John saw a different Tabernacle or dwelling. He saw God finally dwelling with his people in a way that he would be their God and they would be his people. What John saw was a picture of the great day when God himself comes to dwell among men in a mighty and powerful way that will bring joy without end!

When God Moved In

God has tried many ways to dwell with mankind. In each instance we have either moved away from him or shut him out completely.

IN THE GARDEN: In the Garden of Eden God dwelt with Adam and Eve in perfect harmony. It was a heavenly arrangement in which Adam and Eve had everything they could imagine at their disposal. God dwelled with them until a roommate from hell moved in, in the person of Satan himself. Satan came between the lovely arrangement between God and mankind and it resulted in man being put out of the garden. In a similar way many of us have enjoyed heavenly arrangements until we became influenced by third parties that came between us and God. Whether it was a roommate from hell or a hellish influence like the pursuit of money, power or glory, it separated us from God. Outside of the garden Adam and Eve found themselves living a decent life but they were never again as close to God as they were in the Garden.

The remainder of the bible consists of a description of God's efforts to make it possible for man and God to live together once again.

IN THE TABERNACLE: The tent God ordered Moses to build was called a tabernacle. Exodus 40:33-35 says when the Tabernacle was completed God's presence entered the tent and stayed there. God's tent was at the center of the camp of nearly a million Israelites. His tent was at the center of all of their movements. In this tent was the 10 commandments, the Ark of the Covenant that was covered by the Mercy seat, represented along with other instruments represented the presence of God. It was holy ground and reminded the people that as long as God was the center of their actions he would dwell with them. Even in our history, the "tabernacle" has been the century of the life of the Black community. The old churches were fashioned after that tent tabernacle, with rails that separated the people from the holy places, anointed "communion" tables that were considered sacred and special places where we meet God and sanctuaries in which we respected enough to watch our speech, put on our best attire and be at our best behavior because we were in the place we expected to encounter the presence of God.

God promised to dwell with Israel only if the people kept his covenant to the letter. They often failed and when they did, God moved out and left them alone. Many of us have learned painfully what it is like to have God to move out on us. Like Samson who lost his great strength when God left him, we too know the feeling of defeat that comes when God moves out. He moves out when we bring another roommate in. He moves out when we fail to keep our word to him, neglect the worship, withhold our offerings and generally approach him with a very relaxed attitude.

IN THE TEMPLE: From the time of the wilderness journey until they reached the Promised Land God moved from tent to tent with no permanent place, until Solomon built the temple. The temple was a permanent version of the tabernacle. It had the same layout and design, the same furniture and the same function. Like the Tabernacle, when the temple was dedicated the presence of the Lord entered into it. Yet, even in all of its splendor the temple was a place where God lived, but not a place where he dwelled with man; there were no seats for men to sit and all worshippers had to stand outdoors. Even with such a great temple the people continued to sin causing God to send prophets to warn them that he planned to move out and leave them to their own evil devices. When God moved out, he took the fence of protection he had built around them away. The Assyrians destroyed the people from the North and the Babylonians destroyed them from South. When God stopped dwelling with them, everything they enjoyed crumbled around them.

It is the same today. If God leaves us our whole world would crumble. The semblance of prosperity we enjoy, the reasonable health that favors us and the good fortune that seems to smile on us from time to time will all crumble around us without if God does not dwell with us.

IN THE BODY OF HIS SON: The temple or tabernacle built by Solomon was destroyed, but Herod tried to build it back. It looked the same but the presence of God never re-entered that building as in the past. God did a remarkable thing by coming to dwell with men in body of his son. John 1:1 says the "Word was God," and in verse 14 we are told that this "Word became flesh, and dwelt among us." This reference to the coming of Christ uses a rare and unique word when it says that He "dwelt among us." It is the specific word that means to dwell in a tent. The New Testament portrays Jesus as the embodiment of the spiritual tabernacle; God living among men. Through His death on the cross Jesus offered a sacrifice that really would allow man and God to be reconciled. In His death the veil covering of the most holy place in the physical temple was torn apart, Matthew 27:51 For this reason we no longer approach God in a physical tent or temple, but through the temple of the body of Jesus Christ. God tried to dwell with us in the body of his Son but the world rejected him and crucified him.

IN INDIVIDUAL CHRISTIANS: In a tent, in a temple or even the in the body of his own son, the people have pushed God always. God has gone one step further. Now he attempts to dwell with men by making each individual a sanctuary. In essence, our bodies are viewed as the "temples" of the Holy Ghost. In essence we don't come to the tabernacle we "are" the "New Tabernacle" wherever we go. Because wherever we go our bodies are living temples of the Holy Ghost. That's why Christians are careful about where they go and the kinds of activities in which they participate because where they go, the church goes. God dwells with his people in the church, which is the spiritual body of Christ.

Behold the Tabernacle of God

Finally, brothers and sisters we rejoice in the knowledge that John gives, that when the new Jerusalem comes the angel will declare, "Behold the Tabernacle of God is with men!"

God tried dwelling with Adam and Eve in the Garden and they pushed him out and he put them out.

God tried dwelling with Israel in a tent and the people pushed him away.

God tried dwelling with his people in Solomon's temple and the people would not come near!

God tried to dwell with us in the person of his own, soul and the people crucified him.

God has tried dwelling with many of us on a personal basis, but we have turned out to be a roommate from hell.

But John saw a day coming when God would finally work things out.

It would be a day when the people of God would be true sanctuaries and worthy vessels.

That will be the day when we will have come full circle from Garden of End to the tree of life and the river flowing from the throne of grace.

Behold the Tabernacle of God, people who have come through the storm and the rain!

Behold the Tabernacle of God, people the mountains and valleys!

Behold the Tabernacle of God, people who have seen the lighting flash and heard the thunder roll and felt sins breakers dashing against their souls!

Behold the Tabernacle of God, people who been through the fire and been through the flood, but have come forth as pure gold!

Behold the Tabernacle of God, people of are not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ and tell everybody every where they go about the goodness of the Lord!

Behold the Tabernacle of God; they have been washed in the blood of the lamb!

Who is the lamb?

His name is Jesus!

The Lamb of God, who died out on Calvary..

But early Sunday morning he arose with all power in his hands!

Behold a "New Tabernacle" that will dwell with God through all eternity!

The Suit Won't Make You Fly

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE: Do ye look on things after the outward appearance? If any man trust to himself that he is Christ's, let him of himself think this again. 2 Corinthians 10:7

Introduction

Is it possible to put on a costume and magically assume the qualities it represents? During this season of the year there will be many families that will purchase costumes for their children to participate in one of many fall festivals. Wearing the costumes, for a few hours, youth pretend to be someone or something else. There will be many little devils walking the streets in a few days as well as a few angels. Wearing costumes is a fun pastime that we enjoy all year round. Often children dress up like parents. Actors on the stage and screen often wear costumes too. There is something fascinating about putting on your favorite costume and becoming something that we are not.

While the fall is costume time, there are many who wear costumes as a part of their everyday life. The staff at Burger King and McDonalds wear costumes. Doctors, nurses and aides wear costumes. Soldiers wear costumes. The bus driver wears a costume as well as the school crossing guard. Everyone, it seems has a costume.

Little children are often confused about costumes. They sometimes believe that it's the costume that makes the person. So anyone who wears a chef's hat is a cook and anyone who wears the same brand of shoe as Knobe Bryant of Shaq is guaranteed to become a famous basketball player. We associate many of our heroes with their costumes, including great wrestlers such as the Hollywood Hulk Hogan, the Rock and Sting. We associate the costume with person and pretty soon the costume itself takes on a life of its own as we attribute the inanimate little piece of cloth with supernatural powers.

It calls to mind in the early years of the "Superman" television show how many children bought Superman costumes thinking the costume would make them fly. In 1953, the children who saw Superman fly actually began jumping out of windows themselves trying to fly. There was a national panic as children across the nation were not aware of movie special effects. They saw Clark Kent run for a phone booth and then change into a red and blue suit with an "S" on his chest. Once he was wearing the costume Clark Kent seemed to become Superman. The concluded that it was the suit that made Superman fly.

Even the TV show didn't go that far. It wasn't the costume that made superman fly, but where he was from, Krypton. He could fly with or without the costume. There was an unseen force that kept him in air, leaping tall buildings with a single bound, running faster than a speeding bullet and stronger than a locomotive. It certainly wasn't the suit.

A soldier wears a uniform, but is it the uniform that makes him a soldier?

A doctor often wears a surgical gown and mask, but is it the gown and mask that make him a doctor?

A lawyer wears a suit and tie and carries a brief case, but is it the suit, tie and briefcase that make him an attorney?

It's the training and discipline that makes the soldier. It's the years of study and internship that makes the doctor.

It's thorough knowledge of the law and debate that makes the lawyer. It's not the clothes they wear,

Just as the preacher could preach without his robe, a choir member can sing without a robe and an usher can greet people without a uniform. We can even attend church without wearing "church clothes." Remember them? That was the time when we wore church shoes, church dress, and our "Sunday-go-to-meeting" clothes. Somehow we felt that these special clothes and shoes made us special, at least for an hour or two on Sunday morning.

As Christians, we know that while we may enjoy dressing up for worship or for church activities, there is no salvation in what we wear. Man sees our outward appearance, but God sees our heart. There is nothing wrong with looking well and dressing well for the pleasure of others, but what is more important is that God is pleased with what he sees. Our real power is not from the suits of clothing that we wear, but from lives that are clothed in the power of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains the nature of his authority as a witness for Christ.

While Paul established many churches in his three missionary journeys, he regularly had to defend himself with believers in Corinth. In Corinth there were those who were highly critical of him because he lacked the appearance of an Apostle. There were others among the Corinthian church who had the look and feel that the church expected of an apostle. They had the words, the sound, and the personal demeanor. They claimed Christ as theirs in a boastful way that often forgot that rather than owning Christ, they were owned by Christ, empowered by him and controlled through him.

By all standards Paul did not look the part of Apostle. He had a physical malady that may him hard to look upon. He often asked God to remove this "thorn" from his side. His competitors at Corinth wore the right clothes and talked the right talk but did not have the one thing that Paul possessed, the anointing of the Holy Ghost. Paul's critics claimed that he wrote strong and powerful letters (v10) but in present his appearance is horrible and his speech is terse.

In this Paul reminded them a man might appear to be learned in many subjects, but yet not be learned in Christ. He may have a wealth of experience but have no experience at all with Christ. He may be able to look the part and dress the part of a believer but in actuality, not be able to actually live the part from day to day.

Paul's critics boasted of their oratorical skills and other gifts as a way of cornering the market with respect to faith. While they boasted of their abilities, Paul reminded them in verse 7 If any man trust to himself that he is Christ's, even so are we Christ's. In essence he said boast a special claim on the Lord, should remember it is Christ who has a claim on us, not the other way around. We can claim no gift, power, talent or ability aside from the anointing of the Holy Spirit who gives us the ability to do anything. Without God nothing we have succeeds. He is the source.

Answering his critics therefore, Paul lays out a critical truth. Believers should not be overly consumed with appearances. Everyone who looks well, dresses well and speaks well may not necessarily have the spirit of God in them. At the same time, everyone who does not have the same appearance or costume of another cannot be judged as unlearned or incapable. The power is not in the appearance, it is in the anointing that comes from God. Those who have been blessed in this way by God don't need the "suit" to assume their roles, they can function with or without the appearances that society expects.

Costumes Are Deceiving

Often the costumes we wear are deceiving. They allow us to appear to be what we are not.

CHURCH MEMBER COSTUMES: There are many who wear church member costumes. They are complete with everything associated with being a church member. We wear the right clothes and even carry a bible. Before we leave we want to make sure that we have on the right costume. Church dresses, church shoes, and everything make us look good are part of the costume. While there is nothing wrong with dressing nice, every believer should be careful to put on the whole armor of God. Ephesians 6:11 encourages every believer to "Put on the whole amour of God." When a believer is fully dressed, he or she is dressed on both the inside and the outside. The whole amour of God refers to qualities that are not seen with the naked eye. Beginning at verse 18 Paul told the Ephesians not to forget truth, righteousness, preparation of the Gospel of peace, faith and salvation. At verse 18 he tacked on one final aspect of the believer's costume, which is prayer. There are many who put all of their emphasis on the costume, without thinking about what's beneath the costume.

A Christian's costume is not seen with the naked eye. He or she has a power source that empowers and lifts spirits, forgets and strengthens in times of weakness.

What makes a believer strong is not whether or not he wears designer clothes but whether or not he begins each day prayed up, determined to walk by faith, doing the right things and resist evil. What makes her powerful is the anointing of the Lord upon her life as she walks out the door, regardless to the value of her clothing. The Power is not in what the world sees after you walk out your door, but what went on inside you, before you walked out!

Don't look to dress like a Christian, be a Christian. It's icing on the cake when you can look good on the inside and the outside at the same time. That's when you know that it wasn't the suit of clothes you wore that brought your blessings but the Grace of God.

When a believer overcomes an obstacle, it wasn't because of the suit; it was because of the power of God.

When a believer triumphs in the midst of adversity, it's not because of the suit he wears on Sunday, it's because the hand of God has lifted him from his trouble.

When a believer receives a promotion on the job, a business opportunity, it's not because of what they know, where they graduated from college or their business contacts; that's what the world sees, they know that the real secret of their success lies in the power of God.

The power is not in the costume, but in a God who anoints us daily for his service.

The suit won't make you fly!

SCHOOL CLOTHES: Most students have what we call "school clothes." The emphasis upon wearing designer clothing to school is so high that many school systems around the nation have tried to switch to school uniforms as a way of shifting the emphasis away from clothing. That fell through when the national designers started designing school uniforms. Somehow, we get the notion early that what we wear has something to do with what's on the inside, especially as it relates to price.

Students spend more time selecting and their clothes than they do studying as if the clothing will make the difference between a passing grade and failing grade.

If there could be a connection between dressing well and grades, then most of the average high school would be filled with honor students

Too many students worry about the hair on their heads without worrying about what's in their heads. A weave may help you look good, but it won't help you pass your test.

Too many youth worry about whether they have shoes endorsed by Jordan and or whether they have the NIKE brand, without considering that simply wearing the shoes won't make them better basketball players or students.

Many men wear the pants, which is the man's costume, but it's the women in their houses that are really shouldering the man's responsibility. It's not the pants that makes a man a man, but his ability to assume responsibility for himself and his family.

It doesn't matter whether the brand that hangs from the suit is FUBU or Versache if the person who is wearing the brand is brainless, undisciplined and immoral.

When we learn that truth then we learn that "the suit won't make you fly!"

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that any person who dresses well but does not know the Lord is "all dressed up with no place to go!"

The whole purpose for getting dressed up is because you are preparing to go somewhere!

When a believer dresses up he spends most of his time looking in the mirror. Not the mirror on the wall but the mirror of God's word.

The man who wants to show off for the world keeps the label hanging from his suit, so the world can see the designer's name.

A dressed up believer wants his label to show too. He has life designed by the hand of God and he wants the label to show where he goes. If anybody asks, you who I am, tell them I'm a child of God!

A man who wants to look good makes sure his shoes shine!

A dressed up believer also wants to shine! That's why he sings, "This little light of mine, I'm going to let it shine. Every where I go, I'm going to let it shine!"

A man or woman who does not know the Lord may spend time dressing up, but they'll soon find out that they have no place to go!

One of these old days the Lord is coming back for his church.

He'll find them, having washed their robes in the blood of the lamb, dressed and ready to go.

Dressed, with their loins girded in truth!

Dressed, with the breastplate of righteousness across the chest!

Dressed, with their feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace!

Dressed, with the shield of faith in their hands!

Dressed, with the helmet of Salvation on their heads!

One of these old days the Lord will say, "Come on up a little higher." And as they say are caught up to meet him in air, I can hear the unsaved crying out!

"What about me? I'm dressed. I'm wearing designer clothes!"

I hear the answer, "There's nothing wrong with wearing a good suit. Nothing wrong with a pretty dress, but it ain't the suit that makes you fly. If you want to see Jesus, you must be born again!"

You must believe that he is the Son of God

You must believe that he died out on Calvary!

You must believe that early Sunday morning he arose from the dead!

You must be dressed and ready for his return!

One glad morning when this life is over, not because of the suit but by the power of God, I'll fly away!

There's a Devil On Every Level

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 31, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "Put on the whole amour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high [places]." Ephesians 6:11-12. "Be of sober spirit, be on the alert. Your adversary, the devil, prowls about like a roaring lion, seeking someone to devour. But resist him, firm in your faith" (1 Pet. 5:8-9).

Introduction

Do you believe in the devil? When most people think of the devil images of a man with horns, wearing a red suit, carrying a pitch fork instantly come to mind. The devil is seen as a monstrous creature whose look and presence is frightening. This is the snapshot we remember from reading Dante's "Inferno" written in the 14th century. Since that time there has been a general fascination with the devil. In the time since Dante, we have learned much about the devil. We know where he comes from, we know how he got here, we know how he operates and we know his final end. The more we know about the devil, the more we are able to understand how he operates in this world. We can't defeat this enemy unless we know how to recognize him and ultimately how to rid ourselves of his influence.

There is a growing interest in the devil in our society. Despite that growing interest there are many that still do no believe the devil is real. Many agree with Sigmund Freud that the devil and concepts of the devil are simply figments of the psychic imagination of man. Philosopher Bertrand Russell says both the devil and God are projections of the hopes and fears of man, God being the personification of our hopes and the devil being the projection of our fears. A Gallop poll shows that only 34 percent of Americans believe that the devil is a real presence. The same poll shows that 36 percent of Americans believe there is an evil presence in the world, but they do not connect that presence with a real devil. Many of those who answered the poll also claimed to be Christian. They said belief in devil is a figment of superstition and folklore. Most Americans are fascinated with the devil and demons, but most place the devil along side other creations of folklore that have been exploited by Hollywood including: The Mummy, Freddy Kruger, Jason, and Frankenstein.

However, we know that while the devil does not wear a red suit, carry a pitch fork and drink hot sauce, he is never-the-less a reality in the world and in our lives.

The late "Flip Wilson" created a character for his comedy show called "Geraldine." Geraldine had a statement she said on the program each week, "The devil made me do it." In this way Flip and the rest of America blamed all of their problems on the devil. We laughed at Flip. We laughed at the idea that the devil could make anyone do anything, but the devil is certainly not a laughing matter.

As Christians, we know that God is real. Just as God is real there is also a fallen angel who operates on different levels in this world. He works against God, his people and his purposes in every way possible. Until he is finally destroyed the devil will continue to roam the earth causing problems for everyone in every level of life. We are encouraged to know that God is still on the throne and that time is running out for the devil and those who follow him.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he warns believers to stay on guard against the devil. It also shows Peter warning believers that the devil constantly looks for an opportunity to bring trouble in a believer's life.

Both Paul and Peter make it clear that the devil is a real presence and is a threat to the lives of believers. Paul saw him as a force to be reckoned with on a day to day basis. Peter saw him as a relentless predator that always seeks opportunities to devour or destroy believers.

As we study scripture we learn certain truths about the devil that makes us understand how he operates:

Where the devil came from

Before this earth was created the devil was an angel in heaven. He enjoyed access to the heavenly realms and was stunning and beautiful in appearance. There are two passages of scripture that tell us what the devil was in heaven and what happened to change his relationship with God. One is Isaiah 14:12-15. This passage tells us of the great angel Lucifer who desired to be equal and more powerful than God. Verse 13 says, "For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north:" This ideas is confirmed in Ezekiel 28:11-17 in which this same angel is described as perfect, beautiful and a resident of the "mountain of God."

The two passages point out that Lucifer wanted to compete with the glory of God. He wanted to have complete rule over all creation and to be recognized independent of and perhaps superior to God himself.

Because of his vanity and quest to overshadow God himself, he was thrown out of heaven and sent to live on the earth which was dark, flooded and without form. Along with the devil there were many who followed him who were thrown out of heaven as well. Jesus made reference to this in Matthew 25:41. These angels that were thrown out with the devil are generally referred to as demons, who move and act at his command.

We next see him in the Garden of Eden, having taken the form of a serpent, tempting Eve to defy God as he had done in heaven.

In the highest level, heaven, the devil was there.

In the lowest level of creation, in the Garden, the devil was there too.

There is a devil on every level.

How the devil operates

How does the devil operate from day to day? Peter said he spends most of his time prowling like a lion looking for a person to separate from God. His purpose is to turn as many people away from God as possible. He and his demons or angels are constantly busy attacking the people and causes of God.

He personally attacks the righteous for sport. Job 2:1-6 gives the account of the devil in heaven making a bet that he could destroy a good man by the name of Job. In this passage he tells God that he has been busy going to and fro in the earth trying to test the authenticity of their faith. Job is given as an example of pure faith and his faith is put to the test. Similarly, the devil does believers the same today. He looks for ways to attack the righteous for no good reason other than pure sport. Like tourist who want to see if they can make the guards at Buckingham Palace laugh, the devil tries believers just to see if their faith is as true as they claim.

He tempts the righteous to do wrong. Mark 1:13 gives the account of Jesus in the wilderness for 40 days and nights. During this time the devil appeared to tempt him three different times. Jesus was tempted with alternatives that would pull him away from God or at the least, cause him to tempt God. He has not changed his method. He is still tempting the righteous to do wrong. He tempts us with power, glory, sex, riches, popularity and a plethora of other temptations to get us to turn away from God.

He discourages us. Luke 22:31 finds Christ reminding believers that the devil tries to sift us like wheat to separate us and discourage us from the work of God. It is Satan who tells us that our load is too heavy or that we cannot succeed. It is the devil who whispers to us that we will not succeed. He keeps our minds focused on what may happen if we fail instead of what happens if we succeed. Satan discourages us by giving us a spirit of fear, defeat and anxiety. That spirit is the product of Satan's constant grinding and sifting us, as he tries to get us to give up in discouragement.

He incites us to lie to God. Acts 5:3 describes how Satan can incite or motivate a believer to lie to the Holy Ghost. In the text it was Annanias and his wife, who lied about their gifts to the church. He incites us to lie about and to God in many ways. He incited Peter to disown Christ at the crucifixion. He even gives believers plausible explanations for disobedient behavior. He tried to explain to Eve that God's prohibition against eating the forbidden fruit was really aimed at keeping her from being able to realize the fullness of her creation. It sounded reasonable. Even today, believers who sin against God have been provided explanations by the devil to justitify their deviant actions. In this way, the devil incites them to work against God, or at the least to become inactive soldiers in his army.

How to Defend Against the devil

How can a Christian defend himself against such an enemy? How can we, as mere mortals, defend ourselves against a fallen angel who is assisted by millions of angels who have only one mission in their lives which is to destroy us? There are a few steps:

1) Learn to identify the devil. An act that would not be pleasing to God or counters the principles of the faith could very easily be from the devil.

2) Defeat the devil with word of God. There is relationship between our knowledge of the scripture and our ability to defeat. If we are generally ignorant of God's word we are gullible for every trick Satan can produce.

3) Try every spirit with the spirit. 1 John 4:1 reminds us to test, compare and investigate every "spirit" or leaning against what the Word of God teaches. Everything that sounds good is not always good.

Paul told the Ephesians to put on the whole amour of God to protect against the wiles of the devil. We may be sheep but we don't have to be dumb sheep. Smart sheep live to give much wool, dumb sheep are served as lamb chops at the devil's banquet

The Devil Can't win

Finally, brothers and sisters we should remember that the devil can't win, if we stay close to God.

Staying close to God requires us to constantly remember that the devil will never leave us alone. No matter where we are or what we do in life, the devil will find us. You can't hide from him.

If we live in a card board box on a city street or in a mansion, there is a devil on every level.

If we have graduated from college or dropped out of school, there is a devil on every level.

If we are self employed or punch a time clock, there is a devil on every level.

If we are a students of a boring teacher or a teacher with a boring class, there is a devil on every level.

If we are unsaved sinners on the street or saved sinners in the church, there is a devil on every level.

We should be vigilant and always aware that Satan is looking for a chance to attack us, defeat us and destroy our very essence.

The one thing we have learned from out study of God's word is that when Satan attacks us on one level, God always moves us to another level.

It's amazing how the devil lays traps for us, but God always moves his children to another level.

It's amazing how things that the devil meant for bad, God moved us to another level, where it turned out to our good.

It didn't just start with us.

The devil had Joseph thrown into a pit because he dreamed great dreams, but God moved him to another level, and made him a prime minister of Egypt.

The devil had David chased as a vagabond and criminal because of Saul's jealousy, but God moved him to another level and made him King of Israel.

The devil had Daniel thrown into a lion's den because he refused to stop praying, but God moved him to another level, and increased his influence over the land.

The devil had Herod to order the death of all baby boys to prevent the savior from being born, but God move the baby Jesus and his family to Egypt, and protected them on another level.

One evening out on an old rugged cross the devil sought to stop Salvation by destroying the Son of God, but Early Sunday morning God moved Jesus up to Another level!

With all power in his hands!

Rejoice Saints the devil was defeated on Calvary!

One of these days, the devil and all of his angels will be thrown into the lake of fire where they will exist in torment forever, on another level!

Watch Director Before Singing Your Song

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 14, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord." Ephesians 5:19

Introduction

Have you ever watched the director of an orchestra or choir? Those unfamiliar with orchestrated presentations usually underestimate the importance of the director to a performance. On the surface, the director appears to be a person who stands in front of a group and waves his hand. In fact, it doesn't appear that the director's job is that difficult at all. Anyone should be able to stand in front an orchestra and wave his arms with a little stick. In many large orchestras, the role of the conductor seems unnecessary, especially since musicians only glance up at them every now and then. Conductors play a greater role than simply waving their hands in front of the orchestra. The conductor is the trainer and interpreter of a musical presentation. The conductor sets the mood and establishes the pace of the presentation. Very few presentations are successful without the influence of a skilled director.

In African-American music circles the conductor is important. Whether it's Quincy Jones directing jazz or a high school band director directing the Star Spangled Banner, directors are important.

Nowhere is the director more important than with contemporary Black Gospel music. While the musicians have learned to watch the director, in modern times it has become fashionable for the audience to watch the director who have become an essential part of the choir. In some parts of the country directors are better known than the choirs they direct. In fact, good directors do well, regardless of the choir in front of them. Today, it seems that the director is expected to direct the song, dance a little, sing a little and give the audience an eyeful as well as an earful.

Every choir member knows that it is important to watch the director because directors often stray away from the rehearsed presentation. In fact, very few final presentations are the way they are rehearsed. Directors alter their presentations as they feel the spirit move. So choir members learn to read the directors signs. They watch him closely.

In orchestras, instrumentalists are urged not to pat their feet to try to keep rhythm because their rhythm comes from the director who may change the pace at any given time. In choirs, members are urged to watch the director instead of singing songs the way they are traditionally sung. Sometimes there are unrehearsed repeats and some notes that were cut short in rehearsal are held in the actual performance.

In many ways God is a conductor. He sets our tempo, mood and pace. Each one of us plays a little tune with out lives. We are encouraged not to try to set our own pace but to watch the conductor. Sometimes he changes the flow of things at will. We must be observant and vigilant, ever ready to play or sing whatever tune he requires.

As Christians, we know God is the conductor, we stand ready to move at his command. That's the way a believer is with God. He studies the word to know what God wants. He seeks to be approved before God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul urging the Ephesians to follow God's instructions in holiness and spiritual living.

The entire 5th chapter is devoted to urging Christians to follow God's direction with respect to personal discretions, marriage relationships and our general walk in life.

We should express our in songs of praise to God, songs which have greater meaning because we are following his direction.

He encourages believers to sing Psalms of David, aptly set to music. He also encourages the singing of hymns, those songs He encourages us to sing spiritual songs that emerge from the soul as a testimony of our belief and hope, trust and faith in God.

All of the songs we sing are a testament to our followship as Christians.

Our lives are directed by his word. Our songs reflect the lives we live. Thus, the text encourages to make melody in our hearts, not only with our voices, but the entire essence of our being reflects the glory and majesty of lives directed by God.

We get more out of our psalms, hymn, spiritual and words of praise when we watch the director, and follow his direction.

Songs Without A Director

There are many whose lives are like songs without direction.

SHOWER SONGS: There are times when we sing in the shower. There is no director. There is no concern for pitch or tune or balance. We just sing, without direction. Unfortunately there are many whose lives are like shower songs. They have no specific direction. They live wildly, without guidance hitting whatever note that pleases them at the moment. Shower songs only sound good in the shower. If we had to listen to a recording of our shower songs we'd probably frown. Likewise, when look back on the shower song time of our lives, we would instantly note how far we moved away from the mark living on our own without God.

SOLOS: There are many who will not sing with a choir, they only sing solos. They want to do their own thing. Instead of following a director, the musician has to follow them. That's not a bad thing, that's generally the way solos work, unless a person is trying to live his life like a solo. Such a life is similar to a shower song but instead of being a private decision, they live publicly doing their own their thing, singing their own song, without direction or guidance.

Directors Teach What Singing is About

More than just waving their hands, directors teach what songs are about. To really sing with meaning and feeling we must allow God to direct our lives. When he conducts he reveals certain truths to us.

SINGING IS TO BE FROM THE HEART: If a church choir held an audition, it wouldn't what would be the criterion? The criterion should be whether or not a person is a great singer, for most church choir singers are not, but they are individuals who have a heart for the songs they sing. Verse 19b: ". . . singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord." Many think of the church choir as a show place to make a name for themselves. The do just the opposite of verse 19, instead of "singing and making melody with your heart" they "sing and make melody with their mouths. The phrase "with your heart" signifies that you mean what you sing and you feel it!

SINGING IS TO BE TO EACH OTHER: In the shower, a believer sings to himself and for himself. Those who sing in public should sing to each other. They should look at the people they are singing to and reach out to them. Look at Verse 19 again, ". . . speaking to one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord." We can't obey this teaching in solitude. God calls us to speak in song to one another.

To sing to each other we should get together and sing as a congregation and as small groups. We should sing in each other's hearing and want to be heard by each other.

SINGING IS TO BE "TO THE LORD." Singing to the Lord implies that songs should be God centered or Christ centered. This means that what we sing should reflect our nature, that our lives are God centered. Everything we do and say is centered around our central beliefs about God and his Son Jesus Christ. Our songs are a reflection of that belief. What we choose to sing should be worthy of presentation to the master.

SINGING SHOULD VARY IN FORMS: Those who sing should be trained to sing in various forms and styles, delivering the same witness in a variety of ways. Verse 19 says, ". . . speaking to one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs..." Those who sing to the Lord and to others select the style of song appropriate for the moment. The psalms, what we call "Anthems" speak dramatically about the power of God. Every singer should know how to witness with the power of the word transcribed into anthems. Hymns attest to the greatness of God as he relates to us. They are standards that have survived the test of time and linger long in the hearts of believers around the world. Spiritual songs are those that speak from the soul and experience of believers. They testify about what God has done in the life of a believer. They are about blessings received, hope renewed and prayers answered.

God Directs the Life before we sing the Song

When God is the director of our lives, he pushes us to get our lives ready to sing our song. Why? Because it's hard to sing to the melody when your life is out of tune.

Choir directors themselves should be men and women are at the very least men and women of strong conviction and spirit filled lives. They do more than just direct the songs, they help choir members get their lives in tune. That's why its so important that choir directors themselves strive to be spiritually strong constantly studying the word, living a spirit filled life and witnessing. Many successful choir directors are not best vocalists in the world, rarely sing a solo, and sometimes play no musical instruments at all, yet the they bring out the best from their singers because of their testimony.

Their life appears to be in tune and their encouragement helps choir members get their lives in tune, ready to sing.

That's the way God directs our lives. He works constantly to get us in tune.

Those who have been on the journey, know that it is extremely difficult to sing a melody to the Lord if our lives are out of tune with his word.

It is hard to sing about faith, if we know we have no faith.

It is hard to sing about strength, if all we show is weakness.

It is hard to sing about our hope in the Lord, if we have given up on God ourselves!

It is hard to sing about walking the narrow road, when we are running down road to destruction.

God Directs and Arranges

Finally we must remember that not only does God direct our lives, he also arranges and rearranges because he is the composer.

We know that God is the composer because the scriptures remind us that "the earth is the Lord's and fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein" (Psalms 24:1)

God is the composer because he was the one who created the earth from darkness, spat out the seven seas, bulged the mountains up and unfolded the canopy of heaven to reveal the stars, moon and the celestial heights. He who composes, sets the timing of each measure of events, and the key in which each life should be played.

As the composer, God arranges the melody, harmony and rhythm of our lives.

The melody of a composition is the set of notes and rhythms that are unique and identify it from all others. The notes are the same notes that other compositions have, but it's how they are arranged, timed, and orchestrated that makes the difference. The Christian life is a pleasing melody whose acts, deeds and words, have been arranged, timed and executed in a blend that produces a pleasing tune.

Every life, like a keyboard has the same keys. The difference is in the arrangement. Satan gives us one arrangement, but God rearranges.

Satan arranged things for bad, but God rearranged things for our good.

A good life, like a good song, has harmony. Harmony is achieved by combining various notes in such a way that they give a pleasing sound. Harmony is not automatic. The notes don't simply fall into place they have been arranged to achieve balance.

The new songs that choirs sing, only have three part harmony. There is usually no part for the basses. They are told to sing the same as the tenors just an octave lower.

But when God sets up a life he sets it up in four part harmony. He won't tell you to copy the life of somebody else. He'll arrange things in your range.

That must have been what the songwriter had in mind when he said, "What God has for me, is for me."

A good life, keeps a rhythm that is dictated by God. He sends us a blessing every day.

The rhythm of a song is indicated in the time signature. A song is three-four time, four-four time or sometimes in cut time. If the song is supposed to be fast it may say, "Allegro." If it's suppose to be slow, it may say "Molto."

One thing we know about the way God arranges time, is that he is an on time God. He may not come when we want him, but he's always on time.

When God gives us a song to sing, we need be sure we sing it in the right key.

There are seven notes in a musical scale and seven days in a week. How each week goes depends on the key we select at the beginning of the week. If we begin the week in the Key of F we will have at least one sharp along the way. If we begin with key of B Flat we will have at least two flats.

But there is one Key that every believer should know. It's the key of C. the same letter that begins the word Christian. In the key of C there are no flats or sharps. Not because every day is going to be perfect, but because no matter what comes our way, we "count it all joy!"

If it sickness comes my way, if I begin my week in the key of Christ, I count it all joy!

If heartache comes my way, if I begin my week in the key of Christ, I count it all joy!

If disappointment comes m way, if I begin my week in the key of Christ, I count it all joy!

I don't know about you, but I'm going to keep my eye on the director!

If I follow Jesus, he will direct my paths!

Follow Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Follow Jesus, who arose early Sunday morning!

Follow Jesus, take no chance of getting lost!

Giving Thanks for Wondrous Works

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 26, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "That I may publish with the voice of thanksgiving, and tell of all thy wondrous works." Psalm 26:7

Introduction

Do you have a reason to be thankful? Has the Lord blessed you in a special way? When we stop to think about it, we have many reasons to give thanks because God has poured out both his bounty and mercy upon us. What would be the essence of our testimony? What would we say? We would have a lifetime of blessings, both seen and unseen, to talk about.

Thanksgiving requires a spirit of humility. Each person who gives thanks is keenly aware that all accomplishment is achieved apart from his/her works or deeds. No one can successfully give thanks if he/she secretly believes that there is nothing for which they owe a debt gratitude. Thanks by its very nature recognizes the fallibility of human effort without godly assistance. Having received blessings, those who are aware of their inability to achieve on their own, feel compelled to give thanks because it acknowledges the need for a higher power.

There are many who approach God and his blessings in the manner of the cartoon character Bart Simpson. In one episode Bart is shown at the table preparing to eat the Thanksgiving meal. When he was asked to give the blessing over the meal Bart was reluctant. He did not feel the blessing was necessary but decided to comply with the request. So he began his prayer this way: 'Dear Lord I don't understand why I should thank you for the hard earned food on this table that we had to buy,we had to cook and we had to put on the table. It seems like we should be thanking ourselves. Amen' The Simpson family was needless to say, speechless.

A popular commercial empasizes the importance of Thank You. In a variety of stressful situations instead of arguing and fighting everyone simply says "Thank You." In the commercial the power of a simple thanks is demonstrated. Years ago there was a popular television program called Captain Kangaroo. The Captain always taught the children who watched the show about the value of saying "please and thank you," which the Captain called 'Magic words.' Even though it was a children's show, the truth about thankfulness is nevertheless true. It is good to have a spirit of gratitude every day.

A simple thanks is amplified when it is made known to others. Good news is contagious. When others see a great work done they join in the chorus of people who give praise to the source. The same is true with God. As those who have been blessed raise their voices in thanks, the sense of gratitude that they display spreads to others.

As Christians, we are not ashamed to tell those that we know about the goodness of the Lord. We see what he has done for us and we know what he can do for others, so we gladly publish his good works everywhere we go.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he gives six characteristics that are unique to the righteous.

In verses 1-2 he notes that the righteous are usually open to examination. Before God their lives are open books.

In verse 3 obedience is highlighted. David notes that he has tried to walk in the truths of the Lord consistently.

In verses 4-6 David reflects on his general victory over the efforts of the wicked to influence his life in favor of living the Godly life.

In verses 9-10 he reiterates his desire not to be obstructed or frustrated by the wicked schemes of the ungodly.

In verses 11-12 he restates his desire to walk in the steps of the Lord with integrity.

The text focus is on verses 7-8 in which David declares that God has been so good to the righteous that they should declare and publish his good works for everyone to see and hear of his greatness. Accordingly, he says that believers should let the world know that they love the Lord and they love the indwelling of his spirit in their lives daily.

Thanks Begets More Blessings

Thanks gives rise to more acts of kindness, and more acts of kindness only bring more thanks.

When we show our gratitude for a kindness, it promotes more kindness. On the contrary, ingratitude does just the opposite. Mark Otero tells the story of a farm family's attitude of gratitude about its lifesaving pig. It appears that a woman was visiting some people who lived on a farm, and she noticed a pig limping in the backyard with a wooden leg. She asked the farmer, "What happened to the pig?" The farmer said, "Oh, Betsy is a wonderful pig. One night the house caught fire and she oinked so loud she woke us and we got the fire truck in time to save the house." The woman said, "That's really something!" The farmer continued, "That's not all, one day my youngest fell in the pond and Betsy oinked so loud that she got our attention and we were able to pull my daughter out of the pond in time." The woman said, "That's really amazing! But I still don't understand why the pig has a wooden leg. The farmer said, "Well, when you have a pig that special, you don't want to eat him all at once!" Gratitude didn't run deep for the three legged pig.

When gratitude does run deep however, it usually spawns more acts of kindness. There are some who show gratitude for every kind act. As a result people are always falling over themselves to do something else nice for them. The same is true with God. Those who are truly grateful often find that he constantly rewards their gratitude with more acts of kindness.

What to give thanks for

Often we thank God for physical blessings, but we should also thank him for the unseen spiritual blessings of salvation, heavenly promise and peace of mind. This spirit of thanksgiving is supported in scripture. The verb 'to give thanks' occurs thirty-eight times and the noun 'thanksgiving' another fifteen times in the New Testament. The Word of God makes it clear that it is very important to give thanks.

Sometimes there is the thought of thanks for spiritual blessings. Thus, we find that when Jesus began the service of Holy Communion he gave thanks for the bread and the wine (Matt. 26:27; Luke 22:17,19). Paul gave thanks for spiritual blessing (Rom. 7:25) For what blessing did he thank God?). What religious blessings do you have for which you should give God thanks?

But we should also be thankful for blessings concerning the things of this life. Jesus gave thanks before a meal (Matt. 15:36). And when he healed ten men who had leprosy and only one came back to thank him, Jesus asked where the others were (Luke 17:15-18). He expected people to be thankful for good things. Paul spoke of some foolish people who among other things did not give thanks to God (Rom. 1:21). He himself was ready to see God's hand in all sorts of happenings and he thanked God when he came to Rome as a prisoner and some Christians met him (Acts 28:15).

We give God thanks for the seen and the unseen.

We thank him for the greens and butter beans, but we also thank him for being able to sleep soundly at night.

We thank him for turkey and dressing, but we also thank him for dressing our souls with his grace.

We thank him for fried chicken, rice and a little gravy, but we should also thank him for spiritual gravy: Joy, love, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, faith, meekness, and temperance.

We thank him for cars, houses and color T.V. but we should also thank him for coloring our lives with faith and hope because they help us to see the world in a different light.

In essence, we should keep the admonition in mind, "In everything, give thanks."

Publish it

Finally, brothers and sisters, David gave us an impossible directive. He said we should tell all the good works the Lord has done for us.

How can anyone tell all of God's good works? It will take a lifetime and longer for even one man to tell what God has done for him.

Yet with one loud voice we who have received must try to tell of the mighty works of God.

Even in our telling we won't be able to tell it all.

In November of 2004, Bill Clinton opened his presidential library. In the center, situated on an area of almost 30 acres are 76 million pages of documents, 2 million photographs and 75,000 museum artifacts, including a library and museum. Even though it tells more about him, including the Monica Lowinsky affair, than any other president, it still does not tell it all.

David said tell it all, but we just can't tell it all.

When it comes to talking about the goodness of the Lord, I just can't tell it all.

What I can tell you is that when I'm sick, he's doctor in my sick room!

When I'm in trouble he is my refuge and my strength!

When I'm weak he is the strength of my life!

When I'm low, he picks me up and turns me around!

When I need a blessing he's always on time!

I can't tell it all but I want you to know that:

He's a shelter in a time of storm!

He's a bridge over trouble water!

He's a lawyer for every courtroom!

He's a rock in a weary land!

I can't tell it all but I can tell you that one evening about 2001 years ago he died out on Calvary!

I can't tell it all but I can tell you that early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

I can't tell it all but I can tell that he's alive today!

God's Maintenance man

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 28, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "And let ours also learn to maintain good works for necessary uses, that they be not unfruitful." Titus 3:14

Introduction

Have you ever had a need to call a maintenance man? Very few of us go through life without ever needing the services of a maintenance man. Those who live in apartments, public housing, condominiums, or who own vehicles, equipment or other incidentals usually find that they need a maintenance man at one point or another. These are skilled men in both repairing things which are broken and preventing things from breaking. They are usually well-trained, knowledgeable and efficient. Good maintenance men are like insurance policies, it is better to have them and not need them than to need them and not have them.

We need maintenance personnel because they keep what we own operational. One farmer once said, "The trouble with milking cows is that they won't stay milked." The same can be said about many other things. The trouble with cutting the grass is that it won't stay cut. The trouble with trimming the hedges is that they won't stay trimmed. It's not so hard to dust our homes, the problem is that they won't stay dusted. A car, once washed won't stay washed. Hair that is cut won't stay cut. Clothing washed last week won't stay clean; neither will any bath we take be sufficient for a lifetime. Despite our best efforts everything about our lives requires a little maintenance. Maintenance keeps us operational.

It appears that everything needs maintenance. Houses, no matter how well constructed, still need maintenance. Paint chips, wallpaper peels, and lighting fixtures sometimes fail to work. Automobiles, no matter how well-made, still require regular maintenance to function properly. They require maintenance because they are just like that cow that won't stay milked; they need attending on a regular basis because they won't stay fixed.

The same can be said about the house of God. Both the edifice in which we worship and study and the spiritual house of God within us need regular maintenance. To serve both these needs God has a team of spiritual maintenance men, called deacons, who work to maintain both the house of God and the temple of God which resides within every believer. They work to repair that which is broken and to prevent things from breaking both in the physical building and in the spiritual lives of believers.

As Christians, we know that we must work daily to maintain the faith. There are times when we need a little help to maintain. We thank God that he has spiritual maintenance men for every generation, to help us maintain a healthy relationship within the kingdom of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's instruction to Titus concerning helping the church to maintain good works.

Paul often traveled from one city to another as he established churches in his three missionary journeys. He was often assisted by men who traveled with him. They had the specific task of helping newly formed and more established churches to hold fast to the faith.

This letter to Titus encourages Titus in the same way he had earlier encouraged Timothy, both of whom who had the job of maintaining the church. By maintaining, Paul expected Titus to promote the preaching of the Gospel, guard against false teaching and to continue to do good works.

This was not an easy task since, in Paul's absence, many foreign beliefs attempted to creep in among believers. There were many who were not as strong in the faith as they should be, and others who needed motivation. In verse 14 Titus is told that they should maintain good works for the church to be fruitful. Fruitfulness is interpreted to mean good works, lifestyles and faithfulness that will build up the kingdom of God. To accomplish this end Titus would have to teach, counsel, assist and correct the members of the body of Christ, under Paul's direction, in ways that would help them grow and mature in the faith.

Paul established these churches in his journeys, he left Timothy and Titus to move among them with one charge "maintain good works." Timothy, Titus and others, working as Paul's assistants became the first spiritual maintenance men.

Maintenance Men

The deacon's job in the church is unique, because by definition a deacon is a servant of the people. During the tenure of his service the good deacon will serve three types of members.

HIGH-MAINTENANCE: High maintenance members require a lot of attention. Generally new members are like "maters" in a garden. Once planted they have to be propped up, inspected for bugs, and constantly checked everytime a strong wind blows. Galatians 6:2 encourages us to "Carry each others burdens, and in this way you will fulfill the law of Christ." Deacons often wear out cars and consume countless hours of time with such members who seem to depend upon him for every small facet of their spiritual lives. What frustrates many deacons is that many members remain high maintenance "maters" long after they should have developed a maturity that does not require constant high maintenance.

LOW-MAINTENANCE: There are some members of the congregation who require little or no maintenance. They work in the church, they give and serve almost anonymously. They can be described as "Tater" people. Taters don't require much maintenance. Once planted, they grow, run and multiply without much attention. These are members who have grown in the faith. It is what Hebrews 6:1 calls going "on to maturity." Low-Maintenance members are a joy to the deacon because these members require little of him because their faith is secure, planted deep, and even if dirt is thrown on them, like taters, they continue to grow.

NO-MAINTENANCE: The last kind of members services by deacons are members who refuse maintenance. They are bug infested, but they don't want any maintenance. They are like a stalk of cotton with boll weevils crawling everywhere, but they won't let him help in any way. These members won't worship, won't pray, won't pay, won't study or serve. They frustrate their deacons because the deacons know that without maintenance, it won't be long before they become spiritually dead.

Maintenance Man's Maintenance Plan

While every maintenance man helps maintain others, he also has his own maintenance plan. In fact, maintenance men are sticklers for following the maintenance plan. For example, new cars come with a factory warranty wherein the company guarantees to take care of certain things, as long as you follow the maintenance plan. It may call for oil changes after a certain time, flushed radiators a while later and other maintenance items that may seem unnecessary at the moment.

The maintenance plan says fix it before it breaks, while we operate on the notion that "If it ain't broke don't fix it." –So many of us ignore the manufacturer's maintenance plan.

God has a maintenance plan for the maintenance man. It's the same maintenance plan he has for every believer. After we begin the new life in Christ we should let the holy spirit check our oil, and change our filters. If we are beginning to slip in our worship, giving or praise we need to change our belts before they break.

The maintenance man stays prayed up, attends Sunday School, bible study, and is constantly aware of the need to follow the divine maintenance plan.

Gurarantеed Warranty

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should consider that if the maintenance man follows God's maintenance plan, then his warranty is guaranteed.

New cars have a warranty for so many years or so many miles, after that the warranty is no good.

Midas Muffler gives a warranty on its mufflers for as long as you own it, but when it changes hands, the warranty is off.

Many used cars give no warranty at all, except what the law requires, and you often drive off the lot with little or no warranty at all.

But God offers every believer an eternal warranty, his personal guarantee, written in the blood of Calvary and guaranteed by the Holy Ghost.

If we begin with him as a new creature, old things will pass away and all things will become new.

If we follow his plan of salvation and walk by faith, you have his word that, he that overcometh shall inherit all things.

God's warranty is not on our body.

He doesn't promise that our hair won't turn gray.

He doesn't promise that our footsteps won't slow!

He doesn't promise that our eyesight won't dim!

The warranty is not on the body it's on the soul!

The warranty is not on the bumpers, windshield or fenders. The warranty is on the motor.

In John 11:26 Jesus "..whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die."

That's a warranty!

One day, like the maintenance man, every believer will have to say. I believed in my heart and I followed your plan.

When my seasons changed, I followed the plan.

In the summer of my life I checked my anti-freeze to be sure I didn't run to hot or wild.

In the autumn of my life, I checked it again to make sure that that old age and physical decay wouldn't freeze my faith.

I'm now in the winter of my life. Everything has just about given out on this body.

I spent eight years in a nursing home. It's time to trade up, is my warranty still good?

Can't you hear the answer bellowing across the eons of time?

I promised Abraham a ram in the bush, the warranty was still good!

I promised Elijah fire would come down from heaven, the warranty was still good!

I promised The Three Hebrew boys I'd be with them in firery furnace, the warranty was still good

I promised Daniel a good night's sleep in the Lion's den, he found out that the warranty was still good!

Over 2000 years ago a man named Jesus, died out on Calvary

But early Sunday morning he arose from the grave to announce..

Maintenance man, you followed the plan!

The warranty is still Good!

Come on up!

Come on up!

On Monday, November 22, 2004 Deacon Frank Allen, called in his warranty and traded up. In body and spirit, he was God's maintenance man!

Hurry Up and Wait

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 5, 2005

SCRIPTURE:" Wait on the LORD: be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart: wait, I say, on the LORD" Psalm 27:14

Introduction

Have you ever been in a hurry but had to wait? This is the season of "hurry up and wait." Nothing seems to move fast when you are in a hurry. One line feeds into another long line and we wait. If you try calling your favorite company for service, be prepared to wait through a long list of automated directories. Take a trip to the mall to buy that item you want, but be prepared to wait. Are you in a rush to get from one place to another? Be prepared to wait. In fact, some people do just that. They carry books to read on buses, subways and in traffic jams. In airports, gas stations or food stores, waiting is a part of our daily lives.

No one likes to wait, we prefer things quicker. While Old Fashioned grits tastes better, no one really wants to wait 30 minutes for them to cook. Peculated coffee takes longer to brew and tastes better, but instant coffee gets the job done. The world is moving to quicker, faster and instant, because we can't wait.

Everything seems to be faster these days. Movies are shorter and get to the action faster. Songs are faster, speakers are faster, life is faster and we live faster trying to keep up, rushing to the necessary in a hurry to get to the unnecessary so that it can be done quicker and faster.

Everything and everyone seems to be faster except God, and the things of God?

When we pray, why can't we get an instant answer? Why must we wait so long to get an answer? Isn't there a fast lane for people who have less than 10 items on their prayer list?

At times God seems to move slow, while we are in a hurry. Why can't he move any faster?

At the close of the Old Testament the people were promised that a savior would come. About 490 years passed and the deliverer never came. They waited, but it seemed the longer they waited the longer it took. Finally, a baby was born in Bethlehem and the child grew and announced that what they had been waiting for had finally arrived.

He came in the fullness of God's own time.

As Christians, we have learned the importance of waiting on God. We know that he moves at his own pace. We are tempted to assume a "Hurry and wait" attitude until we remember that the God we serve is an on time God, who "May not come when we want him, but he's always on time."

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he encourages believers to patiently wait on the Lord.

It is the last verse of a great psalm that tells a brief history of the results of David's own waiting. It is a history of David's experience with God. He waited and God answered in varied ways.

There was a point in his life when he was surrounded by enemies, but David waited on God. God caused those enemies to stumble and fall. (v2)

While he waited David worship fervently. His desire was to be in the presence of the Lord in his tabernacle, to worship, give in the offerings and to make sacrifices. In worship he sang praises to God and he joyfully told others of God's goodness. He enjoyed the beauty of God's presence and felt that while he waited, he would find spiritual shelter from the storms of life because God would, "hide me." In the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me." (v4-6)

While he waited, David also prayed. He diligently sought the will of God in prayer. In his fear and apprehension, he sought God's presence and strengthening hand. His prayer was "hear my voice, when I cry." It is a good thing to talk with God while we wait for him to respond to our need. (v7-8)

David waited in confidence. He was sure that no matter what his situation that God would not forsake him. At verse 10 he notes that even if his parents, his father and mother, would forsake him and give him up as a lost cause, he knew that God would "lift me up." This confidence David shows is remarkable considering that at the time of the writing he was little more than a vagabond, a criminal in the eyes of the king and a hunted man. Despite it all, he remained confident. (v10)

David concluded that it is best to wait on the Lord. Believers are encouraged to take courage and wait for God to act out his will in their lives.

Waiting on the Lord-"They that wait on the Lord shall inherit the earth."

The believer who waits on the Lord assumes the role of the beggar who waits for the merciful favor of a benefactor. To wait on the Lord in this context is to approach him from a position of want and need. We want him to give us what we need and he alone can supply what we need. Waiting on the Lord is to assume that our father is rich in houses and land and that he holds in his grasp the power to grant what we desire. The beggar asks because he knows that the person he asks has what he needs. He also asks, knowing that only if he asks can he let his needs be known.

To wait on the Lord does not mean we stop asking. "Wait" in this view is to approach God in humility. It does not mean that we stop praying or seeking an answer because we are waiting. Waiting does not mean that we stop praying. It does not mean that we stop hoping. It does not mean that we stop looking or begging for his mercy. It means that we approach God as a full fountain with our cups out, waiting to be filled.

What do we wait for? We wait to hear the Masters response. In ancient times, it was customary for students to walk closely behind the master instructor. Sometimes they would wait for hours in the courtyard for the master to appear and then once he appeared they followed him closely waiting to absorb any word they might receive. Sometimes they followed him for hours. On some days, he said nothing at all. In all this is students followed him religiously knowing that whenever he did finally speak it would be well worth their wait. So it is when a child of God waits on the Lord. We wait for him to make his appearance and sometimes even after we feel his presence we wait to hear him speak. We listen closely for his voice. We read his word, searching for the subtle ways in which he speaks to us. We listen to his word as it is explained to us by teachers, and pronounced to us by preachers. In each instance we are waiting on him to make his presence and will known to us.

Like those students, who waited patiently to hear a single word or thought from the master teachers, we too have learned that it is well worth our time to wait on the Lord.

Waiting on the Lord is to trust that our benefactor has the capacity to respond to our request.

Waiting on the Lord is to constantly cling to hope when all else fails.

Waiting on the Lord is to reach up when the world has dropped its head.

Waiting on the Lord is to say in the words of the song writer, "Have thine own way Lord, Have thine own way. Thou art the potter, I am the clay. Mold me and shape me, After thy will. As in thy presence, I'm yielded and still."

Waiting upon the Lord-"They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength."

There is another way to wait on the Lord. It is the approach of the confidential aide and the employer, the servant and the master, or the trusted advisor and the benefactor. This relationship exists when both the master and servant are so close that one knows the subtle signs of the other and senses what is needed before hand. In such a case only the slightest nod, or curve of the eyebrow, gets the job done.

The servant who knows the master's habits anticipates what the master wants and only requires a subtle look, a lifted eyebrow or a raised finger to achieve a needed result. This is the ultimate in being waited upon; to have what one needs provided even at a glance.

Believers who wait upon the Lord are those who walk so closely with him that they can almost anticipate what the Lord would want them to do and the prepare themselves to act or not to act at his command. They do not go into battle, but they stand prepared on the hillside waiting for his signal. Believers become this close with God when they constantly commune with him and seek his will. They know how he thinks and acts and they wait for him to give the smallest sign to proceed or to withdraw. Sometimes it is the smallest act, but yet they know its meaning and act accordingly.

This is what happened when Gideon sought a sign from the Lord as to whether to go into battle. Once he received the sign he sought, he waited upon the Lord for his signal to advance. His waiting was not to sit idle but to prepare to take action if necessary, but not to take a single step until God commanded it to be taken. It was also the case with Abraham, whom God told to move out of his homeland. He waited upon the Lord, but his waiting was not inaction, he began doing what was necessary but would not move until he received the actual command from God.

If we sense the will of God, like that servant who watches the master across the room, waiting for a nod, we watch the hand of God and wait upon him. We know it when we see it because we know him well. How will we know? Just as Elijah knew when he felt the earth quake and a mighty rushing wind and could distinguish that neither was from God, so can every believer who walks close to God know that still soft voice that beacons us to action or inaction if need be.

Waiting upon the Lord is to be ready for action, as he gives the slightest sign.

Waiting upon the Lord is to be rested and renewed in our determination to accomplish his will. We do this knowing that the strong shall faint and the young shall get weary, but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew with strength."

Waiting for the Lord-"Blessed are they that wait for him.

The final way to wait for the Lord is to tarry for his promise. In this sense, we wait not in a sense of weakness, begging for grace or in a sense of readiness, watching for a single command. Wait, in this context, is to anticipate with excitement the fulfillment of a promise.

Waiting for the promise is as exciting as a child waiting for Christmas. We anxiously wait for the great blessings that are coming!

While we wait we should not be idle, but we should be busy doing his work. Jesus told the parable of the 10 virgins who waited for the bridegroom to make his appearance. While all of them were waiting for his return, only five of them were ready for his return by having their lamps properly trimmed.

Luke 8:40 and similar passages gives three instances of how the word spread that Jesus was coming to town and how the people waited for him. The people "gladly received him" and were waiting for him. Rarely did Jesus enter a village without finding people waiting for him. They waited in expectation. They waited in anticipation.

Jarius waited because he had a daughter that was ill. He did not wait in vain.

A woman with an issue of blood waited. She did not wait in vain, because when she touched the hem of his garment she was made whole.

A ruler in the synagogue whose daughter died waited. He did not wait in vain for Jesus used it as an example of God's power and she was raised from the dead.

What are you waiting for? The defeated are waiting for the final victory. Jesus has promised that victory. He told John, "He that over cometh shall inherit all things."

The weak are waiting for more strength? The faint in strength are waiting for God's promise to Isaiah, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount on wings as eagles, they shall run and not be weary. They shall walk and not faint."

The discouraged are waiting for encouragement? In their discouragement the word of God says, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help.

My help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth."

The confused are waiting for answers! "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understandings. Acknowledge him in all thy ways, and he shall direct thy paths."

The lonely are waiting for comfort. Jesus said, "And lo, I'll be with you always, even unto the end of the earth."

I don't know about you, but I've decided to wait on the Lord!

If I wait on the Lord he'll make a way out of no way!

If I wait on the Lord he'll take my defeats and give me victory!

If I wait on the Lord, he'll take my despair and give me hope!

If I wait on the Lord, he'll take my bad days and turn them into good days!

I'll wait because, "my hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but who lean on Jesus' name!"

It seemed like a long time, but in the fullness of time God sent his son!

In God's own time, he carried a cross to Golgotha's hill!

He died out on Calvary, but early Sunday morning he arose from the dead!

I don't know about you, but decided to be like Job and say, "All the days of my Ho, Ho, Ho!

SCRIPTURE: "And said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein: 5For I, saith the LORD, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her. Ho, ho, come forth, and flee from the land of the north, saith the LORD: for I have spread you abroad as the four winds of the heaven, saith the LORD. Zechariah 2:4-6 "1Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. " Isaiah 55:1; Then went Boaz up to the gate, and sat him down there: and, behold, the kinsman of whom Boaz spake came by; unto whom he said, Ho, such a one! turn aside, sit down here. And he turned aside, and sat down." Ruth 4:1

Introduction

Do you know the three most famous words of the yuletide season? They are attributed to a jolly man who wears a red suit. He usually says, "Ho, Ho, Ho!" When children hear those words they conjure up dreams of toys and pretty things. "Ho, Ho, Ho!" means joy, excitement and good times! That's the image each of us has when we hear those words at Christmas time.

What most people don't know is that the word "Ho" is used in the English language to attract attention and to exclaim delight! One "Ho" is excitement, "Ho, Ho, Ho!" means real excitement is on the way.

Everyone likes to hear exciting news. We celebrate a marriage announcement. It's exciting news. We celebrate new homes. We celebrate new beginnings! It's exciting news when a child is born!

The words "Ho, Ho, Ho!" ring out this time of year. They seem to create an atmosphere of excitement the creates what we call the Christmas spirit. The business community wants us to get excited, so they hire men in red suits to sit in malls and stand in front stores and yell, "Ho, Ho, Ho!" They hope we'll get so excited that we spend lots of money in their stores.

But did you know the man in the red suit wasn't the first one to say, "Ho, Ho, Ho!" Long before there was a man in the red suit announcing excitement to the world the words "Ho, Ho, Ho!" rang out from heaven and were written down in the word of God.

The two letter word "Ho" is used four times in three different places in the King James version of the bible. Each is associated with exciting news! Each announces a great message that should be heard. That message is that God is good, is concerned and truly loves the world.

As Christians, we are encouraged to hear the exciting news that this season brings. Whether it's the man wearing the red suit, or words from the bible, each time we hear the words, "Ho, Ho, Ho!" we think of jolly happy times ahead, all provided from the abundance of our God.

Exposition

These three text each introduce an exciting message, prefaced by the two letter word 'Ho!"

There are three exclamation terms used frequently, each has its own meaning.

The first of these exclamation terms is "Ha" which is found in Job 39:25. It is expression of amazement and joy.

The second is "aha." It expresses joy and satisfaction, but it is malicious, such as used in Psalm 40:15 of the cruel satisfaction that enemies feel at our demise when they say, "aha"

The third is the term "Ho." It expresses great excitement and satisfaction without malicious intent or amazement. The term "Ho" has an evangelical tone to it because it usually announces messages from heaven or the advent of a divine action that will bring good news.

That's exactly what the word "Ho" does in the three places where it is used in the bible. It announces good news from heaven and a divine plan about to be unveiled.

A Redeemer Is Coming

Ruth 4:1 shows Boaz using the term "ho" to announce to the elders of the city that he intended to redeem the lands of Naomi and thereby preserve her family name. That was a great announcement. It was the announcement of coming redemption.

If we celebrate anything during the Christmas season, it is the celebration of redemption. For Naomi, it meant someone was paying the price so that her family land would be restored and she could rebuild her life. For us, redemption means essentially the same. Someone is paying the price for our salvation. That someone is Jesus Christ.

That's is the exciting news that this season should instill in each of us; that the opportunity for salvation, atonement, and forgiveness is among us, through the grace of God. We are saved by the blood of Christ. His sacrifice on Calvary made atonement for our sins. By his stripes we are healed and forgiven.

That the meaning of, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." John 3:16.

Thus, when we hear the man in the red suit say, "Ho, Ho, Ho!" what we hear isn't an announcement about tearing open presents on Christmas day! We hear, "Ho!Ho! Ho!" -Salvation, Atonement and Forgiveness!

Isaiah 55:1 uses the two letter word "Ho" to announce the coming of true satisfaction.

One of the fascinating songs of the 1960's was "I can't get no satisfaction." It painted a dreary picture of people trying to get more, buy more and have more, but derive little satisfaction from what their efforts. Even today, there are many who correlate satisfaction with an abundance of toys and trinkets under the Christmas tree.

Last year children gave a list of things they thought would satisfy them. However, no sooner than they had opened the packages they wanted something else. The words of the song linger, "I can't get no satisfaction!"

Isaiah made an announcement from heaven and preceded it with the word "Ho!"

Those who want real satisfaction can find it if they become followers of Christ in earnest; not just church members. He makes the startling revelation that satisfaction does not require money because we can eat the meagerest of meals and be happy in him.

In the absence of real love, we are always dissatisfied. We are always thirsty. We are always yearning for more. No car or house is big enough. No gift is fine enough.

Nothing done satisfies. We thirst for something money can't buy or satisfy. True satisfaction is what Jesus offered when he said, "If any man thirsts, let him come and drink of me?"

So verse two raises crucial questions. Why are we spending money for things that do not satisfy us or working ourselves to the bone to acquire more while enjoying life less? It answers those questions by announcing that any man or woman that chooses to draw close to God will find true satisfaction that is not dependent upon the number of gifts under the Christmas tree.

Love, contentment, and satisfaction, those are three things that the Gospel message reminds us about this season. When we hear the words, "Ho, Ho, Ho!" We should think, Love, contentment and satisfaction! That's the spirit of Christmas.

Security Restored

Zechariah 2:4-13 announces the restoration of security for God's people.

Immediately, it speaks of Israel the nation. In a greater sense it speaks to the people of God. God will build a fence or a "wall of fire" around believers that will prohibit the enemy from completely destroying us.

In the wake of September 11, 2001, Americans are still anxious about security issues. We want to feel safe again, without wondering if our mail will have mysterious white powders in each envelope or whether our cars will explode in the street or our planes will be destroyed in the air. We want to feel safe again.

Not only do we want to be safe from international terrorists, but we also want to feel safe from the terrorism many of us experience at the hands of some police officers or agencies of the government who breach our privacy and ignore our rights, often in pursuit of their own agendas.

The excitement of this text is that God will be a moving fence around us. He will be an invisible presence that goes where we go. We will be "a town without walls" because where we go, he goes. So Zechariah introduces this text, not with one "Ho" but with two, "Ho, Ho!" That means this is great news to believers, security is come!

Zechariah reminds of that we are safe, security, and protected by the power of the almighty God who will not suffer our foot to be moved.

So when we hear the words, "Ho, Ho, Ho!" this season, we should not think of chestnuts roasting on an open fire, but let's be reminded that this season is about the coming of God's promise. For us "Ho, Ho, Ho!" should mean: safety, security and protection!

Exciting Announcement

Finally, brothers and sisters, this season reminds us that we all have something to be excited about.

On the street corners the man in the red suit can only get us excited about shopping, buying and receiving gifts.

But, Ho, Ho, Ho! There's something we all have to be excited about and that's the goodness of the Lord!

Whenever we start talking about the goodness of the Lord, we get excited!

We get excited when we are sick sick, he's adoctor in our sick rooms!

When I'm in trouble he is my refuge and my strength!

When I'm weak he is the strength of my life!

When I'm low, he picks me up and turns me around!

When I need a blessing he's always on time!

We get excited because

—He's a shelter in a time of storm!

—He's a bridge over trouble water!

—He's a lawyer for every courtroom!

—He's a rock in a weary land!

I have tried him and I know he satisfies!

Ho, Ho, Ho there has never been a:

—Mountain that he didn't help me to climb;

Ho, Ho, Ho there has never been a Cross that he didn't help me to bear

Ho, Ho, Ho there has never been a Battle that he didn't help me to fight;

Ho, Ho, Ho there has never been a Enemy he didn't help me defeat!

Ho, Ho, Ho there has never been a Darkness that he didn't help me see my way through;

Ho, Ho, Ho there has never been Crises he didn't help me confront!

Ho, Ho, Ho there has never been a Trial that he didn't help me endure;

Ho, Ho, Ho there has never been a Burden he didn't help me to carry!

Ho, Ho, Ho a child was born in Bethlehem!

His name was Jesus try Jesus!

He lived 33 long years and died on Calvary!
The buried him in a borrowed tomb, but Early Sunday morning
Ho, Ho, Ho! He arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

After Christmas Visitor

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 26, 2004

SCRIPTURE:"And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.ÿAnd being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way." Matthew 2:11-12

Introduction

Did you have visitors for Christmas? One ofthe joys of the Christmas season is the arrival of visitors whether they are family or friends. Sometimes our house guests or visitors have come a very long way to get to us. Many have stood in long lines at airports, spent grueling and uncomfortable hours on highway buses or drove extremely long distances, often through inclement weather for the expressed purpose of dropping in to share a joyous moment with us. During this time there is fellowship, lively conversation, food and good times. That's one of the joys of the Christmas season, sharing joyous moments with family and friends.

In Bethlehem, when Christ was born, there were special visitors who came on the night of his birth. Shepherds who were grazing their flocks by night came to visit the couple and to see the Christ child whose birth had been prophesied many years before.

Today, technology allows us to visit in many different ways, so we received our visitors in many ways. Some received phone calls from relatives and friends. Soldiers, away at war, often visit home by means of satellites and the internet. Many received telephone calls from distant places with warm words and exciting news. Others received letters and cards from friends and acquaintances that brightened up your day. Still others were more traditional, they came in person to smile, stay awhile and leave.

There is one aspect of Christmas visitations that we should retain. We were ready for the arrival of the day. Not only were we ready but we actually looked forward to its coming and were prepared for any visitors. That's the way it should always be.

Perhaps you've heard the story of the woman who heard that the King was coming to visit her house, so she began to eagerly prepare. As she looked for the king, a man dressed in ragged clothes knocked on her door asking for water. She told the man she had no time to give him water because she was waiting on a visit from the king. A while later, a beggar knocked, asking for food. She brushed him aside as well because she was expecting a visit from the king. A third man was a cripple who needed help, but the woman was too busy for him as well. As the day came to a close, the woman was disappointed. She had been notified that the king would visit her home but he did not come. She complained to the palace officials and soon received a reply that read, "His majesty the King paid a visit to your home on the day appointed, not once but three times. First he came as a man seeking water, then as a man seeking food, then as a cripple. On all three occasions you would not receive him. He came to bring you blessings but you refused him, he shall not return."

We should be ready for any way that the Lord chooses to visit us, because anytime he comes, he comes to bring us news from heaven, advice and direction, or blessings from his abundance, saying "Behold I stand at the door and knock." When he knocks, we should be ready to entertain him.

As Christians, we are always mindful that we don't know the day or hour that the Lord will visit us in the days to come. We should be ready to receive him in any manner that he makes his appearance and to graciously entertain his presence and receive his gifts.

Exposition

This text focuses on a group of astrologers, known as Magi, who visited the Christ child after Christmas.

The Magi, often called "Wise Men" came to Bethlehem from the "East." We don't know how far from the East they traveled. If the distance was real far they could have been from China. If it was not so far, then these wise men could have traveled from what we know today as Iran or Iraq. In either instance, they would not have been able to travel from China or Iraq overnight, it would have taken about two years at the least, even more depending upon the distance.

While many paintings show the Magi along with the Shepherds bowing at the manger on Christmas night, it is more likely that the Magi made their arrival after Christmas, about two years later.

There are several clues to this mystery between verses 11 and 16 of this text. When the Magi arrived, they found Mary and Joseph in a house, not in a manger as they were on Christmas night. (v11). That same verse refers to Jesus as a child not as an infant, indicating time had passed. Verse 16 notes that when the wise men stopped in Jerusalem looking for the Christ child, Herod devised a plot to have him killed. Suspecting the child was at least two years old, he ordered the slaughter of boys two years old and under, to rid himself of a possible competitor to the throne. These three notations indicate that the Magi were not Christmas visitors but were after Christmas visitors who came, unannounced and unexpected to bring gifts to the child and his family. Had they brought those gifts on Christmas night, Mary and Joseph would have given a different offering eight days after Christ's birth at verse 24. Here they made a required offering because of the birth, but they gave the poor man's offering of two pigeons. It would have been a much bigger offering had they received presents of gold, frankincense and myrrh from the Magi.

On Christmas night, people knew that a child was going to be born. The angels had announced it to Mary and Joseph and to the shepherds. Visitors were expected. Two years later, Mary and Joseph were probably not expecting more visitors to see the Christ Child, but they were received graciously and their home was blessed as a result.

Divine Visitors

The visitors who came to Mary and Joseph were divinely appointed. They came bringing inspiration, adoration, and blessings. Whether it was Christmas night or years later, Mary and Joseph were ready to receive heavenly visitors. In a similar sense we should also be ready whenever circumstances, appointed by God are visited upon us.

GOOD NEWS: When the shepherds visited they brought good news. In the course of a year, God often brings good news to families. Like Mary and Joseph, we sometimes get our good news in the strangest and most awkward circumstances. Many of us would have been angry that they were shut out of the INN, forced to give birth in a cave-like manger. In the midst of that difficulty there was good news announced in heaven. No matter how difficult our situations get in life, we should always look for the good news from heaven.

The good news is that God is still on the throne and is working out his will in the lives of men each and every day.

The good news is that though we may not have all that we want in life and are far short of our own expectations, God is still blessing us.

To hear that good news we must study and listen to his word and be ready for him to speak.

PROTECTING HAND: When Herod sent word to kill all of the baby boys, an Angel warned Joseph of the approaching danger and the grace of God guided the family to Egypt, sheltered from harm. Because Joseph was a praying man he was able to received the Angelic visitor that warned him and prepared him for tough times ahead. In the same way, God visits us. He warns us of impending danger and gives us direction. Yet, we cannot receive divine visitations unless we are prepared to receive them. We receive direction from God usually in our prayer time and private meditations. In our quiet time, God directs us and shows how he will protect us.

When God visits he reveals to us the danger of certain actions we may take.

When God visits he shows us what to do and reassures our souls that we are safe in his arms.

No wonder the song writer declares that, “He walks with me and he talks with me and he tells me I am his own. And the joy we share, as we tarry there, none other has ever known!”

BLESSINGS: When the Magi came to Mary and Joseph they brought great blessings. For Mary and Joseph it was Gold, Frankincense and Myrrh. When God visits our lives he brings great blessings. We should always be ready to receive him, for we don't know when or how he will cause opportunity to knock on our doors.

When a job opening appears, that's God knocking at your door!

When a financial blessing is made available, that's God knocking at your door!

When we recover from sicknesses, overcome addictions and rise above difficulties, these are blessings that were left behind when God unexpectedly knocked on our doors!

We should be ready, we don't know when he will come to visit us.

When he comes to bring us a blessing open the door and let him in!

Visitors Leave Differently

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should follow the example of those who visited Mary and Joseph, and do what they did after Christmas; they told everyone about the goodness of the Lord.

When the Shepherds returned from their visit they were praising God for they had seen the Christ Child.

When the Magi returned, the scripture says they did not go back the way they came, but returned "another way.

Likewise, after Christmas, we who have been in the presence of God should tell what we saw and heard when God visited us.

What we tell should be from our own experience. There was no experience for the shepherds like seeing the Christ Child themselves. When they told others, they gave a testimony about something they had experienced themselves.

Those who are preparing to leave the city, returning to far destinations, have a story to tell. It is more than a story of family get togethers, reunions, fine foods and fellowship. It is a story of God's love.

Those who are taking down decorations and packing them away, have a story to tell. It is more than a story of beautifully decorated homes, bright colors and festive spirits. It is a story of how the love of God brought joy and hope into the hearts of every family member.

Those who are still carrying out the bags of wrappings, ribbons and boxes that contained so many presents, have a story to tell. It is more than a story of opened presents, gifts given and gifts received. It is a story of how God loved the world so much that he gave the greatest gift.

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Every Saint has a story to tell!

It is the story that began in Bethlehem and ended in Jerusalem!

It is a story that began with a borrowed manger and ended with a borrowed cross and an empty tomb!

It is a story that began in the darkness of night, but ended Early Sunday morning!

It is the story that Jesus, the Lamb of God, came to this earth, died and rose again that we might have a chance to everlasting life!

No. 9123-New Year

Possess
And Be Blessed

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 2, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse; A blessing, if ye obey the commandments of the LORD your God, which I command you this day:And a curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the LORD your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known. And it shall come to pass, when the LORD thy God hath brought thee in unto the land whither thou goest to possess it, that thou shalt put the blessing upon mount Gerizim, and the curse upon mount Ebal.ÿAre they not on the other side Jordan, by the way where the sun goeth down, in the land of the Canaanites, which dwell in the champaign over against Gilgal, beside the plains of Moreh? For ye shall pass over Jordan to go in to possess the land which the LORD your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein. And ye shall observe to do all the statutes and judgments which I set before you this day. Deuteronomy 11:26-32

Introduction

Do you have a plan for the new year? Have you set some goals and objectives for this year? Often we make resolutions and decisions about the new year. We have resolved that we are going to do things differently, live more productively and achieve desired results. Often our plans are very imaginative and creative, yet each year we seem to end the year having just marked time. The plans were good. The ideas were good, but somehow all of our best plans never got any further than the planning stage. In fact, they always seem to fizzle just days after we get started. Everything always seems to go wrong.

Now that the new year has begun each of us must analyze our previous year and make a determination about our approach this year.

There may be three things we need to do differently this year if we intend to make this the year that we take possession of what God has in store for us. First, we will need to change our perspective. Our entire life circumstance has a completely new look when we see it from a different position. A tree looks big when we stand it front of it. It looks small from the window of an airplane. The difference is perspective. The same is true with our problems and challenges. They look big when they are close, they are smaller from God's perspective. This year, it may be better if we see our goals from a godly perspective. Then we can see them clearly and will not be intimidated by the size of the task. Secondly, we may need to change our outlook or expectations.

We can't possess what's in store for us if we don't really expect to succeed. If we enter a challenging situation expecting to fail, that failed outlook will keep us from achieving our goal. Thirdly, we need to see what we want to do from the view point of what can be done with God's help. That's called seeing life through God's eyes.

That's when we start seeing every problem as an opportunity for God to do a mighty thing.

As Christians, we know that God has great things planned for us in the coming year. We plan to possess what he wants us to have and be blessed. To achieve that end we plan to rid ourselves of the curses that plagued us last year as we obediently work to possess the promises the new year offers.

Exposition

This text focuses on Israel as it prepared to enter into the promised land, faced with the prospect of obeying God or living in disobedience.

Just before his death, Moses gave instructions to Israel about entering the new land. He told the people that they would make it to the promised land, but once there they would have to decide the terms upon which they would attempt to possess the land.

This decision was to be made early, and it would be characterized by two mountains that sat side by side, Mt. Gerizim and Mt. Ebal. To symbolize their choices six of the tribes were told to climb Mt. Gerizim and six tribes sent representatives up Mt. Ebal. In the valley below the Priests with the Ark of the Covenant and all the people waited. Then the entire nation looked to Mt. Gerizim and heard blessings pronounced on those who chose to possess the land in accordance to God's holy law. When they finished, they turned to Mt. Ebal and heard curses pronounced on all of those who came into the new land with an attitude of disobedience to God.

The two mountains were a striking contrast. Mt. Gerizim was very fertile and rich. It symbolized the way God would bless the obedient. The other mountain was Mt. Ebal. Scholars say it was named Ebal because the name means "barren." Ebal was barren, dry and stony. It represented the outcome of the possession efforts of the disobedient.

Unique to the situation is the fact that both mountains were situated in a region that was not conducive to fertility. Gerizim would be fertile not because of any natural attributes but only because the providence of God would make it so. The only difference between Gerizim and Ebal is the favor of God. Without his divine hand, both would have the same result, barrenness.

The two mountains were spiritually important for Israel because they represented the worst and best prospects for the future. As they stared at the two mountains, it was clear that curses would result in bad times, but the favor and blessing of God would be much more preferred.

Whether they would make it to the promised land was not a question. Both mountains were located on the "Other side of Jordan." What they would do once there, was the decision the people had to make. They had to decide whether to try to possess their dreams while operating under God's curse, or whether to possess the land while enjoying God's favor.

At the threshold of their new experience, they had to decide how they would stand with God in the days ahead.

Discipline of Possession

There is a discipline associated with Possession. To possess and be blessed we must establish a personal discipline designed to possess that which God has in store for us. For 40 years Israel was content with its life in the wilderness. Their routine was rather mundane: Each morning they arose, went outside and gathered manna that had appeared overnight, drank water from the rock, took a few quick peeks at the pillar of cloud that hovered over the camp, did a few chores and their day ended. They made it through a day, but the did not come one step closer to possessing what God had in store for them. Possessing requires something different. It requires a new discipline and even a new way of thinking to possess what God has waiting for them on the other side of Jordan.

Is it possible that our daily regimen last year was similar to that of Israel in the wilderness. Each day we arose, ate some food, did a few chores or went to work or school, touched based with a few friends, came home, watched some television and went to bed. For many people, with a few modifications, that was their life last year. There is nothing inherently wrong or evil in that routine. However, it is an existence approach to life rather than a possession approach. An existence approach only wants to make it through each day. If the day closes without a sickness, tragedy, accident, or major frustration, we concluded that it was a good day. Many people experienced 365 such days last year. They made it through.

If we intend to do more than simply make it through this year, then we must switch from an existence mode to a possession mode. That means our whole approach to life shifts from "making it through" to possessing what God has for me. For Israel, that meant learning to do things differently. To possess the promised land they had to learn new skills. Farming was new to most of them who grew up in the wilderness. They had to learn the technology of the day and develop ways to maintain themselves. The land that they were destined to possess would be one that required them to do everything differently from the past.

If you are considering switching into a possession mode this year consider these attitudes:

READ AND THINK POSITIVELY: To fully possess and be blessed, you must read and think about ennobling things each day. Mark your bible with seven passages that you intend to read each week, one each day. Walk out of your door with the power of the word on your mind. Step out ready to possess and be blessed. Don't think "survival" think-possession. Don't think make my quota, think, "exceed my quota." Don't think, "pass the test" think, "Ace the test." This requires a transformation in the way you think. Romans 12:2 says, "And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove whatÿis that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." Mind transformation occurs when we become selective about what we read, the videos we watch, the music that we listen to. Mentally and spiritually, we are what we read, think and hear. This year, let God's word, spirit lifting music, soul enhancing movies and videos change your mode from existence to possession.

DUMP THE GARBAGE: To fully possess and be blessed, we must rid ourselves of people, places and things that trashed our lives last year. There were some people whose presence in our lives cursed us last year. Some places we went last year brought curses upon us. Some things we did last year, brought us nothing but trouble. If we are going to possess what God has in store for us for the coming year we will need to take out the trash. There is very little improvement you can make to your house or apartment if all of the garbage from last year is in your bedroom! When trash builds up in your life it stinks. If you don't take out the trash in your house, the stench will fill your house and get into your clothes. Everywhere you go, the stench will follow you, like a curse. If last year's garbage is in your living room, kitchen and closets. If your whole life is filled with last year's trashy people, places and things, the first thing we will need to do to possess what God has for us is "take out the trash!"

TRUST AND OBEY: To fully possess and be blessed, we must trust and obey God. Israel moved into the unknown. They were about to possess a land that was new to them, come face to face with people who intimidated them and face insurmountable obstacles at Jericho and other places. To possess, they would have to trust God completely. Whatever new frontier God has put in front of us, requires our complete trust in him to fully possess it. Whether it is a new career, business opportunity, educational pursuit, or a change in life-style, we cannot possess it without trusting in God. That's why David said, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and Lean Not Unto thine own understanding." To trust God means to courageously go forward. It does not mean you will not be nervous, cautious, and careful. It means that you will not be intimidated by the prospect of failure; you will "walk by faith and not by sight." As you trust, you will also live in obedience to God's commands. Obedience does not guarantee success, but it does guarantee God's favor. Obedience does not insure that everything will be easy for you, but it causes the favor of God to show you a safe route through a stony, pit filled road. This year, decide to trust God to make it happen for you. Obey his commands and watch him turn stony roads and infertile lands into valleys of productivity.

Posses and be Blessed

Finally brothers and sisters, every believer should go forward into the future, confident that if God goes with us we can possess whatever is for us and be blessed.

Israel chose to march forward in faith, trusting in God. Their journey into the promised land resulted in unbelievable accomplishments. The Jordan rolled back and they walked through on dry ground. The Walls of Jericho tumbled down and the sun stood still.

Because they were blessed their march into the promised land was blessed.

Every child of God should take courage and move into the future with the same confidence. As long as God is by our side, he will strengthen our heart.

Moses found himself faced with the Red Sea, but found that sea waters can roll back and make a dry path, when God stands by your side.

Joshua found himself faced with the high walls of Jericho, but found that even high and well fortified walls can tumble down when God stands by your side.

A widow woman whose barrel of food had run low found that, there is always bread from heaven when God stands by your side.

Hezekiah received his death notice and all the family was called in, but he found out that even death has no power, when God stands by your side.

When the Lord is with you, it won't matter how rocky the road or how high the mountain. When the Lord is with you there is:

-Peace in the midst of your Problems

-Calm in the midst of your crises

-Gladness in the midst of your sorrows

-Assurance in the midst of your affliction

I don't know about you but I have decided that I need the Lord to stand by me. If the Lord stands by me, he'll give me a:

-light to shine in my darkness

-Straight path to walk, when I can't find my way

-Lift up when I've fallen down

-Strong hand to hold, when I'm feeling weak

No wonder the old warriors sing "Lord, hold my hand, while I run this race, I can't run this race alone!"

As the new year begins, we should make ourselves a commitment to stay with the Lord.

Jesus, is a way maker, bridge builder and problem solver

Jesus, who died and rose from the grave will stand by your side if you'll just call him!

When the storms of life are raging, stand by me!

When the world is tossing me, like a ship out on the sea, thou who rulest wind and water... Stand by me!

FUBU Blessings

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 8, 2004

SCRIPTURE: The LORD hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad. Psalm 126:3 ; "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Gal. 2:20

Introduction

Has anyone ever done something for you and you sensed that it was special and personal? We like the personal touch. We like knowing that we are not just a face in the crowd. The generic card is fine, but most people read the personal note on the side before they read the pre-printed note on the card, because the personal note is for us. Gifts that are hand made are personal. Generics get the job done but personalization is more effective.

We are impressed when things are for us and nobody but us.

FUBU is a popular clothing company that began in 1992 in the home of Daymond John who came up with the idea to make and sell his own tie-top hats as a means of making "easy money." He mortgaged his home for $100,000 and turned half of it into a factory and the other half into living space for he and several neighborhood friends that began what they called "Team FUBU"-The name FUBU identified a clothing line that is "For us and By Us." The "us" was obviously the Hip Hop Generation both Black and white.

The idea of something being "For Us and By Us" suggests that whatever is being offered is uniquely for a targeted group and comes from persons associated with the target group. Thus, FUBU took off and is now a major brand name around the nation and in many parts of the world.

Abraham Lincoln in his Gettysburg Address expressed a similar enthusiasm. He promoted our national government as being a government "Of the people, by the people and for the people." It had a certain uniqueness that cannot be denied.

Biblical History has shown that God often identified nations, races, families and even individuals and made them special targets of blessings and special considerations over the years. The Children of Israel were once God's special race, or chosen people, and were given the benefit of his protection, grace and blessings. Even the Messiah himself came to the world as a member of this special chosen race. The family of Abraham was blessed with abundance over the years as was the family of David and others. Their families received blessings that were uniquely targeted to them, according to God's purposes. There have been millions of individuals who have been targeted to receive special blessings from God, for reasons they have not been able to comprehend, but were obviously according to his purpose.

The ways that God blessed believers varied. Sometimes he blessed them with wealth and expanded their territories as he did with Abraham and Jabez. Sometimes he blessed them with ingenuity as he bless Jacob who could take any bad situation and turn it into good one. Sometimes he blessed them with bold spirits such as he did with Elijah and Elisha. At other times his blessings involved healings such as those given to thousands of blind, cripple, and mentally ill people who followed Christ.

As Christians, we know that all blessings come from God. He showers us with blessings daily and gives us the benefit of his benevolence. What he gives us are FUBU blessings- that are For Us and Nobody But us! In return we should give him the best that we have to offer.

Exposition

This text focuses on the special ways in which God blessed Israel and Christ blesses believers with blessings that are for us and nobody but us.

Israel enjoyed the special favor of God for many years. God raised them from a slave population to a rising world power under Solomon. All along their journey they took pride in being God's chosen people. Why God chose them remains a mystery, but it was evident that God was keeping a promise made to Abraham many years before, to make a great nation out of his descendants.

There were blessings that seemed to be for them and nobody but them. In Egypt when famine covered most of the land, there was food and fresh water for them, and nobody but them.

When they traveled through the wilderness, there was manna from heaven and quail meat everyday, prepared for them and nobody but them.

Why? It certainly was not because of their goodness or strong faith. They constantly complained, lost faith and wanted to go back. It was only the grace of God.

When David wrote Psalm 126 he reflected on the ways that God, "turned the captivity of Zion." It was a special act that brought joy to their hearts and singing on their lips. They felt special again because "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."

Writing to the Galatians the Apostle Paul noted the personal nature of Christ's sacrifice on Calvary. Within the plurality of the "whole world" that is noted in John 3:16, he made it clear that the sacrifices of Christ were "for me." He personalized it with his own blood and narrowed the field of those eligible for salvation to those who believed. His sacrifice on Calvary would be for those believers and nobody but them.

Whether it's the Old Testament or the New Testatment, God's method is the same. He showers blessings on believers that seem to be "For us and nobody but us."

Why Is He Blessing Me?

When things go wrong, we often ask, "Why me?" We review our lives to see if we have done something to deserve the conditions we face. The same should be true when we have been blessed. We should ask, "Why Me?"

BLESSINGS HAVE PURPOSE: Whenever we are blessed we should remember that God doesn't do anything by chance. There is a reason.

There is a reason he allowed us to get our jobs and others were turned down. There is a reason we were spared losses of death and tragedy that others face. There is a reason we are not standing in a soup line for a meal every day. Nothing happens by chance. If God is blessing us there is a purpose. Each blessing we receive is usually connected to the expansion of the kingdom of God in some way.

EXPECTATIONS FOLLOW UNDESERVED BLESSINGS: Most of us already know that we do not deserve the blessings we have received. We have not lived up to our spiritual potential. Yet, God keeps blessing us; why? In Luke 13: 6-9 Jesus gave the parable of the fig tree that was not producing any fruit. The order was given to cut the tree down but was suspended when the gardener asked for a chance to give it special treatment for a while. If after such special treatment, it still did not produce, then it could be cut down. That tree received special fertilization and pampering but had produced nothing. However there was an expectation that the tree would ultimately bear fruit. The fact that we have been blessed in our negligence, does not suggest that God is pleased with our lack of service. It means that he is dunging the fig tree. There is an ultimate expectation that the tree should bear fruit or the special treatment will cease. We are expected to be more than recipients of blessings; we are expected to produce fruit for the kingdom of God.

BLESSED TO BE A BLESSING: Whatever the reason that God chooses to bless us, we should remember that he has individually selected us to receive what it is that we have received. Consider the billionaire who rose to riches on the belief that God will make a way. One day he announced that he would give $10 million to an unnamed person in an open ceremony. He rented a football stadium an announced that the person who would receive the gift must be present and wear a locket that is a family heirloom. Over 150,000 people showed up on the appointed day, all wearing lockets in hopes of receiving the $10 million prize. After two days of reviewing each person the billionaire left, disappointed because he did not find the person he sought. However, sitting on the curb next to his limosine was a man wearing a familiar locket. When the billionaire saw it he asked the man to open it and it revealed half a picture of a Negro woman. The billionaire opened his hand and fitted the piece of a picture that he had carried all his life to the one in the locket. "You are the one." He said. "You shall receive my prize." The homeless man asked, "Why me? Because of this old locket my great grandmother gave me?" The billionaire explained that when he was a child his nanny rocked him and sang to him. One day he played with her locket and tore the picture inside. He cried because there was no way he could put the picture back together. She didn't get angry, she just kept saying, "The Lord will make a way, child." I don't know what happened to her but I remember her words, the Lord will make a way." I made that the motto of my life and in her memory son, I give you this $10 million in hopes that this might be the way to put the picture back together again.- Go and be a blessing to someone else."

Why is God blessing us? Why is he being so kind to us when we certainly don't deserve what he has given us? Has God made a mistake? Did he really intend to bless someone else and we received it because of a heavenly error? Nothing God does is by mistake or without forethought and purpose. If we have been the recipient of blessings we know are undeserved, it is obvious God has some reason for treating us with so much favor. What that reason is escapes us, but we know it exists. One thing is for sure, if God is blessing us, he definitely expects us to be a blessing to someone else.

For Us and Nobody But Us

Finally brothers and sisters, we must consider that the greatest blessing of all is salvation, and it's for us and nobody but us.

We are excited when we think about the fact that despite our weaknesses and short comings that God chose do perform a great act of love for us and nobody but us.

Each believer should get joy in knowing that our relationship with Christ is personal. We are not lost in a cloud of believers. What he does, he does for me, and nobody but me!

When Paul wrote to the Galatians he was excited that Christ loved us so much that he would make great personal sacrifices with no other motive than to do it "for me and nobody but me."

That means that everyday we should thank God for our FUBU blessings, because what we get is for us and nobody but us.

Believers should remember that the sacrifices of the savior were personal. Christ had no other reason for giving his life than to make a way for us.

Christ had no ulterior motives and nothing to gain himself. His sacrifice on Calvary was a pure act of love and affection. It was, without a doubt, for us and nobody but us.

The people of Mesopotamia built a great tower to make a name for themselves. However, when Jesus decided to pick up the old rugged cross it was not to make a name for himself. It was already written that "at the name of Jesus, every knee shall bow and every tongue confess" that he is Lord of Lords. When Jesus died, it was not for a name but he died for us and nobody but us.

Solomon built a great palace to have a beautiful place to live. But when Jesus decided to go to Calvary it wasn't to secure a palace in glory for himself the heavens were already his throne room and earth his footstool. I heard him declare in John 14:2, "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you.

I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

Sin used us and did things to us; but the grace of God did something for us, and nobody but us.

Sin did something to us and pushed us down, but God's grace did something for us, it picked us up. He did it for us and nobody but us.

Sin did something to us and left us filthy, but grace did something for us and washed us in the blood. He did it for us and nobody but us.

Sin did something to us and placed us on sinking sand, but grace did something for us and placed our feet on solid ground.

He did it for us and nobody but us.

Not only has the Lord done things for us in the past, but every day he's doing something "for us."

In the morning, we get a FUBU blessing. He's doing something for us and nobody but us!

In the noonday, we get a FUBU blessing. He's doing something for us and nobody but us!

In the midnight hour, we get a FUBU blessing. He's doing something for us and nobody but us!

Christ carried an old rugged cross, not for himself, but for us and nobody but us.

They drove nails in his hands, not for crimes he had done, but he did it for us and nobody but us.

He died out on Calvary, not for himself, but he did it for us and nobody but us.

But early Sunday morning, he did something else for us. He arose from the grave with a victory over death and the grave.

Because he died for us and nobody but us, he established our FUBU rights to the tree of life, it's for us and nobody but us!

Because he rose for us and nobody but us, we have a FUBU claim on the future. Eyes have not seen all of the wonderful things he has prepared, for us and nobody but us.

The Meaning of the Dream

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 16, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream. Then spake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriack, O king, live for ever: tell thy servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation. The king answered and said to the Chaldeans, The thing is gone from me: if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof, ye shall be cut in pieces, and your houses shall be made a dunghill. But if ye show the dream, and the interpretation thereof, ye shall receive of me gifts and rewards and great honor: therefore show me the dream, and the interpretation thereof." Daniel 2:3-6

Introduction

Have you ever had a dream but could not understand its meaning? It's a frustrating experience to dream strange dreams and feel they have some significance, but the answer evades every attempt at interpretation. We've had a few strange dreams in our lives that were really weird. As we told the dream to our friends or associates, they laughed with us, but still we were puzzled about the meaning of the dreams. It is even more frustrating to have a dream and not remember it, especially if it was a good dream. That's when you strain your brain trying to recollect the details of a dream that clicked through your mind in the night. No matter whether they were great dreams or small dreams, we struggle to find the meaning of our dreams.

The experts say that our dreams have meaning because they reflect in a jagged way, our inner mind and soul. In our dreams, images tumble around that seem to have little meaning, but often they do. For example, the experts say dreams about airplanes involve our concerns about reaching new destinations. Plane crashes in our dreams often represent failure or uncertainty about direction. Dreams about doors are said to represent being shut out or an opportunity unlocked. Dreams about tall and significant trees often refer to power and greatness; when such trees are cut or fall down it points to a flaw of some kind.

Telephones in dreams reflect communication. Those who dream about dialing wrong numbers, phones that don't work, or the inability to get to the phone are said to reflect frustration over difficulties in communication. Those who dream about calling 9-1-1 are calling out for help in their dreams.

Our nocturnal dreams reflect our desires, fears, hopes and frustrations. The experts say it is very difficult for a person to sleep without a dream. So, all of us need to dream.

Beyond the dreams of our sleep there are also the dreams of our waking hours. Just as we need to dream to sleep, we also need to dream to spiritually thrive and emotionally survive. Dreams propel us and sustain us. Those who want to stagnate us need only to take away our dreams.

In the history of the African-American struggle we have been sustained by the dream of freedom. When we were slaves we dreamed of being free to work our own land, chart our own course and make our own destiny. We dreamed of being fully recognized under the law. We dreamed of educational opportunities for our children and the chance to succeed without the hindrance of racial prejudice. We dreamed of a colorful world where color would be recognized and celebrated but not used as a diminishing factor or a barrier to success.

If you want to kill a person, a family, or a race of people, stop them from dreaming!

Consider the slave master who made a point of trampling on any dreams that his slaves would ever have of becoming free. Even when it came to the slaves dreams about heaven the master thought it important to trample those dreams too.

One day the master called in his favorite house slave Tom. "Tom" said the master. "I had a dream last night." The old slave who had a reputation for being quick witted and wise, bowed his head, faked ignorance and said "you did Massa, lets hear bout' yo' dream!" The master said "I dreamed that I died and there was some sort of mixup and I ended up in Nigra heaven. It was an awful looking place. There was Nigras everywhere. The streets were muddy. The buildings were falling down. Watermelon rinds and pig's feet were laying everywhere. It was a horrible looking place." The old slave was quick to answer but he had to find a way to say it just right where the master, who wasn't too bright, would not get the point.

"Massa. I'se glad that you mention that, because it be a strange thang because I had a strange dream too. I dreamed I died and there was a mixup and I ended up in slave master's heaven. It was a real pretty place. It had streets that were shiny and yellow like Gold. It had 12 pretty gates that were smooth and pearly white. They had rows and rows of big houses called mansions and they lined every street. There wasn't no trash laying around, no water melon rinds and no hog pens. It was a real clean place.

"There was just one thang that looked kinda strange ...there wasn't a single soul in the whole place!"

If you want to kill a child, tell him that he is nobody and is doomed to failure! Kill his dream! Tell him that because he's slow in school that he can never learn! That's what they told Albert Einstein but he wouldn't accept that interpretation. Tell him that because he stutters that he will never be an actor; that's what they told James Earl Jones but he wouldn't believe it! Tell him that because he's real short he'll never play basketball; that's what they told Spud Web but he wouldn't believe it!

If you want to kill a relationship, let something or someone kill your dream and it will die on the vine!

The significance of Martin Luther King's dream is that it presents an achievable goal to us that keeps us living, striving and pursing the elusive dream of freedom and respect. Yet, even today there are those who are interpreting the dream to mean everything except what Dr. King taught. Then there are others who have forgotten the dream altogether and have made one of their own.

As Christians, we share the Christian dream. We dream of a world where everyone recognizes the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. We dream of a world where the Christ of Martin Luther is King.

Exposition

This text focuses on Daniel as he is challenged to both reveal and interpret the meaning of King Nebuchadnezzar's dream.

Daniel was a prophet with the unusual gift of interpreting dreams through the revelation of God. This text gives us a clear example of his exercise of this unusual gift in the courtyards of Babylon. Like Joseph who also interpreted the dream of Pharaoh in the Book of Genesis, Daniel was called upon to tell the king the meaning of a dream that would have far reaching impact upon his kingdom.

The King had a dream that seemed to have a divine origin but he could not remember the dream and therefore had no idea what the dream meant. The king ordered all of his astrologers and soothsayers to tell him what he dreamed, under the threat of death. He did not know what he dreamed, but was sure that if he heard it again, he would recognize it. He needed to know what he dreamed, but they were unable to accommodate his demand. He threatened to cut them in pieces and destroy their families if they could not tell the meaning of the dream because "the thing is gone from me." -It bothered him, not to remember his dream.

Daniel told the king his dream and interpreted its meaning. He dreamed that he saw a great statue that had a head of gold, breast and arms of silver, belly and thighs of brass, legs of iron but feet of iron and clay. The statute would be toppled by a stone cut out without hands and brought to the ground. The dream represented the great kingdoms of the earth that would succeed and gain greatness in the land. The stone represented the coming kingdom of Christ that would grow without the power of any human hands but only by the power of God. It would ultimately be the power of the world, with Christ as its king.

For his explanation of the dream and interpretation, Daniel was rewarded with high esteem and position in the land, because he knew the meaning of the dream.

The Thing is Gone From Me

King Nebuchadnezzar was troubled because the "the thing has gone from me." He did not know what he dreamed. As our nation, reflects on the dream of Dr. Martin Luther King, some 45 years after he announced it in the summer of 1963, there are many who can say, "The thing is gone from me."

What is the dream? America has lost sight of the dream and in many ways 'the thing has gone from us."

While many focus on the conclusion of Dr. King's famous speech which summed up his dream, many have forgotten the essence of the dream detailed in the body of his speech that day in Washington D.C.

Many have forgotten that he dreamed about an end to poverty in America in which the poor are on an "island of poverty in the midst of a vast ocean of material prosperity." Many have forgotten that the main thrust of Dr. King's movement was to lift the Negro out of poverty and despair.

Many have forgotten that his was a call for justice in a land where white policemen were killing and beating our fathers, sons and daughters and walking away unscathed. Hear his words, "And as we walk, we must make the pledge that we shall always march ahead. We cannot turn back. There are those who are asking the devotees of civil rights, "When will you be satisfied?" We can never be satisfied as long as the Negro is the victim of the unspeakable horrors of police brutality." Many have forgotten his demand that "Justice run down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream." -The thing has gone from us.

Many have forgotten his call for America to cash its promissory note to Black America that would open the door of opportunity for us, breaking down barriers of racism and hatred.

Many have forgotten his call for us to challenge unjust laws and his denunciation of wars waged against impoverished people for profit and gain.

Because "the thing is gone from us" we have made a dream of our own and proceeded to interpret it.

The dream we created uses statistics that document poverty to get grants for the well connected at the expense of the poor.

The dream we created becomes silent about police brutality, killings and police murders if our protest will injure our political friends.

The dream we created is distant and foreign to the Dr. King's dream. We many ways we can say like Nebuchadnezzar, "the thing is gone from me."

The Meaning of the dream

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that God gives a meaning to every God-given dream!

Joseph had a dream that his brothers would one day bow down to him. They became angry, but there was a meaning in the dream! He became the prime minister of Egypt and they bowed down to him!

The butler and the baker had dreams! But there was a meaning to their dreams. One man died while the other was released from prison.

It's a good thing to have a dream and know what the dream means.

It's an even better thing to refuse to let anyone misinterpret your dream, trample it or cause it to die.

If we have a god-given dream that is empowered by the Holy Ghost, there is a meaning in your dream, don't let it die!

Abraham had a dream of the land of promise, though he wandered for many years in strange lands, his dream refused to die!

Moses had a dream of freedom and sovereignty for Israel, though he never made it to the Promised Land himself, his dream refused to die!

Martin Luther King had a dream of equality and brotherhood, though he was slain by an assassin's bullet, the dream refused to die.

But even greater than Abraham, Moses and Martin Luther King, there is Jesus, who went beyond merely having a dream, Jesus IS our dream.

Jesus is our dream of moving out of our:

—Hunger and acquiring a satisfied soul!

—Darkness and walking into the marvelous light

—Sinking sand experience and standing on the Solid Rock!

—Spiritual Slavery to complete spiritual freedom!

—Defeat into the glory of victory!

—Despair to unspeakable joy!

He is our dream of moving from "Soon I will be done with the troubles of the world" to 'I'm so glad that trouble don't last always!"

There is meaning in the dream!

Because he was misunderstood he was rejected by the people in his own home town, but there was a meaning in the dream!

Because he dreamed of a new day he was persecuted by the scribes and Pharisees, but there was meaning in the dream!

Because they did not know who he was, they whipped him mercilessly all night long and tried him in hostile courts, but there was meaning in the dream!

Because they could not believe the essence of his dream, they hung him on a cross, stretched out between two thieves, but there was meaning in the dream!

Though buried in a borrowed tomb and guarded by soldiers the dream refused to die, for Early Sunday morning the Vision of Bethlehem, and the nightmare of Calvary became the resurrected dream of the world!

There is a meaning in his death, it means that because he died, I have a right to the tree of life!

There is a meaning to his resurrection; it means that because he lives, I can see tomorrow!

Because he lives……!

Heavenly Nicknames

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 23, 2005

SCRIPTURE: Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name. Revelation 3:12

Introduction

Do you have a nickname? Many people have an official name, but they also have a nickname. Most of us have three names: Our official name, the short cut version of our name, and a nickname. Our official name is given to us at birth by our parents who chose our names for various reasons. A father named his son Martha because he knew he would always have to fight people because of the name and he wanted hid to be tough. The man named George wanted a son, but he got a daughter, so he named her Georgia. There are various reasons behind our official names. Sometimes we are often referred to by the shortcut version of our names. T-nan-zi-de-shun is often shortened to "T" and Me-man-de-meticia is shortened to "Me Me." Sometimes we often dislike our names and drop our official names and use our middle name or shortcut versions of our names.

Short cuts are not "nicknames." They are just short ways to say long and cumbersome names.

Nicknames often describe a hope, experience or a family designation. People, professions even states have nicknames. Louisiana is called the "Sportsman's Paradise." Florida is the "Sunshine State" and Missouri is called the "Show me" state.

Our heroes and superstars have names; we know "Shaq" means Oneal and "Iron Mike" means Tyson. Sometimes we never see the real name just the nickname, such as "Ice T" or "Ice Cube" or "Mr. T."

Many of our nicknames are often earned during our youth. They are usually associated with some memorable experience good or bad, to which we are associated. As we think of our friends and acquaintances, just recalling the nickname itself brings back many memories of our youth. Youth today, will earn a nickname or two by their behavior or exploits with their peers. These nicknames will follow them all of their lives.

Our parents pick our names, we pick what name we will use, but we seldom get to choose our nicknames. We can call ourselves whatever we want, but nicknames that stick are usually given to us by others. It reflects the way others see us. Jesus assembled his disciples and asked, "Whom do men say, I am?" They gave him a variety of names that were used to describe him that ranged from "John the Baptist" to "Elijah." Peter concluded that "Thou art the Christ."

"The Christ" - it was a name that stuck for the young man who simply had one name which was "Jesus." That name embodied his mission on earth and was the sum total of his journey here. While many think that Jesus' name is Jesus Christ, with Christ as his surname, in fact Jesus only had one name "Jesus" who was from Nazareth, to distinguish him from Jesus who may have been from another city or town.

"The Christ" is what we would call a "nickname" because it described Jesus. "The Christ" is a name which means the "anointed one." The term "Christ" is used 514 times in the New Testament. In fact, it is used so much that many came to believe that it was part of Jesus' name, "Jesus Christ." Rather than being his name, it was really his nickname, a name which reflected how he was perceived among the people. Those who referred to Jesus as "the Christ" were those who followed his life and mission and were convinced that he was who he claimed to be- the savior.

If "Baby Face" describes the entertainer who had a face like a baby and "Scar face" describes Al Capone; if Madonna describes a singer and the Refrigerator describes a huge football player, what kind of nickname would describe our life experience?

If we were given a nickname to describe our Christian life, what would that nickname be? Native Americans take the names of animals to describe themselves. What would our nicknames be? Big Bear, because we are so strong, Lion because we are so bold; or mouse because we are so timid. If we always repeat what others say they may call us Parrot or Hawk if we appear to be a predator.

Like it or not, people have nicknames for us that seldom go away.

As Christians, we want to be known as a "Child of God." That's the name that is important to us and the only name of consequence that will matter when the roll is called up yonder.

Exposition

This text focuses on the close of a set of epistles written to the seven churches of Asia Minor telling them the evaluation of their service by the savior.

John, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, shared with the churches certain insights into their service. He prefaced many of his letters with the words, I know thy works, and closed them with "He that overcometh" which contained the promised reward of faithful believers.

In this summary written to the Church in Philadelphia, John tells of three types of names that the faithful can expect to receive from the Lord.

Matthew Henry says each believer will be a monumental pillar in the new temple of God upon which will be written the nicknames of the faithful.

The names written will be the name of God, in whose cause we engaged, whom we served, and for whom we suffered in this warfare; and the name of the city of God.

