Finally, the first man decided to give the two of them something that they had to accept as something good. He decided to teach his hunting dog how to walk on water. As the two friends joined him they shot a duck that fell in the water. "Go get em!" Said the first man. The dog tip toed across the water, retrieved the duck and returned with only his paws wet. The first man said "What do you think of that?" The third man had been around the second man so long that he instantly answered just as he would have answered "It's too bad. Poor dog didn't learn how to swim did he?"

Today there many who have stopped thinking for themselves are being negatively influenced by the opinions of others. Some commit crimes, develop attitudes and lose great opportunities in life because they fail to think of themselves.

As Christians, we are encouraged not to conform to the world or be changed by its negative influences. We are called to a higher learning that challenges us to renew our collective mind with the transforming spirit of God. When we do this we will do the good, acceptable and perfect will of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes to the Christians in Rome about several practical doctrines for Christian living.

In this short, two verse passage, Paul notes that Christians offer God a new sacrifice, as compared to the former practice of offering animals, which is themselves. In the past Jewish believers spent great time finding animals that could be sacrificed for a variety of sins. Bullocks, lambs, doves, all were among the various animals sacrificed to atone for sin. Much attention was paid to the cleanliness and holiness of the sacrifice that was to be brought before God. The person bringing the sacrifice did not necessarily make changes in his mind or heart. The emphasis was on the sacrifice itself.

However, Paul reminded Christians that we present ourselves as living sacrifices to God daily. Instead of coming to worship with doves, and oxen and bullocks and inspecting them for perfection, we present ourselves holy and accpetable to God.

To accomplish this "acceptable" state, Paul said we must not be "conformed" to this word. The word "conformed" here is from the Greek "suschematizo" (Soos-kay-mat-id-zo) which means, in this context, to fashion one's self like another. We are encouraged not to fashion our lives in any manner like those of unbelievers or the world. This includes our sympathies, inclinations, dress, speech, actions and manner of thinking. The command is simple and straight forward, "be not conformed to this world", its perception of life and its adverse action. We are in this world but not of it.

Paul challenges every Christian to step up to a higher learning or a higher calling that is in response to the renewing of the mind. The higher learning opens new channels of thought and actions that are not dictated by the routine, mundane and the traditional, but by the word of God. In essence, Paul challenged the Romans to dare to be different, if being different meant freeing themselves to fully prove what is good and acceptable to God. He challenged them to get off the beaten path of and do that which is acceptable to God, regardless to whether it is acceptable to the social order.

The transformation that is mentioned refers to the complete metamorphosis of words and actions that spell a new person for Christ, clearly different from he that is in the world. This transformation however, does not come from simply following the crowd and doing what others do, but it comes from seeking a higher level of expression, living and feeling that allows us think and live independent of the negative influences of others.

Thinking for Yourself

The movie "Higher Learning" shows several young people who went to college supposedly to get a higher learning. Most of them had no opinions of their own but were influenced by groups that told them what to think. The Nazis, Black separatists and even feminist groups were all attempting to tell them what to think, while a single professor challenged them to learn to think for themselves, which is what a higher learning or higher education is about, critical thinking.

Teaching youth to think critically is extremely important. Unfortunately our educational system does not focus on critical thinking skills as much as it should. School home work is filled with fill in the blanks and matching. Neither requires much critical thought, simply rote memory. Instructors who provide students with lists to memorize and simply want students to retain it long enough to put it on a test paper do very little to stimulate critical thinking. Such a process simply requires students to give back the same information that was given to them. As a result, thousands of students are doing well in school, making A's and B's but are scoring less than 20 on ACT examinations which test competence in critical thinking and reasoning skills. Independent thinking is what we need more of, not simply repetition of the meaningless and mundane.

Youth who are unskilled at critical thinking run the risk of being "conformed" to the world. As a rule they are unable to reason and exhibit creative patterns themselves. They generally follow the crowd. They dress like the crowd. Talk like the crowd. Originality is difficult for them. Even in their personal love conversations, many have difficulty being original. They generally recite words from records to get their points across.

Youth who lack critical thinking ability usually underestimate their own worth and potential. Some never achieve their potential because they simply follow the crowd. You've heard the story of the eaglet that grew up in the chicken yard. The chickens saw the ugly looking eaglet and told him that he was a chicken and therefore he must act as a chicken acts. The eaglet followed suit, scratching, clucking and eating bugs and worms. As he grew increasingly larger he still did the same because he was told that he was a chicken. One day he saw some eagles flying overhead and he said to himself "I can do that" but was instantly told that "chickens don't fly." A while later he was positioned high upon the chicken coop but lost his balance, as he was falling he instinctively stretched his wings and soared in the air." It was then that he realized that he must be an eagle, because chickens don't fly. In the same sense many youth don't achieve their potential because they are eagles running with chickens.

If the truth of that parable is applied to this scripture then what we have is a message to our young people that says you are an eaglet in a world of chickens who are spiritually scratching to get by. Learn who you are! Stretch your wings on God's word and soar!

Youth should strive for a spiritual higher learning. Sunday School teachers usually focus on the Who, What, When and Where of biblical study. Those who are growing spiritually however require two more essentials: How and Why. Good teachers inspire critical thinking and are not afraid of that question that youth always ask "why?" Good teachers who inspire critical thinking read a scripture that says "Go ye therefore" and inspire their students to think critically and come to class with "how" to "go ye therefore." When students sense that their teachers are not prepared to deal with the why and the how they become uninterested and e m p t y classes are a result. Beyond that, youth themselves must develop a thirst for a higher learning regarding spiritual matters. Youth must study the word of God. Ask questions. Request scriptural evidence. Youth must build their lives with renewed minds that rooted in the word of God. Otherwise they will be doomed to follow the crowd, walking the traditional path as mindless clones of the traditions and methods of previous generations.

A Higher Learning

There is a higher learning than that which comes from man. This learning comes when all of us, both youth and adult, recognize that God is supreme and his will is the controlling factor in life. The higher learning to which we aspire comes from God.

There is a higher learning!

You might know mathematics, English and Science, but there is a higher learning!

You might be know literature, history and political science, but there is a higher learning!

You might be able to calculate the hypotenuse of a triangle or interpret the geometric theories of angle side angle and side angle side, but there is a higher learning!

You might be able to discuss the the political theories of Thomas Paine, the scientific significance of Pavlov's dog, or the psychological theories of Sigmund Freud, but there is a higher learning!

You might be able to quote the Gettysburg Address, recite Shakespearean sonnets and Martin Luther King's I have A dream speech, but there is a higher learning!

You might be able to prominently display your high school diploma, college degree, Master's plus 30 and your PhD, but there is a higher learning!

The Word of God is the textbook, the Holy Spirit is the teacher and Jesus is the subject.

Those with a higher learning know answers to all the right questions!

Who is he? He is the son of God.

What did he come to do? He came that we might have life and have it more abundantly.

Where did he come? He came among his own and his own received him his not!

When did he come? He came nearly 2000 years ago in town called Bethlehem!

Why did he come? For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life!

How can I become one of his?If thou shalt confess with thou mouth the Lord Jesus and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved!

The Holy Spirit is the teacher of those who have a higher learning!

When the holy spirit teaches, things begin to change! Lives are transformed by with renewed minds!

That's when saints declare "I have decided to follow Jesus, no turning Back!

No turning Back!

How Far Is The Promised Land?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 5, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, Lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they return to Egypt: But God led the people about, through the way of the wilderness of the Red sea: and the children of Israel went up harnessed out of the land of Egypt. Exodus 13:17-18; "And they spake unto all the company of the children of Israel, saying, The land, which we passed through to search it, is an exceeding good land. If the LORD delight in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it us; a land which floweth with milk and honey. Numbers 14:7-8

Introduction

Have you ever taken a trip but it seemed like it would take forever to get there? Perhaps it was just a few hours journey, or maybe even a day's ride. There are times when even short trips seem to take too long. It appears that the more we want to get to our destination the longer it takes. Conversely, when we are reluctant about the journey, it seems we get there too fast! When we really want to get there badly....it takes forever!

Consider the runaway slave who was making his escape from a Louisiana plantation to the North via the underground railroad. A woman was leading the escape. She had come down from the North often and had a reputation for never losing a passenger or letting them return to slavery. The young slave was quite scary and changed his mind several times, but he took the journey anyway. After they traveled a day or so he heard the sound of dogs. Frightened, he turned to the woman asked: "Are we there yet?" All she said "Hold on, just a little while longer!" Several days passed. They crossed streams, rivers, and swamps. They moved through rocky mountains and hid in caves. Each time the young man tried to go back, the shotgun was pointing in his face saying "Hold on, just little while longer!" No matter how often the young man looked back, the shotgun was forever in his face!

After a month of traveling the slave was tired, he looked back one final time and asked: "Are we there yet?" This time there was no shotgun in his face. The woman put her hand around his shoulder, pointed to a safe house up the road and she walked away. He cried out "Are we there yet?" The woman answered: "You will know you are there when there is a hand of friendship around your shoulder and no shotgun in your face!"

African-Americans have been journeying toward the promised land for 132 years. The promised land is an elusive state in which we will be recognized as equals under the law and in the brotherhood of man, while being appreciated as culturally unique. Most of our journey thus far has been to acquire equality under the law. On a federal level much of that has been accomplished, but there is still work to do. Sometimes we get comfortable along the journey and think we have arrived, but sobering events occur that shock us into the reality that we still haven't arrived.

As Christians, our quest is to pursue complete freedom and equality for all people, without regard to race, creed or color. Reaching the promised land is a life long journey. We'll know when we have arrived when the hand of brotherhood is around our shoulders and there in no longer a shotgun in our face!

Exposition

This text considers Israel as it prepares to leave the Egypt and travel to the promised land.

Israel spent 400 years in bondage in Israel. During this time they prayed constantly that God would bring them out of the enslaved condition and deliver them to freedom. Their desire was to return to the land that God had promised Abraham, a land that was flowing with milk and honey. However, during their long enslavement the people had lost their sense of independence. Their food, clothing and shelter were provided by their masters. Every major decision of their lives was made by their masters. Their ability to govern, provide for and protect themselves had been completely lost.

When God decided to free them from slavery and bring them into the promised land their survival abilities had diminished to the point of nonexistence. They had become comfortable with their slave status to the point that the smallest obstacle they faced would defeat them. Since God knew their weaknesses more than they themselves, he lead them on a journey that was more difficult and would take them longer than usual. This longer route would provide a strengthening period for Israel. It would also insure that they understood clearly that their liberation was the result of the power of God.

The journey from Egypt to The land of Canaan should have taken about a month at the longest. Initially Israel would have marched out of Egypt into Canaan, engaged in battle with the Philistines and would have been in the promised land. However, God led them on a different route. It was a difficult route that challenged them both mentally and spiritually. It was a route that took them down in a valley, across the red sea, and through a wilderness. They would avoid war with the Philistines but would be snared by conditions that would make it obvious to them that their salvation came from the Lord.

The text in Numbers occurs after Israel came close enough to the promised land to send 12 spies to inspect its resources. This was just months after they left Egypt. Ten of the spies reported the difficulty of taking the new land. However, Joshua and Caleb gave a minority report. They said the land was fertile and could be taken because the power of God was moving in their favor. The people ignored the minority report. In fact they became so angry with Joshua and Caleb that they almost stoned them for suggesting that they could actually enter the promised land.

The journey from Egypt to the promised land took 40 years. Israel's lack of faith in God caused them to wander. While just a few days journey away from the promised land it took them 40 years to get there. The promised land wasn't far in actual miles, but in terms of Israel's determination to get there, it was at least 40 years away.

How Far Is Freedom

The African-American experience bears a unique resemblance to that of historic Israel. Its history of enslavement and persecution is familiar to our people. Just as Israel caused much of its own misery after its freedom from Israel, we too share that same experience. The promised land evaded Israel for 40 years and today we have been out of our Egypt experience for 132 years and still have not reached the promised land.

What is the promised land? On a broad scale it is a point of existence in which color differences exist but are not factors that matter. It is a point in which racial discrimination ceases to exist and race based mitigating factors do not prohibit the pursuit of happiness. It is a point where the neighborhood in which you live or school you attend, is not determined by the poverty of opportunity or means that is conditioned on skin color. The promised land represents equal opportunity for all, without regard to color or race.

How far is the promised land? Obviously we have not reached the promised land yet. The day will come when we will be granted housing loans to build a home in any neighborhood we want. Until that time comes we still need laws forcing lending institutions to be fair with us. The day will come when companies will hire the best workers without regard to race, but until that day comes we still need affirmative action laws that keep doors from shutting in our faces. The promised land is close enough to achieve instantly, but because of realities of our times, is years away. It is only a distant goal if we choose to believe that it cannot occur.

Some have been fooled into believing that we have reached the promised land. There are many, even in our community, who mistake our bare survival on the grace of God to being in the promised land. They see the water, quail and the bread from heaven that is flowing for the poor and hungry masses and echoing the sentiments of Justice Clarence Thomas say eliminate the supports, helps and laws that sustain the masses of the impoverished and historically deprived. Eating manna every day was a blessing, but it was not the ideal. Having food stamps is a blessing, but the masses would prefer to have money in their pockets to buy it for themselves. Welfare for the needy is a blessing, but impoverished families would prefer a job where they can pay their own way without baring their soul to a case worker. We are still in the wilderness experience. We have not made it to the promised land!

Israel became comfortable with the blessings from heaven and remained in the wilderness longer than necessary. We must not become comfortable in the wilderness. Let's not become comfortable with welfare, the longer we depend upon it, the further we get from the promised land. Don't become dependent on government set asides, the longer we count on minority set asides, the further away the promised land becomes.

How far is the promised land? It is as far away as our determination to achieve it? A college education, a successful career, a happy marriage..all are promised lands looming in the horizon! How long it takes us to get there depends on our willingness to get up and make it happen.

Can't Make It Without God!

The journey to the promised land for Israel began with prayers in their distress. They expressed hope and faith that God would free them. They were freed from slavery and literally sustained in the wilderness by outright acts of God, however, they only entered the promised land when they themselves acted on their faith. When Israel stepped out on faith in God, all of the supportive props they were given in the wilderness were unnecessary.

Our journey to the promised land must be rooted in our faith in God.

If we are to get there without wasting another generation in the American wilderness we must put our trust in God and tackle the future.

Are you pursing your own promised land? If you are, it is as far away as your faith that if you can believe God for it, you can achieve it!

The first step toward the promised land is to trust God! God toward Joshua, if you want to enter the promised land put one foot in the water and step out on faith.

Trusting in God, Israel crossed the river Jordan!

Trusting in God, they fought and won the battle of Jericho!

Trusting in God, they won scores of battles as God locked the sun in the sky!

As we travel toward the promised land we should tear a page from our history and keep trusting in God!

Despite the hardships of slavery and poverty the old slaves kept calling out to God "It's me, it's me, it's me oh Lord, standing in the need of prayer!"

We need prayer on the journey because prayer can:

—muzzle the mouths of lions!

—Quench the flames of our enemies

—Conquer the strongholds of devils

—Penetrate the walls of the deceitful

—Still the raging storms of the scornful

That's why the old warriors still sing "I know the Lord will answer prayer, I tried him for my self!"

Down here we are striving to reach the promised land of peace and happiness on this.

But brothers and sisters, I've heard of a land on a far away strand the beautiful home of the soul!

It's a land where the wicked will cease from troubling!

It's a land where the weary will be at rest!

It's a land where every day will be Sunday and it's always howdy and never goodbye!

It's a land where we'll never grow old!

I don't know about you...but I'm on my way to the Canaan land!

Hold on, just a little while longer! Everything will be all right!

Find Me A Man

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 12, 1995

SCRIPTURE: Run ye to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem, and see now, and know, and seek in the broad places thereof, if ye can find a man, if there be any that executeth judgment, that seeketh the truth; and I will pardon it. Jeremiah 5:1

Introduction

Have you ever felt like your life was one endless succession of mountains? If mountains represent obstacles, difficulties and challenges, sometimes it appears that the world's tallest mountains are in our back yard. As a people, we have faced many mountains, one rapidly following another: Slavery, reconstruction, lynching, segregation, integration, and internal disintegration. We have had our share of historic mountains. The path we have walked seems littered with them. In moments of weakness we pray that God would move the mountains. On our better days however, we ask God not to move them, but to give us strength to climb them or go around them.

Whether our mountains are personal, family related or community related it is good to remember that for every mountain God has a man and a plan!

As we study the history of our people, we see the mountains we have crossed. Associated with each mountain there was always a man and a plan. The man and the plan were fitted for the mountain. During slavery Frederick Douglass was the man, slavery was the mountain, abolition was his plan. Removing the shackles of slavery was his immediate focus. After slavery Booker T. Washington was the man, an untrained people was the mountain, and industrial education was his plan. He sought to earn the respect of our former slave masters through hard and skillful labor. At the turn of the century W.E.B. Dubois was the man, legal lynching was the mountain, the NAACP was his plan. During the depression, A. Phillip Randolph was the man, exploited laborers was the mountain, union organizing was his plan. In 50's Thurgood Marshall was the man, school segregation was the mountain, desegregation was the plan. In the 60's Martin Luther King was the man. Denied civil rights was the mountain, and nonviolent protest was his plan. For every mountain we have faced, God has had a man!

What if during these great periods of trial the man God had chosen would not come forth? Suppose, like Jonah they chose to run away from God's mission, throwing themselves at the mercy of fate. Suppose that when our next mountain of struggle or turmoil appears that God is unable to find a single man to whom he can give the plan! Suppose every ma, because of either indifference, fear, or otherwise refuses to come forth? What would be our outcome?

As Christians, we know that God has a plan for every troubling period of our personal and collective experience. We should strive to stay ready to respond to his call. While God can move mountains, in all likelyhood he has someone prepared to lead us around them or through them. Whatever the mountain, God has a man!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jeremiah as he delivers a message from God to Jerusalem to find a single man who would stand for what is right.

Jeremiah was one of the most controversial of the prophets. He was loved, yet respected. He was both feared and revered at the same time. He lived in constant friction with the authorities of his people. At one time or another he would challenge religious leaders, political leaders or both of them together.

Jeremiah prophesied to the Southern Kingdom and to Jerusalem in particular. He warned the people that they were abandoning the old way and were adulterating themselves so much that God was becoming angry and would use their enemies to humble them. He encouraged leaders to keep promoting truth and providing leadership, but they would not hear him. He warned them that they had morally degenerated to the point that there was not one man in whole city that would stand up to champion the cause of truth.

This text finds Jeremiah, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, challenging the city to find just one man who would stand against the moral degeneration of the city and God would save it from destruction. In verse 1 Jeremiah charged the people to look in the broad places and find just one man that would "execute judgment", that is, one man that would do something. If one man could be found, the city would be saved.

This was an easier task than that discussed between Abraham and the Angels in Genesis 18:24. Here Abraham begged the angels not to destroy the city. The angels response was that the cities of Sodom and Gomarrah would be spared if 50 men could be found. Abraham, knowing the condition of the men of Sodom and Gomorrah begged for 45, then 20, then 10. Once in the city the angels could not find even 10 men who would stand. The city was destroyed as a result.

However, in this text Jeremiah challenges Jerusalem to produce one man. One man who would stand for something and the people could be saved!

Unfortunately for Jerusalem not one man would step forward and Jerusalem fell victim to the Babylonians. The people were carried off into exile. The temple was ruined. In Exile, God spoke through the prophet Ezekiel to tell Israel that he attempted to save them if he could have found one man to stand up. In Ezekiel 22:30-1 God says:

" And I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it: but I found none. Therefore have I poured out mine indignation upon them; I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath: their own way have I recompensed upon their heads, saith the Lord GOD."

The devastation of their homeland and exile of their people was a painful part of the Jewish experience. However much of it could have been avoided if just one man had risen to stand for the Lord.

Finding One Man

If there is a dilemma in the African-American community it is the declining presence of men in the leadership of our homes, churches and civic involvements. While the reasons for this decline are varied, its effects are having a devastating impact on our community as a whole.

Historically, African-American women have risen to fill the spaces whenever our men could not meet the demands of the circumstances. In such instances the emphasis was on "could not." Often opportunities for men were limited out of fear and/or prejudice. Women rose to fill the gap temporarily, doing what must be done.

Today the dilemma is not that men "cannot" but that many "will not" rise to the occasion, forcing women again to shoulder the responsibility of leadership.

Many men have found it easy to abdicate their responsibilities and leave it to the women, who have more than their share of responsibilities already. Our homes are being left to our women to run. Many of them are frustrated that not only must they bake the bread but they must make the bread to bake as they head homes by themselves.

In our churches, civic leadership and the nurture of our children, it is our women that are rising to fill voids created by men who refuse to shoulder their responsibilities forcing them to do what they must do.

The mountains of problems faced by every family, could be scaled much easier if there was a good man with a plan!

Why did Jeremiah in this text, have such a difficult time finding one man? There were plenty of men in the city. All of the Jews! They all believed in Jehovah. Why wouldn't anyone respond? They had grown comfortable in their way and adulterated themselves with personal passions foreign to the will of God.

Why are we finding it difficult to find men in this generation? The easy answer that is less self incriminating is to say they are all in jail or have killed themselves in drug or gang disputes. The filled jails and expanding grave yards are symptons of the problem. Good men are groomed for manhood by the generation that precedes them. The responsibility to teach values and responsibility falls on the adult men of every generation. When a single generation of boys misses that instruction chaos is the result. That is the problem.

When boys miss value instruction they become young adults with twisted value systems that suggest that they should steal but don't get caught, find a woman to support them, kill or fight anyone that crosses them, curse and use foul language to get their points across, and place blame for the failures on someone else. When a generation evolves with this value system, crime, rape, murder, teen pregnancy and plethora of other social ills develops. When we see the graves, jails and rising crime, we see the symptoms of the problem.

What is our response? This generation must organize itself to teach manhood values to our sons. We cannot afford to be distant, indifferent or stingy with with our time or resources. We should agressively promote programs that teach leadership, values and creativity to our young men. We must minister to our young men in jail. We must not shun those who have fallen victim to drugs. We must have an organized response to salvage those who are shipwrecked in life through the development of counseling, job placement and referral programs. We should spare no expense to prepare this generation young men for the mountains they will face.

One Man Makes a Difference

Finally, friends we must be reminded that one man can make a difference! It may appear that one solitary man standing up against a tidal wave of indifference cannot have an impact, but that's exactly what God has looked for throughout all history. One person who was willing to stand. His challenge to the men of Jerusalem was not an isolated instance, he has worked through one man on many occasions!

Abraham was just one man. He was a poor man who had one thing going for him, he had great faith in God! His faith was so great that he gave birth to a nation. One man made a difference.

Israel walked out of Egypt a free people because of the efforts of one man. Moses was a stutterer who lacked self confidence, yet God used him to lead 600,000 people to freedom. One man can make a difference!

Joshua was just one man. A mere stone cutter by trade he was not a scholar or educated man but because he was strong enough to stand on the side of a mountain and say "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord" one man made a difference!

Caleb was just one man! At eighty years old he attested to fact that despite his age there was work to do. He stood on the side of a great mountain and declared "Give me this mountain" as he gave witness that even one elderly man can make a difference!

David was just a young man, but one man who made a difference. When Israel could have been destroyed by the Philistines, David rose to slay the Giant Goliath. One man made a difference.

There are many today who believe one man can't make a difference! But one man can make a difference!

When God considered the deteriorating state of spiritual affairs in the world poses a mountainous problem, he looked for a man!

Elijah was a good man who wrestled with prophets of Baal on Mt. Carmel, but he was not man for the job!

Moses was a good man who saw the burning bush on Mt. Sinai, but he was not the man for the job!

Noah was a good man who built an ark and worship on Mt. Ararat, but he was not the man for the job!

Isaiah volunteered, saying "If the Lord needs somebody, here am I send me!" But he was not the man for the job!

Brothers and sisters I want to tell you about one man who made a difference his name was Jesus!

Jesus, who was born in obscurity!

Jesus, who lived in poverty could have said Father, not me! I don't have anything to offer. I sleep in borrowed beds. I reside in borrowed houses. I eat in borrowed dining rooms. I cross over lakes in borrowed boats. In fact "Foxes have holes and birds have nests, but the son of man hath no place to lay his head."

But if you need somebody....here am I send me!

He died out on Calvary on a borrowed cross. He was buried in a borrowed tomb. But early Sunday morning, he rose from the tomb!

I don't know about you, but I started out in Jesus and I'm going through!

I'm going through!

I'm going through!

I started in Jesus and I'm going through!

Return That We May Look Upon Thee

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 19, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "I am Black, but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tens of Kedar as the curtains of Solomon." Song of Songs 1:5 "Return, Return, O Shulamite; return, return, that we may look upon thee. What will ye see in the Shulamite? As it were the company of two armies!" Song of Songs 6:13.

Introduction

Have you ever found yourself so busy being busy that you neglected things that were important to you? It doesn't take long to fill a daily calendar with busy items that all seem important at the moment. Club meetings, dinners, conferences, appointments, reports due, assignments to complete. They all tend to fill our day in an all consuming way. Sometimes we can get so busy being busy that we lose track of those things which are important to us.

Women especially find this to be true. As more women become heads of households by divorce or single parenthood; or enter the time gouging world of corporate career pursuit, many are finding it increasing difficult to attend to those particulars that they consider important in life. The task is even more difficult for African-American women, many of whom are shouldering the burdens of motherhood and fatherhood at the same time. In the maze of activity associated with womanhood, the desire to return to that which is important is imminent, but elusive.

Consider the little girl who put an ad in the paper looking for a mother. The little girl lived in nice home. She had all of the trappings of comfort: television, private accommodations, nice clothes and toys. Her worked, appeared caring, but never seemed to have enough time for her. One day the little girl decided to put an ad in the paper under the heading "Lost." The ad read: "Lost- One African-American female. 30 years old. 5' 4" tall. She likes to read stories to her daughter. She likes to listen to her tell about important things in her life. She likes to spend time with her. She lives at 2202 Main Street. She answers to the name of mommy. If you find her please bring her back to me." The little girl took the ad and placed it on her mother's work table to be sure it would be seen. The next day the mother read the ad, circled in red. She felt ashamed and answered the ad the next day under the heading "Found." Her ad read: "Found-One African American female who wants to read stories to her daughter, listen to her talk and spend time with her again. She answers to the name mommy." When the little girl read the ad she was happy. A few days later the mother asked her daughter why she found it necessary to put an ad in the paper when she saw her everyday. The little girl answered "You lived here, but you were never home. Welcome back!" They embraced warmly and were never seperated again.

There are many who who are leading successful lives but are being listed under the "lost" headings by their children, spouses and a family. They are rising stars on the job, in their social circles and in the community at large. Many have achieved their success at the expense of family and faith. The community as a whole is beginning to list African-American women in the "lost" column as they pursue different agendas that keep them busy being busy, while other concerns important to the survival of our race become secondary.

As Christians, we know how easy it is to get sidetracked, therefore we steadily pray that he keep us on the path. If we stray we should ask him to help us return to him who first loved us!

Exposition

This text focuses on the Song of Songs, traditionally attributed to Solomon in a unique dialogue with a Black woman who was among his hundreds of wives and concubines.

The Songs of Solomon is a collection of love poems, mostly attributed to Solomon. They were the subject of considerable debate among theologians as they labored over whether they should be a part of the Canon of Sacred writings. Many argued that these were simply love stories. They saw the references to hugging and kissing, breasts, thighs, and other suggestive phrases as earthly with no special connection to God's purpose for the church.

However the majority concluded that the Song of Songs, which is the original Hebrew title of the writings, had allegorical significance. When a writing is considered allegorical, that means that it is comparable to something else. In this instance the scholars concluded that the love and affection shown between Solomon and the Black woman in Song of Solomon is comparable to the love that Christ has for the Church. So, while the words of Song of Solomon speak about flesh and blood, the spiritual eye sees a connection between the believer and his Lord.

There has been considerable debate as to color of the Shulamite woman who is the subject of this text. One school of thought is that she is referred to a black, only in spirit. Her Blackness is attributed to the lowly position she held in her family, forced by her brothers and sisters to labor in the heat of the day, keeping vineyards. In this view, her Blackness or darkly tanned skin was a sign of her lowly background, not of her color.

Whatever the reason, it is obvious that Solomon is talking to a Black woman. This is not unusual. In his harem of over 1,000 wives and concubines Solomon displayed a attraction to women of the darker races His harem included: Moabites, Amorites, Edomites, Zidonians and Hittites. These were women of ebony skins, brown eyes and broad and strong lips. He loved women of many races. He appeared to have a special attraction to darker colored women.

Throughout the Song of Solomon, there is constant reference to the beauty, grace and dignity of this Black woman. By the 6th Chapter she is described as "fairest among women" in 6:1;"beautiful" in 6:4 and in verse 10 she is one that "looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with barriers."

Solomon makes an appeal this beautiful Black woman to return to those things that made her beautiful. The word "return" is used four times, "Return, Return, O Shulamite; return, return!"

Why? "That we may look upon thee!" This Black woman who had been the subject of praise and honor is being encouraged to return to and stay with those virtues that made her beautiful in the offset. When the Black woman returns what will the world see? "As it were the companies of two armies." Genesis 32:1-2 describes a situation where Jacob, while surrounded by a host of his followers but was met by another host of angels who ministered to him. The presence of these two armies, one militant among men the other triumphant and ministering from God he called "Mahanaim." This has special significance to this text because this Shulamite woman once returned to her natural beauty an virtue would exemplify "Mahanaim."

The Black woman of this text was urged to return such that the world could look upon her and see "Mahanaim", a woman at war with the forces against her, but being ministered by the angels from Heaven.

Four Things to Return To

When Solomon spoke to the Black woman of this text he challenged her to return four times. He did not what to return to. The what is defined by circumstance and time. But the need to return is underscored. Perhaps there are four areas that are increasing being neglected by African-American women that should be the subject of return.

A Return to Parenting.

Our history is replete with efforts to turn the African-American woman into breeders. In slavery the master often valued the slave woman by her ability to breed. Having children was job, raising them was her obligation, and rearing them was unnecessary.

Today, 132 after slavery has ended, many women still have a concept of themselves a breeder and feeders rather those who mother and nurture. Increasingly, each succeeding generation of African-American women is leaning heavily toward this idea of being breeders and feeders rather than parenting. In part, our welfare system is a cause. Another cause is a breakdown in the traditional teaching mechanisms of the African-American community that teach and promote parenting skills to each generation.

Is it possible that we have become so busy being busy that we have neglected to teach parenting skills to our daughters? Are these the same daughters that we blame shameless for their lack of parenting skills? Should our church groups, sororities and women's groups respond with workshops and clinics for the underclass as well as the middleclass? Our shows its what we did at one time. Shouldn't we return?

Return to Marriage

Single Parenthood and divorce are problems that are plaguing the African-American community. Nationally, six out of every ten homes is headed by a single female, and four out of every seven marriages are ending in divorce. That is causing a dilemma for the Black family

An increasing number of youth are turning to "shacking" as an alternative lifestyle. Divorce is becoming common place. Child support and Alimony are becoming increasing burdens on second and third marriages trying stretch an income built for one family over two or three.

At one time church mothers were advisors to young couples. They counseled them on how to have successful marriages and avoid divorce. With our increased education should we return to the practice of teaching marriage skills to young couples? Or should be we be satisfied serving as white clothe ornaments, trophies of past marital success rather than instruments to be used in God's hands. What about our social orders? Couldn't marriage be promoted and taught as a part of the annual program? Shouldn't we return?

Return to Finer Womanhood

We have before us a generation of youth who are increasingly losing their social graces. The virtues of finer womanhood must be taught to all of our young ladies. We can no longer afford the luxury of charm clinics that teach grace and manners to the middle class while refusing ignoring the masses of girls who need to be taught finer womanhood if we are to turn the tide.

What good is a debutante ball that presents the already refined and charmed?

Those girls who are being duped by some rappers into believing that its O.K. to call themselves whores because they pronounce it with an H. or that to refer to themselves as "B" (The "B" word) need help. Girls who cuss like sailors, walk like men, smell like bears and fight tigers need help. Wouldn't it help, if sororities, just one year would reach out and get 20 or 30 of the ungroomed and groom them. Shouldn't we return to promoting finer womanhood?

Return to God.

Finally friends, we need to return to God.

Solomon said the when the Black woman returned that the world would see two armies within her. One struggle with the social ills surrounding her, and another army that was maintaining her coming straight from the battlements of heaven.

The Christian woman needs the "Mahanaim." She needs to fight the social ills of our her times with an army of the faithful. But she also needs the support from the power of the almighty!

We should not get so busy, being busy, that we have no time for God!

Some have little time for worship on Sundays! We need to return to God!

Some have little time for prayer or Sunday Bible Study, but we need to return to God!

We cannot approach the problems of this generation without the Lord. We cannot deal with 12 year old mothers and 24 year old grandmothers, without the Lord.

We can't deal with molested daughters, abused children and battered wives without the Lord. We need the Mahanaim, an army of friends and whole lot of help from God!

I don't know about you but I've found that whatever your problem God can solve. Whatever you need, God's got it!

I've found out that no matter what the problem God will make a way.

Maybe that's what the song writer had in mind when he wrote: "Be not dismayed whatere' betide, God will take care of you! Beneath his wings of love abide, God will take care of you. God will take care of you, through everyday ore' all the way, he will take care of you!"

He will take care of you!

He will take care of you!

I know he will, because one evening out yonder on Calvary, he died for me and you!

He will take care of you because one morning he rose for the dead with all power in his hands!

Return to God and he will take care of you!

Indian Givers

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 5, 1976

SCRIPTURE:"But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land? Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God. And Ananias hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things." Acts 5:3

Introduction

Have you ever had anyone to give you something then take it back? Perhaps it was a financial gift? Maybe it was a lover's token such as a ring or a bracelet? Maybe it was something intangible such as a commitment of support and a promise to perform a service. Whatever the case, whenever someone, for whatever reason, refuses to honor a commitment it is discouraging at the least. Generally persons who give something, whether it is tangible or intangible, then take it back, are described as "Indian Givers." The term came from American folklore in which white men who had broken treaties with Native Americans placed the blame on the Native Americans themselves, saying they had given their word by accepting the terms of treaties and then taken it back. Although it was incorrectly applied, the term stuck as a means of describing a person who gives something of value and then takes it back. By any definition, very few people like Indian Givers.

There was a time in our history when a man's word was his bond. If the commitment was made, regardless to the circumstance, if it was humanly possible he could be counted on to keep it. Unfortunately that attitude is not the prevailing sentiment of our times. A man keeps his word only if it is convenient or if he feels good about it. That makes every person distrustful of the next as people move to protect themselves against future, expected losses. Consider the country preacher and the leaky roof. The country preacher had a great belief in the power of the Lord to move on the hearts of people. However, of late it seemed that the power of Satan was doing a mighty moving in their hearts and pocket books. People were holding on to their money, not paying in church and everything was falling down. The roof on the church began to leak badly, but the people still wouldn't budge. They put pots on the floor and moved benches around so that the water didn't mess up their new clothes. Finally the preacher made his appeal. "Members we need a new roof on this church. All of us can see the need. I'm going to pass my hat around and I want you go give a generous offering to help us get this roof fixed. The preacher passed his hat and bowed his head. After the service the deacons came to him and asked. "Reverend how much did we get?" The preacher dropped his head and said "Not one dime. In fact, I was lucky to get my hat back!" There are many churches in America that are going in need becomes people have made promises to God, but are sending the hat back empty.

One reason that we have so much paperwork attached to every promissory arrangement we make in business matters is distrust. The papers simply verify the arrangement made and provide a paper trail to force us to honor our commitments. In these instances, if we don't honor our commitments we will be forced to do so. It doesn't matter how we feel.

As Christians we have made some commitments to God. Among those is our promise to give liberally to support his benevolent work and to spread his word. In return God has given to us liberally. While God has never failed on his end of the bargain, we have often become Indian Givers with respect to God. He gives and gives and never takes back. We should do the same.

Exposition

This text considers two members of the church at Jerusalem Ananias and Sapphira, who gave the appearance of giving to God, but were actually holding back.

The Jewish community of biblical times followed two lines of thought with respect to property. The primary philosophy followed by most was that all things belonged to God. They considered themselves stewards of their personal possessions, cattle, crops or anything on the land. Their attitude toward the land was a different matter. They considered the land purely a business matter, not subject to the general idea of "belonging to God." For example, they accepted the idea of returning a tithe of the fruit of the land, but never entertained the idea of giving a tithe of the land itself. Land ownership was not negotiable. It was considered a permanent asset of the family.

This divided view of ownership had its origins in their history. They generally viewed the land as something that belonged to them by virtue of a promise from God in Genesis 12. When the children of Israel entered the Promised Land, they divided up the land promised to them for a permanent inheritance. After the division of the land among the twelve tribes, individual plots were given to family groups or clans. If the occasion demanded it, the land could be redivided later. Land sales and transfers were recorded by scribes on leather or papyrus scrolls, on clay tablets, or in the presence of witnesses with the symbolic removal of a sandal (Ruth 4:7) or the stepping onto the land by the new owner. Land passed from father to son but could be given to a daughter. The law of the kinsman-redeemer (Lev. 25:25) was developed to assure that land belonging to a particular clan did not pass out of its hands despite the death of an heirless husband. The next-of-kin was required to purchase the land and provide an heir to the name of the deceased. The impoverished widow would not be forced to sell her land to outsiders, thus diminishing the tribal area of the clan. It was obvious, land belonged to the family. It was not to be seized, sold or given to anyone outside of the family.

As Jews became converts to the Christian faith one of the first challenges to their new faith was their belief about the land. The early church required all members to sell their land and give the proceeds of the sale to the church. For many this was a difficult thing to do. They believed in giving the tithe, because they accepted that as returning to God something that was already his. However, selling the land was a matter of them giving up something that they rightfully believed was their own. Despite their reservations about this new belief, most of the early Christians did as required.

This text focuses on two individuals who had trouble parting with something they considered their own: Ananias and his wife Sapphira.

Ananias (an uh ni' uhs) is the Greek form of the Hebrew name Hananiah, which means "Yahweh has dealt graciously." In response to the demand to sell all their property and enter the communal relationship the two acted deceptively. First, they did not sell all of their property as required. Acts 5:1 says they sold "A" possession. This suggests that they owned other properties but only sold a part of what they owned. Secondly, they only gave a part of the proceeds from the sale of that possession, claiming it was the full price. Both were struck dead for having lied to the Holy Spirit (Acts 5:3,10)

The actions described in the text, suggests that they promised to give to God and lied to him in two ways: Not giving what was required, and then not even giving their rightful share of what they did acknowledge earning. Their punishment was death. They promised to act then went back on their promise. They were perhaps, the first Indian Givers.

Indian Givers Today

Today there are millions of Indian Givers in the body of Christ. These are those who follow the attitude of Ananias and Sapphira with respect to their support of the kingdom building work of Christ.

What could possibly contribute to the development of an Indian Giver attitude among members of the body of Christ?

Generally Indian Givers are those who make emotional promises, based on the ecstasy of the moment without a real spirit of commitment. Therefore, many make commitments based upon their feeling at the moment. After a fiery sermon in which all have been carried to the mountain top, many like Peter want to build three Tabernacles, until they come down into the valley. Even Peter followed at distance when the emotion wore off. The danger of establishing our giving based upon emotions are predictable. The man that is happy today is sad tomorrow. He that is pleased today is angry tomorrow. Those whose giving is based solely on emotion have a roller coaster pattern of giving. Some churches even place the offering after the sermon such that members have an opportunity to give as they are feeling good.

However, if they are unpleased with the message they rebel in the offering tray.

Those who have difficulty giving as God has commanded usually assume an attitude that the finances they refuse to give belong to them and it is their right to determine the ultimate disposition. They believe they earned their monies and therefore, they not God or his church, should expect, require or dictate to them how or when they should give. At the core of their inability to obey God is a general disbelief that everything belongs to God. Conversely, they believe like the early Jews that it belonged to God, until he gave it to them. They believe once resources are given to them, it is no longer God's right to dictate.

Those who claim this attitude would be right if God actually transferred the ownership of what we have to us. We know that God has retained ownership of everything by briefly surveying his word. The preponderance of scripture reflects the thought of Psalm 24:1 "The earth is the LORD'S, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." This truth is repeated in the New Testament in 1 Cor 10:26 "For the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof."

God does not give us a house to do with as we please, he allows us to use a house which belongs to him.

God does not give us a car to claim as our own, he allows us to us a car that belongs to him.

God does not put money in our pocket that belongs to us to do with as we please, but he provides us with money to manage our affairs, according to his instruction. His instructions provide that we use 90 percent of that he puts within our reach for the management of our personal affairs. His final instruction is that we transfer 10 percent of that to accounts established for the management his affairs on earth. If we have been blessed richly we can give even more, but only 10 percent is required.

Many have promised to accept Christ as Savior but not as Lord. These same people have given the pledge of loyalty to Christ and have taken it back.

God Love But Never Took It Back

While many believers have become Indian Givers with God he has never been an Indian Giver with us. John 3:16 reminds us that "for God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." God loved this world so much that he gave his son to die for its salvation.

The way God gave should be an example to all of us. He gave, but he never took back.

Thoughmen did not return his love, he gave but never took back.

Though men were adulterous in their relationship with him, he gave, but he never took back

Though men trampled upon the blessings he provided so freely, he gave, but he never took back.

I don't know about you but I'm glad that God sent his son to give his love for the world. I'm really glad that he gave and would not take it back!

Jesus had many chances and reasons to take back his love!

Crowds that once loved him called out crucify him; but he gave and wouldn't take it back!

The beat him and nailed him to an old rugged cross, but he gave, and would not take it back!

He died out on Calvary! He gave, but he would not take it back!

He rose up early Sunday morning with all power in his hand!

He paid the price for my salvation and never once took back anything because of my weakness!

No wonder the song writer wrote: "Jesus paid it all, all to him I owe, sin had left a crimsom stain, but he washed it white as snow."

Jesus, paid it all!

Jesus, marked my debt fulfilled!

He gave his life for me, and he never..

He never..

He never took it back!

It Will Surely Come

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 5, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie; though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry." Habakkuk 2:3

Introduction

Have you ever had a vision? Not simply a dream but a vision? Our dreams represent our hopes for the future. However, a vision is a glimpse into the unknown paths that meander beyond the horizon. A vision, is a picture of what is to be. Certain people, placed in unique situations, have been burdened with visions directed toward their peculiar circumstance. Individuals have visions for their future although others can't quite see what they see. A father or mother is given a vision for the home he she leads. The great presidents of our country saw visions for America of the future, long before those who supported them even remotely understood what they were talking about. Pastors are given visions for their congregations that baffle those who hear them, to the point that they are often ridiculed because they seem so outrageously futile. The pictures are as clear as day, yet no one seems to grasp the full direction of where they are going. Those who have not been given a vision cannot see it. A natural response is to deny that such visions exists at all, and to dismiss them as the vain babblings of fools.

In art stores across the country there are some odd looking pictures that have appeared in the last few years. These pictures vivid types of a delicate art form that hides one picture beneath a maze of patterns, colors and forms that is recognizable only by a few. Many people buy these patterned pictures and hang them on the walls of their homes and shops. The become quaint conversation pieces. as friends stare at them trying to see the picture beneath the picture. Some squint and cross their eyes. Some place their heads against the picture. They even turn their heads to the side, or turn the picture up side down. They try very hard to see the elusive image. No matter how they try, there are some who can't seem to see what is there. Those who cannot see the hidden image are frustrated when others come and apparently with no trouble are able to see and describe it in intricate detail. Those who cannot see it, must trust the insight of those who can.

In a similar sense many of us can see God's vision for the future while others cannot. There is nothing wrong with those who can't see it, they simply have not been placed in a position where they can see through a maze of patterns that hide the true picture of things to come. In such cases, God always provides a way for the vision to be seen and capitalized upon. In every generation God has visionaries. In every family there is a visionary. In the church God always provides one he has anointed with the vision. Those who cannot see it, should not deny that there is a hidden picture, but should trust God completely and pray that they too may be able to fully understand.

As Christians, we know we are not able to understand all of the workings of these times. However, we know that if we continue to trust God "farther along, we'll know all about it. Farther along we'll understand why." Until then, we who are "just" continue to walk by faith and not by sight.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Habakkuk as he is that God's promises may seem slow coming but they will come.

Historically the Jewish nation had been divided into to parts. Israel the Northern Kingdom, and Judah the Southern Kingdom. The Northern people had been destroyed by the Assyrians. They had threatened the Southern kingdom but were unsuccessful. The Southern kingdom was happy in its apparent success but it became evil and the prophet Habakkuk was given a vision from God about how God intended to resolve the situation.

Habakkuk saw the difficult times(1:3) Around him he saw violence, strife, contention, lawlessness and the success of the wicked over the righteous. He saw wrong judgments being made everywhere. They were confident of their security. They had made alliances with Egypt and were sure that the combined strength of the two nations could ward off any enemies. In their merriment they abandoned the word of God, depending heavily on the instruments of men. What Habakkuk saw disturbed him to the point that he complained to God about it.

God's response. God told Habakkuk that he would "work a work" in his life time that will seem unbelievable even to God's prophet, not to mention how it would sound to the people; but it will happen (1:5). A problem existed and God's solution to it was already in the works. The method he would use would be so completely unorthodox that it would be unbelievable. However, the novelty of his approach is what would make it succeed. God said he would raise up a nation called the Chaldeans (1:6). Chaldean is a term used for Babylonians because this the region in which they lived. They would be used to punish Judah for its sins. Although they are nonbelievers, evil in nature, terrible and dreadful God planned to use them to cause a day of judgment for his people. In the remaining verses of Chapter 1 Habakkuk describes the terror of the Babylonians and questions why God would use a nation that is worse than Judah to teach God's people a lesson. They would be used, came the answer, but their own treachery would destroy them, after God's purpose had been accomplished.

The Vision Given. In Chapter 2 God gives Habakkuk the vision of the rising of the Babylonian Kingdom. The plan God revealed was not immediate, it was long ranged, but would happen in Habakkuk's lifetime. The injustices, wrong doing and problems that Habakkuk saw would be avenged as the vision came to fruition. It would be a slow, steady development until it was done. When it is finally realized the results will speak for themselves "and not lie." Though it appeared slow in coming "it will surely come."

They were warned that as the will God will began to work itself out, certain developments, counter attacks and slick moves would serve to discourage those who are faithful, they are reminded not to be discouraged at anything they see, because the just live by faith not by sight.

In the aftermath of the vision God raised a young Babylonian king by the name of Nebuchadnezzar. His mighty armies moved toward Jerusalem and surrounded the city in a great siege. In the year 597 B.C. Jerusalem fell and every component of God's vision to Habakkuk was fulfilled, including the ultimate destruction of the infamous Babylonians who fell to the Persians.

Living by Faith

The declining state of morality in our nation often discourages some believers. We see so much crime, violence, murder and destruction that it becomes disturbing. In the African-American community we see our men disappearing from the leadership of our homes, church and community. We see drugs, lawlessness and a decimated family destroying us while many of our leaders fiddle as Rome burns.

In the text Israel was given a vision of God's plan, but they ignored it. Yet it came to be. He later sent Ezekiel, Jeremiah, Nehemiah and others with other visions that showed the people how God would raise them up again. Of course, many of the people not believe these visions either, they were beyond comprehension.

God has provided a vision for these times too. It is a vision that his been repeated in the New Testament for our modern times. There are three key words in verse 4 that contain these repeated truths:

Just. (Romans 1:17-28) Reminds believers that the wrath of God will be visited upon any person that is unrighteous. Despite the injustices they inflict upon everyone, those that know and trust God live by faith that he has a plan to resolve our problem. We cannot see it but, we know he has a plan. Others mock God's vision completely and "professing themselves to be wise, they became fools." (Romans 1:22). Those who want to do right, trust God. Those who have difficulty trusting God develop their own plan and become fools in his sight.

Live. (Galatians 3:11) Reminds us that the key to real life is not in rituals and traditions and laws of men. Real life comes from believing and trusting in God continuously. God will not bless our lives because we trust in our rituals or rules, but because we trust him enough to live daily depending on his benevolence.

Faith (Hebrews 10:38) Reminds us that like Israel our salvation is in trusting in the Lord. We live by faith, however, "if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him." God is not pleased with those who first step out on faith then turn back the hands of time to return to their former state. Those who live by faith do not go backwards but forward. Hebrews 10:39 says "But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul."

What is faith? "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." (Hebrews 11:1) It is the sum total of everything that we hope for, even though we cannot see how it will be done.

In today's time God has given a vision, those who hear of it and live by faith will follow God's plan. Those who trust in their own knowledge will develop their own plans in a futile effort that will get them nowhere.

It Will Surely Come

Finally, I'm reminded of a recent movie entitled "Field of Dreams." It depicted a man who heard a voice saying to him "If you build it, they will come." Moved by that moment the man built a huge baseball field in the middle of a corn field, miles from a city. Sure enough thousands came from miles around to see the great baseball game. While the character of the movie did not profess that the voice he heard came from God, it is strikingly similar to real life instance of God speaking to believers and charging them to do impossible sounding tasks, counting on faith alone.

Moses was charged to lead Israel out of Egypt. His only resource was a rod and a stubborn faith that God would make it happen. Though the people revolted against him, called him a dictator and tried to get rid of him, he marched forward with a vision of promised land in front him.

Noah was given the impossible task of building a ship on dry land and filling it with specimens of every living creature. How could this be done? How could the animals be found? Yet the answer seemed to come "if you build it, they will come!" So at age 600, Noah set out on a 100 year mission to build it, in faith that they would come." When the boat was completed, they came, two by two of every specimen on earth.

Solomon was charged to build a temple. Though Israel did not have the fine cedars needed or many things needed, he went on, not knowing where it would come from and soon the great building was erected. People came from all over Israel.

Has God given you a vision for your personal growth. Are you frustrated because no one seems to see it but you? Be sure what you see is from God, ask for confirmations, then step out on faith. If you build that dream, it will certainly come to pass.

Has God shown you a vision for your family? Can you see it as clear as day, but others think you are foolish? If you begin building on it in faith, it will surely come!

When God gives a vision for the church, build upon it, even though you can't see it will surely come!

When God gives a vision for your life, build upon it..if it's according to God's will, it will surely come!

Envision a day when our homes and churches will be overflowing with young men who believe and trust in God..build upon it and it will surely come!

Envision a day when the Gospel message is preached into thousands of homes and souls by the thousands are pricked to serve God, build it and it will surely come!

Envision feeding the hungry, sheltering the homeless, and ministering to the imprisoned. Build it and it will surely come!

Envision a generation of young people who enjoy drug free, clean, moral and chaste lives and do everything that is fun with their church family, build it, and it will surely come!

Envision a day when dead pews, will be jumping for Joy!

Envision a day when everything that hath breath will praise the Lord, and it will surely come!

I don't know about you but I've found out you can't trust people. Deacons will sometimes disappoint you. Trustees, ushers and choir members might let you down.I've found out that its best to trust in God.

No wonder the song writer wrote: "I trust in God, wherever I may be. On mountain peak on or on the stormy sea. Though come what may, from day to day, my heavenly father watches over me."

Though billows roll!

He keeps my soul!

My heavenly father, who sent his son to die on Calvary!

My heavenly father, who sends the holy spirit to sustain me!

My heavenly father watches over me!

Stuck In The Mud

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 11, 1995

SCRIPTURE:" He brought me up also out of an horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings. And he hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God: many shall see it, and fear, and shall trust in the LORD. Psalm 40:2-3

Introduction

Have you ever been stuck in the mud? Most of us have some horror stories that we can tell about the time or two we were stuck in the mud. It may have been the time that our automobile became stuck and there was no help around. It may have been a time when our feet just lodged themselves in the mud and we couldn't get free. When we are stuck in the mud, we feel helpless. Very few times are we able to get out of the mud without doing something different.

Those who get out of the mud go through some changes to get out. Sometimes it's unbelievable. Consider Lying Larry's conversion. Lying Louie lived in what was described as the "mud" of life. He loved to drink, gamble, smoke and chase women. Anytime he was asked about any of his vices his response was always: "Not me, I wouldn't do a thing like that?" He'd lie and walk off. After many years of lying and living in the mud of life Larry decided to clean himself up and be baptized. Everybody watched with suspicion when Larry told the church that he was tired of the mud and wanted to clean up his life. They looked around to see what pretty woman he was trying to impress. No one could believe Lying Larry was telling the truth. On his baptizing day Lying Larry stood in line at the river. Lying Larry edged his way to the front of the baptism line in 25 degree December water. The people watched looking for a sign that Lying Larry was really saved. The preacher and deacons took hold to Lying Larry and took him under the water and held long enough to get the sin out. When he came up his face was blue. His teeth were clattering and ice was forming on his eyelids. The preacher asked: "Are you cold son?" Larry answered "No Sir!" Immediately the preacher said "This Negro is still lying, take him under again!" People who get out of the mud go through changes to get out.

When our automobiles get stuck in the mud, they need a little help to get out. What about us? We are no different! When we get stuck in the mud we need a little help too! Life's challenges often prove overwhelming sometimes, even for the best of us. Sometimes we take chances thinking we can make it through small puddles without difficulty. Sometimes the ground is softer than we imagine. As a result, we get stuck. That is when we need a little help.

As Christians, we are not immune from getting stuck in the mud of life's concerns. However, we have access to a towing service that operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week. When we are stuck in the mud, we call Jesus, because he a very present help in a time of trouble.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains the joys of his relationship with God.

David lived a life that is best described as a spiritual roller coaster, complete with times of great faith and spiritual strength and other times of great weakness. Here he looks intently upon the way that God caught him at one of the weak moments in his life and lifted him to a new and better experience.

The allegory used in this text is that of a mud filled pit and rock.

In describing his spiritual state David said he had been in a horrible pit. In today's context, "horrible" connotes scary, insufferable, or terrifying. Today "horrible" suggest imminent danger and the presence of pain and suffering. However, a closer look at the word "horrible" in this passage reveals that it had an additional meaning in this specific instance, which was "noisy" or "confusion." The descriptive term preceding "pit" therefore suggests that David was in a pit of confusion, hearing the noise of many voices..The result of this confusion is great fear, which is the root cause of horror.

Moreover, the situation was further complicated because not only was he in a confused state, but his was standing in "miry" clay. "Miry" is distinguished from regular clay because the term "miry" means "dregs" or "muddy." His spiritual state had deteriorated to a point of reaching the "dregs." He was standing in the mud of life. It was unsure, unsafe and dangerous.

A third allegory is that of a rock.

David said his feet were placed upon a rock. There is no descriptive adjective preceding "rock" because it is not necessary. The meaning is in the word itself. Rock, in this context, is the Hebrew word "Cela" which means a high or lofty place. A fortress. David said God set his feet upon a rock. It is important to note that the rock upon which he stood was not in the mud, or in the pit, but it was outside the pit. In fact, it was high above the pit. In his struggle to get out of the pit, his feet did not find a rock in the middle of the mud. He was lifted out of his circumstance by a power outside the confusion and mud of the pit.

Thus David stood at a point in his life where he was confused by different voices or noises, caught in the dregs and mud of life. From this circumstance God lifted him to a new and joyous life, high above the pit and the mud. This experience gave him a new song to sing. It is a great testimony to the goodness of God because those who see it will know that it comes direct from God.

Pits and Puddles

Even the best person can find himself in a pit or puddle in life. These are the confusing moments in life when direction is unclear and signals are being received from all sides.

Today there are millions who are frustrated because of personal dilemma. They are confused by a myriad of voices giving conflicting instructions about what to do, when to do it, where to do it, and why. Sometimes the voices are those of parents and relatives. Sometimes it's a spouse. While family voices are saying one thing, our employers are giving different instructions. All of the voices coming simultaneously soon become a perplexing noise. Not only are we in a pit, but we have so many voices trying to tell us what to do that we don't know what to do. It's like being lost in a car without a road map and four passengers in the car start giving different directions trying to solve the problem. It's totally confusing.

Sometimes we can find ourselves in a low pit, besieged by the inner voices of indecision as we wrestle with personal doubts, and private issues that demand our response. The louder the circumstances yell for a response, the deeper we sink. Deeper the pit appears. Like David, our pit becomes a horrible pit.

We can also get miserably stuck in mud puddles. Often we innocently try to tiptoe through the mud thinking we can avoid the deep parts only to find that we have misjudged the situation. Unlike the pit, where we reach a low out of confusion, the puddle is usually something we stepped right into, thinking that we could get out.

What prompts us to walk or drive through the mud? If we know that we can get stuck, why do we keep going into the mud?

MISJUDGMENT: Often we misjudge the depth of the puddle. We conclude that it is too small to cause us any danger and we trudge right in. Many have been lured into the mud puddles of life thinking they had the capacity to remove themselves at will or that the wheel base of their vehicle was too large to be stuck in such small puddles. There are many alcoholics today who approach the puddle of alcohol consumption thinking they could skip through it without becoming an alcoholic. They found the puddle too deep and became stuck in the mud. Other drugs such as heroin and crack, posed the same invitation. The results, unfortunately, were the same, millions became addicted and stuck in the mud. Not just substance abuse, some have flirted with the idea of infidelity and have cheated on their wives or husbands, thinking they could stop, only to find themselves stuck in the mud of an adulterous relationship. Misjudgment has been the cause of many people being stuck in the mud, even big wheels.

CONVENIENCE: Sometimes we choose to go through the mud because it is convenient. Crossing a small puddle that lies between where we are and where we are trying to go seems less of an inconvenience than going around it. We often wind up in the mud trying to save time or make money. How many have brought trouble upon themselves taking short cuts. Whether it's the builder who contracts to construct a home with shoddy materials or the student who chooses to cheat on the test rather than learn the information, short cuts have caused millions of people to become bogged down in the mud. Millions of people have been bogged down in the mud trying to make or save money by splashing through the mud. These are those who furnish their homes with stolen merchandise or cheat their friends and acquaintances for financial gain. It is easier to splash through the mud than it is to go around it.

IGNORANCE: It is possible to get stuck in the mud out of ignorance. These are those situations wherein we became stuck because we did not know the ground was muddy. These are the cases where we were deceived by appearances. Because of our deception we took steps into muddy areas and were stuck before we knew it. How many millions have become the victims of scams, pigeon drops, false sales pitches and a plethora of other shady deals without really knowing that they were getting into a muddy situations. They simply did not know.

Getting Out of the Mud

Finally, we must consider how to get out of the mud. Getting out of the mud is more difficult than getting in. If you are walking in mud, your shoe often sticks while your feet splash. If you are driving, your wheels spin splashing mud on everything behind it. Cars slide and spinning wheels make deeper holes. The more you spin the wheels, the deeper you sink.

Getting out of the mud is easier if there is assistance from someone, or something that is not a part of the mud. A car pulled or pushed enough for the tires to catch hold to something solid can get out of the mud. A person who is able to catch hold to a limb or hand can pull himself up and get out of the mud. It is difficult to get out of the mud without that extra push or extra hand.

Eventually even the best of us gets stuck in the mud! But there is good news! There is someone who is willing and able to lift us up from the mud and the mire! There is someone who is outside the mud and slime who can lift us and place our feet on solid ground.

When we get out of the mud the whole world knows you've been through the mud because there is mud on your shoes, pants, and dress tail. There is mud on your tires, fenders and bumpers. To get rid of the mud we go to a car wash or wash our hands and feet.

But I heard a song writer ask: "What can wash away my sins? Nothing but the blood of Jesus. What can make me whole again, nothing but the blood of Jesus. Oh precious is the flow that makes me white as snow, no other fount I know, nothing but the blood of Jesus!"

David said "He brought me up also out of an horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock.....he put a new song in mouth!"

The new song we sing is a song of testimony!

The new song we sing is a song of witness: "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore. Very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more. But the master of the sea, heard my despairing cry.

From the waters lifted me now safe am I.
Love lifted me!
Love Lifted me!
When nothing else could help, love lifted me!”

He That Overcometh

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord. 1 Corinthians 15:57-58 "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. Introduction

How would you like to participate in an event in which you were guaranteed to be a winner? Wouldn't that be great? Suppose you knew in advance that your team was going to win the Super Bowl, World Series, or an NBA Championship? What about Wimbledon, The Indianapolis 500? Suppose you knew, without any doubt, the name of the next President of the United States? Such knowledge would be wonderful, valuable and enriching to say the least. There are many who have attempted to enrich themselves by fixing the outcome of such events. Players have been bribed to shave points and throw fights. Candidates have been "convinced" to drop out of political races to change the outcome. Those who control the outcome of an event have a great advantage because the element of risk is eliminated. Some stake their entire fortunes on the outcome of such events, when they are assured that the "fix is in." Fixing the outcome of an event is illegal, unless of course, the one that is "fixing" the outcome is God himself.

Those who believe and trust in God are living fixed lives. The outcome of the Christian life is already fixed and determined. We already know what the end will be! When Henry "Hank" Aaron stood at bat with the world watching him, there were butterflies in his stomach. The national media was watching to see if he could break the home-run record of the legendary Babe Ruth. It was an especially important moment for Aaron because he had risen from the humble ranks of the Negro Leagues to the point of becoming a legend in Baseball history. When the pitch came, "Hank" made a powerful swing and sent the ball sailing high into the air and into the stands. Although the ball was off the playing field, the scoreboard did not register his home run. Everyone knew that it was a home run. Everyone knew that Babe Ruth's record had been broken, but "Hank" had to run the bases and touch home base before the score could count. So, as the fans cheered "Hank" made his rounds, touching each base and finally touching the home plate. When he touched home, the scoreboard reflected what everyone knew the moment the ball left the park: The Babe's record had been broken, the victory was won!

So it is with the Christian life. We already know that we have the victory, because Christ who batted for us out on Calvary, knocked defeat out of the park. The home-run won't count however until we run the bases, one by one and finally touch the home plate.

As Christians, we know what our end will be! Therefore we are encouraged to be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing that our labor is not in vain! We already have the victory, because Jesus has insured it through his life, death and resurrection!

Exposition

This text focuses on three passages of scripture that tell believers that a victory is assured, describes its recipients, and tells what they shall receive.

In Corinthians Paul reassures believers that each has a right to expect victory over every enemy and foe. This was written in the context of great persecution of Christians by both Gentiles and Jews. They were ostracized, humiliated and suffered great losses of freedom and property. Many lost their lives. Many worried about whether their sacrifices were in vain.

Repeatedly, Paul reminded all believers that no obstacle they encountered would stop them from achieving victory because Christ had insured it through his life, death and resurrection. That even applied to death. When the Romans were concerned about the same problem Paul wrote in Romans 8:35-37 "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter.Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."

He encouraged the Corinthians to continue doing the work of the Lord with the full knowledge that their labor is not in vain, but would be rewarded by Christ who has guaranteed the victory to every believer.

Saint John, in his epistle, identifies those who are guaranteed the victory. Generally, those individuals that are "born of God" are the victorious. To be born of God is to have the mysterious rebirth that Christ spoke of to Nicodemus as he reminded him that to enter the kingdom of God he must be "born again."

According to John, those who are born into the kingdom of God by faith in Jesus Christ, are those who are guaranteed the victory.

In Revelation, after the tribulation and the judgment, John saw the reward of the believers. Jesus revealed to him the events of the last seven years of this world, called the tribulation. He also showed him the events of the Millennium, the thousand reign of Christ. Beyond that however, John saw the eventual reward of all believers.

John saw believers inheriting all things. What does "all things" include? Paul writing to the Philippians described "things" suitable for Christians as: "...whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report.." Philippians 4:8 John saw believers in triumph sharing in every good thing in the kingdom of heaven. Since his vision was a vision of future events, the outcome has already been planned and prepared. It is simply waiting for believers to claim. Combined, these three texts suggest to believers that Christ and his kingdom will be victorious in the end. Those who believe and trust in him will overcome, despite any difficulties they endure on this earth. Their reward has already been prepared in glory, consisting of every good thing that is imaginable.

The Fix Is In

Faced with the growing mass of social evils in this world it is easy to be overwhelmed by the weight of the problem. It is easy to simply throw up your hands in defeat and resignation. Problems are not diminishing, they seem to be increasing. Those who are not grounded in the word of God could easily be disillusioned by the events of our times. However, believers are not disillusioned because we know that the social evils that we see must be. At the same time we know what the outcome will be.

Concerned about social conditions, Christ warned his disciples that many problems are imminent, but not to be dismayed by them.

In Matthew 24:6-8 we are clearly warned when Christ says: " And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows."

Though this seems to be a gloomy picture, we are assured when we learn that the fix is in for believers. Verse 13 reads: "But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved."

No matter the difficulty, we who are faithful should endure, for the final outcome will greatly benefit us.

Who Shall Overcome

Who is the man or woman that overcomes? Is overcoming simply longevity? Living a long time but doing nothing with a life is rusting, not overcoming! What is overcoming?

Overcoming is "enduring service, despite adverse circumstances, that achieves a desired end." He that overcomes doesn't just sit down and rust, but he or she works. That's why Paul in the text says: be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord.

That which discourages is not always something outside of your circumstance. Sometimes, that which discourages you the most is something that is happening in you, or happening to you. Sometimes its not the crime, violence, hunger and poverty around us that discourages us, but its our inability to respond because we are hurting emotionally or physically. When you can't move like you want to move, it can sometimes discourage even the best of the Saints.

Paul was constantly plagued by what he described as a "thorn in the flesh." Whether this was a physical ailment or the constant presence of evil around him is often debated, but what is sure is that it bothered him. Three times he asked God to remove it, and his answer was the same "My Grace is Sufficient." (2 Corinthians 12:9) We do not over come if there is no struggle. If God moves every obstacle then there is nothing to overcome. Those who desire to enjoy the rewards without the struggle would change the words of the song "Lord Don't Move That Mountain." They would say "Lord move the mountain, I don't feel like climbing it. Please move that stumbling block, I don't feel like going around it." The great African-American statesman Frederick Douglass wrote: "Without Struggle There can be no progress. He that wants progress without struggle wants the rain without the thunder and lighting." John said the man or woman that overcomes believes in Christ, and is committed to building the kingdom every day of his or her life.

What The End Shall Be

Finally, we must consider the reward of those who overcome. The final triumph of those who work constantly in the vineyard in hope of the great reward. The old warriors sing a song that says "I believe I run on and see what the end will be.." While it is a familiar tune, the song is actually a misnomer because we who know the Lord, already know what the end shall be!

We may not know the day or the hour, but we know what the end shall be!

We may not know the minute or the second, but we know what the end shall be! I hear John declaring in Revelation 2:11 He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death. We may not know the time of day, but we know what the end shall be. Revelation 2:26 "And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations:" We may not know when its coming, but we know what the end shall be!

Rev 3:5 He that overcometh.... shall be clothed in white raiment; and... I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels.

I like that "I will" because that's the fuel of the Christian's faith, the "I wills" of God. "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "thou hast been faithful of a few things, and I will make you Lord over many.."

Run on, but don't be discouraged for Jesus said in John 14:18 "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you."

Storms may rise! But he that overcometh shall inherit all things!

One of these days, by and bye, it'll all be over down here!

He that overcometh will keep telling the story! He'll keep telling the world about Calvary!

One of these days Jesus, who died on Golgotha's hill, and rose after three days and nights, is coming back again!

I just want to hear him put his hands on my shoulder and declare!

Servant!

Servant!

Well done!

Well done!

A Close Cut In the Wrong Barber Shop

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 26, 1995

*SCRIPTURE:"And she made him sleep upon her knees; and she called for a man, and she caused him to shave off the seven locks of his head; and she began to afflict him, and his strength went from him. And she said, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awoke out of his sleep, and said, I will go out as at other times before, and shake myself. And he wist not that the LORD was departed from him. Judges 16:19-20

Introduction

Have you ever had to get your hair styled of cut by someone other than your own barber? Did it come out the way you expected? Did you give the right name but the cut didn't seem to look just right? Today, it's extremely important to go to the right barber shop. The right head in the wrong barber's chair could be a disaster. The era of simple air cuts has passed. Those who have men in their homes know those simple cuts such as Ivy Leagues are in a class by themselves. A man from the boogie woogie era who makes the mistake of sitting in a New Jack barber chair could come out with a high top fade, low fade, ramp, box cut, duck tail, Mississippi Side Walk or a Michael Jordan Fling! If you want the right cut it's important to go to the right barber shop and get in the right chair!

It's important to get in the right chair. Consider the man who had an argument with his wife and worried about whether she would forgive him. All day he worried because she appeared unusually angry. She wasn't speaking to anyone and her mood appeared somber. When the man got home, he looked for signs that might show how his wife felt. A few minutes after he got home, he called a friend and with excitement said: "I know my wife has forgiven me, she bought me an electric tooth brush and left it in the bath room all wrapped in ribbons." Immediately he felt more comfortable. When he turned around, he saw another gift wrapped in a beautiful paper and topped by a red ribbon. He called his friend again and said: "I know she has forgiven me, my wife gave me another present, this time it it's an electric razor!" When he made it to his living room he called his friend the third time and said "I know she must have forgiven, she has given me an electric toothbrush and an electric razor, but guess what? She's topped it all off by giving me giant electric chair!" It's definitely important to watch the chair!

Satan is working hard to get believers, especially young believers to sit in the wrong chair! His intent is to give each believer a cut so close that they won't be recognized as children of the king. Therefore we must constantly be on guard, that we do not fall victim to Satan's tactics.

As Christians we are constantly aware that Satan is working to break our relationship with God. We must resist every attempt, stirring away from tempting situations, such that our relationship with God is not adulterated! As Satan invites, lets resolve to resist and give God our best!.

Exposition

This text focuses on Samson, a young man whose purpose in life was cut short because he allowed himself to be separated from the source of his power.

Samson is heralded as the strongest man that ever lived. His feats of strength were unparralled. He picked up the gates of a city and carried them away. He caught 300 foxes and tied torches in their tails and loosed them in the fields of his enemies. He killed a lion with his bare hands. He killed thousands of Philistines, including one instance when he killed over a thousand using the jawbone of a donkey as his weapon.

He was born with a purpose and dedicated as a Nazirite. Israel was dominated by the Philistines and Samson was chosen by God to accomplish the great purpose of freeing Israel from Philistine Domination. He was consecrated by his parents before his birth to become a Nazirite. The Nazirite's vow had two forms. One was based on a vow by the individual for a specific period; the other was a lifelong devotion prompted by God making special revelations to the parents before the child is born.

Nazirite's were noted for three things. They never cut their hair, drank wine, and avoided contact with any dead things. These were symbols of their devotion to God. If, by chance, a Nazirite broke his vow in any way he was to generally shave his head for seven days and then make a peace offering before the Lord and begin his vows all again(Numbers 6:1-21). No special strength or power came from being a Nazirite. Any special gifts they exercised came because of God being with them.

Among the best known Nazirites of the bible are: Samuel (1 Samuel 1), John the Baptist (Luke 1:15-17) and Paul who took the Nazirite's vow for a short period (Acts 18:18).

Although Samson was a Nazirite, he did not live a devoted life. He was careless in his vow. He broke two of his vows frequently but guarded the third, intently, the cutting of his hair. Though he was dedicated to God, he show little more than ceremonial devotion to God. While he rose to fight the Philistines as a Judge or leader of Israel, each instance was really the result of his exploits with Philistine women.

While he had a huge physical frame, his actual strength came from the presence of God in his life. When he did mighty works, it was because God was with him. The less he allowed God to use his life, the weaker he became. His final downfall came when he became fascinated with Delilah. The lords of the Philistines offered her eleven hundred pieces of silver from each of them to find out the source of Samson's strength. Although she failed three times, finally, she coaxed the truth from him. As he lay asleep on her lap she called in the Philistine Barbers who cut off the seven locks of his hair.

He had broken his vows. Shaving his head was the thing to do, but he was in the wrong place for the wrong reason. He got the right cut, but was in the wrong barber shop. Samson was captured and blinded. On the day of his capture he rose to fight as usual but he "wist not that the Lord was departed from him."

While Samson killed many Philistines, he never accomplished his purpose of freeing Israel from domination. His dying act of faith displayed what he could have been, had he allowed God to use him throughout his life.

Cutting Off The Power

Today we are dangerously close to becoming what Elton Trueblood described as a "cut-flower" civilization. He reasoned that a flower once cut retains its beauty for a while but then begins to lose its beauty because it has been separated from that which gives it life. We are becoming increasingly less focused on our relationship to God. The spiritual lives of too many people have been reduced to the performance of ritual, void of prayer, bible study and real devotion to God.

The picture of Samson being cut off from his power source is demonstrative of Trueblood's cut-flower idea. It is also symbolic of the plight of people that allows themselves to be cut off from God by worldly influences.

Youth especially should be keenly aware of the importance of maintaining a close relationship with God. It is easy, in youth, to become overwhelmed with youth itself. Strength, beauty, swiftness, quick thought, long memory, and great dreams are all part of being young.

These natural tendencies, when empowered by the spirit of God, go even further. God puts wings on the feet of the runner who lives close to him, such that he runs like chariots of fire. The singer whose voice reaches extraordinary heights, goes even higher, when God is with her. The artist sees the hidden beauty of the sunset when God guides his eyes. The writer and story teller makes great truths plain when God tells the story. God's spirit empowers believers who should not allow themselves to be separated from their power source. Christian youth are connected to their power source by: Regular Bible Study, Worship, and Moral Living. These are essentially the Christian youth's life vow to God. These symbolize a young Christian's devotion to God. His power does not come from mere participation or observance of certain customs, but from his private comittment to live for God. As that comittment diminishes, it reflects itself in the symbols.

Just as Samson's power was not in his hair, neither is the Christian's power in the symbols themselves. With Samson, his complete devotion to his purpose and to God was gone, long before his hair was cut. While he was laying on Delilah's lap, he still had his hair, but his devotion to God was gone. It was just a matter of time before the hair would go too. Even though his hair grew back quickly, it wasn't until he renewed his devotion to God did he renew his real strength.

There are many who still participate in the ritual of religion, but it really has no meaning. They come to Sunday School, but rarely read the lesson before they come. They participate in worship, but idle their time away writing notes, cracking mumbled jokes, drawing pictures, or sleep. The respect some have for moral living extends as far as the eye of the nearest chaperon. For too many, devotion to God is already gone. All is left are the dangling braids of symbolic service, which the world is waiting to snip away.

The power of the Christian life is not in the ritual. It is not in sitting in a Sunday School class, or enduring a worship service, or in singing a hymn that we secretly consider boring. The power is in our devotion to God that is the secret of our strength.

When God is With You

When Samson rose he "wist not" that God had left him. It is a frightening thing for anyone whose talents or skill has been blessed by the power of God and then discover that "something is missing!"

Samson knew instantly what was missing, God had left him!

Brothers and Sisters, terrible things happen in your life if God leaves you!

If God leaves you, your:

—Happiness turns into sadness; Joy turns into sorrow!

—Victories become defeats; Strength turns into weakness!

—Home becomes a house; Husband is reduced to just another man!

—Upward climb becomes a downward fall!

When God is in your life, beyond just rituals and symbolic religion, things are different.

When God was with Saul he conquered enemies and rose to fame, but when God left him, he fell on his own sword!

When God was with David he became a man after God's own heart, but when God left him, he lost the joy of his salvation!

When God is really in your life he takes your:

—Despair and turns it into delight; Failure and turns it into success

—Loneliness and turns it into friendship; Hatred and turns it into love!

—Shame and turns it into glory; sin and turns it into salvation!

Jesus is a mighty powerful God!

Jesus is a very present help in a time of trouble!

Jesus is like American Express you should "never leave home without him!"

No wonder the song writer declares "Without God I could do nothing, without him I'd surely fail. Without him I would be drifting, like a ship without a sail"

Another song writer put it this way: "I don't know what I'd do without the Lord!...I can’t even wave my hand, without the Lord!”

Everyday of my life I’ve got to tell the story!
Tell the world about Jesus!
Tell the world about Calvary!
I’ve got to tell somebody that he died and he lives today!

Who Is This?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "When Jesus came into the coasts of Caesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?" Matthew 16:13

Introduction

Do you ever get the impression that people don't see you the way you see yourself? Is it possible to see yourself as intelligent, while others think you are a lame brain? Is is possible to see yourself as the beauty, while others see you as the beast. Is it possible to see yourself as worthless, while others see you as a diamond in the rough. As a general rule people rarely see themselves as others see them. On some occasions our self concept is directly the opposite of our actions. Sometimes, because we are so close to ourselves, we can't see it, but our friends can. Everyone is curious to know how others perceive them and on occasion seek public opinion. Sometimes we like what we hear. Sometimes we don't.

Consider the townspeople of Donowrong City. They had great pride in the fact that theirs was the only town in America that had fine upright, law abiding, truth telling, God fearing people who did absolutely no wrong. In fact that was their claim to fame. Protecting their image, folks of a different color, religion, or who didn't like chewing tobacco, hunting dogs or blue grass music weren't allowed. They hired no police officers because there was no crime. There were no locks on any doors, no jails and no unrighteousness of any sort. Curious, people from all around came to visit Donowrong City. Here, at last, appeared to be an honest set of people, and folks from everywhere just wanted to see how such a place operated.

One day the people of Donowrong City were upset. Tourists were coming to town and looking at each of them strangely. Sometimes they got in small groups and laughed, much to the consternation of the proud people of Donowrong City.

As days went by and the townspeople found themselves increasingly the object of stares and chuckles. The town mayor mustered enough nerve to ask the visitors what they found so amusing. "It's your sign" said one woman who was truly amused. "What about our sign?" Asked the mayor. The woman laughed as she walked him to the outskirts of the town and showed the town's welcome sign. They mayor read the familiar sign out loud: "Welcome to Donowrong City, population 300, God fearing, bible tot'n, and crime free" But to the mayor's surprise someone had added a hand painted line that read 27 dog, 18 cats, 2 gold fish, and one self righteous hypocrite. Find him if you can"

Outraged, the mayor called all the townspeople together in a meeting. He demanded to know how anyone could insinuate that Donowrong City could have a hypocrite as a citizen. He demanded to know the identity of the person responsible for the line. An old man seated in a corner answered the mayor this way: "If its the truth you seek, in the mirror take a peek, and there you will find the one described in the line."
As Christians we constantly search ourselves to make sure that we are becoming what God wants us to be. We don't claim to be more than we are, but we keep looking at what we will become. Sometimes we are not what we seem. In our weak moments we even doubt ourselves. Then we remember the words of the song that says "Please be patient with me, God is not through with me yet. When God gets through, I shall come forth as pure Gold."

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he enters the coast of Caesarea Philippi, surrounded by his disciples. Constantly plagued by doubters and detractors, there were always people asking "Who is this?

In Luke 5:21 the scribes and the Pharisees asked "Who is this which speaketh blasphemies? Who can forgive sins, but God alone?"
In Luke 9:9 Herod said, "John have I beheaded: but who is this, of whom I hear such things? And he desired to see him."

Even Saul on the road to Damascus, when stricken by a blinding light asked "Who art thou, Lord?" (Acts 9:5) People were always asking "who is this?" They studied Jesus with curiosity, to try to learn who he was and what he came to do.

Christ inquired of those who followed him closely as to their impression of him. The answers Christ received reflected both reluctance and faith. Those who were reluctant, did not tell about their own beliefs but chose to report what others believed while keeping their own beliefs behind a thin veil. The answers were that " Some say that thou art John the Baptist: some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets.(Matthew 16:14). This was interesting because John the Baptist had recently been beheaded by King Herod at the request of a dancer. While John was a vocal personality, preached against wrong doing and baptized, he was not claiming the same things that Christ claimed, which was sonship with God. In all of his great work John claimed no miracles. Elias had been carried to glory in a chariot. He made no great promise of returning, but only left his mantel and a double portion of his miracle working faith to his understudy Elisha. In all of his great works, Elijah never claimed to be a savior, redeemer or a promised Messiah, yet the people thought Jesus was Elias returned. While Jeremiah was a great prophet of ancient Israel whose writings of prophecy about the future of Israel were unequaled, precise and true, there was never any inference on his part that one day he would return.

The comparison between Jesus and these great men indicated what the people saw, which was the superficial and not the great design. They heard the things John the Baptist said, the miracles the Elijah preformed and the prophetic power of Jeremiah and instantly concluded that Jesus must be from this set. They did not see the purpose of any of those they named. Jeremiah prophesied about the sins of Judah and his purpose was to warn them of God's anger. Elijah's purpose was to stand tall for God amidst a generation led by the wickedness of Ahab and Jezebel. John the Baptist's purpose was to announce to an entire generation that the Messiah was coming. He was not the saviour but a forerunner that would bear witness to his coming. Not only did "some" not understand the nature of Jesus' mission, but they didn't understand the prophets and their ultimate purpose either. Jesus was characterized on their level, as one who was doing mighty works and drawing great crowds, like John, Elijah and Jeremiah.

Jesus sensed that his disciples were evading and asked clearly: "But whom say ye that I am?" The answer would have to be personal. Not what others think or say, but what they thought personally. In answer to the question Peter rose to affirm his belief that Jesus was exactly who he claimed to be, the son of God. Whether Peter spoke for himself or for all of the disciples is debatable. What is sure is that he spoke what he believed, that Jesus was the Christ, the son of the living God.

Dual Personalities

Many years ago there was a television program called "To Tell The Truth." It featured three individuals who attempted to fool contestants about their identity. Each would answer questions from contestants that would give clues about their real identity. After a short period the host would ask the "real" one to please stand up. Often the contestants were surprised that the ones they had chosen had successfully fooled them into believing that they were something other than themselves.

Today, the world is asking the question "Will the real Christian please stand up?" When that question is asked there may be a lot of chair shuffling, but only those who are doers of the word of God can really stand.

If we were judged by our conversation, most of us could easily be identified as Christians. In our conversations, bible studies and Sunday School classes, we expound on the theory of Christianity. We speak of love, service to mankind, forgiveness and compassion. These three virtues are indicative of the Christian experience. If we could be identified as Christians by our Sunday school discussions or philosophical exchanges, most of us could "stand up."

However, we are not judged so much by the theory that we subscribe to but by our actions. While there is a level of importance placed upon verbal testimony in scripture, it is expected that our testimony will be backed up by our actions. Emphasizing this point Jesus, in Matthew 7:20-23 said: "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them. Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." The only aspect of our lives that identifies us as Christian is the fact that we are willing to do the will of God. Those who are unwilling to do his will find themselves posing and masquerading as Christians but will be unable to stand up at the final roll call. It's the church in action, carrying out the will of God that identifies us as Christians. It is the church responding to the hunger of the masses with food for both the body and spirit, that shows us to be a people willing to put our faith in action. One of the tell-tale signs of a church's priorities is its budget. The money usually supports those areas that are considered of real importance. Unfortunately, an increasing number of churches expend much of their resources on items not related to service to others. Jesus makes it clear that it is not so much our fine, dignified and orderly worships that will identify us to our Lord but our service to others. That will be the premium. Without service we will stand before the judgment bar and hear the savior say "who is this?" or "I know you not!"

Knowing Jesus

It will be extremely difficult to do the will of God if we do not first know God for ourselves. In no uncertain terms, we must know the master. We must be able to affirm without a doubt that we know the Lord.

Those who know the Lord do not speak from second hand experience. They speak from their own experience. Those who know the Lord do not tell what God has done for their neighbors or friends, they testify of goodness in their own lives.

They testify in the words of the old warriors, "I know the Lord will answer prayer for I tried him for myself!"

Peter stood and answered Jesus with an affirmative response: "Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God!"

Likewise, those who know the Lord can testify to who he is.

Lazarus can testify that he was in a grave for four days, but he heard a voice that spoke to him in death, Lazarus come forth.

The blind man can testify that he met the Lord wandering in darkness, but he touched his eyes and he was able to see.

The lame man can testify that after 38 years of stumbling and trying he found healing for his legs when Jesus told him to take up his bed and walk.

When we answer the question who is this? We should be able to tell the world that he is the one who stepped into our lives and brought:

—Sunshine to replace the rain; noon days to replace the midnights;

—Smiles to replace the frowns; and consolations instead of loneliness

When we meet God and know him for ourselves, sometimes it's hard to explain to others, although we know he's real in our lives. Maybe that's what the song writers had in mind when they wrote: "Yes God is real for I can feel him in my soul!"

Another testified by saying “I met God one morning, soul feeling bad. Heart heavy laden with a bowed down head. He lift my burden and made me so glad. All that I know, there is something within.”

Who is he? He is my all and all!
Who is He? He is the king of kings!
Who is He? He is the Lord of Lords!
Who is He? He is the one who died out on Calvary but rose in glory!
Who is He? They call him Jesus, the lily of the valley, the bright and morning star!
Jesus!
Jesus!
He’s my friend!

When It's Hard To Hold Your Peace

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 8, 1995

SCRIPTURE: And, behold, two blind men sitting by the way side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David. And the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace: but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David.Matthew 20:30-31; And he answered and said unto them, I tell you that, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out Luke 19:40; Let every thing that hath breath praise the LORD. Praise ye the LORD..Psa 150:6

Introduction

Have you ever had a great experience and found that you had to tell somebody! Did you tell your friend? Did you tell a relative a great distance away. The very nature of great moments is that they are worthy of being shared with others. It is difficult to keep a good thing secret! No matter how you try, when something good happens it just comes out. Gold miners in California should "Gold!" In Alaska they should "Eureka!" In Texas they shouted "Oil!" Whatever the source of the joy, it is extremely difficult in such moments to hold your peace.

Consider the children who decided to play church. Imitating their parents, they spent an enormous amount of time arranging the chairs, paying particular care that they were evenly aligned. Once done they sat quietly in their respective areas. Some, with arms folded, looked down. Others stared into space with deep thought and still others sat quietly. After 30 minutes they got up from their chairs, congratulated themselves on how still and proper they sat and went home. The children played church in this manner for quite a while. However, one Sunday their parents happened by and watched them as they sat quietly in their chairs. One parent asked: "Children, what are you doing?" The children answered in a rather formal tone: "Why isn't it obvious, we are playing church?" As they answered the parent noticed that there was one child tied to a chair with a handkerchief in her mouth. When asked to explain, the child responded: "She's one of the noisy Baptists. If we take that handkerchief out of her mouth, she'll be shouting and yelling " praise the Lord" and clapping her hands and will destroy the quietness of our service." At that the children sat and resumed playing church in their dignified way. Twenty-five years later, those same children entered their beautiful church sanctuary. The seats were beautifully arranged. They assumed their positions and quietly listened. But as the minister mentioned the goodness of the Lord, one woman started to moving around. Finally, unable to contain herself she jumped and shouted: "I know we're supposed to be playing church, you can tape my mouth if you want to, I just can't hold my peace, Jesus is real!"

As Christians, we know the joy of the Lord. It is extremely difficult for those who know him to keep it to ourselves. When we think of the goodness of the Lord we can't keep it to ourselves.

Exposition

These passages of scripture illustrate the response of people who have found the Lord in an exciting way.

The text New Testament texts occur on and just before Palm Sunday, the day Jesus entered Jerusalem. Palm Sunday, by tradition, is one week before the resurrection or Easter Sunday.

The two texts illustrate the attitude of people before they find the Lord and after they find the Lord. In Luke 18 Jesus on his way to Jerusalem was followed by a huge multitude. As he walked, he passed a blind man sitting beside the road and immediately the blind man began to shout out "Have mercy on us O Lord!" The blind man shouted so loud that the multitude "rebuked" him and told him to hold his peace. Sensing that he was in the presence of God, the blind man shouted louder and louder. Evidently his shouting made Jesus stand still in his tracks because he stopped and healed the blind man.

The attitude of the multitude that had followed Jesus was philosophical. They followed him to hear the richness of his teaching and out of curiosity. They had seen him bless little children. They had heard his discussion with the rich young ruler. The even listened quietly as he talked of his approaching death. However, after they saw the blind man receive his sight there was a new attitude in this quiet crowd. Verse 43 says after being healed that the blind man followed Jesus glorifying him and praising God. He was making plenty of noise. When the people saw what God had done they no longer told him to be quiet they joined him in praising God themselves for the text says "..the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God."

Their attitude did not change after that moment. They followed him as he made his entry into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday. Luke 19:37 described their deportment in this way: "the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen"; Most of this multitude was the same people who had followed him from Jericho. The quiet folks had become noisy because of what they had seen. It was too wonderful to be constrained by formal rules they noised their joy abroad.

Thus, Jesus in verse 40 said if the multitude, after having seen the great and powerful works of the Lord forced themselves to remain silent that the very rocks themselves would cry out in respect and recognition of his greatness. In saying this, Jesus underscored the utter futility of expecting those who had seen evidence of or have benefited from the power of God to keep silent.

David whose life had been touched by God in a mighty way concluded that everyone and everything on earth should praise God for his mighty works. He suggested that musical instruments, dance and every other form of expressions should lend itself to the praise of God for his excellence and for his greatness. David concluded that everything that hath breath should praise the Lord!

Combined, these texts show that the excellent work of God deserves praise. Noisy praise. Loud praise. For he is great and his mercy endureth forever!

Something to Shout About

Every where Christ went he gave the people something to shout about! They followed him philosophically and marveled at his intellect. However, when they witnessed a mighty out pouring of his work with their own eyes, they had something to shout about! When he came into Jerusalem, they had seen his mighty works and were praising him loudly and openly. He had given them a reason to praise him.

Even today as the Lord makes a triumphant entry into the lives of believers, each of us who know him, has something to shout about. We who have witnessed his power and mighty works close up know that he has done great things for us and in us. We have something to shout about!

The people of Jerusalem shouted because they had witnessed a mighty work of God for themselves.

They shouted “Hosanna” also because they expected Jesus to do even more in Jerusalem.

Similarly, we shout praises to God for what we have seen him do in the past, and because we expect him to do more in the future.

Rituals, tradition and the opinions of society often have the net effect of reducing the praise that saints give to God. Those who have a formal education should be careful that what we have learned in academic circles about order and decorum does not muzzle our ability to praise God. In academia, we sit quietly and listen. We are taught to listen intently, take note, and avoid any verbal responses doing a presentation. At the end of a presentation academia teaches that it is appropriate to with applause and to give standing ovations. When a presentation is exceptionally pleasing, academia suggests that a few shouts of “encore” are tolerable, but not too many.

In religious circles, it gets terribly difficult to praise God by academic standards. Those who have seen his mighty works tend to say “Amen” in places that academically inappropriate but spiritually well placed. They tend to shout their approval of God instantly instead of waiting to the end. Instead waiting until the end of a song to express their appreciation and joy, they sometimes stand during the song, clap their hands, stomp their feet, and sing along! Although academia suggests that the appropriate phrase is “Bravo!” They’d rather say “Praise the Lord.” Instead of “Encore” some saints will yell to the speaker:”Make another round! “When saints who know the Lord come within his presence, they have problems holding their peace. Though they try to follow the rules, it’s just hard to hold your peace!

When it’s Hard to Hold Your Peace

When is it the hardest to hold your peace? It is the hardest to hold your peace when something good has happened in your life and you feel compelled to tell someone.

When Jesus met a man filled with devils and removed them, the man wanted to follow Jesus and tell the world. Although Jesus told him to go home and tell his family what had been done the man just couldn’t keep it to himself. He went home but he told the whole city. (Luke 8:39)

When Jesus met a deaf man who also had a speech impediment he put his fingers in his ears, touched his tongue and healed him. After the healing, Jesus told him not to tell anybody about what was done. However, the man had a problem holding his peace. Mark 7:36 “And he charged them that they should tell no man: but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it;” he couldn’t hold his peace!

These were some of the hardest commands that Jesus gave: to hold their peace! Some did what they were asked, but most found that it was hard to hold their peace!

When the Lord has done a mighty work in your life, it’s hard to hold your peace!

When you have felt the chilly fingers of death creep into your family, and watched how God replaced them with his warm and compassionate hand, it’s hard to hold your peace!

When you have experienced the low side of life and have discovered the joy of salvation, something stirs inside you. Like the woman at the well you want to shout “come see a man!” It’s hard to hold your peace!

When you have failed miserably and the power of God gives you a second chance in life, it’s hard to hold your peace!

When you labor under the burden of life’s heavy load and the power of God lightens your load and lifts your bowed down head, it’s hard to hold your peace!

When you think about the goodness of God, it’s hard to hold your peace!

It’s hard to hold your peace when you remember how the Lord took your:

—Misery and turned it into delight; Failure and turned it into success!

—Weaknesses and turned them into strengths; Fear and turned into courage!

—Sad times and turned them into good times; Sorrow and turned it into joy!

Though the world says keep silent, everything within the saints says: high school diploma or not; college degree or not; PHd or no degree, I’ve got to tell somebody about the goodness of the Lord!

I’ve got to tell somebody about Calvary!

I’ve got to tell somebody that he rose after three days!

As He Said...

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 16, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay." Matthew 28:6

Introduction

Do you know anyone who bit off more than they could chew? "Biting off more than you can chew" is a colloquialism that means a person took on a responsibility he was not able to fulfill. Often we make promises that we cannot keep. These are the times that we say what we'll do later, but know while we are saying it that it can't be done. Whenever we promise to do the impossible or the improbable, we may be guilty of biting off more than we can chew.

While there are some who make promises they can't keep their are others who go out of their way to keep their word. Some have lost their lives, liberty and personal ambitions because they chose to keep their word.

The story is told of a family that moved into a new community. They were promptly visited by two elders and the pastor of a nearby church who cordially invited them to attend the services on the Lord's Day. The man assured them that he would come just when he straightened out. Several months passed, and he still hadn't put in an appearance, so the minister called again and repeated his invitation. But he received the same reply. The fellow hadn't yet gotten everything straightened out, but he'd be there just as soon as he did. A few weeks later he died, and his widow asked to have the funeral services in the church. The preacher graciously agreed. It was indeed a sad affair. Later when a member of the congregation asked the pastor if the man was a Christian, he answered, "He never attended services here, and no one can recall ever hearing him give a testimony of his faith in Christ, so I can't say. I only know he was a man of his word. He promised to come to church just as soon as he got straightened out — and he did!" At least he kept his word.

Exposition

This text focuses on the words of the angels as they told the women who came to the tomb that Christ had kept his word and was truly risen from the grave.

Christ rose from the grave in keeping with his own prophecy that he would rise which was given on numerous occasions. The angels, noting his resurrection, tagged a parenthetical phrase to the end of their pronouncement. “As he said.” This was a reminder to the women that the empty tomb was not by chance, but by design.

Christ said many things with respect to his destiny. Sometimes what he said was vague in nature and could be misunderstood. When the Jews asked him for a sign of his deity, he told them in John 2:19 “..Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.” They mistook what he said to mean rebuilding the temple of Zerrubabel and Herod in three days, when he actually meant reclaiming his life after three days. They may not have understood what he meant at the moment, but his prophecy that he would rise was still true.

While some of what Christ said was vague, there were other things he said about the resurrection that were as clear as day. In Mark 8:31 he told his disciples that after three days he would rise again.”And he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again.” In Matthew 12:40 he said as Jonah was in the belly of the fish for three days and nights so would he stay in the earth.

Even his enemies remembered what he said. In Matthew 27:63 the scribes and Pharisees went to the authorities and pointed out that he said he would be in the grave three days and three nights, therefore they wanted a guard put around the tomb to prevent his disciples from taking his body and claiming that he had risen.

Jesus told his followers and skeptics that his deity would be confirmed by the rabbinical “third day” test. According to Jewish custom, a person’s death was followed by three days and three nights of mourning. They were called the “Days of Weeping.” These three days of weeping were followed by four days of lamentation, making a full week of mourning.

The Rabbis also taught that at death that a person’s spirit walked around inside the tomb trying to get back in his body. After three days however, the spirit left and corruption set in. Death was not officially confirmed until after three days and nights.

Therefore, Jesus said his resurrection would occur after three days and nights to remove any doubts from the minds of skeptics that he had actually died.

Early Sunday morning, after three days and three nights in the grave, Jesus rose, just as he said.

What he promised he delivered.

What Has He Said About Us?

The significance of the resurrection to modern believers is that it confirms that everything that Jesus predicted would happen, concerning his own life. actually happened, just the way he said it would. That is significant because if he had not been able to fulfill prophecy relating to himself, then he will not be able to fulfill promises that he made for to others.

The resurrection proved that Jesus was not simply “biting off more than he could chew.”

Today the resurrection should reassure Christians that the promises Christ has made to believers are not empty but are valid and viable because he has always done exactly what he said

The empty tomb reminded those in Jerusalem that Christ did as he said, today it should remind us that because Christ still lives we have renewed hope that he will do "as he said."

What has he said?

HE WILL SAVE THOSE WHO COME: Anyone that will come to Christ with a commitment to live for him, will be saved. That is what he said. We must openly confess him before other people and then begins the process of our salvation. Matthew 10:32:"Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven.

Mat 10:33 But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven." Jesus made it clear, that regardless our past lifestyle that he is willing and ready to receive us into his kingdom. That's what he said. In fact, speaking to Christians in the Revelation 3:20 Jesus said:" Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

HE WILL BLESS THOSE WHO COME: Those who come to him will be blessed with peace of mind and soul.

Some have misinterpreted what Christ has said with respect to blessings and have become frustrated because of their misinterpretation. They read where Christ said in Mark 11:24 " Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." They heard what they wanted to hear which was "If I ask, I get. If I don't get it must be my unbelief."

Just as it is important for us to know what Christ said, it is also important to know what he did NOT say. Sometimes we get frustrated because we heard only a part of what he said. Consider the man who stood before the judge to be sentenced for his crime. After receiving the pre-sentence investigation that revealed that the man was a fine citizen the judge ruled: "The court finds that the defendant is a fine man who has worked in his church, shown charity to his neighbors, given freely of himself, and has lived honorably. In fact the court is impressed with the defendant's long history of self sacrifice and service to others. The court finds that he is a good man." At that the defendant smiled and started to walk away only to be interrupted by the judge turned the page of his written ruling and said "However, the law is clear about horse thieves. The defendant is sentenced to hang!" The defendant was disappointed. His hopes were hanging on the wrong page. Likewise there are many people who hear some of what Christ says and have their hopes hanging on the wrong page. To know what he said, we must consider all that he said which is sometimes in the next verse or chapter.

What did Christ say about blessing? He didn't say that we can simply ask for anything and then turn around and look for it. We must be willing to lose ourselves in the will of God and willing to forgive others to expect answered prayers. In the very next verses (Mark 11:25-26) Jesus said we must be willing to forgive our neighbors first. In the Lord's prayer he instructed us to pray first that God's will be done "in earth." When we lose ourselves in his will THEN what we ask will be according to his will and we can expect to receive it. John 15:7 If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

The blessing that he promised was not prosperity, perfect health, good looks and a big house. What he promised us was peace of mind and spiritual rest regardless to our circumstance. Matthew 11:28 Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." That's what he said.

The burdens and concerns that we share in this world are too difficult for us to bear alone. Combined with personal weakness, these burdens can be a heavy load. However, Christ has said that those who bring their burdens and concerns to him would find rest.

Significant here is that there is no limitation on how many can bring burdens or on the nature of the burden itself. "All ye that labor" that is inclusive not exclusive. Any one of any race, sex, nationality or creed that is willing to come him will be received equality.

Whatever the nature of the burden, Christ promises a relief to the faithful. If our burden is financial, physical, or concerns relationships with others, those who turn their burdens over to the Lord, find a sweet peace.

No wonder the song writer declared: "If the world from you withhold of its silver and gold and you have to get alone with meager fare. Just remember in his word how he feeds the little bird. Take your burden to the Lord and leave it there."

As he said

Everything that Jesus has said he has done. Everything he has promised he will do, will be done. That's why the resurrection has such meaning to believers. We know the implications for the future, because he lives.

Because he did what he said he would do, we are assured that his promises to us are not in vain.

Because he did what he said we know that our salvation is insured.

Because he did what he said, we know that our joy in him will be unlimited.

Because he did what he said, we know that we are more than conquerers over the enemies of the cross.

When the angels declared that "he is not here he has risen, as he said" it sent a message to the entire world that when the Lord says something you can count on it.

I'm reminded of the old lady who had a reputation for being able to predict the weather. Her grand children counted on grandma's toes help them make it through the seasons. When grandma's little toe quivered it meant a cold spell was coming and the cut a lot of fire wood. When her middle toe quivered it meant a dry spell was coming and they bottled up water expecting a drought. Whenever grandma's big toe quivered, it meant rain was coming. Since they had holes in the roof the children put out the pots to catch the water.

Brothers and sisters I know a man who is much more dependable than grandma's big toe. If he said it, you can count on it!

If the Lord says there's a cold breeze coming, you may as well chop the wood and build fire!

If the Lord says he's going to shower down blessings, you better put your buckets out!

Many people heard him but they didn't listen to what Jesus said.

He said he would be judged and crucified and would die the death of the cross.

Friends it happened just like he said. The crucified him on an old rugged cross. They buried him in borrowed tomb. Just like he said.

He said that after three days and nights that he would rise again.

He said "And I, if I, be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me"

Friends what the angels said that Sunday just confirms that he did just what he said he would do.

That why we sing "He lives, he lives, Christ Jesus lives today, he walks with me and talks with me along life's narrow way. He lives, he lives, salvation to impart. You ask me how I know he lives, he lives within my heart!"

Worthy Of His Hire

SCRIPTURE " For the scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, The labourer is worthy of his reward." 1 Tim 5:18

Introduction

How much should a person who serves a ministry of the church be paid? How much should a minister or professional servant be paid for his service? The value of a minister's service varies depends upon who is doing the evaluation. There are some who believe ministers are overpaid. Others think ministers are not paid enough. Others think they should do just what the word "minister" means "serves" without pay. The answer lies somewhere in between. They should be supported reasonably from the fruits of the ministry, while simultaneously serving without demand for compensation.

The opportunity to serve is both a burden and a gift. It is a burden for those who minister and it is also a pleasure to carry out the will of God in ways that often make great differences in the lives of those who are touched. Those who labor in the ministry should be very careful not to give the impression that they labor for the pay of men rather than the pay of God.

Consider the great preacher who had been sought after to preach across the country. He was in such demand that he had become accustomed to the hundreds of dollars he often received for preaching a single revival. One year the citizens of powater were successful in getting the great preacher to come to their town to preach. Powater was really a poor town. It had very little money. So after the great preacher finished a week of preaching the people passed the hat among them to raise an offering to pay him. They brought him two fine baking hens, a bushel of potatoes and a several jars of preserves. Finally, the local pastor holding all of the offerings in his hand, tied in a handkerchief, made a presentation to the great preacher. "My friend." He said as he began his ceremony. "We are not trying to pay you for all of your fine preaching this week, this is just a token of our appreciation for all of the good things you have said for us this week." After the great preacher received the offering, he peeked into the handkerchief and counted a total of $8.57. He beckoned for the pastor and whispered in his ear. "You said you were not trying to pay me?" The preacher said. The pastor nodded in agreement. The preacher returned the handkerchief and said “Well, I think you’d better try.” With that he made it known that as far as he was concerned the Gospel might be free, except when its delivered first class!

Those who serve in the church do so out of a love for the Lord. We don not serve for thought of pay, praise of promotion. Those who serve God do so out of compelling need to carry out a divine mission. Whatever rewards we receive in the process are incidental. Our real reward comes when we will receive the reward of our Lord upon his return. His “well done” will be all the reward we need.

Exposition

In the Old Testament it was a general rule that the priests and other Levites who worked in the temple or kept the altar were maintained from its proceeds. Numbers 18:24-26 “But the tithes of the children of Israel, which they offer as an heave offering unto the LORD, I have given to the Levites to inherit: therefore I have said unto them, Among the children of Israel they shall have no inheritance. And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, Thus speak unto the Levites, and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up an heave offering of it for the LORD, even a tenth part of the tithe.”

Each person was ordered to give a tenth of their wheat and bread stores (Heave Offerings) for the maintenance of the Levites who were responsible for the maintenance of the worship of God. Since the Levites had no inheritance and spent all of their time maintaining and operating the Tabernacle they were supported by the other 11 tribes that gave to maintain them.

A tenth of all of the heave offerings collected was for the spiritual leader, the high priest.

Not all of the tithes were for the Levites and the Priests, only the Heave offerings were designated for their support. A Heave offering is described in Numbers 15:20-21 Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough for an heave offering: as ye do the heave offering of the threshingfloor, so shall ye heave it. Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave offering in your generations.

It was generally expected therefore that those who spent their lives in the service of the temple should be supported by their work. This support was not restricted to just the priests. The Levitical service involved the ushers and musicians of the temple as well.

The New Testament Teaching

This text focuses on advice that the Apostle Paul gave to Timothy concerning compensation for his services. His advice summarizes the bible’s teaching concerning compensation of those who function as servants in the ministries of the church. His advice also mirrors similar advice Jesus gave as he sent out his disciples in Matthew 10:7-10

"And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give.Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses, Nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves: for the workman is worthy of his meat."

Those who are sent to preach by Jesus himself were charged to preach the Gospel and carry out compassionate ministries that would relieve the suffering of the people. Their chief concern should be to carry out the ministry and not their personal concerns. Therefore, they were told not to busy themselves with concerns of finances or clothing. They were told to receive freely as it is given because the "workman is worthy of his meat."

The idea of receiving freely is echoed by Paul in his advice to Timothy. Those in service of the church preach, teach, and do good works. They work without charge or demand for pay. However, those who perform such work are justified in receiving freely that which is offered them for working in the ministries of the church. The emphasis in both Jesus' statements and those of Paul is on receiving "freely" without demand.

Ministers Travel Light

Those who hear the Gospel are reminded that the minister travels light, often unable to provide for himself or his family like others. He is worthy of the support of believers because of this reason.

When Jesus moved from town to town he carried very little with him. He was supported generally by believers who ministered to him from their substance.

Luke 8:1-3 And it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the twelve were with him,And certain women, which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, out of whom went seven devils, And Joanna the wife of Chuza Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered unto him of their substance.

Every movement Christ made was sustained by individuals who literally gave him everything he needed to survive. He lived in borrowed homes. He Ate in borrowed dining rooms. Was crucified on a borrowed cross. He was even buried in a borrowed tomb.

Those who minister are not required to take vows of poverty to survive, but their concerns are obviously of a higher order. The focus of their energy is to be toward accomplishing their mission. Those who minister to them help them to remain focus as they minister to the ministers from their substance.

Ministers are authorized to live out of the Gospel, but they are not required to do so. Paul, was a tent maker and his general rule was to accept support but not require it. He avoided asking for support so that none would have the opportunity to accuse him of being a money grubber and thus make his "glorying void."

1 Cor 9:14 Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.

Therefore in both the Old and New Testament the support of those who work in the temple or the church is considered ordained and encouraged by God.

In biblical times the Levites handled the cleaning and storing of utensils. Repairing the tent, keeping its doors, storing its wares and attending to the sacrifices and worship.

Today those who work in the church, as a vocation (as compared to an avocation), perform similar tasks within a more modern setting. Those who devote their lives and talents to the service of the church can and should be supported by the church through liberal donations commensurate with the blessings God has bestowed upon the membership.

However, ministers and others should take note of Paul's decision not to ask or demand assistance, lest such demands give Satan a chance to impute bad motives on otherwise sincere efforts.

Worthy Of His Hire

Those who declare the word of God are most certainly worthy of their hire. No wonder the gospels declare: "How beautiful are the feet of them that declare the gospel of peace."

They are worthy of their hire because they bring good news of hope.

He is worthy of his hire because he inspires us to be:

—Happy in a world of sadness; beautiful in a world of ugliness —Optimistic in a world of pessimism; free in a world of bondage!

Every child of God should be grateful that there is a man of God who is willing to boldly declare the good news of how to be:

—Calm in the midst of the storm

—Strong in the face of weakness

—Fearless in the midst of apprehensions!

He is worthy of his hire because the world depends upon him to preach the word of God!

Though people criticize him, he continues to preach the word!

Though storms rise in and out of the church he continues to preach the word!

Though adverse circumstances surround him, he continues to preach the word!

He is worthy of his hire because without wavering he continues to tell the old story!

He tells us about Jesus!

He tells us about Calvary!

He tells us that Jesus is coming again!

He's worthy because he inspires us to keep holding on!

Keep holding on!
Keep holding on!

Why Jesus Wept

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 7, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it"Luke 19:41;"Jesus Wept" John 11:35

Introduction

Have you ever felt like crying? Has there ever been a time in your expience when the weight of the load you carry seems unbearable? Has it brought you to the point of tears? Have you had children to disappoint you? A spouse? Have you ever watched your fondest dream dry up like a raisin in the sun? Have you ever failed miserably and felt humiliated? If so, you probably have reached a point when you felt like crying. That is the point when even the strongest person is emotionally full, the heart wells and the eyes overflow. Whether in public or in private, most people cry sometime.

Often the condition of the world can bring the concerned to tears. Consider the new pastor who was given the tour of the community in which the church was located. As he drove around the neighborhood he was appalled when he saw a neighborhood in spiritual and social decay. After a few months of reviewing the church's budget, program and calendar of activities, one day the pastor started to cry, seemingly without reason. In the church office he stood and stared out the window and cried, almost daily.

Finally a deacon, concerned about the sad state of his pastor approached him and asked: "Brother pastor, why are you crying. Every day you stand and you look out that window and you cry. What is wrong?" The pastor stared out the window and said:"Look at what is around us. There are prostitutes on the streets. Drugs are being sold in front of our eyes. Alcoholism is rampart. Violence is growing. Children are making babies. Homes are being destroyed. People are living in card board boxes. People are scavenging for food in trash cans. It's terrible." The preacher started crying again. The deacon, trying to console him said "Oh don't let that bother you brother pastor, you'll get use to it, we have!" The pastor dried his eye and said "It's not the trouble outside that makes me cry, it's the fact that God's people have gotten use to it, that brings a tear to my eye!"

As Christians we should always be concerned about the plight of our community and the well being of others. Poverty, ignorance, and oppression should prompt tears of sadness. But just as adverse circumstances bring us tears of sadness we know that compassionate people who act in faith and love can turn the tears of sadness into the tears of gladness.

Exposition

This text focuses on two instances in which Jesus openly wept and why. As Jesus prepared to make his entrance into Jerusalem he paused outside of the city and was moved at the sight. The emotional expression that follows was directed at Jerusalem proper but was an indirect expression of sympathy for all of the Jewish people. His entrance into Jerusalem would mark his final days on earth. For three years he had preached to the Jews about the kingdom of God and the coming kingdom of heaven but they did not listen. He offered them the opportunity of the coming kingdom before it was offered to others, but they constantly rejected all that he offered them. He offered Israel the opportunity of the royal priesthood exclusively. Categorically, however, they rejected him and turned him down. The opportunity for spiritual greatness had been within their grasp and they had failed to seize it.

Jesus referred to their missed opportunity on two different parts of this text. In Luke 19:42 "Saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes." In essence Jesus said, in this your day, if you could have seen all of the great things God had in store for you, but now never will. It was a great opportunity for the nation. Israel missed its opportunity because of its lack of faith in either the man or the plan. Some could not bring themselves to see him as anything more than the little boy who worked in Joseph's carpentry shop on the dusty streets of Nazareth. They never received him as the Son of God. Others never believed he was the Messiah, simply the reincarnation of a great prophet of the past. They rejected the man. Others surrounding him received him as the man of God but they couldn't believe in the plan. He wanted to establish the kingdom of God in the hearts of men. They wanted to establish it with sword and spear. Even among those who surrounded him there was at least one who couldn't believe the plan and caused so much trouble in the group that it resulted in Jesus' crucifixion.

Their lack of faith in either the man or the plan, kept them from seizing the great opportunities that lay before them. Luke 19:44 "because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation" is a phrase that repeats the idea of missed opportunity. They failed to act at the time God made the opportunity available to them and the glory of the city would be lost.

John gives us the second instance when Jesus wept. Because the occasion was the death of Lazarus, a great friend of the master's, many suppose that he wept in this instance because Lazarus was dead. However, we only need to read a few verses before this to learn that Jesus wept, but it was not because of Lazarus. Beginning at John 11:23 Jesus spoke to Martha about the resurrection. It is shown here that Martha accepted that there would be a resurrection in the life to come, but she had not fully accepted Christ as the source of the resurrection's power. That disappointed him. Later, when he met Mary and saw that she was weeping and all of her neighbors were weeping while looking at the power of the resurrection. That trouble Jesus so much that he "groaned in the spirit"(v33.) Since he knew he was about to raise Lazarus from the dead, there was no reason for him to weep over Lazarus, that would have been a waste of tears. It was their unbelief that prompted him to tears in verse 35.

Thus these texts suggest that both instances in which Jesus wept were prompted by the failure of the people to grasp divine opportunity and to exercise complete faith in him.

Missing Opportunity

Nothing makes you want to cry more than knowing that you missed a great chance. That is why Jesus cried for Israel and that is also why many people today are weeping. There are parents who are groaning in the spirit over children that are missing the golden opportunities that youth represents. They see youth squandering their health, failing to perform in school and generally accepting mediocrity as their standard and it makes them feel like crying.

Jesus called this moment in this text "thy day" and "thy visitation." Certainly, in every life there is a great day or period of opportunity. There is a time when God is providing opportunities, connections and chances in your life, like he never has before. It's that one period in which everything that needs to fall into place does. For Israel it was a chance to be sole heirs to the kingdom of God. For believers today opportunities present themselves in many ways, but those special moments are lost by so many who "drop the ball."

When the Lord visits he often comes to bring blessings and opportunities. We must be ready to seize upon those opportunities whenever they appear. The window of opportunity, called "thy visitation", does not stay open permanently for any given blessing. The young man blessed with athletic skills has a window of time that he can seize his chance. Soon both time and circumstance will close that window. Whether in sports, business or in our personal lives, there are special times that or "visitations" that represent our big chance. The question is whether we will have the courage and faith necessary to seize the moment. While one person may receive thousands of blessings from God, except for salvation, it is rare to find the same window of opportunity open twice for the same person.

Believers have special "windows of opportunity" too. These represent the times when God has positioned both time and circumstance to make it possible for a believer's prayer to be answered. When God opens the window and pours out your blessing don't be afraid to grab it before it passes by! There is a good chance that while there will be other blessings, this blessing may not avail itself again.

Nothing is sadder than watching a believer miss an opportunity because he or she lacks the faith to act when it is time to act. These are moments when God puts everything in place for you to advance in life, but you fail to seize it because you thought you would fail. Did you ask God for blessing? Is it hovering in front of you? What stops you from acting upon it, except your disbelief? Unbelief can diminish our blessings. The people of Nazareth were desperately in need of the Lord's mighty works, but he couldn't do much at home because of their unbelief. (Matthew13:58) It is fruitless to ask God for a blessing, live according to his will, then be blessed with an answered prayer and then lose it because, taking it requires a giant leap of faith.

When Israel failed to act in faith, Jesus wept.

When Mary and Mary failed to act on their faith, Jesus wept.

When we fail to seize our opportunities, carefully prepared in heaven, our Lord weeps.

Tears of Joy

There are many who work in the vineyard who become frustrated as they watch opportunities missed. They shed secret tears of despair as they ponder what could have been. There are many mothers, spouses and concerned that have shed tears of concern over the part of Jerusalem that lives within their walls. Moreover there are even some that have shed tears of frustration over the failure of the organized church to seize its opportunity. The tears are flowing like rivers from tear stained eyes.

In the midst of our despair there is a word of hope. David said in Psalm 126:5-6 "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him. No wonder the song writer wrote: "We shall come rejoicing bringing in the sheaves!"

In Psalm 30:5 David put it another way: "...weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

Thank God for the morning!

In the midnight sadness is everywhere, but in the morning, sadness will become gladness

In the midnight weakness is everywhere, but in the morning, weakness because strength!

In the midnight sorrow is everywhere, but in the morning, sorrows shall be changed to joy!

Saints of God, dry your weeping eyes, lift up your heads, there is a blessing on the way, be ready to receive it.

Mighty things can happen if you believe. If you believe:

Mountains can be made into molehills; Valleys can be exalted

Rough places can be made smooth; Crooked places can be made straight!

I don't know about you, but I've decided to step out on faith, that with God all things are possible!

Only believe!

Only believe!

All things are possible, if you only believe!

The Jocebed Syndrome

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:" Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee? "And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother. Exodus 2:7-8

Introduction

Do mothers ever stop being mothers? No matter how old children get they never seem to out grow the need for mothering. Somehow, no matter how old they are mothers never seem to forget how the art of "mothering." From a thousand miles away mothers give instructions to their children over the phone. And even when they can't be seen their spirits seem to hover in hidden places, reminding, admonishing, and encouraging. The qualities of motherhood are universal and they are never forgotten once learned.

Regardless to what people think a woman never loses her motherly instincts. They are God given. Consider the time the women's committee paid a visit to sister Lucy who lived down by the creek. The committee of young women had heard a lot about Sister Lucy back in the days. The folks said although she was a kind of wild she was nevertheless a very good mother in her time. When they came to the porch they saw an old lady in rocker and mistook her for Sister Lucy. The lady said, you must mean want my mother "big Lucy" she's down by the creek taking a bath. The women on the committee said "Isn't it a bit dangerous for her to be taking a bath by herself she must be about 100 years old." Little Lucy said "well you got the age right, but she got to take a bath today, she's getting married." Surprised the committee members said "Isn't that a little too old to be getting married?" Little Lucy responded "It ain't like she wants to get married but she wants to be a mother again before he got too old!"Big Lucy.. there were some things about life she never forgot.

As Christians we know that godly women have a divinely inspired instinct for mothering. It is a gift from God and is characteristic of all women who fear the Lord. It does not wither with time and is the same through all generations. Good mothers around the world share the same common traits when they humble themselves before God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jocebed, the mother of Moses as she acted in blind faith to put her son in the hands of God.

Historically Israel was a subject nation of the African nation called Egypt at the time of this writing. For nearly 400 years Israel had been the subject of its African oppressors. God heard their cries for deliverance and sent them a deliverer in the person of a baby child. Hearing that a deliverer was to be born among the Jews, Pharaoh ordered every new born male child of the Jews to be drowned in the river. Babies by the hundreds and thousands were drowned in the river. In face of the penalty of disobedience to the Pharaoh, an entire generation of men was drowned in the river, except for the child Moses.

Jocebed was the wife of Amram, a Levite, whose outstanding faith and trust in God, resulted in the birth of a Son that changed the course of history for her people. The way God worked in this mother's life and her response reveals to other mothers the mysteries of God's providence. Jocebed was a woman of poor means, living in the most difficult period of Jewish History. She was a slave woman who became famous for example of motherhood and trust in God.

"A Goodly Child"

Jocebed recognized the child Moses as being a "goodly child." The term "goodly" is used as an adjective. It suggests that the child Moses was fair to look upon and exceptionally fine. It is a word used sparingly to describe a person who posesses gifts that far exceed those naturally expected. In 1 Samuel 9:2 Saul is called a "goodly" man. In 1 Samuel 8:16 the finest, most promising young men of the kingdom are called "goodliest." A goodly child is one that has been especially favored by God.

When Jocebed saw her son she recognized his potential as a "goodly" child and decided to risk her own life and that of her other son Aaron, to protect her new born. She saw beyond the tiny infant withering on a Hebrew blanket. She saw beyond the bundle of nakedness that lay in her arms. She saw the child's "goodliness."

This is the first aspect of the Jocebed syndrome, the ability to see the potential of her children. This characteristic of Jocebed's nature is shared by every godly mother. Somehow God allows her to see and to appreciate the inherent value, worth and potential of her children. Long before the world knew that the boy Samuel would grow to be a powerful Judge of Israel, his mother Hannah knew there was something special about him. She took him and gave him to prophets for training and education. She didn't know exactly what but she sensed he was destined for greatness. Elizabeth knew that the son she bore was destined for greatness. God had shown it to her. When that young man grew to be John the Baptist she publicly rejoiced over what she privately knew all along, he was something special.

Good mothers are imbued with this unique sixth sense, the ability to perceive and sense the potential of their children. It is a quality so characteristic of good mothers that King Solomon could resolve a dispute between quarreling mothers by ordering that a living baby be cut in half and instantly gauge the response of the true mother. Even Pharaoh's midwives, who were mothers themselves, found it impossible to carry out his orders to destroy all new born male children. As they looked upon every newborn child, though it was Hebrew, they saw its potential worth, although the Pharaoh only saw its potential danger to the nation.

Sensing the propensity for greatness of every child, good mothers would rather face humiliation and banishment rather than abort the chance for their children to realize their potential. This was circumstance of Hagar who acted as a surrogate mother for Abraham. Even though her role as a surrogate conditioned her estrangement from her employers she nurtured her son Ishmael in exile. Though he did not become the heir to Abraham, he nevertheless became great. She knew it before others could see it. It is a trait of character peculiar to good mothers and separates these from those who simply wear the title of "mother."

Never would the real mother lose sight of the potential of her children. The real mother sees the potential doctor in her child, not the devil. She sees the king not the con artist. She sees the inherited beauties of her children and ignores the ever present flaws that are conditioned to all humanity. Consider the old sharecropper mother who lived in backwoods in real tough times. She had never heard of electricity, rode in an automobile or used modern conveniences. She understood things plainly. She raised her twelve sons with an iron hand. She taught them to bear responsibility for their mistakes, but most of all to live respectfully. One day after her sons had become men, the Sheriff brought one home in handcuffs. He had been sentenced and was being brought home to see his mother. She was relieved to learn that even though her son was guilty of a grave offense at least they wern't going to hang him. The Sheriff mumbled some words she couldn't understand. The old Sherrif asked the mother to say a few last words to her son and the mother grabbed her son by the ears: "If I told you once I told you a thousand times, have some respect about yourself. Now go on down there and get yourself electrocuted and when you come home, act like you got some sense!" Her life is spent cultivating the potential even in the presence of failing, fragile human performance. It's the Jocebed syndrome in every mother that prompts those whose children rank among society's worst offenders as a "good boy." Such mothers cannot help it. It is a part of their nature.

Her Ingenuity

The second aspect of the Jocebed Syndrome is Ingenuity. In the face of danger, this mother exhibited a trait that is characteristic of good mothers in all generations, that of ingenuity.

What were the odds of successfully guiding a child condemned to death by the circumstance of birth, to a full life? They were slim to none. Yet despite the odds Jocebed found a way to bear the child in silence and to nurse and keep in it absolute seclusion for three months. How she managed to silence its cries in the midnight is not explained. How she managed to work in brick quarries or fields by day and make it home to care for her child by night without being detected is not told. All we know is that she found a way.

When it became obvious that she would be unable to care for the child she thought up an ingenious plan to save the child's life. She did it by constructing an ark and placing the child in it for safe keeping, with the child's sister not far behind for safe keeping.

It was an example of the spirit of ingenuity that is unique to every good mother. Somehow the good mother will find a way to help her children. It is the spirit of the Shunammite woman whose son died on her lap after complaining of a headache. When others were mourning and wailing she lay her son on a bed and went looking for Elisha. When others asked all she would respond to their questions was "it is well." When she was penniless and hungry this woman refused to give up and God filled her empty vessels. When her son died she refused to take no for an answer and her son was given new life. (1 Kings 4)

Good mothers search for ways to provide for their children. It is instinctive. Throughout the generations good mothers have scratched for food, begged, borrowed and even compromised themselves for the benefit of their children. Many children wear new shoes on their feet while their mothers feet are nearly bare. Many girls wear new dresses to school and college without noticing how rarely their mother's get new clothing items. Many children realize their dreams, which are sometimes financed by a mother who sacrifices her dream for that of her children. Such mothers cannot help but to respond in this way. It is the nature of all true mothers that exhibit the Jocebed syndrome.

Trust in God

The third and most important characteristic of the good mother is her unfaltering trust in God. It is the key component of the Jocebed syndrome.

When she could do all that she knew how to do for her child, Jocebed placed Moses in the very river that she had protected him from. When she sat the basket afloat however she was not releasing him to an unprotected unguided and uncertain future, she placed her child in the hands of God.

In God's hands the little ark floated right to the very point where Pharaoh's daughter was bathing. It could have tangled in the bush or sank, but in God's hand the river that would have drowned him three months earlier, carried him to a caring spirit.

Similarly, every good mother knows that there is just so much that she can do for her children.

She can teach them and train them, but only so much.

She can carry them and push them, but only so far.

Despite her best efforts to protect or son or daughter from the rising tide of social dangers, the good mother knows that there comes a point when she must set her child afloat on the waters life, trusting in God to provide for and protect them.

The good mother trusts God continuously. It comes as second nature to her because she, like all other good mothers has the Jocebed syndrome.

Thats why Hebrews 11:23 points to faith and trust as the salient element of the Jocebed experience. You must trust in God.

In a world where confusion is primary and peace is secondary, you must trust in God.

In a world where children are being stolen from cars, abducted from playgrounds and made the stars of backroom porno movies, you must trust in God.

In a world where drug dealers are selling death, our daughters are prostituting on street corners and children see gangsters as role models, you must trust in God.

When you trust in God:

—The impossible become possible; The improbable become probable

—The unsolvable becomes solvable; The unreachable becomes reachable —That which is beyond reach is brought a little closer

—That which is too low is raised a little higher

No wonder the song writer wrote:"I trust in God wherever I may be, on mountain peak or on the stormy sea. Though come what may from day to day, my heavenly father watches over me!"

No mother can make it, if she doesn't keep her hand in God's hand!

No mother can make it unless she first learns how to lean on the everlasting arms.

I learned how to lean and depend on Jesus. I found out if I trust him, he will provide!

Lean on Jesus!

Lean on Jesus!

Lean on Jesus and he will provide!

SCRIPTURE:And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them. And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed." Acts 16:25-26

Introduction

Have you ever been jailed? Most church people instantly respond with pride:"I have never been to jail a day in my life." Many boast that the closest they have ever been to jail is on monopoly board when they drew a card that read "Go to jail. Go directly to jail. Do not pass Go. Do not collect $200.00" What if the question was revised to ask "Have you ever done something that could have put you in jail if you had been caught, convicted or not well connected?" Phrased that way, most of us instantly recognize that it is only the grace of God that has kept us from being locked up. While we may have never been to jail, most of us have committed at least one jailable offense in the course of our lives.

While imprisonment is a reality, it is also a state of mind. There are many who have never been inside a penal institution but they daily live in prison, chained, shackled and locked behind bars of fear, apathy, addiction, hatred, inner suffering and hopelessness. These prisoners are not chained arm and leg, locked away in a cold cell at night and scourged to the chain gang by day. These prisoners appear to be free, but inwardly condemned.

It is difficult to get a person in jail to admit his guilt. It appears that everyone and everything is responsible for the prisoner's confinement except himself. Consider the judge who awakened in the middle of night when he heard a voice that told him there was a man he should free from jail. The man's name was not given. He was told that he would know him when he came upon him and know he deserves to be free. The judge dismissed the thought but couldn't sleep. Then one day the judge decided to do the unthinkable, he took off his robe and decided to visit the prisoners one by one. He spent an entire week listening to the stories of prisoners. As his week was almost ended he was amazed that every prisoner he talked to said he was innocent. Some blamed their confinement on their lawyers. Some blamed the crooked police force, unbalanced juries, lying witnesses, poverty, and mistaken identity. Some even blamed the judge himself for their imprisonment. That made the judge's job hard, he had to free someone but all of them claimed they were wrongfully accused. As he was leaving the judge saw one prisoner who sat the corner of cell privately reading a bible. He asked the man to explain his circumstance. The man answered: "I am here because I committed a crime. I deserve to be here. I am doing my time." The judge discovered the man had been found guilty of stealing food to feed his children and was a model prisoner. Instantly the judge signed an order to have him freed. When asked to explain his reason the judge said: "I talked to over 100 prisoners and all of them claimed innocence. I'm releasing him because it seemed wrong to have a guilty man locked up with all those innocent people." For this man, the first step to being free was to admit that he was guilty.

As Christians we rejoice in the knowledge that our Lord has freed us from the bondages of this world. We give him praise and thanks for giving us the truth of his word and that truth makes us free.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul and Silas during their stay in Phillipi. During this time he ministered to three types of imprisoned people and led each to a greater life in Christ.

LYDIA: (Acts 16:13-15) Was a prominent merchant woman who was from the city of Thyatira. She was generally a well to do person who had become a new convert to the Jewish faith, abandoning the idol worship customary to her community. Paul stumbled upon her down by the river bank praying. He found her to be a religious woman with an open heart and mind. He told her about Jesus and instantly she was freed from the bondage of religious ritualism. She became his first convert to Christianity in Phillipi.

POSSESSED SLAVE GIRL:(Acts 16-18) They also met a possessed slave girl that followed them around shouting that they were men of God that would save people from their sins. The words were correct but she was motivated by a demonic spirit that was attempting to turn their work against them. Paul and Silas recognized that she could not help herself. Her actions were being directed by Satan within her. They turned and rebuked the devil within her and set her free.

JAILER IN JAIL(Acts 16:19-40) Because their preaching and revival efforts were saving souls, the merchants of the city complained that Paul and Silas were bad for business. They were beaten and thrown into prison. Even there they were placed in the inner dungeons and their feet were locked in stocks. They were prisoners but were not in prison. They were locked up but not locked out. They were guarded by a man who did not know Jesus. He was not in prison but he was a prisoner. He was not locked up but yet he was locked out of the favor of God.

Though their feet were in stocks and bonds, Paul and Silas prayed and sang at midnight. The Lord heard their prayer the jail house began to rock and shake. The stocks that held them came loose. The jail doors began to open and the bands that held them were loosed.

What is significant here is that every person in prison that night was freed from what really held them. What flaws of character that may have plunged them into jail were removed and they were set free. Verse 16:26 says "And everyone's bands were loosed." Not only were the bands of Paul and Silas loosed but all those who had heard their preaching, prayer and singing had been touched and loosed from what really kept them in bondage." Had this not been the case, the doors would have been opened and every prisoner would have made a break for freedom. However, when the jail house rocked and the doors were opened, not a single prisoner ran for freedom.

The jailer was afraid of the consequences of his eventual report, that all of the men had escaped and prepared to take his own life. Acts 16:28 "But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm: for we are all here." They were all loosed from that which really bound them which was sin! The jailer himself came to accept Christ as his savior. His family believed and they were all loosed from the individual prisons because of what happened the night the jail house rocked.

Freedom To Live

Many people today are walking prisoners. They are free, but yet they are not free because they cannot move freely.

What shackles keep us from achieving that which we desire? What walls really confine us. Most often we are held back by prisons we have designed.

Prisoner of Fear. Fear is a great prison that has kept many people locked out of their future. The great blessings that God has in store for so many are never realized because they have locked themselves into tiny cells with bars marked "We can't" protected by the guards of doubt.

Prisoner of Passion. These are those who are confined to the narrow cells of life because their passions have restricted them. The dope addict is a prisoner of drugs. The alcoholic is a prisoner of his insatiable taste for alcohol. Millions are condemned to the dungeons of ill health brought on by their addiction to nicotine. Some are prisoners of hate. It locks them out of the future because they would rather not succeed that succeed with the help of an enemy. Some are prisoners of greed, neglecting all that is important in life to achieve more and get more. Some of us are prisoners to debt. Our desire for material things has built a towering wall of statements, invoices and credit card due bills around us. We owe so much now that the very home we work so hard to pay for is becoming our prison.

Prisoners of Tradition. Many people can't move forward because they are comfortable moving in circles. They are creatures of tradition. While there is a certain element of desirable security and constancy in traditions, there are many that cannot make a non-traditional move and are doomed to spend their lives within the shadow of past progress which is the essence of tradition. Consider the seven caterpillars that marched in a circle around the top of the flower pot. They moved with vigor and excitement around the flower pot. After a week of marching the only accomplishment they had made was plenty of movement, but they had actually gone no where.

Progress requires getting off the beaten path. It requires us to dare to march to the beat of a different drummer. Those who sentence themselves to the traditional will never build the better mouse trap that leads the world to your door.

Prisoners of ungodliness. People who do not know God, are actually spiritual prisoners. They constantly feel defeated. They constantly feel like failures. They are prisoners of Satan who keeps them locked away from the goodness of God. That's why it's important for believers to know that those who are imprisoned today are really prisoners of Satan. The ultimate solution is for those behind bars to know the redemptive power of God and to be set free from their criminal tendencies. Buildingmore and bigger jails contains the problem without a propensity for resolution. Those who want to be really free must come to know the Lord.

In the solitude of the night the guard and the prisoners of this text came to know Jesus. When the Jailhouse Rocked, they truly became free.

For Every Jail House, There Is A Rock

A generation ago the late Elvis Presley sang a popular tune called the "Jail House Rock" but today brother and sisters we've come to offer you a jail house rock. Not a hit record or popular movie, but a word of hope that says for every jail, there is a rock!

For every jailhouse of fear, there is a rock! Psalm 27:1 "The LORD is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?.." for every jailhouse there is a rock!

For every jailhouse of weakness, there is a rock! Isaiah 40:31 "But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint." For every jail house there is a rock!

For every jailhouse of danger, there is a rock! Psalm 27:5 "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock."

I know there is a rock because Psalm 62:7 says " In God is my salvation and my glory: the rock of my strength, and my refuge, is in God. For Every jailhouse, there is a rock!

Joseph was in a jailhouse codemned in his innocence, but he found out that even in an Egyptian jail house, there is a rock!

Daniel was locked up by Nebuchadnezzar, but he continued to pray three times a day. Nebuchadnezzar found out that even in a Chaldean jail house, there is a rock!

Paul and Silas were locked away in a Philippian jail but they began to sing and pray. I don't know which one prayed and which one sang, but the power of their testimony touched the hearts of all who heard.

At midnight, the jail house rocked! Cells began to shake, rattle and roll!

It was a case of the jail house being rocked by the rock!

This rock is Jesus! Yes he's the one!

Be very sure, your anchor holds and grips the solid rock!

Doing A New Thing

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:Isa 43:19 Behold, I will do a new thing; now it shall spring forth; shall ye not know it? I will even make a way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert.

Introduction

Have you ever started something new? How did you feel? Many people are uneasy when they begin a new endeavor. The prospect of facing the unknown makes them anxious and uncertain, despite their excitement. Whether its changing jobs, starting a business, moving to a new city or graduating to a new level of life, new starts are unsettling. When a senior faces the prospect of graduation and becoming a freshman again, that's unsettling. When a college scholar finally gets a diploma in hand and faces the full responsibilities of adulthood for the first time that's unsettling. Whatever the situation, there is a delicate mix of anticipation and anxiety present at the start of any new venture.

No matter how familiar we are with the path we have traveled, at certain points along the way, it becomes necessary to travel and unknown road. Consider the little rabbit that was comfortable in the wood. He knew his way around despite the predators he lived with daily. He felt himself safe and secure. Each day he hopped along the same trail to find himself fresh foliage and food. His was a serene and safe life, free of fear. One day he heard the coyotes, bears and other big animals having a meeting. They made a truce and decided it would make the forest safer if they would stop eating each other. In return, they agreed to share the smaller animals. Each began to tell of available morsels in their sector of the woods. The food pool would consist of possums, coons, and squirrels. The little rabbit became alarmed when he heard Bro. Bear say "In this part of the woods we have plenty of rabbits. They all hop along this trail every day. We'll contribute rabbits that's what we'll do." Hearing that, the little rabbit became alarmed. He didn't know what to do. He'd either make some changes or end up a rabbit stew. For days the bears sat waiting for the rabbit to hop along. But no matter how they waited, the rabbit had come and gone. After months the bear spotted the rabbit, down in a vegetable patch. He yelled, "I've missed you hopping along your familiar path, come share some soup I've made a fresh batch!" The little rabbit wiggled his nose and raised an ear, and spoke loudly so all could hear: "I've hopped that path and done it without fail, but there comes a point when we have to blaze a new trail!" At that the rabbit hopped off again, leaving Bro. Bear with an empty pot and a stomach full of pain. Sometimes it's better to take a new path.

As Christians, we walk confident and comfortable that despite our direction in life that God will make a way. Whether there are dangers or obstacles, we trust in him. His word has said: "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths." Proverbs 3:6

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he reminds Israel of God's promise to be with them in return for their faithfulness.

Much of Isaiah's prophecy deals with warning Israel to trust in God rather than its own devices, political allegiances, knowledge or ways. The nation faced the prospect of destruction at the hand of the Assyrian army. The Assyrians were a devastating world power. They were destroying all that came in their path. Israel spent decades trying to secure themselves against possible attacks by the Assyrians. Israel made alliances with Egypt and other smaller countries. It built its own military army to its maximum potential. Israel rested upon what it had learned and its connections in the world of diplomacy to protect the nation.

However, they heard from the prophet Isaiah that they should not depend heavily upon the alliances, knowledge or their military strength, but to "wait on the Lord." His constant theme was let "the Lord lead you."

To reassure them, Isaiah began to remind them of the great wonders God had done for them in the past. He reminded them how God had made a path for them that carried them through the red sea and across the desert. He urged them to look back at the victorious journey of their ancestry and take heart because that same God was still with them with undiminished power and ability.

This chapter of Isaiah focuses on his attempts to show the people the mighty acts God has done for them in the past and to point them to the future. His purpose is to reassure them that their future is safe in his hands. Isaiah 43:2 is a clear example of God's words of hope to them, "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee." It is both a prophetic statement and a vision of hope. It is a statement of fact because it suggests that there would be a time when Israel would pass through the water and walk through the fires of life. It is prophetic because of the assurance in his words: "I will be with thee."

After rehearsing how God's power had been displayed in times past and reminding them of how God broke the powers of mighty nations opposing them in the past (v17) God tells Israel at verse 18 not to dwell on the past, because he would do a new thing for the people. Just like he had blazed a path for their forefathers he was about to do a great thing in their lives as well. God promised to "..I will even make a way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert." (v19)

These were references to his great work with their ancestors in providing food, clothing and protection for them while they wandered for 40 years in the wilderness. During this time they completely depended upon God who provided the bread from heaven every day and meat. When they were thirsty God provided water for them that flowed from a rock like a mighty river. That is what he did in the past. The fact that he was talking to a new generation is evidenced by the phrase "I will." The wilderness experience was sure to come, but promised to sustain them regardless to the difficulty of the journey even to the point of providing for their food, clothing and shelter in life's wilderness, and rivers of waters to satisfy their thirsts.

This 43rd chapter of Isaiah is important to believers because it recalls God's promise to Israel and to every believer faced with the prospect of the unknown, that whatever the circumstance, those who trust in him will find that God will make a way.

A Way In The Wilderness

The not so distant future is certain to be a challenge, even for the strongest. If a wilderness is a place of diminished opportunity, hot and difficult sands, and sweltering adversity, then it will be a challenge, but not an impossible challenge. Young African-Americans who plunge into the wilderness must approach their journey with the wisdom of the Bro. Rabbit: "Knowing what to do to keep from ending up in the stew."

Personal Discipline: The immediate challenge to most young adults is that of personal discipline. This refers to the capacity to do that which is necessary to achieve a desire goal. For years, most youth have been disciplined by their parents who stand guard of their roughly undisciplined lives. It has been parents who pushed them out of bed, kept them from wasting time, plunged them into one goal oriented activity after another and kept them going. For the most part, the ever watchful eye of parents has been the stimulus for controlled behavior. There is a point however, in which each person assumes control of their own destiny, sets their own wake up call, decides their own course and assumes responsibility for their own lives. The freedom that accompanies young adulthood is accompanied by the awesome responsibility of living a disciplined life.

Many people define a well disciplined person by what is not done. Those who do not drink, smoke, curse, steal or deal in drugs are considered disciplined. Those who are not rowdy, not drunkards or rude, may also be considered well disciplined. However, discipline also deals with developing an ordered life that is characterized by the things actually done. The disciplined person provides time for himself to think, pray and plan. The disciplined person can set a goal and move toward it with wavering until it is accomplished.

Those priveleged to pursue a higher education should discipline themselves to read extensively. Read the classics, literature, history. Read the works and biographies of the great people in your chosen profession. Study, critique, observe, improve upon every idea you find.

Biblical terminology refers to discipline as leading an "ordered" life. An ordered life is one in which each step made is according to the will of God. Psalm 37:23 "The steps of a good man are ordered by the LORD: and he delighteth in his way." To be well disciplined we must also discipline ourselves to study the word of God and keep his praise on our lips. That is the only way he can order our steps.

Fearless in the Wilderness. Young adults should not be intimidated by their wilderness years. The wilderness years represent the first four or five years of majority. It's the period between childhood and adulthood. It's a time of uncertainty, changes, and self development. It is a time of spiritual purification and rethinking. It took Israel 40 years in the wilderness to get ready for the great things God had in store for the nation. It took Jesus 40 days in the wilderness to get his priorities straight. It takes the average youth four years in the wilderness to come to know himself.

During this wilderness experience you will learn much, receive your greatest challenges and make decisions that will either make a better you or land in the stew. At first the responsibilities of adulthood will begin to seem awesome. For the first time you will have bills to pay, diminished time, and the self-imposed pressure to succeed. At times the wilderness will seem hot, dry and life threatening. However, you should not be intimidated by the wilderness. Approach the wildnerness with fortitude and courage, knowing that on the otherside is the promised land of opportunity and success.

God will make a way

For Israel the prospect of the wildnerness was both a challenge and an opportunity. It was a challenge of their faith and an opportunity for God to reveal himself in their lives.

There are three times a person needs to be especially close to God: At the wilderness, at the river and at the cross. At the wilderness of uncertainty he is unsure about the future. At the river of death he is uncertain about the life hereafter.

But Before we call on God at the wilderness or seek him at the river, we need to meet the Lord at the cross.

Before any man or woman attempts to cross the wilderness of life he needs to be sure he has met the Lord at the cross.

The challenge is to remember that what God did for your mother or grandmother, he will do for you!

What God did for the grand father and your father, he will do for you!

God has brought our families through the wilderness of oppression and hard times.

He has brought through slavery, depressions and world wars!

He's bought us from a nomadic life of moving from place to place and set our feet on solid ground.

He's put food on our table and clothes on our backs.

But what God did for our parents, he will do for us! No wonder the song writer declared "It is no secret what God can do. What he's done for others, he'll do for you.

With arms wide open he'll pardon you. It is no secret what God will do."

As you begin your journey through the wilderness of life, remember the Lord will make a way!

In the wilderness of:

—Despair, I know the Lord will give you hope!

—Weakness, the Lord will give you strength!

—Danger, the Lord will guide you to the other side. No wonder the song writer declared "Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land!"

—Sorrow, the Lord will bring you comfort! "Beneath his wings of Love abide God will take care of you!"

It doesn't matter whether you are in the wilderness or on the mountaintop.

It doesn't matter whether you are doing a new thing or the same old thing.

If you call on the name of Jesus! He will make a way for you!

He will provide rivers of hope in the middle of your deserts!

Call on the name of Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who rose from the grave in victory!

Call on Jesus...

He will make a way for you!

God's Can Openers

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:Then said he unto them, Therefore every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old. Matthew 13:52; I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. Philippians 4:13

Introduction

Have you ever thrown away something, only to learn later that what you threw away was of great value? Often in the spring and summer months there is a general house cleaning. We throw away many unwanted things and take pains to preserve that we feel have value. The things we throw away sometimes include shoes, clothing, furniture and other household items. As a general rule, that which is thrown away has not lost its value, but it has lost its usefulness to us. Therefore, neighbors are amazed at the things we throw away, wondering whether we have lost our senses or whether it was an oversight on our part.

What really determines whether a thing is kept or thrown away? When do we decide to keep an item or to discard one? What is the determining factor? For the answer, consider the man who was shipwrecked on an island. He was all alone on a vast Island, the sole survivor of a great ship. Even though there were no trees or edible fruit bearing vegetation on this island the man was not worried because there were enough canned food items on board the ship to carry him for years. There were peas, carrots, greens, canned hams and a variety of food stuffs everywhere. On the second day of his experience the man began to panic as he rambled through the goods at his disposal. He found a chest of gold coins and threw them aside. He found a chest of pearls, but he threw those aside as well. He searched through boxes and found some filled with thousands of dollars in cash. He found expensive China plates and threw them in the sea. There were fine pieces of clothing that he crumbled and threw away. By the third day the man had completely gone mad. Surrounded by so much he was miserable. He had money, fine things, food and complete control of the island yet he was frustrated. He took the chest of coins and threw it into the sea. He ripped threw boxes, throwing the contents here and there.

Finally, with his head in his hands, the man dropped to his knees in despair. He picked up a can of beans. That can of beans and the thousands of other food items symbolized his frustration. He had everything anyone would ever want, but he didn't have what he needed. What he needed was a can opener.

Herein lies the key to why some things are thrown away and others are kept. We keep those things which are useful to us, regardless of their age or condition. We discard those things which can no longer serve any useful purpose. Often, what we throw away is scooped up by someone else because its real value is not intrinsic, but related to whether or not it serves a purpose. One man's trash therefore, is another man's treasure.

So it is with religion. Many today have decided to throw it away because it serves no useful purpose. Worship, praise, bible study, and faith are view by some as relics from the past, that served a useful purpose in our past, but in modern times proves to be a cumbersome relic based upon an antiquated value system that is not conducive to living in modern times. Among the things they discard as useless, is old time religion.

As Christians, we know the value of our faith in God. We may be surrounded by rubies, diamonds, and hundreds of ideas for fame and wealth, but know the real value is not in the "cans", but in the can opener. It's not in the millions of opportunities that exist, but in the ability to open those opportunities for us. The key to opening the cans is faith in God. It may be a little old fashioned, but it is good enough for me.

Exposition

This text explores the depth of Christ's teaching that New Testament believers have double treasures. They have the wealth of the old covenant at their disposal but also get the benefits of the new as well. Without discarding the old they are better accept the activist challenge of the new.

Christ constantly spoke to his followers, many of whom were familiar with Old Testament teachings about the kingdom of heaven. He was giving them a new vision and a new hope that was based upon all that they had learned in the past. Beginning at verse 44 he told them four short parables to illustrate the new faith: a man who found a treasure in a field and bought it. A merchant that found a pearl of great price and fishermen who found great catches when they cast down their nets. In the last example, which is the basis for this text, he noted that those who were schooled in the teachings of the Old Testament had great opportunites available to them. They knew the old and were learning of the new. They suddenly found available to them a greater treasure, a new thing that was supported by the old..

The old testament scripture represented the prospects of the great things that God had in store for his people. It represented their hopes. It represented their dreams and it represented the promises of God, all wrapped neatly into Old Testament Cannon, or "can" for the benefit of this text.

If the old Testament or the old way represented the "can" then the New Testament represented the can opener. The New Testament represented how the promises of God, made in the old Cannon, would be implemented. Jesus showed them how the promise of a new kingdom, new life, and happy living that was made in the old Testament would be opened to them. In John 14:6 "Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me."

If the word "can" represents the possibilities of the old Testament, then the word "do" represents the new. The old taught us to believe in the possibilities. The new teaches us to belive on the possibilities and then "act" on our belief.

Thus Jesus makes the point that those who have the greatest treasure have both the old time religion and the new action based faith that the kingdom of heaven represents. He did not intend that the old religion would be discarded or destroyed but fulfilled.. In Matthew 5:17 -18 he said: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." In the text, he connected the old with the new generation with the conjuction "and" which suggests that the new does not exist without the old and the old is never fully appreciated or fulfilled without the new.
Together they project an unbeatable combination: Old Time Religion and an activist faith. Combined, they open the door to great opportunities for true believers. They represent a "can do" attitude that is the hallmark of every Christian: that "I can do all things through Christ that strengthens me."

Old Time Religion

Today, there is a tendency to discard those elements of our faith that represent the essence of our struggle. Many have concluded that the old time religion is out dated. In the African-American community many young people look to other sources for their spiritual growth. Some are becoming mystics, some skeptics and others have abandoned the faith completely.

Many have decided that there is no need for Sunday School. They suggest that it is boring. They have also decided that worship and prayer meeting are also antiques. Bible study and training classes are viewed as a waste of time. They have concluded that the old songs of our past are dead, prayers are too long, and sermons are uninteresing and pointless. Even the moral standards of our religion are challenged, amid suggestions that prohibitions against sex, drinking and rowdy night life are from a different time and age. There are some in this generation who have adapted an attitude of tolerance rather than acceptance. Their song is "it was good for my old mother, but there something else for me."

Those who want to discard the old time religion have failed to appreciate its usefulness in their lives. No one throws away anything that is useful to them, no matter how old it is. If it helps me make it throw the day, I need it. If it helps me live life better, I need it. If it helps me realize my potential, I need it. If it helps me overcome my weaknesses, I need it.

An active faith in God opens the cans of opportunity that are available to believers. Throwing away the old time religion, is the same as having the munchies for a can food item, but then throwing away the can opener! Without a can opener of some sort, we cannot get to that which is in the can!

We who are the created handiwork of God, cannot access the great things that God has in store for us without an active faith in God. Three passages of Bible scripture illustrate this truth. In John 5:19 "...The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise." Jesus said even though he is the Son of God there is nothing he can do by himself. He depends upon the father to empower him. Everything Jesus did was empowered by God. The feeding of thousands, raising of the dead, healing the sick, even the resurrection itself, all came from God.

Jesus had a "can do" life because he allow his faith in God to open miracle doors of opportunity. Jesus then taught those who followed him a similar truth in John 15:5 he said "I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing." In essence, we cannot afford to throw away our relationship with Christ, without him we can't open the can! Without him we cannot succeed in any of our endeavors. "Without me ye can do nothing." The old time religion represents our continued faith in God through Christ, if we throw it away its like throwing away the opener! That's why Philippians 4:13 says " I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Without Christ to strengthen us we cannot expect to get to the goodies in the can.

It's Good Enough For Me

There are millions today who are ready to testify that they are not about to throw away the old time religion. They have found their faith in God to be invaluable to their happiness.

Though they studied the New Age philosphies of this present generation and understand its emphasis on the individual experience, but they've decided to stick with the old time religion, its good enough for me!

They have been tempted to experiment with alternative religions which promise prosperity and good times only to learn that it's better to accept the providence of God whether it brings good times or bad times.

They''ve decided to stick with the old time religion, it's good enough for me!

It is good enough for me because, the Lord has opened doors for me that I could not see!

It is good enough for me because, because the Lord has been better to me than I have been to myself!

It is good enough for me because when I lost, he he found me and placed my feet on solid ground.

"Give me that old time religion, it's good enough for me!

SCRIPTURE: "And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt." Mark 14:36" For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God:" Romans 8:15-16

Introduction

What is your image of the ideal father? Do you see him as a provider? Protector? Friend? Over the years, the image of father has changed dramatically in many homes in the African-American community. The ideal picture of a man who serves as the high priest of his home, defender of the family, and best friend to his children, has diminished in many instances to that of a powerless no-good who spends his time complaining that his child support payments are too high. The idea of having a father who "can" is being replaced by the image of fathers who can't, won't and don't. Without a doubt, our image of father is changing.

Whenever our image of father changes it impacts our image of God. In times past, a child who wanted to know what God was like could be told: "God is just like your daddy, son, he just lives on another street, way up there in the sky." Because many men are neglecting their duties to their families today, there is a natural tendency for some to transfer their images of their father to God. If their fathers were loving, caring, strong, and concerned, then our heavenly father is seen the same way. However, if their father is simply a distant voice on the telephone, a name on a court order, an occasional visitor on the stage of their lives, then the heavenly father is seen the same way: distant, unconcerned an occasional visitor in their lives who interrupts the normal flow and generally upsets the status-quo after he leaves.

Images of fatherhood are conceived when our children are young. In the tender years of their lives they are impressed by nearly everything they hear. They believe nearly everything they are told. Consider the boys who sat on a street corner and bragged about their fathers. "My father owns a grocery story" said one boy who was obviously proud. The grocery store sat on a corner and was highly visible. The other boys started bragging too: "My father owns a Mercedes Bentz" said one, and another said "My father owns a big house on the avenue" One little boy jumped up quickly and shouted "My father use to own hell!" Surprised the other boys turned to hear further:"Ma ma says every time he comes to make his court visit, he tries to give it to her, so he must own it.!" It's sad when children see their fathers as symbols of trouble, failure and neglect.

Fathers are still essential to the family. Children need to be around them, know them and learn from them. They are important because they help shape our images of God as we translate the images of our earthly father to that of our heavenly father.

As Christians we know that our heavenly father is a good. He provides for us and he protects us. As earthly fathers, we should strive to be more like the savior everyday so that our wives and children can see images of God within us.

Exposition

This text underscores the image of father as viewed by believers under the new covenant.

Peculiar to this text is the idea of God as he is perceived in the New Testament context and in the hearts of believers.

The text notes the words "Abba" and "Father" being used together. The latter is translated into English while the former is not translated at all, but remains in its Greek form. A key to a greater understanding of biblical teachings about father, and God's role as father is indicated by the two words.

Abba is Greek word which means father. In fact, it is closer to "daddy" than father, because of its personal implications. Abba is used in the New Testament because it is written in Greek. The Old Testament, which is written in Hebrew, only has one word that comes close in meaning and that is "Ab." which refers to "father."

The Old Testament idea of father differs from that of the New Testament. In the Old Testament father was Lord and Master of his home, closer to what modern times would describe as a dictator. He was a provider, decision maker and ruler. It was permissible, in the old Testament context for a father to have many wives. So Abraham, Jacob, and many other patriarchs had several wives, as their resources allowed. Fathers were also given permission to destroy their children if they sinned, pick their marriage partners or to sacrifice them to God. Such authority is why Abraham could take young Isaac, bind him hand and foot, and place him on the altar of sacrifice without thinking of any legal retribution. The father's right to sacrifice was understood.

The image of father in the Old Testament was one of respect, but rarely of love and compassion. "Ab" usually refers to a human father in the old testament. While there are only a few occasions in which "Ab" is used to refer to God in the old testament, they serve to paint a picture of God as a mean spirited, vindictive personality that is willing to punish generations of the innocent for the sins of a few.

The New Testament idea of God's intimate relationship to humanity is a distinct feature of Jesus' teaching. God relates to believers as a father relates to his child.

In the New Testament context fathers are perceived differently. They are perceived as one wife husbands, loving their wives as Christ loved the church. Instead of being head and masters of their homes, they are perceived as equal partners in the family, who assume the leadership role by common agreement as both husband and wife try to symbolize the relationship between Christ and the church. Instead of being a terror to his children, empowered to kill them if necessary, fathers are urged to provoke not their children to wrath. They are perceived as personal, friendly and concerned about the wives and children.

It is in this context that Jesus began a litany of teachings, different from the Old Testament view, referring to God as "Our father." His was a different view of father. It was a compassionate, concerned father who was strong, yet willing to do whatever is necessary to promote, protect and provide for his children.

When Jesus used the term Abba he referred to a personal God. He was talking to daddy! Father characterized God has a man of compassion and love for the entire family of God.

Paul, writing to the Romans used the term "Abba" to remind believers that they had been adopted into the family of God by their faith. Because of their belief in Christ and their willingness to accept him as their Lord and Savior they could claim membership in the family of God with all rights and privileges.

Jesus redefined the meaning of father. We recognize God as our father and humbly submit to him as the stern but loving commanding presence in our lives.

Defining Father

What is the expectation of a father in today's context? Today the definition of father is constantly evolving. Perhaps there is litmus test that can be used to measure a father, if so these four areas might apply:

PROVIDE: Good fathers provide for their families. The essentials for survival in the common era are food, clothing, shelter and transportation. Good fathers see to it that their families are provided for in this respect.

A good father is one who insures that there is a sufficient supply of all essentials for his household. Fathers who are estranged, divorced or otherwise separated still have a responsibility to their children. Court ordered child support payments may not provide often do not scratch the cost of providing for children. The good father goes beyond what is required by court agreement and insures that his children are never in want for anything.

IS THERE FOR THEM: Good fathers go beyond simply providing for their families. A good father is "there for his children." The good father is involved in the events important to his children. In school or community, fathers must be present to support their children. This is a challenge, requiring an intricate balance career tasks and family needs. Career success is important, but a daughter's speech in the school play is important too. A son who is on stage to say a poem, considers that as an important moment. A good father says, its important to me too.

CREATES MAGIC MOMENTS: The good father creates magic moments with his children. These are family rituals or good times that carve special memories in the minds of a child. The serve to bond father and child and bring them close together. These magic moments may include bed time stories or other family rituals which give him a special place in his family's heart.

GOOD FATHERS LOVE AND SUPPORT THEIR WIVES: A good father's relationship with his children, in many instances, is tied to the way he relates to his wife. A good father is an example to his sons and daughters of marital fidelity. Even if, for some reason, they separate the good father continues to respect his former wife, speak well of her before his children and admonish them to obey her wise instructions. A good father will never withhold support and love from his children because of ill feelings toward his wife.

GOOD FATHERS ARE MORAL EXAMPLES: A good father is source of moral strength for his family. He exemplifies the idea of doing that which is right, even though it is difficult. Although he himself may slip along the way, he acknowledges the error of his way and redirects himself. Thus by example, he teaches his children to seek the high road and avoid the fast track.

Our Father

The greatest advantage of having a good father is the feeling he creates among his family members that says: "If I can't, I have a father who can!"

This is the feeling that there is no problem that besets me that is beyond my father's ability to work it out.

No matter how great our earthly fathers may be, experience has taught us that there are some things that our earthly fathers cannot do. Despite the best of their intentions, even daddy can't solve some problems.

But I'm so glad to know that when mother can't make it happen, and daddy throws up his hands, that I have a father who can!

My father doesn't reside in Monroe or New York or Kansas City, but he sits high and looks low and he's with me wherever I go!

My father is a can man!

I have a father who can take —Sadness and turn it to gladness; Misery and turn it into delight!

—Failure and turn it into success; Loneliness and turn it into happiness!

—Poverty and turn it into riches; Defeat and turn it into victory!

No wonder the song writer wrote: I cannot take the lightning and flash it across the land. I cannot take a piece a clay and mold it into a man, but I have a father who can!"

I reminded of the little girl who had nightmares when she was young and was always afraid in the night. In the middle of the morning when her fears got the best of her she'd cry out "Papa, It's dark, hold my hand!" No matter how many times she called him papa would get up and hold her hand every night. That picture of her papa sitting by her bed holding her hand, never left her mind, even after he died. Many years later she came to God. When the troubles of the world surrounded her she cried out "Lord, it's dark outside!, Hold my hand!"

No wonder the song writer declared "Lord, hold my hand, while I run this race. I don't want to run this race alone!"

I don't know about you but I want Jesus to walk with me! He walked with my father, but I want him to walk with me!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who rose after three days!

I want Jesus to walk with me!

What Time Does The Last Bus Leave?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 27, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." 2 Tim 4:6

Introduction

A little girl was excited about riding the city bus. She had seen them pass by many days, but she had never ridden on a city bus herself. One day her grandmother decided to take her for a ride on the city bus. They sat at a bus stop and the little girl was anxious. She saw a pretty shiny bus come up the street and jumped up and down with excitement. "Here comes the bus!" she shouted, pulling on her grandmother's arm. The Grandmother sat quietly, saying nothing. The bus passed by. The little girl repeated this routine several times and was dismayed as the same bus passed her several times but her grandmother never attempted to get on board. Finally the grandmother looked at her watch and rose to stand at the bus stop, paid their fare and they sat comfortably in their seats. Puzzled, the little girl asked:"Grandma, this bus passed us several times but we didn't get on, why?" The grandma, confident in the wisdom of her years said: "Right bus, wrong destination!" There are many today who have boarded life's bus, but are not careful to make sure its headed in the right direction.

As Christians we strive to make sure that we are following in the footsteps of the master. By doing so we take no chance of getting lost.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he awaits his execution, anticipating his departure from this world. Paul's life was eventful to say the least. For the most part it can be divided into two parts, both pursued with the same vigor and commitment that is characteristic of his personality. Before he met the Lord he was the complete opposite of the Christian ideal. Although he had religious roots, he actively persecuted the church. In Jewish circles he was considered the very antithesis of Christianity. However, after meeting Christ on the Damascus Road in a dramatic, soul shaking, experience he began a new experience that was different from his past.

Those who knew him watched him with skepticism. They could not believe that the Paul they saw speaking as an advocate for the church, was the same "Saul" that had persecuted the church. They listened as Paul frequently told them of the error of his ways in the past, but then told them of the depth of his commitment to Christ after his Damascus Road experience.

Having spent his life establishing churches throughout the known world, this text finds Paul in Roman imprisonment for a second time. This time however, he had been given a sentence of death by the Roman Emperor Nero. In his final days, Paul penned this letter to the Christians in Rome expressing his readiness to depart this life, having given his best for the kingdom.

When the words of this text are amplified in the Greek its special meaning takes on an even greater emphasis especially in light of the words "Now","Ready" and "offered." Taken separately they give even greater meaning to Paul's affirmation that he was ready to be sacrificed.

The Greek word used for "now" in this application is "Hedista" which means "with great pleasure." In English "now" implies "the present moment" but in this context "now" means "with great pleasure." It expresses Paul's attitude facing the moment of departure, to paraphase William Cullen Bryant, "not as the quarry slave at night, scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust, wraps the draperies of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams." When Paul said "I am now" he could have easily been saying "I anticipate my departure with a joyous and appreciative attitude."

The two versions of the Greek word "Spendo" are used for "ready" and "offered." The first application in the word "Ready" means to devote one's life or blood as a sacrifice which is poured out, commonly called a libation. Paul characterized his life after the Damascus Road as one that was committed to building the kingdom of God. It was a life of devotion to the cause of kingdom building, praise and worship. The second application of "Spendo" refers to his readiness to be offered further for the cause of Christ. For Paul this meant a dignified death, without complaint or denial of the faith. To be ready was simply to stand prepared to take his life of devotion to its logical conclusion.

Taken together this text finds Paul saying "With great joy and pleasure I have devoted my life to building the kingdom of God. I now stand ready, even in the prospect of death, prepared to carry it to its logical conclusion." The time of his departure was drawing closer but his commitment to the cross remained undiminished.

Which Bus to Ride

Today, we labor in the kingdom of God with the full knowledge that our time on this earth is limited and that there will be a time of departure.

Sometimes our lives resemble a person who rides a city bus. There are many buses that go in many different directions. Following a variety of schedules, sometimes the same bus goes to several different destinations in any given day. Those who ride the bus know that three things are essential: knowing which bus to ride, its schedule, and to have the proper fare.

THE RIGHT BUS: It's important that those who journey in life catch the right bus! There are many that have simply stood at the bus stops of life and caught the first bus that came along, without regard to where that bus would take them. Many began with intentions to live honorable and noteworthy lives, but somewhere along the way they caught the wrong bus! Jails and prisons are filled with people who caught the wrong bus. Crime and violence have escalated in nearly every community in America because of people who have caught the wrong bus!

The right bus is to live a life devoted to the worship and praise of God and to the service of others. Jesus said in John 14:6 ".. I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." Those who follow Jesus are on the right bus, it leads them to kingdom of heaven.

TRANSFER: A unique feature of bus service is the transfer. It allows a person to transfer from a bus going in one direction and take a bus that will get him where he wants to go. That is precisely what happened to Paul on the Damascus Road. He was headed in one direction and transferred in the middle of his journey to another bus. There are many in life who discover that the life they are leading will carry them some place they don't want to go, if they don't transfer to the right bus. The rich young ruler missed his chance to transfer to the right bus. However, the woman at the well changed buses quickly and told everyone to "come see a man" who told me all I've ever done. Those riding through life on the wrong bus can tranfer if they will accept Christ.

FARE: Bus rides are seldom free. A fare must be paid. Whether it's a coupon, cash, debit card or otherwise, the fare must be paid before a passenger can get on board. No matter which direction a person chooses in life, he must be prepared to pay the price. In Luke 14:28 Jesus suggests to his disciples that those who choose to follow him must "count the cost" in terms of personal sacrifice, and commitment of time, talents and treasures. While there is a price to pay for those who ride the Christian bus, in terms of time, talent and treasures, there is no fare to get on the bus. Every Christian has been provided with a free boarding pass, given to them as a gift from a loving savior. Romans 6:23 describes this free pass in this way "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." The fare for the Christian journey has been paid by our Lord out on Calvary. Maybe that's why the song writer declared: "Jesus paid it all, all to him I owe. Sin had left its crimson stain, but he washed it white as snow."

Knowing The Schedule

Finally, it is extremely important to know the schedule of the bus you choose to ride. You must know two things: The time of your departure and the time of your arrival.

Paul said "the time of my departure is at hand." This indicated that he knew the schedule was evident. "At hand" suggests that he did not know the exact minute or hour, but he knew it was close. Therefore he readily stood at the right bus stop, determined to catch the bus to glory when it depart.

Moses stood on a mountain top and waited for his departure.

Elijah waited for his bus to sweep down as a mighty chariot and carry him home!

Many saints wait for the bus in the solitude of their homes, or in the sanctuary of a hospital room. Whether on an airplane, boat, train or car, or sitting on a fish pond, many saints are waiting for the bus! Perhaps that's what the song writer had in mind with the words "When he calls me, I will answer, I'll be somewhere listening for my name!"

I don't know about you, but I'm waiting for the bus and listening for my name!

I may be at home, but I'll be somewhere listening for my name!

I may be driving my automobile or reading a newspaper, but I'll be somewhere listening for my name!"

We don't know the day or the hour but brothers and Sisters, like Paul, we know the time of departure is "at hand." Therefore we need to stand at our bus stop and keep watching for the bus because we never know what time the last bus leaves!

We should do all the good we can do, for we never know what time the last bus leaves!

Sing while you can sing, for we never know what time the last bus leaves!

Work while it is day, for we never know what time the last bus of life leaves!

The song writer declares "I'm gonna work until my day is done. I'll cease from sorrows, there be no tomorrows..I'm going to work until my day is done!"

" I do not know how long it twill be or what the future holds for me, but this I know, if Jesus leads me I will get home some day!"

While it is important to know what time the bus leaves, its is equally important to know, the time of arrival.

It's important that every Christian remembers that the time of our arrival in glory is already printed on the schedule. 2 Corinthians 5:8 reminds us that when we are absent in the body we are "present with the Lord." The time of our arrival is in an instant, a twinkling of an eye!

No wonder the old slaves could check their schedules and sing "Swing low sweet chariot, coming forth to carry me home. If you get there before I do, tell all my friends I coming there too!"

While the departure is a sad moment for those who are left behind, the arrival is the most important thing to a Christian traveler!

Every saint is looking forward to his arrival in the kingdom of heaven!

That will be a day when the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest!

That will be a day when the mountains will be made low and the valleys shall be exalted!

That will be a day when every day will be Sunday and it's always howdy and never goodbye!

That will be the day that we see Jesus face to face!

I don't know about you but every day I'm checking my schedule and asking: "What time the does the last bus leave?"

I want to be ready! Ready! Ready!

...When Jesus comes!

On Thursday June 22, 1995 Stella Hayes departed from this life. She was a devoted Christian worker and a friend to many. She boarded the right bus, grace paid her fare, and she made her arrival on time.

Go Home and Tell the Story

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 16, 1995

SCRIPTURE:Mark 5:19 "Howbeit Jesus suffered him not, but saith unto him, Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee. And he departed, and began to publish in Decapolis how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men did marvel. Mark 5:19-20

Introduction

Have you ever listened to the conversation of a person who has been away and recently returned home. Usually they have exciting stories to tell of their adventures and travels. Sometimes the dramatic accounts of sights and deeds seem unbelievable. Somehow, their accounts give us a feel for what the journey must have been like as we attempt to place ourselves along the back roads and highways that they have traveled. To a great extent, a great part of any journey is the story told back home!

Sometimes the report given is not about a place seen or deed done. Sometimes it is about a change of attitude or spirit that occurred while away from home. Consider the man who left home disgusted with what he concluded was an absence of godliness everywhere. It appeared to him that God was absent. He assumed the attitude that "God is no where" which became his slogan. Many years later, much to the surprise of his family and friends he returned home with a bright smile on his face. There was a glow about him. When asked about his new found glow he said: "It was a case of a misplaced W." Puzzled, his family members wanted to know what he meant. "When I was home all I had was W's. I wanted to know Who was God and if he existed. Why God didn't make things better. When God would change things. Where was God. I was plagued by a misplaced W." He explained that one day he read John 3:16 and saw that God loved the World and Whosoever that believed on him would have everlasting life. That day I accepted Christ. The "W" found its right place and my motto changed from "God is no where" to "God Is Now here." I left home thinking God was gone, but I've come home to say "God is now here!"

There are many today who have never left town but have a misplaced "W". Those who have found it have a story to tell.

As Christians, we have a story to tell. It is a story of Salvation. It is a story of answered prayers. It's a story of blessings. Each of us has a testimony about the goodness of the Lord. We truly have a story to tell. At home and any where we go we proudly stand and testify "God is now here!"

Exposition

This text focuses on an instance in the ministry of Jesus in which he instructed someone not to sit at his feet but to go home and witness.

The occasion of this text was a visit that Jesus made to the country of the Gadarenes. As he preached and taught he came upon a man whose life had been dominated by legions of evil spirits.

Jesus denounced the presence of evil and allowed them to put themselves in a herd of swine that immediately ran over a hill and killed themselves.

The once demonic man was immediately sane. It was a miracle at the least. A remarkable thing had been done in his life by the power of God. The demonic was so grateful that he wanted to sit at Jesus' feet and follow him around constantly as a witness and disciple. However, he was told to go home and tell his friends what had happened to him.

Although reluctant, the man returned to his own home town and other areas and declared the goodness of God.

Worship is A Privelege, Service A Duty

Today there are millions who have a story to tell but are caught between the privelege of worship and the duty to serve.

The demonic man was released from the possession of an evil spirit. A mighty work had been done in his life. He wanted to spend his entire life in constant worship and praise of Christ, thus he requested to stay in his presence daily. However, he was pointed away from the privelege, represented by his constant desire to worship, toward his duty to serve.

In a similar sense there are many today who have a great witness but they are basing their faith encounter completely on the worship experience rather than service.

It can truthfully be said that most churches, whether Baptist, Charismatic, Methodist or other orders spend the greater part of their resources and time perpetuating the worship and praise. These resources are connected to singing praises to God, praying, discussing, debating and conducting formal worship programs. The attention paid to the personal emotional experience is extraordinary. The Baptists want something to shout about. The Charismatics wait for every opportunity to raise holy hands and speak in unknown tongues. Like the saved demonic, we want to be in the presence of the savior constantly. Like the disciples on the mount of transfiguration we are overwhelmed by the sheer beauties of heaven and want to build tabernacles and stay there forever.

While worship experiences have their place, it is a privilege of the saved that is best exercised after the duty of service has been accomplished. Worship and praise of God is an inseparable part of the Christian faith. However, the premium, in the sight of God is on kingdom building or serving others. Our daily devotion is a moment in which we pause to thank God for the new opportunity to serve him through the coming challenges of the day. The daily devotion prepares us for a day of service or gives thanks at the conclusion of a day of service. The devotion itself is not the object, it is a privilege, a moment to thank God for his empowering presence. The weekly devotion is the same. It is not the object but a privilege.

Those who want to worship constantly have little appreciation for service. Perhaps that is why Jesus' words to the demonic still ring in our ears "tell them how great things God has done!"

The challenge to the demonic was to return home. It would have been easier if Christ had challenged him to go to some distant place. But he was challenged to go home and tell the story. Home is the hardest place to do a good work. The people at home are skeptics, doubters, hard hearts, hard headed, strong willed and set in their ways. It would have been easier to tell the story somewhere else. Certainly it would be better received. Rather than rejoice at the great change in his life, back home the people would probably conclude that he was never possessed in the first place, just acting foolish running around naked for all those years. Going home was the hardest challenge.

Many church members have left their church homes, frustrated over the perceived stubbornness and insensitivities of a small handful. Some are meeting in hotels, store fronts and back rooms. Some are wandering from denomination to denomination looking for a place where they can simply sit at Jesus' feet and feel his presence. They are grateful to a God that has saved them and lifted them and they want to praise him with uninterrupted peace and joy. At Jesus's feet they would constantly be in the physical presence of the master, safe and secure from the world. At Jesus feet, they could be filled daily with power of his presence. Yet the words of the savior still ring out, "go home to thy friends and tell them what good things God has done!"

When Jesus sent the demonic home he did not send him home alone. He wasn't a helpless crazy man being sent defenseless to the slaughter of his home folk. He had the power of the holy spirit to guide him. Likewise those who return home to witness to the poor, needy, and downtrodden about the power of God do not go alone, they are followed by an unseen comforter, the spiritual presence of Christ to guide and sustain them.

We have A Story To Tell

Finally, we must consider that the demonic was challenged to witness because he had a story to tell.

Anyone who has had an experience with the Lord has a story to tell. We are called by God to witness where we can do the best good! The greater your experience with the Lord the more compelling the need to help others by letting God use you to do for them what was also done for you.

The man who has been hungry but is now filled has a story to tell and duty to help feed others!

The woman was thirsty but found the living waters has a story to tell and a duty to help others find that same crystal fountain!

The man who was destitute, jobless and homeless, has a story to tell and a duty to help others find the same saving Lord that they found!

Every saved saint has a story to tell!

Jonah had a story to tell. He didn't want to tell it to the people of Ninevah, but he had to tell the story!

Ezekiel had a story to tell. He had to tell the people that although they were dried up like dry bones in the valley, God could give them life again! He had to tell it because it was like fire shut up in his bones!

David had a story to tell. He had risen to lofty royal heights and had fallen to depths of despair, yet he declared "The Lord is my shepherd I shall not want!"

The lame man had a story to tell! He had been sitting by the pool for 38 long years but always missed his chance until one day Jesus told him to "take up that bed and walk!"

The woman at the well had a story to tell! She met a man who peered beneath the thin veneer of public perception and saw her soul. She ran through the city shouting "Come see a man who told me all about myself!"

I hear the savior challenging believers to "go home and tell thy friends the good things" that the Lord has done for you!

Even though there may be legions of the apathetic sitting on boards and committees, go home tell those dependent on drugs how God freed you from a life of drug dependency!

Go home and tell the indigent how reordering your life saved you from a life of poverty as you take their hand and show them the way out!

Go home and tell those who are medically deficient how God healed your body. Show them a better and healthier way to live with Christ as their guide!

Go home and minister to the victims of disaster and show them the bright side of every storm!

Go home to wayward children and show them that someone cares. Take them by the hand, teach them, take them, nurture them with an effection that would come from the divine father himself.!

Go home to a circle of friends that may not know the goodness of the Lord and tell the story of the risen Lord!

Tell them how he suffered out on Calvary!

Tell them how he died on an old rugged cross!

Tell them how he rose early Sunday morning!

Tell them about Jesus!

Hook Me Up!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 22, 1995

*SCRIPTURE:" And, behold, one came and said unto him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?Mat 19:16 And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?Luke 10:25 And brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. Acts 16:30-31

Introduction

Have you ever wanted to belong to something and found yourself black balled for one reason or another? There have always been special groups that have appealed for a variety of reasons. Sometimes it was just a group of children who were popular. Maybe it was a college fraternity or sorority. Perhaps it was a Masonic order. There have been times when even the best of us have been kept out of certain clubs and organizations because we did not fit. It was a humiliating experience, because no one likes rejection.

A popular phrase from today's "rap" subculture is "Hook me up!" It refers to making a connection, getting what is needed to qualify, or otherwise doing what needs to be done to get what you need. It is generally a term associated with druggies who meet their dealers in alleys and street corners with the plea "Hook me up, man! Please, hook me up!" A person who is hooked up is one who has a connection. If' he's hooked up his supply is guaranteed. "Rap" which reflects this subculture, has colloquialized the phrase "Hook me up" to become synonymous with "help me get what it takes!"

Many people have found themselves barred from participation in many things because they were not "hooked up!" Those turned down by certain groups were often rejected not because of a lack of qualifications, but because they were not hooked up!

In this life there is one thing for sure you, if you plan to make it you must be hooked up. Otherwise, no matter how you try you won't make it in. An old slave parable said both the slave and the slave master died and were standing in line at the gates of heaven. Folks were carrying bags of vittles, fiddles under their arms and all sorts of things for the good time they were going to have in heaven. The slave master was surprised when he stood in line because all of the people looked like some of his slaves. He didn't see any of the other masters around anywhere. When the master finally made it to the gate a tall angel stuck his head through the gate and asked: "Weren't you one of them slave masters?" The master responded with pride:"Yes sir, but I treated my slaves well. They got a change of clothes once a year, and presents at Christmas time." The angel looked in his book and said "It says here that you always told them that you would free them for a price but it kept changing." The master dropped his head and answered "That's true." The angel then asked. "Are you walking or riding?" The master answered "walking!" Quickly, the angel answered sorry, you can't get in, we ain't takin' nothing but riding people this week." On the way over to the station to catch the train to hell the master ran up on one of his slaves who was on his way to glory. "Boy, you wastin' yo' time, they ain't takin nobody in glory that's walkin', you got to be riding." Just then the master got a bright idea. "I ought to be able to get in cause I been riding people all my life." He said. He invited the slave to get on his back and he'd play the hoss and both of them would get into glory together. When they made it to the gate the angel saw the slave and said, "Are you walking or riding?" The slave answered "I'se riding suh!" Instantly the angel said "We'll you can come in but, but your hoss will have to stay outside!" Everybody talking about heaven ain't going there! You gotta be hooked up!

As Christians, we rejoice in the fact that we have the right hookup! Regardless of our color, social condition or otherwise we know we have the right connection to guarantee our salvation and citizenship in the kingdom of God. That connection is Jesus. He was lifted up to hook us up to everlasting life!

Exposition

These texts present three examples of persons who wanted to be hooked up and what they were told to do.

