But despite the difficulty of this problem, God had a man. If there is a mountain, God has a man!

We face a similar mountain. Our race is the subject of national genocide attempts by our government. Drs. Nathan and Julia Hare have detailed in their book "The Endangered Black Family" how the government is working to destroy the Black man through a plethora of institutionlized steps that will lead to smaller Black families, sterlization of Black women, and denigration of the Black man. The fact that it is a government plan may surprise many, but it is not unique. When Pharaoh considered the growing size of the Jews he set out on a course to destroy all the boys to rid them of future warriors. Herod tried to kill all Jewish children under two years old to stop the rise of the prophesied king. So there is biblical precedent for such practices. Today, Black men are victim of a system that is designed to destroy them through unemployment, ignorance, jail, miseducation.

Aware of this delimma our forefathers devised many plans to counter the plots to destroy our people. They worked to develop the boys and promoted boy building programs like Boy Scouts, Junior Laymen, and other leadership activities such as Boys State and other activities. For the last 25 years or so, most churches have allowed their boy building elements to diminish. Boy Scouting only exists in Black churches. Junior Laymen, Shepherd Boys Trail Blazer, Ambassadors or other leadership programs are none existent in many of our churches. These are the same churches that promote finer womanhood through Young Matrons, Mission Circles, Red Circles and Young Women's Auxiliaries. Today there are many young women's groups but little effort or money is spent on the men.

This is a great mountain we face. Countering the conspiracy to destroy our men folk is a great challenge but we should rise to the challenge and resolve like Caleb "Give me this mountain!"

Noah-Mountain of Family Building

After the flood Noah found that the ark he rode for almost a year had settled on Mount Aaarat. With the flood waters gone along with the population of the earth, Noah found himself facing the challenge of becoming a mountain man.

With his small family he repopulated the world and kept his family focused on God.

The destruction of the Black family is a mountain for our people. Central to that destruction is the destortion of the image of the Black man. The Black man is presented to the world as a shiftless, lazy, ignorant, sex machine that is incapable of making decisions, or long term commitments. That image, presented to a generation of boys serves as their role model. Gradually, the boys grow up to imitate their mothers because mothers are the visible role model that are present for them to see. They grow up looking for a woman to pay their bills, take care of them and provide for them. They perceive religion as the woman's role. As children, they often so mother go to church and read the bible and in their minds they accepted religion and faith as something peculiar to women.

Complicating the problem is the message that many women are giving their daughters. It is best characterized as the "Parachute" mentality. This is the suggestion that women should go into relationships prepared to bailout. Some mothers tell their daughters to "keep you some money on the side and don't let him know what you have." Combined with other advice, some mothers contribute the destruction of the future family by the very advice that give.

The destruction of the Black family, especially as it relates to our men folk is a mountain. But if there is a mountain, God has a man. Today men must rise to the occasion and reclaim our families and encourage our boys to emulate the best among as they provide for their families. It is a great mountain, but it is not too great for mountain men.

Elijah-Reclaim Past Glory

Elijah was a mountain man. He was a tower of strength as he challenged the prophets of Baal on Mt. Carmel. His victory there was unquestioned and his influence was broad. But soon after Mt. Carmel, Elijah lost his confidence and hid from the king under a Juniper tree. God sustained him for a while in his retreat but soon God had to cut off his food supply to prod him to move again.

Often we suffer the same delimma. Black men who have survived slavery and depressions and wars in mountain top experiences are now under Juniper trees in retreat. We who built the periods in Egypt and pioneer the intricacies of medicine, embalming and mathematics, have given into the myth that we cannot succeed.

Our challenge is to reclaim our lost glory and come back to the mountain. If there is a mountain, God has a man!

Jesus and Mount Calvary

But there is one final mountain man that every Black man should consider and that is Jesus, the ultimate mountain man. Jesus was a mountain man!

When he began his ministry he went in the wilderness for 40 days and night and Satan carried him into a high mountain and showed him the world, but his response was "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."

When the world pressed him too hard he often went up into mountains to pray.

One evening 2,000 years ago he climbed a mountain called Calvary carrying the sins of the world on his shoulder. The next morning he rose from the grave and 40 days later he stood on a mountain and ascended to his father.

The Lord needs some mountain men today!

He needs men who will claim the challenge and will rise to the occasion.

Will you be among those who respond:

"If the Lord needs somebody, send me!"

Let The Good Times Roll

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 6, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"Let us eat and drink for tomorrow we shall die .." Isaiah 22:13

Introduction

What is a good time? It means different things to different people. If you think not, consider the boy and the grandfather that went to the amusement park together. They road the roller coaster around curves and peaks. Next they twisted and turned in barrels, splashed into ponds of water, bumped cars, dropped 200 feet in parachutes, screamed and yelled as a swinging pirate ship soared 100 feet in the air, gasped for breath on the double ferris wheel and were flattened in space age style flying saucer. As the day ended the boy told his grandfather who was aching from head to foot, "Boy we had a good time, didn't we grandpa?" The grandfather dragged himself to a nearby bench and eased himself down for the first time that day. When he was off his feet the grandfather felt the comfort of the bench and said "Now that's a good time!"

Whether an activity is a "good time" is relative. One man's good time is another man's misery. One thinks fishing is a good time and another thinks its a waste of time. One thinks spending an evening skating is a good time. While another thinks skating through the mall and spending is a good time.

There are some who speed through life in their search for new thrills and chills. They relentlessly hunt the "goodtimes" and live as if there will be no tomorrow. Often they squander their health, wealth and opportunity in their search for the "goodtimes."

Christians know there will be a tomorrow. We live temperate lives of moderation because we may not know what the future holds, but we know who holds the future. We live the "good life" and experience the "good times" every day of our life. When we see our family, home, and personal life as a Christian we thank God for the "Goodtimes."

Exposition

This text considers Isaiah as he spoke to Judah about its sinful lifestyle despite dangerous times. His challenge to Judah was to turn to God, but instead the people chose to lead lives of revelry and Godliness.

Judah had watched for months as the approaching armies of the Assyrians surrounded the city of Jerusalem. The combined armies of Assyria assisted by the Medes and Persians had converged on the city of Jerusalem and had surrounded the city. People ran to the rooftops to behold the site of the invading armies camped in the horizon. They had depended heavily on their alliances with the Black nations of Egypt and Ethiopia to help them, but received word that both of their allies had been destroyed by the armies of Sennacherib (Isaiah 20). They knew that there was no help coming. With no way to escape, many people in Jerusalem assumed that they had no hope of escape and no future. Instead of turning to God they began to party, feast and have a general good time. As Isaiah walked the streets urging them to turn to God for he could deliver them, the people ignored him and danced and partied for days. The attitude they assumed is reflected in this text verse: "Eat and drink for tommorrow we die!"

Their actions were based on their conclusion that life, as they saw it, was hopeless. The only recourse they saw available to them was to "have a good time now because there won't be another chance to enjoy life later". However, God held them to account for their actions. In verse 14 God told them, through the lips of Isaiah, that their sins would be held against them until their dying day. The large armies were soon after scattered by the hand of God without the lost of a single Jewish soldier in battle. When the enemy fled the people saw the foolishness of their ways and were embarassed. They ignored God and focused on themselves and fell into sin.

Living Without Hope

Today there are millions of people who share the sentiments of the people of Judah.

They witness the frustrations of this life and conclude that it is hopeless to anticipate anything but disaster for the future. They reason that if we escape the threat of nuclear war with the Soviet Union that we will be destroyed by AIDS, which is finding its way into the bloodstreams of people who have never lived a deviant lifestyle. They see starvation disease, homelessness, pollution, and environmental disasters all around. Those unmoved by those prospects see the earth's destruction as the ozone layer that protects it from the sun is destroyed daily by our insistence on using products that weaken this protective shield.

Still others are frustrated at their own inability to pull things together. When unemployment hits, bills increase, personal problems multiply and trouble seems to surround them on every side they conclude that it is hopeless to struggle because destruction is coming. In this situation they respond Like the South Louisiana Cajuns who party constantly saying: "Let the Good Times Roll!" South Louisiana is known around the world for its parties with the biggest coming each year on Fat Tuesday as they get as drunk as they can get in wild parties that last until the midnight bell rings in Ash Wednesday.

There are some today whose lifestyle suggest that they have adopted this attitude about life. They seek the goodtimes. These are those who run from party to party, bar to bar and even many travel miles to attend the next blowout. They have adopted the Budweiser philosophy of life "You only go through life once, so grab all the gusto you can!"

This is the attitude that many have assumed: "Let the Good times roll!"

—I'm young, I have plenty of time, let the good times roll!

—Why deny myself the pleasures of life, let the good times roll!

When I let the goodtimes roll:

—The lights will burn brighter, and the music will play louder.

—Laughter will ring out harder and the excitement will raise higher

The voice of God cries out "come home" but it cannot be heard because the world is chillin', illn' and yelling "Pump up the volume!" Let the goodtimes roll!

Despite the wantomness of our times the word of God still cries out: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man loves the world love of the father is not in him..." (1 John 2:15)

The goodtimes that this world offers seem right to man but God still frowns on it. Proverbs 14:12-14 says "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death. Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful; and the end of that mirth is heaviness. The backslider in heart shall be filled with his own ways.."

The Goodtimes

The unsaved seek the goodtime because they are frustrated and hopeless, but the saved live a good life because they are just the opposite. Instead of being hopeless, those who know the Lord have hope.

Those who know the Lord don't live as if there will be no tommorow because we know there is a bright side somewhere. We have the assurance that despite the difficulties of the moment that "our God is able to deliver us."

A certain man had two sons and the younger of them said to his father "give me my portion of the inheritance." Once given his inheritance he went to a far country and enjoyed what he thought were the goodtimes.

But as he spent his money and used up his high priced popularity he found that without God his:

—Hope turns into despair and Joy turns into sorrow

—Love turns to lust and delight turns into disappointment

—Faith turns futility and Confidence turns into confusion —Comfort turns into calamity and Virtue turns into vice —Blessings turn into cursings and beauty turns into ugliness

He came to his father declaring: "I wandered far away from God, now I'm coming home, too long the paths of sin I've trod, now I'm coming home"

When a lost soul comes back to God there is a celebration in heaven. Like the father who told his servants to kill the fatted calf and bring out his best robe, there is a celebration on the way!

If you want to have a "real" good time then you need to Jesus. He's planning a good time for all the Saint's and his invitation is universal "any man who will, let him come!"

When you let the goodtimes roll it makes you:

—A Loser, but Jesus can make you a winner

—A Slave, but Jesus can set you free

—Poor, but Jesus can give you an abundant life.

I don't know about you but I've found out there is nobody like Jesus! He is a:

—A table that can never be bare

—A fountain that can never run dry

—A rock that can never be moved

—A shield that can never be penetrated

—A Blessing that can never be cut off

—A Way that can be made out of no way

I'm glad that he died for my sins and rose early Sunday morning.

I'm glad that he's coming back again!

When he comes back to call us to Glory, I want to be there to hear the heavenly command "Let the good times roll!"

What a time!

What a time!

What a Time!

A More Excellent Way

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
September 22, 1991

SCRIPTURE: "Oh Lord our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth!" Psalms 8."But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way." 1 Cor. 12:31

Introduction

How many ways can you say great? Every generation has its way of describing its best. They range from the obvious to the ludicrous.There was a time when students called stylish clothing "boss." If it really stood out and caught everyone's eye it was "out of sight." An idea or song that was unusually stimulating was "heavy." "Cool" described young men who were abreast of the times. Those who really had it together were "groovy." If a party, social gathering or any type of entertainment was a success it was "live."

Recently a movie caught the imagination of many young people and introduced a new terminology. The movie, Bill and Ted's Excellent adventure, found the stars describing every stimulating experience as either "Excellent","Bodacious", or "Radical." The expression "excellent" spread like wild fire. It is still being used by young people as a synonym for everything that is heavy, live, out of sight, boss, groovy and cool. If it's great it's excellent!

What term can we use to describe the greatness of God?

How can we describe the Christian life style to others who may not know it? The Bible gives us one answer for both questions: "Excellent!" Psalms 8 expresses the excellency of God. 1 Corinthians 12:31 describes the Christian life as "more excellent" than an other.

As Christians we know that there is but one way to describe our God and our experience in the faith. It is rewarding, fulfilling and satisfying. In short, the Christian life is just "Excellent!"

Exposition

These two text verses express the greatness of God.

They also point to the greatness of following God and exercising the gifts we have as believers in Christ Jesus.

The greatness of God enthralled David.

He observed his handiwork and was amazed at his omnipotence. He was awed by his power and marveled at why God would even consider man to play such an important role in the universal order. In comparison to the immensity of the universe man appears to play such a small part, but God chose to make him "a little lower than the angels."

As David considered God's greatness he could only say "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; What is man that thou art mindful of him.." With his analysis of God's work complete David concluded that God is simply amazing and in both verse 1 and verse 9 of Psalms eight declared "How excellent is thy name in all the earth."

Paul, writing to the Corinthians, talked them about the gifts of the spirit and how they empower Christians to live a profitable and fruitful life. Whatever gifts Christians we have come from God. While there are many talents and endowments that each person has, he listed several spiritual gifts that should be sought by Christians. Among them are: Wisdom, knowledge, faith, healings, working of miracles, prophecy, discerning spirits, and tongues. These gifts help us to glorify his name. He urged Christians to strive to attain God's best gifts, apply them and live more abundantly.

Paul's teaching about the Christian lifestyle is simple. It is a life of love, happiness and respect for an all powerful God.

It is one that acknowledges the excellency of God's power.

It is also a lifestyle that prompts all of us to seek the best gifts of the spirit that we can acquire to help us to live the Christian life. Doing so will help us to find what he described as a "A More Excellent way."

Striving For Excellence

Among the many challenges that youth face today is the challenge to pursue excellence. Excellence is a level of achievement that is above just passing, barely getting by or "getting it over with." Excellence is a thirst to climb higher and to do better despite setbacks or obstacles in your way.

Often, many youth have only inklings of their potential. They don't know what they want to be or where they want to go. Repeated failures have frustrated some in their attempts to strive for higher goals.

History tells the story of a little boy who wanted to achieve excellence and never gave up, although others gave up on him. This little boy was slow to learn. He was slow in everything including learning to talk that his parents thought he was abnormal. In school his teachers called him a misfit and categorized him as studen doomed to failure. The boy kept trying, with almost no help from anyone he pulled from energies on the inside and tried continuously to achieve excellence. After finally graduating from high school he tried to enter college and flunked his first entrance exam. A year later this young man tried again and passed. From that point forward is history. He went on to unveil his theory of relativity, and give the formulas that help create the atomic bomb. He became known as the world's greatest scientist. His name was Albert Einstein. He accepted the challenge of excellence.

There are thousands of people like professor Einstein.

Joseph Johnson, publisher of Ebony magazine faced unbelievable odds when he set out to start his first magazine but he strived to achieve excellence.

Frederick Douglas could neither read nor write as a slave but became a statesman, ambassador and advisor to presidents.

Wilma Rudolph came from a poor background and overcame racial prejudice, and poverty to become a famous Olympic champion.

The one common denominator of all of those who succeeded in life was their thirst for excellence. They wanted to be the best.

Paul, writing to the Corinthians, urged them to consider the many gifts that God made available to them and seek the "best gifts." In a similar sense the message to young people today is the same: seek to use your gift to be the best. Aspire to excellence! Whether that talent is singing, art, creative dance, music, athletics, academics, writing or the dexterity of manual skills, strive to achieve the best with whatever talents who have.

Our Gifts Come from An Excellent God

Christians aspire to excellence because, more than other people, we know what we have, comes from an excellent God. Our God expects our best. He does not want more from us than we are able to give, only our best. That's why the song writer declares "Give of your best to the master, give of the strength of your youth, clad in salvation's full armor, join in the battle for truth."

God knows what you are able to do, but he won't except anything less than your best. Cain and Abel both brought sacrifices before the Lord. God accepted Abel's sacrifice and Cain became jealous and killed him. God wanted Cain's best too, but what he got was mediocrity. Likewise there are many students on campus and in the community that are jealous of the efforts of Christian youth to achieve. Like Abel, you are striving to give God a living sacrifice, but others are jealous. Many call you names because you don't wear an earring in your ear, drink, smoke dope, curse or participate in the foolishness that sometimes takes place in the classroom. If you do well in class their jealously makes them call you a variety of names that all mean "nerd","square", or "oddball."

To you who are striving to give God your best, and become frustrated along the way, we remind you to "be not dismayed, whateve' betide, God will take care of you. Beneath his wings of love abide, God will take care of you. Through every day, over all the way, he will take care of you."

He will take care of us because "we are our heavenly father's children ...and he knows just how much we can bear."

When the world:

--Kicks you down, the excellence of God will, pick you up!

--Ties your hands, the excellence of God will, set you free!

--Tries to defeat you, the excellence of God, will give you victory! victory!

--Only gives your criticism, the excellence of God, will give you praise!

--Doubt, the excellence of God will give you confidence!

When the world talks about your roach stompers and laughs because you can't fly high in "Air Jordans" tell them "I serve an excellent God who told me I don't need Air Jordans to fly high because 'One glad morning when this life is over, I'll fly away!"

I don't know about you but I've decided to give God my best because he is the epitome of excellence!

The song writer declared: "Great is thy faithfulness. Great is thy faithfulness. Morning by morning new mercies I see. All I have needed thy hands have provided, great is thy faithfulness, Lord unto me."

The Lord has been good to us. There is no:

--Valley that's too wide for him to cross, he's just excellent!

--Road that's too rough for him to walk, he's just excellent!

--Burden that's too heavy for him to bear, he's just excellent!

--Storm that's too mighty for him to control, he's just excellent!

He's so excellent that there is:

--Problem he can't solve, or Night he can't turn into day!

--Question he can't answer, or lost joy he can't restore!

--Mountain so big that he can't move it, or battle he can't win!

No wonder the song writer declares: "Oh Lord my God, as I in awesome wonder, consider all the worlds thy hands hath made. I see the stars. I hear the rolling the thunder and marvel at the universe displayed. Then sings my soul, my savior God to thee, how great thou art! How great thou art!"

Many people call his greatness by many names. Some call it wonderful, others call it amazing. Some call it unbelievable others call it miraculous. But those who know the Lord call him Jesus!

When you say Jesus, it means help in a time of trouble

When you say Jesus, it means strength in a time of weakness

When you say Jesus, it means joy in a time of sorrow!

"Oh Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth!"

You're so excellent that one evening you took an old rugged cross and went to Calvary!

You're so excellent that you died for my sins!

You're so excellent that early Sunday morning you rose up with all power in your hands!

Passing On Condition

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 28, 1976

SCRIPTURE:"And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, See, I have set thee over the land of Egypt. And Pharaoh took off his ring from his hand, and arrayed him in vestures of linen, and put a gold chain about his neck.." Genesis 41:41-42

Introduction

How do you get from one grade to another in school? If you ask some students they will say do nothing, and you will pass "on condition" What's "pass on condition?" That's when you get promoted because you are too old or too well known to stay in the same grade.
Social promotion is a common occurence in modern public schools. Some youth spend an entire year in a grade level and fail every step of the way. However, at the end of the year they are promoted to the next grade right along with other students who have worked hard. Others are promoted because of their social status. It would be unthinkable for the children of prominent families to repeat a grade so they are passed on "social" conditions.

Crowded conditions also prompt social promotion. If students stay in the same grade too long there is no room for others who are coming into that same grade level. Some schools have reported students as old as 17 years on in the seventh grade. Social promotion is used to eliminate what educators call the middle school bottle neck. Resultingly these changes have contributed to an attitude among many youth that they need not work because they will pass on condition.

What does it take to promote in the Kingdom of God? What is required to receive the blessing of heaven? Some think the Kingdom of God is like school, all we have to do is be present and promote on the condition of age. Some youth see the advancements that make from one class to another in Sunday School, without a test or a recitation and think that gaining entry into the kingdom of God is obtainable "on condition" that of their preseverance.

As Christians, we know that our Salvation is free, but it is not available without certain conditions. The most prominent of those conditions is that we accept Jesus Christ as our Lord and Savior and repent for our sins.

Exposition

This text considers Joseph, a favorite son of Jacob. As a youth Joseph had dreams of being in high places of authority and power. His dream pictured his brothers and humbling themselves before him. He often told his brothers about his dreams and it angered them. They devised a plan to kill him and end his persistent talk about excelling over them. He was put into a pit and his brothers told his father that he was killed by a wild animal.

Joseph began a jaggered rise to success. Sometimes he rose sometimes he fell. In the pit Joseph reached a low point in his life. He was rejected by his brethern, alone and abandoned. But he was soon sold to some traveling merchants who carried him to Egypt. In Egypt he was promoted to head of a household's servants. He refused to compromise his integrity no matter how he was falsely accused of sexual improprieties and was jailed wrongly. He made a step up, then was knocked back.

In jail he rose to prominence as well. He was given charge over the other prisoners and so well liked that he was trusted beyond measure by the keeper of the prison because the keeper perceived that God was with Joseph. In prison he interpreted the dreams of fellow inmates and those dreams ultimately came true.

When one inmate he helped became free and was in the presence of the Pharoah, he told him about Joseph. He told of Joseph's amazing gift to interpret dreams and the King was so impressed with David's abilities that he was given a high place in the king. He was promoted from the dungeon to a palace in a moment.

The uniqueness of Joseph's rapid rise is that in each instance he did not ask for any promotions. He did not seek to rise high or to gain pominence, it came as a result of his work. He had proven himself to be a man that could be trusted to do a job well. He also was promoted because people, like the jailer, were able to see that God was working through him to do a great work and they went far beyond their normal responses to help him in the work.

What does it take to Pass?

What does it take to pass God's spiritual inspection? The example of Joseph suggests that today if we expect to pass it must be on the condition of our faith, service and dependence on God.

Joseph gave his all in every area of service. Although he was jailed for it, he gave his best while in the service of his master. When in jail he served so well that he was entrusted to lead other prisoners as a trustee. There is no place in God's service for those who would give God second best. Choir members who sing "somtimes" and ushers who rarely attend worship are but two examples of people who give lackluster service. God's needs our best service. If we pass inspection, it will be because we had faith and gave good service. James reminds every Christian that faith without works is dead.

Joseph depended heavily on God and so should we. Here was a young man who was deluged by a mountain of setbacks. Thrown into a pit, sold into slavery, falsely accused, and jailed unjustly. Everything seemed to go wrong for him. It appeared that he was failing on every hand. Yet, through it all he continued to count on God. He had faith in God and God came through for him. Likewise we should have faith in God, for it is such faith that helps us to endure hardships.

Every person endures hardships that often feel as great as those of Joseph, but we should all keep the faith. Through all of our trouble we should remember that people who maintain their virtue find that man will recognize it in the end and it will bring them honor. Without an abiding faith in God it will soon appear that your:

—Burdens outweigh your blessings
—Troubles outnumber your triumphs
—Sorrows out last your joys
—Perplexities out distance your peace —Weaknesses Out Measure your strength
—Failures out range your successes —Disappointments out live your delights

If you depend on the Lord you may be in the darkest pit but he will hear your cry!

You may in the loneliest jail, but he will hear the meditations of your heart and jail cells will open for you!

I heard a song writer declare: "We are our heavenly father's children and ...he knows, yes he knows, just how much we can bear!"

God Wants To Promote Us

I am convinced that God wants to promote someone today. He wants to elevate some to a new level of living, thinking and existing. He wants to promote someone from:

—Failure to success
—Being down to standing on their feet —Going backward to walking forward —Slipping in the dark to walking in the light —Sadness into gladness
—Pity into Glory

God will promote you on condition that you believe in Jesus, confess your sins and repent, be baptized then go and sin no more.

I don't know about you but I think I want to pass God's inspection!

I want to move up a little higher every day and get closer to the promised land. No wonder the song writer declares: "I'm pressing on the upward way, new heights I'm gaining every day. Still praying as I'm onward ground, Lord plant my feet on higher ground!"

Higher! So high that the world can't do me no harm!

Higher! So high that I leave my troubles behind

Lord lift me up and let me stand, plant my feet on heaven's table land, A higher plane than I have found, Lord plant my feet on higher ground!

Holding Up Heavy Hands

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 15, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"But Moses hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun." Exodus 17:12

Introduction

How do you get the strength to continue when your load is heavy? Strength to bear the load is one great benefit of the Christian life. When it appears that we have exhausted our means God sends us a little help to bear the load. Often we are not aware of the source of that help when it comes, but inside we know all good things come from God.

The story of the widow woman's waving hand emphasizes this truth. It appears that a certain widow learned that king was giving audiences to his subjects and granting their request in a very unusual act of charity. The king announced that he would scan the audience and select from the raised hands subjects to hear and reward. The old lady waved her hand but being old and feeble was lost in the crowd and out of the sight of the king. As the day wore on the king rewarded hundreds of people but did not see the widows hand. She waved it from sun up until the evening closed. As the crowds began to disperse the king saw the widow woman still sitting by herself waving her hand. He asked how she was able to wave her hand so long. The woman responded: "In the morning I said 'Lord hold my hand, while I run this race." At noon I tired and said "Lord lift me up and let me stand.' But when the evening came I cried out "Father I stretch my hand to thee.' Every time I cried out, I got a little help holding up my hand." Her great faith impressed the king so much that he granted her request for food and shelter for the rest of her life.

In this life God has his way of helping us hold up our hands, heads and spirits until we realize the great blessings he has in store for us. If your burden seems unusually heavy, call out to God and he will answer. If it appears that all your efforts are in vain, just keep waving an optimistic hand, and the Lord will help you carry the Lord.

Exposition

Our text considers Moses in the wilderness as Israel begins the first of five wars it would fight on the journey to the promised land. Moses, almost eighty years old, tried to lead the people to the promised land but complaints from Israel within and enemies without slowed his pace. In this text Moses encounters the Amalekites and Israel engages them in war. Perched atop a high mountain Moses held high his hands and his rod, a symbol of the presence of God. As long as Moses was able to hold his hands high the people, led by Joshua were victorious in battle. When his hands came down, Israel suffered losses.

Realizing that the fate of Israel depended heavily upon Moses' ability to hold high the rod of God, Aaron and Hur came to his side. They placed stones underneath them and held his hands high until Israel had completely won its victory.

Moses learned from this experience and Numbers 11:16 records how he selected seventy men to help him carry the burden of the people. These 70 men shared the same spirit and vision as Moses. God empowered them to help him lead the people. In a similar sense the Apostles, in Acts 6, appointed the first seven deacons, and laid hands on them. They consecrated them as men dedicated to the same spirit for the expansion of the Lord's kingdom.

Whether in the old or New Testament, God has provided for men of the same spirit to help hold up the hands of those who proclaim his word. In the Old Testament Moses held up the rod of deliverance. In the New Testament the Church holds high the cross of Jesus. In the old testament they fought as long as they could see the rod. In the new, every Saint wants to Jesus and the vision of hope. Those who help him, do a great work because "without a vision, the people perish."

The Deacon's Service

What is the role of the deacon? The deacon is a servant of God, the church, and his pastor. The Greek word diakonos means "servant" and accurately describes both the minister and the deacon. His service, like that of the first seven deacons, is to give the pastor relief from attention to details. This gives him more time to study, pray, and carry out the full vision that God has given him.

Moses tried to lead Israel without any help at the offset. He soon found his hands burdened by the immense details of leadership. He wisely decided that if the people were to advance much of his responsibility would have to be delegated to others. He was dealing with several hundred thousand people and selected seventy helpers to help him in carrying out the work. They were men who shared his spirit of loyalty to God and the vision of hope. The Apostles tried to operate the three divisions of the church by themselves and soon found that they needed help. They appointed seven men to help them in carrying out their responsibilities. Both old and New Testament helpers were designated to help the leaders carry out their responsibilities.

A certain backwood preacher gave his new deacon a package on the day of their ordination. It contained a worn out pair of shoes, a worn out bible, and a box of strike anywhere matches. Puzzled, the deacon called the pastor aside after the service asked the meaning of the gifts. The preacher responded, as an ordained servant of the church your tenure will be judged in three areas: How many pair shoes you wear out visiting and serving the people, how you wear out your bible as you study and live by the word, and how much fire you bring to service.

Worn Shoes. Good deacons visit the membership regularly. They know each member assigned to them by name. They also guide the pastor to families that need or want his help in times of trouble or presence in time of celebration. Deacons wear out many pairs of shoes knocking on doors. They wear out many cars performing services for the membership. Before their tenure ends their shoes will tell the story.

Worn Prayer Books. Deacons are men who are spiritual. They support the worship of the church. They lead the church in worship in Sunday School, regular worship, prayer meeting, or whenever the church gathers to worship. The deacon seek's God divine guidance in matters in decision making and always seeks to do his will. Personally they do what they ask others to do. They receive tithes in worship, and show their faith by tithing themselves. They encourage family worship and lead by worshiping with their families. Deacons wants to do the will of God. For that reason the deacon is a bible student. He studies the word regularly and learns to rightly divide the word of truth. The worn out bibles and song books of deacons tell the story of the service.

Strike Anywhere Matches. In the simplest sense, deacons are also God's cheerleaders. They show the congregation how to sing praises to God with radiant faces. When its time to hear the word they are up front to encourage the preaching of the word. They are like strike anywhere matches, they are ready to light a fire for God anywhere, any time and any place.

However, you don't have to be a deacon to be on fire for the Lord. Anytime you:

—Listen to what is being said about him, its hard not to catch on fire.

—Observe the good the things the Lord has done for you, its hard not to catch on fire.

—Accept the great blessings that the Lord showers down on you, its hard not to catch on fire.

—Consider how good God has been to you, its hard not to catch on fire.

—Hear the the word of God declared, its hard not catch on fire.

Ezekiel said the word of God lights him up, like fire shut up his bones.

The old sisters sang a hymn when the spirit was high that said "If I can't say a word then I'll just wave my hand!"

Deacons Help The People See Jesus

Finally, brothers and Sisters the deacon does whatever is necessary to help the people see Jesus.

Moses held up the rod so that the people could see it and know that God was in their midst. When Moses hands got heavy they held up his hands, not so they could see Moses but so they could see the symbol of God's presence in his hand.

As long as Israel could see the Lord, they were able to keep on fighting. But when they couldn't see the Lord, the lost every battle.

If the modern deacon has a task today, its to hold up the pastor's arms. He holds up his arms not so the people can see the greatness of the pastor, but so the people can hear the word and see Jesus. When there is confusion and trouble its because the people can't see Jesus. When doubt and misunderstanding rises to an all time high its because the people can't see Jesus.

When you can't see Jesus:

—Tranquility becomes trouble, Composure becomes sorrow

—Courage becomes fear, Boldness becomes retreat

—Fellowships are strained and Friendships are canceled.

—Suffering becomes punishment and Inspiration becomes desperation.

—Your song becomes empty words and your prayers become meaningless ritual.

The church is in a battle against Satan and sin. We shall rise the victors because we keep our eyes on the Lord. The song writer declares: "We are soldiers in the army, we've got to fight although we've got to cry. We've got to hold up the blood stained banner, we've got to hold up until we die."

We've got to lift up Jesus because Jesus said: "And I, if I, be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

We've got to lift up Jesus because when we lift up Jesus there is:

—Light for those in darkness and Blessings for the cursed —Glory for those in gloom and Victory for those are defeated

—Hope for those in despair and Joy for those in sorrow —Strength for the weak, and Peace for those who are confused

—Healing for those who are sick, and Salvation for the Lost

Lift up Jesus so the world will know that he is the:

—Fountain of our joy, and Bread on our table

—Song of our midnight hour, Pilot of ship

—Answer for our questions, and solution to our problems

—Lawyer on our case, the doctor who never lost a patient

Lift up Jesus and show us how Jesus took an old rugged cross and turned it into a symbol of our salvation.

Lift up Jesus and tell the old story of his death on Calvary and how he rose early Sunday morning triumphant from the grave!

Lift up Jesus and let the world know that he lives!

He lives!

He lives!

The Mailman's Mission

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Zion Springs Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 14, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine." 2 Timothy 4:2

Introduction

Have you ever known a mail carrier? For many years the Black community considered the job of mail carrier a prestigious position. It was hard to get, paid well and provided good benefits. The first Blacks who became mail carriers were a source of pride for their neighbors and friends.

However well the job pays, being a mail carrier is a bit dangerous. There are vicious animals to consider such as dogs and other strange pets of their neighborhood. Weather conditions often make the mailman's job even harder. The post office motto: "Through wind, rain and snow, the mail must go" reads well but people really expect mail delivery, despite the weather. If its not dogs or the weather, then it is often the residents on the route that give the mail carrier his biggest headache. He is the bearer of good news and bad news. He is hugged and kissed when he brings good news and monthly checks. He is cursed and kicked when he delivers bad news, or the checks don't come.

The postal service has thousands of mail carriers who carry the mail in the backwoods on wagons, in swamps on boats and in Alaska on dog sleds. Wherever there are people, there is a mail carrier to serve them.

Did you know that God has a mailman? God is heaven's postmaster general and he has millions of mail carriers all over the world. These mail carriers are the ministers of the Gospel who, like the mail carrier has the job of delivering a message from heaven. Sometimes the message is encouraging and uplifting. Sometimes it reprimands us for the way we live our lives. The message, is not from the preacher, but from heaven.

As Christians, let's keep watch out for a message from heaven. Let us continue to praise the feet of them who bring us a word from the Lord, for this is truly a great work.

Exposition

This text considers the Apostle Paul as he writes a final letter of advice and support to his Son in the ministry, Timothy. Paul wrote this letter while a Roman jail awaiting execution. He was arrested by the Roman government under Emperor Nero. Nero, had a reputation as a great builder and wanted to rebuild Rome to an even greater city. To justify the expense of the undertaking he sat fire to Rome and played his fiddle as it burned. He blamed the fire on the Christians. Paul, who had been released from an earlier confinement on charges brought by the Jews, was arrested again since he was the world leader of the Christian faith that was illegal in Rome.

From his jail cell, Paul told Timothy to: 1) Accept whatever donations given him for his work in the ministry because the laborer should be a partaker of the fruits (2:6). 2) Study the word that he correctly teach the truths of God. Come what may he is encouraged to "Study to shew thyself approved a workman that needeth not be ashamed but rightly dividing the word of truth." 3) Use personal discretion in living. Paul urged young Timothy to avoid the lusts of young men but to follow "righteousness, faith, peace with them that call on the Lord with a pure heart." (2:22)

In closing comments Paul reminded young Timothy that his final responsibility was to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ. He encouraged Timothy to preach Jesus when the public wanted to hear it and when his truths become unpopular, outdated, or old fashioned, preach it "out of season." He told Timothy to preach because: "the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." (4:3-4).

Paul's encouragements to Timothy were clear and inspirational, but, without a doubt, they encouraged him to keep the faith and champion the cause of Christ.

Study The Word

The words that Paul wrote to Timothy are the same for any minister today. The minister is an ambassador for Christ, a man of God and defender of the faith. His obligation to God is to give God his best. Therefore, he should study the word.

The study of the word should not be restricted to sermon preparation alone, but should be a regular part of the prayer life of every pastor. Study aids, books and materials should be used to help in glean more truths from God's word. Such study will require considerable quality time alone with God. While most members are not aware of it, nearly every minute of the Sunday sermon reflects an hour of prayer, study and preparation. Young men in the gospel are encouraged to study the word that they may rightly divide the word of truth.

Exemplary In Deportment

Ministers are encouraged to avoid the lusts of the flesh. As ministers of the Gospel they will have many opportunities coupled with convenient excuses to walk the wrong path. Invitations to private homes will be frequent so ministers reminded to avoid sins of the flesh because they are ambassadors of Christ. Strong drink, gambling and other youthful lusts should be avoided. The minister is an ambassador for Christ.

Consequently Paul encouraged youth Timothy to be serious minded and not to become entangled in foolish activities that will later be an embarrassment to the cross. The morals of the minister should be unquestioned and should be a standard by which others can be proud.

Preach The Word

While Paul gave young Timothy many words of advice on many areas of the ministry, his final advice was to "preach the word." Then as today, the final measure of a preacher is summarized in the question "can he preach?"

He may have degrees from seminaries, colleges and universities, but one question remains: "can he preach?"

He may be a good man who raises his children well and is a kind neighbor however that nagging question will always be asked: "can he preach?"

Among Black folk the worse thing that can be said about a preacher is that he can't preach. If he can preach, he can weather any storm, overcome any opposition, withstand any criticism. However, the preacher that can't preach is doomed.

What people want to know is can he carry the mail?

The people are waiting for a message from heaven and they want to know, can he carry the mail?

God's mailman brings us news from heaven that brings us:

--Strength for the journey
--Peace during our storms
--Courage for our battles
--Deliverance from our shackles
--Solutions for our problems
--Rest for our weary souls
--Guidance for our daily walk

God's mailman has one charge and that is to preach the word! Carry the mail regardless to personal persuasions and physical conditions. Preach the word:

--When tears fill your eyes
--When burdens stoop your back
--Although trials will test your patience
--Pain will afflict your body!
--Although your valleys may seem lonely
--Although your way may seem narrow
--Although your nights may seem so dark
--Although your heart may sometimes be broken

God's mailman should tell a dying world about God's Love. Tell them that God's:

--Love is eternal and his Mercy is everlasting
--Grace is sufficient and his goodness is overflowing

--Power is omnipotent and his truth is without end

But there is a special delivery that has been delivered by express mail...

Tell them this message is not coming C.O.D. and no postage is required for 2000 years ago Jesus, my wonderful savior, paid it all!

Tell them that Jesus died on an old rugged cross, but early Sunday morning he rose from the grave with all power in his hands!

The Church That Christ Built

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Triumph Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 8, 1991

SCRIPTURE: "And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Matthew 16:18

Introduction

In the late 60's Aretha Franklin produced a very popular song entitled "The house that Jack built." It was a snappy ballard about a woman who talked about all of the material possessions she had gained since she met her husband. She pointed to her fine house, car, clothes and money with great pride. However, because of marital problems, her husband left her for another. Although he left her with every possession she owned she was sad because what really made it all enjoyable was the presence of Jack. She concluded "I got the car, clothes, and the house, but I ainÆt got Jack!"

Today there are many people who have lost sight of the fact that houses are not homes and buildings are not churches. What makes the unique character of each is the presence of love, respect and happiness. Thousands of couples every week are saving to build houses and forgetting the essentials necessary to build happy homes. Hundreds of churches are building elaborate edifices with special attention to design and detail while ignoring the spiritual tenets which transforms any group of people into a church. A home without love is just a house. A church meeting place without the love and respect of God is just a building. In cases such as these FranklinÆs words come to mind: WeÆve got the house but we ainÆt got Jack!

As churches celebrate milestones of longevity it is good sometimes to evaluate its progress not in material terms: new building, renovations, expansions, and budgets, but perhaps we would be better off to consider whether we still have "Jack." That is to consider whether the fellowship has fostered an atmosphere where GodÆs presence can be felt and his love can be shown. That measure is not quantitative but qualitative. It cannot be measured in dollars and cents but only in the growth of GodÆs spirit in the body of Christ.

As Christians, let us continue to celebrate the victories that Christ has given us along our journey. Every milestone is important. But most important to any church is that Jesus is in its midst every step of the way.

Exposition

This familiar text explores the foundation of the church. It occurred after Jesus had been teaching and preaching for a while and had asked his disciples who knew him well, what was being said of him. His question: “Whom do men say that I, the son of man am?” made some of them uncomfortable. They remarked that he was thought of as John the Baptist, Elijah or even Jermiah. After hearing the report of publicÆs opinion Jesus brought it close to home and asked “But who say ye that I am?” The truth that was revealed came from the lips of Peter who acknowledged Christ as “the Christ, the son of the living God.”

Upon this truth Christ put the pieces together to build his church. His statement “Thou art Peter and upon this rock” has been misinterpreted by some to think that Christ was building his church upon Peter. It is understandable how some religions could make that mistake since the name Peter in Greek is “Petros” which means a small rock or a piece of a rock. But the word for rock in this text is not petros but “Petra” which means a large immovable stone. Christ was building the church upon the truth of his sonship. He was building it upon himself and not Peter. Ephesians 2:20-21 expands on this truth by noting that the foundation of the church is “..built upon the foundation of the apostles, and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord.” Christ is the chief cornerstone and 1 Peter 2:5 reminds us that each member is a living stone that makes up the temple of God.

It becomes easy to see then that those who build churches of wood and stone may do a good work but that work is not essential to salvation. If there is wood and stone without the presence of Christ then the builders are faced with FranklinÆs delimma: They have the steeple, the pews, the pulpit and the parsonage, but they don't have Christ.

The Church That Man Builds

It's a good thing that the Lord didnÆt build the church on Peter. If he had it would have been subject to all of subtle shades of his personality. In one instance it would have drawn its sword to cut off the ear of sin and in another would have shrunk in cowardice denying the Lord in the face of persecution. In one moment it would boldly declare the Sonship of Christ but when wading in deep waters would find itself sinking in despair. This would be the problem of the church if it was built upon Peter or any people.

The church transcends any man. The church supercedes the mortal capacities of mere humans because it is a spiritual entity, built upon a foundation that is sure and strong.

This difference is essential because the church that God builds is different from the church that man builds. The church that man builds is a:

—MOTEL: for people just passing through on Sunday on their way to someplace else.
—VACATION SPOT: where people come only once or twice a year.
—ZOO: Where people come to watch other folk eat like hogs and act like monkeys —MUSEUM: Where people only remember "what it used to be like" and the good old days.
—FASHION SHOW: Where people come to display the latest styles and their new wardrobes —PICTURE SHOW: Where audiences sit quietly as the deacons, preacher and choir put on a show —CERAMIC SHOP: Where everyone becomes easily chipped and have to be handled with care —ICE HOUSE: Where people with cold hearts give each other the cold shoulder.
But the church the God builds is different from manÆs church. The Church that Jesus built is a:
—LIGHTHOUSE: Giving light to a dark and stormy world —HOSPITAL: Ministering to those who are sick of sin and shame
—DIVINE FLOWER SHOP: Only in the church can you find the sweet Rose of Sharon and Lily of the Valley in the same place at the same time.
—LIFE BOAT: Rescuing victims from the raging sea of life. The song writer declared:

"Tis the old ship of zion, get on board, get on board!"

—SIGN POST: Guiding the lost to the straight and narrow path. ThatÆs why thousands cry out:

"Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land. I am weak but thou art mighty, hold me in thou powerful hand"

Only One Mission

Christ had a purpose in mind when he established the church. Its purpose was not to be an ornament but to show men in a dying world that there is a loving and forgiving God. Through the church the:

—RUINED find a remedy and the CURSED find a cure!
—HURT find a healing and the BROKEN HEARTED find love!
—BURDENED find a blessing and VICTIMS find a victory!
—ANXIOUS find an answer and the GUILTY find grace!
—RUTHLESS find redemption and the DOOMED find deliverance!

—POLLUTED find a pardon and the IMMORAL find an invitation to the banquet table of the Lord!

The church that Christ built may have many parts but it only has one mission.

It may have a choir but it has only one mission!

It may have an usher board but it has only one mission!

It may have a youth department but has only one mission!

It may have a Sunday School and Training Union but it only has one mission.

That mission is the same mission which Jesus gave 2000 years ago: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost."

The Church that Christ built has one mission and that is to tell the story!

Tell them about Jesus! Tell them about Calvary!

Tell them that he died! But early Sunday morning he rose from the grave with all power in his hands!

All Power!

All Power in his hands!

When God is Holding Your Hands

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.
September 8, 1991

SCRIPTURE: "For I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand saying unto thee, fear not, I will help thee" Isaiah 41:13

Introduction

What do you do when life's journey takes you down a bumpy road? Complain? Grumble? Brace yourself for a rough ride? Perhaps you might consider Old Charlie's Answer. It seems that Old Charlie was a slave on a plantation in rural Alabama. He had the job of driving the master's wife into town each week in the family's buggy. The master's wife had studied old Charlie for a number of years and she noticed that he had a peculiar habit of holding the reins while the buggy was on a smooth section of the road but he turned the reins loose when there were bumpy sections. Finally, she decided to ask him the reason for his peculiar habit. "Charlie" she said. "I notice that you hold the reins when the wagon is on smooth ground but when the road gets bumpy you start talking to yourself and let go. What's the reason?"

Charlie answered his master's wife by saying "Well Ma'am, you see it don't take much to keep dis here team straight when the de road be smooth, just a gee and a haw. But when it gets bumpy I talks to the de lawd and then I lets him take over the lines. It may look like nobody's driving but when the road gets rough I put the reins in the lawd's hands."

When we travel the meandering paths that this life has in store for us, many have found it best to let the Lord hold the lines, especially when the road gets bumpy. Whether it is family, business, personal or community affairs, experience has taught that when the road gets bumpy its best to let the Lord hold the reins. It doesn't require much to hold the reins when the going is easy, but when times are difficult a much steadier hand is required.

As Christians, our determination should be to let the Lord hold the lines, and he will see us through, no matter how bumpy the road.

Exposition

This text considers the prophet Isaiah as he brings inspirational words of hope to Judah. Isaiah spent the bulk of his adult life extolling the dangers of continued sin by the people of Israel. He lived to witness the destruction of the Northern Kingdom by the Armies of Assyria and warned of their approaches upon the Southern Kingdom. He told Judah that Jerusalem would not be taken by the Assyrians. However he ventured far into the future and predicted the enslavement of the people and the eventual release under King Cyrus of Persia.

In this text Isaiah reminds the people that their social and economic trials may become uneasy, much like a bumpy road, but he assures them that God has no plans of abandoning them. In fact, in difficult times, God plans to strengthen them (v10), help them, and uphold them as he leads them through their varied difficulties. He promises to confound their enemies and utterly defeat them. Though their way will be rocky and difficult they are assured safe passage because God himself has promised to take them by the hand and lead them every step of the way.

Bumpy Roads Require God's Strength

The difficulties of our present time require strength. No matter how strong we think we are it gets hard to hold things in line when their are bumps in the road. The finest automobile, with the most elaborate suspension system, is difficult to steer on a bumpy road. Just keeping it straight requires extra energy. When difficulties beset us as we run upon those bumpy roads, we need the strength of God to keep us on the path. Alone, we don't have the strength, but when God puts his hand on the wheel he puts things under control. A marriage that has run into bumpy ground runs into trouble without God to hold it in place. A personal pursuit, no matter how sure it appears, can get pretty hard to handle once it runs upon bumpy roads.

Isaiah projected that Israel should expect God to come in and even handle enemies that would make the way difficult and bumpy. Likewise, we should expect the power of God to strengthen us to face the bumps in the road knowing that God will strengthen us to tackle the enemies that make our way difficult. In fact, David mused about GodÆs goodness and said “thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies.” When others tried to make his road bumpy God strengthened him to survive even their plans and contrivings. He summed it up by saying “The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?” (Psalms 27)

Bumpy Roads Are Easy if God Leads

Since bumpy road circumstances are inevitable in life, it would be wise if all of us would allow God to lead us through to smoother paths. Too many of us speed through bumpy roads and vibrate and shake until we almost fall apart. When God guides us however, he takes us around and through each bump at the right speed. It may be slower getting through, but we will make it. This virtue of patience, is what Isaiah talked with Israel about in the 40th chapter verse 31 when he said "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount on wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

God spoke to Israel and said "I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee."

When God holds the lines or takes over the steering wheel he literally takes us by the hand and leads us "by the still waters" and makes it possible for us to lie down in green pastures.

A widow woman found out that even though the cabinets are bare and the family is down to its last cup of meal and cruse of oil, that things will work out if you put it in God's hands.

A lame man discovered that though he had trouble making it to the pool for 38 years that, things worked out when it put it in God's hands.

Aunt Mandy was an especially famous backwoods midwife. She had successfully helped scores of women deliver hundreds of babies. Aunt Mandy had seen nearly every child of birth from breach births to premature births, she had seen many. After one particularly difficult delivery Aunt Mandy sat on the front porch and read her bible rocking. Family members wanted to know if she was going to do something else to help the baby survive, since they had heard so much about her reputation for never losing a baby. They waited but Aunt Mandy never moved. Finally they pressed her for an answer and the old woman looked up with a steel eyes and said: "When that child came in the world he was in my hands. I took him from my hands and put him in his mama's hands. I have done all I can do and I have put them both in the good Lord's hands." Both baby and child lived long and healthy lives.

Great things happen when we put it all in his hands.

I don't know about you but I've found out that miracles happen when we let Jesus hold the line! When we let Jesus hold the line:

—CIRCUMSTANCES have been changed —DOORS have been opened —ENEMIES have been defeated
—PROBLEMS have been solved —DOUBTS have been dissolved
—FEARS have been conquered
—FRIENDSHIPS have been restored
—MARRIAGES have been salvaged —SOULS have been converted
—LOST lives have been saved
...When we put it all in his hands!

If there is trouble in your home, put all in God's hands!
If there is confusion on your job, put it all in God's hands!
If there is misunderstanding among friends, put it all in God's hands!

I heard a song writer declare:

“Lead me, Guide me along the way, Lord if you lead me I cannot stray, Lord let me walk each day with thee, Lead me oh Lord lead me!”

Brothers and Sisters if you let Jesus hold the line he will make a way!

If you let Jesus hold the line somehow the:

—Weak will become strong!

—Foolish will become wise!

—Proud will become humble!

—Fearful will become courageous!

I don’t know about you but my daily prayer is “Lord hold my hand, while I run this race, I don't want to run this race alone!”

Precious Lord, take my hand. Lead Me On Let Me stand. Through the storm. Through the night. Lead me on to the light. Take my hand precious Lord and lead me on!

And The Child Grew

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 25, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"And the child grew and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him." Luke 2:40;"When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I though as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish thing." 1 Cor. 13:11

Introduction

Have you ever wanted to be big? Tom Hanks starred in a recent movie called "Big." It was about a boy who was frustrated with being a little boy. He wanted to be big. He thought about it constantly and wished that he could share in the apparent good times of all the big people. At an amusement park he ran upon a strange machine that could grant wishes and he told the machine he wished he could somehow become big. He woke up the next morning to realize that overnight he had assumed the body of a young adult while keeping his child's mind. He learned fast, in the course of the movie, that it was better to enjoy life as it presents itself rather than push it too fast. He searched desperately until he found the machine and wished himself back small again.

Most kids have dreams about being big. A 10 year old dreams about being a teen-ager. A teen-ager dreams about getting a driver's license. Those with a driver's license dream about owning a car. The desire to be big is natural and normal. Being bigger brings more privilege. Those who are bigger and older go more places, stay longer and seem to have more fun. But, as Tom Hanks learned, being big also brings additional responsibilities which take some of the fun out of being big.

The desire of Christian youth, should be to grow in faith commensurate with their growth in statue. They should grow strong in their spirit. They should grow stronger in wisdom and in their understanding of the important things in life. They should also gain a greater appreciation for the power of God to direct and influence their lives and invite him to lead them every step of the way.

As Christians, let us pray that our youth will grow in statue and in spirit that they may become men and women ready to witness to the world about the greatness of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on the known childhood of Jesus. There are several records that attempt to account for the first 12 years of Jesus' life, the most notable account is in the Lost Books known as the Apocrypha. However these are not inspired accounts. What is known is that Jesus as a boy grew up with Mary and Joseph in Nazareth, and following Jewish tradition, learned the trade of his family which was carpentry.

Once each year his family, including his brothers: Joses, James, Simon and Judas, his sisters (Matt. 13:55) and all his relatives, made a journey to Jerusalem to participate in the feast of the Passover. On this particular journey they supposed Jesus was with another relative and returned home and after a day they realized that he was not with them. They returned and found the young man, at the age of 12, sitting in the temple debating the issues of the law with the doctors and professors of religion. When he was approached by his parents Jesus responded:" Wist ye not that I must be about my father's business?"

his text notes that Jesus grew in spirit, wisdom and grace. It became evident at the age of 12 that he knew his mission and he prepared himself for it over the next 18 years while he lived with his parents in subjection (v51) to them until he left home.

Growing in Spirit

The growth of a girl into womanhood or a boy into manhood is an amazing phenomenon to observe. After only a few years boys begin to look like men as their voices change, they get taller and take on the appearances of men. Girls develop physically and have all of the bodily features of a woman. But there is something missing. The bodily equipment is all there but three elements are needed before a boy can be called a man or a girl can truly be called a woman: Sprit, Wisdom and Grace.

HE GREW IN SPIRIT. The spirit is the higher part of our nature that makes us reasonable. It is the action of the spirit that prompts us to think of God, respect him and worship him. Growing in spirit refers to growing in the perception of God and our relationship to him. To grow strong in the spirit does not refer to getting taller and physically stronger, but it does refer to growing in matters of conscience. The child that grows in spirit becomes more aware of right and wrong and of God's presence.

Until he or she matures in the spirit, it is the obligation of every parent to insure the religious instruction of their children while they are young. The scriptures teach that if we "train up a child in the way he should go, when he is old he will not depart from it." That is one of the most difficult tasks for parents because many children resist such instruction. It is a normal resistance, that is where the parents come in, to guide them in matters of conscience and spirit until they have demonstrated an ability to act on matters of right and wrong and faith, without the assistance of their parents.

Growing in Wisdom

Not only did Jesus grow up in body size and in spirit, but he also grew in wisdom. There are many smart children in the world. Youth today have been exposed to more information at age 12 than their parents were exposed to in the first 30 years of their lives. Today's youth digest information faster and have a greater body of knowledge at their disposal than any generation before them.

But while it is certain that Jesus increased in knowledge, it is important to note that he increased in wisdom. Generally speaking, knowledge is simply accumulated information. But wisdom is the prudent and wise use of knowledge. Jesus grew in wisdom.

Depending on the education of the parents, it won't take long for a child to know as much about mathematics, science and English as his parents. In fact, many children are more proficient at handling information than the parents. They have information, but what their parents have, in many instances, is the ability to use that information wisely.

Wisdom comes from God. For some it is a special gift, (1Cor 12:8) and they have it in great proportions. As children grow they learn information in school, but they will need the power of God to wisely use the information they learn. The schooling may teach them to make a dollar, but wisdom teaches them what to do with it have they get it.

Growing in Grace

Finally, Jesus grew in Grace with God. To grow in grace with God is to grow in favor with God.

How does a child gain favor with God? First by believing in God and in his Son Jesus Christ. But beyond that we gain favor with God by obedience to our parents while we are under their care. We also gain favor with God by avoiding sin, resisting temptation and living the Christian life at home and at school.

It is a good thing to have the grace of God. God's grace supplies us with what we need to live life abundantly. 2 Cor. 9:8 says "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you: that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work." When we grow in grace, God gives us what we need to live the abundant life.

It is marvelous to experience the grace of God because his grace supplies the:

—Soul with salvation
—Heart with joy
—Mind with peace
—Hands with tenderness
—Feet with Strength
—Eyes with compassion

The sweetest song that was ever sung was about God's grace!

The greatest sermon ever preached was preached about Grace!

The most gratitude ever expressed was expressed about Grace!

The best knowledge ever attained was knowledge about Grace!

Most children who have not traveled far in life whisper among themselves and want to know why the old people, those over 30, like sing Amazing Grace.

We sing about Grace because Grace has brought us through —Valleys of loneliness, vales of tears, winds of persecution, storms of opposition, nights of despair and the trials of suffering.

Through many dangers toils and snares, I have already come. Tis grace that brought me safe thus far and grace will lead me home!

Young people grow in spirt! Grow in Wisdom. Live the Christian life and you'll grow in Grace:

—That touches that untouchable

—That reaches the unreachable

—That loves the unlovable

—That comforts the uncomfortable

Amazing Grace! How sweet the sound that saved a wretch like me. I once was lost but now I'm found, blind but now I see!

Cutting Off Your Bread

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 18, 1991

SCRIPTURE: "And the Manna ceased on the morrow after they had eaten corn of the land; neither had the children of Israel manna any more; but they did eat of the fruit of the land Canaan that year." Joshua 5:12; "I am the bread of life, he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." John 6:35

Introduction

Have you ever needed a little motivation? A little something to get you started? If so you can relate to the story of Freddy Frog. The great frog called Freddy was known by all of the other creatures of the bayou as one that seldom moved off his log. Daily he sat on the log and caught flies and mosquitoes with his tongue. Freddy Frog sat so long that he became fat and fussy. He refused all attempts to get him to move from that log and griped and complained that the other creatures should mind their own business. But one day all of the animals of the swamp were amazed when the saw fat, fussy, Freddy frog, furiously fanning and swimming across the swimming. "What could have made fat, fussy, Freddy frog, furiously fan and swim so fast?" Asked the spider. "Well, I think Greedy, grumpy, growly, Gary Gater decided to have frog legs for supper and when he snapped Freddy's log into, Freddy Flew, and you would too, if you were about to be the main course on the menu!

Sometimes it takes it little misfortune to get us going. At the time it appears as if it is bad thing but when it accomplishes its purpose it works out to our good. A lost job sometimes works out to be an opportunity in disguise because it opened a door for a better job. A failure at a task, sometimes gives inspiration to find more creative ways to accomplish the same end.

It is possible to become so satisfied that it is difficult to get us to move or act. But we are able to act quickly if there is an unexpected adversity. Usually we display more initiative and spunk in such instances than we even knew we had.

What motivates the Christian life? Why do we serve others unselfishly and give so much of ourselves. Is it fear? No. We are motivated by the ever present love of God which prompts us to humbly serve with the full knowledge that he is with us every step of the way.

As Christians, let us continue to work untiringly to move through life with a benevolent spirit, motivated by the love of God rather than by the presence of growling, greedy, Gary Gator. It shouldn't take hard times to get us to show compassion, but only the whisper of our master's voice in our ear saying "go ye therefore" to keep us going.

Exposition

This text considers Israel as it moves into the promised land. It considers how God prepares them to receive a blessing by cutting off a blessing. Israel had wandered in the wilderness for 40 years. In the wilderness there were no trees, green grasses, pastures, wells or any sources of food or water other than that which God himself supplied. God directed flocks of quail to rest among them daily for their meat, provided water from a rock and fed them daily with a miraculous bread from heaven called "Manna." Manna was a flaky substance which tasted like a honey wafer. It appeared every morning, except the Sabbath, as if with the morning dew. They knew it was from God because of its cycle of appearance and how it would not spoil if kept overnight on the Sabbath. Manna, which means "What is it?", was certainly a blessing from heaven.

Israel had become dependent upon manna. None but its old men had ever tilled a field, planted a crop, or experienced a harvest, and even they were just small children at the time. They wandered in the wilderness and were provided their existence from God himself. But as they approached the promised land they were about to receive a greater blessing: a new and fertile land that was flowing with milk and honey. It was to be a great blessing.

But in the promised land manna would be a crippling presence for them. Some would not learn the farming skills necessary nor apply themselves to industry. There obviously would be many that would simply wait on the manna every day. To motivate them to industry and prepare Israel for a greater blessing God literally cut off their bread. As most of them tasted corn for the first time and realized the promise of the new land God cut off the flow of manna. After 14,600 consecutive days, Sabbaths excepted, Israel's bread was cut off.

They were eating "old corn" stored by the Canaanites from recent harvests, but they now knew that God was preparing them for a greater blessing which was the ability to maintain themselves in a new and prosperous era.

Dependent on Manna?

Have you asked God to show you a better way, but yet you refused to seize the opportunity when it presents itself? If that is our circumstance then we are among millions who who suffer from chronic manna dependency. The Manna dependent fails to progress because it may mean following the unbeaten path or trusting in the untried. Such a person believes in the colloquialism: "A bird in the hand is better than two in the nest." It is the philosophy of life that says why take a chance and risk losing what you have.

Israel was stricken with Manna Mania when Moses sent 12 spies into the promised land and they reported that it was filled with fresh fruits, fertile soil and great opportunities, but it was risky. Israel considered the manna that appeared daily and decided to keep what it had. For 40 years the opportunity for a better life slipped through their fingers. But as Israel began its journey into the promised land a miraculous thing happened, its manna supply was cut completely off. They were able to survive a while on old corn but the people would have to use their imagination, invention and initiative to claim the great opportunities that lie ahead for them. By cutting off their bread, God actually blessed them. It was a blessing in disguise.

Today there are millions of people who pray to God to show them a better way, but when they receive their answer they choose to hang on to what they have. Some cling to welfare though they know that training and a job is the ultimate way out of poverty. Some cling to "getting by" when they know that they should complete their education and seek a higher goal. Some hang on to unhappy personal situations because they are afraid to reach out and claim the great opportunities which present themselves as answers to their prayers.

Some today have already moved higher in life and have grown stronger in the Lord, but only after he cut off their bread. Many are in the church, living in better homes, making more money and are generally happier, because at some point in time, God blessed them by cutting their bread. Some lost a job and were hurt. But after retraining or completing their education are better off because of it. Some have had their freedoms stripped only to rethink their lives and rise stronger and greater men and women because of the experience. Some were jilted, abandoned and crushed in failed relationships and have found greater joys than they ever would have known had not they received this peculiar blessing in disguise.

Running for Our Lives

Sometimes we are not motivated to reach inside ourselves for the power of God to achieve until our life depends on it. These are the times when we are like the Hound and the rabbit that were involved in a great hunt. The hound bragged that he could catch the rabbit and bring home the prize for his owner because there was no place for the rabbit to hide. The rabbit said nothing. On the day of the great hunt the rabbit took off and the hound was close behind. After several hours of chasing the rabbit the hound returned with his tail between his legs unable to catch the rabbit. When asked to explain his loss the hound was philosophical: "Well, you see. I was running for sport, but that dang blasted rabbit knew he was running for his life!"

Brothers and Sisters are you running for your life?

When Israel was in the desert they had the bread of the wilderness. But once in the promised land the old bread was cut off as they were introduced to a new bread prepared in a new way.

If you are running for you life there is a new bread for the Christian traveler on this side of Jordan.

This bread is a bread that brings:

—Assurance when there is doubt —Acceptance in the midst of rejection

—Acclaim in the midst of scorn

—Happiness in the midst of sadness

—Joy in the middle of the storm

In John 6:35 Jesus said: “I am the bread of life, he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.”

No wonder the song writer cried out: “Bread of heaven, bread of heaven, feed me till I want no more!”

This bread went up to calvary!

This bread died for our sins!

But Early, Early Sunday morning he rose on his own self rising power, with all power in his hands!

A Renter's New Home

A Funeral Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE:"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved, we have another building not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." 1 Cor. 5:1;"Let not your heart be troubled, ye that believe in God believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions. If it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." John 14:1-2

Introduction

Have you ever rented a house or an apartment? Renting has its advantages but it also has its disadvantages. Those who rent, generally don't have the responsibilities of ownership. Since they don't own the building they don't have to worry about insurance and major maintenance items. Renters don't have to worry about paying property taxes and are usually not concerned without the cost of elections that mean higher property taxes, since they don't pay property taxes. In some areas, renters don't even have to worry about mowing the grass or clipping the hedges because that all comes with the rent. A renter, by nature, is expected to be a transient. He or she is a person just passing through. They pay the cost of their month's stay in advance and are under no obligation to stay more than one month at a time.

If renting has its advantages, it also has its disadvantages. Since renters are transients, they never know when they will be asked to move on by the landlord. Some tenants have lived in their apartments or houses for years only to have the landlords tell them that they have decided not to rent the premises any longer. Since renters do not own the property it cannot be used for collateral for loans and though a renter may have paid thousands of dollars in rent he will never own the building in which he has lived. The renter usually pays for the Landlord's property.

People choose to own homes when they have decided to stay in an area and have abandoned immediate plans to move elsewhere. They have no future movements in mind so they put down roots where they are. Without a doubt, a homeowner has decided to stay put for the long haul.

There is a parallel in the Christian experience between the renter and homeowner which should prompt each of us to ask the question: "Are we renters are homeowners?"

On this earth every Christian is a renter, but in the world to come each of us looks forward to being a homeowner. Since this life is just a meager sojourn for us, our hope is anchor on heavenly horizons. Our hope lies in getting the final deed to our heavenly home.

As Christians, let us continue to look forward to our home beyond this life. The song writer's words should continue to inspire us: "I've got a new home over in glory and its mine, mine, mine!"

Exposition

This text gives us a peculiar insight into the separate spiritual concepts of tenants and homeowners. In Corinthians, Paul explains the nature of the spiritual home of the Christian. Using references to the tent of the Tabernacle used by the Jews often as they traveled in the wilderness, the tent-life represented a nomadic culture that moved from place to place. It was very insecure and unstable. The Tabernacle of the Old Testament had no permanent resting place and its design indicated that it was intended for movement. There was no permanent temple until years later when Solomon built the temple.

Paul indicated that the Christian's life is nomadic, like the tabernacle, but when this body or building is no longer able to sustain the life force and presence of the Christian soul, then there is another building available to the Christian, not made with hands, but by the hands of God himself. For the Christian therefore, this life is a just a sojourn or a temporary stay. He is here for a while and then expects to move on.

John goes one step further in showing us the words of the savior himself. Jesus tells each Christian who has lived a span of time in an impermanent, insecure arrangement, that there is a secure place for them to live, in glory. Christ's promise was simply that he was going to prepare for every Christian a permanent, beautiful home in his father's house. There the Christian should not expect to be a tenant, but a homeowner among the suites of heaven.

Thus, the two pictures are clear: Paul shows us the Christian on earth as a tenant, and Jesus encourages our hope by showing us the images of the Christian in his permanent home in Glory, where he is no longer a renter.

Homeowners on Earth

While there are many people who struggle to own a home in the world, the Christian does not strive to make this life his home. There are many people who have accepted this earth as their home and their lifestyle and attitude reflect the fact that they don't expect to make a move soon, or in the next life. Such people spend most of their time beautifying their spiritual homes in this life. They become preoccupied with possessions and pursue the collection of an expanded number of material things as a life's pursuit. Addressing a similar situation Jesus often referred to such people who build barns and then tear them down to build bigger barns. He asked a questions: "What profit it a man to gain the whole world and lose his soul?"

Those who view this life as their home build their treasures on earth. However, Jesus warns every person, not to build up treasures on earth where rust and corrosion can destroy them, but to invest in a spiritual life that is secure.

If we choose to build homes here, our lives are subject to the destructive forces that destroy homes such as:

TERMITES: those little sins that keep eating away at the building blocks of our homes, giving us the appearance of beauty but destroying us on the inside;

LEAKY ROOFS, those circumstances that make it difficult for us to endure rainy days because we are not properly prepared, we appear secure while the sun is shining but cannot sustain the rainfall;

BROKEN WINDOWS, which block our view, let out the cool air in the summer and let in the cold air in the winter, keep us from seeing clearly to communicate with God and from communicating with him with the proper attitude.

Owning a home spiritually is a bad investment because its resale value is low. Instead of increasing in value, those who invest in this life find that it loses value the closer one comes to the end of life. Things that at one time mattered are no longer important. Ideas and persuits that once occupied our thoughts no longer dominate our thoughts as life nears its close.

Spiritual Renters

While the goal of the secular citizen is to acquire a home, the goal of the spiritual man is to rent on earth with an eye toward ownership in heaven. The spiritual renter does not see his existence on earth as the final step and does not attach any permanence to his brief sojourn. Instead, the spiritual man, lives his life with a view toward making heaven his permanent home.

The Christian is not a spiritual homeowner, he is a tenant. As such he wants to have a clean dwelling. He wants it to be respectable, comfortable and pretty. However, he won't make any major expansions to his spiritual tabernacle and won't spend too much time trying to accumulate possession for it either. The reason is because spiritual man is always expecting to move at any minute.

There is a slogan that says: "Home is where the heart is" and for the spiritual tenant. "Home" is not here on earth. Home is wherever Jesus is. A Christian's desire is to make it to heaven one day. That's why he views this life as a journey from the:

—Valley of despair to the mountain tops of victory
—Wilderness of the World to the Palaces of Glory
—Bondages of Egypt to the liberties of the Canaan land —Paths of sin to the highways of heaven
—Dungeons of defeat to the Courts of the Conquerors

Those who trust in the Lord have a home not made by hands. No wonder the song writer declares: "Build your hopes on things eternal, and hold to God's unchanging hands."

I don’t know about you, but I have decided that I will trust in the Lord!

I will trust in the Lord because over yonder, I have a home, not made by hands!

Over yonder, it’s always howdy and never goodbye!

There’s a great camp meeting over yonder on the other shore! Bye and Bye I’m going to meet him, on the other shore!

——

A few days ago, our dear Lord saw fit to cancel the rental lease of brother Amos Johnson and give him a new home in glory!

Helpless Helpers

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

August 4, 1991

SCRIPTURE: "And he said unto them which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight,and say unto him at midnight, and say unto him friend, lend me three loaves for a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him? And I say unto you, ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." Luke 11:5-6,9.

Introduction

A hermit sat in his little cabin at the top of a hill during a drought one summer. His barrel of water was running low but he always found enough water to sustain him day by day. Each day travelers came by his hut and asked him for water and he told them he had only enough for himself and sent them away. After many days the hermit asked one of the travelers who was directing so many to come to him for water. The last traveler responded that there was a gentleman in the general store who pointed them in his direction. Upset, the hermit mounted his donkey and came into town and met the gentleman in the store. "Why are you telling people to come to me for water, when I barely have enough for myself?" The gentleman responded: "I tell each person to come see you, not because you have water, but because you know the way to the well."

Today, there are many people who look to the church for a response to the need of the masses for food, clothing and shelter. They come to the church because they heard somewhere that the church may not have plenty of what they need, but the church "knows the way to the well." The hungry, homeless, helpless and hopeless all look to the church for answers and for a response.

Some church members, irritated at the constant pleas of the world, respond: "Why come to us, do we look as if we have enough money to house the homeless or feed the poor masses of the nation? Does it appear that we have the resources to solve the plethora of social ills that plague us?" The response of the masses is simply, that it comes to the church becomes it "knows the way to the well."

We may not have the material resources at our finger tips, but as children of the king we have a father who is rich in houses and in land and holds the wealth of world in hands. We may not have it, but we know where to get it, and therefore it becomes our responsibility to respond to need not in proportion to what we have but in proportion to what we can get through initiative, imagination and industry from the treasures of heaven.

As Christians, we should always remember that the world looks to us for a response because it recognizes that in its spiritual thirst, it is the Saints of God, who know the way to the well.

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he makes an illustration of the importance of prayer. It begins with teaching the disciples the model prayer, known today as the Lord's Prayer, and then concludes by emphasizing the importance of importunity with the parable of the helpless helper.

A man was awakened in the middle of the night by a friend who came to him asking for lodging. The man was helpless. He did not have anything to serve his visitor, but he knew where to get it from. In the middle of the night he beat on the door of his next door neighbor until he got his attention and begged him for three loaves of bread. The neighbor was reluctant to give at first but because his neighbor was so persistent, he went to his pantry and gave him, not just three loaves of bread, but whatever he needed.

Jesus gave the parable to illustrate that sometimes we have not because we ask not. He encouraged all to "Ask and it shall be given unto you; seek, and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you."

The helpless Come To The Church

By every social indicator, it is midnight in the social order. Crime is rising, morals declining, people are hungry for food, and shelter even though abundance is all around. Jails are over crowded, as murder, rape, incest and other social ills continue to plague. As people are plagued by their troubles their first response is to look for help. In the midnight, they come to the institution that has promoted itself as the friend of the downtrodden and knock feverishly on our door.

Why do the helpless come to the helpless? They come to the church because each church sports a lifted up cross which is a sign of salvation and hope. When traveling on the highway, a hungry pilgrim looks for a clean, reliable place to eat where he will be treated fairly and fed at a reasonable cost. When he sees the golden arches, he goes there expecting certain service because that's what the arches symbolize. So it is with people who see the cross, the come to the church for help because Jesus said: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy burden and I will give you rest." They come to the church because he said "I come to give you life and to give it more abundantly." They come because Jesus said "and I, if I, be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto me."

In the midnight of these times abused women are knocking at our door? Orphan children are knocking at our door? Teen-aged boys and girls who need leadership and direction are knocking at our door? The alcoholic and drug addict is knocking at our door? Troubled husbands and wives, and the homeless and hungry are knocking at our door? What shall be our response?

Many churches have forgotten that their mission is to reach the masses. Many have concluded that they are helpless against the social evils of our times and so they redefine their mission. To some the mission is no longer "go ye therefore" but "stay ye right here." Their mission has become to build fine buildings, polish their Sunday ritual and fill their discussion groups with genteel talks about what they should do. While it is desirable to build fine buildings and enjoy the luxuries they afford, the church should never once consider building buildings as its mission. Reaching the lost, confused, hungry masses with the word of Salvation is the mission of the church.

The problems we know won't go away, no matter how we try to ignore them. They keep coming to our front door because the world knows that the church "knows the way to the well!"

Alone we are helpless Helpers. But the beauty of the church is that "I may not be able to help you, but I have a father who can!"

The song writer said: "I cannot take the lightning and flash it across the land, but I have father who can! I cannot take a piece of clay and shape it into a man, but I have a father who can!"

It is that testimony that brings the world to our doorstep! We may not have water, but we know they way to the well!

Tapping God's Treasures

In the parable the helpless neighbor went where he knew there was bread and through persistence ended up with more bread than he needed. His neighbor had it, he knew it was there, and he would not give up until he found a way to help his friend!

The storehouses of God are full of everything that the church needs to solve the social problems we experience. But gaining access to those storehouses requires pietism and activism from the church. The pietist is the praying man who will fervently ask God for blessings. This is the "Ask" that Jesus spoke of in his formula for answered prayers. But pietism is only one-third of the formula. The other two thirds requires activism: Seeking and Knocking. After asking God for the resources we need to help others, then we must actively seek and knock until we find that unlocked door into the "vaults" of heaven. The power of prayer unlocks doors, but it is the energy of activity that helps us capitalize on the open door.

Churches of America, somebody's knocking at your door! Why don't you answer? Are your mission groups dying because you talk more than you do? Have you organized to seek resources to help the helpless? Why don't you answer? Have you begun to tap the storehouses of heaven? Is construction of housing for the homeless, counseling for battered women and orphan children on your agenda? Is the establishment of programs to provide food, clothing, shelter and education to the downtrodden masses in your plans for the next few years?

Churches of America, somebody's knocking at your door! Why don't you answer?

We may not have much, but we know the way to the storehouse, and we know how to gain access to the treasures of heaven.

Every now and then we should all be reminded that as we were saved, we are expected to save others!

If we have experienced —Christ, then we should share Christ with others!

—Hope, then we should offer hope to others!

—Courage, then we should inspire courage in others!

—Love, then we should show love to others.

—Blessings, then we should bless others.

—Help, then we should be willing to help somebody!

I heard the song writer declare: "If I can help somebody as I pass along...if I can cheer somebody with a word or song, then my living shall not be in vain!"

The Courageous Servant

A Funeral Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 3, 1991

SCRIPTURE: "..Be strong and of good courage, and do it: fear not, nor be dismayed: for the Lord God, even my God, will be with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work for the service of the house of the Lord." 1 Chron. 28:20; "Be of good courage, and he shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord." Psalms 31:24

Introduction

What is courage? Webster suggests that courage is a quality of character that makes it possible for a person to face danger or difficulties without fear. However, a more utilitarian definition does not suggest the courageous are fearless, but in the face of fear are "soothed and sustained by an unfaultering trust" that empowers them to proceed, despite their fears. Courage, at its best, is the mastery of fear. It's coming to grips with the unknown and forging forward confident that fear and uncertainty will always bow before faith and determination.

Courage is personal. It cannot be transferred to others. Those who think it is transferable are like the two little boys who went to see the dentist. One boy spoke boldly to the dentist looking him squarely in the eye: "Doctor, I want the tooth taken out. Use no gas. Don't deaden the gum. Just yank it out quickly." The doctor was amazed at the courage the little boy displayed and commended him for bravery. Just as he was about to put the little boy in the chair, the boy said: "Oh not me doctor, I was talking about Joey here!" Many people find it easy to be courageous for other people. Arm chair quarterbacks and back seat drivers are famous for playing the game from a position of comfort and safety without facing its difficulties themselves.

As Christians we share the same fears and difficulties in life as other people, with one exception: the Christian is able to master fear and uncertainty because of his faith in the God's ability to deliver and protect him. Let us keep that faith forever before us as we tackle life's innumerable problems.

Exposition

These two text verses address two separate situations that involve the same family. One involves a young man facing the unknown. The other involves a parent face with adversity. One involves advice for a youth facing life's unknowns; the other is an expression of faith in God despite difficult times.

In Chronicles David advises his son Solomon who is about to tackle the unknowns of life in a roll he has never played. Among the great tasks that lay before him was to build a temple and rule wisely. Facing the unknown, David suggested to this young man to be of good courage, fear not, nor be dismayed at what life will bring. David told Solomon "God will be with thee, he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work" that he has set out for you to do. The young man was encouraged to tackle life boldly, face its challenges with the assurance that come what may God would not leave him, until his work was finished and purpose fulfilled.

The advice that David gave Solomon was based on his own experience. In Psalms 31 David was faced with many difficulties himself but in them he resolved to trust in the Lord. In verse 7 he says "I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy for thou hast considered my trouble; thou hast known my soul in adversities." When he reached a low point he cried out the words of verse 5 which were repeated even by Jesus on the cross "Into thine hands I commend my spirit!" It was this determination to put matters in God's hands that prompted verse 24: "Be of good courage, he shall strengthen your heart..."

Combined, the text verses find David giving his son advice from his own experience: Put difficulties and tough matters in God's hand and face the unknown with the full knowledge that God will be with you every step of the way until your work is done.

Facing Life's Unknown

King Hezekiah, in the Old Testament account, was ill and received notice that he was going to die. In prayer, Hezekiah asked for more time and God gave him 15 more years. In that 15 years he finished what he set out to do and then God called him home.

Today there are some of us who are living on borrowed time, and we are surviving on grandma's prayers. We have been granted a grace period of a few years to accomplish our end. What are we doing with our years?

There are many young people today who have the gift of perfect health, sound mind and body, and reasonable strength, but yet they have failed to use their gifts to their maximum potential. How many waste their school years with lackluster performances and are satisfied with below average grades and low achievement? How many spend their years in a maze of confusion, like little pac-men running furiously, hoping to be sustained in life by stumbling upon a power pill of luck? Too many young people, living by the grace of God alone, are dropping out of life, to pursue a life of drinking, partying, drugs, crime, sex and riotous living. There other youth who, facing the unknown are frightened. They don't know about the future and are terrified with the prospect of failure. Some don't know which way to turn or what to say so they lose themselves in the make believe world of television and video game heroes.

Many youth facing the future have discovered that "I may not know what the future holds, but I know who holds the future." These youth choose to follow Christ.

It is a courageous decision. Choosing the high road in life takes courage. This is the kind of courage that makes us cut way from the crowd, do the right thing, even though we may be laughed at or ridiculed by others. This is the kind of courage that makes us say no to evil and yes to the cause of justice and righteousness.

David told Solomon to tackle life with courage knowing that regardless to what comes God would stand by him until his purpose was fulfilled.

What is the testimony of the life we salute here today? It is a young life which was lived fully committed to making a difference in the world. It was a life of joy, expectation and courage, which was fully aware that every single day was.. borrowed time.

A fully committed life such as this one is perhaps what the song writer had in mind when she wrote: "Give of your best to the master, give of the strength of your youth, clad in salvation's full armor, join in the battle for truth. Jesus has set the example, dauntless was he young brave, give him your loyal devotion, give him the best that you have."

David told Solomon, to keep a good spirit regardless to what comes..be not dismayed!

Though we face a mountain of misery, be not dismayed!

Though confined to a bed of sorrow, be not dismayed!

Though we face the furnace of affliction, be not dismayed!

Though we endure times of tension, be not dismayed!

Though we are lowered into the pit of despair, be not dismayed!

I heard the song writer declare: "Be not dismayed whate'er betide, God will take care of you. Beneath his wings of love abide, God will take care of you. God will take care of you."

Strengthened Hearts

Those who suffer loss, pain and emptiness should also be encouraged by David's words, for God will strengthen weakened hearts. That strength is drawn from our hope in the Lord.

The faithful who feel a great losses are strengthened when they remember the words of 2 Corinthians 4:8-10 "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed but not in despair; persecuted but not forsaken; cast down but not destroyed.."

Why is it that the faithful can remain courageous even in the face of despair? Because we have hope! Hope in the risen savior!

I don't know about you but I have hope when trouble comes my way! It is a hope that helps me:

-Bear the heaviest burden!

-Carry the cruelest crosses!

-Cross the loneliest of valleys!

-Endure the saddest of sorrows!

-Face the greatest of dangers!

It is a hope that looks beyond the agonies of the present moment but fixes upon that glorious day in glory when we will march across the battlements of heaven and graduate to a new and better life.

My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name! On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground, is sinking sand!

I want to hear heaven's welcome song: "Hello friends! Gee but it's good to see you, glad to see everyone smile. We're glad you came to heaven with us, we know you came to help us praise the Lord in Song and Prayer. Wright is here. The Choir and Morrison.. and there is Kim and all of the rest! We'll praise the Son till day is done as we live throughout eternity!

On Sunday July 28, 1991 Kimberly Crane went home to be with God. We she was a courageous saint!

What Mean Ye By These Stones?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 28, 1991

SCRIPTURE: "And he spake unto the children of Israel saying, When your children shall ask their fathers in time to come, saying "What mean these stones? Then ye shall let your children know, saying, Israel came over this Jordan on dry land." Joshua 4:21-22.

Introduction

When visiting many of America's great cities many families have toured historic sites on their list places to see and things to do. Almost always, the places that mark a historically significant activity display a great stone that tells its story. The Lincoln Memorial, a huge stone building, tells the story of Abraham Lincoln and his effort to save the union. The Vietnam War Memorial is a ground level wall that contains the names of thousands of men who died in the Vietnam War. While the Washington Monument rises high into the sky and gives tribute to George Washington, the Booker T. Washington epitaph is encased on a small stone, level to the ground atop his grave. An Awe inspiring site is the thousands of headstones at Arlington National Park, and tiny unnamed headstones of thousands of Colored Civil War soldiers who died in their glory in the battle at Port Hudson Louisiana. Each stone tells the story of a life lived, a battle fought, or a victory won or lost.

The stones that mark the graves of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King are just a bit different. Near each of them is an eternal flame that signifies that their ideals live on for the future.

When children visit these sites they ask questions. What's that? What did he do? What was that all about? The stones give parents an opportunity to tell the story of the events lives and deeds associated with the stones.

Is there an important event in your life that you could mark with a great stone? What is the story would your stone tell? Some stones might tell of victories such as graduations, marriages or advancements. Others might tell of defeats or failures. Each one has a story to tell as we mark the trail we have walked in this life.

As Christians, we have had some important spiritual events to happen in our lives.

We have noted each event testify about it on every opportunity. One of those occasions involve the events surrounding our salvation. We talk about it freely anytime we are asked because of the joy we shared that Jesus has saved our soul.

Exposition

This text considers Israel as it crosses the River Jordan and enters the promised land. The crossing of Jordan was the first new miracle that was performed under the leadership of Joshua. It required the waters of the mighty Jordan river to roll back and hold still for a day as nearly 600,000 people crossed over on dry land.

Joshua commanded representatives of the 12 tribes to take 12 stones out of the river and place them in a heap in the river and to carry 12 other stones with them from the river bed to the other side. Once on the other side the stones were set up on the bank as a permanent tribute to God for his wonderful works. When children, in future years, come to the site and see the huge stones standing in a pile in the midst of Jordan and another, just like them, on the right bank of Jordan, they will ask the meaning of the stones. Their questions will give the elders an opportunity to tell them of the great things God did for Israel when he helped them cross Jordan. Those on the bank also stood as a sign of their expectation of great things to come from God in future generations. Together, the stones symbolized the presence of God in the past and the need for God's presence on the other side of Jordan as well. It was the children of Jordan generation recognizing the great work God has performed for their fathers and expecting the same for themselves.

Respect for the Past

An old lady was often teased by the children in her neighborhood because in the winter time she wore a coat made of patches. There were scores of patches of mixed materials and colors; nothing matched and it was obviously a contrast of styles and fabric. Yet she wore that coat every day. Finally one little girl came to the old lady's house and over milk and cookies asked her why she wore the patches. "Each patch" says the old lady "tells the story of my life." There was a red patch for times when she partied and enjoyed the night life. There were faded patches from the dresses she wore to work for nearly four decades. A black lace patch was made from the handkerchief she used to cry at her husbands funeral. There were several little patches made from the baby socks of her grandchildren. In the middle of the coat was large white patch. It represented the day she gave her life to Christ and he washed her pure as snow. The little girl ran and told the other children the meaning of the patches. From that day forward they looked at her with a stare when she wore her patches, but not a single child laughed because they knew the story behind the old lady and the patches.

There are some things in life which look peculiar, until you know the whole story. Children should be told the family story. It should be repeated in their ears until they know it from memory. Each place where God has performed a great miraculous deed for them should be noted.

Children, there is not a family today that can say it has come this far, on its own. Many families can relate to the people Israel because they have shared a wilderness experience. Many have endured segregation, discrimination and hard times times. The pains of sickness, the threat of death and the haunting shadow of poverty was always near by for many families and it was only God that brought them through.

A little boy asked his grandfather: "Why don't you get you a new bible, this one is old and tattered. It's got writing on the pages and the back is stuck on with tape." The grandfather said to the little boy: "Son I had this bible when I fought in the great war. When bullets were flying over my head in the night I talked to God. In the mornings I'd read it. This mark here is what a wrote in that hour: "yea though I walk through the valley of death I will fear no evil, for thou art with me." Every mark in that bible showed a place where God had answered a prayer, moved a mountain, or performed a miracle. "I could buy a new one son, but it wouldn't tell my story."

Israel set up stones in middle of Jordan as a memorial to the great things God did in the past.

There are some things we should remember. We should remember how God has brought us from the grips of slavery to a new era of opportunity.

Hope for the Future

Just as there were stones erected to remember the past, there was a second set put up on the back to represent Israel's dependence on God in the present and future.

With the use of drugs on the rise, escalating incidences of gang violence, murder, and rape; this generation, needs to know that that the God of their fathers will be there for them. Youth today should be reminded that even though there is a diminishing moral character among their peers and alcoholism, incest, teen parenthood, school drop outs and delinquency are on the rise, God is still on the throne!

It's good to know that there are stones in Jordan telling Grandma's story, but it's also good to know that there is rock on this side of Jordan upon which I can stand. "What mean ye by this stone?" The stone upon which this generation stands is same stone upon which your parents stood. This stone is Jesus, the chief cornerstone of the church. He is the stone which the builders rejected.

These stones remind me our youth that when the world is 'illn and chilling that the Lord will make a way!

These stones say to :

-A world Troubled by the boys in the hood, that the Lord is still good!

-Youth jamming on Heavy D, that there is a message from the man who calmed the sea! "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest!"

-Young people surrounded by homelessness in the land, "My father is rich in houses and in land and he holds the wealth of the world in his hands!"

Despite the troubles of today, youth should know that the God of yesterday is God in this present age as well.

I don’t know about you but I’ve found out that the Lord is still in the blessing business.

There is no:

-Weakness that the Lord cannot strengthen!

-Pain that the Lord cannot ease!

-Burden that the Lord cannot lift!

-Loneliness that the Lord cannot comfort!

-Door that the Lord cannot open!

-Prayer that the Lord cannot hear!

I’m glad that there is a rock on this side of Jordan.

of trouble! Our song in the middle of the night!

I heard the song writer declare: “My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name! On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!”

The Last Homecoming

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 21, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste,and the gates thereof are burned with fire: come and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem that we be no more a reproach." Nehemiah 2:17; "After this I beheld, and lo a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the lamb clothed with white robes and psalms in their hands;" Rev. 7:9;"And one of the elders answered saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes, and whence came they? and I said unto him sir thou knowest. And he said to me. These are they which came out of great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the lamb." Rev. 7:13-14

Introduction

A young man who had been distant to his family had been gone for many years. When he left he felt like an outcast to his family and vowed never to return. Years later he wrote his mother and said he was coming home on the next evening's train. He said if he was still welcome that she should tie a yellow ribbon around the old oak tree in the front yard. As the train neared the depot the son worried as to whether or not he could still go home. But as he looked out of the window miles up the road he saw yellow painted sheets hanging from his neighbors clothes lines. Every fence post had a yellow ribbon. The limbs of the trees had yellow ribbons that dangled like fruit. As the train rolled past his house he saw yellow ribbons on the old oak tree, the pine tree, the cedar tree, and his mother and father standing in the yard waving. By this he knew it would be a great homecoming!

What a great thing it is to come home and know that you are welcome. It is a great feeling because homecoming is a time of celebration and reflection on the unique trilogy of history, heritage and hope. When soldiers come home there is a homecoming. When loved ones who have been away return there is a homecoming. Schools and colleges have homecomings that play up the contribution of alumni and memories are stirred as walk through the halls of fame.

But none of the celebrations that we are accustomed to on this earth can compare with the last homecoming that God has in store for all of his saint's, it will be a great a joyous occasion, when the Saint's go marching in. As Christians, we look forward to the last homecoming with great anticipation, it will be a time of great rejoicing and celebration, because then we will see old friends and loved ones and rejoice before the throne forever more!

Exposition

This text focuses on three homecomings of Israel detailed in the Old Testament records and the last homecoming of the Saint's as detailed in the New Testament record. It is the story of a majority that forgot about home, and a few who chose to rebuild their heritage.

Israel's national prominence had been destroyed with its captivity. The Books of Ezra and Nehemiah detail its long journey home under three visionary and inspirational leaders over a 96-100 year period. Led by Zerubbabel, they returned home for the first time in 70 years. The first homecoming involved 42,360 Jews, and 7,337 servants. At the first homecoming the job was to rebuild them temple which was completed after 17 years.

Many years later Ezra, an exile in Babylon, gained permission from the Persian government to take back any who wanted to return to Jerusalem and resume their national life. Ezra had a hard time finding people who wanted to go back home. They had become comfortable in Babylon. They were making money and living good and they were not interested in going home. When he returned only 1,754 men went with him whereas the first homecoming group had 42,360 men. The second homecoming was smaller than the first and the job of its leader was more difficult because those at home had learned to live in sin and resisted change.

The Third homecoming came many years later when Nehemiah a cup bearer to the king gained permission to return home to rebuild its walls. By this time very few of the Jews in Babylon wanted to go home. Nehemiah returned with a handful of men and a Persian army escort. He led the people in rebuilding the walls and government of the city while Ezra the prophet continued to re-establish the worship and spiritual life of the people. The third homecoming was so small that the number of men participating was not worth a numerical notation.

Forgetting About Home

Israel's interest in Jerusalem diminished as it became comfortable in Babylon. Increasingly, fewer of its people showed an interest in going home and even sending support home to maintain its national heritage.

The church is the "Jerusalem" of the New Testament. Instead of stones and gold and silver the church is comprised of millions of "living" stones with Christ as its chief cornerstone. For the Christian, being with Christ is home. But like Israel, many today have lost interest in home.

Some have lost interest in the church because of Prosperity. Like Israel that became comfortable in Babylon, there are many today who have learned the ways of the world and have become comfortable in them. Sundays, once reserved for worship and praise of God, are now dedicated to fishing, television and enjoying the comforts acquired in Babylon. We are doing well in Babylon. Nearly every home has a television, phone, electrical appliances of some kind, running water and inside baths. Some are doing so well that they have automobiles, air conditioning and American Express. Prosperity is dangerous because if we are not careful we can get so caught up in it, that we forget about home. The quest for prosperity has destroyed families where a husband or wife get so busy chasing the dollar and climbing the career ladder that they forget about home.

Some have lost interest because of sin. When Ezra and Nehemiah returned they found people in Jerusalem were wrapped up in sin and had lost their spiritual focus. There are many today who share the same dilemma. They have forgotten about home because some sinful lifestyle has distracted them. Some are captivated by the night, others by the smell of sweet perfume. Some have become slaves to alcohol, coke and crack. Their addictions have become so great that they have neglected themselves, their homes, and the church. They cannot focus on home because they are trapped in the vicious circle of worldly living that will not turn them loose.

Yet the clarion call is sounded: "Come Home!"

Come home where there is:

-Remedy for the ruined; Healing for the Hurt

-Hope for the hopeless; Love for the lost

-Victory for the victims; Grace for the guilty

-understanding for the misunderstood

-Compassion for the Condemned

Jerusalem's call echoes across the centuries: "My son, come home!"

Some Would Not Forget

While many Jews refused to go home because of lost interests there were some who never took their minds off Jerusalem.

Daniel prayed three times a day facing Jerusalem and talked to God about his desire to go home. He braved a lion's den and the prospect of certain death rather than forget about home. The three Hebrew boys faced a fiery furnace because they refused to pledge allegiance to Babylon. Their hearts were back home and the fire that burned inside was hotter the those of the fiery furnace.

Today the church is celebrating homecoming, with preaching and singing and fine foods but this celebration is just a preparation for the last homecoming! The world thought it had canceled homecoming when it crucified Jesus on the cross. But he rose from the grave passing out invitations to the last homecoming

Jesus told his disciples in John 14:2-3 "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am ye may be also."

The Angels declared in Acts 1:11 "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

The last homecoming will be celebrated at the return of Christ.

We need to be ready for homecoming day because Matthew 24:42- says "Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour the Lord doth come."

In Revelation, John painted a picture of the Last Homecoming. The Old Testament believers and departed Saints had been resurrected from the dead. Living Saints had been raptured in the air! Tribulation converts had received the mark of lamb in their foreheads and 144,000 Jews marched toward the throne.

Then John said he saw another number that no man could count, on their way to the last homecoming? What are these? These are they who have washed their robes in the blood of the lamb?

At the last homecoming:

-Doubts will be dissolved
-Longings will be satisfied
-Tears will be dried
-Hearse wheels won't roll
-Problems will be solved
-Thirsts will be quenched
-Burdens will be lifted
-Debts will be canceled
-Mountains will be made low
-Valleys shall be exalted

I don't know about you but I don't want to miss homecoming day, when we all get to heaven. What a day of rejoicing it will be. When we all see Jesus we'll sing and shout the victory!

No wonder song writer declared: "Come and go with me, to my father's house for there is joy! Joy! Joy!"

Why Stand Ye Here

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 16, 1991

SCRIPTURE: "..Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1:11; "..for by faith ye stand" 2 Cor. 1:24

Introduction

What you want to usher for?
Got to stand up all the time
Every body else be sitting and enjoying de service so fine

What you want to usher for?
Got to stand up on your feet
Choir members sing songs so sweet but when they finish singing they sits down on they seat

What you want to usher for?
You better hear these blues
Deacon prays a good prayer what stirs and what soothes but when de prayer is over he sits down on the pews

What you want to usher for?
Too much walking for me!
'livering fans, and shaking hands
that's not my cup of tea

Ushers got to have a good soul
Musta been dipped in fine pure gold
Ain't no way I'd stand dat long dey'd look for me and I'd be gone!

Though humorous in style, this little poem makes a clear point: An usher is a special person in the church. It is a thankless job, that requires a spirit of humility that transcends the ordinary. The usher is our most glaring example of Christian service because among this band of dedicated men and women come people from all walks of life including the wealthy and the poor, the highly educated and the under educated, the old and the young, they all step out of their roles in the secular world to meet as equals on the common ground they share in the service of the king.

What motivates a person to want to serve another when our nature is to be served? Why, of all the places of services in the church that are prestigious, comfortable and influential, would anyone want to be a doorkeeper? Why do ushers choose to stand and walk and wait on others hand and foot when they could easily choose to be the ones served?

Ushers know what all Christians know, that there is a reward in store for every servant both on this earth as God blesses them with health and strength, and in the kingdom to come as he gives us the best of the kingdom of heaven. Ushers and every other Christian, stand daily on the promises of God that he will bless good and faithful servants with eternal life in the kingdom of heaven.

Exposition

This text considers Jesus' disciples watching the savior as he was caught up on a cloud and slowly ascended into heaven. Each disciple stood on his feet and gazed as the master drifted out of sight. When he could not be seen anymore they were still gazing into the heavens. Two angels appeared to them and asked them why they were gazing into the heavens trying to see Jesus when he will be coming back again. "Why stand ye?" was the probing question that jolted these believers from passive amazement to active service. It was a question that challenged them to act on that which they knew was right and build the kingdom of God among men. Rather than stand gazing these were awakened from their amazement and inspired to stand together, on one accord and work to build the kingdom Christ envisioned, as servants of the Lord. Rather than stand aimlessly gazing, they chose to stand for the master in prayer and in supplication.(v14). They stood continuously in faith that one day that the same Jesus which they saw ascend would come again and give them their reward.

Why Do Ushers Stand?

Today there is a demand for servants in the kingdom of God. However, despite the demand there are too few people who respond to the call. Among those who respond, an even small number chooses ushering as a field of service. It might be that people observe the trials of ushers and are reluctant to become one themselves. Sometimes people give ushers a hard time.

Consider the usher that has to deal with the "Seater" family which attends every church each Sunday. Eddie End-Seater is a stubborn fellow. He sits on the end of the pew and makes people crawl over him to get to their seats. The usher that dares ask him to move may not have a head when its over. Molly Middle Seater must sit in the middle and creates quite a disturbance when she enters late and then insists that the middle seat has her name on it. She considers any usher that won't help her to her favorite spot as inhospitable. Then there is Sam Same Seater who has sat on the same pew for 20 years and is irritated because the usher won't ask a visitor to move out of his seat! When ushers must deal with so many personalities that are not always warm and respect, why would they choose to stand?

Ushers stand because they have heard the call of the master looking for workers in the vineyard. Their response was then and is now "if the Lord needs somebody, here am I, send me." It is the same stand that Moses took when God spoke to him from the burning bush and challenged him to serve as a leader of Israel. It's the call that prompted Hannah to bring her child to the temple and dedicate him to the service of God. It's the call that the disciples heard when Jesus said "follow me and I will make you fishers of men."

The servant of God today has chosen to do more than simply wait on the Lord's kingdom to come, gazing aimlessly into heaven as bench members and living idly. They have heard the voice of the angel who asked "why stand ye here gazing" and have chosen to be an active part of the service. It might have been the servants commitment to God that inspired Dr. Watts to write: "A charge to keep I have, a God to glorify. An ever dying soul to save and fit it for the sky."

Why stand ye? Because we have a charge to keep!

Why stand ye? We stand because we have heard the voice of Jesus say come unto to me and rest,lay down lay down thy weary one, thy head upon my breast!

Why stand ye? We stand because we serve an almighty God who can:

—Supply all our needs
—Comfort our sorrows
—Loosen our shackles
—Strengthen our weaknesses
—Lift our burdens
—Forgive Our Sins
—Hear our Prayers
—Change our Circumstance
—Fill our emptiness

But more than that, we stand by faith! Faith is the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen!

Faith is not gazing in the heavens trying to see Jesus, but serving in in the kingdom until he comes back again!

Every servant of God stands in faith that one of these old days Jesus is coming back again!

As I close, I am reminded of the old lady who had served on the usher board for over 50 years. She had gained the nicknamed “old stone foot” because every Sunday for 50 years she came to church with a large grocery bag. In the bag was a large stone that she placed beside her stand and she placed her foot on it and welcomed visitors as they entered. Though people stared and talked about her she always brought her stone and placed one foot upon it. Most of the older members of the church knew her well but a child came and asked why she put her foot on the stone. She responded “Jesus told Peter, Upon this rock I’ll build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. Son this rock is Jesus and on Christ the Solid Rock I stand, because all other ground is sinking sand”

I don’t know about you but I believe I’ll keep standing on the rock!

Stand.. because the is a life to be lived!

Stand, because there is work to be done!

Stand, because there is a fight to be fought

Stand, because there is a victory to be won!

Stand, because there is a testimony to be shared!

Stand, because there is a fire to keep burning

Stand, because there is a prayer to be prayed

Stand, because there is a story to be told!

Tell the old story, how Jesus, Mary’s baby, died and rose from the grave!

I’ll stand right here and tell them that he rose from the dead and is coming back again!

The Old Landmark

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 14, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"Remove not the ancient landmark which thy fathers have set." Prov. 22:28

Introduction

Landmarks are objects in the landscape that are striking and familiar and serve as guides. A land mark may be a tree, a stump, a brightly painted house, a store, a fence or some other item that is visible and appears to have permanence. Often landmarks are included in directions to certain locations to assure travelers that they are going the right way. Have you ever tried to find a location by directions that included landmarks you could not find?

Consider the man who had been away from home for nearly 30 years. He didn't bother to look up directions to find his old homestead because he had lived in the area for 40 years and every trail was etched in his memory. The way was marked clearly in his mind: take the mill road until you reach Big Bill's store, follow the dirt road around the bend until you come to a big Oak tree at the cross roads; take the road to which the Oak tree leans. Along that road there will be a white house on the left and a red barn on the right, when you see those you know you are on the right road.

Though the route home was clear in his mind he was quite disturbed when he found that the mill road was not there any more, a highway had replaced it. Big Bill's store had been torn down 20 years earlier. The man was frustrated further when he reached what used to be the crossroads and found no oak tree. There was no white house, and no red barn. He found his way to the old homestead, but his way was made difficult by the removal of the landmarks.

As we travel in life there are a few land marks that let us know we are going in the right direction. They are the traditional values of society that clearly mark the difference between right and wrong, good and bad. Landmarks increase in importance as clearly marked choices diminish. When there are no road signs, travelers look for land marks to guide them and reassure them.

The signs of these times are unclear. The line between right and wrong is a smudged merger of self expression, personal choice and traditional canons of behavior. Without clear direction, many have found that there is a constancy in following that which is tried and true: the old land marks.

As Christians we still cling to the old land mark of faith in God and obedience to his word. It is the foundation of our faith. It guides us and reassures that we are traveling the right direction.