It is the name of the church of God, the New Jerusalem, which came down from heaven. On this pillar shall be recorded all the services the believer did to the church of God, how he asserted her rights, enlarged her borders, maintained her purity and honor.

The new name of Christ, the Mediator, the Redeemer, the captain of our salvation will be assigned to us to reflect the quality and fervor of our service.

The name of God

John said in that great day, when the battle is over, in the temple of God, will be inscribed the name of God.

Today, we have a variety a names we call God, some are biblical; while some are from our experience.

When we are sick we call upon him as JEHOVAH-RAPHA, because that means, "I am the Lord that healeth thee.' We have learned that he is a healing God. When we are sick, it's good to know that Jehovah-Rapha is a great healer for whatever ails our body or soul.

When we can't see our way, we call on JEHOVAH-JIREH because that name means 'the Lord is our provider." When our supply of resources is running low, it is good to know that the Lord will provide.

When our money is gone and provisions have nearly disappeared, it is good to know Jehovah-jireh is available in such situations.

When there is confusion everywhere, we call on JEHOVAH-SHALOM because that name means that God is our peace. In this troubled world we must experience God as our peace. In times of confusion, many have found God to be a God of peace.

When there is disruption, or insecurity all around, it is good to call upon Jehovah-shalom who brings peace in the midst of confusion.

When we have failed we called on JEHOVAH-NISSI because that name means the Lord is our banner of victory. He is the lord of hosts and commands the vast heavenly army. He will fight the battle for us and give us the victory. He will lift our head and honor us. We need not fear shame and failure when we have God as our Jehovah-Nissi.

Among the various names inscribed on the temple of God will also be the common names we use when we call upon God. It may be "Lord", "Lordy", "My God." We gave God these nicknames because they reflect the way we have experienced him in our lives.

Name of the Church

The second name that will be inscribed on the pillars of the temple will be the name of the church, the New Jerusalem.

This is the place where our service to the church, specifically to the local congregation will be recorded.

Here we will see our nicknames that will reflect our years of service. We don't know exactly how the names will be written but written somewhere on the pillars might be:

CHOIRBOY: For the man who sang faithfully in the choir.

BIG HEART: For the believer whose heart was open to others.

HANDY MAN: For the member who always fixes things that are broken.

SUPERTEACHER: For those who use their gifts to teach about the kingdom.

COOKIE: For those who baked, cooked and served others with their gift.

We are earning a nickname, whether we like it or not. We are often told the good nicknames to our faces. Behind our backs, our negative nicknames are mumbled such as:

BENCH MEMBER: The one who belongs to the church but does nothing in it.

BOSSY: The one who takes over and runs every project with a stern and dictatorial style.

MESSY: The one who enjoys dabbling in destructive conversation that tears down rather than builds up.

FREE LOADER: The one who enjoys the privileges of membership without paying their fair share.

ABSENTEE: The one who is seldom present when the congregation worships, serves or fellowships.

HUNGRYMAN: For the member who comes to fellowship only when food is served.

MOTORMOUTH: For the member who always talks through every worship service or NODOZ: for the member who sleeps through every worship.

Unfortunately, those who have negative nicknames won't find their names written in the temple of the Lord because none but the righteous, shall see God.

Our New Names

Finally, John said Jesus the Son of God will give every believer a new name.

In the new kingdom Jesus himself will rename the saints. He will take away the names given to us by our parents he will give us new names, that reflect our relationship with the kingdom of God.

It is not recorded what our new names will be, but only that the names will reflect our service to the savior.

The first two names reflect the names of God the father and our service to the city of God or the church. The last name will reflect our relationship with the savior. So verse 12 finds Jesus saying "I will write upon him my new name."

What nickname will Christ give us to describe our service?

Somebody may well be called FAITH, because when the whole world gave up they continued to trust in the Lord

Somebody may well be called COURAGE, because when others trembled in fear they remained bold, depending on the Lord

Somebody may well be called HOPE, because no matter how dark our way became, they always believed that the Lord will make a way!

Somebody may well be called, LOYAL because no matter how many others abandoned the Old Ship of Zion they remained faithful to the church

Won't it be a great day when we all get to heaven and review the millions of names of the pillars of the temple and find our nickname written in the blood of the lamb?

Today youth are trying to develop a good name, there is no better nick than to be called that is better than a child of God.

It's alright to be called "Poochie" or "Sweetthang" or "big dawg" but it's even better to be recognized in heaven as a child of the King.

When you are in the family of God you are blessed with a powerful family name, the name of Jesus.

Acts 4:12 says "neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

The name of Jesus is known around the world and even in heaven. For Philippians 2:10-11 says, "That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

Jesus, somebody nicknamed him the King of Glory;

Jesus, somebody nicknamed him the Lord mighty in battle!

Jesus, somebody nicknamed him a bridge over troubling water!

Jesus, somebody nicknamed him King of Kings and Lord of Lord!

Jesus, who died on Calvary on rose on the third day.

One of these days he's coming back again to bring us a new name!

No wonder the song writer said, "I got a new name, over in glory and it's mine, mine!

Dancing In The End Zone

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 6, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "And David danced before the LORD with all his might; and David was girded with a linen ephod." 2 Samuel 6:14

Introduction

Have you ever been so happy you felt like dancing or shouting? If you have then you share the exuberation of those who achieve great goals and find it difficult to hold their peace or contain their excitement. Our responses to great news and victories may range from the power filled "Yes!" to actually getting from our seats shouting, dancing, hugging friends and celebrating. Usually our excitement mirrors our association with the history of the accomplishment. When we know the long struggle that led to the moment, it's hard to keep silent; and even harder to resist dancing, shouting and other forms of excitement.

We often see these great moments at athletic contests; when players achieve touchdowns. The fans are screaming and the players are excited too. But about 20 years ago a phenomenon began in the end zone. Young Black players began "dancing in the end zone" when Icky Woods began the Icky Shuffle. Through the 80's and 90's we saw a number of end zone routines by athletes who celebrated their touchdowns with a variety of dances, shuffles and steps. The end zone excitement was part of the game. The fans liked it and the players pushed to make touchdowns so that they could perform their end zone dance.

The owners were not amused. Referees have been instructed to flag anything that appears to be "excessive end zone celebration"

So, When Deion "Primetime" Sanders began his famous high step enroute to an interception or a touchdown the NFL began to crack down. In the year 2000, The St. Louis Rams were unstoppable and they knew it. They had a memorable team dance to reassure the opposing team and the St. Louis fans: The "bob and weave." Regardless which team member scored, several players would huddle in a circle and demonstrate the famed dance. At this point the refs had enough and began to unfairly penalize the Rams each time they did it.

But the end zone celebrations continued and began to become rather silly. In 2003 New Orleans Saints wide receiver Joe Horne's end zone dance included a cell phone antic. Terrell Owens of the Philadelphia Eagles had a Sharpie Signing routine that really irritated the owners. When he put the cell phone down and danced with the cheerleaders, he was fined for that too. Last year the Detroit Lions were penalized for jumping on top of each other after a TD. They were excited for their pre-season victory after a miserable 2003 year.

What's interesting about NFL owners is that while they punished players for dancing in the end zone in real games, the NFL video games called "NFL Street" offered "style points" for players who danced in the end zone. Dancing in the end zone was OK if the owners made money, but not if the players and the fans had a little fun on their own.

Regardless to what we think about the end zone dances, one thing is certain, the only players who were dancing in the end zone were those who had scored touchdowns. It's hard to stop the excitement when victory is so near.

That's the way it was when Jesus came to town on Palm Sunday. The people were shouting and cutting palm branches and throwing them in the street. They shouted so loud that the officials warned Jesus to tell his followers to keep silent and he answered, "If these hold their peace, the rocks would cry out."

It's hard to hold your peace when God has done something good for you. You may not do a Dieon Sanders high step, or a bob and weave like the Rams but we have our own little private dance that cannot be denied. We simply can't hold our peace, once we make it to the end zone.

As Christians, we are eternally grateful for the blessings God has bestowed upon us. We never stop praising him and giving him glory for each of life's victories.

Exposition

This text focuses upon David as he danced a great dance in celebration of the return of the Ark of the Covenant.

In the Old Testament, the Ark of the Covenant was a symbol of the presence of God with Israel. It was golden cubical that was ordered constructed by Moses during the wilderness journey of Israel. It symbolized the presence of God with the people. The enemies of Israel noticed that they seemed to be victorious whenever they had the ark and the Philistines stole it from them. Yet it only brought them trouble and inflicted hemorrhoids on the men of each city that housed it.

Israel felt lost without the Ark. However, it was returned to Israel but was kept in a house and guarded for 20 years. David wanted the ark to play a greater role in the kingdom. God's presence was important. He ordered the ark removed from the house where it was kept and it was brought to Obed-edom with great fanfare. However, enroute one of the Levites inadvertently touched the ark while attempting to keep it from falling and was struck dead. While the ark brought trouble for the Philistines, it brought great blessings to Obed-edom.

David ordered a second attempt to get the ark to Jerusalem, especially when he heard of the great blessings that came to Obed-edom because of its three month presence (v10-11). When the Ark finally arrived in Jerusalem, after so many failures and having been in the hands of enemies, stored in a house for 20 years and out of public sight, David was overwhelmed.

David was so excited that he stripped off his clothes to his ephod, or what we would call underclothing. For a king to assume the ceremonial role of common priests, dancing and leaping with all of his might, celebrating before the people was considered undignified for a man of his status. If no one else in the kingdom said anything to him his wife Michal despised his naked dancing (v16). When she called him to task about it at verse 20 she was rebuked and never touched by David again. She remained childless all of her life.

David had achieved a victory for the Lord. He celebrated the return of God's presence in the life of the nation. He danced a dance of spiritual celebration. It was a moment of victory he would not be denied.

To dance in the end zone, you have to make a touch down

David danced in the streets of Jerusalem because he had scored a major victory for the home team. The ark was home at last. If the ark had not come home there would have been no dance.

If there is no achievement, there is no dance.

Today, there are many people who cannot dance an end zone dance because they are afraid to come out of the comfort zone. Those who succeed are those who are willing to run for the end zone, which requires a willingness to assume some risk.

To get to the end zone we must emerge from our comfort zone mentality, suit up and get in the game. It can't be won from the sidelines or from the comfort of our living rooms as we sit around and talk about what we should or should not do, but rarely do anything ourselves.

The comfort zone is attractive. In the comfort zone we lose very little, because nothing is at risk. Those who are in the comfort zone accept the status quo and settle for mediocrity. In Philippians 3:12-14 Paul says he didn't put much stock in what he had already attained but constantly pursued the elusive prize of the high calling of Christ. In verses 13-14 he says, "13 Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, 14 I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

To dance in the end zone we have to keep striving for the prize. We can't get comfortable because the devil never takes a vacation. He's constantly looking for an opening. We're looking for the end zone but the devil operates a zone defense in which he attempts to interrupt every person who wants to be a receiver of God's blessings.

There is no dance in the comfort zone. If you want to dance in the end zone you must be willing to emerge from your comfort zone and stand tall for the Lord.

We achieve our best results in life when we have a sense of urgency. That's when we really do our best. NFL statisticians have figured out that many teams score three times better in the last two minutes of the game than they do in the entire game. Why? It's the sense of urgency.

The problem with the comfort zone is that there is no sense of urgency; so we become satisfied with where we are and we miss the big dance.

God's presence gives us power for the dance

Why did David want the ark of the covenant returned? Because it symbolized the presence of God!

Without God, no believer is able to achieve desirable spiritual goals. The game of life is draining, tiring and cumbersome. Somewhere along the way we run out of power and the end zone looks further away.

Even in a football game, team members who are well conditioned can run out of power. In 1965 the Florida Gators football team was mediocre at best. Struggling in the heat and humidity of the Deep South, the players were fighting a tougher opponent within themselves than they had ever fought on the gridiron - they had great difficulty finishing the game in champion-like form because they were dehydrated. So a team of University doctors developed a carbohydrate-electrolyte beverage that kept the team properly nourished throughout the game. Before the eyes of thousands of fans, the team's second half performance improved and in 1967 won the Orange Bowl. As you may know this beverage is on every sideline around the globe keeping athletes performing at their best. Of course, this beverage is known as Gatorade.

To make it to the end zone, at some point, every believer will need some spiritual "Gator Aide"-the boost needed to give them enough inspiration, motivation and drive to make it to the end zone. Gatorade gave the Florida Gators an edge over their opponents; the power of God gives every believer that same edge.

It's that edge that allows us to continue when everyone has stopped.

It's that edge that pushes us to get up when we have been knocked down!

It's that edge that urges us to go on when others have stopped!

It's that edge that gives us new spirit when we are completely dispirited.

On our way to the end zone, we need the power of God to aid us to achieve victory.

Dancing in the End zone

Finally, brothers and Sisters we must remember that the end zone dance is one man's celebration of a touch down in the game, but when the team wins, everybody joins the dance!

That's the unique nature of the end zone dance. It is often one man's celebration. At most, a few others on the team may join him in marking that big moment in the game.

However, when the game is over, and the favorite team wins, watch the people in the stands! Everybody will be dancing!

While the text focuses on David's Dance, one man's lone celebration, it did not mean David celebrated alone. Verse one tells us that there were 30,000 people in the celebration.

When the final victory is over all of God's children will be singing and shouting.

When God gives a single person a blessing or healing, you may sing and shout hallelujah!

When God has been good to us, we just feel like shouting!

Whenever the Lord has done something good for you, there's a whole lot of shouting in the end zone.

Whenever we think about how God has blessed us, there's a whole lot of hand waving in the end zone.

Whenever we think about how God has picked us up and turned us around, there's a whole of lot foot patting in the end zone!

Whenever we think about how he provides food for us when we are hungry, there's a whole lot of hand clapping in the end zone!

When we think about how he brought us out of nowhere and carried us to somewhere. There's a whole lot of shouting going on!

Every time we think about the mountains we've climbed and the valleys in our way, we feel like dancing in the end zone!

He's been a lawyer in our courtrooms!

He's been a doctor in our sick rooms!

He's been a bridge over troubling waters!

We're shouting because of what he has done.

We're celebrating because of what we expect him to do.

We're excited because he's been good to us and we just can't keep it to ourselves.

But when the final victory is won, the whole congregation of the saints will be dancing in the end zone!

When God lifts one person from his sick bed and makes him whole again, that man and his family dance in the end zone, but when God establishes the new kingdom and announces that there will be no more sickness or pain, we'll all be dancing in the end zone!

When God frees one person from the destructive grip of Satan's hand, he will dance in the end zone, but when Satan is finally bound and cast into the everlasting people, we'll all be dancing in the end zone!

If you think there is dancing in the end zone at a football game, what do you think will happen the battle for this life is over?

If you think a super bowl is a great contest; let me tell you about a contest that happened at a place call Calvary!

It was a contest between those who were Patriots to the Roman and Ecclesiastical powers and those who could mount up on wings like Eagles and run, and not be weary, walk and not faint! Somebody said this man named Jesus may have a good record but he doesn't have a chance.

He has fed 5,000 with five loaves and two little fishes!

He has raised the dead and healed the sick.

But he doesn't have a strong defense. He believes in loving his enemies and turning the other cheek!

They crucified him on Calvary!

They buried him in a borrowed tomb!

But Early Sunday morning.. he arose with all power in his hands

That’s not the end because one of these days, he’s coming back again and the saints will be…

Marching!

And Dancing in the end zone!

Sweet Berries on a high bush

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 12, 2005

SCRIPTURE: Yet gleaning grapes shall be left in it, as the shaking of an olive tree, two or three berries in the top of the uppermost bough, four or five in the outmost fruitful branches thereof, saith the LORD God of Israel. Isaiah 17:6

Introduction

Have you ever known people who accepted less than they deserved in life? There are many people who spend their lives with less than they deserve, always one step below where they could have been and one step away from what they deserve.

Historically, the Black woman in America has never given her just rewards. It has never recognized her beauty, respected her intelligence, embraced her industry or promoted her virtues. Despite her obvious strength, the black woman has always been seen with less than an appealing eye from the general American society.

Generally, Black women have had to promote themselves with positive self talk to remind themselves and each generation, that they should reach high, dream big and never accept anything less than they deserve.

Zora Neale Hurston, was one of the great black writers of the 20th century. In her prize winning Novel, "Their eyes were watching God" there is a quotation that is studied in literature classes across the nation. It is a piece of advice that a Black parent gave to an offspring that reflected one black woman's despair when she saw a child accepting less than the best in a mate. Advising the daughter the woman said, ""Ah wanted you to school out and pick from a high bush with sweet berries."

That's the challenge of Black women today, to "school out and pick from a bush with sweet berries." It's the challenge to be carefully selective about everything that affects their own lives and their lives of the offspring.

This is advice, though rooted in the agricultural terminologies associated with our agrarian past, is still wise today.

Every Black woman deserves the best for herself and her offspring. Whether it's a mate, a house, or a lifestyle each should "school out and pick from a high bush with sweet berries."

As Christians, we know the importance of faith. Faith allows us to believe ino ourselves and in the power of God to make the improbable possible. This is the faith that inspires every woman to believe that with God they can reach the sweet berries and high places.

Exposition

This text focuses on a prophecy of Isaiah that details the nature of a small remnant of Israel that would remain faithful to God in the midst of changing times.

Specifically the text focuses on the impending desolation of the strong cities of both Syria and Israel. For Israel this desolation would mean sweeping changes in what was their traditional lifestyle. Thousands of their best minds would be captured and carried away into a strange land, to learn strange practices and be returned only a shell of what they once were. They were Jews who had been overly influenced by the Assyrian gods, traditions, and ungodly activities. As a result of this troubling change in the character and nature of God's chosen people, the Samaritans would ultimately be rejected by all of Israel.

Despite the changes that would come, Isaiah prophesied that there would be a remnant, or a small cluster of believers, who would remain untouched by the sweeping waves of changes and influences. This remnant is characterized as "gleaning grapes" a phrase lifted from the Mosaic law which required the owners of a field or an orchard not to harvest an entire field but to leave a portion unharvested or ungleaned for the poor. The "gleanings" are the portions of the harvest that were untouched.

With respect to the impending sweeping changes, verse six notes that a small cluster of believers, characterized as berries, would be preserved. They would be preserved because they would be high and away from the reach of destructive fingers of social decay. They were high or removed effects of Syrian influence. They were "two or three berries in the top of the uppermost bough" or those on branches out of reach of invading influences.

Olive berries were generally picked either green or Black. Preserved in salt and brine, both were marketable, but the Black olive berries were those that remained on the vine the longest and were often considered the juiciest.

Verses 7-8 note that when the time of these changes come, there would be believers who would remain faithful to the "Holy One" or God and would not become a part of the vast majority of the people who will become dependent on other gods and let them influence their lifestyle and morality. The reference to "groves and images" in verse 8 refers to idol gods. "Groves" were small wooden images of the Canaanite God Asherah.

The text clearly shows how the coming devastation would effect God's people causing many to turn away; but a remnant would survive remaining loyal to him and giving him praise because they were berries on a high bush.

Character of the Sweet Berry Woman

As the sun continues to rise on the 21st century Black woman, there are sweeping changes that are impacting an overwhelming majority of our women. Like Israel in the text, many of the changes will sweep through coming generations.

Despite the changes that we have seen, like in the text, there are many women who have remained "sweet berries on a high bush" as they demonstrate the finer qualities of Black womanhood, despite the modern trends that lean otherwise.

Among the qualities of this "remnant" of sweet berries are qualities that Proverbs 31 call the characteristics of the virtuous woman. They are are:

CHARACTER: Four character traits are unique to the "sweet berry" woman. She is a reflection of strength, honor, wisdom and kindness. Strength, in this sense, is not a physical measure. It is a measure of will and fortitude. It is her capacity to continue when it appears impossible or improbable that success will result. Likewise the "sweet berry" woman is one who has a sense of honor and impeccable integrity. It is her quest to do the right thing and to carry and present herself in an honorable fashion. An important part of her character is her ability to act wisely and to make prudent decisions that are in the best interest of her family. Wisdom is not a measure of her intellect or her scholarship, but her ability to weigh available options and act responsibly. Finally, her character is marked by her capacity to show kindness to everyone, in words and in deed.

LOYAL TO HER HUSBAND: A "Sweet berry" woman is marked by Her loyalty and devotion to her husband. Proverbs 31: 11-12 says: "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil. She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life." Despite her other qualities a good woman is measured by her loyalty to her husband, according to the scripture. Her actions toward him are of such a nature that he can "safely trust her," meaning that his trust will not be breached. Moreover, her loyalty to him is not conditional, but is permanent, encompassing the full range of life's experiences: prosperity and hard times, sickness and health, good times and bad times. Her loyalty to her husband is "all the days of her life," until death separates them.

LOYAL TO HER FAMILY: The "sweet berry" woman is loyal to her family. She is a very industrious woman who seeks ways to provide the best for her family and yet be economical. She saves, pinches and economizes in every way possible to make the family's resources go further. Her children are never seen without the best clothing and grooming her family can provide because of her tireless and energetic labor.

A FRIEND TO THE NEEDY: The "Sweet berry" woman not only cares for her husband and family, but she also works very diligently to help the poor and the needy. She is concerned about the sick. She visits the sick and helps the less fortunate and those in a position of need. She does not wait until the needy make an appeal to her, but takes the initiativeto reach out and touch someone with compassion.

The blacker the berry the sweeter the juice.

There is an old saying among African-Americans, it is "The blacker the berry the sweeter the juice." It's a colloquialism that developed as we began to see ourselves in a different light. Instead of being ashamed of our blackness, we became proud of it and we celebrated blackness in all of its variant shades.

If our self image and self esteem is compared to the degree of our "blackness" then certainly the colloquialism applies.

The challenge for Black women is to promote the beauty of their blackness in a way that elevates their own self image, while not denigrating the image of others.

Self esteem is related to our image of ourselves. Many women have placed limits on their own potential. Instead of schooling out and picking sweet berries from a high bush, they have stooped to accepting sour berries from the lowest bushes around. That results from a low self esteem.

Self esteem has much to do with what you think of yourself, what you want for yourself, and what you will accept for yourself. Those with high self esteem look for the sweet berries of life, but those berries may be in a high bush that will require them to elevate themselves to reach them.

Thus, women are challenged to:

ELEVATE THEIR SELF IMAGE: The way a woman sees herself impacts what type of life berries she chooses. If she sees herself as Maya Angelou says, as a person who walks like she has "Oil wells pumping in my back yard." Then she is not likely to do things, go places or have close associations with anything that does not match her image of herself. When a woman recognizes her intrinsic beauty, she's not likely to disfigure herself. When she recognizes her value to her family and community and knows the importance of her presence, she's not likely to think of herself cheaply. Our history replete with efforts to make the Black woman develop a negative self image. She was given pictures of white women and told that her kinky hair was ugly and that the silkly hair associated with whites was "good hair." She was told that her Black skin was ugly that lighter skin was prettier. She was told that her large lips were atrocious, her large hips were obstructive and her plump figure was fat. She was told that her mind was not equal, she could not achieve, that she was best fitted for domestic and manual labor not thinking or creating.

To reach for the sweet berries you must first believe that you have a right to them. Those who do not believe themselves worthy of reaching the high berries of life, give up. When they give up they drop out of life and satisfy themselves with less than the sweetest berries from the low brush.

ELEVATE WHAT YOU WANT FOR YOURSELF: Moreover, every woman should elevate what she wants for herself. Blackness is not a deterrent, it is an asset. It is not a stumbling block to success, it is a stepping stone. No woman should put limits on her dreams. Elevating dreams requires us to remove self imposed limitations that focus on race or social backgrounds. It is not a sin for a woman to aspire to greatness. Neither is it a sin for her to dream of being an engineer, astronaut, concert pianist Secretary of State or professional boxer. In all of these areas, Black women have found success, indicating that every woman should not set her sights on just being a domestic worker or flipping hamburgers at a fast food chain. A positive self image remembers our true nature and believes that with God's blessing, anything is possible.

ELEVATE WHAT YOU WILL ACCEPT FOR YOURSELF: Every woman who knows who she is and what she wants, should also resolve to elevate what she will accept for herself. Many women have accepted less than they deserve and sentenced themselves to lives of mediocrity. A black berry woman deserves a black berry man, not a nut or dried up date, or prune. A black berry woman should not accept anything that comes along or allow herself to be treated in any way except what is befitting of a sweet berry from a high bush. Black women should not embrace derogatory names that refer to them as "garden tools." Neither should they embrace trends, fashions or popular idioms that minimize their place is the backbone of our race. The black berry woman should be discriminating in what she wears, who she associates with, where she entertains, and with whom she shares her life. She should elevate what she is willing to accept.

The Black Berry Woman

Finally, brothers and sisters we must remember the final words about the faithful remnant, they will be true to the Holy One and will constantly praise his name.

A black berry woman is one who has high self esteem, high expectation, and a strong faith in God.

One thing is certain about black berries is that if you handle them long, they will leave their mark on you.

We remember the black berry woman teaching us to never go to sleep at night without saying our prayers and never eating our food without giving God thanks!

We remember the black berry woman telling us that "What's good for the goose is good for the gander."

We remember the black berry woman telling us, "I brought you in this world and I will take you out!"

How many families today have the mark of a black berry woman?

This is the woman who is striving to be a sweet berry on a high bush.

This is the woman who carries herself with dignity and honor and works hard to see to it that her children look well every day.

This is the woman whose every move is empowered by an unseen source. It's the same help that David talked about when he wrote: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth."

The black berry woman can only do what she does because she knows the Lord!

The black berry woman knows that prayer changes things!

The black berry woman knows how to call on the name of Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

Jesus, a sweet savior!

He's sweet I know!

A Mighty Man

SCRIPTURE:" So Jotham became mighty, because he prepared his ways before the LORD his God." 2 Chronicles 27:6

Introduction

What is your definition of a good man? The definition of a good man differs depending upon the respondent. Men are often judged by a variety of standards that fluctuate depending upon circumstances. Everyone seems to have a different definition of a good man.

If you ask a woman to describe a good man, she may respond that a good man is one who is a protector, provider, and progenitor.

If you ask a man to describe a good man, he may respond that a good man is one who is strong, sure and secure.

Expectations about men vary, depending on our perspective.

On the sociological order a good man is one who is a strong presence in his family. One who loves his wife, protects and defends his family and makes provisions for their sustenance, education and future. In the social order, a good man is one who demonstrates leadership in his home before his wife and children.

On the physiological order a good man is one who has a commanding physical presence. His manhood is determined only by his physical strength or his ability to reproduce. By this definition a man is not a man who is not physically able to defeat another man at most or stand up to him in battle at the least. On the physical order, a man is not a man, if he is so weak in strength that he must ask his wife to open jars for him, instead of the other way around.

On the intellectual order a good man is one who is smart, calculating and is able to out think, outwit and outsmart opponents in any area where intellect and learning is essential. A man who has strength but not brain, is considered a "jock" but he is less than a man in intellectual circles.

Historically, African-American men have been considered good men. Despite slavery and second class citizenship the African-American man has stood tall to meet the standard of manhood in all categories.

Our men have protected their wives and children against slave owners, Klansmen and others that would destroy them, even to the point of sacrificing their lives.

Our men have chopped and picked cotton, worked in fields and factories, and labored by the sweat of the brows to provide for their wives and children. While it was our mothers who prepared the food and preserved the food, it was our fathers who kept food on the table by one means or another.

Our men have set examples for their children in strength and manliness. They have shown their sons what it means to do an honest day's work and given their daughters an image of what to look for in a husband. They were strong and witty, inventive and wise.

The African-American man of history was a "good man" by any definition. However, today, the image of the African-American man is fractured. Each succeeding generation of men seems to lose a few more qualities that have historically defined our men. Instead of protectors of our children, there is a generation of men in which the overwhelming majority does not even know its children. There is a growing number of men in every generation that provide for their children by court order and leave their wives, ex-wives and girl friends to provide for their children the best they can.

There is a growing sense of insecurity among each generation of men as we seem to diminish on the intellectual order. In our past, it was our men who were the graduates and scholars. It was our men who went off to college and lead our efforts, yet today we are seeing a sad reversal on the intellectual order, as fewer African-American men rise to the top of intellectual circles where scholarship is the measure of success. The number of male scholars is declining drastically with no end in sight.

Too many in this generation have become, "Just my baby's daddy" or have stopped being men altogether, turning away from heterosexuality and reverting to homosexual lifestyles.

The absentee father, the "just my baby daddy" man and the "Adam and Steve" man have changed the playing field for African-American families. This has hastened the call for a new generation of "Mighty Men" who must rekindle the image of manhood of our history, avoiding the mistakes of the past and new efforts are made to restore the strength and reputations of Black men.

As Christians, we know that God has blessed godly men of all generations. We trust him to bless the men of our families to provide, protect and secure us with the help of God. Those who achieve this goal will earn the favor of God and will be remembered by all as "Mighty men."

Exposition

This text focuses on the short reign of King Jotham of Judah, whose lifestyle and character was described as being that of a mighty man.

Jotham was the son of Uzziah, king of Judah. He is one of the few bible characters in which there is no record of any negative activity. Even David, who was a man after God's own heart, had his Bathsheba and Samson had his Delilah. Saul had raging fits, Abraham lied about his wife, and Adam sinned in the garden. When it comes to Jotham, nothing is written negatively about him.

His father Uzziah was a good king, but became stricken with leprosy. Although forbidden to do so, he often entered the temple of the Lord with his leprosy. With that exception Uzziah was generally considered a good king. His son, Jotham assisted his father for the last seven years of his life and then followed him on the throne after Uzziah's death.

For 16 years he ruled Judah, secured its cities and protected the nation from its enemies. He ruled in the fear of the Lord, always seeking his advice and guidance before taking actions and God rewarded him with blessings and favor. In the course of his reign, Jotham became a "mighty man" in the sight of the people and of his adversaries.

Imitating Mighty Men

Jotham is described as a man who imitated his father's best traits and rejected his mistakes. The word "Howbeit" as used in the text explains how he continued the good works of his father but did not continue his habit of entering the temple of the Lord, which was restricted to certain members of the clergy of his time.

Today, every African-American man should study the men of our past. We should emulate their best qualities and reject their mistakes. That study should begin with our own families. No matter what the world says, every son should know his father for himself. Not the way others interpret his father, but to know him for himself. In so doing, every young man will soon learn his father's strengths and his weaknesses. Every black child needs to know his or her father because the best and the worst of their fathers have been passed on genetically Jotham imitated his father's strengths, so should we. We must look at our fathers and grandfathers and learn about them. Imitate anything about them was strong and virtuous and reject their mistakes. Then we must look beyond our immediate families into our extended community for those men among us who have great achievements and learn of both their strengths and weaknesses. No matter what man we name, if he is human, he will have a weakness. We must study the men of our families and our race and emulate their strengths, but learn from the weaknesses and avoid them.

Single mothers should be very careful about the way they present images of their 'baby daddy" to their children. Care should be taken to point out the strengths of a father as well as his weaknesses. Moreover, every child who accomplishes anything reflects in part, the strengths of their father, even if he has not been present in their lives. Every child does have a father somewhere, even if that father has not played an active role in their lives; it is that strength that should be recognized, while rejecting his failures.

Jotham Became mighty

Verse six of this text notes an important phrase, he "became mighty." It indicates that Jotham was not mighty because he became king, but he subsequently became mighty in the eyes of the people because of his acts.

In the same sense young men today must understand they are respected as men by the women of their family not because they wear pants, or sometimes possess a larger stronger statue. A woman doesn't consider a man a "mighty man" because he can yell or fight or beat her up. He is mighty because of his actions.

A man becomes mighty before the eyes of his wife and children when they see him in action. That's what happened in this text. The people of Israel saw this 25 year old King go to war, build cities and secure the land and he "became mighty" in their eyes. A man becomes "mighty" in the eyes of his wife when she sees him take charge and act decisively.

When the family faces a financial crises and father takes charge and steers the family clear with difficult and decisive actions, he becomes a mighty man in their sight.

When the family faces death, sickness, or attack and father acts to unify, encourage and strengthen the family in its weakest hour, he becomes a mighty man.

When the chips are down and he steps up, that's when a man "becomes" a mighty man in the sight of his family.

He does not have to be rich to be a mighty man.

He does not have to be an intellectual genius or college graduate to be a mighty man.

He can even be temporarily employed, confined to a sick bed or a wheel chair but still be considered a mighty man by his family. Why? Because it's his strength of character, wisdom, and courage that makes him a mighty man.

(A wise wife will always reassure a husband who is frustrated over the loss of a job or other inability that he remains a mighty man in her eyesight).

Jotham became a mighty man because of deeds among the people. Every African-American man will be seen as a mighty man to his children if he provides for and protects them, even if he estranged from their mother.

There are thousands of men who are no longer lovers with the children's mothers but those mothers respect them as "mighty men" because they do what a man is suppose to do.

Wouldn't it be nice if mothers could say, "Me and him don't get along, but he sure takes care of his children. Anything they need time or money he gets it for them."

That's a sign that in at least one woman's eyes, he has become a mighty man.

The Mighty Man has a mighty God

Finally, brothers and sisters we should note that every mighty man serves a mighty God.

Verse six of this text gives us the reason that Jotham succeeded in life, because he prepared his way before the Lord.

The more Jotham let God use him, the mightier he became.

He shifted from being simply a good man to being a mighty man before the Lord.

There is a difference between a good man and a mighty man.

A good man may love his wife and take care of his children, but that doesn't make him a mighty man.

A good man may protect his wife and children and secure their future, but that doesn't make him a mighty man.

A good man may fine upstanding citizen in the community with a noteworthy reputation, but that doesn't make him a mighty man.

A good man may be religious but still not allow God to use him, every good man is not a mighty man.

A good man may go to church and participate in church activities, but every man who goes to church is not a mighty man!

A good man may obey the laws of the land and pay his taxes, but every man who obeys the law and pays his taxes is not necessarily a mighty man.

A mighty man is a good man in God's hand. A mighty man is a saved man. To be a mighty man in the eyesight of God, a man must put himself under the power and control of an almighty God.

When a good man is in God's hands he becomes a mighty man.

Jacob was a good man. He prospered with material wealth and became respected as a man with a head for business. But one night he wrestled with the Lord and refused to let him go. From that night forward, he became a mighty man, because he prepared his way before the Lord and placed his life in godly hands!

David was a good man. He was a great leader and military strategist. But one day he realized his own vulnerability and said, "create in me a clean heart oh God and renew in me a right spirit." -He became a mighty man because he humbled himself before God and put himself in God's hands!

A mighty man is a powerful man because God uses him!

A mighty man is an influential man because God controls him!

A mighty man is an effective man because God directs him!

The mighty man never goes forward unless he takes the Lord with him.

If you take the Lord with you, your greatest enemies can be conquered!

If you take the Lord with you, your greatest obstacles can be overcome!

If you take Lord with you, your gravest doubts can be overcome!

If you take the Lord with you, your heaviest burdens can be lifted!

If you take the Lord with you, your highest mountains can be climbed!

If you want be a mighty man you must stand on the Lord's side; you got to walk with the man who was more than a man, he was the Son of Man, a mighty man!

He became a mighty man in our eyes when was born in a manger down in Bethlehem!

He became a mighty man when we ran the money changers out of the temple!

He became a mighty man when shattered taboos and talked with the woman at the well

He became a mighty man when he picked up an old rugged cross and carried to Golgotha's hill!

Early Sunday morning the women went to the tomb looking for a dead man.

What they found was an empty tomb vacated by a mighty man!

Storms may rise, in our lives but our Lord is a mighty man!

Winds may blow in our lives but we will stand because our Lord is a mighty man!

Keep Your Eyes On The Prize

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain.1 Cor 9:24 "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Philippians 3:13-14

Introduction

How do you define winning? Generally, we consider ourselves winners if we achieve a goal. Goals vary depending on the arena. A politician who gets the most votes in an election is a winner. A businessman who succeeds in reaching a corporate goal is a winner. An athlete who defeats all opponents is a winner. Champions are generally viewed as winners, even if they ultimately lose. A world record holder is considered a winner even if that record is subsequently broken. A football player that makes it to Superbowl as a member of the championship team is considered a winner, even if he sits on the bench the entire game. Achieving the goal is what determines winners.

Before we can achieve a goal, we must define the goal. That's the challenge to every youth, defining life goals. Defining goals is to determine "What I actually want to achieve in life." Once defined, our life goal becomes the "main thing." The quest thereafter becomes the challenge to keep "the main thing, the main thing." That means staying focused, avoiding distractions and pursing the goal with all vigilance.

Consider the young hound dog who was eager to go on his first hunting trip. He pleaded with the old dog for a chance to go on the next hunt to show off what he knew. He was young and his instincts were sharp and fresh. Being young he could pick up a scent in the air and trail it to the ground and get to his prey long before the old dogs. His first hunt was a bear hunt. The young dog picked up the trail and moved ahead of the others barking and running. The old dog sniffed the ground and kept running. Soon the young dog picked up the scent of a young deer that had cross the trail. He stopped changed directions and went barking after the deer. As he neared the deer, he caught scent of a rabbit that had crossed the deer trail. He stopped, changed directions and ran after the rabbit. The rabbit carried him through dense forest areas and through the brush, but the young dog never gave up, until he caught another scent in the air and he stopped and chased after it. In this fashion, the young dog continued all day until at the end of the day the old dog came upon him, having successfully cornered the bear, and told the young dog these words, "Son you're a good dog, I've known you since you were a pup. But if you're going to track bear and you don't want to fail, you must keep your nose to the ground and your feet on the trail."

There are many objectives along the road to success. Objectives and benchmarks are markers that must be achieved to finally get the prize. There are very few dreams in the world that do not require a general education. Historically, the black and the poor did not have opportunities for higher education. The sports arena was viewed as a ticket to an education. Historically, we played ball to get an education; sports was our ticket.

There was a time when education was the main thing. So, poor youngsters joined local basketball, baseball and football teams with hopes of winning a scholarship to get an education. By the thousands our youth joined the ranks of local sports organizations with hopes of winning a scholarship to a college for the expressed purpose of getting an education; that was the main thing.

As the years pass, history records a striking phenomenon. Black hundreds of thousands of youth each year focus their attention on professional sports. They see the big contracts and endorsement deals and dream of themselves in the Superbowl. Very few dream of themselves as college graduates.

Our history shows that while we were once excluded from many sports, we have arrived. Blacks make up 80 percent of the team rosters in the National Basketball Association and nearly 70 percent in the National Football League. Blacks have won 41 percent of baseball's Most Valuable Player titles over the last 25 years, although blacks account for just 17 percent of the players.

Young blacks see success in three areas: sports, rap and street corner pharmaceuticals. They don't see many reports of Blacks making it big because of education. This gave rise to a shift in the emphasis. Those who can't rap and won't sell drugs see only one other alternative and that is to succeed in professional sports. That marks a shift in the definition of the main thing. Instead of participating in sports to get an education, many youth now use the attainment of a limited education to get into sports.

Getting to the NFL or NBA has become the main thing with too many young people and acquiring an education has become the means to achieve an end. They ignore the fact that the odds of making it with an education are higher than their chances of making it into professional sports. A recent study by Northeastern's Center for the Study of Sports in Society found that the odds of a high school athlete succeeding in any professional sports is 10,000 to 1 and playing in the NBA is a 50,000 to one shot.

The idea of getting just enough education to become eligible for the draft is common among young Black athletes. Their game plan is simple: work to graduate, get into a big league school, play well for two years then leap into the big leagues and drop out of school. Or, even better, get drafted like Lebron James, right out of high school.

The result is that many Black athletes are concluding that they only need enough education to make them eligible for the pros. Many begin college but never graduate. According to the NCAA, there are approximately one million high school football players and 500,000 high school basketball players in the United States. If all of the Black males in these groups were to attend college and graduate what an impact this would have on all sectors of our community life.

The challenge to young athletes is to keep their eyes on the real prize, remembering that an education is never lost with age, or injury. It grows and gets better with time. Sports should be a means to achieve the best possible education, rather than the other way around. Getting the best possible education should be the main thing.

Young athletes should not forsake their studies seeking careers in the pros because, the rules are changing. Just when every Black youth began to feel that he would succeed in sports with a minimum of education, the rules are changing. The NCAA has tougher admission requirements. Schools and governments are cutting funding for youth sports programs to keep up with shrinking budgets. Inner-city playgrounds and recreation programs are diminishing.

Some states such as Louisiana perpetuate the dumb jock stereotype by allowing students to participate in sports if they maintain a "D" average, with the full knowledge that they will never meet NCAA standards for admission to the big schools where pro scouts are watching and waiting. The idea seems to be "use them" and then "lose them" when they are no longer eligible for high school play.

It's getting tougher to get into a reputable school on sports skills alone. Many high school super jocks, find themselves getting offers to Jr. Colleges instead of major universities because their grades could not match up.

It means the era of the dumb jock is coming to an end.

Student athletes who focus on their education are assured entrance into college, even if they are not superstars on the field. However, the dumb jock is finding increasingly more doors closed in his face after his high school years have ended.

As Christians, we have an even greater goal. That goal is to carry out God's will for our lives. Just as the athlete must stay focused, so must the man or woman who wants to see Jesus one day, stay focused and keep his eyes on the prize.

Exposition

These two text focus on Paul's teaching that Christians should study and remain focused on their goal, which is to do God's will.

In 1 Corinthians 9:24 Paul uses the illustration of athletic competition to make his point. He is aware that the Corinthians were famliar with the athletic festivals compared the Christian struggle to the competitors in the Olympic games. Paul said those who compete in the games, train and compete for the sole purpose of winning a material wreath upon their heads. However, those who run the Christian race do so to claim the crown of righteousness reserved for the victors.

The Christian competitor competes for the prize of salvation and glory before God.

He trains and conditions himself to enter the race and to perservere until victorious.

The Philippian text encouraged them to keep their minds focused on their purpose in life.

These passages reflect three dominant themes that permeated Paul's ministry: Humility, intense focus, and a sure goal.

How to Keep your Eyes on the Prize

There are three things the text suggest that should be done to keep our eyes on the prize. We sift these from reviewing Paul's letter to the Philippians.

DON'T GET THE BIG HEAD: Paul remained humble, throughout his life. Obviously, God had endowed him with great talents and gifts but he always received them with an attitude of humility. Although Paul was a learned scholar who spoke many languages fluently and was well versed in the scholarship of his day, he told the Philippians at verse 13, "I count not myself to have apprehended" that is to note that while he had learned much in life, he was keenly aware that he did not know everything. He counted heavily on the Holy Spirit to reveal many things to him and to call others to his remembrance. Humility is a key factor in success. It's the element of your character that constantly reminds you that the world does not revolve around you, but you are part of God's grand scheme of things. The Christian athlete says, "I succeed, because God wills it so, not because I am who I am." Remaining focused, in this context is not to get so wrapped up in their pursuit of the game that they neglect the "main thing" which is to do God's will.

STOP LOOKING AT YOUR TROPHIES: Paul's life was intensely focused on the next objective, not his past accomplishments. His past accomplishments included his education and training, conversion on the Damascus road, three missionary journeys, and the conversions of countless numbers to the faith. It would have been very easy for him, especially considering his confinement and approaching death, to dwell on the past and constantly reflect on his achievements. He chose to focus on the future rather than on the past. In the same sense, remaining focused means not dwelling on past achievements or failures. Trophies and news clippings of past successes are great for history, but each new challenge requires a focused effort to succeed. You can't win today's game by presenting your trophy to the new opponent. You must keep your eyes on the prize.

DON'T GET DISTRACTED. Lastly, Paul knew what he wanted and where he was going. His goal was the prize of the high calling of God. It did not lay in the praise of men, or the accumulation of worldly things. He concluded that he would not be dissuaded in his journey. The prize of the Christian athlete is to do God's will. The cheers of the crowd will fail. Newspaper reporters, endorsement contracts, and other major deals will fade, so it is imperative for each student athlete to remain focused on the prize.

In Romans 8:35, Paul summed it up this way, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?"

Then he answered in verse 37, "Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." The prize of the Christian athlete is to do God's will. The cheers of the crowd will fail. Newspaper reporters, endorsement contracts, and other major deals will fade, so it is imperative for each student athlete to remain focused on the prize.

Student, Scholar and a Child of God

Finally brothers and Sisters, each student competitor should remember that the main goal at this point in his/her life is to be a master of their textbook, a student of their playbook, and an example of the Holy Book

The goal of the Christian Athlete is to be a student, a competitor and a child of God.

While succeeding in the secular world requires us to maintain a focused life, this text today, reminds us that the Christian's primary focus is to achieve the prize of the high calling of God which is in Jesus Christ.

Paul said simply that he was pressing on toward the mark! He chose to focus on Heaven and its promise of joy everlasting!

He chose to focus on Jesus and his promise of everlasting life!

Those who keep their eyes on the prize never lose sight of what they really want to do with their lives and that is to serve and please God.

Keeping your eyes on the prize may mean getting closer to some things and moving away from others. It will mean avoiding ungodly activities of every kind.

It may even mean backing away from some job opportunities because they will take you away from your main goal, which is to see Jesus.

But keeping your eyes on the prize also means that from time to time you need to get closer to keep yourself in focus with God. There will be times when the swiftness of the world takes you so fast that you lose sight of God. As life begins to blur that's when you bring it back into focus by walking closer to God.

Walking closer to God helps keep life in focus when the world becomes a blur.

Walking close to God builds strength for troublesome times and answers troublesome questions. No wonder the songwriter says, "Just a closer walk with thee. Grant it Jesus if you please, daily walking close to thee. Let it be, dear Lord, let it be!"

Daniel's life journey took him thousands of miles from home but he never stopped looking toward Jerusalem and praying three times a day because his eyes were on the prize.

The Three Hebrew Boy's lives took them in and out of the fiery furnace, but their eyes were on the prize!

Paul was beaten, jailed and criticized but he declared, "Nothing shall separate me from the love of God." His eyes were on the prize!

Jesus, the precious lamb of God, endured the hardships of life, temptations of Satan and the rejection of man, but he kept his eyes on the prize!

As he carried an old cross of Calvary and died for the sins of the world, his eyes were on the prize!

Early Sunday morning he arose to claim the victory and challenge everyone who follows to keep your eyes on the prize!

Now, Run and Tell That

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulcher, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulcher. Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple, whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulcher, and we know not where they have laid him. Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulcher. So they ran both together: and the other disciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulcher. And he stooping down, and looking in, saw the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in. Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulcher, and seethe the linen clothes lie, And the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself. Then went in also that other disciple, which came first to the sepulcher, and he saw, and believed. 9For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead." John 20:1-9

Introduction

Have you ever heard news so exciting that you had to share it with someone else? Good news is hard to keep. We feel that we must share it with someone else. The longer we hold it the harder it gets to keep it to ourselves. In rural times folks would load up the horse and buggy and ride into town shouting their good news. "Gold, I struck gold!" shouted the old gold miners. "It's a boy!" shouted the anxious father! "My son is home" shouted the father whose son came home for the war. In a variety of ways we have all shared special moments that were especially exciting. Those moments we best savored however, when they were shared with others.

When bargain hunters hear that there is going to be a sale, they quickly pick up the phone to tell a friend about red tag sales, 75 percent off specials or going out of business sales. When someone has had a baby or achieved a victory, the news spreads fast. Bad news spreads even faster, outrunning good news by a mile a minute. It appears everyone wants to be the first to tell exciting news whether it is good or bad.

Consider the old man who spent a lifetime collecting valuable antiques. Experts valued his collection worth millions of dollars. The old man had no heirs and spent his time gazing at a picture of his son that was drawn when the boy was just 12 years old. It was poorly drawn, as an artistic work, and had no value except that it had a likeness of his son, who died in the Great War. One day it was announced that the old man had died. With no heirs, his entire collection of antiques would be up for sale. The entire city was abuzz with news that passed from one house to the next. Each person seemed to run from house to house telling of the great antique bargains that would be up for sale cheaply.

On the day of the auction people gathered from many states. The auctioneer announced that the auction would begin with the simple drawing of the old man's son. He asked $100. After a long pause he asked again but there were still no takers. Someone yelled, skip the picture and let's get down to the real auction; but the auctioneer said the terms of the auction were that the picture had to be first. Finally, a friend of the old man's recognized that it was a sketch of his son and offered $100 for the penciled drawing. As the auctioneer announced "sold" he promptly closed the auction. The crowd was angry because they wanted to get a chance to bid on millions of dollars in antiques. The auctioneer said the auction was over because the old man's will said whoever gets the son gets it all. Now, run and tell that!

Today, there are many people who tell everything they know but the one thing they should tell they don't. They should tell people about the Son; the son of God that is. They should tell people that God's son came, died and rose for our sins. They should tell them that if they get the son, the get forgiveness, blessings and eternal life. They get it all. What they should tell they keep to themselves, but yet, it's the best news of the day.

As Christians, we are excited about the goodness of the Lord. We lay claim to our heavenly inheritance. We embrace the son and proudly announce to the world that Jesus is Lord and lives in our hearts.

Exposition.

This text focuses on the action of the women and the disciples on the morning of Christ's resurrection.

Christ was crucified and buried in a newly hewn tomb owned by Joseph. It was guarded by soldiers upon the request of the religious leaders who feared that Christ's disciples would come by night and steal his body. After three days and nights Mary came early Sunday morning to anoint his body with spices. When she arrived she found the stone rolled away and the tomb empty. She was told by angels to go quickly and tell the others. She ran and delivered the news.

When Peter and John heard the news they ran. John outran Peter, but when he reached the tomb was afraid to go inside. He stooped and looked in but did not enter. Peter did not run as fast as John but he was the first one of the two to actually go inside the tomb. He bore witness that Christ had actually risen from the dead.

The two of them ran to tell the others what they had seen. They were excited. They were revived because the master had done as he said he would. He had risen from the dead.

Mary told the "what" but not the "why"

Mary told what happen, his body is gone. But she didn't tell why because she did not fully understand what she saw. In a similar sense, there are many people today who know what has happened to them in life, but have not fully apprehended the why? Mary knew that the ground shook. She knew that the stone was rolled away. She knew there was no body in the tomb, but she did not know why.

Often in our frustration over life events we see the "what" but we fail to apprehend why? We've felt events in our lives with earthquake intensity: a death, a sickness or family crises. We know what happened, but we have not figured out the why.

Sometimes, we suspect the why, even if we don't want to admit it. When we've been disobedient to God's word, slack in our worship, bible study and giving; we suspect the reason but we are not quite sure. Like Mary, we quickly attach another reason other than the obvious. Mary concluded that the religious leaders had stolen Christ's body. She did not consider the possibility of his resurrection from the dead. So, she ran to tell others the "what" but she did not report the "why."

Two men in the bible enjoyed great prosperity in life. Jabez prayed to God to enlarge his territories and received an answer to his prayer. Job lived a righteous life and was blessed immensely. Jabez' blessing came as a result of his prayer. Job's blessing came as a result of his righteous living. When Job's fortune turned his friends asked, "Why." Job knew why. God was testing him and he resolved, "Yea though he slay me, yet will I serve him."

The events of that Sunday morning are more than mere news reports. Those who tell it must deal with the "why." The tomb was empty because Christ arose as the first begotten of the dead. He was the first person to rise from the dead with eternal life. Why was the tomb empty? Because Jesus rose as he said he would, guaranteeing life to all believers. That's big news. Now, run and tell that!

John told the "when" but not the "how"

John was the fastest runner. It terms of opportunity he was first but he could go no further because at the tomb he did not have the courage to go in.

Moreso than Peter John had the opportunity to know more about the "how" of the resurrection than the others because he arrived at the empty tomb first, but lacked the courage to step into the unknown. Like so many of us, John prepared, ran fast, but lacked the courage to seize the opportunity before him.

The Latin phrase "Carpe Diem" means "Seize the Day." It suggests that there is a window of opportunity that is available for each person but we must take opportunities when they present themselves. To do that we must understand the "how" of life. We must understand "how" God operates. We must understand "how" he weaves events and circumstances to open or shut doors of opportunity.

To seize opportunity we must have as much education and training as possible, run as fast as we can at word of the "when" then be prepared to enter the unknown and seize the day.

John ran "when" he heard the news of the empty tomb, but when it came time to seize the day he did not "how" to make himself step into that dark and gloomy unknown.

The good news is that God has rolled the stone away for believers. The opportunity we have waited for looms just inside, but we must seize the day! Now, run and tell that!

Peter had the most to tell

Peter was the last one to the tomb but he had the most to tell because he actually went in and saw the evidence of the risen Lord for himself.

Peter saw the folded clothes and the tomb's interior. The order suggested that Christ had done just what he said. He was convinced. He saw it for himself.

Likewise, those who have experienced Christ for themselves have the most to tell.

Lazarus had more to tell about Christ's life reviving ability than anyone else, because he experienced it himself.

The woman at the well could speak of his compassion and forgiving spirit, because she experienced it herself.

The man who sat by the pool for 38 years could testify to Christ's healing, because he experienced it himself.

Mary could talk about the stone being rolled away. John could talk about the darkness he saw from outside the tomb, but Peter had the most to tell. He went in for himself and came out with a testimony.

That's the way it is with anyone who steps into the embrace of the savior; he leaves with a story to tell.

Now Run and Tell That

When they all left the empty tomb they had a testimony, some more than others, but they had a story to tell.

That's the way it is with every believer, we all have a story to tell.

What we tell about the Lord is as exciting as the news the disciples heard on the morning of the resurrection. God is still a good God.

If you must tell something, tell the world that God is a protecting God.

Like David we can testify from our own experience that, ""God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in a time of trouble."

If you want to tell something run and tell that!

Somebody has seen their family sustain a prolonged attack by the enemy only to bounce back victorious. They have seen their finances dwindled down to nothing only to be restored by a no interest line of credit from the bank of heaven. They have seen the protecting arm of God shield them against the wind and waves of life, without the loss of one.

If you want to tell something run and tell that!

If you just have to tell something, tell the world that God is a blessing God!

In the course of our short lives God has blessed us immensely. He's opened doors that we could not see.

Somebody here has been blessed because of the goodness of the Lord.

Somebody here is eating better, sleeping better and riding better than they have been because the Lord is blessing.

David told us what to do when we have been blessed. In Psalm 105 he said, "O give thanks unto the LORD; call upon his name: make known his deeds among the people."

In essence, what David said, when God has blessed you, don't keep it to yourself, let the world know what God has done.

If you just have to tell something, tell the world that God is blessing me in the morning. He's blessing me in the noonday. He's blessing me in the midnight hour.

Everyday the Lord is blessing me,. Now run and tell that!

Not only has the Lord protected us and blessed us, but the Lord has directed us.

I heard David say, "In all thy ways acknowledge him and he will direct thy paths."

When we can't find our way, he will guide us and direct us. When we are lost in the wilderness of life, he will show us the road to glory.

No wonder the song writer declared, "Guide me oh thy great Jehovah, Pilgrim through this barren land. I am weak but thou art mighty, hold me with thou powerful hand."

If you just have to tell something, run and tell that!

Since you know all of our faults and our failures, there is something else you should tell the world. Tell the world how the Lord saved our souls!

Tell the world how we tried to reform ourselves but couldn't do until the Lord stepped in.

If you've just got to tell something, run and tell that!

If you are weak, he will renew your strength, Now, run and tell that!

If you are lost, he will help you find your way. Now, run and tell that!

If you have fallen flat on your face, he'll pick you up and stand you on your feet. Now, run and tell that!

If you are confused, he will give you direction. Now, run and tell that!

If your body is racked with pain, he will be a Balm in Gilead, Now, run and tell that!

I don't know about you but every now and then when I think about the goodness of the Lord I've got to tell somebody!

I've got to tell somebody that when I'm down, he'll pick me up and turn me around!

I've got to tell somebody that when I'm slipping, he'll plant my feet on solid ground!

I've got to tell somebody that one day when I was lost that he died upon the cross!

I've got to tell somebody that early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

He lives, I know he lives. He walks with me and talks with me! Now, run and tell that!

He lives, I know he lives, He's still making a way for me out of no way! Now, run and tell that!

He lives, I know he lives, because every now and then I feel him moving in my soul!

Now, run and tell that!

Dealing With Hot Water Situations

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 13, 2005

SCRIPTURE:My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. 12 Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him. James 2:2-3;12.

Introduction

Have you ever been in a hot water situation? If you are like most people you have probably experienced one or two hot water situations in your life. What's a hot water situation? Generally, a "hot water situation" is one that threatens us, troubles us or scares us in a way that is beyond the ordinary. We are generally uncomfortable when we are in hot water. We are sometimes anxious and nervous when we are in hot water. We are rarely at our best when we face hot water situations. All of those who have survived such situations have a story tell and have learned tremendous truths about life.

Let your mind reflect on all of the situations you have faced in your life. More than a few of them were hot water situations. Did you get in trouble with the law or the Internal Revenue? Did a friend betray a confidence and reveal a secret? Did an enemy succeed in their efforts to destroy your reputation or a coveted opportunity? Did you get involved in an unhealthy relationship? Whenever we get into any situation that increases our anxieties and fears, the water gets really hot.

There are times we want to be in hot water. Millions of people travel to Hot Springs Arkansas each year for one expressed purpose, to take a bath in the waters drawn from the natural hot springs that run underneath the city. The waters are said to have medicinal value so people actually pay to get into hot water. At home, many find that after a long hard day, a hot shower or tub of hot water is both relaxing and cleansing. However, neither of these represents a hot water situation. It's a really tough dilemma in which we experience considerable trouble.

How do we get ourselves into hot water situations? Many of us have asked ourselves that question a thousand times. How did we get in this situation? Two Cajun fishermen were trying to cook a special batch to go along with their crawfish, shrimp gumbo and Jambalaya. They both wanted some frog legs. One of the fishermen was an expert and always came to the community gatherings with big platters of frog legs. The other one had everything except frog legs. When asked why he never had any frog legs the disappointed Cajun said, "Every time I try to put the frog in the pot of hot water he just jumps right out. As soon as he touches the water; he just jumps out. What's your secret? How do you get yours to stay in the hot water?" The successful Cajun said, "it's a little secret of mine. You put the frog in cold water and then you turn the fire down real low. After a while as the water starts to warm, you drop in a few flies and the frog will be so busy enjoying himself eating them flies that he won't even notice that the water's get hotter and that he's been cooking for the last 30 minutes. The next thing you know, you've got Frog Legs!" Isn't that how we get in hot water? We don't jump into hot water, we know the pot's sitting on the stove and we know what happened to other frogs that jumped in the pot, but we can't resist the flies. Gradually, we could feel things getting hotter but the flies are so good. They next thing you know we are cooked.

As Christians, we know that we will encounter many difficulties in the course of life. We will see many mountains and many valleys. We will know joy and sorrow. However, we know that no matter how hot the situation, God will always be with us and will never leave us alone.

Exposition

This text focuses on the way believers should approach situations that test individual faith.

James, the Brother of Jesus, was the recognized head of the church at the time of this writing. He warned believers that as Christians they should expect to find themselves in a variety of troublling situations. It was especially true during the beginning years of the church because there was an intense animosity against the church. Many believers faced tremendous persecution from both Jews and Gentiles, not to mention the regular difficulties of daily living.

James addresses the attitude that Christians should take into a troubling situation. That attitude should exemplify faith and patience that ultimately will be rewarded by a loving God.

Into the Water

James gave these observations in the text. They apply to believers today.

COUNT IT JOY (v2): Strange as it may seem, James says we should count it joy when a troubling situation occurs. The "divers" in this context means diverse or different kinds of tempting situations. Tempting situations are those in which a believer's faith is tested. The phrase "Count it all joy" does not mean that we go out and place ourselves in tempting situations just to see how faithful we are or to see what God will do. That would be as silly as driving your car the wrong way on a one way street just to see if God would truly protect you. It does describe a mindset or an attitude that belivers assume when troubling situations occur. Count it all joy, simply put, means that the hot water situation we face is a chance to "show what we are made of" spiritually. We don't go out looking for tough situations, but our mindset is that when they come, it's a chance for us to test our faith and to watch God work.

FALL INTO: "Fall into" describes how a truly saved person gets in hot water. Generally, a saved person does not open the door to a hot water situation; he doesn't just dive in for the fun of it. James describes it as "fall into." The nature of a saved man or woman is that he or she attempts to avoid "hot water" situations as much as possible. A believer doesn't consciously walk into a "hot water" situation for the thrill of it. He doesn't open the door of a house of prostitution and walk in just to see if he can walk out the same way he went in. She doesn't take her hard earned money to race tracks and casinos just to see if what they say is really true. The believer doesn't go out and intentionally involve himself in an activity knowing that it could result in an injury or sickness. "Fall into" means that we have been drawn into it unwittingly. Often, we end up in tempting situations without really knowing that it's happening, before long we are hooked. We don't develop a gambling habit on the first visit, we develop the habit slowly. We don't become a drug addict overnight, it develops. We don't become addicted to cigarettes or alcohol overnight; it's a slow process that is so deceptive that we actually don't realize that we're in hot water.

We get in hot water situations because we tested the water first, saw that it wasn't really that hot and were drawn in, and like the frog in the pot, we were not aware that while we were catching a few flies, or enjoying ourselves, that the water was getting hotter all the time.

God does not put us in "hot water." Satan does. Like a roaring lion he walks to and fro trying to discover who will be the next person to plunge into his pot of hot water. Satan has fun troubling us. He enjoys turning up the heat and watching us at first enjoy the warm water then watching us sweat.

DIVERS TEMPTATION: "Divers temptation" means temptations or tough situations could in all shades and colors. Our temptations could be financial, physical, spiritual or moral in nature whenever such situations occur, according to James, the believer should view it as an opportunity to "let God work."

When money runs low and we can't make our ends meet we are in hot water.

When our relationship or marriage is on the brink of breakup, that's hot water.

When we contract a disease or a debilitating sickness, that's hot water.

When we cheat or spouses, or dabble in immoral activities whether they are major such as drug use and sales or something as simple as buying bootleg CD's and videos from people who have stolen them, we create "hot water" situations. We know that the videos are stolen, we know that it's against the law to receive stolen merchandise, but we buy them anyway and lie back in our tub of hot water and catch flies!

Temptations vary so we must constantly be on watch for every kind of temptation that can come our way.

TRYING OF YOUR FAITH: (v3) "Trying of your faith." James made sure that the believers understood that hot water situations "try" or test us. Why would God allow Satan to put a believer in a situation where he could be spiritually injured? He does it for the same reason that a football coach plays a scrimmage game, to test his players to see how they respond in situations similar to the real game. In actuality, we never know our spiritual strength until we are actually tested.

Most of us have Sunday school faith. We talk a good game about believing in God and stepping out on faith in God until the real tests come. We talk about what we should or should not do in theoretical situations. We won't know the reality of it, until we actually get in the water.

A carrot has plenty of color and is brittle when it's fresh from the field or market. In fact a carrot is loaded with vitamins and color. It looks good, but if we boil a carrot in hot water, when it comes out it is soft and mushy. Many people have carrot faith. It looks and sounds good when it's fresh and raw. But after they have been in the hot water for a while, they are different. Their hope has gone soft. The faith in God has been shaken. Their beliefs are not as strong as they once were. They still have the color on the outside but what was once a solid faith is now borderline, to say the least.

An egg is a symbol of life. It is filled with life giving potential. An egg, if properly fertilized and incubated can give forth new life. However, when you put an egg in hot water for a long period of time it changes. It comes out hard boiled. Many people were full of life and potential before they met their hot water situation. Many of them were optimistic and had a very positive view about life. However, after their hot water experience they became hard. Although they looked the same on the outside, they no longer had the life giving potential on the inside.

That's what James means by the phrase "the trying of your faith." It means you don't know what you will do until your been tested. Then you'll find out the measure of your strength.

Tea-Bags and Hot Water

Finally, brothers and sisters we need to consider what happens when a strong believer falls into hot water situations, and the blessings that await them when their testing has ended.

Between verse 4-11 James encourages believers to demonstrate faith in every situation. He encouraged us not to be double minded, looking back and against the faith. His words encourage us to be strong in the faith, enduring the hour of testing.

At verse 12 he concludes all his comparisons by saying, "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him."

What James seemed to say to believers is that each believer should develop a "Tea-bag" spirituality.

T.E.A. could easily be an acronym for the true believer.

T. This is a believer who Trusts God,

E. This is a believer who remembers that in "Everything" he gives thanks.

A. This is a believer who remembers that he is never Alone.

Hot water situations have a tendency to bring to the outside what's really on the inside.

The man who secretly doubts the power of God to change any situation may carry his bible and attend church regularly, won't be able to hide his doubts when he gets in hot water, because hot water brings what's on the inside out!

The man who only gives lip service to God's ability to heal, will appear to be a strong tower of faith, but he won't be able to hide his lack of faith, when he gets in hot water, because hot water brings what's on the inside out!

The woman who talks about love in public but can't forgive won't be able hide her true feelings when she gets in hot water, because hot water brings what's on the inside out!

The child who sings about the power of God on Sunday but doesn't really believe what they sing, won't be able to hide their lack of believe when he or she gets in hot water, because hot water brings out what's on the inside out!

If the hot water brings out what's really on the inside, what happens when the TEA-Bag Man meets hot water?

When the CARROT man hits the hot water, it softens his hope and weakens his faith.

When the EGG man hits the hot water, he loses his optimism and spirit and becomes hard boiled.

But what happens when the TEA-bag man hits the hot water situation? The hot water will bring out the TEA that's in me!

If you put a TEA-bag Christian in hot water, it will bring out what he really believes!

In hot water the TEA-bag believer says, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understanding."

In hot water, the TEA-bag believer says, "In Everything give thanks." When I'm down, give thanks! When I'm up, give thanks! When the water gets boiling hot all around, give thanks!

In hot water, the TEA-bag believer says, "I'm never alone." He promised never to leave me, never to leave me alone. Though my situation gets hot I'm hear him say, "Lo I'll be with you alway, even unto the end of the earth."

The longer the Carrot man stays in hot water, the softer he gets.

The longer the EGG man stays in the hot water, the harder and more bitter he becomes!

But the longer the TEA-bag man stays in hot water, the stronger he gets!

The longer, the stronger!

The hotter, the better!

Have you been tried in the fire? Did you come through as pure Gold?

I know a man who had a real hot water situation.

They falsely accused him and brought him to an unjust court!

They whipped him all night long!

They nailed him to an old rugged cross!

They buried him in a borrowed tomb!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands.

The hot water didn't change him! He changed the hot water!

TEA=Tried, empowered, anointed.

Hot water does not make tea, the tea is in the bag. It brings out the flavor in the tea

In the end, the tea changes the water, the water has no effect on the tea.

Why Palm Trees?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 20, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "On the next day much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, Took branches of palm trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried, Hosanna: Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord." John 12:12-13

Introduction

If your spiritual life was compared to a tree, what kind of tree would best represent your life? Would you be a tall tree or a small tree? Would you be a tree at all, maybe just a small bush? What's your tree?Some of us could very easily describe ourselves as:

PINE TREES: The pine tree grows tall, is distinguished by its pointed top, drops cones and burns fast. There are many people who are like pine trees. They are here and there and everywhere, but they seem to burn out fast even though they grow tall. They are good for starting a fire but are not good for the long haul.

SWEET GUMS: These trees are known for a sap that is called sweet but is not really sweet at all. They are what the world calls "Sweet Daddies" and "Sugar Mamas." They give the appearance of sweetness but often leave a bitter taste in every where they go. They are the heartbreakers and home wreckers. They look sweet but are far from being as sweet as they look.

EVERGREENS: The Evergreen is unique in that its most noteworthy characteristic is that it looks good all the time. The evergreen has no essential purpose other than to look good. There are people are the same way, overly concerned about their looks from head to toe. Beyond their looks however, there is little else that they do that benefits anyone.

WEEPING WILLOWS: The Weeping Willows stands drooped. Its broad limbs slump downward. It looks defeated. There are many people today who have lost their drive and ambition. They have adopted defeatist attitudes about life and have succumbed to the pressures of society. A weeping willow always has a sad story, one after another. His or her song is always a "somebody done me wrong song." They weep, cry and complain all the time.

OAK TREES: Oaks grow tall but their wood is hard and their fruit is inedible. These are people who are stubborn and set in their ways. They are thick skinned, slow to change and adapt. They are not bad trees but they have a tendency, because of their stubbornness, to produce fruit that is inedible. A few nuts here and a few nuts there. Unfortunately, their children grow up just like them because the "acorn" doesn't fall far from the tree.

FRUIT TREES: These are trees that bear fruit, plums, pears, oranges and a variety of edible refreshing fruit. If these trees represented a life they would represent the Christian life, that reflects the fruit of the spirit referred to in Galatians 5:22-23. If you are a fruit tree you are an invaluable asset to the kingdom.

The bible tells of the life of Christ in frequently associated with trees and vines. He compared the kingdom heaven to grape vineyards. He prayed in an Olive Tree Orchid and constantly referred to fig trees. And when he came into Jerusalem for his final days on earth before the crucifixion he was saluted by a crowd that praised him bearing the leaves of Palm Trees, shouting his praises and calling his name.

As Christians, we know that every word of the bible has significance. The mention of a type of flower, animal or even a tree as a significance. When Christ entered Jerusalem he was greeted with Palm Tree branches, it seems small, but there is plenty of food for the soul when we answer the question, "Why Palm Trees?"

Exposition

This text focuses upon Jesus' triumphant entry into Jerusalem just days before his crucifixion.

When Christ rode into Jerusalem the people cut down branches of Palm Trees, waved them in the air triumphantly and cast them down before him. His entry into Jerusalem is called the triumphant entry. It was full of symbolisms, each of which had great meaning for the immediate future and for the church as a whole.

The scriptures foretold his arrival in triumph. He rode upon a borrowed donkey, instead of a white horse, to signify the humble nature of his arrival. The people shouted "Hosanna" and great words of praise for him as a conquering hero, especially after his recent miracle involving the resurrection of Lazarus.

Adding to the symbols was the simple act of cutting Palm branches from the trees and waving them in the air. Even this act, had great significance when closely observed.

In scripture, the Palm Tree has always been configured as a "type" of the faithful believer. In Exodus 15:27 the 70 descendants of Jacob who came to live in Egypt in the midst of difficult times are called "Palm Trees"-indicating their ability to survive in Egypt despite adverse circumstances. 1 King 6:29 describes how Solomon decorated the interior of the great temple with palm trees symbolizing how the nation of Israel had flourished despite unfavorable conditions. Psalm 92:12 compares the happiness and joy of the righteous to the flourishing nature of a palm tree.

As a symbol, the palm tree came to represent the triumph of the people of God against tough times. The symbol was drawn mainly from the nature of the Palm Tree itself, able to survive unbearable conditions and finally flourish.

Why Palm Trees?

So of all the trees that were available along the way, including an abundance of olive branches, fig trees and bramble, those who greeted Jesus selected Palm Branches because of their spiritual significance for the arrival of the promised Messiah.

As Palm Trees are waved before him, it is as if the life of every believer present or in the future was also being presented in praise and adoration before the Son of God.

Why the Palm Tree? Palm Trees Grow Tall: Palm trees, unlike other trees, have branches that shoot straight upward. None of its branches grow out of its side. Believers like the Palm Tree, are different from others. They don't sample the world, here and there, trying to grow from the side but they constantly reach higher and higher as they mature in the grace of God. Maybe that's why they sing the old song, "Lord lift me up and let me stand, by faith on heaven's table land. A higher plane than I have found. Lord plant my feet on higher ground."

Why the Palm Tree? Palm Trees only grow in the purest soil. They will not grow in filthy places well dunged like other trees. The palm tree loves to put down its roots by the rivers of water. In that same sense, a true believer can only grow in the purest of circumstances where his roots grow deep into the waters of the word of God. Believers soon learn that they can not grow spiritually if they are not planted firmly in the word of God.

Why the Palm Tree? A Palm Tree, when young, is very weak and feeble and can hardly stand by itself. Usually, three or four palm trees are planted together and in this way they support each other and stand against storms. New Christians and young Christians are rarely able to stand alone. They need the support of others in the faith to help them weather the storms, drawing strength from each other. So the fellowship of the saints is important, because that fellowship shared with others helps weaker believers in moments of doubt and temptation.

Why the Palm Tree? Palm Trees are always green. They are green in the winter and they are green in the summer. They never cast their leaves neither do they fade because of an abundance of sap that flows from the roots. Believers are like Palm Trees because our faith is not affected by the difficulties of the day. Whether it rains or whether it shines believers still hold fast to their faith in God's goodness. This is because we are constantly fed from the root of the word. Our faith builds from constant hearing. Romans 10:17 says, "Now faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God." That's what keeps a true believer Palm Leaf Green, even in the toughest times.

Why the Palm Tree? The palm tree grows best when it is most pressed down. When the heaviest weights are hung upon it, it seems to grow taller and straighter. Though it is pressed it still endures. Is this not the same with every believer? The more the world puts on us, the stronger we become. Sickness, trouble, and persecution destroy those of little faith but believers seem to always bounce back and grow even taller in the faith and stronger. 2 Corinthians 4:8-10 says, "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed; Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body." Like the palm tree, the more the world puts on us, the more we are able to bear and the stronger we become.

Signs of victory

Finally, we must consider that the palm tree was a symbol of victory.

When Christ entered Jerusalem the people waved palm branches because of all that they symbolized.

But the questions still lingers, "Why Palm Trees?"

They symbolized their constant praise to God and longing to be lifted closer to him!

They symbolized their quest to grow in the purity of God's word and their willingness to sink themselves deep into the mysterious realm of the Kingdom of God.

They symbolized their ability to survive despite repeated attempts to destroy their nation by many kings and nations!

They symbolized the truth of David's words in Psalm 1, "He shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water. His leaf shall not wither and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."

The palm branches symbolized their faith in God and in his Son Jesus Christ.

When Jesus entered Jerusalem, they cut down palm branches to symbolize the victory he offered over sin!

They symbolized the victory he offered over Satan and the forces of darkness!

They symbolized the victory he offered over death and the grave!

As the palm branches waved in the air they came to represent all of their hopes in the power of an almighty God.

They waved the Palm branches because he was the perfect answer to an imperfect world.

He was the perfect hope for imperfect tomorrows.

He was the perfect mold for imperfect marriages.

He was the perfect melody for every imperfect song.

He was the perfect pattern for every imperfect life.

They waved palm branches in the air because somehow they knew:

—SIN could not shame him: DOUBT could not defeat him!

—FEAR could not frustrate him; BURDENS could not bewilder him!

—DEMONS could not defile him, DIFFICULTY could not restrain him!

—PERSECUTION could not distract him; TEMPTATION could not mislead him!

—DISEASE could not disable him; HATRED could not control him!

Why palm trees? Because every believer is like a palm tree, standing tall, lifting our eyes to the hills from whence cometh our help!

Why palm trees? Because every believer sinks his roots deep in the word of God and joins with the song writer in declaring, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus' name!"

Why palm trees? Because like palm trees we have withstood the storm and the rain and he's always been by our side!

Like palm trees whose leaves are lifted in the air, we hear the words of the old warriors, "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know. If thou withdraw thyself from me, whiter shall I go."

The crowd shouted "Hosanna!"

They shouted Hosanna to welcome Christ as King. But they also shouted Hosanna because they served a God who would:

—HEAR them when they prayed!

—OPEN doors that had been closed in their faces!

—RECEIVE them when the world turned them away!

—SATISFY them when their souls were thirsty!

One of the strange things about Palm Sunday is that the same people who waved palm branches and shouted Hosanna on Sunday were not talking about palm trees a few days later.

Instead of waving palm branches they were shouting crucify him!

Instead of palm trees they were bringing out an old rugged cross!

On an old rugged cross, he who was PRECIOUS died for the WORTHLESS.

On an old rugged cross, he who was FORGIVING died for the UNFORGIVING!

On an old rugged cross, he who was PERFECT died for the PATHETIC.

On an old rugged cross, he who was MAGNIFICENT died for the MISERABLE!

On an old rugged cross, he who was STRONG died for those who were WEAK!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Hosanna! He's still the king of Kings!

Hosanna! He's still the Lord of Lords!

How I Got Over!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:"And it shall come to pass, if thou shalt hearken diligently unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe and to do all his commandments which I command thee this day, that the LORD thy God will set thee on high above all nations of the earth: 2 And all these blessings shall come on thee, and overtake thee, if thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God." Deuteronomy 28:1-2

Introduction

How is it possible that a once enslaved people could come so far? We who had one time become what Frantz Fanon called the 'Wretched of the Earth" have risen to be leaders of nations are free men and women. How is this? How is it that despite impossible odds, an entire race of people who were doomed to destruction and servitude could avoid oblivion and instead of being destroyed, actually prosper? Many rationales have been given for the African-American survival and growth in the United States, but none quite explains it better than the fact that we have been the beneficiaries of God's amazing grace.

Defined, Grace is unmerited favor. It is blessings that have flowed from the providence of God to the undeserving. It is not payment for a job well done or credit earned for achievements realized. Grace is God's love that is shared with all who will accept his benevolence.

If any race understands God's Grace, it should be those who have experienced life's bitter pills. Those who have tasted the dregs of life and wallowed in the mud of one man's abuse of another, understands what it means to experience God's Grace.

Our people, brought to these shores, for the most part, against our will have broken the shackles that bound us and have risen.

We have picked the cotton, contributed toscientific development, built schools, expanded agriculture, represented this nation on foreign shores and loaned our wealth of inventions, novelties and joy. We have given America the songs of our past, the blues of our sorrows and the spirituals of never dying hope. And we have given America our blood in great battles to guarantee its freedom.

How is it possible for any race of people who have suffered so much to do so much, were it not for the grace of God.

Through the Grace of God we have come. James Weldon Johnson puts it this way, "We have come over a way that with tears has been watered, we have come, treading our path through the blood of the slaughtered."

When we look back, we understand the lyrics of the Old Negro Spiritual "How I got Over! My soul looks back and wonders, How I Got over!" Only those who know about the love of God for all of his people, especially the wretched of the earth, can understand the mystery of how we got over!

As Christians, we know that it has been the Grace of God that has prepared us, protected us and provided for us over the centuries. It will be the Grace of God that will see us through.

Exposition

This text focuses on the final instructions of Moses to the Children of Israel before they entered into the Promised Land.

At 120 years old, Moses was aware that the people would make it to the land of promise, although he himself would not get there with them.

In the first 14 verses of Deuteronomy 28, which means "a second look", Moses repeats promises and curses that he had given earlier on the instructions of God.

As long as Israel remained a people that were God fearing and obedient to God, they were to enjoy the blessings of God in every aspect of their lives, despite their circumstance of over 400 years of slavery which had robbed them of opportunity, experience and inheritance.

These former slaves were promised to be blessed if they lived in the country or if the lived in the city (v3); Blessed with many babies called, "the fruit of thy bodies" and shall be blessed to the point that what they planted or herded would be prosperous. (v4). In addition, these former slaves would be blessed with a full basket or rich foods (v5). Despite plots to destroy their movements that will be blessed going in and coming out (v6). The enemies of these former slaves will be defeated in front of their very eyes(v7). The places and ways that these former slaves store and preserve their resources will be blessed and fruitful. (v8). The people of the world will see how God raises up this people and will become afraid of them because of their babies (v10) and the way that they dominate and multiply and cover the land.

In addition, these former slaves were promised that in God's time he would send favorable blessings in the right season to the point that those who were once slaves will be sufficient, able to build their own houses and secure their own destinies without begging or borrowing. (v12).

These former slaves were promised that God would lift them from subservience to leadership. From being chattel to champions, "And the Lord shall make thee the head and not the tail." (v13) They were to be lifted above, no longer thought of us as being second class or beneath.

For the most part Israel remained loyal to God, and God kept his promises. In the instances in which they strayed away from God, the blessings that were promised in the first 14 verses were substituted with the curses of those that began at verse 15.

Israel succeeded because it was guided and protected by the grace of God. He lifted them up out of the miry clay and planted their feet on dry ground. His grace alone is how they crossed over from being a nation of slaves to a dominating force in the Promised Land.

The Reasons We Have Survived

As a general rule, the Black community is a type of the Children of Israel. We have survived generations of difficulties and frustrations because, for the most part, we have subscribed to a strict belief in God and have remained faithful to God as a people. As a result, God has favored us with his Grace.

Blessed in the Country or the City: Like Israel, we have been blessed whether we lived in the country or in the city. In the country, he protected us in sharecropper shacks with newspaper covered walls and wood burning stoves. He touched the ground with his finger and the cotton we planted grew tall and the bolls were full. Our families grew strong and he protected us from the sicknesses and illnesses that should have destroyed us because of our diet and rural lifestyle. Likewise, in the cities he blessed us. He helped us survive slum neighborhoods, and rat infested apartments owned by absentee landlords. We were not supposed to survive in the city because we had little learning, fewer opportunities and only the work of factory workers and domestics to maintain our families. Yet, whether in the country or in the city, we survived and flourished.

Blessed with large families: Like Israel, God blessed us with a spirit of family and a love for children. We had plenty of babies. Black babies, brown babies, yellow babies. We have babies, babies with plenty of hair, silky hair, kinky hair, and curly hair. Babies with naked bottoms, cloth diapers and Pampers. We had plenty of babies raised by a neighborhood of mamas, aunties, grandmas and next door neighbors. Everybody in the hood was a mama. It worked because somehow God gave us a sense of family that caused us to look at our neighbor's child as our own child and bad children were spanked by all of their mama's and papas in the neighborhood and then by their own too. Our babies came fast and families with 10 brothers and sisters were not unusual. God blessed those families with an abundance of love if they had nothing else; it's the only way that families with so little could be so large and still thrive.

Enemies rebuked before our eyes: Like Israel, we have seen our enemies rebuked and chastised before our eyes. We trembled when men rode through our community in white sheets and called themselves the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. We watched them lynch our mothers and fathers, beat our sisters and spit on our dreams. Some of us fought back like Denmark Vessey,Nat Turner, Marcus Garvey,Huey Newton and Malcolm. But most of us listened to Booker T., and Roy Wilkins, A. Phillip Randolph and Martin and we waited for God to move. It was hard, but we held our peace until God got ready to move. And when he moved he opened the floodgates. Our enemies changed colors when the courts said Rosa Parks had the right to keep her seat, James Meredith had a right to attend Ole Miss and Black folks could order a cup of coffee from the front door instead of the back. When God started moving, he did it right in front of our former enemies. He did it in a way that no one could deny that it wasn't by the power of the people as the Panthers demanded but by the Power of an almighty God.

No longer the tail: Like Israel, we who were once slaves saw our destiny change. We could dream of being more than a fine shoeshine boy and a Pullman Porter. God promised people like us that we would no longer be the tail. We watched with our eyes when Frederick Douglass and Andrew Young became Ambassadors, and William Brooke became a Senator. Our hearts stirred at even the possibility that we could be president. When Shirley Chisholm, Julian Bond, Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton ran for president and matched intellect and skill with the brightest minds in white America, we could see that in our life time, the tail would become the head. Every time we see Colin Powell or Condoleezza Rice making powerful decisions and Young men like Senator Obama walking the Halls of Congress, we see the tail becoming the head. In thousands of cities across the nation, we who were once locked out and forced out are being pushed to the top by an unseen force acting on a centuries old promise that those who were once last will be first and the tail would become head.

We Have Been Blessed because of the Lord

Finally, we must consider that our rise as a people has been closely associated with our faith and obedience to God.

With that we should pay close attention to what Moses promised Israel. They would continue to be blessed as long as they remained close to God. Moses warned Israel that if the people defied God, became disobedient and began to follow other gods, the blessings they enjoyed would discontinue.

That warning remains true for our people today.

If we stray away from God we threaten the blessed relationship with have with God.

Without God's protection we will build fine houses but they will not be homes; we will still have babies but our sense of family will diminish; we will still make gains but they will be empty and shallow; we will still see our people rise to high positions but we will become increasingly disappointed with those like us who lead us, because they do it without God.

Without God we will still prosper to a degree, but we will enjoy it less.

Without God we may eat caviar but it won't taste as good as fried chicken.

Without God we may dine on filet mignon but it never quite matches the flavor of a salaciously flavored pork chop.

It was nothing but the grace of God that brought us and taught us through the years.

We know it was the grace of God because he touched the hearts of those who once oppressed us and changed their hearts.

In 1748 a young slave trader became fed up with trading slaves, buying and selling human flesh. He became troubled in his spirit. That night a terrible storm broke out and John Newton cried out “Lord, have mercy on us.” When the storm subsided his eyes were opened.

He had seen the error of his ways. His eyes were opened!

He decided to put away his life as a slave trader and he sat down and wrote the words that ring out across the centuries:

“Amazing Grace how sweet the sound that saved a wretch like me. I once was lost but now I’m found, blind but now I see!”

Because of his Amazing Grace, we should keep trusting in the Lord.

If we trust in the Lord, he will make a way for us out of no way!

If we trust In the Lord, he will build a bridge for us over troubling waters!

If we trust in the Lord, he will be a shelter for us in a time of storm!

When the world asks, how did a nation of slaves come so far, we can only respond, it wasn’t anything but the grace of God!

It’s the grace of God that wakes me up in the morning!

It’s the grace of God that puts me to sleep at night!

It’s the same grace that has brought me thus far and the same grace that will see me through!

I don’t know about you, although some folks say it’s country and old timey, I’m going to keep telling the story! How I got over!

I’ve got to tell somebody about a little baby born in Bethlehem!

I’ve got to tell somebody about a man who healed the sick and raised the dead!

I’ve got to tell somebody about a man who died on an old rugged cross; but Early Sunday morning, arose from grave with all power in his hands!

How I got over! How I got over!

My soul looks by with wonder at how I got over!

Giving God a Helping Hand

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: Then God said to Abraham, "As for Sarai your wife, you shall not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall be her name. 16 "I will bless her, and indeed I will give you a son by her. Then I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of peoples will come from her." 17 Then Abraham fell on his face and laughed, and said in his heart, "Will a child be born to a man one hundred years old? And will Sarah, who is ninety years old, bear a child?" Genesis 17:15-17; And Sarai said unto Abram, Behold now, the LORD hath restrained me from bearing: I pray thee, go in unto my maid; it may be that I may obtain children by her. And Abram hearkened to the voice of Sarai. Genesis 16:2

Introduction

Have you ever given someone a helping hand? We usually offer a helping hand to people who appear to need assistance. Whether it is a family stranded on the wayside or a friend in a personal strait, helping hands are offered whenever it appears to us that someone has done all they know to do and has exhausted all remedies.

Modern Good Samaritans are becoming rare entities. Despite the passage of Good Samaritan laws that protect those who give a helping hand, many are afraid to stop to help a traveler on the road for fear that the traveler may very well be a roadside predator waiting to rob and attack the Samaritan. The wounded man of biblical fame would have had a difficult time in modern times because the Good Samaritan would be assuming liability for moving the wounded man, should moving him save his life but injure him in another way. Without liability protection, the Good Samaritan could run the risk of being sued by the person that he tried to help, especially if in the course of helping the victim someone misinterprets his actions as touching the victim inappropriately during mouth to mouth resuscitation efforts or Heimlich maneuvers. If the Samaritan carried the wounded man to a hospital, in many places he could become liable for expensive hospital treatments if he gives his name in the emergency room. Giving a helping hand today, is risky business because too often those who are helped including doctors, EMS personnel and well intentioned passers-by too often become victims themselves.

Despite the risks however, there are many who still offer a helping hand when it appears that someone has reached a point of helplessness.

Sooner or later everyone reaches a point in their lives when they need a little help. No one is so independent that they will never need anyone. Everybody needs somebody, sometimes.

What about God? Have you ever reached a point where it appeared that God seemed too slow or unable to accomplish a desired end? What was your response? Did you wait for him or did you, like millions of others before you, try to give God a helping hand.

You know how it's done. You ask God for a little extra financial help, he either takes a long time or seems unable or unwilling to do what you ask, so you decide to help him out by selling drugs, buying lottery tickets or fencing hot merchandise.

You ask God for a healing, but he seems to take so long that you start going to Voodoo doctors, casting spells on yourself and saying special chants.

You ask God for increase, and then put your own thing together when it looks like he's moving to slow.

When we pray and then start our own operation while we are waiting, then we are giving God a helping hand. Does he really need a helping hand? There is nothing that we can do that God can't do better. He doesn't need our helping hand.

As Christians, we are growing in the faith. We are also growing in patience. It is a painstakingly slow learning process but we are learning that there isn't anything that is too hard for God. If we wait on him and move at his command, what he has promised us can be achieved.

Exposition

This text focuses on Sarai's attempt to fulfill her own prayer by arranging a surrogate birth for her husband.

God promised Abraham that he would have a child by Sarai his wife. The son would continue the heritage and promise given to Abraham. However, Abraham was advancing in age and so was Sarai. Sarai, wanted to insure that Abraham had an heir. Since it was the custom of the day for surrogate children born of those in the head of household's employment to become heir, Sarai suggested that Abraham have a child by his maid. At length, Abraham agreed and the child Ishmael was born.

Sarai doubted whether God could keep the promise made to her husband in light of her age. However, God did keep his promise to him. She did bear a son. His name was Isaac.

Sarai's own arrangement caused a major family problem however. Bad feeling developed between she and Hagar as jealousy developed between the two women because Sarai could bear no children. It resulted in Hagar's banishment from Abraham, taking the child with her.

God Often Leaves No Timetable

Abraham believed God would give him the son that was promised; however God did not give him a timetable. When God told Moses to speak to Pharaoh he gave him a timetable to relay to the king. Joseph spoke of seven lean years and seven fat years in his dreams. There are moments when God is exact. These are times when he gives a timetable, there are other times when God says it will be but he does not give a timetable.

Like Abraham we are tremendously frustrated when it seems that God has neglected or forgotten about our situation. The hours drag out. The weeks come one after the other without a word from God. When we hear nothing, we often believe that God has forgotten. That's when we take matters in our own hand.

Sarai decided to please her husband by arranging a surrogate to bear a child for him. However, God's promise was that she would bear him a son, not a surrogate. Often when we make our own arrangements, they are less than what God has promised.

He promised us victory, but we settled for a truce.

He promised us success, but we settle for enough to hang on to.

He promised us happiness, but we settled for accumulations of things.

Whenever God seems to move too slowly we must remember that his estimate of time is not the same as hours. We think in days. He thinks in millions of years. What to us is a lifetime is but a second to him. The 90th Psalm reminds us that a thousand years to us is like a day to the Lord. It's obvious that our time and his time estimates are not the same.

We should not be frustrated when it appears that God has forgotten us. We should remember that God always hears us. It was many years before God acted on his promise to Abraham. It was 400 years before he responded to the prayers of Israel in slavery. It was 430 years between the Old Testament and the New Testament; before God sent the messiah.

The old folks put it this way, "He may not come when you want him, but he's always on time."

When We Help out we usually mess up!

Sarai tried to help God out and messed up pretty bad. Her plan seemed logical and reasonable. She followed the protocol and talked it over with her husband. He consented and the deed was done. However, afterwards trouble erupted in the family.

There is no record that Sarai and Abraham prayed about their decision. They talked about it and then did it.

Often we have the same dilemma. We act without prayer. However, it is extremely important for believers to pray over actions before undertaking them. Prayer is essential. If we don't pray up, we'll usually mess up!

Had they prayed God would have reassured them that his promise would be fulfilled, but Sarai didn't pray she had her own plan.

What plans do you have floating in your mind right now? Have you made plans for yourself, spouse or children? Have you prayed about it? Have you asked God for guidance?

To pray for direction is different from worry. Prayer involves asking God for direction with respect to the options before you. In solitude, we seek God's reassurance that what we want is what he wants. After personal prayer, we then check the scriptures to see if our course of action is consistent with the word of God. Then we watch for signs to confirm what we believe God has told us. Once we have received confirmation we prepare to move as he commands the events that affect our lives in an ordered march toward fulfillment of his promise.

There are times when God does what he promises immediately. There are other times when he takes a slower approach. It's much like a mother who promises that a cake will be made. She could either bake the cake and it is sitting on the table when her children come home or she could take them through the step by step preparations of gathering the sugar, flour, milk, etc, and talking them through the entire preparation process. Whether she bakes the cake or shows them how to make a cake depends on her purpose; the purpose often determines the speed of delivery.

We pray for money, but it may very well be that God takes the long way around. Rather than money just showing up, he takes us through all of the preparatory steps: education, training, employment and investment, then money. Some think the path God has chosen is too slow, so they try to help him out. We want a happy family, his way requires marriage, but we try shacking. Every time we try to do it ourselves we mess up! Our feeble efforts underscore the truth of Proverbs 16:25, "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death. "

God can keep every promise he makes

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should be aware that God never makes a promise that he cannot keep, for there is nothing too hard for God to do.

Sarai laughed when she heard that God was going to bring them a child in her old age.

There are many who doubt God's power, who laugh when they hear what God promises to do for us.

They laugh when God promises to pick us up when we have fallen down!

They laugh when God promises to forgive us for our sins and give us one more chance!

They laugh when God promises to open the windows of heaven and bless us with health, strength and possibly even gold and silver!

Those who know the Lord, have learned not to laugh. When God says it, it will be done.

God promised Joshua that once in the Promised Land that he would deliver them and give them the victory. It was a hard promise for a man to fulfill, but it was easy for the Lord! When the people marched around the walls for the seventh time and trumpet sounded, walls that looked like a hard thing, turned out to be an easy thing in the hands of the Lord. Joshua asked for another hard thing later, "If I had a little more sunshine, I could win this battle", the Lord took hold to the earth and stopped its rotation and caused the sun to hang in the noonday sky! It was a hard thing for man, but "elementary" for the Lord.

God promised Abraham that he would give him a child, despite his advancing age; it was a hard thing for man to do, since his wife was 99 years old, but it was "elementary to the Lord." Sara even laughed about it, because she too thought this was too hard, even for the Lord. But when Isaac was born, his birth proved that God can fulfill hard promises.

Every child of God should be encouraged to know that if God promises you something, you will receive it! But we should be sure of what God promises!

God didn't promise:

—That every day would be Sunday!

—That a little rain would never fall!

—That it would always be up and never down!

—That it would always be victory never defeat!

He promised that whether sunshine or rain he would never leave me alone!

Somebody laughed when they heard that there was child born in Bethlehem who was the only begotten son of God.

Somebody laughed when they heard there was a man who was giving sight to blind and causing the lame to walk!

Somebody laughed when they heard there was a man who was raising the dead!

Somebody laughed when they put an old rugged cross on his shoulder and forced him to carry up Golgotha's hill.

Somebody laughed when they put a sign over his head that said he was the King of the Jews!

Somebody laughed when they drove nails in his hands!

Somebody laughed when he hung from the cross, and taunted, "If you are the Christ come down from the cross and save yourself!"

Somebody laughed when the buried him in a borrowed tomb!

But Early Sunday morning, without anybody's help…

He arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Jesus Keep Me Near The Cross

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La. 7

April 17, 2005

Scripture: Luke 23:49: "And all his acquaintance, and the women that followed him from Galilee, stood afar off, beholding these things." Luke 23:49 "Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene." John 19:25

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when you desperately needed help, but you felt all alone. Most individuals have many acquaintances that range from co-workers, club members, neighbors, to business associates and classmates. Many of these acquaintances are frequent faces during the times of our lives when everything is going great. When we are healthy, influential or beneficial in some way, the number of acquaintances that are near to us seems innumerable. We often wonder how we attracted so many acquaintances. However, when we fall into a difficult way that large crowd of acquaintances seems distant. The acquaintance that always wants to talk, never answers the phone when we are in need. The acquaintances that enjoyed our presence in the club are rather distant once we face a false accusation that could result in a trial or heavy legal expense. Somehow, when we seem to need the support of our acquaintances the most, they seem to disappear.

There is a difference between friends and acquaintances. All of our friends are acquaintances but all of our acquaintances are not our friends. At what point does a person become your friend? If they show you a kindness do you call them your friend? If they lend you some money or give you something to eat, is that qualification enough? Friendship is not easy to develop. What is a friend? For the answer consider the woman who had spent some seventy years as maid and servant to Miss Lucy, a wealth Southern belle. Now the mistress had died, and in an effort to comfort this old black maid, a neighbor said, "I'm so sorry to hear of Miss Lucy's death. You must miss her greatly. I know you were dear, dear friends." "Yes'm," said the servant, "I am sorry she died. But we wasn't friends." "Not friends?" said the lady, "I know you were. I've seen you laughing and talking together lots of times." "Yes'm, that's so." Came the reply. "We've laughed together, and we've talked together, but we was just "quaintances. You see, you don't become friends until we have shared each other's pain. We never shed no tears. Folks got to cry together before they become friends." Only those who are willing to share our pain can truly call themselves our friends.

Most of us have a very small handful of friends but many acquaintances. We are usually able to distinguish our acquaintances from our friends by the way they respond to us in moments of peril and need. Our acquaintances may have met us at a social function, business meeting or chance occasion. Our acquaintances may have been persons introduced to us by others, we know there names and may even serve with them in one capacity or another. The more we have or the more we influence we bring with us, the more acquaintances we seem to attract. Everybody wants to say they know you, belong to your club, and say they have been touched by your life in some way; especially if such a relationship is profitable in some way. It is possible to have thousands of acquaintances, especially if you are popular for one reason or another.

Friends on the other hand are very few. Our friends share our happy times and celebrations. They are close to us but they have no secret agenda. When they call or visit us they truly came to share a moment with us, without another item on their agenda. Our friends are usually the first ones to differ with us when we are wrong and still love us. Moreover, our friends share resources whenever such sharing will benefit the other. Friends, never take advantage of their friendship for the personal gain of one at the risk of personal loss for the other.

Jesus has proven to be a friend to believers in many ways. He's been there for us in our most vulnerable times. As the world drives nails into our hands and raises us up in humiliation, weakness or shame, he is near in our cross bearing times. He is more than an acquaintance, he is a friend. No wonder the song writer would write, "What a friend we have in Jesus."

When we are on the cross, he is near; but are we always as near to him as he is to us? God loves us but is it reciprocal?

As Christians, we strive to stay close to the cross of Christ because there we have found a spiritual fountain from whence we are blessed immensely for which we are willing to pledge our lives to champion its cause.

Exposition

This text focuses on the people who followed Christ during his moment of trial and crucifixion.

It is unique that those who followed Jesus closely and reverently are here described as acquaintances. As he was crucified many people gathered to watch. The makeup of the crowd varied. There were some who were among those who shouted "crucify him." There were others who were among those who shouted "Hosanna" when he entered Jerusalem. Clearly identified among those who watched were people who were close to him during his ministry; some of whom were identified as his friends.

Luke refers to the crowd generically as "acquaintances." These individuals stood at a distance, beat their breasts and went home. The act of beating their breast was an act of mourning. It demonstrated remorse, pity and a general spirit of lament.

There were many people who suddenly became "acquaintances" with him during his hour of trial. They stayed as far away from the cross as they could get. There is no record of Lazarus being near the cross, even though he was raised from the dead by Christ. The lame man, who was healed by Christ should have been there, but he wasn't at the cross. Neither was the blind man who had his sight restored. In fact, with the exception of John, all of the other 10 disciples were no where near the cross on that dreadful day.

John 19:25 names the handful of the faithful that dared stand near the cross. John said, "There stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. They dared to stand near the cross. It was obviously a bold confession of faith because those associated with Christ would certainly become targets themselves. They could actually be crucified themselves because of their close acquaintance with him. Despite the danger, there were five that dared stand near the cross.

There were 5,000 who came for fish and bread, but only five would stand near the cross.

There were 12 that followed him for three years, but on the day of the crucifixion only one of them, John, stood near the cross.

The whole city turned out to greet him when he entered Jerusalem,. There were literally thousands of people, but only five of that crowd would dare stand near the cross.

Those who stood near the cross had their reasons. Jesus was more than just an acquaintance to them, he was a man who was willing to lay down his life for those he considered friends.

Near The Cross

Those who chose to stand near the cross were people who were more than acquaintances to Christ. They were more than nameless faces in the crowd who would safely beat their breast, dropped their heads and go home. They were individuals whose lives had been touched and whose eyes had been opened by his presence.

MARY WAS NEAR THE CROSS-BLESSED: Mary stood near the cross. Until she stepped forth as the mother of Jesus, she would have been anonymous in the crowd. She was not from Jerusalem; she could have remained just another face in the crowd. By standing near the cross she focused attention on herself. Like Mary, there are many mothers today who go beyond the bounds of safety to support their children. She rejoiced with him at the wedding celebration and followed him closely from village to village. Now, even in his hour of humiliation she stood near the cross. Jesus saw her compassion and concern and commended her to accept John as her son and charged him to care for her as his own mother (v26). Mary symbolized every God fearing mother in the world. They stand near the cross because there they find the love of God showered upon them. It is through the grace of God that such women are able to stand. He provides for their care and holds them in his hand. Mary was rewarded as she stood near the crowd. So is every other mother who stands close to the Lord in the best and worst of times. It is the reward of the cross that draws them closer every day.

JOHN WAS NEAR THE CROSS-RESTORED: John was near the cross. He was a restored man. At the garden of Gethsemane when Christ was betrayed John was among those who scattered and hid themselves. Like Peter, John denied Christ by hiding. Yet, he stood at the cross because he was a forgiven and restored man. There are many today who stand near the cross because they are restored men and women. These are the men and women whose lives were broken by the circumstances of life but have been given second chances. John represented millions who have been given a second chance. Only those who have bottomed out in life and felt the life saving hand of God touch them and lift them, understand what it means to have a second chance. Only those who have felt the scorn of society and heard the clanging doors and rattling keys of prison cells know who know what it means to have a second chance. Only those who have failed miserably only hear God say, get up and try again, know what it means to have a second chance. He stood near the cross because it was Christ's actions on the cross that gave him his second chance. His restoration and forgiveness was based on the sacrifice of Christ on the cross. As far as he was concerned he could not be just an acquaintance, he had to stand near the cross.

SALOME WAS NEAR THE CROSS-ENLIGHTENED: Salome was Mary's sister. She was the wife of Zebedee. She was introduced in Matthew 20:20-23 when she tried to bring her two boys James and John before Christ and secure positions for them in the new kingdom, on both his left and right hand side. Jesus asked did she know the depth of her request. He wanted know whether they were willing to drink from the cup before him." She wanted a crown for her sons, but learned from Jesus' own words that if there is no cross, there can be no crown. Salome stood at the cross having learned that service to the kingdom of God will require sacrifice. Her two sons did drink from the cup. James was killed as Martyr and John was exiled on the Isle of Patmos before he died. When Salome stood at the cross she represented all of those who have since learned that there can be no crown of righteousness until we have drank from the bitter cup of sacrifice. Her eyes were opened and she stood at the cross ready to serve or sacrifice her life if necessary to advance the kingdom of God. Her stand, near the cross, was an announcement of her willingness to bear her own cross, in order to receive her own crown.

MARY MAGDALENE WAS NEAR THE CROSS-REDEEMED: Many Magdalene was a woman from whom Jesus had cast out seven demons. They made her life miserable and threatened to destroy her. Jesus redeemed her and gave her life new meaning. Because she was saved from a dreadful life, crippled by sin and plagued by demons, Mary Magdalene had no where to go but to the cross. Not only did she stand near the cross but she was also near the empty tomb. She had experienced redemption and there was only one place she wanted to be and that was near the savior. There are many today, who share Mary Magdalene's testimony. He has freed many of us from demons of past mistakes, failures and fears. He has freed many of us from guilt and the burden and pain of mistakes. Those who have been redeemed stand near the cross because:

—Jesus moved out of the light of heaven to bring light in their dark world.

—Jesus made himself sin, to deliver us from guilt and shame.

—Jesus made himself poor, to give us an opportunity to rise up in faith.

Those who have been picked up and turned around by the power of God have only one place to stand and that is near the cross.

Near the cross is where believers should be

Finally, brothers and sisters, believers should be reminded that there is both a witness and a reward for those who stand near the cross.

When five individuals stood near the cross, while thousands of acquaintances and onlookers looked afar off, there willingness to stand near the cross was a testimony.

It was a testimony to their faith in Jesus as the son of God.

It was a testimony to their faith that God would protect them from the enemies of the cross.

Those who are willing to stand near the cross also will be recognized and rewarded in the kingdom of heaven. Those who are not ashamed of the cross on this earth will be recognized by Christ in the kingdom of heaven.

The reward of the faithful is a crown of righteousness and eternal life.

Every child of God should stay near the cross because being near the cross means that we are more than just acquainted with the Lord. It means we know the Lord.

We know he answers prayer, because we've tried him for ourselves!

We know the Lord will make a way, because he's made a way for us out of no way!

We know the Lord heals the sick, because we have been on our sickbed and he has lifted us up.

The prayer of every saint is, "Jesus keep me near the cross."

Keep me near the cross because the cross is a symbol of his grace!

Jesus keep me near the cross because only the power of the cross can:

—lift me from the gutters and put me in glory.

—take me out of prison and put me in paradise.

—snatch me out of the jaws of hell and put me in paradise

—turn my moment of despair into days of delight

No wonder the song writer declared "At the cross, at the cross, where I first saw the light and the burdens of my heart roll away. It was there by faith I received my sight and now I am happy all the day!"

At the cross, there is hope in your moment of despair!

At the cross, there is strength for your moments of weakness!

At the cross, there is love when the whole world hates you!

On an old rugged cross, Jesus died for the sins of the world!

On an old rugged cross, Jesus made our burdens bearable!

On an old rugged cross, Jesus made our mountains climbable!

On an old rugged cross, Jesus made our deepest valley crossable!

On an old rugged cross, Jesus made our daily pressures manageable!

On an old rugged cross, Jesus made our pain and suffering endurable!

Jesus keep me near the cross!
That's where he died out on Calvary!
But Early Sunday morning!
Early!
Early!

Doors Looking for A Keeper

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 20, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness" Psalm 84:10

Introduction

If God placed an advertisement in the newspaper that sought a door keeper for his house, how would it read? Could it read something like this, "Door Keeper Needed for the House of God? Experience with God necessary, must be able to stand firm, keep a pleasant smile and witness for the master. No pay but the job offers an excellent benefit package." If such an ad were placed would there be many takers?

Only special people respond to God's search for doorkeepers. These are the ones who are willing to go the extra mile to help bring others into the presence of the Lord.

If we were to advertise for a doorkeeper we would have to recognize one truth that: "If a building requires or utilizes a doorkeeper, the kind of door keeper obviously would depend upon the house."

David identified the type of doorkeeper needed when he specified the house. The doorkeeper needed was for the house of the Lord.

The usher is a special kind of doorkeeper. The usher's job and responsibility is defined by the door he or she keeps.

An usher is not a:

BOUNCER: A bouncer guards the door at a saloon, night club or house of ill repute. The bouncer watches for people who are unruly, those who carry weapons and may get physical with those who are disruptive. A church usher is not a bouncer because the door he or she keeps is not the door of the house of ill repute. The job of the usher is not to put people out but to welcome them in by showing the love, warmth and benevolent spirit of our God.

JAILER: A jailer guards the door of a prison. The door he guards has many locks, fortified by steel. These doors are designed to keep prisoners in place. His job is to insure that no one leaves out, breaks out, or slips out without permission. However, a church usher is not a jailer, because the door he or she keeps is not at a jail house but the House of the Lord. The job of the usher is not to keep people in church by locking them down, but to make them so comfortable and welcome that they want to stay, and went they leave, make them want to come back again.

TICKET TAKERS: A ticket taker is usually an usher at a theater or performing arts center. He or she takes your ticket and shows you to your seat, as you prepare to watch the show. A church usher is not a ticket taker, because ticket takers stand at the door to prepare visitors for the show, and the House of the Lord is not a show place, but a place where God shows up and meets his people.