In Matthew 19 Jesus is confronted by the Rich Young Ruler who wants to be a part of the kingdom of God. He thought entry could be gained by counting the good deeds performed. Therefore he thought it wise to ask advice about the nature of the good deed necessary for him to gain entry into the kingdom of God. In response Jesus pointed him to a higher demand. It had nothing to do with deeds or his obedience to the law, but in his willingness to put the interests of the kingdom before any other interest. While he was told to sell all of his property and give it to the poor, this was not a general requirement of all who come to the kingdom of God. It was a test of his willingness to part with things he considered valuable in obedience to the command of Christ. If he wanted to be in the kingdom, the love of God and obedience to God had to be centermost in his life. The rich young ruler found that too demanding. His possessions were great and he could not bear to leave them

In Luke 10 a lawyer is presented asking Christ essentially the same question as the rich young ruler in Matthew 19. However, while the rich young ruler desired to get into the kingdom, the lawyer was trying to devise a trick question to trip Jesus on his own words. Jesus gave him a different response than he gave to the rich young ruler. He was not told to sell all he had, but was told to obey the commandments and love God with all his heart and mind, and then to love his neighbor as he loves himself. Obeying the law was not a problem for the lawyer. Neither was loving God. However, he had extreme difficulty with the requirement to love his neighbor like he loves himself. He raised the question of the identity of neighbors only to be told the parable of the good Samaritan. Those who want to gain entry into the kingdom of God must see and perceive people without distinctions of color, class, or other barriers. This posed a considerable challenge to the young lawyer.

In Acts 16 a jailer asks the question after witnessing the humble spirit of Paul and Silas in his jail. Though the jail doors were opened and they had opportunities to escape they remained. Impressed by both the power of God to open closed jails and the witness of Paul and Silas who prayed and sang with jubilation, the guard wanted to know more about being a Christian. He found out that the only real requirement is to allow Christ to become the center of your life, accept him as your savior and Lord and salvation is guaranteed. Unlike the rich young ruler, there was no property to be sold. Unlike the calculating lawyer there were trick questions waiting to be revealed. The answer was simply. Believe and be saved.

Those who wanted to be hooked up, or guaranteed a place in the kingdom of heaven need only to be willing to put God first, obey him completely in every respect and salvation is guaranteed.

Jesus Must Be First

The first requirement to be hooked up, or to become a member of the kingdom of God is that we must be willing to put the cause of the kingdom first.

There are many people who have great possessions. These possessions include our material holdings but also include our passions and persuits. Sometimes our passions and possessions can get in the way of kingdom building.

Jesus' response to the rich young ruler is the same today. Those who want to be hooked up in the kingdom of God must be willing to make their talents, possessions, and time completely available for the master's use. The rich young rule went away without getting hooked up, because he could not, in good conscious, part with his possessions.

Today those who want to be hooked up are faced with the same delimma. The demands of time, talents and resources that come with membership in the kingdom are enormous. Our comittment to the kingdom must be of such that we are willing to sacrifice all for the sake of the kingdom.

There can be no hook up unless you are willing to give up! Give up some time. Give up some of your resourcefulness and talent! Give up some of your treasures!

Maybe that's what the song writer had in mind when he wrote: "Give of your best to the master. Give of the strength of your youth. Clad in salvation's full armour, join in the battle for truth!"

Love of God and People Must be Central

To get a spiritual hook up, there must be a love of God and people!

The young lawyer presented the Lord with a check list of things he had done in obedience to the law. He was told however, that the love of God through service to people, all people must be most important in his mind! When asked to explain the nature of what was expected of him Jesus told him the story of the good Samaritan, with the emphasis on the point that his neighbor was not defined by locality but by his condition.

Those who want a spiriual hook up must love God with everything in their soul. There is no debating this point. The love of God must be foremost!

Our love of God is reflected in our willingness to serve people, regardless to the degree of our association with them. We must serve people, not just Black people. People! We must serve people; not just our next door neighbors, fraternity brother and sorority sisters, but all people.

The kingdom of God is a people serving community and those who desire to be in its ranks must be oriented toward service to people, especially the poor, downtrodden and disadvantaged.

The Advantages of being hooked up!

Being hooked up has its advantages! The jailer saw the power of God open closed jail doors and saw the spirit of confidence in Paul and Silas and he immediately wanted get himself hooked up!

It pays to be hooked up!

Those who are hooked up are free blame for the past wrongs.Romans 8:1 "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

Those who are hooked up receive the gift of eternal life. Romans 6:23 "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord!"

Those who are hooked up receive power from God to carry out his great work.Acts 1:8 "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." These are powers to discern spirits, use healing hands, communicate with others in languages unfamiliar, intense optimism, and to pray fervently.

Being hooked up has its advantages, but brothers and sisters you must be hooked up to get them! Jesus said in John 14:6 "Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me."

You must be hooked up!

If you buy a phone to get messages from friends, it's no good if it's off the hook.

Even if it's on the hook it's no good if it's disconnected! You gotta get hooked up!

Beautiful chandliers, crystal lighting fixtures are nice, but they are no good unless the electricity is hooked up!

Although there is a cable line going to your house, you can't get a picture unless you get hooked up!

You can have a computer with all the right equipment, but you can't get any information or surf the World Wide Web or Internet, unless first get hooked up!

A boxcar may be able to carry a heavy load but it can't go anywhere unless its hooked up to a good engine!

Many people are having problems in life because they have unhooked themselves!

Too many things are getting unhooked!

Our homes are being vandalized because some doors are left unhooked!

Teen pregnancy is on the rise because too many zippers are being lowered and dresses are being unhooked!

Fathers are trying to get out of child support payments, vainly trying to get off the hook!

Our resolve should be that nothing will unhook us!

"Nothing shall separate me from the love of God"

You can get hooked up if you simply believe on the name of Jesus and accept him as Lord of your life!

Jesus was lifted up so we could get hooked up!

Jesus was hung up for our hangups!

Jesus was raised up on a cross such that we could be lifted up in glory!

Jesus, the lily of the valley! The bright and morning star!

Died out on Calvary that we might have a chance to look up and lift up our eyes to to the hills from whence cometh our help!

But early Sunday morning he woke, got up, and stood up! With all power in his hands!

If you want to be hooked up! Come to Jesus today!

The Danger of Dialing The Wrong Number

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Pleasant Green Baptist Church
Monroe, La

July 24, 1995

SCRIPTURE:"And it came to pass at noon, that Elijah mocked them, and said, Cry aloud: for he is a god; either he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awaked.And they cried aloud, and cut themselves after their manner with knives and lancets, till the blood gushed out upon them. And it came to pass, when midday was past, and they prophesied until the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that there was neither voice, nor any to answer, nor any that regarded. 1 Kings 18: 27-29 "But I called upon the Lord in my distress, And he heard me from his Temple. My cry reached his ears." 2 Samuel 22:7

Introduction

Have you ever dialed a wrong number? No matter how we try, even the best of us dial a wrong number on occasion. We buy notebooks to keep up with the numbers, then lose the notebook. There are pocket phone books, computerized reminders and phone number logs, but they seem to do little good as well. We still seem to forget the number we are calling and dial the wrong number. We write phone numbers on pieces of paper, on notes stuck to the refrigerator with magnets, on envelopes and any place else that is necessary. However, despite our best efforts, we still seem to dial the wrong number.

Dialing the wrong number can be troublesome. Consider the man who had been at odds with his girlfriend and stayed up all night long trying devising a makeup speech that he would recite to her in his best romantic voice. Late one night he got enough courage to dial the number. When he heard the voice on the other end of the phone, he jumped right into his speech: "Baby, I want to show you how much I care about you. I want to take you out to dinner. I'm going to buy you a dozen of the finest roses. I'm going to bring you a special present from Victoria's Secret. I'm going to wine you and dine you and lift your soul to Cloud 9." He continued in his rehearsed speech for another five minutes. Finally he said: "Mary, baby, I love you." The woman on the phone answered "Mary? My name is Alice, you have the wrong number." Before he could say anything the woman added: "But you can still take me out on that date!" Dialing the wrong number can cause many problems.

In life there are many people who are looking for the right thing but they are dialing the wrong numbers. They have meandered into drugs, crime, and deviance, seeking to find fulfillment. After giving life their best shot, they learn that they have spent their energy and life substance, dialing the wrong number.

As Christians we are assured that we have not dialed the wrong number. We have made the right connection and the source of our blessings is Christ. We dialed the right number and got an answer every time!

Exposition

This text focuses on two historic episodes that illustrate the rewards of calling on God and the futility of calling on false gods.

King Ahab and Jezebel were wicked leaders of the land. God's anger had been displayed by causing a great drought that was threatening the very life of the nation. Water sources were drying up everywhere and the people were in great anguish. Privately, people were calling on one of two deities worshiped in the land: Baal and the true and living God. The prophet Elijah decided to bring the division to a head. He asked "how long" the land would be divided between two opinions and he challenged the 450 prophets of Baal to a contest atop Mt. Carmel. The contest would pit the 450 Baalist prophets against Elijah to decide which God was the real one. An altar and a sacrifice was built for each deity. The prophets would call upon their god to respond in a public demonstration of power. The one that answered by fire would be recognized as the true and living God.

During the contest the prophets of Baal danced and chanted in front of their altar, but there was no response. Though they cut themselves and did their very best, their efforts were futile. Elijah ridiculed them and suggested that their god was probably on a journey or was asleep. At any rate, Baal did not answer. Elijah made a dramatic demonstration by not only calling on God to devour the sacrifice with fire, but to do so after it had been drenched with water thoroughly.

In the time of their trouble the entire nation found that it had been calling on the wrong god. Elijah's demonstration helped them to conclude that they should give their complete loyalties to the one and only God.

2 Samuel records a memoir of David that is also reflected in Psalm 18. It was written at a time when David had been delivered from the hands of Saul's armies as they attempted to kill him as enemy of the king. He noted that while he was surrounded by trouble and possible death, that he called upon the Lord. He called on God and received an answer from heaven

The prophets of Baal called the wrong god and got no answer. Elijah and David called on God and got an answer!

Dialing Wrong Numbers

There are many people today whose lives have become complete wrecks because they are seeking happiness, but are mistakenly dialing the wrong numbers, or seeking the wrong sources to find it.

Many are looking for fulfilment and self esteem, but they are dialing the wrong number. Many youth look for it in the brand name clothing. They feel unfulfilled unless they own designer labeled clothing and will pay unbelievable prices to obtain the label. A tennis shoe that does not carry the "Air Jordan" label is unwanted. Neither are other products. They want happiness, but they are dialing the wrong number. Youth are not alone. Many adults are also dialing the wrong number. Some women feel they need a Guicci purse to hold the items they bought from K-mart. However, a K- mart purse is not good enough.

Many have drifted into lives of crime trying to find material success. They are dialing the wrong number. Drug dealers have huge amounts of cash, gold necklaces, fine cars and a public subculture persona of success. There are some who are impressed with the apparent "success" of the criminal elements of our society and have decided to dabble in criminal activities. They are dialing the wrong number.

Many are looking for emotional support and love, but they are dialing the wrong numbers to find what they seek. Real love, evolves from a godly character that is shared with others. Without God there can be no love because God is love. Those who are looking for love but find themselves seeking or giving sexual favors instead are dialing the wrong number. In the 1960's Isaac Hayes wrote a song in which he suggested that those who wanted sex should call him at "Good Love 6969." Unfortunately there are many today who are following that advice and are dialing the wrong number.

These are those who dial the wrong number by mistake or out of ignorance. These are those who want the right thing but are simply going about it in the wrong way. However, there are others who are dialing wrong number intentionally! They are not making a mistake because they know exactly what they are doing!

David had several wives. He knew how to get in touch with them. However, one day he looked out his window and saw the beautiful Bathsheba and wanted her. When he sent for her to come to the palace for a romantic interlude he dialed the wrong number. What's worse, he dialed the wrong number intentionally!

When a man calls your house to make romantic overtures to your wife, knowing full well that she is married, he intentionally dialed the wrong number! When a woman flirts with a married man, she intentionally dials a wrong number!

Satan has set up an entire network for those who want the explicit out of life. In effect he has his own 900 number system. However, those who dial Satan's 900 number must be warned that you pay by the minute for every call made on Satan's number. Romans 6:23 reminds us that: "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

It is tragedy to dial the wrong number in life. However, it is even worse to know it's the wrong number and dial it anyway!

Dialing the right number

While there is a danger to dialing the wrong number, it is a good thing to dial the right number!

When you dial the right number, you don't make a mistake. You always get the right party.

Those who are spiritually in trouble need to know how to get the operator by dialing O.

When we think of O, it can only remind us of the omnipotence of God, the fact that he is all powerful!

We dial O because we serve an Omniscient God who knows all about us. In fact, he knows our down sitting and our uprising. He knows the thoughts of our mind before we think them!

We dial O because we serve and Omni-present God who is everywhere at the same time!

Those who have been washed in the blood, not only know how to dial O for the operator but we know how to dial direct. When you dial direct, each phone number is preceded by a 1.

To dial direct to heaven every person needs to know the ONE.

We need to know the ONE, who hears and answers prayers!

We need to know the ONE, who lifts up a bowed down head!

We need to know the ONE, who will hear us even in the midnight hour!

Every phone number consists of seven numbers, we must make sure we know the right numbers!

One is the number of the father, who made the heaven and the earth!

Two is the number of the Word that became flesh and dwelt among men!

Three is the number of the Holy Spirit which the Lord left as a comforter for us!

Four is the number of creation suggesting the four squared nature of God's creative work!

Five is the number of hope in the promises of God!

Six is the number of faith in the dependability of God!

Seven is the number of completeness, suggesting how every promise of God will be fulfilled!

I don't know about you but I'm glad to know that I have an access number to get into glory!

If I dial 911 all I get is a fire truck, ambulance or a police officer, but if I dial 1-2-3, I'll get the father son and the Holy Ghost!

In closing, I'm reminded of the young man who left home estranged from his parents. After many years he married but rarely talked about his past with his wife, who knew little about his life at home. The young man's mother had grown old but worried about her son daily. One day she his phone number and called him in the middle of the night. The wife answered the phone and heard the mother ask "Is my pookey there?" The wife answered: " There is no Pookey here. You have the wrong number." The mother called back two more times and received the same answer. "There is no Pookey here!" The last time she said it so loud that the young man awoke at hearing the name Pookey which is the name only his mother called him. He reached for the phone and breathlessly said “Mama, you didn’t dial the wrong, my wife just didn’t know the right name!”

Friends, when we try to get through to heaven we must be sure that we know the right number and the right name. For there is none other name under the heavens whereby we must be saved except the name of Jesus!

Jesus, we must know the name!
Jesus, the lily of the valley!
Jesus, the bright and morning star!
Jesus, call on him!
Call on him in the morning!
Call on him in the evening!
Call on him in the midnight hour!
Call him up and tell him what you want!

Nothing's Free Anymore!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 5, 1981

SCRIPTURE: "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Romans 6:23

Introduction

Have you ever been given anything free? It's a good feeling to receive something free! It's like a special, well deserved treat; the desert that tops off a day. Sometimes a person is treated to a free meal, by a friend who volunteers to "pick up the ticket." Sometimes its something as simple as the free tasters distributed in stores that advertise a new few product or free samples in the mail. The lure of getting something for nothing as always attracted many people who are vulnerable to the pitch to "come and get something free."

Some merchants solicit customers by offering something free. A shoe store that is selling its shoes at a 50 percent discount, promotes the sale as a "buy one get one free" sale. People who would not respond to the 50 percent discount appeal, respond immediately to the thought of getting a pair of shoes "free." Extras are often added for shopping on certain days. Free soft drinks are given at some fast food restaurants if customers must wait for food to be prepared. Some even give customers special cards to carry with them that are punched with each purchase. After so many purchases the customer gets something "free" whether its a free airplane trip or a bag of potato chips. To some people it doesn't matter what the free item is, as long as it is free they are attracted.

Everybody wants something free!

However, is there anything that is actually free? Something is really free when it is offered with "no strings attached." These strings would mean that you are neither obligated or expected to return the favor. The buy one get one get promotion is not a give-away, otherwise the store would simply give away the second pair of shoes regardless to whether or not you bought the first pair. Few things are free.

Everything that is given free has its hidden cost which may not be paid by the recipient directly, but it has been paid for by someone. Our American freedoms are free to all, but they were paid for with the blood of those who died in the American Revolution and other challenges to liberty. The right to vote for Blacks and woman is a freedom that did not come free. Desegregated public facilities with the right to sit at a lunch counter and eat a hamburger is a freedom that did not come free! Even food stamps, the government program that helps millions avoid starvation and hunger, are not free. Behind every promotion that is advertised as something free, somebody pays the price!

As Christians we enjoy an immense amount of spiritual freedom. We are not bound by an allegiance to the Mosaic law. However, we know that the freedom we enjoy has not come without a price. Although it is free to us, it is only free because Jesus paid the price out on Calvary.

Exposition

This text points to salvation as a free gift from God in contrast to death as a payment for sin.

Paul writing to the Romans explained the results of sinful living as compared to the results of following Christ.

The cause of sin is laid at Adam's feet. His disobedience in the Garden of Eden ushered sin into the world and all generations that follow are now compelled to suffer the punishment for his sin .Romans 5:12 "When Adam sinned, sin entered the entire human race. His sin spread death throughout all the world, so everything began to grow old and die, for all sinned."

The payment for sin has been spelled out in scripture in undeniable terms. Those who sin will suffer the scorn of God. Nearly every prophet has been a voice against sin. Each raised their voice against sin and spelled out the doom of those whose practice sin. Isaiah 3:11 " Woe unto the wicked! it shall be ill with him: for the reward of his hands shall be given him." The prophet Ezekiel went even further: Ezekiel 18:4 Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine: the soul that sinneth, it shall die. Paul, writing to the Corinthians spelled it out in no uncertain terms by listing off the various categories of sinful behavior that will draw the wrath of God. He then told them repeatedly that the payment for that behavior would be exclusion from the kingdom of God. 1 Corinthians 6:9-10 "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God."

The unrighteous will receive his ultimate punishment which is a cruel and horrible death.

Those who are righteous will receive the reward of eternal life. Paul notes on numerous occasions that the righteousness that Christians have is not of their own. They have been made righteous or justified by Christ who has taken the punishment for any unrighteousness they may have previously committed. Their daily effort to live for him, despite occasional slips, will be rewarded. It will come as a free gift to them because the penalty for their sins was paid for by Christ himself on Calvary. John 3:36 He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him.

Those who obtain salvation therefore, acquire it free of charge, but it did not come without price. The salvation they enjoy has been purchased by Christ himself at the expense of his suffering and blood on Calvary.

We Pay for Our Lifestyle

Today there are millions of people who are choosing to live lifestyles of varied sorts. Many are amazed at the diversity of these lifestyles. There are homosexual marriages between male partners as well as between female partners. Promiscuity is at an all time high. Even criminal activity is on the rise. Add these to the rise of seemingly innocent deviations from the norm and we get a plethora of diversity that baffles the imagination.

The general mentality today seems to be: "If it feels good do it. If it doesn't bother you, keep your nose out of it."

Some of the lifestyles we choose are in direct conflict with the word of God. As we become more liberal in our interpretation of freedom we have applied that liberality even to our interpretation of the scriptures. We are exercising our freedom to deviate.

There are many who have made it their self appointed duty to spend the entirety of their lives judging the lifestyles of others. They campaign against choices of others and waste enormous amounts of energy trying to force them to accept the biblical standard for a normal lifestyle.

However, we must remember that even God himself does not campaign against deviance. He gives everyone the free choice to follow his will or to disobey him. The outcome of their decision is preset, but the choice is theirs. As followers of God we should not go beyond what God himself does. Our efforts should be contained to informing the lost what the word of God says and then leave the decision up to each individual. Moreover, we should never lose sight that regardless of the their decision every person should remain an object of friendship and love. We should not hate people because they choose to deviate.

Our role, as Christians is to remind the world that there is nothing free! There is a price to pay for their choice of lifestyle!

We should remind the drunkard, that while he is free to drink, there is a price to pay!

We should remind the drug addict that while he is free to shoot up and get high, there is a price to pay!

We should remind the dealer that while he is free to market packaged death at a healthy profit, there is a price to pay!

We should remind the homosexual that while he or she is free to engage in sodomitic sexual encounters that this freedom does not come without a price!

Everything has a price!

Sometimes the price is hidden and cannot be seen, but there is a price!

Sometimes the tag is marked "free" but the real price shows up later!

Whatever the case, there is nothing free anymore!
Somebody must pay the price!

Salvation is Free but Paid for!

Finally, we must consider the spiritual gift that Jesus offers to anyone who will believe on him. It is salvation. It is offered free, but it too has been paid for!

For many years Herbert W. Armstrong sent copies of his magazine "The Plain Truth" to millions of people around the world absolutely free! There was never a request for a donation or solicitation of any kind. Many were puzzled at how he could afford this "free" magazine. What many didn't know is that the magazine had been paid for by members of the World Wide Church of God, which Armstrong founded. It was free to the recipients, only because Armstrong's church members paid the price!

So it is with our salvation.

Salvation is free not because its cheap or without worth, but because it has been paid for by Christ himself and presents it to us as a free gift!

Perhaps that's what the song writer had in mind when these words were penned: "Jesus paid it all. All to him I owe. Sin had left its crimson stain, but he washed it white as snow!"

I don't know about you, but I'm glad to know that Jesus paid it all!

I'm glad to know that he loved me enough to absorb the punishment for my sins!

I'm glad that he suffered humiliation for me!

I'm glad that he shed his blood for me!

I'm glad that he died out on Calvary!

But I'm even happier that early Sunday morning that he rose up from the grave offering me the free gift of life!

Nothing's free anymore, but that's to Jesus, Salvation comes without a price!

What God Has Prepared For Us!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE: But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. 1 Corinthians 2:9

Introduction

How do you prepare yourself for an important activity? Some argue that the answer to that question runs in close proximity to how a person prepares himself spiritually. Are you a person that carefully plans the route, anticipates difficulties and alternatives? Or do you just hit the road, confident nothing will happen. Are you a person that studies regularly to pass exams or do you simply wait until the night before and cram? Are you deliberative in your buying habits? Do you see what you want, save for it and then purchase it, or do you buy impulsively regardless to whether it plunges you in debt? Do you plan your day or week, or do you let every day plan itself? Our life preparation habits run parallel to our spiritual preparation habits as well. There are many who hit the spiritual road without thought of the dangers that some routes present. Others are living their lives wantonly, waiting to reach what they perceive to be the closing years of their lives to "cram" for heaven. There are others who have no spiritual plan for their lives at all.

Perhaps one of the worst feelings is to think you are prepared then find out that you are not. A preacher was invited to this outstanding church in view of a call. They were trying to impress him and they said, "Whatever you want, just ask, you'll find us well prepared."

There was a luxurious study, fleet of buses, elaborate and expansive kitchen, libraries, and every modern convenience. "Yes sir, you'll find us well prepared."said the trustee.

The minister, "Well, I'd like to visit the Sunday School in the morning."

They said, "Oh, we have the best Sunday School with the finest teachers. We are well prepared and the students are really into the Word."

They took him to the adult department and he said, "That's fine." Then they went to youth class and he said, "I'd like to ask a question."

"Well just ask, these students can take care of any question you want to ask."

"All right, boys. Who tore down the walls of Jericho?"

One bright student said, "I didn't."

The preacher said fine. When they got outside, the trustee said, "Now pastor, I know these boys very well and they all have good parents and if that boy said he didn't tear down that wall he didn't do it." The superintendent, all of the church deacons and most of it prominent members agreed. If the boy said he didn't tear down the walls then he didn't.

So after the sermon, the trustee said, "Now brother, we've just had a meeting and we understand that there is a problem about some walls... and we don't want you to be burdened... and we just decided that regardless to who tore them down... we voted to build them back.!" One of the worse things in the world is to think you are prepared and are not.

Our plans are often inadequate. Despite our efforts, sometimes our best preparation is flawed by conditions we cannot control. However, when God plans, there are no mistakes. He prepares every detail and unfolds his plan just a little at a time. We don't understand it as it is happening, but we soon learn that God always has a perfect plan.

As Christians, we have learned to trust God. We know he has prepared great things for our lives. Though we don't see all of the ways he's doing it, we are confident that when God plans the program, it will turn out all right!

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes to the Corinthians presenting the cross as God's plan for man and the doorway to blessings he has prepared for humankind.

The Christians in Corinth were fascinated with the eloquent preaching of men. They loved fancy preaching. However, Paul wanted them to know the mysteries of God's plan. He came to them simply and without eloquence, even though he was quite able to do so. His motive was to explain to them how God had prepared, from the beginning of time to give the blessing of salvation.

In verse 7 (seven) Paul refers the grand plan of God as a mystery. 1 Corinthians 2:7-8 "But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory: Which none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory."

With a few exceptions, generally the word "mystery" refers to a truth about the plan of God hidden in the Old Testament. These mysteries are revealed to New Testament believers by inspiration of the Holy Spirit as they search the scriptures for great truths and listen to the preached word. 1 Corinthians 2:10 "But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." He frequently refers to these mysteries in his conversations with the saints. 1 Corinthians 15:51 says "Behold, I show you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed." His frequent reference to the mysteries of God was to the great plan that God has for mankind. These mysteries include God's plan of salvation, and the great mystery of eternal life, the rapture and the kingdom of heaven.

Those who are saved into the kingdom of God are at the first stage of their spiritual development. The spirit of God leads them through the mysteries of God's plan, step by step, as they study the word and listen to the preached word. Paul said those who study God's word and let the spirit reveal truths to them soon find that " Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." 1 Corinthians 2:9

The great truth of this text is that God has prepared a mysterious plan for mankind collectively. Since God is personal, he has also prepared a mysterious plan for each individual. We learn the nature of God's plan for us by studying his word and listening to the preached word. As it is revealed we understand with a stronger conviction that God's plan for us, is the best plan.

Ways Our Enemies Prepare For Us

The enemy of every believer is Satan. He uses people and circumstances to destroy our enthusiasm and commitment. Satan prepares for us therefore we should be ware.

PREPARING WAYS TO HANG US: Esther 7:10 tells us how Haman prepared to destroy Mordecai by hanging him on a gallows but hanged on the very gallows that he built for Mordecai. Satan is planning ways to hang us! We should stay in the word and beware of his attempts!

DIGS DITCHES: Psalm 57:6 reminds us that Satan has prepared snares and ditches to entangle us. But only by the grace of God have we escape them and they have fallen into their own ditches. "They have prepared a net for my steps; my soul is bowed down: they have digged a pit before me, into the midst whereof they are fallen themselves."

Ways God Prepares For Us

God has a prepared plan for each of us. We are not required to follow it, but if we do, he promises us great rewards. Look at the ways God has prepared for us:

A PLACE TO LIVE, A MATE FOR LIFE: God prepared a beautiful Garden for Adam to live. He prepared him a wife to share his life with him. The two of them were placed in the garden, a perfect match. Genesis 2:8. They lost their Garden home because of disobedience, but they never disobeyed again and Adam held on to Eve for over 900 years. God has prepared a place and a person for everyone. Sometimes we take a long time getting to the right person because we won't let God do the choosing. Even today, God has the right apartment or house already planned for true believers and he has the right mate or no mate already in the plan. True believers will search the word and listen to the preached word for God to reveal the mystery!

VICTORY OVER ENEMIES. God has prepared to help us achieve victory over our enemies when we are unjustly persecuted. Psalm 23:5 "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies" reminds us that God has pre-arranged for us to share in a victory celebration over our enemies. That victory may not always be the defeat of our enemy, but it could be the retreat and salvation of a former enemy. The victory is prepared because the battle is anticipated. Believers who search the word will under the mystery of Romans 8:28 "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

MISSION: God has a prepared a mission for each of us to carry out. But he has also prepared for the fact that we might try to evade the mission. When God gave Jonah a mission to go to Ninevah he made four preparations anticipating that Jonah would drag his feet. In Jonah 1:17 he prepared a fish to swallow him. In Jonah 4:6 he prepared a gourd plant to protect him from the heat for a day then in very next verse prepared a worm to eat up the gourd. In Jonah 4:8 he prepared a vehemently hot east wind to scorch him. God anticipated Jonah's resistance and prepared to deal with it.

Many people today are resisting their mission. Jonah didn't like the people in Ninvevah he didn't want to do anything to make them improve themselves in God's sight. So are many in the church with respect to some department or program they don't like. However, God has prepared for it.

God Has Paradise Prepared

Not only does God have a plan for us in this life, but he also has a plan that goes beyond this life into the next life.

He has prepared a way for our salvation. Romans 10:9 "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."

When the world was rocking and reeling in despair, the cry went out through time and eternity...the Lord needs somebody!

Abraham couldn't go; he had to deal with the lamb in the bush!

Moses couldn't go; he had to administer the commandments!

Elijah couldn't go; he had to wrestle with the prophets of Baal!

Ezekiel couldn't go; he had to envision the dry bones in the valley!

Daniel couldn't go; he had to spend the night in the Lion's Den!

Malachi couldn't go; he was possessed by a people that were robbing God!

John the Baptist couldn't go, because he wasn't worthy to untie his shoes!

Down the halls of time I hear a voice saying "prepare me a body" I'll go!

He came to a prepared body!

He died on a prepared cross!

He was buried in a prepared tomb!

He arose after three days. He went up into the heavens. He went up to prepare for us!

I know that's what he did because in John 14:2 "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

What God has prepared is:

—Better than good; richer than rich!

—Softer than soft; and sweeter than sweet!

—Eye hath not seen, nor has it entered into the heart of man to understand the many things God has in store for us! For Hebrews 11:6 says: "for he hath prepared for them a city."

John saw the "the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Revelation 21:2

I don't know about but I've decided to trust in God's plan. We may not understand it now, but bye and bye when the morning come....

We'll tell the story how we've overcome, we'll understand it better bye and bye!

Satisfaction Guaranteed

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 13, 1995

SCRIPTURE: And the LORD shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not. Isaiah 58:11

Introduction

Have you ever been guaranteed satisfaction? Most people are bombarded with promises that include the phrase "satisfaction guaranteed" or your money back. Some say "if you are not completely satisfied in 30 days your money will be refunded." To the consumer, such a promise is a very strong statement of confidence in the product. Especially when the phrase "if you are not satisfied for any reason" is added. Laws provide certain amounts of time for sales contracts to go into effect. If, after reading the contract, a consumer is dissatisfied. Some department stores have a "no questions asked policy concerning returning merchandise." Consumer satisfaction is of considerable importance to the merchant. Successful businesses go out of their way to insure that customers are satisfied.

Despite our best efforts however, there are some people that are hard to satisfy. If banks were giving away free silver dollars there would be somebody complaining that silver dollars look like quarters so they should have been giving paper dollars. If grocery stores were giving away fryers somebody would complain that they should have been hens.

Consider the grumpy husband who had the reputation of being one of the hardest men in the world to satisfy. No one had ever done anything that met his satisfaction. Everything was either too long or too short. However, after hearing his complaints for several years, his wife had listed everything he had complained about and finally she knew she could bring him his morning breakfast and he would be completely satisfied. She made him toast, browned just right, buttered and cut in half. He once complained that the toast was too dark, margarine should have been butter and slices were too big and should have been cut. His coffee was peculated instead of instant. There was sugar instead of sweet N low and real cream instead of preme. The bacon was dry fried, no greasy spots anywhere, because he didn't like greasy bacon. She prepared him two eggs, one scrambled and one sunny side up. They were perfect; no running yellows or chipped whites. She brought it to him after he was awake for a few minutes because he complained she brought it too early. This time everything was perfect. As he sat in bed and prepared to eat she stood with a look of accomplishment on her face to read his reaction. He looked at the perfectly prepared plate and said: "This is good, but you fried the wrong egg!" Some folks simply can't be satisfied!

There are many people who unhappy with God. They complain that they should have a bigger house. They want a bigger car. They think they deserve more money. They unhappy with lifebecause they think God has cheated them in some way. Daily they stand in the complaint line. Some have returned God for Satan, who seems to offer the satisfaction that meets their expectation.

While there are some who are not satisfied with God, we should remember that God is not jumping up and down with joy with some of us either.

As Christians, we have learned that our God satisfies all of our needs and most of our wants. Anything we need God's got it. We are satisfied. However, the words a familiar song linger: "I am satisfied. I am satisfied. But the question comes to me as I look at Calvary. Is my master satisfied with me."

Exposition

This text focuses on a series of observations made by the prophet Isaiah that addressed a reason for God's dissatisfaction with the people and what they could do to satisfy God and get satisfaction themselves.

This text comes as Isaiah pointed to the deteriorating moral state of the people. They had reached a point where they were becoming increasingly worldly in their outlook and less godly. In their sinful living they had tried to keep the form of their religious life without its substance.

In particular, this passage addresses God's dissatisfaction with his people.

Verse 1: Isaiah is told to "cry aloud" and show the people their "transgression" that displeases God.

Verse 2: They appear to be going through the right motions. They "seek me daily" and enjoy discussing the ordinances and laws. They "delight in approaching God" by their regular attendance.

Verse 3-4 The people question why God is not satisfied. They remind him that they fast regularly and attend unto every component of the ritual. They do not understand why God should be dissatisfied if they are doing all of the required things and going to all of the required places obediently.

Verse 5: God asks in effect "is this the fast that I have chosen?" Is it a mere going through the motion that satisfies me, or is it true praise? True service.

Beginning at verse six God gives a list of the actions of believers that would truly please and satisfy him.

REPENT: God would be pleased if they would truly repent and "loose the band of wickedness." Fasting, bible study and worship do not please God if there is no repentance. (v5)

LIFT BURDENS: God is pleased when believers help lift the burdens of the poor and the oppressed (v5)

FEEDING THE HUNGRY: God is satisfied when believers are feeding the hungry and giving shelter to the homeless. He is also pleased when we are helping clothe the naked, even to the point of giving the needy of your own ward robe (v7).

THEN: Verses 8 and 9 both start with the word "then" which implies that the things promised are conditioned upon what was mentioned in verses 5-7.
God says he will be satisfied with believers when they repent from sinful activity and begin to act on their faith. THEN he says, we will have light in the midst of darkness, our "health shall spring forth speedily"; your good and righteous reputation will go in front of you and God will get the glory. Moreover, when we move away from ritualism toward action, then we will be able to callon God with expectation of a positive response. "Then shalt thy call and the Lord shall answer; thou shalt cry and he shall say here I am." (v9).

IF: Verses 9 and 10 are highlighted by two IF's. IF we would lift the burdens that we may have placed on other people, remove our accusing fingers and stop our boasting; and IF we would put our faith into action and help others, God would bless us.

SATISFY: In the previous verses God tells how we can satisfy him, through repenting and truly serving. Here he tells how we can gain true satisfaction: When we work to satisfy others. "And if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity.." (v10).

We will be truly be satisfied when we will do the will of God and show his love to others. Then he will "satisfy thy soul in drought." He will make fat thy bones, and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not." (v11).

We are satisfied when our will is his will and we are carrying out his will to the best of our ability. If we do the master's will, satisfaction is guaranteed.

Why Many are Unsatisfied

There are many reasons some people are not satisfied with God, but the main reason is:

THEY EXPECT MORE THAN WHAT WAS PROMISED: Many expected their relationship with God to be a good luck charm that would protect them from sickness, death, misfortune and persecution. However, we have never been promised freedom from trial. In fact Jesus warned us to expect just the opposite as Satan tries to attack you because he himself was attacked. John 15:20 " ...The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you.."

Some expected prosperity. They "named it" but they couldn't claim it! They asked for a big job and did not get it! They asked for a new car and did not get it! They gave, worshipped and studied but lost their job! They asked but received not and they became dissatisfied. They heard what Christ said about asking and receiving, but they didn't hear ALL that he said. In John 15:7 he said "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." In other words, if your will is lost in my will then what you ask for is only what God wants you to have. Whatever he wants you to have you will receive. Whatever you have satifies you because it is what God wills for you. It's not a matter of name it and claim it, it's a matter of claim it, if it's in God's permissive will.

Tired of Pacifiers

Finally we must consider those who have spent the majority of their lives seeking an elusive satisfaction. They have sought fullness but they have sought it only in the context of the superficial. The world, at its best, can only offer us pacifers.

A pacifer is "simulated satisfaction." It carries us through the motions but leaves us empty. When a baby cries in hunger sometimes it is given a pacifer, which takes it through the motions, but nothing comes out. Soon the baby cries again, because it has not been fed.

There are many who are not satisfied because they've been pacified!

Some wanted a home but they spent their energy building a house. The house pacifies but it does not satisfy!

Someone wanted a good husband but they settled for a good looking man. The man pacifies but a good husband would satisfy. An "old lady" will pacify but a good wife will satisfy!

There are many whose lives are characterized by huge sucking sounds!

But pacifers are for babies. After a while even a baby won't take the pacifer, you may put it in its mouth, but the baby will spit it out! Maybe that's what Paul had in mind when he said "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things. (1 Corinthians 13:11).

If you are tired of pacifers, I know a man who can satisfy!

If you are tired of going through meaningless motions, I know a man who can give your life new meaning!

If you tired of sucking up to the world, but getting nothing out of it, I know a man who says ":. I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." (John 10:10)

I have tried him and I know he satisfies! I'm satisfied because there has never been a:

—Mountain that he didn't help me to climb; Cross that he didn't help me to bear —Battle that he didn't help me to fight; Enemy he didn't help me defeat!

—Darkness that he didn't help me see my way through; Crises he didn't help me confront!

—Trial that he didn't help me endure; Burden he didn't help me to carry!

If you're tired of pacifiers, try Jesus!

Jesus, who died on Calvary!

Jesus, who rose on Sunday morning!
Try Jesus, he will satisfy your soul!

Is Thy God Able To Deliver Thee?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 21, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel: and the king spake and said to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?" Daniel 6:20

Introduction

Have you ever tried to do something that seemed impossible? Have you begun a venture where success was improbable? Have you ever challenged a foe that seemed invincible? Have you ever faced a fate that seemed inescapable? How did you fare? There are many who find themselves surround by impossible circumstances daily but tackle them one by one with a certain air of confidence. Unintimidated they appear soothed by an unseen trust that gives them the courage to face each day boldly. This is the way that true believers approach the difficulties of life. They view each day as another opportunity for them let the will of God work through them. Doing so, nothing is impossible. No goal is unreachable. No objective is unreachable!

Consider the three men who were locked in a room and told that the key was taped to the ceiling. The first man jumped for a while but could not reach the key. He sat down in a chair in frustration. The second man tried too, but he was unable to reach it. He leaned against a stack of old books. Both men began to complain in their frustration. The third man looked at the ceiling, then looked around the room. He borrowed the chair that the first man sat on and the books the second man leaned against and stacked the books in the chair. He carefully climbed to the top, retrieved the key and came down. As he unlocked the door and left the room the third man told his two friends: "To achieve the impossible we must climb upon the possible and trust God to keep us from falling!"

There are many who fear falling so much that they never achieve the impossible! That is the difference between the believer and the nonbeliever. The believer enters every situation with faith that he serves a God who is able to make the impossible possible. Such faith helps him face danger, and the prospect of failure. Though literally surrounded by hungry lions, he is confident that with God all things are possible.

As Christians, we approach life with confidence that our God is in control. Come what may from day our God is able to deliver us to higher plane!

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Daniel as he faces death trusting in the power of God.

Daniel was a great prophet of God who had found fame in Babylon because of the way God used him to interpret dreams. He was also praised because of the strength of his character. He was brought to Babylon, as a teenager, at the time of Babylonian conquest of Judah because it was their practice to deport the "cream of the crop" to be retrained for service in Babylon. He refused to eat from the king's table and maintained a life of prayer and devotion to God.

He was a famous leader under three different kingdoms: Babylon, Media and Persia. He served as a prominent official in these kingdoms under Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, Darius and Cyrus. He did all of this although he was generally an old man, nearing 90.

Daniel's life is highlighted by his gift of interpretation of dreams and his potent faith in God.

In the closing years of his life King Darius established a leadership structure that involved 124 leaders. It consisted of the king, three presidents and 120 princes. Of the three presidents Daniel was the most favored. When Darius discovered that he was losing much of his treasure due to the wickedness of some princes he proposed to reorganize the government placing Daniel, a man he could trust, over all of the others.

The 120 princes and remaining two presidents were not happy. They wanted Daniel removed. They tried to use his religion against him. As a result they devised a decree for the king to sign, forbidding anyone to pray to any God or person other than the king for 30 days. This was a trap for Daniel since he routinely prayed three times a day. The penalty for disobedience was to be thrown in the den of lions, which were kept hungry and caged for the purpose of serving as natural executioners.

Daniel refused to follow the order. He could not endure a single day without prayer, let alone 30 days. Reluctantly the king ordered him to be placed in the Lion's Den. He ordered a stone placed over the mouth of the pit and it was sealed to prevent anyone from removing Daniel in the night. Darius, however, could not sleep all night. Early the next morning he had the stone removed and called out "Is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?" When Daniel answered the king rejoiced.

God had shut the mouths of the lions who were still moving around in the den.

Daniel was immediately removed from the pit in triumph. God had delivered him. He was at peace, not because he knew that God would deliver him but because he knew God was able to deliver him, if that was his will. Whatever God wanted, Daniel wanted.

Is thy God Able?

Today the world questions every believer with the Darius' question: "Is thy God able to deliver thee?"

Millions of Christians are wrestling with a plethora of problems that seem endless. The problems range from wrecked finances on one hand to the dissolution of personal relationships. The list never seems to end: Not enough money. Things keep breaking down. Love life is threatened. Insecurity. Dreams escaping. Add to these the frustrations faced when enemies assail and meticulously plan ways to destroy the very essence of your quest and the recipe for a trouble society is the result.

In the midst of all this, believers are asked: "Is thy God able to deliver thee?" When the Three Hebrew Boys faced similar circumstances their response was recorded in Daniel 3:17 "..Our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace,.." Dan 3:18 But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up."

That is the key to the believer's response to difficult times. Our response is not that we will not endure difficult times, but that the God we serve is able to deliver us from these difficulties if it is his will. Since our will is the same as his will, we live at peace. Paul reemphasized this great truth in 2 Corinthians 9:8 "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work:"

We do not expect to be kept from the lion's den, but resolve daily that even though we go into the very mouth of adversity that God is able to shut the mouths of the lions.

Even God's strongest and most faithful believers spend a day or two in the lion's den. Sometimes the circumstances of life make us feel as though we were in a lion's den. These are times when lies are told that present us in a false light! These are the moments when gossip about us increases and is reduced to whispers and cutting stares when we enter a room! These are times when family members treat us as enemies and friends ostracize us. These are times when danger surrounds us and we hear the roar of poverty, crime, disease, and hunger! In the midst of these times the question is asked: "Is thy God able to deliver thee?

God is Able

When we consider the difficulties of our present age many are asking is thy God able?

Crime is all around us and appears to increase daily. Is thy God able?

Moral decadence is tightly interwoven into the fabric of our society. Is thy God able?

The poor are getting poor while the rich get richer. Is thy God able?

Those who are troubled by the roaring of the lions and are intimidated by the gnashing of their teeth apparently are not familiar with the power of our God.

Anyone who asks the question is God able, is not acquainted with the Lord and his mighty works.

Is God Able? Ask Abraham and he will respond that when there was doubt that his wife could give him a son in his old age he found out there was nothing too hard for the LORD? "

Is God able? Ask Moses who will testify that God can be a bridge over troubling water!

Is God able? Ask the widow woman who was down to a last cup of meal and cup of oil how God keep the barrel from running dry!

Is God able? Ask The three Hebrew Boys who were protected in the midst of the furnace by the cooling wings of the Son of God!

Is God able? Ask Ezekiel who will remind us that God can take dry bones and make them live again!

Brothers and Sisters be of God cheer, there is an answer to the question. Yes God is able!

Eph 3:20 He is "able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think"

Philippians 3:21 He "is able even to subdue all things unto himself."

2 Timothy 1:12 "He is able to keep that which I have committed unto him"

Heb 2:18 He is "able to help them that are tempted."

Heb 7:25 He is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God

Jude 1:24is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory

Is God Able?

He's able to take my darkness and turn it to light!

He's able to take my failure and turn it into success!

He's able to despair and turn it into delight!

I know he's able, because one evening, 2000 years ago, he picked up an old rugged cross...

I know he's able because he died out on Calvary!

I know he's able because early Sunday morning he rose up from the grave!

He's able!

He's able!

He's able to make everything all right!

I Want To Be At The Meeting

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 3, 1995

SCRIPTURE Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.:1 Thessalonians 4:17 And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them. Rev 7:14-15 And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. Rev 21:3-4*

Introduction

How do you like the idea of attending meetings? Depending on the purpose and nature of the meeting, the answer to that question could be bad or good. There are different kinds of meetings. Business meetings, discuss the details of the operation of an entity. Social meetings give opportunities for fellowships. Some meetings are private, while others are open to the public. We dread meetings we are obligated to attend, even if they are short. However, we enjoy those that promote our personal goals, no matter how long they last. There are some meetings we could live without but there are some we enjoy so much that we actually look forward to them. When circumstances force us to miss a good meeting we are disappointed. Very few like to hear that they missed a very upbeat, information packed, meeting!

Some have strange reasons why they attend meetings. Consider the time when the rabbits decided to have a prayer meeting in woods. They posted signs all over the forest announcing their prayer meeting. Nearly all of the forest animals promised to come. The lion looked at the plump little rabbit and quickly agreed to come the meeting. The tiger was fascinated by the idea of a rabbit sponsored prayer meeting. The rabbits were excited by the positive responses they were receiving from all of the animals. On the day of the meeting however, all of the seats were empty. Not a single animal showed up. No lions, tigers or bears. Puzzled as to why no animals came to the prayer meeting the wise old owl answered: "Well since we were inviting some real tough characters to the meeting, I became concerned about their reason for wanting to come to the meeting. Was it prayer or something else? So, I took the liberty of going behind you and telling all of the others that there would still be a prayer meeting, but the rabbits wouldn't be there. Since the lions, tigers and bears were always very hungry, they chose not to come because they knew their prayer wouldn't be answered!" There are many who go to the meetings but their reasons for attendance are far from pure!

So it is with meetings of the Saints. Some come for a variety of reasons, while others come with one thought in mind: they want to be in the presence of the Lord. Those who want to be in God's presence enjoy worship and they yearn for every opportunity lift his name in praise. To them, getting to the meeting is important. Missing the meetings, to such people, is a fate worse than death.

As Christians we have had our own private meeting with God. In that meeting we gave our lives to him. Now, we live our lives daily waiting for his return. That's a meeting we don't to miss.

Exposition

These texts focus upon three meetings that will be important to saints of God.

Paul, writing to the church at Thessalonica, addresses the subject of death by reminding believers that those who have passed on are not eternally lost. In verses 13-18 he underscores the biblical truth that when the Lord returns he will call all of the saints on earth to a meeting in the sky. Generally, the meeting is called the "rapture" or the being caught up! Paul noted that those who are alive at the time that Christ returns will not "prevent" or go before those who have passed before them. The dead in Christ will rise first and then be caught up to meet him in the air. "After that, we who are still alive and are left will be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. And so we will be with the Lord forever."

The attendance roster at the great meeting in glory however is still incomplete. The first group to arrive will be those mentioned in Thessalonians. During the final seven years of time, called the great tribulation there will be others who will come forth and accept Christ. This is what John refers to in Revelation 7. When a long procession of Saints, which included 144,000 Jews and a number so large that it could not be counted came forward the question was asked "these who are in white robes, who are they?" The answer was "these are they" that have forward out of the final seven years of tribulation, and they like those before them have also washed their robes in the blood of the lamb. This multitude of people of all races, nations and tongues will be preparing to go to the same meeting in which the Godly dead and the transformed faithful will be in attendance.

The third group to be in attendance will consist of the angels and heavenly host who will come bringing the heavenly city, the New Jerusalem. The New Jerusalem, whose inhabitants would make up what is known as the "bride" of Christ will be the meeting place for all of the participants, which will have grown to include even the heavenly hosts. John said the guest of honor at this great meeting will the Lord himself who will dwell among human kind forever.

The final meeting of the Saints won't have a time limit because time will be no more. Its agenda will consist of love, service and constant praise of God. Every problem, hurt, woe and concern that would make life difficult will no longer exist. Whatever hurts the Saints may have had will be a thing of the past as God wipes away all thought, memory or perception of anything that will diminish their joyful existence in heaven. John heard the promise clearly: "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."

Whether among the godly dead, the transformed faithful, or the tribulation saved, every saint of God will be at the meeting around the throne and "so shall they be with the Lord forever!"

The Point of Conviction

One of the first ways that we meet the Lord is at the point of conviction. This is the point in our lives in which we come to accept Christ as both our Lord and Savior.

Jacob met the Lord one night as he wrestled with an Angel. He refused to let go of the Angel until he was blessed with a new perception of life and a new name!

For Saul, who led a life of persecution against the church, the meeting with the Lord came on the Damascus Road when he heard a voice saying "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" As a result of his meeting, both his name and his life changed!

A woman who had been accused of many sins met the Lord at her lowest moment, when he asked those without sin to cast the first stone, she found herself in a private meeting with the savior. Her accusers had gone away!

When the woman at the well met the Lord, while still in her sins, she ran to tell the whole city to "come see a man" who has told me all I've ever done!

Just as these met the Lord in their moments of spiritual weakness, many believers had their first meeting with God at the point of spiritual weakness. It is at the this point that we are convicted of our sins and accept Jesus as our savior. It is also at this point that our sins are forgiven and we become citizens in the kingdom of God.

When we meet God at the point of conviction, He saves us from drowning in our own self defeat. He lifts us to a higher plane. Perhaps that's why the song writer declared: "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore. Very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more. But the master of the sea heard my despairing cry and from the waters lifted me, now safe am I!"

Point of Service

The second place that believers meet the Lord is at the point of service. Here they respond to the command of the Lord to go into the highways and byways and feed the hungry, relieve the poor, and work until the day is done.

Believers who have met the Lord in this context may not stand in front of a burning bush like Moses; have hot coals pressed to their lips like Isaiah, or hear voices in the night like Samuel, but nevertheless like Jeremiah, they go out on a mission to help others with a zeal the pushes them like "fire shut up in their bones."

That service takes many forms. Sometimes it is evidenced through volunteer community service. In other ways it is a willingness to give of oneself to help the poor and needy. It is reflected in a willingness to work with young people, or to teach the word. Those who give of themselves as ushers, Christian Education leaders, mission workers and a plethora of other areas of service in the kingdom, do so because at one point they had a meeting with Lord, in which they responded: "I'll go! I'll go! If the Lord needs somebody, here am oh Lord, I send me!"

Point of Need

The third place that believers meet the Lord is at the point of need. This is the point in which they are physically or emotionally drained and need his presence. Believers who have reached this point know what it is to meet with God.

A woman who had an issue of blood, knew if she could just touch the hem of his garment he would meet her at her point of need.

A man who had been lame for 38 years found that the Lord met him at his point of need and told him to "take thy bed and walk!"

Likewise believers who have endured lengthy sicknesses, death of loved ones, and decades of hard times, know what it means to meet the Lord. They yearn to meet the Lord. They relish the idea of being in His presence because He can take the burdens that trouble them and make life more enjoyable.

This meeting with the Lord comes daily as the Holy Spirit communes with believers. That's why the song writer says: "I walked through the garden alone, while the dew is still on the roses and the voice I hear, falling on my ear the Son of God discloses. And He walks with me and He talks with me and He tells me that I am his own. And the joy we share as we tarry there, none other has ever known!"

Point of Death

The final place that believers meet God is at the point of death. This is point at which they prepare to step out of this life into the next. For the unbeliever it is an unthinkable moment, because death is an imposing, wide and dangerous river to cross. The Saint at the point of death is instantly absent from the body on his way to the meeting in glory!

At the point of death, Enoch walked with God and was not! He was on his way to the meeting!

At the point of death, Moses was ministered to by Angels on a mountain top and was never seen again. He was on his way to the meeting!

After a life of service, Heaven sent a chaffered chariot to bring Elijah to the meeting!

No wonder the song writer declares “I looked over Jordan and what did I see, coming forth to carry me home! A band of angels coming after me! Coming forth to carry me home!”

I don’t know how long it will be! I don’t know what the future holds for me! But “if you get there before I do, tell all my friends I’m coming there too!

I want to be at the meeting!
I want to be there when they declare him king of kings!
I want to be there when they crown him Lord of Lords!
I don’t know about you, but I want to be at the meeting!
I want to be there when the saint’s go marching in!
What a Time!
Every day will be Sunday! What at Time!
It’ll always be howdy and never goodbye! What a time!
Over yonder, the hearse wheels won’t roll and crying days will be over! What a time!
We’re going sit down by the banks of the river!
What a time!
What a time!
What a time!

On Saturday August 26, 1995, Rosa Carter Crane packed up and left this world. She met God at the point of conviction, service, and need. She’s at the great camp meeting on the other shore!

Untapped Power!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 3, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "But you will receive power when the Holy Spirit comes on you; and you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth."Acts 1:8

Introduction

Have you ever felt backed into a corner, only to have someone show you a way out? Have you ever felt helpless, then found out there were many opportunities for self help? Have you ever felt powerless, only to find out that you had untapped potential just waiting to be used? There are millions of people in the world who live in a constant state of depression over what they don't have, when they haven't used all that which is available to them. Many are walking gold mines of potential, but they are busted because they have not chosen to use their inherent powers to reach into themselves and pull out the raw ore that is the "stuff" of their potential. We have power, but it's untapped! We have the resources but often that which we have is either never used or at best is under utilized!

Consider the aging grandmother who had spent considerable time living in the back hills. She was content with her almost hermit like existence and her grand children had considerable difficulty getting her to use modern conveniences. After years of persuading, they talked grandmother into getting electricity and running water in her home. The family threw a great party. After decades they had finally brought grandmother into the modern era. After several months passed family members started getting phone calls from the utility company, which was concerned that there may have been an error in the grand mother's meter readings. The readings showed only a very small amount of water and electricity had been used over a three month period. They wanted to arrange to have the meters checked. When the grand children visited grandmother they asked about the problem. "Are you using your running water? What about your electric power?" The grand mother proudly responded: "Oh I use both of them every day. I draw down enough water to prime the out door pump and I turn on the lights every night to see how to light my lamps!" Poor grand mother, she had access to all the power she ever needed, but rarely used it!

Often we fail to achieve the greatness that God has in store for us because we simply don't use what is available to us in the way God intends. If we don't achieve our highest potential, it's not because God has failed us, or the power of God has diminished, but that we have simply failed to tap into the immense power of our God in a way sufficient to meet our needs.

As Christians, we know the power of God is immense. We know that with him all things are possible. Let us resolve to let him move freely through us every day, that we may realize the awesome power of his being in our lives.

Exposition

This text focuses on the disciples as they received empowerment to carry out a mission to carry the gospel to all the world.

In Matthew 28, Jesus gave his disciples a great mission. He charged them to "go ye therefore and teach all nations" the gospel message. This was a challenging charge to Galilean commoners who were not schooled in languages other than their native tongue and the Aramaic, which was the language of commerce and diplomacy. Since the confusion of the languages at Babel in Genesis 11:9 people of different nations were not able to communicate. To bridge the gap, persons who moved from country to country were able to vaguely communicate with each other by speaking Aramaic which was the closest to a universal language, but was still crude and useful only in the basic sense.

Jesus himself often spoke Aramaic when he moved to different regions. He used the terms: Abba (father) (Mark 14:36), talitha, qumi (maiden, arise) (Mark 5:41), lama sabachthani (why hast thou forsaken me?) (Mark 15:34) all of which were Aramaic phrases.

Despite the absence of an ability to command foreign tongues, Jesus commissioned his followers to go to their immediate neighbors and then spread out around the world and preach the gospel. Jesus told them not to leave Jerusalem (Acts 1:4) until they had received the power to carry out this mission. In obedience they waited faithfully until, on the day of Pentecost, the power came! They were given the extraordinary gift of communication! They were able to speak in such a way that people of every nation under the heaven (Acts 2:5) understood what they were saying. It was a remarkable gift!

Just as the Apostles were given this special power to carry out their mission, so is every believer endowed with one or more gifts, given not for private worship or enjoyment, but for the purpose of furthering the kingdom! As believers themselves were baptized with the Holy Spirit each found that their special gift had been given the "master's touch." Some became concerned that some members had gifts that they did not have and jealousies developed. Some who had been given the gift of speaking foreign languages would show off their gift in public worship services. Addressing the subject, Paul in 1 Corinthians 12 reminded believers that there are many kinds of gifts ranging from intense faith, healing hands, insight and wisdom to speaking fluently in foreign languages but all come from the same spirit. Moreover in 1 Corinthians 14 he warned those who had been given the gift of languages not to use their gift in public worships unless a person was present to interpret what was being said.

Paul made it clear that after Baptism with water each believer prays for the Baptism of the Holy Ghost, which is the special power from God to help carry out the mission of preaching, teaching and baptizing in all the world. Armed with the knowledge that the power of God is available, every believer is charged to carry out the great commission of Jesus which is to "go ye therefore!"

The power to carry out the mission does not come from ourselves, but it comes from God himself!

Having It But Not Using It

William James once wrote: "Everyone knows on any given day that there are energies slumbering in him which the incitements of that day do not call forth.... Compared with what we ought to be, we are only half awake. Our fires are damped, our drafts are checked. We are making use of only a small part of our possible mental and physical resources.... Stating the thing broadly, the human individual thus lives far within his limits; he possesses powers of various sorts he habitually fails to use." What we are able to achieve is only limited by our willingness to draw on the resources of power and faith that are within us.

For many years men were content to collect only one egg a day from chickens. Now modern technology has proven that the body clocks of chickens can adjusted to produce two or more eggs in a single day. Science has found ways to get cows to give more milk each day. Thanks to George Washington Carver, agriculture has found ways to revitalize the soil to get bigger and better crops than ever before. The discoveries which made each of these accomplishments possible built on conditions that already existed, but were simply untapped.

Even the human potential has been proven to be able to do much more than originally imagined. There have been recorded feats of miraculous strength, great mental accomplishments, and courageous moments that far exceeded what was normally thought to be human capacity.

This is especially true for Christians. Not only do we have untapped human powers but we also have the added power of the Holy Ghost within us that makes it possible for us to do anything that God wills for us to accomplish.

The power of the Holy Ghost can work inside of a believer to help him accomplish anything that is within the will of God.

It Can Be Dangerous

The power of God within us is immense when released to further the kingdom of God. It is too much power to unleash for our own agendas. Balaam was tempted to use his prophetic gift for profit and would have been destroyed had it not been for a talking mule. A crooked magician tried to buy the power of healing in the New Testament only to find out that powerful gifts from God are not for sale.

Have you ever wondered how a bird sits on a powerline but is never consumed by its power? A young boy wondered the same thing and one day reached from his window to grab hold to the powerline and sit on it like the bird. Before he touched the wire his mother yanked him from the window and explained that the bird was able to sit on the wire because he touched nothing in the process. However the boy's body hanging out the window would have touch the house and the power that supported the bird would have destroyed him, because of the house served as a ground a diverted the power.

We who strive to live for God, must use the power of God freely for the purpose of furthering his kingdom and let go of our worldly pursuits. That same power that supports a gift that rests freely on the power of God can destroy the person who tries to hold on to the power of God while holding on to the world at the same time.

Power In the Holy Ghost

Without a doubt there is power in the Holy Ghost!

The man whose life is a picture of fear, becomes a brave heart when the Holy Ghost comes!

The woman whose voice squeaks in a whisper, becomes a resounding soprano, when the Holy Ghost comes!

The defeated are lifted into victory, when the Holy Ghost comes!

The exhausted are given new energy when the Holy Ghost gives them power. No wonder the scripture declares: "They that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength. They shall mount up on wings as eagles, the run and not get weary. They shall walk and not faint!"

When the Holy Ghost comes the frightened and trembling soul looks upon the unknown with confidence saying "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear. The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?"

There is power, power, wonder working power is the blood of the lamb!

This the same power that created earth out of nothing!

The same power that spat out the seven seas and spangled the night with moon and the stars!

This is the same power that lifted Jesus from a borrowed grave and gave him life eternal!

Go and tell the world about the power of God!

Tell them that he died and that he's alive today!

Tell the world that he's got all power!

All power!

All power in his hands!

When Bread Is Not Enough

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La. 71201

September 17, 1995

SCRIPTURE: Behold, the days come, saith the Lord GOD, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the LORD:" Amos 8:11; But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Matthew 4:4*

Introduction

Have you ever found yourself surrounded by plenty but still felt something was missing? Have you ever looked in your cupboard and saw scores of canned food items but closed the door saying "I don't have anything to eat" because what you were looking for was not there? Have you ever found yourself buying meats at the market although your freezer is full? Have you searched for more items to purchase although you know you have plenty? Sometimes you look for something else because what you are looking for is not there. Though surrounded by plenty, many often find that there are still looking for that one additional "thing" that will complete the set and bring them satisfaction.

There are many in life who are constantly looking for that key element. Some mistakenly think they will find it in accumulation of "things" or the attainment of some elusive goal. This is especially true among those who have achieved some level of success. They live in a decent house, drive a decent car and have a few creature comforts that suggest that happiness is within their reach. Yet with all the trappings of success that we possess, there are many who still find themselves looking for something that they can't quite identify. They hunger for more. They thirst for some unseen truth that makes sense of their lives and brings balance and peace.

Consider the thief who made a profession of stealing the valuables of his neighbors. He stole everything that he could get his hands on: jewelry, appliances, furniture, even automobiles. He had become quite successful at his craft avoiding capture for many years. Finally he was nabbed coming from a house in the middle of the night. In court, his whole history of thievery was revealed. The judge, in a surprise judgment, gave him a choice of life in prison or 10 days in a golden cell. The thought of a golden cell appealed to the thief and he took the latter. In his golden jail cell everything was lavish. The walls were golden. The bedstead was studded with rubies and diamonds. The pillows were stuffed with $100 bills. The carpet was made from mink skins. He was impressed and happy. However, as the day passed he noticed that despite the luxury of his surroundings, he had not been given anything to eat. He banged on the door and demanded food. The guard appeared holding a single loaf of bread and cup of water which was put on a table in full view of the cell. The jailer said "You said ten days please, thinking it to be ten days of ease. Though surrounded by silver and gold, ten days is like 10 years when there is no food for the soul." As the thief watched the bread and water on the table, by the 4th day he was willing to trade it all for just one loaf of bread and a cup of water. The jailer's words rang in his ear, "what good is silver and gold if there is no food for the soul.!" Those who have plenty won't know true happiness until they know God. Though surrounded by the trappings of success, they will find themselves starving for his presence. Only then will they realize the fullness of life.

As Christians we put no trust in material things. Neither do we build our hopes and faith on worldly success. We may have a few symbols of success, but we know that we will never be able to appreciate them fully unless we enjoy the daily presence of God in our lives.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Amos as he reminds Israel that despite its prosperity they will hunger for the word of God.

Amos was a herdsman who became a spokesman for God during one of the most prosperous times in the history of the Northern Kingdom Jeroboam II was the king. Under his leadership the country had secured its boundaries against foreign enemies. A time of relative peace and prosperity was underway. The economic climate was great. Money was flowing. Politically, there was peace. He had even devised a way to pacify the demands of religious leaders, by setting up golden calves in key cities that would ward off the possibilities of unrest caused by citizens trying to travel to Jeruaslem to worship. It was an era that rivaled Solomon's generation in its stability and economic prosperity (2 Kings 14:23-27). Israel, despite its complaints was enjoying good times.

Yet, it was precisely the social, moral, and religious problems associated with this period of prosperity that became the focus for Amos' voice of judgment, which he characterized as misdirected prosperity. In its prosperity, the people found little time for real and meaningful worship, but only that which was sufficient to meet minimum requirements. In the absence of a sense of morally they became increasingly self centered as the worked to increase their comfort even at the expense or others. Exploitation of the poor occurred throughout the land. In 2:6 Amos chided the people for neglecting the poor, selling them "for a pair of shoes." Justice was a mockery in the land. Only the rich could acquire it and the poor were doomed. In 5:24, Amos viewed the injustices that existed even in a prosperous time and prayed that God would "let justice roll down like waters, and righteousness like a mighty stream."

Spiritually the people did that what was convenient. Kneeling before golden calves in special centers of worship designed to be politically correct, they had a form of religion but no substance. He spoke against this emptiness so much that the priest asked him to leave the country in 7:12 because his words were disturbing their prosperous and peaceful times.

In Chapter 8 Amos begins to list the sins of the people in their prosperity. Beginning at verse 4 he begins a litany of indicting charges againstthem for their sins against God. At verse 11 Amos announces the verdict of God. God promised to bring a famine upon the land.

It would not be a famine of food or water. It would not be a period of economic depression or war. It would not be a famine of "bread" at all. It would be a period when God would leave them to mercy of their own devices and render them victims of their own prosperity. It was a strange and paradoxical indictment. God decided to use their wealth and prosperity against them. Generally, prosperity is seen as an evidence of God's blessings. However, this text gives one of those rare instances in which the method of punishment is to allow prosperous times to continue.

God would allow them to continue but without his presence. Their income would not be affected. Their posssesions would not be affected. In fact there would be no noticeable differences in their outer condition. But just as the mythical Midas was given the golden touch and it proved to be his downfall, God decided to leave the people to the mercy of what had really become their gods.

Amos projected that despite prosperity that people would notice that something was missing from their lives. They would go from place to place searching for it, but will find it elusive. In the days of such prosperity the young women and young men would be especially vulnerable as they fall faint in their search for that one missing component.

In 9:13-15 Amos projects that there will be a time of restoration. This will be a time of even greater prosperity. It will be a time when there will be more planting than reaping, more growth than destruction and the glories of the Lord will be fully appreciated by all. First, however, they had to learn the same truth that Jesus said in Matthew 4:4 "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

Prosperous Times Are Dangeous Times

Despite the difficulties of the present, undeniably we are enjoying unprecedented prosperity. Even those who complain occasionally, secretly admit that compared to generations past, generally we are enjoying a better standard of living than ever before. Generally, the threat of nuclear war has diminished. International trade is flourishing. The economy is vigorous. These are good times.

Yet it is in such periods of good times that the people of God should be careful. Like, Israel in the time of Amos, we must not lose track of that which is necessary for our joy, living by the word of God.

Whenever believers get off track, God has a variety of methods he uses to nudge us in the right direction. In fact, every believer expects a good whipping from God when he strays because Hebrew 12:6 says " For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." Among the methods God uses is to lower the hedge of protection he has built around us and Satan gets busy bringing sickness, financial trouble, and bad times. On occasion however, God steps back and allows our prosperity to punish us. That's what happened in Amos' time. The people were punished by their own prosperity!

When we reach a point that the possession of "bread" becomes all consuming for us, that is a time when we should be reminded that God has in the past allowed belivers to try living by bread alone. There are many who are trying to live by bread alone. They no longer have time for the things of God because their pursuit of bread takes all of their time.

Without God, the symbols of our prosperity become the source of our misery. Many devote all of their time and energy to acquiring homes, cars, money, or promotions on the job, only to find out that most of their anxities, worries and disputes involve the very symbols of their prosperity. When the pursuit of prosperity takes the place of our service to God the very essence of truth that brings fulfillment is diminished. When we neglect hearing the preached word. When we get to busy for personal bible study and devotion. When we neglect public worship, and the communion of the saints because of the demands of prosperity. When we have little or no quality time that we can give to help the poor, needy and afflicted because all of our time is reserved for the pursuit of our prosperity, we are treading on dangerous ground.

If God chooses to punish us like Israel in this text, we won't lose our houses, but be burdened by them. We won't lose our jobs, but be frustrated by them. We won't lose our money, but it will be a constant source of bickering and hard feelings. We will become prisoners in golden cells, victims of our own prosperity.

Truly the word is correct, "man cannot live by bread alone!"

More Than Bread

There is a fate worse than not being prosperous. That fate is to live a life without God.

There is a fate worse than not having a new car, and that's not having a living God on your side!

There is a fate worse than not owning a new home, and that's losing our claim to your heavenly home.

To paraphrase the words of Aretha Franklin: there is a fate worse than not having the house that Jack built, and that's not having Jack!

Without God we may acquire the bread of existence but we do not have the source of life.

Jesus said in John 6:51 "I am the living bread which came down from heaven:

if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world."

When you have the living bread, life takes on a new meaning! When we have the living bread:

—Troubles, become opportunites. The living bread reminds us that in " the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock." Psalm 27:5

—Fears and turned into courage as we remember: "The LORD is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid? Psalm 27:1

—Famines of despair become showers of abudance. Jesus said "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." John 10:10

The living bread is what John referred to when he said in John 1:1 " In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." And when he said: John 1:14 "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us.."

The living bread is Jesus, the lamb of God, who died out on Calvary and rose after three days

No wonder the song writer declared: Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, feed me till I want no more!

I don't know about you but I think I could survive famine, but I know I couldn't make without the Lord.

I could survive if I lost my house, but I couldn't make it without the Lord!

I have survived long periods without any money, but I can't make it a day without the Lord!

Maybe that's what the song writer meant with the words: "I don't know what I'd do without the Lord! I can't even wave my hand without the Lord!"

I got to have the bread. When I've got the bread, I've got a:

Bridge over troubling water; Table in the wilderness
Way when there is no way; doctor in my sick room
Lawyer in my courtroom; Solution to all my problems Bread of heaven! Bread of heaven! Feed me! Feed me!
Till I want no more!

No Longer For Men Only!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the St. Luke Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 17, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:"Acts 2:17; As for Saul, he made havock of the church, entering into every house, and haling men and women committed them to prison.Acts 8:3; "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." Acts 8:12;

Introduction

Can you remember the period of our national history in which signs were posted in every public place for "whites only?" In restaurants, stores, restrooms and doctor's offices the signs were always there. Even when there were jobs being issued it was stipulated or understood that only whites need apply. As African-Americans we felt belittled, insulted and estranged from the rest of America as we approached each of those circumstances. With the distasteful memory of racial segregation clearly in mind, imagine how women feel when they face the same types of circumstances. Instead of the signs reading for "whites only" the social order posts an unwritten "for men only" sign. It is even more frustrating for modern women when the come to worship and serve God and find the same signs posted in the church.

Traditionally, men have relegated women to positions of second class citizenship and have allowed them to tread the sacred domain of the masculine world only in supportive roles. In the biblical context, much of the role played by women in the Old Testament has been underplayed. The overwhelming conclusion that one gets from reading the Old Testament is that faith, strength, courage, leadership and rewards are marked "For Men Only."

Over the centuries a great division developed between men and women as women began to assert themselves and reject the stereotypes placed upon them by men. Men claimed that women were gossipy and too talkative. Women claimed that men moved to slow and were indecisive at times. Consider the church that had appointed a man and a woman to co-chair an important church event. The man refused, saying "I'm not going to serve with a woman, if I tell her anything, the whole town will know." Not intimidated, the woman quickly responded: "By the time a man tells me something to do, the whole town will ALREADY know it."

Sometimes divisions are deepened as even the smallest courtesies are suspect. When a young woman boarded the city bus it was obvious that she was a part of the new generation of liberated women. Soon she realized that there were no seats and she stood holding her brief case in hand. An old man rose and said "Here ma'am, you can have my seat." The woman took the gesture as patronizing. She immediately chided the old man. "I realize that you are from a different generation that believes women to be a weaker sex, so you feel obligated to give me your seat. Sir, you don't have to get up!" The old man put on his hat and stood "Well young lady, I got up, but it didn't have anything to do with what you said. You see the bus is at my stop and I gotta go. As for the seat, you can take it or leave it!"

Recognizing that a barrier between men and women would stunt the growth of the church, Jesus began to attack traditional customs. He spoke to women in public and associated with varied women at wells. Paul expanded on Jesus example noting that in Christ there is either male or female. In essence, Jesus began the movement to take down the "For Men Only" signs and replace them with "whosoever will."

Men and women throughout the New Testament are encouraged to work together as equal partners to extents consistent with the commands of God. The phrase "men and women" appears four times in the New Testament, all in the Book of Acts, showing that the first church operated with both men and women believing, suffering and serving side by side.

Exposition

This text focuses on how the relationship of men and women were viewed in the early church.

Women by social custom were second class biblical citizens. In the Old Testament a household followed the lead of the man of the House. Regardless to her individual belief if the father chose to serve an idol god, the woman was obliged to follow. If he chose to serve God, it was perceived as her duty to blindly believe what he believed and change when he changed. Thus, there was no need to indicate how women stood on issues of religious conviction, they would automatically stand with their husbands. If they didn't no one would recognize them anyway. However, as citizens of the kingdom of God both men and women worked side by side, often performing the same duties. Luke, in writing the Book of Acts, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, made certain that it was underscored that women played an equal part with men throughout the early church.

Together In Faith

In Acts 8:12 he noted that when Phillip preached many came forward to accept Christ. Luke took pains to note that those coming forth were not just men, but men AND women. These were not instances where the men, who were heads of their homes, confirmed the allegiance of an entire family to kingdom. This was not probable because the very nature of the church suggested that every person had to speak for themselves. Both men and women came forth by the thousands to demonstrate their faith in God. The same truth was acknowledged in Acts 5:14 when the Apostles preached Christ to great crowds. Afterwards "multitudes" came forth to accept him but Luke again underscored the presence of women: "And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women." It was not a men only affair.

Belief in Christ is not dependent upon sex or race or any other criterion other than faith. Today, women and men who work in the faith share one thing in common. Their faith. It is both men and women that believe. Just like in biblical times, belief is not just a men's thing, it's whosoever will..

Shared Persecution

In Acts 8:3 it is noted that when Saul persecuted the church, he did not just persecute men only.

In this passage it is noted that he was "entering into every house, and jailing men and women committed them to prison." The fact that women also shared in the persecutions of early believers is significant. One of the advantages of "not counting" in Old Testament times is that men were held responsible for their households and it was men and not women that executed and imprisoned for debts or certain civil offenses. The woman was assumed to be acting on the direction of her husband, placing the blame entirely upon him. When the early church began believers were persecuted, jailed, fed to lions and ostracized. Luke notes that both men and women shared equally in the persecution. Suffering for Christ was not for men only. Bearing the burdens of the cross was not for men only! Women by the thousands were jailed, executed and sold into slavery for their part in building the kingdom of God. Without a doubt, it was a far cry from a private club for men only.

Today when Satan attacks believers, he does not attack men only. He does not have a preference for one sex or the other. Women are persecuted by Satan just as men. In this respect women are equal partners with men as they are persecuted by unbelievers for their faith and Christian lifestyle. Both women and men partners in the faith, even in persecution.

Equals in Dispensation of Spirit

Not only were women visibly among the first believers and first persecuted, but they shared an equal dispensation of the spirit of God. With a few exceptions noted, most instances of God speaking and directing humans to act involved men. While there are a few Deborahs of record the overwhelming majority of those selected were men. When God had a message to give the people, or a service to be performed he found an Abraham, Moses, or Elijah to carry it, speak and act through. However, as the New Testament began and a new order unfolded women found themselves equal partners spiritually as well. God started calling women to prophesy, serve as servants

(Diakonos in Greek means minister, servant or deacon) and to generally share in the teaching, witnessing and promotion of the kingdom of God. The prophecies of Joel were being realized in a new way for he had announced God's prophesy: "that I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy." Even in the area of teaching, preaching and serving in the church, it has became obvious that it was no longer "For Men Only!"

Paul finally resolved the questions as to how men and women were to relate to each other in the faith when he wrote in Galatians 3:28 "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus."

We are one in Jesus, that's the way God sees us. Not men. Not women. Not white. Not Black. But one in Christ Jesus.

Both Men and Women Will Be rewarded

Finally, we must consider that because both men and women have believed the same faith, worshipped the same God and endured the same persecutions, both men and women will share in the rewards of the kingdom.

Both men and women have worked to build the kingdom. Both men and women have worked to help the:

•Lost become saved; Saved to become more mature in the faith

•Indifferent become involved; Lazy to become laborers

•Irresponsible parent responsible; and the disobedient children become obedient •Enemies to become friends; Friends to become brothers and sisters in Christ

•Both men and women have worked to help the •Sad to rejoice

•Tempted to overcome

•Discouraged to be cheered

•Skeptics to Believe

•Confused to understand

Those who have worked in the vineyard will be rewarded, not based on the sex but on their service. There won't be lines in glory, one reserved for men and another women. When Christ comes in the fullness of his majesty the world will be a different place, void of racial sexual distinctions.

In that day Isaiah said every mountain shall be low, valleys shall be exalted, crooked places will be made straight, rough places will be made smooth and the glory of the Lord will be revealed and "And all flesh shall see the salvation of God." Luke 3:6

I'm glad to know that when the roll is called it won't be just the men but all flesh.

When Moses is called, it won't be without Mariam!

Abraham will be called, but not without Sarah
When Lazarus is called it won't be without Martha
When Boaz is called it won't be without Ruth
When Isaac is called it won't be without Rebecca Both men and women will be there when the roll is called up yonder
Until the roll is call both men and women must keep telling the story!
Tell them about Jesus!
Jesus who died!
Jesus, who rose from the dead!
Jesus, who calls both men and women to follow him!
Jesus!
Tell them about Jesus!

Gangsta's Paradise

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 24, 1995

SCRIPTURE: And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise."Luke 23:43 " And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever. Rev 20:10

Introduction

How do you define the good life? When, in your own estimation, will you achieve success? Will it be measured in terms of the number of material goods you have accumulated? Will it be when you are able to go where you please, when you please, with whomever you please wherever you please without depending on others? To many young people, having an apartment of their own is paradise. To others it's a car. For still others, being as far from their parents as possible (but not too far from their credit cards), is the essence of living in paradise. Paradise is an oasis of freedom in the desert of parental domination. Paradise is seen as the good life.

The movie "Dangerous Minds" speaks to the present generation about a dangerous lifestyle that is filled with murder, violence, crime and the constant prospect of death. The theme of the movie is the capacity of youth to use their minds to create a better life for themselves through study and hard work. The theme song of the movie became an instant number one hit in the African-American subculture. It is entitled "Gangsta's Paradise." It describes a depressing scenario of violence, death and fear that define the best that can be expected of those who choose the Gangsta life. It is their paradise.

Just a few of the words of the song by Coolio paint the picture of the gangsta's paradise:

" As I walked through the valley of the shadow of death, I took a look at my life and realize nothing's left. Cause I been blasting and laughing so long that even my mama thinks my mind is gone. But I ain't never a crossed a fool who didn't deserve it. Me being treated like a punk you know that's unheard of. You betta watch how you talking and where you walking or you and your homies will be lining chalk. .....Been living this way so long... living in the gangsta's paradise."

If art reflects life, then the words to this number one song seem to reflect a sense of futility in the youth of Afr-America. The words: "Tell me why are we so blind to see that the ones we hurt are you and me" cry out for something better than the "Gangsta's Paradise."

Thankfully, there is something better than the life of the gangsta. There is a life that offers more than a succession of "gank moves," "4-5's","3-8's",5-0's"Dissin'", "Chillin'","Homies" and "G's." There is something greater and much more fulfilling than the prospects of spending an entire life in "Gangsta's Paradise." It is hidden behind a door called opportunity. Education is the key to opportunity. Faith in God unlocks the door to paradise. Not a Gangsta's paradise of death, dred and doom, but a saintly paradise of peace and living on a higher plane.

As Christians, we know our Lord offers us a place in paradise. In this life he can help us to rise above the mediocrity of poverty to a new level of freedom. In the life to come he offers an uninterrupted flow of gracious that can only be described as paradise. We don't relish the idea of living in a Gangsta's Paradise. However, we look forward with great enthusiasm to the point in time in which we live in the Saint's paradise.

Exposition

This text focuses on two separate fates that await the believer and the non-believer in the future state of the world.

In Luke, Jesus is crucified on a cross between two thieves. The identity of the thieves was not given but the scripture in Luke simply refers to both of them as malefactors. At best both of these men represented a dangerous lifestyle that wreaked with the fear of detection and death. On the cross one of them challenged Christ, if he was actually the Son of God, to save himself and the unrepentant thief as well. He wanted another chance to return to the world he knew, perhaps with more care and caution the next time to avoid detection.

The second thief accepted Christ as Savior. He sensed that Christ was not a guilty person and was truly the Son of God as he claimed. Instead of asking for another chance to return and do the same things again, the second thief was repentant. He acknowledge that both thieves deserve the punishment that they received, but Christ had done nothing wrong. In a sign of humility, he asked Jesus to remember him when he entered into the king. Christ's response was "This day, you shall be with me in paradise."

The idea of paradise was familiar to Jews. Their immediate thought was that of Adam and Eve in the garden. It was a true paradise. There was no death. No violence. No fear. It was a pure state of uninterrupted bliss. However, that garden was destroyed after both Adam and Eve sinned. For Adam and Eve the key to paradise was obedience to the command of God not to eat from the tree of knowledge of good and evil. Obedience kept them in paradise and disobedience locked the door.

The second paradise that Israel considered was the Canaan Land. It was described as a land that was flowing with milk and honey. It was ripe and fertile.

Twelve spies returned to Joshua to report to him that the land would truly be a paradise for them because it offered such great prospects. The key to obtaining this paradise was their willingness to trust God to roll back the waters of Jordan and to topple the walls of Jericho. When they stopped trusting God and began to trust Baal, the god of Canaanites, the door to paradise was closed on them forever. Their kingdom toppled, split into and was literally decimated by its enemies. Disobedience took their paradise away.

The third paradise looms in the future. It is represented by John's vision in the Revelation 21. It is a picture of the final paradise that awaits the righteous. It is onne where life will never end and joys shall be eternal. The key to obtaining this paradise is to accept Christ as both Lord and Savior and follow him. Those who gain access to this paradise, gain it only through Christ who has said "I am the way, the truth, and the life. No man cometh to the father, but by me."

The future state of the repentant thief was to this last paradise. This is the place where Jesus immediately took his soul upon death to await the general day of judgment when all saints shall receive their reward.

The non-repentant condemned himself to an awful destruction in the lake of fire and brimstone, where Satan, the Devil and False Prophet are. It will be poetic justice. This will be the place where Satan will live for ever and ever. He will be tortured and tormented. Those who follow him can look forward to joining him in "Gangsta's Paradise."

Gangsta World

It is becoming increasingly more difficult for modern youth to live the Christian life, especially in the gangsta subculture of the African-American community. In the 1970's entertainment industry discovered the African-American subculture. In the name of profits, the owners of these mediums began to lift the subculture to a level of acceptance that dominated our existence.

Its effect became devastating. The worst elements of our community were raised up as role models for our children. Pimps, pushers and dope dealers became the subject scores of movies. In the 80's radio decided to take the music of the subculture and legitimize it. Grammy Awards were given for subculture singers and self censorship of the airways disappeared.

As a result, youth of today are facing the difficult task of defining themselves while being surrounded by wall poster images of the worst of our community. The "Gangsta" lifestyle comes complete with its own language. If you don't live in it or study it by means of digesting hundreds of compact discs, it is entirely possible for you to dismiss the "Gangsta" lifestyle as a passing fad. The language of the "Gangsta" subculture is completely gang and drug related. "What up G?" is a gang greeting. A "G" is a gangster. "Gank" is bad cocaine. A "4-5" is a .45 calibre pistol. The "5-0" is the police.

Its dress is epitomized by sloppy attired, pants that hang below the behind, under wear that shows, caps worn backwards and shirts and tee shirts worn almost to the knees, among other noticeable features. Writing has been reduced to graffiti style combinations of letters and number. Life expectations are reduced. Life spands are even shorter as violence, sex and killing are elevated to all time highs. Youth are being pressured to look like "G's", talk like "G's", walk , dress and act like "G's." Many succumb to the pressure and step out of their doors on their way to Gangsta's Paradise.

The key to reaching beyond "gangsta's paradise" is education. Youth must be taught the essential skills for survival and the essentials for an elevated level of thinking. The first and most important influence is the home. Parents must not throw in the towel. Insist that your children study. The second influence is teachers. Educators must learn the nature of the problem and its source and approach the process with a missionary zeal. Principals and teachers should not lower the standards of their schools in dress and behavior. Learn the gangsta language so you can communicate with those already trapped. Resist the temptation to just "do your job" without a willingness to go further than your paycheck demands. A thorough education of the mind and the heart is the key to saving our youth. We are in a war for the minds of our children. We must arm ourselves for the battle, or we will lose them by the thousands as they stray away in search of "Gangsta's Paradise."

Another Paradise

The ultimate end for those who aspire to the gangsta's paradise is dismal. The gangsta on the cross who refused to accept Christ even in his dying hour, what happened to him? He went to gangsta's paradise.

Where is Gangsta's Paradise? It is a miserable place where trouble never ends and torture is endless!

Where is Gangsta's Paradise? It is place where there will be misery and despair for eternity!

Revelation 20 paints the awful picture of the future state of those who choose to live apart from God. They will be condemned to gangsta's paradise. Obviously, they will share the punishment of the chief gangster, Satan himself! "And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever. Rev 20:10 That's the gangster's paradise.

While some young people have resigned themselves to living in gangsta's paradise, there are thousands of others who have decided that there is something more to life than simply waiting for the day they will be the next drive by victim.

There are thousands in our city and millions across the nation who don't relish the idea of living in gangsta's paradise. They do not see themselves as "G's" and are not defined by the standards of the hood.

There is an army of young people in this city who are marching to the beat of another drummer!

Where are they marching? They are marching to Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Tulane, Grambling and Southern.

They are marching to the corporate board rooms of General Motors, Microsoft, and Boeing.

They are marching to the statehouse and white house and councils of leadership across this country.

Yes, they are marching to beat of a different drummer! This drummer says, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and its righteousness and all of the other things shall be added unto you!" So they are marching!

They are marching because their drummer has set a cadence and pace designed to get bring them into a fulfilled life on this earth and a literal paradise in the world to come. I hear this drummer declare "I am come that they may have life and have it more abundantly."

Not only are they marching toward a better lifestyle, they are also marching to a better life!

They have turned their backs on the Gangsta's Paradise and they are marching toward the Saint's paradise.

They are marching toward to Zion, the beautiful city of God.

In the Gangster's paradise:

There is worry about the Cripps and the Bloods; But in the Saint's Paradise there is no concern about Cripps and Bloods but only those who've been washed in the blood. I heard the Word declare "These are they who have washed their robes in the blood of the lamb!"

There is concern about the wicked and crooked; but in the Saint's paradise the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest!

There is concern about crime; but in the Saint's paradise "justice will run down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream!

Life is a dangerous New Jack City, but the Saint's paradise will be safe and secure in the walls of heavenly city!

In the Saint's paradise there won't be any "G's" only J's because Jesus will be everywhere!

There will be Jesus in the morning; Jesus in the evening!

In the Saint's paradise there won't be any gangs to join. There will only be one crowd in paradise because "every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess" that Christ is Lord of Lord!

I'm on way to the Saint's paradise!

No turning back!

No turning back!

No turning back!

Put On Your Running Shoes

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La. 71201

October 1, 1995

SCRIPTURE: Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain.1 Cor 9:24

Introduction

Have you ever undertaken a task only to find out that you were not in shape? You know that you are out of shape when you walk two flights of stairs and have to take a break. You know you are out shape when you try to enter buildings by the handicap ramp. You know you are out of shape when you spend thirty minutes in the grocery store and have to rest three hours from fatigue. When you try to sing your favorite song and can't know hold out to the end, that's when you know you are out of shape.

How does one go about winning the race of life? What are the essentials. To a large extent our success in any endeavor depends upon advanced training, conditioning, and mental attitude. Three three are the essentials for success. No one can expect victory in a competition without taking the time to train and condition themselves for the race. Even with training and conditioning, one's state of mind during the race will impact the outcome.

As we enter life's race we must always consider why we are running? The reason for entering the race will greatly effect the outcome. Are we entering to win, just to make it across the line, or are we running just to be running? Some people run to help others. There are others who run to help themselves. Consider the two men who were walking through the woods and they heard a roaring sound in the distance. The roar came closer and they realized that just a few feet from them there was lion that was approaching at an ubeleivable speed. Instantly one of the men reached in his back pack and pulled out his tennis shoes and put them on quickly. His friend asked "You don't seriously think you can out run a lion do you? What's the point of the tennis shoes?"His friend yelled back as he ran away "I don't have to out run the lion. All I have to do is out run you and I'm safe.!" There are many people who are running to save themselves alone as they leave the rest of the world to die at the hands of Satan's hungry lions.

Today the church must put its running shoes on and prepare to run the race of life. It is a race that has but one purpose and that is to claim the prize of the high calling of Jesus Christ. We must train ourselves. We must condition ourselves. We must keep a positive attitude. We cannot stand on the sidelines of life we must enter the race and run to win.

As Christians we must shod our feet with the gospel of preparation and run the race that is set before us. We know that if we run our race well, there is a crown of righteousness waiting for us in glory.

Exposition

This text focuses on the Apostle Paul as he gives an explanation of the nature of the Christian struggle, using the comparison of runners in a race.

About eight miles outside of the city of Corinth was the Isthmus. It was the site of the Greek games which were held every two years. The Greek Athletic Festivals were five day events in which each city state in the empire sent its best athletes to compete against those of other states. The events included wrestling, boxing, chariot racing, horse racing, javelin throwing, and running. The games were held in many of the Greek city states such as Delphi and Nemea. The most famous of all of the games was the one held every five years at Olympia. It became the forerunner of what we know today as the Olympics.

Paul, aware that the Corinthians were famliar with the the athletic festivals compared the Christian struggle to the competitors in the Olympic games. Runners were also required to maintain a special diet. Their instructors insisted that they refrain from foods and drinks that would diminish their possibilities of winning the race. Similarly, Paul suggested that Christians should consider themselves in training and tailor their diets and tastes to conform to the word of God.

Those who were victors in the games were given a wreath to wear upon their heads and the honor of being their city's champions. On occasion, the winners were given money from their hometown. On others, they were relieved from paying taxes. Mostly however, they were given a wreath to wear.

Paul said those who compete in the games, trained and competed for the soul purpose of winning a material wreath upon their heads. However, those who run the Christian race do so to claim the crown of righteousness reserved for the victors. The Christian competitor competes for the prize of salvation and glory before God. He trains and conditions himself to enter the race and to perservere until victorious.

Getting In Shape

Today there are millions of out of shape Christians. These are persons who are trying to run the Christian race, in search of the prize, without the training, conditioning and mental attitude necessary for victory. Those who are attempting the Christian marathon without getting in shape are finding it extremely difficult. Getting in shape requires:

TRAINING: In the Greek festivals athletes were given an instructor who trained them for their particular event. The type of training depended upon the event. Wrestlers were trained in a way that would build strength. Boxers were trained to punch with power and to sustain a punch. Runners were trained to develop speed and endurance.

One of the first steps in training was to learn the nature of the event and its objective. Short distance runners had to focus on speed, while long distance runners focused on endurance. The training regimen for each event was different because each was different.

It was extremely important in Paul's mind that each Christian understand the nature of his or her opponent in this life. That's why he wrote: "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Ephesians 6:12

Each Christian must engage in the training process associated with its event. The church with which a believer associates participates in the overall event but trains its members with a specific objective in mind. A worship oriented church trains it members in all forms of worship, both public and private and works to develop extensive preaching and singing ministries. A mission oriented congregation trains its members for mission work. It promotes the preaching of the gospel on foreign shores and home mission work at home. A teaching oriented congregation specializes in teaching the word and its members are trained extensively to do the same. A service oriented church specializes in reaching out to the poor, needy and helpless with the love of God. While most churches train for all events every church has an event in which it excells. That is usually the event in which it brings home the gold medals.

The trainer or coach of every congregation is its pastor. One of his roles is to help each Christian understand the nature of the event in which they are competing and to train them for that event. "And I will give you pastors according to mine heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding." Jeremiah 3:15
Under direction of the Holy Spirit, he sets the training regimen designed to help the members get ready for the race. Athletes without a coach have difficulty in the games. Even worse are those who have a coach but ignore his instructions. Untrained athletes usually find that while they have some skills they are not ready for their own event. A runner who spent his time lifting weights, has plenty of muscles but can't run a mile. A wrestler who who spent his time driving the chariots found himself unprepared for his own event.

CONDITIONING: If training involves strategy, objectives and a regimen, then conditioning focuses on a narrower part of the training process. Runners who condition themselves for the marathon, begin by running short distances until they build up strength and endurance. They may begin with a mile run. It may increase to three, five, ten and thereafter. Boxers spar with individuals who have a style and build similar to their opponent. Football players scrimmage. In any event, there are small test runs that get the athletes ready for the big challenge.

The only way to condition oneself for the marathon is to run. It can't be done by reading books or discussions. It can't be done by constant talking. Runners get in condition by running! On a daily basis, they push themselves out of bed and force themselves to run harder and longer. They check their pace, stride and breathing patterns as they run, but it can only be done as they run.

In the same way Christians condition themselves for kingdom work. They begin with short runs. They help a neighbor or friend in need. They graduate to longer runs when they volunteer for causes that help others without thought of pay or recognition.

They make even longer runs when they organize efforts to teach and reach the lost masses, relieve the hungry, visit the jails, visit the sick and champion the causes of the oppressed.

Members who find themselves talking more and visiting the jails less are out of condition. Those who are doing more discussing than they reaching the lost masses with the word of God are out of shape. Those who are pontificating about theory and doctrine but are not actively involved in championing the causes of the oppressed or reaching out to the hurting masses with the love of God are out of condition.

MENTAL ATTITUDE: The successful runner, while in perfect physical shape, must also possess the right attitude. Runners must be focused. Therefore a large part of their training deals with their attitudes. They must have the goal on their minds and be free from distractions.

In Philippians Paul wrote: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Philippians 3:13-14

Those who intend to run the Christian race must prepare themselves mentally for the race. They must surround themselves with positive reminders of the race and the possibility of victory. As much as possible they should avoid negative conversations, negative self talk, and non-productive discussions. Any involvement that has the net effect of distracting them from the race should be avoided.

We must think on those things which will help us win the race. In Philippians 4:8-9 Paul says "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

Those things, which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and the God of peace shall be with you. We are thus encourage to think positive thoughts and then act on them.

Run the Race

Although the runner always feels he needs more training, a time comes when the race must be run. As believers, we must run the race. Our Sunday School lessons are preparations for the race, they are not the race. Our prayer meetings, bible studies, and Sunday worships are preparations for the race, they are not the race.

The race begins when we reach out to the nameless faces that cry out out for help.

The race begins when we minister to the imprisoned, embrace the oppressed, and reach beyond our walls in an organized effort to make a difference in the name of our Lord.

In closing, consider the true story which happened a few years ago at the national special olympics for the physically challenged. Runners had come from around the country to compete and it was an important race. When the gun was sounded however one of the runners fell. Tears mingled with the dust of disappointment as she rolled on the track wallowing in her failure. The other runners looked back and saw her wallowing and crying. Although the crowd urged them to continue, all of the contestants went back to help the fallen runner. They picked her up, wiped the tears from her eyes. Then in an amazing show of unity and love locked their arms under hers and carried her to the finish line. They all crossed at the same time. All winners.

A long time ago we started out in life and stumbled along the way. Somebody stopped along the way and gave us a second chance! That somebody was Jesus!

Put on your running shoes! Tell somebody about Jesus!

Put on your running shoes! Show the hungry masses that he is bread when you are hungry!

Put on your running shoes! Visit the imprisoned and show them that the love of God extends behind locked doors!

Put on your running shoes! Tell the lost everywhere about Jesus! Tell them that he died and he lives today!

Put on your running shoes and tell the world about Jesus!

SCRIPTURE:"Never again will there be in it an infant who lives but a few days, or an old man who does not live out his years; he who dies at a hundred will be thought a mere youth; he who fails to reach a hundred will be considered accursed." Isaiah 65:20

Introduction

If a church congregation is 100 years old how old is it? Some would argue that the church, like a fine wine, gets better with age and seasoning. Whether 100 years is old would depend upon what the congregation had done in past years and what its doing now? A young historic congregation is one whose membership has made history despite it years. An old historic congregation is one that has simply been around for 100 years and instead of making history is history.

Young Historic congregations offer a peculiar perspective and witness in a community. The advantage of living through storms of troubles, winds of difficulties and spiritual and secular droughts is unique. It is one that allows such a congregation to make history as it serves humanity, despite the difficulties of the times. It offers a sense of quiet reassurance, while shouldering a burden, that despite the problem, God is in control. It draws upon the rich heritage of a community and the legacies left behind by the many giants who have blazed clear trails, to continue making history. It analyzes and benefits from the mistakes of the past and takes definitive actions to influence the future.

Old Historic congregations share in the basic tenets of younger historic congregation but are troubled by several peculiar disadvantages. Many become comfortable with tradition and what was once a blazed trail becomes a rut from which they find it difficult to move. Old congregations are slow to change. The also have a tendency to live on past accomplishments and revel in "what use to be." Many have tremendous difficulty adjusting and readjusting themselves to remain relevant to the present circumstance. Old historic congregations find difficulty relating to the swift change that shift the very nature of the families they serve. Old Historic congregations enjoy telling history, while youthful congregations enjoy making history. The difference defines the nature of both.

Is 100 years old? It depends upon the nature of the relationship. The experience may have been enjoyable and pleasing and lifting to some. To others, it may have been unbearable. If it was a pleasing experience, 100 years is not long enough. If otherwise, it was too long. Consider the elderly couple who had reluctantly celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Young couples praised them for their longevity and expressed how great it was to have been together for 50 years. After the ceremony the wife and the husband had an argument. She responded "I don't know why I let you talk me into this silly ceremony anyway. For 50 years all we have done is argue, fight, and disagree. For 50 years we've been miserable. I'm a praying every day that God will take one of us home. When he answers my prayer I'm gon' shout 'Hallelujah' and move in with my sister in Memphis!" Some may be just biding their time waiting on time.

As Christians we have come to know that 100 years is not a long time in God's sight. We should strive to actively work, day by day, to build the kingdom of God making history as we live each moment. When we are aggressively working to build the kingdom we know that 100 years does mark history made, but history in the making because ...we've only just begun!

Exposition

The text paints aclear picture of life in the Millennial kingdom over which Christ will rule.

Isaiah projects the future state of believers, pointing to a time in the not so distant future when believers will rule with Christ for 1000 years on earth in a prototype of the perfect kingdom that would finally come. This 1000 year reign of Christ is the time in which he and the saints will return to earth and will generally run its government for 1000 years free of Satanic influences because Satan will be bound. It is a time when the church's work on earth is done!

During this time certain changes in the way the world operates will take place. 1) Christ will be the ruler of the kingdom, assisted by the Saints who will return with him to lead the millennial kingdom. When Christ was born an angel told Mary "and the Lord God shall give unto Him the Throne of his Father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:32-33) 2) All living creatures, including the animals will be at peace (65:25) in such a way that even the wolf and lamb will feed together. Those which are natural enemies will become friends. 3) Life spans of people shall be like trees, living hundreds of years to the point that a man of 100 will be considered a mere youth and those who don't live to be a hundred will be accursed. (65:20) 4) People will enjoy the fruits of their labor, living in houses that they build and feasting on crops they produce (65:21-23) The millennial kingdom is what Christ referred to in the model prayer he taught his disciples when he said "thy kingdom come." 5) The people will not be in want for anything because before they ask for it God will have delivered it. Before they can even speak the request he will have heard and responded.

This 65th chapter of Isaiah is called Messianic because it speaks of the future kingdom in the Millennium. Before that time a considerable task lay before the church.

The savior would have to be born and that would take about seven 700 years to occur. The church would have to be established, which from its inception in A.D. 30 to Paul's imprisonment marked a 33 year incubation stage. It would need to survive persecution and attack, which it did during the Roman persecutions as members of the church were fed to lions and crucified for the belief in Christ.

Having survived all of the persecutions and attacks from within and without, the church still stands a young historic spiritual body working vigorously to change the face of the world in the name of a risen Lord. It's ultimate goal is to reach the kingdom of God. Reaching the millennial kingdom and enjoying the beauty of its nature will be a source of rejoicing for the saints. (65:18- 19). It is the ultimate goal of the church. To preach, teach and evangelize until the kingdom comes.

Despite being nearly 2000 years old, the millennial kingdom does not yet exist. The world has not heard the gospel declared. Satan is still unbound and sin is prevalent. Despite its years the church continues to declare the Gospel message because the times indicate that we have only just begun.

Just Beginning

Today the church must continually be aware of the challenge it faces. It cannot be content with any level of growth or success it has achieved in the past. No matter what has been done, there is still work to be done.

Though the church is teaching the word in its Sunday Schools and bible study ministries there are still thousands in just the local community alone who have not been taught the word. With advances in technology the church is faced with challenge of using new techniques to teach the old story to new generations. Though we have come a long way, we have only just begun.

Though the church is reaching thousands with the Gospel message through the broadcast media, there are still millions who have never really heard the word of God. Broadcast ministries need to be expanded in focus to carry the message to all the world. While those who have ventured in this arena have made a great step, we have only just begun!

Though the church responds in a small way to the needs of the imprisoned our ministry to those behind prison walls should reflect our best effort. We may be satisfied with what little we are doing, but we have only just begun.

While we make occasional forays in areas of health care and preventive care, our community is literally being decimated by health ignorance, destructive habits and misinformation. Diabetes, heart disease and others are growing at alarming rates. We may have made some efforts to address these concerns in the past, but we have only just begun!

While the church's ministry to youth involves many from across the community in a multiplicity of activities, it too is only a beginning. The forces working against Christian youth are immense. Youth by the thousands are being swept into a gangsta mentality that is distorting the minds, corrupting their values and leading them astray.

The resources we apply toward molding their lives for Christian service will require expansion. We have made great strides, but we've only just begun.

Though we send an occasional donation to foreign missionaries and host an evangelical period on occasion it should not imply that all we can do is being done. There are still too many who have not been touched by our revival and foreign mission efforts who yearn to know the salvation of the Lord.Though we may be doing something in this respect, we have only just begun.

Despite the availability of food stamps, public housing and low income housing assistance, there are millions nationally and hundreds in every local community that go hungry every day and seek desperately for a place to stay. The church has responded in a minimal ways providing housing for some and a meal for others. However, as long as there are thousands who are hungry, and still more who are homeless, living in card board boxes in alley ways and street corners, we have only just begun!

The church does not have the luxury of resting comfortably on its past. It must work vigorously today to reach, save and teach the lost masses in the name of our Lord.

When Christ comes he will ask whether we fed the hungry, visited the sick, ministered to the imprisoned, showed concerned for the oppressed and sheltered the homeless. He will ask and the church must answer.

As the church celebrates its longevity, it must always remember that, we have only just begun!

Is 100 Years Old?

While the church celebrates it longevity we must consider that a congregation that reaches the age of 100 is not 100 years old, but 100 years young. In God's estimate of time, 100 years has little significance, it is only a point of beginning.

Psalm 90:4 says "For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night. 2 Peter 3:8 says "..that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." In the context of God's estimate of time 100 years is just a beginning. As far as God is concerned "we've only just begun."

We may have survived World War 1, but we've only just begun

We may have endured the ravages of the great depression, but we've only just begun

We may have overcome the hardships of World War II, but we've only just begun

We may have lived through the Korean conflict, Vietnam War and Desert Storm, but we have only just begun!

At age 100 Abraham found that instead of nearing the end of his life he was at a new beginning. Ask Abraham and Sarah with a child in their twilight years is 100 years old and they will answer: "We've only just begun!"

Noah was 500 years old when he began work on the ark. At the age of 600, 100 years after he began the work his family celebrated its completion. After working for 100 years on the ark, he then heard a command to fill the ark with seven pairs of every clean animal and one pair of every unclean animal. When Noah looked up and saw the empty ark in front of him and the rain clouds in the air he realized "we've only just begun!"

The church today must realize the same. The ark is empty and the rain clouds are gathering over out heads, we have only just begun!

The church must continue to declare the word of God to a world that has not heard!

Buildings may burn, but the church will be powered by a fire within!

Organizations my die, but the church will live!

Book stores may close, but the Word of God will stay open!

Leaders may backslide, but the church will be led by the Lord!

The church has only begun to tell the story! The world needs the church!

For a world at its worst, we need a church at its best!

For a world full of sin, we need a church full of holiness!

For a world full of sadness, we need a church full of joy!

For a world that's full of war, we need a church that is full of peace!

For a world that's full of despair, we need a church that is full of hope!

For a world full of darkness, we need a church full of light!

For a world that's going down, we need a church that's going up!

For a world that's full of defeat, we need a church that's full of victory!

For a world that's taking it easy, we need a church dressed in its work clothes!

We must work until our day is done!

We must work until the setting of the sun!

We must tell a world full of bad news, the good news about Jesus!

Jesus, the lily of the valley!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Tell them that Jesus is coming back again!

When he comes back the wicked will cease from troubling! The weary will be at rest! Every day will be Sunday, always howdy and never good bye!

Tell the world!

Tell the world about Jesus!

It Comes With The Territory

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also. But all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not him that sent me. John 15:20-21

Introduction

Have you ever complained about difficulties accomplishing a goal? Most people indulge themselves in moments of wishful thinking in which they wish for better circumstances. The Father who has to work for his family in the day and then come home to a list of "honey do's" sometimes grumbles. Wives sometimes complain about the enormity of their work and the pittance of support they get from their families. Sometimes children complain about their chores and wish they could live without them. While there are some that complain, there are others who never seem to complain about the difficulties associated with their roles in life because the are an expected .

Kings in ancient times conquered other lands for their resources and manpower. However, having once conquered a land the king was also obligated to defend its boundaries, police its affairs, listen to the complaints of its citizens, as well as handle its social problems. Whenever his advisors would complain about the costs of such undertakings, the king would remind them that they fought battles to claim the new kingdom for its treasure. If a problem occurs, said the king, they should remember, it comes with the territory.

Every endeavor has its advantages. However, each also its peculiar irritations and disadvantages. Consider the country mouse who wanted to live in the city. He became tired of the boring country life. He wanted to move to the city and live like the fat rats. In the country he was constantly scratching around for food, but in the city there were opportunities for little mice to be grow to be fat rats. Once in the city, he was given the grand tour by his uncle who was a real fat rat. He showed him restaurants where food was dumped at the end of a day. He saw grocery stores with shelves stocked full of food, including plenty of cheese and all the nice things mice love to eat. Certainly, the city was the place for mice to grow and gain opportunities. He became alarmed when his uncle started giving him warnings. "You must sniff your food before you eat it" said the old fat rat. "People will try to poison you if they can." Later he said, "be careful to keep a low profile, in some buildings people will try to shoot you squash you with brooms." As the tour ended uncle fat rat said. "Being a rat in the city has its advantages, but not without a price. Everyday you must take care, not to get your tail caught in a trap." So it is in life. We have many advantages, but there are some disadvantages as well, we must be aware of them and work daily to stay away from the traps.

Sometimes Christians complain about life's difficulties, but some of those difficulties should be expected, because they come with the territory. Sometimes we complain that we are being talked about, persecuted and falsely accused, but such destructive conversation comes with the territory. Football players expect to get hit. Plumbers expect bad conditions. Coaches who lose expect to get fired. Doctors run 24 hour shifts. Golfers expect a few rough greens and sand traps. Those who live in the kitchen expect a lot of heat. It all comes with the territory.

As Christians we anticipate the joys of heaven. We strive to obey God's Word as members of the kingdom of God. The kingdom has its merits, but not without a price. When Satan causes difficulties to come, we should not grumble to God but resolve not to be discouraged because if there is no cross there is no crown.

Exposition

This text finds Jesus dealing with the nature of the Christian Experience with respect to struggle and reward.

Jesus, is the speaker in this text. His words come on the heel of his presentation to believers about the nature of their relationship to him. In verse 1-8 he describes that relationship as similar to a branch and a vine. In this illustration believers are portrayed as branches of the vine which is in Christ. Each believer is an extension of the vine, being fed and sustained by the vine. To be a branch means that one is fully sustained by the vine. It also means that one is fully controlled by the vine. A believer in such a relationship loses his own will and finds himself only as it relates to something that vine wants done. Since each of us is a branch of the vine, his will becomes our will.

If, at some point, we are not willing to abide in him and go our own direction, for whatever reason, then the branch is cut off.

Having said that, in the next eight verses from 9 to 17, Jesus says the key component for every Christian is to love God and your neighbor as you love yourself.. He points out in verse 14 that those who love him will be willing to do whatever he tells them to do. Those who love him are willing to allow themselves to become instruments for his service, willing to do anything, say anything, or go anyplace for the furtherance of the kingdom.

The third passage begins at verse 18. Those who have lost themselves in the will of God, such as a branch and vine and set out to do whatever God commands can expect difficulties from the "world." Jesus said if you meet resistance in your pursuit to live the Christian life fully do not be alarmed. He met the same resistance. If people hate you, don't be overly upset, they hated Jesus as well. If they talk about you, don't be overly concerned, they talked about Jesus as well. Listen to his words, John 15:18 "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you."

The essence of Christ's teaching was that believers should not expect smooth sailing as they sail the sea of Christian life. They should expect a few storms, because storms come with sailing. They come with the territory.

The Territory

Today there are many people who are troubled by life's difficulties and question God as to why life seems to be so hard. As Christians we have chosen a difficult path that will often be misunderstood by others. Therefore we should not expect to win any popularity contests when we stand for that which is right.

The territory is the kingdom of God which we are trying to help build and expand among those who do not see or understand they nature of our effort. Sometimes we can be injured emotionally by the way people respond to us or the way we are treated. We are reminded today, not to be easily injured, but to understand that such treatment is expected, because it comes with the territory.

Are you attempting to teach children in school but are often discouraged because of the way both the student and the student's parents respond to you? Does it frustrate you to the point that you want to quit? Remember teaching is missionary in nature. Teachers strive to instill values of godliness, industry and excellence in minds that may not yet fully understand the nature of your effort. A rude response from the six year old child of an 18 year old mother should not frustrate you, because it comes with the territory. You know the nature of the struggle neither he nor his mother may understand what you are all about?

Did you try to help someone only to discover the person you helped the most was first among those who criticized and talked about you? This is extremely frustrating when you have spent great sums of money and time to resolve a problem for the person only to watch them bring you down. However, don't be discouraged, many that Jesus helped were perhaps among the crowd that called for his crucifixion. While it is sometimes discomforting to continue helping others, remember that sometimes when the hand that feeds is bit by the mouth being fed, it comes with the territory.

Jesus urges us to do what he has commanded us to do with a spirit of love as our motivation recognizing and expecting resistance. It comes with the territory, but love anyway.

In 1989 the following thought appeared in Reader's Digest:

People are unreasonable, illogical and self-centered. Love them anyway. It comes with the territory!

If you do good, people will accuse you of selfish ulterior motives. Do good anyway. It comes with the territory!

If you are successful, you will win false friends and true enemies. Succeed anyway. It comes with the territory!

Honesty and frankness make you vulnerable. Be honest and frank anyway. It comes with the territory!

The good you do today will be forgotten tomorrow. Do good anyway. It comes with the territory!

The biggest people with the biggest ideas can be shot down by the smallest people with the smallest pride. Think big anyway. It comes with the territory!

People favor underdogs but follow only top dogs. Fight for some underdogs anyway. It comes with the territory!

What you spent years building may be destroyed overnight Build anyway. It comes with the territory!

Give the world the best you have and you'll get kicked in the teeth. Give the world the best you've got anyway! It comes with the territory!

When Jesus prepared his disciples for their mission he warned them to not discouraged but to go forward despite the hardships that would meet. The difficulties he seemed to say then and today, come with the territory.

Preachers, frustrated by disinterested masses who would rather watch a ball game than listen to the word, don't be surprised, preach anyway! It comes with the territory!

Choir directors struggling with complaining singers who don't want to rehearse, don't be surprised, direct anyway. It comes with the territory!

Sunday school teachers frustrated by apathetic students who rarely study their lessons, don't be surprised, teach anyway. It comes with the territory!

Mission leaders, don't be surprised if some in your mission are more interested in talking mission than doing service for others, serve others anyway, it comes with the territory!

Expect a little rainfall and every so often a storm, but behind every cloudy day a sun beam is born!

There might be a little frustration along the way, but it comes with the territory!

Victory Comes With The Territory

If all that came with the territory was an endless litany of frustrations, disappointments and persecutions, then one might conclude that this Christian life is not worth while. If all that came with the territory was doom and gloom, storm clouds and strong winds, then it working in the kingdom would be a useless venture.

There has to be something else that comes with the territory!

A beautician stands on her feet all day. She endures aching feet and legs and strains in her back because when its all over she's going to be paid, both aching feet and her fee, come with the territory!

The trash collector deals with foul smelling odors and unsanitary conditions every day because it comes with the territory, but when its all over, there is something else that comes with the territory! He knows that payday is coming after while!

The plumber may crawl around the mud and slime repairing leaking pipes or sewerage lines, he doesn't complain because it comes with the territory. He knows that payday is coming after while.

Brothers and sisters don't get discouraged with the frustrations of Christian service they come with the territory!

You may try to love, but all you get is hate; it comes with the territory!

You may promote progress, but others want is regress; it comes with the territory!

You may try to build up, while others try to tear down, it comes with the territory!

You may try to bring peace, while others bring about confusion; it comes with the territory!

You may try to climb up while others try to bring you down; it comes with the territory!

There is something else that comes with the territory!

Revelation 2:7 "..To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." It comes with the territory!

Rev. 2:11 He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death. It comes with the territory!

Rev 2:26 And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: It comes with the territory!

Rev 3:5 He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels. It comes with the territory!

Rev 21:7 He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son. It comes with the territory!

There can be no cross without a crown!

That's why Jesus said "never the less, not my will but thy will be done" because it comes with the territory!

Well Jesus they're saying "Crucify Him", but that's all right because it comes with the territory!

They have put crown of thorns on your head and a purple robe on your shoulders ...that's all right because it comes with the territory!

The have spit in your face...I won't say a mumbling word because it comes with the territory!

He died out on Calvary, but early Sunday morning! He arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

All power!

All power in his hands!

Only One Said Thanks

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God, And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a Samaritan. Luke17:15-16

Introduction

Have you ever gone out of your way to help someone, then found they wouldn't even say thanks? There are many people who try to help others with no thought of pay or praise. These are people who help out when the car won't start, give rides to the market, or run errands for us whenever we ask. These people make up the invisible army of the compassionate who work daily to make life better and easier for others. Most of the time they accept no pay and rarely expect any compensation for what they do. However, most people do expect to receive a word of thanks from the people they help. Sometimes they get it. There are times when they get nothing. Some have never learned that you catch more flies with sugar. A word of thanks reaps tons of rewards

Everyone has something for which to be thankful. No matter how self sufficient a person is, he owes at least a part of his success to someone who helped along the way. We should have a spirit of gratitude toward those who help us, whether what they do is big or small. Aesop told us the tale of the mouse and lion. In this little story the mouse was captured by the lion and was spared when the mouse pledged to help the lion one day if given the chance. The lion, amused at the thought that a mouse could help him one day, decided to release the mouse anyway. Not soon after the lion was trapped in the hunter's net. He was wound up tight. He could not break free. However, just before the hunter came to get the lion the little mouse came along and returned the favor to the lion. He nibbled at the ropes with his sharp teeth until he was free. The lion did him a favor and the little mouse got a chance to say thanks in a way the lion understood.

Sometimes what we thank God for may seem silly to others. They do not know our situation or from whence we have come, so they wonder at the wisdom of our expressions of gratitude. Consider the little boy who had to stand in his school class at Thanksgiving time and tell the reason he planned to give thanks. He listened as others gave thanks for fine clothes, money and big houses in which to live. He didn't have any of that, but he knew what he would give thanks for. When his turn came, the little boy told the class "I want to thank God for my eyeglasses." The class roared with laughter, especially since the glasses were about an inch think and detracted immensely from his appearance. The boy was not bothered by the laughter. He said, "I thank God for my glasses because when I'm wearing them the big boys won't fight me and the girls won't kiss me. Thank you Lord for my glasses." Everybody has something for which to give thanks.

The question in life is not so much whether we have been blessed with something for which we should be grateful, but rather or not we will express gratitude to our friends and family and to God for his goodness and mercy.

As Christians we make it our business to give thanks continuously to God. We do so because his great and his mercy endureth forever.

Exposition

This text focuses on an expression of gratitude which was given to Jesus by one of 10 men that he healed of a crippling disease.

The men were among a group of men who were crippled by the disease of leprosy. The group was composed of both Jews and Samaritans, who were normally segregated from each other by Jewish custom. However, since they all had leprosy, all shared the same treatment by the general community.

Leprosy is a generic term applied to a variety of skin disorders in biblical times. Its symptoms ranged from white patches on the skin to running sores to the loss of digits on the fingers and toes. For the Hebrews it was a dreaded malady which rendered its victims ceremonially unclean—that is, unfit to worship God (Lev. 13:3). Anyone who came in contact with a leper was also considered unclean. Therefore, lepers were isolated from the rest of the community so that the members of the community could maintain their status as worshipers.

Jesus did not consider this distinction between clean and unclean valid. A person's outward condition did not make one unclean; rather that which proceeds from the heart determines one's standing before God. Therefore, Jesus did not hesitate about touching lepers and even commanded His disciples to cleanse lepers.

When Jesus decided to socially mix with Lepers he made a statement about the nature of the kingdom. When he decided to heal 10 of them of their leprosy, that made an even bigger statement.

Once the ten men had been healed they left shouting and rejoicing.

Their lives had been changed.

Cured of leprosy they would be able to enjoy life fully.

They left with great excitement.

They all forgot about the man who healed them and changed their lives forever. However, as they left one of the ten, a samaritan, returned and gave thanks to Jesus.

All of the men were healed but only one returned to give thanks.

Ingratitude

Today, there are many people who have been blessed immensely by God, but are very ungrateful for his blessings. At first suggestion that ingratitude is possible among those who have been richly blessed our response is, such a thing is unbelievable. In reality however, there are many who show God on a daily basis that they do not appreciate his benevolence toward them. We show ingratitude by:

DISOBEDIENCE: The most obvious way that we show ingratitude to God is through disobedience to his commands. We have been commanded to refrain from supporting or being a participant of ungodliness. Despite God's command to us, many of us have chosen to do so anyway. Israel, once into the promised land, disobeyed God constantly. When it was economically or politically expedient they worshipped Baal, constructed idols and participated in a wide variety of activities that pushed them further away from God. God blessed them even during their ungodliness. They took his compassion and benevolent spirit for granted and did what they wanted to do.

There are many of us, even today, that have assumed the same attitude. While we have not chosen to erect statues or altars to false gods, like Israel, we have nevertheless decided to be disobedient, especially if economic, social or political involvements suggest that we could profit from our disobedience.

Disobeying God while he is blessing us is the epitome of ingratitude.

SHUNNING HIM: Another way we show ingratitude to God is by withdrawing from his presence. When opportunities are given for us to be in God's presence we ignore them and generally refuse to participate. This is best shown by those who refuse to attend or participate in Sunday School, worship services, praise services or any other service in which God would be lifted up and praised. It is an indirect way of saying that they want the blessings but would prefer not to be in the presence of the one who provides the blessings.

Consider the pigs who enjoyed eating apples that were on the ground every day. They constantly ate apples and gobbled them down without a thought. Each day they came to their favorite spot, the apples were always on the ground. One day the animals had a meeting and many complained about the abundance of trees in their part of the farm. The pigs joined the conversation, voicing their disapproval of the trees that took up so much space that they hardly had room to wallow in the mud. After a lengthy discussion the animals voted to chop down the trees and assigned the pigs to do the job.

As the pigs were chopping they kept their eyes on the trunk of the trees. Soon they all fell one by one and the other animals dragged them away. The next day, when the pigs came to eat apples from the ground, the noticed that they were all gone. In their haste to gobble up the apples they never stopped to consider where they came from. The apples were gone because the trees were gone. They had chopped down their sources of their blessings.

Many today never stop to consider where their blessings come from. They refuse to study their bibles, attend worship, hear the gospel preached or pray. By doing so they show ingratitude to God and "chop down their tree."

Like the nine lepers who received blessings from Jesus who never stopped to look at the source of their hearings, too many people are receiving without saying thank you!

MURMURING: Some show ingratitude by murmuring about what they have while complaining about what they don't have. These are those who receive blessings from God and complain because its either not enough, too big or too small. While Israel wandered in the desert for 40 years they were fed manna from heaven with a sufficient supply of meat. Even as Israel was picking up the manna every day, there were many who were complaining. They complained because it only came six days a week. They complained because it was just manna and did not have any meat. When they had meat and bread they complained that they didn't have any water. They constantly complained, regardless to how God provided for them.

In a similar sense many today complain regardless to God's bountiful blessings toward us. Constant murmuring and complaining is a sign of ingratitude. It indicates that we are not happy with what God has done. We treat him as if we are doing him a favor by receiving his blessings.

When God has given us his sweetness, we give him bitterness!

When God has given us his love, we give him our animosity!

When God has given us his concern, we give him our apathy!

Plenty Reason For Thanks!

Just like one of the lepers remembered that he had plenty to be thankful for, we need to remember that we have plenty to be thankful for!

We may not have millions of dollars, but we have millions blessings!

We thank the Lord for turning our:

—Midnights into days!

—Sorrows into joys!

—Doubts into confirmations!

We thank God for Jesus, who died for our sins and rose to give us the victory!

Thank you Lord, you've been so good to me!

Whosoever Will Let Him Come

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 22, 1995

*SCRIPTURE: And when he had called the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. Mark 8:34

Introduction

Have you ever been ostracized? When you are ostracized you are disowned by others, shunned and rejected. Ostrascism is peculiarly cruel because it causes its victims to feel lonely, and hated and reflects the worst character traits of it perpetrators. When others around you ignore you and form friendship circles that exclude you, you are being ostracized. When very few pepole talk to you and few want to be associated with you publically, you are being ostracized. Those who ostracize others do so with the intention of hurting them. They enjoy a good laugh at the expense of others. Those who are victims are wounded and scarred because they desire to be accepted by others.

The need to be accepted is greatest among teen-agers. Many teens will go to any extent to keep from being ostracized by others. They want to wear the clothing that will be accepted. They want to wear their hair, and other ornaments in ways that will be accepted. In fact, one of the worse catastrophe's that can happen in a teen-ager's life is to be rejected. It is a fear that is so real among some teens that they will spend any amount of money or go to any length to avoid rejection.

Sometimes those who have great talents to offer never use them because they feel what they have to offer is not important. Consider the young man who was the waterboy for the college football team. He loved football, but he was small in statue although he was almost 20 years old. As a boy he'd watched his favorite heroes and then play "pretend" as he kicked drink cans along the street. One day the team was in the final minutes of a championship game. Its main players had been injured. Its relief players were also injured. The team found itself in a dilemma. It was short one player or it would have to forfeit the game. The coach suddenly got an idea. He called for the waterboy, put him in a uniform and told him to just stand on the field. There was a wild hike of the ball that somehow landed in the waterboys hands. With seconds left in the game, without thinking, the young man kicked that ball just as he had a thousand empty cans in the afternoon. It sailed 60 yards for a touch down and victory. Afterwards the coach said, “Son, why haven’t you ever tried out for the team?” The young man said “Nobody ever asked.” The team members learned a lesson that day because everyone saw the crazy kid who loved to kick the can. He never played ball because they saw the waterboy, but couldn’t see the man!

There are many who are excluded from the best opportunities in life by those who falsely judge them superficial qualities. They are never given a chance to prove themselves and they remain excluded and ostracized.

As Christians we have the joy of knowing that while the world often ostracizes us, there is a loving God who sees more than the “waterboy.” When the world excludes us, we know that there is a God who loves the whole world, that includes us too!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains the nature of kingdom of God.

When Christ came he offered the opportunity of the kingdom exclusively to the Jews but it was rejected. That was the offer Israel rceived from heaven. They had enjoyed being God’s chosen people since God promised Abraham in Genesis 12 that future generations would be blessed because of his family. Since that time Israel enjoyed special attention from God. It has enjoyed special blessings as well as special punishments from God because of its “chosen” status.

The nation of Israel was an exclusive group. Divine favor was showered on it, often to the exclusion of others. There were times when Israel appeared to take advantage of its favored nation status as the people strayed to other beliefs and worshipped other Gods, feeling that nothing could really happen to them because they were God’s elect or chosen ones. Being God’s elect had its benefits. Under Moses it meant freedom from slavery and deliverance from a 40 year wilderness journey. Under the Joshua it meant success in securing the promised land. Under Saul and David it meant military success in defeating the nation’s enemies. Under Solomon it meant a reign of glory and splendor. Being an Israelite had its advantages, however, they suffered considerable dismay because of their favored status. God required complete obedience from them and when they strayed, the were often punished with subjection to other nations, military defeat and exile.

This history of being the favored ones of God made Christ’s use of the word “whosoever” peculiarly challenging. It appeared that Christ was broadening the membership of the kingdom of God to include people other than Jews. In the beginning he came to bring a message of hope only for the Jews. In Matthew 10:5-6 he ordered his disciples not to minister to Gentiles (non-Jews) or even to the Samaritans who were despised Jews, but only to the “lost sheep in the House of Israel.” In fact, Christ’s whole ministry was originally directed to the “lost sheep” who were Jews alone. However, in Matthew 22:1-10 he gave the parable of the marriage supper, an alusion to his offering the kingdom of God to Israel and being rejected by those who were invited. He then ordered his servants to go into the highways and byways and invited any who would come to the feast.

In this passage, Jesus used the term "whosoever" repeatedly. It was not a reference to just Jews, but anyone of any race, nationality or persuasion who is willing to take on the burden of the cross can become a part of the kingdom of God. The objective of the kingdom of God is place the burden of being excluded upon each individual. If a person is excluded from the kingdom of God, it will not be a result of it being an elect group that rejects certain kinds of people, but just the opposite. The only people that will be excluded from the kingdom are those that exclude themselves by refusing to accept Christ.

Not only did Christ talk about the inclusive nature of the kingdom he demonstrated it often. When he chose to enter into Samaria and talked with a woman at the well, he defied tradition, which said he was not to have dealings with Samaritans because they were excluded. In John 4:9 the Samaritan woman was surprised that she was being approached by Christ she said, "How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? for the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans." Not only Samaritans were included, but tax collectors, poor people, prostitutes, publicans and a large variety of people generally characterized a sinners were included as he ate with them and broke every traditional rule regarding associating with them.

"Whosever", therefore, meant anyone, of any race, nationality or persuasion welcome to join the kingdom of God. It is no longer an exclusive club for Jews only, but is now open to the world.

Being Excluded Is No Fun!

If there is anything that makes being a teenager difficult it is being excluded from the group. Desiring to belong is a natural tendency that is not uniquie to youth, adults also want to belong. Youth are more sensitive to being excluded than adults in some areas, especially those who are experiencing their Jr. High and High School years. No one wants to be on the outside.

Sometimes young people will accept mediocrity, just to belong. For fear of being called "nerds" some intentionally perform less than their ability in schools. Nerds make A's. Nerds study. Nerds read books. The honor rolls are filled with Nerd names. Nerds are shunned by the other students, because they demonstrate what every student could do if they applied themselves. While nerds perform well scholastically, those who are under achievers exclude them from the group. Nerds become the object of jokes. Nerds are unpopular and are often ostracized. Some youth go out of their way to appear acceptable to their peers. Some have intentionally performed less than their best just to be accepted. A "B" or a "C" student is accepted more than the "A" student so some intentionally do less, to be accepted. However, no young person should ever be happy with anything less than the best, just to be a member of a certain school group.

Patterns of dress and behavior are sometimes tailored to belong. What youth wear and how they act is often designed to win the favor of the "in" crowd among their peers. Many youth judge their self worth by their ability to dress according to the standards of the "in" crowd. The "in" crowd says "Tommy Hillfiger" or "Gibard" or "Guess" is the standard, thus youth feel worthless if they wear perfectly good clothing that does not bear the acceptable brand names. Those who cannot meet the standard of the "in" crowd are excluded and become the brunt of jokes and teasing, which is tantamount to being condemned to hell in the youth world.

Morever, the standards of dress dictated by the "in" crowd are acceptable among youth. Sloppy attire and a generally untidy appearance is acceptable. Pants without belts, and sagging trousers that hang below the waist are seeen as a standard. Many youth, afraid of being different, dred wearing a dress and boys dred even the thought of wearing their shirtails in their pants. Those who appear too neat will be singled out and ostracized.

Even those who choose to obey the rules have a hard time. Those who refuse to endorse dirty jokes, engage is sexually explicit conversation, or break the rules are usually excluded . All of this makes life tremendously difficult for modern youth.

What youth need from their parents, even though they may reject it at the time, is a guiding hand that will lead them through the maze of pressure that comes with adolescence. They need parents who work to build their self esteem at home, making it unnecessary to depend upon the "in" crowd for support. They need parents who will help them take the middle road in dress and the high road in scholarship and decorum rewarding them along the way.

Youth need to belong to church and youth groups that encourage them to perform well, and strive for excellence. Somehow the church must say to struggling young Christians that while they are diffferent from their peers they are not worse, but wiser and more disciplined. Christian youth must remember the truths of two biblical texts: Romans 12:2 And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." The second text is: 1 Peter 2:9 But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light:" Both of these passages point out that God is expecting youth not to conform to whatever one else is doing, but to elevate their minds to higher goals. Christian you are already a part of a special in crowd, a chosen generation. If pressed to make a choice between doing that which is pleasing to God and what is pleasing to the crowds at school, Christian youth choose to please God, even if it means displeasing their friends.

The Christian youth's desire is not to be included in the world's "in crowd" but to make sure they are doing what God wants them to do.

Whosoever Will

The good news is that while the world may exclude Christian youth from its circles and call them names, Christ includes them in his kingdom and calls them children of the king.

When Christ said whosoever will, he extended an invitation to both the young and the old, Black and white, Jew and Gentile to come and to follow him and be a part of the "in" crowd.

The world may exclude but savior includes. When Jesus said "whosover will" he included me!

The world may say "members only", but when Jesus said "Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." Mark 8:34 he included me!

The world offers bread and water, but excludes those who can't pay; but when Jesus said in John 6:35 " I am the bre*ad of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst."* He included me!

When Jesus said in Matthew 11:28 "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." He included me!

I'm so glad to know that when I read John 3:16 that says "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life" I'm glad to know he included me!

I'm glad to know that when Jesus died on Calvary for forgiveness of sin that he included me!

I'm glad to know that when he said in John 14:2-3 "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." I'm glad he included me!

Come and go with me to my father's house!

In my father's house, there is peace!

In my father's house, there is joy, joy, joy!

Switching Families!

*SCRIPTURE:But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law,To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ. Galatians 4:4-7

Introduction

How would you rate your family on a scale of one to ten? Is it everything you would like for it to be? If given the opportunity would you switch? Very few families have the perfect combination. While most people admit that their families are not what they would like them to be, few would be willing to trade them for another. Those who complain about their families, should consider the alternative, which is to have no family at all.

As times change the picture of the ideal family also changes. The social factors impacting families are staggering. Russell Chandler in his book "Racing Toward 2001" notes that by the year 2001: a) More than half of all children will spend part of their lives in single parent families b) By 2010 one in three married couples will have a step child or an adopted child c) As moral standards decline, more children will be wards of the state after being abuse, abandoned or neglected by immature parents. Even more staggering are the realities that as the African-American extended family disintegrates, the pool of African-American children up for adoption will continue to increase at astronomical rates to the point that while African-Americans are less than 20 percent of the American population they will comprise more than 60 percent of children looking for a home. As more children stand outside of the nuclear family waiting to get in, the need for a higher consciousness among our people is extremely important.

Many children live in good houses. But it takes more than a house to make a home. Many are orphans within their own families as the live in comfort but are starved for that the one essential ingredient that creates a family and that is love. An orphan boy ran away from the children's home and decided to find himself the family. He had often dreamed of belonging to the "perfect" family, but no one ever seemed to select him despite his best efforts to impress them during interviews and visits. He came to a fine house, with beautiful furnishings and landscape. As he peeped in the windows he saw the husband and wife screaming at each other, slamming doors and throwing things. A while later he saw another couple that looked friendly. When he rang the door bell he asked, "Can I come and live with you?" They thought he was cute, fed him like a stray cat, but then called the authorities. He slipped away before he was found and wandered from house to house. Finally he stumbled upon a little house on the other side of the track. It was not beautiful and was in need of repair. He saw a widow woman sitting on a sofa with 12 children laughing and smiling all around her. He rang the doorbell and the woman embraced him like he was her own son. She washed his face and sat him on the sofa with the other 12. Immediately he recognized the others. They all had been at the orphanage with him. "You ran away too huh?" Asked the woman. The boy nodded. "I'm looking for a home!" The woman explained that she had adopted all 12 children. "Just like you, they came here looking for a home. If you don't mind living with a widow woman, I don't mind sharing my house, but only the love of God can make this a home." With that the little boy soon became the newest member of the family of the old widow woman who said "God, I'll keep the house, if you'll turn it into a home." There are many today who are working to buy houses, but won't allow God to build them a home free of charge.

As Christians, we rejoice to be a part of the family of God. We were born into the spirit of sin and death. However, thanks to Christ we have been reborn and adopted into the family of God as heirs to his kingdom. How would we rate our new adopted family in Christ? We wouldn't trade it for anything that the world has to offer!

Exposition

This text finds Paul trying to explain to the Galatians the relationship each believer has with God as "adopted" sons and daughters of God.

Paul addressed a tendency of the Galatians and other new Christians to embrace Christianity while at the same time embracing the law of Moses. They felt they could operate under the freedom that the cross provided while at the same time continuing to observe the rituals of the Old Mosaic law. The essence of Paul's discourse was to help them to see that by being Christian that Christ had freed them from seeking favor with God through rituals and ceremonies. The rewards offered to the children of God were not predicated on ritual and ceremony but on faith.

Thus in this text Paul says Christ came in the "fulness of time" and died to save or "redeem" us from the necessity of alignment with the law. Through him, any that believe can be adopted into the family of God and become full heirs to all of his benefits without an allegiance to a ritual. He compared the Christian's relationship to the Mosaic law to that of a child who is the heir to a kingdom. Until the child reaches the age prescribed by the parent, Paul said, he is little more than a slave or servant subject to all of the instructions and rules given by tutors and instructors (4:2). He has to do as he is told even though he is heir to his father's fortune because his time hasn't come. However, when the time comes, he is no longer under the authority of the rigid rules of his tutors.

When Christ came to earth, died on the cross and rose from the dead, he ushered in a new period where all who follow him are immediately adopted into the family of God becoming heirs to the kingdom. Any person who accepts Christ as his Lord and savior is instantly adopted into the family of God. He or she instantly becomes a son or daughter of God (4:5). God's spirit enters each believers life and they become a child of the king (4:6 "God hath sent forth the spirit of his son into your hearts). This same idea was emphasized in John 1:12, "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name:" As sons of God each is a full heir and is thus, freed from the need to observe the ritualism of the law to gain the respect of God. Believers are heirs to the kingdom of God because they have been adopted into the family of God.

Worldly Family

In a spiritual context, there are generally two kinds of families. There is a worldly family and Godly family. By our very nature we are born into a worldly family. It is rooted in selfishness, greed, lust and a long list of self oriented descriptions that promote a sinful agenda in the name of individual freedom.

However, many are spiritual orphans, abandoned by their worldly spiritual family as they search for real home. Many have become orphans in a variety of ways.

Neglect: There are some who have found that the world has not provided the joys and excitement that was promised. They have tried to clubs, bars, saloons and juke joints on too many occasions only to find that they are still missing fulfillment. No matter how much they dance they are still not happy. No matter how many parties they attend, they never seem to really find the key to what they seek. Often they find themselves alone, feeling neglected and abandoned by a world that made them many promises.

Abuse: There are some that have been completely used and abused by the world. Alcohol and drugs have chained them to a destiny that left them in poor health and with little hope. An increasing number of young adults are falling victim to drug abuse. While the name seems to suggest that they are inflicting injury on the drug by abusing it, in actually the drugs are abusing them, inflicting a cruel penalty upon their families and relations.

Abandonment: There are some that have simply been abandoned by the world. These are those who have given the world their best efforts, talent, time and resources only to find themselves abandoned as they fell between the cracks of life. These are the lonely, the broken hearted, and confused. They gave the world their best shot but found themselves on the doorstep of destiny as an unwanted orphan. These are those who reacted to their primal survival instincts. They stole. They killed. They reacted the way the social order conditioned them. They have been locked away in prisons, jails and institutions and the world has dismissed them as incorrigible and unsalvagable and has thrown away the key.

Today there are many who smile on the outside but on the inside they sing the sorrowful words of the old Negro Spiritual, "Sometimes I feel like a motherless child, a long ways from home. A long ways from home."

Indeed, for these who feel abandoned they are a long ways from home!

Switching Families

For those who have been abandoned, abused, or neglected by this world there is good news! The good news is that anyone who is unhappy with his spiritual family can switch families. Those who accept Christ can be adopted in the family of God.

When a child is adopted into a family, all ties that bind him to his old family are cut and he becomes essentially a member of a brand new family. That's what 2 Corinthians 5:17 meant by, "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." I heard the song writer declare: "I moved from my house, I moved to my new house, I changed my old way of life. Thank God I moved to a brand new life!"

When a child is adopted he also has a new relationship with those who adopt him. His name changes. The rules of the house change. He lives within the context of the freedoms that his new family provides. Likewise, those who accept Christ enjoy a new relationship with God. Revelation 3:12 finds Jesus saying "I will write upon him, my new name." When a man accepts Christ the Saints begin to sing "There's a new name written down in glory and its mine, mine, mine!"

While there are many comparisons that can be made between adopting a child and the love of God there is one comparison that cannot be made. A Family that adopts a child, looks at all of the children that are available and chooses one that touches its heart. They take one or two children home, and they leave the rest, because these touched their heart.

That's what happened when Pharaoh's daughter saw Moses drifting on the Nile in a basket. Though there were thousands of children dying, one touched her heart and she took him.

That's also what happened when Mordecai looked down on little Esther and found her to be so "fair and beautiful" that she touched his heart and took her in as his own daughter!

But when God looked out on his creation, he saw a world that was filled with suffering souls, trying to find their way back home.

When God looked at the world, he didn't pick just one soul! The word of God tells me that "..God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him, should not perish, but have everlasting life!"

No wonder the song writer declared: "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore! Very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more. But the master of the sea heard my despairing cry! From the waters lifted me, now safe am I."

I'm so glad that when the world abandoned me, that the Lord gave me a brand new home!

I'm so glad that when the world gave me burdens, that Jesus said, "come unto me all ye that are burdened and heavy laden and I will give your rest!"

I'm so glad that when the world knocked me down that Jesus picked me up! Everyday I'm singing "I'm so glad that Jesus lifted me! Singing glory, glory hallelujah, Jesus lifted me!"

I'm so glad that in the fulness of time that Jesus came down on this old earth!

I'm glad that he died on Calvary!

I'm glad that he rose after three days!

The reason I'm glad he adopted me is because when one is adopted he becomes an heir to everything in his father's house!

The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof!

In my father's house are many mansions!

Come and go with me to my father's house!

There is joy! Joy! Joy!

Up Popped The Devil!

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the New Light Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 15, 1995

SCRIPTURE: Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves tile LORD, aud Satan came also among them. Job 1:6; "Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh but against principalities, against powers, against tile rules of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God. that ye may be able to withstand in that day; having done a1l, to stand. Ephesians 6:11-19.

Introduction

Have you ever had occasions when everything was going right then suddenly everything started going wrong? Do you ever get the feeling that despite your best intentions that calamity, trouble and confusion enters into even the most prayerful activities? Those are times when everyone is on one accord until the devil shows up. This marks the time when the operation is running smoothly, then up pops the devil. Sometimes he comes as a person. Sometimes he comes as an evil idea. Sometimes he comes as a serious destructive action. Sometimes he comes disguised as temptations. Whenever he comes and however he comes, life can be miserable for the saints when the devil decides to pop up!

As Saints we are constantly on guard against evil. While the devil has influenced many men to undertake ungodly activities, he has also influenced many women. Some of the best saints have been spiritually destroyed as Satan popped up at a weak moment in their lives. Many marriages and families have been ruined after Satan popped up. Even churches have had difficulties when Satan popped up among the women.

One of the chief roles of deaconess of the church is to assist the pastor in ministering to the women of the congregation, arming them with spiritual strength and fraternal support such that they can be aware of the many ways which Satan uses to try to destroy them. The deaconess, as female deacons of the church, have a unique ministry among the women which includes lifting up the Lord in worship, and helping fight Satan as he attempts to enter into the lives of the women of the congregation. It is a unique ministry that only women can undertake. No one knows how Satan enters into the lives of women like women. Therefore they work as equal partners beside the male deacons to help prepare the entire congregation to stand for God while resisting Satan at the same time.

As Christians we are always aware that Satan is busy. Therefore we work to build up the congregation of God by preparing them for the day that Satan visits them personally as an uninvited visitor in their individual lives, marriages and spiritual relationships.

Exposition

This text finds Paul writing to the church at Ephesus encouraging its members to prepare themselves to withstand the works of evil that may come upon them.

In the early church believers were persecuted for their faith in Christ. The members were assaulted, killed for sport and otherwise ostracized for their belief in Jesus. Each person was encouraged to be sure in the faith and arm themselves with the power of God to withstand the evil attempts of the devil to destroy them.

Paul wanted to be sure that the Ephesians knew the nature of the evil one and how easy he could plunge himself into their affairs. To insure that they were not deceived, Paul reminded them that the evil one was not a, flesh and blood person, but was spiritual in nature. As such he could influence individuals, powers, and the very governments that operate the nation thus they were to constantly be on guard.

They were encouraged to put on the whole armour of God and then be prepared to withstand the evil one's influence.

Initially, the bishops were responsible for preparing. Later, they were assisted by a group of men and women referred to in the Greek as Diakonos which meant: minister, deacon or servant. Translators of the King James version carefully selected the word "servant" each time "Diakonos" referred to a woman but chose deacon or minister each time the same word applied to a man. Thus in Romans 16:1 the text reads "I commend unto you Phoebe our sister, which is a servant of the church which is at Cenchrea:" While Philippians 1:1 refers to Bishops and Diaknos, but it is translated deacon. The implication of the choice of words supported the belief, in the time of King James, that women were less important than men, it was a socially acceptable translation. However, the original Greek used the same word "Diaknos" to refer to both men and women indicating that the only difference between the two is that one is a male and the other is a female.

The message of warning given by Paul was taught by the bishops and deacons (male and female). That message was clear: Be on Guard to protect yourselves from the tricks of the devil for he is subject to appear without notice even among the saints of God.

Individually, Devils Pop Up!

The deaconess, as she ministers to female members of the body of Christ, must work to help them understand that Satan is waiting for an opportunity to pop up in her life! Therefore, she prays with and works with other Saints that they might be aware of certain habits or activities that invite the devil to pop up.

Deaconess teach the female members of the church how to develop a prayer life. It is said that an apple a day keeps the doctor away. It is also true that a prayer a day keeps the devil away! Thus, the deaconess, by her own personal example, is a praying woman because without prayer her own Life falls apart. When a woman begins a day without prayer . Up pops the devil!

She teaches women in the congregation about moderation in their dress. Sexy dresses are designed to accentuate a woman's positives and attract attention to various ways that God has blessed her physically. Well endowed women who choose to display their endowments invite the devil's attention. 1 Timothy 2:9 suggest that women should modest in their apparel, displaying sobriety in their choices of clothing and jewelry. When a woman leaves home dressed to be socially attractive.. up pops the devil!

In Marriage, Devils Pop Up!

A peculiar role of deaconess as they minister to females is the role of marriage counselor. The deaconess teaches the married women ways to avoid Satan popping up in marriage. Many women have become weak in their service to the church because the devil has popped up in their marriages and they have become dispirited. The deaconess helps every woman protect her marriage by showing her the importance of loving her husband and being loveable herself.

By example the deaconess shows other women how to be a Christian wife. While being an equal partner in her marriage, the deaconess shows her how to respect the leadership of her husband because he symbolizes the relationship of Christ to the church. While male deacons teach the men to love their wives like Christ loved the church, the deaconess teaches the women the essence of Ephesians 5:24 "Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing." When a husband and wife dispute about the direction of their family they are obviously being inconsistent to the word. When that happens ..up pops the devil!

The deaconess as she ministers to the women of the church shows them the importance of Christian parenting. She teaches young mothers the benefit of her experience in nurturing the young. She reminds them that word of God says: "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it' (Proverbs 22:6) Thus, at home the Christian mother teaches her child the importance of being polite, neat, studious and mannerable. In addition she teaches her child to obey God regardless of the cost. When a woman neglects to teach godliness to her children, .. . up pops the devil!

Moreover she also warns every wife to heed the Word of God as it relates to sexual matters avoiding long periods of abstinence, because such long periods give opportunity for the devil to pop up. 1 Corinthians 7:5 puts it this way: "Defraud ye not one the other, except it be with consent for a time, that ye may give yourselves to lasting and prayer; and come together again, that Satan tempt you not for your incontinency." When a marriage partner decides for whatever reason, to retire from marital intimacies... up pops the devil!

Up Pops The Devil

The deaconess also teaches women be on guard for the devil in their daily affairs. On the job, in the community or even in company of friends and family the devil looks for a chance to pop up!

Women are taught to prepare to withstand the evil day when Satan will stick his hand into their affairs and make things miserable.

While much of what has been said has been addressed to women by virtue of the occasion, we must not leave with the notion that the Devil only pops up in women's affairs. He will pop up anywhere he is given an opportunity.

No matter where you go or what you do the devil is sure to come!

Eve enjoyed the beauty of the Garden of Eden. Her life was free of any entanglements, troubles or problems. Every day was beautiful and her home was a paradise. Then one day she walked through the garden, and up pops the devil!

The Angels were meeting in heaven, discussing the glories of God's creation and according to Job 1:6 out of nowhere, up pops the devil!

Mrs. Job was happy. Her children were safe and her husband was prosperous and in good health. Then suddenly, out of nowhere . . up pops the devil! Death came in the family, the finances were shattered and Mr. Job broke out in boils and sores.

In the millenial kingdom, for lOOOyears people will enjoy the Savior's reign. There will be peace and perfect world government. But when the 1000 years has ended, up pops the devil who causes bitterness, war and the destruction of millions! No matter where you go the devil will be there! He comes to church on Sunday. He arrives in Fords and General Motors, German and Japanese made automobiles. He never misses a Sunday because if his ride doesn't come, he'll hitch hike a ride with someone else. No wonder the song writer said: "Don't let the devil ride. if you let him ride, he'll want to drive, don't let him ride."

If you are having a peaceful meeting and everything is going smooth, it won't be long before "Up Pops the devil!"

If you are involved in a project that is going exceedingly well, don't get over confident, it won't be long before "Up Pops the devil!"

Everywhere a saint goes the devil wants to go too.

John said he looked in the distant future and saw the general day of judgment when Saints were lining up to receive their rewards. He said he saw an amazing sight, the devil, the great deceiver, popped up his head one last time.

John said when the devil pops of from his dungeon and tries to poke his nose in the Saint's affairs in that day that he'll be in for a surprise. Revelation 20:10 says "And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever. "

When the saints get to the kingdom it'll be the first time we'll get together without wondering when the devil will Pop up! Over yonder the devil won't pop up and give Us:

—Lust disguised as love; Laughter disguised as joy.
—Nosiness disguised as Concern; Gossip disguised as information —Lies disguised as truth; Excuses disguised as reasons
-Filthiness disguised as fun; sin disguised as innocence
Over yonder! The wicked will cease from troubling! The weary will be at rest!
Every day will be Sunday! It'll always be howdy and never good bye!
Until that day comes, keep telling the story!
Tell them about Jesus, who died out on Calvary!
Tell them haw he arose and is alive today!
Tell them!
Tell them!
Tell them about Jesus!

My Soul Shall Be Satisfied

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 12, 1995

SCRIPTURE"My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips:" Psalm 63:5

Introduction

Has there ever been a time in your life when you just didn't feel like it? You know you should have, but you just couldn't or wouldn't. There are times when even the best of us get dispirited. We know we should go, but we stay. We know we should speak ,but we remain silent. We know we should act, but we take no action. Usually we don't "feel like it" in times of distress, strain or worry. Such circumstances rob us of our enthusiasm and spirit and even at our best we can only offer lackluster appearances.

Sometimes opportunities come when we don't feel like it and we miss them. A job is offered but we don't feel like going to apply. A chance for success may be missed if it comes when we "don't feel like it." Consider three young men who stood on the corner waiting for the girl of their dreams to pass by. The first saw a beautiful woman and married her. For several years there were only two men left standing on the corner until the second also found a beautiful mate. For many years the third man stood on the corner by himself. A pretty woman winked at his broad shoulders and full head of hair, but he didn't feel like it. As time passed another winked his cute graying mustache and temple, but he didn't feel like it. Many years later another was attracted to his balding head and glassy glaze as he sat on the park bench. Even then he didn't feel like it. Finally, a pretty woman winked at him and said words of praise for his shiny new walker. That was it. She was the one. When he finally did feel like it, he struggled to his feet and sat back down. His nurse asked him to explain the matter and he said, " For years I didn't feel like it. When I finally did feel like it, and feel how I felt, I felt like I should sit back down, and stop waiting to feel like it!" Opportunities come, but they won't always come when we feel like it!

There are times when the pressures of the world get next to even the strongest believer. When going through the wilderness of family problems and personal stress they reach a point where they just don't feel like it. Some who are usually upbeat and high spirited take low profiles. They just don't feel like it. Some who usually praise God from the mountain tops get deathly quiet. They just don't feel like it. Some Sundays they may miss a worship service because they just don't feel like it! They don't sing, because they don't feel like it!

As Christians, we should never reach a point where we don't feel like serving or praising God. Even in our wilderness moments God stands beside us to protect and guide us. We should praise him on the mountain top and praise him in the wilderness. Always remembering that the day he carried the cross for us, he didn't feel like it either, but he did it anyway!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he expresses his yearning to return to the presence of God.

The words of this text reflect a point in David's life, before he was King of Israel, while he was yet a wanderer and vagabond. King Saul hunted him as a criminal because of a jealous rage and fear that David's popularity would one day catapult him to the throne.

The background of events that prompted this text is found in 1 Samuel 22 and 23. These chapters detail David, with a small band of 600 friends, attacking Philistines and defeating the enemies of Israel while at the same time hiding from Saul's armies. He is said to have been hiding in the wilderness during this time.

David was in a wilderness in the promised land. 1 Samuel 22 and 23 records David as hiding in Hareth (1 Samuel 22:5). Here, the term wilderness referred to the thick forests of the region. It was not a wilderness because it was dry, desolate or uninhabitable, but because it was removed, and hidden. When David attacked Philistine armies he was in Ziph, which is in the Judean hill country. It too was described as a wilderness, in a broad sense, because the area lacked access to the finer conveniences available at the time.

The fact that David's hiding in the forests of Hareth or in the caves of Ziph are described as wilderness experiences, suggests that a wilderness is defined not so much by its locality as it is defined by the actuality of the experience.

The wilderness is a circumstance in which one is removed from that which sustains him.

The wilderness is a situation in which in which difficulties persist and life is threatened.

Both these definitions apply to David's circumstance. He had been removed from the sanctuary of God, where he worshipped freely. He thirsted for a renewal of that privilege. Moreover, he was being persecuted by King Saul and his very life was threatened on a daily basis. Though surrounded with food, friends, and fellowship, he was in a wilderness.

Yet, in the wilderness, David found satisfaction in the Lord. Though he was in the wilderness he sought God daily, called upon him and praised him. In circumstances he could easily have dismissed as reason to abandon the faith, David resolved "my soul shall be satisfied." Though he yearned for a time when circumstances would be better David said "my soul shall be satisfied." David said despite his wilderness circumstance he would praise God "as with marrow and fatness" or the same as I would if I were in a better circumstance enjoying the good times.

David's response is exemplary because it is not the expected response to a wilderness circumstance. Israel, in the wilderness, complained constantly. The people complained about lost conveniences, the quality of their food, the length of the journey and the quality of their leaders. Very little is said about their praise of God while they were in the wilderness. Plenty is said about grumblings. Later in their history, while exiled in Babylon, they were in another wilderness experience. There the worship stopped and they even found it difficult to sing Zion's songs because they were "in a strange land." Much is said about Israel's Lamentations and mournings about being exiled. Very little is said about their praise of God during their exile. David's practice of praising God even while he was in the wilderness is an tribute to his faith in the power of God.

Despite the wilderness, David resolved "my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips." He resolved to rejoice because each time he reflects on his life he remembers how God has helped him in times past.

David found satisfaction in the wilderness because he knew that wherever his journeys took him he would be under the shadow of God's protective hand. In verse 7 he says "in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice."

David's resolve should be an inspiration to every believer: "Even in the wilderness, I shall be satisfied."

In the wilderness

Today, like David, there are many who are encountering wilderness situations. We are in a wilderness when we are removed from that which sustains us, or brings us peace, joy and fulfillment. We are also in a wilderness when we are attacked, betrayed or persecuted by adversarial circumstances. The exact definition of the "wilderness" will vary from person to person, but if each is not careful, they may find themselves victims of "I don't feel like it-itis" as they deal with their wilderness experience.

While there are some new teachings that suggest that believers will have no wilderness experiences as long as they do right, the fact is every believer will have at least one wilderness experience in the course of a lifetime. David, was a man after God's own heart, yet he found himself constantly in the wilderness of persecution and separation from God. He even wandered into the wilderness of temptation. Job endured the wilderness of misfortune.

After Mt. Carmel, Elijah fled into the wilderness for fear for his life.

John the Baptist's entire ministry was in the wilderness.

Moses was tried in the Wilderness, and Jesus was tempted in the wilderness.

The question is not whether we will have a wilderness experience, but rather, what shall we do when we find ourselves in the wilderness?

Shall we complain and grumble against God as Israel did?

When we suddenly find ourselves in a financial wilderness shall we grumble against God?

When trouble seems to surround your family and one bad thing seems to happen after another, is that grumbling time?

When health problems invade your family circle, is that grumbling time? Is love life strained to the limit? Is that grumbling time?

While these certainly suggest a wilderness, they don't suggest that it's grumbling time. David suggested that we should remember that a believer is always in the shadow of God's hand, regardless of the situation.

When wilderness experiences get you down : "pray your way up, and praise your way out!"

Look at David. When caught in the wilderness of temptation and knocked down by adultery he cried out: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." Psalm 51:10. When he was down, David looked up in prayer. In Psalm 121 he said "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and earth." When knocked down by life's cruelties pray to God for forgiveness and power to overcome. Pray for power to withstand the trials of wilderness and to overcome the evils that seek to devour you. Pray your way up!

Once on your feet, praise your way out! Many of the Psalms were written by David while he was in the wilderness. They were written while he was running, dodging, being persecuted. A key word of all his 150 psalms is "praise" which is used 160 times. When we read the psalms we can see David Praising his way out!:

Psalm 9:1 "..I will praise thee, O LORD, with my whole heart; I will show forth all thy marvellous works."

Psalm 22:22 "22 "I will declare thy name unto my brethren: in the midst of the congregation will I praise thee."

Psalm 150: 6 "Let every thing that hath breath praise the LORD. Praise ye the LORD."

When we are in the wilderness we can't grumble our way out we must praise our way out!

My Soul Shall Be Satisfied

We should pay special attention when David says "my soul shall be satisfied."

Why should we be satisfied in the midst of the wilderness? To be satisfied means:

_To have our needs met. We should be satisfied because despite our wilderness God continues to meet our needs. Philippians 4:19 makes it clear, "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

_To be free of doubt. Despite the wilderness of the moment we are assured that the promises of God will be fulfilled. 2 Peter 3:9 "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance."

No wonder the song writer declared: Blessed Assurance, Jesus is mine. Oh what a foretaste of glory divine. Heir of salvation, purchase of God. Born of his spirit. Washed in his blood!"

_To feel that what you have is sufficient. Despite the circumstance. Every believer shares Paul's testimony in 2:Corinthians 12: 9 "..My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness." Grace makes it easy to be satisfied. In verse 10 Paul elaborates: "Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong."

In the wilderness of life every believer should be able to say like David, "my soul shall be satisfied!" Difficulties may rise, but my soul shall be satisfied!

-Thorns may line my path, but my soul shall be satisfied!

-Clouds may cloud my skies, but my soul shall be satisfied!

-Friends my sometimes betray me, but my soul shall be satisfied!

-My pockets may sometimes be empty, but my soul shall be satisfied!

What does it mean to be satisfied? Regardless of the discipline Jesus is the answer?

Ask Thurgood Marshall, the Supreme Court Judge, "What does it mean to satisfy?" He will answer, to satisfy is to meet the requirements of the law! We can be satisfied because we serve a savior who met the requirements of the law on our behalf and nailed it to the cross.

Ask Albert Eienstein, the great mathematician, "what does it mean to satisfy mathematically?" He would answer to satisfy the demands of an equal, whatever is done on one side of the equal sign must be done on the other. We cam be satisfied in the wilderness because what we see God doing for our neighbor, we know he'll do for me too. One song writer said "It is no secret what God can do. What he's done for others he'll do for you!"

Ask the bill collector, "what does it mean to satisfy a debt?" He will answer that to satisfy a debt it must be paid in full with an acceptable currency!

We should be satisfied because "He was wounded for our transgression, bruised for our iniquities. The chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed."

He paid the debt with the only acceptable currency, the blood of Calvary!

Jesus paid it all, all to him I owe, sin had left its crimson stain, but he washed it white as snow!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary, paid it all!

Jesus, who rose after three days and nights, paid it all!

Come what may, from day to day, as long as I have Jesus, It is well with my soul!

Consider the Lilies

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 13, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: And yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to day is, and to morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith? Matthew 6:28-30

Introduction

Have you ever received flowers as an expression of sentiment? Giving flowers to express a range of sentiments from joy to sadness is an age old custom in most parts of the world. Their beauty and fragile nature seem to suggest the mood of the moment. Those in love send flowers. Those who want to be in love, send flowers. Those who want to make up, send flowers. We send flowers to congratulate performers, celebrate victories and to mark special occasions. We also send flowers to express our grief. The flowers, in so many ways, often say what we are unable to articulate.

While sending flowers is a gesture of sentiment, those who send them must take pains to insure they send the right message. Consider the man whose friend enlarged his business. His sales had increased to the point that a larger warehouse and sales office were needed. Even though the move was a rather complicated and burdensome process, it was really a thing to be celebrated. For this reason, the man sent his friend some flowers on the day of his grand opening. The flowers, however, were poorly handled and the businessman received a bouquet that was intended for a funeral. It was accompanied with a card which said: "My deepest sympathy during this time of sorrow." When the man called his friend on the phone to wish him well, he was confronted with the error, "Why in the world," said the businessman, "did you send me these sympathy flowers?" The man went immediately to the florist to demand an explanation. The florist met him outside the shop and was obviously upset. "I am terribly sorry about the mixup with the flowers," he said, "but I hope you will be understanding. Your situation is not half as bad as the one down at the funeral home. The folks there received your flowers accompanied by the card which read: BEST WISHES IN YOUR NEW LOCATION."

Life, like a flower, is fragile and short. At the same time it is a thing of beauty, grace and dignity. We enjoy its beauty while it lasts. We spread its joy around for the few fleeting moments that we grace this earth, expecting, any second, to be plucked and trimmed, to form a divine bouquet in the heavens.

As Christians, we know our heavenly father considers each of us as beautiful lilies of the field. He clothes us, cultivates us, waters us and harvests us, according to his divine will. We strive each day to shed as much beauty as we can, to as many people as we can, reflecting the love of God every day of our lives. He is the Rose of Sharon. We are the lilies of the field. With him, we make the world a more beautiful place to live and love.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains the nature of God's care for his people.

Jesus urged his followers to live by faith and to give of themselves to others. He urged them to spend less time providing for themselves and more in personal service. He reminded them that God provides for care of all his creation.

The fowls of the air were given as example in verse 26. They were depicted as neither sowing or reaping but receiving their daily provision.

At verse 28 Jesus compares believers to the lilies of the field. The Galilean landscape was often filled with wild Gladiolas which grew between the grain and formed a blanket of pink petals in the valleys. Gladiolas, while not lilies were generally described as such by common word usage. Christ's allusion to the lilies of the field was not restricted to what grew in Palestine, but went further, including all wild flowers of God's creation.

In suggesting that we "consider" the lilies, Christ challenges us to probe deeper into the nature of the lilies of the field to get a better understanding God's providence. In Proverbs 6:6 we are told to, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise." In Luke 12:24 we are told to, "Consider the ravens: for they neither sow nor reap."

Here we are being told to consider the lilies, which suggest that there are deeper meanings that what could be drawn from simply a simple "behold" such as we get from verse 26 about the fowls of the air. To "consider" means to look deeper into what you see in search of greater truths.

The phrase "consider the lilies" referred to a wide variety of flowers that were unique to Galilee. The lilies of the field, as opposed to water lilies represented a wide variety of God's creation on earth. They were common in nature, but yet they had a widespread beauty.

The lilies of the field had a variety of uses beyond just beauty. Some were used for medicines, spices and other uses each had a purpose in God's design of things.

God's care for the lilies was used as an example of his care for believers. The lilies are beautiful and plenteous, but God takes care of them.

Just as the lilies of the field are the object of God's love and care, so is the life of every believer.

Just lilies

Today, each believer can draw understanding, encouragement and hope from Christ's characterization of our lives as similar to the lilies of the field.

Believers are of all types and sizes and have different purposes, all distinguished by a unique 'fruit of the spirit" that marks them as a peculiar people with a special purpose. Christ who participated in the creation of life, knew the nature of things. When he compared us to the lilies of the field it was no accident.

The Lily is a family of flowers composed of more than 250 genera and 4000 species of herb like plants with pretty flowers. Among the lilies that common usage categorizes as lilies are tulips, and daffodils. Christ knew something about the nature of people. Which is perhaps why he called us the lilies of the field, for included in the lily family are onions, garlic and chives.

In life we seem to meet all of the lilies of the field in the course of our journey. The tulip people amaze us as they stand tall straight and proud in the spring of the year. Their red bulbs satisfy us. Their straight stems remind us of the beauty of men and whom who stand firm for that which is right. They stand beside the Yellow Daffodil people. Their bright cheery colors remind us of the warmth and friendship of people who openly express the love of God.

Sometimes we meet Smilax people. Smilax is kind of lily from which we get sarsaparilla, a sweet flavored drink. These folk are kin to Lily of Valley. The lily of the valley is a kind of lily used to make perfume because of its sweet odor. It's good to meet Sarsaparilla people, the make like sweet for us. We cling to them because the bring us joy.

On occasion we meet the Saponins. Saponin is extract of the Soap lily. Native Americans use it to make detergents. Soap Lily people keep their eyes on us. They push us to clean up our act. Thank God for Soap Lily people, what would the world be without them.

We don't always meet the tulip and daffodil people in our journey. Sometimes we meet other members of the lily family including onion, and garlic people. These serve a useful purpose, they add flavor to any preparation, but sometimes they will make you cry.

When Jesus said consider the lilies of the field he referred to all of God's creation: The tulip people, the daffodil people, as well as the onion and garlic people. They all have a purpose and a place in God's creation.

A unique quality of lily people is their ability to adapt. Even if the climate is dry, lilies do well. While the world looks at their large bulbs as objects of beauty and praise, they are actually storage tanks. The lily stores food and water in its bulbs and stem when it is available, and uses it during dry seasons. They survive even in the driest of climates.

Lily people endure because they store the word of God in their hearts. In times of want they draw upon their storehouse of reserves and remember that "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." In times of need they recall that, "my God shall supply all your need, according to his purpose..." Lily people endure tough times by faith.

Lily people are everywhere. While some flowers grow only in some areas of the world, lilies grow everywhere. In the fields, the hillsides, valleys. Some types of lilies even grow among the thorns and thickets. Any place you turn God has some lily people, growing, working, serving adding beauty, flavor and a special touch to all they embrace.

In the church, God has some lily people. These are the ones who are willing to bring their special contribution to the arena of Christian service, carrying out their calling meticulously, sometimes anonymously, with painstaking care to detail. Lily people take church work seriously. They attend, contribute, study, work and do their part to build the kingdom of God

What would the world be, without lily people?

The Fate of Lilies

There is one final aspect of the lily that must be considered. That is its fate.

While it is true that lilies bring beauty, joy, love, seasoning and flavor to an otherwise ugly landscape, it must also be considered that lilies live a little bit at a time.

Lilies blossom and give beauty for a time and then they fade away. In fact, the life span of lilies is very short in comparison to other families of flowers. In verse 30 Jesus characterized the lily as "grass of the field which today is" and tomorrow is not. Psalm 90:5-6 puts it this way, "Thou carriest them away as with a flood; they are as a sleep: in the morning they are like grass which groweth up. In the morning it flourisheth, and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down, and withereth."

Those who know anything about lilies don't get worried when their blossoms are not seen. Because they know the nature of a lily.

When the bulb of the lily takes root deep enough, it won't matter if the blossom fades away!

When the bulb of the lily is deep enough, it won't matter if the weather gets a little chilly!

After a spell that same lily that first appeared dead and lifeless starts to bloom again because the life is in the bulb not in the blossoms.

No wonder Christ says consider the lilies for like the lilies a time will come when our blossoms will not be seen.

A time will come when we will not be able to share the beauty of our existence with our friends.

When that time comes those who are left behind should consider the lilies and remember that "life is not in the blossoms but in bulb." Life is not in this flesh and blood. Life is not in this body. Life is in the bulb!

John 11:26 "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die...". The life is in the bulb!

In 1 Corinthians 15:42-Paul explained the same concept. The body is only the blossom the spirit is the bulb. 42 So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body."

We who are lilies of the field understand this idea because we've been following a man that somebody called the Lily of the valley!

He lived and brought beauty to the world!

After a short while his blossoms were clipped and he was buried in the borrowed tomb!

But early Sunday morning the bulb began to blossom and he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

On Thursday November 9, 1995 Lottie Mae Stewart was plucked from the garden of life. A dutiful servant who brought inspiration to many, she was a beautiful lily in God's field.

No. 584-Communion, Thanksgiving

The Last Thanksgiving

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 19, 1995

SCRIPTURE: And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves: For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come. Luke 22:17-18.

Introduction

What would you do if you suddenly found out that this Thanksgiving Day would be the last one you would ever share with your family and friends? Would your plans for the day change? Would you spend the day watching Christmas parades on television? Would you spend it all cooking fine foods and fellowshiping with friends? Would you sleep all day? The response to the question depends upon what purpose and distinction you place on Thanksgiving Day. If you view it as a day to relax, kick back, and eat fine foods, you might do a few things differenly. If you view it as a day to sleep or watch football, you might change a few more things. However, if you view it as a day to praise the Lord, you will probably gather your family together under one roof and reflect upon a year of activity and give God praise and thanks for the good times. Your last thanksgiving would be spent like all others, giving praise and thanks to God for his mercy and his goodness.

There are many who feel that life as given them a bum deal and they have nothing for which to give thanks. Consider the boy who sat down to thanksgiving dinner with his family. The food was piping hot and it appeared that this thanksgiving would be one to remember. The table was covered with all kinds of foods! There were meats, pies, cakes, dressings, ducks, hens and turkeys. The food looked delicious. Except for the broccoli. He hated broccoli! When his mom prepared his plate she killed his appetite when she put the biggest spoonful of broccoli on the plate. His stomach turned. Soon his father asked him to bless the food for the family. All heads bowed, but the boy never said a word. They waited and despite his mother's urging, the boy would not bless the table. Finally his father asked him what was the problem. "I don't know what to do. I can't give thanks for the food because mama put broccoli on my plate. If I had given thanks for broccoli, I'd be telling a lie-and what's worse, he might give me more!" Like this little boy, some people are unhappy with some aspect of their lives and they believe giving thanks might bring more of it, so they don't give thanks at all.

When the pilgrims came to America, their first year was not all pumpkin pie. Many of them died of disease and cold. They endured hardships and difficulties. However, when the harvest came they looked beyond their difficulties and saw all of the other ways God had blessed them and gave him thanks. That was the first Thanksgiving Day in America.

As Christians, many of us have shared similar moments. The first Thanksgiving Day you spent as a married couple was special. So was the first one after you began a new phase of your life or bought a new home. The first Thanksgiving was truly significant. If the first Thanksgiving was significant, the last thanksgiving will be even more important. The Last Thanksgiving referred to is not of this earth. It will be the time when the Kingdom of Heaven becomes a reality. The last Thanksgiving will be when all of the Saints give praise and thanks to God for reuniting broken family circles and ushering in an era of peace and love.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he shares the last passover with his disciples, giving thanks in his usual way, but refusing to share it until they eat together in the kingdom of Heaven.

In a large upper room, Jesus sat down with his 12 disciples to share with the a passover meal which has become known as the Lord's supper. Note that in 22:14 the text refers to the 12 as apostles, rather than the "12" or as disciples as they had been referred to in most references in the Gospel. The distinction is important to understanding this text.

Initially the 12 were referred to simply as "disciples." A disciple is a person who follows the teachings of another. On the other hand an "Apostle" is a person who has been sent on a mission and charged to represent him. Moreover, Apostles are also given the authority to act on the sender's behalf.

In Matthew, Mark and John, the term "Apostle" is mentioned only once in each respective book. However the book of Luke characterizes them as apostles after 9:1, in which they were transformed from mere followers to authorized representatives. In 9:1 reads "Then he called the twelve disciples together and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases and he sent them to preach the kingdom of God and to heal the sick." Given such a mission, Luke describes the 12 as apostles, not disciples.

In the text Jesus is celebrating the passover with the 12 apostles. They had been charged to go out and evangelize and build the kingdom of God. In celebrating the meal, Jesus used what was apparently a trade mark procedure associated with him. He gave thanks. The habit of thanksgiving each time he broke bread was so unique that his disciples readily associated it with him.

His method involved giving a prayer of thanksgiving, then breaking the bread. In Mark 8:6, it is recorded: "And he commanded the people to sit down on the ground:

and he took the seven loaves, and gave thanks, and brake and gave to his disciples." They remembered that Thanksgiving because immediately after, the seven loaves of bread and two fishes that he blessed multiplied enough to feed five thousand or more people. They saw him use this method of giving thanks and breaking bread so much that they readily identified the method with him.

His practice of offering thanksgiving was so unique to him that after the resurrection two of his disciples were walking down the road to Emmaus talking with Jesus who walked along with him without being recognized. It was only when he sat down to eat with them and took bread at Luke 24:30 that they realized who had been among them. When they saw how he offered thanksgiving over the bread then broke it, 24:31 says "And their eyes were opened, and the knew him; and he vanished out of their sight.

In the upper room Christ offered his last thanksgiving prayer with his apostles. However, he refused to share the meal with them. He said he would not drink with them until the work was completed and all of them had entered into the kingdom of heaven. His part of the mission was to place them into service, preach the gospel and to sacrifice himself on Calvary. The apostles were also given a mission, which could not be truly celebrated until completed. The assignment was issued in Matthew 28:19 "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Their charge was to reach and teach as many as they could with the Gospel message and build the kingdom.

When the work of the church Christ established is completed and the kingdom of heaven becomes a reality, the great celebration of the Saints in that day will be the last thanksgiving! Until that day comes, every day for Saints is a day of thanksgiving and praise to God for the great things he has done!

Every Day is Thanksgiving!

Those who are working in the kingdom know the importance of giving thanks to God everyday. That is what was unique about Jesus' practice. He offered thanks everytime he broke bread. We, who follow his footsteps, do exactly the same thing. We thank God every day for every blessing we have received from him. While Thanksgiving is noted as a special day of thanks and reflection, those who know the Lord see it as a continuation of their own personal tradition.

We Give Thanks For Blessings: We thank God for blessings. Certainly, all that which we have achieved and attained was not because of our deserving character. We thank him for blessing us, despite the fact that we don't deserve such blessings. We recognize some of the ways that we have been blessed immediately. We see material evidences such as homes, cars, and a resonable portion of health and strength. We thank him for those. However, there are blessings we have received that are unseen. We have been protected from unseen dangers and miraculosly steered around them. We have no way of knowing all of the unseen dangers that we have been spared from, just this day alone. Every day we give God thanks for blessing us!

We Give God Thanks for Burdens: Not only do we give God thanks for blessings, but we also give him thanks for our burdens. 1 Thessalonians 5:18 says "In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." The word "everything" includes our burdens and problems. We thank God for everything, because we know that all things work to our good, if we are in Christ Jesus. Thus, we thank him for everything. Consider two men who had the unique practice of thanking God for everything. When they sold water in their village they yelled through the streets:" Thank God for cool water!" A mean leader decided to test them. A law was passed prohibiting anyone from selling water. The men started selling old rags. The men yelled "Thank God for old rags!" The mean leader passed another law that made it illegal to sell old rags. The two men switched again. No matter what they did the mean leader passed a law making it illegal. But they they always thanked God for every law against them.

One day the mean leader ordered one of the men to be drafted into the army and was given a shiny silver sword. His friend was hungry one day, and without telling anyone he sold the sword and bought his friend food. They rejoiced: "Thank God for the food!" He replaced his steel sword with a wooden one to disguise his deed. The next day the mean leader had the captain to capture the young man's friend who was to be executed by his friend. Instantly God gave the young man a direction. The young man announced loudly "I am no murderer. I will not take an innocent man's life. If this man is innocent I pray that God would turn my sword to wood." At that moment he pulled the wooden sword and the crowd yelled "Set him free!" As the two men looked at each other they both turn to the crowd and said "Thank God for wooden swords!" We Give God thanks for everything, even if it appears there is nothing for which to be thankful, thank him anyway!

Thank God for the bill collector!
Thank God for the dentist!
Thank God for your enemies!
In everything give thanks!

The Last Thanksgiving

The first thanksgiving in America was celebrated by the pilgrims but it was not the first thanksgiving.

Abel set up an altar and gave thanks to God with an an acceptable sacrifice. God was pleased with what he offered. It was a great day of thanksgiving because God had accepted his sacrifice!

Noah floated in a huge ark for a year and 17 days. When he touched ground he built an altar and gave thanks to God! It was a great day of thanksgiving because God had saved them from the flood and place their feet on dry ground!

When Israel left out of Egypt and crossed over the Red Sea, they took 12 stones from the river bed and set up a marker on the altar side. The gave thanks to God for bringing them over the desert into the promised land! It was a great day of thanksgiving because God had brought through the wilderness to better and promising land!

When Solomon built the the Temple at Jerusalem he offered thanksgiving to God. That's when he heard God respond: "If my people, which are called by name shall humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." It was a great day of thanksgiving because God had promised to heal the land!

When Israel returned to Jerusalem from captivity they offered thanksgiving to God. It was a great day of thanksgiving because family and friends who had been away for a long time had returned!

While these were the first thanksgivings of record, the word indicates that we are to offer thanks to God every day!

1 Chronicles 16:18 says "Give thanks unto the Lord, call upon his name, make known his deeds upon the people!"

Psalm 92:1 says "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto thy name!"

Psalm 106:1 says "O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever!"

Psalm 140:13 says "Surely the righteous shall give thanks unto thy name: the upright shall dwell in thy presence."

When we wake up in the morning, give thanks! But Psalm 119:62 says even "At midnight I will rise to give thanks unto thee because of thy righteous judgments!"

When we break bread, give thanks!

When we close out a day, give thanks!

We give the Lord thanks for giving us a:

—Peace that can never be troubled!

—Foundation that can never be moved!

—Promise that can never be broken!

—Refuge that can never be conquered

—River that can never run dry!

—Victory that can never be lost!

—Wealth that can never be stolen!

We offer thanks for Jesus who died out on Calvary and rose after three days!

We look forward to the last thanksgiving!

That will be the day when every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that Christ is Lord of Lords!

That will be the day the wicked cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest! That will be the day when Christ shall enter his kingdom!

On that last thanksgiving day the earth shall rejoice in a single "Thank You Lord! Thank you Lord!

Thank you Lord!

Return Unto Thy Rest, O My Soul

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 29, 1995

SCRIPTURE:"Return unto thy rest, O my soul; for the LORD hath dealt bountifully with thee. For thou hast delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling. I will walk before the LORD in the land of the living." Psalm 116:7-9

Introduction

What do you do when life treats you well? When your bucket has been filled at the well of opportunity and most of your life's ambitions have been achieved, what do you do? The unsaved will hunger for more and spend the remainder of their lives trying to hog the trough. The saved soul will lift up his eyes to God and gives thanks for everything, living in peace with himself and with God.

One of the unfortunate realities of life is that many people spend their whole lives searching for happiness and contentment and never find what they seek. Despite massive accumulations of properties and financial resources, there are literally millions of miserable people in the world who have achieved, but are not happy. They cannot rest. They are never at peace.

Consider two men that sat beside each other on the train a few days after Thanksgiving. One man wore a Brooks Brothers suit and carried an expensive brief case filled with stocks and bonds. The other wore work clothes and carried a bologna sandwich in a paper bag. "How was your thanksgiving?" Asked the working man. "What have I got to be thankful for?" Came the rich man's response. "The stock market dropped and my portfolio is valued at less than $1 million now. I had to sell one of my vacation homes, my butler died, my flight has been canceled and now I'm riding the train like a common man." The working man said "I feel sorry for you!" The rich man was puzzled by the response and asked, "What do you mean?" The working man answered "I don't know what its like to have a million dollars. I've never owned a house, hired a butler or rode a plane. I'm riding this train like a common man but I feel good about life." The rich man wasn't moved by that testimony but was drawn to the confident smile on the working man's face. He asked the working man to explain his disarming smile. Then the working man said, "The difference between us is that you dream of a leather briefcase filled with stocks and bonds. I pray for my daily bread. No matter what else happens in life I give God thanks for the bologna sandwich!" Many of us have succeeded in life and fail to see it. Others give God thanks for every achievement, even our bologna sandwiches, and he blesses us with peace!

As Christians, we understand the importance of praising God for every thing we have. Health, strength, a job, and career successes are just outer tokens of his bounty toward us. Inner peace with ourselves, our families and with God comes when we approach life with a sense of gratitude and thankfulness that recognizes God as the source of all blessings and reason for our being. When we approach life with a spirit of thanksgiving and humility each day will be a blessing and our souls will be at rest!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he reflects upon the bounty that God has given him both materially and spiritually.

This Psalm was written during a period in which the entire nation of Israel was celebrating a period of thanksgiving for the return of the Ark of the Covenant to Jerusalem. The Ark of the Covenant had great significance to Israel. It was a golden box, elaborately designed to represent the presence of God in the nation. It contained the original ten commandments carved in stone and a pot of manna which Israel survived upon in the wilderness for 40 years. For the nation of Israel the Ark was so important that wars were fought to protect it, retain it or get it returned.