We take no chance in getting lost. We find our way with God as our guide. He is the perfect spiritual land mark because he is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

Exposition

With respect to land marks the Bible refers to them in two different ways, both of which are important to modern Christian living.

First landmarks are referred to as inheritance markers. This text from Proverbs reiterates one of the basic tenets of the Mosaic law, that landmarks were sacred and protected. This was an important law to the Jews because the boundaries of an inheritance were usually marked by a pile of stones or a deep trench in the ground. As they moved into the promised land and it was divided between the tribes, each boundary was indicated by a landmark. Even as the land was subdivided to individuals each person still marked his inheritance with a land mark. The law discouraged the removal of landmarks because it caused the owner to lose sight of his inheritance. On occasion a dishonest neighbor came and moved the pile of stones giving himself a larger inheritance, diminishing the claims of his neighbor. The Mosaic law protected such land marks by giving severe penalties to persons who tampered with the ancient land marks.

The second category of land marks in the bible are those that indicate sites where God performed a miraculous deed. One such case is illustrated when Jacob returned to his homeland he met God in a vision that showed angels descending and ascending a giant stairway or ladder. He arose and took the stone which had been his pillow and erected it as a land mark of his spiritual encounter. He named the spot Bethel.

Together, the ancient land marks were important to the people because they helped them to claim their rightful inheritance and to remember the great and miraculous acts of God himself in helping them reach their goals.

Danger of Moving Landmarks

Today, we should be keenly aware of the danger of tampering with the old landmarks. In the sense that the old landmarks help us to know the extent of our inheritance, all of us should be sensitive to erosions of the faith caused by our laid back attitude toward God. Our inheritance is the kingdom of heaven. But little by little it is escaping many of us because the social demands of our time has moved the landmark!

Church attendance and Bible Study is an old land mark. Yet today society dictates that worship of God is optional and Bible study is unnecessary to live a full Christian life. As a result many people make periodic appearances at church worship services out of obligation to custom. An even smaller number attend Sunday School or have regular bible study habits of their own. Because our inheritance claim to the kingdom of heaven is based soley on the word of God every Christian should have a general working knowledge of the bible and know how to defend their faith against critics and skeptics. Every Christian should worship regularly and sing praises to the power and majesty of God. Obedience to God's command to assemble on the first day of the week, is a landmark of our spiritual inheritance. When Sunday worship becomes optional, and bible study is replaced with emotional experiences, then we know that someone has tampered with our inheritance and we need to get back to the old land mark!

Faith in the Christ and the saving power of the blood of the lamb is an old land mark. There is no substitute for the fulfilling presence of Christ in our lives. Knowing Christ for yourself is an old land mark. Today there are many who have turned the church into social clubs, and extensions of their fraternal organizations. Others embrace it because of its political possibilities, economic strengths, and self help capabilities. While the church does have many avenues of expression as it carries out its mission, it still has the same mission that it was given by Christ when he said "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost." Teaching about Christ is the old land mark. Preaching about Christ is the old land mark! Saving souls in the name of Christ is the old land mark. Those who suggest that the Church has any mission other than saving the lost, preaching the gospel to the poor, healing the brokenhearted, preaching deliverance to the captives and the recovery of sight to the blind (Matthew 4:18) have moved the old land mark. As church men and women we need to stay close to the old land mark, which is the cross of Jesus.

When we go back to that old rugged cross we discover a new sense of power and being. We should tell the world that the cross is the old land mark. Tell them that the cross:

—Doorway of deliverance
—Hallmark of Hope
—Seal of Salvation
—Anchor of our Assurance —Rock of our Refuge
—Fountain of our Forgiveness
—Foundation of Our Freedom

No wonder the song writer declares: "At the cross, at the cross, where I first saw the light and the burdens of my heart roll away!. It was there by faith I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!"

Landmarks help you Remember God's Goodness

It's good to go back to the old landmarks because they help us remember what the Lord has done for us!

When Israel crossed the River Jordan, Joshua placed 12 stones in the river bed and another 12 on the edge of the river as land marks. He said when the children of future generations see the land mark and ask “What mean these stones” that they should then be told the story of how God brought them through the sea and the wildnerness to safety on the other side.

David went back to the old landmark and concluded in Psalms 126:3 “The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad”

When we go back to the old land mark we see how the Lord has taken our misfortunes and turned them to our advantage. At the old land mark we see how the Lord took our:

—heartaches and turned them into hallelujahs —sorrows and turned them into joy —deficiencies and turned them sufficiencies —frustrations turned them into faith
—Perplexities and turned them into peace
—miseries and turned them into miracles

I don’t know about you, but I have found out that it’s good to try new methods and experiment with new ways, but whatever I do and wherever I go, every now and then,

I’ve got to come back to the old land mark!

When I go back to the old land mark I can make sure that I’m going in the right direction. No wonder the song writer would declare: “Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land, I am weak but thou art mighty, hold me in thou powerful hand!”

Remember Lot's Wife

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La 71201

July 7, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"But his wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt." Gen 19:26; "Remember Lot's Wife" Luke 17:32

Introduction

One of the famous selections of the late Nat "King" Cole was "Looking Back." The ballad described a man who reviewed his past successes and failures and focused on his love for his mate as the central point of his life. While many today may not be familiar Mr. Cole's song, there are many who spend an inordinate amount of time looking back.

There is great wisdom in looking back. But the man who dwells on looking back must remember that those who look back and walk forward at the same time will bump into something or fall over the future in a very short time. Such people run the risk of becoming slaves to their memories denying the future and focusing on the past alone. The marriage that focuses on past problems won't be able to claim future successes. The businessman that spends all of his time remembering when times were good, can't focus on keeping his business in the black today. A man or woman that is haunted by past failures will find it difficult to move forward today. The past, even one rich with pleasant memories, can be a stumbling block to progress, if it has a sharper focus than the vision we have for the future.

As Christians, we rejoice in the triumphs and failures of the past. However, we pause occasionally to reflect on the past, but our march is ever forward. We are new creatures in Christ and as such "old things are past away and all things become new."

Our resolve is to live for Jesus and to follow him without regrets. A song writer put it this way "I have decided to follow Jesus..no turning back, no turning back."

Exposition

This text focuses on words of Jesus as he warned his disciples about becoming too attached to the things of this world. His urging was that they should never be caught, even for a moment, outside of obedience to God because his return could be any moment. He illustrated his point with three words: "Remember Lot's Wife!"

Genesis 19 gives the account of Lot, a righteous man, who lived in the city of Sodom with his wife and two daughters. Sodom was a city of decadence, homosexuality, and willful disobedience to God's will. Lot had chosen the cities of the plain because they offered exciting opportunities. Since there is no record of his coming to Sodom with a wife, it is believed that he met and married his wife in Sodom, a city that made its fortune from the mining of salt. Salt mining and the profits made from its sale made for comfortable living in Sodom. The people lived and dressed well, lived prosperously, and enjoyed themselves because of the thriving salt business. When God sent angels to deliver Lot and his family from destruction in Sodom, they were told the leave the city, run for the mountains and don't look back. On the day of the destruction angels took Lot and his family by the hand and pulled them to the outskirts of the city and pointed them toward the mountains. But as the rain of fire came down from heaven, destroying the prosperity of the city, Lot's wife stopped going forward and looked back as she watched all of the pleasant memories of her past go up in smoke. At that point God turned her into a pillar of salt, the embodiment of her hopes and dreams. Lot and the remainder of the family kept walking and did not look back.

Don't Look Back

Throughout the word of God, there is repeated encouragement for everyone to "look back" and to remember. Moses took the whole book of Deuteronomy to tell Israel to remember. Many of the prophets challenged Israel to remember. But the instance of Lot's wife gives us an example of what not to remember.

Today, there are many of us which have been delivered from worldliness, sin and lusts. Like Lot's wife, God's guiding angel took us by the hand and brought us out of damnation to a better life. But despite our deliverance there are many today who still look back with nostalgia on the life left behind, and lose themselves in the meantime.

Many have been delivered from alcohol and cigarette dependences that turned them into alcoholics and threatened their health. Many have been delivered from the need to spend endless hours in bars and discos trying to find happiness in smoke filled rooms. Many have been delivered from lives of drugs and crime that destroyed the moral fiber of their existences. But yet, though delivered by the hand of God himself, some "look back" and glamorize these days and characterize them as the "good old days." Some, as they reflect on the "good old days" are snatched back into the past by the offer of just one more drink, just one more smoke, just one more hit, just one more dance, and just one more stickup. To such, "looking back" is dangerous.

Lot's wife turned into salt because it symbolized her unwillingness to turn loose the "old days" or good times made possible through salt profits. Today if we were given the same fate, some of us would become whiskey bottles, packages of cigarettes, dollar bills, or automobiles. Some of us would become fishing poles! Some men would become women! Some women would become men!

Lot's wife was delivered, saved, but looked back!

We are not told not to tell of our past in testimony. We are warned not to look back on the sins of our lives with nostalgia. We are warned not to yearn for past worldliness.

Christ's warning was short and simple: "Remember Lot's wife." She was a woman who could not turn loose the past. Though thousands of years have passed since, there are many today who cannot turn loose the past. For them it is not a focal point upon which to pause and reflect but it is the essence of "real life" as they knew it, and desire it, and would return to it, if they could. To such yearning's Christ says: "Remember Lot's wife."

Just as Lot and his family were told to keep walking and don't look back, so should the modern pilgrim do the same. Keep walking; going forward without regrets.

Seek Higher Ground

Lot and his family were saved from destruction, but were told not to hang around that from which they had been saved. They were told to head for the mountains, to go to higher ground!

Likewise we, who have been saved by the grace of God, should never have second thoughts about our salvation, but constantly move toward higher ground.

David declared: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord which made the heaven and the earth." We should seek higher ground. Perhaps that's what Johnson Oatman had in mind when he wrote these words of a great hymn: "My heart has no desire to stay, where doubts arise and fears dismay; thou some may dwell where these abound, my prayer, my aim is higher ground. Lord lift me up and let me stand on heaven's table land; a higher plane than I have found, Lord, plant my feet on higher ground."

I don't know about you but there is nothing in my old life I'd like to go back to. Our past is a good place to be from but should be no place to go. Our testimony is that of the song writer who said: "Look where he brought me from...He brought me out of darkness into the marvelous light, look where he brought me from!"

He brought me out of:
-Guilt into his forgiveness, and I won't go back!
-Foolishness into his truth, and I won't go back!
-Shame into glory, and I won't go back!
-Sing into salvation, and I won't go back!
-Disgrace into amazing grace, and I won't back!
-Hatred into love, and I won't go back
-Worry into joy, and I won't go back

-Loneliness into friendship, and I won't go back!

I don't know about you but I've decided like Paul to forget those things which are behind and press toward mark of the prize of the high calling!

When you look back, look back to calvary and see:

-Love at work!

-Mercy manifested!

-Hope developed

-Faith given the victory!

Look back to Calvary and find joy of your salvation...it's Jesus!

Ask for the Old Paths

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 7, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls..." Jeremiah 6:16a

Introduction

Reunions stir memories! Many people attend class and family reunions in the summer months. This is the time they return to the old stomping ground, meet old friends and reflect on fond memories. Class reunions become more important with age. The class of 91 probably won't really feel the need to reunite until 2011. As time passes more class members will desire to fellowship and remember the old times. Family reunions offer a different dimension, bringing together family members who are distant and introducing younger family members to relatives they do not know.

The common denominator of all reunions is that they prompt us to discover and rediscover the old paths. They give us an opportunity to think about tradition, heritage and the good times. It is a time when we sift the good from the bad and seek to find ourselves amidst an ever growing tide of "progress."

Progress is inevitable and so is change. But there is much to be gained from walking the old paths and listening to the voice of history as it speaks through the voiceless dust of the beaten path. In the wealth of the past there is strength for the future, therefore it is good sometimes to ask for the old paths.

As Christians, we understand the full meaning of the old path. We stand on principles that are as old as time but yet as fresh as the morning dew. We walk in the old path that is rooted in faith in God and service to our fellowman. If, in the name of progress, we are encouraged to walk away from our God, the Christian shall always find it necessary to "ask for the old path."

Exposition

This text focuses on Jeremiah as he speaks of Judah's impending destruction because it had abandoned the moral principle upon which it stood and had began to walk a new path that was distant from God.

The three world powers of the time were Assyria, which ruled the world for over 300 years; Egypt, which 1000 years earlier had been a world power and was jockeying for renewed prominence; and Babylon a rising world power. Judah had abandoned its devotion to God as its leaders pressed it to depend more heavily on its political alliances, idol worship, and oppression of the people for its salvation. The nation was traveling a new path which was totally foreign to the paths it had known for so many years.

Jeremiah lashed out against the moral decadence that the new attitude was promoting. Idol worship and its focus on sexual freedoms and the minimization of moral codes was a new path. Depending more on a political alliance with Egypt to save the nation from its enemy, Babylon, was a new path, especially for a nation that once depended solely on God for its deliverance, even in matters of politics. Oppressing the widows, robbing the public treasury and the tolerance for low morals among the leaders, were all new paths for Judah.

Jeremiah warned that any path, practice, life-style or attitude that directs the people away from God is undesirable. In this text verse God pleads with the people, through Jeremiah, to seek the old paths or principles upon which they once stood and once they have found them, he will give them protection and rest.

Something Old & Something New

Today, our times parallel the social conditions of this text. There is a general decline in morality as homosexuality comes out of the closet, and shacking, and promiscuity gain acceptability. Children are becoming adults at age 13 and an increasing number of people are becoming grandparents before they are 40. People today are making more money and saving less. Recent department of commerce reports revealed that only 30% of Americans under 40 have access to $2,000 or more without borrowing from family, friends or lending institutions. Welfare has become acceptable as a permanent life-style for many in this new generation.

There are too many in the work place who place the emphasis on the quantity of hours they work rather than the quality of the work performed. This is the meandering manner of the new path our society is taking. This new path, lined with the forage of individual freedom and self expression has led many away from God. As prosperity rises an increasing number of people, even church members, have less interest in studying God's word or public worship. As a result, Sunday school attendance is down, prayer meeting attendance is down, and public worship is down. People are preoccupied with smooth, free, life in the fast lane on the new path.

Against such a backdrop we find modern day Jeremiah's still sounding the appeal: "Ask for the old paths!"

Asking for the old paths, is not to suggest that everything that is old is divine. Neither does it suggest that every new innovation is evil. But it does suggest that every new path should take us in the same direction as the divinely inspired trails of old.

Asking for the old path suggest that the modern family, although redefined because of the changing role of each parent, must still be based on love, respect and a sense of community. It's something new, based upon something old.

Asking for old paths suggest that though new understand has given us access to greater sums of money, there is still some virtue in the old virtue of "saving for a rainy day." "A penny saved is penny earned" is an echo from the old path but it is valid even in this new day.

Asking for the old paths suggests that despite the rapid pace of our times there must always be quality time set aside for the worship and praise of God. It's an old fashioned idea that does not lend itself to the quickness of microwave technology, or the convenience of tuning out messages we don't want to hear by remote control. Giving God first place in our lives is an old path that is well worth following.

In our new circumstance there must be a delicate combination of something old and something new that gives us a modern way of accomplishing age old goals while living principles of truth and morality that have existed since the beginning of time. One without the other is counter productive. Following old methods alone contributes to stagnation and death. Following new methods that ignore the experience of the past is an invitation to failure.

Every generation must hear the words of the prophet "Seek the old paths!" Study them and reflect on them for in them is the way!

Divinely inspired Old Paths Lead to Glory

Finally, every man or woman should consider where the path selected will end. Jesus told his disciples that the path to destruction is broad and many people travel upon its pavement. But the path to glory is narrow and few are they that travel therein. The divinely inspired old path is a narrow path, but it is the highway to heaven.

Jeremiah told Israel that walking in the old paths was their only salvation because it would give them rest. By so saying, he gave us the clue to what lies at the end of the old path: rest!

The old paths will lead us to rest because the old paths, lead us to the Lord. I heard Jesus declare "Come unto me all ye that are burdened and heavy laden and I will give you rest!"

It might seem a little old fashioned but every now and then every good Christian looks for old paths. It's what the song writer meant when he wrote: "Take me back, take me back dear Lord, to the place where I first received you. Take me back, to where I first believed."

Every now and then we like to close up the fancy hymn books and neatly arranged chords and listen to an old sister declare "I love the Lord, he heard my cry!"

When we are weak..look for the old path, for there we heard the word declare' "But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost be upon you"

When we are hopeless..look for the old path, for there we heard the song writer declare “Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine, old what foretaste of glory divine!”

When we are defenseless.. look for the old path, for there we remember that “A mighty fortress is my God, ..a very present help in a time of trouble”

When I travel the old path I remember that the Lord is ABLE:

-To encouraged the faint!

-To Strengthen the weak!

-Clothe the naked!

-Protect the Feeble!

-Notice the Neglected!

Every time I travel the old path it leads me to calvary!

Every time I travel the old path it leads me Jesus!

Jesus! The same yesterday, today and forever more!

My testimony is sure: “Walk with me Lord, Walk with me, while I’m on this tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus to walk with me!”

A Good And Faithful Servant

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 8, 1991

SCRIPTURE: "His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant; thou has been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of the lord." Matthew 25:23

Introduction

Wake up servant there is work to do
There's a great plan that I have for you
I have considered others, but you are my best
You can do what I want, others will do less

Stand up servant there is work to do
A cobbler's wife, and a mother is chosen for you
Serve him and raise them and teach them my way
Do it faithfully, prayerfully, until your last day

Lay down servant you have finished your day
You've kept the faith, you have earned your pay
With finished task, done very well,
you have the joy of the Son
Now Lay down servant, you've finished your course
It was a job well done!

What is your purpose in this life? There are many who go through their entire lives without a focus on their mission and life purpose. These are souls that waste aimless years searching and wandering from place to place never settling on their peculiar mission. They bury their opportunities and fail to use them because uncertainty makes them fearful of failure.

One of the joys of the Christian life is the certainty of purpose that the Holy Spirit inspires in each of us. Somehow, the Saint can sense his purpose, understand it clearly and devotes his life's energies to fulfilling its demands. Sometimes that purpose calls for us to do great and mighty things that change the course of history and effect the lives of millions. Sometimes that purpose is simply to light one candle in one dark corner of the world and show a few others how to keep it burning.

Good parents have a noble purpose. They provide the nurture, substance, strength and fiber for their growing children until they are able to stand on their feet. Good mothers are virtuous women, who with humility have accepted their life's purpose and have placed the welfare of their family well above their own aspirations. Good fathers work hard to see that their families have provisions and protection. It is a humbling purpose, which once assumed, will consume the remainder of our days on this earth.

As Christians, we are comforted to know that those of us who finish our course, completing our mission successfully and with honor, will reap rewards in heaven, and enter joyfully into the presence of the Lord.

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he gives a parable to illustrate the nature of the enterprising servant. In this parable Jesus depicts three servants, two of whom take their charge from their master seriously and courageously do all they can to carry out their mission. A third takes his opportunity for service and buries it, fearing it might be lost. The master returns and calls each servant before him to get a report on their stewardship. Each of the first two servants reported a great work for their lord. The third did nothing with his opportunity to serve and failed to use it. The servants that carried out their mission were rewarded. The one who failed to act was punished and forbidden the praises of his lord.

This parable presents the only place in the bible where the phrase "Well done, good and faithful servant" is used. It is the phrase used to describe the servant that had both strength of character and conduct to carry out the mission. It is unique because it signifies a servant that had two of the greatest virtues necessary for the Christian life: Character and Conduct.

There are many in the world who have character, but come up short on the ability to follow through on their life's purpose. Others work hard at their life's purpose but are visibly short on the character end. The good servants of this parable had both the character and the conduct that would earn them the praise of their lord as "Good and Faithful" servants.

Character

Character is best described as moral strength or excellence. It is those personal traits that identifies them as men and women of the world or men and women of the Lord.

Christian character is generally Christ like. It is humble but yet strong. It is sensitive but yet bold. It stands for right, opposes evil, and works to promote the cause of justice everywhere.

How can you recognize a woman of Character? She will exemplify the traits of Godly women! Like Hannah, she will bring her children before the Lord. Like Naomi, she will embrace her daughter in law as her own. Like Mary, she will be obedient to the will of God. Like Ruth she will devote her life to God and conclude "your people shall be my people, and your God shall be my God."

In the most common sense, character is the ability to live before your family and friends marching to beat of a heavenly cadence. Character is listening to God rather than man. Character is teaching Sunday School on Sunday and living the lesson seven days a week. Character is singing about God's grace in the church choir and then living gracefully when the singing is over.

Jesus describes the good servant as a person with character and inner strength that allows them to stand tall with God while never losing the common touch.

Conduct

While Jesus pointed to the "goodness" of the productive servant he also praised the "faithfulness" of the servant. Faithfulness is a reference to conduct and performance. Those who are faithful are those who carry out their mission with diligence despite handicaps, discouragements, and setbacks. There are many servants who have great character but are unable to be faithful for various reasons.

Faithfulness is what Abraham displayed when he was willing to sacrifice his son at the command of God. Faithfulness is what Mary and Martha displayed at the crucifixion when they were willing to stand by the Lord's side even though many of the disciples and gone into hiding. Faithfulness refers to the ability to pursue the mission with every ounce of energy available, with every breath of life.

When each of us comes into judgment it won't be the service we began that will be rewarded, but the service that we completed. Like there is no virtue in cake that was never baked or pie that never made it to the pan, a service that is only begun and never completed receives not accolades in heaven. What brings joys in heaven is the completed race! That's why Paul could write: "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness."

Faithfulness is the willingness to go on despite advancing age!

Faithfulness is the willingness to continue in prayer for others, if not in person then over the telephone!

Faithfulness is the willingness to carry out the mission even though sickness invades your person and aches and pains make life uncomfortable.

Faithfulness is undiminished loyalty to the mission! That's probably what Isaac Watts had in mind when he said "A charge to keep I have, A God to glorify. An ever dying soul to save and fit it for the sky!"

The Servant's Reward

Christ reminds us that each "good and faithful servant" has a reward in store. For the servants in the parable it was to be given authority over many things after being faithful over a few.

Today each of Christian servant wants to hear that final judgment given to the loyal servants: “Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of the lord.”

The great reward of the good and faithful servant is to enter “into the joy of thy lord.”

When we enter the joy of the Lord we exchange:

—Earthly pains for heavenly perfection
—Earthly crises for heavenly comfort —Earthly sadness for heavenly happiness
—Earthly toils for heavenly rest
—Earthly gloom for heavenly glory
—Earthly rubble for Heavenly riches

The faithful servant works until the mission is complete. That’s what the song writer had in mind when he wrote: “I’m going to work until my day is done. I’m going to work until the setting of my sun. I’ll cease from sorrow, there’ll be no tomorrow. I’m going to work until my day is done.”

When this life is over and our work is done the saint wants to hear the praises of the Son saying “Well Done!”

The Christian mother’s quest is to hear the Lord say: You have accepted the mission! You remained faithful to your vows! You reared your children in the fear of the Lord! You kept the faith! Well Done!

———

Seventy nine years ago God spoke to a sleeping soul and said:

Wake up servant there is work to do
There’s a great plan that I have for you
I have considered others, but you are my best
You can do what I want, others will do less

Stand up servant there is work to do
A cobbler’s wife, and a mother for two
Serve him and raise them and teach them my way
Do it faithfully, prayerfully, until your last day

On Monday June 3, 1991 the Lord said to Sister Eliza Davis Pierce

Lay down servant you have finished your day
You’ve kept the faith, you have earned your pay
With finished task, done very well,
you have the joy of the Son.
Now Lay down servant, you’ve finished your course
It was a job well done!

Talking Money

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright,Jr
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe,La

June 2, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"A feast is made for laughter, and wine maketh merry: but money answereth all things." Ecclesiastes 10:19

Introduction

There is a poster on my wall that reads: Money talks, but all mine says is "Goodbye!" Money does talk. Listen to what we hear when we listen to a dollar bill talk: "You hold me in your hands and call me yours. Yet I may as well call you mine. See how easily I rule you? To gain me you would all but die. You will work yourself to death to get me. Your marriages have fallen apart as you argue over me. You have sold yourself to keep me. You do so much to get me, but I'd be only paper, if it were not for your desire to have me. I go no place you do not send me. I keep strange company. I go to church and to bars, sometimes in the same pocket. My power is terrific. Handle me wisely lest you become my servant rather than I yours."

Obviously money has a lot to say and people stop to hear its words. A familiar television commercial boasted about the financial advice of E.F. Hutton and it promoted the idea that when E.F. Hutton talks, everybody listens. Money talks and the impact of its words to affect the lives of men, depends a great deal upon whose listening to what it has to say.

As Christians, we know that money talks. It takes money to live and move freely in a commercial society. But we are not overly concerned with what money has to say. We spend our lives listening to the talk of our Savior, because our father is rich in houses and land, and holds the wealth of the world in his hands. While money talks, we keep listening for the words of the savior who keeps reminding us that the "Earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof."

Money talks, but let us keep listening to God!

Exposition

This text finds Solomon, in his old age, reflecting on the power and impact of money on the lives of men. He warned against extravagance of parties, drinking and feasts at the expense of the people, because they all cost money.

Solomon's wisdom is reflected in the depth of this truth: With respect to things, money has much to say. He says it clearly "but money answereth all things." In essence, what Solomon said was that when it comes to "things", money talks. Things, refers to Matter and matter is defined as anything that takes up space and has weight. With respect to the material things of this world, Solomon concluded that money has a lot to say.

When Money Talks

What does money say to the average man?

When Balaam the prophet of God heard money speak it said to him that he could be rich and powerful if he simply prophesied against the children of Israel and caused them to detour away from the promised land. Money spoke loudly for him and he was enroute to follow its dictates until God caused a mule to speak to him on his way. There are many people who have heard the voice of money speak and gone against their own principles and better judgement to acquire what they believe to be a better life.

When Money spoke to Delilah, she betrayed a strong man and made him weak. How many people will betray their husbands and wives because of the love of money. There are some who marry, not for love but for financial security. Money spoke louder than love. Such was the case with Delilah as she left her lover in the hands of his enemies.

When money speaks to the average man it speaks in dreams. Money shows us visions of fancy homes, long cars, jewels, and the luxuries of life. When money speaks, it talks about power and control and dominance over the destinies of man. When money speaks, it usually reaches to the the lowest, emptiest parts of man and finds his lusts and whispers in their ears. Such was the case when Jesus was in the wilderness alone with himself and God. But in his solitude Money talked. Satan showed Christ the prospects of riches, fame and fortune, power and dominion. Money spoke loudly to Christ but his response was "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." When Money Talked, Jesus simply said "Get thee behind me Satan."

There are times when money can't talk loud enough. These are the times when the voice of prosperity comes face to face with principle. Men and women of principle turn a deaf ear to money talk, if it means giving up something that is more important to them.

Queen Jezebel wanted Naboth's vineyard. She admired it and wanted it to be a part of her own. She offered Naboth enormous sums of money for his vineyards and the price kept getting higher. No matter how much she offered he would not sell, because the vineyard was important to him.

The general idea of most people is that every man has his price and if offered enough even the best man will turn against his principle. In the Black community we have seen good men become the mindless puppets of politicians and power brokers outside of community because someone found their price and they listened to money talk. Churches tolerate a lower standard morality because some of those who give well don't live well, and their money talks loud enough to buy the church's silence toward their sins. Many in the work place suffer humiliation and injustice because of the paycheck they receive each week. It speaks louder than the principles upon which they believe.

1 Timothy 6:10 reminds us that the "Love of money is root of all evil; which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves throught with many sorrows." When we fall in love with money we listen when it talks. We recognize money as only a means to accomplish an end and not an end in itself then we are free from its dominating power. The love of money has brought down nations and peoples.

Judas was carried away with the love of Money. When a poor woman took expensive oils to bath and wash the feet of the master, he complained that the oils could have been used better if they had been sold and the money put in the treasuring for feeding the poor. His love of money over ruled his comittment to the kingdom of God and he betrayed the Lord for 30 pieces of Silver. While many frown upon Judas' action, there are millions today who sellout the Lord for much less ...especially when money talks.

Money Can't Buy Salvation

When the Apostles moved from place to place they ran upon one Simon who was a sorcerer of sorts. He saw them heal people in the name of Jesus and he came to them and offered them money to buy the power to heal. It was then than he learned that while money talks loudly with respect to "things" and can't be heard when it comes to things of the spirit.

Jesus warned men not to invest their treasures in silver and gold which can be corrupted but to build their treasure in heaven. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and its righteousness and all of the other things will be added unto you" was his advice.

Solomon said money talks with respect to things and that is a true statement, but when it comes to salvation, money has nothing say!

Money can buy temporary happiness, but it cannot buy Joy! David who had money, had no joy and cried out to God "restore unto me the joy of thy salvation!"

Money can buy companionship, but it can't buy love because "God is love" and God is not for sale.

Money can get you a front row seat in churches and high places, but it can't get you back seat in the king of heaven because I hear the word declare "Except a man be born again he cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven."

Money talks but when it came time for the salvation of men, heaven would only listen to the blood of the lamb!

When the Lord speaks, burdens are lifted!

When the Lord speaks, cares are removed!

When the Lord speaks, fears are banished!

When the Lord speaks, doubts are destroyed!

When the Lord Speaks, confusions are cleared!
When the Lord Speaks, crooked paths are straightened!
When the Lord Speaks, Failures become success!
When the Lord Speaks, Tragedies become triumphs!
Money talks but I heard the voice of Jesus say come unto me and rest. Lie die, lie down thy weary one, thy head upon my breast!

My Grace Is Sufficient

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 2, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me." 2 Cor 12:9

Introduction

Have you ever felt drained and worn out? Have you ever felt like you just could not go on? If so then you can probably relate to the story of the pilgrim in the wilderness.

A pilgrim, so the story goes, was on his journey home and had traveled through beautiful green valleys, and rested in the cool of the day. But after a while his journey carried him through the desert, which was without water, shade or even a cool breeze. Soon he began to thirst and he cried out to God: "Lord, I'm thirsty. Help me find water." In response he heard the Lord reply: "My Grace is sufficient." God led him to a pile of rocks and told him to pick up one and carry it.

Troubled by the additional burden, the traveler, called out to God: "Lord, I'm thirsty!" Again his answer was: "My Grace is sufficient." God showed him a large dried gourd and told him to carry it. Nearly exhausted, the pilgrim carried the rock and the gourd, frustrated with God. "I asked for water and he made my load heavier by adding a rock. I asked again and all he gave me was an empty gourd."

Under the cover of night the pilgrim stopped and rested against what appeared to be a large tree. He cried out to God that he could not go on. As he closed his eyes, completely drained, God's response was the same: "My Grace is sufficient for thee."

When the pilgrim opened his eyes the next morning he was laying against a great cactus, bulging with juices. God said "take the rock and cut the cactus. Take the gourd and catch the juices as they flow. When you have finished, fill your gourd and it will be enough to carry you home." The pilgrim gave thanks to God and rejoiced for truly God's Grace was sufficient for his need.

As Christians we feel drained at times, because we are human. It appears that instead of getting lighter, our load gets heavier. Sometimes we are frustrated because, the help we ask God for only seems to bring additional burdens. These are frustrating moment. But it's in moments like these that we should remember that God supplies our needs as we need them. If we continue to obey him he will prove to us that his Grace is sufficient for us to have life, and have it more abundantly.

Exposition

This text considers the Apostle Paul as he writes his second Epistle to the Corinthians. It addresses a peculiar moment in his life when he was frequently frustrated by what he called a "thorn in the flesh." There are two schools of thought with respect to his thorn in the flesh. One holds that it refereed to the presence of a physical illness that made his ministry more difficult. This school of thought suggests that the illness is Chronic Ophtalmia, a disease of the eyes. It was not extremely painful, but it made him repulsive in appearance. He referred to this illness in Galatians 4:13-15 and thanked the Galatians for tolerating his presence which must have been troubling to gaze upon. The second school of thought suggests that the "thorn" was not an illness but the presence of a "Messenger of Satan" which followed him everywhere he went. It focuses on the word "messenger" from the Greek word "Aggelos" which means "Angel of Satan." This school supposes that Paul believed that the troubles he faced in town after town were caused by this "messenger" which was a "thorn in his flesh."

Whichever of the theories is correct, they both have one thing in common; they point out that Paul was frustrated by something that made his work for God difficult. On three different occasions he asked God to remove the thorn, but God's answer was always the same "My Grace is sufficient." It appeared that the more he asked, the more troubles kept coming and always the response from God was "My Grace is sufficient for thee."

Paul concluded that God had good purpose in his actions because the constant frustrations that he felt kept him humble when it would have been easy to be caught up in pride. In his weakness, he wrote in verse 9, he became whole or complete. He resolved to glory in his frustrations knowing that if he does not give up that the glory of God will eventually rest upon him and give him the victory.

Three Thorns

Today there are many like Paul who are trying to live the Christian life but are troubled by a messenger of Satan which acts as a thorn in their flesh. Even the strongest Christian has experienced the presence of this thorn. Consider the various kinds of thorns:

ECONOMIC THORNS: There are some who are trying to live the Christian life, but they can never seem to get their finances in order. They try to save and something depletes their savings. Expenses keep mounting: Household appliances break, the car won't run, and the children need new shoes. Financially problems follow many of us around like a magnetic cloud. We worry so much about our finances that we can't think straight enough to talk to God effectively. Like Paul, who asked for the removal of his thorns, we have begged the Lord, on more occasions than one, to remove this thorn but it remains. After asking the Lord to remove it three times, Paul considered his thorn had never stopped him from accomplishing what he set out to do, but it was humbling. In dealing with our finances, perhaps God is allowing us to accumulate just enough to keep us humble, knowing what we would do if we had more.

SOCIAL THORNS: There are many who live as Christians despite the frustrations we face in the community of men. Race discrimination, class differences, social injustice, and police brutality are just a few of the thorns that collectively effect many Christians as they try to live for God. Life would be much easier if we did not have to face these unfavorable conditions daily. They make our relations with men more difficult and they make it hard to be a Christian. Like Paul, we as a people have asked for their removal, but they still exist. In hindsight, the very presence of these social thorns help us to remember who we are and what others really think of us. We continue to progress, as a people, but these thorns tend to keep us humble, lest we forget our African ancestry and roots in the Black American community.

PERSONAL THORNS: These thorns involve our health and emotions. There are some of us who do well for the Lord, but feel we could do much more if we were not plagued by ill health personally or in our family. Sickness slows our pace. At times it drains our energy. We could do so much more without its presence. Likewise with our loves and enemies. Problems in courtship and marriage seem to plague some Christians and follow them from year to year. Others are always plagued by enemies who twist their words, misinterpret their deeds and impute bad motives on their actions. It is at least frustrating. How many times have Christians prayed for the removal of such thorns, but yet they seem to persist. Paul's answer here is that they keep us weak or in other words humble. They serve a purpose that is to our good for "all things work together for the good of them that love the Lord, according to his purpose."

Enough Grace For Our Needs

God's response to Paul was his grace was sufficient. When God says "My Grace is sufficient" he means that he gives us blessings and assistance in proportion to our daily need and in proportion to our ability to handle it.

Israel complained to God that there was no bread, so God's Grace rained down bread from heaven. But it was only enough grace to carry them from day to day and a double portion on the weekend. If there had been more grace than was needed, Israel would have stocked piled it decided they no longer needed the Lord.

Jesus taught us how to pray and in his prayer he said "give us our daily bread." Not tomorrow's bread, or enough to carry us until next year,but give us our "daily" bread.

If we are burdened by the presence of troubles that frustrate our Christian journey we should hear the voice of God speaking to us saying "My Grace is sufficient" for thee!

"My Grace" can take the worse and turn it into the best!

"My Grace" can take the least and turn it into the most!

"My Grace" can take the lowest and turn it into the highest!

“My Grace” can take a prison and turn it into a paradise!

“My Grace” can take a shadow and turn it into sunshine!

“My Grace” is sufficient for the lonely, no matter how pitiful they may seem!

“My Grace” is sufficient for the weak, no matter how feeble their steps!

“My Grace” is sufficient for the tired, no matter how exhausted their body!

“My Grace” is sufficient for the soul for it brings it to salvation

“My Grace” is sufficient for heart for it fills it with Joy”

No wonder the song writer declared “Amazing Grace how sweet the sound that saved a wretch like. I once was lost but now I’m found, blind but now I see.”

It was grace that carried a cross up Calvary’s hill!

It was grace that died for my sins!

But early Sunday morning it was grace...that rose from the grave and grace will lead me through!

Giant Steps

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE:"Thou hast also given me the shield of thy salvation: and thy right hand hath holden me up, and thy gentleness hath made me great. Thou has enlarged my steps under me, that my feet did not slip." Psalm 18:35-36

Introduction

Have you ever played the children's game "Father May I?" It's an interesting little game where one child is the caller and others line up some distance away and attempt to tag the caller by moving forward to touch him. The caller calls on the players and gives them a set number of steps to take, and instructions about how those steps are to be taken. The steps a player is given include "Baby Steps","Leap Frogs","Side Steps","Back Steps", and "Giant Steps."

When given an assignment of steps the player must respond "Father May I?" Once given permission to move the player executes his steps, moving closer to the caller. Any player that forgot to say "Father May I?" lost his chance to get more steps and fell behind in the line. The first player to tag the caller was the winner, and those who were fortunate enough to get giant steps made it to the caller the fastest.

To win a player needed two things. First he needed the favor of the caller because the caller almost certainly determined who won, with his ability to give side steps or leap frogs. Secondly, no player could expect to win without acknowledging the caller. No matter how many steps they were given, if the player forgot to acknowledge the caller he missed a turn.

There is a parallel to this children's game and our progression through life. There are many who begin the walk through life with success as a goal. They take baby steps and leap frogs as they move forward. Some are slowed in the progress by side steps and back steps and still others move quickly taking giant steps. The Christian youth learns the rules of life early. He learns that he can gain favor with God if he acknowledges him, respects him and follows his instruction. In a literal sense the Christian youth learns early that one secret to winning in life is never to forget to ask "Father May I?"

As Christians we keep our eye on the goal of seeing Jesus one day. He moves in us and we have our strength in his being. We can take giant steps in life and make it to our goals if we never forget Proverbs 3:6: "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths."

Exposition

The 18th Psalm is a psalm of reflection and deliverance. It was written by David at the close of his life as he reflected on his successes and failures. Chronologically, it is numbered "18" but was actually his last psalm. It is extracted from his experience in 2 Samuel 22:26-28 as he reviewed how God had advanced him, step by step, through life.

David rose from a mere shepherd boy to a mighty warrior as he fought against Goliath with only a slingshot and five smooth stones, that was a giant step from shepherd to king. He was hunted as a criminal by jealous King Saul and spent a great deal of time hiding in hills and caves, that was a side step. He went from fugitive to King of Israel in a mighty leap. He involved himself with murder in his sin with another man's wife, that was a step backward. He repented and gave God the praise for all his mighty works, that was another giant step in the right direction.

This psalm recounts the strides and steps of David's life, small ones, leaps and even steps backward. He gave all of the praise and glory to God for his final triumph.

Baby Steps

Pre-teens today begin their service to God with baby steps. The baby steps begin by coming to Sunday School, bible school, learning bible passages and learning to praise God in small ways. These small experiences build hope and faith for the great things to come. They even give courage in the face of family trouble, and trouble at school.

Baby steps begin with a very simple truth: "Yes Jesus loves me, for the bible tells me so." Knowing that God loves you and wants the best for you certainly helps you to move forward with confidence.

Leap Frogs

If the pre-teen years represent baby steps then moving from pre-teen to Adolescence is a leap frog. It is a big jump. It's the time when hairstyles, clothing and being popular suddenly become important. It's the time when interest in the opposite sex arouses, the body changes, and minds begin to wander.

It is a confusing time when youth are torn between choices and values taught by the home and church and the values of their peer group. Home and church says fear God and respect him every day. But the real world on the school campus gives confusing signals: It's O.K. to go to church, but those who try to actually live by God's rules are usually called Nerds.

Leaping into teen-age years is a big jump for anybody. One day you are wearing ribbons in your hair and the next day you are wearing stockings on your legs, make-up on your face and gloss on your lips. One day a boy talks in a high shrilling soprano and a few days later he is a rumbling baritone.

Christian adolescents jump into their teen-age years with the words of Eccesiastes on their mind: "Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say I have no pleasure in them."

Sidesteps and Backsteps

But if there are baby steps and leap frogs, every teen, before he finishes high school, will face some side steps and back steps.

Sidesteps are those times when teens lose their focus. They do not go forward and do not go backward they move to the side while others pass them by. These are the times when they do not give their best, and they are not proud of their grades and general school performance. Some lose interest in school because of family or personal problems and step aside as the rest of their generation passes them by. Some get involved with gangs or delinquent activities that take them off the right track and they are sidestepped. Those who sidestep can never make it to the goal!

If sidesteps are troublesome, then backsteps are worse. These are teens who get involved in crime, drugs, and alcohol. Those who take a step backward are those who become fathers and mothers while they are still children themselves. Those who are stepping backward have an impossible time going forward. Continuously walking backward will not end in success it will only put you in the back of the growing crowd of competitors in your generation.

A side step or two does not have to mean the end. Those who have ventured in the wrong direction can profit from it. We can turn from gangs, crime, drugs and alcohol. Although you may have fathered a child or become a mother, you don't have to do it again. Many people have made backward steps, but the key is whether or not they continue moving backwards or correct their course and move forward again. For David his backward steps involved adultery. But he repented and asked God to "Create in me oh Lord a clean heart." Youth today who have made backward steps can get back on the right track just as easy.

Giant Steps

Today's graduates, between them, have realized the entire range of David's experiences. They have taken baby steps, leap frogs, sidestepped and some may have backstepped a little. But as they ponder the impact of graduation they realize that it is one of the giant steps in life.

While graduation is one giant step, graduates should remember that this step is just one in a progression of steps that they will take in life before they make it to "home base."

Now, as young adults, they begin again in a new phase of life they have not experienced before. It has new challenges, pitfalls and dangers. But, just as they have successfully moved through their pre-teen and adolescence, we challenge them to move ahead one step at a time, one day at a time.

But every graduate should keep in mind the cardinal rule of the game of life, before you move, don't forget "father may I?" Don't forget to talk to God! You may become engineers, doctors, union workers or soldiers, but never make a step without acknowledging God.

If you acknowledge and trust the Lord he will:

—Hear your prayers
—Forgive your sins
—Solve your problems
—Fulfill your dreams
—Satisfy your soul
—Calm your nerves
—Direct your footsteps

As you take this giant step in life remember the words of the great hymn "Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, Pilgrim through this barren land ..I am weak but thou are mighty, hold me in thou powerful hand!"

Take this giant step holding on to the faith that God will guide you every step of the way.

The song writer was right when he declared "Step by step, we'll make this journey, even though the way seems hard, hard, hard! Step by step, we'll make this journey, if we just put our trust in God.!"

A Teacher's Evaluation

A Funeral Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 22, 1991

SCRIPTURE:"I have taught thee in the way of wisdom; I have led thee in right paths." Proverbs 4:11

Introduction

Is there a fair way to evalute an educator? Today, there is considerable public sentiment in favor of teacher evaluations, although there is no clear consensus on just how it can be done effectively and objectively. There is a wealth of subjective evaluation already in process.

In the course of his career, the educator is mixed bag of sentiment from those he works with and the public in general. If he asks others for advice-he's incompetent. If he gets things done his way-he's a dictator. If he sticks to fundamentals-he's antique. If he insists on discipline-he's too firm. If his pupils run wild, he's too easy. If he has a sense of humor, he's not intellectual. If he can't take a joke, he's cold and heartless. If he greets the ladies with smile, he's fresh. If he doesn't, then he lacks finesse. If he agrees, he's a rubber stamp. If he disagrees, he's hard to get along with. Everybody has their own opinion about educators, and if teachers were evaluated by the standards of some, most of them would always come up short.

The prospect of facing subjective evaluators who could ruin brilliant teaching careers with the stroke of a pen has caused many educators to abandon their profession rather than undergo evaluation of their performance with an imperfect instrument. Certainly the incompetent fear evaluations, but even the best educators desire impartial and objective review.

Whether we want it or not, there will be a teacher's evaluation. Just as there will be a lawyer's evaluation and a plumber's evaluation and laborer's evaluation, there will be an evaluation day for every living soul. The evaluation will be performed by a just and fair judge, using a uniformed standard.

When life's final school bell rings and tests, pupil assignments, inservice workshops and faculty meetings have ended, the educator will most certainly be judged by the same standard as everyone else: Was he true to his God? Was he true to himself? Was he true to his calling?

As Christians we look forward to evaluation day. Unlike the sinner who worries about it, we know our work will be judged by a just God who understands our shortcomings, has forgiven our corrected mistakes and wants us to join him in the glorios Kingdom of heaven.

Exposition

The Book of Proverbs, written by King Solomon, is a collection of truths that he learned about life, the hard way. His own personal life was a merry-go-round of trial an error, truth and consequences. Although he was a wise man and had many virtues he had his weaknesses. He had a plethora of marriages: 300 wives and 700 girl friends. Though he was great and wise he built his elegant lifestyle with an extremley high taxation of the people. He experienced both success and failure. The truths he recorded in Proverbs were a summation of his experiences in life. His conclusion about the importance of his life was not in the vastness of his education, the number of houses that he built and accumulated, or what semblance of prosperity he had achieved. In his declining years Solomon concluded that the most important things in life were not possessions but were those things which reflected the fear and respect of God.

He became a great teacher. He taught his children from his experiences, both the good and the bad. He wrote a whole book about the successes, mistakes and trials of his life, named it Ecclesiastes, and taught it to his children. The proverbs were taught to his children and the children of the kingdom. Solomon was the first and only king who provided the curriculum materials for and encouraged the instruction of the young in such a way. For all practical purposes he was perhaps the world's first supervisor of elementary education.

In Proverbs 4 Solomon talked with one of his children as his life neared its end. He explained that he has taught them the best that he could, from the wisdom of his experience. He emphasized that he lead his children in the right path, even in areas where he himself had failed. His desire was for his children to gain wisdom and understanding from his experience. To the best of his human ability Solomon explained to his children "I have led you in the right path" or "I have pointed you in the right direction."

The Three Dimensions of Wisdom

The greatest job of any teacher is to help his student use life wisely. The best teachers are those who catch the imagination and hearts of their students. The mystical instruction and wisdom of experience is an invaluable talent that is difficult to measure. It's a balance that cannot be achieved within the rigid structure of bulletin 741, a curriculum guide, or tightly packed time tables that allow a few minutes for teachers to machine gun information, but no time to creatively share the wisdom of their knowledge and experience in pratical applications. The danger to such a sterile and clinical approach to teaching is that we graduate generations of of educated fools, armed with knowledge without wisdom.

Solomon taught his own children before he attempted to teach or supervise the instruction of others. The wisdom that Solmon shared was simply that they should Respect God, be true to yourself, and give life their best shot.

The first wisdom-lesson any father teaches his children is respect of God. He shows them by precept and example exerpted from his own experience, that there is a higher being to whom he is responsible. He teaches his children that the moral cadence is set in a distant horizon and it determines the pace of our march through life. The good father teaches his children to respect the power of God, appreciate the love of God, and to pray for the mercy of God.

One of byproducts of knowing God is that it helps you develop a second dimension of wisdom: to know yourself. Only when we knows ourselves as reflected in the perfect will of God do we come to grips with the fact that we are prone to sin and mistakes, and doomed to self destruct without him. When we learn who we are and accept our fallibilities, we are humbled at our unworthiness. When a man knows that he does not chart his own course that's when he can say like the song writer: "Have thine own way Lord, Have thine own way. Thou art the potter, I am the clay. Mold me and shape after thy will, as in thy presence I'm yielded and still."

The third dimension of wisdom is to be true to your calling. It is wisdom to pursue excellence. To tackle your life's calling with everything you have is wise advice. This is that old fashioned wisdom which says: "If you can't be the pine at the top the hill, be a shrub in the valley. But be the best little shrub in the valley." If you are teacher, then teach with everything that you have in you! Good teachers always remember the maxim: That to TEACH they must REACH! Reach for the student who is lashing out at the world because nobody cares..Reach! Reach into the mind and soul of the intellectually abandoned and pull out their best..Reach! While it is true that you must teach to reach, it is also true that to REACH you must TEACH. Despite the complaints and troubles that make it difficult...Teach! Despite the headaches and obstacles that come your way! Teach! Despite frustrating bureaucracy, troublesome paperwork and disinterested parents...teach!

Teacher's Evaluation

It is a good thing to be a teacher. It is even better to be a Christian who is a teacher. Christian's who are teachers do their best in service and don't worry so much about the evaluation of men, but focus on that great evalution they will receive when they stand before God.

While others worry about it, the Christian can't wait for his "STAR" evaluation.

The evaluator may ask: Does he know the Lord? I hear the saint respond "I know the Lord will answer prayer, for I tried him for myself!" -Give him a star!

Has he been Saved? Just the other Sunday I heard him sing "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore; very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more. But the master of the sea heard my despairing cry and from the waters lifted me now safe am I. Love lifted me!" —Give him a Star!

Has he been faithful to his calling? The saint declares: I've done my best. The songwriter said: "When I've done the best I can. If my friends don't understand then my Lord will carry me Home. After I have done my best I will find a peaceful rest, when my savior carries me home. When my best I've tried to live, my mistakes he will forgive, when my savior carries me home!" —Give him a Star!

———————

On Sunday May 19, 1991 Charles Edwards, a father, and a great educator, was called for his final evaluation. If respect for God, a repentant born again spirit, and service to others are the measures, there is most certainly a star in his crown.

No. 454-St. John's Day

Along Came John!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 24, 1993

SCRIPTURE: There was a man sent from God, whose name was John.The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe.He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light. John 1:6-8

Introduction

How would like to have the same name as someone else? It Could be confusing, especially if both are known by their first name and rarely their last name. Such a case would be similar to the little girl that walked in the crowded train station with her father and held tight to his hand. There were people everywhere and she held tight because she did not want to let him out of her sight. However, when her father let go of her hand to get the tickets she was bumped in the crowd and lost sight of her father. She began to panic because she could not see her father anywhere. She ran to a police officer and told him that she was lost from her father. She described him as a man with an Afro.That stumped the police because the station was filled with any number of African-American men who could fit her description. The little girl wondered why they seemed so confused and asked the nature of the problem. "We don't know where to begin" said one officer. The little girl innocently responded "That's O.K. call over the loudspeaker and ask for 'daddy' and you'll find him." "Is there anyone here that answers to the name 'daddy'" asked the police. Immediately a dozen hands went up; nearly every hand in the station. It seemed that everyone answered to the same name. When the girl was more specific, they found her dad.

That is the dilemma that many bible students have trying to tell the difference between the two Johns of the Gospels, John the Baptist and St. John, often called the evangelist. Both were highly important men to the ministry of Jesus, but novice bible students and beginners in the faith usually get the two mixed up. Sometimes John the Baptist gets credit for the fourth gospel and St. John gets credit for the wilderness revival. The two men both are important, but their roles in the development of the faith are uniquely different.

Free Masonry uses the life of each man to commemorate symbolic important steps in masonry. There are two distinct festivals that honor both men. On June 24th John the Baptist and his wilderness message is honored. On December 27th, St. John the Evangelist is honored in a separate and special festivity. Combined, those who share in the fellowship come to know the difference between St. John and John the Baptist. They also know the important role that each of them played in the life of Christ, fostering of the Gospel message to all generations.

Exposition

This text focuses on two men named John in the bible. One, John the Baptist, was a forerunner of Christ announcing to the world that he was about to come. The other, John the Evangelist, spent his life following Jesus and telling the world that he has already come.

John The Baptist

John the Baptist was the son of Zacharias and his wife Elizabeth. Though John was the son of a priest, he forsook the opportunity to become an important member of the acknowledged religious community and assume his role as a priest. He grew up in the tutelage of the priests. He was trained to be a priest because his father was a priest and it was expected that he would do the same. He studied the scriptures, learned the ritual and was probably privy to many private conversations and dealings of the priests.

However, John did not have any intention of becoming a priest himself. He was drawn to another mission and constantly retreated to the wilderness where he prayed and studied for long periods of time, surviving on locust and wild honey. As he grew older, his retreats into the wilderness became extended. He patterned himself after the prophet Elijah. He focused on reforming the evils and wrongs he saw in society and prepared himself to be a forerunner for the coming savior of the people. After many years of self preparation, sacrifice, study and prayer in the wilderness, John began his public ministry, just before Jesus was to begin his public ministry.

The main scene of most of his activity was the Jordan River. He baptized, or literally took converts completely under the water, as a symbol of their repentance and readiness to accept the Messiah when he made his appearance. Thousands came to hear John and were baptized. Many became his disciples. They learned how to fast, pray and live humbly. Many were dedicated followers, so much so that some, like Apollos, continued to baptize with John's Baptism 25 years after his death.

John The Evangelist

John the Evangelist or John the Apostle was a son of Zebedee, who was a Galilean fisherman. John was one of the earliest disciples called to follow Jesus. He and his brother James were known for their fiery natures. Jesus called the two of them the "sons of thunder." John constantly referred to himself in his gospel account as the "beloved disciple." He is seen involved with Jesus closely: 1)At the Last Super he leaned on Jesus' breast 2) At the cross he alone was faithful, and was entrusted with the care of Jesus' mother 3)At the tomb he was the first to believe in Jesus' resurrection 4)At the sea of Galilee he first recognized the Lord.

As the beloved disciple, John worked to interpret the new faith that Christ gave for a new age and time. He came at a time when bonds with Judaism were being broken and many gentiles came into the church. He worked to transplant the gospel into Greek soil. He taught men and women about the incarnation of Christ and how he became flesh that he might show men the way to eternal life. He spent his life preaching Jesus as both a historical person and as the invisible Lord who is ever present with his people.

The Baptists of Today

The two Johns of the gospel accounts have one thing in common, both talked of and were influenced by the same man, Jesus of Nazareth.

Today brothers and sisters, there are many new trends that will come among us, but it is imperative that as a new age dawns that we make sure that the focus never strays away from Jesus.

John the Baptist, constantly told his followers that he was not the light but he only bore witness to the light. We too should continue to bear witness to the power of the resurrected Lord.

Our primary function as witnesses is to tell a dying world that there is hope. Like John the Baptist, we must serve as God's advance man, warning a doomed society of approaching death and destruction and the coming of the kingdom of God. We must speak out against evil, learn to fast and pray and be willing to stand firm for God even at the expense of our own lives.

Our times are much like those of the two Johns of the Gospel accounts. There is racism and sexism in the land. Tyranny and corruption in government have made life unbearable for many. Religious leaders, instead of speaking against the evils of our day have chosen to become introverts, focusing on the rituals of their religion rather than speaking out against corruption. These difficult times call for modern day Johns to speak out against murder, robbery, sex sins, and a plethora of other problems that seem to beset us. We should constantly point the world to the second coming of Christ, the defeat of Satan, and the establishment of the Kingdom of Heaven by Christ himself. We should not preset ourselves as the light, but we should bear witness to the light.

Like John, Stay close to God

F inally, every Christian should follow the pattern of John the Evangelist and stay close to God. John constantly referred to himself as being close to the Lord, either by laying on his breast or being with him at the cross. Today every believer needs to take his example to heart and learn the strength and encouragement that comes from staying close to the Lord.

In the midst of praise and adulation, John was close to the Lord

In the midst of dangerous times, John was close to the Lord.

Today, in the midst of our battle against sin and Satan, the victory is certain if we stay close to the Lord.

When our burdens seem unbearable, we can bear them with great strength if we stay close to the Lord.

When you stay close to the Lord he will take the:

—bitter and make it better —weaker and make it stronger

—childish and make it mature —barren and make it fruitful

—poorer and make them richer

The Hebrew Boys learned that those who stay close to God, can get a "fourth man in the fire."

We should stay close to the Lord and give him our love, because he first loved us.

John's greatest testimony about the love of God came in John 3:16 "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life"

He loved us so much that he came to a sinful world and died on an old rugged cross.

He loved us so much that he laid down his life, but picked it up again after three days and nights! He loves us so much today that he offers salvation to anyone who will accept him!

Yes, Jesus loves me!

Yes, Jesus loves me, for the bible tells me so!

A Declaration of Independence

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

July 4, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof.."Leviticus 25:10 "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." Luke 4:18-19.

Introduction

What is the Fourth of July? For many it is a time for feasting, drinking and festivity? To others it is a time to participate in their favorite pastimes, try their hand at bar-be-Que and relax. Others find it a convenient time for school and family reunions. Children see it as a joyous time of fun, firecrackers and freedom to do many things out of the ordinary.These are parts of our nation's Fourth of July celebration. The day marks the signing of the Declaration of Independence by 56 men who represented the 13 original colonies of the United States. On May 17, 1776 all colonists were asked to pray for God's blessings on deliberations of colonial leaders as they put into words their feeling about the need for freedom for all men. The phrases they coined as they articulated their thoughts were lofty: "that all men are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights, among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

On July 4th, when the document was signed, the words of Leviticus 25:10 were inscribed on a large bell, known as the Liberty Bell, which they rang so hard, legend says that it cracked down the middle. The words on the bell read: "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof." People ran through the streets announcing colonial freedom. Nearly a century later Frederick Douglass would ask "What, to the American Negro, is your Fourth of July?" as he contrasted the irony of those who demanded personal freedom but still held human beings as slaves in the back of their mansions.

American Liberty did not come with the Declaration of Independence, but the process began. Freedom would be won only after the shedding of blood and the sacrifice of many lives. The freedoms we enjoy today have been bought with a price, first paid by an African-American, Crispus Attucks the first to die for American freedoms. Though we still fall short of the ideal, we are closer today to extending liberty to all than ever before.

As Christians we also celebrate the liberty of our nation and we are keenly aware of its cost. The forefathers of this nation gave their lives for independence but, we know that there is a greater freedom which we have all achieved, and that freedom is in Jesus. As we join the celebration of our nation's independence, let us forever keep in mind that we are totally dependent on our Lord to maintain the liberty he has given us through his act of sacrifice on Calvary!

Exposition

This text focuses on two independence declarations recorded in the Bible. One was short lived, the other was revolutionary to the point that it changed the entire world.

Leviticus 25 records God's Declaration of Independence for all who were enslaved, in debt, poor or otherwise physically entangled. It is generally referred to as "Jubilee." In short, Jubilee involved a series of Sabbath years, in patterns of seven, which required all of Israel to allow its fields and land to rest every seventh year. There was to be no work during this time and the poor were allowed to gather food from the fields freely. After seven such Sabbath years the nation was to observe a special year on the 50th' year called "Jubilee." On Jubilee day God made a "Declaration of Independence" that canceled all contracts, settled all debts, and freed all slaves. The original intent of the Jubilee was to remind man that everything belongs to God and nothing belongs to man permanently, whether it was land or personal property. True liberty and independence could only come from obedience and loyalty to God himself. As time passed however, men found tricky ways to get around the spirit of Jubilee and it became one of the few laws of Moses that were rarely observed. When Jubilee came, most people knew that they would be declared free in theory, but not in practice.

The idea of Jubilee seemed to fade into obscurity. Why? Because it required a spirit of brotherhood and compassion for others that did not exist. Despite being ordered by God, the selfishness of men was the order of the day. In Jeremiah 34:13-16 it becomes obvious that the people did not observe God's law. In fact, they openly defied it. Jubilee was a law that preceded the morality of men and was among the few that was generally ignored, although many hoped for its implementation. To be effective however, laws must reflect the general morality of the people. The idea of Jubilee was great, but in reality the people found it impractical and there is no evidence in the Old Testament that it was ever observed. Jubilee was a Declaration of Independence and freedom in word only, because its basic tenets, brotherly love and compassion, were not in the hearts of the people.

In Luke 4 Jesus announces his ministry to the world after 30 years of preparation and 40 days and 40 nights of prayer. He announced that he had come to set free the captives, and declare the acceptable year of the Lord. Rather than force men to follow laws that did not issue from their hearts, Jesus sought to change their morality. After changing their morality their laws would follow. His would be a revolution that would change the world by changing the hearts of men. Love, compassion for others and respect for God would be the key elements of his ministry. Those who follow Jesus, one by one, announce their personal "declaration of independence" and begin to live new lives, free from the slavery imposed upon them by others.

Dependent People

In 1776 the Colonist found themselves dependent on England for everything from military protection to the simple things of life such as "tea." Dependence however, suggested control, and they found the dominating control of England too much, so they declared their independence.

Today there are many who are more dependent than they would like to be on things of this world. Some have become totally dependent upon artificial sources of happiness and peace. To these, happiness has become a lively party in a crowded night club and peace is B.B. King on the juke box and a cold bottle of wine. Some have become dependent upon legally prescribed drugs to wake up in the morning, to keep them awake in the day and to put them to sleep at night. Some have become intoxicated with possessions and have become slaves to the marketplace, living from moonlight madnesses to blue light specials. Many have become slaves to their homes and cars, literally working themselves into the ground with two and three jobs to acquire them. Most of those who are overly dependent on the world, know it but have found themselves powerless to do anything about it. Some have accepted it as their fate in life and have sentenced themselves to a life of perpetual dependence.

Declaration of Independence

To those who have found themselves burdened by this world the words of Jesus are good news! He has come to bring us an opportunity for liberty! He has come to free us from the shackles placed upon us by the expectations of this world! He has come to set us free! Hear his words: "he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord."

The liberty that Christ offers is not rooted in a plethora of laws, judicial edicts, or executive orders. It is one that comes from freeing us on the inside from our dependence on things of this world for happiness and peace.

It's the kind of inner peace and contentment that comes from loving God and obeying his commandments!

It's the kind of freedom that would make our ancestors sing "You can have this whole world, just give me Jesus!"

To some that might sound illogical, but to those who know him Jesus is the real meaning of liberty, peace and happiness.

They have found that there is no:

—Pain that afflicts us that Jesus cannot ease —Weakness that envelopes us that Jesus cannot strengthen —Fear that surrounds us that Jesus cannot calm —Loneliness that invades us that Jesus cannot comfort —Burden that encumbers us that Jesus cannot lift

Somebody here can testify that Jesus has set them free! Somebody here can declare that the world Shackled me in:

—Anxiety but Jesus gave me assurance. Blessed Assurance Jesus is mine, oh what a foretaste of glory divine!

—Despair but Jesus gave me hope! Now I can sing "I have hope, when trouble comes my way. I have hope when Jesus comes to stay. It's a beautiful hope that sets me free!"

—Curses but Jesus gave me blessings! I get a blessing every day. Blessing in the morning! Blessing in the Noonday! Blessing in the midnight hour!

After a Declaration of Independence, some blood must be shed. As a nation we fought and died but it didn't free us on the inside. We died at Lexington and Concord! We died at Bunker Hill! We suffered at Valley Forge. But all of our suffering didn't free our souls!

I'm so glad that when Jesus signed my declaration of independence to set my soul free and that he backed it up with his own blood!

He carried an old cross to Calvary's hill!
He died an unsightly death on a unsightly cross!
But he rose after three days to write my title clear!
As the world celebrates let us continue to sing!
I sing because I'm happy!
I sing because I'm free!
For his eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches over me!

No. 456-Homecoming

At Home, I'm Not Alone

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 18, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"But a time is coming, and has come, when you will be scattered, each to his own home. You will leave me all alone. Yet I am not alone, for my Father is with me."I have told you these things, so that in me you may have peace. In this world you will have trouble. But take heart! I have overcome the world." John 16:32-33(NIV) "...and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen. Matthew 28:20

Introduction

Have you ever been home, but felt alone? These were the times when your house may have been full of people and the signs of life were everywhere, yet you felt alone. It was an unsettling feeling of vulnerability and that made you uncomfortable and insecure. There are many people at home, but they are home alone.

The movie "Home Alone" featured a small boy whose parents left him alone to fend for himself. Somehow his parents left on a trip and did not notice that they had left him alone at home until they were miles away in an airplane. While at home alone burglars came and tried to invade the premises. Their attempts were repeatedly foiled by witty tricks played on them by the little boy. One of his tricks was to make the burglars think that he was not alone. He turned on lights, and created movements in the house that appeared authentic, but the burglars continued as they saw through his guise. They were never quite able to capture this smart kid whose parents left him alone and.

There are many who have thrown their entire lives into the service of this world and its Satanic master. Many have discovered that he cares little for them and always leaves them alone. When trouble comes in its varied forms, they try to pretend they are not alone, but it never seems to work, because inside they know they are hopeless. However, we who love the Lord have his assurance that at home with him, we will never be left alone. On leaving this earth Jesus told his disciples: "Lo, I'll be with you alway, even until the end of the earth." As long as we stay close to God, we will never be alone. Our home will be a place of happiness, peace and love because Jesus is there!

As Christians, let us strive to keep the love of God burning in our hearts. When we do so that we can rise above the troubles of this earth, knowing that as long as we are at home with Lord, we'll never be alone!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he as spoke to his disciples about his approaching trial on Calvary. He warned them about an approaching time when they would be scattered and persecuted by the forces of the world, sending each person to his own home in retreat. In the midst of persecution, however, he gave them an example to follow and a reason to be of good cheer. Although times will come when even at home, hidden from the prying eyes of the world, they will feel alone, they are not alone, as long as God is near.

This truth was best exemplified in the trials of Christ himself. The prospect of Calvary was a lonely proposition. Though surrounded by disciples, he was almost constantly alone, for few of them really understood the nature of his mission. As he neared completion of his task on earth Jesus projected that even more of his disciples would desert him. However, he knew he would never be totally alone, because the father was always with him. Jesus' predictions came true. Judas betrayed him. Peter denied him. Many of his disciples kept their distance from him as he suffered the humiliation of Calvary. Through it all, however, the father was with him and he was never, really alone.

Upon his return to heaven he assembled his disciples and told them that he would not leave them alone saying: "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you." John 14:18. His final charge to his disciples was to remind them that whether they were at home or on foreign shores, he would be with them constantly. "..and lo; I will be with you alway, even until the end of the world." Matthew 28:20.

At home or on the stormy sea, Christ's reminder to his followers is still the same "be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." His words of faith and confidence now become the watch words of his followers: "I am not alone, because the father is with me.!"

It's lonely Away From Home

There are many who have left home for one reason or another and have found themselves lonely for home. Some traveled to distant places and their eyes have feasted on the wonders of the world, only to feel a yearning for home. Thousands of miles from the Orient, the Chinese have China Town in every major city. Little Italy is a bastion of Italian culture for those who want to remember home. Yes, even thousands of miles from home there is always a place where the aroma of soul food fills the air and there is somebody there who can give some news from home.

Daniel was taken into captivity by the Babylonians and though he was thousands of miles away from Jerusalem he still worried about home. Three times each day he opened his window and looked toward Jerusalem prayed for himself and the folks back home. Though surrounded with the splendor of Babylon, he still was lonely for home. Nehemiah, the cupbearer to the king, enjoyed his job but his face was constantly sad. He found it hard to be truly happy, so far away from home.

Jeremiah was so lonely away from home that he cried daily and a whole book of the Bible called "Lamentations" was written about his lonely yearnings for home. The Prodigal son in his poverty considered the hired servants back home and decided that there is "no place like home."

Just as it is lonely away from our hometown and our family, it is even more lonely when we have strayed away from God. Some, like the Prodigal, have drifted into the far country and found themselves lonely. Just as beautiful houses don't make happy homes, neither do the trappings of success guarantee us the feeling of fulfilment and happiness that comes from doing God's will. Outside of God the finest house, the shiniest car, and the most prestigious job, still leaves a feeling of loneliness, insecurity and emptiness. Conversely, those who are at peace with God find comfort, security and joy in even the smallest things. Paul explained this peace in this way in Philippians 4:11-13 ".. for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need. I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

There are many who are away from God who try to appear as if they are not alone. They vainly participate in an abundance of "churchy" type activities in a desperate masquerade to veil their separation from God. Some sing in the choir, or usher, or give a variety of services. They appear at peace with God, when in actuality they are "home alone." Many are like King David whose adulterous relationship with Bathsheba estranged him from God. He appeared at peace to his constituents but inwardly he cried out to God: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy holy spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit." Psalm 51:10-12

When we distance ourselves from God we may be at home, but we may as well be alone, because outside of God there is no:

—Comfort in times of sorrow; or Encouragement from the Word of God

—Strength gained from worship; or Assurance received after prayer

—Satisfaction from your church; and No relief from despair

When we are outside of God we may be home, but we may as well be home alone because we have shut out the one person that give us assurance, Jesus, the Son of God.

At Home, We're Never Alone

If there is a loneliness associated with being apart from God, there is a comfort and assurance that comes from being with God.

Jesus displayed this clearly with his disciples. Although his friends and associates would be scattered in many directions and some would betray him and leave him alone, he knew he would never really be alone, since the father was near.

I'm reminded of three elderly ladies who had to stay at home alone. One of the women grew confident and bragged that she had a .357 magnum to protect her if anyone came to bother her. The second lady said she had a .44 and knew how to use it. The third lady said she had 1-44 and a 27:1 and she was ready no matter what came her way. That night burglars came to all three homes and the women met the next day talk about their experience. The first woman said "I tried to use my .357 but I forgot to load it and the burglar took all my belongings. The second woman said she fired her .44 but it knocked her through the door and the burglar got away. The third woman said "Nothing happened at my house, nobody came in." The two ladies wanted to know her secret and she replied: "While you carried a .44 I carried Psalm 144 which says 'Blessed be the Lord my strength...my goodness, my fortress, my high tower, my deliverer, my shield, in whom I trust.." To her friend she said "You carried a .357, but I carried Psalm 27:1 ' The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear. The Lord is the strength of my life of whom shall I be afraid.?' When you went home you were alone, but I've got somebody who will never leave me alone!"

I don't know about you but I've got somebody who knows what lurks around every door and corner! I've got somebody who knows what hides behind every unseen door! Better still I've got somebody who will never leave me home alone for I heard him declare and "lo I am with you alway, even until of the earth"

"I've seen the lightning flashing and heard the thunder roll. I've felt sin's breakers dashing, which tried to conquer my soul. I've heard the voice of my savior he bid me still fight on. He promised never to leave me, never to leave me alone!

No never alone!

He promised never to leave me ..never to leave me alone!

Family Feud

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 25, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"And when they saw him afar off, even before he came near unto them, they conspired against him to slay him.And they said one to another, Behold, this dreamer cometh. Come now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit, and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams." Genesis 37:18-20 "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16

Introduction

Has there ever been trouble in your family that resulted in bad feelings? How long did it last? How did you resolve it? There are many families today that are divided and broken because of bad feelings that have divided them over the years. Angry families hold grudges for years and treat blood relatives like outcasts and worse than strangers. Its all a part of what is known as the "family feud."

On television, family feuds appear to be simple games where everyone leaves smiling. A host introduces two families that are all smiling and cheering, hugging and kissing each other as they play against another friendly family for prizes and awards. In real life, family feuds are no fun. Sometimes they continue from generation to generation. Take, for example, the notorious Hatfield-McCoy feud.

It hit newspaper front pages in the 1880's, when the Hatfield clan feuded with the McCoy clan from across the border in Kentucky. Historians disagree on the cause of the feud — which captured the imagination of the nation during a 10-year run. As many as 100 men, women and children died.In May 1976, Jim McCoy and Willis Hatfield — the last two ceremony dedicating a monument to six of the victims. McCoy died Feb. 11, 1984, at age 99. He bore no grudges — and had his burial handled by the Hatfield Funeral Home in Toler, KY.

Most family feuds can be traced back to rivalries among children who all sought to win the affection of a favorite authority figure. The quest to outshine a brother or sister that has lingered into adult life is often at the root of many family feuds.

There was great disagreement even among the disciples of Christ as to which of them would get special places of honor in the kingdom. As James and John sought special favors with the other Christ the seeds of a bitter rivalry were sown but was quickly dispelled by the master. His message to them and to us to day is that God loves us all, and gives favor to whomever he pleases in whatever way he pleases.

As Christians, we have learned to love our brothers and sisters, and family members. We celebrate their accomplishments, mourn their failures and give God the praise and the glory. In the families that know God, "Family Feud" should only be a television show!

Exposition

This text considers Joseph and his brothers as envy and jealously causes a bitter family feud that almost ended in Joseph's death.

Joseph,a son of Jacob, was his favorite son, having been born when Jacob was 91. He was the son of Jacob's true love: Rachel, and although he had other sons by his other wife, Leah, it was Rachel that was close to his heart. When Rachel died, Joseph took a place of importance in Jacob's life, moreso than the other sons. Joseph's favorite position was symbolized by a gift from his father of a "coat of many colors." This angered his brothers who were jealous of the special attention that he received. At Gen. 37:4 their hatred is noted this way: "And when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, they hated him and could not speak peaceably unto him." They did not like to be in his company and whenever they spoke to him it rarely in a peaceful tone.

Making matters worse was the fact that Joseph was gifted with visionary talents from God. He visions of future events for himself and had the ability to interpret the dreams of others. One of his dreams involved his own future, which was to be a great ruler. His dreams disturbed his brothers because they always pictured them in a subservient role, either bowing down to or serving Joseph. This angered them further. Each time they saw Joseph they saw his coat of many colors and rekindled their hatred. His new revelations about dreams of rising fame and influence made them increasingly bitter.

Ultimately the brothers decided to kill their brother. They planned to kill him and tell their father that some evil beast had caused his death. Joseph's death was only avoided when one of the brothers, Reuben, talked the others into putting him in a pit instead of killing him. While Reuben was jealous of Joseph, he hadn't reached the point of murder, but he did want to teach him a lesson.

The feud between the brothers led to Joseph's eventually being sold into slavery, freed from his imprisonment and given a high status in the Egyptian kingdom. In return, Joseph ended the feud by refusing to return evil for evil, forgave them and caused them to be special guests of the nation for many years.

Competing for Favor

Today there are millions of feuding families in our nation. Brothers and Sisters who literally hate each other. Jealousies which began in childhood have continued into their adult life and life for them has become a bitter experience. The need to outdo or do-in a sister or brother is what psychologists call "sibling rivalry." By definition, sibling rivalry is "Two or more persons born of the same parents, or sometimes having one parent in common who try to equal or surpass one another in some way and who enter into competition with one another for the affection, the regard and or preference of one or more of the parent figures." During the course of this competition, sometimes hatreds and jealousies can develop that carry over into adult life.

We have seen it biblically on many occasions. Cain and Abel competed for the favor of God by presenting sacrifices. Jealousy resulted and Cain killed Abel. Jacob and Esau were in constant competition for the birthright that was to be given by Isaac. Esau hated Jacob most of his life because he was cheated out of his inheritance. The prodigal son's brother was disturbed at the favor shown his brother when no such favors were bestowed upon him. In each instance, family members competed for the favor of a a parent. The competition that began as children continued into their adult life.

Today the threat of bad feelings between family members exists as brothers and sisters compete for the favor of their parents. The competition is subtle but real as they vy to see "Who is the smartest?" "Who is best behaved?" "Who is most likely to succeed?" Sometimes bad feelings are fueled when parents constantly bestowed favors on one child over the other. Jacob's mother favored him over Esau. Jacob gave Joseph special gifts. David chose Solomon over his older sons to follow him as king, etc.

One of the many lessons that youth learn as they become adults is the love of family. As family members, brothers and sisters we should not be in competition with each other for their parent's love, because their parents love all of their children. When your brother or sister makes an accomplishment in life, you should celebrate. When they fail, should her with them and for them, because when all others have turned their backs on you, all you really have is God and family. Family members that feud among themselves, end up hating each other so much that they would give a stranger a cold drink of water become giving a starving brother a crumb from their table.

Unmerited Favor of God

Sibling rivalry exists because children want to out do each other for a special favor. When it comes to our spiritual relationship many of us feel that we must compete for blessings from God.

James and John, two of Christ's disciples, lobbied for good positions in the kingdom of heaven, above their comrades. Their request caused dissention in the group, but was denied by Christ who reminded them that all blessings are given by God for his own reasons.

Likewise, today there are many adults who are still trying to get themselves high praise from God by out-doing someone else. To sponsor a bigger program, chair a more important committee, or otherwise co-ordinate some great work for the kingdom, is seen as the key to divine endorsement and favor.

God gives the perfect model. He does bestow grace upon us because we have out done someone else, but because he loves us. There is nothing we have to do to earn it. We don't have to be the head of anything, over anything or at the front of anything, he will do for us simply because he loves us.

In the same sense, every parent should create an atmosphere in the home where competition between siblings is unnecessary. It should be an atmosphere that accepts the value, worth and contribution of each family member that is both recognized and appreciated on its own merits. We should try, as best we can, to love as God loves, with unmerited grace.

In closing, I'm reminded of the little girl and her brother who had argued all day long about first one thing then another. They never seemed to get along. She screamed at him "I wish you were dead!" and he ran out into the cold. Lost and alone, her brother shivered in the cold. As time passed and it became obvious that something was wrong, the little girl went into the blizzard, calling out his name as she went. When she finally found him, curled in a small ball, covered by snow and shivering she somehow reached down and put him on her back and walked against the wind to get him back home. She staggered under his weight, but step by step she continued. She made it to the house of the village doctor still holding him on her back. The doctor rushed to help her and said "I know he must be heavy." The little girl replied "He ain't heavy, he's my brother."

This is the kind of love Jesus showed for us when he born an old rugged cross up calvary. With a bloodstain brow and whip marks on his back he carried the cross to make it plain what real love was about "that he would lay down his life for a friend." He died and he rose again to demonstrate to us the love of God.

Jesus, how heavy is that cross? the skeptics ask. Redemption responded: "It ain't heavy, its for my friends!"

Runs In Your Stockings & Holes in Your Soles

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 10, 1977

SCRIPTURE:"Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land:" Isaiah 1:18-19.

Introduction

Have you ever had a run in your stockings? What about a hole in the sole of your shoe? One thing that ladies dread most, with respect to grooming, is a run in their stockings. After all, of what value is an expensive costume, beautiful makeup and a lavish hairdo, if there is a run in a stocking. Men have the save dilemma. A hole in a pair of socks is an embarrassing sight, especially if it appears beneath a very expensive suit. Holes in the soles of shoes are equally embarrassing to the man or woman that dresses elegantly, sits in a crowded room and crosses their legs only to receive the chuckles of people across the room because there are big holes in the soles of their shoes.

Runs in stockings, socks and holes in shoes usually suggest that there there has been some abrasive activity. Runs are normally assumed to be irreplaceable. Although there are brands on the market that claim to be run free, they have proven to be bulky and too thick for comfort. All stockings, socks and shoes are subject to runs, and holes. No matter what the price, fabric or design, all of them are subject to runs and holes. It doesn't matter whether they are high priced, medium ranged, two for a dollar or buy one get one free. It doesn't matter whether they are Black, white, brown, beige, sheer, seamed or unseamed, all stockings are susceptible to runs.

Runs call attention to themselves, the same as holes in socks and holes in shoes. They are like neon lights that are flashing announcing to the world "here is a run." A woman who knows she has a run in her stocking is self conscious about it. Men sometimes try to twist their socks to keep their hole from showing. Those who have holes in the soles of their shoes try hard to remember to keep their feet flat on the ground when they sit. They are so conspicuous that they may as well have a large "X" marks the spot painted on them with red paint.

That is the way sin is in the lives of men and women. Just as a run in the stocking calls attention to itself and disfigures an ordinarily perfect appearance, sin disfigures the way we appear to God. No matter how we try to hide them, our sins always seem to creep up. Numbers 32:23 puts it this way: "..and be sure your sin will find you out."

As Christians, we rejoice in the knowledge that though our sins were once as conspicuous as an ugly run in our stockings or socks, we have been forgiven by our Lord. I hear the word of God from the lips of Isaiah saying: "though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow," Isaiah 1:18.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he prophesied to the people of God concerning the nature of their sins and the manner of their reconciliation.

Isaiah issued a call to repentance to Israel, challenging them to repent and reform their ways. He told them, plainly, that their elaborate worships, sacrifices and rituals were meaningless. He said their acts of piety were unacceptable unless they were obedient to the law of God. They were encouraged to change their direction and to display the compassion and spirit of God in their dealings with each other. At verses 16-17 (NIV)Isaiah declared: "wash and make yourselves clean. Take your evil deeds out of my sight! Stop doing wrong, learn to do right! Seek justice, encourage the oppressed. Defend the cause of the fatherless, plead the case of the widow." Here he called for a reformed action that issued from a contrite and repentant spirit.

Doing evil was the sin of the people. Injustice, oppression of the poor and neglect of the orphaned and widowed were the specific offenses for which God held the accountable.

Though they appeared very religious in their ceremonies and rituals God sent notice that their sins were flashing like a neon sign. They were standing out like a run in the stocking. There were as conspicuous as a hole in the sock. Invisible to the eye of man, God was able to see the inconsistencies of their lifestyle when compared to the expectations of their faith.

However, Isaiah reminded the people that their sins could be forgiven no matter how glaring and entrenched they appear to the eyes of men. His message to them was consistent and persistent: "though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.

If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land:" If the people were willing to exhibit an obedient mind, though their sins were like scarlet and crimson, a deep red dye that is difficult if not impossible to remove, they would be purified by the grace of God and become as white as snow.

Isaiah reminded every believer that simply professing God and going through rituals would not insure salvation. Those who continue in sin will never be successful in hiding their sins from God because they call attention to themselves. However, once sins have been abandoned and the love of God accepted, even the worse sinner can enjoy the uninterrupted love of God.

Runs Call Attention To Themselves

Runs in stockings, as well as holes in socks and shoes call attention to themselves. Not matter how we try to hide them they seem to always show. The same is true with sins; they cannot be hidden from the eyes of God.

Today there are many people who are trying to do wrong and hide their sins simultaneously. While it is possible to fool some of the people some of the time, it is virtually impossible to fool all of the people all of the time. It is impossible to fool God anytime. Our sins have a tendency to show, despite our best intentions. Some have successfully covered sins such as adultery, fornication, drunkenness and theft for many years, only to discover that despite their best intentions what they thought was hidden was actually known by many people who simply didn't say anything about the matter ...to their faces. Sins have a way of leaving telltale marks. First among these is the inability to look into the eyes of others. Even those who are not aware of the nature of our sin are aware that something is wrong when we are not able to look them in the eyes. We may not have told a living soul about our sin, but our eyes testified against us. Our sin called attention to itself.

Cain killed his brother Abel in the garden of Eden and attempted to hide his sin from God. Hiding behind a hedge of philosophic reasoning he asked "Am I My Brother's Keeper?" in an attempt to change the subject in another direction. His secret could not be kept for God said he heard his brother's blood crying out from the ground. His sin called attention to itself.

David arranged for the death Uriah so that he could hide his sex sin with Bathsheba. His adultery with Bathsheba was an abomination to God but he tried to hide it from the eyes of his critics by having her husband killed in battle.While he thought his plan was well concealed the prophet Nathan had to condemn David as he revealed the truth of his wicked ways. Nathan's powerful indictment served notice that even the King's sins cannot be hidden from God, for they cry out for justice from a merciful God.

Despite our best intentions, our sins cannot be hidden from God. He knows all, and cannot be deceived. Paul, writing to the Galatians, puts it this way: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Galatians 6:7-8

Runs in The Soul Can Be Repaired

Unlike runs in stockings, spiritual runs can be repaired. When stockings are damaged most ladies simply throw them away. But when a soul has been damaged by sin it does not have to be cast aside and thrown away like yesterday's news, it can be repaired. It can be made just like brand new!

We run the serenity of peace with the boisterous voice of confusion and debate. But it is not fatal.

We run the sweetness of love with the bitterness of envy and hate.

We run the compassion of helping by resolving to only help our own.

We run the joy of happiness by constant recitation of our pain.

We run the challenge of the future by anchoring in yesterday and trying to keep today the same.

We run the kindess of giving by hoarding every nickel and dime.

We run the spirit of service with the mercenary plea for pay.

We run the nobleness of humility by demanding to have our own way.

We run the transcendental power of prayer with the limited scope and vision of man.

Isaiah told Israel that although its sins stood out like scarlet and crimson, they could be made white again! All was not lost.

We should be grateful that we serve a God who can restore us when we have fallen short of his standard. Not only should we be grateful that he is able to restore and forgive but that he is willing to give us another chance.

Only the love of God can restore a broken spirit. Only the love of God can:

—Lift up a bowed down head!

—Wipe tears from despondent eyes!

—Fine tune a life being played in the wrong key!

—Elevate a life sinking in despair!

No wonder the song writer declares "Love lifted me, Love lifted me. When nothing else could help, love lifted me!"

Our sins may have been like scarlet, beaming like spotlights pointing to flaws and failures, but I'm so glad that we serve a God who took the spotlight off our sins and focused on himself. No wonder song writer declared: "He was wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquity."

I don't know about you but I'm glad that Jesus, the lily of the valley!

Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Jesus, the fairest of 10,000

I'm glad that decided to give me another chance!

I'm glad that he overlooked my sins which were flashing like a neon sign and gave me a brand new start!

I'm glad that he gave me a new song to sing

I'm glad that now I can praise him all day long for he picked me up and turned me around!

I'm glad that he died and rose after three days!

I'm glad that he is alive today!

Do you have runs in your stockings?

Come to Jesus!

He's a stocking mender!

Come to Jesus!

He'll make everything all right!

Four Dimensions of God's Love

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 1, 1993

*SCRIPTURE:"That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, May be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God." Ephesians 3:17-19

Introduction

How much does God love us? That is a question that is often asked of those who are trying to understand the nature of God's compassion toward us. Elizabeth Barret Browning wrote "How do I love thee, let me count the ways. I love you to height, breath and depth of my soul." Maybe that's the way God loves us. What we know about God's love is that it is shown to us, even though we don't deserve it, every day of our lives.

Consider the townspeople of a certain small town that decided to erect a weather vein to help them detect the direction of any approaching strong wind. The vein, equipped with a gyrating arrow that pointed in the direction of the wind's movement, was perched atop a huge tower that rose high above the ground. When the vein was completed one worker, who was a preacher in a storefront church, placed a sign above it that read "God is love." Curious townspeople saw the sign above the weather vein and could not understand why the old preacher would put a sign above the weather vein that appeared to suggest that God changes when the wind changes. They found the old preacher and chided him for placing such a sign and for the negative message that it sent. The worker looked at the sign slowly and carefully then said: "The sign does not mean God changes with the wind. If you notice the sign sits above the arrow. That means that whatever way the wind blows, God is still love. If the chilling Northern winds of hard times and despair come, God is love. If the sweltering heat of the southern winds bring desperation and sorrow, God is love. If, from the east, the wind brings prosperity or the west wind brings failure, God is still love." At that the townspeople voted to let the sign stay, for it reminded them that regardless of their circumstance, God still loved them.

God loves us more than we will ever understand. Even when difficult moments, problems and failures come, he still loves us. Even when we have embarrassed ourselves, strayed away and fallen into disgrace, he still loves us.

As Christians, we rejoice constantly when we think of the height, breadth, length and depth of God's love us. As we become rooted and grounded in the word of God, we grow in our appreciation for the wonderful and matchless love of God which he showers on us daily.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes to the Christians in Ephesus. He expressed his desire that they fully understand the four dimensions of the love of Christ. This full understanding, which would come after being fully rooted in the knowledge and love God, would help them to receive and appreciate the "fullness of God." Only through understanding the full nature of God's love can Christians comprehend the value of Christ's sacrifice and the beauty of the Christian life.

Paul said a Christian can consider that he has comprehended the fullness of God when he knows about God's love in four different ways. This differs from our knowledge of the four types of love: Agape, or God's unconditional love; Filia, or that which is shared between friends and family; Eros, or that which is shared erotically between persons of the opposite sex; and Storge', or that special parental bond such as the one between a mother and child. Simply knowledge of these forms of love is not sufficient to understand the fullness of God's love for us. Paul's prayer for the church at Ephesus was that they would comprehend and fully understand the full meaning of God's love.

To fully comprehend all aspects of God's love the Ephesians were told that they should know the:

Breadth of God's Love

What is the breadth of God's love? It refers to his compassion for the entire world. It signifies that his love reaches beyond national boundaries, geography, topography, race, sex, creed or color. Jesus' extends the circumference of this world and includes all creatures great and small. Jesus' love is not exclusive; it does ignore the value and worth of any of his creation.

The breadth of God's love is best described by the simple children's song that says: "Jesus loves the little children, all the children of the world. Red, yellow, Black and White, they are precious in his sight, Jesus loves the little children of the world." His loves takes in the whole world, but that does not mean that he ever loses sight of the importance of the individual. While Jesus' love is expansive enough to take in the whole world, it is narrow enough to focus on my personal estate. He cares about the world and about me too. That is why the song writer declared: "Yes Jesus loves me. Yes Jesus loves me. For the Bible tells me so."

Paul expressed to the Ephesians, who were entrenched in the old Jewish belief that God loved Jews only, that they should know this first side of God's love: that he loves everybody, both Jews and gentiles.

Length of God's Love

What is the length of God's love? It refers to the persistency and consistency of God's love to man. It is a measure of course that God's love has traversed to reach each individual. God's love is so long that it has reached from the infancy of creation through the ice age, stone age, creation of man, the great world flood, the rise and fall of Egypt, Babylon, Assyria, Persia, Greece, and Rome. It has withstood the inquisitions of the dark ages, survived the American civil war, two world wars, Korea, Vietnam and Operation Desert Storm. God's love is so long that it has extended from the beginning unto this present moment. The trail of his love leads right to your doorstep. Unlike some smoothly paved roads that run out at the county line, God's love does not run out when it gets to us. God's love goes beyond our doorstep and extends so far ahead of us that he has provided a paved expressway to glory for us when our journey in this life ends. His love is inexhaustible and it is patient. It is visionary and it reaches further than we can imagine.

Depth of God's Love

How deep is God's love? The depth of Christ's love further demonstrated when we consider how far he had to travel from his throne in glory to finally get to us. It was also shown by what he was willing to give up to reach down and save a dying world.

There are many in life who love, but they have limits on how far they will go for love.

There are many who love, but the depth to which they are willing to reach to pick up the pieces of a shattered life or a broken heart are constrained by their unwillingness to lose anything, endure any pain, or expose themselves to risk.

There are many who love, but their love is shallow and superficial.

There are many who love genuinely. They exemplify the breadth of love and show respect and love for all people. They show a length of love in that they have loved for a long time without giving up.

However, the depth of love is shown not by how many people you love, or how long you have loved, but how much risk you are willing to endure for the person you love. This is the kind of love displayed when a mother sees her child standing on a railroad track with a speeding train only seconds away and dives to save the child at the risk of her own life.

This is the kind of love Jesus spoke of when he said in John 15:13 "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

So Paul suggests to the Ephesians that they will never know the fullness of God until they can comprehend the depth of his love.

The Savior could have remained in the celestial realms of paradise, yet he chose a lowly birth in a Bethlehem stable.

He could have remained seated in the courts of heaven, yet he pulled off his royal robes walked the dusty streets of Galilee.

He could have spent the remainder of eternity, listening to angels extol the greatness of his name; but yet he chose to suffer humiliation and insult at the hands of people he came to save.

There are many who have loved, but there is nobody who has been able to equal or surpass the love of God.

God's love has length. The length of God's love is infinite. It has no beginning and it has no end. From the beginning of time to this very moment God has loved us every second and every hour.

God's love has breadth because he loves everybody everywhere. John declared "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

God's love has depth because he was willing to give up the glories of heaven to save the souls of a sinful world.

I don't know what you think about but if somebody has loved me from the beginning of time; and loves everybody but me especially, that's love.

That's the kind of love that Jesus display when he died out on Calvary for our sins, and rose to give us the victory.

Paul said there was one final diminsion to the love of Christ: not only that he showed breadth by loving the world, length by loving us constantly, and depth by being a sacrifice for us, but he also showed us the height of his love.

When he showed us the depth of his love, he came down to save us. But when Jesus showed us the height of his love, he showed us by lifting us up higher than we have ever been been before.

He came to lift us up!

He came to lift up a bowed down head!

He came to lift up a broken spirit!

He came to restore joy to a broken heart!

Ladders That Reach Glory

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 8, 1993

SCRIPTURE:" And he dreamed and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it." Genesis 28:12

Introduction

Have you ever tried to reach something and found that you were just a little too short? Perhaps you tried to reach a certain cabinet item and found it was just beyond your reach. That is when you discovered that a ladder would make the job easier. Painters, carpenters and just about everyone have found it handy to use a ladder occasionally.

It does not require a great deal of skill to use a ladder but it does require a little common sense. Consider the preacher that decided to paint his house. He braced his ladder next to his house and climbed high. As he painted a little boy from the neighborhood watched as he stroked carefully. The preacher noticed the little boy staring at him but continued to paint. He leaned to the right to get a tough spot and the ladder almost tilted. He leaned to the left to get another and the ladder almost tilted again. For almost an hour the preacher continued to paint. The boy watched him the entire time.

The preacher began to feel proud of himself because the boy was obviously impressed with the fine paint job he was giving his house. As he stood atop the ladder leaning out again, he called out to the boy: "You've been watching me for a long time." He said, "Are you admiring my work?" He asked. The boy shook his head. Puzzled the preacher yelled down to the boy "then why have you been watching me?" The boy folded his arms, leaned against a tree and said "I just want to see what kind of words a preacher says when he falls off a ladder."

We climb ladders occasionally, but we climb life's ladder continuously. For the Christian, it is a journey from time to eternity that must be scaled one rung at a time. There are many skeptics that are watching as Christians climb the ladder of life. Even the best of us can lean out a little too far, or stumble as we miss a rung. The world is waiting patiently for an opportunity to laugh at God's people when and if we falter.

As Christians, we should remember that we are climbing the mountain of destiny one step at a time. Like a mountain climber, we are secured by the safety line of grace, secured by the knowledge that if we slip, our God is able to deliver us. Just in the nick of time.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jacob's vision at a place he named Bethel. Jacob had been away from home for two decades. During this time he had amassed a small fortune and married two wives. Despite his material success he still had one more obstacle that stood between himself and happiness, mending his relationship with his brother Esau. The relationship had gone sour many years before. Jacob cheated Esau out of his birthright when both of them were children.

Later as young adults, his mother helped him to make it official and he cheated his brother out of his blessing and inheritance. Jacob's life as a trickster haunted him. As he prepared to return home, he worried about his safety, since his brother had threatened to kill him when he left two decades earlier.

Jacob's journey in life had come full circle. He had been a trickster who had been the victim of tricks himself. No doubt he worried whether his luck was taking a change for the worse. He was unsure about his future and his life. In this context God showed him a vision at night that revealed to him that there was great promise to his life. He saw a great ladder in his dream. Angels both descended and ascended the ladder in a regular pattern between earth and heaven. It was a hint that the promises God gave him would end with one that would give access to heaven freely to all. Angels go from heaven to earth and vice versa suggests free access, which was unusual considering the distance that every man kept between himself and God in Jacob's day.

The separation that Jacob envisioned would be fulfilled in Christ Jesus. Jesus himself said in John 1:51 "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." The prophetic picture Jacob saw was but a sign of the mediation role that Christ would play between God and man.

Christ projected himself as the link or ladder between God and man. Separated by a gulf of sin, Christ came to offer humanity a way back to heaven. Our sin was so great that no mere animal sacrifice could substitute for us. Nothing short of the blood of the lamb of God could suffice. Jesus became our mediator. He became our ladder to glory. 1 Timothy 2:5-6 puts it this way: "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus;Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time.

The vision that Jacob saw was just a glimpse of things to come. To him it was a sign that God had not abandoned him. It was a sign that he should continue his journey, step by step, mile by mile, until he returned home. For us, Jacob's vision is a reminder that the only link we have to God is Jesus. With him we have the continued assurance, just as Jacob had, that if we climb each rung of life's ladder, one rung at a time, we will get home someday.

Reaching High On A Short Ladder

Today there are many who are trying to reach glory but they are standing on ladders that are too short. Reaching the perfection of God's glory is a high aspiration that requires us to constantly reach beyond ourselves to a higher plane. Understanding the fulness of God's glory is unattainable by mere human efforts alone. David in Psalm 139:6 said: "Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it."

The spiritual levels of completeness and happiness that come from glory include: joy, peace and love. These are spiritual states that are impossible to achieve outside the spirit of God. Paul, writing to the Galatians, reminded them that these states are only achievable through the spirit of God. Those who know the Lord can reach them if they abide in him. Paul said:"..The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, Meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." Without the spirit of God they are impossible to achieve.

There are many today, who are making some dangerous falls because they are reaching for high spiritual states on ladders that are too short. Some resort to:

EDUCATION: While education is essential for a productive life in our secular life, it is still just a step ladder. A quality education can open doors for us in the community of man. It help sus to get jobs that were once out of our reach. It can improve the quality of life as we know it. However, education alone, cannot bring us love, joy or peace. These sit on a higher shelf. Though we may use all of education's steps, B.A., M.A., and Ph.d., it still proves to be too short to reach glory.

FINANCIAL SECURITY: Some depend on economic opportunity, but it too is just a step ladder. Financial security brings certain assurances in this life. It insures that we have a place to live, food to eat, and clothes to wear with some level of comfort. Those who are financially solvent realize a degree of peace of mind that frees them from future worries about their ability to survive. Peace of mind, with respect to finances, is a first shelf item, which can be reached by wise financial planning. However, peace of soul, is on a higher shelf and no amount of financial planning can help achieve this goal. We may stand atop every rung of our stepladders with bank accounts, stocks, bonds, savings accounts and insurance policies and still be unable to reach it. It is higher than our stepladders can help us reach.

Step ladders have a purpose, but when it comes to attaining spiritual goals they always prove themselves too short. Those who use them as they try to achieve joy, peace, happiness and love will find that they usually stumble.

A Ladder long enough to reach

Jacob in his vision saw a ladder that reached from earth to heaven. There was a direct line between himself and glory because he saw angels ascending and descending. At last Jacob knew he would be able to achieve peace of soul, and real joy, but he had the promise of God to assure him.

The same ladder that Jacob saw in a vision is available to us today. It is the ladder of salvation and spiritual power offered to us by Jesus himself. As our mediator Jesus intercedes for us with the father and whatever we want or need he will make our petitions known. As our savior he has removed our sins. As our Lord he has bridged the gap between earth and heaven on our behalf. He has become a ladder for us. A ladder that reaches into glory.

Education can only go so far, but Jesus is a ladder long enough to reach! All of my degrees have not prepared me for what awaits the saints in glory."Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." (1 Corinthians 2:9-10)

Financial security can only go so far, but Jesus is a ladder long enough to reach! This world can bring me wealth, but it cannot compare to the riches that exist in my father's house. "My father is rich in houses and land and he holds the wealth of the world in his hand!

Are you reaching for joy? Jesus is the ladder to unspeakable joy!

Are you reaching for peace? Jesus is the ladder to peace that flows like a river and says "it is well with my soul!"

Are you reaching for love? Jesus is the ladder that brings into the love of God. A love so strong and abiding that he gave his only begotten son out on Calvary!

He died and rose again that whenever we need, on this pilgrim journey we could just call him!

I don't know about you but I'm reaching for glory, standing on the ladder of faith!

While I'm on the tedious journey, I know I need Jesus to walk with me!

Walk with me Lord! Walk with me!

While I'm on this pilgrim's journey, I want Jesus to walk with me!

For Me

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 15, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you." Luke 22:20 "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Gal. 2:20

Introduction

Have you ever had anyone to do anything especially for you? Perhaps it was a special recipe they prepared just for you. Maybe someone went out of their way to surprise you or to make you happy. There is unique feeling that comes with being the object of special attention. Everyone enjoys it. Some crave for more. It is a part of our nature.

Nothing makes us appreciate being the object of special love and care more than kindness shown to us at great expense of time and trouble. It is a humbling experience. Consider the widower who worked his farm at the outbreak of the Civil War. The Union sent out a call for all able-bodied men to report to military service. The widower was depressed. He had several children and a farm to tend and was not in any position to leave. As he sat with his head in his hands the town drunk sat next to him on a bench. As he shared his problem with the drunk the drunk had a revelation. "Why don't you let me go in your place?" The drunk asked. He explained that he had never done anything important in his life, but this would certainly be important. Reluctantly the widower agreed. After a few months word came to the widower that the drunk had been fatally wounded in battle. The widower hitched up his wagon and made the long journey to the battlefield. He found the remains of the poor drunk and brought them back home. At the foot of the hill, he buried the drunk and marked his grave with an expensive marker. The townspeople questioned why he would spend so much money on a marker for a derelict. The widower answered "He may not have seemed important to you, but friends, that man died ..for me."

That is exactly how every Christian feels about Jesus Christ. When we were helpless, lost, and without hope; he died for us. He gave of himself that we might have another chance and we thank him for that decision every day of our lives.

As Christians, we can never forget that God loves us. He showed that love by willingly sacrificing his only son, so that we could have another chance at a more fulfilled and abundant life. More than that, he died and rose from the grave, especially...for me!

Exposition

These text verses focus on Jesus and Paul as each reinforces the understanding of Jesus' motive for his sacrifice and our motive for faithful living in him.

Jesus, at the last supper assembled his disciples and told them that his time was drawing near. The bread and wine they ate and drank were to become symbols of his body and blood and the new agreement. Jesus said his blood would be shed "for you." It indicated his clear motive in going to calvary. It was for power, personal interests or fame, because all of these had been offered to him by Satan in the wilderness. He only had one reason to go to calvary "for you."

Paul talking to the Galatians, reemphasized the same point. He narrowed down the broad generality suggested by "you" to a more inclusive "me." He lived by faith because Christ lived in him. He served the Lord because Christ loved "me" and "gave himself for me."

Paul underscored the idea of Christ as a personal savior and friend rather than a distant diety, void of feeling and compassion. To say that Christ loved "me" is to say that he knows me and cares about me. To say that he gave himself for me is to recognize the individual nature of his great sacrifice. It was for the whole world as recorded in John 3:16, but it was also for "me" indivually.