VALET: A valet is an usher at a hotel. Usually the valet will meet you at the door, help with your luggage, park your car and perform other courtesies. His job is to see to it that you find your assigned place comfortably. However, a church usher is not a valet, because after the valet meets you at the door and helps you he expects a tip. Church ushers help worshipers in many ways but the only reward they expect to receive will come from God himself.

GUARD: A guard is usually at the doors of many businesses, public institutions and some churches. They are often armed. The guard inspects everyone who comes in and serves as a deterrent to those who might want to attack, rob, steal or kill. The guard usually carries a weapon, a radio and cuffs to bind a suspect's hands. However, the usher who stands at the door of the house of God is not a guard. He stands at the door but there is another guard for the word says, "He that keepeth Israel neither slumbers nor sleeps." He doesn't have a walkie talkie but he's in constant communication with the Lord because "he walks with me and talks with me." He doesn't have handcuffs to hold worshippers hands down because he's constantly saying, "Father I stretch my hands to thee." The usher is obviously, not a guard.

When the saloon door looks for a keeper, it wants a bouncer!

When the jail door looks for a doorkeeper, it looks for a jailer

When a theater looks for a doorkeeper, it looks for a ticket taker!

When a hotel looks for a doorkeeper, it looks for a valet.

When a business or public building looks for a doorkeeper, it often wants a security officer.

But when the Lord looks for a door keeper, he's not looking for a bouncer, jailer, ticket taker, valet or guard; he's looking for a child of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on David's expression of love for the presence of God.

Scholars believe that it was written, under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, during the time he was temporarily exiled from the Holy City during the rebellion of his son Absalom. During this period of time he was unable to be in the holy city, or be near the place of worship; he yearned to be in its presence. The 84th Psalm finds David saying that he yearned to participate in the ordinances of the temple (v1) He expressed his desire toward them in verse 2-3. In verses four through seven he wrote of the joy of those persons who have a chance to be near God.

At verse 10 he makes it clear that he would rather be a doorkeeper in the house of God than be outside in the tents of iniquity.

His expression of love for God, the house of God and the presence of God was a testament to his faith. The fact that he would rather have been a door keeper in the temple than a king in wilderness indicated the extent of his great faith. Having been through both doors in the course of his life, he found the doors of the Lord to be most fulfilling.

Looking for a Keeper

The house of God is in need of a door keeper. The nature of the house, determines duties of the job and the qualifications for the job.

To be a doorkeeper in the House of the Lord there are a few prerequisites:

THE DOORKEEPER MUST BE FAMILIAR WITH THE HOUSE OF GOD: Those who desire to be doorkeepers should be familiar with the house of God. Isaiah 2:3 says, "Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; he will teach us His ways, and we shall walk in His paths. For out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." The doorkeeper should be one who knows the way to the house of God and knows the teachings of the Lord. In addition the doorkeeper in God's house must know how to act in the house of God. 1 Timothy 3:15 says, "That thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth.." The house of God doesn't need just any doorkeeper but its doors demand a person familiar with the House of God.

THE DOORKEEPER MUST NOT BE A PATRON OF THE WORLD: Doorkeepers should be individuals who have come out of the world. In Psalm 84 David refers to the ungodly life as the "tents of wickedness." If the bouncer comes to church he should not recognize the doorkeeper at the church as a regular patron of his saloon. The doorkeeper has made a conscious choice to leave the tents of wickedness and serve the Lord. That's why David used the phrase "I would rather" be a doorkeeper. "I would rather" indicates that the doorkeeper has been in, about or around the tents of wickedness at some time or another but has chosen to be a servant in the House of the Lord. He resolves like Solomon in Ecclesiastes 12:13 "Let us hear the conclusion of the matter, fear God and keep his commandments for this is the whole duty of man."

THE DOORKEEPER MUST BE HUMBLE: The doorkeeper understands, perhaps more than anyone else, that his entire existence is by the grace of God. He does not look down on the worshippers who enter. Neither does he criticize them or humiliate them in any way because he recognizes his own weaknesses and dependence upon God. He knows what it means to be low in spirit and he knows what it means to be lifted by the hand of God. Paul was a great Apostle but God gave him a thorn in his flesh that kept him humble. Likewise the doorkeeper should always keep a humble spirit, remembering what God told Paul, "My Grace is sufficient."

Doors of the House

Finally, brothers and sisters we must be aware that the doors of the house of God are not like other doors.

The doors of the house of God are the threshold that marks the entrance into the presence of God.

People who enter the doors of the House of God expect the spirit of God to flow.

They want to experience the power of God because his:

—GLORY is much greater; his power is much stronger.

—METHODS are much wiser; his NAME is much sweeter.

—PRESENCE is much closer; his PROMISES are much surer.

The doors of the House of God need born again keepers. His doors are not like the doors of the world.

His doors are not:

—SLIDING DOORS that let the devil slip in and out, but they are open doors that usher us into the presence of a God who can turn our burdens into blessings, our defeats into victories, our problems into praises and our weaknesses into strengths.

—GARAGE DOORS that open so we can come in and park; but his doors are open to those who are willing to work until their day is done; work until the setting of their sun.

—SWINGING DOORS that allow encourage us to freely go in and out of the world; but his doors are unlocked doors that will be opened to anyone who knocks. I hear him saying, "Behold I stand at the door and knock, if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

The doors of the House of God are looking for a keeper.

These doors are:

STORMDOORS because when the storms of life are raging the presence of the Lord will be a protection for us. Psalm 27:5 says, "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock."

SAFE DOORS because he protects us from attacks of Satan and builds a shield around us. We are safe in his arms. No wonder the song writer declared "Leaning, leaning. Safe and secure from all alarms! Leaning, leaning. Leaning on the everlasting arms.

AUTOMATIC DOORS because he blesses as soon as we come near his arms stretch wide open to do for us what he has done for so many others. No wonder the song writer declared, "It is no secret what God can do. What he's done for others he'll do for you. With arms wide open he'll pardon you. It is no secret what God can do."

The doors of the House of God are looking for a keeper who believes in a God:

—Whose love never grows old; —whose patience never runs out!

—Compassion is never outdated!

The doors of the House of God are looking for a keeper who believes in Jesus!

The son of the living God!

Who died on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning…

No. 9138-Youth

Get Real

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 24, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you. Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing. And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God. Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. John 20:26-31.

Introduction

How do you know what is real and what is not? There are millions of people today who are struggling to discover whether or not their existence is real or just an illusion. They ask, "Is this life really happening or is this entire experience just a dream." Youth are bombarded with such ideas that are presented in the context of popular moves. The Movie "Total Recall" showed Arnold Swaartzeneggar playing a man who lived in a time when people will purchase the memory of a vacation without actually going on the vacation. In that memory pack anyone can be programmed to be anything they desire. Laurence Fishburne stars in the movie "The Matrix" which creates an alternate life to this one. The alternate life has freedom fighters and people to be set free. The "Matrix" existed on the energy produced by human beings and gave them an illusion to live in. Discerning the real from the imagined is one of the hardest jobs of youth. Youth ask many questions about life, their surroundings and even about the church as they try sorting into compact compartments those things which they have found to be real and others which are only imagined.

It's not long before children reach an age in which they learn to distinguish what is real and the surreal. Discerning youth have learned the truth about Easter Bunnies, rabbits that lay colored eggs, the Tooth Fairy, leprechauns at the end of the rainbow, and the fat men who wear red suits at Christmas time. This level of discernment comes first, then follows the next level as they compare what they see around them to the picture they have been given of the ideal life.

Television presents many scenarios that young people take for the real world. Are all families as homogenous, loving and understanding as those we see on T.V? We laugh, but some T.V. families are closer to the reality that we know than others. Which best describes your family, The Huxtables? The Parkers? Or is it the families we see in Muddeah's Family Reunion or the "Friday" movie series. Even cartoons present a challenge to help children discern real from reality. In cartoon land there is rarely an instance where the good guys lose, bad guys get away or the hero is unable to free himself from a trap. In cartoon land no one goes to church and there is no talk of sin. Only on television can a man be touched by an angel, get powerful blessings and walk right into heaven without ever going to a church or a synagogue.

Even harder for youth is the task of trying to discover truths about their own lives. Are we really who we claim to be or is it all a cute little game we play? Is the girl who goes to school each day with modest clothing, that includes knee length dresses and skirts, loose fitting pants, and blouses that conceal rather than reveal; is that her reality or the reality of others? Is the young man who wears a belt, ties his shoe laces, tucks his shirt tail in his pants and wears pants that fit rather than two sizes too large, is that reality for him; or is that someone else's reality.

Many young people are like the people in the Matrix. They live in two worlds. One they consider the real world, the other is considered a necessary alternative to keep from being grounded. They live in the world of Lil Boosie, Lil Kim, Lil Bow Wow, Ice Cube, Ice T, TI, 50-Cents, C-Murder, Girls Gone Wild, BET and Snoop Dogg. Yet, they live in an alternative world that has thousands of rules, tests and judgments often given by people who seem to have problems keeping themselves real. This alternative world is the world of rotary telephones, black and white TV, the Temptations, Curtis Mayfield, B.B. King, Gladys Knight, Dolemite, Red Foxx, Run DMC. For many this alternative world also includes Sunday School, Church, Youth Choirs, Preaching, Bible Schools and Youth Retreats.

How does God fit into the mix? Is he inside the Matrix or outside. Is he a part of your real world or is he a part of the alternative world only? What about the devil? Is he real or does he fit along side other less than real bad guys like, Werewolves, vampires, mummies and other creatures of a scary but unreal underworld?

Is heaven real? Will there actually be a place where we will live throughout eternity? Will there really be streets of gold? Will there really be infinite happiness and joy in this distant place. Is it real?

These are the questions that flash through the mind of many teens as they sort out their lives.

As Christians, we take heart in knowing that many young Christians have found their answers. From their own experience comes a testimony that cannot be denied. He's real. That's why they declare with the song writer, "Jesus is real, I know the Lord he's real to me!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Thomas as he expressed his doubt that the risen savior was actually real.

The text verse occurs a week after the resurrection. It was the Sunday following Easter. On Easter Sunday Jesus appeared to his disciples in a miraculous way. They had locked themselves behind closed doors out of fear. They were afraid that the temple guards would come and arrest them, accusing them of stealing the body of Jesus. They feared they would be crucified. They literally feared for their lives. So they shut the doors tight and would not let anyone enter or leave. Verse 19 notes that in the midst of their fear Jesus came, despite the closed doors and appeared among them physically.

Thomas had the dubious distinction of being one who doubted the resurrection of Christ. When the disciples assembled themselves after the crucifixion, there was obviously much anxiety among them. The doors were shut and locks were in place. Then suddenly Christ appeared in the midst of them.

Thomas did not trust what his eyes were seeing. It appeared that the savior was standing before him in the flesh.

It appeared that the image he saw was that of Christ. However, Thomas was not sure. Too many things had happened and they happened so fast. He had earlier said he would not believe that Christ had risen unless he could touch the wound prints with his own hands. Thus, when Christ appears in this text He invites Thomas to do just that. It was then that Thomas knelt in submission and belief not needing to touch the Lord. He believed what he saw. He concluded that Christ was not a fake but a real presence before him.

When he bowed, he acknowledged Christ as the Lord and worshipped him.

Discovering The Real Me

Between the all the mixed images that we project to the world, where is the real "me?"

Youth often believe that their clothes or possessions define who they are. Thus, in youth wearing fashionable clothes is a must because many feel that they are defined by what they wear.

However, the real "us" is on the "inside." The inside represents our morals, values, habits, fears, beliefs, hopes, frustrations and dreams.

The goal of every Christian youth is to work on the inside and perfect its various parts.

On the inside is a core value system which indicates whether we lie or steal. What we believe about being loyal, whether we are friendly and polite or whether we can be counted on in a pinch.

On the inside lies our tendency to either obey rules or rebel against them, to see things from a positive point of view or to see them negatively. On the inside we discover whether we are spendthrifts or frugal money managers. On the inside we learn whether we are cowardly or brave.

Most importantly, on the inside lies what we believe about God. It's where our faith lies.

The major objective is to get the inside straight first.

Once the inside is straight, then the next objective is to integrate what's inside with the outside.

When we "integrate" our goodness to our outward selves another word comes into play; that word is "integrity." Integrity implies that both the inside and the outside are the same.

When our inside and our outside is the same then we are "real."

Being "real" does not always mean that a person has reached an admirable state. It is possible for both the inside and the outside of a person to be corrupt. In this case, being "real" means being totally corrupt. This person is "real" but with low integrity. The opposite is to be "good" with high integrity.

God is not impressed with out outside, unless the outside and the inside are the same. We have to be "real." He looks first at the inside.

That's what the prophet Samuel discovered when he went to anoint a successor to King Saul in the bible. When all of David's brothers stood before the prophet, none of them were selected even though they looked appealing on the outside. They lacked a high degree of integrity: their outside nature and their inside were inconsistent.

David on the other hand had the temperament, intellect, spirituality and courage necessary to be king. It showed on the outside and the inside. Not only did he have integrity. He had a high degree of integrity.

Youth should strive to "be real" but to let their realness reflect a high degree of integrity.

The youth who insults others and is disrespectful to adults, can dismiss his actions as "I'm just being real" but that "realness" if it is genuine reflects a low level of integrity.

Being real with God

Finally, brothers and sisters, youth should "get real" with God.

Every Christian believer should try to make their spiritual life with God the same as their school life among their peers.

The Christian who sings, "I'm determined to follow Jesus" on Sunday should also reflect that determination on the school campus on Monday.

The Christian who reads and studies the bible in Sunday school and Wednesday nights should let the truth of those studies reflect themselves when it's time to socialize on Friday and Saturday nights.

Those young people who still maintain double lives, one on the outside and one on the inside should "Get Real" with God.

Their Sunday and their Monday must become one and the same.

While some young people have difficulty making their church life and their school life the same, there are others who are "real" when they proclaim their love for Christ.

There are millions of youth who testify "Yes, God is real for he has washed and made me whole."

Thomas knew Christ was real and not a spirit when he saw the marks in his hand and the hole in his side. We know he is real because we have seen the marks that he has made on our lives.

Those who know the Lord have a story to tell and he leaves his mark on you.

When you meet the Lord he leaves his mark.

When you know the Lord is real you begin to see things differently.
When the Lord is real to you
—SKIES seem to be bluer
—SUN seem to shine brighter
—BIRDS seem to sing sweeter —FLOWERS seem to blossom fuller
—AIR seems more refreshing
—STARS seem to have more luster —BURDENS seem lighter
—FAITH seems stronger
—HEAVEN seems closer
John said when the disciples saw the evidence they were glad!
Just like those disciples, every believer who knows that God is real has something to be happy about!
Because he's real, he can:
—Take our valleys and raise them to mountain tops
—Take our midnights and turn them into noon days
—Take our briny tears and turn them into mighty cheers
—Take our defeats and turn them into victories
—Take our losses and turn make them work for our gain
Somebody asks, "You are just a youth, how do you know he is real?"
Don't you hear the answer?
"I know the Lord is real because I can feel him in my hands!
I can feel him in my feet!
I can feel him in my heart!
I can feel him all over me!
He's so real that he picked up an old rugged cross and carried it to Calvary!
He's so real that he died for all of my sins!
But Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead with all power in his hands!

I Hear God

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 1, 2005

SCRIPTURE: And it came to pass at that time, when Eli was laid down in his place, and his eyes began to wax dim, that he could not see; And ere the lamp of God went out in the temple of the LORD, where the ark of God was, and Samuel was laid down to sleep; That the LORD called Samuel: and he answered, Here am I. And he ran unto Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou calledst me. And he said, I called not; lie down again. And he went and lay down. And the LORD called yet again, Samuel. And Samuel arose and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And he answered, I called not, my son; lie down again. Now Samuel did not yet know the LORD, neither was the word of the LORD yet revealed unto him. And the LORD called Samuel again the third time. And he arose and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And Eli perceived that the LORD had called the child. Therefore Eli said unto Samuel, Go, lie down: and it shall be, if he call thee, that thou shalt say, Speak, LORD; for thy servant heareth. So Samuel went and lay down in his place. 10 And the LORD came, and stood, and called as at other times, Samuel, Samuel. Then Samuel answered, Speak; for thy servant heareth." 1 Samuel 3:2-10.

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when you felt God speaking to you, but you were not sure? Often God speaks to us in a variety of ways but we are not positioned to either hear him or recognize his voice. Sometimes when God speaks we don't recognize his voice at all and mistake him for another. It would be a completely unfortunate for God to speak to us but we miss his message because we were not able to discern his voice.

We hear many voices everyday. We hear news commentators, radio personalities, talk show hosts, political leaders, rappers, preachers, teachers, parents, relatives, and incantations of the mystics. Each claims to speak with some level of authority. How do we know which voice to receive? How can we filter out bad voices without blocking the true voice of God at the same time?

How do you hear God? What method do you use to discern God's will for you? In the Old Testament the priests carried to lots in their robes which were called Urim and Thummin. When a believer wanted to know the will of God they would simply cast the lots for a yea or nay response.

Today people spend millions of dollars to hear a divine voice. An instant industry that has popped up to service those who want to hear from a god, any god, in a hurry. In 1990 a company called Psychic Friends Network was established that connected 2000 psychics across the country and promised to give callers who dialed a 1-900 number answers to their questions. Singer Dionne Warwick hosted the 30 minute commercials. It raked in $125 million a year. Others jumped on board and by 1994 the industry took in $624 million a year. By the end of the century, analysts reported $1.2 billion a year receipts.

There is a troubling component for African-Americans. Most of the networks target poor Blacks and others with low incomes. They prefer to use almost exclusively African-American celebrities like Billy Dee Williams, Phillip Michael Thomas, Dionne Warwick, LaToya Jackson, and Nell Carter as hosts. The studies show that most of the respondents to the sites are Black, poor and all have money and love problems.

When Black people want to hear a divine word on a hurry, there are companies ready to give them anything they want to hear for the price of a 1-900 phone call.

When God speaks his voice is a source of inspiration, encouragement, correction and salvation. However, we must listen intently and study systematically to discern that what we hear or even what we read in the bible is actuallu the voice of God speaking to our life situation.

As Christians, we know the importance of the hearing God and rejecting strange voices. To hear him, we know we must pray regularly, study intently and live according to his direction. When we walk closely with him, without a doubt, he will hear us.

Exposition

This text focuses on young Samuel as he responds to the voice of God.

At the time of this text Samuel is about 12 or 13 years old. He had been brought to the temple by his mother, Hannah, as an infant so that he could be raised in the service of the Lord.

For years Samuel was a servant of the Priest Eli who was very old. Eli had two sons who were also priests but they were very ungodly in their manner. Samuel was reared to be the next high priest, even though it had not been revealed to him by God.

One night while Samuel was sleeping he heard a voice calling to him. Thinking it was Eli calling, Samuel raised himself on three separate occasions and went in to Eli, ready to be of service. Each time the old priest responded that he had not called him and sent him back to bed. Then Eli realized that God was speaking to the lad. He instructed him when he heard the voice the next time that he should respond, “Speak Lord for thy servant heareth.”

Ways That God Speaks

Those who want to hear a word from God have found that God speaks in one of three different ways, sometimes in all three at the same time.

SPOKEN WORD: The first way to hear God speak is through the spoken word. Young Samuel heard God’s voice through the spoken word. In the silence of the night God spoke to him in a voice that was clear and audible. His experience was not unique because Elijah while hiding from the forces of the King in the mountains, waited to receive the word of God. There was an earthquake, but God was not in it. There was a strong wind, but God was not in the wind. There was fire, but God was not in the fire. Finally, there was a still small voice that spoke to him and asked "Elijah, what doest thou here?" Elijah was given specific instructions by the spoken word of God himself.

Of the many means to communicate with us, God often chooses to speak to believers directly. When he speaks to us about decisions that are personal, and private, others may not know and probably will not understand what we say or appreciate the gravity of our experience. However, when God speaks to us about decisions that will affect others, the biblical record shows he has a pattern of also speaking to those who are to be affected. When God spoke to Abraham about Sara having a baby in her old age, he also spoke to Sara, although she was amused. When he spoke to Mary about the coming Christ child, he also spoke to Joseph. When God spoke to Hagar, who was not a believer in Yahweh, about the future of her unborn child Ishmael, he also spoke to Abraham as well. The pattern is clear. whenever God speaks to a member of your family about a matter that will impact the whole family, he will speak to other family members too, but not necessarily at the same time.

If it's a personal encounter, others may not know, unless we tell them. If God speaks to us about things that will affect others, at some point he will tell them too.

PREACHED WORD: In addition, God speaks through the preached word. Paul, writing to the Romans, emphasized the importance of the preached word of God when he asked, "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" Romans 10:14 He continued in verse 17 "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." God has a message for entire nations, states, cities, communities and even respective races. Many do not hear the message because they neglect regular worship and listening to the preached word of God.

When we hear God speak, we should respond like Samuel, "Speak Lord, thy servant heareth."

WRITTEN WORD: God speaks to us through his written word. To understand God's word requires study. Why? Because there are 783,137 words in the bible broken up into 66 books, 1,189 chapters; and 31,101 verses. You can't simply open the bible and point your finger and say, "Speak to me Lord." Why? Because there are 6,468 commands, 8000 predictions, and 1,260 promises in the bible. Without study, and proper application, simply opening your bible and reading a verse for direction is equal to superstition. What do you do when you want to hear from God about your life's direction? Hopefully, it is not like those who have a superstitious approach to hearing God. Consider the man who bragged about his fool proof method to hear what God wanted. He said he said his method always shows him the right thing to do. One day he woke up feeling he could not get what he wanted in life. He opened his bible to a verse that said "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want." He went out confident that's what God wanted him to do, be satisfied. On another day he was financially in need. He worried about his fate. In distress he opened the bible again and pointed his finger to a verse that said "my God shall supply all your needs." He was reassured. For years he read a bible verse each day and did what it said. One day however his finger fell on Matthew 27:5 “and went and hanged himself.” He was startled by this message so he pointed his finger again and came to John 13:27 that found Jesus talking to Judas saying “That thou doest, do quickly.” Guided by what he thought was the word of God, the man went out and hanged himself.

We can hear God speak to us through the written word if we study the word and apply it correctly. Paul, writing to young Timothy encouraged him to study the written word of God. In 2 Timothy 2:15 he said “Study to show thyself approved, a workman that needeth not be ashamed but rightly dividing the works of truth.” The study of the word of God is essential to Christian life. It is not sufficient to read the word of God, but it must be studied with an able teacher and proper study aids to get the full meaning. Through reading and studying the word of God, God is able to speak to the individual.

The Word of God is a source of great strength and encouragement. David declared “Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path. ..these words have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against God.”

We Must Be In A Position To Hear God

Finally, brothers and sisters, to hear God we must be predisposed to hear him speak.

Samuel was able to hear God’s voice because he was a serious student of the bible, prayed regularly and was obedient.

At first he heard a voice but did not know what he heard. But because he followed his instructions, he not only heard God but understood what he was supposed to do when God spoke.

With so many voices in the world, we are not always sure that what we hear is from the Lord, but when we confirm that what we hear is truly from the Lord, we should be on watch for confirmations.

Consider the man who was drowning in flood waters and he prayed to God saying “Lord, I’m out here on your word, please save me. Let me hear from you.” As the flood waters rose a man in a boat came to help but the drowning man refused saying “I’m waiting to hear from God.” Soon after, another boat came and the man refused again. Later a rescue crew in a helicopter came to save him but the man refused again saying “I’m waiting to hear from God.” As the man began to drown, he saw the glories of heaven open up and an angel appeared. He asked the angel, why is God letting me drown, why didn’t I hear from him?” The angel responded, “He sent you two boats and helicopter, what more do you want? He answered you just didn’t hear!”

We must listen to the different ways God speaks.

That’s why the song writer said, “I hear God in every robin that sings, I hear God in every church bell that rings. Billows may roll, storm clouds assail, my anchor holds, God doesn’t fail. He’s in control the captain of my soul. I hear God.

We must hear God because he is:

—A Light to walk by, without it we’ll stumble in darkness!

—A Sure foundation, without it mankind builds on sandy foundations!

—A Two Edged Sword, without it man fights a losing battle
—A Refreshing Fountain, without man's thirst is unquenchable.
We must hear God because he is
—bread to the Hungry,
—comfort to the lonely,
—assurance to the anxious,
—hope to hopeless
—strength to the weak and peace to the troubled soul,
—rest to the weary!

No wonder the song writer said, "I heard the voice of Jesus said, come unto me and rest. Lie down, lie down, thy weary one, thy head upon my breast!

I hear the word of God declare, "Trust in the Lord!"
Trust the savior who died out on Calvary!
Trust the Lord who was buried in a borrowed tomb!
But early Sunday morning, he arose..
With all power in his hands!

Who is My Mother?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 8, 2005

SCRIPTURE:But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother. Matthew 12:48-50.

Introduction

What do you know about your mother? Do you really know her? There are many who live in the same house with the mother in their families and do not know them. Of course, we know their names and their vital statistics: birthday, maiden name, education and other information available on any resume"; yet with all of that knowledge can we answer the question, "who is my mother?" There are many children who live under the same roof with their mother and do not know her yet? They are familiar with her but we don't really know the woman we call mother.

Mother's day is a celebration of motherhood? It's a day when the entire family celebrates because every member of the family has or has or has the presence of mother or mother figure in their lives. Today's celebration is a celebration of the women in our lives who we have come to know as mother. These are the women of our birth and most importantly the women who have stepped into our lives after birth. Some are mothers by nature; others are mothers by nurture.

But who is the woman we call mother? For some children it is years before they know. Consider the little girl who became separated from her mother in a busy train station. The little girl began to cry and was afraid. A new worker at the information desk found the little girl and tried to console her. She was Polish and not familiar with the way things work in the African-American community. She asked the girl, "What's your mother's name?" The little girl responded, "Muh-dear!" Armed with a name the Polish attendant, announced over the intercom, would the African-American woman who answers to the name "Muh-Dear" please come to the information desk. In a few seconds there were 40 Black women standing in front of the counting saying, "You asked for me? I'm Muh-Dear." As the mother came forth, glad to see her daughter, the attendant looked at all the other women standing at the counter and said, "Do all of you have the same name?" The grateful mother said, "Ma'am, in our neck of the woods, every mother is named "Muh-dear."

While most mothers know every detail about their children, very few children really know their mothers. What they do know is rarely a clear picture but a distortion of reality. As the years pass, many of us get to know our mothers better as we appreciate who they are and what they are to us. Most importantly, the more we know about what a mother is supposed to be, the more we conclude that in many regards we have one biological mother and many mothers who are playing a role in our lives.

Who is your mother? How well do you know her? What is her big dream for her life? What is her greatest fear and frustration? Do you know her successes? What about her failures? Does she feel loved and appreciated? Has she ever cried or been broken? How deep is her love? How wide is her charity? How far will she go for you? Why? Do you know her well enough to do the same for her?

Motherhood is not always a matter of biology but it is a matter of relationships. Those who are fortunate had more than one mother and scores of supportive relationships that make it necessary to thank God for my birth, but also for those who gave me nurture after birth. These women are my mothers.

Hilliary Clinton wrote a book that was based on an African proverb that it "takes an entire village to raise a child." Book. In her book based on that proverb Senator Clinton wrote about motherhood of a single mother and concept of a village of mothers who had one thing in common, they all wanted to see every children protected, nurtured, and encouraged. Her thesis was based on a truth we have experienced in the Black community for decades: A single child can have a single mother, but it takes many mothers to rear a single child.

As Christians, we give God thanks for our mothers. We celebrate who they were, who they are, and they have helped us to be. We thank God for every mother that he has sent and pray he will continue to bless them with health and strength.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he establishes the familial relationship between all saved individuals in the kingdom of God.

This incident is given in three different accounts in Matthew, Mark and Luke. They all report, in varying degrees, Jesus' comments about the relationship of those in the kingdom of God.

Jesus often spoke to large crowds of people who listened intently to his words. Often his words were challenging and difficult for the leaders to accept. Some thought he was a mad man. When his Mother and his brothers heard that he may be drawing undo attention, perhaps their fear for his life compelled them speak with him. When they approached, his response, which at first seems a put down, serves to give us a lesson in relationships in the kingdom of God.

On one occasion, while Jesus was speaking to the crowds, his mother and brothers were standing outside, wanting to speak to him. According to Mark, they were there out of some concern for Jesus. They had heard a rumor that Jesus had gone out of his mind! [Mark 3:21] Matthew does not explain their presence in this way. He simply says that someone gets word to Jesus that his mother and brothers are outside wanting to talk to him. And Jesus simply rejoins with the question that holds our attention this morning: “Who is my mother, and who are my brothers?”

He answered his own question when he said that those who do the will of God are his brothers, sisters, and his mothers.

In the family of God we have many brothers. It is reason that we address each other as brother and sister. But we also have many fathers and mothers. We have many mentors, teachers and spiritual givers in the faith. These make up the community of believers.

By his words, Christ established our relationship to each. Each believer is the mother to every other believer’s son or daughter. Each believer is the brother or sister of other believers. And we are interdependent upon each other.

Jesus’ answer was clear; his brother, sister or mother in kingdom of God would be those who share in the pursuit of God’s will.

Who Is My Mother?

Jesus’ response to those who questioned him about his mother broadened the definition of mother from that which is biological to that which is based on sharing a mothering relationship. In that context, there are many in the African-American community especially who have had a mothering relationship; most often it was our biological mother, but often it was someone else. For some the answer to the question, “Who is my mother? is “Auntee.” For others its “Grandma.” For still others it is the lady across the street. For still others, mother is a counselor, youth leader or mentor, with which a bonding relationship has developed.

Who is my mother?

SHE IS MY CHAMPION. Youth study the lives of successful people every day but many have found no greater champion than the mother in their lives. They studied her story. They have heard the family accounts of her struggle to stand on her own two feet. They have seen her sacrifice, scrape and “make-do” to provide for her family; rising after being knocked down; recovering from wounded spirits, while stubbornly announcing, “I’m still here!” Mother is a champion in the eyes of her children. They have seen her wounded. Sometimes they have seen her cry. They know she is often hurt, disappointed and frustrated, but still she rises each day to love them and provide for them, often at her own risk. Those are the marks of a champion. Like Esther in the bible, many mothers have risen through difficult times “for such a time as this.” Who is my mother? She is my champion.

SHE IS A FENCE BUILDER: Mothers are fence builders. They build fences in the house and outside of the house to keep us within our boundaries. Good mothers define the perimeters for the children; they don’t allow them to run freely. Those fences that mother erected were designed to keep us from wandering into danger. At first they were little barricades in a room. Then they became rules that define when we could come and when we could go. They even defined what time we had to be home from the game, which movies we could see and what kind of music as acceptable. We hated those fences. We dreamed of the day they would disappear. All we could see was that the fence kept us in, but we failed to see what the fences kept out. They protected us from predators, child molesters and unforeseen danger. We hated the fences, the rules we thought were harsh and unfair, but they kept us alive in an increasingly violent world. On those times when we jumped the fence we found out quickly how it protected us all along. Samson's mother constantly warned him about strange women. She tried to protect him from them but Samson jumped the fence and lost his hair and strength in the lap of a strange woman. Who is my mother? She is the woman who tries to shield me and protect me from myself, with an invisible fence that keeps danger at a distance.

SHE CREATES SIGNIFICANT MOMENTS: Mothers help create and share significant moments. Sometimes these moments are for celebration and at other times they help create opportunities. Naomi was not Ruth's biological mother, but she helped Ruth enjoy a significant moment when she married Boaz. Solomon's mother shared his crowning as king after using her influence to insure that David had appointed him his successor. Our important moments are not as major as becoming a king or marrying into wealth. They begin with little things; yet our mothers help create them. When we think of the important moments in our lives, they were often moments that were created by our mothers. Birthday parties don't just happen, often that significant moment is created by the efforts of our mothers. We see the balloons, cake, gifts and the smiling faces, all of that was arranged so that she could share a significant moment with us. It's important that every child has a chance to share a significant moment. When we formed our first letter with feeble shaky hands, mother shared that significant mother. She probably took a picture or two. When we played our first Pee-Wee League football game, she sat in the stands waving, watching and supporting. When we were inducted into honor societies, mother smiled and joined the applause; afterwards there was a treat or celebration. Mothers rarely miss an opportunity to create or share a significant moment with their children. They don't see it as work or a waste of energy and resources; they see it as love in action. Who is my mother? She helps create and shares my significant moments.

SHE INSPIRES CONFIDENCE: Mothers inspire confidence in their children; they give them a sense of security.There are schools of thought that suggest that it is good for a mother to cuddle her new born as much as possible because it develops a sense of attachment and security in the newborn. Good mothers instill this sense of security and attachment far beyond the cradle. Mothers inspire confidence in their children. They push, encourage, promote and coach them in a variety of areas. Each child who has a good mother backing them leaves home believing that there is at least one person in the world who really believes in me, my mother. Jacob didn't' think much of his abilities, but his mother did. In fact, she supported him so much she went overboard trying to create opportunities for him. Elizabeth kept telling John The Baptist that he was destined to do a great work for the Lord. Those words from mothers lips ring in millions of ears today, "You can make it! You can be somebody!" inspire confidence. They push children to achieve, excel and succeed. Everyone needs someone who believes in them; for many that someone has been their mother. Who is my mother? She is the woman who inspires confidence in me, even when I don't believe in myself.

She places me in God's hands

Finally, brothers and sisters, our mother makes sure that we are securely placed in the hands of God.

Mother does more than just put food on the table, dress her children, check the grooming and monitor the school performance. She does more than promote their academic growth, insure their financial security and promote stability; she also insures that they know the Lord.

Hannah told the Lord that she would put her child in God's hands if she were blessed to give birth. No sooner than the boy Samuel was old enough, he mother brought him to the place of worship and put him in God's hands.

In God's hands, Samuel became a great scholar!

In God's hands, her son became a great prophet!

In God's hands, her son became spiritual leader of the nation!

Jesus said made it clear that in the Kingdom of Heaven believers may have many mothers, those who are doing the will of God.

There are many here today who have also had many mothers. These were the women who saw to it that you came to church; and others who saw to it that you acted correctly once you got there!

These were the women who taught you to say your prayers and to sing "Yes, Jesus Love me."

Who is my mother? She is the one who is concerned who am I am in the world and who I am before God.

Who is my mother? She is the one who insures that her child has:

—Food to eat here, but she is also concerned that her child be fed the Word of God, for she has heard the scripture say "Man shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

—Clothes on his back, but she is also concerned that he wears the breastplate of righteousness and that his feet are shod with the Gospel of the preparation of peace, that he wears the helmet of Salvation and carries the shield of faith.

—Has a place to call home, but she also worries about whether he'll have a home in the kingdom of heaven.

—Birth and delivery in this world, but she also is concerned that he is born again into the kingdom of God.

Who is my mother. She is the one that will teach her children to trust in the Lord.

Somebody here can remember a time when the family was in a tough spot and mother mumbled, "We'll just have to put our trust in the Lord."

Every Christian mother knows there is wisdom in trusting the Lord.

If I trust in the Lord I will:

—Overcome strong temptations

—bear heavy burdens

—withstand mighty persecutions

—cross the loneliest of valleys
—endure the saddest of sorrows
—live through darkest of nights
—sail through the roughest storms
—climb the tallest of mountains
Who is my mother? She's the one who knows how to call on the name of Jesus!
Jesus, Who died out on Calvary!
Jesus, Who arose after three days and nights!
Who is my mother?
She's a woman who knows how to call his name!
Jesus!
Jesus!
Jesus!

What's In the Bread?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 15, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." John 6:35

Introduction

What's your favorite bread? Have you ever wondered what's in it? Today many people are concerned about the ingredients of their foodstuffs. There are labels on packages that describe the nutrients, fat, water and additives in almost everything we consume. Today people want to know what's in it? What is it made of? That curiosity also includes our bread.

People around the world eat bread. Breads are usually made from the grains available in the area where a person lives. The main grain in America is wheat; that's where most of our bread comes from, crushed ground wheat made into flour. Each country has bread that is unique to its culture:

WONTON-The Won Ton is bread made from noodle dough dumplings that are generally filled with meat. They are usually boiled in soup but they are often fried or eaten as a side dish. It is associated with Asian foods.

TORTILLA: The tortilla is corn dough patted into thin flat rounds and fried on a hot griddle. They are also made of flour. It associated with Hispanic and Mexican diets.

CHAPATI: Flat chewy rounds of bread, served with rounds of curries, peanut butter or honey. It is associated with the people of India.

PITA: Is a pocket bread from the Middle East that is flat and hollow inside.

CROISSANT: A flaky, crescent shaped roll associated with the people of France.

LEFSE: Flat bread made from mashed potatoes, flour and liquid fried on a griddle. It is Scandinavian bread.

PIZZA: Is a popular bread pie that was first made as a way of using left over dough. It is associated with the people of Italy.

BAGEL: Is a chewy baked roll with a hole in it; eaten with cream and cheese. It is associated with Poland.

Not only are there breads around the world, African-Americans have our own breads that are unique to our culture.

We know about corn bread, and biscuits.

We know about hoe cakes, and Cush!

We know about hot water corn bread, shortening bread and even crackling bread..

We are familiar with our kind of bread and we know how it is made.

However, what about the bread of life? What's in it? How do we get it? What do we do with it? What does it do for us?

When Israel wandered in the wilderness God provided them with bread that seemed to come from heaven. They called it "Manna" which means, "What is it? It represented God's blessing, mercy and providence. Every day God took care of them. That was bread in the wilderness; but it only met an immediate need. It was not eternal.

As Christians we are encouraged to know that there is another bread that is eternal. Though it may come in the wilderness of our lives, it is nevertheless, bread from heaven.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus and he tells believers how he is the spiritual nourishment they need in the wilderness of life.

Crowds followed him wherever he went in hopes of catching a glimpse of one of his famous miracles, or better still to be a participant in a miraculous event..

The people were so excited about what they saw that they immediately wanted to make Jesus their king because they envisioned feasts for everyone under his administration. They wanted more fish and more bread. Jesus rebuked the crowd for following their growling bellies, seeking food. He offered them food, but it was not of mere fish and bread. He told them that just as Moses gave them manna or the "bread from heaven" in the wilderness so had the father made it possible for them to have a greater bread. He summed up this truth by telling them "I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." What Christ told the crowds was simple, "If its fish and bread you seek, keep looking; but if its food for your soul that you want, I can satisfy your needs."

What's In the Bread?

Whether bread is nourishing or not depends upon its ingredients. It's the combination of the ingredients that provides what we need for life, health, nourishment, abundant living.

Homemade bread contains several ingredients that might be symbolic of what we need from the bread of life.

FLOUR: Flour is associated with our spiritual life. Flour is the product of all of God's creation: the sun, wind, earth, and rain. From the depths of the earth God gives the life sustaining presence of wheat for bread and corn for meal. In a similar sense God's graces work together to provide the essentials of life for every believer. Without the flour there is no bread; it is the essential element. For the believer, Christ is the essential ingredient for a spirit filled life. He is what makes life meaningful, joyful and fruitful. Without Christ there is no Christian marriage. There may be a house, but there is no home. There may be a few things, but unless Christ is the main thing, all of the thing will have little importance to us. Faith in Christ, is finely ground in the crucible of life's experience and the essential all of the breads that we know.

WATER: Water is associated with spiritual health. Water is used in the baking of bread. Jesus met the woman at the well and offered her living water. In essence, his spirit would be the essence of real living. There are many today whose hearts are beating but they are not living. They move around each day but they are not living. They have a few things but they may as well have nothing because they are not really living. To really live we need the constant stream of spiritual support that only comes from God. Jesus is the living water that constantly flows. Anything that tries to live dies soon, without water. Marriages, careers, even relationships. Nothing else will substitute; it must be water. There are many today who are spiritually dehydrated. They are trying to live without drinking spiritual water. Professionals report that we need eight glasses of water a day to keep our systems functioning. Often we substitute coffee, cold drinks, alcohol and other wet substances for water and get by; but soon we learn that nothing takes the place of water. Likewise, many are substituting many things for Christ. They all serve their purpose but can't take the place of water. To have a healthy spiritual life we need worship, bible study, prayer and the presence of the Holy Spirit in our lives. He brings the living water.

SALT: Is associated with nourishment. Jesus told believers "Ye are the salt of the earth." Bread is made with a small amount of salt. Salt preserves, freshens and flavors. Before there were refrigerators, salt was used to preserve meat and other foods. In rural areas salt was even used to brush teeth and combined with soda, was used as a deodorant. Salt also flavors. When Jesus said that believers are the salt of the earth he meant we should be all three: a source of preservation, sanitation and inspiration. Jesus said he was the bread of life and that he was the living water. However, he charged believers to be the "salt" of the earth. He said "Ye are" the salt of the earth. We have the responsibility of bringing the bread of life to a starving malnourished land. We must be the ones to inspire the world to bring the love of Christ to every challenging situation. We must help the poor and needy. We must champion the cause of the downtrodden. We must stand up for justice. At the same time, we must bring new hope and inspiration to a world that has lost hope. We cannot afford to lose our savor and become stuck in the shaker because it's damp in the world. Without the salt, the people of God, the world lacks what it needs to sustain itself.

YEAST: Yeast is associated with abundant living. In bread, yeast works like magic. The yeast causes the bread to rise. Without yeast, it stays flat. Yeast is composed of living elements that grow quickly, producing a pan of bread much larger than was first made. Jesus said, "I have come that ye may have life and have it more abundantly." What is abundant living? Is it the accumulation of possessions, money and power? Persons who seek Christ for that purpose usually interpret his words for that end. But does the Christ who urges us to live humbly, despise showy displays, and rid ourselves of as many possessions as possible, really mean by abundant living, that we should seek "living large" as a lifestyle. The abundance that he speaks about involves those variables associated with the kingdom of God. These are an abundance of love, peace, joy and overall happiness and contentment. The abundant life is not measured by how much we have, but how we are able to enjoy what we have. If we have boats but never enjoy them, what good are they? If we have families but never experience the love of family members, what good is the home? If we have money constantly accumulating but we have no peace because of it, are we really living? The abundant life is a Christ centered life that gets great joy out of every blessing it receives no matter how great or small. The abundant life that Christ speaks about has nothing to do with cars and houses; stocks bonds and investments. The abundant life is the life that is filled with as much gratitude for a pork chop as it is for an 18 ounce steak. We know we have it when we are able to "count it all joy."

Knead the dough

Finally, brothers and sisters, we don't get bread until we knead the dough.

When the yeast, water, salt, flour and other ingredients are mixed together they are usually twisted, mashed, and turned in a process called kneading.

We may have all of the elements but they have to be kneaded before they can become bread.

The Christian life is similar. Before we can really testify about the goodness of God we have to go through something first.

There is no testimony unless there is first a test.

Today, we present to you the bread of life containing the essentials to sustain and motivate us to live abundantly, justly and courageously.

It is bread, but it's not just any bread. It's bread from heaven.

It is bread, but it's not just any bread. This bread satisfies. Matthew 5:6 says, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."

It is bread, but it's not just any bread. This bread gives eternal life. In John 6:47-48 Jesus says, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life. I am that bread of life."

It is bread, but it's not just any bread. It is given for the salvation of the world. In John 6:51, Jesus says, "I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world."

It is bread that has been kneaded in the crucible of the fickle attitudes of mankind.

It is a bread that has been prepared through 33 years of life in a sinful world!

It is bread that has been prepared, kneaded and broken for us.

It is bread that was humiliated for our wickedness; and chastised for our impurities.

It is bread that was judged for our crimes and condemned for our rebellion.

It is bread that was despised for our corruption and cursed for our perversion.

It is bread that was:

—wounded for our transgressions; brusied for our iniquities.

—pierce for our guilt.

—tortued for our shortcomings.

—beaten for our wrongs.

He was born in the Bethlehem which means the house of Bread!

He fed 5,000 people bread, from two fishes and five loaves of bread!

He offered the lost the bread of life!

And out on Calvary they hung him up high!

But when they buried him in that borrowed tomb they forgot something about heavenly bread. It is made with heavenly yeast!

Go ahead! Drive nails in his hands!

But Early Sunday morning, "I'll rise again!"

Graduating to Another Level

Scripture: "But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster" Galatians 3:25

Introduction

When you graduated from high school, were you quite sure what to do next? While graduation from high school is an important event in the life of a graduate there are many who approach graduation with a spirit of anxiety. There is anxiety because graduation brings with it so many unknowns about the immediate and distant future. If it means anything, graduation means that the graduate is moving from one level to another in the educational process; perhaps even one level of personal development to another.

According to the United States Census Bureau, the number of people who are graduating from high school in America is increasing. For the first time the Census Bureau is reporting that 85 percent of all Americans over the age of 25 have completed at least a high school education. An amazing 27 percent of adults over 25 years old had a college degree. The numbers tell another story as well; even African-American students, who have been stereotyped as under achievers, have reached an all time high as it relates to high school achievement. In its report entitled, "Education Attainment in the United States, 2003" the Census Bureau reported that 80 percent of all Blacks above 25 years of age had a high school diploma, which is an all time high for our people.

Obviously, graduating from high school is important. It marks our transition to another level in life.

In our graduation we move from our childhood to our young adult years.

Our graduation is a mark of our maturity and ability to handle life on a different level. That was the feeling of the parents who were excited about their son's graduation. They wanted to savor the moment so, after the graduation the family pulled out the Kodak to take a family picture. However, the photo they took looked very formal. "Let's try to make this look more natural" said the mother. "Son, put your hand around your dad's shoulder." She said. Before his son could move the father said, "If you want it to be more natural, why not have him put his hand in my pocket, that's where it's been all his life. I'll know he's graduated when his hand comes out of my pocket and stays in his own."

Some who graduate get a diploma but don't move to another level. They just have a diploma. That's what some folks learned when they saw Eddie Joe's graduation. Eddie Joe had a hard time making it through high school. When the role was called Eddie Joe found out that he did not make the cut. He would not graduate. At the graduation ceremony, he watched as members of his class received their diplomas. When the last class member marched across the stage the class all stood and chanted "Give Eddie Joe a chance!" The chant became louder and louder. Eddie Joe was called to the stage and given a one question test in front of the whole community, as his class mates chanted "Give Eddie Joe a Chance." If he answered the question correctly he would graduate. They asked Eddie Joe the following question, "If you have five apples in one hand and five apples in the other hand, how many do you have?" Eddie Joe struggled for a moment then answered, "Ten." Instantly, the entire senior class shouted, "Give Eddie Joe another chance!" -Obviously graduation doesn't mean that everyone has moved up.

We should graduate from one level to another spiritually as well. God expects us to come closer to Him and mature in our thinking and understanding. Paul made that clear when he saidwhen he was a child he thought like a child but when he became a man he put away childish things.

As Christians, we know the importance of any graduation. However, we also know that it is our maturity in Christ that will determine the quality of our Christian life. In that respect, we want to move from dependence on the world to a walk of faith that is guided by the power of God.

Exposition

This text considers Paul addressing the church at Galatia concerning the relationship between the law and the life of faith.

Many new believers were confused about the nature of the Christian life. They understood the Mosaic Law and its requirements for strict adherence to the Ten Commandments and over 600 additional rules given by Moses. Obedience to the law earned the right to claim righteousness.

Paul explained that the law was a tool to use to show man how to be righteous before God. Obeying the law became a way to reconcile themselves to God. It was a mediator of sorts.

Before Christ came asking that believers walk by faith, each was guided by the law.

In a sense, Paul said, the law was like a school master, constantly instructing us rigidly.

The word used for schoolmaster in Greek is the same word used for Tutor. In the Greek world in which they lived the wealthy hired tutors to mentor and teach their sons. The tutors were strict. They watched their students and monitored their movements. The tutors kept them in line even if they wanted to get out of line.

Paul said the law worked that way with the Children of Israel. Even if they wanted to get out of line, the law kept them in place. It was a schoolmaster to them.

However Paul notes that "after that, faith comes." Otherwise, when we walk by faith there is no need for the law any longer because it is inscribed in our hearts.

Paul encouraged the Galatians to move to another level of spirituality; one not governed by rigid rules, but one governed by a desire to do the will of God.

The first level

Today, graduates are similar to the Galatians who had been governed by a strict set of rules that attempted to dictate, control and direct their every action. For the most part today's graduates have spent 18 years following the "law." The law for young believers has been the rules set down for them by their parents, school, church and other agencies of influence.

WE WERE TAUGHT THE RULES: The rules were very strict. They involved truthfulness, cleanliness, grooming, hygiene, social skills, religion, education and even what was watched on television or read in magazines. At times the rules seemed endless, constricting and demanding. What graduate cannot remember the household rules about telling the truth, not stealing, and returning home at the appropriate time. Others recall the rules about cleaning up, performing chores and completing home assignments and other school work.

WE WERE PUNISHED FOR BREAKING THE RULES: Graduates can also remember times when they were punished for not following the rules. Sometimes privileges were taken. Sometimes there was corporal punishment. We learned very quickly that if we violated the rules there would be repercussions. As a result, we generally followed the rules, except for those few times we decided to be mischievous.

OUR PARENTS HELD OUR HAND: During our elementary and high school years, our parents held our hand and assisted us in many areas of our development. Conscientious parents pushed us to complete our assignments on time and to achieve excellence. When some of these graduates would have accepted low scores and grades barely high enough to pass, some parents insisted on more. When there were goals to be met parents were there too. Whenever the pace slowed, parents were always close by to insist that we get back in the race. It was comfortable knowing that a parent was standing there all of the time. One of the advantages of the first level is that there is usually someone around to hold your hand and walk you through the process.

These criterions are what Paul described to Galatians as being on a level of strict adherence to the Mosaic Law. The law accomplished the purpose of laying out the rules, setting the boundaries and holding the hand of believers as they walked through life. Before Christ, the law was permanent. With Christ, the law is just the first level.

And After That, Faith

Finally, it is important for us to see Paul's words in verse 25, "After that, faith."

Here he points believers to another level "After that." He indicates that a time has come when the hand holding ends; the rules though inscribed in our hearts are now understood in the greater sense rather than the specific.

While the rule at home may have been to call if you will be late coming home from school, the greater sense of the rule is to make sure your loved ones know your whereabouts.

While the rule may have been to turn your homework in on time, the greater life rule is to complete objectives, targets and goals on time.

While the rule may have been not to talk back to your parents, the greater life rule is not to be insubordinate to your superiors.

After that, said Paul, we are governed by a higher rule that is not written on paper but in our hearts.

After that, points to another level.

After that, points to a time beyond the past.

After being monitored day and night by the watchful eye of our parents, after that "Faith."

After being chastised and criticized for our failures and shortcomings, after that, "Faith."

What is faith?

Hebrews 11:1 says, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen."

Paul said, "After that, Faith"

After Graduation, it is time to walk by faith.

When we walk by faith we hear the voice of God!

When we walk by faith we stand on the promises of God!

When we walk by faith we move from high school to the Gospel College!

In the Gospel College

—My Principal is God the father.

—My tutor is the Holy Spirit.

—My counselor is Jesus.

In the Gospel College.

—Our textbook is the bible, for the word says, "These words shall I hide in my heart that I might not sin against God."

—Our field of study is the world, for Jesus said, "Go ye therefore…"

—Our College is not Grambling or Southern, Harvard, or Yale but our college is the Rock of Ages.

This rock is Jesus, Yes He is the one!

This rock is Jesus, the only one.

The song writer said, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand."

If you want to graduate to another level, you must know Jesus!

If you want to graduate to another Level...

You must graduate from simply being born to being born again!

If you want to graduate to another level… Your high school diploma won't be sufficient; you must keep climbing to the next level because you must have a spiritual BA degree.

The song writer said, "You must be..

You gotta be…

Can't you see; you got to be born again.

Moving from one level to the next is easy when you know the man in charge.

At your university he or she is Doctor Somebody or another. But we know the man in charge as Dr. Jesus.

He transferred to this earth by coming down through 42 generations.

He was born in Bethlehem that was His first level.

One day in Jerusalem he told the teachers, "It's time for me to be about my Father's business"

That was His next level.

He preached for three years and picked disciples, that was His next level.

One evening he picked up an old rugged cross and decided to carry it to another level.

He had no cap and gown! Instead of a cap He had a crown of thorns.

Instead of a gown He had a purple robe on His shoulders!

But He marched across the stage of Calvary!

Instead of a diploma, all He had in His hands were nails and scars.

It was a long graduation. It lasted three days and three nights.

But early Sunday morning, the heavens recognized Him!

The earth shook!

The thunder rolled!

When they came looking for Him, an angel announced.."He's not here!"

He's gone to…

Another level!

A Mother's Mite

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "And he saw also a certain poor widow casting in thither two mites. And he said, Of a truth I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all: For all these have of their abundance cast in unto the offerings of God: but she of her penury hath cast in all the living that she had." Luke 21:2-4

Introduction

Have you ever noticed how mothers pay close attention to the "little things" in our lives? Somehow they never seem to miss a single detail about their children; they know their rhythm, cadence and moods. Mothers pay close attention to us; and they tend to share our lives closer than others. They understand our frustrations, feel our pain, share our joy and become one with us. Age doesn't diminish this quality; it seems to grow with time. They are still concerned about the little things despite the passage of time.

The Latin word "Minutum" means the very smallest part. It is the word upon which "minute," a very small part; or "minute" a small part of an hour or "mite" meaning a very small thing, is based.

In a way, mothers symbolize the way God pays attention to every believer. He watches, observes and appreciates the countless "small things" as he assesses our lives.

As Christians, we are glad to know that God knows all about us. He knows when we have lived life well and how we enjoyed every day. When we have cast in our last mites in life; he also knows when we have given life all that we had.

Exposition

This text shows how Jesus noticed the actions of a poor widow who gave "all the living she had."

The account of this widow is told both in the Book of Mark and Luke. Its brief account shows Christ halting from his business to admire and praise a widow who gave two "mites" in the offering. Combined both of her mites were only valued at a half penny. Her offering indicated that she was a woman whose life was familiar with the "little things" but despite her poverty, called penury, found a way to share what little she had.

The fact that Christ sorted through the crowd and focused on the woman with two mites, showed us how he pays attention to those that the world thinks are insignificant; and pays attention to their action.

Sensing her sincerity and devotion Christ summarized this woman's life. He knew that the two mites she gave represented the best that her life could give. When she walked boldly before God she knew she was giving her best. So did Jesus. He said, "She hath cast in all the living that she had."

The Widow's Mites

Look closely at the widow in this text. She gave two mites. Each mite tells a story about the widow's life.

Our mites are the "little things" in our lives. They are the countless acts of kindness, love and charity that seem small at a glance but reflect themselves in children and grandchildren who are stronger, bolder and positioned to make great accomplishments.

What are the little "mites" of a mother's experience? It's the diligent mother who pays attention to the little things that others don't notice: whether a daughter's hair is comb, her dress is neatly laundered or the ribbons in her hair are adjusted properly. She glories in seemingly insignificant accomplishments, revels over baby pictures, cheers over school achievements or proudly glows while staring at a pair of majorette boots, a grandson, and wedding photographs.

Mothers are important because, unlike fathers who often see the big picture or no picture at all, mothers are intricately involved in the details of the lives of their children. They are concerned about little things. They worry over small problems, tackle the smallest of chores, and seem to make major issues about small things like cleaning up a room, sweeping floors or washing behind the ears.

Even after their children are grown with children of their own mothers continue to focus on the small things. They remember birthdays, and graduations, anniversaries, and retirements and revel in the accomplishments of each daughter or grandchild. They keep the little cards, and reverently tuck each new photograph in albums that grow daily with hundreds of pictures and memories of the "little things."

When we think about it, what we miss most about loved ones when they are not with us is the attention given to the "little things." We remember the approving smile, the regular phone call, the repetitious questions about our welfare and the constant mothering we receive even from a distance. While we worry about major career choices, income and job security, they seem to focus on the small things that once mattered to us but never stopped being important to them. These are the "mites" of family life.

It's the little things that build strong families. It's laughter and good times. It's jokes and goofy things. It's shopping and sharing, supporting and hugging. The little things are important but never important enough to lose our sense of family and belonging and loving. It's easy for the little things to divide families, too. Little jealousies, little doubts, insecurities, anxieties and differences can tear families apart.

Strong mothers spend considerable time focusing on the little things that divide families and they become the unifying force that keeps siblings enjoying and loving each other, supporting and caring for each other as they revel in the beauty of life's precious little moments, shared with family and friends.

Many mothers in the African-American community are familiar with "mites." They know how to grow strong families with nothing to work with but "little things." They knew best how to feed a family a little cornbread, a little rice, a few beans and every little part of a hog they could find. They knew how to wash clothes in a tub, save the grease from frying chicken in a can for the next time; as well as how to clean fish, pick greens, shell peas and make biscuits from something called "scratch." Mothers knew the art of stretching a dollar, clipping coupons, saving S and H and Gold Bond Stamps, while saving a penny or two for something called a "rainy day."

The little things, the mites, never seemed to bother Christian mothers. Even though they only had a little more than a pocket full of mites, we remember our mothers giving to help others, sharing our family's two mites with other families who had only one mite or no mites at all. Mothers who have lived in alleys themselves know what it's like to live in the backstreets of life. They have been through the valley of despair; they know what it means to have even one mite and willingly share what little they have with others.

This is the legacy that great mothers leave their children: rejoice in the little things. Enjoy each other's little moments. Make do with whatever little things life has given you; turn every situation into an opportunity; and rejoice constantly in every little thing; for each is a blessing from God.

Jesus said of a widow such as this one, "she gave all the living that she had."

Might as in a possibility

While the first "Mite" refers to little things, the widow in the text also gave a second mite; but this mite is a homonym. It sounds like "mite" but it's spelled "might."

Might in this context could mean a variety of different things, each represents what mothers such as the one in the text give their children.

MIGHT AS A POSSIBILITY: One "might" is used to indicate possibility or probability. Good mothers see the possibility in their children. They look at them when they are young and they see lawyers, teachers, professionals, wives, and even mothers. They see them owning their own homes, living independent lives, rearing their children and living out their dreams. Mothers see all that as they comb hair, give good night kisses and night time hugs. More than any others, Mothers see what their children "might" be in life. Many begin work when their children are young to make "possibility" become a "probability" and then a "reality." That's why they work so hard to give them experiences that surpass their own. They push them to achieve in school and extracurricular activities. They put them in the hands of organizations and groups that teach them the finer aspects of life, complete with social graces, charm and etiquette. They often deprive themselves of many of life's comforts to help the "possibilities" of their children to become "realities." That's what Hannah did for her son Samuel. She put him in the hands of those who could help him to achieve his potential. She saw the possibility and helped young Samuel achieve the reality. She saw what he might be. Naomi saw young Ruth and realized what she "might" be if the opportunity ever occurred. Naomi guided Ruth in a way that increased the "probability" of her possibility becoming a reality.

Mothers are filled with hopes and dreams for their children. They know they won't be with them always but they never stop dreaming or hoping for their children. In their senior years, great mothers see the "might be" in their grandchildren too. They never doubt that God can help them achieve possibilities, so they continue to see the "might be" in every one.

The mother who exhausts herself to help her children realize their own potential earns the designation Jesus gave all such widows, "She gave all the living that she had."

MIGHT AS AN EXPRESSION OF MOOD: Another "might" is familiar to mothers, it is not possibility but the "might" that indicates our mood. This is the might that answers, "I might or I might not. It depends on how I feel."

Mothers don't always feel happy about every situation. They are not happy if the family is not happy. They are not happy if the relationship of a child is threatened. They are not happy if there is a loss of property, health, freedom or safety of anyone in the family.

Sometimes the burden of being widows affects their moods. They seem to be happy one day and sad the next. One day they are laughing and joking and the next day they are deathly ill. One day they are on a plane flying from one part of the country to another and the next day they are in a hospital bed. Like the mighty swing of the Pendulum, they go back and forth between good days and bad days. What they do in life, in these cases, depends much on their mood.

As the years pass however, it becomes increasingly clear that while the pendulum swings regularly between ups and downs; the spiritual mood of Christian mothers is always that of joy. Perhaps that's what James had in mind when he said in James 1:2 that we should "count it all joy." The believer's joy is indefatigable; it never tires or diminishes. If you ask whether they will go shopping, you may get an "I might" answer, but if ask whether they still love the Lord despite their ups and downs, the answer is always, "God is good, all the time." Unlike happiness, joy is not circumstance driven. We are only in a happy mood if things are going well, but the joyful mother learns to say like Paul, "I have learned to be content. I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need. I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

When Jesus sees any mother, swinging on the pendulum of life moving from sickness to health and back again, but constantly fighting on with an indomitable spirit; he sees her like the widow at the box and says, "She gave all the living that she had."

God took her mite and turn it into might!

Finally, brothers and sisters, there is one other homonym for "mite." It's the one that reminds us that God can take our "Mite" and turn it into "Might." He can take our little things and turn them in to big things.

That's the lesson good mothers teach their children when they are young; that with God all things are possible. That's why they load their children into cars and carry them to Sunday school and Bible School. That's why they taught them to say their prayers at night and give God thanks everyday, because God can take their "Mite" and turn it into might!

The bible is filled with countless examples of widows who had little but accomplished great things, mostly through the lives of their children. We often see these widows foraging through life, making do with a single "mite" that God magnifies with his might.

The good mother tells her children, "You may live on a back street, surrounded by lumber mills and dusty roads, existing on a mite or two, but we serve a God who also has might, but his might is not like our mite.

The good mother reminds her children to pray but, we can only do little things with our mite, but God's might is not like our mite, he can do anything!

God's might is not like our mite, because we may:

—Grow WEAK but God is always strong!

—STUMBLE but God is always able to pick us up again!

—FAIL but can God do anything but fail!

Good mothers tell their children, to remember the words of Zechariah 4:6, "Not by might, nor by power, but my spirit said the Lord of hosts!"

Good mothers show their children how to live, by the way she lives!

Good mothers show their children how to walk by faith, by walking with God themselves!

Good mothers show their children how to deal with frustrations, by throwing all of her trust on the Lord.

Good mothers show their children how to wrestle with sickness and refuse to give up until the last breath is drawn!

Good mothers show by their own example what David meant when he said, "Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil for thou art with me!"

It was God's might that protected her!

It was God's might that provided for her!

It was God's might that opened doors she could not see!

A few days ago, God looked down and saw this mother, wrestling with all her mite.

Her pulse rate had slowed but she was hanging on with her little mite!

Her breathing had become almost impossible; but she held on with her little mite!

Her heart could hardly keep a rhythm but she held on with her little mite.

When she had given all she had,

Jesus, The Lord strong and mighty!

When all her mite had slipped away!
Jesus, The Lord mighty in battle!
Who died out on Calvary, an arose Early Sunday morning
Jesus heard her soul cry out:
"I am weak but thou art mighty, hold me with thou powerful hands!"
With one sweep of his powerful hand…
This mother who only had a little mite..
Was safe in the arms of the Lord!

Beautiful But Flawed

SCRIPTURE: "For the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart. 1 Samuel 16:7b; "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. Introduction

Have you ever met a person who had no flaws? We encounter many different kinds of people including family, friends and associates on a regular basis. In all of our encounters, however, we have not stumbled upon the perfect person. At best, we find good people. Sometimes we even find great people. Regardless to their greatness, however, we soon discover that they too have flaws.

Many people are frustrated in their search for the perfect person. They meet a friend, and in the initial meeting the person appears to have all of the finest qualities. However, soon after we find that although he or she has many fine qualities, our perfect person has a few flaws. Our flaws vary; they differ from person to person.

The list of flaws can be endless. Our findings are similar to these: He's a strong man, but he drinks. She's a good wife, but she's a spendthrift. I like him but he talks too much. I like her, but she doesn't talk enough. He is a great worker, but he never comes to work on time. He could really go places in life, if he didn't have that gambling habit. She's really ambitious, but she is so conceited. He is a great football player, but he doesn't have enough sense to put in a spoon. He really treats me nice, but is just so ugly. She is really a good girl, but her attitude is terrible. He has all the qualities of a good manager but he can't seem to manage his personal life.

Even in the church world flaws are evident. Our flaws are generally indicated by the words that follow the "but" in any description that is given about us. He is a great pastor, but. She's a great church member, but. He is a wonderful deacon, but. She's a great Superintendent, but. Our youth are outstanding, but. The presence of a "but" indicates that there is a flaw somewhere.

Obviously, even the best of us have flaws. That's also the reason that God's grace is so important to each one of us. The grace of God recognizes our flaws, but still gives us the opportunity for salvation despite our wretched nature. One songwriter said, "He looked beyond my faults and saw my needs."

Many people are humbled by their flaws. In fact they are so humbled them begin to see themselves as unworthy to serve. They compare themselves in the mirror of God's word and see so many shortcomings, errors, and mistakes that they feel they cannot ever measure up to what God wants us to be because they have so many flaws.

What we learn as we grow in the faith is that God loves us, flaws and all. We also learn that God sees us differently than we see ourselves. We see unworthiness, he sees potential. We see failure, he sees a comeback. We see inadequacy, he sees, opportunity. We see defeat, he sees a chance for victory.

As Christians, we give thanks to God that he loves us despite our faults and shortcomings. If he required perfection we would all fall short. We rejoice, because our Lord is both able and willing to present us before God, despite our faults and flaws having made us perfect through the blood of Jesus Christ.

Exposition

This text focuses on God's selection of David to serve as the second king of Israel, despite his flaws.

Israel had a failed experience with King Saul, its first king. According to 1 Samuel 9:2, Saul was a good looking man on the outside. In terms of physical appearance, he was head and shoulders above the rest. He had all the of outward appearances of attractiveness and charisma that pleased the crowds. The people were happy. Soon however, they discovered that what Saul had on the outside did not match what he had on the inside. First, they found that despite his manly physique, that he was a coward before the dreaded Goliath. Later, they found that he possessed a jealous spirit, a vengeful and violent personality and an uncontrollable anger. The flaw that seems to stand out most was his lack of humility before God and unwillingness to repent. This made him undesirable before God.

This text introduces the next king, David who was selected, not because of the strength of his physical appearance but because of his strength of Character. Samuel went to the home of Jesse and without announcing his purpose reviewed all of his sons. First to come before him was Eliab who appealed to Samuel because of his stunning physical presence (1 Samuel 16:7). God warned Samuel not to concern himself with the outer looks, but to be guided by the character. Other sons came: Abinadab, Shammah and four others. One son did not come, because he did not have the look of a king. He was a shepherd boy who loved to play the harp, write psalms and sing. When Samuel saw him, bright eyed, with sun tanned rough skin (v12) the Lord said, "Arise, anoint him, for this is the one." David was selected to serve as king of Israel because of his character rather than his outward appearance.

In a way, David was similar to Saul. He was a flawed man. He sinned greatly. He even had a soldier killed and took his wife. The difference is that David humbled himself before God, asked for forgiveness and repented. He put himself, weaknesses and all in God's hand, and God made him great.

We love flawed people, but not the flaws

This text shows a side of God's nature. He loves flawed people, but not their flaws. In a way, we are the same. We seem to be strangely attracted to people who are flawed, and acknowledge their flaws; they are seen as more like us.

That may be the reason some great people are still loved by the masses even though it turned out that they have a multitude of flaws. Bill Clinton was one of the greatest presidents but he had his Monica Lewinsky flaw. John F. Kennedy was a great man but he had his Marilyn Monroe flaw. Martin Luther King dreamed of peace and freedom and died a hero, but he too had a fatal attraction to outside romances. Thomas Jefferson was a great American, but he had a secret lover in slave row. Marion Berry was a popular mayor of Washington DC but it turned out that he used cocaine. Jesse Jackson is a great African-American hero, but it turns out he is the father of a "love child."

We find it easy to identify with flawed people, why? Because they are a lot like us; we are flawed too. Those who admitted their flaws and repented were quickly forgiven; because we can relate to people with flaws; they are just like us.

Maybe that's why Berry was re-elected by overwhelming margins, Bill Clinton is still revered by millions, Jesse Jackson is still a great spokesman social reform and Martin Luther King's picture still hangs on our walls; they all turned out to be great people who are just like us, flawed.

Job was a perfect man before he was tested, but he turned out to be a good man who was flawed, just like us.

Samson was a strong man, but he was a man with great flaws, just like us.

David was a man after God's own heart, but he was a man with flaws, just like us.

Paul was a strong advocate for God, but he had a thorn in his side that troubled him, just like us.

Thomas was a follower of Christ, but he often doubted, just like us.

Peter was a great leader of the church, but he often lost his temper and cowered in the presence of trouble, just like us.

What we learned from all these men is that God never stopped loving them even though he hated their flaws. When they proved that they were able to deal with their flaws, God proved he was willing to forgive them.

The same is true with every believer. When we acknowledge our own weakness, then God is able to bless us.

Love overlooks a multitude of flaws

Those who love us are aware of our flaws; they choose to love us despite our flaws.

Many couples spend years fighting each other because one sees the flaws in the other. They wound each other, curse, fight, and say cruel things because they constantly see the flaws in their mates, without seeing their own. Defending themselves, their mates fight back by showing their partners that they too have flaws, and the fights continue and escalate until they either divorce or come to an agreement to love each other while each works on the flaws the frustrate the other.

Those who succeeded in marriage can testify that things change in marriages once each partner recognizes their own flaws.

James S. Hewitt puts it this way,

"When the other fellow acts that way, he is ugly; when you do, it's nerves.

When others are set in their ways, they're obstinate; when you are, it is firmness.

When your neighbor doesn't like your friend, he's prejudiced; when you don't like his, you are a good judge of human nature.

When he tries to treat someone especially well, he's sucking up; when you try it, you are being thoughtful.

When he takes time to do things well, he's a slowpoke or lazy; when you do, you are deliberate and careful.

When he spends a lot, he is a spendthrift; when you do, you're generous. When someone picks flaws in things, he's cranky and critical; when you do, you are creative.

When he is mild-mannered, you call him weak; when you are, it is graciousness.

When someone dresses especially well, that person is extravagant; when you do, it is tastefulness.

When he says what he thinks, he's spiteful; when you do, you are being frank.

When he takes great risks in business, he's foolhardy; when you do, you are a wise financier.

We get closer in our relationships when we start to see ourselves the way others see us; that's when we start to see our own shortcomings.

Those who love us know us and despite what they know about us; they choose to love us anyway.

We can love people without agreeing with them. We can love them without accepting their vices. We can love people without loving the wrong things they say, or do. We can even love people without condoning or participating in their sinful practices. If that was not the case, who would love us? If that was not the case, how could God love you and me?

To love people is to love them, flaws and all.

While they and God work on their long list of flaws love them anyway! Love ignores a multitude of flaws because that's the way God loves us. "Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another" (1 John 4:11).

God knows all about us

Finally, brothers and sisters we should remember that God knows all about us, including our flaws.

When God selected David to become King of Israel, he knew he wasn't perfect, but he never stopped working on him.

That's the way God dealt with all of the saints. He knew they were not perfect but he never stopped working on them.

Today, God knows that we as believers are not perfect, but he's still working on us.

One way God works on us is through the help of brothers and sisters in the faith, who labor with us, put up with us and work on us, with the goal of helping us overcome our flaws.

That's why James 5:16 says, "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

That's why a believer who is caught in a weakness asks the church to pray for me!

I hear every saint crying out in the words of David, "Create in me a clean heart oh God, and renew a right spirit within me."

One song writer said, "Please be patient with me, God is not through with me yet.

We still have a few flaws; but God is not through with us yet!

When God gets through, the man who complains all the time will have a new song, "I've had my good days; I've had many hills to climb. But when I think it over; all of my good days outweigh my bad days and I won't complain."

When God gets through, the woman who is bitter over the loss of a loved one will be able to say, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

When God gets through, the man who is hopelessly lost to sin, will be able to say, "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore. Very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more, but the master of the see heard my despairing cry. From the waters lifted me. Now safe am I. Love lifted me, when nothing else could help, love lifted me!"

When God gets through with me, I'll be able to say, "God gave me a song that the angels cannot sing. I've been washed in the blood of the crucified lamb!"

If you see me not walking right, remember God is not through with me yet!

If you see me not talking right, remember God is not through with me yet!

If you see me not living right, remember God is not through with me yet!

I'm so glad that the Lord has not stopped working on me!

He started working before I was born!

He started working on me in little town called Bethlehem!

He started working on me when he carried an old rugged cross up Golgotha's hill!

He started working on me when he died out on Calvary!

But, Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

Every day of my life, he's still working on me!

Please be patient with me, God is not through with me yet!

When God gets through with me, I shall come forth as pure gold!

A Taste of Glory Divine

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: And ye shall eat in plenty, and be satisfied, and praise the name of the LORD your God, that hath dealt wondrously with you: and my people shall never be ashamed. And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the LORD your God, and none else: and my people shall never be ashamed. Joel 2:26-27

Introduction

Have you ever tasted the dough before the cake was actually made? Often children watch their mothers make cakes. They watch with excitement as the sugar, flour butter and other elements are mixed together. There is always a great anticipation as a child waits for his mother's permission to put his finger in the bowl and taste the dough. As a child tasting the dough is an exciting experience. Children run their fingers around the entire bowl, and lick their fingers clean. The taste of the dough gives them an idea of the sweetness of the cake that is to come.

In a way the anticipation they share is the same anticipation every believer has of all the great blessings that God has in store for them. The pastor of a congregation is following God's recipe as he shows individual members how to bake the cake of life. Through preaching, teaching and leading he gives them a foretaste of things to come. Like the child's finger in the bowl, what we see, hear and learn from the pastor is just a foretaste, but it is enough to encourage the down hearted and inspire another generation to continue living the Christian life until our Lord returns.

In 1 Corinthians 14:3, the Apostle Paul gave a very brief, but conclusive definition of preaching. He said, "But he that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort." Paul told the Corinthians that preaching accomplishes one of three purposes. He said, that preaching either edifies, inspires, or comforts. Through edification, preaching builds us up and strengthens us to endure difficult times, and to prepare us for the ultimate test that comes upon any who choose to live the Christian life. Through exhortation or inspiration preaching inspires us to live the Christian life to its fullest. Through words of comfort, preaching helps us to handle, absorb and to understand the difficulties of life.

If we put it another way, what Paul said was that preaching, prepares believers in this life by helping to strengthen and build them, encourage and motivate them, and sustain and comfort them as they deal with the issues they face each day; in preparation for the life to come. Preaching gives them a foretaste of what is to come.

The church needs to hear the words of the Gospel. The Gospel brings hope to those who are wrestling with the difficulties of life. The Gospel brings understanding to those who are confused about their direction. The Gospel brings hope and comfort to those who are suffering during their life's journey. The Gospel is the good news that comes from God. This good news brings strength. That's what Romans 10:17 means when it says, "Now faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God."

The preacher brings the confused masses a word of faith and a "glimpse of glory divine." This is what the song writer had in mind when he wrote, "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine. Oh what a foretaste of Glory Divine…"

When the church celebrates, salutes and honors its pastor, it encourages him, but in a greater sense it also celebrates the vision and the Gospel message that he brings to them. The preacher makes no promises, heals no sick, or places no soul in heaven. This is all the work of God. Thus, we also celebrate the "glory" and majesty of God, working through the pastor to accomplish his will among believers.

As Christians, we thank God for regularly encouraging us with a taste of his glory divine. We thank him for our pastors, because through them we are able to "lick the bowl" of the eternal life he is preparing and get a foretaste of what is to come.

Exposition

This text focuses on the Prophet Joel as he gave the disheartened people of God a vision that provided them with a "A Taste of Glory Divine."

Joel was a prophet whose message was directed to the Southern Kingdom of Judah. At the time God dictated this writing to Joel a famine, a plague of locust and a drought had devastated the land. The people were completely disheartened by all that they saw. They could not envision their recovery from such devastation.

Joel called upon the elderly men of the nation in Joel 1:2 to testify to the gravity of the destruction by comparing it to a more pleasant time. He encouraged them to share their dreams and reflections of by gone days with their children that they may gain an appreciation for the things God would do to restore them. The reflections of what God provided for them would feed the hope of those starving for a word for their present situation.

In verse 23 of the text, Joel focused on the "former rains" or the past blessings that were given to the people as a way to give them an idea of what God planned to do in the future. In just a short time God promised to bring the former rain and latter rain at the same time. In this way, God planned to do even bigger things for the people if the repented from the sins and placed their hope in the mighty power of God

Joel said, when the people repent that God would pour out his spirit on all flesh..that sons and daughters would prophesy..that old men would dream dreams, but the young men would see visions.

He painted a picture at verse 26 of plentiful food and satisfaction. At verse 30 he spoke of God's promise to show them wonders in heaven that would be so miraculous that no one would be able to deny the power of God.

Joel's preaching provided a taste of renewed blessing to a disheartened people.

He gave them a glimpse of God's plan to restore them and sustain them.
He gave them a peek into the eternal blueprint for their salvation.
He gave them a taste of glory divine.

Taste the Rewards of Obedience

Like the prophet Joel, the modern pastor has the responsibility to show his congregation the great things that God has in store for them if they remain loyal to him. One evidence of that loyalty is obedience to God.

On a regular basis the pastor encourages his congregation to be obedient to God because God will reward those who keep his word.

The pastor encourages members to be obedient to God in their living, in their giving, and in their praise. He constantly reminds them that God has promised to open up the windows of heaven and pour out blessings upon them if they will simply remember their vows, pay their tithes and walk humbly before him. He paints a picture of what is to come when they are obedient and follow God's command. It is a picture of reward. It is a picture of hope. It is a picture of eternal peace.

Tilden Edwards in his book "Spiritual Friend" said an old legend tells of a man who went to see a great man of God and asked for guidance in his quest to become a holy man. The old teacher told the man he was to plant a dry stick in the sand and to water it daily.

The man went home and planted the stick in the sand, but the only source of water was many miles away. He left each evening to fetch the water, and returned at dawn each day.

For three years the man patiently fulfilled his instructor's command. Month after wearying month, he watered and waited, watered and waited, with no signs of life.

At the end of the three years, a change took place. The stick suddenly put forth leaves and in a short period of time bore fruit. The old teacher came to look at the fruit. He picked it up and carried it to the table of the residence.

He then invited all of the people in to eat. He said to them, "Come and taste the fruit of obedience."

That's what the pastor does every Sunday. He shows believers, a taste of the fruit of obedience.

He gives them a taste of what to expect if they obey God's command.
Those who obey God can expect to see the sunshine after the rain.
Those who obey God can expect strength in the midst of all their weaknesses.

This is the hope that the pastor brings. It's a taste of the glory that God will bring upon all, who are obedient to him.

Taste the wonders and sweetness of God

The pastor also introduces believers to the wonders and sweetness of God. Often we see the world but we do not see it. We see the birds flying in the air, but yet we do not see them. We hear the tolling of the bells but yet we do not hear them. Somehow, although we are here in the midst of all the wonders of God we seem to miss the beauty of the entire experience.

The pastor helps us to see and taste what God is doing for us everyday. He helps us to look around and see God's handiwork everywhere. Even in our own lives, when we think God has abandoned us, the pastor helps us to see God's fingerprints in our lives. He helps us to look up and see the source of our blessings. When we are eating the apples that fall to the ground, he helps us to look up and see the tree from which they have fallen.

A.Z. Towzer in his book, "Pursuing the knowledge of the Holy" said, "In the midst of this great coldness toward God there are some, I rejoice to acknowledge, who will not be content with shallow logic. They will admit the force of the argument, and then turn away with tears to hunt some lonely place and pray, "O God, show me thy glory." They want to taste, to touch with their hearts, to see with their inner eyes the wonder that is God."

When we get a taste of what God is all about, we see things differently!

When we get a taste of his goodness we sing like the song writer who said, "I hear God in every church bell that rings. I hear God in every robin that sings."

The goodness of God is indescribable. We have to experience him for ourselves. That's what Psalm 34:8 means, "O taste and see that the LORD is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him."

There was a little fellow who was returning home from a store with a pail of honey in his hand. A gentleman who walked beside him saw him slip one finger down into the pail. Then, because his mother had told him never to wipe his sticky fingers on his blouse or trousers, it found its only logical destination, his mouth. It really tasted good. After he had done this several times, the gentleman approached him and said, "See here, Sonny, what have you in that pail?" "Some honey, sir." "Honey-is it sweet?" "Yes, sir." "How sweet is your honey?" "It is very sweet, sir." "Well, I do not understand you. I asked you how sweet your honey was, and you have not yet told me. How sweet is it?" "Why, it is very, very sweet, sir." "Well, you are a funny little fellow; I asked you how sweet your honey is, and you just tell me it is very, very sweet. Now, can't you tell me really how sweet your honey is?" The little fellow was impatient by this time, so he stuck his finger down into the honey, and holding it up said, "Taste and see for yourself."

We salute the pastor because he keeps reminding us to taste and see!

He constantly reminds us to try God for ourselves.

We salute him because he keeps reminding us of the wonder and sweetness of our Lord!

"He's sweet I know. He's sweet I know. I've found a savior and he's sweet I know."

Taste of What is To Come

Finally, brothers and sisters we should celebrate our pastor because he continues to bring us God's vision of our glorious future.

In Joel 2:28, the prophet presented a vision that gave them a taste of the glories that God was preparing.

Joel said, when the people repent that God would pour out his spirit on all flesh; that sons and daughters would prophesy; that old men would dream dreams, but the young men would see visions.

A vision is a picture of what will be. It is a taste of glory divine!

A dreamer paints a picture of how things used to be and what he imagines they will be.

The pastor is a visionary; he does not talk so much about what was, as much as he tells the story of what will be, what has been promised by God. He gives us a taste of glory divine!

Amos saw a vision of a church well ordered in the visions of the plumb line.

Zechariah saw a vision of a new city of God, with walls not made with hands.

Ezekiel saw a vision of a splintered nation coming together again in the vision of the dry bones.

Daniel saw a vision of the downfall of pagan nations and the rise of the Christian Church, with a stone carved from a mountain by the hand of God.

Isaiah told of his vision in chapter six of his book. I hear him say, "In the year King Uzziah died, I also saw the Lord." He was sitting on a throne, high and lifted up...his train filled the temple and about him was the seraphim and each one has two wings, to hide his face, to cover his feet and to fly.

The pastor gives us an apocalyptic vision that peers into the unseen realms of the distant horizon.

It's a vision:

—Of a time when every day will be Sunday and it's always howdy and never goodbye.

—Of a day when the night of weeping has ended and joy has come in the morning.

—Of a day when the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest.

—Of a day when the hearse wheels won't roll and the siren song of the ambulance will be silenced forever.

—Of a land where we will never grow old!

It's that vision that keeps us going. It motivates us, edifies us, and comforts us!

It's a vision that began in a little town called Bethlehem.

It's a vision that was continued on a hill called Calvary!

It's a vision that was completed early, Sunday morning when my Lord and your Lord arose the grave with all power in his hands!

I don't know about you, but every now and then I get a taste of glory divine!

Every now and then I can feel him..

Moving in my hands!

Moving in my feet!

All over me!

God's "Good Things"

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 19, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not. As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith" Galatians 6:9-10.

Introduction

Have you ever had a "good thing?" In our neck of the woods, a "good thing" is a person who goes out of his way to show us a kindness, perform a charitable act or other form of generosity. A woman who has a good thing, has a man who treats her like a queen, loves her with a fervent passion, defends her honor, provides for all of her needs and many of hearts desires within his ability. Such a "good thing" never stops doing good. He calls constantly, brings her flowers regularly and never forgets to keep telling her that he loves her. A man who has a good thing is equally blessed. He has a woman who sweetens his coffee with a good morning kiss. She constantly thinks of him and does so many acts of kindness that he can't count them. She works and trusts him to manage what is saved and what is spent. She loves him and never stops letting him know that he is her "good thing." Children have parents who are "good things." These are the parents that see to it that they have the best opportunities, clothes, and even games for baby girls and teenage toys for bigger boys. It's not hard to know when you have a good thing.

There is a difference between a good thing and a "fool." A good thing does what he does out of love. His acts of kindness are done with his eyes wide open, with no deception. He does it because giving is what love does. The woman who is a "good thing" is nobody's fool. She understands that "love" is an action word and she constantly seeks ways to show her love through her action. Her constant displays of love are what make her a "good thing." A fool does good things, but does it thinking that the actions will win the affections of the other. Affections are rarely won by the loving acts of another; often they are used in the way Bill Withers put it in his song, "Use me till you use me up." Fools get used, "Good things" are appreciated, cherish and loved in life; and missed when they are gone.

There are millions of Black men who can be characterized as "good things." Why? Because they are continuously doing great things in their families, communities and churches. While there are many reports about the "bad things" in our community who are robbing stores, raping, murdering and living lawless lives, very little is said about the millions of "good things" who are making their communities better places to live, loving their wives and children and supporting their churches with their time and resources.

God is looking for men who are willing to be "Good Things" for the Lord. These are men who willing to continue doing good to all.

As Christians, we have committed ourselves to witness for Christ and serve him, while at the same time meeting the needs of those around us. When men show love for their community, family and church by constantly doing good things, they give evidence of their faith in God. We should resolve to continue doing good is this way, so that our "good things" will not come to and end.

Exposition

This text focuses on the Apostle Paul's instruction to believers about relationships with one another.

Galatians is filled with instructions to believers about displaying the qualities of Christianity in our daily living. This chapter is divided into two parts. The first 10 verses pick up where chapter five left off. It encouraged believers to constantly display the fruit of the spirit on a daily basis. Chapter six continues with more instruction; this time about our responsibilities to each other. The last part of the chapter verse 11-14 warns believers against false teaching that was cropping up in Christian circles.

This text comes from the portion of the chapter that focuses on our relationships with each other. While Paul constantly uses the masculine terms "man" and "men" in his admonitions to the church at Galatia, the instructions are not gender specific. So while he says in verse 10, "Let us do good to all men" it does not men that are acts of kindness and goodness should be limited to males only. "Men" in this context means mankind or humankind.

His encouragement is clear; we should not tire of doing good things, but should seize every opportunity to do as many good things as possible; not resting upon what we have done in the past, but doing all the good we can, while we can. Believers are encouraged to do good things for all people, but especially to those who are in the household of faith. The household of faith is a reference to the church or other Christians.

Thus, believers are encouraged to be a "good thing" outside of their immediate "household of faith" but to be especially sure that they not tire of doing good things within their own households. Believers have a family house of faith and community of believers house of faith; neither should be neglected when good things are being done.

In verse nine Paul remind the Galatians that there will be a reward for those who do not tire and continue to be "good things" for those around them. It is the promise of "Well done" from God that motivates God's "good things." It is this promise that separates them from fools who perform countless acts without recognition of reward for thankless recipients. It is this promise of reward that pushes them to go further, never tire and keep showing the love of God to all people regardless to race, creed or national origin.

God's "Good Things"

While every believer shares in the commission to do good, men who are heads of the "household of faith" must respond on a higher order. God's men must do "good things" in a way that gives credit to God and builds our race. There are three areas where God's "Good Things" are needed.

GOOD THINGS IN THE COMMUNITY: God's "Good Things" are needed in the community. No matter what place we pick in America, the plight of the Black community seems to be the same. Our neighborhoods are suffering, our children are being mislead and our problems are worsening. Those who try to escape by moving out of the neighborhood usually find that the subculture follows them or worse, they bring it with them. Across America, Black men sensitive to the problems of our community are organizing themselves. The million man march in 1995 raised the consciousness of millions. National fraternal organizations such as the Alpha Phi Alpha and Kappa Alpha Psi, Prince Hall Masons, The National Baptist Convention and others are energizing men to organize and take action.

Millions of Black men are forming organizations such as the 100 Black Men of America with units all over the nation. The aim of the push is to get Black men who are successful to do more than simply be successful, but to roll up their sleeves and plunge into the problem. To attack the problem men are being encouraged to: 1) Serve as a one to one role model for a Black boy; that is to go beyond serving on boards and committees but to actively work in a structured way where one man directly interacts with at least one boy that is not his own as a mentor. 2) Promote Educational excellence 3) Give volunteer service to the community 4) Promote male responsibility training for Black males 5) Promote the importance moral behavior by precept and example 6) Promote a respect for God and family.

There is no comparison for what can be done if men of good character roll up their sleeves and do good work. Men who responding to this need should hear the words of the text, "don't be weary of doing well" and keep doing good things.

GOOD THINGS IN THE FAMILY: Black men are the heads of the "household of faith" or the local family. The text implies an intrinsic responsibility to the family when it says, "especially unto them who are of the household of faith." The meaning cannot be overlooked; we must serve the community, but we must take care of business in our own families. Those who serve on boards or who lead governments have an even more awesome responsibility, because beside their responsibility as community leaders they also must function in their own families as husbands, fathers, uncles and grandfathers. They must avoid the danger of substituting one for the other.

The strength of our people has been in the solidarity of our families. Black families need their "good things" to do "good things" at home.

Though poor, ostracized and endangered, the African-American family has survived in strength. Yet, while there are millions of families that are still thriving, a great many of our families are showing signs of disintegration. As our families become more tolerant of deviant behavior and less homogeneous, the community feels the impact.

The extent of the damage becomes clear when we consider that 23 percent of 20-29 year old Black men are either in jail or on probation at any given time. While there are more than 600,000 young Black men enrolled in college there are more than 800,000 under the control of the criminal justice system. The nation spends more than $3 billion a year to keep them locked up, making privately owned prisons the fastest growing new business in America.

Teen pregnancy is hitting an all time high with African-American teens topping the lists. We are plagued with a dilemma of problems created by a generation of babies making babies.

Our families need God's "Good Things."

Mothers need "Good things" as loving husbands and providers.

Children need "Good things" who are present and functioning in their lives.

Millions of men are being good things and doing good things at home. These brothers should remember the words of the text, "Don't be weary of doing well" and keep doing good things.

GOOD THINGS BEFORE GOD: The Black man must continue to do good things in the larger "Household of faith" which is the church. Through his church he can join shoulders with other men of faith and gain faith, fellowship and friendship as he praise God and attacks the evils that threaten the households of family that he loves.

The problem that God's men face is huge, however, with God it is not insurmountable.

God's men must stay before God because one fourth of our young men are involved in the criminal justice system at a time when they should be beginning families starting careers and learning skills. They need good men who know God to help them.

God's men must stay in the presence of God because one fourth of our youth are struggling to raise babies while they are still babies. They need good men who know God to show them a way out of their dilemma.

God's men must stay on their knees asking for God's help because one fifth of our male population remains unemployed. The unemployed need good men to bring the words of hope and assist them in their struggle.

A man who is a good thing knows he can do many things, but he can't do

In Due Season we shall reap

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider Paul's words to the Galatians in verse 10 and remember that in due season we shall be rewarded for doing "good things" for the Lord.

While Christian men are encouraged to continue doing good works, the reality of the matter is that many are frustrated in their service, because it is often unrewarding and thankless. Those who have spent time working in the vineyard, reaching out to those who are struggling in their walk with God or with troubles and burdens in their lives, find it is easy to become discouraged when the harvest is poor.

The reality is that many give up after a short time because the work is difficult and at times disheartening.

Yet, today brothers, we are reminded by God's word that "in due season" God will reward true believers for their work.

What is "due season?" It means, when God gets ready.

When God gets ready, that which was impossible becomes possible!

When God gets ready, doors that were closed are suddenly opened!

When God gets ready, narrow roads become major boulevards!

Therefore men are encouraged to keep working, and keep doing good things, because in due season, God will give the rewards!

The world has prematurely announced the death of the Black man. But we serve notice today, that God's "Good Things" are still doing good things in the name of the Lord!

Whenever there is has been a great need, God has always moved in the ranks of God fearing men to help them do good things that were considered impossible!

Whenever there was a demand there have been men at work!

When Israel faced the impossibility of the River Jordan, God moved when men started doing good things!

When Joshua led Israel around the walls of Jericho, God moved when men started doing good things!

When Gideon led a small army of 300 against a force of thousands, enemies were defeated when just a few men started doing good things!

Whenever there has been a mountain God has had a man!

For Mt Sinai God had Moses doing a good thing!

For Mt. Ararat God had Noah, doing a good thing!

For Mt. Carmel God had Elijah, doing a good thing!

And when the world needed salvation on Mt. Calvary God had a man who was more than just a good thing, he was the best thing that ever happened to the world.

John said, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!"

His name is Jesus!

Who died on Calvary but rose after three days!

One of these days, he's coming back again!

When he comes back, let him find every man busy doing good things!

No wonder the song writer declared, "I'm going to work until my day is done! I'm going to work until the setting of my sun! I'll cease from sorrow. There'll be no tomorrow. I'm going to work until my day is done!"

Walk With Me Lord!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 2, 2006

SCRIPTURE: The LORD God is my strength, and he will make my feet like hinds' feet, and he will make me to walk upon mine high places. To the chief singer on my stringed instruments. Habakkuk 3:19

Introduction

How did you feel when you finally graduated and made that walk across the stage to receive your diploma? For many it was an exciting and memorable moment. As you climbed the steps, could you feel the electricity in the air? Could you hear the cheers of the audience and the thundering applaud? A camera flashed, a faced smiled, a hand was extended, and the leather case was put into your hand. A few steps later and you were back at your seat! It was a Kodak moment.

Many people walked across the stage with you that day. Your parents, grand parents, your coach, scout leaders, that special teacher and the small band of people who have supported you for many years.

Very rarely has a graduate made the final walk alone. Always, there was that small cloud of well wishers, supporters and family members who have labored with them for many years to help them reach that day.

The Christian graduate knows another certainty; that unseen by the hundreds of eyes that watched the stage that night, but certainly felt, was the guiding hand of the Lord, who more than all the others who cheered, was mainly responsible for us making that final walk.

As Christians, we have the assurance that we will never walk alone. As long as the Lord is our strength and we abide in him, he will give walk with us to the high place we strive to reach alone.

Exposition

This text focuses is on the prophet Habakkuk as he considers the frustrating experience that Israel had encountered as it pondered the next step in a series of events, carrying them toward an unknown future. The book of Habakkuk presents a picture of a believer struggling to discern, understand and resolve the issue of the immediate future.

In chapter one, the issue of the frustrations of the righteous as compared to the seemingly easy way of the ungodly is addressed. Habakkuk was concerned that it appeared that those who were not faithful to the Lord were rewarded, while those who worked hard seem to have a more difficult time. In versus five through seven of chapter one Habakkuk received God's answer. God said, "for I will work a work in your days, which ye will not believe though it be told you." God told Habakkuk that he was preparing to deal with all the forces that had troubled them in a strange and amazing way. He would not understand how God would work this out; and at first it would appear as if God had made a mistake. However, soon God would take those very forces that had worked against them, and use them to their advantage. The very forces that worked against the people of God were about to be used by God himself to open doors for the people.

God speaks to Habakkuk personally and shows him how he is working in the events that unfold before him to work out his will, even to the point of using what is obviously evil to accomplish an eventual good. Responding to the cries of the people, God shows Habakkuk a prophecy and a vision that reassures them that he is not asleep and is moving behind the scenes to accomplish his will. He encouraged all believers to approach the troubling times with an attitude of faith saying, "the just shall live by his faith." (2:4)

Thus, Habakkuk concludes that although there are difficult times ahead and troubles all around, the just should not give up the faith.

Living by faith has implications. Its implications are spelled out in verses 17 and 18. "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls; yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation."

He concludes that God will strengthen him, lead him away from destructive forces and take him to the high places of his destiny.

I will work a work in your days

Those who stand on the threshold of life, pondering their next move should share Habakkuk's frustration. They should also share the good news he heard from God in verse 1:5, "I will work a work in your days, which ye will not believe though it be told you."

In the course of our lives there have been plenty of things said about each of us. Graduating classes usually have predictions, such as the "Most likely to succeed" or "The least likely to succeed." It's easy to spot those who may be the most likely to succeed because they seem to have everything going for them, charm, good looks, and charisma. Every graduating class is usually baffled at their first class reunion ten years later, that those whom they thought would not succeed actually did better. The school fool is a minister. One of the slowest members of the class has a PhD. The classmate who never seemed to have a dime, became a multi-millionaire.

When graduates calculate their potential in life they should not overlook the Habakkuk factor: "What happens when God works a wonderful work in your life." There are no limits on your potential once you consider the Habakkuk factor, "When God works a work."

That is exactly what God promises frustrated believers who are at the cross roads of life, frustrated about the future; he promises to work a work in your life, not in distant future, but "in your days"; in the near future.

When God works it out, you will be amazed. In the text, God took the very forces that worked against Israel and used it to their advantage.

When you see the changes that God puts you through and start noticing how your attitudes and disposition changes for the better, you won't believe yourself. Don't be amazed, God said it would be that way. In this same verse, God said, "which ye will not believe though it be told you."

When God works a work, he turns out a fine piece of work. To do that sometimes God has to do a spiritual number on us. He may have to tear us down to build us up. Isn't that what happened at the potter's house? When the potter found a flaw in the clay he had to tear it completely down and build it back again. Either we can work the work of him who sent us from the start, or wait for God to bust a spiritual cap on us to turn us to the right path.

When God works it out, our walk will change.

When God works it out, our talk will change.

When God works it out, our dress will change.

When God does his thing in our lives, we'll look at how far we've come and sing the words to the old song, "How I got over! How I got over! My soul looks back and wonders, How I got over!"

Live by Faith

The second truth that Habakkuk revealed is that the "just should live by faith." (2:4) Just what does that mean? If you are a young graduate, "live by faith" means to go forward in life, confident that whatever life brings, God will make a way.

The very definition of faith tells the story in Hebrews 11:1 "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for and evidence of things not seen."

To live by faith is to always believe that godly goals can be achieved even though, at present, there is no evidence to support the belief.

Young believers have never traveled the independent road in life, although they have been dreaming about being independent all of their lives. It is a nervous road, but each is encouraged to live by faith.

Living by faith is not the same as being foolish.

It's foolish to get a $500 a month apartment with no means of regularly paying the rent. That's not living by faith.

It's foolish to charge your new credit card to the limit, talk up all the minutes on your phone, and spend all of your laundry money on video games. That's not living by faith, that's foolishness.

When we enter an arena of life responsibly and things happen outside of our control, that's when we walk by faith that the Lord will make a way.

When tuition is due and there seems to be no way, despite your best efforts, that's when you live by faith that the Lord will make a way.

Using your utility bill money to Pimp your ride then praying to God to get the light bill paid is not living by faith, that's foolishness.

Habakkuk said the "just" live by faith. The just are those who "do right" by God.

The just are those who try to live by his commandments, conduct themselves according to his precepts and follow his examples. The just, says the word, "shall live by faith."

That means young graduates should go out in life confident that God will make a way for whatever he has promised to happen.

If doors are closed in your face, If I "do right" by him, God will make a way!

If enemies surround you on every side, If I "do right" by him, God will make a way!

If I fall down more than I stand up; step down more than I step up; If I "do right" by him, God will make a way!

Living by faith, means we never doubt that the Lord will make a way somehow!

He'll help me walk to high places

Finally, brothers and sisters, every believer should remember that if we walk with the king, he will take us to high places

Habakkuk said the Lord was his strength in difficult times and that he counted on the Lord to raise him up on his hind legs like a deer and escape danger.

He remained confident that he will "make me walk to mine high places."

Habakkuk decided to walk with God rather than trust the devil.

He decided to walk by faith, rather than place his trust in forces of men.

He decided to let God move in a big way rather than waiting for crumbs from the devil's table.

Verse 19 gives the final phrase of hope to young believers, "he will help me walk to my high places."

It doesn't matter how big your dream if you put your hand in God's hand he will help you walk to your place!

Walking with God is a steady walk! You cannot drag your feet. Your ascent up the mountain of success must not be slowed by a lack of synchronization.

God will walk you to your high place but you must make a step. There is no time for malingering and idleness, walking with the king is a steady pace.

In Matthew 28 Jesus told his young followers to "go and lo" he would be with them always. That's different from the way the devil walks with us.

In the country, when a visitor returned home, it was customary to walk "piece-a-way" back home. You didn't walk all the way, but just a little bit.

That's the way the devil walks with those who trust in him. He doesn't go all the way, but just a little bit.

The devil is like the rapper "50 cent."

All he wants from you is a little bit!
All he will do for you is a little bit!
All he will ever give you is a little bit!
All he'll let you have is a little bit!
All he'll let you dream is a little bit!
All he'll let you do is a little bit!
All he'll let you achieve is a little bit!
The only amount you'll ever receive is a little bit!
The only height you'll ever climb is a little bit!
The only happiness you'll ever find is a little bit!

I have news for you this morning, we serve a God who has the power to do more than just a little bit!

I hear the guard asking the three Hebrew Boys, "Is your God able to deliver you?" And the answer comes, "He's able!

Well the devil is asking this graduating class, I had you for a little bit, but can you afford to leave me behind? Is your God able?

But somebody in this class is saying right now, "he's able. I know he's able!

He brought us through pre-school and kingergarden, six years of elementary, two years of Jr. High and four years of high school, he's able!

I know he's able because we fell down, but he picked us up again!

I know he's able because we messed up, fessed up and he blessed us up again!

I know he's able because we broke our parent's heart but they never stopped loving us!

I know he's able because when I should have been dead and gone, he gave me a second chance!

The other day, you walked across the stage and received your diploma in your hand!

Today, every believer should say in his heart, I'm going to walk with the king and keep my hand in his hand!

As you go through life, come what may, walk with the king!

If you walk with the king, storms may rise and winds may blow; but you'll have shelter in the time of storm!

If you walk with the king, he'll take your weakness and give you strength.

If you walk with the king, he'll take your failures and give you success!

If you walk with the king, he'll take your bitter experiences and make them sweet.

No wonder the song writer says, "I want to meet all the disciples. I want talk with the angels; I want to walk with the king!

I want to walk with the king, who loved the world so much that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!

His name is Jesus! The King of Kings!
Jesus, The Lord of Lords!
He died out on Calvary, but early!
Early Sunday morning….

The Statue of Liberty

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 3, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." Galatians 5:1

Introduction

Have you ever visited or seen photographs of the Statue of Liberty? It is a majestic statute that towers 305 feet over the New York harbor and seems to beckon those who yearn for freedom and liberty to come to its shores. The curious from around the world have climbed to its massive crown and peered out across the bay on almost a daily basis since it was opened in 1886. It was closed to tourists in the aftermath of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks but in 2004 resumed its role as America's primary symbol of freedom and independence.

The idea of the statue took root after the Civil War. European abolitionists conceived the idea as a symbol to America' victory over slavery and its commit to invite men of color to lives of freedom and liberty. Between 1865 and its final dedication in 1886 there was large influx of immigrants from all over the world including Jews, Catholics, Scotts, Germans and French. By dedication time the statue came to represent not only America's victory over slavery but its invitation to all who yearned to be free. It was shipped from France to America in 214 crates, and then painstakingly reassembled at a cost of over $75 million dollars.

On a bronze plaque on the wall of the statue's museum are the words of a poem by Emma Lazarus, called the New Colossus. The closing lines of that poem have become closely associated with the Statue of Liberty:

"Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore.
Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost to me,
I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

People from around the world come to America upon the invitation of the principle the statue represents: liberty and freedom for all. It was invitation to come here to be free from persecution and to be free to pursue happiness with government, class or unreasonable legal restraints.

Liberty is the real reason for the 4th of July celebration. However, this is a liberty that is often taken so lightly that many only think of the day as a chance to Bar-Be-Que, watch a sports event, or see a fire works display as we pig out and chill out. Some may hear a band play the "Stars and Stripes For ever" or glance at a television show.

To many it is too soon to celebrate liberty as long as there are still large portions of the nation that are still not treated equally, including minorities, women and Native Americans. They can relate to the words of Frederick Douglass in 1852 when he said:

"What, to the American slave, is your 4th of July? I answer; a day that reveals to him, more than all other days in the year, the gross injustice and cruelty to which he is the constant victim.... - a thin veil to cover up crimes which would disgrace a nation of savages."

Much has changed since Frederick Douglass said those words in 1852. While we are not yet fully free, we have made great strides toward that end and enjoy liberty more extensively than any other nation of the world.

While our celebration includes a salute to the Statue of Liberty, there is another "Statue of Liberty" for which every born again believer gives thanks. Just as many of us have never walked up the steps of the 305 foot colossus in New York, none of us have seen this statue with our physical eyes. Although we have never seen it, it has affected our lives even more than that statue in New York Harbor.

The statute to which I refer isn't really a statue at all; it's the Old Rugged Cross upon which our spiritual liberty was guaranteed by our Lord and savior Jesus Christ.

It stands high on a million church steeples and proclaims to the world, "Whosever will let him come." Liberty is not free. It was paid for with a price. For America it was paid for with the blood of millions on battlefields from Bunker Hill to Baghdad. For our souls, it was paid for with blood of Jesus Christ.

The cross symbolizes and embodies our quest to present ourselves spotlessly before God.

As Christians, we have two symbols of our freedom. The Statue of Liberty represents our physical freedom and the cross of Calvary which represents our spiritual freedom. It's a freedom that is not announced in declarations of independence or written into constitutions. It is freedom that will come when we all step foot into the Canaan Land where we will be free both in body and in spirit.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's epistle to the churches of Galatia explaining the liberties and freedoms associated with salvation.

Paul undertook three missionary journeys in his career. One of them established churches in the towns of: Iconium, Pisidian Antioch, Lystra, and Derbe, of which were part of the Roman province of Galatia.

Paul's letter specially addressed how the Christians in Galatia should respond to their new freedom in Christ. He instructed them to remember that their freedom in Christ was to be proactive, freedom to build, not freedom to pursue fleshly activities.

Christianity frees believers from the rituals and legalisms tied to the Mosaic Law,

Paul taught. This liberation from the Mosaic Law should not be viewed as an opportunity to indulge themselves but as an opportunity to advance the kingdom of the Savior.

That's what he means when he says we should stand fast in our Christian liberty. If we step back into legalism, we risk entanglement and bondage. The Jews of Paul's day knew what legal bondage meant (Acts 15:10). Circumcision was the seal of the old covenant, so Paul warns the Galatians that to turn back to the old covenant is to rob themselves of the blessings Christ purchased for them. Christ cannot profit the sinner who rejects grace and trusts law; Christ cannot profit the saint who seeks to live by the law instead of grace. "Circumcision" in vv. 2-3 stands for the entire Mosaic system.

Paul never taught anyone to forsake the moral laws which are embodied in the Law of Moses. But he did tell people that now that Christ had come the need to observe the ceremonial law is no longer present.

The cross stands as a symbol of that liberation not only from the shackles of Moses but also to the shackles of sin that once burdened every believer to a life of misery and shame.

What We are Free From

The primary message of Galatians as that the cross of Christ has freed us from many hindrances.

FREE FROM GUILT: Because of the Cross of Christ we are free from the guilt associated with past mistakes. Every believer has a past, no matter how young. Guilt burdens many people who blame themselves for deaths, sicknesses or the misfortunes of others. Sometimes the blame we have placed on ourselves is correct because we were contributors to bad situations. However, the cross of Christ represents the point in our lives in which we were absolved of all past sins, mistakes, addictions and immoralities. It is best symbolized by Jesus when he talked with the woman who had been caught in adultery and was about to be stoned. Here Jesus absolved all her past indiscretions and told her to go and sin no more. It was over, done and nailed to the cross. It means the same for believers today. Once we have given our sins, short comings and mistakes to Christ he absolves us of the guilt and punishment. He takes our ugly past and nails it to the cross. With the removal of the guilt and stain, we are now free to live, build and witness for him, walking daily in the light.