The enemies of Israel stole the Ark on many occasions. The ark was captured by the Philistines (1 Sam. 4). When the stolen Ark came to rest in the cities of Ashdod, Gath, and Ekron the enemies of Israel came to fear it because they were plagued with disease, sickness and death because of its captured presence. The Lord vanquished Dagon and spread bubonic plagues among them until they eventually returned the Ark to Israel.

Once the Ark was returned to Israel David attempted to bring it back to Jerusalem but was stricken with fear when of the son's of Abinadad touched and dropped dead. David hid the ark in the home of a friend for three months. When he learned that the friend had been blessed because of the Ark's presence he had it brought back to Jerusalem.

A national Thanksgiving celebration was underway as David came home to give thanks to God for the return of the Ark and for all his mercies shown to the people. He asked at verse 12 "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?" At verse 17 he responds "I will offer to thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving and will call upon the name of the Lord."

The three sections of this text serve as an outline for David's life, especially when viewed in reverse order.

Psalm 116:9: "I will walk before the Lord in the land of the living," notes David's resolve to walk before God while he has health and strength.

Psalm 116:8 "For thou hast delivered by soul..."; notes the point in which God forgive David for his spiritual indiscretions, and calmed his fears and guided his footsteps during the course of his life.

Psalm 116:7 "For thou has dealt bountifully with thee," finds David responding to the success God gave him in life. Starting from a lowly existence and rising to a position of prominence.

Finally David notes that such a soul can return and be at rest. The initial statement of the passage, is a summary of his spiritual journey. He had reached a point in which he was spiritually at rest having lived and achieved. He gave thanks to God for being at peace with himself and with God.

Walking Before God

David's attention in this text to how he walked in life is important for all who study the strengths and weaknesses of his life.

While in the land of the living, it is important that every person strive to walk before God in such a way that he need not be ashamed. At one point in their lives Adam and Eve hid from God in the Garden, because of their sin. Jonah tried to run from God to avoid his responsibility. In this life's walk we should all be careful to walk the path that is pleasing to God.

Walking before God means living a Godly life. It means adhering to the finest aspects of life and striving for the highest goals.

It means taking the talents that God has given us and using them to the best of our abilities, always giving him the praise and thanks for whatever achievements that are made in life.

Walking before God means that our lives suggest innocence of intent. Adam and Eve hid because they knew they had done wrong. The hid because they were aware of breaking God's law. We can walk before God when we can honestly say that we have attempted to live the godly life. When we have given our best. When we have striven to achieve excellence by honorable means. When we have sought and attained a sense of spiritual balance we answered the demands of Micah 6:8 ".. what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

Delivered Soul

Those who give their lives to God have an extraordinary reason for thanks and gratitude. It is because of the delivered soul that every believer can rejoice despite his own ability to life a completely flawless life.

The delivered soul is the soul that has made mistakes but has been forgiven. Certainly this is what David had in mind because his was a soul that was sprinkled with personal flaws, occasional doubt, and imperfection. However, he rejoiced because God saved and revived his soul. In Psalm 51:10 in cried out: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

David notes that his soul was delivered from death. Every believer has the same testimony. Without Christ our destiny is death because death is the punishment for sin. Romans 6:23 makes it clear that the payment for sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Christ Jesus. Ephesians 2:8
makes it even clearer that we have been delivered from death when it says " For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God"

The man or woman who has received a delivered soul has received the supreme blessing from God. It far exceeds any other blessings he could achieved.

It is the delivered soul learns that God shall wipe all his tears away!

It is the delivered soul that enjoys the daily walk with God!

David said "thou hast delivered ..mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling!"

This combined spirit of need and gratitude must have been what the song writer had in mind when he wrote "I want Jesus to walk me with me! While I'm on the tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus to walk with me!"

David gave God thanks for saving his soul!

David gave God thanks for wiping his weeping eyes!

David gave God thanks for guiding his feet along the way!

Dealt Bontifully With Me

Finally we must note that David took special pains to thank God for his bounty!

At no point in his life did he ever come to the conclusion that he what he had achieved came as a result of his own efforts.

When we have been blessed to grow up in a Christian home, we know the Lord has dealt bountifully with us!

When we have graduated from high school and pursued a successful career rising higher than even our childhood expectations, we know the Lord has dealt bountifully with us!

When we have had the opportunity to share a happy family life, with a loving mother, father and brother, we know the Lord has dealt bountifully with us!

With such a life, though not sprinkled with mansions and limousines, yachts and vacation hideaways, there is a confidence that God has been good to us and given the opportunity, like David we return to Jerusalem at the season of Thanksgiving to give thanks to God for all his benefits!

Perhaps it was a premonition, a slight glimpse in the future, but in the middle of all of his praise and thanksgiving to God, David also saw the prospect of death. At verse 15 he notes "Precious is the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

But even with that prospect David came home to give thanks!

David came to celebrate Thanksgiving!

David came home to rejoice with his family!

David came home to worship God in his sanctuary!

David came home to celebrate the abundance God gave him!

We too, standing between on the threshold that divides yesterday from tomorrow, must look at how God has blessed us and say thank you!

Thank you Lord, for turning my moments of sadness into reasons for rejoicing!

Thank you Lord, for reminding me how bountifully you have blessed me, despite my occasional disappointments

Thank you Lord for sending your son that I might have hope!

It's a hope made possible on Calvary and confirmed by the empty tomb

It's hope that one glad morning when this life is over...

I'll fly away!

On Sunday November 26, 1995 Edgar Oliver Savannah spoke his last words to his mother. He came home to give thanks to God because he hath bountifully dealt with him. His soul is at rest!

Thank you Lord,

Pick Three

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 3, 1995

SCRIPTURE:"For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one. " 1 John 5:7-8; 13 "And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." 1 Corinthians 13:13

Introduction

Have you ever gambled? If most of us will tell the truth, we would have to admit that we have gambled on occasion. Some have gambled in casinos. Others have frequented video poker machines. Some have played lotteries. Some have bought raffle tickets. Some have played bingo in games sponsored by churches. Some have stooped low on street corners and have rolled dice. There are some who have played Poker, Tunk, Bid Whisk, Pokeno and other games, gambling pennies, pay checks and even pensions on a win. There are others who received a hot tip and invested in a risky stock venture. Some even poured their life savings into get rich quick schemes that left them penniless and broke. Most of us, if the truth is really told, have gambled at one time or another.

Those who are opposed to legalized gambling have difficulties winning converts because of the simple truth the people see gambling all around them. In the African American community lotteries were played long before there were government sponsored lotteries. In this side of the track it was called playing the numbers, as whole communities staked their hopes on hitting the number and climbing out of poverty. Picking the right set of numbers became a daily occupation. They played their birth dates, house numbers, anniversary dates, and even the death dates of loved ones. They played numbers they saw in their dreams, posted on street signs or heard referred to in sermons on Sunday. Most of their daily routine revolved "hitting the number." The state frowned upon running the numbers when it was an African-American tradition. Now, scores of states operate lotteries that offer millions to those who pick the right numbers. Million are encouraged to "play every day and be a winner every night."

There are even some Christians who have been snared into the numbers game, whether its picking three apples at a slot machine, picking three winners in three races at the track, or picking three or more lottery numbers. The more it is opposed the more attention and support it gets, even from church members. Consider the pastor who was disturbed because so many of his members were gambling. The more the pastor preached against gambling it appeared the more they gambled. Noticing that they were doing just the opposite of what he asked, he decided to put on a devil's suit and stand in front of a river boat casino and invite all of his members to go inside. Since they always did the opposite of what was asked he knew this would work.

He dressed in a blood red suit, carried a pitched fork and had horns coming from his head. As he invited his members into the casino they greeted him with a smile and joined thousands of others inside. None of them recognized him. Finally one his members said to him, "So you are the devil. I've heard so much about you, I've wanted to see you face to face. You know I'm married to your sister, and she's giving me pure hell!"

It was only then that they preacher discovered what we today have found painfully true, those who turn to gambling are trying to get out of what they perceive to be a living hell. They are reaching for hope, even though it's just a one in 20 million chance, that they will get lucky and be lifted into a better way of life. The crowds keep going because they are hopeless and the lure of picking the right three and getting free or the right five and coming alive attracts them.

As Christians we have hope. However, our hope is not based upon picking three or numbers. Neither is it based on a power ball selection. Our hope is based upon staking our faith in the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. If we pick these three every day, there is no doubt that I will be a winner every night!

Exposition

This text gives us an explanation of the trinity or unity of the God head.

John, writing in his first epistles explains the perfect union of the godhead. In heaven, the power and presence of God is represented by the Father, the Word and the Holy Ghost.

On earth the presence of God is witnessed by the Holy Spirit, water baptism and the blood of Christ. Together they are one. Those who call on God call on all three. Those who call on all three call on one.

In 1 John 4:8 John wrote that God is love. He is the spirit of living compassion among men.

Paul writing in 1 Corinthians 13:13 noted that there are three virtues that every believer should have but the greatest is love. He wrote: "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love."

Those who pick these three to give direction and substance to life make three spiritually sound choices. The involve no risk and there is no chance of failure. Faith, Hope, and Godly love are winning combination for any person who seeks to find happiness in life.

Pick these three as guiding principles and our lives will be complete.

Impact of Gambling

There are millions today who have very little faith, no hope and no God on their side. Among these are millions of people whose names are on church roles. It is not surprising to find Church leaders, deacons, and some of the finest church members in the country lined up to pick three.

Some have erroneously characterized those who spend huge sums on lottery tickets, horses casinos and other games of chance as sinning. In actuality there are no verses in the bible that even remotely condemn gambling. There is no 11th commandment that says "thou shalt not gamble." However, there are several life virtues that the bible does teach that indicates that those who do gamble have not embraced.

GAMBLING ENCOURAGES GREED: Those who gamble, especially those who venture beyond the occasional lottery ticket or chance ticket, tread on the dangerously unstable ground of covetness. Covetness involves wanting what others have so much that you become unhappy with what you have, even though what you have is not all that bad. Those who covet become greedy and they see gambling as a way to get money to buy what they want. 1 Timothy 6:10 addresses this subject, "For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." Those who gamble have ceased to live lives of faith and are being driven by a desire to get more money.

Hebrews 13:5 gives what should be our resolve: "Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." While gambling is not a specific sin, those who embrace it seem to suggest an attitude that without it they have no chance because God has forsaken them. But never forsakes. He is always present and will never leave us.

GAMBLING DISCOURAGES HONEST LABOR: The basic tenet of the bible is based on the idea that every person should give an honest day's work for a honest day's pay. To a degree, gambling discourages work. It encourages a person to simply wait on the lucky day when he will hit the number and rest from his life of waiting on the right number. It encourages him to find a "get rich quick" scheme and a short cut to wealth without applying the abundance of talents that God has given him in the market place of business and labor. Proverbs 28:19-20 puts it this way, " He that tilleth his land shall have plenty of bread: but he that followeth after vain persons shall have poverty enough. A faithful man shall abound with blessings: but he that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent."

Again the word "faith" keeps coming up. The gambler does not place his faith in God but in the odds. The faithful man works and invests wisely knowing that God will provide the increase. The unfaithful seeks increase without effort and misses the blessing.

GAMBLING ENCOURAGES A RECKLESS INVESTMENT OF GOD GIVEN

RESOURCES: We are stewards over resources that God has put within our control. He allows us to control a small part of his creation. What we manage on his behalf may include a home, a car, land, business interests and a money. Without a doubt we are expected to work to build up that which has been given to us through wise investment and hard work. We know this is true when we read Matthew 25:14-30. It details how God gives each of us talents and expects us to invest that talent wisely to produce an increase.

Gambling represents a reckless investment. There is a difference between a wise investment and a gamble. When the chances of winning are higher than the chances of losing then a venture is often considered a wise investment. A wise investor investigates the track record of a prospective venture and studies the variables that project its future. He also seeks assurances against loss and considers the prospect of a modest return. A gamble is hazardous because it is just the opposite of a wise investment. The chances of losing at a gamble are greater than the chances of winning. There is no way to assure oneself that a loss will be minimal or even to expect even a modest return. Those who gamble, recklessly invest God's resources.

Christ is No Gamble

While there are many who are picking numbers, placing bets, and taking chances and losing, I would like to give you another chance to pick three, with the assurance that if you pick these three that you cannot lose.

While there are many who are playing every day, picking three, or six, there are others who play the same three every day and night of their lives and they never lose, because they have the right three.

It's important to pick the right three!

The unsaved masses in Revelation will have a choice of God or Satan, but many will stake their lives on picking the right number. Revelation 13:18 says many will pick three numbers which will represent the devil. These numbers are the numbers of a man 666. They will pick the wrong number.

Job picked three friends to advise him and strengthen him in times of weakness. He picked the wrong three. Instead of building him up they told him to curse God and die! Rather than take a chance on their advice Job said "all the days of my appointed time, I will wait until my change comes!

Nebuchanezzar tried to pick three men who would deny their God and bow to his likeness. He picked the three Hebrew boys. He picked the wrong three. Bowing would have made them instantly famous, rich and powerful but they chose to stand with the Lord. As they faced the fiery furnace they declared "Our God is able to deliver us!"

Joshua had three choices to make. He could backwards to the desert. He could worship idol gods of Canaan or he could stick with the Lord. I heard Joshua declare: "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord!"

Herein lies the great mystery of our faith. Those who serve the Lord, don't take chances with their lives. They don't take chances because they have placed their hope in a God who has never:

—Made a promise he didn't keep; Seen a problem he can't solve!

—Found a mountain too tall for him to climb; River too wide for him to cross!

They don't take a chance because placing hope in the Lord will never prove to be a gamble. There are millions of Saints who can testify that when they placed their hopes on the Lord they always came out winners. Those who place their hope in their Lord usually find that he will take their:

—Fears and give them confidence; Doubts and give them assurance —Failures and give them victories; Weakness and give them strength

—Misfortunes and give them opportunities; Sins and give them Salvation!

No wonder the song writer declares "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus' name. On Christ the Solid Rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!

Those who want to pick three John 1 give us the three. It says: John 1:1 "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God!" The father, the Word and the Holy Ghost and the best three to choose!

But you say you like the prospect of winning with the powerball! When we read to verse 14 we find the power ball.." And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us.." Verse 12 adds:"But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name:"

If you looking for power ball we recommend Jesus, who is the commander of armies of heaven!" Jesus, who offers the abundance of spirit to all who follow him! Jesus, who has promised to be with us always, even unto the end of the earth!

That why the song writer declares "Follow Jesus, take no chance on getting lost..if Jesus can't get you to the top nobody else can!"

Jesus, the lily of the valley, the bright and morning star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary, but rose Sunday morning with all power in his hands!

Follow Jesus!

Take no chance in getting lost!

Big Gift in Plain Wrapping

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 10, 1995

SCRIPTURE: "And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn."Luke 2:7

Introduction

How much attention do you pay to wrapping paper? As we scurry to get gifts for those we love during this season many people will spend considerable time wrapping their gifts. They spend precious moments selecting the right colored paper. They ponder a selection of ribbons and bows that will suggest the importance and value of the contents. Fine wrapping usually means a fine gift. Poorly wrapped packages usually suggest that the giver was thoughtless at the least and the gift may be shabby at best. Therefore our eyes stretch and our imaginations soar as we open gifts that are wrapped beautifully.

Beautiful wrappings don't always indicate what's inside. Consider the mother who received gifts from her two sons, neither of whom she had seen for a long time. One was successful and wealthy. The other was a beggar who sold cans just to eat every day. At Christmas the mother received a gift from each son. One was beautifully wrapped in the finest paper. The other was wrapped in what appeared to be old newspaper. As she opened the finely wrapped gift she was surprised to receive a coffee cup. The price tag of $1.98 was still stuck to the bottom. The poorly wrapped gift contained contained two dollar bills. It contained a note that read, " you gave me your all, I give you all I have!" Though shabbily wrapped, the mother cherished the two dollar bills and tucked them away with joy. One son had much, but gave little. The other had only two dollars to his name and gave it all. Even the shabby wrapping couldn't hide the love that was inside.

That's the way it was when Jesus was born. He came wrapped in swaddling clothes. The shepherds found him lying in a manger. He was shabbily dressed and was found living in the worst of conditions. But even the shabby wrappings couldn't hide the love inside. He was a bundle of joy not only to his mother but to the entire world.

There are many who are fooled by what's on the outside, but God is never deceived. He is not impressed by what's on the outside because knows what's beneath the wrapping.

As we prepare to give gifts to friends and loved ones lets be sure that we give from the heart in a spirit of love. When we give from the heart, it won't matter too much about the wrapping, ribbons or bows. What will matter is the thought that is exchanged.

As Christians we thank God for giving us the baby Jesus. He was a big gift of hope, joy, love and salvation all in one package. Though he was wrapped in swaddling clothes under the shabbiest of circumstances he proved to be a big gift despite his humble and plain wrapping.

Exposition

This text focuses attention upon the cloth in which Jesus was wrapped upon his birth.

The Word says he was wrapped in swaddling clothes and laid in a manger. In biblical times new born children were traditionally wrapped in what is known as "swaddling cloths." The infant is laid across the diagonal of a square of cloth of which the corners are folded over the body and feet and under the head.

The type of material that the cloth was made of depended upon the financial status of the family. The rich would wrapped their newborns in cloths of silk with fine embroidered work. The poor would wrap their children in plain cotton clothes. There would be no fine embroidery. There would be no silk wrappings or bands. Only plain wrappings.

Wrapping children in swaddling clothes was customary throughout biblical regions. Unlike today, where infants are laid in special beds or cribs with high sides to keep them from falling, babes in biblical times were wrapped tightly in swaddling bands to keep their hands and legs fixed. It avoided movement and therefore falling. It also made them easy to carry.

Salt water is applied to the lips and other areas of the babe's body to reduce inflammation. The idea was to make the body hard and thus less vulnerable to chaffing. This was followed by dusting the joints with powered myrtle leaves. Tender and irritated parts of the babe's body were rubbed with olive oil. The bands were loosed daily to attend and clean the babe but were quickly tied again. For at least the first year of the babe's life.

The swaddling cloth that wrapped Jesus was plain, because his parents were poor. It was simple; without frills.

He came to the world as a big bundle of hope and joy, in plain wrappings.

The Package Disguised The Contents

Our society is market driven. The success or failure of a venture hinges greatly upon packaging. Corporations spend millions of dollars to present their products to the public in a way that is appealing and attractive. Sometimes the money spent on packaging and presenting products equals or excels the amount spent for its production.

Studies are made of color schemes that are attractive to target audiences, sizes of boxes and shapes are considered as well as shelf location.

In America, few poorly packaged products have a chance at commercial success, despite the worth of contents. Our first inclination is to look at the box and come to a conclusion about the contents. Therefore, many companies spend more time developing the box than they do improving the product.

Taking a cue from corporate America, many people concentrate their energies on the packaging of life rather than the substance. Often they package their lifestyles to suggest that they have more than they really have, know more than they really know, and that they are what they are not. Many are completely destroying themselves to maintain a packaged image that overstates their achievements in life.

When Jesus was born, the plain material in which he was wrapped disguised the true nature of the child beneath the wrappings. Few suspected much from a child found under such circumstances. With the exception of a few magi and shepherds who knew there was more to this child than met the eye, very few expected much from the child they saw wrapped so poorly. The package disguised the contents.

Today there are many skeptics who share the same view about anyone who is born into poor circumstances. They judge the contents by the package. How often that has proven to be a mistake.

In Japan, gift-giving is done in a very special way. First, the gift is carefully wrapped in paper. Then, the Japanese person writes on the wrapper Japanese words that mean, "Not an important gift." Literally, they write "Article of no value" on the gift. They don't actually mean that the gift is unimportant, they just don't want to appear too prideful or boastful when they give a gift. Finally, they put the gift on a tray and present it to someone.

There are some in America that take that practice and literally apply it to millions. Too often the wrapping becomes more important than the gift.

They see people who live in crowded apartments in poor neighborhoods and they mark them "article of no value."

They see children born in families that are struggling to exist without the essentials to survive and they mark them "article of no value."

The woman who scavenges trash cans for food to survive is marked, "article of no value."

A girl who is a descendant of a family known for trouble and lawlessness is instantly marked "article of no value" and may spend her entire life trying to compete against her family's infamy.

In school, they see a young man whose clothes appear to be less than the best and they mark him "article of no value."

In each instance the content of character is judged by the package in which character is delivered.

We often misjudge people when we look at the package rather than the contents. It is a common practice. As a race we are often judged by our color before we are known as persons. We resent being told that we dance, play football and eat watermelon because those attributes are common to our package. We know too many among us who can't dance, can't play football and who hate watermelon. Although we complain about being prejudged, many among us judge all white people on the basis of the actions of a few. Prejudice is not reserved for whites only, we must face the fact that we have prejudiced tendencies as well. As we evolve in the social arena we soon learn to reserve judgment to see what's inside before reaching conclusions. Martin Luther King's "I have a dream" speech included a memorable phrase that says "I have a dream that one day my four little children will live in nation where they will be judged not by color of their skin but by the content of their character."

We may select a book because of its attractive cover and jacket, but the final review is based on the content of the pages.

The Gift Exceeded the Package

It appears that God spends more time working on the contents than he does the package. Sometimes mankind misses its blessing because it rejects God's handiwork because of misread packages.

Some of God's greatest blessings have come in poor packages. Booker T. Washington, and Frederick Douglas were two of the finest leaders of our people. Both were former slaves whose poverty and ignorance was exceeded only by their willingness to achieve. They were big gifts to our people, but the came in plain packages.

Jesse Jackson was reared in dirt poor poverty with newspaper on the walls for wall paper. Yet he rose to champion the cause of the poor and has helped millions. He was a big gift to our people, but he came in a plain package.

James Earl Jones was stutterer who could barely say a single word without stammering. Yet his voice and speech has earned him the respect of Hollywood as one of the nation's greatest actors and orators. He was a big gift to mankind, but he came in plain package.

Wilma Rudolph was a young girl who could not walk without braces. She appeared doomed to an invalid's life. But when she won gold medals in the Olympics in track the world knew that she was a big gift in a plain package.

The baby Moses came poorly packaged by modern standards. He was found floating in a basket among the bushes. The package was pretty but that young boy grew to become a great leader of his people. He was a big gift in a plain package.

David came poorly packaged. He was small in statue in comparison to his bothers and ruddy in nature. Yet God took a young shepherd boy and made him a king whose character was of such that he was described as "man after God's own heart." David's life was a big gift in a plain package!

John the Baptist came in a poor package. He roamed the deserts dressed crudely and eating wild locusts. Yet despite his package his was "the voice crying in the wilderness, Prepare Ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." He was a big gift in a plain package!

But Brothers and Sisters there was another gift that the world received but didn't know what it had. John 3:16 says "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life.!"

There was no greater gift that God could give the world than the send his Son.

Instead of sending Jesus into the world like a king, with armies all around him and trumpets blowing, God sent Jesus into the world as a little, tiny baby. He was a big gift in a plain package.

He was born in a stable and laid in a manger.

His family was poor and surroundings suggest frugality rather than royalty.

On the outside the small child born in poverty appeared to be marked as an "Article of no value."

The world soon found out that he was a big gift in a plain package! Those who have tried him declare that what they found in the gift of salvation was:

—Courage in the face of trial. Now they boldly say, "The LORD is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?" Psalm 27:1

—Satisfaction in times of want. "The Lord is my Shepherd and I shall not want." Psalm 23:1

—Guiding Hand in times of darkness. "Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, pilgrim through the barren land!"

He was a big gift in a plain package!

He died on a plain cross!

He was buried in a borrowed tomb!

But Sunday morning the world discovered that what came wrapped in a plain package in Bethlehem; grew up in a plain life in Nazareth; walked around in plain shoes for 33 long years; was crucified on a plain cross; was buried in a plain tomb, actually had...

It Wasn't A Mistake

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 17, 1995

SCRIPTURE: And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth. John 1:14; Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. John 10:17;"He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. Matthew 28:6

Introduction

Have you ever made a mistake? Mistakes are common to most people because they evolve out of human frailty. There are different kinds of mistakes. A blunder is a mistake that is made foolishly or out of clumsiness. It is the kind of mistake that could have been avoided with a little more thought. An accident is the result of a mistake involving judgment and perception. An oversight is mistake caused by omission of a necessary act. These kinds of mistakes are prompted by misinformation, misunderstanding, ignorance or haste. There are different kinds of mistakes. Most of us have made one or more in the course of lifetimes.

Sometimes mistakes can carry us in the wrong direction and can get us in trouble. The country mouse read an advertisement that appeared in the Rat's Gazette. It announced that there was going to be a rat's convention in the city. The agenda included items crucial to survival and living in these modern times. The country mouse decided to go to the convention. However, when he arrived in the auditorium he was horrified. There were growling teeth and glaring eyes staring at him. Fear gripped him as he dashed from the auditorium. It was only when he returned that he found another edition of the same advertisement which read: "In our last edition we reported there would be a rat's convention in the city, it should have read cat's convention. If our mistake got in trouble and you're still alive, we apologize."

The poets have told us that "to err is human, to forgive is divine." They acknowledge that all of us are capable of making mistakes.

Sometimes good things happen by mistake. It is possible for a wrong turn to take you in the right direction. There are many who testify that a broken heart led them to a restored soul or a failed relationship proved to be pivotal in finding real happiness. There are even many business successes that are result of mistakes. America's favorite soap floats due to an error in its original production — too much air. In 1878,

Harley Procter and James Gamble decided to create a new white soap that would rival the castile soaps made by their competitors. Their soap was a success, but in 1879 a worker accidentally allowed the soap solution to be overmixed. The new version of the soap was an immediate success because it bobbed to the surface of the water.

While it is true that some good things are the by product of a mistake, it is more comforting to know that most good things that come our way, are not accidents, mistakes or after thoughts but are by divine purpose and plan. That's the way God is toward believes. He doesn't bless us by mistake or accident. He does it on purpose, according to his divine will.

As Christians, we rejoice in the truth of knowing that when Jesus was born in Bethlehem and when he died on Calvary, it wasn't by mistake, but it was by God's divine plan. He didn't stumble into Bethlehem or come to Calvary by accident, but he did it all according to God's purpose which was to show his love us.

Exposition

These passages of scripture focus on three acts of Christ that were intentional and crucial to our salvation.

John 1:14 reflects on the reality of the incarnation of the Word into flesh. It refers to the birth of Christ through the virgin Mary. In the beginning there was only the Father, The Word and the Holy Ghost. But to provide a means of salvation for lost mankind, the word took on a bodily form and became flesh. Mary was the surrogate instrument of incubation, but the Holy Spirit initiated the process.

The birth of Christ was not a mistake. It was not a blunder on the part of the God head. It was not a miscalculation. It was a planned event that had been predicted hundreds of years before it actually occurred. Isaiah 7:14 "Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." The fact that idea predicted the birth of Christ and the immaculate conception so long before it happened suggests that it was not a mistake but a planned event.

While Isaiah's prediction was hundreds of years away, there were others even closer. In Luke 1:35 Mary is told in advance about the great thing she had been selected to do for God. It says, " And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Thus, the birth of Christ through Mary was not a mistake but a planned response to the sinful condition of mankind by a loving God.

It was not a mistake for Mary to journey to Bethlehem, knowing she was nine months pregnant. It was in the plan.

It was not a mistake for Christ to be born in a stable, laid in manger and wrapped in swaddling clothes. It was in the plan.

All of the events surrounding Christ's birth were not mistakes, but they went according to plan.

Likewise, the events that surrounded the death of Christ were not mistakes but were all part of the plan. Pilate's decision to all Jesus to be crucified was not a mistake, it was part of the plan. Even Judas' betrayal kiss was part of the plan, even though it appeared to be a tremendous blunder in judgment at the least, and betrayal at the most. Jesus said no man took his life from him, he gave it up. John 10:18 says, " No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father."

Thus, no matter how distasteful the acts of the crucifixion were to the observing eye, they were not mistakes. They were planned by God from the beginning.

In the same way, the resurrection was also a planned event. The tomb was not empty on Sunday morning because someone had made a mistake. It was empty because God planned it that way. Jesus himself had predicted his own resurrection. That's why the angel said, " He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay."

All three of these acts indicate the well planned nature of God's plan of salvation. All of these were planned in advance, to help us lay claim to eternal life. It didn't happen by mistake!

Mistakes Can Be Opportunities

Satan is the author of mistakes, errors, oversights, misunderstandings, misconceptions, and misperceptions. When we make mistakes, they are not the products of the mind of God., but are Satan's handiworks. It is the grace of God that takes makes and turns them into opportunities. It is only God's grace that takes something intended by Satan to destroy us and makes it the rationale to lift us higher.

When Joseph looked at his brothers many years after they had thrown him into a pit because of jealousy. He told them that he viewed the incident as another opportunity for God to work. In Genesis 50:2 "But as for you, ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive." God took the evil act that was the result of misperceptions and errors in judgment of his brothers and turned it into an opportunity for success. Joseph rose to high heights in the kingdom because of someone's evil activity.

Like Joseph, many people are the victims of malicious actions born in misunderstanding, and misconceptions.

There are many who are ostracized today because some made a mistake in judgment. There are many who are hurt and wounded because of Satan's handiworks.

Joseph gave us the victim's model. When we are the victims of others, he never became angry with his brothers, but recognized the source of their errors.

Whether it is a friend, neighbor or co-worker who makes the mistake of causing a saint harm, we must always remember that the person themselves only acted the way they did because Satan found an opportunity to act through them.

Satan is the enemy, not your friend, husband,wife, co-worker!

Satan causes mistakes, God can only do good! Whatever he does is good and works for good in our lives!

God Repairs Mistakes

Our first reaction is to respond in hate and bitterness. Then in a calmer moment we remember Romans 8:28" And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

To put it simply, The Holy Spirit equips us with a permanent repair kit. In it there is an glue, eraser, and paint.

The Holy Spirit also works to put things broken by mistakes, back together again. Marriages that have been marred by infidelity have been restored and the Holy Ghost sealed them so tight that there is hardly a reminder of the break and it is stronger than before. Broken spirits, relationships and trusts are the results of mistakes, but they too can be resealed by the Holy Spirit so they come out stronger.

God has never found a:

— life so shattered that he can't put it back together again!

— Hope so lost that it cannot be revived

— Home so broken that he cannot rebuild it!

— Soul so lost that it cannot be saved!

The Holy Spirit works to erase the effects of mistakes on the Saints. This is what takes the evil intended departmental transfer and turns it into an opportunity for corporate advancement. This is how Chuck Colson can take the mistake of Watergate and a prison term and become one of the nation's greatest prison evangelists.

When the world has written us off as one big mistake God's erasure goes to work and erases the effects of mistakes.

Although the world has written us off as failures, dejects and rejects, God's eraser gives us a second chance! I'm glad that God gave me a second chance!

The Holy Spirit also comes with a little paint brush. This is what he uses to retouch and restore us to our former state by his grace.

Satan might have left a scar, but I've been retouched by grace of God!

The old marks are gone. The hatred is gone too.

The blood of Christ has washed us and made us white as snow.

No wonder the song writer declared: "What can wash away my sins, nothing but the blood of Jesus. What can make me whole again. Nothing but the blood of Jesus. Oh precious is the flow that makes me white as snow. No other fount I know. Nothing but the blood of Jesus!"

When Adam and Eve sinned in the garden of Eden they made a mistake. Instantly God put a plan in action to correct that mistake. Their mistake called for death but God worked out a plan to correct that mistake and give mankind life again!

When Jesus was born in Bethlehem, it wasn't a mistake. It was an act of love to correct a mistake!

When he went to Jerusalem knowing he would be crucified, it wasn't a mistake!

It was an act of love to correct a mistake!

When he refused to take swords against his enemies, it wasn't a mistake! It was an act of love to correct a mistake!

When died out on Calvary it wasn't a mistake, it was the ultimate sacrifice. For no greater love can be shown that a man be willing to lay down his life for his friends!

When the disciples found the empty tomb, they didn't make a mistake!

Just like he came on purpose..

Just like he died on purpose..

He arose after three days and nights with all power in his hands!

It wasn't a mistake, but an example of the power of God!

In Every Cradle, A Cross For Every Cross, A Crown

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 24, 1995

SCRIPTURE:"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." Isaiah 9:6 "But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. Isaiah 53:5

Introduction

Have you ever looked into the cradle of a newborn child and wondered, what will this child become? Perhaps you may have asked that question about your own children as you stared at them sleeping soundly at night. Silently you asked yourself the question "What does life have in store for him or her?"

We don't know what the future holds for us. We ponder it and try to understand. Despite our best abilities it always seems to slip away from us. So it is natural for us to wonder about our children. Will they be like us, worse or better? Most parents hope their offspring are an improvement over themselves. They seek to help them have a better life, avoiding mistakes and pitfalls that made their lives uncomfortable, but sharing in the experiences that were meaningful.

So we understand the mystery that must have surrounded the Christ Child laying in a manger. Those surrounding that cave like dwelling understood that something special had happened. They knew that in that cradle was the promise of the future. Only God knew that there was something else in that cradle as well, the agony of the cross and the opportunity were there as well.

As Christians, we rejoice at the birth of Christ and the meaning it brings to our lives. It is a reminder to us of God's continuous love for us. In that manger was not only a little child but our chance for eternal life!

Exposition

This text evolves from Isaiah's prediction of the coming of the Messiah and his ultimate suffering and glory.

Israel constantly allied itself with various nations seeking help and protection. Often the prophets addressed the foolishness of their arrangements and in so doing gave predictions, inspired by God, that address their political dilemma in future days. Often those predictions would span hundreds of years into the future. Such is the case with this text.

God did not reveal everything to the prophets. He only revealed what they needed to know. Most prophets that saw the coming of Christ saw his cradle years and his swaddling experience. Moreover, most of them saw his cross experience and his crown experience. Few if any, saw the age in between all of these events, which is the age of the church. There are very few prophecies that deal specifically the church age.

The prophets searched diligently to understand that which was in between but it was not for them to know. This is what is referred to in 1 Peter 1:10, "Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you:" The prophet saw the cradle, the cross and the crown, but were not allowed to see the effects of grace on the believers between the periods.

Isaiah 9:6 looks at how God revealed the cradle experience of Christ. The circumstances of the birth of Christ were predicted well before his birth. In Isaiah 7:14 we are told, "Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." In Chapter 9 we are given more details of his cradle experience we are told what he shall be called: "wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." In Isaiah 53:2 we are told that in his cradle experience he would be born into humble circumstances but rejected of men.

Isaiah 53:3-5 refers to the cross experience. It is the point in time in which Christ would suffer physical humiliation, pain, agony and death to provide for the salvation of mankind. Through his agony and pain or his "stripes" we are healed. The cross is central to salvation, without the cross there can be no claim to the final experience.

Finally there is the crown experience. This is the point in which believers share in the glories of Christ's eventual triumph. This is the period of Isaiah 9:7 "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this."

While Isaiah 9:6-7 addressed the cradle experience of Christ, his cross experience and his crown experience, in between all of that would be the church age, a time period rarely addressed by any prophet in which both the cradle and cross experiences would be duplicated such that all believers could jointly share in his crown experience!

Thus today we know that there is a cross experience in every cradle and crown experience waiting for each believer who steps forward from his cross experience triumphantly.

The Cradle Experience

The cradle experience refers to the infancy and youth of our lives. Today there are millions of young people who struggling to grow in spirit and truth. Like Christ, many have been born into social conditions that are impoverished and rejected by the rest of society. Poverty has taken a toll on millions who struggle every day to survive. Many are hungry, others need shelter. Many youth, during their cradle experience, have become the victims of broken homes, child abuse and neglect. Some see each day overshadowed with a cloud with very little sunshine.

What we draw from the cradle experience of Christ is his mission. His birth had a meaning and significance. There was a purpose for this life. Even where Christ was born gave a clue as to his mission in life.

Each person must discover their life's purpose. In what direction is my life intended? Am I being guided by destiny or am I guiding myself into my destiny?

Christ came to earth with a purpose and he carried that purpose to the end. Likewise when we realize a sense of purpose and direction, we know exactly what God intended for us and we carry it out to the end.

That is perhaps one of the great difficulties of youth, discovering purpose. The Holy Spirit will reveal it to each person if we seek to know and ask in faith.

The Cross Experience

But if there is a cradle experience there is a cross experience.

Dr. Heather Elkins tells an interesting parable germane to this point. Once there was a Christmas play held in the most unlikely of places, a maximum security prison. This prison held the worst possible offenders including, murderers, armed robbers and rapists. Prisoners themselves would act out the story for the other prisoners. Since they were in a maximum security prison nothing was allowed to be brought in for the play. All the costumes and props had to come from within the walls of the prison.

A mop was found for Mary to use for hair. A ski mask with cotton balls glued on socks was used for the sheep. A discarded cardboard box was used for the cradle. Everything was falling into place, and the prisoners were excited about the play.

Then someone asked a question about the baby. What would they use for the baby Jesus? Of course a real baby could not be brought in. Someone suggested that Mary hold a blanket with nothing inside to represent the baby Jesus. That wouldn't do, the others said, but they were running out of ideas.

On the day of the performance the chaplain came running into the group of actors. He had found something from his office to use for the baby. The show went on. The Christmas story was beautifully portrayed at the maximum security prison. The inmates enjoyed the play, and those taking part found the experience meaningful. Then came the dramatic scene where Mary revealed her baby—the Christ child. She very carefully unwrapped the blanket. The object she was carrying wasn't a baby or a doll but a cross from the chaplain's office.

It happened by accident in the story, but in reality there is cross in every cradle. While the prophets saw the suffering of Christ for the church, they could not see the church sharing in every stage of Christ's life. One that we share with Christ is the cross.

Every believer has a cross in the cradle. At the moment of our spiritual birth in Christ there is a cross in our future. There will be moments of humiliation, suffering, and disappointment. There will be times when we are victims of the conflicts of others. There will be times when will cry.

What is the cross that is in your cradle? Have you been frustrated by the fact that it is looming in your life? Most of us would love to have a life free of crosses. In fact Jesus himself prayed in the garden of Gethsemene and asked that he could avoid going to the cross. His conclusion however, was "not my will, but thy will be done."

The nature of crosses may differ but they no less burdensome. Whether it is dealing with a problem child or caring for infirmed parents, it is still a cross. For some the cross is striving to please everyone, their parents, preachers and professors. For others the cross is inside themselves. It is a growing fear, insecurity or sorrow. These are real crosses that come with every cradle experience.

This is the reality that was hidden from every prophet, that there would be a period called the church age, when every believer would experience the same cycles of the experience of Christ.

We celebrate the birth experience and opportunity to new life. However, we fully expect a cross experience, moments of sorrow and hardship because it is the nature of the experience.

Crown Experience

However, we must always note that while there is a cross in every cradle, there is a crown for every cross!

If we acknowledge that we share the cradle experience with Christ; where we celebrate the virgin birth and the miracle in Bethlehem; and

If we acknowledge that we share the cross experience with Christ; wherein we endure pain and suffering for the furtherance of his kingdom;

Then it is only logical that we should expect to share the crown experience with him as well.

In the cradle our experience is heightened. In the cross it is deepened. In the crown it is rewarded.

If it were not for the cradle there could be no cross. If it were not for the cross there could be no crown!

The prophets saw Christ with the government on his shoulder, but what they could not see was a huge army of believers that were also receiving their crowns and reigning with him.

If there is no cross in the cradle, there is no crown.

James 1: 12 Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.

1 Peter 5:4, "And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.

Revelation 2:10 "..be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

I don't know about you but I'm that Jesus came to Bethlehem and showed us the cradle experience.

I'm glad that he went to Calvary to show us the cross experience!

But I'm glad to know that one of these old days, he's coming back again to be crowned King of Kings, Lords of Lords!

I can't get my crown until he gets his crown! That's why the saints cry out: Bring forth the royal diadem and crown him, crown, crown Lord of all!

My Presence Shall Go With Thee!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 7, 1996

SCRIPTURE: And he said, My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest. And he said unto him, If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence. For wherein shall it be known here that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? is it not in that thou goest with us? so shall we be separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth. And the LORD said unto Moses, I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name. Exodus 33:14-17

Introduction

Have you ever traveled a dark unfamiliar road alone? It is a scary feeling. Whether driving or walking, the thought of going through unknown paths is unnerving. There are curves in the road as well as dips and sharp turns. The person traveling such a road for the first time is anxious and apprehensive about the journey and approaches it with caution, especially if the journey must be made alone. That's the way it is in life as well. We approach every new year with a bit of anxiety because we don't know what lies ahead. It would be easier if we were familiar with the path and did not have to make the journey alone. That's why it's good to have a traveling buddy. Traveling buddies give us a sense of security because if we meet danger along the way, there is someone to help. A traveling buddy keeps us awake on long drives. They help us to watch out for road signs so we don't make wrong turns. Sometimes our traveling buddy has to take the wheel when we find it hard to keep our eyes open. Dark, unfamiliar roads are easier to travel if we don't have to make the journey alone.

Consider the country boy who was afraid of the dark. The most frightening time of his life came whenever his father would ask him to go outside and bring in wood for the stove or fetch a pail of water from the well. Even more frightening were the times he had to take a package to a relative up the dark dusty country road. The first time he had to walk up the country road he pleaded with his father to go with him. The father's only response was, "there will be somebody else on the road."

As the boy traveled the road, the darkness frightened him and there appeared to be someone following him. He turned his flashlight behind him but saw no one.

He yelled out but got no answer. When he finally got home he told his mother about his experience. She told him confidentially, that his father walked behind him at a distance. Each time thereafter the boy became braver, knowing that although he couldn't see him, his father was walking behind him. In manhood, many years after his father's death, the boy approached that same road with a smile and with confidence. He could feel the presence of his father and was sure that there was "somebody else on the road."

The great assurance that every believer has is that he or she never walks the road of life alone. No matter what the circumstance or where the journey takes us our Lord is there. In Matthew 28:20 Jesus said: "and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." That means that he is always present.

As we begin a new year, let us do so with the confidence we have a traveling buddy who is making the journey with us. He'll help us to see the signs so won't miss a turn. He'll talk to us and stir us and keep us awake. In times of danger, he takes the wheel to keep us safe. Let's remember that no matter where life's road takes us in the months ahead, there is "somebody is else on the road." That somebody is Jesus Christ our Lord.

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as he asks God for guidance and mercy as he leads the people toward the promised land. Israel had received an abundance of blessings from God. They had been freed from slavery in Egypt and were marching through the desert enroute to the Canaan land, which had been promised to Abraham several hundred years earlier. Yet despite the great blessings that God had given them, they proved to be a "stiff-necked" people.

God refers to Israel as "stiff-necked" four times in the Book of Exodus. In 32:9 he told Moses that he would not be with the people because they refused to obey him. They built golden calves and worshipped them. They praise idol gods instead of the God that brought them out of Egypt. God said he would bless Moses but not the people. In 33:3,5 God said he would go to the promised land with the people because they were stiff-necked. He said it would be best for him not to travel with them because their stiff-necked ways might anger him and he would destroy them before they reached their destination. The people heard God's displeasure and became mournful. In 34:9 Moses pleads with God to have mercy on the people, despite their stiff necked ways. It was the stiff necked, stubborn ways of Israel that almost caused God to leave them to fend for themselves in the wilderness.

Such would have been the case had it not been for the intercession of Moses. Before going any further Moses made a line of decision. He removed the tent of the Tabernacle outside of the camp.(33:7) Then he challenged all of those who really wanted God to be with them in the journey to the promised land to come outside of the camp and commit themselves to obedience to God. Outside the murmurings, complaints and disobedience to God, Moses talked with God as a man would talk to a friend (33:11). Moses pleads for mercy for the people for his sake. In 33:13 he says "if I have found grace in thy sight" give consideration to the people. The people, in sorrow turned again to God. God considered the obedience of Moses and for his sake decided to go forth with the people to the promised land.

In his capacity as a mediator, Moses did for Israel what Christ does for every Christian. He mediates and pleads our cause before God. In John 17 Jesus is seen in prayer pleading for Christians in the same way that Moses was pleading for Israel. Here Jesus pleads for mercy for his followers, knowing that justice would demand more. God is present in the journey of every Christian, not because of his or her goodness, but despite our stiff-necked tendencies. Without the mediation of Moses, Israel would have attempted the dangerous journey to Canaan without the presence of God. Without the mediation of Christ, Christians would be forced to make the journey without the presence of God.

Because of Moses, God decided in 33:14, "my presence shall go with thee." Because of Christ, modern believers also have the assurance that God will be with them. Without Christ, each person makes the dangerously unwise decision to make life's journey without God's guiding, directing and inspiring presence.

The Road Ahead

As we travel further into the new year, we do so acknowledging that we have no idea what lies ahead. We have made several resolutions about what we would like to do, but somehow even our best resolutions even get stuck bogged down in the mire of good intentions.

At the beginning of a new year, a high school principal decided to post his teachers' new year's resolutions on the bulletin board. As the teachers gathered around the bulletin board, a great commotion started. One of the teachers was complaining. "Why weren't my resolutions posted?" She was throwing such a temper tantrum that the principal hurried to his office to see if he had overlooked her resolutions. Sure enough, he had mislaid them on his desk. As he read her resolutions he was astounded. This teacher's first resolution was not to let little things upset her in the new year. Without a little help, we can get bogged down before we begin.

It is important for every Christian to have a traveling buddy this year, that being the presence of God. There is a great year in front of us but we can't make this journey alone. A battery of resolutions and self promises will not be sufficient. We simply cannot do it alone.

Despite our weaknesses and shortcomings in the last year, because of Christ, God has decided to ride another year with us, if we will let him. When God was traveling with Israel, what made him want to open the door and get out, right in the middle of desert? The people refused to obey him. They put other gods before him! They did not want to be in his presence! Because of Moses, they received a chance to start toward their goals. Later, however we read that their behavior became so despicable that God abandoned them on several occasions. Their sinful nature reached the point that God utterly destroyed their nation. He just opened the door and got out! He left the nation to its own devices and it fell apart!

In 2 Chronicles 7:14 we read: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." If we want God to be our traveling buddy in this new year, why not learn from Israel's mistake.

If we obey God and keep his commandments he'll want to travel with us. If we put building the kingdom of God high on our priority lists, he'll want to travel with us!

If we arrange our schedules so that we have time to worship, study and fellowship with him, he'll want to travel with us! Otherwise, we might find ourselves trying to make it through a new year without a traveling buddy!

It has been proven that we cannot make this journey alone! Without God we are hopeless failures, wandering aimlessly in life.

That's why the song writer wrote: Without him I could do nothing. Without him, I'd surely fail. Without him my life would be drifting. Like a ship, without a sail! There is a wonderful year ahead of us, but the road that travels through it is unknown. We should not attempt the journey without the Lord on our side!

Somebody Else on the Road

Believers who travel life's highways never travel alone. There is always somebody else on the Road. Many people who travel find it advantageous to join a travel club. It gives them a feeling of security on the road, knowing they won't be alone and that help is just a phone call away!

The believer has paid up membership in God's AAA travel club.
It's call the triple A travel club because no matter where you go, God is there, Anyplace, Anywhere, Anytime!

If you have a flat tire, he'll bring you a spare!

If you get picked up, he'll bail you out!

If you break down, he'll tow you in!

In a travel club, when you get ready to make a journey, you dial a number and they'll send a set of maps with your trip already mapped out. They'll tell which roads to take and which roads to avoid.

But God's AAA Club goes further than that. Not only will the Lord show you the road and tell you which way to go, he'll go along for the ride!

That's why the believer dials up God's travel agency and says "Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land! I am weak but thou art mighty, hold with thy powerful hand!" It's good to know that we don't have make this journey alone, that there is somebody else on road!

Sometimes we take the wrong turns in life. It's good to know there's somebody else on the road!

Balaam was riding a mule on the wrong road, but there was somebody else on the road! An stood in the middle of the road telling him he was going the wrong way. When he couldn't see the angel, the Lord made his mule talk and show him the right. Isn't it good to have somebody else on the road?

Saul was on the Damascus Road traveling in the wrong direction, he found out that there is somebody else on the Road! In the middle of his journey he heard a voice saying Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" He found out there was somebody else on the road!

A wounded traveler on the Jericho Road was passed up by a priest and Levite. But when the Good Samaritan came along, he found out that there is "somebody else on road."

When there's somebody else on the road:

-Misfortunes become opportunities for success!

-Hard times are turned in good times!

-Sadness is turned into gladness

-Setbacks become spring boards of progress

-Failures are turned into victories!

I don't know about you, but I'm glad to know that there is somebody else on the road!

Maybe that's why the song writer wrote: "I want Jesus, to walk with me! While I'm on this tedious journey, I want Jesus to walk with me!"

Jesus! Who died out on Calvary!

Jesus! Who rose after three days and nights!

I want Jesus to walk with me!

When Famines Come

SCRIPTURE: And there was a famine in the land: and Abram went down into Egypt to sojourn there; for the famine was grievous in the land. Genesis 12:10

Introduction

Have you ever had a dry spell? Dry spells are those times when everything you need seems to be so far away. Sometimes dry spells involve finances. Sometimes they involve health, time or a plethora of other variables that make life miserable if they are missing. Writers have dry spells. They call them writer's block. Marriage relationships have dry spells. Churches have dry spells. Football teams have dry spells. They call them losing streaks! Dry spells are common to a number of areas of life.

The question it seems, is not whether we have dry spells, that seems to be a certainty. The question is what do we do when dry spells come. What is our response to these discomforting and troubling periods in our lives?

Consider the old toad frog that was teaching the facts of life to the young toad. The old toad had seen many things in his long life. It was now his obligation to teach what he had learned to the young toads that were coming after him. "Son, let me tell you something. No matter what happens in the course of time stay close to the pond" the old frog said constantly. It was an important message because their area of the country was known for droughts when water would dry up everywhere. That was especially troublesome for frogs who needed to be close to water. The young frog heard the old frog but thought it made little sense.

After a while a drought came. There was no water anywhere. The animals of the back woods started drifting from place to place trying to find water, all except the old toad and the little frog. The little frog insisted that they should do like all of the other animals but old toad insisted on staying close to the pond. They went through a miserable experience, but one day water broke many miles away. Although there was not a cloud in the sky, suddenly water appeared in the pond much to the pleasure of the old toad and the frog. With amazement the little toad looked at the old frog and said "How did you know there would be water in the pond even though there is a drought every place else?" The old toad pointed the young frog to a series of streams that ran down the mountain side and emptied into the pond and said "When a dry spell comes, if there is water on that mountain that's miles from here, it won't be long before there's water in the pond. That's why I've learned to stick with pond!" With that the old frog took a dash in the cooling waters and relaxed. Likewise, there are many in life today who panic when they run into a dry spell. Those who know the Lord however, have found that its best to remain faithful and stick with the pond!

Life has many difficulties. We never know what will happen to us from one day to the next. We take each day with an attitude of gratitude. When tough times do come we should remember that our God has promised never to leave us and to provide for our needs. God will provide a way.

As Christians, we should approach life with the attitude that whatever we need God will provide it for us. Even in times of famine our psalm of prayer should still be "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want!" Whether good times or hard times come we have resolved to "stick with the pond!"

Exposition

This text considers Abram as he faces a famine that came in life, in spite of being in the promised land of milk and honey.

After Abram began his new life in the promised land he encountered difficulty.

Genesis 12:10 says "and there was a famine in the land." This is the first major difficulty that Abram faced. It threatened the welfare of his family and very large entourage. Without sufficient food and water death would be the result.

Famines

Generally, a famine is an extreme shortage of food. Sometimes famines are the result of natural causes. The three famines mentioned in the Book of Genesis were all apparently due to natural causes. There are no scriptures that indicate the causes, indicating that their origin is natural. Genesis 26:1 tells of a famine in the time of Isaac, Abraham's son. Abram's great grandson, Joseph, also experienced a natural famine (Genesis 41:27) All three of these occurred in the lives of God's Chosen people while they lived in the land of promise.

Famines were also the result of man made problems. War and destructive acts of people have often resulted in famine. Occasionally oppressors destroyed or confiscated food (Deut. 28:33,51; Isa. 1:7). The siege of cities also resulted in famine, such as the siege of Samaria by Ben-hadad (2 Kings 6:24-25) and the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar (2 Kings 25:2-3).

Famines were also caused by judgments of God. Famine and Drought as the Judgment of God God created the world as a good environment which would normally provide ample water and food for mankind (Gen. 1). However, the productiveness of the earth is related to people's obedience to God. For example, the sins of Adam, Eve, and Cain resulted in unfruitfulness of the earth (Gen. 3:17-18; 4:12). Israel's relationship with God also directly affected the fertility of the Promised Land. When the people obeyed God, the land was productive (Deut. 11:11-14). However, when they disobeyed, judgment came on the land by drought and famine (Lev. 26:23-26; Deut. 11:16-17; 1 Kings 8:35). Furthermore, the New Testament reports that famine will be a part of God's coming judgment of the earth in the last days (Matt. 24:7; Rev. 6:8).

When faced with the prospect of dealing with famine, Abram decided to leave the land and go to Egypt. Egyptians were accustomed to dealing with seasons of drought. They routinely built large storage bins to store grain and other supplies for short spans of famine. This may have been what attracted Abram to Egypt. However, there is no record as to why Abram turned to Egypt as a place of refuge.

When Famines Come

Today there are many people just like Abram who are facing famines in their lives. The question is not whether or not there will be a famine, but how we respond. These "famines" are periods when there is an extreme lack of the necessities of survival. The kinds of famines we may experience can span from simple luxuries to food, clothing and shelter. Whenever what we need to survive is not available because of short supply then we are experiencing a famine.

Sometimes our personal famines result from natural causes. These are the cases where we did everything right but everything else went wrong. By no fault of our own we can be laid off our job. Through no fault of our own we can develop an illness. Through no fault of our own we can experience many other difficulties. Like the droughts or locusts that caused some famines in biblical times, we can often experience hard times by natural causes. No one is to blame. They just happen.

Those who live in flood plains or regions where hurricanes are frequent, sometimes suffer hardships by no fault of their own. The devastation that follows such tragedies cause considerable hardship on their families and places them in great strain. There was no amount of planning that could have stopped a hurricane, tidal wave or drought. They just happen.

Sometimes our personal famines are man made. Neglect, failure or human error is often the cause of many personal famines. Millions of families experience financial hardships that are man made. Over extended credit and excessive debt are examples of how a financial famine can be man made. A person who decides to tell the boss a piece of his mind and gets fired may experience a famine afterwards. Such a famine is man made! A chain smoker who develops lung problems created that problem. It is a man made famine! There are many personal famines that exist, many of which are traceable to man made origins.

Sometimes our famines are judgments from God. Sometimes we have gone too far in our variances from the faith and God creates famines in our lives to bring us back to Bethel. On occasion God allows our ponds to dry up to humble us and prompt us to reconsider the error of our ways. It is not unusual to for God to seal up the windows of heaven for those who have strayed away. Whenever the windows of heaven are sealed, there will be a famine!

Whatever the source of our famine, the question still remains, "what do we do when famines come!" Abram had received great promises from God but as soon as he moved into the promised land a famine came. Despite having the promises of God to assure him, Abram left his altar and land of promise and went to Egypt. While in Egypt he neither prayed or called upon the name of the Lord!

Like Abram, there are many today who retreat from the faith when famines come! They find their own Egypt where they abandon their altars and fail to call upon the name of the Lord. Their church attendance begins to decrease. Their prayer life falters. Their worship life disappears. Their faith shrivels. Abram ran to Egypt because he was in a famine. He had to be run out of Egypt before he returned to Bethel to face the famine with the help of his God.

When famines come we should not run to Egypt. Running to Egypt is trying man made remedies!

Running to Egypt is trying to resolve spiritual problems by carnal means!

Running to Egypt is turning away from God and leaning on man for answers to questions that only God knows!

When famines come, we should not run to Egypt, but we should run to God. The song writer was correct when the words were penned "We are our heavenly father's children...he knows just how much we can bear!"

Run to the Lord, he knows!

Run to the Lord, Yes he knows, just how much you can bear!

Back To Bethel

When Abram left Egypt he returned to Bethel. Bethel is the place where Abram stopped and built an altar. It is the first place where he called upon the name of the Lord!

When famines come it behooves each of us to learn from Abram's mistake! His mistake was to leave Bethel, his altar and his practice of calling upon the Lord and to run to Egypt. When we learn from his mistake we do not make the same error.

When famines come the best place to be is at the altar!

When famines come the best thing to do is to call on the name of the Lord!

I don't know about you but I have found out that powerful things happen when you call upon the name of the Lord!

When you call upon the name of the Lord:

—The wicked will cease their troubling!

—The weary will be at rest!

—Mountains can become molehills and valleys can be exalted!

—Enemies can become friends!

—Hatred can be turned into love!

—Setbacks can become starting points!

When we call upon the Lord in a spirit of repentance he will hear us because in the word he says in 2 Chronicles 7:14 "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

When famines come we should stick by altar because at the Altar we can change things in prayer. Prayer can bring relief from famines!

Elijah prayed and the windows of heaven opened up, although it hadn't rained for over three years! Prayer changes things!

When famines come, remember to pray! Prayer can:

—Turn deviant children into obedient siblings

—Turn Wayward husbands into loving fathers

—Turn the hard hearted into the tender hearted

—The faithless into the faithful!

When famines come stick by the altar because at the Altar you'll find Jesus!

Jesus is the answer for the famine!

Jesus, the lily of the valley!

Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who rose after three days and nights!

When famines come, try Jesus!

He'll make everything alright!

Are You Sitting On Your Dreams?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 14, 1996

SCRIPTURE:"I the LORD search the heart, I try the reins, even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings. Jeremiah 17:10

Introduction

Are you making progress toward your lifetime goals? Many people have some very ambitious plans for their lives that were made many years ago. At the start of each new year many sit down to evaluate whether or not any progress has been made toward achieving those goals. Sometimes our self reality check reveals startling results. Sometimes we discover that while we've had a year of activity, in reality we are no closer to our goals than we were a year ago. Misdirected activity may keep us going at a steady pace, but almost always takes us where we don't want to go. A year of misdirected activity usually concludes with little progress toward realizing goals.

On the other hand some discover that they have actually moved closer to achieving their goals. In retrospect they see several important decisions, actions and accomplishments that have put them closer to achieving their life goals.

In August of 1963 Martin Luther King, Jr. told the whole world about his dream for the nation. He dreamed of a nation that truly lived out the meaning of the American creed that "all men are created equal and endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights. Among these are life liberty and the pursuit of happiness." He dedicated his life toward accomplishing that end. Every speech. Every march. Every public appearance was calculated to help accomplish that life goal.
Dr. King's dream has not been fully realized, but it is gradually moving toward that day!

What about our personal dreams? Are we any closer to making them become realities than we were a year ago? Are we pursuing our dreams or have we given up on them and dismissed them as unreachable? Robert Fulghum in his book "It was on fire when I laid down on it" tells of a young lady who was sitting on a suitcase and crying in the airport for several hours. He learned that she had run out of money. She had spent two days waiting in the airport standby with little to eat and too much pride to beg. Her plane was about to go and she had lost her ticket. She had been sitting in that one spot for hours just crying. She lost all hope of ever getting home. A nice couple wiped the girl's eyes and agreed to talk with the airport officials to help solve her problem. She stood up to go with them, turned around to pick up her belongings and SCREAMED. They thought something terrible had happened to her but no...it was her ticket. She found her ticket. She had been sitting on her ticket the whole time.

In a similar sense many of us have been sitting on our tickets to fulfillment and success afraid to move or feeling sorry because of our circumstance. Some have spent whole years sitting on their tickets watching others catch flights towards their destinies. They too could do the same except they have given up on themselves.

As Christians, we know all things are possible! If our life goals are in accord with the will of God, nothing can stop us from achieving our destinies, except our own unwillingness to pursue our dreams with vigor and persistence. God holds the reins of life. He also showers blessings upon those who choose to use their life tickets rather than sit on them!

Exposition

The immediate context of this text finds the prophet Jeremiah speaking to the people of Judah about the coming devastation of the kingdom.

The country had two sections. The North, called Israel, had 10 tribes but was carried away into captivity by the Assyrians after they ignored the please of the prophet Isaiah. The Southern section was called Judah. Its major prophet was Jeremiah who warned that God would use a great nation called Babylon to destroy them if they did not repent of the wicked ways. The nation ignored Jeremiah's pleadings and refused to take the opportunity to restore themselves in the sight of God. Their dreams of attaining a restored status as a leading nation of the world and enjoying the prosperity they once knew dissipated as they stubbornly chose to sit on their opportunity.

Jeremiah explained to them in many ways how God felt. In this passage he also sheds light on three attributes of the nature of God. In verses 5-10 he urged the people to trust God rather than man. He noted that those who trust God will find favor in his sight and be watered. However, those who do not will find themselves constantly frustrated and facing failure. Their aspirations will be cursed because of the failure to trust God. (Jeremiah 17:5)

In verse 10 he notes three important truths about God that should be noted:

God searches the heart. God knew their inner thoughts and secrets. The word translated heart in this context is the Hebrew word "Leb."This word is often used to refer to the will or intellectual capacity. He knew their capacities and abilities. He knew their hopes. Judah was overwhelmed by its helpless state. They were a people of broken hopes. They were void of will power. They had given up on themselves and God. They turned to neighboring nations and idol gods for satisfaction. Deep within its national character Judah did not have a real trust in God. God knew the state of their hearts. He knew what they had to work with and he knew what they thought about it!

God tries the reins. Reins in modern times often refers to straps or guidelines on horses and mules. However in this context "reins" had a different meaning. The Hebrew word "Kilyah" is used here. Kilyah, in this context refers to the interior self. For Judah it meant that he challenged them to rise up and seize the chance to regain lost glory as witnesses for God rather than weaklings, dependent upon the protective charities of others. When God tries the reins it means that he challenges the inner man or woman to rise up. The fact that God challenges the inner spirit of individuals to rise up is of importance to believers.

God blesses those who rise up. Important to note in the remainder of this verse are two words "Ways" and "fruit." Jeremiah noted that God rewards people according to their ways. Ways in this context means their action. The Hebrew word "Derek" is used. It means "mode of action." The word translated "fruit" it means "results" or "reward" Thus Jeremiah shows believers another attribute or nature of God. When he decides how blessings will be distributed he looks at how we act on inner beliefs and the results of our actions are crucial. He gives "to every man according to his ways and according to the fruit of his doings." In essence, God watches whether not the believer will act on that which is on the inside and then watch the result of his actions or the "fruit of his doings."

When Jeremiah spoke to Judah about rising up and returning to God, he challenged them to act upon their dreams. They wanted to be a great nation again. They wanted to be restored to their position of prominence in the community nations. They wanted to enjoy the blessings of God again. However, Jeremiah noted that those who trust God will act on that trust and he will reward them based on the "fruit of their doings" not the fruit of the dreams.

God Knows Our Ability

Today, each of us should remember that God knows us, inside and out. He knows what we are capable of achieving, what we can and cannot do. God's knowledge of us is deeper than even we ourselves understand. Those who know what an instrument is designed to do expect more from it because they know its ability. Most new television sets come with a remote capability to turn themselves off at a certain time. However, only those who familiarize themselves with this aspect of the set use this feature. Others will be satisfied if it just shows a picture. Microwave ovens are often used as fancy warmers. Those who know its ability know that it defrosts and can cook whole meals unattended if it is within its design and is set properly. Some use their video tape players to watch movies. Others know how to pre-set the controls and record television broadcasts on one station while they watch another or are away from home. In each instance how much you know about the capabilities and operation of the instrument determines expectations.

Often we don't know our own abilities, but God does. He is the manufacturer.

He knows what we can achieve. He knows what is within our limitations. Just as Jeremiah told Judah that God knows the heart, that truth applies to modern believers as well: "God knows our capacities."

We dream of achieving many goals in life. We dream about them but often we don't believe that we can really achieve them. Who would have convinced young James Earl Jones that he could make a living off his voice, when he stuttered so badly that he couldn't even speak? Who would have believed that young Albert Einstein, who failed in elementary school would become one of world's greatest scientists and smartest men. Who could have convinced Frederick Douglas a runaway slave, born in adversity, that he could rise to be a champion of freedom and a United States Ambassador. Each had the capacity to achieve, but each had to believe in their own capacity.

There are many who are sitting on their dreams today because they won't step out! They are afraid to take a chance! They have what it takes they are simply sitting on it! Jeremiah reminded Judah however that God challenges the inner man to rise up. Today, God challenges the inner man or woman to rise up and act on your dreams! What is it? To become a doctor or nurse? To get a college education? To have the feeling on the inside is one thing, but the blessing comes when we take positive actions. We are blessed according to the "fruit of our doings." Sitting on dreams gets us no where. Acting on them draws praises from heaven.

Step Out On Faith

There is a promise for those who step out on faith. The promise is in verse eight (17:8). Those who trust God and step out to pursue their dreams must do so with the full knowledge that as long as their dreams are in accord with the will of God for their lives they will succeed! It may take time! Their may be obstacles, but they will succeed!

Why are you sitting on your dream? Look at verse 8! Those who trust God are like a tree planted by the river. Its roots go deep and draw strength from down deep. Look at the power of verse 8. Those who trust God will not "see" that is they will not know when the heat comes. They will be able to stand the heat of opposition, frustration and the prospect of failure.

The heat will come, but "her leaf shall be green."

Why are you sitting on your dream? Look at verse 8! Though there will be tough times characterized as droughts, those who trust God won't have to be "careful" that means they won't be without the necessities! The trail toward your dream make take you through some tough times, but God will provide, if you trust him!

There will be some tough times, but the Lord will make a way!

Why are you sitting on your dream? Look at verse 8! Despite the difficulties of your journey and the heat of the day, those who trust God will never cease from yielding fruit! If we trust in God, nothing will stop us from achieving our dreams!

The good news brothers and sisters is that Jesus died and rose from the dead that we may have life and have it more abundantly! His sacrifice on Calvary was to give us the opportunity for eternal life and fullness of life according to his purpose.

If that's the good news then, to achieve our dreams we must stop sitting on them and trust in the Lord!

When we trust in the Lord we don't worry about the frustrating turns that the road of life offers! We walk by faith knowing that the Lord will make a way!

Standing in the way of our dream might be a:

—Desert, but God will provide an Oasis in the wilderness!

—Hunger, but God will provide a table in the presence of our enemies!

—Unbelievable odds, but God will help us to achieve the impossible

Those who trust in God:

—Think the unthinkable; Reach for the unreachable!

—Believe he unbelievable; Hope for the impossible!

—Live for the incredible; Achieve the improbable!

Those who trust in God know that all things are possible!

Maybe that's why the song writer wrote: "I will trust in the Lord, I will trust in the Lord until I die!"

I don't know about you but I've decided to trust in the Lord!

Storms may rise! Winds may blow!

I will trust in the Lord till I die!

Jesus Loved Martha

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus." John 11:5

Introduction

How great must you become to draw the admiration of God? In the general community only those whose lives impact or change the course of history draw the love and admiration of presidents, kings and other royalty. National champions, war heroes, or those who have been lifted into the arena of public scrutiny in a variety of ways are generally those who are loved and admired by the great and powerful. Generally those who live meaningful but private lives rarely draw attention to themselves. Their deeds are often overlooked. The significance of their life's work is often understated, if mentioned at all.

Presidents love us if we have done something to merit their love. Kings love us in response to our value to the national cause? What about God? What must we do for God to know us personally and to love us? Must we have a big name, position or title? Will we need power of money to get his attention? We won't need any of these to be loved by God. He loves every one of us regardless of our station. Whether we are rich or poor, learned or unlearned, God loves us all.

Consider the poor farm family that dressed up in their Sunday best to attend a funeral. The people of the town were amazed at the trouble the family went through for this occasion because it wasn't the funeral of a relative or neighbor but an old red hen. The entire family gathered at the grave site of the old red hen and paid their last respects. It wasn't unusual for farm folks to feel remorse over the loss of prize winning animals, those who had won ribbons, trophies and honors at the fair. However this old red hen had won no ribbons, earned no trophies and didn't even lay eggs anymore. Why the special attention? The old farmer explained that several years earlier his wife had been sick and times were tough. The doctor had prescribed an egg a day for a remedy, but they didn't have that. The family prayed to God and a short while after a young red hen appeared in the bushes. Each day the hen laid a fresh egg and disappeared. This continued until the day his wife's health was restored. They kept the hen, although she never laid another egg, won a ribbon at the fair or gained any special praise. If it hadn't been for the old red hen the wife would have died. "We've had a lot prize animals over the years. We owned them, but we loved this old hen. She gave to us what we couldn't get ourselves." That's the way it is with God, every body is important to him. Even if the world doesn't know our name, God knows and that what counts.

As Christians, we know God loves each us and cherishes as important all of our life's accomplishments although they may not seem like much to others. As a family gathers to say farewell to the memory of a loved one, it is a comfort to know that standing with them are the hosts of heaven as well. God loves all of his children. Psalm 116:15 puts it this way: "Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death of his saints."

Exposition

This text finds Jesus addressing a woman of Bethany upon the occasion of the sickness and death of Lazarus.

Mary and Martha are two biblical characters who were close to Jesus in that they showed him friendship, provided him shelter, and fed him from their table on many occasions. Martha was a resident of the town of Bethany, which was on the outskirts of Jerusalem. She was the sister of Mary and Lazarus and could have possibly been the daughter of Simon the Leper.

Though generally a "behind the scenes" personality in the biblical account of the life of Christ, she received the unique distinction of being one of the few people ever singled out as special in the eyesight of Christ. John in his gospel account often refers to himself as the disciple that Christ loved. Lazarus was called by name as well. In this text Martha is added to this short list of individuals identified as being ones that Jesus "loved."

Martha was symbolic of the average Christian woman. The name Martha itself meant "a lady" which is an adequate term to describe a person that embodies the full range of qualities that distinguishes her from all others. She served faithfully, was seldom seen, had her human moments, but possessed a great faith in Christ as the savior. The description of Martha could very well fit any Christian woman. She was not the blazing sun, but a twinkling star in the service of the master. She was not the drum major but a member of the band, marching to the beat of the heavenly drummer. She was not the glaring trumpet that sounded from the mountain side, but quietness of flute that seemed to whisper in the wind.

Just who was Martha?

Martha was Friendly and Hospitable

Martha is perhaps best known because of her friendly and hospitable manner. Her home was always open to Jesus and his friends as they sat for hours discussing the coming kingdom and his Lordship. She prepared food and made them comfortable. Luke 10:38 says "a certain woman named Martha received him in her house." John 12:2 says "they made him a supper and Martha served." The warmth of Martha's personality made Jesus and the disciples feel welcome in her home.

Even today there are Marthas in every community. Those whose warm and pleasant personalities make even strangers feel at home within their doors. They willingly share what they have with others. They open their opens with compassion to their children, grandchildren and to neighbors. There never seems to be to many people at Martha's house. Your welcome never wears out Martha's house. In deed, Jesus found the welcome mat was out was out at Martha's house!

Who was Martha?

Martha Served

If Martha is known for her hospitality, she was also distinguished by her quiet but energetic service. John 12:2 simply says "And Martha Served." She didn't make noise although she sometimes expressed dismay that others were not as attentive to their service as she. She went out of her way to do her part to insure that her responsibility, ever so small as it might have been was, none-the-less done.

Like Martha of Bethany, there are many Marthas today. Those whose role seems invisible to some but is never-the-less present and meaningful. Marthas serve, often without notice. Its the silent army of Marthas that prepare plates for the sick and shut in, save fish for the preacher, and listen to the children's tales of grandchildren with excitement and energy. It's Martha's who sick with the sick, cheer up the dispirited, and provide a strong shoulder to lean on for daughter or a friend. Often Martha's service is overlooked. In a world that is captivated by the exciting and titillated by the unusual those who make ripples on the sea of life instead of tidal waves are rarely consider. Unlike the masses of humankind, Jesus noticed Martha. He loved her partly because of the sincerity and energy she brought to her humble service. Jesus loves the Marthas of our time because ...they serve!

Who was Martha?

Martha Knew How to Call the Lord

One of Martha's best known qualities between her pleasing and hospitable personality and spirit of service was her faith in God. She knew the Lord. She had met him, talked with him and seen demonstrations of his power in her life. Without a doubt, to the fullness of her understanding she believed Jesus to be the Christ.

In John 11:1 Lazarus became sick. Despite the fact that he was probably being treated by the doctors and physicians of the town, she sent word for Jesus to come. Her message was simple: "Him whom thou lovest is sick." She had seen what Jesus could do and knew that the only real hope Lazarus had was in Jesus. Her intense faith was admirable. She never doubted that if she could reach Jesus that he had the power to respond to Lazarus' sickness.

Martha lived in Bethany, but there are some Marthas every city in America too!

Martha believes that Jesus is the son of God!

Martha believes that he died and rose after three days and nights!

Martha knows that despite hard times and tough days that the Lord will make a way!

Martha knows that there is power in prayer!

When everybody else seem to lose their heads and forget that God is control Martha knows how to call out from the secret recess of soul "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know. If thou withdraw thyself from me whether shall I go!

Martha knows how to get in touch with the Lord. She knows that Jesus is on the mainline and all she has to do is call him up and tell him what she wants!

Look at Martha! Quietly calling on the Lord for the safety of her family!

Look at Martha! Breathing a prayer of thanksgiving for her husband!

Look at Martha! Asking God to bless her daughter!

Look at Martha! Saying "Father I'm in pain. Let this cup pass! Never-the-less, not my will, but thy will be done!

No wonder Jesus loved Martha...she never lost her faith in Lordship! She never doubted his ability to save and heal! She was strong in her faith. It was because of her faith, that Jesus loved Martha!

Who was Martha?

Martha was Human

While Martha had many strong characteristics, she had a human and weak side. On occasion she was frustrated because others didn't take their duties seriously. Despite her great faith, on at least one occasion she showed that she didn't quite understand all the principles of the faith.

After she sent for Jesus and he was delayed in coming she demonstrated both faith and doubt at the same time. She met Jesus as he finally came to town and said: "Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." John 11:21 Yet in the same breath she expressed that she believed that even in death Christ could raise him if he wanted to! She believed in the resurrection but she didn't quite fully understand that Christ was the embodiment of the resurrection she hoped for! There were some aspects of life she just didn't understand! Even though she didn't understand Jesus loved Martha anyway! Even as she wept at the death of her brother Jesus loved her...to the point that the scripture records it with two words that embody the passion of the moment "Jesus wept!" Why did Jesus weep? Because he loved Martha, and her sister and Lazarus!"

Today we stand we stand like Martha, not fully understanding how God operates, but trusting in him completely!

Our humanity cries out! Our soul swells! Our heart mourns! Yet deep within we know that just as Jesus wept with Martha when she lost a loved one, that he stands with us in our moment of trial. He stood with Martha because he loved her!

Jesus' love did not extend to Martha alone! Each person named in this text is connected to other inextricably by the conjunction AND. It means that he did not love one without the other! He loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus! He loved Martha and he loves us...just like he loved Martha!

Who was Martha? She was a woman who gentle nature earned her the distinction of being called a “lady!”

Who was Martha? She was an invisible servant who made a difference in the lives of her family and those whom she touched

Who was Martha? She was a child of the king!

Who was Martha? She was one who loved to hear the story! The story of a God who loved the world so much that he sent his only begotten Son! A son who died on Calvary rose after three days and night!

Where is Martha now? Martha has answered the call of him who loved her!

He calls for every believer even today..”Come and go with me to my father’s house!”

In my father’s house there is peace!

In my father’s house there is joy!

Come and go with me to my father’s house!

———

On Monday January 15, 1996 Martha Perry Murray answered the call of the heavenly father. Her quiet manner, deep faith, humble service and warm spirit bears to the fact that Jesus loved Martha...and took her home!

Traveling Light

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "Therefore said he unto them, The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest.Go your ways: behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves. Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes: and salute no man by the way. And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house." Luke 10:2-5

Introduction

Do you ever feel weighted down? The cares and concerns of life can easily mount up. Instead of moving through life at a brisk pace we drudge through each day with a snail like crawl. Problems, worries, commitments, difficulties, challenges: they all seem to mount until they begin to pose a burden upon us. Now even the simplest aspects of life have become complicated. We find ourselves making it through each day with the assistance of headache medicines, nerve pills, relaxers, and pep pills. We are so worked up, stressed up, tied up and tangled up that we can't lay down without sleeping pills. When our appointment book gets so full that we have no place for church, family, and self, except a few non-quality minutes here or there, then we know that we are getting too busy. When the concerns of life accumulate they become burdens. After we've carried them for a while the burdens seem to get heavier. In actuality, the burdens don't get heavier, we get weaker. Accumulated concern makes it hard to enjoy life to its fullest.

Consider the young woman who had found herself a new apartment and was preparing to move. Her girl friend had come to help her but found her sitting in the middle of packing boxes crying. When asked to explain her tears she said, she never realized how much "stuff" she had accumulated. "I'm not going to be able to take all of this to my new apartment" she moaned. "What am I going to do with all this stuff?" There were what nots and souvenirs, gifts, mementos, gadgets and plethora of others. She was a complete mess. "What am I going to do with all this stuff?" Her friend, who had faced the same dilemma once said: "Take only what you need to get where you're going!" With that, the young lady painfully decided to leave behind many things which tied her to the past and took only those things she needed to claim her future.

Are we sitting at the threshold of the future trying to take with us all of the old baggage from the past? Are we finding that we have too much "stuff?" To make the journey. Maybe its time for us to part with some of our "stuff" if it doesn't help us to get where we are going. Do we really need an appointment book that is so full that we have to schedule in a moment with our family and call it quality time? What about the worries and concerns of the past? Can we box a few of them up and leave them behind? Take only what you need to get where you are going!

As Christians, we have been charged to work to build the kingdom of God. The complexities of living in modern times have bogged many of us down to the point that we have little time for kingdom building as manage our accumulation of "stuff." Christ calls us to take no thought of "stuff" but to take only what we need to get where we're going and he'll take care of the rest!"

Exposition

This text finds Jesus as he commissions 35 sets of disciples to witness for him in various cities.

Jesus had commissioned the 12 apostles to go and preach the gospel and witness for him. Matthew 10 amplifies their mission and charge: To witness to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. They were given special powers for the task. They were to be used in accomplishing the mission. In Mat 10:7-8 "And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give." These powers were limited in nature. They were not given to all believers, but were special dispensations for accomplishing a specific purpose.

In addition, they were told to neither to worry about the usual concerns of living, God would provide.

This text in Luke begins as Jesus sends out 70 others. They too were charged to go into the surrounding villages and carry the gospel message. Like the original 12 they were forbidden to go outside of their race, but to witness only to the lost sheep of the House of Israel. They too were given the command to take no concern for the usual demands of life, God would provide.

At the time of Jesus the typically dressed Jew in Palestine had five articles of clothing: Two tunics; one was an inner garment, the other, an outer one used as a cloak by day and a blanket by night. Then there was a girdle, a kind of waistband worn over the two tunics, a head covering, and sandals. A wallet or travelers bag was carried for food and money. It was carried over the shoulder. But Jesus told them to leave most of that behind. Simply Go! God would provide!

That was more of a challenge than it appeared, but they had a mission to accomplish. They carried only what they needed to get where they were going. All else, God would provide as needed.

The idea was for them to focus on the mission rather than the externals associated with the mission. The 70 were sent out on pure faith alone. In Luke 10:4 they were command not to carry a purse, that meant they were not to be overly concerned with money matters. God would provide. They were also told not to carry scrip. Scrip is a pouch in which food is carried on a journey. If they carried no scrip that means they carried no food with them. Neither were they to worry themselves with packing extra shoes or clothing items. They were even told not to salute anyone they met along the way. Saluting was not simply a matter of "good morning" as is Western tradition. In the East, saluting could be quite a time consuming experience involving embracing and other long, drawn out, rituals. Saluting each person they met could slow down the journey. After the mission was accomplished, there would be plenty time for salutations! He wanted them focused on the mission.

These messengers were sent on a Holy Mission by Christ himself. To accomplish such a task they would need to trust him fully and keep themselves focused on the mission. Thus, they were charged to travel light, think deep and pray hard.

Modern missionaries have a similar mission but not specifically the same as these 70. Missionaries are still charged to spread the word. Unlike the first missionaries, we are charged to go to the entire world, not just the lost sheep of the house of Israel. While the first were told to make no provision for themselves and their families, modern missionaries are charged to provide the essentials for their families. 1 Timothy 5:8 "But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." That concern however is not to supercede the mission.

The key for modern Christians is do that which is necessary, avoid the unnecessary, pursue the mission and travel light!

Heavy Baggage Is A Burden

As we face new directions and the remaining months of a new year, we must consider whether we are carrying so much baggage that we can barely move along.

If you have traveled you have perhaps seen two types of travelers. One is in the airport with large suitcases and is struggling to make it to a terminal. Another has an equal amount of baggage but has a small dolly upon which he or she rolls the suitcase. At first sight it appears that the one whose suit case is on wheels was the smart traveler until you see a third traveler who only carries a clothes bag and brief case or purse. One had a heavy suitcase on wheels, but it was still a heavy suit case it was just handled easy by innovation. At some point the wheels came off and the suit case became a heavy load again.

There are many of us who are carrying heavy suitcases into the new year. Granted some handle their loads with grace and style, as if it were rolling along on wheels, but it is nevertheless a heavy load. At some point we reach a stair way or find that the wheels don't help and feel the weight of the load.

What's in your suitcase? What kind of excess baggage are you carrying?

GUILT: Some carry guilt with them every day. They made a mistake a while back and they have never forgiven themselves. They blame themselves constantly. Even though they have prayed to God and he has forgiven them and washed away the guilt with his blood, they carry guilt around with them. It's a heavy load. Sometimes they are smiling and shaking hands and seem warm and carefree. That's because they have put their guilt on wheels, but they are still carrying it around.

We should travel lighter, leaving guilt behind, especially in light of Hebrews 9:14 " How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" Since Jesus has forgiven us for our mistakes, we should not make our load heavier!

FEARS: Some carry fear with them every day. They are afraid of failure. Afraid to take opportunities and to step out on faith. Fear consumes them every day. They cannot get away from it. From year to year they live in fear of losing their job, getting demoted, not being accepted. They constantly live in fear! However, when God is on our side we have nothing to fear from life. Psalm 118:6 "The LORD is on my side; I will not fear: what can man do unto me?" Psalm 27:1 puts it this way: "The LORD is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

WORRIES: Perhaps the heaviest piece of luggage to carry around is worry. Worry is more than concern, it is over concern. Those who worry invent scenarios that may never happen. The muse over projected tragedy and they make a bad case even worse because of their intense worry.

Many get bags under the eyes, lose sleep, suffer deteriorating health and suffer stress attacks because they worry so much. They carry it around with them daily. Jesus addressing this subject made this response in Matthew 6:28-30 And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:And yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to day is, and to morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?"

A song writer worded it differently: "Why should I be discouraged. Why should the shadows come. Why should my heart be lonely and long for heaven and home. When Jesus is my portion. A constant friend is he. For his eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me."

Take It To The Lord

What do we do with burdens? What do we do with guilt, fear and worry? What do we do with a seemingly endless list of problems and troubles that are beyond our control?

For the answer, the Word of God points us to Matthew 11:28 "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Verse 30 puts on the finishing touches: Mat 11:30 For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

What do we do with burdens and excess baggage? Give it to Jesus!

When Job found himself surrounded by burdens and troubles he decided that it was best to give it to God! In Job 5:7-9 Job says "Yet man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward. I would seek unto God, and unto God would I commit my cause: Which doeth great things and unsearchable; marvellous things without number:" Job decided to take his burden to God!

When David found himself surrounded troubles and trials he decided it was best to look up. Psalm 121 "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth!"

Traveling light means traveling without unnecessary burdens!

Traveling light means trusting God to carry the heavy end of the load!

Traveling light means working on the middle and trusting God to make the ends meet!

What do you do with asuitcase full of burdens? Take it to the Lord!

That's what the song writer had in mind when he wrote: "If the world from you withhold of its silver and its gold and you have to get along with meager fare. Just remember in his word, how he feeds the little bird and take your burdens to the Lord and leave it there!"

If you'll leave it there, he take your:

-Loneliness and give you an everlasting comfort; Empty House and bless it to become a home

-Trial and give you strength to endure; Heartache and give you a love that will heal

-Sorrow and turn it into gladness; Weakness and turn it into strength

-Bowed down head and raise it up in joy!

If you trust and never doubt, he will surely bring you out, take your burdens to the Lord and leave it there!

When we take our burdens to the Lord we are taking them to somebody who knows about carrying heavy burdens! He knows about carry the weight of the world on his shoulders! He knows about suffering for the sake of others!

Isaiah 53:5 says "..he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed."

He knows about carrying burdens for one day, nearly 2000 years ago, he carried a heavy burden on his shoulder up Golgatha's hill!

He knows about carrying burdens for died out on Calvary!

But he also knows how to get rid burdens for Early Sunday morning he rose up from the grave with all power in his burden free hands!

If you want to travel light! Trust in the Lord!

If you want to travel burden free! Trust in the Lord!

He will make everything all right!

Who Will Tell The Story?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 27, 1996

SCRIPTURE:"Therefore shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul, and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlet between your eyes. And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thine house, and upon thy gates: That your days may be multiplied, and the days of your children, in the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give them, as the days of heaven upon the earth" Deuteronomy 11:18-21

Introduction

Were you ever lectured by your parents? There is nothing more monotonous than hearing the same story told repeatedly. Most children wonder why their parents, especially their grand parents, keep telling the same stories over and over again. Often we have heard the stories so often that we know them from memory and recount every word, line by line, word for word. It's not so bad until things go bad. When we make mistakes and foul ups one thing we dreaded most is hearing the lectures that our parents would give. Sometimes we'd rather have received a good whipping if meant that we avoid the lecture. In most cases however, we got the whipping and the lecture too!

Although we were often annoyed by the lectures, lessons and sermons of our parents and grand parents, one of the first things we miss when they are no longer there is sound of their strong voices ringing in our ears. In their absence, the silence is worse than the lectures. Consider the little girl who was very close to her grandmother. Grandmother always took time to come to her room, pull up the old rocking chair and read her stories from an old story book given to her by her mother. The stories were funny. Mother Goose, Little Red Riding Hood, Alice in Wonderland, Goldilocks and the three bears...they were all amusing stories. Grandmother would sit in that old rocker and read one each night without fail. After a while Grandmother took sick. Shortly after the little girl learned that grandma was gone to be with God. Only one thought came to her mind. The question plagued her day and night. She knew that grandma was with God. She knew that Grandma was safe. However, the question that bothered her was "who will tell the story?" As she came home that night her mother came into her room and tucked her daughter in bed. Tired she sat in the old rocking chair. Instantly the little girl sat up in her bed and displayed the biggest smile. “Why are you smiling so?” The mother asked. The girl pointed to her mother “You’re sitting in grandma’s chair! “ The little girl pulled out the old story book that had passed through three generations and put it in her mother’s lap. “You are sitting in grandma’s chair. You must tell the story!” Instantly the mother begin to feel grandma’s presence. She opened the book and night after night she repeated the story until her daughter fell fast asleep!

One of the roles of grand parents is to facilitate the transmission of the elements of culture, heritage and values from one generation to next. Good parents and grandparents are burdened with the responsibility of teaching the young to know the path the family has trod and equip them to make the remainder of the journey on their own. With evangelistic zeal they lecture, teach, preach, drill and reteach the same truths untiringly. Without good parents and grandparents we would lose our connection with our past. Without them, we would wander through an endless maze of meaningless frustration. Without them, we would plunge aimlessly into the future without direction!

As Christians, we thank God for good parents and grand parents. Through them we learn of his goodness in our past, his mercies in our present and his promises for our future! We are better off today because God loaned us the presence of parents who were not afraid to “tell the story!”

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as he tells the nation of Israel the story of God’s goodness and mercy toward them as a people.

The journey of the children of Israel from a small band of hungry pilgrims who came from Canaan to Egypt in a time of famine to a huge nation of wilderness nomads, nearly a half million in number is memorable.

Moses, the patriarch of the nation, had been the single strong spirit that seemed to bond the nation together. It was his faith and strength that helped them to leave Egypt and begin their journey to the promised land. When they lost faith, Moses prayed to God. When they were afraid, Moses told them to stand still and see the salvation of the Lord. When they had no food, Moses turned to God and meat, bread and water was served daily on their table. When they sinned, Moses chastised them. When they exercised faith, Moses led them in celebration.

Without a doubt, Moses was the pillar of the Israelite nation. His youth was a litany of deeds and accomplishments that included surviving the wilderness, seeing the burning bush, facing Pharaoh, maintaining the wilderness existence for 40 years. However, in his senior years, Moses assumed the role of teacher for the people.

The entire book of Deuteronomy is a written record of Moses’ many efforts to tell the story of the Israelite journey. The name “Deuteronomy” means “A second Look.” In this final of his five books, Moses retells the story. It is not simply a recounting of the journey but an account of God’s dealings with the people. That aspect is what distinguishes biblical history from secular history. While secular history tells the story of man's journey, biblical history tells the story of the journey with respect to God's relationship to the pilgrims. Thus Moses notes that it is not so much the telling of the story that is important as is the emphasis on God's dealings with mankind in the process.

The thrust of these text verses seem to fall in three categories.

Each believer is charged to know the story themselves. They are charged to have the word of God in their hearts and to constantly remind themselves of God's goodness by keeping them visible in glaring ways. Knowing what God has done from first hand experience has the effect of serving as frontlets or guides that keep us from straying too far to the left or to the right.

Each believer is also charged to teach their experience to their children. Thus it is not sufficient for good parents or grand parents to know what God has done for themselves, but they must also take advantage of every opportunity to teach the principles of godliness to their children. At any given opportunity the good parent or grand parent tells the story. In the morning, noon or at midnight, they will tell the story. Moses goes even further in Deuteronomy 11:19-20 "..speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thine house, and upon thy gates:"

Each believer will be rewarded for their faithfulness to their duty. The reward will come in the form of long life. In addition, their children and grand children will enjoy a richer happier life because they took the time to tell the story at every opportunity!

Thus, Moses emphasized the importance of telling the story. Each parent or grandparent must live the story and believe God in their own hearts. Tell that testimony to their children, and expect to reap the reward of long life and blessed posterity for their faithfulness to God

A Story to Tell

Before anyone can tell the story, they must first have a story to tell. Moses told Israel to first get the word of God in its heart. For Israel that meant internalizing the 10 commandments and ceremonial laws that God had given through Moses. At that point, that was the only written law. It also meant allowing it to become fronlets or guides for their lives.

No one can tell the story of God's dealing in their lives until they have a story to tell. That's why the senior members of every Christian family are so vital to its existence. They are the keepers of the family story. The seniors and the seniors alone can tell the whole story. They have run the full length of the life experience. They have made the foolish mistakes of youth, meandered the maze of marriage, faced sickness, shouldered the burden of the death of loved ones, and endured hardships, all while surfing the sea of life in their golden years. The seniors of every family have a full story to tell.

The microwave mom won't appreciate her microwave unless she knows how far God has brought the family. When the story is told she'll soon learn that there weren't always microwaves, but there was a time when the family cooked on cast iron stoves heated by freshly chopped wood. If she listens as the story is told, she'll learn that there was no "shake and bake" but there was a time when mama would "cook and wake" her family to a table of 15 minute grits, home made biscuits soaked in freshly churned butter, fresh hen house eggs and cured bacon straight from the smoke house. When the family prayed over breakfast, there was no doubt that God made it all happen. The women of the family learn that they are part of a long line of Christian women who remained faithful to their husbands and families and even pursued careers with success in proportion to their trust in God. That's what they learn when the story is told.

When dad drives away in his shiny new car, he won't appreciate it fully until he knows how God has really blessed the family. When he knows that God has moved the family from hitching up the mules to the wagon to loading everybody into Cadillacs, Lincolns, Toyotas, Fords and Chevrolets then he will better appreciate the work of God in his family. If he endures hard times and trouble in the world, he'll gain faith in knowing that the men of the family have survived slavery, depressions, race discrimination and deprivation, with the help of God. That's what he'll learn when the story is told.

The story is also about allowing God's word to guide personal decisions to the point that the word of God becomes a "frontlet." Frontlets keep the eyes of team mules from straying. They see only what's in front of them. The seniors of every Christian family must drill the Christian message into the young, showing them how God has guided their own lives. The example of faith and dependence upon God is invaluable in every family. It's the story of how God has moved in your life. It's a story of a family that has been blessed because God has been in its midst.

There must be persons in every family who serve as the keepers of the family story. Moses said they must tell the story in the morning. Tell it in the evening. Even if walking down the streets and the opportunity presents itself, tell the story. Anywhere the younger members of the family turn they must hear the story. Write it down, put it on video tape, save it on computer discs, inscribe it in the family bible, record it, place it on the internet and world wide web, broadcast it on the radio and television..that's what Moses meant by write it on your door posts. Tell the story where he can be seen and heard. Every senior member of a Christian family has the great responsibility to keep telling the story.

Seniors who tell the story will enjoy a good old age. They will get a few bonus years beyond the usual three score and ten, but could earn bonus years for themselves, extending themselves beyond the normal expectancy! The joy of seniors is not in the length of their own lives, but its in their children and grandchildren Every grandparent is happy when they know there children and grandchildren are safe in the arms of God and are able to stand alone. Moses said the seniors who do their jobs well will enjoy their golden years because their children and grandchildren will walk the Godly path, thanks to their example.

Who will tell the story?

The challenge of every family facing the death of a patriarch or matriarch who was the strong voice that has told the story for so many years, is to answer the question: "Who will tell the story?" Who will rise to be sure that young and struggling members of the family are reminded that if they trust in the Lord he will bless them? Who will champion justice and speak against sinfulness in the family with a strength of conviction that will both inspire faith and discourage wrong doing? Who will tell the story?

When Moses died the people mourned his loss. They asked among themselves: "Who will tell the story?" Just about that time Joshua stood and said "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord"

When Elijah went back to glory on a chariot, the question was asked: "Who will tell the story?" Young Elisha who had been walking with the sainted senior for many years picked up his mantle and the Holy Ghost gave a double portion of what Elijah had to tell the story!

Across the battlements of heaven the question rings out: "Who will tell the story?"

The modern response should be the same as that of Isaiah "If the Lord needs somebody, here am I Lord, send me!"

Who will tell the story of the goodness of the Lord?

Who will tell the world that those who trust in the Lord can:

—Face the unfaceable; conquer the unconquerable

—Bear the unbearable; suffer the insufferable

—Love the unlovable; reach the unreachable

The Lord needs somebody who will pick up the fallen mantle and be a witness that God is a good God! That even in times of sadness and death, that he will make a way!

Who will tell the story of how God took a poor farm family and sent some of them to college, placed them in jobs, pulpits and positions of responsibilities all across this nation?

Who will tell the story told by our forefathers?

Whoever tells the story must decide to live the life and walk the walk, before they try to talk the talk!

If you are going to tell the story, you must know Jesus for yourself!

You can't tell your story until you can tell his story!

Tell them about Jesus, the lily of the Valley!

Tell them about Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Tell them how he died on Calvary!

Tell them how he rose after three days and nights!

Tell them how he promised never to leave the family

Tell them he'll never leave us alone!

———

On January 22, 1996 Rosa Minor Coffey went home to be with God. She was a teacher, principal, usher and mother. She lived the life, walked the walk and then talked the talk. With everything in her being...she told the story!

Minority Report

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 4, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "And Caleb stilled the people before Moses, and said, Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it. But the men that went up with him said, We be not able to go up against the people; for they are stronger than we. Numbers 13:30-31;Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the LORD revealed? Isaiah 53:1

Introduction

What lies in the future of the African-American community? The answer depends totally upon the perspective of the respondent. Some have become accustomed to the social stigmas associated with minority status in America. Their response is one of pure survival. They suggest we should be still and let well enough alone. This view is shared by a majority of the minority and historically would have represented our plight had it not been for a small minority. This small minority promoted the social changes that moved us from slavery to quasi-freedom, from the back of the bus to front and from political pawns to players in the social arena. It has historically been the plight of the minority of our people to fuel the waning hopes aspirations of a comfortable and fearful majority. The spokesmen for that minority have had different roles and different names over the years such as Denmark Vessey, Douglas, Dubois, Booker Washington, Randolph, Newton, Malcolm, and King. They represent the vocal minority whose message to a people comfortable in defeat is "we can possess a better life if we go up and seize it." Their report was one of hope in the face of insurmountable odds.

The majority rejected them but history has embraced these and others who gave the same report: "We will get to the promised land some day!" It is not unusual for the majority to accept conditions as inevitable and assume a "do nothing" attitude. The hope of every race has been in the well of inspiration they were able to summon from those who had not accepted defeat. Sometimes the a persistent minority can bring out the truth.

Consider Joshua Jones who ran a still back in the rolling hills of Mississippi. The majority of the people in the county knew Joshua ran that still but figured that a poor man had to do what he had to do to survive. Everybody except two neighbors who consistently told everyone that running a still was illegal and it promoted alcoholism. Each time they reported old Joshua the law was never able to find his still because the majority of the folks covered for him and helped him hide. This went on for years until Joshua bought his wife a new house and a new car and fine clothes. That made the men of the town a little jealous. They worked hard, but all Joshua did was sell white lightning. So when the two neighbors demanded the police take action the majority of the folk said nothing. In court the judge who was known to take a nip of Joshua's brew tried the case as one of mistaken identity. "You are the Joshua that made the Sun stand still aren't you?" The two neighbors gave Joshua a defiant look and he gave in, "No Sir," he responded "I'm the Joshua that makes the moon shine!" It took them many years but the two neighbors finally brought the truth to the light. Often it is the persistence of a hopeful minority that saves the majority. A minority that keeps it eye focused on the promises of God can see beyond the frustrations of the moment and peer in the bright prospects of the future. A minority that never doubts the power of God can possess the promises he has given. Regardless to the majority opinion, the minority must continue to hold up the banner of hope. God is still on the throne. As Christians, African-American Christians we are the hopeful minority. Despite a changing social climate that threatens life as we know it, we are confident that the future belongs to the remnant of God. Just as a small remnant of just two people saw the prospects and promise of the future despite its challenges, we who trust in God, must also resolve that we can possess the future because we are able to overcome it!

Exposition

This text focuses on the report of 12 spies that had been sent to investigate the prospects of the promised land. Israel's journey to the promised land was fueled by a hope that had sustained them for centuries. God had promised Abraham that his family would inherit all of the lands of Canaan. However, several centuries had passed since that promise was made. They spent 430 years in slavery in Egypt. Though they were nearly 600,000 in number, they were untrained militarily and unskilled at self management. Yet they moved in a wave of hope and expectation, toward the promised land. Once there, Moses selected 12 spies, one from each tribe, to go into the land and confirm God's promise.

At verse 18 Moses suggests to them that the spies should investigate whether the people were strong or weak. They were told to report about their living arrangements, considering whether they lived in tents or in strong cities. Then they were to consider the land itself. They were to consider whether there was enough wood to supply the people and whether it was fertile or lean (v20). Once there the spies discovered that the land was truly fertile and rich with resources to support the people In fact, the land was so fertile that they described it as a land "flowing with milk and honey." (v27). It was rich in natural resources, just as God had said. However, 10 of the 12 spies also gave the down side of their report. While it was fertile and rich, it was also occupied by not one but several nations of Black people, descendants of Ham, who had lived in the region for centuries. Among these Black descendants of Ham were the Amorites, Jebusites, Hittites and other Canaanites. Also among them were the sons of Anak, who were huge giants of men who built great cities with giant sized walls. Before these men, the spies saw themselves as mere grasshoppers (v33). The majority report was that the land was fertile but there were too many obstacles preventing a successful invasion. There was a minority report. Two of the spies, Joshua and Caleb tried to convince them that there was hope. In Genesis 15:13 God promised their 400 year enslavement and deliverance and it came to be. God had promised that the land would be fertile and was as he said. What reason did they have to doubt that he would give them victory despite obstacles, if everything else concerning God's promise has proven true.

Because of God's promise, Joshua and Caleb felt confident enough to say "we are able to possess it." Not by their own strength, but because they would be supported by the power of the almighty God. This is a truth that would be repeated centuries later in Zechariah 4:6 which says, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the LORD of hosts." The victory they expected was not based upon what they alone were able to do, but upon the power of God to make it happen. It was God's will for them to possess the land! It had been promised! Since God had made the promise their victory was a foregone conclusion. That was the minority report. "Let us go up at once, and possess it" was their recommendation. Despite the promising report the people listened to the majority. In Chapter 14 verse 1, they began to complain and weep about the difficulty of their situation. Their final conclusion was to give up the struggle. They wandered around in the wilderness for 40 years, until the entire generation of adults that participated in the faithless decision died. In their old age, Joshua and Caleb still gave the same report "Let us go up at once, and possess it!"

The Challenges Ahead

As African-Americans consider the future, what is the report of our future? What is the status of the promised land? Is it flowing with milk and honey? What about the people who stand in the way? Will they be easy to defeat? Will they be strong? The report we receive is that the future is indeed bright. There are great opportunities that exist in the promised land. It will be a land where opportunities exist for every person without regard to his color or creed. It will be a land where the people will have worked vigorously to eliminate discrimination and will have taken affirmative steps to make up for past mistakes and place everyone on an even plain. It will be land where the bottom rail has risen to the ranks of the top rail and those who have been among the last will be among the first. Economically, Socially and politically, it will be a land flowing with milk and honey.

However, there is a down side to the report. While the future is bubbling with prospects, they will not come easy for us. The land is filled with conservative Jubusites, Amorites and Republicans. They are entrenched and pose a formidable barrier. There are a few giants among them who have built great walls to fortify themselves and keep us at a distance. In fact they are so well entrenched, so well financed, and so well trained that we shrivel before them like grasshoppers. They are taking over the Congress, governors mansions, state and local governments. Beside this external threat we face internal threats. Our families are falling apart, our economic base is dwindling. Our cultural awareness is disintegrating. Our able bodied men are dying in their youth or jailed in the prime.

We own less, manufacture nothing and are becoming increasingly dependent upon the good will and charity of others for both jobs and public assistance. The conclusion of the majority report is that politically and socially we are doomed! We will never possess the promised land. The majority report gives us the prospects and lays out the challenge. The question is whether we are willing to meet the challenge or whether we will simply give up. The promised land won't come without a struggle. What Joshua and Caleb tried to tell Israel is germane to our present circumstance. We are able to possess the promise! However, we must be willing to adjust our methods, use the tools we have at hand, and trust God for the rest.

The African-American church is the strongest vehicle we have at our disposal with which we can claim the promise. We must use it like David's sling to defeat circumstances that stand in the way of the promise. The church must a) Promote faith in God with an evangelistic zeal. It must teach God's word to build the faith of the people beyond the generic specially showing how God has dealt with oppressed people in the past giving hope for the future. b) Organize and train an army of young men and women to go forth to possess the promise, unintimidated by the processes of government or the size of their opposition. Churches must invest in their youth. We must educate them, train them and protect them from destructive influences. They will be the center of a generation that will bring down the walls of Jericho. c) Promote Afro-centric citizen involvement in government free of entanglements, co-optation or assimilationist attitudes. We must work to promote good government that is Afro-Centric. We must support leaders who will ask questions, provide answers and take actions on our behalf, while at the same time recognizing the fatherhood of God and brotherhood of all men. d) Organize and expand its influences beyond its walls into the highways and byways. To accomplish this the church must change its way of thinking. Its activities cannot be defined by what is done with the confines of its walls. It must reach into the schools, housing projects, malls and street corners to carry the message of hope. It must respond to the homeless, hungry and impoverished masses with education, health care, housing, job training, and economic opportunity renewing hope that we are able to possess the promise of God! It is the challenge that is intimidating. It is the size of the giant that stares us that scares some. Israel lost hope when they began to think of themselves as grasshoppers, rather than men who were just as mighty but just a little shorter. The majority lost hope. They made it to the promised land because the minority never lost hope.

The Minority Report

The African-American church has played a formidable place in the history of our people. It has sounded the alarm, given the battle charge and led the fight to possess the promise. It has produced a small handful of visionary leaders who have, for the most part, served as our Joshuas and Caleb's reminding us that just beyond the river lies the promised land. The majority report urges us to accept our plight because it is afraid of the challenge.

The minority report on the other hand is not intimidated by the challenge it is ready to act with the available knowledge that God will take care of the rest!

The minority report has been drenched in the word of God and is dripping with faith. It is a faith that despite the obstacles before us that the Lord will make a way!

The minority report says God wouldn't take Moses to mountain top and have him tell us "I may not get there with, but I have seen the promise land!"

The minority report says "the road is rough and going is tough and hills are hard to climb, but I started out a long time ago and there is no doubt in my mind, I've decided to make Jesus my choice!"

The minority report says we have come through hills and valleys, we've come through slavery and discrimination and second class citizenship, but I don't feel no ways tired. I don't believe he brought this far to leave me!

Somebody here doesn't believe our report. They doubt whether the action of one man or a small handful can change things. These skeptics are not the first to have such doubts. The skeptics gave the final report, the world is doomed and cannot be saved! But Isaiah declared that there is a minority report. A reason for hope, whether you believe it or not, God is getting ready to move!

I hear Isaiah 53:1 ask, "Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the LORD revealed?"

The minority report is that a child shall grow up among them like a root out of David! The minority report is: He shall be wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities.

The chastisement of our peace is upon him!

He will be crucified on an old rugged cross, but he'll rise up after three days and nights!

He's coming back again!

When he comes back, justice will run down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream!

Every valley shall be exalted and mountain shall be made low! I don't about you but I believe the minority report because I trust in the Lord! I will trust in the Lord! I will trust in the Lord... Until I die!

Heart Transplant

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 11, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them. And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God." Ezekiel 36:26-28

Introduction

Have you ever had a change of heart? That's when you changed both your opinion and your actions toward someone or something. Usually a change of heart reflects a complete change, whereas a change of mind represents only a change of opinion. Those who have a change of heart are often strikingly different in their words and actions. Sometimes a change of heart can signify a positive shift. Sometimes people change for the worse. The record is filled with examples of people who had changes of heart for the better. Saul had a change of heart on the Damascus Road. Jonah had a change of heart after three days in a fish's belly. Their change of heart was for the better. Some like Judas also had changes of heart, but they were for the worse.

The one common element that all Christians share is that they have all had a change of heart ..for the better. That's when they accepted Jesus as their Savior. In the Western world the heart is usually considered the center of affections and convictions. It is symbolic of course, since in reality the heart is a mass of flesh. In other societies the kidney, brain and even the liver is considered the center of affection and conviction. It doesn't matter which organ is the symbol, it is important that each represents the place where affection and conviction are controlled. The heart is the symbol of love. While it is recognized as such year round it is recognized even more during the month of February because of Valentine's Day.

According to one of the many legends, the valentine takes its name from a young Christian who once lived in ancient Rome. Like so many of the early Christians, Valentine had been imprisoned because of his faith. Often and longingly he thought of his loved ones, and wanted to assure them of his well-being and his love. Beyond his cell window, and beyond reach, grew a cluster of violets. He picked some heart-shaped leaves and pierced them to spell the words, "Remember your Valentine," then sent them off by a friendly dove. On the next day and the next, he sent more messages that simply said, “I love you.” Thus did the valentine have its beginning. On Valentine’s Day, people of all ages remember those they love by sending valentines. As Christians, we love God with heartfelt affection. At one point God became angry with the world and wanted to destroy it because of its sin. But God had a change of heart. He changed his mind and sent his Son to save the world instead. In effect, he sent us a valentine, saying “I love you!” Daily, we can send him one in return, when we show our love to him by obeying his word and giving him praise!

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Ezekiel as he tells how God would restore the nation of Israel and give it a new heart. The Babylonians were the dreaded enemies of Judah. In the year 606 B.C. they began the first of several deportations of the best and brightest of the Jewish people, carrying them back to Babylon. These included the artists, craftsmen, and trained workers. Among those deported were Daniel, the Three Hebrew Boys, and Ezekiel. While in another land Ezekiel was called to be a prophet, at age 30. His message was one of hope and restoration for a divided and conquered people. He spoke to them in both written and verbal prophecies in which he told them that they would be reunited like “dry bones in the valley.” He constantly reminded them that their spirituality must be increased and the worldliness must decrease.

The people prayed for Babylon to be destroyed so they could enjoy full freedom again. False prophets arose among them saying God would destroy Babylon disputing prophecies hat had come from Jeremiah (Jeremiah 28-29). Jeremiah,who remained in Jerusalem told the remnant to expect 70 years of Babylonian domination. Ezekiel had the job of telling the people that it would not be Babylon that God would destroy but Jerusalem would be destroyed. After the complete destruction of Jerusalem, then God planned to rebuild the nation into a glorious state that would include the restoration of the temple, the state of Israel and the Messianic reign of the Savior.

This text extracts four verses from Ezekiel’s prophecy. It epitomizes the theme of his message to Judah. God would forgive them for their disobedience, worship of idols and ungodliness and sprinkle them with compassion and forgiveness on certain conditions.(v25).

Verse 26 notes that God proposed to give Judah and new spirit and new heart, displacing their old “stony” heart with one that could live and breath the truths of God. The new spirit would be different from their old spirit. Their old spirit was defiant. God said “no” they said “yes!” God said “go right” they said “go left!” Their spirit was selfish and materialistic. God proposed to give them a new spirit. Their stony hearts caused them to ignore God and to reject him. God proposed to give them new hearts. The results of having a new spirit and new heart would be refreshing.

Verse 27 says once the people get new hearts and new spirits they would obey God’s commands, learn them and live by them. With new spirits and new hearts a new relationship with God would exist. He would be their God again and they would be his people.

Heart Trouble

Like Judah many today are suffering from heart trouble both physiologically and spiritually. As African Americans this is a staggering truth. The greatest single threat to the life of the African American community is not AIDS, Murders, or Sickle Cell Anemia even though these play significant roles in our collective death. Heart trouble is our biggest killer. Among Black males as of 1991, out of every 1000 deaths, 347 were from heart disease, that's (47 percent higher than white men) and 221.6 for black females (69% higher than white females).

The staggering truth is that more Blacks are dying from strokes, high blood pressure and heart attacks, than any other reason. Nearly seven out of 10 Blacks over age 60 have high blood pressure. Physiologically speaking the main causes of heart disease among Blacks are smoking, high cholesterol diets, lack of physical activity and excessive weigh. Three out of every 10 Black men smoke cigarettes two out of every 10 Black women smoke. Most Blacks have very little physical activity and three out of every 10 Black men are overweight and nearly five out of ten Black women are overweight. Psychological Connection Smoking, high cholesterol, inactivity and overweight are the main factors that cause heart trouble. However a Duke University study showed that between one third and one half of all heart trouble related deaths could not be explained by one of these four factors. Psychologically there is a connection between heart trouble and the way we handle stress and our outlook on life.

A Harvard Medical School Study of 1,122 heart attack survivors found that those who tried to remain calm during emotional conflicts had half the risk of heart attacks compared to those who tended to get angry. The same study showed Men who complain of high anxiety are up to six times more likely than calmer men to suffer sudden cardiac death. A Duke University study of 1,719 people diagnosed with heart disease revealed that "a healthy outlook (optimism) helps heal the heart" while pessimism "can be a killer." In a study with recovering heart patients at the Montreal Heart Institute, Dr. Nancy Frasure-Smith found those who were hopeful and happy were eight times more likely to live than those who were sad and depressed.

According to a Mayo Clinic study of individuals with heart disease, researchers found that psychological distress was the strongest predictor of future cardiac events, such as cardiac death, cardiac arrest and heart attack. In short, ones attitudes and outlooks on life also add to or subtract from the probability of heart disease. Spiritual Connection If there is a psychological connection then there is also a spiritual connection. Our attitudes and outlook on life is great affected by our spiritual state. Hope is a matter of spirit. Those who are hopeless suffer tremendous pessimism. They brood, complain and get cranky. They are constantly worked up and moved from minute to minute like a time bomb ready to go off. Faith is a matter is also a matter of spirit. Those who are faithless are distrustful, fearful and are often paranoid. They live daily in fear of everything. It leads to stress, tension and reflects and deteriorating spirituality. It is no wonder that God told Israel that he would give them a new spirit before he would give them a new heart. A new heart would be useless if the spirit was still the same.

Today, there is a need for a new spirit among God's people.

There are too many HARD HEARTED people who feel no compassion for anyone and are stubborn and stuck in their ways. It was a hard heart that made Pharaoh resist the command of God to free the slaves in Egypt.

The COLD HEARTED are unmerciful and unforgiving. It was a cold heart that prompted the King of Babylon to put the three Hebrew Boys in fiery furnace because they refused to follow an order to bow.

The BROKEN HEARTED are depressed, anxious and defeated. It was a broken heart that God tried to symbolize when he command the prophet Hosea to marry a wife of whoredom.

The STONE HEARTED are unresponsive and sullen. It was a stone heart that prompted King Ahab to ignore the prophet Elijah and bringing on three years of drought.

The MEAN HEARTED are cruel and dangerous. It was a mean heart that prompted Herod to destroy all children under two years old when he learned of the birth of the Messiah. All of these represent bad spirits. Worry, Anxiety, Hatred and Anger are bad spirits that impact our spiritual state, promote stress and have a negative impact on our attitudes. Before we are deemed worthy transplant recipients, we must rid ourselves of bid spirits. It will do us no good to have a new heart if it too will be destroyed by the same bad spirits. King David had heart trouble. It wasn't heart disease but it was heart trouble none he less because he was in love with another man's wife. He couldn't straightened things out with God until he first acquired the right spirit. That's why in Psalm 51:10 "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." The right spirit was essential to the clean heart. It was true for David then and it remains true for believers today as well. When we get angry with our family members, club members, church friends and co-workers that bad spirit sends our blood pressure soaring. The answer today is the same as it was in biblical times. We need a new spirit among us. The new spirit is a determination to improve our physical health by working to control bad health habits. The new spirit must also push us to work to improve our spiritual health by adopting new attitudes and spiritual growth.

Heart Transplant

If the nation is to be saved, there must be a new spirit among us. It must be a spirit that is dedicated to obeying the word of God. Without a doubt what the world needs today is a spiritual heart transplant. We need to present to God a clean heart. It must be a believing heart. It must be a confessing heart. Psalm 14:1 says "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God." The fool needs a heart transplant. I hear Romans 10:9-10 "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Those with impure motives and secret agendas cannot come before God. The impure need a heart transplant. I hear Matthew 5:8 saying "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."

The evil and unrighteous of the world need a heart transplant. Mat 12:34-35 "...for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things.

Those who are troubled by the concerns and cares of this world need a heart transplant. I hear John 14:1-2 saying "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you."

When we get a heart transplant and new spirituality we trade our old heart filled with:

—Rebellion and get new heart of obedience. I hear the song writer declaring "Trust and obey for there's no other way to be happy in Jesus but to trust and obey!"

—Insecurity and get a new heart of assurance. Along with that comes a new song: "Blessed Assurance. Jesus is mine. Oh what a foretaste of glory divine" —Sinfulness and get a new heart of repentance. Then we'll sing. "I was sinking deep in sin. Far from the peaceful shore. Deeply stained within. Then the master of the sea heard my despairing cry. From the waters lifted me now safe am I.

—Defiant heart with a submissive spirit. "Have thine own way Lord, Have thine own way. Thou are the potter I am the clay" —Apologetic spirit with a willing heart.

"If the Lord needs somebody, here am I send me!"

Today the world needs a transplant. However no transplant can occur unless there is a suitable donor. The donor has to give up his life for you to receive a new heart. When we are waiting for a transplant we have to wait until there is a person with similar physical characteristics who dies and donates his heart.

It may take weeks or years. Sometimes our match never comes!

But I know somebody who is willing to be a donor, for I heard him say "no greater love than this, that a man will lay down his life for a friend"

His name is Jesus! He died out on Calvary!

Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead offer a brand new life to any who would accept!

Do you need a heart transplant! Call on Jesus!

He'll make everything all right!

HIStory

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "Having therefore obtaied help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saing none other things than those wich the prophets and Moses did say should come: That Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should shew light unto the people, and to the Gentiles. Acts 26:22-23

Introduction

How well do you like history? There are some of us that enjoy studying history. Others hate the very thought of history. At first glance history brings to mind a few less than exciting classes we had in school in which we were forced to memorize dates, names and deeds of people that have long since left this earth. For some, history is an unpleasant memory. It has a way of dragging up the forgotten past in such a peculiar manner that it stirs the emotions to hatred or nostaglia. To any student not inclined to appreciate history, the thought of an entire month focused on such an obscure aspect of history such as Black History is even more troublesome. Even in Black History month, most people aren't very fond of history

One of the great truths of our times is this: "Those who do not learn from the mistakes of the past are doomed to repeat them."

Consider the frogs in the pond who were captivated by a sight they saw on the other side of the pond. It seemed that there was a funny shaped, screened box that was sitting by the bank. It drew attention because the oddly shaped box was filled with biggest juiciest flies any of them had ever seen. After a lengthy discussion they decided that it would be a great thing if they would simply go over to the box and catch themselves some juicy flies that were sitting there waiting to be taken.

Before they moved however, the old Toad Frog said "I wouldn't do that if I were you. The sign don't mean what it say!" They argued with old toad and pointed to the sign above the box that read "Fresh Free Flies for Frogs!" Even though they were told how hundreds of frogs hopped into that box and never jump out the young toads wanted to try it anyway. The lure was too appealing. About 12 of the young frogs hopped into the box only to discover that the sign above the box slapped down and revealed another sign on its back that read "Fresh Fly fed froglegs 50c a dozen. The old frog said "He wouldn't learn from the past and jumped too fast and ended in the frying pan. But the smart old frog sits on a log and catches all the flies he can."

What is history? The latest Micheal Jackson album gives us a hint. It is entitled "HIStory. That's about as simple a definition that can be given for history—HIStory. For Jackson, the CD represents a collection of his greatest songs, especially those that refect his views about life and love. We too, have a story. HIStory is your life's experience. Herstory is her life's expriences. When we study history we study the stories of indivuals, nations and ideas that have proven themselve pivotal in the shaping of the world as we know it today. To study history is to study somebody's story. That's it plain and simple.

For African-American Christians Black history begins first in their own homes. It begins with the story of parents whose personal history is clear and understood by all children. It continue even with children who fill in the pages of their own history book as they record the history of their own lives.

As Christians, we are aware that Christ has commanded each of us to go into the entire world and tell HIStory. We are reminded as retell the grand old story that we are never alone because he promised to be with us always, even unto end of the earth.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he testifies before King Agrippa about the nature of his faith in Christ.

The Apostle Paul was perhaps the most famous of the converts to Christianity. He was often jailed and persecuted for his belief in Christ. Ironically, while he was one of the most prominent proponents of the face, there was a point in his life in which he was also one of its strongest enemies.

Chapters 25 and 26 of Acts give a picture of Paul standing before two important government leaders telling the story of his faith. In chapter 25 he stands before Festus. In Chapter 26 he is standing before Agrippa.

In the first 22 verses of the 26th chapter he gives his own personal testimony.

In verses 4-11 he spells how he was a Pharisee, a leader of the Jewish faith and dedicated to the destruction of the Christian movement, believing it to be a cult. He believed Christ wasdead. He believed those he continued to speak and teach that he was alive were a danger to the Jewish faith. As a young rabbi he worked hard to persecute every Christian he came in contact with, jailing them and persecuting them.

However in verse12-13 he points to a deciding moment in his life when he came face to face with the truth. This is where he "saw a light." In verses 14-18 he noted that he heard the voice of Jesus speaking to him challenging him to change is direction in life. In verses 19-21 he told how he decided to obey the voice of God.

In our text verses Paul tells how he comitted hislife to telling the good news of Jesus Christ to the small and the great everywhere he went.

While Paul told his own story, it was only in relationship to HIStoy that his own story had meaning. His life was comitted to telling the Christian story wherever he went.

My Story

Like Paul, each of us has a personal story, a personal history. In reality the quest to know history is to first know oneself. Philospher's and poets over the centuries have urged us to be truthful with ourselves. The quote "To thine ownself be true" lets us know the importance of knowing our own capacity, motives and objectives and remaining loyal to them.

What's your story? Generally, most of us can testify like Paul. We can tell of a time we lived without a strong faith in Christ. This is a time when we had the "Budweiser" philosophy of life. "You only go through life once so you'd better grab all the gusto you can." During this period of our lives we prayed little, read our bibles less, and attended church seasonally or on rare occasions. During this phase of our lives we simply removed ourselves from the things of God.We were not interested.

Many Christians have had a Damascus Road experience. While it may not have been as dramatic as Paul's deciding moment, most believers can pinpoint a year or month, some even a day that they decided to make Jesus the choice of their lives. This is what Howard Thurman describes as a deciding moment. Every Christian should share the story of their personal deciding moment with others. Our history as Christians begins at the moment of our birth in Christ. Certainly the scriptures teach that if any man be in Christ "he is a new creature, old things are passed away."

As we testify and witness our testimony is heightened by our willingness to face the truth about our past. Paul told Agrippa "I was a pharisee." He acknowledged his aggressive fight against the church and the error of his ways. We cannot fully tell the story of our own experience in Christ without full recognition of the experience. We cannot fully appreciate ones testimony about seeing the light, until we know the depths of darkness that the individual has experienced.

Many of us are protective of our personal story. We have rearranged the events of our past to fit what we are today. Unfortunately, each time we try to do that somone comes a long who knows our story. Each time we tell our story and leave our certain chapters, there are those who watch carefully to see if we tell it all or whether we hide those embarrasing expeiences. That's why Paul was careful to tell the whole story, because there is always someone who knows the parts left out.

As each Christian tells "my story" and sings "my song" the meaning is special, when we know the story that goes with the song. It's not unusual for a person who suffered in the cold of winter for many years of his life to come back later and start a blanket ministry for the homeless. It is not unusual for a woman who becamea prostitute at a young age to later open a halfway to counsel young fallen girls. We understand it when we know the story.

When we sing "my song" only those who know "my story" know why its "my song." That's why the song writer declares both the story and the song with the words "This is my story. This is my song. Praising my savior all the day long. "

Inclusive of "my story" is our story. It is the composite of our joint experiences in the faith. Our story, is the account of our captivity in the "Egypt" of slavery and our journey towards the promised land. Our story is one that shows a people who followed the lead of the great Moses figures of heritage. We have crossed the Jordan and the walls of Jericho are tumbling down, but there is still one more river to cross.

Our story is filled with pain and suffering, but its also filled with the joy. Our story reflects both the agony and the ecstasy! It is story of tragedy and triumph! It is the story of a people who felt the sting of the master's whip and have risen from depths of slavery to the pinnacles of American society. We are a people who have survived on chitlin's and greens, ham hocks and neck bones. We are a people who have slept on cotton sack mattresses, drew our water from wells and wallowed in the spit of racial discrimination only to arise singing "The Lord will make a way somehow." James Weldon Johnson described our story precisely in the second verse of Lift Every Voice and Sing when he wrote: "We have come over a way that with tears has been watered. We ave come, treading our path through the blood of the slaughtered. Out from the gloomy past, till now we stand at last where the white gleam of our bright star is cast."

HIStory

While all of us are familiar with "my story" which is personal and detailed, there is another story that all of us should know.

As we celebrate "our story" as a people and reflect upon the journey of our people from the dark past to the present, there is another story that all of us should know.

That story is the story of a man who came and gave of himself that all of our stories might be intertwined into one story that tells of the goodness of the Lord!

What is HIStory? HIStory is not Black. HIStory is not white. HIStory is for everyone!

Paul told Agrippa HIStory, pointing out how he had been the object of prophecy throughout the years.

Isaiah told us HIStory, telling us the details of his virgin birth and the tragic details of his crucifixion on the cross.

HIStory is the story of man who who was a physical therapist, but never opened a clinic. A man who who had been sitting by the well for 38 long years heard him say "Take Thy Bed and Walk!"

HIStory is the story of man who was an Optimologist, but never never had an office. A blind man came to him one day and testified: "I was blind, but now I see!"

HIStory is the story of a man who counseled the trouble hearted without a psychiatric degree. The woman at the well was counseled by him and she ran throughout the city shouting "come see a man!"

HIStory is the story of man who fed thousands but never owned a restuarant. One day 5,000 people came to hear him but found themselves feasting on delicacies derived from two fishes and five loaves of bread.

I don’t know about you, but I love to tell the story!
He died out on Calvary on rose on Sunday morning!
HIStory is my story!
Because he lives, I can see tomorrow!
Because of HIStory, my life has a new meaning!
Because of HIStory, my story will have a happy ending!
I ‘m looking forward to the end the story! When all of the saints of God will gather!
The story will end when we hear him say “well done!”
Well done!
Well done!

Climbing Out of the Box!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 25, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." Galatians 5:1

Introduction

Have you ever felt trapped? That's a time when it looks like all of your options have run out and you have little choice but to follow a route contrary to the way you want to go. There are many kinds of traps. Sometimes our enemies set traps for us and we are snared. Sometimes we stumble into traps that were set for others. Then there are times when we are the victims of our own traps. When we feel trapped we instantly look for ways to free ourselves. Sometimes we can't see a way out. That's when we feel "boxed in" or surrounded on all sides with no place to go.

For children, playing with large empty boxes is fun. A large empty box and a vivid imagination can go a long ways. With the right amount of imagination an empty box can be a house, with holes in the appropriate places for windows. A box can be a fort or a castle. A box can be a cave. Turned on its side without a bottom or a top, a box easily becomes an army tank. Boxes are fun for children. What makes them fun is that whenever a child gets tired of his house, cave or card board army tank he can simply climb out of the box and throw it away.

But what if you couldn't throw them away? What if you had to stay in the box all the time? It would be hard to play in the box. You couldn't go outside very easily if you had to stay in the box. You couldn't visit your friends. That box would become not a fort or a castle but a dungeon, a prison. You're like a slave in that box. You are not free to enjoy life.

We are trapped when we can't get out of the box!

African-American youth are faced with many challenges in life. Like youth of every generation before them they experiment with life's boxes. They are fun for a while. Often youth play games with funny hairstyles. Sometimes a weird looking fashion trend is fun. Even the language of the hood gets to be fun for a while. All of the different experiences that youth encounter are like empty boxes. They are often innocent diversions, like empty boxes! The wise youth is aware that empty boxes are just that, empty! The wise youth makes sure that they are never trapped inside their box. Whenever they can't get out, then their box becomes a prison. Then it's not fun anymore.

Christian youth are extremely sensitive to boxes. They know how easily the box that was a play thing suddenly becomes a snare. The young boy that saw an empty refrigerator and decided it was a good place to hide and play soon found that his "cool" hiding place became a death trap once the door had closed shut. So it is in life, there are many who find themselves totally consumed by their boxes, to the point that when its time to climb out, they are locked in forever!

As Christians, we have come to learn that Jesus came to give us freedom from those things that box us in and keep us from enjoying life fully! Christian youth study the word of God and let their lives be led by the Holy Spirit. Doing so helps them avoid being trapped or boxed in. The spirit of our Lord has set them free. Those whom the Lord has set free are free indeed!

Exposition

This text focuses on a one verse passage in which Paul encourages the Christians at Galatia to be firm in their new freedom in Christ.

The Galatian Christians were much like other new Christians of the time. They had formerly been followers of the Jewish faith. They were students of the Mosaic law and worked hard to observe its hundreds of rules. Many had difficulty understanding that as Christians they were no longer bound by the lengthy requirements of the Mosaic law.

In discussing the issue Paul used the words "liberty", "Freedom" and "bondage" which were strong ways to indicate the nature of their relationship to the Mosaic law. How could a religious association be described as bondage? Paul called it bondage because of the hundreds of meaningless rules it required the people to follow.

Under the law they were required to bring animals for sacrifice, if they wanted to be forgiven of sin. Then they had to be careful to bring the right one: lambs, goats, pigeons, rams, all had different purposes. None of them could have a spot a blemish. Religious feasts had to be observed on certain days and food prepared in a certain way. Relationships were governed by the Mosaic law. Clothing, food and even what kind of work could be performed on certain days was all dictated by the law. It was an all consuming law that left little room for individuality.

The Mosaic law became a part of the life of the people. It became so dominant that many people began to worship the law rather than God himself. Their goal in life was to reach in point when they could say they kept every rule in the law. Then they could boast that they were righteous and could point fingers at others who were not so well disciplined.

However, when some of the people became Christians they soon found that they were freed from the ceremonies and rituals of the law. When they met on Sundays to worship they noticed they did not need to bring an animal sacrifice. Their were no rules dictating every small detail of their lives, but instead they were being urged to live by direction of the Holy Spirit in all matters. That was like coming out of a dark cave and stepping into the light. It was a big difference.

One of the parts of the law that Christians had the most problems dealing with was circumcision. The Mosaic law required it! When Gentiles were brought into the faith they did not demand it. In Galatians 2:4 Paul refers to spys or nonbelievers who mixed in with Christians and raised criticisms about their practices. Trying to break their faith and make them return to the circumcision rules of the Mosaic law. Their purpose, said Paul was to set a trap for them and return them to religious bondage. Paul reminded them that when they were "children" in matters of religion they thought the law could save save them (Galatians 4:3). But in the "fulness of time" God sent his son to save them from their boxed in situation and adopt them into the family of God. In 4:9 however, he questions how some them seemed to have crawled back in the box of religious tradition. He asked "How turn ye again to weak and beggearly elements" trying to find salvation. They had once again trying to be saved by observing feasts and ceremonial days. They were once again resorting to the rituals of the Mosaic law to save them. They were crawling back into the lifestyle that had boxed them in the first place.

Despite the new freedoms, there were some who were stuck in their old ways. They were easily enticed to go back to some of the rituals and traditions they had observed from childhood. What made it even more enticing is that most of their neighbors and friends observed the old rules too. Paul constantly urged new Christians to "standfast" in their new faith.

That's why, in this text, he reminds them what they have been freed from and uses words like bondage and freedom to give them a sharp, comparative difference between what they once were and what they had become. They were once slaves to the ritual and ceremonies of the law. Now, following Christ, they are free to explore the faith fully.

The law boxed them in and restrained them, but Christ set them free! Paul urged them repeatedly not to be overtaken again and returned to bondage but to live freely in their new spirit of freedom!

Life In the Box

There are many youth today that are living in a box. The box represents the limits that have been placed upon us by society. The heights to which we aspire are governed by whether we can perceive of ourselves as free to soar or as slaves to medocrity.

What are box that negatively affect most young people? There are many but there are three that deserve note.

HATBOX: Head coverings are stored in hat boxes. Too many youth today have their heads in boxes. What kind of boxes? The little box called television has caused the downfall of many youth. Valuable study time and the time needed to think, dream and imagine is consumed watching an endless procession of sitcoms that range from Fresh Prince and Martin to the Red Shoe Diaries to MTV. Many grades are falling because youth have their heads in the box. Not to mention the little talking box called a radio, or the little ringing box called a telephone. Or that little box that sounds off in the middle of class, called a beeper!

It's important for youth to have their heads screwed on straight! If youth attend school every day but their heads are in the box, the teacher is teaching in vain. If youth are totally consumed with the affairs of one box or another then they will never be able to achieve. At some point they must crawl out of the box! That's why Hebrews 12:1 says ".... let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." We must get their heads out of the box and decide to take charge of their lives!

The message Paul gave the Galatians applies here too. Youth, who have been set free and had their heads adjusted with a positive mindset should not entangle themselves with anything that will chain them to the box again!

SHOEBOX: Shoes that we wear on our feet are stored in shoe boxes. Unfortunately too many youth can't get their feet walking in the right direction because they have adopted, not so much a shoebox mentality as they have a Reebox mentality.

The Reebox mentality is that to be successful you must have a brand name! Reebox, Adidas, Air Jordans and a plethora of other brand names are essential to many young people. For many it is important to have Reebox in the Shoebox! Many feel less of a person because the labels on their clothing cannot match the labels on the clothing of others.

Throughout their school years there are many youth who struggle to get the right kind of shoes on their feet. What's more important that the band of the shoe is which way the feet are walking. If the feet are always walking into trouble, slothfulness and low achieving activities, then the brand of the shoe is unimportant. Nothing makes that clearer than when a graduate steps across the stage wearing a pair of $20 Penny Loafers to recieve a $20,000 scholarship. It's clear then that it's not the shoe that's important but the direction of the feet that's important.

That's why Psalm 37:23 "The steps of a good man are ordered by the LORD: and he delighteth in his way." The Lord orders his steps and keeps his feet pointed in the right direction.

MATCHBOX: In comparison to other boxes, a matchbox is very small. Unfortunately too many youth have adopted a matchbox life expectations. Their vision for themselves is so small that they can stuff it into a matchbox with room to spare.

The first step to greatness is to envision greatness! Youth who can see themselves involved in successful lifestyles work hard to make the dream become a reality. Some athlethes can see themselves in the NFL or the NBA. Resultingly they work hard to make their vision become a reality. They don't do anything that might ruin their chances.

Suppose a player is good, but he can't see himself making the pros. All he ever sees is being a laborer. Does he push himself to the max or does he become satisfied.

A girl who can see herself as a college professor, businesswoman or highly placed professional, doesn't want to ruin her chances of making by doing something dumb "like knocking the boots with soldier who doesn't wear a helmet."

Matchbox expectations reflect what we think of ourselves they are not true pictures of who we really are. We may live in a cardbox but our expectations out of life don't have to fit into a matchbox. We may be poor, but we must not expect to be poor! We must expect more! We may live in the ghetto but our expectation should be to show the world that even the cardboard world of the homeless can produce great minds if given the chance!

When you share your dream of being a doctor, lawyer, teacher or some other pursuit don't be intimidated by those who want to keep your expectations in the matchbox. The matchbox is too small for your dreams! Think Big! Dream Big! Your relationship with Christ has given you the freedom to dream and to expect big things out of life. Jesus said in John 10:10 "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Not just there, but look at John 15:7 If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

You have been given the freedom to crawl out of the matchbox and expect to be great! Let no one ever dare to put you down again!

Free to Believe In Yourself

The great joy of the Christian life is that faith in God has made us free to believe in ourselves!

Faith in God releases us from the shackles of pessimism.
When in God the impossible becomes possible.

Those who have faith in God crawl out of the box of low achievements and low expectations and climb the mountain of opportunity!

Faith in God stirs an excitement in our souls. We motivated to aspire, climb and achieve!

When we climb out of the box we begin to:

—Stand up instead of sitting down; Go forward instead of backward!

—Take command of our lives instead of complaining about hardships!

—Act rather than react; Start in the right direction rather stopping in the wrong place!

—Dream the impossible Dream! Tackle the unbeatable foe!

Those who have climbed out of the box of sin and mediocrity have decided in their hearts "I won't turn back, no I won't turn back!"

They sing with the song writer: "I have decided to follow Jesus, no turning back!

Monkey on your back, Thorn in your side

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 3, 1996

SCRIPTURE:" For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me. And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me. 2 Corinthians" 12:8-9

Introduction

Have you ever wished that you could enjoy a single week without problems? That's a single week without breaking something, losing something, getting sick, being attacked, failure, disappointment or hardship! Does trouble seem to follow you wherever you go? If so then you know what it means to have a "monkey on your back." That's a popular phrase that means that there is something troubling you and disturbing you to the point that the normal flow of your activities is disrupted. Having a monkey on your back can be particularly troublesome, no matter what kind of monkey has attached itself to you. Another popular phrase is drawn from the bible, it refers to a "thorn in my side." It too refers to a troublesome presence. Whether it is a monkey on your back or thorn in your side, neither is a welcomed presence.

Dealing with thorns, to a great extent, is dependent upon attitudes. How we deal with the reality of the monkey on our backs determines our coping power. Consider two men who walked by a flower garden daily. They admired the beautiful roses as they blossomed. They were a joy to see. However, one of the men complained daily at what he thought was an injustice by God. "I don't see how God, in all of his wisdom, would put thorns among all of these roses!" He complained. He felt God had made a mistake. For years the second man only smiled, but never said anything.

Each spring the comments were the same. Why thorns among the roses. Finally the complaining friend watching the curious smile on his friend's face asked, "why is that each time I ask that question all you do is smile?" In a joyous response the friend said, "You complain that God put thorns among the roses, I see it the other way around. I'm glad that God saw fit to put a few roses among the thorns!" It could very well be that those who love God are sweet roses that have been placed in thorny situations to serve as examples for others stuck in the brier bush of life. With that in mind ever saved soul says to the monkey on his or her back: "Hold on for the ride brother, because with or without you I'm on my way!"

As Christians we rejoice that God has given us his presence every day. It helps us to cope with the misfortunes of life. It helps us to understand the setbacks, and thorns. The joy of knowing Christ helps us to deal with the monkey on our backs!

Exposition

This text finds Paul explaining his apostleship and the nature of his experience with Christ.

In both chapters 11 and 12 of 2 Corinthians, Paul explains the nature of his Apostolic calling, including the unique and sometimes conflicting ways in which he shared the experience. In the first six verses of chapter 12 he reveals his experience 14 years earlier in which he was taken to the "third heaven" in which he was in the very presence of God himself. While Paul says in verse two "I knew man" he is actually speaking of himself. He said he had been taken into paradise, which he called the "third heaven" and saw and heard things that too wonderful for mortal man to experience. The awe inspiring experience was so wonderful that he could have easily become lifted in pride because it was certainly an experience that no many people shared.

Paul knew he was apparently special in the eyesight of God. He was special because of the great work God had for him to do. Despite being special and important, God gave him an infirmity that had been with him for 14 years. There has been considerable debate as to the nature of the thorn in the flesh. Some believe that Paul had an eye disease that was an aftermath of his Damascus Road experience. The disease gave him an unsightly appearance. Others summize that he fell victim to seizures and was plagued by them. Others who focus on the thorn being characterized as a "Messenger of Satan" in verse seven. They contend that the thorn was not a physical ailment at all but was the fact that everywhere Paul went Satan's messengers caused disruption and trouble for him. These "messengers" were constantly on his trail.

The exact nature of the "thorn" is not detailed. What is known is that whether it was physical of spiritual, Paul was pleading for its removal. Whether it was physical or spiritual, it caused him considerable problem and he prayed not once but three times and yet it was not removed. The fact that Paul did not get the exact answer to his prayer as wished gives insight to the nature of prayer and answers from God. Hezekiah prayed to God had 15 years added to his life. David, a man after God's own heart, prayed to God that his son would not die, but he did not receive what he ask. Paul prayed to God three times that the thorn which troubled him would be removed but instead, it remained. Paul probably learned from this experience that there are three ways in which prayers are answered: "Yes","No" and "Wait a while!" The answers to all prayers is not always what we want, but are certainly what we need.

In retrospect Paul understood why his prayer request was not answered directly: "lest I should be exalted above measure." God left him with his "thorn in the flesh" to humble him. Paul had been in the presence of God. He had seen the beauties and wonders of paradise that no man should have seen. Such an experience could easily lift a person up in pride. After praying three times to have the "thorn" lifted, Paul decided that God had a greater reason for leaving it. That reason was to keep him humble."

In place of removing the thorn God gave him "grace" or a special favor from God. Grace helped Paul despite his infirmities. If they were physical, Grace helped him perform his tasks despite physical handicaps. If they were the presence of troubling experiences prompted by Satan's messengers, "Grace" helped him endure them. God's answer to Paul's prayer was "My grace is sufficient for thee!" With that explanation Paul concluded that he was stronger with the thorn that he would have been without it, because of extra "grace" that God gives him to compensate.

Reason for Monkeys and Thorns

If Paul's experience means anything to modern believers it should suggest to us that there is a reason for every thorn in your side and a purpose for every monkey on your back. The human response to difficulty is to work to remove it presence. Sometimes the human response is not God's response. Sometime the thorn has a purpose.

For Paul, the thorns served the purpose of keeping him humble, because he had much to boast about. For us they served the same purpose. A person with a decent education, financial security and a bright future could easily get the big head. The monkey on his back, brings him down to the real world. The thorn in his side returns him to the reality of his own mortality. Those who have a monkey on their back, never forget how human they are. Those who have a thorn in their side, always remember their own humanity.

Lest we get boastful about our new car, sometimes it breaks down and we find ourselves hitchhiking or calling cabs. Lest we get boastful about our excellent credit ad wallet filled with cards, sometimes we lose them or they are stolen and we find out how vulnerable we are.

Even sickness has a way of sensitizing us to human need. Other misfortunes work the same way. They serve the purpose of allowing us to know that "though one walks with his head in the clouds he is not one of the gods; his feet are still on the ground."

Those who have a monkey on their back are those who are troubled. Family problems don't seem to go away. Personal frustrations seem to mount. They disturb your sleep. The trouble your mind and soul.

Even the monkey that rides your back has a purpose!

What is our hope? If I live a Christian life and still have thorns in my side and monkeys on my back, what incentive is there for me to turn to God? This difference is in he end result. Those who have monkeys on their backs but turn away from God will still have the monkey but won't have the same result as the believer.

The believer has two assurances that give him hope in such instances. The first is the assurance believers are given from the word of God in Romans 8:28 that "all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Therefore, a believer knows that even though there is thorn in his flesh or a monkey on his back, the entire experience will work to his advantage as long as he continues to love God and keep his purposes in line with God's purposes. The person who does not love God may have a monkey on his back without the assurance that it's going to work out to his advantage.

The second reason that believers have hope in such circumstances is that God gives them an extra blessing to compensate for the difficulty. If God has allowed a thorn to be placed in your flesh or a monkey to ride your back for the purpose of achieving a greater spiritual goal, he will also give you extra considerations to make up for the difference. These extra "favors" are generally called "grace." We often see those who are enduring unbearable circumstances showing unusual poise. That's grace. We see strength displayed at times when conditions dictate weakness. That's grace.

We are able to go beyond simply surviving, but to accomplish and achieve excellence despite disappointments, set backs, thorns and monkeys on our back because of those extra favors from God...called grace!

No wonder the song writer declares: "Grace, God's grace! His grace is sufficient for me!" Another song writer put it this way: "Wonderful grace of Jesus, greater than all my sin. How shall my tongue describe it, where shall its praises begin? Taking away my burden, setting my spirit free, for the wonderful grace of Jesus reaches me!"

There is Grace for every Need

Finally we must consider what Paul said about his humbled circumstance. His original desire was for God to remove the thorn from his flesh and to take the monkey off his back. After making that request three times he concluded that God knew best what he was doing. In the place of removing the thorns, God gave Paul special gifts of strength, spiritual power, dynamic witness and peace in his soul. These gifts were so great they overpowered any weakness he might have incurred.

Two blind performers, Ray Charles and Stevie Wonder, were both given the opportunity to be given eye operations that would restore their sight. After living most or all of their lives in darkness both men turned down the chance to have sight. There were so many other benefits, sensitivities and graces that they enjoyed because of lack sight, that they feared they would lose them if they were able to see.

They wanted to keep the thorns!

That's why Paul writing in 1 Corinthians 1:27 said "God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty." God has decided to give special graces to those who are troubled by the thorns!

For every thorn, God has a grace!

Whenever there is a monkey riding your back, remember if stick with the Lord, he'll give you something to deal with monkeys in your life!

"I asked the Lord to get rid the monkeys on my back, but it seems as though you are going to be there for a while. But he's given me something to deal with you, so hold on monkey, it's going to be rough ride!"

God told Paul "My Grace is sufficient for thee"

If there is weakness, God's grace is sufficient to strengthen thee! I heard the song writer say: "Strong deliverer, Strong deliverer, be thou still my strength and shield!"

If there is emptiness, God's grace is sufficient to fill thee! A woman came to the well with an empty picture but she left filled with the waters of life, saying "come see a man" who told me all I've ever done!

If there is sadness, God' s grace is sufficient to bring you joy! I heard David declare "Restore unto me, the joy of my salvation!"

If there is an unattained goal, God's grace is sufficient to make it happen! "Seek ye first the kingdom of Heaven and his righteousness and all of these things shall be added unto you!"

If there is depression, God's grace is sufficient to motivate you! In a state of depression David decided "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth."

If thee is hunger, God's grace is sufficient is feed you! That's why the song writer wrote: "Bread of heaven, bread of heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

If there is doubt, God's grace is sufficient to assure you! "Blesses assurance, Jesus is mine. Oh what a foretaste of glory divine...this is my story. This is my song. Praising my savior all the day long!

If you are lost on the sea of life, God's grace is sufficient to save thee! "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore. Very deeply stained within, seeking to rise no more. But the master of the sea, heard my despairing cry. From the waters lifted me, now safe am I"

One evening, nearly 2000 years ago, God's grace made itself known!

He died out on Calvary!

He rose after three days and nights.

His truth is still ringing out "My grace!"

My grace!

My grace is sufficient for thee!

Where Is Thy God?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 10, 1996

SCRIPTURE:"As with a sword in my bones, mine enemies reproach me; while they say daily unto me, Where is thy God? Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God." Psalm 42:10-11

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when you felt you were struggling all alone? Believers are generally courageous! Believers have been known to stand against all odds, fight unbeatable foes and stand tall when others are shrink in fear? One reason for the great courage of believers is the assurance we all share that regardless of circumstances, the God we serve is standing with us. We stand boldly because we know we are not alone. We know the Lord "has our back." However, there are times when it appears that God has forsaken us and we are standing alone. The otherwise courageous believer begins to weaken before even the smallest challenge whenever he believes that he is standing alone. His strength and power is drawn from the knowledge that God is always present and on his side as long as he is right.

One of the greatest tragedies that could occur in life is to lose track of God! As the nation becomes less reverent in many respects, it becomes very clear that many have very little respect for or fear of God. We have lost him and can't seem to find him.

Consider two little boys who had caused plenty of trouble at the church. They broke things. They scribbled on the walls. They even drank out of the communion bottle. To say the least they were everyone's nightmare. Someone got the idea that if the boys could be brought to the church pastor in a counseling session maybe they would could be helped. The preacher dressed in his robe for the meeting. The older boy and his little brother sat in the study as the minister peered at them over the rim of his glasses and asked: "Son, where is God?" Neither of the boys answered. Then the minister asked again. "Son, where is God?" This time his voice raised and seemed to thunder. The boy shook in his seat. Then came a final "Where is God? The older boy, stricken with fear grabbed his little brother's hand and ran out of the study saying "Come on man, they have gone and lost God and they are trying to pin that on us too!" There are many today that have lost God. If that is true, who can we pin it on?

While God is never far away, there are many otherwise faithful followers that have lost track of him for just a moment.

As Christians, we should make every effort to stay close to God. Through prayer, worship, praise and service, we keep contact with him. He never loses sight of us, although we might lose sight of him.. Let us strive to keep him in our hearts and minds. Whenever we start to feel alone we should remember that our God is always near. He's only a prayer away!

Exposition

This text is extracted from a Psalm of David given to the sons of Korah to sing in worship.

David often reflected upon the goodness of God and wrote his divinely inspired reflections in songs or Psalms. Two sets of his psalms were given to the Sons of Korah, a special family of Levites that concentrated on the singing ministry. Although there is debate as to the particulars, generally Psalm 42-49; and 84-89 are viewed as being those given to the sons of Korah.

Korah, as you recall, led a faction that rebelled against Moses in the book of Numbers. All of his descendants except a small few were killed. These sons of Korah, despite the rebellious nature of their ancestors dedicated themselves to singing.

David gave them this 42nd psalm to set to music. It was written during a period of distress when he did not have access to the house of worship. Many believe that it was written during the persecution period when King Saul hunted him.

In this psalm he referred to how his soul longed to be in the house of God one more time. In verse 2 he spoke of thirsting for God and yearning after his presence. He continues that thought through verse 4 where he speaks fondly of times when he was able to be with the multitudes that worshipped.

While being separated from God and possibly hunted, his enemies constantly surrounded him with biting comments asking him "where is thy God." In verse 10 he noted that daily he was criticized by skeptics whose words were like a sword in his bones. They constantly asked, "Where is they god?"

You sang "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want!" Where is thy God?

You sang "I will lift up my eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help" Where is thy God?

You sang "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear?" Where is thy God?

David said the words of his critics surrounded him. His soul reached a low point. However in verse 11 he came to himself and became spiritually alive as he remembered the power of God.

He asked himself "why am I disquieted" or anxious or uneasy? Others may have questions about God's whereabouts and give up hope when circumstances are troublesome, but not the faithful. The faithful live in continuous hope, knowing that God is not far away.

He resolved that he should continue to hope and trust in the Lord who is the health of his countenance, or the reason for his upward climb in life. Despite the critics he would cling to God as the author and finisher of his faith.

Losing Sight of God!

In our fast paced times, it is easy to lose sight of God. Although he is never far away, we still lose sight of him if we break the associations that tie us close to him. Like the little boy who said the preacher had lost God, there are many who have actually misplaced their spirituality. The importance of God has diminished in many lives.

There was a time when the only stores that would be open on Sunday were those that dealt with necessities. Service providers such as utilities, law enforcement and hospitals were those expected to be opened, others closed. Today, malls and even hardware stores are opened on Sunday. Even bars want the right to be open on Sunday too. Have we lost God?

Decorum in the presence of God has diminished. Two generations ago, it would have been unthinkable to argue or use bad language on holy ground, but today language, actions and even fights occur in the very presence of God. Have we lost God?

Our schools at one time taught obedience to God. Now God is rarely mentioned. In many instances teaching about God is illegal. Have we lost God?

On a personal basis, many appear to have lost God? Those who grew up attending worship services regularly are seen only occasionally. Those were taught to pray at night seldom seem to have enough energy to do as they should. Though we know we should study the bible more than we do, we can't seem to find the time, or find our bible for that matter. Just as we struggle to find the simplest bible verse by scanning the table of contents of our bibles, many of us are finding it just as hard to find God! We search frantically through the yellow pages of life trying to find the secret of life. While we are searching, the world is asking, "Where is thy god?" Even the strongest believer can lose sight of God in the press of everyday experiences. Time runs short. Schedules get tight. Even those special moments that we reserved for study and reflection are often infringed upon by the concerns of the world. Even though God is near, we can't see him because there are so many things in the way.

When God gets out of sight, the enemy gets busy. Doubts are stirred. Questions are raised. Fears are intensified. Like David, we drop into a slump of low spirits and depression.

In his slump David said what he needed was to reposition himself where he could see the Lord. He wanted to hear the choir sing again! Their songs stirred his faith. He wanted to be in the midst of the multitude of worshippers again. Their faith revived his own! He wanted to hear the word of God again, hearing the word intensified his desire to live for God!

When we find the Lord Blessings are the result!

Deuteronomy 4:29 "But if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul."

Psa 34:10 ".. but they that seek the LORD shall not want any good thing."

When he started to feel like God had left him alone, David caught himself and said he would keep the faith for God is the source of his success.

When the darkness of his life situation prompted him to ask,"Where is God?" David remember that God is the joy of life. He arose from the pits of life to continue his journey with a steadfast hope!

As believers we are challenge to position ourselves where we can see God. As long as we can see him we know the victory will be ours!

Where Is Thy God?

Finally brothers and sisters, every believer should be reminded that God is always near and never leaves us alone, no matter how difficult situations may appear or how loud the skeptics taunt us, asking "Where is thy God?"

In difficult moments, those who want to detract from the faith seem to crawl out of the woodwork.

Look, she gives a tithe every month, but her car is broke down again! Where is thy god?

Look, he attends bible study and prayer meeting regularly, but they just rushed him to the hospital, "Where is thy god?"

Look, she worships and praises God with a mighty zeal, but they turned off their gas last week, "where is thy god?"

The believer is not immune to the attacks of Satan. However, the believer will not be defeated by Satan no matter how much he attacks. Paul wrote in Romans 8:35 "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?"

Satan will attack us but we must resolve that our faith will remain in tact. Paul's resolution was this: Romans 8:38-39 "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

When Satan attacks we know that God has not gone away, but instead is close by. He is close enough to respond to my every call! He's only a prayer away!

Three men of different faiths traveled on a journey. At points along the road they stopped to rest and to commune with their gods. One of the men pulled out a wooden cup of powder from his back pack and began to sing chants to it. He explained that the powder represented his god who would protect him along the way. He asked the second "Where is thy god?" The second man built a tiny altar and lit a flame on top.

He explained that his god lived in the fire and would shield him in his journey. The third man did nothing but simply bowed his head. They thought it strange that this man would not call upon his God, in the whole journey they never saw him.

Then one day a storm approached. The first man took out his wooden cup of powder to pray for protection but the wind blew the powder away. He ran to the second man who lit the flame on his tiny altar but the rains came and doused the flame. Finally they called on the third man, "friend, we are in trouble, where is thy god?" The third man answered " He's too big to fit in my back pack, but he's small enough to live in my heart!" As the third man prayed the lightning flashed and revealed a small dry cave on the mountainside. As the three men took cover the first man threw away his wooden cup saying "I will serve thy God, he blows with every wind!" The second put aside his tiny altar saying "I will serve thy God , he's in every rain drop that falls" They both bowed their heads and declared "thy God is a mighty God. A shelter in the time of storm!"

There are many today whose god has blown away with the winds of hard times. Many have seen their gods drenched in the waters of lost hope. The true believer knows God is everywhere!

One song writer declared: "I hear God in every robin that sings. I hear God in every church bell that rings. Billows may roll, storm clouds assail, my anchor holds, God doesn't fail. He's in control the captain of my soul. I hear God!"

We should draw strength from the example of others who have chosen to stand fast for the Lord despite difficult times.

When Daniel was thrown into the lion's den, the king asked, "is thy God able" to deliver thee. That was an important question because the events leading up to Daniel's arrest suggested that his God had forsaken him. As Daniel was lowered into the Den of hungry lions his critics probably asked "where is thy God." Daniel didn't have to respond because he knew the Lord was close by.

The Hebrew boys were faced with the fiery furnace! They resolved however that "my God is able"

However, every believer should be encouraged to know that regardless of the situation God is able!

He's able to:

-Take defeat and turn it into victory; Take hardtimes and turn them into the best of times; Take an empty barrel and keep it filled;

-Rebuild hope for the hopeless; Reduce mountains of frustration into molehills; Reshape tragedy into triumph; Remove our doubts and give us assurance

-Deliver us in times of difficulties and disaster!

-Strengthen us in times of trial and temptation!

-Sustain us in times of sickness and suffering !

-Inspire us in times of sorrow and separation!

-Lead us in times of frustration and fear!

He's able! Yes he's able!

Where is thy god? I saw him wounded and defeated hanging out on cross?

Where is thy god? I saw him with a crown of thorns on his head and nails in his hands!

Where is they god? I saw him buried in a borrowed tomb!

If you want to know where Jesus is, don't stop at Calvary! Don't stop at the borrowed grave!

If you want to know where Jesus is, look at the empty tomb, for he lives!

Can You See Jesus In The Dark?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 17, 1996

SCRIPTURE:"Shall thy wonders be known in the dark? and thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness? But unto thee have I cried, O LORD; and in the morning shall my prayer prevent thee. LORD, why castest thou off my soul? why hidest thou thy face from me? "Psalm 88:12-14 "And entered into a ship, and went over the sea toward Capernaum. And it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them. And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew. So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they see Jesus walking on the sea, and drawing nigh unto the ship: and they were afraid.But he saith unto them, It is I; be not afraid.Then they willingly received him into the ship: and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went." John 6:17-21

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when you found it difficult to remain faithful to God? When trouble arises in your personal life or family, have you found if difficult to sing the same song, walk the same walk or talk the same talk? Difficult times are dark days. They are moments when we are surrounded by the blackest night at worse and dense fog at best. Dark days are difficult days. They are days when we are trying to handle fierce family troubles and remain consistent to the faith at the same time. In such times, even the strongest of the faithful, find themselves grasping for breath as they prayerfully struggle to keep their heads above water.

When we travel through the occasion dark spots on the road of life it is important for every believer to keep focused on our God. He is a God of both the good spots and the bad spots. Consider the country church that had a revival scheduled in the middle of the storm season. They had invited a big city preacher to do the revival that year and he was coming South to the backwoods for the first time. On the first night that the evangelist was to preach storm clouds began to build in the sky. The preacher said to himself "if this storm continues to develop, the service may have to be delayed until the next night." When he arrived at the small country church there were cars everywhere and it was pitch dark outside. Not a street light of any kind could be seen for miles. The service was spirited. People were singing and praising the Lord with a mighty fervor. Even as they sang the lightning began to flash, the thunder rolled but the folks inside the church kept singing anyway. The preacher was amazed. Back home people would have been worried about the weather conditions. Just as the preacher rose to take his text, a lightning bolt flashed followed by a loud thunder clap. Suddenly the preacher found himself standing in the pulpit and a sea of blackness in front of him. A deacon pulled out a flashlight, stood behind the preacher and shined it on the bible! Patting the evangelist on the back he said, "Preach on preacher, we can see Jesus in the dark!" Even though the lights were out the people could hear the word of God, in the dark!

In a similar sense every believer needs to be able to see Jesus in the dark! We know such times are inevitable. Tough times will come, but when they come, we should remain focused to the point that despite the trouble, difficulty or frustration that we face, we can still see Jesus!

As Christians, we know God is everywhere all the time. Therefore when the storms of life rage we should not get too worried, he still walks amidst the storm gales and says "Be not afraid, it is I!" If we can see Jesus, despite the dark, we'll make it through the night!

Exposition

These passages of scripture characterize two responses of believers in the dark.

The 88th Psalm of David, is rarely read or referenced. While most of the Psalms are inspirational in nature, the 88th Psalm is solemn. It was written at time when David was at a spiritual low. He had suffered emotionally and possibly physically. He felt himself sinking in the sea of life. At best, he was struggling to keep his head above water.

This psalm presents the believer who is struggling to make it through the night but has lost hope, in the midst of the darkness, that God would deliver him. No where in this psalm does David indicate that he believes God will help him make through this dark period. It is only filled with expressions of difficulty for the troubles he faced. In verse 12 he asks the question, "shall thy wonders be known in the dark?"

He gives a continuous litany of dismay and hopelessness that recites his afflictions and difficulty. The 88th psalm is a striking contrast to the other Psalms. They express hope, joy and faith that God responds in a time of trouble. The other 149 psalms always strike a chord of hope that despite the darkness, God is able.

This psalm represents those occasional moments, when even strong believers find themselves distracted from the faith. In verse 15 David says he had been dealing with one affliction, trouble or another since his youth. Now he is distracted or unfocused. He wants to believe differently but can't. He wants to get back on track but finds it difficult.

It is described as the saddest of the psalms because it presents a picture of a strong believer who is down in the dumps and can't see his way out! It represents those times when normally strong believers are weak; when the highly visible become invisible; when the intensely active become inactive. It is a time when a believer is overcome by the dark!

John 6:17-21 also gives us a picture of believers toiling through the storm in the dark, but with a different outcome. In John 6 Jesus stayed on shore to pray and think. His disciples decided to row to the other side. As they were rowing, one of the sudden storms that was common to the area, broke out and tossed their ship.

The disciples were afraid. It was dark. The storm was raging and Jesus was not with them! Mark 6 tells this same episode but at verse 48 gives another insight when it notes that Jesus, while on the shore, saw them rowing against the storm. They did not see him. While the storm was yet raging, in the blackest of night, Jesus came to them walking on the water.

When the disciples saw Jesus they allowed him to enter the boat and suddenly they were on the other side. They were safely through the storm. They had made it safely through the night.

Unlike David in the 88th psalm, who could not see God in his darkness, in the midst of their darkness and storms they were able to see Jesus and made it to the other side!

Every believer will face sudden storms that may come upon them at the most inopportune times. Although momentarily we might become distracted, each should remember that while we are yet toiling help is on the way!

The Dark

One of the realities of life is that we rarely make it through any given period without experiencing some episodes of darkness. These are times when life's challenges intensify and normal responses seem inadequate. The Darkness represents those moments of disappointment in life and love in which we are overwhelmed by the expediency of the hour. It is these times that pose a challenge for us, for many are completely distracted when they occur and lose sight of everything that was once important to them.

How do we handle the darkness? It is a time when it is hard for us to see Jesus! Times are tough. Situations are burdensome. It's hard to see Jesus and know that he is there! Perhaps we should consider the manner of the visually challenged. Those who are blind are unable to see, yet the other senses seem to intensify to compensate for the loss of sight. Thus, those who live in darkness, by virtue of blindness, have keen senses of taste, smell, hearing and touch. By these, they are able to know where they are and what is going on around them.

While in the storm we may not be able to see Jesus! But every other sense we have should remind us that while we can't see him, he sees us! Every other sense we have should suggest to us and remind us that "help is on the way!"

SMELL: When we can't see Jesus we should be reminded that he is there by the smells in the air. Psalm 45:8 "All thy garments smell of myrrh..whereby they have made thee glad!" Everytime take breath we should be reminded that he is present. The fragrance of the rose and sweet smells of the seasons, remind us that he is on the throne. When we can't see him, we can smell his presence in the dark!

TASTE: Psalm 34:8 "O taste and see that the LORD is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him." Everytime we get a taste of the goodness of God we know that we have been blessed. Every bowl of greens! Every slab of ribs! Every skillet or corn bread just reminds us of the goodness of the Lord. Though it may be dark outside and the winds may be blowing we know that he is there!

HEAR: Every child of God hears and recognizes the voice of God. John 10:27-28 My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. The song writer said "he speaks and the sound of his voice is so sweet that the birds hush their singing.! When we listen for the voice of Jesus we'll share thoughts of the old hymn that says "I heard the voice of Jesus say, come unto me and rest. Lie down, lie down thy weary one, thy head upon my breast!"

FEEL: When it gets dark and we can't see Jesus, we should be able to feel his presence. Pastor John Montgomery of Baton Rouge, La. told the parable of the young college educated boy who came home to visit his father after graduation. He asked father how he could believe in a God that he could not see. The father gave a very simple answer, "I can feel him in my soul!" That wasn't sufficient for the youth because feelings were relative and changed from person to person. Nevertheless the father simply said "All I can tell you is, I feel him in my soul." Not long afterwards the son was involved in an automobile accident. He was injured internally. When the father came to visit, he asked the son how he was doing and the son said "Father, I'm hurting" The father looked at him and saw no visible signs of an accident and said "How do you know you're hurting, I don't see any hurt?" The son answered "I can feel it in my bones!" The father said "That's what I've been trying to tell you about the Lord, I can't see him, but I can feel him in my soul!"

We ought to be able to feel him in our hands!

Feel him in our feet!

Feel him him all over us!

Help Is On the Way!

Finally brothers and sisters we need to always consider that while we may not be able to see it coming, help is on the way!

David loss sight of the fact that God knows all of his children and watches every condition. He wrote a gloomy psalm because he gave up hope

However, the disciples found out that even though they were toiling against unbeatable odds, in the midst of the storms, help was on the way! They couldn't see Jesus but he was watching them!

When the way gets dark and dreary, we need to remember that he knows where we are and the extent of our need!

He knows exactly what we need and when!

No wonder the song writes: "We are our heavenly father's children and knows just how much we can bear. Just ask for strength and keep on toiling tho the tear drops fall. You have the joy of this assurance: the heavenly father will always answer prayer and he knows just how much you can bear!"

Another song writer said "While riding through the storm, I won't worry!"

While riding in the storm you may find difficulties, but even in the dark and in the storm we should not be afraid because God is able!

When it gets dark, our God is the light of the world!

When it seems like there is no way, our God is a way maker!

Have you reached a dark spot on the road? Are you toiling in the night!

Be of good cheer, help is on the way!

There has never been a:

-Burden that the Lord could not lighten; Problem that the Lord could not solve

-Difficulty that the Lord could not resolve; Loneliness that the Lord could not comfort

-Battle that the Lord could not fight; Weakness that the Lord could not strengthen -Question that the Lord could not answer; Situation that the Lord could not handle!

Jesus, the lily of the valley!

Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who rose early Sunday morning!

When the storms of life are raging!

Jesus will be by your side!

It Ain't Over Till It's Over!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 7, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "And all the people that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts, and returned. And all his acquaintance, and the women that followed him from Galilee, stood afar off, beholding these things." Luke 23:48-49; "He is not here, but is risen: remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee, Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again. Luke 24:6-7

Introduction

Have you ever left an activity or an event early, only to find out that you left before it was really over? An even worse feeling is when we find out that the part we missed was the good part! Nobody likes to miss the good part! Consider the the little girl who sat in front of her television watching a movie about the crucifixion. She watched as they tried Jesus before various courts, whipped him, and made him carry an old rugged cross. The little girl was glued to her seat intensely watching, before her eyes, a story that had been told to her so many times by her Sunday School teachers and pastor. As they nailed Jesus to the cross, tears rolled from her eyes. She felt sad as they took him down and buried him in the tomb. As the commercial break began her parents called from upstairs, "Evelyn, its time togo to bed!" The Little girl didn't move. The call came again but the little girl stubbornly sat with her eyes glued to the television set! Finally, she yelled back to her mother, "Just a minute mom, I don't want to miss the good part!"

Often, we leave an event or an activity early to avoid traffic or to make another appointment on time. When such an occasion comes we try to stay until it appears that we have entertained the climaxic moment and the conclusion is predictable. Often our favorite team is losing the game. The final minutes of the contest are approaching but it appears the outcome won't change. In our car radio we hear, the good part! Miraculoulsy our team comes from behind and wins! We left before the good part! Often we leave a movie early, after it appears that the outcome is obvious, only to learn that we left too early! It had a totally different and surprising conclusion. We missed the good part! Our hero was losing the boxing match in every round. His face was mawled and he appeared spent. We couldn't bear to watch any more and left before the match ended. We learned later that in the last round our hero rose up with a mighty gust of power and defeated his opponent. Again we missed the good part!

Those who stay to the end have learned one of life's most important lessons. "It ain't over, until its over!"

In our our quest for self improvement the saints of God remind the world that we may be knocked down on occasion, but don't count us out! "It ain't over until its over!"

As we reflect on the life and death of Christ we must always consider that the crucifixion is not the whole story. Those who stop there will "miss the good part!" The good part is that Christ arose from the dead. He is alive today! That's the good part!

Exposition

This passage of scripture considers the attitude of the crowd at the death of Christ.

The crowd that observed the crucifixion was mixed. In its midst were supporters of Christ, many of whom were silent in their love for him. It also included the high priests who demanded his death, soldiers and the curious. All had assembled to watch the events of the crucifixion as they unfolded.

Crucifixions themselves were not uncommon in Jerusalem. It was the manner of the Romans to punish criminals by crucifixion. The convicted were stripped naked; their bones were broken, and they were nailed and tied to crosses for but humiliation and punishment. The roads leading into a conquered Roman province were often lined with nameless corpses of those convicted of violating Roman laws. The sight of another crucifixion was not as unusual as one might think because executions were frequent and public events. Since no one had ever been known to survive a crucifixion, once the process had begun, the outcome was predictable. The man nailed to the cross was doomed to die. End of story.

This text notes that a large crowd assembled at the death of Jesus. They had seen it all before and anticipated the final results. The watched as Christ was stripped and carried his cross along the path to Golgotha. They observed as he fell under the weight of the cross. They watched as the nails were driven in his hands. They listened as he spoke his last recorded sayings from the cross.

There were many unusual things that were associated with this crucifixion. Verse 45 speaks of the sun being darkened to the point that there was darkness over the whole land from 12 noon until he died at 3 p.m. It was too long to be an eclispse or the result of an approaching bad storm. The veil of the temple was split into two pieces, despite its rugged nature and the fact that it was 60 feet high. The earth quaked. The wind blew.

When the spectacular events stopped, there was only silence. The limp body of a fallen leader was hanging on the cross!

It was at this point that this text notes that the crowd, having apparently seen all that there was to see began to disperse. Verse 48 simply says that they came to see the sight, they saw the things that were done, smote their breasts and "returned."

Even his disciples had moved far away, including the women that stood so close were now far away. They waited for a great miracle that would have prevented his death. As they started considering their own safety, they moved away from the cross, and watched from a distance.

All parties thought it was over! There had been thunder and lightning, but it was over! The veil of the temple was split, but it was over! The ground shook, but it was over! They "smote their breasts, and returned."

Those that left thought it was over! They left depressed, sad and disheartened! They were disappointed.

However, when we read Luke 24:6-7 we soon see that they left before the good part! They left before it was over! They counted Jesus out before the match had ended!

An angel asks the women who came to the tomb the important question: "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" The events that occured three days and three nights earlier were only a part of the story! But the rest of the story is the good part! "He is not here, but is risen."

The angel reminded them how Jesus had said that the events of the crucifixion had to be because they were a part of the game plan. He was destined to die. Just as he was destined to die he was also destined to rise again! That's the good part!

Counted Out

The lives of believers are filled with highs and lows, risings and fallings, successes and failures. The pendulum of fate swings back and forth at a steady pace. The course of our lives is as a story that is told. Every story has two principal forces: a protagonist, the force of good; and the antagonist,the force of evil. In every story, the protagonist has a plan and the antogonist has a plan. The quest of each to achieve his or her goal is called the plot or the action. The point in the story in which the antagonist and the protagonist clash is called the climax. It is followed by the conclusion. Many who watch a story unfold think its outcome is predictable after they see the climax and they reach a judgment before the story ends. They don't wait to see the final outcome!

A believer's quest to achieve a godly goal is never left unchallenged. Every dream that we have is met by an obstacle or challenge. Each time we try to take a step forward there is an unseen force working equally hard to push us backward. Whether the goal is secular or purely spiritual in nature there will be a challenge.

ENEMIES HAVE COUNTED US OUT! The first group of people at the crucifixion sight were the enemies and curiosity seekers. Many of us have experienced many troubling moments in life. We have been knocked down, set back, trampled upon, walked on, stomped, persecuted, violated, ridiculed and dogged. We have felt the bitter sting of the cutting remarks of our enemies. We have felt the foot of our oppressors on our necks. There are many who have been knocked down in every round of life. Lost jobs, broken marriages, failures, disappointments, death and lost opportunities have dealt very powerful punches that have floored even the strongest believers. Many, watching from a distance, believe because we have been floored so many times that the outcome is inevitable. Don't leave! It ain't over until its over!

The critics see struggling souls on thousands of crosses! They see men who have dropped out of school, failed in a pursuit or otherwise in a hopeless situation and they drop their heads saying it is all over! They see people living in poverty and trapped in the claws of ignorance and they respond "its all over!" They see drug dealers, prostitutes and hustlers and they say, "It's all over!" The message to the critics is simple, "don't count any saint out. It ain't over until its over!"

No wonder the song writer wrote, "Go ahead, drive the nails in my hand, laugh and me, but you will see, I'll rise again!"

BELIEVERS COUNTED THEMSELVES OUT: The second group is represented by those in verse 49, "all his acquaintances and the women that followed him him.." These were his disciples and other believers. Not only had the critics counted the Christian cause out, but they disassociated themselves from the cross! They counted themselves out! They had to be reminded of the words of Christ when he told them that he would be crucified but would rise again after three days and nights. They had to be reminded because they forgot.

It would be tragic if a believer who knows the word of God and believes in the power of God would do to himself what the world has already done by counting himself out! The reality is that believers expect to be hit by the experiences of life. We expect, on occasion to be knocked down. But each time we are knocked down we get back up! That's why Paul wrote in Romans 8:37 "Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." Therefore we are not intimidated when hit by principalities, powers, present conditions, a bad past or anything else.,nothing, "shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." John put it this way in 1 John 5:4 "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Romans 8:28 put it this way "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

Don't count yourself out, it ain't over until its over!

Rest of the Story!

It would be a mistake for anyone to assume that a person who is following the word of God can be defeated by the antagonisms of this world. Whenever a saint is down, be reminded he or she is down but not out!

The knockdown is not the end! Stick around and get the rest of the story! The set back is not the end of the story! Stick around and get the rest of the story! Don't miss the good part!

Joseph's life was destined to greatness! He saw himself doing something great for God. But his dream met head on with that of his brothers who were equally determined to stop him. They threw him in a pit. It appeared that it was over, until we look at the rest of the story! He rose to geatness unmatched in the whole kingdom.

Samson was a strong man who was brought down, chained and blinded. As he stood in chains without strenght or sight it appeared that it was over, until we look at the rest of the story! He repented for his sins and slew thousands of Philistines in his last and final act!

Job was a pitiful sight. Once strong, wealthy and healthy he was broken to a poor man with ill health. Job's story looked to be one of defeat, until we see the rest of the story! He was blessed more after his trial than he had been before! All of these went to prove that we should never count a saint of God out just because they are down! Stick around! Wait for the rest of the story! Remember it ain't over until its over!

Over 5,000 people found out that there is a blessing in waiting to get the rest of the story! When looked like there was nothing to eat, some may have left to go home. They were asked to stick around and get the rest of the story!

When the winds were blowing mightily the disciples thought their ship would sink, some believed it was all over! But the good good part was not in the storm, it was in the rest of the story! Jesus rose to rebuke the wind saying peace be still!

I don't know about you but I'm glad to know that we serve a God that guarantees us the victory according to his purpose!

We serve a God who can take:

-Defeat and turn it into victory; failure and turn it into success

-Misfortune and turn it into good fortune; Tragedy and turn it into opportunity

-Blunders and turn them into wonders; Doubts and wipe them out!

At Calvary the world thought the Savior was out, but they learned what we now know: "It ain't over until it's over!"

They crucified him, thinking it was over!

They buried him, thinking it was over!

But Early Sunday morning they learned the truth: "It ain't over until it's over!"

Is That On The Test?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 28, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "The young man saith unto him, All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet? Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me." Matthew 19:20-21

Introduction

Have you ever studied hard for an exam only to find out that what you studied wasn't on the test? This season of the year is the most stressful for students. There are batteries of required tests that are administered in schools. Some tests attempt to measure the effectiveness of the school system. If students score well the system and its professional staff are praised for excellence. If students don't score well effectiveness of the system is in question. Everyone has become so test conscious in modern times that many teachers have begun to alter their whole plan of instruction to fit the test. The assumption seems to be: "I will judged by how my students perform on the test. To insure that I do well, I will what I teach to only those skills that will be measured on the test." If it's not on the test, it probably won't be taught. It isn't long before students get the message and respond accordingly. They are gradually losing interest in learning information for life, but have resigned themselves to learning what is necessary to pass the test.

Possessing advanced information about test contents has its advantages. Those who know in advance what will be on a test can limit their study to include only those skills that will actually be measured on the test. If a student knows exactly what is going to be on a test his chances of scoring high are greater because the chances of focusing his study in the wrong area are limited. So, many teachers have "reviews" in which test information is underscored. Sometimes actual test information is given. Armed with that knowledge, many students find little reason to study continuously because the information they need to quickly to pass an exam will always be given in the review. Others take an even shorter route, they steal the test information. Those who don't steal the information directly often attempt to find someone who has seen the test and give them information about its contents. Self study of the whole body of information presented is the long way around. It will require learning information that will not be tested, which is considered a waste of time. "If it's not going to be on the test, why bother?" seems to be the attitude.

Unfortunately, the "Is it on the test" attitude is often reflected in other areas of life. We are often frustrated when we encounter co-workers and associates who only do what is required, nothing more and nothing less. Their school work or extra-curricular activities reflect minimum achievement rather than the maximum. Like the cartoon family the "Simpsons" they enjoy being underachievers and reject the notion of doing anything that is not required.

The idea of learning the short route to success has become so prevalent today that there are even people who want to know what they can do to make it to heaven, but only enough to pass the test. Sometimes we hear their comments: "I'm not worried about a mansion or a well postured place, I just want to get me a seat somewhere in the kingdom." That attitude suggests someone wants to do just enough to pass the test.

As Christians, we know that there are no grades of salvation. We are either saved or we are lost. It's pass or fail. There is nothing in between. The test contents are simple: We must repent, believe and then act on our beliefs. The measure of our salvation is in our repentance and belief. The measure of our reward is the quality of our service as we act on our beliefs.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he responds to a young man seeking entry into the kingdom of heaven.

Jesus had been teaching about the kingdom of heaven to all who would hear him. A certain rich young ruler was fascinated with what he was teaching and wanted to know the requirements to be a part of the new kingdom Jesus spoke about.

The Jewish people were reared on the principles of the Mosaic law. With the 10 commandments as a basis, they spent their entire lives learning its requirements and performing them to the letter. It was the supreme test of righteousness. Those who carried out the teachings of the Torah passed. They were considered righteous. They understood every item that was required of them and carried them out to the letter.

The teachings of the Torah represented the minimum requirements for righteous living. As such the people strived to meet the minimum requirement. They paid close attention to the details of the law. They did what it said, but no more! They gave a tenth, but no more. They honored the Sabbath, but sanctified themselves on no other day. They refrained from adulterous acts, but they thought about them constantly. In short, the maintained a strict interpretation of the law, which was just enough for them to make a passing grade and be considered righteous.

When the young ruler heard about the kingdom of heaven he inquired of Jesus about the requirements. What will be on the final test to determine entry into the kingdom, seemed to be the question. He requested that Jesus would provide him with the answers. His question asked "What lack I yet?" He seemed to ask: "Tell me, what will be on the final test? What will you be looking for to determine whether a person is admitted to or rejected from the kingdom of heaven?"

Jesus began with the central components of the Mosaic law, the commandments of God. As he listed each the young man was encouraged because he had carried out each of these items from his childhood. He felt worthy to enter into the kingdom of heaven because it appeared from his advance peek at the test that he would pass with flying colors.

However, Jesus posed a final requirement which wasn't in the law. It would require the young ruler to do more than simply comply with the minimum requirements of the law. The final test would involve his total commitment to the cause. Not what he had memorized or some vague minimum passing requirement, but total commitment. Jesus said those who want to enter into the kingdom of heaven must deny themselves, take up crosses and follow him.

The mention of selling his possessions was difficult for the rich young ruler because he owned much. Even more difficult was the idea of taking up a cross. In modern times, taking up a cross means making a decision to follow Christ. In biblical times those who carried a cross were on their way to a crucifixion. Taking up a cross meant dying. Getting into the kingdom of heaven meant assuming an attitude that one is willing to endure death to acquire access into the kingdom of heaven. When the young ruler heard that, he left. His possessions were great and he was unwilling to part with neither his possessions or his life in pursuit of the kingdom.