There are many Users

There are many people today that perform a variety of noble deeds for neighbors and friends. Many do so out of a spirit of brotherhood and compassion, others have ulterior motives that are difficult to uncover. They have created a new category of people known in today's vernacular as "users." Users generally have selfish motives for any action they take. Their associations and relationships are generally predicated upon future hopes of personal advantage. Once the chance of future advantage disappears, a user drops a relationship quickly and moves to another.

Some have learned this lesson the hard way. Uriah learned everything done to me is not necessarily "for me." David called him into his throne room and showered him with praises and commendations. Then he was given a commission to lead the armies in battle. The appointment appeared to be a "for me" situation, but turned out to be a "for David" circumstance. David wanted to protect his own misdoings, his promotion of Uriah was a means to achieve an end. There was a point in David's life when he was a "user."

Samson believed the sweet words of Bathsheba were sincere and from her heart. He fell for her sweet words, believing that she loved him and revealed to her the secret of his strength. She betrayed him to his enemies in return. The affections she bestowed on Samson were not "for" Samson, but were designed to discover his secret and earn her pay. Delilah was a user.

Today there are many people who are users. Sometimes their acts are as subtle as the computerized birthday card that comes from the local merchant. Initially we are impressed to have a birthday reminder from our local businessman. In our excitement we forget that it is often our capacity to make another loan or another purchase that elicited the card, not a real affection for us. If we become bankrupt or permanently incapacitated, usually the cards stop. In the same way, the local Romeo pretends affection and concern for the unsuspecting Juliet. His sweet words and charm often hide his ultimate goal of sexual success.

Even whole races of people can be used. When Abraham Lincoln freed the Negro slaves with the Emancipation Proclamation, many thought he did so because he loved the Black man. In reality, Lincoln freed the slaves to save the United States from destruction. His act of emancipation benefited "me" but it was not "for me."

Users view the entire world from the perspective of the chess player who values the game pieces by their ability to move, capture or sacrifice. Some game pieces are "pawns" and are expendable. They are moved from position to position, always with the understanding that unlike, Bishops, Knights, Kings and Queens, pawns are of little value unless their loss can help win the game. Our society often views racial minorities, the poor and the undereducated as its expendable pawns. Courtesies shown to these groups are rarely "for" them. If it becomes politically expedient any one or all of them would be sacrificed to protect the interests of the party.

Jesus Died "for me.."

It is no wonder then that Paul would be excited when he wrote to the Galatians, expressing his faith in Christ who made great sacrifices; with no other purpose than to do it "for me."

Jesus made sure his disciples understood that his approaching death had no other motive than to secure the salvation of all believers. His blood and life were being given "for me." Christ had no ulterior motives and nothing to gain himself. His sacrifice on Calvary was a pure act of love and affection. It was, without a doubt, "for me."

The people of Mesopotamia built a great tower to make a name for themselves. But when Jesus decided to die it wasn't to make a name for himself. It was already written that "at the name of Jesus, every knee shall bow and every tongue confess" that he is Lord of Lord. When Jesus died it wasn't for a name but he died "for me."

Solomon built a great palace to have a beautiful place to live. But when Jesus decided to go to Calvary it wasn't to secure a palace in glory for himself the heavens were already his throne room and earth his footstool. I heard him declare in John 14:2 "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

Christ carried an old rugged cross, not for himself, but he carried it for me!

They drove nails in his hands, not for crimes he had done, but he did it, for me!
He died out on Calvary, not for himself, but he did it all for me!
But early Sunday morning, he did something else for me. He rose from the grave with a victory over death and the grave.
Because he died for me, I have a right to the tree of life!
Because he rose for me, I have a new claim on the future! No wonder the song writer declared: “Because he lives, I can face tomorrow. Because he lives all fear is gone. Because I know he holds the future, and life is worth the living just because he lives.”
Sin used me and did things to me; but the grace of God did something for me.
Sin did something to me and pushed me down, but grace did something for me and picked me up.
Sin did something to me and left me filthy, but grace did something for me and washed me in the blood.
Sin did something to me and placed me on sinking sand, but grace did something for me and placed my feet on solid ground.
Not only has the Lord done things for me in the past, but every day he’s doing something “for me.”
In the morning, he’s doing something for me!
In the noon day, he’s doing something for me!
In the midnight hour, he’s doing something for me!
Storms may rise, winds may blow, but whenever I need him..
He’s there for me!

Sleep Walkers

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 22, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"..it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." Romans 13:11

Introduction

Do you know of anyone who walks in his sleep? A sleep walker is often not conscious of the fact that he or she is walking around. Often they move from room to room in their houses while sound asleep. Sleep walking is a strange phenomenon that continues to baffle modern science. Sleep walkers, called somnambulants, appear half conscious and half sleep, doing things and going places without any thought about what they do. Somehow they avoid falling down stairs, or bumping into doors, without injury. Some have been known to walk on rooftops and stroll down busy streets, all without hurting themselves or remembering a single thing they did.

People who walk in their sleep are sometimes humourous. Consider the case of Walking Willie. Walking Willie was a member of the church but there was a time when he drank whisky and wine with a vengeance. He joined the church during a great revival and came to church each communion Sunday. During each Sunday service

Willie would doze off to sleep and begin to walk in his sleep. After a while the members ignored him because it was usual to see him walk down the isle soun asleep. Lately however, Walking Willie started talking and walking in his sleep. One Sunday the preacher was exponding on the evils of drinking. "We need to take all that whiskey and pour it in the river." The preacher shouted! "We need to take all the wine and pour it in the water, and the gin and vodka. We should pour it all in the river." At that point Walking Willie stood on his feet and started walking for the back door. Folks thought he was sleep walking again but had their doubts when he started singing "I'm gonna Wade in the Water, wade in the water children.." Walking Willie woke up when he thought gin and whiskey were near!

There are many people today who are literally walking in their sleep. Murder, crime, disease and castastrophe are happening all around them yet they move about aimlessly as if did not exist. Those who ignore the deterioating condition of our times and live oblivious to their impact are sleep walking. They move about and display activity, but they are sound asleep.

As Christians, we know that we cannot afford to sleep in these dangerous times. We must be awake and on guard constantly against the onslaught of evil, which is all around us. The word of God reminds us clearly, it is time to "awake out of sleep" cast off the works of darkness and move into the light.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes to the Romans urging them to awaken themselves to the urgency of the moment. The message he gave them is similar to the message he sent to the church at Ephesus. In Ephesians 5:14-16 Paul said "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, Redeeming the time, because the days are evil." He encouraged them to use their time wisely and walk carefully because they were living in dangerous times.

Paul told the Romans that the time of Christ's return is closer than anyone expects. He urged Christians to be on guard. "The night is far spent and the day is at hand" he said as he urged the Romans to come out of the darkness and take action for the cause of Christ. He warned that we should awaken ourselves to the seriousness of the Christian life and walk "honestly" which is from the Greek word "Eu-sche-monos" that means "decently." Those who are aware of the seriousness of the era and the lateness of the time will walk fully awake and avoid: "rioting" which means wild parties and juking; Drunkenness and "chambering" which means whoremongering, frequenting of prostitutes; and "Wantonness" which refers to general sexual uncleanness. In addition, he reminded them that Christians have little time for petty envyings and strifes because of the lateness of the hour. Paul encouraged the Romans not to walk in these paths but to put on the "armor" of light.

The challenging nature of this present age requires that we rise above the walk of the carnal man and walk fully aware of the lateness of the hour. Some are walking and talking every day but they are sleep walking, unaware of the lateness of the hour.

Sleeping in Church

There are many today who are literally sleeping in church. It can be dangerous to sleep in church.

When Paul came to Troas he stayed for a week. People assembled to hear him nightly as he tried to explain to them about the nature of the church. Acts 20:9 tells how one night a boy was listening to his sermon while perched in a window on the third floor loft. Paul preached until about midnight. However the sermon was so long that the boy went to sleep, fell from the window and killed himself. Here was a lad who died because he went to sleep in church. Paul immediately went to the lad and stretched himself over him and brought him back to life again. Soon as the boy was revived Paul continued his sermon which lasted until daybreak. It was a 10 to 12 hour sermon. There is no indication as to whether or not the boy went to sleep again. Verse 12 only notes that they when the meeting broke up the boy departed with them alive and comforted.

While our immediate attention quickly focuses on those persons we know who tend to nod during worship services, the idea of sleeping in church goes beyond simply nodding in a worship service. There are many who are literally asleep when it comes to heeding the word of God. Many do not nod, but their attention is someplace else. They sit politely and stare forward, stand machanically, and mouth the words to hymns, but they are not aware of the lateness of the hour. These are those who meet with the church weekly but are sleep walking: singing in the choir, ushering, preaching, serving as deacons, and serving in several capacities as members without any real motivation. They move in a trancelike state that can only be described as spiritual "sleep walking."

Yet Paul sounds the clarion call "Awake oh sleeper!" The time is at hand! Let us fight the battle that is before us with vigor and alertness, not void of enthusiasm and spirit.

Sleeping in Crises

While there are some who sleep in church, there are others who sleep in the midst of crises.

Jesus concluded the last supper and went to the garden to pray. It was a crucial time for him. An enemy within had betrayed him. Enemies outside his circle were trying to defeat his purpose. As he went to the garden he asked Peter, James and John to watch out for him while he prayed. Though they were aware of the seriousness of the hour, all three of them went to sleep in less than an hour. In Matthew 26:40 Jesus returned from his hour of prayer and found them asleep. He said "What, could ye not watch with me one hour?"

It was a time of crises, but those he needed to protect him, were asleep.

Today there are many who sleep walking through the crises of time. Many who have the gifts and talents to impact the social ills around us are walking, almost trancelike, around and through the problems as if they did not exist. Our youth need adult leaders willing to give of themselves until it hurts to save them from the social destruction. Our neighborhoods are becoming unsafe. We need men and women of God who can give help organize and promote the development crime free neighborhoods. Our schools are in trouble. We need young men and women of God to join the ranks of those in our history who have given of themselves to insure that our children learn. Our future is in jeopardy. Yet in the midst of this crisis, there are those who still find it hard to awaken to the need to respond with all we have. Too many of us have simply rolled up the windows of our Lincolns, Cadillacs, Volvos and Mercedes and quietly tucked ourselves away in the comfort of our homes, to settle down for a continuous life long sleep.

In the midst of the crises of these times, Christ still asks "could ye not watch with me one hour?" "Isn't there some place of service that you can find for yourself where you could consistently stand with me against the evils of the day?" There are many who fail to respond because they are sleep walking.

Sleeping through the Vision

While there are some who sleep walk through moments of crises there are still others that sleep through great inspirational moments. Jesus took the same three men, Peter, James and John into a high mountain to show them a vision of the kingdom of God and the things to come so that they could fully understand. As Jesus prayed for the vision, all three men went to sleep. God rolled by the canopies of heaven and revealed the complete vision. In the presence of the father, Jesus' countenance was changed. His clothes turned white and started to shine and glow. Moses and Elias appeared in the vision and talked with Jesus. At the end of the vision the three woke up and saw the tail end of a vision planned for them. Excited, but half sleep, Peter wanted to build three Tabernacles and stay on the mountain. He was babbling aimlessly. Luke 9:33 noted that he was "not knowing what he said." He missed most of the vision of because he was sleep. He talked in his sleep about what he did see.

In a similar sense, many of us have missed the vision. Frequent absenteeism from worship, Sunday School and our field of service has put us out of contact. We are sound asleep while the vision is unfolding in front of us. Sometimes we do catch the tail end of what is going on but miss the whole picture as we talk "aimlessly" in our sleep.

Brothers and Sisters, if ever there was a time when we need to see clearly the vision of the Lord, that time is now!

If ever there was a time when we need to become serious about battling the rise of crime, drugs, juvenile delinquency, family dissolution and many other problems, that time is now!

The church extends to the world the outstretched hand of the savior, saying "come unto me all ye the labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

The church holds up the beacon of hope for the world to see. The only we have is in Jesus! Confusion is great in the world today but we have this hope and it's in Jesus!

When the sons and daughters of broken homes and teenaged parents wander aimlessly through our city streets, let them feel the warm and welcomed embrace of those who know the Lord. Give them Jesus!

When our children failing to make the grade in life and give up on themselves, let us roll up our sleeves, dig deep in our pockets, and give of ourselves to show them that God cares. Give them Jesus!

When the homeless need a roof over their heads and the hungry need food, let us respond with a heart touched with the love of God and show them that God cares. Give them Jesus!

The challenge for us to day is to awake from our sleep and tell somebody through word and deed, about Jesus. We need to tell somebody that Jesus came, died and rose from the dead and is alive today. We need to awake from our sleep and help somebody! We need to awake from our sleep and cheer somebody!

If I can help somebody as I pass along ..then my living shall not be in vain!

In Times Like These

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 28, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"The LORD also will be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble. And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee: for thou, LORD, hast not forsaken them that seek thee." Psalm 9:9-10. "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock." Psalm 27:5 "But the salvation of the righteous is of the LORD: he is their strength in the time of trouble." Psalm 37:39

Introduction

How do you respond when trouble comes? Do you shrivel in the face of danger, adversity or difficulty or do you stand tall with confidence. Trouble is inevitable. It cannot be avoided. The great question in life is not whether there will be troublesome times but how will we respond to the trouble. Herein marks the difference between the Christian and the unsaved. One is able to stand with confidence, the other is at a complete loss.

Consider the military officer who took a voyage on a ship along with his daughter. Throughout the duration of the trip they were constantly barraged by a never ending storm. It caused the ship to rock and reel endlessly. Those on board were anxious. They worried that the storm would eventually take their lives. One night as the storm grew worse the military officer stood on deck and gripped the railing tight as the winds and rain whipped about him. His daughter found her way to him and held on to him as she asked "father aren't you afraid in this storm?" At that, the father turned, drew his sword and stepped back a few feet as he pointed the tip of the blade at his daughter's heart. "Are you afraid of this sword?" He asked. Of course not, she responded. "Why not?" The father asked. "Because the sword is in your hand. I'm your child and I know you love me too much to do anything to me that is not in my best interest." The father sheaved his sword and turned to face the storm. "I am not a afraid of this storm for the same reason you were not afraid of the sword. I know the man that holds the storm in hallow of his hand. I am his child and he will not put more on than I can bear." At that the two of them returned below deck and settled down to a peaceful sleep.

We are living in dangerous times that threaten us like a great storm daily. Violence, murder, and other incidents of crime are becoming common place. The fingers of disruption and trouble are poking into every city, family and household. No one is exempt, despite their best efforts otherwise. The question is how will we respond when trouble comes?

As Christians, we have learned that we have but one response and that is to trust in God. Whether we are out on the land or on the raging sea, we confide in him for strength to weather the storm as we stand confident that the God we serve knows how much we can bear.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he expressed his confidence that regardless of his circumstance that God stands with him in times of trouble.

This psalm was written out of the wealth of David's experience with God. It was not theory, or the product of idle speculation. He had experienced many successes and failures in the course of his life his and findings were conclusive. As a Shepherd boy he courageously stood before wild animals. As a young man he stood heroically in front of Goliath. As king he faced many hostile armies. Each represented what he has described as a "time of trouble." In his time of trouble he faced all of the challenges as they came with great confidence and unwavering faith.

The conclusion that David reached is that trouble and misfortune cannot be avoided. In the 27th psalm he spoke of the "time of trouble" as inevitable. Rather than expect God to keep trouble away from his door he expected God to be with him in his time of trouble. David projected that every believer should expect to be placed in a secure position to deal with trouble, hidden in the "secret of his Tabernacle" but not expect to be exempt from trouble itself. This lesson was clearly defined by the experience of Job, a righteous man who had done nothing wrong, but yet was the victim of death of family members, poverty and sickness, all caused by the influence of Satan. Yet in his trouble Job declared "yea though he slay me, yet will I serve him." David's assurances in these three psalms are that God will be with every believer in a time of trouble.

The "time of trouble" to which David refers was almost always the result of Satanic influences. He was hunted as a vagabond because evil thoughts entered the mind of Saul. He was constantly at war because Satan stirred the hearts of his enemies to attack and raid on a regular basis. The "times of trouble" that David referred to were not always of his creation, but were the result of Satan's using the people and circumstances around him to cause trouble.

David's conclusion should be that of any believer: when trouble comes, God will be my refuge and my strength.

A Time of Trouble.

In Psalm 9 David makes three important points that are relevant to our present circumstance. The first of these observations is that even today, nearly 3000 years since David wrote these words,under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, every person still experiences a time of trouble.

We are living in some very troubling times. The respect for human life is at an all time low. Murders are escalating at an unbelievable rate and just below them is an equally dangerous propensity for violence that is spreading throughout the nation. Drive by shootings, drug related hits, and a general attitude that violence is the way is becoming the norm of our society. Children carry guns to school. Those who don't have guns have knives, razors and other weapons. There is a diminishing respect for life and the property of others. The evidence is before us in a striking way today that even those who are willing to gamble with their lives and win, can end up losers. These are times of seven year olds who cuss their teachers; eleven year olds who steal cars; 13 year old drug dealers; 15 year old murderers and 28 year old pot smoking, crack dealing grandmothers. These are dangerous times!

The troubles that we face in these times are not created by our youth, but they are the certainly the victims. They are the victims of society prone toward conspicuous consumption. It is a society that constantly suggests that happiness comes in things. We present these "things" to a generation of have nots who want to "have" and many will do just about anything to acquire what they are told is the good life.

The result is burglary, robbery, and murder.

The result is a community so unsafe that we have bars on our windows, burglar alarm systems on our cars, and we sleep with pistols next to our beds.

The result is such a total disrespect for life that a perpetrator could shoot a man in the head, pry a handful of bloodstained dollars from his hand, strip him of his valuables and leave him to die, without giving it a thought. A person with such a perception cannot see the value of a life, only the value of the possessions around his neck and in his hand. These are some dangerous times!

God's People Will Trust Him

This is David said in verse 10 "they that know thy name will put their trust in thee.."

If there was ever a time when we need to know the Lord that time is now. There are many great and powerful people in the world and it is good to know them, but more than anything else, we need to know the Lord.

Those who know the Lord are not intimidated by the violence and insensitivity of the times. Those who know the Lord are not so despondent that they lose hope in all people. Those who know the Lord are not bitter, even when they have been wronged by the times. Those who know the Lord know that "all things work to the good of them that love the Lord", according to his purpose in Christ Jesus.

Knowing the Lord means to know that no matter how the storms rage, He is in control. Knowing the Lord means to trust him.

You might know mayors, governors and presidents, but you need to know the Lord!

You might know kings and emperors, but you need to know the Lord!

The young people sing "You got to know Jesus, know God for yourself. If you know Jesus you don't need nobody else."

But the old warriors put it this way: "I know the Lord will answer prayer, I tried him for myself."

He has not forsaken thee

Finally David points us to the truth that experiencing misfortune does not mean God has forsaken us.

It is so easy for us in a moment of despair to become bitter against God thinking that he has forsaken us. David reminds us that God never forsakes us, even though the times in which we live make life unbearable.

Even Jesus hanging on the cross, suffering the pains of crucifixion cried out in his humanity "father why hast thou forsaken me" while the divinity within him knew all along that God never forsakes his own. It is a human response to think God may have deserted a family or a particular believer when tragedy strikes. However, we are reminded that those who know the Lord are never left alone. Jesus declared "and lo I'll be with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

Despite the storms that these times bring, those who know the Lord rest assured that he never leaves them along. Maybe that's what the song writer had in mind when he said: “I’ve seen the lightning flashing, and heard the thunder roll. I’ve felt sin’s breakers dashing, trying to conquer my soul. I’ve heard the voice of my savior, he bid me still fight on. He promised never to leave me, never to leave me alone.”

Yes, it is true that these are dangerous times. But there is a refuge from the storm!

In times like these, you need an anchor! In times like these you need a savior! Be very sure, be very sure; your anchor holds and grips the solid rock.

This rock is Jesus! A rock in the middle of the storm!

In times like these ...look to Jesus..he is the one!

Listening When The Word Speaks

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 5, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"And he said, Go forth, and stand upon the mount before the LORD. And, behold, the LORD passed by, and a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the LORD; but the LORD was not in the wind: and after the wind an earthquake; but the LORD was not in the earthquake:And after the earthquake a fire; but the LORD was not in the fire: and after the fire a still small voice." 1 Kings 19:11-12; "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness:" 2 Timothy 3:16; "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." John 1:14

Introduction

When you study God's word what method do you use? Is it systematic and exhaustive or casual and superficial? There are many people who express a belief in the word of God, but too few have a grasp of the the power of God's word for their individual lives. Having the power of the word of God that close and not knowing what to do with it is like finding Alladin's lamp, carrying it around for years, but never rubbing it the right way and unleashing the power inside.

There are many people who have a superstitious approach to the word of God. They believe in the "hunt and poke" method of bible reading, thinking that God has a special message for them in whatever verse they happen to open to on a given day. Consider the man who bragged about his fool proof bible reading method that had always shown him the right thing to do. One day he woke up feeling he could not get what he wanted in life. He opened his bible to a verse that said "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want." He went out confident that's what God wanted him to do, be satisfied. On another day he was financially in need. He worried about his fate. In distress he opened the bible again and pointed his finger to a verse that said "my God shall supply all your needs." He was reassured. For years he read a bible verse each day and did what it said. One day however his finger fell on Matthew 27:5 “and went and hanged himself.” He was startled by this message so he pointed his finger again and came to John 13:27 that found Jesus talking to Judas saying “That thou doest, do quickly.” Guided by what he thought was the word of God, the man went out and hanged himself.

The word of God is a source of inspiration, encouragement, correction and salvation, for the world. However, we must listen intently to hear the spoken word of God. We must study intently and search the scriptures daily to understand the written word of God. Moreover we must open our hearts daily to receive the offer of salvation given to us by the Living Word.

As Christians, we know the importance of the word of God. We study it daily, apply it prayerfully, and rely on it completely. The promises of God and our hope for the future relie on the truths it reveals. Let us continue daily that the word of God is the same today as it was yesterday. It is a reliable constant in our lives that remains a source of truth.

Exposition

This text focuses on three passages of scripture which depict three ways mankind receives the word of God: The spoken word, the written word and the living word. Each shows us clearly the power of God’s word revealed in three different ways.

The Spoken Word

Elijah was a great prophet of God. While hiding from the forces of the King in the mountains, Elijah waited to receive the word of God. There was an earthquake, but God was not in it. There was a strong wind, but God was not in the wind. There was fire, but God was not in the fire. Finally, there was a still small voice that spoke to him and asked “Elijah,what doest thou here?” Elijah was given specific instructions by the spoken word of God himself.

God has used many methods to communicate his truths. The most obvious of his ways has been to use the spoken word. His power is so great that he can simply speak and the elements of creation hear and obey him. In Genesis, God spoke and said “Let there be” and there was light, fishes and fowls and beasts of every kind. He spoke the world into existence by the power of his being. Israel found that when God spoke to them directly they were not able to stand and they begged God to talk to Moses for them. Many have received direct communications from God himself. One such instance was the boy Samuel who heard the voice of God whispering to him in the night, calling him to be a prophet. Saul heard the voice of God on the Damascus Road and heeded its challenge to change his direction in life.

Today, when God speaks to the multitude he speaks through the preached word. Paul, writing to the Romans, emphasized the importance of the preached word of God when he asked " How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" Romans 10:14 He continued in verse 17 "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." God has a message for entire nations, states, cities, communities and even respective races. Many do not hear the message because they neglect regular worship and listening to the preached word of God.

While God speaks to the multitude through the preacher, God still speaks on the individual level. Modern Christians have the same problem Elijah had: trying to discern the true voice of God from all of the earthshaking, fire breathing, voices that are heard today. The boy Samuel heard God calling his name, but he thought it was Eli's until he finally understood that God was talking to him with a special message. His answer should be our response "Here am I Lord."

When God speaks the birds hush their singing.

When God speaks storms are silenced!

When God speaks even the winds and waves obey his will!

The Written Word

Paul, writing to young Timothy encouraged him to study the written word of God. In 2 Timothy 2:15 he said "Study to show thyself approved, a workman that needeth not be ashamed but rightly dividing the works of truth." The study of the word of God is essential to Christian life. It is not sufficient to read the word of God, but it must be studied with an able teacher and proper study aids to get the full meaning. Sometime things are not quite what they seem. The late Rod Serling author of the "Twlight Zone" featured an episode in which out of space travelers came to earth. The earthlings received them well after the space travelers gave them a book which had written on the cover "to serve man." Earthlings took this as a sign of friendship even though they could not read the other pages within. After the space ship took off carrying thousands of Earthlings to visit the outer space planet, scientists were finally able to break the code and read the rest of the book.

The book was a "cook book" containing recipes of how to cook and serve humans for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

There are many today who read the various idioms and expressions in the bible and and misread what they mean. Like the poor man who thought he was blessed for being poor when he read "Blessed are the poor in spirit." Similiarily some conclude that there is no need to waste time trying to fight poverty because the bible says the "poor ye will have with you always." Such misunderstandings usually come if the reader contents himself with "reading" the word instead of studying it. Paul told young Timothy to "Study" the word. Through reading and studying the word of God, God is able to speak to the individual. The powerful truths and visions of hope his word contains for us are revealed through ardent study. He reminded Timothy that all scripture is written by the inspiration of God and therefore is an authoritative source for doctrine and church discipline.

The Word of God is a source of hope.

The Word of God is a source of great strength and encouragement. David declared "They word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path. ..these words have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against God."

The Living Word

There is one final way to hear from God; through the presence of the living word in our lives daily.

John recorded that in the beginning there was the word which was with God and was God. He told us that the Word came alive, dwelled among men for the expressed purpose of showing mankind the path to the kingdom. That Word was Jesus.

On leaving this earth Jesus reminded believers that he would not leave them comfortless but would send a comforter which is the Holy Spirit to dwell with every Christian. The Holy Spirit is the Living Word which directs and corrects, encourages, informs and inspires every believer on a daily basis.

Although they have the spoken word of God, his written word and the living word, many still claim they have never heard God speak to their souls.

Consider the man who was drowning in flood waters and he prayed to God saying "Lord, I'm out here on your word, please save me. Let me hear from you." As the flood waters rose a man in a boat came to help but the drowning man refused saying "I'm waiting to hear from God." Soon after, another boat came and the man refused again. Later a rescue crew in a helicopter came to save him but the man refused again saying "I'm waiting to hear from God." As the man began to drown, he saw the glories of heaven open up and an angel appeared. He asked the angel, why is God letting me drown, why didn't I hear from him?" The angel responded, "He sent you two boats and helicopter, what more do you want? He answered you just didn't hear!"

We must listen to the word of God. Sometimes he speaks directly to our souls. Sometimes he speaks through the preached word! Sometimes he speaks to us in his written word. He speaks, but we must listen because the Word of God is:

—A Light to walk by, without it we'll stumble in darkness!

—A Sure foundation, without it mankind builds on sandy foundations!

—A Two Edged Sword, without it man fights a losing battle

—A Refreshing Fountain, without man's thirst is unquenchable.

The Living word of God offers: bread to the Hungry, comfort to the lonely, assurance to the anxious, hope to hopless, strengtht to the weak and peace to the troubled soul, rest to the weary!

This Word which existed from the beginning ..became flesh and dwelled among men.

This Word died out on Calvary, but rose after three days!

He's alive today!

More than Spare Ribs!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 12, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"And the rib, which the LORD God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man. 23 And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man." Genesis 2:22-23
"There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." Galatians 3:28

Introduction

What does society in general think of women? Do we consider women as equal partners in creation or a miscellaneous after thought? Women are struggling to achieve a sense of identity and self worth in a male oriented society that treats them as something less than a full human being. Men, on the other hand, seem a bit baffled by the female quest for personhood, some even find it amusing.

Consider an article in the February 1991 issue of Reader's Digest which indicates the level of sensitivity of a male oriented society toward females. The article proported to report a fictitious conversation between God and Adam in the Garden of Eden. Adam complained to God that he was lonely and needed a helper. Adam laid out a detailed description of what kind of woman he wanted. Adam wanted a woman that was beautiful, shapely, intelligent, industrious, and. imaginative. In addition he wanted her to be a good cook, good at keeping the garden clean, and willing to listen to names he gave all the animals, keep and slim figure while obeying God's command to be fruitful and multiply at the same time. After hearing Adam's list, God said that's a tall order, but this will cost you? "Just how much will it cost?" Asked Adam. "An arm and a leg" the good Lord replied. "An arm and a leg?" Adam said as he scratched his head. "Do you think you might have an economy model I could possible get for say a ...spare rib?"

Spare Ribs! That's just about sums up society's attitude toward women: a convenient but non-essential complement to man. As women study God's word and learn its real truths they begin to share famed biblical scholar Matthew Henry's assessment of their relationship to man:"Eve was made by God not out of His head to rule over Him, nor out of His feet to be trampled upon by Him, but out of His side to be equal with Him, under His arm to be protected, and near His heart to be loved."

However, Christian women have learned that while society may see them as just utilitarian extras, in the eyes of God, they are more than just "spare ribs!" There is good news for the Christian woman! Our Lord does not discriminate! Whether male or female, all of God's creatures have equal access to the mercies and blessings of God. From God's perspective, there are no spare ribs! His invitation to share in the abundant life is open to anyone that will receive it and join him at the banquet table of paradise!

Exposition

This text focuses on the nature and role of woman in the Old and New Testaments of the bible.

Genesis gives us the biblical account of the creation of mankind. It focuses on God's creation of a male and female man, whom he named Adam and Eve. The female was called Wo-man because she was intrinsicly a "man with a womb" which is what the word woman means.

There are two accounts of the creation of mankind in the Genesis. Genesis 1:26-30 describes the creation of mankind in general terms. In Genesis 2:7-25 a more detailed account is given focusing on the order of creation. Adam was created and given dominion over the earth. A while later God decided to make a partner for Adam. He took a rib from Adam's side and created woman.

The use of bone tissue from Adam to create Eve is significant. Using bone tissue is important because bones contain a substance that creates and makes blood forming cells, called "marrow." Having been given blood forming cells identical to those of Adam, Eve and her mate were "bone of bone" and they became one blood. Had God chosen to create Eve using the same method that he used to create Adam the results may not have been the same. At the very least they would have been partners but not "bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh."

In the beginning both Adam and Eve shared the same charge: to have dominion over the earth. The distinctions came when sin was introduced into God's perfect order. As a result of the sin of Adam and Eve in the Garden several punishments were made. Eve was given two punishments 1)Increased pain in childbirth and 2)Subordination to her husband (Gen. 3:16). Adam was punished with the curse of "responsibility" and labor.(Gen 3:17-19). From this point forward the relationship of men and women was defined and woven into the fabric of society. The Edicts given in Eden formed the theological basis for the subjugation of women for thousands of years.

Old Testament View of Woman

The subordination of women began immediately in the Old Testament. In family and community circles she was completely ignored. In marriage she was traded on the whim of her father in lieu of dowries. The laws were written for men. Women who married but were found not to be virgins could be stoned to death (Deut 22:13-21). Husbands could divorce their wives for any reason by simply giving her a written release and putting her out of his house (Deut 24:1) Women could not do the same. Even though the Edict of Eden required women only to be subject to their own husbands, the laws and customs of the Old Testament made it clear that women were forced into subjugation to all men.

Women were subjugated but they were also venerated. As mothers and wives they were constantly praised. Proverbs 31 is a lengthy description of what has been described as the virtuous woman. The love of a mother for her children was often used as a type of God's love for his people. Women were subjugated but highly respected at the same time. On occasion there were some women who rose above the stereotype and became leaders. Women such as Miriam, Deborah, Huldah and Esther, stood tall as leaders of the nation in times of national crises.

However, for the most part, women in the Old Testament were considered second class citizens. They did not stand equally before God in the eyes of men.

Women in the New Testament

There is a bright side to the plight of women in the world. While the world viewed women as insubordinate objects, Jesus came recognizing them as equals before God.

Jesus caused considerable controversy because of his views about the equality of women. First, Jesus talked to women in public which was forbidden. He included women in his parables and stories about the kingdom, which was unusual for his times. Though it angered many of the men around him, Jesus received emotional and financial support from both men and women. He responded to the touch of a woman who had an issue of blood for 12 years. He healed women and he broke with Jewish tradition by affirming Mary's right to follow him as a disciple rather than wash dishes. He even gave expanded insight into the laws about adultery and divorce which favored men only. Jesus added that men who were casually divorcing their wives for reasons other than impropriety were guilty of adultery. Moreover, he added that men who even look at a woman with lust in their hearts were already guilty of adultery. All of Jesus's interactions with women indicate that he saw them as persons equal to men.

Paul, continuing the example of Christ, taught the Church that racial and sexual differences are not to be considered because in Christ there is neither "Jew nor Greek, bond or free, male or female." On occasion when there were problems in a Jewish congregation, Paul fell back on Jewish customs and urged the women of that particular church to keep silent. Even the idea of a wife submitting herself to her husband in the New Testament is voluntary in nature. Wives are depicted as types of the church, and husbands as types of Christ. Wives who submit do so willingly just as the church willingly submits to Christ. In return for her respect husbands are told to love their wives as Christ loves the church. Ephesians 5:22-25 "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the savior of the body. 24 Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; The preponderance of New Testament teaching about women is that there is no partiality among persons with God.

Christ did not come to change the law but he did come to remove the curse!

I stopped by today to tell you, that women are more than just spare ribs!

Like Lydia, women are encouraged to become partners in teaching, building and sharing the gospel message.

Like Phoebe, a deacon of the church at Cenchrae, (Roman 16:1) women are expected to minister to the spiritual needs of church.

Like the woman at the well, women are expected to tell somebody "come see a man"

Come see a man who saw the sick and healed them.
Come see a man who saw the poor and empowered them!
Come see a man who saw children and blessed them!
Come see a man who saw the weak and strengthened them!
Come see a man who saw the lonely and comforted them!
Come see a man who saw the enslaved and set them free!
We ought to be glad to tell the same story!
Come see a man who died out on Calvary!
Come see a man who rose and set me free!
His name is Jesus!
Jesus!
Jesus!

Gaining Access To God

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 19, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "And thou shalt make a veil of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen of cunning work: with cherubims shall it be made:" Exodus 26:31 "And the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom." Mark 15:38 "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, By a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh; Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for he is faithful that promised;) And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works:" Hebrews 10:19-24

Introduction

Have you ever felt isolated from God? These times may include moments when you pray, but you don't think your prayers are heard. They are times when you worship but you leave without a meaningful experience. They are times when God seems always just beyond your reach. There is no place on earth that keep us from the presence of God, but there are many things that prohibit us from enjoying the full access to God. Some are real and others are figments of our imagination.

Consider the two pilgrims that were ship wrecked on an island filled with wild and dangerous animals. The two men pulled many of their belongings to shore, but the younger of the two was a superstitious. He believed it a bad sign from his god to cross a line drawn in the sand. As they were pulling their wares in the darkness several lines were drawn in the sand and the young man awoke the next morning and found himself surrounded on all sides by lines in the sand. He refused to move, held firm by his belief about lines in the sand. He rejected every effort by his friend to get him to cross the line and begin his search for a way home. Weeks passed but the young man refused to move. One day his old friend heard the sound of wild beasts approaching. As he hurried along the beach to warn his young friend he was attacked by a wild beast that mauled him badly. As he stumbled toward his friend his lifeless body fell near. The pool of blood that drained from his body ran like a stream and washed away the line drawn in the sand. Seeing the line erased from the sand, the young man picked up the body of his friend and ran to safety. When he finally made it home again, he looked back in thanks for a friend that gave his life to erase his line in the sand.

Many of us today are boxed in by the limitations of life and we never really get close to God because of self imposed or societal limitations that deny us access to his mercies and blessings.

As Christians, we rejoice because there is good news for those who are boxed in! We have a friend who loved us so much that he gave his life that we might have a chance to make it home. That friend is Jesus, who shed his blood for us, to erase the lines in the sand that separate us from God.

Exposition

These text verses focuses on the veil of the temple, the purpose they served and the new dimension that Christ brought to its consideration.

In Exodus God instructed Moses to build a Tabernacle. Inside God himself would dwell in a special place called the "Holy of Holies." Only the priests could enter the Tabernacle. The Holy of Holies was separated from the rest of the Tabernacle area by an outer and inner "veil" or curtain woven in red, blue and purple colors. Only the High Priest could enter the Holy of Holies, and then only on the day of Atonement which came once a year. Behind the veil stood the Ark of the Covenant which contained the Mercy Seat of God, a pot of manna, the 10 commandments and Moses' budded rod. They all represented the mercy, authority and blessings of God available to men. However, only one man was given access, only one day a year.

Mark records the events surrounding the death of Christ, one of which included the fact that when Jesus died the veil of the temple was split from top to bottom. This signified that there was no longer any barrier that separated God from man.

In Hebrews, Christians are reminded that Christ came and died that we might be able to go through the veil and realize the full glories that are available to us as Christians.

Knowing that we have full access to God daily, we are encouraged to walk by faith because we now have the ability to talk with God for ourselves to let him know our needs.

We are encouraged to approach him boldly, as sons and daughters of faith, knowing that all things are possible, if we put our trust and confidence in him.

Veils That Hide Us From God

Today there are millions who yearn to gain greater access to God but are prohibited by self constructed and societal veils. These obstructions prevent even the most devout from knowing the full joy of the Lord. Each approaches him but falls short of a full revelation of his greatness in their lives.

Societal veils separate us from God because the importance of ritual and appearance become more important than people themselves. Many who believe in God are limited in their ability to get close to him by the traditions and customs of men. Within the religious world itself our loyalty to ritual, tradition, and intellectualism, often supersedes the need of individual believers to express themselves to God. We say pray, but only in a certain position. We say make a joyful noise unto the Lord, but only if it's not too noisy. We say let everything that hath breath praise the Lord, as long as it doesn't involve a guitar or a tambourine. We say forsake not the assembling of yourselves, as long as women don't wear pants and men wear a tie. In many instances the man made traditions are based upon our own beliefs and tastes but have no scriptural foundation. Sometimes our rituals and tradition act as a veil to prohibit believers from fully accessing the power of God. Jesus observed many traditions during his life on earth, but whenever tradition and custom appeared to be more important than people he challenged tradition, much to the dismay of his critics. It angered people that he was changing things, yet he continued tore down any barrier that separated men and women from God.

Self constructed veils. Among the varied veils that separate us from God are some that are self constructed. These involve our inability to get close to the power of God because of spiritual limitations.

Lack of faith keeps us from realizing the power of God. Our lack of faith does not limit God's power to act miraculously, but it does reduce what we get from God because we don't believe enough to ask. God can act and perform his will regardless to the quantity of our faith. It is a certainty that many of us have received rich blessings from God that we never dreamed were possible. We hoped for them, but we never expected them to come about. That means God decided to do it for us anyway, even though we didn't have the spiritual strength to believe it could happen. It is like the man who constructed a "pet entrance" on his kitchen door so his cat could go and come at will. Each night he let the cat out he would put a healthy portion of cat food and milk near the entrance so that he could be refreshed when he returned. However, each night the cat sat on the steps in the cold and never came in the new entrance. Finally realizing there was a problem, the man caught the cat in his arms and push him through the entrance to show him what was waiting for him. From that night forward the cat went straight for the entrance and always enjoyed a fresh bowl of milk and good food. In a similar manner God has given us blessings that we have hoped for, but did not have enough faith to ask for and expect them to become a reality. Our lack of faith does not limit God's ability to bless us, but it does extend the time of "wanting" beyond that which is necessary.

That's why the Word of God in Hebrews 10: 19-24 reminds us daily that we should act on our profession of faith and walk daily with the assurance that God will take care of all our needs, according to his will for us. To walk in faith is to walk knowing you are on the right path. Although you can't see every thing clearly, you know the path will take you home. If you trusted only in what you could see you would stop walking immediately. That's why 2 Corinthians 5:7 says "We walk by faith and not by sight."

Sin. Sin separates us from God. If there is any one entity that keeps us from enjoying the fullness of God's blessings it is sin. When we are practicing sinners, we simply cannot get close to God in good conscience. People who are shacking, stealing, adulterous, dealing in drugs, and living wildly will have difficulty getting close to God. They may attempt to come before him but, always stop short. They come to worship, but can't meet God, because of the veil that separates them spiritually. They may even live religiously, but fall short, because of the veil. The only way to truly know God is remove the veil that separates us from him. That's why Hebrews 12:1 says:".. let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." Removing sin removes the veil that separates us from God.

When Barriers are removed

If you have been hampered in your efforts to gain access to God, there is good news today! The moral authority for man made veils has been removed! The permanence and lasting effect of the veil of sin has been canceled by the forgiveness of Christ. The power of God for those who walk by faith can be realized!

Those who draw near to God can realize the fullness of God and benefit fully from their access to the spiritual treasures of heaven.

Powerful things start to happen whenever we get close to God.

When Abraham got close to God he grew in spiritual strength and material wealth.

When Israel got close to God, it survived the wilderness and made it to the promised land.

When Moses got close to God, he watched with amazement as God rolled back the waters of the Red Sea.

When Isaiah got close to God he answered the call to serve by said "If the Lord needs somebody, here I am, send me"

When David got close to God he defeated enemies and built a great nation.

When we get draw close to God we have access to his storehouse of blessing.!

No wonder the song writer declared "Draw me nearer, nearer blessed Lord to the cross where thou hast died. Draw me nearer, nearer blessed Lord, to thy precious bleeding side."

However, there is no way to draw close to God without Jesus. For the word teaches us that "there is one mediator between God and men, the man Jesus Christ" (1 Timothy 2:5)

Access to God is possible because of Jesus.

Jesus, who somebody called the Prince of Peace!

Jesus, who somebody called the Wonder of Wonders!

Jesus, who somebody called the Lamb of God, the Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End, The King of Kings, The Lord of Lords!

Jesus who died out on Calvary!

When he died the veil of the temple of was split into, letting the world know that God was now freely available to all.

When Jesus died he torn down the veil, but when he rose he reaffirmed our hope!

Yes he died, but I'm so glad that he's alive today!

Whenever I need him, I just call him...and just a little talk with Jesus will make it right!

Use It Or Lose It!

Matthew 25:28-29 "Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents. 29 For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

Introduction

What is your attitude about success? Do you believe that all things are possible or do you put limits on your abilities? Many people never achieve their potential because they are unwilling to risk the possibility of failure if they make an effort and fall flat on their face.

Consider two friends that started out in life together as young men. Each adopted a motto or slogan that defined their approach to life. One of the friends was troubled by the insecurities of the world. He moved into a shack in the woods and lived their in peace. One day his friend came to visit him and as they talked he noticed a banner on the wall that read "To keep from failing —don't try!" When asked to explain the sign, he told his friend that the most practical way to insure against losing what little he had was to hang onto what he had. My idea is simple "nothing ventured, nothing loss." The two friends parted company and it was 20 years before they saw each other again. This time the hermit friend paid a visit on his old pal. He noticed that he lived in a spacious house and had all of the things associated with comfortable living. He told his friend "you seem to be doing well for yourself, what is the key to your success." His friend said "Well it all began when I came to visit you 20 years ago. I saw your sign that said "To Keep from failing, don't try" and I heard you say "nothing ventured, nothing loss." I decided to get me a motto." He pointed his friend to a large banner over the mantle on his fireplace that read "To Keep from succeeding, don't try!" The difference between us is you trusted in yourself and focused on avoiding failure. I trusted in God and focused on success!" In a similar sense, there are many who never succeed because they never try.

God gives every person a measure of talent and ability and expects each person to use what they have been given to achieve optimum return. Some have been given more than others, but everyone has been given something. What we do with what we have been given determines our success or failure.

As Christians we should approach life with a positive attitude. No matter how high the mountain, or formidable the opposition, we know that if God wills, it can be accomplish. With that knowledge we courageously try, counting on God to help us every step of the way.

Exposition

This text focuses on one of two parables Jesus gave that emphasized the expectation that every person in the kingdom would use abilities given to maximum potential.

The idea of faith and industry is suggested in both the parable of the "minas" in Luke 19:12-26 and the parable of the "talents" in Matthew 25:14-30. In Luke, a nobleman went away on a journey and gave each of his ten slaves a "mina" which was about $8,500 each by modern standards. When he returned he each person was asked to account for their management of their "mina." One had taken his "mina" and turned it into ten and the master praised him for his industry and made him a ruler over ten cities. Another had produced five and was made ruler over five cities. At least one however, had taken his "mina" and kept it in a handkerchief and gave it back. The master was angered at his unwillingness to use his "mina" and took it from him and gave it to the one who demonstrated his industry best."

In Matthew, Jesus repeats the same theme with the parable of the "talents." This time the nobleman gave each of his servants a "talent" which was about 60 times the value of a mina or about $500,000. Unlike the parable of the "minas" in which every person was given the same amount to work with, Jesus draws an even clearer picture in this parable noting that some of the servants were given more talents than others. Each person that used their talents in ways that showed an increase were praised and rewarded. However, the servant who refused to use his talent because it was small and feared failure was scorned. In fact, the master took his talent from him and gave it to the one who had demonstrated that he could get the most out of what was given.

The Greek word used for "talent" is "Talanton" which means "a weighed amount." Our English word "talent" is drawn from this parable. It refers to "weighed ability" or a gift committed to one's trust to use and improve. It refers generally to natural faculty, ability or power.

In that context the parable of the talents suggests that everyone is entrusted with varying abilities. Each is expected to use those abilities to in a productive and positive way.

Discovering God Given Gifts

Many young people are discovering new realities about themselves. Some are learning about new skills, abilities and interests almost daily. One truth that many have learned and others have yet to learn, is that they have at least one and possibly more than one ability from God. Some gifts and abilities are easy to recognize. Those who sing, dance, act, play musical instruments or excel in sports are easy to identify. Those who are not gifted with these talents may even feel that they do not have a talent. However, talents are not limited to singing, artistic expressions and athletics. Talents also involve innate abilities. Those who have the ability to focus on a problem and resolve it have a talent. Those who can organize, arrange and orchestrate are talented. Those who can carry out an assignment with precise attention to detail are talented. Those who are gifted with great imaginations and always have a flood of ideas are talented. Obviously, the list of talents is endless. Some people have more talents than others, but everyone has at least one ability.

The quest for the Christian youth is to discover talents that have been given by God. For some young people, this is a difficult task in itself. Some may say: I don't sing, dance, play a musical instrument, play sports or speak well. Why didn't God give me a talent? Sometimes you don't see your talent neither does anyone else. Einstein was four years old before he could speak and seven before he could read. People said he had not talent but turned to be one of the world's greatest physicists. Issac Newton did poorly in grade school. No one believed he had the ability to discover the principle of gravity. A newspaper editor fired Walt Disney because he had "no good ideas" and yet Disneyland, and animated cartoons proved that he had the gift of imagination. Haydn gave up ever making a musician of Beethoven, who seemed a slow and plodding young man with no apparent talent yet Beethoven became one of the world's greatest musicians.

God has given everyone an ability. Those who have not discovered it should ask God to show it to them and then help them to appreciate the great gift he has given them. One of the great advantages of Salvation is the gift of the Holy Ghost. The Holy Spirit helps us identify and then empowers our special ability. 1 Corinthians 12 details this whole experience, giving us the various categories of talents and then reassuring us that everyone does not have the same talent, but when we receive the gift of the Holy Spirit, our ability is amplified so that we can be of great service to the kingdom.

Using Your Talents

How many talents have you been given? Like the parable, do you have five? Two? Suppose you have only discovered one talent? One of the first truths we learn in life is that everyone does not have the same gifts or the same number of gifts. Every person should use whatever gifts they have been given, to the best of their ability. We should never feel sorry for ourselves because we only have one talent. Sometimes we want big things and God intends for us to take little things and make big things out of them. George Washington Carver (1864-1943) said that he once asked God to tell him about the universe. According to Carver, the Lord replied, "George, the universe is just too big for you to understand. Suppose you let Me take care of that." Humbled, Carver asked, "Lord, how about a peanut?" The Lord said, "Now, George, that's something your own size. Go to work on it and I'll help you." When Carver was done studying the peanut, he had discovered more than 300 products that included: a milk substitute, face powder, printer's ink, and soap.. that could be made with that tiny bit of God's world. He had only one talent, but he used it well! The question that should concern us is not how many talents we have, but what we will do with the talents that we have been given.

Using your talent requires that you both improve and move! Improving involves training to bring out the very best in what has been given to you. For some that may mean college, for others vocational school. For everyone it means learning as much as we can, while we can. To improve your talent is to polish it and increase it in every way possible.

Not only must you improve, but you must move! You must be ready and willing to move, take action and react when opportunity knocks. To have the tools and fail to move at the right time is fruitless. Seizing opportunity requires a great deal of faith. Faith in God produces courageous progress. What stopped the last servant in the parable from progressing wasn't his lack of ability, it was his lack of faith and his fear of failure. He would not seize opportunities when they presented themselves and played it safe. In playing it safe, he eventually lost his opportunity and it was given to the man who demonstrated he had the tools and was willing to move!

Those who stand well with God are those who don't spend time complaining about what they do not have, but use what they have to best of their ability!

Those who succeed have concluded that "no matter what comes my way in life that God will make a way", and they step forward in faith!

The Lord can take one talent and multiply it, but I must use it!

If I make just one step the can take my dirt and turn it into diamonds. He can take my pebbles and make them pearls! He can take my rags and give me robes. He can take my failures and give me success!

I don't know about you but I'll continue to say: "Thank you Lord, for blessing my soul!" Thank you Lord for dying for me on Calvary! Thank you Lord for giving me the opportunity to go forward in faith!

468-Church Anniversary

The Purchase Price of A Church

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Mary Goss Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 22, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." Acts 20:28;"For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's. 1 Corinthians 6:20;"Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers;But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot:" 1 Peter 1:18-19

Introduction

What is the purchase price of a church? Often when church congregations are remodeling, financial institutions are interested in knowing the value of the church's real estate. They send out inspectors that consider the building's age, community surroundings, fixtures and other tangible assets. The evaluation is then computed by the lending institution and a report is given as to the marketability of the church's assets, in case it defaulted on its loan agreement. Generally called the "loan value," the amount cited is considered the value of the church. Sometimes the report mistakenly suggests that the number cited is the value of the "church", rather than the value of properties owned by the church.

The church is more than simple mortar and brick. Consider the rich man and the old preacher who learned this lesson the hard way. The rich man noticed that the old preacher worshipped each Sunday in an old warehouse that was barely standing. Despite its size the old warehouse was packed full of people every Sunday and the people seemed to enjoy themselves. The rich man resolved that the old preacher was a good bible thumper but he needed a lesson in building a church. The rich man bought a piece of land in a highly traveled area. He hired the best architects that money could buy and imported the finest materials for draperies, seating and finishing. Each day as the building was going up the preacher stood across the street with his foot resting on a large stone. As the fine seats, hanging chandeliers and air conditioning were installed, the old preacher simply watched. When the building was complete the rich man was proud. He hired him a preacher, complete with a seminary degree and bought advertising on television. However, on Sunday morning there were no people in attendance at his new church. He was puzzled.

He went across the street to the preacher and asked "Didn't I do everything right?" The old preacher said: "You've built a mighty fine building, I'd love to have it myself, but there is one thing you forgot." What's that?" Asked the rich man. The old preacher beckoned for him to follow him down to his warehouse church. Once there the old preacher took the same rock that he rested his foot on each day and put it in the pulpit. He then placed his foot on the rock and said "You tried to build a pretty building to draw men, but Jesus said 'If I be lifted up, I'll draw all men unto me. ..Upon this rock I'll build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.' If you want to build a church, you need to stand on the rock!

Today there many who also think that the church is simply mortar and bricks, but they are mistaken. The church is the body of Christ which was purchased with his own blood.

As Christians, we should always remember that the works of men don't last long, but the works of God are everlasting. Building on the hopes of men in vain so we should "build our hopes on things eternal" and hold to God's unchanging hand.

Exposition

Each of the three verses that comprise the theological basis for this text emphasizes the same basic truth: that the salvation enjoyed by Christians today has be purchased or redeemed by the blood of Christ.

The idea of redemption is not unique to the New Testament. In Old Testament custom and tradition the concept was also used. Slaves and other properties lost in trade or through an act of war could be redeemed by the payment of a set price. Sins committed required the shedding of blood for redemption to be fulfilled. Whether the sinner brought offerings of animals or the first fruits of their crops, a price was paid for their redemption. It did not come without a heavy duty attached to secure it permanently.

Luke, recording the events of Acts 20, tells how the entire church of God was purchased with a price. It has been redeemed by Jesus himself out on Calvary. Ministers are encouraged to feed the church of God and nurture it, because it was purchased by God himself through the sacrifice of his son on Calvary.

Paul, writing to the Corinthians reminds them that not only has the church been purchased by God at a high price, but each individual has also been purchased by God. Our bodies, said Paul, are not our own for every member of the body of Christ has been purchased by Christ.

This is important because Christ's sacrifice cannot be seen as one that was made for the body, as a whole, and not for individuals. Christ died, that he might save the individual, who when combined collectively with all other believers, makes us the body of Christ which is the church. Knowing this to be a fact, Paul urges everyone to keep in mind that we do not live for ourselves, but rather for him who gave his life that we might live. "For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." All that we do and say should be to the glory of God. We are his, because he has purchased us.

Peter, reminded members of the church that they were not given their liberties as Christians as the result of some financial transaction. He wanted them to know that it was not silver and gold which was responsible for their salvation, but the blood of Christ as a lamb without blemish, sacrificed in our stead. Our sins had become so great that only the blood of the lamb could suffice.

Taken together, these three text verses underscore the truth that we have been purchased with a great price and are not our own. As members of the body of Christ, we owe him our allegiance in mind and body because we are not our own.

Not For Sale

A couple had saved their money for many years to buy the house of their dreams. Once they had what they believed to be an acceptable down payment they decided to drive through a neighborhood which had many beautiful homes. As they drove down the street however, they saw so many beautiful homes that they instantly fell in love with not one, but many of them. Soon after, they found a broker and they brought him to the area to show him the homes they like. However, as they showed each home they had to drop their heads in sorrow as they heard the agent say regretfully "It's not for sale." Whether the homes were large or small, every single home they saw was "not for sale." How could this be? The broker told them that a large developer wanted the land in the area for a new project that he planned and so he purchased them all and although they were once on the market, the houses were no longer for sale.

In the same sense, the church is not for sale! There are many who think that it is, but they are wrong because the church is not for sale. It cannot be for sale because it has already been purchased by Jesus a long time ago.

There are many who think the church and its benefits are available to the highest bidder. Some members stay away from worship services frequently, but are quick to send financial gifts, as if to purchase their salvation. Finance can't purchase salvation, its not for sale because it has already been purchased. Others think they can buy themselves a place in heaven by giving large sums to the church, but they too are mistaken because our places in the kingdom have already been confirmed. We know they have been confirmed because Jesus said "I go to prepare a place for you..." We can't buy ourselves a place in the kingdom by showing up in a worship service and putting a dollar in the offering tray as a down payment on eternal life. We can't buy it, because it has already been purchased. Salvation cannot be purchased because it is given to any who want it absolutely free. Romans 6:23 makes it clear: "The wages of sin are death, but the gift of God is eternal life..." The church cannot be purchase because membership is given free of charge to anyone that is willing to respond to the invitation of God and answer the call!

High Purchase Price?

What is the purchase price of a church? Obviously it is not any currency known to man!

The Russian Ruble cannot purchase the church! Neither can the French Franc, the Mexican Paso, the German Mark, or the Yen! Despite their value in the common market, nothing made by hands can purchase the church.

I'm glad that Jesus purchased the church and not man, because would have been different.

If man had purchased the church, its doors would be closed to certain people!

If man had purchased the church, grounds would be off limits to all its enemies, but Jesus says "come all ye that are heavy laden."

If man had purchased the church, its music would have been confined only to certain refrains, but our Lord declares "if these hold their peace, the rocks will cry out! ...let everything that hath breath praise the Lord."

If man had purchased the church, communion trays would be filled with wine, but Jesus said this is my blood of the New Testament which is shed for you!"

If man had purchased the church, he would lock its door at the first sign of trouble, but Jesus said "upon this rock I'll build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it!"

I don't know about you, but I've decided to stick with the church!

The church, will stand when great monuments of man topple and crumble to dust!

The church, will stand when its enemies have fallen along the wayside!

Institutions rise and institutions fall, but the church rolls on!

No wonder the song writer declare: "This the old ship of Zion, get on board get on board!"

Jesus, who died out on Calvary, is the captain!

Jesus, who rose on Sunday morning, is in control!

Get on board!

Get on board!

The Formula For Action

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 3, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"Wilt thou know oh vain man, that faith without works is dead" James 2:20

Introduction

How strong is your faith in God? Is it strong enough to prompt you to take action despite the odds? Is it a deep and enduring faith or is it superficial? There are many people who profess faith in God, but their expression of faith, often does not reflect itself in their deeds.

Consider the man who constantly told all of his friends of his great faith in God. Among friends and in public, he constantly reflected a wealth of words that seemed dipped in faith. One day as he toured a famous mountain in a cable lift, the lift somehow got off track and the man dangled hundreds of feet in the air. As he hung on for his life he cried out "somebody up there help me!". No one else could hear it, but shortly after he heard the voice of God speak to him and ask him: "do you have faith?" The man cried out "Yes, Lord!". Again the voice cried out: "Do you have faith that I have the power to catch you if you fall?" The man answered "yes Lord, I believe! I tell all my friends about my faith every day!" The line began to snap and the tram dangled by just a thread. The man was even more frightened. Again the voice said calmly: "Do you believe?" The man said "Oh yes Lord, I believe!" At that the voice gave the man one final instruction: "Let go of the cable and I will catch you before you fall" The man looked around and saw no man around and immediately was filled with doubt. Before he could think he cried out: "Is there anybody else up there that can help me?" He said he had faith, but it was not great enough to prompt him to let go and wholly trust the power of God.

Today there are many people who share a similar dilemma. They have great faith under safe and normal conditions, but they don't have enough faith to fully and completely trust in the power of God. The great blessings that God has in store for us are released when we exhibit a faith that works.

As Christians we know that it is not enough for us simply to talk about faith. Neither is it sufficient for us to talk about our faith. We know that great faith is shown through our willingness to demonstrate faith in our words and in our deeds. Faith and works form a catalyst that usually result in positive, God centered, action that can change our lives forever!

Exposition

This text focuses on the book of James, which was written by James the brother of Jesus. It focuses on the utilitarian nature of our faith, which is to serve our fellow man.

The book of James is a striking contrast to the preponderance of teachings in the Pauline Epistles. Paul, preached to the Christians in Rome, Corinth, Ephesus and various other localities that they should strive to justify themselves before God. Paul emphasized one principle: "How to present yourself before God in a way that is both justified and acceptable to him." To accomplish this end Paul taught that men should follow the outline of Romans 10:9 "that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shall believe in thy heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." Paul's formula seemed to be: "C+B=S" or "confession, plus, belief equals salvation." As far as being justified before God, Paul taught that personal faith and an expressed belief in God is all that is necessary to straighten things out with God.

James on the other hand does not focus on being justified before God, but he focuses on what it takes to glorify and exemplify God in our lives as we live before men. James reminds us that all that is needed to be acceptable to God is a confessed born again life! However, we have been charged to do more than seek our own salvation, but we have been charged by our savior to "let your light so shine before men that they will see your good works and glorify your father which is in heaven." Matthew 5:16

James teaches us that to glorify God in the presence of men we need a new formula which is based on the premise that our faith plus our works will be a living force for change. Additionally Jesus commanded us to "go ye therefore...and teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I'll be with you alway even unto the end of the world.

What is taking place here is the formation of a new formula or prescription for God centered change. James gives us the first part Faith plus works. Add to that the command of Jesus to let our let shine and then to go to as many people as we can with that message what we have is a new formula: (F+W)X U2=Action. In words, God's formula for actions seems to say "Your Faith plus your works multiplied by the number of people you can influence will result in God centered Action.

The main theme of the Book of James is active faith. His lesson to us is simple, believing and worshiping God is only beginning, service to others is the test of whether or not we really believe what we talk about.

Working The Formula

How do we work this formula? What does it mean in practical terms for our lives?

First God's formula for action is a powerful! It involves:

FAITH: Hebrews 11:1 tell us that "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen." Faith is trusting in God to provide a way even though we don't quite know how it will happen. Faith is essential to God's formula for action because unless we trust in God we will never have the strength to go forward in his name.

WORKS: Our works include the words we say and the things we do on a daily basis to respond to human need in the name of Jesus. Our response to human crises, poverty, homelessness, the infirmed, the bereaved, and social ills are but a few of our works.

U2: Represents the number of people we influence with our faith and works. It is the sum total of our personal evangelism to let others know about the power of our God and his empathy with our needs.

ACTION: Action represents our desired result, a powerful response from God's people to the crises of our times. Such a response will be so overwhelming that the best efforts of our detractors will not be able to diminish its effectiveness.

God's formula, as taught by the preponderance of New Testament Scripture suggest that when men and women of God act on their faith that powerful things begin to happen in the community of man.

To work the formula we must do what is inside of the parenthesis first! (That's the way equations are solved). That means we must first have faith and works ourselves.

Then we must multiply our faith and works by influencing as many people as we can. The net result will be God centered action. It is a simple plan that spells "action" anyway we look at it.

The danger of Tampering With God's Formula

There are some skeptics that believe they operate outside of God's formula. They believe they can simply leave out certain key elements and achieve the same results. What happens if we tamper with God's formula?

Because it is an equation, whatever we do on one side of the equal sign must also be done on the other side. If non-believers choose to take action but remove "faith" from the formula, faith must be taken away from action leaving a formula that reads W X U2=Action-F or faithless action. Taking action without faith usually results in a cause that "fizzles."

If non-believers choose to remove "Works" it results in Many people with great faith with Workless Action (F X U2=Action-W).We see this often when we see people who profess great faith but rarely take action.

If non-believers choose to keep the faith and works but not go out and influence others to do the same the results is action that is reduced by the number of people we "could have" influenced if we had not chosen to sit down on God. F + W=Action/u2. We see this best exemplified in people who are satisfied to keep their faith and works reduced to as small a scale as possible. What could have been is reduced by the number of people these people could have influenced if they had listened to the command of God.

Faith and Works In God's Hands goes a long way!

Brothers and sisters, we should not be discouraged because we only have little faith and small work! A little faith in God's hands, can go a long way.

The apostles were discouraged when they saw that the crowd was large but their provisions were few. They soon learned that a little faith and action, placed in God's hands can go a long way. God baffled modern science when he multiplied by dividing!

Israel was discouraged when it was faced with promised land, but Joshua and Caleb kept reminding them, that a little faith and action, placed in God's hands can go a long way, and walls came tumbling down!

Gideon was troubled that he only had 300 soldiers to fight an army of thousands, but he soon learned that a little faith plus a little work, when placed in God's hands can go a long way, and his enemies were defeated with the loss of one!

Somebody here today is troubled in their spirit, wondering which way to go! The God you serve is a god of action, put your faith to work and let God do the rest!

I don't know about you, but I've found out that a little faith can go a long way!

So I've resolved to sing with the song writer: This little light of mine, I'm going to let it shine. Let it shine! Let it shine! Let it shine!

All In my home!
I'm going to let it Shine!
Everywhere I go!
I'm going to let it shine!
Let it Shine!
Let it Shine!
Let it Shine!

A Faith That Worketh Patience

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

October 10, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let faith have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." James 1:4

Introduction

Has your faith ever been tested? Has there ever been a time when you felt challenged by a series of circumstances that have frustrated you? What was your response? The ideal response to challenging moments is to approach them with confidence, endure them with courage, and arise from them with an even stronger faith.

A striking example of this truth is Nelson Mandela's quest to eliminate racial segregation in South Africa. As leader of the African Nation Congress, Mr. Mandela was confident that the South Africa's system of Apartheid was morally wrong. He worked to change that system, even though at the time it appeared he was fighting a losing battle. Despite the hopelessness of this situation he entered with confidence.

His activism resulted in a 27 year imprisonment during which time he demonstrated unparerelled courage and commitment to his cause. He educated himself in prison, refined his thinking, and took the very walls that were supposed to demoralize him and used them as spring boards to renewed hope.

A few years ago he arose from dungeons of segregationist ideology with an even stronger faith. He used the new courage he gained from his prison and experience to face the final obstacle of finally dismantling the remaining vestiges of the apartheid system in South Africa. Today, apartheid is legally dead in South Africa, largely because of one man's faith, courage and commitment to the idea of freedom.

The stages of Mandela's struggle represent the same stages that every person faces when pressed to put his faith in action, against the odds: Enter with confidence, endure with courage, and arise with renewed faith.

Whether the person is Ghandi or Martin Luther King. Whether it is Rosa Parks or the man and wife facing the difficulties of a troubling marriage, the principle is the same: Those who exemplify great faith are those who enter a troubling situation with confidence that it cannot overwhelm them, cannot frighten them and will not break their resolve to proceed toward their established goal.

As Christians, we have learned that simply having faith is not the same as acting on it. We know that to talk about faith and to act on faith are expressly different. Therefore we should continue to resolve that we will face every difficulty that life presents with confidence and optimism that God will work things out to our advantage in his own due time and in his own mysterious way.

Exposition

This text focuses on James, the brother of Jesus, as he explains to the church that works, which evidence our faith, have several dimensions, one of which is patience.

James' general message is that professed faith in God should equate to action. It is exemplified best by his statement in James 5:20 that "faith without works is dead." The general idea is that those who have faith will show it in their works. In this passage, James helps us to categorized and classify just what he means by "works" as the idea of patience is explained.

James seems to say that faith is a matter of strong belief that can be professed with the lips. Patience is not a matter of belief it is a product of belief plus trial. James' formula seems to be: F+T=P or Faith Plus Trial equals Patience. James says that trials should be welcomed by every Christian because they are an opportunity to develop patience. Listen at verse 2 "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations." Divers Temptations is simply an old fashioned way of saying "diverse kinds of troubles." We should count it a joy when we are exposed to the different kinds of troubles that life brings. Why? Because "the trying of your faith, worketh patience."

To some, James' assertion that we should rejoice when trouble comes is troubling. They don't understand why anyone would want to rejoice when trouble comes. They see life as the world sees it. The world rejoices when trouble leaves. The Christian rejoices when trouble comes! That is not to say that Christians go and seek trouble. James does not suggest that we spend our days looking for trouble so we can prove how much faith we have.

A careful reading of verse two says when we "fall into divers temptations" meaning when trouble finds us. When trouble finds us we approach it with an attitude that it is another opportunity to let our faith work and for Christ to work through us to achieve another victory.

The key element of James formula is assurance. He equates patience with the quiet assurance that when faith is tested in the life of a person committed to life according to the will of God, victory is inevitable. "All things work to the good of them that love the Lord, according to his purposes in Christ Jesus."

James says every Christian should approach life's troubles with an air of confidence that helps him to say "I can't lose, with the stuff I use." That stuff is my faith and trust in Almighty God.

How to Develop Patience

How can we develop that quiet assurance that is well in our lives? How can we acquire this evasive quality of patience? It comes through repeated application of our faith in moments of trial and trouble. In the beginning, we do not enter trials with patience. Most of us enter with faith alone. However, we come out of trials with faith and patience.

Job did not enter his trial with patience. He entered his trial with an unfaltering trust in God. Despite the fact that we know him as a great man of patience, he did not have it when it trial began. However he did have it when his trial ended. We know he did not have it because he spent considerable time frustrated with his friends, his wife and with himself. During the course of his trial he came to grips with some truths about himself, God and life in general and came forth out of his trial with a renewed faith and trust in God. When he came forth, Job was a man of patience.

In a similar sense, we do not enter into troubling situations with patience. We enter with faith alone. However, when we come through, we evolve a more patient person because we have seen how God has parted the waters of the Red Sea and allowed us to walk on dry ground.

We develop patience by winning small battles at first and then winning great victories in the name of the Lord!

Patience has two key elements that are essential to its understanding they are:

PERSEVERANCE: Perseverance is the ability to endure the storm, without being washed overboard. Those who are able to endure troubling situations are likely to achieve a portion of patience when its over.

PERSISTENCE: Persistence goes beyond perseverance. Perseverance only seeks to survive the storm. Persistence proceeds toward accomplishing the will of God despite the storm. Persistence seizes the wheel and guides the ship through the storm toward the goal. Even if thrown overboard the persistent person, floating on the life preserver of hope, keeps paddling toward mark of the high calling of God which is in Jesus Christ.

The persistent person sings the words of the old Negro Spiritual "Sometimes up, sometimes down, sometimes level to the ground, but at the cross I'm going to bow, and I going on to heaven anyhow. Through the storm, through the rain, Lord I'll make just the same, at the cross I'm going to bow, and I'm going on to heaven anyhow!"

The key to developing patience is to endure small storms and never lose sight of our goal, while gaining strength for bigger storms that are sure to come.

No Patience Until We've Been Tried

James makes it abundantly clear that there can be no patience gained without trials endured. There can be no victory unless there is a battle. You can't enjoy the sweetness of ecstasy until you have tasted the bitterness of agony. You can't appreciate the gain, until you've known the pain.

If you ask Daniel he'll tell you that you may prayer all day long. But you really don't that the Lord will answer prayer until you been in the Lion's Den. When you have faced the growling fangs of death and been in the grasp of adversity and watched the Lord quiet down angry lions, only then you can say "I know the Lord will answer prayer for I tried him for myself."

If you ask the Three Hebrew Boys they'll tell you may believe that your God is able to deliver you. But you really don't know that the Lord is able to deliver you until you have been in the fiery furnace. When you feel the heat of opposition burning seven times hotter than it normally burns. When you feel the protecting arms of God surround hear the voice of the world ask "didn't we put three men in the fire, behold I see four, and the fourth man looks like the son of God."

The same man that was in the fire with the Hebrew boys!
The same man that was in the lion's den with Daniel...
That same man is with us today.
Jesus, the lily of the valley!
Jesus, the bright and morning star!
Jesus, the fairest of ten thousand!
Died out on Calvary but rose on Sunday morning!
He was tried in the fire!
When you've been tried in the fire you know there always room for optimism!
When you've been tried in the fire, hope waning is restored again!
When you've been tried in the fire, love lost is revived again!
When you've been tried in the fire, the weak in heart get new strength!
Have you been tried in the fire?
Did you...
Did you...
Did you come forth as pure gold?

Mirror, Mirror On The Wall

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 24, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass: For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was. James 1:23-24; But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. 2 Corinthians 3:18

Introduction

Have you ever taken a good look at yourself in the mirror? What do you see? Was it the face of the most beautiful girl at school? Was the handsome physique of the school s most handsome young man? Did you like what you saw so much that you kissed your mirror? What did not do when you were not pleased? There are times when we like what we see in the mirror. There are times when we don t like what we see. When we see something wrong or ugly we try to change it. Sometimes there are pimples and bumps in our faces and we reach for a variety of creams and salves to remove them. If a hair is out of place it will quickly be combed into place. Rarely do we leave the mirror without responding to what we see. The question is how we respond.

In the children s tale Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs a wicked queen made a practice of going to her mirror daily and asking the question mirror on the wall, who s the fairest of them all. For many years the mirror always answered you are, my queen which was much to her satisfaction. However, when a beautiful young lass ventured into her kingdom and came to live with the seven dwarfs, the queen got a different answer when she asked the same question. As usual, the vain queen came to her mirror and asked the question Mirror, mirror on the wall, who s fairest of them all? Instead of its usual answer this time the mirror responded in truth Snow White. The queen was infuriated at the mirror and she was infuriated at Snow White. Rather than improve upon her looks she sought to kill Snow White by giving her a poisoned apple. She looked into her mirror, did not like what she saw and immediately tried to change the condition of everyone except herself.

There are some who see themselves in a mirror and do nothing. That is why some walk around daily without combed heads and with yesterdays milk stain still on their mouths. They saw it in the mirror but it did not matter to them. They did not change.

As Christians we thank God for showing us a true reflection of ourselves in his word. In his word we see not only our imperfections and places that need improvement, but we also se your finer qualities. We leave from his presence assured that every is correct and in order as we live our lives in the world each day!

Exposition

This text focuses on the James, the brother of Jesus, as he emphasizes to the Church, the importance of being doers of the word. Throughout his epistle James underscores the importance of going beyond simply verbalizing faith, but to acting upon it. His themes are repetitious. Faith Without Works is dead , Faith Leadeth to Patience ,and Effectual Faith in Prayer. They all say one truth: Those who have faith in God should act upon it rather than simply talk about it.

In this text, James encourages the church to peer into the perfect law of liberty, as if it were a mirror, and to compare itself to the perfect truths of God. In places where it finds deficiencies the church should take corrective action. It should, according to James, never leave without taking steps toward improvement.

The Formula seems to be: What I Am, Plus An Active Faith, equals what I ought to be (A+F=O).

The word translated glass is from the Greek word Esoptron. In the King James Version Esoptron has been translated glass.

Most mirrors in biblical times were metallic and not made of glass. Such mirrors did not give true reflections because their surfaces gave reflections that were sometimes out of proportion to reality. A true mirror had to have certain properties to be the best possible. It had to have 1)Sufficient smoothness and regularity, and; 2)Ability to reflect light uniformly producing images of things that stand in front of it. Esoptron interpreted as Glass narrows down the kind of mirrors that were available to the one that is most likely to give a true reflection.

The word of God is compared to a true mirror which meets both tests of a true mirror: it is consistent and regular, and has the ability to reflect upon the life before it a true image. James notes that those who stand before the perfect law of God can expect to see a true reflection of themselves as they compare to his expectations.

Paul in his second letter to the Corinthians notes that those who know the Lord can stand boldly before the glass or mirror of God s word and can see how they are gradually changing, with the help of the Holy Spirit into the kind of people that would be acceptable to God.

Both text verses underscore the importance of seeing ourselves in mirror that gives us a true picture of ourselves and then adjusting, with the help of the Holy Spirit, little by little until we become what God wants us to be. Both frown upon the idea of seeing ourselves deficient and leaving without making any changes.

Man Made Mirrors Are Deceptive

Today s youth should pay close attention to the truths of this text, especially Christian youth.

The first truth revealed is that man made mirrors are deceptive. James, in this text makes sure that he uses the term glass to differentiate the quality of God s word as a reflector from other kinds of mirrors in use. It is important because depending on the quality of the mirror, the way we look can actually be distorted.

Man made mirrors can make you look little in your own eyes. Many young people have a low estimate of themselves because they see themselves reflected only in the eyes of mankind. Many look at the fine homes and lifestyles of the rich and famous and then look at where they live and think that its impossible for them to do anything because they don t have what the stars have.

Some youth have dismissed themselves as failures because they are from poor homes or because they live a the project. Some are beginning to believe the reflection that the world gives them. Sometimes even in their home they are told that they are nothing. How many boys have been told You ain t gon never mount to anything, you just like your old daddy! How many children have begun to believe that they cannot achieve because of their race! Blackness is equated with ailure.

In the book of Joshua, the Children of Israel had reached the banks of the Promised land. Spies were sent over to see the potential of the new land. The spies returned with a report that they land was flowing with milk and honey, but it was filled with Giants. The giants were so big that they made them feel like grasshoppers. Despite the urging of Joshua and Caleb, the entire country began to see itself as grasshoppers before giants, unable to achieve a victory.

In a similar sense the world makes youth feel little in their own eyes. When some youth have a perfectly good pair of shoes on their feet, the world tells them that because their tennis do not have the name Air Jordan ,or Nikki on the label that the shoe is worthless. So, children who can t wear name brands feel bad about themselves and lose hope.

Man made Mirrors can also make us appear bigger than we really are. While many youth think little of themselves, there are many who striving to give the appearance that they are bigger than they really are. The quest to appear successful rather than be successful is all consuming. Many want the trappings of success without the hard work and preparation that goes with it. We want the symbols without the substance. A Porche is the symbol of success.

It implies that the owner has reached a certain level of financial security and can afford an $80,000 luxury car. It would be counter productive to buy a Porche with food stolen food stamps, that gives us the symbol without the substance. There are many youth who are attracted to the symbols of success they see around them. A Drug dealer drives a fancy car and has a roll of money in his pocket. It is a symbol of success, but without substance.

The truth is that there is a high probability that a young drug dealer will end up dead or in jail before he is 30 years old. His life has no substance, although it has the symbols. He appears bigger than he really is in life. We should be careful about appear bigger than we really are.

God s Mirror Reminds Us Of Who We Are

Man ‘s mirrors distort how we see ourselves, but God s mirror helps us to see ourselves, certainly flawed, but improving every day.

God ‘s mirror reminds us that we are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light: 1 Peter 2:9

Man ‘s mirror often shows us how we are nobodies, but God s mirror shows how, in the eyes of God, everybody is somebody!

Man’ s mirror encourages us to be something we are not, but God s mirror shows you what you can be, with God s help!

There s no limit to what can be done when you get a little help from the Lord!

Joseph was the Black sheep of his family, hated by all of his brothers, but with a little help from the Lord, he became a mighty man in Egypt.

David was an obscure shepherd boy but with a little help from the Lord, he rose to kill Goliath and become of the King of Israel.

Esther was a beautiful woman, blessed with good looks and charm. With a little help from the Lord, she used her good looks to become queen of Persia!

I don t know about you but I ve found out that when you trust in the Lord amazing things happen!

When you trust in the Lord:Doubts turn into confidence; fear turns into courage; failure turns into victory; and weakness turns into strength

No wonder the song writer declared: I will trust in the Lord until I die!

When the world starts showing us reflections that make us seem small, every child of God should say to himself, I m a child of the king!

Who is this king of Glory?

He s Jesus, the lily of the valley! Jesus, the Bright and morning star! Jesus, who died out on calvary, but rose up early on Sunday!

Get up every morning and look into the mirror and say Get ready world for here comes a child of God!

How Can I Say Thanks?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 21, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the most High: And call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me." Psalms 50:14-15

Introduction

How do you say thanks when someone shows you a kindness? Do you buy them a present? Do you send them a card? What about a phone call? In each instance you attempt to express your feeling of gratitude in a small but noticeable way. Our social custom dictates that persons who are recipients of kindnesses should respond by saying "thank you." It is an expected cordiality, whether it is heartfelt or not. Saying thanks is easy for some, but there are others that find it considerably difficult because they find gratitude a humbling experience.

Consider two men who received their fates in sealed envelopes. The first received an envelope which contained the sum total of his life's experiences. The envelope was marked: thrills. He felt fortunate to have received such a prize lot in life. As he opened it his life was showered with exciting events. He traveled around the world and experienced every known sensation. After a while he had seen everything and done everything. His thrills were dulled to meaningless, boring moments. He returned to his benefactor and complained violently. "Life is boring. I've been everywhere and done everything, but there is nothing else to do. I owe you no thanks, for this miserable state." Complaining of boredom he left unhappy. The second man had an envelope marked "frills." As he opened his envelope his life became surrounded by a mixture of experiences. He had moments of joy followed by moments of sickness. For every minute of joy there was also a few seconds of pain. After many years the second man also returned to his benefactor and offered his thanks. "Why do you thank me?" The benefactor asked "I gave you friend thrills and he complained. I only gave you frills and you give me thanks." The man answered with a air of gratitude: "If you had given me only thrills, I would have soon become bored as he. But you gave me a package of thrills, ills, and chills and called it frills made my life complete. The nights you gave me, made the sun look brighter the next day. I thank you for the frills. I thank for the ills. Together they have made me a better man." His benefactor smiled and said "I have finally found a grateful man" and he showered him with both health and wealth.

As Christians we have learned the spirit of gratitude. We give God thanks for the sunshine and the rain, the joy and the pain; for our losses and our gains. We have found that we can show our thanks best by keeping our promises to God and continually praising him in the congregation of men.

Exposition

This text considers David as he continues his praises of God. David, referred to as a "man after God's own heart," learned in the course of his life to give God praise and thanks for every blessing and good fortune. He also learned to praise God for his moments of trial and difficulty as well. This text includes David's dialogue with God. It includes his words of praise and commitment and God's response. This simple passage forms the basic structure for a complex body of theology that explains the believer's relationship of gratitude to God. It has four parts which encourage us to: 1)Give Thanks to God 2)Keep Our Promises To Him 3) Call upon him in times of trouble and expect Deliverance 4) Praise and Glorify his name. This contains the basic ingredients of a life that demonstrates gratitude to God.

Giving God Thanks

The first suggestion of this text is that we should always offer thanks to God. In giving thanks the emphasis is always on the spirit demonstrated in the offering rather than the offering itself.

Cain and Able both gave offerings of thanks to God. The two brothers came before him with gifts that represented the best of both the fields and the herds. Yet God received Able's offering and rejected Cain's. It was not that Cain's offering was better than Able's but his actions after his was rejected indicate that he may have brought his offering with anything but a humble and obedient spirit. Jealous because his offering was not received, Cain killed Able. Had he come before God in humility and found his offering rejected he would have sought ways to have his offering better received rather than killing his brother instead. His actions betrayed the real motive of his offering which was pride.

Today we should give thanks to God out of gratitude for his goodness. The spirit of humility is more important than empty outward expressions. Consider three men who were asked to give thanks to God for something. Two of the men were believers, the third was a non-believer who liked to appear a part of the group of the moment. The first man held up his hand and said "I want to thank God for holding my hand, for when I was sinking he lifted me up." The second man held up his glasses and said "I want to thank God for opening my eyes to his goodness, for I was once blind, but now I see." The third man had no testimony but recalled something he heard somebody else say. He reached down, took off his shoe, waved it in the air and yelled "I thank God for saving my sole!" He said the right words, but they came more from the bottom of his foot than the bottom of his heart.

When God has been good to us, it should not be difficult for us to give him thanks. That thanks should always come from our heart!

Keeping Our Promises To God

One way to show thanks to God is to say it with words. Another way, we learn from this text, is to keep our promises to him! Often we make unlimited promises to God in moments of infirmity or trial, only to retract them once the cloud has lifted. God keeps his promises to us, we can show our gratitude to him, by keeping our promises to him.

Young Hannah prayed earnestly to God for a child. Her promise to God was that she would give the child up for service to the temple if God would hear her prayer. God answered and young Samuel was born. True to her promise, Hannah brought the boy to the temple, kissed him goodbye, and left him in the hands of Eli the prophet. She kept her promise to God and thereby displayed her gratitude for his kindness.

Has there ever been a time when you promised God you would take a certain action? Did you keep your promise? If not, then you, like millions of others, have shown ingratitude to God. He kept his end of the bargain, but we abandoned ours. We can show gratitude to God, not by a shower of words, but by simply keeping the private vows that we have made to him. Sometimes these promises involve personal life style changes. Sometimes they involve increased service. They almost always involve some action on our part.

When we labor to keep our vows we show gratitude to God. We express to him in the only humble way that we know, that we are truly thankful his benevolence towards us.

Just as the Savior has demonstrated his love for us by not abandoning his promise to keep us, hold us and be with us always. We demonstrate our gratitude by showing him through our deeds that we are truly grateful for his goodness.

Call Upon Him In Times of Trouble

A third way to show thanks to God is to call upon him in times of trouble. That may seem odd that God would list calling upon him as a way show gratitude, but in reality it isn't strange. There are many today who call on God with their lips but, in times of trouble put their trust in everyone but God. There are some, when trouble comes, who turn to quack doctors, voodoo, palm readers, special potions, magic candles, mystical oils and hoodoo. They seldom look to God.

God told David in a time of trouble, "call upon me." He told David then and tells us now, show your trust, confidence and faith in me by calling on me when you need help, not some other. David found that God was true to his word. So much so that he wrote in Psalm 27:5 "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock."

There are many today who have discovered what David found out, which is that God is a very present help in a time of trouble. Whenever we need him all we need to do is just call him. Call him in the morning! Call him in the noonday! Call him in the midnight hour!

Glorify God With our Testimony!

We can show thanks to God by telling the world about his goodness! What he has done is to good to keep to ourselves. In Psalm 105:1-3 he said: " O give thanks unto the LORD; call upon his name: make known his deeds among the people. Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him: talk ye of all his wondrous works. Glory ye in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD."

When God has done something good for us we should be willing to glorify him and show our gratitude. We should tell it on our jobs! Tell it in the songs we sing! We should tell it in the joy that bubbles in our soul! We should never back down from a chance to say to the world, "I just want to thank God for being so good to me!"

Thank you Lord, for taking my:

—Bitterness and turning it to sweetness;Sadness and giving me joy!

—Loneliness and give me companionship; Emptiness and giving me fulfillment!

—Failure and showing me the victory; Discouragement and giving me encouragement!

More than that, I want to thank you Lord for saving me soul!

I don't know about you, but every now and then I wan to tell somebody that I serve a good God!

I want to tell somebody that he carried an old cross for me!

I want to tell somebody that he died out on Calvary!

I want to tell somebody that early Sunday morning that he arose from the dead!

Thank you Lord!

Thank you Lord!

...for you've been so good to me!

Dumb Things

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 7, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"And one of the multitude answered and said, Master, I have brought unto thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit; 18 And wheresoever he taketh him, he teareth him: and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away: and I spake to thy disciples that they should cast him out; and they could not." Mark 9:17-18

Introduction

Have you ever done something that was dumb? Really dumb? Most of us at one time or another have done at least one dumb thing. If we are honest, we have probably done several dumb things over the course of our lives. Contrary to popular opinion, dumbness is not the unique province of the intellectually barren. In fact, dumbness has nothing at all to do with intelligence because even the most intelligent people we know often do dumb things.

Consider the college professor who was an expert in the physical sciences who had the unfortunate occasion to have a flat tire on his automobile. He brought the car to a halt in front of an insane asylum and just as he stopped his left front tire dropped to ground. He jacked up the car and replaced the tire only to learn the reason the tire fell off ...he had lost all of his lug bolts. The college professor was baffled and began to scratch his head. As he pondered, a resident of the asylum stared at him as he tried to figure out what to do. Despite his best attempts the college professor was stumped. Without lug bolts the tire would only fall off again. The insane resident yelled to him "you have a flat tire!" That obvious observation ruffled the professor who responded "That I can very well see. You stay in the asylum and let me take care of this." After an hour went by the professor had no luck. Finally the insane man yelled "Why don't you take one lug bolt off each of the other three tires and that'll be enough to hold you until you can get help!" Amazed at the simplicity of the suggestion the professor followed it to the letter. Just before pulling off he went to the insane man and said "That was a good suggestion, I thought you were supposed to be crazy?" The insane man responded “I am, but I’m certainly not dumb!”

Obviously dumb things or the lack of them are not indicators of our intelligence. Neither can our education and intelligence protect us from gullibility, or the stupidity of doing those things which are just plain dumb!

As Christians, we know that we are susceptible to the wiles of the devil at any give time or moment. If we give him any place in our lives he’ll have us doing “dumb things.” Thank God for Jesus who has given us the victory over Satan. As long we let him lead us we will avoid the tendency to do “dumb things.”

Exposition

This text focuses on an incident during the public ministry of Jesus in which he was confronted with a man who was described as being possessed by a “dumb spirit.”

Traditionally, “dumb” in the biblically context usually refers to an outward condition of men and women in which they are unable to speak. In that time the common feeling of the people was that persons who could not speak were empty headed and imbeciles.

Hence they were referred to as “dumb.” Repeatedly the word “dumb” referred to the inability of a man or a woman to speak.

In Isaiah 35:6 Isaiah says “Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing:” referring to the inability of a man to speak. In Isaiah 53:7 a projection is given of the coming of the Messiah. In his description of the Messiah Isaiah said: “...he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.” “Dumb” was scripturally equated with speaking.

With the passage of time, the word “dumb” has taken on a new meaning. Today it is politically incorrect to refer to the vocally handicapped as “dumb.” Their condition is referred to as being “mute.” The term dumb has taken on a new meaning of its own, generally referring to “thoughtless action.” In this context, the dumb may be able to speak, but they may not be able to act with any degree of control.

This text is unique because it is the only place in the bible where the descriptive phrase “dumb spirit” is used. Unlike other places where “dumb” refers to the man or woman impacted, this text finds the phrase being used to describe the source of their problem. In the short verses that describe this episode, there is a litany of the problems that this young man faced, but none of them included an inability to speak. It is said that he often fell down, threw himself in the fire and pined away.

What is said is that he often acted in self destructive, irrational, illogical and erratic ways. It is never said that the man himself was not able to speak. Muteness is not listed in his maladies.

The reference to "dumb spirit" here is a reference to the cause of spiritual inadequacies such as spiritual deafness, the inability to hear the word of God; spiritual lameness, the inability to walk in the right path; spiritual blindness, the inability to see the glory of God.

This is the spirit that Jesus referred to in verse 25 when he called upon the dumb and deaf spirit to leave the man. The evil spirit left him and Jesus lifted him up by the hand. There is never once an indication that the man spoke or heard anything, but this instance is a referral to the nature of the spirit rather than the condition of the man.

Many Do Dumb Things

Today there are millions of people who are influenced by "dumb spirits" to do "dumb things." Often those who would not normally engage themselves in self destructive behavior are led by dumb spirits. In this text the father tells Jesus "wheresoever he taketh him he teareth him." Indicating that the "dumb spirit" actually led the son to places and situations that would cause him to do dumb things and to harm or endanger himself.

It was a dumb spirit that led Jephthah in Judges 11:30 to promise God that if he won the battle with Ammon that he would kill the first person that walked out of his door when he returned home. He realized it was a dumb thing when he saw his daughter come out to met him.

It was a dumb spirit that prompted David to believe that he could have an adulterous affair with Bathsheba and it would not be detected. It was an even dumber spirit that made him believe he could have her husband killed and no one would discover his sin. It was dumb thing to do.

It was a dumb spirit that told Annanias and Sapphira that they could take credit for giving richly to God when they had only given a small portion. It was dumb thing to do.

Likewise today, there are many people, led by "dumb spirits" that are going to dumb places and doing dumb things.

Dumb spirits suggest that night clubs and honkey tonks are fun places to be. Never mind that I increase the likelihood that I might get shot,killed or otherwise injured!

Dumb spirits suggest that we can slip off with another woman's husband or another man's wife and have an affair that will go unnoticed.

Dumb spirits suggest that we shoplift valuables from stores and despite the presence of surveillance cameras and plain clothes detectives we can get away with it. Only dumb spirits make such suggestions.

Dumb spirits led us to do dumb things!

Dumb Acts And Ignorant Acts Differ

There is a difference between dumb acts and ignorant acts. Those who act out of ignorance don't know any better. However, those who act out of dumbness, know better but act "dumbly" against their own better judgment.

Paul made it clear that those who want to do right but eventually do wrong are not doing so because of a lack of information but because of sin. The sin that he referred to is the same evil presence in our text that made the young man do "dumb things." In Romans 7:20 he said "if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me."

Today there are many, some perhaps here today, that know the difference between right and wrong. They have been taught on their mother's knee and it has been drilled into them by their fathers and grandfathers. They know that it is wrong to steal or lie. They know they should respect God and put him first in their lives, but despite what they know they do the opposite. When they do the opposite of what they know, Paul says sin controls them and makes them do "dumb things."

When dumb spirits prevail, find Jesus!

Finally brothers and Sisters, when this father found that his son had been overtaken by a dumb spirit, he set out on a journey to find Jesus!

He had tried the disciples and no doubt the philosophers, doctors and counselors had failed too, but he probably thought to himself, "If I can just find Jesus, everything will be alright!"

One of the great underlying truths of the Christian life is that when everything seems at its worse, there is always hope, if you can just find Jesus!

The woman with an issue of blood for 12 long years didn't expect to hear him call her name or to have him lay hands on her, but she thought if I can just touch the hem of garment I can be made whole. She knew the power that could come if she could just find Jesus.

The disciples were riding in a boat out on the raging sea. When the storms began to rage, somebody said "find Jesus." Shaking him one disciple asked “Master, the tempest is raging ..carest thou not that we perish” Jesus spoke to the wind and waves and said “Peace be still”

If there are storms raging in your life, just find Jesus!
When you find Jesus, he’ll take your misery and turn it into delight!
When you find Jesus, he’ll take your sadness and turn it into joy!
When you find Jesus, he’ll take your pain and turn it into gain!
When you find Jesus, he’ll take your cross and replace it with crown!
If you’ve been following the advice of dumb spirits in your life, find Jesus!
He’ll pick you up and turn you around!
He’ll plant your feet on solid ground!
Find Jesus! The lily of the valley!
Find Jesus! The bright and morning star!
Find Jesus! Who died out on Calvary!
Find Jesus! Who arose early Sunday morning!
Find Jesus!
..he’ll make everything alright!

A Place In The Son

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 14, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise: For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Hebrews 11:8-10

Introduction

Have you ever searched for your place in the sun? Your "place in the sun" is a colloquialism which refers to achieving a desirable level of joy and peace. Many spend their entire lives looking for their proverbial "place in the sun." Poets allude to it; song writers write about it; and dreamers ponder about the happiness they will know when they find their place in the sun.

Each generation looks for its place in the sun. Generations of African-Americans have sought a place in the sun by migrating in large numbers from one place to another. We sought freedom in the North.

We sought the future in New York, economic opportunity in Chicago and Detroit; and the freedom to achieve in California. Even today another generation of our young is looking to Atlanta as their "Place in the sun." By the thousands, young African-Americans are moving to Atlanta seeking job opportunities and prosperity.

It is impossible to find "a place in the sun" without the Lord. Consider the young song writer who took his new song to a publisher for consideration. It was entitled "Over Yonder with Jesus."

The publisher studied the lyrics and concluded that the song had great potential because it talked going to heaven. However, the publisher said it would be more marketable if the references to Jesus would be removed.

"The bottom line is son, you could make more money without Jesus." The young man paused for a moment, then picked up his papers and began to leave. As he was leaving the publisher asked why he wouldn't sell his song.

The young man responded: "I could make more money without Jesus, but without Jesus, I am nothing. Without him I could do nothing. Without him I'd surely fail. Without him I would be drifting, like a ship without a sail."

As Christians, we know we have place in the sun. It has been secured for us by the Savior himself. This world can offer us money and opportunity and a place in its sun. We have found however, that there is no real happiness anywhere under the sun without Jesus!

Exposition

This text focuses on Abraham, the Patriarch of the Hebrew nation and his many travels in search of a land in which he could be happy to serve God and enjoy life. As a child, Abraham grew up in Ur of the Chaldees. Ur was a prominent city in the Babylonian and Sumerian cultures.

It had all of the conveniences and distractions of the big city of its day. As a child Abraham learned the ways of the city and became frustrated by its ills. When his father Terah moved from Ur to Haran, he saw more of the same but just a little worse. In Haran there were large temples constructed for the worship of the Moon god named "Sin." It was a prosperous but yet god forsaken place.

From the midst of a life rooted in the fast life of the big city and moon god worship, Abraham learned about God and sought him. Following the commands of God, he moved out of Haran and came to the land of Canaan where he settled first in Shechem which was located in hill country of Ephraim. Even here though, Abraham was still searching for something. He heard of a new city that was developing.

It was located in the hill country at the intersection of the North and South road to Jericho, this new place had great prospects.

It had international travel, fertile land and abundant springs. It appeared the place to be, so he packed up his family and moved to a place called Bethel.

Even though he prospered in Bethel, Abraham still searched for something. He heard of a place in the plains that had rich fertile soil, available salt, and fine cities. He and Lot and their families traveled to the area and Lot chose Sodom and Gomorrah, the cities of the plain and Abraham went back to the hills again, this time in Hebron. Later, he moved to Beer-Sheba a dry, semi-desert region which was a cross road to Egypt. It was a desert city, but was the commercial center of its times.

Abraham settled there, dug a well for his family and prospered more. When hard times developed and famine spread through the land Abraham packed up and moved to Egypt where he lived for a short while.

When his travels ended, Abraham came right back to Palestine where he spent the remainder of his days, happy in the Lord.

At age 100 he had a son by his wife Sarai. When she died, he remarried and had more children and lived happily pleasing God. At the age of 175, Abraham died, having found at last his "place in the sun" and peace in his soul. He spent his life searching for his place.

He found that inner peace came when he accepted the promises of God and acted on them in faith. He ended his travels after perhaps discovering that wherever he finds God and trusts in him can be his "place in the sun."

Looking for a Place In the Sun

There are millions today who are desperately looking for their place in the sun. They are in search of that elusive experience called "happiness" but, like the proverbial pot of gold at the end of the rainbow they seem never able to find it.

Abraham moved from city to city looking for a community which had foundations. Certainly, "foundations" in this context has no reference to material foundations, but it obviously referred to the spiritual fibre. Like Abraham many of us have traveled from city to city looking for our place in the sun. Los Angeles, once the Mecca of Black Americans is now experiencing a great exodus, thousands are moving out, trouble by crime, drugs and a feeling of fear. Detroit is deteriorating. Harlem is but an empty shell of its past glory and millions are on the move. Even those who stay put in the same city, move around frequently looking for something. Some change from church to church, looking for something. One day they are shouting with the Baptists, the next day they are speaking in tongues with the Charismatics. Later they are on the street corner selling Muslim newspapers. Some move from sobriety to drunkenness, trying to find happiness in a bottle of alcohol. Some are looking for the perfect man or woman so they keep moving from mate to mate in an endless cycle that begins with romance and ends with divorce. It begins and ends but starts all over again. They are looking for something and can't seem to find it. Millions today are looking for meaning in their lives and can't seem to narrow it down and so they keep searching.

What are we looking for? It may be the same thing that Abraham was looking for. It was not big city life, that's for sure. He grew up in Ur, the New York City of his times. Although his father took him a way when he was a teen-ager, he knew the way back. It wasn't opportunity, because in Haran and Bethel he had opportunity. In fact, Abraham had money, big money. His staff of employees got so big that he had to part company with Lot, just to keep the peace. He wasn't looking for a place to make money he had a business sense that made him prosper wherever he went. What was he looking for?

He was looking for foundations! He was looking for something that was sure and secure. He was looking for a place where he could be at peace with God with as little interruption as possible. Today there are millions who are looking for the same thing. They want peace of mind and spirit. They want to be in the presence of God with as few interruptions as possible.

The only entity known to man that is sure and will never fail is God. Hebrews 13:8 puts it this way "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever." He is a sure thing. While millions search aimlessly for their "place in the sun" there are a few who have what they are looking when the came to know Jesus. He gave them a new hope and a new spirit. He is a sure foundation. No wonder the song writer would declare: "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!"

A Place in the Son

The last part of this text suggests why Abraham had such difficulty finding what he was looking for. He was looking for a city whose "builder and maker was God." Abraham stopped traveling, perhaps when he discovered that what he was looking for could not be found in architecture, governmental bodies or in the fast pace of the metropolis. What he wanted could only be achieved when he himself, regardless of his locality, was touched by the hand of God. Those today who are searching, can find what they are looking for when they come to Jesus. What they seek is a place in the "SUN" but they what they need is a place in the "SON."

If we get a place in the SUN, trouble always seems to follow; but when we get a place in the SON, we can sing "I'm so glad that trouble don't last always."

If we get a place in the SUN, we have to cry in the midnight hour; but once we find place in the SON we know "weeping may endure for a night, but there's joy in the morning!"

If we get a place in the SUN, we still want more; but once we find a place in the SON we begin to day "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want!"

Abraham sought a city made with the hands of God. Today friends we have the joy of knowing that not only can those who accept Jesus have spiritual happiness but they can look forward to literally having "a place" in the Son.

Jesus told his disciples in John 14:2 "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

In Jesus, We have a place in the kingdom of God!

It is a place with foundations! For I heard John say he saw the heavenly city, the New Jerusalem, descending out of heaven. It will be a city sitting on 12 foundations, each one a precious stone!

Our place in the Son, will be surrounded by 12 gates, each one made of a solid pearl!

Our place in the Son, will have streets paved with gold!

Our place in the Son, will have a tree in the midst of it that will bear all manner of fruit that will eliminate all sickness and disease!

Our place in the Son, will be a place of joy, unspeakable joy!

It will be a place of unending happiness!

It'll always be howdy, and never goodbye!

Bye and bye, when the morning comes, we'll tell the story of how we've overcome!

We'll tell the story of Jesus and how he saved our Souls!

We'll tell the story of Calvary! How Jesus died and arose!

We'll tell lost men and women, "There is a place in the Son for you!"

Hanging on to Bad Things

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 28, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "But Saul and the people spared Agag, and the best of the sheep, and of the oxen, and of the fatlings, and the lambs, and all that was good, and would not utterly destroy them: but every thing that was vile and refuse, that they destroyed utterly." — 1 Samuel 15:9

Introduction

Have you ever held on to something that you should have discarded? Have you ever been bogged down in a crippling situation but were hesitant to make a move for the better? Have you ever worked hard to achieve a dream, goal or level of success only to find out that achieving your goal only brought you more problems? If so, then you know frustration and the difficulty of hanging on to bad things.

Consider two fortune hunters who had spent their lives searching for diamonds and gems. After many years, they learned of a secret treasure hidden away, thousands of years ago, in the mountains. They climbed the mountains, risking their very lives at every turn, until they reached the site. Once there they discovered more diamonds, rubies and sapphires than they had ever seen before. The two men and their staff packed all the jewels they could into huge trunks. Each of the men filled their back packs with jewels, which posed a tremendous burden. As they returned through the narrow ledges of the mountain side a ledge gave way and both men toppled over the side and dangled on the end of safety ropes attached to the waists of their guides. The guides could not pull them up because of the weight of the back packs. "Let go of the back packs" came a cry from above. Instantly the first man dropped his pack and watched the jewels roll down the mountain side as he was pulled to the top. As the second man thought about the value of his jewels he could not part with them although his rescuers continued to shout "Let go the pack!" He refused to let go and when he tried to pull himself up dropped back, pulling both himself and his rescuer to their deaths. Two men died that day, because one couldn't let go.