FREE FROM GRIEF: The cross of Christ stands as a reminder to us that he has borne our sorrows, and "with his stripes we are healed." There are many who are still grieving a personal loss. It doesn't matter what the loss, the fact that we are still grieving is a form of bondage. What Christ does is lift our grief by renewing our hope. What is that we have lost? A loved one? A relationship? An opportunity? Without hope we grieve endlessly. We can't ever pick up and move on with our lives. When we see the empty cross and hear Christ's words "And Lo' I'll be with you." We know that there is hope as long as he is around. Mary and Martha found hope even after the death of Lazarus. A widow woman found that despite an empty barrel that God could still make a way. Each time we see the cross, it reminds us of God's wonder working power and we sing the song, "There's power, power, wonder working, in the blood of the lamb. There's power, power, wonder working power in the precious blood of the lamb."

FREE FROM DEPRESSION: It's not hard to become depressed. It usually happens when life's circumstances surround us and we cannot get a grip. We slip into a depression under the load of increasing rejection, failure, pain and personal loss. There are times we are so depressed that we don't even want to leave home. It would be fine if we could sleep for days, until the storm passes. Depression destroys lives, families and marriages. While everyone experiences a depressing moment or two, the Cross of Christ has a tendency to lift our spirits. Just when we think we are at the end of our rope, we see the cross of Christ, and then decide to tie a knot and hold on. Just when we think we have fallen to our lowest point, the Cross of Christ reminds us that "We fall down, but we get up." Just as we begin to wallow in self pity over our troubled family, marriage or life situation, we see the cross of Christ and remember that it doesn't matter how the storm rages, as long as Jesus is on board we will be safe. The cross stands as our statue of liberty, remind us of all the ways that the blood of Christ has set us free.

What We are Free to Do

Just as the cross of Christ freed us from the bondage of guilt, sin, depression, and misgivings; we must remember that this new freedom we have sets us free to enjoy the enriched spiritual life.

Many know what they have been freed from, but they have no idea what to do with their freedom other than pursue worldly desires.

That's what happened when the old slave heard that since the Civil War was over that he was free. The master tried to discourage him from using his new freedom by pointing out how dependent the slave had been on the plantation economy. "If you get free Tom, what will you do?" Said the master. "You can't read and you can't write. You don't own any land and don't have any money. You don't even have a horse to leave on." Said the master. The old slave who had been subservient and respectful all his life then said, "Boss, is I free yet?" When the master assured him that he was free the old slave said, "We'll boss, I don't rightly know what it means to be free. But one thing I do know, even if I have to leave here walking, I won't be slaving for you no more!"

The cross reminds us of what we are free to do.

We are free to enjoy the promises of God. God has promised to go with us as we journey through this life. He has promised to make a way for us in the wilderness of life and let the manna flow from heaven if we are obedient. When we see the cross it reminds us that we are free to stand on the promises of God.

We are free to enjoy the protection of God. David said "God is my refuge and my strength." He has promised to be a shelter for us in a time of storm. When we see the cross it reminds us that the Lord will be our shield and strength in times of trouble.

We are free to boldly approach the throne of Grace.
Because we are free, we can boldly talk to God and tell him what we want.
Because we are free, we can tell him about our troubles trying to run this race.
Because we are free, we can go to God in prayer. It's a good thing to be free enough to talk to God in prayer!

The cross is more than a statue

Finally, brothers and sisters we must remember that the lady in the harbor is a statue, but the man on the cross was the living God.

Those who look to the Statue of Liberty in the harbor see the American dream, but those who look to the little cross on the hill go a little further, they see a God who makes dreams possible.

The statue of liberty offers freedom to all who come to American shores. Christ offers liberty to all who come to the cross.

The Statue of liberty marks the place where freedom begins, but the cross marks the place where bondage ends.

Cross reminds us of what has been replaced.
Hate replaced with love,
Sadness has been replaced with joy,
Confusion has been replaced with peace,
Impatience has been replaced with patience,
Insensitivity has been replaced with kindness,
Stinginess has been replaced with generosity,
Lack of faith has been replaced with faithfulness,
Rudeness has been replaced with gentleness.
The cross reminds us of a sin record that no longer exists.
The cross reminds us of a mistake that has been forgiven.
The cross reminds us of an error that has been erased.
But more than anything else the cross reminds us that we serve a living Lord.
The cross marks the place where we came in contact with the power of the Lord.

The cross marks the place where we stepped out of the darkness into the marvelous light.

The cross marks the place where we traded in our lives of sin for the hope of salvation.

That's why the song writer wrote, "At the cross at the cross where we first saw the light and the burdens of my heart rolled away. It was there by faith I received my sight and now I'm happy all the day."

The cross is more than a statue!
The cross is that power that can change my darkness into light!
The cross is that power that can take my downs and turn them into ups
The cross is that power that can pick me up and turn me around again!
It's more than a statue!
It's where Jesus died over 2000 years ago!

Scripture: "So now Israel, what do you think God expects from you?" Just this: Live in his presence in holy reverence, follow the road he sets out for you, love him, serve God, your God, with everything you have in you, Deuteronomy 10:12 (MSG Version)

Introduction

Have you ever found yourself doing less than your best? Both youth and adults alike find that there are many areas of their lives which have been approached half heartedly. Those are times that we do less than our best. As children, our parents try to teach us to do our best, but the lessons are so hard to learn. We swept the floor as we were instructed, but we only swept in the open places; going further would be troublesome. We washed the dishes, but when the water became greasy, we didn't change it; doing so would have meant more time. We mowed the grass but we missed many areas and left little ridges in the lawn. It was done, but was it our best? We washed the car, but left several areas untouched. Was it our best? Probably not.

Old habits are hard to break; those who were once children who gave less than their best grew up to be adults, who continued as adults the mistakes of the childhood. That's when we see the employee who gives his boss less than a full day's work, but still wants to get paid. That's when we join organizations and do less than our best to attend and participate in their activities. There are some who routinely fail to dot their "I's" and cross the "T's" not because they don't know how, but because it's just too much bother.

They make a practice of giving less than their best.

The phrase "bring it on" is popular among those of this generation. It is a call to meet a challenge with everything you have. A popular teen movie by the same name features school cheerleader squads competing for a national title. One team is from a poor neighborhood, the other is affluent. The affluent team felt sorry for the poor team because they had trouble raising their money. The poor team however, was able to raise its own funds and accepted no charity or mercy as they rose to the challenge of the national competition. The poor girls in the movie only requested that the other teams "bring it on" when they came against them. They would only be true champions when they had beaten the best. Their fighting words were: "Bring it!"

When it comes to God, do we bring it? Do we serve him with everything we have? Do we give him our best without excuses, poor mouthing and complaining? Whether we do or not, that is exactly what God expects from us; nothing less than our best.

As Christians, we should resolve to "bring it" when it comes to God. If we sing in the choir, usher, preach or serve in a ministry we should never fail to "bring it on!" God is such a great God, we should give him nothing less.

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses giving instruction to Israel about the challenges that lay ahead.

The Book of Deuteronomy, which means the "second look," was written at the close of Moses' life. He gave advice to Israel to direct them through the remainder of the journey to the Promised Land. He also gave them warnings about challenges that would lie ahead.

The generation he addressed was mostly people who knew only the nomad life of the wilderness. There were some older men who knew about the Egyptian experience first hand, but most of them were born in the wilderness, during the nation's 40 years of wanderings. Throughout the book he repeated most of the laws and instructions he gave in the books of Exodus, Leviticus, and Numbers.

At the age of 120 Moses gave his last instruction to the people. He told them what to do to meet God's expectations once they entered the new land.

To meet God's expectations each man, woman and child was expected to live justly, worship God, live according to his law and to promote Godly purposes with everything they have in them.

Surely, great challenges lay ahead for them but they were admonished to meet the challenges head on with everything within them.

Giving their best effort is the meaning of that phrase in verse 12, "And to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul." The Living bible says,"And to love him, and to worship him with all your hearts and souls? "The Century Version says, "Love him. Serve the Lord your God with your whole being." The Message translates it this way, "Love him, serve God, your God, with everything you have in you."

When we approach the worship and service to God we should not do it half stepping, but should make every effort to bring every ounce of energy, talent and devotion to focus on building his kingdom.

Don't half step, bring it!

Youth should Bring it

Just as Moses spoke to the young generation in this text, God's message is the same to the young of this generation: "You will face challenges as you mature. As you face each one, don't half step, bring it on!"

BRING IT IN EDUCATION: This generation more than any other should be prepared to face the educational challenges ahead. The youth who heard Moses speak were about to face new challenges they had never experienced. They would be forced to till the land for the first time. They would also make clothing, forge weapons and build houses for the first time. It was all brand new to them, yet Moses said, approach the challenge with everything you have within you, "bring it." Education should rank high among youth priorities. Every young faces challenges similar to those of Israel. They will be participants in the Information age, whereas their parents were participants in the industrial age. Creating, managing, maintaining and manipulating information will be the educational challenge of the next generation. Reading will be a priority as technology makes great use of computers. Youth who cannot read, or do not read will find themselves on the bottom end of the tier as the best opportunities pass them by. Even worse, recent studies by the national program Project Read show that there is a connection between youth who cannot read and the tendency to become involved in criminal activity. It's staggering to consider that the average 15 year old in the criminal justice system reads at a 4th grade level or below. When it comes to education, youth should bring it! Students who score well on tests and earn high grades are also those who read well. The first step to reading well is to read more. Read anything: Comic strips, corn flake boxes, novels, newspapers, magazines; just read because reading is essential. Just reading what is required is half stepping. Just earning a high enough grade to pass, is half stepping. If this generation is going to tackle the challenge of education, bring it! Give it everything that you have!

BRING IT IN EXPECTATIONS: This generation should set high standards for itself, and expect to succeed. Each child born in the wilderness clearly expected to make it to the Promised Land. In contrast, their parents never expected anything more than to get out of slavery and wander in the wilderness until their death. Yet Moses told the young to prepare for the Promised Land to expect to get there! Two young men slipped over into Canaan and took a peek into the future. After seeing the Promised Land they never doubted that one day they would live in the land of their future. That should be the same resolve of youth today. Each youth should mentally take a peek into the Promised Land and see themselves in the future. Youth must begin to see themselves as successful men and women. They must envision themselves as professionals and workmen who achieve a level of success in their chosen areas. You will never become a doctor unless you can see yourself as a doctor! Unless you can visualize yourself in a courtroom, you will rarely become a lawyer. Unless you can see yourself running a large corporation with a large staff of employees, it will probably never happen. Jesse Jackson had it right, first your mind most conceives it, and your heart has to believe it, before you can achieve it. Raise your expectations.

Don't expect to be on welfare all of your lives, dream bigger and 'bring it!

Don't even dream about the "great day" when you'll be able to get your own welfare check; dream about the day you earn enough money to pay more in taxes than you earn in a year.

Dream big and bring it! Food Assistance is nice for an emergency, but you want the ability to buy your own 16 ounce steak, live in your own house and drive a car that you own!

Don't even dream about having your own food stamps one day!

You must expect great things and believe God's word in 1 Corinthians 2:9 "But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." Trust God, set high goals, accept nothing less and bring it!

BRING IT IN YOUR LIFESTYLE: God wanted Israel to be just and honest in their dealings and exemplary in their conduct. Many youth half step when it comes to their lifestyle. Many are half and half. They want to be Christians but they also want to be popular too. In quest of popularity, many youth have adopted a style of dress that's half and half. Half Christian, meaning modest, and half worldly. There are many that are half stepping when it comes to music, videos and literature. When around Christians they listen to Christian music and talk church talk. However, when around friends of the world they switch to their other side and become engrossed in some activities that are incompatible with the Christian life.

What does God expect? He expects every believer to live the Christian life with everything ounce of strength within them, not half and half, but all of the time! God expects young Christians to live among those of the Hip Hop generation but not be a part of any activities and styles that are inconsistent with his word. He clearly expects what he said in, Romans 12:2 "And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." It means that young Christians don't follow the crowd! We dress and talk like Christian ladies and gentlemen, recognizing that we are the only bible that some of our friends will ever see. When they see us, they should get a snap shot of godliness. If you are Christian, don't half step in your lifestyle, bring it! If you love the Lord, don't just love him on Sunday, everyday of the week, bring it!

Bring it in Worship

Finally, Moses told the Israelites that they should fear the Lord, Love the Lord, Serve the Lord and Walk in his ways!

Moses urged the Israelites not to half step on the Lord when it came to loving, obeying and praising him!

Too many adults and youth approach their relationship with God and his church with a "grain of salt." It is half stepping at best and "no stepping" at worse.

We are encouraged to fear the Lord. That means to respect him because he is a mighty God and there is no other like him. We should not partially respect him, but respect him all of time. When it comes to fear and respecting God, bring it on!

We should love the Lord because he first loved us. When we were too mean to love ourselves he loved us. That's what the song writer had in mind when he wrote, "Oh how I love Jesus, because he first loved me."

If we are going to love the Lord, let's bring it on! Don't just love him when things are going well, but when the storms of life are raging, bring it on!

We should serve the Lord and walk in his ways, because walking with the Lord is a safe walk through the valley of Baca and the mountains of distress and even through the valley of the shadow of death.

If you plan to walk the Christian road don't tip toe, but bring it on!

What does God expect? He expects us to "bring it!" He expects us to do our best and he'll take care of the rest!

God doesn't expect us to win, he expects us to "bring it", and do our best!

God doesn't expect us to be the champion, he expects us to bring it and give our own championship performance

God doesn't expect us to be first, he expects us to "bring it", to give everything we have in the pursuit of being first and when we have done our best, he is pleased.

God expects for us to never give up hope.

As long as God is still on the throne, if you are:

—Praying for Rain, you need to get your umbrella ready!

—Praying for bread, you need to grease the pan!

—Praying for a job, you need to get your resume ready!

Why? Because God is able!

God is able to take our:

—TROUBLES and turn them into triumphs!

—MISFORTUNES and turn them into good fortunes!

—STUMBLING BLOCKS and turn them into stepping stones!

—DEFEATS and turn them into successes!

—SET BACKS and turn them into step ups!

Jesus didn't just talk the talk, he walked the walke by showing us how to bring it!

The Devil challenged Job to continue serving God despite his hardships and Job answered, "Bring it on!"

In the wilderness the devil tempted Jesus three times. The devil threw down a challenge and Jesus picked it up, saying bring it on!

I know you will turn many people against me but bring it on!

I know you will cause men to whip me all night long, but bring it on!

I know you will allow them to put an old rugged cross on my shoulder, but bring it on.

I know they will drive nails in to my hands and feet, but bring it on!

I know you will put me in a borrowed tomb, but bring it on!

They crucified him, out on Calvary!

He died, for you and me, but early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his!

If Satan wants to mess with any who believe, I can' hear the Lord saying, "I died so that they might have a chance to live…

Bring it on!"

Publishing Our Thanks

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 8, 2005

SCRIPTURE: Psalm 26:7 That I may publish with the voice of thanksgiving, and tell of all thy wondrous works.

Introduction

Do you have a reason to be thankful? Has the Lord blessed you in a special way? When we stop to think about it, we have many reasons to give thanks because God has poured out both his bounty and mercy upon us. What would be the essence of our testimony? What would we say? We would have a lifetime of blessings, both seen and unseen, to talk about.

Thanksgiving requires a spirit of humility. Each person who gives thanks is keenly aware that all accomplishment is achieved apart from his/her works or deeds. No one can successfully give thanks if he/she secretly believes that there is nothing for which they owe a debt of gratitude. Thanks, by its very nature, recognizes the fallibility of human effort without godly assistance. Having received blessings, those who are aware of their inability to achieve on their own, feel compelled to give thanks because it acknowledges the need for a higher power.

There are many who approach God and his blessings in the manner of the cartoon character Bart Simpson. In one episode Bart is shown at the table preparing to eat the Thanksgiving meal. When he was asked to give the blessing over the meal Bart was reluctant. He did not feel the blessing was necessary but decided to comply with the request. So he began his prayer this way, 'Dear Lord I don't understand why I should thank you for the hard earned food on this table that we had to buy,we had to cook and we had to put on the table. It seems like we should be thanking ourselves. Amen' The Simpson family was needless to say, speechless.

A popular commercial emphasizes the importance of Thank You. In a variety of stressful situations instead of arguing and fighting everyone simply says "Thank You." In the commercial the power of a simple thanks is demonstrated. Years ago there was a popular television program called Captain Kangaroo. The Captain always taught the children who watched the show about the value of saying please and thank you, which the Captain called, 'Magic words.' Even though it was a children's show, the truth about thankfulness is nevertheless true. It is good to have a spirit of gratitude every day.

A simple thanks is amplified when it is made known to others. Good news is contagious. When others see a great work done they join in the chorus of people who give praise to the source. The same is true with God. As those who have been blessed raise their voices in thanks, the sense of gratitude that they display spreads to others.

As Christians, we are not ashamed to tell those that we know about the goodness of the Lord. We see what he has done for us and we know what he can do for others, so we gladly publish his good works everywhere we go.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he gives six characteristics that are unique to the righteous.

In verses 1-2 he notes that the righteous are usually open to examination. Before God their lives are open books.

In verse 3 obedience is highlighted. David notes that he has tried to walk in the truths of the Lord consistently.

In verses 4-6 David reflects on his general victory over the efforts of the wicked to influence his life in favor of living the Godly life.

In verses 9-10 he reiterates his desire not to be obstructed or frustrated by the wicked schemes of the ungodly.

In verses 11-12 he restates his desire to walk in the steps of the Lord with integrity.

The text focus is on verses 7-8 in which David declares that God has been so good to the righteous that they should declare and publish his good works for everyone to see and hear of his greatness. Accordingly, he says that believers should let the world know that they love the Lord and they love the indwelling of his spirit in their lives daily.

Thanks Begets More Blessings

Thanks gives rise to more acts of kindness, and more acts of kindness only bring more thanks.

When we show our gratitude for a kindness, it promotes more kindness. On the contrary, ingratitude does just the opposite. Mark Otero tells the story of a farm family's attitude of gratitude about its lifesaving pig. It appears that a woman was visiting some people who lived on a farm, and she noticed a pig limping in the backyard with a wooden leg. She asked the farmer, "What happened to the pig?" The farmer said, "Oh, Betsy is a wonderful pig. One night the house caught fire and she oinked so loud she woke us and we got the fire truck in time to save the house." The woman said, "That's really something!" The farmer continued, "That's not all, one day my youngest fell in the pond and Betsy oinked so loud that she got our attention and we were able to pull my daughter out of the pond in time." The woman said, "That's really amazing! But I still don't understand why the pig has a wooden leg. The farmer said, "Well, when you have a pig that special, you don't want to eat him all at once!" -Gratitude didn't run deep for the three legged pig.

When gratitude does run deep however, it usually spawns more acts of kindness.

There are some who show gratitude for every kind act. As a result people are always falling over themselves to do something else nice for them. The same is true with God. Those who are truly grateful often find that he constantly rewards their gratitude with more acts of kindness.

What to give thanks for

Often we thank God for physical blessings, but we should also thank him for the unseen spiritual blessings of salvation, heavenly promise and peace of mind. This spirit of thanksgiving is supported in scripture. The verb 'to give thanks' occurs thirty-eight times and the noun 'thanksgiving' another fifteen times in the New Testament. The Word of God makes it clear that it is very important to give thanks.

Sometimes there is the thought of thanks for spiritual blessings. Thus we find that when Jesus began the service of Holy Communion he gave thanks for the bread and the wine (Matt. 26:27; Luke 22:17,19). Paul gave thanks for spiritual blessing (Rom. 7:25).

What religious blessings do you have for which you should give God thanks?

But we should also be thankful for blessings concerning the things of this life. Jesus gave thanks before a meal (Matt. 15:36). And when he healed ten men who had leprosy and only one came back to thank him, Jesus asked where the others were (Luke 17:15-18). He expected people to be thankful for good things. Paul spoke of some foolish people who among other things did not give thanks to God (Rom. 1:21). He himself was ready to see God's hand in all sorts of happenings and he thanked God when he came to Rome as a prisoner and some Christians met him (Acts 28:15).

We give God thanks for seen and the unseen.

We thank him for the greens and butter beans, but we also thank him for being able to sleep soundly at night.

We thank him for turkey and dressing, but we also thank him for dressing our souls with his grace.

We thank him for fried chicken, rice and a little gravy, but we should also thank him for spiritual gravy: Joy, love, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, faith, meekness, and temperance.

We thank him for cars, houses and color T.V. but we should also thank him for coloring our lives with faith and hope because they help us to see the world in a different light.

In essence, we should keep the admonition in mind, "In everything, give thanks."

We Should Publish our thanks

Finally, Brothers and sisters, we should Let the world know how good God has been to us.

The text uses the word Publish which immediately brings to mind the various types of media in our world today. The text seems to say that we should be ready to broadcast it around the world or to use any means at our disposal.

Moses published the first words from God written on tablets of stone. He published over 600 laws on scrolls made of papyrus. The laws of God told his people what he expected from them and what they should expect from him.

God published the first five books of the bible, through the hand of Moses. He told of the great work of creation and his blessing of life to the world.

But now it's our turn.

Every believer can write a book on the goodness of the Lord!

In chapter 1 We'd have to talk about how he blessed us through dangers seen and unseen.

In chapter 2 We'd have to tell the world how he picked us up and turned us around!

In chapter 3 We'd have to tell how he healed our bodies, cooled scorching fevers and eased excruciating pain.

In Chapter 4 We'd have to talk about how he blessed us with a few material blessings and expanded our territories.

In Chapter 5 We'd have to tell how we strayed away in sin and he accepted us back again; and kept right on blessing us!

In Chapter 7 We'd have yo tell the world how much he loved the world. He loved it like John said, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son so that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life. (John 3:16)

To make sure the world gets the message, we'd have to set up an instant message on the internet; publish a web page, and send a direct call over our satellite based cell phone!

We have to tell the world about his goodness!

We have to tell somebody that he is bread when you are hungry!

We have to tell somebody that he is a shelter in a time of storm!

We have to tell somebody that he is our lawyer in a courtroom!

—Our doctor in a sickroom!

—Our bridge over troubled water!

His name is Jesus!

—The Son of the Living God!

—The Lily of the Valley!

—The Bright and Morning Star!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead with all power in his hand!

Go, tell it on the mountain! Over the hills and everywhere!

Tell them that he is able!

Yes, able!

Able!

Delivered into The hands of the Lord

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty. Exodus 1:20

Introduction

What were the circumstances of your birth? Were you born in a hospital or in a private home? When your mother delivered you was she assisted by a doctor or were there others? We have heard countless family stories of strange births under very peculiar circumstances. We've heard of babies born in the back seats of cabs, in elevators and on the sofas of their living rooms. In African-American circles our history is filled with the accounts of thousands of babies born who were delivered not by doctors or nurses but by a small army of sainted women known as midwives.

Among the heroes of African-American history is the Black midwife. A midwife does more than just deliver babies, especially among the poorest of our people. The midwife is close by or present at every birth, whether at home or in a hospital. She is a constant presence who touches the life of every family. She is usually gentle but can get a little cantankerous. Before many of our people had access to hospital and professional medical care, the midwife was usually the first and main contact of expectant mothers during her pregnancy, and throughout her labor and postnatal period.

For thousands of poor Black women the midwife is a deliverer. These mothers see her as an extension of God's own hand, reaching out and touching them in their time of need. It is not unusual for midwives to have a little talk with God before a delivery. Neither is it unusual for them to talk to God in mumbling undertones as they pray to God for help in difficult situations.

Many midwives feel they have one responsibility and that is to deliver a new life by helping a mother before her pains come, during her pain, and after her delivery. She often gets her greatest reward when she delivers a newborn into the welcomed arms of its mother.

The life we celebrate here today is one of a long line of midwifes who came to America from countless villages on the continent of Africa. There midwives were revered, loved and depended on by the entire village. The Grand-midwives taught the apprentice midwife the traditional rituals of womanhood, childbearing and family care. These sacred rituals included prayer, homage and respect for the ancestors, massage, and preparation of food, breastfeeding, postpartum care and much more. As the pilgrims came to America, so did the first Black lay midwife came to America in 1619. She brought with her a knowledge of health and healing based on her African background.

Today, we celebrate the life of a woman who has delivered countless babies into the loving hands of waiting mothers over the course of her career. She learned her skills the hard way, watching and observing and cloning the skills of her mentors. God used her hands to deliver new life into waiting arms.

Those were difficult times when mothers had a home remedy for every ailment and folks counted on God to deliver them through hard times on the wings of advice from aged seniors who were guided more by the power of God than by formal medical training.

When our friend began her ministry it was against a backdrop of self help and reliance on the Lord that delivered them from certain death and destruction. The midwife did more than deliver babies. She became a counselor and home economist. She was an advisor to mothers in every way of life that would help them lead lives that were healthy and close to God.

Under the guidance of older saints and midwives, young mothers learned how to survive.

Without a college degree in business administration, mothers were taught how to turn a sugar bowl, mattress and handkerchief into their own Savings and Loan Association, saving for rainy days. It didn't pay any interest, but God supplied the grace!

Long before mama got a chance to worry about the health of her children, God had already completed the diagnosis and the prognosis and sent help on the way!

It seemed that the old midwives knew what to do about everything; much more than just delivering babies.

If a child had a fever, a little Sal hepatica around the neck would drive the fever away. In the cold of winter, a table spoon of Castor oil every other day, kept the doctor away! If there was a splinter in a foot, it was nothing that a little fat salt meat and the Lord couldn't handle!

Long before mama started to worry about what her children would wear, God took the needle and thread of heaven and threw out Tommy Hilfiger and gave them clothes by mommy and His finger!

Somebody remembers how mama would break out the old Singer sewing machine with the foot paddle on the floor or use a needle, thread and a thimble to make the girls dresses out of left over materials, but the left home they looked like they had step out of a Sears Roebuck catalog!

Long before mama had a chance to worry about how she would feed her children, the Lord had prepared a table for her in the presence of her enemies.

The Lord showed mama how to take the scraps and turn them into gourmets. It was only the hand of the Lord that could take bread crumbs and turn them into dressing. It was only the hand of the Lord that could that show mama how to bake possums and coons in giant pans surrounded by candied yams.

Only the hand of the Lord could show mama how to pickle a pig's feet, fill a stack of Mason jars full of canned peaches and pears and call them home made preserves!

Yes, Midwives did more than deliver babies; they did everything to deliver new life into a mother's waiting arms.

Exposition

This text focuses on the blessing received by midwives in Egypt when they were obedient to God.

The Exodus account tells of the Hebrew midwives Shiphrah and Puah, as they were instructed by the Pharaoh to kill the male children born to Hebrew women. Listening to the voice of God and refusing to kill the first-born sons of the Hebrews as Pharaoh had ordered, the midwives were responsible for the delaying a massive slaughter of children long enough for one chosen child to escape in a basket and grew up to be the promised deliverer of the people.

Verse 17 says their actions resulted in saving the lives of the male children. As a result of their obedience to the voice of God, verse 20 says, God dealt well with the midwives themselves and the people multiplied.

Biblical midwives were never rich people. In fact they were often considered a lowly but respected class. They didn't have much were accorded special privileges not enjoyed by others. While other Hebrews were prohibited from working on the Sabbath or even traveling, the Law of Moses exempted midwives, who were permitted to travel well beyond the allowed distance because of their special status. Despite the special traveling status they were still considered low.

Even in this low state, God dealt "well" with them. One way God blessed them is pointed out in verse 21, "he made them houses." "Houses" in this context does not mean that he build dwellings for them, but he blessed them with a large number of descendants themselves. "He dealth well with them."

She Delivered Life into Waiting Arms

A great midwife is remembered for the result of her life's work: she delivered life into waiting arms. In the course of his life's work a midwife helps families by playing a variety of roles, all of which are necessary to deliver life into waiting arms. For many, the calling was a ministry and a calling from God and they often moved and made split second decisions guided by little more than years of experience and the whispering voice of an almighty God.

BEFORE THE PAINS COME: Before a mother has her first pain, the midwife is there insisting that mothers take care of themselves. Even today, there is still a need for prenatal care in the African-American community. We need to hear the voice of experience warning mothers against smoking and drinking, especially while expecting. We need the voice of the old warriors to stir young expectant mothers toward regular clinical care and help. In the bible it was done before a mother's pains come. Today, we still need that strong and experienced voice to guide a new generation to healthy deliveries.

WHEN THE PAINS COME: When a mother delivers, the midwife is there if no one else is available. Not only is she there for the physical pain of birth but she is also there for the painful adjust to being a mother, especially for the first time. Today, many mothers need the help of the experience mothers to help guide them through that difficult period of adjustment. It's a painful period of 2 a.m. feedings, lost sleep and feelings of inadequacy. Only a person sent from God can help deliver a mother from such a painful and anguishing adjustment. Today, we still need those strong voices to tell us what we should do without fear…especially when the pains come.

AFTER THE PAINS ARE GONE: Though many do not know it, the midwife does not disappear after a baby is born. Often the midwife stays in contact with a mother in a unique bonded relationship that works in partnership with health and social care services to help meet each mother's individual need. These needs include the socially excluded mother, the disabled mother and mothers from diverse ethnic backgrounds. After the pains are gone, often the midwives become the voice of God, delivering them from a dizzying experience; showing them the way out.

Delivered into the Hand of the Lord

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must recognize that while a sainted midwife may deliver new life into waiting arms, there will come a time when her own life must be delivered safely into the arms of God.

No matter how long a person serves a ministry, there comes a time when she realizes that her time is drawing near.

The prophet Elijah sensed that his time was drawing near. He began to walk toward the destination in which he would move from this life into the next. When the time came he moved instantly from this life into the next, aboard a mighty fiery chariot.

Enoch walked with God all of his life, sharing intimate thoughts and dreams. One day at the close of his life, his family looked for him and he was gone. The bible says he "was not" because he walked with God.

The Apostle Paul said in 2 Timothy 4:6-7, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith"

I am ready!

After a long a fruitful life and hundreds of babies delivered, I'm ready!

After birth my own children, and grand children, and great grandchildren, I'm ready!

I have lived the Christian Life for nearly a century I'm am ready!

I have confessed my belief in Jesus Christ as my personal Lord and Savior. I am ready!

I have worshipped and praised you when I was young and in my golden years. I am ready!

I have delivered crying babies into waiting arms, to glorify for your greatness, Now I am ready!

I have testified to your goodness and everywhere I have glorified your name. I am ready!

I have told the world that Jesus died on the cross, but he arose from the dead and is alive today

Now, I'm ready!

I'm ready!

I have delivered others to new life, I am ready to begin my new life!

I'm ready to be delivered into the hands of a Loving God.

A City Which Hath Foundations

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 17, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Hebrews 11:10

Introduction

What do you call home? The house in which you live? A certain city? Your family? At one time or another, we have referred to each of these as home. Sometimes the terms are interchangeable but they do not always mean the same. A house is not a home; a house is where a home lives. A city is not really a home; it's a place where you reside; and if it's the place of your upbringing we usually refer to it as home. Even a family household is not home if congenial conditions do not exist.

Simply put, a home is wherever love is.

Every community has a home builders association. It specializes in buying and selling houses. They say "home" because home has a better ring to it than "house builders associations;" then they would sound like contractors. If the home builders association was to advise us on building homes, then certainly they must advise us to build the home before we build the house.

The key to building a good home is to build it on a strong foundation. The best homes are those that are built on the principles of God's word; they stand when all others falter.

Many are confused on this subject.

They call it a home, but it's actually a residence. A residence is where we reside for a short time. There are some people who have more than one residence; only one of which is their home.

Some have an address. An address is a place to receive mail. They are rarely present, never participate in the life of the home and only stay long enough to pick up their mail and leave.

Some have a domicile. A domicile is the legal place of residence. It's the legal address.

It's possible to have a domicile, a residence and two houses and still not have a home.

Home is where love is.

In a strange way, a saint is like all of the above. The saint resides on earth in a principal domicile called a body, gets mail at an address that he knows is just a temporary residence.

That saint has a home but his home is not in this city or any city on this earth. He has a home in a city that has foundations, that is made by the hands of God.

As Christians, we rejoice in knowing that Jesus is preparing a home for us. When we get there, "what a day of rejoicing that will be." That's the joy we'll share when we get home.

Exposition

The text focuses on Abraham's search for a place to call home.

Hebrews 11 focuses on the matter of believers living by faith. It cites the faith of many of the Patriarchs of the bible as it shows that even the first believers operated often on faith alone.

Verse 10 zeros in on the belief of all Jews in the Diaspora that God is an architect or a builder of the world as referred to in Hebrews 3:4. Their life quest was to find the great city of God on earth. The Ancient philosopher Philo saw heaven as the "mother city" that is designed and constructed by God. The general belief was that somewhere on earth, if men lived right, a replica of the "Mother City" could be created.

Some saw the city of Jerusalem itself as that city. Others, especially the new Christians saw the "New Jerusalem" of the Book of Revelation as the city of God for the future age.

Whether in the Old Testament or the New Testament, scripture ties the final destiny of believers to a city made by God, a place they could finally call home.

A particular characteristic of the City of God is identified by five words in the text, "a city which hath foundations."

The phrase seems to suggest something special about the foundations. The foundations of any building are important; because if they are weak the building will ultimately sway, like the leaning tower of Pisa.

The place that Christians want to call home is a city, built on a strong foundation that can stand the storms of life and the tests of time. Jesus referred to such a house in a parable of two men. One built his house upon the sand and another upon a rock. When the storm came, the house built upon the sand sank. However the house built on the rock stood.

So it is with the Christian traveler, he too is looking for a place to call home; many lives like great cities have been built, but not on strong foundations.

Without Foundation many have fallen

The church is built upon 12 foundations which stand high among all of its intrinsic beliefs they are: Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, obedience, and trust.

When the church stands on the word of God which is the embodiment of these beliefs, it is invincible. It becomes a city built by God. It becomes a City which hath foundation.

We have seen cities in history that were grand and noble but had no foundation. Despite their splendor, these great cities have risen but have fallen into ruins. Their fall brings greater meaning to the five words of this text, "a city which hath foundations."

These five words point us to six legendary cities that were great but had no foundations; if they had a place in reality at all.. When we see them, then we understand why Abraham might have passed them by just as he did pass by many of the cities on the plains.

BABYLON: Babylon, the great was one of the great cities of the bible. We know it as the city of Nebuchadnezzar and Beltshazzar. We know it because it renowned for its beauty and grandeur, its hanging gardens and its architectural splendor. Yet Babylon was a city without foundation. It laughed at the true God and it became known as the place where the hand of God wrote an epitaph on the wall. "Your days are numbered." A young man named Alexander the Great marched through Babylon and began its great fall. By 141 BC Babylon the great was just a memory; gone from the face of the world.

ATLANTIS: Atlantis was a legendary ancient island, whose existence and location have never been confirmed. The first mentions we have are from the classical Greek philosopher Plato, who said that it was destroyed by possibly an earthquake or tsunami about 9,000 years before his own time. The Greeks, the Romans, and the Europeans wrote about this beautiful island city fabled to be paradise on earth. Jules Verne wrote a book called "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" in which his characters visited Atlantis. Even J.R. Tolkien made references to it in his book "The Lord of the Rings."- Whether or myth or fact, all agree that even the Atlantis of the legend does not exist anymore.

CAMELOT: Camelot is the name of the stronghold of the legendary King Arthur, from which he fought many of the battles that made up his life. When we think of Camelot we think of Knights such as Sir Lancelot and King Arthur himself. Where is Camelot? Its specific location is currently unknown some doubt whether it ever existed at all although it is described as many days' journey from Avalon. Despite its legendary grandeur, high protective walls and promise, Camelot no longer exists, if it ever existed at all. In Modern times the election of John F. Kennedy as president of the United States was said to be a period of promise in which the young president promised "Camelot" to America. The period was ended by Kennedy's tragic assassination, which is often compared to the fall of King Arthur. The line "Don't let it be forgot, that once there was a spot, for one brief shining moment that was known as Camelot" from the musical 'Camelot', has been used in pop culture to refer to this period.-

MEMPHIS: Memphis (Egypt) was the largest city of ancient Egypt. When we think of Memphis we think of the children of Israel in bondage and of Ramses II the great pharaoh of the bible. Memphis was a sprawling city of 30,000 with pyramids and great stone buildings. Yet in 641 the great city of Memphis was abandoned. The surrounding cities dragged its great stones away to form their own cities and towns.. Today, Memphis is nothing but ruins.

TROY: The city of Troy is the city of great legends which have been passed down by the ancient writer Homer in the Odyssey. When we think of Troy we think of the legendary wars that were fought over one woman, Helen of Troy. The name of Achilles, the invincible hero who died from an arrow to his heel immediately comes to mind. Troy was deemed invincible until the Greeks brought in a large wooden horse as a gift, came inside their walls and destroyed the city. Nine times Troy was rebuilt, but even these great efforts could not sustain it. Today it is only ruins.

POMPEII: Pompeii was a beautiful city that prospered as a sea passage. Despite the education of its populous, Pompeii remained loyal to the goddess of fire and rejected the almighty. On August the birthday of the goddess of fire, the city was shaken by a giant earthquake. It had withstood earthquakes before; but it was not ready for both an earthquake and a Tsunami at the same time. The city was buried under tons of ash and fire and since has been the subject of movies and archeological studies.

Strong foundations

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must stick with the church because it is the New Jerusalem, a city with foundations.

Abraham spent his life looking for a city with foundations but he never found it because, the city is not yet complete but is taking shape day by day.

The word tells us that each believer is a living stone in that city. It is built on a sure foundation, which is the word of God.

Every city is built on something, but we need to be sure we build on a sure foundation.

Those who built the great fallen cities of the world built them on something. At the time of their construction they were not the loose constructions of idiots. They were built on something, but what motivated them to grow and keep growing was not based on belief and the teachings of the living God.

They had no sure foundation and today many of the great cities of the past are but mere ruins crumbled in a way Spurgeon says resembles mounds of sand crumbled by children with wooden spades.

We can only conclude that they were not cities with foundations of faith strong enough to sustain them in difficult times and powerful enough to propel them to rebuild after turbulences

Abraham moved about from place to place looking for a city that was made by the hands of God.

What was this city?

It could not have been Bethel. Although Bethel was a well constructed city important in biblical history. It was named by Jacob one night after he had a dream of a ladder reaching up to heaven. But Bethel was a place where Golden calves were built and idol worship flourished. It was a city not made by the hands of God.

It could not have been Bethlehem. Bethlehem was certainly an important city. It was the birth place of David and the birth place of Christ. It was the home of Ruth and place of the anointing of the king of Israel. But Bethlehem was razed by the Roman army 200 years after Christ. It was a beautiful city whose foundations have been destroyed. It was not a city made by the hands of God.

It could not have been Sodom and Gomorrah? They were the twin cities of the plain. Known for their industry and commercial importance. But they were cesspools of immorality and homosexuality and were destroyed by God with fire that rained down from heaven. They were not cities made by the hands of God.

It could not have been Jericho. It was a powerful city surrounded by large walls that defended it against enemies. But its walls were destroyed by Israel led by Joshua who marched around them 7 times and blew trumpets at the command of God. It was not a city built by the hand of God.

Where is the city?

John said "I saw a new heaven and a new earth...and I saw the holy city New Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven prepared as a bride adorned for her husband."

It's a city not made by the hands of men!

It's a city with not one foundation but 12 foundations!

It's a city with 12 gates!

It's a city that measures 1500 miles with 300 foot walls

In its center stands the tree of life which produced fruit every month of the year and whose leaves were good for the healing of the nations!

I'm looking for a city! A city called heaven!

That will be a great homecoming day!

Until then I've decided to stay with the church because it's a city that have foundations! It is built upon a rock!.

No wonder the song writer declared, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the Solid Rock I stand all other ground is sinking sand. All other ground is sinking sand."

Until I get there I'm going to keep on telling the story!

I'm going tell them about Jesus, who said "I go to prepare a place for you"

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose early Sunday morning!

I'm going to stay with the church because it is a city which hath foundations!

No. 9153-Youth

Age Ain't Nothing But A Number

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 24, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." 1 Timothy 4:12

How old is too old? How young is too young? That question has been the focus of discussion for generations. There never seems to be a clear definition in any society about what age is the right age. For youth the question of "When am I old enough?" gets to be a real issue. The answer is usally, "When you are old enough." While many youth are looking for a specific number such as 15 or 16, they are frustrated when those birthdays come and parents still have not loosened the reins any. That's when they learn that while age is a measure of many things, when it comes to maturity; age ain't nothing but a number.

Life would be easy if we could say specifically that every stage of life begins and ends at a certain age, then there would be more clarity. As it is, the best we can do is guess about expected levels of maturity. Sometimes those guesses are correct, often they are inaccurate but nevertheless etched in stone.

For that reason many have begun to ignore specific numbers; a practice which often gets them in trouble with society. Carleen Brice, in her book, "Age aint nothing but a number" details the attitudes of middle aged Blacks who reflect upon their perceptions of the world, life and beyond after reaching middle age. Those in the middle age like to believe they still have "it" and disregard their age.

The Late singer, "Aaliyah" had a hit song by the name of "Age ain't nothing but a number." It questioned the difference in age between herself and a prospective lover. She published the song in 1994 when she was 15. She married singer R. Kelly, her producer, at age 15 but told him she was 18. After the news broke, her parents had the marriage annulled. As far as her parents and the courts were concerned, age was more than just a number.

Both youth and adults have trouble figuring out what's too old, and what's old enough?

While an adult has a freedom to hear and speak his peace at age 18, a child does not have all the rights to free speech, assembly and movement as an adult. Age is more than just a number.

Mick Jagger of the Rolling Stones is 62 years old and still the king of Rock, for him age is just a number.

At age 13 Michelle Wie of Hawaii became the youngest golfer to win the US. Amatuer Golfer's Publinx. At age 15, this year, she became the first female golfer to qualify in the U.S. Men's tournament. For Michelle Wie, age ain't nothing but a number.

In some places age is more than just a number; it's the law. In Louisiana a 15 year old can get a learner's driving permit and a 16 year old can drive but can't own a car. Age is not just a number, it's the law.

A person under 16 cannot work in a factory, workshop or a construction site. A person under 13 can't work in a restuarant or a grocery store. A 14 year old can't work without a permit; Age is not just a number, it's the law.

At age 12 you can't watch a movie where people get killed, but it's OK to watch animals with the voices of people die violently. At age 13 with your parents to guide you, you can watch people get killed and participate in heavy kissing in movies.

At age 17 you can watch a movie without your parents where people have sex, curse and get killed.

An angry parent can cause legal problems for that high school senior who gets too personal with a freshman; or that college student who gets a kick out of dating young high school girls. In all of these cases age is more than just a number, it's the law.

The age maze is not just a frustration of teenagers.

At age 30 you can manage a million dollar corporation but you can't be president of the United States until you are 35.

At age 20, if you are attracted to a 50 year old wealthy man you are a gold digger.

There are 31 states that consider a child grown at 18; Montana and Nebraska say 19; Hawaii is age 20.

You can go to prison at 17, sign a contract at 18; but aren't fully recognized as "grown" until you're 21.

At age 60 if you are attracted to a 25 year old beautiful woman you are a dirty old man.

At age 50, although you've lived a half century, you're still too young to get a senior citizen's discount

. At age 65 you can get the senior citizens discount but then you find it difficult to buy insurance on your life, health or even your automobile.

George Bush the senior jumped out of an airplane in his 70's, John Glen went back into space well into his senior years and body builder Jack Leland is still on television showing people how to be physically fit in his 90's. When people ask them how they continue at their age, they say, "Age ain't nothing but a number."

But there are some areas that are not amusing. We watched in horror the recent accounts of the 23 year old Florida teacher who had sex with a 14 student in the back of her SUV, in a school classroom and in her apartment. We watched in disbelief as a 30 year old teacher went to jail for her romance with a 15 year old; then after serving several years in prison married the boy young enough to be her son. Often we cover up cases of students and teachers getting intimate, if those involved are well liked in the community; but they happen every day. It's obvious that age is more than just a number.

When we look at the confusing maze of expectations that change regularly, the line is often blurred between what is acceptable and what is not. Each community seems to have its own standard.

Other than intimacies between adults and children, other age differentials seem to depend heavily upon maturity. Rather than citing a specific age, many are moving toward evaluating youth maturity as a guide to whether young people are given certain privileges and responsibilities.

Maturity does not come with a specific age; it is demonstrated by youth who show the adults around them that they can make responsible and wise choices and exercise discipline and integrity when acting alone.

As Christians, our goal is to demonstrate Christian values in our daily lives. Regardless of our age, we show God on a daily basis that we have disciplined ourselves to live by his law and show him gratitude for our blessings. When God decides whom he will bless, he sees only obedient children. When it comes to whom he chooses to bless, age ain't nothing but a number.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's instructions to young Timothy to prove himself despite his age and not be intimidated by those who would despise or discount his youth.

It is believed that Timothy was in his late 20's or early 30's at the time of this writing. He was being prepared to carry on the work of Paul who was nearing the end of his preaching career.

In biblical times only the elderly were considered wise enough to teach others or lead in spiritual matters. In the ancient world, age was respected and equated with wisdom. Years of living was thought to have given an elder insight that comes with his years. While Timothy had physical strength and sharpness of mind, Paul knew he would find it difficult to be successful without the benefit of age. Wrinkles and white hair associated with authority is what he needed and did not have.

In ancient times a person was expected to be 40-60 years old before being qualified to understand and counsel which explains why young Timothy may have been hesitant.

What is significant here is that Paul introduces new criteria by which we evaluate the ability to assume responsibility before God. Is not age, but character.

Ways maturity is reflected

While maturity is not always reflected by a specific age, the Apostle Paul does present four measures of maturity for young people. In his advice to Timothy he listed the following maturity measures in verse 12:

WORD. Generally, one of the highest measures of a person is the value of their word. The way we honor our "word" says volumes about us. When we make a commitment do we keep it? If we take on an obligation, do we follow through? Can we be trusted to not knowingly tell a lie? Young people demonstrate at early ages their level of maturity by the way they keep their word to their parents and guardians. Those around them learn very quickly whether they can be counted on or whether they say things they never intend to do. All of our childhood is spent learning the importance of our "Word." Wise parents are careful about giving their "word" to their children. They teach the importance of promises and commitments by their own example. In the bible, once a man gave his word, it was irrevocable. It was done. A man or woman who honors his word shows the first mark of maturity, regardless of his age.

CONVERSATION: The second mark of spiritual maturity, involves our conversation and general deportment. No matter what we say, our actions speak louder than our words. Our deportment is a peep hole to our souls that reveal hidden character secrets. The kinds of words we use, what we make jokes about, what we discuss, the way we dress, walk and talk, all reveal our level of maturity. The way we carry ourselves, to a large extent, reflects our spiritual maturity. A spiritually mature Christian is aware that we are charged to "walk circumspect fully." That means we must walk and talk in ways that avoid even the appearance of evil. We are ambassadors of Christ 24/7. This awareness does not come at a certain age in life; it comes when the Holy Spirit has awakened in a sensitivity within us that puts the demands of the cross ahead of our own. When we reach that level, parents, friends and acquaintances instantly see a change in our conversation and our daily walk.

PURE MOTIVES: Paul lists four virtues that indicate the maturity of our motives. Charity, Spirit, faith and purity, combined indicate another level of our spiritual maturity. These four govern how and why we act. Charity refers to love and compassion. Spirit refers to divine guidance. Faith refers to trust in God; and purity refers to our desire to do right. These four virtues acting together reveal a person who is mature, often beyond their age. They reflect the youth who takes the initiative to help, assist out of love, lead by the power of God, trusting in God continuously with only the purest of motives. Even simpler put, it describes the youth who cleans the house on their own initiative out of love and respect for their parents who work hard to provide for them. They have no other motive for doing so, no secret agenda but they do so because it is their way of showing love and support for the family. This level of maturity reflects the youth who trusts God to guide them and is led by his spirit daily. This maturity level is not given to a certain age, but it is obvious to parents and friends when it has been reached.

No certain age to praise him

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that there is no certain age to begin praising the Lord. When it comes to praising the Lord, age ain't nothing but a number.

Neither is there a set age that we should start living the Godly life.

Don't let anybody tell you that you are too young to know anything about the Lord.

There are many young Christians who know a whole lot about the Lord. In fact, there are some young people who are more spiritually mature than their parents.

The Christian youth may be young, but many are maturing rapidly in the faith.

The Christian youth is an example in Christian conversation in the words they use and jokes they tell.

The Christian youth is willing to volunteer to help others out of love without asking "what am I going to get out of it?"

The Christian youth is guided by what they have learned about God from Sunday school, bible study and personal devotion.

When it comes to living the Godly life, age ain't nothing but a number!

When it comes to praising God for his goodness, age ain't nothing but a number!

A youth who is five doesn't have to wait until he's 75 to praise God for being a good God. When it comes to giving thanks, age ain't nothing but a number.

Whether you are nine or 99, you can go to God in prayer, and he will answer. When it comes to prayer, age ain't nothing but a number.

Whether you are six or 46, God can make a way out of no way. When it comes to getting God to make a way for you, age ain't nothing but a number.

Whether you are eight or 38, God can save and he can heal. When it comes to asking God for a healing, age ain't nothing but a number!

Somebody said, David, you can't fight Goliath, you are just a kid. David told them that the Lord had helped fight lions and bears and the Lord would help him defeat Goliath.

Somebody said Samuel was too young to be a prophet, but I can hear Samuel answering, "I was sleeping and heard the voice of God calling and I said, Speak Lord your servant hears!"

Somebody said Jesus what are you doing in the temple listening to the teachers, you're just 12 years old, and Jesus said, "It's time for me to be about my father's business."

No matter what your age, you should be willing to tell somebody about Jesus!

When it comes to testifying, age ain't nothing but a number!

When it comes to telling the world about his wonder working power, age ain't nothing but a number!

Tell them how he lived and tell them how he died!

Tell them how they buried him in a borrowed tomb!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from that grave with all power in his hands!

Tell them….

No. 9154-Love

A Language That God Understands

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 31, 2005

SCRIPTURE: Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not love, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.; And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is love. 1 Corinthians 13:1;13

Introduction

Have you ever talked to someone and concluded that they did not understand a word you said? We often feel that we have spoken a million words to our spouses, parents or associates, but not a single word has been understood. Often we get angry with them and accuse them of not listening. Is it possible that they heard what we said but failed to understand it because it was spoken in a different language?

A language is a system of communicating thoughts and feelings through one of three ways: Voice sounds, gestures or written symbols. There are 6912 known languages in the world today. Even among the 6912 languages there are thousands of dialects or variations of each known language. Communication is extremely difficult between people of different nationalities, cultures, races or dialects if those who are attempting to communicate do not speak the same language.

Communication is sometimes frustrating. Often people of the same nationality and race find it difficult to communicate with each other because they do not speak the same language. The words of one generation mean something different to those of another generation. The expressions of one culture are not interpreted the same in another culture. To communicate effectively therefore, those who are seeking to be understood or heard must speak the same language.

We have seen this principle in effect in our own experience. A classroom teacher soon learns that students in her class respond to her differently. While one student in the class responds to a gentle touch and a word of encouragement and can be disciplined by simply expressing disappointment at their deviant behavior; that method will not work for another student in the class who does not understand the language of gentleness. There are some who only understand when the teacher is able to communicate in the language that they know.

There are some parents and grand parents that speak with body language. A frowning eye from a stern grandmother can pin a child to his seat. A raised finger and a tilt of the head for others sends a message that many children understanding clearly. They know how to read grandmother's body language.

There are many marriages that experience difficulty because husbands and wives do not speak the same language. One speaks the language of action the other the language of words. One partner is a doer and is frustrated because the other does not "do" back. The other party speaks the language of talk and revelation and is frustrated because the other does not talk back.

Politicians take polls to learn what's on the mind of the people, when they make speeches they learn to talk their language. It's often hard to talk to politicians unless you have learned the language of polls, votes, public opinion and re-election; its' the only language many seem to understand.

Sometimes there are differences between the pulpit and the pew when they don't speak the same language.

Parents and children often have difficulties, especially when parents can't seem to understand the language necessary to communicate with their children or when children have not learned how to speak the language that their parents understand.

Sometime ago there was considerable controversy in the African American community concerning whether or not it was proper for educators to use what was known as Ebonics to communicate with many students in a language they understood as they were taught the essentials that they needed for survival in the greater world.

Even those who have perfected the gift of language often find that while they can speak the language of others they still have difficulty making the parties understand what they mean. Thus, those who have the gift of interpreting a language are needed. These special people have the gift not only of telling you what was said but also to make sure that you understood the meaning of what was said. They have both the gift of language and the gift of interpretation. Both the gift of language and the interpretation of language are unique gifts of the spirit endowed upon some believers in varying degrees by a loving God.

When you get ready to talk to God, what language does he understand? Whether your language is Chinese, Arabic, Spanish, French or Ebonics, God understands the language of the human heart. He understands the language of love; its compassion, obedience and loving acts. Those who speak that language can always talk to God and know he understands.

As Christians, we talk to God frequently. We know he understands us because we talk the language of heaven. Regardless of our race or nationality, we know he understands because we speak the language that he understands.

Exposition

This text focuses upon Paul as he emphasizes the importance of love over any of the gifts.

In the previous chapter Paul had painstakingly listed many of the gifts of the spirit.

He noted that all gifts come from the same source which is God's benevolence. He enumerated nine categories of gifts among them being the gift of language and the interpretation of language. In speaking about the gifts he made special note of the fact that all the gifts come from God but not all believers possess all the gifts. The purpose of each gift is to advance the kingdom of the Savior.

The nine gifts that were listed in this letter to the Corinthians represented categories of gifts which were not exclusive. Other gifts were listed in succeeding letters to other congregations. The theme, however was the same for each gift recipient; the gift came from God, no one person has all gifts; and believers working in concert the church can utilize all of the gifts anyway that will advance the kingdom of the Savior.

The 13th chapter is the second of three that focuses upon the gifts. While the 12th chapter provides a list of the categories of the gifts the 13th chapter provides a warning of sort. It begins with the word "though" which indicates that it is continuing a thought that was begun in Chapter 12. What Paul said in a nutshell was the gifts that were listed in Chapter 12 were admirable and would have great utility in the kingdom building process however; they were not to supersede love and acts of love.

So he begins by saying "though I speak with the tongues of Angels" an obvious reference to the gift of language and interpretation of language that had been referred to in Chapter 12. Paul makes it extremely clear that what is important to God is that all believers learn to love each other and demonstrate that love through their acts and deeds. The 13th chapter ends with a final emphasis that the three things most essential to believers, gifts notwithstanding, are faith hope and love; with the greatest of these being love.

What language does God understand?

The Scripture gives us an idea of what language God understands. When we surveyed the preponderance of the teachings of the Bible we discover that God understands us when we speak in one of several languages:

THE LANGUAGE OF OBEDIENCE: Believers who want to talk to God can be sure that he would understand them if they speak in the language of obedience. As Jesus pondered the prospect of Calvary he prayed seriously in the garden. When he prayed he used the language of obedience. His prayer to God included how he had obediently carried out the divine plan. He talked to God about his mission on earth, his instruction of the disciples, his proclamation of the word, and his introduction of the kingdom of God. Even as Christ asked that the cup that was set before him be passed over he still spoke to God in the framework of obedience. His words to God were simple: he wanted the cup to pass but only if it was God's will. The example Jesus gave in the garden should indicate to each of us that as we attempt to talk to God we must talk to him first in the language of obedience. In this context we speak to God and say to him that we have attempted to carry out his will to the best of our ability and despite our requests we would be willing to submit ourselves to his divine plan. God places a premium on obedience and those who speak to him in obedience speak his language. The word of God makes it clear that obedience is important to God. Leviticus 20:22 says obedience is important to holiness. Deuteronomy 28:1 reminds us that there is a blessing for obedience. Psalms 40:6 reminds us that obedience is the best sacrifice. Those who want to talk to God in the language of disobedience and expect him to hear them may have difficulty getting their prayer through; since God understands the language of obedience.

THE LANGUAGE OF REPENTANCE: God also hears us when we talk the language of repentance. David talked to God on many occasions; but there were some occasions when he and God were not speaking the same language. After his sin with Bathsheba David found it difficult to communicate with God. God was listening for repentance while David was asking for blessings for the kingdom. It was only when David began to speak the language of repentance saying in Psalm 51 "Create in me oh God a clean heart and renew a right spirit within me" that he and God began to speak the same language. In a similar sense there are many people today who are attempting to speak to God about a variety of issues in their lives seeking divine intervention without personal repentance. Is useless to go to God in prayer and ask him to bless you steal leaving an ace state of sinfulness. As long as that state exists our prayers are wasted because we're speaking a language that God cannot hear in the context of our present living arrangement. We must go before God as David went in a spirit of repentance knowing that only then can we expect for him to hear us. Until we repent it's even difficult to find God let alone communicate with him. Isaiah 55:6-7 puts it this way, "Seek ye the LORD while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon."

THE LANGUAGE OF FAITH: God hears and understands the language of faith. Those love live by faith find that God understands their language. And God spoke to Abraham in the language of faith and Abraham responded in the language of faith. And Abraham not been a man of faith he would not have understood what God meant when he said take your son and sacrifice them to me. After the command was given there is very little record of any conversation between God and Abraham. Abraham's actions spoke about his faith. God responded to him in the language of faith and provided a lamb for him in the bush. Often God gives us instructions people of faith understand God's language and they act upon what he says. Those who do not understand that language are often confused about the actions of fateful people. In addition we should note that when we ask not for something that is according to his will we should ask it in faith but leaving that he has the power to make what we ask happen. James 1:6 that we should ask in faith with nothing wavering; that means ask without ever doubting that God can make it happen. When we ask in this way then we are talking a language that God understands.

The language of Love

Finally, brothers and sisters, if we must talk to God in the language of Love; it's a language he understands.

Paul told the Corinthians that they may have an abundance of gifts but greater than all of them combined is love. Love is the language that God understands most.

Love is an action word that gives birth to many other words.

Where there is love there is compassion. Compassion is an outgrowth of love. We can't talk to God about having compassion on us unless we men and women of compassion ourselves.

Those who work to help the poor and distressed in the world, speak a language that God understands, for he said in Matthew 25:40 "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Those who show love to the least of these are speaking a language that God understands.

Those who lose themselves in God's will learn how to speak another language that God understands; they learn to speak the language of prayer. Jesus said in John 15:7 "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." Those who abide God's will learn to speak to God in a language he understands.

There are some who believe that speaking to God in a language he understands requires us to use an unknown tongue to get across to him. However, I have sneaky suspicion that when you know the language that God understands there are a whole lot of ways to talk to him. In public, we have to talk where those who hear can understand, but when you get by yourself, there are who lot of ways to talk to the Lord.

Somebody remembers grandma standing at the old ironing board moaning an old Dr. Watts Hymn. The children would ask: "Grandma, what are you moaning?" Somebody remembers her answer, "I'm just talking to the Lord chile; the devil don't like it when you moan." God understands a sincere moan.

God understands our body language too. That's why the old warriors declared, "If I can't say a word, I'll just wave my hand!"

God understands the language of sincere prayer. We can argue about whether we should stand or kneel, raise our hands or shut our eyes; but the fact remains, a sincere prayer is a language that God understands.

When you are down an out and pray in faith for God to make a way, you are talking a language that God understands!

When you have been defeated on every hand and pray to God for a victory, you are talking a language that God understands!

When the world has knocked you down and pray to stand up one more time, you're talking a language that God understands.

When the rejects your best service and pray to works not to be in vain, you're talking a language that God understands.

Why? Because prayer changes things! When you talk to God in faith, you are talking a language he understands!

When you talk to God in obedience, you are talking a language that he understands!

When you talk to God in repentance, you are talking a language that he understands!

When you talk to God in love, you are talking a language that he understands!

We know he understands it because John 3:16 says, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!"

It was the language of love that prompted him to pick up an old rugged cross and carry it Calvary!

It was the language of love that he spoke when he said "Father forgive them for they know not what they do!"

It was the language of love that he spoke when he said, "It is finished!" He died out on Calvary. But early Sunday morning..

No Weapon Formed Against Me

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the LORD, and their righteousness is of me, saith the LORD." Isaiah 54:17

Introduction

Have you ever stopped to count the number of weapons that have been used against you? During the course of our lives many of us have been attacked in a variety of ways. We have been hit with sticks and showered with stones. Some have been shot, and others have been the victims of beatings with pipes, tree limbs, razors, tasers, and bullets. In fact, many of us have been bombarded by almost every imaginable weapon yet somehow we seem to always escape much to the anger of our enemies. Whether we know it or not God often places a protective shield around believers who are attempting to live according to his law. This protection does not mean that believers are invulnerable to attack but it does mean that those who maliciously attack children of God usually find that their efforts do not achieve the desired result. They do not prosper. They do not succeed.

In recent years we have become familiar with weapons that have been used to destroy individuals and nations. We have seen the power of our national military arsenal on display. We have seen missiles that can be fired on one end of the world and cause destruction on the other. We have seen smart bombs that reportedly can pinpoint a target miles away and destroy single buildings while leaving others around them still standing. We've seen chemical weapons that can destroy whole cities by cultivating viruses and diseases that kill men, women and children. We've seen homemade bombs strong enough to blow up a Jeep or an armor plated tank.

We have seen atomic bombs like those that were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki during World War II that had the capacity to kill millions of people at one time. We are familiar with Trident missiles stored on submarines beneath the sea that can be launched on a minute's notice and destroy targets thousands of miles away.

We are generally afraid of weapons of mass destruction, especially if those weapons are in the hands of those who are unpredictable enemies. So, our nation went to war against the people of Iraq based on information that they possessed weapons of mass destruction that could possibly be used against us by a leader who had the propensity to use any weapon to destroy those he perceived as enemies of the nation.

The source of war and destruction is Satan. He causes nations to rise up against nations and conjures wars and rumors of wars. He does the same with individuals. Satan is constantly busy devising ways to destroy or frustrate the people of God. We know this is true because the word of God says, "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." 1 Peter 5:8. Satan is busy forming weapons against the people of God. While these weapons may not necessarily be atomic bombs or smart missiles they are nevertheless just as lethal. The devil is forming weapons against God's people even as we speak today.

However, we have one great assurance that helps us to face each day. This assurance is the knowledge that no matter what plans, plots, schemes or weapons that Satan devises to be used against us they cannot prevent the unfolding of the will of God. Such weapons will be useless against those who are carrying out the causes of righteousness supported by the power of God himself.

As Christians, we rejoice in the knowledge that while Satan may often frustrate us he will not succeed in thwarting the will of God. No matter how destructive the weapon he attempts to use against us, it will not succeed if our efforts reflect the will of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on God's promise to Israel that its enemies would not destroy its divinely appointed destiny.

This section of Isaiah contains prophecies that are Messianic, meaning they refer both to the current situation of Israel but also to the coming church age. For example, the 53rd chapter referred to Christ being "wounded for our transgression and bruised for our iniquities." It depicted a period when the people of God would be rejected, crucified and knocked down.

The 54th chapter presents a brighter picture. It denotes the restoration of believers, like the risen Lord, who wil not be utterly defeated by their enemies but will arise to greatness despite their opposition. It is a snapshot of the church in general and believers in particular. The 54th chapter presents an assurance to believers that those who attack them will be limited in their effectiveness because the tools and instruments they will use are within his power because he created them.

The assurance of believers is that God is in control. In verse 16 God maintains that every weapon that enemies of the faith use is under his control. He reminds believers that both the "smiths" or the artisans and the warriors called "wasters" are under his control. Weapons were generally forged by "smiths." The smiths were a class of metal workers whose primary function was to make tools for agriculture. Standing over large fires, they worked with iron and with copper alloyed with tin (bronze). In times of war however, these rather domestic peace loving people churned out swords, spears and battle axes instead of ploughshares. In later years a trend was developed in the English culture for families to take names related to the family trade. A family whose trade was to work with gold became "Goldsmith" or "Silversmith" for those who worked with silver. Generally the Smiths and the Wrights such as Playwright or Cartwright were people who were identified by their trades. The power of the weapons can only go so far. The strength of the destroyers can only go so far; God is in control.

Despite the presence of so many weapons believers are assured that none of them will succeed in defeating the Christian cause or its people when attempting to carry out a Godly work. The promise is not that weapons would not be formed or that believers would not be attacked and victimized. The assurance is that the divine plan will not be interrupted. Christ was crucified through the legal weapon of the Roman court, beat with cords and stabbed with a sword, but it did not succeed in destroying the church. Thus, the promise is given that no weapon formed against a divinely appointed cause will succeed.

Weapons Formed Against Us

What are the weapons that are formed against believers? In biblical times the weapons formed against God's people included:

KNIVES AND SWORDS: These were the most common weapons. A man with a sword would often control his enemy in a physical confrontation. Often a man with a knife, stabbed his victim unexpectedly in the back. Believers have experience many "in your face" confrontations with enemies of the faith. Threatening words and physical confrontations are used by some; while others smile in our faces but stab us in the back. Confrontation and deception are weapons formed by the enemy; they may do damage at the moment but the Christian involved in a just cause will ultimately triumph.

SPEARS: Spears, or Javelins could be thrown from a distance and would penetrate through tough defensive armor. We have seen our share of spears, thrown at us with great force, sometimes shattering our strongest defenses. How many have had their defenses shattered by the spear of deceit? How many partners have been speared romantically by lovers who knew their vulnerable spots and attempted to destroy them. Despite the powerful thrusts of spears, we still hear the promise, "No Weapon formed against you shall prosper" and we rise again.

BOWS AND ARROWS: Bows were used to project Arrows that were shot from great distances in battle, requiring special defensive techniques to avoid death. Sometime arrows were poison tipped. Every believer knows what it means to be hit with an arrow that seemed as though it came from nowhere. It's when child protection agents knock at your door because an enemy has fired a secret arrow from a distance. It's the co-worker that gives false information to your boss to get you fired. Sometimes it is one arrow, at other times the sky appears to rain arrows upon us. Yet, even as we are showered with poison tipped arrows, the promise still lingers, "No weapon formed against us shall prosper."

SLING SHOTS: These hand held devices were used to throw missiles such as rocks accurately for great distances. Slings threw simple things like rocks to cause damage. We have seen our share of rocks thrown. They range from misunderstandings to disputes over trivial matters such as who won a game. Sling shots throw small things such as false accusations, innuendos, and rumors. Sometimes they hit their mark, cause us great damage and wound us. Even in this area the scripture still remains true, "No weapon formed against us shall prosper."

BATTLE AXE: Battle Axe, was a large destructive axe used for hand to hand, up close combat. The battle axe had but one purpose, to get in close and destroy an enemy, piece by piece. Sometimes we feel the blades of battleaxes swinging at us trying to destroy us piece by piece. No sooner than we recover from one blow that it seems the enemy hits us with another. First it hits our relationship, then our children, or our job. We often feel that we are being torn to shreds. We see the enemy smiling, but before we give up, we should heed the words of this text, "No weapon formed against us shall prosper."

We have weapons too

What many believers forget is that while the enemy has weapons that he is forming against us, we have weapons too. We are engaged in a warfare with the devil and his imps. Our response however is not to respond spear for spear, sword for sword, or knife for knife. Our warfare is completely unorthodox; it uses the unexpected. Why? Because we are fighting a spiritual warfare. Paul told the Corinthians, "For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh: (For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds;) 2 Corinthians 10:4. Like David, who used the unexpected to bring down Goliath, so must believers do the same.

DEFENSIVE WEAPONS: We know what weapons the enemy uses therefore we need defensive weapons. Ephesians 6:11-18 gives the weapons needed for our defensive warfare. These weapons include the shield of faith, the breastplate of righteousness, the belt of truth, and peace loving footwear. Ephesians 6:18 gives the strongest of the defensive weapons which is prayer for ourselves and for others who may be under attack.

OFFENSIVE WEAPONS: Our offensive weapons are unusual and highly unorthodox, but they succeed because they have been ordered by our commander-in-chief. They may even seem strange. There are scores of weapons at our disposal but these five give us an idea what we have been commanded to use.

1. Returning Good for evil. In Luke 6:35 Jesus said, "Love your enemies, and do good to them." This may sound counter productive because it requires us to return evil with good. This is a powerful weapon that makes it difficult for an enemy to continue to attack you with passion.

2. Joy in the Midst of Trials. James 1:2 says we should, "Count it all joy" when we are being tried. That really sounds strange. It confuses the enemy who is trying to destroy our faith, hope and happiness to see believers still praising God in the middle of all of their problems.

3. Trust in God Always. Psalm 37:3 reminds us that though the wicked seem to triumph all around us, our best weapon is to "trust and the Lord and do good." The enemy does not know what to do when you continue to do good and trust God despite the enemy's attacks. He is utterly confused.

4. Give Thanks. 1 Thessalonians 5:18 says, "In everything give thanks for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." When the enemy sees believers giving thanks for arrows, spears and even the swords thrown at them, he is totally thrown off guard. He meant to discourage but believers continue giving thanks.

5. Never be Distracted. Romans 8:38-39 told us to keep going forward, and never get distracted by the enemy or the weapons that he is forming. Paul said, "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

No Weapon

Finally, brothers and Sisters, there is no weapon more powerful than the prayers of righteous men and women.

The arsenals of the world have powerful weapons, but they cannot match the power of a single prayer.

The Air Force has an arsenal of F-15 and F-16 Fighter planes and B-1 and B-52 Bombers that can deploy in minutes. It has flying predators that can spot an enemy in the air and fly home without a man in the cockpit. It has missles and warheads that cost as much as $1 million each that seek and destroy an enemy thousands of miles away. But all of the fire power of the air force can't match the power of a single sincere prayer.

The army has an arsenal of weapons that includes the new M-107 rifle that can shoot and destroy a target nearly two miles away. It has computer equipped uniforms for soldiers, tanks, artillery, and machine guns that can level a high rise building. But all of these weapons can't match up to the power of a believing man praying to an almighty God.

The Marine Corps has an arsenal of New M-16A2's that comes with a grenade launcher and laser optics. It has tracking vehicles, aircraft, Amphibious units and an arsenal of weapons that can seek and destroy an enemy instantly. But when saints go into prayer, God can send an answer from the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli!

The Navy has aircraft carriers that are as big as floating cities. The navy has boats that can fly, planes that can float, and enough fire power to bomb a target while sitting in the middle of the ocean or launch a nuclear missile from a submarine under the sea. Believers may not have planes that can float on water, but they know how to talk to the man who can walk on water!

When saints start praying, the weapons of the enemy are useless!

The devil shoots bullets of hate but they bounce off a wall of love!

The devil sets booby traps of failure but saints keep finding success!

The devil tries to break our defenses but we keep seizing the offensive!

The world knocks us down, but we get up, because no weapon formed against us can prosper!

Spurgeon put it this way,

"Though it be forged upon the anvil of the devil's greatest subtlety, no weapon can prosper against thee,

"Though it be clothed in elusive attire of crafty words and cheap schemes, it shall not prosper against thee.

"Though it be bathed in the poisonous words that drip from decietful lips, it shall not prosper against thee."

When the bible says no weapon it means every weapon!

That means you can talk about us, but it will not prosper!

That means you can call us everything but a child of God, but it will not prosper!

That means you can try to stop us from claiming what God has ordained, but it will not prosper!

That's the lesson that the devil has not learned!

We taught him the lesson 2000 years ago but he did not learn!

He threw everything he had at Jesus!

They falsely accused him, it convicted him but it did not prosper!

They physically abused him, it hurt him physically, but it did not prosper!

They put a crown of thorns on his head, it humiliated him, but it did not prosper!

They crucified him on an old rugged cross, and buried him in a borrowed tomb!

But early Sunday morning, he arose as a living testimony, that "No weapon formed against me shall prosper!"

All power is in my hands!

This Present Age

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 10, 2005

SCRIPTURE: And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. Deuteronomy 11:19

Introduction

Have you ever taken a good look at the youth of today? Are you happy with what you see? Are you disappointed? If you are unhappy are you doing anything about it? With all of our power and might, those who know the Lord should prepare to minister to the present generation as we tell them about the goodness of the Lord.

The old warriors of the church still sing an old hymn in long meter. The words were written by Charles Wesley, but the old slaves added power and emotion when they sang, "A charge to keep I have, A God to glorify A never dying soul to save and fit it for the sky. To serve the present age, my calling to fulfill; O may it all my powers engage to do my Master's will." The words demonstrated a commitment felt by one generation to know God themselves then tell the story to "the present age."

Even though that old song has been passed down for hundreds of years, its meaning is clear; the mission of the church is to seek the salvation of "this present age."

Many adults look at the youth of this generation and shake their heads. They conclude that this generation is lost. They see only the negatives. Does that sound like something new? Consider this quote: "Youth today love luxury. They have bad manners, contempt for authority, no respect for older people, and talk nonsense when they should be working. Young people do not stand up any longer when adults enter the room. They contradict their parents, talk too much in company, guzzle their food, lay their legs on the table and tyrannize their elders." If that quote seems to describe today's youth, then consider that those words were spoken by the Philosopher Socrates, thousands of years ago, describing the youth of his time.

Each generation has its own mark. Each had its own peculiarities and idiosyncrasies that were frowned upon by the preceding generation. Whether or not we hailed from the Charleston generation with its finger waved hair, short dresses and beads or whether it was the Boogie-Woogie generation of Count Basie, Louis Armstrong and the jitterbug; each has known its own peculiarities.

There are some who came from the Bobby Sox generation. It was a time of black and white shoes, thick socks, Elvis Presley, Little Richard, and the 55 Chevrolet.

There are some who hailed from the Woodstock Generation: marked by long hair, anti-war protests, Afros, stage plank shoes, and dashikis. Some came from what has been called the "Pepsi generation" who feasted on Kentucky Fried Chicken; listened to Prince and the Purple Rain, Bobby Brown, and Run DMC.

Now there is before us a new generation, similar to those of the past but is yet different. This new generation is generally described as the Hip Hop Generation. It is a generation of rap music, ear ringed ears, baggy clothing, R. Kelly, Snoop Doggy Dog, and Beyonce. This is the generation that today's youth are encountering. The temptations they face are similar to those of previous generations, but the advent of technology makes it extremely more difficult to resist and to handle.

The generation before us is no different from the previous in terms of potential and its propensities. It has the potential to do great and powerful things and to achieve excellence, just as previous generations. It also has the propensity, or the tendency to deviate, just as the previous generation. This underscores the importance of the church's mission to the present age, "We must tell the story" to this generation.

It is the mission of today's church leaders to tell the story to "this present age." That brings to mind the r the little girl who was very close to her grandmother. Grandmother always took time to come to her room, pull up the old rocking chair and read her stories from an old story book given to her by her mother. The stories were funny. Mother Goose, Little Red Riding Hood, Alice in Wonderland, Goldilocks and the Three Bears…they were all amusing stories. Grandmother would sit in that old rocker and read one each night without fail. After a while Grandmother took sick. Shortly after the little girl learned that grandma was gone to be with God. Only one thought came to her mind. The question plagued her day and night. She knew that grandma was with God. She knew that Grandma was safe. However, the question that bothered her was, "Who will tell the story?" As she came home that night her mother came into her room and tucked her daughter in bed. Tired, she sat in the old rocking chair. Instantly the little girl sat up in her bed and displayed the biggest smile. "Why are you smiling so?" The mother asked. The girl pointed to her mother sitting in grandma's chair! The little girl pulled out the old story book that had passed through three generations and put it in her mother's lap. "You are sitting in grandma's chair. You must tell the story!" Instantly the mother began to feel grandma's presence. She opened the book and read. Night after night she repeated the story until her daughter fell fast asleep!

The youth of this present age will be leaders in the church and its various, auxiliaries and ministries. This generation must be prepared to witness for Christ in every aspect of their lives, including the family, church and the world beyond. Christian youth are being called upon by the millions to rise from their generation and choose to serve a mighty and powerful God who has chosen them to be his witnesses. The challenge to rise up and witness for Christ is what lies before this generation. The challenge to know him in every way and tell others what we know faces every Christian youth.

As adult Christians, we know that God has a special task for us. However, the youth of "this present age" may not fully know God for themselves or their relationship to him. We must ask him for strength to teach the youth of this generation the power and the majesty of almighty God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as he tells the nation of Israel the story of God's goodness and mercy toward them as people.

The journey of the children of Israel from Canaan to Egypt in a time of famine to huge nation of wilderness nomads, nearly a half million in number is memorable.

Without a doubt, Moses was the pillar of the Israelite nation. His youth was a litany of deeds and accomplishments that included surviving the wilderness, seeing the burning bush, facing Pharaoh, maintaining the wilderness existence for 40 years. However, in his senior years, Moses assumed the role of teacher for the people.

The entire book of Deuteronomy is a written record of Moses' many efforts to tell the story of the Israelite journey. The name "Deuteronomy" means "A second Look." Moses retells the story. It is not simply a recounting of the journey but an account of God's dealings with people. That aspect is what distinguishes biblical history from secular history. While secular history tells the story of man's journey, biblical history tells the story of the journey with respect to God's relationship to the pilgrims. Thus Moses notes it's not so much the telling of the story that is important as is the emphasis on God's dealings with mankind in the process.

The thrust of these text verses seem to fall in three categories.

Each believer is charged to know the story themselves. They are charged to have the word of God in their hearts and to constantly remind themselves of God's goodness by keeping them visible in glaring ways. Knowing what God has done from first hand experience has the effect of serving as frontlets or guides that keep us from straying too far to the left or to the right.

Each believer is also charged to teach their experience to the next generation; their children. Thus it is not sufficient adult Christians to know what God has done for them, but they must also take advantage of every opportunity to teach the principles of godliness to their children.

The text seems to speak to the mission of the church as it instructs parents: At any given opportunity the good parent should tell the story. In the morning, noon, or at midnight, they should tell the story. Moses goes even further in Deuteronomy 11:19-20 "…speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thine house, and upon thy gates."

Believers will be rewarded for their faithfulness to their duty. The reward will come in the form of long life. In addition, their children and grand children will enjoy a richer happier life because they took the time to tell the story at every opportunity!

Thus, Moses emphasized the importance of telling the story. Adult Christians must live the story and believe God it in their own hearts. It becomes the mission of the church to tell that testimony to the children of "this present age" and expect to reap the reward of long life and blessed posterity for their faithfulness to God.

Satan Is Busy in This Present Age

Satan is busy causing problems today just as he caused problems for every preceding generation. He is busy interfering in the lives of the youth of this generation.

Satan has a plan to gain new recruits among today's youth. It is designed to lure them into subcultures that often negatively affect their spirituality.

Often the church becomes relaxed, but Satan has been busy. Recent studies have revealed that by the age of 16 the average child will watch 200,000 acts of violence on television; in addition to 33,000 murders, 20,000 sex acts, 35,000 naked bodies and will hear 150,000 songs that will urge him to have sex, drink alcohol, shoot someone, or get high. These are the statistics for the average American youth. Consider the fact that African-American youth spends 50 percent more time watching television and listening to the radio than all others and it is not hard to understand the complexity of our situation.

This present age is developing a taste for things that are vulgar, violent, and sexy. It is reflected in the movies youth like most. Though there were scores of new movies in the last three years the ones that were favorites of African-American teens were those most violent or had plenty of cursing and sex.

In the midst of all these influences, a new counter culture has developed over the two decades, called Hip Hop. It is a music driven voice of youth rebellion that reflects a language, culture, fashion and hairstyle that is counter to mainstream influences.

The new counter culture attempts to teach youth to go against mainstream cultural standards. If, for example, boys are expected to wear their pants fitted on their waists, Hip Hop urges them to wear them loose on their hips. Instead of wearing shirttails in, Hip Hop suggests that they wear them out. Instead of buckling belts, Hip Hop suggests that they be worn unbuckled or no belts at all. Since it is expected that men do not wear earrings, Hip Hop suggests that men wear earrings. Rather than take hats off in the building, Hip Hop suggests that they keep hats on, and turn them backwards.

The cigarette and alcohol have targeted African American youth as easy prey and have finance many segments of he Hip Hop Movement. Alcohol companies who influence youth to drink secretly back many of the rappers. The rap group 8-Ball is backed by Eight Ball Old English 800 Malt Liquor; Ice Cube was promoted by St. Ives Malt Liquor; and it is no coincidence that a few years ago when Snoop Dog started singing about the joys of "Gin and Juice" that packages of gin and juice began showing up in liquor stores around the country.

Even sadder, hundreds of thousands of youth are graduating from Hip Hop to levels in which they must prove that they are willing to do anything to prove that they have the "juice" or ultimate courage. This includes, drugs, promiscuity, even murder.

Satan has a grip on millions of young people in this present age who are caught up so tight they cannot turn loose.

The Church's Challenge

In the midst of this generation there is a small nucleus of youth who are standing firm for Christ. These youth, the missionaries of their generation, must be groomed to witness to their peers in this present age.

That makes the challenge of the church even more formidable. Its mission is clear and succinct. The words of Moses are even clearer today than they were when he spoke them in the Book of Deuteronomy. We must "teach" this present age.

How? What can the church do?

The church can return to the concepts of our forefathers in rearing our children. Hillary Clinton discovered the principle and wrote about it in her book, "It takes a village." She learned what our fore parents already knew; everyone around a child influences and contributes to his growth and development. The church must adopt the village approach to youth. We must involve ourselves in the entire lives of the youth in our care and nurture their faith.

We must teach, through hands on activities in real time.

We must utilize proven tools to reach and teach. Organizations such as Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts have proven to be useful tools used by churches around the world to reach youth with a spiritual message while they have fun. We must use scouting in a greater way.

We must involve ourselves in the education and Christian education of our youth. Churches must become concerned about the academic performance of their youth as well as their Christian education. Programs for after school tutoring, ACT Prep and other academic based project will help them in school. At the same time Sunday School, bible study and youth Christian Education will help them grow spiritually. We must increase our involvement in the Christian Education and secular education of our youth.

The mission of the church is to minister to this present age with the word of God in a meaningful way that tells the story of what God has done in the past and what he is doing today.

Testify to this Present Age

Finally, brothers and sisters, the church has the obligation to answer the question that this generation begs for an answer, "Who will tell us the story?"

The church's response should be the same as that of Isaiah, "If the Lord needs somebody, here am I Lord, send me!"

Who will tell this generation that Jesus is calling out to them, reminding them that he has great work for them to do?

Who will challenge this present age to step out of their generation into his elite group of young Christian warriors as a part of the Chosen generation?

When Satan starts influencing our young they must be prepared to answer. When Satan plants the idea that there is "nothing wrong with a little bump and grind" the Christian youth remembers that the word of God says, "The body is the temple of the Holy Ghost".

Christian youth have their own "bump and grind" We bump Satan out of the way and "Grind" him under our feet

Who will tell this generation that we serve a God who turns:

Darkness into light; failure into success;

Weakness into strength; lost hope into fulfilled dreams;

Who will tell the story of the goodness of the Lord?

Who will tell the world that those who trust in the Lord can:

-Face the unfaceable; conquer the unconquerable

-Bear the unbearable; suffer the insufferable

The Lord needs believers in this generation who are willing to use all available means to witness to this present age that God is still a good God!

Who will tell the story of how God take poor families from North Carolina, Louisiana and Mississippi and hundreds of places around the world and lift them up to high heights!

Who will tell the story told by our forefathers?

Whoever tells the story must decide to live the life and walk the walk, before they try to talk the talk!

If you are going to tell the story, you must know Jesus for yourself!

You can't tell your story until you can tell his story!

Tell them about Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Tell them about Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Tell them how he died on Calvary! Tell them how he arose after three days and nights!

Who will tell the story to this present age?

The church should say, "Here we are, Lord…send us!"

Devil You're Fired

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 14, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "And Jesus answered and said unto him, Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." Luke 4:8

Introduction

Have you ever been fired from a job? What was the reason given? What was the real reason? For various reasons employers find it necessary to fire workers. Sometimes employees are fired because of poor performance. At other times they are fired because of management decisions. There are times when we are fired unjustly to make room for someone else who has won the favor of a superior. Sometimes we are the victims of race, sex or age discrimination, especially if you are nearing retirement age; some companies think it its practical to fire you for some dumb reason to keep to avoid retirement benefits that could linger for decades. No matter what the reason we are not happy when we hear the words, "You're Fired!"

Donald Trump has made a name for himself as a tough businessman. Business comes first, all other matters are secondary. Trump is a flamboyant millionaire who likes to boast about his ability to make hard decisions and close the deal. He has made and lost millions all while in the public view.

On his television show, "The Apprentice," he criticizes young professionals who work hard to please him. They hope to win a chance to manage one of Trump's casinos, hotels or scores of other businesses. They must prove to Trump that they are tough enough, shrewd enough, and aggressive enough to make a profit no matter what the cost. Those who fail to make their companies work hear Trump's famous words. "You're Fired."

Once a person is fired from Trump's show they leave immediately. It's over! There is no recourse. They are never heard from again!

In a way, the devil has been getting into much of our business on a daily basis. He calls us into the boardroom of life and wants to know why we are not doing more, getting more, climbing higher. Why?

As far as the devil is concerned the only thing that matters is that we make it to the highest plateau. That's where we meet with him and find him upset because we let simple things such as morals, scruples or integrity get in the way of success. The devil says you should use your sexuality to get a promotion. Skim money from your boss if you keep his books. Take advantage of every opportunity to succeed, even if people you know and respect may hurt in the process.

He promises to make us executives in one of his many enterprises. You'll make money and be famous for a while. Your name will be in lights and you will be popular for brief period. You will have all of the luxuries associated with the good life for a while. That's what the devil promises.

It's tough when you work for the devil; he never does what he promises. One day while walking down the street a pimp, known for his generosity in the neighborhood, was hit by a bus and he died. His soul arrived in heaven where he was met at the Pearly Gates by St. Peter himself.

"Welcome to Heaven," said St. Peter. "Before you get settled in though, it seems we have a problem. You see, strangely enough, we've never once had a pimp make it this far and we're not really sure what to do with you."

"No problem, just let me in," said the pimp. "Well, I'd like to," replied St. Peter, "but I have higher orders. What we're going to do is let you have a day in Hell and a day in Heaven and then you can choose whichever one you want to spend an eternity in."

"Actually, I think I've made up my mind, I prefer to stay in Heaven," said the pimp.

"Sorry, we have rules..." And with that St. Peter put the pimp in an elevator and it went down-down-down to hell. The doors opened and he found himself stepping out onto fine green carpet. There was plenty of food, ribs, chicken and some of the finest women he had ever seen. Some of the women who were once in his stable were there; they cheered for him. They ran up and kissed him dead on the mouth and they talked about old times. They danced a little and drank a little. The pimp met the Devil who was actually a really nice guy who dressed very well in designer threads. He had a great time telling jokes and dancing. He was having such a good time that before he knew it, it was time to leave. Everybody shook his hand and waved good-bye as he got on the elevator. The elevator went up-up-up and opened back up at the Pearly Gates and he found St. Peter waiting for him.

"Now it's time to spend a day in heaven," he said. So he spent the next 24 hours lounging around on clouds and playing the harp and singing. He had a great time and before he knew it his 24 hours were up and St. Peter came and got him. "So, you've spent a day in hell and you've spent a day in heaven. Now you must choose your eternity," he said. The pimp paused for a second and then replied, "Well, I never thought I'd say this, I mean, Heaven has been really great and all, but I think I had a better time in Hell." So St. Peter escorted him to the elevator and again he went down-down-down back to Hell.

When the doors of the elevator opened he found himself standing in a desolate wasteland covered in garbage and filth. Old watermelon rinds were everywhere. There flies, chicken bones and garbage for miles. He saw some of his friends who were dressed in rags and were picking up the garbage and putting it in sacks. The Devil came up to him and put his arm around him.

"I don't understand," stammered the pimp, "yesterday I was here and there was green grass, pretty women, parties and fun. Now all there is, is a wasteland of garbage and all my friends look miserable."

The Devil looked at him and said, “Face it my brother, Yesterday we were recruiting you, today you are an employee. Welcome to hell.”

The devil has been running the lives of many people, causing them considerable trouble. It’s time for him to get back and leave us alone.

We should give him Donald Trumps Words, “You’re fired”

As Christians, let us resolve to tell Satan he no longer has any control over us. Let’s reject for good and make Jesus our choice.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he makes a major decision about the direction of his life and fires the devil.

Before Christ began his public ministry, he spent 40 days in the wilderness to pray for strength and direction. Those forty days must have been a wonderful experience. He had just come from the baptismal scene which had ended when God declared, “This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased.” So, in the beginning of his ministry, Jesus faced a crucial decision making period in which he had to decide whether to take the long way around or take the short cuts.

The passage shows the devil meeting Jesus at a point in his 40 day fast and meditation. The devil presented Jesus with three temptations: 1) To turn stones into bread and satisfy his human needs and desires 2) To worship the devil and free himself from being plagued by the devilish plots and tricks that would follow him all through his ministry and 3) Throw himself off the side of mountain in the full view of thousands of people below who would witness when God sent angels to catch him before he hit the ground.

All three of the temptations would have jump started Jesus’ career with popularity, fame and certain world power. There would be no doubt that he would be the one true Messiah because he would be the one man who could turn stones into bread and be rescued by angels dispatched from heaven.

He could change the world from such a position. He could order governments to follow his rule. He could outlaw hypocrisy and open the floodgates of opportunity for thousands.

He was presented with a quick opportunity to do many things, but it would not do the one thing he came to do, obey God and carry out his will.

Jesus recognized Satan’s three offers for what they were: temptations. He refused them and went the long way around. It was a way of sacrifice and pain, but it provided what the world needed, which was salvation.

When the devil works for you

What would you give to succeed? What price are you willing to pay? The devil is willing to work for you, get you what you want, but you must pay the price.

The classic tale of “The Devil and Daniel Webster” depicted a man by the name of Jabez Stone who sold his soul to the devil for seven years of prosperity. In the end, the Devil came to collect and Jabez Stone regretted his deed and went to court with the great attorney Daniel Webster as his counsel. The struggle for his soul is depicted in the tale; that same struggle exists today.

When the devil works for us, it is not for minimum wages. A minimum wage worker is employed by the hour. He begins his work at a certain hour and stops at a certain hour. He is paid for time expended at the lowest wage allowed by law. The devil is not a minimum wage worker. He is a highly paid professional who never stops working. In the morning, noon or midnight the devil is busy. He never takes a break or a day off. If you go on vacation he goes with you. If you go to church he goes there too. He's constantly by your side. He doesn't work for minimum wage, his experience is too extensive. His knowledge is too broad. He won't work for the minimum wage, he wants the maximum, which is your life. Romans 6:23 says, "The wages of sin is death but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." The devil wants you to work yourself to death. Party yourself to death. Drink yourself to death. Snort yourself to death. Worry yourself to death. Sin yourself to death! That's the wage he requires.

When the devil works for us, he is not a temp. A temporary worker fills in for a short time, then leaves. Temporary workers get no benefits and have no future expectations with the company. When the devil works for us, he is not a temp. He doesn't expect to leave soon. He has great expectations for his future life with us. We often hire the devil is a temp, but he intends to stay. We involve ourselves in tempting situations "one time" and find that one time ended up being too many times.

We only intended to have sex "one time" but the devil had no intentions of being a temp. We intended to use drugs "one time"; steal one time; cheat one time; we intended to flirt with temptation only one time, but the devil has no intention of being a one time devil.

Are such temptations from God? Isn't it God that actually tests our strength? James 1:13-14 gives the answer " Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man: But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed." We are tempted because we hired the devil, maybe on a temporary basis, but we hired him never-the-less. Many of us are miserable today because the temp we hired will not leave.

When the Devil works for us he is a day by day worker. A day by day worker is one step lower than a temp, who fills a vacancy for a short period. Some temps work for months at a time, but a day by day worker, works one day at a time, gets paid when the day is over and doesn't expect to come back the next day. The devil is not a day by day worker. His work never stops and he will be back the next day. One of the hardest things to do is break old habits. Those who have been addicted know that the lure of the addiction keeps coming back, especially if we keep frequenting the same people, places and things. If you hire the devil he will not work for just one day and go away; tomorrow he will be back!

Firing the Devil

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that the only way to get rid of the devil is that he must be fired.
In the wilderness, the devil tempted Jesus, but found that he was fired before he even started.

Those who are troubled by the presence of the devil in their lives must get him fired. Unfortunately, we are not able to fire him ourselves, because we don't have the authority to fire him. Jesus was able to rebuke Satan because he is God and all power is given to him in heaven and on earth.

Trying to fire the devil yourself has the same effect as one employee trying to fire another employee with the same level of authority. In cases such as these a higher power must do the firing.

How many have tried to fire the devil, only to learn that he wouldn't quit.
We said, Devil you're fired, "We're going to stop smoking" but he wouldn't let us quit!

We said, "Devil you're fired, "We're going to stop drinking, using drugs, chasing after illicit sex" but he wouldn't let is quit.

That's when we learned that if the devil is going to be rebuked or fired it means nothing if we do the firing.
Our best efforts to get rid of the devil are not enough. We can:

—LAY HIM OFF, but a person who is laid off expects to come back to work when conditions change. He's not really fired.

—RELOCATE HIM, but a person who is relocated is not fired; he is given the same job in a different place.

—DOWNSIZE HIM, when a company downsizes it doesn't get rid of everybody, just some of its workers. When the devil is downsized he is not fired we just don't do as much wrong as we once, did but we still enjoy sinful living.

The only way to fire the devil is to do two things: Resist him, then report him to the boss!

If you want to fire the devil, don't try to do it yourself, take it to the Lord!

If you trust and never doubt, he will surely bring you out! Take your burden to the Lord and leave it there!

When you truly belong to God and the devil starts messing with your life, take it to the Lord!

When the devil causes the storms of life to rage he will rebuke the winds and the waves!

That's we hear the Lord say, Devil you are fired!

Devil, you're fired; this life is totally committed to me!

Devil, you're fired; this life is living in under my protection!

Devil, you're fired; the salvation of this believer is safe and secure!

You can't fire him, but Jesus can!

Jesus, who carried an old rugged cross to Calvary's hill!

Jesus, who died but arose early Sunday morning!

You can't fire the devil, but Jesus can!

We Ate That Yesterday

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 21, 2005

SCRIPTURE: And the mixt multitude that was among them fell a lusting: and the children of Israel also wept again, and said, "Who shall give us flesh to eat? 5 We remember the fish, which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick: 6 But now our soul is dried away: there is nothing at all, beside this manna, before our eyes. Numbers 11:4-6

Introduction

Have you ever eaten leftovers? Believe it or not there are many people who refuse to eat leftovers. They stay away from leftovers as if they would catch a deathly disease from them. They won't eat any kind of leftover. Left over chicken. Left over rice. Left over turkey or ham. They won't eat anything that they know is a leftover. They insist that everything must be freshly prepared. Then there are others that will eat the same thing everyday until there is no more and grow fat and happy. If chickens are fried on Sunday, they will eat chicken thighs, breasts and drumsticks until the gristle on the bone is gone! The dog who waits for leftovers in these houses will starve to death because they even eat the crumbs from the chicken crust, drink the juice off the greens, and sop all of today's gravy with yesterday's biscuit.

A leftover is the food that's left from a previous meal. It is not spoiled. It remains tasty and is just as nutritious as it was when it was first prepared. There are two schools of thought with respect to leftovers. One line of thinking is that left over food does not taste as good because it has been refrigerated for a time. The other line of thinking is that left over food often tastes better because the seasonings have had time to lock themselves into each item. But there is a third consideration: Whether or not we eat leftovers, has a lot to do with how long it has been since we've last eaten. The man who is starving to death will eat any food, even the same food, repeatedly for years.

Apparently Christ had no problem with leftovers. Even though he often created large meals for large crowds, there were occasions on which he ordered the leftovers to be gathered. One of those instances was in Matthew 14:20. In this instance Jesus fed 5,000 people but 12 baskets of leftovers were collected. Matthew 15:37 shows how Jesus took seven loaves and some fish and fed 4,000 people, but seven baskets of leftovers were collected. Obviously some in the crowds received fresh bread and fish on the day Jesus presented them, but somebody, somewhere, enjoyed that meal again, from the leftovers.

Many of those who refuse to eat leftovers do so for no other reason other than the fact that it was served before. They want and demand fresh food or no food at all.

There seems to be one big exception to the, "I don't eat leftovers rule" and that's the fact that we'll eat leftovers, over and over again if we really liked what was served! I have a sneaky suspicion that the kid who complains about food being reserved wouldn't complain if there was pizza on the school menu Monday through Friday.

In a similar sense, there are people who are frustrated with God because he keeps blessing them the same way everyday. They want specific blessings. They want a variety of blessings. They want new blessings!

If God blessed you yesterday with health and strength, should we snub our nose at him because he gave us the same amount of health and strength he gave us yesterday and nothing new. If he blessed us with a roof over our head in the past, should we be angry with him because he blessed us with that same roof day after day? Should we be angry because he keeps putting the same cornflakes on our shelves with the same kind of milk, day after day. Should we get upset with because he blessed us with a car that runs and everyday, he keeps giving the same car and it runs just like it did before?

As Christians, we don't complain about God's blessings. We are thankful for everything he puts before us. If he keeps blessing us over and over again; we love the leftovers!

Exposition

This text find Israel complaining that God keeps providing the same miraculous food everyday. They wanted something different.

Israel's journey in the wilderness of Sin was one that tired and frustrated them. They complained to God of insufficient food and water. God heard their murmurings and told Moses to tell them that they would receive blessings of sustenance from him that would undeniably be an evidence that he was leading, providing and caring for them.

As promised, there was a small round thing that blanketed the ground around them. It was so abundant it appeared to be a frost. The people were surprised at what they saw and described it as "Manna."

It is commonly thought that the name "Manna" means "Bread from Heaven." Since God promised that he would rain bread of heaven, many have assumed that the name "manna" meant "bread from heaven." Actually, "Manna" means "What is it?" From the Hebrew word "Man hu." It came from the statement of surprise and wonder that the people gave when they saw it laying on the ground like a frost, they exclaimed "Manna?" or "What is it?"

The manna was a blessing from God, however, the people complained because the same blessing came day after day.

The people complained because they wanted God to provide them with delicacies of their choice. When they left Egypt they had animals with them. Although they wandered in the wilderness for 40 years, at the time of this text, they had an ample supply of cattle and other animals, but these were not part of their regular diet.

What did they want? They wanted fish because they were accustomed to the fish they regularly received in Egypt. They didn't want steaks, they had enough cows to produce regular steaks or ground beef or chuck roasts; they wanted fish. The livestock was often used in sacrifices and to pull wagons, and to produce milk so they did want to deplete their herds.

In addition, they wanted variety. Five types of produce are mentioned in verse five: Cucumbers, melons, leeks, onions, and garlic. In the wilderness they wanted watermelon. They could use leek plants to make salads or serve them with bread highlighted with a touch of garlic. They could even eat cucumbers, melons, and onions without cooking them.

Instead of what they wanted, God gave them manna. Verse seven describes the manna as being like a very small seed, such as the coriander seed. Thy ground it into a flour and made cakes of bread that had a greasy, oily taste. Miraculously, without other staples to provide nutrition, the manna supplied all of their daily needs.

The people continued to complain and God provided them with quails by the millions. Soon they grew tired of quail meat and complained again.

It was obvious that the arrival of the manna and the quail everyday was a daily blessing. However, the people complained because God blessed the same way everyday. They wanted to be blessed in the way of their choosing.

Choicy Blessing

Often we are like the Israelites who constantly complained about the blessings they received. Like spoiled children we say, "We ate that yesterday" when are going to get something different. Revisit Israel in the wilderness and compare their complaints to our own:

SPECIFIC BLESSINGS: Israel wanted a specific blessing which was fish. Their discontentment was not that they were starving, but that they were not being fed specifically what they wanted. Similarly, we often want specific blessings from God. We don't want a means of transportation we want a specific make, model and color. We don't want a roof over our head, we want that roof located in a certain section of town. We don't want don't want a good night's sleep we want to sleep on a specific type of mattress and bed linen. Daily God provides our needs but often we get uncomfortable because we get specific. Good feeds us, but we complain, "We ate that yesterday." We want what we want, when we want it.

VARIETY OF BLESSINGS: Israel complained because their blessing was the same. Manna seeds fell, they baked them, and the next day the same manna was in the same place. They wanted variety. Similarly, we too complain about the monotony of receiving the same type of blessing all of the time. It didn't matter the blessing they received help them survive a wilderness journey, they complained for variety. We are accustomed to menus and food lines. We are attracted to restaurants that offer a variety of meats, salads and desserts. We want the menu to include variety. Some of us even feel that way about our worship, even though what we get is good, we want variety. Some feel that way about their marriages, even though what they have satisfies, they want variety so they slip around. Many complain to God for a variety of blessings without knowing that he already provides variety. He blesses us economically, socially, educationally, physically, and emotion. We can't count all the ways that God blesses us. One song write said, "Count your many blessings, see what the Lord has done."

NEW BLESSINGS: Israel complained because they wanted new blessings, not the same thing. Is it possible that we can take each day's blessing for granted to the point that rather than thank God for what we have been given, we refuse to receive it because it is the same blessing we had yesterday? Lamentations 3:22-23 is a passage that addresses this subject. The profit Jeremiah lamented over the condition of Israel but at the same time recognized that every day God was actually giving them a new blessing and a new act of mercy. It reads, "It is of the LORD'S mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. They are new every morning: great is thy faithfulness." Each day of our lives presents new challenges and God responds by providing us with sufficient grace and mercy to see us through each new day. The song writer says, "Great is thy faithfulness, morning by morning new mercies I see. All I have needed thy hands hath provided, Great is thy faithfulness, Lord unto me."

We don't mind the same blessing

Finally, brothers and sisters rather than complain about receiving the same blessing, we should be praising God because he still blesses us today, like he did yesterday.

We consider what God does for us day after day, we should have little to complain about.

I don't mind if God blesses me today, like he did yesterday. If he blesses me like he did yesterday, everything will be alright!

Like Israel we have all faced our Egypt experiences and God keeps delivering us. But there is somebody complaining that God keeps delivering us in the same way. The are waiting for him to do something spectacular. But I won't complaint if God delivers me today like he did yesterday, as long as I get delivered.

Like Israel we have faced our Red Seas. But somebody is complaining that every time we get to the Red Seas of life, God does the same thing, he just rolls back the waters. Why doesn't he add some variety. Why doesn't he build a bridge over the Red Sea or dry it up all together. I don't know about you, but I won't complain, if he rolls back the water today, just like he did yesterday, as long as I walk through on dry ground.

Like Israel we have been through our wilderness experiences. But somebody is complaining that God keeps giving us the same water in the same old way. Why doesn't he spring forth a fountain in the mountain. Why doesn't he shower the wilderness with rain and created a lake resort? I won't complain if he makes a way for me today, like he did yesterday, as long as he continues to make a way out of no way.

The story is told of the church that allowed its members to complain about what they didn't like.

One member said the choir sings the same old songs.

Another member said the deacons pray the same old prayers.

Somebody else said the preacher preaches the same old sermons.

After everyone finished there was an old mother who sat on the front. They asked her for her complaint.

She said, "I don't complain about the choir's singing, because God gave me a song to sing, that angels can't sing because I been washed the blood!"

"I don't complain about the deacons praying the same prayer, because I know that prayer changes things!"

"I don't worry about the preacher talking about the same God every Sunday, because the same God who brought me over the mountain will carry me through the valley!

I don't know about you, be glad to take yesterdays blessing again today!

If God answered my prayer yesterday, I don't mind if he answered it again today!

If the Lord healed me yesterday, I won't complain if he heals me again today!

If he put food on my table yesterday, I'll be really grateful if he does it again today!

Again and Again he blessed me with more than I deserve!

Again and Again he raised me to heights I have never seen!

Again and Again he inspired me when my head was hanging low!

Again and Again he saved me from the plots and plans of my enemies!

Again and Again he showered me with mercy although I moved incredibly slow!

Again and Again he washed me in the blood of the lamb!

I hear him say, do it over and over again. For as often as you do this, you do it in remembrance of me.

It's the same bread we had last time, because it reminds us of the body of the Lord!

It's the same wine we had last time, because it reminds us of the blood the same savior!

It's the same blood, but the blood never loses it power!

It reaches to the highest mountain! It flows through the lowest valley. It's the blood that gives me strength from day to day. It will never lose its power!

This blood that shed on an old rugged cross!

On this cross Jesus died, but Early Sunday morning, he arose!

Every day of my he rises again, just like he did yesterday..

…and that's all right!

20/20 Vision

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 28, 2005

SCRIPTURE: For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known. 1 Corinthians 13:12

Introduction

Do you wear eyeglasses? If so, what can you see without them? There are many people who wear eyeglasses to adjust the sharpness of their vision. Often glasses help us to see things that are far away. Sometimes they help us to things that are close to us. Either way, eyeglasses serve to improve the way we see the world around us.

In America, Optometrists measure the sharpness of our vision by measuring what we see at a distance of 20 feet. A person who has 20/20 vision is one who can see clearly what is normally seen at 20 feet. A person with 20/100 vision means that he must be as close as 20 feet to see what others can normally see at 100 feet.

What about our spiritual vision? Is it 20/20 or 20/100? Can we see and understand the world with a spiritual eye with 20/20 vision or do we have 20/100 vision?

When we are saved, the Holy Spirit fits us with a set of spiritual glasses that helps us to see the world with 20/20 spiritual insight. Without the help of the Holy Spirit we would always be moving around in the world blindly. "That's why one song writer wrote, Amazing Grace how sweet the sound that saved a wretch like me. I once was lost but now I'm found, blind, but now I see!"

Our spiritual glasses could actually be called "Son glasses." Not sunglasses that we see in the stores, but a set of spiritual eyes that we get when we know the "SON" of God.

When it comes to our spirituality, there are two types of glasses: Those that help us see the SON of God in everything and those that try to block us from seeing the SON. The goal of one type is to help you see the world as God's sees it. The goal of the other is to keep us from seeing God by concealing our true identity. These kinds of glasses reduce the amount of SON light we are able to see.

There are many who face the world every day with a distorted view of life. They are wearing SON blockers but they need SON glasses that can help them see the whole scope of life from a new perspective.

As Christians, we know that we see a very small part of God's universal plan for mankind. We see with the carnal eye. However, when we look with our incarnate eye, aided by SON glasses, instead of being blinded by what we see, we view life with a spiritual eye.

Exposition

The 13th Chapter of Corinthians is the second of three in which Paul examines the gifts of the spirit and compares them to spiritual graces. The Corinthian church had been divided into four parts over the issue acquiring and using gifts of the spirit.

He focuses on one of the graces, "love", showing how it is superior to any of the gifts such as tongues, prophecy or knowledge. He noted that some gifts, like tongues, or prophecies would cease to exist (13:8) but the real strength of the Christian life would never be diminished by time or condition. He showed how the grace of love, for example is far more important to acquire than gifts. As he detailed how love operates he noted that if he had all of the gifts but didn't have the grace of love, instead of operating on a higher level, he would be empty. His words in verse two " And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing."

Paul noted that a time would eventually come when every believer would be able to see clearly the truths of God's word. Diminished perspective is common, but those who come to know God fully get a new perspective. The new perspective gives them a new appreciation of what is truly important, lasting and most effective in the service of God. He compared the new perspective to that of a mature person over a child. Perspective makes the difference.

The carnal man sees life as though looking through a dark glass. The perspective is not Godly. However, Paul reminds us that the time is coming when all will share the same perspective and see the same things. That day will come when we will all see Jesus face to face!

Aspects of 20/20 Spirituality

Those with 20/20 spirituality are those who have had their vision corrected by the power of God. Whether we are students in school or adults going into the workplace, we need to enter with God's way of seeing things or we won't be able to see our way.

Without God's spiritual glasses that gives us 20/20 vision:

LIFE MAY BE A BLUR. If we lose sight of our objective, our energies and activities are spread out over a variety of patterns that are blurred and unclear. Moreover, even if we keep our objective in sight but fail to concentrate our energies, our lives still become a blur.