He saw what would be on the test and realized that it was comprehensive in nature. There were no quick answers to memorize. His life's commitment would be judged. Seeing that the rich young man left. His soul was unsaved.

What Will Be On The Test?

As youth prepare for life and beyond, many may find themselves in the position of the young man in this text. The questions are universal. What will be on the final exam? What kind of test will it be?

What kind of test will life give you? It won't be a simple as a true and false question where you have a 50 percent chance of success by simply guessing the right answers. Neither does life give us a predetermined path that's already worked out for us if we can just fill in the blanks with the right answers. If we could match our skills with opportunities life would be great and success would be the final out come. The kind of test that life gives each person is comprehensive. It involves the full range of experiences from birth to the present moment, involving information, orientation, and inclination.

INFORMATION: Life will test your store of information. Youth should attempt to learn anything you can about everything you can. Information and the lack of it, is often the determining factor in success or familiar in the course of life. Information involves scholarship, advance training, and preparation in the theory and practical applications of your professions. Youth are encouraged to become information sponges. Soak up, learn and digest all that is available in school. Read books, magazines and newspapers. Watch television programs that challenge your brain. Soak up information. Study the lives of successful people. Learn from them. Emulate their best habits while avoiding their mistakes. The more you know the more valuable you become. Life skips over those who simply learned enough to get by. Life tolerates mediocrity, but it rewards excellence!

ORIENTATION: Life will test your orientation and direction. As youth prepare to stand on their own it is important to have their direction in life set otherwise they will become disoriented and will move around in circles, making very little progress despite intense activity. Life's challenges will pull them in many directions. Youth are tempted to embrace a variety of beliefs and follow and plethora of ideas. They should acquire a life compass that will always point them in the right direction, allowing them to measure whether they are on or off course. The compass they use should be able to point to truth. Those who go through life without the proper orientation usually fail in the quest for success.

INCLINATION: Life will test your inclinations or your purpose. Our inclination affects our attitude. Our attitude reflects what we consider to be our purpose. Which direction we take in life is usually predicated on what we perceive to be our purpose in life. If we believe our lives to have a clear purpose we are less likely to be sidetracked. Our lives are ordered according to that purpose and we are focused in life walk. Life will challenge our self definition. It will present alternatives but those who keep their eyes focused will realize the fullness of the power of God in their lives.

There is no way to cram for life's test. Some try to make it through on cheat sheets, faking knowledge, padding resume's and claiming educational training they never had. There is no way to get an advance peek into life's test because each test is individualized. Each person has a different test than the other. But every test will involve information, orientation and inclination.

The Spiritual Test

While life will pose many tests for those who travel its highways and byways, there is another test that each person must consider. That test considers a persons relationship to God.

What's on this test? Is it true and False? Is it matching? Can we just fill in the blanks and make it in? Can we fake it? Can will do just enough to get by?

Malachi framed a true and false test. He asked in Malachi 3:8 "Will a man rob God?"

Elijah framed a matching test. He challenged the prophets of Baal atop Mt. Carmel. He told the people if Baal be God follow him but if God be God then follow him.

The Psalmist gave us an open book test. He challenged us to study the word of God. Psalm 119:105 "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

David gave us an oral exam. It was not written on paper but in our spoken words and secret thoughts. Psa 19:14 Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O LORD, my strength, and my redeemer.

Job received a physical endurance test. His body broke out in boils and sores yet he declared "yea though he slay me, yet will I serve him!"

Naaman received a practical Exam. He wasn't asked to write anything, say anything, or study anything. He was asked to demonstrate his faith in God by going down to the muddy waters and dunking himself seven times! Life will challenge us with many practical exams to test whether we are willing to do what we talk about!

Sometimes there are pop tests. Jesus was faced with a three question pop test in the wilderness. The person giving the test was Satan who challenged him to worship evil rather than God.

John 3:16 gives us a fill in the blank test. "For God so loved the world that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." Whosoever is a blank space that is filled by whomever chooses to believe in God.

Passing the test means we can meet all of the conditions.

2000 years ago when the universe was looking for savior the question must have been asked: "Who can pass the test to be a savior?"

A savior must pass the incarnation test. That test was passed in Bethlehem when a virgin gave birth to a little boy and called his name Jesus!

A savior must pass the life test? That test was passed in the three year ministry where the glory of God was revealed.

A savior must pass the death test? He must be willing to die as a sacrificial lamb to save his people. That test was pass when Jesus took up an old rugged cross and went to Calvary!

A savior must pass resurrection test? That test was passed Early Sunday morning when he rose from the grave!

I'm glad that Jesus passed the test!

I'm glad that he is my friend and my guide!

If you want the rewards of the kingdom, Follow Jesus! He'll never let you down!

Sinking In The Sea Of Life

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 5, 1977

SCRIPTURE: "And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, they were troubled, saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear. But straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid. And Peter answered him and said, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water. And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus. But when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me. And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?And when they were come into the ship, the wind ceased." Matthew 14:26-32

Introduction

Have you ever felt that you were involved in something that was over your head? It's over your head whenever you begin to feel yourself drowning in the circumstances that have evolved as a result of your involvement. Sometimes its a family concern. The welfare of a child or a spouse can often overwhelm us. Sometimes it is a business concern that overwhelms us. Especially those times that our expenses exceed our income and the profitability of the experience is diminished. Sometimes we are overwhelmed by acts of nature: floods, storms, and other natural disasters. They leave us with a sense of helplessness as we find ourselves unable to cope with the awesome power of nature's rage. Then there are times when our feeling of helplessness does not come from external sources but comes from deep within us. Those are the times when we feel like we are out on the sea of life sinking ..going down for the last time!

Sometimes we are overwhelmed by our fears. Often our fears are unfounded but at the time they occur they are real. A newspaper column years ago by Lydel Sims tells the fearful experience of Mrs. Wilma Sullivan, a widow who lives alone in Portageville, Missouri.

"You just won't believe what happened to her the other night when she was sleeping in her quiet house on a quiet street among quiet and friendly neighbors. She had gone to bed about 11:30...Not that she had worried unduly about her personal safety, but the doors were locked tight and nobody could have opened a window even if they had tried. She was sure of that.

"She picked up a novel...and settled down to read for a while. She grew sleepy. She put down the novel, turned off the light and settled down to sleep.

"As best she could reconstruct the night's events later, she must have fallen into a deep, relaxed sleep. Then about 2 or 3 a.m. she came up ever so gradually to the border between sleep and waking. She moved, put her arms above her head and dozed off again. All was still quiet, peaceful and relaxed. She had no fearful apprehensions, no premonitions, no worries.

"People who sometimes sleep with their arms above their heads will understand what happened next. It was a minor matter. Her left arm simply grew tired of the position. She was dimly aware of the discomfort. It continued. Still dozing, she tried to lower her arm. It wouldn't come down.

"Then, she says, she became aware of a warm, firm hand holding her arm tightly. She woke up in a hurry—and in a panic. She struggled in the dark to free her hand, but the strange hand wouldn't turn loose. The harder she struggled, the tighter the grasp grew. She was struck by how warm that hand was, and how firmly it held her. Frantically, she tried harder to get loose. Then something dawned on her. It was her own right hand doing the holding.

"Actually, it almost turned out badly after all. She nearly fell out of bed laughing. But she didn't. She finally managed to pry her right hand loose from her left, and laughed a while, and then fell back to sleep for the rest of the night, and no harm was done. And she has figured the whole thing. It was simply a case of the left hand not knowing what the right hand was doing."

Sometimes our fears get the best of us. Sometimes those fears cause us to sink in the sea of life!

There comes a time in each of our lives when our bold walk across the waters of adversity seems to sink in doubt. It's for those moments that we should remember Peter and his walk on water and remember what caused him to sink: "He took his eyes off Jesus."

As Christians we know the importance of keeping our eyes on Jesus. As we meander the seas of life we will survive storms and waves, if we keep our eyes on him.

Exposition

This text focuses on an episode in the life of Christ when he illustrated the power of faith in God even involving the forces of nature.

The occasion of this text was immediate following a great sermon Jesus had preached during which he fed 5,000 people with a miraculous act that provided enough food for the masses and left 12 baskets full extra. After sending the crowd away, Jesus charged his disciples to meet him on the opposite side of the lake. He stayed behind to pray.

While on the lake a storm broke out. It was an unusually powerful storm. The disciples were fishermen by trade. They had experienced many such storms. They were strong men, but when the storm showed no signs of letting up, it got the better of them. They feared for their very lives. Then across the water they saw Jesus. The disciples failed to recognize Christ. One of them cried out, "It is a ghost!" Jesus spoke words of comfort to his fearful disciples, “Take heart, it is I, do not be afraid.” Peter, the bold one among the disciples called out to Christ to give him permission to meet him walking on the water and Jesus responded “Come!” Without thinking. Without considering the impossibility of the act, Peter jumped into the water and began to walk to meet Christ.

It wasn’t long however, that he became amazed at what he was doing. He looked down and considered how impossible it was and immediately he began to sink. He was only saved when he cried out to Jesus “Lord save me.”

He stepped out, began to sank and was lifted by the power of Christ.

It’s Safe In The Boat

There are many today who will never sink in the sea! They won’t sink because they won’t venture out of the boat. The other disciples that were with Peter were all in the boat and they were all afraid. None of them were ever able to tell the same story as Peter. They would never be able to tell how they stepped out on faith in Christ and for a very short time “walked on water!”

There are many today who are afraid of the storm and they are clinging to the boat instead of stepping out on faith!

Many opportunities that life presents often require the faithful to step out on faith. Faith must be demonstrated. The best time for it to be demonstrated is during the storm. Our first inclination is to hold on to the boat. However, in the storm, when things are tough, Jesus bids us to step out on faith.

When the climate for business opportunity seems to be at its best, Jesus says “Come!”

When the storm of family trouble seems at its peak, Jesus says “Come!”

When the vicious stings of animosity bite at us, Jesus says “Come!”

When the waves of sickness and personal troubles seem to overwhelm us, still the voice of Jesus says, “Come!”

Even Strong Faith Has Some Fear

Even the strongest faith exhibits a small element of fear. Peter is often recognized for his great faith. It was immense. But it’s also important to note that his faith was demonstrated in the midst of fear. All around him there was fear. There was fear of the storm. There was the fear of imminent danger and death. There was fear of growing troubles. Peter’s act of faith in stepping out of the boat was demonstrated within the context of fear.

It is a normal response for anyone to be afraid of unknown circumstances or situations that may be beyond his control. It is normal for a person facing a crucial medical procedure to be afraid. It is normal for a person facing financial troubles to be afraid. It is normal for person about to confront an enemy to be anxious.

Peter’s actions show us that even in fear, we can act on faith and can do the impossible as long as we keep our eyes on Jesus, rather than focus on the situation.

Sometimes the length of a difficulty gives birth to conquered fears. These are the times when despite our fears we have stepped out on faith. After a while, however, we find ourselves sinking. Lengthy sicknesses or other troubling circumstances have their impact on us. We worry when our troubling circumstance continues, just as Peter's first steps were courageous, we are often courageous when we begin. Likewise, the longer Peter walked on the water the more doubtful he became and then he began to sink. It is the same with us. Often long trials bring out our fears and we, like Peter, begin to sink.

Keep our Eyes On Jesus

If there is one lesson that Peter's walk on the water teaches us is that we must keep our eyes focused on Jesus.

Even when the storm of life is raging we must keep our eyes focused on Jesus!

A certain church in Shanghai, China was closed by the communist during the late 1960's. It was a time of great suffering and oppression for Christians. Pastors and laity were exiled and sentenced to hard labor. Christians were severely punished for practicing their faith. The old church was closed and used as a school. A large cross that once hung on the wall was taken down and placed in the floor and covered over with cement. The communists felt that if the cross was covered with cement it eventually be forgotten by the people. Many years later the old school was returned to a church and the people who rejoiced. When asked why they came into the building each day and stared at a spot on the ground and smiled, they said "the communist buried the cross under cement. We couldn't see it, but we knew it was there and kept our hearts focused on the cross until our lives were resurrected again!"

When times get tough and its hard to see your way because of the storm, keep your eyes on Jesus!

When the waves of life seem to sweep you away, call on Jesus!

Despite the storms of life Jesus is able to take our:

--Disappointments and turn them into renewed joy!

--Failures and turn them into successes!

--Setbacks and turn them into strides forward!

--Heartaches and turn them into waves of happiness!

No wonder the song writer wrote: "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore. Very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more. But the master of the sea heard my despairing cry, from the waters lifted me now safe am I"

Love lifted me!

Love lifted me!

When nothing else could help...Love Lifted me!

Birth Marks

SCRIPTURE: "And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads: And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name. Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred threescore and six. Revelation 13:16-18; And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Rev. 7:14

Introduction

Has anyone ever left their mark on you? Generally a person leaves their mark on you when their life has made such a great impression on you that it influences your direction in life. Often great decisions in life have been made as the result of a person who "made a mark" on you. Sometime entire lives are changed by the influence of one person. Nearly everyone has a favorite teacher whose philosophy of life left a mark on them, for better or worse. Sometimes it is a famous person that leaves a mark. Sometimes it is an event that marks us indelibly. Most often we are marked by parents and grandparents and people who are around us and attract our curiosity. Once marked, a person seldom changes direction. He or she exhibits the traits of their mentors for many years.

Sometimes the reason for our entire existence is to leave a mark. Jesus was approached by his critics once and asked to explain why a man was born blind. Had he sinned? Was his blindness the result of his parent's sin. Jesus responded that the man was born blind so that he could be present on that very day and be healed by God. When he was healed, the man left a lasting impression on the people of that city. The purpose of his entire life was to leave a mark. Martin Luther King left a mark on an entire nation. Frederick Douglass left a mark on an entire race. Grandma left a mark on a whole family. That special person in each of our lives left a mark on at least one person who inspired us to walk our present road in life.

Sometimes those who leave a mark don't make a positive influence. Sometimes we can be influenced to go in the wrong direction. Consider Sister Callie Mae who was considered one of the most righteous members of the Holy Gethesemene Church. She made a mark on every member. She appeared to be the epitome of faith. When she prayed she'd always say "Lord if you send me thousands, I'd give it all back to you, just give me Jesus!" That was her prayer for over 20 years. One year though, the state built a highway across her land. She received $100,000 in payment for her property. When the members of the small rickety, unpainted, backwood church heard the news they rejoiced because they remembered Sister Callie Mae's prayers. A delegation went to see her, thinking they would hear some good news. The preacher said "Sister Callie Mae, the Lord has given you thousands, is there anything you'd like to give back?" Callie Mae looked at the Cashier's check on the table and said "Well, when I prayed that prayer, I had the will, but I didn't have no money. Things have changed a little. Now that I have some money, I find that I don't have the will!" The day Callie Mae confessed left an even bigger mark on those who trusted her witness. They learned a bitter truth, "actions speak louder than words!"

As Christians we are always mindful that we are children of the king. We bear his mark. He is our mentor and the greatest influence on our lives. The day we accepted him we were born into a new life. The events that influenced that change comprised the birth mark that notes the point in life when we decided to follow Christ.

Exposition

These text show two sets of people who are influence by two different powers. One of the powers is Satan and the other Godly. Both have a mark that indicates the choices made.

The Revelation of Jesus Christ, shown to John on the Isle of Patmos, gives us a glimpse, although symbolically, of things that are to come. The entire book reveals the events of the last seven years of time. It is divided into two parts, each 3 1/2 years long showing the rise and fall of the anti-Christ, influenced by Satan and assisted by the False Prophets. It ends with the glorious union of the bride and bridegroom as time is erased and eternity begins.

Revelation 7 focuses on a point in which God will prepare to pour out his wrath upon all of the earth. However, before he does so there will be a great revival and millions will come forth to accept Christ and be saved. Each person that comes forth receives the mark of salvation in the form of a seal.

Revelation 7:4 notes that even the Jewish community will have some who will come forth in those last days. There will be 144,000 Jews, representing 12,000 each from 12 of the 13 tribes (The tribe of Dan will not come forth). These 144,000 Jews will not be the only Jews that will be saved but will be those who come forth in last days to be joined by others who have believed in the centuries prior to the last seven years.

Each will be given a special mark that identified them as Children of the King. Verse notes that after the 144,000 that there will be another number that will come forward in the last seven years that will be to great to number. They to will be sealed and protected from the wrath that is to come. They all were clearly marked as children of the king.

Revelation 13 tells how the Anti-Christ and Satan devise a scheme to make a mark on people that will cause them to get off track and miss the actual call of God. The false prophet will convince many, through signs and wonders, that will look authentic, sound authentic and appear to be from God.

Christ warned believers to be on guard against false prophets and false teachings. When they appear they will be so convincing that even the "very elect" of the saints will be deceived. Matthew 24:24 says "For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect."

At a given point, those who follow the anti-Christ, (thinking they are right) will be given a mark either in their forehead or in their right hand. The number of his name "666" refers to his initials. (Hebrew and Greek do not have a separate numbering system like English. Numbers correspond to the letters of the Alphabet). These individuals will have the mark of the beast.

Revelation 13:17 explains that only those who have the mark will be able to buy or sell anything.

Despite the appeals of God otherwise there will be many who know better who will think they are missing something and reach out for the mark of the beast, after being misled by the false prophet.

Thus, two groups will bear marks. Those who trust and believe in God and those who trust in the Anti-Christ. The mark that comes as result of Satanic influences is shows a Satanic influence. The mark that comes from God is the sign of a godly influence.

Leaving Marks

There are many today who bear the marks of one influence or another. Dr. King was permanently influenced by the teachings of Mahatma Ghandi as he wrote and practiced "Soul Force" or the art of non-violent civil disobedience. Malcom X was influenced by the teachings of Elijah Muhammad. Wilma Rudolph was crippled with polio but the influence of a God fearing mother inspired her to become a Gold medal winner in the 1960 Olympics. These represent the millions of people in the world who have been "marked" in a positive way by outside influence.

However, there are forces at work in the community that leave negative marks. Youth are the most susceptible, but they are not alone. There are millions of adults who have been marked by a negative influence. A son watches his father beat his wife and he is marked forever. He'll either be just like his father or spend his life trying to be different. A girl watches her mother smoke, drink and curse. She'll either be just like her mother or spend her life trying to be different.

Parents must excercise extreme care in selecting the activities in which their children participate. The lifestyle and habits of the people surrounding children influence them more than the activity. A popular coach that curses and smokes in the presence of children will have a tremendous influence on the impressionable young. Just as important are the type of friends with whom our children associate. A rowdy set of friends tend to bring out the worse in every youth. Even television and radio have a great influence on youth who shape their opinions about life from what they gleen from videos and Compact Discs.

Adults are influenced by special people in their lives. Millions of adults have been influence to use drugs, comitt crimes, cheat in the marriages, or otherwise defraud themselves because they were influenced by someone special in their lives.

Negative influences come from Satan. It is his special attempt to leave his mark on you. On occasion Satan directly leaves his mark. He visited Job personally and tried to make a mark but couldn't. He taunted Jesus in the wilderness and tried to make a mark but couldn't. Generally Satan uses people to put his mark on us. Sometimes he is successful, epecially when he catches us off guard.

Just as the Revelation tells of a time when people will be told they cannot buy or sell without the mark of the Anti-Christ, many are being told today that they cannot succeed unless they resort to ungodly tactics. Some are told to use their sexuality to open doors for themselves "every body is doing it!" Some are encouraged to cheat and deceive to win victories because it's a "dog eat dog world." Some have agreed to taking life's short cuts to success, not considering the ultimate end. Each time they do so they evidence the fact that they have have been marked by the devil himself.

That's why Ephesians 6:11 says "Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." When Satan tries to leave his mark on you the word of God says in James 4:7 "Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you."

Birth Marks

When Satan influences people to live ungodly lives, in effect, he brands them, or leaves his mark on them. A brand is different from a birth mark. A brand does not indicate a new entity. It does not show a change of position but indicates ownership. A cow that is branded does not change. It's the same cow displaying a brand that indicates to whom he belongs.

On the other hand a person who is born into the family of God is a new creature. 2 Corinthians 5:17 says "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." The mark of the Christian denotes a new life. It is not a brand but a true birth mark, signifying a new life in Christ.

The man who is marked by the hand of God is walking in a new direction. That's why Paul wrote in Philippians 3:13-14 "..forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Jacob returning to his homeland was a branded man. He was a trickster and a deceiver, but he had a wrestling match with God. His name was changed from Jacob to Israel because he wrestled with God. He exchanged his brand for a birth mark!

Saul was a branded man. He persecuted the church wherever he went. But one day on the Damascus Road he turned in his brand and picked up a birth mark!

The woman at the well was a branded woman. She had a five husbands and was shacking with number six. But Jesus gave her living water and she exchanged her brand for birth mark as she ran through city declaring "Come see a man" who told all I've ever done!

The thief on the cross was a branded man. He had lived his life as thief, breaking all of the laws of the land. But hanging on the cross, he exchanged his brand for a birth when he said "remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom"

The brand of sin was represented by the cross!

The world Disturbs but the cross represents our chance for rest!

The World defiles but the cross represent our chances for purity!

The world hates but the cross represents our chance to be loved!

The world destoys but the cross represent our chance to be lifted up!

The world darkens but the cross represents our chance to walk in the light!

No wonder the song writer declared: "At the cross at the cross where I first saw the light and the burden of my heart roll away. It was there by faith, I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!"

Jesus invited all believers to exchange their Satanic brands for a cross!

On Calvary Jesus took that old rugged cross and changed it from a sign of shame to sign of victory.

That's why the song writer wrote "I will cherish the old rugged till my trophies at last I lay down. I will cling to the old rugged cross and exchange it some day for a crown!"

I'm so glad that the Lord has laid his hands on me!

He gave me a new walk! He gave me a new talk!

I'm so glad!

So glad!

The Lord left his mark on me!

Seizing Opportunities

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:"And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years. When Jesus saw him lie, and knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole? The impotent man answered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool: but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me. Jesus saith unto him, Rise, take up thy bed, and walk. And immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked: and on the same day was the sabbath. John 5:5-9

Introduction

Have you ever missed an opportunity because someone beat you to the punch? On occasion the best of us miss chances to achieve life goals because something or someone gets there just before we do and we are unable to capitalize on the moment. Did you have your eye on a certain item in the store but waited too long to buy it? That was the time the manager had to tell you that someone had beaten you to the punch. It is even more frustrating to see the person using the item that you wanted. It happens the same way when we respond to want ads about work opportunities and just as we walk in the door someone else walks out with the job. Even in love there are some folks that move too slow. Many singles have made their move only to find out that the attractive person they had been watching for so long was no longer available because someone else had beaten them to the punch. The ability to seize an opportunity when it presents itself often makes the difference between those who succeed and those who fail. When opportunity knocks, we must be prepared to answer or someone else will beat us to the punch!

Missing opportunity is not unique to age or station. It has happened in every social strata. The youth miss opportunities because they often move to fast. The old miss opportunities because they are cautious and move too slow. The educated, the unlearned, the rich and the poor, all have missed an opportunity or two in life. When opportunities are miss we spend many years wondering what would have been. "I coulda" and "I shoulda" are two phrases used most by those who miss opportunities. It marks a tragic turn in every life.

Some miss opportunities because they are unable to act on them. Others get themselves tangled up seizing what they thought was a good opportunity that turned out to be an invitation to disaster. Jumping at the wrong opportunity they found poverty, failure and frustration. Consider two slaves that were talking in field. One complained about how never got along well with his master. He said he was always punished. The other began to give him some advice. “Every time the master give me a hard time, I cuss him out!” Surprised, the first slave responded: “You mean you actually cuss the master out?” “I call him everything but a child of God!” Came the answer. “You just wait for the right opportunity and then you will feel a lot better after you done told him off!” The next day the young slave returned. His back was scarred from a great whipping he had received from his master. “I did just what you said. I waited for the right moment and then I called him everything but a child of God.” The old slave asked “You didn’t tell him that to his face did you?” “I sho’ did!” the boy answered. The old slave responded: “No wonder you got yourself in trouble. I waits until the master go up to the big house and I’m way out in the field by myself. Then I cusses him out! You got to pick the right time tell him off. To his face is the wrong time!”

As Christians, we know life will present us with many opportunities for success. We lean on the power of God to help us identify sound opportunities and motivate us to act upon them. We need the power of God because alone we are too slow to achieve our goals. With him however, we won’t have to worry about life beating us to the punch!

Exposition

This text focuses on the people at Bethesda and how they waited to seize an opportunity.

The pool at Bethesda attracted many visitors to the small town because it had the reputation of being a source of healing. The waters of the pool acquired healing powers when an angel stirred them. It appeared that only one person at a time could be healed during this stirring of the waters. The first to get to the waters would always be the one healed.

Those who were mobile had an advantage over the immobile. Those who could see the waters bubble and stir and could move themselves quickly had the advantage. Those who were blind or crippled and had no one to help them did not have a chance. It seemed unfair that those who needed the most help would be the least likely to get help, but that was the rule.

Verse 3 describes the people who came to the pool as “Impotent” meaning that these were individuals who were powerless to resolve their own conditions. They came to the pool looking for help. Some of the types were listed: the blind, halt, and withered. All were waiting for the moving of the waters. Each of them was seeking an opportunity but often missed it because of their impotence and condition.

Jesus visited the pool and saw all of the people waiting for their opportunity for healing. Jesus must have gone unnoticed because there is no mention of anyone paying attention to his presence as every person kept his eyes glued to the water waiting for their chance. A certain man who had become a homesteader at the pool was approached by Jesus. He learned that the man had been by the pool for 38 years.

Jesus asked the question, "Wilt thou be made whole?" The man explained that he's been trying to help himself for 38 years but each time an opportunity came someone else beat him to the punch. Literally he said "I have not man, when the water is troubled, to put me in the pool." He had no one who was willing to assist him. Every man was for himself. Without help he was doomed to spend the rest of his life sitting by the pool watching everyone else beat him to the punch.

Without any further questions or deliberations, Jesus instructed the man to take up his bed and walk and immediately he was healed and walked away.

The man missed the troubling of the water but he was healed by the master himself.

Waiting For the Chance

Today there are many who waiting for their big chance in life, but always seem to miss out because someone else gets there first. Like the people at the Bethesda, there are many people today who miss opportunities because they are either blind, halt or withered.

Those who are blind can't see their way clearly. Their vision has been blurred. Whenever we get to the point when we can't see beyond the present moment we are postured for disaster. It's only when we can consider the future that we understand the importance of preparation in the present. A man who plans on a future in professional athletics appreciates doing what it takes now to achieve that dream when the opportunity comes. A woman who aspires to a career in medicine, does what is necessary now to prepare for the day when opportunity comes. The blind are rarely the first ones to enter the pool, because they can't see it when it moves.

There are also those who are have halted in life. The halt are those who are physically challenged or handicapped. There are many who have been placed in challenging circumstances in life that have made the prospect of success gloom. If the halt are viewed as handicapped, a certain degree of permanence is suggested. If the halt are viewed as "challenged" then the possibility of overcoming the circumstance seems more feasible. Many miss opportunities because they view themselves as handicapped rather than challenged. Those who are challenged achieve despite handicapping conditions. Michael Jackson was born in poverty in Gary Indiana but rather than be overwhelmed by challenge he succeed despite handicapping circumstances. Colin Powell, Jesse Jackson and many other national personalities all arose from abject poverty despite their handicapping social conditions. Those who are handicapped fail to achieved because they are overwhelmed by the challenge. When opportunities present themselves many cannot take advantage of them because they have come to believe that people in their social circumstance can never achieve!

The withered are those whose energy force is all but gone away! There are many today who miss opportunities because they have withered wills. They have lost hope. The will to achieve, to forge forward has gone away. To achieve in school requires a will! To achieve in business requires will power! To achieve in marriage requires will power! The landscape of America is dotted with the emotional carcasses of withered wills and shattered dreams and hopeless pilgrims who wandered into future, willing to go anywhere, going everywhere and ending up nowhere! Those who have withered and given up miss opportunities and someone else always beats them to the punch!

Those who are powerless need someone to help them. Look at the impotent man's response in verse 7. "Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool..." There was no one willing to help him get into the pool. He tried, because he said "while I am coming, another steppeth down before me." He tried, but alone, someone always beat him to the punch. One of the sad commentaries on our times is that very few people are willing to help another person achieve an opportunity. Yet, each of us was helped by someone who stopped along the way and gave us a chance. A teacher, a relative, a friend. Each was helped by someone who helped us to overcome a barrier or two and make our mark in life.

Those who cannot see clearly, need someone to show them! Those who have lost hope and are overwhelmed by their social condition, need someone to believe in them.

Those who have lost their will power need someone to inspire them and give them the will to go forward! This man was unable to seize his opportunity because there was no one willing to help him.

Those who help others along the way understand the meaning of the song: "If I can help somebody as I pass along. If I can cheer somebody with a word or song, then my living shall not be in vain."

Help and Healing

Finally it is important that we note that everyone at Bethseda kept their attention focused on the water. No one noticed Jesus when he came. When Jesus came near other cities the crowds met him. When he stopped at a house to rest the sick and the lame came from miles around. In one city they tore the roof from a house to get a sick man in his presence. But in Bethesda there is no record of response from the people around the pool.

They were so busy watching the water they did not see Jesus!

They were so busy waiting for a miracle, that they did not see the miracle worker!

They were so busy waiting for an angel, they see the one greater than the angels.

They were so busy waiting for a blessing, they did not see the source of blessings was in their midst.

They were so busy waiting for their big chance, they missed the biggest opportunity of all.

They were so totally consumed by their worldly concerns that they missed Jesus.

When the lame man took his eyes off the water for a second he saw Jesus. When he saw Jesus he received both help and healing at the same time!

For 38 years the people at the pool had beat this old man to the punch!

For 38 years he watched the water and made his best effort, but they always beat him to the punch

But by the time those at the pool recognized that Jesus was in their midst, the old man had beaten them to punch. He had receive his healing and was probably wandering the streets praising God!

Have you missed some of life's great opportunities? Has someone or something always beat you to the punch! Prepare yourself and watch the water, but keep trusting in the Lord!

Satan works daily to deprive you of your dreams. Despite your best efforts he always beats you to the punch.

Keep your eyes on the water, but look up every now and then, the Lord is always standing by!

I don't know about you but I've found out that when the Lord is standing by:

—Things that were impossible suddenly become possible! Because all things are possible with the Lord!

—Things at which we had failed suddenly become achievable; because I can do all things through Christ that strengthens me!

—Things which made us afraid suddenly become unintimidating; when Jesus is standing by who shall I fear?

—Things which made us weak suddenly lose their control; in Jesus I am strong!

—Things that made me lose hope don't bother me any more because my hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean on Jesus name!

—Things that once made me sad can't steal my happiness; I now have joy, unspeakable joy!

Keep your eye on the water, but every now and then look for Jesus!

Jesus, somebody here knows him!

Jesus, the sweet Rose of Sharon!

Jesus, the lily of the Valley!

Jesus, The Passover lamb slain for the redemption of sin!

Jesus, Our waymaker!

Jesus, the Prince of Peace and King of Kings!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary but Early Sunday morning arose from the day!

Keep your eyes on Jesus and he'll make everything all right!

Leaning On The Everlasting Arms

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 12, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "She girdeth her loins with strength, and strengtheneth her arms!" Proverbs 31:17

Introduction

Has there ever been an occasion when you had to lean and depend on someone else? Regardless of our strength and experience, there comes a time in every life when each depends upon someone else, if only for a shoulder to cry upon. Sometimes a friend listens as we pour out our soul's concerns. Sometimes circumstances render us helpless and we need the assistance of others. Even the president of the nation is surrounded by counselors and advisors that he leans upon for sound advice and direction. Very few, if any, stand alone. Everyone leans on someone.

Mothers appear to have historically been the leaning posts of the family. They have been the source of strength and support for the family for many generations. When a child cuts a finger, he runs to his mother to kiss it and make the pain go away. When there is frustration, even grown children have a tendency to call or visit mother and pour out their soul's concern. When major steps are about to be made in life, it is natural for a child to solicit mother's advice. Over the years, families have come to love and depend upon mother. They lean upon her for strength. They lean upon her for encouragement. They lean upon her inspiration.

If the entire family is leaning upon mother, drawing strength and inspiration, who does mother lean upon to sustain herself? An amusing episode of a recent Superman movie makes the point. Lois Lane had fallen from a helicopter as she was covering a story. Lois was falling fast and the ground was racing up to meet her. Suddenly out of no where Superman appears and grabs her. As the man of steel wrapped his arms around Lois he said "Don't worry Lois, I've got you!" Lois looked around. She was floating in mid air, being held only by Superman's arm. She looked up and down and then exclaimed "You've got me. But Who's got you?" So it is with mothers. They are super figures in our lives who always seem to swoop down in the nick of time, save us from our frailties, make the impossible happen, and catch us when we fall.

Like Lois Lane every family member could easily ask. Mother's got us, but who's got mother? We lean on her, but what keeps her from falling. What sustains her. What keeps her going? Who does she lean upon?

As Christians we have learned that even the wisest and strongest among us are not self perpetuating. They get their strength from an unseen source. Mothers, fathers, and God fearing children all get their strength from trusting and leaning upon the power of almighty God. We lean upon mother, but she leans upon the Lord.

Exposition

This familiar text focuses on the description of virtuous woman.

The bible has many sections which describe various personalities. Even in the book of proverbs alone there are many types described. The first nine chapters of proverbs describes wicked women. Proverbs 21:9 and 25:24 focuses on nagging wives. However Proverbs closes with a tribute to the godly woman. It is the great testimony to the woman who fears the Lord.

The woman of Proverbs is seen doing two things. She is both giving and receiving. Giving service to her family and friends and giving to God. In reward she is shown receiving the praise of men, her husband and her family.

Buried in the list of virtues attributed to the Godly woman is the fact that she strengthens her arms! That means she gets new strength to give to others. What is not said is how she does it? Where does the strength come from. The implication is that such strength comes from God, the only source of spiritual strength.

Such a woman is more valuable than rubies

Learning How To Lean

One Mother's Day three mothers were featured as the special guest at a certain church. Each had varying degrees of experience at parenting. Each was asked to give their best advice to the young in four words. The young woman said "Reach for the Stars!" and there was a thunderous round of applause. Her statement represented the quest of every mother to see her children rise high plateaus in life. The second mother said "Give Life your Best!" Again there was great applause. These four words represented ever mother's expectation of her children, only that they give life their best shot! The last woman was an aged great grandmother. She stood firmly at the podium and gave her four words "Learn out to lean!" The words took the audience by surprise. They asked her to explain. The old woman explained that those who learn how to lean know both how to give and receive from God and man, which is the secret to fruitful living. The audience recognized the power of her words and gave her a standing ovation.

A generation ago the Consolers wrote a song whose words said in effect "I learned how to lean and depend on Jesus. He's my friend and he's my guide. I learned how to lean and depend on Jesus; and I found out that if I trust him, He will provide!"

The truth of that song is every mother's testimony. Great mothers have learned how to lean.

Leaning, in this context, has two components: Leaning to receive strength and leaning to give strength.

Lean to Give

Mothering is a giving experience. It is a constant flow of lending and leaning to offer help and assistance to young siblings. This instinct to give and reach for the unreachable in characteristic of mothers of all ages.

Jochebed gave up her little Son Moses and placed him in a basket. Once the boy was found she gave of herself to nurse him and train him in the tradition of her people.

The widow woman had come to her last cup of meal and cruise of oil. Just enough for her and her son to eat and to die. But she gave her last to a visiting prophet, trusting in the Lord to provide.

Even today good mothers are remembered most for their capacity to give, in many cases denying themselves opportunities and pleasures. Proverbs 31:31 says a virtuous woman's service to her family and others in need is a source of praise. The entire chapter describes a mother that is leaning to give: providing for her family, supporting her husband, caring for her children, helping the poor and standing tall in the community of the saints. The proverb says "her own works praise her!"

While the particulars have changed the role of mother is still the same. In biblical times the methods may have been different but the outcome was the same. Today mothers juggle a job, a husband, children, and school activities often at the expense of their own ambitions. Often attending the school PTA meeting gets to be mother's job. So does getting a child to piano or dance lessons, attending the recital, dealing with the school, the doctor and chaperoning scouting activities. Good mothers are respected because they give so much of themselves to others.

Not only do good mothers give to others, but many also give to God. With an endless list of activity needed to support and sustain their individual families, there are some mothers who still make time to give time, talent and resources to their church. For the most part churches are sustained mostly by mothers. Mothers sustain the choir. Mothers sustain the Sunday Schools of America. Mothers sustain the youth programs of nearly every church. Mothers seem to have an inexhaustible source of energy and inspiration from which every member of her family draws daily.

Thus, the good mother leans to give in two areas. She gives of herself, to her family and to her general community. But she also leans to give to God from the wealth of her resources, time and talent.

As she leans to reach out a helping hand to her sons and daughters and all of those around her "her own works praise her in the gates!"

Lean to Receive

We are still left with Lois Lane's question. If mother leans to give of herself to catch us when we fall! Encourage us! Dry our weeping eyes! Build us up! If mother's got us...Who's got mother? Who holds her hand? Who drys her eye? Who sustains her when she's weak? Who kisses mommy's finger and makes her hurt go away? If mother's got us when we fall...who's got mother?

There comes a time every mother's life when she has given all and throws up her hands in frustration. Everyone is depending upon her, drawing from her, yet she feels so drained. She's constantly giving and sharing and pouring from cup of her resources. Who fills mother's cup when it's empty?

Jesus gave mothers and all the faithful an invitation. He said in Matthew 11:28-30 "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

In effect Jesus invited everyone to lean on me. Lean on me when you're not strong and I'll give you strength to carry on!

In times of trouble good mothers lean on the Lord and get strength. That's why the Psalmist wrote: "But the salvation of the righteous is of the LORD: he is their strength in the time of trouble. And the LORD shall help them, and deliver them: he shall deliver them from the wicked, and save them, because they trust in him. Psalm 37:39-40 Many mothers have reached trouble spots on the road of life. Many have heard their families asking them what to do. In such times the Christian mother leans on the Lord. It was for times such as these that the song write wrote: "Think of the times you've asked the question, down in your heart now just what shall I do? Then you confide in your friends and loved ones, but they have troubles too. There is a God who rules earth and heaven. In him there's relief from every pain and care, for he knows,Yes, he knows, just how much you can bear!"

In times of doubt good mother's lean on the Lord and get assurance. These are the moments when she worries whether or not there will be sufficient resources for her family. These are the times when she worries whether there will be food on the table, lights, water and gas! These are the times when she worries about the legacy of inheritance she will be able to leave behind. In such times she leans upon the Lord and gets strength. Psalm 37:25 "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

In times of anxiety she leans upon the Lord and gets patience. These are the times when life has gotten on her last nerve. These are the times when she is tempted to throw in the towel. The good mother in such times leans on the Lord and hears the word of God respond as in Isaiah 40:31 But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

In times of fear she leans upon the Lord and gets courage. These are the times when the health and safety of her family are threatened. These are the times when she faces an unknown and dangerous path. In such times she recalls the words of Psalm 27:1 "The LORD is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

Today brothers and sisters we celebrate good mothers who give us a hand. But we also celebrate a loving God who holds every good mother in his hands!

Every mother knows that in order to make the journey, she's got to keep her hand in God's hand!

When we keep our hand in God's hand we find:

—Strength to make the journey!

—Endurance to make it to the end!

—Courage to face impossible odds!

—Wisdom to deal with great challenges!

When we lean upon the Lord will find that the:

—Burden will seem much lighter

—The climb will seem much easier!

—Night will seem much brighter!

—Storm will seem less frightening!

When we lean on the everlasting arms of God we see the world with a new insight. That's why the song writer declared "Oh bright the path grows from day to day. Leaning on the everlasting arms! Leaning! Leaning! Safe and secure from all alarms!

Leaning!

Leaning!

Leaning on the everlasting arms!

The Ring, The Robe & The Shoes

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 26, 1996

SCRIPTURE:"But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet:And bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry: For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry." Luke 15:22-24

Introduction

Do you remember your high school graduation? It was a time of celebration, rejoicing and excitement. There were speeches, programs, and words of encouragement of hundreds of people, many of whom we rarely knew. High School graduation is a time when a teen bubbles with enthusiasm at completing a phase of life and looks forward with great anticipation to beginning another. Other than graduation itself, receiving graduation gifts rates high among the exciting elements of graduation. The gifts of graduation range from cards filled with well wishes to automobiles. Add it all up and graduation becomes an exciting time for everyone!

Graduation is filled with tradition and symbolism. Two symbols of graduation are well known, the class ring and the cap and gown. Many institutions don't require a class ring anymore. However, despite the objections of some, the robe or the cap and gown is still a requirement. Rings and robes. That's the graduation package, right? Well that's what everyone in Little Town thought until they saw what Old Charlie gave his son for graduation. There were three boxes all neatly wrapped given to him just before graduation. One small box contained his class ring. It sparkled and shined and was a symbol of his son's high school achievement. The second box contained his cap and gown. It was neatly pressed and looked majestic as he wore it. But the third box contained a new pair of running shoes. "These are nice dad!" Said the son, "But what are they for?" Charlie said, "The ring lets you walk around among your friends and show them what you have done. The robe lets you walk up on stage and receive your diploma with pride. But the shoes suggest that it's time for you to walk your own walk, in your own shoes instead of mine!" Thus old Charlie added a third symbol of graduation: A new pair of shoes, not for the feet but for life!

The challenge of graduation is not in the graduation, but in what lies beyond graduation. What lies beyond graduation is the specter of adult life, independent of the rules that have constrained life during childhood, puberty, adolescence and the teen-age. For some this challenge marks an anxious moment filled with excitement and anticipation. For others, it marks a moment of fear. Regardless to what it means the fact we have a ring and robe, suggests that its time to blaze a trail walking in our own shoes, rather than following in the shadow of those who come before us.

As Christians, we are glad to know that our heavenly father watches our thoughts and deeds in this life. When this life is over, we know we will come to a graduation where we will put on a new robe and walk all over heaven in heavenly shoes! That will be the greatest graduation of them all!

Exposition

This text focuses on a young man who returned home to his father after learning some hard lessons about life.

In Biblical times was viewed differently than it is today. Then an education had two functions: learning and applying the law of God was considered the primary purpose of education.

The secondary purpose in education was to teach about the practical aspects of everyday life: a trade for the boy and the care of the house, application of dietary laws and how to be a good wife for the girl.

The home was considered the first and most effective agency in the education process, and parents were considered the first and most effective teachers of their children. This responsibility is expressed in Genesis 18:19 where God states his expectation that Abraham will train his children and his household to walk in the ways of the Lord. Proverbs 22:6 is another familiar exhortation for parents to teach their children according to the way of the Lord.

Training in the Torah began very early. The father had an obligation to teach his children the Law by words and example. He spent his adolescence learning a trade and how to survive and prosper in life ,from his father Girls received their education at home. A girl's mother taught her what she needed to know to be a good wife and mother.

She learned about such things as dietary laws which had to do with the family's devotion to God. In addition he girls learned a variety of skills such as weaving, spinning, and treating illnesses. She might also learn to sing and dance and play a musical instrument such as a flute or harp.

The formal ritual noting that a boy had completed his religious education was a Bar-Mitzphah which was held at age 12. There was no equivalent for girls.

This text shows a father with two sons. The age of the sons was not listed but it is apparent that each of them was old enough to exercise independence and far beyond age 12. Their religious education was complete but they were still learning how to survive and prosper in life from their father.

One son was anxious to experience life for himself. Ignoring the instructions of his father he requested his portion of any inheiritance he might receive in advance that he might experience life for himself. In a highly unusual move, the father agreed to the request.

He sent his Son to a school that had no formal classrooms but taught lesssons the hard way. It was the school of life. For years the father waited for the report card and trusted God. The son went to a far country and wasted the inheritance that his father gave him on riotous living.

During his short time in the school of life he learned what happens if he doesn't handled his money. After he had spent all of his money his friends and acquaintances became few. He learned the difficulty of survival, putting food on the table, when he had to scramble for a living. At one point he even slopped hogs just to earn his daily fare.

The school of life was a hard teacher. It is unforgiving, never grades on a curve or gives extra points. Those who pass are those who come to a sense of responsibility and maturity in the development and management of their lives. Those who never come to this point fail.

Luke15:17 notes the point at which this son reached maturity. "And He came to himself." This was the point when he weighed what he had experienced in the far country against his training at home and matured immensely.

The text focuses on the young man as he bravely came home to give his father the report. The father saw him afar and order the symbols of achievement given to him. He was given a ring. A robe and shoes. In addition the father ordered a fattened calf to be killed and a feast was held to celebrate the return of the son.

It was cause for celebration because a son who had appeared to fail in his training had finally come to himself. He was lost but now he was found.

The School of Hard Knocks

Today youth are graduated from high school and are given a diploma. A Ring and a graduation gown symbolize this achievement. Their training however isn't nearly complete. High School graduation only marks the completion of another phase of their education. Whether they continue in formal educational tracts or not, each will begin another form of education as they enter the school of "hard knocks." The "school of hard knocks" is a colloquialism that means the "school of life." It is a tough school that will last about five years. In this school you will learn to take care of yourself, manage your money, choose your friends, and exercise self discipline. The school of hard knocks is a tough school. It presents a formidable challenge as each student faces meandering maze of life problems and ponders the reward that lies on the otherside.

Many have found that their ultimate success and failure in life has been due, in part, to lessons they learned while attending the school of hard knocks. It is the most challenging school any student will ever attend.

To make it through this period each student needs a good pair of shoes for the journey. There will be some that will attempt the walk through school of hard knocks wearing the wrong shoes.

DANCE SHOES. Some think they can wear DANCE SHOES and party their way through life. Among the first lessons the school of hard knocks teaches is that those who succeed know how to avoid the "party trap."The constant string of parties and after parties, distracts attention from goals and attracts unsavory elements. Avoiding the party trap is one important lesson of the school of hard knocks.

SLIPPERS: Some intend to wear SLIPPERS because they will try to get through the slick way. The school of hard knocks will provide many opportunities for success the slick way, without really trying. Some may be legal but impractical. Some will border on the illegal and immoral. The school of hard knocks will teach this lesson the hard way.

LOAFERS: There will also be LOAFERS that will simply waste their time. An abudance of time and how to use it will will be another lesson taught by the school of hard knocks. Free to make your schedule of activity some will spend their time loafing and hanging out while others will apply themselves to industry. The results of either choice will be a lesson learned in the school of hard knocks.

RUNNING SHOES: Some will attemp to dash effortlessly through the school of hard knocks spending as little time as they can on life's important lessons. They will learn the lesson that the school of hard knocks teaches: those who approach life in haste, usually waste.

Work Shoes

The Christian youth entering the school of hard knocks should learn the importance of entering the next phase of life with an attitude of hard work, discipline and spiritual development That means putting on a pair shoes that will be different from what others wear. It will be a pair of work shoes.

What are the parts of the work shoe?

Strings.As youth move through life, the school of hardknocks will teach them to watchout for the strings. Very little in life comes without strings, ramifications and consequences. The school of hard knocks teaches every youth the importance considering consequences and the outcome of actions and associations. It also teaches the importance of tying up loose ends otherwise they run the risk of tripping over dangling strings. (Sometimes they dangle for a long time before we finally trip on them.)

In sole support. Every good shoe has an insole cushion that helps us to stand and walk comfortably. Learning how to stand and take a stand is another lesson taught in the school of hard knocks. Those who learn their lessons well will be able to walk away from situations that are career threatening, comfortable that they have made the right decisions.

Sole. Those who begin their journey in the school of hard knocks need to consider their soles. There are too many who are trying to make the journey with holes in their soles. That's what Jesus had in mind when he said in Matthew16:26 "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

Every now and then we find a shoe that has what appears to be grooves or designs on the soles. The gooves help the the sole to grip and hold on slippery surfaces!

Every person who has graduated from the school of hard knocks has learned this one truth, that life is slippery when it is wet! In such moments it is hard to hold on unless our soul is able to latch on and hold to something solid.

These are dangerous times. In times like these you need a savior. In times like these you need an anchor. Be very sure!

Be very sure!

Your anchor holds and grips the solid rock!

Hold on to the rock!

Storms may rise, but hold on to the rock!

Winds may blow, but hold on to the rock!

This rock is Jesus, yes he's the one!

Be very sure! Be very sure! Your anchor holds and grips the solid Rock!

The Man In The Middle

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 2, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "And all the people saw the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking: and when the people saw it, they removed, and stood afar off. And they said unto Moses, Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die. Exodus 20:18-19 "For there is one God and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus" 1 Timothy 2:5

Introduction

Have you ever been caught in the middle? That was a time when you found yourself an unwilling participant in a matter that you would rather avoided. When we get involved in disputes between a husband and wife, we usually get caught in the middle. When we try to break up fights, arguments and violent encounters, often we get caught in the middle. Being caught in the middle is a dangerous situation. Many have been hurt, killed and rejected after they injected themselves in the middle of someone else's dispute. Being caught in the middle is an uneasy position. Most attempt to avoid the circumstance with cute phrases such as "my name is Bennett and I ain't in it." Like it or not, it is tough to be caught in the middle.

It is not always bad to be in the middle. In fact, some are very comfortable being in the middle. They are never too tall or too short, if they stay in the middle. They are never really right and never really wrong, if they stay in the middle. They never quite stand or completely sit, they just squat in the middle.

Some people feel safe and comfortable in the middle, others feel that those on the outside always seem to get credit for their ideas.

Consider a frog and two geese that were trying to escape hunters. They had a dilemma. The geese were unfamiliar with the pond and the frog couldn't fly to get away from those who wanted frog legs for supper. The frog came up with a wonderful idea. He suggested to the geese that they get a reed and each of them hold the reed in their beaks. The frog would get in the middle between them and direct them to safe areas by pointing. That way the three of them could get to safety. As they soared into the air the frog held tight to the reed and swooped right above the hunters. They were in and out of sight so fast that the hunters never got a chance to shoot.

One hunter got an idea. He yelled out to the trio: "That's a smart idea. I wonder who came up with that, a goose I bet!" Insulted the frog looked down opened his mouth and yelled "It was my idea. I thought up the whole thing." Instantly, after he opened his mouth, he fell from the sky just into to bubbling hot pot to provide the main course for dinner..fresh frog legs. He was safe in the middle until he opened his mouth!

The role of the middle man is tough, important and it often requires him to keep his mouth shut.

Every believer knows such a middle man. He moves freely between God and mankind, interceding and negotiating on our behalf. That man is Jesus. He's the middle man between God and humanity.

As Christians, we are glad to know that God has given us a mediator. One who pleads our case before the judgment seat of glory. We lift his name in praise for he is one middle man who gave his life to bring God and mankind back together again. We give God praise for the man in the middle!

Exposition

This text focuses on the role of Christ as intercessor between God and man.

Exodus 20 presents a striking picture of Israel coming before God at Mt. Sinai. After wandering in the desert and praying to God from a distance they had finally come before God themselves. Moses had talked with God on their behalf and returned with two tables of stone carved with the very finger of God himself containing the 10 commandments. Each time Moses returned from talking with the creator his very person reflected his glory.

However, faced with the majesty and power of God they were afraid and were trembling.

At Mt. Sinai, they saw the lighting and heard the thunder of God's voice. They considered their own weakness before him and begged Moses to go up and talk with God on their behalf and report to them. In this context, we see Moses acting as a mediator between the people of Israel and God. When God wanted to give a message to the people, he gave it to Moses and they listened. Even when God became angry with the people and considered destroying or punishing the it was Moses who pleaded their case before God. If they sinned, it appeared that Moses was always the middle man trying to please God and the people too.

It was Moses' role as middle man that prompted his punishment at the hands of God. In the wilderness the people demanded water. God provided the source, but in the rush back and forth between God and the people, Moses in an angry response, took credit for God's provision of water to the people (Numbers 20:11-12) and was punished.

In a similar sense the high priest emulated Moses' role. The high priest would go into the temple and offered sacrifices to God on behalf of the people. Through prayer and offering, he interceded for them with God and they were forgiven and blessed. Israel was accustomed to mediation. However, they were accustomed to mediation only with respect to the Mosaic law. They did not perceive or accept the possibility that any people other than themselves could be a party to mediation. Moses spoke to God for the Jews. He did not speak to them for the Egyptians or Canaanite nations he encountered. Even in Canaan, the high priests talked to God only for Jews. All other nations and races were excluded from their pleadings. Moses and the high priests were mediators of the old covenant, but that covenant was made with some of the people and left out most of the people.

In the New Testament we are reminded that just as Moses was the mediator between the Jews and God, that Christ is the mediator between man and God. There are some unique qualities that both Christ and Moses share with respect to their roles as mediator. Like Moses, Christ talks to God for us and pleads the case of the creatures before the creator. Like the high priests he offers a sacrifice for the forgiveness of sin and constantly works to bring people and God together.

However, there are differences. Chief among the differences the truth that unlike Moses and the priests, Christ is not the mediator of the Jews alone. The Old agreement was made at Sinai with descendants of Abraham. Those who were not Jews were excluded. When Moses referred to the sins of the people he spoke only of Jewish people. The New Covenant was sealed at Calvary, but wasn't exclusive to the point that all others were forbidden. In John 7:37 Jesus said "if any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink." When Christ serves as a mediator on our behalf he does so for anyone who comes. His appeal is general and open to all. It is not race specific. It is not gender specific. It is not nationality specific, "if anyone thirst, let him come unto me and drink."

The priests, attempting to mediate on behalf of the people, offered sacrifices, first for themselves, and then for the people. Often certain animals were sacrificed to God to atone for the sins of the people. Christ mediates on our behalf by substituting himself as the one time sacrifice for everyone. His death on Calvary became the one time sacrifice for everyone.

Anyone who desires to approach God must come through Christ. He is the one mediator between God and man.

Afraid to Talk to God

There are many today who are literally afraid to talk to God. Like Israel at Sinai, there are many who want others to pray for them, but are literally petrified at the very thought of talking to God for their own cause.

Many consider themselves unworthy to talk to God by virtue of their life-style or past indiscretions. They feel themselves inadequate to stand before the throne of mercy and ask others to stand for them. Like Israel they look for a Moses to take their prayers up the mountain as they stand back at a distance and wait for the report. Many feel ill equipped to communicate their thoughts to God. They think there are certain words they must say or use to get their prayer through. They fear by comparison that their prayer lacks power or force because their personality is not the same as others who appear to pray with power.

There is no reason for any believer to be afraid to talk to God. We should remember the steps to getting a prayer through.

Hooking Up With God

Today there are millions in the world who are trying to get hooked up with God unsuccessfully. Many have statutes before which they burn incense, prayer rituals that require them to prayer three times a day, and special chant. Some have special incantations, positions of prayer and ornaments. Each of these represents methods they are using to get a prayer to God. How do we get a prayer through to God? How do we connect with a power source without blowing a fuse?

The people of Israel learned quickly they were not able to come before the power of God directly. They needed Moses to intercede for them. Today, because of the very nature of humanity we are unable to approach God directly. Jesus acts as our mediator. The text notes that there is only one mediator between God and man and that is Jesus.

MAKING THE CONNECTION: (Illustration: three prong and two prong plugs).Have you ever paid close attention to power cords? Most power cords have a three prong plug on the end. It is designed to be plugged into a three pronged receptacle. On occasion however, we can't use the three prong cord because the receptacle only has two prongs. The problem was created because new electrical standards require appliances to be grounded older models did not. Somehow a way had to be devised to bridge the difference between the old and the new.

Someone came up with the ingenious idea of the electrical adaptor. It is three pronged on one side and two pronged on the other. With the adapter the power connection can be made.

In the same sense God is our power source. The three prongs could easily represent the Father, The Word and the Holy Ghost or the Godhead The old two prong plug represents human nature: Flesh and blood. To connect, a mediator that is God on one side (three prongs) and flesh and blood on the other is needed. Jesus is the only person who was both God and man because John 1:1 tells us that the Word was God. In verse 14 it says the Word became flesh and dwelled among men. Jesus was both God and man and therefore the only one able to mediate between God and man.

IN JESUS NAME: Since Jesus is the mediator the only way we can get to God is through Jesus. In John 14:13 Jesus explained that our prayers, addressed to God should be tagged in "Jesus Name." In John 16:23 he said "...whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My name, He shall give it to you." Thus each of our prayers is tagged: "In Jesus name!"

The Man In the Middle

It becomes abundantly clear to every believer that we are totally dependent on the man in the middle.

It is the man in the middle who intercedes on our behalf. Without him we are helpless to reach God for ourselves.

When pressed between success and failure, we need the man in the middle!

When faced with the prospect of tragedy or triumph, we need the man in the middle!

When challenged to rise higher or fall lower, we need the man in the middle!

When faced with the prospect of victory or defeat, we need the man in the middle!

The saints testify to power of the middle man!

Joseph declares, "I was in a pit one day in and a prison on other but thank God there was a man in the middle!"

Daniel declares, "I was in a den, trapped between danger and death, but thank God in the lion's den there was a man in the middle."

The three Hebrew boys declare, "we were trapped between fear and the fire, but thank God there was a man in the middle!"

The disciples declare "we trapped out on the sea, between destiny and a watery grave, but thank God in the midst of the storm, there was a man in the middle!"

It is the man in the middle who:

-Lifts us above the shadows; Plants our Feet on Solid Ground;

-Brightens our day and blesses our soul!

-Blesses our thoughts and guides our feet!

-Makes life worth living; Makes the Bible worth reading!

-Makes church worth attending; Makes Prayers worth praying!

` I don't know about you, but I'm glad that there's only one man in the middle! His name is Jesus!

Jesus! The Rose of Sharon!

Jesus! The Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, who picked up an old rugged cross and carried to Calvary!

There were three crosses on the hill that day. One on the left and one on the right!

I don't get any salvation from the man on the left because he said "if you be the Christ, save yourself and me also"

I don't get any salvation from the man on the left because he was asking to be saved himself!

I keep my eyes on the man in the middle!

The man in the middle died on Calvary!

But Early!

Early Sunday morning he arose from the Grave!

He's on the job today!

Call him! Call Him!

Tell him what you want!

What is Courage?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 9, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "Wait on the LORD: be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart: wait, I say, on the LORD." Psalm 27:14

Introduction

Have you ever wished for more courage? Courage is a quality that many of us desire, probably already have, but often think we don't possess . It is a quality that we usually recognize best in others. Few of us think of ourselves as courageous. Why? Probably because we seldom have the symbols that attest to our valor. Without the symbols, many think they don't have what it takes.

Many children are familiar with the movie "The Wizard of Oz." The movie presented four principle characters, each looking for something they already had but didn't know it. There was scarecrow that wanted a brain. There was a tin man who was very compassionate and loving but wanted a heart. There was a little girl named "Dorothy" who wanted to get back home to Kansas. There was also a lion who was big and ferocious but wanted courage. They all traveled to see the Wizard of Oz whom they felt could grant their wishes. Each soon learned that they already had what they needed to succeed. The scarecrow already had a brain but did not have a certificate. The Tin man was already showing he had a heart but just couldn't hear it tick. Dorothy wore the Ruby slippers and could have gone home at any time by simply saying "There's no place like home." The lion learned that he always had courage but needed a medal to attest to his valor. They all had what they were looking for, they just needed something to confirm what they were unsure of themselves.

Bravery is courage in the face of fear. Courage only exists in the context of overwhelming odds and difficult circumstances. It is not a big deal to act courageously in a circumstance where fear or overwhelming odds does not exist. The man who has the odds in his favor and is a 10 to 1 favorite to win over a lesser opponent can brag but he can't brag courageously! It takes courage for his opponent to even enter the contest with him. The odds are against him. But despite the odds he acts as though victory is sure..

In the old cowboy movies occasionally a wimpy looking man would come to town and go into the bar. Once there he would pick a fight with what appeared to be the toughest, roughest and meanest man in the saloon. Often the wimpy man was beaten to a pulp. Sometimes he got a lick in. Even though he was defeated he acquired a reputation for being a gutsy fellow and few bothered him after that. Instead of getting whipped many times, he learned he could show everyone that he was no wimp. He was either courageous or the biggest fool in town. Either way, no one would mess with him after his first saloon fight.

Courage is rooted in confidence. Confidence is rooted in faith in God. Those who know what God has done in the past are confident that he can and will do another mighty work for them. They proceed through life boldly. They are secure in the knowledge that the God they serve is able to deliver them.

As Christians we approach life's situations with courage. We know that God has given us the spirit of confidence and the power to defeat Satanic influences wherever they appear in our lives. We stand for that which we believe is right, regardless of the cost. As long as we are on the side of "right", God is on our side. Let's face life with optimism that the same God we knew on the mountain is also the God of the valley.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he addresses the subject of courage.

David is uniquely qualified to address this subject. His own life was filled with memorable feats of courage in both his youth and his adult life. As a youth he showed courage protecting his father's flock against lions and bears. Though young , he often found himself in circumstances that were life threatening. Yet he stood courageously.

David's courage against lions and bears was not foolish valor. Foolish valor would have been to attempt to guard his father's sheep without preparing for known possibilities. The known possibilities were wild animals and thieves. David prepared himself by learning to use a single weapon well. No doubt, during the lonely days on the mountain sides he practiced his skill, casting stones at small targets. He practiced so much that he became confident in his skills as a marksman. When dangerous animals approached he relied on his physical skills and the power of God to guide his aim. Had not David honed his skills as a marksman his stand before bears and lions would have been foolish valor. However, since he had perfected a skill, he stood confident in his ability, with God's help, to overcome his enemies or the enemies of his father's sheep.

Thus, when David stood before Goliath, the mighty Philistine giant, it was not a demonstration of foolish valor, but of courage based on his confidence in his personal skills and God's ability to help him use his skills victoriously. As he responded to Goliath's plea to "send me a man" he was confident because of his past history of defeating enemies, with the assistance of God. He was not acting foolishly.

The 27th Psalm is David's reflection upon the courageous deeds he had done in his own life in part because of his own ability, but mostly because of the presence of God. He noted that the Lord was the strength of his life, thus he had no reason to be afraid. Past dealings with God gave him confidence that God would always guide and protect him. He knew his own ability and he knew he could do even more with God's help. Thus he wrote: Psalm 27:5 For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock.

His conclusion at verse 14 is predictable. He uses "qavah" which is translated "wait." Qavah means "look to the Lord." It also means to look patiently and expect great things from him. It does not mean step back and let God fight for you, but expect God to fight with you in battles against the enemy.

That is why every believer is encouraged to be strong in the face of perilous situations. The strength to be strong is not derived from foolish valor but from the full knowledge that God will work with us to help us use our skills and gifts to defeat the heavenly father's enemies. The knowledge that God will be with any believer strengthens faith.

David's conclusion was "Wait, I say, on the Lord."

Courage is based on preparation

Today youth will discover it easier to be courageous if their courage is something more than just foolish valor. Courage is trusting that God will use our preparation in a mighty way.

A young football player may run onto the football field prepared to take on the toughest team. The youth who has not practiced and is not in shape will do so with foolish valor instead of courage. The prepared athlete knows the game plan and trusts in God to bring the victory. He or she may be afraid but still demonstrates courage based on the past experience. Courage to take action

Today there is a need for more of us to display inner courage that results in action. The vast majority of the world consist of people who see what needs to be done but are afraid to roll up their sleeves and take action. They are afraid of failure.

However those who make a difference in life are those who show the courage to make things happen.

It was President Theodore Roosevelt who once said: "It is not the critic who counts, not the man who points out how the strong man stumbled or where the doer of deeds could have done better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena; whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly, who errs and comes up short again and again; who knows the great enthusiasms, the great devotions, and spends himself in a worthy cause; who at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement; and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly; so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither defeat nor victory."

To take courage requires faith in God. The greater the faith the greater the courage.

Courage to try again

It also requires courage to try again after experiencing failure. Many youth try an extra-curricular activity or venture into a project and experience a failure. After failing once, many never try again. However, the essence of courage is to try again.

Harold Sherman quite awhile ago, wrote a book entitled How To Turn Failure Into Success. In it he gives a "Code of Persistence." If you give up too easily, write this down and read it daily.

1. I will never give up so long as I know I am right.
2. I will believe that all things will work out for me if I hang on until the end.
3. I will be courageous and undismayed in the face of odds.
4. I will not permit anyone to intimidate me or deter me from my goals.
5. I will fight to overcome all physical handicaps and setbacks.
6. I will try again and again and yet again to accomplish what I desire.
7. I will take new faith and resolution from the knowledge that all successful men and women had to fight defeat and adversity.
8. I will never surrender to discouragement or despair no matter what seeming obstacles may confront me.

That's why Paul, writing to the Romans decided that he would pursue the faith persistently, letting nothing separate him. He said: "Rom 8:35 Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors." Romans 8:35-37

Courage is Knowing God Walks With You

Finally the courageous youth is one who knows that God walks with him, through every trial, problem or situation. Such a youth is encouraged because of the knowledge that the world's great creator is by their side.

A story is told of a child who had to walk each evening past a dark, spooky house. Some adults sought to give him courage. One handed him a good luck charm to ward off the ghosts. Another had a light put on the dreaded corner. Still another said earnestly, "It is sinful to be afraid. Trust God and be brave!" The advice was good, but he offered nothing more. Then someone said with compassion, "I know what it is to be afraid. I will walk with you past the house." He did nothing to remove the fear — except to lift it from the child's shoulders and place it on his own.

We should be glad to know that we have someone with us who can help carry the load. Our God is able to give us the victory.

He's able to turn our darkest moments into light!
He's able to turn our saddest moments into happiness!
He's able to lift the heaviest burdens from our shoulders!

He's able to take our most troublesome problem and solve it!
He's able to turn our defeats into victories!
He's able to take our fears and turn them into courage!
I don't know about you but I'm glad to know that Jesus is always by my side!
He is the best example of courage!
One evening, a long time ago, he faced the prospect of death and a cold chilly grave with courage and faith!
He died out on Calvary..
But early Sunday morning arose with the victory!
It wasn't foolish valor, but faith in the power of God!
Take courage, it may seem dark ahead, but the darkest hour always comes before the light!
Take courage, it may seem like defeat is imminent, but the race is not given to the swift, nor to the strong, but to those that endure to the end!
Take courage...
God is still on the throne!

Put This Preacher In His Place

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Monroe, La.

August 4, 1996

SCRIPTURE: And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ: Ephesians 4:11-13

Introduction

Have you ever found something to be out of place? Life is peculiar in that the simplest things work well and look well, as long as they are in the right place. The right thing in the wrong place suddenly becomes the wrong thing. A set of silverware is marred by the presence of a single setting that is of the wrong design. A row of evenly sized pictures on a wall seems marred by the presence of one oversized, out of line, monstrosity. Things out of place call attention to themselves.

Sometimes resources can be misplaced, especially human resources. Often church workers are misplaced out of ignorance or expediency. Too often members who possess great skills in certain areas of service are reduced to serving in areas in which they are less skilled. A woman who is a great bible scholar and has a wonderful gift for teaching youth may often be displaced by a professional school teacher who knows little about the bible but has a degree. In that case, both were out of place. Many have the skills to perform great services for the church but are blocked because of internal politics of the corporate institution. Then there are others who have a place but spend all of their time doing someone else's task. All are out of place.

Every piece of a fine puzzle has a place. Every spoke in a wheel has a place. Every organization has a specific order of organization with specific tasks for each level of membership. Everyone has a place.

How can someone get out of place? Someone gets out of place when, for whatever reason, a person is either prohibited from doing that which his duty requires or has taken on the responsibility of doing that which has been assigned to others.

In the church there are various stations and positions. Each has a place or function. Headaches and problems follow whenever any part of the time gets out of place. Bishop Hall writing about the relationship of every person in a congregation to the other said: "As many vapors, rising from the sea, meet together in one cloud, and that cloud falls down divided into many drops, and those drops run together, making rills of water, which meet in channels, and those channels run into brooks, and those brooks into rivers, and those rivers into the sea: so it either is or should be with the gifts and graces of the Church. They all come down from God, divided severally as he will to various Christians. They should flow through the channels of their special vocations into the common streams of public use for church or commonwealth, and ultimately return into the great ocean of his glory, from whence they originally came.

As Christians, we understand that we all have a place of service. Our goal and objective is to give our best service to God using our gifts. When everyone is in place the family of God is better postured to witness and serve God with power and grace.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's letter to the Ephesians in which he explained that each person in the body of Christ has a station in which he exercises the gifts God has given him.

The grace gifts are given to each believer in different measures. Each serves the purpose of building the body of Christ and preparing it for its mission of witnessing and service. Paul notes that there is one body (v4) which is controlled by one spirit. Each person exercises their grace gift in the proper station for the glorification of God and the edification or building up of the body of Christ.

The gifts that each receive are enumerated in 1 Corinthians 12:8-10 Generally they fall in three categories. The first category refers to gifts that require some measure of revelation. Included among these are wisdom, knowledge, and discerning spirits. These gifts allow persons to exercise unusual abilities as it relates to understanding the mind of God and human nature.

The second category of gifts refers to communication skills. These include prophecy, diverse languages and interpretative skills. These gifts allow people to exercise unusual abilities to communicate the word of God to others through, speech, art, music or the written word. It even includes the ability to speak to others fluently in foreign languages and to interpret foreign language.

The third category refers to the power gifts. They include the unusual gift of intense faith, healing and miracles. With these gifts believers exercise an unusual combination of faith in God without doubt and are thereby able to accomplish many miraculous deeds in the name of God including healings and other great deeds.

Paul's point to the Ephesians was that each person has a place to exercise the gift that he has received. Not everyone has the same gift. The church works best when each exercises his gift in his place. Thus, some are apostles; some prophets, evangelists, some pastors and some teachers.

The goal of each person's exercise of a gift is the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ (Ephesians 4:12).

The church does not function in its finest capacity if gifts are exercised out of place. Each has an operation and an administration. When they get out of place, the church slows its pace.

Pastors, for example have seven duties as explained in Ephesians 4:12-13. These duties are to: perfect the saints, perfect all the works of the ministry, build up the body of Christ, unify members in the faith and in the doctrine, lead the church toward perfection and help members to mature in Christ. When a pastor does not or is not allowed to function in his capacities the result could mean bad doctrines that creep into the fold, a weak congregation or an immature congregation. However, a pastor who exercises his gifts of prophecy and spiritual revelation can lead a congregation to great heights.

The preacher must be in his place.

Out of Place Preachers

Today there are many churches that are experiencing problems because the preacher is out of his place. When the average person says the preacher is out of place they usually have another thought in mind.

Consider The new preacher who came to Hollow Creek Baptist Church and immediately started to change things. The members of the congregation became upset with him, especially when he replaced their straw offering basket with one of those big city style silver trays. Weekly there were changes one after another. While there were many critics, one sister always seemed to support him, Miss Cassie Bell. When he told drinking Joe he had to keep his liquor outside, Cassie Bell said "You right Reverend!" She told the members "It's his place to do that!" When he told Carrie Mae that her dresses were too short, Cassie Bell said "You right Reverend!" Again she said "It's his place to do that!" But when he told Miss Cassie Bell to stop dipping snuff in the church service things changed. Cassie Bell jumped to the floor and yelled "Wait a minute church, this preacher done got off track. We need to put this preacher in his place!"

There are many in churches everywhere that would love to "put this preacher in his place", but what they have in mind is not positive. Their problem is complicated because not only do they not know this preacher's place but they don't their own place in the body of Christ!

The saint's of many churches are doing some of everything. Much of the reason is because members have not allowed their pastors to function in their capacity as perfecter of the Saints. Today, pastors who work to improve the spiritual life of the membership become targets themselves. Things would obviously be better if we would put this preacher in his place!

Many churches are stagnant and have no ministries in place. Why? It's because in many cases the preacher is out of his place! As pastor, the minister works to lead the church in its various ministries. This is often made difficult by boards and contrary members who often put road blocks in his way. If we want the church to get moving in the right direction then we should "put this preacher in his place!"

There are many churches that are still babes in Christ. Instead of hungering for the meat of God's word they are satisfied with milk. Much of the reason is because the preacher is out of his place! Those who stand in the way of the development of Christian Education ministries and bible teaching keep the preacher out of his place. If we want our congregations to mature then let's "put this preacher in his place."

Some preachers are out of place because they are blocked by forces that are working against them. Others or out of place because they simply have not chosen to carry out the mission that God has given them.

God told Jonah to go to Ninevah and to preach. He chose to go in another direction and he suffered because of it. He stayed out of place until the Lord had him swallowed by a giant fish!

Balaam found himself out of place once when he tried to prophecy against the children of Israel. He stayed out of place until the Lord made a mule talk!

Out of place preachers draw the condemnation of God. Ezekiel 13:3 "Thus saith the Lord GOD; Woe unto the foolish prophets, that follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing!"

God expects the preacher to exercise leadership over the flock that's why he gave him the keys. Matthew 16:19 "And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

If the church wants to get right with God then it should both pray for and help "put this preacher in his place."

When The Preacher is in his place!

Finally every Saint must consider the great rewards that come to believers when we put the preacher in his place!

When there is a watchman on the wall, the church is warned against impending danger. In a time of peril the question is asked "Watchman, what of the night?" Keep the watchman on the wall so he can herald the condition of the night!

When we put this preacher in his place the Lord will show him visions that will give us hope! That's why Ezekiel said "The hand of the LORD was upon me, and carried me out in the spirit of the LORD, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones, And caused me to pass by them round about: and, behold, there were very many in the open valley; and, lo, they were very dry. And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live?" Ezekiel 37:1-3

When we put this preacher is in his place we will hear the gospel declared and strengthen our faith. "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?

And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" Romans 10:14-15

When we put this preacher in his place he can remind us of the great blessings we get when we serve the Lord. If we lift the preacher to his station he will help us lift

Jesus up!

If we lift Jesus up mighty things begin to happen!

If we lift Jesus up, the wicked will cease from troubling!

If we lift Jesus up, the weary will be at rest!

If we lift Jesus up, no matter how dark the hour, we will remember that joy comes in the morning!

If we lift Jesus up, no cloud will overshadow our sky!

If we lift Jesus up, the sinner can find salvation!

If we lift Jesus up, the despairing man can find hope!

If we lift Jesus up, the world will come to know him for he said "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

Brothers and sisters, if we put this preacher in his place there will always be a way to hear a word from the Lord!

When there is a word from the Lord:

—We can see victory in the midst of defeat; Triumph in the midst of tragedy

—We can enjoy peace in the midst of confusion; Joy in the midst of sadness

If we put this preacher in his place, we've have somebody who can tell us the old story!

If we put this preacher in his place he can tell us about Jesus!

Jesus, the lighthouse in the stormy sea!

Jesus, the leaning post in a trying time!

Jesus, the river of water in a dry thirsty land!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and rose after three days!

If we put this preacher in his place, he can keep reminding us that one of these old days, Jesus is coming back again!

He's coming!

He's coming back again!

Trust Me!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 11, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "How excellent is thy lovingkindness, O God! therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings. They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures. For with thee is the fountain of life: in thy light shall we see light." Psalm 36:6-9

Introduction

Trust me. Are these words familiar? They are often associated with used car salesmen in a negative way. That is not to say that used car salesmen can't be trusted, but the popular culture has taken a phrase used extensively in the trade to be synonymous to "lemons."

Many people are instantly on guard whenever they hear the phrase "trust me." It suggests something sinister, especially in modern times when trust is a diminishing quality. "Trust me" conjures images of a man standing on a street corner selling $10,000 Rolex watches for $50.00. When his prospective customers question the authenticity of such an offer the slick salesman's last wall of defense is "trust me." A politician, whose record of activity has been everything but noteworthy encourages a doubting public to "trust me." It is no small wonder then that there would be so much apprehension connected with the phrase "trust me." People have been injured so many times by those who have used the phrase liberally that they are immediately suspicious of anyone that attempts to undergird their credibility with the phrase "trust me."

Many people carry their suspicions further than their secular dealings. Some have trouble trusting the power of God. Cynically, they put God in the same category as the less than honest salesman. They view God's request to simply "trust me" with an eye of doubt that is deep and penetrating.

Trusting God is essential to the believer. We do not put his promises in the same category as that of the dishonest and the powerless because they neither have the intent or the power to make their words "trust me" come to reality. God has both the intent and the power to insure that whatever he promises comes to be and it always does, and always will.

As Christians, we know that when God says trust me, he means trust him to do that which is right for us. We don't know the future but we know that God will take care of us. When we are uncertain we can hear his words clearly: “Trust me. Trust me.”

Exposition

This text focuses on David explaining the reason believers trust in God.

The keys that unlock the wisdom of David’s words lie in several of its key phrases.

How Excellent: Excellent is the translation of Hebrew word “yaqar” which also means valuable and costly. In this context the word “excellent” describes the nature of God with respect to caring for the believer. The quality of his care, if translated into monetary terms would be invaluable and inestimatable.

Lovingkindness: Lovingkindness is the English translation of the Hebrew word “Checed” which also means mercy, good deeds, kindness and favor. On some occasions “Checed” is even used to mean “reproof.” The good deeds that God performs are often heralded as examples of his lovingkindness. The many acts of mercy, answered prayers and other considerations shown believers are generally listed as indicators of the lovingkindness of God. However, there are times when believers go astray and endanger themselves both spiritually or physically. In these times God often reproofs us. However, if these rebukes are necessary, they too are described as a part of God’s lovingkindness.

Trust: From the word “chacah” which also means, “confide in” and “seek refuge in”, and “hope in”, the meaning of trust is reflected in all three of the common uses. To trust God is to feel comfortable sharing intimacies with him. These intimacies are of such that they can be shared without fear that they will ever be divulged. To trust God is also to seek refuge, escape and protection in him. He will protect believers that seek his help and provide for them a place of consideration. To trust God is also to continuously hope for better days and better conditions. This hope is based on faith that God will always do what is good, just and right for the believer.

David notes that the believer who trusts God will always be satisfied. The term used for satisfied is “ravah” which also means abundantly, or saturated or drunk. Trusting God does not always result in riches, fame or glory. However, trusting God does result in a deep satisfaction with oneself and with life. That sense of satisfaction can only come from God. We are promised to be “drunk” with satisfaction, fully saturated or drowned in satisfaction.

When God says trust me he asks believers to place their confidence, hope and faith in him. In return he promises that their satisfaction will be higher than they ever expected.

Why Trust God

Why should a believer trust God? Why should he place all of his confidence and hope in God? What if he refuses to “be there” when difficult times comes? That is a question that many skeptics ask about God. They want to know why God should be trusted with our most intimate concerns, considering the tough times that are ahead. They think like the farmer who was out driving his tractor one day when he rolled onto a stretch of gopher mounds. The earth crumbled beneath one tire and the tractor rolled over on its side. Luckily, the farmer escaped the situation with only a few bruises. He went home and told his wife. She breathed a sigh of relief and said, "Honey, the Lord sure was with you." The farmer surveyed his bruises and answered, "Well, if He was, He sure got a rough ride."

We should trust God because God keeps his promises to us. Abraham and Sarah learned that God could be depended upon to keep his promises, even though at the time it appears they will never be answered. Their promised son came 25 years after the promise was made and after both were well into their old age, but it came, just as God said it would come. In the same way, God keeps his promises to us today. The old saying is true "He may not come when you want Him, but He's always on time!"

Trusting God is a springboard to action. Trusting God is not just an empty phrase that is used by believers to explain inactivity. Trusting God is the tool of faith. Those who trust God take action. Those who are fearful and have no trust remain inactive. Some have the mistaken notion that trusting God means to simply wait on God to perform a miracle for us. This notion implies that we do not have full understanding of what God is about.

Many years ago some missionaries were going into a remote corner of Africa to work with a primitive tribe. The missionaries were uncertain about how they would be received, so they decided to give the tribe a gift as a sign of goodwill. As they flew over the area a bright, shiny new plow was parachuted down to the tribe. The plow would help the natives as they farmed. At least that was the missionaries' intent. They were unprepared for what they found a few days later when they arrived at the encampment. The natives had never seen a plow before. They hadn't a clue as to what this strange-looking instrument which had dropped out of the sky was used for. Not knowing what to do with it, they had put the plow on a pedestal and were worshiping it!

The plow was designed to help them farm. It was designed for use in the fields, not to be revered. It was designed to strike deep into the African soil. It was designed to help the people, to nourish the people, to make them healthier, to make their quality of life better. But the members of that primitive tribe didn't know that, so the plow became an ornament, rather than a tool!

Sometimes we do that with our faith and trust in God.. We make our faith and trust an ornament instead of a tool to help us live our everyday lives.

Trusting God inspires confidence. When believers trust God, it not only helps them but it inspires confidence in others. Those who live their faith in God encourage others to do the same. Those who live the sermon make a better witness than those who simply recite it every day. In 1958, America's first commercial jet air service began with the flight of the Boeing 707. A month after that first flight, a traveler on a piston-engine, propeller-driven DC-6 airliner struck up a conversation with a fellow passenger. The passenger happened to be a Boeing engineer.

The traveler asked the engineer about the new jet aircraft. The engineer was wildly enthusiastic about this new, improved way to travel. He began speaking at length about the extensive testing Boeing had done on the jet engine before bringing it into commercial service. He recounted Boeing's experience with engines, from the B-17 to the B-52. When his traveling companion asked him if he himself had yet flown on the new 707 jet airliner, the engineer replied, "I think I'll wait until it's been in service awhile.'" The person who acts on their faith in God inspires others, the person who is unwilling to practice what they preach raise doubts.

Trusting God keeps hope alive. The Reverend Jesse Jackson in his bid for the American presidency had a basic theme throughout his campaign "keep hope alive!" While that was the theme of a political campaign that's exactly what faith and trust in God does for the believer, it keeps hope alive. This is the hope that extends beyond the physical circumstance and takes roots in the hearts and souls of every believer.

This is the hope that prompts each to sing "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name! On Christ the solid rock I stand. All other ground is sinking sand. All other ground is sinking sand!"

Trust Me

Finally every believer should remember that when all is said and done Christ is saying just two words: "trust me!"

"Trust me!"

"Trust me!"

Randy Morris was 43 years old when he died after a courageous battle with cancer in 1991. Before his death he wrote a letter telling about his faith. In it he described how he always prepared for prayer by going through what he called a "relaxation phase."

"After a few moments," Randy wrote, "I travel in my mind to a place in the north Georgia mountains where I used to go on camping trips. There I have built an open structure, a gazebo, where I go to talk with Jesus. Normally, I go in and call for Jesus and he comes. We visit, and usually I give him my prayers of thanksgiving and intercessions."

Late one summer Randy got the news that his cancer was back. He was in his own words, "an emotional wreck." At that time Randy prayed. In his mind he was again in the mountains waiting for Jesus to come to the door of the gazebo. "At that moment a completely unthought-of event happened that shook me to tears," Randy wrote. He saw himself as a five-year-old boy. "I became like a camera recording the event," was the way he described the experience. In the person of this boy he ran up to Jesus and hugged him. He pictured Jesus picking him up and carrying him to a seat and holding him in his arms. "He hugged me," Randy wrote. "I didn't say anything... He knew I was frightened. There were no answers and the future seemed so dim. As he hugged me he said, `Trust me, Trust me.'"

"[Jesus] held me for a long time that night," Randy wrote, "until he knew I understood what he meant." Randy found strength from this experience. "We must trust Jesus as a child trusts—totally!" he wrote.

Then Randy concluded his letter with these words, "Because of this, whatever turns out to be the ultimate result of this disease, it's not the burden it was before. [Jesus] made no promise, nor did he reveal the future, but he had provided the format for living out the rest of my life with just two words... Trust me."

Today Jesus is still saying the same thing...trust me!

Trust me because I love you!

Trust me because I died for you on Calvary!

Trust me because every day I'm right by your side!

Trust me when you are going through the mountains of frustration!

Trust me when you are struggling through the valley of the shadow of death!

Trust me when the storms of life are raging!

No wonder the song writer declares: "Trust and obey for there is no other way to be happy in Jesus, but to trust and obey!

If you trust him, he will make everything alright!

Walking On Water

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 7, 1996

SCRIPTURE:"But when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me. And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt? And when they were come into the ship, the wind ceased. Then they that were in the ship came and worshipped him, saying, Of a truth thou art the Son of God." Matthew 14:30-33

Introduction

Have you ever been in deep water? Deep water situations are those in which you find yourself "in" over your head. The variables are beyond those which you can control! The circumstances are unmanageable. No matter how you try it appears that you are about to get wet, or even worse, that you are going to drown.

What kind of situations pose deep water scenarios? Sometimes financial burdens place us in deep water. These are the times when our stack of bills owed is higher than our stack of income received. The financial world calls this "bankruptcy." Thousands go down in bankruptcy every year. Family troubles pose deep water situations. When relationships between family members break down and internal strife becomes the order of the day it can plunge a family into deep water. For some it leads to broken marriages, sibling jealousies, and family dysfunction. Even our personal ability to cope with the myriad of troubles, frustrations and problems that life brings each day can become a deep water situation.

Deep water situations can be dangerous but they are not always terminal. Everyone in deep water doesn't drown. Not every who gets in above their heads succumbs to failure. In fact there are some who do quite well in deep water and seem to keep their composure no matter how deep the water. Those who are able to swim are not threatened by the depth of the water. In fact, they probably preferred deep water over "baby pool" experiences. They find it easier to swim without their feet touching the bottom. If they tire they know how to tread water. Those who can't swim, on the other hand, get anxious at the thought of deep water. They are accustomed to shallow water experiences. Just the thought that they are in above their heads is enough to drown them.

Deep water situations require faith. People who exercise faith in such circumstances usually fare extremely well. Those who admire them say they appear to "walk on water." No situation seems to difficult to handle. Sometimes we think our heroes walk on water. Ask any child and they will nearly swear to the invincibility of Michael Jordan on a basketball court. When it comes to basketball they believe he can "walk on water." The old soldiers tell war stories about General George Patton who was so respected by his men that they believed him to be charmed. They believed he could "walk on water." In football there are many great legends: Bear Bryant, Vince Lombardi and others who always seemed to come out on top of difficult situations. In politics every president sought after men like Henry Kissinger to help them negotiate with other nations. No matter how difficult the situations, Kissinger seemed able to "walk on water."

As Christians, we know people don't walk on water. Despite the great stories of our heroes we know that when people try to walk on water they will sink. While people can't walk on water, we know someone who can. Jesus walks on water. If we hold his hands in deep water situations, we can survive deep water situations and make it safely to shore.

Expositions

This familiar passage of scripture focuses on Peter as he learns when and how to walk on water.

By night Jesus came to his disciples while they were on board a ship and were battling a great storm. Jesus appeared, walking on the water and called for Peter to Come. At Jesus' bidding Peter stepped upon the water and actually walked on the water twice. On one occasion he sank.

COME: Jesus made a general invitation for Peter to come to him. He was aware of the dangers that existed. He was aware of the high winds and the dangerous deep. He was aware of the difficulty of the request. Yet despite the obvious danger of heeding his request, Jesus still said "Come." The high winds already posed a danger. The threat of death was already imminent. Leaping from the boat made it even more probable. Yet Jesus said "Come." The word "Come" (Greek: Erchomai) is a verb. It implies action and Jesus was inviting Peter to take action and step forward on faith. When he stepped into the water the word "katabaino" is used. It means to step down. It shows the aftermath of the invitation to "come." Peter stepped down. The entire phrase therefore prepares to show the believer what happened to Peter when he stepped down into the deep and troubling waters on Christ's command.

WALKED: When Peter stepped from the boat he actually "walked on the water." The word for walked is "Peripateo." The word has two applications. First it means to physically walk. Each time "Peripateo" is used in the Synoptic Gospels it refers to actually walking. It also means physically walking whenever it is used in the Book of Acts, except in Acts 21:22. Since Paul used the word "walk" in a different connotation "Peripateo" is never used in the Pauline Epistles. It is never used in the epistles of John as well. Thus, Peter actually walked on the water. It was not a spiritual vision. It was not an illusion. It was not a transfigurative mirage. He actually walked on the water.

"Peripateo" also had a figurative meaning. It also indicated the entire range of activities of the individual life. It is used to indicate a life-style either saved or unsaved. For example Ephesians 4:17 refers to the unregenerate life style when it refers to the "walk" of the Gentiles. The walk of the believer is emphasized in Colossians 2:6 "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him:"

Jesus, speaking directly to Peter called him to physically walk. Speaking beyond Peter to believers of every generation that would follow Jesus seems to call upon them to step out of the world and begin the walk of faith, that is the Christian life.

For a time Peter actually walked on the water physically as he was oblivious to all the reasons why he could not walk on the water. He walked boldly, until he considered the storm. When he considered the storm, he sank.Yet in the not too near future he would also experience a period when he would walk just as boldly in the faith and begin to sink as he denied the Lord. In faithlessness Peter sank. In his faithlessness he also denied Christ three times.

However he began to walk on water again when he turned to Christ again. In the same sense he returned to his bold walk in the faith when he renewed his commitment and allegiance to Christ.

He walked on water physically. He walked in the faith figuratively. He only failed in his dual walks when he lost sight of the savior. It was possible for him to overcome great odds and succeed at the impossible because his faith remained in tact. With faith in tact he was able to walk in deep water.

Deep Water Situations

When Peter stepped into deep water that was not highly unusual primarily because he was already in deep water. The boat in which he was sailing was in deep water and being tossed by the storm. It was a matter of sticking with the ship and going down in the storm or stepping out on faith, into the same deep water but with the possibility of success because he heeded the master's call.

In a similar sense many people today are in deep water situations already. It is not a matter of whether or not they should be in their peculiar circumstance. It is not optional.

When the rent is due and you are facing eviction, that's a deep water situation.

When your stock investment has failed and you have lost your entire portfolio, that's a deep water situation.

When you break a window at school, get suspended and have a bad report card to bring home, that's a deep water situation.

Some deep water situations are far more complex. They may involve interpersonal relationships that are going no where or dead end marriages. They may involved failed business opportunities, career changes and physical impairments. Whether they are simple or complex, deep water situations have one common element; they have the capacity for disaster and can drown us if we are not careful

The question that faces every individual is whether we will stay in the boat of difficulty and try to dip out the water with our own ingenuity or will we step out on faith in God.

We don't know how to handle deep water situations. In reality, there is little we can do to prevent ourselves from drowning because our survival depends totally on God's benevolence.

However, when we depend upon God we can do the impossible. We can literally walk upon the sea of problems and difficulties that we face. We are in deep water either way we go. Whether in the boat of our own making, faced with capsizing or walking on the water, we are still in the water.

When Peter trusted in God he stepped out of the boat and began to walk on faith alone. There are times when we must do the same...walk by faith alone.

2 Corinthians 5:7 reminds us that we walk by faith and not by sight. As long as Peter walked by faith he was able to do the impossible even though he was told it was impossible. In a similar way, we can do the impossible, despite being in deep water. Though the world says that it is impossible we can walk on water.

Peter stopped walking on the water when took his eyes off Jesus and began to consider the impossibilities of his situation. When he considered how improbable it was for anyone to actually walk on water he began to sink.

If we take our eyes off Jesus we will sink. We must stay focused on the possibilities of every life situation and know that with him all things are possible. We can walk on water we will only sink when we take our eyes off God.

Thus many of us are types of Peter's experience we began doing the impossible only to lose faith midstream. We walked and then we sank. Thus the words of the song writer are true, "Without him I can do nothing. Without him I'd truly fail. Without him my life would be drifting, like a ship without a sail."

Peter's Second Walk!

Most people are familiar with Peter's brief walk on water; and many are familiar with his sinking plunge. However, what most people forget is that while Peter walked on water once and sank that he was able to walk one more time!

The text records that Peter cried out to Jesus "Lord Save Me!" In response for his plea for help, Jesus took him by the hand and pulled him from water which was rising and together they walked back to the boat.

When Peter put his hand back in Jesus' hand he was able to walk on water again!

Those who are sinking in the sea of life should call on Jesus!

Great things begin to happen when we call upon the name of Jesus!

At the name of Jesus:

—The wicked will cease from troubling

—The weary will be at rest

—Every knee shall bow

—Every tongue shall confess

When we call on Jesus, it doesn't matter how deep the water!

When we call on Jesus, it doesn't matter how ferocious the storm!

Jesus is able to quiet the storm and save the perishing soul!

Are you trying to keep your head above water? Call on Jesus

Are you trying tread through the ocean of problems that beset you? Call on Jesus!

Are you trying to swim to shore but are surrounded by sharks? Call on Jesus!

He can and will rescue those who trust in him!

Maybe that's what the song writer had in mind when he wrote: "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore. Very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more. But the master of the sea heard my despairing cry. From the waters lifted me now safe am I. Love lifted me!

Love lifted me!

When nothing else could help, love lifted me!

From Eden To Paradise

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Beth Eden Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 7, 1996

SCRIPTURE:For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. Hebrews 11:10; And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. Revelation 21:1-4

Introduction

Have you ever considered what it would be like to live in paradise? A paradise is a place where life is easy. It would be a paradise if we lived each day without the troubles we experience daily. It would be a paradise if there was a place where there would be no difficulties, trials or tribulations. It would be a paradise if we lived in a place where there were no enemies and everyone present loved each other dearly. If such a place existed it would no doubt be a paradise and would be sougth after by people from all over the world.

Yet there was such a place. It was called Eden. It only had two inhabitants, Adam and Eve and both shared equally in the world's first paradise. Eden, located in an area bounded by Africa on the West and Saudi Arabia on the East, was described as a Garden planted by God himself. It was the place God intended his first creatures to live, without difficulty or aging, from time to eternity. Life was so simple, they did not even need shoes or clothes. It was the world's smallest city. There were no governments as we know them today. There were no mayors or governors or presidents, yet this small two person city was a real paradise. How long it existed is not known. Since time and agging was not a factor, Adam and Eve could have been in the garden for thousands of years.

Eventually, however, the garden paradise that was known as Eden fell. It fell because of the disobededienc of its citzens. When Eden fell it was what thelogians have described ever since as "Paradise Lost." There have been a succession efforts since Eden to restore the state of paradise enjoyed by Adam and Eve. All have been unsucessful despite their best efforts.

Each generation, it appears, spends the majority of its time "Looking For A City."

While there have been great cities built over the generations, none of them have ever been able to reestablish the paradise of Eden. However, each shared the same fate as Eden in the long run, they fell from prominence or grace because of the sins of its inhabitants.

As Christians, we are on a journey looking for a city as well. We travel each day toward a city not made by hands, promised by God and being prepared for every Saint in glory. By faith we seek this city. By faith we shall find it. By the glory of God we shall enjoy its rewards!

Exposition

This text, inspired by God but written by an unknown writer, describes the life search of every saint on the journey toward the promised land.

Generally described as the faith chapter, Hebrews 11 traces the activities of several of the patriarchs of biblical faith as they traveled from one place to another in faith that God would lead them safely. Each sought to find a place to worship God, give him praise and live in peace. They were looking for a city that would resemble the paradise of Eden. The city they sought did not exist and cannot exist as long as the frailties of man exist.

In Revelation 21 John saw a vision of the city of God coming down out of heaven. It was a city of immense beauty. Moreover it would be the capital city of the new world paradise that would last through eternity.

Hebrews describes the quest of man to achieve paradise lost. The Revelation text describes paradise found.

Humankind in this life will never achieve paradise, only a small semblance. However, in the kingdom of heaven, paradise will be fully restored in a way that far exceeds the happiness, peace and pleasure of Eden.

The Quest for Paradise

The quest for paradise lost began with the fall of Adam and Eve. Since then there have been many great cities. While many of them were beautiful, none of them ever came close to duplicating the paradise lost in Eden.

Babylon

Perhaps the first major effort to recreate paradise was the building of Babylon. Its quest to restore the beauty of Eden and to discover the wonders of God became the source of it name. It was was named "Babel" after its citizens tried to build a massive tower to reach the heavens. Then God confused the languages and brought about the name "Babel" or confusion.

It was then the largest and most beautiful city in the Middle East, considered by classical tradition with its renowned Hanging Gardens and massive walls to have been one of the Seven Wonders of the ancient world. Jeremiah the prophet, while anticipating its downfall, named Babylon "a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunken" (51:7). The Greek historian Herodotus (484-425 BC), commonly thought to have visited the site near 460 B.C., reported that its splendor surpassed any city of the known world. It was sacked in 689 B.C. by the Assyrian King Sennacherib, who destroyed much of it.

Despite its great accomplishments, Babylon was not the paradise that was lost. The search to find a city continued.

Memphis

If the beauties of Babylon were great they were exceeded only by the splendor of Egyptian city states including Memphis.

The Egyptians built beautiful cities. Many were constructed with the use of forced labor and included large pyramids for their leaders called the pharoahs. These cities sported every major advance in technology available during the time. Beauty and strength were their claim to fame.

Despite the beauty of these great Egyptian cities, they were not paradise. They angered God because of their ungodliness. The pharoah's were elevated to god status and their religion was pagan. Many of the great cities were destroyed by wars or otherwise buried under the swift flowing Egyptian sand.

Jerusalem

In Canann the quest for paradise continued. The city of Jerusalem was another of the great cities of the world at the time. Soon after being crowned king over all the tribes of Israel, David led his private forces in the capture of Jerusalem and made it his capital. Zion, the name of the original fortress, now became synonymous with the city of David. Here Solomon built the Temple that David had wanted to build. It was understood to be a dwelling place for God (1 Kings 8:13). The sacred ark, symbolizing His presence, was placed in the holy of holies. Other extensive building projects made Jerusalem a magnificent city.

The sins of the people caused the Nation of Israel to fall and with it the splendor of Jerusalem. The people were still looking for a city.

Athens

The conquest of the Greek leader Alexander the Great produced many great cities, among them was the city of Athens. It was the Capital of Attica, an ancient district of East Central Greece, where Paul preached to the Greek philosophers . Paul saw the Athenians were very religious and even had an altar to an unknown God. He based his sermon on this. Though some converts were won to faith in Christ, no biblical record exists of a viable church being established. The city, which probably was named for the wisdom goddess Athene, was already an ancient place by the time Paul visited it. Indeed, human occupation of the area seems to date before 3000 B.C. In the sixth century B.C. Athens became the scene of the world's first great experiment with democratic government. It was destroyed by the Persians early in the fifth century B.C., but during the administration of Pericles the city was rebuilt into an architectural wonder.

Despite its beauty Athens was not a paradise. Not even a single church existed in its borders. The quest for a city continued.

Rome

The Glory that was Greece is the Grandeur that was Rome. Built upon the fabled seven hills of Italy this city state became known for building a city that grew into a national republic and blossomed into an international government. Rome was known for its architecture, government, and system of laws. It was beautiful, yet was not a paradise. It was well run, but not at peace. It had everything that a city state could want, yet it was not a paradise. Its rise and fall has been documented by theologians and historians for centuries.

The quest for paradise continues.

The Church's Quest

Today the church continues the quest for paradise. Our quest however, is not the search for paradise on earth, but for the Kingdom of heaven. Ours is a quest for a paradise found, which can only come with the return of the Savior.

As the church prepares to enter the 21st Century there will undoubtedly be changes as we face the challenge of presenting the word of God in the context of the rapidly changing technology of the coming age and the speed of the information era.

As man attempts to make the world a paradise the church, no doubt, will face the challenge of adpating methods. There will be changes of course. Ushers of the 21st century won't pass offering plates. Debit cards and computerized input stations on the backs of pews will make them unnecessary. Music will be synthesized and many instruments we now used will be relics of the past. Even bible study will be a matter of punching keys and modems and hard drives as people shift from paper bibles to computerized bibles and bible study systems. The advent of the internet will make interchurch communications quicker and more cost effective. While all these changes are coming, the word of God will remain the same, we must simply adjust to the coming age.

The church's quest is to keep teaching and preaching the Gospel message until paradise is ultimately restored.

The church must teach the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, that's what will exist in paradise!

The church must teach its young about the goodness of God. We must write on the door posts and tell them in the morning, evening and at night.

We must tell the story!
We must tell the story of Jesus!
Tell them how Jesus came and died on Calvary!
We must tell them them how he rose after three days!
We must tell them about the promised paradise when he returns!
Tell them that we have found a paradise!
It's a city with 12 gates!
It's a city that sits on 12 foundations!
It's a city where the sun will not shine and there will never be a cloud in the sky!
It's a city where it's always howdy and never goodbye!
Come and go with me to my father's house!
There'll be joy!
Joy!
Joy!

SON Glasses

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

July 7, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known. 1 Corinthians 13:12

Introduction

Have you ever worn sun glasses? Sun glasses come in all shapes and sizes. They are generally designed to protect the eyes from over exposure to light. In summer months sun glasses are common place as the bright sun and heat prompt extensive measures to protect the eyes. They are among a large array of items generally described as sun shades that include: umbrellas, wide brimmed hats, awnings and leafy trees. All have the same purpose which is to protect one or more parts of the body from the sun.

Generally sun glasses are dark. Others are lighter. They have been made into fashion statements and they range from the conservative to those which are radically absurd. The ultimate goal of all sunglasses is to protect from the rays of the sun. There are a few that wear sun glasses to conceal identity. Others have found that they are useful to hide sleepy eyes. The world has a fascination with sun glasses.

Sun glasses work by reducing the amount of light that the eye is able to see, producing a picture of reality that is less intense. Thus, despite a brilliant sun-shiny day, some sun glasses are reduce the light so much that it appears to be dark outside. Reality is altered, at least while the glasses are worn. When sun glasses are worn inside, it can even appear that all of the surroundings are dark.

Sun glasses effect the way we see the world but the world itself does not change. There is no better witness to this truth than Silly Willy the backwoods mountain man. It appears Silly Willy lived in the backwoods and mountains his entire life. For years he and his wife Sally lived in the mountains and were not privy to modern conveniences. After many years Silly Willy's eyes began to fail him. He could hardly see in front of him. His wife shared the same condition. Finally they were talked into trading some furs for two pairs of eye glasses and a pocket mirror. Sporting his new glasses Silly Willy was amazed at all the things he could see. He pulled out the pocket mirror and stared at the face he saw and said: "The fellow in this picture they gave me looks just like my daddy." He then slid it under his pillow. Sally saw him stuff something under his pillow. She mumbled to herself "now that I got my glasses he can't pull nothing over on me." She pulled back the pillow and looked into the mirror. Surprised she said "If he's gonna cheat on me then at least he could get a better looking woman than the one in that picture." Even a good pair of glasses can't help some people face life.

There are many who face the world every day with a distorted view of life. They are wearing SUN glasses that alter what they see. What they need is SON glasses that help them see the whole scope of life from a new perspective.

As Christians we know that we see a very small part of God's universal plan for mankind. We see with the carnal eye. However, when we look with our incarnate eye, aided by SON glasses, instead of being blinded by what we see, we view life with a spiritual eye. SUN glasses keep us in the dark. SON glasses help us to receive and appreciate God's greatness and bring us to the marvelous light!

Exposition

This text finds Paul writing to the Corinthians concerning maturity in the faith.

The 13th Chapter of Corinthians is the second of three in which Paul examines the gifts of the spirit and compares them to spiritual graces. The Corinthian church had been divided into four parts over the issue acquiring and usin the gifts of the spirit.

In chapter 12 Paul listed nine categories of gifts that believers receive, each having the purpose of expanding the kingdom. Those who had one gift or another suggested to other members of the body of Christ that they had achieved or received something that made them spiritually superior to others.

That prompted Paul, under the direction of the Holy Spirit, to write chapters 12-14 noting that all gifts come from the same spirit but have different functions. Since gifts will eventually diminish in use, acquiring the graces should be the goal of every believer, not gifts. Even the idea that some believers have something that others don't have divides the body of Christ but the graces of God form the basis of real Christian living.

Paul discussed the full range of graces in Galatians 5:22-23. Here he notes that the "fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, Meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." Without these qualities, commonly described as graces, the Christian life is empty.

Thus Paul, in the 13th Chapter focuses on one of the graces "love" showing how it is superior to any of the gifts such as tongues, prophecy or knowledge. He noted that some gifts, like tongues, or prophecie never be diminished by time or condition. He showed how the grace of love, for example, is far more important to acquire than gifts. As he detailed how love operates he noted that if he had all of the gifts but didn't have the grace of love, instead of operating on a higher level, he would be empty. His words in verse two, " And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing."

Many in Paul's time were unable to understand the differences. They were caught up and divided over the issue (1:10-13). They were blinded by false teachings and could not see otherwise, especially those who had received the gift of speaking in foreign languages.

Paul noted, that a time would eventually come when every believer would be able to see clearly the truths of God's word. Diminished perspective is common, but those who come to know God fully get a new perspective. The new perspective gives them a new appreciation of what is truly important, lasting and most effective in the service of God. He compared the new perspective to that of a mature person over a child. Perspective makes the difference.

The carnal man sees life as though looking through a dark glass. The perspective is not godly. However, Paul reminds us that the time is coming when all will share the same perspective and see the same things. That day will come when all see Jesus face to face!

How We See Things

The March of Dimes has a video that is being shown to boys across the nation. It depicts a young man who gets a girl pregnant but tries to dodge his responsibility. While the teen mother goes through the troubles of child bearing he enjoys the good life until he purchases a pair of magic glasses that changes his perspective. While wearing the glasses he becomes a pregnant mother, experiences morning sickness, gives birth to a baby and his girl friend treats him coldly during and after the process. While wearing the magic glasses he was able to see things from the perspective of his girl friend and his life was never the same.

How do we see things in life? Do we see life through rose colored glasses? Is everything lovely or is everything dark? Does every situation present an opportunity or do we see defeat on every hand. The difference between the believer and the non-believer, for the most part, is in perspective. One sees life carnally. The other sees life with a spiritual eye.

Let us consider sunglasses again.

SOME BUY SUN GLASSES FOR LOOKS. Protecting the eyes from the sun is not a consideration in this instance. Sun glasses are purchased because of the way they will make the wearer look. Thus, emphasis is placed upon the frames. Will the frame make the wearer look good? Will the frame accentuate the wearer's positives?

In a similar manner many approach life from the viewpoint of getting that which makes them look good and feel good regardless of any other consequences. The "sun glass" perspective of life suggests that we should do that which makes us look and feel good as priority items. This is the attitude of the free wheeling, happy-go-lucky person, who constantly seeks the next thrill and refuses to take life seriously.

Those who select sun-glasses based on the frame forget that the most essential part of any kind of eye apparel is not the frame but the lens. A great lens in any kind of frame will still be great. However, no matter how expensive the frame, a poor lens will do exactly what poor lenses do..perform poorly!

SUN GLASSES ALTER REALITY: To protect our eyes, sun glasses reduce the light we see. They make things appear better than they really are. Sun glasses alter reality.

There are many who live in an altered state of reality. They live in a city and somehow blot outof the minds the homeless people they see every day. They imagine the prostitutes they see on street corners are not really there and hope they will disappear if they look the other way. The bulging jails, teen sexual activity and rising crime all exist but somehow those who see life from the world's perspective never come to grips with the reality that such problems exist in our city and they involve real, not imaginary people.

Sun glass people have become insensitive to the problems around them. They have little time or resources to dedicate to resolving the problem. As long as they keep their sun glass perspective they don't have to sing "If I can help somebody as I pass along, then my living shall not be in vain." Sun glass people sing it this way "If I can pass somebody on my way home, then my living shall not be a pain."

SUN GLASSES MAKE DARK TIMES EVEN DARKER: On dark days, sun glass people have an even more difficult time because sun glasses make things darker by blocking out the light.

In difficult times we need the light. Sun glass people find dark days are even darker because their perspective makes things worse. Sun glass people can't see the bright side of bad situations. Things are dark and because they see with the carnal "sun glass" eye they see the bad side of everything. A lost job, love or fortune is terminal when seen from the perspective of sun-glass people. They give up on themselves and life in general. There is no other way. Some resort to drugs and alcohol. Some take up residence on skid row. Others take their own lives. Sun glasses make dark situations even darker.

SON Glasses

When Paul told the Corinthians "now we see through a glass darkly" he described the carnal man's perspective. The carnal person faces life with apprehension and misunderstanding. But Paul said a time is coming when we will be able see with the spiritual eye. That will be the day when we approach life wearing SON glasses.

SON glasses give us a new perspective on life that puzzles those around us who wonder what is wrong with us.

Stephen was being stoned to death by his enemies, but he lifted his eyes to glory and asked God to forgive them. The people saw the tragedy of the moment Stephen saw the triumph of the church!

It is only when we put on our sun-glasses that we find a reason for joy in the middle of troubles. That's why James 1:2 reminds us that whatever the situation we should "count it all joy."

A Christian always wears his or her SON glasses but there are special times when must be sure they are close by. They are SON glass moments.

When hard times approach and it seems like we can't make our way, that is a SON glass moment. Reach for your SON glasses and you'll remember Psalm 37:25 "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

When death has invaded the ranks of your family and you reach an all time low, that is a SON glass moment. That's when you remember 2 Corinthians 5:1 "..if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

When it looks like you've placed yourself in an impossible fix that you cannot escape, that is a SON glass moment. That's when you remember 2 Corinthians 9:8 "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work:"

When it appears that every thing is going wrong and you are headed from catastrophe, that is a SON glass moment. That's when you remember: Romans 8:28 "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

When life seems to have reached its darkest point, that is another SON glass moment. That's when you remember: Psalm 30:5 "..weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

When you are wearing your SON-Glasses dark days look a little brighter.

— hard times feel a little easier;heavy burdens get a little lighter — Failures become opportunities for success; Setbacks become changes in direction!

Who is the maker of these SON glasses? Who is the author and finisher of this faith?

His name is Jesus!

He died out on Calvary!

Jesus! Who arose from the dead!

Jesus!

Jesus!

He'll Welcome Me Home

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 21, 1996

SCRIPTURE: And the LORD said unto Jacob, Return unto the land of thy fathers, and to thy kindred; and I will be with thee. Genesis 31:3

Introduction

Have you ever felt unwelcomed? To feel welcome is to feel appreciated and wanted. That is a feeling that most people like to experience. A stranger in a country wants to feel welcome. Already uneasy because he's in a new place, the stranger feels a little better when he is greeted by smiling faces and indications that he is indeed welcome. A visitor likes to know that he is welcome. Cities take great pains to assure tourists and visitors that they are wanted and appreciated. When conventions come, banners roll out and signs are posted in windows welcoming the guests. When company comes to our homes we make extra efforts to let them know that their presence is not an interruption but truly an asset and a high mark of the day. Feeling welcome is important because it sets the tone for the experience. Those who feel unwelcome begin the experience on a negative note which could sour the entire experience.

Most communities and homes make great effort to make guests feel at home. But, there are times when we feel unwelcomed, even in our own families. Being unwelcomed in the family circle is the ultimate ostracism. The family knows, appreciates and wants us to be close. Any person who is rejected by his family, regardless to how oblivious he appears to the snub, is injured internally.

Those who feel welcomed see a perpetual open door. They sense that an invitation to visit and share always exists. Consider the young man who had gone away from home to start his own family. He bought himself a new home, car and lived rather lavishly. One day in his parents received a letter in the mail. The letter contained a ring of keys and a note. Curious, the parents read the note which said: "Dear Mom and Dad. Please find enclosed the key to my new car, key to my to home burglar alarm code, the combination to my safe. Anything I have, please feel free to use or borrow. You gave me full access to your treasures, I give you full access to mine." At the bottom of the note was a P.S.: "By the way I still have the key to your front door...just in case!" The parents felt welcomed to their son's home. He also felt welcome to return home anytime he wished.

As Christians, we have given God the keys to our lives. We have given him access to the treasures and secrets of our souls. We have given him our all. In return God has given us the key to the kingdom of God and he welcomes us to use it freely.

Expectations Differ

There are many who never expect a welcome greeting or an invitation from anyone. At the very least they feel unwelcomed. They consider themselves the "black sheep" of society and have resigned themselves to lives of mediocrity. Such individuals fall into a number of categories:

THOSE WHO DON'T KNOW WHAT TO EXPECT: There are many who have been estranged from their families for many years. When they consider going home, they don't know what to expect. Their last encounter wasn't the best and they are troubled by the prospect of going home.

Such was the case with Jacob. He and his brother Esau had been on bad terms for over 20 years. Neither had seen or spoken to the other. Esau had sworn that he would kill his brother because he had stolen his birth right and cheated him out of his father's blessing. The family was in disarray. Mother tended to favor Jacob over Esau and bad blood was everywhere. When God told Jacob to return to his family in Genesis 31:3, Jacob did not know what to expect. He was at crossroads. He agonized over whether or not he should go home. He tossed and turned in his sleep. Just before making his decision, he wrestled with an Angel and evolved with a firm resolution to return to his kindred.

There are many siblings today that are torn in a similar way. Some have left for one reason or another and have cut off all connections with the family. On occasion the thought of going home or calling the family occurs but rarely happens because they don't know what to expect. What they remember is what they last experienced. Jacob rose above his fear of the unknown and found that his brother Esau had forgiven him and welcomed him home with arms wide open. Many today might find Jacob's experience similar to their own, especially if the spirit of God has spoken to their soul and said "go home to thy kindred."

THOSE WHO DON'T EXPECT MUCH. There are others who return home not expecting much. Perhaps they left in pride and arrogance and return in humility. They don't expect to resume their former place of family respect, only to be in the number.

Such was the case of the prodigal son. His family gave him the best of everything yet he decided to leave and try life for himself. In the far country he wasted his substance in riotous living. When faced with the prospect of eating husks with the hogs he came to himself. He considered that his father had many hired servants who were living, eating and doing better than himself. When he came to himself he decided to go home. He expected only to be treated no better than a hired servant. His father had done no wrong. He made the mistake. He messed up his own life. All he expected was a roof over his head and support for a while until he could get on his feet.

There are many estranged from the family who see themselves as prodigals. They did not listen to the advice of their parents and grandparents and wandered into an unforgiving "far country" where they wasted their substance. If they return home they don't expect anything but the least the family has to offer. However, like the prodigal, many have found that the arms of the family wide open in reception to a loved one that has returned to start again. The key in this instance is not the fact that the son left but that he "he came to himself." The prodigal son was restored to his place of honor and position in the family because of its joy that he was once lost but now found, blind but now able to see.

THOSE WHO NEVER EXPECT A WELCOME. There are some who are orphaned by society who never expect a welcome or a home. They have resigned themselves into thinking the worse and expecting the least.

Jesus, in Luke 14:12-14, urged believers to be concerned about those outside of the immediate family circle. Those who expect nothing and consider themselves outcast. Using the illustration of a banquet he urged believers to reach beyond relatives and the important people of the community, to the lost, forgotten, orphans and the poor. Individuals and families that reach beyond their own circle and help others will be blessed in great ways. The ways of reaching and touching vary from family to family, but every family should not only reach out for its own but help another struggling soul as well. Those who feel themselves outside of the reach of love or concern instantly find themselves welcome as one soul opens his home to them in love. Such actions are welcomed in heaven. Jesus promised a blessing saying in verse 14 "And thou shalt be blessed."

THOSE WHO DON'T EXPECT OR OFFER A WELCOME. There are many in life who neither expect or give welcomes. They have shut themselves out to the world and will not allow anyone close to their sphere of life.

With respect to spiritual affairs the question of life is reversed. The great question is not whether or not Jesus will welcome us, but in the case of those with closed doors, whether we will welcome him in our lives.

Jesus said in Revelation 3:20 "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

There are too many whose attitude about Jesus in their lives reflects the tone of a poem by Lois K. Blanchard which asks these pointed questions:

"If Jesus came to your own home to spend a day or two
— If He came unexpectedly, I wonder what you'd do?
I know you'd give your nicest room to such an honored Guest, and all the food you'd serve to Him would be the very best.
And you would keep assuring Him you're glad to have Him there — That serving Him in your own home is joy beyond compare;
but when you saw Him standing there, could you go to the door, with arms outstretched to welcome Him your Heavenly Visitor?
Or would you have to change some things before you let Him in?
Or hide some magazines and put the Bible where they'd been?

Would family conversation be continued at its pace?
And would you find it hard each meal to say a table grace?
Would you be glad to have him meet your very closest friends?
Or would you hope they'd stay away until His visit ends?
Would you be glad to have Him stay forever, on and on?
Or would you sigh with great relief when He at last was gone?
It might cause some embarrassment the things that you would do,
If Jesus came to your own house to spend some time with you.
Jesus is calling the weary to rest, Calling today, calling today! He is tenderly calling today!

What The Saint's Expect

Finally, we should consider our spiritual state. Similar to previous examples many consider themselves outcasts from the family of God. For one reason or another they do not consider themselves worthy

Like Jacob, there are many who have been away from spiritual circles for so long they don't know what to expect when they return. But the love of God is so gracious that despite their estrangement God will welcome them with open arms.

If we have been cut off from the family of God because of a life of sin, there is a healing spirit that awaits the saints when they come home. I hear 2 Chronicles 7:14 say " If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

Isaiah 1:18 "though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow"

What that says to me is that regardless to what I have done, if I come home to Jesus, he'll welcome me!

Like the prodigal, there are many who feel they have erred in life and don't deserve to be in the family God. But they soon find that the love of God is forgiving for "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" Rom 3:23. Regardless to past mistakes, he forgives and restores the lost to positions and places of love and trust.

That means it doesn't matter whether I have made a mistake in life, if I come home, he'll welcome me!

Like the poor, maimed and the orphaned, many soon learn that the love of God is concerned about everyone regardless to their state of being or prominence. Regardless of our station in life, everyone is welcomed in the family of God.

I hear him say in Matthew 11:28 "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

That's why the song writer declared: "I came to Jesus as I was, weary, wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad."

I know he'll welcome me because he loves. John 3:16 says "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

He'll welcome me because Revelation 21:7 says "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

I am reminded of a lost son who had been away from home for many years. He had heard the old stories about tying a yellow ribbon around the oak tree so he wrote his parents a letter which said "I'm coming home. Mama if you welcome me put a white sheet on the clothes lie and a yellow ribbon on the old oak tree. Tell papa if he forgives me, to ring the old bell." As the train made its way to the old country house it made one last stop and picked up a few passengers. The young man nervously kept his eyes on the window. As the train passed his family house his heart dropped when he didn't see any sign of forgiveness.

He asked the conductor to stop the train. He looked at the empty tree and clothes and listened for the old bell to ring, but heard nothing. As he sat down in his seat he heard a familiar sound. Coming down the isle was his father with cowbell in both hands ringing them like crazy. Behind him was his mother, who made herself a dress out of an old white sheet. In her hair was one yellow ribbon for every year her son had been gone. They both opened their arms and said "My son! My son! Welcome home!

That's the way the Lord welcomes us home!

Jesus, the lily of the valley; the bright and morning star.

Jesus, who died on Calvary and rose after three days..

Welcomes me Home!

"Open wide thine arms of love, Lord I'm coming home!"

"Coming home! Coming Home, never more to roam"

Open wide thine arms of love, Lord I'm coming home

I CAN

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 28, 1996

SCRIPTURE: I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me. John 5:30; I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. Philippians 4:13

Introduction

Did you get a chance to observe any of the Olympic activities this year? Each day was filled with great accounts of young people and adults who overcame tremendous odds in search of the gold. There were literally scores of youth who had placed their eyes on an Olympic goal from near infancy and spent years sacrificing, training and overcoming obstacles to become the best in their country in quest of becoming the best in the world. There was great drama as the world focused on teen-agers who were able to overcome pain and injury to become the best in their field. There were even some, not-so-young, who had reached their late 30's seeking Olympic gold. One 37 year old track star had been seeking Olympic Gold since she was 13. Despite failures she kept coming back. Despite setbacks, she just kept coming back!

Even more important than the Olympic Gold medalist is the tremendous amount of optimism and spirit needed by every participant just to make it to the Olympics in the first place. Before these athletes trained their bodies, there was another training they had to endure. They had to train their mind and attitude to believe in themselves. They had to come to a point in which they could actually see themselves standing among the winners wearing the gold medal that suggested to the world that they are the best of their generation. Their journey to the Olympics began when they began to believe in themselves and say I CAN. No matter how they thought about it, pondered or considered it, the journey did not actually begin until they said the magic words: "I CAN." The rest is history. Whether the journey is a thousand miles or across the street it begins with one step.

The idea of believing in one's potential doesn't just apply to Olympic athletes. Great success stories are not confined to the rigors of athletic discipline and training. Those who succeed in any life quest, whether it's the Olympics, business, education, science, sports, or myriad of other careers, all begin at the same point. That point is the time and place that they decide I CAN.

Young Christians are preparing to run the race of life. They are preparing to make life's high dives, relay races, as a part of God's dream team. There's a great distance between beginning and finally making the goal, but it all begins when each youth decides "I CAN."

As Christians, we know that WE CAN do anything that is the will of God for our lives. We know it because we serve a God that can do anything. With our hand in his hand we will be able to reach our highest potential. We know we can because our God can do anything!

Exposition

These two texts focus on Jesus and Paul as each reflects upon the source of their tremendous confidence and optimism.

In John 5 Jesus gives a sermon on the nature of the kingdom of God. As people marveled at all of the wonderful things he was able to do in his ministry, they were puzzled. They wanted to know how he was able to perform his mighty works. They saw the lame walking after an encounter with Jesus. They saw the blind able to see again after they met Jesus. They saw those with leprosy made whole. They saw the broken hearted and dispirited encouraged. They saw people making full transitions in life after coming in contact with Jesus. They marveled at his power and many sought after his "secret" so that they themselves could use it. In response to those who were inquisitive about his power, Jesus took time to explain to them that while he received the credit for the miracles it was actually God working through him that made it so.

As those around him kept elevating him higher in prominence he kept humbling himself and reminding them that alone, he was not able to do anything. He did not have to make the mistake of Samson to know the source of his power. Samson flirted with the flattering words of Delilah only to be awakened one morning to learn that the source of his power was gone. He had muscles and great physical statue but yet was unable to do any powerful acts because the real source of his power was the presence of God.

Thus, Christ told his followers the source of his great deeds was not in himself but was in God. His hand touched the lame but it was God that made them walk. He spoke the words to the blind but it was God that made them see. Lepers were made whole after leaving his presence only because God willed it so. The simple acts and words he spoke would be powerless and empty were it not for God taking them and making them into powerful instruments to perform his will.

When Christ said "I can do nothing" he pointed to a great truth. To do his mighty works he had to reach a point in his life in which he decided to lose himself in the will of God. That was the point in which he decided to pursue a life lost in the will of God. That point was reached in his wilderness experience where he was tempted three times by the Devil who challenged him to use his popularity and gift of miracles for personal profit and fame. But in the wilderness, Christ decided to empty himself and let God use him as an instrument of his will. Thus, he could said "I can do nothing" of myself.

Without God I am nothing. Without the eternal power of the father I am weak and without ability to do anything. But everytime I act, he uses me to make a point for the kingdom.

While Christ said "I can do nothing" Paul writes to the Philippians saying: "I can do all things!" At first it appears that Paul is boasting of an ability that Christ didn't have. But in actuality he is saying the same thing. Christ said in John 5:30 "I can do nothing" but it is God. Paul said "I can do all things through Christ." Christ, letting God work through him, was able to perform miracles. Paul, depending on Christ the mediator between God and man, realized that he too had great potential. Each says, alone we are powerless. With God we are unbeatable.

Together the two statements of truth seem to say "I can do all things through Christ" but "without God I can't do anything!" It is a statement of confidence, and at the same time a statement of humility. "With God I Can do anything. Without him, I can do nothing.

Two Important words

The words I CAN are powerful. They declare a determination, a conclusion and resolution that comes at the end of a decision. Yet singularly they go even further.

When Paul said "I CAN" he narrowed the focus of his concern to himself. "I" is personal. It suggests a private application.

As we consider people all around us who have made great advancements in life we are marveled at their accomplishments. In school, youth are encouraged to read the biographies of great achievers. George Washington Carver, Booker Washington, Micheal Jordan, Muhammad Ali, Mary McCleod Bethume and others all have great success stories. They rose from obscurity to prominence. Teachers often encourage students to read books about the lives of these great people to allow them to see that these role models of success were ordinary people who often succeeded despite great adversity.

When we read about the successes of others that is a "him, her, they and them" situation. We learn about someone else's success. We learn about someone else's achievement. We learn about someone else's accomplishment. But what about me?

There are three prominent magazines in the African-American community: Ebony, Black Enterprise and Essence. Ebony present photos and articles that generally show Blacks enjoying the good life. It is filled with pictures of the rich and successful in our race. Essence and Black Enterprise do the same thing, but with a twist..they also provide numerous articles that show readers how to do what others have done themselves. That marks the big difference. When Paul said "I CAN" he narrowed the field down. It is obvious that others have done great things, but what about me?

When we see God working through the lives of other people and watch them make great strides the Christian doesn't watch them with oogly eyes and say "Wow, isn't that great!" The Christian says "Isn't God good?" and is encouraged!

The words of the Song writer are true: "It is no secret what God can do. What he's done for others, he'll do for you. With arms wide open he'll pardon you, it is no secret what God can do!"

CAN

The second word in the phrase is "CAN!" It suggests potential. It suggests possibility.

According to Webster the word "can" literally means "to be able to" or to "possess the qualities, qualifications, and resources necessary for the attainment of an end or the accomplishment of a purpose."

What "can" says is that we "have what it takes!"

One of the first steps to success in life is to learn that we have the potential and ability to accomplish goals.

To know we that we "can" requires that we first evaluate what we have. What has God given me to work with. Athletic ability? Inquisitive mind? Organizational skills? Charisma? Talent? Insight? Patience? Once we realize that we actually have something to work with (and everyone does) then the hard part is over.

Can "means "I have what it takes to make it big!"

Yet while "Can" suggests potential it also suggests permission. That means it is possible to have the potential to accomplish an end but not the permission. A teenager may have the ability to drive a car but not the permission. A child may have the ability to play safely in the back yard, but not the permission. Paul traveled three missionary journeys but was not allowed to go to Asia Minor. He had the potential but not permission.

"Can" suggests that with God's blessing and permission a child of God has limitless potential to achieve and seek high goals.

"I CAN" means I have what it takes, and with God's permission there is nothing that is impossible for me to accomplish.

All Things

The child of God should face life with confidence that with God's permission, he can use his natural and spiritual gifts in a way that will both edify and glorify the creator.

There are millions in the world today who have given up on themselves. They have lost hope and think that failure is their fate and see defeat as their epitaph. They cannot picture themselves in the winner's circle, only among the losers of life! If they only knew what we knew, they would see life different.

Consider the preacher who decided to conduct a revival on skid row. He didn't put up a tent or a pulpit but took a shopping basket and went up and down the street, dressed in his ministerial robe, picking up crushed can. It was a strange site, watching a prominent pastor pushing a shopping basket down the street each day, never saying anything but just picking up crushed cans. Everyday the men on skid row watched the old preacher and were puzzled. They recognized him but wondered why he busied himself with picking up cans? At end of the week with his shopping basket and two garbage bags filled with crushed cans the pastor stood on a street corner in the middle of skid row and announced that he had word from the Lord. Curious, one man asked "Why have you been picking up all those cans, you are a preacher?" The pastor answered "These cans represent the hopes and dreams of thousands who have been drained of their substance, crushed and thrown aside. They are no longer "cans" but can'ts. Can't succeed. Can't dream. Can't hope.. But I've come here today because I know a man who recycles crushed lives! Cleans them up and refills them and makes them whole again!"

I may not be able to do it by myself, but I have a father who can!

I may not be able to give you every answer, but I have a father who can!

God can do anything!

There has never been a —Problem that God could not solve!

—Question that God could not answer!

—Enemy that God could not conquer!

—Mountain too hard for God to climb!

—Storm too hard for God for God to still!

—Emptiness too deep for God to feel!

No wonder the song writer wrote "I may not be able to take the lighting a flash it across the land. I can't take a piece of clay and mold it into a man, but I have a father who can!"

I have a father!

I have a father!

I have a father who can!

A Taste of Honey

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 18, 1996

SCRIPTURE:Then said Jonathan, My father hath troubled the land: see, I pray you, how mine eyes have been enlightened, because I tasted a little of this honey. 1 Samuel 14:29;" O taste and see that the LORD is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him." Psalm 34:8

Introduction

Have you ever had a free sample? The purpose of a sample is to acquaint prospective customers with a product. Sometimes samples come in the mail. They range from toothpaste to perfumes. Sometimes they are large and sometimes they are small. On occasion, persons shopping in malls may be stopped by vendors offering samples of food stuffs or other merchandise. The food samples are very small. Sometimes they are so small they can fit on a toothpick but they are still large enough to give the consumer a taste of what the whole product is like. The product manufacturer uses sampling as a marketing technique. It is hoped that the product will be so well received that the consumers will want and buy more of the product. Many of us have started using a certain product after we were introduced to it by means of a free sample.

Some people enjoy samples, but never buy the product. They thrive on the samples. Soap, dish washing liquids, dry cereals, shaving cream and 30 day free trial offers are regulars on their list. They seldom buy anything, especially if they can get a sample. They have made sampling a way of life. They seek to get all they can without any cost of commitments to themselves.

In a spiritual sense, God gives us samples too. Often we are unfamiliar with the nature of God and the extent of his power and ability. We hear His promises to provide for us and keep us under his protective care but we still don't understand it all. To help us understand, God gives us a few samples of his love and concern.

Unexpected blessings are samples of God's philanthropic nature. These are the times that God causes things to happen to our benefit that we never asked for or even expected. These are samples of God's benevolence. In a similar sense we get other samples from God. When we are forgiven for offenses that deserve condemnation, that's a sample of God's mercy. When we are guided away from dangerous pitfalls, that's a sample of God's protective hand.

Like a manufacturer who gives samples to introduce consumers to a product, we have all around us samples of the power, might, gentleness and love of God.

There are many today who are living on the samples. They are tasting the goodness and benevolence of God but not accepting him for themselves. They receive God's blessings but won't praise him, acknowledge him or give him control of their lives. They are content to wait on the samples.

As Christians, we have seen and sampled the goodness of God. We have been so blessed by the samples that we have decided to switch brands. Rather than trust in the world or ourselves we have decided to trust in the Lord. We no longer wait on the samples that may come every now and then. After tasting the honey of God's goodness, we trust him daily and get blessed every day of our lives! No wonder the Psalmist said "O taste and see that the LORD is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him."

Exposition

This text focuses on Prince Jonathan as he discovers the effects of a taste of Honey. King Saul fought many invading armies during his reign as king. One of those armies was that of the Philistines. Once Saul pursued the Philistines relentlessly. He gave an order, which later proved to be unwise, that none of his men could eat anything. The soldiers were forbidden to even taste any food items. Those that broke his commandment would be put to death.

As Saul's armies pursued the Philistines they apparently ran them through groves of trees filled with honeycombs. It is believed that the Philistines tore open the honeycombs and nourished themselves leaving honey dripping from the trees. As Saul's men walked through the trees, exhausted and hungry, they were surrounded by honey and the quick energy it could provide. However they were unable to eat any because of the king's decree. It was a frustrating moment. Honey was dripping from the trees but they were unable to touch any of it.

Jonathan, the king's son, did not hear his father's decree. When he was surrounded by so much sweetness, Jonathan took the end of his staff, poked it in a honeycomb and tasted the honey. Though exhausted like the rest of his men, he was instantly nourished by just a taste of the honey. The small sampling on honey that he tasted gave an indication of the greater good that could be accomplished if all were allowed to participate in the virtual feast that was hanging from the trees.

Just a taste of honey enlightened his eyes!

Just a taste of honey refreshed him in that moment!

Just a taste of honey lifted his spirits!

Just a taste of honey gave him physical strength and hope!

When he was told about the king's order, Jonathan said it was not a wise order because the men were obviously hungry and fatigued. They would have fought even harder if given the chance to nourish themselves from the abundance of honey.

Jonathan revealed his deed to his father who was prepared to execute his son. He was only saved when the entire army protested taking the Prince's life after he had valiantly led them in battle.

They insisted that Jonathan should not be executed over a taste of honey.

The irony of the text is that Jonathan symbolically stood amidst the fulfillment of the promise but was prohibited from enjoying it. In Deuteronomy 27:3 and other instances, Israel was promised that they would enter a land that would be flowing with presence of God. Opportunity for life and growth would flow freely. It would be a land of milk and honey. This text finds Jonathan literally surrounded by signs of God's promise fulfilled. Not only was he surrounded by honey that was actually flowing from the honeycombs, he wasenjoying one of the greatest military successes of the nation's career. They were surrounded by opportunity but forbidden to take advantage of it, or to even taste it.

The presence and Word of God is frequently compared to honey in scripture. Psalm 119:103 presents the Word of God as sweeter than honey. It reads: "How sweet are thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!" Proverbs 24:13 compares honey to the knowledge and wisdom of God.

David in Psalm 34:8 invites all who do not know the power of God to sample the goodness of the Lord. He invites doubters and skeptics to "taste and see." He does so with a confidence that once having tasted of the blessings that flow from God all will decide to trust whole heartedly in the Lord.

Surrounded by Honey-Starving

Today there are literally millions of people who, like Saul's army, are surrounded by the promises of God but unable to claim them! All they hear is the command "Don't taste the honey!"

The promise of opportunity supported by the power of God surrounds us today. It is flowing like honey all around us. Yet while it flows there are so many that are feeling faint and weary while standing in the midst of the best times of their lives.

What prohibits us from enjoying the happiness that God has promised? Generally the only thing that stops us from enjoying God's blessings fully is the prohibitive commands of society. The world has given us a command to distance ourselves from God. It has warned us of the foolishness of religion, faith and spirit filled living. It mocks worship as a waste of time and public praise of God as a display of mysticism bordering on the fanatical. It, in effect, says "Don't taste the honey." So we wander in a grove of opportunity never fully realizing all that we can be, afraid to trust God.

Israel was promised that it would come to a land flowing with milk and honey. The army of God stood in the midst of the promise and nearly starved to death. So are many today. They are standing amidst great opportunities yet failing to achieve.What they hear is the voice of defeat "don't taste the honey."

The truth of the matter is whatever we need God's got it! Whatever we want, God can provide it! If we seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, according to God's Word all things are possible! We are surrounded by honey but we will never enjoy it fully until we are able to trust God completely and step out on faith.

A Taste of Honey

Just as there are millions who are like Saul's army, there are others who are like Jonathan. For whatever reason, Jonathan did not hear the king's command. He did not know that he wasn't suppose to enjoy the honey. Therefore when he came to grove he took sampled the honey.

Instantly the soldiers told him "You can't do that." Jonathan's reply has modern day applications. He told them that the soliders would be able to fight harder and would be stronger if they could eat of the honey. He only had a taste himself was instantly revitalized.

Today there many who have had a taste of God's blessings.

Was it a financial woe that bothered you? Did you silently pray to God to help you? When the answer came, that was a taste of honey! You only trusted him a little and got big results. It was just a sample of what could be if you trust him more!

Was it a sickeness that troubled you? You were not sure it would do any good but you asked God to help you anyway! When you received your blessing, that was a taste of honey!. There in that sick room you trusted him a little and got big results. It was just a sample of what could be if you trust him all the time!

Was it a personal distress that troubled you? When God answered your prayer and brought you through, it was just a sample of what could happen all the time. It was just a taste of honey!

If a simple taste of honey brings us joy and happiness and answered prayer, there is no measure of what's in store for those who trust in God continually!

No wonder David declared "O taste and see that the LORD is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him"

Trusting in the Lord

The simple truth of the matter is that those who have placed their trust in the power of God have never been disappointed or let down. God will never fail!

If you have been trusting God a little, the answers you have been receiving are just samples of what's in store if you trust him a little more!

If you trust him, when your back's against the wall of life, he will help you stand tall! I heard David declare that he couldn't go to the left or the right but "I'll lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth!"

When men are talking about you and calling you all sorts of names, remember Psalm 31:1 "..In thee, O LORD, do I put my trust; let me never be ashamed.."

If you have been worrying about putting food on the table, just remember Psalm 37:3-4 "Trust in the LORD, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed. Delight thyself also in the LORD; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart.

Have you try to figure out why things happen the way the do remember Proverbs 3:5 “Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge and he will direct thy paths.”

Have you had a taste of God’s honey? Has he given you a sample of his mighty works?

If you trust in the Lord, he will take your:

—Sadness and turn it into gladness; FAILURE and give you the victory!

—WEAKNESS and give you strength; BITTERNESS and give you sweetness!

He’s sweeter. Sweeter than honey!

Honey is sweet because of the flight of the honey bee. But he’s sweet because of a flight he took to come down and save me!

Honey is sweet because it contains fructose and glucose. But He’s sweet because he is the essence of Agape love of God that’s always close Honey is sweetened while it’s in the honey comb. But He get’s His sweetness from heaven and shares it with every home!

No wonder the song writer declared: “He’s sweet I know! He’s sweet I know. I found a saviour and He’s sweet I know!”

“There’s a sweet, sweet spirit in this place and I know it must be the spirit of the Lord!”

Who is it who is so sweet that he is love is sweeter than honey?

Who is it who is so sweet that when he speaks the birds hush their singing?

Who is it who is so sweet that every day with him is sweeter than the day before?

His name is Jesus!

He is the sweet Rose of Sharon! The lily of the Valley!

He died out on Calvary and Early Sunday morning he arose from the Grave!

I found a savior and..

He’s sweet I know!

SCRIPTURE: Let the redeemed of the LORD say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy; And gathered them out of the lands, from the east, and from the west, from the north, and from the south.They wandered in the wilderness in a solitary way; they found no city to dwell in.Hungry and thirsty, their soul fainted in them.Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their distresses. Psalm 107:2-6 But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light:1 Pet 2:9

Introduction

Have you ever kept quiet at a time when you knew that you should have spoken up? What was the reason for your silence? Sometimes embarrassment kept us quiet. Perhaps We felt we would be the only ones speaking on the subject and would appear peculiar. Sometimes fear made us hold our peace. We were afraid of what others would say or think so we kept our true feelings to ourselves. Whatever the reason, there are times that many of us know that we should have spoke, instead we kept quiet.

There is no time when it is harder to keep your peace than when you want to bear witness to a truth that has affected your life. At times such as those it appears that we would explode if not allowed to speak up. Consider Shouting Sally's testimony. Shouting Sally had a reputation in the country for being loud when it came to praising the Lord. If the preacher said anything about the goodness of the Lord it was almost assured that Shouting Sally would say Amen loud and clear!

When things really warmed up Shouting Sally was known to throw her purse at the preacher and shout so hard they'd have to carry her out of the church. She also had a reputation for favoring a good dip of Bitter Garret Snuff under her lip. One Summer Shouting Sally went to stay with her Cousin who was a member of one of the quieter congregations. When she arrived her reputation preceded her. As she sat in the quiet church and the preacher philosophically called the name of Jesus she would shout "Amen!" After a while the members became disturbed because she shouted so much. Finally the preacher met her one Sunday and promised her a case of Bitter Garret Snuff if she could go through one service without Shouting out! As the service proceeded Shouting Sally tried to hold her peace. When they sang "You don't know what the Lord has done for me" she squirmed in her seat but kept thinking of all that snuff. Another sister moaned "I've tried the man and the man is alright!" and she began to rock in her seat! But when the preacher started talking about Jesus and his goodness, she squirmed in her seat and started waving her hand. Unaccustomed to so much activity in the pews the preacher asked: "What's wrong Sally?" Sally answered: "I love the Lord and I sho' would hate to lose a who case of snuff. So If I can't say a word, I'll just wave my hand!"

That's the way it is with Christians. We have seen the great things that God has done in our lives. On occasions we try to hold our peace to conform with the standards of the social order. However there are times when we can't hold our peace.

As Christians, we know what God has done for us. We know the sacrifice that was offered on our behalf on Calvary. When it's time to praise God, we can't help it, we have to praise the Lord!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he advises those who have been redeemed by God to express it in their lives.

This psalm is part of a trilogy of psalms which extoll the greatness of God and demonstrate his mercies. This Psalms simply speaks of how good God has been to Israel and how praising him for his goodness is a natural response.

This Psalm is best appreciated in good times. It is anachronistic in its approach. That it is, it telescopes its focus over both recent and distant history and catalogs all that God has done as evidence of his goodness. The catalog of merciful deeds is the foundation and reason given why God should be praised. Unlike other Psalms, such as 121, which are read best in times of trouble, or 37 which is read best when troubled by the presence of evil and doubt, this Psalm is celebratory in that it celebrates the goodness of God.

Verse two of this text summarizes the theme of the trilogy: "Let the redeemed of the Lord, Say So!" It characterizes the good deeds that God has done in our lives as worthy of acknowledgement.

As if Israel needed a reminder, David took the time to retell Israel's story. He described their lives as a wandering nation of nomads, fresh from slavery and ignorant to the demands of life and survival. They wandered from place to place for 40 years and found no city in which to rest, no new clothing for the backs and no supply of food and water that was not provided by the hand of God directly.

When they hungered and thirst, they cried unto God and he provided their needs. He sustained them and protected them against enemies and against themselves. In their distress, they called upon him and he answered them by becoming their refuge and their strength.

David further recounts that after they wandered for 40 years following their own way and failed to reach the promised land how he took them by the hand and led them the "right way."

In verse eight he sums up the reason that men should "Say So!" They should "say so" because of his "wonderful works to the children of men."

Thus the Israel of Old Testament times had a reason to show forth the goodness of God intertwined into their national fabric. He brought them from slavery to the promised land and presided over their conquering efforts to claim the land of promise.

1 Peter 1:9 is one of several New Testament texts which gives reasons why the New Testament Christ should give praise to God, in addition to the general reasons given in the old covenant.

Peter details that New Testament believers have even more reason to praise God. Today, the modern believer is a blessed generation, special and important to God.

The reason for the celebration in the life of the Old Testament saints rested in the national blessings. The reason the Saint celebrates is because of what God has done both for the collective and each individual personally. He gave each the individual opportunity to take part in the kingdom of God as a community of priests, able to step out of the darkness of the past with all of its ritualistic prohibitions into the marvelous light of the present.

The redeemed of the New Testament should "Say So" because they have been brought out of the darkness into the marvelous light.

Peter challenged believers to be living stones, or living testimonies to the goodness of God. That means that the very lives of the Saints would testify to the goodness of God in both their words and deeds.

Together, the two texts jointly encourage believers to loudly proclaim the goodness of God in both verbal testimonies and in their actions and deeds. Both give witness to a doubting world that the Saints of God serve a wonderful and great God who is worthy to be praised.

How Do the Redeemed Say So?

How does the modern believer give God praise? Is there a special way that is acceptable to God. David, in Psalm 116:12 suggested that the only way we can truly "say so" is not so much by what we say but what we do. In Psalm 116 David asked the question "What shall I render unto God for all his mercies?" His answer suggested action. He noted that to truly praise God we must at the least: take the cup of salvation, call upon his name, and pay our vows to God. The indication is clear, to really "say so" we must do something. Simply talking alone is not sufficient.

Often youth get the impression that praising God refers to specific details or methods of worship. Some believe that praising God means to sing loud, clap their hands, dance the holy dance or to fall out. While these are all various ways in which praise may be demonstrated, these are not all inclusive.

More important than the demonstrations of praise referred to here is the praise that is demonstrated in spirit filled living.

Our daily lives are a demonstration of praise to God. That's why Paul, writing to the Romans in 12:1 said "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

The lifestyle of every young person gives evidence that they praise God. There is something different about them that sets them apart from the rest of the youth in their community. There are tell tale signs that indicate they are different.

They speak politely and have respect for their elders.

They are clean and neat in their dress.

They are orderly and obey their parents, teachers and others in authority.

They study the word of God and try to live by its direction!

Peter said our living sets us apart from all others. It makes us distinct and indicates that we are a special generation that live to praise the Lord.

Service To Others

Another way to praise is through service to others.

There is no better way to demonstrate to a hungry man that God loves him than to give him bread to meet his immediate need and then show him how to make bread to meet his long term needs.

There is no better way to show forth the praises of our God than by sacrificial service to those we encounter along life's way.

Even youth can praise God in this way. Youth who volunteer to help in their community show forth the praises oto pick up paper from city streets, serve as hospital candy stripers, man Salvation Army kettles, and a plethora of other activities that suggest that they give back to others as a way of giving thanks and praise to God for what he has done in their lives.

Matthew 25:45 finds Jesus telling those who want to praise him but show little compassion for the poor, needy and downtrodden that they are mistaken. That which is done to the "least of these" is also done to God, including acts of kindness and benevolence.

Worship and Praise.

We also praise God through song, liturgical dance, drama, preaching and teaching and various forms of worship.

We praise God through lifting of Holy Hands, singing Psalms and giving testimonies of his goodness in our everyday lives.

When a Saint stands and sings "I sing because I'm happy. I sing because I'm free. His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me" that's a testimony of praise!

When even a young voice lifts itself in praise to sing "this little light of mine I'm going to let it shine!" That's a testimony! That's a moment of praise.

We praise God because he's worthy to be praised!

We Must Say it Loud!

Finally, we must note that there can be no real praise of God unless we do it publicly. Praise by its very nature is done in public.

A private awards program to present Oscars, Emmies and Grammies would have little effect. What good would the awards be if no one knew what was being said about the recipient?

The nature of gratitude is to express thanks to the person who has made you the recipient of a kindness. Gratitude can be expressed publicly or privately and often has the same effect.

However, praise has to be done publicly or it has no effect.

Have you been wandering in the deserts of life? Have you been sustained in your wilderness journey by blessings that only God can give? Then you ought to tell somebody!

Have you felt the sting of hatred or tasted the bitter dregs of anger? Were you able to survive the ordeal thanks to the help of almighty God? Then you ought to tell somebody!

In the late 1960's the African-American community was sweltering in self hatred. They hated their hair and their color. We conked our hair. We bleached our skin. We sang little rhymes that said "Get back jack, your hands too black, you look like came from cross the rail road track."

Despite a rich African Heritage that resulted in the construction of the pyramids! We were ashamed of ourselves!

Despite surviving over 200 years of slavery! We were ashamed of ourselves!

Despite making great contributions to the greatness of America, we were ashamed of ourselves.

Then in the late 1960's James Brown coined a phrase that got us to thinking a little different. He said "Say it Loud, I'm Black and I'm Proud" Instantly Blacks who had been ashamed of their heritage started cutting their cuts and sporting afros. Bleaching cream products went off the shelves. Instead of "Get back jack your hands too black we started saying ' The blacker the berry the sweeter the juice!" A race of people was ashamed had been revitalized.

Today brothers and Sister there are still some saints who are ashamed to praise the Lord!

Despite serving a God who has been better to us than we have been to ourselves, they are afraid to praise the Lord!

Despite being healed of illnesses and sicknesses, they are ashamed to tell anybody about the goodness of the Lord!

I hear David declaring "let the redeemed of the Lord Say so" that's his way of saying if the Lord has done something for you ought stand tall and say "Say it Loud, I'm Saved and I'm Proud"!

Some people are shame to claim the name, but ain't no shame in my game!

At the name of Jesus every knee shall bow. I may as well tell the story and tell it right now!

Say it Loud! I'm saved and I'm proud!

Amazing Grace, how sweet the Sound that saved a wretch like. I once was lost but now I'm found. Blind but now I see.. Say it Loud!

I came to Jesus just as I was, weary wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad..Say it Loud!

God so loved the world that he sent his only Son Jesus to give me a second chance!

He died on Calvary and is alive today!

Say it Loud!

It Seemed But A Few Days

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
At The Enterprise Baptist Church
Bay City, Texas

August 31, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "And Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her." Genesis 29:20

Introduction

Have you ever found yourself asking the question: "Where did the time go?" That question often comes to mind when we observe youth who have become adults and we recall their earlier years with an eye of nostalgia, asking: "Where did the years go?" It also surfaces at the end of an enjoyable experience, at the completion of a life goal and in other moments of reflection. "Where did the time go?" It wasn't squandered or wasted. It simply seemed to sweep by us, like a breath of wind.

Time seems most accelerated in two instances: When we are living a good life and when we are in love. Those who have been blessed to enjoy either of these great blessings are most fortunate. Those who have had the opportunity to experience both are extremely blessed. A good life is productive, secure, challenging, successful, spiritual and generally happy. The good life has eluded many who get some of its components and miss others. Those who are able to capture the full essence of what it means to live "the good life" know that it is more than simply having a successful career or comfortable lifestyle, but also means being comfortable with one's self and being at peace with God. A companion to the good life is "real love." Real love is unselfish, generous, painstakingly sensitive and passionate. It is romantic and private, sensual and personal. Many spend their entire lives in pursuit of "real love" and only rarely come close to experiencing what it means to truly share an "endless love."

Those who have been blessed to live both the good life and share real love at the same time enter a whirlwind relationship filled with so much happiness that they achieve a lifetime of fulfillment at such a fast past, that upon reflection, seems but just a few days. It seems like just a few days ago that the man who stood at the altar and took a bride was a little boy, crawling on his knees and struggling to stand on his feet. It seems like just a few days ago that the woman who wears a wedding ring on her finger today, was a little girl, with ribboned hair, stretching her little fingers to play the piano. Yet even as the years go by the little boy within every man never seems to go away. As a child he may have played football on a high school team, but as a man he still revisits those high school days in front of his television set with remote control in hand. There seems just a thin line that separates the boy that watches cartoons on Saturday and the grown man that is still fascinated by Sega Genius; yet the boy who had to be told to pick up his play things and put them away, seemingly overnight grew into the man who learned how to handle his own affairs well. It all happened so fast that it seemed but a few days.

Today we celebrate a good life and a real love that flashed across the horizon of time, danced through the corridors of joy and lodged itself among trophies of eternity. It all happened so fast, that it seemed but a few days.

As Christians, we recognize that our entire life journey is pilgrimage from time to eternity. We cherish every moment, embracing the good with the bad. We who have placed Christ first in our lives know how to live the good life, fight the good fight and finish our course, whether it is a lengthy marathon or simply a short dash. We give God thanks always for the good times, even though they past so fast that they...seemed but a few days!

Exposition

This text focuses on the romance and marriage of Jacob and Rachel.

Jacob was a colorful and important figure in Old Testament history. Nearly half the Book of Genesis tells his story. He was respected and revered so much by Old Testament believers that no one else gave their child that name. Only in the New Testament is there another named Jacob and he was the father of Joseph the husband of Mary.

By all standards Jacob was a very successful man. He was well organized, a leader of his generation and by every measure a successful man. Early in his life he caught a glimpse of future promises as he came face to face with the realization that his life goals were dependent upon his ability climb by the power of God. He envisioned a ladder that reached into glory with angels ascending and descending. In that hour he met God at a place he called Bethel. From the day he met the Lord his life became a gradual climb, round by round, toward higher heights, guided by the hand of God.

Jacob enjoyed the good life. Through hard work and sacrifice he accumulated considerable resources and was able to live a comfortable life. He worked well with people and developed a large staff of assistants and subordinates whose daily actions he directed and supervised. He invested wisely and managed his resources well. Even though he was away from home, he continued to worship God and ordered his life in a way that pleased Him. He blessed God by living a God fearing life and God blessed him with health and prosperity.

In addition to living the good life, Jacob was also able to experience real love. He fell in love with a beautiful young lady named Rachel. He was so captivated by her that he was willing to go to any extent to claim her as his own. He worked 14 years for the right to marry her. During these 14 years he was sustained by hope and anticipation. He worked hard every day to claim her. As he labored 14 Summers, 14 winters, 14 springs 14 falls and 5,110 days he was not injured in spirit. It all seemed "but just a few days!"

Jacob's story is a story of a God fearing life. It is also a story of a man who was deliriously in love. It was a life and a love that was so intense and fast moving that when it was over.. it seemed but a few days!

Short Days

Psalm 89:47 gives us a reminder of the brevity of life when it says "Remember how short my time is." It is the same reminder given in Psalm 90:9 "For all our days are passed away in thy wrath: we spend our years as a tale that is told." These scriptural footnotes remind us of the brevity of time and provide a compelling reason why we should strive to use our time wisely.

In the context of life and death, time is the measure of one's life experiences. In this context time is not defined by counting the sheer number of days of an existence but rather by assessing the experiences of a lifetime. Thus, it is possible for a highly productive person to do more in a short lifetime than a less productive person could do even if given double the available time to complete the same task. In relative terms, even those of us who live beyond our three score and ten years have actually accomplished little if the nature of our tenure has not been productive. We are reminded that Methuselah lived 969 years but all that was written about him was simply that he died. Though Methuselah lived 353,685 days he accomplish nothing worthy of note.

There are many whose lives, though short, were significant because of the nature of their experiences. They wasted little time and managed themselves in such a way that they were able to accomplish much in a small span of time. The names of Martin King, John Kennedy, Robert Kennedy and countless others ring out as examples of people whose lives were shorter than most but whose accomplishments in life exceeded their years.

If we measure a life by time alone the results would not tell the whole story. We have seen too many examples of young boys who became mature men in the span of just a few weeks. Have we not all seen a young boy enter the military and 13 weeks later emerge as a full grown man. It was the intensity of the experiences not the time that made the difference. At the same time we have seen relatively young men shoulder heavy responsibilities and in the span of a few years emerge with gray hair and deep furrows in their brow. Again it is the intensity of the experience not the time that makes the difference.

A man who can claim a successful prep athletic career, a liberal education, a successful career in the business world, a record of community volunteerism, a happy marriage and a son has accomplished much. He has accomplished even more if he did so in a short number of years.

If length of life was measured by experience and accomplishment, then such a man would have lived to a ripe old age.

Yet there is another consideration beyond the mere number of our years, that being how we live your years.

How Fast Time Passes

We have all heard the children's joke that asks: "Why did little moron throw the clock out of the window? Because he wanted to see how time flies! Those who have whisked through life experiences are very much aware of how time flies.

While it is true that time is a measure of life's experiences, it is also true that our perception of time is influenced by the quality of our life's experience.

If our life's experience was miserable, sad, filled with failure and defeat, time seems to pass slowly. Like the nights we stay awake in fear of the dark awaiting daylight, it seems that during such time the break of dawn never comes. If we hate our jobs the work day is too long and the end of the day doesn't come soon enough. If we hate our spouses we can't be rid of them soon enough. Some even hate themselves and feel every day they live is too long and then end it all.

If all we see in life is its dull side rather than its sunny side then time passes extremely slow and life is a bore.

If, however, our life experiences are filled with happiness and accomplishment, the time seems to fly!

If, we succeed in life and achieve our career goals!

If, we marry a beautiful person and spend every day like it was a honeymoon!

If, our days have been filled with romance, love, fun, laughter, travel and excitement!

If, our joy has been highlighted by new birth and renewed life!

If, we have saturated our months with worship, praise, prayer and spiritual humility!

If our experience has been a succession of adventures, captured snapshots that are stored in the albums of the soul..

The time flies so fast...that it seems but a few days!

Hold To His Hand!

The rapid transitions that life bring sometimes come faster than we expect. They often catch us off guard. Those who have experienced the dizzying whirlwind of the good life may be tempted to ask why must the ferris wheel stop? Why couldn't it continue?

The strong look back at the good times and conclude like Job, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away blessed be the name of the Lord!"

In such times it is best to hold to the changeless hand of God. He gives. He sustains. He strengthens.

Maybe that's what the song writer had in mind when these words were penned: "Time is filled with swift transition. Naught of earth unmoved can stand. Build your hopes on things eternal. Hold to God's unchanging hand!

Even when our eyes well with tears, hold to God's unchanging hand!

When tempted to doubt and question his love, hold to God's unchanging hand!

In good times and bad times, hold to his hand!

Through risings and fallings, hold to his hand!

If you hold to God's unchanging hand He will take your:

—DOUBTS and replace them with confidence; FEARS and replace them with courage!

—FAILURES and turn them into victories; SORROWS and replace them with joy!

Hold to his hand to God's unchanging hand!

Face every day with confidence that God still loves you!

He loves you so much that he sent his only begotten son on our behalf!

Hold to his hand!

Hold to his hand!

Build your hopes on things eternal and hold to God's unchanging hand!

On Friday August 23, 1996 Kevin Matthews finished his course. In the short span of 33 years he lived a good life, experienced real love and spent his last moments playing with his son....it seemed but a few days!

Living With Your Sunny Side Up

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 1, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "Be of good courage, and he shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the LORD." Psalm 31:24

Introduction

What do you do when everything that can go wrong does? There are times when, despite your best efforts, nothing seems to work out right! Trouble seems to come in herds. Seldom do problems and difficulties appear in isolated instances. Problems always seem to bring its friends: disappointment, headache and frustration. What course do you take when life turns its dark side your way? When dark clouds of difficulty overshadow your sky, what is your response? The immediate response of the carnal man is to respond by sulking, complaining or feeling dejected. The carnal instinct is to feel sorry for ourselves and wallow in self pity. But the spirit being in each of us speaks a different language that the carnal man cannot understand. The spirit being tells us to look beyond the frustration of the moment, it is not over, God will work it out.

True believers have learned that God does not allow anything to happen to the faithful that is not for their own good. That's why Romans 8:28 says " And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Much of our life's experience is a testimony to this truth. Consider the Western pioneer couple that invested their entire savings on farmland in California. They heard about the fertile ground of California and they made the long journey from New York to California to stake a claim on the future. They came through the torturous heat of the desert and endured the chill of winter like nights, in hopes that God would lead them to a piece of farmland that would grow rich crops. They built a little cabin and plowed the ground. They were disappointed however because it appeared that one calamity after another always fell upon their efforts. Locusts ate up their entire crop once and they lost everything but the seed. They replanted and the following year a great flood came and destroyed all of the crops in the valley. Frustrated, the planted another crop but it was destroyed by a drought. They were disgusted. They were angry. They had asked God to give them a better life and he brought them through four years of frustration and disappointment. The man and wife prayed and asked God for a blessing! As they slept that night a storm broke out and a mighty wind blew down their tiny cabin. Only their family altar was left standing. The man was so angry at God for taking his crops and destroying his house that he reached into the mud to throw a rock at the altar. Just he curled back his hand to throw the rock he noticed that what he thought was a rock was a gold nugget as big as a baseball. The rain had washed away enough top soil for him to see that the site of his house was now a literal gold mine! God had answered his prayer four years earlier, but he was digging in the wrong place!

Often, many of us spent our lives complaining about misfortunes, troubles and difficulties only to find out that often the very troubles that we complained about turned out to be a great blessing.

As Christians, we know that God is always watching over us. No matter what comes our way we keep our sunny side up because God will work it out for us. We are confident that he will make a way for us! No matter how dark the moment or how terrible the storm, we know there is a bright side somewhere!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he praises God for reminding him of the rewards that are in store for those who do not lose the faith.

David spent a great part of his youth and young adult years as a fugitive from King Saul. By no fault of his own he was hunted, persecuted and treated as a criminal because he was popular. Saul's armies chased him continuously and he was always hiding and eluding the king. The king frowned upon anyone who would help him. Thus David was often shunned by those he came in contact with because they feared for their lives.

David was a believer in the power of God. He had seen God's handiworks on many occasion. Even when he was a youth God protected him when he kept his father's flock. As a young man God gave him courage and direction when he faced the Philistine Giant, Goliath. When the king became angry with him, God even helped him to elude King Saul on numerous occasions. Without a doubt David was aware of the power and presence of God.

The 31st Psalm is the musing of a believer who knows what God can do and believes God will do it, but momentarily lost focus on how God operates. In this Psalm David speaks of his trust, distress and hope.

He begins by telling God of his trust that God would provide and protect him because of his unrighteous persecution. Surrounded by enemies David asks God to deliver him from their traps and tricks. In verse one he simply said "deliver me in thy righteousness." In verse two he asks God to be his "strong rock." In verse three he urged God to "lead me and guide me." In verse four he urges God to "pull me out of the net" prepared by his enemies.

In verse five David places his whole life and destiny in God's hand, completely trusting him to do that which must be done according to his will. His words:"Into thy hands, I commit my spirit" were repeated by Christ as one of his seven last sayings on the cross.

In frustration David tells God about his distress. Verses 9-13 detail David's feelings. He said he was "consumed with grief." Surrounded by the prospect of defeat, failure and execution he had reached a very low point. (v9-10). Rejected by friends and neighbors who sometimes slandered and defamed him, he was ostracized and shunned to the point that he felt like "a dead man" (v11-13). At any given time David expected to be reported to the king by someone who would be willing to betray him to gain favor with the king. He slept little, trusted few and suspected many of those who banned with him of secretly plotting with him, although that never proved to be the case. Paranoia was one of the first aftermaths of his distress.

As if suddenly reminded of God's power, at verse 19 David gets a sudden burst of renewed hope and faith. He remembers the goodness that God shows to all who trust and depend upon him. While he anguished over the negative things he supposed others were saying about him and the plots and plans that were being registered against him, he remembered that God hides believers in his shadow and keeps them safe from stings of wagging tongues (v20). While he was complaining about his circumstance he was instantly overwhelmed when he remembered the goodness of God whom he remembered "hath showed me his marvelous kindness" in the past. (v21).

By way of confession, David said he hastily concluded that he had been abandoned or cut off by God because of his circumstance. He felt that the only way such difficulties could confront him was through abandonment by God. He concluded "nevertheless" despite his own attitude of doubt and anxiety, "thou hearest the voice of my supplications when I cried unto thee."

David's attitude took a positive shift from the "darkside" of distress and frustration to the sunnyside of hope. When he thought of how God preserves the saints and rewards those who try to do good, he concluded that all believers should be of good courage in times of trouble for God will not fail the believer.

Thus faced with a dark moment, David found the strength to turn his attitude sunnyside up. The key words that he leaves for other believers to remember are: courage, strength and hope.

When the Dark Side Comes

Sooner or later even the best saints experience the dark side of life. These are times when things get rough. The question is how we will respond to life's dark sides? The various responses are familiar to us. In a way trouble treats us like eggs in the skillet and our response is strikingly similar.

SCRAMBLED: There are many whose response to trouble and difficulty is a scrambled and mixed up response. The scrambled response is the one which lacks direction. The scrambled response reflects itself in the person that runs from one failed solution to another, which almost always includes a variety of quacks and weirdos. How many, in their frustration, turn to voodoo doctors, witchcraft, palm readers and spend tons of money consulting their psychic connections. Even those who are believers spend inordinate amounts of time running from church to church, religion to religion and faith to faith in an exhaustive effort to make sense of their dilemma.

David referred to this confused state in Psalm 44:15 when he said "my confusion is continually before me, and the same of my face hath covered me." The desire to avoid confusion probably prompted his prayer in Psalm 71:1"In thee O Lord do I put my trust: let me never be put to confusion." Believers whose approach to trouble is scrambled should remember that "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace" (1 Corinthians 14:33).

HARD BOILED: Some, when faced with difficulties adopt a cynical attitude. They are more or less hardened in their spirit. They believe life is the pits and they assume that God has abandoned them therefore they conclude that they should abandon God. Job's three friends adopted this attitude and tried to get him to adopt the same. However, Job refused to become cynical, despite his troubles and continued to display hope that God would bless him despite his condition. Job's conclusion was memorable: "Yea though he slay me, yet will I trust him." The hard boiled are those who just give up on God completely. They suffered a sickness or experienced a death or a major failure and as a result they gave up on God. Being Hard boiled is an attitude of defeat.

POACHED: Some meet difficulties with an attitude of doubt and insecurity. Like a poached egg that is neither raw or completely done, there are many who are somewhere between being sure and wondering why. These are the believers who know what the word says about their situation but still they are unsure of their situation. Assurance seems to evade them as doubt envelopes them. The poached forget the words of Jesus, "Lo, I'll be with you always, even unto the end of the world." That's why the words of the songwriter inspire us "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mind oh what a foretaste of glory divine...this is my story, this is my song, praising my savior all the day long."

Sunny Side Up

While there are some who approach difficulties with a scrambled mix of emotion and attitudes, there are others who wear a happy face in the midst of hard times.

While there are some who become bitter and hard boiled when they are greeted by the rough side of life, there are others who weather the storms of life with a lifted head and strong determination.

How can a person who his drenched by the waters of hard times and frustration, live with their sunnyside up?

How can those who have shouldered the burden of sickness and financial ruin, still live with their sunnyside up?

How can those who have suffered the pain of death and defeat as they watch their dreams withered like the petals of a flower, still live with their sunnyside up?

These have built their lives and hopes on something more sure than the physical possessions or presence of body. They have placed their hopes in the power of almighty God.

No wonder the song writer declared "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the Solid Rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand."

Daniel, how can you walk so calmly, don't you know you're in the Lion's den?

Hebrew boys, how can you be so cool, don't you know you're in the midst of a fiery furnace?

Everybody wants to know how a child of God walk with a smile on their face in their midst of trials and tribulations!

We know something that the rest of the world has not learned...it doesn't matter how hard the storm rages. It doesn't matter how dark the night...our God is able!

He's able to take our:

—Rough places and make the plain; Dark nights of sadness and brightened them with joy!

—Fears and turn them into courage; Bowed down head and lift it up high!

We can walk with our sunny side up because "greater is he that is within me than he that is in the world!"

We can walk with our sunny side up because we've already been promised the victory!

Keep your head up high! Don't be afraid of the night!

Jesus is always standing by!

Jesus! Who died out on Calvary!

Jesus! Who arose one Sunday morning!

Jesus is alive today. As long as he lives, there may be a rainy day, but because he lives I know there's a bright side somewhere!

Passing Life's Test

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 6, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "And it came to pass after these things, that God did tempt Abraham, and said unto him, Abraham: and he said, Behold, here I am." Genesis 22:1

Introduction

Have you ever taken a long test and exhaustive test? We've all taken tests on one occasion or another. Depending on the level of our preparation, the tests were either difficult or so easy we described them as pieces "of cake." Some tests are relatively short. They have only a few questions and require only a few answers. Such tests are short quick and snappy. There are others however that are long and exhaustive. The ACT, SAT,GED and the California achievement tests are long and comprehensive. They are mentally and physically demanding because they attempt to measure, to some degree of accuracy, what a person knows on a wide variety of subjects.

Long tests require both mental and physical preparation. Sharp students learn how to study for exhaustive tests. They focus on principles and ideas rather than specific names, dates and places. They learn sequences of events, paying special attention to cause and effects. Mental preparation for tests requires them to know the information and understand the principles. However, regardless to the mental preparation, those who take tests will confirm that one must also be physically prepared for the test. A good night's sleep is usually the best way to avoid pure exhaustion on an exam. Many have failed tests, despite excellent mental preparation, because they burned out on the exam. They were so tired they could not focus or recall the vast storehouses of information they had stored away. Those who want to do well on long test must be prepared mentally and physically.

We know how to prepare for tests in school or in the work place, but how do we prepare for the great tests of life? What do we do to prepare ourselves? Life's tests often come spontaneously. Like an unannounced "pop" quiz that measures our level of preparation, life often tests each person's preparation. Life also has its long and exhaustive tests. These are periods of trial, deprivation, difficulty, sickness and pain. Success on the tests of life require preparation and spiritual strength. The believer must prepare for the "pop" test and the exhaustive test. Both will take every ounce of strength and substance.

Often life's difficulties prove to be a great test that molds and shapes us. Consider the young man who complained frequently about the failure of his peach orchard. It seems that for several seasons he had watched thousands of acres of peaches destroyed by frost. It made him angry. He stopped going to church. He stopped praying. He became angry with God for sending frost to destroy his peaches. One day he explained his dilemma to another an old Christian sweet potato farmer. The old man listened as the young man railed against God. As he listened, he peeled a sweet potato and began to eat it raw as they talked on the porch. When he saw the impatience of the young man he said, "son the answer to your situation is in the taters!" Surprised, the young man said his concern was peaches not potatoes. "Taters" said the old man "get a little sweeter after the frost hits them!" The young man responded,"What's that got to do with growing peaches?" The old man looked at the young, impatient boy and said "You don't pray any more. You don't go to church anymore. You are angry with God. It could be that God is not interested in growing peaches on your place. It could be that he's interested in growing a seasoned young man that will grow sweeter after the frost falls a few times!"

As Christians we learn quickly that life's troubles season us and prepare us for better living. Like the frost and the potato, they seemed to make us humble and more aware of our dependence on God. Thank God for the frost!

Exposition

This text focuses on Abraham whose life is given as a great example of faith. Yet Abraham's successful life of faith came as a result of his passing four great tests of his faith.

Abraham was tested by God on several occasions. The purpose of each of his tests was to evaluate his faithfulness and willingness to be true to God despite the frustrations caused by his test. The word "Temp" is used in Genesis 22:1. In this context it did not mean "prompted to do wrong" but rather it meant a "test" of Abraham's loyalty, sincerity and faith. God does not tempt man with evil deeds (James 1:2,13,14). People are only tempted when they are drawn away by their own lusts and desires. Such temptation does not come from God. Genesis 22:1 shows us the beginning of another of Abraham's four great tests.

Test 1: His first test came when he was called to leave his native country and kindred to go to an unknown place. (Genesis 12:1) This was an extremely difficult test because it required Abraham to venture into the unknown and break ties with the known. To satisfy the demands of God's order, distant travel would be necessary with little or no chance of returning home. With little or no knowledge of the place he sought, Abraham began the life of a nomad traveling from place to place "looking for a city."

Test 2: The second test involved parting with Lot. Abraham told Lot to part company with him because of the quarreling of their employees. This was a painful decision, but nevertheless it was one that was necessary. Lot was a relative and possible heir and a fellow believer. Parting from him left Abraham alone in a strange, without an heir with old age approaching. This took a considerable faith. (Genesis 13:1-18)

Test 3: The Third test involved Abraham being obedient to God's wish that Isaac and not Ishmael would be the recipient of the promised inheritance. Abraham and Sarah had agreed upon a plan of action as it regarded their family but God had other plans. Abraham's willingness to abandon his plans showed how much faith he placed in God's promises. Thus, he passed his third test. (Genesis 17:17-18)

Test 4: The final test for Abraham struck even closer to home. He was asked to give up his only son by his wife. This was a personal sacrifice. The seriousness of the final test was underscored when God said "thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest" and sacrifice him in a burnt offering. It seemed cruel of God to make Abraham wait until he was 75 years old before he received the promise of a son by his wife and then wait another 25 before he allowed the son to be born, then order that the son be sacrificed. (Genesis 22:2). Yet as cruel as it seemed Abraham was willing to do all that God had commanded. He passed his final test.

At the conclusion of Abraham's period of testing he was heralded as a man of great faith and strength. That was not determined however, until after he passed his life's test.

When We Are Tested

Even the best saint can expect to be "tempted" or tested by God. For Abraham there were four tests. Each test called upon him to make extreme sacrifices. At the time Abraham made his decisions they seemed unfair and difficult. Looking back, however, they proved not to be so difficult. His last test did not even require him to complete the assignment but just be willing to go all the way. In a similar sense each believer faces tests of character, strength and faith. Whether we meet the challenge posed by our respective tests determines whether or not we "come through as pure gold."

CHANGING DIRECTIONS: Sometimes we are called upon to change directions in life. For Abraham the change of directions meant to move out of his hometown and go to a place he had never been. Just as it took great faith for Abraham to make such a move, it requires great faith for believers today to make major life changes. Sometimes major changes involve changing cities. Sometimes they involve changing careers. Sometimes it even means changing entire lifestyles.

What makes such changes difficult is that we often become comfortable in our present circumstance. We want to do something different but we lack the courage or strength to follow the inner voice that speaks to us. Doing what has to be done requires intense faith and confidence that if the move we are about to make is blessed and ordained by God we will be successful. This is the same dilemma faced by Jacob as he toiled over the thought of leaving Laban and returning home to face his brother Esau. It is the same problem faced by Naomi and Ruth as they decided to return to Israel. The prodigal son made that decision too!

Believers, toiling with major life decisions, should talk them over with God. Once assured that God has blessed the action, be strong and do what has to be done!

BREAKING TIES: One of the hardest decisions for anyone to make is to break a family tie. That is the situation that Abraham faced. He enjoyed Lot's company and they were not enemies and harbored no ill feelings. Yet they were growing too big to live in the same space. Independence was calling out for a response.

Often the family circle gets a little crowded as each person grows and matures to individuality. Parents sometimes smother their children with love. They often become over protective and remain so even after their children are married and are managing their own lives. Sometimes it is necessary to allow our children to grow up and live independently. One of the greatest tests of faith, especially for parents is to allow siblings the space to mature without parental interference.

FOLLOWING GOD'S PLAN: Sometime our test involves our willingness to follow God's plan for our lives, rather than our own. Sarah had devised a plan to insure that Abraham had a son, since she was not able to give him one herself. The young man, Ishmael was loved by Abraham and he and Sarah made plans for his future. However, God had different plans. Not only would Abraham and Sarah have a son, but the son, Isaac would be the heir, not Ishmael his first born. That meant Abraham had to change his family and accept God's plan. It was painful but yet necessary.

Often we make decisions about our personal lives and family direction. The decisions we make are based upon our own desires and goals. Yet, there are times when God makes different plans for our family and lives than we have made and he points us in different directions. Following God's plan requires faith. Following God's plan will effect the way our marriage operates. It will impact the entertainment choices of our family as well as vacation plans, career choices and many other lifestyle choices that are dictated by the love of God rather than the whims of the flesh.

Following a path that has been ordered by God can only lead to righteous living. The psalmist records "he leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake" (Psalm 23). Those who are willing to follow God find that he blesses them immensely and never leaves them.

PERSONAL SACRIFICE: Then there are times when we face personal trial and sacrifice. For Abraham the sacrifice required the possible loss of a loved one. Though grieved, he was willing to submit to the will of God.

In the course of each life we face the same dilemma. We often face life situations that require personal sacrifice and test the very fibre of our moral strength. Sometimes it sickness. Sometimes it is poverty. Sometimes it is death. Sometimes it is all of these wrapped into one.

When Job faced his moment of sacrifice he maintained his faith in God and responded "Yea though he slay me, yet will I trust him." He rose to occasion and maintained his faith and trust in God.

When our day of sacrifice comes, we too should prove faithful and maintain our trust in God. It is extremely easy to become bitter in such circumstances, but the faithful know that God will never faith or desert them. In moments of personal sacrifice, endure to the end and be sure that God will reward those who prevail.

Passing the Test

Every believer should be reminded that there are rewards for those who pass life's tests. Abraham's four tests resulted in a life that was long, fruitful and happy. He is remembered as a man of great faith.

When we put our trust in God and endure the test, we can expect not just a passing grade but a "Well done!"

Joseph found himself thrown into pits and locked away in jail cells, yet he endured and God raised him higher than his family members who persecuted him.

Moses was exiled in Midian for 40 years as he matured in the faith, but when his testing period was over he returned to Egypt as a man who was strong enough to stand before Pharaoh and declare "thus saith the Lord God almighty, let my people go!"

Job's test was exhaustive! It touched his body! It touched his relatives! It touched his resources and finances! Despite the all encompassing nature of his test, Job came through as pure gold!

Daniel met the test of the Lion's den!

The Hebrew Boys met the test of the fiery furnace!

Maybe that's what the song writer had in mind when he asked, "Have you been tried in the fire? Did you come forth as pure gold?"

When you've been tried in the fire you know that days of tears and sadness may come but "weeping endures but a night and joy comes in the morning!"

When you've been tried in the fire you know that despite the hopelessness of any situation "Our God is able to deliver us!"

When you've been tried in the fire you sing a different song that is filled with hope!

When you've been tried in the fire you walk a different walk that is filled with anticipation!

When you've been tried in the fire you never give up hope!

Though we endure many risings and fallings we know that the God we serve is a good God! He will not abandon us or forsake!

That's why the Saint of declares "I am on the battlefield for my Lord. And I promised him that I, would serve him till I die. I'm the battlefield for my Lord."

Training Wheels

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 22, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it. "Proverbs 22:6

Introduction

How did you first learn to ride a bicycle? Did your bike have training wheels? Did someone run along beside you to get you going? One of the great challenges of youth, after learning to walk, is learning to ride a bicycle. It requires balance and a sense of self confidence. To assist in this process, manufacturers came up with a special set of wheels that are attached to the back wheel of a bicycle. The purpose of the two little wheels attached to the back wheel is to help provide balance and confidence to the rider. It provides balance whenever the rider leans too far to the left or to the right. It provides confidence because the little wheels don't always touch the ground. The riders build courage because they actually ride under their own power until they begin to lean. The knowledge that the wheels are there in case of a fall builds confidence.

Some who have never had bikes equipped with training wheels had to learn the old fashioned way. A parent or friend ran along beside the rider holding on until the rider got under way. Though wobbly at first, the rider got the hang of riding, after a few crashes. Unlike weary parents, training wheels never tired. Training wheels were always attached. Riders who used training wheels never had to wait for others to catch their breath. Training wheels were convenient.

Training wheels serve a purpose, but there comes a time when training wheels are no longer necessary. Consider the little boy who was being trained to ride his bike by his father. On the first day out his father said to him. "Son, there are three things you should always remember if you are going to learn to ride a bike." The excited son committed all three to memory: "Keep your eye on the road, don't lean to the left or the right and remember daddy's right there." As the boy mounted the bike his father had him to repeat the three rules and then ran along beside him shouting encouragement and reminding the boy to keep repeating the three rules.. After each ride the boy was excited and thrilled. After the third ride his father ran along side him but didn't say anything as the boy kept reciting the three rules. One day he mounted the bike as usual and took off chanting to himself "Keep your eye on the road, don't lean to the left or the right and remember daddy's right there!" Two blocks up the road he looked back and was surprised to find out that his daddy had not made the run with him but was waving from the front yard. When the boy returned the father said "Son let this be a lesson to you in life. You will succeed if you can keep your eye on the road, never stray to left or right and remember, even when you can't see him, not me, but your heavenly father's right there!"

As Christians, we know that as we travel through life that our heavenly father is always there to help us. If we fall, he'll pick us up. If we stumble, he'll catch us. Our goal is to move through life with the full knowledge that God loves us and is always by our side.

Exposition

This familiar text shares the wisdom of Solomon on the training and rearing of a child.

Solomon, generally considered the wisest man the world has ever known, wrote hundreds of proverbs or wise sayings that were based upon his experience in life and truths revealed to him by God. Among those was this single admonition about child rearing. Greater insight into the passage shows the full thrust of its meaning.

Solomon urges parents to train children. The Hebrew word for "train" is "chanak" which has a variety of meanings that reveal the full extent of Solomon's admonition.