Today, there are many who simply can't let go. Although they are involved in circumstances and life styles that are draining the life from them, they can't let go. They seem hopelessly caught up in a network of temptations and relationships that threaten their destruction.

As Christians, we have learned that God is willing and able to give us a helping hand in life. To get his help however, we must be willing to discard our attachments to any weights or burdens that hold us down and let him take us by the hand. Free from the burdens of this world we can find peace, joy and security, in the loving arms of our Lord. Let us "let go" and let God have his way.

Exposition

This text focuses on God's instruction to Israel to rid itself of a evil presence and the King's response.

King Saul, the first king of Israel found himself engaged in a war with the Amalekites. Saul was given instruction, by way of the prophet Samuel, concerning the Amalekites. In verse three Saul is ordered to destroy the Amalekites and everything that they owned. He was ordered to destroy every man woman and child, all of their sheep and cattle and everything else they owned.

The Amalekites had made themselves enemies of Israel by being the first nation to attack them as they left 400 years of slavery in Egypt. Though Israel won the first battle with the Amalekites they continued to threaten them and attack them over the years. God was angry with the Amalekites for their attacks on his chosen people and in Exodus 17:14-16 he promised that they would be completely exterminated. There would be no peace between Israel and the Amalekites, from generation to generation, until they were completely destroyed. The Amalekites were persistent and continued to plague Israel on every turn. Numbers 14:39-45 gives an account how the Amalekites formed a coalition with the Canaanites and drove Israel back into the wilderness of Sinai. The conflict between the two nations continued by Ehud (Judges 3:13-15), Barak (Judges 5:14), and Gideon (Judges 6:3). In each of these encounters the Amalekites were defeated or held at bay as the guerrilla war between the two nations continued.

Historically this text occurs at a point when Israel was stronger than ever before. It no longer had separate independent tribes led by judges, but was headed by a king. There was a national army which had assembled enough force to completely rid the nation of Amalekites and their influence forever. Therefore God commands Saul to destroy them completely. Saul proceeded in battle against the Amalekites and their King who was called "Agag." He was victorious because God was with him.

Although God had commanded that Saul destroy everything and everyone in Israel, the soldiers complained that it was a waste. Listening to his men Saul ordered that only worthless items were to be destroyed. Everything that had little or no value was destroyed but the best was saved for themselves. For his refusal to destroy all, God became angry with Saul and rejected him. The people paid as well, for the warfare with the Amalekites continued throughout the remainder of Saul's reign and through the reign of King David. However, under King Hezekiah (1 Chronicles 4:43) that they were finally destroyed as God promised.

Today there is no archaeological evidence that the Amalekites ever lived on the face of the earth. There is not a building, pot or a scroll that survived. God promised that they were be removed from remembrance and exterminated and his promise was kept. As for Saul, he paid a dear price for trying to hang onto a bad thing.

Bad Things are burdens

There are many today who are carrying heavy burdens that are frustrating their lives, but they find it extremely difficult to let go. For some it is a crippling addiction to drugs or alcohol. For others it is a weakness for the fast life or illicit affairs that trouble them. Whatever the case, "bad things" are fatal flaws that work against even the strongest among us. Samson was a strong man but was burdened down by his insatiable taste for women, especially those outside his race. David was a man after God's own heart, but nearly every soul wrenching problem that plagued him had to do with another man's wife that he could not get out of his system. It was a bad thing and it had such a hold on him that he killed for it and lost the joy of his salvation. The rich young ruler had been a good man all of his life, but he had a love for his possessions that stopped him from gaining eternal life. It was a bad thing. Jesus pointed to many who put their trust in riches and finance and allowed their pursuit of money to destroy them. Paul talking to Timothy warned him of this bad thing saying "..the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." 1 Timothy 6:10

Beyond this, there are others that are carrying a plethora of bad feelings that are becoming burdens to them. Jealousy is a bad thing. It has destroyed marriages, relationships and friendships. Hatred is another bad thing that can destroy us. It causes us to act irrationally, respond recklessly and tints our personality with pessimism.

Hatred has caused wars, destroyed nations and killed millions. Hitler's hatred for the Jews resulted in millions of people being gassed to death and buried in open trenches. Nikita Kruschev's hatred of America caused him to slam his fish upon a table and say "we will bury you" escalating a cold war that would nearly bankrupt Russia and strain its economy to its limits. Hatred is a very bad things.

Those who are possessed by "bad things" find it difficult to let go. "Bad things" appeal to a craving, need or emptiness that cries out for fulfillment. Whether it is drugs or the company of a forbidden lover, each is difficult to let go because they appear to meet, at least temporarily, the need of the person that is hooked.

It is hard to let go of something, when you think you can't live without possessing it, achieving it, or answering its demands. Saul, in this text, discovered the consequences. Hanging on to a bad thing cost him his position, kingdom, and eventually his life. Not only that, it cost his entire family its future as well. Those possessed in a similar manner should expect the same results.

Burdens bring you down, but Jesus lifts you up!

Finally brothers and sisters, we must consider that while the burdens of "bad things" can bring us down, there is a man who can help us get rid of our burdens and lift us up!

While it is true that those who wrestle with bad things are satisfying insatiable needs, there is a man who can give us all of our needs and most of our wants!

The prodigal son was a good young man, who was troubled by a bad thing, he wanted to enjoy the fast life. After losing his fortune and slopping hogs for a living "he came to himself" and thought about his father's house.

Today there are many who are generally good, law abiding people who are troubled by bad things that are making their lives miserable. A bad thing can take your:

—Happiness and turn it into sadness; Peace and turn it into confusion —Success and turn it into a failure; friends and make them your enemies.

—Can take your love of life and turn it into a secret storm!

—Can tear your marriage to shreds and send you to the divorce courts.

But I heard a voice from heaven crying out "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy burdened and I will give you rest!"

No wonder the song writer declares "Jesus knows the pain you feel. He can save and he can heal, take your burden to the Lord and leave it there! If you trust and never doubt, he will surely bring you out, take your burden to the Lord and leave it there!"

If you can let go of your fear, there is a hand that will lift you up!

If you can let go of your anxiety and troubling spirits, there is a hand that will lift you up! It's the hand of Jesus!

If you let go of this world he'll give you a new song to sing. That's what the song writer had in mind when he said "You can have all of this world just give me Jesus!

Jesus! Our shelter in a time of storm!

Jesus! Our rock in a weary land!

Jesus! Who died out on Calvary, but rose early Sunday morning!

Jesus! Who is alive today cries out to a pilgrim on this life's journey let go of the world and take my hand and I'll lead you on!

A Present For Jesus

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 12, 1976

SCRIPTURE: "When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy. And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh." Matthew 2:9-11

Introduction

If it were your birthday, what kind of gift would you like? Some would prefer gifts of clothing or jewelry. Others would prefer snugly things while others might answer, "forget all that and just give me the money!" As the Christmas season continues and the world prepares to celebrate the birth of Christ, there are millions getting ready to buy gifts for children, father, mother, sister, brother, next door neighbor and even their puppy dog. In fact there will be gifts for everyone except the subject of the special occasion, Jesus.

What kind of gift could anyone possibly hope to give Jesus?

Consider two children who went to a department store with their grandfather at Christmas. Grandpa told the kids that since it was Christmas he wanted each of them to go through the store and find a gift that represented what Jesus meant to them and he would do the same. The first child wandered through many of the isles until he came upon a large globe. His face lit up and he ran to find his grandpa. The second child searched longer, but finally came upon a picture. Smiling, he dashed through the store looking for his grandpa. After a short while the two boys bumped into each other, but neither of them could find grandpa. After about a half an hour in the crowded store they found grandpa sitting in a chair by a counter at the rear of the store. The first boy said "Look grandpa, I found a globe, because Jesus has the whole world in his hands." The second boy said "Look grandpa, I found this picture of a lamb, because Jesus is the lamb of God." The two boys asked their grandpa what he had found. Smiling grandpa said "Did you boys have a hard time finding me?" The boys nodded their heads. "Were you glad when you found me?" They nodded their heads. "That's what I found for Jesus." He pointed his finger to a sign above his head that read "Lost and Found". Grandpa said "I was once lost but Jesus found me and I've been happy every since."

As Christians we are keenly aware of the importance of giving of our ourselves to Jesus everyday. We can never repay him for the love he has shown us through his incarnation, life, death and resurrection. Neither can we repay him for the benefits of his grace that we enjoy each day. However, we can give him the gift of our unwavering devotion every day. That would be the greatest gift of all.

Exposition

This text focuses on the search of the wise men from the East for the Christ child. Officially, the wise men are known as "Magi" or astrological wise men. They studied the stars and claimed to be experts in interpreting dreams and other magical arts. The wise men in this text saw the star in heaven that indicated the birth place of Christ. They chose to follow it although the journey would take them outside of their own land. Most theologians believe that the wise men in this text were from Babylon, Persia or the Arabian desert. They were not Jewish by religion or nationality. Popular folklore claims that there were three wise men, but the text does not cite a number. Many believe the number of three came as a result of the three gifts that the wise men brought to the Christ child. About 600 years after Christ, a document claiming to be the "Armenian Infancy Gospel" named the wise men "Melkon" which was later changed to Melchoir, Balthasar and Gaspar. However, these names or the fact that there were only three wise men are not supported in scripture.

The wise men brought the Christ child gifts of Gold, frankincense, and myrrh. Since these items were of immense value and were brought such a long way, they suggest the importance that the wise men placed upon the Christ child; who was even recognized by the great leaders of other lands as well. The fact that they came to see Jesus and that they brought him gifts as well, attests to the importance they placed on the deity of Christ. They gave the gifts and departed, asking nothing of him but returning filled with the joy of having seen the Lord for themselves.

The Gift of Gold

The first gift that the wise men gave to Jesus was the gift of Gold. Gold was valuable and used because of its rarity in biblical times. It was used in religious practices of both the Jews and pagans. It was generally a standard of finance and a symbol of physical prosperity.

Today there are many people who should consider the wisdom of giving to God from the stores of their resources. This season, many church members will spend large sums of money far beyond their regular resources to enjoy Christmas activities. Unfortunately, some will even reduce the amount they give to the church, to acquire the other extras that the season demands. The gift of gold is seen as something needed so they can better exchange gifts between each other, rather than something that should be given to support the work of Christ whose birthday is the reason for the season.

However, giving the best of our prosperity is not limited to our finances. It also includes giving him the best of our talents, and time, in addition to our financial resources.

No matter what we give God, it cannot match what he does for us daily. The song writer said it best when he said "You can't beat God giving, no matter how you try. The more you give the more he gives to you. Just keep on giving because its really true, you can't beat God giving, no matter how you try."

The Gift of Frankincense

The second gift that the wise men gave was the gift of Frankincense. Frankincense was an ingredient used in making perfume for the most holy place in the Tabernacle. It has always been associated with worship in the temples of Jews and the pagan alike.

Christians can give Christ the wonderful gift of worship, just as the wise men did. Praising God in the sanctuary. Singing his praises in songs and testifying to his greatness among the people are great ways to worship him. Unfortunately, there will be many, during this season, who will be too busy or too tired to worship Christ as they should. Many will miss church services as they prepare festive meals and celebrations. Some who normally attend Sunday School or bible studies will be absent because they are caught up in the festive atmosphere of the season.

We give God our devotion and show appreciation for his great works when we worship him and testify to his greatness. No wonder the song writer encourages us to "Go tell it on the mountain, over the hills and every where! Go tell it on the mountain, that Jesus Christ is born.!"

The Gift of Myrrh

The last gift that the wise men gave to Christ was the gift of myrrh. Myrrh was an aromatic resin that had many uses in ancient times. In some areas it was used as the main ingredient of anointing oil. In other areas, it was used as perfume and clothes freshener. Still other areas used its freshening qualities in preparation for embalming. Myrrh is associated with freshness, sweetness, even in moments of sadness.

The Christian can give to Christ, during the celebration of his birth, a freshness and newness of spirit that dwells in his heart each and every day. There should be no such thing as a sad Christian. Just as myrrh is used in funerals, even in the moments of death a Christ still brings to the sadness and melancholy of death a gentle, fresh and sweet spirit.

The sweetness of the Christian life which is found in Christ is probably what the song writer had in mind when he wrote: "There's a sweet, sweet, spirit in this place. ...it must be the spirit of the Lord."

We give God sweetness because he give us it to us daily. We sing about his sweetness in our songs and talk about it to our friends. "He's sweet I know! He's sweet I know! I've found a savior and he's sweet I know!"

Today brothers and sisters, people will give many things to each other but it would be great if we could give the Lord our love. It would be wonderful if we would give him our trust and devotion. He even asks us to bring him our burdens.

This Christmas the Lord would certainly be pleased if we gave the Lord a little more attention and a little less neglect.

It would be great if we gave the Lord a little more love and little less hate;

-A little more peace and little less confusion;

-A little more gratitude and little less ungratefulness;

-A little more prayer and little less lip service;

-A little more compassion and a little less heartlessness;

-A little more real Christian love and little less imitation;

-A little more "do as I do" and little less "do as I say"

-A little more "bended knee" and little less "crooked hearts"

I don't know about you but I decided a long time ago, to give the Lord the best I have. "Use me Lord, Use me in your service"

Wherever he wants me to go, here am I Lord!
Whatever he wants me to do, here am I Lord!
Go tell it on the mountain!
Tell everybody about Jesus! He's the lily of the valley!
Tell everybody about Jesus! He's the chief corner stone!
Jesus! The Stone carved without hands!
Jesus! My rock in weary land!
Tell them how he was born in manger and died on a cross!
Tell them how he arose on the third day!
Go tell it on the mountain ...Jesus Christ is born!

A Wheel In The Middle Of The Wheel

A sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 5, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "Now as I beheld the living creatures, behold one wheel upon the earth by the living creatures, with his four faces. The appearance of the wheels and their work was like unto the color of a beryl: and they four had one likeness: and their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel. When they went, they went upon their four sides: and they turned not when they went. As for their rings, they were so high that they were dreadful; and their rings were full of eyes round about them four. And when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them: and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up.Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither was their spirit to go; and the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels." Ezekiel 1:15-20

Introduction

Why do you do what you do? What makes you tick? Why are things the way they are? Just as each of us is driven by an inner force that moves us to take action, the events of the universe are also guided by unseen hands. Individually we are often driven by unseen forces that prompt us to act. Ambition pushed Howard Hughes to become a billionaire eccentric. Greed prompted Dickens' character "Scrooge" to squeeze every penny. Hatred moved Hitler to murder millions of Jews; and the love of a beautiful woman was the reason behind the Trojan wars. As we attempt to understand ourselves, our circumstance and how we relate to our God, perhaps it might benefit us to know that "Why we do what we do", is more important than "what we do itself". Sometimes when we know the "Why" the "What" is amplified and made clearer.

Consider a pilgrim who traveled through a desert and stumbled upon a spring of fresh flowing water. As he drank from the water he noticed that despite the heat that its waters were cold and sweet. He thought to himself "this is such a treasurer, I must bring some to the king!" He took out a leather pouch and caught up as much of the water as he could, intent upon sharing his find with the king. He traveled for days across the blazing sand. His lips were parched with thirst, but he would not touch the pouch of water. When he finally made it to the palace, he told the king of the wonderful spring that he found. He told of his sacrificial journey through heat and exhaustion, to bring the gift to the king. Excited, the king opened the pouch and began to drink but noticed that the water was stale, hot and bitter. The king smiled and praised his servant, who left fully rewarded. After he left the King's steward's asked: "Why did you reward him, this water is obviously stale, hot and bitter?" The king responded: "What he gave me turned out to be hot and stale, that I tasted with my tongue; but the reason why he gave it to me was still fresh and sweet; that I felt with my heart.! The water was bad but his motive was good."

As we survey the seemingly endless stream of problems and frustrations that face our community we must remember that "what" is happening to us is governed by a "why." At the center of every action there is a driving force; a motivating factor that prompts, urges, encourages and empowers. This driving force provides a narrow definition of "why" in such way that only discerning spirits can know.

As Christians we are always mindful of the importance of being guided by the Holy Spirit in all of our endeavors. We should never be discouraged about what is happening around us because we know in the midst of it all there is an unseen hand that still contols and guides us each and every day.

Exposition

This text considers the prophet Ezekiel as he prophesies about the movement of God's will in heaven and on earth. Ezekiel, was among the prophets of Israel's exile. They had been taken into captivity by the Babylonians and were distressed over their condition. Generally, their hope was strained, and they were devastated at what had happened to their nation. It was once great and powerful under David and Solomon and had begun subjugated under the Babylonians. It was once perceived as one of the greater nations of the world, so much so that the Queen of Sheba would travel thousands of miles to observe its splendor. This once powerful nation of God fearing people were reduced to defenseless wards of another sovereign who hung their harps on willow trees, unable to sing Zion's songs.

In their frustration God sent the prophet Ezekiel to offer them some explanation of their dilemma and some rays of hope. In various visions through Ezekiel, God told the people that their dilemma was not permanent.

The most memorable of Ezekiel's visions was that of the dry bones in the valley. It suggested that just as dry bones of the vision, which were scattered, dry and broken, could be reunited, they too could be reunited if they would hear the word of the Lord. For Israel, which was broken, and frustrated, Ezekiel's vision came as refreshing news from heaven.

This text focuses on Ezekiel as he first began to receive the visions from God. Though filled with symbolisms about creatures with wings of angels and the hands of men, wheels with rims filled with eyes and other startling depictions, Ezekiel's vision can better be understood if we note that in verses 1-14 he details how he received a vision from God and how he saw the movement of God's power and spirit in heaven, represented by four winged creatures (v5). The will and providence of God, was instituted in heaven as quick as a flash of lightning in heaven (v14). At verse 15 Ezekiel explains how he saw God's providence extending to the earth as well, because each of the creatures had a set of circular, gyroscopic wheels, that extended down to the earth. The huge wheels, stood one inside the other. One represented "What" was occurring in the affairs of Israel, and the inside ring represented "why" events occurred as they did.

As the creatures, representing the movement of God's will, moved from one place to another (v19) the wheels, representing an explanation of "what" and "why" were not far behind. Wherever God's will was instituted, the wheels were there, for the "spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels." (v21).

For Israel, this was important. It explained that the will of God is performed in heaven and is also carried out on earth. Through the symbols of the vision they also were reminded that whatever happens in the course of human events is prompted by a reason. Lying dormant in the "reason" is the solution and their hope for better days. In the remainder of his vision Ezekiel pointed to Israel's sin as the reason for their dilemma. Renewing their faith in God is projected as their hope for recovery.

We are often preoccupied with life's Whats

Today our community, like Israel of this text, is in a state of devastation. We are a subjugated people. We are free, but we are not free. In our exile from ourselves, some have become comfortable in Babylon. We think like Babylonians. We talk less about our own culture and state of affairs and adopt the concerns of Babylonians. Many of our better minds have been integrated into the corporate structure of Babylon so tightly that although they look like us, and talk like us we can hardly recognize them as our own.

On the individual level we have reduced ourselves to interpersonal relationships where we categorize each other. Some of us see ourselves as big wheels, those who move and shake and are major players. These see everyone else as little wheels, whose activities are meaningless unless they impact a big wheel that is on the roll. Between the big wheels and the little wheels of life there is a steady stream of paddle wheels, those who are barely etching out a living every day; pinwheels, those who are just whistling in the wind; steering wheels, those who are jumping up trying to become over night leaders and a whole plethora of people who are just spinning their wheels every day and getting no where.

These are the wheels that are turning in our community everyday. Crime is escalating among us at enormous rates. We are attacking each other, beating each other with sticks and clubs and are murdering each other. Our homes are falling apart. Our men are disappearing from the ranks of leadership our women are being left to fend for themselves as our men wind up in jail, put on dresses or wind up dead. Socially, we are in the same dilemma as Israel of Ezekiel's time.

We are so pre-occupied with the "what is happening to us" syndrome that many of us are overwhelmed. Some have lost their willingness to serve others; to roll up their sleeves and rebuild the decayed lives and reunite the jangling discords of our community. Like Israel, some have hung their harps on the willow trees. Instead of singing the songs of Zion, they are singing the blues.

A Wheel in the Middle of the Wheel

The whole point of Ezekiel's vision was to remind Israel that although the wheel of providence was at work in the events of their lives there, there is not just one wheel at work, there is a wheel in the middle of the wheel. Ezekiel's message to Israel was that it should not become pre-occupied with the "Whats" or their present dilemma. The solution was not in looking at the wheel and singing the blues, but it would come when they considered the wheel in the middle of the wheel; the reason why things were happening. Ezekiel generally characterized spiritual failure on the part of the people as the reason. He projected that when they returned to God, he would revive them.

Today, brothers and sisters I suggest to you that although the wheel of providence seems to be destroying the very fabric of our community, I've come to remind you that there's still a wheel in the middle of the wheel!

There may be metal detectors in our schools, drugs on our streets and prostitutes on every corner, but there is still a wheel in the middle of the wheel!

The wheel of misfortune may be rolling in your own life and hard times seem to follow you every where you, but there's still a wheel in the middle of the wheel!

The wheel of tragedy may be bringing pain and suffering into your life, but there's still a wheel in the middle of the wheel! The wheel of misunderstanding may be straining relations in your family and setting family members at odds with each other but there is still is a wheel, in the middle of the wheel!

The wheel of racism may be squashing your efforts to improve yourself in your professional life, but be of good cheer, there is a wheel, in the middle of the wheel!

Ezekiel this wheel is none other than the hand of the Lord!

While Ezekiel called him the Wheel in the middle of the wheel, others know him for different reasons:

—Abraham taught us not to worry, because he's ram in the bush!

—Samuel learned that he's a voice in the middle of the night!

—Solomon discovered that he's the lily of the valley and the bright and morning star!

—Daniel will testify that he's the handwriting on the wall!

But I heard Acts 4:12 declare "there is none other name under the heavens whereby we must be saved" except the name of Jesus! Jesus, the wheel in the middle of the wheel! Jesus, the Lamb of God Jesus, the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary, but arose early on Sunday morning!

I don't know which way the wheel of life will roll, but I know, there is a wheel in the middle of the wheel! I don't know what the future holds, but I know who holds the future and I know who holds my hand!

The Manger and the Cross

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 19, 1993

SCRIPTURE: "And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger." Luke 2:12; "And, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven." Colossians 1:20

Introduction

Do you ever feel insignificant? That's a time when you conclude that your contribution or worth is so small, when compared to others, that it is of little consequence. Sometimes those who work for large companies feel lost in the corporate maze, reduced to social security numbers and pay check stubs and void of identity or importance. Sometimes those who come from humble backgrounds feel awed by those who have been nurtured in affluence. Then there are times when we think no one cares whether we live or die, succeed or fail. That's when we start to know what it means to feel insignificant.

What do you do when you start feeling this way? Consider the eccentric woman who collected cans. Although she was obviously of middle class means, well educated and reserved the community thought it quite odd that ever so often she could be seen picking up cans in the neighborhood. Sometimes she would pick up entire sacks of cans and store them on her car port. Then one day she would take them and sell them, pocketing $15 or $20.00. Everyone thought she was a bit miserly, collecting cans to save money until one day a neighbor decided to ask her why she picked up cans. "Miss Mary" the neighbor began, "I notice that every so often you go up and down the street picking up cans, then we don't see you again. Like the time, right after your husband died, you picked up cans then we didn't' see you anymore." Miss Mary thought for a moment then said: "Those times you saw me picking up cans I was feeling pretty low. I felt unimportant, like those cans throw on the side of the road. Everybody walks by them and ignores them. When I pick up the cans I hold them in my hands, store them at my house and then take them to be recycled. When I'm feeling real low I just think about how Jesus walks through the world looking for people like me. I know if I just hold out he'll pick me up, hold me in his hands, take me to his house and give me a new start!" No matter how insignificant we might feel Jesus cares.

As Christians, we rejoice because the humble birth of Christ reminds us of a God who has come into the world looking for the lost, lonely, frustrated, troubled and burdened. Like those cans on the side of the street he will pick us up and give us a new start. At Christmas we see a manger and a cross, but what we really see is God stooping reconcile lost humanity unto himself by way of the manger and the cross!

Exposition

These texts focus on two inanimate biblical symbols that represent important truths about the Christian faith. The manger and the cross each carry important symbolic messages to Christians because they represent inspiring and encouraging principles about the nature of our faith.

The manger, standing alone is just an animal feeding trough. In biblical times mangers were often made of stone and were connected to the one room houses that had been constructed, usually as a lower tier. The family lived in the upper tier of the construction but the lower tier was reserved for the family's animals, usually on the back of the building. Some mangers were usually about 8 feet long and were made of stone. Some mangers were not connected to the homes at all but were actually in caves. In modern depictions of mangers there is usually a wooden manger, probably because in our time animal toughs were made of wood.

Standing alone, the manger has no significance. It is simply the place where the lowest of God's creation, the animals, go to feed. It is inanimate, cold and lifeless. What made the manger an important symbol for Christians is not the manger itself but "who was in it." The fact that the manger came to represent the coming of Christ into the world gave it a new meaning, because it represented the arrival of hope to the world. Moreover, because mangers were usually associated with the lowest of creation, God's son being born in a stable environment, lying in a manger, represented the depth of God's love for even the smallest of his creatures. The manger shows Christ, establishing from the offset, that he would be concerned about the poor, the maimed, the incarcerated and the disenfranchised. It is a clear picture of God stooping low to touch every facet of fallen humanity. When we see the manger it should say in no uncertain terms that no matter how poor we are, dejected we are, or loney we feel, God is with us too.

Likewise, the cross carries no meaning for Christians until we consider who was crucified on it and for what reason. In itself, the cross is just wood. It was originally a single stake placed in the ground, used by victorious armies to display the heads of conquered enemies. Later, as a method of crime control, slaves who were sentenced by Roman tribunals were bodily placed upon the stake, in open public, to both punish and humiliate them for their crimes. Roman citizens, were genearally spared execution on the stake. As improvements were made, a cross piece was made that was carried by the condemned to the place of crucifixion. His hands were nailed, at the wrist, to the cross piece and he was lifted to the top of the stake as it locked into place. The condemned usually died from blood loss or gangrene because normally soldiers would break their legs with a club to speed up death.

In itself the cross represents the worse. It was a symbol of shame and failure. However the cross takes on a new meaning to the Christian because of one man who died on it and why. Jesus's death on the cross was the second step in a triolgy that would eventually spell new life to the Christian. The first step was the manger, or the incarnation of God among men. The second step was the cross, the reconciling of fallen men unto God and the third step was the empty tomb which seal his victory over death and the grave. Paul, writing to the Collosians reminded them that the cross was in reality the embodiment of a loving God reconciling, or putting together in a perfect way, the strained relationship by he and mankind, prompted by sin. When a Christian sees the cross he should see a symbol of hope that, in Jesus, he can be restored into good favor with God.

Together, the manger and the cross team up to represent God stooping down to even the lowest with the aim of making things right between God and his creation.

No Matter How low, Jesus Cares

The great inspiring hope that the Chistmas season brings is that no matter what our estate, Jesus cares. Those who suffer from impact of darkness are reminded that Jesus cares. Those who are struggling from day to day to make ends meet are wrestling with the impact of darkness. Racial discrimination, police brutality, homelessness, and fears within us tend to keep us in the darkness.

The birth of Jesus, brought light into a world of darkness. The poor saw a reason for hope; that because of Jesus, poverty does not have to be a permanent condition, there is a way out. The imprisoned saw a reason for hope; that because of Jesus, past criminal mistakes can be forgiven and the future is unlimited.

There are others who are private low points at Christmas, their faces beam on the outside but their is a certain emptiness on the inside. Those who have lost loved ones, during this season experience a special lowness too. It is a certain loneliness prompted by memories of Christmases past that would make it a sad time, if it were not for Jesus. One song writer asked: "What do the lonely do at Christmas?" The answer for the Christians is "they praise God for the good times and go forward!"

At Christmas we should see God in his magnificence, stooping down and picking up crushed, broken lives that have been buried in self pity, bruised by deceit, and cast away by society. We should see him as bright light in the darkness of these times, telling even the lowest of his Creation that ..God cares!

No Matter how bad, Jesus forgives

If the manger showed God stooping down to reach fallen humanity, even the lowest; then the cross goes one step further because it shows God's willingness to forgive and reconcile the lost to himself by sacrificing his own son on Calvary. The cross is the epitome of God's saving grace and willingness to forget past discretions to bring the creation and the creator back together again.

The manger helps us see that God does stoop down and pick up a life, but the cross shows us what God does with it after he picks it up!

The cross shows us how God can take our:

—Worse and turn it into our best!

—Failures and turn them into successes!

—Low spirits and raise them up again!

—Broken hearts and make them happy again!

The cross is special to us, not because of who made it but because of who carried it!

The cross is special to us, not because it was used to crucify, but "who was crucified"

The cross is special to us, not because of what it was intended to be but because of what it turned out to be!

The cross is important because, on the cross he who was:

—Precious, died for those who were worthless

Lowly, died for the proud

—Loving, died for the hateful

—Holy, died for the defiled

No wonder the song writer declared: At the cross, at the cross, where I first saw the light and burdens of my heart rolled away, it was there by faith I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!

It began in a manger, but ended on an old rugged cross!

It began in Bethlehem, but ended up on Calvary!

It began in obscurity, but now the whole world knows the story!

I don't know about you, but I'm glad to tell the story about Jesus, the lamb of God,

Jesus, the prince of peace,

Jesus, Almighty God, Immanuel

Tell the story of how he was born in a manger but evening he died on an old rugged cross!

Tell the story how he arose after three days and nights!

Tell it everywhere you go..Jesus Christ is born!

The People Who Missed Christmas

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 26, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"He came unto his own and his own received him not." John 1:11

Introduction

There has been plenty of activity during the Christmas season, but did you know there are some people who missed Christmas? How can that be? Obviously Christmas has come and gone. It is just another memory, so how is it possible for there to be some people who missed Christmas? If they were alive, it would seem logical to suspect that they could not have missed Christmas! For a variety of reasons there are people who lived the experience of December 25th, but they missed what Christmas was all about.

Consider the little boy who wrote Santa Claus a letter on good faith that Santa and Santa alone could grant his wish. On Christmas morning he ran through the house and there were gifts everywhere. He had a bicycle, a game boy, super nintendo, a computer, several clothing outfits and gifts galore. As he opened his packages he could hear his mother and father yelling and arguing at each other again this Christmas as they had every Christmas he knew. His father drank heavily and his mother cried a lot and it made her sad. As the little boy opened his presents he sat down in a chair and began to cry. His father saw him crying and became disturbed. "You mean we bought you all this stuff and you still aren't happy?" his father asked, shouting to the top of his voice. The little boy began to cry "He didn't come, he didn't come, Santa didn't come."

Puzzled his parents tried to find out what was on the boy's mind. Just about that time grandma walked into the room and listened as he explained. "I wrote Santa and asked him to take away daddy's whiskey and bottle. I asked him to stop mommy from crying all the time. All these things are nice but they are not what I asked for!" The boy dropped his head and sobbed "he missed us this year, he missed us!" The father and mother looked at each other, with guilty spirits. Grandma hugged the little boy and wiped the tears from his eyes. "Son, you asked for the right thing but you asked the wrong person." Next time, tell Jesus, he'll never pass you by. Stricken by the sadness they caused their son, the parents worked out their problem. The next year the little boy only received one gift, which he opened after his family prayed and gave thanks to God. When the boy saw the happiness in his parents he slipped off into a empty room and looked up into the air and said "Thanks Jesus, grandma said, you wouldn't let me down!"

As Christians we are grateful that we never miss Christmas! The only real way to miss out on Christmas is to lose our faith and trust in God. If we keep trusting in him not only will Christmas be a great day, but the day after, and all others will be sweeter than the day before!

Exposition

This text focuses on John as he describes the reason for Christ's coming into the world and the reception he received among men.

In just 14 verses, John reaches back to the beginning of time and spans the whole experience of creation as he explains the reason why Jesus was born in the world. Jesus is first described as "The Word," an integral part of the trinity. As the "Word" he always existed and will continue to exist. However, because of the sinfulness of mankind the "Word" decided to become flesh. Contrary to popular opinion, God did not have a son in the beginning. In the beginning there was only The Father, The Word, and the Holy Spirit, each being an equal component of the God head. God had a son when Jesus took on the mortality of mankind and was born of Mary.

John noted that although Jesus had created the world, once he came into his own creation, it received him not. For varied reasons they either rejected him, or missed the truth about his being altogether. He came as a light in a world of darkness, but many who were all around him remained in darkness because they missed the light.

Some Were Too Busy

The Innkeeper is the first type of person that missed Christmas. The time when Jesus came to Bethlehem was an extremely busy time for anyone that operated an Inn. The decree had been given that all of the Roman Empire would be taxed. Each family was ordered to return to its city of origin to enroll for taxation. There were, no doubt, thousands of people in Bethlehem on the night Mary and Joseph arrived. Innkeepers were busy. The few rooms that were available were obviously going at premium prices as the affluent staged bidding wars to acquire a decent place to live.

Among the hundreds of people that probably came to his Inn looking for shelter was one obscure couple from a small city of an even smaller reputation, called Nazareth. They were obviously not able to pay a large amount and neither did their station or position command any special attention. The Innkeeper brushed them aside, told them he was full and pointed them to his stable out back. As the Christ child was born, the Innkeeper missed it, because he was preoccupied.

Today there are many who missed Christmas because they were like the Innkeeper. No, they were not attending a motel or a hotel, but they were preoccupied with their own activities. There were many so busy shopping and cooking and visiting, that they missed the reason for the season. Many children awoke on Christmas morning and rushed to their Christmas trees tearing paper from presents, tossing boxes here and there, and never stopped for a moment to consider the Christ Child. There were others who missed Christmas because their holiday schedules were filled with entertainment drinking and partying. They missed Christmas because they were too tired or still hung over from Christmas eve to even think about Christmas. Like the Innkeeper they had no room for Christ and they missed Christmas.

Some Were Afraid Of Christmas

The Innkeeper missed Christmas because he was too busy to take note, but there was another who knew Christmas was coming but was afraid.

King Herod knew Christmas was coming. Wise men came to him from the East seeking directions to Bethlehem. He learned that there was a child to be born that would one day become king. That thought made him afraid. Herold, who was not a Jew himself, had been placed in his position by the Roman government. As their puppet leader he assumed the title “king of the Jews.” When he heard there was one that would be born that would be the real “king of the Jews” he was afraid. His entire life was one that was filled with paranoia. He was so afraid that someone would dethrone him that he ordered his two oldest sons to be slain, just five days before he himself died. When the wise men told him that a king would be born, Herod sent out word that all of the boys under two years old would be slaughtered. Not only did he miss Christmas, he tried to top it from happening altogether.

Today there are many people who are similar to Herod in their fear of Christmas. Like Herod, they are afraid of anything, anyone or any faith that will dethrone them and take over their lives. They were afraid of anything that might interrupt their career, their position, their power or their ambition. They missed Christmas each year, because Jesus has never been an integral part of their lives from the start. They know about him. They join others in observing the holiday festivities. They may even call on him in times of trouble. They may even join a church and sing about him in the choir or otherwise acknowledge along with others. However, they are afraid to let him be the "king" of their lives. They are afraid of changing their lifestyle, and what it might cost them, if he truly becomes king. They are just as afraid as Herod, so, like Herold, they fake a love for Christmas but miss it every year.

The Whole City Missed Christmas

Not only did the Innkeeper and Herold miss Christmas, the entire town of Bethlehem and the city of Jerusalem missed Christmas. The shepherds, who were watching their flock by night, were the only citizens of area who observed Christmas. Wise men followed a star for thousands of miles, yet in the place where Jesus was actually born no one commemorated his birth except a handful of shepherds and some strangers from another land. All of the people in Bethlehem and Jerusalem, which was only a few miles away, missed Christmas! They were occupied with worship at the temple and their religious affairs. They were so occupied with the ritual that they could not look above their heads and see the sign of the star in the air. Today there are many who missed Christmas because they simply could not look around them and see the signs of the times. These are difficult times in which we live. These are times when bible prophecies are being fulfilled before our eyes. Yet with all of the signs we have around us, there are many who still miss Christmas every year. They continue their lives as usual, unmoved by the times.

What Did They Miss?

Those who missed Christmas missed a great opportunity. The Innkeeper missed the joy of knowing that the Lord of the Universe and come within his walls. Herod missed a chance to know King of Kings and the people missed a chance to rejoice at the coming of the savior.

Even worse than missing Christmas, is missing a chance to know Christ for yourself!

If you don't know the Lord, not only do you miss Christmas, but you miss something every day!

If you don't know the Lord, you'll hear the music, but you'll miss the meaning of every song you sing!

If you don't know the Lord, you'll hear the words, but you'll miss the message if every sermon you hear!

If you don't know the Lord, you'll read the bible but miss the truths that are hidden in its pages!

--You'll pray a many prayer, but miss the chance to get a single one through

--You'll have a like of associates, but miss the chance to have a real friend!

Zacchaeus heard that Jesus was coming to town and decided 'I'm not going to miss Jesus!" even if it means climbing in a sycamore tree.

A woman with an issue of blood heard that Jesus was coming to town and decided "I'm not going to miss Jesus" even if all I can do is just touch the hem of his garment!

I don't know about you, but I've decided not to muss a single day with Jesus! Everyday with Jesus is sweeter than the day before!

Jesus, the Rose of Sharon!

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, was born in Bethlehem, died on Calvary and arose on the third day!

One of these day he's coming back again..I don't want to miss a single Christmas day and I sure don't want to miss out when he comes back and gets his own!

I won't miss when he says: Servant! Servant! Well done!"

A Pastor's Evaluation

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 28, 1993

SCRIPTURE:"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." — 2 Timothy 4:7-8

Introduction

How do you evaluate a pastor? The answer to that question depends largely on whose conducting the evaluation. There is one standard by which man judges a pastor but there is yet another that the eternal father uses. Man's evaluation will, at best, be superficial, because he can only judge what he sees. God, who can see the heart, will evaluate that which cannot be seen by the eye.

If pastors were evaluated by the members of their congregations to determine their heavenly reward, there would sheer confusion because the definition of a "good" pastor changes, depending on who is asked. A recent survey asked church members to write one phrase to describe what they considered to be the attributes of a good pastor. The results were that a good pastor must have: The strength of an ox, the stubbornness of a bulldog; the daring of a lion, the wisdom of an owl, the harmlessness of a dove, the industry of a beaver, the gentleness of a sheep, the versatility of a chameleon, the vision of an eagle, the hide of a rhinoceros, the perspective of a giraffe, the endurance of a camel, the bounce of a kangaroo, the stomach of a horse, the disposition of an angel, and enough sense to know that he can not please everybody!"

Whenever men evaluate a pastor there is always a conflict between the ideal and the real; between what we want and what we will settle for. If man were to evaluate the pastor he would always come up short because:

If the pastor is young, he lacks experience; If his hair is gray, he's too old for the young people.

If he has five of six children, he has too many; If he has none, he's setting a bad example.

If he preaches from notes, he has canned sermons and is dry;

If his messages are extemporaneous, he isn't deep enough.

If he uses too many illustrations, he's neglecting the Bible; If he doesn't include stories, he isn't clear.

If he preaches the truth, he's too offensive; If he doesn't preach the truth then he's a hypocrite.

If he fails make everybody happy, he's hurting the church

If he does make them all happy, he has no convictions.

If he drives an old car, he shames his congregation;If he buys a new one, he's stealing the church's money

If he receives a large salary, he's in it for the money!

If he gets a small one — It's because he can't preach anyway and that's all he's worth!

If man evaluates the pastor, it will no doubt be by man's standards! As Christians we should be glad that we will not be judged by the standards of men, but by the standards of God. Every Christian should rejoice in knowing that our heavenly father will evaluate our service in this life, and when it is ended will give heavenly rewards to those who are faithful until death.

Exposition

This text focuses on the Apostle Paul as he gives advice to young Timothy on the expectations of the ministry. It also focuses on his evaluation of his own ministry. Writing from a Roman jail cell as he awaited his execution Paul calmly reflected on his life and gave himself a self an evaluation. We have the privilege of observing as this grand old man of the faith evaluates his own life's work. Since his conclusions were written under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, we get a clue as to how God will evaluate any Saint's work at the close of his life.

Paul measured himself by answering three questions: Did you fight a good fight? Did you finish your course? and Did you keep the faith? His answer to all three was "Yes" and he concluded that there was a crown waiting for him in glory and for all others who could truthfully answer "yes" to all three questions.

The Good Fight

The first measure that Paul gave was that the Christian should engage himself in fighting the "good" fight! What does Paul mean by injecting the adjective "good" to describe his life long fight? Why not describe his quest as a valiant or courageous fight? Why not an exhausting or a demanding fight? Why would he say he had fought a "good" fight. In Greek the word translated "good" is Kalos which means "beautiful or virtuous". Thus Paul said I have fought a beautiful and morally pure battle for that which was right.

Unique to his style, Paul always referred to the battle for the moral high grand as the "good fight." In 1 Timothy 6:12 he called upon young Timothy to "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life..." In Ephesians 6:12 he describes this quest as a battle between good and evil. He said "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." When Paul spoke of a good fight he was not just talking about "a" fight but a "good" fight, where that which is right is forced to challenge that which is wrong.

Today, more than ever, the people of God need pastors who are willing to fight a "good fight" against corruption, racism, poverty, homelessness, violence and crime. We need to lead the people of God to speak out against and take action to improve the degenerating social conditions that are corrupting our communities. We need to join the growing crescendo of voices that cry out for pastors who are not afraid to stand for that which is right and fight a good fight.

Finish My Course

The second measure of Christian service is his commitment to the course. Paul said "I have finished my course." By emphasizing "My" course, Paul made it clear that each person has to run his course, complete his task in life.

Paul completed his course, before he ran out of time. His mission was to establish the church in the Gentile world. In thee missionary journeys, with ill health plaguing him, and funds lacking he traveled around the known world setting churches in the homes of believers wherever he went. He accomplished his mission with months to spare and thus had time to write to young Timothy.

Every pastor that God places in a congregation is given a mission, or a course to run. Some are just relay runners, expected to carry a congregation to a certain point as another receives the baton. Others are marathon pastors, given large assignments, and thus a long and challenging course with little to run with but faith and hope. There are many who run out of time before they complete their assigned course. Note that Paul emphasizes "my" course. He completed his assignment, without being envious of others who were given more glamorous assignments, such as the great Apollos who always seemed to draw praises for his work, while Paul often landed in jail or was stoned. Paul finished his course, before he ran out of time. If we run out of time it is not because God has miscalculated, but its because we have misused our time meandering from place to place trying to run a course other than "my course."

When a pastor is evaluated the question will be asked? Did he finish his course? Those who can answer "yes", will certainly be rewarded!

Kept The Faith

The final measure of the pastor will be whether or not he kept the faith. For Paul that was not a tongue and cheek phrase, used loosely. Keeping the faith meant perserverance. It meant keeping his eye on the prize even when others could not see it. It meant keeping the vision in sight and pursing it without losing hope.

Today there are thousands of pastors who have lost faith in their mission. Frustrated by stubborn congregations and bureaucratic deacons and trustees that sometimes sound more like politicians and lawyers than assistants to the man of God, many pastors have thrown in the towel and have given up. Some began their ministries with fresh idealism, confident that they could do anything, but along the way lost that faith. Now they say to themselves "I can't do anything." The lost the faith. However, Paul said, "I have kept the faith." Keeping the faith is what is rewarded. Staying close to God is the ultimate end.

There will not be a reward for starting out with faith, but to those who keep the faith. Pastors must realize that its not until the last:

—Battle has been fought; Tear has been shed

—Enemy has been conquered; Fear has been faced —Hill has been climbed; and the last cross has been carried ..that we can claim the victory. The race is not given to swift or to the strong but unto those that endure to the end.

I'm reminded of the metropolitan church that was looking for a pastor. It had list of applicants with impressive resumes. However, among the applicants was an elderly country preacher who came to stand before the pulpit committee. "What are your qualifications? Where is your resume'" the preacher was asked. He then opened a large paste board box and said "this is my resume" He pulled out a "rub board", a pair of knee pads, and a compass with stone glued to its backside. When asked to explain the country preacher, with fire and eloquence said "This rub board is the first page of my resume' it tells you who I am. It says that I'm a child of God, washed in the blood of the lamb." Holding up the knee pads he said "These knee pads suggest to you that I know and believe in the power of prayer, for prayer changes things. This compass says when things get dark and we can't see a way, that I know how to follow the direction of his word and find the rock that is higher than I. Brothers and sisters I know how to find Jesus!" When he finished an old member of the committee stood and said "One of our applicants is from Harvard, another is from Yale, but this man knows how to find Jesus, and that's enough"

Oh brothers and sisters the world wants to know about Jesus! Every pastor will be asked did you fight the good fight? Did finish your course? Did you keep the faith? But he'll also be asked "did you tell the story!"

Tell them about Jesus! Who died out on Calvary!

Jesus! Who arose from the dead!

Tell them that he's coming back again to claim his own!

I don't know about you, but I want to hear him say "Servant, Servant ..Well done!

On Wednesday December 22, 1993 Pastor E. L. McClanahan went home to glory. He fought a good fight, finished his course, and kept the faith.

What God Leaves Behind

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 30, 1993

Scripture: "The LORD gave, and the LORD hath taken away; blessed be the name of the LORD." Job 1:21

Introduction

Why does God take a loved one? That's a question that has plagued mortal man for generations as he has struggle to the find the meaning of life and an explanation for death. Why does God take that which is precious to us and claim it for his own? Why would God take our loved one and leave us with an empty abyss in our hearts that appears unfathomable? In answer to the question "Why someone precious to us?" God answers in Psalm 116:15 "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his sights." They are precious to him as well. There are beautiful flowers in the garden of life, all of which belongs to God. Occasionally he decided to pluck a few precious ones and keep the in a special place.

Consider the man who was once rich but by a stroke of fate ended up homeless on the street. He often carried around his neck a solid gold medallion for good luck, but it didn't seem to work. As hunger and cold came upon him he went from place to place to try to find food and shelter, but was unsuccessful. He tried to cash in his coin but small shops either believed it stolen or worthless. After weeks of hunger and exposure to the elements the man went into a grocery store and assembled several grocery items including bread, milk and some packaged meat. Looking to see that he was not being watched he put the food under his coat and slipped out of the door. Sitting in an alley way he began to eat a meal at last. However, before he could finish his meal police cars surrounded the alley and the store owner pointed him out as the thief. He was caught in the act. His entire theft was captured on video tape. In court the man refused to say anything, though he faced certain imprisonment. The judge reviewed the video tape, but he noticed something peculiar. After the man put the bread, meat and milk under his coat, he went into his pocket and hid something under the next loaf of bread. The judge recessed the court and ordered marshals to search the shelf. When court resumed they brought him a solid gold coin, valued at hundreds of dollars. The judge looked at the poor man and said "Case dismissed. This man is not a thief, he left behind, much more than he took."

As Christians, our focus in the season of death, perhaps, should not be on what God has taken, but it should be on what he leaves behind. A full inventory would reveal that he always leaves much more than he takes.

Exposition

This text focuses on Job as he struggles to analyze the circumstances surrounding his sudden rise and fall. Satan, traveled throughout the land looking for mortals that could be tested. When he came upon Job, Satan was given the opportunity to test the faith of this God fearing man,who was described as perfect.

Satan believed that the only reason Job was a righteous man was because he had great possessions. He summized that it was not difficult to be pious, religious or holy, as long as one possessed all of the creature comforts of the world. He challenged God to take away his possessions and Job's position would be different. God gave Satan permission to afflict Job's body and to create havoc in his life. All of the great things God gave him, including his large family, cattle, immense wealth and health, were taken away from him. In a moment, they were all gone as carrier after carrier ran to Job to report that his children had been killed and his cattle had been stolen by enemies. Then Job himself, broke out in sores and was in constant pain.

Looking at his circumstance, Job came to one conclusion. That it was God that gave him the pleasures that he enjoyed and God allowed them to be taken away, for some reason he did not understand. He still blessed the name of God anyway.

In the aftermath of his trial, Job received greater blessings than he lost. He had a larger, happier family. He regained his wealth and health. His life was richer and fuller because of his experience.

Through it all he learned that God had surely taken something from him when he took family members that were close to him and possessions that were dear to him. However, he learned that God really left him more than he took. Job arose from his crises with a renewed faith, and an invigorated hope that helped him stand even taller in the eyesight of God. Because of his experience he was now able to stand any test, and weather any storm, even more confident that God would provide.

When it was all over Job discovered a great truth, previously hidden to him, that God leaves more than he takes. That which he leaves has an even greater significance, because of the experience.

Immediately following the death of a loved one there is a solemn review of those things which are left behind. An empty bed turned back; flowers immaculately kept; folded towels, dresses and glasses, everything it its place. These are things left behind that can be seen with the eye. Each brings back a memory. Each is an important source of reflection and releases a flood of mixed emotions that we carry with us daily.
We know what God has taken from us but what has he left behind?
Job was left with a reassurance that God is still in control. Abraham was certainly discouraged at the thought that God was taking from him a precious son. But high on the mountain Abraham found that God had a ram in the bush. He left that mountain top experience with much more than he ascended. He had the knowledge that God would never take more than he will left behind. Noah was plucked from a sinful world that was an abomination to God. His home was uprooted and that which he knew was completely destroyed under water. He arose from the circumstance confident that God had not wronged him or deserted him. He left the ark and started a new and better world with what God left behind. Lot saw his possessions and his wife destroyed in the blazing fire from the cities of the plains. Yet with what God left behind he started a new a better life that was greater than the one before. Moses was one of the great leaders of the Hebrew people. Yet at the age of 120 God took him. He left behind Joshua and a renewed destination. Elijah stepped on a fiery chariot and was swept away into the heavens. But God left behind young Elisha, who caught Elijah's mantel and gained a double portion of his strength. Certainly God left more than he took.
When we consider our loss on this occasion, we must survey what has been left behind. Beyond the possessions and creature comforts which are left behind, what are the greater truths that we inherit?
The spirit of independence, that desire to do for oneself without dependence on others, has it been left behind. Seize upon it and take it to heart! The spirit of volunteerism, that inner desire to give of oneself to help others, without pay, above and beyond the call of duty, has it been left behind? Seize upon it and take it to heart! The eye for beauty and order, the unwillingness to see a dying flower or fading bloom and the endless search to cultivate beauty; has it been left behind? Seize upon it and see the world with an eye for beauty and order! The spirit of worship and devotion, that's the part of us that believes in God and cries out to be in his service! Has it be left behind? Seize upon it and take it to heart.

There is so much that God leaves behind that it often overwhelms us. If we seize upon each opportunity, God can help us to use that which has been left behind to improve our own lives.

That's why Job did not concentrate on what God had taken away, he simply concluded "Blessed be the name of the Lord." Today, we should not worry so much about what has been taken away from us, but we should consider what we will do with the intangibles that God has left behind and how we will use them to improve our own relationship with him. Is there a way that we can take what has been left behind and get closer to God? Is there a way we can build on that which is left behind and become spiritually stronger. Is there a way we can collect all of these leavings and apply them to our lives in a productive way. If there is, then do it! Seize the moment and act upon it.

He never takes what he can't give

While it is true that God always leaves more than he takes, there is an even greater truth: "God never takes more than he can give."

Job learned an invaluable lesson from his experience. Anything we need, God has it. Anything God takes, he can give it again.

Today that truth remains. Anything we need, God's got it!

If we are lost God gives direction; if we are confused God gives peace!

If we are lonely God gives comfort; if we are burdened, God gives a lighter load.

Whatever we need God can give it!

If life has taken from us anything that is precious, we should remember that God never takes what he can't give.

Martha was angry with Jesus at the death of Lazarus. She complained that if had been present that his life would not have been lost. She forgot that Jesus was there when his father said "Let us make man" and when Lazarus rose from his grave she remembered that God never takes more than he can give.

When the daughter of Darius rose from her bed as one that had been asleep, the world saw another example of how God never takes more than he can give life.

Jesus can give life because he gave his own life that we might have a chance to life eternal. His words ring out with clear resonance even to this day “I am the resurrection and the life!”
“He that believeth on me shall never die!”
When our loved one is taken from us, yes, look at what is left behind, but look at what he keeps giving us every day!
God gives love to those who are hated!
God gives assurance to those who doubting
God gives inspiration to those who are frustrated
God gives salvation to those who are lost!
And when the weight of death drops our heads in despair as we count our losses, God lifts our spirit by reminding us that he leaves more than he takes..
..and he never takes more than he can give!

No. 483-New Year

Which Way Is Up?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 2, 1994

SCRIPTURE: Whereupon the king took counsel, and made two calves of gold, and said unto them, It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem: behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." -1 Kings 12:28 "And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem; and Jesus went before them: and they were amazed; and as they followed, they were afraid. And he took again the twelve, and began to tell them what things should happen unto him,"— Mark 10:32

Introduction

What are your plans for the new year? Have you made some serious decisions about the direction of your life in the coming months? Millions of people make resolutions annually, as they resolve to take new directions in the coming year. Nearly every resolution verbalizes an inner desire to climb higher, achieve more, and expand our horizons further than we did in the last year. We want do go up. Up town! Up state! Up Country! As we make our resolutions to move "up" in 1994, let us make sure we know exactly where the road to "up" will take us before we start our journey. Before we go another day in this new year, maybe we should stop and ask ourselves "Which Way Is Up?"

Consider the country boy who became fed up with backwoods life. In all his life, he'd been no further than the country store and he decided that it was time for him to move up. He packed his suitcase and bid his parents farewell. Before leaving his mother, aware that he'd never been anywhere before, advised him to "keep your eye on the Silver Eagle, #402 it passes here every day going straight to Chicago." The boy kept his mother's advice in mind. He never took his eye off the Silver Eagle. Even in the huge depot with scores of other Silver Eagles, he kept watching train number 402. He boarded the train and laid down in the sleeping car and fell fast asleep. When he awoke the next morning he expected to be near Chicago. However, instead of Chicago he learned that the train was pulling into New Orleans. Upset he ran to the conductor and said "I kept my eye on the train just like mama said, #402.

What I am doing here in New Orleans?" The conductor answered. In the mornings the 402 is South Bound on Track 2, in the evenings its Southbound on Track 1. I'm sorrow to tell you young fellow, but it looks like you're on the right train, but you're on the wrong track!"

As Christians when we consider the direction we are going to take for the new year, we need to make sure we don't get our priorities confused and miss the mark. If we stay close to God in the year to come, we will be on the right train and on the right track in 1994.

Exposition

This text focuses on an ambitious young king who want desperately to move up in the world, but took the wrong road.

Jeroboam I was a man of great talent an ambition he desired. We rose to prominence as the chief formal of Solomon's laborers as they worked to build the temple. He did such a great job that he was quickly promoted. He desired however, to go even higher. He capitalized on the complaints and grumblings of the people and tried to organized them to revolt against the king but was discovered. He ran away to Egypt until after the death of Solomon. When 10 of the 12 tribes revolted against the rule of Solomon's son Rehoboam, they remembered Jeroboam and made him king.

Jeroboam had moved up fast. He had position, power and money but to maintain his position he went to serious extremes. First, he was aware of the loyalty that the people attached to worship at the Temple in Jerusalem. The people loved to worship God so much that they walked for days and weeks just to sit within his presence at the temple. Even though most traveled down from the Northern Kingdom to worship at Jerusalem, they always referred to their journey as going "up" to Jerusalem. In nearly every scriptural passage in the bible that refers to journeying to Jerusalem, the journey is referred to as going "up." They referred to Jerusalem as "up" for two reasons.

First, because the city sat on squarely on two mountains, Mt. Moriah and Mt. Zion. Any person coming to Jerusalem would have to climb up. Secondly, the designation of "up" to Jerusalem indicates the high esteem that the people placed on the city as the place where they worshiped God.

This posed a problem for Jeroboam. If the people of the North held a spiritual tie to his rival in the South eventually, he felt, they would once again become a part of the Southern kingdom. His solution was to change the direction of 'up." He erected two golden calves for the people to worship. He placed one at Dan in the North and the other at Bethel in the South.

These were to be the shrines of public worship for the people. Theologians differ as to whether he intended to introduce idol worship or to give his people a visible shrine before which to worship. No one doubts however, that he intended to dissuade Israel from going "up" to Jerusalem.

In his zeal to move up and stay up, Jeroboam led the people to idolatry. It was purely a political decision void of any consideration of the will of God. Following his lead, many of the people, with good intentions, were led astray. They wanted to worship God but they did so before idols. They were on the right train, but on the wrong track.

Which Way is Up?

Today there are many people who are similar to Jeroboam in that they are ambitious and desire to move up. The desire to move up was not Jeroboam's problem. There is no scriptural ban on prosperity, ambition and success. His problem was that he was willing to do just about anything to move up and then once up, would compromise himself to stay up. In that respect there are many today who are just like Jeroboam who concluded that the ends justify the means.

There should be no confusion on our part as to "which way is up." Every Christian should know exactly where he or she is going in life. That implies that we should also know where we are NOT going as well. In our quest to move up we should be careful to avoid undertakings that might help us to move up but put us on the wrong track.

Career opportunities often place many young adults in awkward positions. Many take on great responsibilities to advance their careers, usually at the expense of their family life. If we move up on the job and make more money but lose our family, which way is up? Sometimes our careers seriously disrupt our religious life. Families accustomed to worship, working in the church, bible study and other activities are placed in the cumbersome position of choosing between their careers and their religious life. If we move up on the job but lose our relationship to God, which way is up? Sometimes our careers force us to make moral decisions that affect our advancement. The accountant that doctors the books as a favor to the boss; the press agent that lies to cover mistakes of the company; or the politician that makes a politically expedient move that is morally questionable, are all examples of people who must answer the question: "Which way is up?"

While we have a long list of resolutions each year with respect to things that we are going to do. There should also be another list, which sets the limits on things we will not do, if they will get us off track.

"Up" Is Where God is!

Jeroboam's problem was complicated because the people saw Jerusalem as the place where they found God. Although he built statues and gave royal decrees he found that he could not successfully change the direction of "up" because going "up to Jerusalem" represented going to be with God.

In today's perplexing times many are really confused and do not know which way to go. They are asking themselves the question: "What shall I do? Which road should I take?" In essence they are asking the question "Which Way is up? In answer to that question the answer comes: "Up is where God is?" If God is not in it, it's not up. If we make millions, but God is not in it, it's not up, it's down. If we build a great house but God is not in it, its down. If we get a new car, but God is not in it, it's a lemon. If we get married without the godly values of truth, honesty and love, then God's not in it, it'll fall apart. If we graduate from school this year but God moves out of the picture, it will be a worthless effort. If we succeed this year, but God is not in the success, then it's a failure. "Up is where God is!" If we move up without God then we are on our way down! No wonder the song writer declares: "Without God, I could do nothing. Without him, I'd surely fail. Without God I would be drifting, like a ship without a sail."

Joshua, if asked the question "Which Way is Up?" might have answered, up is family devotion to God. "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Job, you are suffering a long period of difficulty, which way is up? I can hear Job answer, "up" is waiting on God, "All the days of my appointed time, I wait until my change comes."

David declared "I will lift up my eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord, which made the heaven and earth."

Ruth, which way is up? "Up" is following God for "Your people shall be my people, your God shall be my God."

Isaiah, which way is up? Up is rising to answer the call of service "If the Lord needs somebody, here am I, send me."

To Joshua "up" was a stronger family devotion; For David "Up" was a higher place of refuge; For Ruth, Up was a commitment to follow; for Isaiah, Up was an answer to service...but there is one other we must consider ..what about Jesus?

Jesus, which way is up? It's the road to salvation for Acts 4:12 say

“Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.”

Jesus, which way is up? “Up” Is the road to answered prayer for John 14:14 says “If you ask anything in my name, I will do it.”

Which way is up? Up is self denial Matthew 16:24 “If any man would come after me let him take up his cross and follow me.”

If you take up your cross, I will lift you up. For one of these days I’ll be lifted up, but don’t worry about for “I, if I, be lifted up from the earth, will draw all me unto me.”

Which way is up? It’s up Mt. Calvary!

Which way is up? Rising on Sunday morning!

I don’t know about you, but I’ve decided that I’m on my way!

I’m Going through!

I’m Going through!

I’m going where Jesus is!

Glowing In The Dark

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 9, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." — John 8:12;"We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts:" 2 Peter 1:19

Introduction

Have you ever walked in the dark? How did you feel? If you were unfamiliar with the path, you probably felt uneasy, a little frightened and tense. It's a scary feeling to be alone in the dark on an unknown path. That's probably how some people feel as they begin new ventures, start new years and walk unknown paths in life. They feel like they are walking along a dark path and are frightened by the prospects of so much darkness. A new year brings a certain uneasiness and feelings of uncertainty. It lingers like a dark cloud and hides the path to success.

What do we do when faced with the prospect of the unknown? Consider the city boy who spent some time in the country learning fascinating new things about nature. One day he ventured into a pasture catching beautiful butterflies and bugs. As he caught them he placed the butterflies in one jar and his bugs in another. He became captivated by the bugs and butterflies and did not notice how fast the time had passed. Soon nightfall was upon him and he could not find his way back home. The pasture seemed an endless maze in the pitch darkness of night. Afraid, he curled up in a ball and went to sleep. His father, worried about him, searched through out the woods and meadows. The boy could not be found. Then as the father was just about to give up his search and return home he saw a flashing light from the pasture and proceeded to follow it. Shortly after, he found the little boy balled up in a knot asleep on the ground. The little boy was glad to be found but wondered how his father was able to find him in pasture in the darkness of the night. His father said, well it looks like you caught butterflies all day and put them in this jar. But in your other jar you stored lightning bugs, and instead of going to sleep in the night, they glow in the dark. I just followed the glow until I found you.

In life it is possible to get lost along the way, but there is certainly quality about the saved saint that should make him sleep easily at night, that is the truth that when the things get their darkest, he is able to glow in the dark.

As Christians, we should thank God for giving us Jesus, who is our light in the darkness. When faced with the darkness of difficulty or indecision we can be assured that regardless of blackness of the midnight, that we can glow in the dark!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus and Peter as they explain to the believer the nature and source of their power to shine in the darkness.

In John, Jesus used one of several comparisons that he often gave to illustrate to believers how he related to them. Here he is seen as the light of the world. By precept and example and saving grace, Jesus said "I am the light of the world." Those who follow him will not walk in darkness but will have the "light of life." The promise to believers here is often mistaken. Some believe that if they follow Jesus there will never be a dark day. However, Jesus notes that those who follow him will have periods of darkness but because they have followed him they will have their paths brightened by the "light of life." So, Jesus does not promise endless sunny day experiences, where everything is fine, but he does project that when darkness comes that those who follow him will be able to see their way because of an eternal light within them that will help them to see the path that leads out of darkness and adversity.

When Jesus spoke he was in the early stages of his three year ministry on earth. It might have been understandable to those who heard him how following him could lighten their path, because they could see him. However, once he died, rose and ascended to heaven, where was the light going to come from? How could any individual expect to receive light for the dark journey after Jesus had physically left this earth? The answer comes when we remember that Jesus said he would not leave the world comfortless, that he would send a comforter, the Holy Spirit, to be a guiding presence in the life of every believer. The presence of the Holy Spirit in the life of a believer provides a charge or power source to energize a believer to "glow" in times of darkness.

Explaining further, Peter noted that the prophecies of the past and the truths contained in the word of God should be stored in our hearts. The word of God possesses eternal truths that are valuable to every believer, like lights in the dark, for those times when trouble is imminent. Peter uses a word in his explanation that is the key to understanding what Jesus meant when he promised us that if we follow him we would be guided by the eternal light. In his explanation, Peter said the word of God that is believed, acted upon and hidden in our heart will be the "day star" that will rise in our hearts in times of darkness. What is this "day star?" It is an English translation of the Greek word Phosphorus. Phosphorus or Day Star is often used to refer to stars, especially the morning star that shines at the peak of darkness, just before the rising of the sun. But deeper inspection brings out another important truth because "phosphorus" also means "any substance that has the capacity to give off light after being exposed to a power source."

Combined, the truth of these two texts tell us that those who follow Jesus will be given a power source, the Holy Spirit, which when combined with an active faith and belief in the Word of God will become a "phosphorus" substance that will cause us to light up or "glow" even in moments of darkness. Jesus told us that if we follow him we will have an eternal light for dark paths, and Peter told us how our Lord will fix it for us to "glow in the dark."

How To Glow In the Dark

Today every Christian should be excited about the prospect of being able to spiritually glow in the dark! But how does it work?

In school many of us learned about the nature of light. Our primary light source is the sun. We have some artificial light sources, made man, that help us to see in the dark. We have a whole category lights called incadesence. These are the kinds of lights represented by light bulbs. A piece of metal inside an empty glass that is energized by electric current that gives off light and heat." As long as there is an active current flowing through a light bulb it will give out light. Thomas Edison's first light bulb burned for 40 years before it went out. Today there are light bulbs that can burn for 1000 hours before they give out. Light bulbs are great until the burn out or until the power is turned off then we are left in the dark! No matter how powerful the bulb, when the power is off, we are in the dark.

When Jesus walked the earth he was light giant spirit light bulb. As long as people followed him there was light. Jesus constantly warned them that now you have heat and light because you see me, but in John 14:18 he said "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you." By giving each believer the presence of the Holy Spirit in his life, each was given a power source that would help them in times of darkness. How?

Because Incandescence is not the only way to create light. There is also luminescent light. Luminous light is light that comes from materials made of phosphorus. Phosphorus material, once exposed to light is energized and continues to glow even when the light source has been disconnected. We know how they work. We have seen key chains that glow in the dark. Some telephone dials glow in the dark. The numbers on watches glow in the dark.

Many of these are not battery or electric operated but are made with phosphorus materials that cause them to glow in the dark.

A Christian, who has received the power of the Holy Ghost, combined with his faith and bible study, becomes spiritually phosphorus, or able to shine in blackest of midnight, because the power of our Lord causes him or her to "glow in the dark." Things that glow in the dark cannot shine on their own, but shine only because of constant exposure to light.We glow when its dark, only to the length and degree that we have allowed ourselves to be exposed to the Light of God's love. Therefore we make every attempt to walk in the light that comes from Jesus the light of the world.

There will be darkness, but

We have found that despite our best efforts there are times when we find ourselves in the dark. The causes of our darkness may vary but the effect is the same: darkness. Economic hard times is a dark period that puts us in such serious financial straits. When bills mount up, commitments become due and our resources are short, it gets dark. Failure is a dark time that causes many to give up hope and throw in the towel as they accept defeat. Frustration is a dark time that seems like an endless irritation making life difficult. Sickness is an extremely dark time that challenges the faith of even the strongest amongst us.

There is no doubt that there will be darkness, but we should be encouraged to know that if we continue to walk in the light of our Lord, we can glow in the dark.

When we are able to glow in the dark, we are not intimidated by our circumstances but resolve to walk on by faith, confident that the Lord will make a way.

Paul and Silas were in the darkness of a jail cell, but at midnight, as they began to sing and pray they found out they could glow in the dark!

A widow with a cruse of oil and a cup of meal, faced the darkness of hunger and despair, but as she stepped out on her faith in God, she found that she could glow in the dark!

Job faced economic loss and physical sickness and went through the darkest nights. However he too discovered that he could glow in the dark, for I hear him declare, "yea though he slay me, yet will I serve him!"

Brothers and sisters we should be reminded that "weeping endures but a night, but joy comes in the morning!"

When we glow in the dark our:

—Darkness turns into light; and our Burdens turn to blessings

—Sorrows turn to joy; and our Misery turns to glory

—Desperation turns into hope; and our defeat turns into victory!

—Pain turns in to comfort; and our sadness turns into gladness!

Who is this light?

It isn't Isaiah, he prophesied about the light!

It isn't John, he came to bear witness to the light!

This light is Jesus, the son of God!

I heard a song writer declare: Jesus is the light of the world. He's light out of darkness, the brightest way out!

I don't know about you, but Jesus gave me a light and I'm gonna let it shine!

This little light of mine I'm going to let it shine!

Let it shine!

Let it shine!

If Dreams Die...

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 16, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"Come now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit, and we will say, some evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams." Genesis 37:20

Introduction

Have you ever dreamed a dream and then forgot it? Did it trouble you that you could not remember it. In it is a troublesome and frustrating feeling to forget a dream. If that is a frightening thought, consider what it must be like not to dream at all. It's not an instance where dreams are forgotten, but have been lost or abandoned altogether that impacts us most. Dreams forgotten can be revived. Dreams lost or abandoned are gone forever.

Consider the man who was once a fancy dresser and known in the social circles of the city, but had become the town bum. After many years of watching him wallow in his failures, someone finally asked him what happened to him. He answered by saying "it began when I attended the funeral of my dream." Puzzled his friend asked the meaning of his statement. The man said "Since I was a boy, I had a crush on Mary Lou. In the first grade, I pulled her hair. In the sixth grade we held hands. In Jr. High School we held hands. In high school we dated and shared the senior prom. In college, we promised to share the future together. Then it happened." The friend asked him to go on. "I went off to work and when I came back, a friend of mine met me at the train station and said I should rush to the church. When I got there I heard Mary Lou say 'I do' to another man. It was supposed to be a wedding but it was the funeral of my dream. That's why I'm here today." The knot Mary Lou tied marked the day his dream died.

What happens to us if our dreams die? Langston Hughes wrote that we should "hold on to our dreams, for if dreams die, Life is like a broken winged bird that cannot fly." He later asked, in an a classic poem, the timeless question: "What happens to a dream deferred, does it dry up like a raisin in the sun, or does it fester like a sore and run..or does it explode?" Dreams are the substance of the being of every man and woman. They are the motivating force within us that inspire to act. Without a dream, we are like a broken winged bird. We have a crippled existence that goes no where and simply limps along until it dies. If our dreams die, that which motivates us dies as well.

As Christians we cling to the hope given to us by Jesus Christ. We dream of a better life, peace, joy and happiness. We dream of a land where everyone respects the fatherhood of God and the kindred nature of all humanity. Thanks to Christ that dream will never die, but soars daily in our souls as we eagerly await his return!

Exposition

This text focuses on the boy Joseph as he became the victim of the futile efforts of his brothers to kill his dream. Joseph, a favorite son of his father Jacob was the object of scorn among his brothers both because of his favored treatment and because of his dreams. Joseph constantly dreamed a series of dreams that portrayed himself as a superior and his family members as subordinates. In one instance (v7) he saw his family binding sheaves in the field, but Joseph's sheave stood up straight while those of other family members bowed before him. In another instance he envisioned the Sun and the Moon and eleven stars bowing before him. (v9). His dream angered his brothers and disturbed his father. His brothers were so disturbed that they decided at one point to kill him, to stop the endless litany of dreams that depicted Joseph's rise and their subjection. Joseph was eventually thrown into a pit and left for dead. One of his brothers came back and sold him to traveling merchants who sold him into service in Egypt. He was imprisoned but was later released and given a high station in the kingdom. Years later as the entire land suffered from a famine and his brothers came to buy food. He stood in royal garments as a ruler of Egypt and they bowed before him, fulfilling the dream. He forgave them, enriched them and protected for the remainder of their days. His was a dream that refused to die.

If Dreams die..

Dr. Martin Luther King is often remembered for his historic speech entitled "I have a dream." In it, he embodied the hopes and aspirations of an entire people. He promoted the idea of a nation where race and color would be recognized for their uniqueness but would not be discriminating factors.

It was a dream of peace and brotherhood for everyone. It was also a dream that America would recognize and live up to the true meaning of its creed that "all men are created equal and are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights, among the these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

In that respect Dr. King's dream should become personal, because that dream, if it ever dies, would suggest that a time would come when our rights would be curbed, our lives and liberty would cut short and happiness would be an unachievable goal. Therefore it is good to keep that dream alive. If America ever loses sight of that ideal we will plunge ourselves into an existence that will be crippling. We will become a broken winged bird that cannot fly.

It is important to have a dream. It marks a goal or an aspiration that we have set for ourselves. A man without a dream lives aimlessly from day to day. A woman without a dream loses a sense of direction.

A teen-aged boy who has no dream will carry a gun to school. Why? Somewhere long before he stepped foot on that campus he lost hope that he would ever become a businessman or a professional. Somewhere, way back he saw himself, tagged and placed on a track in life that suggested that he would not succeed. He lived in poverty and was constantly told he was a failure. His dream died. Once his dream died he became a broken winged bird that could not fly. He has resolved that he cannot achieve or excel and is doomed to failure and is not intimidated by thoughts of police, violence or death. He died the day his dream died.

It is similar in other instances. The man who sells crack, the woman who prostitutes or teenagers that birth children before they are old enough to sign a legal document for themselves, often do so, because somewhere along the way, they watched their dreams die.

Much of the violence, crime and drugs that we witness in our community today are the results of a generation of people who have lost their personal dreams. Very little matters after that point, they just survive from day to day, like a broken winged bird that cannot fly.

Our quest as Christians should be to help people revive their personal dreams. Our quest should be to help lift them form their desperation to their aspiration, from lowest point to their highest potential through showing them the potential and power they possess as children of God.

When dreams die, joy turns into sadness; success turns into failure; peace turns into confusion, sweetness turns into bitterness and love turns hatred.

We must use every ounce of our being to keep hope alive, for once we lose our dream, we become a broken winged bird that cannot fly.

When Dreams Live

Despite his hardships and difficulties, Joseph excelled because he was propelled by a powerful dream. In the darkness of the pit he continued with hope because of the power of his dream.

Though he was falsely accused and ostracized because of his refusal to betray his moral standards, he never lost hope because of the power of his dream.

Though confined to a jail cell he clung to the pictures evoked in his dream and rose above his circumstance.

Joseph rose because his dream refused to die!

It's a good thing to have a dream that refuses to die.

Abraham had a dream of the land of promise, though he wandered for many years in strange lands, his dream refused to die!

Moses had a dream of freedom and sovereignty for Israel, though he never made it to the promised land himself, his dream refused to die!

Martin Luther King had a dream of equality and brotherhood, though he was slain by an assassin's bullet, the dream refused to die.

But even greater than Abraham, Moses and Martin Luther King, there is Jesus, who went beyond merely having a dream, Jesus IS the dream. He is the dream that refuses to die!

Jesus is our dream of moving out of our:

—Hunger and acquiring a satisfied soul!

—Darkness and walking into the marvelous light

—Sinking sand experience and standing on the Solid Rock!

—Spiritual Slavery to complete spiritual freedom!

—Defeat into glory of victory!

—Despair to unspeakable joy!

He is our dream of moving from "Soon I will be done with the troubles of the world to 'I'm so glad that trouble don't last always!"

He is the dream that refused to die!

He was rejected by the people in his own home town, but the dream refused to die!

He was persecuted by the scribes and pharisees, but the dream refused to die!

They whipped him mercilessly all night long and tried him in hostile courts, but the dream refused to die!

They hung him on a cross, stretched out between two thieves, but the dream refused to die.

Though buried in a borrowed tomb and guarded by soldiers the dream refused to die, for Early Sunday morning the Vision of Bethlehem, and the nightmare of Calvary became the resurrected dream of the world!

Because he lives, I can see tomorrow!

Because he lives, I can face whatever this world brings with a renew hope!

Life is worth the living ...

Because he lives!

Looking for A Hero

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 22, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"I will make the godly of the land my heroes and invite them to my home. Only those who are truly good shall be my servants." Psalms 101:6;"Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Hebrews 12:2

Introduction

Do you have a hero? Most young people have a hero, someone that they admire and desire to emulate. The pictures of our heroes decorate our walls as we identify with them in our homes. Whether its a basketball or football star, entertainer, actor or some other person, most of us have a person or persons that we identify with as a model by which to pattern ourselves as we tailor our own lives. Today's youth are no exception.

What does it take to be considered a hero? Fame? Wealth? Popularity? Consider the school girl who came home from school one day crying because of a bad grade she made on an assignment from school. As she tried to explain her dilemma to her parents the tears began to flow like a river. The teacher had given them an assignment to look through magazines and books and to write a report about three people who were their favorite heroes. The little girl had looked in many magazines and found pictures of many great people who were super stars. Mariah Carey, Janet Jackson were both great singers. Debbie Thomas was a famous ice skater and there were many great women of history too. However, when she sat down to write her report she remembered the teacher's topic which was to write about her FAVORITE heroes. The little girl looked up with tears in her eyes and begged her mother not to be angry because she made an "F" for not following instructions. She said "Mother this is what I wrote. I have three favorite heroes they are: My mother because she always does everything she can to provide for me; my grandma because no matter what I do, she never stops loving me; and Jesus because no matter what, he will never let me down." The little girl looked and said "I'm sorry mama, but I had to tell the truth." The mother hugged her tightly with pride and whispered in her ear. “Baby, there is a hero inside of all of us. Stick with Lord and he will help her to rise higher than the sky..you are mama’s little hero.”

As Christians, we know that while their are heroes all around us, the best example that we have is that of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior. He is our hero because he helps each us realize the fullness of our dreams. If you are looking for a hero, we suggest that you don’t look for one on television or in a sports arena, try Jesus, he’ll never let you down.

Exposition

This text focuses on King David as he sets the standard for his new tenure of office as king of Israel. David, recognized as a man after God’s own heart, used this short Psalm to raise high the standard of associations and emulations that he had set for himself. He pledged to God that he would surround himself with people of virtue and to strive for excellence. In verse two he promises God good behavior. In verses 3-5 he pledges to avoid bad associations that will cause him to develop a perverse or “forward” heart. In verse six he pledges to make the godly or faithful of the land his heroes and gives his pledge to invite them into his house. David chose to emulate the good qualities of godly people and make them his heroes. By saying he would invite the godly and the faithful into his home as his heroes, David set the standard for selecting a hero, be sure he or she knows the Lord.

In Hebrews Jesus Christ is presented as the author and finisher of our faith. He is raised up as example of bravery, unselfishness and love. He willingness to die on Calvary to save his friends is the chief characteristic that make him the hero of all heroes. Not simply that he died, for many heroes died for their beliefs, but that he arose, and is coming back again.

Youth seek a hero

What is a hero? Generally, a hero is any person that is admired for their achievement and is considered a model of outstanding qualities. Our heroes often reflect our personal hopes and aspirations. The poor man is attracted to the man who overcomes the odds and rises out of poverty to become a success. Minorities are attracted to other minorities that succeed despite racial barriers that block their way. Women, the handicapped and even senior citizens have heroes as they are attracted to people who represent their best efforts to achieve despite adversity. We are attracted to them because they trigger a feeling of hope in us that inspires us to strive harder until we too achieve our goals in life.

Each generation has its heroes. For some, Mary McCleod Bethume, Joe Louis, Mahalia Jackson, Jackie Robinson, Nat King Cole and Willie Mays were heroes. Others saw James Brown, Wilma Rudolph, Aretha Franklin, Roy Wilkins, and Martin Luther King as their heroes. The names vary, but every generation has its heroes.

This generation is also looking for a hero. The pictures of teen heroes usually plaster the walls of youth as they read, watch and cling to every public and private action of the people they admire.

Christian teens are encouraged to remember that anyone selected as a hero is still a human being, and as such comes with flaws and short comings. We must emulate the good in each person, but we should discard the bad. As the lives of the great are studied we should learn from their mistakes, not repeat them. Our heroes rose to success in spite of their flaws, not because they did not have any or because they did not matter.

Secondly, teens should remember that there is a hero inside of each person, waiting to be released! Each person has within them the capacity to achieve greatness, it is just waiting tapped. There is a great leader, teacher, doctor, advisor, parent, or preacher inside of every person, like tiny seeds, just waiting for an opportunity to grow and blossom.

The hero in you can be released if three variables are present: Will Power, training, and opportunity. Will power is your own desire to succeed in life. Not simply to get by but to really be among the best. Once you have a made up mind one third of the hero in you is released. No matter how much will you have, you must be trained. The rigid discipline of study and practice makes the difference between those who succeed and those who failure. Those who want to succeed but are unwilling to study or practice will be doomed to live their lives as dreamers and "could have beens." Will power and preparation are no good without opportunity. You can't create opportunity, that comes from God, but you must seize it when it comes or it will pass you by, unfortunately it rarely comes twice.

The Christian youth's faith in God is the key resource to release the hero inside. Prayer is the key to the kingdom, but faith unlocks the door. If you are looking for hero, you have to look no further than your own mirror, for every day God is getting you ready for a mighty work that even you won't understand!

Jesus Is Our Hero

There are countless heroes among us whose exploits and deeds are worthy of emulation, but there are none that can even hold a candle to the greatest hero of them all.

Our final word to you today is this: "If you are looking for a hero, try Jesus!"

George Patten, Dwight Eisenhower and Colin Powell, were great military generals with many victories to their credit, but none were better generals than Jesus! Gideon testifies that with only a handful of soldiers he defeated thousands when he followed God's direction. Jesus, commander of angelic legions, will fight with us in battle! Because Jesus is our hero, we can proudly sing "I am on the battlefield for my Lord, and I promised him that I, would serve him till I die, I'm on the battlefield for my Lord!"

Michael Jordan can float through the air and save the game at the last moment, but Acts 1:11 testifies that when his ministry on earth was over that Jesus declared that it is "air time" and put one foot on a cloud and ascended into heaven. The angels declared "ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing into the heavens, this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Luther Vandross, Criss Cross, and Boyz in the Hood are heroes because of the way they sing, but Jesus is our hero because of the way he makes us sing. When Jesus comes into our lives, he gives us a new walk to walk, a new talk to talk, and a new song to sing! The song writer declares "I sing because I'm happy! I sing because I'm free, for his eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me."

Evander Holyfield, George Foreman and Muhammad Ali are heroes because they have punching power, but Jesus is our hero because he's got all power in his hands.

Power to take our sorrows and turn them into joys!

Power to take our burdens and turn them into blessings!

Power to take our minuses and turn them into pluses

Power to take our cants and turn them into cans!

Jesus is our hero because, in times of trouble you can call on him and he will answer!

Jesus is our hero because, in moments of weakness he is our strength!

Jesus is our hero because, whenever we need him he's always there!

Jesus is our hero because when we were sinking in the sea of sin he lifted us and saved our souls!

Jesus, the lily of the valley!

Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Jesus, the fairest of ten thousand!

..is the greatest hero of them all because, he loved me enough to die for me. No greater love than a man have than this, that a man would lay down his life for his friend.

He's our hero because one evening, almost 2000 years ago, he picked up an old rugged cross and championed our cause!

He's our hero because despite being nailed to the cross and being buried in the grave, that early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

Who Is My Sister?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 5, 1994

Scripture:"For whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, and my sister, and mother." Mark 3:35

Introduction

Who is your sister? Is she simply the one who happened to share the proximity of birth or is there more? Some would answer that sisters are those whose shared experience goes beyond the superficial incident of birth and reaches deep into the heart and soul of our being. To have or be a sister is to share and exchange and feel the heart throb of another deep within ones soul.

We don't always appreciate sisters early in life. Sometimes we think they are an irritation. Consider the two sisters who, as little girls were always at odds. It seemed that one always used the others items. The brush would never be replaced just right. Clothes would be borrowed without permission. And it appeared that one was always in the other's living space.

The little girls screamed at each other a lot and seemed to stay angry although they really loved each other. Once in a Sunday School class one of the girls was asked to tell which of the ten commandments related to their parents and she responded "honor thy father and thy mother." Asked to tell which of the commandments she thought related to her sister and the little girl who had just finished another fresh screaming session with her sister before she came to church, fumed "thou shall not kill.!" As the years went by and the two girls grew into women, they shared each others joys and sorrows, triumphs and defeats. They were so close that the little spats they had as children seemed so small and insignificant.

The two of them sat on a swing one day reflecting on their childhood. "You know my Sunday School teacher asked me to describe a bible verse that described my feeling for you. I told her that it was "thou shall not kill." If I had to answer that same question today it would be "no greater love than this, that a man would lay down his life for a friend." Sisters ..when we are young it's hard to live with them. When we are older, its hard to live without them!

The experience of sisterhood is unique. It is a blessing from God that reflects a bond of love, sharing and caring that goes beyond mere biology. It is a caressing of souls that have, by mutual experiences, become one.

As Christians, we thank God for brothers and sisters that have shared the fortunes of fate and divine appointment with us. We enjoy the blessings of today and always look forward to the time when we shall one final experience of sisterhood, eternity with our Lord!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he answers the question "Who is my mother, my brother or my sister?" The question was posed on the occasion that Mary, Jesus' brothers and a least one sister came to a place where he was teaching and wanted to see him.

A message was sent into the meeting room and given to him. It indicated that his mother, brothers and at least one sister, were waiting for him outside. Jesus used the occasion to teach a lesson to his followers about the nature of brotherhood, sisterhood, and parenthood. In his familiar way, he answered a question with a question.

The obvious answer to many that heard Christ was simply that a sister or brother, is simply a person that shares an incident of physical birth. A mother is one who gives birth to a child! Sisters and brothers are those who shared that same experience. Jesus went far beyond that. It was the obvious, but it was also superficial.

He understood the nature of natural sisters and brothers for he had several. We know Jesus had four brothers and at least two sisters because that fact is recorded in scripture. "Is not this the carpenter's son? Is not his mother called Mary? And his brethren James, Joses, Simon and Judas? And his sisters, are they not all with us..." Matthew 13:55-56. Obviously he understood the nature of natural family relations.

His answer had nothing to do with natural ties. In fact, his answer ignored natural ties altogether. He wanted them to see a greater truth so he expanded upon a known concept with an unknown response. When Jesus explained his definition of brother and sister, he connected it to another binding factor: "shared experience."

Those who share the common desire to obey God and do his will, develop a spiritual bond and become sisters and brothers. Those who work together to achieve the common goal of realizing the will of God become sisters and brothers.

The idea of "shared experience" rather than simply incidence of birth as a definition for brotherhood, sisterhood and parenthood, made it plain that persons who were not your biological kindred could very well share a spiritual bond because of shared experiences.

Those who share the experience of Christ and his love, easily refer to themselves as brothers and sisters in Christ. It is that "shared experience" that makes those who profess Christ brothers and sisters, despite not shared the same biological history.

Who is my mother? My sister? My brother? Anyone who does the will of God!

How to show yourself a Sister

Today there are many siblings who have the same family origins, but are not sisters and brothers in the real sense. How can one show herself to be a sister? It's not by pointing to a position on the family tree or by drawing connections to family history, we show sisterhood by "sharing the experiences" of our sisters.

A true sister shares joys and happiness. The great moments of success and achievement are shared together by sisters. As one sister basks in the spotlight and climbs high, there is, in the crowd of well wishers, a sister who is just as happy at the moment. Mary traveled to be with Elizabeth during her pregnancy and the child she carried leaped in her womb. The two women shared the happiness of the moment and talked, laughed and enjoyed the excitements together. Those who would show themselves true sisters should not neglect the importance of sharing the important experiences of another sister, it builds strength and unity and feelings that go beyond just the mere title of "sister."

A true sister also shares pain and hurt. It is easy to share the great moments in life because they are followed by laughs and smiles. It is more difficult to share the painful moments. The true sister is one who is willing to share those lonely moments when failure, disgrace, or loss is most imminent. When sickness comes true sisters cannot be satisfied to allow one they call sister to share it alone. Even if there is nothing they can do but just be there to share their pain, a true sister, must share that experience too. So often, we find ourselves surrounded by many who are willing to share our great moments, but few who will sit with us and stand by us in our pain and hurt. That's when a sister is needed most. When Lazarus died, Mary and Martha were hurting. They shared the experience of death together. They cried on each other's shoulder. They both went to Jesus at the same time and shared their grief with him. The two sisters, as they mourned together heard Jesus remind them "I am the resurrection!" He promised both sisters that their family would be together again. Hence, they shared the hope of family renewal together!

A true sister shares joys and success, as well as pain, failure and hurt. It is this shared experience that makes them sisters in more ways than things simply biological, because each experience makes them sisters of the soul!

Sisterhood goes beyond family

Sometimes sisterhood goes beyond family and extends to others who also share our experiences. The bonds extend to any relationship where there are those who share a mutual experience.

Sorors who share experiences become sisters. The word "Soror" is a Latin word which means "sister." Those who claim such sisterhood pledge themselves to share the experiences together as they live by codes that illicit the respect of others. Some cling together as they strive to achieve the "nine virtues of Sigma" which are: Compassion, courtesy, dedication, fellowship, fidelity, honesty, justice, purity and temperance. In their experience they become more than mere names on a roll, but they evolve into a relationship that makes them a "soror" ..a sister!

Church members who share the experience of doing the will of God are sisters and brothers as well! This is the bond that Paul referred to when in Romans 16:1 when he referred to Phoebe as "our sister." What made Phoebe a sister wasn't that she was biologically related to Paul. What made her a sister was that she was a "servant of the church." She shared in the work of spreading, fostering and promoting the kingdom of God. She shared in the experience of worship, evangelism, and standing up for our Lord. She earned the designation of "sister!"

Friends, I hasten to point out to you, that there is nothing like being a sister that knows the Lord!

A sister who knows the Lord is stronger than one who does not!

A sister who knows the Lord, knows that whatever discouragements life brings, God is still on the throne.

A sister who knows the Lord can sing with cheer "be not dismayed what ere' betide, God will take care of you!"

Such a sister can stand firm in the midst of dark times because she knows that "weeping endures for a night, but joy comes in the morning!"

A sister who knows the Lord, can brave difficulties because she knows, "The Lord will make a way somehow!"

A sister who knows the Lord can stand in the face of death and declare "Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me"

A sister who knows the Lord, looks up with eternal hope because she knows "one glad morning when this life is over I'll fly away!"

..If you get there before I do..

Tell my sister...

Tell my Sister..

I'm coming there too!

———

On January 29, 1994 Hazel Marbles Dumouil went home to her reward. She was a friend, a soror..a sister in the faith!

Now and Then

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 6, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known." 1 Cor. 13:12

Introduction

Suppose you knew then what you know now, would you do things differently? If you could turn back the hands of time and go back and relive some of the events of your history, but carry with you the knowledge and experience that you have today, would you do it the same way or differently? Knowing what we know now, there are some things from our past we would work to insure that they are preserved. There are other things we would reject. As we reflect upon the models of life that make up our historic past, it is advantageous to compare what we have now with what we had, but we should not stop there, we should also compare what we have now to what we desire in the future. A close look at both "now" and "then" will help gain a clear focus on who we are, where we've been and where we are going.

Consider the case of Heloise the Hen. She was a beautiful young hen that moved around the barnyard daily. Even as a young chick she resented all the lectures the mother hens gave to the young chicks about barnyard life and often found her own way. One day she saw the cow eating hay and she started eating hay, much to the amusement of the others. Next she saw the pig eating slop and she started pecking in the slop trough. One day she passed by the window of the farmer's house and heard him say to his wife, "my dear we must have more of that soup that you made the other day, it was delicious." Heloise went among the other chickens and announced that she was fed up with hay and slop and scratching for worms, she wanted to eat the same soup that the farmer eats. It became obvious that Heloise knew virtually nothing about life in the barnyard. One of the mother hens pulled her to the side and said "I know you don't like hearing us cackle all the time but I think you should know that you are talking dangerous talk that could be your own ruin." Heloise felt the old biddies didn't know how to enjoy barnyard life "I want soup, just like the farmer!" she declared. Finally the mother hen said, girl be careful. The other day the farmer said "I want soup, and your friend Gertrude disappeared. A few days later, he wanted soup again and Caldonia disappeared. The farmer's favorite soup is chicken noodle." Heloise was ashamed at her ignorance. The old hen had one last word "You walk around eating hay like a cow, pecking slop like a hog and even dreaming about chicken soup. If you are going to survive you better learn who you are, where you are, and where you are going..otherwise you won't be eating soup, you'll be chicken soup!"

As Christians, we often don't understand all that goes on around us. It is dark and difficult to unravel. However, we know that if we keep the faith, our Lord will reveal the truth to us that will us to see life and our future clearly. Now we see life darkly and fumble around, but then we shall know the truth and the truth shall make us free!

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains the nature of the Christian historical experience.

This passage is generally remembered for its emphasis on the importance of love in all we do.

The Corinthians like other Christians were moving from their Old Testament experience to their new covenant life in Christ. They had been accustomed to gauging every act by the standards of the law. Paul, however, suggests that charity rather than the law should be the guide.

Charity, which means love, is the guiding principle now, the law was the guiding principle then. Then, one's only responsibility was to speak in a tongue, give to the poor and obey the strict letter of the law. Now, the criterion has changed, we must love.

Paul concluded from his comparison that then he was a child, he thought like a child and spake as a child, but when he grew up in the faith, he put away childish things.

The principles that guide the here are now may appear dark and unclear, as if we were looking through a foggy mirror, but when we see Jesus, face to face, then we will understand it all.

Who Am I?

As a people we should always know the answer to three questions, in the context of then and now: Who am I? Where Am I? and Where Am I Going?

Who are we? We are Americans of African descent. In the context of "then," we originated from the continent of Africa, where most of our people were muslims and worshipped Allah among hundreds of other religions before we saw the light. We are the Black hands that carved stone for the pyramids and the Black minds that designed them. We are the Egypt and Ethiopia of the bible. We are the Canaanites, Eunuch's driving chariots, and the Queens of Sheba. We are the strong arms of Simon of Cyrene as he carried the cross for Jesus. We are nation of slaves who survived two centuries of bondage by our sheer will and the power of God.

We are the people that have been called "Niggers, coons and jig a boos" We are have called ourselves coloreds, Negroes, Afro-Americans, and Black. We are the offsprings of proud people that have withstood the stings and whips and spit that this world has given us and still continue to rise.

Collectively we declare: You walk on me, but still I rise! You trample me, but still I rise! You lynch me from trees, but with stubborn consternation, still I rise!

Who are we? In the context of "then," we are a people with a heritage rich with success and beauty. In the context of "Now" we still have the same propensities of our past.

We are still producing great music, literature and our great minds are still inventing, building and thinking. However, we must be warned that unless we continue to pursue excellence today, as we yearned for it in the past, we are in danger of losing our capacity to build upon the greatness of the past.

We who were the hardest workers that history has ever known are being crippled by a growing welfare mentality. It started with the Freedman's Bureau established just after the civil war, when the government took care of everything for us. It started when some of us sat around waiting for United States to give us 40 acres and a mule. It continues today as growing numbers in each generation become satisfied with a welfare mentality that seeks to live on handouts until taken out of this world.

We who burned coal oil lamps at night and crowded into one room school houses just to learn our ABC's, must not lose our thirst for knowledge. The education of our children must not consist of Gangsta rap, video games and MTV. Now, we still need doctors, lawyers, engineers, auto mechanics, teachers, and fathers. We needed it then, and we need it now.

Where are We?

In the context of "then," we have had a rich experience. We have been in the heights of riches and in the depths of poverty. We have been rulers and we have been slaves. We have been cast down and put down. We have lived on nothing and survived on anything we could find. Despite those draw backs we continued to rise.

Where are we now? Despite the common thinking, we are a long ways from where we were back then. Just 20 years ago there were only 104 Black elected officials in the entire country, today there are over 8,000 Black elected officials. Where are we now? We are in positions of power and influence from the Senate to City Hall. We who were once sharecroppers and slaves now spend $350 billion a year in every area of commerce in America. Surveys have show that there are nearly 400,00 Black businesses, 50 Black banks, and over 500 credit unions. We spend tons of money in America: $450 million a year on records and tapes, $1.4 billion on cold drinks; not to mention that we buy 10 percent of air plane tickets, 40 percent of all the whiskey, and without Black folks every church's chicken in America would shut its doors!

Like Heloise the hen, we are progressed to the point that we would make pretty good chicken soup! To get our dollars, Music companies pander our kids who think its cute to call our women hoe's, wear clip on gold teeth, and to be a menace to society. Those who promote the products don't care about the life of the hen or its destiny, they want chicken soup! In our prosperity we must be careful in the "now" to exercise the same caution they used "then." We must save some of our money, invest well, scrutinize the businesses we support for reciprocity and build upon what we have!

Where Am I Going?

Finally brothers and sisters we should, look at where we have been as a guide to charting a course for the future. Then, when a Black man was asked where are you going? the answer was simply "freedom!" We answered I'm on my way to the canaan land!

Now the pursuit should be no different. We should still be on our way to the Canaan land!

"Then" our fore parents understood the necessity of calling on God to help them make it through and "Now" we must do the same.

Now as it was then, we are on a journey from time to eternity!

Now as it was then, we strive to keep our faith in tact and press toward the mark of the high calling!

Now as it was then, we must keep our hand in the winding chain and our shoulder to the wheel.

In the midst of slavery and misery our fore parents always made doing God's will and making it to heaven their goal. They sang "I got shoes, you got shoes, all God's chillun's got shoes, when I get to heaven gon' put on my wings and walk all over God's heaven!"

As we consider our heritage its good to think about now and then. For every now and then, I see something in our past or present that reminds me of the goodness of the Lord.

Every now and then I see:

—Sadness and how the Lord turns it to happiness!

—Failure and how the Lord turns it into success!

—Valleys and how the Lord turns them into mountaintops!

—Broken hearts and how the Lords mends them all over again!

—Rainy days and how God brings in the sunshine!

Every now and then I see the distress of our people and then remember the song writers words "when in distress, just call him. Within your bosom, you have phone, remember God is still on the throne"

He's the same God now and as he was then!

Back then when great grandma couldn't get clothes to put her children's back she'd drop down on her knees and call on the Lord.

He's the same God now as he was back then!

Call him!

Call him in the morning, in the noon day or in the midnight hour!

Every now and then you ought to call him..

...and tell him what you want!

No. 489-Black Men

The Black Man's Choice

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 13, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"I have given you a land for which ye did not labor, and cities which ye built not, and ye dwell in them; of the vineyards and oliveyards which ye planted not do you eat. Now therefore fear the Lord, and serve him in sincerity and in truth: put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt; and serve ye the Lord. And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which you father served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." Joshua 24:13-15

Introduction

As we consider our past and look toward the future, what choices are available to us? Some think we should go backwards. Others think we should discard the past and take a totally new approach. What route do we take? How do we decide?

Consider the three old men who sat around on their porch, each holding a good luck charm. The first carried a rabbit's foot on a key chain. "This rabbit's foot" he said "has brought me more good luck than anything I know, I don't leave home without it." The other had a horseshoe. He had one hung over each door in his house and one covering all the entrances to his barn and other buildings. "If there is a horseshoe over the door, there will always be good luck" he said. The Third man pulled out a small piece of paper and waved it. "What's on this paper is all I need. I don't need a rabbit's foot, because it didn't bring the rabbit any luck. I don't need a horseshoe to hang over my door to fall and hit me on the head. What's on this paper is my good luck charm." Curious, the men insisted that he read the note on the paper. It read: "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and shall direct thy paths." The old man looked up and said. "You don't need luck, when you got the Lord."It's a pice of advice that will always be remembered.

As Christians, we know we have many options that are before us. Many have been tried by the generations before us, but one has remained true..when we give our lives to the Lord, he will never let us down.

Exposition

This text considers Joshua as he assembled the men of Israel to give them his last challenge. Joshua, the successor to Moses, had led Israel in miraculous battles that resulted in the victorious conquering of the Canaan land. Now in his declining years, Joshua called all of the men of the nation together to talk with them about their duties as men.(v1)

As the men gathered in Shechem, Joshua reflected on the long journey of the people and the challenges that lay before them. He reminded them of their history, pointing out that often the men of the nation, even the mighty and famous worshipped other gods when it seemed convenient to them. In verse two he cites Terah, the father of Abraham as an example of a man who choose to serve a false god as a necessary evil. In Egypt, some Israelites thought it a matter of survival to worship the gods of the Egyptians, hoping to gain favors and concessions from their oppressors.

In painstaking detail, Joshua noted that the journey of the people from a small meandering tribe to a great nation was not by accident but it was a carefully guided journey toward their destiny. Each step of their journey was a planned execution of the will of God. Beginning at verse three, Joshua, speaking as an instrument for God, recalls the details of the plan. He showed what God promised Abraham's seed and how it was fulfilled. In verse six he showed how God brought them out of slavery and destroyed efforts to re-enslave them. In verse 8 he details how Israel as a small untrained, unorganized nation of former slaves, was able to defeat forces superior to them because "I fought with you and gave them into your hand."

Now, in the promised land, the Israelites were enjoying a prosperity that was unparalled. In verse 13, God, reminds them that they now owned land for which they did not labor; cities, they did not build; and resources they did not develop themselves. Yet even in light of such prosperity there was still an inclination by some men to follow after the gods of the Ammorites, out of necessity. Before slavery, during slavery and even after slavery some men found it necessary, for whatever their reason, to serve gods other that Jehovah.

Joshua's challenge to the men was blunt. Choose the false gods that some of the patriarch's served out of convenience, or the gods of the present circumstance, or stick with the one true God that has brought them from mediocrity into a land flowing with milk and honey. Joshua's was conclusion was predictable, yet historic: "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Black Man's dilemma

If African-American men were assembled today in the same manner as the men of Israel were assembled by Joshua, the discourse might be the same.

As leaders of our nation, communities, and homes, African-American men have much for which to be grateful. God has been good to us. Yet, before slavery and even during our nearly 200 years as slaves in America, there were some among us that chose to serve gods (small g) other than the true God. Some made their choices out of ignorance perhaps looking for good luck charms, others out of necessity, and some were just plain greedy. They were willing to do anything and put up with anything, just to get by.

Today,there is a generation of Black men who are standing on the shoulders of their ancestors. We are able to access many of the finer things in life only because they have given us a better vantage point. Our fathers built communities, homes, and codes of honor. Our fathers, with God's help, fashioned programs to discipline our children, educate our people, train our boys, groom our girls and protect our homes. Without dissuasion, we have successfully come through the middle passage, survived slavery, depression and wars, only to come to this point in our history and watch some our men follow after the same path the Israelites took in biblical times, the path to least resistance.