NEAR SIGHTED: The near sighted can't see their goal because they can only see things that are close to them. They live for today. Therefore their energies are not concentrated on achieving a goal because all they can see is today. They follow the general creed that they should eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow may never come. The Holy Spirit corrects nearsightedness and helps us to focus clearly on those things that are present as well as in our distant future.

FAR SIGHTED: The far sighted person is just the opposite. He or she is able to see the goal, but can't see how to manage the daily flow of time, talents and resources to achieve the goal. They see their goal but can't discipline themselves to make it happen. They see the NFL but can't focus on the high school and college education that comes before the NFL. God's spiritual glasses correct this flaw in our spiritual sight and help us to get control of our lives now in preparation for the future.

Why We Want SON Glasses

NOT TO IMPROVE OUR LOOKS. There are many who buy sun glasses to improve their looks. Sun glasses are purchased because of the way they will make the wearer look. The emphasis is placed upon the frames. Will the frame make the wearer look good? Will the frame accentuate the wearer's positives?

In a similar manner many approach life from the viewpoint of getting that which makes them look good and feel good regardless of any other consequences. The "sun glass" perspective of life suggests that we should do that which makes us look and feel good as priority items. This is the attitude of the free wheeling, happy-go-lucky person, who constantly seeks the next thrill and refuses to take life seriously.

We don't want God's SON glasses because they will make us look good to our friends, but because they will help us look good to GOD.

NOT TO REDUCE THE LIGHT: Some buy sun glasses to protect their eyes from the sun. Regular sun glasses reduce the light we see. It makes things appear more pleasant than they really are. They alter reality. There are many who live in an altered state of reality. On the other hand, SON glasses work to help us walk in the light rather than blocking out the light. When we walk in the light we are able to grow stronger in our relationship to God.

SUN GLASSES MAKE DARK TIMES EVEN DARKER: On dark days, sun glass people have an even more difficult time because sun glasses make things darker by blocking out the light.

In difficult times we need the light. Sun glass people find dark days are even darker because their perspective makes things worse. Sun glass people can't see the bright side of bad situations. Things are dark; and because they see with the carnal "sun glass" eye they see the bad side of everything. A lost job, love or fortune is terminal when seen from the perspective of sun-glass people. They give up on themselves and life in general.

However, when things get dark we don't want them to get darker, we want to be able to see the light; that's when God gives us 20/20 vision and helps us walk in the light.

Because we can see clearly

Finally, brothers and sisters, we rejoice because we can see clearly as long as we let God show us the way.

Because God has given us 20/20 vision we have both 20/20 hindsight and 20/20 foresight.

We can now look back and realize, with 20/20 vision that if it had not been for the Lord on our side we would have been lost.

We can now realize, with 20/20 vision, that it was only the power of God that picked us up and turned us around.

But our 20/20 spiritual vision also helps us see our own future. Paul said, "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face." 20/20 vision helps us to see through the storm and rain to the bright side of tomorrow.

20/20 vision helps us see through the difficulties of the moment to the day when everything will be alright.

Wearing SON glasses, a Christian gets a new perspective on life that puzzles those around us who wonder what is wrong with us.

A Christian always wears his or her SON glasses but there are special times when we must be sure they are close by. They are SON glass moments.

When hard times approach and it seems like we can't make our way, that is a SON glass moment. Reach for your SON glasses and you'll remember Psalm 37:25, "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

When death has invaded the ranks of your family and friends and you reach an all time low, that is a SON glass moment. That's when you remember 2 Corinthians 5:1 "..if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

When it looks like you've placed yourself in an impossible fix that you cannot escape, that is a SON glass moment. That's when you remember 2 Corinthians 9:8, "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work:"

When it appears that every thing is going wrong and you are headed for a catastrophe that is a SON glass moment. That's when you remember: Romans 8:28, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

When life seems to have reached its darkest point, that is another SON glass moment. That's when you remember: Psalm 30:5 "..weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

When you are wearing your SON-Glasses dark days look a little brighter.

- Hard times feel a little easier; heavy burdens get a little lighter

- Failures become opportunities for success; Setbacks as changes in direction!

Who is the maker of these SON glasses? Who is the author and finisher of this faith?

It's not Ray-Ban, Oakley, Smith or Diesel..

His name is Jesus!

He died out on Calvary!

Jesus! Who arose from the dead! Jesus! Jesus!

I know it was the Blood

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 29, 2006

SCRIPTURE:"For the LORD will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you. And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever." Exodus 12:23-24

Introduction

To whom or to what do you attribute your success. Many people attribute their present status to a variety of influences that include both major and minor influences. Many say their ability to write is because wonderful teachers took their hands in their hands. There are many musicians who look back on a tough music teacher who insisted on rigorous discipline as the source of their musical talent. Still others accredit a tough coach for athletic skills and abilities or some other challenging mentor who developed their abilities. Everyone attributes their success to one influence or another.

There are many who say that the reason for their professional success is their education from fine institutions such as Southern University, or Grambling. Yet, education alone does not guarantee success. There are many people who have superior education who are incarcerated. There are others who have exquisite educational backgrounds but are unemployed. Obviously, there is a reason behind the success, a secret that is unrevealed to the general public that accounts for whatever we have accomplished.

There are some who credit their business success to their networking management skills. They conduct workshops and clinics to show others how "they" did it. Business knowledge, management skills and experience play a major part in our business success, but there are millions of people with the same skill and ability who did not succeed. There has to be component that makes your situation different from the others. What made your effort succeed when similar efforts of others failed? What's the difference? Obviously, just your knowledge and skill alone did not make this happen.

In the same sense, there are many who attribute their salvation to type of church to which they belong. Is being a Methodist, Catholic or Baptist that saved us from ourselves? Is it holding membership to a church with a high ceiling, large steeple and comfortable settings that saves us? Does church membership itself impact our salvation at all? There are millions of church members who fill our pews on Sunday but are not saved. Many of these may preach, teach Sunday School or work in church ministries and still not be saved. If church membership alone could do the trick then all of us could boast a sure salvation, because we "belong."

The source of our success and our salvation is the same. Nothing but the grace of God can account for our ability to overcome the many obstacles that we have faced.

Nothing but the Grace of God can account for our overwhelming rise despite adequate opportunity.

Nothing but the Grace of God can account for our survival in these perilous times.

When it comes to our salvation, we know that it isn't our church, denomination or service that saves us because that's something that can only be done through the blood of Christ.

As Christians, we are sure that our salvation is from one source. We don't think or guess about it. We agree with the words of the song writer who said, "I know it was the blood that saved me."

Exposition

This text focuses upon the children of Israel as they received instruction upon leaving the land of Egypt, enroute to the promised land.

The people suffered considerable hardship while in slavery. They were treated as second class human beings, no more than chattel or stable animals. The endured much and suffered long. Yet deliverance was upon them. God himself stood ready to answer their prayers for deliverance.

Moses commanded each family to kill a lamb and to paint their door posts of their homes with its blood. It was promised that prior to the deliverance they were to eat a sacrificial lamb then wait for God's death angel to pass. Those who were securely behind a door post with blood on all three sides would be saved from the coming death. However, those outside of this protection would experience the death of their first born sons.

As the death angel passed, the first born of Egypt and Goshen died unless the blood was stained upon their doors. Those inside were saved.

Thereafter, that night was celebrated as the "Passover" so that all could remember how God's death "Passed Over" them and had mercy.

The blood represents God's Protection

For Israel the blood over the door posts was more than simple lamb's blood over a doorway. The blood meant when trouble came they would be under the protection of God himself. The Egytians were not sure about the Threat Moses gave the Pharaoh, but there were many who had witnessed other acts of God which demonstrated that his people were in deed protected. Today, people of God protected by GOd as well. We are not protected from evil in the sense that no evil can befall us. We are protected from the ultimate effects of evil. Satan attacks the people of God on every hand, but he never succeeds. Our body may fall prey to many of the attacks of Satan but our spirit remains forever married to the savior. This was the case with Job. His soul was protected while his body was attacked. Job responded, "Yea thou he slay me, yet will I serve him." We rejoice in the truth that "No weapon formed against us shall prosper." Just as Satan attacked Christ himself, he could not succeed at touching his soul. We too enjoy that same protection.

The blood represents God's Provision

For Israel the blood represented God's provision. They were about to take a journey without knowing how long it would take or how they would be fed. They ate in haste and carried a minimum of supplies with them. They counted on the power of God to provide for them. Just as Israel carried with them what they could, we today should do the same. In our daily occupations we should do our best to provide for our daily sustenance. Oftn however, even our best is not good enough. That's when we count on the Lord to provide. Like the Widow who trusted God to provide although all she had was two sticks and a cup of meal and a cruz of oil. She did what she could and counted on God to provide the rest. We have learned that God will provide. The blood of Christ does not promise us prosperity, but it does gives God's promise of provision of our daily bread. Jesus reminded those who doubted God's provisionary powers to consider the birds of the air, how they are fed by God constantly. The song writer added, "His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me."

The blood represents God's Revelation

Under the protection of the blood in Goshen, the Israelites received directions that reflected the revelation. They were told of their ooming deliverance. It was a welcomed revelation. Because of the blood of Christ believers to days can also expect a revelation of things to come. No matter how difficult the times, the blood of Christ has assured us the victory. It has been revealed to his in the very ways that he has carefully provided for us. It has been revealed in the way that he has protected us through difficulties. Moreover, it is revealed to us in his written word. No wonder the song writer declares, "Blessed assurance Jesus is mine, Oh what a foretaste of Glory divine. Heir of salvation, purchase of God. Born of his spirit, washed in his blood." His blood gives us the assurance that the cause of the kingdom of God will ultimately be victorious. It is a special revelation that is guaranteed by the blood of Christ himself.

It was the blood

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that we owe our lives and our salvation to the blood of Christ.

There is no other source to which we attribute our hope. That's why the song writer declared, "My hope Is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus' name. On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand.

Some may attribute their life's journey to education, but I know it was the blood.

Some may think their hard work has brought them thus far, but I know it was the blood.

Some may envision themselves as the source of their own good fortune, but I know it was the blood.

There are some things in this world that we cannot attain without the blood.

There is a fountain from which you cannot drink, but the power of the blood brings you to that fountain!

There is a promise that you cannot claim, but the power of the blood allows you to claim that promise!

There is a hope that you cannot enjoy, but the power of the blood allows you to enjoy that hope!

The song write asked the question, "Shat can wash away my sins?" Then he answered what every born again Christian already knows, its "Nothing but the blood of Jesus!"

What can make me whole again? Nothing but the blood of Jesus!

Oh precious is the flow that makes me white as snow, nothing but the blood of Jesus!

When you've been washed in the blood, you sing with new meaning, "I know it was the blood. I know it was the blood that saved me."

I know it was the blood that took my hatred and turned it into love!

I know it was the blood that took my despair and turned it into hope!

I know it was the blood that took my disgrace and turned it into honor!

I know it was the blood that took my enemies and turned them into friends!

I know it was the blood that took my worries and turned them into confidence!

One day when I was lost, he died!

He died up on a cross! I know it was the blood that saved me!

He died to give me a chance to turn my life around!

He died to give me a chance to get a clean start!

But early Sunday morning arose, to guarantee my salvation!

Gone With The Wind

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 4, 2005

SCRIPTURE:" The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." John 3:8

Introduction

Have you ever found yourself doing well one day, only to watch all that you have achieved disappear before your eyes? It is a disappointing feeling when lives are lost and possessions and livelihoods all vanish. When we review what is left behind, we may agree with Margret Mithcell, that they are "Gone with the Wind."

America has faced many tragedies in its history, some of which have been historic in scale reducing cities to rubble, destroying livelihoods and stealing lives. It seems that every generation has to face its share of tragedy which purges our landscape and clears the way for rebuilding. Margaret Mitchell's Book, "Gone with the Wind" described the complete destruction of the City of Atlanta a city that was known for its beauty and eloquence but was married to a system of slavery that was unacceptable. When Atlanta was burned by General Sherman, it was more than just buildings that were destroyed, an evil system died too. An economy and way of life based on slave labor was effectively "Gone with the Wind." Yet, Atlanta was completely reborn and now stands as a shining example to the world as the city "too busy to hate." Out of its tragedy came a great opportunity to rebuild.

Similar tragedies have plagued great cities in America. In 1900 Galveston, Texas was hit by great waves from the ocean that had such great force that 6,000 people were killed. The city of Galveston was literally wiped off the map. Yet, instead of dying the city arose like a Phoenix from the ashes. It was rebuilt, but this time with great storm walls to protect itself from evil winds. It stands today as a city that refused to be a footnote in history, "Gone with the Wind."

In 1871 the great Chicago Fire destroyed much of Chicago. The skeptics said Chicago was gone. Thousands died. Yet, today Chicago stands. Just as San Francisco stands after having been brought to its knees by an earthquake. It stands just as New York City stands after absorbing the sheer hatred of terrorists after the September 11, 2001 destruction of the world towers. They refused to be footnotes, of great cities that were "Gone with the Wind."

Now, America sees several great cities and towns about to be tested at the same time. When the winds of Hurricane Katrina hit the Gulf Coast with category 5 force, not one city but nine great communities felt her blows. While the world sees one city, New Orleans there were nine in total that felt the devastation of Hurricane Katrina: New Orleans (1.2 million);Mobile, AL (198,000); Gulfport, MS (71,000); Biloxi, MS (50,000); Psacagoula/Moss Point/Gautier, pop. 42,000;Slidell, La (26,000); Ocean Springs and Long Beach (17,000), and Bay St. Louis/Waveland(12,000). It's nine great communities whose combined death toll is expected to be in the double digit thousands that now must decide whether they will become historical footnotes and be "Gone with the Wind" or whether they too will rise from the chilling grips of disaster and seize the moment to make a new and brighter future.

Sometimes, it takes great winds to move us. On a personal level, we often involve ourselves in activities and directions that threaten us, but we ignore the warnings. It is only when great winds of change overwhelm us that we rise from the rubble and do what must be done in a better way.

It's hard to understand the winds of change and the destruction that tears at us with tremendous force. We don't know where they come from and where they go. We only know that when they leave they take with them much of what we possess and love, but they always leave more behind than they take.

So as the world considers the devastation of the dark days of August in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina and mourns what is gone, we must also consider what has been left behind. It is an opportunity to rebuild in a way that pleases God and draws the applause of the Saints.

As Christians, we must not view the destruction of these nine communities and mourn what is "Gone with the wind." We must praise God for the life and opportunity that remains behind.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains the nature of the wind.

The immediate circumstance surrounding this text involves Jesus as he explains the nature of the Holy Spirit and how it operates. Those around him, such as Nicodemus, asked "How can these things be?" In answering them Jesus explained the nature of the Holy Spirit by describing the nature of the wind. In his explanation, we learn a great truth about the wind from the maker of the wind himself.

The wind, in Jesus' words in verse 8, blows where it wants. We hear the sound of the wind but cannot see it. We can track its movements by watching what it touches and its effects on various environs; yet we know little about when it comes, when or where it will go. We cannot control the wind. We cannot detour the wind and force it to change its direction. We don't know where the wind is going, but we can definitely tell where it has been.

The comparison was designed to let us know that just as we do not know with precision the nature of the wind, neither do we know, with precision, the workings of the Holy Spirit especially as it relates to being born again.

Being born again means that we begin again brand new. We start over with a clean slate and a new appreciation for our relationship with God. We are new people. Paul, writing to the Corinthians said, "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature, old things are passed away, behold all things are become new." (2 Corinthians 5:17)

Being born again is starting again spiritually as if we were little babes with renewed energy, vigor and zest. Everything that once inhibited us does not exist anymore. Fears, doubts, anxieties, failures, short comings and hang-ups are all.. "Gone with the Wind."

Measuring Your Wind

Each of us is affected by the various winds blow in our lives, but how can we measure our wind. How can we tell that a storm is coming? How do we know when situations are about to change? How can you measure your wind?

In the late 1700's a rear Admiral in the British Navy by the name of Francis Beaufort, developed a method of describing or measuring the wind which has become known as the "Beaufort Scale."

There is a parallel to the 13 stages of the Beaufort Scale to the winds that blow in our lives.

CALM: The first four stages of the Beaufort Scale describe what is called "Calm." It involves light air and a gentle breeze. We only notice the leaves on trees in motion, nothing more. When we are calm, we are unmoved, unfazed undisturbed. Generally we are at peace. The wind blows but it does not disturb. Calmness comes with spiritual growth. It is not natural. We are inclined to be everything but calm, but those who trust in the Lord have learned to be calm.

STRONG BREEZE: The next three stages see changes that move from a moderate breeze to a strong breeze. In a moderate breeze the dust swirls and paper on the ground flies and small trees begin to sway. In a strong breeze umbrellas become difficult to open and large branches on trees begin to sway to and fro. Strong breezes move some people to make changes in their lives. Some change their direction, careers and relationships. Strong breezes change spiritual relationships too. We don't stay long when there is a strong breeze because it's pushing us to move although we often push against it only to find that our umbrellas of protective excuses usually can't open or get caught up in strong breezes.

GALES: The next four phases involve what Beaufort calls gales. In moderate gales it's hard to walk against the wind. In Fresh gales, cars often veer off the road. In strong gales there is structural damage to houses and in whole gales trees are uprooted with 60 MPH winds. When we reach gales in our lives, we can't hold our lives on the road, everything becomes uprooted and our lives are turned upside down. We behave like crazy people, we talk like fools and we even dream crazy dreams, experience paranoia and hurt those that we love most. Gales are destructive. They uproot marriages and friends and turn lovers into enemies. Gales are terrible winds that damage our spiritual structure. Some even start to doubt and distrust God. In gales, they ask, "Why us?" As the whole foundation of all they believe slips from under their feet and is boomeranged away in the wind. Faith gets challenged when the gales come.

HURRICANES: The last two stages involve storms and finally Hurricanes. When hurricanes come the winds reach above 100 miles per hour. High waves are produced on the sea as high as 25 or 30 feet that come crashing down on the shore with power and force, causing widespread structural damage. A hurricane releases the energy of a 10 mega-ton nuclear bomb exploding every 20 minutes. Hurricanes root up, destroy, wash away, trample and wreck anything in their paths; then as quickly as they come they are gone..taking with it nearly everything that was, but always living something behind. Many lives have been hit by Hurricanes that bear their own names. Many of us have destroyed our own marriages, destroyed our own businesses, relationships and opportunities. It was a hurricane bearing our own name that did the most damage, most of the time. When we looked up much of what we thought was important was "Gone with the wind" our task is to build upon what was left behind.

What The Wind Can't Take

Finally, brothers and sisters, the winds of great hurricanes can take away our houses and possessions. The winds may rob us of loved ones on this side of glory. But there is one thing that is never "Gone with the wind" and that is our faith in the power of almighty God.

Gone with the wind may be furniture and appliances!

Gone with the wind may be shoes and clothing!

Gone with the wind may be photographs and a few what nots!

But when the storm left us alone it could not take our faith in God.

When we have faith in God we learn how to talk back to storms and defy them to steal our future.

That's what Kirk Franklin had in mind when he wrote these words, "Because of faith I have a brand new day. The sun will shine and I will be Okay. That's when I told the storm to pass. Storm you can't last, you got to go away!"

Storm, you won't take away my hope, because "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and Righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name."

Storm, you won't take away my trust in God because "I trust in God wherever I may be. On mountain peeks or on the raging sea. Though come what may. From day to day. My heavenly father watches over me."

One of the images that was shown in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina was the image of a young man who rummaged through the remains of what was left of his home. His house was leveled to the ground. His car was gone. Everything he had was gone with the wind. But underneath the rubble he found his guitar. He said with that guitar he planned to rebuild his life again.

Somebody here is despondent because of who and what has been lost, but down in the rubble!

Down in the rubble!

Down in the rubble there is something that the storm left behind.
Down in the rubble is an undying faith in an all powerful God.
With this faith, raise up from the contaminated waters and rubble hope for a new life!
Talk to the storm!
Tell your storm “I know a savior, his name is Jesus”
He refused to be blown away by the winds of hatred and despair.
They nailed him to an old rugged cross. He died on Calvary..
But early Sunday morning…he enabled the faithful to say!
I may be down, but I’ll rise again!

Your Labor is not in Vain

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 8, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." 1 Corinthians 15:58

Introduction

Do you ever feel that your work is unappreciated? There are many who work hard on a daily basis but they never receive any indication that their work is appreciated. Many are not looking for a trophy or a plaque. Neither are they seeking a full-page feature in the local newspaper. Sometimes, just a simple thank you from their employer would satisfy them. Employers often overlook this truth. Many of them take their workforce for granted and reduce workers to little more than paid labor, without feelings.

Sometimes that attitude exists even in the church. Many dedicated workers often feel their contribution to the church's ministry is overlooked or unappreciated. Experienced pastors and church leaders have learned the value of a simple "thank you." They have learned that a sign of gratitude can let church volunteers know that their labor is noticed.

Who are these laborers? They are Sunday school teachers, youth workers, janitors, musicians, ushers, trustees and deacons, food service volunteers and van drivers. They perform a myriad of unseen services but are nevertheless valuable to the church ministry.

We often recognize pastors and musicians with great days of appreciation, but what about countless others whose work is equally important? The church, in some small way should show love to these volunteers as well.

In the greater community characterizes the worker with terms spoken with a patronizing tone such as "common laborer" "employee" or "manual laborer."

Once a year the nation salutes working people in the nation. The day, called "Labor Day," is generally a salute to the working man and woman.

President Grover Cleveland signed Labor Day into American law in 1894 as he sought to win the affections of the nation's working people after using Federal troops to break up railroad workers strike. To appease workers, he initiated the salute to the working people of America and organized labor. From its inception in the 1880's to 1950's the labor movement grew. In 1955, the merger of big labor organizations to form the AFL-CIO was the high point of worker accomplishments.

In 1938, organized laborers pushed for and received a national minimum wage. The government placed restrictions on the number of hours a worker can be forced to work in a week without overtime pay. Restrictions were also put in place to protect children from companies that would profit from child labor.

In 1955, it is estimated that 50 percent of American workers were members of unions. By 1995, that number decreased to less than 15 percent. Today, it is estimated that only about 13 percent of American workers are unionized.

Only when workers organized were they able to acquire a 40-hour work week instead of 60-hour work week, including sick leave, maternity benefits and pensions. Unorganized, workers were discriminated against, fired for political or sexual reasons and enjoyed no job security.

Without organized labor, some companies will exploit the disorganization of workers. Minimum wages will be cut or stalled, benefits will gradually disappear and unions will be ignored. Without political strength government bodies will not pass laws that will protect workers in their areas.

Once each year many people celebrate "Labor Day" without even knowing why it is celebrated. To most it marks the last day of summer. It is the last day of relaxation from labor before it's time to return to labor.

Every day is "Labor Day" in the eyesight of God. He is always aware of the works of every believer and rewards each person accordingly.

As Christians, we know that the work we do for Christ is meaningful and will be rewarded. Our labor is never in vain.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he gives words of encouragement to those who work in the master's vineyard. The intent of the text is reflected in the six key words:

Steadfast

"STEADFAST" This word is "hedraios" (hed-rah'-yos), derived from a word meaning "to sit", it means: "sitting, sedentary, or by extension: firm, immovable, and steadfast." In this context, the word means to take a strong stance so as not to be knocked off our feet.

Each believer must position himself in life to stand strong against the attempts of Satan to dissuade us from the Christian service. Steadfast means to be firm in our faith and in our Christian walk.

Unmovable

"UNMOVEABLE" This is "ametakinetos"(am-et-ak-in'-ay-tos), and it means: "not to be moved from its place, to be unmoved"; metaphorically: "to be firmly persistent." Being "unmoved" has some different connotations. The song "I shall not be, I shall not be moved" sometimes refers to the pew a person sits in. Or it could have to do with a kind of emotional deadness; a person may come to church and be "unmoved" by the worship, or the invitation to salvation. But here, the meaning is clear. To be unmoved means that nothing can move us out of the job we have been assigned by the Lord. The believer who is unmovable is not one that cannot change, but one who cannot be persuaded to quit or throw in the towel in our area of service.

Always Abounding

"ALWAYS ABOUNDING". This is the word "perisseuo" (per- is-syoo'-o), and literally means "to exceed a fixed number of measure, to be left over and above a certain number or measure". Furthermore, it means "to overflow, or to be abundantly furnished with, to have in abundance, to be in affluence, to excel or exceed." This is the word used in the story concerning the feeding of the multitude - after everyone was miraculously fed, there was an abundance, there were "left-overs" (John 6:12). It also is used denote "wealth"; Jesus said, "...a man's life does not consist in the abundance of his possessions." (Luke 12:15) Therefore, in our text, the message is that we should strive to be wealthy in doing the Lord's work, to excel in the Lord's work. Whatever we do for God should be our best. We should give him 100 percent. We should not be satisfied with just getting by, but we should strive to abound!

Work and Labor

WORK comes from "ergon" (er'-gon), and means "business, or employment, that which any one is occupied". Or it may refer to what is done, "a product, any thing accomplished by hand, art, industry, or mind." It's an act, or a deed. Our work for the Lord is our "job for God". Something we actually do that is required by His call, we are His servants. It has a description, it requires time and "energy", a word coming over directly from the Greek.

LABOR is the word "kopos" (kop'-os); it is found 20 times in the NT, and refers not so much to the hard work, but the weariness which accompanies it. In its most primitive form, the word means "a beating", like that administered by the task masters. Consequently, it means "trouble", or "intense labor united with trouble and toil." In I Thessalonians 1:3, it is the word used in the expression, "labor of love".

We should be willing to give our time and energy to the service of the Lord so that we can do a "good job" in his service. While some may say "You don't have to go through all that trouble" we should want to "trouble" ourselves for his service.

Vain

"VAIN" is the word "kenos" (ken-os'), meaning "empty, vain, or devoid of truth." It is used to describe places, vessels, etc. which contain nothing, or of men who are empty handed, or come without a gift. Metaphorically, it would mean “destitute of spiritual wealth”, or acts which result in nothing, are vain, fruitless, and without effect - having no purpose. It can even mean “senseless”, and “foolish”.

When we work for the Lord our work will never prove to be empty or void. Even though at times it may appear that it is unprofitable we are encouraged to know that even the smallest jobs in the church are important and valuable to kingdom building.

Colossians 1:28, 29 reminds us that we “labor according to His power”.
God’s work is done every time we pray for another person; when we call someone on the phone or send a note of encouragement. It’s the “labor of the Lord” when we teach a child, teen, or other adults; when we paint the wall in a Sunday School room, or change a light bulb in the hallway, or manage the sound system, play an instrument or sing, or work on a committee, or care for the offerings that are brought.

Therefore

Finally, brothers and sisters, We must consider the first word in the text, “THEREFORE.” It refers back to what has been written before. Therefore points to the previously mentioned reward for Christian service.

“Therefore” points to the great reward that God has for those who trust him.

Therefore reminds us that God has a reward and a place for those who labor in the kingdom.

I don’t know about you but I’m working to achieve the “therefore..”

There is a lot of power in the “therefore” because the word of God says..

Psalms 1:5, “Therefore” the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous.

Luke 6:36, Be ye “therefore” merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

Luke 12:40, Be ye “therefore” ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

Romans 14:19, Let us “therefore” follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another.

2Thessalonians 2:15, Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle

The reward for our labor is promised in the “therefore.” In heaven, the place of the the “therefore”

It’s a place paid for by blood of Christ on Calvary!

He died on an old rugged cross, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead!

“Therefore,” Let not your heart be troubled!

Come and go with me, to my father’s house!

Your labor is not in vain!

For Whose Sake Are We Blessed?

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: Now in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam the son of Nebat reigned Abijam over Judah. Three years reigned he in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Maachah, the daughter of Abishalom. And he walked in all the sins of his father, which he had done before him: and his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as the heart of David his father. Nevertheless for David's sake did the LORD his God give him a lamp in Jerusalem, to set up his son after him, and to establish Jerusalem: Because David did that which was right in the eyes of the LORD, and turned not aside from any thing that he commanded him all the days of his life, save only in the matter of Uriah the Hittite 1 Kings 15:1-5

Introduction

Many today are existing on good will that was meritoriously earned by their grandparents. In small communities, goodwill is often extended to the grandchildren of a patriarch who left a good reputation. Aware of this fact, many seniors spend their remaining years trying to make sure that they leave a legacy for their grandchildren that will open doors for them, rather close doors in their faces. As a result many go to great lengths to emphasize to the new generation the importance of a good family name and reputation. Many youth have found opportunities available because grandparents worked, sometimes unseen, to provide for their education and nurture.

Consider the little boy who grew up in the only house in his subdivision that had trees. His family lived in the area for several generations and trees of all kinds surrounded his house. All of the other houses had small shrubs, pretty grass but they had no trees. In the summer, the boy enjoyed the shade of the big trees that were almost 75 years old and climbed high in their limbs. On his 13th birthday, the boy's father came home with a small seedling in his hand and took him by hand in the yard. When questioned him his father said, "It is the family tradition for every child on his or her 13th birthday to plant a seedling in the yard.â•• How long will it take for this tree to get tall enough for me to climb?" asked the boy "About 50 years." Came the answer. "I'll be too old to climb it then," said the boy. "We have trees around this house because your great grand-parents came here on their 13th birthday and planted the first tree. The tree you are about to plant is not for you, it's not for you to climb, it's to provide shade for your great-grandchildren."

A strange phenomenon is happening in the African-American community, our grandparents are rapidly assuming the role of parents. In increasing numbers, it is a grandmother who is the contact person at the local school. It is grandmother that is problem solver when a grandchild has a personal problem. It is the grandfather that co-signs a grandchild's loan; and it is grandfather, who is often called to referee disputes of grandchildren. While many families still have the presence of a strong Godly grandfather, because an increasing number of our families are female headed, it also means that more than any other generation, grandmothers become the focal point of strength in the African-American family.

We celebrate and revere Godly grandparents because they are our connection to the world beyond us.

We celebrate our Godly grandparents because they show us the old time way.

We celebrate our Godly grandparents because they have shown us the way to please God, through precept and example.

As Christians, we know that God has blessed us through our ancestors. We have learned from both their strengths how to walk the path that leads to eternal life.

Exposition

This text focuses on Abijam the grandson of King David, who was blessed in his reign as king, because of his grandfather, David.

Abijam was the grandson of King David. King David was a good man, who had a few flaws of his own, but his humble spirit and intense faith made him a "man after God's own heart." David's desire was to establish his "house" or generations before the Lord. Because of his great loyalty to God, despite his imperfections God blessed his children, for his sake. Some of David's descendents strayed away from what they were taught. This was the case with his son Rehoboam and his grandson Abijam.

David is a type of believing, faithful grandparent. Abijam is the type of a grandchild that is the recipient of favor from God, not because of his own works but because of the life of a grand parent.

In reality, Abijam was like his father who ruled for 17 years outside of the laws of God. He literally ignored God's instruction and direction and lived according to his own standard. Abijam was a descendent of David, he knew that family history of loyalty to God but ignored it.

In this text Abijam constantly found himself at war with his father's enemy Jeroboam. He constantly found himself in conflict with the armies of Jeroboam until, Jeroboam attacked Abijam with all of his forces. Although overwhelmed, Abijam successfully defeated Jeroboam's armies completely, stopping once and for all the menace that the invasions caused.

The text indicates that his heart was not perfect before the Lord, like David his grandfather. The text says "father" but the term father is often used in biblical explanations to mean father, grandfather and sometimes even great- great grandfather. Despite not having the perfection of heart, God blessed Abijam for David's sake.

The text indicates that God showed mercies to a grandchild because of piety of a grandparent.

Godly grandparents influence us

The human race is different from other elements of creation in that we influenced by your grandparents when other elements of creation are only influenced by the parent. A young bird huddles close to its parent until it grows strong enough to fly on its own. The grandparent of that bird plays no role in its life. Kittens and puppies are protected and nurtured by their parents, but we don't see any involvement, affection or recollection of the grandparents. The only connection that plants seem to have with the previous generation is that they bud and push away the last lingering leaves of the previous generation of plants. A new rose is not influence by grandpa rose.

However, among humans grandparents influence us. If that grandparent is a godly person that influence is for the better. Often grandparents have more influence over our children than we do, especially if we are extremely flawed. In that context, grandparents influence history. Pastor Glenn Pease notes that "Hezekiah was one of the best kings God's people ever had, but his father was Ahaz, and he was one of the worst they ever had. But his grandfather was Jotham and he did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord. Hezekiah took after his grandfather rather than his father, and the result was victory for the kingdom of God."

The glory and the lingering influence of grandparents is that their lives reach beyond their own lifetimes and grandchildren as great grandchildren learn of their strengths and weaknesses and emulate them. Each succeeding generation seems to grow weaker and more worldly, until a grandchild or a great grandchild remembers the life work of a grandparent and points its generation back to some level of sanity. In this way, grandparents influence history, for generations to come.

The first 17 verses of the Book of Matthew records 42 generations of grandparents. Beginning with Abraham, every grandfather is listed leading up to the birth of Christ. It is literally the grandparentâ•™s hall of fame. Each of the generations was blessed because of the life work of the grandparents.

Even when grandchildren seem to mess up things, God somehow seems to reward godly grandparents long after their life journey ends by blessing their grandchildren.

Abijam was not living right, but God had mercy on him because of his grandparents. David was his grandfather, a god fearing man. Jesse was his great-grandfather, a strong man who walked after God. Obed was his great-great grandfather one who knew the Lord's presence. Ruth was his great-great-great grandmother one who told Naomi his kinsman great-great-great-great grandmother Naomi, "You people shall be my people and your God shall be my God." Abijam was blessed, not because he deserved to be blessed, but because a long line of grandparents before him caused God to frown on his actions, but to show him mercy for their sake.

Three R's

There are three R's that each generation must appreciate with respect to grandparents.

ROOTS: Our grandparents give us roots. We are often blessed because of our roots. Where we come from often helps us define who we are. It is a strange truth exists among human life: Often a bad parent becomes a wise grandparent. Experience becomes a great teacher. Many grandparents didn't learn the lessons of life as parents, their wisdom did not come until they were grandparents or great grandparents. As parents often underplay the importance of spending quality time with our children, as grandparents, we learn better. As parents we are usually unable to spot the qualities of previous generations in our children. However, as grandparents we see a little of Grandpa in that smart but free spirited grandson. We see a lot of great grandma in the daughter who is highly industrious and proud. Grandparents can also see the flaws of previous generations duplicated in another. Because they know the family roots, they earnestly work to prevent a reoccurrence of a grandfather's failure in a grandson, or a grandmother's weakness in a great grand daughter. They also go into prayer for their grandchildren, and God often answers that prayer, shielding and protecting undeserving grandchildren, for the sake of a believing grandmother.

RELATIONSHIPS: Grandparents are people too, but grandchildren will never know that unless there is a relationship between them. Believe it or not grandparents were once young, but life didn't stop because you were born and they were suddenly grandparents. Relationships are needed to better understand and appreciate grandparents. Many grandchildren are surprised to learn that grandma and grandma are not old fixtures from the past stuck in a corner, but they seem to have so much fun, why? Because they have learned how to live, after spending a lifetime learning how to make a living. Grandchildren need private time with grandparents, without the parents around, so they can build relationships. When relationships are built children learn that grandpa can tell the funniest stories. He learns that grandma can sing; that the two of them can dance, tell jokes, and laugh until they cry. They also learn that grandma and grandpa still go on dates and enjoy romance! Relationships help grandchildren to learn the one important truth they need to know about life; how to live a fruitful life.

RESPONSIBILITY: We are blessed because, whether we like it or not, grandparents get in our business. They are the voice of responsibility in most families. We pride ourselves in all the new things we purchased with a credit cards, but grandpa wants to know our credit score, has it been raised or lowered as result of spending. They are the voices that keep warning us to spend more time at home and less with our friends, political connections, business partners and drinking buddies. They keep getting in our business. Even when parents butt out grandparents have a way of asking all of those questions that trouble us as we persuade ourselves that we are doing great. A mother or father may hesitate to inject themselves into a dispute between a husband and wife, but grandma will get deep into it forcing loose ends to meet. Grandparents are not perfect but experience has taught them the virtue of responsible living.

Reverence

Finally, brothers and sisters, there is a fourth "R" that we learn from godly grandparents and that is reverence.

Whether grandparents know it or know they have more influence on their grandchildren than their children. Grandchildren are drawn to their grandmothers and grandpa's. One of the qualities they learn from them is reverence to God.

One granddaughter told her Sunday School teacher that her grandmother has a boyfriend she talks to on the side. Surprised the teacher listened for more. "They have a thing going on." Said the Little girl. I've never seen him but I know he's there because I've heard her talking to him. One day she planted a garden and she talked to him and everything grew. She planned a Thanksgiving meal and invited him to come, I didn't see him but he must have helped because she kept thanking him. She talked to him about my grades in school and they changed." The teacher asked, "What's this boyfriend's name?" The girl answered, "I don't know his first name, but I know it starts with D. his last name is Lord. Grandma kept saying D-Lord will provide. D-Lord will make a way. D-Lord will bless. My grandma and D-Lord got a thing going on!"

Every Godly grandparent has a thing going on with D-Lord!

This so because those who have experienced life in all of its shades and nuances, seem to know the Lord best. Often for their sake, we are blessed.

Those who have weathered the storm know the power of the Lord. Often, for their sake, we are blessed.

Those who have soaked their pillows with tears, wrestling with the tragedies of life, have learned that "weeping endures but a night, but joy cometh in the morning!" Often, for their sake, we are blessed.

Those who have watched bare cabinets and survived on light bread and air pudding, know that if they keep the faith, that Lord will make a way somehow! Often for their sake, we are blessed.

Those who have stood face to face with sickness and risen from their sick beds time and time again know that God is able! Often for their sake, we are blessed.

Just as we are blessed because of our grandparents, we are also saved because of the Grace of God.

We didn't deserve what God did for us by sending his Son, we are saved for his sake.

Our prayers answered only in his name. We have a place in the kingdom only for his sake.

Grandparents know that it is nothing but the grace of God that saves us and raises us everyday!

Ask any grandparent and they'll tell you...God is able!

God is able to take our:

-BURDENS and make them light; DISAPPOINTMENTS and give us renewed hope!

-FRUSTRATIONS and give us encouragement; DOUBTS and give us confidence!

-WEAKNESSES and give us strength; FEARS and give us courage!

Those who have walked the Christian journey can testify that God is a prayer answering God. They sing with confidence the words of the old hymn, "I know the Lord will answer prayer, for I tried him for myself!"

Every godly grandparent needs to keep telling the story!

Tell your grandchildren about the goodness of the Lord!

Tell your grandchildren that they must know the Lord for themselves!

Tell them about Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Tell them how early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

Tell them in the morning!

Tell them in the evening!

Tell them in the midnight hour!

Tell them no matter what comes their way...God is able!

The Lord Sees and Provides

SCRIPTURE:" And Abraham called the name of that place Jehovahjireh: as it is said to this day, In the mount of the LORD it shall be seen." Genesis 22:14

Introduction

Have you ever asked for something only to be told, "We'll see?" As children, we have often asked our parents for one item or another, without ever getting a definitive answer, just "We'll see." We often ask for permission but get the elusive answer, "We'll see." We think we are entitled to promotions on our jobs and apply for the advertised positions with eagerness, but answers deflate our enthusiasm when we hear, "We'll see." If we apply for bank loans with risky credit even our bankers say, "We'll see." Ask for admittance to a high competitive college and often the response is "we'll see." "I'll see what I can do" is usually just short of a confirmation. It implies a time of evaluation, consideration of risk and review of history. It injects the possibility of denial, but leaves the door open, depending on other extenuating circumstances.

In 1955, the United States government, fighting the cold war against communism, began a practice that became known as "plausible deniability." Powerful people in government were able to give orders for often illegal activities such as wiretaps, assassinations, etc without taking the blame for the results. Government officials took a wait and see approach. If the action turned out favorable, all was well. If it failed, the government denied any knowledge of the activity. The government took a "We'll see" approach to its questionable actions.

Whenever we hear the phrase, "We'll see" we are never quite sure whether it is a polite way to turn us down or reason to have hope. "We'll see," means different things to different people.

Consider Nebo the town drunk when he came to the big revival. The whole town prided itself in the fact that all of its citizens were baptized believers on their way to heaven, except Nebo. They prayed for him all the time but each time they brought him close to a decision all he would say is "We'll see..." Out of wine, out of money and real thirsty Nebo came to church on communion Sunday. Deepwater Baptist Church had a great reputation for serving whole glasses of the finest wine on communion Sunday. The church was always full on Lord Supper days for some strange reason. The unsaved on the mourner's bench, that meant Nebo, were only served water instead of wine. The choir sang greatly that Sunday, but all Nebo would say to the invitation was "We'll see." The deacon prayed well, but all Nebo would say was, "We'll see." The preacher preached a powerful sermon but all he would say was, "We'll see." During the communion service the members all got full glasses of the finest wine this side of heaven, but the one sinner in town got a glass a water. Prompted by a powerful thirst Nebo jumped up and shouted, "I want to join the church if!" The whole church shouted hallelujah, but the preacher asked, Nebo what he meant by "If." Nebo said, "Well, the preacher said God could do miracles and right now, he needed a miracle. I want to be a member of the church if he could turn water into wine. If I joined today, do you think that miracle could happen today?" Without thinking the whole church answered, "We'll see."

Consider the city boy who finally gave in to the pleas of his country relatives to spend a summer with them. The city boy had become accustomed to the order of things in his city environment. In his home the beds were neatly made, the floors were mopped and everything was cleaned. The servants in his home wore plastic caps when they cooked, the silverware was polished and the table was always neatly set. He was not sure that he would enjoy an entire summer in the country, with his distant and unrefined relatives.

Once in the country his uncles greeted him and aunts who made him feel warm and comfortable. So far so good. It appeared he could make it through the summer. Inside the home, he found the hardwood floors whitewashed, the beds neatly made and the table setting was neat. All silverware was polished and in order. This second test met his approval.

As he moved to his room, he passed the kitchen door and saw Aunt Mabel mixing ingredients for a large pan of dressing. She stopped, pulled out a small tin can, pulled out her bottom lip and loaded it with Bitter Garrett snuff. As she hummed and prepared the dressing, the snuff juice started running down the side of her mouth. He watched with amazement as the juice began for form a large juicy ball at the tip of her chin. Just below the snuff ball was the pan of dressing. A movement of her head to the left or to the right could be fatal.

As he watched one of his uncles approached him with a question, "Well my boy, have you decided to spend the whole summer with us, or will you high tail it back to the city?" The city boy took a long look at the snuff juice on the tip of Mabel's chin and said, "We'll see." The uncle asked, "We'll see what son?" He looked at the dressing bowl and answered, "We'll see where the snuff drop falls!"

When we present our situations to God, does he take a "we'll see" attitude. Like the government, does he adopt a role of plausible deniability, accepting credit for things that work out and denying the bad that occurs? Does he let us down easy by just saying, "we'll see" and never without giving us a real answer?

The Biblical record suggests that God considers each of our requests and measures them by two factors: His will for our lives and our history of faith and sacrifice. Combined, a true believer usually provides that God sees our need and provides for it every day of our lives.

As Christians, we are convinced that when God sees what we require and hears our pleas, he will provide for all of needs and many of our wishes because he is Jevovah-Jireh, our provider.

Exposition.

This text concludes the description of the Patriarch Abraham's decision to comply with the command of God that he sacrifice his son Isaac.

The willingness of Abraham to obey God is one of the finest examples of faith in scripture. When he traveled to the mountain top Abraham carried with him the essentials of the sacrifice, fire, wood and his son.

Abraham's obedience is often referenced but there is a wealth of importance in the question asked by young Isaac, "Where is the lamb?"

Just before he sacrificed Isaac, God showed Abraham a ram caught in the bushes that became the ultimate sacrifice instead of his son.

He named the place Jehovah-Jireh, or "The Lord sees and provides."

The power of this text is in the name that Abraham gave the site. It is commonly reported that Jehovah-Jireh means, "God will provide" but it just as important to know the full meaning of the name is that the Lord sees and the provides. In the Hebrew the phrase, "Yahweh Yir'eh" for "provide" means "The Lord sees."

In Old Testament times the people of Israel were commanded to worship the Lord in his holy mountain three times a year. Exodus 23:17 notes that God commanded men to appear before the Lord for worship and to bring their sacrifices. This is described as "being seen" by God. To be seen or taken seriously the believer had to worship and sacrifice. In return, God would "Yir'eh" or "be seen" as he provided for them.

Those who did not worship and sacrifice did not expect to be "seen" by God.

Abraham came to the mountain willing to sacrifice everything to please God. In this instance, it was not necessary to do so, but God "saw" his willingness and then provided a "ram in the bush."

This is the main point of this text; Abraham becomes the type of a believer who seriously desires to please God in every way, even to the extent of actually sacrificing his son. In the same context, we are shown God's response to worship and sacrifice…provision of what he needed.

The text shows God looking at the worship and sacrifice of the believer, then providing needed blessings based on that evaluation.

Because he both sees our need and supplies the response, he is seen as our Jehovah-Jireh,our provider.

God Sees Our Need

There are three aspects of our lives that God sees:

GOD SEES OUR NEED: God sees our daily needs. He scrupulously separates our needs from our wants and knows exactly what we need to both survive and thrive. Physiologically, we need food, clothing and shelter at the offset. Beyond that we need health care and emotional support. The scriptures indicate that God sees the need of even the most ordinary person. A widow woman who struggled to provide for family saw God meet her need by giving her what she needed on a daily basis. Christ saw the health care need of the man sitting by the pool for 38 years and provided it for him. The Apostles saw a lame man at the temple gate and answered his plea by saying, "Silver and Gold have I none but such as I have, give I thee." Mary and Martha grieved over the loss of Lazarus and we see Jesus responding to their need in a unique way. The preponderance of scripture teaches that God sees the immediate need of every believer. Whether our needs are financial, involving the payment of loans, meeting daily demands or just making ends meet; God sees our need. This should be a reason for hope for every believer because we know that our individual situation is not unnoticed by the savior. Therefore, the songwriter asks, "Why should I be discouraged? Why should the shadows come? Why should my heart be lonely and long for heaven and home. For Jesus is my portion. A constant friend is he. His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me."

GOD SEES OUR FAITH: God sees our faith. He knows those who trust him and believe in him. While the world may laugh at the man who constantly says, "The Lord will make a way" God does not laugh; he sees that man or woman and responds accordingly.

Faith believes that God can act if he chooses, despite the impossibility of a situation. We do not know how, but we believe he can. Jesus has often noticed people with such faith. A widow woman with an issue of blood for 12 years had little chance of making it through a crowd of people to see him, but he she believed if she could just touch the hem of his garment she would be made whole. Jesus noticed her in Matthew 9:22 and said her "faith" has made her whole. Another woman of a different race came to Jesus asking help for daughter. She knew that the odds against getting a Jew to help a nameless woman of Tyre and Sidon were great, but she chose to do so anyway. In Matthew 15:28 Jesus noticed her faith and said, "Oh woman, be it unto you, even as thou wilt."

The late Adam Clayton Powell had a campaign slogan as a Congressman from Harlem, it was "Keep the Faith, baby." That is what those who trust in God must do; keep the faith because God sees our faith. Though times may get difficult in our lives, we must keep the faith. Though the odds against our survival, restoration and resurrection are great, we must "keep the faith."

Faith is the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things unseen. Faith achieves the impossible because it somehow gets God's attention. When God sees our faith, a resolution to our problem is just a step away, according to his will.

GOD SEES OUR SACRIFICE: God sees how far we will go for him. He sees how much we will give up for him. He sees it as we show it everyday.

The story is told of four church members: "Everybody, Somebody, Anybody and Nobody." Each time the call for sacrificial service was given the response was always the same.

"Is there a person who is willing to stay late and help prepare for the service?" Came the call. Everybody thought Somebody should be glad to do it and Somebody felt assured that Anybody would come forward. Who responded? Nobody.

A second call was issued, "We need volunteers to share in the prayer and visitation of the sick?" Everybody said Anybody who is a Christian should be glad, and both of them expected Somebody to come forward. But who came forward? Nobody.

After a challenging Sunday School Lesson about the love of God toward man, the question was asked, "Which of us will be willing to lay down his life for a friend?" Anybody felt Somebody should be willing, and both of them thought Everybody who claimed the Christian life should be willing to sacrifice himself. But who was really willing to sacrifice? Nobody.

Of course, when it was time to go to heaven and receive the reward for sacrificial service Everybody was willing, and Somebody stood in line first, just in front of Anybody. But who received a reward because of sacrificial service? Poor old Nobody."

God sees our sacrifices. He sees us give beyond a tenth of our earnings to support the work of his kingdom. He sees us give our time and talent to a point that it goes beyond being just liberal, but actually sacrificial. What is important to believers is not that our names appear in the newspaper or that we are given credit for our work. What is important is that God sees our sacrifice.

God Provides our Needs

Finally, brothers and sisters we should remember that when God sees our need, sees our faith and sees our sacrifice, he will provide our needs.

That is the important lesson that believers learn in the course of our life's journey: When The Father, Son and Holy Ghost say, "We'll see" it does not mean, We'll get back to you later. It is not a put off or a put down, but it means, Jehovah-Jireh, God will see and provide accordingly.

Abraham called the place where God provided Jehovah-Jireh, because it's the place where God said, "We'll see."

When we go to God with medical needs, he says, "We'll see" and we call him JEHOVAH-RAPHA because that means 'I am the Lord that healeth thee'.

When we go to God for peace amidst terrible storms, he says, "We'll see" and call him JEHOVAH-SHALOM because that means that God is our peace. In this troubled world we must experience God as our peace.

When we go to God for victory over adversity, he says, "We'll see" and we call him JEHOVAH-NISSI because that means the Lord is our banner of victory. He is the lord of hosts and commands the vast heavenly army. He will fight the battle for us and give us the victory.

When we want our needs met we go like Abraham and we call him JEHOVAH-JIREH because he both sees our needs and provides.

When our supply of food is running low, it is good to know that the Lord will provide.

When our money is gone and provisions have nearly disappeared, it is good to know will continue to provide for us

When there is disruption, or insecurity all around, it is good to know that God can bring peace in the midst of confusion.

No matter how tough times get, God is still God. He is still our God whose -Power never weakens

-Grace never disappoints
-Love never leaves
-Promises never fail
-Glory never diminishes
-Joy never ends
-Foundation never shakes
-Truth never changes
-Supply never shrinks
-Blessings never stop coming!

If you think God does not see what you are going through, remember the words of the song writer, "We are our heavenly father's children, and he knows just how much we can bear!

God sees our tears in the midnight hour!

God sees our concern for our families and loved ones!

God sees our despair over our current situation and while we are still praying about it, help is on the way!

Abraham called the site of the sacrifice Jehovah-Jireh. It was a place of sacrifice. It was a holy place.

Scholars now report that Solomon built a great temple on the very hill of Abraham's sacrifice.

However, over a thousand years later, on the remains of the same hill, built like a skull, outside of Jerusalem called Golgotha, another sacrifice was made!

For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!

On the same hill where Isaac asked, "Where is the lamb?"

God made the eternal sacrifice of his only beloved son!

His name is Jesus!

He died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning arose from the dead!

Everyday he is still Jehovah-Jireh!

He sees my need and makes a way out of no way!

He's name is Jesus!

Jesus! My provider!

Jesus! No other name I know!

Life is not Fair, But God is Good

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 25, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "Truly God is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart." Psalm 73:2

Introduction

Do you sometimes feel that life has been unfair to you? When you consider all that has happened to you in your life's journey, do you sometimes feel that it just isn't fair that not everything is turning out perfectly? You gave it all you had but your team lost? You followed all the rules but that which is important to you has slipped through your fingers. Sometimes we feel like shouting, "Life is not fair!" We have thought about it a time or two, but we wouldn't say it aloud. What we've been thinking is half true.."Life isn't fair." The other half is that while life is not fair "God is good."

In an ideal world, everything would be perfect. Good would always be rewarded and bad would always be punished. In an ideal world, those who work hard would be able to enjoy the fruits of their labor. Farmers who till the soil and plant crops would be able to expect great harvests. Investors who wisely invest in myriad of opportunities would be able to reap a handsome profit. Those who are careful about their diet and manage their health according to all of the rules would be able to enjoy a life free of sickness and disease. In the ideal world, only criminals would go to jail those who would not work would not prosper and those who showed little industry would not be able to be the recipients of great reward.

Unfortunately, we do not live in an ideal world where everything is fair. Our world is far from the ideal. In our world, the best teams do not always win the game; the best man does not always get the girl and it often rains on our well-planned parades. It angers us sometimes that the hardest worker does not get the raise and the bad guys actually get away.

Sometimes those who try to do right get frustrated when they are included in tragedies. We often feel we should have been exempted by virtue of our special relationship with God. After all, we are his children; shouldn't we expect God to make the rules of life apply fairly to us?

In reality, life is not fair; Because life is not fair we don't always want fairness from God? If we don't want fairness from God, what do we want? We want God's goodness. We want his mercy. We want him to give consideration to our weakness and tilt the scale to our advantage. That's something he couldn't do if he was always fair. He can show mercy upon us because mercy is a part of the goodness of his divine nature.

As Christians, we know that life often deals us troublesome blows that seem unfair. However, we serve a God who takes the unfairness of this life, add his goodness and become recipients of his mercy. We can deal with the unfairness of life, as long as we remember that God is still good.

Exposition

This text focuses on the question of the fairness of life and the goodness of God. Scholars believe the writer of the Psalm is Asaph, a chief musician. This psalm takes analytical look at the position of the righteous in the scheme of things. He raises the question of why the godly suffer so frequently.

The text explores the situation but begins by giving the conclusion. The last verse of the chapter also restates the conclusion.

Between verses, 2 and 27 Asaph probes the unfairness of life especially as he looks upon the difficult times of the righteous, as compared to the easy life of the unrighteous. In moments of despair, his soul shook to the point of slipping in his faith (v2).

What did he observe? He observed how the righteous seem to suffer while the wicked seem to prosper. He observed how the righteous were afflicted by tragedy but many of those who disrespected God were able to escape; not only escape but prospered because of the misfortune.

When he considered the many ways that life is unfair it was frustrating. At verse 16, he notes that even the thought of the ultimate unfairness of life "was too painful for me."

Asaph reached a turning point in his building frustration (v17) "Until I went into the sanctuary of God." He understood better when he was able to place his frustrations before God and God showed him a clear picture how God operates. He emerged with an "understanding." When he understood the nature of God he considered himself a bit foolish (v22) for complaining.

When he carried his frustration to God, he considered that in all of what he called the unfair situations of life, he has continually been with the Lord and the Lord has been with him. (v23). He shifted his focus to his relationship with God. When he did, he noticed that God continuously held him up by the power of his hand.

Then he came to a reassuring truth in verse 24, "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory. "

Though the difficulties presented by the unfairness of life often pressed him to his limits of what his body and heart could endure, God always gave him strength. At verse 26, he says, "My flesh and my heart faileth: but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever. "

He went into the sanctuary of God frustrated about the unfairness of life, but he arose with a new conclusion, that God is good and he should draw closer to him, especially when life seemed unfair, so that he could declare the goodness of God among men.

What should we do when the unfair occurs?

When we are plagued by the unfairness of life, what should we do? Many respond in a variety of ways. Some respond like the coach who complains that the referee has made an unfair call. We can yell and scream and throw a tantrum. Others choose to sulk and wallow in self pity because life has treated them unfairly. Some give up entirely. What should believers do?

ENTER THE SANCTUARY OF GOD: Whenever believers are depressed over their life situations, those are good times to enter the sanctuary of God. Your sanctuary is the place where you meet God. It may be your church edifice. It may be in the silence of your bedroom. It may be at your kitchen table. In your sanctuary, your private place, talk to God. That is the time that God clears your mind and gives you clearer picture. Do not stop praying because life has been unfair, that is the time when we should pray more. Do not stop worshipping, worship more. In the sanctuary, Asaph came to an understanding. In your sanctuary, reaffirm your trust in God and he will help you understand. Proverbs 3:5 "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understanding."

ITS NOT ALL BAD: The difference in the believer's attitude and that of the non-believer is that we see the good in every situation. Obviously, there is an inherent unfairness when a believer suffers a loss but a non-believer arises unscathed, but we are confident because we know that for believers, all situations work out to our advantage in the end. It may be bad, but it is not all bad! It may look terrible, but it is not completely devastating. Why? Because the word of God reminds us that "all things work together for good for them that love the Lord and are the called, according to his purpose." That means there is a blessing in every problem, every tragedy, every storm, every attack, every loss and every devastation. The devil meant adverse circumstances for our hurt but God makes them turn out for our God.

HE HAS NEVER LEFT YOU: Before believers succumb to the temptation to doubt God, they should remember that God has never left them alone. That was Asaph's conclusion. He remembered that in times past he never dropped his faith in God and God never left him alone. When believers consider their walk with God, they soon realize that even though they have lived in an unfair world, God has responded to the unfairness of the world by giving extra favor to believers. It was unfair for Israel to be punished so hard by Egypt but God showed favor toward them in the land of Goshen because they received fresh water and fertile lands even when others suffered drought. God has favored us too. If he would have been fair to us he would have let us drown in our own sins, but he lifted us by his grace. If he would have been fair he would have allowed the world to trample us when we failed in school, in business, in our marriage or in a life pursuit; instead he favored us with one more chance. The fact is, God has been extremely unfair in his dealing with us. He saved us when the fair thing to do is to give us what we deserve. It's a good thing that God has not given us what we deserve but given us his grace! He has never left us, although the fair thing to do would have been to leave us like we often leave him. He has never stopped blessing us, although the fair thing to do would be to stop blessing us every time we stop praising him or paying our tithes and offerings. He has never abandoned us. He has never left us alone.

When we think life is unfair, remember God is good!

Finally, brothers and sisters, whenever we get the blues and want to focus on the unfairness of life, we should remember that God is always good.

When we reflect on all that happens to us in any given year, think of God's goodness to us. The ungodly focus on what went wrong, what was lost, the pain and the grief. Believers are not oblivious to loss, but wee see the goodness of God too.

We see the goodness of God because we study his word. We cannot turn many pages without being reminded of the goodness of God.

Psalm 31:19, "Oh how great is thy goodness which thou has laid up for them that fear thee."

Psalm 100:5 "For the Lord is good, his mercy is everlasting and his truth endureth to all generations."

Psalm 106:1, "Oh give thanks unto the Lord for he good and his mercy endureth forever."

Inherent in God's goodness is mercy and grace. When God shows us mercy he goes beyond what is fair and gives us what we do not deserve, which is the benefit of his favor.

God's favor gives us strength when we should be weak!

God's favor gives us victory when we should suffer defeat!

God's favor gives us hope when we should be in despair!

God is so good that even when we are not at our best God still loves us. When we are faring less than our potential God has showered us with love. John 3:16 says "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Life is not fair but God is good all the time and all the time God is good!

I don't know about you but I've found that God is good all the time!

In the midst of sorrow, God is good, because he brings us joy!

In the midst of conflicts, God is good, because he brings us courage!

In the midst of danger, God is good, because he brings us safety!

In the midst of weakness, God is good, because he bring us power!

In the midst of defeat, God is good, because he brings us triumph!

In the midst of the storm, God is good, because he speaks to the wind and waves!

God is so good that he sent his Son to die for us on Calvary.

He is so good that Early Sunday morning he Christ arose from the dead! He's so good that he looks down on us every day and showers us with blessings from heaven!

Life is not fair, but I'm so glad that God is good!

Extreme Make-Over

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 2, 2005

SCRIPTURE:" Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new. " 2 Corinthians 5:17

Introduction

What if you could change something about your appearance, what would it be? There are many who stare into the mirror and often wish there was a way to change their appearance. Some would change their ears. Others would change their eyes. Others would order a nose that was a little less prominent or lips that were either larger or smaller. Some would even like to brighten their skin or darken it a bit. There are some who dream of being thinner and others who are trying desperately to gain weight. If there were a way to make ourselves over, it would be interesting to see the results.

Americans have a pre-occupation with our appearance. We spend millions on cosmetics, clothing, and many other extras to improve our outer appearance.

If we were born with brown eyes, we will buy ourselves a set of blue eyes.

If we were born with short hair, we will buy longer hair and weave it in place.

If our faces begin to wear with age, we will have it artificially lifted.

The popular television series, "Extreme Makeover" focuses on the preoccupation with outward appearances. Each week the nation is shown before and after scenarios of individuals who were unhappy with their appearance, then placed in the hands of professional hair stylists, cosmetic surgeons, dentists and fitness experts. These experts perform complete physical makeovers of the participants, courtesy of liposuction, implants and cosmetic surgery. When the contestant returns the audience sees a physically attractive person who looks very different from the original. The audience cheers as the new "made over" person walks out on the stage.

There is nothing wrong with desiring to improve our physical appearance. There is nothing wrong with a great hair do or facial that improves our appearance. We should remember, however, that the physical makeover only changes the outside; however, the inside remains the same.

What if there was a new TV series called, "Extreme Spiritual Makeover?" The host would show a person who was well dressed, attractive to the eye, but ugly on the inside. Film clips would be shown to the audience of the contestant wearing nice clothes, looking physically attractive but cursing, lying, stealing, cheating, and displaying the worst attitude in the world. The participant agrees to place himself in the hands of three experts: The Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. After a period of prayer and repentance, the participant is shown returning to the stage smiling and happy after being completely made over by the power of God.

There is good news. God offers an extreme spiritual makeover to anyone who is willing to be a participant. You will still look the same on the outside, but you are guaranteed to be 100 percent different on the inside. The word of God calls this extreme makeover being "born again." It's the idea that you are remade in the image of God. Romans 12:2 says we should not be "conformed to this world but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." This makeover begins with the heart and soul and extends itself even to our thinking. It is a complete makeover that yields and brand new person.

As believers, we rejoice in the fact that God is in the makeover business. If we trust our lives to him, he will make us over again.

Exposition

This text focuses on the Apostle Paul as he explains how being "in Christ" helps us to become new creatures.

Paul, who was once a persecutor of the church, became one of its greatest supporters once he become "in Christ." The key to being the new creature or new person is not simply to be around Christ but to be "in" Christ.

A person who is "in Christ" goes beyond simply acknowledging Christ in a public confession of faith. Being "in Christ" goes even further than simply being associated with the visible church. "If any man be in Christ," as George Whitefield puts it, means to "partake of the benefits of his sufferings. To be in him refers not only to an outward profession, but by an inward change and purity of heart, and cohabitation of his Holy Spirit."

A person who is truly "in Christ" places his or her entire life in the hands of God, to manage, control, direct and order. A person who is "born again" literally places his or her soul in the hands of God.

These changes happen on the inside. They do not alter our physical appearance, but they do alter the way we relate to others as well as the way talk and respond. Those who know us will instantly see the change in our attitudes and responses to life situation.

Sin makes us ugly

Romans 3:23 makes it abundantly clear that we have all sinned. We have all messed up in one way or the other. One person's sin may have been obvious because everyone sees it, and another man's sin is less visible, but never-the-less still a sin. There are no little sins and big sins. Any sin is an infraction of the law and all sin carries the same penalty.

Sin makes us ugly on the inside. The prophet Isaiah describes our plight and our appearance: “All of us have become like one who is unclean, and all our righteous acts are like filthy rags; we all shrivel up like a leaf, and like the wind our sins sweep us away” (Isaiah 64:6).

The theologians call our sinful way “original sin.” It means we were born with a defect that makes us do what we do not want to do, say what we do not want to say and go where we do not want to go. It is a part of the nature that came with our birth package. It is inside of us and it makes us a very unattractive person.

We have so much sin in us that we are not only unattractive we are down right ugly!

The hardest part for anyone to admit is that he or she has ugly ways, ugly attitudes, ugly dispositions, and ugly feelings. We usually like to believe everyone else is ugly, but certainly not us.

Once we conclude that we are ugly on the inside, then we realize the need for a make over.

Make-up and Dress up Won’t Do.

Some approach their spiritual lives the same way they approach the outer appearance. When they see ugly scars and marks they try to apply make-up.

Make-up by nature touches up and covers up our flaws in the same way that a make-up can cover a bruise or a cut to hide it from view. We can cover up a bruise but it is still there. We can hide the blemishes in our face under a layer of rouge and base, but the blemishes are still there.

The same is true spiritually simply apply make up to a sinful life does not change it; it only covers up the flaw.

Attending church on Sunday and reading the bible while you live with a person with whom you are not married, is a cover-up. It is a thin layer of make-up that has the proper appearance but covers-up an ugly spiritual arrangement.

Expressing love for God who we cannot see hides the fact that we hate a few people that we can see. Our public expressions tend to hide our true feelings.

Jesus was met by a rich young ruler who had all of the appearances of a devoted man. He asked what he had to do to be saved. He was shocked when Jesus said, “One thing thou lackest, sell all you have, take up your cross and follow me.” What he was told required a complete change on the inside. Jesus told Nicodemus that to be completely saved he had to be born again.

Make-up often requires a rouge. Rouge, technically is a coloring that makes something appear pretty or filled with cheer. Many lives have rouge applied. They look cheery but its just rouge, made up to put on a good public face,

Sometimes it includes mascara. Mascara, by definition is applied to the eyelashes to brighten their appearance. The word mascara has Spanish origins. It means to wear a mask. We wear masks to hide what we really area. There are millions of ugly lives that are hiding behind layers of mascara.

Makeup never changes us, just the way we appear.

The same is true about dressing up. We can wear the finest but our clothing does not change us. Underneath the designer dresses and suits, weaves and wig, shoes and slacks is the same person; unchanged.

Make-up and dress-up, while important to our outer appearance does not impress God, who sees behind the makeup and knows that nothing has changed.

We Need A Make-over

What we really need is not make-up but a makeover. It is a complete spiritual remake. Not a touch up. Not a highlighter. We need a make-over.

What we need can only be done by God he is the divine Surgeon who can do what we need.

Our make-over will involve taking out a few things and putting in others.

We'll take out hatred, fear, anxiety, bad attitudes, hatred, impatience, grumpiness, rudeness, bad language, uncontrollable desires, and immorality.

What will we put in? Two passages of scripture gives us an idea what we need.

Galatians 5"22-23, "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control. Against such there is no law".

Colossians 3:12-17, "Therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, put on tender mercies, kindness, humility, meekness, longsuffering; bearing with one another, and forgiving one another, if anyone has a complaint against another; even as Christ forgave you, so you also must do. But above all these things put on love, which is the bond of perfection. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to which also you were called in one body; and be thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatever you do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through Him."

When we get a make-over, we become new creatures in Christ. New from the inside out. Now made up, but made over in his image.

Old Things are Passed Away

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that when we get a total spiritual make-over, old things are passed away and all things become new.

When God changes us, we may have the same outer appearance but everything else become brand new.

Naaman, needed a make-over, he was told to go and bath himself in the muddy water, seven times. When emerged after the seventh time, he was a brand new man.

The woman at the well came looking for water, but she left a brand new creature, old things were passed away and all things had become new. She said, come see a man who told me all I've ever done.

David was a man after God's own heart, but he had committed a great sin. He prayed to God saying, create in me a clean heart oh God and renew a right spirit within me. He walked away a new man, old things had passed away and all things were made brand new.

When we get a spiritual makeover, our old failures and shortcomings are passed away and he gives us something better.

When we are truly made over, God takes out:

—DESPAIR and replaces it with a replaces it with delight!

—BURDENS and turns them into blessings!

—WEAKNESSES and turns them into strengths!

—FAILURES and turns them into successes

—RESLESSNESS and turns it into peace of mind

—OBSTACLES and turns them into opportunities!

—Enemies and turns them into friends!

On television, the Extreme Make-over is paid for by sponsors and advertisers, trying to sell a product.

But when we get a spiritual make-over, there are no advertisers or sponsors because Jesus paid it all.

I hear him say, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest, my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

Jesus paid for our make-over over 2000 years ago.

Nailed to an old rugged cross on a hill called Calvary, Jesus told his father, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do."

He paid for our make-over when he bowed his head and died.

He died on Calvary, but early Sunday morning he arose from the grave..

With all power in his hands..

Power to make my life brand new!

Power to make me over again!

The Esther Factor

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 2005

SCRIPTURE:"…and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" Esther 4:14

Introduction

Recently as we watched the tragic accounts of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita in Louisiana, we saw the pictures of women, holding on to children and scraping resources to protect them against flood waters and starvation. These women, both old and young, were a reflection of the strength of our women to stand tall in crises and be the hands and feet of God.

It wasn't just during Hurricane Katrina, the African-American community has a rich history of strong women. Black women have played important roles in advocating, promoting and championing the causes of our race. It seems that God has always touched a few women in every generation to rise above the norm and speak, lead and champion the cause of their families specifically or our race in general.

We have heard the names before and know them like the backs of our hands. Women such as Sojourner Truth, Harriet Tubman, and Phyllis Wheatley are the champions we study about in school as they fought against slavery, prejudice and the right of our people to be free.

In the time when America had accepted the institution of slavery, the thundering voice of Sojourner Truth, raised its consciousness to a new level. The attention she received and the impact she made was if she was born for "such a time as this."

Harriet Tubman, dangerously moving into the South to help slaves escape on the Underground Railroad, came at a time when slaves were looking to be free but could find no way. Her boldness made it clear that she was born for "such a time as this."

Wheatley wrote poetry and prose in a time when Negroes were thought to be incapable of constructive thought. She raised that consciousness in way that made it obvious that her very birth was divinely timed so that she could be available for "such a time as this."

No matter what generation of our history we study, from Nefertari in Egypt to Carol Moseley Braun in America, there are Black women who always seem to rise to champion the cause of our race. Their very lives seem to suggest that they were born, especially suited for times "such as this."

No generation has been without great women who have championed our causes.

However, the greatest champions are not in the history books. They are in our own families. Each family that looks into its own history won't have to look too long before it finds a long line of women who seemed to have been born for "such a time as this."

When women seem to appear on the scene in at just the right time, with just the right amount of strength; the bring into a situation the "Esther Factor." This is the power of God using one woman to take actions that save a generation.

Our history is that of mothers, grandmothers and great-grandmothers who seemed to have been equipped with the essentials necessary to address the circumstance of the family. In the time in which they lived, they had what it took to get the family through. Whether it was courage, scholarship or willingness to rise above depravation, God always seemed to use them in peculiar ways, as if they were born for "such a time as this."

As Christians, we salute the African-American woman because God has used her beauty, courage and strength throughout the generation to help lift our race. Today, she is still doing the same. It is if her very existence is for "such a time as this."

Exposition

This text focuses on Esther as she is told that her rise to throne of Persian was destined so that she could save her people from destruction.

The story of Esther concerns a king called Ahasuerus, the grandfather of Cyrus the Great, who married a young Jewish girl named Esther, a captive taken from the city of Jerusalem. It also involves her cousin, Mordecai, who became a judge in the city gates in Susa, the capital of Media-Persia; and an officer of the King's court named Haman.

The events of the Book of Esther take place when Israel was in captivity under King Ahasurus. Many of the Jewish people had been allowed to return home to rebuild the city of Jerusalem and restore their worship, others for various reasons stayed. The story is that of a king and his kingdom. The king divorces the queen who is at his side when the story opens, and thereby becomes a lonely man by his own decree. He is powerless to change the decree after it is issued, and in his loneliness, he begins a search for a new queen. Esther, under the control of her cousin, Mordecai, is brought before the king and he falls in love with her. Because of her beauty, he immediately chooses her to be his queen and exalts her to the second place in the kingdom.

Esther's rise to the throne was well timed. There was a movement being planned by Haman to destroy the Jewish people. She would ultimately be the single presence that would make the difference. Haman managed to pull the wool over the king's eyes and deceive him into signing a decree to destroy all the Jews in his kingdom. Haman and Mordecai are instantly in direct conflict because Haman was "the enemy of the Jews." Learning that Mordecai is a Jew, he vows to eliminate him from the kingdom. Mordecai overhears the plot and gets word to Queen Esther that she would need to act to save the people. He is confident that the people would be saved, either by her hand or by someone's hand because God would not allow his people to be destroyed.

Thus he utters the words of this text, “and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?”

Eventually Esther is able to expose Haman’s plans, and save the people but not before watching Mordecai raised to a position of prominence and Haman hanged from gallows he built for Mordecai.

Follow the Trail

Today, African-American women should follow the trail of Godly women who lived with honor and dignity and struggled in hope. The record of African-American Ansistahs is long and glorious and deserves the study of those who begin the walk themselves.

Every woman who begins a walk down a career path should be able to recognize the foot print of the persons who have blazed the trail. Those who were successful all had something in common. Paul called it “honor” which meant to him that they lived godly lives, kept their word, and gave service to others.

In the past, God has prepared godly women for service in the kingdom and endowed them with special gifts. If this generation gains anything from reviewing the women of the past it should be how they were prepared themselves and use their gifts for God. Look at the components of women who used the Esther Factor in their lives. They were:

PREPARATION: Women like all others, must be prepared. Gone are the days when it was believed that learning was a man’s pursuit because a woman’s place is confined to a dish pan and a wash pot. Women of the past learned what was required to compete in their generation. They learned to read and write. In other times they learned to type on typewriters and to operate machinery. Likewise, women must prepare themselves for the challenges of the 21st century which means acquiring verbal and language skills and a proficient use of technology. A woman who has no email address has stamped a date on her preparation that flashes “smart but out of touch.” Despite her resume, she presents herself as one who is not prepared to transact business in the mode of this generation. To be women of honor, women must prepare.

STRUGGLE: Women must be prepared to struggle. To paraphrase Frederick Douglass, success cannot come without a struggle. The person who wants success without struggle is like the farmer who wants rain, but does not want the thunder and the lightning associated with rain. The women of our history have shown a unique willingness to struggle. Whether it was the slave mother who labored to protect her children or women who defied laws of segregation as they worked to change social circumstances. Today’s women should study the struggles of how God touched others in their career. Such study allows this generation to expect a struggle and to prepare themselves to overcome.

PLAYED THE GAME: Women must play the game with dignity and grace. That is what is learned when we study the record of others. They were able to maintain amazing dignity about themselves, despite adverse circumstances. They may have lived in shanty houses with wooden floors, but those floors were kept clean and spotless. They may have worn dresses woven from flower sacks, but they were always neat and clean. The way a woman carries herself is the way she plays the game. The world is wary of the woman that cusses like a sailor and walks like a cowboy. Moreover, the woman who strives to honor her word, care for her family and be true to her husband or vow of celibacy is deemed a woman of honor by the general community. She is revered because of the way she plays the game..

Remember the Esther Factor

As women move into the maintain stream of American community life, they should remember that their rapid rise is not accidental. It is the hand of God moving in the gender that causes women to realize great success. It is God's hand, moving in often unseen ways, that is putting the pieces of the puzzle together for women. Women should remember the Esther Factor: Without God, we can do nothing.

While barriers against Black women are falling, many still remain. The U.S. Department of Labor reports that while 62 percent of Black women are now in the American workforce, most of the jobs are still technical, sales, and administrative support areas. These are jobs that do not offer high wages or full packages of benefits. Slowly the barriers are falling. In 1987 there were 172,200 businesses owned by Black women. By 1996, there were 405,000. Black women are moving into the workforce, business community, government and world leadership in large numbers. Sociologists point to the Black woman's attention to education as a primary reason. In the last decade there were 918,000 Black women enrolled in higher education, with only 55,300 in prisons, according to the U.s. Justice Department (1995). That is significant for our people because it is just the opposite of what is happening to Black men. In the same time period there were 556,000 Black men in college and 711,600 in prison.

The declining presence of Black men in educational circles and in leadership is paving the way for Black women who are moving from potential to position, for "such a time as this."

As women move from potential to position, they should always remember the "Esther Factor." Esther never forgot who she was and used every opportunity at her disposal to help her people. The Esther Factor, is the challenge of Black women today who are being encouraged not to forget that they are Black. As they begin to move in social socials outside of their own community, don't forget the huddled masses of your people who still need your help. Use your influence to reach down and help someone else.

Once in a position, Esther risked losing it all to help her people. She succeeded but she could have lost it all. The Esther Factor is the combination of faith and remembrance that prompts every successful woman to do what she can to help those who follow after her.

Watch How Others Have Used The Esther Factor

Finally, women should follow the path of great women of our past.

These were the women of faith who answered the question, "What doth the Lord require of us" by giving themselves to his service.

Their trail is long and clear.

If we follow the trail of Hannah it will find her telling the Lord to take her child and raise him in his courts. If we follow the trail of Ruth, we'll hear her say, "You people shall be my people and my God shall be your God."

If we follow the trail of the woman at the well, we'll hear her say, "Come see a man" who told me all I've ever done.

Those before us have made it clear that following the Lord is a rewarding experience.

When you follow the Lord you have somebody who can help you:

-carry your burdens

-face your future

-fulfill your responsibilities

-fight your battles

-solve your problems

-overcome your temptations

What doth the Lord require of us? That we worship him! We should worship him with the:

-spirit of Mary of Bethany

-power and strength of Deborah

-grateful and humble heart of Mary Magdalene

-faith of Ruth and the enduring hope of Rahab

What doth the Lord require? That we live for him everyday and every hour!

Dr. Watts declares "A charge to keep I have, a God to glorify. An ever dying soul to save to fit it for the sky."

What does the Lord require? That we love our neighbor as we love ourselves! What does the Lord require?

That we tell the world of the goodness of the Lord!

I must tell of the goodness of the Lord!

I must tell them how he touched my life one day, picked me up and turned me around. I must tell them how he picked up an old rugged cross and carried it up Golgotha's hill!

I must tell them that he died for me..

But early Sunday morning ... He arose with all power in his hands!

Exalted for a Purpose

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "Then thou spakest in vision to thy holy one, and saidst, I have laid help upon one that is mighty; I have exalted one chosen out of the people." Psalm 89:19

Introduction

Have you ever wondered why God placed you where you are today? Understanding the mysterious ways of God has been a puzzle to many over the centuries. We are no exception. We often wonder what why God selected us, out of all of his creation, and placed us in the unique spot that we occupy in the world today. It is humbling when we consider that God could have chosen anyone, anywhere to do what we do. Yet he chose use. We ask, "Why me?"

We are not alone in the query, many others before us have also asked the same question. David said in Psalm 8:3-4, " What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him? " Job asked in Job 7:17, "What is man that thou should magnify him?" Psalm 144:3 asks, "What is man that thou takest knowledge of him?"

The humble see the place that God has given them and ask, "Why me?"

The humble pastor charged to shepherd a congregation asks, "Why me?

The humble person who has been lifted to lead large assemblies, associations and conventions, often asks, "Why me?"

To those who pose this troubling question to themselves the answer comes in Psalm 89:19, "I have laid help upon one that is mighty; I have exalted one chosen out of the people."

Unseen by the hand of man God has exalted Godly leaders to a station and position that would promote the building of his kingdom and provide spiritual help for those who follow him.

Often we cannot see God's hand, but there is no doubt that God's hand is in the plan.

Everything that happens has a reason and purpose, according to God's divine plan. When a Godly leader is selected and placed in a position, it is not accidental. God is in the plan.

When a man or woman of God is given a gavel or pulpit, it is not a coincidence of nature. God is in the plan.

We cannot see how God works, but he is always in the plan, even in the simplest of ways. Consider the little rabbit that was fascinated with its newfound speed. The bunny loved to out run the creatures of the wood. He out ran the toad frog and Brer snake could never catch him. In fact, he took on ever creature of the woods to test his skill. The little rabbit was disturbed however, because each time his folks let him go to the woods alone, mama rabbit would prick the bottom of his foot with a thorn. When they left, without explanation, the little rabbit limped around for hours in pain. When they returned they said nothing. After a while, the little rabbit was concerned and asked mama rabbit the question, "Why do you stick my foot every time you leave me alone, it doesn't make sense and it seems cruel for you to do me this way." Mama rabbit hopped over to her son and said, "There is a hound dog and hunter that love to chase little fast rabbits. Knowing you, you would give them a run. It may not make sense to you now, but it's better to be a living bunny with a sore foot than a dead rabbit with a fast reputation." It did not make sense to him at the time, but that sore foot was keeping him alive.

God is doing things for us and to us for a reason!

There is an unseen hand that operates in every life work. That unseen hand guides and controls, tears down and builds up. That unseen hand is called providence, the will of God working itself out among men. The believer knows the power of God is working everyday, even though he cannot see his hand directly, his presence is felt.

As Christians, we are encouraged when we remember that God has placed our leaders before us for the purpose of encouraging us, directing us and comforting us. He looks among the lowly, finds the mighty, who often think of themselves as unworthy, and exalts them to achieve his purpose.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he considered how God selected an ordinary shepherd boy to serve as king, and would, in the distant future select his "holy one" in a similar way, from among the people.

The 89th Psalm in its original context is a reference to David. He was a man of very humble background. He was a good man from a good family but he was not a "big shot." His family was well known and had a great reputation but they were not "big wheels." They were ordinary God-fearing people.

The names of his family members are recited with great respect today, but during his time the names of Jesse, Obed, Boaz, and Ruth, did not move mountains or cause any great alarm. David's family was far from the aristocratic circles of Israel. In terms of pedigree, David had no qualifications to be king of Judah. Yet, God looked down upon him with favor because he saw in his humility a great strength that made him mighty.

It is the same means that God used when he sent his "Holy One" to live on this earth. He was born in a manger, among the most obscure of circumstances, to a family that was poor but respectful, hardworking and godly. In this context, God reached down among the people and touched the lowly but mighty Jesus, and exalted him to his right hand.

In a similar way, God still looks among the lowly, finds the mighty, and lifts them up to lead and to serve.

Among the lowly masses of men, he sees what we cannot see and moves them mysteriously to a higher ground, to achieve his purpose.

Among the masses of women, he selects the Esthers, Ruths, Marys and others who are humble in spirit, low in station, but mighty in faith and exalts them. That is why Esther was told, in no uncertain terms, that it could well be that God raised her to be queen of Persia, "for such a time as this."

Just as David saw the hand of God at work, placing him in a position of leadership in the nation, spiritual leaders should come to the same conclusion that God has reached down among the lowly and exalted us for "such a time as this."

Lowly but Mighty

God recognized David's inner qualities and strengths, before he raised him to his position. The text uses the word, "mighty" to describe him.

Truly, he was mighty, even though he had not fought a single battle on a battlefield. He was mighty in the ordinary ways of a shepherd boy.

He demonstrated might as he protected his father's flocks from lions and bears.

He demonstrated might even as he stood before Goliath with only five smooth stones and a slingshot.

God still recognizes "might" in our leaders today.

He sees the man or woman who is able to demonstrate great faith in the ordinary struggles of life.

He sees the woman who recognizes the bright side of every situation and demonstrates confidence in God when others lose hope.

He sees the man who is not intimidated by the prospect of hard times, or peril, but continues to cling to God's unchanging hand.

Despite our race, color or sex, God still reaches down among the lowly and exalts men and women of strong character and raises them to positions of influence for the purpose of advancing the kingdom.

Exalted To Do What?

Why does God exalt a person to a high position? Certainly, it is not for personal praise, honor or glory. It is to advance the kingdom of the Lord and to bring salvation to the people.

The challenges are great because the needs are great.

The woman who is exalted by the hand of God must be the voice of God on behalf of an exploited gender.

The exalted woman cannot afford to become silent. The barriers are falling but she must continue to raise the consciousness of America.

While 62% of Black women are in the work force, they still earn only 89 percent of the salary of white women.

The fact that 62 percent of Black women are working reflects other factors as well, one being that 62 percent of Black families are headed by single women. Marriages are declining in the Black community. In 1950, 62 percent of Black families were headed by a married couple. By 1998, only 37 percent of our families have a marriage presence.

This is no time for Black women to become comfortable. Black women still face a dilemma. In America 41 percent of all abortions are performed on Black women. The pregnancy rate for young Black women 15-19 years of age is twice that of white women. Rates of domestic violence among Black women are three times the rates of white women.

The exalted man cannot afford silence either, because the declining Black male presence in leadership, the home and church has created a dilemma. For black women the dilemma is real because the educated Black woman has a man problem. The field of available educated Black men is declining as more Black women become professionals with fewer Black male professionals from which to choose.

Whether male or female those who lead must continue to raise a standard for our people.

This is why God reached down into the ranks of the people and found men and women of character and strength and raised them to positions of influence. They have the mission of speaking to our race and our generation in the name of the Lord.

Leaders are exalted, but they are exalted for a purpose.

She who leads must keep raising the consciousness of those around us that the social ills that are destroying our people are real.

Therefore, women's organizations should intensify their efforts to attack the problems that affect our people. We cannot ignore them.

Like Esther, women must appeal to the king!

Appeal to the government! Appeal to the school boards!

Appeal to the ruling powers of this nation on behalf of the huddled masses who are desperately in danger of destruction.

He who leads must keep telling the dispirited masses that despite hurricanes, earthquakes and rising tides, that God is still on the throne!

He who leads must keep raising the banner of hope for a world that is wallowing in despair.

Together, male and female, those who have been exalted should sound the trumpet that reminds the world that God is still in control!

God's hand is in the plan

Finally, the exalted leader should help the people see God's hand in every plan.

From a position of strength and influence, the leader who knows the Lord is able to see God's hand in the plan of life. He or she is obligated to help others see the hand of God.

Though David was hunted as a criminal and suffered ridicule and estrangement, he recognized God's hand in the plan. He was being prepared for a promotion that he knew nothing about.

So, the consecrated leader has the purpose of reminding believers to be aware of God's hand in the plan.

If you have made advancements in education, it was God's hand in the plan.

If you have made career advancements, it was God's hand in the plan.

If you have achieved family goals, it was God's hand in the plan.

When God's hand is in the plan..

—The world may kick you down, but God will pick you up!

—The world may strike you out, but God will give you a home run!

—The world may think you are a loser, but God will make you a winner!

—The world may think you are weak, but God will make you strong!

When God's hand is in the plan the impossible becomes possible!

When God's hand is in the plan, the improbable becomes probable!

When God's hand is in the plan, the unthinkable becomes thinkable!

It's the same hand the carried an old rugged cross to Calvary one day!

The world intended it for bad, but God had a hand in the plan.. and early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power!

All power in his hands!

Standing on the Rock

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 16, 2005

SCRIPTURE:"And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, Take the rod, and gather thou the assembly together, thou, and Aaron thy brother, and speak ye unto the rock before their eyes; and it shall give forth his water, and thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock: so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink Numbers 20:7-8; "And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Matthew 16:18

Introduction

Today, when we hear the word "Rock" different images come to mind depending on our perspective. Some hear the term "Rock" and think of a very popular Samoan wrestler who has also become a movie star known as "The Rock."

Others hear the term "Rock" and think of Sylvester Stallone's movie series about an Italian boxer known as "Rocky Balboa."

Some think of Elvis Pressley singing a hit song a half century ago entitled, "Jail House Rock."

Still others will remember the notorious California Prison officially named "Alcatraz" but infamously called, "The Rock."

The term "Rock" means different things to different people; but what does it mean to believers? What do believers think of when we hear the term "Rock?"

We sing about "Rock of Ages Cleft for me" and "Take me to the rock."

When David was asked to define the rock, he said in Psalm 18:31, "For who is God save the LORD? or who is a rock save our God? "

It is plain to every believer that the "rock of our salvation" is Jesus Christ our Lord.

When the church looks at its history and heritage, it does so with a clear remembrance that whatever progress it has made has not been because of any work that its members have done, but only because the church has chosen to build its future on a true foundation. It has succeeded because it has been standing on "The Rock."

When the church celebrates its anniversary, it is both a corporate celebration and a personal celebration. It is a celebration of how as individual "living stones" in the church, God has blessed us. It also a celebration how God has blessed the church as a unified body because we have stood firm in our faith in God, despite difficult times.

As Christians, we know about the "Rock" but the "Rock" we know is not a television star. The “Rock” we know is the “solid rock” of Jesus Christ.

Exposition

These two texts are indicative of the way scripture depicts Christ as the rock of our faith.

In Numbers, Christ is depicted as the rock that provides. When Israel wandered in the wilderness, the people grumbled for water. They complained to Moses and Moses took their complaints to God. In response, God commanded him to take the rod in his hand, and go and SPEAK TO THE ROCK, and it should give forth water.

If we read it too fast, we will miss Christ in this text. However, a more careful reading reveals a hidden truth, “and IT shall give forth HIS water, and thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock.”

When God spoke to Moses, he described the source of the blessing the people would receive as both “IT” and “HIS.”

The “IT” of this text is a pronoun that refers to an inanimate, powerless entity.

“IT” refers to an irrelevant object made of stone.

However, the blessing would not come from the “IT” it would come from the “HIS.” Note the text says, “and it shall give forth “HIS” water.

“HIS” in this text is also a pronoun but it does not point to the inanimate stone but to an animate being.

“HIS” shows Moses pointing to the power of Christ providing what the people needed in the wilderness.

For this reason perhaps, Moses was commanded to speak to the rock in this text. Instead, Moses struck the rock twice and his disobedience resulted in his not being allowed into the Promised Land.

In Matthew, Christ is seen as the foundation upon which the church is built. At the beginning of his ministry, Christ began to assemble his apostles. He saw in each person, characteristics that would be useful to the expansion of the kingdom.

At one point, Christ paused in his discourse to ask his disciples how the public perceived him. Several stood and told of the various ways that Christ was being received. Some saw him as John the Baptist. Others saw him as the prophet Elijah. However, Christ narrowed the scope of the questioned and asked, “Who do you think I am?” It was then that Cephas stood and said “Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.” (Matthew 16:16).

In response Jesus said, “Thou art Peter.” In the Greek, it is “Petros” or a piece of a rock. Jesus said it was the kind of belief that Peter displayed that would be the substance of the church that being faith in Jesus Christ as the Son of God.

Jesus said upon this “rock I’ll build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.” The word He used for “rock” was not accidental. It was “Petra,” which implies a great massive rock. While Peter had grown in his relationship with Him, Christ reaffirmed that the church would not be built upon “Petros” or the Little Rock, but it would be built upon “Petra” the massive rock, which is Christ himself.

Combined, these two texts reveal Christ as a rock that provides in times of need and sustains the work of the church as its true foundation.

Speaking To The Rock

In Israel's journey from Egypt to the Promised Land, God was always with them. They saw him by day as a pillar of cloud. By night, they saw him as a pillar of fire. When they were in need they only had to speak to him, but instead of talking to him, they often complained.

Moses was told to speak to the Rock and He would bring forth the water. In the same sense, the church has learned through its history, that there is power in talking to the Lord.

The church as a corporate body and as individuals has survived many difficult times because it learned how to talk to the Lord.

Hezekiah was appointed to die, but added 15 more years to his life, after he spoke to the Rock.

Elijah brought down fire from heaven and consumed the prophets of Baal, after he spoke to the Rock.

Peter and John were able to heal the sick and perform great miracles, after they had a little talk with the Rock.

Moses learned that there is no great blessing derived from yelling at the Rock, but from speaking to the Rock.

Likewise, he learned that there is no great blessing from striking out at the Rock, but it comes from speaking to the Rock.

The people learned that their blessing did not come from complaining and murmuring at the rock, but from speaking to the Rock.

The history of the church is filled with examples of believing men and women who weathered difficult times because they learned the art of speaking to the rock.

It has been the experience of many that when the church talked to the Lord, he heard its cries.

That is what prompted Dr. Watts to write, "I love the Lord, he heard my cries and pitied every groan. Long as I live while trouble rise I'll hasten to his throne."

Maybe that is what the songwriter had in mind when he wrote, "What a friend we have in Jesus. All our sins and griefs to bear. What a privilege it is to carry everything to God in prayer."

Speaking to the rock was perhaps what the songwriter meant when he said, "Just a little talk with Jesus makes it right."

Blessings from the Rock

Moses was shown the result we should expect from speaking to the rock. "It" shall bring forth "his" water.

The church is the instrument that God has used to bring forth "HIS" blessing to God's people.

The church is not a building, but an assembly of baptized believers in Christ. Yet,

God has used the assembly of believers in ways that have brought forth his favor.

Our people have been blessed because of the church, the old ship of Zion.

We have worshipped under brush arbors and abandoned saw mills.

We have lifted our voices to God in empty barns with sawdust floors.

We have praised him in the chill of winter with logs burning in huge heated stoves. We have sweltered, without air conditioning, in the humid and scorching heat of a thousand summers.

Yet God has used our feeble assembly, worship and praise experiences to bring forth his "water" in a thirsty land.

Through the church God has delivered us as a people from the Egypt of slavery to the borders of the Promised Land.

Through the church, God has sustained us through lynchings, murders, discrimination, depressions and unbelievable hardships.

Through the church, God has raised up our bowed down heads and lifted our broken spirits.

Through the church, God has brought forth leaders to champion our causes and speak to our troubled souls.

No wonder the text then says, "it" shall bring forth "HIS" water.

Without a doubt, the church has been the instrument God has used to save us when we were lost, lift us when we were fallen, and restore us when we were rejected by the world.

"It" has brought forth his water.

No wonder the song writer thought of the church and declared, "Tis the old, Ship of Zion. She has landed many a thousand. King Jesus is the captain. Get on board. Get on Board."

Standing on the Rock

Finally, brothers and sisters, while Moses shows us how to speak to the rock and how to expect blessings from the Rock, Matthew shows what happens when we stand on the rock.

The church has survived over 2000 years not because of its philosophy and historicity, but because it has been standing on the rock.

When the church stands on the rock, it super cedes the mortal capacities of mere humans because it is a spiritual entity; built upon a foundation that is sure and strong.

Jesus told Peter, that upon "this rock" he would build his church. This makes a distinction between the church that Christ builds and anything built by man. The church that man builds is a:

MOTEL: for people just passing through on Sunday on their way to some place else.

VACATION SPOT: where people come only once or twice a year.

ZOO: Where people come to watch other folk eat like hogs and act like monkeys

MUSEUM: Where people only remember, "What it used to be like" and the good old days.

FASHION SHOW: Where people come to display the latest styles and their new wardrobes.

PICTURE SHOW: Where audiences sit quietly as the deacons, preacher and choir put on a show.

CERAMIC SHOP: Where everyone becomes easily chipped and have to be handled with care.

ICE HOUSE: Where people with cold hearts give each other the cold shoulder.

But the church the God builds is different from man's church. The Church that Jesus built is a:

LIGHTHOUSE: Giving light to a dark and stormy world

HOSPITAL: Ministering to those who are sick of sin and shame

DIVINE FLOWER SHOP: Only in the church can you find the sweet Rose of Sharon and Lily of the Valley in the same place at the same time.

LIFE BOAT: Rescuing victims from the raging sea of life.

SIGN POST: Guiding the lost to the straight and narrow path. That's why thousands cry out:

"Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land. I am weak but thou art mighty, hold me in thou powerful hand"

Who is this rock? He is different things to different people.

To the astronomer He is the Sun of Righteousness.

To the baker He is the Living Bread.

To the banker He is the Hidden Treasure.

To the biologist He is the essence of Life.

To the carpenter He is the Sure Foundation.

To the doctor He is the Great Physician.

To the educator He is the Great Teacher.

To the farmer He is the Sower and Lord of the Harvest.

To the florist He is the Lily of the Valley and the Rose of Sharon.

To the geologist He is the Rock of Ages.

To the horticulturist He is the True Vine.

To the judge He is the Righteous Judge.

To the juror He is the True Witness.

To the jeweler He is the Pearl of Great Price.

To the toiler He is the Giver of Rest.

To the Sinner He is the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

To the Christian, He is the Son of the Living God, the Savior, the Redeemer and Lord!

Who is this rock? One songwriter said, "This rock is Jesus. Yes, he is the one. Be very sure your anchor holds and grips the Solid rock."

The church is standing on the solid rock of faith.

The church is holding on to the solid rock of hope.

No wonder the Songwriter wrote, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus, blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean of Jesus' name.

On Christ, who carried a cross for me up Calvary's hill.
On Christ, who let them drive nails into His hands.
On Christ, who died on Golgotha's hill.
On Christ, who arose after three days and nights.
On Christ, the solid rock I stand.
All other ground is sinking sand.

Make-A-Wish (And Receive It)

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 23, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "In Gibeon the LORD appeared to Solomon in a dream by night: and God said, Ask what I shall give thee." 1 Kings 3:5 "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. John 15:7

Introduction

Have you ever made a wish? Did it come true? Young people wish for a variety of things as they fantasize about lives that have yet to materialize. Many wish to become famous singing stars. Some wish to become great professional athletes. Many wish for riches. The wishes that begin in our childhood carry over to our adult lives, because "wishing" is not just something for children.

Men have always wanted to transform their fantasies into realities; we've never quite figured out how to do it. Many myths, fables and legends have developed around our fascination with "wishing."

It is said that if we throw three coins in a fountain of water and make a wish that it will come true. So, when you travel you will often find many coins in fountains, representing the wishes of tourists who have passed.

It is said that if we make a secret wish and tell no one what we wish, then blow out all of the candles on a birthday cake with one breath that the wish will come true.

It is also said that the if we see the first star of the evening and say the words, "Star light, star bright, won't you grant my wish tonight" that our wish will be granted.

An old favorite is the "wishbone" of a chicken. It is said that if two people make a wish and break the breastbone of a chicken, the person who gets the longer portion of the bone after it breaks will get their dream to come true.

Judy Garland in the Wizard of Oz, wished that she go 'Somewhere over the rainbow."

The legend that has been told and retold to children in thousands of ways is the story of Alladin and the Wonderful lamp. According to the legend, Alladin came upon a wonderful lamp in which lived a Genie. The Genie appeared and granted whatever wish that Alladin made. One day he carelessly laid the lamp aside and it was stolen by an evil magician. Alladin spent many years searching until he finally found a way to get his lamp returned and wishes granted.

Whether it's blowing out the candles on a birthday or rubbing a magic lamp, we have shown a fascination with wishes that has not subsided with our age.

The "Make-A-Wish" foundation is a world wide ministry that attempts to grant some of the wishes of terminally ill children. Some of the wishes have included visits to Disney Land, meetings with popular entertainers, or provision of special toys. The foundation has made thousands of children happy by granting them one of their special wishes in the last days of their lives.

What if you were given the ability to "Make-A-Wish" and were told by God to ask what you wanted and it would be given to you? What would you ask? What would you wish for? Cars? Money? Jewelry? Fame? Popularity? The latest pair of shoes?

As strange as it may sound God gives each of us the opportunity to "Make A Wish."

Often he gives us just what we ask for, so we are warned to be careful what we ask for, we might just get it!

Actually, God does give us the ability to ask, believe and receive within limits. He does it without a magic bottle, candles on a birthday cake or coins in a fountain. He does it by his own power based on our obedience to his word and willingness to live according to his will.

As Christians, we are excited to know that God is the ultimate "Make-A-Wish" man. If we can conceive it, and believe it, we can achieve it, if our wish reflects the will of God for our lives.

Exposition

This text considers Solomon at the beginning of his reign as King of Israel. Solomon, who succeeded his father David on the throne of Israel, became King at a very young age. He was awed by the complexity of the job of being King and was troubled by his lack of leadership maturity in such a capacity. One night God spoke to Solomon in a dream and told him to ask anything that he wanted from God and he would receive his request. Solomon asked God to give him wisdom and understanding to lead the people in the ways of God.

God was so pleased that Solomon did not ask for riches or fame, but only asked for wisdom that he decided to give him what he asked for, in addition to some of the things that he did not ask in his request. With the wisdom he received from God, Solomon was able to attain all of his life's ambitions. He dreamed of building a kingdom the splendor and grandeur of which could not be equaled in the world. He dreamed of building a great temple for the worship of God, and a great palace second to none in the world. He dreamed and God made it happen for him, although at the time it seemed impossible for him to accomplish.

The Make-A-Wish Secret

There is a secret to approaching God with a Make-A-Wish request. It is the key to making the wish come true. For Alladin the secret was rubbing the lamp. The secret of Dorothy's ruby slippers was knowing how to click your heels three times. There is also a Make-A-Wish secret when we approach God. The secret is found in John 15:7, "If ye abide me and my words abide you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall given.." Matthew 6:33 adds to it, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all of these things shall be added unto you."

What does it mean to "abide in me?"

We must approach God as a partisan rather than as a mercenary. A mercenary approaches the army for pay. He works hard but without loyalty to a cause. He stops working the first time he misses a paycheck. A partisan joins an army because he believes in a cause, pay is secondary. So it is with Christ. Those who accept his cause, teachings, philosophy of life, and objectives are partisans. What they want is what he wants. All others are mercenaries, seeking to get what they want. Because partisans want what's best for the cause, that which they ask for will be granted.

To abide in Christ is want what he wants and nothing more.

So the wish from a person who abides in Christ is not what "I want" but "I want what I want, if God wants what I want."

What does it mean to put the kingdom of God first? When we dream, aspire and hope, our dreams, wishes and hopes should be that whatever we do or become will help the kingdom of God to expand and grow. If our desire is to expand the kingdom with our wish, then it will come to be. And God promises that as we work to expand the kingdom, all of the other things on our list will be added as well. However the interests of the kingdom of God must be first.

Our Make-A-Wish List

As we make our personal Make-A-Wish List, we should remember the words of one author who put it this way:

I asked for strength, God gave me difficulties to make me strong
I asked for wisdom and God gave me problems to solve.
I asked for riches and God gave me plenty of work to do
I asked for courage and God gave dangers to overcome
I asked for love and God gave me troubled people to help
I asked for favors and God gave me opportunities
I asked for power, that I might have the praise of others
I was given weakness, that I might feel the need of God.
I asked for all things, that I might enjoy life
I was given life, that I might enjoy all things.
I received nothing I wanted, but everything I needed.

Key to Getting An Answer

Finally, we must consider that the key to getting God to grant our wishes, in his will, is prayer.

Prayer is the sincere desire of the heart and when that prayer reflects our desire to do the will of God we get God's attention quickly.

I don't know about your experience, but I found out that prayer changes things!
Prayer can take a seriously ill body and make it whole again!
Prayer can take your failures and turn them into victories!
Prayer can take your blunders and turn them into blessings!
Prayer can take your fears and turn them into confidences!
Prayer can take your stumbling blocks and turn them into stepping stones!
Prayer can take your weaknesses and turn them into strength!
Daniel will tell you that prayer is good for the Lion's den!
The Three Hebrew Boys will tell you that prayer is good for the fiery furnace!
I know what prayer can do! I've tried it for myself!
In Jesus' name, burdens have been lifted!
In Jesus' name, finances have been restored!
In Jesus' name, wounds have been healed!
Jesus, who died out on Calvary!
Jesus, who arose early on Sunday morning!
Abide in him, trust in his word, and ask what you will in Jesus' name and it shall be done!

God or a Genie, Which?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 23, 1976

SCRIPTURE: Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened Matthew 7:7-8 And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread. But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Matthew 4:3-4

Introduction

If you found a genie in a bottle and were given an opportunity to make one wish what would that we should be? There are many people that would have a variety of answers to that question. Some would use the opportunity to ask for anything that they wanted by asking for another wish.

The television series I dream of Jeannie depicts a man who found a bottle in which a beautiful woman appeared each time he unstopped a magic bottle. The woman would appear in a puff of smoke and grant whatever wish that he desired. The appearance of the genie often caused him problems even though his wishes were granted. He had a friend who constantly wanted to use the bottle for his own personal desires. He also had a superior who was always suspicious of him because he seemed to have things that can only appear by magic. The television show made us laugh as we watch the lives of the characters affected by the genie in the bottle. The television show was fictional but our desire to have our wish granted is not fiction.

Many cartoons reduced the challenge that each person faces into a simple decision between right and wrong. The challenge in cartoons is usually depicted by good being presented to us as a little angel with wings that sits on one shoulder and whispers divine truths in one ear while a little devil sits on the other shoulder and whispers devilish truths in the other ear. The cartoons make us laugh but the image of a person being torn between what is right and what is wrong is not humorous.

There are two forces that fight for the souls of every individual. God wants our souls and the devil wants our souls. We are often pulled from one side to the other as each force struggles for a first-place position in our lives. It would be simple if we could look on one shoulder and see a man wearing a red suit and recognize him as the devil or look on the other shoulder and see a man wearing a white suit and recognize him as the Lord. Unfortunately, the choices available to us are not that simple. We have to learn to discern the voices that we hear and recognize that each of them represents either a force for good or a force for bad.

To gain control of our lives both forces offer us the opportunity to advance ourselves according to our purposes. Each promises to give a certain things if we would commit ourselves to their cause. God promises us eternal life with him in a heavenly experience. The devil promises us fame, power, and riches in this life if we will follow him. Each force promises to be available to us if we would simply call upon either of them. On a daily basis, we are forced to choose between one or the other.

As Christians, we are aware that the devil grants wishes. We are also aware that God is in the prayer answering business. When we hear the voices of good and evil speaking to our souls, we have found it best to listen to the voice of God and serve him alone.

Exposition

This text focuses upon Jesus as he taught his disciples the nature of their relationship to the kingdom of God.

One of the core attributes of Christ's teaching is the idea of faith in God. Through faith, Christ taught that anything is possible as it relates to improving, expanding, and building the kingdom of God. Nothing that a believer wants or desires can be kept from him. In other conversations, Jesus told his disciples that as long as they remained true to the purpose of building the kingdom of God that whatever they asked God would provide.

In this context, Jesus lays out a dramatic picture of God providing for the wants and needs of believers, according to his purpose, if they were only ask, seek, or knock. Whatever was required to build the kingdom would be available to them. Whatever would be needed to advance the cause of Christ and the kingdom of God on this earth would be opened to them. Nothing would be kept from them if they asked in faith, and believed they would receive.

In essence, what Christ said was if you're one of my children, ask me for it, and if it will be good for you, it will be done.

Matthew chapter 4 gives us an instance in the life of Christ at the beginning of his public ministry when he went into the wilderness to decide for himself which voice would command his allegiance. After 40 days in the wilderness, when he was both fatigued and spiritually drained the devil appeared to him and offered him the choice between God and himself.

Christ was tempted to use his relationship with God for his own desires. He was hungry so he was told how easy would be for him to take stones and turn them into bread. He was a country boy from Nazareth with no royal upbringing so he was told how easy it would be for him to gain popularity. As a lone individual he lacked the political backing and the power to change social circumstances so he was told that he could simply jump off the side of a mountain in the Angels would come to his defense.

In those moments, Christ had to make a decision about his own life and which forces he would hear. There, in the wilderness, he chose to follow God. He summarized his decision by telling Satan, "Get the behind me Satan."

How to get what you want

When we want something from God how do we get it? How do we get his attention? How do we let him know that we want something? In the television series, it was simply a matter of unstopping the magic bottle and the genie appeared. When we need something, how can we call upon the inner force within us to help us achieve our goal?

The forces of good and evil within us are waiting for us to call.

Both God and the devil are waiting for you to call upon them. Quicker than you can snap your finger or bat your eye either of them will appear.

To get the devil to appear all you need to do is think an evil thought or desire a wrong thing. Instantly he will appear to grant your wish. If you want money, the devil will suggest ways that you can get money without working for it. He will convince you that it is the best way and the quickest way to achieve your goal. If you want fame or popularity he will do the same. He will promise you anything you want, but there is a price that you must pay. He wants your soul.

When we want something from God we pray. When we pray we talk to God and tell him the sincere desires of our heart. When we pray we pour out our souls to him. We empty our spirit and prostrate ourselves before him. When we pray God hears us and responds to our prayer request. The only requirement that God has of us is that we abide in him and that his words abide in us.

Those who called on the devil

There are many who chose to call on the devil to make their wishes come true.

Eve, while living in the Garden of Eden listened to the voice of the devil and chose to eat from the forbidden fruit because she wanted the knowledge of good and evil. The devil granted for which added resulted in her being banned from the garden for ever and cursed.