DISCIPLINE: Discipline is the first implication of the word "Chanak." Discipline is the general training that makes training in specific skills possible. It generally involves three elements: Self control, character and orderliness. It is achieved by the establishment of a system of rules, which when followed will assist its subjects in learning and growing. Discipline is seen as a necessary part of the growth process, thus children are ordered by God to "obey" or attentively follow the righteous instructions of their parents. Colossians 3:20 "Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord."

DEDICATE: Chanak also means to dedicate. To instill a sense of special purpose within a trainee that sets him or her apart for a sacred and special work. It also means to instill a sense divine calling within each young person. This encouragement to teach each child about their special purpose began when Israel received the law of God from Moses. In Dueteronomy 6:7 And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. In Deuteronomy 6:8 Moses told the people to teach the laws of God to the children, reminding them that they were his chosen people, "And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes." The idea of being special orders steps and dictates direction. The New Testament reemphasizes this point by reminding believers that "..Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light:" 1Peter2:9

THROTTLE: Chanak also means to throttle. Those who train supply the fuel of encouragement and support to young eager minds while at the same time withholding support for any ventures or areas that may be dangerous to growth.

The New Testament expands upon the three dimensions of "Chanak" by using the word "nurture." Ephesians 6:4 "And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Nurture involves all aspects of life that influence its final outcome. Thus, believing parents are expected to apply, discipline, dedication and throttling controls on all aspects of a child's life. The final outcome of such training would be a child that grows up in the admonition of the Lord.

There is a time frame, according to Solomon, when discipline, dedication and throttling can best be achieved. Childhood is the best time to teach discipline, inspire purpose and to exercise the throttling influence. Although the values can be learned at other stages of life, few stray away from truths they learn during childhood. Thus, parents are encouraged to train at the optimum time in life, childhood.

The results of proper training is a child that grows up in the fear and admonition of the Lord. It is not an easy assignment, yet it is necessary.

Training Wheels

Learning how to live is like learning to ride a bicycle. In the beginning we need a little help. We need training wheels. We really need someone to run along beside us to keep us from falling. The role of good parents is to implement the three dimensions of "Chanak" in the lives of our children.

A SENSE OF DISCIPLINE: The three aspects of discipline are self control, character and orderliness. Every child should be taught self control. It begins at home when he or she learns to obey the rules of the home. That's when the child learns that there is a time and appropriate place for certain actions. Speaking out of turn, interrupting the conversation of others, disrespectful behavior are all signs of an undisciplined child. Controlling the impulses, selecting friends and deciding upon acceptable activity are other areas that indicate discipline. Character involves values. There are 13 important values that every child should be taught at home, at school and in every organization or group in which he or she participates: Honesty, loyalty, helpfulness, , friendliness, courtesy, kindness, obedience, cheerfulness, thrift, courage, cleanliness, respect for God and a good education. These values develop the essentials of character. They are learned in childhood. They are difficult to learn or unlearn in adulthood. In addition to self control and character, orderliness is another essential. Learning orderliness is important because it allows us to easily follow rules and to gain control of life's situations. A lack of order suggests chaos.

A SENSE OF PURPOSE: Every child should be instilled with a sense of purpose. The sense of purpose is the "reason" why we exist, go to school, or worship. Every child should know that he or she is God's special representative and is learning everything needed to represent him. Every child's sense of self should be developed to the point that they know who they are without the need for a Nike "swoosh" mark to tell them that they are somebody. They should know that they are special because they are children of God.

ENCOURAGING SUPPORT: Parents should exercise a throttling influence. They should open up the throttle and encourage children who are involved in healthy, wholesome activity through their presence and moral support. The intense encouragement and visible presence for those activities that are acceptable has a throttling effect when it is withheld. It suggests that a planned activity is not acceptable and does not meet family standards. Every parent should keep their eyes focused on the throttle for it can often be as effective as the rod.

Train up a child, says Solomon, in the way he should go. Nurture them says Paul to the Ephesians. Do it all at the time that it is most effective and the result will most likely be a child that grows up in the fear and admonition of the Lord.

The Three Rules of Life

Good Parents teach their children to ride the bike of life. As much as they can, they run beside them. They support them with training wheels to keep them from falling.

Yet the general words of every parent seem to be strikingly familiar, "keep your eyes on the road, don't lean to the left or right and remember, daddy's right there!"

Training wheels can take us just so far, but there comes a point in life when we need to know that daddy's there! We know that our heavenly father is right by our side.

Even the best riders sometime run into life problems.

Sometimes the finest bike can't go anywhere because it has a flat tire. That's when its good to know that you are not riding alone!

Sometimes the chain jumps off track, the brakes don't work, or the handle bars come loose, you can't steer your bike in the right direction, that's when its good to know that you're not alone!

Sometimes good bikes are stolen when carelessly left unprotected. Stolen from schools. Stolen from churches. Stolen from our homes!

How many innocent young people have had their lives stolen from the them. Stolen by drugs. Stolen by criminally oriented friends. Stolen impulsive actions that ended in tragedy!

When your bike has been stolen and you find yourself walking alone, that's when the words of the song writer seem to have new meaning: "When you walk through a storm, hold your head up high and don't be afraid of the dark ...for you'll never walk alone!"

Every young person should remember to keep his eye on the road, never stray to the left or right and remember, come what may, God is always by your side!

It's good to know that the Lord never leaves you alone!

In the middle of the storm, he's a comforting presence!

In the middle of doubt, he's the voice of assurance!

In the middle of defeat, he's the hope of victory!

In the middle of failure, he's the prospect of success!
In the middle of rejection, he's the epitome of acceptance!
In the middle of sadness, he's the picture of gladness!
The Lord will never leave you to walk alone!
No wonder the song writer declares: "I want Jesus to walk with me. While I'm on the tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus to walk with me!"
Jesus, who died on Calvary!
Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!
I heard Jesus say "Behold I'll be with you alway, even until the end of the earth!"
"I've seen the lightning flashing and heard the thunder roll.
"I've felt sin's breakers dashing, which tried to conquer my soul!
"I've heard the voice of my savior, He bid me still fight on!
"He promised never to leave me, never to leave me alone!
No never alone!
No never alone!
He promised never to leave me, never to leave me alone!

Ready Or Not Here I Come

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 6, 1996

Scripture: "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh." Matthew 25:13"

Introduction

Have you ever thought you were ready only to find out that you had forgotten something? That's the time you prepared to leave home only to remember that you forgot to turn out the lights or turn on the alarm or put the dog out. That's the time that you discovered that you thought you were ready to go but had actually left all a personal grooming item undone. Being ready means that everything is in order. It means that everything has been done. Many say they are ready but they still have one or two things left undone.

There are many who miss great opportunities in life because they are not ready when opportunity presents itself. Consider the silly farmer who decided he would have chicken for dinner. Both his stomach and his taste buds told him that he was ready for a bowl of chicken and dumplings. He walked around on the yard and found a fine chicken and grabbed him by the neck. The chicken yelled "Wait a minute. You're not ready to eat me!" Surprised the farmer asked "Why not?" The chicken answered "Because you don't have the pot.. The farmer released the chicken and hurriedly found a pot. He grabbed the chicken again only to halt one more time. "You can't eat me" said the chicken. "You didn't put any water in the pot." The farmer went and filled the huge black pot with water and resumed his stranglehold on the chicken. Then the chicken cried out again "You can't eat me yet, you forgot to build the fire!" As the farmer built the fire, he grabbed the chicken one last time. Only to hear the chicken say again "You can't eat me!" -The farmer didn't have a hatchet. When the farmer returned he found only a note in the place where the chicken stood. The note read "Dear Mr. Farmer my name is Nettie and I live in the corner of the yard. Losing your dinner is so very hard, so next time, call when you're ready!" Like the farmer, there are many that miss great opportunities because they are not ready.

In life there are many who are not ready to face the challenges of each day. They have not put everything in place. In the children's game of hide and go seek the counter counts and chants something similar to "last night, night before, 24 robbers at my door, I got up and let them in. Hit them in the head with a rolling pin. All hid?"

Soon after the counter will say "Ready or not here I come!" If the other players have not found a safe place to hide, the counter comes anyway. There is no waiting. There is no delaying. Unfortunately, life doesn't ask whether we are ready before it bursts upon our state of being. It seems to say "ready or not here I come."

As Christians, we know that when the master comes, we need to be ready. We don't know the day or the hour of his return. We won't have time to go back and do anything over or finish that which is incomplete. We must be ready when he comes.

Exposition

This text finds Jesus giving a parable explaining the need for preparation for the coming of the kingdom of heaven.

Ten women who carried lamps are the focus of the parable. All of them were attending the wedding celebration and carried lamps filled with oil. However, five of them had reserve stores of oil and were prepared even though the bridegroom was late making his arrival.

In the tradition of Eastern marriage ceremonies the bridegroom marched in a procession down the city streets to the home of prospective bride. He was followed by people playing music and holding torches shouting his arrival. As the bridegroom approached the home of his bride those in the party raised their lamps, joined the procession and went inside the home and the door was shut behind him. It was important for all of those in the procession to carry a light, not simply to walk along in the dark.

Jesus gave this parable as an illustration of the need of believers to constantly be prepared for his return to usher in the kingdom of heaven. Many will be fully prepared for his return, however long that will be. Others, represented by the foolish virgins, will find themselves only partially prepared.

It is a vivid picture of Christ himself returning to claim his bride, consisting of the host of believers in Old Testament times, The Church and those that will come forth out of the great tribulations of the Revelation. The challenge of the parable to every believer is to be prepared for we know neither the day nor the hour of his return.

Those Who Were Not Ready

Today, there are many who have the outward appearance of religious piety yet inwardly they are painfully lacking. They are represented the five foolish virgins.

Like the women of the parable they appear like all others who wait the arrival of the bridegroom. They are dressed for the occasion. They are in the right place. They are doing the right things. Their light appears to be shining. Yet there is an emptiness within them. These are the believers who may find themselves unprepared to meet spiritual challenges although they have a light that is shining daily.

USED LAMPS MUST BE REPLENISHED. There are many believers who have lights that shine brightly. Their testimonies of faithfulness are great. They speak about God and tell others about him with a zeal. This would appear to be the perfect arrangement, especially since Jesus in Matthew 5:16 said "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Those who use their lights must be careful to recharge or replace their batteries. What keeps the light shining is its source of power. For the women of the parable the source was the oil. For the believer, the source is the spirit of God. We must keep a full charge or run the risk of no light when we need light the most.

Those who are busy about the business of building the kingdom while waiting for the bridegroom to return should not neglect those practices that recharge their batteries.

Prayer, Public Worship, and Praise have the effect of recharging our batteries or replenishing our lamps. Prayer is a moment of spiritual communication between the created and the creator. In such moments the believer sends and receives an important message that gives strength. Believers who neglect prayer at home soon find themselves without the spiritual strength they need to continue. Public worship is an outward demonstration of humbleness before God. It demonstrates our dependence upon him. Believers who neglect public worship soon find that the develop a sense self importance that suggests that they can continue without acknowledging the source of the external success. Praise is a demonstration of adoration for God. We speak, sing and testify of goodness before others. Believers who neglect the praise and adoration of God soon find themselves ashamed to own him in the company of others.

CONSTANT STUDY BUILDS RESERVES: The tragedy of the five foolish women was that they had the right intention. They intended to pay homage to the bridegroom. They simply did not have enough reserves to last them through the night.

Today, believers who neglect the study of the word can find themselves without a storehouse of reserves when they need it most. That's why 2 Timothy 2:15 encourages us to "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

How is it that some are able to endure the most trying periods of life and keep their lights shining? In such darkness, why don't their lamps go out? Those that make it through dark periods are constantly refreshed by the word of God hidden in their hearts. Psalm 119:105 "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." When we can't see our way, the word of God, stored away in our hearts, lights the path.

How is it that the family, enduring the most difficult periods of its existence is still able to put on a bright smile? Why is it that their light never seems to dim and they always see their way? The Word of God sustains believers and keeps them strong. Isaiah 32:3 "And the eyes of them that see shall not be dim, and the ears of them that hear shall hearken." These are the believers who draw on a storehouse of reserves that sustain them through the darkest of times. The deeper the reservoir the longer a believer is able to endure hardship and difficult circumstances.

Those who neglect the study of the word will find themselves with a lamp, but without oil when they need it most. Therefore those who get so busy that they cannot find time for any of the teaching moments of the church: Sunday School, Leadership Training, Bible Study or other instruments will find themselves without oil at a time when they need it most. They will reach for a reserved resource that is not present.

GRACE CANNOT BE BORROWED: At time of the bridegroom's arrival the foolish tried to borrow enough oil from the others to get them in the ceremony but found it couldn't be borrowed. In a similar sense there are many who are members of the church but who have not accepted Christ.

They are associated with the church by virtue of their family ties. They joined because it was the tradition of their family that all children unite with a church and be baptized. They attend because Grandma or Grandpa taught the family that it should be done. They attend, pay and participate but have not come to the full knowledge of God for themselves. They have the mistaken notion that just as they are prospering today on Grandma's prayers, that somehow they will make it into the kingdom of God on Grandma's Grace. Today there are millions that are living good lives because of the good lives of their parents and grand parents. They have land, homes and resources because of the hard work and belief of those who came before them. Grandma was a praying woman. Grandpa was a Godly man, but believers should never operate under the mistaken notion that they can gain entry into the kingdom of heaven on Grandma's prayers. God may bless us because of because of Grandma's prayers. We may enjoy health and strength because of Grandma's prayers, but we cannot be saved on the strength of Grandma's prayers. Romans 14:12 made it clear: "So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God."

Grace cannot be borrowed. It cannot be loaned or acquired. It comes freely to those who come to know Christ as their own personal savior.

Having a relationship with the savior is personal.

Having a relationship with God is not incidental.

The song writer was correct "You got to know Jesus, you got to know God for yourself!"

Those Who Were Ready

While there were five foolish virgins who did not have enough oil, it must not be forgotten that there were five others, who kept their lamps trimmed, oil reserves in tact and were ready when the bridegroom arrived.

While there are those today who are simply going through the motions of spirituality, there are others who are seriously about the business of preparing themselves to meet the savior. They pray, praise, worship publically, study, serve and truly know God for themselves.

To be ready to them means being prepared to fight against evil. Therefore the truths of Ephesians 6:14-17 reflect in their character. They:

— Stand therefore, with loins girt about with truth, wearing the breastplate of righteousness;

— Stand, with feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace;

— Stand, holding shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked.

— Stand, wearing the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God:

Eph 6:18 Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints

To be ready means being prepared to shoulder difficulties and hard times with knowing that "weeping endures but a night, but joy cometh in the morning!"

To be ready means being prepared to go through the fire.

Everybody who says "I'm ready" is not ready. Peter told Jesus in Luke 22:33 "I am ready to go with thee into prison and to death." But he was not ready because when the cock crowed three times he had denied the faith. In Luke 9:59 a disciple said he was ready to follow, but first he wanted to bury his father. He said he was ready but he wasn't ready.

To be ready means being prepared to go all the way. Isaiah 6:8 "Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me."

No wonder the song writer wrote: "I'll go. I'll go! If the Lord needs somebody, here am I send me!"

Will you be ready when the bridegroom comes? If today is your last day, will you be ready?

I'm reminded of the mother who kept a suitcase beside the front door. It didn't matter what time of year, the suitcase always sat by the door. One day her grandchildren, puzzled by the suitcase at the door which sat there year after year, asked why it always sat by the door. The grandmother pulled the children together and said "I got one daughter in California. I got a son in Chicago. I got another daughter in New York. On any given day, I expect to get a phone call that says mama I need. When that call comes, whether its morning, noon or midnight, I'm gonna be ready. Everything I need is in that bag, I'm gonna be ready whenever the call comes!"

I don't know about you but I want to be ready when he comes!

I got my bags packed! I don't know the day or the hour, but I want to be ready!

Ready!

Ready!

Ready when he comes!

When Bones Rattle in The Closet

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 13, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. Blessed is the man unto whom the LORD imputeth not iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no guile. When I kept silence, my bones waxed old through my roaring all the day long. For day and night thy hand was heavy upon me: my moisture is turned into the drought of summer. Selah.I acknowledged my sin unto thee, and mine iniquity have I not hid. I said, I will confess my transgressions unto the LORD; and thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin. Selah. Psalm 32:1-5

Introduction

Have you ever done things that made you ashamed? Have you ever tried to hide those embarrassing mistakes with hopes that they would never be discovered by others? Do you keep them tucked away in the secret closets of your life, hidden away, secure from the prying eyes of those who might use your past against you? Most people have a few episodes of personal history that they wish did not exist. Some have had a rather worldly life filled the unmentionables. Some have walked a path that was less than virtuous and often strayed from the "straight and narrow." Their past looms like a haunting memory. The skeleton of what once was is hidden away in each closet, known only to those who care to remember. While there are many who parade themselves in righteous indignation, pointing accusing figures at the world around them, there are others who are slow to condemn and quick to forgive because they constantly hear a rattling sound in their own closet.

In Shakespeare's play "Julius Caesar" Mark Anthony, on the occasion of Caesar's funeral, said in his funeral oration, "the evil that men do lives after them, the good is often interred with their bones." That truth remains even today. People rarely remember the good that we do once they learn about hidden skeletons in closets. No one seems invulnerable. Thomas Jefferson's love for slave women, John F. Kennedy's secret romances, Martin Luther King's affairs and Jimmy Swaggart's appetite for women of the night, are all examples that vividly illustrate that even some of our strongest personalities have had skeletons in their closets. Invariably, if the story of our lives is ever told, it would not be complete until the skeleton in the closet speaks.

On June 11, 1963 Alabama Governor George Wallace stood in the doorway of the University of Alabama and refused to allow a Black woman to register. He pledged "segregation now and segregation forever." That proved to be a moment in infamy for the governor. He tried to run for president and was shot. He was reelected governor of Alabama after he opened up his closet and let the bones talk. What the world heard was a humbled Wallace who could not be at peace with himself until he apologized for the arrogance of a man drunk with power. He made many acts of contrition. He erected statues of Martin Luther King. He appointed more Blacks than any governor in Alabama history. He won the approval of most Blacks in the state. However, on Thursday, October 10, 1996 he met with a 54-year-old Vivian Malone Jones face to face and asked for her forgiveness. She gave it and the bones in Wallace's closet were silenced.

Today there are millions who are troubled by the bones rattling in their closets. The voice of past sins and indiscretion screams with a haunting chill demanding to be heard despite our best efforts to silence our past. Unless we face up to our past instead of hiding it as if it never happened, the bones will always rattle.

As Christians, we thank God every day for his forgiveness and mercy. The man or woman of worldly ideals and dreams represented by the skeletons in our closet, no longer lives. We rejoice in Christ who has delivered us from a failing life of sin to a new and glorious life in grace. We are not proud of some of our activities in the past. We do not deny them. However, our life is not spent hiding from or being haunted by our past, but in pressing forward toward the prize of the high calling, which is in Jesus Christ.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he expresses his desire for repentance.

Generally, David is characterized as a righteous man. His motives and goals in life were consistent with the will of God. In fact, he was such a righteous man that he is described as a man after God's own heart. Many of the Psalms discuss his righteousness and extol the greatness of righteous living. Most of these are included in the first 26 Psalms. In Psalm 1 he speaks of the importance of being godly saying the godly man is like a tree planted by the rivers of water. In Others such as Psalm 8, 17, 18 he asserts his righteousness. The entire 26th Psalm discusses his righteousness and integrity. Here, David comes very close to bragging about his righteousness and perfection.

Despite his righteousness however, David had a skeleton in his closet. He had a dark secret that troubled him and occasionally haunted him. It was the subject of whispers in the courtroom, gossip between his aides and advisors and scorn from the man of God.

David's skeleton in the closet involved his sin with Bathsheba. It was a sin that involved adultery, deceit and murder. He had conceived a child by the wife of one of his military generals then tried to hide his deed by recalling the husband from battle and giving him a night at home with his wife. When the husband refused to go home,

David had him placed in a dangerous position in the battle and abandoned, assuring his death. Quickly David married the slain general's wife. Thus, to hide his adultery and continue to appear righteous to his subjects, David became a liar, cheat, and a murderer.

The dark secret rattled like bones in his closet. In his silent moments he could hear them rattling. The bones rattled so loud that David was troubled spiritually. While he tried to hide his sin his very essence or bones became miserable. (V3) Day and night he was troubled by the rattling of the bones. There were no more Psalms that bragged about his righteousness. Interspersed between Psalms that reflected on God's goodness and his trust in God were Psalms of penitence such as the 38th Psalm which he wrote in the aftermath of his sin while struggling secretly with a venereal disease or Psalm 51 in which he asked for a clean heart or 102, 130 and 143 in which he continually asked forgiveness for his sin.

The prophet Nathan brought David's sin to light. He spoke publically what those in the court had whispered about silently. When the prophet challenged the king saying "thou art the man" (2nd Samuel 12:7) the rattling bones came out of the closet. It revealed a righteous man who was vulnerable and capable of sin.

When his sin was finally publically recognized David discovered another aspect of God's character, his inclination to forgive. When David acknowledged his sin and repented, God forgave him. Thus he writes in Psalm 32:5 "I acknowledged my sin unto thee, and mine iniquity have I not hid. I said, I will confess my transgressions unto the LORD; and thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin. Selah".

From this point in his life David became acutely aware of everyone's vulnerability to sin. From the prince to the pauper, the prospect of sin looms. Rather than boast of his righteousness, he boasted of knowing a merciful God who blesses him despite his past. Rather than hide his past, David began to write about it to demonstrate to others the forgiving mercy of God. When he discussed his past in light of God's mercy, his dark secret was no longer the rattling of bones in his closet but a testimony about the goodness of God.

Approaches To Sin

There is no one in this world that has not sinned. It is possible for good people to sin. Pastors, Sunday School teachers, politicians and even little children have sinned. The word of God makes it plain that everyone is guilty of something. Romans 3:23 says it clearly "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." In fact, anyone who claims to be without sin is characterized in scripture as a liar. 1 John 1:8 "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." The question is not whether we have sinned. That's a known fact, but what we did in the aftermath. There are two approaches to sin that define our actions.

FIG LEAF APPROACH: Those who sin but attempt to hide their sin and still maintain the appearance of righteousness use the fig leaf approach. This is approach used by Adam and Eve in the Garden when they had sinned. They attempted to hide from God's presence physically and to hide the result of their sin from their own eyes with fig leaves. It's the same approach Cain tried when he killed his brother Able only to learn that his brother's blood cried out from the ground in testimony against him.

The fig leaf approach is to attempt to hide our sins while appearing flawless. Thus, the man who cheats on his wife comes in the front door with the smell of passion on his presence and lipstick on his collar and says "honey I'm home!" tries to hide his deviant behavior. He tries to hide it from his wife with a fig leaf that may as well be transparent because she sees right through it but keeps quiet. The alcoholic that goes to work doused in antiseptic, the gambling bookkeeper than juggles the books to hide his habit, the drug user who fakes urine tests, teenagers who lie about why it took so long to come home from an event, all attempt a fig leaf approach to sin.

There are no fig leaves big enough to hide sin from the eyes of God. For a time we can fool our friends and co-workers. Soon however the bones begin to rattle in the closet. Even if we have blotted our sins out of memory our enemies will be quick to remind everyone of the secret bones in the closet. There is something inside that begins to click in a righteous man or woman. Even if they have successfully hidden their secret for years, the righteous person feels uneasy and is troubled by the bones in the closet. Neither can we find a place we can hide from God. Simply avoiding Sunday School, worship, or religious broadcasts on television cannot hide our sins. Thus, a thief or murderer makes peace with God by acknowledging his or her shortcomings. But until a man or woman gets straight with God, he or she will constantly be haunted by their the dark secrets of the past rattling like bones in their closet!

DAMASCUS ROAD APPROACH: The alternative to the fig leaf approach to sin is the Damascus Road approach. Paul spent a large part of his adult life persecuting Christians. It was a grievous sin. However, on the Damascus Road he saw the light. Instead of trying to hide his sin Paul pulled it out of the closet and spoke about it openly showing others the error of his ways.

Those who follow the Damascus Road approach take the following steps. 1) They acknowledge that along the road of life they have made mistakes and are not without flaws. 2) They repent for their sins and turn from them. 3) They testify to others about their life in darkness and show how God brought them out of darkness into the marvelous light!

Damascus Road approach leaves no secret bones in the closet. It admits to human frailty and weakness. It does not presuppose self righteousness.

A person who has adopted this approach to sin does not look down on the prostitute on the corner or frown on the crack addicted man, but says in his own mind "but for the grace of God, there goes I." Those who experience the Damascus Road have laid out the entire ugly story of their life to a God that is compassionate and loves them. There are no rattling bones because 2 Corinthians 5:17 makes it clear: "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

The man or woman who knows the Lord does not hide his past, but acknowledges it in the context of time. “That was then, but the man or woman that committed that sin is as dead as the bones in the closet.” People who know Christ are brand new creatures, not the dead memories lurking in the closets of time.

Forgiving God

Fortunately, God does not enjoy rattling the skeletons that represent our failures. He gets no joy out of parading our mistakes or harping on our sins. God is a forgiving God whose mercy and loves overwhelms us.

Men enjoy rattling our bones. In 1912 Fred Snodgrass dropped a pop fly in the World Series that cost the New York Giants the game. When he died in 1974 the headline announcing his death read: “Fred Snodgrass,86 Dead; Ballplayer muffed fly in 1912.” Even though 62 years had passed, New York overlooked the fact that he was a successful banker, mayor of a California city and raised a fine family and chose to rattle the skeleton in his closet. Richard Nixon died as one of the greatest American presidents, but even in death the skeletons of Watergate and his resignation were rattling in his closet.

I’m glad that God is not like men. Men rarely forget and seem to enjoy rattling the skeleton’s in our closet. God redeems sin instead of rattling bones!

Unlike men who:

—Parade our shame, God turns our shame into a testimony

—Rejoice in our failure, God forgives our failures and helps us succeed!

—Triumph in our defeat, God picks us up and shows us the victory!

When the skeletons in your closet begin to rattle, it is the secret cry from within to make it right with God!

When the skeletons in your closet begin to rattle, they want you to make a move from:

— SORROW into joy; HATRED into forgiveness

—FILTHY into the fabulous; DEVILISH into the divine

—PRIDE into humility; PIG PEN into paradise

When the skeletons begin to rattle in your closet only the peace of God can quiet them down!

When the skeletons rattle in the dark, only the love of God can bring you to the light!

When the skeletons rattling place a burden on your shoulder, only the love of God can lift it!

That’s why Jesus said come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy burdened and I will give you rest!

The prodigal son did well in the far country but there was a skeleton in his closet. When he came to himself, he said “I will arise” and go home to my father and say father I have sinned before God and before thee!

A forgiving God takes no joy in rattling bones but wants to meet us as we come down the aisle, with arms wide open singing “I’ve wandered far away from home, now I'm coming home. Too long the paths of sin I've trod, now I'm coming home!"

When a man or woman comes to God there is a silence in the closet but there is a noise in heaven!

When the skeletons stopped rattling the song writer declared "I came to Jesus just as I was, weary wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad!"

On Calvary the bones were rattling! I heard somebody say "he saved others but he can't save himself!"

On the cross the bones were rattling! A critic cried out "he said he could build the temple in three days, but he can't come down from the cross!"

He died a pitiful death. He was buried in a lonely grave. But he arose in triumph!

When Jesus died on Calvary, he put an eternal silence to rattling bones. Instead he gave every man a story to tell. Every saint can now declare I lived in shame, I died in sin, but thanks to Jesus I've been born again!

Hitherto Hath The Lord Helped Us

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 20, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "Samuel then took a stone and placed it between Mizpah and Jeshanah and named it Ebenezer (meaning, "the Stone of Help"), for he said, "The Lord has certainly helped us!" 1 Samuel 7:12

Introduction

Have you ever received an award? Was the award a special plaque or a trophy? Perhaps it was a certificate or some other token of recognition. The purpose of an award is to recognize and to praise persons or groups that have made noteworthy accomplishments and contributions. They generally contain the name of the honoree, a description of the deed accomplished, a date, and the name of the presenters. Recognition of some accomplishments may get bigger than a mere plaque or certificate. Statues, busts and memorials are erected around the world to note the lifetime contributions of those who distinguished themselves in the course of time or to note the site of an historic event. Whether a small certificate or a towering obelisk, awards have a way of recognizing and marking important moments in time.

Tributes usually follow a significant accomplishment. Often those receiving the tribute feel undeserving and are puzzled at the praise they receive from others. Consider the old man who won a prize at the state fair for eating the largest watermelon. That year all of the country folk came to the fair to see who would win the $1000 prize for eating a 50 pound watermelon clean to the rind. Laughing Charlie was running the contest and every contestant had to pay $100 to try. If they failed, laughing Charlie got the last laugh and pocketed their money. Several huge men entered the contest but changed their minds when they saw the size of that melon. Each day there were no takers. It seemed that the prize money would go unclaimed until an old man who had come to the fair on the last day, raised his hand. "I'd like to try to eat that melon" said the old man. Instantly the crowd laughed at the thought of this frail old man eating a 50 pound melon. "I'll try on the condition that you give me 10 minutes to think about it." The man was given 10 minutes . Ten minutes later the old man returned, sliced open the melon and ate it completely to the rind in four minutes. The crowd was amazed at the feat. The old man was brought on stage and presented with a blue ribbon and check for $1000. Laughing Charlie, who had stopped laughing said, “Before I present you this prize, can you tell me why you needed ten minutes?” The old man said, “Well I knew I had a melon at home about this size. So I went home and ate it. I knew if I could eat that one, I could eat this one too.” That day at the fair the old man got the ribbon, the check and the last laugh! Even Laughing Charlie said he deserved it.

We know how to recognize people for their accomplishments, but how do we recognize God when he has helped us? That was the question that puzzled David in Psalm 116:12 when he asked “What shall I render unto the LORD for all his benefits toward me?” David concluded that he would drink from the cup of salvation, pay his vows and continue to call upon his name. He decided that was the best way to give tribute to God.

As Christians, we recognize that God has helped us in many ways. We cannot begin to pay him or reward him for his benevolence toward us. The trail of life that marks our journey is speckled with markers, large and small, that testify of the help we have received from God. Without him we can do nothing. If we have accomplished anything, the glory is his, not ours.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Samuel as he raises a stone that recognizes God for his past, present and future work in the life of Israel.

The Ark of the Covenant had been out of Israel’s hands for 20 years. Over the course of the 20 years they labored in hope and in prayer that God would bless them with its return. Assembled in the wilderness the people prayed to God for forgiveness of sin. In an elaborate ceremony they poured out water on the ground to symbolically demonstrate their humility before God. They made a public confession of their sins, condemning themselves and praising God for his goodness.

As they met in the wilderness, committed to living for God, the Philistines saw them and prepared to attack them with a vengeance. However, God confused the Philistines in their attack amidst a great thunderstorm. Despite the Philistine’s overwhelming numbers, Israel, for the first time in a long time defeated its enemy and arose victorious.

In an act of Praise, the prophet Samuel erected a great stone to commemorate God’s great work in their lives. He called the stone “Ebenezer” which means “the stone of the help.”

Erecting stones, altars and monuments was not unusual to Israel.

When Noah descended from the Ark, he erected a stone altar on Mt. Ararat to give thanks for being saved from the flood. The flood was over, the deed was done and the stone altar marked the spot.

Abraham etched Mt. Moriah into the hearts of believers when he prepared to sacrifice his son Isaac on an altar, but learned that God had a lamb in the bush. He called the stone altar that marked the spot “Jehovah-Jireh” meaning the Lord will provide. The test was over and Abraham passed. The stone altar marked the spot.

Jacob took a stone which had been his pillow and turned it into a pillar that marked the place where he saw a ladder reaching into heaven. He named the place Bethel, saying the place was none other than the house of God. Jacob saw the vision and it was over. His stone simply marked the spot.

When the children of Israel crossed the river Jordan, they took 12 smooth stones marked the spot where the priests feet touched the Jordan. Those stones would be reminders to children who would later ask "What mean ye by these stones," and be told of the great deed God performed for their forefathers. At Jordan the stone simply referred to a past accomplishment.

Israel was accustomed to stones, yet there was something different about the Ebenezer Stone. It was different from all of the others. In naming this site Samuel says "hitherto" the Lord hath helped us.

The word Hitherto in Hebrew is "Ad" which suggests a continuum in time. It is different from the "has" helped us which suggests that the time of God's help has passed. It is different from "did" help us because it suggests that the help is over. Hitherto, being a continuum reaches back to what God has done, brings it to what God is presently doing and carries it further to what God will do in the future.

The Ebenezer stone therefore was different from all other stones. It marked what God did on a certain day in time, what he continues to do and what is expected in the future.

Samuel had it right. The Ebenezer stone was not the end of God's work with the people. His defeat of the Philistines a few days earlier was not the culmination of blessings they were to expect but rather it was the beginning. In a mighty way God moved with the nation as they won successive victories over the Philistines, final victory under David and enjoyed peace under King Solomon.

The Ebenezer stone was a stone of recognition for God's work in the past. It was a stone of praise for God's continuous work and it was a stone of hope for the great work that God would do in the future.

God Has Helped Us

Today every saint can set up a stone or marker that shows a point in life in which God has intervened in their lives.

Like Noah we have survived floods of trouble. We have remained afloat even though at times it appeared that we would sink.

Like Abraham, we have seen difficult times when our faith has been tested and the very lives of those we loved the most have been threatened. It was moments such as those that strengthened us when we learned that God truly does have a ram in the bush.

Like the Israelites crossing River Jordan into a new land, we have moved into new directions that we never thought we would take. We are bound for the Canaan land!

Who is it among us that can deny God's handiwork? Who can claim to be the architect of his own destiny, responsible for his own success and achievement?

Somebody has an Ebenezer stone erected in an unseen corner of a hospital room. It marks the place where they asked for and received an answer to a prayer!

Somebody has an Ebenezer stone in the center of their home. It marks the place where God helped a failing marriage, strengthened a weakened husband and sustained a drained wife.

Somebody has an Ebenezer stone erected in their spirit. It marks the place and time when they met the Lord.

Perhaps that's why Moses would declare in Psalm 90:1" LORD, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations."

David declared in Psalm 27:5, "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock."

God Is A Present Help

The beauty of erecting an Ebenezer stone is that it does not simply recognize what God has done in the past, but it looks at what God is still doing!

The Ebenezer stone doesn't simply say God was good for Daniel and the Three Hebrew Boys, but it also says that God is still able to deliver.

The Ebenezer stone doesn't simply say that God was good for grandma! It doesn't simply say God was good for grandpa! It doesn't simply say that God was good back then, but it also says that is still good right now!

"Hitherto" reaches over into the past and brings God into the present.

"Hitherto" transcends time and removes God from the trophies of past victories and elevates him as the symbol of present victories.

That's why, long after Samuel had erected the Ebenezer stone, David could write in Psalm 46:1 "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in times of trouble."

That's why he could boldly declare in Psalm 27:1 "The LORD is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

God is still in the blessing business!

That's why the song writer declared: "The Lord is blessing me right now. He woke me up this morning and started me on my way. The Lord is blessing me right now!"

God is Our Future Help

Finally the saint of God rejoices in God because not only has he helped in the past and present, but he will bless us in the future as well.

God is building a heavenly kingdom, in which each saint is a living stone and a living sacrifice. The kingdom of God, though built with living stones, must have a cornerstone.

The cornerstone is the foundation upon which the kingdom is built.

The corner piece of the kingdom of God is the same stone that the builders rejected!

The corner stone of our hope is not made of bricks or mortar.

The corner stone of our trust cannot be affixed to the edge of a building!

The corner stone of our faith is the substance of our hope!

I don't know what tomorrow will bring, but I know what God has done in the past. I know what God is doing right now!

"I do not know how long it will be or what the future holds for me, but this I know, if Jesus leads me, I will get home someday!

It doesn't matter what the future brings as long as the Lord is on our side! If the Lord is on our side there will never be a:

—CROSS that we won't be able to bear; MOUNTAIN that we won't be able to climb!

—ENEMY that we won't be able to defeat; BATTLE we won't be able to win!

—DARKNESS so dark that we won't be able to see the light!

—TRIAL that we can't make it through; TEST that we won't be able to pass!

The Lord is the justification for my faith!

The Lord is the chief corner stone of my hope!

I heard the song writer declare "The only hope we have is in Christ Jesus. Confusion is great in the world today. Persecution my come with such a heavy weight but we have this hope and it's in Jesus!"

Jesus, somebody here today knows him!

Jesus, the Lily of the valley!

Jesus, the Bright and Morning star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and rose up early Sunday morning!

No wonder the song writer declared, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand...

All other Ground!

All other Ground is sinking sand!

Been There! Done That! Got The Tee-Shirt!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 3, 1996

SCRIPTURE:"and such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." 1 Corinthians 6:11

Introduction

Have you ever bought a souvenir? Perhaps you went on a trip to a far away place and encountered many new and exciting experiences. Perhaps you were involved in an exciting event, an historic occasion, or a memorable moment; each would have been the type of circumstance that would prompt the purchase of souvenirs. There are no set types of souvenirs. They range from match books to figurines, from sugar bags to "what nots." A souvenir is simply a reminder of a moment in time. Soldiers have souvenirs of great battles. Politicians save souvenirs of great campaigns. Mothers save souvenirs of memorable moments in the lives of their children. Souvenirs give us an opportunity to tell the story that the trinket represents.

Among the many types of souvenirs available is a wide variety of tee-shirts. They come in all shapes and sizes and bear inscriptions of all sorts. After a major event, like magic, tee-shirt vendors appear on the street hawking a tee-shirt with the emblem or logo of the winner of a competition or promoting a popular team. Whether the occasion was the "Million Man March" or the World Series, a purchased tee-shirt says to the folks back home that I've "been there and done that."

Sometimes life gives each of us some souvenirs that we purchase through our life style. There are many who bear marks on their bodies that are souvenirs of another time in their lives. Some have scars in their capacity to love. They are cracked souvenirs left over from a broken heart. Some have entrenched fears, souvenirs of insecure childhoods. Some have children who are souvenirs of a moment in time. Others have an abortion receipt to mark the same moment. Without a doubt, whether we want them or not, life gives us a few souvenirs. They each say "Been there, done that-Got the tee shirt!"

Each of us has a souvenir or two that marks a span of time when we did not know the Lord as we know him today. That was a time when the world claimed more of our attention that we are willing to admit. That was the time when we were fascinated by the prospects that life offered and willing to dabble in a little of everything to sample our chances. In the process we picked up a few tee-shirts that hang in the closet of our experience. They read to any future person attempting to travel the road of life with the same blind ambivalence, that we have "been there, done that and got the tee-shirt!"

As Christians, we rejoice in knowing that God has saved us from ourselves. We praise him for reaching inside of us and challenging us to step out of the world of darkness into the marvelous light. To every person who walks the same trail that we have walked we share our story because we have "been there, done that and got the tee-shirt!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he reminds Christians of the power of God to transform lives.

In 1 Corinthians 5 Paul addressed the subject of immorality, focusing particularly upon incest. Chapter 6 begins by changing the subject to: "Christians and lawsuits." Then at the latter part of the chapter he resumes his explanations of Christians and immorality.

Verses 9-11 mark the transition from the explanation of Christians and lawsuits back to the discussion of immorality. Paul urged Christians to avoid airing their civil disputes in public courts, demanding satisfaction, payment and control. He made this warning because the world, which perceives Christians to be above disputes that reach the litigation level observes their feuding nature and questions whether their lives are truly as transformed as they claim. Moreover, Christians who resort to the courts for revenge or personal gain exhibit worldly attributes that place them in the ranks with those in the world. He suggested that Christians should resolve differences among themselves, privately with other Christians as arbitrators using the Word of God as their guiding principle. All of this would be a way to draw a line of distinction between the Christian that is today and the person he "used" to be.

Paul begins to address morality again when he offers a truncated list of practicing sins that indicate that a person is not a part of the kingdom of God. The list given here is not all inclusive because there are places that he includes more items. These are samples of deviant lifestyles not practiced by people who are part of the kingdom of God.

Remember, the "kingdom of God" is a reference to God's spiritual kingdom that exists at the present. The "kingdom of heaven" is a physical place that will be occupied by the kingdom of God once it comes into being. A person who claims to be a part of the kingdom of God cannot be a practicing sinner. "Practicing" means a person who repeatedly sins, without remorse and has adopted a particular sin or sins as an acceptable part of his or her lifestyle. That does not mean that a person in the kingdom of God does not sin, for all have sinned, but it does mean that the sin committed is not a part of the lifestyle of the believer because the holy spirit will convict and the righteous will repent once convicted.

Under the general category of "unrighteous" Paul points to those who abuse the privilege of sex as a matter of lifestyle as not being a part of the kingdom of God. This includes those who involve themselves in sex without benefit of marriage or adopt a preference for same sex relationships or even adopt physical habits and mannerisms of the opposite sex as a matter of lifestyle. Also included in this category are thieves, drunkards, greedy, and those who cheat and rob others. In 1 Timothy 1:9-10 the list also includes: people with rebellious hearts, those who curse and swear, those who attack their parents and murderers. The list of "unrighteous" activity, if enumerated would be endless. Certainly it is not limited to just the activities listed in these two verses.

The believer has reached a point in life where he or she has evolved from the "unrighteous" state into the full knowledge of God as they live and walk in the spirit. Having once been a practicing sinner, the believer has moved to a higher level, that of knowing Christ fully. He or she has stepped forward and up to a better life. Thus Paul says "and such were some of you!" He seemed to say you have been there! You have done that! You have the tee-shirt! But you have stepped out of darkness into the marvelous light!

Paul indicates the three fold state of every believer who is a part of the kingdom of God. He gives a list of the three states, which actually incur in the reverse order. 1)A person is justified, meaning that God's affirmative action program has made up for his short comings and mistakes. 2) A person is sanctified, that means he or she has changed their life path and modified their list of concerns to include only those things which would be pleasing to God. They become special and set apart. 3)A person who is washed by the spirit of God is no longer of the world but is a new creature.

The believer's best testimony to a non-believer is that we have not always lived in an isolated world of bible classes, hymns and church services, but that the believer has experienced the world enough to know that God offers a better way. The believer's testimony to a non- believer is simply, "Where you are, I have already come from, I've "been there, done that and I've got the tee shirt!"

Been There, Done That!

There are millions of believers today that are not what they want to be but most certainly are not what they used to be. Our lives should be living testimonies to those who know us that we are truly different as we have matured in the Lord.

While each of us has had different experiences in life, in a general sense, all true believers can testify to those outside the faith that we have "been there, done that-got the tee-shirt."

Life's Fatal Attractions:

Many are overwhelmed with life's fatal attractions. A fatal attraction is a person, activity or thing that attracts us to the point that we are totally consumed, placing our lives, liberties and happiness in harm's way. A fatal attraction is an addiction.

For some it is alcohol, which has mercilessly addicted millions around the world. For others it is crack cocaine that is so overpowering that a mother would neglect her children, sell her body and worse just to possess it.

For some it is power. The endless pursuit of it has destroyed homes, friendships and relationships as it takes total control of those fatally attracted to it.

Some are have emotional attractions that are fatal. They plunge themselves into "go no-where" relationships with a person who is married, chase after a disinterested suitors and otherwise plunge themselves into a sea of misery as they pursue an attraction destined to drown them in tears.

Greed is a fatal attraction. The desire to have more and get more in a short period of time is as addicting as a drug. It consumes some to the point that they lie, steal, kill and even murder to acquire more of life's "things."

Status is a fatal attraction. The desire to be considered a part of the "in crowd" regardless of the cost can be destruction. To climb the social ladder, many have neglected their home, church, and personal security in the relentless pursuit of being somebody in "society." Many found themselves financially crippled and emotionally devastated in their effort, only to learn that the boundaries that define the "in crowd" change constantly making their position unstable at the least.

Some are fatally attracted to the underground lifestyle which offers an assortment of expletive experiences that at best, appeal to our prurient interests, and at worse will destroy us. It is a world of bars, clubs, drinking, strip tease and sleaze, one night stands and hangovers that rob a person of their most productive years and leaves them ashamed and empty when its over.

The believer is a person who knows the danger of fatal attractions. In one category or another, nearly every believer has a story to tell about a time in their lives when they were nearly overwhelmed by one or more of life's fatal attractions.

There are some saints who can tell of a time in their lives when alcohol ruled them. Others can tell of time they spent in prison for crimes they committed while fatally attracted to greed. Others can tell of the agony they caused themselves and others when they plunged into adulterous relationships, tried to climb the social ladder or chased after the night life.

They can testify to those who are trying it now that, "we have been there, done that-we've got the tee-shirt!" What we got for ourselves was misery and unhappiness.

Washed in the Blood

When Paul said "and such were some of you" he indicated the source of the believer's condition. He has stepped from the darkness into marvelous light.

For the Corinthians bound in a world of greed, sex sin and drunkedness Paul says "and such were some of you!"

Those words are applicable to every believer who has stepped out of the darkness into the light.

Paul himself had been caught up in the quest of persecution of the church until one day he met the Lord on the road to Damascus!

That is every believer's testimony. At some point along the road of our lives we met the Lord.

It may have been in a jail cell, like the jailer in Philippi, but there we met the Lord!

It may have been while working in a unsavory job, like Matthew the tax collector, but there we met the Lord!

It may have been while we were just looking on like Zacchaeus, who met the Lord in a Sycamore tree!

Every saint can testify that when you meet the Lord you have a story to tell!

The world offers many things but is unable to deliver anything except empty promises.

The world offered us:

—SWEETNESS but all we received is bitterness. How do we know? We've been there, done that and got the tee-shirt!

—PLEASURE but all we received was pain. How do we know? We've been there, done that, and we've got the tee-shirt!

—HONOR but only gave us disgrace; HOPE but only gave us hopelessnes —VICTORY but only gave us defeat; RICHES but only gave us impoverished spirits!

How do we know? "We've been there, done that, we've got the tee-shirt!"

Every saint has a bright side to his story. He can tell you about the darkness, but let him tell about his journey to the marvelous light!

In the midst of our:

—SORROW he has brought us joy; WEAKNESS he has brought us strength;

—CHALLENGES he has brought us confidence; FAILURES he has brought us success!

—STORMS he has brought us a peace in the night; DOUBTS he has brought us assurance!

Whenever I needed him, He's been there! What I needed done, He's done that!

I don't mind telling the world, I know he's real!

He has talked the talk and walked the walk!

I know the Lord will answer prayer for I tried him for myself!

Endured pain of Calvary! Died and unsavory death!

But early Sunday morning he arose with all power in his hands!

Whenever you need him Call him!

He'll be there!

Papa's Got A Brand New Bag

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 10, 1996

SCRIPTURE:"My transgression is sealed up in a bag, and thou sewest up mine iniquity." Job 14:17; Sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. Luke 12:33-34

Introduction

If every man and woman in the building were asked to empty his or her wallet or purse and make a list of its contents, what would the list contain? We would be surprised at what we would find. A man's wallet is small but can often contain a variety of objects that could include: credit cards, business cards, cash, bits and pieces of paper, bills, photographs, personal identification and perhaps a license or two. A woman's purse usually contains more items than a man's wallet. Some women say their purses, on occasion, have weighed five pounds or more. It seems the bigger the "bag" the more items become necessary to be carted from one place to another. A woman's purse can contain everything from a needle and thread to an address book. Men are often surprised at the number of items some women carry in their purses: makeup kits, mini first aid kits, keys, shopping lists, address books, check books, medicine bottles, pictures, food items and a plethora of items, including the personals. Surely, it would be an item of interest to see what each person carries in their purse.

Purses in the African-American community are commonly referred to as "bags." It's a cultural definition that refers to a woman's purse as a "bag" and man's wallet as his "billfold." Both terms mean the same. The difference is in the application. Based on that cultural interpretation of a "bag" three decades ago singer James Brown produced a chart busting single entitled "Papa's got a brand new bag!" It gave another dimension to the cultural understanding of "bag."

It was one of a series of Brown selections that displayed a syncopated music style that he called "funk" and his revised social consciousness. Brown was an icon of the typical Negro who was unaware of himself but who came to a new understanding of himself. Once that happened he changed his haircut and the message of his songs, for the most part, became social statements. They included: "Say it Loud, I'm Black and I'm Proud","Don't Be A Dropout","I Don't Want nobody to give me nothing, open up the door I'll get it myself" and "Papa's Got a brand new bag" which seemed to summarize his new social consciousness.

A person's "bag" represents his attitudes and values, direction, and spirituality. It represents what's going on inside of his head and heart. Thus to have a "new bag" would suggest that something different is happening on the inside.

Certainly every believer can identify with the idea of having a new perspective on life. That's probably what Paul had in mind when he wrote in: 1 Corinthians 13:11 "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things." Once he had developed a new understanding of himself and his relationship to God, he put away childish things and walked in the mature knowledge of God.

As Christians, we know what it means to have come into the full knowledge of God. Once that happens in a persons life, he turns away from the works of darkness and walks after the light. He becomes a persons who has a "brand new bag."

Exposition

This text focuses on Job as he speaks of his expectation that God will forgive his sins.

Job, after experiencing many of life's problems had adopted, at least for a short while, a pessimistic view of life. His life was filled with a plethora of problems that placed him in a position of emptiness before God.

He spoke about his problems, mused about death and then longed for the prospect of the day when he would be able to stand before God with all of his sins forgiven, his wrath past and experiencing brighter happier times. That would be the day in which his shortcomings, weaknesses and flaws would be sealed in a bag, never to be mentioned again as he begins a new life free of present entanglements.

Jesus, speaking to believers, urged them to "provide yourselves bags" that represent the treasures of heaven. He encouraged every believer not to fill the substance of their lives with worldly treasures, but to focus on trying their best to fill their bags with heavenly treasures.

Job's hope was that his sins would be placed in a bag and sealed. Jesus urged us to take sinful things out of our bags and replace them with godliness.

What's In the Bag?

If our "bag" represents our attitudes and values, life direction and spiritual state, what's in our bag? If we were to pour out the bags of our souls what would we discover about ourselves?

ATTITUDES AND VALUES: If we were to pour out the contents of our bag we might find:

Lottery Tickets or Dice: Suggesting that we strive to get rich quick without much effort. Those who spend their lives in pursuit of the fast dollar forget that Jesus taught us to: Matthew 6:33 "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

Condom: Which might suggest that we regard sexual experiences as permissible as long as they are safe. Yet, 1 Corinthians 6:19 keeps reminding us "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?"

A crumpled Appeal Letter: Suggesting that we dismiss requests to help the poor and needy as time consuming and senseless. Yet, when we fail to respond to the needs of the poor Jesus says we have done that to him. Mat 25:40 ".. Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Mirror: Suggests that we concern ourselves with our outward appearance. Yet while we concern ourselves with the exterior God looks at the heart. 1 Sam 16:7a; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart.

DIRECTION: With respect to direction what would we find?

Compass: It might suggest that we need guidance, for our lives are running in circles and we seem to be going no where fast! Mark 10:21 "One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, take up the cross, and follow me."

Map. Suggests that we have a plan that we have marked for ourselves, without giving God's plan a chance. Proverbs 3:6 "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths."

SPIRITUALITY: With respect to our spirituality what would we find?

Dry sponge: Suggesting that our spiritual life is dry and without substance, reduced to mere ritual and lip service. Yet our lips should be dripping with praise for the goodness of God. That's why David in Psalm 71:23-24 said " My lips shall greatly rejoice when I sing unto thee; and my soul, which thou hast redeemed. My tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness all the day long..."

Daily horoscope and Psychic connection phone number: This could suggest that we are mystical about our approach to spirituality, depending on the stars and mystics to orient us in life. Hebrews 12:1-2 "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

When we pour out our bag and take a good hard look at ourselves it becomes obvious that we need a new "bag."

When faced with the challenge to change their "bag" some seek to change the bag, rather than the contents. Thus many make cosmetic change to their outer appearance but the contents of the bag remain the same. They buy a new bag and then rake all of the old contents into the new one. Regardless to how pretty it appears on the outside, the new bag is really the same old "bag."

A Brand New Bag!

A person who becomes a Christian is different from a person who simply modifies his lifestyle but keeps the same values. What's in the bag changes. His attitudes and values change. His direction in life changes and his spiritual relationship with God changes.

A person who accepts Christ dumps the contents of his old "bag" into God's garbage bag called "grace" where it is sealed, never to be opened again! Job said "My transgression is sealed up in a bag, and thou sewest up mine iniquity" Once sealed in the God's garbage bag our pasts sins are never brought up again and are dumped forever in time and eternity.

2 Corinthians 5:17 "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

The new bag may contain a bible, a pair of binoculars and a cross.

The bible reminds the believer that his life is rooted in the word of God. Psalm 119:105". Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

The binoculars remind him to keep looking forward. Phil 3:13 " .... forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The cross reminds him that he is saved by the power of God. 1 Cor 1:18 "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God."

There is power in the blood and the cross represents that power.

No wonder the song writer declares "There's power! Power!" Wonder working power in the blood of the lamb!

At the cross at the cross where I first saw the light and burdens of my heart roll away. It was there by faith I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!

Every saved soul can declare: "since I met the Lord, I've got a brand new bag!"

My hands, once busy holding on to things of this world, are reaching for heavenly goals. I've got brand new hands!

My feet, once busy running to mischief, are now walking in the path of righteousness. I've got a brand new walk!

My talk, once filled with worldliness, now speaks of the love of God and the Lord.

Come here daughter! Come here son! Go and tell the whole world that "Papa's got a brand new bag!"

Tell them that he met and man called Jesus!

Jesus, the lily of the Valley! Jesus, the Bright and Morning Star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose on Sunday morning!

Since he met Jesus, he doesn't go where he used to go!

Since he met Jesus, he doesn't do what he used to do!

Papa's Got a brand new bag!

What Goes Around Comes Around

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 17, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days. Give a portion to seven, and also to eight; for thou knowest not what evil shall be upon the earth. Eccesiastes 11:1-2 "And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise. Luke 6:31

Introduction

Have you ever wondered whether you were wasting your time or involved in a fruitless effort? On occasion we feel that our efforts are useless and fruitless. Teachers feel that way sometimes. They give their best energy and time to prepare a lesson that seems to go in one ear and come out the other. Parents feel that way too. Those who work in the criminal justice system often see so many cases of misplaced values parading before them that they wonder whether there is an end to the revolving door that seems to have trapped many in an endless spiral and will not turn them loose. Those who help the poor, the elderly or the homeless reach the same point. In frustration, many good people often wonder whether they should continue their good works. They wonder, "should I keep ringing the bell for the Salvation Army, collecting food for the needy, or working to help the homeless." No matter how much we help, the need never seems to diminish. They see no prospect of good that can from their crop. Some give up and call it quits.

The story is told of a son who had been caring for his aging father in his home. He wondered whether he was wasting his time talking, reading, and sharing with him since his father's condition had deteriorated to the point he could not respond. His father was almost deaf and blind and had difficulty eating without spilling his food. Occasionally his shaking hand would drop his bread on the floor. Sometimes he would break a bowl by accident. In frustration, the son made the old man eat in a corner behind the stove. He gave him a wooden bowl which could not be broken. Instead of a fresh piece of bread they picked up the slice from the floor and put it in his wooden bowl.

One day the old man's little grandson was working with some pieces of wood. When his father asked what he was doing, he replied, "It's a trough and a dust pan."

His parents asked "What are they for?" The grandson looked at his grandfather behind the stove and said "It's a trough for you and dad to eat out of when I'm grown. This is a dust pan so I sweep up the bread you drop on the floor and put it in the trough." The parents were horror stricken at what they heard. From that day forward the old man sat at the table. When his bread dropped to the floor they put a fresh slice in his hand. Not only were they giving bread to a helpless grandfather that day, but they were feeding fresh bread to what could be a helpless mother and father in years to come. Their son helped them remember, "What goes around comes around!"

There are millions of believers today who become frustrated with the apparent thankless nature of their good works. Jesus experienced the same feeling after he healed ten lepers and watched them walked away. Soon after however, one returned and said thanks, which made it all worthwhile.

That's the way it is when a teacher hears a student come back years later and thank her for a scolding or a punishment. That's the day a lunchroom worker gets unexpected praise from a student who recognizes the importance of her service. After many days, our deeds come back to us, whether good or bad.

As Christians, we have learned the value of doing good deeds and serving others. At the moment they seem useless and fruitless, but after many days, we know they will come back to greet us as God favors us with blessings from on high. What goes around will come around to meet us again!

Exposition

This text focuses on Solomon as he gives words of wisdom to those have been blessed.

The text seems to suggest that those who have been blessed should not hoard their blessings. They are encouraged to cast them upon the waters.

Casting bread upon the waters is a striking phrase. It is supposed that it is drawn from the Egyptian practice of sowing seeds upon the river Nile while it overflowed it banks. When the waters subsided the seeds would take root somewhere along the Nile bank system and would grow into fine stalks of corn. The sower would cast the seed but had no idea whether it would take root in the immediate vicinity or take root in another place. However, the sower knew, if properly sown they would take root somewhere. Just as he sowed in one place and expected his seed to probably grow up in another, there were other sowers in other places along the river's edge that were also sowing. Their seed would probably be that which finally took root in his area. In any event, the sowers cast seed upon the waters in this way, not knowing what the final outcome would be while trusting the gods to provide for them.

The converse of this practice would have been to wait until the waters subsided, then plant the seed in a specified area where only the planter could benefit from it. It required little dependence on others and the gods. Yet, they made the practice of sowing on the waters to secure for themselves a confident link in the chain of goodwill among the people.

Solomon's reference to this practice as a wise choice for modern man suggests that those who have had bountiful blessings from God should share the benefit of their blessings with everyone, even when there is little prospect that the benefit given will in someway return. Often it may appear that the kind deed done has little effect or is meaningless, but down river somewhere the seed will take root and grow. Those who are recipients of the seed did not plant it themselves but are the recipients of the providence of God through the sowing of others.

After many days the seed cast would be reaped, not necessarily in the place where it was sown or by the sower, but it would be reaped by someone somewhere. What of the sower? He or she would reap seed too, that which was probably cast by someone else and blessed by the providence of God. Those who perform good deeds should not expect the results to be immediate.

The time span has been predicted to be "Many days." How long is "many days?" For the widow woman of 1 Kings 17:15 who prepared her last cruise of oil and meal in a feast for the prophet "many days" meant she was blessed as long as necessary for her obedience. In Ezekiel 12:27 the prophecies that were given by this great man of God were said to be "many days" into the future. Many days in this instance meant generations. In Daniel 10:14 "many days" meant the vision he shared was many years away. "Many days" therefore means a time that could be immediate or many years, but as long as it takes.

Solomon encourages us to give a portion to seven, if that appears to be the right or perfect number for your resources, but then go beyond that. Share resources even when you can't afford to do so.

Today we are doing the sowing, but the time may come when we may be reaping or needing help. When it comes, it flows from that which we have sown in better times.

Jesus went beyond what Solomon suggested. He encouraged us to "give to every man that asketh of thee" without thought of whether or not we are being ripped off or cheated. Jesus' rule was simple "treat others as you would have them treat you."

Both texts repeat the exact same truth: share your blessings with others without regard to prospect of immediate results, with the full knowledge that what you share will come back to you in other ways in future days.

These text combined say with a clear voice: Do good while you can: What goes around, comes around!"

The evil we do, comes around

If there is one certainty in life it is that we shall reap what we sow. Moreover, we shall reap in accordance to that which we have sown. 2 Corinthians 9:6 says "But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."

Those who sow evil things will reap them. In the book of Esther, Haman devised an evil plot to have Mordecai, a godly man, hanged. The plot was exposed and Haman was hanged on the gallows he built for Mordecai. He learned a lesson, albeit to late, that “what goes around comes around!”

Those who are intolerant of the views of the others, seem the most irritated when their views are not tolerated. “What goes around comes around.”

Those who are impatient with others, seem the most disgruntled when others complain that they themselves act too slow. “What goes around comes around.”

Those who are insensitive to the needs of the poor or elderly, are among the first to complain when they themselves appear neglected. “What goes around comes around.”

Those who steal from others, seem to cry the loudest when someone steals from them. “What goes around comes around!”

Those who stab others in the back, die a slow death when they become the victims of their own ways. “What goes around comes around!”

Those who pass up a person in distress along the way, complain the loudest when they themselves are passed up. “What goes around comes around.”

The tragedy of evil deeds is that we do them also unto Christ. In Matthew 25:40 he reminds us that what we have done to the “least of these” we have done also to him. “What goes around, comes around.”

The good we do, comes around

Yet while there is a warning to those who practice evil deeds, there is promise to those who do good. We are encouraged to do as much good as we can for as many as we can as long as we can.

Casting our bread upon the waters, means reaching out to hungry people with a loaf for the spirit and a word of hope for the soul!

Casting our bread upon the waters, means reaching out for the homeless with a comfortable place to rest and a chance for a heavenly home!

Casting our bread upon the waters means looking beyond the rough exteriors of wayward children and seeing the sensitive interiors that cry out for love and affection!

Casting our bread upon the waters is giving a helping hand when we see no chance that the favor would ever be returned.

When we cast our bread upon the waters it is not an exercise in futility. It is not a vain effort that has no reward because Proverbs 19:17 say “He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the LORD; and that which he hath given will he pay him again.”

Those who we help may not be able to pay us, but when the Lord pays, He pays in rich dividends and blessings.

When the Lord pays, that which we have cast upon the water comes back in mighty ways!

That widow woman who gave her last oil and bread testified, “I gave all that I had, but every time I went to my barrel there was enough for another meal!”

When the Lord pays, He pays in many days and many ways!

While casting your bread upon the waters means to share of your physical resources, it also means to share of your spiritual resources. This is important because it is written “Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.”

We must tell the world about the bread of life! We must tell them about the Love of God through his Son Jesus Christ!

We must tell everyone we meet about the Lord. Phillip met an Ethiopian riding in Chariot and took time tell him about Jesus. Many years later that historians record that someone came to Ethiopia with a message of Salvation and thousands became Christian. No name was given but happened in chariot along the road!

A woman came to the well and received the good news. Nobody would have suspected it but she became a great missionary running through the streets of the city saying “Come see a man who told me all I’ve ever done!”

We need to tell somebody about the Love of God!

We need to tell somebody about Jesus! Who died! And arose from the grave!

Tell them “what goes around comes around!” He’s coming back again! I hear him saying:

“You helped the poor and the needy...Come and go with me!”

“You gave a plate of food to a hungry man...come and go with me!”

“You stood up for those who could not defend themselves...come and go with me!”

“You showed compassion on the helpless....come and go with me!”

“Come and go with me to my father’s house!”

In my father’s house there is peace!

In my father’s house there is joy! Joy! Joy!

A Changeless God In Changing Times

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 25, 1996

SCRIPTURE:"Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever. Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines. For it is a good thing that the heart be established with grace; not with meats, which have not profited them that have been occupied therein. Hebrews 13:8-9

Introduction

How much have you changed in the past 10 years? Do you look the same? Has your hair grayed a bit? Is it longer or shorter? What about your facial features? Are there lines in places that were once smooth? Are their crow's feet at the corners of your eyes? Do you weigh more or less than you did ten years ago? Are your ideas the same? What about your spirituality? Has it improved or is it in worse repair? If mirrors serve any purpose at all, they let us know that we change! But mirrors can tell us whether or not we have changed spiritually, for that we must hold our lives up to the word of God and see how it reflects from his word.

There are many things in the world that change. Sometimes things change so fast that we difficulty adjusting.. The rapid advance of computers is a change that is taking many by storm. It seems that everyone is talking about computers as the wave of the future. The prospects of change coming so fast that we can't receive it properly is the basis of Alvin Tofler's book "Future Shock." In it he details all of the changes that are coming forth in our times. He projected that they will come so fast as we near the end of the century that many people will be "shocked" by the rapidity and extent of the changes. Among those changes will be a need for shorter more intense experiences. He suggested that people will want to have the same intensity of experience in a shorter period of time. No longer will people sit and watch a nearly four-hour movie such as the Ten Commandments. Tofler also suggests that there will be a demand for disposability. Temporary items will find a great place in the marketplace. Paper plates, plastic spoons, disposable napkins, table cloths and diapers. In addition, he adds the frightening prospect that there will also be a yearning for disposable relationships as divorce and separations become the acceptable norm. The scores of changes he details in his book point to the great truth that in a rapidly changing society, many people will find themselves shocked and uncomfortable as they move from the industrial age into the information age.

Change, especially change that occurs swiftly will also create a yearning for stability. The world will yearn for a place where its icons remain constant and its symbols remain untarnished by time. It will want something that does not change.

As Christians, we are satisfied that our God is able to provide us with a peace of mind that rises above the changing times in which we live. Our assurance is based on our knowledge that our God is not impacted by changing times. He is the same yesterday, today and forevermore.

Times may change, but our God remains the same.

Exposition

This text emphasizes the constancy of Christ while at the same time reflecting on the mortality of man.

The unknown writer of the Hebrews addressed the Jews on a variety of subjects. Among them was the need to keep Christ as the center of the focus and not religious leaders. In verse seven (7) the past accomplishments of great apostles, leaders and teachers who had died are recalled. Many of these include men who had seen Christ and had walked with him. They spoke with power and conviction because many of them were eye witnesses to his words and deeds. When they preached, thousands believed and turned to the faith. Their lives were models by which other believers could pattern themselves. They became icons of the Christian life as thousands emulated both their words and faith. Yet their number was rapidly declining. Both time and persecution had taken its toll. Most of the apostles were killed because of their beliefs. Other great teachers and preachers were either dead or incapacitated by time.

The deaths of the giants of the faith discouraged some believers. Many lost heart and were losing hope. This text finds the Hebrews being encouraged to look beyond the works of mere men but to keep their faith focused on Christ. In just a few brief words the writer pays tribute to their memories while at the same time pointing out that Christ, not the accomplishments or personality of men, is the center of the faith. Unlike, men, Christ is immortal. Unlike mere men, Christ does not and will not change. He is the same yesterday, today and forever more.

They were encouraged to keep the faith and not yield to the temptation to follow after false teachings or doctrines, but to keep Christ foremost in their mind.

That Christ as God is immortal is borne out in scripture. Psalm 102:27 says "But thou art the same, and thy years shall have no end." It speaks of the endless nature of God and his changeless character. Even his mercy is changeless as evidenced in Psalm 103:17 But the mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children;

The New Testament points out that there is no variability in God's nature. He is the same at all times. He is constant. James 1:17 puts it this way "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

When things change

Today there is very little importance placed upon anything. That which is traditional or customary is frowned upon. Values and ideals are all considered variable, totally dependent upon the situation. Everything changes, including the very substance that determines the quality of our lives.

The world believes in relative standards. Morality is considered relative as well. There are no absolutes according to this way of thinking. Each culture and every person is free to make its own rules. Those who have adopted this attitude toward life argue that everything in life changes.

The wagon was once our transportation, but now internal combustion engines harness horsepower!

The long walk to school with old syrup buckets for lunch pails was once a way of life, but now there are school buses and schools that serve breakfast, lunch and even afternoon snacks!

There was once an ice man that brought 25 pound blocks of ice and placed them in an ice boxes, but now electric refrigerators have taken their place.

Once, long trips across the country required a family to fry up boxes of chicken, lugging ice filled pickle jars, but today there is Kentucky Fried Chicken and McDonald's.

We have witnessed many changes in today's time. In fact we have watched things change so much that we have come to accept them as part of life and expected.

God Does Not Change

While there are many things that change in life, there is one certain truth...God does not change!

Conditions change, but God does not change!

Circumstances change, but God does not change!

The fact that God does not change makes Him the only truly known entity in the universe that is constant. He can be depended upon never to waver or be moved. He is constant.

While man is impacted by time and age, God exceeds time and cannot be encompassed by it. Therefore, God does not age. He is timeless. For that reason it is true that he is the same yesterday, today and forever, because he is beyond measure by time. He is truly timeless.

God's love for mankind is not affected by his moods. His love for us remains the same regardless to the mood of the moment. This was best exemplified by Jesus.

Judas was a striking example of betrayal and treason. Yet Jesus' love for him never ceased, despite his disappointment in his action.

Peter was a striking example of faithlessness and cowardice. Yet Jesus' love for him never diminished. Even while Peter was denying Christ, the Master's love remained constant.

The treachery of the cross was painful and humiliating, yet Jesus even as he hung from the cross remained constant in his love, say "Father forgive them for they know not what they do!"

God's love is not affected by sin. A man whose wife cheats on him often finds that his affections toward her diminishes. He does not love her like he once did. Yet, God demonstrated to the world through the prophet Hosea and his marriage to the harlot Gomer, that his love for us does not change and is not effected by our sin.

Although we sin, God develops a hate for the sin, but he never hates the sinner himself!

Consider the mother whose son was a mass murderer. The boy had turned out to be incorrigible. He stole and murdered. He caused misery to everyone that was close to him. As the day of his execution drew knew, the mother went to chapel every day and prayed for him. A friend who knew her well asked, "how can you ask God to have mercy on your son who has killed and robbed so many. Haven't his acts angered you?" The mother replied. "My heart aches for the families that were wounded by my son's actions. I am affected by his action. But his action has had no effect on my love for him. He's still my son!"

God so loved that world that he gave his only begotten Son to that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life. That's a love that will not change!

God is still the same!

When we learn that God is changeless, the changing times in which we live cannot affect us!

Because God is the same...

—There is no battle we can face that will stop us!

—There is no mountain that will be to hard for us to climb!

—There is no valley too deep for us traverse!

—There is no night too dark for us to make it through!

—There is no crisis that we cannot control!

—There is no storm so strong that we cannot weather it!

—There is no enemy so frightening that we cannot defeat it!

Our God is the same!

He is the same God that..

—Walked the face of the earth, holding Enoch's hand

—Strolled along with Abraham on way to the promised land!

—Who Jacob wrestled and held to the close of the night!

—That down in the den with Daniel and sealed the jaws up tight!

—That rolled back the waters of the deep sea!

—Is alive today and He can save you and me!

That same God can get in your life and make it meaningful and real!

He's real! He's real! I know He's real!

Just Do It

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE: "And David said to Solomon his son, Be strong and of good courage, and do it: fear not, nor be dismayed: for the LORD God, even my God, will be with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work for the service of the house of the LORD." 1 Chronicles 28:20

Introduction

Have you ever dreamed of doing something great but have never found the time? Is there a goal that you want to pursue but have not done so because you are hesitant to take on the responsibility? Do you find yourself constantly putting off things that need to be done until tomorrow? If so, then you probably know what it means to be a procrastinator. The ranks of the procrastinators are not unique fraternities. There are many kinds of people that comprise its membership. Preachers, deacons, choir members, the young and even the old make up the ranks of the procrastinators. Many have trouble making up their minds to do what needs to be done, when it needs to be done, the way it needs to be done.

The Nike Corporation has a logo that is worn by young people around the world. It is called a "swoosh" and is accompanied by the phrase "Just Do it!" It suggests that life does not wait for us to make up our minds about seizing its opportunities. If we are to do great things, we must begin at some point and stop talking.

The sales manager of a large real estate firm was interviewing an applicant for a sales job. "Why have you chosen this career?" he asked.

"I dream of making a million dollars in real estate, like my father," the young man replied.

"Your father made a million dollars in real estate?" asked the impressed sales manager.

"No," replied the young man. "but he always dreamed of it."

There are many young people today who are dreaming of making it big in life. Turning a dream into a reality doesn't just happen, it begins when someone takes the initiative to begin the process. Doing big things for God begins with positive actions in small areas. Talk is fine but action is greater. Have you ever noticed that the Bible never mentions the dreams of the apostles? It doesn't even mention the ideas of the apostles. However, it devotes an entire book to the "Acts of the Apostles."

As Christians, we know that our actions evidence our faith. If we are to witness to the great power of our God we should show it through out actions because "faith without works is dead." Have you been thinking about doing a great thing? Ask God for the power. Stop thinking about it and do it!

Exposition

This text focuses on David at the end of his life encouraging his young son Solomon to complete the dream.

Most of David's life was spent fighting wars to secure the land of Canaan for God. His one great hope was to build a great temple for God that would replace the tent Tabernacle which had served the people from the wilderness journey until his time. What David wanted to do was monolithic in size and scope. It was expensive and required an entire lifetime to adequately build.

He was frustrated because God would not allow him to build the temple in his lifetime. He spent the closing years of his life laying the groundwork for the temple. The plans were elaborate and awe inspiring. No one in the kingdom had seen a building like he proposed. It would take a lifetime to construct and cost a literal fortune.

Therefore David spent his last years collecting large sums of Gold and silver. He collected large amounts of building materials. It is estimated that the value of the treasure he accumulated to build the temple was somewhere between $2 to $4 billion. The temple was to be "exceedingly magnificent of fame and glory in all the earth." (1 Chronicles 22:5).

This text comes at the point in which David has completed the work of actual planning. Solomon, his son, was a young man who now faced the monumental task of tackling the great work begun by his father. It was huge. It was powerful. It was over powering in many instances.

Thus, in the text David encourages Solomon not to be intimidated by the size of the task, but to begin the great work. God had blessed the concept, the preparation and advance work. Now all that remained was for Solomon to do it. What David told Solomon in plan and simple terms was "don't be afraid of the size of the project, just do it!" He assured him that God would be with him every step of the way, but he had to begin the great work.

Round Tuitts

There are many people today that have great dreams for themselves and their families. The only problem they have is getting started. They have laid plans that are absolutely fabulous. They are four square and well laid, except they are missing one component. While they have laid their plans squarely they are missing one small component called a "round tuitt." It's so small that many people miss it. It sometimes seems insignificant but without this little component no matter how squarely laid the plan, it will never come to be.

If you have a "tuitt" try to hang on to it. Put it in a safe place. Try not to lose it. Or better yet, keep a few spares on hand.

These TUITS have been hard to come by, especially the round ones. If you have them, your chances of accomplishing your sanctified dreams increase tremendously.

For you see, so many have said, "I'll get started in church just as soon as I can get a round tuit." Others have said, "I should come to the evening service, but I never seem to get a round tuit."

Or, "I know that my Bible knowledge would increase if I came to class, but I never get a round tuit." Or, "I've been wanting to start singing in the choir and I've been planning to begin tithing my income, but we've been so busy that we just haven't gotten a round tuit."

Why haven't you cleaned your room? "I haven't gotten a round tuitt!"

Why haven't you washed the dishes? "I haven't gotten a round tuitt!"

Why haven't you studied your lessons? "I haven't gotten a round tuitt!"

There are many youth who could do much better in school than they do. They just haven't got a round tuitt. They could learn to play their instrument well enough to sit in the first chair in band or to sing in the first section of the choir, but they haven't got a round to the practice needed.

Others could be honor students, but studying takes times and of course you must get "a round tuitt."

Excellence requires an ample supply of round tuitts. Like American Express, we should never leave home without them.

If you meet someone who never gets a round tuit, give him one. Keep a good supply on hand. The lack of a "round tuitt" is what is generally called procrastination. It's putting off what you know should be done today until tomorrow.

Yet the word of God encourages us not to proscrastinate or delay but to take courage, get a round tuitt and just do it!

Stick Tuitts

In addition to round tuitts, that get us started there must be some stick tuitts.

There are many people who begin projects but never finish them. They write the first chapter of the book but never go further. They begin work on the Master's or PhD but never complete it. They start to add a room on to their home and never complete it. Do you know such people?

Jesus encouraged all believers who begin in kingdom work to stick to it. In fact in Luke 9:62 Jesus frown on those who start and stop. "No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."

Stick tuitts are perphaps what Paul had in mind when he encouraged the Corinthians to remain faithful to the cause saying in "1 Corinthians 15:58 "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord."

The Christian life is one that is focused on a single goal in a single direction. Those who begin and allow themselves to go into other directions get side tracked. Thus the Christian life is like the point of a sword. It has one point and one end. Those who are easily side tracked our like the straws of a broom. Instead of a single point and a single end they have many straws and many ends pointing in many directions.

The need to stick to our faith is what Paul had in mind when he wrote in Philippians 3:14 "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

That's perhaps what the song writer had in mind when he said "I'm pressing on the upward way. New heights I'm gaining every day. Still praying as I onward bound, Lord plant my feet on higher ground!" Lord lift me up and let me stand by faith on heaven's table land. A higher plane than I have found, Lord plant my feet on higher ground!"

If we are going to "do it" we need a few more "tuitts"

The sinner will need an "admit tuitt!" He must say in his heart, I can't make it without the Lord on my side!

His soul must come running asking "what must I do to be saved!" He's soul must testify:

"I know you have a work for me to do and you are telling me to do it..but "I can't do this thing by myself!"

My hands are not strong enough, they may let go!

My feet won't stay on the right path, they may wander away!

My tongue may begin to mumble the wrong words

Lord, I have an "admit Tuitt" will you accept it?

I can hear the savior's response, there's a cross out on the hill I'll accept your admit tuitt, if you will look to it!

The Cross, look to it, it's a sign that "God so loved the world that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!"

The Cross, look to it, it's sign that enemies may try to crush you, but truth crushed to the ground will rise again!

The Cross, look to it, it's a sign that, come what may, from day, the Lord will always be by your side!

No wonder the song writer wrote: "At the cross, at the cross, where I first saw the light and the burdens of my heart rolled away. It was there by faith, I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!"

The Cross, look to it, it's a sign that Jesus, who died on Calvary and arose on third day, is coming back again!

If you got the faith, you must hold on to it!

Hold on, God is still on the throne!

Hold to his hand; God's unchanging hand!

Build your hopes on things eternal!

Hold to God's unchanging hand!

When is God Good?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 1, 1996

SCRIPTURE:"Oh how great is thy goodness, which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee; which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men!" Psalm 31:19

Introduction

Have you ever felt you had good parents or friends? When were the times when you felt they were good? Generally, we interpret "good" in proportion to "pleasure". Thus, a person who helps us get what we want is good. One that does not is bad. One who allows us to do what we want is good. The other is bad. When requests made are granted, we describe the provider as a good one. Many of us have had favorite aunts or uncles whom we sometimes considered better than our parents on the pleasure scale because they rarely said no to our requests and bowed to our every wish. Some have friends they prefer to others because they are told what they want to hear. In this context "good" is determined by an ever-changing pleasure index that is relative to the desires of the moment.

When is a mother a good mother? When is a father a good father? Consider the boys in the neighborhood who were discussing their parents. As they talked, they often discussed what they liked and disliked about their parents. One boy in the group, never had a negative comment about his mom. It really nerved the other young men who tired of his constant bragging on his mom. One day he came to the group and bragged, "my mom carried us to Burger King and we ate Whoppers and fries!" His chest stuck out with pride. On another day he bragged, "My mom carried me to McDonald's and we had Big Mac combos!" That really nerved the other fellows. It seemed there was no end to this boy's bragging. One day the boy came to the group and he wasn't bursting to talk. He didn't rush to brag on his mom. "What's the story? Why are you so quiet today?" They asked. "What did you have for dinner this time?" The boy said, "my mom made me eat spinach and broccoli and stuff." Shrugging his shoulders he said, "I hate spinach! I hate broccoli!" The others finally got a chance to rub it in. "Still think your mom is so good?" The boy sprung to his feet with a big smile on his face and said, "She's still good, she just had a bad day, that's all!" When goodness is measured by pleasure alone, then the only conclusion that can possibly be reached is somebody is having a bad day!

In that same context, the question can be asked, "When is God good?" If we measure his goodness by the pleasure index our response would be that God is good when we are receiving known blessings as we requested. Thus, when we are sick and we ask God for a healing and receive it, then we respond, "God is good!" When we are hungry and pray for food and it comes we respond, "God is good!" When we are in trouble and God brings us help, we respond "God is good!" However, when the hot water heater bursts and water is everywhere, is God still good? When you were laid off your job without notice or prospect for finding another one soon, is God still good? When storms damage your property or thieves take away that which you value, is God still good? Your answer is like spinach and broccoli to the proud son. "It may not be good to me, but if it's served at mama's table, it's bound to be good for me.!" That's the Christian response. No matter what the circumstance, God is still good.

As Christians, we don't measure God's goodness by the pleasure index. We know that God is good all the time and all the time God is good. That's another way of saying, 'whatever is served at God's table, may not be good "to us" at the moment, but it's bound to be good "for us" in the long run!"

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he praises God for his goodness.

There are several attributes of God that are a part of our faith. Among these are His immutability (changelessness), infinity, spirituality, omniscience, omnipotence, omnipresence, holiness and just way. These attributes describe what believers can expect of God. In the list of attributes of God is another, called the "goodness of God." What believers know about the nature of God's goodness helps them better understand the God they serve. The goodness of God consists of four components, His benevolence, love, mercy and grace. Together, they comprise the total goodness of God.

Perhaps as much as any man, David had experienced the entire sphere of God's goodness. He had been a recipient of God's benevolence in that God had worked in many ways to promote his life goals and secure his liberty. He was the recipient of God's love in that God showed his delight in him by blessings his undertakings and rewarding him for being "a man after God's own heart." He had experienced God's mercy in that God had shown pity and compassion on him as he suffered in the aftermath of sin. He had experienced grace in that God showed him love although he was unworthy and created in him a new heart and renewed in him a right spirit. David's life was a testimony to the goodness of God because he had experienced the four dimensions of his goodness and knew God to be "good."

In Chapter 29 David witnessed the voice and power of God as it moved in the wind, rumbled in the thunder, broke the mighty Cedars of Lebanon, covered the forests, shook the wilderness in such a mighty way that in 29:9 he wrote, "in his temple doth every one speak of his glory." Even in the midst of his powerful and destructive voice, David resolved that God would strengthen his people and bless them. God was seen as a good God.

In Chapter 30 David praised the Lord upon the dedication of his palace. It was a time of celebration in which God's goodness was evident.

Thus, he is able to conclude chapter 31 by showing the greatness of God's goodness. In verse 19 he suggests that God's goodness to believers is in two parts: one which is in reserve and another which is demonstrated before the eyes of men. He makes this clear by noting that "thou hast laid up for them that fear thee; which thou has wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men!" Thus, David confirms the truth that there are some blessings which are obvious on the surface and easy to recognize by people everywhere. There are other blessings that are being held in reserve for those who believe, as a result of God's goodness that cannot be seen at the present moment, but are nevertheless present. Whether the goodness of God is readily visible to those or whether it is being held in reserve to be presented at a different time, God's people are encouraged in verse 24 to "be of good courage, and he shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord."

Thus David answers the question, "When is God good?" by noting that even when it is not obvious to the eyes of men, God is still good! His answer seems to be, God is good all the time and all the time, God is good!

When is God Good ?

The Word of God confirms one important truth that is always relevant. Believers can expect God to always be benevolent, loving, merciful and full of grace to the undeserving. With that in mind believers should know that Romans 8:28 is true, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Regardless of the circumstance the scriptural witness is that, God is good!

IN SACRIFICE GOD IS GOOD!: Abraham was called upon to make the ultimate sacrifice of his son upon an altar. Even though his heart was heavy, he stepped forward to make the sacrifice that God required. He placed his son on an altar but soon found out that God had a ram in the bush.

In a broader sense, we are often called upon to render sacrificial service. Those who feel the burden to care for ailing family members labor under a heavy load. Those who have shouldered the burdens of others and carry them on their shoulders usually do so at considerable sacrifice of time and resources. Yet even in the midst of sacrifice, like Abraham, they have discovered that God provides strength as well as a ram in the bush. Even in the midst of our trying and often frustrating sacrificial service, God is good!

IN THE FACE OF DEATH GOD IS GOOD! David labored before God night and day praying for the healing of his son. Upon the death of his son, David arose, put on fresh clothing and said "In thee oh Lord do I put my trust." Those who struggle with the loss of a loved one may be tempted to be angry with God until they remember David's epic words "yea thou I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil for thou art with me!" Even in the face of death, God is good!

IN HARD TIMES GOD IS GOOD! A widow woman experienced some extreme hard times. She was trying to raise a family without a husband. Her resources had come to an end. Her barrel of meal had reduced itself to one final cup and her oil jug had only enough to make one final cake. Yet, she found that in the midst of her hard times, God was still good!

Are you going through a particularly difficult period at the moment? Are situations in your life unsettling? Is it hard to make ends meet? This widow woman reminds us that even in hard times God is still good!

IN SICKNESS AND MISFORTUNE: Job experienced the full gamut of human experiences. His fortunes were lost by no fault of his own. His family members died and he experienced a long period of pain, sickness and suffering. Despite his circumstance Job declared: "Yea thou he slay me, yet will I trust him!" "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord!"

When we are sick, God is still good! When we suffer at the hands of Satan, God is still Good! When we endure pain, God is still good! When we experience a loss of physical property or damages, God is still good! There is no reason for us to abandon God, for He is the same yesterday, today and forever more! God is still good!

God is Good All The Time!

Finally, every believer must remember that God's goodness is not seasonal. It is not here today and gone tomorrow. God's goodness is a perpetual shower of benevolence, love, mercy and grace.

Every morning when we rise we are the recipients of his benevolent blessings. He blesses us with health and strength. That's why David declared in Psalm 5:3 "My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O LORD; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up."

When is God good? He is good all the time and all the time God is good!"

The love of God is not occasional, but it is always present. Even when we are not at our best God still loves us. When we are faring less than our potential God has showered us with love. John 3:16 says "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." When is God good? He is good all the time and all the time God is good!

The mercy of God is not incidental. He does not show mercy today and refuse to show mercy tomorrow. That's why the believer who has made a mistake knows that regardless of the day or the hour he can respond like Psalm 85:7 and say, "Show us thy mercy, O LORD, and grant us thy salvation." When is God good? God is good all the time and all the time God is good!

The grace of God is not a timed occurrence. He does not offer grace on a pre-planned schedule that withholds it if we do not come at the right time. God's grace is always available in sufficient quantity to satisfy our needs. That's why Paul declared in, 2

Corinthians 12:9 “My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness.” When is God good? God is good all the time and all the time God is good!

I don’t know about you but I’ve found that God is good all the time!

In the midst of sorrow, God is good, because he brings us joy!

In the midst of conflicts, God is good, because he brings us courage!

In the midst of danger, God is good, because he brings us safety!

In the midst of weakness, God is good, because he bring us strength!

In the midst of defeat, God is good, because he brings us the victory!

In the midst of the storm, God is good, because he speaks to the wind and waves!

God is so good that he sent his Son to die for us on Calvary and wash away our sins!

He’s so good that he looks down on us every day and showers us with blessings from heaven!

No wonder the song writer declared “I get a blessing every day!”

I don’t know about you but the Lord is blessing me right now!

He woke me up this morning and started me on my way!

The Lord is blessing me right now!

The Place To Meet God

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting."Micah 5:2

Introduction

If you heard that the son of God would be born in a certain place, how important would it be to you to get there? Would you stop what you are doing jump in your car and drive there? Would you dip into your savings, buy a plane ticket and fly there? Would it be important to be there at all? We read in scripture where wise men traveled great distances to reach the place of Jesus' birth. People were interested enough to go to great lengths to be in the presence of God.

What is amazing is that while many people are willing to travel many miles to see a spectacle, there are millions more that wouldn't travel around the block. One man's miracle is another man's evidence of fanaticism. Many return home full of joy to have seen a miracle. Others respond like the historic scrooge "Bah, Humbug!"

Believers around the world have found that while it may be a curiosity to gaze upon a miracle, we don't have to travel long distances to meet God. In fact, we don't have to travel anywhere, go anyplace or incur any expense to meet God. There is no special city where God resides. There is no waiting line for us to sit on his lap, tell him what we want and take a photo with him for an extra charge. He doesn't wear special red clothes, ride in special vehicles and live in a cold and distant place. He doesn't disappear for months at a time, pop up and bring momentary joy and disappear into the night. God is always near.

As Christians, we know that God is always present. He is as close to us as our prayers are from him. While the people in Bethlehem show a place where the world saw the Word become flesh, we have found a place where we can visit him every day, in our hearts.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Micah as he announces the coming of God's son in a little known city called Bethlehem.

Micah painted believers a road map to the place to find God among men when in 5:2 he prophesied that the savior of the world would be born in the little town of Bethlehem. “Though thou be little” was a description of the city’s geography and topography but certainly not its importance. It was a little town. At the time it was more of a rest stop off the road to Jerusalem. A few important events took place “around” it, but rarely “in” Bethlehem. Genesis 35:19 says Rachel was buried in area that is “on the way” to Bethlehem. The Book of Ruth takes place in area around Bethlehem. It was burial place of some and a fort for others.

It had little significance in itself. It is more known for the great persons who were born in its boundaries than anything else. Bethlehem was the city of David. That gave it a place on the map and separated it from another town with the same name. This little town would be known as the city of David, not because David built it, but because he was born in it. Bethlehem’s fame was greater however because of the birth of Christ. He lived there only a short while, moving to Egypt and then to Nazareth later. Yet, Bethlehem is known as the city that birthed the great leaders of the believing world. Micah pointed the world to Bethlehem. The place was clear and distinct.

In Matthew 2:5 several wise men were trying to find Jesus and they came to King Herod asking how to find him. After counseling with the priests, Herod soon discovered that the Priests knew where the Christ child could be found! They quoted him Micah 5:2 which was written 700 years before. They said he would be born in Bethlehem. They knew the place. They knew the time. Despite knowing both the place and time he chose not to seek him.

Following information from Micah’s 700-year-old prophecy the wise men continued until they found the place where they could finally lay their eyes upon the son of God.

Micah’s prophecies generally began with a rebuke but generally offered promise and hope.

For 700 years the words of 5:2 leaped from the pages and guided believers. They searched for the place to find the Son of God. Those who wanted to find him were not deterred and did so.

Where to find God

Today there are millions who looking for God! Unfortunately many are looking for him in the wrong places. Some are looking in the right places but are looking for the wrong faces. Today many have seen the face of God without recognizing it!

Bethlehem was a point of prophetic revelation. Those who meet the Lord on that site do so as a result of divine guidance. Today, we meet God at many points. Each becomes our own Bethlehem, the place where we find God.

At the Point of Compassion

Consider the chairman of a great corporation who was seeking a place to build a new plant. It would bring more than 1,000 jobs and a multimillion dollar budget to the local community. In addition to the usual prerequisites, the chairman wanted the town selected to be a friendly town. Knowing this, the town's people decided to put on a great show of its hospitality for the board chairman's arrival. Signs were posted. Banners were lifted and enthusiasm was high. As the bands played and the crowds awaited him to step from the big company jet that stopped on the runway, they paid little attention to a raggedly dressed old man at the fence. They pushed him to the side in their frenzy. After a few minutes it became clear that the chairman was not on the plane. They were disappointed. As they were leaving, they saw a poorly dressed old man board the plane shaking his head. They had failed their test. Their test was not how they treated a man they recognized as important, but how they treated the poor men who stand by the fence.

Today many have seen the face of God but did not recognize it! The face of God is hunger on the face of a hungry child. The face of God is the look of hopelessness on the face of a man or woman falsely accused of crime and locked behind bars. The face of God is the look of fear and desperation in the eyes of the man or woman that has reached the end of his or her rope.

Many have trouble recognizing the face of God, just as they did in Jesus time. Remember, Matthew 25:44? "Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee?" Jesus' answered their question in the next verse: "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me."

When we are able to see and feel the needs of people and respond to them we have come face to face with God. He is the essence of the divine response to human need. When we turn away from the needs of the masses and ball up in our own special cocoon, we allow him to pass us by.

At the Point of Sharing

Two families were neighbors many years ago, during a simpler time. One man, a widower, had only one son. The other had a wife and 15 children. The widower said to himself. "I only have one child, yet my barn is filled and my storehouse is full. My neighbor has many children to feed. I will share what I have with him." In the middle of the night he loaded his wagon filled with staple foods and secretly stored it in his neighbor's barn. His neighbor said to himself "I have a large family and he has only one child, I will share what I have with him" as the widower loaded staples into the neighbor's barn, the neighbor was unloading the same amount in the widower's barn. As the months passed both noticed that although they were constantly loading staples and taking it to others' barn neither seemed to empty. Then one night they stumbled upon each other. There in the road in the middle of the night they embraced. They met God at the point of sharing.

The point of sharing is a point in which we meet God. It is an act of compassion and love. 1 John 4:16 says "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. Those who share meet others at a point when they are most likely to recognize God. They recognize God in the kind acts of sharing performed by those who believe in him.

At the Point of Joy

Finally we meet God at the point of our greatest joy. Four men were sitting in the waiting room of the maternity ward. The doctors came out announced the births of their children one by one. The first man was told you have a son! "One son, that's great!" The man was filled with joy. "I work for the One A-Day Vitamin Company. One son. They'll love that!" The second man was told he had two daughters, twins! "Two Daughters, that's great. I work for the Double Mint gum factory. They'll love that!"The next was told he had three sons. "That's Great!" He said "I work for the 3M company, they'll love that!" Before the last doctor came in, the last man ran out the door. Asked why, he said "I going to quit my job before my wife delivers, I work for Seven Up!" Sometimes God gives us more joy than we think we can handle.

Just as we meet God at the point of need, compassion and sharing, we meet God at the point of joy!

There is no greater evidence that God is alive than at the point of joy!

At the point of Joy, God shows himself in victory!

At the point of Joy, God reveals himself as the provider!

At the point of Joy, God introduces himself as the sustainer! Psalm 30:5 "..weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

At the point of Joy, God is realized as a forgiving presence. Psalm 51:12 " Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit."

At the point of Joy, God uncovers his blessings. Luke 2:10-11 "And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."

At the point of Joy, every believer declares, " Joy to the world, the Lord is come; let earth receive her king. Let every heart prepare him and heaven and nature sing!

There was joy in Bethlehem when the Christ child was born, but there was even great joy one Sunday morning in Jerusalem, when he arose from the dead!

At the cross, the believers point of Joy, Every saved soul got a new song to sing,

"What a wonderful change in my life has been wrought, since Jesus came into my heart;

I have light in my soul for which long I have sought, since Jesus came into my heart.

Since Jesus came into my heart, floods of joy o'er my soul, like sea billows roll, since Jesus came into my heart!"

Good News for Tough Times

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 22, 1996

SCRIPTURE: "My times are in thy hand.." Psalm 31:15; "And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.; For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord. "Luke 2:10-11

Introduction

Has this been a tough year for you? If your life is like that of millions of others, you probably shared a variety of experiences this year. Some experienced the ecstasy of victory this year. It was a great experience to achieve one of your personal life goals. It was an ecstasy that did not come easy. Some felt the agony of defeat this year. It seemed like a low, dark valley from which there was no return. For others it was the loss of a job which made things tough in your family as money became scarce and lifestyles were cramped. Others failed in love. Divorce. Romantic flare ups. Separations. All painfully stressing situations that drained your substance and tried your will. Each situation cast a dark shadow over a portion of your year that chronologically book marked the occasion as an example of a tough time.

How tough are your times? Difficulties are relative. They depend upon your experience and capacity to handle tough situations. Every person thinks his or her situation is tougher than that of the next. Three men all cried on each other's shoulder. Each claimed to have a tougher situation than the next. One man said "My life is so tough that I feel like a long tail cat in a room full of rocking chairs." The next man agreed but added "My life is so tough that I feel like a 30- pound turkey on the day before Thanksgiving." The last man said "You think your life is tough, I got union problems. Things are so tough that the roaches at my house are on strike. They are walking a picket line demanding more food!" —Everyone thinks their problems are greater than those of others.

If this has been a tough year for you...there is good news!

If this has been a particularly stressing year for you...there is good news!

Yes, in tough times there is good news and that news is that the same God who brought you through the other 51 weeks of this year..is still on the throne.

As Christians we appreciate the good news that the Christ child brought to the world. The good news is that God is with us. The empowering spirit of Christ now resides with us, to save us from us. Regardless of the difficulty of the times, our God is still able. That is good news!

Exposition

This text focuses on the truth that regardless of the times, God is still in control.

David, whose life experiences God used as an example in this text, was a man of many triumphs but also a man of many troubles. In that sense, he was a picture of Christ in that he endured difficulty and trouble. There is a distinction however. Much of David's trouble after he became King resulted from his own sins. Christ endured difficulty not for his sins but for those of mankind.

While enduring considerable difficulty himself, David reached out to God saying "my times" are in thy hand. His circumstance, environment, situation and burden were not in his hand but were in the hands of God. In such hands he was safe and secure.

In Luke the Jewish people were enduring a tough and difficult time. Historically they were a subjugated people. They were little more than vassals in the Roman state. Once they were a great nation. Under David the nation was a military power. Under Solomon the nation was an example of peace time prosperity.

Now there was trouble in the land. They were the subjects of the Romans. They were treated as second class citizens. They endured racial discrimination and personal humiliation. Their poverty of substance and spirit increased almost to the point of being unbearable. They were in a tough and difficult time.

Despite their tough time they received some good news.

An angel appeared to Shepherds in the fields and announced "good tidings" or good news that came even in the midst of their tough times. One who was promised by God many years ago has been born. The child would grow to fruition and would literally save the people from themselves. They were being destroyed by their own actions or failure to act. The man-child who was born in Bethlehem would be the literal source of their salvation.

The message in Luke seems to be good news part 1. The birth of Christ marked the beginning of the good news. It was the sign of hope that God had not forsaken his promise. However, while the birth of Christ was good news in that it initialed the final revealing of the great promise, it was the life, death and resurrection of Christ which was the rest of the story.

This is the same message that Paul delivered repeatedly to the Gentiles as he traveled. In Acts 13:33 Paul, who was on his first missionary journey, told everyone he met that he came to bring them good news. The good news is that Christ the savior has made his arrival, preached the gospel, died and has risen from the grave. It is news that eternally sets in motion those spiritual motivators that keep every believer alive in hope despite difficult times.

As Paul moved from city to city in his missionary journey, he began with the Christmas story but he ended with the risen Lord, announcing to the world that Jesus is alive. Despite the difficulties of the times ...there is good news!

He sent them a child

Today there are some that cannot translate the birth of Christ in Bethlehem to good news for their present circumstance. They ask, "how can the birth of one child 2000 years ago impact my situation today?" It was just one child! What difference can one child make?

Many adults do not take youth seriously. They write them off as a group to be tolerated. They see them as loud, unruly, untrained nuisances that get in the way and interrupt the flow of their lives. Very few are able to appreciate the fact that the answer to their prayers may already be among them in the form of the helpless, thoughtless, insecure and insignificant youth that have been born in their midst.

Some are perhaps just learning to walk the walk alone and are stumbling, making mistakes but reaching out for someone to help them rise again. Some are searching for a label for their cradle. They have no idea what God has in store for them and wander.

Certainly in the midst of tough times one source of hope is in the children. For each time God responds to human pleas, his response is usually to send them a child.

It should not seem strange to us that God would make life tolerable to the world by the birth of a single child, especially since we have seen it before.

When the world cried for religious freedom, the birth of one child, Martin Luther began a process that reformed religion as we know it!

When Americans complained of tyranny and looked for someone to lead them against the king, the birth of one child, George Washington, probably went unnoticed but was tremendously significant.

When American slaves needed a strong example of our possibilities and an ambassador for our improbabilities, a child was born in the heart of slavery and named Frederick Douglass.

When we groped in darkness, lighting candles and burning torches to find our way in the dark, Thomas Edison, who as a six year was told by his teacher that he was too stupid to learn, was the one God used to bring us the light bulb.

In the midst of a tough and difficult time period when racial bias was at its highest, Martin Luther King, Jr. was born.

God's answer to tough times seems to be, "send them a child!"

Israel suffered for 400 years in slavery and prayed to God. His answer was to send them a child. And Moses was found floating on the Nile River.

This proved to be God's way in many instances. In tough times...send them a child!

The Child Changed Men

When God sends a child, he or she tends to impact the way we act. The presence of children prompts many adults to watch their language, the music they hear, the television programs they watch and their general conduct.

Bret Harte, in his classic short story "The Luck of Roaring Camp," tells of the birth of a baby on the American frontier a baby that made a radical change in a rough-and-tumble mining camp. The only woman in the camp, Cherokee Sal, a disreputable woman at best, died in childbirth, leaving a healthy young baby boy to be raised by the now all-male camp.

These rough, hard men made a decision that would reflect changes that would come later. They considered hiring a woman nurse to care for the baby but eventually decided not to. Their logic was this: a nice nurse wouldn't come to their camp, and they didn't want any more women who weren't nice hanging around their baby. And so the work of regeneration began in Roaring Camp.

The cabin assigned to little "Tommy Luck," as they called him, was kept scrupulously clean and whitewashed. The beautiful rosewood cradle that they purchased for the baby made the rest of the cabin look wretched, so they had to fix up the rest of the furniture in the room. Then a quarantine was imposed on those who wanted to hold little Tommy Luck, so they had to clean up for that privilege.

Each act of cleanliness exposed that much more dirt and filth in the vicinity, so that new measures were taken to keep an ever-wider expanse of the camp clean. Since the baby needed rest, the camp became quieter and more dignified, less noisy and boisterous, no longer the "Roaring Camp" of the story's title. The story of the baby of Roaring Camp is the story of the regeneration of a people. A baby changed the whole atmosphere of the Roaring Camp. So it was two thousand years ago in Bethlehem. A babe changed the atmosphere for all who have come to know him.

In Bethlehem, in the middle of tough times, a baby was the sign of good news!

Therefore Brothers and sisters in the faith, be of good cheer, though times are difficult at the moment there is good news!

Though there is a point in which we stumble under the burdens and difficulties of these tough times, there is good news!

Yes, these are tough times, but there is good news!

These are difficult times, but there is good news!

These are troubling times, but there is good news!

The good news is Jesus! Do you know him?

He was born in a manger!

He died on an old rugged cross!

He arose after three days and nights!

In tough times like these, we need Jesus!

No wonder the song writer declared: "In times like these, we need a savior. In times like these we need an anchor. Be very sure your anchor holds and grips the solid rock!

This rock is Jesus, yes he's the one!

This rock is Jesus, the only one!

Be very sure! Be very sure!

Your anchor holds and grips the solid rock!

No. 638-Youth

I Believe I Can Fly

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Evergreen Baptist Church
Lake Charles, La.

December 29, 1996

SCRIPTURE:Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall: But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint. Isaiah 40:30-31; Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows?Isaiah 60:8; Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. Mark 9:23

Introduction

Have you ever dreamed of achieving a goal but doubted your ability to achieve it? Those were the times when you pictured yourself in a variety of roles for a moment but then dismissed the thought as you snapped back into reality. Children dream about many things. Young boys lay on their beds at night and dream of being successful and famous. They see themselves as professional athletes being sought after all over the world earning salaries that dazzle the mind as fans call their names. Young girls may see themselves as successful actresses, models and other pictures of beauty and glamour. They see themselves surrounded by luxury and the trappings of success. As both dream of the great successful lives they wish for themselves, they are awakened by a sudden knock on their doors and shouts, "You better get up out of that bed before you miss your bus!" Just as suddenly as it appeared the dream goes away!

Youth are vision driven. They pursue what they perceive to be the available future. These are the possibilities that are within their reach. Their lives are spent constantly pursuing their dreams, pushing forward, trying to reach that which they see in their dreams. In contrast, many adults are dream driven. They slow their pace toward the visions of their youth and spend considerable time dreaming about past times and the good old days. The two often meet at certain junctures in life and collide as one seeks to go forward and the other seeks simply to hold on and remember. The prescription is in inevitible. Maybe that's why the scriptures record in Joel 2:28 "And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions:"

Like all youth, Christian youth have visions for the future. They see small snapshots of themselves doing great things. The role of Christian adults is to guide youth to see all of the potential that God has for them and to expand their expectations of themselves beyond the snapshots they see on MTV, hear on the latest compact disc, or see on Monday night football. The church plays the crucial role of helping youth to understand who they are, define their role in God's big picture, promote their gifts and finally to help them understand that Godly visions can be achieved, if they never quit.

As Christians we have learned that many things we once thought were impossibilities have been made possible through Christ. Our lives are much different today because we gave Christ first place in our lives. Now we struggle to teach what we have learned to our youth, that is Matthew 6:33 "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

Exposition

The text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he prompts Israel to look beyond its circumstance to the possibilities that God had in store for the nation.

Israel was in a state of captivity, having lost the glory it enjoyed once under Solomon. In subjugation and despair, Israel lost sight of the vision and spent its time dreaming dreams of what once was, instead of looking forward to what could be. It even reached a point where they could no longer sing songs of praise to God, saying "how can we sing Zion's songs in a strange land?" Yet, as they were tempted to accept defeat and to wallow in self pity, God, through the prophet Isaiah, and others sent them countless messages of hope.

Isaiah, who was called to come forward in the year King Uzziah died, began to preach the word of God to Israel. His message was simple, look beyond captivity. Look beyond apparent impossibilities. Look beyond present frustrations. God will raise his people who have been crippled like a broken winged dove to a point in which they will fly like mighty eagles.

The written accounts of Isaiah's prophecies parrell the biblical structure. In 66 chapters he tells the full extent of God's vision. In 39, similiar to the old testament he addresses their present condition. But beginning in Chapter 40 he looks forward to the future, like the 27 books of the New Testament.

The 40th chapter encourages them to remember that God is the source of all power and strength. Things happen because of him. Thus he reminds them that God giveth power to those who lose hope or faint. He empowers those who are powerless. He changes conditions and circumstances. (v29)

Even youth, who are normally literal dynamos of energy and enthusiasm, will become disenchated, sidetracked, weakened and discouraged to the point that they will fall. (v30)

However, Isaiah gives a word of encouragement to both the young and the old; that those who wait on God will be able to reach their possibilities in a mighty way.

Those who depend on God will be inspired, motivated and otherwise strengthened in such a powerful way that their actions will seem to take off and soar as if they were lifted on wings as eagles. They will pursue their vision with such energy and committment that they will appear never to tire or become weary or faint because they are driven by the power of God himself.

The key, according to Isaiah is that they, "wait" on the Lord. Wait in this context does not mean to simply sit idle but to engage in paced activity, confident that God will bring the power to make dreams become realities.

In Isaiah 60:8 Isaiah continues to look forward to the day of Israel's restoration. After telling Israel that those who wait on God will mount on wings as Eagles, he then points to the time when they shall achieve their dreams. He painted a picture of the day when they would return home from captivity, rebuild their cities and restore the temple.

In that day the people will see them in great success and will ask the question, "Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows?" As they march boldly toward their future the doubters will ask, "Who are these they fly?" As they stand as living evidence of the power of God to make the impossible come true the skeptics will ask, "Who are these that fly?" As they stand as recipients of God's patience their very presence will testify to the power given to those who choose to wait on the Lord.

In Mark Jesus in responding to a plea for help from a man who's son suffered from an illness reminds everybeliever that all things are possible for those who believe. If our mind can conceive it and God endorses it, we can achieve it, if we believe it!

What it Takes to Fly!

The theme song from the recent Movie "Spacejams" has caught the imagination of a generation of young people in America because it addresses an inner yearning to achieve and succeed. Like other songs of the same genre such as "Believe in Yourself" from the Broadway Show "The Wiz" or recent musical hit "Hero" it addresses the futuristic ideals of youth.

When Christian youth hear the words, "I have learned how to love and now I'm leaning on the everlasting arms...I believe I can fly!" images and thoughts of leaning on God's power are released in their spirit and they like millions of other youth emerge with a renewed hope that despite the impossibility of my situation "I believe I can fly! I believe I can touch the sky! I believe I can soar!"

The truth is, youth can fly! Youth can succeed! Youth can soar! However we can fly only under certain conditions. Youth must remember:

We can fly only if we have the power of God. A 747 was halfway across the Atlantic when the captain got on the loudspeaker: "Attention, passengers. We have lost one of our engines, but we can certainly reach London with the three we have left. Unfortunately, we will arrive an hour late as a result." An hour later the captain made another announcement: "Sorry, but we lost another engine. Still, we can travel on two. I'm afraid we will now arrive two hours late."

Shortly thereafter, the passengers heard the captain's voice again: "Guess what, folks. We just lost our third engine, but please be assured we can fly with only one. We will now arrive in London three hours late." At this point, one passenger became furious. "For Pete's sake," he shouted. "If we lose another engine, we'll be up here all night!" Some youth mistakenly believe that they can fly without an engine. The spiritual engine that helps every believer to fly is the power of God. The more of God's power we have, the faster we get to where we're going. The less we have the longer it takes.

Without his power we don't fly at all! No wonder the song writer would declare: "Without God I can do nothing. Without him, I'd surely fail. Without him my life would be drifting, like a ship without a sail."

We can fly only if we we don't get bogged down. The story is told of an eagle perched on a block of ice just above Niagra Falls. The swift current carried the ice and its majestic passenger closer to the edge of the great falls. The cries of other birds and animals warning the eagle of danger that lay ahead were to no avail. "I have great and powerful wings," he boasted. "I can fly from my perch at any time. I can handle it." Suddenly the edge of the falls was only a few feet away. The torrent of water rushed the block of ice over the great falls. The eagle spread his powerful wings to mount up over the impending doom only to discover too late that his claws had become frozen to the cake of ice.

Too many youth, because of their strength, feel that they can indulge in sinful activities for a while and quit before they go overboard. They are confident they will be able to stretch their wings and soar and rise above the effects of drugs, alcohol, living the night life, failure to study, and sexual activity. When it comes time to fly many find themselves so weighted down by the burdens their sins have placed upon them they they cannot fly!

David, a young man who had found himself stuck in sinful activity, probably expressed the anxiety of most youth caught in the quicksand of sin when he said, Psa 55:6 "... Oh that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at rest."

David learned that he could not fly and be in sin and the same time so he turned to God and said in Psalm 51:10 "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

Thus, those youth have been involved in sinful activities, should ask God's forgiveness. Then take it to God. The burden will disappear. That's why the song writer wrote: "Leave it there, leave it there, take your burden to the Lord and leave it there. If you trust and never doubt he will surely bring you out, take your burden to the Lord and leave it there."

If I Believe, I can fly!

Finally, every believer needs to remember that if God endorses my dream and I believe it, I can achieve it!

Not every dream is endorsed by God. Not every hope and aspiration has God's stamp of approval. However, those dreams and visions which meet God's approval can be achieved. Our problem is to believe that if God has endosed it, it can happen!

The record is clear, when God has endorsed it, it can happen!

Joseph dreamed of rising high in the kingdom of Egypt. His brothers and family members doubted it, God endorsed it and made it happen!

Moses dreamed of leading Israel to the promised land! God endorsed it, he believed it and God made it happen!

I don't know about you, but I glad to know that God is able to make it happen!

Because I believe that God is able, I believe that God can take my:

— Failures and turn them into successes; Defeats and turn them into victories!

— Weaknesses and turn them into strengths; Despair and turn it into confidence!

— Sadness and turn into gladness; Sorrow and turn it into joy!

— Stumbling blocks and turn them into stepping stones!; Candle and turn it into a floodlight!

I believe that God can help me to mount up on wings as Eagle!

Because God is able, I believe I can fly!

Because God is able, I believe I can touch the sky!

All things are possible, only believe!

Believe that God so loved the world that the sent his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!

If I can believe that come what may, Jesus is always by my side!

Jesus, the lily of the Valley!

Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

Jesus, can make it happen!

Brothers and Sisters, after I'm through flying down here, because God is able..One Glad morning when the this life is over...

I'll..

I'll..

I'll fly away!

Crossing This Jordan

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe,La.

January 5, 1996

SCRIPTURE: Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel. Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses. Joshua 1:2-3; Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the LORD thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest. Joshua 1:9

Introduction

Have you ever felt overwhelmed by the challenges of each new year? Sometimes it appears that before we can get a handle on the problems and challenges presented in one year, another year has begun and we are facing a different set of challenges. As they come, one after another, they seem to pile up. While many make new resolutions each year, that include changing, improving, expanding and getting better, there are others that make no resolutions because they have so many left over from the years before. They resolve simply to keep working on the resolutions they made last year.

A new year does present an empty canvass to each believer. Some see the new year as an opportunity to paint a picture of self improvement, success and spiritual growth. Others who are not so optimistic see the new year as a time in which they will be swallowed up by enormous new challenges. Consider the Country Preacher who regularly told his congregation to keep the faith. The preacher said the world was a hungry lion that wanted to eat up sweet, humble Christians, but that each should keep the faith because God would always deliver them. He spoke repeatedly of the lion in the wilderness and how God would make a way, even in the face of difficulties. One night after the services ended the country preacher rode his horse down the dark country road and was jumped by a real lion. Instantly the preacher jumped to his knees and began to pray. “Lord, you saved Daniel in the Lion’s Den. Lord you delivered Samson from a lion with nothing but his bare hands. Now, Lord, deliver me!” His prayer had plenty of fire. It was sincere. It was from his heart. At the end of the prayer the preacher opened his eyes and saw that the lion was down on his knees with his paws together over his eyes! A smile came over the preacher’s face. He asked, “Are you with me brother Lion?” The lion answered, “No, I’m just saying grace before I eat!” There are many who feel the new year is just waiting to swallow them up and nothing will be able to change their situation.

Believers have another view. We are convinced that each new year brings a new opportunity for God to show us again that he is a wonderful God. We don't worry about the lion's of life saying grace over us, because we know what the lions won't be having for dinner. Our God is able to deliver us over "this" new year as he has delivered over all other new years in the past.

As Christians let us rejoice in the knowledge that as we stand at this Jordan, God is both willing and able to perform mighty works for us in the year to come as he has in the past. We are not intimidated by the challenges the new year will bring, but we are excited about the opportunity to show the world once again that "greater is he that is in me, than he that is in the world."

Exposition

This text focuses on Joshua as he is instructed to cross over Jordan and claim the promised land.

The people of Israel had spent 430 years in slavery in Egypt. They wandered in the wilderness for another 40 years but were finally at a point of claiming the promise that God had made to Abraham. Claiming that promise would not come without its challenges. There would be some difficulties and frustrations in their path. As they approached each challenge God promised to be with them and to bless their efforts as long as the people remained faithful to him.

Verse two contains the adjective "this" as it refers to "Jordan." Since every word of scripture has powerful implications and meaning, a key to unleashing the hidden truths of this text is to explore the meaning of "this Jordan," as opposed to just simply "Jordan."

"This" is a designation. It points directly to the nearest thing mentioned. The particular challenge that lay ahead of Israel was the river Jordan. The land of promise lay on the other side of the Jordan, but the river had swollen beyond its banks because of massive melting of snows in the mountains of Lebanon. It was too wide to cross and no bridges existed. "This" Jordan was the challenge to cross a river that was uncrossable. "This" Jordan meant to deal the improbability of moving more than a half million people across a swollen river. At this point, Joshua wasn't told how to cross over. He was not given a blue print or a map as to how God would make it happen, but the people believed God and resolved to do it, even thou they didn't know exactly how God would cause it to happen. In verse 16 we read, "And they answered Joshua, saying, All that thou commandest us we will do, and whithersoever thou sendest us, we will go." "This" Jordan designated the swollen Jordan before them.

"This" is also a distinctive designation, which separates one thing from another. "This Jordan" implies that there were other Jordans in the past and there will be other Jordan challenges in the future. The swollen river was the challenge that the Jordan posed for Joshua, but there had been in the past, and would be in the future, other challenges connected with the Jordan and the Jordan Valley.

Therefore the inclusion of the adjective "this" suggests that there are many Jordan challenges ahead, swelling waters would just be one of many.

Joshua is told not to be intimidated by "this Jordan" but to proceed with the knowledge that every act he took, that was in accord with the will of God, would be blessed. (v.3-4) In verse five (5) he is promised that no man will be able to stand against him and that God would be present and would not forsake him. In verse six he is promised to get what is due to him from his future actions.

However, Joshua is warned to "be strong" and be true to God's word, walking the straight path in life, praying and meditating constantly. When this is done verse 8 says "then thou shalt have good success!"

Facing "this Jordan" God says clearly be of good courage, I'll be with you at this Jordan like I have been at others and will be in the future.

"Crossing Today's Jordan"

What is your Jordan? What challenges lie ahead for your family in the year to come? What is your personal Jordan? Every believer has the command of God to arise and cross "this Jordan" with the promise that as long as what you seek to achieve is within the will of God that every place the sole of your feet touches and everything you set out to do will be successful.

For Israel "this Jordan" was swelling waters, but "this Jordan" for today's believer may be the challenge of becoming spiritually stronger. It may also include other challenges, educational or career success. For some "this" Jordan is success in business. For others, "this" Jordan may mean overcoming an illness or the challenge of dealing with long term sickness of a loved one. Still others may see this Jordan as the challenge to improve the quality of their family lives, add more romance to their marriages, and to dedicate more quality time to friends and family. "This" Jordan has different meanings to different people.

We are warned they there will be difficulties that make claiming the promise frustrating. That's why God told Joshua in verse 5 "there shall not any man be able to stand before thee.." It indicates that opposition and frustrations will come, but they will not be successful. In a similar sense, claiming God's promise in the year to come will not come without its problems but problems will not prove to be more than you and God together can handle.

Herein lies the key to crossing "this Jordan." Israel was commanded to be strong and obey God's word and to meditate upon it. Their obedience to God's word was essential to the promise. It's basically the same premise that Jesus posed to believers in John 15:7 "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." If our will is lost in God's will, then we want what he wants, and what he wants us to have, we get! If we are going cross this Jordan we must resolve to be strong enough to do the will of God in the year to come. Our obedience reflects itself in our moral behavior, regularity of our church attendance, bible study and prayer, our tithes and offerings, and our empathy for the poor and needy.

If we have not committed to do better about our church attendance in the year to come, don't even think about crossing "This Jordan."

If we have not resolved to clean up our moral lives this year, don't even think about crossing "this" Jordan.

If we have not resolved to study our bible more, and prayer more frequently than we have in the past, we shouldn't even think about crossing "this Jordan"

If we have not resolved to improve our giving to support of the work of the kingdom, then we shouldn't even think about crossing "this Jordan."

God's promise requires every believer to obey his commandments which is a prerequisite to crossing "This Jordan."

God is With Thee

Believers who trust God have the same assurance that was given to Joshua. Just as he was a God of deliverance for Moses, he would be a God of deliverance for him.

We have that same assurance. Just as God has helped us cross many rivers in times past, he will be there to help us cross those we face in the year to come.

When Lot and Abraham came to the Jordan valley their "Jordan" challenge was to choose a place in which to dwell. Somebody here has to make a life choice, will it be the mountains of godliness or the plains of the Jordan Valley?

When Jacob crossed the Jordan his challenge was not swelling waters but whether or not his brother Esau would accept him. As he stood at the banks, "this" Jordan represented a point of decision for him. Somebody has to make a decision. What will it be?

For Moses, "this Jordan" was a point of departure. It marked a finish line for a long life and a starting line for a new beginning for the people. Somebody will make retirement decisions at "this Jordan." They'll decide whether to quit or whether to stay.

For Elisha, "this Jordan" was a point of confirmation. He had assumed the mantle of leadership from Elijah and when he smote the waters with Elijah's mantle they rolled back allowing him to cross (2 Kings 2:14). Somebody will look for answered prayers this year as the waters of "this Jordan" roll back.

For Naaman "this Jordan" was a point of obedience. He had been told to bathe seven times in the muddy waters of Jordan, but he refused. When he obeyed he was healed. "This Jordan" marked the place where he decided to obey God. Somebody will decide to obey God this year.

For John the Baptist "this Jordan" was the place where converts symbolized their new faith in God by being baptized. It was the place where he met the Lord, face to face! Somebody needs to meet the Lord, face to face!

I don't know about you, but I've found out that there is nothing better than knowing the Lord for yourself. You don't have to depend on what others have told you because you have personal experience. No wonder the song writer declares "I know the Lord will answer prayer, for I've tried him for myself"

This Jordan is a wide river of challenge posed by an unknown future!

This Jordan is wide, but it is not too wide for our God!

This Jordan is deep, but it is not too deep for our God!

I heard the song writer ask the question, "Have you any rivers that seem uncross able? Have you any mountains that you cannot climb? God specializes in doing the impossible and he can do what no other ...power can do!"

As we face the challenge of a new year every believer should remember that there is no:

—Demon that God cannot bind; Hunger that God cannot satisfy —Problem that God cannot solve; Mountain that God cannot move!

—Situation that God cannot control; Closed door that God cannot open!

Some people will be joining the "Pity-me-Club" and the "Feel Sorry Society" but I just stopped by to tell you that God is able!

He's able to take your:

—Miseries and turn them into miracles!; Frustrations and turn them into faith!

—Sorrows and turn them into joy!; Weakness and turn it into strength!

—Deficiencies and turn them into sufficiencies! Tears and turn them into cheers!

All I have to do is hold on to his hand call his name!

His name is Jesus, Mary's Baby!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who is alive today!

At Jordan's chilly bank I stand...but If I call on Jesus!

Everything will be alright!

Recovering From A Losing Season

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 12, 1997

SCRIPTURE: Now for a long season Israel hath been without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without law. But when they in their trouble did turn unto the LORD God of Israel, and sought him, he was found of them. 2 Chronicles 15:3-4

Introduction

Have you ever experienced a losing season? A losing season occurs whenever you fail more than you succeed; lose more than you win or travel further backwards than you do forward. Losing seasons occur for a variety of reasons, none of which are acceptable. Many who made great strides over the past year have found, in the final analysis, that they lost more than they gained or the price they paid for their success was not worth the gain. Losing seasons are certainly disastrous.

Most people have a losing season or two. We are not as fortunate as Joe McCarthy who died in 1978. He won seven world Series games with the New York Yankees. Even while serving with the Chicago Cubs and Boston Red Sox he never had a losing season in 24 years. While Reggie Jackson is known as a home run slugger, few remember that he often had some seasons when it appeared he could not hit. In 1995 he held the world record for the most strikeouts at 2,597. While Paul "Bear" Bryant and Knute Rockne are known for their winning records in football, Eddie Robinson dwarfed their accomplishments by passing the 400 win mark. His accomplishment, though in the record book, is being overshadowed by losing seasons. Babe Ruth was known as the strike out king, but he was also the walk king, having been walked 2056 times, with 170 walks in one season alone. He was plagued with walkouts. Ruth also had long periods where he was plagued with strike outs.

There are many factors that contribute to losing seasons. Sometimes variables beyond individual control cause the problem. Sometimes its personal personality flaws that create the problem. Sometimes its just poor judgment.

In the eyes of the world a champion is only as good as his last season. It is amazing how quickly the world turns on its heroes as soon as they have a dry spell. Those who survive dry spells are those who are the true winners of life. Consider the California Grape Farmer who had invested his life savings in his vineyards. His investment was flawed by a long hot summer that dried up water sources from everywhere. With few work hands available and even less water, he watched in dismay as his grapes withered on the ground. He did everything right, yet all he had was withered grapes. After a long night of prayer, a revelation came to him in the night. He cut down the withered, dry grapes, put them in boxes and sold them as California raisins. He made more in his raisin business than he did selling fresh grapes. In so doing, he turned around his losing season.

As Christians, losing seasons do come, but we have learned the secret of overcoming losing seasons. The secret is to trust in the Lord. When we trust in God, even a losing season becomes a winning season!

Exposition

This text focuses on how a godly King, Asa of Judah, was able to reverse the misfortunes of his kingdom by returning to worship and praise of God.

Asa, whose name means physician, was the third king of Judah. Historically he is noted for rooting out idolatry out of his land and returning it to God.

Asa reigned, following the infamous reigns of his grandfather, Rehoboam and his father Abijah. Rehoboam inherited a beautiful kingdom from his father, Solomon. It was united and in peace. It was known throughout the world for its splendor. Solomon's palace, which took 13 years to build, was a great spectacle. It included a magnificent judgment hall, porch of pillars and throne room. He constructed great water works to secure the city's water supply, along with many fortifications. The great temple in Jerusalem was filled with so much gold, fine wood and precious stones that it was considered an architectural wonder. Commercial trade flourished and trade agreements were made with Egypt, Africa and with Spain. Intellectual pursuits flourished under Solomon, who himself wrote 3,000 proverbs and 1005 songs. He promoted artistic development and culture. These were small examples of the great works under Solomon. The nation succeeded so well that the queen of Sheba traveled many miles just to witness its splendor. Under King David and King Solomon, the nation appeared to enjoy back to back winning seasons.

2 Chronicles begins to tell the story of a long season wherein the nation lost the prosperity it enjoyed under Solomon. Chapters 10,11 and 12 detail what can best be described as the beginning of what would be a "long season" of decline. After the death of Solomon the kingdom split under King Rehoboam. Now, instead of one nation, they were divided. Instead of a reign of peace, they were at war. Instead of commercial prosperity, they were scrapping to get by, cultural and commercial pursuits diminished.

Chapter 13 details the three year reign of King Abijah, who was wicked like his father. Worship of God declined. Study of the scripture almost vanished and idol worship flourished.

Chapter 14 finds the new King Asa desperately trying to turn things around. He took down the foreign altars (14:3) and commanded the people to obey the laws of God.

Chapter 15 finds God speaking to the prophet Azaraiah and sending a message to King Asa, with a way to recover from Judah's long season of frustration, setback, war and division The solution seemed simple "Seek God and you will find him. Forsake him and he will forsake you." The prophet's message was clear. If Judah was willing to return to God, he would resume his blessings, if they chose to continue living apart from him then their long season would continue.

Verse 15:4 notes that the people, in their distress, did turn to God and they sought after him. When they sought him he was found. Asa, led them to a renewed faith and worship of God. Even his mother, the queen, was removed from office because of her support of idol worship. (15:16).

The swift and grand changes that King Asa made helped Judah recover from a long losing season. While his record never equaled that of Solomon, he was king of Judah for 41 years and enjoyed peace and prosperity. The method he used to reverse the fortunes of the people was to return to Godly ways and practices, seeking God first and trusting him for the rest. That was the plan to recover from a losing season...and it worked.

Losing Seasons

In the eyes of the world it is easy to determine whether you have had a winning season. Generally, the world says you had a winning season if your net income last year was higher than the year before. If you accumulated more profit than loss in business then you had a good year. If you came closer to reaching your career goals, despite your setbacks, you had a good year. If you climbed higher than ever before, even though you missed a few steps, you had a good year. That's how the world perceives a winning season. It counts the number of victories and subtracts the number of losses and determines whether you won or lost.

However, it is possible to have achieved great heights in the eyes of man and still have a losing season in eyes of God. God does not measure us by material things because "the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof." He is not impressed by the our new car, jewelry, home, or income. He judges us on the basis of our spiritual growth.

Spiritual growth requires more than a superficial count of possessions. It requires a long look in the mirror. Perhaps the most difficult challenge for any individual is self analysis. It is easy for us to arm chair analyze the situations of others, pointing out their shortcomings, earmarking their faults and second guessing their actions. It is more difficult to analyze ourselves. That's why Paul, writing in 2 Corinthians 13:5 said "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves.." After self examination many learn previously undiscovered truths about themselves.

Signs of a losing season: There are various tell tale signs of a losing season. Those who study the bible, worship and actively serve God less, despite their external signals generally have had a losing season with God. These are believers who have not become practicing sinners, running to bars and nightclubs. They are not whoremongers and drunkards, thieves or lawbreakers. These are otherwise morally upstanding individuals who, for whatever reasons, have squeezed God out of their schedules. They are so busy trying to make the rest of their lives a winning season that their spiritual lives are a loss.

Like Judah there are still others who have turned away from God completely. They have placed themselves on a fast track of drinking, gambling, partying and riotous living. The spiritual strength they once knew has diminished to nothing. They are constantly uneasy, disturbed and troubled in spirit. Their soul is not satisfied. They are constantly searching and looking for that evasive "something" that evades them constantly. Though they gained much, they are in a losing season.

No one is exempt from a losing season: preachers, deacons, Sunday School teachers, faithful believers; all can have a losing season if we are not vigilant. Elijah was a great prophet of God and after the success of his Mt. Carmel contest with the prophets of Baal, had a losing season. In fear, he hid by a brook until he heard the voice of God in a still small voice and recovered. Peter had a brief losing season from which he quickly recovered after sinking in the water. Losing seasons have been experienced by the strongest believers.

Recovering From A Losing Season

Yet God sent a word to Judah. The word was the same word that he sends to believers today. There is a way to recover from a losing season.

Judah recovered by placing God once again on the front burner. When they put God first, not only did they recover from a losing season but they turned a losing season into a winning season!

It is possible to take a life that is on the rocks and transform it into a renewed source of energy! It is possible to take a faith that is hovering on the brink of despair and give it renewed hope! It is possible to take a courage that is teetering on the brink of fear and recharge its spirit of bravery!

When we put our trust in the Lord, we turn losing seasons into winning seasons!

When we put our trust in the Lord he makes our:

-RACE worth running and our BATTLE worth fighting!

-COURSE worth finishing and our FAITH worth keeping!

-DIFFICULTIES worth facing and our BURDENS worth bearing!

-ANXIETIES worth enduring and our TEARS worth shedding!

When we trust in the Lord, we turn dark days into sun shiny days; Midnights into noontimes and hard times into good times!

No wonder the song writer declared, "I will trust in the Lord, until!"

As I go further into the new year, I'm working on a winning season!

I'm going to keep my hands in the winding chain!

I will trust in the Lord until I die!

Mixed Drink On The Cross

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 19, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "They gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall: and when he had tasted thereof, he would not drink." Matthew 27:34

Introduction

What is the first thought that comes to mind when you hear the phrase "mixed drink?" For some, the term conjures a variety of thoughts that involve bartenders, shot glasses, smoke-filled rooms, thin straws and the sound of music. For others a mixed drink is something as simple as Coca Cola and Dr. Pepper mixed or any variety of mixtures of punches and juices. The definition of mixed drink depends upon the circumstance.

Many drink socially to mingle with others. Others drink to dull the impact of a troubled life and deaden themselves to its impact on their lives. Some live for the happy hour where they can get their favorite mixed drink.

Many, who are in the world, think of mixed drinks and instantly see images of their favorite drinks. Some think of "Gin and Tonic" which is a little gin and tonic served in a highball glass with a lemon wedge. Others think of a "Bloody Mary" which is made up of vodka, tomato juice, Tabasco sauce, Worcestershire sauce, horse radish, lemon juice, and black pepper. Still others think of a "Daiquiri," which is made up of light rum, sour mix and served with a lime wedge. What about a "Frozen Margarita" that is made up of two parts tequila, sour mix and one part triple sec. The list could go on indefinitely and could include Gin and Juice, Lulus or even Martinis. Bartenders have refined drink mixing to an art form that is highly lucrative. There is even a Home Page on the World Wide web that gives thousands of mixed drink recipes.

There are many good people who have met their downfall when they had too many mixed drinks. Consider the city preacher who conducted a revival in the back hills. The little town was known to have many people who were among God's best but they all indulged in making, drinking and selling moonshine whiskey. It was so common, that no one in the city thought anything about it. Every night at the revival the preacher preached against sin, warning that if they continued to sin they would end up in hell. It was terribly hot, so each night the usher brought the preacher a glass that appeared to be water. The preacher noticed that it had a funny taste to it but being a city preacher had no way of knowing that the country folk regularly mixed a dab of white lightning in the drinking water. By Thursday night the preacher was demanding two glasses of water and was staggering as he warned that drinking would send all the people to hell. By Friday he drank all four glasses of water before he began his sermon and passed out in the pulpit. They laid him out on a cooling board, reserved for the dead, and tried to wake him up. When he awoke, he said, "If I'm dead, Lord help my soul; but If I'm alive give me another drink of water please!" Mixed drinks can pull down the best of us.

As Christians, we drink the cup that is set before us. We live life by the word of God, willing to take the bitter with sweet. Life offers us a mixture of suffering and rejoicing, agony and ecstasy, sorrow and joy. What bitter dregs we encounter in life cannot equal the agony that Christ endured as he drained the bitter cup of Calvary for us. His pain and agony insured our reward.

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he refuses a mixed drink while on the cross.

Crucifixion was the Roman method of punishing criminals. It involved public humiliation and also a torturous death.. While hanging on the cross the Romans gave him a traditional drink offered to the condemned but Christ refused at verse 34. However, at verse 48 it appears that they gave him another drink, which he accepted. The contents of the two drinks appeared to have made the difference.

In the garden of Gethsemene Jesus begged his father to allow the "cup" of Calvary to pass. It would be a bitter, painful experience. However, he told his father his will in the matter would guide him. Thus, it appeared that the crucifixion was God's will. It involved public humiliation and a painful death. That was the price necessary for the forgiveness of the sins of mankind. There was to be nothing more or nothing less.

At verse 34, they offered Christ a mixed drink that would have side stepped one of the elements that redemption required: "the painful death." Matthew records that they gave him a mixture of vinegar and gall, which Christ refused. They gave this traditional mixture to condemned men to null their senses and sedate them. This tradition began under Solomon who in Proverbs 31:6 said, "Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy hearts." The mixture that they gave to Christ was composed of both "vinegar" and "Gall." Vinegar, represented the bitterness of sin. It also represented the wrath of God symbolized by the cup his father had placed in his hand. Drinking from a bitter cup was one of the curses that came upon Israel after it sin in the wilderness. Moses ground up the golden calf and sprinkled the dust in the water supply which became bitter. In Numbers chapter 5:18 "bitter water was an indicator of sin. Thus, the bitter vinegar was symbolic of Christ consuming the sin of the world fulfilling the prophecy of Psalm 69:21 that he would be offered both vinegar and gall.

However, Christ refused the drink. The scripture does not say why, but its contents may shed light on the reason. The drink also included "gall." The "Gall" referred to in this text is ground poppy heads. It had the effect of completely deadening the senses as would an anesthetic. However, if Christ chose to consume this drink, he would have bypassed God's plan. It was God's will that he endure both the pain and humiliation as well as the death of cross. He was not willing to short circuit the process, which drinking the mixed drink would have accomplished.

However, at verse 48, as he was preparing to give up the ghost, having finished his mission they gave him a drink without the painkiller and it was accepted by Christ. Having done so, soon after he gave up the ghost and died.

The mixed drink they offered him on the cross was refused because it did not represent the fulness of God's will. The vinegar, as bitter as it was, was a part of God's plan for mankind, and Christ accepted.

Bitter cups

Life offers each of us a mixture of experiences that include both the bitter and the sweet. Our life's experiences include both the sunshine and the rain.

Bitter Experiences. Bitter experiences are those that affect our lives negatively, although at the time we were engaged in them they seemed sweet. Some bitter experiences are the result of influences outside our control. Others are the result of actions we brought upon ourselves.

Sometimes we drink from life's bitter cup because it's the only one we see and we are thirsty for something. Solomon explained this tendency in Proverbs 27:7 " The full soul loatheth an honeycomb; but to the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet." In essence, what Solomon said still remains true, "a hungry man will eat anything to satisfy his craving, even that which is bitter."

Millions of people in the world today are hungry for something. They reach out to alternatives close to them to satisfy their hunger, although they know in advance that the experience will affect their lives.

Adulterous relationships usually turn out to be a bitter experience. The woman who dates a married man or vice-versa, is involved in a bitter experience. He probably won't leave his wife and family despite his words. Then if he does, then that is a bad sign because if he left his wife easily, he will walk away from the new woman as well. Adultery is a bitter experience but the person who drinks from the bitter cup is hungry for something. Marital happiness is what they are seeking. However, that comes only from a godly marriage.

Substance abuse is a bitter experience. Those who become alcoholics or become drug abusers usually find substance abuse to be a bitter experience. It robs them of their sense of dignity and self worth and places them mercilessly in the control of others. Substance abusers are troubled. They seek assurances in life and look for help to cope with the difficulties they face daily. Yet, assurances they seek evade them daily as the wake up with hangovers or find themselves in need of another fix after they come down from their high. Assurance in hard times doesn't come from a happy hour or from a drug fix. It comes from knowing that God is control of every situation and he will deliver his own.

Thievery is a bitter experience. Those who steal enjoy the fruits of their actions for a short while but usually get caught. Criminal records and lives behind bars are the result. Some who steal do so to eat, but most who steal do so to profit. They hunger for prosperity and security. They reach out and grasp the first chance they get to steal or benefit from that which has been stolen. They risk their entire future on what they know will be a bitter experience if they are caught. Yet Christ promises all who believe that if they "seek ye first" the kingdom of God, all of the other things will be added.

Failure is a bitter experience. Those who have attempted a venture but failed in their trying sometimes view their failure as a bitter experience

Bitter Sweet Cups

While some bitter experiences are the result of our own personal failure and shortcoming. There are other bitter experiences over which we have no control.

Failure, when we have tried our best, can be a bitter moment. It marks the time when we have prepared fully only to find a door closed in our face.

Persecution is a bitter experience. This marks those times when we are falsely accused, attacked and tormented for our attempts to do right.

God has a way of taking a believer's bitter experience and adding the sweet nectar of God's love, mercy and compassion to it making it, bitter sweet.

Bitter sweet is just another way of saying that a good thing resulted from a bad situation.

When Joseph was thrown into a pit by his brothers, that was a bitter experience. But when God took him from the pit and moved him to the palace that was bitter sweet, because a good thing came out of a bad situation.

When Job lost his fortunes and family to the tricks of Satan that was a bitter experience. But when God blessed him in the end and gave him more than he had at the beginning, that was bitter sweet because a good thing came out of a bad situation.

When Daniel faced the loss of his life in the lion's den, that was a bitter experience. But when God closed the mouths of the lions and elevated him higher in the kingdom, that was bittersweet because a good thing came out of a bad situation.

When Christ refused the mixed drink on the cross and took only the bitter cup he absorbed all the bitterness that sin would cause in the world into himself. He now offers to every believer a cup of salvation that is so sweet that it can overcome the bitterness of any situation.

The Sweetness of our God can take every bad situation and turn it into a bittersweet experience. The sweetness of God can take our:

—HARDTIMES and turn them into GOODTIMES; FAILURES and turn them into success

—DESPAIRS and turn them into our JOYS; SHORT COMINGS and turn them into our LONG TERM GOOD!

No wonder the song writer declares, “He’s sweet I know. He’s sweet I know! I’ve found a savior and he’s sweet I know”

I heard another song writer declare, “Every day with Jesus is sweeter than the day before. I love him more and more. Jesus saves and keeps me, he’s the one I adore. Every day with Jesus is sweeter than the one before!”

When Jesus carried his cross toward Calvary, that was a bitter experience!

When Jesus died, with nails driven in his hands, that was a bitter experience!

When they buried him in a borrowed tomb, that was a bitter experience!

But Early Sunday morning, when he arose from the grave that was bitter sweet!

Are you drinking from life’s bitter cup?

Let Jesus sweeten your experience!

He will make everything all right!

Does God Understand Ebonics?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 26, 1997

SCRIPTURE: ".. thou hast searched me, and known me. Thou knowest my down sitting and mine uprising, thou understandest my thought afar off. Thou compassest my path and my lying down, and art acquainted with all my ways.For there is not a word in my tongue, but, lo, O LORD, thou knowest it altogether. Psalm 139:1-4;"And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Matthew 27:46

Introduction

Have you ever talked with someone and couldn't understand their words? It may have been a language barrier or jumbled speech that caused the problem. Sometimes heavy accents, regional speech patterns or heavy use of colloquialisms and slangs make it difficult to understand others. Sometimes we hear the right words but don't know what they mean. Their words say one thing, but mean another. In such instances, we leave a conversation more confused than enlightened. One of the most frustrating experiences is not being able to communicate fully.

Sometimes it's just hard for us to get our messages across. That was the case when the country chicken thief started getting messages nailed to his door. Nearly every morning there was a note nailed to his front door saying, "If you don't stop stealing my chickens, I'm going to cut off your ears and stick them down your throat." After about a week the chicken thief became nervous. He kept getting these notes. So, he took the notes and went into town to report the incidents to the Town Sheriff. The Sheriff leaned back in his chair and said, "Well, maybe you could try doing what the note says. Why don't you stop stealing the man's chickens?" At that the chicken thief responded, "Well he needs a lesson in communication. How am I supposed to know which man's chickens to stop stealing, if he don't sign his name?"

Speaking of being hard to understand, the farmer bragged about how well trained his mule had become. No matter what set of directions he gave the mule, the farmer bragged that it would always be carried precisely. One day he demonstrated his point. He gave a command for the mule to "Haw" but there was no response. Then he gave a command for the mule to "Gee" but there was still no response. Without losing a moment to think the farmer pick up a two-by-four and hit the mule between the eyes. Immediately the mule followed every instruction. The farmer then said, "he understands everything I tell him, but I have to get his attention first!"

In the same sense, sometimes God has to get our attention before he can get us to do his will. He understands us. He knows what we think. Nevertheless, on occasion he can't get through to communicate with us because we are going in a different direction.

As Christians, we know that God understands us. In fact, he knows us better than we know ourselves. Regardless of the method we use to talk to him, he hears our thoughts. The question is not whether God understands what we say to him, but rather whether he can get our attention long enough to communicate with us.

When man and God talk to each other, we usually find that the song writer is correct, Just a little talk with Jesus makes it right!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains how God's understanding is universal.

Psalm 139 is the last of five Psalms that offer thanks to God for being a wonderful presence in the life of the believer. David expressed that in every walk of life that God is present and knowledgeable of what we do and say.

The main theme of Psalm 139 is the fact that God always understands everything there is to understand about us. He knows the thoughts of our minds before we think them. He also knows every word spoken from our lips or conceived in our hearts.

Geography and language are natural barriers that prohibit man from progressing but they do not hinder God.

There is never an instance when God cannot understand us.

Matthew 27:46 gives a good example of God's ability to understand. Christ, hanging on the cross, cries out to God in his agony. However, Christ does not cry out in Hebrew, his native tongue. He cries out in Aramaic. Aramaic was the language of commerce.

It contained a mixture of Hebrew, Aramaic, Samaritan and other languages that was useful to those who moved from place to place. Its use helped those of different nationalities communicate with others. While it helped most to understand a great deal of what was said, it could mislead.

When Christ called out, "Eli, Eli" he was calling upon God. Some who heard his Aramaic words interpreted it to mean that he was calling upon the prophet Elijah. Others took it for its actual meaning.

However, the appeal that Christ made was not to those who were listening he was appealing to God, who understood not only the words he spoke, but the meditations of his heart.

When he cried out in agony, it did not matter which language Christ used, God heard him, because he knows the hearts and thoughts of every person.

Ebonics has historical roots

There is considerable debate among African-Americans about the subject of Ebonics. A term used to describe "Black English" or "Ebony-Phonics." Many who work with young people are becoming increasingly frustrated in their efforts to teach standard English to African-Americans. Often their students seem to have developed a unique dialect and pattern of speech that is so entrenched that standard English has almost become a secondary language. The debate was heightened when the Oakland California School Board voted to use "Ebonics" as formal tool in its fight to teach standard English.

Black English has it roots in the American Slave trade. Blacks, brought to America, spoke their native African languages fluently. Since there were various languages present on any shipment of slaves, communication, even between the slaves, was difficult, if not impossible. A useful "survival" language was developed called "Pidgin" which consisted of the very basics of a generic language that all could use to communicate but was not unique to any of them. "Pidgin" did not concern itself with many of the detailed rules of grammatics such as "passive voice", "double negatives." Neither did it quiver over the use of irregular verbs. It was stripped down. It was just enough to get the point across. It was just enough to survive.

In most of the colonies "Pidgin" English was the standard language. However, in Louisiana, controlled by France, "Pidgin" French or Creole became the stripped down language. All Louisiana slaves and other immigrants learned just enough "French" to get by.

The Cajun dialect is such a mixture of French and English that it is extremely difficult for those outside of the culture to understand. When "Keeseesaw" means "who is that?" It gets even tougher with phrases such as "bon yea keese bye-do", which means get away from or let that alone. What about? "how you coming savah?" which means, How are you doing? "So come sah", doing pretty good Native African languages survived in America for a time. However, as use of the "Pidgin" tongue became more useful, the native tongues began to disappear..

In every part of the world where a "Pidgin" language developed it was considered a useful tool to communicate with the outside world, while each group maintained their own language fluently. The children of each culture were taught the native tongue and the adults learned "Pidgin" to communicate with those outside of the culture. As children became old enough to venture into the greater community, they learned "Pidgin" to communicate to the outside world. What happened to Black Americans is the slave trade prohibited the teaching or speaking of our own language, thus "Pidgin" English became our standard language to the point that today, Standard English is now the "Pidgin." While among our own, we speak freely in "Pidgin" English. Most of us consider learning standard English as an essential tool to "Make it" in the general community, but revert to "Black English" when we step back into our own culture. In the same way that Asians and other immigrants learn Standard English for its utilitarian purposes, then return to their own language patterns when among themselves.

Many educators across the country are realizing the historical roots of "Pidgin English" and are changing the way they refer to language patterns of the African-American Community.

The trick is to reach children who speak the "Pidgin" of their culture and teach them the "Standard English" that is needed to communicate in the greater society.

These are trained recognize the phrase "He be standing" and quickly translate it to "He is standing." They hear the phrase, "He gone to the store" and translate it "He went to the store." They hear, "he was hit by the man. He wasn't bothering nobody" and instantly translate it into "The man hit him. He wasn't bothering anyone." Those who are not trained in both "Pidgin" and Standard speech patterns may find that a difficult chore. The purpose of the training is not to help teachers adopt incorrect standard English. It is to help them understand 1) that students who bring such language into the classroom are not genetically inferior but are the products of their culture; and 2)ways to use what is known to help develop improved mastery of Standard English.

In the past, most of our teachers were a part of the culture themselves and needed no additional orientation. However, an increasing number of our teachers are distant to the African- American cultural experience, even some in the same race, requiring special training to reach students effectively. In Oakland, the school board realized this truth and shocked the world when it proposed training teachers to understand "Ebonics" as a stepping stone to the goal of mastering standard English.

Does God Understand Ebonics?

Since most African-Americans speak Ebonics within our culture, it's important for each of us to remember that while the Ebonics debate rages, God understands us, no matter which language we speak.

When it comes to talking to God, He is not concerned about your subject and verb agreement!

When it comes to talking to God, He is not concerned about Ebonics or Cajonics! Neither is he impressed with the rules of formal communication.

When it comes to talking to God, what is important is that are heart is straight, because understands both the meditations of the heart and the words of our mouths.

When Christ hung on the cross, in his distress he called out Eli! Someone else may have mistaken his words, but God knew and that's what mattered!

It doesn't matter whether I say "Dear God, I have found myself in a rather distressing predicament that requires your immediate assistance," or "Lord, I'm down here waiting, please don't pass me by"..God understands!

It doesn't matter whether I say "Dear Infinite one, the intensity and quantity of my persecutors have increased. Nevertheless, I shall persevere" or "I've been buked, I've been scorned, I've been talked about sure as you're born, but I'm going on to heaven any how!"

It doesn't matter whether I say, "Dear God, I respectfully request that infinite presence to surround my being eternally" or "Lord, I want Jesus to walk with me. You walked with my mother, now walk with me. While, I'm on this tedious journey, I want Jesus to walk with me!"

I don't know about you but I'm glad that God understands me so well that even if I don't say anything he reads my thoughts. That's why the old warriors declared, "If I can't say a word, I'll just wave my hand!"

I'm so glad that he understands. He understands if my English is not correct.

If I happen to say, Lord, I done done all that I know how to do! He will understand!

If I happen to say, Lord, I thank you for my soft bed warm qiver! He will understand!

If I happen to say, Lord, You Sho' been good to me!

There is one thing that is true whether you speak Portugese or Chinese, Ebonics or Spanish, regardless to your race or nationality every saint can declare "I know the Lord will answer, prayer, for I tried him for myself!"

He understands!

He understands so much that he died for us out on Calvary and arose after three days!

No wonder the song writer declared that when nobody else understands...

He'll understand and say well done!

Men at Work

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 2, 1997

SCRIPTURE: Let there more work be laid upon the men, that they may labour therein; and let them not regard vain words. Exodus 5:9

Introduction

Have you seen those signs in construction areas marked, "Men at Work?" They usually suggest that close by, crews of laborers are busy. The signs tell those who may be otherwise unaware to expect the presence of workers in an unlikely place. The men we see in such places are usually making something work better or building something we have never seen. They do not tell us how many men are working. Sometimes we only see a few. There always seems to be enough men to get the job done. A while later when we make our routine pass, the men are gone, but the work is done.

The African-American community is one under construction. Both repairing and building is needed. Still recovering from our slave experience, we are busy repairing damages made to our culture and history. Wherever damages appeared, historically, God has sent enough men to help us make the repairs. When slavery threatened our very existence, men such as Frederick Douglass were at work. When we struggled to reconstruct our lives after slavery, men such as Booker Washington were at work. When we worked to discard the shackles of legal oppression men such as W.E.B. Dubois were at work. When we organized ourselves to champion the cause of the working people, men such as A. Phillip Randolph were at work. When we sought to repair the injustice of segregation, men such as Huey Newton, Bobby Seale, Malcolm X and Martin Luther King were at work.

At the same time we are building our future. While we are repairing damages to our social structure, there is work being done to build the future. Benjamin Mays, Jesse Jackson, and Thurgood Marshall represent a generation of workmen who have charted new courses of action for our community, while still maintaining a vigorous spirit of Afrocentricity.

Today, as in the past, God has a way of supplying enough men to meet the task. Whether it is damage control or bridge building, African-American men are at work. However, that fact defies the common perception that there are "no" African-American men. We have read the reports about crime, family destruction, lack of role models and internalized them. To a great extent we have begun to believe the rhetoric and have reacted to the myth of the nonexistent Black male by pronouncing his death, attending his funeral, and removing his plate from the table of social affairs.

Today, we remind ourselves, that while social circumstances threaten his future, the African- American man is alive, well, at work responding to the damaging influences that affect their homes and communities and building bridges for the next generation.

As Christians, we rejoice in knowing that God still sends spirit filled men to meet the challenges of every generation. Our prayer is that God will strengthen our men to meet the challenge of making bricks of our society, even if there is no straw, all to the glory and praise of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on a command given by an Egyptian king to increase the work of the Hebrews because they entertained the idea of freedom.

The Hebrews came to Egypt, as a small band of refugees, from famine plagued Canaan. Over the centuries however, their numbers grew until they were several hundred thousand in number. The prospect of a revolt frightened each succeeding generation of Pharaohs. Their fear of the slaves lay in two areas described in Exodus 1:9 “And he said unto his people, Behold, the people of the children of Israel are MORE and MIGHTIER than we”: Their numbers were increasing in such a way that they had become the predominate race. The numbers did not upset them as much as the realization that they are “mightier than we.” How is it that powerless slaves could be mightier than the Egyptians who were a dominating military presence? They were mightier in terms of their spirit and strength. They had a stronger will to survive and were more aggressive. They were inventive and creative. Because they were both huge in number and mightier, they posed a threat. They finally took action to prevent future uprisings.

The Egyptian strategy was targeted at the slave male population. Genocide was the first approach. They ordered the Hebrew midwives to destroy male babies, but they refused. Then they ordered soldiers to drown all infant males. The idea was to head off any future growth. Genocide attacked their “more” problem. Then the strategy switched to control and domination. They gave the male work force increasingly difficult tasks that required more resources than was available to them. The energy of their might would be thus be circumvented by increasing their burdens. It was a well-calculated plan that would have succeeded except for the fact that God allowed at least one man to grow up who would build the bridge to their future. That man was Moses.

The task of the Hebrews was formidable. They gave them tasks to complete without the resources to complete them. This worked on their strength and their morale. Yet despite the difficulty of the task, the slave men went to work. When they went to work, God helped them to measure up to the task. The odds against succeeding in the challenge to make the same tally of bricks without straw were astronomical but yet they were able to triumph. They simply went to work.

While they worked to meet the challenge of responding to the daily tally of bricks, God was preparing others to work on the challenge of attaining freedom, leaving Egypt and making it to the promised land!

Thus, the command from Pharaoh, which was designed to place a stumbling block before the slave men was used as a stepping stone to higher accomplishments. They gave the men a heavy burden, but they met the challenge when they rolled up their sleeves and went to work.

We Have Work To Do

Like the slaves of Exodus, African-American men have been given a formidable task, without the essentials. We must maintain and repair our families and communities, while at the same time build for our future.

Our homes and communities are damaged. The strength of our people has been in the solidarity of our families. Though poor, ostracized and endangered, the African-American family has survived in strength. Yet, while there are millions of families that are still thriving, a great many our families are showing signs of disintegration. As our families become more tolerant of deviant behavior and less homogeneous, the community feels the impact.

The extent of the damage becomes clear when we consider that 23 percent of 20-29 year old Black men are either in jail or on probation at any given time. While there are more than 600,000 young Black men enrolled in college there are more than 800,000 under the control of the criminal justice system. The nation spends more than $3 billion a year to keep them locked up, making privately owned prisons the fastest growing new business in America.

Teen pregnancy is hitting an all time high with African-American teens topping the lists. We are plagued with a dilemma of problems created by a generation of babies making babies.

While crime, lack of males in leadership, and increased teen sexual activity reflect our internal problems, we are also battling external forces. Racial discrimination, educational set backs, and economic stalemates have also damaged our potential.

The prognosis for our community is this: If one fourth of our young men are involved in the criminal justice system at a time when they should be beginning families, starting careers and learning skills; and if one fourth of our youth are struggling to raise babies while they are still babies; and if, one fifth of our high school graduates are functionally illiterate; and if one fifth of our male population remains unemployed; then the men who are in the majority must take immediate steps to correct the trend before it becomes indicative of our entire community.

Our challenge is the same as the slaves of Exodus. We have been given a burden without the tools to make it happen. They gave them no straw or assistance. The slaves made their tally because they had two things the master could neither give them nor take away: A willingness to work and the power of God!

How are African-American men working? Across America, Black men sensitive to the problems of our community are organizing themselves. The million man march in 1995 raised the consciousness of millions. National fraternal organizations such as the Alpha Phi Alpha and Kappa Alpha Psi, Prince Hall Masons, The National Baptist Convention and others are energizing men to take organize and take action.

Millions of Black men are forming organizations such as the 100 Black Men of America with units all over the nation. The aim of the push is to get Black men who are successful to do more than simply be successful, but to roll up their sleeves and plunge into the problem. To attack the problem men are being encouraged to: 1) Serve as a one to one role model for a Black boy; that is to go beyond serving on boards and committees but to actively work in a structured way where one man directly interacts with at least one boy that is not his own as a mentor. 2) Promote Educational excellence 3) Give volunteer service to the community 4) Promote male responsibility training for Black males 5) Promote the importance moral behavior by precept and example 6) Promote a respect for God and family.

Those who serve on boards or who lead governments have an even more awesome responsibility, because beside their responsibility as community leaders they also must function in their own families as husbands, fathers, uncles and grandfathers. They must avoid the danger of substituting one for the other.

Men at Work

While we are distressed over the extent of our social dilemma, we should not lose sight of the fact that most of our men are hard at work.

While it is true that 23 out of every 100 young men are involved in the justice system, that also mens that 77 out of every 100 are men at work!

While it is true that 800,000 young men are in prison it is also true that more than six million working age men are not in prison, they are men at work!

While it is true that 16 out of every 100 Black men are unemployed, it is also true that 84 out of every 100 men has a job, goes to work every day and pays his bills. They are men at work!

While it is true that a female heads 40 of every 100 Black households, it is also true that a man heads 60 out of every 100 homes, who is providing leadership for his family and love to his wife and children. These are men at work!

While it is true that there is great disparity in the number of men who are filling the ranks of leadership in our community, we must not forget that 95% of our pastors, 98 percent of deacons, 100 percent of our Fraternal leaders and 80 percent of our political leaders and most of our national community leaders are African-American men...who are hard at work!

Some in America have prematurely announced the death of the Black man. You went to Uncle Tom's funeral. He was a good fellow in his torn overalls, nappy hair and red head rag! He chopped a many row of cotton, but he's dead!

But before America pronounces his epitaph it should look at that young man riding up the elevator. He's wearing a $1,000 Brooks Brothers suit with a $10,000 Rolex on his wrist, his stock portfolio under his arm and engraved on his gold-plated brief case is the name "Uncle Thomas E. Zumbawi, III" -the New Black man, on his way to work!

The best present a man can give his woman is a BMW..A Black Man working! He's either working, working on it, working at it, or working through it, but he's working!

Whenever there is has been a great need, God has always moved in the ranks of God fearing men to help them do the impossible!

Whenever there was a demand there have been men at work!

When Israel faced the impossibility of the River Jordan, God moved when men went to work!

When Joshua led Israel around the walls of Jericho, God moved when men went to work!

When Gideon led a small army of 300 against a force of thousands because God went to work with his small group!

Whenever there has been a mountain God had a man!

For Mt Sinai God had Moses! For Mt. Ararat God had Noah! For Mt. Carmel God had Elijah!

And when the world needed salvation on Mt. Calvary God had a man!

His name is Jesus!

Who died on Calvary but rose after three days!

One of these days, he's coming back again!

When he comes back, let him find every man busy working!

No wonder the song writer declared, "I'm going to work until my day is done! I'm going to work until the setting of my sun! I'll cease from sorrow. There'll be no tomorrow. I'm going to work until my day is done!"

No. 644-Funeral

Where Hast Thou gleaned today?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 1, 1997

SCRIPTURE:"And her mother-in-law said unto her, Where hast thou gleaned to day? and where wroughtest thou? blessed be he that did take knowledge of thee. And she showed her mother in law with whom she had wrought, and said, The man's name with whom I wrought to day is Boaz. And Naomi said unto her daughter in law, Blessed be he of the LORD, who hath not left off his kindness to the living and to the dead. And Naomi said unto her, The man is near of kin unto us, one of our next kinsmen." Ruth 2:19-20

Introduction

Have you ever considered just how good God has been to you? Often we are so busy with our daily tasks that we seldom stop to consider just what the Lord has done for us? Even a cursory inventory would reveal that God has smiled on us. Most of us live a notch above our life-style of a few years ago. We dress better. We eat better. We sleep in more comfortable surroundings than we did many years ago. We drive a better car. It did not come to us by mistake. Neither did we acquire it by our own hard work. We have achieved because the God we serve has been merciful and has shown us grace. Our lives are living tributes to God's grace and mercy.

If there is a group of believers that has a special way of helping us to understand God's love and grace it would be Christian school teachers. More specifically, day care providers and kindergarten teachers, who are especially unique. Kindergarten teachers are special. They touch our lives at special moments when we are receptive and impressionable. God must have a special way of blessing them because those who have been touched by God seem to show the youngest minds how God loves them.

Consider the kindergarten teacher who planned an Easter Egg Hunt for her children. All of the children were excited about the upcoming hunt. They dyed eggs of different colors and decorated them beautifully. However, there was one little girl in the class that sat in the corner. Little Essie Mae dropped her head and shrunk in her corner. She did not participate in the class activities. The teacher came to her and hugged her. After a while she learned that Essie felt the others would laugh at her because she was different. The next day as the class prepared for the hunt the children lined up with their baskets in hand. They saw the brightly colored eggs poking their heads from beneath the grass. They filled the field. The teacher whispered to Essie "Don't go in the field, search around the trees!" As the hunt began, screaming children dashed for the eggs. Hundreds were trampled underfoot. Little Essie quietly slipped away from the crowd and searched by the trees. At each tree she found several beautifully decorated eggs and special prize eggs. When the hunt was over Essie was proud! The class cheered for her! She had more than all of the others. The night before her teacher had placed "Eggs for Essie" around all the trees. If she followed the path, she'd find the prize. She did!

God grace works that way with us. It's as if there is a basket in heaven marked "Blessings for Annie" or "Blessings for Leo" or any number of God's children. He puts them in special places. If we follow his directions, we will find them.

As Christians, we know God has blessed us immensely. Following his directions, we have enjoyed happy marriages, lived fruitful lives and rejoiced in his goodness. He has blessed us in so many ways, that even in moments of sadness we can't help but to say "Thank you Lord! You've been so good to me."

Exposition

The Book of Ruth gives us an example of God's grace in the Old Testament.

Ruth was a Moabitess who had come to Israel with her Mother in Law Naomi after the death of both of their husbands. To support herself she worked in the fields of the region as a gleaner.

The Mosaic law made special provisions for the poor. In Leviticus 19:9 the law commands: "And when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field, neither shalt thou gather the gleanings of thy harvest." The same principle was repeated in Deuteronomy 24:19 "When thou cuttest down thine harvest in thy field, and hast forgot a sheaf in the field, thou shalt not go again to fetch it: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow: that the LORD thy God may bless thee in all the work of thine hands."

The law of gleaning was God's way of providing for the poor. If corn fell to the ground it was to be left for the poor or widows. None of the corners of any field were to be harvested. The poor and the widows would glean the corners. Fruits that fell to the ground were to be left for the gleaners.

It was God's way of taking care of those who would be in need.

Ruth, as a gleaner, probably expected to gather just enough to make a meal at the end of the day. There were hundreds of gleaners that waited until the day's end for their chance at a meal. She would have been happy to get just enough to get by. However, in her gleaning she came across Boaz, a relative, who recognized her as a widowed relative.

In 2:11 Boaz tells Ruth that they had informed him that she was a widow and they had noted her family connection. In verse 12 Boaz says: "The LORD recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the LORD God of Israel, under whose wings thou art come to trust."

In essence he said, the Lord has recognized your work in the fields and will reward you because you have labored while trusting in him.

After she left his presence Boaz ordered his supervisors to "let fall also some of the handfuls of purpose." The supervisors were told to order their men to drop large amounts of corn near her and leave them on purpose so that she could glean them. If she happened to glean near the sheaves that were still on the stalk, they were ordered not to stop her.

Ruth returned to her gleanings. Much to her surprise the workers seemed unusually sloppy. There were more corn ears than ever in her path. She quietly gathered them without causing attention and returned home.

When she returned, Naomi asked the question: "Where hast thou gleaned today?" "Where wroughtest thou?" Where did you glean today? Where have you been? Ruth showed her gleanings and overwhelmed Naomi. Each day she returned her gleanings were bountiful.

Boaz typifies Christ. Ruth typifies every believer. When we trust, obey and serve we are rewarded bountifully by many acts of kindness, mercy and grace from our Lord.

Just as Boaz told Ruth: The Lord will reward your work because you trust in him, so does the Lord say to every believer: "Trust in me and you shall receive a reward."

While there are gleanings or blessings available for everyone, God has special blessings for those who trust in him. He has ordered them placed conveniently in our path. Those who serve him and trust him will find them..

Where Hast Thou Gleaned Today?

At the close of every believer's earthly life Naomi's question to Ruth could be asked? Where has thou gleaned today? Where have you been?

When Ruth returned to Naomi she gave account of her day's work and showed how God blessed her along the way.

In a similar manner, each of us must answer certain inevitable questions: "What have you done?" "Where have you been?" "Did God Help you Along the Way?"

What have you done? The evaluation of any life considers our works. Whether they are great or small we are judged by the effectiveness of our work.

There are many today that are spending their years idle. They spend their years aimlessly wandering and accomplishing nothing. Their epitaph is short and simple: They lived and they died. Some even lead long lives, but had nothing to show for the time between the cradle and the grave.

There are others who have decided to use their time wisely. While some have great names and were able to reach thousands, there are others who worked quietly in the fields near them.

These are the mothers who cared for the children, stood by their husbands and managed their homes.

These are the fathers who worked hard every day, loved their wives and enjoyed their children.

These are laborers who went into their neighborhoods helping the poor and the needy.

These are the ones who spent their best years teaching little ones and shaping little minds.

These are the preachers and Sunday School teachers.

These are the community volunteers, public servants, coaches and supporting hands that help to forge the future for thousands of nameless souls every day.

Our work in the family and community identifies us. That's why Christ in Matthew 7:20 says, " Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."

What have you done? The believing wife responds, "I loved my family. I supported my husband. I taught the little ones. I helped everyone I could, to see the bright side of life."

Where have you been? Every true believer has a story to tell. It is a story that reveals where they have been in life. That story gives us a stronger appreciation for the life lived. Booker Washington often reminded those he taught that the measure of a person is not the heights they have achieved but the journey over which they had to travel to achieve the height.

Every believer has a journey that scales mountains, meanders rivers and, at times, sinks into valleys.

But the believers journey gives him a story to tell. It's the story of how God brought him out of the darkness into the marvelous light.

It's a story of good times and bad times, rising and falling; praying and praising!

The believer's journey is one that goes forward despite difficulties and hardships. That's why the songwriter declared "I've been buked. I've been scorned. I've been talked about sure as you're born. But at the cross I'm going to bow and I'm going on to heaven anyhow!"

It's a journey so rich that every believer declares "I wouldn't give nothing for my journey now!"

Where have you been? The believer responds: "I have seen good times and suffered through some bad times. I have been to the mountain top as I watched my children succeed. I have endured sickness and disappointment in the valley. But In the valley, I found love, peace and joy! "

Did God Help You Along the Way?

The final question that every believer's life answers is whether or not God helped you along the way or whether you did it all by yourself.

When Ruth made her report to Naomi, old Naomi answered by saying that Boaz was a kind man who showed his kindness to the living and after death also showed kindness to families of the dead.

Every believer understands this truth. In life, God helps us along the way. But even in death, God continues to be a friend to the family. Perhaps that is why the song writer would write: "What a friend we have in Jesus, all our sins and griefs to bear. All because we do not carry everything to God in prayer!"

Every believer should remember that God is always by his or her side! There is no circumstance that befalls me and God is not there! There is no place I can go and God is not there!

Psalm 139:8-10 "If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there.

"If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea;

"Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me.

That's why David declared "Yea thou I walk through the valley of the Shadow of Death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me!"

I heard the song writer declare "I want Jesus to walk with me...:

"You walked with my mother, now walk with me!"

"You walked with my father, now walk with me!"

While I'm on this tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus to walk with me!

When the Lord walks with me, my mountains turn into molehills!

When the Lord walks with me, my midnights turn in sun shiny days!

When the Lord walks with me, my weakness turns into strength!

When the Lord walks with me, my sadness turns into joy!

One of these days, every believer will leave this life. When he or she stands before the judgment bar the questions might be asked: What have you done? Did you meet the Lord along the way?

I want to be able to say "I gleaned the field that you gave me. I tried to help somebody as I passed along. I tried to cheer somebody with a word or song!"

Along the way I met the Lord. Since I met the Lord I have been able to testify: "I have seen the lightning flash. I have heard the thunder roll. I have felt sin's breakers dashing, trying to conquer my soul. I heard the voice of my savior. He bid me to still fight on!

He promised never to leave me. Never to leave me alone!

No never alone! He promised never to leave me alone!

Where have you been? I've been telling the story!

I've been telling men about Jesus, who died on Calvary!

I've been telling them about Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

If you miss me from gleaning down here!

Come up to bright glory!

I'll be gleaning up there!

An On Time God

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 16, 1997

SCRIPTURE: But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. 2 Peter 3:8-9; "But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law," Galatians 4:4

Introduction

Have you ever been late for an appointment or meeting? Most people have been late for at least one engagement in their lives. For some, tardiness is unusual. For others it is routine. Sometimes we get up on time and get out the door on time, but there is a flat tire on the car. Sometimes the car won't start or the alarm clock fails. Sometimes we oversleep, get caught in traffic jams or get stalled by one thousand and one maladies that all signal we are going to have a bad day.

While some are late by accident, there are others that late intentionally. These are the ones who want to avoid something that is uncomfortable or uninteresting and time their arrival perfectly. Some want to steal the focus of the moment by making a late, but grand, appearance.

Even the best believers work hard to maintain a busy schedule and stay on time. Consider the case of Tardy Terry. Tardy Terry was never on time for anything at the "Never-too-late-Baptist Church." Each Sunday he arrived late for the church service, just after the offering. When he sang in the choir, he never knew the songs because he came to rehearsals as they were giving the closing prayer. He almost missed his wedding but arrived just in time to say "I do." He missed his daughter's school play, but caught her bow in act two. Tardy Terry was late his entire life. While the people were sad there was a sigh of relief from everyone when they heard news of his death. Finally, they thought, he'll it make to church on time. But on the day of his funeral, the hearse took a wrong turn. After the family had taken its place, in came Tardy Terry's casket...at the end of the line! He was late for his own funeral.

Because we are familiar with tardiness and fight so hard for timeliness, we are gratified to know that there is a God who is always on time. He is always in control and is never late. He never forgets. He never has a flat tire and cannot be held up by a train. God is always on time! That's the lesson the old Missionary learned. She had been preaching the gospel in the backwoods for many years and preached heavily about faith. One year her food supplies did not arrive on time because of a flood. It would be a month before there would be another supply. She survived on oat meal and goats milk for a month and contracted a serious illness simultaneously. When they finally treated her for her sickness the doctor told her that if her food supply had come on time it would not have done her any good. The prescription for her sickness was plenty of rest for one month and to maintain a strict diet of oat meal and milk. Anything else would have killed her. Again, God was on time!

As Christians, our faith is reaffirmed each time we consider that the God we serve blesses us immensely. We are encouraged further when we consider that he always seems to respond to our needs in the nick of time. Better than CNN...he's "on time, all the time!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Peter as he reassures believers that God will deliver on his promises on time.

There were many that scoffed at the faith of believers since nearly all of the Patriarchs of the Christian faith were dead and the present leaders were aging, yet Christ had not returned as promised. They were unmercifully ridiculed by unbelievers. Peter, one of the last of the Christian Patriarchs, addresses what appeared to be a delay in the coming of Christ in his second letter.

Initially Peter reminds them that scoffers are to be expected. Those outside the faith do not carry the same belief as those who know God. Thus, it is expected that those who are unfamiliar with his ways should scoff. The presence of scoffers and detractors is to be expected in the last days. Their ways will not be self fulfilling. Only the word of God remains true.

Scoffers enjoy ridiculing the faithful, when it appears that the object of their faith is fruitless. In so doing their denial of the faith is somehow reinforced. Evildoers and unbelievers enjoy making fun of believers, quickly pointing out anything that there might be an inconsistency between their belief and reality. Believers, if not reminded, might be discouraged.

In the Old Testament, David wrote to believers who were disturbed about the apparent prosperity of the ungodly in Psalm 37:1 he wrote "Fret not thyself because of evildoers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity." David addressed the temptation to stray when it appeared that the ungodly life was the most prosperous. Peter addresses the temptation to lose hope when it appears that the promises of God would be unfulfilled.

In such times Peter said it is good to remember. Since the immediate subject was the promise of Christ to return and usher in a new kingdom, Peter urged them to remember God's past promises in relation to the great flood. He promised it and it happened. Since he promised a flood and it happened, Peter concludes that assuming that he will do the same in years to come is logical.

Scoffers argue that despite the faith of believers, nothing has changed. The world continues as it always has despite their great sacrifices. They suggest that hundreds of years have passed yet the object of their belief has not occurred.

Peter reminds believers not to be influenced by such reasoning because God is not subject to the limitations of time. Thousands of years in the sight of humankind are but passing days or even seconds with God. It was two thousand years before God fulfilled his promise to Abraham that all of the families of the earth would be blessed through his family. This occurred with the birth of Christ. It was several hundred years before the children of Israel took possession of the promised land as promised (And they still don't have it all). Obviously, God does not reckon time in the same manner as man.

Christ referred to the infinite nature of God in John 8:58 "Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am." Indicating that he existed before Abraham was even conceived. In Hebrews 13:8 the inspired writer says "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever." Thus indicating the truth that God is not effected by time. What he did in times past can be done today or tomorrow.

It is sufficient, said Peter, for believers to remember that God is not slack or negligent. He simply waits until the right time. With respect to unbelievers, Peter said God is not slack but is longsuffering, delaying to give them time. Thus God clearly moves in his own time table which is altered on occasion for the advantage of the believer and out of mercy to the unbeliever.

In Galatians, Paul makes it clear that when all conditions were perfect, God sent his Son to earth to begin the redemption process. The phrase the "fulness" of time intimates a social pregnancy that was ready to be delivered. God moved and acted when the time was appropriate, not before or after. He will make his return in the same manner...in the fulness of time!

God is Always on Time

Often believers are frustrated when it appears that God has forsaken them. When problems mount up and available solutions are few, some lose hope.

When we are experiencing life difficulties the believer's first response is to pray. After prayer, we take actions to alleviate our situation. Sometimes however, our best efforts are unsuccessful. We did everything right. We prayed. We believed. We acted. Yet it often appears that our situation does not change. Our cabinets empty. Our refrigerator's shelves are bare. Our freezers are filled with ice. Our personal affairs are still in disarray. Times are tough. In such instances, has God forsaken us? Are we foolish for continuing to believe in him?

A certain widow woman of scripture found herself in the same situation. She was a believer but was broke, hungry and at the point of starvation. When the man of God came to her home, she found that God could take her last little cup of meal and cruise of oil and stretch it to meet her needs every day. She didn't know when or how God would respond to her need, she just knew he would. Even as the barrel emptied she kept trusting God. When he arrived. He arrived on time.

God is on time because He is ahead of time. We trust God to take care of things for us because we know that God has already begun the process to resolve our problem although the solution is not apparent to us.

When we watch a star twinkle at night, we must remember that the light from the closest star (other than the Sun) Centauri, takes 4.3 years to get to us. When the wise men saw the star in heaven pointing the way to the Christ child, the light from that star actually twinkled thousands of years before, but because of the distance, arrived on earth later, but on time.

Often blessings that we request from God operate in the same way. The answer to many of our prayers is probably already in the working, at this very moment. When the answer arrives God arranges for it to be "on time."

They brought a blind man to Jesus. The skeptics, attempting to trap Christ, asked whether the blind man's sin was the reason for his blindness. Jesus answered by saying that the Blind man was born blind so that he could live among the skeptics and be present at the day and hour that Christ passed by to be healed by his power. The blind man could not see but the restoration of his sight was already on the way.

Believers who are frustrated with problems or heavy burdens should remember that God may seem slack or slow but the answer to our prayer is already on the way. We cannot hurry him but we should be patient. That's why Isaiah 40:31 says "But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

Neither should believers get frustrated when they consider the apparent prosperity of those who are less godly. It is tempting to consider the wealth, health and prosperity of the ungodly and question whether or not we are wasting our time. The ungodly seem to prosper but God never seems to punish them!

Even here, the scriptures remind us that God is not slack. He will act according to his promise. He delays in acting toward them to give them time to respond. In the meanwhile Psalm 37:2-3 reminds believers that "they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb. Trust in the LORD, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed."

The key word for every believer is "Trust!" Trusting God is to know that he may not come when you want him, but whenever he comes, he's always on time!

An On Time God

Finally, we must consider that we serve an on time God.

United Parcel Service promotes the fact that it can place a package in the hands of the receiver in 24 hours. Yet there are times when UPS can't find the right address or can't make a delivery because no one is home.

Federal Express prides itself for being able to deliver a package by 10 a.m. the next morning. However, there are times when they just can't make it. They refund the charge but they still didn't make it on time.

E-mail deliverers promote the fact that they can deliver a message in seconds! But regardless to how fast E-Mail can be delivered, the message can't get through if the line is busy.

That's why every believer rejoices in the truth that we serve a God who is on time all the time!

Abraham stood on a mountain with his son on an altar. When the knife of sacrifice was drawn that's when he found that God was an on time God!-There was a lamb in the bush!

The three Hebrew boys in a fiery furnace learned that even in the midst of the fire that he is an on time God!

Daniel in the lion's den learned that although angry teeth and enemies growl all around you that he is an old time God.

He is on time because he is fast.

How fast is God?

Light travels at a speed of 186,000 miles a second, but God is so fast before you can lift up your eyes unto the hills from whence cometh your help, the answer is already on the way!

Sound travels at a speed of 1085 feet per second, but God is so fast that before you can say "Father I stretch my hands to thee!" The answer is already on the way!

Thought waves travel at thousands of miles per second, but God is so fast that while you are thinking, the answer is already on the way!

When the world cried out for a savior, the answer was already on the way!

In the fulness of time, God rearranged the biological processes of a woman named Mary!

In the fulness of time, God made a hole in the ordered processes of nature!

In the fulness of time, God sent the Word to dwell among men!

At the right time, an on time, he revealed himself to the world!

At the right time, an on time, he began a three-year ministry!

At the right time, an on time, he took up an old rugged cross!

At the right time, an on time, he died out on Calvary!

After the three days and nights, at the right time, an on time

He arose from the grave!

With all power in his hands!

Simba's Lesson

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "That they may see, and know, and consider, and understand together, that the hand of the LORD hath done this, and the Holy One of Israel hath created it." Isaiah 41:20

Introduction

Have you ever experienced deja vu? Deja vu is the feeling that you have experienced a sensation before. It is a psychological phenomenon that helps explain why we sometimes think we have seen or done something before. The professionals say deja vu does not really exist. They say things we have seen and heard are stored in our memory and on occasion something else that we see or hear sets off the "deja vu" circuitry in our brain and we get a feeling of intense familiarity. The brain, according to the experts, tries to explain the feelings with a series of rationalizations and the result is the feeling is accepted as genuine memory.

The professionals have long definitions to explain it. There are many who will argue that they have been places and when they stood in a certain spot they got the strange feeling that they had seen themselves there or had actually been there before. There are some who even point out that they pictured themselves in a dream doing a certain thing but could not remember it until it actually happened. When it happened they experienced Deja vu.

As we consider the spiritual state of our world, the corruption, declining morality, rising violence, it seems that we have been here before. Somehow we seem to forget where we have seen this picture. We forget how we saw the scene. Still, in the back of our collective mind we know that we have seen all of this before.

That's when we need Simba's lesson. Did you see the movie "Lion King?" In the movie, Simba the young lion claimed that he had no interest in history and it made little sense to know it. After that his teacher struck him on the head with a stick. Later in the discussion the teacher took the stick and swung at him a second time. This time Simba ducked and avoided being hit. In that way the teacher showed him the value of learning from the past. The strike on the head was a wake up call! The attempt at the second strike was Deja vu. Simba's response was to recognize the action and take action to avoid prior results.

If the declining state of our world seems familiar to believers it is because each event triggers in our memory what we have studied in the word of God. When we see murders, violence and trouble we instantly recall Mat 24:6-8 "And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows."

God has given us advance warning of the troubling times that are to come. They seem familiar because we have studied them so much that we feel we were there. If we are wise we will learn the lessons found in his word and avoid the mistakes of the past.

As Christians, we have learned a few lessons in life. Some, like Simba's lesson, we have learned from making mistakes and taking a blow. We have also learned a few other lessons that Simba did not learn, mainly that when times are tough we can make it through if we trust in God.