Black men today face the same challenge as the men of Joshua's time. It was a matter of choosing whether to follow God and lead their families and communities in his footsteps or whether to seek their personal ambitions and allow their families to stray after false gods.

What are the false gods of our times? They are not statues before which we bow prostrate and humble. They are more than likely ideals and lifestyles that cause us to abandon the values of our people. Two false gods are eating away our community from the inside. One is drugs, alcohol and crime. These three combined have done more to diminish the effective presence of African-American males than anything else. How can we have fathers, husbands, and leaders if they are all shot up, locked up, doped up, boozed up. It is a false god that has threatened us before and during slavery and now in this generation it threatens us still. Another among the false gods is "upward mobility." There are many of our men who are not drunks, or dealers, but are just as absent from their families as those who are because they worship the career ladder, which absorbs all of their time, interests and energy. They often find themselves mere shells of men because the worship of their true god has drained them.

The Ultimate Quest

The quest of every Black man should be what Haki Madhubuti describes in his book "Black Men" as the ultimate quest, which is to: be responsible, loving and an effective husband and father in an ocean of white supremacy. We should be committed not to allow racism to destroy our memories, spirit, drive, integrity, convictions, or values.

As we build upon the past, every Black man should commit himself to building his family insuring that he is not a casual visitor, but an integral part of his home. Perhaps these nine points might be a guide: 1) Work hard at being a father, learning from mistakes, growing as you go 2) Teach by example in your home: marital fidelity, integrity, and racial pride are ideals best taught by living models 3)Promote opportunities for your children to develop creativity in the arts: music, dance, drama and visual expression 4)Create and participate in activities as a family, resist the temptation to allow members of your family to fragment and go in different directions without the support of the family; 5)Never appear intoxicated before your wife our children or use language unbecoming of an intelligent and serious father; 6)Never beat your wife. Period 7)Maintain a home that is culturally in tune with best of African-American culture with libraries and collections of books, periodicals and visuals that reflect the best contributions of our people. 8)Teach your children, no matter how painful it may seem to them, to be disciplined, focused, fair, honest individuals who strive to achieve their best.

The final challenge to the Black man is to point his family in the direction of the one and true God. Each man should realize that his daughter idolizes the ground he walks on. His son desires to emulate his best qualities, he should show them an active faith in God.

Joshua decided: "As for me and my house" we will serve the Lord."

The reason Joshua could make such a statement on behalf of his family was because he knew they would follow his example, not because he said it, but because he lived it.

Every Black family today needs a BMW ..or Black man worshipping!

It's good to be a man who knows how to work with his hands, but its even better to be a man whose got his hands in God's hands.

It's good to be a man who knows how to put food on the table but its better to be a man who knows from whom all blessings flow!

It's good to be a man who knows a lot of people, but its better to be a man who knows the Lord!

Men who believe in the birth, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ and accept him as their savior and Lord and live by his creed daily are men who know the Lord.

Men who know the Lord:

—Refuse to give up when times are tough, because they know tough times never last, but tough people do!

—Refuse to accept defeat, especially when God has promised the victory!

—Refuse to allow problems to get the best of them, because they know the Lord will make a way!

I don't know about you, but I've found out that the Lord will make a way!

He'll pick you up when you fall down!

He'll dry your weeping eyes!

He'll open doors that have been closed in your face!

In a time of trouble, he will hide me! He's a shelter in a time of storm!

..As for me and my house..we will serve the Lord!

Unchosen Crosses

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:"Mat 27:32 And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross."

Introduction

Have you sometimes felt that fate has dealt you a bad hand? Maybe you've concluded like Paul Lawrence Dunbar that life is a "crust of bread and a corner to sleep in, a minute to smile and an hour to weep in, a pint of joy and peck of trouble, never a laugh and the moans come double and that is life!" There are many today who feel that the circumstance of their birth has given them an unfair burden that is cruel and different from what others experience. These are those who moan because they were not born rich, smart, good looking and white. There are even those who look at their lot in life and become bitter because life did not meet the expectations of their fantasies. Among these embittered are those who may be bitter because they were born tall or short. Some are resentful that they were born women and not men or vice versa. The circumstances of fate are beyond our control. What is within our control is that which we can do ourselves, which is not limited to the confines of circumstance.

Consider two men and a woman who stood before their benefactors to receive their destinies. One of the men received a golden apple, worth millions of dollars. The second man received a golden pear, equally worth millions. As the woman was coming to receive her golden gift the two men quickly took what was hers and exchanged it with something that was yellow but was not gold. Later as each went their separate ways they opened their gifts. The men took their golden gifts and made great successes for themselves. The woman sat in her room for many days crying after she opened her gift and found that instead of golden fruit that she had been given lemons. She sat the lemons on her mantle and looked at them daily. One day a big smile came on her face and she stormed out of her room and was not seen for many years. By chance the three came upon each other years later. The two men were doing well but they were really surprised when the woman appeared. She was quite wealthy and was a great success. "How could this be?" one of the men asked. The woman answered "I found out that it was you that gave me lemons. But it was the Lord that showed me how to take lemons and turn them into lemonade."

As Christians, we know that life comes with triumphs and failures, difficulties and victories. The quest for wholeness and completeness reaches its apex when we master the ability to take failures, difficulties, setbacks and challenges and use them as stepping stones. Such has been the case with African-Americans in general and African-American women in particular. Society has given our race and our women the bitterness of lemons, a cross they did not choose to bear. But because they have borne their cross with pride, God has shown them how to turn lemons into lemonade.

Exposition

The text focuses on Simon of Cyrene who carried the cross a portion of the way for Jesus. Little is said of Simon, other than then fact that he was from Cyrene and was "compelled" to carry the cross of Christ.

The message in this text is not obvious. It requires the reader to hear with a keen voice and to read beyond the simple words which are on the page. This has been the Black Man's burden for centuries as he attempted to find himself in the scripture. Who was Simon? He was a man who was from Cyrene a country in North Africa. He was among thousands of Africans who had come to Jerusalem, the center of Judaism to study. There were other Africans in the Christian struggle. Acts 2:10 details the nationalities that were present in Jerusalem during the time,included in the list are Cyrenians, Libyans and Egyptians, all Africans. Even among the prophets and teachers of the Christian Church there were Africans: "Now there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, which had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul." Acts 13:1. The point is that there has been an African presence in the Christian struggle from its beginnings.

If it is difficult for African men to find themselves in the Bible because of cultural biases, imagine the frustration of African-American women, who seek to hear God beneath the racism that hides their presence as a race and even deeper to pierce the veils that hide their places as a women. Some African-American women have been frustrated in their search for person hood in the bible. Some have dismissed the bible as collection of texts by men, and for men, disregarding women altogether. Those who study the bible seriously, search for truth and many have found the truth and have been set free from the frustrations of the uninformed. There is an African female presence in the bible. The key is in the geography. Don't look for the word "Black" or "African" but look for "Egyptian, Ethiopia, Cyrene, Libya, Alexandrian, Canaanites" and other geographical designations that identify the nationality of biblical characters. With that view Hagar is not just a single mother who was the pawn of Abraham and Sarah but an African woman who was sexually and economically exploited by a vindictive mistress, who survived only because God took care of her (Genesis 16)With this view women see how God punished those who criticized Moses for marrying an African woman (Numbers 12:1) or how the beauty of Africa was brought to Israel by a visit from the Queen of Sheba of Ethiopia. Mark Hyman in his book "Blacks who died for Jesus" details a long list of African women who fought for the cross, From Saint Patricia who spent 28 years in a cave studying the word until her death in 567 A.D. to Saint Appollonia who walked into flames rather speak a word against Jesus in A.D. 249. The African female's struggle to serve the Lord and shoulder the cross is great and noteworthy.

Speaking of how the bible speaks to African-American women noted biblical scholar Cain Hope Felder says the bible still describes a world where "the oppressed are liberated, the last become first, the humbled exalted, the despised are preferred, those rejected are welcomed, the long-suffering are rewarded, the dispossessed are repossessed and the arrogant are prostrated."

Whether the believer is male or female, African-American or white all serious students of the bible find that while there are instances of subjugation, racism and sexism in the biblical history, the bible's final word on racial and gender matters is summed up in Galatians 3:28 "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus."

Women have been compelled

The African-American woman, like Simon of Cyrene has been compelled to carry crosses she did not choose to carry herself, but once the burden was put on her shoulder, carried it with strength and honor. She turned lemons into lemonade!

In many ways the African-American woman has had to carry the cross of segregation and racism away from home and the cross of sexism as well. Frowned upon because of her color and shunned because of her sex the African-American woman rose despite the obstacles set before her, turning disasters into opportunities and mountains into molehills.

When Black men could not find jobs because of racism, women were compelled to carry to the cross of labor. By the millions they put on uniforms and became domestic workers and nannies for pennies a day, sometimes walking miles to and from work only to come home and do the same work again. In recent years, white women have joined the work force and recognize the hardship of working and raising a family at the same time hence the call for day care, family leave and other family oriented work laws. But for decades African-American women carried this cross, quietly and nobly.

As many Black men abandoned their families or pursued their own agendas, many women today are compelled to carry the cross of family leadership. Nearly half of all African-American homes are headed by females. In addition to her role as mother and home manager, many African-American women have been compelled to become the bread winners of their families because the fathers of their children either could not or would not underwrite the expense of the nurture of the family. Many women are wearing themselves out trying to be fathers and mothers to their children. They are working jobs, managing the home,attending the P.T.A., assisting with school work, supporting the children in girl scouts, boy scouts, school programs and extra-curricula activities. After doing all that they come home and are some irritated when they hear someone complain that they have gained a little weight in the process.

Obviously women are carrying “unchosen crosses” that have been placed on them by society.

One Chosen Cross

While women are carrying many unchosen crosses, they like all true believers have one cross they carry by choice.

The cross they have chosen to carry has not been selected for its beauty or utilitarian purpose. It has not been selected because of its ease of use or availability. It has been selected because of its power.

Out on Calvary, three crosses sat on the hill. One represented a thief dying in his sin, for though he had a chance to come to god he refused to do so.

The second cross represented a thief dying to sin, for he called out to Jesus, “remember me when you enter into your kingdom.”

But the final cross, represents the savior dying for sin!

Today there are millions, both male and female of all races and walks of life who have chosen this cross, because it is the cross of salvation!

Brothers and Sisters there is power in the cross! We have chosen this cross because, at the cross:

—Darkness turns into light; Burdens turn into blessings

—Nobodies turns into somebodies; Sadness turns into gladness —Despair turns into delight; and defeat turns into victory!

No wonder the song writer declared: “At the cross, at the cross where I first saw the light and the burdens of my heart rolled away, it was there by faith, I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!”

The world may have given you many unchosen crosses, but there ought to be one cross you choose to carry for yourself.

It’s the same cross that Jesus carried up calvary!

It’s the same cross that became so heavy that the song writer would ask “Must Jesus bear the cross alone and all the world go free?” then answered “no there’s a cross for everyone and there’s a cross for me.”

I’m glad that Jesus carried the cross for me!

I’m glad that he died out on Calvary!

But I’m so glad that early Sunday morning that rose from the grave all power!

All power ..

All Power...In his hands!

It's In Your Hand!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:"Son of man, take a stick of wood and write on it, 'Belonging to Judah and the Israelites associated with him.' Then take another stick of wood, and write on it, 'Ephraim's stick, belonging to Joseph and all the house of Israel associated with him.'Join them together into one stick so that they will become one in your hand.When your countrymen ask you, 'Won't you tell us what you mean by this? say to them, 'This is what the Sovereign LORD says: I am going to take the stick of Joseph—which is in Ephraim's hand—and of the Israelite tribes associated with him, and join it to Judah's stick, making them a single stick of wood, and they will become one in my hand.'" — Ezekiel 37:16-19

Introduction

Have you ever you considered your future and wondered what was in store for you in life? Often youth dream about what their lives will be like. Some see themselves as great athletes winning victories on playing fields. Some see themselves as doctors, lawyers and teachers. As we consider the future, those who expect to be a part of it continue to dream about the role they will play in the drama of life that is about to unfold.

Consider the little boy who went to fortune tellers at a carnival to find his future. One woman had a crystal ball and after she had collected his money proceeded to tell him that she saw "hands doing great things." The boy was puzzled but could get nothing else from her. He went to another and this one dealt him a set of cards. After moments of ceremony the fortune teller said "You have a great future in your hand." Still puzzled the boy went to yet another fortune teller who was a palm reader. She told him to look at the lines in his hand. "Each one tells the story of your life before it is lived. Your fate is written in your hands. Lines that extend across your palm mean long life. Lines that are crossed by another mean a loss. Lines that curve and do not go straight show times when you will stray from your mark." The boy was dazzled by what the fortune tellers told him. He thought about their words constantly. He could think of nothing else as walked around gazing at the lines in his hands. When he got home he decided to ask his grandma the same question that he had asked the fortune tellers: "What is in my future?" His grandma reached for an old tattered bible and told the boy to hold it as she said: “I don’t know about the future, I know who guides me every day. The man who knows tomorrow has a plan for you today, and you’ve got it in your hand.” The answers we seek are not written in crystal balls, tea leaves, four leaf clovers, magic cards and palm reader’s lines. They answers we seek must come from God, for he alone knows are future.

As Christians, we put our lives into God’s hands. He gives us the peace and understanding that comes with knowing him and knowing him fully. When we know him fully then we know that our future is truly bright as trust God to lead us and tell him Lord, my life is “in your hands!”

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Ezekiel as he foretells the future of the Jewish people. The nation had been divided, enslaved and broken for many years. Ezekiel, known as one of the major prophets because of his numerous writings, constantly gave them glimpses of what God had in store for them, despite their present condition of being a scattered broken people. He spoke to a new generation of the people who had heard about the glories of the nation’s past but were being frustrated by what seemed to be a hopeless cycle of subjugation, and exploitation. At the time of Ezekiel’s prophecy Judah was in exile in Babylon, Jerusalem had been decimated, and Israel had been scattered by the Assyrians.

Ezekiel had given the people, on the command of God, many signs that their future would be bright even though it appeared hopeless. The most famous of his prophecies was the “dry bones in the valley” prophecy in which he depicted the entire nation of Israel rising up out of its scattered, dry and broken experience to a new and fuller life. The key to this resurrection would be the willingness of the people to “hear the word of the Lord.”

This text follows on the heels of the “dry bones” prophecy. In it Ezekiel is told by God to pick up two sticks, which represented the two parts of their nation that had been divided and to hold them together in his hands and to carry them around with him. He was told to write the names of each respective nation upon each stick. As he walked among the people, Ezekiel was told by God to be prepared to answer questions when people asked why he was carrying two sticks in his hand. God said when asked Ezekiel should respond: That he would take the two parts of the broken nation and put them back together again, and in his hands they shall become one!”

The central message of the text to the new generation of Jews who were pondering their future is that if they put their lives and futures in God's hands, he would rebuild, renew and reshape their circumstances to mold them a bright promising future.

What does the future hold?

Today youth are pondering their direction in life. Life Judah and Israel, African-American youth are a new generation frustrated by the difficulty of our times. They have studied about the glories of our past through a variety of heritage experiences, yet today they see a people broken, divided and wandering. What is the future for such a circumstance?

The answer, just as it was in Ezekiel's day, is the same today, it in the sticks!

What could these two sticks mean for this generation? In Ezekiel's time they meant an enslaved, hopeless people coming together again to a great future. What can they mean today?

They mean the exact same thing! We who have been slaves and sharecroppers, treated as second class citizens and pushed to the back burner of life now have the opportunity to rise and stand tall despite the difficulties of our time.

For youth the two sticks comprise the major elements that shape their future:

EDUCATION: There is no doubt that a good education is one of the most important elements that contributes to a bright future. Without it, hope dwindles and the light of inspiration dims.

Too often however, young people take for granted the value of their education and are content to do just enough to get by. Many have become satisfied with mediocrity and fail to push themselves to learn and to achieve.

Education is multi-faceted. It is not limited to just books. It doesn't just focus on how to make a living, but it also includes "how to live." A lion cub in the jungle has to have a good education to survive. The lion cub is taught everything necessary for it to survive in the jungle. What to eat, what not to eat. How to hunt and how to avoid hunters. The lion learns how to live! Likewise, a good education goes beyond just teaching what's in a book, but it teaches how to live.

Education involves preparation for careers but it also involves preparation for life. The youth who attempts to have a great and prosperous life who has not learned how to survive and thrive will almost always take the big dive!

SELF-DISCIPLINE: Central to education is discipline. It is one of the most difficult lessons of adolescence.

Small children are not expected to have self discipline. Their failure to follow the rules or to do things in the proper way is dismissed to their immaturity. Sometimes youth who do not exercise discipline are given reminders by their parents in the form of spankings, and privilege denials to suggest the importance of discipline. As youth grow older, the need for corporal punishment and other forms of discipline should diminish as youth exercise self-discipline.

Self-discipline means doing the right thing without having to be told. It is studying regularly, obeying the family rules, avoiding trouble, and acting responsibly without waiting for someone to give a signal. Many young people, unfortunately, have not mastered self-discipline. Many are smart, but deviant. Their attitudes and actions suggest that they are untamed and wild, which could spell disaster.

It is the disciplined youth that becomes an honor student. It is the disciplined athlete that becomes a success! It is the disciplined youth that avoids drugs, crime and jail by scrutinizing the crowd he runs with and knowing when to say yes and when to say no, when to hold on and when to let go.

If youth today had two sticks that they could carry with them, these two should remind them constantly of what is needed to succeed. Both of these essential elements are within the reach of every young person. Whether there is success or failure it depends upon how youth use that which is placed in their hands.

In God's hands

There is a Latin phrase that says: "Vis unita fortior" It means the force of God, added to my own force is powerful. This is the essential truth of the final component of Ezekiel's vision. Not only did it show the two sticks together rising to prosperity, but he showed what held them together by the force of God.

The sticks were not bound by any chord, ropes or ties. They were held together in God's hands! If at any time they fell out of God's hand they could not and would not work together to bring the bright promises that the future offered.

Education and discipline are fine things to have but neither of them can help us if our lives get out of God's hands.

Whether or not youth get a good education and exercise self discipline, for the most part, is in their hands. However, our success depends on our willingness to say to God: “Here’s my life Lord, it’s in your hands!”

Young Jeremiah told the Lord, “I do not understand all of life’s challenges, and I’m afraid of their faces, but Lord it’s in your hands!

Young Isaiah told the Lord he felt unworthy to serve, but if they Lord needs somebody, Here am I send me!

Every young person should say: “Lord, I’m putting it in your hand because your..:

—GLORY is much greater than mine; POWER is much stronger than mine

—METHODS are much wiser than mine; UNDERSTANDING is much broader than mine!

—WAYS are much safe than mine; HEART is much bigger than mine;

—BURDEN is lighter than mine; and LOVE is much deeper than mine!

It’s in your hands because I don’t know what the future holds but I know who holds my hand!

It’s in your hands because one day out on Calvary I heard you cry out:

Father, Father, into thy hands, I commit my spirit!

It’s in your hands because early one Sunday morning you rose up from the grave with ..all power!

Shacking With The Church

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 6, 1994

SCRIPTURE: "Let us rejoice and be glad and give him glory! For the wedding of the Lamb has come, and his bride has made herself ready." — Revelation 19:7 (NIV)"For I am jealous over you with godly jealousy: for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ." "But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ. For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear with him." — 2 Corinthians 11:2-4 (KJV)

Introduction

Have you ever loved someone and felt they didn't love you? Have you ever felt totally committed to a person but felt the feeling was not mutual? Have you ever shared a relationship with someone but secretly felt that they did not trust you fully? Though it may seem odd, there are millions of people today who live together, enjoy each other's company but do not share a relationship of mutual trust and commitment. On the outside they look happy, but on the inside they are unwilling or unable to make a full commitment.

One of the unique contributions African-Americans have made to the English language is a wealth of colloquialisms. One of these colloquialisms is the term "shacking." It is a phrase that describes a man and woman that live together as husband and wife, without benefit of marriage. The legal systems refers to such arrangements as common-law or unofficial marriages, we call it "shacking."

In its broadest meaning "shacking" is an expression of fear, or distrust. It occurs when one or both partners refuse to commit themselves, even in private, to a life of mutual sharing. Consider what could easily be described as the "Shacker's Wedding Vow:"

"Dearly beloved we are gathered here today because this man and this woman refuse to join themselves in holy wedlock. Since marriage is holy and acceptable to God, we are here today to acknowledge that this man and this woman have decided to live together without a commitment to each other even if it is unacceptable and unholy to God. There are no rings or symbols of a marriage because others who might see either of them will know they are no longer available. They pledge to be together as long as sickness, poverty, and bad times escape them and their relationship does not become inconvenient. They don't promise each other anything and they only pledge to be together as long as things work out or until a better looking more successful person comes along. With that the shacker may now salute the shackee." The shacking relationship that exists between some couples is one based upon receiving without giving, and sharing without trusting.

Just as there are some persons who shack with their partners there are others whose relationship to Christ and the church bears a striking relationship to "shacking." They seek to get all from him that they can without making a full commitment to him, and without trusting him totally. While there is a large number of people who are shacking with each other, there is an even larger number of people who are "Shacking With The Church."

As Christians, we know that our Lord loves us totally and completely. Christ's love for us is not the question, but our love for him is questionable. The Christian's relationship with Christ is one of full commitment and trust. It is the marriage bond between the bride and bridegroom that we seek to achieve. Anything less would make us guilty of "shacking with the church."

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes to the church at Corinth about his desire for them to remain fully committed to the cause of Christ. Paul expressed his desire that the Corinthian church would remain faithful to Christ such that it could be presented as a spotless "virgin" to the bridegroom, which is Christ, when he returns.

The imagery of the bride and bridegroom is often used in scripture to represent the sum total of believers and their relationship to Christ. Generally the bride is always symbolic of the people of God. In the Old Testament the prophets often used the imagery of the bride to suggest the repeated adulteries of the people against God who acted as a loving husband. Hosea's marriage to a harlot was one striking example of how an adulterous relationship exist between a backsliding people and a loving God.

In the New Testament the image of the bride often refers to the church and its relationship to Christ. The bride, in Revelation also represented the sum total of all believers: those before Christ, the church, and the 144,000

Jews and large mass of people that John saw coming out of the tribulation having washed their robes in the blood of the lamb. All believers, whether Old Testament or New Testament are represented by the image of the bride.

In the Old Testament, God was represented by the loving father. In the New Testament Christ is represented by the image of the bridegroom. Both the bride and bridegroom are spoken of as preparing to meet each other. The bridegroom has gone to prepare a place for the bride and the bride is waiting patiently for his return.

Paul told the Church at Corinth that he wanted it to remain faithful to Christ and not to simply run after every new doctrine that came along. He wanted a full commitment from Corinth, setting the stage for the perfect union between Christ and his spotless congregation that remained faithful until he returned.

In Sickness and In Health

There are many people in the church today whose relationship to the church is similar to the relationship of "shacking" partners in that they have no full commitment. Those who marry for example, pledge to be together in sickness and in health. However, those who shack don't make that pledge. Shackers usually enjoy each other's company in health but cannot be expected to be around in sickness. Obviously there are a few exceptions to the rule, but generally shackers assume the attitude that "I may be around if you get sick, but don't count on it."

In a similar sense there are those whose relationship with the church is the same. When the spiritual health of the church is threatened by the onslaughts of Satan, there are many who will leave the church and find other partners. They enjoy the church's company in times of health, but when it is spiritually sick they can't be counted on to stick with the church. If a bad spirit comes along in the choir, or usher board or among the deacons or some committee they usually disappear because they are committed only to the point that the church is in good spiritual health. Like those who shack, they say they will come back to the choir or the ushers "when Y'all get it together." When you are well again they will return, but don't expect any help from them in getting rid of the sickness through fasting and prayer. Those who relate to the church in this way are "shacking with the church."

For Better or Worse

Those who shack commit themselves to each other only to the extent that conditions are both convenient and mutually enjoyable. A shacker can only expect his or her partner to be present in good times. There is a possibility that they may be around in bad times, but even then they should not be expected to stick with the relationship through the long haul. The very nature of the shacking relationship is to get as much out of the relationship as possible, without committing to make an equal return. Therefore, when things turn bad, one shacker will probably disappear or look for another partner that is not having such bad times. Unemployment, misfortune, and other problems, usually suggest hard times. They are also times when shackers usually break up because there is nothing for them to gain from the "deal" so they drop their partners and move on.

There are many people who relate to their church in the same way. When the church seems to prosper and things are going well they are proud to be associated with the church. They brag "look at Us's church" and they can't stop talking about the church. When there are anniversaries and celebrations when friends from around the community will be present they enjoy the applauds and the accolades. However, when difficulties arise they disappear. When workers are needed to clean the bathrooms, mow the lawn or to repair broken furniture they disappear. When there are problems to be solved and difficulties to overcome many of them disappear.

Paul told the church at Corinth that he was fully committed to the cause of Christ. At verse 25 and beyond he listed off a long list of hardships he endured for the sake of the church. His point was clear, in good times and bad times he stuck with the church. Though he was beaten, stoned and ostracized, he stuck with the church. His was not a shacking relationship that was only for good times but it was a permanent commitment that would last through hard times until things became better.

Likewise, those who want to be a part of the bride of Christ should commit themselves for the long haul. In good times and hard times they should resolve that "nothing shall separate me from the love of Christ."

Waiting For the Bridegroom

While there are some who have assumed a shacking relationship with Christ, only seeking to get from him what they can get without giving fully of themselves, there are others who have given the Lord their all, and are living each day, waiting for the bridegroom.

Those who are waiting for the bridegroom don't get weary and are not intimidated by the times. They wait because the word says "They that wait on the Lord, shall renew their strength. They shall mount up on wings as eagles, they shall run and not get weary; they shall walk and not faint." They are waiting on the bridegroom because when he returns he will bring them joy and happiness and will set them free.

Consider the slave couple that was allowed to marry even though the master had plans to sell the husband. When the husband found out he was about to be sold he met with his new wife and told her that he was going to run away to freedom. She remembered the power in his words when he said "No matter how long it takes or how far I have to go, I'm coming back for you. Wait for me.!" With that the husband dashed into the night running for his freedom. Many years later after slavery was abolished, his wife refused to remarry or to take on suitors. She looked out the window of her cabin waiting for her husband to return. Her hair turned gray. Her eyes became dim, but she waited. Then one day she saw a fancy buggy coming up the road. The man driving it looked like a angel from heaven. He was wearing a derby hat with a .50 cent cigar in his mouth. Then she realized it was her husband. She ran to meet him and as they hugged he told her that he wondered whether she would wait and he she said "You told me to wait, and I been waiting right here until you returned!"

Brother and Sisters, Jesus, the bridegroom told his bride "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am ye may be also. In my father's house are many mansion's!"

Come and go with me to my father's house!

In my father's house there is Joy!

In my father's house there is Peace!

Come and go with me to my father's house!

I'm so glad that he's coming back again, so I'll wait right here ..until he comes!

If You Don't Know Me By Now

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 17, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us. Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou then, Show us the Father?" John 14:8-9 "For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." Acts 17:23

Introduction

Have you ever thought you knew someone, only to find out that you didn't? Often we live in the midst of people for many years, thinking that we know them, only to learn that we really didn't know them as well as we thought we did. Often a husband or a wife discover and decades of married life that they really don't know each other. Sometimes parents discover that they don't really "know" their children.

It is true that sometimes we can be deceived by what we think we know. Consider the little toad frog that defied the instructions of the bull frog and played daily with the crocodile. "Son, stay away from the crocodile, he is dangerous" said the old Bull frog who had been around for a long time. "Nonsense" replied the young toad who played with the crocodile daily. "That may have been true in your day, pop but this crocodile is different. He takes me for rides through the Bayou. I dance on his back and often using it for my diving board." The old bull frog kept warning him to stay away from that crocodile because he could be dangerous. The young toad felt safe with the crocodile. He knew he was strong and powerful but he wasn't afraid because the crocodile was so gentle when he was around. One day the toad frog came to play. The crocodile was in usually grumpy mood. He would not lay still and his stomach seemed to groan. Suddenly without notice the crocodile open his huge jaws and snapped at the frog who barely got away as he hopped home to his papa the big bull. "Pop, I don't know what got into the crocodile, he snapped at me and almost killed me." The old Bull frog looked at the little frog and said. “You thought you knew the that old croc. You probably did. But what I know that you didn’t know, is that when he gets hungry he’ll eat little toads like you for an afternoon snack. You don’t know a crocodile until you know what he eats for lunch!”

In a similar sense there are many today who don’t know others as well as they think. Even worse, there are still others who do not know themselves well and daily surprised with their own inadequacy. Shakespeare in Hamlet wrote: “This above all- to thine own self be true, And it must follow, as the night the day, Thou canst not then be false to any man.” If others are to know us that we should make sure we know ourselves.

As Christians, we have come to know God and in so doing, to better know ourselves. If we know him and are true to him, then those who strive to know us better will get to know him as well.

Those who know God have come to trust him, and that trust makes all the difference in the world.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he talks with Philip about the nature of his relationship with God the father.

During the course of his ministry with his disciples Jesus was often frustrated by the fact that the people were having difficulty accepting the idea that he and the father were one. They accepted him as a miracle worker of sorts and they respected him as a great teacher, but many did not perceive of him as being one with God. On one occasion Jesus even asked his disciples to tell him how he was being received by the people. The reports varied: teacher, resurrected prophet, and miracle man. Peter stood to attest that he was the son of God. Peter stood, but Philip did not readily get the connection. Here, Philip who had been exposed to his teaching for the length of his ministry had not accepted the oneness between Christ and the father. The essence of Jesus’ discourse to him was to chide him for being around him so long, yet not fully understanding the nature of his being. “You’ve been acquainted with me for all these years, but you still don’t know me” is what Jesus seems to have said.

In the Acts text, Paul was in Athens observing the worship and beliefs of the Greeks. He noticed that they had a statue erected to the “Unknown god” among the other gods that they worshipped. Paul took the opportunity to tell them about Jesus, the unknown God that they never knew.

The Greeks had many gods, many of which were altered to fit their circumstances. There was ZEUS who was the Lord of the earth and sky. He controlled the destinies of men and their political fortunes. ATHENA was second in command. She was the protector of the cities. Her statues usually depicted her in full battle armor. POSEIDON was the god or protector of the waters. The fishermen and mariners prayed to him for calm waters. HERMES was a god of the Shepherds and was associated with wealth and prosperity. APOLLOS was the god of agriculture. Those who were farmers prayed to him for protection against insects and plagues. He was also the god of youth and strength. ARTEMIS was the god of wildness of nature. The lakes, rivers and wild animals as well as the wild spirit of all life were her domain. APHRODITE was the god of fertility, sex, charm, beauty.

As the Greek empire spread throughout the world its mythology had a way of absorbing the gods of conquered people and giving them a subsidiary place among the Greek gods that had a similar functions. It is said that before Paul arrived in Athens that the city had endured a series of violent storms and the Greeks prayed first from one of their gods to another: from Zeus to Athena to Poseidon but the storms did not cease. Thinking they may have missed a god that was important they erected a statue to the "unknown God" and the storms cease. The statue remained thereafter.

Paul took advantage of the occasion to help them to know the God they referred to as "the unknown God."

Attitudes About God

There are many today that have the Greek attitude toward God. Though the names may be different, they still accept various gods as the controlling forces of the universe. They do not erect statues to these gods, but they bow before them reverently.

Like Zeus we have many who worship the political process as if it were a god that controls the destiny of man in itself, instead of being a tool of God for the orderly governing of men. To some, politics comes before anything else. Everything is defined by its political value: what church you attend, what fraternity you join and what charities you support, all defined by the god of politics.

Like Aphrodite, there are many who worship the enchantment of sex. The pursuit of sex has become a god to many instead of a blessed union of man and wife in confines of marriage. It controls their actions. If they worship, it will be at a church with large pool of possible "relationships." If they dress, sex appeal is more import than image. If they fellowship and socialize, who might attend of the opposite sex is deciding factor. Their lives are controlled by the pursuit of pleasure, desire and sexual fulfillment.

Like Hermes, there are others who worship the pursuit of wealth. Money, instead of being a means to an end becomes and end in itself. To some making money comes before anything else. Everything is defined by its propensity to make money. If we join a church or club we consider who's there that can help us make the big deal. Friendships and associations are based on their ability to help us make money. Their lives are controlled totally by the pursuit of dollars, legally or illegally.

Like Apollos, there are others who worship their youth and strength. They reject anything that is traditional as "old" and constantly seek that which is new and "youthful spirited" as if youth and new meant the same as righteous and correct and traditional and old meant wrong and incorrect. Instead of seeking a blend of the old and the new, those who worship newness usually seek to discard anything traditional, replacing it altogether.

The Unknown God

Like the Greeks there are many today that switch from one of their gods to another. Depending on the situation, some who worship politics may also worship, sex, youth, or money. However, like the Greeks at Athens, when the storms came, the answer to their problems did come from Zeus or Athena or Poseidon, but from that unknown God. When Paul came to tell the Greeks about this "Unknown god" they were willing to listen, for they had seen his works but knew nothing about him.

Like the Greeks today there are many who worship various gods of their choosing, but when the storms come they find that power and politics can't help them. Neither can sex, youth or money solve their problems. They usually find that storms that rise in their lives are resolved by the unseen, unidentified hand of the unknown God.

The false gods of this generation are like crocodiles in the bayou, they will take you for a refreshing ride in the pod and let you take dives from their backs, but sooner or later they will snap you up and swallow you whole!

Our real salvation is in what the world calls that "Unknown god."

I hear Jesus saying to the world today the same thing that was said to Philip "I've been with you all these years, and you still don't know me."

To you I'm an unknown God, but when you:

—Failed, I turned your failure into success, if you don't know me by now, you'll never know me!

—Were Afraid, I turned your fear into courage, if you don't know me by now, you'll never know me!

—Cried in the middle of the night, I dried your weeping eyes, if you don't know me by now, you'll never know me!

—Were Lonely, I gave you comfort when you were all by yourself, If you don't know me by now, you'll never know me!

—Felt as thought you did not have a friend in the world, I was your friend when you were friendless, mother when you were motherless, father when you were fatherless, if you don't know me by now, you'll never know me!

I heard the song writer declare: "You got to know Jesus, you got to know God for yourself, if you know Jesus, you don't need nobody else!"

We're talking about Jesus, fountain of our joy!

Jesus, Our shelter in time of storm!

Jesus, Our wheel in the middle of the wheel!

Jesus, The answer to our prayer!

No wonder the old warriors sang: "I know the Lord will answer prayer for I tried him for myself!"

Have you tried him for yourself?

Jesus, who died on Calvary!

Jesus, who rose on Sunday morning!

Jesus, who is always by your side!

If you don't know him by now....

At Peace In Old Age

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 17, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age."Genesis 15:15 "And even to your old age I am he; and even to hoary hairs will I carry you: I have made, and I will bear; even I will carry, and will deliver you." — Isaiah 46:4

Introduction

What does it mean to be at peace with God? In times of doubt, insecurity, misfortune and distrust, there is a yearning by most people to be at peace. In its most general application, peace is simply the absence of trouble, confusion, or division. Mankind works desperately to achieve world peace and national peace. However, there is another peace which is just as important; that is peace with God. Being at peace with God is internal and spiritual. It is almost impossible to have peace with other men unless we have also achieved peace with God.

Consider the old migrant worker who approached a farmer and asked him for a job. The farmer asked: "What can you do?" The old farm worker answered "I can sleep when the wind is blowing!" Puzzled by such a description of his working ability, the farmer asked for more. "Can you tell me what all you are able to do around the farm; you look pretty old." The old worker who had worked on hundreds of farms during his life, took his knapsack and sat it on the ground and looked the farmer in the eye and repeated his statement again "I can sleep when the wind is blowing." Although he was not sure what the worker meant, the farmer played a hunch and hired the old man anyway. Soon after a great storm arose and the farmer became concerned about his family. Hurriedly he called in the worker and shouted "get all the chickens and put them in barn" and the worker replied "it's done." He thought about the well and shouted "put the lid on the well" and the worker said: "It's done." "Cover the windows and get the children in the storm cellar" to that too the worker replied "It's done!" As the winds began to blow increasingly harder, the worker looked the farmer in the eye and said "I told you I can sleep when the wind is blowing" and went to the barn and closed the door and fell fast asleep on the hay.

Today there are many who are at peace with God. They are prepared for life and they are prepared for death. Come what may from day to day, they are at peace with their fellowman and with God and can retire with a good conscious. They can sleep when the wind is blowing.

Exposition

This text focuses on promises God made to two old and faithful servants of the Old Testament, Abraham and Isaiah. Both men received promises from God that because of their faithfulness that they would live to achieve a "good old age" and enjoy its fruits. They were promised the sustaining presence of God in their strength, in their retiring years and in their death.

Abraham lived a life of faith in God. His life was marked by great displays of loyalty to and faith in God. God promised him great lands, a large and prosperous family and the blessing of being the family through which the opportunity for salvation would come to the earth. Abraham was promised that he would live to see a good old age. When Abraham's life ended he was 175 years old. By comparison, Abraham died at a relatively young age. Adam lived 930 years. Seth did not have his first child until he was 105 and died at age 912. Methuselah lived 969 years. Enos lived 905 years and Cainan lived 910. Therefore by comparison, Abraham's mere 175 years would have to seem something short of the life expectancy of his time..physically, 175 years old was not considered the time to die. Yet Abraham was described as having died at a good old age. What made his old age good was not the numbers and the length of his life, but the quality of the years lived.

Isaiah received promises from God that even in his old age that he would still be the same God. For his commitment to serve as a prophet for him God promised him that he would carry him in his youth, bear him in his infirmity and be with him when the hairs on his head had turned white. God promised Isaiah peace in his old age. It was a pleasing thought for one who had spent so much time being criticized and ostracized by the people for his various pronouncements against the sins of the people. God promised this faithful servant that he would be with him constantly as a source of peace, hope and joy throughout the course of his life.

Combined these text verses make one concerted point: That those who live faithful lives will enjoy the presence of God in their lives in their youth, in their strength, in their infirmity and in their declining years. Whether they reach ages traditionally considered old or whether they die young, they will enjoy as peaceful a death as they enjoyed a peaceful life. His promise to the old patriarchs is the same promise today: be faithful and enjoy peace your old age.

How old is old?

How old is old today? At one time it was believed that a person was old when he or she reached a certain age. Those who were 64 were considered middle aged, but the next year they became "old" instantly. Those who made it to 80 or above were called "real old." Those who lived beyond 80 were called lucky and those who passed 100 were considered "blessed." How old is old? In modern times people in their 60's are not considered old. The nation has had presidents who served into their 70's and seniors have been known to function fully well into their 90's. Many people chuckle when they see elderly couples marry. They couples muse that people think because there is "frost on the roof that there is no fire in the oven."

Often people confuse, health and age. Having a wealth of years is a blessing. It is even more a blessing to have the health to go along with the years. Sometimes the two are not necessarily combined.

For Abraham old age was 175 but ther were others in his time who lived much longer. By today's standards he would have been considered a young man of about 30 or 40 chronologically. Perhaps he was described as dying at a good old age because of his mature relationship with God, not because of his years.

The premium in life is not how many years are lived but what is done in the years that are lived. Abraham lived 175 but accomplished a great service for God that is remembered to this day. Methuselah, on the other hand, lived 969 years and all that is said of him is that "he died." Moreover, we should strive to mature in our relationship with God. That is the main ingredient for living to a good old age at peace with God.

God is Present In Any Age

Isaiah learned what many today have learned, that God is with the faithful through all stages of life. God's words to Isaiah were definitive: "I made you, I carried you, and I will bear you up, even when the hairs on your head have turned hoary white."

Whatever we become in life, God is responsible for it. We climb and strive for greatness, but all of our success is due to the benevolence of God.

Those who have achieved peace with God have accepted the fact that all blessings from him. They are content because they know that whatever the need God has it and will provide it. God's words to Isaiah are germane today, "I made you." Solomon, in all his greatness, recognized that God made him. David rose to greatness but he never forgot that God made him. When his friends were upset over his losses in life Job remained at peace with God and said "The lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

Those who are at peace with God also recognize that God has carried them through life and has borne them in the midst of their infirmities. No matter how successful we become, the time will come when every many, woman or child will need to be carried for a while. If we are not carried by someone else we are sustained by God. The familiar story of the footprints in the sand makes the point clear. A man who walked with the lord looked back at his footprints in the sand and noticed that some points there are two sets of footprints and in others only one. The man asked God why he left him alone. The Lord's response was that in his prime he and God walked side by side, but in the places where there were only one set of footprints marked the points in his life where he was weak. "There was only one set of foot prints" said the Lord "because those were the times when I carried you." Those who are peace with God, know that in their strength, he is there and even in their infirmities he is there as well and they are secure in their faith that come what may, God is always by their side.

In old age, God is there

Finally God reminded Isaiah, even when the hairs on your head turn white, "I am he." The use of the phrase "I am he" is perhaps not accident. The use of "am" instead of "will be" or "was" suggests the present. It also suggests a God who is present constantly, not somewhere in the distant future or somewhere in the past.

When old age and the inconveniences that accompany it come, God reminds us "I am he."

In old age it should be an assurance to all to know that the God we serve is still the same and is unchanging.

We can live in peace when all is well with God.

We can endure in peace when we know that God will quiet whatever storms that may rise.

We can die in peace when we know that even our soul is in good hands with the Lord.

It should be a joy to every child of God to be able to say “It is well with my soul.”

There may be confusion everywhere, but it is well with my soul!

There may be trouble in the land, but it is well with my soul!

There may doubts in the minds of some, but it is well my soul!

It is well because the God we serve has made a way for us. He has given us the hope of a brighter day.

Even as this tabernacle deteriorates with age with still rejoice because we have another tabernacle, not built by hands!

Even though this life is made miserable by the infirmities associated with old age, we still rejoice because we hear the song writer’s words: “I have heard of a land on a far away strand, tis the beautiful home of the soul..tis a land where we’ll never grow old!”

I don’t know about you but I’m looking for that land where everyday will be Sunday and it’s always howdy and never goodbye!

I’m looking for that land where the streets are paved with gold!

I’m looking for that land where there is peace for the soul! Where time shall be no more! Where the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest!

I’m looking for that land...where we’ll never grow old!

A few days a good Sister Hattie Wooten Cassey went home to be with God. During the course of her 105 years she was carried and sustained by God. She died at peace with God, at a good old age.

Get The Word Out!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Zion Hill Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 27, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me.When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live; if he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity, all his righteousness shall not be remembered; but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it. Ezekiel 33:7-8,13; "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." John 1:14

Introduction

Have you ever had something in you that you just had to get out? That's a time when you are literally bursting for a release. For song writers it is a melody in the heart. For writers it is a moving thought or idea that must be placed on paper. The artist is compelled to paint such impulses. The singer must sing the music in his spirit. No matter what the circumstance those who have such a spirit within them must get them out. Like Ezekiel, these feelings are like "fire shut up in my bones." They must come out.

Consider Sanctified Sally, a spirited woman who loved to praise the Lord in a mighty way. Sally and her son had moved one year to a quaint little town that had no Baptist Church. She could only join a rather formal and quiet Methodist Church. Sally stood out because she routinely shouted "Amen" to the preacher and would often yell "Praise the Lord." This worried the Methodists because their new member was obviously out of place, but there was nothing they could do to keep Sally quiet. On one occasion Sally's son got in trouble with the law and was in serious trouble. The local judge was inclined to help the boy because it was a minor offense but could not pass up the chance to keep Sally quiet. He called Sally in and told her that he would give her son a break if she could sit through one church service without saying "Amen" "Praise the Lord" or any other loud expression in the church service. Sally reluctantly agreed. It was the only way to save her son. That Sunday she and a friend attended the church service. There was a visiting preacher. A real down home, from the woods Baptist Preacher who was full fire and spirit was the guest. As the preacher talked about the love of God Sally tried her best to hold her peace. She rocked to the left then to the right. The preacher talked about blessings from God and her feet began to click against the hardwood floors. The more he talked, the more excited she became. Suddenly she jumped up and started waving her arms. Her friend stood and shouted out for her "If I can't say a word, then I'll just wave my hand!" Sanctified Sally had to get it out!

As Christians, we know what it means to have something in us and the need to let it out. God has been good to us and daily we look for a chance to tell somebody about his goodness. Like the most dedicated preacher, every saint has to "get the word out!"

Exposition

This text focuses on God's instruction Ezekiel as his duties as a prophet are further explained. Israel was in Exile in Babylon. The people were scattered throughout the region and hope was lost. God used Ezekiel as an instrument to inform the nation that its exile was not permanent.

The prophet was compared to a "Watchman" or guard on the wall. His job was to give advance notice of approaching enemies and to warn the people. In this text Ezekiel is told that he is God's watchman to the people. He is to warn the people of impending danger and should they choose to ignore the warning their fate would be of their own choosing. However if they were not told their fate would be in the hands of Ezekiel.

The Watchman's responsibility was to accurately tell the people what he was told by God. The message might not be what the people wanted to hear, but he is charged to deliver the message anyway. The premium for the watchman is that he delivered the Word of God such that the people who know the will of God for their particular circumstance.

He Must Know the Word

The watchman must know the word in two respects. He must know the truths of the written word of God and he must the know Word through his own experiences in life.

The watchman must know the word through study. Every pastor spends a great deal of time studying and praying. However, in these trying times, time gets to be a premium. The costs of study materials has risen astronomically. Books that were once $5.00 are now $50.00. Seminars and classes that once were free now have fees that are staggering. Yet the mandate to the watchman is to study the word. Congregations could help the pastor by providing him with an adequate library, or assisting him in purchasing of up to date study materials and to attend seminars and works designed to strengthen his knowledge of the word.

But even there is no library or seminars or study materials, each pastor still has an individual responsibility for prayer and study. It is impossible to get the word out if one does not know the word himself.

Beyond a knowledge of the written word is the pastor should have a personal experience with the Lord. He might possess a Ph.D. from Princeton but he has to know the Lord for himself. He might have study in every pastor's seminar of the National Congress for decades, but he still has to know the Lord for himself. When it comes to personal experience, you can't get the word out from what you heard, but only from what you know yourself!

Get the Word Out

Finally brothers and sisters, while it is important that the watchman be acquainted with the Word, it is also important that he is able to get the word out!

It does not matter how long he has pastored his congregation, every Sunday morning there are hungry souls that are waiting to hear a word from the word!

Different ears and different generations have waited to receive "a word from the Lord"

Abraham took his son Isaac upon the mountain top and prepared to sacrifice him, until he heard a word from the Lord that told him to "be still" because he had a lamb in the bush. When there's a word from the Lord, you've got to get the word out!

Moses climbed Mt. Sinai and stood before the burning bush until he heard the Lord declare "tell pharaoh, the Lord God of Israel says, let my people go!" When there's a word from the Lord, you've got to get the Word Out!

For Joshua the word was to march around the Jericho seven times and to blow mightily upon great trumpets and the walls would come tumbling down. When there's a word from the Lord, you've got to get the word out!

Jeremiah complained that he was unqualified and unable to get the word out. But I hear the Lord saying "While you were still in your mother's womb I ordained you. I have this day set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant." Now Jeremiah, you have received the word, now go and get the word out!

Hezekiah waited to get the word, the word was that he would be given 15 more years of life! Now that you have 15 more years, go and get the word out!

Ezekiel, you are in a valley filled with dry bones, tell the people if they will hear the word of the Lord that they can come together again. So Ezekiel you got to get the word out!

Every Sunday morning Saint's around the world want to know, "Watchman, Is there a word from the Lord?"

Every pastor has the duty to declare to Zion, the word of the Lord!

Sometimes it is bitter. Sometimes it is sweet. However, Zion still asks the question, is there a word from the Lord?

You've got to get the word out to Zion that when they are:

-Weak, that the Lord will give them strength!

-Sad, that the Lord will give them joy!

-Falling, that the Lord will pick them up again!

-Distress, that the Lord will be a shelter for them in a time of storm!

-Crying in the middle of the night, that "weeping endures but a night, but joy comes in the morning!

-Lost and can't find their way, that the Lord will make a way out of no way!

Finally we've got to tell them that the Word, became flesh and dwelled among men. The word took on a name. They called him Jesus!

Jesus, the lily of the valley!

Jesus, the bright and morning star!

They took the word and nailed him to a cross!

They buried the word in a borrowed tomb!

But early Sunday morning the ground began to shake, the stone rolled away as all creation declared "we got to get the word out!"

"The Word is, he lives, he lives, Christ Jesus lives today. He walks with me, he talks with me along life's narrow. He lives, He lives, salvation to impart, ask me how I know he lives, he lives within my heart!"

Some Did, Some Didn't
Some Do, Some Don't

Some Will, Some Won't
A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE:"And many spread their garments in the way: and others cut down branches off the trees, and strowed them in the way. And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord:" Mark 11:8-9

Introduction

Have you ever tried to get everybody to do everything the way they should, when they should, how they should? What was you success rate? Half? A majority? No doubt you share the frustration of millions who are perturbed at their inability to get everybody to do their part, or at the very least, join in the celebration. One of the realities of life is that there will always be some who, for varied reasons, will refuse to do their part. No matter how great the idea, there will be some who will doubt its workability! No matter how loud and clear the message, there will be some that will refuse to hear it. No matter how joyous the occasion there will be some that refuse to share in it. When some do their part but others fail along the way, it usually spells difficulty up the road.

Consider Mickey and Maude the two city mice who visited in the country for a vacation. These two had a great idea. Since they had been raised in the mouse holes of a great university they explained to the country mice an elaborate plan to avoid getting being snared in trap each time they tried to get cheese. The plan was simple. Some mice would check the house to insure all humans were out of sight. Another set would keep watch and signal when the coast was clear. And finally Dopey was given the task of taking a pencil snapping the traps so Mickey and Maude could dash through them all, take the cheese and share with everyone before the humans discovered anything. As the plan unfolded Mickey and Maude made a mad dash for the cheese but were stopped abruptly by a painful snap. They were caught. As they squealed they tried to figure out what went wrong. The lights were out, the coast was clear, but Dopey didn't snap the traps. He didn't believe in the idea so he refused to do his part. As a result Mickey and Maude sat with their tails in a trap having learned an old fashioned country lesson "some do, some don't, some will and some won't."

While there are millions in the world that celebrate the life of Christ and strive to carry out his mission that are other millions that refuse to glorify him, reject his missionary call, and deny him completely.

As Christians, we should be as the "many" who threw their garments and shouted Hosanna and praise to our Lord as Jesus entered Jerusalem. We should not be frustrated or intimidated by the few who refuse to praise him with their lips or serve him with their hands. It is true today that there are those who do and those who don't, but one of these days that faithful be called to receive their reward; there will be some who will and some who won't.

Exposition

This text focuses on a familiar text which draws attention to the events surrounding Jesus' entry into Jerusalem on what has traditionally become known as Palm Sunday. Jesus had become instantly famous among the Jews because he raised Lazarus from the dead. Many who had not seen him, heard of his mighty work and came to see him out of curiosity.

As Jesus prepared to enter Jerusalem the crowd that greeted him was mixed, to say the least. There were some who believed him completely. They were convinced by the raising of Lazarus that he was the Messiah. There were others that were among the crowd, but yet they did not believe completely and fully. John 12:9 notes that many of the crowd came not to see Jesus but to see Lazarus who had been risen from the dead. They did not know what to think about Jesus fully. Some believed and followed him. Some did not. Even some of the officials believed him but they chose to keep silent for fear it would not be popular at the time.

As Jesus entered the city "many" of the people cast the coats along the way and waved palm branches, a symbolic gesture which was a part of the many ceremonies associated with the Passover. There were words of praise offered for Jesus as he road in on a donkey. There were shouts of "Hosanna" in the highest from the crowds. Many shouted and praised him. Some did, but some did not. There were those who had not quite committed to serving him and still others that did not believe it all.

The shouts of praise in the crowd have been recorded by history, but the record indicates that not everyone that was in the crowd believed the report. John 12:38-40 details how there were many who saw what Jesus was doing, heard what he said and still would not believe, prompting the recall the words of the prophet Isaiah when he asked "Who hath believed our report." There were some who did and some who didn't. Neither were all of his disciples fully loyal. Some were, at least one was not.

In all, Jesus was praised by many, but not by all, which is a reflection of his entire ministry. Thousands heard his message of love of God and service to mankind, but believed it, but there were some who didn't.

Some Do, Some Don't

Today, just as in biblical times there are many who have heard of Jesus and have observed his mighty works from a distance but hesitate to welcome him into their lives. There are three controlling factors that indicate the extent to which we "do" or we "don't" with respect to following Christ, they are: obedience, service and praise. Combined, they indicate how we stand, there is no middle ground.

OBEDIENCE: God expects each of those who follow him to obey his laws. Some do, some don't. "Honor thy father and thy mother," some do and some don't. "Thou shalt not steal," some do and some don't. "Thou shalt not kill," some do, some don't. "Thou shalt not commit adultery," some do, some don't. "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," some do, some don't. "Love the Lord your God with all your heart, and your neighbor as yourself," some do, some don't.

There are many who know the moral law of God but choose to ignore it and pretend that it does not exist. As others go about the business of obeying his laws, in essence waving palm branches and throwing their coats in the way, they stand firm and hold tight to their own desires.

SERVICE: Service is expected of every person who believes in a living God. Service to God is reflected in our willingness to serve our fellowman. The poor, the needy, the illiterate, the broken hearted and lonely, they and multitudes like them comprise our missionary field.

Service to God is often misconstrued with worship. A person who comes to Sunday School at 9:15 a.m. and stays with the church until 2 p.m., goes home rests for an hour or two and then returns for more worship until 8 or 9 p.m. has had plenty of worship, but has not done one minute of service. Peter was taken to the top of the mount of transfiguration and he enjoyed the worship so much that he wanted to stay and build three Tabernacles, but he could not because the service was not in the mountain top experience but in the valley. To serve God fully, he had to come down.

Many have allocated very little time to service, yet that is the very essence of Christianity, the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man reflected in compassionate service to humanity. It's that spirit that prompts nameless volunteers to tutor children, to minister to prisoners, to clean up litter in their neighborhoods. It's the spirit that motivates millions to build homes for the homeless, provide meals for the hungry, and give countless hours of service to girl scouts, boy scouts, senior citizens the aged and infirmed. Service is sometimes as complex as serving on volunteer board and commissions. Sometimes it is as simple as ringing the bell for the Salvation Army. Jesus put it this way in Mat 23:11 "But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant." When it comes to service, there are some who do, some who don't.

PRAISE: God expects public praise an adoration from those who follow him. There are many who are obedient to the command of God and who loyally serve humanity but neglect public praise and worship. These are those that say "I live right and I help other people, I can praise the Lord at home." Thus as the crowds shout Hosanna, they stand with their palm branches behind their backs. As the crowds shout "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" and throw their garments along the way, there are some who stand silently.

As Jesus moved through the streets of Jerusalem. The crowd shouted Hosanna in the highest! The leaders came to him complaining about the loudest of their praise and asked him to quiet them but Jesus responded: "If these hold their peace, the rocks will cry out!"

There should be something that the Lord has done for us that we can shout about!

There should be something that God has done in your life that makes you want to tell somebody!

No wonder the song writer declares "Let those who refuse to sing, who never knew our God, join in a song with sweet accord, and thus surround the throne."

Some Will and Some Won't

While there are many who did, some didn't. While some do, some don't, but brothers and sisters be reminded that one of these days the Lord will reward the faithfulness of his followers with crowns in glory. When it comes time to receive our rewards, some will and some won't!

Some will walk the streets of glory with golden crowns on their heads! Some will, some won't.

Some won't, but not because the can't, but because they won't confess the Lord Jesus with their mouths; they won't obey his commandments; they won't serve their brothers and sisters in love; they won't praise him in the congregation of the saint's.

I don't know about you but I want to be in the number of the saint's that declare "I will."

If you are in the "I will" crowd you are in good company!

Isaiah 25:1 "O LORD, thou art my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name; for thou hast done wonderful things"

Job declared "All the days of my appointed time, I will wait until my change comes!"

David said "Yea thou I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil" Psalm 23:4

I Heard a song writer declare "I will trust in the Lord, until I die"

I will because the Lord has been the:

—Fountain of my joy; bread on my table!

—Strength of my weak days; Shelter of my time of storm!

—Answer to my questions; the source of my hope!

Some will, and some won't, but I've decided that I will stay on the battlefield for my Lord!

I will keep telling the story about Jesus!

I will tell everybody that he died, and that he is alive today!

Some will, some won't but I will..

Serve the Lord until I die!

Who Shall Roll Us The Stone Away?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 3, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre? And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great." Mark 16:3-4

Introduction

Have you ever worried about something, only to find out that what you worried about really wasn't worth the while? That's when we discover that our worst worries were simply figments of our imaginations that were the embodiments of our fears and insecurities. Worry, at its best, dramatizes our anxieties, and parades our doubts about what has been, what is now, and what will be. Sometimes the things we worry about can be down right ridiculous.

Consider the man who sat on a park bench one day. Another man who sat across from him stared as he watched the strangest actions coming from the gentleman in front of him. Suddenly the first man grabbed an imaginary stirring wheel with his left hand, turned an imaginary ignition switch with his right hand and pumped an imaginary accelerator with his right foot. As he did all this he made whining sounds that a car would make that was having difficulty starting. The man did this for a few minutes and then stopped and cried. Then he would do it again. The man who sat across from him was amazed. Finally he asked "Beg pardon sir, but what seems to be the trouble?" The man looked frantic. As he continued to pat the imaginary accelerator and turn the imaginary key, making whining sounds he said: "I don't own a car, but if I did it could get me in to serious trouble. It could get me out on a country road somewhere and stop running. A robber might rob me and injure me forcing me to be hospitalized. I might become comatose. I'd lose all my savings because my insurance would be exhausted and my family would be left with all of these bills and headaches. So I'm trying to start this thing!" His friend never said a word. However a few minutes later his friend started thrusting his arms in front of him in the air, as his friend continued to try to start the imaginary car. The two of them were a sight see, so much so that a passerby stopped and asked the friend what was the problem. The friend responded: "See that man over there, I think he's crazy. He thinks his car has run out of gas in the middle of the road...and me? I don't want people to know he's crazy, so I'm pushing him off the road!" Sometimes what we worry about is just plain comical.

Our worries are the embodiments of our fears. They are the Freddie Kruegars of our dreams and Jason's of our worst nightmares. The thought of what might be and what could be is often worse than what it is. Often what we worry about proves unworthy of our concern.

As Christians we have learned not to worry, but to trust God. The great truth that the resurrection of Christ brings to mind is that the will of God cannot be short circuited. Every obstacle or stone that is put in front of his will, without a doubt will be rolled away and truth trampled with rise again! Are you worried about tomorrow? Don't worry be happy..God is still on the throne!

Exposition

This text focuses on events that took place after the crucifixion as the women came to anoint the body of Christ. According to the text, Christ had been in the grave for three days and nights as he predicted in Matthew 12:40. Early on the first day, which was Sunday morning, Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of James and Salome set out to anoint his body with spices. While enroute the thought came to them that there was a stone covering the entrance of the tomb. This was no small pebble or lightweight rock. It was a huge stone, taller than a man, and requiring the services of several men to move. It had been placed in front of the tomb to keep Christ's disciples from coming in the middle of the night, stealing the body, and claiming to the world that he had risen from dead. The intent of the stone was to keep believers away from Christ. As they walked toward the tomb they became concerned about "who shall roll for us the stone away?" Although they were concerned, the women were not dissuaded, the went forward anyway! Once there, they learned that the stone had already been rolled away. An angel, which appeared as a young man, told them that Jesus had risen and invited them to see the place where Jesus had lain.

The text notes that the women proceeded with great confidence throughout the entire experience. They never flinched or became afraid. While the men hid themselves and worried about their fate and future, they courageously went forward.

Stone Was Meant To Keep Believers From Christ

Today there are millions of people who are frustrated by the presence of stones that stand between them and their goals. Sometimes the stones are the work of enemies that seek to prevent our success in a venture or achievement of some particular goal. At other times the stones are the work of our own hands. They represent our mistakes in judgment, bad habits, and weaknesses and tend to stand between us and success. Whether they have been placed by enemies or come as the result of our own mistakes, stones are hindrances in our secular life.

There are many today who have failed to rise to their potential because of stones. Racism is a stone that has stood between success and our people for centuries. Poverty and ignorance are stones that have plagued us in the past. Today, crime, violence and the deterioration of our families are increasing the size of the stone before us. Many have given up on their personal quests to achieve because of the stones. They have concluded that "I can never achieve because I'm Black." Some think their poor backgrounds or lack of formal training have doomed them to mediocrity. They have been overwhelmed by the size of the stone and therefore have not achieved the highest aspirations. It is not the stone that has stopped them, but the fact that they have been intimidated by the stone that has stopped them.

Likewise, there are millions who want to come closer to God, but have found their way blocked by great stones, put in our way by Satan to keep us away from God. Sometimes its a weakness of the flesh like drinking or drugs, adultery, or greed. Sometimes its the presence of friends and associates who keep us from Christ as we follow their agenda. Like the women on the morning of the resurrection, some have even approached this Easter Sunday morning worried about "Who shall rolls us the stone away?"

God took Care Of the Unknown too!

The women were concerned about the stone in front of the door, because that's what they knew was there. What they didn't know is that not only was there a stone in front of the tomb, but it had been sealed and there were soldiers in front of it. The purpose of the soldiers was to keep believers away from Christ, even at the expense of their lives. The women knew about the stone, they didn't know about the soldiers! It was an unseen danger!

Today many of us worry so much about what we think are possible dangers ahead of us, without even knowing the unseen dangers that God has protected us from, just this day alone. Sometimes they are noticeable, such as the times we barely missed an accident or were spared a misfortune and called it lucky. Those are the dangers we see, but there are countless dangers that we do not see every day, and never experience them, because they have been removed by an unseen hand on our behalf.

If God is taking care of the unseen dangers that we do not know to worry about, doesn't it seem self defeating to worry about the few dangers that we know of. The same God that removes the unseen soldiers, can roll the stone away?

The Stone Is Already rolled away!

Finally, we must note that the women were worried about the stone but when they arrived, they found that the stone had already been rolled away. God had taken care of the business for them! They went in and heard an angel tell them "the one you are looking for is not here, he has risen!"

Today many of us are looking at the stones in our lives and asking "Who shall roll us away the stone?" When we should be trusting in God, claiming the victory, knowing that the stone is already gone, only our fear remains.

On this Easter Sunday morning, Someone is worried about a stone that has already been rolled away!

Worry makes us look at meager finances and ask "Who shall roll us away the stone?" and help my ends to meet. But I hear faith answer from Philippians 4:19 "But my God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in Christ Jesus."

Worry makes us look at our loneliness and ask: "Who shall roll us away the stone?" and be a constant friend; but I hear faith answer from Hebrews `13:5 "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee"

Worry makes us look at all of our troubles and ask: "Who shall roll us the stone away?" and faith replies from Romans 8:28 "And we know that all things work for good for them that love God, for them who are called according to his purpose."

The joy of the resurrection is that we don't have to worry about the stone in front of the tomb because it's already been rolled away!

The same power that rolled back the stone on Easter Sunday morning can roll back the stones in our lives. No wonder the song writer declared "King Jesus will roll our burdens away!"

When the question is asked, who shall roll the stone away?

Lazarus, who shall roll the stone away? "I was in my grave, but I heard a voice declare, Lazarus come forth!"

Blind man, who shall roll the stone away? "I was once blind, until I met a man helped me to see again!"

Woman at the well, who shall roll the stone away? "Come see a man who told me all that I've ever done!"

Today the invitation is the same, "Come see a man!"

Come see a man who was crucified for our sins!

Come see a man who was buried behind a stone of rejection

Come see a man who rose up on Sunday morning with all power in his hand!

Who can roll the stone away? Jesus!

Who can wipe the tears from our eyes?

Jesus, the lily of the valley

Jesus, the bright and morning star

Because he lives, I don't have to worry

Because he lives, I can face tomorrow

Because he lives, all fear is gone!

Who shall roll the stone away?

King Jesus!

King Jesus shall roll our burdens away!

When Opportunity Knocks!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

April 10, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you. John 20:26 "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. Rev. 3:20-21

Introduction

Have you ever been afraid to open your doors? There was a time when people were more trusting and neighbors were more trustworthy. This was a time when people slept with their front doors open and could even leave home and simply pull their doors shut without locking them. This was possible because they felt safe, secure in the knowledge that their neighbors were friends and all visitors came with good will. Today that feeling of security does not exist. The prospect of danger and hurt is real and many live in fear. Not only do we keep our doors shut, but they are usually locked, bolted and chained. Despite our fears, there are times that we lose out, if we fail to answer the door.

Consider the eccentric old man who kept his fortune in his home but worried constantly about someone taking it. He rarely left his home and as he advanced in years became so paranoid that he would not leave at all. Living on bread and water he locked himself inside of his home and refused to answer the door. Neighbors, concerned about him, started coming to check on him. Each time they would knock he would shout "go away, you can't have my fortune!" and the neighbors would leave. The women, noticing that he must be running low on food started bringing bags of canned food to his garage door. But again, as they knocked he answered "go away, you can't have my fortune!" The cans of food began to accumulate at his garage door. The grass grew in his yard, and he home was generally unkept. It became obvious the man was in trouble. The neighbors called the police. They knocked and received no answer and finally decided to break the door down. Once inside, they found the old man, dead on his bed, having starved himself to death. His mattress was stuffed with $100 bills and just a few feet from the garage door there stood hundreds of cans of food. As the coroner filled out his death certificate he wrote in the space marked "cause of death" the words "he wouldn't open the door."

Today there are many people who miss opportunities in life because they have shut themselves away from life's opportunities out of fear, doubt, or distrust. Their refusal to avail themselves of the opportunities that Lord offers them has made them virtual recluses. They cannot achieve because they will not. As Christians, we might lock the doors of our homes, but we should always keep the doors of our hearts open to receive the Word of God and to allow his spirit to move in our lives. If we miss the opportunity to share in the experience of his presence it won't be because opportunity didn't knock, but because we wouldn't answer!

Exposition

This text focuses on two closed doors and the response of Jesus to each situation.

In John, the text verse occurs a week after the resurrection. It was the Sunday following Easter. On Easter Sunday Jesus appeared to his disciples in a miraculous way. They had locked themselves behind closed doors out of fear. They were afraid that the temple guards would come and arrest them, accusing them of stealing the body of Jesus. They feared they would be crucified. They literally feared for their lives. So they shut the doors tight and would not let anyone enter or leave. Verse 19 notes that in the midst of their fear Jesus came, despite the closed doors and appeared among them physically. His announcement of faith to them was simple: "Peace be unto you!" They were afraid of the Jews, but not of Jesus and he appeared to them to calm their fears.

A week later despite having seen the risen Lord and talked with him in their midst, they still met behind closed doors. This time, Thomas who was absent from the first meeting, was with them. They may have wanted to unlock the doors but there was one among them that doubted the resurrection. He had not seen the Lord as the others had and protested that he would not believe until he saw the nail prints in Jesus' hands and could put his fingers in his wounded side. In the midst of this atmosphere of doubt, Jesus came, although the doors were locked shut, with the same announcement of faith

"Peace be unto you!" He encouraged Thomas to touch him, but it was not necessary because Thomas dropped to his knees saying "My Lord, and my God."

In each of these instances Jesus appeared to men even though the doors were locked. They were locked to keep the world out, but they wanted him present and he came. No doors or locks could stop him from coming to those who wanted his presence. However, in the Revelation text verse Jesus sent a message to the church at Laodicea and to the modern church as well. His message was that they had become wealthy, confident and secure in their own ability and were refusing to answer the call to mission. They were neither hot nor cold but lukewarm, a condition the Lord found unacceptable. They had shut the doors of their hearts, confident that they were in control. He was knocking, but they were not answering. He was knocking but they were not answering the door. Unlike the disciples who locked their doors out of fear of the world, but welcomed the presence of the Lord, these Laodiceans simply refused to answer the knocks at their door and Jesus refused to come in.

Jesus said any person that hears his knock and opens to him will share in the sweet communion of his fellowship. Those who do no share in the fellowship will miss out, only because they "wouldn't answer the door!"

When Opportunity Knocks

Opportunity knocks in two ways, materially and spiritually! The question today, is not whether opportunity will knock, but how we will respond when it knocks.

The opportunity to succeed in life knocks on the door of every life. Some respond by opening quickly and grabbing their chance to climb high. We watch them rise with wonder and amazement and how quickly they seem to have risen.

If opportunity knocks for everyone why doesn't everyone answer? If the chance to succeed in a chosen area presents itself, why doesn't everyone answer? The reasons given are various.

SOME CAN NOT HEAR OPPORTUNITY KNOCK: Many times our chance to rise and make it comes but we miss it because we couldn't hear the knock. The noise and distractions of the world have ordered our lives in a way we cannot recognize the advent of new opportunities and miss the chance to act upon them. Like many who have placed ear phones in their ears and turned the music up loud, we can't answer the door because the music of celebration makes it impossible to hear the knock. While there is nothing wrong with fellowship and festival, there are many who have missed great opportunities in life because their lives were like one continuous party. Some have been to drunk to hear the knock. Some have been to high on drugs to hear the knock. Some have been so high on themselves that they have miss the knock of opportunity in their lives.

SOME ARE AFRAID TO ANSWER THE DOOR: Some have heard the knock but are afraid to answer. These are the individuals who are presented with great opportunities but turn them down because of the fear of failure. It may be a new job, career or direction in life. It may be a new way of living that is healthier, cleaner and safer. Whatever the case there are many who reject it because they are afraid they will fail. That was the case with the prophet Isaiah who thought himself unclean and unworthy to be a prophet. Jeremiah considered himself too young and was afraid to answer his calling in life. It was only after God appeared to them in the midst of their fears that they decided to go forth and respond to the opportunity. One of the great tragedies of life is to live to achieve an old age constantly reflecting on missed opportunities wondering what would happened "if" you had answered the knock of opportunity years before. The first step to defeating failure is to try.

Jesus Knocks at the door

While opportunity knocks for us concerning secular matters, we should also remember that there is a spiritual knock at the door as well.

A famous painting shows Jesus standing outside of a home knocking on the door. On the outside the door has no knob or latch, for these are on the inside. He cannot come in unless the man on the inside unlatches the door for him to enter. In the same way, our Lord must be a welcomed presence in our lives.

While he has come as a reassuring presence to those who have retreated in fear of the world; he will not come to those who refuse to open their hearts to him.

It is necessary for us to open our hearts to him and invite him in our lives because then we acknowledge that without him we can't do anything, but with him we can do anything!

We should open our hearts to him because without God:

—Life loses its luster; Joy loses it song

—Peace loses its serenity; beauty loses its wonder —Love loses its touch, hope loses its desire and heaven loses its glory!

Without God I could do nothing, without him I surely fail, without him my life would drifting,like a ship without a sail!

When the Lord knocks how will you answer?

Ruth answered saying “your people shall be my people, and your God shall be my God.”

Isaiah answered that if the Lord needs somebody “here am I send me”

Joshua answered “as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord”

The three Hebrew Boys answered “Our God is able to deliver us!”

When there is a knock at your door it is customary to ask “Who knocks?” And if there is a familiar voice then to open the door. Today brothers and sisters “Somebody’s knocking at your door!”

Who knocks?

It’s Jesus, who builds up hopes that have been torn down in despair.

It’s Jesus, who renews the strength of those who wait on him, so they mount on wings as eagles, run and not get weary, walk and not faint!

It’s Jesus, who picks up the broken pieces of our lives and puts them back together again!

It’s Jesus, died out on Calvary and rose after three days and nights!

Oh sinner, why don’t you answer?

Somebody’s knocking at your door!

Our Daily Bread

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 17, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, It is manna: for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat." — Exodus 16:15 "We remember the fish, which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlic: But now our soul is dried away: there is nothing at all, beside this manna, before our eyes." — Numbers 11:5-6;"Give us this day our daily bread" Matthew 6:11

Introduction

Have you ever asked for something, received it, and then complained about it after you had it a while? There are many today who have asked God for special blessings, which they have received both materially and spiritually. Sometimes their requests involved necessities like food and clothing, and shelter. Sometimes they involved a few luxuries such as jewelry, gourmet foods or stylish attire. Sometimes we have asked for a mate. We are often fortunate to get answers to our prayer request, but soon after we receive our request we start to complain about it and want more or find fault in it although the blessing has neither changed or diminished in anyway. Sometimes such dissatisfaction gets us in real trouble as we reach out for more.

Consider the young fish that enjoyed the good life in the pond. There always seemed to be a sufficient supply of worms in the water for some reason and daily all he had to do to satisfy himself was to simply open his mouth and take one in. He grew big and fat over the months and his life became boring. He started to complain to the other fish in the pond about eating nothing but worms everyday. "This pond has worms everywhere, I don't know where they come from, but I get so sick and tired of worms every day" he said. He tired of the same old thing. One day as he swam around he saw a different kind of worm. It zipped through the water, standing still for a moment then, dashing from one place to another. "Now that's more like it" he thought as he dashed to catch this new delicacy. As he caught up with it he opened his mouth in a quick gulp but was horrified when he bit down on a sharp hook. In an instant he was yanked from the safety and security of the pond destined for a frying pan. When the other fish in the pond missed him and asked about his whereabouts and old barracuda summed it up this way: "There were worms everywhere ,but he got cooked because he was hooked, when he bit the wrong bait."

As Christians, we have learned to appreciate the blessings of God which we enjoy daily. His blessing bountiful and apparent. We should never take them for granted, but always be grateful for what he has given us without complaint, even as we seek new and creative ways to expand upon them, use them and multiply them. Let us be grateful for our daily bread, even if today's bread is the same as that we received yesterday. After all, some bread, is better than no bread at all.

Exposition

This text focuses on Israel as it wandered in the wilderness for 40 years after leaving slavery. Though freed from slavery the Jews quickly found that they were in the wilderness without food or water and they complained to God about their condition. God answered their prayer by causing the appearance of small wafer shape flakes that were tasty, nutritious and in great enough supply to feed nearly a 500,000 people daily. When the Israelites saw the first appearance of the flakes they called in "manna" or bread from heaven, because they didn't know where it came from. All they knew is that when they needed it, it appeared each day.

Moses was commanded by God to take a tenth of what was collected and to put it in a pot and keep it before the Lord in the Ark of the Covenant. For the entire journey that "manna" that was kept before the Lord never spoiled from the first day, even after they entered the promised land.

Since they were hungry from their journey they were excited about the "Manna" as it was called. They collected just enough to last each day because it would spoil otherwise. On the sabbath God preserved what they collected so that it would last without spoilage. In this manner, for forty years, the Israelites were fed and kept alive. Quail meat, manna and water were the essentials of the diet of two generations of Jews. Miraculously, they neither died, of suffered because of it, but in fact remained strong and grew in numbers.

However, there were some that complained that they were tired of the manna. They wanted some the fine delicacies they enjoyed in Egypt such as garlic, cucumbers, and leeks (tasty vegetables). They tired of "manna." They began to complain about their simple diet of manna and yearned for a good plate of leeks or green vegetables. They complained that all they had before them was this "manna" or bread from heaven and it was not enough.

Jesus in speaking to the New Testament believers reminded them that their prayer to God is that he would provide their daily bread according to their needs, through him, the bread of heaven. Israel had the presence of Manna daily to sustain them. Today's Christians as Christ, the living bread with them, day by day.

Today there are many who can recall times in their experience when they had less than they have today. Some scuffled to make lives out of meager existences, sustained only by the hope of a better day. There was a time when we prayed to God for the essentials: a good mule, a tractor, a roof over our heads, coal oil for the lantern, good laying hens, and plenty of chickens and hogs. A generation later we prayed for a decent car, a comfortable pair of shoes,electric lights, a good window fan, the luxury of a black and white television set, plenty of home made biscuits, fried chicken and pork chops. Today we pray for brick homes, color television sets with cable, air conditioning, canned biscuits, canned hams and Church's Fried Chicken. Whatever the nature of our blessings we must conclude like the Israelites, "It is manna!" It is a blessing from heaven! Like the Israelites, many today do not know the source of their blessings. All blessings come from God.

—If it's your Volkswagen or your Mercedes Bentz, all blessings come from God.

—Whether its "leather" or "pleather" all blessings come from God.

—Whether it's a natural or a weave, all blessings come from God.

—Whether it's an ice box or a frigidaire, a fan or an air conditioner blowing cold air ..all blessings come from God!

—Whether she's fine and stacked or built like a paper sack, all blessings come from God.

—Whether he's tall and handsome like midsummer dream or short and scrubby like a midnight scream, all blessings come from God!

Our response to our daily manna should not be grumbling and complaints about what we don't have, but a spirit of creative gratitude. What is creative gratitude? It is simply taking what God has given us and maximizing its potential. Creative gratitude is being given a bag of meal each week from God, receiving it thanks, and then applying a little imagination and creativity. Instead of saying Lord all you ever give us is a bag of meal, the person who is creatively grateful makes cornbread on Monday, Dressing on Tuesday,

Sweet bread on Wednesday, Hot water bread on Thursday and Cush (meal mix and gravy) on Friday, and bread sticks on Saturday. Our history has been one taking the blessings that God has given us and making them beautiful. If we all we have received so far is a shot gun house, a card board box and to empty coke cases then, clean your floors, put you a towel over that card board box and make you a coffee table, paint those coke cases and make you two fine stools and praise the Lord the coke cases and the card board box? The idea is not to complain about what we don't have but to give thanks and praise to God for what we do have and then creatively use what we have been given.

Israel complained that all they were getting were getting was their daily bread and that made them unhappy. They should have been happy that it continued but sought ways to creatively use it as a base from which to creatively build and expand.

Our Daily Bread

For the Israelites, their daily bread was that which appeared before them each morning as the dew vaporized. Their daily bread was manna. Our prayer to God however is that he would give us "this day our daily bread." What is our daily bread?

Our daily bread is the daily blessing of health, strength and sustenance we receive from God. Our daily bread takes in the entire scope of essentials necessary for our survival and nurture. It is our food, clothing, shelter. It is our health, and state of mind. Our daily bread is our uninhibited opportunity to grow and mature.

Most importantly our daily bread is the daily presence of the spirit of God in our lives. Jesus reminded the Jews that the Israelites had manna in the wilderness but he is the bread from heaven that refreshes every believer.

When Jesus broke the bread and blessed the cup he reminded them that they symbolized the new covenant agreed, that everyday he would be our bread and the power of his blood would forgive our sins.

John 6:51 "I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world."

As our daily bread he would be a lawyer for us in our courtroom!

As our daily bread he would be a doctor for us in our sick room

As our daily bread he would be the enabling presence that would put food on our table!

No wonder the song writer declared "Bread of Heaven, Bread of heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

It's the same bread every day, but Hebrews 13:8 reminds us that "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today and forever"

It's the same bread every day, but I heard a song writer declare: "Every day with Jesus, is sweeter than the day before, Everyday with Jesus, I love him more and more."

I'm glad that he's the same Jesus, day after day, because I've never had a:

—Cross that he couldn't help me to bear!
—Mountain that he couldn't help me to climb!
—Doubt that he couldn't help me to remove!
—Burden that he couldn't help me to carry!
—Battle that he couldn't help me to fight!
—Trial that he couldn't help me to get through!
—Test that he couldn't help me to pass!

I'm glad I get the same bread every day. I'm glad I get the same blessings every day.

I heard a song writer declare: "I get a blessing everyday!
On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday..
I get a blessing everyday!

What's In It For Me?

SCRIPTURE:"Gehazi, the servant of Elisha the man of God, said to himself, "My master was too easy on Naaman, this Aramean, by not accepting from him what he brought. As surely as the LORD lives, I will run after him and get something from him."
2 King 5:20 A greedy man stirs up dissension, but he who trusts in the LORD will prosper.Proverbs 28:25

Introduction

Have you ever known people who wanted more than they needed and sought more than they could have? Perhaps one of the most difficult values to teach young people is how to resist the temptation of greed. It is difficult because greed is all around us every day. There are more examples of greed, or conspicuous consumption as sociologists call it, than there are of frugality. Instinctively young people learn to be greedy, not by what they are taught but by what they observe around them. In the long run, greed can be costly as it exacts its toll upon individual character.

Consider the story from Negro folklore of the dog and bone. It seems that a certain dog hungered for something to eat and one day stumbled upon a sizeable bone that was fresh and juicy. The dog was excited about his good fortune. It was a great bone and would satisfy him fully because it would be enough for him to gnaw on for the day, bury and leave some for the next day. As he walked to carry the bone home he passed by a pond. The water looked fresh and he was thirsty, so he decided to stop for a drink. This particular dog had never seen his reflection before so he was very surprised when he leaned over to take a drink and saw another dog in the pond. The dog looked bigger than himself. He also seem to have a bone that was bigger than his bone. The bone in the water looked enticing and inviting. He knew he was fast enough to snatch it from the dog in the water and make a run. The more he stared at the bone in the water the more he wanted it. Finally, he couldn't stand it any longer. He dropped the bone in his mouth and snapped at the bone in the water and only received a mouth full of water. Trying to get more he lost the bone he had and he went home a hungry and disappointed dog.

Likewise, there are many people today who spend their lives trying to accumulate more, much more than is needed for a comfortable life. The quest itself has often ended in defeat, failure and sometimes death.

As Christians, we have learned not to be greedy, but to take life one day at a time, giving God thanks and praise all along the way. Our question is not "What's in it for me?" but rather "is there an opportunity in it, for me to better serve the Lord." We who are cared for daily by the providence of an all loving God, have no reason to be greedy, because we know that regardless of the circumstance, "God will take care of you."

Exposition

This text focuses on an episode in which a young assistant to the prophet Elisha became greedy and was punished for both his greed and his deceit.

Elisha had gained great respect as a man of miracles just like his predecessor Elijah. He had a young man who was his assistant who was named Gehazi. No doubt the young had traveled far and wide with Elisha and was well aware of his spiritual abilities. He also noticed that despite his abilities, Elisha would not use his talents to enrich himself, which frustrated him obviously, because some of the people Elisha performed miracles for were grateful enough to show him liberal kindnesses if he would accept them. This text shows one such occasion after Naaman, a rich and powerful man, had come to Elisha to be healed of leprosy. He received instruction from Elisha, who was so unimpressed with his wealth that he would not even come out of his house to meet him, but sent him instructions by his young assistant. The instructions were simple, bathe seven times in the river and he would be cleansed. He was reluctant, but he complied with the instruction, and Naaman was healed.

Naaman returned to Elisha bearing great gifts for the old prophet but Elisha refused them. Gehazi his servant thought Elisha was ill advised to turn down such riches. He waited until Naaman had gone aways from Elisha's home and then chased him down. He made up a story that some hill country scholars were coming to study with Elisha and on second thought some of the gifts could be used to help accommodate them. He saw the large sacks of money Naaman carried and asked for the equivalent of $2,000. Naaman was so happy about being healed that he doubled the amount. Gehazi had his servants to take the money into his house and hide it as he returned to Elisha with a straight face and tried to hide his act. The prophet however, was able to read his heart and told him of his deed. He was punished by being given Naaman's disease leprosy because of his greed and deceit.

Greed is a Temptation

One of the greatest temptations for youth today is to succumb to the desire to get more than is needed.

Many have bought into the idea that says "I have more, therefore I am more. I have less, therefore I am less." Thus begins the never ending race to get more, somehow believing that the more I get the closer I come to becoming "somebody." It begins in youth and carries over into adult life. It begins with feeling the need to own a new pair of jeans even though the 10 pair you already own are in perfectly good shape. It's feeling the need to have your 30th pair of earrings. It's having blouses that haven't been worn in months, but constantly buying new ones. It's closets full of handbags and shoes. Its owning enough jewelry to open a jewelry store. Its owning enough fairly new and unused items to run a one family flea market.

What is greed? By definition greed is an excessive desire to have more than one needs or deserves. It is not being greedy to desire a pair of shoes. It may be greedy to desire a different pair of shoes for every day of the week. It is not greedy to want a full plate of food. It may be greedy to walk through the buffet and get more food than you can possibly eat, just because it is there. It is not greedy to desire a girl friend. It may be greedy to desire everyone else's girl friends too. Greed is the desire to be excessive. There are other words we use to describe greed as well: gluttonous, piggish, voracious, and covetous. Greed prompts every person to consider every circumstance from the standpoint of "what's in it for me?" The desire to have more, and get more becomes a motivating factor that guides our actions.

The bible is clear about greed. In no uncertain terms the bible characterizes greed as a sin against God. It is included in the 10 commandments (Exodus 20:17)"Thou shalt not covet" which means we should not desire anything that is beyond what is needed for our survival, especially those things that belong to others. Prov 15:27 "A greedy man brings trouble to his family, but he who hates bribes will live." Prov 28:25 A greedy man stirs up dissension, but he who trusts in the LORD will prosper. Greed is so distasteful to God that Christians are warned that church members who profess Christ but are still greedy are to be avoided. We are not even to sit down and eat with a "greedy" so-called Christian. (1 Cor 5:11 But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one no not to eat.) Jesus warned about greed. He told about the man who had filled his barn and was prosperous but decided to tear down his barn to build a bigger barn and get more. Paul warned Christians to beware of greed because it will cause them to leave the faith.

1 Tim 6:10 "For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows."

Teaching young people against the evils of greed is awkward for some parents who give in to the whimpers of their children who want more, more and more. These are clear examples of the folk sayings "Your eyes are bigger than your stomach" and "Your reach exceeds your grasp." It is the duty of every parent to demonstrate moderation in their homes and to insist upon it, despite the wails and howls of your children that they will be outcasts if they don't have more of everything. Teaching children against greed is important because they will become adults who approach life with that question "what's in it for me?" instead of "In what ways can I help?" These children become adults, like many of us, with over charged credit cards. They become adults who take bribes, cheat, steal and swindle, in an effort to get more, more and more.

What's In It for me

The late John F. Kennedy energized the youth of his generation when he made a great challenge to younger generation by saying "ask not what my country can do for me, but what can I do for my country." It was a challenge to rise above greed and personal gain to sacrificial service to help others. Millions of young people of all races rallied to his call joining the peace corps and other volunteer organizations to give of themselves, freely, without thought of personal gain. They served not because they expected to gain, but because they wanted to help others.

That, brothers and sisters, is the Christian ideal, to be of service to others without thought of gain for oneself. Those who have conquered greed usually find life more agreeable. They have more money, not because they make more, but because they throw away less. They enjoy more because they have what they want and what they need. Those who have conquered greed usually find that in most cases their wants are their needs.

Those who serve the Lord however, do not serve in vain. There is something in it for them. John said it clearly "he that overcometh shall inherit all things."

Those who give sacrificial service to the Lord and work in the vineyard are expecting the fulfillment of the promise that Jesus made when he said "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am ye may be also."

Those who labor for the Lord don't ask that question when they serve in the community of men because it has already been answered by he who sits high. What's in it for me is the promise of eternal life.

A child of God does not have to be greedy, because he already knows that whatever he needs the Lord will provide. He doesn't have to be greedy because if he's:

—Hungry, the Lord will put food on his table

—Naked, the Lord will put clothes on his back

There is something in it for me, but the world can't give it to me. What's in it for me, can only come for the Lord.

The world gives:

-Sorrow, but the Lord gives joy; Sadness but the Lord gives gladness;

—Burdens, but the Lord gives blessing; Despair, but the Lord gives hope

What's in it for me is a home over yonder; where the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest!

No wonder the song writer declared: "I got a new home over in glory and its mine, mine!"

I know its there because I heard Jesus say "In my father's house are many mansions!"

Come and go with me to my father's house!

To my father's house!

To my father's house!

In Memory of Her...

SCRIPTURE: "I tell you the truth, wherever this gospel is preached throughout the world, what she has done will also be told, in memory of her." Matthew 26:13

Introduction

Have you ever had a pleasant experience that ended quicker than you desired? It may have been a great vacation, an exciting accomplish ment, or a moment in the spotlight of glory. Perhaps the experience involved a relationship with a favorite person or loved one. When such experiences all to quickly come to an end we are saddened because we want them to last forever. While the experience itself is often short lived, the memory lasts a life time. When the sun sets on a bright and beautiful sunny day, there is for a moment, in the horizon, an afterglow that signifies this was a good day. The sunset was final, but the afterglow lingered long after. It is afterglow, or the memories that sustain us and motivate us as time passes.

Consider the young girl who spent a romantic day with the man of her dreams sitting in a flower garden next to the sea. They shared their thoughts, hopes and their dreams as they smelled the fresh flowers and watched the beauty of the sea. As they talked, occasionally she would pick a flower and hold it in her hand, smell and embrace it she listened and shared the meditations of her heart. It was a grand experience. She felt closer to the man of her dreams. Indeed she felt as if they were one. As the day ended she reluctantly went home, but took her flower and closed it in the pages of her bible. She never saw him again, he was the victim of a fatal accident. After several weeks had passed she sat on her porch and opened her bible to read and her hands fell upon the section where she had placed the flower. A smile came to her face, and she seemed to drift to a distant time as she read the words "I am the rose of sharon, and the lily of the valleys" (Song 2:1). For years, she did the same thing: look at the flower read the verse and smile.

Puzzled as to why she always turned to that same verse and smiled as she stared at the dried and crumpled flower on its pages, her friend finally decided to ask for an explanation. She looked down at the flower and said "Though its petals are dried and lifeless, the moment it recalls remains fresh and full of life. Like the pages of God's word fold neatly around this flower, I am comforted to know that his soul is cuddled safely in God's hand. I smile because I know that though he's gone, he lives."

As Christians, we are comforted in times of sadness and grief by the full knowledge that we and our loved ones are eternally with us as we recall their words and deeds and the great experiences of their lives. Our greatest joy comes when we remember that because Christ lives, they live ..and that is a comforting thought!

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he talked to his disciples about the lasting effects of a life of dedicated service. It is the first of two biblical accounts of the women pouring anointing oil on Jesus to signify their faith in him. In Luke 7:37 Jesus was eating at the home of a Pharisee and a woman described as a sinner came and began anointing his feet and wiping them dry with her hair. In this instance Jesus was criticized for allowing a sinful woman to approach him in such a manner. Her act was not further acknowledged. It is not the same instance as the anointing that is referred to in this text, although both involved an anointing with oil and an alabaster box of oil.

The occasion of the text is a supper at the house of Simon the Leper, just days before Jesus was to be crucified. The disciples had assembled themselves with Jesus to eat and fellowship. As they ate a woman called "Mary of Bethany" came into the room with an alabaster box or jar filled with expensive oils and she began to anoint the head of Jesus as they talked. The disciples instantly recognized the value of the oils and were disturbed that the oils were "wasted" on anointing Jesus' head when they could have been sold and used to expand their work, helping the poor, and supporting their ministry. Jesus immediately rebuked them for troubling the woman. He characterized her act as a "good work" that was done "for him." Any such work was never a waste of time, resources or energy.

Jesus, while referring to his own death, spoke the woman's eulogy, long before her death. It was a unique and special pronouncement of her epitaph, regardless to how it may have been forming before she entered the room. He said her act of anointing him was a symbol of what was to be done in just a few days. She was, in essence, rehearsing the anointing of his body for burial. In just a few days women did actually come to the tomb bearing fine spices and oils to anoint his body. They were the first to know that he had risen. He announced how she would be remembered: "..wherever this gospel is preached in the whole world, what this woman has done will also be told, in memory of her." She would be remembered because of good works performed for and in the name of the Lord. It was a fitting epitaph for a woman who placed her faith completely in his hands.

Living Your Eulogy

Jesus said Mary of Bethany would be remembered because of the good works she performed. Each time accounts of the gospel are told, her works would serve as a living memorial to her life, for her work would be remembered as well.

Many today worry about how they will be remembered. They ponder what will be said at their own funeral and how they will be eulogized. Some have even ventured to leave instructions as to the events that will take place on that day and have written their own eulogies in attempt to influence how they will be remembered. However, the truth is..”we live our eulogy” every day. News gathering agencies can attest to this fact. Some have entire departments whose job is to write, in advance, the obituaries of great and famous people in preparation for any sudden or catastrophic death. At the death of a president or some prominent personality, their life story is instantly told, complete with video clips and photographs covering decades of public life. Each new deed is simply added to the collection. It will end with one final line..the date of death. Eulogies are lived day by day.

Like Mary of Bethany, those who expect to be remembered favorably by our Lord are those who first acknowledge him as their personal savior and then perform good works in his name. For Mary the work she is remembered for, even today, was nothing earth shattering. It was no great philosophical achievement. It was not a great conquest. It was a simple act, a small thing, but never-the-less important. Those who are remembered today are remembered for their good works and acts of kindness to others. Within the family circle, in the church, in the community, its the little things that many people remember. Sometimes the acts of kindness performed are considered wastes of time by others who could envision more practical applications of both time and resources. Why bring food to a hungry person..sell it to them and make money! Why, sit with a sick or injured person without charge when this could be a fine source of income? Why volunteer time to help others when the time could be used to improve our own impoverished state? These are the questions the world asks of those who commit themselves to the "good work" that Christ speaks of in this text. Instead of praise, those who are perform the "good work" are usually characterized as "fools" because of the "good work." However, it is the very good works "that we perform" that will form the basis for our own, praise worthy, record of service that will recorded in the annals of glory.

Good Works are expected of every Christian because the glorify the father. Jesus said in Matthew 5:16 "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." In Acts 9:36 Tabitha was praised among believers for her "good works." All she did was to sit in her home and to make coats for and clothing items for needy people, but it was her good work. When she died Peter was called and after prayer God restored her life again, because of her "good work." Ephesians 2:10 reminds us that we are created with one purpose and that is to perform "good works." Not necessarily great works, but good works. Paul, in 1 Timothy 5:10 reminded him that the Sainted widows of the church must first be considered for their "good works" before anything else. In Titus 2:7 we are encouraged to live a life that demonstrates a pattern of good works. Without a doubt good works are expected of every Christian, and it is those good works that make up the lines of our eulogy which we write every day of our lives.

Rest from Our Works

Those who work in the vineyard of faith can also expect a peaceful rest from their works and a blessing from God. Revelation 14:13 says "And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

There is a reward for the faithful. Paul writing to Timothy looked back on his life of good works and concluded:"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day:.." 2 Timothy 4:7-8a

For those who labor in the vineyard, there is a crown!

For those who live the Christian life in word and in deed, there is a crown!

Today we eulogize a friend that has lived an enviable life, full of good works: small kinds acts to her family, church and friends.

We offer a eulogy that has already been given by our Lord to any saint who lives a life of service. The works themselves give the testimony.

The works testify..she visited the sick!

The works testify..she was a friend to the poor!

The works testify..she gave of herself to help others!

The works testify..she was a witness to the power of almighty God.

Maybe that's what the song writer had in mind when the wrote: May the work I've done, speak for me. When I'm resting in my grave, there is nothing that can be said, may the work I've done speak for me. The work I've done it seems so small. Sometimes it seems like nothing at all.

But when I stand before my God, I want to hear him say well done,

... may the work I've done speak for me."

A few days ago Ozella Strawder went home to rest from her her. The words of Jesus ring in our ears: "What this woman has done will be told, in memory of her."

When He Comes In

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 27, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"And the lord said unto the servant, Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled." Luke 14:23 "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in." Psalm 24:9

Introduction

The church has an open door policy! It is open to any and all who will come! Through its doors come people from all walks of life. The teacher, the preacher, doctor, lawyer and the home decorator, all walk through its doors. Those who stand at the door and greet the masses of men and women who come to assemble before God have an awesome task because they are often the first personalities that are encountered along the way. They know the importance of every man, woman and child that walks through the church's doors and it is evident in their warm smiles, firm handshakes and expressions of cordiality. Every person that comes to a worship service measures high in the estimate of our Lord, for each is a soul seeking to be fed with bread from heaven.

Consider the young usher who was new to his church usher board. The chief usher gave him instructions to reserve the first seats in the auditorium for the important guests who were going to arrive and to escort all others to secondary seats. The young usher was eager to carry out his task and to carry it out to the letter. As he stood at the door a man the community called "Silly Willy" came to the front door. The young usher smiled when he saw him and immediately carried "Silly Willy" to one of the first seats. A while later another man who wore a tattered coat and crumpled hat came through the door; it was "Begging Bob." A smile came to the young usher's face and he immediately carried "Begging Bob" to one of the first seats. Finally "Praying Penny" arrived with her prayer book under her arm, much to the disgust of many of the members who thought she was quiet uncultured to go around town praying for complete strangers in the oddest places. The young usher carried her to a first seat as well. When the chief usher returned he was upset that the best seats in the service had been given to "Silly Willy", "Begging Bob" and "Praying Penny." He pulled the young usher aside and asked him why he chose to do such a thing. The young usher said "You told me to save the first seats for important people. That's what I did. When my grandpa was sick, Mr. Willy quit his job to sit with until he was well. Not only my grandpa but others too. Folks called him silly. When I was in college, I ran out of money, I didn't know it but Mr. Bob went from house to begging money to help me with my tuition. No for me only, but for others too. Folks call him a begger. I was sitting on the bus one day feeling all by myself when Miss Penny sat next to me and prayed for me even though people stared. To me these ARE important people. Doesn't the bible say he that is great among let him be your servant?" At that the chief usher was speechless. He put out three additional chairs and that night, sitting besides the governor, the mayor and council president were "Mr. Willy, Mr. Bob and Miss Penny" servants in the kingdom of God.

As Christians we know that everyone who enters a church building is special in the sight of God. There are no little people or important people, for all share equally in the grace of our Lord. While we never know who may walk in our doors, we do know that every soul we see, is a child of the King.

Exposition

This text focuses on a parable in which Jesus taught that the kingdom of God is available to men and women of all walks of life.

This text is one of three of teachings in chapter 14 about the kinds of people who are invited to the kingdom of God and how they are to be treated. He had been invited to the home of one of the rulers of the Pharisees for dinner on the Sabbath. However, he noticed how they struggled among them for the finest and most important seats at the table. Therefore in verse 8 he gave the first teaching in which he said persons invited to a feast should not seek the seats of importance but wait to be seated. "When ye are invited go and sit down in the lowest place." Doing so, he said, would save the embarrassment of having to move when someone of more importance enters. It is better to be asked up than to be asked down. In verse 12 he makes a second point by noting that those who plan banquets usually have an invited guests list, including some and excluding others. However, he said they should invite even those people who are not favored guests who cannot repay the kindness with reciprocal banquet.

At verse 16 he told a parable that indicated the nature of the people who are invited into the kingdom of God. A certain man gave a supper and invited many people, who all, for one reason or the other began to make excuses for not attending. One said he had just bought a piece of ground and had to go see it. Another said he had just bought five yoke of oxen and he had to test them. Another said he was a newlywed and could not come. Angered at their excuses the master sent out word for his servant to bring in the poor, maimed, lame and the blind. When that was not enough the master then ordered that he go into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in, "that my house may be filled."

Initially the text shows how the opportunity to posses the Kingdom of God was initially presented to the Jews alone. However, the Jews rejected its message and it was thereby taken to the entire gentile world, to anyone who would hear. Secondly, it showed the importance of every person who comes to the banquet table of the Savior. Whether blind, lame, maim, Jew or Gentile, each is important and should be treated as such because they have a special invitation from the master.

We Never know Who's Coming In

The position of usher in the church is one of vital importance, because those who are greeted are first met by the ushers. Each usher should remember that everyone who walks in the doors of the church has an open invitation to worship and has a right to be present, regardless of personal opinions. Because of the universal nature of the people who attend any given worship service, ushers "never know who's coming in the door." The guests could range from the homeless man on the street to the richest woman of the city. The troubled hooker on the street who sees the sign of the cross and enters or the famous evangelist who comes to preach are all welcome in the house of God. Ushers never know who's coming in the door, therefore it behooves them to remember that everyone is welcome in the house of God.

Since ushers don't know who may walk in, it is best that they treat everyone royally by being a positive presence in the service. Sometimes ushers can repel visitors by rude and distasteful remarks that were meant in good faith but unpolished. Dr. Leslie Parrot author of the "Usher's Manual" suggests that ushers should accentuate the positives by saying "we will seat you in a moment" rather than "you can't go in now." In another example he noted that saying "Since the service has started we have a place for you near the back" is better than saying "you're late, you'll have to sit in the back."

Since first time visitors may not know the church or its members, even the tone of the ushers voice can make all the difference in the world in whether or not a person feels welcome or rejected.

Tone of voice can make a great difference. Consider the poor farmer who could neither read or write who received a letter from his son in college. He went to a friend who was disturbed at being interrupted and asked him to read the letter to him. The friend, noticeably angry, read the letter in a rough crude voice "Dear Dad, I am in college I need some help. Some money please." The father heard the rough sound of his friend's voice and said "I'm not giving him anything if he gon' talk to me in that tone of voice." So he took the letter to another friend and told him about the rude way his son talked to him.

This friend was very soft spoken and patient when she read the letter it had a very pleasing sound, almost pleading. After the father heard the second reading he responded "That's better, I believe I'll help now." Tone of voice can make all of the difference in the world. Usher's never know who is coming in the door, therefore they should speak to everyone in a pleasant tone of voice.

The usher is a doorkeeper, but more than that, the usher is a child of God. His love should beam from them each and every day.

Who's Coming In?

After the usher has greeted and seated the guests, its important that he or she remember that not only is an usher a "greeter, meeter and seater", but the usher is also a "singer, prayer, and shouter." Just like those who come in the door come to worship the king, so does the usher. No usher should get so busy that they themselves never hear the gospel preached or the Lord's praises sung by the choir.