Cain listened to the voice of the devil when both he and his brother able brought their sacrifices and offerings before God. A spirit of jealousy developed within him as he listened to the devil speak to his soul. He committed the first murder when he listened to the devil.

King Nebuchadnezzar desired to be esteemed greater and more powerful than God. He listened to the devil and trampled upon the things that were important to the worship of God. The price he paid was several years of insanity as he ate grass like an animal.

Judas desired to build a treasury to quicken the overthrow of the Roman army. He listened to the voice of the devil and for 30 pieces of silver the trade Christ to his enemies.

There are many who have listened to the voice of the devil and have paid for their weakness with their lives, fortunes and souls.

Those who called on the Lord

There are many who ignored the voice of the devil and called on the Lord.

Noah desired to live a fateful life according to the will of God. Although all of the people around him chose to ignore God's warnings nor sought direction from God, built an ark, and survived a flood.

Enoch wanted to walk with God. He spent his entire life communicating with God and talking with him. Because he talked with God on a daily basis and walked with him constantly he did not see death.

The three Hebrew boys desired to be faithful to God even in the face of death. They desired to please him and when they were thrown into a fiery furnace, God protected them.

Young King Solomon desired to be wise during his reign as king. God appeared to him in a dream and asked him to request anything that he wanted and it would be granted. Salomon requested wisdom and God gave it to him.

Those who desire to do God's will have found that all they had to do was ask, knock, or seek and God made a way for them.

Listen to his voice

The conclusion of the matter is this: every believer should listen to the voice of God.

It has been proven in the lives of the patriarchs of the Bible and in the lives of living saints that those who place their hopes and faith in God will be rewarded.

When we want a blessing from the Lord we should not have a problem deciding whom we will serve. Our response should be the same as that of Joshua when he stood on the side of the mountain and declared, "as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Judy Garland in the movie the Wizard of Oz click the heels of her ruby slippers to get what she wanted, but as for me and my house we will call upon the Lord.

Some people might wish upon a Star or break wishbones to get what they want, but as for me and my house we will call upon the Lord.

Some people might blow out the candles on birthday cakes or throw coins in the fountain to make their wishes come true, but as for me and my house we will call upon the Lord.

if we call upon the Lord, he will make a way out of no way.

If we call upon the Lord, he will build a bridge over our troubled waters.

If we call upon the Lord, he will build is up where we are torn down.

If we call upon the Lord, he will give us strength in the midst of our weakness.

If we listen to his voice, we will hear him speak.

No wonder the song writer wrote, "I come to the garden alone while the dew is still on the roses. And the voice I hear falling all my ear the son of God discloses.

And he walks with me and he talks with me and he tells me I am his own and the joy we share as we tarry there, none other has ever known."

The voice we will hear will be the voice of the man who carried across for us.

The voice we hear will be the same voice that cried out from the cross, "Father why hath thou forsaken me?"

Is the same voice that said, "it is finished."

He died on Calvary, but early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands.

Which voice shall I hear?

As for me at my house, we will serve the Lord.

Trick or Treat

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

October 30, 1973

SCRIPTURE: Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole amour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole amour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Ephesians 6:10-13.

Introduction

Have you ever played "Trick or Treat?" This is the season when many people in America will dress up in weird costumes, usually represented the most evil characters from real life and fiction and walked the streets at night in small groups of ghouls, monsters, witches and other hideous characters. It's called Halloween, a night when all of America celebrates evil, ugliness, death, murder, witchcraft and all other sorts of evil. Among the aspects of celebration is the idea of "Trick or Treat" where youth move from house to house, adorned in costumes looking for sweets. Many adults are familiar with trick or treat because it was a childhood game they played too.

Across America, there is an excitement about the celebration of Halloween.

Second to Christmas, Halloween, is one the largest celebrations in America. While it is becoming unpopular to promote the birth of Christ in Christmas celebrations, it is strangely acceptable to promote witchcraft, Satan and evil during Halloween.

Halloween gets its origin in Irish history. It appears that the Celtics celebrated their new year on November 1st. The eve of the New Year, the Celts celebrated Samhain, the Celtic Lord of death. The celebration marked the beginning of their new year that, in November would bring cold, darkness and decay. To celebrate the New Year the Druids built huge bonfires and citizens dressed in animal skins and heads used in sacrifices. For hundreds of years this Celtic tradition continued. In 837, Pope Gregory IV declared November 1st as "All Saints Day" a day to remember all of the men and women who died for the cause of Christ as martyrs. Since there was already a celebration in place for November 1st many people merged the practice of the Druids into the new custom of celebrating the Saints. As a result, on October 31st the church continued many of the Druid customs, on the Eve of Hallowed Saints Day. What they did on the 31st of October was connected to pagan Druids. What they did on November 1st was a celebration of the life of the saints.

In time, many people celebrated the celebration of death, evil and Satan on 31st and very few people, especially those outside of the Catholic church, even knew that November 1st was Hallowed Saint's Day.

As time passed, other traditions were added to the evil celebration. Another bit of Irish folklore was added. The Irish tale of Jack O'Lantern came from the tale of a man named Jack who was a man who could not enter heaven or hell and was condemned to wander through the night with only a candle in a pumpkin for light.

Once in America, the Hallowed Saints Day celebration took a different twist. The Irish Catholics focused on all Saint's Day and a new tradition of moving from door to door asking for donations for food for the All Saints Day feast began. Those who gave to support the memory of the saints would be blessed. Those who refused would be cursed. At the end of the celebration, the villagers would dress in costumes to appear as ghosts so they escort the spirits of the dead to the outskirts of town before sunrise.

What began to materialize in by the 1920 is the practice of "Trick or Treat." Urban youth dressed in evil costumes, knocked on doors, asked for donations of goodies and punished those who did not give. Trashcans were turned over, windows were soaped, and other acts of vandalism were performed as "tricks" for those who did not give "treats." Trick or Treat became a threat. In the 1930's the Boy Scouts of the America tried to make trick or treating fun instead of fearful. The scouts and other organizations began organizing the "good" children to visit stores and shops in the day, but still dressed in costumes, to avoid the evil pranks of the tricksters at night.

Despite their efforts, the evil of the nightly prowl from house to house continued. Even if no evil was done to a non-participant, evil things were said about any resident who did not provide a treat.

Organizations like the Boy Scouts tried to organize ways for this holiday to become safe and fun; they started the practice of encouraging "good" children to visit shops and homes asking for treats, so as to prevent criminal acts. So even today, on the night before All Saints day, the celebration of evil is at its highest and hardly anyone remembers that the next day is All Saint's Day.

While we are trouble by death and murder all year, the world celebrates murder and death on Halloween night.

While we bemoan tragedy, mayhem and destruction all year, for one night every year we celebrate it!

While we preach and teach against Satan and all his works, on Halloween the nation joins to increasing flood of revelers who celebrate Satan and his followers.

As Christians, we should be aware that we are at war with Satan. He is the enemy, who will use every means at his disposal to defeat and destroy the cause of Christ. Rather that celebrate evil, we choose to celebrate good. We choose lift Jesus up and stomp Satan down..not just on Halloween, but every day of the year.

Exposition.

This text focuses on Paul writing to the church at Ephesus explaining the nature of the Christian enemy.

Paul reminded believers that the Christian struggle is not against any human being, but against an unseen force. Our struggle is against the influences of the devil on our society. The phrase he used was the "wiles of the devil" which means the subtle but destructive ways of Satan.

He repeatedly reminded the Ephesians that the Christian struggle is not against people but against the evil force that drives people to do evil things. That's what he meant by the phrase, "We wrestle not against flesh and blood." The results of this influence is spiritual wickedness in high places.

It is through these influences that ticks have been played on the good people of comprise the kingdom of God.

It is these influences that have played cruel tricks on the world.

These evil influences have resulted in wars.

These evil influences have resulted in millions politically motivated deaths around the world.

It is these influences that have allowed injustice to flourish instead allowing justice run down like waters.

Therefore, Paul warns believers to be on guard against the subtle ways that Satan eases himself into our lives. We are warned to be aware of the tricks he pulls to destroy our hope and our faith.

Rather than allow Satan an opportunity to trick us again, we are encouraged to be vigilant and armed with whole amour of God to never give him a chance to invade the sacred trust that we have with our Lord and Savior.

Biblical Tricks or Treats

Believers have seen the devil operate. The bible is filled with instances of the devil playing evil, vicious tricks on the people of God.

Esau was the oldest of a set of twins by minutes. Because he was the oldest, he was destined to receive the inheritance. However, a cruel trick was played on him. When his father Isaac prepared to bless him, his mother sent him away and slipped his brother Jacob into the room, dressed as Esau and stole his blessing. This trick caused bad feeling between the brothers for many years.

Paul's words remind us that it was not the flesh and blood of the two brothers that should concern us but the evil spirit that motivated the trick.

Ananias and his wife Sapphira were members of the early church. All members of the first church pledged to sell their worldly goods and give to support the church. While others sold their possessions, these two decided to play a trick on the Lord and act as though they had given their share. They both dropped dead because of their trick.

Who motivated the selfish, greedy trick they played? Paul told the Ephesians that the real culprit for any evil act is Satan.

When Lot's wife left the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah just before the destruction, she was saved with the specific instruction not to look back. When she heard the destruction, she decided to play a quick trick on her husband and sneak a peek. She turned into a pillar of salt.

We have seen how Satan plays tricks and attempts to destroy the people of God on every hand.

Like a roaring lion, Satan goes about looking for ways to destroy God's people.

He plays tricks in our family.

He plays tricks with husbands and wives.

He plays tricks on our jobs.

He even plays tricks with our physical health and spiritual well being.

We are warned to always be on guard.

The Devil meant it for bad

There are times when the devil plays dirty tricks in our lives, meaning it for our destruction, but God turns it into good.

Job was a righteous man who had done no wrong. Yet, despite his righteousness, the devil played tricks with his life. He lost many of his family members, his wealth and most of his health. It was a cruel trick.

He meant it for Job's bad, but God took that trick, turned it around and used it for Job's good. The word says that Job's last days were better than his first days because God turned the trick into a treat.

Joseph was despised by his brothers because he dreamed. They played a cruel trick. They took his coat of many colors and threw him in a pit. They later sold him into slavery in Egypt. In Egypt, he was falsely accused and thrown into prison. Yet, despite the tricks played on him, God lifted him from the prison and raised him high in the kingdom. He became an important man in Egypt because God turned the devil's dirty trick into a treat.

Daniel was the subject of an evil trick. His enemies had a law passed that forbade anyone from praying to their God. They knew Daniel always prayed. Because of the new law, anyone who prayed would be thrown into the lion's den. Daniel continued to pray even while he was in the lion's den. The next morning the king was surprised to learn that Daniel was still alive, because God had turned a trick into a treat.

On a daily basis, the devil plays tricks on the lives of believers. We are able to survive, not because of our own goodness, but because God takes what the devil meant for bad and turns it into good.

Devil has only tricks, but God has treats.

The devil only has deception, but God has realities.

We know it's a trick when the devil says we are failures, because we serve a God who turns failure into success!

We know it's a trick when the devil says we can't, because we serve a God who takes can't and turns it into "can."

We know it's a trick when the devil says we are defeated, because we serve a God who takes defeat and turns it into victory

We know it's a trick when the devil says we can't be healed, because we serve a God who has enough power in the hem of his garment to heal the sin sick soul.

We know it's a trick when the devil says we can't get up, because we serve a God who can pick us up and turn us around; and plant our feet on solid ground.

The devil has a trick for us, but God has a treat for the victims of all of the devils tricks.

Have you fallen because of the devil's tricks? We fall down but we get up?

Have you feet slipped on the sinking sand of life? Why not stand on the solid rock?

This rock is Jesus, the only one!

The devil played dirty tricks on him and nailed to an old rugged cross!

The devil played tricks on him and buried him in a borrowed tomb!

The devil played tricks on him and locked him in the grave for three days and nights!

But early Sunday morning!

God took the dirty trick and turned it into heavenly treat!

Early Sunday morning…he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

No. 9173-Anniv. Pastor (Female)

Walking In The Spirit of Love

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 2005

SCRIPTURE:"I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father. 5 And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another. 2 John 1:4-6

Introduction

How important is the Christian walk to you? Is there anything that could prompt you to change your walk and turn in another direction? The Christian life is one that is challenging and rewarding. Those who live for Christ have reached the conclusion that there is nothing they would trade for the Christian life experience. Walking in the spirit of God is inspirational. It is rejuvenating!

That is a bold statement because it means believers would reject everything the world offers if it means giving up their lives in Christ.

Anniversaries are milestones. They are points along the way where we pause to evaluate the journey.

They are also times when we think about the person who has been leading us in the journey, what has been taught and how well we have followed.

Anniversaries tell us how far we have come and they help us measure how far we have to go.

When we celebrate the anniversary of the pastorate, we reflect upon our journey toward perfection under the leadership of the shepherd of the flock.

After traveling 30 years in his earthly journey, Jesus reached a point of decision and reflection. The devil offered him a chance to satisfy himself but he refused to walk after the flesh but chose to follow the spirit.

In effect, he told the devil, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now."

As Christians, let us remain firm in our belief that the Christian walk is the godly way. Let us also salute the pastor the Lord has given us to guide us along the way.

Exposition

This text focuses on John's letter to Christians who were meeting in the homes of believers.

The letter is directed to the leader of the church group described as "lady." The name “lady” in Greek means Kyria. It is the Greek equivalent to the Aramaic name Martha.

It is believed that the church members during the dispersion were often the victims of persecution. Addressing the letter to the “lady” instead of to the Greek, “Kyria” or the Aramaic “Martha” is believed by many scholars to be a code that would disguise their identities if the letter was intercepted.

Kyria was obviously a female leader of a house based church or possibly a city based network of house churches.

John encouraged this woman to continue in the truth of the Gospel. The truth he explored was the need for believers to continue walking in the spirit of love.

Kyria is addressed in a twofold manner, both as a mother and as leader of her house based congregation or the network of house based congregations. John uses the phrase “thy children” indicating either her own children or those who were followers of Christ under her care. “I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in truth.” “Walking in truth” refers to the manner of life, meaning walking in obedience to the commandments from the Father.

The importance of Kyria’s role as leader of both her children and those who followed her in the church is emphasized in this text. Her main function as it related to the ministry of the word was to show the “children” or believers how to walk in the spirit of love in their daily lives.

The teaching that the Lord Jesus gave was “If ye love me, keep my commandments” (John 14:15). He said, “By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples” — not just because you are called “Christian” but because Christians love one another.

The text lays out the challenge of those who lead believers. The challenge is to show believers how to balance our daily walk with both truth and love. Without this balance, any church will be lopsided. The role of the leader in this text was to teach believers how to love and walk in truth.

What Kyria was charged to do, was emphasized by all of the apostles. She was charged to teach believers how to walk in the spirit of love.

The Nature of our Walk

The term walk is used to indicate an actual physical act of walking. It is also used to symoblize the activities of an individual life.

In this sense, a person can walk to his neighborhood store; this is the physical interpretation. However, a person who pursues a certain lifestyle is also said to have a “walk” in life.

The Christian is to walk in newness of life, (Rom. 6:4), after the spirit, Rom. 8:4, in honesty, (Rom. 13:13), by faith, (2 Cor. 5:7), in good works, (Eph. 2:10), in love, (Eph. 5:2), in wisdom, (Col. 4:5), in truth, (2 John 1:4), after the commandments of the Lord, (2 John 1:6).

Where Not to Walk

The diligent pastor continues to teach believers through precept and example where "NOT" to walk.

We are repeatedly warned in scripture not to walk after the flesh, Rom. 8:4; not after the manner of men, 1 Cor. 3:3; not in craftiness, 2 Cor. 4:2; not by sight, 2 Cor. 5:7; not in the vanity of the mind, Eph. 4:17; not disorderly, 2 Thess. 3:6."

Galatians 5:16-17 says, "This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh. For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would."

In every way imaginable, the pastor must help believers understand that they are never away from the sight of God. He always sees us because he never slumbers or sleeps. Consider the man who decided to steal a few of the appliances and things from his neighbor's home and sell them for extra money.

Inside the home, he saw jewelry, and clothing items that would be valuable. As he began to bag a few items, he heard a voice that said, "Jesus is watching you." He was horrified. Someone saw him. Then the voice yelled again, "Jesus is watching you!"

In a panic, he turned on the light only to see a talking parrot. He was relieved. "Was that you talking?" The man said, "Sure was!" Answered the parrot. "What's you name?" Asked the man? "Charlie." Came the answer. "That's a dumb name to give a parrot. What kind of idiot would name a parrot Charlie?" The parrot answered, "The same kind of idiot that would leave all this jewelry and money at home and name that killer pit bull behind you, Jesus!" -He learned the hard way that Jesus is always watching.

Where to Walk

T he pastor of a congregation has the important but delicate job of teaching believers where to walk.

While the text in Galatians 5:16-20 emphasizes where believers should not walk; at some point the diligent pastor must show believers "where to walk."

The Christian faith is not a long list of "Thou Shall Nots." However, it is a simple list of "How tos."

The Christian faith does not say, "Keep Off The Grass." It is a faith that says, "Walk on the Sidewalk."

The Christian walk requires balance and rhythm.

Every believer should have a regular routine or rhythm that promotes the Christian life walk.

Regular bible reading at a set time each day establishes a rhythm, a pattern and a routine that regularly feeds the soul. Psalm 119:105 says, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." As such, a believer who has no pattern of bible reading runs the risk of walking in the dark.

Prayer at a set time each day and more if need be helps strengthen the believer's walk. The word teaches us to pray regularly and with fervor. James 5:16 says, "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.

Bible study should be a part of a believer's walk. The easiest bible study is Sunday School. 2 Timothy 2:15, reminds us to "study to show thyself approved."

Worship is a necessary part of the believer's walk. Very few real Christians are comfortable when they are repeatedly absent from worship services. Hebrews 10:25 warns Christians not to "forsake" or "skip" public worship. Worship inspires Christian living. It motivates service. Those who frequently skip public worship break the rhythm of their spiritual walk.

The Pastor's Walk

Pastors who have walked the walk as well as talked the talk, deserve our praise and prayerful support.

Our praise and acts of gratitude encourages weary pastors to continue walking the walk themselves as they also show us how to walk.

Members of a congregation watch the walk of their pastor and draw inspiration from each step. They resolve that no matter how long they have been on the battlefield that will continue. I can hear them say, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Some have lifted their voices as members of choirs, others have washed dishes and mopped floors, but lead by a faith driven pastor they say, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Some have licked stamps, folded envelopes and passed out programs. Some have given their last dollar and others have given until they felt the pain, but encouraged by their pastors they resolve, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Some have emptied trash cans, others have stood behind television cameras, snapped pictures, worked with youth, or just been in the midst of the saints for moral support. All have one thing in common. They all watch the pastor's walk and say, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now."

Why do we salute our pastors? Because they have taught us to walk in faith.

Why do we honor them with special days? Because they have taught us how to call on the name of the Lord!

When our strength is failing, we may not remember to call on El-Shaddai, the almighty God..but there is a name!

When we are walking through the valley of the shadow of death, we may not remember, Jehova-Rohi, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want!"..but there is a name!

When we are feeling like we're making this journey alone, we may not remember "Emmanuel" the everlasting God, but there is a name!

We love our pastors because they continually remind us that, there is a name.

It is the name songwriter wrote about when he declared, "I come to the garden alone. While the dew is still on the roses. And the voice I hear ringing in mine ear, the son of God discloses. And he walks with me and he talks with me and he tells me

I am his own. And the joy we share as we tarry there, none other has ever known."

There is a name that reaches beyond the narrow confines of my loneliness and brings me comfort!

There is a name that reaches below my deepest failure and guides me to success!

There is a name that transcends my weakness and brings me strength.

It's the name of Jesus! There is none other name whereby we must be saved!

It's the name of Jesus!

No wonder the song writer declared, "There is a name I love to hear. I love to sing its worth. It sounds like music in mine ear, the sweetest name on earth. Oh how I love Jesus. Oh How I love Jesus. Because he first loved me."

He loved me so much that he hung out on Calvary!

He loved me so much that died for my sins!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power!

All power in his hands!

Obtaining the Favor of the Lord

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 13, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "For thou, LORD, wilt bless the righteous; with favour wilt thou compass him as with a shield." Psalm 5:12; For whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain favour of the LORD." Proverbs 8:35

Introduction

Do you have favorites? Most of us have a few favorites in nearly every category of life. We have a favorite color and football team. We have a favorite hat we like to wear and some have a favorite pair of shoes. We have favorite television shows, favorite singers, and favorite songs. We have favorite teachers, preachers and churches. We even have favorite foods, such as bologna sandwiches or French Fries. We have favorite sides of the bed, favorite soaps and favorite colognes and perfumes. When we think about it, we all have a few favorites.

Most of us can remember persons who were favorites in school. Remember the teacher's pet? The "pet" was the one who was given permission to "take" names and perform other "adult" tasks in the class. The teacher's pet always volunteered to do things for the teacher including passing out papers, erasing the black board and many other special tasks. In time, that special volunteer received special treatment and sometimes a special seat at the front of the class.

In the corporate world, many get opportunities for advancement because someone in a position of authority likes their work and makes opportunities available to them. Sometimes we are promoted because someone returned a favor to person who is impressed with our performance.

Sometimes playing favorites can cause trouble. Jacob favored Joseph because of his special love for his mother and it caused problems. Jacob's mother played favorites between him and his brother Esau, there was trouble. Playing favorites in the family, in relationships and many other areas can often be troublesome.

When we ask someone to "do me a favor", we are requesting him or her to do something for us in return for mutual goodwill that we have shown them in the past. Many have come to learn a great truth about favors, "favors are once received, but twice paid." If you ask a favor, be prepared to repay it twice, because favors know their way back to your front door.

What about God, does he play favorites?

God does not play favorites when it comes to salvation; everyone shares the same degree of salvation. Acts 10:34-35 makes it clear that God is not partial. "Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." God has no favorite race or class of people. Any person that chooses to fear and respect him and carry himself righteously with obedience is accepted into the category of "favorites" of God. He does not exclude us, but we must include ourselves.

As Christians, we know that God does favors, little extra things, for believers who obey him and live righteously. These "favors" are done because our obedience has endeared us to him. In essence, God "likes us" and does many favors for us. The favors he does are not exclusive. Any believer can receive the "favor" of God. What he does for one, he will do for the other, if they too will believe in him, obey him and live righteously.

Exposition

This text focuses upon David as he indicates how God bestows favor on the righteous.

The idea of God's favor is a hidden truth of scripture. Grace and favor are similar principles in scripture. Both terms come from the same root word but they have slightly different meanings.

Grace is unmerited goodwill. It is what is received although we do not deserve it. Salvation is an evidence of God's grace. We who are saved have done nothing to deserve it, yet we have it.

Favor is different. A Favor is an extra pleasantry or help that God bestows upon us because of our relationship with him. Unlike Grace, which is unmerited, favors are merited to a degree.

David said the Lord will bless those who are righteous with favor, which will surround him like a shield. David's son, Solomon wrote in Proverbs 8:35, "For whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain favor of the Lord."

These texts indicate that favors from God can be obtained. We can get God to show us extra kindnesses and goodwill that will seem to those who observe from a distance to be a shield all around us.

David indicates that the key to obtaining favor is righteous living and obedience.

Those who fail to obey God lose favor with him. Jeremiah 16:13 says, "Therefore will I cast you out of this land into a land that ye know not, neither ye nor your fathers; and there shall ye serve other gods day and night; where I will not shew you favor." Isaiah 27:11 also indicates God's attitude toward the disobedient "..Therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will shew them no favor."

Grace indicates that God does not play favorites when it comes to salvation. Even those who do not deserve it can be saved. However, among those who are saved, God does show special favor to those who are righteous, loyal and obedient.

How to Obtain Favors from God

We receive the Grace of God out of his mercy and kindness. We are saved because Christ loved us and died for us on Calvary. We obtain Grace by accepting Christ as our personal savior. What about Favor? How do we obtain favors from God?

OBEDIENCE: To obtain favor from God we must be obedient. God does not smile on us if we are disobedient to his command. God smiles on us when we live and give righteously. Remember Peter's words in Acts 10:34-35, he that lives in the fear of the Lord and lives righteously is accepted. Others are rejected. Cain and Abel show us how two men can come before the Lord, one obtains a favor from the Lord and the other does not. We must live and give righteously. Living righteously implies doing God's will every day. Giving righteously implies sharing our financial gifts and spiritual gifts according to God's plan. To obtain a favor from God we must both "live and give" righteously.

PRAY FOR FAVOR: We usually ask for favors. Those who are obedient to God and live according to his will are in a position to ask for favor. Job 33:26 says, "He shall pray unto God, and he will be favorable unto him: and he shall see his face with joy: for he will render unto man his righteousness." The certainty of getting a favor from God is indicated here. Job says, "And he will be favorable unto him." In Psalm 106:4 David is shown asking for favor. "Remember me, O LORD, with the favor that thou bearest unto thy people: O visit me with thy salvation." Those who live and give by God's rules are expected and encouraged to ask him for favors.

Sometimes we ask God to show favor to others on our behalf. There are millions of people today who are enjoying some aspect of life as a result of a favor request of a saint. While Israel complained and grumbled in the wilderness, Moses prayed to God and asked a favor for them. In Numbers 11:15 Moses said, "If I have found favor in thy sight.." bless them with meat to eat. In a similar sense, many today have meat to eat, not because of our goodness, but because God is showing favor to a saint somewhere who has prayed for us.

WISE ACTIONS PRODUCE FAVOR: Whenever we act wisely, making life choices that embrace the will of God, we earn the favor of God. Wise actions, according to the will of God, is referred to as wisdom. Wisdom is what is referred to in Proverbs 8:35, "For whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain favour of the LORD." When we act wisely and respond to life situations by asking the question, 'What would God have me do?" Then God is pleased. He smiles on us and gives us favor.

When we choose a Godly wife or husband, it shows wisdom and God shows favor on the relationship.

When we choose to show mercy and to forgive, it shows wisdom and God smiles and shows us favor.

When we have a thirst for truth rather than lies, God smiles on us and shows us favor.

When we demonstrate that we can patiently wait for God to move in any life situation, God smiles on us and shows us favor.

When God Smiles on us

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that good things happen to those who are favored of the Lord.

It is good to be blessed by the Lord, but it is even better to enjoy his favor.

Those who are favored by the Lord are those who get more than they deserve. They get the shield of God around them.

Samuel was the greatest prophet of his time, but only because he enjoyed the favor of the Lord. 1 Samuel 2:26 says, "And the child Samuel grew on, and was in favor both with the LORD, and also with men."

Job's life went through many ups and downs but he survived every test because he enjoyed the favor of the Lord. In Job 10:12 he said, "Thou hast granted me life and favor, and thy visitation hath preserved my spirit."

Mary was selected to be the surrogate mother for the Christ child because she enjoyed the favor of the Lord. Luke 1:30 says, "And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favor with God."

David was the greatest King of Israel because he enjoyed the favor of the Lord. Acts 7:46 says David was a man, "Who found favor before God.."

God smiles on those who have his favor.

I don't know about you, but I'm glad that God has smiled on me.

When God smiles on us, he gives us:

—STRENGTH when our burdens become heavy.

—ASSURANCE when everything seems to go wrong.

—INSPIRATION when difficulties arise.

—COMFORT when disaster strikes.

Because God favors us we are able to:

—Keep on going, when our road gets rough.

—Keep on singing, even though our pain becomes intense.

—Keep on working, even when our body gets weary.

Because God smiles on us, we have:

—Joy in spite of our sorrows: Peace in spite of our problems

—Contentment in spite of our burdens; Assurance in spite of our frustrations

—Comfort in spite of our pain; Victory in spite of our defeats

No wonder the song write declared, "God has smiled on me. He has made me glad!"

I'm glad that he is a wonder working God!

I'm glad that he is a favor giving God!

I'm glad that he is a soul saving God!

I'm glad that one day he decided to pick up an old rugged cross!

I'm glad that he carried it to Golgotha's hill!

I'm glad that he died for me out on Calvary!

When The Chickens Come Home To Roost

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 2005

SCRIPTURE: And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter. And Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. Luke 22:61

Introduction

What happens when our past comes back to haunt us? Has it ever happened to you? It's when a chapter in your life that was once closed is suddenly reopened or revisited. It's when you stare at the results of a failed experience returned before your eyes. In happens in all areas of life. It's that moment when you look at the bad habits of one of your children and realize that you are looking at yourself at the same age. It is very frustrating when we see it unfold in front of our eyes.

In 1963 after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, most of white America became angry with Black Muslim leader Malcolm X when he made a disturbing analogy. Malcolm said that America operates with a double standard. Abroad, it opposes governments that do not support freedom for all citizens; then denies freedoms to its own. In addition, he said, the nation attempts to assassinate and remove leaders of opposing nations through the covert actions of the CIA and other secret government organizations. He said the assassination of John F. Kennedy was a case of "When the chickens come home to roost."

The phrase, "When the chickens come home to roost" is a colloquialism that refers to the tendency of chickens on a farm to roam freely. In the day, they are often seen under the house or pecking long distances from the coop. However, when the sun begins to set, without fail, chickens will always come back home to perch themselves on the roosts.

In America today we are living in difficult times, caused partially by the errors and mistakes of our national past. The chickens have come home to roost.

We have promoted violence and explicit sex in the media, even to the point that daytime soaps and cartoons are now filled with violent and irreverent material. The results are before us. We have a violent society that takes murder and violence lightly and expects every good movie to have at least one hot sex scene. The chickens have come home to roost.

In the 1960's we began a "War on Poverty" that was supposed to eliminate poverty in America. Decades later, we see a subclass developed before us. This subclass has become dependent upon public assistance, food allotments, free lunch, subsidized rent and other acts of charities. Before us today is a generation of which a growing number is trapped in an endless cycle that is destroying our families and the moral fiber of our communities. The chickens have come home to roost.

We have removed God from our schools and public places. Prayer at athletic events, assemblies or in classrooms has been abolished. In many areas, Christ has been removed from Christmas, substituted with an X or a mere "Happy Holidays." Now, we see a nation that has less respect for God and no fear of him. It is a nation that is gradually degenerating. The chickens have come to roost.

Even in the church, the chickens have come home to roost. There are many who are looking at the results many years of neglect and spiritual decay before. Churches that allowed their men's programs to die are now frustrated with the scarcity of males in the fellowship. Churches that have treated their teaching ministries lightly have fallen prey to "Praise, Worship, and Prosperity" cults that have outgrown the body of Christ. The chickens have come home to roost.

As Christians, we know that whatever we do today, will meet us again in a few years. We should do our best to lift Christ up before this present generation. When we fail to do what we should do with enthusiasm and power, we deny him to a world of unbelievers. That denial will come back to haunt us one day, "when the chickens come home to roost."

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he tells Peter that he would deny him instead of standing with him.

Jesus was on trial and being falsely accused. On the outside, while Jesus was being tried on the inside, Peter waited to hear the result. As people recognized him as a disciple of Christ Peter became afraid and began to deny knowing Christ. After his third denial, he heard the cockcrow. Then he remembered what Christ had told him earlier, that before the cock crowed he would deny him three times.

Peter was one of Christ's elect leaders. There were 12 disciples selected out of many. Peter was among three out of the 12 disciples that became Jesus' inner circle. Yet, when Christ needed him the most, Peter denied him.

The crowing of the rooster, perched on its roost, reminded Peter just how far he had strayed.

The crowing of the rooster, firmly attached to its roost, forced him to look at the contradictions of his life. In private, he professed a great faith in Christ, but in the face of a hostile public, he denied him.

The crowing of the rooster brought it all home.

Peter was so hurt when he looked at how far he had drifted away from the savior that it made him weep. Later, he ultimately, revived himself and became a strong leader of the faith, but not before the "chickens came home to roost."

Church leaders must answer too

Today, there are many in the church who began their service in the same way that Peter began; they came with a fiery passion that his faded almost to a point of denial. However, believers need to be aware that we will give an account of everything we do for the Lord as members of the body of Christ.

GIVING: When the chickens come home to roost, members who began their service as tithers but have reduce themselves to "nickel and dime" donors, will stand before God and answer Malachi's question, "Will a man rob God?" In reality, many believers rob God each week, forcing the church to operate at less than its maximum potential. The same believers often use portions of funds that would have been their tithes to purchase lottery tickets, gamble or to pay their cable bill. Such members do the same as Peter, they deny Christ at the offering table.

WORSHIP: When the chickens come home to roost, those who refuse to worship or sit in worship services like statues refusing to say "Amen" or show any sign of gratitude for the blessings of the Lord, will find themselves outside of the ark of safety and in their place, the rocks will cry out "glory and honor!" When God has blessed us, we should be willing to praise him and lift him up in the sanctuary so that everyone can see the joy we share in the Lord. Instead, many whom God has blessed richly, choose to stay home regularly and refuse to praise him publicly, or if they do worship, it is in a very unresponsive manner. Like Peter, these believers deny Christ in the sanctuary.

BIBLE STUDY: When the chickens come home to roost, Sunday school teachers who refuse to come to teacher's meeting and members who refuse to come and be taught, will remember the words of 2 Timothy 2:15, "Study to show thyself approved, a workman that needeth not be ashamed but rightly diving the word of truth." Too many believers are trying to live the Christian life without learning the word. Others are attempting teach information without first learning it themselves. Those who refuse to study the word, like Peter, deny him by refusing to study of the study of the word.

LEADERSHIP: When the chickens come home to roost, Church leaders who fight and jockey for power, position and control in the church, will remember Jesus' words that, "He that is greatest among you, let him be your servant." When James and John asked Jesus for high seats and positions, he warned them that prestige in the kingdom does not come from titles but from service. Unfortunately, there are many who fight for control and power in the church, who are unable to drink from the cup of service; instead, they deny Christ in humility and followship.

PREACHING: When the chickens come home to roost, associate ministers who constantly want to preach but fail to follow the instruction regime of the pastor, will remember the words of Paul instructing them to study, follow and humble themselves.

Those who share the preaching ministry should follow the model of Paul and Timothy. The associates should learn, study and carry out ministries assign to them in preparation for the time that their turn comes. However, today, many associates are just that "associates" who sit in the pulpit, but deny Christ in the fulfillment of the ministry.

HOMOSEXUALITY: When the chickens come home to roost, gays and homosexuals who flaunt themselves openly in worship saying they were born gay, should remember Christ's words to the rich young ruler, "You must be born again." Many churches have turned a blind eye to this growing problem. God loves every person, despite his or her sexual purposes. However, does not love the sins of his people. Because the church is often silent in this area, homosexuality even within the church is increasing. In the area of morality, often the church denies Christ.

Like Peter, many believers have denied Christ in one or more ways. Their actions speak louder than their words because they declare, "I don't know him!"

Reap What We Sow

If there is one certainty in life it is that we shall reap what we sow. Moreover, we shall reap in accordance to that which we have sown. 2 Corinthians 9:6 says "But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."

Those who are intolerant of the views of the others will be the most irritated when their views are not tolerated. That's when the chickens come home to roost.

Those who are impatient with others, will be the most disgruntled when others complain that they themselves act too slow. That's when the chickens come home to roost.

Those who are insensitive to the needs of the poor or elderly will be among the first to complain when they themselves appear neglected when the chickens come home to roost.

Those who steal from others will cry the loudest when someone steals from them. They'll learn that, when the chickens come home to roost.

Those who stab others in the back, will die a slow death when they become the victims of their own ways, when the chickens come home to roost.

Those who pass up a person in distress along the way will complain the loudest when they themselves are passed up, when the chickens come home to roost.

The tragedy of evil deeds is that we do them also unto Christ. In Matthew 25:40 he reminds us that what we have done to the "least of these" we have done also to him. It will all be remembered, when the chickens come home to roost

Evil deeds haunt us, good deeds reward us

Yet while the word teaches us that the evil that we do comes back to us, there is also a promise to those who do good, it will come back as well.

We are encouraged to do as much good as we can for as many as we can as long as we can.

If we sow goodness, when the master returns, instead of haunting us with punishments he will have blessings for us.

Therefore every believer should do great works in the church and lift the cause of Christ.

We should cast our bread on the water. Casting our bread on the waters means serving with the same passion and fire that we brought to the faith in the beginning.

When we cast our bread on the waters it will come back, but not without a blessing.

Casting our bread upon the waters, means reaching out to hungry people with a loaf for the spirit and a word of hope for the soul!

Casting our bread upon the waters, means reaching out for the homeless with a comfortable place to rest and a chance for a heavenly home!

Casting our bread upon the waters means looking beyond the rough exteriors of wayward children and seeing the sensitive interiors that cry out for love and affection!

Casting our bread upon the waters is giving a helping hand when we see no chance that the favor would ever be returned.

Casting our bread upon the water means to return to the Sunday School, Usher Board, Women's Ministry, Deacons service, Music Ministry and a plethora of areas of service as resolve that, "For God I'll live and for God I'll die."

When the Lord pays, that which we have cast upon the water comes back in mighty ways!

We must tell the world about the bread of life! We must tell them about the Love of God through his Son Jesus Christ!

We must tell everyone we meet about the Lord.

We need to tell somebody about the Love of God!

We need to tell somebody about Jesus! Who died! And arose from the grave!

Tell them he's coming back again! I hear him saying:

"You helped the poor and the needy...Come and go with me!"

"You gave a plate of food to a hungry man...come and go with me!"

"You stood up for those who could not defend themselves...come and go with me!"

"You showed compassion to the helpless....come and go with me!"

"Come and go with me to my father's house!"

In my father's house there is peace!

In my father's house there is joy! Joy! Joy!

Wake Up, Straighten and Fly Right

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 2005

SCRIPTURE: And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light. Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof. Romans 13:11-14.*

Introduction

Have you ever been bent out of shape? "Bent" is an African-American colloquialism that usually refers to persons who are completely messed up. Sometimes it is alcoholism, drug addiction or a plethora of other possible maladies. Those who are "bent" are usually lulled into a denial of their situation and do not accept their position at all. They are "bent" so bad that straightening up seems out of the question.

There are many today who asleep. They are messed up, tangled up and tied up into the world so tightly that they cannot get loose. Yet, deep inside they want to do what is right.

Consider the pastor who tried to a get a man to come to church for many years. Each time he went to see the man his invitation was always refused. The man said, "Reverend, when I get straight, I'll promise you, I'll come to church." The minister tried to persuade him to come to Jesus while he had time, but the man always refused saying, "I can't come the way I am. When I get straight. I'll be there." Before the pastor could visit the man again he received news that the man died in his sleep. At his funeral, the pastor struggled to find a kind word to say about the man who never came to the church once in life. The pastor finally said, "My friends there is one thing that I can say about our friend. He kept his promise. He promised me he would come to church when he got straight. Well, now he's straight and there he is."

Straightening up is difficult for many people. Straightening up requires us to wake up and change our direction in life. The late Nat King Cole had a hit tune that was sung around America. Some of you may remember the words:

Buzzard took a monkey for a ride in the air
Monkey thought that everything on the square
Buzzard tried to throw the monkey off of his back
But the monkey turned around and said, “Hey listen Jack!”

Straighten up and fly right
Straighten up and stay right
Straighten up and fly right
Cool down bubba don’t you blow your top

Ain’t no use in jiving
What’s the use of diving
Straighten up and fly right
Cool down bubba don’t you blow your top

Nat King Cole’s humorous little song had America saying words that carried very serious implications, we all need to wake up, straighten up and fly right.

When it comes to our relationship with God, we need to wake up straighten up and fly right!

When it comes to our relationships with the church, we need to wake up, straighten up and fly right.

When it comes to our relationship with each other, we need to wake up, straighten up and fly right.

As Christians, we know that it is essential for us to repent and turn away from sin, if we intend to enter the Kingdom of Heaven. Nat King Cole said it one way, but Jesus said it in no uncertain terms: if want to enter the kingdom, we must be born again.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul’s epistle to the believers in Roman about the importance of Christians being awake and alert.

The Roman world was extremely liberal and embraced a variety of ungodly believers. Christians living in Rome were often tempted to involve themselves in ungodly activities sponsored by the Roman state.

Paul warned that Christians should belong to the light, not the dark. He characterized the loose living and low morals of the Romans as reflecting darkness. He characterized the Christian life as being that of walking in the light. Paul said Christians should be awake and alert, behaving as those who have seen the light of the Gospel. The call to awaken is the call to alertness and awareness of the world that surrounds every believer. His message is very clear, wake up because the day is at hand.

The decadence of the world involves a multitude of sins. In this text, Paul lists a number of sins that believers should avoid. Believers are encouraged to “put on Christ" —that is, make Christ Lord of our daily lives and to "make no provision for the flesh." We are encouraged to avoid anything that will cause us to sin.

The call to wake up is also a call for believers to straighten up and prepare for the coming of the Lord.

Wake Up

There are many in the church who are asleep to the sin that is in the world around them. The storms of life are raging, but ye they sleep.

Just as Jonah was asleep onboard the ship while all the men on worried about their fate, there are many who just a guilty as Jonah who are asleep to storm of sin that is raging around them.

Those who are asleep are sleep walking. Their eyes are open but yet they remain sound asleep, walking in a world of darkness.

Some love to live in the dark. If they were vegetables, we would call them potato people. Better yet, we call them "tater" people. Taters love the dark.

TATERS LIVE IN THE DARK: Taters are products of the dark. They grow off the work of other plant components, the leaves, which are above ground doing all of the work. Yet in the church, there are millions of "tater people" who sit in the dark and let others do all of the work. They are not sinful people, they have Christ in them, but they have not reached a point of being "In Christ." Taters need to wake up, straighten up and fly right.

TATERS WILL ROT IF LEFT ALONE: Although taters live in the dark, the very darkness they enjoy will destroy them if they are not uprooted in time. A tater, left in the ground too long will rot. Tater people are the same way, that's why God's Holy Spirit constantly tugs at them to get them to move out of the darkness, into the marvelous light. In the dark, their fate is sealed. In the light, there is life. Taters need to wake up, straighten up and fly right.

TATERS HAVE EYES BUT THEY CANNOT SEE: Taters have many eyes but they cannot see a thing. There are many tater people who are the same way, they have eyes but they cannot see a thing. They cannot see how God operates in their lives. They cannot see God's plan for them. They cannot understand God's ways. Neither can they "see" God's vision. Taters need to wake up, straighten up and fly right.

TATERS MUST BE PREPARED TO BE USED: As a food, taters generally are not ready, just as they are. To get a tater ready to eat it must be fried, or baked, or boiled or mashed other otherwise prepared. While there are a few folks who like them raw, most folks stay away from an unprepared tater. Tater people are the same way, they are not useful just being taters, they must be prepared first. Sometimes God prepares tater people by exposing them to just enough heat in life to make them usable. He does not fry the French fry until its black, but just enough! He does not boil a potato until it falls apart, but until it's soft enough to mash. There are some tater people who have hard personalities, terrible ways and corrupt attitudes. They are not ready yet, God is still turning up the heat and he is not through yet. Taters need to straighten up and fly right.

TATER PEOPLE HAVE A VARIETY OF NAMES: The Tater personality usually results in a variety of descriptions. There is Dick-tater, he wants to tell everyone what to do. There is Agi-Tater, who always stirs up dissent. Hesi-tater, who always puts off doing that which is necessary; Ro-tater, who moves from one thing to another. Tater people, by whatever name we call them, seem to reflect darkness rather than light. They have a light, but it never shines. Taters need to straighten up and fly right.

Straighten up

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider our need to clean up and straighten up.

Paul says in verse 13 that we should "walk honestly" in the world. That means we must straighten up. In Ephesians 4:1-3 Paul wrote, "I, therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you to walk worthy of the calling with witch you were called, with all lowliness & gentleness, with longsuffering, bearing with one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit, in the bond of peace."

When we straighten up, we begin to live a life that is pleasing in the sight of God.

Paul says that when we straighten up we will put off a few things: Revelry & drunkenness: wild parties, sexual orgies, brawls, and riots, Lewdness & lust: sexual immoralities, Strife & envy:

To really straighten up, believers must walk in the light.

When we turn from the darkness and walk in the light we show we know what it means to straighten up and fly right.

If those who walk in the dark are "potato people" then those who walk in the light would have to be called "tomato people." Or "Mater" people.

When you straighten up and fly right you become a Mater instead of a Tater.

While taters live in the dark, maters live in the sunshine. Maters bloom in the garden, grow on the vine and abide in the word of the Lord! That is what Jesus meant when he said in John 15:4, "Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me."

When you straighten up you become one God's "Mater people."

MATERS ARE READY TO SERVE. While taters must be prepared to serve, maters live ready to serve. A gardener can walk through the garden, see a fine mater and pick it right there. Mater people are ready to serve the Lord. Maybe that's what Isaiah 6:8 means when it says, "Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me.

The continuous testimony of a true believer is, "Use me Lord in Your Service"

If you need me to pray, use me!

If you need me to sing, use me!

If you need me to wave my hand, use me Lord in your service!

MATER PEOPLE HAVE MANY SEEDS: While taters have to be cut up before they can grow, Maters have seeds. They have plenty of seeds. Seeds for growth and seeds of faith. Mater people are always planting seeds for their growth and prosperity.

Maters are known by a variety of names, we may know a few of them of them. There is:

ANI-MATER, who takes things that don't usually move and makes them come to life. If you have a program that is dead, you need an ani-mater to get it going again!

AMALGA-MATER, who takes things that are loose and unconnected and brings them together

ESTI-MATER AND APPROXI-MATER, two folks who always have an idea of what it will take to get a job done!

ACCLI-MATERS, those who help others to get adjusted in a new situations. They have a special touch that settles rather than disturbs, inspires rather than confuses.

We need to be careful in life, because there are some taters that try to look like maters; they are generally called "imi-tators!"

One thing about mater people is that they can be sealed by the Holy Ghost.

Someone remembers grandma, picking maters in the garden!

Someone remembers grandma going to the store to buy the Mason Jars!

Someone remembers grandma boiling those jars in hot water while she'd get her peaches, pears together. Somewhere in the bunch, grandma would also include a few maters. When the jars were sterilized, the maters are put in the Mason jars while the water is hot. Grandma would say, "Don't screw the top too tight, wait for it to pop!" When it pops, she'd say it's time to lock it down.

When the maters were sealed in the Old Mason Jars, grandma would store them away. It did not matter how, long because they were sealed.

That's what Ephesians 1:18 meant when it says, "...after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise."

When we are sealed with the Holy Ghost we have a testimony to give and a story to tell!

It's a story of how he brought me out of darkness, into his marvelous light!

It's story of how he woke me up out of my deep sleep and straightened up my life!

It's a story of how he picked me up and turned me around!

It's a story of how he died out on Calvary and arose early Sunday morning!

Jesus gave me a light and I'm going to let it shine!

Let it shine! Let it shine! Let it shine!

The Fantastic Four

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 27, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "As for these four children, God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams. Daniel 1:17; "Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his counselors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king. 25 He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God." Daniel 3:24-25

Introduction

Do you remember the comic book, the Fantastic Four? There are many super heroes that have fueled the fantasies of children and adults for generations. Many of these super heroes have been in our lives for several generations. Generally, they fight evil and champion the cause of good.

Who is your favorite?

For some, Superman is the best of the super heroes. He came from the Planet Krypton just before it was destroyed. Because of the yellow sun of this galaxy he assumed super powers that allowed him to leap tall buildings with a single bound, become more powerful than a locomotive and run faster than a speeding bullet.

There are others too. Remember the Incredible Hulk? He was the mild mannered man who was exposed to gamma rays which turned him into a green monster when he became angry. Spiderman was able to climb buildings and perform incredible acrobatics with a new found ability to emulate the web tendencies of spiders. There are others including: Batman and Robin, Wonder Woman and the Green Lantern. A new generation was exposed to the Power Rangers and an African-American super-hero, Spawn.

Many of the super heroes of Marvel comics have been presented to a new generation through Hollywood. Nearly every comic book hero has a movie. This year, one of the block busters was the movie, "The Fantastic Four."

The Fantastic Four became super heroes as a result of a mistaken scrambling of their DNA. One came to possess the ability to stretch like rubber. A female member of the group soon realized she had the ability to become invisible. Another had a very hot temper and when he was pushed turned into a human torch. The fourth could feel no pain. Together the Fantastic Four were able to perform powerful feats, overcoming evil as they championed the cause of good in the world.

The Fantastic Four, like all of the super heroes, were ordinary people. Many of them like Spiderman and Super Boy were just teenagers. Yet, at some point they came to know that they possessed extra abilities, under certain conditions, that could be used for the betterment of mankind.

America cheered as it watched the Fantastic Four on screen and read the comics, but did you know that God has a Fantastic Four relationship with every believer?

Through his presence in the life of a believer God transforms an average student, band member, football player, dancer or cheerleader, from being just an ordinary person, to a spirit driven achiever. This Fantastic Four is not the stuff of comic books or movies. This Fantastic Four is the winning team of The Father, The Son, The Holy Ghost and You!-The Fantastic Four.

As Christians, we are strengthened by the knowledge that God helps us rise about the ordinary to do the extraordinary. Together with our unseen backup team, every believer steps into the world, not as one person, but with the assurance that three others are always present. What a team, the trinity and me!

Exposition

This text focuses on three believers who acknowledge the permissive will of God, the power of God and their acceptance of his will.

The King of Babylon conquered the entire region of Judah and carried most of its craftsmen, scholars and thinkers back to Babylon. He began a three year program to repatriate these Jews so that they would accept Chaldean customs. Among the three, were four men, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah.

commonly known as Daniel, Meshack, Shadrack and Abednego. The four were adamant believers in God's kingdom. They prayed regularly and even refused the king's efforts to re-educate them to the Chaldean political viewpoint and life-style.

It wasn't long before it became obvious to all who observed them, that these four men had a special anointing. They were able to do things that others could not do. The Three Hebrew Boys had great wisdom and knowledge. Daniel had the gift of wisdom and the special ability to interpret dreams.

What they said and did was fantastic. Their deeds and wise acts were fantastic. Their unyielding faith in God was fantastic as well.

Daniel interpreted a dream for the King. In so doing Daniel was given the opportunity to serve as a prime minister or leader of governors in the land. It was a position that he refused. However, he recommended similar positions for the three young men who were with him.

As foreigners and powerful political leaders in the land, the three young men and even Daniel himself, were often the subject of efforts to oust them from power. One such move came when the King erected a statue of himself and sent out a decree that said when certain music was played that everyone should bow and worship his image. Those who refused to do so would be punished by being cast into a fiery furnace the same day. The king's Chaldean advisors made certain that the resistance of the three was noted. The Chaldeans, who denounced Daniel and his associates to the king, were astrologers who wanted to predict a happier future for the king and his realm.

When the music played, as expected, three of the nation's highest governmental officers refused to bow. The king addressed them by asking whether they understood the order and the punishment for those who defied the order. They acknowledged that they understood, but they still refused to obey the order.

In a frustrating moment, the king reiterated his command and the punishment. When he saw that the three Hebrew Boys would not bow he asked, "Who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hand?"

In answering the King, the Hebrew Boys made three affirmations: That God may permit it to be so, that he was able to deliver them, and that even if God chose not to answer as they wanted, they still had no plans to disobey him.

The King ordered that the furnace be prepared, but this time that it should be prepared seven times hotter than it had been on other days. The three young men were thrown into the furnace but were not burned by the fire. There was no smell of smoke or fire on their clothes as well. As the people waited for them to scream, there was silence. Instead, the king looked in and called out to them. He then noticed an astonishing revelation. Instead of three men in the fire, he saw four. The fourth one, he said, looked like the Son of God.

Four Gifts

Every believer is given special gifts with which to help build the kingdom of God. Every person does not have the same gift. The purpose of the gifts is to help expand God's kingdom. Like the Hebrew Boys and Daniel, there will be many who will attempt to entice young believers to use their gifts in ways that will not be pleasing to God. In addition, there will be those who will be "haters" or those who will unfairly criticize believers because of their gifts. Daniel 1:17 lists the four gifts of the Hebrew Boys that made them stand out in their generation.

KNOWLEDGE: The gift of knowledge is a unique gift. It is the unique ability to acquire vast amounts of information, mentally catalog that information, and recall it when it is needed. 1 Corinthians 12:8 list "knowledge" as one of the categories of gifts of the Holy Spirit. There are many who have acquired knowledge through hard work and long hours of study. Others seem to have knowledge without much study at all. We watch contestants on television game shows such as Jeopardy and "Who wants to be a millionaire?" and we wonder how the contestants learn so much information. Afterwards many contestants report that they rarely study at all, it just comes to them. The gift of knowledge is essential to building the kingdom. God needs those with knowledge to help broaden and expand the kingdom of God. Youth who have this unusual gift should decide early in life whether they will use their gift for doing good in the name of the Lord or for personal enrichment or worse, evil purposes.

SKILL: Skill refers to developed proficiency. Skill is developed through training and experience. Whereas knowledge is a gift, skill is a learned attribute that is accentuated when it is supported by an associated gift. A person can become a skilled floral designer, through training and experience. That same training, in the hands of a person born with a natural eye for beauty, can do wonders with simple things. Skill requires practice, many hours of practice. The great musicians play well because they practice regularly. Writers write! Singers, sing! Communicators speak every time they get an opportunity. In addition, skill is obtained from observing and studying the techniques of those who have mastered a skill or a craft. The prophet Elisha studied in the school of prophets. He watched and observed Elijah for many years. Elijah showed him what it took to be a prophet and the young man watched. He too, became skilled in prophetic works, scripture and communion with God.

LEARNING: The Hebrew Boys were young men who took the time to learn. They learned foreign language because they were able to speak with the Chaldeans. They learned math and economics because they were government advisors of Babylon economic policy. They learned nutrition because they refused to eat unhealthy foods. They were considered special because of their learning. Paul told Timothy in 2 Timothy 2:15 to "Study to shew thyself approved, a workman that needeth not be ashamed but rightly dividing the word of truth." Proverbs 1:5 says, "A wise man will hear and increase learning." The young would be wise to get all of the learning they can possibly attain while there is time.

A young boy walked along the trail one day and he heard a voice speak to him. The voice said: "Gather as many stones as you can and tomorrow you will be both glad and sad." Seeing no one, the boy kept walking and he heard the voice again, repeating the same message. After hearing the message a third time, the boy decided to pick up a few small stones and put them in his pocket. After doing so the voice stopped. The next day the boy walked along the trail and he heard the voice again, with the same message. He decided he had spent enough time picking up stones and wasn't going to spend any more. On the third day as he was going through his pockets he found the five stones he picked up the first day and turned to diamonds, rubies and emeralds and were extremely valuable. He jumped up with joy. He was excited over what he had. Then he felt his pocket from the second day and remembered that he didn't pick up any stones that day. It was then that he heard the voice again: "Gather as many stones as you can and tomorrow you will be both glad and sad. Glad that you picked up some, but sad that you did not pick up more." The same is true about learning. Get all you can now, the day will come when you will wish you had more.

WISDOM: The Hebrew Boys were held in high esteem because they displayed wisdom. Wisdom is related to knowledge, skill and learning, because it refers to the wise use of all three. Wisdom, in the words of Dr. Ava Pierce, is knowing "When to say yes and when to say no. When to hold on and when to let go." It is the prudent application of skill and learning at the right time and place. There are many people who have knowledge but have no wisdom. There are many who learning and skill, but lack wisdom. Those who reject wisdom are referred to in scripture as fools. Many young people ruin themselves because they act foolishly rather than wisely with their parents, teachers and school mates. They never read the words of Proverbs 10:23, "It is sport to a fool to do mischief, but a man of understanding hath wisdom." The child that disrespects his parents, teachers and adults, acts foolishly. Those who rebel against authority at school and break every rule act foolishly. Proverb 4:7 sums up the matter, "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding."

Christ Makes Us Fantastic

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that in addition to their knowledge, skill, learning and wisdom, the Hebrew Boys had a fourth presence that was always with them; the presence of the Lord.

That's what makes them Fantastic! The Lord was always with them.

They trusted the Lord and leaned not to their own understanding!

They each had special gifts and talents that they used to glorify God and in their decision making, they chose to put him above all others.

Three men stood high in the kingdom when the king's trumpet sounded!

Three men remained standing when the rest of the kingdom bowed in submission and reverence to a godlike king.

Three men stood before the judgment seat of the king, on trial for their lives.

Three men heard the king when they were asked, "Will your god deliver thee?"

Three men answered with one resolved, "We don't know if God will deliver us but we know he is able!"

Three men watched as the heat of the furnace was raised seven times hotter than usual.

Three men were bound and thrown into the fiery furnace and flames of fire enveloped them.

Three men suddenly stood in the fire; they stood like smoky shadows and aberrations.

I heard the king ask, "Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king. He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God." Daniel 3:24-25

It was the fourth man in the fire, who made these young men fantastic!

They had knowledge, but when faced with the fiery trials of life, they were saved by the fourth man in the fire!

They had skill, but all of their skill could not save them in a moment of trial, it was only the fourth man in the fire!

They had learning and wisdom, but when things got really hot, they needed the fourth man in the fire!

1 John 5:7 says there are three witness bearers: the father, the Word and the Holy Ghost and these three are one. That means any time we get in the fire we are not alone. There are four men in the fire, the Father, The Son, The Holy Ghost and you!

What enemy can stand the power of the Fantastic Four?

What obstacle can stand in the way of the Fantastic Four?

What challenge is too great for the Fantastic Four?

The world declares, “we thought we had him down, but behold there is a fourth man in the fire!”

His name is Jesus! The Alpha and the Omega!

Jesus, The Lily of the Valley and the bright and morning star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

When God is present, there is nothing that can stand in the way of the Father, the Word, the Holy Ghost and You! The Fantastic Four!

What if Mary Had An Abortion?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 18, 2005

SCRIPTURE: For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Isaiah 9:6; "Saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done." Luke 22:42

Introduction

Have you ever wondered, "What if Mary had exercised her right to choose and had an abortion?" When we look into the eyes of a newborn we often wonder, 'What shall this child become?' It is a mystery to us what the Lord has in store for every little child that is born. Yet, it is a mystery that some will never unravel because, for a variety of reasons, they choose to abort the life of the unborn before it develops into God's plan.

There are many reasons given for the decision to abort a child. Some see their poverty and do not wish to bring a child into that poverty. Some are frustrated with the world and feel another child would only add to complex frustrations that already exist.

Consider Mary's dilemma. She was an unwed teenager. She was poor. She was from a small town that held very few prospects for success for a newborn. What possible good can ever come from such a child?

If the birth of the Christ child says anything to us, it is that each child is born in this world with a divine purpose that is not altered by its circumstance but is nurtured by its circumstance. The talented child has a purpose. The smart child and the physically strong have purposes as well. However, the mentally challenged child has a purpose too. The poor child and the child with few gifts also have purposes.

If Mary had aborted Jesus, it was an option even in biblical times, she would have cheated the world out of a chance for redemption.

This is the dilemma that the entire issue of abortion presents. Women's rights groups in America promote a "Woman's right to choose." Pro-life groups, promote the phrase "Choose life." Somewhere between the two ideologies is the right choice. A woman does have the right to choose what shall be done to her body and her life. The difference, however, is when that choice is executed. The choice that is available must be made at the point when a woman decides to have intimate relations. That is where the right to choose should be exercised. After a child is conceived, biblically, that right ceases because a new life, complete with its own set of choices, begins.

God has plans for every life, even while the child is undeveloped in its mother's womb. The prophet Isaiah made note that before he took his first breath

God had named him and appointed him to a service. In Isaiah 49:1, 5 he says, "Before I was born the LORD called me; from my birth he has made mention of my name...and now the LORD says—he who formed me in the womb to be his servant..." The prophet Jeremiah said, "The word of the LORD came to me, saying, "Before I formed you in the womb I knew you, before you were born I set you apart; I appointed you as a prophet to the nations" (Jeremiah 1:4-5).

The bible is undeniably clear that the fetus growing inside of a pregnant woman may have been begun by "accident, tragedy, or loose living" but once begun the child is assigned a purpose, and identity. The process of God's wonder working power begins at conception. "For you created my inmost being; you knit me together in my mother's womb. I praise you because I am fearfully and wonderfully made; your works are wonderful, I know that full well. My frame was not hidden from you when I was made in the secret place. When I was woven together in the depths of the earth, your eyes saw my unformed body. All the days ordained for me were written in your book before one of them came to be" (Psalm 139:13-16).

Because a destiny is assigned to every life that begins, those who choose to abort a life, also choose to interfere with that assigned destiny.

What if Jocebed had decided that life as a slave was miserable and without purpose? If she had exercised her right to choose Moses, would never have been born?

What if Elizabeth had decided that she was elderly and the risks of bearing a child could be dangerous? If she had exercised her right to choose, John the Baptist would not have been born.

What if Mrs. King had decided that there is little hope for a poor Negro child in a world that will discriminate against him because of his color? If she had chosen to have an abortion, Martin Luther King, Jr. would never have been born.

Women who bring children into the world, regardless of the circumstance of conception, are blessed of the Lord because they chose to give life rather than to deny the unborn the opportunity to live, grow and perhaps be a blessing to the world.

When Mary pondered the child that grew in her womb, she also considered her own future. Certainly she would be ostracized by the whispers of neighbors who would point to the fact that she was engaged but she wasn't married. She would certainly find it difficult, but was determined to let the child she carried achieve his destiny; to become the savior of the world. The government would be upon his shoulders. He would be the Prince of Peace.

As Christians, we aware that God has purpose for every life. Like Mary, we have chosen to put our futures in his hands and trust him to lead us into the unknown.

Exposition

Hundreds of years before his birth, Isaiah made it abundantly clear that the birth of Christ was not a chance occurrence, but part of God's divine order. The world, having known sin would be given a chance to know salvation in the person of Jesus Christ. The fact that Isaiah described all of the names by which Christ would be called using the word "shall" indicated that his coming would not be a chance happening but would be essential to the process of redeeming mankind.

The child that would be born would be wonderful and a mighty counselor. The child would be born with a destiny. That destiny was to show mankind the way back to God.

If destiny indicates purpose then the purpose of Christ's coming was to provide us with the chance of spiritual adoption. To accomplish this end he had to pay the penalty for sin. To do that, the Law of Moses required death. That is why Luke 24:7 says, "The son of man MUST be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again." Christ was born to die, but he died to rise again to give us hope of renewed life in the kingdom.

In Luke 22:42 Jesus prayed in the garden. His immediate desire was to avoid the cross and all of its associated humiliations, sufferings and brutality. He asked that this "cup" would be allowed to pass from him. However, despite his reservations over accepting the way of the cross, he also wanted to complete his mission and his destiny. He refused to abort that mission because of how it would personally affect him. He said,"Never-the-less not my will, but thy will be done." His decision not to abort carried him to a day of humiliation and torment but provided eternal life for all of those would believe.

Abortion threatens many areas of life

There are many who abort the possibilities that exist for their lives out of fear. Fear of being characterized as a failure. Fear of discovery. Fear of embarrassment. The fear of what man can do makes many people anxious. Sometimes what we fear is not something that will happen to us but what people will say about us or what they will think of us. Franklin Roosevelt, dealing with the fears of the American people after the bombing of Pearl Harbor and just before entering World War II said, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself!" Sometimes our fears prompt us to do that which ordinarily would not be an option with us. That is the case when a man or woman aborts that which has begun because of a fear of what might result.

While abortion as a moral issue is debated across the country, there are many other areas of our lives that suffer from the threat of abortion as well.

ABORTED DREAMS: There are many who have great dreams for themselves, but circumstance has prompted them to cut that dream short. A student who dreamed of being a doctor aborted that dream when he stumbled upon the fact that certain anatomy and biology classes needed for his studies would be difficult. There are many who have dreamed great dreams but have abandoned them because the pursuit of the dream seems so far reaching. Is there anything too hard for God? Is the possibility of failure so great that you believe that you and God cannot overcome its threat? Abraham and Sarai dreamed of having a child, but as age progressed neither had conceived. After a century of life their dream came true. Despite the risks to her health and the cutting remarks of neighbors, Sarai refused to abort that possibility. She leaned on God for support and carried the child to its full term. The rest is history. If we carry our dreams to full term, despite our fear of failure and discovery, God will bless us for the act of faith even though he frowned on the weakness that prompted our failure in the first place.

ABORTED MISSION: There are many who began life with a fire and commitment to perform a great work for God, somewhere along the road they became afraid, frustrated or disgusted and aborted the mission. Missions in life vary between the man who made it his mission to help the poor in his neighborhood to the woman who began helping the church youth or children's ministry. There are many who begin their missions with a great boldness then suddenly disappear. This was the case with the prophet Elijah who boldly stood before King Ahab and Queen Jezebel and declared the word of God. When they retaliated against him, he disappeared. He hid himself in the wilderness by a brook and attempted to retreat from his mission. God fed his daily in his retreat for a while. However, God would not allow him to abort the mission. He stopped the food supply that was coming to him daily, brought by a raven. He dried up the brook that supplied him fresh water. It was then that Elijah began to discover that he could not abort his mission it had to be carried to its logical conclusion. He arose, despite his fear of persecution and God protected him from the death he feared and he accomplished his mission. Have you begun a mission for God but aborted that mission for one reason or another. Put your faith in God and continue. The blessing is in the completion of the mission. The blessing is in the end result, not in the frustrations along the way. Work while it is day because when the night comes, no man can work.

ABORTED DESTINY: There are many who give up on their own destiny. Despite the frustrations of our present situation there is a destiny for each of us that should not be denied. Often our entire purpose in life is not to create the solution to a great problem, but to be the one who creates an opportunity for the one born to solve the problem to appear. John the Baptist constantly reminded the world that he was not the answer to the sins of the world. His destiny was to "prepare the way" for the one who would come after him. Jesus was the the long awaited Messiah. But what if Mary had an abortion? Would the other children she bore have the same anointing as the aborted Christ child? Since Mary had other sons and at least one daughter the scripture record does not indicate that any of them shared the same destiny as Christ, even though they had the same Mother. Christ and Christ alone was the one anointed. What if Mary had an abortion? We don't know what destiny God has in store for us or the children we bear, adopt or inspire. What we do know that if destinies are interrupted what God intended could be altered in a great way?

The child who should grow to become the scientist who discovers the cure for cancer, can never achieve her destiny because her life is prematurely aborted.

The child who has been anointed while in his mother's womb to lead the nation into an era of peace and tranquility, will never accomplish his destiny if he is aborted before he takes his first breath.

The circumstances of Christ's parentage and birth gave an indication of his destiny. Jesus was born in a small town, to poor parents, in very restricted and impoverished circumstances. His destiny, in these circumstances was not clear; it had to be discovered. By the age of 12 it appears he had learned his destiny because after being found in the temple with the scholars he said, 'It's time for me to be about my father's business."

As Joseph stared at his adopted son with amazement, he must have asked the question, "What if Mary had had an abortion?"

In the community around us there are many who have risen to excellence as teachers, doctors, officials and athletes. What if our mothers had exercised their right to choose and aborted our destiny?

That is the core issue of the abortion debate. Does anyone have the right to abort the destiny of another? While we may have a choice with respect to our own destiny, do we have that same right with respect to the destiny of another person?

When Mary pondered the same question. She chose to allow the child she carried to fulfill his destiny. She set the example for all who followed. She chose to allow God to work out the details of the life of the child she carried and for her own future. She chose not to have an abortion.

Christ did not deny his destiny

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that just as Mary refused to abort her child, Christ refused to abort the purpose of his life which was to become the Savior of the world.

It would have been extremely easy for Christ to abort his life's purpose. He had many opportunities.

In the wilderness, he was tempted three times to abort his mission, but each time he chose to carry his mission to term, despite the effects it might have on his own life.

When he was criticized by religious leaders for the tenacity and fervor of his mission, he could have easily toned it down but he chose to speak in the power of the Lord unto salvation.

Those who carry the unborn today must have the same resolve. Whether our unborn children are planned or unplanned, we must trust God at this point to care and protect both mother and child. We have options available, but we must remember that the sin that concerns us is not the deliverance of the unborn but in the conception of the unborn.

If we have repented for that sin, God has forgiven.

Now, God blesses mother and child during the remaining trimesters because there is a calling to fulfill.

Mary did not have an abortion because she chose to trust in the Lord.

Those who trust in the Lord are confident that no matter what we have done and where we are, God cares!

Somebody here knows something about trusting the Lord. We don't claim to be scholars or experts, but we have had some dealings with the Lord.

I don't know about you but I have found out that when nobody else:

—Cares, that the Lord is concerned about me.

—Forgives me,that the Lord is willing to forget.

—Accepts me, that the Lord receives me with arms wide open.

—Wants me, that the Lord accepts me as a child of the king.

In the Garden, Jesus the child Mary refused to abort, prayed to his father. He asked him to let this cup pass from him.

He did not want a crown a thorns on his head.

He did not want to be whipped all night long.

He did not want to be stripped naked and hung on a Roman cross.

He did not want to have nails driven in his hands.

He did not want to have a spear stuck in his side.

Yet he refused to abort his mission!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose with all power in his hands!

I'm glad Mary didn't have an abortion.

But I'm even happier that Jesus did not abort his journey from the manger to cross!

I'm glad because he gave me a chance for a brand new life!

It's a wonderful hope that the world now enjoys but would not have, if Mary had had an abortion!

Interior Decorations

SCRIPTURE: And they shall take the blood and strike in on the two side posts and on the upper door post of the houses, wherein they shall eat it. And the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt." Exodus 12:7, 13.

Introduction

When did you start decorating for Christmas? The time varies by individuals. Some began on Thanksgiving Day. Some as late as Christmas Eve. The decorations put us in the mood for Christmas.

Christmas decorations range from a string a lights around the outside of our homes to elaborate light shows that entail thousands of lights, animated reindeer, nativity scenes and other yuletide decorations. Each year some families use the same decorations, adding a few more lights, scenes and depictions along the way.

There are many neighborhoods that have become showcases during the Christmas season, drawing thousands of spectators who drive through the brightly decorated areas in awe of the beautiful lights and Christmas scenes.

Some entire communities are known for light shows and Christmas displays that annually attract thousands to see the decorations. Since Christmas decorations attract visitors and puts people in the mood for shopping and spending, many cities invest in decorations that adorn telephone posts, public buildings and thoroughfares. It all creates what is known as the Christmas spirit.

Even the White House joins the national celebration by lighting a giant Christmas tree on the White House lawn. The highly decorated and bright illuminated tree is supposed to indicate the spirit of Christmas exists in the nation.

Decorations, while beautiful, are temporary. Sooner or later the tinsel, the trinkets, and the lights will come down to be stored away until next year. Sometimes the spirit that came with them is packed away until next year as well. That spirit of helping the poor, giving freely and love for all, somehow, gets packed away with the Christmas decorations.

Our decorations may be a true reflection of our culture. We are fast becoming a nation that pays more attention to the outside than the inside. By contrast, God's exteriors always point in a substantive way to an interior reality. When God puts something on the outside it has a connection with what's going on inside. It is not superficial.

There is great emphasis on exterior decoration during this season. Yet, we must always remember that the decorations that impress God the most are our interior decorations. God is not impressed with the beautiful exteriors if there is a dark spirit of divorce, anger, distrust, hatred, and vengeance that exists inside. The exterior has the right look, but the interior should have a connection to the exterior.

As Christians, we are always mindful of the true spirit of Christmas, which is reflected on the outside but begins on the inside. There is great joy on our faces because there is joy in our heart. That joy is because daily we celebrate the presence of the Lord and the peace he brings.

Exposition

This text focuses on God's instruction to Israel that they should decorate the door posts of their homes with the blood of a lamb and be ready on the inside.

Israel had been slaves in Egypt for over 400 years. As vassals of the state, they built roads, pyramids, palaces and other works for the Egyptians. They prayed constantly for deliverance. This text occurs on the eve of their deliverance from Egypt.

They were ordered to kill a lamb and to prepare it for eating with bitter herbs. They were also ordered to take the blood of the lamb and use it to paint the exterior door posts of their homes. This strange decoration would be a sign to God's death angel to spare anyone on the inside of that home from the death of the first born, which was the 10th and final plague against Egypt.

As promised, the death angel came. Each home that had the blood stained exteriors were saved. Those without this peculiar decoration suffered the death of their firstborn, whether they were Israelites or not.

Inside the homes the people were obedient, filled with joy and hope because it appeared that the terrible midnight of their enslavement was about to end. The joy they shared on the interior was because of the blood on the exterior of their doors.

Interior Decorations

Many of our homes are very livable and pleasing to the eye. However, only the very fortunate have the resources to design and furnish their homes with the advice of a professional interior decorator. To design a room an interior decorator keeps four components in mind: purpose, theme, color and balance. In a spiritual sense every believer needs the same four components if he or she allows the Holy Spirit to decorate the interiors of their lives.

PURPOSE: The purpose for which a room will be used will indicate the type of furniture, flooring, and its general décor. The same can be true for a Christian life. It is almost impossible to shape our spiritual lives until we have decided upon our life's purpose. What is our purpose? Is it gaining riches? Having all the fun we can? Helping others? Making an important mark? Guiding and protecting our families? We must prayerfully discover our purpose before we can adequately decorate our interior because the design of our inner lives is closely associated with our purpose.

The Prophet Isaiah tells us that the purpose of the Christ Child was to become the Prince of Peace, the Almighty God and Counselor. With a clear purpose, Christ's spiritual life was easier to shape because his purpose was clear to him; he was to be the savior of his people. This fact was indicated even by his name, "Jesus", which meant he would save his people. Any spiritual décor that would develop in his inner self would be in line with his perceived purpose.

Self discovery is a very important aspect of human development. When we do not know who we are and where we are going it is difficult to adorn, decorate and design our inner lives in accordance with the will of God and his divine plan.

THEME: Interior decorators design a room using a theme. The room will have a certain look such as Western, Colonial, or Futuristic. In respect to our spiritual lives, it is the style, method or means by which we pursue our purpose. Decorators will insist that everything put in a room remain true to its theme. The same is true with the lifestyle that we develop as we pursue our purpose. There should be consistency. It gets ugly when we mix the styles. We praise God on one day and get down and nasty on the dance floor on the next. The styles are confusing when we drink communion wine on Sunday and Malt Liquor on other days. Such confusing signs indicate that we have a conflicting spiritual theme. As believers we adopt a life theme that is consistent with our personality. Many of us are leaders others are followers. Some are support team members and others are support team leaders. Some are soloists and some are members of the choir. We know our purpose and we have a consistent life theme that helps us achieve what we see as our life's purpose.

Even leadership styles differ while purposes are the same. Martin Luther King and Shirley Chisholm were confrontational; Andrew Young was a consensus builder. The Black Panthers were revolutionary and the NAACP is aggressively conservative. Each has the same general purpose but a different theme.

Similarly, Samson used physical strength as his theme. Solomon used great wisdom and diplomacy. Elijah and Elisha were oratorical. John the Baptist was confrontational. Jesus assumed a humble and unassuming style about his life, from his humble birth in Bethlehem to his crucifixion on Calvary; he remained true to his theme throughout his life.

COLOR: The interior decorator insures that the color of a room set its mood or attitude. Bright colors are cheerful and lively. Dark colors are sad and lonely. As we pursue our life's purpose what color describes our attitude? Bright and lively colors that indicate our lively and positive attitudes or dark colors that suggest our dark dispositions, serious, grave and somber thinking, always leaning to skepticism or pessimism.

David painted himself as a man full of praise and joy, writing over 100 psalms that encouraged all believers to make a "joyful noise unto the Lord." Paul painted himself with a blue of courage and determination. Christ painted himself with the color of commitment to mission and doing his father's will. If yellow represents cowardice, then certainly Judas could be described by that color. Many believers have adopted a dominate color that describes our lives. If it's the wrong color, then we need to redecorate our interior.

BALANCE: Decorator's insist that a room's design have balance. We're in balance when there is not too much of one thing and too little of another. Believers strive to achieve the balanced life. When we are balanced we can walk without stumbling. When we are out of balance, we fall.

Sometimes we can lose focus and get completely out of balance. A limousine encountered a red traffic light and was waiting for it to change when a small Hooptie also drove up. It looked to be beat up Volkswagen. The brother in the Limo rolled down the window and started bragging that his car was best car that money could buy. " It has ABS, airbags for all passengers, automatic climate control, onboard computer control system, photo chromatic glass, mini bar, a television with satellite dish and hydraulic shock."

At this point the Hooptie owner rolled down his window and pointed, "But do you have a video in there?"

The brother in the Limo had been dissed. He immediate bought a video for his limo.

A few days passed by, and again the limo was at a traffic light when the limo brother spotted the Volkswagon again. He bragged about his limo and showed his layaway bed.

"But does it have GPS?" asked the Volkswagon owner as he drove off.

Upset the limo owner hurredly had a GPS system installed. He laughed a few days later when he saw the little Volkswagon pulled to the side of the road with it windows all steamed up. Steam was even coming from the windows and water was dripping on the ground.

The limo brother knocked on the window and said, "I got a GPS system now!"

The Volkswagon owner said, "You got me out of my morning shower to tell me that?"

There are many who have no balance in their lives. They are constantly trying to get more and keep up with their neighbors or outdo someone else. There can be no happiness until we have real balance in our lives.

Paul told believers he learned to live with and without resources. Whatever his circumstance he has learned to count it all joy.

We Need An Interior Decorator

Finally, brothers and sisters, if we want our spiritual lives designed correctly, we need to call in a decorator.

Most of our spiritual lives are like our homes, they are smorgasbords of loosely connected things that look good to us but don't go well together.

We often do what we do without a purpose or design, we just put things together. It soon becomes obvious that we need a spiritual interior decorator.

Professional decorators are expensive, so we do it ourselves. But I know a spiritual decorator who is willing to work for any believer without a charge.

Maybe that's why Christ came to this earth. To help us put order and design to a confused world. To bring peace to world that was a ball of confusion.

The Christmas season prompts us to open our doors and invite in the Christ who will help us to strike a balance that will bring peace on earth and joy to the world.

During this season we see a babe in the manger but we also see a crucified Lord who comes offering us a sense of purpose, theme, color and balance in our lives.

The coming of the Christ Child gives every man or woman an opportunity to redecorate their lives with the guidance of the Holy Ghost.

We may do many things to decorate the outside, but we need Christ to decorate the inside.

I don't know about you but I'm glad that I've got an interior decorator to give my life a purpose. "For God I'll live and for God I'll die!"

I'm glad that I've got an interior decorator to give me a consistent walk and light to shine. "This little light of mine, I'm going to let it shine!"

I'm glad that I've got an interior decorator to give me the bright color of joy and the ability to say, "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy comes in the morning!"

I'm glad that I've got an interior decorator to help me have balance; to say "I've had my bad days and I have had my good days, but I won't complain!"

Only the blood of Christ on the outside can make sure that our insides are pleasing to God.

When Israel was told to find a lamb and decorate their door posts with its blood, it was but a shadow of the blood of the Lamb of God, shed on the outside on a hill called Golgotha, to save the people on the inside.

The blood of the lamb, shed on the outside, gives hope on the inside.

The blood of the lamb, shed on the outside, gives peace on the inside.

The blood of the lamb, shed on the outside, gives joy on the inside.

I know it was the blood the changed me!

I know it was the blood that redecorated my life!

One day when I was lost, he died..on an old rugged cross!

But early, Sunday morning….

SCRIPTURE:"And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them." Luke 2:20

Introduction

Do you take special note of your birthday? If you are like most people, you are keenly aware of your birthday. People note their birthdays in a variety of ways that range from something as simple as circling a date on a calendar to elaborate parties and other celebrations. Birthdays are important to us because they recall memories of celebration and happiness. As children, we were taught the joy of a birthday celebration. Most mothers can recite the birth dates of every one of their children. While fathers often struggle to remember those dates, mothers can often recite not only the date, but the day of the week and hour of the day that each child was born. She remembers both the joy and the pain of each date as if it was yesterday.

What happens on your birthday?

Many people receive special treatment on their birthday. Many stores offer discounts to those celebrating a birthday, a few businesses give an employee a day off to celebrate their birth.

We often receive gifts when we celebrate our birthdays. Sometimes friends and people who don't know us will give us money on our birthday, even though they are never prompted to do the same on any other day of the year.

On occasion, there is a birthday party. They begin with ice cream and cake in our youth. Sometimes adult parties can become extravagant; some border on the prohibited. On rare occasions, the honoree might be treated to a surprise birthday party.

We know how WE celebrate our birthdays. We are familiar with all of various ways; but how do we celebrate the birth of Jesus, the Son of God? It is celebrated through praise, worship and fellowship.

As Christians, we mark the birth of Christ as an important date, worthy of celebration. Like the shepherds, angels and hosts of heaven, we come before his presence with offerings, singing and adoration. We leave, as they did, praising his name.

Exposition

This text focuses upon the celebration that surrounded the birth of Jesus.

Joseph and his 15 year old Fiancée' Mary came to Bethlehem to register for the tax which had been ordered by King Herod. Their family was from Bethlehem, so they made the journey from Nazareth to Bethlehem to enroll, even though Mary was pregnant and due for delivery at any time.

In Bethlehem, they found that all inn space had been rented. The best they could do was to spend the night in a cave-like area used to house and feed animals. During that night Mary brought forth a son, who was named Jesus, because his birth marked the entry of God on earth in the form of a male child.

Joseph had no time to call in friends and relatives. They did not have time to plan a proper celebration, but there was a celebration anyway.

Though the Christ child had a manger for a crib, there was a Holy Ghost party at the manger.

The celebration was orchestrated in heaven by an angel of the Lord. Those who came to the manger started celebrating before they arrived.

Verse 2:9 says "And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them.." This was the invitation that was given to several shepherds in the field. They were being notified that the long awaited savior had been born. It was a reason to celebrate. The angel brought great news. In verse 11 the angel said, "For unto you is born in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."

Another invitation was sent out to the whole world. God fixed a star in the sky that could be seen around the world. In the East, several wise men saw the star and recognized its meaning. They boarded camels and began a long journey to get to the Christ child. They prepared gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh.

But the angels didn't wait for the wise men. Neither did they wait for the shepherds. They started celebrating before the first guest showed up.

What began as one angel making an announcement soon became a whole multitude of angels that were praising God and shouting "Glory to God in the highest; and on earth peace, good will toward men."

When the angels finished singing and shouting, the shepherds decided to join the party. Verse 15 says, "And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us."

On their way to the manger the shepherds were celebrating in the streets, telling everyone what they had seen and heard. Though others would not join them the shepherds came to the manger anyway, ready to praise the Lord.

Once they arrived they saw the child, wrapped in swaddling clothes, laying in the manger.

When the shepherds left the manager they left shouting and glorifying God for all the things they had seen and heard.

The praise party they attended that night continues even to this day.

A Holy Ghost Praise Party

How was the birth of Christ celebrated? When we look at the angels and the shepherds we get an idea about what happened at the praise party at the manger.

PRAISED HIM FOR WHAT THEY HEARD: Verse 20 says the shepherds praised God for what they heard. What did they hear? They heard that a savior was born. They heard that God was about to answer Israel's prayers after 400 years. What they heard brought them hope and increased their faith. Romans 10:17 says, "Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God." They heard a word from heaven and what they heard gave them a reason for praise.

Whenever there are difficulties in our lives, we get extremely happy whenever we hear that there is a word from heaven!

Whenever there is sadness, we lift up our heads when we hear that there is a word!

Whenever there is failure and defeat we are encouraged, when we hear that there is a word!

What have you heard?

I heard that if I am lonely, he will be my comfort!

I heard that if I am sad, he will bring me cheer!

I heard that if I am afraid, he'll remind me that the Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear?

At the birthday celebration, they praised him for the hope and inspiration they received from what they heard:

PRAISED HIM FOR WHAT THEY HAD SEEN: It is good to praise the Lord for what you have heard, but it's even better to praise him for what you have experience yourself. The shepherds left the manger praising God for what they had seen. What they had heard gave them hope, but what they had seen became a testimony.

No one can testify to what they heard, but only to what they have experienced themselves.

We may have heard Grandma tell us that God will make a way, but we can only testify when we can say, "He has done great things for me."

We may have heard grandpa tell us that God will answer prayer, but we can only testify when we can say, "I know the Lord will answer prayer because I tried him for myself."

We may have heard auntie say, "God is a good God in a time of storm" but we can only testify when we can say, "I've tried the man, and the man is alright!"

What his been your experience with the Lord? Has he opened doors for you? If that's the case then you should understand why the shepherds praised him, because he has showered them with blessings of mercy, forgiveness and salvation!

Like the shepherds, we've seen some things about God.

WE HAVE SEEN that if we trust him:

—Misfortunes will not scare us!

—Troubles will not torment us!

—Sorrows will not terrify us!

—Disappointments will not provoke us!
—Perplexities will not vex us!
—Burdens will not restrain us!
—Prosperity will not spoil us!
—Poverty will not frustrate us!
—Failure will not overcome us!

No wonder the song writer said, "I have seen the lightning flashing. I have heard the thunder roll. I've felt sin's breakers dashing, trying to conquer my soul. I heard the voice of the savior, he bid me to still fight on, he promised never to leave, never to leave me alone!

When shepherds left the party

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that when the shepherds left the party, the party wasn't over.

Matthew 2:9-10 tells us that it took a little while for the wise men to make it to Israel. The angels had come and gone. The shepherds had come and gone, but the wise were shouting on their way.

Verse 9 says, "And lo the star which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was. When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy!

It took them a little while to get to the party but when they came, they brought gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh.

When the angels left the party, the shepherds picked up where they left off.

When the shepherds left the party, the wise men kept it going!

When the wise men left the party every believer joins the celebration, because every child of God has something to shout about!

The angels were glorifying God in heaven because the savior had been born, they had something to shout about!

The shepherds were shouting in the fields because the promise of God was being fulfilled, they had something to shout about.

The wise men were shouting as they traveled across the desert, they had seen a sign from God written in the stars, they had something to shout about.

Whenever the Lord has done something for you, you have something to shout about.

Whenever we think about how God has blessed us, we have something to shout about.

Whenever we think about how God has picked us up and turned us around, we have something to shout about.

Whenever we think about how he provides food for us when we are hungry, we have something to shout about.

When we think about how he brought us out of nowhere and carried us to somewhere, we have something to shout about.

This Christmas Christians are doing a lot of shouting, but it's not because of the man in the red suit, but we're shouting because of Jesus!

The man in the red suit lives at the North Pole; but we are shouting because Jesus is not only at the North Pole but he's at the South Pole, the East Pole and the West Pole, he is everywhere.

The man in red suit rides in a sleigh; but we're shouting because Jesus is not confined to sleigh but he rides on the wind and can walk on the water.

The man in the red suit comes but once a year; but we're shouting because Jesus is always by our side!

The man in the red suit fills your stockings with goodies; we shouting because Jesus supplies all our needs.

The man in the red suit comes down your chimney uninvited; but we are shouting because Jesus stands at your door and knocks, and waits to be invited in.

The man in the red suit lets you sit on his lap; but we're shouting because Jesus lets you rest in his arms and lay upon his breast. "Lie down, lie down thy weary one, thy head upon my breast!"

The man in the red suit doesn't know your name, all he can say is "Hi little boy or girl, what's your name?"; but we're shouting because Jesus already knows my name. He knows my down sitting and my uprising and thoughts of my mind before I think them.

The man in the red suit has little helpers to make little toys; but we're shouting because Jesus doesn't need any help, he can be God all by himself.

He mends wounded hearts, repairs broken home.

And all by himself he said, "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am ye may be also!"

We're shouting because the little baby born in Bethlehem lived on earth for 33 long years!

We're shouting because one day he picked up a cross and died for us on Calvary!

We're shouting because Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

We're shouting because one these days he's coming back again and there will be A holy Ghost party in heaven!

We're shouting because there ain't no party like a Holy Ghost party because a holy ghost party don't stop!

No. 9081-New Year

Back Up This Train

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

January 2005

SCRIPTURE:"I go the way of all the earth: be thou strong therefore, and show thyself a man And keep the charge of the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and his testimonies, as it is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself: — 1 Kings 2:2-3

Introduction

What will it take for you to succeed in the New Year? Lots of money? Fame? Popularity? As the New Year begins there are many who are making resolutions to change one aspect or another of their daily routine in hopes that they will find success in the coming year.

There are many who are riding a fast train to hell and have decided in the words of Al Green's 1967 song, "Back up Train" or in the words of the Hip Hop Generation, to "Back This Thang Up!" Either way, there some who have concluded that they cannot continue in the same direction. Something must change.

A tall pine tree stood for many years in the great forest. Its branches spread in all directions. It loomed high over the other trees and its thick trunk suggested it had endured many years. At the foot of the pine there was a little pine cone that lay around on the ground. He boasted to the other seeds that lay around that he was a mighty pine and would someday grow strong and tall. Meanwhile, he simply lay around and enjoyed the shade from the father pine's strong branches. The father pine constantly talked to him to show him what life was all about. However, the cone was content to know that he could one day be a pine and he idled away his time.

One night, lightning struck the mighty pine and down it fell with a mighty thud. In the days that followed the pine cone stood in the same place where the mighty pine stood and tried to take his place. He stretched out his arms, but they were not huge branches. He gave off no shade and did not tower over the other trees as did the mighty pine. His heart dropped in frustration. Then he heard the voice of the mighty pine whistling through the wind, "within you is the potential for greatness, for you are the offspring of a pine. But to achieve your greatness, you cannot lay around. You must bury yourself in fertile soil, take root, sprout and grow with a made up mind. Then you will be a tree my son, then you will be a pine."- Similarly, we can't attempt to succeed if we continue to idle away the years as some have done in the past. We must back and redirect.

Three things contribute to our success and spiritual growth: The right crowd, strong roots and a made up mind. Many believers with great potential are lost because they plant themselves in infertile soil, have no strongly rooted principles, or cannot discipline themselves to do what is necessary to achieve their life goals.

If we have lost sight of these three essentials then it is important that we back this thing up, get on the right train and do the right things in the New Year.

Exposition

This text focuses on David in the closing years of his life. It targets the advice that he left with his son who was about to begin his tenure as King of Israel. It was advice from a godly father to a godly son about how to approach his unknown future.

His advice to Solomon was that he should "be strong." He then explained what he considered necessary for Solomon to be "strong."

In verse three he begins to list off the requirements for the strength that he urged Solomon to acquire. He told Solomon to: 1) Walk in the Way of the Lord, and 2) Keep his commandments. The reward for living a life in fertile circles based upon Godly principles was noted: "That thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself."

David's advice came from his own experience. He was raised in a God fearing home. He was blessed to have a good father and mother that provided for him in every way. David was taught the way of the Lord when he was young and he exemplified courage and faith at a young age as he took on the giant Goliath. He was both courageous and humble. In his own life, he tried to do what was right, but also learned a very good lesson: that despite age or experience that a man never out grows temptation. Even in his flirtations and weaknesses, David talked privately with God and asked for forgiveness, a clean heart and a clean spirit.

David could advise his son about strength and character because they were the hallmarks of his own life. He was honest, hard working, humble, and a man of principle himself. In the latter years of his life he achieved a degree of comfort. However, he spent a great part of his life in the humility of the pasture and in the company of the common people. He was not always in line with the will of God, for on occasion he strayed. Yet he was the kind of man that was "after God's own heart."

There was a point in David's life, when he had to stop and back up. He had authorized a murder, took a man's life and perjured himself in the matter of his adultery with Bathsheba. Before he could go forward he had to back up and get straight with God. He asked God to "Create in me a clean heart Oh God, and renew a right spirit within me." Before he could go forward he had to back up.

The ability to back track, correct mistakes, and ask forgiveness is essential to what David called being "strong

We will need strength in the new year

How do you determine if you are a strong believer? You cannot measure your strength by your looks, physical attributes, or money. There are three accurate measures that will allow us to gauge our spiritual strength.

One measure of a Christian is the measure of character. If the chips are down, can we think straight and keep our families on steady courses? When face with threatening situations can we remain firm? Can we resist the temptation to succeed by evil devices or triumph at the expense of others? These are questions that form the basis for an analysis of strength. A Christian of great strength displays character when it is needed most. It is an inner strength that is hidden from the naked eye but is displayed in moments of crises.

Every believer should demonstrate Christian character. No Christian should steal, cheat, lie or involve themselves in activities that demonstrate weak character. If we are to succeed in the new year we must show strength to avoid loose lips that sink ships, wandering eyes that pry into the lives of our neighbors, and feet that always seem to walk in the wrong places.

If we demonstrated a lack of character last year, then maybe it's time to "Back this thang up" and get on the right train.

Measure a Christian by the strength of his/her commitment. There are many believers who have come up short with respect to commitment. A real Christian man has a commitment to his wife and children. A real Christian woman never neglects her husband or children. If you want to measure a real Christian man, measure him by his faithfulness to his wife. Measure a Christian woman by her faithfulness to her husband.

There are many "church members" who showed less than desirable commitment to their families last year. There are many who forgot their vows to stand by each other in sickness and in health for better or for worse, "forsaking all others." Many have not had the time or interest to work in the church because their zippers were down and skirts were up most of the year.

If we are to succeed and be "strong" in the coming year we must, "back this thang up" and get on the right train. We can't please God and the devil too. We must get it straight with God and with those closest to us.

In many ways, many believers relate to the church just as they relate to their families, there is no commitment or love. We are simply "shacking" with the church, getting all we can without making any promises. If we want to succeed this year, we must keep our vows to God and move from shacking with the church to a married relationship with the church, forsaking all others. The word teaches that the reward for doing so is great. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all of these things shall be added unto you." Matthew 6:33.

If we are to succeed and be "strong" in the coming year, we must "back up this train" and put our lives on the right track."

Measure believers by the strength of their faith. Faith, is acting on the unseen in hope that God will take over and make a way. Strong believers are good planners, providers and sober thinkers. However, strong believers are also men and women of faith.

They are believers who know and acknowledge that there are some things they cannot control that God must provide.

These are the believers who learn to lean on the Lord.

These are the believers who join with the songwriter and declare, "I learned how to lean and depend on Jesus. And I found out that if I trust him he will provide."

There are too many "church members" who had very little faith last year.

They had no faith that God would provide their finances so they did not tithe or even give regularly. They pinched and stole from God's resources, because they would not trust him to refill their barrel.

They had no faith that God was stronger than their personal problems so when the first winds blew they disappeared and we did not see them in Sunday School, bible study and general worship.

Some lost faith all together and stopped serving God.

Yet, the "strong" Christian knows the importance of faith and patience. Nothing can really be done without trusting God completely. To do that requires faith.

With faith, we can achieve the impossible!

With faith, the improbable becomes probable!

With Faith all things are possible.

Back Up This Train

Finally, brothers and sisters as we prepare to step out into a new horizon, we must make sure that we don't do it like we did it last year, we must "back this thang up" and get on the right train.

When we measure our role as Christians, we must not measure ourselves by the size of the church to which we hold membership, but we must be measured by the strength of our creed.

To be strong we must be men and women who live the lives that we sing about in our songs.

This year, let our strength reflect our willingness to help somebody. That's when we will sing the words of the song, "If I can help somebody as I pass along..if I can cheer somebody with a word or song, then my living shall not be in vain."

This year, let our strength reflect our willingness to back up this train and ask forgiveness for our mistakes.

This year, let our strength reflect our renewed faith that God will make a way.

This year, let our strength reflect our courage to do the right thing without fear because the Word declares, "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear, the Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?"

This year, let's back up this train and pledge to operate on faith rather than doubt. It's a faith that will prompt us to ask the question, "Why should I be discouraged, why should the shadows come. Why should my heart be lonely and long for heaven and home? For Jesus is my portion, a constant friend is he."

His eye...which peers beneath the transcendental depths of my sorrow;

His eye...which penetrates with x-ray like vision, the secret corridors of my mind;

His eye...which traces the meandering aerodynamics of a fluffy winged little bird;

His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches over me!

This year let's resolve to "back up" and put our trust in an almighty God.

A God who gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!

Back up this train and start placing your hope in the Lord.

Then you'll be able to say my hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus' name.

I hear the words of Andre Crouch, "Take me back! Take me back dear Lord, to the place where I first believed!"

Back up this train and take me back to the cross, where I first saw the light and the burdens of my heart rolled away!

Back up this train to the cross. "It was there by faith, I received my sight and now I'm happy all the day!

At the cross Jesus died and gave up his life!

At the cross the strength of dying is renewed and faith of the doubting is restored

One day when I was lost, he died upon a cross, but he arose to become the rock of my salvation

"On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!

All other ground is sinking sand!"

No. 9182-New Year

Will this be your Jubilee year?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 1, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof: it shall be a jubile unto you; and ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family." Leviticus 25:10; "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, To preach the acceptable year of the Lord. Luke 4:18-19.

Introduction

What if you were told that as of today, all of your debts were paid in full; how would you feel? Wouldn't that be a good feeling? Mortgage paid. Car note paid. Utilities paid. Credit cards paid. Student loans paid. What if even the amount you borrowed from a relative is also paid in full? Wouldn't that be great? Those who have actually paid off a mortgage or paid off an account know that there is a tremendous sense of relief knowing that the debt has been paid. Often it is like a load lifted off your shoulder.

Worry over debts is the culprit that has sent many to hospitals with anxiety attacks, high blood pressure and stress. We are a nation that knows the color of red ink. Our personal debts never seem to disappear and our national debt has reached the trillions. It's so big that they just stop counting. Entire industries have developed to help us get out of debt through consolidation and other means. Bankruptcy was once a quick solution but new laws that went into effect in 2005 made that harder to do. It all leaves us facing the loss of our homes and other property as we struggle to avoid the proverbial "poor house."

We know about our debts to the bank, mortgage holder and the credit card company, but what about our spiritual debts?

Because we are sinners we have been running up a huge debt with the devil. He has given us an unlimited charge card and has allowed us to charge it. He tells us to have fun now and pay later. Party now… pay later. Commit adultery now..pay later. Drink alcohol now..pay later. Use drugs now, pay later. Even snub and defy God now..pay later. The invoice for our sins gets longer by the minute. What we owe grows faster than the national debt. When we least expect it the devil knocks on our door and demands payment. He wants our souls.

Romans 6:23 says, "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal through Jesus Christ our Lord." The devil wants us to pay up, we have debt with him. He wants our lives on this earth and he wants our eternal life in payment.

Wouldn't be great if we suddenly discovered that the debt for our sins has been paid? The mortgage on our future has been canceled and we are now free; wouldn't it be great to know that? It would be a reason for praise and thanks.

As Christians, we know that Jesus has freed us from the debt and burdens of sin. He has closed the chapter on our shortcomings and given us a new chance. As we enter a new year we thank him for canceling our debt and giving us a chance to start over again with all spiritual debts paid.

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses' instruction to Israel to observe the year of Jubilee.

The instruction, given by Moses, was designed for the people as they prepared to move to the Promised Land. It described the people's relationship to the promise land to which they journeyed. They would make it to the Promised Land, but Moses made it clear that the land and all in it belonged to God, they were being allowed to use it.

The people were reminded that they would be tenants using land and other possessions loaned to them by God. Because they would never own what belongs to God what they came in possession of could not be exploited for the enrichment of some and the impoverishment of others .

In Old Testament law once land was placed in the hands of a family, that family could never permanently lose the land because it did not belong to them. They were allowed to lease land to others. A family could lose the use of land because of debts or because of the enslavement of its original owner. However, the family could not permanently lose their land because it belonged to God.

The Jubilee principle was established to provide a way for a person to reacquire that which was lost or sold and to start again.

The Jubilee worked this way. Every seventh sabbatical year (49th year), was to be followed by a year of Jubilee (25:8-13). A blast of the Ram's horn announced the beginning of a special year in which all debts, mortgages documents of enslavement and other legalities were canceled throughout the land.

The motto for the year was to proclaim liberty. Its primary purpose was to get family property and the family back together again (vv. 10, 13). This meant that all property (except in walled cities, cf. vv. 29-30) was to be restored to those whom God originally granted possession by God. It also meant all Hebrew slaves were to be released to return to their family property.

While selling land was not encouraged, it was sometimes necessary. When it was sold, the price was figured on the basis of the number of years since the Jubilee, that is, computing the number of years left for harvesting crops until the next Jubilee would return the land to its original owner. The closer a sale was to Jubilee the lower its cost.

In Luke, Jesus announced his mission on earth which was to set the captives free and to announcement the beginning of the New Testament version of Jubilee, which was restoration through faith in Christ.

In the Jubilee year, that which was lost was restored; those who were enslaved returned home and families were reunited to their Godly purpose. In Christ, the spirit of Jubilee continues, giving everyone a chance for restoration.

Our year of Jubilee

African-American families celebrate January 1st as Jubilee Day. On January 1, 1863 Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation set all slaves free in states in rebellion against the United States. Like, the children of Israel, we waited patiently in watch meeting services and pledged to remember our enslavement. The Jews remember their deliverance with roasted lamb and unleavened bread. We remember ours with: black eyed peas, hog jowls, chitterlings, and other food of slavery, with the warning that should we forget we would have bad luck and be returned to slavery.

For African-American families, January 1st marks our Jubilee celebration.

Will this be a year of Jubilee for your family or will you remain enslaved to those things which held you back last year?

If this is your Jubilee year three actions should be taken:

Get Back what you lost

Often we lose possession of things that are important to us. We lose them in one of two ways. We are either willing part with them, or part with them by hook or crook. Sometimes we treat what we have lightly and lose it. Esau had a birthright that he took lightly. He took his role in the family lightly and sold his inheritance to his brother for a bowl of porridge. Like him we often sell ourselves short. No one takes away our opportunity to succeed we give it away without a fight. We decide to drop out of school. We decide not to pursue that elusive dream. We give up.

The other way we part from what should be ours is that it taken from us by hook or crook. That's when we are cheated and deceived or become the innocent victims of crooks. The devil operates by Hook or Crook. He tries to take anything he can. What has the devil taken from you during the last year? Was it peace and joy? Did the devil rob you of your sense of direction and send you running to a thousand unknown places. If this is your year of jubilee it will be the year in which your peace and joy is restored. David, in Psalm 51 said, "Create in me a clean heart oh God and restore unto me the joy of thy salvation." If this is your jubilee year take back your peace of mind, that spirit of satisfaction that you once had but lost as the devil found ways to keep you disturbed, unsettled and unhappy. The peace of God, once lost, frustrates us and keeps us upset. But when peace returns, we are able to weather the storms of life and say, "It is well with my soul."

If this is your year of jubilee, then it will be the year you decide to "get it back."

Did you lose your hunger for spiritual things? Get it back?

Did you lose your thirst for education? Get it back?

Did you lose your man over something petty? Get him back!

Did you lose your woman over trivial matters? Get her back!
Did you lose your self respect, get it back!
If you lost something last year, let this be your year of jubilee and get it back!

End your Slavery

The Israelites often were sold into slavery to pay debts. When debts became due, those who didn't have enough possessions to settle their debts found that the only thing they could do was to sell themselves into slavery to the indebted. During their enslavement that which they had going for themselves was lost. They spent their energy building someone else's fortunes. At Jubilee, they were freed from enslavement and were able to once again pick up their own lives.

If this is to be the year of our jubilee, we must end our enslavement to lifestyles, habits and attitudes that have enslaved us.

We must end our enslavement to drugs, cigarettes and alcohol. Alcohol, Cigarettes and drugs have destroyed millions of otherwise good families. To get drugs mothers have abandoned their children, fathers have left homes and lives have been shattered. Even those who attend church, pray and study regularly find themselves hopeless chained to alcohol and cigarettes that are killing them with a slow death.

We must end our enslavement to gambling. We can't really be free until we learn to trust God fully. Gambling, suggests that we do not trust God but pure "luck." Some began gambling on a notion and after a short period began increasing their stakes, winning some, but often losing increasingly more. Now, they are hopelessly hooked to a point where thousands of dollars each year are spent at Casinos, Bingo Parlors, and slot machines. It's an enslavement that destroys marriages, crumbles families, and squanders meager financial resources.

We must end our enslavement to the party scene. There are millions of young Christians who are hopelessly enslaved to party scenes that are filled with explicit music, sexually provocative dancing, and unchristian like behavior. Because they have been raised in God fearing homes, many know they should not walk that path, but they have become enslaved and can't seem to break free.

The Apostle Paul shared a similar predicament. He said when he wanted to do right, he ended up doing wrong. He knew he was doing wrong but could not help himself. That's when he knew that he was caught in the grips of sin.

If this is to be the year of jubilee, then we must end our slavery! We must break the chains that tie us to things we want to avoid.

Paul asked, who can save me? Who can free me? He found his answer in the power of God to brake his chains.

Get back to God

Finally, brothers and sisters, if this is to be our year of jubilee then we should get back to God in a serious way.

Israelites who lost their land and freedom were separated from their Godly purpose. At jubilee they had the opportunity to get back to what God intended for them.

There are many who have strayed away from what God has in mind for them.

There are many who have begun a different course in life that has taken them away from the church and the development of their spiritual lives.

They don't seem to have time for Godly things anymore but they have plenty of time for business pursuits, politics, clubs, fraternities, sororities, athletics, money making opportunities and socializing. None of these are bad in themselves, but God should never play second fiddle to the things of the world.

If this is to be our year of Jubilee, it will be the year that we return to the bridge that brought us over!

If this is to be our year of Jubilee, it will be the year that we say in the words of Joshua, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Why should every family get back to God? It's because the family that worship and obeys God together, stays together.

Families should get back to God because despite our stubbornness, God has had a hand in our plan.

We need to put God back in our plan.

When God's hand is in the plan..

—The world may kick us down, but God will pick us up!

—The world may strike us out, but God will give us home runs!

—The world may think we are losers, but God will make us winners!

—The world may think we are weak, but God will make us strong!

We need to get back to God in the New Year because:

When God's hand is in the plan the impossible becomes possible!

When God's hand is in the plan, the improbable becomes probable!

When God's hand is in the plan, the unthinkable becomes thinkable!

We need to get back to God because even when we were too stubborn to come to him, he came to us. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

This year we will get back to God because he has blessed us, raised us and saved us!

We need to get back to God because he "was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquity."

We need to get back to God because one day when I was lost, he died upon a cross!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

He has come to set the captives free!

He has come to settle our debts!

He has come to welcome us home!

And The Lord Passed By

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 9, 2005

SCRIPTURE: "And behold, the Lord passed by, and a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the Lord, but the Lord was not in the earthquake: and after the earthquake a fire, but the Lord was not in the fire: and after the fire a still small voice. And it was so. when Elijah heard it, that he wrapped his face in his mantle, and went out, and stood in the entering in of the cave. And behold, there came a voice unto him, and said, What doest thou here, Elijah?"—1 Kings 19:11-13.

Introduction

Have you ever seen the hand of God moving in the events that have affected your life? When we reflect on our life's experiences it is often easy to see God's hand moving in our lives. Unfortunately, there are many who cannot see God's hand as it moves, only in the aftermath. Whether we notice it or not, there is never a year that passes that the Lord does not visit us in one way or the other. How do we receive God when he visits us? Do we try to shut him out? Are we angry? Happy? Afraid? Is he a welcomed guest? We will feel the hand of God move in our lives this year, just as we have in times past. We have one confident resolve: No matter what happens, our lives will ultimately be better because "the Lord passed by."

There are many who welcome visitors; but not all visitors are welcomed. That was the case when Leroy's mother came to visit. Leroy and his mother in law never seemed to get along. She seemed to spot every flaw in his character and her presence made him so uncomfortable. As his wife's birthday approached, the mother in law called to say she would pass by to say happy birthday to her daughter and might stay a few days. When she pulled into the drive way her 5 year old grandson ran out to meet her. "I'm so happy to see you grandma!" He said as he squeezed her around the waist. "Now that you are here now I can get to see the trick daddy promised us." The boy added. Curious the grandmother asked, "Just what trick is that?" Innocently the boy responded, "Well, daddy said if you spend another night in our house he was going to climb the walls and pull out his hair. Now I get to see him do it!"