Exposition

This text focuses on a prophecy given by Isaiah about conditions that would exist 150 years in advance of their actual occurrence, creating a feeling of Deja vu when they actually happened.

The six chapters of Isaiah from Chapters 40-46 paint a picture of the moral decay of the people and the resulting destruction of the nation. Isaiah's message predicted the rise of the Persian empire and Cyrus the great. However, it was given 150 years before the events actually happened. At the time, they were likely dismissed as the babblings of a confused old man.

Yet Isaiah accurately painted a picture of both the declining morality of the people and the eventual salvation of the righteous who depend upon the Lord. Chapter 40 closes with the classic admonition "but they that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength.."

In Chapter 41 the rapid rise of Cyrus is predicted. The trouble that was to come was predicted, yet help and shelter was projected for the people who would place their trust in God. There would be many in the approaching time that would resort to idol gods, giving them precedence in the spiritual lives of the people.

It all actually happened. It took 150 years but it all occurred. Overpowering armies of Babylon destroyed Israel. They were taken captive back to Babylon. There, many remain faithful to God, such as the Three Hebrew Boys, Daniel and others. However, there were others that took on Babylonian ways and beliefs. They even began to worship Babylonian idol gods.

Isaiah paints the prophetic picture that certain things will happen. When they happen don't get excited because believers have been given advanced warning.

The people will worship idol gods in Babylon! The thought of such a thing was considered ridiculous at the time they said it. When it happened it was like Deja vu.

God will perform mighty miracles for his people despite their exiled condition. The first 19 verses of the 41st chapter explain how God will provide for the needy, the thirsty and impoverished in miraculous ways. In verse 18-19 he shows how he will open up fountains of water in dry places and plant trees that need plenty of water to survive like the Pine and Myrtle, in the midst of the wilderness. When they prosper it will be a sign that God is still providing for his own.

All of this will be done that the people might see and know that all that is being done is a sign from God.

Then Isaiah in subsequent verses challenged the idol gods that the people would serve in the coming to time to equal the power of the almighty God. Can they claim responsibility for the events of the past? Can they control the future? (v22) The gods that people will serve in the future will be just as impotent to control their events as those of the past. He challenged in advance, the false gods of the future to do something either bad or good that everyone could see as a witness to their power.

When it happens, it will be a memorable lesson.

The people will see it and remember that God is a powerful God.

The Believer's Lesson

It took a whack on the head for Simba to understand. From that he understood that whenever the stick swings one should duck.

What is the believer's lesson?

Every believer should learn the outcome of living against God's word as well as the reward of righteous living. We have read it in the word. We have heard it from the pulpit. We have seen it with our own eyes. It's like Deja vu. Whenever we stray away from the word of God we get a whack on the head. Whenever we hold firm to what God desires we are blessed.

Simba's lesson: We have seen Simba's lesson in scripture. It marks those occasions when God took control of events to give his people a wake up call.

Samson learned Simba's lesson. He was fascinated with Philistine women. Despite advice from his parents and compatriots he romanced and married a Philistine woman. Another ultimately brought him down, which was Delilah. It took the loss of his sight and strength for Samson to learn Simba's lesson. He prayed and asked God to return his strength after his lesson was learned. God answered his prayer.

David learned Simba's lesson. He was adulterous with another man's wife. He committed murder and tried to hide it from God and his subjects. It was discovered and God plagued him with a serious venereal disease as a result. In his agony, David cried out in Psalm 51:10 "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

Saul learned Simba's lesson. He was en route to persecute the church. Yet, on the road to Damascus he was stricken with blindness and thrown from his animal. He saw a light and heard a voice that asked him "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" It took three days of blindness to teach Saul Simba's lesson. Afterwards he arose, changed his name to Paul and the rest is history.

Believer's Assurance: A believer, on the other hand does not need Simba's lesson to prompt him to obey God.

Every believer is acutely aware that God can deliver "Simba's lesson".Hebrews 12:6-8 says "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons."

The Believer's Motivation

The believer is therefore motivated by the reality of Simba's lesson, but he is also motivated by the assurance that comes with faith.

It is faith that prompts a believer to experience Deja vu when hard times come.

Believers see every situation and say in their hearts, I have been here before.

In hard times he remembers that such times have been predicted and he remembers what the word of God says about believers in tough times.

If there is a shortage of Money. Faith says "I have been here before." I was with David when he was at a very low point. I was there when he wrote in Psalm 37:25 "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

If there is death. Faith says "I have been here before." I was here with Mary and Martha when they told Jesus, "Lord if you had been here my brother would not have died!" I was there when he answered "I am the resurrection and the life."

If there is persecution. Faith says "I have been here before." I was here with the Three Hebrew Boys when they were thrown in the fiery furnace. I was there when they declared "Our God is able to deliver us."

If there is doubt. Faith says "I have been here before." I was here when Elijah stood on the top of Mt. Carmel and asked the question, "How long halt ye between two opinions? If God be God then follow him. If Baal be God then follow him."

If there is a shortage of food. Faith says "I have been here before." I was here when a poor widow woman looked in her barrel for what she thought was here last time only to learn that God had made a way.

I've been there before and the lesson that I have learned is that if I trust in the Lord, he will make a way!

I've been there before and the lesson I've learned is that if you call him he will answer!

I've been there before and the lesson I've learned is that he may not come when you want up, but he's always on time!

Call him, in the morning! Call him in the noon day!

Call him at the midnight hour! He will answer bye and bye!

Call on Jesus, who died on Calvary! He will make everything all right!

No. 647-Women's Day

A Woman's Place

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 9, 1997

SCRIPTURE:Why should the name of our father be done away from among his family, because he hath no son? Give unto us therefore a possession among the brethren of our father.And Moses brought their cause before the LORD.And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: thou shalt surely give them a possession of an inheritance among their father's brethren; and thou shalt cause the inheritance of their father to pass unto them. Numbers 27:4-7;"The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." Romans 8:16-17

Introduction

Where is a woman's place? What is a woman's job? The answer to that question depends upon the person asking. Men have their own defini tions of a woman's place and job. Their place, according to some men is somewhere to the rear of a man, but close enough to make him look good. Throughout history women have fought for their place in the world.They point out that Eve was created from a rib from his side to be equal in service, not from his back to be forever behind him; or his foot to be walked on by him, or from his fist to be his punching bag. Yes, even today, women are struggling to gain an equal footing before the law and in the consciousness of society in general.

Privately, many men think the woman's place is in the home. In fact, they expect to find her at home in her place, a*s soon as she gets home from work*. The confused signals that society sends leaves many women frustrated in their attempt to define themselves. They always seem to be written off, written up, or underwritten. No one seems to know just what they really want from women.

It is even more difficult for African-American women since they have served in and out of the home throughout our history.

Women have so many jobs it is often difficult to keep up with them all.

If they would pay the average woman $5.00 an hour for all her jobs, she'll take home a nice sum every week. Consider that she sends 44 hours a week as a nursemaid; 2 as a dietician; 3.3 as a purchasing agent; 13.1 as either a cook or a waitress; 6.2 as a dishwasher; 17.5 as a housekeeper; 5.9 as a laundress; 1.3 as a seamstress; .6 as a practical nurse; 1.7 as a maintenance worker; 2 as Chauffer; Social Secretary; 2; 5.3 hours pinching hitting for absentee fathers. At $5.00 the 125-hour work week of the average woman would earn her a salary of $525 easily.

Where is a woman's place when she stands before God?

The woman's place is not measured by its proximity to a man but by the closeness of her walk with God?

Her role is the same as that of a man, to be used as an instrument of the most high guide, wherever she happens to serve.

As Christians we are proud to know that God has a special place for everyone. All of us are equal in his eyes. Our place is to join the millions that humbly confess him as Lord as usher in the day when every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord!

Exposition

This text shows how five women boldly claimed their rightful inheritance from Moses.

Zelophehad, a descendant in the tribe of Joseph, was a god-fearing man who died leaving no sons to inherit his portion of the land of promise. Though he had obeyed all of the laws and was pious and dutiful, his family was to be deprived of its rightful place because he had only five daughters and no sons.

In ancient Israel they passed on possessions to the living sons of a father. The oldest son received a double share of his possessions. If a man had no sons then they transferred all of his possessions to his brothers or to his father's brothers or to the next of kin in his family who was a man. A man who had only daughters ran the risk of losing his entire life's work to another member of his family, not of his own choosing.

Women had no rights of inheritance. According to the law, they could not be heirs. They had no legal standing before the eyes of the law of Moses.

However, Zelophehad's daughters were different. They believed themselves to be equal in the sight of God, deserving their inheritance. Their family had been loyal to Moses. Their father had not been a part of Korah's revolt. They were not complainers. Their father died, naturally, not as a punishment of rebellion, thus they could not understand why they should be prohibited them from assuming their rightful place as his heirs.

For women to even think such thoughts in those times was remarkable. These were times when they commanded women not to speak, act or make decisions without the consent of a man. These were times when women were traded in marriages and paraded before the masses to satisfy the whims of men. For five women to stand firm and demand an inheritance was remarkable. The women of their tribe must have called them many names, suggesting that they were not real women and had moved out of their place. The fact that one of the five women had a man's name, Noah, probably made their position even more suspect. Yet they stood demanding their rightful place.

These women had an earnest desire for a place in the land promise, which was a type of the kingdom of heaven. They sought it and received it after Moses talked to God about the matter heard God tell him to do right by the women who were females but no less heirs to the promise.

The triumph of these women which is recorded in chapter 27 is tempered by an additional commandment in chapter 36 which allowed them to be heirs but ordered them to marry within their family clan to keep the inheritance from falling in the hands of others if they married outside the family. Thus while their rights were upheld, they abridged them to the extent that they would negatively impact their entire family.

Paul, writing to the Romans reminds every believer that we have a great inheritance as children of God. As children of God we are heirs to the promise of salvation and the kingdom of heaven. In this respect there are no sexes, races, or national barriers, all are equal before God.

A woman's place in this context is the same as a man's place. Both are equal heirs in the kingdom. Both bear equal responsibility to serve God fully and to share in the rewards of the faith.

What is a woman's place? What is a woman's job? To walk humbly before God and to do his will!

The Black Woman's Place

What is the African-American woman's place? Throughout our history she has worn many hats and played many roles in the drama that has become our heritage.

Unlike her peers in other races, the African-American woman has not had the privilege of living the sheltered life. The social circumstances of our history have cast her in the role of field hand, nanny, cook, concubine, maid, mother and wife.

According to the department of Labor 51.6 of the Blacks employed in America are Black women (1995). Throughout our history there have always been more men working than women. That trend continued until 1988 when Black women exceeded men in the work force.

As Black women enter the work force and begin to earn comparable salaries to men, defining their place in the family and home becomes more difficult. No longer low paying maids and domestics, Black women are rising in the work place. Forty years ago most Black women were either domestic workers or teachers. That was the way to go. Segregation closed most doors and those that remained were closed by sexism. But the picture has changed. The top occupations for Black women today, according to the Department of Labor is: nursing aides, orderlies and attendants (481,000). They are followed by cashiers (349,000), secretaries (287,000), Retail sales workers (187,000), Cooks (166,000), registered nurses (150,000), janitors and cleaners (149,000), teachers (148,000), sales supervisors and proprietors (112,000).

While these figures represent the number of women in the work force it must be remembered that there are more than 158,000 Black-women owned businesses in America with gross revenues of $6.5 billion dollars. Black women in business account for more than 40 percent of the Black owned Businesses in America.

An increase in the education of Black women has resulted in much of their success.

More than 62 percent of women who graduated from high school went to work in 1995. Those who had at least a B.A. found that 83 percent went to work.

The picture is clear. The Black woman of the 90's is more educated, earns more money and is more likely to land a decent job than ever before.

However, there are some tradeoffs that every woman must consider.

Women struggling to compete in the job market find themselves in the awkward position of trying to be a competitor in the work place, mother and wife. Too often their children and husbands are forced to compete with their careers for quality time. Too often the family loses.

The problems are staggering. Single parents head 48 percent of the eight million Black families in America. Increasing divorce and teen-sexual activity is a major contributor to this problem. It looks worse when we consider that Hispanics which generally have larger families have only 25% female headed households, 14% for whites and 13% among Asians and Pacific Islanders. As the number of female headed householders increases so does the poverty rate as 53 % of female headed households end up in poverty.

The most endangered entity in our community is the family. Like the daughters os Zelophehad in the text, today's women must exercise their rights to extent that they do not negatively impact their family.

Both men and women must reassess the importance of family stability over possessions. Our women must not accept female headed homes as an acceptable alternative but actively seek to improve upon their situation. Working wives must make tough decisions if they discover their careers competing with their husbands and children and their families lose more often than they win. The African-American woman must also do everything possible to promote, educate and mature the next generation of Black men or run the risk of not having a peer within the race without stepping outside of their sphere of acceptable mates.

That is a challenge that an increasing number of Christian women are accepting every day as they reevaluate their "place" in the order of things.

The Woman's Place Before God

The Black Woman's place in the family is that of an equal helper to her husband and mother to her children.

The Black woman's place in the social order is that of a citizen of equal worth that receives equal protection under the law and equal pay and opportunity in the work place.

But what is the woman's place before God?

When God looks down upon human kind he does not see a woman or man. He only sees a child of God. An heir to the kingdom of God.

I don't know about you but I'm glad that God is an equal opportunity provider!

Receiving Blessings from God is not just a man's thing, because God is an equal opportunity provider!

I hear Hannah talking to the Lord. "If you give me a child, I'll bring him back to you!"

I hear Esther talking to the Lord. "If you save my people from destruction and persecution!"

I hear Ruth talking to Naomi. "Your people shall be my people. And your God shall be my God!"

What God does for one, he'll do for the other.

We like to talk about Job, but what about Mrs. Job. Job lost his family, but so did Mrs. Job. Job lost all of his wealth, but so did Mrs. Job. But when it was all over God blessed Mr. and Mrs. Job with more than they had before.

We like to remember that God saved Noah on the Ark, but what about Mrs. Noah? She was on the ark too! What God does for one he'll do for another.

No wonder the song writer wrote: "It is no secret what God will do. What he's done for others he'll do for you. With arms wide open, he'll pardon you. It is no secret what God will do!"

Our place before God is to worship him with lifted holy hands!

Our place before God is to bow down before him and acknowledge him as Lord!

Our place before God is to serve him with our mind, body and soul!

Our place is to live among humankind so the spirit flows freely.

I don't know about you, but "Every time I feel the spirit...I will pray!"

Our place is to humble ourselves at the cross of Christ.

At the cross, at the cross where I first saw the light and burdens of my heart rolled away. It was there by faith I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!

Baby Talk

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 10, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things."1 Corinthians 13:11

Introduction

Have you ever talked baby talk? Most parents, especially mothers, have talked baby talk to new borns. Theoretically, baby talk is an adult's way of bridging the gap between what is perceived as an adult way of comprehending reality and that of a toddler. Baby talk recognizes that most infants around 13 months old can use five to 10 words. At about 18 months their vocabulary has grown to about 100 words. Thus, those who try to communicate with babies use baby talk to compress the adult experience into the 100 words or less that a baby understands.

Sometimes baby talk can get down right silly. One wonders if babies lay in their cribs and wonder at the strange way in which adults talk to them. Perhaps they marvel at the funny sounds they make or cute little faces they make trying to make them laugh. Most of the adult's communication with a baby is designed to get a response, usually a smile or a giggle. Sometimes it appears that baby gives in and pastes on a smile or forces out a giggle to patronize the adult who won't go away otherwise.

Babies talk to us in a number of ways, the first of which is crying. For newborns, it's the only way they can tell you they're hungry, wet, tired, uncomfortable or sick. As the months go on, babies' communication skills broaden as they begin to babble, coo, laugh and squeal. By the end of the first year they may even have a vocabulary of two or three words.

Parents who attempt to communicate with babies learn special ways to "talk" to them. They sing or hum songs, make silly faces, or play games. Often they use a different voice to talk higher pitched, slower, or in other unique ways so that the baby knows they are directing their attention toward him. Parents speak to babies in simple sentences, often repeating words or phrases. Simple rhymes and stories are also told to babies in a way that they will understand.

Young Christians, despite their age, need baby talk. They do not understand everything about the Christian life therefore those who share the experience with them must be able to help them grasp the important principles of Christianity in ways that they will understand.

There comes a time in every Christian's life, just like an infant, when he or she outgrows the need for "baby talk" or the mechanisms needed then to communicate the faith. That is the point in which the baby talk ends, the experience grows and the adult Christian emerges.

As Christians, we have experienced the full gamut of God's power and expression. When we were children we perceived it one way. Today, we see it another way. Then we thought as children. Now we see the fullness of God's glory and rejoice in it completely.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes to the Christians in Corinth about the new to mature in the faith.

The Corinthians were babies in the faith. As babies they understood the Christian life as babies. The sought after that which they understood.

The main issue that Paul addressed was their pursuit of spiritual gifts instead of lasting spiritual character. The Corinthians had heard the testimonies of those who had experienced the power of Pentecost. They had seen and heard of the miraculous things that were done by the faithful as a result of the Pentecost experience and they sought those gifts. They understood the Christian life to be the intertwined with the acquisition of spiritual gifts.

They sought the spiritual gifts of tongues, knowledge and prophecy. They raised them to a level so high that they became identified with salvation itself. To exercise the gift of tongues meant a believer had been saved. To exercise the gift of knowledge or prophecy or discerning spirits meant believers were living the Christian life. The pursuit of these gifts consumed the sum total of the Corinthian experience. It became a subject of excitement and controversy in their ranks.

Paul took three chapters to respond to the issue. In chapter 12 he identifies the gifts. He spelled out their source, which is God and their operation. He also noted that everyone would not receive the same spiritual gift. Some may receive only one while others may have multiple gifts. In chapter 13 he points out that spiritual gifts are a means to achieve an end but not an end in themselves. Learning to live the life of love is the primary goal of Christians. The exercise of gifts is considered secondary. Gifts, designed for a special purpose would cease but living the life of love would continue.

The Corinthians, like little children, understood the Christian faith only in the context of the spiritual gifts. This is not knowledge in general or prophecy in general; this is the "gift of knowledge," the "gift of prophecy," the "gift of tongues" that he is talking about. These were the three favorite gifts at Corinth. They were making much of them. Paul was telling them that as important and God-given as these gifts are they were never intended to last in contrast to love, which never quits.

Prophesying is the gift of unveiling the mysteries of God, making known to man these radical secrets about humanity and society that are revealed in the Scripture which the secular world can never discover.

The gift of tongues is the gift of supernatural utterance of a language never learned in praise and thanksgiving to God. It is called glossolalia, the ability to speak a language, a true language, that was never learned.

The gift of knowledge is the ability to grasp a great range of Biblical truth, to systematize it and to know it, and it too is a great gift. But of the three, Paul says, tongues will absolutely cease. This is because tongues is a "sign" gift, given as a sign to unbelievers, designed to arrest their attention. When that is accomplished there is no further need for the gift, so it ceases in the individual.

Many of the spiritual gifts, such as tongues, were given to the church in its "baby" period. A time when people needed to see miraculous occurences to believe. As the word of God became more readily available the gifts gradually faded. Thus Paul writes: "When I was a child, I spoke like a child, I thought like a child, I reasoned like a child," There is nothing wrong with that. Children are supposed to act like children; everybody expects them to, and it would be folly and a shame if they did not. Paul says he did what is expected of children when he was a child, but, " when I became a man, I gave up childish ways.

He put away childish things because men and women move toward maturity in the faith and therefore these things were no longer needed. Now what Paul is saying, of course, to these Corinthians is that the mark of maturity is the ability to love, to love the unlovely, the selfish, the distasteful, the ungrateful, and to not let that change your attitude or your actions toward them but to keep on working fully for their best interests.

Those who place a great deal of importance upon the acquisition of and exercise of gifts are being childish in their approach to the faith. Those who have matured in the faith should put away childish things.

Childish Chistians

Today, there are many in the church who approach their faith with a childish attitude. Childishness is different from childlike. Childlike refers to humble and innocent. Childish refers to immaturity. In this respect there are many whose spiritual development is not as it should be.

Many believers resemble children at Christmas. As they open packages of toys they tear open each gift feverously, play with it for a while then discard it as they run to other gifts. If a sibling has a gift then they want to play with their gift for a while. The entire morning is a frantic jump from one gift to the other.

Likewise there are many believers that are seeking the most exciting gift they can receive as a result of their new found faith. The Pentecostals tell them that speaking in tongues and the working of miracles and wonders is a great gift. Many new believers run to play with that gift for a while. Another denomination promotes the gift of healing and a group of believers runs to play with that gift. Many jump from denomination to denomination to play with the gifts of others in the faith. In the process, many miss the whole purpose for the gifts in the first place, which was to help win souls to Christ.

Lacking maturity, too many today still approach their faith in a childish way:

RATTLERS: Lacking a full comprehension of the world around them, babies are fascinated with anything that moves and makes noise at the same time. They enjoy listening to the sound. There are many Christians whose maturity in the faith has only reached the level of rattlers. They are fascinated by nearly anything that sounds good or makes noise. Thus, many are running from one place to the other looking for the sound. Preachers with the right sound! Choirs with the right sound! Hymns and devotionals that have the right sound. Such believers are impressed only with the sounds.

PACIFIERS: Pacifiers keep babies satisfied. A pacifier takes a baby through the motion of nursing but actually gives them nothing. So it is with many believers who get themselves caught up in religious activities that appear to nourish them but actually take them through the motions without giving them anything. Many have focused on worshipping with their hands pointed a certain way. Others suggest a certain position when they pray. Still others emphasize reading the bible from a certain position as a source of strength. These only serve to pacify and occupy believers with a form and style but give them no substance.

BABY FOOD: Baby food is strained and restricted. Because babies were not able to chew their food many in past generations would chew the food for their children then put it in their mouths. Thus some babies were able to eat meat or greens or cornbread, but only after someone had someone chewed it first. There are many today who have not grown to the point that they can read and study the bible for themselves. Despite the availability of bibles and technology they still depend on others to digest the word of God for them and tell them what it says. Thus they are always vulnerable to the vast interpretations of others because they do not study the word for themselves. What they receive is tasty. What they receive is just as assorted as the food that others appear to get, except that it has been chewed over so much that the real meaning of the message is often lost.

Paul told the Corinthians that their thirst for the exciting and disdain for the weightier matters of the faith identified them as babies in the faith.

However, those who have matured in the faith are no longer impressed with rattlers. They do not chase after preachers and choirs that have the right sound. They are more impressed with the message than the sound. Neither are they impressed with pacifying rituals that are meaningless and powerless in times of peril. They are impressed with those matters of the faith that bring them closer to God in a real and meaniful way. Moreover, they have learned to appreciate the value of studying the word for themselves rather than receiving their information second hand.

Those who have matured in the faith have put away childish things.

When we see God fully!

There is a sense of joy that a beliver receives when he or she has finally been able to see and understand God for themselves.

Those who have had an experience with God are not moved by the external, because they have learned that the true believer has the spirit of God in his heart and soul.

There are many things we did when we were children that are still good, but are no longer valuable to us as mature believers in Christ.

There was a time we played house and made mud pies out of the wet dirt and made icing out of the dry dust! But when we became men and women, we put away childish things!

There was a time when we made dolls from Coke bottles and combed hair made of seaweed string! But when we became men and women, we put away childish things!

There was a time when we made play houses out of card board boxes and punched holes in the sides to make windows. But when we became men and women we put away childish things!

There was a time when we rolled tires down the street and filled them with dirt to immitate the exhaust. But when we became men and women, we put away childish things!

There was a time when we rode broom handles and told ourselves they were horses. But when we became men and women we put away childish things!

Even in the faith there was a time when the choir had to rock and the preacher had to roll for us "feel" something in a worship service! But When we became spiritually mature we found God in every rock and every time the thunder rolled!

When you know God for yourself you come to understand that it is not in the waving of our hand or in the wagging of our tongues, but in the purity of our faith that God comes.

When God comes, things change!

When God moves, things happen!

When God speaks, the world listens!

When God walks, the earth keeps silent!

I don't know about you, but I'm glad that I know God for myself!

I know him because I tried him!

I tried him for myself!

When you try him, you find out that faith in him is not a children's game but serious business!

It is so serious that He was willing to come to this earth. Die on an old rugged cross and arise again after three days!

I don't know about you but I'm glad to know he's alive!

I know he lives because I can feel him in my heart!

Getting Back With God, After the Beep!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 16, 1997

SCRIPTURE:" I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear: but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not." Isaiah 66:4 "And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear." Isa 65:24

Introduction

Have you ever tried to call someone but the closest you came was their answering machine? One of the most frustrating experiences is to play telephone tag with an answering machine. Some of our friends have been very creative with their messages. There are messages that play gospel music in the background. There are some that recite, what seems like, scores of bible scriptures before you can leave your message. There are singing messages, dramatic messages and even humorous messages. There are messages that are so long, that you don't have time to leave a message. Then there are those that are short and to the point: "I'm not here. Leave a message after the beep."

Since their creation in the 1980's answering machines have become an integral part of the information age. Nearly every office has an answering device of some kind. Someone decided to put a name on our ritual of leaving answering machine messages and decided to call the messages "voice mail." We are obviously creatures of modern technology.

Gone are the days when a telephone was simply a number pad from zero to nine. Now we must be familiar with features like call waiting, call transferring, speed dialing to a bank of coded numbers, last number redial, three way calling, the star button for faxes, connections to computer modems, voice mail menus, and much more. Things probably will not get better either.

If you call any major company, brace yourself for the inevitable menu. Many school systems, even many local businesses all have answering machines. Sometimes we feel like throwing a party when we actually hear a live person on the other end. Glasbergen, a cartoonist in THE WALL STREET JOURNAL posted a cartoon a while back that posed the question of whether it is possible for a man call home from work and hear his wife's recorded voice say, "Hi, this is your wife. To find out what's for dinner, Press 1. To apologize for what you said last night, Press 2. To say I love you, Press 3. If you would like to speak with me personally, Press 0 and wait. I will be with you shortly!"

These are busy times in which we live. Playing telephone tag is getting to be a way of life. Beepers, once the tools of doctors and highly placed individuals are now common place. It is getting harder and harder for us to catch up with each other.

How difficult is it for God to get in touch with you? Is it possible that we have so crowded our hurried schedules that even God has problems getting in touch with us? Do we play telephone tag with God? At the appointed time when God generally speaks to us, does he get a message instead that says: "Sorry, I missed you at prayer time, but leave a message after the beep!" Does it say, "Sorry, I couldn't be at church to hear your message, I was tired, but leave a message after beep Lord, and I will get back to you later."

As Christians, we always make time available for God We never get too busy to hear from him or make room for him in our lives. We study our bibles. We listen to the preached word and we create space in our day to talk to God. Most importantly we always make time for him to talk to us. What he has to say is too important to hear....after the beep.

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah as he reminds Israel of the ways God has tried to respond to the needs of mankind and man's thoughtless response.

This last section of the book of Isaiah covers the final events of world history, and closely parallels the book of Revelation. The book of Isaiah is in many ways a miniature Bible. It divides like the Bible. The Bible has 66 books, and Isaiah has 66 chapters. The Old Testament has 39 books, and the first division of Isaiah has 39 chapters. The New Testament has 27 books, and the second half of Isaiah has 27 chapters. The theme of the last of Isaiah is the theme of the last of the Bible: the end!

Yet before the end, God looks at the people of Israel and tracks the way he has attempted to respond to their need and their empty response. Though God has attempted to contact them through prophets and messengers for hundreds of years they have virtually ignored him. He has repeatedly attempted to minister to the people yet they have turned a deaf ear. This prompts God, as he considers the future state of believers, to say, "I called them but they would not answer." In Isaiah 65:24 he remembers notes that in the future state believers will be of such that they will know that before they can call, the answer will be en route.

Their desire to build altars, make animal sacrifices and concentrate on the ritual is the final element of frustration for God. In Isaiah 50:2, God asked Israel to give a reason it did not answer his calls. Here he said, "Wherefore, when I came, was there no man? when I called, was there none to answer? Is my hand shortened at all, that it cannot redeem? or have I no power to deliver?"

Israel frustrated God by not answering his call, although he always answered their prayers.

Too Busy for God

Most believers live at a fast pace. Our days are spent in a series of short intervals in which we gather and exchange information, tie loose ends and make "show your face" appearances. For the most part the days are gone when we sat quietly on the porch for an entire afternoon or other meditative activities. We are busier than we have ever been. Even our off days and rest days are busy.

That requires every believer consciously to work to create time for God. Often God has something to say to us but we are too busy to hear him. He even leaves us messages but we fail to get them. We are getting so busy that we have pushed God right out of our daily calendars.

What is our relationship to God? How do we respond when he calls? Some respond in a variety of ways:

BUSY SIGNALS: There are some whose lines stay busy. Sometimes it's because they are constantly on the phone. At other times it is because their phone is off the hook. No one can get a call through. The receiver is off the hook.

When God calls many of us simply cannot hear him. Either our line is busy or our phone is off the hook. Saul was a busy man. He busied himself persecuting the Jews. God needed to talk to him but he could never get through. It took an experience on the Damascus Road to get him to put the phone back on line. If we intend to hear from God, we must put the phone on the hook or have some appointed time in which he knows the line will be clear.

CALLER ID: The caller I.D. is a device that allows a phone subscriber to see the phone number and sometimes the name of the person making a call. The subscriber decides whether to answer the call based on the identity of the person calling.

There are some who anticipate that they are receiving a call from God and try to avoid him by not answering. In the Garden of Eden, Adam and Eve tried to avoid God after they ate the forbidden fruit. They did not want to hear from God when they realized he was coming. There are many today who consciously avoid hearing from God. They won't read a bible, attend a bible study, or listen to the preached word. They try to hide from God.

LISTENERS WHO DON'T ANSWER: There are many who listen to messages as we record them on their answering machines. They turn the volume up high and stand next to the phone and listen to every word as callers fumble to leave concise messages that get their point across. They view such calls as unwanted interruptions. They come at a time when we don't want to listen to what the caller has to say or talk with them about anything. As Jonah listened to God's message to go to Ninevah, he did not want to pick up the phone. He did not want to go and avoided God as long as he could. It took three nights in the belly of a fish before he realized that it is not good to try to avoid God.

Yet there are times when many of us hear the messages that God leaves for us, but we won't pick up the phone. We are too occupied to respond. His call will usually indict us, or enlist in yet another time-consuming service. We know God is trying to get in touch with us but we just don't have time to deal with him. We listen to his message and decide we will get back with him later.

THOSE WHO NEVER GET BACK: There are many who seldom answer their calls even if they are on an answering machine. Some machines hold thirty or more messages. Some messages can be as long as two minutes. When some consider that it will take them nearly an hour just to listen to all their messages they dread playing them back. That results in full voice mail boxes and answering machines. The receiver has the message but is slow to answer. By the time he or she actually decides to call back, the occasion for the call has passed.

Israel, once in the promised land, received many messages from God. For 150 years they received warnings from God that destruction loomed. As a succession of prophets gave the same message repeatedly, the nation never "got back!" When they finally decided to answer it was too late.

There are many who dread how much time it will take to get back with God. Worship is time consuming. Prayer is time consuming. Service is time consuming. They place God's calls in their box of "good intentions" but never get back to him.

We must strive to leave the line open so God can get through and if by some chance we miss his call we must never hesitate to get back with him.

The Lord may call us to give us a blessing, we need to pick up phone!

The Lord may call us to give us a healing, we need to keep the line clear!

The Lord may call us to commission us for service. Our response should not be to stand by the phone and ignore him, but to say "If the Lord needs somebody, here am I, send me!"

When We Call God...

Fortunately God does not respond to our calls they way we respond to him.

God does not use heavenly Caller I.D. Box to see if the call is coming from you and decide whether or not he wants to hear from you.

He does not listen to our prayers and thoughts and play like he is not at home.

Neither does God hesitate to answer us. There is no box of unreturned calls in heaven.

There won't be a recorded voice in heaven that answers: "for blessings press 1. For healings press 2. For Forgiveness press 3. To speak to God himself press G.

When we call God it won't matter what type of phone you use. Down here the recorded voice says press 1 if you have a touch tone phone. If you have rotary phone stay on the line. But when we call heaven, it won't matter what type of phone we use. It won't matter whether we are old fashioned or modern, the Lord will answer prayer!

Consider the little preschooler whom they had told in school about using the telephone. The teacher said if there is an emergency, dial "911" on the phone. The little boy always had trouble in class because he could not tell a six from a nine. One day his mother became ill and dropped to the floor the little boy began screaming and picked up the phone and dialed the emergency. Each time he dialed he kept pushing 6-1-1. Nothing happened. He couldn't remember everything his teacher said but he remembered that his Sunday school teacher said when you are in trouble call God. He picked up the phone and started pushing the only number he could remember correctly. Instantly a neighbor who heard the boy screaming came in the front door. Others swept in to help. Someone asked "What number did you call?" The boy said "I couldn't remember the number I just kept pushing the one." He didn't get the emergency line but he dialed right into heaven. Because he dialed God's hot line: One for the father, One for the Son and One for the Holy Ghost!

Sometimes God answers even before we call. That's why Isaiah said, "before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear!"

Sometime God sends the answer even when we don't call. We rarely pick up the phone!

When the world was in trouble, God sent an answer before they called.

When the world was in trouble, he sent prophet after prophet but every message went unanswered!

Then God decided to stop calling. He would send the Word in person. He sent Jesus to deliver the message. God still loves you!

Jesus came and lived among men, but they didn't get the message!

He healed the sick and raised the dead, but they didn't get the message!

But when he died out on Calvary, the Sun refused to shine! Dead saints walked from their tombs. Somebody shouted out, 'Surely, surely, he must be the Son of God!"

After three days and nights he arose from the grave!

Today, you can call him in the morning!

Call him in the noonday. Call him at the midnight hour!

No wonder the songwriter said "Jesus is on the mainline tell him what you want! Call him up and tell him what you want!

Call Him!

Call Him!

...and tell him what you want!

The Man Behind The Curtain

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 23, 1997

SCRIPTURE:It is he that sitteth upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers; that stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in:Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel, My way is hid from the LORD, and my judgment is passed over from my God?Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the LORD, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? there is no searching of his understanding. Isaiah 40:22,27-28

Introduction

Have you ever felt you were being ignored? We feel ignored when our input, advice, opinion or directives are not considered. Sometimes we feel ignored on the job. Those are the times that work they post schedules that make life difficult for you despite your complaints to the contrary. Some employers feel ignored when work rules are posted but broken by employees regularly. Parents often feel ignored when children break household rules or if a spouse takes actions without considering the opinion of the other. Even children feel ignored when their problems, complaints or feelings seem to make little difference in family decisions. No one likes being ignored. Everyone likes to feel wanted and appreciated. Each wants to know that they are an important player in every circumstance in which they involve themselves.

Many people suffer from the "Oz" syndrome. In the popular movie "The Wizard of Oz" Dorothy, The Scarecrow, The Tin Man, The Lion and Toto all went to see the Wizard of Oz. They came into the throne room of the great and powerful Oz. The splendor and beauty of the room awed them. They trembled and shook when they saw the great gusts of smoke and fire burst forward and heard the powerful voice of the "Wizard" himself. However, Toto became curious and went behind the giant curtain. He found a small man speaking into a microphone, feeding bellows and feverishly creating the illusion that the others saw. Once discovered, the Wizard said "Pay no attention to the man behind the curtain." Then Dorothy and the others stopped placing their hopes in the Wizard of Oz. They discovered that the man behind the curtain was not the "Great and Powerful Oz" but simply a man who was lost in Oz like themselves.

There are many today who have difficulty believing, trusting and serving God because they suffer from the Oz syndrome. They either believe or expect to find out anytime that the man behind the curtain is not real or not all that he is cracked up to be. They live their lives as if the words of the Wizard applied today: "Pay no attention to the man behind the curtain."

As Christian youth it is important for each to remember that God is real. There is no point in our lives when we will grow up and discover that the man behind the curtains of heavens is actually nonexistent or powerless to respond to our particular needs. We know God is real for we can feel him in our soul!

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah as he reminds Israel of the omnipotent nature of God.

Israel received great words of hope and encouragement from God through the prophet Isaiah that Great blessings awaited them once their dark period of exile was over. He warned the people not to turn to idol Gods that are powerless, but to remain faithful to the one and true living God.

Thus, at verse 22 Isaiah reminds Israel of God's powerful presence in the universe. We clearly understand that God sits high over the universe hidden by the curtain of the heavens managing the universe. He is in complete control of the forces of nature, the laws of science and the movement of the stars, planets, galaxies and solar systems. Our mere existence, in comparison to the universe is like grasshoppers, even then God is mindful of our presence and thoughts.

At verse twenty-seven Isaiah challenges believers not to feel that God is so big, busy and occupied that their actions escape him. Though he is mighty and powerful and sits behind the curtains of heaven, nothing done by anyone escapes his notice, whether it is good or bad. Thus, Isaiah reminds them that God does not tire, sleep or fumble his job as master of the universe. Nothing we do or say escapes his observation. "There is no searching his understanding" (v28). There is no way for us to understand how he does what he does.

While we can't understand how God does what he does, it is important that we understand that he does exist. Though far away in terms of miles, he is close enough to know us, hear us and respond to our need.

Two Important Questions

Today, youth should be aware that the world will tempt them to ignore God. They will attempt to persuade them that God either is powerless or does not care about their actions Youth will be urged, by mischievous friends, to break rules and flirt with lawlessness for thrills and pleasure as if God did not exist. To resist the temptations of ungodly friends youth need to know the answer to two of the most troubling questions .Trust in the LORD, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed.

Paul writing to the Romans urged all believers not to be influenced by world, as if there was no God, but to live above the world in a life-style that is clean and decent.

Romans 12:2 “And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God.”

God is real and his truth is everlasting!

God is real and his mercy is unending!

God is real and his vengeance is sure!

Where is the line?

Since God is real, then youth must know the answer to the second question to avoid being trapped into ungodly acts, “At what point does God act to punish me for wrong doing?” “Can I get away with venial sins (small ones) as long as I do not commit mortal (big) sins? How far can I go?

We might find the answer to that question when we consider Sammy’s Guard dog as an example. Sammy was a local businessman who had a warehouse full of electronic devices in the neighborhood. He built no fences around the warehouse. Neither did he install a burglar alarm system. He bought a Doberman and put him on the grounds. Then he took lime and drew a white line to mark his property. At first the youth of the neighborhood were wary of the big dog. However, he never barked when the passed. He appeared happy. His tail wagged. Sometimes they even threw rocks at him and he ran to hide. They thought Sammy was silly wasting good money on a dog that never barked, growled or bite anyone. One night they decided to slip into Sammy’s warehouse to steal a few of his electronic games. It would be easy. There was no burglar alarm, only the dog that never barked. As the boys came to the street, they tossed pebbles at the dog. He only tucked his tail and ran. Amused, the boys crossed the lime line on the property. Instantly the dog began to growl and bark. He became ferocious and chased after them. When they left the property the dogged started wagging his tail and sat back down. His actions were mysterious. The boys were baffled. What they did not know is that the dog had been trained to be docile and friendly, until someone crossed the line. When they tried to break in the warehouse...they crossed the line.

Many youth today react to God in the same way. They are amused at the fact that there is a God in the heavens. He is cute but powerless to interact in their daily situations. They know he is there but his presence does not intimidate them. Sometimes they joke about him. Sometimes they do crazy things right in front of him just to see how he reacts. They will glance at pornographic material and see if he reacts. They will cheat on a test and see if anything happens. They will curse or use a vulgar word or two, then wait for the reaction. Soon, many get the impression that God will not bite. They get bold. They skip church or come to church and write notes, sleep or hide outside. Some get bolder. They engage in sex. Some steal. Some talk back to their parents, defy authority and break the rules.

Where is the line? At what point do we anger God with our actions? We anger God any time we break his moral law. The line is drawn in the word of God. 1 John 3:4

"Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law." For example, if we drink, smoke, use illegal drugs or engage in sex outside of marriage we commit sins against the body. Any unclean act involving the body is described as "fornication." 1 Corinthians 6:18- 19 "Flee fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body. What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?"

Whenever we break any of God's laws we cross the line. There are no little sins that are OK and big ones that are bad, every sin carries the same punishment, Romans 6:23 "For the wages of sin is death.."

Those who break God's rule cross the line. Once the line is crossed there is a punishment for sin.

The Man Behind the Curtain

Finally, we must consider that while God is behind the curtain of the heavens observing us, he doesn't focus only on our sins. He also knows our troubles and trials.

He is not simply looking for our mistakes, but he is concerned about our hopes and dreams.

He is not a God who searches for our negatives, but he is a God who helps us discover our positives.

When the woman at the well confronted the master, she discovered that not only was he concerned about her sin, but he gave her another chance. When she met the man behind the curtain she ran everywhere telling people, "Come see a man who told me all I've ever done!"

In Psalm 139 David said the man behind the curtain knows all about me because "Thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising, thou understandest my thought afar off."

Whenever you attend a play you will notice that an opening and closing of the curtain separate the acts. We never see him, but there is a man backstage who raises and lowers the curtain. Though we do not see him, we know he is there, because we see the curtain rise and fall.

However, there are some scenes in a play when the curtain does not close, the lights simply go out. The scene is being changed. When the new scene has been rearranged, the man behind the curtain gives the signal and the lights come up on a brand new scene!

In the drama of life, it is good to know that there is a man behind the curtain.

Every now and then the lights go out. The stage gets dark. Some think it's all over and give up.

But there is a man behind the curtain who knows my life's script. He knows it's not all over.

He knows I am having a scene change!

When the stage is set the lights come on a brand new scene!

That's what Paul meant when he said in 2 Cor 5:17 "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

There was a time when I disobeyed God and enjoyed it, but my scene changed!

There was a time when I ran wild in the world, but I had a scene change!

There was a time when I do not respect God, but I had a scene change!

One day in my life, the man behind the curtain brought the lights up on a brand new scene that world had never seen!

One day in Jerusalem, the lights went out. The people thought the drama had ended. The sky was dark! The sun refused to shine. They thought it was all over.

But Early Sunday morning, the man behind the curtain ordered the lights up!

And Jesus, arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

I'm glad there is a man behind the curtain!

When trouble comes my way, he doesn't let the curtain fall, but brings the lights up on a brand new scene!

When sickness comes my way, the man behind the curtain did not let the curtain fall, but brought up the lights on a band new scene!

I'm glad to know that there is a man behind the curtain!

God is still on the throne!

The Rest Of The Story

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 30, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "And Jesus cried with a loud voice, and gave up the ghost. Mark 15:37 Mat 28:6 He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. Matthew 28:6

Introduction

Have you ever sat reading your favorite book or watched a broadcast only to be interrupted before it ended? Nothing is more frustrating than getting part of the story, yet we are often interrupted just as the final minutes of the story unfolded. We never really feel comfortable until someone fills the blanks and tells us the rest of the story! While it is frustrating to know we do not have the whole story, it is even more frustrating to think we have the story only to find out that while what we had was true, it was not the whole story!

Paul Harvey is a famous radio commentator whose daily news broadcasts often contain short biographies of great individuals. Generally, Harvey tells the stories of hundreds of Davids as they wage their wars against life's Goliaths. They contain the stories of students who were failures in school who picked themselves up and later became millionaires. Once he told the heartbreaking story of Wilma Rudolph. He painstakingly described how she was crippled as a youth but could not walk. Then in his unique style, Harvey told how Rudolph mustered the energy and will to push herself to the limit and win the 1960 Olympics in track and field. He even spoke of the boy whom they doomed to failure because he stuttered then miraculously became James Earl Jones, the voice Darth Vader and CNN. The point of Harvey's litany of success stories is that many of life's millions of personal stories may start with a dark and hopeless future. Poverty, crime and social circumstance may make life difficult. The world however, cannot draw conclusions about any person however, until they write the final epitaph. We must wait to get the rest of the story.

Our lives are open books. We are like novels unfolding every day. Each day's events are recorded in a journal in glory. Every year concludes a chapter. Without a doubt our life's story would make a great read. A little drama. A little action. A little romance. Some could be rich if we would sell our story for use on the CBS Sunday night movie. Sometimes folks tell their story while they are still writing it. Mike Tyson's life story was made into a movie. But the story was not over. The part about his imprisonment and return to the ring was not in the book. They did not get the rest of the Story. When Michael Jackson was in his early 20's books were written about his story. That was before "Thriller", Ms. Presley and his new baby. They didn't get the rest of the story.

In our own lives we have a story to tell. Many who knew us in high school or just a decade ago remember that story about our lives. What they know is probably true. But it will not be an accurate account until they know the rest of the story.

As Christians we recognize that our story is unfolding every day. Many of us have some dark chapters of failure and frustration. However, most of us can proudly talk about the point in our lives when we crawled out of the darkness into the light. This new light that we have discovered came through our faith in Jesus Christ. "I was lost but now and I am found. Blind but now I see!" That is the rest of the story!

Exposition

This text focuses on what some thought was a terminal point in the life of Christ.

They crucified Christ on a wooden stake, pole or cross. The cruel picture we see is one of despair and tragedy. Those who watched lamented that it was an unfortunate end to a life with great prospects. It was a terminal point in Christ's life but it did not mark a termination.

His miraculous birth was a terminal point of emphasis. Along with other terminal points such as his performance of miracles and challenging of religious leaders, the terminal points in Christ's life all show points in which he seemed to have fulfilled either his mission or failed in its accomplishment.

His death was a terminal point but it did not terminate his mission.

Matthew shows the resurrection and underscores its importance to believers today. His resurrection proved that he was truly the Son of God as he said and proves the scriptures to be correct. His resurrection assures believers of their own resurrection because he arose himself.

Each of the occurrences marked terminal points in Christ's life.

All terminal points are not final. Some indicate a change for a new direction. Each of the terminal points in Christ's life charted a course for something that was to come.

Even his resurrection was not terminal, because he's coming back again!

Terminal Points

If the truth is told about us, it would reveal that whatever we are today, we are not all that we could be or should be. It would also reveal that we are a long ways from where we were. Along life's way we have both seen and heard a variety of experiences that have brought us to our present state. To truthfully describe our state however we must consider every terminal point.

SUCCESSES. Many believe that once they have achieved a great success in life that they have reached a terminal point. How much higher could they ever expect to go?

Social scientists have devised a mechanism called a "career ladder." It measures the steps one takes up the ladder in the corporate world, with being president of a major fortune 500 company being the highest goal. Some measure themselves by such ladders and strive frantically to reach each step on the ladder. Since some management levels require college degrees or other specialized training some know instantly how far they can move up the ladder. Thus some reach a point in which they are as high as they can go.

As far as they are concerned it is time to write the book!

Moses shared this experience. In Egypt he climbed the career ladder. He reached the second highest position in the land. He was prince of Egypt. In many eyes, he was in his prime! He was 40 years old, highly educated and a prince of Egypt. For many it was time to write the book! Yet any account of the life of Moses would have been incomplete if it stopped at his great successes in Egypt. The full truth of Moses' greatness was not in Egypt but in the wilderness. To know the real Moses we must see him in the wilderness and on Mt. Sinai. We must get the rest of the story! The rest of history showed God had even greater works in store for Moses! Likewise, if we think we have reached a terminal level of success...think again!

That is why Paul reminded the Corinthians in 1 Corinthians 2:9 "But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

FAILURES: There are many who perceive their failures as terminal points. These moments mark the times in which they have endured a major setback. Sometimes business failure is seen as a terminal point. Bankruptcy, which marks the collapse of our personal fortunes is seen as another. Divorce, which marks the dissolution of a marriage is also viewed as a terminal point. Loss of a job or career opportunity is often viewed as a terminal experience. Moral indiscretions have sunk many to low points. There are many who have had their opportunities aborted by the tricks and plots of others, closing many doors for them. In such instances is it time to write the book? Is that the end of the story?

Joseph was a young man who enjoyed great successes in his family circle. A dreamer, he often dreamed of being great and powerful earning the allegiance and obedience of his brothers. He enjoyed the favor of his father until his brothers plotted to destroy him and threw him in a pit.

The view from the pit is often gloomy! All Joseph could see was imminent death, a tragic end to what could have been a wonderful experience! Was it time to write the book? If so, it would have missed the greatest part of his story. It would have shown us how Joseph was moved from a pit to a prison and finally to a palace!

When we experience failures, the view from the pit often makes us consider throwing in the towel. The view from the pit can be heart wrenching! It prompts considerable soul searching. That was the case with David when he sunk to a low point because of his sin with Bathsheba. But in his searching he found God. When he found God he then realized that it wasn't time to write the book!

Are there any among us that have reached such a point in life? Are there times when we think it is all over? Have we literally hit the bottom? Is it time to write the book? Probably not. If the biblical record gives us an accurate picture, the world should wait around for the rest of the story!

SICKNESS: Sickness is often viewed as a terminal point. Many who are diagnosed with terminal diseases or crippled in accidents seem to think they have reached a terminal point. Cancer, AIDS, Sickle Cell, Heart Disease and other life threatening diseases have taken many lives. Many, once they are diagnosed with usually terminal diseases think they have reached the end. Yet is it time to write the book? There are literally thousands who have added additional chapters to their life's book as they showed courage in the face of sickness. Many lived to tell the story of their victory. Others took their tragedy as an opportunity to champion the cause.

Christopher Reeves is known to most in this generation as "Superman" in the movies. But since he was crippled in an accident he still lives an active life and is directing movies. Teddy Pendergrass is confined to a wheelchair after an automobile accident but some argue that his best singing years have come after the accident.

There are literally thousands that have won their battles with sickness. They have overcome cancer! They have walked away from deathbeds. They have defied doctors and modern medicine!

Job suffered such an affliction. He was ill, broke and sick. Though his friends and even his wife tried to get him to give up.. He decided to wait around for the rest of the story! I can hear him declare in Job 14:14 " all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come."

Job said I will wait for the rest of the story!

The rest of the story showed how God healed his body!

The rest of the story showed how his family finances were restored even greater than before!

The rest of the story showed him with a greater and larger family!

Hezekiah shared a similar situation. Though given his death sentence, he turned his face to the wall and asked God for 15 more years. We can't tell Hezekiah's story, without the rest of the story!

If we experience a sickness it may be a terminal point, but it's not the whole story. We must wait around for the rest of the story!

The Rest of the Story!

Anyone who attempts to tell our story, must tell the whole story. Truth is only valid in the context of completeness. We can't talk about the man or woman we once knew trying to accurately describe a person until we tell what they became after they met the Lord!

Saul's full story can't be told in the context of his life as Saul. We need the rest of the story!

The woman at the well can't be accurately described by simply saying she was an adulterer who had five husbands. We must get the rest of the story!

We can't accurately describe Mary Magdalene by saying she was a woman possessed by demons. We must get the rest of the story!

Our lives before Christ would make interesting reading, but those who study us must be sure to get the rest of the story!

Something happened in our lives when we met the Lord! What happened changed our story!

Before we met the Lord we were:

—Immoral and Immodest; Lukewarm lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God

—Worldly, Wicked and Wayward; Profane, Proud and Perverted

—Troublemakers, thieves and traitors; Unjust, unholy and unfaithful

Be sure to tell the rest of the story!

When I met the Lord I got another story to tell! It's a story of God's love. Because "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore, very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more, but the master of the sin her my despairing cry. From the waters lifted me, now safe am I. Love lifted me! Love lifted me! When nothing else could help! Love lifted me!

I love to tell the whole story of God's love for me!

That story doesn't stop at Bethlehem or Nazareth, we must get the rest of the story!

That story doesn't stop with the healing of 5,000 or turning water to wine. We must get the rest of the story!

That story doesn't stop with the raising of Lazarus from the dead. We must get the rest of the story!

That story doesn't stop at Calvary. Important as it is, we must get the rest of the story!

That story doesn't even stop Sunday morning, when he arose from the dead!

The rest of the story is that he's coming back again!

I want to be ready when they crown him king of kings and Lord of Lords!

I want to be ready when he comes!

Searching for Heaven's Gate

A sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 6, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." John 14:6

Introduction

Have you ever had a door slammed in your face? On occasion most of us have had an experience in which doors of opportunity were closed in our faces. It may have been a job opportunity. It might have been an important career achievement opportunity. It may have even been a romantic venture that simply fizzled. Sometimes doors are closed because we are rejected. At other times doors are closed because we failed to act or acted too slowly. Sometimes doors are slammed because we simply knocked on the wrong door. We spend much of our time searching for the right doors to enter and find it completely frustrating that once we find the right one, it is closed in our face.

The world was shocked at the news that 39 people in California committed suicide last month as they postured themselves to be beamed aboard a space ship from heaven that accompanied the comet Hale-bob. The Heaven's Gate cult believed that this planet was cultured by God and humans, like plants were designed to grow and mature until they reach a point of full bloom. Jesus was a representative of the higher being who came to show humans how to align themselves to go back to the higher level once they reached a point of spiritual maturity. At that point God, called the higher level, would come to pluck specimens from his garden to take back with him to heaven. They believed there was only one window of opportunity to make it through "Heaven's Gate" in this life. The comet was their sign. They prepared themselves for their journey and waited to be beamed up to the next level. The space ship never came, but death did.

There are many people who are searching for the window of opportunity to make it to heaven. While the members of the cult were an extreme example, there are nevertheless millions who are searching for their window of opportunity unsuccessfully. While some are searching, others want to find it but are looking in the wrong places.

As Christians, we know there is only one door to heaven which is through Christ. We know the way and we know it is true. It won't be a space ship that beams us up to glory, but we will be caught up to meet him in the sky, in the twinkling of an eye.

Looking for Heaven's Gate? Find Jesus. He is the way!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains his approaching departure, soothe the troubled hearts of his disciples.

The disciples were troubled about the prospect of Christ leaving, which he had announced in John 13:33. There he told them that where he went they would not be able to follow. That, coupled with the news that he would be betrayed, disturbed them. Those events prompted the words of John 14:1 "Let not your hearts be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me." He assures them that he must leave and explains to them the reason for his departure.

The manner of his leaving would create a gateway through which all believers would be able to follow him to the realm of God. It would be the only true way that would lead them to heaven.

In John 14 Christ gives believers five reasons He must leave them:

TO PREPARE THEIR HEAVENLY HOME (1-6) He would leave them to prepare for them a place in the home of the father. The father's house is large and grandeur, even large enough for all of believers to have mansions. Since the father would be present himself it would be more than simply a house, the presence of the father would make it a heavenly home. The heavenly home would provide "Mansions" or residences for every believer.

TO HELP THEM KNOW THE FATHER (7-11): Phillip, who always wanted to "see" to believe, is reminded that seeing Christ is the same as seeing the father. Christ provides believers with the ability to truly know the father by knowing him. The way to know that he is God is to consider the nature of his works: John 14:11 "Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very works' sake."

TO GIVE THEM ACCESS THROUGH PRAYER (12-14): In leaving, Christ grants every believer the capacity to pray to God, in his name and expect an answer to their prayer. The great works they witnessed in acts and even more miraculous deeds would be possible through prayer in his name. John 14:13 "And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son."

TO SEND THE HOLY SPIRIT (15-26): In leaving, Christ would send them the Holy Spirit to serve as a "comforting" presence. The Holy Spirit would be the great comforter. John 14:18 "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you."

TO BRING THEM PEACE (27-31): The troubled disciples would find that Christ offers those who followed him peace of mind and spirit. John 14:27 "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

As the way, the truth and the life, Christ therefore becomes the only way into the marvelous presence of God, the only way to receive granted prayers, the only way to assure the presence of the Holy Spirit and to bring peace into troubled hearts.

Walking In the Way

Today there are many believers who are troubled spiritually. They are seeking assurances that they are going in the right direction, following the right religion and thus aligning themselves to receive the great blessings of divine grace.

Thomas followed Christ for three years but was unsure who Christ was or whether he was walking in the way. On at least three occasions Thomas exhibited doubt: at Lazarus' resurrection, Christ's resurrection and here. He had been in the presence of Christ and walking in the way himself for three years but did not know it. When Christ explained to him that he knew the way he argued that he did not.

There are many today who share his dilemma. They are walking in the way but do not know it. Many are unsure of their salvation. They are looking for something more. They think the present course is too easy thus they search for what appears to be truth.

Many have run the complete circuit of religious beliefs with a dibble of this and a dab of that. Some have mixed so many beliefs together that they have developed hybrid beliefs that are distant from their present state.

We have begun our journey on the right way. We should stay on that path. What is that way?

WE BELIEVE IN CHRIST: We believe that Jesus is Christ and God raised him from the dead and that he is presently sitting on the right hand of God. We believe he is coming back again. If you believe that, then you going in the right direction.

WE HAVE REPENTED FOR OUR SINS: We have turned from lives as practicing sinners. That was a time when sinned and enjoyed it. Today, we may sin but the Holy Spirit instantly convicts us and we get no real joy from sinful activities. We count on God's grace to forgive us for our shortcomings. If you believe that, then you are going in the right direction.

WE LIVE ORDERED GOD CENTERED LIVES: We live ours lives in accord with the truths of God as we strive to that which is both legal, moral and ethically advisable as we conduct our daily activities. If we are practicing this, then we are going in the right direction!

WE WORSHIP GOD REGULARLY AND STUDY HIS WORD: We regularly assemble with other saints to worship God publicly. We praise him for his goodness. We also make time to study his word with the Saints and in our private devotions so we may know him better. If you are practicing this, then you are going in the right direction!

WE WITNESS FOR HIM BY OUR SERVICE TO OTHERS: We show the love of God to the poor, needy and distressed by our actions and deeds. We feed the hungry, console the wounded, assist those in despair and work to show the love of God in the daily lives of mankind. If we are practicing this, then we are going in the right direction!

Keep Your Life Open to God

The key to finding heaven's gate is to walk in the right way. The key to finding the right way is to follow Jesus.

A woman who was known for her active schedule, often told friends that she rarely had time for bible study or church work because there was too much to do. Her days were filled with so much activity that at the end of each day it was all she could do to make it home and drop off to sleep let alone spend a few minutes reading her bible.

In a period of one week a strange thing happened to her. Each night as she dozed off she dreamed that she saw the beautiful gates of heaven. They were huge, all 12 of them, made out of single pearls. She saw people standing in line, filing into the heavenly city. She saw herself rushing to get in the line, stopping to grab a bite to eat, then attending a quick meeting, but each time she made it to the gate it was closed.

Night after night she dreamed the same dream. Each night the door closed. Troubled, she opened her bible and began to read the words of Jesus "...but ye come by me." With her bible across her chest she dozed off to sleep. This time she sees the line again. She stood patiently in line. She wasn't in a hurry. Her thoughts were on the words "but ye come by me." When she reached the front of the line she waltzed through. Puzzled she asked her minister to explain the meaning of her two dreams.

The minister smiled and answered her very quickly "It appears obvious my dear. The gates of heaven will not close if you keep your life open to God."

Those who want to make it through heaven's gate must walk the path of the straight and narrow!

Those who want to make it through heaven's gate must be willing to:
—FOLLOW the will of God for their lives; INVOLVE themselves in the work of God
—REJOICE in the greatness of God;STUDY workings of God among men!

There is a highway that leads to heaven. It is paved with grace and mercy!

There is a road that leads to eternity. It meanders through peaceful ways!

There is a gateway that leads to God's domain, but those who step through must have a peaceful heart.

There is a path that leads to the beauties and fragrances of the King's garden.

There is a window through which we can see beams from the holy city. No wonder the song writer declared: "Beams of heaven as I go, through this wilderness below. Guide my steps in peaceful ways, turn my midnights into days."

There is a threshold over which we can cross and enter into the blessed presence of the Lord.

If you want to know how to get there, listen to the words of Jesus "I am the way!"

I am the way! This world offers you gloom. But I'm preparing a place where gloom becomes glory!

I am the way! This world offers you problems; but I'm going to a place where problems become peace!

I am the way! This world offers you tribulation; but I'm going to a place where tribulations become jubilations!

I am the way! This world offers you earthly fears; but I'm going to a place where earthly fears become heavenly fellowship!

I am the way! This world offers you darkness; but I'm going to a place where earthly darkness is transformed into the marvelous light!

This way began in the battlements of heaven!

This way walked a meandering path through the hills of Galilee!

This way cut a blood soaked path up Golgotha's hill!

This way leads to an empty tomb one Sunday morning!

If you are looking for the way: Come and go with me to my father's house!

In my father's house there is peace and happiness!

In my father's house there is joy, joy, joy!

It Will Not Return Empty

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe,La.

April 13, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it. Isaiah 55:11

Introduction

Have you ever gone shopping for a special item only to return empty handed? What was the reason? Sometimes we had difficulty finding the item. Sometimes we found it but we did not have enough money to make the purchase. There were even times when we simply forgot what we went to buy! Returning empty handed is a sign that something went wrong somewhere! Returning empty handed is even more frustrating to those with high expectations. The more we expect to receive the deeper our disappointment when we see empty hands.

Sometimes we are warned not to come home without an item. Consider the country boy and the box of snuff. The country boy was told by his grandmother to walk up the road a piece and get her a box of Bitter Garrett Snuff, with two dots. It was a long walk to the country store and Grandma's box of snuff was running low. She gave the boy a stern warning, "You get that snuff boy, you hear? Don't you come home empty handed!" The boy made the long walk to the country store but was filled with fear when the store keeper told him that he had sold the last box a few minutes earlier. "What am I going to do?" He thought. Grandma would be furious. Remembering her words "Don't come home empty handed!" He walked five miles to a country store down by the creek. However, they were out too. With nowhere else to go, the youth walked home trembling and shaking. Just before he reached his grandmother's porch at sundown he walked over to the hedges and pulled a handful of hedge limbs and trimmed them. When he told his grandma there was no snuff she was furious. Before she could say another word he pulled out a handful of hedge limbs and gave it to her? "What is this?" She asked. "Well you told me not to come back empty handed and I could not find your snuff. So before you tell me to go and get you a switch I bought you a hand full! The grandma was so tickled she said "I ain't gon whip you this time, at least you didn't come back empty handed!"

What about God? Is He like us? Are there ever times when his promises come back empty and unfulfilled. Does God ever make us promises that he cannot keep? Does his word ever return to him empty handed?

As Christians we have the assurance that God's word is true. If God has promised us either a blessing or a punishment, it will happen. His word will not return to him empty handed. No matter where we are or what we are doing, the grace of God will find us. If God has promised it to us, we receive it! If he has forbidden us for having it, there is nothing we can do to obtain it. One old timer summed it up this way, "God's word won't "git" until we "got" what we are suppose to get!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah as he explains that promises made by God will be fulfilled.

In Isaiah 54 the Word of God made striking promises to Israel. Among these great promises was the prospect that God would bless them bountifully. They were encouraged to enlarge their boundaries in expectation of the great wonders God would perform. After describing Israel as barren (54:1). Israel is told to enlarge "the place of thy tent" or its boundaries in (v2) because blessings were on the way. It was promised that they would break forth on the right and left and build great cities for the Lord, rising out of the ashes of desolation.

After the 54th chapter presented a litany of promises by God, the 55th chapter begins with an invitation to everyone that has a "thirst" for righteousness to come before God's presence (55:1) Many are making futile efforts to build godless lives that will reward them little. Thus the prophet asks in verse 2 "wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread?" Why do you labor for that which does not satisfy? The appeal is made to Israel: "Incline your ear and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David." (V3) God appealed to all to end their merry-go-round experience and come to him with the promise that he would provide for their needs and shower them with the blessing of happiness as well as peace of mind and soul.

Yet he warns that those who seek him should take advantage of the opportunity while it exists. Verse six says, "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near." In essence they were challenged to take God's offer seriously and respond to it quickly."

The mystery of God's ways often confuses men who cannot understand the correlation between God's promises and the events of the earth. It appears to some that the promises are made but the results are not immediately seen. In verse 8 God explains it by saying "my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways" God's way of moving and acting is too lofty for us to comprehend. It is deep. It may even seem at times that what God has promised is impractical and improbable to occur, yet believers are encouraged to remember just how God operates.

The example that God gave Isaiah for Israel was that of the rain and snow. The rains and snow fall from heaven. Sometimes when they come they may be perceived differently by those upon whom they fall, depending upon their expectations.

Regardless to how they are perceived or received by humankind, they do not return to God in the same state. After having accomplished their work rain drops may vaporize and float back toward heaven but the rain drop itself does not return to God without accomplishing its purpose.

This is the example that God gave to Israel to illustrate how his Word works. If God has made a promise it goes out like rain drops from heaven. How it is received does not matter, but it will be fully realized. When God promised Noah that it would flood, the people mocked at the idea. Yet Noah, confident that God's word was true, acted upon the word of God and was saved. Even though the masses did not receive the Word, it did not return to God void. There was a flood.

Thus Israel was encouraged to know that God has promised a day of triumph for the people. His word would not return to him empty. They are encouraged to believe it and receive it.

Isaiah's message to Israel said in brief, "God has sent you a blessing, it may appear unlikely at the moment, but the blessing will not return to God undelivered.!"

Will My Blessing Ever Get Here?

There are many people today who are frustrated because they feel they are not receiving the blessings they should receive from God. When blessings seem to evade you, is there a reason? Consider the little girl who attended a church sponsored balloon release. The church decided to get the word of God to the dispirited by putting scripture verses in helium filled balloons and releasing them. As persons found the balloons and read the word of God they would be given hope. As they released the balloons, the little girl saw a single pink one and tried to get it but it dangled just above her head. She chased after it through the park but it always dangled just above her head. Finally it entangled on an electric wire and she scrambled up a nearby tree to reach for it. In hysterics her mother screamed and called her down. As the little girl began to cry in disappointment, another balloon drifted right into her hand. She opened it and read the note: "Thy soul shall be blessed..." She was happy. She wondered what the note in the pink one said. Little did she know that a devilish youth had written the verse "this day thy soul she be required of thee.." on the note and put it in the pink balloon. Had she actually climbed the tree and retrieved the balloon from power line she would have died. It was above her reach for a purpose.

There are many today who are frustrated that the blessing they seek seems to evade them. Often we even get angry with God because we can't seem to get what we want. We criticize him and doubt him because the "string" seems to dangle just above our heads. Why can't we reach it?

Those who live under the influence of the Holy Spirit know why they can't achieve certain blessings. God leads them away from certain pitfalls. The believer's prayer is "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." The pink balloon, being the most beautiful and attractive is tempting, but often it may carry with it certain unseen dangers of which we are not aware. The Holy Spirit moves us in such a way that we always get to the pink balloon too late.

What's your pink balloon? Are you single trying to find Mr. Wonderful? Miss Perfect? Are you seeking a great career opportunity that could mean riches? Is it a great promotion on the job? A position on the school team? If it has constantly evaded you, there is a possibility that it might require your soul to possess it! Getting it may cause you to lose the one trait that made you worthy to receive it, your relationship with God. That may be why your balloon never falls within your grasp.

Moreover, Christians know that whenever an opportunity evades us there is another opportunity that is heading our way. How do we know this is true? Because the word of God says: Rom 8:28 "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." God has said and his word will not return unto him empty handed. If a door is closed for us, another will be opened. If we encounter a bad experience, it will work out to our advantage. We know it because the Word of God has declared it and God's word will not return to him empty!

It shall achieve its purpose

Finally we must consider that Isaiah told Israel that God's word would accomplish its purpose. It would achieve its intended end. The word, once spoken by God is inalterable. If God has said it, it will be done! It will not return to him empty!

God spoke this world into existence with both a purpose and a plan!

In answer to many of our own prayers God has given his word that it would be done! His word will not return to him void.

When God, through Moses told Pharaoh that certain plagues would come upon Egypt, though it seems impossible, God's word did not return empty. It was done.

When God told Joshua to cross the river Jordan and the waters would roll back, God's word did not return empty it was done!

When the children of Israel marched around Jericho seven times, it seemed a foolish thing, but God said it, and the walls came tumbling down!

When Abraham was told that he would have a child at the age of 100, he and his wife both laughed, but God's word did not return empty it was done!

When Elijah told Jezebel and Ahab that the skies would not see rain, they laughed, but God said it, His word did not return empty and it was done!

When God says it, it may seem impossible to us. It may seem illogical. It may seem improbable, but it will be done!

Those who are obedient to God's word should get ready for a down pour. Don't expect a shower! Get ready for a storm of blessings!

Two little boys were on their way to the Black Heritage parade. One little boy had a little small paper bag and the other had a huge shopping bag. Asked why they brought along bags of different sizes, the first boy said he knew he was little and expected only to get a few pieces of candy. The boy said he heard that every float would be throwing out candy. He felt because he was little he would get a lot so he brought along a shopping bag.

Brothers and sister when God sends a blessing, because you are child of God bring your shopping bag!

God has sent his word of:

—ENDURANCE in the midst of adversity and his word will not return empty!

—PATIENCE in the midst of problems and his word will not return empty!

—SUPPORT in the midst of suffering and his word will not return empty!

—HOPE in the midst of hardships and his word will not return empty!

—COMFORT in the midst of confusion and his word will not return empty!

—RELIEF in the midst of our misery and his word will not return empty!

No wonder the Psalmist said in Psalm 119:105 " Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

Brothers and Sisters the world pleaded for a redeemer to save it from its sins!

Then God, in John 1:14, sent the word to dwell with men.

God did not send the word for him to come back empty handed!

Don't come back until you have shown men the way!

Don't come back until you have prepared the way of salvation!

Don't come back until you have atoned for their sins!

Don't come back until you laid the true foundation!

When Jesus died on Calvary he was on his way back to God!

But he didn't go back empty handed!

He went back with his mission accomplished!

For arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

All In The Family

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 20, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "And if it seem evil unto you to serve the LORD, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD." Joshua 24:15

Introduction

How do the members of your family relate to you? Do you feel loved? Do you feel appreciated? Is your presence welcomed or would everyone be happier if you left? If you could not do what you do, what would be their response to you? Many are struggling to find their respective places in the family circle. Some are the family's pride and joy. Others are the black sheep. There are even times when the best persons feel that no one in the family cares about them. Occasionally everyone reaches a low point in which they yearn for understanding and support. Many expect those distant from them to be unconcerned, but they have difficulty accepting the fact that sometimes members of their own family are among those that give them the cold shoulder. Some feel so distant from members of their own family that if they were starving and had to ask certain family members for help or perish, they would rather die!

A hit television program of the 1970's and 80's was entitled "All In The Family." It featured a family headed by Archie and Edith Bunker along with a hippie son-in-law and a daughter whose elevator did not always appear to go to the top. The strange mix of ultra conservatism and liberalism under the same roof gave plenty of room for comedy as the program remained a hit for years. When the show went off the air, the Smithsonian Institute took Archie Bunker's chair and enshrined it in the National Museum.

Being a part of the family despite one's views or persuasions is important. There are some that are even unsure of their position in the family. That was the situation when the worrisome son caused many problems for the family. At school they always called him to the office. He always stayed in fights. He was sassy and showered insults on all of those around him. One day as family members discussed him, a younger sister asked their grandmother, "Grandma, do you think Jesus loves Billy Joe?" Grandma smiled and leaned back in her rocker. She said "Of course child. Jesus loves every body?" The little girl asked, "even if when he gets suspended from school?" She continued, "Even when he says ugly things?" Grandmother defended Little Billy Joe. She said God loves all his children. Just then Billy Joe threw a rock at one of his brothers and missed. The rock flew past grandma's head and broke out the big picture window. Grandma looked at the broken glass and said, "But then, Jesus don't know Billy Joe like we do!"

Some of us have trouble being loved in our families because our families know too much about us to love us!

Fortunately for us God knows more about us than we know about ourselves and chooses to love us despite what he knows. We are part of the family of God and he loves us one and all. He is not happy about our shortcomings, but loves us anyway. Everyone in the family of God does not have the same level of maturity, talent, or spiritual strength. God knows that! That's why he loves us anyway and takes us all in the family.

As Christians, we continually praise God for taking us all into the family. He has helped us in the past and we have chosen to give him first place today. In the family of God we are not outsiders because he loves us one and all. He loves us and we love him.

Exposition

This text considers Joshua as he speaks to Israel about the importance of each family remaining loyal to God.

In previous chapters Joshua, now growing old, summoned the heads of the great families of Israel together to talk with them concerning their allegiance to God in the new land. In the new land new forms of worship surrounded them, challenging their faith. It was important that their faith in God would not depend upon the presence of a national hero figure to inspire them to allegiance. Each family should teach the principles of godliness to their children and to each succeeding generation.

In the 15th chapter therefore, Joshua summoned the leaders and "rehearsed" to them the great deeds that God has done for the people. He recounted the mighty works of God. He recounted the powerful deliverance of the people from slavery, their journey through the wilderness, their receipt of bread from heaven, the crossing of Jordan and many other miraculous acts that God has done in their lives. He warned however, that even with these great deeds as a witness to God's magnificence there were some who chose to worship idols both in Egypt and in the wilderness.

Now, in a land surrounded by Ammorites and others whose ungodly practices could influence a new generation of Israelites away from God, Joshua calls the leaders of the great clans of Israel together and urges each family clan or tribe to remain faithful to God. If, after a review of God's service to them they discover that God has not provided for their needs or has neglected their care, then they should not follow him. However, if they find that God has truly been the one true God of Israel then they should abandon all others and follow him.

Joshua concluded that his "house" which is "bayith" in Hebrew, would serve the Lord. His House referred not only to his household but "bayith" referred to his extended family or his clan or tribe as well. His clan included his immediate household, his parents grandparents, in-laws, and others who have become a part of his family by law or tradition. All of these were referred to when Joshua spoke of "my house."

He said "my house" will serve the Lord. That could be almost be assured if the heads of the family units within the clan have decided that the households within their influence would be directed toward God. The decision to follow God had to be made by the leaders of Israel's 13 clans. Joshua had already spoken for one family. The others had to follow in their decision to trust God.

Joshua called upon family leaders to encourage the fear of God in their clans. He challenged them to insist that their clan members give their allegiance to God and him alone, despite the fact that some of their fathers may have worshiped idols even while receiving blessings from God.

Keeping The Family

Today, the dissolution of the family frustrates the African-American community as we have historically known it. Greatly influenced by secular idealism many African-Americans have distanced themselves from their family network and in many cases from their loyalty and devotion to God as well.

The family, in its purest sense, is nuclear in that it has one or more persons related by blood or law under the leadership of a governor which may be a mother, father or other authority figure, all living in the same household. The governor of the household is the primary support of the household, enforces the rules and influences the tone of the life-style and spirituality that will be practiced by household members.

As members of a household mature and begin their own households the sense of family exists only to the point that they are connected to their base household for: emotional support, fellowship, financial support and moral guidance. To the extent that either of these four diminishes, the sense of family also declines. To the extent that the base household provides these three, the sense of family intensifies.

The extended family or clan consists of many households, generally influenced by one dominant personality who generally works to keep the family together by orchestrating ways to provide emotional support, fellowship and financial support for other family members. The family revolves around the base household. From it evolves family reunion, outings, weddings, celebrations and memorials. The base household is what other family members refer to as "home" no matter where they may live in the nation.

There is a direct relationship between strong families and the level of interdependence among them. Households that are independent from others in their extended family tend to be less influenced by family tradition, standards or religious beliefs. Since they are not being supported in any of the three major ways, such households tend to set their own course, generally in a different direction than that of their traditional family.

If the African-American family is in trouble it is not because of the problems that exist outside of the family but because families have allowed the four principles that build strong families to decline, weakening their ability to inoculate family members against the secular influences.

EMOTIONAL SUPPORT: Is what families offer members who are frustrated, depressed, fearful, confused or otherwise emotionally barren. When there is death, sickness or crippling disease in the family ranks, family members rally to support its members for whatever length of time it takes to overcome. The need for emotional support is a link that keeps many tied to their families.

FELLOWSHIP: Is what families provide for its members. It promotes the achievements of family members. It joins in the great celebrations of family members such as weddings, house warmings, baby showers, etc. It promotes reunions, outings and other festive activities among family members. The support received from the family for such occasions is an important link that builds strong families.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT: Is what families give to other family members who are in a financial crises. In addition the family provides assistance in financial planning, investment and management of resources. Families help other family members with education, maintenance of the elderly and infirmed and with the burying of the dead. The support received from the family for such occasions is an important link that builds strong families.

MORAL GUIDANCE: Sense of purpose, morality and direction that families offer individuals. The family, in private, will reprimand a member that has erred while putting forth its best effort to make the best of the situation in public. The Godly family encourages respect for God, worship, prayer and a life based on the moral principles of the bible. Thus the family promotes worship attendance, bible learning activities and others that will help member develop a sense of morality. Families that receive support from their families in making morally correct choices are forever indebted to their families and indivisibly linked to them in this respect.

There is a reciprocal element as well. Families tend to respond to a family member to the degree that a specific member has responded. Those who have given help, generally get help in times of trouble. Those who share in celebrations of others generally enjoy family reciprocity. Families, as a general rule, tend to respond to members in proportion to the individual's history of response to others.

Serving The Lord

Joshua's influence in his family was based upon his role as the primary provider of support and guidance for his clan. He could say "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord" because he knew that all in his family would be influenced by his direction.

Today, every head of a household should rise to repeat Joshua's decision. "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord."

Every God fearing family leader should insist that its younger members be trained in the way of the Lord by precept and example. Household leaders have the obligation to provide moral direction and religious training to their children.

We will serve the Lord because, if we don't serve the Lord our;

—LIFE has no purpose; QUESTIONS have no answers;

—PROBLEMS have no solution; LONLINESS has no comfort!

—PRAYER has no authority; PREACHERS have no message!

—LOVE has no meaning; LABOR has no reward!

Regardless of the situation the family must resolve that, "we will serve the Lord!"

We will serve the Lord because, in our time of trouble he has been our shelter in the storm

We will serve the Lord because, in our time of:

—Sorrow, he turned our gloom into glory;

—Weakness, he turned our weakness into strength

—Burdens, he took our burdens and made them light;

— Pain he took our sorrow and turned it into joy!

—Heartaches, he took our heartaches and turned them into hallelujahs!;

— Misery, he took our misery and turn them in the miracles!

—Sickness, he took our sickness and turn it into healing!

We will serve the Lord because he —Supports me, when I'm emotionally in trouble!

—Brings me the joy of his fellowship!

—Pours out blessings upon me financially and otherwise

—He gives me moral direction!

I will trust in the Lord because he first loved me!

He loved me enough to die out on Calvary!

Yet after three days and nights he loved me enough to rise from the grave with all power in his hands!

"I will trust in the Lord!"

"I will trust in the Lord until I die!

SCRIPTURE: "When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also." 2 Timothy 1:5

Introduction

Has there been anyone who made a lasting impression upon you? Those whose influence upon us lingers are those who have made in impact upon the direction of our lives. Sometimes these include teachers, coaches, close friends, political leaders and co-workers. Among those who have impressed us the most are our mothers. More than any single person, a mother leaves a lasting impression, for better or worse, upon a child. It is one that he or she never forgets throughout the course of life.

There is no doubt that mothers make an indelible impression upon their children. In fact, full grown men and women still find themselves repeating the basic rudiments of life they learned at their mother's knee. Consider the country mother who had 13 children. All of her children seemed to be a happy lot except child number 13. She was careful of her youngest and last son. She sheltered him and protected him. Yet no matter how she showered affection upon him he still seemed distant from the other twelve. One day, he was playing outside and came in dirty from head to toe and took his place at the dinner table. Instantly the mother went into a rage. She picked up a shoe and threw it at him, saying "If I've told you once I've told you a thousand times, never come to dinner without washing!" The boy ran into the bathroom but when he returned he was filled with smiles. There was a hickey on his head but he was smiling. He had been hit with a shoe but he was smiling. In fact he smiled all the week. Finally the mother asked him why he was suddenly all smiles. He said "When Joey got in a fight, you moled him on the head. When Alice took cookies from the jar your slapped her fingers with a ruler. When Jacob broke the window, you threw a pie pan at him. They all talked and laughed about the things you threw at them. All you ever did to me was hug me. When you hit me with that shoe, I knew I was loved just like all the others. I'll never forget that day all my life!" Mother had left her mark.

Good mothers leave their mark upon their children in a variety of ways that are often least expected. Mother's have ways of leaving marks through their wise proverbs:

"A penny saved is a penny earned."; "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."; "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush!" They leave their marks through their willingness to give of themselves to support their children. The fondest memories that most have of good mothers involve instances in which mothers have sacrificed their personal pleasures for their children. They leave their marks by their the level of devotion they show to God. God fearing mothers leave pious impressions on their children. Whether or not the children adopt the same level of piety as their mother, the importance of conformity to some creed is given as their children observe them and their actions make impressions upon them that last throughout all their lives.

As Christians, we thank God for good mothers because mothers write on the hearts of their children that which the world can't erase. Good mothers write messages of love, godliness and humility that once ingrained in the spirit can never be erased. Good mothers pass their love for God to their children and grandchildren who proudly display their "mother's mark."

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes to Timothy attesting to the faith that he has seen in him that he once saw in both his mother and grandmother.

Paul yearned to see Timothy and he was proud of him for the display of what he described as "unfeigned faith." Faith such as that displayed by Timothy did not develop immediately. According to Paul, this great quality appeared to be a family quality. It was reflected in his mother Eunice and his grandmother Lois.

It is generally believed that Paul met both Lois and Eunice in his first missionary journey. Obviously he knew them because he referred to them by name. He knew enough about both of them to recognize their characteristics and values as they were reflected in Timothy. What made them unique was their unwavering faith. Their faith was described as firm. An unfeigned faith will stand the trial, and it dwells in them as a living principle. Thus pious women may take encouragement from the success of Lois and Eunice with Timothy, who proved so excellent and useful a minister because of the mark left on him by both his mother and grandmother.

. Some of the most worthy and valuable servants in the faith have had to bless God for early religious impressions made upon their minds by the teaching of their mothers or other Christian relatives. Such was the case with Timothy. He was raised in the midst of God fearing parents and grandparents. When the opportunity came to become Christians they responded to the claim.

It was customary in Jewish homes for children to be taught the scriptures. It was a matter of obedience to the law. In Deuteronomy 6:7 the law states, "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." Thus, teaching the law was not unique, it was expected to be drilled into every youth.

However, obedience to the law did not always translate into faith. Faith was derived through a combination of instruction and practical application. The law required the instruction, however the law could not prescribe faith. A child that learned faith learned it from observing the adults that surrounded him as they responded to real life situations and from his or her own life experiences.

The great mark that both Lois and Eunice left on Timothy was his intense faith and trust in God. It was described as "unfeigned" and unwavering. Persons who had dealings with Timothy immediately recognized the mark of his mother and grandmother on his personality. In the same manner, the faithful and prayerful Hannah left her mark of trust in God and respect for her word on her son Samuel whose life was so spiritually impressed that God called him for service as a prophet. The mark of his faithful mother was reflected through his entire life. It was a mark of faith and service to God.

Timothy's mark was that of his mother's. However, their mark was one that was placed upon them by God through exposure to the Gospel message.

Mother's Marks

Mother's leave their marks on their children in a variety of ways, often unintended.

AN INDICATOR OF CHARACTER: A person who marks someone leaves a permanent impression on that person's character. In a child's impressionable years, it is generally the mother whose character is etched into the soul and spirit of her children. Mother's principles, values and standards are assimilated by her children and while they may not be identical, will be reflected generally in their orientation in life. A mother who drinks, gambles or smokes will find it extremely difficult for her example not to be emulated by her children. She has set the standard by her action. Some of her habits will be adopted or at the very least tolerated by her children. At the same, a mother who strives to live the godly life, do the right thing and achieve high standards also leaves an impression on the character of their children. Her example is a guide for them to follow.

A SENSE OF IDENTITY: A person's mark is the unique lettering of figure that identifies him. Mothers give their children a sense of identity and belonging. Good mothers teach their children the importance of individual expression. No two children are alike. Every child must grow to know that individual achievement is not dependent upon his or her being a clone of other members of the family. Knowing one's ability and direction is one of the first steps to success. Good mothers work hard to help each of their children to develop a sense of individualism while nurturing a respect for the cooperative spirit at the same time.

Developing a knowledge of oneself as a heir to the kingdom of God, for example, helps us to know exactly who we are. If we are outside of God's family our expectations are minimal but since we perceive of ourselves as heirs, according to the Word of God, then our behavior and expectations differ. That's what Paul told the Galatians in, Galatians 4:7 "Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." That's why mother's diligently seek children to know who they are and what is expected of them accordingly.

SETTING OF GOALS: A mark is an indicator of a goal to achieve. Good mothers strive to inspire their children to reach admirable goals. They promote, inspire and help to motivate their children to achieve goals. Solomon's mother constantly worked to help her son become king of Israel even though he wasn't the likely successor. She used her influence to help him and persuaded Solomon that the throne was his destiny. Mothers accomplish this end by helping their children discover their talents and skills and by helping them to perfect their gifts.

EVIDENCE OF PRESENCE: A mark is an evidence of presence. Good mother's teach their children to make their lives useful and meaningful such that their existence makes a difference. By their example they lend themselves to charitable causes, assisting neighbors in need and working hard to be a positive influence in efforts to improve social conditions. The good mother's willingness to feed the hungry or show kindness to others not of her own family, leaves a mark upon her own children. It instills an appreciation for the same value in them. Thus many youth leave home determined to "make their mark" in life or to do something significant enough to have made a change in the quality of life of the world they touch. Like mother, their motto becomes, "If I can help somebody as I pass along, then my living shall not be in vain."

LIMIT OF ACTION: A mark is also a limit or a standard of action. Even in adulthood many find themselves still operating within the limits set by their mothers. Good mothers teach their children to limit their actions within the bounds of respectability. Moderation and temperance in all matters is essential to every good mother's tutorship of their children. They teach their children "when to say yes and when to say no, when to hold on and when to let go." Those lessons taught in childhood and adolescence follow their children all their lives. Thus, each time they are tempted to go astray or to engage in activities beyond their self imposed limits they hear the voice of their mother reminding them to moderate themselves and be temperate.

A Mother's Faith

Mothers leave important marks on their children from physical birth marks to personality traits. However no mark that a mother leaves upon her children is as great as her example of trust in God.

Timothy was influenced by both his mother and grandmother's great faith in God. It reflected in his own life and was evidenced in his own ministry. In a similar manner every child who has had the opportunity to be nurtured in a god fearing home learns to trust in God from his mother. That is a mark she leaves upon her family that will carry them further than the proverbs, education, skills or secular attainment.

The mark of the Christian mother is her willingness to love her children like God loves all of his children.

Max Lucado relates a touching, true story about a mother named Maria and her daughter, Christina. Christina wanted to go to the city. She dreamed of trading her dusty neighborhood for exciting avenues and city life. Just the thought of this horrified Maria. “People don’t know you there,” she said with desperation in her voice. “Jobs are scarce and the life is cruel. And besides, if you went there, what would you do for a living?”

This is what horrified Maria most. Maria knew exactly what Christina would have to do for a living. That’s why her heart broke when she awoke one morning to find her daughter’s bed empty. Christina had gone and Maria knew where. Maria set out immediately to bring her back.

Maria threw some clothes in a bag, gathered up all her money, and ran out of the house. But not before she entered a photograph booth there and spent all the money she could afford on pictures of herself. Maria began her search. Knowing what a girl would have to do to support herself in this cruel city Maria began with the bars, hotels, nightclubs, any place with a reputation for street walkers or prostitutes. She went to them all. And at each place she left her picture-taped on a bathroom mirror, tacked to a hotel bulletin board, fastened to a corner phone booth. And on the back of each photo she wrote a note. It wasn’t too long before both the money and the pictures ran out, and Maria had to go home. She wept as the bus began its long journey back to her small village.

A few weeks later young Christina descended a flight of hotel stairs. “Her young face was tired. Her brown eyes no longer danced with youth but spoke of pain and fear. Her laughter was broken. Her dream had become a nightmare. A thousand times over she had longed to trade these countless beds for her secure pallet. Yet the little village was, in too many ways, too far away. As she reached the bottom of the stairs, her eyes noticed a familiar face. She looked again, and there on the lobby mirror was a small picture of her mother. She walked across the room and removed the small photo. Written on the back was this compelling invitation, “Whatever you have done, whatever you have become, it doesn’t matter. Please come home.” She did.

Mother had left her mark and daughter responded.

Today brothers and sisters we are reminded that God left his mark to a wayward people. He sent his only begotten Son to say to the world “no matter what you have done. Whatever you have become. It doesn’t matter. Come home.”

Jesus left a mark of love upon the world. When he carried the cross to Calvary, he left his mark!

When he died on the cross, he left his mark! When he arose from the dead, he left his mark!

Every day of his life a believer testifies, I’m glad that Jesus left his mark! He left his mark in my heart!

That's Just My Baby's Mama

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:Hosea 2:2 Plead with your mother, plead: for she is not my wife, neither am I her husband: let her therefore put away her whoredoms out of her sight, and her adulteries from between her breasts; Lest I strip her naked, and set her as in the day that she was born, and make her as a wilderness, and set her like a dry land, and slay her with thirst. Hosea 2:2-3; Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her. Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all. Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain: but a woman that feareth the LORD, she shall be praised. Proverbs 31:28-30

Introduction

How do you know whether or not you are a real mother? Are mothers defined by titles, positions or styles of dress? Is every one that births a baby a mother? As our times become faster paced, less personal and sometimes insensitive, it is getting more difficult to define "mother." In the traditional sense mother is not only the one who gives birth but also the one who nurtures and breathes personality, character and direction into the very spirit of an infant. The real mother by that definition is a diminishing presence. Real mothers are giving way to women and children who are giving birth but are leaving the nurturing process to someone else. Those are the ones that can easily be described by the condescending phrase "that's just my baby's mama." She gave birth, but that's all.

The dilemma of our times is graphically depicted in the statistical picture that gives us a snapshot of our cultural orientation. The average age of girls giving birth is getting lower. Each year over 1.1 million girls become pregnant. Nearly 50,000 of the girls that get pregnant are under the age of 14 years old. Statisticians report that trends show that 80 percent of the girls that become pregnant drop out of school and 70 percent end up on welfare. There are even thousands more that resolve their crises by having an abortion. Present trends indicate that mothers are becoming younger with fewer parenting skills themselves. Despite grand attempts, the young mothers, at best are able to provide only marginal assistance to their newborns. Someone else, usually a parent, grandparent or a guardian usually becomes the real "mother" of the offspring. Often the grandparent or guardian find themselves being "mother" to both the baby and its mother at the same time.

As Christians, we know that the real mother reflects values inspired by God. The real mother not only gives birth but nurture. We give him praise and thanks for the experience of having had great women in our lives who were more than "just my baby's mama."

Exposition

This text focuses on the Prophet Hosea as he asks his children to encourage their mother to assume her place as mother and wife in their family.

The people of Israel were estranged from God. Despite the great outpouring of blessings they had received from God, they continually adulterated themselves. Concerned that their frequent involvements with idol gods were an abomination and affront him, God told Hosea to marry a woman of ill repute to symbolize the relationship between the people and God. The people were characterized as an irresponsible mother and wife and Hosea symbolized God's feeling toward the people.

Although married to a famous prophet, Hosea's wife, Gomer, continued to live a wayward life and generally displayed a highly irresponsible and adulterous life-style. Hosea's life was miserable. He played the role of father as well as that of mother. He remained loyal while at the same time begging his wife to come home.

In 2:2 he tells his children to plead with their mother to turn from her wayward ways. She was his wife by law, but not by practice. She was their mother biologically, but she was not acting as their mother. After trying everything else he pleaded for her to assume her rightful place and responsibilities.

Gomer had several children for Hosea. However, she continued to live a life of adultery and spent her time in whoredom. She was married but not a wife. She gave birth but she was not a mother. To her husband she had become "Just my baby's mama."

Proverbs 31 gives striking contrast to the picture painted in Hosea. The picture in Proverbs is just the opposite of that in Hosea. Proverbs shows a woman who is both a wife and mother. She is described as a virtuous woman whose words and deeds are worthy of emulation .

The picture of the virtuous woman is the snapshot of a woman who is more than just "my baby's mama" it is the picture of what a real mother should be.

The real mother is the ideal. She is a loyal and faithful wife to her husband. She is depicted as a person whose devotion to her husband and children is unequalled. She is extolled as an excellent family manager who searches for bargains and tends to the domestic tranquility and prosperity of her home.

She sends both her husband and children out of the home in a way that they will both be honored in the courts of public opinion. Her attention to the fine details of family members earns her both the praise and respect her husband and children. Neither bad weather or bad times catch her off guard, she stands prepared in such a way that her words and deeds bring her respect and continued praise all of her life.

The virtuous woman is far more than simply a "mama" although is what she may be called. Proverbs paints a picture of her as one who is worthy to be praised.

What Mother Is Not

Perhaps the best way to find define a good mother is to take a close look at what a mother is NOT. The contrast of what a mother should be as compared to what she should not be should make the point.

A GOOD MOTHER NURTURES HER YOUNG. The real mother nurtures her children. That means she provides every thing they need to grow strong and wise. This may include food, clothing, shelter, love and time. Food, clothing and shelter are three elements most closely associated with parenting, yet they are not the not the only components to nurture.

Rearing a family without nurture reduces the role of a mother to simply raising children rather nurturing them. One can raise chickens and hogs on a farm. Chickens and hogs need no special nurture only a coop or a pen, a handful of chicken feed or bucket full of slop. Given enough feed or slop either will grow big and fat.

Unfortunately, many of today's mothers have mistakenly feeding and clothing a child for nurture. Simply putting some "feed" on the table or some "slop" in the bowl will not provide nurture for children but it will help them to grow big and fat. Nurture involves two crucial components: time and affection. The real mother gives her children quality time and plenty of affection and attention. When given at the opportune moments, both time and affection produce children who are well rounded.

A GOOD MOTHER DOES NOT GIVE A BAD EXAMPLE: Everyone has a bad habit or two, however the good mother avoids excusing her bad habits as acceptable to her children. There are some mothers who display an array of bad habits before their children. When questioned about them they often dismiss them as trivial or offer empty explanations which seem to suggest that the behavior is acceptable. Good mothers attempt to set an example of moral correctness. Bad language, improper sexual activities, drunkenness and other sinful activities set bad examples for children, who may be likely to emulate their mother's behavior if not guided in a different direction. When mistakes are made, they are admitted and the family's help is solicited to help take corrective action.

A GOOD MOTHER DOES NOT TURN HER BACK ON HER CHILDREN: Good mothers are loving by nature. Their children can always depend upon them for guidance and support. On occasion children make serious mistakes in judgment or fall victims to the scurrilous elements of society. Good mothers demonstrate the ability to love their children while hating their mistakes. Good Mothers love their children, even when they are wrong. That does not mean that they support their wrong doing, but the nevertheless love their children.

A GOOD MOTHER DOES NOT PUT HERSELF BEFORE HER CHILDREN: How often have good mother's neglected themselves in their attempts to help their children. Many have little money to buy themselves new clothes or to improve themselves as they work extra hard to be sure that their children have adequate protection. It is not unusual to look in the closet of a dedicated mother and discover that her shoes have worn heels and her dresses have torn straps. It is not unusual for her purse to be empty and for weeks to pass before she gets her hair done. This is because many mothers who are strapped for cash choose to help their children rather than lavish pleasures upon themselves. Mothers generally think of the welfare of their children before they consider their own. That's why Jesus compared himself to a mother hen and the people of Jerusalem to chicklets. As he sat on the outskirts of Jerusalem he said he would like to gather them under his wing as a mother hen would her chicklets and protect them. Mothers seek the safety of their offspring as they put their own self interest behind those of their children.

What Mother Is

A good mother is more than "just my baby's mama!" A good mother gives her best and then counts on God to take care of the rest.

Every good mother knows that it is extremely difficult, if not impossible, to be a good mother outside of the Lord. There are too many factors in life that mere mortals cannot control that determine every child's outcome. That's why every good mother knows that he or she needs God's help every day and hour.

Thus the question is asked again. "Who is the woman we honor?" She is more than "just my baby's mama!" She is a woman who trusts in the Lord.

Good mothers have found that when you trust in the Lord, he will turn your:

-Hardtimes into good times; Setbacks into leap forwards

-Defeats into success; Failures into victories

-Darkness into light; Weaknesses into strengths!"

Who is this woman? She is the one who has learned that "weeping endures for a night but joy comes in the morning!" She is the one that declares "I know the Lord will answer prayer for I've tried him for myself."

Mother is a woman that has decided to keep her hands in the winding chain and hold on just a little while longer.

Hold on mothers because, Mary's Baby!

Jesus, the fairest of 10,000

Jesus, my rock in a weary land!

Jesus died out on Calvary but he arose after three days!

Hold on mothers, because one of this day's he's coming back again!

When the question is asked "Who are these?" The answer won't be, "that's just my baby's mama" but "These are they that have washed their robes in the blood of the lamb!"

Well Done!

My good and faithful servant..Well Done!

The Lion's Lunch

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 4, 1997

SCRIPTURE "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time: Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you. Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: Whom resist stedfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world. But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you." 1 Peter 5:6-10; And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel: and the king spake and said to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?Then said Daniel unto the king, O king, live for ever. My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt." Daniel 6:20-22*

Introduction

Have you ever had a craving for a special food item? What was it? Fried Chicken? Maybe a sixteen ounce T-Bone Steak? What about a big bowl of collard greens, a couple of slices of piping hot corn bread with butter oozing out the middle? When you have a craving, nothing else seems to matter. Cravings prompt us to get up in the middle of the night and rustle refrigerators or hunt hard to find items in grocery isles at 3 a.m. in the morning. When you want it, you got to have it.

There is nothing better than having just what you want they way you like it prepared. Consider the little cafe that was operated in the forest. It was unique and cozy. When the rabbit hopped in the front door the waiters were nice and congenial in fact the whole cafe seemed overjoyed to see him come in. The waiter ushered him to a seat obviously reserved for special guests. It was close to the kitchen and he could smell the various spices in the air. He never bothered to look at the menu but began to order, "I'll have a vegetable soup." The lion that was sitting at the next table smiled and said "I'll have that too!" The rabbit said, "Add a lettuce salad with a carrot on the side" The lion smiled and said, "I'll have that too!" The rabbit said, "I'd like to follow that with a large glass of goat's milk." The Lion said, "I'll have that too and winked." Impressed that the King of jungle was ordering the same entre's as he, the rabbit decided to do the same. The Lion looked at the menu and said "I'll have number two!" The rabbit yelled to the waiter "I'll have that too!" Waiter nervously told the rabbit. “I’m sorry sir you can’t order that two.” The rabbit wanted to know why? So the waiter gave his answer, “The Lion ordered for his lunch, fresh rabbit stew, you are number two!”

If Satan is a hungry lion looking for something he can devour, what do you think he craves? He grows bigger and bigger every day. That means he is eating well. What does he eat for lunch?

He enjoys devouring would be lambs! Sometimes, like the little rabbit, we walk right into the Devil’s cafe and place ourselves right on his plate. We didn’t plan it that way, but before we knew it, we were on the brink of becoming the Lion’s Lunch.

As Christians we are constantly aware of the dangers that exist in this world for those who want to do right. The forces of evil are constantly at work to destroy us. They smile and grin and always work against our interest. Therefore we keep our hands in God’s hand and always stay alert. The day we fail to do so may the very day that we become the Lion’s Lunch!

Exposition

This text focuses on Peter who advised the Christians to be careful not to fall prey to the attacks of Satan.

Christians were especially susceptible to criticism, humiliation and persecution in the early days of the church, especially in Rome. In the month of July in the year 64 A.D., a great fire broke out in the city of Rome and the entire city was engulfed in flames. Hundreds of public buildings were burned to the ground and thousands of homes were destroyed, so that there were thousands of the inhabitants of the city left homeless.

History has concluded that Nero set that fire in order that he might destroy the ramshackle buildings of Rome and give him room to erect some marble palaces and other monuments that he thought would establish his name in history. It was during this time, of course, that the story was born that Nero “fiddled” while Rome burned. The Emperor was seen looking over the city and enjoying the view while it was burning.

The people were ready to revolt and overthrow him. Nero quickly looked around for a scapegoat that he could blame for the fire. There was in Rome a group of people who were just in the right situation to lend themselves to take the blame for the fire. They were called Christians. They followed a man named Christ, about whom strange things were said, and they themselves did very strange things. Rumors were flying all around Rome that they were cannibals, because they talked about getting together in their houses, drinking someone’s blood and eating his body. They spoke about “love feasts,” — at which they greeted one another with a holy kiss, and shared their innermost problems with each other. This soon became enlarged into stories of sexual orgies. So they were a people already under deep suspicion. When the Emperor needed a scapegoat, therefore, he started the rumor around Rome that the Christians had burned down the city.

The Emperor began a series of persecutions against the Christians. It was during this time that Christians were dipped in tar and burned as torches to light the gardens of Nero when he threw an outdoor party. They were tied to his chariot and dragged through the streets of Rome until they were dead. They were thrown to the lions; they were tied up in leather bags and thrown into water so that when the leather bags shrank, the Christians were squeezed to death. In a hundred other delicate ways, Nero sought to impress upon them the folly of being Christians.

Now it was during this time of the outbreak of the persecution of Christians in Rome that the Apostle Peter wrote this letter. And he wrote it, most scholars believe, in Rome to "the exiles," he says, or "the strangers in dispersion:"

It was a warning to Christians to be cautious and always on guard against the attempts of Satan to destroy the body of Christ. The acts of evil in scripture have been compared to "snakes","dragons" and that of a "lion" all of which are destructive and require a maximum of care and caution. They were encouraged to keep the faith, while at the same time resisting attempts of the devil. God, they were assured, is able to deliver them.

Don't Be The Lion's Lunch

Today believers must be vigilant and careful that they do not become the Lion's Lunch. Since Satan is always looking for ways to destroy us we should be careful. To resist Satan and avoid be devoured we are encouraged to:

Be In Control: The command is, "be sober." A drunk person has no self-control and is not clear-minded. Thus the command is to be in control of one's thought processes and thus not be in danger of irrational thinking - 'to be sober-minded, to be well composed in mind.' We generally lose control in pressure situations, in the face of fear, anger and frustration. These are the times when someone gets on your "last" nerve. They are moments when your thinking gets muddled and you are subject to say anything, do anything or throw anything in response. When that happens we become lunch for the lion.

Satan will try to confuse your thinking. He will try to frustrate you. If that fails, Satan will try to frighten you and scare you any way he can. That's why a lion roars so it can frighten its prey to come to a complete haul, then devour them. That's why Peter says, "the devil prowls around like a roaring lion."

Just what happens when the lion roars? We shake in our boots and begin to doubt God and to lose confidence and trust in God. Satan says, "You are all on your own. It is up to you. God isn't going to help you. He doesn't care what happens to you. Save yourself." While shaking in fear we momentarily forget that God "does" care and provides for his own.

BE ALERT: Christians must not only strive to be in control but they must also be alert. Much like a shepherd is always aware that at anytime or any moment a lion or a bear may attack the flock, Christians are warned to keep the eyes open and ears positioned for indicators that danger is near. This was David's situation. He guarded his father's flock. He watched it carefully keeping his mind open to the dangers that lurked. In 1 Samuel 17:34-37 David details his vigil to stay alert fighting Lions. He gave God the credit for delivering him saying in verse 37 "the Lord delivered me from the paw of the lion."

Our job is to be alert. God does the delivering. Sheep can't take on Lions. Sheep cannot match strength with such a powerful prey, but God can. Our responsibility is to stay alert and trust God for the deliverance.

RESIST THE DEVIL: Christians are encouraged to take an defensive position relative to the devil. They are encouraged to stand firm in their belief and actions. James 4:7 makes the same command: "Submit yourselves, then, to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." Christian must resist the devil by maintaining a strong and firm belief. Belief in what? Faith in what? God's mighty hand. His care. Resistance to the devil means reliance on God. Just as David professed. It means understanding that no matter what the present circumstances God has a plan and is in control.

When in the Den you have a Friend!

Peter's words to believers was simple: The devil is out there roaring. He wants to scare you, and tempt you, and anger you. To defeat him. Be self-controlled, be alert, and resist the devil through a strong faith, always giving credit to God.

Paul summarizes these concepts nicely in Ephesians 6:10-17."Finally, be strong in the Lord, and in the strength of His might. Put on the full armor of God, that you may be able to stand firm against the schemes of the devil. For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the powers, against the world forces of this darkness, against the spiritual forces of wickedness in the high places."

Yet every Christian should be aware that a time will come when Satan will attempt to place you in harm's way.

David met his lion while minding his own business, caring for his father's flock. Yet God helped him to defeat them on every hand.

Samson met his lion while traveling along the road. He destroyed his attacker with strength given to him by God.

Our best example of overcoming lions is Daniel who was placed in a den of lions because he refused to stop praying to God. The king was mystified by Daniel's patience. He was awed at his courage in the face of fear. He was humbled by Daniel's unwavering faith that his God was able to deliver him!

In the den, the lions pranced two and fro!

In the den, were the bones of others who had been devoured!

In the den, was the ultimate penalty for defying the powers of the world!

In the den, the lions waited for their lunch!

As Daniel was lowered into the Lion's den, he never stopped trusting in God. He could hear the king asking: "Is your God able?"

What the king found out was that in the den, a child of God has a friend!

When the lions of this world seek to destroy us we have a friend!

In the den, we have a friend, who brings us:

—Hope in the midst of discouragement; FAITH, in the midst of despair

—WAY OUT when there is no way; PEACE in the midst of confusion

—JOY in the midst of sorrow; STRENGTH in the midst of weakness

No wonder the song writer wrote: What a friend we have in Jesus, all our sins and griefs to be. What a privilege it is carry everything to God in prayer!

We have a friend who loves us so much that he was willing to carry a cross for us up Golgotha's hill!

We have a friend who died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

I'm so glad to know that when I'm in the den...my friend has all power!

All power in his hands!

Rejoice the soul of thy servant: for unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul. For thou, Lord, art good, and ready to forgive; and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee.Give ear, O LORD, unto my prayer; and attend to the voice of my supplicati ons. In the day of my trouble I will call upon thee: for thou wilt answer me. Psalm 86:1-7

Introduction

Have you ever been in an "O'Lord" situation? That is a time when you came upon a circumstance where your only response was "O' Lord!" The phone rang at your home at 3 a.m. and you received bad news about a family member. As you heard the news you sat up in your bed and responded, "O' Lord!" You found yourself in a jam. You could not turn to the left or to the right. Your only response was, "O' Lord!" We all have had some "O' Lord" situations, not all of which were bad. Sometimes you get news that is just too good to believe, even as the news is being broken to you, your response is, "O' Lord!" When your child surprised you or your boss gave you an unexpected raise, there was only one thing to do; sit down and respond, "O' Lord!"

Sometimes O' Lord situations just creep up on us! You may know the story about three women who were talking.

The first said, "Sometimes I go to the refrigerator. When I get there I just stand there for a while. Then I say O' Lord, I forget what I what I came down here to get."

The second woman said, "The Other day I stood at the top of the stairs for an hour. I said "O' Lord, I can't remember whether I'm going up for something or I'm on my way back down."

The third woman said, "I'm lucky, I guess (knocking on wood), I don't have the problems you girls have.. O' Lord, there's someone at the door." Yes, sometimes O'Lord situations just slip up on you before you know it!

There are some that respond to "O Lord" situations with the voice of weariness. They approach difficult times with a "Weary, O-Lord!" The very sound of their voice suggests despair and frustration. While some respond to their situations with Weari-Os other respond with "Cheeri-O Lords!" That means each time they make an expression it is bursting with hope.

Everybody likes Cherri-0s! These are the positive responses that turn every bad situation into a possibility for a grand opportunity.

Are things looking tough? It's time for Cheerios!

Are you frustrated to the max? It's time for Cheerios!

As Christian we call upon the name of the Lord in a spirit hope and anticipation. We may say "O' Lord" but it is certainly not a defeatist expression. it filled with excitement. No matter what the situation when we say "O Lord!" its a cheerio!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he speaks to God concerning the desires of his heart.

The Psalms are unique expressions of prayer and praise that reflect the thoughts of the mind and the meditations of the heart. Most of the psalms are David's work. God gave him the gift of capturing the emotions of his full life's varied experiences and putting them in beautiful lyrical terms.

These became the psalm book or hymn book of Israel. Many of these psalms were written to be sung in public. They are often prefaced by the title, "To the chief choirmaster" or "To the choirmaster, " and in some of our Bibles is the word "Maskil" which is simply the Hebrew word for "psalm." You may be interested to know that one psalm, Psalm 90, was written by Moses, and two were composed by King Solomon. Still others were written by a nameless group called the sons of Korah who were especially charged with leading the singing of Israel. Also, a man named Asaph wrote many of the psalms, and even good King Hezekiah wrote ten of them. As you look into the book of Psalms, you can see that in many cases the titles refer to the author

This section of the Psalm, Psalm 73 through Psalm 89, focuses on the discovery of what God is like when man comes before him and what he himself is like in the presence of God. It is the book that reveals the inner workings of man's heart: we see his need, his deep consciousness of his own sin, and the discovery of what God offers to do about it. They represent pattern of thought from psalms, 73 through 89, that shows man's awareness of God's judgment in the inner heart. Psalm 78 is a record of God's unbending love: although God loves man, he will never let him get away with anything. He never compromises, he never bends; he gives in to man's plea for mercy, but is absolutely relentless in cutting away sin. Then, when man is ready to acknowledge his sin, and to agree with God's judgment concerning sin, God deals with him in love. Psalm 81 describes the new strength that God offers man, and Psalm 84 wonderfully portrays the continuous provision that God offers us.

David uses many musical devices to accomplish the goal of setting his meditations to God to music. One of the devices is the use of the phrase "O Lord!" Throughout the Psalms the phrase is used to express a variety of feelings that range from happiness to sadness, from courage to fear. Much of the Old Testament uses this phrase similarly. With the exception of references in the Book of Revelation, the New Testament almost solely uses the phrase associated with "pleas for mercy."

Regardless of the context, the phrase "O Lord" was an announcement of expectation. Even if it was included in a plea for mercy or a recitation of an uncomfortable circumstance, it was bursting with hope. In some contexts it may appear an expression of pessimism, however it later proved that it was an expression of current conditions but also an expression of anticipation.

There are five "O's" in the first seven verse of the 86 Psalm alone. Each accompany an independent plea for help, mercy and gratitude. They are cheerful, expectant and full of gladness. They reflect the make up of the "O's" throughout the bible. Those who use them never cease to have faith that God will help them triumph over any circumstance.

O Lord

We often use the phrase O Lord loosely. Sometimes it is a cry the reflects our pain. Sometimes it reflects our fear, disgust or frustration. Believers are careful about the use of any phrase that includes a reference to God. We are mindful of God's commandment in Exodus 20:7 "Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain; for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." Therefore, believers may use the phrase but never in jest or in ways that do not suggest the sacredness or seriousness of God.

WHEN WE ARE OVERWHELMED BY IMPOSSIBLE CIRCUMSTANCES our "O" is cheery because God can do the impossible. That was the situation in Ezekiel 37:3 "And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord GOD, thou knowest." Ezekiel had been placed in a valley of dry bones and asked whether or not the bones could ever be revived. It appeared and Ezekiel would not say no, but answered "O Lord..thou knowest." Often we are surrounded by similarly impossible situations. Sometimes what has to be done seems to exceed our ability. The human response, is "O, Lord, I can't do it." That's a weary-O. When we respond "O Lord" we should make it a cheery "O" because we know that while some things are impossible for man, all things are possible for God.

IN TIMES OF DOUBT our "O" is cheery because God can be trusted. There are times when believers get caught with their guards down. In such moments they question God, doubt their own faith and experience a general weakness. Sometimes we respond "O Lord" what have I done to deserve this. That's a weary-0 But in times of doubt we need a cheery -O. When David found himself in doubt he cried "O, Lord" but it was a cheery-O. Psalm 71:1 "In thee, O LORD, do I put my trust: let me never be put to confusion."

In times of trouble our "O" is cheery because God, is a help in time of trouble! When trouble comes upon us we often respond "O, Lord!" Often however, our cry to God seems terminal. It lacks faith and seems to accept the finality of the circumstance. That's a weary-O. A cheery-O is better in times of trouble. David gave us the example in Psalm 31:9 "Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for I am in trouble: mine eye is consumed with grief, yea, my soul and my belly" The cry for mercy is an indicator that he knows that regardless of the trouble that exists at the moment. God can do something about it. That is a reason for cheer!

WHEN WE MAKE A MISTAKE our O should be cheery because God holds us up! Regardless of our position in life we will eventfully make a mistake. Despite our best plans and precautions, mistakes are inevitable. However, mistakes are not terminal. There are some whose question for perfection is so intense that they have difficult accepting personal error. Their cry of "O, Lord" is one that echoes defeat. That's a weary-O. When a believer makes a mistake, his "O, Lord" is an expectation for God to help him make a correction. That's why Psalm 94:18 says, "When I said, My foot slippeth; thy mercy, O LORD, held me up."

IN TIMES OF POVERTY AND DESPAIR our "O" is cheery because God is a provider. The poor and the destitute are constantly surrounded by reminders of their poverty. When money becomes scarce the poor cry out "O Lord" When resources are not available for food, clothing and shelter, the poor cry out "O, Lord" The believer is not simply shouting out an empty praise to vent frustration, that would be a weary-O. However, the believer calls out "O Lord" in a display of faith. Thus Psalm 86:1 says, "O LORD", hear me: for I am poor and needy." The 37th Psalms carries it even further in verse 25, "I have been young and now am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread."

WHEN WE ARE THE VICTIMS OF LIES AND DECEIT.our O's are cheery because he blesses those who are persecuted for righteousness sake..Nothing hurts more than to be the victim of lies and deceit. Yet that is the fare of most believers constantly. Some experience this sting and respond "O Lord here why are they doing this to me?" That's a weary-O. But there is a cheery O! Psalm 120:2 "Deliver my soul, O LORD, from lying lips, and from a deceitful tongue." Jesus takes our weary-O and turns it into a cheerio-in Matthew 5:44 when he said, "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake" What began as a weary-O became a Cheery-O!

Cheery-O's

Finally we must consider that believers consider cheery-O's because we see the bright side of life.

Every time we read the Word we find a reason for cheer!

When we look around at the beauty of the world we are stricken with the majesty of God. We are tempted to respond like David in Psalm 8:1 "O LORD our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth! who hast set thy glory above the heavens." That's a Cheery-O

The song writer saw the same thing and responded "Oh Lord, my God as I in awesome wonder, consider all the worlds thy hand hath made. I see the stars, I hear the rolling thunder and marvel at the universe displayed, then sings my soul my savior God to thee, how great thou art! How Great thou art! That's a cheery-O!

When we consider how good God has been to us, we know that is a cheery-O situation! It is a reason for cheer for God is good all the time and all the time God is good!

No wonder David said in Psalm 86:12 " I will praise thee, O Lord my God, with all my heart: and I will glorify thy name for evermore."

Every saint has a reason to be happy and full of cheer!

We serve a God who guides us when we are lost. That's why we sing "Guide me O thou great Jehovah, Pilgrim through the barren land!" That's a cheery-O!

We serve a God who loves us more than we love our ourselves. That's why the song writer wrote "O how I love Jesus, Oh How I love Jesus, because he first loved me!"- That's a cheery O!

We love the Lord because in our:

—WEAKNESS he gave us strength; SADNESS he brought us gladness

—DECEPTION he brought us truth; DEFEAT he brought us victory!

—SIN he brought us salvation; DESPAIR he brought us happiness!

No wonder the song writer declared "O Happy day, when Jesus washed my sins away!"

As long as God is still on the throne we should keep reciting our cheery-O's

Matthew 20:30 tells how Jesus came to a certain village and two blind men sat by the wayside. When the men heard that Jesus was passing by they started yelling O Lord, have mercy on us! People tried to silence them, but they continued to yell "O Lord" have mercy on us! Jesus heard their despairing cry and stopped and what they wanted him to do!

If trouble comes your way don't forget your cheery-o's! That's when you call on God expecting to receive an answer!

O Lord, I'm out here on your word!

O Lord, I can't see my way, but I know you are a way maker!

O Lord, The storm is raging by I know you can speak a word and make the storm be still!

Call on Jesus!

The same Jesus who died out on Calvary!

The same Jesus who arose after three days and nights!

Call on Jesus!

He will make everything alright!

An Apple Tree in The Woods

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Pine Grove Baptist Church
Jonesboro, La.

May 18, 1997

SCRIPTURE:"I am a rose of Sharon, a lily of the valleys. Like a lily among thorns is my darling among the maidens.Like an apple tree among the trees of the forest is my lover among the young men. I delight to sit in his shade, and his fruit is sweet to my taste." Song of Solomon 2:1-3

Introduction

Have you ever seen the perfect man? What about the perfect woman? At some point in every man's life he glances what he perceives to be the perfect woman. Everything is in the right place. The package is complete. There is beauty, charm, intellect and wit. Everything is rolled into one package. Most men have seen "Miss Perfect" at least once. Some have been fortunate enough to marry her.

There are also some women who have spent their entire lives looking for "Mr. Perfect." He is the man that has everything in the right place. He looks good, is charming, intellectual, a good provider and sensuous. Women have looked for such a man for hundreds of years and found little success in finding Mr. Perfect. Some have been fortunate enough to find him and marry him.

One of the greatest fears of modern African-American women is that they may not be able to find their social peer in a mate. Women are more educated and work place experienced than ever before. Women earn more money, hold higher positions in major corporations and generally are more successful than ever before. With more women in the work place, earning more money, their biggest fear is that they may not be able to find a man, within the same race, that will be able to be their intellectual and economic peer. Many women spend an inordinate amount of time looking for a "good" man.

The definition of a "good" man changes from person to person. Most women consider a good man as one who has a relatively good job, lavishes them with love and gifts, spends quality time with them and makes an effort to love her like Christ loves the church. Christian women desire a Christian man because the bible encourages individuals to be equally yoked. Their frustration is increased as they find themselves settling in many instances for what they perceive to be less than the ideal, living daily with the hope that they may be able to change what they have into the man of their dreams.

As African-American men present themselves to the world they must remember that they are becoming an "endangered species" in the minds of the general public and in the eye of the African- American woman, thus it becomes increasingly important for men to stand tall in all of the virtues that make them "men" in the largest sense of the word.

As Christians, we are extremely aware that God expects both men and women to lead lives of virtue, value and vision. We strive daily to achieve that ideal. It is the quest of every man to be the best that he can be to please both God and the woman that God has given him.

Exposition

This text focuses on a wife of Solomon as she shares her musings and thoughts about him as an ideal man.

Generally, the 31st Proverbs is given as the book of the bible that describes the "virtuous woman." It is often referred to on occasions that praise women. It is a description of a good woman. The virtuous woman is seen as a woman who takes care of the business of the family, feeds and clothes the children, looks out for the welfare of her husband and makes a pleasant and pleasing public appearance. The virtuous woman, is a beauty to behold and an honor to her family.

While Proverbs describes the ideal woman, this text, given from the viewpoint of a woman, focuses on the ideal man, at least from the context of a wife.

Song of Solomon is considered the book of love in the bible. It details intimacies between King Solomon and one of his wives, described as the Shulamite. Since "Shulamite" is the feminine version of the male name "Solomon" it is safe to say that the comments in this text are being made by "Mrs. Solomon" about her husband. According to historians, Solomon spent a large amount of time trying to find the real meaning of life. For a period he took on the role of a commoner and worked in the fields. There he met the woman later known as "Shulamite." Once back in the palace the king courted and married the woman who was said, by her own description, to be "black" but beautiful (1:6)

The Songs of Solomon, to a large degree, details intimacies shared between Solomon and the Shulamite. It is often referred to as the biblical basis of marital sex and relations. In some places it is graphic. In others it is sensual.

While Songs of Solomon is a picture of the love of King Solomon for his Black bride, in a greater sense it is a picture of the relationship of Christ to the Church. While Solomon describes himself as the "Rose of Sharon" and a "lily of the valleys" these are also pictures of Christ and the Church. Christ is the "Rose of Sharon" and the "Lily of the valley." Solomon pictures the Shulamite as a "lily among thorns" in verse two. In the same sense, the church, that elect, chosen generation that has been called out of darkness into the marvelous light is also a "lily" among the thorns of unbelievers in the world. Thus, while this text has an immediate application that focuses on an exchange between a man and his wife, it is also a type of the relationship between the savior and the church or the bridegroom and his bride.

Verse three focuses on Mrs. Solomon as she describes her husband in response to the way he described her in verse two. There, he said she was a lily among thorns, a valuable presence at the least. She responds by telling him that he is an apple tree in the wood. By this she meant that he was a rarity among men and she pledged herself to sit in the shadow of his tree and enjoy his fruit.

The man in this context is seen as "An apple tree in the woods" and in this single illustration she distinguishes him from all other men. He is different. He is beneficial. He is unique. He is a commanding presence that deserves respect.

The Trees of the Wood

Today there are millions of African-American men whose lives are characteristic of the trees of the woods. They make up the fabric of what's available for African-American women, most of whom are looking for that single unique presence in their life long pursuit of the ideal man. What kinds of trees are there in the woods today?

PINE TREES: There are many men who are pine trees at best. The pine tree grows tall, is distinguished by its pointed top, drops cones and burns fast. There are many men who share the same characteristic. They drop "cones" in a relationship, point the blame and disappear fast. Women who have experienced this kind of relationship dream of finding a real "apple tree" in the woods.

SWEET GUMS: These trees are known for a sap that is called sweet but is not really sweet at all. There are "Sweet Daddies" all over the nation. They are the sugar daddies that give the appearance of sweetness but leave a bitter taste in every relationship they enter and leave. They are the heartbreakers and home wreckers. They are sweet to single women. They are sweet to married women. They are sweet to your girl friend. They are sweet to your wife. They are so "sweet" that they leave a bitter taste when they leave. The woman who experiences this relationship leaves looking for the apple tree in the woods.

EVERGREENS: The Evergreen is unique in that its most noteworthy characteristic is that it looks good all the time. It is green in the summer. It is green in the winter. It always looks good, but is known for little else. Yet, there are many men who have Evergreen personalities when it comes to their usefulness as men. These men look good. They dress good from head to toe. Their hair is neatly groomed and they spend hours touching up all of the right places to give the proper appearance. No matter when you see them, they look good. Even in their casual attire they look good. Sitting in their yard they look good. Beyond their looks however, there is little else that they do. While there is nothing wrong with looking good, it is also important to have qualities of personality to match the looks. Women usually leave relationships with Evergreens looking for an apple tree in the woods.

WEEPING WILLOWS: The Weeping Willows stands drooped. Its broad limbs slump downward. It looks defeated. There are many men today have lost their drive and ambition. They have adopted defeatist attitudes about life and have succumbed to the pressures of society. A defeated man is not an inspiration to his wife and family. Even a poor man who scrambles to climb up, inspires his family, but a defeated man is a disappointment. No wonder his woman dreams of finding an "apple tree" in the woods.

OAK TREES: Oaks grow tall but their wood is hard and their fruit is inedible. These are men who are stubborn and set in their ways. They are thick skinned, slow to change and adapt. They are not bad trees but they have a tendency, because of the stubbornness, to produce fruit that is inedible. A few nuts here and a few nuts there. Unfortunately, their children grow up just like them because the "acorn" doesn't fall far from the tree. Women still dream of finding their "apple tree" in the woods.

An Apple Tree

What the African-American family needs today is men who will become "Apple Trees" in the woods. Such men are a unique presence in the family. They are beneficial, commanding and essential to the growth and security of the Christian family.

APPLE TREES NEED COLD WINTERS: The Shulamite referred to Solomon as an "apple tree" which was important because it indicated the rarity of his presence. In Palestines apple trees cannot grow. It is too hot for them in the summer and it is not cold enough for them in the winter. Apple trees require, by their very nature, a very cold winter climate. They only grow in parts of the world that have very cold winters and warm summers. Since Palestine had neither of these, finding an apple tree in the wood would be rare, if possible at all.

The African-American family needs men who can weather the cold periods that often impact the African-American family, including unemployment, discrimination, poverty and attacks on the family itself. Only those men who can germinate in such conditions can expect to become "apple trees in the woods." They are rare but nevertheless are needed.

ROOTSTOCK TRANSPLANTS GET NEW APPLE TREES: While legend has it that Johnny Appleseed went across America planting apple seeds and growing orchards, farmers have found it beneficial to get new apple trees by taking a portion of the rootstock of an apple tree and mixing it with another young tree, thus growing a new apple tree. Even so, if African-American men are to provide for a secure future for the race the men who are the role models for our youth must take time to groom the next generation of young men. In a sense they must take from their rootstock and help another young apple tree sibling to grow. They must become mentors, big brothers, advisors lay leaders who help young boys to grow. Men must force themselves to groom the next generation. They must make the time. They must provide the time. It is essential to their growth.

APPLE TREES GIVE EDIBLE FRUIT: While there are many trees in the wood which look good, most give no edible fruit. The apple tree is one of those that give edible fruit. The African- American man must become so productive that he gives edible fruit. He must be productive. He must be a provider. He must be a companion and friend to his wife. He must be a presence in the life of his child. He must be a source of inspiration for his family. Although our past has been filled with tragic moments, African-American men have been a stable presence in their families. Fathers who did not have college educations worked the fields and sent their children to school. Men who could not read and write themselves made it possible for their sons and daughters to read to them. These were men of good fruit. Our race needs a new generation of men who have the same commitment.

A Good Man is Needed

Not only is the African-American woman looking for a good man, so is the Lord. The search is on , both high and low for a good man who is willing to stand tall in his generation and declare the goodness of God.

For every cause God needs a man. For every mountain God has a man!

On Mt. Carmel, God had Elijah

On Mt. Aarrat, God had Noah

On Mt. Sinai, God had Moses

But for Mt. Calvary there could only be one man!

I here Jesus saying like Isaiah, if the Lord needs somebody, here am I send me!

There will be three trees on the hill called Golgotha, but I'll be the apple tree in the middle!

He died on Calvary, but I'm glad that he arose after three days and nights!

He is the Rose of Sharon!

He is the Lily of the Valley!

He is the best example of "An apple tree in the woods!"

M & M's

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 25, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "But we will not boast of things without our measure, but according to the measure of the rule which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you." 2 Corinthians 10:13

Introduction

What did you plan to do when you graduated from high school? Did you do it? Some had great visions of finally getting free of their parents' authority, and making their own decisions. Some had visions of achieving great success and making a name for themselves. Others could not wait to jump into the fast lane to see and do all of the things that their parents restricted them from doing. Most wanted to move up in life as fast as possible without all of the slow and tedious precautions that over seemingly over protective parents insist upon. Some planned to move fast while others plotted a slow meticulous pace that would lead them to success. Every graduate, at one time or another has dreamed of graduation day and beyond. Now that the day has come and gone, the journey envisioned has begun.

For a special reminder of what it will take for every graduate should take a good look at the candy product known as M and M's.

This simple little product has been one of the best selling candy products for many years. Its one of the rare treats that is enjoyed by both grandparents and their children. They are noted for three qualities: They have tasty chocolate on the inside, a hard shell on the outside and they bear the mark of their maker where it can be seen. The milk chocolate in M and M's is poured into molds as they move along a conveyor belt. Even though the chocolate is tasty, what make's M and M's different from other chocolate candies is that it is spread with a hard shell and moved in large batches of 2.6 million each, daily. They are then sifted. Those that are too soft, malformed or misaligned will be dropped from the line of progress.

While they are batched together for spraying and hardening, there is a point when each M and M has to get that distinctive "M" pressed upon it. When that happens, each individual candy, on a conveyor belt finds its own slot, separate from the others, and gets its own "M." They are packaged and shipped all over the world as the candy that melts in our mouth, not in your hand.

Christian graduates, like an M and M candy, have the right stuff inside them. The maturity process now calls for them, along with the rest of their generation of graduates to enter a period in which their beliefs, values, and lifestyle will be shaped and solidified. Along the way, the sifting process begins. Some will drop out of life.

Some will be misaligned or too timid to stand against the temptations of the world.

Others will stand strong and bold and pursue their godly dreams and visions giving God the glory and praise. Those that make it through in the final analysis will get the "M" which denotes the "Master's approval"

As Christians, we strive to pace our journey through life that our lives will have a variety of M and M's: both magnitude and magnificence as well as meaning and message.

The Christian graduate begins a journey that he or she hopes will be pleasing to God and earn his mark of approval. For it is his well done that signifies a life well spent.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains the importance of each person living his life according to the measure God gives him.

Paul had been given a specific mission by God. It was to open the doors of opportunity in the fath to those who had not heard it before. He was to take the Gospel message where no man had gone before, charting new frontiers and horizons. That is how Paul got to Corinth. His journey started in the Book of Acts. It started back with that Macedonian call, where Paul had a vision one night from a man in Macedonia saying, "Come across into Europe and help us." In response to that Paul landed in Philippi. There he got into trouble and ended up in jail. When he got out he went to the next city Thessalonica. Again, his preaching of the Word aroused opposition and he was driven out of town. He went to the next city, which was Berea, and once again there was trouble and a riot. He had to leave there by night and was taken down to Athens, which is only 50 miles to the east of Corinth. He preached on Mars Hill in Athens, but they did not receive his message. So he shows up in Corinth, all alone in the dust of the road, armed with nothing but the power of the Spirit of God, and begins to preach the gospel throughout this city. Out of this came the Corinthian church.

In this passage Paul responds to critics who criticized his physical appearance and doubted his abilities (7-11). He concluded that God had given him a "measure" or an assignment to complete and he was not in competition with anyone else, only to complete the assignment and life work he was given to do. While others would have the task of building upon the groundwork he laid, Paul remained loyal to his task of spreading the gospel in distant regions.

In verses 16-17 he rejects the notion of boasting in another persons accomplishment but chooses to boast only in with respect to his own accomplishment of the task set before him. It was a task for which he been given special gifts and for which God had opened many doors of opportunity for him to succeed in completing the task.

He had a good gift on the inside. Paul suggested that in the final analysis each person would be measured by his or her use of the gifts that have been given to them, not by what anyone else has done. In Romans 12:3-6 not to get the big head and " not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith." Each person has unique gifts that differ from those of another. The final glory all goes to God.

He was tested and hardened in his mission. During the course of his ministry Paul was criticized, beaten, nearly stone to death, persecuted, jailed and ostracized. He developed a hard shell to personal attacks, danger and fear. He was almost immune to insult, oblivious to sarcasm and insulated from cold hearted words and thoughts. His hard shell lead him to reach the conclusion in Romans 8:38-39 "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

He had the approval of God. Paul's message and mission in life had God's blessing. He used his gifts wisely, within the measure that God had given him.

His quest was to reach the mark and attain the prize. It was not secular or material in nature it was the approval of God. In Phillipians 3:14 he said "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." In the final analysis, Paul made his mark for in the closing days of his life he wrote, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Timothy 4:7-8

M and M's

Today youth should strive to simulate the processes of Paul's life that made him confident that God would reward him. That process involves:

PUT THE GOOD STUFF INSIDE.. Every believer has a special gift from God. It's that unique talent, ability or personality trait that is unique and identifiable. The ability to sing, dance or involve oneself in athletic pursuits are just a few of the hundreds of gifts that include, a mastery of numbers, an artistic eye, a healing personality, verbal communication skills and a plethora of other skills and talents. The purpose for each of these gifts is so the recipient may use them to build the kingdom of God. When used in that way, God blesses the gift immensely and makes life satisfying.

Every youth has the responsibility to perfect the gift, to make sure that there is something good inside. The most difficult challenge of the immediate years after graduation is to force oneself to study, train and attain a degree of competency. Yet that is what is required to make sure that there is "good stuff" inside.

DEVELOPING A HARD SHELL: The six years that immediately follow graduation in some ways, will be the most challenging for young Christians. This will be the time when temptations will be greater than they have ever been. As immense freedoms begin become available each youth will be bombarded with a large number of alternatives demanding choices. This is the time for youth to begin developing the ability to say "no" to any activity that will distract them from their goal, or distance them from. their peculiar calling in the faith.

Developing a hard shell means becoming immune to negative remarks that others make because one chooses not to participate in ungodly activities. It also means developing a firm and solid belief system, values and lifestyle. Principles and beliefs adopted during this period are generally those that last a lifetime.

Christian youth will emerge from the second phase of their development with a firmer belief in God or they will mangle the process and emerge with good stuff inside with a soft outer shell. Those with soft outer shells will easily be influenced by others. They will stray from one religious belief to another. Their values will change with every trend. Somewhere in the process they will get lost in the sifting.

Developing that hard shell is what Paul had in mind when he wrote in Ephesians 6:1-2 that we should "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

The hard shell that is developed is not so hard however, that no one can get to or be touched by the "good stuff" that's on the inside.

It is hard enough to resist damaging influences yet soft enough to allow the flavor inside to do what it is made to do.

A hard shell does not mean a bitter, negative attitude. A hard shell does not mean being negative.

Just as an M and M melts in your mouth, not in your hand, the Christian youth with a hard shell knows when to say yes and when to say no.

Getting the big "M"

The goal of young Christians is the same as that of every believer, that is to insure that we live our lives in such a way that God would be pleased. In essence our goal is to get the Master's Mark.

For a chocolate candy, M and M could mean "Melt's in your mouth", but for a Christian, M and M has different meanings.

MEASURED MOVEMENTS: The believers lives every day of his life with measured movements. He doesn't go to far to the left nor to the right but walks the center line. That's why David wrote in Psalm 37:23-24 "The steps of a good man are ordered by the LORD: and he delighteth in his way. Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: for the LORD upholdeth him with his hand.

MEASURED MOUNTAINS: There will be mountains and obstacles that come in a believers life. However, no believer will get a mountain he or she cannot climb. No believer will receive a burden that he or she cannot bear. No wonder the song writer would write, "We are our heavenly father's children, and we all know that he loves us one and all. Yet there are times when we find we answer another's voice and call;

If we are willing he will teach us, his voice only to obey no matter where and he knows, yes, he knows just how much we can bear!"

As we travel through this life we may have a mountain but we have an M and M God who makes mountains into molehills!

MEASURED MIRACLES : Every believer knows that his success is dependent upon the miraculous intervention of God. God is an M and M God in that he supplies us with measured miracles. He makes it happen when we need it to happen.

A measured miracle is one that meets your particular need. Israel didn't need the Red Sea moved, they just needed to get to the other side. Elijah, laying by the brook, didn't need an eight course dinner, he just needed enough to make it day by day.

A measured miracle is God making things happen one day at a time!

-When God works a miracle, doors that were once closed are opened.

-When God works a miracle, opportunities that were unavailable suddenly appear.

-When God works a miracle those who were expected to fail suddenly succeed.

-When God works a miracle those who were defeated become victorious

MEASURED MERCY: Along the way we will make some mistakes, but it is always good to remember that we serve and M and M God. Just he gives us Measured Miracles he also gives us measured mercy. He will look beyond our faults and see our needs.

It's good to know that we make a mistake, Grace a sign of God's measured mercy, will give us another chance!

It's good to know that if we fall, that Grace will put us back on our feet!

Every child of God should strive to become an M and M Christian. That's a Christian who wears the Master's Mark. No matter where we go the world should be able to look at us and see the Master's Mark!

Praise him for being so good!

Praise him for giving us a second chance!

Praise him for dying out on Calvary!

Praise him for rising after three days and nights!

What a Mighty God we serve!

What a Magnificent God we serve!

Praise him all the day long!

Not Just My Baby's Daddy

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "For I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment; that the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him." Genesis 18:19

Introduction

What is your concept of a real Black man? Some would measure him differently from others. To some, a real man is one that is physically strong, able to endure pain and perform great feats of strength. A man is often measured by the height of his ambitions, dreams and goals. Others measure him by the depth of his pockets or the breadth of his compassion. Regardless, the measure of a man differs, depending on one's perspective. No matter what one's estimate of a man is, the current national sentiment is that there is a shortage of real African-American men.

While there are no statistics that indicate that there is a decline in the number of African- American male births, there is a general feeling in our community that real Black men are a diminishing presence. That conclusion is supported by what we see and hear in the media. A 1995 study by the National Rainbow Coalition Commission on Fairness in the media showed that: 1) African-Americans appear on the news as criminals twice as often as other groups; 2) Of 620 television shows on prime time television between 1955-1987 only five percent showed African Americans as professionals while 94 percent showed whites as executives. 3) Black men are virtually invisible on commercials between Saturday morning cartoons 4)Blacks are projected generally in two stereotypes "Sambo or Savage." Thus, both Black women and Black children evolve with a negative image of Black men.

The images that remain are stereotypes that suggest that a Black man is less than admirable. There is a hit recording being sold around the world whose title is being repeated by millions. The song, "That's just my baby's daddy" is the redundant chant that is given in a low budget recording in which a woman describes the father of her child to her new lover as "Just my baby's daddy!" The question is asked, "Who dat is?" and the answer comes, "That's just my baby's daddy!" It's a nineties take on the phrase of the 70's and 80's, "A black man ain't nothing." The song seems to reinforce the common belief that Black men, all Black men, are less than desirable.

The phrase "Just my baby's daddy" is a general indictment of a growing subclass of men who are either unable or refuse to assume the role of father to their children. "Just my baby's daddy" is a statement of lost respect for some men who have left the job of fatherhood to either a mother or the state. Men should be concerned because while America chuckles at the simple little song, the fact that it is selling millions suggests that there are even more millions that agree with its theme.

The man who fathers a child and disappears, is "just my baby's daddy!" The man who has little time for his children, especially in the formative years is running the risk of becoming, "just my baby's daddy!" The man who provides little or no support for the nurture and welfare of his children is generally described as "just my baby's daddy!"

As Christians, we are aware of the importance of having a being a good father. It is important because our fathers not only are the mates for women and leaders of families but they are symbols of our relationship with our heavenly father. Since fathers are types of the love of God, good fathers represent to their family the way God responds to the family. Good fathers, millions of them around the world, work daily to prove that a Christian father is more than "just my baby's daddy!"

Exposition

This text focuses on God as he describes his relationship with Abraham.

Angels had visited Abraham's home and in the course of their sojourn God debated whether or not Abraham should be told about his plan to destroy the cities of the plain. It would be a deadly destruction because of their great sin. At this point no human had been told the details of God's plan. As they came to the edge of a deep ravine overlooking the doomed cities of the plain, God talkedwith himself to decide reasons why Abraham should be told.

As God reasonsed with himself he revealed why Abraham was considered a good man in his sight. Beginning at verse 17 he contemplated Abraham in the phrases, "Shall I hide from Abraham what I am about to do, seeing that Abraham shall become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall bless themselves by him?" His answer is "no."

He then began to list the fine qualities of a spiritual man that drews him close to Abraham. These qualities made him more than just a man; more than just any husband, but special in his sight.

For I know him. Abraham's walk with God was so close that God considered him above all others. He knew him because he created him. He also knew him because Abraham listened to the voice of God all of his life. He led a godly life himself and encouraged the same in all of those who were either in his company or employ.

He will command his children. To command his children suggests something more than demand by sheer force of strength. It suggests that his life and actions elicit the respect of his children by the way he lives before them. Thus, he is in a position to give direction by virtue of his own experience.

He will command his household. Not only was Abraham able to command the respect of his children, but that of his wife, employees and other relatives. Commanding such respect requires that he live before them as an example of the precepts and standards that he expected of them.

Keep the way of the Lord. Abraham wanted to do what was right in God's sight. His push to do that which was just, correct and pleasing to God showed itself in the direction of his entire household. Without a written law, it was only the will of an individual to follow the voice of God as he speaks to his soul, that led him in the right direction.

When God analyzed Abraham he concluded that Abraham deserved special consideration because he was not just another man, but he was a man close to his ideal. In a similar sense, so should every man or woman who has been born into the family of God be considered in the same way.

The believer's relationship with God, through grace, should be one that is so close to God that knows him because of the closeness of the walk. The way a believer lives before his or her family, associates and co-workers also commands the respect of those around him. By virtue of his own experience he or she makes a mark on the general society as he or she strives to do that which is pleasing to God.

Thus, a believing man is not "just" any man. A believing woman is not "just" any woman. Both are part of a special "chosen generation" of peculiar, holy and special people who have been called out of darkness into the marvelous light.

Abraham was more than just a daddy, he was a father. He was more than just a mate for his wife, he was a godly husband.

Believers who share the same attributes share the same description.

Fathers Not Just Daddies

Today, Christian men should strive to throw off the stereotypes that describe African-American men as something less than the ideal. How can African-American men become more than "just" my baby's daddy? If it is to be done he must assume a posture in the context of his relationship with the mother of his children, his children and family that commands respect. If Abraham's life is an example then the personal attribute that rises higher than all others is that his lifestyle in the presence of his family and associates commanded their respect. Thus, African-American men must work to change their image by:

BEING A PROVIDER: A man who provides for his household to the best of his ability commands the respect of both his wife and children. The provider is not expected to do that which beyond reason, but that which is within his ability. Children who see their fathers doing their very best to provide a roof over their heads and put food on their table, develop a respect for them. Even when a woman has lost her romantic attraction for her former mate, she still respects the man who does not abandon his children and provides adequately for their care, education and safety. Men who provide for their children are not compelled to do so by the courts. They do so out of love. In the context of marriage most of his resources would be applied to the care of his children. Even outside of marriage, the man who provides knows that the costs are the same. He assumes his responsibility without an order from a court. Such a man is never described as "just" my baby's daddy. He is my father, my provider.

BEING A ROLE MODEL: A man who lives a life that is exemplary before his wife and children commands their respect. Abraham became a role model for his family because he sought to do the things that were right and just in the eyesight of God. Because this was his standard, his children and associates came to respect him for the moral tone of his life. Likewise, the man who obeys the law, works hard and lives a clean cut, ordered life, is a commanding presence. Those who refuse to involve themselves in illegal activities, public drunkenness and wild uncontrolled actions cannot command the respect of their children, who know the real deal. Children take note. His mate takes note. The community takes note. When he is in the presence of his family, he is welcomed not frowned upon. When he is in the presence of his wife or even his former mate, she treats him with respect because he is always the gentleman and refuses to stoop lower than the standards he purports. Such a man is never described as "just" my baby's daddy. He has a name. He is referred to as "father."

BEING A GOD FEARING MAN: A man who orders his life by the word of God commands the respect of his wife and his children. Such a man may not walk the streets daily with a bible in his hands or have a huge cross dangling around his neck, but the principles of godliness are hung around his heart and nailed to the doorposts of his soul. The man who is led by God and shows it in his lifestyle and manner. In a society that casts a God fearing man as a wimp, there is a tendency of some to shun the image of being a spiritual man. Yet, that is the very characteristic that drew Abraham close to God, the fact that he was willing to walk the walk, not just talk the talk. The God fearing man seeks the will of God and strives to follow it, thus shepherds his family in the direction of the almighty.

Even in estranged situations, the God fearing man still seeks to follow God. His children can see it. His wife or former mate can see it and it commands their respect. Such a man is never referred to as "just my baby's daddy" because he is a man who strives to do that which is right in the sight of God.

The Reward of the God Fearing Man

What is the reward of the God fearing man who is more than "Just my baby's daddy?" Verse 19 ends with Abraham's reward "..that the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him."

God promised Abraham a great and strong family. He promised him land and security. He promised Abraham that the world would be blessed through him. That is the essence of his reward for being more than his baby's daddy. More than his wife's old man! More than just a man, but a man who walks with God.

It is difficult to find a man who truly walks with God, described as "just my baby's daddy!" because such a man assumes his responsibility and commands the respect of his children and mate.

It is possible for a man to have a fine job and still be "just my baby's daddy!"

It is possible for a man to have a fine education and still be "just my baby's daddy!"

It is possible for a man to live in the same house with his wife and children and still be "just my baby's daddy!"

It is possible for him to be well dressed and groomed impeccably, and still be described as "just my baby's daddy!"

If a man wants to be more than "just my baby's daddy!" then he must stand for something in the eyesight of his children and his mate.

He may not be rich, but he'll be more than just my baby's daddy!

He may not be famous, but he'll be more than just my baby's daddy!

He may not be well educated, but he'll be more than just my baby's daddy!

There was once a slave family on a Southern plantation that faced the prospect of being sold. The young father of the family of 10 children overheard his master discussing the possible sale of family members. The master said he could sell the father and get a handsome some and still have a woman and ten children. But he could sell all ten of the children at a profit and the young couple could bear him more. Realizing that his family was about to be sold the father called in his wife and children and told them that he may be leaving them soon. "But wherever you go, no matter how long it takes, I'll come back to get you. "

That night the young father picked an argument with the overseer and he was whipped like an animal. The master shipped him off to be sold. The boys watched as their father left with scars on his back and chains on his hands and feet. He forced himself to stand tall before his sons and ambled down the road.

Nearly 30 years later, after freedom was won, that father found his family and a giant reunion was planned when he stepped out of the wagon he saw each of his ten sons and their children standing in a straight line. The oldest said to the others, "children, let me tell you about my father. The last time I saw him, he had chains on his feet and 10 stripes across his back. But because of those chains and stripes on his back, we are able to stand here today. That's not just your granddaddy, that's my father!"

Children let me tell you about the Lord!

The last time the world saw him he had stripes on his back and nail prints in his hands! He saved the world from sin and destruction!

He died out on Calvary! He died, but he rose again!

He died that we might live! He died that we might have a chance!

Because he lives...

I live!

Finding God
In a Mickey Mouse World

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you. Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing. And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God. Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." John 20:26-29

Introduction

Have you ever watch a cartoon? Most of us are fascinated with cartoons. Even from our childhood we have been fascinated with the tiny characters that seem to come to life and defy all natural laws to both amuse us and entertain us. Whether one is young or whether one is old, we are taken with cartoons. We read cartoons in comic books, newspapers and on individual sheets. They make us laugh. They entertain us. On occasion they are used by satirists to send a message. Regardless of our age, America is fascinated with cartoons.

Each generation has had its exposure to cartoons. A generation of adults read Dick Tracy cartoons in their weekly papers. They were fascinated by the wonderful gadgets that Dick Tracy seemed to use. The other gadgets he used were the forerunner of the magic and gadgetry of James Bond, agent OO7. Flash Gordan introduced us to space and raised the possibilities of manned space vehicles and star wars type combat. We dismissed it as impossible at the time, yet we were fascinated with the cartoon anyway.

The late Walt Disney became rich and famous when he perfected the art of animating cartoons. When he developed a technique of making the little pictures come to life with such accuracy that they appeared life like, the world watched. His great characters Mickey Mouse and Minnie Mouse were the spin-offs to many others inspired by his work. Entire animated movies were developed that were caricatures of real life. Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, Cinderella and others were all so beautifully designed that decades later people still flock to see them.

Then there were others. Not only did Disney create Mickey Mouse and Minnie but there was also Pluto, scores of others who invited children to join the Mickey Mouse Club. Others catch our imagination as well. Tweedy Bird, Tom and Jerry, Heckle and Jeckle and a plethora of others. All of them invited young people and adults as well to join a world of make believe where they could step out of reality for a moment and be somewhere else as long as they want to be.

Make believe. That's the world of cartoons. That's the world of Mickey Mouse. Millions of youth around the nation are plunged into this make believe world and some experience difficulty separating reality from their make believe world. The line is thin and blurry. Children are often frustrated in their attempt to understand the various shades of real and make believe. Between the Tooth Fairy, Easter Bunny, Santa Claus and the cartoons, many children are completely confused.

What about belief in God? Children have some difficulty with that too. Many do not know whether or not to believe in God or wait to see if he turns out to be another imaginative product of a region that parallels cartoon land.

As Christians we should work to help our children understand the difference between reality and make believe. As we make the distinctions, we should be sure to help them know through both our precept and example that God is not a make believe character like Mickey Mouse, but God is real!

Exposition

This text focuses on Thomas as he expressed his doubt that the risen saviour was actually real.

Thomas had the dubious distinction of being one who doubted the resurrection of Christ. When the disciples assembled themselves after the crucifixion, there was obviously much anxiety among them. The doors were shut and locks were in place. Then suddenly Christ appeared in the midst of them.

Thomas did not trust what his eyes were seeing. It appeared that saviour was standing before him in the flesh. It appeared that the image he saw was that of Christ. However, Thomas was not sure. Too many things had happened and they had happened so fast. He had earlier said he would not believe that Christ was risen unless he could touch the wound prints with his own hands. Thus, when Christ appears in this text He invites Thomas to do just that. It was then that Thomas knelt in submission and belief not needing to touch the Lord. He believed what he saw. He concluded that Christ was not a fake but a real presence before him.

When he bowed, he acknowledged Christ as the Lord and worshipped him.

Is Mickey Mouse Real?

Youth today are exposed to many influences that make it difficult for them to differentiate between what is real and what is imagined. Whether it is the magic of movie special effects to the magic of David Copperfield, youth are bombarded with images of life that may be real or could be well crafted illusions.

Such is the case with Mickey Mouse. For as many times as we have seen that face, it will come as no surprise to you to discover that Mickey isn't real. In fact the technology to make Mickey appear real didn't exist until the beginning of the 20th Century.

"Of course, that's obvious!" you might be thinking. Yes and no. Disney's skill in animation is part of a dissolving of the border between the real and the unreal which one finds perfected in Disney theme parks.

The choice of a mouse as the character for Mickey that children might identify with is significant. Walt laughed about the choice because he said he was afraid of mice. Mice are cute, furry and cuddly, but also small, amoral and pesky much as children might have been viewed during the late 1920's.

Mickey and his Disney pals live in a virtual world where things that are lifeless can become animate and things that are alive can be treated as objects. The format of a cartoon removes the limits of time and space so the world can be turned upside down.

Mickey and all animation characters live in the same world as children who are striving to understand the relationships of time and space. Children especially enjoy the suspension of natural law because they can understand the deception and laugh at the confusion of the characters. In one comical scene, Mickey's dog Pluto swallows a magnet and then gets chased by pots and pans and everything metallic.

In the magical world of a child, everything is alive. In many of the Disney classics, the world is full of inanimate objects which come to life - with an attitude. Knives forks and spoons dance on the table while the teapot spouts off at the tea cup. Trees malevolently grab little children while Moose stand on two feet and smoke cigars. It is a world of make believe far out of touch with reality.

And why do we watch that which is obviously fake when understanding the real is of supreme value for survival? It's entertaining. We laugh at the bawdy exaggeration. Something about slapstick tickles the funny bone. And the story usually teaches some moral or value. Cartoons do pass on the rules, the knowledge and social conventions of a culture. Animation is a refined visual form of story telling that has existed since before the first cave paintings.

Life In A Toon World

In the world of cartoons life is drastically different from reality.

NO ONE DIES IN TOONLAND: Youth who watch cartoons without adult interpretation can easily believe that death is not a reality. In cartoons, no matter how many times Elmer Fudd shoots the pesky rabbit he will never die. The coyote can drop a bolder upon himself or have a stick of dynamite blow up in his face and still live in toon land. When a person falls it is humorous because no one in toon land can be permanently injured.

The idea of pain, sickness and death does not exist for cartoon characters. Many youth still have that view of life as they become teens

GOD DOES NOT EXIST IN TOON LAND. No matter how lofty the goals of toons, they never seem to have a religious belief. No toons go to church, pray or worship God. There are some that call up higher powers for energy. Some talk to ancestors. Some draw power from unseen sources, but as a general rule toons don't go to church or express a belief in God. It is easy for a youth who is absorbed with the world of make believe to conclude that God does not exist. Big Bird doesn't go to church, neither does Bat Man or Porky Pig. Yet, the reality of life is that God does exist. He is real regardless to whether or not he appears in toonland.

In A Mickey Mouse World, God is real

While the world focuses on the theme park images of life that distort the realities and point us away from faith and devotion, true believers are convinced more than ever that God is real, even in this Mickey Mouse world in which we live.

In a world of Daffy Ducks and crazy rabbits, mass murderers, free sex and gross individualism, there is still one influence that provides sanity to insane and understanding to the confused. That influence is the presence of almighty God.

No matter how difficult the times, God is still in control.

These are time when it is difficult to tell men from women and women from men, but God is the same.

These are times when it is hard to know real leather from pleather, fake fur from real fur and designer clothes from cheap imitations, God is still the one and only.

I Don't know about you but I'm glad to know that the God we serve is still a God that can take:

-Misfortunes and turn them into opportunities

-Failures and turn them into successes

-Sadness and turn it into gladness

-Defeat and turn it into victory

We serve a God who still sits high and looks low! He still holds the fate of the world in his hands.

No wonder the song writer declares, "Yes God is real for I can feel him in my soul!"

Walt Disney may tell the world to spell happiness "M.I.C.K.E.Y" but every believer knows the way to spell happines is "J.E.S.U.S"

When the world is dark, Jesus!

When times are tough, Jesus!

When you can't see your way, Jesus!

When things are looking down, Jesus!

Jesus, who died on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

Jesus is real!

For I can feel him in my soul!

Precious Promises

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 22, 1997

SCRIPTURE:"Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." 2 Peter 1:4

Introduction

Have you ever made a promise, only to discover that you couldn't keep it? Did it concern something major? Did it concern something you consider relatively unimportant? Did you simply change your mind or did something prevent you from keeping your promise? We often make promises with the best intention of keeping them, but fail to follow through. Sometimes, we have promised without really thinking about what we have done. Then there are those who promise that which they know is not within their power to perform. Whether it is a husband who promises to have a talk with his wife at the end of day and never does; or child that promises to complete a task but never gets around to it, promises are empty unless they are kept.

The value of one's promise is a measure of integrity. Those who value their promises greatly endeavor to keep them at all cost. There are some who make promises and break them for convenience sake. Consider the girl who was feeling like an old maid at age 15 because she was the only girl at school who had not received a promise ring from a boy. Then one day a scrawny little freshman boy, obviously shy and reserved, noticed that when boys gave girls promise rings the girls liked them. He saved his money until he could buy a golden ring big enough to win the heart of any girl he gave it to. He spotted the lonely girl with no ring on her finger, walked up to her and asked her to be his girl friend. He presented her with a pretty, gold "Promise ring" and she promised to be his girlfriend that day. . Shortly after, a senior Letterman, who stood well over six feet tall, being one of the most popular guys on campus also approached her to be his girl friend. She thought about the skinny little freshman boy and the handsome, tall, and popular football player and became confused. She returned the ring to the freshman and said "I changed my mind." The boy pawned the ring, which coincidentally was purchased by the football player, who gave it to the girl. Confused the freshman asked her, "You promised me and I gave you a ring. You promised him and he gave you the same ring, what's the difference?" The girl looked at him, laughed and said, “Later you’ll understand this thing. The difference is in the man and not in the ring!” A change of mind broke a promise very easily.

Have we changed our minds on God? Have there been times when we were desperate and promised to do things for God but, changed our mind later. Did we accept God’s tokens of mercy and love then change our minds? What if God broke his promises to us as easily as we break our promises to him? Unfortunately there are many who have “returned the ring” to God. The world has offered them tempting opportunities for prosperity, popularity and success and they have simply changed their minds.

As Christians, we strive to keep our promises to God. We realize that he has never broken a promise to us and we strive daily, to keep our promises to him. Our Goal is to keep him forever in our heart as he does for us. He told us he loved us and gave us the cross and an empty grave as a token of his love. We strive everyday to be worthy of his gift. We never plan to give it back!

Exposition

This text focuses on Peter as he reminds believers that God has given them precious promises that sustain them in the faith.

Peter was one of the great undershepherds of the Church. He had the job of trying to keep believers unified after many dispersed following the burning of Rome by Nero. He wrote letters or “epistles” to them to nurture them, even while being dispersed. This letter addresses three subjects. . In the first chapter, the apostle is giving his readers a word of exhortation on what the Christian life is all about. In the second chapter, he gives a word of warning on how to recognize and handle false teachers; and in the third chapter, he gives us a word of certainty about the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the facts that underlie our faith. And then he draws a conclusion. It is a very simple outline, isn’t it - a very practical letter, as you might expect coming from such a practical, hard-headed Christian as Peter.

When this letter was written, Peter was a prisoner, perhaps of Nero of Rome. He sensed great danger and felt his time was drawing near when he was to put off his body - his tent, his habitation - to go and be with the Lord. And he says the Lord himself showed him this, as recorded for us at the close of the Gospel of John. The Lord Jesus had said to Peter that there would come a time when men would bind his hands and lead him where he did not desire to go.

Peter understood this to mean that he was to suffer and die as our Lord died, on a cross. And tradition tells us that Peter was indeed crucified, that he was so humbled by the fact that he was counted worthy to die the same kind of a death that the Lord Jesus did, that he begged his captors to crucify him upside down.

Peter told believers that the Christian faith provides everything we need to know to live fruitful, fulfilling as develop a greater knowledge of the nature of God. What is essential, according to Peter, is that each believer acquaint himself with the divine nature of God and the will of God. When believers know what God is like, what He wants and what He has promised it becomes easier to understand how we are "more than conquerors" in this world.

He encourages Christians to build their faith through the Knowledge of how God operates in the world and in personal lives.

God has made every believer certain unique and "precious promises" that sustain him in troublesome times. It is these promises, of life, hope, protection and salvation that have sustained believers for nearly 2,000 years.

Precious Promises

It said that a certain man had a habit of writing notes in his bible as he heard speakers speak or preacher's preach. His wife noticed that beside some verses he had marked "P" around others he had written "PP" and still around others he had written "PPP" When later asked the meaning of these markings he explained that a single "P" marked a promise God made. It was usually a promised made to someone else or something distant. "PP" Was a precious promise. It was a promise God made that applied to his life. It was not distant but was peculiar to him. "PPP" was a precious promise that God made to him that was proven in reality!"

Seven Promises of God

Generally Christians have come to know that God has made thousands of "P" promises, but seven "PP" promises that are repeated in different forms and at different times. What are God promises to believers?

1. God has promised that those who believe in Jesus and are baptized for the forgiveness of sins will be saved. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" Mark 16:16.

2. God has promised His people eternal life. Those who believe in Christ and accept him as Savior shall be saved. My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. John 10:27-28.

3. He has promised to supply every need we have. The Bible says: "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus". That's Philippians 4:19. God has obligated Himself only to the extent of our needs. That would include food, clothing, shelter, companionship, love, and salvation thru Jesus Christ. It would not include the multiplicity of luxuries that we have come to think of as needs.

4. God has promised that His grace is sufficient for us. The bible says in 1 Corinthians 12:9 "And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me. " He has made provision for our salvation by His grace through faith.

5. God has promised that His children will not be overtaken with temptation.

Instead, He assures us that a way of escape will be provided. “There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.” Jude wrote: “Now unto Him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present your faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy” (Jude v 24).

6. God has promised us victory over death. Physical decay may come, but God has promised that we shall be victorious over actual death. “For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

7. God has promised that all things work together for good to those who love and serve Him faithfully. “And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.” Romans 8:28 No matter how frustrating a situation gets, it will work to the advantage of true believers.

Standing on the Promises

Finally, brothers and Sisters, we must consider that while there have been some promises and at least seven categories of precious promises, it is good to know that all of God’s promises are proven promises.

If God has said it, that settles it, it will be done!

God told Moses, Brother Moses, it looks like you are standing at the edge of defeat, but get your marching shoes on. I promise you I’ll make a way for you through the Red Sea! Through the Red Sea!

God told Noah, Brother Noah it might look a little dry out here, but you better get started building you an ark. I promise you, it’s going to rain! That was a proven promise

God told Lot, Brother Lot don’t be deceived by the peacefulness of Sodom. Things are about to get hot. I promise you, God’s “a gonna rain down fire!” That was a proven promise.

Has your experience proven God’s promises to be true?

Has God’s promises proven to be true?

Has his promise to supply your every need, proven to be true?

Has his promise to be with you, even through the valley of the shadow of death, proven to be true?

Has his promise to be with you alway, even to the end of the world, proven to be true!

Has his promise to take every bad thing that happened to you and work it out to you advantage, proven to be true?

I don’t know about you, but I found out that God is a dependable God, if he promised it, I can count on it!

I can count on because His word is true!

I can count on it because, unlike man, God is able to do exactly what He says!

He's able to:

-Take my mountains and turn them into molehills!

-Take my sadness and turn it into gladness!

-Take my agony and turn it into ecstasy!

-Take my darkness and turn it into light!

-Take my failure and turn it into success!

As I close, I am reminded of an old man who heard the voice of God one night in his sleep. God told him to invest in a house that stood on the corner of 3rd and Main. God told him to take the contents of the house and throw it away and he would be blessed. Sight unseen the man took all of his savings and bought the house. When his children found that their father had bought an old run down house that had been abandoned for years they became concerned. Every day he moved out a piece of furniture and stood on the porch. The trash pile became increasingly larger as he emptied the house and stood on the porch. The last thing he took from the house was an old picture that was hanging on the wall.

As he threw the picture on the trash pile an art dealer had stopped at the red light. He recognized the picture, jumped from his car and took the old man to the gallery. Within a week the picture was determined to be a collector's item and the man was paid several million dollars. The art dealer asked, "Why were you just standing on the porch every day! When you had a fortune on the wall!" The old man answered, "I didn't know what was in this old house. You thought I was standing on the porch, but I was standing on the promises of God!"

I don't know about you, but I've decided to stand on the promises of God!

I heard the voice of Jesus say, Lie down thy weary one, thy head upon my breast and I will give you rest! That's a promise I can stand on!

I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am ye may be also! That's a promise I can stand on!

I heard Jesus tell his disciples, After while, bye and bye, this old body will be destroyed; but after three days and nights I'll take it up again. The disciples didn't know what to think.

One evening they crucified him and buried Him in a borrowed tomb! But Early Sunday morning, just like he promised! He arose from the dead!

I don't know what tomorrow will bring, but I'm gonna stand on the promises of God! I don't know what the future holds, but I'm gonna stand on the promises!

No wonder the song writer wrote: Standing, Standing, Standing on the promises of Christ my Savior!

Standing, Standing!

I'm standing on the promises of God!

Feeling His Presence Without Seeing His Hand

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 6, 1997

SCRIPTURE:"For if thou altogether holiest thy peace at this time, then shall there enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: who knoweth whetherthou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" Esther 4:14

Introduction

Have you ever wondered why things happen the way they do? Very few things in our world happen by chance but rather in response to an unseen plan. We may not be aware of the plan or the planner, but the plan exists. Very few things simply happen. When a building is constructed, does it just happen or are there plans and planners working in the background that we do not see? When a project is completed did it just happen or were there participants in the process that forever remain nameless. We may not know how an event occurs, but are sure that it did not occur by chance. The continuous flow of life began with an unseen hand and is guided by the same hand every day.

Sometimes we are puzzled by events that occur. We often wonder why this is happening to me? Consider the little rabbit that was fascinated with its new found speed. The bunny loved to out run the creatures of the wood. He out ran the toad frog and brer snake could never catch him. In fact, he took on ever creature of the woods to test his skill. The little rabbit was disturbed however, because each time his folks let him go to the woods alone, mama rabbit would prick the bottom of his foot with a thorn. When they left, without explanation, the little rabbit limped around for hours in pain. When they returned they said nothing. After a while the little rabbit was concerned and asked mama rabbit the question, "why do you stick my foot every time you leave me alone, it doesn't make sense and it seems cruel for you to do me this way." Mama rabbit hopped over to her son and said "There is a hound dog and hunter that love to chase little fast rabbits. Knowing you, you'd give them a run. It may not make sense to you know, but it's better to be a living bunny with a sore foot than a dead rabbit with a fast reputation." It didn't make sense to him at the time, but that sore foot was keeping him alive.

What's your sore foot? Do things seem to happen to you that don't make sense? Did you miss your airplane flight, only to learn that the plane you were scheduled to catch had a lengthy delay or crash? Everything has a reason and a purpose, even though we don't see it clearly, there is a purpose. That's what happened when Jesus' critics asked him why the blind man was blind. Had he or his parents sinned? Jesus responded that the man was born blind so that he could be present at that very moment to demonstrate the healing power of God. Even his blindness had a reason.

There is an unseen hand that operates in every life work. That unseen hand guides and controls, tears down and builds up. That unseen hand is called providence, the will of God working itself out among men. The believer knows the power of God is working everyday, even though he can't see his hand directly, his presence is felt.

As Christians we are encouraged when we remember that God is in control of the universe and our lives. He cares for us and is working out his will for us every day. Our prayer is "thy will be done." We rest confident that his perfect righteousness will take care of the rest.

Exposition

This text focuses on Esther as she is told that her rise to throne of Persian was destined so that she could save her people from destruction.

The story of Esther concerns a king called Ahasuerus, the grandfather of Cyrus the Great, who has married a young Jewish girl named Esther, a captive taken from the city of Jerusalem. It also involved her cousin, Mordecai, who became a judge in the city gates in Susa, the capital of Media-Persia and an officer of the King's court named Haman.

The book of Esther is unique in that the name of God is not mentioned with its pages. Neither is there any reference to God. While the name of God is not called the hand of God is felt in the unraveling of the story of Esther.

The events of the Book of Esther take place when Israel was in captivity under King Ahasurus. Many of the Jewish people had been allowed to return home to rebuild the city of Jerusalem and restore their worship, others for various reasons stayed. The God of Israel was not popular among the Persians and many simply found it safer not to refer to God in the courts of the King. Thus many writings, including the Book of Esther had no reference to God, yet God's work was evidenced all through the writings. Jewish rabbis have since found the name of God in Hebrew formed by taking first letters of 1:20, 5:4, 5:13, 7:5 and 7:7. Even this is a hidden reference. The fact that God's name could not be called did not stop his hand from moving in the life of the people.

The story is that of a king and his kingdom. The king divorces the queen who is at his side when the story opens, and thereby becomes a lonely man by his own decree. He is powerless to change the decree after it is issued, and in his loneliness he begins a search for a new queen. Esther, under the control of her cousin, Mordecai, is brought before the king and he falls in love with her. Because of her beauty he immediately chooses her to be his queen and exalts her to the second place in the kingdom.

Haman managed to pull the wool over the king's eyes and deceive him into signing a decree to destroy all the Jews in his kingdom. Immediately antagonistic toward Mordecai Haman and Mordecai are instantly in direct conflict, because Haman was "the enemy of the Jews." Learning that Mordecai is a Jew, he vows to eliminate him from the kingdom. Mordecai overhears the plot and gets word to Queen Esther that she would need to act to save the people. He is confident that the people would be saved, either by her hand or by someone's hand because God would not allow his people to be destroyed. Thus he utters the words of this text, "and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?"

Eventually Esther is able to expose Haman's plans, and save the people but not before watching Mordecai raised to a position of prominence and Haman hanged from the gallows he built for Mordecai.

How is God's providence revealed in the book of Esther?

1. Although highly improbable, Esther was able to win a beauty contest and become Queen (2:15-18)

2. Mordecai's overhearing of the plot to destroy the people.

3. The casting of the lots that produced a date a year away gave Esther time to persuade the king to change his mind. (3:7-51)

4. The King's tolerance for Esther although he had others in his harem.

It shows that while God's name was never called in Esther his hand was felt in the way he caused things to happen for his people.

No One Is Insignificant

Both Esther and Mordecai are examples of how God can place people at different ends of the spectrum to accomplish his purpose. One was placed as a Queen the other as a man who sat by the gate. Both were instruments used to accomplish the same purpose.

In life, we often think our elevation or selection to a particular position or post came by chance. The term we generally use to describe our good fortune is "luck." We felt lucky to get a special promotion or lucky to get a job in a certain area.

But could it be that God arranged for us to be where we are for a specific purpose? Is it possible the man who bags the grocery and smiles every day to weary shoppers was placed there for a purpose, beyond keeping bread on his own table? Is it possible that the plumber, bus driver, or the yard man have another purpose other than providing a service when we call? Is it possible that you are more than a nurse or doctor, secretary or civic leader?

This text seems to indicate that although the name of God may not have been mentioned in your selection to your present station in life, His hand was in the process nevertheless. When you were hired, seldom did your employer say he hired you because he was inspired by God or moved by the Holy Spirit to do so. It appeared that you were hired on the merits of your resume' or record of experience. God's name was not mentioned at all, but the believer knows that while his name was never called, God was nevertheless in the plan.

Our history is filled with examples of how God placed seemingly insignificant personalities in the right place to accomplish his purpose. During the days of segregation, many troubles for our people were averted because a well placed maid was able to speak a word on our behalf. Some were tired laborers like Rosa Parks, placed on a city bus at just the right time. Others were great organizers and motivators like Frederick Douglass and A. Phillip Randolph. God has a way of placing the right people in the right place at the right time, to benefit his people.

Christians must be careful not to become complacent with their role in life. It is possible for us to come to believe that what we do is insignificant. The school cook, after a while, starts to believe her role is unimportant. Yet it is highly possible that she is the one person that motivates others to keep a focus on quality for we are "feeding God's children." The auto repairman, the lawyer, the cashier and others, all play significant roles in God's master plan for his people. We are where we are as a part of God's master plan. It did not happen by chance.

No one is insignificant. God uses each of us to carry out his divine providence.

An Unseen Hand

Finally we must consider that often we may not be able to see God move, but we know he is there. We may not seem him walking but we can look back and see his foot prints in the sand.

Consider the father who had a spend thrift daughter who couldn't resist a good bargain. When she moved away from home the father promised to take care of her. A friend asked the father, after several months, whether or not he had heard from his daughter. The father said he hadn't seen her but he knew about her actions. She celebrated her birthday this month a bought a birthday cake and a dress. She went to a restaurant and must have entertained friends too. The father proceeded to other activities. The friend asked, "How is it you know so much about what your daughter is doing, but you have seen or heard from her?" The father answered that when she left he gave her his credit card. He keeps up with her through the charges that show up on his bill. "When I get to the total every month. I feel her presence although I can't see her face."

God moves in mysterious ways. Often we can't tell how he's doing what he's doing, we just know that he's doing it!

Joseph can testify that when he was thrown into a pit by his brothers, there was an unseen hand that cushioned his fall and guided him from a pit to a prison cell to a palace. He didn't see his hand but he knew he was there!

Daniel can testify that when he was taken into exile as a captive, God moved to lift him from his lowly position and placed him in a place of honor!

The Three Hebrew Boys can testify that God protected them in the fiery furnace. They didn't know whether he would be there, but they were confident. Can't you hear their declared "Our God is able to deliver us!

God moves in mysterious ways!

I'm reminded of a man who had fallen from cliff and dangled by the end of a rope being held by his friend. The friend yell to him to hold on "I've got the rope!" As the man was eased down he suddenly made a huge drop followed by a sudden stop. Then he was eased to the ground. On the ground his friend came and hugged his neck. The man said you scared me there for a minute, you let me go for a second. The friend responded, "I did let go. I tried to hold on but I couldn't. The rope slipped out of my hand. Then suddenly, I got a surge of strength from somewhere and picked up the rope. You made it to the bottom, but I don't know who was holding the rope!" The man lifted his hand to the sky and gave praise to God. "I couldn't see his hand, but I know who was holding the rope!"

Whose holding the rope for you?

When troubles get you down, whose holding the rope?

When doctors give up on you, whose holding the rope?

When friends slip and let go, whose holding the rope?

When your best efforts fail and you seem to be lost, whose holding the rope?

The man who is holding the rope is the same man that carried a cross for us back on Calvary's hill.

The man who is holding the rope is the same man who died and was buried for three days and nights!

It's the same man who arose, Early Sunday morning!

He's name is Jesus!

Keep The Home Fires Burning

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 20, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "The altar shall be kept burning on it. It shall not go out, but the priest shall burn wood on it every morning; and he shall lay out the burnt offering on it, and offer up in smoke the fat portions of the peace offerings on it. Fire shall be kept burning continually on the altar; it is not to go out." Leviticus 6:12-13

Introduction

Have you ever started on a project, but somewhere along the road lost the enthusiasm needed for its completion? You began with such vigor and enthusiasm that it could not be paralled anywhere. Was it a personal goal? Was it a business or social commitment? At the onset, it appeared that you would be unstoppable, yet somewhere along the road you just ran out of gas. Your enthusiasm began to smolder. What was once a burning fire had reduced itself to a mere smoldering pile of ashes. That's the way it is with lost enthusiasm.

Why do fires go out? Generally, fires are extinguished when one or more of the elements needed to keep them going begin to disappear. Fires need air to continue burning. They also need combustible material. That's why fire fighters combat forest fires by dozing them with chemicals to cut off the air supply or by cutting or burning down all of the trees in front of a raging fire to starve it to death. Consider the little scout who spent his first night in the woods. Being new, he drew the assignment to keep the fire burning all night. At first the fire burned high and the camp was warm. Then the boy looked at the darkness of the trees surrounding the camp site area and became afraid of the dark. He laid by the fire placing small twigs instead of limbs on the fire until there was nothing remaining. Finally, all that was left were small handfuls of straw. When his fellow campers awakened they found that they fire had gone completely out. They questioned him, "What happened to the fire?" The boy, surrounded by a wood everywhere said, "I couldn't find anything to burn!" At that the others in his patrol looked around their tents and showed the new boy that they had camped in a freshly cut part of the forest with an ample supply of firewood laying everywhere. There was plenty of firewood available, but he did not have the will to gather it in the dark.

In a similar sense many begin efforts with enthusiasm but allow the fires to go out when it gets dark. They burn up everything they have collected to keep it going, but because maintaining the fire often requires them to venture into the unknown or to face the possibility of criticism or disappointment, they let the fires go out.

The same is true of believers who begin their walk with Christ with great faith and enthusiasm and somehow let the fires die.

As Christians, we strive to keep the fire of our faith burning daily. We study the word, pray, sing and fellowship. In doing so we build our faith in the God we serve.

Exposition

This text focuses on God's command to the priests to maintain the fire of the altar of sacrifice.

Leviticus focuses mainly on the particulars associated with the operation of the Tabernacle. It details the duties of the priests and the rituals and ceremonies associated with the sacrifices.

This passage focuses on the command to the priests to maintain the fire of the altar continuously. God himself lit the fire. They were ordered to make sure that it never burned out. The priests took that responsibility seriously. The organized themselves to maintain the fire 24 hours a day seven days a week. When the temple was build by Solomon, God once again lit the fire (2 Chronicles 7:1) Their vigil was maintained continuously for 800 years until the fall of Jerusalem to the Babylonians.

Building The Fire

There is an urgent need for believers to rekindle the flame of worship, study and service in the kingdom of God. Many have allowed their spirit of service to dwindle from the burning fire of yesterday to the smoldering ashes of today. They have become relics and empty shells of what they once were. The fire that was ignited in our spirits was sparked by the Holy Ghost. We must feed that fire however, it we want to maintain its presence.

What does it take to build the fire of faith and to keep it going?

KINDLING: A Good fire starts with kindling. Kindling are small combustible items that burn fast and easy.. String, dry grass, leaves and match stick size twigs are examples of kindling. The very nature of kindling is that it is a quick starter. It is also the nature of kindling to burn up fast.

It is very difficult to start a fire without kindling. However, it is also difficult to keep one going on kindling alone.

This the case with many Christians who drawn in the Christian family by the power of emotional experiences. There is a certain element of emotion that is necessary to keep a fire going. This is true in nearly any area of endeavor from interpersonal relationships to politics. There has to be some emotion to energize a move to action. The preacher needs a little emotion. The choir needs a little emotion. The deacon needs a little emotion. It is God's fire starter.

Emotional experiences can start a fire but few can keep one going. They burn out quickly, are easily past and need a constant infusion of more kindling to maintain the flame. It's spirit based emotion that makes the preacher whoop after he has preached. It's emotion that makes choir members clap their hands although clapping is not on the printed sheet. Its emotion that makes a deacon pray and impassioned prayer rather than simply going through the motion. It's emotion that makes a church say "Amen" to truth and stand on its feet in a moment of praise.

Believers who are building their spiritual lives looking for emotional experiences must remember that while emotion is good and even necessary, emotion alone won't keep the fire going. A Christian life based on emotion will leave the believer starving for more emotional experiences, searching from church to church to have their cravings fed.

TENDER: Fires that last longer also have tender. This is a wood supply that is a little thicker than kindling. It burns easily, but needs a little encouragement. Tender burns a little longer than kindling because there is more of it.

Believers who have witnessed God in action and have experienced his wonder working ability add the tender of faith to their fire. Faith comes through experience with God. Those who have trusted him and tried him have a tendency to burn longer. Those who obey his commands, pray, tithe and live righteously before him seem to have fire that burns longer than those that simply operate on emotion alone.

Obedience to God is essential to keeping the fire going. We cannot expect to maintain a spiritual relationship with him unless we walk in the spirit. Singing, shouting and other emotional experiences don't last long. The fire is maintained through the Christian walk. That's why Galatians 5:25 says " If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit."

Faith in God is also tender. Sometimes it takes a little encouragement to get it going, but once we have seen God in action, faith produces a stronger believer than one who is simply all praise. Faith comes in two ways. First, faith comes by hearing the preaching of the Gospel. The more we hear the Gospel preached the stronger our faith. That's why Romans 10:17 "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Secondly, Faith comes from trusting in the Lord on a daily basis. Faith comes from allowing him to guide our steps along the way.

FUEL: What keeps fire going longest is fuel. These are the large logs that burn just as hot as tender but they last longer. Some types of wood such as oak and other hardwoods break up into embers called coals that continue to provide heat even though they appear to be dead. Even in wet weather hard wood can be cut to the center. There a woodsmen will find enough dry wood to produce both kindling and tender from the same log. After a long night, the fire pit may look dead but all you have to do is stir the coals and blow them and the fire starts all over again!

As believers we must approach God with a commitment for service. Commitment is not predicated on emotion. Commitment does not depend upon there being an atmosphere of prosperity. Those who are committed have decided to weather the storm and to serve the Lord. The committed have decided that Jesus is their choice and there will be no turning back.

Home Fires Burning

Nehemiah led the children of Israel from captivity under Persia. His quest was to return home. However, when Nehemiah made it to Jerusalem his heart sank. The temple had been desecrated. The walls of the city had been broken and the perpetual fire that had been maintained for 800 years by the priests had gone out. Nehemiah went to work on the walls and Ezra went to work on the spiritual life of the people. The quest was to rekindled the flames and keep the home fire burning.

To keep the home fire burning today we need to be emotional sometimes. There should be something that makes us want to clap our hands or say "Amen!" There should be something about God that makes us want to "Stomp!"