While the usher never knows who may come in the front door, he or she does know who will be in the midst, if worshipers are in the right spirit. In that respect, both the usher and the worshiper have one thing in common, they have both come to meet the king.

So every usher should remember the words of Psalm 95:2 "Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms."

You may be an usher but that doesn't mean you can't pray "Our father which are in heaven"

You may be an usher but that doesn't mean you can't sing "Father I stretch my hands to thee."

You may be an usher but that doesn't mean that you can't lift your voice and proclaim "I know the Lord will answer prayer for I've tried him for myself"

While it's good for us to keep our eyes on the door and watch who's coming in, we need to keep our spirit focused on the altar waiting "for the Lord to come in."

I know he will come in because Jesus said in Mat 18:20 "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Rev 3:20 he said "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

I don't know about you, but I've found out that powerful things happen in the life of a church "when he comes in." When he comes in:

—Sons and daughters start to prophesy; old men dream dreams; young men see new visions

When he comes in, he will:

—Comfort us in our sorrow; Assure us in our difficulties

—Strengthen us in our weakness; Encourage us in our trials

—Direct us in our decisions; Help us in our duties

—Anoint us in our ministries; defend us in our battles

I heard David declare:"Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in."

Who is the king of glory? The Lord Strong and Mighty!

Who is the king of glory? The Lord mighty in battle!

We never know who comes in because the world wants to know about Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and rose after three days!

Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith!

Open the door of your heart..and he will come in!

A Good Man's Steps

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 30, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord and he delights in his way." Psalm 37:23

Introduction

Have you ever followed in someone's footsteps? Did they leave a clear and visible trail? As you attempted to follow them did their steps always lead you to your desired destination? Most people have been mentored by someone who was older, wiser and more experienced. Whether it was a teacher, preacher, parent or neighbor, almost everyone has had someone to act as a role model for them. There is no better role model for a man than the life lived by a good father. His trail may not have taken the same direction in terms of careers and aspirations, but a man who studies the steps of a good father's trail will most likely find happiness.

Consider the boy whose father died before he grew to knew him. All his life he had heard accounts of the noble life his father led and he wished that he could have known him. One night he dreamed that a pair of magic shoes was given to him. These shoes would allow him to walk in his father's footsteps and show him the course of his father's life. The boy put on the shoes and suddenly began to walk in an endless circle, round and round at a dizzying pace. Quickly the boy took off the shoes in frustration until he heard a voice say "to know the trail, you must walk in the shoes." Trying the shoes again the boy found himself walking to the left and to right, bumping into walls until suddenly he dropped to his knees. He could not get up no matter how hard he tried. A second time, he took off the shoes until the voice spoke again "to know the trail, you must walk in the shoes." In his third try he found the shoes walked in a straight steady path, there were no circles or meanderings to the left or right. The direction was clear. After he walked for a while the shoes stopped and began to sparkle on his feet. The voice said "Your father's path was confused at one time. He moved with indecision and a made a few mistakes, until he met the Lord. After then, his path was clear and his way straight. If you desire a quest in life, no matter what direction you take, you must remember his trail, and walk in his shoes."

As Christians, we understand the value of good role models. They live lives before us that epitomize our quest. While we pattern after them and revere their lives, we always remember that those whose steps we follow at times may wander but we remain focused on Jesus completely, and take no chance of getting lost.

Exposition

This text focuses on David at a point when he is reflecting on his life's trail, reviewing his steps, and assessing the accuracy of his course.

David, described as a man after God's own heart, led a life whose trail took him in many directions. As a shepherd boy he learned to keep his father's flock, displaying courage as he fought off wild animals in its defense. He displayed courage as he defeated the giant Goliath and became an instant celebrity in the land. As a young adult his life took another course when he became an innocent fugitive from the rage of King Saul. Hiding in the hills and moving from place to place, he was hunted as a criminal, without having committed a crime. As a young man, he found himself anointed three times to serve as king: once by God, once by Judah and another by Israel. It was a new step, serving as king of the land he had worked as a shepherd. He was administering rule over the hills which had become his refuge, but he rose to meet that challenge as well. He meandered and walked a crooked path for a dark period in his life. He took another man's wife and killed her husband in an attempt to hide his sin.

He was depressed, sick in his soul and afflicted with venereal disease in punishment for his deeds and his soul cried out "create in me oh Lord a clean heart and renew in me a right spirit." Now, in his old age, after reigning as king of Israel for 40 years, David leaves his spiritual memoirs for his son Solomon who would follow him as king and to all others who would read them. His word of wisdom to those that followed him was: "those who are characterized as "good" are those who allow God to establish the pace of their journey;" which is the meaning of this text verse.

It was not the journey itself that David focused upon, because for each person may take a different direction, but the pace of the journey made the difference. Ordered steps, are those that have been established by God.

The man whose steps are ordered is that man who tries to live his life in line with the will of God. Regardless of his profession or direction in life, David's words suggest that God delights in the way of those whose steps are governed by his law.

He added that such a pace may appear without its benefits. It may appear unprofitable. It may appear that others succeed at a faster pace and rise higher when they choose to ignore the life of principle and discipline. He warned in verse one of the same chapter to: "Fret not thyself because of evildoers nor be envious of the workers of iniquity, for they shall soon be cut down like the grass."

He noted that those who choose to walk in the path of the Lord need not fear material loss because of the choice. David concluded in verse 25: "I have been young, and now I'm old, but I have never seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed, begging for bread." It was a word of advice to a son that would follow. It was a word of wisdom from one who had lived a full life, giving advice to others who must pick up the trail..

Steps in Life

Why is it so important to have our steps ordered by God? Why would David suggest that the only man that can be called "good" is one whose steps are established and maintained by the power of God himself? Perhaps it is because without God's guidance, we are likely to follow the standard patterns of steps that men follow today. Without the intervention of God, the steps men have taken many directions which include:

BABY STEPS: There are many men today, who despite their adulthood still approach life with baby steps, afraid if they step out on their own they may fail in some small way. They are unsure of themselves and they move through life never going far because they approach life with baby steps. These are men who never achieve their potential or rise to lofty heights. They are deigned to mediocrity and a life of baby steps.

SIDE STEPS: Those who side step are those who attempt to avoid life's challenges. The road to success is difficult and filled obstructions. Many have found it easier to simply side step the challenges and ignore them in hopes that they will go away.

MISSTEPS: Missteps are those instances in life where we attempted to make a step and stumbled. Our missteps are our mistakes, errors in judgment and miscalculations. They are the children we abandoned, jobs we forfeited and the money and resources that we recklessly threw away.

Our missteps may also include the opportunities we missed, the education we lost, the goal we abandoned and the love we allowed to sour. Every life has a few missteps.

FANCY STEPS: There are many who try to make it through life with a variety of fancy steps that border on the unethical and illegal. There are TWO STEPPERS: Those who play both ends against the middle, lead double lives to the hurt and injury of others; SHUFFLERS, those who attempt to achieve by the quick con, cheating others with smooth talk and the ability to shuffle in and shuffle out; MOONWALKERS, Who appear to be walking forward but are actually going backward. They dress good, look good, and drive fine cars, without an education, or a legitimate source of income come. Unfortunately, there are too many among us who live their lives dependent on fancy steps.

HOPS AND SKIPS: These are they who try to make it through life by taking short cuts. They sacrifice quality for quantity. They substitute symbol for substance. They hop or skip around the meal to get to the dessert. They want material success, but they skip the idea of employment. They want a child, they skip the idea of marriage and hop into bed. Many skip school daily in hopes of hopping a ride on a fast train that will carry them no where.

With all of these possibilities, no wonder it is important to have our steps ordered by the Lord.

A Good Man's Steps

Finally, brothers and sisters, it is important that we consider a good man's steps. These are steps that are ordered by God. They are not fancy shuffles, moonwalks, hops, skips, sidesteps and fearful baby steps. They are the ordered strides of a man who is confident that no matter what life brings, God will make a way.

The good man's steps are measured. They are steps rooted in confidence that each step made in the spirit of truth will draw closer the goal. Men who measure their steps are not in a hurry, but are willing to wait for God to provide the opportunity at the right moment and at the right time. The man whose life is measured knows the importance of prayer and devotion to God. Through prayer he can:

—Reach out for the intangible; look up for the invisible

—Listen for the inaudible; Long for the incomparable

—Believe in the incredible; Wait for the inevitable

A Man who lives a life with ordered steps lives a life of faith as well. His faith prompts him to:

—Follow where God leads him; Listen when God speaks to him —Claim what God promises him; Receive what God gives him.

Such a man knows that prayer is the key to the kingdom but faith unlocks the door. The trail of men who have been men of prayer and faith shows places where they have taken GIANT STEPS. Those were great leaps of faith and trust in the Lord.

Giant steps are made by those who begin to fight the unbeatable foe, climb the unscalable mountain, and achieve the impossible dream.

Those who make giant steps do so because they have a great confidence in themselves and in God. They are willing to make giant moves because no matter how big the quest they know there is "someone greater" who can carry the load.

A good man doesn't worry as he walks through the wilderness of hard times, because he knows the Lord will make a way somehow!

A good man doesn't worry whether his steps take him from the mountain peak or to the raging sea, because he knows that come what may from day to day "my heavenly father watches over me!"

A good man doesn't worry when his steps lead him through the valley of the shadow of death, "for thou art with me."

A good man doesn't worry when it comes time to step out of this life's shoes. He just keeps singing "I got shoes, you got shoes, all of God's chillun' got shoes, When I get to heaven gon' put on my shoes and ..

Walk!

Walk!

Walk all over God's heaven!

For eighty seven years Eulos Dyer, Sr. blazed a trail. He was a good man who walked with ordered steps. If you would share the path he blazed, you must walk in his shoes!

Beauty Is As Beauty Does

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 1, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"But the Lord said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." 1 Samuel 16:7

Introduction

Have you ever seen what appeared to be beautiful people, only to find out that despite their appearance, they were just the opposite? Ideally, the way we appear on the outside should suggest what's on the inside, but that is not always case. While there are many who take meticulous care of their outer appearance they neglect the inner qualities that contribute to real beauty. The world is rarely interested in inner beauty, only what it sees. Often the substance of spirit is sacrificed for the symbolism of the superficial.

Consider the old man who walked through the park one evening and came upon a frog. The old man who moved very slowly was startled a bit because the frog began to talk. "If you pick me up and kiss me, I'll make your every dream come true." The old man was amazed, he stopped and sat on a park bench and watched as the little frog jumped upon his lap and continued to talk. "I am a beautiful princess and I have been cursed to remain as this ugly frog until someone recognizes me for who I am." The old man turned his head to the side and again stared in amazement. "If you pick me up and kiss me, I can make you happier than you ever dreamed." The old man remarked "I'm suppose to believe you are a beautiful princess." The frog chirped "that's right, just pick me up and kiss me." The old man leaned over picked up the frog, stuck it in his pocket and started walking out of the park. The frog yelled "you picked me up, but aren't you going to kiss me? Don't you want a beautiful princess that can make you happier than you ever dreamed?" The old man answered "At my age, despite your beauty, nothing can make me happier than owning the world's only talking frog!" So many people today are only interested in the outside, they are not interested in the inside at all.

The care of the outer appearance is the profession of cosmetologists, plastic surgeons, fashion designers and others who specialize in making men and women look their best. However, even the best beauticians are powerless to change those qualities of character and personality that make one beautiful on the inside. That requires the master's touch.

As Christians we praise God daily for helping us to appreciate the value of inner beauty that has come from being blessed spiritually with a saved soul and a loving heart.

Exposition

This text focuses on God's selection of David to serve as the second king of Israel. It illustrates graphically, the idea that God judges beauty of character, rather than beauty of appearance.

Israel had a failed experience with King Saul, its first king. According to 1 Samuel 9:2, Saul was a good looking man on the outside. He was a "choice" man, suggesting that he was among the cream of the crop of the eligible men of his generation. Not only was he among the "choice" men, he was also a "handsome" good looking man. He was easy to look upon. Thirdly, he was a young man full of strength, energy and stamina. He was the best looking man in all of Israel. In terms of physical appearance, he was head and shoulders above the rest. The selection of Saul was not accidental. The people clamored for a king and rejected God's leadership through the religious leaders. They wanted a hero king that would lead them like other nations. God decided to give the people what they wanted. They were given a leader who had all the outward appearances of attractiveness and charisma that pleased the crowds. The people were happy. Soon however, they discovered that what Saul had on the outside did not match what he had on the inside. First they found that despite his manly physique, that he was a coward before the dreaded Goliath. As Goliath raged to fight just one Israelite and save the lives of others, Saul sent a young shepherd boy to fight, rather than go himself. Later, they found that he possessed a jealous spirit, a vengeful and violent personality and an uncontrollable anger. All of these combined to make Saul, despite his outward beauty, an ugly man in the sight of God, which resulted in his loss of the kingdom and fall from grace.

This text introduces the next king, David who was selected, not because of the strength of his physical appearance but because of his strength of Character. Samuel went to the home of Jesse and without announcing his purpose reviewed all of his sons. First to come before him was Eliab who appealed to Samuel because of stunning physical presence (1 Samuel 16:7). God warned Samuel not to concern himself with the outer looks, but to be guided by the character. Other sons came: Abinadab, Shammah and four others. One son did not come, because he did not have the look of a king. He was a shepherd boy who loved to play the harp, write psalms and sing. In the eyes of his family, he certainly couldn't rank as leadership tender. However, when Samuel saw him, bright eyed, with sun tanned rough skin (v12) the Lord said "arise, anoint him, for this is the one." While he was nice looking and healthy, David was selected to serve as king of Israel because of his character rather than his outward appearance. The beauty of his heart began to show itself soon. In the face of danger, he displayed courage and killed Goliath. When persecuted by Saul, he demonstrated a capacity to love his enemies. When he had fallen in sin, he demonstrated a repentant spirit. He was truly a beautiful person.

Beautiful People

The word cosmetology comes from the Greek Word "Kosmos" which means adorning or order. Cometologists are people who specialize in reordering appearances to promote attractiveness. Generally they focus on the skin, hair and nails. Their wares include: conditioners, permanent waves, shampoos, sprays, straighteners and cuts, makeup blushes, face powder, lipstick, rouge, eyeliners shadow, mascara, nail polish and a variety of other services. All all designed to promote attractiveness. However, while the assistance of a good cosmetologist can help increase attractiveness, there is nothing your beautician can do after someone meets you and finds out that the pages of the book are not equal to the cover.

Beauty must come from the inside.

Those who have been gifted with good looks, must be extremely careful, both males and females. There are many who take advantage of good looking people and want to use them for their own purposes. There was a time when only men were predators, sizing up women from the head to the toe, looking for what Lionel Richie and the Commodores called a "Brick House." Today, however even women are among the predators as they search high and low looking for the perfect "Hunk." Those who are blessed with good looks must be extremely careful. In scripture, Joseph was a good looking man who was hired to work in the home of Potiphar. While the boss was gone his wife was awed by his good looks and chased him down. She set a trap for him and when he refused sex she went to her husband and charged him with rape in her anger. Proverbs 11:22 says giving a woman good looks without self control is like putting a gold ring in hogs nose. It is wasted. Good looking people must exercise restraint because the world is filled with those who could care less about the heart, but only think of "Knocking the Boots" as the "Bump and Grind."

Absalom was a good looking man, but was evil on the inside. Jezebel was a beautiful woman but is known as one of the world's ugliest women because of her evil ways.

What makes beautiful people? Galatians 5:22 holds the key. Beautiful people are those who demonstrate the fruit of the spirit: "love, joy, peace, longsuffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self control." When you find a person who has these virtues all in the same package, regardless to what the outside looks like, you have a beautiful person.

Christian Beauticians, barbers and others who specialize in making people physically attractive have a great opportunity to witness for the Lord in the most fertile evangelism field in the world: the barber shop and the beauty shop. People come to both expecting to listen to something. They usually hear the latest gossip, but wouldn't it be enriching if between the wash and the dry, Christian beauticians found ways to suggest peace, joy, self control, and kindness, to their customers. What about the patrons? Wouldn't the beauty shop or barber shop be a good place to witness and help a person leave more attractive inside as well as the outside?

The Master's Touch

There are some beauticians and barbers who are so good at what they do, that when people leave their shops they look like brand new people. When a cosmetologist can take a hard luck case and turn her into a beauty queen, it's obvious that he or she has that special touch that makes the difference. It's the master's touch.

Today friends I want to introduce you to the world's greatest cosmetologist, who has the master's touch. He is a cosmetologist because the "Kosmos" is the world and setting the world and its people in order is his business. He specializes in hard luck cases. He specializes in taking that which is:

—Ugly and making it beautiful; Deplorable and making it adorable; Weak and making it strong; failing and make it victorious.

I want to introduce you to somebody who can:

Wash you in his blood

—Set your feet on solid ground

—Give you a permanent, new walk, talk and song to sing

—Straighten our Crooked lives

—Press out rough places

I want to introduce you to somebody who has shops in every, country, state, and city. Not only does he have shops for you to come to him, but he also makes house calls, 24 hours a day. Call him in the morning. Call him in the evening. Call him in the midnight hour!

If you want to know how good he is, just talk to those who been touched by his hands!

Woman at the Well: He made me beautiful on the inside. Come see a man who told me all I've ever done!

By what authority does he operate? Where did he get his license? When did he pass the state board?

I hear him answer: Before Abraham was I am. I am the Alpha and the Omega, the Beginning and the End, The author and finisher in the faith, all power is in my hands!

What's the name of his shops? "Jes-Us" His name is Jesus and he operates Just for Us!

Jesus, the lily of the valley

Jesus, the bright and morning star

He died out on calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!

I hear him declare: "Come unto me all ye that are burdened and heavy laden and I will give you rest!

That's A Mother For You

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 8, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"Then spake the woman whose the living child was unto the king, for her bowels yearned upon her son, and she said, O my lord, give her the living child, and in no wise slay it. But the other said, Let it be neither mine nor thine, but divide it. Then the king answered and said, Give her the living child, and in no wise slay it: she is the mother thereof." 1 Kings 3:26-27

Introduction

How do you know you are a mother? Is it by the fact that you have given birth to a child? Does that qualify one for motherhood? Those who are mothers and have been for some time have no problems knowing whether they are mother's or not. Some give the answer humorously. You know you are a mother when you girls both come home with notes for you bake cookies for the school P.T.A. You know you are a mother when your daughter comes home from college with a U-Haul trailer filled with clothes for you to wash. You know you are a mother when you three year old calls you to retrieve his toothbrush out of the toilet. You know you are a mother when your freezer is packed with 10 cases of Girl Scout Cookies that your daughter couldn't sell to anyone else. You know you are a mother when you find yourself singing the theme song from Barney all day long. Those who are mothers have no trouble finding out whether or not they fit the general description.

A homeless woman and her daughter came upon a man who gave them a place to stay for the night. The man's home was next to a busy intersection that was always filled with noise. The woman closed her eyes and slept soundly. A train passed. She slept soundly. Children yelled as they ran down the streets. Horns honked. A car sporting giant size "boom box" speakers shook the building, but yet she continued to sleep, although the radio blared, the television was sky high and there was general pandemonium everywhere. However late over into the night, a remarkable thing happened. The woman set up straight on the edge of her makeshift bed and moved quickly to a back room where her little girl was sleeping. Despite the noise and the constant drain on the patience of the sane, she heard her baby cry. The man looked at her as she embraced the child and said "Now that's a mother for you."

The love that a mother displays for her children is the same kind of love that God displays for his people. Despite the size and complex nature of the universe, he still hears the smallest baby cry. His ear can distinguish our prayers and he knows each of his children by name. We praise him and thank him for just being himself, we also praise our mothers for taking care of us better than we take care of ourselves.

Exposition

This text focuses on King Solomon as he gives a powerful test of motherhood.

The original intent of the text is to demonstrate the wisdom of Solomon. He had become king at an earlier age although he was not the direct heir to the throne of David by family protocol. Now, as king, he would have to serve as the military leader of the people, lawmaker, chief executive and the nation's only supreme court judge. As a new and young king he would have to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the learned mean of the king's court that he could make fair and wise decisions as the nation's chief judge, as well as prove himself as a lawmaker, executive and military leader.

God talked to Solomon in a dream and gave him the opportunity to realize any dream of his heart. Sensing the enormity of his new position, young Solomon asked God for wisdom. God was so impressed with Solomon that he gave him wisdom, wealth and fame as well. As the nation's only lawmaker, he ordered the construction of the temple of the Lord and placed taxes on the people to underwrite its costs. As chief executive, he executed treaties with the enemies of the nation, often bringing peace by marrying the daughters of foreign kings, forcing delicate alliances that insured the integrity of his reign. No doubt, Solomon was leadership material, for even at a young age, he was dynamic in his vision and commitment to building the kingdom.

The supreme test of Solomon's ability came when it was time for him to act as the nation's supreme judge. At regular intervals, at his own choosing, the king had to sit and listen to the appeals of persons unsatisfied with decisions made by some of the king's appointed lower court judges. Acting as a judge was the ultimate test of Solomon's ability to lead as king of Israel. If he made foolish decisions, the credibility of his reign would be in question.

The first difficult test of his wisdom involved deciding the dispute of two mothers that argued over a baby. Both women shared living quarters and both had babies about the same age and the same sex. However, one of the women rolled in her sleep and smothered her baby to death. The dead babies were switched in the night and the two women disputed between themselves as to the identity of the real mother. The case was so difficult that none of the lower courts could decide it. What they had before them was the word of one woman over another with no clear cut way of making a decision about which one was telling the truth. They both talked with pain in their voices. They both appeared angry at each other for the deed. Both appeared to be the rightful mother of the living child. Baffled, the lower courts sent the case to Solomon. It drew considerable attention, because it would be the first great test case of his administration. It would set the tone of public perception of this young king. After hearing the case, Solomon decided the matter by ordering the living baby to be cut in half, giving a portion to each woman. One woman accepted the decision without debate. She thought it was fair. One woman pleaded with Solomon not to kill the child but to give it to the other. She would rather see the child alive, but in someone's care than to die unnecessarily. To Solomon, that was the deciding factor. It identified the real mother and he ordered the baby to be given to the pleading mother.

The episode drew initial attention to the wisdom of Solomon, but it also focused attention on the nature of true motherhood. The virtues of a real mother were exemplified and demonstrated uniquely in this short text. "Love" became the single virtue that decided this case. It is also the single virtue, demonstrated through action, that decides real mothers in any generation.

Virtues of Motherhood

What are the qualities that identify good mothers? Is it that she simply raises and feeds her children? Hogs and pigs are raised. With just a little slop in a nasty trough, they grow big and fat. Certainly just raising children does qualify one for motherhood. Just having children without being there for them is not a virtue either. What are the virtues that identify a woman as a mother?

Compassion. Women who demonstrate compassion and feeling for their children are demonstrating motherhood. Isaiah 49:15 asks the question: "Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb?" By nature, mothers show concern and care for their children. They are concern about their health and safety and demonstrate it daily. There are many women who have given birth to children,but have no compassion for them. Some give birth for hire, such as surrogate mothers. Others are reluctant mothers who have no compassion for their offspring. However, a real mother is compassionate.

Comforting Spirit. Women who demonstrate a comforting spirit exemplify another virtue of motherhood. Isaiah 66:13 points the way real mothers comfort their child, as an example of God's relationship to his people. The good mother has an open door policy and a good listening hear. She is a comfort to her children in times of difficulty and stress. She is an understanding and supportive shoulder to lean on, but yet realistic about life and its difficulties. Good mothers comfort their children.

Virtuous Spirit. A good mother demonstrates a range of qualities that the bible describes the attributes of "virtuous" woman. Proverbs 31 gives a listing of these attributes that range from caring for her family's nurture to helping others in the community. She is extolled as mother for her children a good wife to her husband. A virtuous woman is worth her price in rubies. She is invaluable. However, Proverbs 12:4 notes: "A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband: but she that maketh ashamed is as rottenness in his bones." The spirit of industry is a character trait of the virtuous woman.

That's A Mother For You

It is easy to talk about motherhood, but it is best taught by example. Young girls learn about motherhood from watching their mothers. Young boys learn what motherhood is about from watching their mothers, not from reading books. They watch the actions of good mother's they know and they conclude ..."that's a mother for you."

When Jochebed heard that Pharaoh was about the kill all of the boy children of Israel, she risked her own life to hide young Moses in a basket floating on the Nile River (Exodus 2:3). She may have lost her life, but she was going to save his, "that's a mother for you."

A widow woman that was down to her last cup of meal and cruse of oil, (1 Kings 17:12) put her trust in God when the man of God came by, and the Lord made sure that she never ran out of food. She trusted in God to provide her daily bread, "that's a mother for you."

Although Hannah was barren and prayed hard for a child, she took her young son and placed him in God's hand at the temple (1 Samuel 1:22). She loved him, but she wanted him to be in God's hands, "that's a mother for you."

A good mother knows, that while its important to see to it that her children have clothes on their backs and shoes on their feet, it is also important that they put on the whole amour of God, girding their loins with truth, wearing the breastplate of righteousness;covering their feet with the preparation of the gospel of peace;taking with them the shield of faith and the helmet of salvation. (Ephesians 6)

A good mother knows that while it's important to have a house in which their children can live, it's also important that their children know their way to the house of God.

A good mother knows, that while it's good to insure that her children get a good education and learn their school lessons, its more important that they know the Lord for themselves.

Every Christian mother something about the Lord!

When you know the Lord, it doesn't matter:

—How deep the waters of affliction may flow, for old ship of zion has landed many a thousand.."ain't no danger in God's waters!"

—How strong the winds blow, because we serve a God who speaks to the winds and they obey his will —How rough the road becomes, because we serve a God who specializes in making crooked places straight and rough places plain.

—How high the mountains we encounter, because our God specializes in turning mountains into molehills

—How dark our lonely hours because, because we know that "weeping endures but a night, but joy comes in the morning"

Mother's keep the faith! Hold on to God's unchanging hand!

When you way gets dark, hold on!

When you feel discouraged, hold on!

When you feel all alone, hold on!

God is still on the throne!

Worthy Is The Lamb

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 15, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me." — Matthew 10:38;"And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne and the beasts and the elders: and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands; "Saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing." — Revelation 5:11-12

Introduction

Have you ever been told that you were not qualified for a position? Those who have been in the employment market or have sought special opportunities, no doubt, have heard that statement made. Many have lost jobs, missed promotions and other chances to advance themselves because they were not "qualified." Sometimes that did not have enough education. Sometimes they lacked training. Sometimes they were disqualified because they were over qualified! Many people spend their lives trying to qualify, only to discover that qualification standards, among men, seem to change frequently, making it even more difficult to measure up.

Consider the former slave who had been told that he had the right to vote. It was an honor for a man who had been a slave all of his life to be able to go to the ballot box and a cast a vote like his former masters. The day he went to register there was a large crowd of former masters standing in the door. "Where you going uncle?" The former slave stared at them and said "I'se come to register to vote." Before he was given enrolled however one man told him: "Uncle, you can't vote unless you recite the preamble to the constitution." The old man knew nothing about the constitution, but was determined to vote. He went home and paid a school teacher to teach him the preamble. As he worked the fields he recited to himself: "We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union." Finally, he had it committed to memory and he went to register to vote. The same men were there chuckling. The smiles removed from their faces as the old man started reciting the preamble. Instantly, one the men said. “But Uncle, you also got to tell us what it means.” The old man went back and studied for two years to learn the meaning of every word in the Preamble. He returned to the same grinning faces that announced: “We forgot to tell you, you got to pay a poll tax of $1.00” The man went home and found a silver dollar and picked up his double barrel shot gun. He walked back in the door and slammed the silver dollar on the table with his finger on the trigger of his shotgun. “What you got that shotgun for uncle?” The old man, with a cold and serious sound in his voice, said: “I spent nearly all my life as a slave and I’m pretty near meeting the Lord, so I got nuthin to lose. For nearly five years I’ve been trying to qualify to vote, but the line keeps moving no matter how hard I try. I ain’t got much time left, I just wants to make sure the line don’t move ..this time!” At that, one of the nervous former masters yelled “He’s qualified, let him through!”

Historically, we have been victims of the word “unqualified” so long that the word itself has become an enigma. It has meant shifting standards, and an excuse to deny equal opportunity. When applied to our people, too often, qualified means we must be “25 years old, with 26 years of experience.”

As Christians, we know our Lord does not have a double standard. He offers salvation to all who are willing to accept him as Lord. In two thousand years the standard has not changed. The invitation still reads: Any man who will, let him come.

Exposition

These text verses point out how we can become worthy of salvation, through him who is the lamb of God.

Jesus spelled out the conditions of being his disciple. Those who follow are considered “worthy” when they put the service to the kingdom foremost in their lives. Its importance supersedes personal goals and quests. Shouldering the cross must become the supreme goal of the worthy follower. He who is unwilling to shoulder the cross is immediately deemed “unworthy” to be a disciple of Christ.

In Christ’s Revelation shown to John, Jesus himself is pictured as the Lamb of God, who is worthy of all praises because he alone paid the blood price for the redemption of mankind. Jesus, even before his birth, has been characterized in scripture as the “Lamb of God.” Since Old Testament ritual required the sacrifice of a lamb or other animal to consummate their forgiveness, Jesus came as the only person “worthy” to die for the sins of the world, because he had not known sin himself. Isaiah 53:7 said: "He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth." The fact that he came, died and rose, to insure the salvation of mankind, established Jesus as being "worthy" of all praises and glory. John saw millions of angels and heavenly hosts proclaiming "Worthy is the Lamb!" He alone is worthy of the kingdom of heaven. He alone is worthy of its great rewards.

Those who believe in him, however, have consolation in knowing that Jesus has said "where I am, ye may be also." When Jesus is crowned, we shall be crowned. When Jesus enters his kingdom, we shall enter the kingdom. Because Jesus is declared worthy, we are worthy, despite our sins, because we are his disciples.

Who Is Worthy?

Today there is a constant quest for worthiness, but who is worthy? What does it mean to be considered worthy. Those who are worthy for any endeavor meet two criterion: They are first eligible; then they are qualified.

Eligible: Those who are eligible are those who meet the moral or legal requirements to participate in an activity or share in a resource. You are eligible to run for president of the United States if you are an American citizen who is at least 35 years old. You are eligible to negotiate a contract on your own behalf at age 18. When you are eligible, you meet the general legal requirement that applies to everyone. Those who are eligible are those who have a right to participate or a right to share in a resource.

In this respect Jesus announced that anyone in the entire world who is willing to believe and follow him is "Eligible" for the kingdom of heaven. John 3:16 notes that God loved the "world" that "whosoever believeth" among the world's people becomes immediately eligible for membership in the family of God. John 3:16 seems to say you are eligible if you are: "living, breathing, and believing! Anyone who is willing to believe that Christ is the son of God is eligible for the kingdom of God.

Being eligible, does not make one automatically qualified.

QUALIFIED: The qualified are those eligible persons who meet certain conditions. Qualifications, by their very nature, are designed to limit participation. Qualifications are designed to narrow the participants to those persons who meet arbitrary conditions set by men and women.

Those who set the standard, usually set it to keep out undesirables. There are many that believe that standards for admission to certain professions are set to exclude certain groups by setting performance expectations above the traditional levels of performance of even the better applicants of a certain race, sex, or nationality. They suspect that women, and racial minorities are the victims of manipulated standards that exclude them on the basis of arbitrarily selected performance levels that tend to exclude members of an entire class.

When it comes to the kingdom of God, Christ sets the standard. It has not, does not, and will not change. There should be no fear of double standards, shifting requirements or prejudice. The requirement is the same for men and women, Blacks and Whites, African-Americans or Asian-Americans, the standard is constant. Those who "qualify" for the kingdom of God, regardless of race, sex, or national origin, must be willing to pick up their cross and follow Christ. When we meet that single qualification Jesus describes us as "Worthy." Not, by our goodness but by his grace.

Thank God for Grace, without it we wouldn't qualify!

Thank God for Grace, without it we wouldn't have a chance!

But because there is grace, we are made worthy to share in the inheritance of the kingdom of God.

Worthy is the Lamb

Finally, John gives every Christian a panoramic picture of things to come. He saw the great throne room of God, with floors shining like a sea of glass, and 24 elders sitting before him. In his hand he held a book that was bound together with seven seals. The question went forth: "Who is worthy to open the seals" that will pour out the wrath of God upon the world in the time of tribulation? Who is worthy to usher in the closing events of this present age? None could answer for themselves, but all recognized the Lion of the tribe of Judah and the Root of David. They were looking for the lamb.

Isaac, as he climbed to the top of the mountain of sacrifice asked Abraham his father: "Where is the lamb?"

As Jesus approached the River Jordan, John The Baptist declared for all the world to hear: "Behold the lamb of God"

Now John in Revelation declares "Worthy is the lamb!"

The lamb is worthy because is both eligible and qualified!

Salvation required someone who was able to live a life without sin!

Salvation required someone who was able to bear the criticisms of men and suffer the sting of their hatred!

Salvation required someone willing to lay down his life in payment for the sins of the world!

Revelation 5:9 gives the answer “Thou are worthy ..for thou was slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people and nation..”

What makes the Lamb Worthy? because he was “wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquity, and the chastisement of our peace is upon him, and with his stripes we are healed!”

What makes the lamb worthy? Because he and he alone has taken our:

—Darkness and turned it into light; Sadness and turn it into joy!

—Failure and turned it into success; Defeat and turned it into victory!

—Weakness and turned it into strength; Misfortunes and turned them into opportunities

He’s worthy because one even he picked up a old rugged cross and carried it to Calvary! There he died!

But Early! Early, Sunday morning! He arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

His name is Jesus!

The lamb of God!

Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Worthy is his name to be praised!

Wonders Tomorrow

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 22, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"And Joshua said unto the people, Sanctify yourselves: for tomorrow the LORD will do wonders among you." — Joshua 3:5

Introduction

What do you plan to do tomorrow? Tomorrow is one those elusive moments that never seems to come. It looms in the horizon and stares with a blank gaze upon the moments of today. For the procrastinator, it is the best time to do what should be done today. For the Pessimist it offers only a repeat of the doom and gloom of yesterday. However, the optimist looks forward to tomorrow, for it represents opportunity, growth and a chance to achieve. Without tomorrow, today is meaningless and yesterday becomes a blur. Without a doubt, we need tomorrows.

Consider the three young devils that were graduating from the Devil's Academy of Troubles and Trials. As a final test each devil was required to prove that he had learned the tricks necessary to stop a man or woman from reaching their fullest potential. They were given one person who was walking forward and told to use what they had learned to stop his forward progress. The first devil was confident he could stop him, and he took his pitch fork and took away the man's yesterdays. Without them the man started the man started walking in circles, traveling the same path repeatedly, however, occasionally he found the right path and moved forward, thus the first devil failed his test. The second devil was more resourceful, he took away his todays by placing obstacles in his way and finally cut his feet from beneath him. To his amazement the devil noticed that though he crawled on his belly, the man continued to slowly move forward. The second devil failed his test. The third devil was confident. Instead of tampering with yesterdays or stealing todays, the third devil took away the man's tomorrows. Without touching him, the man who was lost without yesterdays and slowed by troubled todays, came to a complete stop. He never made another step forward and spent his life standing in the same place. The master devil complimented the third devil and said: "If you want a stop a man, don't take away his yesterdays, he'll eventually find the way; don't take away his todays, it'll just slow him to a crawl, but take away his tomorrows and he want move at all."

Tomorrows represent hope. They represent the promise of better times and improvements over the present. Without tomorrows there would be no incentive for today.

As Christians, we look forward to tomorrow! The future for us offers a bright promise, beyond what this world offers today. Regardless to what we have today we know that with Jesus, tomorrow will be a better day!

Exposition

This text focuses on Joshua as he began a new experience in his life. In this passage God reassures Joshua that his experiences on the other side of Jordan would be great and rewarding. The other side of Jordan, represented the unknown future. For some it was fearful and they approached it with apprehension. They doubted their own abilities and decided that the huge size of the inhabitants made them feel like grasshoppers in their own eyes. They shrank as the thought of tomorrow was presented to them. They chose to wander around in circles for 40 years rather than go forward. For Joshua, tomorrow, represented a Plethora of challenges. First, there was the impossible task of carrying 600,000 people across the river Jordan, without a bridge. Second, the cities of Jordan were well fortified. Jericho and other cities of Jordan had great walls, military equipment and experience in such matters. Third, in Jordan, Israel would have to feed and provide for itself. This generation had been feeding from manna and quail for 40 years. They had never planted a crop or brought in a harvest. Tomorrow represented the uncertainty of providing the necessities of life for themselves. Obviously, Israel was anxious as it stood on the banks of Jordan, wondering about tomorrow!

Now God speaks to Joshua and gives him a word of advice and a promise. The advice was simple: "Sanctify Yourself." The promise was equally simple "tomorrow the Lord will do wonders among you." The advice to sanctify himself meant to prepare himself. When something is sanctified it is set aside, or reserved for a special work or purpose. For Joshua, it meant to be prepared and ready for the mighty wonders that were to come tomorrow. Even though God was about to perform great wonders for Israel it was still necessary for them to be prepared to do their part, however great or small. The promise that accompanied the advice was that tomorrow, wonders would be performed! "Tomorrow" was both a literal and figurative term. The next day God actually performed a wonder for Israel. He caused the waters of the River Jordan to roll back such that the nation crossed on dry land. That was its literal application. However, figuratively "tomorrow" went even further, it applied to a series of wonders that God would do in the future to make his promise come true. Not only did the River Jordan roll back, but weeks later, the walls of Jericho fell, the earth stood still in its orbit causing the sun to lock itself in the sky, countless victories came their way as God performed wonders for them. Tomorrow was not just one day, but it also referred to their future.

Therefore Israel faced tomorrow with fear and uncertainty, but they were assured by God that if they prepared themselves he would do mighty wonders in their tomorrows. They were encouraged to go forth today, expecting "wonders tomorrow."

Sanctify Yourself

Christian youth who are launching their futures should heed the words of this text to: "Sanctify yourselves."

In the context of the modern experience, the advice to sanctify has both spiritual and secular applications. Spiritually, to sanctify oneself means to set yourself aside for the special purpose of answering God's call, whatever it is, in their lives. It means to reserve your life, talents and ambitions for those things which will glorify God. Further it means to have a spiritual mindset that will prepare you to move at God's command as he prepares to perform wonders "tomorrow." Paul writing the Philippians in 4:8 said: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." His advice was they focus their lives on pure and just causes, and to concentrate their energies on them. To be spiritually focused meant to aspire to highest and finest virtues of life.

Secularly, being sanctified, means keeping yourself away from anything that might keep you from being ready when God performs "a wonder tomorrow." Many youth have reached the point of high school graduation, only to come to a complete halt. They have closed their books are resolved not to study another day and to spend the rest of their days chilling out. As opportunity knocks, looking for someone with their background, race and experiences to assume an important role they will be passed over, because they were not ready. The "wonder" will come, but they won't be ready. Still others have enrolled in college but have idled away their time, roaming from party to party, chilling, cruising and otherwise neglecting their studies. Unable to discipline themselves, many have dropped out of vocational school, universities and other training programs. When God performs the wonders promised for them and their door of opportunity swings open, they will be unable to take advantage because they won't be ready. The advice to sanctify yourself, is advice to set yourself apart from the rest of the crowd, to remain focused, so that you can be ready for the great wonder that God is going to perform in your life tomorrow.

Wonders Tomorrow

Finally, friends, we should keep in mind that there will be wonders tomorrow! That was God's promise to Joshua, it is God's promise to this generation as well: "Tomorrow, the Lord will do wonders among you!"

Christian graduates should step into the future, confident that if they put God first, and sanctify themselves in spirit and lifestyle, that God will perform wonders in their tomorrows! They should expect it and claim it, because God has promised it!

When he stepped into the unknown and challenged Pharaoh, his faith was accompanied by wonders and signs. His rod turned into a snake, the water turned to blood, the daylight was turned to darkness, and the first born died.

When they journeyed out of Egypt his faith was followed by wonders and signs, the Red Sea rolled back, there was bread from heaven and they never changed shoes for 40 years.

Young Elisha began his new experience wearing the mantle of Elijah, and God showered upon his life great success as he performed wonders from cleansing lepers to restoring hope to starving widows.

I don't know about you but I'm glad to know that we serve a wonder working God. We serve a God who can take:

—Tomorrow's uncertainty and turn it into today's assurance —Tomorrow's fears and make them todays courage

—Tomorrow's doubts and make them today's hope

A blind man met him one day, and he gave him new sights to see! He's a wonder working Lord!

A lame man met him one day, and he gave him a new walk to walk! He's a wonder working Lord!

Lazarus, dead in the tomb for four long days, found out that he gave him another life to live! He's a wonder working Lord!

As I close, I'm reminded of the young man who was leaving home for a job interview in the big city. His family only had enough money to get him one suit, a typed resume' and few days food. Not knowing what to do he sought advice from his mother who said: "Let Jesus lead you." After prayerful thought he decided to walk the 100 mile journey up the dirt road to the city and save his money for food and lodging. Others were also applying that flew or drove expensive automobiles. Along the way the young man ran into a rain storm and muddied his suit as he fell in pot hole after pot hole. As he saw the mud on his only suit he kept remembering his mother's words "Let Jesus lead you!" When he came to apply, his suit was muddied, resume' crinkled and he looked a mess. As the interviews ended the contractor called him in with good news. "Young man we are looking for an engineer with your qualifications. We saw your resume, but what made you different from the others is that appear know the importance of good roads. We are building a roadway in the countryside and we need a man who is good, but also knows how important a good road is to regular people. You're hired!" As the young man thanked his new employer the boss said "These other men flew in on air planes and drove the super highways. What made the difference with you son is the way you came, don't thank me, but thank the Lord for putting you on the right road."

Let Jesus lead you, and everything will be alright!

I heard a song writer declare: I do not know how long twill be, nor what the future holds for me, but this I know, if Jesus leads me. I shall get home ...someday!

There's Always A Bright Side

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 5, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"And now men see not the bright light which is in the clouds: but the wind passeth, and cleanseth them." — Job 37:21 "Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost." — Romans 15:13 (KJV)

Introduction

Have you ever seen people who have given up hope? These are those who have abandoned the possibility of achieving their dreams and rising to great heights. What happens to a people when they lose hope? Do they swelter in the heat of their depression? Do they wallow in the pools of their own failure?

Do they drown themselves in alcohol? Do they lock themselves into a world of where they strike out against each other, and rebel against even the notion that life outside of their own world is possible?

Without hope, the hopeless have no future and social disorder is a result.

Consider the cripple man who sat in front of the court house every day every begging for money. Each person that passed would give him a dime but none of them would accept the cripple's pencils he offered in a cup. Each person that passed him expressed their sympathy for a poor man who had no legs and was forced to beg on a street corner. Their expressions were the same everyday: "Poor man!" "Isn't it a shame" and "I feel so sorry for him." Each person that passed felt sorry for him and treated him as a beggar. All, that is, except one. Every day a gentleman in a fine suit came by, gave him a dollar and demanded a pencil from him. As he left each day, the gentleman would say "I demand a pencil because you are a merchant that is in demand!" Soon the cripple man looked forward to the gentleman coming every day, which he did, until one day he did not return. Several years passed before he saw the man again, but by this time he was operating a concession stand for the handicapped inside the Post Office. One day the gentleman returned and bought one pencil with a smile. The cripple man responded, "it's on the house. You did something for me that no one else could do. When others saw nothing in me, you gave me hope that I was more than a cripple beggar but a merchant who happened to be cripple. Thanks to you I began to think of myself different and here I am today!"

Today there are many who have given up on themselves. They have lost hope, but thanks to Jesus, they have found a renewed hope that despite the darkness of their situation, there is always a bright side.

Exposition

This text considers the final product of a never ending hope.

In the broadest sense "hope" can have two definitions. Outside of the biblical context, hope refers to a feeling that "what we want to happen will happen." We are said to have "hope" as long as we have that feeling.

Hope, in this context, is baseless because it offers no rational reason why something should occur other than the fact that we want it to happen. For some this is baseless optimism, a futile exercise that will yield nothing.

Hope in the biblical context takes on a different character. To those who believe in the bible and trust in God, hope is confidence that what God has done for us in the past, guarantees that he can and will do similar acts in our future. Therefore, without God, hope is simply an empty feeling not supported by any evidence of probability. However, with God, hope is based on confidence gained from past experiences.

The story of Job in the bible gives us a picture of one man's hope that God could and would act to address his adverse situation. Job, in the midst of poverty, family sadness and personal sickness, was covered by what we might call a dark cloud.

This text peeks into his situation at a point when he was at his lowest. He was frustrated. He felt there was no place to turn. Here Job is reminded that the clouds and the sunshine that come into our lives are keenly balanced by God.

Verse 15 makes it clear that it is God that makes the "light of his cloud" or the sun to shine.

Verse 16 refers to the "balancing of the clouds" as a wondrous act of God. Balancing the sunshine and the clouds suggests that there are times when clouds overshadow the sky, but yet the sun continues to shine. The balance is struck when, at the appropriate moment, the clouds are removed and the sun shines again.

The key truth for believers is that God is in control and that clouds will be dispersed.

The text verse, verse 21, notes that "now", that is when we are under a distressing situation, it is difficult to see the "bright light" or the sunshine because of so many clouds. However, the man or woman that has hope knows that one day the wind blows and moves the clouds and fair weather returns because of the mighty works of God.

In this context, hope is knowing that although there are clouds in the sky that are dark and dreary, that beyond the clouds there is always a bright side!

Paul, writing in Romans 15:13 emphasized that Christians should expect situations to improve and work towards that end. Specifically he wrote to the Christians in Rome, but generally his message was to all Christians: "The God of Hope" is urged to fill each person with joy and peace "in believing" or because they believe, to the point that they never lose hope, despite the adverse circumstances they endured. That hope is sustained in every person through the power of the Holy Ghost.

Together, the preponderance of scripture in both the old and the New Testament suggests that clouds or adverse circumstances will come for the faithful, but while they may block the sun they never stop the sun from shining.

We are encouraged to keep working in faith, with a positive spirit, because there is always a "bright side."

Impact of hopelessness

Today we see all around us the impact of hopelessness on a whole community of people. In thousands of cities across the nation, the seeds of hopelessness have sprouted into full blossomed rage and self hatred. Crime is escalating at an all time high. Why? Murders and aggravated assaults are increasing so fast that newspapers have started a daily count down of murders like they use to count the days remaining until Christmas. Why are we killing each other at such an alarming rate?

Why are our youth disposed to violent natures?

Like a caged animal that has given up hope of ever being free, many of us have succumbed to the notion that we are a doomed generation and we live accordingly.

The rules and procedures of our society are predicated on a belief that everyone has hope and a dream. A penal system is predicated on the idea that the threat of locking a person away from the chance to achieve his dream should be a sufficient deterrent to criminal activity. The death penalty is seen as a way to deter murder because it says to murderers that their hope of a long life will be aborted. Jail, death, and other punishments that our society has ordered, are all predicated on the idea that the people involved have both hope and a dream. One of the hard realities we are now facing is that there are many among us who have neither hope nor a dream.

There are many who cannot picture themselves living any better. They have accepted the image of mediocrity, failure, and poverty or ghetto life as the image of their future.

Many young men have accepted the often recited statistics that say four out of every ten young Black men will be dead or in jail before they reach age 30. With that as an accepted truth, they could care less about going to jail or facing the death penalty, there is nothing else available anyway. Once robbed of hope, a desperate people will ignore laws, rules and the social order.

That is not an excuse for lawlessness, but an explanation and starting point for corrective action.

To restore broken dreams and shattered lives, the desperate and the destitute need renewed hope. They need to see that someone cares about them. As a community we need to help those who have lost their hope and their dream.

The Only Hope

There are many who have tried to restore lost hope only to replace hope restored with bitterness as noble purposes are revealed to be veiled attempts to promote secret agendas.

Moreover, A plethora of social programs have sought to create projects that dealt with the symptoms of crime, teen-aged parenthood, and family dysfunction, only to discover that in many instances, those who administered them were interested as long as a pay check existed. The money and programs keep coming, but hope is not restored.

The church must continue to tell a hopeless society, that times may be difficult and trouble surrounds us, but there is still hope. There is always a bright side.

We must tell the 10 year old boy that has been a resident of the detention centers all his life, that there is still hope!

We must tell the 15 year old impoverished girl who has no hope of ever being anything but a welfare mom, that there is still hope!

We must tell the 40 year old crack addict that despite what the world says, there is still hope!

We must roll up our sleeves and be prepared to give of ourselves to help restore hope!

It doesn't matter whether the voice of hunger is Black or white! It doesn't matter whether the crying child is from the North Side or the South Side.

It doesn't matter whether the wounded soul listens to Rap, Country Western, or Punk Rock ...we want them to know there is hope because of "this rock!"

This rock, represents the faith of Job who said "all the days of my appointed time, will I wait until my change comes!

This rock, represents the confidence of the Three Hebrew Boys who said "Our God is able to deliver us."

This rock, represents the persuasion of Paul who declared "Nothing shall separate me from the love of God"

This rock is Jesus, who takes our darkness and turns it into light!

This rock is Jesus, who takes our failure and turns it into success!

This rock is Jesus, who takes our anxiety about the clouds that overshadow our path and reminds us ...there's a bright side somewhere!

This rock is Jesus, my shelter in a time of storm!

This rock is Jesus, my hope in times of trouble!

No wonder the song writer declared "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean on Jesus' name. On Christ the solid rock I stand ...

"...All other ground.."

"...All other ground.."

"...All other ground, is sinking sand!"

Proverbs for Children

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 12, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"The fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge: but fools despise wisdom and instruction. My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother: For they shall be an ornament of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck." Proverbs 1:7-9

Introduction

Have you ever listened to a grand parent or a great grand parent as they talked about the truths of life? Perhaps you have noticed that many of them have a collection of proverbs or old sayings that have become very familiar in your family. Children are the ones who first notice these proverbs because they are short and compact. In fact, that's just what a proverb is, a great moral truth compressed into a single statement, that when remembered and applied to life situations: protects from danger, avoids tragedy, and leads us in the right direction. Seldom do we hear preface their remarks by saying they were about to use a proverb they just seem to flow from those who have been blessed with the spirit of wisdom. In fact the bible in 1 Corinthians 12:8 notes that some people have been given the special gift of wisdom. The general word for these wise sayings is "Proverbs" but in our neck of the woods, children usually refer to them as "foggisms." Some have suggested that the proverbs of their parents, grandparents and even those recorded in the bible are old and foggie, and not relevant to modern living.

Consider Foggie Freda, the old lady that sat on her porch each day watching the children play. She made it a ritual to bake cookies for the children and talk to them as they came around for snacks. They laughed at her funny sayings and because she dipped snuff. When she noticed that one youth had become friends with a neighborhood thug she gave the young man a raw fish. What for? "Because fish and friends smell in three days." When they laughed at her rolled up stockings and spit can she'd say: "sticks and stones may break my bones, but words never hurt me." The little boy who ignored her warnings not to climb out on the dead limb of the big oak tree, saw her sitting on the porch when the limb broke and fell to the ground. He remembered her words when she spat in her little silver can and said "A hard head makes a soft behind." One day the children came to see Foggie Freda, but her chair was empty. Much to their surprise a few minutes later she emerged from the house dressed immaculately. The spit can was gone, here hair was done and he looked 20 years younger. "Where you going Miss Freda?" Asked one booth. "I'm going on a date!" The children laughed hard at the thought Foggie Freda on a date. As a handsome retired gentleman came to pick her up, Freda gave the children one more proverb: "Just because there's snow on the roof, don't meant there ain't no fire and oven!" Foggie Freda wasn't so foggie after all.

As Christians we know that there are great truths in the word of God. Although they have been recited for thousands of years, they are never-the-less, still true. If we commit them to memory in youth, their meaning can be applied to life situations as long as we live.

Exposition

This text is extracted from the book of Proverbs. Proverbs is a collection of wise sayings that with the exception of chapter 30 and 31 were written by King Solomon. Chapter 30 is attributed to Agur and chapter 31 is attributed to Lemuel.

Solomon was known throughout the world for his wisdom and learning. Though he was yet a young man, kings and heads of state traveled around the world to hear his wisdom and to be taught, as he lectured them on the great truths of life.

The Proverbs is a collection of some of thousands of wise sayings of King Solomon. Each proverb is unconnected to the other. The truth listed in one verse may not be connected to the truth cited in the next.

Proverbs were generally written for children. They are written in short catchy phrases designed for easy memory. They address many subjects: Fear of God, Trust in God, Riches, Control of the Tongue, Honesty, Laziness, Justice and just plain common sense.

Among the proverbs of Solomon that are most memorable are:

Prov 1:7 The fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge: but fools despise wisdom and instruction.

Prov 1:8-9 My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother:For they shall be an ornament of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck.

Prov 3:5-6 Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.

Prov 6:16-19 These six things doth the LORD hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him: A proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief,A false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren.

Prov 6:27-29 Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned? Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burned? So he that goeth in to his neighbors wife; whosoever toucheth her shall not be innocent.

Prov 14:12 There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death.

Prov 22:6 Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.

The point of the Proverbs is moral instruction based upon the truths of God. Many view them as old and outdated, but God's word has withstood the test of time.

Today's Proverbs

In biblical times parents had the responsibility to teach their children by precepts such as proverbs and by example. That is still true today. We hear many biblical proverbs but our society has some of its own that have been collected over the years but which carry immense truth:

BIRDS OF A FEATHER FLOCK TOGETHER: Youth are warned to watch the company they keep. Close association with the rowdy, unruly and the ungodly usually brings an unwanted bad reputation because it is generally believed that association brings assimilation (take on the habits of others).

YOU DON'T MISS YOUR WATER UNTIL THE WELL RUNS DRY: You are advised to advantage of every opportunity while it exists. Sometimes the value of opportunities are not appreciated until they no longer exist.

YOU SHALL REAP WHAT YOU SOW; IF YOU SOW THE WIND YOU SHALL REAP THE WHIRLWIND: Based upon Hosea 8:7 this old saying points out that whatever we sow will come back to us in a mightier form. Good deeds will reap better good deeds. Bad deeds will come back to haunt us.

WHAT STRAPS ACROSS THE DEVIL'S BACK, BUCKLES UNDER HIS BELLY: Old saying uses the analogy of saddling a horse wherein the saddle is thrown across the horse's back and fastened under his belly, to make the point that evil actions will come around to haunt us one day.

WHAT'S GOOD FOR THE GOOSE IS GOOD FOR THE GANDER: Meaning if a law or rule or privilege applies to one segment of the social order then it should apply to the other. Don't make rules that apply to my situation but they don't apply to yours.

DON'T BITE THE HAND THAT FEEDS YOU: It is folly to disrespect the persons you are depending upon for help and support.

AN EMPTY WAGON MAKES LOTS OF NOISE: Those who have little brain power usually talk loud and make noise.

THE POT CAN'T CALL THE KETTLE BLACK: People who are guilty of an offense are not in a position to criticize others for doing the same thing.

YOU CAN'T FLY WITH EAGLES IF YOU RUN WITH TURKEYS!: Those who aspire to lofty goals and aspirations, can never reach them if the keep company constantly with those who have can't fly!

HASTE MAKES WASTE: Those who hurry through life usually make mistakes that requires a considerable waste of time to repair.

YOU MAKE YOUR BED HARD, SO SLEEP IN IT: Our decisions in life can decide our future if we are careful we make a soft bed if we are reckless we make a hard bed, whichever,we must sleep in the bed we make.

BE CAREFUL THE PEOPLE YOU WALK ON, ON YOUR WAY UP, BECAUSE YOU'LL MEET THOSE SAME PEOPLE ON YOUR WAY DOWN.

Always be thoughtful of those who help you climb the ladder of life.

It May be Foggie But..

Finally brothers and sisters, we must consider the wisdom of this text: the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.

If young people learn anything in their experience in life it should be that they can't do anything without God.

Often it may appear to be a worn out redundancy, but no matter how many times they are said there are some proverbs about the Lord that are just as true today as they were yesterday.

It may be old and foggie, but it is still true that the Lord:

—Will be a bridge over troubled water!

—Will be a doctor in the sickroom and a lawyer in the courtroom!

—Will take our darkness and turn it into light!

—Defeats and turn them into victories!

It may be old and foggie, but its still true that the Lord will put food on your table and clothes on your back!

I'm reminded of the old man whose son had traveled to a foreign country as a missionary. He wrote to his son regularly and heard news of many great works. One day however, he received a telegram that said his son was lost in the back country and could not be found. The man took the letter he was about to mail and put it in his pocket and sat in his favorite chair. Those around him worried about him and asked his feelings. All he would say is "The Lord will make a way." As years passed the old man kept the letter in his pocket and explained to friends that the "Lord would make a way." They said it was foolish to cling to vain hope after 20 years, reciting empty slogans such as "The Lord Will Make A Way!" However one day he received a telegraph from a foreign relief agency that said he son had been found, but it would take $10,000 to cover the costs of getting him home." The man folded the letter and said to himself "Although I don't have a dime, the Lord will make a way." He took his few possessions to a pawn shop but they were not enough. As he talked, the shop owner spotted the letter he'd been carrying for 20 years. He noticed that the stamp on the letter had been printed upside down; it was a collector's item. The shop owner said the stamp was valuable. The old man said:"Before you look, let me tell you what its worth..$10,000" Surprised the shop asked how the old man knew...and he answered "Because the Lord will make a way!"

It might be old and foggie but the Lord will make a way!

It might be the old story, but its still true today, that Jesus came and died for our sins!

He died and rose again!

It might be old and foggie, but I believe he's coming!

He's coming again!

Where There Is A Will, There Is A Way

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 3, 1994

SCRIPTURE: For the Lord GOD will help me; therefore shall I not be confounded: therefore have I set my face like a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed." Isaiah 50:7; "And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us:And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him. 1 John 5:14-15

Introduction

Have you ever been frustrated in your attempt to accomplish a goal? What was your response? Did you give up in bitterness like the fox and the proverbial grapes? Did you become despondent? Did you question God? Frustrations are an intricate part of progress and success. Sometimes life can get so cluttered that we simply cannot see our way. Our activities and goals sometimes become faint sketches against the horizon. No one succeeds without first encountering a few frustrations. Those who are determined usually find that "what's for them, they will surely get." The key is to remain focused on your real purpose and goal.

Consider the old man who fed the pigeons in the park everyday and talked with his friends as they fed the pigeons. One day his friend asked a very deep and challenging question: How do I get my life back on track?" His friend asked. The old man did not say anything except he simply kept throwing bread crumbs to the pigeons. After the question had been asked several times, finally the old man said: "Watch the pigeons walk." The friend thought that to be an odd answer but again the old man answered: "Watch the pigeons walk!" as threw out more bread crumbs. Frustrated the friend asked the meaning of his phrase and the old man said:

"Pigeons have trouble focusing when they walk. To see where they are going, they put their head out first, stop, focus, bring their head back, and then make another step. So the move with what appears to be a silly walk: head out,stop,focus, head in. It may look like a silly walk to others but it helps the pigeon make sure that every little step he makes is in the right direction." Then he turned to his friend and said: "If you want to get your life back on track stop, check your direction, and make sure you walk like the pigeon and don't waddle like a duck!"

Today many people are trying to succeed in life without every stopping to consider whether or not the success they seek is in line with God's will. They constantly go forward, working, climbing, pursing and striving. They have set the aim on a high and lofty goal and they are giving it pursuit their best effort.

As Christians, however, we know it's wise to walk the walk of the pigeon: stop, focus, check our course and continue walking the Christian walk. If we walk in the light of the Lord and in line with his will, no matter what frustrations may come, the Lord will make a way.

Exposition

This text considers the truth that all things, which are within the will of God are possible for the believer to achieve.

Isaiah Chapter 50 is Messianic in nature. Messianic means that it is written in the Old Testament but its reference is to Christ who would come centuries later. Isaiah made many prophecies directed to Israel specifically. Many others, however, were Messianic, such as Isaiah 53:5 (He was wounded for our transgressions).

This particular Messianic text shows the hardships that Christ would suffer and his resolve to continue courageously, despite the humiliation, embarrassment and physical pain that confronted him because he was carrying out the will of God.

It is a unique example of spiritual will power. The Messiah's resolve is noted in Isaiah 50:6-7 wherein he said that although he would be beaten and spit upon (verse 6) "therefore shall I not be confounded: therefore have I set my face like flint, and know that I shall not be ashamed." He was courageously firm in his determination to accomplish his purpose despite the scorns and hatreds that were heaped upon him.

The way of the cross was not what Jesus wanted. He did not want to die on cross. That fact is evidenced in Matthew 26:39 "And he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." A second time he made the same request: Matthew 26:42 "He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done." Although the cross is not what Christ wanted for himself, he lost himself in the will of God.

Being totally submerged in the will of God, he was confident that God would help him achieve his purpose, according to his will.

This same thought is expressed in John's epistle, except that it is not referenced to Christ but to believers. It reminds believers that requests made of God, that are according to his will for us, will be accomplished.

The key phrase is to note that what we ask, must be according to his will. If what we ask is according to God's will, it does not matter how improbable or unlikely it may seem to others, if it is according to God's will it can be accomplished. Mat 19:26 But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.

Combined, these texts represent the preponderance of New Testament teaching on the subject. A request, if it is in line with God's will, is possible. Our quest is to follow the example of Christ and lose ourselves in the complete will of God. Once that happens there is no limit to our abilities.

Where the will of God exists...there is a way.

Our Will Must Be God's Will

There are millions who are troubled by the increasing number of frustrations they face as they attempt to achieve their goals. Many pray to God and ask him to remove the stumbling blocks or problems. With great faith, many sit back and wait for their problems to disappear, remembering that Jesus said :John 16:24 ".. ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full."

While it is true that we can ask what we want of our Lord and expect an outpouring, it is also true that we cannot expect to receive anything from him unless what we plan to do is in line with what God wants us to do.

The very first step to attaining the kind of power with God that John spoke of is to stop being a practicing sinner. Why? Because a person who is a practicing sinner is out of synchronization with God's will and will not be heard when he or she makes requests from God. John 9:31 "Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth."

No matter how loud we call upon him or how eloquent our appeals, if we are living outside of faith or in contradiction to the faith, we cannot expect our appeal to God to be successful.

While the first step is to become both a worshipper of God and a doer of his will, there is a second step.

Our second step is to discern whether our requests of God are for our own purpose or for his purposes. Is it for our own "lusts" or is it for God's purposes. Some can't get answers because what they ask for is outside of the will of God.

James 4:2-3 "Ye lust, and have not: ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not. Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts."

When we ask God to grant a prayer request is the request for ourselves or is it for the furtherance of the kingdom? When we ask God to help us win the lottery, is the request so that we can become rich or is it so that we can take the proceeds and give it all to the furtherance of his kingdom, if necessary. When we pray for a Lexus, BMW or a Cadillac, is the request for our own pride, so that we can show our friends that we have succeeded, or is it an expression of a true need for transportation to assist in the growth of the kingdom?

There are many that have been turned down in selfish requests by God and have turned to Satan, who also answers prayers...usually the selfish kind, because these advance HIS kingdom.

Those who accumulate worldly possessions and live outside of God are those who have been blessed by Satan because their will is tied into his will. They are not to be confused with true believers.

Where There Is A Will

When our will is outside of God's will, it is difficult to get help from heaven. However, when our will is in line with God's will, there is a way.

There is no mountain so high that God cannot climb it; no river so wide that God cannot cross it; No ocean so deep God cannot fathom it!

1 Cor 2:9 " Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

Every now and then we should spiritually walk the pigeon's walk: stop, refocus and walk the walk of the Lord.

Where there is a life committed to the will of God, there is a way! It does not matter who is for you. Neither does it matter who is against you! I hear Rom 8:31 ask the question "If God be for us, who can be against us?

Where there is a will, according to God's purpose, there is a way!

Joseph testifies that he was thrown into a pit. But God had work for him to do and proved that where there is a will, according to God's purpose, there is a way!

Daniel was thrown in a lion's den, but when roaring lions purred like kittens, it proved again that where there is a will according to God's purpose, there is a way!

The Hebrew boys faced the terror of the fiery furnace, but once again the proved that even the heat of the furnace could not alter the will of God, for where there is a will, according to God's purpose, there is a way!

A widow woman was down to her last cruse of oil and cup of meal, but she found out that as long as her will was in line with God's, that the barrel wouldn't run dry. Where there is a will, according to God's purpose, there is a way!

Somebody here is frustrated over lost direction!

Somebody here is confused over missed opportunity!

Somebody here is worried over future prospects!

Be not dismayed, for if your objectives are in line with God's purpose for your life, the Lord will make a way!

The Lord will, take your failures and setbacks and turn them into successes

The Lord will, minimize your weaknesses and maximize your strengths

The Lord will, inspire your imagination and energize your actions!

No wonder the song writer declared "Oh teach me from my heart to say ..thy will, thy will be done!

Jesus gave us the example in the garden all by himself. I heard him declare "not my will, but thy will be done!

He died out on Calvary and rose early, with all power in his head!

He's alive today and he's able...to make a way!

Be So Glad When I Get Home

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 17, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held:And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled." Revelation 6:9-11;"And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. Revelation 21:3-4

Introduction

Have you ever found yourself in a hurry to get away from home, only to find that you couldn't wait to get back? There is something about home that creates a yearning within us that grows stronger with absence. The unique nature of home permanently conditions us to an aesthetic environment that can be imitated but never duplicated.

The finest motels, even those that offer the comforts of home or those that leave the light on for you, cannot substitute for home. After a few days at even the finest hotel, the urge to go home returns. The difference cannot be bridged with mere creature comforts. Home is important because it is the cradle of our affections. Dorothy of "The Wizard of Oz" couldn't wait to get away from Kansas, but even in the Emerald City all the people looked like folks she knew, and she found her self saying repeatedly "There's no place like home."

Where is home for the Christian? It's not in the inner cities, suburbs or palatial mansions in which we dwell. Homes are not constructions. There can be no "parade of homes" for house shoppers to peer into. Neither is there a "home buyers Guide" for homes cannot be bought and sold. Home is where the heart is.

For the Christian home lies beyond this life. Home is with the fellowship of the Saints with the Kingdom of God today. In the life yet to come Home is the eternal existence we shall share in the Kingdom of Heaven. Whenever and wherever Jesus is in the midst, a Christian is at home.

Whether in a palace or a shack; a barn yard or a court yard, a Christian is at home, if Jesus is in the midst.

Exposition

This text considers the both the Christian's home, the kingdom of heaven. The Revelation records glimpses of the future that were revealed to John on the Isle of Patmos by Christ himself. In its 22 chapters we are given a panoramic view of what will happen during the last seven years of this world order. Of particular interest to believers are chapters 21 and 22 because these two chapters contain the substance of our hope. They tell us about the New Jerusalem, the new heaven and the new earth, which will be the home of every believer.

In viewing the final scenes, John foretells the impatience of the saints who will come to Christ during the tribulation. As God, tired of the wickedness of this world order, prepares to finally avenge the wrongs done to believers, John heard the cry "How Long?" from those who had been martyred for the cross. These who would only have been waiting for a year or two when the events of Revelation Chapter 6 occur, express impatience. What of those who had been waiting for centuries before the tribulation, certainly they too were crying "How Long?" Their question "How Long?" was an anxious expression of anticipation of things to come. They lived and died waiting for the return of Christ, the establishment of his kingdom, and their entrance into their eternal home. In essence they expressed longing and an excitement that said, "be so glad when I get home."

The nature of the Christian's home is suggested in Revelation.

The Christian's home is not to go to heaven but to live eternally in a heaven. Heaven The part of God's creation above the earth and the waters including "air" and "space" and serving as home for God and His heavenly creatures. It's a single planet of God's universal creation, beyond the reach of the telescopic eye of this solar system, which is used by God as his divine work place, from whence He 1) sends blessings to His people: "Look down from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest unto our fathers, a land that floweth with milk and honey." Deuteronomy 26:15; 2)sends punishments to wicked: The LORD is in his holy temple, the LORD'S throne is in heaven: his eyes behold, his eyelids try, the children of men. V6) Upon the wicked he shall rain snares, fire and brimstone, and an horrible tempest: this shall be the portion of their cup. Psalm 11:4,6.

Moreover, heaven is the temporary dwelling place of departed believers. 2 Cor 5:8: "We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." Those who die in Christ are temporarily reside in heaven awaiting their final reward and station in the Kingdom of Heaven.

However, heaven is not the Christian's home because heaven won't be forever! The millions of solar systems, galaxies, and planets that now exist, including the planet heaven will be destroyed by God. Isa 34:4 And all the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll: and all their host shall fall down, as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a falling fig from the fig tree.

However that which is destroyed will be recreated, fresh and new, and that will be the place where believers will spend eternity. Not up in God's heaven, but on a recreated, glorified, purified, earth..where even God himself shall be. Isa 65:17 For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind.
Isa 65:18 But be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy.

Isaiah said "It's going to be" but John said "I saw it happen!" John said: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea." Revelation 21:1

The Christian's home is not in heaven, the present work place of God, but in the kingdom of heaven which will be created on earth, with the New Jerusalem serving as its capital city. While its true that wherever Jesus is will be heaven, it is not true that we will be living forever in the celestial realms that today we call heaven.

Isaiah notes that there will be a great rejoicing and celebration among the saints when we get home. The former things shall not be remembered! It will be a happy day!

What We Expect From Home

As believers we look forward to going home with great anticipation. It is the subject of our songs, prayers, lessons and conversations. We want to go home! The kingdom of heaven offers us the three essential ingredients that any home offers:

Fellowship with God: Revelation 21:1-8 gives us the picture of the Tabernacle of God coming down to be among men. That suggests fellowship with God and with each other. Any home that is really a home has fellowship together. Fellowship simply means friendship and fun. At home we expect to find friends and enriching experiences, and that's also what we expect when we get home!

Protection from Harm: Revelation 21:9-27 describes the physical strength of the New Jerusalem, its foundations, walls, gates and sheer size. It suggests that we will be safe and protected. At home people should feel safe from attacks, intruders and enemies. One of the special qualities of home is that is inspires in us a sense of security and safety. We expect safety when we get to the Kingdom of Heaven.

Provision of Resources: Revelation 22:1-5 describes how God will provide for our health and welfare. By eliminating all sickness, pain and providing for every temporal need, including something as simple as light. That suggests that provision will be made for anything necessary for our health and happiness. The same is true of our homes today. We know that if we can just get home, there will be something to eat and somewhere to lay our head. There's always seems to be plenty at home. Christians perceive the kingdom of heaven in the same way, a place where God will provide for us.

It's no wonder then that Christians sing that old Negro slave song: "Be so glad when I get home. Gonna jump and shout when I get home!

When I get home!

Every believer knows that there is a great reward awaiting him when he gets home, although others are hailed today.

Consider the missionary who returned to America after many years of service in the backwoods and jungles. His life had been totally dedicated to serving the Lord. As he sailed home he was on board a liner with a famous movie star that was known around the world. As the boat pulled into the harbor, a large crowd had gathered outside. They had gathered with bands, ticker tapes and banners to greet the movie star. As she walked down the ramp, Photographers flashed cameras and there were hugs and kisses for the movie star. As the music faded into the air and the crowd dissipated. When the old missionary walked down the rap there were no crowds or bands, or ticker tapes. He walked by himself.

A dock worker came to the missionary said: "Isn't it a shame that they would make such a fuss over a movie star when she comes home, but no one would even paint a sign for a man of God like yourself?" The missionary responded: "I don't feel bad at all, you see, when the movie star walked down that ramp she was at home, but I won't get home until I walk the streets of glory! But when I get home, there will be great rejoicing!"

When I get home, the heavenly choir will be singing!

When I get home, the hosts of heaven will meet me!

I don't know about you, but "I'll be so glad when I get home!"

"I'll be so glad when I get home because, when I get home:"

—The wicked will cease from troubling!

—The weary will be at rest

—Everyday will be Sunday! Always howdy and never good bye!

When I get home we shall see his face!

When I get home, I'm gonna shout and tell the story: how I made it over!

When I get home I'll sing that old song .."So glad, done got over! Done got over at last!"

God's Licking Stick

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 24, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"Being punished isn't enjoyable while it is happening—it hurts! But afterwards we can see the result, a quiet growth in grace and character." — Hebrews 12:11 (TLB) Hebrews 12:11 (KJV) Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.

Introduction

Do you remember the last time you punished by your parents?What was the punishment? Did you lose a privilege? Get a cut in your allowance? Were you grounded? Perhaps you were like millions in the African-American community that lost privileges, allowances and got a licking too boot. Discipline, regardless of the method has one purpose: to make one a better disciple. The manner of discipline depends upon whether one learns from reading Dr. Benjamin Spock's book "The Common Sense Book of Baby and Child Care" or from Grandma's school of experience. The ultimate goal is the same, producing an offspring that is God fearing and law abiding.

No child enjoys being punished. However, those who know that the punishment is being given in love, for their best interest are better able to handle receive it.

As children of the King, we too are often chastised by our Lord and Master. He chastises us because he loves us. For that reason we are able to endure, knowing that "weeping endures but a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

Exposition

This text focuses on the importance of discipline to development of the Christian life.

Paul, writing to the Hebrews explained the importance of developing good discipline as Christians. He points out in Hebrews that often God moves to discipline those, who are by acceptance of Christ, his own children. The word "chastise" in this context, refers to punish. When believers stray God punishes them, because he loves them. Ironically, in biblical history, those who were not among the chosen people often escaped punishment and seemed to get away with just about anything. Those who were God's elect however, were always being punished for their indiscretions. When the Canaanites worshipped Baal they often prospered, but each time Israel moved in that direction they were punished with droughts, famine and pestilence.

According to Holman: the word "discipline" comes from a Latin word "disco" which means to learn or get to know, a direct kind of acquaintance with something or someone. Discipline refers to the process by which one learns a way of life. Discipline requires a relationship between a person who knows the way of life (discipline) and an apprentice who is trying to learn the way of life. The idea is for the experienced person to lead the learner through a process (the discipline) until the learner can imitate and live like or better than his teacher.

Each believer is a disciple or a learner of the Christian life style. Our goal is to learn, through a gradual process, the Christian way until we can live it like the master lived it. To help us, God often chastises us, to help us develop discipline.

The chastisements of God have taken two forms: Physical and denial of privileges. When Israel sinned in the wilderness, God sent serpents among them to bite the them with poisonous venom. That was physical punishment. When Moses sinned in the wilderness by taking credit for God's act of providing water for the people he was punished by being denied access to the promised land. That was denial. God has used both methods of punishment in dealing with his people, depending on the circumstance. It appeared when they had either a dream or a possession denial of either the dream or possession was used. When they had neither, physical punishment was given.

This text makes it clear that whenever God punishes us we should know that it is because he loves us and we should be happy because we know the outcome will be good. The preponderance of biblical teaching follows this line:

"Behold, happy is the man whom God correcteth: therefore despise not thou the chastening of the Almighty:" -Job 5:17

"My son, despise not the chastening of the LORD; neither be weary of his correction: For whom the LORD loveth he correcteth; even as a father the son in whom he delighteth." — Proverbs 3:11-12

"For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." -Hebrews 12:6

Those whom God loves can expect to be discipline, either physically or by denials to help them learn the Christian way of life.

How to Discipline

In recent years African-Americans have been puzzled by the response of mainstream America to what is considered "tradition" discipline in our community. Our tradition approach to discipline is extracted from what the bible teaches: "spare not the rod. "Prov 23:13 Withhold not correction from the child: for if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not die. Thou shalt beat him with the rod, and shalt deliver his soul from hell." Proverbs 23:13-14. Over the years, we have developed an unwritten set of rules of implementation of the biblical demand for discipline. Generally, punishment administered with a barber's strap, belt, paddle, switch or with the open hand is considered acceptable. Punishments which leave permanent scars, maim, or disable or frowned upon. While, with a few exceptions, we believe in applying the rod, there is no support among African-Americans for parents who burn babies with cigarettes, beat children with clothes hangers, or disfigure or injure children. Each family applies the level of punishment deemed necessary to respond to the situation. However, there is an invisible line over which we should not cross; a point in which we move from punishment to abuse. It is the law of our people. It is a law written in the African-American culture and has been passed down for generations.

Many are frustrated when laws, with roots in the Eurocentric culture, label as "child abuse" that which has been traditional to our people for centuries. Parents who spank their children or attempt to discipline them risk arrest as child protection agencies come to the defense of sometimes devilish kids who escape punishment for wrongs by calling "the number."

How should a Christian parent discipline a child?

Discipline, is teaching a child a way of life. It involves more than punishment. To help children develop, discipline parents should: 1)Guide them by example, in Godly ways (1 Timothy 3:4; 2)Tell them what is right and what is wrong (1 Kings 1:6); 3)Love them unconditionally (Luke 15:11-32); 4)With love, Correct them either physically or with denial in response to their age and the circumstance. (Proverbs 29:17); and 5) Pass your faith along to them (2 Timothy 1:5)

In this sense, the Christian instills discipline in children with this five step approach. Mere punishment, without the other four elements, falls into the category of spiritual child abuse.

Christ took our Punishment

Very few people enjoy administering disciplinary actions. They are necessary means to achieve a desired end. Parents get no great thrill out of punishing a son or daughter. In fact they often feel more pain, internally, than the offending child.

Neither does God enjoy disciplining us. He gets no thrill when it comes time to correct us for our missteps, but because he loves us, he corrects us. Consider the poor mother who learned that her son had stolen some merchandise from a local store. The mother screamed at the child. Her blood pressure rose. She was angry, disappointed, frustrated and afraid for the future of her chain. After she screamed and cried until she couldn't hardly talk she told her son to go outside and "get your licking stick. "Don't get no little one either, get a big one."

The boy went to a bush outside and broke off a limb and pulled off its leaves. He fully expected what was coming. He decided he would be tough and take it, after all, it would only last for a few minutes. Trembling, the mother told her son to hold the switch. She turned her back to him and peeled back her blouse to reveal her bare back. She yelled to her son "Hit me." The boy was reluctant to hit his mother, but she demanded that he do so. As he struck her over and over, whelps and scratches formed on her back. Blood began to appear.

She turned to him with tears running from eyes and said: "Son, when you disobey me you hurt the dream I have for you. You may as well take a switch and whip me because I hurt inside. She turned her scarred back to him and tearfully said "Look at the stripes on my back and remember this day." The boy left the room. For the first time he understood what his mother meant when she said "this hurts me, more than it hurts you." The mother never had to lift a hand to that son again. He spent the rest of his life trying to make sure that his mother would never feel that much pain again.

As Christians, we know that God disciplines all believers much like parents discipline children. When we sin, we cause God great pain and anger.

Then one day, on an old rugged cross, Jesus told a sinful world "go and get me a licking stick." "Go and get me an old rugged cross."

It was a cross that should have been our punishment!

It was a cross that should have been our condemnation!

It was a cross that should have been our degradation!

Instead of condemning the world and punishing us, he took its punishment upon himself. He allowed himself to be stripped, and beaten with 39 lashes. He allowed crown of thorns to be placed upon his head ..nails to be driven in his hands and feet!

He bled and died and took our punishment upon himself looking forward to a glorious resurrection, restored hope, and a second chance!

Isaiah put it this way: " But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed!" Isaiah 53:5

And with his stripes, we are healed!

..And with his stripes.. we are healed!

O.J.
(Only Jesus)

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Pleasant Green Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 24, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"And when they looked, only Jesus was with them." — Matthew 17:8 (TLB) "Then suddenly they looked around and Moses and Elijah were gone, and only Jesus was with them." — Mark 9:8 "And the Jewish leaders slipped away one by one, beginning with the eldest, until only Jesus was left in front of the crowd with the woman." — John 8:9 "and become one with him, no longer counting on being saved by being good enough or by obeying God's laws, but by trusting Christ to save me; for God's way of making us right with himself depends on faith— counting on Christ alone." — Philippians 3:9 (TLB)

Introduction

Have you ever stood alone and felt that everyone is against you? Have you ever been in a situation where, in your own mind, you felt that you were being falsely accused? In such times it looks as though the whole were is against you. Standing alone is a painful thing. It is a terrible thing. It is a humiliating thing. It is a troublesome thing.

Standing alone can also be embarrassing. Consider the boy who sat on the back row of his school classroom and watched as his teacher stood from behind his death and posed a challenge to the class: "If there is anyone in this class that considers himself stupid, will you please stand up!" There was a long silence. Not a student moved. The teacher bellowed his challenge again: "If there is anyone in this class that considers himself stupid, will you please sand up!" After a long silence the boy slowed rose from his back row seat and stood tall." Taken aback, the teacher asked the boy "Son do you consider yourself dumb?" They looked at the teacher and dropped his head in a half smirk and half smile then said, "No teacher, I just hate to see you standing all by yourself!"

You can feel awkward sometimes when you are standing alone.

In our nation we have had two glaring examples of individuals standing alone. The confirmation hearing of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court, found one man standing alone. Whether or not he was guilty is not germane to this thought, but what is important that when he was being accused he was standing alone. Now, O.J. Simpson, who is close to the hearts of many in America is also giving us a picture of another African-American man standing alone. The intense media coverage has prompted many people to wonder how they would stand, faced with such a great host of accusers. Sometimes each person wonders how they would react given the same circumstance. Some would have given up, if it had not been for the Lord, a long time earlier.

These moments when we are standing all by ourselves could easily be characterized as O.J. moments. A Kodak moment is characterized as a memorable moment of happiness. But an O.J. moment is a moment when you are standing by yourself.

As Christians we are reassured that we are never standing alone. Our O.J. moment simply means that then its "Only Jesus!" that can help us make it through the day!

Exposition

These three text verses characterize special moments in which Jesus and Jesus only is the answer to the dilemma.

O.J. Moment: When We Succeed

There are at least three circumstances in which a belief might encounter an O.J. Moment. In Mark, Peter got a chance to climb to the top of the mount of transfiguration. While there they were present a vision of the glories and grandeurs of heaven. Elijah was seen. So was Moses. It was so beautiful that the Peter wanted to stay and build three Tabernacles. However they had to come down because the service is not on the mountain, but in the valley. As the descended the mount, all of the other glories that had enjoyed on the mountain were gone. There was only Jesus.

This presents us with the first circumstance that can be described as an O.J. moment: The moment of success. It may seem peculiar but we all should be extremely careful of mountain top experiences. We should remember that the joys of such moments are fleeting because when the crowds are gone and we are alone, its still "only Jesus!" Many people are overly exited over the joy of the moment. They function only when there is an exciting circumstance and there is glory to be gained. However, many have learned that when the crowds are calling your name, it is one of the most dangerous times in your life. They will often praise us to the point of flattery, telling us that ugly hats look good and suits that are too small fit just right. They do that until they get what they want or accomplish what they are trying achieve.

In moment of success, when we are at the zenith of achievement, we should never forget that all we really have is "only Jesus." We should remember this because when the crowd goes away there is still Jesus. When the accolades have faded, there is still Jesus. When the praise of men has faded into the distant horizon, there is still Jesus!

O.J. Moment: When we fail

There is a second O.J. moment. It is best characterized when we consider Peter as he walked on the water. Peter was one who witnessed the power of Jesus. When he saw Jesus walking on the water he forgot what may have learned in school about the laws of buoyancy and how solid objects can sink in water. He set out to walk on water. As long as he kept his eyes focused on Jesus he was able to defy the laws of science, logic and all of those who doubted that it could be done. However, when he looked down and took his eyes off Jesus, he started to sink.

As he started to go down he forgot about the crowds, science and ..all he could see was man standing in front him. It was only Jesus. That was an O.J. moment.

There are moments in our lives when have experience failure and frustration. It is a lonely feeling when we face failure. Failure is an O.J. moment. Sometimes when we fail and watch those who are less dedicated to the faith than we are succeed we go into a depression and start feeling sorry for ourselves. However in moments when the ungodly seem to excel we should remember the scripture that says, "Fret not thyself because of evildoers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity. For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb. Psalm 37:-1-2. Sometimes failure creeps into our interpersonal relationships and creative endeavors. At such times we shrink into an O.J. moment. When Peter found himself sinking he puts eyes on Jesus. Peter's prayer was short and to the point, but yet it was powerful. He didn't say anything about the cooling board, the winding sheet, coming to press a dying pillar, or crossing over the chilly Jordan. All he said was "Lord, Save me." That prayer got through and he was able to arise from his O.J. moment. Sometimes even in the church there are moments when those who are promoting the program feel as though they are sinking. Even in the church, if we keep our eyes on Jesus, he will save our waning enthusiasm and carry us across the treacherous waters. That's why the song writer declares "there ain't no danger in God's water. Get on board! Get on board!

O.J. Moment: When Caught Up In Sin

The third O.J. moment is especially important in the season of revival because it has peculiar interest to those who may feel themselves unworthy to come to God.

Here, Jesus speaks to a woman who had been living an adulterous act and had been caught in the very act. Her accusers brought her before Christ as a test of his faithfulness of the law asking his judgment of her situation. The Mosaic law required a person caught in such an act to be stone to death. Now the crowd had found itself a victim and wanted Jesus to indicate her status in the new kingdom that he spoke so much about. Jesus stooped and wrote on the ground and looked beyond the strict codes of the law and beyond the letters which had been written on the scrolls and peered into the heart of the woman. Challenging the conscience of her accusers directly he said "Let he that is without sin among you, cast the first stone." It was the first instance of the "stone that was never cast." The woman's accusers started leaving one at time. The woman soon found that in the midst of her accusation there was only Jesus. He responded by asking her "woman where are thy accusers?" There were none.

There are many people today who yearned to be forgiven for past indiscretions. The doubt the possibility of forgiveness because they have seen the cruelty of people in general. God forgives past sins, but one sage says "Negroes never forget." Someone always brings up the past and rattles hidden bones in the closet. We should be careful about rattling bones however, because everyone has a closet, and everyone has some bones! Jesus looked at this woman in an O.J. situation and forgave her.

Today there are many who may have found themselves in an O.J. situation: alone, lonely, unforgiven and troubled.

If you are in O.J. situation, don't be despondent, but keep your eyes on the Lord. It's not the crowd or the opinion of men that counts, it's only Jesus!

Only Jesus can forgive your sins!

Only Jesus can give you a new lease on life!

Only Jesus can be with you always. In Matthew 28 Jesus told all believers "and lo I'll be with you alway, even unto the end of the earth!" When every one else deserts you, there's only Jesus!

When your husband lost faith in you, there was only Jesus!

When your church members doubted you, there was only Jesus!

Only Jesus can answer our questions!

Only Jesus can heal our sicknesses!

Only Jesus can wipe the tears from our eyes!

The lame man testifies that he was sitting by the pool for 38 long years and could not be healed. Then one day he met the master and he told him to take his bed and walk. It was only Jesus!

A blind man had been blind from birth, but after he met the Lord he was able to declare: "I was once blind, but now I see." It was only Jesus!

A wild man was running through the graveyard being filled with demons, but was settled down by the spirit of God. He testifies that it was, only Jesus!

When you or your loved one were laying in the hospital. Many doctors came to your side. There were many nurses and attendants. But when you walked out of that hospital room, you looked back and realized that it was "only Jesus" that made it possible for you to leave.

When tears fell from your eyes, it was only Jesus, who wiped them away!

Jesus, the lily of the valley!

Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Jesus, the fairest of ten thousand!

Died out on Calvary that we might have everlasting life!

But early Sunday morning he arose from dead!

If you are looking for someone to lift your burdens today, It's only Jesus!

Look What You'll Miss

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Pleasant Green Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 27, 1994

Scripture: "And he brought forth his people with joy, and his chosen with gladness:" Psalm 105:43 "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1The 4:17

Introduction

Have you ever missed out on an exiting event? How did you feel when those who returned told you about all of the exciting things they did and saw? Those are moments when you are sorry that you didn't go or participate. No one likes to be left out of a good thing or miss a grand opportunity, especially when it looks like it is going to be fun!

Consider the sinner who stood before the gates of heaven as he heard his life story read to him. "It appears" said the tall angel, "that you have led quite a life outside of the church. In fact, you seldom came, but when you did you sat in the back and slept." The man nodded his headed fearfully. He was distracted for a moment by some loud music he heard coming from hell. The angel told him to ignore it, it was coming from the evil doers. The angel told that despite his bad record on earth he was going to get a chance to make to the sweet serene streets of the new Jerusalem. There would be soft church music, pink lemonade, and milk and honey cakes served daily. As they talked the man saw some men carrying trays. The angel told him to ignore them because they were carrying food to the evil doers: chittlin's, greens, corn bread, sweet potato pie, and hot tea. The man kept staring. But before another word could be said, a bus load of the finest women he had ever seen drove by. The angel said, "Ignore them, they are evil doers, they are going to the daily party. It's millions of them down there." Finally the angel told the man, we are giving you one more chance to make to the quiet streets of heaven, but if you you do one more thing wrong, you are out! The man, keep looking down and listening to all the goodtimes going on below. He became so excited that he hit the angel with his suitcase and shouted: "Hurry up and put me out, so I can get there before the party is over!" Nobody likes to miss out on a good time, even it carries them straight to hell!

There are too many people whose impression of the Christian life is that of a boring succession of sad faces, dull speeches, long classes and endless programs. They perceive the Christian life a pitiful excuse for happiness by those who couldn't cut it in the real world, or who have become to old to really enjoy themselves. While they are tolerant of the church and its members, such persons, do not perceive the Christian life as something that is to be desired.

As Christians, we know that there is a great joy in serving the Lord. Our way of life is filled with happiness, contentment and the beauty of knowing that our lives edify and glorify God. It is a happy experience. Those who never really know the Christian life will miss the greatest experience of their lives!

Exposition

This emphasizes that joy that is shared by Christians, while showing the detailed picture of atrocities that they will miss because they are part of the kingdom of God.

The Christian expects Joy

The great reward of every believer is eternal life and eternal joy. Unlike happiness, joy flows from the spiritual to existential. It moves from the inner being to the out being. Because of its unique nature, joy does not depend upon superficial supports to survive. Happiness depends upon the material to survive. It is momentary in nature and lasts only as long as the superficial supports exist. Momentary happiness can be derived from money, possessions, power, prestige, or sexual gratification. However, it disappears the moment these supports are no longer available.

Eccl 2:26 suggests that Joy comes from God: "For God giveth to a man that is good in his sight wisdom, and knowledge, and joy: but to the sinner he giveth travail, to gather and to heap up, that he may give to him that is good before God. This also is vanity and vexation of spirit." Even those who are able to heap up much usually find that God takes it away and gives it to those that please him.

Being a Christian means to be person that if filled with Joy. Acts 13:52 : "And the disciples were filled with joy, and with the Holy Ghost." In fact, Gal 5:22-23 notes that one of the true signs of a saved life is the spirit of joy: " But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith,Meekness, temperance: against such there is no law.

The unsaved can be happy, thrilled, titillated, enthused, enthralled, excited and merry, but only the saved can have joy, because Joy comes from the Lord!

If you miss the Christian life you'll miss the great chance to know true joy!

Too much emphasis on negatives

True Christians are people who believe that anything that God is for, can be done! They are optimists!

Too often we are trying to attract people to the Christian life in the midst of our complaints. "Church service is too long." The preacher never knows when to sit down." "He prays too long" are negatives that suggest that even the Christian is bored with his own lifestyle, it's not something that others should want to emulate.

Moreover, there are many Christians who spend a great deal of time talking with none Christians about things they don't like about the church. The negatively criticize everyone from the preacher to the deacon. They gossip about church members and criticize every aspect of the church's program. Such negative talk suggests that even the church's members have not joy.

Teachers that don't prepare their Sunday School lessons are boring. Preachers who don't prepare their sermons are boring! Choir members who do not rehearse are boring. Members who sit through church services as if they were attending a funeral service are boring! No one is attracted to a lifestyle that appears to be not worth preparing for, not worthy rehearsing for, not enjoyable enough to even keep you awake for an hour or too!

More Emphasis on the Positives..joy!

The Christian experience should be an endless stream of joy! In celebration there should be joy. Even in sadness there should be joy. No matter what the situation James 1:2 says we should "Count it all joy."

The adult perception of the Christian life is formed in childhood. If the church provided enjoyable experiences for its youth then the youth grew up thinking that being a Christian can be fun! If those experiences were dull, and boring, then the youth waits for the day he is old enough to turn his back on the Christian life. Many have resolved in their own minds "I swore when I was a child, that I would never attend Sunday School, or church again."

That means churches must work hard, spare not expense, and used every means at its disposal to insure that those who are in its care perceive the Christian life to be one which is rich and full of enjoyable experiences. Camps, retreats, social events, fellowships and other outings show those who are growing in the faith that there is joy in the Christian experience. Churches who are so budget conscious that they ignore the importance of acitivities run the risk of teaching by example that the church and the Christian life is a dull experience!

Those who are outside of the church will Miss Out!

Those who are outside of the church will miss out on the glories of being a Christian. They will never know what it means to experience real joy in their lives. At best they will only know happiness, which is fleeting.

Even worse those who are outside of the church will miss out on the rapture. When Christ returns and prepares to initiate the final seven years of this present age he will raise the sainted dead and transform those who remain, in the twinkling of an eye!

Those who are not saved will miss out on the rapture! They will be left behind!

During those seven final years there will be great tribulation, trouble and anguish on earth! It will be a difficult time! However, those who are saved WILL miss out on the trouble that will occur during this period because they will be caught up in the air with Christ!

Only the saved will miss the the final judgements of God!

That judgement will be so great that the earth will quake, the sun will become black like sack cloth and the moon will become as blood! The stars of heaven will fall to the ground like figs off a tree. Heaven will roll up like a scroll! Mountains and Islands will be moved out of their places!

The judgement of God will be great! But if you are saved, look what you'll miss!

Look at how terrible that great day will be! Rev 6:16-17 says the tribulation period will be so bad that people will wish to die but won't be able to die: "And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb:For the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?" Rev. 6:16-17.

Look what you'll miss! Because you came to Jesus you'll miss this terrible moment!

Not only will those who come to Jesus know the Joy of Salvation and be protected from the adversities of the tribulation, but those who are save will experience eternal life in the Kingdom of Heaven.

If you don't accept Christ, look what you'll miss!

John paints us an inviting picture in Revelation 21! "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea." Rev. 21:1

John saw the New Jerusalem coming down out of heaven. Look what you will miss!

It had streets paved with gold. Look what you will miss!

It had a tree standing in its midst that was good for the healing of the nations. Look what you will miss!

There will be joy there for all of eternity. Look what you will miss.

Every mountain will be made low, every valley shall be exalted and the rough places shall be made plain!

Every day will be Sunday. It will always be howdy and never goodbye.

If you don't accept Christ ...

Look what you will miss!

God's Message To The Hip Hop Generation

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Pleasant Green Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 29, 1994

Scripture:"But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light: Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy. 1 Peter 2:9-10

Introduction

Does God have a message for your generation? Is he just a God of the old folks? Is he important to the young people of your generation? There are many who think God is old fashioned. They believe that he had a level of importance for people of a different time but he has no revelance for today's challenges. Yet, even in the difficulty of these times, God still has a message of hope and inspiration.

The present generation of youth are no different from those of the past. Each had its own peculiarities and idiosyncracies that were frown upon by he generation preceding. Whether or not we hailed from the Charleston generation with its finger waved hair, short dresses and beads or whether it was the Boogie Woogie generation of Count Basie, Louis Armstrong and the jitterbug, each has know its own peculiarites. There are some who came from the Bobby Sox generation. It was a time of black and white shoes, thick socks, Elvis Pressly, Little Richard, and the 55 Chevrolet. There are some who hailed from the Woodstock Generation. It was marked by long hair, anti-war protests, Afros, stage plank shoes and dashikis. Some came from what has been called the "Pepsi generation" who feasted on Kentucky Fried Chicken, listen to Prince and the Purple Rain, Bobby Brown, and Run DMC. Now there is before us a new generation, similar to those of the past but is yet different. This new generation is generally described as the Hip Hop Generation. It is a generation of rap music, ear ringed ears, baggy clothing, R. Kelly & Snoop Doggy Dog. This is the generation that today's youth are encountering. The temptations they face are similar to those of previous generations, but the advent of technology makes extremely more difficult to resist and to handle.

Christian youth, faced with this delimma are being called upon by the millions to rise from the their generation and choose to serve a mighty and powerful God who has chosen them to be his witness. The challenge to rise up and witness for Christ is what lies before this generation. The challenge to know him in every way and tell others what we know faces every Christain youth.

As Christians, we know that God has a special task for us. We may not know exactly what it is, but we that has something for us to do. Let us ask him for strength to rise from our generation and give God a chance, not as a part of the Hip Hop Generation but as a part of his glorious elite, the chosen generation.

Exposition

This text considers Peter as he explains what believers are to God.

In previous verses of the same Chapter Peter had painstaking laid out a blueprint of how Christians are to grow from being babes in the faith to mature adults as they grow in the word (v2). He presented pictures of what Christ is to believers and what Christ is to practicing sinners. To those who believe Christ is like the corner stone of a building and each person a living stone of the same building. To those who live lives of sin Christ is like a stumbling stone which prompts which identifies their disobedience and obstinence.

After speaking of those who reject the teachings of Christ and the Kingdom of God in verse 8, Peter begins verse 9 with "but", a conjunction, that connects the two ideas together. While there are those who reject Christ and the Christian lifestyle, ye tells believers that they are a special chosen generation that has been called from among the legions of non-believers to bear witness to his marvelous works.

Peter identified the believers as a Royal Priesthood, indicating that they were elevated high among their peers, with each person serving as a priest, preacher, minister or evangelist of one to spread the word about the most high God. He also told them that they were a holy nation, a people who although they existed in the world had a holy look and character about themselves. Thirdly, he suggested that they were a peculiar people, noting that their ways were sometimes viewed as strange to those who walk in darkness.

The mission of this chosen generation, according to Peter was to emphasize to live in such a way that our very lives give praise to God. Our lives witness to the fact that he has brought us out of the darkness into the marvelous light of his word.

Thus, this new chosen generation is compelled to carry itself as a holy and different kind of people in the world. It is challenged to be in the world but not of it. To be fully and totally committed to making their lives a living example of the wonder working power of God.

Satan's Plan For Youth

Satan has a plan to gain new recruits among today's youth. It is designed to lure them into one of two subcultures called: Hip Hop and New Jack, turn them against mainsteam morals and culture and ultimately destroy them.

Satan has been busy.Recent studies have revealed that by the age of 16 the average child will watch 200,000 acts of violence on television; in addition to 33,000 murder, 20,000 sex acts, 35,000 naked bodies and will hear 150,000 songs that will urge him to have sex, drink alcohol, shoot someone, or get high. These are the statistics for the average American youth. Consider the fact that African-American youth spends 50 percent more time watching television and listening to radio than all others and it is not hard to understand the complexity of our situation.

This generation is developing a taste for things that are vulgar, violent, and sexy. It is reflected in the movies youth like most. Though there were scores of new movies in the last three years the ones that were favorites of African-American teens were those most violent or had plenty of cursing and sex. The top movies among African-American teens recently were: Boyz in the Hood, House Party, Juice, New Jack City and Talk Dirty after Dark. New Jack City alone grossed over $60 million, mostly from African-American young people.

In the midst of all these influences a new counter culture has developed over the last few years, called Hip Hop. It is a music driven voice of youth rebellion that reflects a languague, culture, fashion and hairstyles that are counter to mainstream influences. The new counter culture attempts to teach youth to go against mainstream cultural standards. If, for example, boys are expected to wear their pants fitted on their waists, Hip Hop urges them to wear them loose on their hips. Instead of wearing shirt tails in, Hip Hop suggests that they wear them out. Instead of buckling belts, Hip Hop suggests that they be worn unbuckled or no belts at all. Since it is expected that men do not wear ear rings, Hip Hop suggests that men wear ear rings. Rather than take hats off in the building, Hip Hop suggests that they keep hats on, and turn them backwards. At one point they were even being urged not only to wear their hats backward but their clothes as well.

Since there are no books, classes or literature on the Hip Hop movement, where do the young people learn about it? They learn about it through rap music, and music videos. Rap music itself is not the culprit. It is simply a style of music. However, rap has been used to get messages of defiance, violence and sex across to our youth. Some groups have positive messages in their songs such as as: X-Clan, KRS-One, Arrested Development, Queen Latifh, and Soldiers for Christ. However, there are others that send our dangerously venemous lyrics that encourage youth to buy guns, become violent, steal, degrade women,drink alcohol and use drugs. Some of these groups include: American Made Gangstas, Dr. Dre, Too Short, Two Live Crew, NWA, Ice T, Ice Cube and the most popular and one of the most venonous: Snoop Doggie Dog.

The Hip Hop movement is supported financially by the cigarette and alcohol movement that has targeted African American youth as easy prey. Many of the rappers are secretly backed by alcohol companies to influence youth to drink. The rap group 8-Ball is backed by Eight Ball Old English 800 Malt Liquor; Ice Cube is promoted by St. Ives Malt Liquor; and it is no coincidence that when Snoop Doggie Dog started singing about the joys of “Gin and Juice” that packages of gin and juice began showing up in liquor stores around the country.

Even sadder, hundreds of thousands of youth are graduating from Hip Hop to the next worse stage, New Jack. New Jack, mostly affects the young men. It is a close fraternity of young men who must prove that they are willing to anything to prove that they have the "juice" or ultimate courage. This includes, drugs, promiscurity, even murder. It is the kind of "juice" that served as the basis for the movie "New Jack City." Those who moved down to the New Jack dimension have already decided that being "New Jack" is more important than life itself so the threat of death or jail does not frigth then more than the thought of being told that they don't have the "juice." Satan has a grip on millions of young people who are caught up so tight they cannot turn loose.

Come Out

However, Jesus is calling out to the young people of this generation reminding them that he has great work for them to do and step out of their generation into his elite group of young Christian warriors as a part of the Chosen generation.