Would you be comfortable if the Lord dropped in your home for a visit? Would you invite him in or talk to him through the screen door? Would you have to quickly change the television channel, remove certain DVD's off the shelf, hide a few books under the mattress and switch the radio channel? Would his visit make you nervous? Robert Boyd Munger in his book, "My heart Christ's home" raised the question of what would happen if the Lord visited us. He maintains that many of us would not be able to entertain him in the living room, we'd have to change our appetites for the dining room, we'd have to clean our closets, because there is too much trash in our lives for him to visit. Munger's position is that Christ would be an unwelcomed visitor if he passed by many spiritual homes because there is so much house cleaning needed.

Yet, every year the Lord passes by and knocks. Revelation 3:20 says, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." When many hear the Lord knocking the respond in the words of that 50's era Dave Edmun song, "I hear you knocking, But you can't come in, I hear you knocking, Go back where you been." The last person they want to visit is "the Lord." These would count themselves lucky if the Lord would just pass them by and not stop at all."

For some he's not a visitor because he lives with them. These are the ones who can sing boldly the stanzas of the song, "He lives" -especially the part that says, "You ask me how I know he lives, he lives within my heart."

As Christians, we know that the hand of the Lord will pass our way in the months to come. We do not know the day or the hour, but we know his hand will touch our families. We look forward to the visitation of his spirit daily and welcome him not just to pass by, but live with us every day of our lives.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Elijah as the Lord revealed himself to him and questioned him.

Elijah was a great prophet who was used by God to challenge the prophets of Baal. In numerous displays of faith Elijah successfully demonstrated the power of God over Baal. Most notably his great contest on Mt. Carmel in which God answered him with fire. God used him to pronounce his anger at the evil reign of Ahab and Jezebel and held back the rains on the land. He even predicted the untimely death of the queen, for which he was hunted by the King's soldiers.

Elijah hid for a while and was fed and nourished by the providence of God. A raven brought him morsels of food everyday, and despite a drought in the land, the Lord caused a brook to flow near him.

Despite God's benevolence Elijah continued to run away from his mission. He hid in caves and was not seen by those around him. He was a prophet underground.

God sought him out and passed by. Elijah experienced a great wind, a terrible earthquake and fire, but God was not in either of them. A while later, he heard a still, soft voice questioning him, "What doest thou here, Elijah?"

Elijah expected God to be in the obvious. He expected God to be in the fire, wind and earthquake; he had seen God speak with fire before on top of Mt. Carmel. He knew how God responded to Moses on Mt. Sinai as the mountain shook. He knew how the wind from God's nostrils blew back the waters of the Red Sea and Israel crossed over at a calm time. He expected God in the obvious. But none of these were signs of God's presence this time. God came to him in the not so obvious way; in a still small voice.

When the Lord passed by, Elijah heard the voice of God question his inactivity. He could not level a defense for why he was not doing more than simply existing, enjoying God's grace.

Elijah was told to resume the faith because there were 7,000 believers who needed his help and leadership. In a still small voice, God stopped by to tell him that it was time for him to move on.

God's ways are mysterious

There are many today, like Elijah, who look for God in the obvious without realizing that God moves in mysterious ways. When the hand of the Lord comes in our direction we would be mistaken to assume the obvious. Don't expect an announcement from heaven with lights flashing announcing that the hand of God is moving in a circumstance. God's ways are mysterious. They are difficult for us to understand. Often even the strongest Christians have to stay alert to recognize the ways that God approaches us.

You've heard the story of the King who wanted to reward a deserving servant with a great prize which he would deliver himself. A certain woman received notice that she was being considered for the prize. She was notified that the prize would be delivered by the King himself. All day she waited for the king to arrive. Instead of the king, a beggar came in the morning, but she quickly turned him away. Later a cripple man came to her door and a man seeking a drink of water, both of whom she turned away because she wanted to be ready for the King. At the end of the day the king announced that he went in person to deliver the prize to the winner but he was turned down. The woman protested that the King never came. He sent a message that he came to her door three times in the same day: as a beggar, cripple and a man seeking water, but was turned down all three times. The woman was disappointed that she lost her prize because she did not recognize the king when he came to visit.

In a similar sense, the Lord has thrust his hands in our affairs in ways that we least expect. He has brought us good news in ways we did not expect. He has visited with us in the most peculiar ways. Looking back, we can now see the many ways that God has protected us, directed us and provided for us. Sometimes he appeared in the strangest of ways. Abraham had three visitors who came to visit him one day. They were enroute to the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. Although they had no wings or halos on their heads, Abraham instantly recognized them as angels of the Lord and responded accordingly.

The event we complain about attending may be the one event that God uses to visit his blessing upon you. The person you least want to talk with may the person chosen to bring you great news of blessings from heaven.

It is true, God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform.

Be sure God is in it

Every circumstance you encounter is not of God. Every situation that confronts you may not be created or directed by the hand of God. We need to be sure God is in it. Elijah felt the wind blow, the earth shake and the fire rage, but God was not in any of them. Similarly, we must learn what is from God and what is not. 1 John 4:1 says we should, "believe not every spirit, but try the spirit whether they are of God:"

In the days ahead, believers should prayerfully seek to learn whether situations we encounter are really from God. The general idea is to put each situation to the three fold test. Is the situation consistent with what we know to be the nature of God. If we are presented with an opportunity to succeed but it would require us to get involved in an illegal activity, would God be in that venture. Is it the nature of God to encourage believers to do wrong? Secondly, is the situation consistent with the word of God? If there is a sickness, loss or even a death, is that consistent with the word of God. Since good people, like Job, and others have often been tested in the bible, then it is possible that our loss could be a part of the permissive will of God. Will this situation serve to strengthen me? Since the word teaches I can do all things which strengthen me through Christ; any situation which will ultimately strengthen me and make me stronger may be from God.

Just because a situation offers you an opportunity does not mean God is in it. If you kiss another man's wife and the earth shakes, the winds blow and she lights up your fire, it does not mean God is in it? God would not encourage any woman to be unfaithful to her husband. God ain't in it.

A simple country rule applies, "Before you begin it, make sure God is in it!"

Listen to God, and do what he says!

When God visits our life situation with the full weight of his majesty, there is a purpose. If God is trying to tell us something, we should be wise enough to do what he says. In Elijah's case God was ready for him to move on with his life. It took a little while for Elijah to get the message. The raven stopped bringing him food but he didn't get the message. The brook dried up but he still didn't get the point. When he sat still for a moment he heard the voice of God telling him to move on.

When God visited Mary and Joseph it was to advise them that they would rear the Christ child to manhood.

When God visited Moses at the burning bush it was to send him on mission before Pharaoh.

When God visited Lazarus after he had been dead for four days, it was to raise him from the dead.

There are many today who are just like Elijah. We just haven't received the message, but God is trying to tell us something. When God passes your way, listen to what he has to say. He usually speaks to us in what we call our "first mind." Sometimes we ignore that "first mine" and listen to another voice. Like Elijah, it may be time for us to move on with our lives.

Have you been dating but he or she won't make a commitment? Listen to the voice of God about your situation.

Is your job unrewarding, dead-ended, offering few opportunities for advancement? Listen to the voice of God!

Are you spiritually drained because of a lack of time for worship, prayer and bible study? Listen to the voice of God.

Are you active but seem to constantly go around in circles, getting no place? Listen to the voice of God!

God will answer you in one of two ways. He will tell you like he told Moses, "Stand still and see the salvation of the Lord" or like he told Elijah, it's time to get back to what you were doing in the first place!

When we do what God tells us, there is no limit to what we can accomplish in the days ahead.

When the Lord Passes by

Finally, Brothers and sisters we must consider what happens when the Lord passes our way.

Elijah experience the full power of God when the Lord passed by. He felt the ground shake, the wind blow and heard a still soft voice.

The text simplified all of these wonderful acts by saying, "And The Lord passed by."

I'm glad to know that "The Lord passed by" does not mean that the Lord passed him up. Because if the Lord passed him up, there would have been no still small voice calling. If the Lord passed him up there would have been no earthquake, strong wind or raging fire.

The woman who suffered from an issue of blood was troubled with her malady for 12 years, but when the Lord passed by, she said, "If I can just touch the hem of his garment I will be whole."

We know how that woman felt because we too have wrestled with sicknesses that have troubled us day and night, but when the Lord passed by, things began to turn around.

The woman at the well was ostracized by the community, and scorned for her wicked lifestyle, but when the Lord passed by, he lifted her soul till she ran everywhere saying, "Come see a man who told me all I've ever done."

We know how she must have felt because we too have wrestled with our own sins, unforgiven by both family and friends, but when the Lord passed by he forgave our sins and planted our feet on solid ground.

We know what happens when the Lord passes by; it means that blessings are on the way.

When the Lord passes by, we become more determined to:

—Bear our burdens, no matter how heavy they may become!

—Face our enemies, no matter how fierce they fight against us!

—Resist temptations, no matter how enticing they may be!

—Conquer our fears no matter how overwhelming they may become!

—Defeat our doubts no matter how stubborn they may be.

I see what the Lord has done for you, but this year I want the Lord to pass my way too!

When the storms of life begin to rage, I want the Lord to pass my way!

When rivers of doubt cloud my faith, I want the reassuring presence of God to pass my way!

No wonder the song writer declared, "Pass me not oh gentle savior. Here my humble cry. While on others thou are calling, do not pass me by!"

While on others you are showering blessings, do not pass me by!

While on others you are granting healings for sick bodies, do not pass me by!

While on others you are mending broken hearts, do not pass me by!

While on others you are raising bowed down heads, do not pass me by!

Savior! Savior!

Who died out on Calvary!

Savior, who was buried in a borrowed tomb!

Savior, who arose early Sunday morning!

Savior, hear my humble cry! While on others thou are calling, do not pass me by!

Pass my way but do not pass me up!

And God Answered With a Dream..

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 15, 2006

SCRIPTURE: And it was so, when Gideon heard the telling of the dream, and the interpretation thereof, that he worshipped, and returned into the host of Israel, and said, Arise; for the LORD hath delivered into your hand the host of Midian. Judges 7:15

Introduction

What is your dream? No one who succeeds in life, does so without a dream. Our dreams motivate us, inspire us and direct us toward a goal. At first the dreams sound silly to those who hear them. The little illiterate slave boy who dreamed of reading and writing grew up to be Booker T. Washington, because of God's providence and a dream. The little projects kid, who dreamed of being a soldier, grew up to be General Colin Powell and U.S. Secretary of State. The little poor girl, who wanted to be a writer, grew up to be Lorraine Hansberry one of the greatest writers of her time.

Our success is propelled by our dreams. A man without a dream for himself and his family lives a life without a purpose and direction. A woman with no dream becomes lost in the sea of life and ends up shipwrecked.

Dreams are precious. Some may laugh at our dreams, but they are serious to us, because Godly dreams guide our lives.

Because we dream big, we push ourselves to study and learn as much as we can.

Because we dream big, we are motivated to keep climbing higher to reach our goal.

When we talk to God and ask him for success, how do you think he answers? Often he answers us by giving us a dream. It seems like a small gift, but Godly dreams are so powerful that they live for generations.

Today, the nation celebrates the birth of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., a man who inspired an entire nation to dream about a day when Justice would run down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream.

Long after his life the dream he inspired continues to direct, new generations to help ctrate a nation that recognizes the fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man.

As Christians, we thank God for hearing our prayers during our enslavement, disenfranchisement and most difficult years. We also thank him for men like Martin Luther King, Jr. When we heard his words, we realized that God had answered us with a dream.

Exposition

This text focuses on the way God saved a whole race of people with the power of a dream.

At the time of this text the main enemy of Israel was the Midianites. They were a warlike people who constantly troubled Israel raiding their crops and fields. The size of the Midianite armies continued to grow because of alliances with the Amalekites and other Arabic nations. They seemed invincible to Israel because they swept upon them riding camels and quickly disappeared. Thus, by sheer size and stealth, the Midianites seemed unstoppable to the Israelites.

God responded to the prayers of Israel by selecting one man he would use to bring down the barriers of tyranny. The man he selected was from one of the poorer tribes, without a claim to notoriety or leadership. The words of this man would inspire Israel with new hope. However, the man was not to be a man of war, even though he prepared a small army. He would lead his people to victory in a non-violent way that would scatter his enemies and make them realize the power of God.

The man he chose was Gideon. The weapon that God would use to motivate Israel to stand up in faith was not a sword, shield or a chariot but a simple dream.

Once selected, Gideon wanted assurances that God was truly calling him to lead Israel against the Midianites. He repeatedly asked for signs from God and received them. Gideon, thinking that he would need a large army to fight the 50,000 soldiers of the Midianites assembled an army of 30,000 only to learn that it was too large. He asked those who really were not up to the fight to go home. A final test reduced his number from 30,000 to 300.

With such a small number, Gideon did not know how he was to be successful against 50,000 well trained soldiers. God directed him to slip into the camp of the Midianites and would see the salvation of the Lord. Once in the camp at night, he overheard two Midianite soldiers talking about a dream one of them had in the night.

The soldier spoke of dreaming that he saw a barley biscuit rolling down the mountainside and cutting down the tent in the Midianite headquarters. His friend put an interpretation on the dream. He said the barley cake was the despised leader of the Jews Gideon coming down out of the mountains destroying the Midianites. That dream struck fear in the hearts of the Midianites but it also inspired Gideon to hear it. It was another sign from God.

As word of the biscuit dream spread from tent to tent among the Midianites, Gideon returned to his 300 men and told them about the dream. The message of the dream inspired the Israelites. Quickly, Gideon put a plan together that called for each of the 300 men to carry a covered torch in one hand a trumpet in the other. The 300 men positioned themselves on the top of the mountain, in three groups of 100, in the Black of night. At Gideon's command the soldiers broke the covers over their torches, blew their trumpets shouted, "The Sword of the Lord and of Gideon"

The Midianites saw Israel and remembered the dream. All 50,000 of them panicked and ran in fear..

Gideon won the battle without a battle.

It was won by the power of God, who answered their prayer with a dream.

Will God Be With Us?

More than anything else, Gideon wanted to know that God was with him in his struggle. That's why he constantly looked for signs. He needed to be sure that God would be in the fight on Israel's side.

The leaders of the Civil Rights movement, for the most part were Baptist preachers. Men such as Andrew Young, Ralph Abernathy, Jesse Jackson and Martin Luther King, were symbolic of the men who have led our people over the years, all of whom, like Gideon wanted assurances not that the Lord was on their side, but that they were on the Lord's side.

In his Book, "Letter from a Birmingham Jail" Martin Luther King constantly wrote about his desire to do the will of God. Only through responding to hate with the power of love could the movement be assured that it was on the Lord's side.

The temptation was great to arm Negroes across the nation with machine guns, shotguns and any other weapons available because the Midianites we faced were well armed, large in number and had great force. Men such as Malcolm X ridiculed Martin Luther King for urging Negroes to love their enemies. Bobby Seale and Huey Newton of the Black Panthers urged young Blacks to arm themselves for their own defense and H. Ralph Brown cried across the nation, "Burn baby Burn."

To insure that we remained on the Lord's side, Dr. King urged our people not to return hate for hate and blow for blow but to endure the pain of beatings, powerful fire hoses, and other abuses without allowing our enemies to pull us to the level of hate. We were not able to defend ourselves against the Midianites of racism and hatred with might, that's why we had to remain on God's side.

The people asked how can we hope to tear down the walls of segregation and racism without the weapons of war? The people asked, and God answered them with a dream.

Dreams strikes fear in our oppressors

The Midianites were afraid. They had heard of Gideon, the crazy leader that only had 300 men against 50,000; but they were not afraid of him until they heard about the dream.

The greatest fear that slave masters had was that their slaves would one day dream of being free. Tough and demanding rules were put into place to keep the slave from dreaming. He could not be taught to read because reading would lead to dreaming, dreaming would lead to revolt. Leaders who encouraged Slaves to be free were dangerous. Even the sermons of preachers were monitored to insure that the slaves only dreamed about being free in heaven and not on earth.

Just as Joseph wasn't a threat to his brothers until he started dreaming, Blacks in America were not perceived as real threats until we collectively started dreaming.

We dreamed of being school teachers and ministers. We dreamed of voting and running for office. We dreamed of being on boards of banks and major corporations; of owning basketball and football teams instead of playing for them. When we began to dream we became dangerous.

As long as we wanted to be a doctor's assistant the system was happy with us. We became dangerous when we started dreaming about being doctors.

We are no threat as long as we want to ride the back of the truck and collect garbage. We become dangerous if we start dreaming about forming corporations to become minority contractors who can own the garbage company.

We are not dangerous if we are constantly making withdrawals from the bank, we are dangerous when we start dreaming about owning our own banks and depositing our withdrawals in something that belongs to us.

We are not dangerous if all we want to do is play on a football team, we become dangerous when we start dreaming of owning the football team.

That was why Martin Luther King was considered dangerous. As a man, he was not a problem, but his dream threatened the status quo. His words were giving hope to an entire race. His words were giving inspiration to an entire race of barley biscuit people who might roll down the hill of time and destroy life as it was known.

In reaction to the dream token representation was given to us. Set asides were created for us and equal opportunity commissions were set up to help us.

But in the middle of America's midnight, an entire race of barley biscuits came running to the voter registration booths. Instead of voting for whites to represent us, we started running ourselves. We started our own businesses, television networks, and we even bought a basketball team.

We asked God to give us a chance to be free, and he answered us with a dream.

Dreams inspire us

When Gideon told the men of Israel about the dream, they were inspired. They knew that the dream meant God would ultimately give them the victory.

Proverbs 29:18 says, "Where there is no vision the people perish" We are inspired by leaders who have vision, who can help us see what we have not seen and thirst to achieve it.

When Gideon reported the dream he heard and the Midianites own interpretation of the dream, they could visualize their success. They could see themselves victorious

It's important for believers to visualize their success. Dreams help us see what is not. The late Bobby Kennedy is credited with the phrase, "Some men see things that are and ask, Why? I dream of things that never were and ask, why not?"

Martin Luther King, like Kennedy, dreamed of things that never were and asked, why not?

Why not have a nation that is not focused on war but on peace?

Why not create a society in which every person has an opportunity to achieve regardless of race creed and color?

Why not have an inclusive society that embraces people of all walks of life as children of an almighty God?

Dr. King asked, can the sons of former slave and the sons of former slave-owners sit down together at the table of brotherhood? He asked, and God answered him with a dream.

Dr. King asked, can the state of Mississippi, a desert state sweltering in the heat of oppression, be turned into an oasis of freedom and Justice? He asked, and God answered him with a dream.

Dr. King asked, will there ever be a day when men will be judged by the content of their character and not by the color of the skin? He asked, and God answered him with a dream.

He asked, can freedom ring from the snow capped Rockies of Colorado; can it ring from the Mighty Mountains of New York or the heightening Alleghenies of Pennsylvania; can freedom ring from Stone Mountain of Georgia and Lookout Mountain of Tennessee? He asked, and God answered him with a dream.

How God Answered

Finally, Brothers and Sisters, we must consider that God often answers us in ways that we do not expect.

Who would have expected a baby in a basket to be the answer to Israel's prayer of deliverance from slavery?

Who would have thought that a wild man preaching in the desert could cause a whole nation to tremble in expectation of the coming of the savior?

Who would have thought that a child born in a manger and wrapped in swaddling clothes would be the answer to our plea for salvation?

When Israel cried for deliverance from Midian, he answered them with a dream.

But when our souls cried out for deliverance from sin, he answered us with the unexpected, he sent us his son.

"For God so loved the world that he sent his owly begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

He was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities.

He was criticized and ostracized for our sins.

When the stain of sin cried out for a sacrifice, God answered and sent us Jesus!

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, the bright and morning star!

Jesus, the fairest of ten thousands!

He died on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his answer.

Today as we reflect on the life, of the martyrs of the struggle, we still ask, "Will we ever be free?"

And he answers us with a dream!

Mine, Mine, Mine

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 2006

SCRIPTURE: But now thus saith the LORD that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel, Fear not: for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine. Isaiah 43:1

Introduction

Have you ever wanted something all to yourself? My house. My car. My clothes. If someone takes something from us we usually fight for it or over it. We are God's people. We are his and his alone. The right of ownership is important to America. We take pride in what we own, more so than things that we rent or borrow. When it's ours we relish the possession of the item, no matter what it is.

It bothers us when we have to part with anything that we own. That was the case with the Texas rancher who owned a prize calf. It expected great profits from the calf and was very upset when the calf was hit by a motorist while it was crossing the road. The driver went to the owner of the calf and explained what had happened. He then asked what the animal was worth. "Oh, about $200 today," said the rancher. "But in six years it would have been worth $900. So $900 is what I'm out." The motorist sat down and wrote out a check and handed it to the farmer. "Here," he said, "is the check for $900. It's postdated six years from now." -Somehow a postdated check couldn't replace the cow.

Nothing takes the place of the special relationship that believers have with the savior. We are his special people because he formed us, gave us life and pointed us in the right direction.

As Christians, we rejoice in knowing that God considers us his own and will always be with us through every difficulty

Exposition

This text shows God claiming ownership of the people of Israel.

In Genesis 12:1 God made a promise to Abraham. That promise involved giving great sums of land to Abraham's descendants, as well as giving them a special role in the salvation of mankind. They became known as the "Chosen People." Here, God reaffirms that special relationship. It does not imply that all other nations and peoples are not loved dearly by God, but only that Israel was God's in a special way. Beginning at verse two examples of the effect God's commitment to stand by, protect and empower Israel are given. The first example shows God's commitment to the children of Israel. . Isaiah reminds Israel of God's commitment to be with them regardless of their circumstance. Nationally, Isaiah looked toward rough times that were ahead. War and captivity loomed but God wanted the people to know that even though rough times were coming he would still be with them.

God's words to Israel were clear: "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee..when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned." These words emphasize a clear commitment by our Lord to be with his people in their time of need.

Likewise, Jesus giving a final charge to his disciples before he returned to heaven charged them to go, preach and teach what they had seen and heard in all parts of the world. Regardless of the difficulties that were to come he reminded them that he would be with them always, even unto the end of the earth.

Advantages of being God's Own

There are definite advantages to being one of God's own. Like Israel, we often forget what God has done in the past. Because Israel was his own, God repeatedly blessed them in a variety of ways that included:

PROVIDING FINANCIAL NEEDS: There are many who face financial needs today who have lost faith. They can't remember a time when God helped them once and have lost sight of his ability to help them again. 1 Kings 17:13-16 shows us how God helped the poor widow of Zarapheth. She was the woman that used all of her resources to the point of only have two sticks, a cruz of oil and a cup of meal. Elijah the prophet told her to act on the command of God, and everyday her barrel had enough meal for food and her oil never ran out. This is an instance where God responded to a household needed of a family once. But has he ever repeated that? 2 Kings 4:1-7 shows another woman whose sons were about to be taken in lieu of a debt she could not pay. The Prophet Elisha came to her with a word from the Lord. It seemed silly at the time, but he told her get as many empty pots as she could and place them in her house. Every pot she could get was filled with oil. She was told to sell the oil, pay her debt and praise God. God did it once and he did it again!

Because we are God's own, there is no financial need in our families that God cannot meet! Whether it is putting food on the table or resolving giant sized problems like mortgages and massive debt. God has done it once he can do it again!

MAKING A WAY OUT OF NO WAY: Sometimes it appears that there is no way for us to escape a dilemma. When we look to the left and to the right there seems to be no way over, under or around a situation. However, because we belong to God, we should think like David, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth."

We have seen God part impossible waters before. In Exodus 14:21 God caused Moses to stretch out his hand and he parted the water for Israel to cross on dry land.

It was a remarkable feat. But did he ever repeat that miracle? Joshua 3:15-16 records how Joshua and the children of Israel were about to enter into the Promised Land but a swollen River Jordan blocked their way. Yet God ordered them to proceed forward. As the feet of the priests touched the water, they miraculously rolled back and the entire host of Israel crossed on dry land. Why was this miracle performed? Because Israel belonged to God.

GOD HEALS HIS OWN: There are times when we consider illnesses and sicknesses, we forget about God's healing power and the special fact that he looks after his own. Matthew 4:24 says "And his fame went throughout all Syria: and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatic, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them" Over and over again. Blind men, lame men and women, leprosy, even deathly sicknesses were all healed repeatedly. People tore the roofs off houses and pushed their way through crowds just to touch the hem of garment, because they knew he could do it.

Today as we face a multitude of health related problems we must remember that there is no sickness that is outside of the power of God. God has defied the known science of the day and continues to do it today. Are you stricken with an illness, God has healed you and members of your family before, he can do it again! Are you worried over a dark prognosis? God has will continue to heal his own.

CONFIDENCE COMES FROM BEING GOD'S OWN: There is a certain element of confidence that is associated with being God's own. It's a quite assurance that because he is there, everything will be alright. There was once a church mother who was always confident that the Lord would make a way. The young women of the church asked her one day, "Tell why you are so confident." The old lady said, "When I was girl, my mother taught me to ride my bicycle and she ran beside me. I could feel her hand holding me as I paddled along. One day, I rode a long distance. When I stopped I realized that mama wasn't beside me. I asked mama, how was it that she was not there but I still felt her hand. She told me that she gave out of breath but she knew the Lord was beside me. I didn't see his presence, but I felt his hand. Ever since that day, I've learned that if God's hand is in the plan, everything is gon' be all right!"

That's the same confidence that every believer has. It is a quite faith that because we belong to God he will guide events and circumstances to our advantage. Why? Because we are his own.

WE HAVE PEACE: Sometimes we worry instead of trusting God. We worry because we forget that we are God's own. Worry robs us of our peace. Isaiah 9:6 describes Christ as the "Prince of Peace" because he and he alone could help to restore the peace between mankind and God. 1 Timothy 2:5 says it clearly, "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus." Paul tried to explain it to the Romans in Romans 5:1 when he said, "There being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

We have peace in Christ when we remember that he is in control of all events. Nothing can harm us or destroy us outside of his permissive will. The fact that we are his own and he protects his own help us reach "Shiloh" the sense of being at peace with God, comes there is an amazing change in our attitudes about life.

When Shiloh comes, that which once disturbed us, doesn't seem to bother us anymore!

When Shiloh comes, that which once seemed important is no longer germane to our quality of life.

When Shiloh comes, storms may rise and winds may blow, but our anchor holds!

When Shiloh comes, we can say triumphantly, despite what happens in the world, "It is well with my soul."

We can achieve this peace because we are his own.

All Mine

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that while we are on this earth nothing belongs to us, but there is a reward that will be all "mine."

Jesus' life on earth was representative of what every believer should expect. He had nothing on this earth, not even a place to lay his head.

When Jesus said that he had no place to lay his head he was not implying that he had nothing in heaven.

We know his father still loved him because on the day of his Baptism the spirit of God came as a dove and said, "This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased."

When Jesus said he had no place to lay his head, he was not a man without a home, but he was a man away from home:

-Not a man without a possession, but a man separated from it.

-Not a man journeying to find a home, but a man on his way home.

-Not looking for a home to buy, but a man looking for friends with whom to share his home.

Jesus was on a pilgrimage of love, preaching the coming kingdom, but this earth was not his home. Nothing here was important, but back in glory, sitting on the right hand of God, all the cattle on a thousand hillside belonged to him.

Likewise, every child of God is a pilgrim on his way to Canaan land. The place where you lay your head is only your dwelling but it's not your home!

Down here, Jesus didn't have much, but he wasn't worried about it, because I heard him say, "In my father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you"

-Come and go with me to my father's house!

-Come home with me and I'll show you a place:

-Where hearse wheels never roll..and it's mine!

-Where tears never fall..and it's mine!

-Where tempers never rise..and it's mine!

-Where doubts never appear..and it's mine!

No wonder the song writer declared, "I've got a new home over in glory and its mine, mine, mine."

Come and go with me and I'll show you a Savior who cares about you!

He cares about you whether:
-You drive a Lincoln or a Lemon
-Its GED, PH.D or no degree
-Your clothes of French sale or rummage sale!
-You pay with VISA or ask with Please “Suh”
He cared so much that John 3:16 says that God gave his only begotten Son.
He cared so much that he died on Calvary!
He cared so much that he arose on Sunday morning!
Come and go with me and I’ll show you a place that is mine! Mine! Mine!

Get Right or Live Trying

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 24, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "Therefore I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord GOD. Repent, and turn yourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin. Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel? For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord GOD: wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye. Ezekiel 18:30-32

Introduction

What are you willing to die for? Martin Luther King once said that if a man has not found something that he is willing to die for, he's not fit to live. Is there anything you are willing to die for at this moment? Would you risk your life or future for an idea? For love? For money? For country? Over the years there have been many people who have proven that they are willing to risk their lives for ideas, goals and people they value greater than life itself.

Many youth chuckle at the idea of dying for anything, but there are millions of young people around the world who prove themselves willing to risk death regularly. To achieve a thrill there are many who will race cars at high speeds around hairpin turns in the middle of the night. To have "fun" some will risk death by attending nightclubs known to be places where death lurks around every corner. Thousands of youth risk their lives and freedom for the thrill they derive using or selling drugs.

Youth are not alone for there are many adults who also risk their lives and futures on ideas, goals and activities. Some of them are laudable others are generally lost causes, not worthy of the risk.

In the Movie "Get Rich or Die Trying" a young man, who depicts the rapper 50 cent, has a troubled life in the ghetto. The youth is reared in the meanest of ghettos in a dysfunctional family. His life is surrounded by drugs, violence and dysfunction. His role models in the community were drug dealers, who he said "are like God to me." As he formulated his philosophy of life the young man concluded that the major goal in life is to earn respect. From his vantage point respect is not earned from being good and holding down a minimum wage job. He believed that respect is earned from having money being rich. The only route to achieving riches that he saw available to him was either being a gangsta or a rapper. The movie details his quest to get rich first as a gangsta, criminal and dealer who ultimately ended up in prison. The second was to become a rapper. After earning riches as an explicit gangsta rapper, he no longer sells drugs to people on the street, but gangsta ideas and lifestyles to another generation who now look up to him and say, "you are like God to me."

The tragedy of the movie is that it suggests to a generation of young people that the only routes to success are selling drugs or being rappers. Acquiring riches is seen as the one goal in life worth dying for. His goal of getting rich or die trying, by any means necessary, unfortunately has been adopted by many in the present generation.

Our Lord presents us with a different perspective on life. He points us to success, but success that does not seek riches as a goal but rather as a byproduct of obedience to God and dedication to the advancement of the kingdom of God. Matthew 6:33 summarizes this promise, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things that shall be added unto you." The goal of every Christian youth is just the opposite of what 50cent says. Instead of "Get Rich or Die Trying" our goal is to "Get right with God or spend every day of our lives trying." We have been promised that if we live honestly, trust God and do that which is right in life that we will build the kingdom of God. A byproduct of our commitment "all of these things" promised in the book of Matthew.

As Christians, we have found it true that God will reward those who put him first in their lives. We live every day of our lives trying our best live justly and to walk humbly before God.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Ezekiel as he urges Israel to walk right before God and witness the return of his glory.

The presence of the Glory of the Lord has been an important aspect of the life of Israel. To have his presence was their goal in life. However, the book of Ezekiel details how Israel moved away from God seeking prosperity in worldly ways. In response the glory of the Lord gradually began to leave them.

Ezekiel opens with this heavenly glory in the vision (Ezekiel 1). Ezekiel's visions tell of the departing of this glory (Ezekiel 9:3). First it left the cherubim for the threshold of God's house (Ezekiel 10:4), then to the east gate (Ezekiel 10:18-19), and finally clear away from the Temple and city to the Mount of Olives (Ezekiel 11:22-23). Thus gradually the glory of the Lord left the Temple and Holy City. Then captivity came.

This was Ezekiel's message to the nation. Their captivity was a result of their sin, and before they could hope for return to their land they must return to their Lord. This message reaches its climax in the impassioned words of Ezekiel 18:30-32.

The text makes it clear that the godly life leads to the blessed life. The nation had tried living for carnal reasons, but the word of God projected that living for God meant happiness. It was a happiness worth achieving as a life goal.

We should live trying to...

PLEASE GOD: The rapper 50cents tells youth they should get rich or die trying. However, rather than to die trying to get rich, the word of God teaches that it is better to live trying to please God. Pleasing God should be our highest priority.

Solomon evaluated his life and came to the conclusion that although he had attained riches, wealth, power and position, the only true happiness he really knew came from knowing God. In Ecclesiastes 12:13 he said, "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter. Fear God and keep his commandments for this is the whole duty of man."

Like Solomon, we often find ourselves doing things for the sake of getting money. That pursuit conflicts with what we know to be right as Christians. Unconsciously, many are living by a 50cent Gospel that is not worth a dime. We say are not influenced by the power of the dollar but we are. We often fool others, but the man in the mirror keeps telling us that we are on a wrong course. Our conscience speaks with a loud voice, but the Benjamins have a tendency to speak louder. The pursuit of money and riches can push us to do many things that we normally consider against our better judgment if we are not careful.

To please God we must constantly listen for his voice as he tells us what to do. Consider the woman who prided herself in always trying to do what God wanted done. Obedience to God was so important that whenever God spoke to her she carried out his commands to the letter. Some devilish teens in her neighborhood tried to take advantage of her obedient spirit.

At night they gathered outside her window and whispered in a voice that tried to imitate an angelic tone, "If you bake it, they will come!-Pound!" The next morning the woman arose and baked a pound cake and called in the neighborhood boys and offered them generous slices. Buoyed by their success, the boys whispered to her again, "If you bake it, they will come, Lemon!" Just as she did before she baked a lemon cake and offered them giant slices.

On the third night the boys whispered, "If you bake it, they will come, Chocolate." She heard the voice, but immediately afterwards she heard the giggling boys outside her window. She arose and baked a cake but mixed several boxes of Ex-Lax with the chocolate icing. She called the boys in and gave them generous slices. As they were eating, she said, "I heard a voice that said, 'if you bake it they will come.' But then I heard other voices, outside my window."

As the boys finished their cake they had this sudden urge to find a bathroom. She said, "The voices I heard told me to tell you, if you eat it, you will run!"

Sometimes the voices that we hear do not tell us to please God!

Solomon came to the conclusion that life was not all about riches but it had a lot to do with preparing himself to stand before the judgment bar of God with a clear conscience.

GIVE OUR BEST:50cent saw only two options life: dealing drugs or rapping about a drug related life. Youth should broaden their horizons to see that God provides many more options for success and happiness other the dealing drugs or being a gangsta rapper. When we speak of rappers, we are not so naive as to condemn a genre, for there are many rappers who have clean, wholesome, even godly messages. However, gangsta rap has a tendency to glorify the lowest level of our life while those who pimp that image become millionaires.

Rather than die trying to get rich, we should live trying to give life our best, reach for the best and reject all of the rest.

Rather than die trying to get rich, why not live trying to reach a goal in life?

Rather than die trying to get rich, why not live trying using the talents and gifts God has given us to the best of ability and to his glory?

He has promised us if we glorify him in our life work, he will add all of the other things. They will come.

A day will come when we will answer to God whether we took the short cut in life to attain riches and fame or whether we took the long way around and tried to live our lives by his word and protected by his grace.

We should do so while considering that everything we do will one day be brought before the judgment seat of God. In 2 Corinthians 5:10, Paul says, ""For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that each one may receive the things done in the body, according to what he has done, whether good or bad."

MERIT GOD'S FAVOR: The fallacy of the 50 cent philosophy of life is that it can't buy us a nickel worth of God's favor. It is grace that saves us from sin, but it is God's favor that blesses us beyond what we deserve.

It is better to live trying to gain God's favor than it is to die trying to get rich!

To have a full, happy life we need all of God's favor, most of which cannot be attained by riches.

With riches we can acquire things, but we can't buy what really matters.

We can't buy love, that's a sign of God's favor.

We can't buy joy, that's another sign of God's favor.

We can't buy health or healing. We can pay doctors and purchase medical insurance with our riches, but health and healing are a part of God's favor.

We can't buy peace of mind only security systems. Peace of mind is a result of God's favor.

We can't achieve anything in life outside of the will of God. Whatever we have is the result of his favor. We gain his favor by turning our backs on the 50cent ideas of this world and seeking the kingdom of God.

We must reject that evil voice that says get rich or die trying and replace it with a voice that says, "Get right or live trying!" We give our best to do God's will he favors us.

If the purpose of our business, financial investments, education or profession is to do a good work to build the kingdom of God, your venture will earn God's favor. or my profession without God's blessings. It means that kingdom building has becomes your highest priority.

When kingdom building is number 1 in our lives, God rewards our efforts with his favor, which is more than a 50cent philosophy any day.

The dreams of youth can happen if..

Finally brothers and sisters there is a word of hope for those who choose to live their lives, trying to do his will.

Ezekiel told Israel that the glory of the Lord would return when they started to live right again. Likewise, those today who have lost the glory of the Lord while pursuing goals less than godly in purpose can restore the Glory of the Lord in their lives, return to the godly path.

When the glory of the Lord returns we will be able to walk on paths we've never dreamed.

Youth are encouraged to remember that the Lord offers them more than a 50 cent mentality.

You can be more than a rapper who sings about drugs and the hard life!

You can be more than a young hoochie mama who pops her coochie in hard core videos!

You can be more than a gangsta, player or pimp!

If we live trying to do God's will the glory of the Lord will return.

When the glory of the Lord comes..

Believers will be able to walk in faith.

Through faith we can achieve the unachievable.

Through faith we can accomplish the impossible.

Through faith we can reach the unreachable.

When we trust in the Lord we don't worry about trying to get 50 cent, and a pocket full of Benjamins.

When we trust in the Lord, we know the Lord will make a way!

When we trust in the Lord we can:

—Think the unthinkable; Reach for the unreachable!

-Believe he unbelievable; Hope for the imaginable

-Live for the incredible; Achieve the improbable!

Those who trust in God know that all things are possible!

Maybe that's why the song writer wrote: I will trust in the Lord, I will trust in the Lord until I die!"

I don't know about you but I've decided to trust in the Lord!

Rather than "Get rich or die trying" I've decided to trust in the Lord until I die!

Rather than get rich or die trying, I've decided to put my trust in the man who decided to die to save me.

His name is Jesus

He died on an old rugged cross!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

I don't want to get rich or die trying, I want to get right and live my life trying to please God!

If I Could Be Like Mother

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 2006

SCRIPTURE: "But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren!" Matthew 12:49-50; "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." Psalm 17:15

Introduction

What if we had all of the strength of our mothers and none of their flaws; wouldn't that be great? As children we look at our mothers in awe. They appear larger than life to us; able to do the impossible and reach the unreachable. When we cut a finger, our mothers had that magic kiss that could make the hurt go away. When we were frustrated, mothers knew the right words to help us through our frustration. She always appeared so strong, but yet so vulnerable at the same time. She always appeared wise but seemed to always depend on a higher power than herself. If we had just a fraction of her strength, we could be like her and draw from the same spiritual wells that seem to feed her daily.

While there are many children that emulate their mother's strength, wisdom, and inner peace, they do not really know the woman they call mother. What do you know about your mother? Do you really know her? They are familiar with her but we don't really know the woman we call mother.

Motherhood is not always a matter of biology but it is a matter of relationships. There are many who have children and establish the biology but are not successful in establishing relationships with a single child that they bring into the world.

A mother who is able to bring a child into the world and maintain a strong, loving relationship with that child is more than a biological mother; she is a mother of strength.

If that mother has one child and maintains that relationship she is a good mother, without a doubt. What if that mother is able to maintain that relationship not with one, but with three, six, eight or ten children? Such a woman would have to be a woman of great strength.

When we see mothers such as these we want to emulate their finer qualities. We want to be like them in many ways. Girls try to copy everything they love about her. Boys have a hard time finding a way, because they often look for wives who have most of the strengths of their mothers.

As Christians, we give God thanks for our mothers. We celebrate their strength and love. We celebrate the lives of our mothers and cherish her memories because of what she meant to us. Even in death we celebrate mother because, while we want to be like mother, we realize that mother spent most of her life trying to be like Jesus. She never seemed to be satisfied with anything she did and kept trying to do better. She wanted his perfection.

Even as we mourn today, we are happy because, she has found even greater strength in the presence of the Lord. She is stronger now because she has finally reached the perfection she strived for all of her life. In her absence we now strive to be like her and live to say the Lord face to face.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he establishes the familial relationship between all saved individuals in the kingdom of God.

Jesus often spoke to large crowds of people who listened intently to his words. Often his words were challenging and difficult for the leaders to accept. Some thought he was a mad man. When his Mother and his brothers heard that he may be drawing undo attention, perhaps their fear for his life compelled them speak with him. When they approached, his response, which at first seems a put down, serves to give us a lesson in relationships in the kingdom of God.

On one occasion, while Jesus was speaking to the crowds, his mother and brothers were standing outside, wanting to speak to him. Jesus asks the question, "Who is my mother, and who are my brothers?"

In answering Christ established our relationship to each other. We are interdependent of each other. Jesus' answer was clear; his brother, sister or mother in the kingdom of God would be those who share in the pursuit of God's will.

His probing question challenged everyone present to think about their mothers, asking quietly, "Who is she and what is the source of her great strength?"

David, in Psalm 17:15 seem to summarize the quest of most believers. We desire the strength, peace and love that seem to come from the believing life. We see those qualities first in our mothers. David said his greatest desire in life was to behold the face of God in righteousness. Then, he said, he would be satisfied, because then he would be like the beauty of God. He said when he awakens after this life, he felt assured that he would awaken with the strength and "agape" love of God. He wanted to emulate the strength he first saw in his mother, but would only find when he awakens with the likeness of God.

What We Want to Be

In many ways our mothers represent the highest standards of what we want to be. We are often frustrated because achieving her level of strength seems so challenging that we think being "like" her is impossible

We want to emulate many of the strengths she has demonstrated before our eyes.

WE WANT HER STRENGTH: Every son or daughter wants to emulate the strength of a good mother. They have heard the family accounts of her struggle to stand on her own two feet. They have seen her sacrifice, scrape and "make-do" to provide for her family; rising after being knocked down; recovering from wounded spirits, while stubbornly announcing, "I'm still here!"

Some mothers have reared families alone. That takes more strength than those who have the help of a good husband. These mothers are husbands and fathers, bread winners and bread bakers at the same time. Mother is the pillar of strength in the eyes of her children. That is not to say that they have never seen her frustrated, hurt or depressed. They have seen her wounded. Sometimes they have seen her cry. They know she is often hurt, disappointed and frustrated, but still she rises each day to love them and provide for them, often at her own risk. Those are the marks of strength and character that every surviving child wants.

We want her strength. We want her ability to stand with her children, even if she has to stand alone. We want her strength to remain active in the life of her family until her dying day.

We want that spirit within her that seems to say, "For God I'll live and for God our die!"

WE WANT HER WISDOM: Those who have many sisters and brothers know that mother is often called upon to demonstrate the wisdom of Solomon as she solves disputes settles arguments and brings peace into the home. We have watched our mothers demonstrate wisdom beyond her years. It was a wisdom we knew she derived from a source greater than herself.

We want that wisdom. As we watch our mothers however, we know that wisdom did not come through formal education. We know this because there are many people who have college degrees but do not act wisely with their lives. On the other hand there are many who have very little formal training beyond the necessary but have demonstrated great wisdom.

Wisdom has been defined is "knowing when to say yes and when to say no, when to hold on and when to let go." Those who have had great mothers in their lives have seen this wisdom demonstrated. These mothers seem to instinctively choose the right directions, make the right choices and decisions.

As children we watched our mothers and admired her "wisdom" and grew to respect her wisdom and accepted her answer when we asked "why" and she said, "Because I said so!" We knew somewhere along the way, mother would prove to be right.

WE WANT HER CONFIDENCE: Mothers inspire confidence in their children; they give them a sense of security. They push, encourage, promote and coach them in a variety of areas. Children who have a good mother backing them leave home believing that there is at least one person in the world who really believes in them; their mothers. Jacob didn't' think much of his abilities, but his mother did. In fact, she supported him so much she went overboard trying to create opportunities for him. Elizabeth kept telling John the Baptist that he was destined to do a great work for the Lord. Those words from mother's lips ring in millions of ears today, "You can make it! You can be somebody!" inspire confidence. They push children to achieve, excel and succeed. Everyone needs someone who believes in them; for many that someone has been their mother.

We want to be able to inspire confidence in our children the way the way mother inspired us.

We want to be confident that no matter how the winds of life blow, God is in control.

We want mother's unwavering confidence that despite the storms of life, God is always in control.

We want to be like her because she is the woman who inspired confidence in us, even when we did not believe in ourselves.

Her Hands were in God's hand

Finally, brothers and sisters, we want to be like our mothers because, their hands were in God's hands.

Hannah told the Lord that she would put her child in God's hands if she were blessed to give birth. No sooner than the boy Samuel was old enough, his mother brought him to the place of worship and put him in God's hands.

In God's hands, her son became spiritual leader of the nation!

Jesus made it clear that in the Kingdom of Heaven believers may have many mothers, those who are doing the will of God.

Who is our mother? She was the woman who saw to it that we came to church and saw to it that we acted correctly once we got there!

Who is our mother? She is the woman who taught us to say our prayers and to sing, "Yes, Jesus Love me."

Who is our mother? She is the one who is concerned about who we are in the world and who we are before God.

Who is our mother? She is the one who insures that her children have:

-Food to eat here, but she is also concerned that her child be fed the Word of God, for she has heard the scripture say "Man shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

-Clothes on their backs, but she is also concerned that they wear the breastplate of righteousness and that their feet are shod with the Gospel of the preparation of peace, that they wear the helmet of Salvation and carry the shield of faith.

-A place to call home, but she also worries about whether they will have a home in the kingdom of heaven.

-Birth and delivery in this world, but she also is concerned that they are born again into the kingdom of God.

Who is our mother? She is the one that will teach her children to trust in the Lord.

Somebody here can remember a time when the family was in a tough spot and mother mumbled, "We'll just have to put our trust in the Lord."

If I could be like my mother I would learn that if I trust in the Lord, I will:

-Overcome strong temptations

-bear heavy burdens

-withstand mighty persecutions

If I could be like my mother, I'd always remember that no matter how tough times become, "The Lord will make a way!"

If I could be like my mother, I'd always remember that I have to serve the Lord until my dying day!

If I could be like my mother, I'd always remember that the Lord has promised never to leave me alone!

If I could be like my mother, I'd always know that even in my senior years, God can give me strength!

If I could be like my mother, I'd always remember how to call on the name of Jesus!

Jesus, Who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, Who arose after three days and nights!

If I could be like my mother, one day when this life is over, I'll fly away!

If I could be like my mother, one day when I'm through struggling and toiling on this earth, I'll mount up on wings like eagles!

If I could be like my mother, one day I'll go to sleep on this earth and wake up leaning on the everlasting arms.

Ordinary People for An Extra Ordinary Mission

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 2006

SCRIPTURE: "After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place, whither he himself would come. Therefore said he unto them, The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest. Luke 10:1-2; Notwithstanding in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven." Luke 10:20

Introduction

Have you ever felt insignificant? There are many people who feel that their contribution to the church is small and insignificant. Their names are never listed, their deeds are rarely reported, their gifts are too small to mention and their part is so small that it is not worthy of note. They don't feel special or even essential. They feel uncomfortably "ordinary."

Those who feel insignificant and unworthy are not alone, especially when it comes to service in the Kingdom of God. The prophet Jeremiah felt insignificant when God called him to be a prophet at a young age. Isaiah felt unclean and unworthy to stand as an ambassador for God. They felt there were others who were much more significant than themselves. Yet, despite their reservations, God chose these "ordinary" people to achieve an extra ordinary work. Ordinary people like Moses, who couldn't talk before people; ordinary people like Isaac, who was an honest man, a good man, but boasted nothing special about himself; ordinary people like the twelve disciples, none of them rich, or famous, or studied - just twelve common men with uncommon faith.

John the Baptist was as ordinary as you can get. Living in the wilderness, surviving on locust and wild honey, he heralded the coming of Christ. He was an ordinary person who led and extraordinary life.

A little boy who came to hear Christ speak brought two fishes and five loaves of bread that Christ used to feed 5,000. He was just a boy. His part was small but God used this ordinary boy and his ordinary possession in an extraordinary way.

There are many people who are willing to play first fiddle in the church, but what about second fiddle. What about committee member instead of chairperson? What about the person who carries out details instead of the person who creates a big idea. How far could a local congregation or an association of churches reach if it were not for the legions of "ordinary" members from small churches and large churches, with and without formal education, with and without financial resources, contacts and "pull?" How much could any effort achieve without "ordinary" people?

As Christians, we know that each of us is precious in the sight of the Lord. We are all important and necessary to the kingdom building process. That commission was given to every believer, even those who consider themselves insignificant and unworthy. God wants to use an army of ordinary believers to do an extra-ordinary work.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he gives instructions to 70 nameless disciples to precede him and announce his coming as he moved toward Jerusalem.

Jesus selected 12 of his disciples to serve as apostles. To these 12 he conferred special gifts that would allow them to perform signs and wonders as they moved about the world preaching the Gospel. The 12, were identified in scripture by name. They formed an important inner circle that helped administer the kingdom program after the death and ascension of the savior. These 12 also had a symbolic significance, especially since Israel is noted for its 12 tribes.

Unlike the 12 apostles who were the inner circle of the Kingdom, the 70 disciples appointed by Christ were nameless but essential. They were important but ordinary. Just as the 12 had a symbolic significance, so did the number 70.

When Moses selected elders to help him, he selected six men from each of the 12 tribes. Historical writings have explained that Moses placed seventy two lots in an urn. Seventy of the lots had the word "Elder" written upon them, two were left blank. The seventy men who drew the lots with the word "Elder" became Moses' assistants. Those with blanks were sent home. The number Seventy continued among the Jews. We can trace it in the 70 translators of the Bible into Greek, and in the seventy members of the Sanhedrin, or supreme court. Thus, when Christ chose 70 he kept the Old Testament tradition of choosing 70 leaders to carry out a great delegated task.

The task of the 70 was to go before Christ into the various towns and communities on the road to Jerusalem and announce his coming. The mission was important, yet their names would never be called.

The mission of the 70 was evangelistic. It was also introductory. As Jesus moved toward Jerusalem he would stop by the places that they would prepare. Their work, unseen and unreported by history, helped bring men to Christ in important ways. They were ordinary people who had an extraordinary mission that was performed to the glory and praise of God even though they were never recognized for their work by men.

At verse 20 the 70 returned to report their success. They had succeeded in introducing the savior despite the attempts of Satan to interrupt them. The opponents that they described as demons could not oppose them. The power of God's anointing was upon them. Jesus noted that while they celebrated their success in carrying out the mission, they should rejoice that their deeds have been noticed in heaven and their names written down in heaven.

Ordinary People

The great significance of Jesus' selection of the 70 is that they were ordinary. That is important for believers today because, while there is a need for laborers in the harvest, those selected need not all be apostolic. They don't need to be special. They can and must be ordinary people.

When the church selects deacons to minister to the spiritual needs of the congregation, often it is the ordinary person who does the best job. The ordinary man recognizes the importance of the task rather than his own self importance. The ordinary deacon serves the church, supports his pastor, and does whatever is necessary to help build the kingdom. The self centered deacon is selective about his areas of service and often refuses some tasks that he thinks are beneath him.

The ordinary deaconess and mother ministers to the women of the congregation out of love and concern. If she is ordinary, she serves in humility and promotes the kingdom to the best of her ability. While there are legions of ordinary deaconesses in the church, there are also a few who are self centered. They refuse to dress appropriately if the attire does not fit their tastes. They often refuse other areas of service they consider not worthy of their status. Yet, Christ needs ordinary deaconesses to perform an extra ordinary task.

The ordinary layman may be called upon to work in a variety of areas of men's work in the church. These areas may include working with young men and boys, church maintenance or other areas of men's ministry. The ordinary man does not catch a boat like Jonah and run from responsibility, but says in the words of Isaiah, "Here am I Lord, send me." There are some men who think of themselves as too important for ordinary tasks. But it's thousands of ordinary tasks once performed that make the church's work succeed.

An Extraordinary Mission

While Jesus may have selected 70 ordinary men, the mission upon which they were sent was anything but ordinary. In fact, it was extra-ordinary. The 70 were sent to 35 cities to announce the coming of the Kingdom. It explains why crowds were often awaiting Jesus when he arrived in certain localities. This happened because the advance teams of ordinary men had accomplished their missions. The same is true today. The church needs ordinary people, but the mission is by no means ordinary. It is extra-ordinary.

Unlike a corporation, whose mission is to build a customer base regardless of the spiritual state of its customers, the church's primary mission is to save the lost, then nurture saved souls once they are saved. That's not an ordinary mission. If the mission was simply to fill the pews with "customers" it would be a matter of waging a marketing campaign that consisted of a free worship, with food coupled with great entertainment. The pews of the church would be filled and each church could say, "Mission accomplished." However, we have an extra-ordinary mission. We must go beyond corporate marketing campaigns; we must build the kingdom of God, which requires us go to beyond filling the pews; it requires us to spiritual feed and sustain those in the pews.

That's not an ordinary mission. It is extra-ordinary.

Beyond that the church needs to reach out. There are many today who are involved in various forms of outreach for a variety of reasons. Outreach may include providing food for the hungry, assistance to battered families, housing for the homeless, assistance to wayward youth, or promotion of benevolent causes. Outreach is essential to kingdom building.

We must reach out and touch the wounded and the lost of the world in the name of Jesus.

Yet, even our outreach must come from the heart. It must be pure in its intent, not a mere photo opportunity designed to promote other goals and causes. When we help others it must come from the heart. It must be done out of love. That's what 1 Corinthians 13:3 means when it says, "And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned and have not love it profiteth me nothing."

To save the lost, nurture the saved, and keep reaching out in love is not an ordinary mission, it is an extra-ordinary mission.

An Extraordinary reward

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that while God wants ordinary people to carry out an extraordinary mission, he also plans an extra-ordinary reward for those who accomplish their mission.

When saints complete their mission God has a reward for them, but is not an ordinary reward. It is an extra-ordinary reward.

It is not a trophy because trophies corrode and fall apart.

It is not a gold watch because watches can't measure time in a place where there is no time.

It is not a plaque because plaques are reminders of past accomplishment; but they have no significance in a place where there is no past but only a future.

John, in the Revelation, God promised great rewards to the saints that overcome. It would not be an ordinary reward, but it would be extra-ordinary.

In Revelation 21:7 all of the ordinary saints who complete their extra-ordinary mission will be told, "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

This should be encouraging news for the ordinary saint; to know that our work for him will not go unrewarded.

It should be encouraging to us to hear the word of God declare that the ordinary saint who worked to build the kingdom will receive an extra ordinary reward.

It should be encouraging to know that those who perform a thousand ordinary tasks in extra ordinary ways will receive an extra ordinary blessing from the savior.

We the ordinary, must continue to lift Jesus up in extraordinary ways!

We the ordinary, must work until our day is done; until the setting of our sun!

We the ordinary, must labor in hope and faith that God will provide an extraordinary increase!

We the ordinary, must keep our eyes on the extra-ordinary reward!

It will be a great day when ordinary people walk down the golden streets of an extraordinary place called "The New Jerusalem!"

It will be a great day when ordinary ushers, church clerks, janitors and choir members, step across the threshold of extraordinary mansions, in the kingdom of heaven!

When we get to this extra-ordinary place, it will be filled with ordinary saints who have spent their lives doing extra-ordinary work!

I don't know about you but I want to be in that extra ordinary place where every day will be Sunday; where it's always "howdy" and never "goodbye!"

I don't know about you, but I want to see Jesus!

Until that day, we the ordinary members of the church must continue to tell the story.

We must continue to tell about God and his goodness!

We must continue to tell the world about Jesus, who was born into an ordinary family, lived and ordinary life among ordinary people!

We must continue to tell the world how he died out on Calvary but after three days and three nights, something extraordinary happened! He arose from the dead and is alive today!

Today, the Lord is providing extraordinary blessings to ordinary believers who are carrying out an extraordinary mission, in an extraordinary way!

Dealing With Punting Situations

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 5, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him as he said unto you." Mark 16:7

Introduction

Have you ever made it through an entire year and did everything as planned? Were there times when you fumbled? Were there times when you met the unexpected? If you are like most people you often meet life situations that force you to alter or change your plans. Those are the times when you have to drop back and rethink and start again.

In that sense, life is like a football game. No football team is able to play an entire game and make every first down without a few turnovers. Sooner or later, they will find it necessary to drop back 10 and punt. Even Super bowl championship teams find themselves in punting situations because the offensive team did not pick up a first down or two.

The way it works in football is that each team gets four tries to make 10 yards of progress by either running or passing the ball. The opposing team tries to stop them from making those 10 yards. If the offense fails to get 10 yards it has to give up the ball to the other team. They usually do that by kicking the ball, punting it away.

Punting situations are usually not fatal. They frustrations and set backs but they usually do not mean that the game is over, depending on the time remaining. Generally, punting situations are frustrating because they suggest that the opposition has blocked our attempts at success. But it ain't over until it's over.

We know that is true because we have the lives of many historic personalities that show us that it is important not to give up because we face punting situations. Michael Jordan was cut from his high school basketball team. Einstein didn't talk until he was four, and didn't read until he was 7 years old. Walt Disney was fired from his job at a newspaper because he lacked imagination and had no good ideas. Thomas Edison was a school dropout who failed 25,000 times in the course of his life. Henry Ford went broke five times before he launched the enterprise that made him a wealthy man. Each man reached a punting situation his life, several times; but they refused to give up. They dropped back, regrouped and came back again.

As many watch the Super Bowl and other football contests they will notice that regardless of the greatness of a particular team they will face a punting situation at least once in the game. To do otherwise would mean either that they are a superhuman team or they are playing the worst imaginable team with absolutely no defensive ability. As you watch the game, count the number of punting situations, fumbles and turnovers you see. They occur very often. However, the mark of champions is that they do not throw in the towel the first time they are unable to achieve a goal. What do they do? They go back to the bench, analyze what they did wrong, devise a new strategy and go back into the game, determined to win.

When you see the same the offensive team that had to punt a few minutes earlier back on the field again, it shows that the team members did not consider themselves defeated because they had to punt. They are trying again, but harder this time. The great actress Mary Pickford put it like this: "If you have made mistakes, even serious ones, there is always another chance for you. What we call failure is not the falling down, but the staying down." And she is right.

In many respects, Life is like a football game; because the stakes are high, it's not just a regular game; it's a super contest between good and evil. As individuals we play a position on the Christian team. God is the owner, the Holy Spirit is our manager and Jesus is our coach. Sometimes we are allowed to call our own plays in the game of life, but often the plays are sent in from the bench. They are all written down in a play book called the bible.

Often we try to execute plays but are stopped by an opposing force that has read our offense and stops our progress. When our progress stops, the game is not over. We go to the sidelines and have a little talk with the coach; then get back in the game.

As Christians we are pleased to know that the church is a winning team. No matter how hard the devil tries to frustrate us or bring us to a stand still, we know he will not be victorious. Whenever he stops our progress, we simply drop back ten and punt. After we have a little talk with Jesus, we get back in the game and give life the best that we have.

Exposition

This text focuses on an episode of biblical history in which a disciple had failed miserably and given an advantage to the enemies of the Kingdom of God, but was called back into the ministry despite his error.

It takes place at the site of the empty tomb on the morning of the resurrection.

The women came to anoint the body of Jesus but found the tomb empty. They were greeted by an Angel who told them that Jesus had risen. A message from the Lord was left behind for the disciples about where to meet him. Of all eleven of the disciples, Peter was singled out.

Peter had disgraced himself and did not consider himself worthy to be an apostle. While Jesus was being tried before the high priests, Peter stood outside in the court yard and warmed himself by the fire. Three times while standing there he denied knowing Jesus when asked. On the third denial he swore and cursed and acted outrageous as he tried to convince people that he was not a follower of Christ. When he had completed his denials a rooster crowed for the second time, reminding him of words of Jesus that before the cock crowed two times he would deny him thrice.

Although he was the man who leaped forward to cut off a soldiers ear in the garden, walked on water, and was called "the Rock" by Christ himself, Peter was unsure of himself and no one knew about his feelings. He felt his failure at a time when Christ's life was on the line was unforgivable. He sunk to an all time low and did not consider himself a disciple.

When Peter, the strongest member of Christ's inner circle betrayed the faith, he gave the enemies of the kingdom an advantage. He fumbled the ball. He caused a turnover. He wasn't benched by the coach, he benched himself. He had to regroup. He had to rethink and analyze his actions.

The Angel's message for the disciples "And Peter" was a special call to Peter to get back in the game. Christ is risen! Peter received the news and made a frenzied dash to the tomb. He ran so fast that he was the first disciple to make it to the tomb. He championed the cause of Christ and became the strongest leader of the early Church. He promoted the cause of Christ until his death. He never denied the Lord again even though it meant being crucified upside down on a Roman cross.

Punting Situations

When do we know we have reached a punting situation? When our progress has stopped! When that happens we have to copy the strategies of others:

ANALYZE OUR MISTAKES: When our progress stops, we don't quit the game; we review our actions with an open mind. Our progress may have been halted by a team that is not superior to ours but because they were able to take advantage of our mistakes and weaknesses. When David sinned with Bathsheba; God punished his kingdom. When he analyzed why the kingdom was suffering David cried out to God "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit."

Those who win are those who are able to drop back, analyze and regroup.

Consider the difference between the loser and the winner:

—A winner makes a mistake and says "it's my fault, I'll do better next time." A loser says "It wasn't my fault."

—A winner never stops trying. A Loser never stops giving excuses. (Abraham Lincoln was a failure in business, lost two elections to the state legislature, was defeated for Congress twice, defeated the Senate Twice, had a nervous breakdown and his girl friend died, but he never stop trying until he became president of the United States."

—A winner says "I'm good, but I can be better." A loser says "At least I'm not as bad as other people."

—A winner learns from people who are superior to him. A loser tries to tear down those who better.

—Winners never quit. Quitters never win.

Those who win don't quit the game because they face a punting situation; they drop back, punt and analyze.

DETERMINE A NEW STRATEGY: If you constantly face punting situations, it may be time to get a new game plan. The job of a successful defensive team is to read the plays of the offensive and stop its forward drive. That's the way Satan is in the lives of believers. He constantly watches our actions and looks for an opportunity. If we use the same play every day; it won't be long before he's able to stop our progress.

There are many who look for happiness in life in a variety of ways. Satan, like a roaring lion, walks to and fro trying to find a way to stop our progress. He looks for weaknesses in the offensive.

Perhaps you are trying to progress, but without a strong faith in God. Satan knows your play and exploits your lack of faith by creating doubt.

Perhaps you are trying to build a strong family, but without paying serious attention to bible study and worship. Satan knows that a family that genuinely prays together usually stays together, so he exploits the family's weakness and creates divisions.

If we are caught in a sin and continue in that sin daily, Satan knows your play and reads your offense. He exploits your weakness and stops your progress.

The Philistines were troubled by Samson. He was too strong for them to defeat; so they studied his actions. They discovered that he enjoyed the company of beautiful Philistine women. They devised a defense, using Delilah that stopped Samson's blitz. She cut his hair and brought him down. In blindness, Samson regrouped. He asked God to renew his strength and used another plan. In so doing he destroyed thousands of his enemies and made the play of the day.

Samson changed his play. So did Saul on the Damascus road and the woman at the well. They defeated Satan by changing their plays from trusting in the world, to trusting God. By doing so they devil was not able to force them into many punting situations.

There is an old saying that puts it this way, "If you do what you've always done, you're going to get what you always got." We need to learn from our mistakes and failures, and use them as springboards to change, growth and entirely new ways of being and doing. In other words, with God's help we need to invent and reinvent ourselves time after time after time, successfully confusing Satan.

GET BACK IN THE GAME: Those who have faced punting situations should not beat up on themselves and wallow in self pity. After denying Christ, Peter was tremendously despondent. He was sitting on the bench. Jesus called him back into the game. Chuck Jones, the animator of Bugs Bunny, says, "I don't believe we learn by our triumphs. I think we learn by our mistakes. Goodness knows, it's not that you want to. But it's the stumblings that give us some clue as to what we're really driving for."

Sitting on the bench and wallowing in self pity won't help. Holding our heads in our hands and staring at our failures to the point that we let them overwhelm us can cause a major depression. Our failures will become increasing larger to us. We won't be able to get past them. Nor am I saying that we need to deny the mistakes we've made, even though most of us would like to do that. Neither wallowing in our failures nor denying them does anyone any good.

After a punting situation we need to get back in the game. The call of Christ is: "Get back in the game!" You might count yourself as unworthy but the Lord who made you and knows all about you says, "Get back in the game!" Eventually in the game of football, the offensive team will get the ball back; they'll get another opportunity to play and succeed. They have a second, and a third and a fourth chance, and so do we.

God is like that with us. He gives us another chance. Author Anne Tyler adds another dimension. She says, "I've never quite believed that one chance is all I get." While God is the God of the second chance, he is also the God of the third, fourth and 50th chance. Get back in the game.

Not A Ring But a Crown

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that every player in a Super bowl wants to get a super bowl ring to wear on his finger, but every Saint is trying to get a golden crown.

When a team comes out of a locker room and runs onto the field it has one thing on its mind; winning.

So it is with every believer. Each day we step forward into the super bowl of life, we should do so with a positive attitude that is reflected in Philippians 4:13, I can do anything that strengthens me, through Christ.

Even if we have faced punt situations and have fumbled, with God's help we have a chance to turn a losing situation into a winning situation!

Even though we've had to punt, God gives us another chance to turn:

—defeat into victory!

—Shame into respect!

—Disgrace into honor!

—Fear into Faith!

—Desperation into hope!

—Sorrow into Joy!

—Eternal Death into Eternal Life!

If a team makes it to the Super Bowl, it does not matter whether it wins or loses; the team members get a Super Bowl Ring; it is the symbol of their success.

To get that ring each player is willing to endure pain and punishment as they struggle for inches and yards of turf to make touchdowns.

To get that ring they take hits, fall down and get back up again!

To get that ring they give everything they have with all of their hearts.

But there is a reward for believers that is greater than a Super bowl ring.

It's what Paul told Timothy in 2 Timothy 4:8 "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that

Diary of a Glad Black Woman

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 12, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "For thou, LORD, hast made me glad through thy work: I will triumph in the works of thy hands." Psalm 92:4

Introduction

Have you ever kept a diary? Diaries are journals of our personal thoughts and observations about a variety of subjects. Generally, a diary is our personal musings about life. For many, journals are therapeutic. They help us to vent emotions and express our inner feelings.

Diaries record our thoughts before they have been refined, polished and ready for public consumption. They are extremely personal.

The Diary of Anne Frank detailed the horror of the holocaust and one Jewish woman's experience. Terre Teen Boone's "The Hiding Place" also details in detail one woman's tragic experience. The book, "The Color Purple" tells the story of a Black woman who details her experience with a dominating man who abuses her and separates her from a sister she loves.

Tyler Perry's stage play, "Diary of a mad Black Woman" tells a blow by blow account of woman whose husband left her for another woman, then fell on hard times; giving her the opportunity to either forgive him or heap vengeance upon him. The stage play was a huge success, but the movie won critical acclaim as it astonished Hollywood with its phenomenal success.

Most of the diaries that are studied seemed to be written by women. They seem to detail the frustrations of millions of women who are "waiting to exhale" or trying to "get their groove back." However, writing dairies is not the exclusive domain of women alone. Men also record the thoughts in diaries. Both are ways that the present is recorded or frozen in prose.

A new phenomenon began a few years ago with the advent of the internet. It is called "blogging." Blogs are online journals in which bloggers share their thoughts on a variety of subjects from their private lives to politics. Diaries are often very revealing.

While diaries often tell of our frustrations, they also record our joys and victories. A mother writes to her diary about her feelings just before the birth of a child. A girl describes in detail her preparation for the senior prom. A son tells about his first opportunity to play on the varsity football team.

We also talk about God in our diaries. In fact, many diaries are addressed to God as they attempt communicate their inner feelings.

The diary of a frustrated person may be filled with sad accounts. But what about people who have been blessed? How would their diaries read? What would be their daily log?

Dear God: Today, I realized how much you have blessed me and I smiled as a drove to work.

Dear God: Yesterday, you answered my prayer. I'm happy about it.

Dear God: Today, I was able to complete the financial deal I began. Thank you. You made me happy.

Every day, God gives each of us enough experiences to write in our diaries for week.

As Christians, we are thrilled to know that our experience with God has made us glad. Whether we are men or women we can say with the song writer, "I came to Jesus as I was, weary, wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad."

Exposition

This text focuses upon David as he considers how God made him glad.

There are 150 psalms, most of which were written by David. During various periods of his life, David wrote his inner feelings and prayers to God. Under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit he also wrote many of the psalms, which were what we might call spiritual journals that recorded regularly what he felt about God the quality of his relationship with God.

In this text, David he looks at the mercy and goodness of God and decides that it is a good thing to praise God in the morning and at night because of the way he blessed his people.

The goodness of God as it is reflected in the life of David, gives him reason to be glad.

The 92 Psalm reads as if David were writing a diary saying, "Dear God" you have been so wonderful to me that I want to sing your praises with a harp. He wanted to praise God for all of his works in his life.

In the remainder of the psalm he lists a variety of reasons why God has made him both happy and glad.

He said fools can't see the way they have been blessed, but the saved and consecrated know God is the reason for their blessing it makes them glad.

David's journal entry shows that he is glad because God provides for him and is performing a work of grace within him everyday.

What A Glad woman looks like

Most Black men have seen a mad Black woman. We don't need Tyler Perry's movie to let us know what some Black women will do when they get mad. It's dangerous to be around a mad Black woman. Al Green went to sleep one night with a mad Black woman and he woke up with a chest full of hot grease. A mad black woman is dangerous. That's what the cheating husband found out when he tried to go back home. Not only had he cheated on his wife, but he gave his girlfriend all of the money needed to pay the household bills. His wife was mad and he knew it. He begged on hands and knees for forgiveness. He told his friends at work that his wife had forgiven him because she was giving him gifts. She gave him an electric razor, an electric toothbrush, and an electric blanket. Finally he said, 'I know she loves me because she gave me a hair cut, messaged my head with water, and sat me down in a brand new electric chair!"

We know what a mad Black woman can do, but what about a "Glad" black woman?

Have you seen a glad woman? If you look at her closely you'll see what a "glad" woman looks like.

SHE SEES THE BRIGHT SIDE: If you look into her eyes and you'll see the picture of a woman who can see the bright side rather than the dark side of life.

Unfortunately, today there are too many people who are so mad that they can't be glad and they make life miserable for others. They are what we easily describe as the "but" people. Their usual response is "but"

She sang a good song, but!

She did a good job, but!

She played well, but!

The glad woman is content with life and is not threatened to see the good that is said and done by others.

When others see defeat, the glad woman sees the bright side, she sees opportunity.

When others see despair, the glad woman sees the bright side, she sees hope.

When others see the pain of their trials, the glad woman sees the bright side; she sees the ecstasy of victory on the horizon!

The reason for the optimism of the glad woman is underscored by the words of Paul "All things work to the good of them that love the Lord."

SHE SPEAKS WITH JOY AND HAPPINESS: Have you ever seen a glad woman? Listen to her talk and you will hear words of optimism and joy flowing from her lips.

How can she be so positive in a word that discriminates against her because of her race and among some Black men who discriminate against her because of her sex? She's able to demonstrate joy and happiness because she has had an experience with the Lord welcomes the opportunity to tell others about Jesus.

The woman at the well had plenty of reason to be mad. Her life was a failure and she was the talk of the town; considered nothing more than a tramp. But one day she met a man at the well and he told her the secrets of her life. At that moment she was chilled, filled and thrilled. She ran through the streets of the city crying "come see and man."

A glad woman is a woman who has had a relationship with God and doesn't mind talking about it.

A glad woman happily declares, “I was lost but now I’m found, blind but now I see”

A glad woman says it loud and proudly, “The love of God picked me up and turned me around and planted my feet on solid ground.”

Even in the midst of poverty and hard times the glad woman declares, “I sing because I’m happy, I sing because I’m free, for his eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me.”

SHE TRUSTS IN THE LORD: If you look at a glad woman close enough, you’ll find that she trusts in a power great than herself; she trusts in the Lord. That’s why she has been able to stand for so long?

When the Black woman was ridiculed, dehumanized and raped during our enslavement, she continued to trust in the Lord.

When she watched her babies stripped from her breast and sold like another farm animal, she continued to trust in the Lord.

Even though she ached and sang, “Sometimes I feel like a motherless child, a long ways from home,” she continued to trust in the Lord.

It’s that trust that helped her to stand strong in the midst of adversity.

There were some who God mad, but there others who looked beyond the heartaches and tears of that moment. With a smile on their lips the looked over the horizon and began to sing, “I’m so glad that that trouble don’t last always!”

The glad Black woman trusts in the Lord because she has learned that God is:

-peace in every perplexity

-a guide for every journey

-the victory of every battle fought!

-the shelter in the raging of the storm

-the provider for every man’s satisfaction.

No wonder Job declared that despite advancing age, declining health and an ever increasing number of ailments, “Yea though he slay me yet will I trust him.”

Watch Her Testimony

Finally, brothers and sisters, if you want to see a glad black woman you just what her testimony.

A mad black woman is filled with rage and frustration; but a glad black woman is filled with hope and the joy of the Lord and she doesn’t mind letting the world know that “this joy I have, the world didn’t give it and the world can’t take it away.”

The heart of a glad black woman rejoices because it feels the goodness of God in the flower that blooms in June.

The eyes of a glad black woman rejoice because they see the goodness of God every flower the blooms!

The ears of glad black woman rejoice because they hear the love of God in every robin that sings and every church bell that rings!

The spirit of a glad Black woman rejoices because God has given her peace with this life down here.

If you want to see a glad black woman read her spiritual diary!

On Monday, the glad black woman says, Dear God, I thank you for what you going to do for me and my family this week!

On Tuesday, the glad black woman says, Dear God, I want to thank you for protecting me from hell hounds that have tried to break my spirit.

On Wednesday, the glad black woman says, Dear God, "It's been another day's journey, I'm glad about it. You gave me health and strength, and I'm glad about!

On Thursday, the glad black woman says, "I'm glad man didn't make sunshine because today it would have never shined on me. I'm glad I can sing, "Jesus is all the world to me.. whether sunshine or rain, harvest of grain he's my friend."

On Friday, the glad black woman says, Dear God, the Eagle flies on Friday, but I'm going to hold on a little longer because I know that, "They that wait on the Lord shall mount on wings as Eagles. They shall run and not be weary; walk and not faint!"

On Saturday, the glad black woman says, Dear God; today is the last day of the week. It's a time to rest. I'm glad about because I came to Jesus as I was, weary, wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad."

On Sunday, the glad black woman says, Dear God, this is the day that the Lord hath made, I will rejoice and be glad in it!

If you ever see a glad black woman follow her home and you'll see a glad black man, glad sons and daughters and house filled with joy!

If you ever see a glad black woman you'll find a woman who is looking through the trouble all around her; she has fixed her eyes on the man from Galilee!

If you want to see a glad Black woman, white woman, Chinese woman, Hispanic woman Native American woman, then find a woman who knows about the goodness of the Lord!

When you know about the goodness of the Lord you have a story to tell and a testimony to give!

I don't know about you, but I can testify that I'm glad that the Lord woke me up this morning!

I'm glad that he clothed me in my right mind!

I'm glad that he put food on my table!

I'm glad that he saved my soul!

I'm glad that even though he didn't have to do anything for me he did it anyway!

I'm glad that even though he didn't have to bless me he did it anyway!

I'm glad that even though he didn't have to help us he did it anyway!

I'm glad that even though he didn't have to pick me up and turn me around, he did it anyway!

I'm glad that even though he didn't have to die out on Calvary, he did it anyway!

He died, yes he died.. But Early Sunday morning he arose up from the grave with all power in his hands!

Thank You!

Thank You Lord!

I'm glad that you've been so good to me!

No. 9192- Mission

An Extraordinary Mission

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 2006

SCRIPTURE: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." Matthew 28:19-20

Introduction

Have you ever felt that your efforts were insignificant? Often those who serve in church ministry feel that what they do makes little difference in the˜large scheme of things. They feel themselves insignificant because they are just ordinary people doing ordinary service that is too simple and too ordinary to make a difference.˜

This feeling is not unique to church ministry leaders. Teachers feel that way sometimes. They give their best energy and time to prepare a lesson that seemed to go in one ear and come out the other. Parents feel that way too. Those who work in the criminal justice system often see so many cases of misplaced values parading before them that they wonder whether there is an end to the revolving door that seems to have trapped some in an endless spiral and will not turn them loose. Those who help the poor, the elderly or the homeless are equally frustrated. This is when wonder whether they should continue their ordinary, but good work. They wonder, "Should I should keep ringing the bell for the Salvation Army, collecting food for the needy, or working to help the homeless?" Some give up and call it quits.

There are millions of believers today who are frustrated withÿthe ordinary and routine nature of their good works. Jesus experienced the same feeling after he healed ten lepers and watched them walk away. Soon after however, one returned and said thanks, which made it all worthwhile.

What motivates ordinary Christians to continue their work, despite the fact that it is often unnoticed and sometimes not appreciated?

We are motivated by our desire to please God.

We are ordinary people with an extraordinary mission. It is beyond extraordinary; it is a mega-mission.

While we have an extraordinary mission often we do not have the resources necessary to accomplish our mission. All we have is Jesus' promise "And Lo" I'll be with you alway, even unto the end of the world." While it may seem little at first, upon second thought we realize that we have an extraordinary mission with an extraordinary promise to back it up.

Why do we service? Consider the story of the ordinary country cook, well known for his fine recipes and gourmets, who received an invitationÿ from the king to prepare the food for the king and his lords. It was both an honor and a scourge at the same time because whenever an ordinary cook was selected for such an assignment he had to provide the food as well as prepare it, which made it even more difficult.

The cook had only one egg in his pantry, but he was so honored to be selected that he set out on his journey confident that providence would help him. On the way, he met a man who offered to trade him a cow for his egg because he had broken one of his master's dozen and would rather part with his own cow than face his master's wrath over the loss of a single egg. They traded.

Later the cook met a farmer who was holding his favorite cat. The farmer complained that the cat had nothing to drink, all he had was fields of vegetables, none of which the cat would eat. The cook traded the farmer a pail of milk from the cow, which he traded for a wagon of vegetables that he pulled along by hitching it to the cow. On the way he met a butcher and a baker who had walked many miles, they offered to work for him if he would just give them a ride. So the cook gave the butcher a ride in the wagon of vegetables that he traded for a pail of milk from the cow he traded for the egg.

The king saw the arrival of the cook, laden with a cow, a wagon of vegetables and a butcher and he was amazed at the variety the cook brought with him. As the cook prepared to make the king's bread he realized that he had no eggs, but then there was a knock on the kitchen door and lo, there was the lad who traded him the cow delivering the dozen of eggs for the king's pantry. With beefsteaks from the cow, cold milk, bread and an assortment of vegetables, the king rewarded the cook, who gave all the credit to a little faith and a single egg. "I was running low, but I was on a mission for the king, and I knew the Lord would make a way." said the Cook as he smiled and received his honors.

As Christians, we are on a mission for the king, we may have reservations about the fact that we are just ordinary people with ordinary resources,ÿbut we should always remember that the Lord will make a way while we go forward on his promise never to leave us alone.

Exposition

This text is called the "Great Commission." It occurs after the resurrection as Jesus speaks to theÿdisciples giving them their final assignment. They were not well known men at the time. They were ordinary men to whom he was giving an extraordinary mission.

He told them to get the word out about salvation and redemption to the entire world; to baptize believers and then teach them the way of life prescribed for Christians.

While Jesus gave his disciples a mission, he did not give them any special equipment except his words of promise in these closing commands. This commission includes two important words: “Go” and “Lo.” As Jesus gave his disciples the command to go, inclusive of all of the hardships and sacrifices that “go” would entail, he also gave them a “Lo” which was a promise of his perpetual presence with them regardless of their circumstances or peculiar situations.ÿ

In a few short years, this commission resulted in the expansion of the faith to Asia Minor, the Cities of Greece and to nearly the entire known world of their time. It appeared to be an impossible mission, given to penniless disciples who had nothing to move on but faith and the “Logo” of God.

Not an ordinary mission

The church has an extraordinary mission that must be carried out by ordinary people. That mission is toÿspread the good news about the kingdom of God to the entire world. This extraordinary mission has a three fold purpose to: “Preach,” “Reach,” and “Teach” the world about Christ through administration of the Word and through the example of our Christian compassion.

PREACH THE WORD. The Church has a responsibility to provide for the preaching of the Word of God. At home, it is done through providing for ministers to administer the word and declare it to us. However, the responsibility for the preaching of the word goes beyond the home front. It also extends itself to the missionary field in distant places. There are still places in the world, despite all of our modern technology, that have not heard the word of God. There are corners of the earth that have not been exposed to the preaching of the Gospel and therefore have not had the opportunity to join the Christian fellowship. Our mission is to provide for the preaching of the Gospel on foreign shores. Today there are missionaries who are working in Africa, Europe, South America and on every continent of the earth trying to get the message across. The supplies they need, including bibles and materials must be supplied by believers back home. Our mission is to “go” and if we can’t physically “go” the next best thing is to “send -go” and contribute freely to the missionary efforts of our convention.

REACHING THE LOST. The church also has a responsibility to “Reach out” to those who are both lost and hopeless. While our mandate to “Preach” extends both far and wide, our mandate to “reach” begins at home. It begins with the lost members of our family and neighborhood. It begins with the lost in our own community. That mandate suggests that the church must promote Christian Charity at home, or “home mission.” Unlike foreign mission, which primarily supports the preaching of the gospel in foreign lands, home mission combines the gospel message with Christian action on the home front. Home missions includes: Food for the hungry, shelter for the homeless. It includes education, crime prevention, and a show of compassion for children, victims, and the helpless of every race and nationality. In this regard, we follow Christ’s example by first meeting the people at their point of need, responding to that need and then working to save their souls. People are more inclined to listen and respond when the church seems to respond to their peculiar needs.

We need arms of silver, like those of Nebuchadnezzar's statue, representing our ordinary service. There are many today who are involved in various forms ofÿordinary outreachÿfor a variety of reasons. Outreach may include providing food for the hungry, assistance to battered families, housing for the homeless, assistance to wayward youth, or promotion of benevolent causes. Outreach is essential to kingdom building. It may seem ordinary and insignificant but we must reach out and touch the wounded and the lost of the world in the name of Jesus. It becomes an extraordinary work when our outreach comes from the heart.

Missionaries who carry out this charge can sing with real meaning: "If I can help somebody as I pass along then my living is not in vain....If I cheer somebody with a word or song, then my living is not in vain."

TEACHING THEM. Preaching and Reaching the lost are two essential elements of the command to go, but there is also the command to teach them "whatsoever things I have told you." This introduces the third missionary objective of the church, which is Missionary Education. Those who come to the church must be taught what Christ wants them to do and trained so they can reach others themselves. 2 Timothy 2:15 reminds us to, "Study to show thyself approved, a workman that needth not be ashamed." That underscores the importance of Christian Education and Mission Education in the missionary process. Mis-education and a lack of Christian education has prompted many mission groups to turn their efforts into church versions of their social club or sorority, in which the sponsorship of a rapid succession of one day "events" supplants a structured ongoing program of missionary service.

Ordinary service but Extraordinary rewards

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that those who carry out this extraordinary mission build up treasures for themselves in heaven.ÿ

Everyÿordinary, but good deed, done in the name of our Lordÿadds to our treasure in heaven. Matthew 9:41 reminds us that even the man that gives a cup of water to a stranger in the name of Jesus, gets a reward. Those who help the homeless, help the infirmed, visit the sick, feed the hungry, heal the hurts of families, and respond to personal needs and crises, build up treasures in heaven. These are all ordinary deeds that will receive extraordinary rewards.

Those who support kingdom building by liberally giving their time, talents and money also build up treasures in heaven. It often seems small but every ordinary minute that a believer gives will receive an extraordinary reward..

Those who give time, talents and money at a sacrifice get "over time" pay in kingdom dollars. That's why the church at Thyatira was told in Rev. 2:19, "I know thy works, and charity, and service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works; and the last to be more than the first." That's notÿordinary pay, it'sÿovertime pay!

Our ordinary work on earth glorifies God and when our work is complete, God willÿglorify us in a way that only he can do.

In Revelation 3:5, we read, "..He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels"

In Revelation 21:7 all of the saints whose work glorified God will be told "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

This should be encouraging news for every saint, to know that our ordinary work for him will not go unrewarded.

It should be encouraging to us to hear the word of God declare that the mother who glorifies God by loving her children with a passion and concern that follows them beyond their childhood even unto their mature adult life will be rewarded!

Today many are striving to carry out the ordinary mission that Christ has given them. Though their treasuries are meager, there are many who do the best they can to support the work of missionaries, help the poor and needy and to teach the masses.

One truth that every saint who has stepped out on God's word has discovered is that if the Lord gives you a "Go" there is always a "Lo." For every "Go ye therefore" there's is always a "Lo, I'll be with alway."

Lo represents the promises of God:

When storms rise, "Lo" means he'll say peace be still.

When sickness comes, "Lo" means he'll be a doctor in your sickroom.

In the middle of failure, "Lo" means he will give you victory.

In the middle of doubt, "Lo" means he'll give you assurance. No wonder the song writer declared, "Blessed Assurance, Jesus is mine oh what a foretaste of glory divine"

A traveler drove his automobile through the plains and the desert. When he came to the mountains, his passenger wondered how such an old car would make the high mountains. The traveler looked at his passenger and said, "When I travel the plains, I can make alright, but when I make it to the mountains, I put it in low and away I go"

I don't know about you, but I have found out that you can do amazing things when you remember the promises of God and count on lo!

A Widow woman who was down to her last barrel found she could eat on lo!

A woman sick with an issue of blood found she could be healed if she touched lo!

Peter found that as long as he kept his eyes on Christ he could walk on lo!

When your mountains get high, just remember Jesus said, "Lo" I'll be with you!

When your burdens get heavy, just put it on Lo and remember Jesus said, "Come unto me all ye that are burden and heavy laden and I will give you rest!"

We can go forth on his word that was proven out on Calvary!

We canÿgo forth on his promise that was secured by his nail scarred hands!

We can go forth on his power that was proven EarlyÿSunday morning when he arose from the grave!

We, the ordinary can do the extraordinary, if we step out on his word and remember his promise,ÿ"Lo, I'll be with you, always, even until the end of the world!"

Watering Our Roots

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 26, 2006

EPHESIANS:"That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; 17 That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, 18 May be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; 19 And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God." Ephesians 3:16-19

Introduction

Can you name two people who are most responsible for bringing you into a fuller appreciation of your life's goals? Can you name two experiences which worked to give you a sense of direction and purpose? Can you name two groups with which you have associated that have helped you to greater appreciate the length, depth and height of life? Each of the people we have encountered, experiences we have shared and associations we have known represent our roots. They are the essence of what we have been taught; the source of our direction and nurture. The fact that we have such roots is admirable because it sheds light on our history. Our history is important because it explains many of our actions and indicates much of our direction.

The primary role of every mentoring generation is to provide what Julie Yarborough calls "Roots and Wings" to the younger generation. If we define the role of the community, school, family and church as it relates to youth, it would most definitely be to provide "roots and wings" to children.

Roots in the context of society represent those things essential for a child to survive and thrive. They include a general knowledge of the world around them, the intricacies of their culture and that of others, an acquaintance with the past, an appreciation for traditions, and the perfection of a skill or trade.

Roots in the context of religion represent those things essential to thrive spiritually. Spiritual roots include a knowledge and respect for God and his law, including how to pray and worship, an appreciation for religious traditions, and the perfection of a spiritual life that is based on hope and trust in God.

Societal and spiritual roots serve to ground us in the same way that the roots of trees and plants ground them. The root system of a tree performs many vital functions. In winter, it is a store-house for essential food reserves needed by the tree to produce spring foliage. Roots absorb and transport water and minerals from the soil to the rest of the tree. Roots also anchor the portion of the tree above ground. It is the same with us. Our roots sustain us and they keep us anchored in times of storm.

Our role goes beyond just developing roots. We must also help believers realize their capacity to stretch their wings and fly. Every child needs to believe they can achieve. They also need someone to believe in them. The community, church and school must not only develop roots it must help youth believe in themselves; that they can fly!

Remember the words of the song by R. Kelly?

I believe I can fly
I believe I can touch the sky
I think about it every night and day
Spread my wings and fly away

That's what the church must help young people do; believe that with God's help and anointing they can lean on the everlasting arms and fly away.

It is essential therefore that we continue to "water our roots" and "stretch our wings."

The late Howard Thurman said we remember those who helped us when we water our roots. We remember what they did for us, but we also consider the great possibilities that lay before us because of them. When we water our roots we are inspired to stretch our wings.

As Christians, we thank God for rooting us in his word. We also thank him for those who have helped us strengthen our faith and pointed us in the right direction. Because of them, we not only have roots but we also have wings.

Exposition

Paul writes to the Ephesians about his desire that they strengthen themselves in faith through the Word of God. The idea of Christ "Dwelling in our hearts" is introduced in Verse 17. It refers to Christ being at home in our hearts. His presence is referred to as our roots. The word "heart" is from the Greek word Kardia which is used in the bible to refer to the inner life or the life of the soul.

The most important weapon that believers have is Christ (The Word of God) rooted in the soul. Because the word of God is rooted in our soul we are able to combat temptation, sustain our hope and continue look up optimistically. The more we hear, study and practice the Word of God, the greater our faith. Romans 10:17 says, "Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God" suggests that the more we hear the Word the stronger our faith becomes. The stronger our faith, the deeper our roots.

Our Roots

It is important for Christian youth to have roots and wings.

There are two types of roots that every believer needs, cultural roots and spiritual roots.

Our cultural roots refer to our heritage. We need to know what makes us who we are. When we know our culture, we develop a sense of pride and self worth. We see an image of ourselves as people of potential and accomplishment.

When we see Halle Berry, Denzel Washington, Morgan Freeman and Sidney Potier receive Oscars, we see people like ourselves, achieving. We feel the same when we see Lebron James excel in Basketball and Venus and Serena in Tennis and Condeleeza Rice travel the world as the U.S. Secretary of State, we see people like ourselves, accomplishing great things.

Their roots are like our roots. Most of them have the same history that we have. They are from the same soil. Their accomplishments inspire us to achieve.

Our cultural roots reach back to the Motherland; to Africa. They explain our rhythm, our strength. Our roots explain our diet, and social problems and even our diseases.

Our roots explain our music, art, dance and family relationships. Only those who know our roots can understand the way we party and socialize; the way we mourn and cry; and the way we pray.

Inclusive of our cultural heritage is our social history. Not only should we know the names of those among who have achieved, but we should also know the history of our struggle; a struggle that has left its mark on every African-American family. Any study of African-American history should begin with the present family and go back as each family tells the story of its past and present and the slow evolution that has brought the family to where it is today.

Our spiritual roots refer to our faith. The faith of African-Americans defines us in a way that gives meaning to our cultural roots. We pray the way we pray because of what we believe about God. Sometimes we shout and get "happy," our songs are spirituals and gospels that sing from the soul of our experience.

It is safe to say that most African-Americans have some semblance of religion. Some of us may be Baptists and others Church of God in Christ. We may be full gospels, Adventists, Methodists or Catholics, but we most of us have some level of belief in God. Even the man who does not attend church as often as he should doesn't blame God, he quietly admits that God is good all the time.

It is our general belief and hope in God that has sustained us through slavery, depressions, world wars, and segregation and civil rights dispute. It's our belief that one God would make every mountain low and would exalt every valley that has encouraged us to continue.

This generation of adults has the responsibility to see to it that both the cultural and spiritual roots of our children are firmly rooted in our cultural heritage and our belief in God, regardless of their denomination or sect.

Water our Roots.

Just as we pay attention to flowers that grows by watering them frequently, we must also pay close attention to watering our roots. When potted plants die it is generally related to the fact that they did not get enough water. The roots die without water and when the roots die, so does the plant.

So we must refresh, relive and rejuvenate our knowledge and appreciation of our culture, to keep it alive. When we celebrate our heritage, we water our roots.

The same is true with our faith. It too must be watered. Prolonged absence from public worship, bible reading, and spiritual renewal, can result in spiritual roots that are thirsty for the water. Jesus said he gives to everyone who desires the water of life. Those who drink from him will never thirst. Our souls thirst for spiritual renewal, without it our roots dry and rot.

The taller a plant or tree grows the deeper its roots sink. Giant trees need deep roots. Small weeds don't need much of a root at all. Likewise, those who intend to grow tall in life should position themselves so that their roots can both be fed and run deep. David said in Psalm 1 the man who lives according to God's law, "shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." If you intend to grow tall in life then let your roots grow where they can be fed by the waters of life. Tall trees need deep roots. Those roots include deep roots in our culture and in our faith in God.

How much watering do your roots require? It depends on many factors, one of which is your location. A plant in a plastic pot may not need as much water as a plant in a porous pot. The plastic pot holds the water the other lets it escape easy. The same is true of those who live in the Afro-centric neighborhoods, attend afro-centric schools and churches. They are surrounded by our culture and watering experiences constantly. Those who live outside of the traditional Afro centric community must make a concentrated effort to insure that their roots or watered or they will see to exist as they have known themselves. Roots in dry pots require more water.

Roots that are below ground anchor that which is above ground. Often we don't see the roots in small plants, but it's the roots that help the plants to stand in times of storm. You can cut the limbs off of a tree, but if it has living roots, soon twigs will spout where limbs once were. Roots bring new life and they keep trees and plants from blowing with every wind. For young people this is an important truth. Without roots, youth are tempted to roll along through life as tumbleweeds, having much movement but accomplishing little. However, youth who have roots develop slowly but surely into productive contributions to the kingdom of God.

We Can fly

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that because we have roots, can take wings and fly!

Young men and women who are well rooted in the culture and faith, learn very quickly that they can take the wings of eagles and soar high in life.

If the first function of the community, home and church is to give youth a sense of roots, another function would be to show them that they can take wings and fly!

Our roots teach us our heritage, culture and discipline. They should us what has been done and how it was done.

The next logical step is for us to show our young their potential then show them how to fly. Each youth needs to know that they have a responsibility to "try" to spread their wings while they still have parents to help them. Youth can do this by exercising some independent thinking and initiative while parents are still there to support you if you fail. Strive for the honor roll in school. Seek a small job with a neighbor and strive to do it well. Go beyond what is required in your home and do things without being told..."try!" If you try, you take the first step to "fly!"

Those who desire to spread their wings in the future must get all the practice they can while they are in the nest. Try out for the football team!

Tryout for the band, choir or drama club. Display your talent in the talent show, even if the whole school laughs, knowing that if you fall there will be at least one person in the audience to catch you before you hit the ground.

If you want wings, you must draw from your roots. Your roots tell you, that if you want to go high you need the power of the Lord behind you. It takes some a little longer than others before they understand that they must have power.

A 747 was halfway across the Atlantic when the captain got on the loudspeaker: "Attention, passengers. We have lost one of our engines, but we can certainly reach London with the three we have left. Unfortunately, we will arrive an hour late as a result." An hour later the captain made another announcement: "Sorry, but we lost another engine. Still, we can travel on two. I'm afraid we will now arrive two hours late."

Shortly thereafter, the passengers heard the captain's voice again: "Guess what, folks. We just lost our third engine, but please be assured we can fly with only one. We will now arrive in London three hours late." At this point, one passenger became furious. "For Pete's sake," he shouted. "If we lose another engine, we'll be up here all night!"

Some youth mistakenly believe that they can fly without an engine.

The spiritual engine that helps every believer to fly is the power of God.

The more of God's power we have, the faster we get to where we're going. The less we have the longer it takes.

Without his power we don't fly at all! No wonder the song writer would declare, "Without God I can do nothing. Without him, I'd surely fail. Without him my life would be drifting, like a ship without a sail."

The power of God brings us:

—Encouragement in times of despair

—Strength in times of weakness

—Comfort in times of sorrow

—Inspiration in times of difficulty

I don't know about you but I've learned that you can't make without the Lord!

Maybe that's why the song writer declared: "Walk with me Lord, Walk with me, while I'm on this tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus, to walk with me"

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who was buried in a borrowed tomb!

Jesus, who arose Early Sunday morning…

A Life With Roots

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 24, 1979

SCRIPTURE: "And he spake many things unto them in parables, saying, Behold, a sower went forth to sow; 4 And when he sowed, some seeds fell by the way side, and the fowls came and devoured them up: Some fell upon stony places, where they had not much earth: and forthwith they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth: And when the sun was up, they were scorched; and because they had no root, they withered away. And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprung up, and choked them: But other fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, some an hundredfold, some sixtyfold, some thirtyfold. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear." Matthew 13:3-9

Introduction

How rooted is your life? Every life needs to roots to grow and to prosper. Without sufficient roots we cannot expect to survive long in a world that changes constantly. We are rooted well when we know who we are, where we have been, and where we are going.

Despite the importance of a well rooted life, there are many today whose lives have virtually no roots; or if they are rooted have found themselves tangled in a web of societal concerns that strangle them constantly. This is the dilemma of many youth who must try to develop a life with roots in fertile soil that is free of the entanglements that will destroy them.

The quality of our lives, like the root system of trees and plants depends on how well we are rooted. The root system of a tree performs many vital functions. In winter, it is a store-house for essential food reserves needed by the tree to produce spring foliage. Roots absorb and transport water and minerals from the soil to the rest of the tree. Roots also anchor the portion of the tree above ground.

It is the same way with a believer's life. Our spiritual and cultural roots become a storehouse of the essentials we need to survive difficult times. Through our roots we absorb what is needed to sustain our lives and we feed upon what we are able to glean.

We are also anchored by our roots. They keep us from being blown away by every wind. The taller the tree the deeper the roots. They keep us on the ground.

As Christians, we are happy to be rooted in the Lord. His word has been sown in our hearts. It is nurtured in the fertile ground of our faith. We have lives that are rooted in faith in God; that faith sustains us each and every day.

Exposition

This text focuses on a parable given by Jesus in which he explained how the Gospel message is received by many.

The sower, which is Christ himself, is shown spreading seeds, which is the word of God. Some of the seeds fall on the roadway, they do not take root and germinate. They are eaten by the birds.

Some of the seeds fell on stony ground. Here, there is enough dirt to cause them to spring up quickly, but not enough for them to take root. They spring up quickly and seem to flourish for a while. However, because they had not roots, they soon withered away.

Some were sown among thorns. They were able to grow but because they grew among thorns, they could not flourish because the roots of the thorns entangled them and strangled them as they grew together.

The final group was sown on good fertile ground. This batch of seeds multiplied itself tremendously as much as 100 times.

The types of ground represented the receivers of the word. Some are hearers only and let it pass. Others are interested but do not study or deepen their knowledge and the shallowness of their faith will not stand in the heat of the day. Still others are so tangled in the affairs of the world that the word of God is choked in their lives.

Jesus said this parable to illustrate the importance of individual roots in the faith rather than simply hearing the word with the ear. Such roots come because of a love of God and serious study of the word.

Rooted in Knowledge of the Word

Today, each believer should strive to develop a life that is well rooted. Similar to the way trees and plants are rooted, we should strive to develop life styles that reflect the fact that we are rooted.

First we should be rooted in knowledge. The bible places considerable emphasis upon being rooted in the word of God. 2 Timothy 2:15 says, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

Those who study develop roots in spiritual knowledge that will sustain them against the heat of criticism and persecution.

We should learn our denominational creed. We should learn what the bible teaches about Christ, his life, death, burial and resurrection. We should have a full knowledge of God's plan of salvation.

Rooted in Knowledge of Ourselves

We should also have a working knowledge of our own identity. We must truly know who we are before we win others.

We must know our culture and the history of our race. We must know the journey that we have traveled and those who have helped us along the way.

In addition, we must also know how God worked to help us along that journey.

Booker T. Washington once said that we cannot judge any man by where he is at the moment but by where he has come from to get to the present moment. Thus, we need to know our journey to fully appreciate what God has done for us in the past.

Those who have a knowledge of themselves, that is: Who we are, where we've been, and how we arrived at the present moment; have a clearer focus upon the world around them. The knowledge they attain serves to ground them and give them roots.

This knowledge sustains them against even their worst critics.

Rooted in Faith Based Conviction

When we have roots in biblical knowledge and the ways of God we begin to deepen our faith and our convictions.

We are not born with convictions. They are viewpoints about life that are shape by the information we have accumulated through study and experience. Those who study the word of the God and hear the word regularly, build up their faith and make their convictions certain.

When we have been deprived of the essentials of life and see them miraculously appear, we then know that God will make a way out of no way.

When we have experienced sickness and experienced the healing power of the Lord, we know that he is a doctor in our sickroom.

When we have been lost and all alone and then felt his reassuring presence, then we know that he is a friend that sticks closer than a brother.

Experiences such as these build and strengthen our convictions.

Such roots also extend themselves to our involvement in our community. We serve and give of ourselves out of a sense of conviction. God is a good and compassionate God. Because that is our belief we help the poor, feed the hungry and show compassion in times of need.

Convictions even prompt us to take stands against injustice. Martin Luther King once said that a man who has not found something for which he is willing to die, is not fit to live. That is conviction.

We serve other and stand up for justice out of a sense of conviction that comes from having a life rooted in the Word of God.

It Takes Time For Roots to Grow

Roots do not develop overnight. It takes time to learn the intricacies of our faith and culture.

A true faith cannot be copied by watching someone else and imitating what they do.

We cannot sing a song that someone else sings and sing it with the same passion until we have experienced a few things.

We cannot give a testimony about our lives until we have had a test. Why?

Because there is no testimony without a test.

There are many who are not developing roots but they want to appear to be men and women of faith. They often fool us. We don't find out that they are not all that we thought until difficult times come.

Even in our "blackness" there are many who talk a Black talk, until it comes time to be "black" in their actions. They also fool us. We don't find out that they are not really "black" until we watch their inability to respond because of a lack of roots.

To develop roots we must share the experience from our soul.

To develop a faith we can't simply make a profession with our mouths, we must walk with the king.

Perhaps that's what the song writer had in mind when he wrote, "And he walks with me and he talks with me and he tells me I am his own. And the joy we share, as we tarry there, none other has ever known."

Such a close life is what Ephesians 3:17 calls being grounded and rooted in the Word of God.

When our lives are rooted, God is always close to us. He's never far away.

In closing, I'm reminded of the soldier who went into battle with great confidence. The men in his squad were inspired by his great faith that God would protect until his time came. In one battle the soldier was felled by a sniper's bullet. The men of his squad rushed to his side and pulled him behind the lines. They thought he was dead. As they pulled him through the mud, his eyes opened and a smile came on his face.

He was wounded, but a bible that he kept next to his heart had absorbed the bullet.

When one of his friends opened the bible they found the bullet lodged on the verse that said, " But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed."

I don't know about you, but I'm glad that he was wounded for me!

I'm' glad that he died for me out on Calvary!

I'm glad that after three days and nights that he arose from the dead!

I'm glad to be rooted in his word and grounded in my faith!

On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!

Finishing Well

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 7, 2006

SCRIPTURE: When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost. John 19:30

Introduction

Have you ever started something that you did not finish? We have an uneasy feeling about starting any effort that we cannot finish. Yet, there are millions of people in the world who start well, but they cannot finish at all.

We see this phenomenon often in life. A person begins a project, but somewhere in the middle of that project he loses interest and drops the project. Students in school drop out and never finish. Some begin businesses but never finish. It is frustrating.

It is equally frustrating in the church. Many begin to serve in a ministry of the church, do well, and then burn out along the way. They start but they can't finish.

That's why we are especially pleased with those who have the ability to both start an effort and complete it too.

In the Christian life, how one finishes, is more important than how one begins.

The importance of the Christian life is to finish well.

Finishing well is the right way for a Christian to close the final chapter of life's book. It testifies to the reality of our faith. It leaves for those who remain a legacy of inspiring memories.

People are deeply impressed when they see a godly believer finish life with calmness, dignity, and grace, in pain, but surrounded by people who cared for them. From the day they began as a Christian they stayed the course and finished life as a Christ. They finished life well.

As Christians, we follow Christ's example. He came to this world, served his purpose, completed his course and finished well, giving God the glory and the praise.

Exposition

This text focuses On one of the seven last sayings of Christ on the cross.

The three words "It is finished" were short but they testified to the completion of a mission that began in heaven and was completed on Calvary.

What was exactly finished?

All of the counsels of the Father concerning his sufferings were now fulfilled.

It is finished; all the types and prophecies of the Old Testament, which pointed at the sufferings of the Messiah, were accomplished.

It is finished; the ceremonial law is abolished; the substance is now come, and all the shadows are no longer necessary.

It is finished; an end is made of transgression by bringing in an everlasting righteousness.

His sufferings were now finished, both those of his soul, and those of his body.

When Christ bowed his head on the cross and spoke those three words, he signaled that he had completed his purpose. With only love in his heart and a peace in his soul he finished well.

How to Finish Well

To finish the Christian life well, we must first recognize the nature of our race.

Unlike a secular race, the crown of victory is not given to the Christian who lives life the fastest. Neither is the crown given to the person who is the strongest. The Christian race is given to the person who finishes well.

Believers are not in a race for heaven. We are not required to have more faith than someone else to be saved. We are not required to have someone else's praying ability or spiritual strength. We do not have to compete with each other to get to heaven.

We run a different kind of race. Our race is a race to finish and finish well.

How we finish can only be guaranteed by the choices of today. We need to live every day as if it were our last—because it could be.

Secondly, it does not matter whether you have stumbled in the Christian race, as long as you get up and finish the race. There are many believers who have made mistakes early in life but have picked themselves up and turned themselves around.

Oh, how we wish that we could run our race without ever making mistakes, stumbling or making mistakes.

Oh, how we wish that we could erase the bad judgments we encountered the wrong turns that we made.

Fortunately, the Christian life does not hold our past against us. What is important is that we get up and continue to the finish.

There are times when we are frustrated and want to give up, but we continue to the finish.

There are times when we are sad and the tears flow from our eyes, but we continue to the finish.

There are times when we are so angry at life itself that we want to throw up our hands, but we continue to the finish.

The race is not given to the swift or to the strong, but unto the believer that can endure to the end.

Hold On to the key

Finally, bothers and sisters we must understand that God has a reward for those who finish well.

That is the significance of what Christ did for us on Calvary. He finished well so that he could reward believers as they finished their life courses.

Paul told Timothy in 2 Timothy 4:7-8 "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: 8 Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

The crown that he referred to is reserved for those who finish well.

These are they who can sing, "I came to Jesus as I was, weary, wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad!"

I came to him low, but he has lifted me higher!

I came to him in sadness but he gave me gladness!

These are they who say, even though I became aged and house bound he lifted up my bowed down head!

These are they who say, "Even though parts of my body were broken, he gave me a spirit that would never break."

A traveler approached three men he passed on the road and gave them each a small key and made each one promise him that regardless of what they met along the road they would take the key and hold onto it until the morning.

As the night passed, they came upon a forest fire that raged ferociously. Consumed by the heat one of the men turned around, the other two continued.

However, they came upon a great storm which bent the trees and nearly buried both men in torrents of water. The second man turned back. However the third man clinched his fist around the key and kept going.

In the morning he met another traveler who asked him, "Have you been through the fire? Have you been through the storm? Do you still have the key?" To these the man answered yes.