To keep the fire burning we must become students of the Word. We should attend bible study, pray and regularly hear the word of God preached.

To keep the fire burning we must trust God and be bold enough to step out on faith.

To keep the fire going we must approach him fully committed to do anything he wants us to do, go any place he wants us to go and perform any service he wants us to.

At home, there is a need for your involvement!

At home, the choir needs your voice!

At home, the ushers need your smiling face!

At home, the ministries of the church need your service!

At home, the worship needs your sincerity!

At home, the youth need some of your time!

At home, the poor and distressed need or compassionate spirit!

If your individual fire has gone out, the Word reminds you today to keep the home fire burning!

After a long night, it is possible for a flame to disappear, but the good thing about being saved is that all it takes to rekindled the fire is for the Holy Spirit to breathe on us and stir up the gift!

That's why the song writer said, "Spirit of the living God fall fresh on me. Melt me, mold me, break me, shape me, spirit of the living God fall fresh on me!"

Powerful things happen when we are moved by the spirit.

God's spirit, can lift up a bowed down head!

God's spirit, can take a defeated soul and give it the victory!

God's spirit, can take a weakened faith and give it strength!

Keep the home fires burning!

Keep telling the story!Keep telling the world about Jesus!

Tell them that he died! Tell them that he arose!

Tell them that he is alive today!

All Dressed Up With Some Place To Go

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 13, 1997

SCRIPTURE: My brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons. For if there come unto your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment And ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool: Are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts? Hearken, my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him? James 2:1-5; "And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellowservants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled." Revelation 6:11

Introduction

Have you ever had an occasion to be dressed, ready and waiting for an activity, only to learn that it had been canceled? What do you do on such occasions. Your clothes are neat. Your hair is well groomed. Everything about you is just right. What do you do? It's a frustrating feeling to simply sit and wait, all dressed up with no place to go. Many people are creatures of habit when it comes to dressing up. Often their emphasis is placed on the way they look rather than their character.

There is the story of the man who came down from the North Carolina mountains. He was all dressed up and carrying his Bible. A friend saw him and asked, "Elias, what's happening? Where are you going all dressed up like that?" Elias said, "I've been hearing about New Orleans. I hear that there is a lot of free-runnin' liquor and a lot of gamblin' and a lot of real good naughty shows." The friend looked him over and said, "But Elias, why are you carrying your Bible under your arm?" And Elias replied, "Well, if it's as good as they say it is, I might stay over until Sunday." There are many who think the outside appearance supersedes the inside and they work extra hard to look good.

The African-American tendency to dress formally for worship services is rooted in our history. Sentenced to daily lives of drudgery in the cotton and tobacco fields of the South, African-Americans had few opportunities to wear anything except work clothes. Even those were scanty. On occasion masters who considered themselves benevolent would give their loyal slaves an item or two of old clothing as a reward for some special deed or attitude. Slaves who had received such gifts had no place to wear them except at the monthly gathering at the plantation church. That and perhaps the annual Christmas celebration or the layby after crops were planted was one of only a few times a year we could wear "dress up" clothes.

Dressing up for Sunday became the thing to do. The African-American wardrobe, for many years, included special "Sunday clothes" or "Church Clothes." Generally, we have a "Sunday" dress or a "Sunday" pair of shoes. Clothes reserved for Sunday have often been described as "Sunday-Go-To-Meeting" Clothes. Men are generally expected to wear a tie. Women are expected to be at their best grooming, complete with full makeup, stockings and a hat. Those who appeared at worship service without their "Sunday-Go-To-Meeting" clothes were often frowned upon by others as examples of disrespect.

With that history, many who have been invited to attend a worship service refused because they don't have the required attire. Often they know they will be prejudged by what they wear, before anyone ever takes time to find out who they really are inside.

As Christians, we know that God does not judge us from the outward appearance. In fact, God is not impressed by anything we wear because he saw us in the shower before we put on anything! God is concerned with our heart. Let us show that same concern for others.

Exposition

This text focuses on James as he gives instruction to the church about the equality of every person in Christian service.

The Jewish synagogue was a place of common ground for both the rich and the poor. There were many synagogues in nearly every town in Israel. In the country areas they were established close to rivers. All manners of men and women attended a synagogue. There were enough to go around because any 10 Jews could start one. There were 480 synagogues in Jerusalem alone.

Every Jew was expected to attend either the worship at the temple or a synagogue assembly at least once each week. At the synagogue he or she would received their education, religious instruction, direction in righteous living. Moreover, the synagogue was also a place of judgment.

Jews brought their disputes to the council which could have as few as three men or as many as 13. These men would hear and make judgments on their interpersonal disputes.

Because the synagogue was a place of common ground, it was essential that those who came in the midst of the "assembly" possess a sense of commonality with all believers. Thus, James, building on the understanding that Jews had of the synagogue, expressed the importance of every believer understanding fully that in the assembly of the saints on Sunday as well as in the presence of God himself, all Saints are one.

He warned them against prejudging individuals by their dress. Clothing and adornments should not be a standard by which believers are judged, but the content of the heart and their character. His direction was simple, there should be no special treatment given to any person among the saints on the basis of their wealth or position or their appearance in this respect. No special seats were to be given to the wealthy. No special privileges were to be given to those who were accustomed to royal treatment outside of the congregation. In Christ, even the poorest saint is an equal with the most affluent.

Common Ground

Today, it is supposed that the one place where every man is equal is at 11 O'clock on Sunday. However, that often proves to be a great myth. Believers, often without knowing it, often find themselves erecting barriers that separate themselves from others perceived to be different. Sometimes the barriers separate us by race. Sometimes the barriers are the result of class and social standing. Whatever the case, Sunday mornings are known for their separateness in the unique manner we commonly call "Christian."

CLASS: There is an element of class distinction in every group of believers. Class distinctions are differences between those who are perceived to be affluent and those who are less affluent. While reading scriptures that rail against class-ism, many believers practice it anyway. A person who visits a congregation who appears to relate to our class is welcomed. Another is shunned. Among the less fortunate, the more fortunate is treated differently. Either he or she is welcomed or shunned on the basis of class alone. Among the fortunate, the less fortunate are often patronized and tolerated but rarely thought of as equal RACE: Race is often a distinguishing factor among believers. Generally Blacks perceive of themselves as the identified "type" of Israel in the bible. Some still think of whites and anyone else as too different to occupy their section of heaven. There are many whites that consider Blacks as a necessary burden of the faith, but not equal before God.

SOCIAL STANDING: There are also those who make differences based upon social affiliations. Those who join the circle of believers who are members of the same fraternity or sorority usually find themselves socially accepted. Small cliques can develop that include the socially acceptable to the exclusion of all others.

With man made barriers constructed even among believers, the word of God still remains clear. Each person who enters the house of God must be received equally and respected equally without regard to race, class or social standing. The church should be the one place where every person finds common ground.

There are many who claim that they cannot attend worship services because they don't have the proper attire. Their words reflect their feeling that they will be judged by their outward appearance.

While there are many that do not attend because they can't "dress up" there are many who actually attend, dressed up, but they have no place to go. There is no place in the kingdom of God for those who are respecters of persons.

Some Place to Go

Finally brothers and Sisters we must consider that every believer is getting dressed up, because he has some place to go!

Believers don't put much stock in outward appearances, although they strive to look their best when representing the Kingdom or in formal occasions. The true believer knows that he will be judged in the final analysis not by what he or she wears on the outside but by what they wear on the inside.

The believer wants to get dressed up on the inside because he has somewhere to go!

The believer wants to get dressed up on the inside because he wants to impress the Lord. God won't be impressed with the outside, but he will be impressed by the inside.

As believers we have someplace to go! That's why we want to be dressed right!

We are polishing shoes that will help us to walk up the King's highway. We are dressed up with some place to go!

We are grooming our hair for a God who knows all about us and has even counted the hairs of our head.

We are washing out hands so we can approach life with innocence. We are dressed up with some place to go!

We are not worried about designer outsides, because that's what man sees! We are worried about being designed on the inside by the hand of God himself.

We are dressed up because we are on our way!

We've got someplace to go!

We're on our way to place, where the wicked will cease from troubling!

We're on our way to a place, where the weary will be at rest!

We're on our way to a place, it will always be howdy and never good-bye!

We're dressing up because we are on our way to see the King!

It's not about clothes! It's not about class! It's not about social standing!

It's about Jesus, who died on Calvary!

It's about Jesus, who arose from the dead!

I don't know about you, but I'm dressed up on the inside...and I'm on my way!

The Fountain "For" Youth

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 27, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "For with thee is the fountain of life: in thy light shall we see light." Psalm 36:9 "The fear of the LORD is a fountain of life, to depart from the snares of death." Proverbs 14:27 "And he said unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely." Revelation 21:6

Introduction

What would you do if you learned that there was a way that you could stay young forever? Would the thought rouse your curiosity? Would you be tempted to explore the possibility, especially if it was clinically plausible? There are millions today that are doing just that, searching for ways to look and feel young? Since there are so many people interested in the subject it is no small wonder that a whole industry has developed around a plethora of products that all promise to do one thing...keep us young.

Some want to be young so bad they'll fall for just about anything. Consider the con men who made millions selling pill bottles of tap water. One con man, nice looking, youthful and well dressed, stood on the corner holding a pill bottle of water. He said nothing. He just stood on the corner and held the pill bottle in his hand. The other con man went a block down the street and stopped pedestrians pointing to the man on the corner. "Isn't it a shame" he said "They should stop that man from doing that!" He shook his head. The pedestrian looked and saw scores of people walking up to the man offering him rolls of money for bottles of tap water. "It should be a crime" said the 2nd con man. "All those people think he's selling water from the fountain of youth. He's just playing them all for suckers! It's wrong. It's just a shame!" Amazed at the crowd of people that were surrounding the man offering him money one pedestrian asked, "Why hasn't he been arrested?" The con man gave his marks a bewildered look and said, "He's been arrested so many times the police just leave him alone. He was arrested in 1895, 1912, 1941, 1963, 1972, 1985, 1991 and just this year. I can't figure out why people keep coming back! Hearing that, everyone in the crowd dropped everything they had, ran over to the man and begged him to take their hard earned money ..for a swallow of tap water! Some want to be young so bad they'll believe anything and do just about anything to achieve it!

The Explorer Ponce De Leon spent a lifetime searching for the fountain of youth and never found it.. In April of 1513 he found Florida while chasing down rumors he heard in the West Indies about a fountain they thought made people young and virile again. He gave up his quest for the fountain of youth, realizing it didn't exist.

Ponce De Leon gave up but there are millions today that are still looking for the fountain of youth. To service their hunger an entire industry has developed selling anything and everything to guarantee youth and virility. In Palm Harbor Florida the Fountain of Youth institute offers a series of massages and treatments to retard aging and suspend participants in a period of youth and vitality. A new wonder drug called DHEA is being promoted a hormone that retards sickness, cell deterioration and aging for many years. Plastic Surgeons are offering face lifts, and other lifts to give a more youthful appearance. The Movie Cocoon even touched on the subject of staying young indefinitely as it focused on a group of senior citizens that stumbled upon alien cocoons that gave them renewed energy and vigor.

Looking for the fountain of youth took up most of Ponce De Leon's life. Today there are many who have youth are wasting it while there are many others whose time has passed, still living as if they were teens.

Yet our God makes us a promise that makes more sense than Ponce De Leon's obsession. The promise is that those who trust in God will be guided to a fountain whose waters will not only guarantee youthful energy, zeal and ideals, but eternal life. The words ring out clear "For with thee is the fountain of life: in thy light shall we see light." Psalm 36:9

As Christians, we come to the fountain of God's grace and mercy every day. We drink of it freely. We know it guarantees us eternal life!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains how God is the source of real life and real living.

David's 36th Psalm is one which encourages believers to continue trusting God who continuously blesses mankind with everything that is good and meaningful.

In verses one through four he lays out the life-style of the ungodly: wild, deceitful and wicked. The ungodly spend their lives wastefully, as if there were no God and no judgment. His mouth is filled with evil words and his thoughts filled with evil deceptions. When the wicked are sleep at night they dream of the wicked things they will act upon when they awake. The wicked set themselves on a path that is not good.

The idea of God as the fountain of life and the source of all lasting happiness and peace is used several times in scripture. In Jeremiah 2:13 the people are chastised for seeking their own fountains of life: "For My people have committed two evils: They have forsaken Me, The fountain of living waters, To hew for themselves cisterns, Broken cisterns that can hold no water." The people sought vainly to find ways to acquire happiness, joy and life without God. They spent their substance and time seeking after it. But their efforts were vain and futile because each time they came close to finding this fountain of life outside of God, it disappeared. Their efforts were like water barrels filled with holes. It left them thirsty and empty.

In contrast, David shows the attitude of believers in verses five through 12. David praises the magnificence of God. He praises God's providence. He praises God's benevolence. The believer is blessed to constantly drink from God's fountain which provides the essence of things that make life beautiful, pleasant, comfortable and joyful. In the middle of his troubles, Job saw this fountain and chastised his critics by saying, "He does not look at the streams, The rivers flowing with honey and curds." Job 20:17. In Psalm 46:4 David projects that this fountain of God's blessing flows through the hearts of believers. He said "There is a river whose streams make glad the city of God, The holy dwelling places of the Most High."

This river of life will be supplied to each believer eternally. It will provide the energy of youth, joy for the soul and rejuvenated aspiration. That is the meaning of Revelation 21:6 which says in part, "...I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely."

The presence of the river of God that constantly feeds the happiness of the Saints is projected again in Revelation 22:1 "THEN he showed me a river of the water of life, clear as crystal, coming from the throne of God and of the Lamb."

Thus, the unrighteous spend their lives seeking their own fountains and living by their own deceitful ways. While the unrighteous seek to find or build their own fountains of life, the righteous turn to God, who is the source of all life and happiness. He promises to all who follow him, life eternal.

Those who find God find the fountain of life!

The Fountains of Youth

A fountain by definition is a natural outflow or spring of water. It is not artificial. Neither is it the result of human creation. Its flow is unending. Man has many inventions that appear to be fountains and work like fountains but are not really fountains at all.

Youth probably first come in contact with man made fountains in the context of a school or day care center. There is a machine that is called a fountain that produces water each time a knob is turned. It appears to be a fountain because the flow of water seems never to end. As long as one holds the knob the water seems to keep coming.

HOLDING THE KNOB, GETTING THE FLOW. Here lies one of the mysteries of youth. Life often creates the illusion that the blessings of youth will continue forever. Thus, many youth take their youthful years lightly. They squander their health and abuse themselves in unbelievable ways. Regardless to how much abuse they give their bodies nothing seems to injure them.. While the world warns them constantly, they hold the knob of the fountain and see that the flow continues.

While it is true that as long as one holds the knob, the water will flow, it is also true that the flow is not natural. It is totally dependent upon its connection to the source. If the connection is disrupted for any reason holding the knob won't do any good.

While it may appear that the flow is unending, there are times when the water source in many cities is threatened and unnecessary uses of water are limited. It may appear that the source is unlimited but each time we make a draw, our earthly sources diminish.

WHEN THE BUBBLES GO UP, THE SUPPLY GOES DOWN. Some are familiar with fountains with visible sources. Bottles of pure water sit atop fountains. When a cup of water is drawn from this type of fountain, one instantly sees the bubbles go up. Even though the cup is filled each time the button is pushed, it becomes very obvious that it won't be long before the reservoir is depleted.

Each time youth drink from the fountain of worldliness they diminish themselves in visible ways.

When a cigarette is smoked...blup! The bubbles go up! Each youth should say, there goes about two minutes of my life.

When alcoholic beverages are consumed, listen for the sound!....blup! The bubbles go up!

When drugs are used, listen for the sound!...blup! The bubbles go up!

When youth engage in sex outside of marriage, listen for the sound!...blup! The bubbles go up!

Those who work or study all day and party all night...listen for the sound! When the bubbles go up, I take down a large part of my life in measurable cup fulls.

OLD FOLKS AT THE KIDDY FOUNTAIN: Some fountains are made for children. They are low and easy to access. It is expected that children will drink from these specially made fountains. It is also expected that they will outgrow them.

Yet in life, there are many old folks at the kiddy fountain. These are men and women who should have learned better but are still looking for the fountains of youth.

They have not learned how to live as a mature man or woman, responsible, happy and free. Neither have they accepted the joy of having overcome many of the pitfalls of youth. The beauty of maturity is having outgrown the need for the kiddy fountain, training wheels, pacifiers, diapers and fads.

The mature man or woman agrees with Paul in 1 Corinthians 13:11, "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things."

The fountains of youth are deceptive because they appear to be unending. Like in David and Jeremiah's day, many forsake God as they drink from man made fountains that are not endless, eternal or comprehensive.

Those who drink from the fountains of this world diminish themselves each time they take a drink.

Fountain for Youth

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that while the world supplies many fountains OF youth, there is a fountain FOR youth.

While there are a multiplicity of fountains that are frequented BY youth, there is a fountain FOR youth.

While there are many artificial fountains that present themselves TO youth, there is a fountain FOR youth.

While there many fountains that are ABOUT youth and invite them to step up and take a drink, there is a fountain FOR youth!

This fountain is not a physical fountain. If it were then the world could have gone to the Pools of Solomon near Bethlehem, there was and still is a continuous flow of cool fresh water. While it's not the pools of Solomon, there is a fountain in the mountain!

This fountain is not visible to the eye. If it were then the world could have gone to the Fountains at Jerusalem that were supplied by several underground sources. They were beautiful to the eye but they didn't last long. But there is a fountain in the mountain!

Though the waters of the Jordan run deep and wide, it is not the same as the fountain in the mountain.

What is this fountain in the mountain? Does it actually exist? Can it bring eternal life?

If you don't believe there is a fountain, ask the disciples who asked Jesus to give them the bread of life. In John 6:35 Jesus answered them saying, "I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst."

If you don't believe there is a fountain, ask the woman at the well. She came to the well but ended up drinking from the fountain. Jesus told her in John 4:14 "But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

No wonder then that the song writer would write, "There is a fountain filled with blood, drawn from Immanuel's veins. And sinners plunged beneath the flood, lose all their guilty stains!"

The fountain is the blood of Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who was buried in a lowly grave!

Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

Jesus, who calls out to the thirsty and searching hearts!

Come unto me!

Come unto me! And I'll give you living water!

Delivered From Afflictions

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 3, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "Many are the afflictions of the righteous: but the LORD delivereth him out of them all." Psalm 34:19

Introduction

Have you ever found yourself in a situation from which you prayed to be delivered? Deliverance situations are those when we instantly recognize that we won't be able to survive the circumstance without some outside assistance. Deliverance situations effect us personally. These are the times when we look around and know that we can't make it without a little help. They also occur in our families, when problems reach crises level and our solutions have failed. Whether its personal, family or in our social circles, deliverance situations have a way of making themselves known.

When is the right time to ask for deliverance? Consider the hungry cat that sat down with an empty plate before him. His stomach growled and he was desperate for something to eat. The cat looked at his empty plate and said "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." Just then he saw a mouse sit down. His plate was empty as well. When the mouse looked up and saw the hungry cat he began to pray, "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies." Just then a bulldog came in. He was hungry too. He looked at both the cat and the mouse with an appetizing glint in his eye. They both rose from the table and eased away as they said, "lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil!" At that they delivered themselves from evil!

The late Norman Vincent Peale was known for his noteworthy suggestion that every problem comes with a seed of solution attached. In essence, what we need for deliverance is always within our grasp, but is generally untapped or unused. A seed sometimes lays around for years before it's ability to take root and provide new growth is used. The farmer who has eaten all his food and is faced with prospect of hunger, can have plenty if he puts the seed to good use.

Often our prayer for deliverance is for the threatening situation to vanish. In reality, the situation seldom vanishes, we are removed from the situation or the impact of its effects. The Three Hebrew Boys were not removed from the furnace, they were protected from its effects. The Lions of Daniel were not removed from the pit, he was simply protected in the pit. We should remember that often our deliverance is not dependent upon the fire being extinguished but on helping us to survive despite the flames.

It is possible for us to be surrounded by a threatening situation but not be consumed by it ourselves. Martin Luther King was surrounded by hatred but was delivered from its effects. If there is strife in your family or on your job, it is possible to be delivered from its effects. It's possible to keep a cool head and stable spirit, knowing God is still in control. To be delivered in this respect means to live beyond the emotion of the moment.

As Christians, we should always remember that God is in the delivering business. However, we do not expect him to prevent evil from coming upon us but to deliver us out of the mouth of evil. This is our hope as believers and this is the faith which our Lord Jesus gives each person that trusts him.

Exposition

This text reflects David's feelings of desperation and his hope that God would deliver him from adversity.

Most of the Psalms have been ascribed to David. "Most" is important because some are unidentified. At least one is ascribed to Solomon another to Moses, but most reflect the moods and emotions of David, a true picture of the believer's experience in the world. The moods and emotions reflected in the Psalms parallel those of the average believer. Therefore, believers who share common experiences can be helped by reading them. For instance, if you are fearful, read Psalm 56 or Psalm 91 or Psalm 23. And if you are discouraged, read Psalm 42. If you happen to be feeling lonely, Psalm 71 or Psalm 62. If you are oppressed, with a sense of sinfulness, then try Psalm 51, written after David's double sin of adultery and murder; and Psalm 32, a great expression of confession and forgiveness. If you are worried or anxious, try Psalm 37 and Psalm 73. If you are angry, try Psalm 58 or Psalm 13. If you are resentful, read Psalm 94 or Psalm 77. If you are happy and want some words to express your happiness, try Psalm 92 or Psalm 66. If you feel forsaken, try Psalm 88. If you are grateful read Psalm 40. If you are doubtful, if your faith is beginning to fail, read Psalm 119.

Psalm 34 is an expression of another of the spiritual needs of the believer, the need for deliverance from adversity. It was written in David's youth as he fled from King Saul. The actual events it reflects are detailed in 1 Samuel 21. David was being persecuted by the King and despite the fact that the entire army of Israel sought after him, David was delivered. On some occasions he deceived his captors. On other occasions he went so far as to fake insanity (1 Samuel 21:13). The end result was that he survived what should have been his defeat and later became the King of Israel.

The emotion David felt when he was trapped is what every believer understands. He was being pursued because of a jealous hearted king. He had done his best to defend the country and kill Goliath. Instead he was hunted. Everywhere he turned he met adversity and persecution and trouble. However, Saul was frustrated in his various attempts because David's life seemed to be charmed. No matter how many times he was trapped, he always seemed to escape. No matter how many soldiers he brought against him, David seemed to slip away. No matter how physically exhausted or depleted he became, David seemed to be protected by the hand of God himself as he was delivered from every circumstance.

Thus David could comfortably write in 34:19 "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all."

As David wrote this Psalm of praise to God for deliverance, his meditations provide reassurance for all believers that God will do the same for them.

Righteous

David makes it clear that afflictions do not exempt the righteous. In fact, he makes the point of stressing that the righteous can expect many afflictions. Who are the righteous? In Old Testament times righteousness was an earned status. Those who kept the law of Moses to the letter or participated in the prescribed ceremonies to acquire atonement could consider themselves righteous. In New Testament times the righteous are believers who have been saved by the Grace of God through the blood of Christ. They have not earned their redemption by their perfection but rather they have earned it through the free will of God.

Many Afflictions

Afflictions generally have three connotations in the common vernacular:

1) ADVERSE CIRCUMSTANCES THAT COME UPON US. These are adverse situations that seem to befall us that are not the result of any action or inaction on our part. The blind man that Jesus healed was an example of this kind of affliction. He was not blind as a result of any action on his part. His affliction came upon him from birth. There was a reason and a purpose for his situation, but he was not the cause. In a similar manner there are many who deal with a wide variety of maladies that are not the result of their own doing. Some wrestle with ill health, family situations and even financial maladies that are not of their own design. Even in this context, the words of David still linger in the believers heart "the Lord delivereth him out of them all."

2) ADVERSE CIRCUMSTANCES THAT ARE BROUGHT UPON US BY OTHERS: There are some types of difficulties that the result of the natural design, but the products of influence of Satan. It is possible for a perfectly innocent person to be severely afflicted. This is the example of the Book of Job. Job was afflicted in every kind of way possible. He was stricken physically with sores and boils. He lost his financial base and struggled with the death of his sons and daughters. All this happened to him even though he had not done anything wrong. By definition Job was a honest man and a righteous man. Job 1:1" says he was "man was perfect and upright, and one that feared God, and eschewed evil." His circumstance came about because Satan was interfering with his affairs. In a similar sense, there are many believers today who are suffering the same afflictions, not because of their doing but because Satan, working through a variety of influences is interfering in their affairs. Yet in this context David's words still linger, "the Lord delivereth him out of them all."

3) SELF INFLICTED AFFLICTIONS: While there are some afflictions that come upon us and others are brought upon us by others, there are some afflicting circumstances that we bring upon ourselves. These circumstances for which we can blame no one but ourselves. When King David was stricken with a venereal disease he could not blame a single person for his circumstance. To his credit he did not pass the buck and blame to someone else, Psalm 38:3 "There is no soundness in my flesh because of thine anger; neither is there any rest in my bones because of my sin." He was the cause of his own problem. Similarly, there are many today who have self inflicted afflictions. Sin, neglect and simple recklessness have caused hardships for many of us. We have made our beds hard by our own actions. But even in this context, David's words remind us that he will "delivereth him out of them all."

All

Finally, we must consider the conclusiveness of David's affirmation. While detailing God's ability and willingness to deliver the righteous from adversities he defines the limits of the deliverance. David said God will deliver the righteous from all afflictions.

"All" is inclusive. It does not leave room for exceptions. It means everything.

What does the word of God mean when it promises that God will deliver the righteous from "all" afflictions?

In terms of numbers, "all" refers to the whole number of our adversities, taken as a group or one by one, God will deliver us from them all. When Israel suffered the stings of slavery, God delivered them as a people from slavery, but at the same time he delivered every person. When God delivers a nation he also delivers the people within it. When the doors of segregation and racism are brought down in the nation they are also brought down for the individual.

In terms of quantity, "all" refers to the extent of adversities. While we are frightened by what seems to be an endless number of problems that come our way, first one thing then another, God is not intimidated by the number of adversities. He simply scoops them up and disposes of them "all." If you think the quantity of adversities is a consideration with God, asked Job who will testify that his problems came one behind the other, but God handled them all!

In terms of duration, "all" refers to the length of time the adversity existed. We may be awed by the fact that a situation has existed for many years, but God is not moved. He is greater than time and dwarfs its impact on any situation. If you think time is a consideration with God, ask the man who had been sitting by the pool for 38 long years did time stop the Lord from saying "rise, take thy bed and walk!"

In terms of degree, "all" refers to seriousness of the situation. We may feel that a circumstance is so serious that it is beyond resolution, but there is no problem God cannot solve. If you think seriousness and finality are a consideration with God, ask Hezekiah who lay on his sick bed whether the seriousness of his situations stopped God from giving him 15 more years!

I don't know about you, but I've found that God is all situation God.
It doesn't matter what the circumstance, God is able!
It doesn't matter how bad it seems, God is able!
Those who trust in the Lord can testify that God is able to take our:
BURDENS and lighten our load!
PROBLEMS and help us find the answers!
DARKNESS and turn it into light!
WEAKNESSES and turn them into strengths!
SET BACKS and turn them into come backs!
STUMBLING BLOCKS and turn them into stepping stones!
He was able to deliver the children of Israel from bondage!
He was able to feed five thousand with two little fishes and five loaves of bread!
He was able to make a blind man see!
He was able to make a lame man walk!
He is able to deliver me!
Who is this deliverer?
His name is Jesus!
The mighty God!
Jesus, The Rose of Sharon!
Who died out on Calvary!
Who is alive today!

What To Do With The Leftovers

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 17, 1997

SCRIPTURE:"And Jesus took the loaves; and when he had given thanks, he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would. When they were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost. Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten. John 6:11-13

Introduction

After a hefty, home cooked meal, what do you do with the leftovers? Leftovers are a common part of a home cooked meal. Many home makers quickly clear tables, cover dishes and refrigerate left over food items because they plan to serve them again. The idea of left overs finds a mixed response in many households. A home maker with several family members who refuse to eat left overs faces a dilemma, "What do you do with the left overs?"

Some homemakers serve left overs again and endure the grumbling. That was the case when the husband who hated leftovers with a passion sat down to a beautifully set table with his family. The family joined hands and bowed their heads as he offered grace for the food. "Lord, thank you for the food we are about to eat." He said "It has come from your bounty and we are grateful. Amen."

As he opened the various serving dishes the husband noticed that each was filled with left overs. "This rice looks like the same rice we had yesterday!" He said, pushing the server away. "Peas? Aren't these some of the same peas we had day before yesterday?" He went from item to item critiquing each one, snubbing all and complaining. Finally he looked at his wife and said, "Honey, we've been married for all these years, don't know I can't stand leftovers?"

Then his five year old daughter said, "Daddy, didn't you just say grace?" The father said, "Yes." With innocence pouring from her face she asked, "Did God hear what you said?" The husband said, "Why sure dear?" Then with great wisdom the girl said, "Did God hear what you said about the leftovers?" Embarrassed, the father said, "Yes, God heard that too!" Finally the girl asked, "Which one do you think God believed most?" Often we tell God we thank him for the food, then show him right after that we are not thankful by refusing to eat it or throwing it in the trash.

Leftovers! Some view their lives that way. They see themselves as useless, unimportant, failures. Some who have failed in life, love and careers view themselves as valueless shadows of what once was a great life. The world discards leftovers but what does God do with them? He gathers them up and uses them again! He restores, refurbishes and refinishes them! God loves leftovers!

As Christians, we are glad to know that we serve a God who sees our value and our worth and loves us, even after we have made mistakes and stumbled in our faults. We're glad to know he loves us even if we don't get it right the first time around. There may be some in the world that hate them, but when it comes to compassion, God loves leftovers!

Exposition

This text focuses on an episode in the life of Christ in which he challenged those who followed him to exercise faith and frugality in their service to the kingdom.

This is one of two instances in which Jesus performed a miracle that resulted in the creation of food for the masses. Jesus had been teaching his disciples and the multitudes about his mission as Messiah. He told them that God allowed him to perform miracles to witness to the fact that he was truly sent from God. In verse five he starts to remind them that his was a greater ministry than that of John and it was evidenced by his many miracles.

As he spoke to them he noticed that a large number of people had gathered to hear him. The number of the crowd was about five thousand. He seized that opportunity to give them another proof that he was sent from God. Turning to Phillip he asked where could they buy enough bread to feed 5,000. It was an academic question because Jesus already knew what he planned to do, but the question was asked anyway. Phillip said it would cost a small fortune to feed such a large number of people, not to mention the precedent he would set by feeding every large crowd that gathered to hear him.

Jesus had no obligation to feed the crowd. It was not required that he provide free lunches at all of his revival meetings. He provided the food to make several important points to his followers: 1) That he was truly sent by God. The miracles he performed were a testament to his anointed role 2) That God is able to provide resources for those who believe in him 3) That blessings once given should not be taken lightly.

They were ordered to sit in 100 groups of fifty and prepare to receive a blessing. As the five barely loaves and two fishes that were available to them were blessed by Christ the disciples began to distribute them. Each time they reached into the basket there was enough to supply every group and more.

When all had been fed Christ ordered the disciples to pick up all of the remaining fragments. There were enough leftovers to fill twelve baskets. The fragments were collected so that they would not be lost, implying that they could be used on other occasions. There was no guarantee that Jesus would always decide to feed a crowd, the leftover bread could be useful.

Only on one other occasion is Jesus noted for feeding large crowds. A crowd of four thousand was similarly fed in Mark15:36-38. In this instance the people had followed Jesus for three long days and had nothing to eat. At the close of the meal there were seven basketfuls of left overs, that were all quickly collected.

By example, Jesus gave believers a model to follow. Trust God for everything. Give thanks for God's blessings, take no part of a blessing for granted, even the leftovers.

Trust God for everything

Very often in modern times we approach life with considerable doubt. We worry from day to day about how we will make ends meet. While it is prudent and wise for us to weigh each life situation, consider our options and make decisions, we should do so with an attitude of trust.

An attitude of trust creates a situation where we remember whom it is that we serve and how he is able to provide for us, despite the apparent disparity of the moment.

In Matthew 16:8 the disciples worried about not having enough bread. They did so with Jesus in their midst. He had to remind them that their worry was unnecessary. So he asked them, were you not there when 5,000 were fed or on another occasion when 4,000 were fed and with food to spare.

If so, then worrying about the availability of food should not be a concern, God provided then and he can provide now.

Trusting God for everything means proceeding through life with the confidence that whatever I need God's got it and can provide it.

No wonder the song writer declared, "I trust in God no matter where I may be. On mountain peak or on the stormy sea. Though come what may, from day to day, my heavenly father watches over me."

Give Thanks

We should be truly thankful for whatever God has given us. Our thanks should not be grudging, but from the heart. When Jesus was given the five loaves of bread and two fish, he could have complained that he did not have more. Instead, he lifted them up to God and gave him thanks for just two fishes.

Often we spend much time complaining about what we don't have instead of being appreciative about what we do have. We complain about what we don't like to eat, without ever thinking that the alternative could easily be an empty plate. We constantly mourn about our lack of riches and fame without considering the real wealth of health, happiness and family that surround us.

We should give God true praise and thanks for what we have.
Thank you Lord for the two fishes!
Thank you for my old car!
Thank you Lord, for my oscillating fan!
Thank you for grits!
Thank you for everything!

Take Nothing For Granted

We must not squander our blessings or take them lightly. If God has arranged for a blessing to come your way use it wisely, don't discard it foolishly.

When Jesus fed the 5,000 there were 12 baskets of bread left over. The fact that the bread was left over did not mean anything was wrong with it, it meant that it was an unused blessing. Better yet, it was a blessing waiting to be used. Thus, Jesus commanded the disciples to gather up the fragments so that nothing would be lost.

It is very easy too see how we discard our food thoughtlessly, taking it for granted, but often we do the same with other blessings God has given us.

We have shoes but we won't wear them because they are not designer shoes.

We have clothes but we don't wear them because they are not this year's latest fashion.

We have health and we destroy it with, cigarettes, alcohol and drugs.

We have time and we waste it with foolish living.

We have money and we squander it with gambling and less than thrifty pursuits.

Using the leftovers

Finally, we must note that while Jesus told his disciples to pick up the fragments so that they would not be lost, there was no instruction about what exactly should be done. What was done with the fragments is implied but not specifically stated.

We are a people who know what it means to be considered a left over.

We survived on the master's left over clothes, as we took them and turned them into our Sunday best!

We were nourished on the master's left over food. We took his hog intestines and turned them into chitterlings. We took his turnip bottoms and turned them into a gourmet.

DON'T LEAVE LEFTOVERS OUT. You can't leave leftovers out. While they can be used again, you can't deal with leftovers if they are left out because they are susceptible to bacteria that cause disease.

Society today has described some of its members as leftovers and has left them out. While a leftover is a blessing unused, a leftover that is left out is a spoiled blessing that can't be used!

The alcoholic is seen as a leftover and is often left out.

The drug addict is seen as a leftover and is often left out!

The prostitute is seen as a leftover and is often left out!

But nothing can be done to help them if they are left out.

SOMETIMES LEFTOVERS ARE BEST WHEN RECYCLED: Often we encounter leftovers but we don't recognize them because they are called by a different name.

Today, they call him preacher but there was a time they called him pimp.

Today, they call him deacon but there was a time they called him devil.

Today, they call her mother and deaconess but there was a time they called her hot mama

Today, they call you a saint, but there was a time they called you a sinner!

If you don't understand that go back with me in history,

Great-grandma took the old grease from the pots and stored it with old ashes from the fire place. One day she got to stirring and took the grease and the ashes, mixed them together with other ingredients and came out with something called lie soap. It was the same leftover grease. Same leftover ashes, but recycled and called by another name.

The other day the meat and potatoes you ate were recycled and served again, but this time it was called hash!

The leftover turkey from your Thanksgiving meal is recycled and served again, but this time it's called turkey salad.

The left over corn bread was recycled and served with baked hen or turkey and called dressing!

The leftover light bread that was hard and unservable was mixed with sugar raisins and eggs and served again, but this time it was called Bread Pudding

The leftover peas, corn, and chicken pieces that cluttered the refrigerator were recycled and served again, but this time they called it Chicken Gumbo.

Every now and then when we look at our lives we should see a leftover life, recycled by the grace of God.

I heard Jesus declare, they are left over but they have some use. Gather up the leftovers and I'll come down to give them a chance to be recycled and to get a brand new name!

No wonder Paul declared, "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature. Behold old things are passed away and all things become new!"

Jesus, died that I might have a second chance!

Jesus, arose that I might have a new name!

I'm so glad that he lives in my heart!

Jesus Had An Attitude Too!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 24, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "And he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt. And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What, could ye not watch with me one hour? Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak. He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done. Matthew 26:39-42

Introduction

If I were to ask whether or not you had an attitude what would be your response? The general response of most youth is "no I don't have an attitude!" In the common use of the term an attitude is a colloquial phrase that is used to describe any person who responds or reacts in a negative way. Generally when someone is argumentative we say the person has an "attitude." A person who walks around with a chip on his shoulder is generally said to have an "attitude." Persons who are disrespectful are said to have an attitude. In fact, anyone that acts in any way that is contrary to our expectation is described as having an attitude. That's the colloquial use. Yet, while the common use of the word attitude suggests something negative, it does not always carry a negative image. An attitude is a way of responding to a circumstance. That way of responding can be negative as well as positive. In reality, every person has an attitude or a way of approaching a situation. The question is how do I respond. When we respond we have a choice. We can either have a positive or negative response.

Consider the little boy who was overheard talking to himself as he strutted through the back yard, baseball cap in place, toting ball and bat. He was heard to say, "I'm the greatest hitter in the world." Then he tossed the ball into the air, swung at it and missed. "Strike one!" Undaunted he picked up the ball, threw it into the air and said to himself, "I'm the greatest baseball hitter ever," and he swung at the ball again. And again he missed. "Strike two!" He paused a moment to examine his bat and ball carefully. Then a third time he threw the ball into the air. "I'm the greatest hitter who ever lived," he said. He swung the bat hard again, missed a third time. He cried out, "Wow! Strike three! What a pitcher! I'm the greatest pitcher in the world!" The difference between being the world's greatest hitter and the world's greatest pitcher was a matter of attitude.

Everyone has an attitude. Not every has a positive attitude. Positive attitudes often are a matter of perspective. The proverbial half glass of water is a perfect example. A half glass of water is half full if you have been trying to fill it. If you have been working to empty the glass it is half empty. It is all a matter of how one chooses to look at the situation. The same is true with attitudes.

As Christians, we assume the attitude that whatever God wants us to do we do it. Whatever day God puts before us we will live it and whatever challenge that is before us we will conquer it.

Exposition

This text considers Jesus as he talks with God about his approaching martyrdom.

The entire life of Christ had one purpose, which was to provide a means of reconciling lost mankind with God. In place of animal sacrifice he would become the eternal sacrifice by dying on Calvary to redeem lost mankind. Even though he knew the plan when he came, it still was a difficult and thankless task. It required him to die and to endure suffering. It required the highest sacrifice that any man can offer, which is his own life.

In the final week of his life, Christ went to the Garden to pray to his father. After reporting how he completed his assigned task up to that moment, Jesus peered into the future and saw the gloom and agony of Calvary, which he characterized as a cup. He then requested that God would still provide a way to redeem man but without the necessity of his suffering and death. As he thought of all of the things that could happen to him he asked God to excuse him. However, he concluded that he would continue with the unpleasant task if it was his father's will. He assumed an attitude of obedience to the perfect will of his father.

Learning God's will for him, Jesus carried through his mission in obedience to his father's wishes.

Biblical Attitudes

Today we think of attitudes in the context that we know them. However, the bible has many situations in which attitudes like ours were displayed.

JOSEPH'S ATTITUDE: Joseph had an attitude. His brothers were jealous of him and threw him into a pit. There was a series of unfortunate incidents that occurred that landed him in prison. In the end Joseph became a powerful man in Egypt. When his brothers were forced to come to him for food many years later, he displayed an attitude of love and forgiveness. He helped them, embraced them and encouraged them. It was a case of sibling rivalry, yet Joseph approached it with an attitude that was inspired by God himself.

JOB'S ATTITUDE: Job had an attitude. Faced with the loss of all of his personal wealth, health and peace of mind, Job assumed an attitude of acceptance Though he was constantly urged by his wife and friends to speak ill of God, he did just the opposite. Instead of cursing God, Job told his friends that God gives and God takes away. He concluded that he would serve God even though he appeared to slay him. His attitude was one of acceptance of God's will. He knew and accepted God's will with humility and patience.

Often we feel like Job. Life often sends us a curve ball and we seem to swing and miss on so many occasions. The youth that fails in efforts to make school teams or suffers false accusations or humiliations from friends, share many of Job's circumstances. How does a young Christian face such difficulties. If Job's experience is an example we should approach it with an attitude of acceptance.

PAUL HAD AN ATTITUDE: Even Paul had an attitude. Though he spent the great part of his life championing the cause of Christ, Paul suffered considerable hardship. He had a "thorn in his side" that would not go away. Even though he asked for it to be removed, he was told "My grace is sufficient for thee." He was often stoned, accused and finally was jailed for his belief in God. Despite all these mishaps and tragedies Paul adopted an attitude of hope and faith.

Hope and faith are important attitudes. They help us face impossible and tragic moments. If there is a sickness of a mother or father, sister or brother a youth would do well to keep an attitude of hope and faith. In such moments it is good to remember that we are more than conquerors. Paul had an attitude but it was an attitude of hope that God would bring the ultimate victory.

Jesus had an attitude, but not a problem

Finally, it is important for us to remember that Jesus had an attitude. While Jesus had an attitude he did not have an attitude problem.

Everyone has an attitude, but everyone does not have an attitude problem.

As a youth showed that he had an attitude, but not an attitude problem. When reprimanded by Mary and Joseph, he responded that it was time that he should be about his father's business but showed respect to his parents. He displayed an attitude of obedience. The command of God in the Mosaic law is that man should not live by bread alone but by everyone word that proceeds out of the mouth of God.

When Peter cut off the ear of guards coming to take Jesus for an impromptu trial, Jesus displayed an attitude. He replaced the ear and told Peter that he that "lives by the sword shall die by the sword." Jesus displayed an attitude of nonviolent resolution.

There are many youth that believe violence is the way. That is the attitude that they display when they respond to conflicts by fighting and murder. Yet, Jesus showed he had an attitude but had no problem with nonviolence.

Jesus had an attitude, but he did not have a problem.

He had no problem showing an attitude of compassion to a blind man when he healed him!

He had no problem showing an attitude of mercy when he raised Lazarus from the grave

He had no problem showing an attitude of mercy for the man who had sat by a pool for 38 years.

He had no problem showing an attitude of acceptance when he sopped his last supper with Judas.

He had no problem showing an attitude of love as he wrapped his arms around an old rugged cross.

He had not problem showing an attitude of forgiveness while he hung on the cross for he asked his father to forgive them for they "know not what they do."

He died on Calvary and rose from the grave!

He died with an attitude of love, but he did not have a problem!

All he had was a heart for of love for the entire world!

Yes, Jesus had an attitude but he did not have a problem!

Life is a "B.Y.O.B." Affair

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 14, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "DALETH. My soul cleaveth unto the dust: quicken thou me according to thy word. I have declared my ways, and thou heardest me: teach me thy statutes. Make me to understand the way of thy precepts: so shall I talk of thy wondrous works. My soul melteth for heaviness: strengthen thou me according unto thy word. Psalm 119:25-28

Introduction

What type of bible do you have in your home? Is it a beautiful sight to see? Is it expensive and decorative? Does it have scores of pictures and supplemental materials? Does it blend well with the interior design of your home? There are many who have beautiful bibles in their homes that do little more than provide decoration. The bibles serve no purpose for them because they are rarely read. Some are used to store important family papers. Others are used just to record genealogical information such as birth dates and death of family members. The bible, however, should be more than a mere ornament. It should be the spiritual information source that feeds the souls of every believer.

While many people have bibles, few actually read or study them on a regular basis. Consider the young man who sat at the reading of his grandmother's will with his two sisters. Grandmother was a wealthy Christian woman who had tried all of her life to get her three grandchildren to read the bible and live clean lives. Her granddaughters followed her instruction. Her grandson would not. When she died she left her two granddaughters large portions of her estate, making them wealthy women. However, she only left the grandson her old tattered bible. Angry at what he thought was an obvious slight, the young man stormed out of the room. He fell onto hard times and slept on street corners in card board boxes for nearly 20 years. In all that time the only thing he possessed in the world was his grandmother's old tattered bible. With no money or food, he reached a point where he tried to sell it at a pawn shop, but no one would buy it because it was too old and valueless. He seemed haunted by it. He left it on a park bench but someone returned it to him. Frustrated, he sat down and opened it and it fell on words that said, "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Tucked in an envelope behind the page was a cashier's check for $1 million. He had it all the time, but he would never open his bible.

How many people today lose valuable blessings because they refuse to open their bibles. There are many that are struggling with frustration and could find the answer, but they won't open their bibles. There are many that are looking for answers to many of life's greatest secrets, but they refuse to open their bible. Yet, every searching question for which they seek an answer is in the bible, if we would simply open the cover and read.

As Christians, we know that God has left us an instruction manual for life. We keep this guide close by and refer to it often. The word of God has so much truth in it that we tell everyone that the spirit filled life is a "B.Y.O.B. Affair." We must bring our own treasury of Bible knowledge into everyday's experience.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he addresses the importance of studying and living by God's statues and commandments.

The 119th Psalm is unique in that the entire Psalm highlights the importance of studying the word of God. It is also unique in that it is written in complete thoughts that consist of eight verses each. Each part shows how important it is to be guided by the word of God in our daily affairs. Each section is headed by a letter of the Hebrew alphabet, which explains the odd looking names at the beginning of each of the 22 sections.

David understood the importance of studying the word of God. While there were times that he strayed from the Word, much to his own detriment, for the most part, he tried to live by the commands of God. His advice to others trying to live the Godly life was to learn the word of God, commit it to memory, and strive to live by its teachings on a daily basis.

The various eight verse sections emphasize different aspects of studying God's word. For example, verses 1-8 focus on how studying God's word produces character. Verses 9-16 shows how God's word cleanses. Verses 17-24 show how God's word enlightens a believer and opens new worlds of understanding.

Verses 25-32 shows how studying the word of God sustains a believer and strengthens in a time of weakness.

THE WORD QUICKENS: The word quickens is from the Hebrew word "chayah" (Khaw-yaw) which means to live, have life, remain alive, and live prosperously and happily. David said those who study the word of God find that it helps them to live, but not only to live, but to live a spiritually prosperous life. Though life's circumstances might reduce us to a "dust like" existence, the word of God revives the believer when he or she is reminded of the delivering power of almighty God.

THE WORD TEACHES: David noted that he had "declared my ways" (v26) meaning that he had expressed the direction in life he desired to take. One great deed David wanted to do in his life was to build the temple, but what he wanted conflicted with what God wanted. God did not want David to build the temple because his life was polluted with war and violence. In his frustration, David asked God to teach him the right way. Thus, David acknowledges that the word of God teaches those who will study it, the good and perfect will of God for any life situation.

THE WORD PROVIDES UNDERSTANDING: Understanding the ways of God was quite troublesome for David, as it is for most believers. However, he said his hope was rooted in his desire to understand God's ways, which he calls precepts. Once understood, David felt that God's ways would prove to be wondrous and overwhelming. Thus, he studies God's word regularly to understand God's ways.

THE WORD GIVES STRENGTH. When besieged by enemies or overwhelmed by personal woes, David said his soul "melted." It lost its statue. It became less firm. Like a dwindling snowball, it dissolved in the face of persecution. However, David said studying the word of God brought him renewed strength and inspiration to continue living the godly life.

Thus, David concluded that he sticks to the word of God (v31) and runs the way of righteousness. The word broadens or enlarges the scope of his understanding, and as such, sustains him in times of peril or distress.

A "B.Y.O.B." Affair

Many people have seen the advertisements in clubs in every city. The signs invite prospects to come to an activity and someone on the advertisement the will be a line that says this is a "B.Y.O.B" Affair. That usually means that the each patron is supposed to "Bring your own bottle." Many expecting to party on such arrangements find that setups, ie. cups and ice, are needed and sometimes come with a charge.

In the context of living the Christian life, B.Y.O.B. has a different meaning, but each believer will still need a little help with the set ups.

Brighten Your Own Borders. The world encourages everyone to live life free and happily, but it doesn't quite show us how. It shows us clips of the way life should be and then tells us to do it yourself. We are familiar with the world's approach which suggests that all we need to do is give ourselves 1) Positive self talk, 2) Enriching thoughts; and 3) Aggressive upward climbs. On a different level the world makes other suggestions for those whose world has become dark, 1) Party 2) Get Drunk 3) Get high! That's the world's solution to livening up life! It defines happiness and fulfillment in the context of its own standard.

That's where the word of God provides the setups. It shows us how to live life fully, freely and happily.

Jesus told his followers in John 10:10 "..I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." The abundant life is the happy life. It is one that has adopted the attitude of putting God first, knowing that if that is done, everything else will fall into place.

Days are brightened when the word of God calls to our memory, the fact that God is still in control.

Borders and Brighten when the word God reminds us that regardless what the day brings, God is still in control because he is "the same yesterday, today and forever" {Hebrews 13:8})

The borders of each day are brightened when we wake up in the morning and recall that the word of Gods says in Psalm 118:24 "This is the day which the LORD hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it."

BROADEN YOUR OWN BODY OF KNOWLEDGE: The world suggests that self improvement is directly related to our ability to broaden the body of knowledge available to us. It suggests that we can do better if we know more. Following this lead, many have attempted to read a wide variety of literature to broaden their own body of knowledge. While broadening our knowledge is essential to personal growth, it must not be exclusive of the word of God.

We may master the writings of Plato and understand the essential rudiments of his Utopian society, be we need to know the Lord.

We may understand the philosophy of Aristole, the psychology of Sigmund Frued, and the beauty of Beethoven's 9th symphony, but we need to know the Lord.

We may memorize the Gettysburg Address, recite Maya Angelo, and quote William Shakespeare, but we need to know the Lord!

Broadening our body of knowledge in our profession or in school without deepening our understanding of the Word of God, is an exercise in spiritual futility.

David, in this text was the leader of his people and a powerful man but he pleaded with God to teach him his will. So in Psalm 27:11 he says "Teach me thy way oh Lord and lead me in a plain path." In Psalm 86:11 he says "Teach me thy way oh Lord and I will walk in thy truth."

Studying the word of God helps us to transform ourselves by renewing our mind. Studying God's word shows us what Romans 12:2 calls the good, acceptable and perfect will of God. Broadening our knowledge of God is essential to our spiritual growth.

BALANCE YOUR OWN BATTLES: The world suggest that we take life by the horns and wrestle it into submission. Many who have tried to tackle life situations on their own have found that they couldn't do it by themselves, they needed some help.

That's where studying God's word plays an important role. When we study God's word we see how God brought a sense of balance to others facing similar situations and we get to understand God's way.

When we see Gideon struggling to balance his fear of a battle with thousands of enemies with his desire to obey God's command, we see how God gave him victory despite the odds.

When we see Paul trying to balance his personal infirmity with his desire to do the work of the kingdom, we see how God answered him in 2 Corinthians 12:9 "...And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness..."

When we are living the righteous life but seem plagued by unfortunate circumstances, we see Job trying to balance his love of God with his battle for health and sanity. We see how Job declares in Job 13:15, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him!" We see how God ultimately rewarded him.

We study the Word so that we can find balance in the face of life's battles.

You Can't Do It By Yourself!

Finally brothers and sisters, the world suggests that we bear our own burdens.

It suggests that we can shoulder the problems of life when we participate in seminars, group therapy, recovery programs and physcho analysis.

However, history has proven that no matter how many seminars you may attend, you can't bear the burdens of this life by yourself!

It doesn't matter how many therapy sessions that you attend, you cannot bear the burdens of this life by yourself!

The entire life of Christ, in his humanity, is symbolic of the Christian struggle. When he carried his cross and stumbled under the heavy load, they compelled Simon of Cyrene to help him carry his cross. If that stumbling moment has any meaning to us, it means that we too will need a little help carrying our daily cross!

Everybody Needs a little help sometime!

You may live in a fine house that is in perfect repair, but in a natural disaster strikes, you soon find out that everybody needs a little help sometime!

You may drive a brand new automobile and pass people along the road. But even new cars can put you down and you soon find out that everybody needs a little help sometime!

You might have a wealth of strength and can do everything for yourself, but the day will come when you may be laying flat on your back unable to give yourself a drink of water, that's when you learn that, everybody needs a little help sometime!

The world says "bear your own burdens" but in my limited life experience I've found out that the burdens and cares of this world are so great, that you need a little help sometime!

But when you study the word of God you hear Jesus saying in Matthew 11:28 "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

Maybe that's why the song writer says "If the world from you witholds of its silver and its gold and you have to get alone with meager fare, just remember in his word how he feeds the little bird and take your burden to the Lord and leave it there!"

The world says bear your own burdens, but I'm glad to know that we serve a burden bearing God!

We serve a God who can take all of our:

—Difficulties and turn them into delights; Failures and turn them into successes —Backward steps and turn them into forward progress; Stumbling blocks and turn them into stepping stones

—Midnights and turn them into noon days; Sadness and turn it into gladness

When I'm troubled with the problems of the night, the word of God in Psalms 30:5 reminds me that "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy comes in the morning!"

When I find myself caught between a rock and hard place and I can't turn to the right or the left, then I remember \reference Psalms 121 "I will lift up mine eyes to hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord, who made the heaven and the earth."

When I find myself worried about how to make my ends meet, I remember Philippians 4:19 "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

When I study the word I get to know this man they call Jesus!

Jesus, The lamb of God!

Jesus, The Lily of the Valley

Jesus, The Bright and Morning star

Jesus, who died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning arose from the grave with all power in his hand!

Manna

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

September 21, 1997

SCRIPTURE: And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, It is manna: for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, This is the bread which the Lord hath given you to eat. Exodus 16:15.

Introduction

Is it possible for a person to be showered with blessings but be unaware of what they are or where they came from? It would seem unlikely, but there are many people who enjoy immense blessings every day but are not fully aware of the source of their blessings. They have fine jobs, a roof over their heads, food on the table and a reasonable portion of strength, but despite these obvious signs of blessed lives, they attribute them to causes not directly related to the true source. Some say their education is the reason for their blessings. Others say it has been their hard work and dedication. Still others attribute their good fortune to "luck" or the fact that they happened to be in the right place at the right time. Whatever the reason, there are countless millions today who are receiving great opportunities, without ever considering that what they have is a great blessing from God.

Sometimes we are so busy complaining about what we don't have that we miss the blessings right at our feet. Consider the man who complained each morning about his breakfast. "Lord, all I have for breakfast is a bisquit," was his complaint. The next day there was a bisquit and sausage on his plate. Then he said, "Lord, I serve you every day, but all I have is a bisquit and sausage." The next day there was a bisquit, sausage and syrup. "Lord, as much as I trust you, all I get is this?" The next day there was a bisquit, sausage, syrup and scrambled eggs." The man looked down at his plate and said "Lord, this is ridiculous. Every day now you have been giving me these same old bisquits. Why don't you give me what I deserve?" The next day the Lord answered his prayer and gave him what he deserved ... an empty plate! He was being blessed every day, but could not appreciate what he had.

Like Israel, sometimes we are ungrateful. They were constantly blessed but they constantly complained. If it wasn't slavery it was the wilderness. If it wasn't the lack of water it was the lack of meat. If it wasn't meat it was bread. Then they even tired of meat and bread. Through it all, God continued to bless them, despite their complaints.

As Christians, we respond to God's blessings like the song writer who said, "I've had some good days. I've had some hills to climb. But when I look around and think things over. All of my good days out weigh by bad days and I won't complain!" That is the Christian testimony.

Exposition

This text focuses on the children of Israel as they received the blessing of meat and bread from God without being aware what it was or considering that it came from God.

Israel's journey in the wilderness of Sin was one that tired and frustrated them. They complained to God of insufficient food and water. God heard their murmurings and told Moses to tell them that they would receive blessings of sustenance from him that would undeniably be an evidence that he was leading, providing and caring for them.

At verse 12 they were told that there would be meat for them to eat and there would be fresh bread the next morning. Even though they had been told that the meat and bread was on the way, many of them still did not recognize either as a blessing from God when they actually came.

At verse 15, as promised, there was a small round thing that blanketed the ground around them. It was so abundant it appeared to be a frost. The people were surprised at what they saw and described it as "Manna."

It is commonly thought that the name "Manna" means "Bread From Heaven." Since God promised in verse 4 that he would rain bread of heaven, many have assumed that the name "manna" meant "bread from heaven." Actually, "Manna" means "What is it?" From the Hebrew word "Man hu." It came from the statement of surprise and wonder that they people gave when they saw it laying on the ground like a frost, they exclaimed "Manna?" or "What is it?"

Both the quail and the manna were blessings from God. It appeared that despite being told how God would bless them, the people had no idea what the blessings were or where they came from even though they received them within 24 hours of being told that they would come.

Once God promised the meat and bread to the people it came just as he promised. There was always sufficient quail to feed the nearly half million people. The "Manna" appeared daily for six days of every week. The people were told to gather enough for every person in their respective households, but not to gather more than they could eat. They were to gather food "at a certain rate every day." On the sixth day, they were told to gather twice as much because there would be no manna on the 7th day. Any person that tried to gather more than their portion, found that the food was infested with worms on the next day.

There have been many attempts to identify the natural source of the "manna" that would have been foreign to the Israelites who had spent over 400 years in slavery in Egypt. What is known from scripture is that it was a "small round thing", "like the hoar-frost on the ground," and like coriander seed","of the color of bdellium," and like wafers made with honey." It was also capable of being baked, ground in mills or ground in mills.

Some have ventured to identify the Calabria plant that is native to Sicily. It drops from twigs of a species of ash trees in the months of June and July. At night it is fluid and resembles dew, but in the morning when the dew leaves it begins to harden. Others think it could have been "Manna-Tamarisk" that is peculiar to the Sinatic peninsula. Like the Calabria tree its characteristics are similar to those described in the bible.

The wafer like bread that appeared on the ground each day may have had a natural source, but its regularity and abundance required divine intervention. The Calabria Tree and the "Manna- Tamarisk" only gave droppings during two or three months of the year. Yet, the scripture says the manna that the people received came daily, six days a week, year round for forty years. Regardless of how natural the source, it was obvious that a miraculous intervention by God almighty made it happen.

God provided for the needs of the people until they reached the promised land. Then the manna ceased.

In John 6:31-35, Jesus referred to the bread that came from heaven as a blessing from God that sustained the people. However, in the new covenant God has sent his only son as the new bread from heaven.

There are still people who are asking, "Manna?" What is this as they try to understand the nature of the savior's calling.

What Is This?

Today there are millions of people who murmur to God about meat and bread issues and when he answers they do not recognize his response to their murmurings. Often what they ask God for is already available to them but they either don't recognize what it is or don't know how to use what they have. John McArthur reminds us that too often our prayers are murmurings of frustration that suggest that we don't know exactly how God operates.

We spend a great deal of time and effort vainly looking for blessings already available to us.

We pray for God's light, although He has already supplied light in abundance through His Word. Their need is to follow the light they already have.

We pray for strength, although His Word tells us we can do all things through Christ who strengthens us (Phil. 4:13).

We pray for more love, although Paul says that God's own love is already poured out within our hearts through the Holy Spirit (Rom. 5:5).

We pray for more grace, although the Lord says the grace He has already given is sufficient (2 Cor. 12:9).

We pray for peace, although the Lord has given us His own peace, "which surpasses all comprehension" (Phil. 4:7).

Since the blessings we are already assured to us, the tone of our prayer should not be that of a person who is asking for something that has not been given, but rather it should be the tone of a person who is asking God for the grace to appropriate, collect and use that which has already been provided.

We should not say Lord give me Manna, but Lord help me to collect the manna that is already at my fingertips.

God responds to meat and bread issues. Meat and Bread issues are the essence of our daily needs. We have a basic need for food, clothing and shelter. In most instances this is the sum total of our basic needs. These are our meat and bread issues. Often we murmur to God about what we do not have, without considering blessings that we have actually received. They are appearing all around us each and every day, often without the label "Miracle" attached to them.

On a daily basis, God provides our basic meat and bread needs, in proportion to our needs. Israel was told that every day there would be enough manna to meet the day's need. No more and no less. One of Rabbi Ben Jochai's scholars once asked him, "Why did not the Lord furnish enough manna to Israel for a year all at one time?" The teacher said, "I will answer you with a parable. Once there was a king who had a son to whom he gave a yearly allowance, paying him the entire sum on the fixed date. It soon happened that the day on which the allowance was due was the only day of the year when the father ever saw his son. So the king changed his plan and gave his son day by day that which was sufficient for the day; and then the son visited his father every morning. How he needed his father's unbroken love, companionship, wisdom and giving! Thus God dealt with Israel and deals with us." David, in Psalm 68:19 "Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation." Jesus speaking to his disciples, reminded us that we are to ask God for our daily blessings as it relates to meat and bread issues. In Matthew 6:11 he said we should pray to God, "Give us this day our daily bread." When it comes to the provision of our daily need God always provides.

God often uses a natural means to respond to a natural situation, in a very unnatural way. Sometimes we are so familiar with how things are naturally done that we lose sight of how God manipulates the course of events to benefit us. A believer who prays that God would help him meet a financial need and then finds that a long overdue check, unexpected, comes in the mail is the benefit of a special blessing from God. Skeptics will say that the check was already in the mail before the prayer was made. However, every believer knows what the word of God says in Isaiah 65:24 "And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear."

Bread of Heaven

Finally brothers and sisters, just as Israel had bread from heaven rained down upon them and they asked "Manna?" What is this? There are many who have the presence of Jesus, our spiritual bread of heaven, and have no idea who he is or how they should respond to him.

Jesus told his disciples that Israel was sustained by the bread of heaven and asked "What is this?" by calling it manna. Even as he comes to bring salvation and eternal life there are many who are still asking, "What is this?"

As Jesus performed miracles in their presence, stilling the stormy sea, his disciples asked the question, "What manner of man is this?" That even the winds obey his will!

As Jesus spoke to his disciples about his mission to bring salvation, they did not understand him. In John 16:17-18 they heard him say that in a little while he would go away from them they gathered among themselves and said "What is this?" What does he mean by the phrase "a little while!"

And when Jesus described himself as the bread of heaven there must have been many who responded "Manna?" What is this?

What is the bread is the bread of heaven? What is the answer to this perplexing question?

The bread of heaven is merciful grace of an all powerful God!

The bread of heaven is the unseen presence of an all powerful hand!

The bread of heaven is the voice of God speaking in a listening ear!

The bread of heaven is the never ending shower of blessings from on high!

The bread of heaven cannot be baked, doesn't need to be rolled, and can rise without yeast!

No wonder writer declares "bread of heaven, bread of heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

The bread of heaven is the presence the almighty God in the person of his Son Jesus!

Jesus, do you know him today?

Jesus, the rock of ages!

Jesus, the shelter in a time of storm!

Jesus, who is water for the thirsty!

Jesus, who is bread for the hungry!

Jesus, who died on Calvary but arose Early on Sunday morning!

He is the Bread of Heaven!

How To Be A Player In The Kingdom of God

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 28, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "Furthermore then we beseech you, brethren, and exhort you by the Lord Jesus, that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk and to please God, so ye would abound more and more. For ye know what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus. For this is the will of God, even your sanctification, that ye should abstain from fornication: That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honour; Not in the lust of concupiscence, even as the Gentiles which know not God: That no man go beyond and defraud his brother in any matter: because that the Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you and testified." 1 Thessalonians 4:1-6

Introduction

Has anyone ever played games with your affections? Has your heart ever been broken? Only a few people have blessed to go through their entire life without being the victim of someone's effort to play games with their affections.

There are many that view life as a fun game of "line them up, love them, and leave them." Playboys, playgirls, Macs, and Dap Daddies are names that we usually use to describe these men and women who step into a life, tinker with someone's affections and then disappear. A recent movie entitled, "How to be a player" focuses on a young man, played by Bill Bellamy, who promotes himself as the ultimate heart breaker. He specialized in breaking the hearts of unsuspecting young ladies as he pursued his only goal in life, which was to have sex with as many girls as possible without getting caught. He had no hard feelings about the weeping lassies he left behind as he unleashed a barrage of smooth lines, lies and deceptions to win the affections and confidences of women who fell for his overtures. He doesn't come to his senses in the movie until his sister teaches him a lesson and invites all of his women to the same party. Adults who have watched the film call it amusing. However, some youth who have watched have been impressed enough that many young men have idolized the idea of becoming a "player." Players make no comittments. Players don't settle down with one person. Players can only do one thing wrong and that's to get caught.

Many approach life with the players attitude, they use other people to achieve their ends, even if it means not being totally honest with them. Some even approach their relationship with God in the same way: not being completely honest with him. However, the Christian approaches life with a different perspective. Eventually such an attitude creates problems and strains relationships.

As Christians, we have learned the value of being honest with God, honest with ourselves and honest with our neighbors. That's what it takes to be a player in the kingdom of God. That is the goal of every believer.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he shows the Thessalonians how to please God with respect to their interpersonal relationships. The church at Thessalonica was located in the midst of non-believers, whose lifestyle was distant, even foreign to that of Christians. Paul urged believers not to emulate the lifestyles and patterns of unbelievers but to remain faithful and loyal to God. In Chapter 4 of his letter to the Thessalonians he detailed "how" every believer should walk to obtain the blessing of God. In effect, he showed them how to gain the favor of God so that "ye would abound more and more." What he described to the Thessalonians is a step by step "how to" be a blessed player in the kingdom of God.

SANCTIFIED LIVING: Paul noted in verse 3 that God expects every player in the kingdom of God, that is every believer, to be sanctified. Sanctified simply means being set apart for a holy or special work. A person who is sanctified is consecrated and special in the eyesight of God. Since each believer is consecrated for the work of God, Paul urges each to set themselves apart from the world remembering that their lives are a sacred mission to God. The call to sanctification is especially important as it relates to interpersonal relationships. Paul urged believers to be truthful to each other (v6), love each other with Godly compassion (v9), mind their own business(v11), work with their own hands(v11), keep a renewed hope(v13-17) and to constantly encourage each other (v18). Those who live the sanctified life are true players, important people in the kingdom of God.

ABSTAIN FROM FORNICATION: Every believer is urged to remember that a saint is one who abstains from all forms of fornication. Fornication, refers to all manner of unclean or unholy activity. It is a broad ranged term that includes unholy language and activity. It is specifically applied to any practice that would be counter to the will of God.

With respect to interpersonal relationships, Paul warned against sexual fornication. Sexual Fornication involves sexual relationships that are outside the will of God. Thus, he encourages every believer to "know how to possess his vessel" in sanctification. The term vessel refers to the believers own body and also to the body of those with whom they share interpersonal relationships. The saint approaches sexual relationships with an attitude of holiness rather than lust. In verse 5 Paul reminds believers that they should not approach sexual relationships in the same way as the ungodly or the heathen. The ungodly do not know God and approach their relationships out of lust. They seek to satisfy themselves without any consideration for the other person. There is no love. There is no comittment. There is simply the gratification of the moment.

Thus, those who involve themselves in sexual fornication actually steal from or cheat their partners. Believers are encouraged not to defraud each other (v6) by moving from person to person, satisfying themselves at the expense of others, drawing the wrath of God. He reminds believers that "God hath not called us unto uncleaness but unto holiness." (v7).

To abound more and more believers must strive to please God in every way, including the way their private and personal relationships with others.

Living to Please God.

When the term "Player" is used, it evokes a variety of responses. In the world of interpersonal relationships it refers to the unfaithful. In the world of business it refers to somone who has successfully conquered the business world. In the world of sports, a "player" are the giants of a sport, those who influence the game in a major way. In politics, a player is a person who is key to the decision making process. A player has influence. How that influence is used what makes the difference between the way a believer and a non-believer plays the game of life.

Today there is a growing tendency for many to live to please themselves, even at the expense of others. Yet believers are encouraged to live to please God. That is the essential element of the Christian life: we live to please God. Those who please him are those who are true "players" in the kingdom of God.

How can we please God? How can we do that which pleases him?

LIVING HOLY: To please God we must live holy lives. The first thought that comes to mind when some think of holy living is that God wants them to live a life that makes them look like they have been dipped in embalming fluid, first cousins to sour pickles and dried prunes. Holy living means living wholly or completely. It means the spiritual person on the inside and the physical person on the outside are doing the same thing. Spiritual believers know the truth of 1 Corinthians 6:19-20 "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." Very few believers deny this truth spiritually. Holiness challenges us to make the physical man or woman match the spiritual man or woman on the inside.

HOLY LIVING REQUIRES MORAL PURITY: It is impossible to live holy without moral purity. People who indulge in moral impurtity are not spiritually whole. It doesn't matter whether they sing a religious song! It doesn't matter how much they shout! It doesn't matter whether they attend church, pay a tithe and shout with the spirit or do the holy dance, those who indulge in moral impurity are not spiritually whole. The spiritual person inside of them does not match the physical person outside of them.

Those who are unmarried make delude themselves into believing that sex without marriage is acceptable to God if you intend to get married one day. Others might consider it acceptable to play house, since they love each other and plan to eventually marry. Still others have no intention of marrying they feel they are being responsible if they indulge in "safe sex." Some venture into homosexuality and Lesbianism, saying God made us this way. Others have sexual relationships with someone else's husband or wife.

SELF CONTROL: Belivers count on the spirit of God to give them self control. Every believer should constantly pray that God would shower them with spiritual strength to remain in control of temselves. Sexual urges are natural drives. Yet they must be in control. Eating Food is a natural drive, but even eatng can be a problem if it gets out of control. Paul put it in biblical terms, that each of us should learn to "control his vessel."

Sometimes we can let things get out of control. Those who are married can entertain flirtations from someone other than a partner or a regular basis and the next thing you know, you are out of control. The unmarried can allow themselves to turn that which should be pure and simple into dangerous liasons. A kiss to long. A misplaced hand. The next thing you know, you are out of control.

RESPECT OTHER PEOPLE: No one should do anything that would cheat his brother or sister out of anyting valuable to them. That's what Paul mean when he said " That no man go beyond and defraud his brother in any matter" These are fancy words, what they mean is that every believer is expected to treat his friend of the opposite sex with the utmost respect. He should not say "I love you" just to break her defences and have sex with her. She should not lure him into her with pretense of false affection.

Belivers should not be heart breakers who love them and leave them crying. They shouldn't tinker with the hearts of others, collecting their conquests on a chain of fools.

Although society rewards its players, the lady killers, who move from woman to woman or the man handlers that move from man to man, God has a way of bringing hard times on the world's players. Look at verse 6, "The Lord is the avenger of all such." It serves a warning to those who tinker with the affections of others...."God will get you!"

In Kingdom of God

While being a player in the negative sense is condemned in the Word of God, there is a reward promised for those who actually become players in the kingdom of God.

They are rewarded because they play the game of life with one objective, that is to please God.

Players in the kingdom of God are rewarded because they have learn to go beyond abusing the affections of others and have learned how to truly love each other with Godly compassion.

Those who have learned to please God have learned how to mind their own business and do their own work (v11)

Those who have learned to please God have learned to walk by faith and not by sight.

If you want to be a player in the world, all you need to do is trust yourself. But if you want to be a player in the kingdom of God you must learn to trust in the Lord!

A player in the world, only needs to depend on good looks. But a player in the kingdom of God learns that he must look to Jesus, who is the author and finisher of his faith.

A player in the world, only needs a flow of smooth words. But a player in the kingdom of God needs to know the Word of God.

A player in the world, has to be a heart breaker. But a player in the kingdom of God needs to know the one who can mend a broken heart!

A player in the world, has to be a home wrecker. But a player in the kingdom of God is a home builder!

A player in the world, has to be able to lie quick and move fast. But a player in the kingdom of God has learned that "they that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength. They shall mount on wings as Eagles!"

I don't know about you, but I'd rather be a player in the kingdom of God than a player in the world.

If I am a player in the kingdom of God, he will be pleased by my actions!

Good things happen when God is pleased!

When God is pleased:

—Miseries turn into magic moments!

—Closed doors are opened in miraculous ways!

—Dried Rivers of opportunity begin to flow!

—Bowed heads are reised up high!

—Brokens spirits are renewed with vigor!

—Enslaved souls are set free as bonds are broken!

I can please God by the way I live!

I can please God by the way I relate to others!

I can please God by the way I tell the story!

Everytime you tell somebody about Jesus, God is pleased!

If you tell them that Jesus lived on earth, God is pleased!

If you tell them that he died on Calvary, God is pleased!

If you tell them that he arose after three days and nights, God is pleased!

If you tell them that he is alive today! God is pleased!

Hitting Rock Bottom

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 5, 1997

SCRIPTURE: It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I may learn your statues" (Ps. 119:65-71).

Introduction

Have you ever failed? Have you ever given a project your best effort but it simply fizzled in front of your eyes? Failure is an integral part of success. Very few have become successes in life without experiencing some element of failure. The unique thing about those who succeed is that while all experienced failure at one time or another, none considered themselves failures.

Each person reaches a point in life that Josephine Dupree Dean calls a "teachable moment." A teachable moment, says Dupree, is a point in which a person is most susceptible to learn a skill, a new idea, or come to a new understanding. Often teachable moments are created by teachers. More often than not, a "teachable moment" occurs as the result of life situations beyond one's control. It is at that point that God speaks and we listen.

Consider the man who saved a small fortune from hard work and wise investments but suffered a great loss. One day, while scanning the pages of an investment journal he saw an opportunity that appeared too good to be true. It was a chance to buy 1000 acres of prime timber at an unbelievably low price. When he considered how much timber sold per board foot he immediately cashed in all of his savings, mortgaged his home, secured several loans and bought the land. However, before he could even claim his new acreage, a tornado swept through the area and completely destroyed his 1000 acres of prime timber. When he surveyed the area, he saw thousands of trees, most too small to be sold, scattered over the landscape. He had been financially ruined. He had lost everything. His big dream had failed.

Two years later a friend stumbled upon the man at a conference and expressed sympathy over his loss, but to the friend's surprise the man, who had obviously suffered a great defeat was beaming with enthusiasm. The man told him of his dismay at the sight of his destroyed investment. "I sat down at breakfast the next morning and I talked to God for the first time in a long time. I confessed that I had failed myself and failed my family. As I sat over my breakfast plate, God answered me in the most peculiar way. When I asked God for an answer the waitress handed me a toothpick.

Toothpicks! That was the answer! With a burst of enthusiasm I arranged to have all of my fallen trees made into toothpicks! Today, I have toothpick factories in ten cities and my investment has tripled. God showed me how to turn my fallen trees into "toothpicks!"

There are many today who mourn over a failure and consider themselves failure. Failure is a part of the refining process of every life. An occasional failure has a tendency to humble us and remind us that we are dependent on a higher power than ourselves for every blessing we receive in life.

There are many who never truly know God until they hit the bottom. It is then and only then that God can show them how to take the destruction that has wrecked their spiritual lives and turn it into an opportunity for... "toothpicks!"

As Christians, we know that every experience in our lives has our best interest as its intent. Even when we stumble, the stumble is allowed, so that it can make us more careful and prevent a fall. When we seem to hit the bottom in life, we don't give up, we look up and find God who shows how to turn adversity and failure into triumph and success.

Exposition

This text focused on David as he communes with God at a time when he appeared to have hit rock bottom.

The life of David is typical of the average believer. There were times when his faith was strong and championed the cause of God. In such moments he was the epitome of faith and courage. These moments weere marked by his faith as he shepherded his father's flock and protected it against lions, bears and other animals of prey. There were also highlighted by his courage in the face of Goliath. In these moments David is remembered as a man of great strength and character.

There were also times when his faith was extremely weak. These were moments when, despite his knowledge of God and his willingness to stand for God, he strayed away from the right path or met misfortune. As David enjoyed the favor of the king and the popularity of the people his life made a turn. By no fault of his own, he became the enemy of the king and instantly fell from being the favored musician and poet of the king to being a hunted vagabond. He moved from place to place, hiding and evading. He was often hungry and fatigued. He was treated as a criminal.

Despite all of his potential and best efforts, it appeared he had failed. He had hit rock bottom.

Even after he became King, David hit rock bottom. He had a throne. He had a crown. He had a name! He had popularity, but spiritually he hit rock bottom. This time it was the result of his own sin. In Psalm 119:67 he muses about his life before he hit rock bottom. He said "before I was afflicted, I went astray." He knew the right thing to do but did not do it. He knew the will of God for his life but ignored it. He was familiar with the law of God but decided to break it anyway. He appeared to prosper and as he appeared to prosper despite ignoring the will of God, he hit rock bottom. After reaching his spiritually lowest point, he came to himself.

He concluded that hitting rock bottom was good for him. At verse 71 he said that the experience helped him to get a better appreciation of the law of God.

At the bottom, David found God again. At rock bottom, he asked God for forgiveness. It was there that Psalm 51 was written. It was there the immortal words of Psalm 51:10 were written, "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

From rock bottom, David arose to champion the cause of God. He is remembered as aman after God's own heart. While he is remembered for his mountain top experiences, he is also remembered for the point in his life when he met God at the bottom.

Hitting Rock Bottom

Today there are millions of people who are having rock bottom experiences. Some are obvious because we see the pitiful state of their lives and affairs. Yet, there are others who have bottomed out spiritually and the outer appearance betrays their inner condition...Generally, there are three types of people that hit rock bottom:

THOSE WHO HAVE BOTTOMED OUT BUT DON'T KNOW IT. There are many who have hit rock bottom but their other appearance does not betray their condition. They live in nice homes. They drive nice cars. They have jobs and appear to be the epitome of success. Yet despite their appearances, they have lost something that has left them spiritually devastated.

The joy they once knew has disappeared. The enthusiasm with which they once approached life is gone. Their lives are empty. They have hit rock bottom.

This usually happens whenever a person abandons a sacred trust or loses sight of their purpose. The fire that motivates them seems to smoulder. This was the case with King David. He strayed into adultery and abandoned the sacred trust between himself and God. His outward appearance looked fine. He was King of Israel. He sat high on a throne and judged Israel, yet he had hit rock bottom. This was also the case with Samson who violated a sacred trust and lost all his strength. When he awoke from sleeping with the enemy, he appeared the same, but he had hit rock bottom.

Blues singer B.B. King calls it "losing the thrill." David called it losing the joy of salvation. Either way, a person has hit rock bottom when it happens.

THOSE WHO FEEL THAT THEY HAVE HIT ROCK BOTTOM BUT HAVE NOT. While there are millions who have hit rock bottom and don't know it, there are countless others who feel like they have hit rock bottom and have not. Those who feel this way are those who have misinterpreted a stumble for a fatal fall.

Many who make mistakes in life feel as if the world has come to an end. If an investment fails, they think they have hit rock bottom. If they lose a competition, they think they have hit rock bottom.

Everyone who fails is not a failure. The person who says "I have failed three times!" faces life with a totally different perspective than the person who says "I am a failure." Stumbles often serve the purpose of preventing us from falling. When we stumble we are reminded how easy it is to fall and the prudent will take precautions. When we stumble we have not hit rock bottom.

Peter walked proudly with Christ. Yet when he was identified as a believer, Peter denied Christ three times. He thought he had bottomed out. When the disciples gathered after the resurrection, he considered himself unworthy. Then Peter found out that in the eyesight of the master he had not hit rock bottom, but had only stumbled.

THERE ARE SOME WHO FIND THEMSELVES WHILE ON THE BOTTOM. There are many who are on the bottom of life's experiences but don't know it. Unlike David who knew he had bottomed out but others didn't know it, those in this situation are on the bottom but don't know it. They consider themselves having a "good time." Their life is an endless stream of false friends, synthetic happiness and manufactured joy that is maintained as long as they have what it takes to keep it going. Often people in this situation are on the bottom but don't know it.

The prodigal son went into afar country and wasted his life in riotous living. He was surrounded by people who appeared to be his friends and acquaintances, but then as quickly as they befriended him, they abandoned him when he lost all of his money. Reduced to slopping hogs for a living, "he came to himself" and realized that he had hit the bottom. It was only after he realized his condition that his eyes turned toward home.

The Rock at the Bottom

Finally, Brothers and Sisters, we must consider that there are two ways to hit rock bottom.

The usual way of hitting rock bottom is to make a complete crash, splashing everything you have against the unknown to be lost forever. When the world thinks of hitting rock bottom that is what it sees, complete failure.

The other way is to start looking for the rock at the bottom!

The rock bottom is the point at which we reach our lowest. We can't fall any further. We can't be a worse failure. We can't destroy ourselves any more! When we reach that point we shouldn't concentrate on hitting rock bottom but we should remember that there is a rock at the bottom!

The rock at the bottom cushions the fall. Instead of splashing to destruction, the rock at the bottom becomes a trampoline and helps us to bounce back.

The harder a believer falls, the higher he bounces back, because there is a rock at the bottom.

Job's life bottomed out! He fell from a man of great riches and health to a man of little means and poor health. Job's friends were astonished, that although he was obviously on the bottom, he continued to praise God saying, "All the days of my appointed time, I will wait until my change come!" When his life reached the lowest point, he was sustained by the rock at the bottom!

Joseph's life bottomed out! What was once a career that was full of dreams and successful accomplishments had turned to failure. In a pit designed for his doom, Joseph saw how God could lift him from the pit and place him in an Egyptian palace. There, in the dark bottom of an abandoned pit, Joseph met the rock at the bottom!

Saul persecuted the church and sought its destruction! On the Damascus Road he was blinded by a powerful light. After three days and nights of darkness, his spirits reached the bottom! There, at the bottom, he met the rock at the bottom!

The rock at the bottom knows what it means to be rejected for Isaiah 53:3 says he was "despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not."

The rock at the bottom knows what it means to be on the bottom!

He was surrounded by friends, some of whom smiled in his face and ate from the same plate, but they turned him in to his enemies! He knows what it means to be on the bottom!

When he went to pray, his friends went to sleep on him, leaving him all by himself! He knows what it means to be on the bottom!

He had no money or possessions! He told his friends, "Foxes have holes and birds have nests, but the son of man hath no where to lay his head!"

He had no political power. He was rejected by every level of government which worked to stop his great work and finally to kill him! He knows what it means to be on the bottom!

He knows what it means to be alone and to feel forsaken. His voice can be heard echoing across the centuries, "Father, why hast thou forsaken me?"

Who is this rock that lifts dispirited souls on the bottom? David answered this question by exclaiming in Psalm 18:2 "The LORD is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom I will trust..."

When life has thrown us into a rock bottom experience, every child of God should not despair about hitting rock bottom, but simply look for the rock at the bottom!

No matter how bad the times, there is a rock that is higher than I!

Theses are times when people want to:

—Succeed without really trying; Go forward but they keep going backward!

—Stand up but they keep falling down; Receive but they never want to give;

—Love but they can't stop hating; Saved but they don't want to repent

—Be supported but they don't want to support; To be helped but they never want to help!

In times like these we need a Savior!

In times like these we need an anchor!

Be very sure your anchor holds and grips the solid rock!

Who is this rock?

This rock is Jesus!

The lily of the Valley!

Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Jesus, The sweet Rose of Sharon!

Jesus, The fairest of ten thousand!
He died on Calvary and hit rock bottom!
But early Sunday morning—arouse from the grave!
If you hit rock bottom...look for rock at the bottom!
He'll make everything all right!

Studying the words without Knowing The Word!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
At The Zion Traveler Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 8, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people: And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest." Hebrews 8:10-11

Introduction

Is it possible to think you know a subject only to find out that you don't really know it at all? Often we approach life with the assumption that what we know about it is all consuming. We trust what we have read or seen on television to give us accurate images of what is or at least what should be. In our search for knowledge, often the very process itself substitutes as the objective rather then means to achieve an end. As such, some become perpetual students, never completing their education. There is a terminal end to their pursuit. They only hope to study and study more.

Sometimes we can delude ourselves into believing that we know more than we actually know. Consider the smart little mouse that knew more information than any mouse around. He read constantly and often led debates about the virtues of living the life of a mouse. One day, since he had such great knowledge, he decided to conduct a class for the other mice. The class would teach them all he knew about cats. He posted signs everywhere announcing his class. The young mice were excited, because this was one of the smartest mice around. If anyone could help them learn about cats, he could. On the day of the first class, the room was filled with little mice. However, there were no old mice present, just the little ones. There was a big guy who came too. He sat in the back of the room. The mouse proceeded to lecture the little mice about cats. The cat has nine lives. The cat has fur and great claws. The cat purrs and meows. The cat has peculiar looking eyes. He went on for many minutes. Suddenly the guy in the back of the room stood and showed his teeth and started chasing all of the little mice. The young mouse ran outside the room and barely escaped being clawed. Several days later the little mouse met a group of old mice and he asked them a question. "Why didn't you attend my class on cats the other day?"

He asked. One old mouse responded, "You know what the book says about cats, but you had never seen a cat yourself. We didn't come to your class, because we have seen cats and we know what cats eat for lunch!"

In a similar sense there are many today that have accumulated immense biblical knowledge about God, but their daily lives suggest that they really don't know him. They know that he is powerful. They know that is all knowing. They know he is everywhere at the same time. They know that he is beyond comprehension. They know all that is written about him, but they don't know him for themselves.

As Christians we understand that we must study about God. We must read his word and we must commit to memory as much as we can about His nature. However, just as it is important to know about Him, then it is even more important for each individual to have a personal relationship with God.

Exposition

The Hebrews were encouraged to learn both the words of God and to know God themselves.

Since Moses gave the Hebrews the 10 commandments written on tablets of stone there has been an intense thirst among believers to know the words of God. As Moses taught the words of God in the original 10 commandments, he then detailed them in countless other commandments. The people were commanded to commit the words to memory.

Moses commanded every home to teach the words of God to their children and to write them on the door posts of every home. They were commanded to teach them in the morning and to teach them in the evening. They were commanded to stand firm to insist that they were embedded in every mind.

In this way God hoped to put his law in their mind.

Yet, beyond simply putting the commandments in the mind. His ultimate aim was that they would have the love of God in their hearts. While Israel learned the laws of God in their collective mind it took them many years to begin to know the Lord for themselves.

They had to endure the wilderness of Zin!

They had to wear the same shoes and clothing for 40 years!

They had to be fed bread and water in the wilderness!

They had to march around the walls of Jericho!

They had to suffer the defeat of the nation at the hands of Assyrians and Babylonians!

They had to watch their mighty nation carried off into the oblivion of slavery and watch God restore them to some semblance of their past glory, before the began to under the miraculous way in which God works.

The words were in their heads, but the Word was not in the heart.

Thus, the epistle to the Hebrews addressed the covenant of Moses and how it was indelibly imprinted on the minds of believers. However the day is foreseen when it will no longer need to be taught in classes or constantly given to people in rote memory exercises. The day is coming in which the people themselves will have God's law and love embedded in their hearts.

The day when the law is in the heart rather than written in tablets or recorded in memory is the day in which the true freedom that Christ brings to all will be fully realized.

Emphasizing the words

Today there are millions of believers who study the words of God. They engage themselves in healthy debates, philosophical discussions and religious queries. They ponder the meaning of words and become enthralled in the process.

In these instances, the words themselves become the central point of attention. Study groups, seminars, lectures, sermons, bible classes and other learning experiences are growing by leaps and bounds. As the believers become more fascinated with the words, the church should never lose sight of the importance of the Word himself.

Too many know the words, without knowing the Word.

Too many know the genealogy of God, but they don't know God!

Too many are familiar with smallest details of the attributes of God, without knowing God for themselves.

Institutes, Congresses and Christian Educational projects should continue to teach the words of God's law and the mechanics of worship, but it should make sure that those who study never lose sight of the Word Himself.

Know God for Yourself

Finally brothers and sisters, we must consider that all the learning in the world is insignificant if we do not have a personal relationship with God.

You might be able to explain that there are 66 books in the bible, 39 in the old and 27 in the new, but you must know the Lord for yourself!

You may able to explain that bible contains books of prophecy, literature, history and doctrine, but you must also know the Lord for yourself!

You may be able to the bible has 3,586,489 letters, 773,692 words, 31,173 verses, and 1,189 chapters but you must also know the Lord.

You may know that The longest verse in the bible is Esther 8:9, and the shortest in the English language is John 11:35 "Jesus Wept," but you must also know Lord for yourself!

When you know the Lord for Yourself, you know that when you are:

—Sick, he will be a doctor in your sickroom!

—In Trouble, he will be a lawyer in your courtroom!

—Lost and confused, he will make a way out of no way!

—Hungry and thirsty, he will feed you with bread on high. That's why the old warriors cried out “Bread of heaven, Bread of heaven, feed me till I want no more!”

When you know the Lord for yourself, you know he will pick you up when you are stumbling!

When you know the Lord for yourself he will plant your feet on solid ground!

When you know the Lord for yourself, He will give you a new song to sing, a new walk to walk and a new talk to talk!

No wonder the song writer says, “You got to know Jesus, know God for yourself!” You got to know Jesus, you don’t need nobody else!”

Every saint should keep telling the world about the words of God, but we should also let the world know that we know Lord ourselves!

Tell them about Jesus!

Tell them how he lived on this earth for 33 long years!

Tell them how he bore an old rugged cross!

Tell them how he died out on Calvary!

But don’t forget to tell them that, early Sunday morning, He arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

How to get "There" from "Here"

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 12, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "And I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known: I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them. Isaiah 42:16; Jesus said to him, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." -John 14:6.

Introduction

Have you ever asked directions? Were you able to under stand them clearly? When you followed them, did they get you where you wanted to go? Often those who are new to an area are dependent upon others for direction. Many have stopped people on street corners and asked directions only to hear the response, "I'm new here myself!" Sometimes we are surprised when we learn that some people who have lived in a city many years, don't know the directions to some of the city's best known land marks or civic attractions. With surprise, sometimes we ask, "How could they live in a city and not know this place?" As frustrating as it is to find people who give us dumb looks and raised shoulders when we ask directions, it is equally frustrating when we receive directions but they are so complicated that they are hard to follow. What we ask is a simple question, but too often we get complications rather than a simple answer.

Consider the weary traveler who sought directions to a certain address by stopping a pedestrian on the street. Considering the address, the pedestrian said, "That's on the other side of town." When asked how to get there the pedestrian rattled off an array of alternatives. "When I leave home I take the interstate and then the 5th Street exit." Then he scratched his head. However, when I leave work I can get there by taking the by pass road and come to it straight down the lane." Before the traveler could say anything else he gave yet another alternative. "When I leave my mother's house, I take the freeway. It's a straight shot, just one turn." The traveler interrupted and said "But how do I get there from here?" The pedestrian scratched his head, "From here? I'm sorry, but I don't have the slightest idea!" There are many today who give life directions from their own perspective. The best directions usually come from persons who are familiar with where you are and know where you are trying to go.

There are many who are trying to find the way to a Godly life. They are reading life's street signs, but have no idea which way to go. Many have decided to simply drive through life, hoping they will stumble upon the Godly life. Some have asked directions from those who have steered them in circles and left them confused. Some have stopped looking altogether.

As Christians, we rejoice that we have found the directions to heaven. Jesus, who has been there and lived here, has shown us the way. With Christ as our guide we know exactly how to get there from here. That's why we follow him and take no chance of getting lost.

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah's predictions that God would show those who are lost a new way of life as their God.

Isaiah spent the bulk of his life trying to give direction to Judah. Judah on the other hand spent most of its national life taking directions from sources foreign to the true God. As the armies of Babylon approached Judah, there were many that directed its leadership to forge alliances with neighboring nations such as Egypt. It was thought that such alliances with mighty nations would prevent Judah's defeat and subjugation by an invading power. However Judah, like Israel, took directions from other sources. The nation was defeated and the people became the wards of Babylon. God's judgment upon the nation for taking wrong directions is the subject of chapters 1-39.

Chapters 40-66 focus on how God will deliver the people and ultimately show them the way out of their estranged and exiled condition.

In captivity, Isaiah prophesied about the day when God would restore the believers. In the 42nd chapter Isaiah words addressed both Judah's state of affairs and that of believers in the future. So though his words are immediately addressed to the lost house of Judah, struggling to find its way back into the graces of God, they are also addressed to people in future times who are similarly looking for direction.

Verse 16 is a one verse passage that makes a prediction of hope.

Speaking directly to Judah and also to those in future years, God makes three promises to those that truly want directions for restoration:

I WILL BRING THE BLIND BY A WAY THEY KNEW NOT. Judah is described as a blind nation, stumbling along trying to find its way. God promises to show those who will follow him, how to get where they are trying to go, by a way that has been untried or unfamiliar to them. Judah had tried political alliances, military strength, diplomacy and many other ways. Yet God to show them a way "they knew not."

I WILL LEAD THEM IN PATHS THAT THEY HAVE NOT KNOWN. Not only does God promise to show the blind the way to go but he promises to lead them in unfamiliar territory. For Judah, the path they sought was to return to Jerusalem. They sought a restoration of the city. For others the path is to return to close relationship with God that leads to eternal life.

I WILL MAKE THE DARKNESS LIGHT BEFORE THEM: Captivity in Babylon was darkness. They could not enjoy their homeland. They had hung their harps on the willows and could not even sing Zion's songs in a strange land. Their worship life had disappeared. Their faith became weak. They were burdened. Yet God promises to turn their darkness into light. He promises to bring them into a more illuminating circumstance.

CROOKED PLACES STRAIGHT: The evil act of military exile which stripped the people of their native culture and the economic rape of their homeland was seen as crookedness. The people were given hope that God would straighten out the crooked state of affairs that afflicted them by making the "crooked places straight."

In these four ways God resolved to show his people the way to a better life from their present condition of exile through their return to Jerusalem. Faith in God was the signpost that show the way in Isaiah's time.

However, Jesus is the final signpost for the believers looking for the way. He announced to all that followed him that he is the way. God will do for every person that believes what he promised in Isaiah. He will make a way, lead us in the path, turn darkness to light and straighten out crookedness if we will simply believe on him. No man can find the way to heaven except first he accepts Christ and let him show him how to get there from here!

How To Get There

Today, there are millions who are looking for simple but realistic directions to get to heaven. The way is not complicated. We can get there from whereever we happen to be, if we follow the following for steps:

GO TO THE NEAREST STOP SIGN: The first step in getting to heaven is to simply stop doing wrong. There is no gradual withdrawal or extended withdrawal plan. One must stop immediately. There is no doubt the way to salvation requires repentance. Luke 13:5 puts it this way, " I tell you, Nay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." Repentance means to stop doing anything that you know to be displeasing to God. It may involve sex or stealing, or lying or self destruction or any act that displeases God. The first step to get there from here is to go to the nearest stop sign and repent.

TURN RIGHT: After we stop participating in sinful activity, we must turn from our evil ways. Listen to Zechariah 1:4 "...Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil doings..." To turn from evil activity means to have a change of heart and desire. It is not merely refraining from certain activities but retuning the heart in such a way that we have no desire to do the evil deeds in the future. Joel 2:12-13 says, "Therefore also now, saith the LORD, turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning: And rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the LORD your God: for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness.."

GO STRAIGHT: The man or woman that walks the path to heaven walks straight. Crooked practices are abandoned. If it's not right, count me out. If it's not straight it can wait! Jesus encourages every believer to be willing to walk the narrow path through the straight gate, even though the number of travelers are few. Matthew 7:14 "Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

The straight path is free from addictions.
The straight path is free from alcoholism.
The straight path is free from drug abuse.
The straight path is free from nicotine controlled lives.
Those who walk the straight path are certain to make it to the kingdom of heaven.

Look For the Cross

Finally, brothers and sisters, to avoid getting lost, those who give good directions usually include landmarks in their directions. Even though we may be given a list of directions that tell us to turn here and exit there, the inclusion of a landmark lets us know that we are traveling in the right direction.

Those who are trying to find their way to heaven should look for the land mark.

This land mark is not a store at the turn of the bend or a large Oak tree at the end of the road.

This land mark is not a certain billboard or flashing light at an intersection.Those who want to make it to heaven should, go to the nearest stop sign, turn right, and walk straight until they see the cross on the hill!

When the weary traveler sees the little cross on the hill, he knows that he is traveling in the right direction!

When a depressed soul, sinks into a sea of depression, he is revived when he sees the little cross on the hill, he tries to hold on little while longer, because God can lift a bowed down head!

I'm reminded of the two little children who rode a school bus to school everyday in the big city. They lived next door to a big church in a crowded neighborhood. The mother worried that one day something might go wrong and they might get lost. She wrote down their address and directions and gave it to each child with the instructions, "If you get lost, show this to some adult." After several weeks, the unthinkable happened. Somehow the children were put off the bus in the wrong neighborhood. Things were worse when they realized that they did not have the slip of paper with their address and directions. As the little boy began to cry the little girl got a sudden burst of inspiration. She grabbed her little brother by the hand and bravely walked several miles through city streets, turning corners with deliberateness. When she finally made it home, her mother was nearly out of her mind. "How did you find your way back?" She asked. The little girl said, "We live next to this big church with that great big cross on the top. I just walked toward the cross and made it home!"

When you are lost in this world, keep your eyes on the cross!

When trouble comes your way, keep your eyes on the cross!

When you don't know which way to go, keep your eyes on the cross!

When you can't tell your left from you right, keep your eyes on the cross!

That's why David declared, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth!"

There is power in the cross!

There is salvation in the cross!

There is redemption in the cross!

No wonder the song writer declared: "At the cross, at the cross where I first saw the light and the burdens of my heart roll away! It was there by faith I received my sight and now I'm happy all the way!"

It was on the cross that, Jesus died for my sins!

It was on the cross that He paid the price of my salvation!

I'm so glad that carried the cross for me!

If you want to know how to get to heaven, you must be willing to follow the trail of the cross!

Follow that trail to a night of prayer in Gethsemene!

Follow that trail to a hill called Calvary!

Follow that trail to a cold and lonely tomb!

But don't stop there, follow that trail for three more days and you find the way to heaven, because Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

Follow Jesus! Take no chance in getting lost!

I have decided to follow Jesus, no turning back, no turning back!

St. Peter's Rock

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 19, 1997

SCRIPTURE:"And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cephas, which is by interpretation, A stone." John 1:42 "And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Matthew 16:18;

Introduction

What best describes the measure of your faith? If those who know you were asked to describe you would they describe you as a pebble, a boulder or a rock? Each believer has a measure of faith upon which he or she builds and directs life. Like pebbles that are small and movable, some have faith experiences that have great potential but are easily cast aside or trampled upon. Some are like boulders that are large and nearly unmovable. Most aspire to be like mighty rocks that appear unmoved by the storms of life, standing tall and remaining firm. Very few describe themselves as rocks, yet each believer has that potential. There are many pebbles among us. There are many boulders. However, there are very few, if any, rocks.

What most of us call rocks are actually pebbles. These are the little stones we see along the road, along side railroad tracks, or scattered here and there. Rocks are larger, much larger. England is known for the Rock of Gibralter which sits towering on a mountainside. There is also Remembrance Rock in Illinois, which marks the burial site of poet Carl Sandburg. Most of us have heard of, even if we have not seen, Plymouth Rock in Massachusetts, a mammoth seven-ton rock that stands unmovable in the bay. Depending on one's area of residence, rocks and pebbles have different meanings.

The Christian experience is a pebble to rock relationship. Those who are boulders were once a piece of the rock but somehow found themselves dislodged, separated and removed from the rock. Those who are pebbles were not created pebbles, they too were once a part of the rock, but became separated somewhere along the line. Christianity is a pebble to rock relationship because it reminds each believer of his relationship to the Rock of Ages. While the natural order will not allow a pebble to rejoin itself with the rock from which it came, the spiritual beauty of the pebble to rock relationship is that every believer is given the chance to become one again with the rock that is higher, bigger and more powerful than ourselves.

In nature, pebbles can't become boulders.

In nature, boulders can't become rocks again!

Yet, those who know the Lord are given the promise that we can be one with Christ, who is the rock of our salvation.

As Christians, we rejoice that God has considered our humble estate and has given us a chance to become one again with the rock of ages. There is power in the rock! There is security in the rock! There is salvation in the rock! If we abide in the rock and he abides in us, there is no limit to our capabilities! Thank God for the Rock!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he gives Simon a different name that indicates the inner qualities he saw.

At the beginning of his ministry, Christ began to assemble his apostles. He saw in each person, characteristics that would be useful to the expansion of the kingdom. After he met Andrew, the excited new disciple ran to his brother Simon and said, "I have found the Messiah!" When Jesus met Simon, he immediately discerned his spirit, character and persuasion. He saw what those around him could not see. Without debate or discussion, Jesus first words to Simon had the impact of announcing the state of Simon's inner self. At his first meeting with Simon Jesus called him Cephas. After ministering with him for a while Jesus gave him yet another name. Each reflected the progressive growth of the man known as Simon.

CEPHAS: When Jesus told Simon he would be called Cephas, He demonstrated how he looks at a man or a woman. The name Cephas means literally a hollow or empty stone. Naming Simon Cephas suggested that he had a hard exterior but was hollow and empty on the inside. Simon, was known for his often volatile temperament. He was strong willed, but cowardly. He was bold but yet fragile in his confidence. Outwardly he was the picture of strength, but inwardly he was weak.

When Jesus decided to rename Simon, it demonstrated how Jesus looks at men. He does not only see what a man is, he sees what a man can become. He sees not only the actualities in a man; he also sees the possibilities. Jesus looked at Peter and saw in him not only a Galilean fisherman but one who had it in him to become a much stronger man than stood before him.

When Simon met Jesus, he had no confession of faith. He had not witnessed any miracles. He had not listened to the great teachings of Christ. He was a strong man who was spiritually empty.

PETER: Matthew relates an instance between Christ and Cephas (Simon) that took place after Cephas had witnessed Christ on almost a daily basis. He had seen him heal countless numbers of sick and lame people. He witnessed a number of miracles and was impressed with what he saw.

At one point, Christ paused in his discourse to ask his disciples how he was being perceived by the general public. Several stood and told of the various ways that Christ was being received. Some saw him as John the Baptist. Others saw him as the prophet Elijah. However, Christ narrowed the scope of the questioned and asked "Who do you think I am?" It was then that Cephas stood and said "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." (Matthew 16:16).

The statement of affirmation from Cephas was one that came as a result of his relationship with Christ. It was a testimony that was based on what his eyes had seen and what his ears had heard. It was a statement of truth that he believed Christ to be the son of God. Cephas, the man Christ first described as a "hollow rock" had graduated. His witness was stronger. His belief was stronger. His faith was more secure.

Jesus no longer referred to Simon as Cephas. He no longer called him a hollow and shallow rock, but said "Thou art Peter!"

The name Peter is important. In the Greek it is "Petros" or a piece of a rock. This man had graduated from a situation where he did not know Christ and was called Simon, to where he was introduced to him and called "Cephas," and finally to where he knew him for himself and was called "Peter!"

Jesus said it was the kind of belief that Peter displayed that would be substance of the church. Faith in Jesus Christ as the Son of God.

Jesus said upon this "rock" I'll build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it! The word He used for "rock" was not accidental. It was "Petra," which implies a great massive rock. While Peter had grown in his relationship with Him, Christ reaffirmed that the church would not be built upon "Petros" or the Little Rock, but it would be built upon "Petra" the massive rock, which is Christ himself.

Peter's progress therefore tracks the relationship that every believer has with Christ, progressing from a point of ignorance to his presence, being introduced to his power and finally knowing him personally. Peter's progress brought him closer to being one with the rock, rather than being a loose pebble! Peter's rock was Christ.

What Jesus sees!

Today, there are many people who share the progressive experience of Simon. Like Simon, we are growing in the faith as we strive to know God better.

SIMONS: The Simons are those who do not know the Lord at all. They have been busy living their own lives and have had little time to know God for themselves. Generally, the Simons are not evil or deviant. For the most part the Simons of the world are those who are of good character, hard working and law abiding. They simply do not know God.

Just as Andrew took it upon himself to bring his brother Simon to Christ, those in the faith must work diligently to seek the salvation of family members. Millions of families have brothers, sisters, cousins, nephews and even mothers and fathers that are lost. Though they are successful and safe those who know Christ must feel compelled to introduce them like Andrew and say "I have found the Messiah!"

HOLLOW ROCKS: There are others that are living the Cephas experience.

They are firm and strong in secular pursuits but they are hollow on the inside.

The beauty of the Christian experience is that God knows the heart. 1 Samuel 16:7 puts it this way, "...for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart."

As Jesus saw Peter and named him Cephas, he could do the same for many today. There is some Cephas in most of us. This is especially true when we are not living to our fullest potential.

It is obvious when we are not using the gifts we have been given. It is noticeable when the light of spirituality begins to burn dimly.

Cephas came to Jesus spiritually empty, but willing to follow him. He was not a giant in the faith. He was not a great thinker, intellect or philosopher. He was a simple man who wanted to do what was right. He had the potential to become a stone, but was a hollow rock.

Today, there are many who stand at the threshold of accepting Christ as their savior. They are hollow and empty. To these Jesus cries out, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." (Matthew 11:28) Those who come to him in a hollow state, arise with the testimony of the song writer who wrote, "I came to Jesus as I was, weary, wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and He has made me glad!"

LITTLE ROCKS: There are still others who came to know the Lord in a personal way. They came to him empty but their lives has have blessed with a wealth of experience. They have studied the Word and have tried God for themselves. Like Peter, they ignore the criticisms and sneers of others. Their conclusion is that Jesus is the Son of God. He is their savior. They are not the rock, but they are little rocks, hewn out of the Rock of ages!

Every child of God is willing to tell someone who does not know him, "you better get a piece of the rock!"

The saved Saint does not worry about the difficulties that life brings because he has "a piece of the rock!"

Peter's Rock!

Finally brothers and sisters we must focus our attention, not on Peter but on Peter's Rock!

While some have maintained that the church was built around and upon Peter, Christ himself has made it plain that the church is not built upon Peter but upon Peter's Rock.

Who is Peter's Rock? David, in Psalm 89:26 said, "...Thou art my father, my God, and the rock of my salvation.

Who is Peter's Rock? He is different things to different people.

To the artist He is the One Altogether Lovely.

To the architect He is the Chief Cornerstone.

To the astronomer He is the Sun of Righteousness.

To the baker He is the Living Bread.
To the banker He is the Hidden Treasure.
To the biologist He is the essence of Life.
To the carpenter He is the Sure Foundation.
To the doctor He is the Great Physician.
To the educator He is the Great Teacher.
To the farmer He is the Sower and Lord of the Harvest.
To the florist He is the Lily of the Valley and the Rose of Sharon.
To the geologist He is the Rock of Ages.
To the horticulturist He is the True Vine.
To the judge He is the Righteous Judge.
To the juror He is the True Witness.
To the jeweler He is the Pearl of Great Price.
To the editor He is the Good Tidings of Great Joy.
To the oculist He is the Light of the Eyes.
To the philosopher He is the Wisdom of God.
To the Printer He is the True Type.
To the servant He is the Good Master.
To the student He is the Incarnate Truth.
To the toiler He is the Giver of Rest.
To the Sinner He is the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.
To the Christian, He is the Son of the Living God, the Savior, the Redeemer and Lord!

No wonder the Song writer wrote, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus, blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean of Jesus' name.

On Christ, who carried a cross for me up Calvary's hill!
On Christ, who let them drive nails in His hand!
On Christ, who died on Golgatha's hill!
On Christ, who arose after three days and nights!
On Christ, the solid rock I stand!
All other ground!
All other ground!
All other ground is sinking sand!

What's That Behind Your Back?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 2, 1997

SCRIPTURE: O Lord, by these things men live, and in all these things is the life of my spirit: so wilt thou recover me, and make me to live. Behold, for peace I had great bitterness: but thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption: for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back. Isaiah 38:16-17

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when people talked about you behind your back? What do you suppose they said? Was it good? Was it bad? Without respect of person, everyone that is living and some that are dead, is discussed behind by others, often outside of hearing range. There are times when others applaud you in discussion with others. They boldly defend you, praise you and edify you without your knowledge. The words the say to others in your defense have probably never been said to your face. There are others who ridicule you and trample your name and reputation behind your back. Instead of defending you, praising you and edifying you, they do just the opposite. Usually what they say has never been said to your face and you are surprised to learn what they really think.

While there are many that plan evil behind your back, there are times when those who love you, plan things for you without your knowledge and hold it out of sight. That's the nature of the surprise birthday party, secret gifts kept hidden until special moments and other surprises, planned behind your back, meant for your good. Consider the former slave who tried all of his life to buy his homestead but could never clear enough at the end of planting to save the $200 he needed to buy his land. The owner, impressed with the old man's honest spirit decided to give the land to him as a gift, but the old former slave would not accept charity. Knowing the old man to be very religious, the owner said "Why don't you go down to the praying tree and tell the Lord you need $200." The old man agreed to pray about it. In the meantime the owner scrapped up all of the cash he had on hand which was $199.90 and put it in a bag. He scurried down to the praying tree, climbed up high and waited for the old man to come. When the old man prayed and asked God for $200.00 he saw the owner in the tree. He said nothing he just kept praying. Immediately a sack fell right out of the tree. Without blinking he took it home and counted it but realized it was a dime short. He went to the owner to buy the land and said "I prayed to the Lord and he surprised me with $199.90. If he can surprise me with that I'm certain that being the kind man that you are, you can surprise me with a dime!"

God has great blessings in store for those who believe in him. Sometimes we are so blessed that we have to stop and asked, what have we done to deserve such blessings.

Just as God holds rich blessings for us behind his back and surprises us with showers of blessings, he also takes and mistakes, sins and shortcomings once forgiven and hides them behind his back never again to be seen.

As Christians, we give thanks to God for the little surprises we get every day. We also thank him for the gift of salvation, removing our sins forever and hiding them behind his back.

Exposition

This text focuses on King Hezekiah as he gives praises to God for both saving his life and saving his soul.

There are three chapters in the book of Isaiah which generally focuses on King Hezekiah. Hezekiah, whose name means, "whom Jehovah has strengthened" was the son of Ahaz whom he succeeded on the throne of the kingdom of Judah. He reigned twenty-nine years. He is generally referred to as a good king who followed the example of his great-grandfather Uzziah. He was known for abolishing idolatry and beginning a great reformation in the kingdom of Judah.

The full narrative of his activities as king is noted in 2 Kings Chapter 18. Isaiah makes references to it between chapters 30-39. As he fought the enemies of Judah as King he also fought against personal sickness. In both instances God miraculous snatched him away from the jaws of defeat and death.

His secular struggle was against the King of Assyria, Sennacherib. Sennacherib dealt treacherously with Hezekiah. He invaded his kingdom two times within two years. This invasion issued in the destruction of Sennacherib's army. Hezekiah prayed to God, and in a surprise move, "that night the angel of the Lord went out, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians 185,000 men." Sennacherib fled with the shattered remnant of his forces to Nineveh. Hezekiah had not expected such an overwhelming victory. He had prayed but never expected so great a result.

His physical struggle was against a sickness. Scholars have studied verse 21 and others and have concluded that he was either afflicted with a serious ulcer or boils, to the point of death. Hezekiah prayed to God, after receiving word from the prophet Isaiah that God had numbered his days. (38:1). Isaiah's words were a sure indication of approaching death, yet Hezekiah "turned his face toward the wall, and prayed unto the Lord." (38:2). He appealed to the Lord to consider his witness before God. In a miraculous turn around God decided to add 15 more years to his life.

Hezekiah praised God for his surprise blessing in dealing with Assyria. He praised him for his surprise blessing by healing him from his sickness. In verse 17, he praised God for taking his sins and shortcomings and hiding them behind his back. He praised God for salvation.

Hezekiah was such a good man however, that he trusted men like he trusted God. The 39th chapter, in what is called Hezekiah's folly, details how he invited his enemies into his treasury and showed them all of his wealth, exposed all of his defenses to them and trusted them with secret information. Behind his back, his enemies plotted to take away his kingdom and his riches.

The idea that God forgets past sin and hides them behind his back is familiar in scripture. Isaiah 43:25 says, "I, even I, am the one who wipes out your transgressions for My own sake, And I will not remember your sins." Psalm 85:2 says, "Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people, thou hast covered all their sin." Jeremiah 31:34 say, " .... for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more."

Hezekiah offered praise to God for surprising him with great blessings that were hidden from him behind God's back. The truth that God often works in mysterious ways to reward and defend the faithful is supported in the word of God. It is the substance of David's conclusion in Psalm 37:25 "I have been young and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." Psalm 31:19 says "Oh how great is thy goodness, which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee; which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men" Paul writing to the Corinthians in 1 Corinthians 2:9 said, "..eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Thus Hezekiah praised God for what was behind his back, both blessings and forgiven sins and shortcomings.

How The World Works Behind Your Back!

Today there are millions of people who are troubled by what is said about them or planned for them behind their backs. Many are so troubled that they cannot sleep at night and have become nervous wrecks in this respect. Even Jesus wanted to know what people were saying about him behind his back. He asked his disciples to tell him what people were saying. He found that there was an assortment of things being said by others, very little of which was what he intended. Only Peter stood to say that he believed Christ to be the actual Son of God.

The fear that one day precious secrets or intimacies may become the subject of attacks lead our forefathers to conclude that it is best to "keep friends at an arms length, to give yourself falling out room!" Among the attacks that the righteous endure are those that come from those who:

THROW A ROCK AND HIDE THEIR HAND: There are many that smile in your face, knowing full well that they have worked to speak against you or to destroy your efforts. Such was the case with Judas. He walked with Jesus daily and on the very night of his arrest had eaten from the same plate. Yet he had betrayed him to the authorities.

SPEAK AND PLAN EVIL BEHIND YOUR BACK: If a tape recording could be played to persons that you have discussed this week, would they reveal things being said that you would never say to that persons face? Would you be ashamed to have them hear what you actually said?

In every conversation or encounter there is a third party on the line. There is an unseen party listening and recording our actions. Psalm 69:5 "O God, thou knowest my foolishness; and my sins are not hid from thee." Psalm 139:2 says "Thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising, thou understandest my thought afar off." Psalm 139:4 says "For there is not a word in my tongue, but, lo, O Lord, thou knowest it altogether."

How God Works Behind Your Back

While enemies of believers work to hurt or destroy them behind their backs, God does just the opposite.

GOD IS BURY LEADING US AROUND PITFALLS: Even as pits are being dug, some by own hands, in which to bury a believer, God is busy, often without our knowledge, working to lead us around them. When the prophet Balaam had been convinced to prophesy against Israel for personal profit the Lord put an angel in his path to stop him but he could not see it. Numbers 22:28 records how God caused a mule to talk to him to show him the error of his ways. The angel in the road was put there without his knowledge to save him from self destructing.

GOD IS BUSY ANSWERING PRAYERS: Behind our backs God is busy answering prayers, without our knowledge. We often spend time worrying about one problem or another even after we have turned it over to God. Behind the scenes however, God is busy making it happen. Isaiah 65:24 says, "And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear." The prayer that we pray is being answered before we finish speaking the words.

He Hides Our Sins Behind His Back

Finally brothers and sisters we must consider that while God works behind our back to guide us around pitfalls and to answer our prayers, he also holds our forgiven sins behind his back!

When men hold our sins behind their back, we live with the constant fear that one day they will bring them up again. But when God holds our sins behind his back, they will never been or heard of again.

What's that behind your back Lord?

--The burdens you bore, I'm replacing it with blessing!

--The Shame you endured, I'm replacing it with sunshine!

--The Guilt that trouble you, I'm replacing it with the glory of the Lord!

--The sorrow that was in your heart, I'm replacing it with the Joy of the Lord!

When God takes your sins and puts them behind his back, he takes your

--TORMENTS and turns them into triumphs; FOOLISHNESS and turns it into wisdom

--HEARTACHES and turns them into Hallelujahs; LOSSES and turns them into victories!

Come here David! What happened when God took your sins and hid them behind your back? David answers, He gave me a clean heart and a renewed spirit!

Come here Woman at the Well! What happened when God took your sins and hid them behind his back?" He told me to go and sin no more. I told everybody "Come see a man!" That told me all I've ever done!

He's able to hold my sins behind his back because "he was wounded for my transgression, and bruised for my iniquities and the chastisement of my peace is upon him!"

I don't know about you, but I'm glad that behind God's back there are blessings that are being kept for me!

I'm glad that behind God's back ways are being prepared for me!

I'm glad that behind God's back forgiven sins are being hidden from judgment!

That's why I have to keep telling the world that there is none other name under the heaven whereby we must be saved, except the name of Jesus!

Jesus, without whom life has not purpose!

Jesus, without whom questions have no answers!

Jesus, without whole problems have no solutions!

Jesus, without whom labor has no reward!

Jesus, without whom darkness has no light

Jesus, without whom sinners have no salvation!

Jesus, who carried the cross to Golgatha's Hill!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

But early, Sunday morning he arose from the grave telling the hold world I've got all power in my hands!

I've got all of your sins behind my back..and there is a blessing on the way!

Here Comes The Bride

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 9, 1997

SCRIPTURE: Then I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth had passed away, and there was no longer any sea. I saw the Holy City, the new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, prepared as a bride beautifully dressed for her husband. Rev. 21:1-2

Introduction

Have you ever attended a wedding? Weddings are filled with symbols, all of which have importance to believers and little significance to nonbelievers. Those who are believers will immediately identify the entire ceremony as a rehearsal for a greater marriage that is coming between all believers and Christ himself. Those who are non-believers will probably focus on the beauty of the moment rather than its meaning to the Christian life. Gowns, dresses, tuxedos, candles, beautiful music, flowers and romance usually are the focus of non-believers. In addition to the pomp and beauty of the moment, the believer also sees a picture of the union between man and woman as a type of the eventual union between the believer and Christ.

There are three perspectives from which weddings are seen today. Some have visions of the ceremony that is to come. They are planning every detail and dreaming about that day with great excitement. There are others with fond memories of their own wedding day. They remember the excitement, joy and emotion of the moment. Husbands remember seeing their wives walked down that isle as the picture of beauty and happiness. Wives remember seeing their husband, standing tall and strong as the picture of manliness at the end of the long isle. We remember the music. We remember the smiling faces. We see the candles, flowers and camera flashes, just as if it were yesterday. There are others however, who would prefer to forget that day, all together.

A marriage is the union between two people who have come to love each other, even though neither has found complete perfection in the other. That was the case with the young groom who thought it would be best to be completely honest with his new bride, keeping no secrets and allowing her to know just what he thought of their relationship. On their honeymoon, the groom took his bride by the hand and told her that he had to be completely honest with her and share what he really thought.

He begged her to take what he was about to say with an open and objective mind. He sat beside her on the bed, reached into his pocket and retrieved a sheet of paper upon which he had written a long list of items. "Now that we're married, dear, I hope you won't mind if I mention a few defects that I've noticed about you." He began to read the rather lengthy list of things that he found wrong with his new wife. As he read, he occasionally looked up to gage her response, but she only smiled. When he finally completed the list, he paused and waited for a response from her. She only smiled. "You are not angry with me are you? I just thought you should know the defects that I see in you." He said. "Not at all," said the bride while still smiling. "It was those little defects that kept me from getting a better husband, you're the best I could get." Sometimes we see the defect in others, but we forget that we have a few ourselves.

While we find marriage ceremonies to be beautiful and romantic occasions, they are simply preliminaries to the great marriage ceremony between Christ and his Bride. Christ is the groom and the assembly of believers is the bride. That ceremony will be grand. It will unite every believer with the bridegroom for eternity.

As Christians, we look forward to the return of the bridegroom. We await, with great anticipation, the marriage of the bridegroom and his bride. Thus, we strive to keep ourselves spotless and holy waiting for his return. On that great day the hosts of heaven will proclaim "Here comes the bride, All dressed in white!"-Spotless before the Lamb of God!

Exposition

This text focuses on John's vision of the New Jerusalem, the Bride of Christ.

After John is shown the events of the last seven years of time, known as the great tribulation, he is given a final picture of the reward of the saints. As a general rule, the church is not a part of any of the atrocities that are mentioned between chapter 4 and 20 of the Book of Revelation. It will be raptured up with the Lord. After the plagues, battles and judgments listed, John is shown a picture of what will be the glorious reward of the righteous, the heaven and the new earth.

The expectation of a new heaven and a new earth is integral in scripture. Isaiah 65:17-19 says, "For behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered or come to mind. But be glad and rejoice forever in what I create; for behold, I create a Jerusalem as a rejoicing, and her people a joy. 2 Peter 3:12-13 projected the same hope for New Testament believers, "Looking for and hastening the coming of the day of God, because of which the heavens will be dissolved being on fire, and the elements will melt with fervent heat . . . Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for a new heaven and a new earth in which righteousness dwells."

John was shown the New Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven, adorned as a bride for her husband. The city and its inhabitants are referred to as the bride of Christ. The bride of Christ refers to both a place and a populace. The City is the New Jerusalem. The populace is the large congregation of believers from all times that will live with Christ under the new "covenant" marriage throughout eternity.

The people that comprise the bride will include:

The Old Testament believers. Those who believed in God and obeyed his will and laws in Old Testament times will be part of the Bride of Christ. Hebrews 11:10 speaking of Abraham's eternal search said, "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Verse 16 makes it clear that God plans to include the Old Testament believers in the "Bride of Christ" because it says, "But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city." Thus, the bride will include all believers from the Old Covenant.

The New Testament believers. Believers under the new covenant have also been promised to be a part of the bride of Christ. John 14:1-3 says, "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." The modern believer expects to be a part of the bride of Christ. It is the reward of a life of faithfulness and sacrifice.

The Tribulation Saints will be there. During the last seven years of time there will be a great shaking of this earth as God prepares for final judgment. When the final warnings go forth, during the period of the great tribulation, 144,000 Jews will respond to the call to revival. Revelation 7:4 "And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel." In addition to the 144,000 Jews, there will be a large number of converts in the last seven years that will also become a part of the bride of Christ. Revelation 7:9 "After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands."

Not only does John show the picture of the people but he shows us the place. The New Jerusalem which will come down out of heaven and sit squarely on a newly reconstructed earth as its capital city. It will be a huge city that will be 12,000 furlongs or 1,500 miles in every direction, surrounded by walls that extend 1,500 miles high. (Rev. 21:16). The walls will be decorated with beautiful gems (v18-20) and it will have 12 gates, each one a massive pearl. (v21).

The bride of Christ is both a populace and a place. The entire Christian world waits for the coming of the bride.

Getting Ready for the Wedding

Today, in many respects, the church is preparing for the wedding of the lamb. We are looking forward with great anticipation to the day when we will enter into the celebration of eternal life with our Lord. There are certain similarities between the modern marriage ceremony and our preparation for the coming of the bride. The church is preparing every day for its role as a part of the bride of Christ. Our wedding ceremonies and marriages are small types of what we expect on that great day. While many take the ceremonies lightly, they are nevertheless extremely important because of what they represent. Each new marriage is a symbol of the marriage of Christ to his bride. The various components have striking parallels to our relationship in the coming marriage of the lamb.

Every wedding has participants that often include:

A groom, who is a type of Christ in every marriage. The groom is the unmarried man who pledges love and fidelity to the bride. In the marriage between Christ and his bride, Christ is the groom. His pledge is to love his wife with all of his mind, body and soul and to remain faithful to her.

Groomsmen are types of young Christian men who are learning to live the Christian life and preparing one day to become a part of the wedding ceremony themselves as grooms. As young Christian men they are representatives of young men who are chaste, in self control, well groomed and disciplined and in love with the Lord. The groomsmen are the promise keepers. They are the trusted partners that advance the cause of Christ in their generation.

The Bride. The bride is a type of every Christian. Brides that wear white dresses symbolize the fact that they have been forgiven of sins and made pure by the blood of Christ. In her past, she may have made mistakes or fallen short; but when she goes to meet the bridegroom, her past ways will be abandoned and a totally committed being walks down the isle. A practicing sinner cannot expect to be a part of the bride of Christ, but a repentant and forgiven sinner can! Her head is usually covered representing her acceptance of the leadership of her husband in her family as a symbol of how each believer accepts the leadership of Christ in our spiritual lives. The bride represents the church collective in her most beautiful moment.

Matron of Honor. Is a type of the seasoned saints who have experienced a relationship with Christ. In a marriage ceremony it is usually a married female whose young marriage is happy and spirit filled pointing to the joys that the new bride can expect in her relationship with Christ. Among us are many seasoned saints who have walked the walk and talked the talk. They know the Lord and have enjoyed a lifetime of meaning experiences in his presence.

Bridesmaids. Are types of young Christian females who are learning to live as Christian women before the Lord. Their hope is one day to become a party of wedding ceremony as brides themselves. As young Christian women, they are representatives of young women, chaste, in self control and subject to the leadership of Christ.

Music. The music in a Christian marriage is symbolic as well. The songs give praise to God. They lift him up! They edify his name! They give him glory. At the wedding of the lamb and his wife every song will point to the glory and majesty of God.

Rehearsal. To get ready for the marriage, most have a rehearsal. At the rehearsal each person gets a chance to practice the role they will play in the marriage ceremony. Every party involved comes to the rehearsal. The rehearsal builds anticipation. The rehearsal calms fears because we assured that each knows his part and assignment.

The rehearsal provides a chance for fellowship between wedding party members who may not know each other but have one common link and that is their relationship to the bride or groom. For a believer our daily lives are rehearsals for wedding of the lamb. Each Sunday when we attend worship, we are rehearsing our parts, learning the songs, calming our fears and building our excitement for the wedding ceremony. There are many who say they want to be in the wedding but they are missing all of the rehearsals!

Here Comes The Bride

Finally brothers and sisters, every Child of God looks forward to the day when the rehearsals will be over and the wedding day comes.

Revelation 21:2 says, "And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband."

John saw the bride of Christ, the New Jerusalem, its palatial structure and its people of praise!

Today the church is a part of the bride of Christ. Every believer should be getting ready to go to the marriage ceremony.

Jesus, talking to his disciples, said there were 10 virgins getting ready to go the wedding. Five had their lamps trimmed and filled with oil, but five were not ready. When the bridegroom arrived the shout went out that "the bride groom cometh" but they had no oil. While they were running, trying to find oil for their lamps that door was shut and they missed out on the celebration!

Brothers and sisters, one of these days the music of heaven will play and the shout will go out "Here comes the bride!" We need to make sure we are ready when the procession begins!

The coming of the bride will begin the day when those who are a part of the kingdom of God will enter into the kingdom of heaven!

When the bride comes, there won't be tears in her eye, but there will be joy in her heart, for God shall wipe away all tears!

When the bride comes, there won't be any fear of sickness or death, for the former things shall be passed away!

When the bride comes, the bridegroom will be waiting at the end of the isle, with arms wide open in love and compassion!

When the shout goes up, "Here comes the bride,"the Holy City will come down!

It will sit on 12 foundations, with streets paved with gold!

When the bride comes, every saint will have a new song to sing!

When the bride comes it will be too:

TREMENDOUS to talk about; THRILLING to think about

DELIGHTFUL to dream about; SATISFYING to sing about

PRACTICAL to preach about; GLORIFYING to gloat about

Here comes the bride will be a triumphant shout, but the best is yet to come!

The final symbol in the wedding ceremony is that the bride doesn't get a chance to actually see the groom until she comes before the altar. When she stands at the door and actually sees her perspective husband, in all of his glory, her heart jumps!

I don't know about you but the best part of the ceremony will be when we, the bride of Christ get to see Jesus, face to face!

I want to see him.. See him face to face!

Telling about my journey, trying to run this race!

Jesus, the bridegroom of the church!

Jesus, the lover of my soul!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose from the dead!

I want to be there!

The bridegroom cometh and here comes the bride!

A Man That Hath Friends

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 16, 1997

SCRIPTURE: Prov 18:24 A man that hath friends must show himself friendly: and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

Introduction

How many real friends do you have? Many people have a number of contacts with others that we sometimes characterize as friendships. When is a mere contact a friendship? A contact is a person we know by name and position. We may know very little else, in fact it is possible that we have not even seen a contact. An acquaintance is just one step better. An acquaintance is a person we may have met or been introduced to informally. An acquaintance is generally someone we have seen. We may know a few details about the person but little else. When we are acquainted with the background of a person and are privy to some private data about them, we are said to be well acquainted with them. Those with whom we work in close proximity are said to be our associates as it relates to our employment or profession. Yet it is possible to be an associate and still not be a friend. In deed, friends are far less abundant than associates, co-workers, even husbands or wives. Those who have friends should consider themselves blessed in deed.

At what point does a person become your friend? If they show you a kindness do you call them your friend? If they lend you some money or give you something to eat, is that qualification enough? Friendship is not easy to develop.

What is a friend? For the answer consider the woman who had spent some seventy years as maid and servant to Miss Lucy a wealth Southern belle. Now the mistress had died, and in an effort to comfort this old black maid, a neighbor said, "I'm so sorry to hear of Miss Lucy's death. You must miss her greatly. I know you were dear, dear friends." "Yes'm," said the servant, "I am sorry she died. But we wasn't friends." "Not friends," said the lady, "I know you were. I've seen you laughing and talking together lots of times." "Yes'm, that's so." Came the reply. "We've laughed together, and we've talked together, but we was just "quaintances. You see, you don't become friends until we have shared each other's pain. We never shed no tears. Folks got to cry together before they become friends." Only those who are willing to share our pain, can truly call themselves our friends.

The beauty of the Christian faith is that we serve a God who has shown us in so many ways that he knows our situation in life and shares our pain. It is this knowledge about us and His willingness to act upon what he knows that makes God a worthy candidate for friendship. He shows himself friendly to us and in return is worthy of our praise and loyalty.

As Christians, we should rejoice to know that Jesus is our friend. We rejoice because he has chosen to befriend us, despite what he knows about us. He has chosen to love us, despite our shortcomings. He has chosen to empathize with us despite our flaws and obvious weaknesses in life. Every day of our lives we rejoice because He proves, over and over again, that he is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

Exposition

This text focuses on the wisdom of Solomon as he addresses the importance of being friendly.

There are about nine Hebrew words and phrases which have been translated "friendly or friend." Most of the words have been translated to mean neighbor or friend, associate or lover.

In the biblical context the term friend was used by Jesus to describe the nature of the believer. He is perceived by God more as a friend than as a mere humanoid servant, though he is but a frail creature. Thus, in John 15:15 Jesus says, "Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." Before we were called Christians, Jesus called every believer first a friend, then a Christian or a servant.

There is a great truth buried in Proverbs 18:24. It addresses both the secular and the spiritual. It gives an accurate description of what is in the material world and what can be expected beyond what this world can offer.

Three words appear in this verse and all three have been translated friends, friendly and friend respectively. As short and as simple as this verse is there are three great truths associated with its meaning as indicated by the three meanings of the word friend.

REA: The first of the three is "Ray-ah" which refers to associates, companions and compatriots who are referred to in the sense that they are dependent or weaker. Rea has reference to those who are associated with another by virtue of his willingness to share a resource or meet a need whether the need is spiritual or material or to be neighborly in the purest sense. These are drawn to him because he possesses the capacity to fill an emptiness. To the extent that he shares the resource, the greater his attraction. Thus while we see the word "friends" it is most often used as in Psalm 101:5 as a "neighbor" or person who may at one time or another be compelled to call upon him for spiritual or material assistance.

RA'A: The second is "Raw-ah" which refers to the necessity of one to respond to the point that one could possibly injure themselves. "Raw-ah" means literally to be broken, not cracked, but to be broken into pieces that are beyond repair. It defines being friendly as responding to the needs of others to the point that one is willing to risk being broken, defeated or destroyed themselves to achieve the end. "Raw-ah" goes beyond mere courtesy. It is interpreted as "friendly" in this text, but it is the same word that is translated as being "utterly broken down" in Isaiah 24:19. It borders on the dangerous because those who are truly friendly are those who are willing to even risk their lives for another.

AHAB: The third is "aw-hab" which refers to a person who whose response is not material or secular but Godly in nature. The "aw-hab" is the friend that responds with a Godly type of love that is righteous, personal and inspired by God. While it is interpreted "friend" in this passage, it is the same word that is translated "love" in passages such as Psalm 145:20 "The Lord preserveth all them that love him: but all the wicked will he destroy." The person who responds with "ahab" is motivated by a love of God.

With that understanding, the verse takes on a clearer meaning: "A man who has resources, whether spiritual or material must be willing to respond to the needs of others to the point of risking all, if he would be called a friend. Yet there is a higher response, that is the man who responds to others out of a love for God and righteousness, that man will stick closer than a brother."

Thus, this proverb gives a warning against having large numbers of friends, for the requirements of friendship go beyond, just mere acquaintance, but extend to the very life and substance of he who shows himself friendly.

The Requirements of Friendships

Today there are millions of people who characterize at least one person as their friend and at the same time they characterize themselves as a friend to others. What is the nature of a true friend? What should we expect?

Friends share happy times. Acquaintances often grow into friendships when people share the happy moments of each other's lives. A friend of your family wants to be present to share obviously important moments with your family. Weddings, anniversaries, house warmings, and family gatherings that celebrate achievement are best when shared by friends those whom we love. True friends recognize the importance of such moments and make special preparations to share the moments with each other. This sharing of happy times is mutually shared by both. It becomes suspect, when it becomes one sided. Jesus told a parable of a man who invited many to attend a feast, but those who were on his special list wouldn't come, so he opened his doors and invited everyone to share his happy moment, so it is with true friends.

Friends never have hidden agendas. Unlike a contact, who may often feign friendship to achieve a purpose, true friends have no hidden agenda. A contact or acquaintance uses the words and phrases associated with friendship to gain access, often they have another agenda or reason for their association. The voice on the phone asks, "How are you?" That's a phrase obviously associated with a friend. It is personal and it lowers barriers. A person with another agenda uses the phrase to gain access, but could really care less how you actually feel. What would happen if you responded "I feel miserable?" They would probably respond, "I hope you feel better, but what I call you for was . . . " A friend who asks the question wanted to know because of concern. There is nothing else that follows. Nothing to sell. No request for help. Nothing. There may come a time when a friend may address these needs but a true friend doesn't feel the need to approach another with a hidden agenda. Samson thought Delilah really loved him when she laid him to rest every night on her lap, but she had a hidden agenda. Uriah thought the king was proud of his work as a soldier when he put medals on his chest and put him at the front of the battle, but David had a secret agenda behind all of his words of praise. True friends have no hidden agendas.

Friends share each other's pains. Just as friends share each other's joys, they also share each other's pains. There is correlation between the level of pain shared and depth of friendship. Some of the best friendships we have were forged in moments of adversity, pain or suffering. Entire communities once divided by barriers of racism and class have found new levels of friendship after they have shared the pain of an earthquake, flood, tornado or other disasters. Personal friendships have blossomed when friends shared the pain of death, sickness and divorce. As the life of a friend is turned upside down, a closeness develops as one knows that another who has obviously put his or her life on hold to share the pain of an awful experience with them.

Friends don't support deviant behavior. People expect their friends to endorse their behavior. A man who cheats on his wife, confides in his friend and expects his support. A true friend would remains a friend, but does not endorse the behavior. In fact, the true friend is probably the only person who has enough access to us to really help us get back on the right path. Sometimes the withdrawal of support is the best help that a true friend can give to a person who is traveling a wrong path. In matters of right and wrong and grave ethical concerns, it is the true friend that will be bold enough to differ with us at the point of decision, where it counts.

Friends share resources. Because there is an unusual closeness between them, friends have a tendency to share things. Whether it is a cup of sugar or a blouse, friends share. Friends have been known to loan automobiles to each other. There are even friends who loan credit cards, money and valued possessions. The beauty of friends who share resources is that those who receive them return them with gratitude. We should be extremely careful about resources borrowed from friends, they didn't check a credit report or require an interview. They shared their resources with you out of love, expecting no interest or personal gain. Return that which has been borrowed, especially from a friend.

Friends Share Jesus

Finally brothers and sisters we should consider that Friends are protective of each other. There is a bumper sticker that carries the slogan, "Friends don't let friends, drive drunk!" That slogan is indicative of the nature of a true friend. He or she is protective of another person, especially when it appears that their friend needs help and may not know it!

Friends don't let friends drive drunk. However, we could go further. Friends don't let friends wallow in fear and failure. Friends don't let friends destroy their dreams. Friends don't let friends doubt their destiny.

Friends don't let friends live without knowing the joy of the Lord.

The latter part of Solomon's proverb gives us the reason why. While we may have friends down here on earth, "there is a friend, that sticketh closer than a brother!"

This friend told his disciples one day, "no greater love hath a man than this, that he lay down his life for his friend."

I'm reminded of the true story of Joseph Scriven, who had been engaged to a woman whom he truly loved. On the night before his wedding the boat she was in capsized and she drowned. He had lost his best friend and lover and went into a depression. He left his homeland and became a friend to the homeless and helpless. He gave food and clothing to those in need. In some cases he even gave the clothing off his back. He lost a friend, became a friend and found a friend at the same time. One night he sat down and wrote words that have been repeated for centuries, "What a friend we have in Jesus, All our sins and griefs to bear, what a privilege to carry, everything to God in prayer!"

To those who have lost a friend, every believer becomes a friend to show you a friend!

I don't know what you think about it, but I've found a friend that can bring you:

--JOY in the midst of sorrows; COURAGE in the midst of conflicts

--PEACE in the midst of persecution; STRENGTH in the midst of weakness

--COMFORT in the midst of calamity; DELIGHT in the midst of discouragement

--HELP in the midst of hardships; HOPE in the midst of heartaches.

--SALVATION in the midst of sin; FORGIVENESS in the midst of repentance

No wonder the song writer declares, "I have found a friend, who is all the world to me! His love is ever true. I love to tell how his love lifted me and what his love can do for you!

His name is Jesus!

Jesus, without whom life has no purpose!

Jesus, who is the answer to every question!

Jesus, Without whom love has no meaning!

Jesus, Without whom problems have no solutions!

Jesus, the lily of the Valley, the bright and morning star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary, but...

Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead!

Jesus, he is my friend!

What To Do With Stones In Your Shoes

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 22, 1997

SCRIPTURE: And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off: It is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire: Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. For every one shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt. Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his saltness, wherewith will ye season it? Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another. Mark 9:43-50

Introduction

What's keeping you from making your goals? Many of us began this year with an ambitious list of resolutions and goals that we set for ourselves. As the year progressed, we found ourselves coming short of those goals. What got in the way? Was it a bad habit? Why not cut your losses and get rid of anything that is holding you back and march on toward the goal you set for yourself.

Most youth, like adults, want to achieve their best in life. For youth the immediate goals are to succeed in school and to be accepted among their peers. However, like adults, youth often find that it is easier to set a goal than it is to achieve a goal. It seems that so many things get in the way. Youth often try hard to do the right things but something or someone that they hold dear often is the very obstacle that stands in the way.

A farmer in need of a farmhand posted a notice in the village. Three promising youths responded, and the farmer met with each in turn. He asked the first young man about his background, and concluded with a peculiar question. "Tell me, how long can you work with a stone in your shoe?"

"Half a day," answered the youth. The farmer thanked him and sent him on his way.

The farmer spoke with the second young man, again concluding with, "How long can you work with a stone in your shoe?"

"All day long!" boasted the boy. The farmer sent the second young man on his way.

The farmer met with the third youth. "How long can you work with a stone in your shoe?"

"Not a minute!" exclaimed the youth. "When I get a stone in my shoe, I take it out right away." The farmer hired the third young man on the spot.

If there is some stone in your shoe as you walk life's path-some stone that is impeding your progress-get rid of it and do it now. You may be in a relationship that is tearing you down. You may be in a school situation that you know is destroying you. You may have a situation in your family that you know cannot continue without a tremendous amount of pain. Isn't it time you moved into action? Isn't it time you cut it off or plucked it out?

As Christians we know that the Kingdom of God offers us the promise of eternal life. That is our goal. If our hands are busy doing wrong things or our feet busy walking in ungodly paths or our eyes searching for the forbidden, we should refocus them on better things. Anything that separates us from the love of God should be abandoned, like that stone in shoe! We'll feel better and walk further without that stone to trouble us.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he gives his disciples a lesson on the importance of self judgment in achieving greatness in the kingdom of God.

The disciples often implicated to Jesus that they desired to be great in the kingdom of God. At times they asked for seats on his right hand or his left. Repeatedly, Jesus told them that service to others is the criterion for judgment in the kingdom of God, all other criterion, while valued in the world, is useless in the kingdom.

In this passage, Jesus uses a child as the object of illustration to make his point clear in response to their inquiry. Three important truths are presented in the passage.

THOSE WHO SERVE OTHERS WILL BE REWARDED: (v40) The mark of true greatness in his kingdom is that someone takes humanity seriously, and longs to see it develop rightly. The slightest ministry to a young believer is rewarded by God. Even a cup of cold water given in the name of Christ will never lose its reward. Every opportunity taken to help someone develop into the fullness of spiritual health, as well as the body, will be rewarded by God. This is especially so, with respect to the young. This is the promise of reward to those who work to promote the kingdom of God with kind deeds and words.

THOSE WHO ADVERSELY INFLUENCE THE YOUNG WARNED: While there is a promise of reward for those who promote the kingdom and build up the young, there is a punishment in store for those who cause any damage or spiritual injury to a young Christian. That damage is more serious than murder or physical injury: "Better for him that a great millstone be hung round his neck and he be cast into the depths of the sea, than to cause one of these little ones who believe in me to stumble." This is a word of warning to those who mistreat or abuse a child of God.

CHILDREN OF GOD MUST EXERCISE SELF JUDGMENT: The final truth of the passage is directed at children of God themselves. He emphasizes the importance of each believer acting as his own judge and jury regarding the moral issues of life. The mark of one who takes seriously the importance of spiritual growth is that he begins to judge himself critically. In Matthew 7:3-4, Jesus said similar words about the importance of self judgment. There he said, "First remove the beam that is in your own eye, and then you will see clearly how to help another Jesus said those who involve themselves in activities that are destructive, counter the goals of the kingdom of God. They are wasteful, of no use and will plunge believers into living hell.

The word used here for "hell" is Gehenna. Gehenna ["Ge-hinnom"] was the name of a valley outside Jerusalem. It was a defiled place, and it became the garbage dump of Jerusalem. Fires smoldered there continuously; repulsive and ugly worms ate at the garbage. That becomes the symbol of the eternal waste of life. A person who rejects the good news of Jesus it means his whole life is like that - wasted, a total loss. There is nothing salvageable about it. He may have won the approval of men,. He may have lived very comfortably, but at the end his life is a wipe-out, a total loss, good only to be thrown on the garbage heap for eternity.

Using symbols of the hand, foot and the eye, Jesus urges believers to remove any impurity or irritation that would endanger their Christian life. It would be better to live without the impurity than to live with it and waste a chance for heaven.

Jesus used two other symbols to explain this truth: Salt and fire. Salt is a symbol of purification. It was used to both preserve and purify meats and sacrifices. Fire is often used as a sign of judgment. In the case of hell, it represents the judgment of God. In this passage it represents "self judgment." Self judgment is seen as the vehicle every believer should use to purify himself of any habits, practices or ideas that make his life in danger of the judgment of God. In this way, Jesus said, we can have peace with each other.

Thus greatness is achieved by serving others in the name of God while at the same time constantly judging ourselves and removing anything that prevents us from fully serving God.

Removing Stones

Today there are millions of believers, some of them youth, who are striving to live in the kingdom of God, but there are stones in their shoes. That is, they are walking among the Saints but they are burdened by the irritating, annoying and sometimes painful presence of sin. A person with a stone in his or her shoe may walk, but the walk is uncomfortable. It could even be a limp. It is walk of a person who is trying to live the right life but is being hampered in some way. Retracing Jesus's words gives us direction about dealing with stones in our shoes.

OFFENDING HANDS: The hands refer to our activities or what we actually do.

The fact that Jesus referred to the offending hand, suggests that one hand was trying to do the right thing, but the other was doing something else. This is the case with many who are young and insecure in the faith. Often one hand gives to the poor, feeds the homeless, volunteers to help others, and does a mighty good work, the other hand does just the opposite. The other hand cheats when given the opportunity, steals, lies and destroys every good work that the other has done.

Jesus' response to "cut off the hand," of course refers to eliminating the actual act that is wrong. If you have a dirty mind, a filthy mouth, stop thinking evil thoughts, stop using obscene terms. Deal with the hand, cut it off.

OFFENDING FEET: The feet refers to the paths we walk or our direction in life. Just as with the hands, Jesus suggest that one part of us is trying to go the right direction, but another part urges us to go in another way. This is the case with many who find themselves going to bible study, singing in the choir, attending Sunday School and living the moral life one day. However, the same person also is a regular at the local juke joint, hot spot and one hour motel. How often have we seen the man who is the perfect picture of marital fidelity walking before us, only to see the same man stop at another woman's house before he gets home. Double walks, double paths and double directions are the source of misery and trouble for many who are striving to do right, but can't seem to let go. Cutting off the foot, as Jesus commands, may mean we will have to change where we go and what we spend your time doing, because we may be confronted with temptations too strong for us to handle. Cutting off the foot means changing:The people we deal with, the places we go and the things we do. Jesus said cut them off; otherwise you will waste your life.

OFFENDING EYES: The eyes are the symbols of the inner vision. The eyes show us what we want to be. They show us images of who we are and fuel our fantasies and dreams. There are some who are spiritual schizophrenics. They see themselves as angels of God with halos around their heads with one eye but see themselves as the poster girls for what's wrong with the world in the other. With one eye they see themselves walking the streets of gold. With the other eye they see themselves on the dance floor of a fancy disco in a distant city. With one eye they see themselves in love with God with the other eye they see themselves as the love Goddess of an MTV video. One eye offends the other. One fuels visions and dreams that conflict with the other.

Exercising self judgment, removes the rocks from our shoes. Failing to do so puts us in a circumstance where we limp through the Christian experience, while maintaining a hand that does just the opposite of what God says, feet that walk just opposite of the kingdom, and dreams that imagine everything except things which are Godly.

Removing The Rocks Improves The Walk

Finally brothers and Sisters it must be considered that removing stones from our shoes improves our walk!

Our walk is a heavenly walk that compels us to help somebody as we pass along.

Our walk is a divinely motivated walk that encourages us to keep our eyes focused on the prize!

Our walk is a rewarding walk as we move closer to our eternal reward.

Jacob began a walk with God, but he had a stone in his shoe. One night he wrestled with God, saying "I won't let you go until you bless me!"

David began a walk with God, but he had trouble on the way because a rock named "Bathsheba" was in his shoe. He had to get by himself and talk to God saying, Lord create in me a clean heart!

Jonah began a walk with God, but he found himself in trouble, there was a rock in his shoe called stubbornness. After three days and nights in the belly of a fish, he got rid of the rock and told the Lord where ever you need me, I'll go!

Isaiah began a walk with the Lord, but found himself stumbling on a rock called insecurity. When he got rid of the rock, he cried out "If the Lord needs somebody, here am I, send me!"

Saul began a walk with God, but while walking down the Damascus Road he discovered a rock in his shoe! When he got straight with God he said "I am persuaded, that nothing shall separate me from the Love of God!"

I'm reminded of the Native woman that was brought to the city to live. In her village back home the women strapped their babies to their backs and walked with bare feet from place to place. When danger came these women were known to run and leap like antelopes. In the city however, she had to learn a new way. Her baby wasn't strapped to her back. On her feet there were a pair of tight fitting shoes. One day her child wandered away from her and was walking into the path of an oncoming car. She cried out but the child did not hear. This mother, who had dashed through the bush with the speed of a deer found herself helpless to reach her child. Without thinking, she reached down and took off her city shoes and in her bare feet saved her child in time. Afterwards a reporter asked her to explain her shoeless run. She said, "When I wear shoes, I look good, but the shoe was standing between life and death. Given that choice I'd rather run with bare feet and be out of style, than be in style with a dead child!"

No wonder the old warriors declared: "I believe I'll run on and see what the end's going to be!"

When you walk with Jesus:

-Darkness turns into light; Agony turns into ecstasy

-Defeat becomes a victory; Failure becomes success!

-Closed doors begin to open; Weakness becomes strength!

No wonder the song writer said, "I want Jesus to walk with me. I want Jesus to walk with me!

While I'm on this tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus, who ---carried my cross up Calvary's hill!

---died for all my sins!

---who arose after three days!

I want Jesus, to walk with me!

Prepare Ye The Way

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 7, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins; As it is written in the book of the words of Esaias the prophet, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth; And all flesh shall see the salvation of God. Luke 3:3-6

Introduction

Has anyone ever prepared you for a shocking or a surprising announcement? How did they do it? There are a few phrases that are traditional that usually indicate that we are about to learn something that may be unsettling. When someone asks, "Are you sitting down?" It usually means that the information will give you such a jolt that it will sit you down. "Hold on to your hat!" usually means the news will come like a strong wind. Still others warn us to "Brace Yourself!" implying that the information will stagger us. It's good to have advance notice to soften the impact of shocking or surprising news, even if the news is good, but especially if it's bad.

How we respond to news depends upon what we hear first. Consider the college co-ed who had not done very well in school. She was a freshman and hadn't really learned the art of self discipline necessary for college which was reflected in her grades. She wondered how she was going to break the news to her father that she had blown her first semester of school. When she called home, she had two pieces of news to tell her dad. "Dad, are you sitting down?" She began. "I just want to tell you that I have decided to drop out of school and marry my unemployed boyfriend. That way he can stay at home a raise our twin babies!" There was a long pause on the other end of the phone. Dad said nothing. He was too shocked to say anything. Then the clever daughter continued. "That was the bad news. The good news is that what I just told you is not true, but I did fail all my courses this semester!" The Dad was relieved to hear the good news. It didn't seem to matter that it was good only in comparison to what could have been.

All year long we have heard the bad news. We've heard shocking stories of death, violence, crime, unemployment and threats of war. As the yuletide season approaches, the world hears the voice of hope crying in the wilderness, "Hold on to your hat!","Brace yourself!" There is good news! The day of the Lord is approaching and help is on the way! That's the message that the yuletide season brings.

As Christians, we proclaim to the world that there is a reason for hope, despite the difficulty of our times. When others have given up and dropped their heads in dismay we proclaim with great faith that even in the wilderness of our times, "The Lord will make a way" through his Son Jesus Christ!

Exposition

This text focuses on the role of John The Baptist as the advance herald of Jesus Christ.

Both John the Baptist and Jesus were relatively the same age, one being about six months older than the other. They were cousins. John described himself as a forerunner, not the light, but one who bares witness to the light. He preached in the wilderness of Judea and raised the consciousness of the people that righteousness, not allegiance to ceremony and tradition, is what is expected from God. He challenged them to rise above appearances of morality while harboring sinful spirits. As a sign that of their renewed morality, John "Baptized" those who heeded his call in the Jordan river. Thus, he became known as "John the Baptist!"

Despite his popularity John made it clear that he did not perceive himself to be the savior or the liberator that people expected. He constantly pointed to another that was soon to announce his public ministry whose shoes he did not feel worthy to untie. That person was Jesus, who was maturing and waiting for the right moment to begin his ministry.

The ministry of John had also been predicted. The prophet Isaiah (40:3-5) hundreds of years before, had pointed out that the promised deliverer would be announced by the "voice of him that crieth in the wilderness." Isaiah's words came at a time when Israel had endured a terrible captivity. Its moral fibre and national spirit had been broken. Its state, at best, could only be described as barren, unproductive and dry. It was a wilderness. Yet in this wilderness estate, Isaiah in 40:1 urged the people to "Comfort ye!" Despite their wilderness condition there was a reason for the people to be at ease. Therefore the words of hope to Jerusalem, the people of God, were that they had endured the worst of their "warfare." Some of their problems had been caused by their own sins, others by enemies. At any rate their wilderness condition represented the full punishment of God for their transgression, which came "double" at the hand of God.

Not only were there the physical iniquities, the people also faced a spiritual void. Isaiah raised hope that the people would be returned from captivity and in this context also announced that they would be revived by a spiritual renewal as well. The coming of this renewal would be introduced by one who would come forth out of the wilderness, challenging the people to prepare the way for the coming of the Lord.

John announced to the world that the day of the Lord had arrived. He prepared the world for the great news!

In effect he told the world, “Hold on to your hat!” There is good news about to come that will “Knock your socks off!”

When Christ finally began his ministry, many were ready for his arrival. It had been announced! They had been prepared! Their hearts were ready for the coming of the Lord!

In The Wilderness

. A wilderness is a wasteland. It is a wild and desolate place that is untamed wherein survival is a struggle. In many ways our present dilemma is one similar to a wilderness experience. Maintaining life is becoming a difficult struggle and hope seems to diminish daily. It is the very opposite of the way God intended. In Eden, God created an atmosphere for mankind to exist in peace and love. There was an abundance of those things which were needed as well as those things which appealed to our senses and pleasures. Eden was a paradise .The very essence of that which contributed to the “Eden effect” is what is absent from today’s experience. Instead of the safe, peaceful life that existed in Eden we are presently experiencing the “Wilderness Effect.”

The prospect of violence surrounds us. On a national level our troops stand poised to attack and destroy thousands in the middle East. Battleships patrol the Eastern waters like sharks waiting to attack as a war of words escalates and then de-escalates. On the national scene violence intrudes into our living rooms as we watch with horror the accounts of children armed with weapons killing their friends in school room shoot outs or disgruntled workers taking the lives of co-workers. Too many local communities now have their own headlines that bark similar tragedies. Metal detectors in the court rooms, air ports and even in some schools are signs of the times. The increase in violence is a contributor to the “Wilderness Effect.”

Cynicism, race hatred, crime and disrespect for the things of God are growing at incredible rates. The fastest growing business in America seems to be jails and detention centers. The number of homeless among us seems to increase faster than we can move them from the streets. The family is becoming weaker, jobs are getting scarce and those things which once gave us optimism about the future are in short supply. The decline in the social order is a contributor to the “Wilderness Effect.”

In frustration even some of the faithful have resorted to offbeat religious practices that border on fanaticism and the mystical as they attempt to reassure themselves that there is hope. In frustration, the faithful begin to doubt and begin to search for what has to be a missing element or a higher power. Some have resorted to bottles of oil, special cloths and special utterances as they look for signs and wonders to confirm that they are on the right path. The confusion and frustration of the faithful is a contributor to the “Wilderness Effect.”

Yet in the wilderness, there is a voice that brings a renewed hope!

In this wilderness that we call our life experience, the voice of the living God still rings out! It speaks to our fears! It speaks to our frustration! It speaks to our waning faith!

The song writer must have had our wilderness experience in mind when he wrote, "I heard the voice of Jesus say, come unto me and rest. Lay down, Lay down thy weary one, thy head upon my breast!

Alone in this wilderness another song writer concluded, "I was alone and idle. I was a sinner too. I heard a voice of from heaven saying there is work to do. I took the master's hand and I joined the Christian band. And I'm on the battle field for my Lord!"

Prepare Ye The Way

Just as John preach in the Wilderness of Judea, saying "Prepare Ye The Way" the body of Christ today must assume the same role and declare to the world that we live in a wilderness but "Prepare Ye the Way!"

Times are difficult, but prepare ye the way!

Trouble is all around us, but prepare ye the way!

To "pare" is to do something and take an action. To pre-pare refers to the actions taken that cause, speed up, contribute to or anticipate a greater action.

I hear John declaring, "prepare ye the way!"

Prepare for what, John? We are in a wilderness down here!

Prepare for what, John? We are swallowed up by deep valleys! Our burdens and frustrations are heavy. They have sunk us into a valley that is deeper than we have imagined! Every time we try to climb up it seems like we are falling back down! In the midst of these times there is a voice from heaven that says, "Prepare" for there is good news on the way, "every valley shall be exalted!"

Prepare for what, John? We are surrounded by high mountains! Every time we try to progress mountains get in the way. They make our lives difficult because we are always struggling to climb. But there is a voice from heaven, saying "Prepare! For there is good news on the way, "every mountain shall be made low!"

Prepare for what, John? We are consumed by corruption and crookedness! Someone is always trying to cheat us! Someone is always trying to deceive us! We don't know who to trust! But there is a voice from heaven, say "Prepare!" for there is good news on the way, "the crooked places will be made straight!"

Prepare for what, John? Times are difficult and conditions are rough! It's hard to make a living these days! We don't know from one day to the next whether we'll have a job or not. Money is scarce and opportunities are few! But I heard a voice from heaven say, "Prepare" for there is good news on the way, "Rough places shall be made plain!"

As I close, I'm reminded of the widow woman who struggled to raise eight children all by herself. She worked hard to make ends meet and keep food on the table, but one day she lost her job and times became tough. When the last of her food supply was gone and she was down to nothing but salt and pepper she heard a voice that said, "Get the kitchen ready." The mother awakened all of her children and they busied themselves setting the table in the middle of the night. Plates were set. Silverware was properly placed. Water glasses and empty platters were placed on the table. A large pot was put on the stove, salted and put on to boil. The bread pan was greased and the oven was warmed. One of the children asked their mother, "Mother, why are we doing all this and we don't have anything to cook!" The mother only answered, "God said get the kitchen ready!" As the hours passed the children began to cry in hunger. About 12 noon there was a knock on the door as neighbors from up and down the street came with arms filled with food and supplies. The mother took her eight children and held them close and said "Let this be a lesson to you. If God says get the kitchen ready, you better grease the pan, put water in pot and put your plate on the table...because he's able!" He's able to set the table!

In the wilderness of these times there is a voice from heaven, saying "Prepare!" for help is on the way!

Are you overwhelmed by the valleys? Prepare for your valleys to be exalted!

Are you struggling with a mountain? Prepare for your mountain to be made low!

Are you struggling with crookedness being plotted against you. Prepare for crooked things to be made straight!

Are you vainly trying to handle the rough side of life? Prepare for the rough places to be made plain!

No wonder the song writer wrote, "Joy to the world, the Lord is come let earth receive her king! Let every heart prepare him room and heaven and nature sing!"

A long time ago God considered the wilderness estate of the world. Jesus volunteered to come down and show struggling mankind the way.

Can't you hear God saying, "If you go, I have three things prepared for you. I've got a body prepared for you and crib down in Bethlehem!"

But after you've been around for a while I want you to know that I also have a cross prepared for you, for there can be no remission of sin without the shedding of blood!

Don't worry about the cross, because the third thing I have prepared for you is an empty tomb!

They will talk about you! They will spit upon you! They will nail you to an old rugged cross. They will bury you in a borrowed tomb, but Early Sunday morning I'll wake you up with all power in your hands!

Church don't lose hope in this wilderness, for "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

I don't know about you but I'm going to put water in the pot, grease the pan and set the table, for God is able!

God is Able!

God is Able!

He's Making A List And Checking It Twice

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 14, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches. Rev. 3:5-6; And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life. Rev. 21:27

Introduction

Have you made your Christmas list yet? What's on it? At this time of the year many are busy making a Christmas list. Some have only one list that they are making. It is their "want list." Depending on the person, the "want" list could be as simple as a pair of socks or as elaborate as a new car or house. Often we humorously say that a child's Christmas list is generally filled with "I wants" but the same can be said of adults as well. The old saying is still true, "The only difference between men and boys is the size of their toys." A child's wish may be "Play Station" but a man's wish may be for a 233-megahertz 2.1-gigabyte CPU computer with a 21-inch screen and 56K modem. A toy is a toy. A girl may want new clothes for her Barbie Doll, and a woman may want a complete new wardrobe for her closet. Both may often be unnecessary toys.

While there is a want list, there is also a give list. This is the list in which we try to reach out to others with an expression of love. Your give list includes people who have become special in your life for a variety of reasons. It also includes those who stand in the need of assistance. The give list is not a discard list. It is not a chance to dump our "want-nots" on someone else, but a time for us to show real empathy with those who are less fortunate.

In addition to our give list there should also be a "Praise and thank you list." This is our list of experiences for which we are eternally grateful. Our praise and thank-you list is one that is addressed to God. It is not seasonal. It is one that we focus on every day.

There is a list that usually circulates at Christmas time. The lists shows 10 commandments for every Christian at Christmas time. Here is the list: 1)Thou shalt does not leave “Christ” out of Christmas, making it “Xmas.” To some, “X” is unknown. 2) Thou shalt prepare thy soul for Christmas. Spend not so much on gifts that thy soul is forgotten. 3)Thou shalt not let Santa Claus replace Christ, thus robbing the day of its spiritual reality. 4) Thou shalt not burden the shop girl, the mailman, and the merchant with complaints and demands. 5) Thou shalt give unselfishly with thy gift. This will increase its value a hundred fold, and he who receiveth it shall treasure it forever.

6) Thou shalt not value gifts received by their cost. Even the least expensive may signify love, and that is more priceless than silver and gold. 7)Thou shalt not neglect the needy. Share thy blessings with many who will go hungry and cold unless thou are generous. 8)Thou shalt not neglect thy church. Its services highlight the true meaning of the season. 9)Thou shalt be as a little child. Not until thou has become in spirit as a little one art thou ready to enter into the kingdom of Heaven. 10) Thou shalt give thy heart to Christ. Let Him be at the top of thy Christmas list.

As Christians, we are aware that while we are making a list, God himself is making a list and he is checking it twice. God’s list is checked daily. He checks on the faithful, hears and answers our prayers, and responds to our needs. One day, when this system of life has ended, he will check his list again. That list will be the one that includes the name of every saint that will share eternity with him.

Exposition

This text focuses on God revealing through John that he maintains two lists. One of our daily experiences and another of those who have been forgiven for their failures.

John is significant in biblical contexts because he is used by God to transmit many important truths to believers. He is the instrument God uses to write one Gospel account, three epistles and the revelation of things to come.

In the Revelation, John addresses three whole chapters to seven of the churches in Asia Minor, 17 chapters to the events of the last seven years, and the last two show the reward of the righteous.

In addressing the churches of Asia Minor it became abundantly clear that God was keeping track of their works. Repeatedly he addressed each of the churches with the phrase, “I know thy works.” He made it clear that he was watching their actions and would reward their acts of faith and punish their indiscretions and sinful acts.

Constant reference is made to the “Book of Life.” This Book of Life is the book that contains the names of every believer that has been saved by the Grace of God. Those whose names appear in this book are those who have confessed Christ as their personal savior, thus blotting out their past sins. In Philippians 4:3, Paul referred to those who are fellow laborers in the kingdom as those whose names are in the book of life. In Revelation 17:8, those who are not among the believers who have not confessed by the time of the last days are excluded from the “Book of Life.”

The idea that God maintains a list of the faithful is thus supported in scripture.

These are the ones who will enjoy eternity with him and reign in the Kingdom of Heaven.

Just as God maintains a "Book of Life" that focuses on the faithful, there is reason to believe that there are other books that contain separate lists of those that have been "naughty." The word only points to one book and therefore one list, that is the Book of Life, but John 20:12 says "...and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works." The unfaithful will find that their names will be removed from the Book of Life. Their unrepentant, ungodly existence will be recorded in other books.

This truth is best illustrated as John depicts the details of the resurrection of the unrighteous. The dead, both great and small will stand before the judgment bar of God. The books that record the temporal deeds of mankind will be opened. In addition, the Book of Life, recording the deeds of the saved, will also be opened. Since all have sinned and fallen short of the standards of God, every person's name will be recorded in the book that shows our deeds. This book will record all of our flaws and shortcomings. The second book, is a record of both the Salvation and good works of each believer.

The believer's reward is to enter into eternal life as a part of the Bride of Christ. His name being recorded among the believers, saved by Grace and glorified by God. Thus, as John describes the beauties of heaven and the grand and glorious state of that moment in notes in Revelation 21:7 that those who would defile or corrupt will not be a part of the eternal experience only those whose names are written in the Book of Life.

There are two lists being kept. One is the list of our deeds. They are being written every second of our lives. The other is the Book of Grace. This is the list of those whose names are on the "naughty" list but will be allowed to enjoy eternity anyway, thanks to the Grace of God.

Three Lists

In addition to our "want" list, every believer should have at least three other lists that should be considered very important.

GIVE LIST. Every believer has an obligation to consider ways in which he or she may become a blessing to others. The spirit of Christmas is the spirit of giving. It is the spirit of sharing resources no matter how meager they may appear at the moment. Neighbors, friends, relatives and even those who are unknown to us should be included on this list. Your gift may be a donation of your time to sit with an infirmed person or to ring the bell for the Salvation Army. You may be among those called upon to prepare food for the homeless or to comfort a lonely heart.

The underlying idea behind Christmas is to point out in a graphic way how god gave the world his son to bring life. We give to others to bring hope and joy as well.

Our "give list" should not be a short list. When we run out of money, our "give list" should include time. When we run out of time, we should share our talents. At Christmas time and every time we should be willing to give until we can feel the joy overflowing in our own spirits.

FORGIVE LISTS: If Christmas is a time of giving, it is also a time of forgiving. It is the time when we consider that god "so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." that means that from the coming of Christ to the present, heaven has been preparing a list of people that have been forgiving.

As believers we should start our "forgive list" this Christmas. Put the person's name on the top of the list that has caused you the most difficulty. It will be literally impossible for us to see Jesus and enjoy his forgiveness if our "forgive list" is empty. The person who caused you the most pain this year, can you put his or her name on the list? Will that person stand in the way of your own salvation? Remember, our daily prayer is "forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." In essence, we say, "Lord, don't forgive us, if we can't forgive them."

Make a List And Check it twice

Finally, we must consider that during this season of the year there is a popular song that speaks of St. Nicholas. One of the verses of this popular song says, "He's making a list and he's checking it twice, he's gonna find out whose naughty or nice!" But when we run that same song through the theological filter what we as believers hear is:

"You better watch out. You better not put. You better not cry, I'm telling you why, Jesus Christ is coming to town. He know when you are sleeping. He know when you're awake. He knows when you you've been bad or good so for goodness sake be good!" he's making a list and he's checking it twice, he already knows whose been naughty or nice, Jesus Christ is coming to town!"

He's been making a list for a long time!

He told Moses in the wilderness, you better make a list of all able bodied men for there are rough days ahead! Make the list and check it twice!

He told Joshua after crossing the Jordan, you better make a list of all those who are on the Lord's side. Joshua responded, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord!"

He told Nehemiah, when you return to Jerusalem, make a list of those who have a mind to work. Include all of the builders, craftsmen and every person who has a mind to work, for there is work to be done!

He's making alist of every word and deed! He's making that list and checking it twice!

God has a list, but every believer should have another list that we have not talked about!

I'm not talking about our want list, that addressed the desires of our heart!

I'm not talking about our give list, that details how we intend to share with others!

I'm not talking about our forgive list, that shows how we intend to forgive the offenses of others!

Every believer should have a "Thank you List!" that tells the things for which they should give God praise!

Consider the little girl who sat on the back row of her class. The teacher gave an assignment for each to write a list on a sheet of paper that contained the reasons why they are thankful. After a few minutes the little girl raised her hand with a puzzling look on her face, but the teacher told her not ask questions but just to write. One by one, the students completed their sheets, but the little girl remained on the back seat. When the teacher inquired why she sat alone the girl responded, "I tried to ask a questions, but you told me to wait. I have filled out this one sheet of paper, I just want to know if it would be all right if I used two or three more sheets!

Everybody should have a thank you list!

If you can't find a reason for joy this Christmas, then check your list and check it twice!

If you woke up this morning with a sound mind and body, you should say, "Thank you Lord!"

If there was food on your table and clothes on your back, you should say, "Thank you Lord!"

Thank you Lord, for you've sure been good to me!

He came down to save us, so we should send the praises up to glorify him!

Thank you God, for sending down your Son!

Thank you Lord, for shedding your blood!

Thank you Lord, for your saving Grace!

Every time I check my list, I have to say one more time!

Thank you!

Thank you!

You've been so good to me!

Mary Had A Little Lamb

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 21, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "And the Word became flesh, and did tabernacle among us, and we beheld his glory, glory as of an only begotten of a father, full of grace and truth.;John 1:14 "on the morrow John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, 'Lo, the Lamb of God, who is taking away the sin of the world; John1:29

Introduction

Have you heard the children's story, "Mary Had a Little Lamb?" Most people have heard the popular nursery rhyme included in the Mother Goose collection of children's nursery rhymes, riddles and stories. It ranks along side the others that we have heard including, Baa Baa Black Sheep Have You any Wool? Hey Diddle Diddle, Hickory Dickory Dock, Humpty Dumpty and Jack and Jill. Obviously, we are fascinated with nursery rhymes, because they plunge us into the world of the imaginary and make believe.

Mary had a little lamb is one of the most popular four-lines of verse in the English language. It was written in 1830 by Sarah Hale in Boston Massachusetts. While Sarah Hale gets credit for writing the famous children's poem it was not without dispute. A woman named Mary Sawyer appeared about the same time, with the unusual practice of bringing her pet lamb to the Old Red stone school house in Massachusetts. The line of the poem that said "he followed her to school one day" seemed to fit her reputation. She convinced the late Henry Ford to erect a memorial plaque in her honor. Even as she lay claim to be the original "Mary" of the poem, several other Marys soon materialized and made similar claims. It seems that in those days there were many who were competing to be the Mary of the poem, "who had a little lamb."

The cute little poem takes on different meanings when viewed from a theological perspective. The emphasis shifts from a school house to a manger. It switches from a young girl and her pet to a young woman and her child. It shifts from nursery rhyme to statement of truth. This is even more apparent when Mary is the wife of Joseph and the lamb, is the Lamb of God. It takes on special meaning when we hear certain lines that say "every where that Mary went, the lamb was sure to go . . . " When seen through theological filters the nursery rhyme takes on an unusual significance.

Since the bible supports the claim, we know it is true. Mary did have a little lamb. There is no debate about it. John in a vision said his hair was white like lamb's wool and his feet were like burnt brass.

Down in Bethlehem, Mary had a little lamb! As angels proclaimed the majesty of the moment, Mary had a little lamb!

As Christians, we are reminded of the immaculate concept. We praise God for the Word. We praise God even more for the Word that became flesh. That is the moment that the world celebrates! The moment wherein God displayed his love for the world so grandly that he gave his only begotten Son, the Lamb of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on John as he spans the entire scope of creation to point the world to Jesus, the Lamb of God.

In the course of just 29 verses John starts at the beginning of creation and moves to the birth of Christ and to his baptism day. John acknowledges that in beginning the Word resided with the Father and the two were one in purpose and being. Yet in 1:14 the Word became flesh and dwelled among men. At the point of becoming "flesh" and dwelling among men, God, for the first time had a "begotten" son with the woman Mary serving as the instrument of his transfer from the divine to the human.

The Word becoming flesh served the same purpose as a lamb in the Jewish worship experience. For the Jews a lamb had tremendous significance. For John to describe Jesus as the Lamb of God could not be dismissed as a casual reference. In their experience, lambs between one and three years old, were offered daily at the morning and evening sacrifices in the temple. Lambs were sacrificed on the Sabbath, The Feast of the New Moon, The feast of the Trumpets, the Feast of the Tabernacle, The Feast of Pentecost, and of the Passover and many other occasions.

Depending on the circumstance, the lamb's sacrifice had various expressions. It was offered for the forgiveness of sins daily. It was offered in celebration of prosperity and rejoicing as was the case at Pentecost and in remembrance of deliverance in the case of the Passover. Whatever the occasion, the lamb was seen as a sacrifice for God.

While the Jews were accustomed to lambs being offered in sacrifice, it would be highly unusual to refer to anyone as a "precious lamb," or "my little lamb" as is common today because it would have signified that the person referred to would ultimately be sacrificed. When John referred to Christ as the "Lamb of God" he identified him as the one person whose presence among humankind was to serve the same role as a lamb in their worship experience. He would be a source of celebration. He would be a source of joy. He would be a source of deliverance. He would be a source of forgiveness, but like the lamb of the worship, he would have to die to accomplish his end.

Describing Jesus as the "Lamb of God" is unique in the whole bible. Only in John is the phrase "Lamb of God" used. The only person ever called the "Lamb of God" was Jesus. The only person worthy of such a designation was and is Jesus!

Secondly, by describing Jesus as the "Lamb of God" in this manner clarifies that Jesus came to be baptized to identify himself as the fulfillment of the prophecy, not to be forgiven for his sins, because he had none. Jesus himself so pure as to be able to wash away the sins of others, did not come to confess sins, but to give opportunity for John to point Him out saying He is the one so long sought, this is "the Lamb."

He calls Him "Lamb," to remind the Jews of the prophecy of Isaiah, and of the shadow under the law of Moses, so he could lead them from "type" to "reality." The lamb of Moses did not take away the sin of any one; but this lamb took away the sin of all the world; for when it was in danger of perishing, He quickly delivered it from the wrath of God.

Mary, as the earthly instrument used by God to bring Jesus into this life, delivered a baby boy. That boy, because of the divine nature of His mission would save the world from its sins by sacrificing his life on Calvary.

In that she gave birth to the one that would serve as the sacrifice for the sins of many, on that winter's night in Bethlehem, Mary had a little lamb!

Abraham's Lamb

Today, we rejoice in knowing that Christ came to serve as the Lamb for every purpose and to satisfy every spiritual need.

ABRAHAM'S LAMB: Abraham climbed to the top of a mount preparing to sacrifice his son in obedience to the command of God. As he tied his only son on the altar, preparing to sacrifice him, the lad called out, "Where is the lamb for the burnt offering?" Abraham's response was that God would provide the lamb for his sacrifice. Moments later, an angel called out to him to stop and showed him a "Ram in the Bush." (Genesis 22:7)

In that same sense, many today have seen how God has provided them with a "Ram in the Bush" experience. When our circumstances appeared to be overwhelming and problems appeared to evade solution, God somehow has provided the "Ram in the Bush." When you called upon all that you knew for help, God fixed it so that a ram in bush appeared. When you did all you knew how to do to fix a problem, God made a way for a ram in the bush to provide. God will make a way out of no way. He will hear and answer prayer. Abraham trusted God, even when he didn't know how God would operate, he trusted and God showed him the "ram."

Abraham had a little lamb. It was called faith in God.

JACOB'S LAMBS: Jacob worked for his uncle Laban 14 years for the right to marry the woman he loved. In the course of that time he was cheated and mistreated. However, God turned his misfortune into good fortune. Through a special arrangement with his uncle Jacob agreed to work for only the speckled and spotted lambs that were born in Laban's herd. In the course of time, to make up for wrongs done to him, God fixed it so that Jacob's spotted and speckled lambs multiplied so much that he became rich. (Genesis 31:9)

There are many today who have shared this experience. Some can witness to how God took what was meant for their destruction and turned it into their good. Ditches, meant to swallow them up in defeat, served to protect them from harm. Stumbling blocks placed in their way were turned into stepping stones. It is no small thing for God to step into the affairs of his people and turn things around and give them a new meaning. Jacob's lambs were tangible proof that God can take that which is meant for bad and make it good.

Jacob had little lambs. They were called the helping hand of God.

MOSES' LAMB: Moses ordered the children of Israel to prepare to leave Egypt. On the night before their departure they were told to kill a spotless lamb and take its blood and put it over the door posts of their homes. In this way God's death angel would passover and spare their lives. As Israel waited to be set free they sat in their homes behind the safety of the blood stained door posts. It was blood that had been provided by a lamb.

Even in this respect there are those who share the same experience. There are many who have been delivered from a circumstance not by their own power but by the power of God working in their lives. The man addicted to cigarette smoking, was delivered by the power of God. The woman released from a life of prostitution, was not released on her own, but by the power of God. The family crippled by a heavy load of trouble, distrust and bad feeling, were saved not by their own power but by the power of the blood of Christ.

They are keenly aware that alone they are powerless to effectuate any changes or make their conditions improve. However, with God they can make it happen.

Moses had a lamb, it was the lamb called the power of the blood. Maybe that's why the song writer would record, "there's power, power, wonder working power in the precious blood of the lamb!"

Mary Had A Little Lamb

Finally brothers and sisters, it is clear that Abraham had a lamb, called faith displayed on a mountainside. Jacob had lambs that showed how God had richly blessed him. Moses had a lamb that marked deliverance.

However, the focus of our attention at this point is on the truth that one evening in a lonely corner of a small town called Bethlehem, Mary had a little lamb.

Just exactly who was this lamb? What was his nature? Isaiah tried to show us when he said in, Isa 53:5 " But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." He carried it further by saying, in Isa 53:7 "He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth."

Don't be intimidated when you hear someone say, "Mary had a little lamb" because the truth of the matter is every child of God has lamb, that follows you every where you go!

If you go to work, the lamb is the there!

If you drive your car! The lamb is there!

If you go to school! The lamb is there!

The Word of God says, in Psalm 139:8-10 “If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me.”

John looked over into the revelation of the things to come and saw the host of heaven asking, who is worthy to open the little book and the answer came, “Worthy is the Lamb!”

He is worthy because he came down upon this earth to dwell among men!

He is worthy because he suffered for the sins of men!

He is worthy because he died out on Calvary!

He is worthy because, Early Sunday morning, he arose from his grave!

Worthy is the Lamb!

Worthy is the Lamb!

Worthy!

Dealing With The After Christmas Blues

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 28, 1997

SCRIPTURE: "And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child. And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds. But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart." Luke 2:17-19

Introduction

Now that Christmas is over, do you feel a little let down. After all of the build up and the hype what do you do after Christmas? Now that all the presents have been exchanged and opened and you have given and received. What's next?

The wait for Christmas day seems endless. It seems like the days between Thanksgiving and Christmas are the longest days of the year. They seem to drag endlessly. Most children found it hard to sleep at night pondering the excitement they will feel when they finally get their new Play station, bicycle or Barbie Doll. They had dreams of themselves sitting in front of the television with play stations plugged in neatly. The closer Christmas day came, the more intense was the excitement. Christmas eve seemed to be the longest day in the world. The day dragged on endlessly. It was hard to go to sleep. What happened to the clock? It seemed as though it stopped working. The hands never moved.