When Satan starts influencing our young they must be prepared to answer. When Satan plants the idea that there is "nothing wrong with a little bump and grind" the Christian youth remembers that the word of God says "the body is the temple of the Holy Ghost".

So the Christian answers R. Kelly by saying "I don't see nothing wrong with waiting until the right time."

Christian youth have their own "12 play."

There were 12 tribes of Israel, 12 Apostles and there will be 12 gates to the new Jerusalem that will sit on 12 foundations that's 12 play!

Youth who become members of God's chosen generation will serve a God who turns:

Darkness into light; failure into success

Weakness into strength; lost hope into fulfilled dreams

You'll serve a savior who loved you so much that he picked up and old rugged cross, marched it up golgatha's hill and died.

But Early!

Early Sunday morning!

He Arose from the dead!

Crying out to all who will..

Come and go with me to my father's house!

In my father's house there is joy! Joy! Joy!

It Is Well

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 14, 1994

SCRIPTURE:2 Kings 4:26 Run now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child? And she answered, It is well.Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need.I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. Philippians 4:11-13

Introduction

What is your worry quotient? That is the point in which present crises minus available solutions equal zero. Most people fare well in crises situations if there are more solutions than problems. Your worry quotient is the point in which at which you begin to become overly concerned about the problem. Some trouble themselves at the slightest problem. Some worry only when their options run low. Then there are some that seem confident that their lives are guided by unseen hands and refuse to worry.

Consider the man who was driving his custom made truck along the highway with a neighbor. The truck drove and rode well. Everything went well until the neighbor notice that the gas needle pointed to "E." Even though the needle pointed to empty the driver never seemed to flinch. There wasn't a service station for miles, but yet the driver was so cool and collected. His passenger didn't take it so calmly. He kept watching the needle and looking desperately for a gas station. As the needle dived over into the red, he saw the driver push a little red button and he kept driving. When they finally reached a station the passenger said "why weren't you worried when your gas tank hit empty." The driver smiled and said, "When I custom made this truck I installed two tanks. When my regular tank runs out, I just switch to my auxiliary tank and keep driving. The "E" means exchange tanks. It means "Everything is under control!"

That's the way it is in every Christian life. Those who know the Lord travel on their own power for as long as they can. When problems arise they apply their education, skills, and experience to the situation, but when they the hand points to "E" instead of worrying they switch tanks and live daily on Auxiliary power supplied by the Holy Spirit.

Just as with the truck, "E" doesn't mean "Empty" it means exchange tanks and give the situation to God. A song writer put it this way: "If the world from you withhold, of its silver and its gold and you have to get along with meager fare. Just remember in his word, how he feed the little bird, take your burden to the Lord and leave it there."

Are you spiritually on "E"? Switch tanks, everything will be alright!

Exposition

This text focuses on how lives that operate on faith display confidence, despite circumstances, that God will meet the needs of those who are called according to his purpose.

The prophet Elisha's life was illumined by mighty miracles. Each had a special purpose and served as a demonstration of the power of God. On one occasion Elisha came to say regularly at the home of an elderly god fearing couple who had no children. At verse 16 Elisha, acting as God's emissary, announced that she would have a child within a year's time as a reward for the kindness she had been shown. The next year the woman conceived. She had a son that grew old enough to walk and play. One day the child became ill and then died while sitting on her lap (v20).

Even though her child had died, the woman did not panic. She carried the boy into the room used by the Elisha on his overnight stays and shut the door. As she left to seek out Elisha she told her inquiring husband "It shall be well." When she reached Elisha his servant asked: "Is it well with thee? Is it well with thy husband? Is it well with thy child?" Though her son lay dead upon a bed in her house she responded "It is well.

Her statement suggested that she looked beyond the tragedy she saw earlier in her home. She looked to the God of Elisha. She felt if she could reach Elisha he could intercede with God and the situation could be reversed. She was so confident that she refused to leave until Elisha accompanied her home. Once there the prophet inspected the situation and then after a short while walked from the room with a living boy.

To the woman it was no surprise, she was confident that God would supply her need.

That is exactly the point that Paul makes as he writes to the Philippians. He noted that in his life time he had experienced abundance and periods of depravation. Through it all he has learned not to get excited, but God has always supplied his needs.

Together these two biblical passages give a clear picture of confidence in the power of God to deliver. Like the Hebrew Boys facing the fiery furnace, or Daniel in the lion's den, they serve to remind us that despite the difficulty of the moment, our God is able to supply all of our needs.

Is it Well With thee?

Today there are millions of people who are troubled spiritually. They look well to the eye, but secretly they are confused and tormented.

Some are troubled over the economics of life. Opportunities to land a job or to advance seem to evade them and they are constantly depressed. Some are failing in business efforts and career choices. There are some who are faced with impossible circumstances in their educational pursuits.

It is almost as if their dreams in life have died in their laps? What do you do with a dead dream?

The woman in this text watched her dream, her child, die in her lap. However, she never lost hope. When questioned by her husband she responded "It shall be well!"

That should be our answer. When dreams begin to die on you...don't despair! Keep the faith! It shall be well!

The key in understanding the text is to understand the full meaning of "well." Two conditions must exist before anyone can truly respond: it is well.

First, there must be a confidence that there is a power that is great enough to resolve our dilemmas and we have access to that power. If we are sure that no matter what comes along in life that we are in contact with a greater power than our difficulties, we can boldly say "it is well." When the disciples were aboard ship one day a storm broke out and they thought they would sink, as they all prepared to die, somebody remembered that Jesus was asleep below deck. When Jesus awoke he spoke to the winds and the waves and said "Peace be still." It does not matter how difficult the storm or ferocious its waves, we know we can ride out its fierce winds if Jesus is on board.

The first step to developing an "it is well" attitude is know Jesus, the power greater than any frustration that may come your way. When it comes to facing life's difficulties, it is not what you know, but who you know. You may know economics and accounting but when your checkbook balance is zero and your pockets are empty, you need to know the Lord. You may know science and medicine, but when you are laying on your sick bed, its best to know Jesus. Knowledge, training and information allow us to say "it is well" only when those words are explaining what is. When we know Jesus we can say "it is well" because it is expression of what "can be." No wonder the song writer declares: You got to know Jesus, know God for yourself, if you know Jesus you don't need nobody else.

Secondly, developing an "it is well" attitude requires us to understand that whatever the outcome of a situation, it will work out to the advantage, but not necessarily as we would have to be. A recent movie showed a woman who was a marketing executive who was fired from her double digit salary job because she spent too much time raising an orphan child. She was almost shattered by her firing. However, she bought a home raised the child from her savings. A special apple pudding she made for the child became locally popular. She used her marketing skills, mass produced it and made millions, from her home. She even received an invitation to return to the company, which she turned down. At the moment the situation appeared fatal, but it worked out to her advantage, she was richer, freer and happier than she would have ever been, had she not been fired.

An "it is well" attitude says regardless of how bad the situation, even if my dream dies in my lap, the God who supplied one dream, can supply another. The person who can respond "it is well" is sure that God never "closes one door" without "opening another." However, more important than that, the "it is well" person has faith in the word of God. This person remembers that Romans 8:28 says "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." With that faith the "it is well" person resolves in the words of the song writer "if even if the storms don't cease, my soul is anchored in the Lord."

It is well

The faith that God is still in control is the "extra tank" that every Christian carries through life. It helps us to weather every storm with a positive outlook becomes we know that it will work out right. When we have done all we know how to do, that's the time we should "switch tanks."

Switching tanks is depending on the power of God!

Switching tanks is leaning on the everlasting arms!

Switching tanks is what the song writer meant when he said "if the world from you withhold of its silver and its gold and you have to get along with meager fare, just remember in his word how he feeds the little bird, take your burden to the Lord and leave it there! If you trust and never doubt, he will surely bring you out, take your burden to the Lord and leave it there!"

A Centurion soldier met Jesus on the street on behalf of a sick servant. He told Jesus, 'you don't need to come, just speak the word and my servant will be healed.' That's tank switching faith.

A woman with an issue of blood, saw Jesus coming up the street she said in her mind, "if I can touch the hem of his garment, I can be made whole!" That's tank switching faith.

Faith in God takes an ugly situation and makes it beautiful

Faith in God finds

—Strength in the middle of weakness; success in the midst of failure; peace in the midst of confusion; joy in the midst of sadness; comfort in the midst of loneliness.

In closing, I'm reminded of the true story of Horatio Spafford, who was a successful businessman who suffered extreme financial failure. His son died and the world seemed to topple around him. To take a rest he sent his wife and four children overseas on a boat to later join them. But the ship had a wreck and his four children died along with others. As he joined his grieving wife, Spafford read his bible and considered all that had happened to him and looked at the waters that had buried his children. His whole world had been destroyed, but yet he sat down and wrote these words "When peace, like a river, attendeth my way, when sorrows like sea billows roll, whatever my lot, thou has taught me to say, it is well, it is well with my soul!”

I don’t know about you but I have learned how to say “it is well!”

Storms may rise, but it is well!

Winds may blow, but it is well!

It is well because Jesus, my fortress in the storm is on board!

It is well because he died, and rose for my salvation!

It is well! It is well, with my soul!

The Right Blood Type

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 21, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"And he said unto them, this is my blood of the New Testament which is shed for you." Matthew 14:24

Introduction

Do you know your blood type? Many people don't know their blood type and are not aware of its significance. Those with a military background, or who have had an occasion to be hospitalized or become blood donors have probably learned their blood type. Most people, especially the young are not aware of their blood type or its importance. Many think, any red blood will do, but that is not entirely true, red blood is not red, its really blue. Just any old blood will not do.

Consider the man who was the victim of a serious accident in a remote village without benefit of modern medicine. The man had lost plenty of blood and the villagers feared he would die. As a last minute act the village chief ordered the people to find blood for him from somewhere. After a short while a man returned with a container of blood. It was infused, but more was needed. A second container of blood was brought. Finally a third container was brought. After several days the man miraculously recovered. But in a few days they noticed strange behavior on his part. It was hard to understand. Finally, the chief called in the men who supplied the blood and asked where it came from. The first man said I got it from my stallion in the pasture. The second said I got mine from a pig in the pen out back. The last man said I got mine from a Chimpanzee in the forest. The chief said "That explains it!" "Explains what?" "It explains why he's been running like a horse, eating like a hog, and acting a monkey all day long!" Just any blood won't do!

Since 1900 modern science has divided human blood into groups. Scientists noticed that certain groups of blood would cause clots if they were mixed with others. They isolated the types into groups called A,B,AB and O. While there were some exceptions they generally recommended that if blood is exchanged from one person to another, that both parties should have the same blood type, otherwise the recipient of the foreign blood could die.

As Christians we have received an infusion of blood that gives us a new spiritual life in Christ. There are many sources of bad blood in the world that want to give us transfusions. However, we must constantly be on guard against allowing spiritually bad blood into our life stream. Jesus gave us the right type: "My Blood." It's not just any blood, but it's the blood that was shed for the remission of our sins.

Exposition

This text considers blood and the types that were required for the forgiveness of sins in both the old and new covenants.

There has always been a level of importance placed upon blood in the scripture, primarily because life itself is derived from the blood. Blood and "life" or "living being" are closely associated. The Hebrews of Old Testament times were prohibited from eating blood. "Only be sure that thou eat not the blood: for the blood is the life; and thou mayest not eat the life with the flesh. Thou shalt not eat it; thou shalt pour it upon the earth as water" (Deut. 12:23-24). For agricultural people, this command stressed the value of life. Though death was ever-present, life was sacred. Life was not to be regarded cheaply.

Even when the Old Testament speaks of animal sacrifice and atonement, the sacredness of life is emphasized. "For the life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul" (Lev. 17:11). In giving what was of great value, the person offering the sacrifice showed that reconciliation with God involved life—the basic element of human existence. Atonement was costly. Only the New Testament could show how costly.

Not only was blood required, but certain types of blood were required for certain types of sins. Moreover, social strata also decided the type of blood required. Leviticus Chapters 4 and 5 describe two categories of sinners and the types of blood required for the forgiveness of each. In the context of this message that might easily be described as types A and B.

Type A can be described as the sins committed out of ignorance. These would include mistakes, blunders, oversight, and misinformation. When the priest sinned he was required to bring a young bullock and sacrifice it to God. No other blood offered would be sufficient. (Lev. 4:3). When the people, as a community or nation, sinned they also required a young bullock. (Lev. 4:13). A leader or an official required a young male goat for his atonement. (Lev. 4:22) When the common people sinned their atonement required the blood of a young female goat. (Lev 4:27-28)

Type B can be described as sins that were committed with full knowledge that they were against God's law. These are called trespass sins and usually involve offenses against either God or another person. These would include: swearing, stealing, lying, and other non-capital offenses. Those guilty of swearing were required to sacrifice a female lamb or goat (Lev. 5:6) Those whose offenses were against holy things and commandments such as failing to give a tithe, first fruit offerings, and other laws required a ram plus 20 percent interest.(Lev. 5:16) Those guilty of stealing must make full restitution plus 20 percent interest (Lev. 6:4-5) to their victims and then bring a young ram before God. In some cases the extremely poor were allowed to bring pigeons and turtle doves for their trespass offerings (Lev. 5:7). Regardless to whether the sin was committed out of ignorance or out of willfulness, the shedding of blood was required. However, just any blood wouldn't do. While bringing the blood of two pigeons for lying would be acceptable they were unacceptable for theft. In the case of murder the only blood type that was acceptable was the suspect's own. Blood offered had to have the right type to be acceptable for the forgiveness of sin.

When Jesus inaugurated the New Covenant after His last Passover with the disciples, He declared: "This is my blood of the new testament which is shed for many for the remission of sins" (Matt. 26:28). Jesus, the God-man, gave up His life and experienced the reality of death so that those who identify themselves with him might experience His life and never taste death as He did. He shed his blood, which was a universal type, for the remission of sins of many categories and types of people. His blood covers all sins.

Blood Types Among Us

Today we know that before we can enter the kingdom of God we must have the right blood type. 1 Corinthians 15:50 reminds us that: "that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." To be acceptable to God we need to assure ourselves that we have the right blood type.

There are many who have adopted attitudes toward life that can only be described as A-Negative, B-Negative and O.

A negative attitude is destructive, especially when it relates to the kingdom of God. Negativity forces us to concentrate on what is wrong; not on what is right. It drains our energies from a "what are we going to do next" attitude to a "why we can't do it" mode.

Whether in our personal lives or with the church, those who constantly display negative attitudes do more damage to themselves than anyone else. It's like the little boy who stands on the track and plays chicken with an approaching train. He says "I'm not going to move" and the train can't stop. Who will feel the most hurt by his attitude? Many lose opportunities because of their negative attitudes. Many shoot themselves in the foot and doom themselves to failure and frustration because of their negative attitudes.

Generally, "A-Negative" people think negative. B-Negative people act negatively. These are the kind of people who think and talk destructively. B-Negative people rarely act alone. They are miserable, angry, and frustrated and they want others to feel just as angry, miserable and frustrated as they are. They generally bring in as many people as they can to share their misery because "misery likes company." B-Negative people usually make phone calls and visits encouraging others to make negative action. Christians should excercise extreme care as they decide whether or not to be influenced by negative voices. Acts 5:38-39 holds the key. If a matter is from men, it won't go anywhere. If it is from God, nothing can be done to defeat it. Negative actions indicate B-Negative blood.

"O" people are on the sidelines. They could go either way. They rarely take an action for or against anything. They are not "O" positive or "O" negative, they are just on the sideline. They are what the bible describes as lukewarm, neither hot nor cold.
"O" is not acceptable either because Revelation 3:16 the Lord will spew the lukewarm out of his mouth.

What's The Right Type?

Physically we cannot change our blood types. If we are born with A-Negative Blood then we'll die with the same. That is not true spiritually. We can develop a negative spirit and it can be changed into "A-Positive" spirit, by the working of the holy spirit.

The right type of blood for the Christian is not A-Negative but A-Positive: A-positive viewpoint in life, A-Positive glimpse of the future, A-Positive view of yourself and others. The Christian's blood type is not B-Negative, but it is B-Positive. Be positive about actions that will build the kingdom of God. B-Positive about the possibilities of accomplishing the impossible with the help of God. B-Positive about our commitment to work in the vineyard.

Those who have been crippled by negative, defeatist blood, need an infusion of new blood.

Those whose potential has been stifled by lagging self confidence, pessimism and negative self talk, need some need blood.

Those who have been literally destroyed spiritually because of the bad blood need new blood?

What is this new blood? Where can it be found? How much does it cost?

The song writer heard the question "What can wash away my sins?" and answered "Nothing but the blood of Jesus! What can make me whole again, nothing but the blood of Jesus! Oh precious is the flow that makes me white as snow, no other fount I know, nothing but the blood of Jesus!"

To those who are searching for it I remind you that "there is a fountain filled with blood that flows from Immanuel's vein. Sinners plunged beneath the flood, lose all their guilt and stains."

To those who worry about its cost we remind them that "Jesus paid it all, all to him I owe. Sin had left its crimson stain, but he washed it white as snow."

There is power in the blood, wonder working power!

If you need a blood transfusion, try Jesus!

He died out on Calvary! He rose after three days and nights!

Try Jesus...and get the right blood type!

Without Knowledge People Perish!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 4, 1994

SCRIPTURE: "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children." Hosea 4:6

Introduction

Have you ever been the student of an unprepared teacher? Have you ever played on a team with an unprepared coach? If so, then you know the frustration associated with such circumstances. While there are millions of copies of bibles and Christian literature published each year, there is an amazingly small number of Christians who read the Bible, subscribe to Christian magazines or involve themselves in serious Christian life instruction.

Many are fine men and women who live clean, law abiding, morally upright lives. Their home libraries are filled with the works of Plato, Ariostole, Shakespeare, Mark Twain, Alex Haley, James Baldwin, and Niki Giovani, Maya Angelou. Besides these there are volumes of reports, notes, theme papers, dissertations, surveys, proposals, and critical reviews that crowd their shelves. Without exception they are examples of intelligence, education and moderation. Many have spent their entire lives studying education, politics, government, science and social studies. They have concentrated their lives on learning to identify and combat the wicked things of the world as they impose themselves on humanity. Although there are millions who are obviously highly skilled at identifying and combating the evils of society, the word of God declares that the people are destroyed because of a lack of knowledge.

How is it possible with a growing proliferation of PhD's, Master's Degrees, high school diplomas, and experts in cosmetology, criminology, health care, auto mechanics, and popular sciences..that the people can perish from a lack of knowledge? For the answer let us consider two sheep dogs that were acquired to guard the sheep of a certain shepherd. The shepherd told the sheep dogs to guard the sheep with their lives because there were dangerous wolves in the hills that would destroy simple and powerless sheep. The sheep dogs went to work. One sheep dog prided himself in the fact that he could spot a wolf a mile away. He studied the ways and sounds of wolves. He felt qualified to stand guard over the sheep. The second sheep dog had heard about, but had never seen a wolf. He was new on the job and felt uneasy. While the first sheep dog lay back against the tree and watch for fanged teeth, pointed ears, and cold deadly eyes, the second dog just watched the sheep. As days passed, the routine was the same, the first dog watched for wolves, the second never took his eyes off the sheep. One day the wolf decided to dress up in sheep skins and slip pass the sheep dogs. The first dog, looking for tell tale signs, missed the wolf. But the second dog immediately began to bark and growl and attacked the wolf and ran him away. Later the first dog asked: "How were you able to discover the wolf and you'd never seen one and I missed it?" The second dog answered: "You spent your time studying wolves, I spent my time studying sheep. I know how a sheep sounds, looks and moves from head to toe. I didn't know what a wolf looked like, but when I saw those big O' feet, I knew it wasn't a sheep!"

The people perish if they are led by individuals who know more about the wolves of this world, than they do about the nature, attributes and the will of God.

Every Christian should study the word of God directly. Moreover, each has the responsibility of studying, discussing and discovering the nature of God's mighty working in lives of others of the same faith.

The world through its schools, colleges and universities teaches us to know the wolves. However, it is the job of Christian Education to teach every saint, to know the perfect will and way of the Lamb of God.

Exposition

This text considers the biblical meaning of knowledge.

Knowledge is generally defined as "a clear and certain perception of something." In the Old Testament, knowledge and knowing God are synonymous. In most instances believers were urged not to seek the rewards of knowing God until they knew him themselves. For example in the Garden of Eden, Adam and Eve were forbidden to eat from the tree of knowledge of good and evil. To have such knowledge available to them before the understood and knew the will and nature of God was unwise. They wanted to bypass the slow and painstaking process of knowing God and reached for the fruit and brought sin into sphere of human existence.

Knowledge of God is known because God makes himself known through his actions. Those that have come to know him live in respect for him and in obedience to him. Psalm 25:14 says "The secret of the LORD is with them that fear him; and he will show them his covenant."

What a man knows, believes and accepts about God indicates his level of knowledge in the biblical context. His secular training is considered inconsequential and incidental. Only what he knows and has experienced about the nature of God is considered real knowledge. The quest is that "knowledge of God" would reach every person on earth. Isaiah 11:9 says "..for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD." The same theme is repeated in Jeremiah 31:34: "They shall all know me, from the least to the greatest."

In the perception of the Old Testament, knowing God was to have a clear perception of his nature, what he demands of each person, and what he can and will do.

In the New Testament, Jesus builds on this foundation adding that it is impossible to know God unless you first know him. In John 8:19 he declares:"... Ye neither know me, nor my Father: if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also." To know Jesus is to have a clear perception of what the Christian life is all about and to accept it as truth. To know Jesus is to know God. To know God is to have knowledge.

Therefore this text in Hosea 4 makes its abundantly clear that for the lack of Knowledge of God the people perish. It is assumed that once one knows God he will both trust him and fear him in every aspect of life. Because they have no knowledge of him their destruction is imminent.

Knowledge of God Needed

Today there is an increasing need for knowledge of God. While there is a growing respect for secular education, there are many that do not feel that same level of respect for the importance of learning about God.

There are some parents who insist that their children learn their lessons in school, but do not insist that they study their bibles, and learn the things of God. Believers who strive for excellence in the secular community, demand the best qualified doctors, governmental leaders and teachers, yet are willing to accept incompetence and mediocrity when it comes to those who lead and teach within the church.

There are many who believe acquiring a "knowledge" of God is crucial to their economic and social success. They conclude that while it is a desirable novelty, it is not a necessity that equals the importance of a high ACT score or a terminal college diploma. There are even times when those who have this attitude will even suggest that secular training can substitute for a knowledge of God. These are situations when people are selected to teach a Sunday School class, serve as deacons, trustess, departmental heads and otherwise lead the people of God, on the basis of the number of degrees on their wall, irrespective of their unwillingness and sometimes stubborn refusal to study and learn the knowledge of God.

A Musician with secular skills can teach a choir songs but that sound good to the ear. However, the singers don't get the full power of the ministry until they have music directors that know God. The testimony of a director who knows God transforms what could have been an operatic performance or show to an expression of witness. Any secular teacher can make a lesson plan, read a teacher's manual and teach a Sunday School lesson. But only the person who knows God can go beyond what's in the commentary and testify to the truths it outlines. That's when secular skills are inadequate. Any person can sit on a deacon board or trustee board and make business decisions, only secular skills are required for that. But those who know and trust and God go beyond what their secular training have given them because they know the will of God and trust him completely. Anyone with a good heart can lead an auxiliary in terms of pure mechanics. But in terms of being an example of a man or woman that knows and trusts God, secular training alone is insufficient.

We gain a knowledge of God in two ways; both are intertwined: through study of his word and related works, and through our personal experience of trust and obedience. We must study the word of God regularly, accurately and persistently. We must also study the works of God; that is, the methodology used by the people of God in doing his work.

Each local church has an obligation to teach the knowledge of God to its members, who study and learn of their own free will. However, the church must insist that those who rise to teach or lead in the congregation must be persons who have a knowledge of God that goes beyond their secular training. Paul writing Timothy was emphatic "Study to show thyself approved!" It was a command. It was a prerequisite to service.

You must know God

Finally, we must know God from our personal experience as well as our studies.

To know God is to trust him. To trust him is to put it all in his hands. That's why Proverbs 3:5-6 says "Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding.
In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.

Those who know God that he will make a way! This is not what they have read, or heard, but from their own experience!

I don't know about you, but I've found that God can make a way out of no way!

Those who trust in God have found out that God can take:

—Bitterness and turn it to sweetness; failure and turn it to success

—Defeat and turn it to victory; Broken hearts and mend them in love!

When you get to know God better you trust him more!

No wonder the song writer declares "I trust in God, wherever I may be. On mountain peak or on the stormy sea. Though come what may, from day to day, my heavenly father watches over me!

Trust him because he's worthy! He loved us enough to give his own Son that we might have a chance to everlasting life!

I will trust in the Lord until I die!

I want to know more, more about Jesus! The more I know, the more I trust him! The more I trust him, the more he's able to do for me!

More, More about Jesus! More of his saving fullness see, more of his love who died for me!

God of the Hills & Valleys

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 11, 1994

SCRIPTURE: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the LORD, which made heaven and earth." Psalm 121:1-2; "And there came a man of God, and spake unto the king of Israel, and said, Thus saith the LORD, Because the Syrians have said, The LORD is God of the hills, but he is not God of the valleys, therefore will I deliver all this great multitude into thine hand, and ye shall know that I am the LORD." 1 Kings 20:28

Introduction

Have you ever doubted whether the good fortunes shared by others can ever come your way? Have there been times when you concluded that while listening to accounts of God's past works were inspirational, they were meaningless to your present situation? If so, you are among millions who have failed to receive the fullness of their relationship with God because they doubt him. The record of God's accomplishments in the life and times of previous generations is not limited to the circumstances of that time. God is a God of all generations. He is the same, yesterday, today and forever.

Sometimes we lose blessings because we don't understand the nature of our God. Consider the nit wit country boy who bought his first car new car, but was walking in the Arizona Desert with a bucket. A passerby stopped and asked him why he walking with an empty bucket in the desert. "I gotta find some water" He answered. "I saw a sign that said 'check your water before crossing the desert,' so I pulled over and raised the hood on my brand new car and guess what those stupid people put in the radiator? Anti-Freeze. It's 120 degrees and they put antifreeze in my engine." The passerby stared at him puzzled and asked "What was the problem?" The country boy answered: "The problem is that antifreeze is for the winter, not for the desert. Those guys up in Detroit sure are stupid." The passerby then asked "Why are you walking?" The country boy wiped the sweat off his brow and said "Well I used my head, I let all of that green stuff out of my car and I'll walk till I can find me a well and draw me some real water!"

Just as the country boy did not understand the properties of antifreeze or the nature of the Arizona desert, there are many today who do not understand the nature of God.

He is universal, omnipresent, and all powerful. The same power that heats an iron hot enough to press out wrinkles, cools a freezer cold enough to make ice cubes. Whatever our circumstance, God is able to supply our need.

As Christians, we know God's power is not conditional, limited or restrained. We rejoice in the knowledge whether we are on the mountaintop or in the valley, our God is able to supply our needs according to his riches in glory!

Exposition

This text focuses on Israel as it wins a great battle because its enemies misunderstood the nature of God.

King Ahab engaged in a battle with the Syrians under King Ben-hadad as he defended the region of Samaria. Ben-hadad was a drunken, warlike and superstitious king. He sent threats to the king of Israel, who himself was less than ideal. The Lord sent word, by the prophets, that Israel would defeat Syria in battle, despite its massive armies led by 32 kings.

When the battle ended, Israel was victorious. As the Syrians analyzed their defeat they concluded that they lost because they fought Israel in the hills, which is the strong hold of Israel's God. Their scholars produced writings from the great Israeli King David who wrote: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help." This was evidence that God was a God of the hills and mountains. Their conclusions seemed valid when their scholars pointed out that Psalm 87:1 says: "His foundation is in the holy mountains." When they read scriptures such as Psalm 15:1 "LORD, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" or Psalm 24:3 "Who shall ascend into the hill of the LORD? or who shall stand in his holy place?"; they concluded that their mistake was to fight Israel in the stronghold of their God.

The Syrians decided to wage a battle against Israel again with an even mightier army, replacing the 32 kings with trained military commanders and more soldiers. The power of the new army that faced Israel the next year was awesome. They felt confident because they had more than 127,000 soldiers, chariots, horses and machinery of war at their disposal. Most importantly they were fighting Israel in the valley this time, not in the hills. They felt the God of Israel would be powerless in the valley and his people would be vulnerable to defeat.

God sent a message to king Ahab that Israel would win this battle. His victory over such a huge force, in the open fields of the valley showed both Israel and its enemies that God was not limited to just the hills, but that he is a God of the valleys as well.

God's Power is Universal

Today there are many who have the misconception that God's presence and power are conditioned on locality. There are many who have great reverence and respect for God when they perceive themselves to be in his presence. The ancient Jews believed that God dwelled inside the Tabernacle and sat on the mercy seat of the Ark of the Covenant. They did not and could not comprehend the idea that they could come before the presence of God outside the confines of the Tabernacle and later the Temple of Solomon. They confined God to what we would call the "church building."

As Christians, we join regularly to worship God in a sanctuary dedicated to that purpose. However, no one should get the impression that the church building is the only place where we can come before the presence of God. We can meet and talk with God while driving our cars, sitting on a park bench, or while we are standing over an ironing board. While we may have certain places in our homes and church community where we go to meet him, he is not limited to the places we choose. He is not limited to a certain place because he is everywhere!

God's Power is without Limit

Just as God's presence cannot be confined to a certain locality, neither can his power be limited.

Too many today hear the accounts of God's wonderful actions in the lives of their grandparents and parents, but doubt that God still does that today. We hear testimonies from those whom God has healed and we try to explain it in medical terms that makes it less miraculous and more a reasonable outcome limited to that particular situation. We read in the bible of cases where the terminally ill were healed, the life longed blind were given sight, and the permanently handicapped were given abilities to hear and walk again.

When many of us read those accounts we confine them to that particular time period and circumstance. Some read them with interest, but doubt that they would ever become a reality in their own lives. In essence, they conclude that God performed miraculous works in that time, but he doesn't do that today.

God's power is limitless. We who worship and serve him, should never underestimate his ability. The Hebrew Boys, faced with the threat of the fiery furnace, never doubted the power of God. Though faced with certain death they declared "Our God is able to deliver us."

Faced with life and career threatening situations, modern Christians should show the same kind of faith; that God is able to deliver them from persecution, false accusations, layoffs, sickness and hardships. No matter what the situation there is nothing too hard for God to do! His power cannot be limited for he has all power in his hand!

He God of Both The Hills and The Valleys

Finally, we remind ourselves that God is a God of both the hills and the valleys of life.

The hilltop and mountaintop experiences mark the special moments of our success.

It was in a such moment that Moses came before the presence of God and was told to take off his shoes for he stood on Holy Ground.

It was in a hilltop moment that Abraham prepared to sacrifice his son Isaac, but learned that God had a "lamb in the bush!"

It was in a hilltop experience that Elijah challenged the prophets of Baal and called out to the people "How Long Halt Ye Between two opinions? If the Lord be God then follow him" Choose ye this day.

It was in a hilltop experience that Joshua assembled true believers on the side of a mountain and declared "as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord!"

The hilltop represents those times when we are closest to God and have stood tall in victory. God is a God of the hill top experience!

However, God is also the God of the valley experience!

The valley experience represents the ordinary, the mundane and the routine. The valley also marks special times when we are afraid, lonely, friendless, disturbed, and sick in mind and body.

Job was familiar with the valley, having experienced the hilltop of wealth and health, in poverty and sickness he declared "Yea though he slay, yet will I trust in him" (Job 13:15)

David knew about the hills, but he was acquainted with the valleys, having fallen into disgrace, sin and shame. Even in the valley David declared "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want. Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil for thou art with me!"

A widow woman was familiar with the valley. Hungry and facing certain death, she discovered that even in the valley of despair God can fix our barrels such that they never run dry!

Paul and Silas were familiar with the valley. But confined to a jail cell, accursed and accused, and locked away, they discovered that the same God they prayed to in the sanctuary on hilltop was still available in the prisons of the valley. At midnight they sang and prayed, and at midnight they got an answer, in the valley!

It's good to have some hills, but you learn a few things in the valley! Some have found, love, joy, peace and security, in the valley!

Our Lord knows about the valley, because he had to walk this lonesome valley, he had to walk it by himself. Nobody else could walk it for him. He had to walk it by himself!

The Lord knows all about our troubles!

He knows all about our trials!

He is Lord of the valley, because he was also Lord of the hill!

On a hill far away stood an old rugged cross, the emblem of suffering and shame! On that hill, Jesus died to show the world that he is Lord both the hills and valleys with all power in his hands!

Power that cannot be limited!

Power that cannot be controlled!

Power that is available to everyone!

Whether rich or poor! Call Him!

Whether Black or White! Call Him!

Whether College Educated or a high school drop out,Call Him!
Call Him Up and Tell him what you Want!

A Good Battery With Loose Cables

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 18, 1994

Scripture: "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God." 1 Corinthians 1:18

Introduction

Have you ever seen the Energizer battery commercial on television? That's the one where the little bunny appears beating a drum and the announcer says "still going!" Across deserts, over mountains, on lonely highways ..nothing seems to stop that little bunny. The point of the commercials is not the bunny, but the battery. The company wants everyone to know what keeps that bunny going! It operates on a fully charged, fully energized battery. It's important to have good batteries. Weak batteries cause problems. Cars with weak batteries have trouble starting. Once the motor starts the car usually runs, but it takes a good battery to get it cranked. Tape recorders with weak batteries usually drag. Flashlights dim, transistor radios fade, and Game Boy video games come to a complete halt when the batteries fade. The battery is the power source.

Getting a good battery is only half the job. Consider the woman who was having trouble getting her car to start. Each time she turned the ignition switch strange clicking sounds came from beneath the hood. She figured that the battery of her car was going dead. Without checking with anyone she bought a new battery and had her young son to replace it. When she tried to start the car again, all she got was the same clicking sound. Finally, she called in a mechanic who took one look at her cable ends and analyzed her situation. "Ma'am, you have a good battery, but you have bad cables." She learned a good lesson about her car that day: "its important to make sure the battery has good connections."

Corroded battery cables have stopped the flow of power in the best automobiles. Even brand new batteries are useless if the contacts are rusted. In the Christian life the cross, as it represents the power of God through Jesus Christ, is our power source. The blood of Christ, like the energizing fluids inside a battery energizes and empowers us. The cross represents the power of God unto salvation. It also represents the power of God for every believer to live in the power of the spirit. However, we must keep clear contacts to keep the power flowing. We must be in complete connection and in harmony with the will of God to benefit from the immense power that is available to us. It is of little value to us to have the power of almighty God instantly at our disposal if we let our connections get rusty and corroded. Far too many believers go through life hearing the "clicking" sound that suggests that there is power under the hood but it can't get through. Many have the capacity to achieve greatness through the exercise of their gift, but each time they turn the switch all they get is that "clicking" sound.

As Christians, let us resolve to stay in close, clear, uninterrupted connection with God. Though others might think we are foolish for doing so, we who are saved know that our power comes through the cross, for it represents the power of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes to the church at Corinth about the wisdom of preaching about the cross of Christ.

Paul explains that those who are saved recognize the Christ as a symbol of the power of God. To those outside of the faith the church is involved in foolishness. There are several key words in this single verse which should be noted for fuller understanding:

Preaching

PREACHING:(Greek: Logos) Preaching is the expression of divine truths through the spoken or printed word. It takes on various forms such as: sermons, lectures, talks, narratives, speeches, drama, commentaries. Sometimes when we do not hear the words, situations preach to us. Jonah tried to avoid his mission from God, but his three journey in the belly of a fish let him hear a long sermon. The situation preached to him. Actions preach much louder and more effectively than spoken or printed words. A sermon lived is better than one preached any way. Preaching, according 1 Corinthians 14:3 has three purposes: edification, that is to build them up, enlighten and improve them; exhortation, that is to inspire and life them; and comfort. To those out of the faith preaching is unnecessary, foolish and wasteful. However Romans 10:14 reminds us that the first step to releasing the power of God is through hearing the preached word: "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" Singing, praying, testimonies and other forms of worship are inspiring but preaching is the source of our power, because in those moments we hear inspired expressions that direct us in the Godly path.

Cross

—CROSS:(Greek: Stauros) Is simply a stake, pole or post in the ground that was used for capital punishment. When Paul spoke of the cross as the power source of Christians, he was not referring to the wooden stake itself, but the entire range of ideas associated with symbolized by the cross which include the sacrifice of Christ, his blood shed, his death, burial and resurrection. Some denominations teach that the cross should not be a Christian symbol because it symbolizes death, but the word of God says it is a symbol of the power of God. The crucifixion of Christ transformed the cross from a symbol of shame and embarrassment to a symbol of the power of God. The cross has this symbol because Christ's death on the cross blotted out our sins and obligation to ritual, in effect, nailed them to his empty cross. (Col 2:14 Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross;)

Moreover, the cross is the means by which we are able to make peace with God. (Col 1:20 And, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.) Christ, because of Calvary is able to justify us, to make peace for us before God.

The cross symbolizes the establishment of the Lordship of Christ and therefore his ability to intercede and mediate for us before God.(Phil 2:8 And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. Philippians 2:9-11.)

Paul said the preaching, teaching, and promoting the cross and the power it symbolizes believers glorify God because we recognize the cross as a symbol of the power of God himself.

Foolishness

—PERISH, (apollumi) FOOLISHNESS (moria): Those who do not share the faith of believers think that the inordinate amount of time spent studying the word, listening to sermons, attending classes, and otherwise sharing in the expression of the word is a literal waste of time. When Paul preached about Christ and his crucifixion the Jews considered it a stumbling block or an obstacle the interrupted their routine and threatened the status quo. The Greeks simply considered the possibility of the resurrection from the dead, a risen Lord, and divine intervention by a once crucified leader as absurdity and "foolishness." (1 Cor 1:23 But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness;) Those who perish are those who reject the power of the cross. They have heard the story but they do not accept it as truth, therefore they consider preaching in all of its forms, is a waste of time.

It is not foolish to talk about God!

It is not foolish to preach and teach about his wondrous works! It is not foolish for us to believe that God hears and answers prayers It is not foolish for us to believe that God performs miracles It is not foolish, it is faith, that God is the same today as he was yesterday!

Power

POWER:(Greek: Denims) Those who are believers know that the cross is the source of ability, energy, inspiration, and imagination. However, the word "Denims" suggest more than the ordinary. It suggests miraculous power supplied by God. The word Denims is talking about the spiritual Energizer! The spiritual "bunny rabbit" that just keeps going and going and going! Those who are anointed with the power of God act in miraculous ways! Abilities are expanded when anointed by the power of God! Energy seems endless, inspiration flows, and imagination seems boundless when anointed by the power of God.

We are serve a God whose power is endless and infinite. He is all powerful! He is by any definition a good power source; a good battery. However, we need to be sure that we have the right connections.

DETERMINE THE TYPE OF CONNECTION REQUIRED: Before connecting to any power source we must determine what kind of connection is required. There are some powers sources which require A/C connections, alternating current; others require D/C or direct current. There are many church members who are A/C in nature they are alternating church members. The attend church on Alternating Sundays; pray on alternating occasions, give on alternating seasons.

We serve a God who demands a D/C Christian or dependable Christian. Who does not alternate but who has concluded that "I'm on the battle field for my Lord and I promised him that I would serve him till I die."

CONNECTIONS MUST BE TIGHT. Batteries must free of interfering corrosion but they also must have a tight fit. There can be no space that separates the cable end from the battery post. Maybe that's what Paul was talking about when he said "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Romans 8:38-39

BOTH CABLES MUST BE CONNECTED: Two connections are needed for batteries to operate, one goes to the power source the other is a grounder. You can't have power unless both are connected. There are many today who are trying to connect with the power source through "Paying, Praying, and Praising" plugging up the "hot" wire without a grounder. We are grounded when we understand that all blessings come from God. We are grounded when we understand that despite our rise in wealth and health, our feet remain humbly planted on the ground. We our grounded when the words of the song writer become our testimony: "Lord, if I get too high, please bring me down."

GET THE RIGHT BATTERY: We must be sure that we have the right battery for the job. There are many who are trying to use their 6 volt transistor college educations to empower a 12 volt cadillac dreams. Education is good, but its a battery to small for the job. Training is good but, its a battery to small for the job. Intellect is good but its a battery to small for the job! When you need power to get a transistor battery, but go to the power that created the earth in the palm on his hand, spangled the night with the moon and stars, and caused the pine tree to point its finger to the sky. Call on the Lord.

If you are looking for a good power source, let me introduce you to God's original power source.

Before there was a 36 month Good Year Power Source; Before there was NAPA 40 month Power Horse; Before there was a Sears 60 month Guaranteed Power Source. Before Sears and Roebuck every thought of the name, God created the original "Die Hard" his name is Jesus!

Just like Everyready, he's got power to spare!

They crucified him on a borrowed cross and buried him in a borrowed tomb, thinking his power had been drained.

But early Sunday morning, they found out that he was a die hard, because he rose declaring to the world that he has "all power! in his hands"

Wonder working power!

Soul Saving Power!

All Power in his hands!

Living Doggie Style

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 25, 1994

SCRIPTURE: What can David speak more to thee for the honor of thy servant? for thou knowest thy servant. 1 Chronicles 17:18 (KJV) "What more can David say to you for honoring your servant? For you know your servant,(NIV) What else can I say? You know that I am but a dog, yet you have decided to honor me! (LBV)

Introduction

Have you ever envied a dog's life? Sometimes dogs seem to have it made! They lay on the porch until its time to eat. After they are fed, they go back into a comfortable spot, lie down again until its time to eat again. Sometimes dogs seem to have it made in life without a single worry or trouble. They seem to live life freely without a hitch.

Consider the little boy and his dog Rover. The little boy was fascinated by the dog's life. It seemed that his little dog had so much fun. He decided to live Rover's life for a day. He went where Rover went and he imitated Rover all day. He did some strange things. Imitating Rover, he barked and howled, chased after cars and rolled in the grass and then lay on the porch. His mother became upset when she saw the boy going through weeds and bushes with the dog and started to stop him. However, his grandmother said "let him play, he'll learn from it." At the end of the day the boy had done everything Rover had done. Then he noticed that Rover raised his leg and started scratching himself feverishly. Strangely, the boy couldn't stop either. They were both scratching. As his grandmother pushed him into the bathroom and ran his bath water she said, "Let this be a lesson to son, if you live like a dog, you will get fleas."

While we muse humorously about the dog's life, there are people who actually try to live the dog's life. Men who treat women harshly and cold are said to "dog" them. Those who are selfish, heartless and vindictive are said to be "dogs." Some who try to explain their tendency to chase after the other sex respond that its just the "dog in me."

A popular rap singer known as "Snoop Doggie Dog" promotes the doggish way of life. In his popular album, "Doggie Style" he promotes violence, illicit sex, and deviant behavior associated with the doggish style of life. His records sell millions as he encourages young people to rebel, drink gin and juice, and to generally live

"doggie style." Millions of young people are taking his cue and have decided to live doggie style, rejecting the instruction of their parents, teachers and the wisdom of the word of God.

Some young people have not been drawn in by the lure of living "doggie style" because they have heeded the word of God which says " be thou not envious against the workers of iniquity. For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb." Psalm 37:1b-2.

Of Course grandma made it real simple..if you live like a dog, you will get fleas!

Exposition

This text considers David as he reflects that despite the lowliness of life before God, yet he is considered for blessings.

The main theme of this passage begins at verse 16 in which David considers his unworthiness to receive rich blessings from God. He asks "Who am I or Lord God, and what is mine house.." Considering the wretched life that he lived David was awed that God still loved him enough to make great blessings available to his immediate household and his posterity. The Living Bible paraphrase transcribes David's words this way: "What else can I say? You know that I am but a dog, yet you have decided to honor me!"

God knew David very well. He knew him as an innocent man hunted as a criminal for no fault of his own. He knew him as the dog hearted man who would kill a woman's husband to claim her for his wife. But he also knew David as a man who tired of living the dog's life of deceit, misery, violence and disrespect and cried out in his agony "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy holy spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit." Psalm 51:10-12 God knew David as a man after his own heart.

This passage finds David in awe of the benevolence of God to love him, bless him, and make great promises to himself and his family despite having been a "dog" among men. God made great promises to David and his family because of his decision to rise above his doggish nature, repent, resist evil and to stand firm for God.

From verse 16 to verse 22 David recounts how God has shown benevolence to both himself and to Israel, selecting them, despite their doggish ways, as his own. At verse 23 he rises and asks God to allow the blessings of his grace to flow upon his family.

David experienced the reality of living the dog's life. He sinned in the worse way. He murdered, brought shame on his family, contracted a venereal disease, and reached a point of spiritual bankruptcy before begging God to restore him. In repentance, he rose from a man who lived like a dog, to a man described as being "after God's own heart."

Thanks to a forgiving God, he was not condemned to the dog's life but was given another chance, which he used to the glory and praise of God for the remainder of his life.

Living Doggie Style

Many young people are attracted to a doggish lifestyle that is being portrayed as the "Flava" of the month by subculture heroes and rap stars. As a result some have begun to act like dogs. Some fight like dogs. At football games, school events and otherwise some find it necessary to fight and growl in an endless succession of fighting and shooting. Young people carrying knives and other weapons, prepared to fight is common place.

While some fight like dogs, there are others who talk like dogs. Vulgarities, once thought the domain of uncultured men are now common place among females. Four letter words, talking under each other clothes, and beginning each sentence with two words that begin with M.F. is becoming common place.

Some enjoy living like dogs. Too many youth are comfortable living in filth. It begins with a room that is never cleaned. It extends itself to a house that is never clean, garbage that is never emptied and dishes that are never washed. It grows into a neighborhood filled with trash and debris, graffiti on the walls and beer bottles on the streets.

Some young people have accepted living "doggie style" as their personal motif. However, youth don't have an exclusive claim on living doggie style, there are many adults who live doggie style as well. Many adults are the role models for young people.

Perhaps you have seen:

FRENCH POODLE: The poodle is rarely seen in public unless it has a fresh cut and jewels. In the church there are some french poodles, who cannot come to a worship service without a new dress, fresh hair cut, or a visit to the beauty shop.

BULLDOG: It is both mean and ugly. There are those whose who try to bring their mean and ugly ways into the church, they growl and bark at everyone and never have a smile.

IRISH SITTERS: There are many who join the church but have no place of service. They serve on no committees, don't sing, usher, or otherwise serve, they are sitters. Not Irish Sitters but African-American sitters.

POINTERS: Is useful to hunters because he points to the location of the fallen prey. There are many pointers in our society. They place the blame on everyone but themselves. The pastor, deacons, choir director, everyone but themselves.

HOUND DOGS: Once they get a scent they will stay on the trail. There are many who spend most of their time tracking down gossip, and juicy information. Once they get on the trail they are more relentless than Colombo or Sherlock Holmes, they never lose their trail.

WATCH DOGS: They watch every move made. There are many who spend most of their time watching others. They watch what time they come home, leave, whether their lights are on or off, and everything their neighbors do. Be warned however while the watch dog is watching others, “somebody’s watching you!”

Giving Up The Doggie Style

While living doggie style has its attractions, those who know the Lord know that living doggie style compels us to live in opposition to God. G.O.D. spells God. However, if turned backwards, it also spells D.O.G.. Even the spelling suggests that the doggish nature of mankind is opposite of God’s loving and divine nature.

David discovered that though he was a king he was living doggie style.

Though he wore royal robes and lived in splendor, he was living doggie style!

Though he was admired by all of Israel and praised by thousands David was condemned because he was living doggie style.

When David stopped living like a dog, he got rid of his fleas!

When the Prodigal discovered that though he came from a fine family, he was living doggie style!

Though he had good home training and fine parents, he was living doggie style.

When he came to himself he said “I will arise and go to my father.”

When stopped living like a dog, he got rid of his fleas!

There are millions today who are living flea bitten lives, filled with alcohol, drugs, violence and promiscuity. They souls have become mangy. Their eyes have sunk into the sockets of their heads. They have lost weight and have shrank like prunes. Flea bitten and despairing, many have given up hope!

Today brothers and sisters we remind you that if you are willing to stop living like a dog there is a man who can get rid of the fleas!

There is a man who can take our:

—Fallen estate and raise them up again!

—Failures and transform them into successes!

—Defeats and turn them into victories!

His name is Jesus! He’ll pick you up and turn you around. He’ll plant your feet on solid ground!

He’s name is Jesus and he’s alright!

Pearls Around a Pig's Neck

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 2, 1994

SCRIPTURE: "Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls: Who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it. Matthew 13:45-46; "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you." Matthew 7:6

Introduction

Have you ever played dress up? That's where you put on the costume of a character and play their role. Sometimes girls dress up like their mothers, complete with high heel shoes, ear rings, long dress and lipstick. Boys stick their feet in oversized shoes, hang a tie around their necks and play daddy. Playing dress up is fun for children. However, there are many who have become adults but still play "dress up," thinking that looking the part is the same as being the part. There are even people who dress up as Christians, complete with suit, tie and bible, but still have the same old habits on the inside.

Consider the farm animals that decided it was easy to be human. As they laughed at the funny ways of humans Callie the crow said it would be easy to be human, all it would take would be some clothes. To experiment, they pulled straws to decide which one would get to be a human for a day. Ponsella the Pig drew the short straw. All the farm animals went to work to help Ponsella be human for a day. Cassie Bell the Cow took a blouse off the clothes line. Shirley the Squirrel brought four shoes and put them on Ponsella's feet. Henrietta the hen bought a funny looking hat with a daisy protruding from the top and tied it to Ponsella's head. Harry the Hound brought some eye glasses. Dilsey the Duck brought a long string of pearls and put them around Ponsella's neck. She was a sight to see, grunting and whining with shoes on her feet, spectacles on her eyes and an expensive string of pearls on her neck. Everybody cheered and praised their accomplishment except Ollie the wise old Owl, who never said a word, she just watched and shook her head. Ponsella had one whole day to be human. So she walked around the barn yard and much to the praise of all the animals. Things went well until she came upon a puddle of mud that she had never seen before. It was big, muddy and empty. Ponsella grunted and whined and then made a mad dash for the puddle. She rolled in the mud,burying her hat and shoes. The pearls slipped from around her neck and she rolled and grunted with joy.

All the farm animals were sad and dropped their heads low. Ollie the Owl then said: "Let this be a lesson to you, it is easy to take a pig out of the pigpen, but the hard job is getting the pigpen out of the pig."

As Christians, we have found our faith in Christ to be a pearl of great price. It has given us a rich experience and an inner joy that it is immeasurable. It is not a superficial string of pearly experiences, worn on the outside for a public display. It is a deeply rooted spirit of salvation that is in our heart.

Exposition

This text examines the importance of the gift of salvation to every Christian.

Jesus gave a series of parables designed to teach the nature of the kingdom of heaven. The entire 13th Chapter of Matthew portrays the kingdom of heaven in a variety of ways. At verse three it is compared to a sower sowing seeds. Some seeds fall on good ground, other seeds fall on bad soil. At verse 24 the parable of the wheat and tares characterizes the children of God as good seed being threatened by the presence of evil. At verse 44 the kingdom is compared to a man that finds a treasure in a field, hides it and then sells all that he has to buy the entire field. The value of the kingdom of God is so immense that it is worthy of an all out pursuit to get it.

This text is a two verse passage that gives another example of the kingdom of heaven. Here it is characterized as a pearl, found by a merchant who sold that he had to buy it.

Each example Christ gave emphasizes the importance of the kingdom of heaven. It is a pearl of great price. It is extremely valuable. A merchant, a person who traveled from place to place to place, was seeking good pearls to buy. When he finally stumbled upon that which he sought, the merchant was willing to sell all his possessions to get it. He would do because he knew and appreciated the value of what he had found.

Faith in God, a saved soul and the spiritual gifts associated with a believer's life are holy possessions. It is the very substance of the kingdom of heaven. Once acquired it is more precious to the believer than anything else. However, belief and faith should not be squandered on vain and useless efforts. In Matthew 7:6 Jesus, in a one verse passage, makes it clear that the pearls of faith and belief should not be cast before dogs or swine because they will trample them out of disbelief or through fault finding and evil speaking.

Christ's statement does not mean that spiritual gifts should not be used to help save the lost or relieve the poor, for then they would have no use in kingdom building. However, he does mean that such gifts should not be wasted on fruitless efforts where it is obvious that they are neither appreciated or welcomed.

Those who have found this great pearl should share the joy of their experience with all who want to hear of the goodness of God, but waste little of their time and resources on those who will only trample their belief under foot

Pearls & Pigs

Every believer who knows the love of the Lord has certain spiritual gifts available to him that, like great pearls, are valuable and rare. Each should be careful not to squander their spiritual gifts, time, talents and resources on fruitless efforts. To do so will be the same as putting pearls around a pig's neck.

We are commanded to teach and reach and many as we can with the Gospel of Christ. We are also warned that we should not waste our efforts on the superficial, but to lift up Christ. To do anything else would be like putting pearls around the pig's neck.

Consider the nature of pigs:

PIGS EAT SLOP: By nature pigs enjoy eating slop, and garbarge. Many people who have adopted this nature also enjoy the consumption of garbage. They enjoy trashy literature, movies, records, comedians and other forms of communication. As a Christian our responsibility is not simply to take such a person, dress him in a suit and bring him to church, but to show him the value of thinking on better things.

Philippians 4:8 puts it this way: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." To do anything other than this would simply be to put pearls around a pig's neck.

PIGS WALLOW IN THE MUD: Pigs enjoy wallowing in the mud. Likewise there are people who enjoy wallowing in sinful activities. They enjoy running clubs, one night stands, juking, adultery, drinking, drugs. They enjoy this lifestyle. We should go beyond dressing this person in a choir robe and getting them to sing a song on Sunday, because the piggish nature will force them to find a mud hole at their first opportunity.

We should help those in this situation reach a point in their lives similar to that of the prodigal son. When the prodigal had wallowed in the mud and mire of life he made a pigpen decision to change his life. He did not decide to go home to his father, live in his house but continue wallowing in the mud. He decided that this life was not what he wanted. He took the pigpen out of his life and then went home.

We must help the lost to reach pig pen decisions to do just like the prodigal son. When he reached that point he "came to himself" and decided to go home.

The Pearl Of Great Price

So brothers and Sisters, we should not squander our time trying to get the lost to join one church or another. We should tell men and women that we have found a pearl of great price!

Don't tell them they need to be in church, tell them about the joy you have found in the Lord. Tell them how serving the Lord has made difference in your life.

Since Jesus came into my life, he took my:

—Dark Days and turned them into light days

—Sadness and turned it into gladness

—Failures and turned them into success

Don't ask anybody to come join the choir, but tell them that the Lord gave you something to sing about. When I opened my eyes this morning I began to sing: "Woke up this morning with my mind staid on Jesus!" When I looked at how good the Lord has been to me I start to sing "I get a blessing every day!" I'm not asking you to join our choir, I just want you to know that "I sing because I'm happy, I sing because I'm free. His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me!"

Don't tell them to come hear a certain preacher. Just tell them your experience when you hear the word of God. When I hear the word of God sometimes:

—I am encouraged to a little further

—I am inspired to run a little harder

—I get angry with myself

—I am lifted a little higher

—I am submerged a little deeper in the joy of the Lord

When I walk in the church door my heart cries out "Watchman, is there any word from the Lord!"

When talking to the lost don't tell them about your church, tell them about Jesus!

Jesus, the lily of the valley!

Jesus, fairest of ten thousand!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Tell, them about Jesus who is alive today!

Don't brag on your church, tell them about Jesus!

Great Teachers Teach Forever

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 13, 1994

SCRIPTURE: " And though the Lord give you the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction, yet shall not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers: And thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left. Isaiah 30:20-21

Introduction

Have you ever had a great teacher? Not simply a teacher but a "great" teacher? How do you define a great teacher? Some would define them by the number of years they taught. Others would define them by the number of students they taught. Others would define great teachers as those who were the master of technique, preparation and presentation. William Arthur Ward put it this way: "The mediocre teacher tells. The good teacher explains. The superior teacher demonstrates. But the great teacher inspires!" Pulitzer Prize winning poet Maya Angelou said it differently: "Idols encourage people to be like them. Heroes and heroines encourage to people to be their best." Great teachers are heroes and heroines because they inspire their students to achieve, long after they leave the classroom.

Consider the three teachers who all had to deal with the toughest boy in the second grade. He was so bad the other students called him jailhouse Jimmy because he stayed in trouble so much. The first teacher had Jimmy at the beginning of the year. After one week in her class the first teacher stormed into the principal's office demanding that Jimmy be removed from her class. She painted a picture of a boy whose waking moment was destructive, disruptive and without hope. The principal transferred Jimmy to the second teacher's class. After about a week she took came storming into the principal's office, holding little Jimmy by the hand. She complained that he was incorrigible, disrespectful and had an attitude. She said he was doomed to failure and was pulling all of the other students down.

Finally, Jimmy was transferred to an old teacher who had been on the job for several decades. She had seen many like Jimmy and was not intimidated by his antics. A week went by then two. The weeks rolled into months and finally the school year ended. As Jimmy stood on the stage, dressed neatly in shirt and tie reading a speech to the class, the other two teachers looked at each other with amazement.

After the program they were too embarrassed to speak to the old teacher, so they asked the principal to tell them her secret. “Well, said the principal. The difference is probably because you spent your time repeating what Jimmy knew about himself : that he was bad, and doomed to fail.
That tore him down. She spent her time helping him discover what had never known about himself. That built him up!” The principal then looked both young teachers in the eye and said “That’s the difference between a teacher and a “great” teacher!

As Christians we follow the master teacher, Jesus. He does not tear us down looking for our faults and reminding us of our frailties. He helps us to discover what we have known about ourselves and builds us up. Every great teacher is like Jesus, they build up and inspire when others give up and put down. They teach with a voice lingers after the class has ended and their voices whisper in the corridors of the mind.

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah as he reminds Israel how they will be preserved in approaching difficult times as they listen to the silent voices of their teachers speak to consciences. For many years Judah had become reliant upon political treaties and support from friendly nation. Even though the Northern Kingdom had suffered defeat under Assyria, Judah felt confident that it could survive because of its alliance with the African nation of Egypt. It felt the mighty chariots and horses of Egypt would be sufficient to help it ward off any attack. Their dependence upon the alliance was attacked by God because despite the superior numbers the alliance would create, they would not be successful.

Isaiah prophesied that when the difficult time arrived that God preserve a remnant. Those who survive will return to the teachers of old that had been hidden away in corners and discarded as they pursued ungodly interests. Often when Israel attempted to pursue other gods it would ostracize its teachers and prophets. When Jezebel tried to promote Baal worship, she ordered the death of all of God’s prophets and teachers. They survived only because Obadiah hid them by the hundreds in caves, 50 at a time. (1Kings 18:4). Turning its back on the old way and the wisdom of those close to God caused Israel to take a course that would eventually bring its downfall.

However, it would be the wisdom of the old teachers, that taught them about respect for God, obedience to his word, and directed their path, that would help them through the difficult period of trial. The remaining teachers would be called out of corners of retirement, retreat or exile to stand before the masses and teach them the way.

Isaiah’s prophecy said Judah would see their teachers with their eyes, referring to those who were called up again to stand before them, but their ears would hear the instruction of those gone before, following close behind them. It would be the words of the godly teachers standing before them and the memory of the instruction of those who were no longer with them, that would help them to survive tough and difficult times and see better and brighter days. When Judah reached a point of decision in life, deciding whether to turn to left or to the right, the voice of the old teachers, tempered in moral law of God, would speak to their souls as a whispering conscience and give direction: "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths." Proverbs 3:6

The Old Teachers

Like Judah, our society is facing a great period of adversity. The adverse circumstances are multifaceted. There is crime, poverty and a growing irreverence that is deteriorating the quality of life as we have known it. In the face of this plunging morality our society has turned deaf ears to the voices of reason and temperance. Supreme Court decisions have placed muzzles on Christian teachers and has made it unpopular and illegal to even mention godliness to an entire generation. We have place our teachers in a corner and have forbidden them to tell us about the old paths. Now as godless generation grows up in our midst many are puzzled as to how so many people could be so far away from God.

The teachers of old had very little to work with, but somehow they managed to teach much more than their lesson plans reflected. Without benefit of computer labs they taught mathematics. Without benefit for science labs, closely connected to NASA, they taught science. Without benefit of theaters, scenery of elaborate stage props, they taught drama. Without benefit of plain paper copiers, computer spelling checks, and photo scanners, they taught millions, trudged through terrible handwriting, checked every paper, gave weekend homework, discipline the unruly and led the class in prayer every day. In addition to course requirements, somehow they also taught, the essentials of civilized behavior, manners, obedience, discipline, cleanliness, and godliness. These were essentials that almost required good teachers to be godly themselves. The great teachers were those who successfully inspired students to aspire to higher ideals.

These were teachers who looked upon education as a calling rather than a job. It was an honorable profession, a ministry that had a divine blessing.

These were the teachers who challenged their students to quote Shakespeare, but not before they learned to quote the bible.

These were the teachers who lessons, became sermonettes on morality and life. They were preached so many times that everyone fortunate enough to have been taught by one can recite the words over and over in the corridors of their mind.

Even today there are still great teachers, who defy the supreme court and still talk about goodness, mercy, obedience, cleanliness and godliness. Even today there are still great teachers whose calling is not to stand in line for a monthly paycheck, but to join the caravan of sainted souls who like Thoreau have decided to march to the beat of a different drummer.

Great Teachers

While there are many teachers that have succeeded in teaching their students the fundamentals of life, the great teacher goes beyond the mere essentials for survival. The tools for survival are those bodies of knowledge needed to make a living. However, the great teacher goes one step further. The great teacher is one who has mastered the art of showing others how to live.

Living and making a living are not the same. Making a living only requires enough skills to secure food clothing and shelter in this life. Learning how to live requires that we have the essentials necessary to live in the this life and beyond. It requires that we develop the strength of character and soul that will carry us beyond the limitations of this life, into the hereafter.

Great teachers know the secret to living forever.

At the funeral of Lazarus, Martha was disturbed that Jesus had not come the moment that she had sent for him, but had tarried. Jesus responded that Lazarus would live again. Martha did not understand so Jesus went further: ".... I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?" John 11:25-26.

Great teachers are those who know the Lord!

Good teachers know the hypotenuse of a triangle, but great teachers also know the Lord!

Good teachers can figure the radius of a circle, but great teachers also know the Lord!

Good teachers can recite the preamble to the constitution and know the Gettysburg Address, but great teachers also know the Lord!

Good teachers can recite Shakespeare, unravel world history, and explain complex economic principles, but great teachers also know the Lord!

Great teachers go beyond learning the literature of the bible, they allow the truths of the bible to become a part of their very lives.

Great teachers trust in God!

Great teachers live by faith!

Great teachers labor with a missionary passion!

Great teachers know that while there are many great names in history that evoke images of courage, valor and strength, there is no name that equals or surpasses the name of Jesus!

Great teachers know how to call on Jesus!

Those who believe in and trust the Lord, know that time may take its toll on their earthly tabernacle, but they have another building not made by hands!

Those who believe in and trust the Lord, know that when this journey ends, it's not over, because one glad morning with this life is over, I'll fly away!

Great teachers, know the Lord and those who know the Lord...live forever!

Look A Like Cups, Look A Like Crosses

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

SCRIPTURE: "But Jesus said unto them, Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? And they said unto him, We can. And Jesus said unto them, Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of; and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized" Mark 10:38-39; "Likewise also the cup after supper saying this cup is the new testament in my blood which is she for you." Luke: 22:20

Introduction

Have you ever purchased a look a like? In today's times we are accustomed to look-a-likes. Those who cannot afford designer clothing and other merchandise often purchase imitations. In Hollywood there are whole companies that specialize in providing Look-A-Likes of the stars. There is a Bert Reynolds Look-A-Like. There's a Micheal Jackson Look-A-Like and there is even a Billy Dee Williams Look-A-Like. Whenever companies have a promotion that could benefit from a star being present and the star was not available or could not be afforded, a Look-A-Like was hired. Therefore, many are familiar with the idea of getting a substitute for the real thing.

Look-A-Likes are in demand whenever the original is not available or out of reach. Therefore instead of salt there is a salt substitute. Instead of sugar there is a sugar substitute. There are many people who have constructed their entire lives around Look-A-Likes. Their clothes, shoes, watches, and appliances have a designer look but are actually imitation.

There are also individuals that have carried the Look-A-Like mentality over into their spiritual lives. They reason that since they have found Christianity out of reach because of their unwillingness to follow, they have adopted a Look-A-Like religion. This Look-A-Like religion has all of the appearances of the real thing, except it is an imitation.

Consider the little monkey in the jungle that always wanted to be a lion. Every day the little monkey would watch the lions in the jungle and was awed by their immense courage and strength. One day the monkey found a lion skin laying around and he put it over his body. He jumped through the trees scaring all of the other animals, convincing them that he was a lion, even if he did look a little strange and a little small. The little monkey enjoyed being an imitation lion until one day all of the small animals ran up to the lion, which was the king of the jungle and begged to be protected from the tiger than was threatening to eat them for dinner. “Please save us oh Lion King” they shouted to the monkey. The monkey was completely powerless. As the Tiger approached the little creatures the ran behind the monkey, thinking he was a lion. He looked like a lion. He had skin like a lion. But as the tiger grabbed the monkey and snatched off the skins and prepared to gobble him up for lunch, the little creatures realized that he was an imitation lion. When the real lion appeared the Tiger recognized him immediately and ran away. The lion said to the monkey : “Let this be a lesson to you, its better to be a little chimp, rather than let the world see you live a lie and make a monkey out of yourself.” There are many today who are making monkeys out of themselves trying to look like and be like someone else.

As Christians we are challenged to make our relationship with Christ a real one. The time will come when those who are lost will turn to us as men and women of faith. We sure let the world know that we are genuine in our faith and obedience to the commands of God. Let’s be the real thing instead of cheap imitations.

Exposition

This text considers Jesus as he responds to a request of two of his disciples for high positions in the kingdom once it is established.

James and John, the sons of Zebedee approached Jesus to gain a favor from him. Their understanding of the nature of the kingdom of God was incomplete. They perceived it to be one of a temporal nature. They considered it to be immediate and they wanted assurances that of all of the disciples that they would receive positions of honor and power. They approached Jesus and asked him to give them whatever they asked. What they wanted was the right to sit on his right and left in the ruling of the kingdom. Once the other disciples heard of the request they were disturbed at their vanity and desire to rise over them.

However, Jesus’ response was to ask them whether or not they were willing to drink from the same cup that he would taste. The two said they could, without considering what Jesus meant. He did not mean just a simple cup of wine or liquid, but the term “cup” was symbolic of the suffering, humiliation and embarrassment that he would suffer.

As Jesus explained the nature of the kingdom and the suffering it would require of all who chose to follow him, the request subsided. The brothers were intimidated by “this cup” which was the blood of the New Testament. They continued to follow Jesus however, they were unwilling to drink from “This Cup” experiences and from that time forward were satisfied with Look-A-Like cups.

Many Have Look-A-Like Cups

There are many today in the Christians experience who, like James and John are willing to drink from “a cup” but are not willing to drink from the same cup of sacrifice and suffering that Jesus referred to when he spoke of "this cup."

Each person has a cup, representing the sum total of their experiences. Included in that cup is an element of suffering. Many believe that when Jesus refers to drinking from the cup that they mean their own cup, which is not necessarily the case.

When the cup of our experience contains suffering, we must consider whether or not our suffering is a result of our Christian life. There are many that are suffering, not because the Lord placed a heavy burden upon them as Christians, but because their own sinfulness, neglect or negativity placed it upon themselves. Many have a cup, but its not "this cup."

Sometimes we are sleeping on beds that we made hard ourselves. There is an old saying which puts it this way, "If you make your bed hard, then sleep in it." These hard beds are "cups" but they are not the same as "this cup" that Jesus talked about.

Often we misinterpret hardships and burdens we share as one that is coming from the Lord and we consider it the same as the one Jesus labored under. For example, with the rise in crime in most communities murders are becoming common place. Whenever someone is killed as a result of murder or robbery, we tend to say the "Lord took them" at the funeral. In reality, the Lord did not kill the innocent victim, it was the work of Satan. That burden was placed on the immediate family and the community by Satan, not by the Lord. The cup of suffering that results from crime and murder is cup filled with dregs, but it not same as the cup of suffering we drink from spiritually when we choose to follow Christ. It is a cup, but it is not the same as "this cup."

In addition to "this cup" the New Testament generally refers to cups in two different ways:

When called upon to drink from the cup of sacrifice, there are many that find "this cup" too demanding, so they search for Look-A-Like cups.

When we learn that we owe God a tenth of our resources, we find that a bitter cup. Many attempt to present God a Look-A-Like tenth. It is a sizeable amount, but it only looks like a tenth.

Many have a Look-A-Like spirit of worship. Many come to worship but not with a sincere spirit and inclination to worship. Many bow their heads while the deacons pray but file their fingernails, fill our church envelopes or find hymns in the hymn books. Many want to look like they were worshiping by simply being in the building, they nod their heads during prayer and never open their eyes again until the benediction.

There are some, in every worship service, who even go to the extent of moving their lips during congregational singing, and saying "Amen" but all the time they are thinking about what they are going to cook for dinner.

In each of these instances we looked as though we were worshiping. We dressed for the part and we came to the right place, but it was not in the same spirit. It was a Look-A-Like worship.

There are many that are seeking a Look-A-Like Christian experience. When among other Christians, there's an extra light in their halo. They look real religious. In fact they appear so religious that their wings protrude from beneath their dresses and suits. Their self righteousness is apparent in so many ways, when they are among Christians. However, during the remainder of the week they show no signs of this religious nature. Their wings disappear. Their halo disappears. Their self righteousness disappears. Their religion is an imitation, a cheap Christian "Look-A- Like."

There are also those who are carrying Look-A-Crosses. These are persons who are carrying crosses and burdens not as the result of their Christian lives but because they chose to live otherwise.

A Christian cross is a burden imposed because a person chose to exercise Christian principles. Some have lost jobs because they refused to condone an illegal practice of the company. Others have failed to receive promotions because they would not sleep with their supervisor. Some are ostracized because they choose to live the Christian life.

There are many however that are bearing crosses, but not because they are doing right, but because they are doing something wrong. It is a cross, but it is a Look-A-Like Cross.

Christ asked his disciples however, "Can you drink from the cup that I drink of?" Not the cup you drink of, but the cup that "I" drink of. Not a Look-A-Like, but can you bear the real cross of suffering?

During communion services, there are many across America, that perpetrate a big lie. They eat from the same plate and drink from the communion cup in a Look-A-Like experience, knowing that they are not willing to drink from the real cup of sacrifice and faith with Christ asks of us.

This Cup Is Not a Look-A-Like

Finally, allow me to remind you that the cup that Christ drank from and the cross that he bore should be something that we cherish all of our lives.

For many, it has been years since they have had an honest talk with the Lord. For some, the last talk came when they were in a car wreck or at a funeral, but not since. We should have an honest talk with God about giving him our best in service and commitment.

When Christ talked about a cup of sacrifice he was talking about a sacrifice that requires us to give him the best of our lives.

When Jesus talks about "this cup" he is not talking about a superficial Look-A-Like, but he's talking about the agony and struggles that it would entail.

When Jesus talked about "this cup" he referred to the coming time when men would persecute for his name's sake.

When Jesus asks "Can ye drink from this cup?" He's asking whether or not we are willing and able to give our all to him, rather than a cheap imitation of service?

There are many who know what it means to drink from this cup because they have been to the valleys and they know the real meaning of suffering.

Those who share in "this cup" are in communion with him! They are not imitations but the real thing!

I don't know about you but I'm glad that Jesus decided to drink from "this cup" and not an imitation.

I too want to be able to say I'll drink from "this cup!" I want to be able to say for the Lord I'll live and for the Lord I'll die. I'm on the battlefield for my Lord, and I promised him that I would serve him till I die"

I'm so glad that Jesus didn't bear a look-A-Like cross or die a look-A-Like death, because then I'd have a Look-A-Like Salvation!

I'm so glad that he died on a real cross!

I'm so glad that he rose from a real tomb!

I'm so glad that he's alive in my soul!

He's real! Jesus is real today!

He's not an imitation! He's not a Look-A-Like!

Jesus!

Jesus!

Jesus is real!

Love At First Sight

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 16, 1994

SCRIPTURE: "And Isaac brought her into his mother Sarah's tent, and took Rebekah, and she became his wife; and he loved her: and Isaac was comforted after his mother's death. Genesis 24:67 And Jacob loved Rachel; and said, I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter. Genesis 29:18; For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John 3:16

Introduction

Do you believe in love at first sight? That's the kind of love that evolves from the very first contact. It is instant. There are many who met the man or woman of their dreams on Monday, courted them Monday evening and married them on Monday night. They were content that they had finally found the man or woman of their dreams and they knew the first moment that they lay eyes on each other. Many argue that "love at first sight" is superficial and does not last, but there are others who point to long relationships because their mate was the ideal. Love at first sight is often called the dream relationship, but it is not alwasy the ideal.

Consider three old men who sat on a park bench watching the young couples go by. They decided that day to try and identify couples that fell at love on first sight. A young couple passed that appeared happy and content. They snuggled an smiled and held each other's hand as they walked. Two of the old men pointed and said. "Tha't love!" It must be love at first sight" The third old man shook his head and said nothing. A second couple strolled past them. They stopped and kissed in the park and the look in their eyes suggested that they were engrossed in each other. The two old men shoulted "That's it!" "It must be another case of love at first sight!" Again the third old man said nothing. Finally an elderly couple walked by. She was on a walking cane and he took steps that were shorter than a baby's first strides. In the middle of the park the two stopped to rest on a bench. While they sat, the old gentleman leaned over and kissed the woman on the cheek. Instantly the third old man began pointing, shouting "that's it!" The other two men were surprised that he was pointing at this couple and they asked the reason why. The last old man responded "Love at first sight may seem like a big deal, but when two people have been looking at each other for years and still love that's not only love, that's a miracle!"

Love at first sight is important if it translates into love every time we see, regardless of the condition. Charles Swindow in his book the "Original Match" tells the parable of guy who fell in love with an opera singer. He hardly knew her, since his only view of the singer was through binoculars — from the third balcony. But he was convinced he could live "happily ever after" married to a voice like that. He scarcely noticed she was considerably older than he. Nor did he care that she walked with a limp. Her mezzo-soprano voice would take them through whatever might come. After a whirlwind romance and a hurry-up ceremony, they were off for their honeymoon together.

She began to prepare for their first night together. As he watched, his chin dropped to his chest. She plucked out her glass eye and plopped it into a container on the nightstand. She pulled off her wig, ripped off her false eyelashes, yanked out her dentures, unstrapped her artificial leg, and smiled at him as she slipped off her glasses that hid her hearing aid. Stunned and horrified, he gasped, "For goodness sake, woman, sing, sing, Sing!"

As Christians, we recognize that Jesus loved us one step better than at first sight, he loved us before we existed. His love is an unconditional love that has saved us and given us a new life.

Exposition

These three texts give us three striking examples of love at first sight and point us to the key ingredients that make real relationships last.

Isaac and Rebekah

Genesis 24 records the classic love story of Isaac and Rebekah. Abraham became concerned that his son Isaac had no wife. Since it was the custom of the time that fathers would arrange for the marriages of their children, Abraham sent his trusted servant to look for a wife for his son. The servant traveled to a distant village. He did not know how to pick a bride for his employer's son so he turned the matter over to God. At verse 42 he asks God to show him the right woman. The servant told God that he would say "Give me, I pray thee, a ittle water of thy pitcher to drink" and the girl, if she's the right girl should respond "Both drink thou, and I will also draw for they camels." As it happened the servant looked around a a beautiful young woman came to the well to get water. He asked his coded question and to his surprise the woman answered the exact words that he had chosen as a confirmation of his blessing. The servant hurredly found his way to the girl's father. He produced expensive jewelry, fine necklaces and other presents for Rebekah. The family members were also given great presents. At verse 58 Rebekah was finally called in and asked whether or not she would go, sight unseen, to marry the stranger and she said "I will go."

On the return trip the servant moved hurredly. Isaac had been away and was not aware that his father had sent for him a wife. At verse 63 Isaac was meditating in the field one night when the camel caravan returned. As he walked to meet the caravan, Rebekah saw him and instantly got off the camel. When she was told who he was she veiled her face as was the custom. When Isaac looked at her and then was told the story of his father's selection of her Isaac married her on the spot and loved her the rest of his life. Throughout the rest of his Isaac provided for her, protected her and honored her. She became the mother of Jacob and Esau and even though she tricked and deceived him concerning which of the sons should receive his blessing, he loved her until death.

Isaac's love for Rebekah on the surface appears to be at first sight. In reality it was a gradual love that developed through the years by successive action. Since love is an action word, the phrase "he loved her" implies that he took actions that showed his love. While there may have been an attraction, the love he bestowed was an act of the will and not of the emotion.

One key element of the success of this relationship is that it is a union that God brought together. Two partners who both willingly agree to submit themselves to the will of God. Even today, love must go beyond mere physical attraction. Love has to be a spiritual attraction. It is an instance where God has opened the eyes of two people to the point that they peer into each other's souls, and decide to love them despite what is seen. It's that inner person that lives forever. That's why it is important to look beyond the physical into the soul and look for God. We should avoid being uequally yoked, that is having a mate who has not love of or respect for God, for it makes the Christian life incomplete at the least and unbearable at the worse.

Issac and Rebekah did not fall in love at first sight. They decided to love at first sight and never backed away from their decision.

Jacob and Rachel

The story of Jacob and Rachel is another classic biblical love story. Jacob, the son of Isaac left home and travel to lands inhabited by his uncle Laban. While there he met a beautiful woman at the well and instantly kissed her and cried with joy. It was love at first sight. She was so beautiful that it didn't matter to him that she was his first cousin and he made a bargain with his uncle to marry her in exchange for seven years of labor. He worked daily, driven by the thought that after seven years Rachel would be his prize. However, at the end of the seven years Jacob learned that it was the custom for the oldest daughter to marry first, so in order to get Rachel he had to agree to work another seven years. Disappointed, Jacob worked another seven years to win the hand of the woman he fell in love with at the well. After 14 years and two wives, Jacob finally married Rachel and she kept a special place in his heart all of his life. Even after she died Jacob showed special favor on her children Benjamin and Joseph.

What is striking about this case of love at first sight was what Jacob was willing to do to win the hand and affection of Rachel. She was willing to work 14 years to get the woman he wanted.

What woman in her right mind could refuse the affection of a man who was willing to go that far just to win her hand? Would she have a problem submitting to leadership? Could she learn to love him? The love that developed between Jacob and Rachel was sparked by his actions toward her. His love was shown by his willingness to risk all to provide for her and to win her hand.

Paul writing to the Ephesians spoke to wives about submitting to the leadership of their husband but he had these words to the husbands:" Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish. So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself." Ephesians 5:25-28

The divorce courts in America are filling today because people who were attracted at first sight stopped loving after they had looked each other for a while.

Relationships grow that are based on real love. Real love has a lot to do with feelings and little to do with sex.

I don't love you because of the way you look, but because of the way you make me feel about myself. -If I ever stop loving you it won't be because of the way you look but the way you make me look to myself.

I don't love you because of what you have or what you have made for yourself, but because of what you are making of me! I love you because of the part of me that I know is there, but I can only find and bring out when I'm with you! If I ever stop loving you, it won't be because you fail in life or come to have nothing, but because stop showing me that undying spirit that keeps bringing out the best of me.

The relationships of these two texts are instances of attraction at first sight. The love that developed was punctuated with actions that spoke louder than any words.

Jesus Loves

Rebekah loved Isaac because of a meeting at the well. Jacob fell in love with Rachel, a woman at the well. The love that God has for his people, is also symbolized by a woman at the well. This woman met a man at the well, who looked beyond her faults and saw her needs. She ran and told everyone "come see a man who has told me all I've ever done."

When Adam met Eve, it was love at first sight!

When Abraham met Sara, it was love at first sight!

When Isaac met Rebekah it was love at first sight!

When Jacob met Rachel, it was love at first sight!

When Samson met Delilah, it was love at first Sight

When Boaz met Ruth, it was love at first sight!

But brothers and sisters I want to tell about another love story, its story of bridgegroom that fell in love with his future bride and has waited to marry her for 2000 years. This bride is the church and the bridgroom is Jesus.

It's a case of love at first sight! "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!"

It's a case of love backed up by action for "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." John 15:13

It's a love so strong that prompted Jesus to pick up an old rugged cross and die out on Calvary!

It's a love so persistent that he arose after three days and declared all power is in my hands!

Oh how I love Jesus!

Oh how I love Jesus, because he first loved me!

Riding The Witch's Broom

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 23, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"When thou art come into the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations. There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch, Or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For all that do these things are an abomination unto the LORD: and because of these abominations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee. Deuteronomy 18:9-12; Trust in the LORD, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed. Delight thyself also in the LORD; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart. Commit thy way unto the LORD; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass. Psalm 37:3-5

Introduction

Have you ever known superstitious people? These are people who place great confidence in superstition. They believe in Black Magic and Voo-Doo. They consult fortune tellers, hire mediums, and have a general belief in witches, goblins and ghosts. The superstitious have a variety of beliefs that include: a black cat crossing a trail will mean bad luck; walking under a ladder is a bad sign; sweeping the feet means going to jail, horseshoes and rabbit's feet bring good luck, but Friday the 13th is a day of bad luck. Unfortunately there are many that place great confidence in superstition. Some trust superstition more than the trust God. When distressed, rather than pray they consult their horoscope or look for a "psychic connection." When given a choice of having faith or climbing on the "witch's broom," many have chosen the latter.

There is no time when superstition is more obvious than Halloween. In the United States it is a day when children dress up as witches, ghosts, goblins and other scary characters and move from house to house in search of candy and treats. Halloween actually began thousands of years ago in England, Scotland and Ireland and neighboring countries. November 1 was the beginning of the New Year and the first day of winter. The people believed that there was a war between the cold and darkness of winter and the warmth and brightness of summer. On October 31 the people felt the army of darkness: ghosts, goblins and witches grew so strong that they overcame the army of summer and Winter began on November 1. October 31 became a frightening time. Fires and lanterns were lit to scare away wicked creatures that would be out in full force.

Hundreds of years later Christianity came to these countries and November 1 was celebrated as "All Saint's Day." This was a day to honor all deceased saints; holy people. The night before became known as Hallowed Saint's eve or Halloween for short. While the Christians celebrated the memory of Saints most other people remembered that ghosts, goblins and witches were supposed to be powerful on October 31. They continued the old tradition of lighting fires, and putting on frightening costumes that might scare away the witches, goblins and ghosts.

Today, few people even know that November 1 is all Saint's Day. The Halloween tradition however has been elevated into a day when an entire country salutes evil, monsters, death, murderers, and the grotesque. Halloween is a day when all of America invites its young to "ride the witches broom."

As Christians, we should be very careful about trivializing the symbols of evil. Witches, goblins and ghosts may make cute door decorations, but the presence of evil and its influence on our society is no trivial matter. Let us encourage our youth to step out on faith in God rather than join the millions who will "ride the witch's broom."

Exposition

This text focuses on Israel as God gives a warns them not to put their trust in witchcraft or sorcery, but to put their trust in him.

After 400 years of slavery in Egypt the Israelites were not prepared for the mysterious beliefs and customs they were to encounter outside of their protected province of Goshen in Egypt. God gives warning to them that when they enter into he land of promise that they were to reject the fanaticism of the Canaanites who had stooped to all manner of superstitions to guarantee themselves good crops and to discover their immediate futures.

The range of activities covered in this text involve: Divination, or practicing evil magic, Observer of Times, those who claimed to call up evil spirits from the dead; Enchanters, mediums who purported to talk to the dead; and witches, those who specialized in the dark magic arts that included, fortune telling, hexes, spells and evil incantations.

Once in the promised land Israel ignored the command of God. Too often they quickly learned the ways of their neighbors and involved themselves in witchcraft and sorcery. Saul the first King of Israel found the practice of consulting witches and mediums so widespread that he immediately issued an order the arrests of all witches and mediums (1 Samuel 28:3). Soon after he ordered the witches he disguised himself and consulted a witch himself (1 Samuel 28:7).

Though God blessed Israel tremendously, the nation continued to put its trust in witchcraft, sorcery, and magic. Jezebel was condemned in 2 Kings 9:22 from promoting witchcraft as queen of Israel. King Manasseh openly practice witchcraft. He sacrificed his own children as burnt offerings and consulted fortune tellers, witches and wizards (2 Chronicles 33:6). Even when Judah was under siege by the Babylonians and their destruction was imminent the people turned to the witches and diviners and sorcerers for answers, prompting Jeremiah to warn them not to listen to false prophets and witches (Jeremiah 27:9)

There was no doubt that God was opposed to utilizing witchcraft, sorcery and fortune tellers. The Mosaic law repeatedly placed heavy penalties on offenders.

"You shall not practice augury or witchcraft" (Lev. 19:26 RSV). "A man or a woman who is a medium or a wizard shall be put to death; they shall be stoned with stones, their blood shall be upon them" (Lev. 20:27 RSV).

While the law of Moses told Israel not to put their trust in witches and fortunes, the text of Psalm 37 encourages every believer to trust in God, wholly and completely. The Psalm begins by warning believers not to be influenced by those who practice evil. Their methods appear correct, but soon they will be destroyed.

Believers are encouraged to trust in God for their food, protection and the desires of their heart. Trusting God, means placing in God that whatever he does is in their best interest. In this context Israel underwent considerable difficulty never losing hope that God would restore them to their homeland. They were encouraged to trust God and to commit their way to him, rather than search for the answers they wanted to hear from fortune tellers and magicians and witches.

Combined, these texts summarize God's warning to Israel: not to involve itself in witchcraft or to participate in the observance of divinations, but to trust him alone. Despite God's warning, the people repeatedly decided to ignore God and literally ride the witch's broom.

Trusting In Evil Means

Today we are witnessing what happens when a society promotes evil and invites everyone, including its children to ride the witch's broom. Crime has increased, morality has decreased and respect for the life and properties of others has reached an all time low. Our youth are bombarded with invitations to ride the witch's broom and the results have been staggering. In the 30 years between 1960 and 1990 hours spent watching television increased from 5 hours a day in 1960 to 7 hours a day in 1990. The average high school SAT score in 1960 was 975 but dropped to 899 in 1990. Only 5.3 % of American youth birth children out of wedlock in 1960, but it increased to 26.2 % in 1990. Only 3.5% of all children were on welfare in 1960 but that grew to 11.9 % in 1990. Teen suicides increased from 3.6% to 11.3%. Violent crime increased from 16 acts of violence for every 10,000 per people to 75. While the crimes increased the number of people in jail increased but the amount of jail time given for crimes such as murder, rape, robbery and assault decreased by 35%. On television Beavis and Butthead invite them to use vulgar language, smoke and react violently. Snoop Doggie Dog invites them to drink gin and juice; while Gangsta rappers tell them to shoot, kill, deal drugs and murder.

The efforts to combat these violent and evil invitations are minimal but become useless when once a year we suggest to our youth that we should forget all that has been said about evil and promote evil for the sake of Halloween! Murder, death and violence which is bad all year is celebrated at Halloween as, murderers and the most evil elements in society become heroes. It's a hard invitation for youth to resist! Their Christian teachers decorate their walls and bulletin boards of symbols of evil and darkness and invite their students to "ride the witch's broom" for extra points! Businesses, and civic groups join in and the invitation becomes irresistible!

The masses of our entire country are inviting our young to join in and "ride the witch's broom!" Many have been riding that broom for a long time. They do so because they trust in evil ways. They do so because they are superstitious. They trust in everything and everyone ...except God!

Get Off The Witch's Broom!

While there are millions that are riding the witch's broom, trusting in magic and living by evil means, that are others who have given up riding the broom and have begun to trust in God.

Many have found that their rides on the witch's broom have carried them to bars, saloons, dance halls, and hide-a-way motels.

The witch's broom has caused many to put their hope in voo-doo dolls, palm readers, newspaper horoscopes and television psychics.
But there are others who have learned about the futility of placing hope and trust in witches and palm readers, they now declare "my hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean of Jesus name!"

Many ride the witch's broom and sell drugs and commit other crimes to put food on the table, but there are those who can testify like David "I have been young and now I'm old but I have never seen the righteous forsaken or his seen begging for bread!"

Many ride the broom for fear of being ostracized by their friends, but there are those who boldly say "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear?"

Many ride the witch's broom to get a few things they want, but I hear David's voice echoing over the centuries "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want!"

I don't know about you but I've found out it is better trust God than to ride the witch's broom!

When you trust God even adverse circumstances can be reversed.

When you trust in God: enemies can become friends; failures become successes; defeats become victories, mountains become molehills and valleys are exalted.

No wonder the songwriter declare, "I trust in God no matter wherever I may be. On mountain bleak or on the stormy sea. Though come what may, from day to day, my heavenly father watches over me!"

I will trust in the Lord!

I will trust in the Lord!

...until I die!

A Builder's Reward

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 24, 1994

SCRIPTURE: "According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise master builder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." 1 Corinthians 3:10 "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." 2 Corinthians 5:1

Introduction

Have you ever hired builders to construct a home, add a room or to make home improvements? Did you watch them work? With skilled eyes they surveyed the area, studied the plans and then began to piece together the skeletal framework that made up your dream project. The experienced builders seemed never to miss a cut, exercised extreme care and knew how to resolve problems unanticipated by the plans. Good builders seem to take pride in their work, will not be rushed and insist on quality, even if their painstakingly slow pace irritates us at times.

This attitude toward excellence is important for every builder, otherwise mediocrity is the result. Consider the three brick layers who were hired to build the brick walls of a new church in the community. The three men worked diligently each day. After a while the foreman noticed that there was a difference in the work habits of the three. The first brick layer slapped each brick in place and moved along at a steady pace, he never took his eyes off the bricks. The second worker, did the same, but he stopped on occasion to measure the height. The third worker did the same. However, each day before he began, he walked around the entire site, stepped back and took a deep breath, bowed his head and said a prayer. While he followed the same procedure as the others, he seemed to handle each brick with greater care than others. It was if he were praying for them as he put them in place.

The foreman was curious about the three workers, so one day he went to each and asked them to explain to him what they were doing. The first worker said "What does it look like? I'm laying bricks." He quickly replaced his earphones on his head went back to his job. The second responded: "I am building a wall" and he too returned to work. However, the third answered the foreman in this way: "I'm not just laying bricks. I'm not just erecting a wall. I am building a cathedral. With each brick I ask God to guide me so that he might get the glory from the work of my hands!" Two of the men approached their work as just another "job." The third however, saw it as a testament to the glory of God.

As Christians, we too are builders. We are building and shaping lives in preparation for the kingdom. Our tools are hope and faith. Our reward will be the approval our heavenly father, who will provide us with an even greater building, not made with human hands, eternal in the heavens!

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains his role in the kingdom building process as being that of the master builder, laying the foundation.

The immediate circumstance addressed by this text involved the relationship between Paul and Apollos. Apollos had gained fame among the Corinthians for his oratory and some considered him greater than Paul. Addressing this sentiment in his first epistle to the Corinthians, Paul made it clear that his work in the kingdom was that of laying the foundation, setting the tone, and pointing the direction. Others who would follow him had the task of building upon that which he began and expanding. He warned however, that any that should attempt to follow him should attempt nothing short of leading the people in the Gospel message of Jesus Christ.

In explaining his relationship, Paul constantly characterized himself as a master builder, who followed the plan given to him by the grace of God. As a master builder he recognized that he was not the architect or designer of the plan, but the one who saw to it that the plan was carried out in all of its finest details. The master plan he received was that the Gospel of Jesus Christ was to be spread throughout the known world. It would apply to both Jews and Gentiles, breaking down racial and sexual barriers, forgiving sins and helping believers to build new lives. During his life he moved from church to church with this message, building the spiritual strength of believers at every stop, according to the master plan. Even while imprisoned he spent his confinement writing letters to believers, constantly encouraging them to build, build and build!

As he perceived his life's work drawing to an end, he wrote them a second Epistle called Second Corinthians. In it he continued to characterize himself as a builder of the kingdom of God. He noted that when his personal tabernacle, or body, is dissolved that he expected another building, made by God himself that would be eternal in the heavens. He perceived the reward for his life of kingdom building to be a home, eternal in the heavens.

The Master's Plan

Essential to the success of any building project is the ability of the master builder to understand and follow the master plan. The master plan looks strange to the untrained eye. It has several pages of squiggly lines and numbers that describe the electrical, plumbing, and building specifications of a project. Each set of specialists does a certain part of the plan under the watchful supervision of the master builder. However, the master builder must know and understand the plan!

Those who are striving to live the Christian life are builders in the kingdom of God. We are striving to build lives that are consistent with the design and purpose of God. We, like temporal builders, must become familiar with the master's plan for our lives. We must strive to see how every component or event of our lives works together to complete the entire plan that God has for us.

When we are happy, that is a part of the plan. We thank God for every moment of happiness and joy. We thank him for our accomplishments and mountain top experiences. These are the times when are at our best and we praise him. Happiness is a part of God's plan for us. No life is without its moments of happiness, however fleeting. Happiness, joy, victory and ecstasy are all a part of this experience that we call life. They are integral parts of the plan.

Just as happiness is a part of the plan, moments of sadness are also part of the plan of things. Into every life some rain must fall, without rain there could be no crops or continuation of life. No one knows the joy of the mountaintop until they have spent some time in the valley. The man or woman that has experienced the night, learns to appreciate the sunshine. When we experience misfortune, that's a part of the plan. When there is death, even that is a part of God's master plan for our lives. When we understand the master plan of life, that's when it becomes easier for us to say "...all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Romans 8:28

The Right Tools

While builders must be able to read and understand the master plan, they also need the right tools to work the plan. Those who work in the kingdom building program of our Lord need tools as well. The tools used were numerous but always included:

MEASURING LINE: The distances in the master plan are drawn to scale. One inch on paper equals several feet in practical distance. Those who build in life must be able to practically apply the principles of the Bible and our faith to real life situations. These truths prevent the believer from going off course or making steps in life that are off course. The good builder measures his actions and knows just how far to go. Psalm 37:23 puts it this way: " The steps of a good man are ordered by the LORD: and he delighteth in his way."

PLUMBLINE: For the building to stand solidly every part must be level. An instrument called a plumbline was used in the bible to allow the builder to know whether or not a board, a window, or wall for example lined up correctly. Similarly each believer needs to check himself against the standard of God's word to make sure his action lines up with the will of God. Like a building, it is possible to nail down a board that is out of line, but it will show up later. That's why the psalmist wrote: "Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts: And see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." Psalm 139:23

The Builder's Reward

When the building project is complete the builder submits it for approval. It is checked against the master plan and a list called a "punch list" is developed of things that need to be done before it can be accepted as complete. When the punch list is complete then the builder gets his final payment.

Believers who spend their lives building in the kingdom of God reach a point in which all they can do has been done. Physically they are exhausted. Their bodies have become weak and frail. Their strength is gone. At the close of their lives they submit their work to the master for his approval. However, there is one more punch list that must be checked. For a believer's work to be accepted he or she must:

—Believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and have publicly acknowledged him by confessing him as their personal Lord and savior.

—Have repented for all sins and made it their quest to live a godly life.

—Allowed the spirit of God to lead them during their lives.

Builders who spend their lives working with their hands to building the kingdom of God will get their reward. They will be given another building, not made by hands.

This old building, no matter how well constructed, one day will spring a leak. No matter how well maintained, this old building, will begin to wear out!
That's why the song writer sings: "There's leak in this old building and my soul is passing through, I'm going home to be with the Lord!"

The builder's reward is a building that is of God himself. Solomon constructed a temple FOR God. Zerubbabel built a temple, but it was FOR God. Herod built a temple but it was FOR God. The believer's reward is a temple made BY God.

The builder's reward is another building, not made by hands!
Solomon's building was constructed with 163,850 pairs of hands that chiseled stone in absolute silence, but God is preparing the believer another builder greater than Solomon's, for it's a building not made by hands!

The builder's reward is another building, eternal in the heavens. Solomon's temple was grand, but it was destroyed. Herod's temple was beautiful but it was ram shackled. Herod's temple was elegant, but it too was toppled. But the believer's reward is greater for he is promised a building that is eternal in the heavens.

This frail Tabernacle is maintained by medicine bottles, nursing homes and doctors, but I have another building!

This frail Tabernacle is wracked with pain and misery, but I have another building!
When this Tabernacle is dissolved, I have another building, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens!

On Wednesday October 19, 1994 Watson Crane, a master builder, turned in his final punch list. He now has another building, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

Her Own Works Praise Her

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 28, 1994

SCRIPTURE: "Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies. The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil." Proverbs 31:10-11. Her children arise up, and call herblessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her. (v28)Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates.(v31)

Introduction

How would rate your success as a Christian wife or husband? If a final evaluation was given and your experience was analyzed how would you fare? There are many who begin the journey of matrimony and live long, and productive lives filled with happiness and joy. There are others, however who somehow miss the mark and fall along the wayside as their marriages crumble into streaked water colored images of what could have been. What can we learn from the careful observation of the lives of those who successfully weathered the course marriage? What is the common characteristic of the successful Christian marriage that is responsible for its quality and longevity? Scholars respond that they had communication, respect, passion, understanding, comfortable spirits, and compatibility. Yet, even with all these, there is something missing.

Consider the daughter who wanted to know how to be a good wife to her husband. The young lady was just a few days before her wedding day and she came in for a mother-daughter talk. As she talked confidently with her mother she said: "Mother, tell me the secret to having a happy marriage!"

The mother's response was "sit here between my legs and let me do your hair." The daughter was a little disturbed that at such a crucial point in her life all her mother seemed concerned about was braiding her hair. "I know you are a grown woman now" said the mother "but let me braid your hair one last time and you will get your answer." Like she had for nearly 20 years, she sat between her mother's legs and allowed her to plait her hair. She combed her hair into three separate strands and then began to explain: "One of these strands represents you and another represents your husband. If I braid these two together, they will not hold tightly and in a very short while they will come apart. A good braid, however, has three strands although it looks like only two. The third strand keeps the other two from falling apart."

"In your marriage, the third strand is God, for God is real love. That is the secret to a happy marriage." The girl was so happy that she refused to take down her hair. As she marched down the isle, beneath her veil and headdress, tucked snugly in a full head of well-dressed hair, was one single braid, a reminder that...God was there! As Christians, we should strive for the perfect union represented by a happy marriage. God's presence in a marriage is a source of strength that binds a husband and wife forever. It is a bond that goes beyond this life and extends into eternity.

Exposition

This text focuses on the attributes of what is described as a "virtuous" woman.

Virtue in this context refers to moral and mental qualities, combined with a spirit of love and industry. The entire chapter is devoted to the advice given to a son searching for the ideal woman. The ideal godly woman is described in four dimensions, her character, capacity to love her husband, care for her children and serve others. With these four ideals in mind the entire 31st chapter of Proverbs describes the virtuous woman in a very detailed analysis that leaves little to the imagination.

CHARACTER: Four character traits are unique to the virtuous woman. Verse 26 notes: strength, honor, wisdom and kindness as the marks of the ideal woman. Strength, in this sense, is not a physical measure. It is a measure of will and fortitude. It is the capacity to continue when it appears impossible or improbable that success will result. Likewise the virtuous woman is one who has a sense of honor and impeccable integrity. It is her quest to do the right thing and to carry and present herself in an honorable fashion. An important part of her character is her ability to act wisely and to make prudent decisions that are in the best interest of her family. Wisdom is not a measure of her intellect or her scholarship, but her ability to weigh available options and act responsibly. Finally her character is marked by her capacity to show kindness to everyone, in words and in deed.

LOYAL TO HER HUSBAND: Her loyalty and Devotion to her husband is another identifying trait of the virtuous woman. Verses 11 and 12 say: "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil. She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life." Despite her other qualities a good woman is measured by her loyalty to her husband, according to the scripture. Her actions toward him are of such a nature that he can "safely trust her," meaning that his trust will not be breached. Moreover, her loyalty to him is not conditional, but is permanent, encompassing the full range of life's experiences: prosperity and hard times, sickness and health, good times and bad times. Her loyalty to her husband is "all the days of her life," until death separates them.

LOYAL TO HER FAMILY: She is also measured by her loyalty to her family. Verses 13-21 describes a very industrious woman who seeks ways to provide the best for her family yet be economical. She considers the meats and foodstuffs needed for her household and secures them. She saves, pinches and economizes in every way possible to make the family's resources go further. When she cannot buy what her family needs she makes it herself, to the best of her ability. Neither weather or seasons will stop her from providing for her household. Verse 21 says "She is not afraid of the snow for her household: for all her household are clothed with scarlet." Her children are never seen without proper clothing or grooming. Her family is well fed and provided for, because of her tireless and energetic labor.

A FRIEND TO THE NEEDY: Not only does she care for her husband and family, but she also works very diligently to help the poor and the needy. Verse 20 says: "She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy." The virtuous woman is concerned about the sick. She visits the hospitals, prepares food for shut-ins, gives to help the less fortunate and gives of herself to help lift the burden of those who are in a position of need. "She reacheth forth her hand" suggests that she does not wait until the needy make an appeal to her, but takes the initiative to reach out and touch someone with compassion.

These four characteristics together describe the attributes of the virtuous woman. Together they present the picture of a woman of dignity, honor, wisdom, strength, compassion and loyalty to her husband and family. A man who finds such a woman has a priceless jewel.

Though verse 28 says her children will rise up in the morning and praise and her husband will praise her, they won't be alone. Those who know her will praise her and those whom she has touched will praise her as well.

Those who rise to praise the virtuous woman will not have to say much. Verse 31 says "her own works praise her" and testify to the accomplishments of her life.

The Good Wife

The quest for a virtuous woman continues. While modern definitions of the virtuous woman are making such a woman hard to find, there are still women who believe that it is no shame to be a loyal wife, personally raise their children, and manage their homes.

By today's standard the virtuous woman is one who has learned the art of discretion: looking and talking polite in public but doing otherwise in private. She is hailed for her ability to keep up appearances in social circles, even if she cannot afford the appearances.

Loyalty to her husband is considered a negotiable commodity, conditioned on his willingness to promote her career objectives. Loyalty is not required for a life long period but as long as it is mutually advantageous for the two of them to be together. If she acts civil in her divorce proceedings and maintains appearances afterwards, she is considered virtuous.

With respect to her children, she is considered virtuous if she gets them to the day care center on time, pays the bill and gets them at least one microwave meal a day. She is considered a good mother if she makes an occasional appearance at the school

P.T.A., takes them to church on Easter Sunday and special occasions and gets them to grandmother's house for the weekend.
Today's virtuous woman's charity work is confined to the projects of her club, and making donations of old clothes to the Salvation Army.
Despite the declining presence of the biblical virtuous woman there are legions of women who are privately striving to live up to God's expectations of the ideal woman. This is the woman who carries herself with dignity and honor and works hard to see to it that her children look well every day.
This is the woman who stands by her husband, even to the point of death, drawing on reserves of faith from unseen sources, and single handedly nurses him back to health, by the grace of God.
This is the woman who, gives of herself to help others in a flood of deeds that flow from the pots of her kitchen, to the depths of her meager resources, to the strained extent of her health and strength; even to the point of rising in the middle of the night to sit at the bedside of the sick and infirmed.
This is the woman whose every move is empowered by an unseen source. It's the same help that David talked about when he wrote: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth"
This kind of woman can only do what she does if she knows the Lord!
This is the kind of woman knows that prayer changes things!
This is the kind of woman whose epitaph is inscribed in the hearts of those who knew her, for every day of her life is a testament of faith and courage!
When the chilly finger of death touches the life of such a woman, what can be said about her?
A thousand litanies only dwarfs such a life!
What can you say about her?
All we can do is sing the words of the song that says "May the work, I've done, speak for me! May the service I give, speak for me! May the life I live, speak for me!"
What do you say about such a life?
The Words of God gives us the answer:
"Let her own works praise her in the gates!"

On Friday October 21, 1994 Esther Little took her last breath and went to her reward. Her own works praise her name, for she was a virtuous woman!

What We Shall Be

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 29, 1994

SCRIPTURE: Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. 1 John 3:2; But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. 1 Cor. 2:9

Introduction

Do you know where you are going in life? Is your life headed in some clear direction or do you seem to wander aimlessly in a flurry of activity that gets you nowhere? When our lives have direction, our actions are necessarily aimed at achieving certain goals. Those who live without a sense of purpose and direction waste valuable years drifting aimlessly, moving fast but getting nowhere, talking loud and saying nothing. Sometimes it's hard for us to understand the changes we go through to get where we are going. We know they eventually get us there, but we are not quite sure how. Consider the small boy who was sitting by himself crying after the death of his father. The boy cried constantly as he complained that "everything he loved, seemed to die." His mother talked to him alone one day. The boy said he and his father went to a pond a while back and caught some tadpoles in a jar. He enjoyed playing with the tadpoles, but when he returned to play with them a while later the jar was empty, on little webbed feet made a trail from the jar. He cried when the tadpoles left. Another time he and his father found some caterpillars and we watched them every day. Then one day the caterpillars had drawn up in a cocoon and were not crawling anymore. He cried when the caterpillars stopped crawling. Now, his father, whom he enjoyed so much, was gone. The boy cried.
Trying to console the boy the mother said: "The tadpoles in the jar, what do you think happened to them? They changed and became little frogs. All that was left behind was the empty jar and a trail of webbed feet. They are happy somewhere do what little frogs do. The caterpillars, what does you think happened to them, they came out of that cocoon and turned into beautiful butterflies. They left their cocoons behind and now they are happy somewhere doing what little butterflies do. What do you think happened to your father? He changed the other day and became a spirit daddy. All he left behind is this body and trail of memories for us to hold on to. The little boy wiped a tear from his eye, smiled and said: "and he's happy, doing what spirit daddies do!"

As Christians, we know that there is a great blessing in store for every child of God. We know where we've been. We know our present condition. We are not sure of all the details of what we shall be, but we know that whatever Jesus is, we shall be in his likeness, one day!

We are familiar with the distance we have traveled to reach our present state. We are also familiar with our present circumstance.

Exposition

This text explores the future state of those who are called the "sons of God."
John, writing his first epistle about 57 years after the resurrection of Christ, explains to believers the nature of the Christian relationship to God. He explains first that we who are believers are the sons of God. We are the sons of God; not in the same sense that Christ was the only begotten son, but in the sense that we have been adopted into the family of God, through the blood of Jesus Christ. Being a part of the family of God has its advantages and its disadvantages. Because we are believers we tend to be stigmatized and ostracized as was Christ himself. "The world knoweth us not, because it knew him not" refers to the unfamiliarity of the world with the nature of the Christian's life.
John, speaking to believers in this text, affirmed that while believers were certain of their relationship as "sons of God," not everything is known about what we shall be in our future state. What is known is that believers will: —Have a body that is similar to the glorified body of Christ's, able to be recognized, be touched, and to eat and drink. After his resurrection, Christ gave his disciples, and through them the whole world, a sneak peek at a glorified body. While they were locked in a closed room, Christ appeared to them in the flesh. He ate fish and bread and even gave permission for Thomas to touch him, proving that he was not a spirit. While his body was physical, it was also spiritual because it was able to materialize itself through the closed doors. We are promised a glorified body just like his. (.Phil 3:21 "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body...")
—Everyone will have his own body, with its distinct characteristics of color and features, with the exception that the glorified body will be a spiritual body with the look and feel of the natural body. The natural body ages, deteriorates and changes for the worse. However, while the spiritual body will have the look of our natural bodies it will not be susceptible to the frailties of this body, ie rheumatism, arthritis, heart trouble, cancer, high blood pressure, Sickle Cell Anemia, Lukemia, AIDS, and a plethora of other maladies (1 Cor 15:44 It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body...")

Beyond these two glimpses into our future state, little is known about how we shall look in the life to come. However, John points out that while we don't know every detail as to how we will look, how we will get around and what we will do every day, we do know that when Jesus makes his appearance we shall understand many things that we don't understand now. Today, it is difficult for any of us to visualize all that God ha in store for us. We cannot picture it. We cannot imagine it because there is nothing in this life comparable. There is no scene so beautiful that it can approach a description of the heavenly life. There is no thrill or joy in this life that can adequately equal what we can expect in the kingdom of Heaven. There are no words that paint us a mental picture of our heavenly estate. That is why Paul wrote: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." We can only imagine caricatures of what will be. Even these are just dark images of what God is planning. Paul summed it this way: "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known." 1 Corinthians 13:12

What We Have Been

The one truth each of us knows, is where we have been. Our appreciation of today comes only because we have the backdrop of what we "use to be" as a point of reference.

We know too well the trail that we have walked in life. Sometimes it has carried us to mountain peaks of success. Sometimes it has carried us to the deep valleys of failure or around the meandering streams of adversity. We know both what we have been and what we have been.

Our lives are a like a tale that is told. Some of us have been adventurous, to put it mildly. Our paths have taken many directions.

The one thing that all believers have in common is that their paths crossed in the same place. Like Paul, who met the Lord on the Damascus Road, and took a new direction, we too met the Lord one day. That was the day that we changed our lives and our direction.

We who were once citizens of the world and dues paying members of the Devil's Doomed Society, have come a long way since we met the Lord. We are not what we want to be, or what we hope to be, but thank God we are not what we were. That's what Paul meant when he said: "And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God. 1 Corinthians 6:11

That is why the song writer declares: "Look where he brought me from. He brought me out of darkness, into the marvelous light, look where he brought me from!"

The beauty of the Christian life is that is does matter what we were, even in the months that precede our exit from the life, but what we became. Most notably that we became

"sons of God" through accepting Jesus Christ as our personal Lord and Savior.

What We Shall Be

While we are familiar with our past, we know even better, our present. What we are now.
A believer is a man or woman who believes that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. He or she has confessed him with his mouth, repented for whatever sins he or she may have committed and begins to trust him for the remainder of this life into the next.
A believer trusts God. We have reached the point where we now understand that we don't control our destinies or the future. What lies in store for us cannot be changed by our efforts but can be changed by God. Therefore, we trust God daily.
Where are we now? We are in the position of leaning daily on the Word of God. Is this what the song writer had in mind when he wrote: "I learned how to lean and depend on Jesus. I found out that if I trust him, he will provide."
We trust God in our prosperity!
We trust God in our adversity!
We trust God even in moments of death. David Declared "Yea thou I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil for thou art with me."
When tears run down our faces like mighty streams, the believer still declares "I trust in God!"
When the weight of the world presses mightily on our shoulders, believers still declare "I trust in God!"
When sorrow like sea billows roll, and buffets the soul, believers still declare "I trust in God!"
"I trust in God. Wherever I may be. On mountain bleak or on the stormy sea. Though come what may from day to day, my heavenly father watches over me! I trust in God, I know he cares. On mountain bleak or on the stormy sea. though billows roll, he keeps my soul, my heavenly father watches over me!"
I don't know about you but I've decided to keep trusting in God!
I don't know what tomorrow will be but I know who holds tomorrow and I know who holds my hand!
I don't what life will be like over yonder, but I've been told that over yonder that:
—There is a city with 12 gates that sits on 12 foundations
—The streets are paved with Gold!
—There is a tree that will be good for the healing of the nations
—The mountains will be made low and valleys shall be exalted —Rough places shall be made plain and the crooked places shall be made straight —Every day will be like Sunday; it'll always be howdy, but never goodbye!
I don't know all about it, but one of these days, bye and bye..
Jesus is coming back!
When Jesus returns, he'll dry every weeping eye!
When Jesus returns, replace our sadness with gladness!

When Jesus comes back again, there will be joy!
Joy!
Joy!

Sick Feet Treated by the Wrong Doctor

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 6, 1994

SCRIPTURE: And Asa in the thirty and ninth year of his reign was diseased in his feet, until his disease was exceeding great: yet in his disease he sought not to the LORD, but to the physicians. And Asa slept with his fathers, and died in the one and fortieth year of his reign. 2 Chronicles 16:12-13

Introduction

How do you find a good doctor when you are sick? Some look in the yellow pages for a particular type of doctor and pick a name. Others select a physician based on what they have heard from acquaintances. There are a few that take the trouble to check out the credentials of the prospective physician, including checks to the Better Business Bureau and Medical Organizations. However, the overwhelming majority of people select the treatment for their illness, and their doctors, on the testimonies of friends. Many have tried home made tonics, dips, salves, teas and totties. Others have followed everything from herbs to acupuncture as they attempt to find a cure for sickness. When they select a doctor, most folks go to a doctor recommended by a friend or family member, based on what they heard about the doctor's record.
Selecting a doctor based on hearsay can be dangerous. Consider the country rabbit that became sick. This rabbit had always outwitted the wolves, bears and other creatures that laid traps for him. One day as he sat in his rabbit hole he heard voices above. The voices were talking about a special brew that always helped them feel better whenever they were sick or weak. The rabbit listened closer. The two critters seemed to be sold on this special brew. He heard them say that the secret place they get the brew was through a hole at the bottom of the tree trunk. The rabbit thought his luck was changing. This brew they talked about seemed to help other creatures, so he decided to get himself some.
When he slipped to the tree trunk he climbed in a dark hole until he saw two doors marked "Foxes, wolves, bear cubs, & Reptiles " and "rabbits and groundhogs." He entered the one that said "rabbits and groundhogs" and proceeded down another long hall like hole until he saw two doors marked “rabbits” and the other marked “ground hogs.” He entered the door marked rabbits. As he hopped down the hall he saw a row of baskets with signs above each that read “take one.” In one basket there were onions. In another there were potato wedges, and assorted peppers. As he hopped along with an arm full of items he suddenly came to a drop off and he fell into a long winding tunnel that was about to end up in a huge pot of boiling, salted water. As the potatoes, onions, and peppers fell into the pot the rabbit heard the two voices he heard outside his door laughing and yelling. They were the disguised voices of Mr. and Mrs. Fox clattering: “When we feel sick, there is nothing that make us feel better than ‘fresh rabbit soup!” Realizing he’d been tricked, the rabbit jumped passed the pot and found his way out to safety. From that day forward he decided that whenever he was sick again to “check out the doctor first, before you wind up in his soup!”

There are many today that are sick in body and in spirit, but they turn constantly to quacks and ripoffs that literally have them for lunch.

As Christians, we have come to know that our God is a mighty good doctor. We know this because we have tried him for ourselves. He’s a mighty good doctor both for the body and soul. Thank God that Doctor Jesus is always on the case!

Exposition

This text considers King Asa, a good king who let his faith in God withering the prosperity of his kingdom and his own health.

Asa was the King of Judah. He ruled for 40 years and for the most part is remembered as a good king who tried to obey God. Generally, Asa was described as a man who wanted to do what was right in the sight of God. When he became king he worked to destroy the people’s dependence upon the idol gods. He destroyed idols and even removed his mother, the queen, from a position of prominence, when she erected idols. He felt obligated to depend upon God only for his existence.

When his country was a peace he built up his faith in God. His great faith was tested when his country was invaded by the African nation of Ethiopia. Asa called upon the Lord in 2 Chronicles 14:11 “And Asa cried unto the LORD his God, and said, LORD, it is nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power: help us, O LORD our God; for we rest on thee, and in thy name we go against this multitude. O LORD, thou art our God; let not man prevail against thee.” When he called upon God, he was given the victory by great margins.

God wanted him to know that his victory wasn’t a mistake or a feat of his own military genius. A prophet was sent to king Asa with these words in 2 Chronicles 15:2 “And he went out to meet Asa, and said unto him, Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin; The LORD is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you; but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you.”

Asa remembered that advice, and for many years he put his trust only in God. However, a period came in his life when he doubted that God could do him any good, and his trust faltered. King Baasha of Israel made a move against his country. Asa had spent much time rebuilding the spiritual life of the kingdom that he had neglected his army. He had very little confidence that his army could stop those of King Bassha. Rather than trust in God as he had in the past he chose to buy the support of a foreign army which successfully helped him fight off his enemy.

God sent the prophet Hanani to tell the king he had demonstrated a lack of faith in God. If God had helped him fight off overpowering enemies before, he could have helped him again. King Asa became angry and threw the prophet in prison. He then took out his anger on the people and brought hardships on them.

In the midst of it all he developed a disease in his feet that brought down his health in the last two years of his life. The scripture does not tell the name of the disease, but the most common foot disease of the time, that was life threatening, was "gout." Gout was incurable at the time. There were no known medicines or treatment for the condition that were known to man. However, God knew what to do, but Asa, refused to go to God, but to the physicians of his time, who were totally inadequate. His sin was not that he consulted doctors and physicians that was a logical recourse. His sin was that he trusted them for the cure rather than ask God to use them as the instruments for the cure. He would not ask God for help. He contracted his foot disease in the 39th year of his reign. He died in the 41st year, having had sick feet treated by the wrong doctors.

Millions At The Cross Roads

Today there are millions of people who are at a cross roads in their lives. Like King Asa, they have not lead evil lives, but on the contrary have led lives that have been filled with faith in God. Some have reached a weak point in which they now doubt God's ability.

In times past they have watched as God worked mighty miracles in response to their faith. Many have overcome great physical weaknesses and sicknesses that crippled their ability to move and praise God effectively. Some have been so sick that they were not expected to live, while others have been in so much pain that they begged to die. Yet in their sickness, God proved himself able to deliver them. God delivered them from their infirmities and put them back on their feet, through his grace! It is good to have the best doctors and nurses in the country, but don't forget about Jesus! It is wise to seek the best medical assistance you can afford, but don't forget about Jesus!

He's a mighty good doctor! The lame are now walking! The mute are now talking! The sick are now well and the blind have a story to tell! Don't forget about Jesus!

Likewise there are many who have displayed great faith in God in moments of spiritual crises. These were the times when we wrestled with temptations, frustrations and obligations. These are the times when, like Christ, we endured our wilderness experience, reached our lowest point and then survived the testings of Satan. Sometimes we wrestled with great spiritual decisions about service to God, giving, and acting on our faith. These were the times when we almost gave up, only to see the miraculous faith renewing power of God spring up in our lives.

In many ways we are like Kings Asa, in that we have seen what God can do and have, in the past trusted in God without fail.

However, there are some who also share Asa's weakness. He was a great man who reached a point when his faith ran low and started putting his trust in men, rather than in God.

There are many, even as we worship, who are busy trying to take care of their circumstance all by themselves. Note that there is nothing wrong with initiative. The man or woman that takes steps to resolve a difficulty or problem is not guilty of rejecting God. It is the man or woman that places all of his hope in individual abilities or the abilities of friends that has a problem. The believer who trusts God, takes care of the particulars within his control and then turns the matter over to God, makes the correct response. His response is the same as David's when he faced Goliath, that God had helped him defend his father's sheep and he could do it again.

That may be what the song writer had in mind when he wrote "Take your burdens to the Lord and leave it there. If you trust and never doubt, he will surely bring you out, take your burden to the Lord and leave it there."

God Is Able

Someone today believes that they are facing an impossible situation in their own lives, but today you are reminded what God has done before, he can do again! Do not lean to your own understand, trust in the Lord and he will make a way!

Many make themselves miserable when they lean to their own understandings. They see the options available to them and worry that all appear dismal. When the options are not appealing that's the time that we draw on our faith and remind ourselves that God's power is not limited by our options. We serve a God who supersedes the options available to man because God can create more options.

Joshua faced the prospect of defeat in battle because he was running out of daylight. It appeared to his captains that the only option was surrender. Joshua, refused knowing that God had the power if he chose, to create another option! God stopped the earth from moving around the sun and froze the day light in the sky until it looked like the sun stood still! He gave Joshua ..another option!

Hezekiah had received word that his time was up. There were no more options. It was time for him to die. Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and talked to God, and God created another option and gave him 15 more years!

A widow woman looked at her food supply and felt she was out of options. However, in faith she obeyed the will of God and God created another option for her, giving her an endless supply of food throughout the hard times!

As the Hebrew boys faced the fiery furnace they said in their hearts "our God is able to deliver us!"

No matter what your circumstance happens to be, "our God is able to deliver us!

He's able to take our bitterness and turn it into sweetness!

He's able to take our disappointments and turn them into renew hope!

He's able to take our sadness and turn it into gladness!

King Asa went to the foot doctors, who specialize in treating gout and gangrene, but I know a doctor who can put a tap in your toe, starch in your arch and pep in your step!

King Asa was being treated for his feet, but the problem was in his heart!

But I know a doctor that is a mind fixer and a heart regulator!

I know he's a heart regulator because I heard David ask him to "create in me oh Lord a clean heart, and renew in me a right spirit!"

Who is this doctor?

His name is Jesus!

—The great physician! The Master Doctor!

—Mender of broken hearts!

He has taken silent tongues and given them a new song to sing!

He has straightened out crooked feet and gave them a brand new walk!

No wonder the song writer wrote "Jesus is one the mainline, tell him what you want! If you sick and you want to get well, tell him what you want!"

Just call him up and tell him what you want!

The Future of the Church

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Zion Traveler Baptist Church

November 6, 1994

SCRIPTURE: "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come." And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea." John 16:13;"And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. Revelation 21:1-4

Introduction

What do you think of when you think of the immediate and distant future? Do you see a church victorious, or a church in decline and defeat? Do you see a growing church of faith and power or do you see a church that will struggling to hold on. In the distant future, do you see a glorious church? Do you see yourself in the number? There are many people who have notions about the future but they have different ways that they perceive themselves in the future. Consider the slave master who made a point of trampling on any hopes that his slaves would ever have of becoming free. Those who appeared to yearn to be free were told how hard life would be as freeman having to work, provide for themselves and the learn laws. Even when it came to the slaves hopes the master thought important to trample those dreams too.

One day he called in his favorite house slave Tom. "Tom" said the master. "I had a dream last night." The old slave who had a reputation for being quick witted and wise bowed his head, faked ignorance and said "you did Massa, lets hear bout' yo' dream!" The master said "I dreamed that I died and there was some sort of mixup and I ended up in Nigra heaven. It was an awful looking place. There was Nigras everywhere. The streets were muddy. The buildings were falling down. Watermelon rhines and pig's feet were laying everywhere. It was a horrible looking place." The old slave was quick to answer but he had to find a way to say it just right where the master, who wasn't too bright, would not get the point.

"Massa. I'se glad that you mention that, because it be a strange thang because I had a strange dream too. I dreamed I died and there was a mixup and I ended up in slave master's heaven. It was a real pretty place. It had streets that were shiny and yellow like Gold. It had 12 pretty gates that smooth and pearly white. They had rows and rows of big houses called mansions and they lined every street. There wasn't no trash laying around, no water melon rhines and no hog pens. It was a real clean place.

There was just one thing thang that looked kinda strange ...there wasn't a single soul in the whole place!"

As Christians, we know that everybody talking about heaven "ain't going there." We seek to live lives of faith with the assurance that our savior has gone to prepare the same place for all of true saints, that where he is, we will be also.

Exposition

This text focuses on the Holy Spirit's work to help believers prepare for the future life.

In John, Christ paints a picture of a time when he bodily would not be with the faithful. However, he promised that while he would be absent physically that there would be a "comforter" or a divine presence in the guise of the Holy Spirit. The function of the Holy Spirit would be numerous, including convicting the world of sin and convincing the world of the righteousness of Christ. It would be the Holy Spirit's function to help the world know itself better, through knowing God better.

In the body, Christ was limited to being in one place at one time, but in his physical absence the comforter could be in many places at the same time, comforting advising and giving hope to millions simultaneously.

The Holy Spirit has one additional function, according to Christ; not only will the He guide you daily, but he will speak whatever He receives from God and will "show you things to come." The Holy Spirit will reveal to believers the nature of things to come with respect to their faith and their future. With respect to their faith, he would reveal his power through miracles, an outpouring of the spirit, and the amazing ability to spread the word about his goodness to people of every tongue and nationality.

The immediate future for the Jewish believer was to be drastically different from what was traditional. The church would be expanded beyond the traditional "For Jews Only" philosophy. It would be extended to all nations. That was a radical idea because it challenged racial and nationality barriers. Jews believed that they were God's chosen people and they did not relish the idea of extending their faith to "Gentiles." Not only that, women would play a different role among them as prophecies of Joel were fulfilled "that their sons and their daughters shall prophesy." That too was a radical idea because it challenged long established gender barriers that excluded women as equal partners in the faith. Without a doubt the direction of the church was set in a direction that would ultimately go against traditional beliefs, chart new ground, and establish the Lordship of Christ in the hearts of men and women everywhere.

Christ said the Holy Spirit would show believers "things to come" and he remained true to his word. In Revelation 1 John said he was in the spirit on the Lord's Day and God showed him a picture of "things to come." It was a panoramic picture of the last seven years of this world order, of the rise of the anti-Christ, the defeat of Satan, death and its powers, and of the eventual victory of the Christ over all of the forces of evil.

Revelation 21 shows the ultimate future of the church in its grandiose, beauty and splendor. The New Jerusalem, pictured as the bride of Christ, would be inhabited by a composite of all believers: Old Testament faithful, the church, and those who accepted Christ during the tribulation period. The greatest hint that believers have about the future state of believers is found in Revelation 21:4 "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." John said the Holy Spirit will "show you things to come" and those things will be beyond our fondest imagination!

Of Things to Come

Many today are worried about the future of the church. They worry because they have noticed that the church is not what it used to be! They see a church that appears to be more worldly, less God centered and in decline. That prospect bothers some people who are concerned about the future of the church.

Jesus, speaking about the immediate future of the church, said things would get worse before they got better. In Matthew 24 Jesus projects a time when false prophets will come within the church deceiving the very elect, home life would be unsettled and parents and children turn against each other, and war, rumors of wars, famines and pestilences increase in frequency. He projected that true friendship and compassion will disappear as real "love" waxes cold and is replaced mutually beneficial relationships. When we see these things happen, Jesus says this is just the beginning of sorrows.

Without a doubt, we are approaching the last days of this world order. As African-American believers we are seeing changes in the church that are coming as culture shock to many.

Racial barriers that have nurtured our growth are toppling. The distinct advantage of segregation was it kept African-Americans together. We supported our own business, filled our churches and generally espoused a sense of community. As barriers have fallen, each of these areas has diminished. Black businesses have declined, our sense of community has declined and our churches are emptying as a generation of the young and the educated flock after New Age religious theories in sectarian groups called "non-denominational" and "Full Gospel." Even within the same faith, white churches are evangelizing our neighborhoods, taking in our people at a high rate without a reciprocal response. As racial barriers fall, the church of the future will have great challenges to face.

Sexual barriers are falling everywhere. As the prophesy of Joel comes to pass, women are responding to Christ's challenge to teach, preach and reach the world with the Gospel message. This is an especially painful period for African-Americans who have suffered from racial discrimination, now faced with issue of sex discrimination, while at the same time suffering losses of Black men in leadership. More women leaders means less men. Diminishing the number of Black males in leadership, adds another nail to our social coffin. Thus is the nature of the challenge: how do we respect the equality of all without negatively impacting fragile state affairs with Black men. Dealing with changing role of women in the church is a real challenge for the future. New weapons are being employed against our children. One of the greatest challenges of the church is to protect its young people from immoral influences of the world until they reach a level of maturity that they can fend for themselves. Drugs, crime, promiscuity, and a plethora of other temptations are claiming too many of our youth. In the wake of declining revenues the church must decide whether it spend funds to protect its youth or continue business as usual as, one by one, they become victims of the wolves waiting to devour them.

God Is The Same

While the challenges for the church are great, we have one great consolation, that is that we serve a God who is greater than the challenge!

The methods and personalities we may employ to preach, teach and reach the world for Christ might change, but we should be reminded that God himself never changes. He is the same yesterday, today, and forever more!

While we may be concerned about the direction of the church, I've come to remind you today that future of the church is in good hands!

We don't need to worry about the future of the church, for while Jesus told of the great challenges that lay ahead for the church in Matthew 24:13 he said " But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." The church will stand!

There may be wars and rumors of wars, but the church will stand!

There may be false prophets and false doctrines that arise, but the church will stand!

There may be times of turbulence and uncertainty, but the church will stand!

The church will stand because it is founded upon a rock!

I heard Jesus tell Peter "Thou are Peter, and upon this rock I'll build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it"

Who is this rock?

This rock is Jesus, yes he's the one!

Jesus who died out on Calvary, but rose early Sunday morning!

You don't have to worry about the future, because he's coming back again, after his church!

John said if you are worried about the future of the church, look over yonder! I saw a new heaven and new earth! Coming down out of heaven, like a bride adorned for her husband was the New Jerusalem!

In the New Jerusalem, the church will spend eternity!

The New Jerusalem, will be built on 12 foundations
The New Jerusalem, will have 12 gates made of single pearls!
Over yonder, the streets will be paved with gold!
Over yonder, hearse wheels won't roll! Tears won't fall! Sadness will be unknown!
No wonder the wonder the song writer declared! Come and go with me to my father's house!
Peace and happiness there, in my father's house!
In my father's house, there is joy, joy, joy!

I Won't Complain

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:"In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you. 1 Thessalonians 5:18; Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer.1 Corinthians 10:10;"Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need. I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. Philippians 4:11-13

Introduction

Have you ever complained about one thing or another? What was your complaint about? Was it about someone or was it about something? Did someone hurt you and pose a stumbling block to your goals and ambitions? Is there something that makes life uncomfortable for you. Some complain because they don't have enough money and thereby can't get any friends. Others complain that they have too much money and don't know if they have any friends. Some complain that no one loves them, while others complain that they don't know how to love. Complaints are universal, crossing sexual and racial barriers. Whites complain. Blacks complain.Native Americans complain. Men, women, boys, and girls..it seems that everyone complains. There something always too long or too short.

Consider the farmer who was known for being a constant grumbler. He never saw a single reason that he should give thanks for anything. He was known as "Complaining Charlie." Charlie's farm was large and successful when most of his neighbors were struggling. But he was complained about that. His tractor had air conditioning, compact disc, and stereo sound when his neighbors were sweating in the heat, and he complained about that. He complained so much that none of his friends wanted to be around him. He complained too much. Many people tried to show him the bright side of things but failed. All he saw was the worse.

One year he planted a field of potatoes. For some reason Charlie's potatoes grew into a bumper crop. All of his neighbors had mediocre yields. Charlie went to church the next Sunday following the harvest looking very sad as usual. His friends surrounded him and praised him for having such a wonderful crop of potatoes, certainly this would be something to praise God for. For the first time in history, a farmer had a 100 percent harvest, nothing was lost. Despite that Charlie complained. When asked what was wrong with his life Charlie said: "I got this giant farm that it takes me all day to work. I got this air conditioned tractor and the sound only comes out of the left speaker. And now I got a perfect crop of potatoes." What was wrong with a perfect crop of potatoes? Charlie answered: "I don't have any bad potatoes to feed my hogs."

There are some people who are never see the blessings God has given them, all they see is the difficulty that remains.

As Christians, we have learned to constantly give praise and thanks to God for everything that he has done for us. We have resolved that whether sunshine or rain, good times are bad, that we will continually give thanks to God for he is good and his mercy endures for ever. Come what may, our resolve should be: "I won't complain!"

Exposition

These texts combined explain the nature of complaints and murmurings and show the appropriate Christian response.

Murmuring is defined by Vines as "indignant complaining" Indignant means: angry, incensed and offended. Indignant complaints are those rooted in anger or are in response to feeling of having been offended. Paul, writing to the Corinthians urged them not to murmur. He referred them to their history, showing them how the Israel constantly murmured and complained in the wilderness.(Numbers 14) They complained of no water and God provided them water. They complained about a lack of meat and bread and God provided them these needs. Their clothing, health, and all other physical needs were provided for, despite the fact that there were 600,000 people wandering in a dessert without vegetation or animal life to feed, nourish and sustain such a large army of people. When they reached the Jordan river, again they complained. Some wanted to go back to Egypt. Some complained and murmured against Moses, Aaron and God. Many were destroyed in their anger and anxiety as the Lord opened up the ground to swallow some and caused snakes to destroy thousands of others.

Their murmurings did not stop at the Jordan. In the promised land they complained that the crops of the Canaanites were more prosperous than theirs and began to worship idols. They complained that they did not have a king like all other nations and God gave them exactly what they asked for when he named Saul their first king. They complained in their prosperity under King Solomon because the taxes were too high. They complained in their exile, weeping for the deteriorated condition of Jerusalem. Their complaints were endless. Almost always, the underlying sentiment of all of their complaints was their feeling that God had wronged them in some way.

So, Paul warned New Testament Christians against complaining. The tone of his teaching was simple: God will always do that which is best for us, even when we don't understand or appreciate the circumstance. Therefore, we should labor with a spirit of gratitude for what we have while we strive to reach higher heights. Whether we have an abundance of material things or whether we get along with meager fare, in "every thing give thanks!"

The attitude of perpetual thanks supersedes and overrides complaining because complaining by nature requires us to believe that God has wronged us, while gratitude comes from an attitude that God cannot and will not wrong us in any way because it is against his nature. Therefore, the believer is urged to give thanks "in every thing."

Many Complainers Today

Today there are many people who are murmurers. Murmurings or complaints have varying shades. All complaints, in this context, are rooted in the feeling that someone or some cause has been wronged. Therefore, those who complain most usually do so out of a inner feeling that in some way, form or fashion, they have been wronged, slighted, wounded or otherwise offended.

The Godly Complaint

INJUSTICE: Prompts complaints because the offended rightly feel they have not received equal treatment. Those whose circumstance or condition is adversely impacted file grievances, petitions and otherwise protest their condition. Civil rights groups of all kinds make passionate pleas for justice, demand that wrongs be corrected.

The prophets of God have been the chief complainers in this context. They were not complaining against God but against the governments of men for the wrongs inflicted upon the people. Nathan complained of the wrong inflicted upon Uriah by King David. Amos constantly chided the nation's leaders for unjust actions and looked forward to the day when "Justice runs down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream." From the ranks of the oppressed the flow of prophets complaining continued through Nat Turner, Adam Clayton Powell, Martin Luther King, Ralph Abernathy, Jesse Jackson and thousands of others whose combined voices complain about the condition of the oppressed.

Godly Complaints

Those who complain about social injustice, complain to God about injustice. However, there are those whose complaints are aimed at other people directly and at God indirectly.

DOUBT: Comes from the belief that one may suffer an evil or a wrong because of the inability or unwillingness of another to make good on a promise to provide for or protect them. Some complain about their condition in life feeling that they are condemn to remain in it by fate. They feel powerless to change the condition and feel it is beyond the ability of any.

They are not unique. In Israel the people murmured because they doubted they could cross the red sea, find food in the wilderness or defeat the people of Canaan. Sarah doubted that God could give her a child in her old age and complained of an unkept promise. These doubted until reminded that there is nothing too hard for God to do.

ENVY: Is rooted in the feeling that another person has possession of something we secretly desire and think we deserve. A neighbor gets a new car, home or excels in business, instead of praising the accomplishment, the envying person murmurs about it and finds fault in it.

Envy has been the source of many complaints in the bible. Joseph was sold into slavery because his brothers envied him (Acts 7:9). Pilate was hesitant to condemn Jesus because he knew that "envy" had delivered him up for condemnation (Matthew 27:18). There were murmurings and complaints because those complaining saw themselves being injured in some way by the success or prospect of success of their victims.

INGRATITUDE: Results when one feels that even though many blessings have been received, each was deserved and more were due than those which were delivered. The ungrateful person feels worthy of all blessings and murmurs when he does not get more. The suffer from the Imeda Marcos syndrome: that of having 100 pair of shoes and being upset because one more pair was not obtained. It's the case of having much but feeling no need to show thanks because you "worked" for it and obtained it yourself.

Jesus healed 10 lepers but only one came back to say thanks. God blessed Israel immensely but instead of showing gratitude, they felt they were his chosen people and were obligated to help them. On every hand they turned away from God showing their ingratitude.

Nothing to Complain About

While it is good to complain to God about our problems, our complaint should never be WITH God.

When we consider all that God has done for us, we should conclude that we have no complaint with God.

I'm reminded of the church that held a special "complaint" Sunday where all members were told to march around and put their complaints about the church in a box and they would be read out loud. On complaint Sunday hundreds of members marched around and posted their complaints which seemed to fall in three categories: The choir's singing wasn't good enough, the preacher's preaching didn't make them shout, and there were too many offerings. Every member marched around except an old sister on the mother's bench. When asked why she wouldn't make her complaint she said:"Brother pastor, if the choir don't sing to my fancy, I remember that "God gave me a song that the angels can't sing, I've been washed in the blood of the crucified lamb. It doesn't matter whether the preacher's sermon pats me on the back or steps on my feet as long as he calls the name of Jesus, for at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. I'm not bothered by the offerings because every time I see that plate I ask "What shall I render unto God for all his mercies? I didn't come by the box because, I don't have a complaint. The Lord has been good to me, and I won't complain!

I don't know about you but I've decided that I won't complain! God has been good tome!

I won't wallow and doubt and fear because, like the three Hebrew Boys, I know "Our God is able!"

I won't be envious when I see God blessing you, because I know that what he's done for others he will do for me!

I won't be ungrateful for all of his blessings, but every day of my life I'll say "thank you Lord, Thank Lord" I won't complain!

Thank you for taking an old rugged crossing and carrying it up Calvary!

Thank you for dying for my sins!

Thank you for rising after three days and nights!

Thank you for saving my soul!

Though the world may murmur with discontent...

I won't complain!

Something On Your Mind

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 4, 1994

SCRIPTURE: Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee. Isaiah 26:3

Introduction

Have you found yourself doing one thing while thinking about another? Were you sitting at the red light with your mind a thousand miles away, only to be snapped back to the present by the honk of the horn behind you? Have you ever found your mind wandering to other interests during meetings, class, or even during conversations? If so, then you know what it means to have an occupied mind. As holiday seasons approach, many people are distracted and lose their focus. Vehicular accidents are high during holidays. Productivity on the job is low as well. It is difficult for many people to stay focused when their minds are wandering in other areas.

Distractions can be costly. Consider the case of the distracted rabbit. This little rabbit left home with his mind set on finding many green things for lunch. He heard the warnings of the other rabbits about the dangers of the forest and was determined not to be fooled by any of the creatures he met. As he hopped through the forest he was greeted by many of the animals. "Morning Bro. Rabbit" said the Eagle. "Won't you join me today?" The rabbit refused, he had his mind on lunch. The sly fox met him with a grin and an invitation, "won't you come in to my den?" "Not today" said the rabbit as he hopped along. One after another he received and turned down invitations from the bear, hoot owl, robin and many others. He hopped along with an undisturbed pace. He ignored every attempt to get him off the path, until he saw the most amazing thing. It looked to be a carrot dangling in mid air. He stopped and looked with amazement. If the carrot moved to the left or right, so did the rabbit. He was amused. By the time he noticed the thin string attached to its top, it was too late, he was snapped up into the paws of the hungry lion, who unlike the distracted rabbit, never took his mind off getting his lunch!

There are many people who began this year with the best of intentions. They hopped along for months avoiding temptations and flirtations, until someone dangled the right carrot in front of them. Once distracted they took a path that led to destructive activity.

There are others however, who have remained focused and refused to be diverted.

They have been preoccupied with one quest and have not strayed to the left or to the right.

As Christians, our minds should be occupied with doing the will of God. We strive daily to avoid distractions and remain focused. By doing so we have found that even in the confusion and frustrations of the seasons, we have perfect peace!

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he points to the ultimate reward of those who keep their minds directed toward the things of God.

Isaiah, considered a major prophets because of the length of his writings, spoke to Judah in two veins. In his first 39 books he spoke of the judgment that the nation would endure for his infidelities to God. He also peppered those predictions with glimpses of the rewards that would be forthcoming to the righteous. Prophecies that fall into this category are all contained in chapters 1-39. The remaining 27 books are Messianic, in that they generally contain references to the coming Messiah, his life, trial, crucifixion and resurrection.

This text is among those that speak of the judgments of the wicked and the rewards of the righteous. In the first passage of Chapter 26 Isaiah tells of the coming reward of belivers specifically to Judah during the 1000 year reign of Christ. It also is a promise to all believers who trust in God. This is the case with this text. It is a promise from God for all believers who remain focused on God, completely trusting him.

Two phrases unlock this text: "Perfect Peace" and the "Stayed mind."

PERFECT PEACE: The promise of peace has been made before, however the person who meets the requirements of this text can look forward to "perfect peace" which is different from simple "peace." Generally we think of peace as the absence of war. Peace is conditional on both parties participating. Peace, in this context, is conditional. It depends on both parties. Perfect peace, on the other hand, is non-conditional. It exists regardless to the action of others. Those who abide in the Lord are promised perfect peace.

STAYED MIND: Perfect peace is the reward of the believer who keeps a stayed mind. "Mind" in Hebrew is " yetser", (yay'-tser). It refers to one's purpose, imagination, and work." Therefore the word "mind" involves more than just the thoughts, but also includes the sense of purpose, creative energy and deeds that work to praise God. One prerequisite to the "stayed mind" is complete trust in God. That is, to rely on the willingness and the ability of God to provide a way for his will to be accomplished.

A person whose mind is stayed on God is one that devotes everything he or she has to accomplishing his purpose, without distraction or diversion, depending and trusting completely on the power of God to sustain him.

Avoid Distractions

There are many people who began the year with clear cut goals and priorities for themselves and for their families. So far, many have been successful at keeping themselves focused on achieving their personal and spiritual goals. They have resisted the temptation to wander and squander. They have been more involved and attentive to their spiritual lives as well. However, there are certain times each year that even the strongest person is vulnerable to distractive elements that can derail our best intentions. Therefore we should be on guard when those occasions, which include Christmas and New Year's Eve, arrive.

FAMILY DISTRACTIONS: Many will be distracted from their family priorities. Some have struggled all year to keep their family debt load within reason. Others have persistently pursued goals of increasing the quality time the family spends together or supporting the special involvements of family members. In short, many have worked hard to control family finances, time and involvements.

As festive occasions approach opportunities for distraction will also increase. As you hop along through the forest, advertisements, telephone appeals, easy credit, and a plethora of other activities will serve to distract the weak. The constant appeals to buy more furniture, appliances, automobiles, clothing and toys than your finances can handle will definitely distract some, who have done well all year. Many people have Merry Christmases only to feel depressed and gloomy when they realize that the ad that said "No payment till next year" didn't give them as long as they thought. Next year is just a week after Christmas.

The enticement to party, drink and get drunk will distract many. There are some who have successfully avoided such distractions all year, but under the guise of club functions and respectable social gatherings, many are distracted. Some begin a whirlwind round of partying and drinking that get's them so far off track that they cannot find the trail again. Bro. Fox says come and sit at my table, you don't need any money, I'm buying. Bro. Bear says come over to his "Happy Hour." With all of the distractions that will appeal to us, we should beware that do not respond to ungodly appeals and lose our focus.

Some will be distracted from their commitments to God. Shopping, cooking and buying presents are distractions of this season. Many will find themselves skipping worship, Sunday School, bible study, and praise season as they respond to the distractions of the season. Others who have faithfully obeyed God and have given regularly in their churches will cut back as they respond to the appeals and demands of the season. Christmas morning, there will be many who will be so distracted that they fool themselves that they are celebrating Christ's birth at home exchanging gifts, instead of assembling with the Saints to praise him in the sanctuary.

As believers we should stay focused and remember the reason for the season. Jesus is the reason for the season. Therefore, we should keep our minds focused on him, not just during this season, but every day of our lives.

We should not be deterred from our purpose, because our minds our stayed on Jesus!

We should not be distracted from our prayer or worship, because our minds are stayed on Jesus!

We should not be distracted from our faith, because our minds are stayed on Jesus!

He kept Us On His Mind

Finally it is important that we note that while at times we are distracted in our service to our Lord, he was never distracted, he kept his mind on us!

Though tempted in many ways, he was never distracted because he had salvation on his mind!

In the wilderness, Satan offered him self appeasement and challenged him to turn stones into bread. However, Jesus refused saying "It is written that man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God!" He couldn't be distracted, because he had salvation on his mind!

Satan dangled fame and glory in front of him, but could not get him off track, "Get thee behind me Satan" was his response. He had Salvation on his mind!

Every child of God should draw strength from knowing that you always on his mind!

When you are right, you are always on his mind!

When you are wrong, you are always on his mind!

When you are enjoying success, wallowing in failure, relishing strenght, pondering weakness, you are always on his mind!

Even when you are asleep at night you are always on his mind! I know its true because Psalm 121 says "He that keepeth Israel neither slumbers or sleeps, he will not suffer the sun to smite you by day or the moon by night!" You are always on his mind!

When Jesus left the garden his plan was to obey his father's will, which was to provide a means of salvation for every believer. He was never distracted, his mind was stayed on the purpose of God!

I so glad that Jesus kept his mind on me!

Though they judged him in midnight trials, his mind was on me! Though whipped and ridiculed, his mind was on me!

When he died out on Calvary, he mind was on me!

But early Sunday morning arose, with all power in his hand!

No wonder the song writer wrote: "I woke up this morning with mind, stayed on Jesus! Walking and Talking with my mind stayed on Jesus! Singing and shouting with my mind stayed on Jesus!"

Everywhere I go, I'm going keep my mind ...

Stayed on Jesus!

He Shall Be Great!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 11, 1994

Scripture: Luke 1:32 He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Luke 1:32-33

Introduction

How do you become a great person? Accident of Birth? Hard work? Doing well in that which God has purposed you to do? People measure greatness by varying standards, making it conditional. In a society of thieves he who steals most is the greatest. In a nation of sluggards and lazy, he who works least is the greatest. Among the law abiding, the great are those who live their lives without a single arrest. However, there are others who are counted great because of the number of times they have been arrested. What is least considered in one social order is considered an outstanding quality in another. Greatness therefore is relative.
Sometimes aspire to the appearances of greatness without counting the cost. Consider the monkey who always wanted to be king of the jungle. The monkey watched the lion everyday. He watched how the lion walked proudly through the jungle, smiling and nodding his head, roaring and basking in the glory that comes with being king. Atop his head sat a giant golden crown, and the Lion wore it with pride. The monkey wished that he could be a great king, just like the lion. On the occasion of his birthday several of his chimpanzee friends decided to give the monkey a present and make him king. In the quiet of night the stole the crown from the king's head, wrapped it in a package and brought it back to give to the monkey . When the monkey saw the crown he was thrilled. Finally, he would get to be king. He placed the crown on his head and walked proudly like the lion. The same day when all of the animals assembled for their monthly meeting, the monkey walked in with the crown on his head and all the animals laughed at him. When the lion entered the room, the animals bowed in respect. That amazed the monkey, because the lion had no crown. The old owl tried to explain: "The crown doesn't make him the king, but because he is the king, he wears the crown."

The monkey still looked confused, so he went further. “If the chimpanzees placed a crown on your head then you are just a monkey wearing a crown. However, if the creatures of the forest bow before you, you are the king, with or without the crown.” With that the monkey understood returned the crown to the king and joined the rest of animals and bowed in humble respect.
There are many today who want to be great without paying the price for greatness. James and John came to Christ and wanted great positions in the kingdom of heaven, only to learn that simple positions don’t make people great, but its the service they give that elevates them to positions. Jesus articulated an important formula for greatness that still remains true among believers “He that would be greatest among you, let him be your servant.” Therefore, your greatness is evaluated in terms of the quality of your service to God through your service to your fellowman.
As Christians we should remember that the measure of our individual greatness will not be measured by positions that we attain in life or by titles or secular promotions. Our greatness shall be measured by the quality of our work in doing the will of God.

Introduction

How do you become a great person? Accident of Birth? Hard work? Doing well in that which God has purposed you to do? People measure greatness by varying standards, making it conditional. In a society of thieves he who steals most is the greatest. In a nation of sluggards and lazy, he who works least is the greatest. Among the law abiding, the great are those who live their lives without a single arrest. However, there are others who are counted great because of the number of times they have been arrested. What is least considered in one social order is considered an outstanding quality in another. Greatness therefore is relative.
Sometimes aspire to the appearances of greatness without counting the cost. Consider the monkey who always wanted to be king of the jungle. The monkey watched the lion everyday. He watched how the lion walked proudly through the jungle, smiling and nodding his head, roaring and basking in the glory that comes with being king. Atop his head sat a giant golden crown, and the Lion wore it with pride. The monkey wished that he could be a great king, just like the lion. On the occasion of his birthday several of his chimpanzee friends decided to give the monkey a present and make him king. In the quiet of night the stole the crown from the king’s head, wrapped it in a package and brought it back to give to the monkey . When the monkey saw the crown he was thrilled. Finally, he would get to be king. He placed the crown on his head and walked proudly like the lion. The same day when all of the animals assembled for their monthly meeting, the monkey walked in with the crown on his head and all the animals laughed at him. When the lion entered the room, the animals bowed in respect. That amazed the monkey, because the lion had no crown. The old owl tried to explain: "The crown doesn't make him the king, but because he is the king, he wears the crown." The monkey still looked confused, so he went further. "If the chimpanzees placed a crown on your head then you are just a monkey wearing a crown. However, if the creatures of the forest bow before you, you are the king, with or without the crown." With that the monkey understood returned the crown to the king and joined the rest of animals and bowed in humble respect.

There are many today who want to be great without paying the price for greatness. James and John came to Christ and wanted great positions in the kingdom of heaven, only to learn that simple positions don't make people great, but its the service they give that elevates them to positions. Jesus articulated an important formula for greatness that still remains true among believers "He that would be greatest among you, let him be your servant." Therefore, your greatness is evaluated in terms of the quality of your service to God through your service to your fellowman.
As Christians we should remember that the measure of our individual greatness will not be measured by positions that we attain in life or by titles or secular promotions. Our greatness shall be measured by the quality of our work in doing the will of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on a message given to the virgin Mary by the Angel Gabriel announcing that she would be a son who would be great in the sight of God. Mary was engaged to marry Joseph and was a virgin. She received a message from the Angel Gabriel that she was to conceive and have a child and that he would be great. Six months earlier, an angel had spoken to a relative of Mary's, by the name of Elizabeth, and a similar message was given to her as well. Verse 15 records the message of the Lord speaking to Elizabeth's husband Zacharias telling him that his wife would bear a son in her old age. Moreover that the son "shall be great in the sight of the Lord." That son turned out to be John the Baptist who was respected and revered by thousands as a great teacher from God.
Mary's message was similar, but not only would her son be great in the sight of the Lord "he shall be called the son of the highest." Both young men would be great, but Jesus would be greater. Jesus would be given the eternal throne of David and would reign over the house of Jacob forever in the kingdom of heaven (v32-33) John would be great, but Jesus would be greater.
The annunciation of greatness in both of these passages typifies the nature of their greatness. Both would be great in the sight of the Lord. However, their greatness was not universally accepted. John was considered great only among some Jews. The Scribes and Pharisees feared him because the crowds loved him. He was not great by their standards. The Romans considered him a threat and they constantly watched him. The affluent considered him eccentric. He lived in the desert, a locust and wild honey for food and wore crude clothing. They considered him a bit weird, but certainly not great. While he was highly visible and vocal, the religious leaders or Romans did not consider John great. However, in the sight of the Lord, John was considered great because he carried out the will of God in a grand way.

Jesus wasn't considered great by everyone. At his birth, Herod perceived him as a threat and sought to have him killed. The religious leaders considered him a common criminal and blasphemer. The Romans considered him a nuisance, the center of a problem that would not go away. Even among his disciples there was one, Judas, that would not consider him great unless he used his potential to build himself a worldly kingdom. Otherwise, he was useless to the cause. Yet the angel Gabriel told Mary that "he shall be great." At some unknown point in the life of John he decided to focus his life on doing those things which would be considered great in the sight of the Lord. He would not be bothered if his service to God lowered him in the eyes of some of those who knew him. Jesus in the wilderness, came to the same conclusion. His greatness would not come from the selfish pursuit of riches, power and glory but by doing the will of God.

In Whose Sight Will I Be Great?

Today, millions must answer the probing question: "In whose sight, will I choose to be great?"
Many young people have already made the decision to be great in the eyes of the boys and girls of the hood. In the hood greatness and popularity are determined factors that are frowned upon by others. In the hood greatness may be conferred upon women on act like men and cuss like sailors. Boys who wear their pants below their behinds, refuse to wear belts, and decorate their necks and teeth with layers of gold, are considered great. Those who don't do well in school but can slam dunk on the backyard basketball court may be considered great by the boys in the hood. In the hood education is considered nice but not necessary, while looking, talking and dressing took is considered necessary but not nice. In the hood you may be considered great if you are "Naughty by nature." You may be considered a complete failure if you get a job, be faithful to your wife and have no jail record, and don't wear a beeper.
Youth who have decided to be great in the eyes of the Hood have shut out all other influences. Teachers, preachers, parents and everyone else have been completely shut out. Their opinions, sermons and lectures do not matter because it is not their goal to be considered great in any eyes except those of their peers in the hood.

The paradox is that many youth are aspiring to be great in the eyes of the hood before they learn that there is another world beyond the hood. That world doesn't measure greatness by how well they curse, how many rap songs they know, whether they can rap, or whether they carry a 9 millimeter weapon. Some spend the majority of their youth becoming great in the eyes of the hood only to find out that the university of life won't accept transfer credits from students of professor Snoop Doggie Dog.

No Transfer Credits

Come here youngster work for me and don't take less
I offer you a desk, the best, and American Express I've never heard of your university, it name an origins are a mystery to me
Though I've checked every list and browsed every log
I can't seem to find professors
Sky Walker and Snoop Doggie Dog
You must have been great in school of the hood
You must have studied your lessons and learned very good
All A's, no c's, not a single D you must have been great in this university
You got a rock in your pocket
A lean in your walk
A hand on your socket
A growl in your talk
In fact you can hip hop around the clock
You can Chill Out Drop and Hang with Too Pop!
What you have here is hiding the truth with a real thick fog
The University of life Doesn't accept transfer credits from Professor Snoop Doggie Dog!

The question that must be answered by every young man and lady is in whose sight do I want to appear great?
David writing in Psalm 19:14 made his position all too clear: " Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O LORD, my strength, and my redeemer."
Let my deeds words and actions be acceptable in thy sight and in this context, let me find greatness.

The Meaning Went in Before The Name Went On

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 18, 1994

SCRIPTURE:Isa 9:6 For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Mat 1:23 Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us.Mat 1:25 And knew her not till she had brought forth her firstborn son: and he called his name JESUS.

Introduction

Suppose your parents were told in advance what kind of person you would be; and were told to give you a name that would describe you. What would your name be? Suppose you could name a person near you, what would the name be? What about your next door neighbor? What about your boss? What about your enemy? There would be a wide range of names that some would be called. Some of us would like what we are called, some of us would be very upset. In fact, there are many people who dislike their names because the names seem to misrepresent how they see themselves or seem to expose them to ridicule. Some have changed their names and in fact named themselves.

The famous singer Jerry Butler was called the “Ice Man” because he could not dance and stood still during his concerts. He made the name a part of his act and produced a popular album called “The Ice Man Cometh.” Malcolm Little substituted an “X” for his last name. He said the “X” represented the name he never knew and “Little” was his slavemaster’s name. The singer formerly known as Prince changed his name to a sign that cannot be pronounced. Now when he is introduced he is called the man that was “formerly known as Prince.” Asked why he changed his name to an unpronounceable sign he said once that “there were no words that could describe him.”

If by divine intervention we were miraculously given the power to name ourselves, what name could best describe us? Some could correctly describe themselves as “Joy!” Some we could be described as “Precious!” You have perhaps met a few people named “Faith” or few named “Hope.” There are even few named “Charity.” These are names that seem to suggest that the persons who wear the names exhibit these fine character traits. What names do our friends use to describe us when we are not around? Smart or Smart Alec? Confident or Cocky? Talkative or Big Mouth? Diplomat or Traitor? Loyal or Backstabber? Winehead? Canehead? Wiseman or foolish? The terms used to describe us is the way we are seen in the eyes of our peers.

As Christians, we bear the name of “Christian.” Our daily goal should be to see to it that the label we wear accurately describes the people who are called by that name!

Exposition

This text causes us to focus on the truth that the personality characteristics of Mary’s child were already predicted and foretold before he was given the name of “Jesus.”

The coming of the Messiah was one of the central themes of the book of Isaiah. In the first six verses of this chapter Isaiah paints a picture of a world that would be groping in darkness. It would be literally walking in the shadow of death, looking and searching for the light of hope. In just a few words he scans the history of the Jewish struggle and conflict with its enemies comparing it to a great purging or cleansing that eventually lifts the yoke of oppression off the shoulders of people. For the nation of Israel this deliverance was accomplished with a sword.

Isaiah pointed to the same purifying presence that would come in the future with the birth of the Messiah, the very presence of God among men.

In verse 6 Isaiah appears to give several names that the Messiah would be called. However, in the context of the Hebrew, these were not intended to be understood as the literal names of the Messiah, but were to be descriptions of the characteristics he would possess.

Jesus was not actually named any of the names that Isaiah mentioned. In Matthew 1:21 an angel told Joseph that he would be called Jesus. The angel noted that the child Mary would bear would be the one described by the prophet as “Emmanuel” which means God with us. The prophet referred to Isaiah.

Isaiah describes the Messiah’s qualities and nature. Matthew tells what name he would finally bear.

He would be called wonderful because he would be both God and man. His life would be marked with wonderful works. He would be called counselor for he would consult with God on the behalf of men and plead their case as a lawyer in a courtroom.

He would be almighty God because the mighty work that he would perform would be of such that only one with the power of God could bring it to pass.
Because he would be one with God, he too would be described as the everlasting father.

The kingdom that he would usher in would rest upon his principles, examples, wisdom and power. It would literally be upon his shoulders and not those of men and therefore an era of perfect peace will exist. The failed efforts of men to create world peace will dwarf before and the world recognizes that he is truly the Prince of Peace.

This description of the nature of and qualities of the savior was given for the chief benefit of those of the future, who be present when he actually became "Emmanuel" or God with us. This character description also served to confirm the presence of the Messiah as the one truly anointed by God.

When Joseph received word in Matthew to name Mary's child Jesus, he was being told to give him the actual name to which he would answer. Jesus is the Greek version of the Hebrew "Joshua" meaning he would save his people.

Thus Jesus came among men with his nature, qualities and purpose already predicted, before Joseph actually named him "Jesus."

Christian Qualities Before The Name

Today there are millions in the world who wear labels that do not accurately describe them.

Some are registered Democrats but they act like, talk like and vote like Republicans. Some call themselves Americans but speak evil against the country. Some wear the label of being African-American but some other label would be more accurate.

In a similar sense there are many who call themselves Christians but betray the label with their actions.

The quest of many people is to get the label and the look even if it's not the real thing.

Those who want to follow Christ should recognize that in the Christian life the qualities go in before the name goes on.

The qualities of a true Christian are:

Moral living: Those who are Christians strive to live by the moral standards of God. They obey the commandments referring to stealing, killing, adultery and the like, but also follow the higher commandment of brotherly love, which supersedes and envelopes all of the commandments. Those who seek to wear the name Christian without adhering to the moral values it represents are hypocritical. The morality goes in before the name goes on!

Prayerfulness: The true Christian is a man or woman of prayer. That means they strive to pray and talk to God about their needs and his wishes for them. Those who pray consult God and listen to his advice. The quality of prayerfulness goes in before the name goes on!

Compassion: The true Christian is also compassionate. He or she is concerned about the needs of the poor and the disadvantaged. The true Christian cannot turn a deaf ear to the trials and sufferings of others. It is not his nature. This spirit of compassion goes into the heart of man before the label goes on.

What Christ brought to the world was the spirit of compassion and love for others. Those who follow him must incorporate that spirit into their hearts before they set out to call themselves "Christians." The qualities must go in, before the name goes on!

Isaiah made it plain that the Christ child would be "Emmanuel" or represent the very presence of God with us. That should be comforting knowledge for any today who are troubled by the ills of times. The comfort should come in knowing that no matter how bad the times God is with us!

Whether it is a rise in crime, famine or world unrest, we are reassured that we serve a mighty God who is able to balance the inequities of these times with the perfect peace that he offers.

Every child of God is confident in these times because he knows that whether its good times or bad times, our God is able!

This confidence leads them to conclude that though —tears may fill their eyes; thorns may line their path

—burdens may stoop their backs; clouds may hide their sun

—Disappointments may break their hearts; pain may inflict their body.

...despite it all...our God is able to deliver us!

We know he is able because his name tells the story! His name is so powerful that it is only name under the heavens whereby men must be saved!

I hear the scripture declaring that "at the name of Jesus, every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess!"

We trust in the name of Jesus because the qualities went in before the name went on!

Because the power went in before the name went on

The architect calls him the Chief Cornerstone.

The astronomer calls him the bright and morning star!

The baker calls him the Living Bread and the banker calls him the Hidden Treasure.

The Qualities went in before the name went on!

To the carpenter He is the Sure Foundation.

To the doctor He is the Great Physician.

To the educator He is the Great Teacher.

To the florist He is the Lily of the Valley and the Rose of Sharon.

The qualities went in before the name went on!

To the geologist He is the Rock of Ages.

To the editor He is the good news of the Gospel!.

To the oculist He is the Light of the Eyes.

To the philosopher He is the Wisdom of God.

To the Sinner He is the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

To the Christian, He is the Son of the Living God, the Savior, the Redeemer!

After he went Calvary and rose from the dead the world recognizes him as king of kings and Lord of Lords!

The qualities went in before the name went on!

Show Me Thy Path

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Honorable Charles Johnson
Monroe Civic Center

December 22, 1994

SCRIPTURE:"Show me thy ways, O Lord; teach me thy paths. Lead me in thy truth, and teach me; for thou art the God of my salvation; on thee do I wait all the day. Remember, O LORD, thy tender mercies and thy lovingkindnesses; for they have been ever of old.Remember not the sins of my youth, nor my transgressions: according to thy mercy remember thou me for thy goodness' sake, O LORD." Psalm 25:4-7

Introduction

What kind of path do you walk in life? Where is it taking you? Perhaps life offers each of us three choices with respect to our paths. We can be trailblazers, pathfinders or simply walk the beaten path. Those who walk the beaten path simply do what everybody else does and follow the path of least resistance. Pathfinders seek out the paths that have been blazed correctly and walk in them. Trailblazers make paths and cut trails, in territory that has never been explored. Whether we are trailblazers, pathfinders or simply walking the beaten path, every day of our lives, we leave footsteps and tracks that, when studied by those who come behind us, will reveal great truths about us.

Sometimes a lot can be learned about a man by studying the path he walks and the tracks he leaves behind. Consider the case of Country Joe the famous tracker. In the back wood areas there was no one that was as successful at tracking than old Country Joe. In his lifetime he had tracked bears, wolves, possums, coons, deer, rabbits and just about every living creature that could leave a trail. He was so good he could look at a bear's foot print and tell you his approximate height, weight and age. He could tell if the bear was walking or running, well or injured. Country Joe's skill was legendary to say the least. Occasionally the authorities often called on Country Joe to help them find a criminal that had escaped. Joe had a great reputation for always being able to find suspects by studying tracks and things left behind.

One day a man had burglarized a house at night and left running in the dark. The police had no idea how he looked, but they knew which way he went. The Chief decided to go out in the back woods and bring in Country Joe. Country Joe went in the forest and found the path of the man's footsteps and stopped at the first track and studied it. The police watched with amazement as this master went to work. A few minutes later Country Joe came to the Chief and said "I think I can help you." The police chief listened as Country Joe told him "The man you are looking for is six feet tall. He's got blonde hair and blue eyes. He weighs about 170 pounds, he's got a scar on the left side of his face and he lives at 1407 West Main Street." The chief was amazed! As he paid old Joe for his service he said "Joe you are amazing. Did you get all of that from one track?" Joe answered "Not really sir, he dropped his driver's license as he was running up the trail!"

As Christians we strive to walk a path that has been blazed by the master. Our goal is to step off the beaten path, and find the path blazed for us by our creator. Our prayer daily should be "Lord, teach me thy paths" that I may walk in them and have peace.

Exposition

This text focuses on King David as he requests God to direct his path, protect him from his enemies and forgive his shortcomings.

David was a complex character whose personality was a mix bag of faith in God, occasional irreverence, action, strength, weakness, and conviction. His faith in God was so great that he is described as a man after God's own heart. He was described this way, although he once displayed irreverence by eating the shewbread from the temple and had an adulterous fling with Uriah's wife. David is described as a "man after God's own heart" because when his strengths and weaknesses were compared, in balance he arose as a man whose heart was honest, convictions were strong, and whose path was straight.

The path that David walked had humble beginnings. As a youth he learned responsibility shepherding his father's flock. He learned to walk courageously because of the constant prospect of attacks by lions, bears and other creatures. His was a path that took him along the trail of valor, as he courageously fought Goliath and won the praise of the people.

His path was also a lonely path. He was hunted by King Saul as if he were a criminal and often hid himself in the mountains. When almost captured or surrounded in the plains of life he constantly sought solace with God. In in Psalm 121 he wrote "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth." Having walked the path of persecution and victimization, he developed a keen sensitivity to dangers that await all who must travel that way.

His path was one of humility. Those who study David's life know that there were times when he took a path that strayed. However, these brief meanderings were always followed by swift returns to the right path. Whenever David did wrong it bothered him. This was the occasion in which he prayed to God Psalm 51:10 "Create in me oh Lord, a clean heart and renew a right spirit within me." He was aware that he could not adequately set examples for others, if he himself could not master the spirit of faithfulness. In Psalm 51:13 he noted that only after he came back to right path himself could he speak to others from a position of strength. By walking the path of humility, David proved himself rose even taller in the eyesight of God.
His path was a path of accomplishment. The trail he walked carried him to great life accomplishments. David made history. He spent most of his time fighting the enemies of the people. He defeated Goliath as a boy. He rallied the downcasts, the poor and hopeless of the land and gave them hope. He championed that cause so greatly that he was named King three times: once by God, once by Judah and once by Israel. As king his greatest accomplishment was to fight for the people. In the closing years of his life he had finally created an atmosphere where the things he wanted to do for God could be done. He had cooperation, trust and peace. He forged a coalition of trust with his generals and leaders and set out to build the land.
This text summarizes his life's quest to walk in the right path and to know the ways of God. Hear his words echoing across the centuries: "Shew me thy ways, O Lord; teach me thy paths!"
His request of God was that he would forgive his "transgressions," and judge him by the path he walked.

Find the Path

There are many today who aspire to greatness in life. They dream of the glory and honor of moving in high circles and dream about mountain top experiences. In their quest to reach their destinies many make the mistake of taking the road to least resistance. They walk the beaten path.
The beaten path means different things to different people. For the educator, the beaten path is a truncated that leads from home, college, school room, bank and home with nothing in between, including students. The educator who walks the beaten path does only what's necessary to put in the required number of years, take retirement and take it easy. No more. No less. For the politician the beaten path is to do whatever it takes to win, even if winning means sacrificing your pride, principle, and people.
In every walk of life the beaten path is often a road that leads to mediocrity. It is a proliferation of those who "talk the talk, but can't walk the walk." Thus from the serenity of Walden Pond I hear Henry David Thoreau's challenge to the ages whispering to this generation: "March to the beat of a different drummer!"

If we want to be truly great we must get off the beaten trail and find the path!

Even a casual study of the lives of those who have achieved greatness shows that at some point they had to find the right path!

As this generation comtemplates taking its place in the halls of leadership, its challenge is to find the path!

Among African-Americans, those who were great among us were those who found the path. Frederick Douglass and Sojourner Truth achieved freedom themselves. However they got off the beaten path of finding personal freedom for themselves and being satisfied, they used their positions to keep working until others were free as well. Booker Washington, Dubois, Garvey, Malcom X, Martin Luther King, and nameless others were all individuals who found the path. They remembered the cries of the Israel in Egypt were not ashamed to request, plead, implore and demand that Pharaoh would let my people go.

The worse thing that can be said about an African-American preacher is the phrase "he can't preach!" The worse thing that can be said about an African-American leader is "he forgot where he came from." He lost the path.

Those who aspire to excellence must prepare themselves through intense study and preparation. Find the path!

Those who desire roles of leadership must face issues generically, without losing their focus on who they are and where they have come from! Find the Path!

Those who walk in the footsteps of the historically great must find the path!

Jesus Blazed the Trail

The beaten path is followed by many. There are other paths that are only traveled by a few. However, every path had to be created by a trailblazer. The trailblazer is the one who makes the path that others follow. David, in this text, recognized that only God can blaze trails and make right paths. So David says, Lord show me thy path!

Today we know many who have historic reputations as trailblazers, but I know a trailblazer!

We know about Lewis and Clark the great Americans who blazed trails through the hills and valleys of this country, but I know a trailblazer!

We know about Wild Bill Hicock, Daniel Boone, and Jim Bowie, men who had reputations for blazing trails from the mountains of Tennessee to the plains of West, but today I want you to know that..I know a trailblazer!

We know that Susan B. Anthony, Nannie Helen Burroughs and Mary McCleod Bethume blazed trails for women in civil rights and education, but I know a trailblazer!

We know that Alan Shepherd, Scott Carpenter and John Glenn blazed a trail in outer space going where no man has gone before, but I know a trailblazer!

I know a trailblazer who cut a trail through 42 generations of time!

I know a trailblazer who heard the cries of a people sweltering in the heat of oppression and lifted them to freedom!

I know a trailblazer who mapped out a path of feeding the poor, healing the sick, and lifting the broken hearted.

I know a trailblazer who mapped out a path for others to follow and said "I am the way, the truth and the light. No man comes to the father except by me!"

If you want to get to the kingdom find the path!
The path to the kingdom of God is to know Jesus!
No wonder the song writer wrote: "You got to know Jesus, know God for yourself. If you know Jesus, you don't need nobody else!"
Somebody found the path on Monday! Somebody found him on Sunday!
But you must know Jesus, he is the path!
The path to everlasting life is to know Jesus!
Jesus, the lily of the valley!
Jesus, the bright and morning star!
Jesus, the fairest of ten thousand!
Jesus, who died out on Calvary and rose after three days and nights!
Jesus, who put a foot on a cloud and blazed a trail back to glory!
I can see him in glory calling those who walk the right path, one by one,
Come on up!
Come on up!
Come on up!

On Sunday December 18, 1994 The Honorable Charles H. Johnson, councilman, and principal answered a higher call. He marched to the beat of a different drummer. He found the path.

Hope Despite Impossibilities

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 25, 1994

SCRIPTURE: " And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God. And, behold, thy cousin Elisabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age: and this is the sixth month with her, who was called barren. For with God nothing shall be impossible. Luke 1:35-37.

Introduction

What do you do when you face impossible situations? Do you shrivel up in fear, shore up in faith or shrink up in defeat? Many, when faced with impossible situations throw up their hands and decide that it is not worth the effort. When faced with impossible situations, the faithful are at their best, because they are not intimidated by challenge. In fact, without a challenge, most people are satisfied to remain unchanged and seldom progress to their highest potential.

Consider the man who had recently accepted Christ, but traveled from church to church trying to decide which one he would join. For a while he attended a medium sized congregation that had great testimonies about God's work in its spiritual life. He was impressed with the congregation but never joined. Several of the church's leaders visited him to ask why he had not joined them after visiting so regular. He told them that the building was beautiful and awe inspiring. Its decor was breath taking and it worship was majestic. He said one Sunday he saw a note in the bulletin announcing a reduction in its ministries for the next year because of expected tough times. After reading that note he never returned.

Many of his friends were surprised when they learned that he had joined a little church with unpadded seats, an old outdated, untuned piano, and hardly enough funds to keep the lights on. He was asked what made a man of his position unite with such a small church. He answered: "When I first visited them they were worshiping in the park and the preacher said God would put a roof over their heads, a few months later they were inside. The next time I was with them they had no music and and a choir member said God would send a piano. A few months later they had one. The third time I dropped by, the pastor said God would bless and multiply their efforts to build a new building in one year. Without batting an eye, the small congregation rose to its feet and shouted Amen." His friends were still puzzled "That's it?" They asked. He answered "The big churches I attended acted on probability and put their hopes in their budgets and their plan. That little church tackled the impossible and put their trust in the Son of man!..I joined them because they reminded me that with God, there is no such thing as impossible!"

Christ was born in a way that seemed inconceivable, under conditions that were improbable with a mission to do the impossible. In the midst of all this impossibility he gave the world hope!

As Christians, the birth of Christ stirs a feeling of joy, happiness and renewal. It should rekindle in every believing heart a renewed faith that despite the impossible conditions of this world, our God is still able to do the impossible!

Exposition

This text shows how an angel reassured Mary that though the circumstances surrounding her conception seemed unbelieveable, they were not only probable but also highly possible, with God.

Mary was told by an angel of the Lord that she would birth the Christ child into the world. That was highly unlikely, especially since Mary was engaged to be married and remained a virgin. Considering those facts in verse 34 Mary asked a question: "How can these things be?"

A great future was laid out before her that appeared impossible. The son she would birth would be called the Son of the Highest and he would inherit the throne of his father, David.

The terminology used may have been confusing to Mary just as many today who read the account are confused. In verse 32, Mary is told that King David is the father of child. That must have been confusing, because King David had been dead for several hundred years. The term "father" in verse 32 did not mean that David would be the literal father of the child, but as head of great royal line of the family of David all of his descendants are said to be his "children." In his lifetime, God had promised David that one from his family would reign forever. 2 Sam 7:16 "And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established forever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever." It appeared to be an empty promise because not only had the kingdom of Israel fallen from power but they were the subjects of the Roman Empire. The prospect of Mary birthing a child that would rule on David's throne was considered highly impossible, since there was no literal kingdom to rule.

In that same context, Elizabeth, in verse 36, is referred to as Mary's cousin. "Cousin" is a term synonymous with "countryman" not blood relatives as we know it today. Both Joseph, Mary and their parents were descendants of the house of David. Elizabeth was a descendant of Aaron or the house of Levi (v5). They were not blood cousins but were persons of the same country.

All of this must have sounded impossible: An old woman she knew would have a child. She would have a child in her youth, but without sex. The child would be the Son of God. That must have had an impossible ring to it.

Mary learned that this string of impossible events was going to happen through the intervention of the "Holy Ghost" (v35) or the spiritual presence of God himself. If it all appeared confusing and impossible she was given one clear thought to ponder in verse 37: "For with God nothing shall be impossible."

Dealing With Impossible Situations

Today there are many people who are troubled with impossible situations in their personal lives, family and in the community. The odds appear stacked against them and there is no way to succeed.

Sometimes economics creates impossible situations. Money problems worry many people. On any given day there are millions who are considering their meager finances an impossible situation. For some, debts are increasing and income is decreasing. Some have lost jobs or experienced investment losses. Even at this very hour, while many are sharing the joy of Christmas with their families, someone is quietly wondering how to get enough money to beat their checks to the bank and cover the costs of Christmas revelry?

Many people think their finances are such a shambles that it is impossible to repair. They owe the bank, loan company, the mortgage company, the auto manufacturer, the credit union, and the lady next door. They have thrown up their hands in defeat. Economic trouble is a verse 37 situation. That is when we remember that nothing is impossible with God. A widow woman faced this same situation, having used everything she had and prepared herself to die. She learned that though it did not sound practical at the time, obeying God made the impossible possible.

Troubling Interpersonal Relationships create impossible situations. Many have reached crucial points in their marriages and relationships. Some marriages seem beyond repair. Understanding, love, peace, and every other ingredient necessary for a happy marital experience seem to have disappeared. Even some who are simply dating are experiencing hardships. Many have argued and wounded each other so often that the success of the relationship appears to be an "impossible situation." Divorce in America is escalating at an alarming rate. Modern children are learning the art of being juggled from house to house and seeing their parents on schedules decided by a court and observed to the letter of law. Divorces result when one or both of the partners decide that they are faced with an impossible situation.

Relationship Trouble is a verse 37 situation. Even in marriage and relationships, there is nothing too hard for God to do, if we want him to handle the situation. Mary and Joseph were in the most embarrassing and potentially explosive situations imaginable. There have been divorces in modern times for even the suspicion of infidelity, not to mention a wife coming home one day pregnant and blaming it on the Holy Ghost. Both Mary and Joseph heard the voice of God and learned that nothing is impossible for God. Those with relationship trouble should attempt to hear the voice of God before they see their lawyer, the advice is better and it's free.

Moral Imperfections Often Create Impossible Situations. Many are unhappy with themselves morally. Some are involved in illegal activities. Someone is embezzling from their employer. Someone is selling or using illegal drugs. Some have had abortions. Some had committed adultery. The list of moral imperfections is long and detailed.

There are many who consider their moral predicament an impossible situation. They feel they have made such a shambles out of their lives that they are beyond salvation. These feel like they are beyond repair.

Dealing with moral imperfections is another verse 37 situation. The truth of the matter is that there is no sin or immoral act that God does not have the capacity and willingness to forgive commensurate our ability to repent. If we can repent for a sin, God can forgive. That's it plain and simple.

Jesus met a woman at the well who at the very time she talked with him was shacking with a man and had called five men her husband. Even her situation was not repairable. She ran everywhere telling everyone to "come see a man."

The message the angel gave Mary as she pondered the birth of Christ is the same message that God gives today "With God nothing shall be impossible."

God Specializes in Impossibilities

As believers around the world celebrate the joy of Christmas, there should be an atmosphere of renewed hope among us. When we consider the extent to which God went to bring the Christ Child into existence and accomplish his will, it should say to us that as long as we do what is in the will of God, nothing shall be impossible for us!

When we consider the details of the birth of the Christ child, it should remind us that we serve a God that specializes in doing things which are impossible.

If we are plagued by empty pocketbooks and billfolds, we should remember that God specializes in filling empty pocketbooks and stuffing billfolds. My father is rich in houses and land! He holds the wealth of the world in his hand!

If we are plagued by interpersonal relationships and feel that nothing can be done, we should remember that God specializes in solving problems of the heart. I heard a song writer declare "I cannot take the lightning and flash it across the land. I cannot take a piece of clay and mold it into a man, but I have a father who can!" When things seem impossible I may not be able to handle it, but I have a father who can!

If you believe that your life is beyond repair you should remember that God specializes in restoring lost souls. The spiritual anthem of millions is epitomized by the words "I was sinking deep in sing, far from the peaceful. Very deeply stained within, seeking to rise no more. But the master of the sea, heard my despairing cry and from the waters lifted me now safe am I!"

Love lifted me! When my head was bowed down low, love lifted me!
When my eyes were stained in tears, love lifted me!
When my heart was heavy with guilt, love lifted me, now safe am I!

Have you any rivers that seem incrossable? Have you any mountains that you cannot climb? God specializes in doing things impossible and he can do what no other power can do!
Go tell it on the mountain that an impossible thing happened in Bethlehem!
Go tell it on the mountain that an impossible thing came out of Nazareth!
Go tell it on the mountain that impossible things happened among men for 33 long years!
Go tell it on the mountain that an impossible thing happened out on Calvary!
Go tell it on the mountain that early Sunday morning that an impossible thing happened in the garden!
Jesus rose from the grave and is alive today!
God did an impossible thing on Christmas morning and I'm so glad that he's still doing them today!

No. 539-New Year

It Depends

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 1, 1994

SCRIPTURE: "We depend upon the Lord alone to save us. Only he can help us; he protects us like a shield. No wonder we are happy in the Lord! For we are trusting him. We trust his holy name!" Psalm 33:20-21 (TLB)

Introduction

Have you made plans for the New Year? Have you decided to have a more fruitful experience. Have you made personal commitments to improve yourself or your relationship with others? Sometimes we make plans but often find that we are unable to carry them out. Usually our best plans depend upon circumstances that we do not control. Our plans to have increased financial security this year may depend upon getting an increase in pay. Our personal happiness may depend upon whether a person we love is happy. Sometimes even our simplest dreams depend on things that are far beyond our control. Health and wealth are over riding factors in personal achievement, just as faith and hope are the foundation for spiritual growth. Everything we plan to do depends on something.

Consider the city boy who finally gave in to the pleas of his country relatives to spend a summer with them. The city boy had become accustomed to the order of things in his city environment. In his home the beds were neatly made, the floors were mopped and everything was always cleaned. The servants in his home wore plastic caps when they cooked, the silverware was polished and the table was always neatly set. He was not sure that he would enjoy an entire summer in the country, with his distant and unrefined relatives.

Once in the country he was greeted by his uncles and aunts who made him feel warm and comfortable. So far so good. It appeared he could make it through the summer. Inside the home he found the hardwood floors whitewashed, the beds neatly made and the table setting was neat. All silverware was polished and in order. This second test met his approval.

As he moved to his room he passed the kitchen door and saw Aunt Mabel mixing ingredients for a large pan of dressing. She stopped, pulled out a small tin can, pulled out her bottom lip and loaded it with Bitter Garrett snuff. As she hummed and prepared the dressing, the snuff juice started running down the side of her mouth. He watched with amazement as the juice began for form a large juicy ball at the tip of her chin. Just below the snuff ball was the pan of dressing. A movement of her head to the left or to the right could be fatal.

As he watched one of his uncles approached him with a question: "Well my boy, have you decided to spend the whole summer with us, or will you high tail it back to the city." The city boy took a long look at the snuff juice on the tip of Mabel's chin and said "That depends." The uncle asked "Depends on what son?" He looked at the dressing bowl and answered "On where the drop falls!"

There are many factors that control the future that are beyond us. Whether this year is a good one or a bad one depends..on where the drop falls!

As Christians, we should remember that it is best to depend upon God for he is a reliable source of help in times of trouble and uncertainty. Men may prove undependable, but even in the face of the unknown, God will not let you down.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he concludes that is better to trust in the Lord than the implements of men.

The 33rd Psalm is a tribute to the wonderful works of God, which should give reason for continuous trust and praise by those who believe in him. Each new and successive year causes new challenges and new opportunities for believers to demonstrate their faith and for God to show his power. Each new victory should be complemented with a new song, sung loudly, proudly and victoriously because it marks the victory God has given his people. In verse three David notes that we should sing a "new song" for every new chapter of our existence.

God is worthy of this new round of praise because he made the heavens and the earth by simply uttering the words (v6). His majesty is displayed in the universe in ways that constantly display his greatness. He has proven himself both dependable and consistent even when the devices, philosophies and counsels of men have proven themselves insufficient (v10-11).

The people who depend upon God and not their own resources are blessed. They are blessed because their trust has been placed in a dependable source that will not forsake them. Even the most dependable devices of men have proven unreliable. In verse 16 he notes that mighty kings, though surrounded by multitudes of people and soldiers are not invulnerable to attack or assassination. A king that depends on these devices for his security alone will find them useless without God.

In verse 17 he notes that though a warrior may go into battle riding a great war horse, it cannot protect him in battle, either by shielding him with his great size or by carrying him to safety by its great strength. The protection comes from the Lord, not from the horse itself.

God keeps a close watch on all those who believe in him and trust in him. Those who look to God for deliverance and mercy; those who depend upon him, have the assurance of knowing he can protect them from life threatening situations and bring them through any hard times that might come (v19).

Therefore David said he would continue to "wait" or "depend" on God in the present as he has in the past for he has proven himself to be a shield and a very present help in a time of trouble.

We will rejoice in his great works again because we depended upon him. He will not let us down, because he is a God that is dependable!

Don't Depend On People

As we make plans for the future we should consider the futility of basing our plans on anything other than our faith that God will bring them to reality, according to his purpose.

Last year, many felt secure with jobs at Boeing Aircraft and other major military related companies, only to discover that without the threat of war that companies started cutting back and laying off workers. Thousands watched jobs in what was considered "secure" sectors eliminated as whole agencies and giant companies collapsed.

There are millions who are breezing through life without a care in the world depending on the various forms of welfare that range from AFDC to a plethora of social programs for their security. The poor are looking for their monthly welfare check and the rich are looking for their welfare grants, empowerment zone designations, subsidies and set asides, that supply them with jobs and profits. Many are unaware that the forces of change are already threatening that "security" net as the government prepares to pull the rug from under millions. Whether it is right or wrong is debatable, but the mere prospect of such an occurrence should make those who are depending upon it become concerned.

We should not base our futures on our relationship with any person. There are many who are secure in their positions because they "know" somebody. While it is true that "who you know" often gets doors open, you should not count on "who you know" to maintain your position. The "who you knows" of life change so frequently that they cannot be depended upon. A strong man is here today, but he may be gone tomorrow.

It is not even wise to depend upon your husband or wife. Many wives are beginning this new year without the husband they had at the beginning of last year. Many husbands, who counted heavily upon their wives, are finding out what life is like without them. Relationships are generally "flesh" by nature and therefore not dependable.

It is even unwise to base your future upon yourself. Many have concluded that they will not trust others because others will let them down, or betray them. They have decided to trust in themselves alone. Since we cannot control our health or the circumstances that affect it or impact our lives, it is dangerous for us to even consider depending on ourselves. Some of us have found ourselves to be highly undependable. We couldn't keep our word to stay on our diet, stick to our schedule, be more attentive to the needs of others, and groom ourselves spiritually. Certainly its unwise to depend upon such a frail creature for our future.

Depending on the devices of men to make it through the next year is not a reliable prospect. It is a formula for defeat.

Depend on God.

If depending on the devices of men is the formula for defeat, then depending on the devices of God is the formula for success!

This was David's position in the text, the devices of men are undependable, but God never fails.

Pharaoh depended upon his 600 chariots and the watery wall of the Red Sea to contain the departing Israelites, but Moses declared in faith "stand still and see the salvation of the Lord" who breaks chariots and makes dry paths through watery seas.

The inhabitants of Jericho depended upon their high walls for security, but Israel depended upon God to make the walls come tumbling down.

The three Hebrew boys entered the fiery furnace depending upon the power of God. As they felt the heat of the flames their words ring out across the centuries: "Our God is able!"

Alarm clocks are generally dependable, but every now and then, they fail to sound the alarm!

Trains and buses usually follow a rigid schedule, but occasionally, they are late!

Federal Express, UPS and the Postal Service are fairly dependable, but every now and then, a package is lost in the mail.

The best devices of men are sometimes late, but God is "always on time!"

When David considered the devices of man he concluded in Psalm 31:1 "In thee O Lord, do I put my trust"

I will trust him because I've found out that there has never been a:

—Mountain he could not move; Door he could not open!

—Battle that he could not win; Burden he could not lift!

—Loneliness he could not comfort; heartache he could not heal!

—Promise that he could not keep; a soul that he could not save!

I don't know about you, but I've decided to keep my hands wrapped in the winding chain and walk into the new year depending on Jesus.

No wonder the song writer wrote: "I learned how to lean, and depend on Jesus. He's my friend and he's my guide. I found out that if I trust him, he will provide"

As you walk through the meandering byways and unseen paths of the year to come, let Jesus walk with you.

He's a doctor in your sickroom, a lawyer in your courtroom, a bridge over troubling waters..let Jesus walk with you!

You can depend upon him for I heard him declare "Lo I'll be with you alway, even until the end of the earth!"

Depend on Jesus..and everything will be all right!

Holes in Your Pockets

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 8, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "Ye have sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and he that earneth wages earneth wages to put it into a bag with holes. Thus saith the Lord of hosts; Consider your ways. Haggai 1:6-7

Introduction

Have you ever wished you could have all the money you earned in a single year in your hand at once? As many receive their tax statements and see the amount of money they earned in the previous year they can't help but muse, "it didn't seem like that much?" Where did the money go? What did you earn last year? Was it $5,000, $10,000, $20,000, $40,000? What about $75,000 or more? Where did it all go? What did we do with what we had? Some was spent on food clothing and shelter. Some was spent on our leisurely passions. Some was lost on our vices: drinking, smoking, gambling, drugs, sideline women and sideline men. Despite our best efforts, sometimes it appears that there has been a funnel attached to our checking account draining away our resources with a huge Peroian "sucking sound." It's almost like having a giant hole in our pocket. Everything we put in seems to drop right onto the ground.

Many approach matters in a miserly way. They believe they can hold on to it even after they are gone. However, even then it gets away from you because you can't take it with you. Consider the man who had saved $30,000 and decided to disprove the idea that "You can't take it with you." He called in three friends and asked them to make him a solemn promise that $30,000 would be buried with him. The first was a preacher, the second was a doctor and the third was a close friend. When the man eventually died years later, the three friends met outside the funeral home to discuss the envelopes they had been given. The preacher said, well I have to confess that our church needed a new roof and I used $8,000 of my envelope." The doctor said he also had a confession to make. Since there was so much poverty in the area of his clinic he used $5,000 of the money to help poor people buy medicine. The third man said he had a problem going into the envelope. He kept it unopened for 10 years. Since the other two had broken their promise he came up with a brilliant idea to make their words good. He said "I'll keep my envelope, pick up what's left of your envelopes and write him a check for $30,000. He can cash it when he gets where he's going." It gets away from you even when you die!

As Christians, we know that everything we have comes from God. We show him our love and respect through our stewardship of the resources he has given us. We empty our hearts, souls and pockets to further his kingdom, because everything belongs to him!

Exposition

This text focuses on five messages given to the prophet Haggai as Israel enjoyed life after exile.

The Jews had been in captivity for many years in Babylon. During that time that had wept, mourned and prayed that God would deliver them from their exile. Daily they watched and prayed for Jerusalem and yearned to see its walls. Daniel opened his windows facing Jerusalem and prayed. The Three Hebrew Boys refused to abandon their culture and identities and were thrown unsuccessfully into the fiery furnace. In all of their troubles the Jews never stopped hoping and praying that they would one day return from their exile.

While they managed to maintain their faith in God and some semblance of their culture while they were in Babylon, their formal worship life disappeared. Their weekly routines of attending the Saturday meetings at the synagogue and studying the Torah, paying their tithe and making their sacrifices was abandoned.

This text, penned about 16 years after Cyrus decreed that Jews could return to Jerusalem from the Exile and take, money, and materials to rebuild their temple (Ezra 1:1-5). The returning exiles made it to Jerusalem, but once there spent their time building a life for themselves. Even though God had blessed them for a purpose, they ignored the purpose of their return and paid attention to their own growth and prosperity and ignored their original purpose.

They built themselves fine homes with ceiled roofs. They planted themselves fine crops and prospered. They made and bought for themselves fine clothing. Those who labored made an enviable wage. In retrospect, the Jews were living better than they had ever lived before. They had more, ate more, drank more, looked better and were generally in better shape than they had ever been.

In the midst of their of their prosperity God raised up the prophet Haggai, who must have come as an unpopular presence. Haggai was given five messages to give the Jews from God. They were short and to the point, but all said basically the same thing "Consider your ways." The five messages were:

1)Haggai 1:1-11: The people are living good but they have forgotten their commitment to the House of God. Their charge was to renovate the temple, then to maintain it with tithes and offerings as they worshipped sang and gave sacrifices. Instead the people indulged themselves. Therefore, God said as long as his temple stood in need, they would begin to have holes in their pockets or "bags." (v6). They were sternly warned to give their decision not to obey God serious consideration.

2)Haggai 1:12-15: About 24 days after Haggai's first message the leaders of the kingdom responded by deciding to obey God (v12). In response the Lord sent them word that I am with you (v13). When the leaders decided to obey God, then he stirred up the spirit of all of the remnant of the people and they all decided to work, restore and maintain the House of the Lord. (v14).

3)Haggai 2:1-9: About four years later as the work progressed, God sent the people a word of hope. To the leaders he said "Be strong." To the high priests he said, "Be strong." To the people he said "I am with you." (2:4). He reminded them not to be intimidated by the apparent lack of resources because "The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of hosts." He promised that the work they undertook would excel any work done in the past.

4-5)Haggai 2:10-23: The people were reminded that when they cheating God, refusing to support the temple building and carry out their purpose, every work of their hands was unclean in his sight (2:14). He responded by sending each person various signs, mildew, hail, and other hard times, yet the people did not respond. However, Haggai said if they would make a committment to God to respond beginning that very day "from this day, I will bless you." (v18) Even Zerubbabel himself was promised that he would be an example of what God can do because God would make him a "signet" for all the world to see (v23)

The essence of the entire book of Haggai is that those who lead the people were commanded to lead the masses away from selfish motives toward the renovation and maintenance of the temple, otherwise their prosperity would be cursed with "holes in their pockets."

Holes in your pockets

Today there is an increasing number of people who are living in prosperity. We are driving finer cars, living in better houses and making more money than we have ever made in our lives. Yet in all of this prosperity, churches around the nation are going in need, scraping, begging, selling chicken dinners, washing cars, playing bingo and plethora of other gimmicks, just to make ends meet. The people of God have been blessed, but in their prosperity have decided to indulge themselves with that portion of their resources that should be dedicated to the restoration and maintenance of the temple.

Just as in Haggai's day, the word of God is just as meaningful today: "Consider your ways." If God has blessed you with 24 hours of health every day, but you have increasing less time for his service, Consider your ways! If God has given you a special talent that can be used in building of the kingdom but you find yourself using it less, consider your ways. If God has blessed you with an income and you are giving less than 10 percent to the support of the church: consider your ways.
If we ever begin to indulge our own agendas and motives and neglect the things of God, the warning we have received is clear, God will cut holes in our pockets and we'll hear a huge sucking sound. Let us consider our ways.

I am With You

While God had a word for those who were neglecting their responsibility, there was also a word for those who heard the word of the Lord.

While there is a word for those who have neglected their purpose, there is also a word for those who have faithfully answered the call!

While there is a word for those who have meandered along the path of spiritual mediocrity, there is a word for those whose obedience has never wavered!

That word is the same word of Haggai 1:13 "I am with you saith the Lord!"

It's the same word repeated again in 2:4 "I am with you saith the Lord of Hosts!"

Powerful things start to happen when God is with you. Romans 8:31 sums it up this way " What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us?"

When God is with you:

—The impossible becomes possible!; the improbable becomes probable

—The inbearable becomes bearable; the incomplete becomes complete —stumbling blocks become stepping stones!; high mountains are reduced to molehills

—Weak spirits become courageous souls; apparent defeat is turned into unexplainable victory!

Don't let anything separate you from the Lord!

Don't let your personal possessions separate you from God!

Don't let your dislike for a particular preacher or deacon, separate you from God.

Don't let your frustration with the way the choir sings, the deacons deac or the way the ushers usher, separate you from Christ!

I hear Paul ask in Romans 8:35:" Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us.

"For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

I will trust in the Lord and I will serve him until I die!

I don't care what other people do or say "A charge to keep I have a God to glorify. An ever dying soul to save and fit it for the sky!

Iwill!

Iwill!

Trust in the Lord until I die!

No. 540-Martin Luther King

Behold Thy King

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 15, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass. Zechariah 9:9

Introduction

When you think of the dream of Martin Luther King, what comes to your mind? Dr. King was a complicated, charismatic and influential personality who inspired millions to demand justice without stooping to hatred. His insistence upon nonviolence and love was a cornerstone of his movement. While he urged millions to love their enemies he also urged them to passively resist unjust laws, demonstrate, march and even go to jail to call attention to evils inflicted upon the masses.

While Dr. King is heralded today for his faithfulness to nonviolence, he was the center of controversy during his time. Malcolm X ridiculed Dr. King for insisting that we love our enemies. However, he moderated his position to include nonviolence as one means of achieving freedom. He believed we should get freedom by any means necessary. Stokely Carmicheal, H. "Rap" Brown and other young militants of the day insisted that America would only respond to power and they promoted "Black Power," ridiculed nonviolence and stirred crowds to burn entire neighborhoods in protest. Bobby Seale, Eldridge Cleaver and Huey Newton promoted self defense as they carried rifles and guns to defend themselves in the Black Panther Party. While thousands followed Dr. King, there were countless others who perceived nonviolence as a cowardly slave approach to freedom conditioned on Dr. King's belief in the "white man's" religion, Christianity.

While there were some who thought Dr. King was too passive, there were others who thought he was too militant. The National Baptist Convention split, in part, over whether to join King in civil rights movement. It's president, Dr. J.H. Jackson, warned that freedom must come gradually. He feared King was taking our people too fast. In communities across the South many people secretly hoped that Dr. King would succeed but were afraid to be associated with his movement publicly. Many communities closed their doors to his visits as they put chains on meeting halls and distanced themselves from the movement. Without a doubt, during his lifetime his message was not universally accepted.

When we reflect on King the man, we must also see the similarities in his role as prophet, preacher, and biblical parallels. Like Amos, he came promoting justice and righteousness. Like John, he challenged the status quo. Like Jesus he was slain for his ideas.

As Christians, we do not idolize Martin Luther King, Jr. He was a man like all other men, with frailties and weaknesses. We do pay homage to the ideals for which he lived and gave his life. That ideal promotes the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Dr. King is a king by virtue of his family name. Our allegiance goes deeper. It is to one who is King by virtue of his deity as the son of God. For real freedom we must respect the legacy of the dream, but look to Jesus as our ultimate deliverer. We hear the word of God declare "Behold thy King!"

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophecy of Zechariah concerning the coming kingdom of the Messiah, the eventual triumph of justice and righteousness.

Zechariah was a contemporary of the Prophet Haggai. Both prophesied during the restoration after the return of Israel from captivity. Perhaps more than any other prophet, in so short a space, Zechariah made constant projections about the coming of Christ, the king of Glory.

The coming of the king is the recurring theme of this prophet, distinguishing him from other prophets. Moses helped Israel see God's vision for their liberation from Egypt, but none of Moses' projections went further than the Canaan land. Samuel was one of the greatest prophets, but even his visions were limited to Israel immediate circumstances. Elijah and Elisha spoke of things that would affect the nation as it stood.

Only a handful of prophets were given many visions about the coming of the Messiah in any depth of detail. Daniel, telling of stone carved from a mountain that would destroy evil nations, began to project the coming of the kingdom of God in seventy weeks of seven years. Isaiah made vivid descriptions of the Messiah, especially as he asserted that he was "wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquity." Isaiah made prophecies about the birth of the Messiah. He predicted that He would be called wonderful, counselor and Prince of Peace.

In a very short space, Zechariah predicts the second coming of Christ, His reign, His priesthood, His kingship, His humanity, His Deity, His building of the Temple of the Lord, His coming in lowliness, His bringing of permanent peace, His rejection and betrayal for thirty pieces of silver, His return to Israel as the crucified One, and His being smitten by the sword of the LORD.

Not only does Zechariah predict the second coming of Christ but he even predicts events that will occur in the end-time. In the last chapter alone the prophet tells of the last siege of Jerusalem and the ultimate holiness of Jerusalem and her people.

In short, Zechariah saw a day when a king would come that would usher in a time and era of eternal peace and joy. Many kings came and made great progress toward moving the people toward improved condition's. However, Zechariah's message was still "thy king cometh."

Many Great Leaders

In our quest for freedom there have been many eloquent and influential personalities that, like the great prophets of biblical times, have championed our cause. The names of the great ones flicker through our minds: Frederick Douglass, SoJourner Truth, Booker Washington, W.E.B. Dubois, Marcus Garvey, Mary McCleod Bethume, A. Phillip Randolph, Roy Wilkins, and Malcom X. These personalities have had a tremendous impact on our direction as a people.

In their time they rose high as Davids fighting the Goliath of slavery or institutionalized racism. During their time, each of them was raised to a level of respect that bordered on prophetic reverence. Frederick Douglass was respected by presidents and diplomats and revered by the common man for rising above his slave status. Booker Washington became so influential that very little was considered for the Negro in America unless it met his approval. Millions of Blacks pooled their money to join Marcus Garvey's Back to Africa Movement. The love and respect that the masses of our people had for him frightened the establishment so much that it sought to destroy him.

The most revered and respected of all African-American Civil Rights leaders however, is without a doubt Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Because of his eloquence as a Baptist preacher, courage as a front line activist, and commitment to nonviolence, he stands high in the memory of the world.

Dr. King's prophetic ministry was uniquely similar to that of Moses. While other prophets had the liberty to declare the word of God and leave the job of implementing it to others, Moses had to both declare it and then stand in the front to facilitate the process. In a similar sense, Dr. King was thrust into the forefront of the struggle as both prophet and leader. Like Amos, he preached about the day when Justice would run down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream, but then he had to put on his marching clothes and jail clothes and lead the masses in directions that would make the dream happen. Like Moses, he climbed to the mountain top and saw the vision of the promised land. For Moses it was Canaan. For Dr. King, it was a day when America would be a great salad bowl of cultures, thoroughly mixed, without regard of race or creed, or loss of individual identity. Both having completed their missions, did not make it to the respective promised lands they saw, but were sure that the people would ultimately get there. In his last message, the night before he died, Dr. King said "I may not get there with you, but I have been to the mountain top, I have seen the promised land!"

While some hailed Dr. King as the savior of the Negro people, he himself shunned those adulations. He asked that he be remembered not for his Nobel Peace Prize, college degrees or other accomplishments, but only that he be remembered as a drum major for truth. Even as he looked forward to his death, Dr. King recognized that some would attempt to raise him to a status higher than that of simply being a modern day prophet of God, carrying out his mission.

Thy King cometh

When the crowds saw John the Baptist preaching against injustice, baptizing and standing boldly for righteousness they came to him and asked whether he was the one. John rebuked them and said that another was coming that was greater than he.

Today, as we salute Dr. Martin Luther King for his life and his contribution, we must remember that while his was a great life and his name was king he is not THE king. Zechariah reminded us "thy king cometh!"

While Dr. King shook the walls of injustice he brought down a few stones, but when THE king comes, every mountain shall be made low and every valley shall be exalted!

When thy king comes, it will truly be a day when justice will run down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream!

When thy king comes, rough places shall be plain and the crooked places shall be made straight!

Who is this king? Not Saul, though he stood head and shoulders above the rest! Not David, even though he was a man after God's own heart! Not Solomon though he was the wisest of them all!

I hear David ask in Psalm 24: "Who is this King of glory? The LORD strong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battle. Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in."

When thy king cometh, the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest!

When thy king cometh, it will certainly quicken the day when all mankind will recognize the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man!

When thy king cometh, we will sing and shout with renewed fervor Free At Last, Free At Last, Thank God almighty, I'm Free at Last!

SCRIPTURE:"And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable and perfect will of God." Romans 12:2

Introduction

Have you ever known people who were influenced by the thinking of others? There are many who have few opinions of their own. They wait to echo the thoughts, opinions and actions of others. Such individuals lack the ability to think or reason for themselves and depend wholly on the actions others to decide their own direction. Those most vulnerable to the opinions of others are young people. In the fragile years of their social development, many find it difficult to speak or act independently from the crowd. Some find it an absolute "must" to be "in" or socially accepted, no matter what actions are necessary to make happen.

The person who is unable or unwilling to think for himself is easily influenced. Sometimes they are influenced by life's positives.. These are the people, places and things that help us to grow and feel good about ourselves. Some are influenced by life's negatives and they develop negative attitudes as a result. Consider three men who often shared views about life. One was very positive. He saw the beauty of all of God's creation. It moved him. The second saw only the ugliest aspects of everything. If there was a flaw he spotted it and brought it to light. The third rarely thought for himself but always echoed the opinions of whomever he was accompanying for the day.

The first man saw the rain falling and said "Isn't it wonderful how God is cleansing the air and earth with the rain." The second man answered "Yeah, but if it keeps raining its going to start a flood." The third man answered, "that's right its going to start a flood." When the sun came out the first responded: "Isn't it great that the sun has come out nice and hot?" The second man answered "Yeah but if it stays like this it will scorch all the crops." The third man answered "That's right, it will scorch the crops."