Finally on Christmas morning the family awoke but then there were all of those delays. Who wanted to wash their face on a morning like Christmas? Why couldn't we simply put things away later in the day? The packages under the tree were screaming, "open us!" Someone read the Christmas story from the bible. Why couldn't they read the short version. Somebody prayed. It was the longest prayer in the world!

At last it was time to open the presents. Look at the gifts! Why did they use so much ribbon? It's so tough it can't even be torn open. As wrapping paper flew left and right and bright eyes widened even wider, the excitement swelled until every child realized that it was actually Christmas Day.

On Christmas night, nestled in bed beside a new baby doll on one side and a play station on the other, many a child mused "It's over!" It took so long to get here, now its over so quick.

In another room, safely away from the rest of the family, a mother sat in her favorite chair. She sipped a cup of coffee and reflected on the events of the day. She remembered smiling children, family reunions, the fellowship of friends. As she reflected, she concluded, "It was a mighty good day!"

After such a build up, there may be some at a loss about what they should do after Christmas. Friends are returning to their routines. Family members home for the holidays are gone. The food is all gone. Your house is a wreck. Trash is piled up. Discarded trees line the streets. Decorations are coming down. It is enough to give you the blues, if it wasn't for Jesus.

As Christians, we know exactly what to do after Christmas. We follow the example of the Shepherds and Mary after Christmas day had ended. Mary reflected on the joy of the day. The shepherds told the world about the glory of the Lord! Thinking about God's goodness and telling others how good he truly is, is the best way to deal with the "After Christmas Blues!"

Exposition

This text focuses on two immediate responses to the birth of Christ, one from Mary another from the Shepherds.

There was plenty of amazement at the birth of Christ. There were miraculous events happening in the sky. A large star appeared and pointed the way the place of the Christ Child's birth. Angels announced his birth to shepherds. Truly it was a night of wonder, added to the usual joy and pain of childbirth. When it was all over Mary pondered them in her heart.

Mary had plenty to ponder. She had much to reflect upon. When she considered the series of events that brought her to Bethlehem, the very place where Angels were preparing to announce the birth of the Christ. Her meditations had even more meaning once it is considered that she brought forth this son, despite the suspecting eyes and wagging tongues of the people in her hometown who were taken aback by the fact that she was pregnant before she was married to Joseph. None of them knew the circumstances of her pregnancy. It wasn't for them to know. Their criticism, therefore, was expected, considering the appearance. Secondly, her meditations had to focus on her good fortune to have a successful childbirth, despite the circumstances. Without assistance she gave birth in the cold of the night to a healthy child. Despite her long journey, most of which was on foot, there were no complications. She pondered these things.

Mary's first response after the birth of Christ was to personally meditate and reflect upon the meaning of her circumstance and the majesty and power of God.

While Mary's response was personal and private, the shepherds did just the opposite. They had witnessed two marvelous events, Angels in the heavens and the birth of the Christ Child. It was simply too much for them to contain themselves. When they had seen it, though they saw nothing in the child that should induce them to believe that he was Christ the Lord, yet the circumstances, how mean soever they were, agreeing with the sign that the angel had given them, they were abundantly satisfied; and as the lepers argued , This being a day of good tidings, we dare not hold our peace), so they made known abroad the whole story of what was told them, both by the angels, and by Joseph and Mary, concerning this child, that he was the Savior, even Christ the Lord, that in him there is peace on earth, and that he was conceived by the power of the Holy Ghost, and born of a virgin.

They told everybody that would hear and they agreed in their testimony. And now if, when he is in the world, the world knows him not, it is their own fault, for they have sufficient notice given them. All they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds, v. 18. The shepherds were plain, downright, honest men, and they could not suspect them guilty of any design to impose upon them; what they had said therefore was likely to be true, and, if true, they could not but wonder at it, that the Messiah should be born in a stable and not in a palace, that angels should bring news of it to poor shepherds and not to the chief priests. They wondered, but never asked any further about the Saviour, their duty to him, or advantages by him, but let the thing drop as a nine days' wonder.

The shepherds made them the matter of their more public praises. If others were not affected with those things, yet they themselves were (v. 20): They returned, glorifying and praising God, in concurrence with the holy angels. If others would not regard the report they made to them, God would accept the thanksgivings they offered to him. They praised God for what they had heard from the angel, and for what they had seen, the babe in the manger, and just then in the swaddling, when they came in, as it had been spoken to them. They thanked God that they had seen Christ, though in the depth of his humiliation. As afterwards the cross of Christ, so now his manger, was to some foolishness and a stumbling-block, but others saw in it, and admired, and praised, the wisdom of God and the power of God.

Mary's personal meditation and the Shepherds outward combined, give the world a glaring example of what to do "after Christmas", meditate on and glorify God.

Things to Ponder

As family members are returning and families prepare to take down decorations, Christmas should leave every believer with something to ponder and meditate upon.

HIS GOODNESS: Mary and Joseph were not wealthy people. In fact, because they gave the "Poor Man's" sacrifice of pigeons when they came to dedicate Jesus at the temple eight days later some believe they were relatively poor working people. Despite their poverty they had a reason for joy. As Mary thought of her family sleeping in a stable in the cold, she did not focus on the negative but focused on the good thing that happened. A child was born. It could have been worse, the child could have been lost in delivery. There may not have even been a stable available. Mary chose not to curse the darkness, but thanked God for one candle!

Despite the poverty that is common to most of us, God has been good. When we think on his goodness we see so many ways that he has blessed us that we arise from the Christmas season with a feeling of assurance that God is Good.

Perhaps that's why the song writer said, "When waves of affliction sweep over your soul and sunlight is hidden from view, if ever you tempted to fret or complain, just think of his goodness to you"

HOW HE MADE IT HAPPEN: After Christmas, we should also consider how God arranged things for your family to make it happen just right. Like Mary and Joseph made it to the right place by no plan or design of their own, God fixed a few things for every family this Christmas. He fixed things to make it happen the way it did. Flights that were not available became available. Vacation schedules were rearranged. Somehow, despite meager resources, sufficient gifts were available for those special family members. There was enough food for your family and enough to share with visitors. Some received unexpected bonuses from their employers. So many good things lined up, one after another, that the hand of God was obviously interfering in our affairs, arranging things to make it happen.

Even when we are tempted to worry about the bills that will come in January, there are many that have already concluded that God will make a way in that respect too! Has not God provided in times past? Hasn't he opened doors of opportunity on other occasions? Is he still the same God? The answer is "Yes!" to all of the questions. The After Christmas blues comes only when we believe that we are hopelessly in over our heads and there is no help. Saints always find a reason for hope! They are literal fountains of optimism because we know our God is able!

EVEN IN MISFORTUNE: By modern standards, Mary and Joseph would have been considered misfortunates. They were accustomed to a warm fire and a roof over their heads. Yet, on Christmas night they were homeless. Even in their misfortune, they found God to be good.

Some spent this Christmas beside a sick loved one in a hospital bed. Some were helping loved ones feed themselves. Others were helping friends and associates with injuries. Even in this unfortunate circumstance, the saint finds a reason not to be sad. They were able to show the true meaning of Christmas to a loved one or friend, that is giving of themselves to help others. Even the victim of an illness sometimes feels guilty for disrupting the lives of others at what is supposed to be a happy time. The sainted family member reassures the sick and the victims of misfortune that their illness or misfortune simply gave them a different way to celebrate the gift of love that the Christ child brought, through showing love to them. Even the sick, have no need for the 'After Christmas Blues" they have the joy of knowing that God is working through the hands of others to bring them healing and deliverance!

Give A Testimony

While there is sufficient reason for each of us to have a private meditation and reflection on God's goodness, we should also consider the example of the shepherds, who told the world, not only what they had heard from the angels, but what they had seen with their own eyes.

After Christmas, every saint should take every opportunity to spread the word about the goodness of God.

We should tell from what we have heard in the word, but we should tell from our own experience. There was no experience for the shepherds like seeing the Christ child themselves. When they told others, they gave a testimony about something they had experienced themselves.

Those who are preparing to leave the city, returning to far destinations, have a story to tell. It is more than a story of family get togethers, reunions, fine foods and fellowship. It is a story of God's love.

Those who are taking down decorations and packing them away, have a story to tell. Is is more than a story of beautifully decorated homes, bright colors and festive spirits. It is a story of how the love of God brought joy and hope into the hearts of every family member.

Those who are still carrying out the bags of wrappings, ribbons and boxes that contained so many presents, have a story to tell. It is more than a story of opened presents, gifts given and gifts received. It is a story of how God loved the world so much that he gave the greatest gift.

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." (John 3:16)

Every Saint has a story to tell!

It is the story of that began in Bethlehem and ended in Jerusalem!

It is a story that began with a borrowed manger and ended with a borrowed cross and an empty tomb!

It is a story that began in the darkness of night, but ended Early Sunday morning!

It is the story that Jesus, the lamb of God, came to this earth, died and rose again that we might have a chance to everlasting life!

What do we do after Christmas?

The same thing we did before Christmas!

Go tell it on the mountain, that Jesus Christ is born!

Wherever You Go, God is with You!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the LORD thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest." Joshua 1:9

Introduction

Does the new year present any challenges to you? How are you responding to them? We respond to life's challenges in one of three ways. We can decide to tackle them head on and give them our best shot, run in cowardice or avoid dealing with them as long as we can. Those who decide to grab hold to a challenge and give it their best effort are courageous. They don't know the outcome. They are apprehensive, yet bold. Those who run from the challenges are usually afraid. Somehow they have developed a feeling of inadequacy that seems to dwarf them in comparison to the possibility of failure. Those who avoid challenges may not be afraid but lack the level of commitment necessary to tackle a gigantic problem and wrestle it to the ground. The new year presents each believer with new challenges. How we respond will depend mostly on what we believe about God's ability to help us shoulder any challenge.

There are many who run the risk of missing great opportunities in store for them because of their own fears. Consider the little boy who was often teased by his older sisters and brothers. To tease him they took all of his toys and hid them in an empty room. They removed the light bulbs and told the gullible youth that there was a monster in the room. The monster allegedly fed himself by eating little boys. They described his big teeth, claws and fearsome manner. The little boy was frightened at just the thought of the monster in the room.

Every day his brothers and sisters rolled in laughter as he shivered at the tales of the monster, then cried because he could not get his toys that were inside, even though the door was not locked. One day, much to the surprise of his siblings, he was sitting in the middle of the floor playing with all of his toys! He was happy and smiling boldly. They asked, "How did you get your toys? Didn't we tell you that there is a monster in the room?" The little boy never stopped playing with his toys. He said,

"At first I was afraid of the monster in the room. So I got me a monster that was bigger than your monster and my monster beat your monster up!" His brother ran out of the room shouting, "Hey, I had some candy in the room, did you eat it?" The little brother answered, "I guess my monster got hungry. He ate your monster and the candy too!" When we overcome our fears, we can seize the opportunities that life offers us.

The devil has played a mind game on many believers. We fail to claim many of our opportunities because someone has told us that there is a "monster in the room." If we live in the shadow of the devil's intimidation and monster stories, we'll never become the man or woman that God wants us to be.

As Christians, we know that God controls the unknown. We do not fear each new day, but enter boldly as we remember that "greater is he that is in us, than he that is in the world."

Exposition

This text focuses on Joshua as he receives encouragement to cross over Jordan into the unknown trails of the promised land.

Joshua was very apprehensive about assuming the role of leadership of Israel. For 40 years, all the people had known was Moses. For 40 years they were sheltered in the wilderness and literally fed by the hand of God. Now they faced the prospect of crossing into unknown territory. The Promised land was full of promise, but it had so many challenges. It had cities that were fortified by great walls. Each city seemed to have giant warriors that were well armed and well trained. The people were so intimidated that they felt like grasshoppers in their own sight. As a young man, Joshua was bold. When he was forty years younger, he was stronger and more able to withstand the pressures of war. Now, in his senior years, he was being called upon to lead the people. It was an awesome challenge.

The land of Canaan represented many things to the people of Israel. It represented the fulfilment of God's promise to them through Abraham. God promised them the land they saw. They had suffered greatly to reach the threshold of the new land which was a fulfillment of that promise. Now it lay before them.

The land is given to the people of Israel, but it still had to be possessed. Title to it is the gift of God; possession of it is the result of an obedient walk. God promised, "Every place that the sole of your foot will tread upon I have given to you, as I promised to Moses." {Josh 1:3 RSV}

The idea was simple, God gave them the land but they had to go and claim it themselves. Any amount they claimed they could have. If they ended up with nothing it was only because they would not possess that which God had already given. Israel's choice was to stand on the side of Jordan and observe or rise up to the challenge.

Although the land was promised it would not come without a formidable challenge. There would be people poised to stand between what God has promised and life in the wilderness. Yet God promised Joshua that no man would be able stand against him. Just as he had been with the patriarch Moses, he would also stand with Joshua.

But if the land is filled with challenge it is also filled with the prospect of victory. It is the prospect of victory upon which God focuses Joshua's attention, not the size of the challenge. He is promised that, "No man shall be able to stand before you all the days of your life; as I was with Moses, so I will be with you; I will not fail you or forsake you." {Josh 1:5 RSV}

Joshua was encouraged to be strong and courageous as he pondered the prospects of the new land. The strength referred to is both physical and spiritual. Taking on such a challenge would no doubt be physically challenging and draining. Yet God encouraged Joshua to be strong. It would also take spiritual strength for the times when both faith and confidence would fail.

It is going to take courage.

At verse nine God summarizes his words of encouragement to Joshua. If he did exactly as he was commanded and proceeded to tackle the new land without being afraid, God promised he would be with him wherever he went. That was perhaps the most encouraging part of the God's words to Joshua, the knowledge that the maker of the universe was with him.

Thus, Joshua, standing before a great new challenge is told be courageous and seize the moment. He is reassured that if he obeyed God's command, because God promised it, he would be victorious.

The Challenges of the New Year

Like the children of Israel faced their Jordan river, staring at the challenge of the new land, every believer also stands at the threshold of each new year, faced with the challenges that each new year brings.

Great opportunities are available for every believer in the year, God has already promised them, but, like Israel we must do several things:

POSSESS THE LAND: God has already opened several unseen doors of opportunity for each believer. The only thing that stops us from claiming what God has ordained is our own obstinance, fear or procrastination. We have been promised a measure of joy and happiness. It is what Christ talked about when he said in John 10:10, " I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." The abundant life is the satisfied life. Once a person is satisfied, there is nothing else needed.

What stands between us and the satisfaction we want out of life? What stops us from achieving our dreams, often it is only our fear of reaching out and grabbing hold of that which is close to our heart. Like Joshua, there are many believers today standing at the Jordan pondering the promised land. If they listen close, they will hear God say, "Every place the sole of your feet treads upon, I will give you!" Seize your dream! I give it but you must take the first steps of faith. Every step you take, following God's command, will lead you to victory.

CHALLENGES WILL BE IMMENSE: The promise of the new year is not without its challenges. God has not said that this new year will be one without formidable obstacles. In fact, they are not hidden, you can see them in the not so distant future, just as Israel was close enough to know that there were giant sized enemies in Canaan.

What is it that you seek to accomplish this year? A new job? A career move? A promotion? Stable family life? More spirituality? Improved marital relations? No matter what your particular goal, there will be obstacles. Some of them will be formidable. Nothing good comes without a struggle.

Believers struggling to live pure and holy lives are finding it more of a challenge as decadence surrounds them on every hand. Students in school, laborers, professionals, all are being bombarded with a shower of challenges to spiritual purity. Even in the spiritual realm nothing good will come without a struggle.

Some of the obstacles that stand in the way of every believer achieving what God has promised have Satan as their source, especially those who are trying to get their feet on stable ground with God. That's why Paul writes in Ephesians 6:12 "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." We struggle, but we also have the promise of the victory. Have you not read, 1 Corinthians 15:57-58 "But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. "

DON'T TURN TO THE LEFT OR RIGHT: If God has promised the victory, what remains is for us to do is to be steadfast. That means we set our course on that which is right and don't stray off the course. Israel was told to study God's word and then not turn to the left or the right. Essential to claiming the great blessings that God has in store for us is obedience to God's word. We can't ignore this portion of the scripture. There are blessings being promised, but there are also warnings that we must steadfastly walk in the way of God. That's what 1 Corinthians 15:58 means when it says, " Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

God is With You

Finally brothers and sisters we must consider that God gave Joshua a promise that is rare in biblical history. He told him, "...for the LORD thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest." That promise deserves serious consideration because of its uniqueness. It is rare, if ever, that God made that promise to another human being.

God walked with Enoch and loved him so much that he took him, but he never promised him, whereever you go, I'll go!

God was so taken with the loyalty of Noah that he spared his life for one whole year as he floated in the ark, but there is no record that he ever told Noah, wherever you go, I'll go!

God was pleased with Abraham as a great man of faith. He traveled from Canaan to Egypt and back, but he never told him, wherever you go, I'll go!

David was known as a man after God's own heart, but even the man heralded for his devotion to God never heard God say, wherever you go, I'll go!

Elijah was revered for his closeness to God and was swept home in a fiery chariot, but there is no record that God told him, wherever you go, I'll go!

What is so unique about this man Joshua that God would select him for this extraordinary promise?

The name Joshua means "he shall save his people." Joshua himself is a type of someone that was to come.

The only other instance wherein a person of the Godhead promised mortal men "where you go, I'll go" is when another Joshua came, whose name also meant, "he shall save his people!"

This new Joshua stood his disciples on the side of a mountain and gave them the greatest of their lives. It would be a challenge that would require all of their faith and courage, yet he challenged them anyway by saying..

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world" (Matthew 28:19-20)

When somebody says they are with you, that means they plan to support you, defend you, and protect you!

I hear Jesus say "lo, I am with you!"

If you are about the tackle the challenge of a brand new year, be sure to have the Lord with you!

When the Lord is with you:

—It doesn't matter how dark the night, because he can take darkness and turn it into light!

It doesn't matter how much rain falls, because after every rain he makes the sun shine!

It doesn't matter how many ditches your enemies dig for you, he can take your enemies and make them your footstools

It doesn't matter if you don't have a dime in your pocket, if you take the Lord with you, David said, "I have been young, but now I'm old, but I've never seen the righteous forsaken or his seed begging for bread!"

When you get up in the morning, take the Lord with you!

At the noon day, take the Lord with you!

At the midnight hour, take the Lord with you!

Take the Lord with you! Take Jesus with you !

The same Jesus, who died out on Calvary, and rose on Sunday morning!

Before you begin the tedious journey this year, you ought to make up in your mind, to "Take the Lord With you!

Moving at God's Command

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 4, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "At the commandment of the LORD they rested in the tents, and at the commandment of the LORD they journeyed: they kept the charge of the LORD, at the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses." Number 9:23

Introduction

When is it time to move on with your life? When is it time to rest? There are many times in life where each believer reaches a cross road. This is the point in which decisions have to be made about direction and life choices. Sometimes the choices are simple, whether or not to diet or to redecorate a room are examples of simple choicess. Sometimes they are not so simple. Often we must decide whether to have a major surgery, change jobs, marry or divorce, or some other major decisions. There are many who bog down when faced with such decisions. Others act but do so recklessly.

Knowing when to move and when to be still is one of the most crucial lessons we learn as believers. This is important to us because we know there are times when God wants to take action, but there are also times when God wants us to "be still and Know That I Am God "(Ps. 46:10). Every believer seeks the quiet moments when they can hear God clearly, confirming what they sense to be the voice of God speaking to them.

It is important to hear God clearly because there are so many contrasting voices today, many which sound like the voice of God. Consider the woman who prided herself in always trying to do what God wanted done. Obedience to God was so important that whenever God spoke to her she carried his commands to the letter. Some devilish teens in her neighborhood tried to take advantage of her obedient spirit. At night they gathered outside her window and whispered in a voice that tried to imitate an angelic tone, "If you bake it, they will come!-Pound!" The next morning the woman arose and baked a pound cake and called in the neighborhood boys and offered them generous slices. Buoyed by their success, the boys whispered to her again, "If you bake it, they will come, Lemon!" Just as she did before she baked a lemon cake and offered them giant slices.

On the third night the boys whispered, "If you bake it, they will come, Chocolate." She heard the voice, but immediately afterwards she heard the giggling boys outside her window. She arose and baked a cake but mixed several boxes of Ex-Lax with the chocolate icing. She called the boys in and gave them generous slices. As they were eating, she said, "I heard a voice that said, if you bake it they will come. But then I heard other voices, outside my window." As the boys finished their cake they had this sudden urge to find a bathroom. She said, "The voices I heard told me to tell you, if you eat it, you will run!" We need to be careful whether the voice that speaks to us is actually the voice of God or the simple suggestions of mortal men.

Our Christian experience thus far has taught us to listen for the voice of God. When God speaks to our hearts, we sense it immediately. Then we look and listen for confirmations as God repeats the message to us by sending us other signs and indicators. His Holy Spirit directs us through inspiration. We can test what we sense against the Word of God itself. If what we are moving to do is against what the Word of God teaches or is doubtful, we know it is not God telling us to move. If the Word supports what we sense, then we should look for the confirmations, God will send them, when it is truly time to move!

As Christians, we ask God to lead us and guide us. When he says 'stay put' we do just that. However, when God says "move" we are ready to move at his command!

Exposition

This text focuses on Israel as it moved from place to place in its wilderness journey, always at the command of God.

The children of Israel were a nomadic people. After leaving Egypt they constructed a tent like Tabernacle in which they worshiped God and offered sacrifices. The presence of God was always known among the people through the outwardly visible sign of a pillar of cloud that hoovered over a portion of the Tabernacle. The cloud was always present. Even at night the cloud could be seen because God gave it the appearance of fire when it was seen at night.

The people were instructed that whenever the cloud lifted it was time for them to pack up their tents and move to another location, as God dictated to Moses. Whenever the cloud stayed low, they knew it was God's will for them to stay still.

The cloud was a visible token of God's special presence and guardian care of the Israelites (Ex 14:20 Ps 105:39). It was easily distinguishable from all other clouds by its peculiar form and its fixed position; for from the day of the completion of the tabernacle it rested by day as a dark cloud, by night as a fiery pillar of fire, over that part of the sanctuary which contained the ark of the testimony (Le 16:2).When the cloud was taken up—that is, rose to a higher elevation, so as to be conspicuous at the remotest extremities of the camp. That was a signal for removal; and, accordingly, it is properly called (Nu 9:18) "the commandment of the Lord." It was a visible token of the presence of God; and from it, as a glorious throne, He gave the order. So that its motion regulated the commencement and termination of all the journeys of the Israelites.

John Wesley notes the importance of the cloud as a symbol for modern believers.

Wesley points to the phrase, "When the cloud abode." This is repeated again and again, because it was a constant miracle, and because it is a matter we should take particular notice of, as highly significant and instructive. It is mentioned long after by David, Psalm 105:39, and by the people of God after their captivity, Nehemiah 9:19. And the guidance of this cloud is spoken of, as signifying the guidance of the Blessed Spirit, Isaiah 63:14. The Spirit of the Lord caused him to rest, and so didst thou lead the people.

The cloud became a symbol of the presence of God. Its movement became a sign of direction to believers. It guided believers then and through the Holy Spirit even today continues to guide all those who commit their ways unto the Lord.

It is difficult to understand this passage without considering the enormous significance of the cloud. The presence of the cloud signals to all believers that God is always near us, both night and day. As long as the cloud rested on the tabernacle, so long they continued in the same place. There is no time lost, while we are waiting God's time. When the cloud was taken up, they removed, however comfortably they were encamped.

It is very safe and pleasant going when we see God before us, and resting where he appoints us to rest. The leading of this cloud is spoken of as signifying the guidance of the blessed Spirit. We are not now to expect such tokens of the Divine presence and guidance; but the promise is sure to all God's spiritual Israel, that he will guide them by his counsel.(Psalm 73:24). Romans 8:14 reminds every believer that true "sons" of God are led by the spirit.

At the commandment of the Lord, our hearts should always move and rest, saying, Father, thy will be done; dispose of me and mine as thou pleasest. What thou wilt, and where thou wilt; only let me be thine, and always in the way of my duty.

Lifting of the Cloud

Today, there are many who are contemplating great moves in the name of the Lord. Some are in doubt as to whether they should move or stand still. In the biblical context of our text the cloud symbolized the presence of God. However, its very shape indicated it was not the usual clouds that always appear.

In the normal context of life clouds represent varying degrees of indecision, difficulty and doubt. Even in this context, it is the lifting of the cloud that indicates when God wants us to move.

There are four types of clouds that readily come to mind.

FOG: Fog is a cloud on the ground. It rarely rains when it's foggy, but movement is often limited, if possible at all, during foggy weather. Those who are driving, flying or otherwise trying to move usually discover it is safer to wait until the fog lifts.

There are many life situations that are foggy. There is no thunderstorm threatening, but yet the danger that foggy situations bring is not in the possibility of storms, but in the danger of going off course, making a wrong turn or even worse getting on a collision course.

In the fog, we don't know which way to turn.

In the fog, we can't see our way.

Before moving in such situations, wait until God lifts the cloud, then move at his command.

STRATUS: Stratus Clouds form a blanket of gray across the entire sky. They block the sun, dull the appearance of the day and while they don't produce thunderstorms have been known to irritate us with light mists and drizzles that force us to turn on our windshield wipers.

There are often times in life when the demands of life and sometimes our extra activities block out the sun. The clouds give a miserable tint to each day. Life's little irritations get to us during such times. Like drizzling rain, they don't cause big problems but they dampen our spirits. What makes it worse is that we can't see the sun.

The spiritual life dies if it goes to long without seeing the Son!

Good jobs bring in the money, but if they keep us away from the Son too long, every day still seems to be filled with grey skies!

CUMULUS: Cumulus clouds are lumpy in appearance and marked by large spaces of blue in between them. They are generally associated with fair weather. However, if conditions become unstable cumulus clouds quickly become associated with thunderstorms.

There are many who see the storm clouds gathering in their own lives. Although there are patches of sunlight, they sense the tensions building themselves into a great thunderstorm.

It is not wise to do much moving in a storm. The wise have learned to wait out storms and move only when they have lifted. The unwise make decisions in the midst of storms of anger or frustration that bring on the thunder and the lightning. It is better to wait for the clouds to lift before moving!

CIRRUS: Cirrus clouds form at higher levels than cumulus. They generally contain very little water vapor and nearly always move from West to East in the natural Jet stream. With an appearance like a feather duster, they generally point to fair weather.

The time to move is when there is no possibility of fog, clouds of indecision do not overspread the sky, and thunderstorms are not threatening. The time to move is when the clouds have lifted and the spirit of God points to fair weather on the horizon.

At God's Command

Finally brothers and sisters we must consider that Israel had many faults and short comings, but it appears that they had no problem moving at God's command. Every time the cloud lifted they were ready to move!

At God's command they packed their tents and moved at a moment's notice!

At God's command they arose, even in the middle of the night and were ready to move!

Not everybody learned this lesson.

When Elijah heard God's command to face the wickedness of King Ahab, there were times when he hid in a cave, under a Juniper tree and lay by the side of a brook being fed by a raven. But when God got ready, he had to move!

When Jonah heard God's command to preach to the wicked people of Nineveh, he tried to avoid the task by hiding out on a boat, but when God got ready he had to move!

When God gives the command every believer should know that he has to move!

Naaman moved at God's command even though his instruction seemed illogical and stupid. But when he washed seven times in muddy water he came up out of the water a brand new man!

A poor widow moved at God's command, it seemed impractical to take her last bread and oil and give it to a stranger. She did as God instructed, and she found that her barrel never ran dry!

A lame man who sat by the pool moved at God's command. It seemed impossible for a man who had been lame for 38 years to just walk away, but when Jesus said "take thy bed and walk" and moved at God's command!

I don't know about you, but I've decided to move at God's command!

I won't worry about the clouds!

I won't worry about the storms!

I just keep my bags packed, because when God gets ready, I've got to move!

I do not know how long it will be nor what the future holds for me, but this I know, if Jesus

The lily of the valley,

If Jesus, the bright and morning star!

If Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

If Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

If Jesus leads me, I shall get home some day!

If Jesus Had Come Down From The Cross

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: "And saying, Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross." Matthew 27:40

Introduction

Have you ever played what if? "What if" is a mental game that some play in which they consider possible outcomes. Those who plan long range activities usually consider "what if" scenarios. These are the times in which plans are made in anticipation of certain actions by others. Emergency planners practice "what if" scenarios. Military organizations and police units often practice "what if" situations. In this way they are constantly ready to take action because nearly every possible situation that can occur has been anticipated and an appropriate response has been planned. "What if" is also a consideration of those who look back after the fact. Sometimes those who attend reunions see their old girl friends or boy friends from high school and they play the "what if" game. That's especially true if the person has become successful at what they do or has turned out to be everything you thought they couldn't be.

Sometimes children ponder the "what if" questions. What if I had been born to another family? What if I had been born white? What if I had just been rich? The possibilities for "what ifs" are limitless, considering all the various alternatives that are available in modern times.

Often "what if's" have a tendency to lead us full circle. When that happens, we are led to consider how a change in events could have affected our personal lives.

What if there had been no American slave trade? A section of the U.S. Constitution referred to slaves as three fifths of a man would not have been written. The civil war would not have been fought. In all probability the Ku Klux Klan, Dixie, the NAACP, Negro Spirituals, the Blues, Affirmative Action, and Civil Rights Laws would probably never have existed.

What if Mahatma Ghandi had not lead the freedom movement in India? The civil rights movement in America would have been a revolution instead of a series of civil disobedience actions. There would have been no Freedom Rides, sit-ins or marches on Washington or King Holiday. In fact, if Ghandi had not led the freedom movement in India, Martin Luther King, Jr. would have become an aging senior Black leader tucked away quietly as the ambassador of some small island.

In a spiritual context, every Christian has to ask, what if Christ had not come to the world? Churches would be synagogues. Our Saturday assemblies would still require us to bring animal sacrifices. We'd celebrate Hanukkah instead of Christmas and the Passover instead of Easter.

If Christ had not come, we would constantly be looking back on our ancient past instead of forward to our future.

Even more staggering is the prospect of what might have happened if Christ had actually done as he was asked by his critics and stepped down from the cross.

As Christians, we rejoice in knowing that our Lord gave us a second chance by staying on the cross. Had he come down our souls would have been lost. However, because he remained there, we have a chance to the tree of life!

Exposition

This text focuses on the Christ at his crucifixion, as his critics urged him to come down from the cross.

During the entire ministry of Jesus he was constantly bombarded by those who urged him to do things to prove himself to them. Regardless to what he did, most of them still did not believe him. Even some of those who were with him constantly found it difficult to believe what they were seeing and hearing.

At his crucifixion, as he hung on a cross with nails in his hands and feet, his critics continued their assassination of his person and ministry. His words and claims were misrepresented and his ministry was questioned repeatedly.

His critics challenged him to come down from the cross and prove that he was the Son of God. It was just another instance where people wanted to see a spectacle, but still would not have believed even if he had come down. They probably would have accused the soldiers of sloppy work by failing to secure him to the cross completely. There was nothing for Jesus to prove by coming down from the cross. Those who would see him would not be convinced anyway. There was much to be lost if he came down, too much to risk for the mere self satisfaction of showing off for those who criticized him.

The people at the cross wanted him to come down for their amusement.

When he began his ministry, Satan wanted him to stoop down. In the wilderness for 40 days and nights, Satan came to Jesus with the offers of food, fame and fortune if he would simply stoop down and acknowledge him. The chance to have food after a 40 day fast was tempting, but it would have required him to stoop down to the level of using his mission to satisfy his own needs and drives. The opportunity to have earthly fame and fortune was also given to him, but even that would have required him to stoop down to the level of pandering to the public to achieve his end. The possession of power, resources and influence was certainly admirable, but as Satan presented them, it would have required that Jesus stoop down and use his influence in a cheap and mercenary way that would have made him a subject of Satan rather than the Son of God.

He was often criticized because he refused to look down. Throughout his ministry Jesus was criticized for his close association with the poor, needy and socially rejected of his time. He was constantly seen with women of ill repute, associating with Samaritans, and eating at the homes of publicans and sinners. Although he was called upon to shun such types, he refused to look down on them. He reminded any who dared to frown on his actions that it was only those who were sick that needed a doctor, not those who were well.

He was also criticized because he would not back down. Often he confronted the scribes and pharisees, challenging them to equal the displays of piety with inner purity. On one occasion he even had to get a rope and run money changers out of the temple. When he was surrounded by his critics on every hand, even then he would not back down from his beliefs.

Since in the course of his ministry, Jesus would not stoop down, look down or back down, those who ridiculed him while he was on the cross should have known that he would not come down from the cross.

Those who were critical of him were not the least bit interested in his mission. They were interest only in his defeat. They saw the nails, the blood and his agony on the cross as the perfect time for them to promote themselves in the wake of his demise.

The plan of salvation had been laid out from the beginning. He had agreed to it and had resisted every attempt by Satan to get him to stoop, bend or back off his pledge. If he had come down, then his coming to the Earth would have been futile and our chance for salvation would have been lost.

If he had come down from the cross every person living today would not have a chance to eternal life because John 3:16 reminds us that, “God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life.” His death on the cross made our salvation possible because his death atoned for our sins.

Each Believer Is Crucified With Christ

Today each believer is crucified with Christ daily. While we are not literally on a wooden cross, our lives are stretched out bare before a non-believing public that wants us to turn from our belief and faith. That’s why, Romans 6:6 says “Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin.” What if each of us as believers actually stepped down from our faith?

STOOP DOWN: The world often attempts to get believers to stoop down. We are tempted to turn stones into bread every time the possibility of personal profit turns a ministry into a financial opportunity. We are often asked to stoop down and become that which is beneath both our dignity and our calling in life. There are many that will stoop to any level to achieve fame, riches and success. There are no inhibitions, barriers or obstacles that obstruct their path.

But what if every believer stooped? What would happen if every person God gave a voice to praise him decided to put it in the secular market for profit? What if each person who is a believer decides that the temptation to make money or achieve power is too great and decides to come down from the cross?

LOOK DOWN. We are often tempted to chase lofty and high ideals while ignoring the embodiment of our ideals that surround us. How often we speak of helping the poor but yet frown upon the poor when we see them. The world has already considered the estate of the poor, the needy and the destitute. It wants believers to do the same.

But what if every believer looked down on the poor masses of this earth? What would happen if every believer turned a cold shoulder to the homeless, helpless, lonely and miserable? Suppose every person who is motivated by the love of God to respond to human need, simply stopped and began to assume a condescending attitude toward those in need? What would be the situation in the world?

BACK DOWN: Not only are believers, whose old lives are crucified with Christ, urged to abort their daily crucifixion by stooping down and looking down, believers are also challenged to back down from their beliefs. What we believe about God, morality and life in general is the defining principle of the Christian life. Yet there are times when every believer is called upon to back down from their beliefs, or at the very least to look the other way.

Out of fear of being called antisocial or different, many back down from their beliefs. There are many who are patronizing in their beliefs in that their benefactor dependent.

What if every believer backed down each time their religious belief or moral standard was challenged by their employers, co-workers or even friends.

Each time we either stoop down, look down or back down, we in effect come down from the cross.

What if each Christian lays down his cross for convenience?

What if each Christian lays down his cross to have a little fun, with the intention of picking it up later?

What if each Christian lays down his cross to make a little money?

What if each Christian lays down his cross to save his job?

He Didn't Come Down, He Came Up!

Finally we must consider that Jesus' critics wanted him to give them one last sign that he was the Son of God. They felt that if he could defy death by escaping the torture of the cross that it would be a sufficient sign that he was truly of divine origins.

Coming down from the cross would not be sufficient. Because Jesus would not come down from the cross there were those who felt he "could not" come down.

He would not come down from the cross because the real sign would not be his getting down but in his rising up!

In that same context, this is the true beauty of the Christian relationship with God. It is not that we will not have a cross to bear but that we will have a final triumph over that cross.

Our testimony is not that we are able to escape life's problems and difficulties, but that though we are knocked down and trampled upon by life's circumstance, we will rise again!

That's the meaning of Romans 6:4 "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in the newness of life."

We are crucified with him, but we are raised daily by the glory of the father to walk in the newness of life!

That's why every saint declares, "Stretch me out wide if you will, but my hand is in the winding chain!"

Talk about me if you will, but my feet walk steadily on the king's highway!

Abuse me if you will, but my mind will stay fixed on the Lord. That's why the song writer said, "I woke up this morning with my mind, staid on Jesus! I am walking and talking with my mind, staid on the Lord!"

The world may crucify us and call us everything but a child of God, but we will triumph!

We serve a God who is able to take the pain and agony of the heavy cross we bear and turn it into glorification

We serve a God who is able to take our:

HARD TIMES and turn them into good times; MISERIES and turn them into triumphs!

FAILURES and turn them into successes; WEAKNESSES and turn them into strengths!

STUMBLING BLOCKS and turn them into stepping stones; FEARS and turn them into confidence!

Every saint will be challenged by the world to put your cross down!

Can't you hear the world saying, don't let people talk about you, put your cross down, take off your religion and tell them a piece of your mind!

Somebody's been told, why don't you put your cross down, go out and have yourself some fun. Go to a few bars, discos and clubs, you only go through life once!

Somebody's been asked, why don't you put your cross down, make yourself some money. You can sell a little crack, sell hot pork chops, steal merchandise from your job, sell your food stamps!

But every saint asks the world another question, "Must Jesus bear the cross alone and all the world go free? No there's a cross for everyone and there's a cross for me!"

As Jesus hung out on the cross they talked about him and challenged him to come down!

He couldn't come down from that cross because he had already decided to die just to save me!

Even though they were laughing when they drove the nails in his hands the words of the song writer must have been in his mind, "Go ahead, drive the nails in my hand. Laugh at me if you please..but I'll rise again. Ain't no power on earth can keep me down!"

He did not come down from the cross, but he died out on Calvary!

He did not come down, but Early Sunday morning he got up from the grave with all power!

All power in his hands!

I Wonder
If Heaven Got a Ghetto!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 25, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14:2-3

Introduction

Have you ever wondered what heaven is like? Believers have heard the descriptions of heaven. We can visualize its beauty. In quiet moments we can see the New Jerusalem, with its streets of gold, pearly gates, huge towering walls and millions of inhabitants. We envision a place so beautiful that we cannot adequately describe or fathom its awesome nature. Song writers have captured our amazement in songs such as "How beautiful heaven must be" and "I'll just walk around heaven all day." Believers are confident that heaven is the homeland of saints.

What do you expect to find when you get to heaven? Will heaven be occupied only by Blacks? Or will there be people of all races? Will there be any Republicans in heaven? Believers are expected to be there, but will there be others who were not Christians but were popular entertainers, sports stars and rappers?

Most people have only faint ideas of what heaven is like. Those who live in the poverty and decay of modern society, commonly called "the ghetto" do not expect to find a ghetto when they get to heaven. The ghetto is associated with hunger, homelessness, drugs, inferiority, violence, crime and struggle. Most of those trapped in the ghetto are trying desperately to get out. They are trapped in a neighborhood, but the forces that turn them into something less than a child of God do not become a part of them. The ghetto engenders its own life style, mentality, rules, humor and religion. Only in the ghetto does a woman wear the title of a farm tool or a female dog with pride. Only in the ghetto does a man pride himself on being a "G" or a gangsta and receive praise for how low he can wear his pants on his behind. Many feel that they are hopelessly trapped and have given up on escaping. They have accepted the ghetto mentality as their own.

The late rapper 2Pac is the author of a popular song which falls in this category.

The song is entitled "I wonder if Heaven Got a ghetto." He points to police brutality, poverty and social apathy as reasons for selling drugs, murder and general lawlessness and saying, "If I die, I wonder do heaven, got a ghetto!" Since God knows about the hungry bellies, racism and troubles of the world, what's criminal behavior can't be judged by those outside of the situation. 2pac concludes, "Let the Lord judge the criminals If I die, I wonder if heaven got a ghetto. He expects God to consider their circumstance and allow the ungodly into heaven, even if they are condemned to spend eternity in a ghetto like environment.

Many have varied opinions of what to expect when they get to heaven. Some expect more than they will get. Consider the rich woman who was ushered into the heavenly city. There were mansions of varying sizes all over the New Jerusalem. Her guide brought her to a small, but comfortable mansion that sat at the bottom of a hill. Shocked, the rich woman said, "Do you suppose there has been a mistake? This mansion is so small!" She saw a giant mansion at the top of the hill which met her fancy. She asked, "Whose mansion is that?" The guide said, "That belongs to Beulah, your maid." The rich woman was taken aback. How is it that her maid received a larger mansion than hers? "After all she worked for me all of her life!" The guide said, "Well, you talked down to your weak servant all of her life. But when she got home, she talked "up" to an almighty God. What's sitting on that hill is the result of a life time of prayer, praise and righteous living, something money can't buy!"

As Christians, we don't know everything there is to know about heaven. What we do know is that it will be a place of the saints. Our Lord will be there and we plan to be there too!

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as Christ reassures the troubled hearts of his disciples by reminding them of the rewards of heaven.

The disciples were no doubt disturbed and troubled when they heard the news that Christ would soon be leaving them. They were not quite sure what that meant. Panic was beginning to spread among them.

Jesus knew that these men were afraid — afraid of what was coming. They were afraid of death, afraid that they, with him, were going to be executed by the Jews. They knew of the opposition which had developed against them in Jerusalem, the bitter hatred of the Pharisees, their determination to eliminate Jesus and all his disciples. They knew they were in danger, and so their hearts were deeply troubled as they gathered with him.

His words about leaving them added to their distress brought terror into their hearts. They were afraid that even though they might survive, might escape death, they would have to go on living without him, and that was unbearable to them. They could bear to die with him; they could not bear to live or die without him. So as he gathers with them he says these words to them, "Let not your hearts be troubled."

MANY PLACES TO LIVE: He reassures them by telling them that in my Father's house are many rooms." What do you think he means by "my Father's house?" This is the only time that phrase is employed in the New Testament. Therefore it is very difficult to say exactly what this means by trying to compare it with other passages —until you go to the Old Testament. There you see that some of the prophets clearly indicate that God dwells in the universe. The whole universe is the Father's house. God, speaking through the mouth of the prophet Isaiah, says, " Heaven is my throne and the earth is my footstool {Isa 66:1b}

The word for mansions in Greek literally means "abiding places" or "places to live." What Jesus says here then is, "In my Father's house are many abiding places." Version. It is, literally, "places to live." "In my Father's house are many places to live." So Jesus assures them that there is an abundance of places to live in God's house, plenty of them. Therefore, there is room in the Father's house.

PREPARING A PLACE: Jesus says, "I go to prepare a place for you." Why would he need to prepare a place for us if the world is already made? The fact is this world is doing what scientist call "winding down." Scientists call it the second law of thermodynamics, the law of entropy, the law of decay. This creation is running down, its energy is being transposed into a form in which it is no longer available. It is like a great clock, once wound up, which is gradually running down. And Paul suggests in Romansö8 that this process will be reversed one of these days, that the Lord Jesus, as Lord of the universe, will reverse this law of thermodynamics and change it, so that the universe will no longer be running down but will become a new heaven and a new earth, built on entirely different principles. Perhaps that is what Jesus has in mind when he says to the disciples, "I go to prepare a place for you."

Since Jesus is preparing a place for us to live there is no need for any of us to be overly concerned about where we will live. The places God prepares for his children to live will far exceed those of any ghettos or even the imagination of men.

We are reminded of the scriptural promise in 1 Corinthians 2:9 "But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

No Ghettos in Heaven

Today many African-American youth are being bombarded with a ghetto mentality, that if they are not careful could become so much a part of them that it will be inseparable.

GHETTO IS A PHYSICAL CONDITION: The first thought that comes to mind about Ghettos is a physical condition. Generally a ghetto is a condition in which there is poor housing, unkept environment, inadequate lighting and a very dense population. Sometimes these conditions are made worse by absentee slum lords who collect rent from their tenants but negligently maintain them. The landlord is more interested in the rent than insuring that his tenants have a safe, comfortable place to live.

GHETTO IS A STATE OF MIND: The ghetto is a state of mind as well. There are some language patterns and life style modes that can become a part of one's state of mind if he is not careful.

Economics dictate whether a person lives in a physical ghetto. Character dictates whether the ghetto lives in them. Poverty may determine the kind of house in which we live, but character decides how we live inside that house.

Unfortunately, many youth are letting the ghetto get into their heads. When the ghetto gets into your head you:

Lose self respect.. No self respecting woman will allow herself, even remotely to be referred to as a "ho" or a female dog. No self respecting man would refer to his mate or any other woman in a degrading way. That only happens when the ghetto gets inside your head. Once it is accepted in our heads our acceptance level has been lowered.

Yet despite your neighborhood, it is possible to live in a poor neighborhood without losing your self respect. Though others around you may lose their respect, Christian youth are challenged to keep their self respect in place.

Pursuit of Academics Declines. When the ghetto gets into your head, you begin to accept mediocrity. The quest for academic excellence declines and interest in school work diminishes. Simply "passing" is sufficient. In some cases, even failure is accepted as a badge of honor.

Even if we live in a poor neighborhood, we can still achieve, if we guard against letting the ghetto mentality of our neighborhood get into our heads. Poverty has been the "story of our lives" in the African-American community, but out of the squaller of abject poverty have come some of this country's greatest minds, because they did not let the ghetto get in their heads.

Youth must be extremely cautious not to let the fashions, modes of speech and mannerisms of their neighborhood become a part of their mentality. While it may be fashionable for a man to wear his pants below his behind, it is fashionable only in the ghetto. It may be "tight" to spit out four letter words to explain yourself, but it is only "tight" in the ghetto. It may be a point of pride to have a police record an inch thick before you are 17, but it is cool only in the ghetto.

IN THE WORLD BUT NOT OF IT: The Word of God addresses this idea of conformity by encouraging every believer, whether young or old, not to take part in any activities, ideas, fashions, methods of dress, speech or behavior that would detract from the Christian lifestyle. Paul writing to the Romans in Romans 12:2 said "And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God."

What's In Heaven

Finally brothers and sisters we must consider that Jesus has said that he is going to prepare a place for us. While he is preparing the place for us, it is our responsibility to prepare ourselves for the place.

The place he is preparing for us will have no physical ghettos. There will be no houses with leaking rooms, rats, roaches and crumbling walls.

The place he is preparing for us will have no dimly lighted and poorly maintained streets. I'm told that in that place the streets will be paved with gold. There will be no need for street lights for the entire city will be lit by the glory of the Lord.

The place he is preparing for us will no public hospitals with long lines and short treatments, because in the midst of the city will be a tree that will bear 12 manners of fruits, whose leaves will be good for the healing of the nations!

Jesus is gone to prepare a place for us but youth today need to be about the business of preparing themselves for the place.

I heard a popular rap song say "I'm Bout it!" But when it went through my theological filter it came out that every Christian youth needs to be "bout it!"

When it comes to giving up the bad and doing that which is good, I'm bout it!

When it comes to striving for success rather than accepting failure, I'm bout it!

When it comes to standing up for that which is right, and opposing wrong, I'm bout it!

When it comes to praising God for being so good, I'm bout it!

When it comes to lifting up holy hands in praise, I'm bout it!

When it comes to saying thank you Lord, for being so good to me, I'm bout it!

When it comes to telling the whole world about Jesus, I'm bout it!

When it comes to telling them that he died out on Calvary, but arose on the third day! I'm bout it!

Introduction

Did you know that our handwriting reveals a lot about us? Our handwriting is a window into the secret corridors of our personality, mind and soul. The way we form letters and put them on paper often tells more about us than our resume. Our resume' tells what we want people to know. Our handwriting reveals traits, patterns and feelings, characteristics that we may not want others to know but are nevertheless apparent.

Just as no two people have the same fingerprint, the same is true about handwriting. No two people have identical handwriting. Our fingerprints point to our identity. Our handwriting reveals our personality. A person's handwriting is his own private trade mark or seal which cannot be reproduced by any other individual. While a skilled artist can simulate your handwriting, it is impossible to capture the power and speed of your stroke, the firmness of your grip and the slope and curve of your letters in a way that survives the close inspection of a trained eye.

Our handwriting is a printout of our feelings and sensibilities. In the hands of trained professionals, the psychological code imbedded in our handwriting reveals general character traits that have proven meaningful and exact over the years. The patterns are unmistakable. Those who write words with large spaces between the words are usually described as persons who are confident but unable to form or maintain close relationships with people. Those who print with fancy letters rather than write them in cursive are said to be people who are very secure in themselves. However, the lack of curves and connectors suggests that they have difficulty taking orders or working as a part of a team. Sweeping capital letters suggests a bold personality, a touch of flair and a tendency to be different or stand out from the crowd. Those who capitalize letters in unusual places suggest persons who may defy tradition. Those whose letters slant to the left with a low T-bar may be insecure, with a touch of low self esteem.

Our signatures are the composites of all that is essential to our being, reflected in the letters that are fixed to a page or a document. In a greater sense, our signatures record our style and manner. Great artists leave their signatures on their paintings. Others draw graffiti on walls and sign their names. Even singers have "signature" songs. When we think of "His eye is on the Sparrow" we think of Ethel Waters. "How Great Thou" is the signature song of George Beverly Shea just as "I feel Good" is the signature song of James Brown. Your signature is your mark, in your handwriting, that is the pure essence of everything you leave the world!

Many have left their signatures on the canopies of life. It is their legacy to posterity. George Washington's mark was a free country. Abraham Lincoln's signature was a united country. Dwight Eisenhower's signature was a strong and powerful nature in battle. What is your signature in life? What reputation does your mark represent? What do the lines and strokes that compose your life's experience say about you?

As Christians, we strive to leave a mark in life that will be both memorable and meaningful. Yet, it is our Lord's signature, dipped in the blood of the cross, that guarantees us forgiveness and our salvation.

Exposition

This text focuses on John as he shows a picture of God giving a blessing to those who die in the Lord and ordering that it be written.

John was given direction to write an advance account of the activities of the last seven years of time. John wrote what he saw as it was revealed to him in the Book of Revelation.

Those that spend their lives in praise and service to God leave a work record that elicits the praise and reward of the savior. Thus, the Revelation's first three chapters focus on the seven churches of Asia Minor. God lets each of them know that he has observed their works. Some had developed a pattern or signature for being rich, hot, lukewarm or receptive to foreign ideas. In each case, God sent a message that those who overcame would receive a crown of righteousness.

During the last seven years, many will come to know the Lord for themselves and suffer persecution and death. A message was sent to them: God blesses those who die in the Lord, their works or their life's signature follows them.

Jesus Christ dictated the Book of Revelation to John. While it is not written in his handwriting, it is clearly the work of the Son of God. The promise bears his characteristic signature.

When Moses received the 10 commandments atop Mt. Sinai God wrote the commandments with his own finger. Exodus 31:18 says, "And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an end of communing with him upon mount Sinai, two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God."

The Book of Esther is unique in that it is a book about God, but never calls his name. Although his name is not called, the way that Esther rose to be queen and how she saved the people from destruction reflects the signature of God. His name is not called, but the faithful recognized that his signature was on their redemption.

Belshazzar hosted a banquet in which he used the dedicated ornaments of the temple. God wrote him a message on the wall in his own hand. It was a message of impending doom: MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN.

John 8:6 records an instance in which an adulterous woman, caught in the very act was brought to Christ for his condemnation. Here the only account of Christ writing anything with his own hand was given, for the text says: "and with his finger he wrote on the Ground." What he wrote was unknown but his response left his signature. He responded, "He that is without sin, let him cast the first stone."

Jeremiah 31:33 points to the place where God writes a message to every believer. "I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people." God leaves his signature in the hearts of every believer.

Thus when Jesus says those that die in the Lord will be blessed, believers are encouraged and have hope, because the promise bears the signature of Jesus Christ himself.

A Saint's Signature

What is a Saint's signature? What epitaph does the saint leave for the world to ponder? The progression of a Saint's spiritual development is similar to a child that learns to write. In the tender years of life a loving teacher takes a child's hand and guides it through the formation of every letter. Sometimes the child's hand is lost completely in the large, enveloping, hands of the teacher. Each time the child forgets to cross a "t" or dot an "I" the teacher carefully shows him how to do it properly. It is a slow painstaking process, but the child, with a good teacher, learns to write.

The same is true with the spiritual life of a saint. In our carnal life we wrote terribly. We missed a few strokes. Often the message we wrote was illegible to say the least and "shaky" at best. Our signature was sinful.

However, when a Saint began the Christian walk the process of learning how and what to write began all over again. The teacher was the Holy Spirit. It guided us, one stroke at a time, as we wrote our epitaph on the canopy of time.

If a person's handwriting gives insight into his personality, I would like to believe that a saint's life, like his handwriting gives an insight into his or her spirituality. Those who study the life signature of a saint might find that it:

LEANS TO THE RIGHT: The great mark of every saint is that in their Christian walk they have learned how to lean on the Lord. The abundance of life's trials have taught that there is strength in leaning on God. That's why the song writer would say he felt "safe and secure from all alarms, leaning on the everlasting arms." Study the life of a saint and you'll find that every letter of their life signature leans toward that which is right. It leans toward God. It is leaning on God that brings us through repeated sicknesses with abounding hope that God is able to overcome every obstacle. It is leaning on God that helps a saint endure the death of a son or a daughter and go on with life. That leaning is the sign of a life of dependence. The song writer said, "I've learned how to lean and depend on Jesus! I found out that if I trust him, he will provide!"

FILLED WITH CONNECTING CURVES: The saint's spiritual signature is filled with curves and connectors. A saint is marked by a life of connecting and bonding with others. Helping the poor and the need is a way of acknowledging the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. We connect with others when we are able to empathize and sympathize. We connect with others when we recognized that when someone is hungry, we should respond with food. When someone is sad, we should connect with comfort. When someone has fallen, we should connect with a readiness to lend a hand up. The life signature filled that connects suggest a life that has been filled with teaching, leading, serving and working to help others. There are some saint's whose life signature is filled with curves and curls because they live the words of the song, "If I can help somebody as I pass along, then my living shall not be in vain. ...if I can cheer somebody with a word or song, then my living shall not be in vain."

CROSSES "T'S" AND DOTS "I's": The life of a saint is marked by integrity. He or she wants to do that which is right in the sight of God. Righteous living is the mark of every Christian. On some occasions the cares of the world may cause a saint to ignore doing that which is right, but the Holy Spirit has a way of reminding us to go back and cross our "T's" and dot our "I's" as we remember to do "everything decently and in order." Look at the life signature of any saint and it will contain a life dedicated to striving for righteousness. It is righteousness.

BOLD CAPITALS: The life of Saint is also marked by periods of Boldness. Nearly every act we begin starts with a capital letter. We begin in confidence! We are sure that if God blesses our endeavor it can be accomplished. We are bold because the word of God teaches us to be bold. Hebrews 4:16 says, "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." When we have made mistakes, we boldly ask forgiveness. When we are sick, we boldly ask for healing! When we are confused, we boldly ask for direction! When we are weak, we boldly ask for strength!

God's Signature

Finally brothers and sisters, while it is good to know that every Saint has a spiritual signature, we should also remember that God also has a signature. The omnipotence, omnipresence and omniscience of God leave an indelible imprint in the lives of everything and everyone God touches. He leaves his signature.

He has a way of letting us know when he has acted in our lives, even though it may not be apparent to those who do not know him. Consider the mother who left her son with a baby sitter while she took care of her business. She left instructions for him to do his lessons and go to bed. When she returned she marched into his room and awakened him from his sleep. "I thought I told you, not to go in the kitchen or to watch television, but to go directly to bed." Yelled the mother, "You disobeyed me!" The boy was puzzled. He had made the baby sitter promise she wouldn't tell, how did their mother know? The mother answered "Nobody had to tell me. Look at this kitchen! The cabinet doors are open. There is sugar on the table. The refrigerator is not closed and the television is on the cartoon channel. I may not have seen you do it but this has your signature is written all over it!"

Brothers and sisters all we have to do is look around and we'll see God's signature in the life of every saint.

When a saint lives through hard times and difficulty and still manages to live a comfortable life despite it all, that's nothing but the signature of God!

When a saint overcomes bouts of sickness and rebounds time and time again, that's nothing but the signature of God!

When a saint looks boldly into the face of death and refuses to die before her time or take an early retirement, that's nothing but the signature of God!

When a saint can watch her life work unfold in front of her eyes in the person of God centered grand children and great grandchildren, that's nothing but the signature!

It's God's signature in a saint's life that affirms his promises every day!

When in our CONFUSION, we find peace, that is the signature of God!

When in our WEAKNESS, we find strength, that is the signature of God!

When in our DOUBTS, we find answers; that is the signature of God!

When in our LONELINESS, we find comfort, that is the signature of God!

When in our DESPAIR, we find hope, that is the signature of God!

When in our FRUSTRATION, we find encouragement, that is the signature of God!

Even when we are tossing on our bed of affliction crying out for mercy and relief and we are able to close our eyes in peace take our journey...that too is the signature of God!

God's signature whispers with every gust of wind!

God's signature tolls with every church bell that rings and robin that sings!

God's signature is not written in ink, but it is written with blood of the Cross!

On the cross Jesus, bled and died ... so hard that even the unbelievers could recognize his signature, because a soldier cried out "Surely, he must be the Son of God!"

God left his signature on an empty cross!

But God also left his signature on an empty tomb, because Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with...

All Power!

All Power in his hands!

On Tuesday January 27, 1998 Amy J. Reed was called home to rest from her labors. "Blessed are they that die in the Lord" ....Signature, Jesus Christ!

The Heritage of Those That Fear Thy Name

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 1, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "For thou, O God, hast heard my vows: thou hast given me the heritage of those that fear thy name." Psalm 61:5

Introduction

What if you were given the chance to trade your heritage, would you make the deal? Our heritage is the sum total of the possessions, qualities and traditions we have inherited from others. Each of us came into the world with nothing of our own. We have borrowed DNA from our parents. We sleep in homes prepared for us by someone other than ourselves. For many years we follow a ritual and tradition dictated by others. Our appearance bears the resemblance of a composite of persons older than ourselves and even our talents and intellect has trickled down from those ahead of us in our family line. While it is impossible to trade your heritage, because it involves altering the past, would you trade your heritage for a chance to satisfy the desires of the moment.

Esau was the oldest son of Isaac. He was the lawful heir to all of Isaac's properties and immense wealth. More than that, he was, by right of birth, the heir to God's promise to bless the family with prosperity and maturity. Esau thought little of the future of his family or the fact that he was the grandson of Abraham, whom God blessed immensely. One day he was hungry and offered to trade all that should have been important to him for a bowl of porridge. His stomach was filled at the moment, but he had traded away his heritage.

Today the African-American family is in danger of losing its traditional definition. By tradition, the African-American family is headed by a strong man who provides for and defends his home. He is supported by an equally strong woman who mothers her children and works at the same time. Together, they rear children in the fear of God and the respect of their fellowman. The family that fits that definition is becoming an "endangered species" among American families. Many have traded the family of their heritage for a bowl of porridge.

The adhesive that has kept the families of the world's people of African descent united has been a belief in God and adherence to strict codes of honor and conduct.

Whether Blacks in Africa called on God as Allah or whether their descendants in America call on him through his Son, Jesus Christ, the fact remains that from Africa to the American shores, belief in God and godly ways has been the glue that has kept our families strong and viable despite slavery, Jim Crow laws and racism.

Families become endangered because we have shifted from "super glue" which is faith in God, to "Scotch tape." Our families are steeped in the tradition of trusting in God, serving him, worshiping him and placing our hope in him. Our present dilemma today is the result of our willingness to substitute this important of our heritage for that which is more immediate. Family prayer, worship, study and participation in God centered activities has decreased tremendously. In retrospect, the strength of our families as has diminished proportionately.

As Christians, we know the source of our blessings over the years. We should strive to strengthen our families by reinforcing our belief in God by worshiping, studying, and serving God in ways similar to that of our forefathers.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he muses over the goodness of God.

David was in exile at the time of this text. His son Absalom had assembled an army to attack Jerusalem and dethrone him. Unwilling to go to battle against his son, David exiled himself to nearby Hebron. There he praised God for his goodness, while at the same time reflecting on the great inheritance that God had given him through his family.

The 61st Psalms is a Psalm of deliverance. It is one of praise and thanksgiving.

He gives God thanks for giving him the heritage of people who feared God. It is that heritage that taught him to pray, even when he was a boy. His family trusted God so much that even the young members of the family were bold. When he killed Goliath he was just a mere boy.

David had a heritage of praise. He sang God's praises and used the harp to set his praise to music.

He had a heritage of leadership and manliness. Like his older brothers and father before he could stand to defend his family and his beliefs.

When he gave God praise for his heritage, it was for that aspect of his heritage that kept him focused on God. He pledged to continue serving God and living for him daily, carrying out his vows and keeping his commitments.

If the 61st Psalm says anything, it underscores the importance of family heritage. David extolled its importance, even while his son trampled upon it with a vengeance. He maintained his head even though some members of his family were losing theirs.

There is a people that fear God's name and those people leave a peculiar heritage. It is faith that brings comfort to the soul and encourages renewed hope. Following the heritage of people of faith every believer can be secure under the protection of God's mercy and truth.

The duty of every believer, therefore, should be to praise God continually for his good works and the great inheritance he has given to us.

Appreciating Our Heritage

Many aspects of the African-American heritage are being lost by each succeeding generation of our people. It is essential therefore, that we as a people work to promote that which is unique to our families.

WE MUST VALUE OUR INHERITANCE: Since slavery the African-American family has worked hard to catch up with the rest of America. Immigrants and those of other nationalities had difficult times in America but did not have the tremendous disadvantage of slavery. As a result of generations of other nationality and immigrant family presence in America their families today enjoy wealth and security that has been passed to them by their forefathers. The African-American family, working hard to catch up after slavery ended, sought to acquire land as a way of leaving an inheritance to their children. They operated under the general rule that "as long as one has land one has the means to borrow and build a future." Some families spent entire life times accumulating properties to give to their children. For many generations, our families have appreciated that sacrifice and have added to their inheritance.

However, today there is a new mentality among African-Americans which has very little appreciation for their inheritance. As older members of each family pass on, many younger members quickly sell the land that is the family inheritance. At the turn of the century Blacks owned thousands of acres of prime real estate. However, beginning in the 1940's we began to sell our properties and distance ourselves from the land. It was not unusual for even small families to own 50 acres or more of land that was free and clear of debt. Today, very few African-American families can claim land ownership beyond their homestead.

We are encouraged to value the inheritance that is left to us by our forefathers and resist the temptation to sell our inheritance so easily, for bowls of porridge that so quickly disappear.

WE MUST APPRECIATE THE VALUE OF OUR FAMILY NAME: If there has been anything important in the history of the African-American family, it is the importance of our family name. Our fore parents have endured great suffering and pain to pass on to their children a family name that is a source of pride and honor. Even today, many young members of a family are enjoying the fruits of the fore parents labor as they find certain opportunities being made available to them because of their family name. In every community there are still merchants who disregard credit applications and other traditional means of business documentation and extend credit to certain people based on the reputation of their family name alone.

Families have reputations. The family reputation follows every generation. It is incumbent upon every generation to build upon good family names and to improve family reputations that have been scarred. Proverbs 22:1 reminds us that " A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold." That is why many older members of African-American families refuse to acquire any debt or extended obligations. They want to leave their families an unobligated family name.

WE MUST ASSUME OUR ROLE IN FAMILY SUPPORT: The tradition of the African-American family is one of self help. The education of family members was a family objective. Each member worked to help others complete their education. That help came from the household or extended family. Dealing with extended sicknesses became a matter of family concern as all members of the family, far and near took their turns helping to care for members with long term illnesses. If a family became dysfunctional for some reason, the children of that family would be picked up by one or more family members and became the wards of their uncles and aunts, cousins and grandmothers until they became of age.

Today there is an increasing number of children in foster care, wards of the state, because family members do not share the responsibility of raising the children of a dysfunctional relative. Even fewer family members today feel an obligation to share in the expense of caring for elderly members of the family and helping family members who are distress.

Supporting each other is part of the family heritage of the African-American community.

WE MUST EMBELLISH THE FAMILY GIFTS: In Old Testament times each family was assigned tasks and roles. There were families of singers. Families of doorkeepers. Families of priests, etc. Today, families that know and respect God have been endowed with certain gifts of the spirit that are unique to entire families. 1 Corinthians 12 list several categories of gifts. The histories of many families reflect a heritage that surrounds one or two of the gifts. There are families of teachers. There are families of healers that include everything from doctors, nurses and midwives to mothers who have master the art of herbal cures. There are families of artists, musicians and creators. There are families of advisors, counselors, lawyers and others who exercise the gift of discerning spirits.

Family members should seek to learn the history of their family, beyond just the mere names of your great grandparents but to find out as much as you can about their gift. The gift that runs in your family is a part of your inheritance. You should cherish it. You should perfect it! You should use it for the furtherance of God's kingdom!

A Heritage of Faith in God

Finally, we must consider that the African-American family has a heritage of rich, emotional and heart felt expression of our faith in God. Our fathers brought their families to church and served as the spiritual leaders of their homes. Fathers today, must not neglect their obligation, not only to provide for their households materially, but to lead their families in spiritual growth. It is a part of the African-American heritage for strong fathers to lead their families in faith.

Through nearly two centuries of slavery, our families maintained a faith in God.

In our weary years, we have wallowed in the spit of American racism, sustained only by the faith that God would lift us from the bottom rail and bring us to the top.

When we were not allowed to talk to God about the problems our lives, entire families would steal away to brush arbors and bow as grandpa or grandma put their heads under tubs to muffle their voices and cried, "Lord, I'm out here on your word!"

The Newage mentality that faith in oneself rather than faith in God is a long way from our heritage. Let's get modern, but don't get that modern!

When somebody says we should stop singing the Dr. Watts Hymns, the preacher should stop whooping, the deacons should stop moaning and choir should stop rocking and we should show some intelligence; we should be intelligent, but not so intelligent that we forget the bridge that brought us over!

We are a people whose heritage reflects that we have been sustained by an unfaultering trust in God.

It doesn't matter what generation you are from, good things happen when you trust in the Lord. When you trust in the Lord, a family that is:

WEAKENED by internal problems, can find renewed strength!

TROUBLED by disturbing questions, can find its answers!

FRUSTRATED by its failure to achieve goals, can find renewed hope!

BURDENED by the increasing problems of life, can find help in the time of need!

When Israel moved across the Jordan into the promised land there were some who wanted to abandon the God that brought them out of the wilderness. I can see Joshua, standing on the side of a mountain challenging all of those that would be faithful to God to come forward. I hear him declare "but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord!"

Brothers and Sisters, stay on the Lord's side!

In good times and bad times, stay on the Lord's side!

Through all of your risings and fallings, stay on the Lord's side!

Get you a good education, but never get so educated that when the storms of life begin to rage that you feel embarrassed to cry out, "Father I stretch my hand to thee, no other help I know. If thou withdraw thyself from me, whither shall I go!"

Tell your children about the Love of God!

Tell them about Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Tell them about Jesus, who arose from the grave!

Tell them about Jesus, who is alive today!

I don't know about you, but as for me and my house...

We will serve the Lord!

The Scarlet Cord

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

February 8, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "Behold, when we come into the land, thou shalt bind this line of scarlet thread in the window which thou didst let us down by: and thou shalt bring thy father, and thy mother, and thy brethren, and all thy father's household, home unto thee." Joshua 2:18

Introduction

What has been the role of African-American women in the life of our community? The history of our struggle for freedom and independence has been built, for the most part, on the courage and strength of the Black woman. No page in our history can adequately be related without acknowledging that the faith, fortitude and conviction of the women of our community has been a primary factor in the survival of our race.

Through our three hundred year sojourn in North America, we have been sustained by our women as our men became the targets of oppression. When our men were socially castrated and reduced to mere shells of their former greatness, it was our women that rose to hold us together, doing whatever had to be done to survive.

Black women, like Sojourner Truth and Harriet Tubman are the icons. But there were literally millions of others that displayed the same strength of character and determination to be free, by any means necessary.

When Black men were being lynched from trees all across the South, our women took the lead in fighting our cause. Ida B. Wells began a crusade the pushed others to take action. Her vigorous activism and careful documentation of lynchings in America stirred the souls of a nation to finally make lynchings illegal. Singer Billye Holliday sang "Strange Fruit" as she touched the hearts of a race decrying lynching.

As unemployment for Black men soared and racial discrimination intensified, our women took to the kitchens and factories of America and literally on their hands and knees kept their families alive. Even when the struggle for our rights was being waged in courtrooms, legislative halls and on the streets, our women provided the backbone to the struggle.

Today, the Black man is rising. His presence is being seen and felt in corporate board rooms, in high levels of government. While there are many that are still suffering and struggling, millions of Black men have risen to a level of living that has far exceeded expectations. Now that the Black man is arriving, he is compelled not to forget the undeniable fact that his survival and looming success over the past 300 years has been sustained by the strength of the Black woman.

As Christians, we know God works through people to improve conditions. He uses circumstances, events and the hands of others to achieve his will. Whatever level of success we have as a people today, we owe to God's grace and to those he inspired and strengthened to help us make it through the night.

Exposition

This text focuses on a woman named Rahab as she offered help to Israeli spies with hopes of being helped in return.

God gave the Hebrews the land of Canaan, but the gift would not come without a fight. When the Hebrews were encamped at Shittim, Joshua, as a final preparation, sent two men to "spy the land." Five days later they returned and reported what they saw and what had happened to them.. They had been exposed to danger in Jericho, and had been saved by the assistance of Rahab the harlot, to whose house they had gone for protection. When the city of Jericho fell (6:17-25), Rahab and her whole family were preserved according to the promise of the spies, and were incorporated among the Jewish people. She afterwards became the wife of Salmon, a prince of the tribe of Judah (Ruth 4:21; 1 Chr. 2:11; Matt. 1:5). "Rahab's being asked to bring out the spies to the soldiers (Josh. 2:3) sent for them, is in strict keeping with Eastern manners, which would not permit any man to enter a woman's house without her permission. The fact of her covering the spies with bundles of flax which lay on her house-roof (2:6) is an 'undesigned coincidence' which strictly corroborates the narrative.

Rahab had heard of the miracles the Lord wrought for Israel. She believed that his promises would certainly be fulfilled, and his threatenings would take effect; and that there was no way of escape but by submitting to him, and joining with his people. The conduct of Rahab proved that she had the real principle of divine faith. Observe the promises the spies made to her. Those who will be conscientious in keeping promises, are cautious in making them. The spies make needful conditions. The scarlet cord, like the blood upon the door post at the Passover, recalls the sinner's security under the atoning blood of Christ; and that we are to flee thereto for refuge from the wrath of a justly offended God.

The same cord Rahab used for the saving of these Israelites, was to be used for her own safety.

The cord in the window represented a life line of hope.

The cord in the window represented a way to escape almost sudden death. It represented the golden opportunity to live life anew.

For the spies, it meant escaping out of the city.

For Rahab, it meant starting a new life.

The cord was a reminder to the spies that they had received help, but once in a position of strength they had an obligation to help others in the same way.

The cord in the window

The Black woman has served the same purpose for our community as Rahab did the spies. She has let down the scarlet cord to help the rest of us escape. Thanks to her sacrifices our community is growing, despite its obvious crippling circumstances.

The Black woman is presently under attack. Those who recognize the scarlet cord should come to her defense.

SHE IS THE VICTIM OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE. Increasingly, the Black woman is becoming the victim of domestic violence. Hundreds of thousands of Black women are treated each year for beatings, burnings and sexual assaults. The community must come to her defense because too often the Black woman is convicted by her poverty and is treated as a perpetrator rather than a victim. Black women still face the stereotype that if a Black woman who lives in a poor neighborhood is raped, her poverty alone suggests low morals. Statistics and media tell us that rape is read in a way that devalues Black women and wholly erases other women of color.

A recent study in Dallas revealed that low conviction rate of men accused of raping Black women is based on-going sexual stereotypes about Black women. As recently as 1989, jurors acquitted a defendant of the rape of a 12-year-old African American stating that "a girl that age from that neighborhood probably wasn't a virgin anyway."

We must defend her against domestic violence. We must defend her against the stereotypes, poverty does not mean low morals.

WE MUST BUILD HER STRENGTH BY SURROUNDING HER WITH A STRONG FAMILY. The family must not be allowed to disintegrate at the point in time in which she is now able to realize her dreams. When she was a slave to the family and worked hard to keep it going, with no dreams of her own, she gave up everything to keep the family strong. Now that she has a chance to finally realize some of her dreams, the family should not abandon her.

There are some that believe the Black family should be restructured. Eleanor Holmes Norton in her lengthy treatise called "Sadie and Maude" calls on women to restructure the family on the assumption that men will never regain their place of strength in the family again. She calls on women to shape a new family structure not make a paper mache' version of what existed in the past. Writing off men places Black women in the window without a scarlet cord. Those who know her predicament should respond as quick as they can to help her.

STRENGTHEN THE ABILITY TO BE A WOMAN. To strengthen the Black woman's ability to become self sufficient the rest of the community should take note of her needs. These were boldly expressed during the 1997 "Million Woman March:" Some of these included:

- The further development of Black Women, who are or who wish to become professionals, entrepreneurs, and/or politicians.

-The further development of mechanisms that will assist Black Women who are "in transitional" experiences, including divorce, single parenting, widowhood

-The formation of Rites of Passage centers and academic programs to help young Black women know the meaning of finer Black womanhood.

-Develop programs that will promote a better family environment with models of respect for youth

-Promotion of programs that will help women dealing with the problem elder care.

-Promote a program of home economy and professional excellence that prepares women for both their roles as parents and workforce players.

These areas represent the scarlet cord that is a plea for help and assistance.These areas represent the scarlet cord that cries out as a reminder to everyone that has benefitted from her sacrifice thus far..."help me as I have helped you!"

The Scarlet Cord Saves

While the scarlet cord helped some to escape and reminds others of what has been done, it also points to a faith that believes that in times of trouble there is hope.

Rahab knew troubling days were approaching. She could sense that the enemy was all around her, she sat quietly in her room and, gathered her family in one place and dangled the scarlet cord!

Today, every woman dangles a scarlet cord. It is not dangling out of a window, but it dangles boldly from her heart.

Not only are women dangling the cord, but every believer is dangling the same cord, looking for help and salvation in turbulent times.

These are difficult and troublesome times.

By faith we have let down the cord of God's compassion and helped the poor and the needy!

By faith we have let down the cord of God's love and opened our doors to the hungry and homeless!

By faith, we have stood in defense of the weak and insecure and dangle the cord.

Now we sing the words of the old spiritual, "Not my sister, not my brother, but it's me o' Lord, standing in the need of prayer."

When the forces of destruction are all around you, call on Jesus and dangle the cord!

When your money runs low, call on Jesus and dangle the cord!

When your health begins to fail, call on Jesus and dangle the cord!

When misfortune surrounds you on every side, call on Jesus and dangle the cord!

That's why the song writer said "Jesus is on the mainline, tell him what you want. If you're sick and you want to get well, call him up and tell him what you want!"

Call him up! He'll answer your prayer!

Dangle the cord, it has been dipped in the blood of the cross!

On the cross, he died for our sins! On the cross, he paved the way to eternity!

But early Sunday morning, he arose with all power in his hands!

Whatever you need....dangle the cord!

Pleasing Him Who Called Thee To Be A Soldier

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 13, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier. And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully. 2 Timothy 2:3-6

Introduction

How can we please God with our life's work? How can we be sure that the way we live our lives is pleasing to the one who commissioned us into his service? As every saint reflects upon life, one of the most satisfying feelings experienced is to know that the time, talent and resources that have been poured into what we believe is an honorable service, is truly acceptable and pleasing to him that called us into his service. Nothing could be worse than to live our entire lives, only to learn that we were driving the right way, but on the wrong street.

The telltale mark of every believer is his motivation for his service to God. Consider the ancient king who wanted more men enlisted into his army. He sent out word that a contest would be held to determine those best fit to serve in the king's elite guard. Fifty men answered the appeal. Most considered serving in the king's guard as a chance to advance themselves. The king's guard had fine living quarters, daily food supplies, money in their pockets and glory. Each worked to train themselves for what they thought would be the test of their worthiness. They threw spears, practiced hand to hand combat and discipline themselves. When they entered the courtyard, the king brought all fifty of them into his kitchens and complained about the dullness of his silver goblets, plates, knives and forks. Suddenly, the king turned and asked his 50 competitors if they would help shine his silverware. All 50 agreed. As the day wore on the men began to grumble. "We came to train for the royal guard, not to be silver polishers." At the end of the day the men were ushered out of the palace gate, but only 49 men left. The next morning they returned and the guard noticed that one was missing. The guard soon found the 50th competitor all soiled and fatigued. He had spent the entire night shining all of the king's silverware. The King announced that only one of the 50 competitor's was worthy to be in the royal guard. He kept the 50th competitor. Answering the questions of the 49 he said, "Your test was not in your physical strength or power on the battlefield, but in your commitment to the king. The 50th competitor had one thing none of you possessed. He was willing to please the king!

The difference between the life work of a nonbelieiver and that of a saint is that the none believer serves for personal glory, profit and fame while the saint does his service without thought of personal gain. He does it to please the King!

Saints who spend their lives helping others and serving in the kingdom of God are soldiers in the army of God. They volunteered for the service, with the full knowledge that being in God's army requires sacrificial service that may not draw the accolades of society. They knew it could mean being unpopular. It could even be dangerous! Like good soldiers, every saint stands ready to defend the faith regardless of the cost.

As Christians, we rejoice in our commitment to the king. It is not about money, fame or fortune. Our life's quest is to live in such a way that when we are finally discharged, we can hear the king say, "Well done!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he gives advice to Timothy to be strong in the graces that God has given him.

Paul, in the last days of his life, wrote this letter to young Timothy as a way of warning him about the difficulty of the life that was in store for him. Constantly he warned Timothy to study, discipline himself in the word and to be on guard against the wiles of the devil.

In this passage Paul uses three similitudes to demonstrate to Timothy how his life work can please God. He referred to the commitment of a soldier in verses three and four, the discipline of an athlete in verse five and the persistence of a farmer in verse six.

SOLDIER: Every believer pleases God if he enters service with the commitment of a soldier. This was a striking comparison for Paul because the Roman Soldier was selected for the legion's partially on his commitment to Rome and the Emperor. Soldiers who were committed fought harder, complained less and endured more than all others. They stood head and shoulders above the rest because their commitment was based upon a love for God and country and not personal glory.

To be a good soldier, Paul said young Timothy should be prepared to "endure hardness."(v3) with a sense of commitment and loyalty. Away from the families for months at a time, walking hundreds of miles to battle grounds and carrying over 60 pounds of gear as they marched, required a great amount of strength.

It also required a sense of commitment. In Paul's mind, commitment meant having a singleness of purpose. One goal, one mark, one prize is all that was before him, all others were secondary. He often rebuked those with multiple objectives as "double-minded." He described those who reached for their heavenly goal while pursuing earthly goals as well, entangled themselves in a web of contradictions. Secular pursuits were deemed proper and necessary, but they were not perceived as the goal of a saint, which is to live to please God.

ATHLETE: Paul's reference to "masteries" and being "crowned" in verse five refers to the athletes in the Olympic games. They were given wreaths or crowns when they won the victory for their province or nation. Athletes were noted for their tremendous discipline. "If anyone strives for masteries," he says, "he is not crowned, except he strives lawfully." What is meant by "lawfully?" It is not enough that he enters into the service, that he is anointed, and even engages, unless he complies with all the laws of the exercise, with respect to diet, to temperance and sobriety, and all the rules of the wrestling school, unless, in short, he goes through all that is befitting for a wrestler, he is not crowned. And observe the wisdom of Paul. He mentions wrestlers and soldiers, the one to prepare him for slaughter and blood, the other with reference to endurance, that he might bear everything with fortitude, and be ever in exercise.

HUSBANDMAN: The husbandman of verse six refers to the very act of planting seeds and teaching others. The husbandman was one who planted. Paul notes that those who please God are those who plant and enjoy that which is planted themselves. Paul himself was a master teacher. He not only taught, but he enjoyed what he was teaching about and believed in it himself. Those who teach what they know about life please God. Yet the greater blessing is in the teacher who believes in and lives by the very tenants being proposed for others.

Pleasing God in Paul's sight involved commitment, discipline and a willingness to teach others the wealth of your personal experience and knowledge. When these three, combined with a knowledge of holiness and righteous living, work together they please God.

Pleasing God is a matter of refusing to entangle one's self with the world.

Pleasing God is a matter of training ourselves in sobriety, obedience and faithfulness.

To Please God

Using Paul's instruction to Timothy as a guide, every Saint that strives to please God must enter into his service in the same three ways.

COMMITMENT OF A SOLDIER: The Soldier serves to please the king. A Christian soldier serves to please God. A soldier who assumes a post in the Christian army does so with commitment. Those who accept assignments in various stations of duty in the church must do so with the same level of commitment. A Sunday School teacher assumes that role with utmost dedication and commitment. A committed teacher is loyal to God. The identity of the Sunday School Superintendent or the pastor does not matter. That commitment extends beyond mere personalities. An usher, choir member, or auxiliary worker that enters the service without commitment will not make a good soldier in God's army. That's why Paul warned Timothy to "harden" himself for service. Those who are hardened are willing to do whatever is necessary to please the Lord. Rainy days, cold days and frustrating times are those that try our commitment. Times of turmoil and confusion, strain our patience and tax our endurance. These are the times that a good soldier's training pays off. Some go AWOL (Absent Without Leave). Some operate so poorly in the army that they are dishonorably discharged, which is the worse stigma that can be attached to man's record. It follows him wherever he goes. The good soldier is well trained, committed to the cause, follows leadership and carries out the orders of his commander and chief! Thus Paul uses this similitude to every believer; to be a good soldier for Jesus Christ.

DISCIPLINE OF AN ATHLETE: An athlete is the epitome of discipline. With respect to temperance, sobriety and attitude, athletes stand tall as Paul's second similitude of what it takes to please God. Any man or woman that enters the service of our Lord pleases him when they display self control, sober thinking and a positive attitude. Self control does not come without practice. Sober thinking is not hereditary. Positive attitudes are not accidents of birth. All of these are learned attributes, developed by grueling hours of practice, fueled by determination. A disciplined spirit is in control. When others are losing their heads in a wave of emotion, the disciplined man is able to sit quietly and respond appropriately. The disciplined mind is clear thinking and sober. It weighs ideas and considers alternatives and outcomes. The disciplined spirit is always positive because it knows that no matter what happens in life, Romans 8:28 says "...all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Thus, a saint who wants to please God must lead a disciplined, temperate life. He or she must be sober thinking and serious minded, pursuing the work of faith with gravity.

TEACHER OF TRUTHS, PLANTER OF SEEDS: Those who please God must be apt to teach. It is expected that every saint pass on to others the truths they have learned in the Christian life. Paul made it clear that the planter must first be a "partaker of the fruits" himself. That is the teacher lives by the precepts that he teaches to others and follows his own advice. Life's lessons are sometimes learned at the knee of a parent. Most often they are learned in the school of "hard knocks." Spiritual lessons are learned from long walks through the Valley of Baca, quiet evenings beside the still water, and lonely trips through the valley of the shadow of death. We learn the importance of life when we have been on the battlefield and seen the charred bodies of comrades and the tears of weeping widows. We learn the importance of caring for others when we have seen so much pain. "Love" becomes more than just a lesson to teach out of a book. Love becomes an "action" word that prompts the teacher to teach by precept and example. The good teacher motivates, inspires and sometimes angers his students. He plants seeds, like a good husbandman, to promote the growth of the kingdom.

God is pleased with a teacher that teaches his students to love in practice rather than in words.

God is pleased with a teacher that teaches that each person is important regardless of their station in life

God is pleased with a teacher that is bold enough to declare the truth, even if it is unpopular.

God is even more pleased when the precepts the teacher teaches are pages drawn from his own life experiences.

When He is Crowned

Finally we must consider verse five. Here Paul notes that no one who is calling himself a saint should expect to receive a crown unless he has lived by the book.

Through three different similitudes, Timothy was given the formula for pleasing God. Paul answered the question, before Timothy asked.

How do you please God? Enter into his service with a sense of divine commitment. It is a commitment that is not affected by adverse circumstance, but is tempered in determination.

Maybe it was the Christian soldier's commitment that the song writer had in mind when he said, "I'm on the battlefield for my Lord. And I promised him that I would serve him till I die, I'm on the battle field for my Lord."

How do you please God? Enter into his service with a made up mind!

It is a made up mind that prompts a saint, fresh from his sick bed to come inside of Zion's walls one more time!

It is a made up mind that inspires a love flame that can warm a marriage for nearly 50 years.

It is a made up mind that can drive a weary soul to work his fingers to the bone to buy trumpets, pay for piano lessons and put three children through school!

That's the kind of determination that the song writer had in mind when he said "I'm determined to follow Jesus, yes I am. Through hard trials, tribulations, persecutions, I am determined.."

How do you please God? You must know the commander and chief! In every federal building and military post, there is a picture of the President of the United States, he is the commander and chief of every soldier! Posted on the doorpost of every Christian soldier's heart is an indelible imprint of our commander in chief. Every Christian soldier knows the Lord! If you want to please the Lord, you must know God for yourself!

How do you please God? You must teach and testify every time you get a chance!

Tell them about Jesus! Tell them how he died!

Tell them how he was buried in a borrowed tomb!

Tell them how he arose...Early Sunday morning with all power in his hands!

Power to enlist soldiers!Power to discharge soldiers!

Power to promote good soldiers to higher rank!

All power...in his hands!

On Sunday February 8, 1998, Willie McClinton was honorably discharged from the Christian service. He was a great teacher, well disciplined and sober thinking. His service pleased him who called him to be a soldier!

Men In Black

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 15, 1998

SCRIPTURE:We gat our bread with the peril of our lives because of the sword of the wilderness.Our skin was black like an oven because of the terrible famine. Lam 5:9-10;Turn thou us unto thee, O LORD, and we shall be turned; renew our days as of old. Lamentations 5:21

Introduction

Are Black men a defeated gender? Is it time to write the epitaph of the African American male? There are some that believe that the Black man has finally been defeated. The nay sayers of society stand at the grave side of African-American men and sprinkle statistics on their caskets as they bow to what they believe is the inevitable power of the oppressor over the oppressed.

Despite the ongoing myth that the Black man is defeated, there are tell tale signs that he is indeed live and well. Just when we were thinking that there were no men left we were jolted into reality a while back when one million Black men converged on Washington. Suddenly we have started seeing reports that more Black men are working than any time in our past. Black men are making more money than we have in our history. Generally, despite all of our problems, we are really doing much better than public opinion says we are. The sudden reminders serve as a wake up call. We are reminded that the "reports of our demise have been greatly exaggerated."

This society has played a mind game with African-American men. Mind games are tools for control. A baby elephant that travels with the circus is often tied with a chain to a cement pole in the ground. No matter how hard the elephant tries, it cannot succeed in uprooting the pole. Finally the baby elephant stops trying. As the years pass, the elephant becomes larger and stronger. In fact it is so strong that it can push down trees and ram its way through walls at will. Yet in nearly every circus the mammoth sized elephant can be tied to the back of a tent with a rope not much larger than a string. Why? Because the elephant has grown to an enormous size and power, his mind is still tied to that cement pole.

In a similar sense, that is the plight of African-American men today. We do not realize the full force of our presence because our minds are still tied to times when we were less powerful than we are today.

As Christians, we know that all things are possible. We are not dissuaded by any myths that limit our potential. With God as our guide we know that we can achieve greatness in the eye sight of God and man. We don't waste our time lamenting our condition, but planning our victory, for we know that in the end, Ethiopia shall stretch her wings again!

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Jeremiah as he mourns the fall of Israel and expresses hope that it will once again be restored to its former greatness.

Lamentations consists of five separate chapters or poems. In chapter 1 the prophet dwells on the manifold miseries oppressed by which the city sits as a solitary widow weeping sorely. In chapter 2 these miseries are described in connection with the national sins that had caused them. Chapter 3 speaks of hope for the people of God. The chastisement would only be for their good; a better day would dawn for them. Chapter 4 laments the ruin and desolation that had come upon the city and temple, but traces it only to the people's sins. Chapter 5 is a prayer and an expectation that Zion's reproach will be taken away in the repentance and recovery of the people.

According to tradition, Jeremiah retired after the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar to a cavern outside the Damascus gate, where he wrote this book. It is filled with mournings over the loss of power, prestige and national sovereignty by the people. They had been carried off to a foreign land. They were treated as second class citizens. They were forced to work for low wages. Their supply of food and water was scarce. They felt even worse because their men were unable to defend or provide for their families. They became totally dependent upon the government for their sustenance.

Their experience was like famine. It made them black on the outside, but even worse, they were black inside, defeated, destroyed and without hope.

Verse by verse Lamentations 5 listed off the details of Israel's Black experience.

Inheritance lost (v2) In exile in Babylon, the people were estranged from their native land and distant from their mother country.

Strength of the men destroyed. (v3) Their leaders and men had been successfully destroyed with respect to their roles as champions of their families and the nation. The men in their families were not dead, but for all practical purposes they could have been. Their lack of initiative left them "as" orphans and widows.

Lost the ability to provide for themselves. (v4) The people were no longer independent and self sufficient. They had become totally dependent upon the government of Babylon for even the wood for their fire places and water to drink.

Constant persecution. (v5). They felt that the foot of their oppressor was on their neck. They complained of persistent hard work without profit and little time to rest.

Sustained by handouts. (v6) They were reduced to asking for handouts from every source possible even former adversaries such as the Egyptians and the Assyrians.

Multiple Generations suffer (v7) Israel fell into hard times because of the sins and misdeeds of their grandfathers. They complained of the unfairness that a new generation should still suffer for the misdeeds of others.

Servants rule (v8) Even persons that would have normally been their servants by reason of age or experience have authority over them. The situation exists with no leadership appearing anywhere to change the situation.

Hard times made them black. (v9) The bleakness of the experience made it difficult for them to survive. Everything they did, including earning a living became a daily challenge and struggle. Each day they faced danger of being persecuted, humiliated or destroyed. They lived in peril daily. They felt bad. They felt destroyed and helpless as if they lived under a black cloud of helplessness.

Lost Glory. (v16).They lamented that they had lost the glory of their forefathers. They no longer could boast the strength of character and accomplishment that was unique to them as a people. They too had sinned.

Return to God. (v20). Collectively they concluded that if they returned to God their condition could be turned and they would once again enjoy their great heritage of strength and valor.

Unwarranted Lament

Israel lamented, but it possessed the same keys for deliverance as their forefathers but never used them. The same is true today.

Despite overwhelming odds the men of our history made great accomplishments by resisting every attempt to reduce their willingness to achieve. Many attempts were made, but for the most part, our men have shown an amazing ability to overcome adversity and stand strong. The most successful tool that has been used against us however, has been the "mind game."

The mind game is psychological. It is a tool that alters your self concept and perception. The mind game is so destructive that it can keep an entire race in subjugation with little or no effort.

Historically, attempts have been made to reduce our sense of self worth by teaching us that the only thing good that could have possibly come out of Africa is grass skirts and witch doctors. But in our own circles we defeated the myths through oral histories that told of the great African kings that built pyramids both in central Africa and in Egypt. We kept reminding ourselves of our art, ability to organize, govern and manage ourselves. We would not allow our enemies to reduce our sense of self worth.

We were taught that is was destined for us to be slaves, but we defied the false teaching. Generally we were taught that it was God's will that we should be slaves. They pointed to Noah's three sons, Ham, Shem and Japheth, noting that God cursed the descendants of Ham to be slaves forever. They referred to Genesis 9:25 "And he said, Cursed be Canaan; a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren." They attributed the words to God instead of Noah and told us we were destined to be second class forever. We resisted the mind game, even in our enslavement. We couldn't read but we heard encouraging words from those who engineered of the underground railroad, that Christianity did not support the enslavement of any person that all men are equal in the sight of God, in fact all men are brothers. In secret meetings, we resisted the mind game.

The African-American man has always been Black but he has resisted draping himself in the self defying myths designed to defeat him. Thus, we are Black men but not men in black.

Today the myth that is being perpetuated is that there are no Black men. It's another mind game that is being played on a new generation. It is even more dangerous however, because of the availability of the mass media to spread the message fast. Through music, literature, movies and videos the myth is being perpetuated in the Black community that a Black man is worthless. The phrase, "A black man ain't nothing" is repeated more times in our circles than it should be. Even some of our women have bought into the myth by teaching their children to say derogatory things about their fathers, instead of holding up his finer qualities for them to see, even in his absence. Despite the fact that in every community there are thousands of working Black men who are loyal to their wives, pay their bills and taxes and obey the law, many still perpetuate the myth that there are no Black men. Obviously our men are endangered. There are growing influences that are attempting to strip them of their place in the family, role in the community and boot them from the leadership circles of every community. There is no doubt that our men are under attack, but we do exist in large numbers. It is a myth to believe that our families don't need a man. The family may survive without one, but survival and a quality experience are not one in the same.

In every community the Black men of our history worked hard to insure that each new generation of Black men was strong. Masonic groups, fraternal organizations, civic and church groups organized a net work of activities to mentor the boys, show them the way and to give them hope. Churches organized Jr. Laymen, shepherd boys, Ambassadors and scouting. Community groups organized a plethora male oriented programs, all designed to help fight the myth and keep hope alive. Today, we must not lose the key that was successful for the men of our history. We must not become so busy that we neglect the importance of preparing the next generation of men to stand guard. If we do, we will wake up one day lamenting the devastation of our situation rather than rejoicing at our accomplishments.

We are Black men, but we are not men wallowing in the blackness of defeating self talk and crippling myths.

We Hold The Keys

The men of Lamentations lost sight of the one element that helped their grandfathers and great grandfathers succeed despite overwhelming odds. They had a sustained faith in God. It was that faith that helped them, despite the odds.

When they spent 400 years in slavery and walked out of Egypt as free men, it was not by their own power, but the power of an almighty God.

When they wandered in the wilderness for 40 years without crops to harvest or wells to fill their cisterns, when they were fed bread from heaven and quail meat every day, it was not by their own power but the power of an almighty God.

When they marched around the walls of Jericho without military training or armaments, the walls came tumbling down, not by their own efforts but by the power of an almighty God.

When Gideon assembled a small army of 300 men and defeated a force of thousands without the loss of a single man, it was not by his own works that he was victorious, but by the power of God.

Without the power of God, we are reduced to being men in black. The signals of our troubling times seem to tell us that too many of our men are wearing the wrong colors because many have strayed away from the Lord.

Without the Lord, all we have are:

MEN IN BLACK-Who are lamenting their problems but taking no action

MEN IN PINK-Who have given up on being men all together and are now Black men wearing panty hose!

MEN IN YELLOW -Who have lost the courage to stand up for themselves and are defeated on every hand!

MEN IN BLUE Who get up every day complaining about hard times and singing a somebody done me wrong song!

MEN IN GREEN-Who have plunged themselves into greedy pursuits willing to do anything to make a little money.

MEN IN GRAY -Who are going to funerals every day. Dying by their own hands, in drive bys and fits of violence.

MEN IN RED-Who have decided that the only thing important in life is to party, get drunk and get high

MEN IN PURPLE-Who have become power hungry. Their quest is to rule, control, dominate and pull the strings. The only ones who usually benefit is themselves.

MEN IN WHITE-Who have forgotten who they are and where they come from. They are willing to trade their heritage for a bowl of porridge.

I don't know about you, but I have concluded that if we are to higher we don't need men in Black, brown or blue. What we need is men in the colorless cross of Christ.

No wonder the song writer declares, "Jesus keep me near the cross, there's a precious fountain. Free to all a healing stream that flows from Calvary's mountain!"

In the cross, it's not black and it's not white!

In the cross, which is neither yellow, or brown!

In the cross be my glory ever!

On an old rugged cross Jesus died for our sins!

But early Sunday morning he arose with victory!

Hold your head up high, men!

Don't wallow in the blackness of despair!

The God you serve is still on the throne!

You Gotta Represent

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 22, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "And he said, The God of our fathers hath chosen thee, that thou shouldest know his will, and see that Just One, and shouldest hear the voice of his mouth. For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard. Acts 22:14-15

Introduction

Have you ever been asked to represent someone else? A person who represents is a person who is presented as a stand in or substitute for someone else. The representative is usually delegated certain privileges and authorities to act, participate or stand in for another.

A popular song today says, "You gotta represent!" In the vernacular of Hip Hop to "represent" means to be worthy of your selection. "You gotta represent!" means you must live up to the expectations of the person or persons who deemed you worthy.

We are familiar with representatives. An ambassador is a person that represents his country in another. Our elected officials are representatives in national, state and local government. Senators, representatives, councilmen and aldermen all represent large numbers of people as government leaders. They are generally chosen by others to speak or act in their place. Lawyers are representatives. They stand before the courts of our nation and take actions on the behalf of clients who authorize them to act on their behalf. Athletes represent the sponsors of teams and competitors of all sorts often carry the banners of their nations and communities as they symbolize the hopes and dreams and best achievement of others.

Youth are often called upon to represent. School athletes carry the banners of the local school. They are more than just athletes, they symbolize all that a particular school teaches about good sportsmanship, fair play and competition. Student leaders are called upon more than any others to speak, not only for their schools, but often they are asked to represent the interest of youth on committees and other planning vehicles. Student leaders represent the best that their schools have to offer. That's why teachers and school administrators exercise a pivotal role in the selection of student leaders, regardless of their popularity. Student council members are often called upon as ambassadors of goodwill for their respective schools. Persons who are school fools or criminal in nature will rarely get selected as a student leader. They simply don't represent the highest ideals for which the institution stands.

What if you are a young Christian? Do you have to represent? Young Christians have been chosen to represent Jesus Christ in their generation. That is an honor greater than serving on the school Student Council. It's even greater than representing the school on the all state football team. As a representative for Christ on the school campus, what young Christians do and say symbolizes the highest ideals of Christianity. Thus, if you are a representative, "you gotta represent!"

As Christians, we are proud to witness for the cross of Christ. We are proud because he has given us the opportunity to show and tell others about his goodness and greatness. Because we love him so much we are compelled to conduct ourselves as his ambassadors, both young and old. We are his witnesses so, we "gotta represent!"

Exposition

This text focuses on the Apostle Paul as he details the events that caused him to become one of the greatest representatives of Jesus Christ.

Paul was a frequent subject of controversy among the Jews. For most of his life his name represented "persecution." He made it a life pursuit at one point to jail and imprison as many Christians as he could. When Stephen was killed he held the coats of those that did the actual stoning. Whenever persecutions occurred, it seemed Paul, under his former name "Saul," was close by. Pretty soon his name began to represent persecution, trouble and evil.

While on a journey to Damascus, he encountered Christ himself. It was a spell binding experience that that left him blind for three days. He was alone and an introvert. He studied, prayed and asked God to restore him. God restored both his sight and life with a new direction and meaning. He changed his name from Saul to Paul and began to represent the cause of Christ.

Immediately his actions were suspect. Wherever he went he was pointed out for that which he was known and persecuted. Often he was falsely accused by those who hated what he represented and false charges were brought against him.

That is the case of the 22nd chapter of Acts. Paul is being falsely accused of disrespecting the faith. The charge is purely is false It is purely circumstantial, cooked up out of false evidence. He is charged with being anti-Judaistic, i.e., against the religion of Judaism. And further, they invented the accusation that he had defiled the temple by bringing gentiles into it. They were upset at the very idea. Their outcry results in Paul's arrest.

Given a chance to speak, Paul tells the crowd his story of first representing the enemies of the cross,then seeing Christ for himself and then becoming a witness to the goodness of God.

Though it occurred thirty years before, he had never forgotten a single detail. He recalls it all as vividly as if it had happened yesterday.

His experience pushed him to understand that he was chosen to know the will of God. Knowing the will of God, he chose to represent that perfect will rather than the evil presence he had formerly represented. There on the Damascus Road, Paul said, he learned he had to make a choice of whom to represent. Though his history would never be changed, his present and future had unalterably been changed. He would never be the same again. Regardless to what was done to him, he felt compelled to represent and witness for the cause of Christ.

This explains his motivation. It identifies the drive with which he pursued his calling. It pushed him ceaselessly, out into the far regions of the earth, performing his apostolic ministry.

Though crowds were filled with bitterness against him, he stood for Jesus.

Though he was sometimes jailed and often persecuted, he stood for Jesus.

It was if he was compelled and driven by an unseen hand. No matter what came against him, Paul never missed an opportunity to witness for Jesus. He stood firm. He stood determined to do the will of God and to witness for him. It was as if he said in his heart, "I've gotta represent!"

Representing

It's important to every young person in these times to "represent." If one represents he's "dope." If she represents in a great way she's "tight!" If the representative really did it in a big way, it was "the bomb!" Representing is important.

BE CAREFUL WHO WE REPRESENT: The very definition of representing, suggests that we are acting on behalf of someone else. Therefore, youth should remember whom they represent. The first line of representing is the family. Every action or deed a youth takes represents his family. When a student walks through the door of a school he represents the honor, integrity, achievement and standards of his family. African-American students go even further, each time they venture outside of our community, whether they want to or not, they represent the entire African-American community. The same is true of every minority group. The accomplishments or misdeeds of every person who achieves even limited notoriety are generally attributed to the entire race. There are some who reject the notion that they represent others. They claim that "I represent myself. If they don't like what I do, then tough!" In reality however, a person can present himself, but in the act of presenting himself, he ends up representing others.

IT IS POSSIBLE TO MISREPRESENT: Just as it is important to represent, young Christians must be aware that it is possible to misrepresent. A misrepresentation is something that is not a true reflection. A student from a God fearing home, with a history of respect for authority, misrepresents when he or she cusses a teacher or defies school officials. She represents someone, but she obviously misrepresents her family. A student who represents his school at a conference or meeting but shows little intelligence and self control, misrepresents the entire school. His representation shifts to another group while officially representing another. Some forget whom it was they represented and sometimes misrepresent themselves.

THOSE WHO FAIL TO REPRESENT CAN BE RECALLED: A person may be given an opportunity to represent, but that opportunity can easily be taken away. In the Olympics and professional sports, we have seen athletes who fail to meet certain standards, barred from competition or ejected from games. Elected officials who fail to represent their constituents satisfactorily are often the subject of recall elections. Students that fail to represent the ideals and principles of the school by committing crimes or acts of violence are generally stripped of the right to represent the school in any way, by expulsion.

CHRISTIAN YOUTH MUST REPRESENT CHRIST: Youth who claim Jesus Christ on Sunday, must represent him Monday through Saturday. It is not enough for youth to sing in the church choir, serve as Junior Deacons, usher or participate in religious worship services, youth should remember they are now official representatives of Christ in their generation.

When the youth of your group decide to party hard and get drunk, you gotta represent!

When others are using profane language and using obscene gestures, you gotta represent!

When your friends are making plans to have sex and invite you to participate, you gotta represent!

When others in your class disrespect teachers and school authorities, you gotta represent!

If you go along with wrong doing, to avoid being disliked, you misrepresent!

You must remember who you are and to whom you belong. As a young Christian, you belong to Christ. He purchased your salvation with his own blood on Calvary. 1 Corinthians 6:19b-20 says, "ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's."

Christian youth are God's pride and joy and he expects them to represent him and witness for him constantly. 1 Peter 2:9 puts it this way, "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light:"

Tell What you know

Once Paul had stopped his old way and began to represent Christ in a new and bold way, he was criticized by those who did not believe he was "for real" and disliked by those whom he had abandoned. Despite the criticism he received, he went forward because he was confident that God was pleased. He had a story to tell and despite what others thought or how unpopular he might become he concluded that he had to witness for Christ. In essence Paul said, "I've gotta represent!"

Today, Christian youth have the same challenge, to witness for God in these troublesome times.

None of us should delude ourselves into thinking that these are anything less than troublesome times.

These are NILLI VANILLI times, when we don't know whether what we have is real!

These are PLAY STATION times, where some youth spend more time getting joysticks in their hands than they do getting their homework in their heads.

These are FREAKY times,when youth are encouraged to freak all day and to freak all night as long as they are careful to put a Trojan on the soldier!

These are BEAVIS AND BUTHEAD times, when youth are challenged to think ugly and talk dirty!

These are BART SIMPSON times, when youth are encouraged to do less than their best, talk back to their parents and praise under achievement!

These are 2PAC times, when youth are encouraged to live dangerously, risk death and wonder if heaven has a ghetto.

From head shoulder knee to toe there is only one way to go...you gotta represent!

Every Christian youth should say in his or her mind, "I have decided to follow Jesus, no turning back, no turning back!"

All of my friends may decide to act a fool and get themselves in trouble, but I've got to represent!

When all around me are cheating and stealing to make it through life, I've got to represent!

When my friends are disrespecting their teachers, talking back to those who have authority over them and showing insolent attitudes, I can't be a part because, I've got to represent!

I've got to represent because "A charge to keep I have, a God to glorify. An ever dying soul to save and fit it for the sky!"

I may only be 13 years years old, but I've got a story to tell!

I may only be a high school student, but I've got a story to tell!

A little while ago I joined the church and gave God my hand. On that day I said to the world, "For God I'll live and for God I'll die"

So you can say what you want to say about me, but I've got to represent!

Cut me out of your social circles and clubs, but I've got to represent!

Persecute me and isolate me if you want to but the word of God says "Matthew 5:10 says, "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven:.....". Matthew 5:10-12

Call me everything but a child of God, but I've got to represent!

I have decided that the Lord has been so good to me, that I've got to represent!

The one I represent, came down to this earth about 2000 years ago!

The one I represent, lived among men for 33 long years!

The one I represent, was crucified on an old rugged cross!

The one I represent, was buried in a borrowed tomb!

The one I represent, arose early on Sunday morning!

I have decided to represent for Jesus!

A Saint's Secret Connection

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 1, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "There is a God in heaven who reveals secrets and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days. Thy dream and visions of thy head upon thy bed are these;" Daniel 2:28; "Come, see a man, which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?" John 4:29

Introduction

Are you ever tempted to dial those psychic connection phone numbers you see on television? Do you want to know the secrets of your destiny? The commercials are compelling. Those who watch them are lured into calling a special number for several minutes of free consultation that easily turns into paid time. The persons in the commercials purport to tell you everything about yourself without knowing you, even secrets that no one knew but yourself. There are many, out of curiosity, who have made those calls and showered the voices on the phone with questions, "Will he leave me?" "Is there another woman?" "Will I be happy?", "Will I find a good wife?" Of course the psychic claims to have the gift and will use it to show you the future ...for a price. The obvious conclusion we are expected to reach is that any person who could know personal and private information about us that is singular in scope, must be endowed with special gifts.

A glance at the daily newspaper tells us that modern life is still infected by the ancient practice of astrology. Guests on talk shows discuss their astrological signs with the same ease that they discuss their divorces. Late-night television offers the services of stargazers by telephone at four dollars a minute. The wife of a recent president of the United States consulted an astrologer for advice on the travel schedule for her husband.

This fascination we have with astrologers did not just begin. It has been around for quite some time. As a young man, Augustine (354-430) consulted astrologers. In later years, however, he opposed the practice. Because astrology assumes that the position of the stars at the time of our birth determines personality and the course of our life, Augustine asked, "Why, in the life of twins—in their actions, the events that befall them, their professions, arts, honors, and other things pertaining to human life, as well as in their very deaths—is there often so great a difference that, as far as these things are concerned, many entire strangers are more like them than they are like each other?"

As we have grown to understand life better we have learned that our lives aren't shaped by lifeless stars, but by the God who created the stars and us as well. So believers don't waste time seriously consulting psychic connections, because we put our trust and confidence in God. He has revealed to us in the Bible our destiny in Jesus Christ.

As Christians, we have a connection. It is not mystical or psychic. Our connection is Jesus. He knows all about us, even more than we know about ourselves. Whenever we are in doubt, we simply call on Jesus and he reveals to us the secrets of life according to his divine will!

Exposition

This text focuses on Daniel as he calls upon God to reveal the secret of the king's dream.

Daniel had been taken into captivity into Babylon. He, along with three friends, were mere teenagers but were respected for having great wisdom despite their years. Daniel was one of the few prophets that recorded the prophetic visions given to them about things to come and as such has become respected for giving us pictures of the future state of the world.

In chapter 2 we are presented with the story of the great dream vision of King Nebuchadnezzar. He dreams one night of a great image of a man with a strange body. He had a head of gold, shoulders of silver, mid-section of brass, legs of iron, and feet of a clay and iron mixture. It was a troubling dream. What made it even more troubling is the fact that the king forgot his dream. The king called in the wise men and asked them to tell him not only the interpretation, but the dream as well. The astrologers, soothsayers and the sorcerers of Babylon were totally unable to come up with anything. The nature of their craft was to draw an interpretation from a known fact or occurrence. They were not equipped to both tell the king the dream and interpret it at the same time!

Obviously, if the king couldn't tell them the dream, then they couldn't dream up an interpretation. Thus, their lives were in danger.

Daniel was placed in the middle of this situation. Again God's man was pressured and threatened with death if he could not provide the answer to the dream. Not only did Daniel face the prospect of death but so did all of the wise men of Babylon.

Confident that God would give him the answer Daniel volunteered to give the king both the dream and its interpretation. True enough, God revealed to him both of the secrets, in time to save the lives of all involved.

Daniel gave the credit for his action to God. He told the king and all others that would hear him that he was not the source of the revelation, that it came from God. As he told the meaning of the dream, he also attributed theinterpretation to God as well.

God is, said Daniel, a revealer of secrets.

The Prophet Amos bears out the truth that God reveals secrets. In Amos 3:7 he records, "Surely the Sovereign Lord does nothing without revealing his plan to his servants the prophets." In Amos 4:13, he added "He who forms the mountains, creates the wind and reveals his thoughts to man, he who turns dawn to darkness, and treads the high places of the earth the Lord God Almighty is his name."

In the New Testament the fact that God knows all about us, is repeated constantly. It is dramatically demonstrated in the incident in which Christ met the woman at the well. Here a woman came to the well, with an innocent look, but soon found that a stranger knew her life story and her present condition. This woman had a dark secret. She had been married many times and was living with a man with whom she was not married. It was probably known by some, but a stranger would not have known. It could only have been revealed by God himself. The woman received the water of life and ran through the city shouting, "Come see a man! Come see a man who told me all I've ever done!"

Whether in the Old Testament or the New Testament, God is a revealer of secrets. He provides answers to life's disturbing questions. We can't hide from him, he knows what we don't others to know. He Knows all about us!

God Knows

When Daniel told the king that God was a revealer of secrets, he also told him something, by way of suggestion, that is very important: "In order to reveal secrets, God must first know them!" The fact that God knows everything about everybody and everything is called is omniscience. There is nothing that escapes his knowledge. There is no act that is unseen or unnoted. There is no thought that goes unnoticed. What we think is a secret to most people, but God knows. Every believer should remember that:

God knows Our Works: A saint does the work of a believer without calling attention to himself. The saint's greatest quest is to "do the work of him that sent me." It does not matter whether anyone else knows about the work, only that God knows. When John was told to write letters to the seven churches in Asia Minor one of the first statements God made to the churches was this: "I know thy works!" He spoke to the church at Thyatira and said, in Revelation 2:19 "I know thy works, and charity, and service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works; and the last to be more than the first." To the Church as Laodecia he said "I know thy works" and chastise them for being Lukewarm. David in Psalm 139:2 said, "Thou knowest my down sitting and mine uprising, thou understandest my thought afar off." None of our good deeds and Godly actions escape. He even knows our intentions and the desires of our heart. No matter how secret we may desire for them to be or how unintelligible our thoughts and deeds may be to others, God knows!

God knows Our Sins: While we work desperately to keep our sins from being known by others, there is one from whom we cannot hide! It is true that God knows about our good works, deeds and thoughts, but he also knows about our secret sins. Moses, in Psalm 90:8 said, "Thou hast set our iniquities before thee, our secret sins in the light of thy countenance." Our past is an open book to God. We may have torn out a few pages or smudged a few beyond recognition, but God knows! He knows about every unconfessed lie, act of thievery, adultery, abortion and every other sin that we have attempted to hide from everyone. God knows! That's why Jesus could approach the woman at the well and tell her about her secret sins, God knows!

God Knows about our Burdens: While it may appear at times that God ignores us, we must also remember that God knows about our burdens and concerns. God knows about our illnesses. He knows about our financial problems. He knows about the problems in our marriage that we have not shared with anyone. He knows about the spiritual war that is going on inside of us. He knows about the frustration that some feel about their jobs. He knows about the secret fears that some have about aging and facing the prospect of death. Though these fears have not been shared with a soul, God knows! Not only does God know, but cares. Maybe that's what Roberta Martin had in mind when she wrote the words, "Though the load gets heavy you're never left alone to bear it all. Ask for strength and keep on toiling, though the tear drops fall. You have the joy of this assurance. The heavenly father will always answer prayer and he know, yes he knows, just how much you can bear!

It is no secret

Finally brothers and sisters, while we know that God knows the secrets of life and the universe, we must also consider that God is a keeper of secrets.

As mere human beings it is hard for us to keep a secret, but God can. Many have confided in their friends only to learn that their friends have shared their secrets with others.

It's safe to see the Lord about our secret fears, because we are not telling him anything that he does not already know.

He is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

What a friend we have in Jesus, all our griefs and sins to bear. What a privelege to carry everything to God in prayer!

If you tell secrets to a friend, all he can give you is sympathy, but when you tell the Lord, he can change things.

That's why we sing "I must tell Jesus. I must tell Jesus, I cannot bear these burdens alone. I must tell Jesus. Jesus can help me, Jesus alone!"

One of the hardest secrets to keep is when the Lord has done something for you!

Mark 7:36 gives an account of a man who was deaf and dumb who was brought to Jesus. Jesus stuck his finger in the man's year and touched his tongue and the man began to speak for the first time. Jesus told him to keep it a secret, but more he tried to keep the secret the more he ran through the streets praising God.

When the Lord has been good to you, you got to tell somebody!

When he has picked you up and turned you around, you got to tell somebody!
When he has planted your feet on solid ground, you got to tell somebody!
When you testify what God has done, every saint starts rejoicing!
When you bless God for cleaning up your life, every saint says Amen, because the secret is out!
When you tell the world how the Lord has blessed your family, the saint's shout hallelujah, because the secret it out!
When you tell the world how good God has been, the saints clap their hands because the secret is out!
It is no secret what God can do, what he's done for others, he'll do for you!
Every saint has a secret connection, that can make a way out of no way!
A secret connection who becomes a shelter in a time of storm!
A secret connection that lightens burdens and carries heavy loads!
His name is no secret!
His name is Jesus, the fairest of ten thousand!

Jesus! My Rock in a weary land!
Jesus!, My bridge over troubling water!
Jesus! Who died on Calvary but arose early Sunday morning!
The secret it out!
If you call on the name of Jesus...
He will reveal the secret path to the abundant life!

A Good Deacon's Reward

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 1, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "For they that have used the office of deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus." 1 Timothy 3:13

Introduction

How would like a job that worked you very hard but paid you nothing? Suppose this job required you to be on call 24 hours a day? Suppose it required you to use your own car without payment for gas, repairs or mileage? What if it required you to be absent frequently from your family and often exposed you to undo criticisms and unfair comments. Suppose this job often made you sick with worry about the concerns of others. If you saw a want ad for such a job would you respond to it? Could any person actually "desire" such a job..for life?

Many today take the office of deacon in a church lightly. Some think it is only a post for a person to pray or read scriptures during a worship service or count the collections afterward. It's such a easy job that we feel that anyone that has reasonable good sense can do it well. Consider three men who saw a set of tracks and argued with each other as to the kind of tracks they were. "They are duck tracks!" Shouted one man with great confidence, "I'd know them anywhere!" The second man shook his head in disagreement. "They are too big to be duck tracks, they are chicken tracks! They have to be!" The two men argued back and forth between themselves until they both turned and asked the third man who was always the wisest of them, "What kind of tracks are these?" The third man took a moment to think, then said, "These are not chicken tracks, but all three of us will be dead ducks if we don't move soon, because these are railroad tracks and here comes the train!" Obviously, deacons must be persons who have enough sense to know what track the church is on!

The Old Testament picture of Moses standing on the side of the mountain holding his arms up high is clear to most bible scholars. In that image we see Moses upraised arms as the call to victory for the people. As Moses tired and his hands dropped, the people lost their battles. To insure victory, two men, Aaron and Hur, sat Moses on a stone as they held up his heavy hands until the sun went down. As Moses tired, they held up his hands, but there is no record as to who held up the hands of Aaron and Hur. These men are given as examples of the role of deacons, holding up the pastor's heavy hands, while counting on God alone to give them the strength to get the job done.

Deacons are not compensated for their service. As extensions of the pastor, they represent him as they visit the sick, feed the hungry, comfort the lonely and provide support for those who feel abandoned. It is often a thankless job. Yet, while there is no pay check for those men and women who serve as deacons and deaconesses in the church, there is a reward. That reward is not given by men and is not subject to any withholding or deductions. Every good deacon, like every good Christian, expects his reward to come after this life has ended as he steps up a degree to a higher reward.

As Christians, we know that when we have fought a good fight and finished our course that we have a degree of reward. Those who have distinguished themselves with an effective ministry to others have reason to expect to hear the welcomed words, "Well done, my good and faithful servant. Thou hath been faithful over a few things, I will make thee a ruler over many. Enter thou into the joy of the Lord!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains how a good deacon is rewarded in the sight of God and man.

Paul explained the qualities that should be sought in a person desiring to serve as a pastor. He then described the attributes necessary for persons to serve as lay ministers or deacons and deaconesses of a congregation. It was expected that the lay ministers would exhibit many of the same attributes of pastors in terms of morality, spirituality, dedication to the word, ability to manage their personal lives and those of their children, while maintaining a clear focus on their service to the house of God as well. Moreover, Paul emphasized the importance of a good reputation and character as qualifications of a good deacon. He also emphasized that deacons should not be greedy, foul mouthed or silly but serious minded, grave and full of the Holy Ghost, maintaining loyalty to one spouse.

The first 12 verses of 1Timothy chapter three addresses the qualifications of a person to serve as a pastor or deacon, prior to their service. However, verse 13 focuses on the completion of service. The chapter begins with the words "If a man desire.." which indicates preparation. Verse 13 begins with "for they that have used the office of a deacon well." It shifts to the past tense, indicating that Paul was looking to a point after the active service has ended.

Verses 8-12 tells what is needed to become a deacon. Acts chapter 6, tells what a deacon should do. His duties require him to attend to the details of the church and minister to the needs of its membership, freeing his pastor to attend to the preparation of the Word. Having done that, verse 13 tells what to expect after a good deacon's life service has ended.

Paul said those who have served well as a deacon, "purchase to themselves, a good degree." That literally means that they acquire a step up, to a higher degree.

This higher degree that a deacon would achieve was not literal. There was no church hierarchy at the time that Paul wrote. There was no military style chain of command for a deacon to move to a higher position or job in the church. The higher degree that would be acquired would be outside of the physical church. It would be outside of the realm of the tangible. A good degree refers to a measure of accomplishment in the eye of God.

Great Boldness: The deacon who serves well not only acquires a higher degree but a "great boldness." A great boldness is literally a good standing place, a well grounded hope, a secure faith. A deacon who serves well prepares himself to stand before God with boldness, faith and confidence that he has performed the work well and finished the course. As an example of that boldness and confidence, Paul wrote Timothy a second time and demonstrated his own boldness when he said in 2 Timothy 4:6-8 "I'm ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought the good fight. I have finished my course. I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

Thus, the scope of a good deacon's mission and expectation is explained. Those who serve and serve well, can expect to stand boldly before God and receive a higher reward!

Measuring A Good Deacon

How does one sum up the life work of a deacon? He can only be judged by the standards specified in the Word of God. It will be the measuring stick by which he will be measured when he stands before God. It's what determines whether he has earned the designation of a "good" degree.

HE WILL BE MEASURED BY HIS SALVATION: A man who serves as a deacon must meet the biblical qualifications. More than anything else he must be born again. He must know the Lord for himself. It doesn't matter about his past, but his present must be one that indicates that he is totally committed to building the kingdom of God. The good deacon has a testimony that speaks of commitment to the cross and his determination to live for God.

HE WILL BE MEASURED BY HIS CHARACTER: He must be a serious minded person. He must understand the seriousness of his task and approach it with a dedicated spirit. His personality must be of such that he speaks the truth, even if it is not politically correct to do so. This requires a unique strength of character.

He must be sober in his thinking and in his conduct. He cannot be one who is intoxicated with liquors or inebriated by the concerns of the world. He should not be excited by money and worldly possessions to the point that they consume his thoughts and actions.

Since becoming a Christian, he should have a blameless reputation. He should not be viewed as a backslider or a person who is a "Sunday" Christian. He should reflect the fact that he holds the mystery of the faith close to his heart.

He should demonstrate the love and fidelity that Christ has for the church through his love for his wife. His faithfulness to his wife should be unquestionable and should extend until God calls one or the other to glory. His devotion and attention to the development of Christian attitudes among those of his household should be an example for others to follow. His children should be under his leadership. His household should reflect Christian attitudes and spirit.

In short, the deacon who stands before God will be measured to see if he actually met the qualifications for his post or whether he was chosen for other reasons.

HE WILL BE MEASURED BY HIS SERVICE: The deacon will also be measured by his service. His primary role as a deacon is to assist his pastor in handling the multitude of details related to managing the church as well as ministering to the needs of the sick, spiritually wounded, aggrieved and others in need of spiritual assistance. Contrary to popular opinion, the good deacon serves in the field, he does not sit on a board where all is required is for him to make an appearance from time to time.

The good deacon is supportive of his pastor. As an extension of his pastor in spirit and service he gives his pastor the benefit of public support and private, personal criticism if necessary. He is strong enough to differ as to methods, but humble enough to accept his pastor's leadership.

The good deacon regularly visits the sick and the wounded in his area. The good deacon is rarely absent from any gatherings of the congregation because he is aware that he is an example to those who look to him for leadership. The good deacon helps the poor, is a friend to the young and is a champion of the cause of those whom Christ described as the "least of these my brethren."

The good deacon ministers to the spiritual needs of the congregation through prayer and supplications. He is comfortable in prayer and does not neglect opportunities to pray for the congregation.

The good deacon's concern is first to his family and congregation, but it extends even to his neighbors and the general community. His concern prompts him to become involved in the betterment of his community, without neglecting his service to his family or church. Anything that makes life better for the saints attracts his attention.

The deacon who stands before God must give an account of his record of service.

Our Life Work Will Be Rewarded

Finally, brothers and sisters, when the books are open and each servant is asked to give an account of his service, the statement may be made, "Servant give an account of your stewardship!"

The servant who has done well, won't need to filibuster, stammer or study, but the words of the song writer might come to mind, "May the service I've done, speak for me."

"When I've done the best I can and my friends don't understand, may the work I've done speak for me."

"The work I've done seems so small, seems like nothing at all. But when I stand before my God, I want to hear him say well done, may the work I've done speak for me!"

I'm so glad that the rewards that God plans for the righteous are not reserved for a certain class of believer. I'm glad to know that when the call goes out to bring out the long white robes it won't be for deacons alone.

I'm glad to know that when the golden crowns are brought forward, they won't be reserved for preachers and Sunday School teachers alone. For Paul said, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

Every saint of God expects to receive a crown of righteousness when he or she has given the Lord their best.

If you have been a good choir member, one of these days, the call is going to come, "come on up a little higher!

If you've been a good usher, serving Sunday after Sunday, one of these days the call is going to come, "come on up a little higher!"

If you've been a faithful member of the prayer band, praying from your soul, one of these days, the call is going to come... "come on up a little higher!"

Servant, I watched you down there! I saw you serving others when you needed to be served yourself!

Servant, I watched you down there! I saw you walking to the homes of the weary, when you couldn't even wear shoes on your feet!

Servant, I watched you down there. I saw you lifting others up in prayer when you could hardly catch your breath!

I'm so glad that God's got a place for every good servant. It doesn't matter whether you were a deacon. It doesn't matter whether you are a choir member. It doesn't matter whether you were just a faithful follower in the pew!

God's got .....

A place, Where the wicked will cease from troubling!

A place, where the weary will be at rest!

A place, where every mountain will be made low!

A place, where every valley shall be exalted!

A place, guaranteed by Jesus!

Jesus, Who carried an old rugged cross up Golgotha's hill!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary, but Early! Early!

Early Sunday morning he arose with all power in his hand!

On Wednesday February 25, 1998, John Joseph James, Sr. was called to stand before his God. He served his family, his church and his community well. He was a good deacon.

What's That Nailed To The Cross?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 15, 1998

SCRIPTURE: Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross; And having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it. Collossians 2:14-15

Introduction

Do you find it difficult to forgive an offense that a person makes against you? Is it possible to forgive and forget? One of the most difficult aspects of the Christian life is to learn to forgive offenses that have been made against us. It's easier to talk about such actions than it is to actually carry them out. Some find it easy to say the words "I forgive you!" but find it more difficult to actually do what the words imply. For some the ability to forgive is based on the depth of the offense. They find it easy to forgive small offenses where nothing more than pride was lost. However the more quantitative the loss, the more difficult is the process of forgiveness.

A spouse that has been the victim of adultery wrestles with the question of forgiveness. Someone who threatens or injures a loved one finds forgiveness comes slow. Those who have lost loved ones to violent acts of drunk drivers or criminals are slow to forgive. Sometimes, if we have had a bad experience, its really hard to forgive the person responsible. Consider the country judge who came to court angry one Monday morning. It seems that he had trouble with two new hound dogs that were left on his steps by a stranger. Since the judge loved to hunt, he readily put the dogs with the rest of his fine set of hounds. Over the weekend these new dogs went crazy. They escaped the pen and got into the chicken yard and killed his prized blue ribbon rooster. They dug a hole under the fence and got into his rabbit yard, killing and maiming dozens of his pet rabbits. The dogs almost wrecked his farm.

The judge looked over the crowd of suspects that were standing before him with a stern eye and called for the first case. A short man came before him grinning. The judge said, "You have been charged with criminal mischief, what do you have to say for yourself?" The man, feeling pretty secure, said "Judge, you don't know me, but I wouldn't hurt a flea, why I'm the one that gave you those two hound dogs the other day!" Angered, the judge said, "Guilty as charged! That'll be six months in jail! You were doing pretty good until you reminded me why today is a bad day!" Sometimes we are pretty good with forgiving and forgetting, until someone brings it up, then we start all over again!

Suppose God held his animosity and anger toward us as long as we hold it against other people. What if, years after we have committed a sin, that God continued to be angry with us and treated us coldly and distantly because of that offense? If God said he would forgive us for our sins but never forgets them and continues to hold them against us? Wouldn't that be terrible!

As Christians, we know that we must learn to forgive and forget. In the flesh, that is a difficult task. However, if we let the Holy Spirit guide us, it becomes very easy. God has forgiven us and nailed our past to the cross. We should do the same for others.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he instructs the Colossians on the nature of their new relationship with Christ, free of the restrictions and condemnations of the past.

Jewish Christians were caught between two worlds. They were obedient, God fearing Jews who kept the commandments of Moses to the letter. They adhered to both the moral law, embodied in the Ten Commandments, and the ceremonial laws as well. As they were introduced to Christianity however, many felt obligated to carry out the dictates of the Mosaic law, while at the same time living under the new dispensation offered by Christianity. In this way, they would get the best of both worlds.

However, Paul charged them to turn loose their allegiance to the Mosiac ceremonial law because they were freed from that obligation in Christ. He took the same positions when he was writing the Romans, Galatians and the Ephesians. His message was simple: "The old way has been nailed to the cross!" The old "you" that was defined as sinful by the law has being "nailed to the cross!" The new you is stronger, bolder and free because of Christ.

Paul declared the forgiveness of sins for which the law, the "written code with its regulations," condemned us. That condemnation has been removed by the death of Christ on our behalf. He paid for all our sins, the sins we committed in the past, the sins we are going to commit to day, and the sins we shall commit in the future. Sin is no longer an issue in our relationship with God. It affects our fellowship but not our relationship. He has fully dealt with it.

Blotted out. What did the death of Christ on the Cross actually accomplish? It blotted out our sins. Blotted out literally means "having wiped out" which is coincident in time with "having forgiven you" in verse 13 (Col 2:13); hereby having canceled the law's indictment against us. The law was a compulsory, accusing code, and as far as "righteousness" (justification) and "life" were sought for by it. It could only produce outward works, not inward obedience of the will, which in the believer flows from the Holy Spirit. The law could make a person act right out of fear, but it could not make him do right out of a desire to do the right thing. The law defined a person's ugliness before God and gave no way for the believer to see himself in the beauty of holiness before God.

The "handwriting of ordinances", which the law represents, typifies a bad memory. It constantly points to the frailties, shortcoming and inequities of every believer. The hundreds of Mosaic laws that dealth with everything from the washing of hands to dealing with the diseased and infirmed, had a crippling affect. Many became married to the writings that defined the old way. They held so much of an allegiance to the past that Paul had to constantly remind believers that Christ has taken it away so that it is no longer a hindrance to the believer's new life by "nailing it to the cross."

The phrase "nailing it to the cross" is a metaphor that denotes that the written law has been canceled. Christ, by bearing the curse of the broken law, has redeemed us from its curse (Galatians 3:13). In His person, representing us, Christ was nailed to the cross. In effect the law itself was nailed to the cross as well. One ancient mode of canceling bonds was by striking a nail through the writing: this seems at that time to have existed in Asia. The bond canceled in the present case was the obligation lying against the Jews as representatives of the world, and attested by their amen, to keep the whole law under penalty of the curse.

The effect of canceling the law is that every day God gives us a new slate, a new unspoiled day, to live through by his grace. Our sins have been forgiven. Paul sees them as "nailed to the cross," so they no longer can condemn us. The law is not done away with, but the condemnation of it is. Believers are made free and told to, "go and sin no more." The last step is, believers are freed from the power of these evil beings: Having disarmed the powers and authorities, Christ made a public spectacle of them, triumphing over them by the cross.

Nailed to the Cross

There are many today who are troubled by their past. It seems that despite our best efforts friends, associates, classmates and co-workers never forget what we once were before we knew Christ. Most people have portions of their past of which they are not proud. They did and said things which were out of character with the new life they have found in Christ. Friends and associates however, have a tendency to continue to judge them by what they use to be rather than their present state in Christ. The fact is, many aspects of our old lives have been nailed to the cross.

OUR SINS ARE NAILED TO THE CROSS: That part of our past which represented our worst has been forgiven and nailed to the cross, once we accepted Christ. The old script that we once followed has been destroyed. The old map that once took us to places foreign to our faith, is gone. There is no resurrecting the past once he has nailed our sins to the cross. They will never be brought up again. It will never be brought up again to condemn us. That's what Romans 8:1-2 means, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." When Christ forgives he forgets. In fullness we actually become another person. Our walk and talk changes. 2 Corinthians 5:17 says, " Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

Only by shedding his blood and dying on the cross could Jesus effectively nail our sins down for good. No wonder the song writer would ask, "What can wash away my sins? Nothing but the blood of Jesus! What can make me whole again, nothing but the blood of Jesus!"

OUR FEARS ARE NAILED TO THE CROSS: Before we came to Christ our lives were filled with fears and apprehensions. We worried constantly. We were afraid of death. We were afraid of failure. We were also afraid of the words and actions of others. In the interim however, we have learned to say with David in Psalm 23:4 "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." When enemies surround us we have learned the power of Psalm 27:1, " The LORD is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?" If you are looking for fear in a saint, it's gone. It has been nailed to the cross!

OUR LOSSES ARE NAILED TO THE CROSS: Before coming to Christ we brooded heavily over any loss, no matter how small. Defeats were equated with failure and we made ourselves miserable as we chided ourselves for our shortcomings. We were showered with negative self talk. We were so negative that we even depressed ourselves. But once we came to Christ, defeatist thinking was nailed to the cross as we saw ourselves in a different light. Now we see every challenge differently. We see the victory that has been promised by Christ. We hear Paul's words to the Romans ringing in our ears, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." Romans 8:35-37.

There was a time when we pouted over difficulties, but now we count it all joy!

There was a time when we felt overwhelmed by sickness or hard times, but now we count it all joy!

OUR WORRIES ARE NAILED TO THE CROSS: Before coming to Christ we struggled under burdens that were unusually heavy. They were heavy because they contained their own built in weight and problems. They were heavier because we tried to carry them alone and we added worry to the load. Now that we know the Lord we still have burdens from time to time, but what we have less is worry. We have heard the voice of Jesus when he said in Matthew 11:28, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Today, we trust more and worry less because we turn our worries over to the Lord and he nails it to the cross. No wonder the song writer says, "Take your burdens to the Lord and leave it there. If you trust and never doubt he will surely bring you out, take your burden to the Lord and leave it there!"

Our Load Is Lighter

Finally, every child of God must consider that because our sins, fears, burdens and worries have been nailed to the cross, every child of God walks a lot lighter than he or she has in the past!

Not only did Jesus nail our sins to the cross, but he also took the sting, venom and poison of life...drained it and nailed them to the cross as well!.

Everything that made life miserable for us or condemned us, has been nailed to the cross!

What's that nailed to the cross? It's the frown we use to wear, until the Lord gave us a brand new smile! Now we sing, God has smiled on me. He has made me glad!

What's that nailed to the cross? It's the failure that we once knew, until the Lord gave us the victory! Now our daily reminder is, "I can do all things through Christ that strengthens me!

What's that nailed to the cross? It's the lonliness I once felt, until I remembered that he promised never to leave me, never to leave me alone!

What's that nailed to the cross? It's the sadness I once felt, until he took my sadness and gave me gladness!

What's that nailed to the cross? It's the dirty heart I use to have, until he gave me a clean heart!

What's that nailed to the cross? It's the words to the old song that I use to sing, until he gave me a new song to sing!

Preacher you told us what is hanging on the Christ, but who is that man nailed to the cross?

His name is Jesus! The wonderful counselor!
Jesus, almighty God!
Jesus, the great physician!
Jesus, the lily of the valley!
Jesus, the bright and morning star!
They hung him high and stretched him wide!
When they nailed one hand, that must have been for my sins!
When they nailed the other hand, that must have been for my fears!
When they nailed his feet that must have been for all my troubles!
He died on an old rugged cross!
But Early!
Early, Sunday morning...he got up from the grave with..
All Power!
All Power in his hands!

Looking For Love In All The Wrong Places

SCRIPTURE: I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me. Proverbs 8:17

Introduction

Where can you find true love? That is a question that has been asked by millions over the years. Many have searched for love without success and are mystified at how some are able to extol the wonders of the love they have known and experienced in life, while they always seem to emerge empty handed. Love, being an intangible, is difficult to quantify. It is best demonstrated rather than defined. How is it acquired? Is there a special potion that can be applied that will cause it to happen? Just how does one acquire true love?

Millions today are searching for true love. Those who are searching should consider the lesson learned by the young squirrel. It appears that the young squirrel was confident that he could find acorns just as easy as the older squirrels. One day as they walked through the woods he begged for permission to gather nuts himself. The old squirrel that led the group said, this is not a good place. The young squirrel complained and begged to be given his chance. The old squirrel finally gave his reluctant permission. Determined to show that he knew how to gather acorns the little squirrel ran across the ground but found nothing. Then he ran up and down every tree in the woods, but still found nothing. He looked in hollow logs under trunks and in the hollows of trees. At the end of the day the young squirrel returned tired and empty handed. The old Squirrel asked, "How many acorns did you find?" The young squirrel dropped his head and said, "None." The old squirrel, sensing the dejection of the young upstart said, "Hold your head up little fellow, you did all the right things. You scurried up every tree. You checked the ground below. However, there is one thing you did not consider, you are standing in the middle of a pine tree forest, you were looking for the right thing, but you were climbing up the wrong tree!" Those who are looking for love need to look for it the right places.

Have you been looking for love? Where have you been looking? Many are looking for Christian friends but they are looking unChristian places. Some are looking for Christian mates but are they looking for them in bars and night clubs. Many are looking for God-fearing relationships but they continue to expect these qualities from those who do not know God.

Those who are looking for love have to look in the right places. True love comes from God, for God is love. Therefore, people who are looking for real love must find God for themselves, then find another who also knows God. If our relationship is not dipped in the love of God, then it cannot work.

In the same sense there are many who are looking for strength, peace, joy, reassurance and hope. They have sought these important aspects of life in a variety of places. Some have turned to a plethora of secular pursuits that they hope will bring them joy only to find that they return empty. They are looking for acorns in a forest of pine trees.

As Christians, we know that the source of all of life's real joys is God. We have sought him diligently and we have found him and he has made us glad!

Exposition

This text focuses on the wisdom of loving God and doing so early in life.

Solomon, in the course of his life, sought happiness, peace and contentment. Much of his life was spent looking for happiness and joy in all the wrong places. In the Ecclesiastes he recorded his various pursuits. The list of his endeavors seemed endless as he dabbled in first one pursuit then another, trying to find happiness and true meaning of life.

Among his various pursuits were: architecture, science and astronomy, building construction, music, partying, romantic ventures and a plethora of other activities. After each, he wrote that they were all vanities. He did not find that which he was looking for in any of them. Even in the accumulation of wealth he found no happiness. He concluded the Ecclesiastes by saying, "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter; Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." (Ecclesiastes 12:13)

He finally concluded that the real meaning of life was tied to those things that were Godly in nature.

Thus, in the Proverbs he shares the wisdom of his life's experience. One of the great wise truths he learned in the course of life is the wisdom that outside of God there can be no love, happiness or peace.

What Solomon learned was that while God loves all of his creation, God responds best to those that love him and earnestly strive to show their love to him. The voice of wisdom speaks, "I love them that love me!"

Those that seek God's love shall find it. Those who want to know him can find true knowledge of him. Those who desire to find the true meaning of life and love can find it. Christ, talking to his disciples, reminded them that if they would just knock, that doors would be open to them. If they asked it would be given to them. If they would simply seek, they would surely find.

To know God and love him was the epitome of wisdom as far as Solomon was concerned. Find God and demonstrate his love in every act or deed and every man and woman will discover the true key to happiness and joy.

Solomon spoke of the wisdom of seeking God's love and its reward. The New Testament identified exactly how to know if we love God. Two passages of scripture are symbolic of Jesus' teaching on loving God:

God loves those that keep his commandments. John 14:21 "He who has My commandments and keeps them is the one who loves Me; and he who loves Me will be loved by My Father, and I will love him and will disclose Myself to him. John 14:23 "Jesus answered and said to him, If anyone loves Me, he will keep My word; and My Father will love him, and We will come to him and make Our abode with him. "

To look for God is to strive to know his will and seek after it.

Those who are looking for Love have only to look around them. The evidence of God's love surrounds them each and every day!

In All The Wrong Places

Many today are looking for blessings and the abundant life in every place except the right place. Like the prophet Elijah who tucked himself away in a cave keep misinterpreting every act that occurred as being from God. A strong wind came, but that was not God. An earthquake came, but that was not God. There was fire, but God was not in the fire. He found God in a still small voice.

In a similar sense there are many people who are looking for God to display himself in some giant way. They are looking for him in all the wrong places.

BUSINESS PURSUITS: There are many that have plunged themselves into a variety of business pursuits looking for the fulfillment that comes only with God's love and blessing. These have committed themselves totally to increase their bottom line by expanding their investments and increasing their profits. In the process of pursuing their businesses many have found that they have little time for the church, study of the bible, prayer and fellowship. They literally forget that the word of God in Matthew 6:33 says, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." They are looking for love, but in all the wrong places.

WORLDLY RELATIONSHIPS: There are others who spend the entirety of their time trying to find a mate. They want someone who will treat them with love and respect and shower them with kindness. The problem is that many of them are looking in the wrong places. Some are trying to take good men from their wives. Some are trying to take good women from loving husbands. Even more are involved in a series of one night stands as they move from club to club looking for Mr. Goodbar, singing "Shorty swing my way. You sure look good to me!"

When we look for love in someone else's mate, we are looking in the wrong place.

When we look for love in places known for pickups, one night stands and easy rides, we are looking in the wrong place.

CLUBS AND ORGANIZATIONS: Some are seeking fulfillment through involvement in a variety of clubs and fraternal organizations. While club work and fraternal associations are commendable, there are some who get so involved in their club work or their sorority, fraternity or masonic order that they lose sight of their obligation to God. For many people, the club becomes their God. The sorority or fraternity becomes their God. No matter how noble our civic work is, it cannot substitute for working in the king's vineyard. No matter how fulfilling our social engagements may seem, there is always something missing, if God was not in the midst of the work. No wonder the song writer would say, "You may build great cathedrals large or small, you may build sky scrapers grand and tall, you may conquer all the failures of the past, but only what you do for Christ will last."

BARS, DISCOS AND HONKEY TONKS: There are many who seek friendship, fellowship and binding relationships in bars and honkey tonks. They spend the majority of their time moving from one hole in the wall to another. Their lives consist of an endless string of late night jams, parties and get downs, each one designed to pick up where the other left off. When the day has passed participants usually find that they wake up feeling just as lonely and empty as they began.

There are many today who are learning, that simply looking is not enough, you must look in the right place, otherwise they'll end up like the lost little squirrel, simply running up the wrong tree!

Looking in the right places

Finally brothers and sisters, those who want to find God and God like people must look for him in the right places.

The first step in finding real love is to know God for yourself. No one can really fully know true love until they know the Lord for themselves. Not the kind of love that depends upon others for its interpretation, but the kind that is indicative of a personal experience. Since God is love, if we want to find real love we must know God for our selves.

If you are looking for love, follow the trail of any saint and it will take you to the source of love.

If you are looking for love, follow the trail of any saint and it will show you a believer that believes in the power of prayer. Those who know the love of God, also know the power of prayer!

Prayer can change things!

Prayer can take a defeated spirit and show it the victory!

Prayer can take a sadness and turn it into a gladness!

Prayer can take a sorrow and turn it into a joy!

Prayer can take a bowed down head and lift it up high!

If you are looking for love, follow the trail of any saint and it will show you a believer who knows what faith can do.

Faith can dream the impossible!

Faith can move the unmovable!

Faith can reach the unreachable!

Faith can stop the unstoppable!

If you are looking for love, follow the trail of any saint and it will show you a believer that demonstrates the compassion of God. Those who know the Love God show it by helping others. They fervently sing the song, "If I can help somebody as I pass along, then my living shall not be in vain."

If you are looking for love, follow the trail of any saint and it will show you a believer that is lifted up in hope. Those who know the Love of God show it through their continuous belief that God will make a way somehow!

Hope looks beyond darkness because God can take darkness and turn it into light!

Hope looks beyond failure because God can take failure and turn it into success!

Hope looks beyond tears because God can take tears and turn them into cheers!

Hope looks beyond weakness because God can take weakness and turn it into strength!

Hope looks beyond stumbling blocks because God can take stumbling blocks and turn them into stepping stones.

If you are looking for love, follow the trail of any saint and it will take you to the cross. There you'll find a saint singing, "At the cross, at the cross, where I first saw the light and the burdens of my heart rolled away. It was there by faith, I received my sight and now I'm happy all the day!"

The cross represents the climatic summation of God's demonstrated love.

That's what John meant when he said "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!"

If you are looking for love, follow that old rugged cross up Golgotha's hill!

If you are looking for love, follow that trail of blood to his wounded side!

If you are looking for love, look out on Calvary...for they hung him up high!

Stretched him out wide!

..And he died!

But Early!

Early Sunday morning, Love got up from the grave!

If you are looking for love, follow Jesus!

Follow Jesus!

And everything will be all right!

What are you running from? Where are you running to?

SCRIPTURE: "It is good for me to draw near to God; I have put my trust in the Lord God." Psalm 73:28

Introduction

Have you ever felt like running away? Those are the times when you feel like everything "out there" seems better than what's "back here." We think about running away in moments of frustration. Those are the times when the lure of being someplace else, where no one knows you seems fascinating. There are endless scenarios that we have developed for ourselves that range from tucking ourselves away in the anonymity of a large city to finding a quiet small town and starting all over again. It doesn't happen much, but every now and then, many people entertain that thought.

Sometimes life just seems easier some place else. Consider the little boy who was completely fed up with all of the rules of his house. He felt like a slave. He had to pick up his toys. Empty the trash. Clean out the bath tub behind himself. He even had to sweep the floors. Finally one day he was just fed up. He packed all of his bags and decided he would run away. He wrote his mother a note that said, "I cannot take it any more. I'm running away. I'm never coming back again!" He put the note on the table, went into the kitchen and fixed himself a peanut butter and jelly sandwich, threw his back pack across his shoulder and dashed off into the night, never to return again. About 30 minutes later he returned home and met his mother at the door. "I thought you were running away?" She said. "I was, but it's too dark tonight, I'll wait until another night!" There are many who think about running away until they remember how dark it is "out there!"

While there are many who think about running away, there are some whose lives today are a reaction to something that happened to them many years ago. Author and cartoonist James Thurber made this provocative observation about life: "All persons must learn before they die what they are running from and what they are running to, and why." Often our thoughts and actions in the present are shaped by something in our past. A stern parent that set goals to high for us to reach when we were children, has prompted some to run away from achievement as they intentionally set low goals for themselves. A student who was teased in high school, is now the adult that shys away from social contacts. A victim of sexual abuse, now runs away from intimacy. A child that was second best to an older sister or brother, runs himself into the ground determined never to be second best again. There are many people who are running away from something. Their every action is a reaction to something that has happened to them in some way.

One of the keys to ultimate happiness is to discover the answer to what we are running from. When we face what we are running from, then we understand why we do what we do. But more importantly, we should seek to know where we are running to. We know what we are running from but unless we know where we are headed our life is aimless. We must also find out what we're running to. Some people, competing for temporary fame and fortune, are like passengers who are fighting for the best seats on a bus headed for oblivion.

As Christians, we have the assurance of knowing where we are going. We know the road over which we have traveled. Our task now is to press on toward the mark and make heaven our home. We are happy because we know what we are running from and where we are running to!

Exposition

This Psalm focuses on David's song writer Asaph as he shares how he almost ran from God in frustration and temptation, until he found him in the sanctuary.

Psalm 73 is a clear picture of a man running from his frustration. What was bothering this man was the apparent contradiction between what he had been taught in the Scripture — that God was good to the upright and to those who were pure in heart — and his experience in life. He was envious, he said, of the arrogant, and disturbed by the prosperity of the wicked. That prosperity seemed to him to be a direct contradiction to what he had been taught about God. He had been told that if you are "upright and pure in heart," that is, you had learned to lay hold of the righteousness which God provides and were cleansed by his grace, then God would be good to you, take care of you, and watch over you. But instead this man was finding his own situation to be difficult and very discouraging, but the wicked around him, the ungodly, were seeming to prosper and everything was going well with them. This bothered him greatly. He could not reconcile this. It troubled him so terribly that it created a deep resentment and envy in his heart. This, in turn, became such a threat to his faith that ultimately he found himself threatened with a complete loss of faith.

He was also running from temptation. As he surveyed the life of the ungodly around him, he was tempted to try that life for himself. It appeared that the ungodly life was the better. It was the ungodly who never seemed to have any troubles. In verses 10-14 he details his view of the ungodly, he is well fed, well clothed, even expensively dressed; pride is like an ornament to his life. His carriage, his bearing, is one of self-assurance and authority. He appears never to have any difficulty. If he is crossed he is very quick to retaliate. He is given to self-indulgence in food and pleasure. Asaph says, "Their eyes swell out with fatness, their hearts overflow with follies." They boast in their abilities and throw their weight around by threats and great displays of influence and connections in the "right" places. Truly, Asaph was tempted to live this life as opposed to the godly life.

He found himself being drawn away from God. In his frustration he was applauding the life of the ungodly and running to it with enthusiasm.

He kept running away from God, towards the world until he came once again into the presence of God. In the presence of God, he began to understand what he was running from and he saw clearly his final state if he ran either with God or with the world. This happened when he went into the sanctuary where God meets his people. When he came in God's presence he began to see where the ungodly were running to. He said in verse 17 "then I understood their end." His conclusion is similar to that of KingDavid who shared the same frustration in Psalm 37. David concluded that we should not fret over evil doers because they would be cut down and become like the chaff which the wind drives away.

In the presence of God, Asaph saw clearly that to which he was being drawn. This is where he began to change. He began to shift from natural thinking to spiritual thinking. The problem was that he had been thinking like a natural man, i.e., within the limits of this life only, considering only the visible things of this earth. Thus, he had gotten himself worked up into a terrible state of frenzy. Now, in the sanctuary, he began to think from God's point of view. He began to understand. He came into the sanctuary and there he began to use spiritual thinking rather than natural thinking.

The unrighteous were running to destruction.

The proud were running towards a great fall

The wicked were ultimately running to damnation.

Once his eyes were opened he stopped running from God and started running to God. In verse 28 he concluded, "it is good for me to draw near to God." He put his trust in God and has declared all his mighty works. Instead of being pulled away from God, he found himself being pulled toward him in a mighty and special way.

He ran from God until he considered what he was running to!

What We Are Running From?

There are many today who find themselves running from one thing or another. They do not carry a sign that announces that they are "running" but they are never-the-less running away.

RUNNING AWAY FROM RESPONSIBILITY: There are many fathers who are literally running away from the responsibility of fatherhood. They have abandoned their children and the courts must track them down and force them to maintain their children. There are others who live in the same house with their families but run away from their wives and families by filling their schedules with "make busy" work to avoid seeing them as much as possible.

RUNNING AWAY FROM PROBLEMS: There are many who are trying to run away from problems by drowning themselves in alcohol or using drugs. In their running these only make new problems for themselves, while the old ones never seem to go away. There will always be problems in life. The question is, what do we do with our problems? Do we run from them? Jesus said in Matthew 11:28, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." No matter how we run we can't out run problems. After a while, just the running itself becomes a problem. It's best to take it to God and leave it there.

RUNNING AWAY FROM THE PAST: Some are struggling to run from their past. At some point they failed miserably and they are attempting to treat that experience as if it did not happen. They do not talk about it, think about it and avoid any situations or persons that will bring it to memory. Yet the bible urges us not to run from our past, but to use it as a testimony to others. In 1 Corinthians 6:11, Paul wrote, "And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." Thus, the saint does not run from the past, but understands it in the context of a life outside of the fullness of the knowledge of God.

RUNNING FROM THEMSELVES: There are some who are running from themselves. They have painted a picture to the world of a man or woman that is perceived in one light but they face the man in the mirror each morning who tells them a different story. They are in a foot race with the shadow of themselves. No matter how fast they run, the shadow seems to keep up with them. No matter where they turn, the shadow of themselves is close by. Shadows of the ego and id aren't diminished until they are surrounded by the brilliant forgiving light of God's love. Shadows only exist if some part of us isn't exposed to the light of God. That's why 1 John 1:7 says, "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." There are no shadows when we walk in the light. There is no need to run from ourselves.

RUNNING FROM GOD: Like Asaph of the 73rd Psalm, there are many who have decided that godliness has its virtue but it is not profitable. Gradually they experiment with the things of the world. They flirt with the ungodly life. They dabble a little here and walk on the border of temptation there. They observe the prosperity, gaiety and fortune of the ungodly and find themselves drawn toward that life. It appears successful. It appears productive. It appears lucrative. In this context, they become like the prophet Jonah who was commanded by God to go in one direction but he chose to do another. Jonah's eventual lesson was the same that boxing champion Joe Louis announced to his opponents, "You can run, but you can't hide!"

What Are you Running To

While there is great virtue in discovering what we are running from, it is more important that we learn where we are running to!

The psalmist Asaph was stricken when he finally understood what the ungodly were running to! While running from God, if he followed their example, he would have been running to the same destination.

If he followed their example their epitaph would be that of Psalm 1:5-6 "Therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous. For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, but the way of the ungodly shall perish."

Asaph said he became drawn to God and God reminded him what the end of the righteous would be!

The righteous are running to receive their eternal reward in glory!

The righteous are running to achieve the victory over sin!

The righteous are running to acquire a crown of life!

Consider the grandmother and grandson that came to the train station to catch a southbound train. It had been some time since the grandmother had been home but she wanted to see the old stomping ground, one more time. Inside the station the trains were all pointed in the same direction, but were sitting on different tracks. The boy, excited with the beauty of one of the trains begged his grandmother to get on the shiny train, with an upstairs view. He cried when she refused. As that train pulled off there was a second train which was not as shiny and it had no upstairs. The boy begged to board that train. It was going in the same direction. The grandmother refused. When it pulled off, all that was left was a very short train with one engine and a passenger car. It was not pretty to look it but was obviously steady. The grandmother took her seat as the boy looked in amazement. "What's different about this train?" He asked. "It's going in the same direction as the others?" The grandmother answered, "All of the trains leave here going in the right direction, but up the ways a bit the tracks will split off in different ways. I'm trying to get home. The train doesn't have to be pretty! The train doesn't have to be shiny! The train doesn't have to be fancy, but the train has to be on the right track!"

If we put our hands in God's hands, we're on the right track!

If we trust in God and lean not to our own understanding, we're on the right track!

If we give God praise and thanks for all his mighty works, we're on the right track!

I don't know about you, but I'm glad to know that this train called our pilgrim's journey is on the right track.

The good thing about this journey is that the ticket has already been paid.

Jesus, paid my ticket, out on Calvary's hill!

When Jesus died on an old rugged cross he put the ticket in our hand!

When he arose early Sunday morning, he punched it paid in full!

I got my ticket!

And I'm on my way!

I'm on the right track!

Cross Words

(The Seven Sayings of Christ on The Cross)

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 5, 1998

SCRIPTURE:"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Luke 23:34; "Truly, I say to you, today you will be with me in Paradise" Luke 23:43; "Father, into thy hands, I commit my spirit." Luke 23:46;"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Matthew 27:46; "I thirst" John 19:28 "He said to his mother, "Woman, behold thy son!" Then he said to the disciple, "Behold thy mother!John 19:26-27; "It is finished" John 19:30

Introduction

Have you ever felt like you were being nailed to the cross? If so, what was your response? What did you say to people? What words did you utter? Whatever we say during such times are our "cross words." They comprise our initial response to circumstance of the moment. In moments of frustration sometimes the things we say are completely out of character. Sometimes our cross words come straight from the bottom of hell. There are times when we think and say ungodly things about our condition and those who work against us. On the other hand they are those of us who are not intimidated by the frustrations of the moment. We look beyond the despair of the night into the joys of the morning. Our "cross words" are filled with hope, anticipation and victory.

The best example of a person using "cross words" is Jesus Christ himself. When nailed to the cross, with the world frowning on him, friends doubting him and followers deserting him, he uttered seven last sayings while on the cross. No single book of the bible contains all seven of the sayings. There are three in John, three in Luke and there is one in Matthew. The book of Mark does not mention any of the last sayings. Combined, they are generally called the Seven Last Sayings or "words" of Christ from the Cross. They are his cross words.

In them, Christ demonstrated his empathy, sympathy, humanity and divinity. Through them he gave us one final example to follow. He showed us the way to happiness and abundant living. He showed us the proper attitudes to life, God and each other. He showed us how to deal with persecutors, sickness and critics. Through the last seven words, his "cross words," he gives us an example of how to respond when we are on the cross.

As Christians, we are encouraged by these cross words because they remind us that the God we serve knows us and understands our feelings. His cross words now become our cross words as we look to Jesus the author and finisher of our faith.

Why hast thou forsake me?

Jesus showed empathy for our feelings when we are on the cross. The words, "Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? That is to say, My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?" ring in our ears. Yet they speak to our emotional state when we are on the cross. They address the full range of our emotions at that moment. By shifting the emphasis, we see how that is clear.

"My God" suggests that even in our suffering we know God is still real and is personal and concerned about us. Even in our suffering we still proclaim, "In thee on Lord do I put my trust!"

"Why" raises the question of humanity. On the cross the humanity of Christ raised the question of "why," while the divinity of Christ kept silent. Much as the humanity of believers often prompts them to ask why is there so much pain? Yet the spiritual person inside already knows the answer. It is according to the will of God.

"Thou" points to a believer's raised expectation of God. We expect to be forsaken by enemies, critics and those who see our bad side alone. We expect nay sayers and back stabbers. We even expect some of our family members to abandon us from time to time, but sometimes the misery of the moment makes us feel that even God has abandoned us. We soon learn that he has not forsaken us, he has promised to be with us always, even until the end of the earth.

"Me" demonstrates what we know to be the plight of the ungodly. We fully expect that the ungodly will endure hard times and difficulties. We expect them to meet death. We expect them to be criticized, ostracized and nailed to crosses, but why "Me?"

We who are the faithful often question whether it is practical for us to serve God and still be exposed to hardships as well. However, the question should not be "why me?" but "why not me?" If sacrifice and suffering as well as victory and triumph are the marks of a true Christian, then why not me? If there can be no gain without pain, then why not me? If there is no crown without a cross, then why not me?

Woman Behold Your Son

Jesus showed concern for his mother. Perhaps the most humiliating experience of any son is to be stripped naked before his mother. When boys are little, their mothers bathe them playfully in tubs. Yet when they start to mature they cover themselves, hide behind shower curtains and closed doors. Sometimes mothers respond, "You don't have anything that I haven't seen before!" In a more adult way, every man wants his mother to see him in his best light. It is humiliating to have our worst side shown to our mothers. Yet Christ, stripped completely naked and dying was exposed to the world and his mother. He expressed concern for her. She and Joseph knew exactly who he was. Though he had three brothers and sisters, none of them had really known, all through their childhood and young adult lives, who he really was. They simply remember him as their play partner, but not as the Son of God. However, Mary knew. What would she think about the death of her son? Jesus turned to John and urged him to be a comfort and support for her because, unlike his brothers, John understood who Jesus was. Even though John's mother was standing close by, Jesus told John "Behold your mother!" Mothers feel the agony and pain of sons and daughters. Mothers feel. Mothers empathize. Mothers love their daughters! Mothers love their sons! But yet on the cross, Jesus demonstrated another great truth, Jesus loves mothers!

I thirst

Jesus demonstrated "arranged suffering." On the cross Jesus spoke the words, "I thirst." He seemed to complain about a small matter of thirst when he had not complained about any other discomfort. They falsely accused him but he did not complain. He had to drag a cross through the streets of Jerusalem but he did not complain. They nailed his hands without a complaint from him. They nailed his feet ...still no complaint. Yet after enduring all of that, he seems to complain about being thirsty. Why?

Throughout his ministry Jesus sought to fulfill scripture. From the very day that he announced his ministry, his acts fulfilled scripture. He rode into Jerusalem on a donkey, according to scripture. He was falsely accused according to scripture. He kept quiet through his turmoil, according to scripture. He was crucified according to scripture. Yet there was another scripture which had not been fulfilled. It had been prophesied that he would be given vinegar on the cross. It had not been done..so he asked for something to drink, knowing that a few seconds after he would die anyway. It indicated that he arranged his suffering to fulfill all of the demands of God.

Believers today are familiar with arranged suffering. There are many parents today are suffering financially to help their children finish their education. Some are suffering in their health because they neglected themselves to care for others. The father that works three jobs to pay college tuition for a son suffers by arrangement. He asked for it!

Jesus only spoke because it was necessary to the arrangement. Today, those who feel the stings of life agree with the song writer, "I've had some good days. I've had some hills to climb...but when I think things over, all of my good days outweigh my bad days, so I won't complain!"

Forgive them

Christ forgave our ignorance while on the cross. In our ignorance we have failed to respond as we should. Often we have wasted many years chasing dreams without means just beyond measure. Our pursuit of life has been so vigorous that often we have ignored the things of God. Prayer, worship, Holy Living, many of these things have been placed on the back burner of life as we ignorantly pursue what appears to be important at the moment. As Charles Spurgeon notes, on the cross Christ prayed an "indistinctive" prayer. In asking God to forgive them he expanded his plea for mercy beyond those who placed him on the cross, the liars at his trial, the temple guards and even the soldiers who nailed him to the cross. "Them" is all of those who have lived ignorant of God's law and of his power to give new and abundant life. When he said father forgive "them" he included "us" in all of our ignorance today, for we know not what we do.

In Paradise

Christ rewards our faith. This saying of Christ is in response to the faith, even though in a dying hour, of the thief on the cross. There were two thieves on the cross. John Piper notes that of the sinners on the cross represented one of two attitudes we can assume about God: 1) We can rail against God and say, "If you are such a great and powerful and loving God, who allowed my condition?" 2) Or we can acknowledge that we are sinners and don't deserve any good thing, and cry out for mercy and help in our time of desperation.

Most of us have all these things in common with these two thieves: there has been, is, or will be suffering in our lives. And none of us will be able to say, "I do not deserve this."All of us want to be saved from death one way or the other. While both are the same in sin, they are not the same in their response to Christ. One is worldly, with no spirit of remorse and still thinks only of himself. The other is remorseful and asks for mercy. Those who come to Christ in remorse and faith, receive the same immortal words, "this day...paradise!"

Into thy hands

On the cross Jesus placed his life in God's hands. On the cross Jesus gave up the ghost. Father, 'into Thy hands I commend My spirit' shows that He gave up His life when He wanted to and how He wanted to. No one took His life from Him; He gave it up when His work was finished. Morever, it shows that he placed his life in God's hand. Even today, believers must put their hands in God's hand. There is no safer walk than the walk we make when we put our hands in God's hand. When we are on the cross we should put our hands in God's hands. No wonder the song writer cries out, "Precious Lord take my hand, lead me on let me stand, I am tired, I am weak, I am worn!"

When the weight of life's miseries nails us firmly to the cross we should respond in the words of the hymn, "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know, if thou withdraw thyself from me, oh whether shall I go!"

It is finished

Christ completes our salvation. The suffering of Christ on the cross completed the necessary suffering and death prescribed by the law for sin. When Christ said, “it is finished” he did not refer to himself. Notice, he did not say, “I am finished!” He said, “It” is finished. The great work of atonement that he began was finished on the cross. When Jesus cried out with a loud voice, John 19:30 tells us what He said: “it is finished”, which is one word in the Greek (tetelestai - “paid in full”) this is the cry of a winner, because Jesus had paid in full the debt of sin we owed, and had finished the eternal purpose of the cross .

It is finished means it is done.

It is finished means the way has been paved.

It is finished means those who are sick can be healed,

It is finished means those who have sinned can be forgiven!

It is finished means those who are dispirited can be revived!

It is finished means those who have lost hope can have hope restored!

On Calvary there was a cross, but God had a Word for that cross. Not just any word, for John said “In the beginning was the Word. And the Word was with God and the Word was God!

Every now and then even the best saints feel like they are on the cross, but don’t worry. Just like there was a Word for that cross on Calvary, if you stick with the Lord, there is a word for every cross we bear!

If your cross has brought you defeat, God’s got a word, because he can take defeat and turn it into victory!

If your cross has brought you abowed down head, God’s got aword, for I heard the Word of God declare, “Lift up your heads oh ye gates, and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors and the king of glory shall come in!

If your cross is sadness, God’s got a word, he can take you sadness and give you gladness!

If your cross is doubt, God’s got a word, he can take your doubt and give you assurance!

If your cross is bondage, God’s got a word, he can take your bondage and give you freedom!

For every cross, God’s got a word!

For every tomb, God’s also got a word!

The world may declare, “put him down!” But for every “put down” God’s got a word!

It’s the same word he declared early that Sunday morning

“Wake up! Sit up! Get up! Step up!”

I’m so glad, that for every cross, God’s got a word!

Get The Story Straight

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 12, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me. Now when they were going, behold, some of the watch came into the city, and showed unto the chief priests all the things that were done. And when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers, Saying, Say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept. And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you. So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day. Matthew 28:10-15

Introduction

Have you ever known people who always manage to get their facts twisted? Somehow, despite their best efforts they never seem to come out right! Those are the kind of people that have serious problems sticking to what they know. If they describe an event, they feel compelled to add a little flavor and color to it to make it interesting. Sometimes they add a few details. Often they leave out many. When they finish with even a very simple account of an event, it has become very complex. These kinds of people have problems, getting the story straight.

While some make mistakes and get the story wrong, there are others who deliberately twist the story. These persons intentionally begin "misinformation" campaigns to deceive others The culprit behind misinformation campaigns is Satan. He inspires people to intentionally lie to achieve what he describes as a higher, loftier goal.

In our personal lives, Satan does the same. He mounts a massive misinformation campaign against every believer. His job is to lower our self esteem, kill our spirit, dampen our enthusiasm and thwart our every effort at personal achievement. He begins with us personally and then goes to our friends and associates. The end result is we begin to believe what we hear. When that happens, he has succeeded in side tracking another Saint from the godly path.

At Easter time it is important for every believer to get the story straight. It's important for us to make sure that everyone knows what the Easter celebration is all about. Ben Haden tells the amusing story of a group of four year olds who were gathered in a Sunday school class in Chattanooga. The teacher looked at the class and asked this question: “Does anyone know what today is?” A little four-year-old girl held up her hand and said,” Yes, today is Palm Sunday.” The teacher exclaimed, “That’s fantastic, that’s wonderful. Now does anyone know what next Sunday is?” The same little girl held up her hand and said, “Yes, next Sunday is Easter Sunday.” Once again the teacher said, “That’s fantastic. Now, does anyone know what makes next Sunday Easter?” The same little girl responded and said, “Yes, next Sunday is Easter because Jesus rose from the grave” and before the teacher could congratulate her, she kept on talking and said, “but if he sees his shadow — he has to go back in for seven weeks.”

As Christians, we know that the story of the Easter celebration has nothing to do with bunny rabbits and eggs, even though those are great symbols of fertility and new life. The Easter story isn’t about new clothes and Easter parades either, although they represent the newness and freshness of the season. The real story of Easter is about Jesus. It’s about his death, burial and resurrection. That’s all it’s about. It’s up to us to help get the story straight!

Exposition

This text focuses on the effort of the Jewish religious leaders to spread a false story about the resurrection of Christ.

After his death, Christ was buried in Joseph’s new tomb, where he stayed for three days as he prophesied. However, on the first day of the week he arose from the dead and walked from the tomb despite the fact that a huge stone blocked the doorway. The absence of his body from the tomb sent shock waves throughout the religious leadership. It was their greatest fear, that another person would be seen living after having been reported dead.

The death of Lazarus and his resurrection caused them many problems. Jesus raised him from the dead and they knew they would only increase his followers. They were so disturbed that they attempted to kill Lazarus again, to stop the ground swell of support Jesus was receiving. A little girl had been raised too. That sparked great interest. They took great pains that Jesus’ followers would not be encouraged by the disappearance of his body and lay claim to his own resurrection of the dead.

They insisted that the large stone that would block the doorway of the tomb would bear the official Roman seal to keep anyone from removing his body and claiming that he had risen. In addition, for the course of the three days that he predicted they insisted upon guards for the tomb. It must have seemed ridiculous to the soldiers. With all of their other duties to perform they were being called upon to guard a tomb from people who were so frightened that they hid in crowds and stayed back a distance to avoid association. It must have been humorous to them to stand watch over a tomb, cut from a rock, protected by a rock and sealed with the Roman official seal. Yet, this was their task.

When an angel appeared and rolled the stone away, the soldiers were amazed. When they reported what they saw to the religious leaders they were given huge amounts of money to tell the story another way. It had to appear that the disciples had stolen the body. They could conjure any reasonable fabrication if necessary, but they were not to tell the truth.

There was a large amount of money given to the soldiers for advancing that which they knew to be a lie. The priests promised to protect them from the sword of Pilate because their lives would be in danger. They did not consider that while they had influence with Pilate, their bad deed would get no where before the sword of God's justice.

They gave them a story to tell but it was one that was riddled with inconsistencies. Had the soldiers been all asleep, they could not have known what passed. If any had been awake, they would have roused the others and prevented the removal; and certainly if they had been asleep, they never would have dared to confess it; while the Jewish rulers would have been the first to call for their punishment. Again, had there been any truth in the report, the rulers would have prosecuted the apostles with severity for it. The whole account shows that the story was entirely false. And we must not charge such things to the weakness of the understanding, but to the wickedness of the heart. God left them to expose their own course. The great argument to prove Christ to be the Son of God, is his resurrection; and none could have more convincing proofs of the truth of that than these soldiers; yet they took bribes to hinder others from believing.

The scribes and pharisees wanted a story told but they didn't want it told straight! What they tried to hide a host of witnesses would not conceal. Jesus was alive! He had been seen by many! Despite the lies that are being told about that resurrection morning, the story has been told straight and the world now knows who is truly King of Kings and Lord of Lords!

Twisted Stories

Today there are millions of people who are frustrated because they are the victims of twisted stories told on them in their neighborhoods, by jealous lovers, family members and even friends. Whatever the reason these stories are told, they have the net effect of destroying individual morale and optimism. Most of us readily see how twisted stories can destroy our lives, but on a spiritual level, Satan has some twisted stories that he disseminates on every believer. They have the net effect of destroying a believer's hope and faith in God.

SATAN TELLS TROUBLED BELIEVERS THAT GOD HAS FORSAKEN THEM. Believers who are experiencing difficulties are often frustrated. As each attempt to side step a problem leads to another problem, Satan starts to tell the story. The truth of the matter is that at the moment we are enduring a difficult time. We are having a set back. We are not moving at the pace that we desire. However, Satan takes those known facts and twists them to mean that God has forsaken us. In our moment of weakness he whispers in our ear that our struggle is over! We are told repeatedly that we have failed. There is no hope! However, we should get the story straight!

While it is true that we may be in a slump, it is not true that we are defeated! We have not been forsaken or left alone for Jesus promised us in Matthew 28, "And Lo I'll be with you alway, even until the end of the earth."

EVERY WEAK BELIEVER IS TOLD HE IS WITHOUT STRENGTH: There are times when even the most devout believer is weak. In times of stress, frustration and doubt, believers, because they are human, can get weak. Jesus had such a period when he was in the wilderness forty days and nights. He was physically and mentally exhausted. It was at this time that Satan came to him with a twisted story of self satisfaction and vain glory. It is easy to believe that we are failures if we listen to the story that is told. It is repeated to us so often that some have begun to believe that story themselves. They have simply given up trying. However, every believer is reminded to get the story straight. It is true that we often experience moments of weakness but we are not without a source of strength. The Word of God reminds us that "they that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up on wings as eagles, they shall run and not get weary, walk and not faint!" Paul reminds us that even in my weakness, I am strong!

EVERY SINNER IS TOLD HE IS BEYOND SALVATION: All men have sinned and fallen short of God's standards! That is an eternal truth. Satan adds a special twist to that story. He convinces every sinner that he is beyond salvation. A person who has been outside of the ark of safety for a long time is told that all is lost. Drunkards, gamblers, thieves, adulterers have been convinced that they have destroyed themselves with God and will forever be marked as "cons." Yet, we only have to look at the woman at the well to learn that what we are hearing is only part of the story. Jesus met this woman who had five husbands and lived in adultery. It is true that she had a messed up life. However to get the story straight, we must look at what happened after she met Jesus, she ran through the city shouting "come see a man who told me all I've ever done." There is no sinner who is willing to repent and turn to God who cannot be forgiven. If any person believes on Jesus in his or her heart and confesses him openly, Romans 10:9 says, "Thou shalt be saved!"

Get the story straight!

Finally brothers and sisters, we must consider that no matter how Satan tries to turn things around, we must help the world get the story straight!

When the story is straight those who are dispirited will be encouraged. The disciples were all completely discouraged after the crucifixion. They hid themselves like criminals and stayed away from the public view. But when they heard the word, they were revived and rejuvenated.

When we get the story straight, we make sure that the world knows the true meaning of that resurrection morning.

It's not about Easter bunnies, because Easter bunnies can't raise a bowed down head! We got to get the story straight!

It's not about brightly colored eggs, because dyed eggs can't wipe tears from my eyes! We got to get the story straight!

It's not about brand new clothes, because new clothes can make me look good on the outside, but they can't save my soul! We got to get the story straight!

It's important to get the story straight because Satan can make you feel that you are on the losing side! But when we get the story straight, we understand that we serve a God that has guaranteed us that we'll be on the winning side

Can't you hear Paul saying, in Romans 8:37, "Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."

Somebody saw you going through a hard time the other day as a tear fell from your eye. Tell them to wait before they tell the story, because David said, "weeping endureth but a night, but joy cometh in the morning!"

Somebody saw you wrestling with troubles and problems, tell them to wait before they run to the telephone, for I heard the Psalmist say , "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me" No wonder the Song Writer wrote, "I'm so glad that trouble don't last always!"

Somebody saw your enemies surrounding you and thought you were down for good, but I heard God tell David, "Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool."

When we get the story straight we begin to remember that we serve a God who can take our:

MISFORTUNES and turn them into grand opportunities; MINUTES OF PAIN and turn them into hours of joy;

DAY OF AGONY and turn it into years of ecstasy; WEEPING EYES and turn them into warm smiles

SADNESS and turn it into gladness; SET BACKS and turn them into step ups!

When we tell the story, we've got to be sure we tell the story straight!

We've got to tell the world that nearly 2,000 years ago that Jesus, the Lamb of God, gave his life that we might have a chance to everlasting life!

When we tell the story, we must tell the world that he carried an old rugged cross up Golgotha's hill!

But even before the story was over somebody got it wrong! They started running through the city saying, he saved others but he can't save himself! They couldn't wait to get it straight!

If they had waited, they would have seen him die!

If they had waited, they would have seen him buried!

If they had waited, they would have seen them roll the stone in front of the tomb!

If they had waited, they would have been able to get the story straight!

Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Those who want to pronounce your death burial tell them wait, God is not through with me yet!

When God gets through with me!

When God gets through we me ...

I shall come forth as pure gold!

Hinges of Gold

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 22, 1998

SCRIPTURE: "And Solomon made all the vessels that pertained unto the house of the LORD: the altar of gold, and the table of gold, whereupon the show bread was, And the candlesticks of pure gold, five on the right side, and five on the left, before the oracle, with the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs of gold, And the bowls, and the snuffers, and the basins, and the spoons, and the censers of pure gold; and the hinges of gold, both for the doors of the inner house, the most holy place, and for the doors of the house, to wit, of the temple." 1 Kings 7:48-50

Introduction

What determines the quality of our worship experience? Much of what we gain from any worship experience is dependent upon a number of factors, including what we expect from the experience, what we bring into the experience and how we feel about the experience. Any person who worships comes to meet God. Whether that happens or not is determined at the door.

Sometimes what's said or done at the door makes the difference. Consider the day all of the barnyard animals received an invitation to attend a great dinner at the barn. Everyone was especially honored to be invited to a dinner, so each made special preparations to look their best, come early and find a good seat. It seemed that all of the animals of the farm were present. When the two young fryers got their invitation they were excited like the other animals. They envisioned a fine supper of chicken feed, bread crumbs and corn. The hogs were excited too, they knew there would be plenty of slop. The cows were sure there would be plenty of hay. Each was elegantly dressed and ready for the great dinner. As they entered the barn door each was greeted by ushers who wore elegant tuxedos and gowns. They were shown to their respective troughs, perches and stalls. As the young chickens approached the barn door two foxes greeted them warmly, "Welcome!" they said, "We've been waiting for you, we can't get started without you!" The two chickens answered with surprise, "Really?" With a devilish glint in their eye while licking their chops the foxes responded, "What's a chicken dinner without the main course, you are the guest of honor!" In terror the young chickens promptly flew the coop, content that it was better to dine alone on chicken feed than to be in the company of those who wanted to eat them for dinner!

Whether we enjoy the worship experience or not hinges upon whether we are made to feel like a guest of honor at the banquet of God, rather than the main course.When we are greeted with a smile we feel the warmth of God. The stage is set. The atmosphere is perfect. We are ready to meet God.

As Christians, we understand the importance of meeting God. Whether we actually meet God hinges on our faith. It also hinges on our belief and it hinges on the atmosphere that exists both in our hearts and in the place. Those who help create that atmosphere are precious. They are hinges of gold!

Exposition

This text focuses on how the temple of Solomon symbolized the presence of God and every aspect of its construction, even its doors and hinges revealed truths about the majesty of God.

The Temple of Solomon was grand, expensive and awe inspiring. The purpose of Solomon's temple was different from our understanding of a temple in modern times. Today, a temple is perceived as a place of worship. It is a place where men and women gather to sing praises to God, pray and seek a personal experience with God. No matter how grand a temple is built in modern times, believers expect to use the temple, in part for their own private worship and meditation.

However, in Solomon's time the temple was perceived differently. The temple was not perceived as a place to worship God, but it was a place where God actually lived. The temple was to be God's house. It was not a place where the people were expected to assemble to worship. It did not have seats, balconies and special seating areas. In fact, it had no seating accommodations at all. It was God's house, plain and simple. If that was Solomon's intent, then the house would have had to be much bigger. It was just over 100 feet long. Although it was grand, beautiful and expensive it could not have attempted to seat the thousands that would come each year to share in annual religious celebrations and rites. It was obviously a house for God.

The meaning of the Temple was the same as that of the ark it was constructed to enshrine: a symbol of God's presence in the midst of His people (Ex. 25:21-22). Because it was God's house, the worshipers could not enter the holy place, reserved only for priests and other worship leaders, much less the holiest place (holy of holies) to be entered by the high priest only once a year (Lev. 16). The worshipers could gather for prayer and sacrifice in the Temple courtyard(s) where they could sing psalms as they saw their offerings presented to Yahweh on His great altar.

Solomon paid attention to every detail of the construction. He hired the best artists and craftsmen who worked for years to create the beautiful temple that was constructed from huge stones carved out of the side of a mountain, transported to Jerusalem and fitted in place without the sound of a hammer. No detail was overlooked even to the construction of its doors and hinges upon which they hung.

The double doors of the inner sanctuary and the nave were carved and inlaid of finest wood and gold (1 Kings 6:31-35).

The doors served the purpose of letting the priests into God's holy place and keeping the people out. Whether the giant doors served their purpose depended heavily upon the hinges, which Solomon commanded to be made of gold. Even though they would ultimately be almost invisible in he scheme of the entire temple, the hinges were important to Solomon. Once the beauty of the sanctuary in all of its glory was seen, the hinges would disappear, and at the very least appear insignificant. Yet, Solomon demands that even the hinges for both the inner door, which leads to God's presence and the outer door where the people had assembled to worship, both sets of doors must have hinges of gold.