The traveler responded, "You have earned the reward of Gold that this box contains. But tell me, what made you go on?" The man answered, "I've been through the storm and the rain. I've been through fire, but I had to keep going because I promised that I would hold out till the morning comes!"

The way to finish is to hold on until your change comes!

That's what Jesus did!

He carried his cross to Calvary and at the end the angels heard him declare, "It is finished"

But Early Sunday morning…

On March 1, 2006 Sister Carlena Gary took her last breath. She ran a good race and she finished well.

No. 9196-Friends

A Friend in High Places

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 19, 2006

SCRIPTURE: Having then a great high priest, who hath passed through the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our confession. For we have not a high priest that cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but one that hath been in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore draw near with boldness unto the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy, and may find grace to help us in time of need. Hebrews 4:14-16

Introduction

Have you ever called on someone you knew to do you a favor? Occasionally, everyone has a need to call on someone to perform a service for them; a service that requires a special preference. It can be a simple as calling on a friend in government to "take care" of a special problem or getting special permission for child to make up a test in school. Sometimes we use our connections with well placed persons to get things done for an organization to which you belong or a cause we support.

There are some who value our membership in the club or group to which we belong by what we can "bring to the table." Often what we have to offer is a Rolodex filled with private cell numbers and special ways to gain access to people in high places who can make things happen. When others are stumped, there's always someone who seems to know the right people in the right places who can make things happen.

Someone in your family needs to be bailed out of jail without a bond? Someone has access to a friendly judge.

Need to cut through the long waiting line for a service? Someone has a friend who works inside and will get to you first.

Can't get in to see the mayor, governor or Senator? Someone has direct access to them and can arrange your meeting.

From time to time everyone needs a friend in a high place. The more such friends you have, the more "clout" you have. The late Mike Royko notes that clout never works its way down, it always goes up. Clout is what you have if you can call city hall and a parking ticket disappears. Those with clout can call a Senator and his secretary will put you through, or he'll call you back quickly. Clout is how some get unexpected promotions on the job. It's also how some get sweetheart contracts for their relatives and friends. The mayor who visits with the governor and come back with $10 million in pork barrel projects for the city has clout. The governor who has clout with the White House can bring home extra deals for the state. The president who has clout with the United Nations can get special considerations for his country around the world.

Occasionally, we all need someone who can cut through the red tape and help us when we can't help ourselves. It helps to have a little clout; to have a friend in a high place.

How much clout do we have with God?

Those who trust in God and are obedient to his word usually find that they have a friend in a very high place, who can cut through all of the red tape of this life and make things happen for them. We don't need the names and numbers of a long list of spiritual numbers, we only need one contact, his name is Jesus. His heavenly cell number is 1-1-1 (One for the father, one for the Son and One for the Holy Ghost.)

That's why the song writer says, "What a friend we have in Jesus" because he is in a high place who can help us when we pray.

As Christians, we all know that we have a friend in a high place. He is placed on the right hand of God himself. If pray to God in his name, we can cut through all of the spiritual red tape that exists and bring our case before the almighty. He is a real friend, in a high place.

Exposition

This text focuses on a reminder to the Hebrews, that Christians have a mutual friend in Jesus, who sits on the right hand of God.

While on earth Jesus told his disciples that a true friend sticks closer than a brother. A true friend, said Christ, is one who is willing to lay down his life for a friend. He declared that he is a friend to every believer.

After the crucifixion, Christ ascended back to heaven; he passed through the clouds (v14) and is now sitting on the right hand of God. He is both our high priest and our sacrifice. He is in a high place. Jesus humbled Himself to the point of death on a cross. Now he has taken His place at the right hand of the Father, to rule eternally over the universe. We didn't elect Him to this position, The Father appointed him. He chose his Son to be our Savior and gave him a seat of authority on his right hand.

Verse 15 makes it clear that not only is Jesus in a high place, but he is one who knows us and has been through similar circumstances. He is not just sitting on right the right hand of God, in a high place, he is our advocate. Advocate intercedes, promotes and defends. That's what Christ does for believers each day.

As a result of our friendship with Christ believers are encouraged to "draw near with boldness unto the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy, and may find grace to help us in time of need." (v16) We are encouraged to boldly ask God for what we need through our advocate and friend, Jesus Christ.

He Knows Us

The text makes it clear that our friend in a high place has not forgotten us, now that he has returned to the seat of power. He knows us and remembers our trials.

HE KNOWS OUR FRUSTRATIONS: Christ lived on earth as a human for 33 years. He knows what it is like to be "us." He knows the limitations of the human body and psyche. He knows what we can do and what we cannot do. He also knows our limits. We are often frustrated when we seemed limited in our abilities and opportunities. Revisit verse 15 again. Christ has been tempted like us. He knows our frustrations. He "learned" and "grew" just as we did. He experienced hunger after his 40-day fast; He was so exhausted he fell asleep on his disciple's fishing boat. He seldom had transportation and walked almost everywhere he went. One of his best friends betrayed him, he was lied on, falsely accused, persecuted by the government and was often held at a distance by his brothers and one known sister. He even experienced death. Without a doubt he knows our frustration and our weakness.

HE IS OUR HEAVENLY ADVOCATE: Our constant sin separates us from God, but our faith and belief in Christ, reconnects us with him because of his sacrifice on Calvary.

From His place of glory at the right hand of His father, our powerful Friend showers many favors upon us:

—He makes intercession with the Father for His saints (Rom. 8:34).

—He hears and acts on our prayers (Jn. 14:13).

—He makes all things work for our good (Rom. 8:28).

—He sends the Holy Spirit to comfort and instruct (Jn. 16:7).

—He prepares an eternal dwelling for us in heaven (Jn. 14:2).

We have a Friend in high places! A real man, bearing the marks of his crucifixion, continually intercedes for us in heaven.

HE WILL HELP US IN OUR NEED: Not only does our friend serve as our advocate while sitting on the throne; he proves himself a friend when we need him. An old proverb says, "A friend in need is a friend in deed." It seems to say that to be a great friend must be in need, but what it means that the time to show friendship is when a friend is in need. The last words of verse 16 emphasizes that our savior is a friend in our time of need. He proves us graces "in the time of need." This emphasize "what" and "when." He provides us what we need, when we need it. Not before as we would like and never late. The old song has it right, "He may not come when you want him, but he's always on time."

Because we have a friend

Finally, brothers and sisters, we are reminded that because we have a friend in high places, we can boldly ask God with an honest expectation that our request will get through.

It is because we have someone who knows us and has not forgotten us sitting on the right hand of God that we are encouraged to ask what we want with boldness.

The “therefore” in the text assumes certain conditions have been met.

It assumes that we know Jesus and have accepted him as our Lord and Savior.

It assumes that we are being obedient to his commands about living, giving and worshipping.

It assumes that we are living by faith and not by sight.

Those who meet these conditions have the expectations that come after “therefore.”

After therefore, the word says, “let us draw near with confidence to the throne of grace, so that we may receive mercy and find grace to help in time of need.” All of the exposition on Christ as our high priest and our need for his assistance is glued to the “therefore.”

An ordinary citizen cannot expect to go boldly into the office of the governor of the state an state their demands.

An ordinary citizen can’t expect to go to Washington and instantly have a meeting with a U.S. Senator.

An ordinary citizen can’t walk through the gates of the White House and walk into the president’s office and expect to be heard.

But that’s not the case with our King. We are told to “draw near with confidence.” To come with “confidence” means that we come boldly or with a sense of assurance before the Lord.

We can go with confidence because have a friend in a high place who meet us, greet us and get our request before the most high God.

No wonder the song write declares, “What a friend, we have in Jesus!”

What a friend we have in Jesus, when we can’t see our way, he makes a way out of no way!

What a friend we have in Jesus, when we have fallen down, he picks us up and turns us around!

What a friend we have in Jesus, when we have dropped our heads in despair, he dries our weeping eyes!

What a friend we have in Jesus, when we feel abandoned, he promises never to leave us. Never to leave us alone!

What a friend we have in Jesus, who showed us the greatest love!

He carried an old rugged cross!

He was raised up and stretched out in humility!

He was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquity!

No greater love can a man show than this, that he would lay down his life for his friends!

He died one evening, but Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave will all power! All power in his hands!

The Ministry of the Spoons

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Progressive Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 26, 2006

SCRIPTURE: And they shall keep his charge, and the charge of the whole congregation before the tabernacle of the congregation, to do the service of the tabernacle. Numbers 3:7; "The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense, weighing ten shekels apiece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels." Numbers 7:86

Introduction

Which best describes the best servant of the church, a knife, a fork or a spoon? The answer to that question was received one day by a young deacon on his way to his ordination. At the breakfast table that Sunday morning he asked his family to tell him what kind of deacon they hoped he would be. When his daughter's turn came she didn't say anything for a while but just watched as the grits were dipped from a big bowl to her small bowl. Then, in a burst of inspiration his daughter said, "Be a spoon daddy! Be a spoon!" Surprised, the father asked his little innocent daughter why she wanted him to be a spoon.

"At school the boys take forks and pick the best food out of my plate. Forks are grabby and sticky."

"Why not a knife?" asked the father. "Knives cut things and tear things up. Knives are scary. You can't eat with them; just slice things up." She said. "You should be a spoon because spoons can scoop up lots of stuff and pass it around. The big spoon passes stuff out of the big dish and puts it on the plate. The little spoon scoops up everything even soupy stuff. When there is bug or something, a knife can't cut it and a fork can't stab it, but a spoon can scoop it up and throw it away."

The father looked at his daughter with amazement and smiled. After his ordination that day received a present from several people who wanted to wish him well. One present stood out most from the rest. When he opened it he saw shiny spoon with a handwritten note from his little daughter, "Be a spoon Daddy! Be a spoon!"

Today, we celebrate the beginning of a ministry to the tables of the church. We celebrate and consecrate those who have accepted an assignment to become a utensil for the building of the kingdom. They are charged not to become forks or the "gimme" people who always try to fill their own plate at the expense of others. Neither are they charged to become knives or "divisive" people who are always trying to divide, slice and cause confusion.

Today, we celebrate the ministry of the spoons! These who begin today are charged to be servants. They are charged to be different from the knives and forks. Instead of taking, cutting and dividing they are charged to serve. They are charged to scoop up everything that is good for the church and put it on individual plates. They are also charged to scoop out the bugs in the soup.

The church never has enough spoons! It has plenty of knives and forks. But we need more spoons! Have you ever noticed that in good silverware sets there are always twice as many spoons as anything else? A service for four includes four knives, four dinner forks, four salad forks, but eight spoons. That is because everyone knows that spoons get used for more things and in more ways than do knives and forks. You can't eat soup with a knife or a fork, but you can eat steak with a spoon if you have to. If necessary a good spoon can even do a small amount of cutting.

Today, of all those who serve the tables of the church, we celebrate the spoons!

As Christians, we are happy to be servants of the most high God. We gladly tell him, use me Lord in your service. He has given us a charge to keep and a God to glorify!

Exposition

This text focuses on a charge that was given to the Levites who were commanded to serve the Tabernacle.

The Levites were biblical tribesmen who dedicated their lives to the service of the Tabernacle of God either as priests or its protectors, managers and providers. The Levites were selected for this special work and charged by God himself to perform duties at the tabernacle .Their work made it possible for the people to come to the tabernacle and offer sacrifices for the atonement of sins.

The Levites were very useful to the Tabernacle. They spent most of their lives serving the Tabernacle and promoting the worship.

The specific task of the Levites was to do the work of the tabernacle (vv. 7-8). The Levites were charged to obey the directives of Aaron the High priest. They were reminded that they were Levites but they operated with limitations. They could not approach the sanctuary itself (v. 10). This reference to the sanctuary clearly outlines the limitations of the Levites—they could not serve as priests by offering sacrifices or by performing other functions in the tabernacle.

The non-priestly Levites were servants of the priests and servants of the Tabernacle. They were charged to serve the whole congregation and the Tabernacle all of their lives.

At chapter 7 each of the tribes brought offerings for the tabernacle. Over a 12 day period, each time brought golden spoons filled with ten shekels of gold. In all verse 86 says, "The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense, weighing ten shekels apiece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels."

In preparation to service, the Levites were anointed and the spoons were given for the offering; 12 golden spoons.

Spoons we don't need

There are some spoons that are not needed on any deacon board.

There is no need for PLASTIC SPOONS that are cheap and superficial. The plastic spoon deacon looks like a deacon but is not able to stand the heat in times of trouble. He melts. Neither is he able to set the example in tithing, worship and study. Plastic spoons are mass produced, cheap and easy to find. But God does not set his table with plastic spoons.

Neither is there a need for GREASY SPOONS. A greasy spoon is slimy and unclean. The greasy spoon deacon is one who does not give a good example of the faith in his personal life. He is the deacon who drinks alcohol, frequents clubs, cheats on his wife, gambles, or is otherwise unfaithful to the cross. Greasy Spoons on the table ruin everyone's appetite because they indicate impurity. God does not set his table with greasy spoons.

Moreover God has no need for SOUVENIR SPOONS. These are the little spoons purchased in novelty shops as for memory of journey. The souvenir spoon remembers that "we were once there" it is not expected to actually be used. The deacon's ministry cannot serve the congregation if all of its members are souvenirs of past years of service but do no service in the present. God does not set his table with Souvenir spoons.

Spoons we need

There are many who have the misguided notion that deacons are ornaments on the tabernacle, designed to look good but not serve. Many see a set table with many beautiful pieces of silverware that are only for decorations. However, deacons are not ornaments to sit on the front seat of a church and look pretty as they read scripture or sing a hymn. Every spoon on the Lord's Table is expected to be used. A full setting for the deacon's ministry requires each deacon to have a complete set of characteristics that makes him a complete servant. He must consider:

LADLE OF MISSION: The deacon's ministry needs men who are charged to become Ladle. A ladle is a spoon with a long handle that can reach into a bowling pot or a bowl of punch and bring back a taste what is there. In a similar sense the church needs men of long reach and sense of mission. These are men who can see the full picture of the church's mission in the world and are prepared to go far and wide to help it reach fruition. When Jesus said, "Go ye therefore.." he challenged the church to extend itself beyond its local walls into the world. That takes a long handle spoon. It takes servants with reach and vision. God needs a few long handle spoons to accomplish his purpose.

TABLESPOON OF HOLINESS. The deacon's service is marked as a Holy service. A main scriptural requirement of a deacon is that he be full of the Holy Ghost. This means he is controlled by, led by, and committed to a program and agenda that is greater than his own.

What makes him a holy man is not his ability to sing hymns or pray eloquently in a church service. What makes him a holy man is his willingness to deny his own interests in pursuit of the things of God. Because he is a holy man he is present whenever the church studies the word, praises God, prays or fellowships. He is a holy man because he sets the example for those who look to him and will resolve, if the Holy man can't do it, certainly I can't be expected to rise above him.

TEASPOON OF HUMILITY: The deacon's service is marked by humility. That's the nature of a teaspoon. It does not think of itself as big or powerful, but only as a small teaspoon. The first deacons were selected to serve in very unrewarding positions. They did so humbly without assuming that they were greater than they actually were. The deacon today is a servant and humility is the key to his greatness. Those who remain aware that the church does not serve them but it is they that serve the church, go far in resolving complaints, aiding church growth and complimenting the leadership of the church.

SERVING SPOON: The serving spoon reaches into large dishes and brings out food to be placed on individual plates. The deacon's service is marked by helpfulness. They are appointed by the pastor to help him in implementing the vision he has received from God. The deacon owes the pastor the benefit of his best thinking and support which is best characterized by the initials "DD". Deep Deliberation, to give him the best advice; Diplomatic Difference, to differ with him in private outside of the earshot of the membership; and Daring Defense, to defend the pastor from unwarranted attacks, false accusations, and assaults on his integrity.

Dessert Spoons

Finally, brothers and Sisters, we must remember that while there are spoons for serving, reaching, and stirring, there is also a dessert spoon.

A Dessert spoon looks like other spoons except it has a pointed edged and is used for enjoying the desserts after the meal is consumed.

Every deacon, like all other Christians, wants to receive his reward. There is a reward for every true servant. That reward is not to sit in a place of high recognition in the congregation, more than anything else he wants to see Jesus.

So the deacon is charged to lift Jesus up!

The deacon is charged to do that which is necessary to help believers keep their eyes on the cross, because their salvation is not in the deacon or the preacher but in Jesus.

We must see Jesus!

When we able to see Jesus the world looks better and we see life with a clearer perspective.

To see Jesus the deacon must help the congregation lift Jesus up.

We've got to lift up Jesus because Jesus said: "And I, if I, be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

We've got to lift up Jesus because when we lift up Jesus there is:

—Light for those in darkness and Blessings for the cursed —Glory for those in gloom and Victory for those are defeated

—Hope for those in despair and Joy for those in sorrow —Strength for the weak, and Peace for those who are confused.

—Healing for those who are sick, and Salvation for the Lost

Lift up Jesus so the world will know that he is the:

—Fountain of our joy, and Bread on our table

—Song of our midnight hour, Pilot of ship

—Answer for our questions, and solution to our problems

—Lawyer on our case, the doctor who never lost a patient

Lift up Jesus and show us how Jesus took an old rugged cross and turned it into a symbol of our salvation.

Lift up Jesus and tell the old story of his death on Calvary and how he rose early Sunday morning triumphant from the grave!

Lift up Jesus and let the world know that he lives!

He lives!

He lives!

From Celebrity to the Cross

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 9, 2006

SCRIPTURE: And the multitudes that went before him, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest Matthew 21:9; "And they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas: (Who for a certain sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.)Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them. But they cried, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Luke 23:18-21.

Introduction

Have you ever met a celebrity? There is a national curiosity about those who have achieved celebrity status. Movie Stars, sports heroes, politicians and even celebrity preachers all attract our attention. We are curious about them. We want to see what they wear, how they look, how they live and we want to hear what they have to say. We buy magazines that have pictures of celebrities. We wear clothes that bear the names of celebrities. We cook our food on stoves that bear the names of a celebrity. We even want to eat in restaurants where celebrities have eaten or tend to frequent.

When a celebrity comes to town, the crowds tend to gather; all seem to seek the same thing. They want to get a look at the celebrity.

We'll wait in line for hours to get a celebrity to autograph a book, a ball or just a sheet of paper. We'll drive for hours to stand in the crowd and watch the celebrities get out of cars and walk into a building for 10 seconds.

There are obvious benefits that come with celebrity. There are many who have turned their celebrity into high paying jobs and position. Ronald Reagan was a famous movie star. He turned that fame into a political career that made him President of the United States. Arnold Swartzeneggar is famous as the movie hero "Terminator" but he turned his celebrity into a political base that catapulted him to become governor of California.

Celebrity has its disadvantages too. There are very few moments of privacy for a celebrity. There are no quiet walks in the parks or strolls down the grocery store isles or evenings at the movies for celebrities; not without crowds of paparazzi following them everywhere they go. Even the personal lives of celebrities are discussed openly and all of their family laundry is reported for the entire world to see.

By definition, a celebrity is a person who is well known or renowned. To many, celebrities are heroes and heroines to whom we attribute godlike qualities and status.

Often we are shocked to learn that celebrities have political views that are different from our own. We also learn often that many have religious views that are strange, marital habits that always keep them in divorce court and personal issues that require the services of shrinks.

We have an image of our favorite celebrity that we do not want altered. When reality doesn't match the perception, we lose our enthusiasm. That's when the crowds thin. That's when the cheers cease and a celebrity disappears into the vast emptiness of anonymity.

On Palm Sunday, Jesus entered Jerusalem as a celebrity. There were crowds of spectators who came for miles just to get a glimpse of the man from Galilee. He was an obvious folk hero whose reputation had been promoted by 70 people who went before him in 35 pairs preparing the way for his arrival. When Jesus arrived, he received a celebrity's welcome and there were shouts of Hosanna and Hallelujah!

He was received as a conquering hero. His approval ratings were extremely high. The crowd was eating out of his hand! Yet, in a few short days; the crowds who celebrated the famous would reduce him to infamy and call for his execution.

As Christians, we celebrate Christ the savior, not Christ the celebrity. We celebrate the Rock of Ages, the Bright and Morning Star, not a rock star. The Christ we celebrate is not a celebrity but a friend who gave his life for us. In turn, we celebrate his birth, life, death and resurrection every day of our lives.

Exposition

This text considers Jesus as he makes what has been called a "triumphant entry" into Jerusalem. Jesus had taught and healed for three years throughout the region and his reputation had spread from village to village. He had become a celebrity to many, although he never sought celebrity status.

Many thought of him as a great prophet, healer and divine teacher and were drawn to greet him as he entered Jerusalem. He entered Jerusalem riding a colt. As he entered, the multitudes greeted him and threw their garments along the road to honor him. Others cut down branches from the palm trees and waved them in the air and shouted praises to him as he passed. They shouted "Hosanna" which was Aramaic for "Save Us."

Upon his arrival into the city the people praised him as the one who would save them. However, just a few days later the same crowd that praised him shouted demands for his death. The high priests and other religious leaders were displeased at the praise he was receiving and they consorted on ways to turn all the shouts to doubts. They accused Jesus falsely, produced false witnesses, and used their political influence to destroy him. Ultimately, the same crowd that called his name in praise also called out his name in condemnation. The lips that shouted Hosanna on Palm Sunday cried out "Crucify Him" a few days later.

Seeking Celebrity

There are several truths about Jesus' entry into Jerusalem and his reception that we should not ignore.

JESUS DID NOT SEEK CELEBRITY: The world has a way of approaching celebrities that is different from its approach to ordinary people. If a man is a celebrity we are willing to "give it up" for him.

Have you ever watched the master of ceremonies of a comedy show introduce an entertainer? Generally, the MC will say a few words to the audience to loosen up the crowd and prepare it to receive the next act. If the next act is a relative newcomer or an unknown the MC will say, "Let's give it up for…" and ask the audience to receive the coming performance. The lights in the auditorium flash "applause." Prompting wave at the studio audience and urge them to applause for the celebrity.

Jesus is no celebrity, but yet those who trust in him "give it up" for him everyday. They praise him without end without an applause sign or a cue card.

Believers are compelled to praise the Lord because he is good and his mercy endureth forever. Whether we clap our hands, stomp our feet, or just nod our heads and smile, we have to respond when we think of the goodness of the Lord.

HE EMPHASIZED CHARACTER OVER CELEBRITY: What the crowds expected from Jesus was demonstrations of the things that made him a celebrity in their mind. They wanted fish and bread or to see a miracle or two. He was their conquering hero; their celebrity and they sought to see it for themselves. However, Jesus was not about celebrity, he was about character.

In his book, True Heroism in a World of Celebrity Counterfeits, Dick Keyes writes that a celebrity is "one who is famous and well publicized," well known "apart from how they became known. Celebrity itself is indifferent to moral character," he adds. One can be famous "but still a thoroughly obnoxious person and menace." It is important for each of us to look for character, purpose and direction in those whom we elevate to hero status in our lives. Celebrity alone is not sufficient.

Adolph Hitler was a celebrity and because most Germans were mesmerized by his celebrity they did not look closely into his character and millions died. The state of Louisiana several years ago nearly elected David Duke, a Ku Klux Klansman, as governor of the state; fortunately enough people looked behind the celebrity and looked at the character.

Today, believers must become concerned with character and ignore celebrity. When it's all said and done only what we do for Christ will last, celebrity or no celebrity.

CELEBRITY DOES NOT LAST: There were a lot of spectators in the crowd on that first Palm Sunday. They cheered, they waved palm branches, they shouted. But when they learned the demands of discipleship, they switched teams. By Friday, they were shouting, "Crucify him, crucify him!"

The celebrity that was showered on Jesus was based on the misconception that he would lead them against Rome. When it became obvious that this was not the case the celebrity status faded; quickly.

Even in our world today we must be keenly aware of the fleeting nature of praise. The same people who praise us on Sunday are willing to crucify us on Thursday. Preachers who are given appreciation programs on the First Sunday have been known to be voted out before the end of the month. Praise and celebrity are fleeting.

Those who choose to follow Christ should do so with the full knowledge that following him will not generate celebrity and fame, but may cost them heavily in a secular sense.

Jesus said, "If any want to become my followers, let them deny themselves and take up their cross daily and follow me." Jesus bids us come and die with him. That is the cost of discipleship.

He came looking for a cross

Finally, brothers and sisters, when Jesus came to Jerusalem he was not looking for celebrity; he was looking for souls to save and a cross to bear.

The people approached him with the intensity of the welcome provided a celebrity, but he did not seek celebrity status.

The Scribes and Pharisees were visibly upset about the celebrity treatment Jesus received. They were noticeably concerned about the shouting and praise he was receiving. They asked his disciples to have Jesus to hush the crowd.

But Jesus said there was a reason for the shouting. The people were enthusiastic about the coming redeemer, even though their enthusiasm was misplaced. If they would be silent then the rocks themselves would cry out.

The religious leaders then could not understand then just as many understand today, whenever the Lord has done something good for you, there's a whole lot of shouting going on.

Whenever we think about how God has blessed us, there's a whole lot of hand waving going on!

Whenever we think about how God has picked us up and turned us around, there's a whole lot foot patting going!

Whenever we think about how he provides food for us when we are hungry, there's a whole lot of hand clapping going on!

When we think about how he brought us out of nowhere and carried us to somewhere. There's a whole lot of shouting going on!

We're shouting because of what he has done.

We're shouting because of what we expect him to do.

We're shouting because he's been to us and we just can't keep it to ourselves.

I don't know about you, but there are ought to be a lot of shouting going on in the homes of the Saint's.

Every time you think about the mountains you've climbed and the valleys in your way, you ought to feel a shout coming!

He's been a lawyer in my courtroom! I think I feel a shout coming on!

He's been a doctor in my sick room! I think I feel a shout coming on!

He's been a bridge over troubling waters! I think I feel a shout coming on!

He came to town in a lowly fashion, riding a colt, but the crowds made him a celebrity. The same crowd that greeted him with celebrity status just a few days later changed their shout to "Crucify him.

It was not celebrity that prompted him to pick up the old rugged cross.

It was not celebrity that made him take the abuse and torment.

It was not celebrity that urged him to show compassion to those who were persecuting him.

It was not celebrity but it was divinity mixed with humanity that made him go to Calvary. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Out on Calvary, he died, that I might live!

The man they buried in a borrowed tomb was not a celebrity but Savior.

He was not a star, but the man who behind the stars!

He was not known around the world, but he held the world in his hands!

Early Sunday morning, arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

I don't know about you, but I feel a shout coming on!

Famous Last Words

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 9, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Luke 23:34; "Truly, I say to you, today you will be with me in Paradise" Luke 23:43; "Father, into thy hands, I commit my spirit." Luke 23:46;"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Matthew 27:46; "I thirst" John 19:28 "He said to his mother, "Woman, behold thy son!" Then he said to the disciple, "Behold thy mother! John 19:26-27; "It is finished" (John 19:30)

Introduction

Do you remember the last words of a friend or a relative? Somehow those last words took on a spirituality and life of their own. They bounce off the walls of our mind as we remember regularly their meaning and importance.

A minister tried to explain the importance of saying every word as if it was to be our last word, called upon a little girl to come to the front of the church. The preacher placed his arms around the little girl and explained that before leaving this earth Jesus said his parting words. They were his last. Then the preacher asked the little girl a question, but he wasn't prepared for the answer. He asked, "What were the last words you spoke, just before I called you up here?" The little girl said, "I hope he is not long, because I gotta use it!"

So much for famous last words; but we do remember them.

On his death bed Huey P. Long, former governor of Louisiana, gasped for air and said, "Don't let it end this way, I've got so much to do." His last words were the epitaph of a life lived on the cutting edge of change but filled with guts and glory.

A condemned murderer by the name of James French had some comical last words as they strapped him into the electric chair said, "How about this for tomorrow's head lines, French Fries!"

A criminal by the name of James Rogers who was about to be executed by a firing squad was asked if he had a last request and he said, "A bullet proof vest."

We often remember people by the last things they say to us. In fact, we seem to respect the last wishes of the dying more than we respect their wishes while they were alive. Family members will fight to carry out the wishes of a dying relative to the letter, but often ignored those same wishes in better times. The last things we do linger. They have a way of encircling us and shaking out dormant personalities as we hear those last words reverberate in our ears.

Moses had written the first four books of the bible. He had said everything there was to be said, some thought. When he was 120 years old he started saying his last words and they ended up being the entire Book of Deuteronomy.

The last words we say are powerful.

A man who has lost a loved one to some tragedy, remembers the last words that were said. He is encouraged if those words were, "I love you." Those words are encouraging and strengthening. However, if the last words spoken were words of condemnation, hatred and fear spoken in rage and anger, we are devastated with guilt and failure. We remember those words forever.

Last words reverberate. They linger.

That's why the last words of Jesus on the cross seem to ring in our ears. These seven sayings are often repeated more than his teachings. While hanging on the cross, amidst groaning, blood and death, these words ring out over the centuries because each of them presents a framework by which the Gospel and its declaration of inclusive love will be judged. There are seven last sayings of Christ on the cross. No single book of the bible contains all seven of the sayings. There are three in John, three in Luke and there is one in Matthew.

Together, their message lingers.

They seem to say that as a man Jesus died and was buried, but as the divine he lives and is preparing for us a place in paradise.

As Christians, we remember the last sayings of Christ. More than that, we remember the last acts of Christ which included his death and his resurrection; all for our sins.

Exposition

This text focuses on the last words of Jesus on the cross.

There are seven sayings attributed to the savior as he hung on the cross. Each of the sayings indicate his nature.

We see his humanity when he felt forsaken and as he hung on the cross and called out to his father for sustenance, asking "Why hast thou forsaken me." We see his physical weakness when he complained about "thirst."

We see his concern for his mother's welfare when he told his disciple to "Behold thy mother." But we also see his compassion for a faithful disciple when he told his mother, "Woman, behold thy son."

We see his forgiving spirit when he asked his father to forgive them for they know not what they do.

We see his dying act of mercy when he spoke to the thief and promised him that "Today, thou shalt be with me in paradise."

We see the completion of his mission when he said, "It is finished."

We see him place his life in the Father's hand when he said, "Into thy hands, I commend my spirit."

These last sayings are famous around the world because of their truth, power and humility. They are memorable and divine because these famous last words came from the savior himself.

Every Word Memorable

The last words of Christ were memorable, but so were all of his words. Each of them were memorable because they were spoken by the Son of God himself. They were packed with truth and the power of God.

It wasn't his last word, but when Jesus said, "Love your enemies" it was a divinely inspired word. It meant that every believer should demonstrate the love of God in every action, even with respect to our enemies.

It wasn't his last word, but when Jesus said, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God" it was a powerful word of truth that challenged each of us to approach life with sincerely of spirit.

It wasn't his last word, but when Jesus said, "You have not because you ask not" it was a declaration of faith that those who believe in God can accomplish the impossible if they exercise faith. In such cases the only hindrance to any possibility is asking in faith.

It wasn't his last word, but when Jesus said, "Behold I stand at the door and knock" it was his invitation to all to allow him entrance into our lives by invitation rather by force; by warm embrace rather than fear.

It wasn't his last word, but when Jesus said, "Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted," it indicated that those who have empathy and sympathy for others will find comfort in their own days of weakness and trouble.

It wasn't his last word, but when Jesus said, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors" it indicated that we should be willing to forgive those who have offended us just as we expect God to forgive us for our transgressions.

It wasn't his last word, but when Jesus said, the son on man "shall come as a thief in the night" it was a warning that believers should stay alert and prepared for the imminent return of the savior.

No Hope In Man's Words

Today there are millions in the world who invest their hopes in men as their saviors.

We cling to the last words of those we deem as great and turn to men only to discover that our heroes are weak and powerless to deal with the awesome struggles that we face.

We remember the words of Jefferson, "That all men are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights, among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

We remember the words of Lincoln quoting the savior, "that a house divided against itself cannot stand."

We remember the words of John F. Kennedy, "Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country."

We remember the words of Martin Luther King, "I may not get there with you, but I've been to the mountaintop. I have seen the Promised Land and we will get there one day."

While remember these memorable words from great men, they are somehow powerless to help us in our lowest moments.

In our lowest moments when we can't see our way, we need to hear the word of Jesus reminding us that his eye is on the sparrow and watches over us!

When the world points an accusing finger at us, we need to hear Jesus tell those who scorn us, "he that is without sin, let him cast the first stone."

When we are lost and spiritually sinking in the sea of life, we need to hear Jesus say, "No greater love than this, that a man would lay down his life for a friend."

What a mighty God we serve!

Through the power of his words, Lazarus walked from his grave after four long days.

Through the power of his words, he spoke to the wind and waves and quieted their discord; causing some to ask, "What manner of man is this that the wind and waves obey his will?"

Through the power of his words, A man who was lame for 38 years took up his bed and walked.

What a savior, whose words, whether they were his first or his last are able to protect, deliver and bestow prosperity as he so desired.

Who can protect us better then the Lord?

The psalmist reminds us that the Lord is our fortress in a time of trouble and a shelter in a time of storm. David declared in Psalms 27 that the "Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear?" "..In the time of trouble He shall hide me in His pavilion, in the secret of His Tabernacle shall He hide me." (v5).

Who can deliver us better than the Lord whose words of hope have delivered us from despair?

Who can bestow blessings upon us better than our savior who by his very word can open up the windows of heaven and shower down more blessings that we can handle?

Who can bless us better than the Lord? Whose words shall linger in our hearts?

We remember the patriots of America declaring, "I have not yet begun to fight." But we should hear the word of God declaring, that "eye hath not seen, nor has it entered into the hearts of man, the great things God has in store for us."

The last words we remember should not be those of Abraham Lincoln who many called the savior of our nation.

Lincoln was called "Savior","the Emancipator" and "Liberator" but he was not the Savior.

He was a deliverer, but he was not the savior!

He was great, but he was not the greatest!

He was strong, but he wasn't the strongest!

He had power, but he didn't have all power!

He was high, but he was not the highest!

He was victorious, but he didn't have the ultimate victory!

If you have a savior who can not respond to you, then you have nothing.

If you have a savior who cannot:

-Protect, then you have a cup that can't hold water.

-Deliver, then you have a match that cannot strike.

-Bless you, then you have a light that cannot shine.

We need a savior we can call on and He will answer. I hear the song writer declare: "..Savior, Savior, hear my humble cry, while on others thou art calling do not pass me by."

The Last Word

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that while Christ spoke seven last words on the cross, he himself was both the first and the last word.

On Calvary there was a cross, but God had a Word for that cross. Not just any word, for John said, "In the beginning was the Word. And the Word was with God and the Word was God!

Every now and then even the best saints feel like they are on crosses, but don't worry, the God we serve always gets the last Word!

If you have experienced defeat, our God has the last word, because he can take defeat and turn it into victory!

If your experience has brought you a bowed down head, God's got the last word, for I heard the word declare, "Lift up your heads oh ye gates, and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors and the king of glory shall come in!

If life's problems have given you sadness, God's got the last word, he can take your sadness and give you gladness!

If life has given you doubt, God's got the last word, he can take your doubt and give you assurance!

If your troubles have given you bondage, God's got the last word; he can take your bondage and give you freedom!

For every cross you bear, God's got the last word!

For every ditch someone digs for you, God's got the last word!

The world may declare, "Put him down!" But for every "put down" God's got the last word!

They took the first word and nailed him to a cross. They heard him speak seven words and thought that was the last of the word.

On Calvary, Jesus dropped his head in the locks of his shoulder, but that wasn't the last word!

They stuck a spear in his side, but that wasn't the last word!

He cried out to his father, "Into thy hands I commend my spirit." But that wasn't the last word!

Even though they buried him in a borrowed tomb and he stayed there for three days and nights; that wasn't the last word either, because Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

One of these old days he's coming back again. When he does I want to be in the number who hears his last words to saints, "Servant, well done!"

You Can't Keep A good Man Down

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 16, 2006

SCRIPTURE: And they shall scourge him and put him to death and the third day he shall rise again." Luke 18:33

Introduction

Have you ever felt that life has thrown you a few wicked punches? Have you ever felt yourself going down for the count? How did you respond? Did you get up? Or did you stay down? Sometimes it appears that there are forces working against us that we cannot see; sending us to the canvass more times than we would like. When life hits, it seldom slaps or throws baby punches. It hits hard.

When life hits it seems as if everything happens at the same time. Those are the times that we agree with Job that "man born of woman is full of trouble." Job would know, especially since he experienced the full gamut of losses that range from death of his family, personal sickness and financial failure all at the same time. There are days that we feel like Mr. and Mrs. Job; knocked down, turned around and turned upside down.

One of the salient aspects of the 1970's film "Rocky" is that the main character played by Sylvester Stallone, Rocky Balboa, refused to give up his quest to go the distance with the World Champion. He didn't expect to win; he just wanted to go the distance. He was knocked down, battered, bruised, and beaten badly, but each time he was knocked down he rose to his feet, finally declaring, "I ain't going down no more!" The series, five movies in all caught our imagination because we can empathize with anyone who has been knocked down. We pull for them because we can see ourselves transposed in their situation. We want them to get up, because we want to believe we can do the same.

One Sunday morning over 2000 years ago, we got an example much better than Rocky. It was that Sunday morning that we saw a man who had been beaten, ridiculed, nailed to a cross and speared in the side; we saw him get up from the grave. We know from the written word of God that Rocky's word could apply to that Sunday morning, "I ain't going down, no more."

If the resurrection of Christ means anything to believers, it is that Christ, as a man, took the same punches that life throws at each of us: disappointment, betrayal, physical abuse, persecution and every other problem we face. He went down, but mustered the strength to rise again repeatedly.

Donnie McCurklin's song says it best, "We fall down, but we get up. A saint is just a sinner who falls down; and gets up."

The resurrection is about arising from setbacks. It's about overcoming troubles, disappointments and failures. It's about starting all over, when it seems though it is hopeless.

As Christians, we celebrate the resurrection because it brings us hope. We are overjoyed because Christ overcame every obstacle put in his way and arose triumphant over death, the devil and the grave. We are happy because he proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that, "You can't keep a good man down."

Exposition

This text considers Christ as he prophesied about the remaining days of his life.

This text marks the third time that Jesus made reference to his impending death and resurrection. Each time, his disciples did not fully understand what he meant.

The first time Jesus told of his impending death, he focused on his rejection by Israel's leaders (Luke 9:21-27).

The second time, he added the element of betrayal (Luke 9:44-45). When he spoke of how he would be betrayed by those close to him, even then they did not understand him.

In this passage Jesus mentions that what will happen to him has been foretold by the prophets. Those involved, he said, would go beyond just the Jews but would also involve the Gentiles who would mock, insult, spit on, flog, and kill him.

His disciples were frustrated over his repeated statements about his approaching death. They were so overwhelmed that many of them did not even hear his statement about rising again.

They only saw their leader prophesying his downfall.

They could not see beyond the fall. They did not see the renewal only the defeat.

Four Keys to Getting Up

The overriding truth of Christ's resurrection is that those who follow the same path as Christ can expect the same result. We can expect to be knocked down and to experience difficult times. We can also expect to rise again. There are four keys necessary to unlock the truth of the resurrection's power in our own lives:

STICK TO YOUR PRINCIPLES: The very first way to go down and stay down, is to compromise your principles. Our principles are the set of beliefs that guide us every day. A godly man or woman is guided by a set of beliefs about God. Even when a believer is knocked down, his principles do not change. Christ gave us a glaring example of this when he was persecuted and tormented. He believed in the principle of love, even for enemies. Even when he was spit upon, tortured and crucified by Roman soldiers he remained true to the principle by which he lived. As believers, we believe certain things about God. We believe that God is a healer, deliverer and savior. We believe he hears and answers prayers. We believe that no matter what we go through in life he will lead us through it. Whenever, we lay down our principles; that's the first step toward staying down.

It is our principle that keeps us from becoming a prostitute to pay the rent.

It is our principle that keeps us from stealing to keep the lights on!

It is our principles that keep us from immoral activity.

If you want to destroy a race of people and keep them down; destroy the principles by which they live. Take a race once associated with strong families, hard work and racial pride, and strip away their principles and you can knock them down and keep them down forever!

Even when we are down, we should take page from the life of Job and say, "Yea thou he slay me, yet will I trust him."

NEVER LOSE YOUR PASSION: Your passion is the energy, enthusiasm and excitement that you bring to your life's work. Your passion is what makes you rise early and stay up late doing what you enjoy doing.

If we ever lose our passion, especially when we are down, it will be very hard to get up.

The religious leaders had difficulty dealing with Christ because no matter what they did to him he never lost his passion. He walked among men and talked freely of forgiveness and mercy and hanging on the cross; even there, he never lost that passion to bring people to God. In one breath he invited a thief to join him in paradise. In another breath, he asked his father to forgive them for they didn't know what they were doing. Even on the cross they could not steal his passion!

Yet, there are some, perhaps even sitting in this room, who have lost their passion for life. They just don't care anymore. They don't care about school, work, their families; or even themselves.

An ugly husband and an ugly wife who are passionately in love can weather any storm. However, a beautiful woman and a handsome man won't last a week in the sunshine without passion!

When the devil wants to keep a good man down he goes after his principles, then works on his life's passion. Once these two are taken, we're down for the count. If you want to get up, keep your principles and never lose your passion.

KEEP YOUR SENSE OF PURPOSE: Every believer has a purpose. Often it eludes us. We have no idea what it is that God wants us to do. But those who have a sense of "manifest destiny" or the idea that it is my divine command to work toward this end; have a sense of purpose.

Elijah moved about daily with a sense of purpose, to stand before the King and declare the word of God. Moses knew his purpose was to lead the Children of Israel into the Promised Land.

There in the garden of Gethsemane Jesus prayed to his father in earnest. In his prayer he let it be known that he never lost sight of his sense of purpose. That purpose was to come to the earth and show mankind the way back to God and to be the one sacrifice needed to reconcile them with the creator. That was his sense of purpose. It was the one reason for his journey on this earth.

It is our sense of purpose that propels us to PERSISTENTLY PURSUE A HIGHER PLATEAU. When we have a sense of purpose we keep getting up when we are knocked down because there is something that we are striving for that requires; yes, demands that we get up!

George Foreman lost the heavyweight championship of the world in 1974 and went into a shell that sent him soul searching. In 1977 he became a Christian, gave his life to Christ and emerged a man with a purpose. He boxed to raise money to help his church and youth center and to have a way to talk to wayward young men. He boxed with a purpose until at age 45 he became the oldest man ever to win the heavyweight title.

When we are driven by a godly sense of purpose there is no end to what can be done.

It is extremely easy to defeat any person who has lost his sense of purpose.

Without a sense of purpose we do stupid things, live recklessly and squander our resources. Without a sense of purpose our destiny eludes us.

If you want to keep a good man down; then steal his sense of purpose and he'll stay down every time.

A Good Man Gets Up

Finally, Brothers and sisters, we must consider that the resurrection proves without a doubt that you can't keep a good man down.

There is no doubt that Jesus was a good man. Beyond that, he was the son of the living God.

The record bears witness that Jesus was not only a good man but he was a man who came with a divinely inspired principle, passion and purpose.

The world tried its best but they could not take away his principle, passion or sense of divine purpose.

Judas thought that his betrayal would be the end of the crusade; unfortunately he didn't live long enough to find out that, you can't keep a good man down!

The Scribes and Pharisees thought their judgment based on lying witnesses and false testimonies would put an end to Jesus of Nazareth, but they soon learned that, you can't keep a good man down!

Pontius Pilate thought he could wash away blame for the death of the Judean king, but he soon found out that even the power of a Roman procurator, can't keep a good man down.

These men had to learn what every true child of God already knows; when God is with you; you can't keep a good man down!

Every time the world stabs you in the back and betrays you, think about the events of Calvary and say to yourself; "I won't be dissuaded because you can't keep a good man down!"

Every time the world falsely accuses you and puts your name on the highways of life; remember the events of Calvary and say to yourself, "I won't give up because, you can't keep a good man down!"

The world can't keep you down because you serve a living God.

The world can't keep you down because there is no:

—Battle the Lord cannot win;

—Burden the Lord cannot lift;

—Loneliness that the Lord cannot comfort;

—Promise the Lord cannot keep.

—Dark Cloud the Lord cannot brighten;

—Heartache that the Lord cannot soothe.

I know a good man, who was so good that somebody called him bread in a starving land!

So good, that somebody called him a bridge over troubling water!

So good, that somebody called him a doctor in the sick room!

So good, that somebody called a lawyer in our courtroom!

So good, that he picked up an old rugged cross and died out on Calvary!

Somebody got worried, so they put a rock in front of his tomb, to keep him down!

Somebody got worried, so they put a seal on the rock, to keep him down!

Somebody was still worried so they put soldiers to watch the seal on the rock that blocked the tomb, so they could keep him down!

But early Sunday morning, the world found out that you can't keep a good man down!

Early Sunday morning he arose, with all power in his hands!

Ushers Standing On Holy Ground

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 19, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "And the Captain of the Lord's Host said unto Joshua, loose thy shoe from off they foot; for the place whereon thou standest is holy. And Joshua did so. Joshua 5:15

Introduction

Do you get the feeling that people come to church today without any respect? There was a time when believers, especially African American believers, had a great deal of respect for the church building. We were careful about what we said, where we walked, where we sat and what was done on church grounds. Somehow it was respected as Holy.

One of the main functions of ushers is to help create an atmosphere of holiness in the church edifice. The ushers insure a sense of order and continuity that is essential for the smooth flow of a worship service and for the spirit to fill our hearts.

Ushers know what to let in a worship service and to what to keep out. Ushers know the art of keeping soiled shoes outside.

Our practices today are similar to the practices of biblical times with respect to the wearing of shoes. In Biblical times, it was expected that persons would take off their shoes when entering a neighbor's home, or a place of worship. Often the feet of the guest were washed by the host or his servant. Jesus used the practice to show Christians the humility needed for service in the kingdom.

When Jews sealed a contract, they took off their shoes and exchanged them to seal the deal. When a marriage was consummated, shoes were exchanged and when a man wanted to divorce his wife the law required only that he put it in writing and sit her shoes outside of his tent.

Moses found that he could not approach God wearing his shoes and God told him to take off his shoes because he stood on Holy Ground.

As Christians, we have come to realize that when we come to worship we are Standing on Holy Ground. We cannot bring soiled spirits before God. We must be committed because we are taking on a Holy work. We are receiving a Holy commission requires a humbleness of spirit that all should recognize when they come face to face with God.

Exposition

This text finds Joshua as he is told that he is standing on Holy Ground when he stands before the Lord.

The fifth chapter of Joshua finds the Children of Israel on the Canaan side of the Jordan River. The Lord had protected them in the wilderness for 40 years, hand fed them with quail and bread from heaven, and roll by the waters of Jordan for their crossing convenience.

Joshua now stood as the leader of the people. Moses was dead. With the exception of Caleb, all those who left Egypt with them forty years earlier were dead

As Joshua prepared to begin enter the Promised Land he received a warning .. before you take off your shoes, for the ground on which you stand is Holy Ground.

...This ground was promised to Abraham, to Isaac and Jacob.

...This ground is the realization of the Word of God.

...This ground is Holy Ground because you are now standing on the promises of God.

Before you enter on this Holy Ground, you must take off your shoes that represent your old soiled way of life.

This Ground

Those who enter the sanctuary of the Lord are on Holy Ground. Often those who frequent the church edifice regularly forget that it is Holy Ground and reduce it to the same level as a club house, school house or play house. Ushers must gently remind those who come to worship that when they enter the house of the Lord that they are entering Holy Ground. It is our point of contact with the almighty.

This Ground is where we find compassion. Today, many come to worship seeking compassion. They have come from homes filled with despair and dejection, looking for a word of hope. The hungry child and the hopeless man both come into the presence God hoping to see the face of God and to hear his voice. They come to the place because they hope to be in the presence of true compassion, if only for a moment. They come because they have heard that if they can come before the presence of the Lord and bring their burdens he will show them love and compassion.

This Ground is where we find peace and love. This ground is where many come to find peace and love. They have left a world filled with distress and trouble and they seek consolation, peace and security on “Holy Ground.” 1 John 4:16 says, “God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. Those who share meet others at a point when they are most likely to recognize God. Those who enter Holy Ground instantly know that they are in a special place when they sense the feeling of peace and love that emanates from the ushers they meet.

When they see a smiling usher they know they have entered a special place.

When they see a compassionate usher, they know they have entered a special ground.

When they see a loving usher, they are relaxed and comfortable because they sense they will find the peace of God on Holy Ground.

This Ground is where many come to find Joy. The world has taken away the happiness of many people. They see sadness on the television; the read about sadness in the newspaper and they hear of sadness on the radio. There are many who come to worship so that they can feel the Joy of the Lord.

On Holy Ground we stand at the point of Joy.

There is no greater evidence that God is alive than at the point of joy!

At the point of Joy, God shows himself in victory!

At the point of Joy, God reveals himself as the provider!

At the point of Joy, God introduces himself as the sustainer! Psalm 30:5 "..weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

At the point of Joy, God is realized as a forgiving presence. Psalm 51:12 " Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit."

Thus, every usher has the responsibility to help believers to experience the joy of the Lord.

Their own testimony should be, this joy I have, the world didn't give it and the world can't take it away!

Ushers Too Must Stand On Holy Ground

Finally, brothers and sisters, there are many ushers who spend time insuring that others know about the Holy Ground on which they stand without realizing that each usher stands on Holy Ground too.

There are too many ushers in the church who treat their service on the usher board more seriously than they treat their loyalty to the Church itself.

There are many who will pay their usher board assessments and fees but will not pay God his tithes and offerings.

There are many who will faithfully show up for their station on the usher board but will skip bible study, Sunday school or other related activities of the church.

There are many who will frown on unruly persons in the worship then talk all the way through the worship with other ushers.

Ushers too must remember that they have to take off the worldly shoes when they come before God because they are on Holy Ground.

More than that, we must not bring our old sinful ways before God, because we are on Holy Ground.

If our shoes represent what we need to take off and leave behind then there are a few pairs of shoes we need to take off.

DRESS SHOES: Look good and shine well but have little utilitarian purposes. Some come to the church wearing their spiritual dress shoes, looking good but doing nothing. Take off your dress shoes before you enter Holy Ground.

PENNY LOAFERS: Are inexpensive and marked by a distinctive penny that is placed in their tongue. There are some who come to church with a miserly attitude. They want to attend the services and the full rights of membership but they don't want to pay a single penny for the furtherance of the Lord's program. Take off your penny loafers before you enter Holy Ground.

TAP SHOES: Make a lot of noise. There are some who come to the church and once they are there they want to make a lot of noise, create a lot of commotion and interrupt the free flow of the spirit. Take off your tap shoes before you enter Holy Ground.

SLIPPERS: Are worn at home out of the sight of the public, mainly for slipping and sliding around the house. There are some who come to church hoping to slip and slid in the world outside of the view of the Lord. Take off your slippers before you enter Holy Ground.

BROGANS: Are hard, tough and hard shoes. If a person steps on your foot wearing brogans he'll hurt your feet. There are many who come to church wearing brogans, intending to walk on everybody and step on everyone else. Take off your brogans when you enter the House of God.

Standing on Holy Ground, we praise the Lord and lift him up!

Standing on Holy Ground, our souls can magnify the Lord!

How can a soul magnify the Lord?

When a soul magnifies the Lord it tells the left hand to meet the right and clap in praise of God!

When a soul magnifies the Lord, it tells the tongue, the lips and the voice box to join together and lift him up!

When a soul magnifies God it tells the left foot and right foot together in a mighty cadence that does the work of God!

Standing on Holy Ground the song writer declared "then sings my soul, my savior God to thee. How great thou art! How great thou art!"

Standing on Holy Ground we magnify the Lord because he loved the world enough to send his only begotten son into it!

Standing on Holy Ground we can see him 2000 years ago stretched out on Calvary

Standing on Holy Ground we can see Jesus

Mary's Baby! The Rock of My Salvation

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, the Fountain of my joy!

Died on an old rugged cross!

My soul magnifies the Lord because Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

No. 9202-Family

Family Secrets

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 30, 2006

SCRIPTURE: For there is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested; neither was any thing kept secret, but that it should come abroad. If any man have ears to hear, let him hear. Mark 4:22-23

Introduction

Does your family have any secrets? Nearly every family has a secret or two. Some family secrets have been kept under wraps for many years and have never been shared. The keepers of many family secrets are its elderly members. Often they have witnessed many events in the life of the family, which are often shared in family circles. The family stories are told at gatherings, reunions and fellowships. Young ears listen as the old timers tell of the hard times, difficulties and triumphs of the family. Often what they do not hear discussed at these family gatherings are the family secrets.

Consider the preacher's wife who loved to help people. She was known to be a sucker for a sad story. One day there was a knock at her front door and man began telling her an ugly secret about a family in the city. "It is a secret that I can only share with you, because you have a good heart" he said. He said very few people knew that the family down the street was headed by a woman who had eight children. Her husband died and left them penniless. They were struggling to get by, and then the woman lost her job. On top of that she became ill and her children are starving. Now, to make matters worse they are about to be evicted from their home because they are two months behind on their $600 rent. It's a well kept secret, but they are going to be put on the street, in the cold, unless someone pays their $1200 back rent. Stricken with compassion the minister's wife said, "That's so sad." Both she and the visitor wiped tears from their eyes. As she reached for her checkbook she asked a question, "May I ask, who are you?" The man broke down in tears and bawled his answer, "I'm her landlord."

What kind of secrets do families keep quite? Things that would embarrass the family remain secrets forever, locked in the memories of those who would rather let it die with time. Dark family secrets often involve incest, theft, adultery, or even marriages between close family members. Other family secrets include abortion, homosexuality and anything else that family members consider to horrible to even talk about. The ugly secrets are rarely talked about in family circles, but they are whispered regularly by everyone outside of the family, who all seem to know family secrets.

In the South family secrets are just that, family secrets. Everyone helps us keep family secrets by never mentioning them in public. William Faulkner, one of nation's great writers, often used the idea of "secrets" in his novels. One such Faulkner story was "A Rose for Emily." Faulkner wrote about a woman who poisoned her love and kept his body in the attic so he would not leave her. The irony of the situation is that everyone one in the town knew her secret and helped her keep it from outsiders.

The bible is filled with family secrets too. Children have not learned what to keep secret so they ask questions. Can you imagine the questions that Jacob's children must have asked, "Daddy, is it true that you married my aunt and my mother too?" David's grandchildren probably asked, "Is it true that grandfather had an affair with Bathsheba and had her husband killed?" Sssssh. It's a secret "Is it true that uncle Absalom killed uncle Amnon from raping aunt Tamor?" Sssh "Is it true that when grandpa Moses was prince of Egypt that he married a Black woman from Africa?" Sssh. It's a secret.

While there are dark family secrets that are kept hidden, there are other family secrets that are meant to be discovered. These are the special keys to its survival, strength, growth and tenacity over the years. These family secrets are passed on from one generation to another. They are the secret recipes of life that have been passed from one generation to the next, with pride and faith.

The best secret of a Christian family, is not really a secret at all. It is the reason that the family seems to stand strong in face of adversity, grow instead of wither, increase instead of decrease. That secret is the family's faith in, obedience and dependence upon God. It has been the secret that has carried families through difficult times and tough days.

One of the best kept family secrets is that the strong man the world sees everyday, prays regularly to God for strength.

The mother who appears to know the answer to every problem, has a secret source of her wisdom; she talks to God regularly.

The family that seems to stand invincible to outside attacks, secretly prays hard and leans heavily upon the power of God to sustain it against enemies.

Jesus is the secret of our smile in the midst of trouble, courage in the face of threatening situations and power in the face of weakness.

As Christians, we rejoice in the knowledge the God is always by our side. His presence is our lives his guiding hand, is the secret to our salvation and our hope.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he reveals that secret truths about the kingdom of God must be shared with others.

The kingdom of God was a great mystery for many years. Although it had been conceived from the beginning it had been kept secret for thousands of years. In Matthew 13:35 Jesus told his disciples that he would reveal to them a secret about God's plan of separating the good and the bad. He said this plan was old, but he would tell it. "I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundations of the world."

Jesus encouraged his disciples to view the kingdom of God as a lighted city that sits on a hill that should not be hidden. Each individual is encouraged not to keep God's work in their lives secret but to let their lights shine. In Luke 11:33 Jesus said no man lights a candle, then puts it under a bushel to hide it, but puts it on a candlestick where it can be seen. That is what he wants believers to do, tell the secret of their faith and the kingdom of God to others.

Whether we tell it or not, Jesus said in our text, it will come out one day. It cannot be kept secret. Anything that is hidden will one day be revealed.

Believers are encouraged not to keep their relationship with Christ a secret but to tell it everywhere they go.

Secrets to Strong Families

How is that some families seem to be strong and others seem weak? How is that while some families seem to be happy and thriving that others are angry, sad or falling apart? What is their family secret? Strong Christian families share similar traits; among these are:

LEARN TO LIVE TOGETHER: Learning to live together is a secret that many successful families share. When several individuals live in small spaces, called our houses, it's possible for everyone to get on everyone else's nerves. We have to agree on how it will be done. Strong families have developed understandings about every aspect of family life: How long the phone will be used, who uses the bathroom first, respecting individual privacy, who leads and how, who decides disputes, etc. Families that are strong understand the role of each member of the family but relate to each other in a spirit of love, forgiveness and support that makes living together as a family an enjoyable experience.

COMMUNICATE: Strong families talk to each other. There is a difference between talking "to" each other and talkgin "at" each other. Find a family that is strong and you will also find a family where its members talk to each other. A vital part to communicating is "listening" to how other members of the family feel. Jesus often talked to his disciples, but there were times when he wanted to know what they though of him? Strong families devise methods to measure themselves in the context of the family. Often this is done through family meetings or dinner table small talk. True communication comes when each family feels that they have permission to speak freely. Once we know how we are perceived, those who want to do better will adjust accordingly.

LEADERSHIP: Strong families are marked by the presence of a clear chain of command in the family context. There is no doubt as to the leader of the family. The leader of the strong family leads by demonstrating love for the family, and faith in God. Wives respect husbands as leaders of families when husbands love them like Christ loved the church. If wives feel that the family is not being loved or neglected in important ways, the husband's leadership decisions are challenged and trouble brews. Women who lead families must love their families in a similar way. When this done, their role as family leader is clearly defined. If they leader doesn't take care of the business at home, leadership is challenged and conflicts result.

HAVE FUN: Strong families have fun "together." Families do things that every family member describes as "fun" enjoy each other's company. Family vacations, outings, camps, retreats or getaways are essential to building the "fun" factor into families. One of the secrets to happy families is that they have "fun" together. If your family is filled with so many "issues" that it can't have "fun" then everyone is waiting to get out as fast as they can. When you are the "Happy fun family" family members can't wait to get home and never want to leave. Unfortunately, there are a large number of families today in which some members of the family have concluded that their family is "no fun" and they look for excuses to stay away as long as they can. If your family never does any "fun" things, you can make it stronger if you plan a few, every now and then.

SUPPORT EACH OTHER: Another secret of strong families is that they support each other. A child is on the football team, look for the strong family in the stands. A father is climbing the ladder in the company, look for the strong family to back him up. A mother is trying to go to school at night to achieve a goal, watch the strong family drop in behind her to help make it possible with as few problems as possible. There are some families that do not view the interests or dreams individual members as important. Our families become strong which each member embraces and supports other family members as they pursue their dreams. That support may be as small as words of encouragement, our presence at a ceremony or lending financial support. Even in tough times, strong families stick together, share hardships, expenses, burdens and difficulties.

The Big Secret

Finally, the big secret of Christian families is that they demonstrate a collective faith in God by worshipping and serving God together.

There is an old saying that the family that "Prays together, stays together." The word "together" goes beyond just praying at the same time, but it means that they are praying for the same thing.

Families that are trusting God together for the same common purpose find strength in each other and stay together.

Families that are asking God together for the same common good, cling together.

The big secret of strong families is that they love each other with a love that overlooks weakness, faults and shortcomings and sees only the person being loved.

Families are strong when every member of the family feels loved, appreciated, and respected, despite their differences or idiosyncrasies.

Those who want to know the secrets of a believing family should know that strong families have an unfaltering trust in the power of God.

Strong families place their hope the Lord. That's why the song write declares, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand."

Some think the secret of strong families is money or education, but if you talk to the members of a strong family they will tell you it was nothing but the Grace of God.

Although education helped, it wasn't education that opened doors that were closed in our faces.

Although it helped to have a dollar in our pockets, it wasn't a pocketful of Benjamins that made a way out of no way.

There is much to be said about hard working families, but even hard work is totally responsible for the survival of our families; it was nothing but the grace of almighty God.

There are many dark secrets in every family but there is a God who knows all of our dark secrets. David, in Psalms 139:1 said, "O LORD, thou hast searched me, and known me. Thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising, thou understandest my thought afar off."

God knows are dark secrets, but there is another secret that strong families have learned. That God can take the secrets of our dark past, wash them in his blood and make them white as snow.

No wonder the song writer asked, "What can wash me white as snow, nothing but the blood of Jesus. What can make me whole again? Nothing but the blood of Jesus!"

What is the secret of standing when everyone else is falling? It's nothing but the blood of Jesus!

What is the secret to having when everyone is losing? It's nothing but the blood of Jesus!

What is the secret of getting up when everyone around you is falling down? It's nothing but the blood of Jesus!

Our families are able to stand with hope in times of trouble because we know God is able. That's why the song write wrote, "It is no secret what God can do. What he's done for others he do for you."

Our families are able to withstand the storms of life because we know that we serve a God that is able to speak to the winds and say "peace be still."

Every believing family member knows the real secret, it's in the blood of Jesus.

It's the power of the blood that makes sing with new meaning, "I know it was the blood. I know it was the blood that saved me."

One day when I was lost, He died up on a cross! I know it was the blood that saved me!

But an even bigger secret is that early Sunday morning he arose from the dead and is still blessing our families everyday!

Hold What You've Got

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 2006

SCRIPTURE: Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord. 1 Corinthians 15:58; Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Ephesians 6:10

Introduction

Have you ever seen people who got it and lost it because they could not hold on to it? There are many people in the world today who have spent their entire lives striving to attain, only to lose what they have attained because of their inability to hold on.

John Milton in 1667 in his famous "Paradise Lost" wrote about the glory of Adam and Eve in the Garden, what they had acquired and how they lost their heavenly state.

Douglas Andrew in his book, "Missed Fortune 101" writes about people who gained fortunes quickly in life only to lose them. They had it but lost it because they could not hold on to it.

We have seen the legacy of many African-American athletes and heroes who rose to power, prominence and fortune but ended up poor and nearly anonymous. They had it but lost it because they could not hold on to it.

There have been many who sought after love, and attained ecstasy, but for one reason or another lost it. They had it but lost it because they could not hold it.

The same is true of those who spend their entire lives striving to acquire the power of God, then for one reason or another lose it because they could not hold on to what they acquired.

It is a tragedy at the least to have experienced the power of God in our lives then lost that power for one reason or another. Therefore our focus in life should include how to attain God's power but also how to maintain it once we have acquired it.

In the late 1960's a famous singer named "Joe Tex" produced a series of records including "Tramp" and "Papa was too." Included among his hits was an album entitled "Hold on to what you got." For Tex, it meant maintaining his present course, always in the shadows of James Brown, but for us today, that title means something else. It means holding on to the power of God within us.

As Christians, we are encouraged to be strong in the Lord and to remain unmovable in our faith and service in God's kingdom. This dedication and faith is possible if every believer understands that is important to "Hold what you got!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul giving advice to the Corinthians that encourages them to hold on to their faith, commitment and newly released power of God.

Paul uses several words to describe how the Corinthians should "hold on." These words are: steadfast, unmovable, abounding, work, and labor. Together they explain his formula for keeping a firm grip on their faith in the power of God.

"STEADFAST." This word is "hedraios" (hed-rah'-yos), derived from a word meaning "to sit", it means: "sitting, sedentary, or by extension: firm, immovable, and steadfast." In this context, the word means to take a strong stance so as not to be knocked off our feet. To hold on to the power of God each believer must position himself in life to stand strong against the attempts of Satan to dissuade us from the Christian service.

"UNMOVEABLE." This is "ametakinetos"(am-et-ak-in'-ay-tos), and it means: "not to be moved from its place, to be unmoved"; metaphorically: "to be firmly persistent." To be unmoved means that nothing can move us out of the job we have been assigned by the Lord. The believer who is unmovable is not one that cannot change, but one who cannot be persuaded to quit or throw in the towel in an area of service.

"ALWAYS ABOUNDING." This is the word "perisseuo" (per- is-syoo'-o), and literally means "to exceed a fixed number of measure, to be left over and above a certain number or measure". Furthermore, it means "to overflow, or to be abundantly furnished with, to have in abundance, to be in affluence, to excel or exceed." Its message is that we should strive to excel in the Lord's work. Whatever we do for God should be our best. We should give him 100 percent. We should not be satisfied with just getting by, but we should strive to abound.

WORK comes from "ergon" (er'-gon), and means "business, or employment, that which any one is occupied". Or it may refer to what is done, "a product, any thing accomplished by hand, art, industry, or mind." It's an act, or a deed. Our work for the Lord is our "job for God". Something we actually do that is required by His call, we are His servants. It has a description, it requires time and "energy", a word coming over directly from the Greek.

LABOR is the word "kopos" (kop'-os); it is found 20 times in the NT, and refers not so much to the hard work, but the weariness which accompanies it. In its most primitive form, the word means "a beating", like that administered by the task masters. Consequently, it means "trouble", or "intense labor united with trouble and toil." In I Thessalonians 1:3, it is the word used in the expression, "labor of love".

Both our labor and work should be an expression of our love for God; performed cheerfully and with dedication.

Writing to the believers in Ephesus, Paul encouraged them to "be strong" in the faith. To be strong in the power and might of the Lord meant that believers should demonstrate the power of God through their unwillingness to yield to temptation and the eagerness to unleash the power and might of God as the work in various fields of ministry.

Use the Power to Keep the Power

In Acts 1 we see believers receiving the power of God. This outpouring of the Holy Spirit enabled them to do miraculous works and speak languages they had not studied, for the purpose of demonstrating that they were truly recipients of the apostolic commission to "go ye therefore."

In a similar sense, believers today have come to realize the power of God in our lives. 1 Corinthians 13 seems to suggest that the apostolic gifts of Acts 1 will "fade" and "cease" one day, but the power of God will not. Love, is the greatest power we have; it will now lose its power. God is love.

We must strive to hold on to the power of God in our lives. Paul's letter to the Corinthians gives us special insight into how this is done.

To hold on to the power, we must be steadfast and unmovable. We must not be swayed by every new religious movement that comes along. We must not let circumstances or events dissuade us from kingdom building. There are too many believers that are church hoppers. They jump from church to church, religion to religion and faith to faith. In the process they become confused and misdirected and lose the exercise of their power in the Lord.

To hold on to the power, we must busy ourselves with the Lord's work. We must use the various gifts that we have in his service. Singers, musicians, counselors, organizers, youth workers, teachers and a long list of others with powerful special gifts should use them in the service. A member who joins the body of Christ and sits on his/her good intentions is of little service to the kingdom. There is no great reward for being a "bench" member. The reward is in our service. The reward is for how we use the power.

We should remember that either we "use it" or "lose it."

To keep the power, we must use the power. We must work until our day is done. Ironically it is using the power that helps us keep the power. A person who buys a brand new automobile but never drives it will soon find that there will be engine problems over time, because it is never driven. A race horse has to keep running to keep its speed. A boxer has to keep fighting to keep his skill. Likewise, a believer must keep using the power of God in work and labor to keep the power flowing.

That's what the song writers had in mind when they wrote, "I'm going to work until my day is done. I'm going work until the setting of my sun. I'll cease from sorrow. There'll be no tomorrow. I'm going to work until my day is done."

We Must Hold on

We must resolve in our hearts to hold on to what we have. When we hold on we earn the favor of God on our lives. We resist any temptations or difficulties that would entice us to let go.

A traveler approached three men he passed on the road and gave them each a small key and made each one promise him that regardless of what they met along the road they would take the key and hold onto it until the morning.

As the night passed, they came upon a forest fire that raged ferociously. Consumed by the heat one of the men turned around, the other two continued.

However, they came upon a great storm which bent the trees and nearly buried both men in torrents of water. The second man turned back. However the third man clinched his fist around the key and kept going.

In the morning he met another traveler who asked him, "Have you been through the fire? Have you been through the storm? Do you still have the key?" To these the man answered yes.

The traveler responded, "you have earned the reward of Gold that this box contains. But tell me, what made you go on?" The man answered, "I've been through the storm and the rain. I've been through fire, but I had to keep going because I promised that I would hold out till the morning comes!"

We must hold on till the morning comes!

Hold to his hand, God's unchanging, unmovable, all powerful hand!

We must hold on to what we have. We must hold on to the power of God.

Keep the Power Flowing

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must keep the power flowing.

To keep the power of God flowing in our lives we only need to look at how electrical power flows into our homes. God's power works the same way.

WE MUST BE CONNECTED. If you want the power of God to keep flowing you must be connected to the power source. No matter how elegant or expensive the home or where it is located, if we look close we'll see a set of wires somewhere connecting it to a power source; either hanging from poles or buried underground; there has to be a connection.

If you want to keep the power of God, you must be connected!

You must connect with your local church!

You must connect through bible study!

You must connect through public worship!

You must connect through service!

DON'T BLOW A FUSE. If you want the power of God to flow, you must not become so overloaded with the cares of the world that you blow a fuse or trip a breaker. Fuses blow when the line is overloaded.

If you want to keep the power flowing, take time to be with God. Take time to pray and praise him for his wonderful works.

When the cares of the world overtake, "Take your burdens to the Lord and leave it there."

YOU MUST PAY THE BILL. There are many who are connected to the power source but they still have no power. They attend church, study and pray, but they still have no power. Why? One of the may reasons for power disconnections in our homes is that we failed to pay the bill. If you don't pay the bill, the power is connected.

There are many believers who live great lives but they rob God in tithes and offerings. They do not tithe, they pay something on it. If you pay on your utility bill but never pay what is required, pretty soon there is a disconnect notice.

To keep the power flowing we must keep our vows to God, pay our tithes and give our offerings cheerfully.

We are not paying for salvation because salvation is free. When we pay our tithes and give offerings we demonstrate obedience and love and earn God's favor, anointing and extraordinary power.

She held on to the Power

In closing, I want to remind the saints of God that there is a blessing in holding on to the power of God.

I'm reminded of the old lady who became lost in a snow storm. As the snow began to build higher, the townspeople began to worry when she was reported missing. The old lady was too weak to move the snow that was covering her. She had a little flashlight she kept shining hoping someone would see the light. The snow covered her completely in the night. However, the townspeople searched through the night. Just before daybreak a townsman spotted yelled to the group that he found the old lady.

After they dug her from the snow and warmed her by a fire, the rescuer said, "We never would have found you if you had not thought to hold on to your flashlight. Tell me how did the batteries last so long?" The old woman said, her batteries went out an hour after she was lost. "But that couldn't be," said the volunteer "We saw the light shining just over where we found you." The old lady said, "That flashlight kept shining by the glory of the Lord. I wasn't holding on to the flashlight son, I was holding on to the power of the Lord!"

Every saint should hold on to the power of the Lord!

Power of God can make the weak strong and give rest to the weary!

The power of God can lift the fallen and raise up a bowed down head!

The power of God can bring victory to the defeated and joy to the sad

This power is in the blood of the crucified lamb.

This power is from Jesus, the son of the living God, who died out on Calvary!

He stayed in a borrowed tomb for three days and nights, but early Sunday morning he arose from the grave all power in his hands!

The power of his resurrection.

The power of his blood never diminishes.

It reaches to the highest mountain! It reaches to the lowest valley!

The blood that gives me strength, from day to day, it will never lose its power!

Is This the Life I Ordered?

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 7, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. 6 In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths." Proverbs 3:5-6

Introduction

Have you ever ordered a menu item at a restaurant only to learn later that what you received wasn't what you ordered? Where were you? Were you at a cafeteria, fancy restaurant standing in line at Mickey D's? It doesn't matter where you were when it happened, it's the results that troubled you the most. You didn't get what you ordered!

It's really frustrating to pull up to the drive through and order your Whopper or Big Mac by the numbers only to learn that the cashier didn't get it right. There are a few things that make your order distasteful so you request that they hold those items. Were you the one who asked for no salt and for your burger to be cut in half? Did you specifically ask for Pepsi and not Coke?

If you are like most people, there have been a few times when you received everything you didn't want and none of what you really ordered. That's when you mash the button or peck on the window and say, "Excuse me, but this is not what I ordered!"

It's the same way in a restaurant. The steak you ordered was to be cooked well but when it was delivered it was rare with the blood oozing out. Didn't you ask for brown gravy instead of white gravy? They are both white, but there is a big difference between Ranch dressing and blue cheese. That's when you tell your waitress, "This is not what I ordered."

Then there are the times that a friend talks you into ordering unfamiliar ethnic foods from a menu with no pictures. What is stuffed Woo Chang anyway? You make your entry in the social circles of the elite and notice that there is no fried chicken, rice and gravy or French fries on the menu. What do you do? You listen to the order of the person sitting at the next table and order a serving of Caviar and Escargot. When the waiter brings you an order of fish eggs and snails, you choke and ask, "Is this what I ordered?"

Sometimes it's that way in life. We don't often get the life that we order. Sometimes we get what we ordered and don't like what we received.

In our youth, we were very specific about what we wanted, but it seems somehow that we didn't get the right order. Someone else got our order and we got theirs! We ordered the big house, not this one! We ordered the mansion, not this one! We ordered the easy life, flying around the world in the first class section of jet planes. We ordered an unlimited checking account and designer clothes that we wear only once and throw them away. We ordered luxury, health and eternal youth! That's what we ordered! Remember?

When we look in the bag of experiences that life has given us we are often discouraged when it turns out that very few of the experiences we asked for ended up in our bag. Now at 25, 45, 65 and 75 we're asking, "Is this what I ordered?"

What happened to that fine sexy model I said I was going to marry? What happened to that macho super man with rippling muscles and washboard abs that I said I would sweep me off my feet?

Did somebody else get my order?

Unfortunately, life is not like Burger King where you can, "Have it your way!" We don't have the option of going through heaven's drive thru window and ordering the kind of life we will live on earth. We can't pick what color we will be, whether we will be tall or short or whether we will live life trouble free. We don't get to choose from the menu: Life #1, #2 or #3 with an extra side order of the things we like best. It just doesn't work that way.

As Christians, we have come to learn more about God. We have learned that life is not like ordering a value meal. No matter what we order it is sure to come up short. Something will be missing. Those who know the Lord have learned to let God decide what's best for us. As we mature spiritually we don't ask, "What happened to the life I ordered?" Now we say order my steps so I can live the life you have given me according to your will.

Exposition

This text focuses on a Proverb of Solomon that points to the importance of allowing God to direct our lives instead of self direction.

Solomon was the third King of Israel. He is respected as a man who possessed great wisdom. Most of his wisdom was given to him by God. However, some of his wisdom was learned in the school of hard knocks.

As a very young man Solomon became King of Israel. He recognized the enormity of his position and prayed for guidance. One night, while he slept, God appeared to him in a dream and gave him the opportunity to wish for anything he wanted as King. God promised to give him whatever he wanted. It was a chance to pick life the way he wanted, down to smallest detail. Riches, fame, possessions and anything else were available to him if he wanted. In 1 Kings 3:9 he decided that it would be best to have an understanding heart and let God lead him.

Thus, much of the Book of Proverbs is a collection of the wisdom of Solomon. It reflects what he had been given by God through revelation and what he learned through the experiences of his life.

Proverbs chapter 3 refers to one of the great truths about life that Solomon learned and reduced to a mere proverb, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him and he will direct your path."

When we think on it now, what it says is simple. Let God set your course rather than picking your own direction. Whenever we are to make choices about what to do in life, consult him, and he will direct us to the path that we should take.

Have it Your Way

What if we could really have our way? Suppose we could get on our knees at night and hear God say to us, what he said to Solomon, "have it your way!" Order up a life any way you choose what would be the result?

Most of us would order a "Whopper" of a life. It would be a McLife. But Whoppers and Big Macs are big but they also come packaged with everything on them. Most of us couldn't enjoy having a whopper of a McLife, because there are too many things on it that we don't like.

If we could order a McLife for ourselves we would delete anything that has an element of bitterness to it. That means we would:

HOLD THE MAYONAISE: Mayonnaise is made mostly of egg yolks, and lots of oil. But it's made mostly of lemon juice, oil and powered onions. Lemon juice is bitter. Onions are mostly bitter. Because the eggs, mayonnaise can go bad if left unrefrigerated. We want nothing that can possibly go bad, plus it is a little bitter too, so we say, "Hold the Mayonnaise."

HOLD THE MUSTARD: Mustard is made by grinding tiny mustard seeds into a powder and mixing it with spices. Jesus said if we could move mountains if we had the faith of one mustard seed. So you would think that the life we order would contain a life live by faith. Not so, because mustard is made by mixing the mustard seeds with vinegar and spices. That means living by faith could be a little tough to swallow, so way say, "Hold the Mustard."

HOLD THE PICKLES: A pickle is actually a cucumber. Numbers 11:5 says the Children of Israel loved cucumbers. They often ate them raw. However a pickle is cucumber that has been through a whole lot. Pickles have endured, vinegar, salt, pickling lime and much more. In life, when we lose our health, we are in a pickle. When we lose our money, we are in a pickle. If we lose our job, we are in pickle. When we choose the life we want for ourselves, we say, "Hold the Pickles."

HOLD THE ONIONS: Onions add taste to recipes but when you cut into an onion it releases substances that form "sulfenic acids" that turn into a gas. These gases can mix with the water in your eyes and turn into a mild form of sulfuric acid. To get rid of the acids that could harm your eyes your brain sends out a signal that makes you cry, but the crying is good for eyes because without the tears the acid would burn your eyes. If you live in this life, you will have to cry sometime. You try your best to prepare something that would be good but the sulfuric acids of worry, pain, and anxiety get in our eyes and we have to cry. Many see life that has crying and tears and they say, “Hold the Onions!”

Hold the TOMATOES because they are slippery and slimy. They look too ugly.

Hold the KETCHUP too because it’s got tomatoes in it and it looks like blood.

Hold the LETTUCE because it’s green and raw and I need nothing in my life that is raw!

When we remove everything that we don’t like about life, all that is left is meat and bread. When Israel wandered in the wilderness they ate quail meat and bread for years. They complained because they wanted cucumbers, onions, garlic and all of the other things they missed.

There are even some who don’t like the meat because they are vegetarians, so they eat veggie burgers.

Without all of the extras and the meat, there is nothing left but the bread.

Then we hear the word of God declare, “Man shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceeds out of the mouth of God.”

That’s probably why God does not allow us to “have it our way.” It takes some of the things we don’t like about life to make it worth living and to give it substance.

Let God Direct Your Path

Finally, we should consider the wisdom of Solomon about our lives: Lean not to our own understanding, ask God and he will direct our paths.

If we ask God to prepare a path for our lives, be assured that God will not give us a plain life. It may have a little of everything.

God will give us lot of sunshine and often a little rain.

He’ll give us a little happiness and sometimes a little pain.

He’ll give us an hour to smile in and a few minutes of trouble.

He gives us a bed to sleep in and the children to make the joys double.

When God give you a mountain, remember there’s a valley around the way.

If God orders us moment of sadness, he’ll throw on a happy day.

We wouldn’t like it if the son always shined and night never came.

If we were always victorious and won every game.

The life that God give is not from Burger King.

The life that God gives is from the King of Kings.

There is a difference between Burger King and the King of Kings.

There is a difference between Mickey D’s and the master of the seas.

At the drive through window at Burger King, if you ask and pay for it, you can get your order super sized.

When your order is super sized you get a few more fries and they double the size of the drink. That’s the way its done and Mickey D’s and Burger King.

But I heard Jesus say, “I’ve come that they may have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.”

That means that an obedient saint whose life is ordered in the will of God does not have to ask or pay anything extra, his life is automatically “super sized.”

God told Malachi that for those who are obedient that he would open up the windows of heaven and pour out blessings more than believer could receive.

That means that if we are obedient, you don't have to ask for it, because God will automatically super size your blessing.

Because Samson was obedient God super sized his strength, and he became the strongest man in the world!

Because Solomon was obedient God super sized his wisdom and he was the wisest man f all times.

Because Abraham was obedient God super sized his faith and he lived his life in bosom of the Lord.

Because Methuselah was obedient God super sized his life to 969 years.

Because David was obedient God super sized his humility and became known as a man after God's own heart.

Because Hezekiah was obedient God super sized his life and gave him 15 more years.

God super sized our blessing too.

He's super sized the joy of our families.

He's super sized our health and strength.

He's super sized our business and finances.

He's super sized the strength of marriages.

But that's not the best part.

A Burger King you have to pay extra but when a saint goes to the window of heaven he hears the word, "You can't pay for your blessing because Jesus paid it all."

Jesus, the Lord of Lords!

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, the Bright and Morning Star!

Died out on Calvary; but Early Sunday morning …

The Mystery of Motherhood

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 14, 2006

SCRIPTURE:But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory: Which none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. 9 But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. 1 Corinthians 2:7-9

Introduction

Have you ever considered what makes mothers tick? There is a certain mystery that surrounds motherhood that has left every succeeding generation in awe. Despite our best efforts it has always seemed to elude our understanding. The best scholars have tried to figure it out as well as theologians and philosophers but none have been successful in their efforts to unravel what can only be called the mystery of motherhood.

We all like mysteries and we enjoy trying to figure them out, but we haven't been able to figure out the mystery of motherhood.

For us a mystery is something confusing, complicated, unknown, or even unknowable. If we cannot fathom something, we say, "It's a mystery to me."

In the mystery of motherhood we know what mother did but we have never been able to figure out how she has been able to do it. Even today as we watch mothers we know what they do but we still have not figured out how they do it.

It's a mystery how a mother can kiss a cut finger and the hurt seems to go away.

It's a mystery how advice that a mother gives always seems to come true.

It's a mystery how mothers seem to have eyes behind their heads to discover even those things that we thought were hidden and out of sight.

The real mystery of motherhood is the realization that somehow God has given them a special sensitivity that makes them hear things, see things, and feel things in ways that are mysterious to the rest of us.

There are many things about mothers that will remain mysteries. These are things that we probably never will understand.

We will probably never understand why Hannah asked God for a child and promised to give that child back if she could just have the privilege of being blessed in childbirth. It's a mystery.

We will probably never understand why Jocebed would take her newborn son and put him in a basket and set him afloat on the river Nile and risk death by crocodiles rather than hide him from Pharaoh's soldiers. It's a mystery.

We will probably never understand why the mother who stood before the King would rather give away her child to an undeserving, lying, neighbor than see that child cut in half by King Solomon' sword. It's a mystery.

There are many things about life that remain mysteries to us, but every now and then, God rolls back the curtains and gives us a peek into his works that helps us understand the awesome way he has designed life and those to whom he has entrusted life.

As Christians, we believe that God has given the gift of motherhood to women. In addition to that gift he has also bestowed upon mothers of faith certain mysterious gifts that even mothers themselves have yet to understand. No matter how we try, only godly mothers seem to understand the mysteries of motherhood.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains how God reveals spiritual wisdom to the saints revealing mysteries that have been hidden for centuries.

Paul explained that the mysteries of the faith have baffled the political and religious leaders of the world for centuries. They are unable to understand them because they view divine truths with a carnal eye that cannot understand the ways of God. Colossians 1:26 notes that these mysteries "hath been hid from ages and generations, though now made manifest to the saints."

Even though Jewish biblical scholars studied the Mosaic Laws and great philosophers studied the holy scriptures, they were unable to unlock the meaning of the various types and shadows that were a part of Old Testament tradition. For example, they read about the animal sacrifices but they did not understand that these sacrifices were just a type of the sacrifice to be given by the Lamb of God. But the true meaning is now revealed to the saints.

The wisdom that saints discover helps them in their peculiar role in the kingdom of God. Preachers are allowed to understand and see certain of the mysteries that others cannot see. Prophets like John who was given the Revelation or Daniel who was given the secret of visions was allowed to share other aspects of the mysterious secrets that were ordained by God from the beginning.

Verse 7 indicates that as we unravel the mysteries, what we learn and experience is "to our glory."

What God reveals to his elect, even the great men of the world cannot understand. Verse 8 notes that the princes of the earth and its great men are ignorant of the mysteries in front of them. This is perhaps what Jesus referred to on the cross when he asked his father to "forgive them for they know not what they do." They did not understand the mystery.

The mysteries of God are so immense and profound that mortal mankind cannot even imagine the great things he has in store for those who have faith in him. The wisdom, understanding and ability that God reveals to his saints in their specific area, is above understanding and beyond comprehension. “Eye hath not seen, neither hath it entered into the heart of man” the mysterious things that God has in store for those who love him.

Mysteries

In view of Paul’s letter to the Corinthians, we now understand why mothers seem to be empowered to do more than the ordinary woman. How she is able to do what she does is a mystery that is revealed to motherly saints, but continues to baffle others.

MYSTERY OF THE MULTI-TASKING MOM. Whenever a person does more than one task at a time, it is called multi-tasking. It is a mystery how mothers seem to master the art of multi-tasking, performing a variety of tasks at the same time. In one instance she is an alarm clock; but in another she is a gourmet chef. For some she becomes the crossing guard, the van driver and part time chauffeur. In just a few minutes she instantly transforms into a working mom dashing into the workplace and dashing back home at the end of the day, just in time for cheerleader practice, church rehearsals, spring training and last minute grocery shopping. In between the time, somewhere in the day she finds time to pray, pay bills, fix what’s broken, and think of ways to keep from breaking what’s not broken.

It is a complete mystery how mothers are able to do all of these things and do them without becoming insane. A recent study revealed that if the multi-tasking skills of the average mother were applied to the corporate workplace she would earn a salary of $123,000 a year with benefits. How she is able to do it at home, is a mystery.

THE MYSTERY OF THE DOT.COM MOM. Today’s mother lives in a very difficult time that is much more complex than that of her mother or grandmother. She is what we could call the dot.com Mom. She is the mom of Pop Tart breakfasts, Fast food lunch, and microwave dinners. She is the mom of the quick shower, wash and wear clothes, pampers and throw away paper plates. When she considers her grandmother, it’s a mystery how they survived? Who has the time to wash clothes by hand and hang them on a clothes line? How grandmothers did that is a mystery that can be figured out on the way to the washateria. Who has the time to use cloth diapers and safety pins? How grandmothers were able to do that is a mystery we can unravel as we drop a used pamper in the trash and get a new one from the box. Even as grandmothers look at their granddaughters and shake their heads at the difference in parenting over the generations, they still see the mysterious bond between mother and child that has not diminished even though they eat instant oatmeal, drink powdered milk and drink store bought water out of a bottle. Despite the complexities of our present age, today’s mom still manages the one ingredient that makes mothers unique. They still love. That’s the mystery that never seems to diminish or lose its power.

THE MYSTERY OF MOTHER-CRAFT: Somehow good mothers are able to connect with their children and teach them what can be called “Mother-craft.” It’s how to live and relate to others. This is a mysterious lesson that is learned mostly from mothers. When mothers hug their children, love them and respond to them in love, the children learn to embrace and work well with others. Mothers who laugh and play with their children, teach them to have real fun in their family relationships. It is fun that does not depend upon artificial stimulants for its sustenance.

These qualities are mysteriously molded in the id and reflect themselves in the ego of every child.

It's mysterious how children are affected by what happens to them in their tender years. It's a mysterious relationship between mother and children that impacts children long after they have left home.

It's a mystery we cannot fully understand.

God Moves in Mysterious Ways

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that every mother knows God moves in mysterious ways.

Somehow godly mothers seem to know no matter what the situation, God will make a way.

It's a mystery, we haven't quite figured out how he does it but, long before we ask him, God is already working on the answer to our prayer.

It's a mystery but before mama started to worry about how to pay the light, water, and gas bills, God was already planning to show her how to manage!

It's a mystery, but God is still revealing the secrets of management to mothers who don't have Harvard MBAs. It's a mystery how these mothers have learned to turn a sugar bowl, mattress and handkerchief into their own Savings and Loan Associations, saving for rainy days. It didn't pay any interest, but God supplied the grace!

It's a mystery how God made old country remedies that made you sick to smell them, made you well when applied with the faith of God.

It's a mystery but mama learned that a little Sal hepatica around the neck would drive the fever away.

It's a mystery, but God showed grandmother that in the cold of winter, a table spoon of Castor oil every other day, kept the doctor away!

It's a mystery but we have not quite figured out how a little piece of salt fat meat and the Lord could heal a foot with a splinter.

It's a mystery, how God showed old mothers how to make stylish clothes out of needle and thread.

Even today, it's a mystery how mothers are able to wash a load of clothes, talk on a cell phone, change the channel on a television set while balancing a baby on their laps and refereeing the fights of two others at the same time.

It's a mystery how a mother who only makes $5.15 an hour can travel to the grocery store in a car whose tires are slick as glass, riding on fumes alone because a tank of Gas costs a whole days work; and still come home with enough food to feed a family.

It's a mystery how some mothers feed the children of a dead beat dad who complains that sending $200 a month to take care of his children is more than he can bear.

It's a mystery, but every mother knows that God moves in mysterious ways!

It's a mystery, but God can take weak mother and make her strong!

It's a mystery, but God can take a doubting mother and give her confidence!

It's a mystery, but God can take a single mother and give her the strength of two.

It's a mystery, but God can take a failed mother and give her a chance to succeed!

We don't how he has done it, but there is one thing that we do know that the mother who knows the Lord is able to mystify the world as he does the incredible and achieves the impossible.

If you are amazed at the mystery of motherhood then, I'll show you another mystery!

It's a mystery that the world has never been able to understand. It's the mystery behind the mystery of motherhood.

It's the mystery of the power of an almighty God.

It's a mystery how God can clap his hands and make the thunder roll!

It's a mystery how God can bat his eyes and make the lightning flash!

It's a mystery how God can take a step through the valleys and bulge the mountains up!

It's a mystery how God can pluck off a little light from the sun and spangle the night with the twinkling of the stars!

It's a mystery how God rolled back the waters of the Red Sea and Israel crossed on dry ground.

It's a mystery how Daniel survived a night in the Lion's den without a scratch on his body!

It's a mystery how the Three Hebrew Boys were not burned in the raging fires of the fiery furnace!

But there's a real mystery that happened over 2000 years ago. It's the mystery on the mountain side!

It's the mystery of how a man who could raise the dead and heal the sick would carry a cross up Calvary's hill.

It's the mystery of how a man who had been crucified and lied on could tell his father to "forgive them for they know not what they do!"

It's a mystery how a man could die on a borrowed cross, be wrapped in borrowed clothes, be buried in a borrowed tomb, could arise Early Sunday morning with all power in his hands!

It's not a mystery anymore!

The mystery is solved! His name is Jesus!

He is the power and strength of every good mother!

Searching for The Code

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 2006

SCRIPTURE: "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life and they are they which testify of me." John 5:39

Introduction

Have you heard the news reports about secret codes that have revealed here-to-fore unknown truths about God and the Christian faith? It's hard for any believer to escape the flood of books, movies and television broadcasts that seem to suggest that secrets clues about God's intention for the world have been discovered. Those who write the books and produce the movies earn millions of dollars with their project; but when the dust settles we are still no closer to finding the real truth.

In 1997 Micheal Drosnin shocked the world with his book entitled "The Bible Code." He lined up all of the text in the Hebrew Bible, removed the spaces and devised a computer program that could search out certain words that fell mathematically in order. He claims that the words produced were secret codes about the future.

For thousands of years scholars have poured over the predictions of Nostradamus, claiming that he predicted everything from World Wars to Hitler's rise to the destruction of the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001.

The latest in the secret code genre of books and movies is Dan Brown's book, "The Davinci Code." It has sold over 40 million copies and there is a movie starring Tom Hanks that tells Brown's fictitious tale. Brown contends that the artist Leonardo DaVinci, a member of a secret group pledged to protect a vital church secret, placed hints in his drawings of the "The Last Supper" and the "Mona Lisa." The secret, he claims, is that Jesus was secretly married to Mary Magdalene and she was pregnant at the time of his crucifixion. The child grew and perpetuated a kingly line of successors to Jesus. Brown claims that the Catholic Church ordered the destruction of any books that revealed these secrets, and would not allow any of the thousands of books about Jesus at that time to be included in the Bible if they revealed that secret. To keep it secret, murders were committed, and a variety of atrocities were perpetrated on the world. Wow!

There seems to be a natural curiosity about God's plan for the world. Amazingly, those persons who claim to unlock the secrets of God's plan for the world or other secret codes are never believers; they are always skeptics and non-believers whose efforts to discover secret codes usually result in raising doubts in the minds of believers. The experts themselves rarely become believers as a result of their discovery of secret codes.

What is the response of believers to this rush of books, movies and films that reveal the secret codes? Should we join the millions of believers who protest the writing of such books or the production of films such as the "DaVinci Code?" Should we become overly alarmed? How do we protect ourselves from being fooled by every new secular trend involving our faith?

Protesting is fruitless; it builds publicity and results in increased visibility for code writers. Becoming alarmed to the point of aggressively fighting the free speech rights of others is of no use either.

How do we protect ourselves against being fooled? For the answer let us consider two sheep dogs that were acquired to guard the sheep of a certain shepherd. The shepherd told the sheep dogs to guard the sheep with their lives because there were dangerous wolves in the hills that would destroy simple and powerless sheep. The sheep dogs went to work. One sheep dog prided himself in the fact that he could spot a wolf a mile away. He studied the ways and sounds of wolves. He felt qualified to stand guard over the sheep. The second sheep dog had heard about, but had never seen a wolf. He was new on the job and felt uneasy. While the first sheep dog laid back against the tree and watched for fanged teeth, pointed ears and cold deadly eyes, the second dog just watched the sheep. As days passed, the routine was the same; the first dog watched for wolves, the second never took his eyes off the sheep. One day the wolf decided to dress up in sheep skins and slip pass the sheep dogs. The first dog, looking for tell tale signs, missed the wolf. But the second dog immediately began to bark and growl and attacked the wolf and ran him away. Later the first dog asked: "How were you able to discover the wolf and you'd never seen one and I missed it?" The second dog answered: "You spent your time studying wolves; I spent my time studying sheep. I know how a sheep sounds, looks and moves from head to toe. I didn't know what a wolf looked like, but when I saw those big O' feet, I knew it wasn't a sheep!"

We protect ourselves from those who would deceive us by studying the word of God and searching the scriptures for the truths necessary for our Christian walk.

As Christians, we are glad that God has given us his word and revealed its truths to us privately and through revelation. Through studying the word we know that we will be able to survive any challenge to our faith, because our faith is based on nothing less than the word of God himself.

Exposition

Our text indicates that there is a rich treasury of inspiration, encouragement and hope for those who are willing to "search" the scriptures.

The Bible, is actually a collection of 66 sacred, inspired writings bound together in one book that we call the "Bible" after the Greek word "Biblia" which means "books!"

Our text suggests that we should "search" or look among these scriptures, for the essential truths that lead us to salvation and sustain us while we struggle to live the Christian life.

Searching the scriptures requires training and practice because we don't find what we are looking for unless we know how.

While there are no secret codes in the bible, there are revelations of truth that can be found if the scriptures are "searched" in a way that compares, contrasts and analyzes for spiritual insight.

There are no secret anagrams or meanings that are discovered when read backwards. There are no meanings alien to the divine character. The truths of scripture are revealed when we search the scriptures earnestly.

Searching the Bible

The books of Drosnin and Brown have many people searching the bible as many questions are raised. Yet there should be a reason for our search that is beyond mere curiosity raised by a movie or a book on the New York Times best seller list. There are several things we should keep in mind as we search the scriptures.

SEARCH FOR TRUTH NOT CODES: While there are many who energetically search the bible for secret codes and meanings, believers should search the bible for God's truths, trusting him to reveal its secrets for our lives as we study and pray.

The search for truth must be systematic, not left to pure chance.

There are many who open their bibles to a page and wherever it happens to open they read that passage and assume that it holds some secret message for them, like a daily horoscope. They feel their fingers were mysteriously guided to this passage and God spoke to them through that passage.

This is haphazard searching. It is like searching for an auto mechanic by opening the yellow pages to the first page you see, point blindly, and saying God led your finger to call the number you find, even if it is a plumber.

When the text verse says "search the scripture" it does not refer to random selection, but rather to a disciplined study of the scriptures.

1 Timothy 2:15 makes it clear, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

To study the Word is to read it for understanding, compare it with other scriptures, visualize it with the help of historical background, and clarify it through repetitious analysis.

SEARCHING FOR TRUTH SUPPLIES MEANING: Those who are captivated by a search for secret codes focus on the past but find little hope for understanding the meaning of the present. The purpose of the bible is to provide meaning and understanding for believers today. If that's the case, then why would God find it necessary to hide that meaning in secret codes? If there are secret codes, why would he allow non-believers like Drosnin or Dan Brown to discover them and profit from them while confusing the body Christ at the same time? If the DaVinci Codes are revealed, do they provide hope to the world or raise more skepticism and doubt? If the purpose of the bible is to provide individual meaning and guidance to every individual, what will the search for these secret codes mean for each individual?

The bible speaks to the human condition in emphatic terms. They are true and clear. They are not secret. They provide meaning and substance for our lives.

OUR SEARCH PROVIDES GROWTH: We need to study the word of God intensely for two reasons: our own personal spiritual growth, and so that we might adequately lead others to Christ. A study of God's word and its application to the various situations of life strengthens each of us in our faith and commitment. When we study the word we gain hope for the future, strength in moments of weakness, and the will to persevere.

OUR SEARCH REVEALS GOD'S WILL: A personal study of the word and Nature of God gives individual satisfaction and strength. It helps us understand God's will for our lives. We search the bible for God's will not for a special secret code. A diligent search will reveal the truth that we can rely upon as the will of God for our lives.

A woman stood in front of the judge and tried to explain her strange habits. "Your honor" she began, "The Lord told me to do it. Before I left home I told the Lord to show me what to do. I opened my bible and I pointed to a verse that said, 'my God shall supply all your needs.' When I saw them pork chops laying there and nobody was looking I knew the Lord laid them out there for me." The judge listened as the woman continued. "About that ring. Just before I left home I opened my bible and pointed to a verse that said, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want." When I saw that ring I wanted it. It was so shiny. I took it because the bible told me "I shall not want." The judge praised the woman for her belief in God. Then asked her to come to the bench where she kept her bible open to the Ten Commandments. The judge said point right here. The woman touched the bible and the judge said, "God's got another message for you, you pointed to "thou shalt not steal." You've got 2 years in jail!"

A diligent search of the bible can reveal God true will for our lives, no an unconfirmed hunch or a roll of the dice.

What we find is no secret

Finally, brothers and sisters, when we search the word we don't look for codes and secrets, but what we find is no secret; we serve an all powerful God.

The great commission of Matthew 28 has given every Christian the responsibility of becoming missionaries for Christ. This awesome task of leading men to Christ and leading the way in displaying Christian empathy requires considerable preparation, training, and study. Paul's message to young Timothy was to "study." This can also be applied to this vast army of laypersons, teacher's and leaders that compose the body of Christ today.

We must search the word for truth and hide that truth in our hearts.

When we search the word, the truth we find will give us the courage to witness, the faith to endure trials, and the inspiration for moments of desperation.

We should search the word because the Word of God:

—feeds me when I am hungry!
—comforts me when I am lonely!
—corrects me when I am wrong
—refreshes me when I am tired!
—satisfies me when I am thirsty!
—lifts me when I am low!
—challenges me when I am indifferent!
—sustains me when I am afraid!
—directs me when I am confused!
—motivates me when I am discouraged!
—soothes me when I am dying!

No wonder the scriptures declare, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path."

No wonder the song writer wrote, "Hide your word in my heart Oh God."

When we search the word of God what we discover is not a big secret.

We discover that God is a healing God.

We discover that God is a prayer answering God.

We discover that God is an awesome God.

What we discover is not a big secret wrapped in special codes that must be deciphered with computers.

When we search the word we learn what we have already found to be true; that God is in the blessing business.

It's no secret that God will:

—Bless me when I'm burdened;
—Cheer me when I'm sad;
—Strengthen me when I'm weak;
—Calm me when I'm troubled;
—Revive me when I'm weary.

I heard the song writer say, "It is no secret what God can do. What he's done for others, he'll do for you!"

The biggest truth of the bible is not a secret. It's not a hidden code.

The biggest, most promising truth of the bible is that "God so loved the world that he sent his only begotten son so whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

This is the truth that came to the world over 2000 years ago!

This is the truth that was revealed by the son of God picking up an old rugged cross and carrying it to Golgotha's Hill!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!

It is not secret!

There are no special codes!

If you call upon him today, he will answer!

God will take care of you!

It Speaks of Monumental Living

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 28, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "..and through it he being dead yet speaketh." Hebrews 11:4b

Introduction

What do you think of on Memorial Day? In 1868 the nation began observing Memorial Day as a way to pay tribute to those who died in the Civil War. It has since grown to be a day to salute the memories of those fallen in all wars. However, for millions of Americans, Memorial Day is just another three day holiday that will give them a chance to get away from the daily routine of the work place and relax. To these, Memorial Day is a brief moment to relax in an extended chair with a pit of bar-be-que and case of their favorite refreshments. It is just another day for fun and family.

Memorial Day means something different to millions of families who have been affected by a loss incurred in the pursuit of freedom and independence for this nation.

Memorial Day is a day to remember.

It is a time when we remember that the freedoms that we enjoy have come at an extremely high price. Men and women have given their lives for the opportunities we enjoy. How many? Sometimes we forget how many. American Revolution, 25,324; War of 1812, 2,260; Civil War, 863,153; Mexican War, 13, 283. World War I, 126, 200; World War II, 418,500; Korean War, 33,600; Vietnam War, 58,226 killed and 153,000 wounded; 2986, World Trade center terrorist attacks, and the Iraqi War, 2464 dead with nearly 48,000 wounded.

It is a time when we remember the words of Abraham Lincoln in His Gettysburg Address:

"It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task of remaining before us — that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion."

It is a time when we wrestle within ourselves to make sense of war and the resulting casualties. It is a time when we reflect on the words of hope from the word of God which promises us that one day, when Christ returns that we will study war no more. That will be the day that the lion and the lamb will sit down together. It will be the day when we beat out swords into ploughshares. It will be the day when we focus our energies on resolving the problems incidental to life rather than building offensive and defensive war strategies.

Memorial Day is a time when we force ourselves to remember the pain and the sacrifice others have made; and rededicate ourselves to the principles for which they pledged themselves.

The late Archibald Maclease wrote a poem entitled, "Young Dead Soldiers do not speak" which captures the flavor of why we celebrate Memorial Day. One phrase says,

The young dead soldiers do not speak.
Nevertheless, they are heard in the still houses:
who has not heard them?
They have a silence that speaks for them at night and when the clock counts.
They say: We were young. We have died.
Remember us.

One way to remember is to build memorials. In Oklahoma City there is a memorial to those who died in the infamous bombing. A memorial is being constructed for those who died on September 11. In Washington there are many memorials, the latest being World War II memorial. Memorials prompt someone to ask in the future, "What happened here? Who died there?"

More important than building a monument is that those who follow capitalize on the sacrifices made with monumental living. That's what Tom Hanks in the movie "Saving Private Ryan" said to Private Ryan after many men died to save his life. He was challenged to live worthy of their deaths.

As Christians, we cling to the memory of the sacrifice of our soldiers, but also the sacrifice of our Savior. As we remember what he did for us; the best monument we can erect for him is to give him "monumental living."

Exposition

This text focuses on how the blood of Abel speaks to others in coming generations.

This text refers to an incident recorded in Genesis 4:4-8. Abel presented a sacrifice before God that was accepted and found favor with God. His brother, Cain became jealous and killed him.

The death of Abel was unwarranted. Matthew Henry says he was righteous, a justified, sanctified, and accepted person. His death was not forgotten.

The death of able represented the death of the innocent. It represented the struggle of the righteous to do what is right before God and the enmity felt by those who fight against the cause of righteousness.

The fallen, like Abel, leave a legacy of faith for others. That's what Hebrews 11 focuses upon, the characteristic of faith. It is lifted up as it is evidenced one by one by great soldiers of the faith: Abraham, Moses, etc. The fact that Abel's life of faith is lifted up thousands of years after his death is a monument to his life and a reminder that God will not allow Abel's sacrifice to die with him but his sacrificial spirit would be shared by others who would follow.

The last phrase of verse Hebrews 11:4 says, "and through it he being dead yet speaketh." And through what? And through the way he lived: righteously, honorable and acceptably before God, he still speaks today. Abel's death was a monument, but how he lived should inspire monumental living in others as his spirit speaks to all who will hear."

Still they Speak

In the movie "Saving Private Ryan" Ryan worried whether he had lived a life that was worthy of so many sacrifices. That is our challenge today. Our challenge is to live the kind of lives that give a testament to the price paid.

We hear the soldiers of Mclease's poem, "We were young. We have died. Remember us."

We also hear our savior saying similar words as he orchestrated the Lord's Supper, "this do in remembrance of me." He said.

How can we remember the sacrifices of those who have gone before us and paved the way? They are not here but "Still they speak."

Not just soldiers on the battlefield, but we also remember those in our families who have given themselves sacrificially for us. We remember the grandmothers and grandfathers who gave their health and strength to help us. We remember them with reverence.

They speak to us today. We hear their voices, challenging us to live righteously, honorable and acceptably before God.

Monumental Living

The best monument to the lives of the fallen is not a tablet or marker of stone, but through exercising the freedoms won for us with "monumental living."

Monumental living is living freely and exercising freedom.

Monumental living is holy living, righteous living, and godly living.

The best testament to the sacrifice of those who paid the ultimate price is to exercise your freedom.

We have freedom of speech; we should speak up for those things which are right; even if you are by yourself.

We have freedom of religion, we should stand boldly for the God we serve and worship him regularly.

We have the right to vote, we should not let those who sacrificed their lives be draped in a dark shroud of useless futility; we should vote, in every election large or small. Men and women have died that we might have that chance.

We have a God given right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness that is protected in our constitution; we should seize opportunities and seek to rise above the squalor of desperate living and rise to monumental living!

Abundant Living

Finally, we must remember the sacrifice of the savior as we rise up to live a monumental life that glorifies his names.

It has been 2000 years since Christ died; still he speaks to our souls every day!

He speaks of the godly heritage that we should not forget.

He speaks of the power of faith in an almighty God.

He speaks of the power of hope that no matter how dark the hour that "Weeping endures but a night, but joy comes in the morning!"

We hear him challenge us to rise up to monumental living, saying, "I am come that they may have life and have it more abundantly!"

When something is monumental it is larger than ordinary!

Our tribute to the savior is to live spiritually monumental lives that are: Holy, righteous, godly and Christ-like!

Monumental!

Monumental living is learning how to live a happy, doubt free, confident life!

Monumental living is living a guilt free life!

This is the kind of life that remembers that we are spiritually free because of the sacrifice of Christ. He was wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities. And the chastisement of our peace is upon him. With his stripes we are healed.

To live a monumental life may mean dying a thousand deaths. It may mean self sacrifice. It may mean giving of your time, talents and resources above and beyond!

It will most certainly mean that we will live worthy of the sacrifice of our savior!

We remember how he came to this world and lived for 33 years.

We remember how he died on an old rugged cross!

We remember how three days later he arose from the dead!

We remember him with..

Monumental living!

SCRIPTURE: Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. 1 John 3:2

Introduction

How did you feel the day after you graduated from high school? If you are like most people there was a feeling of accomplishment and achievement. There is no feeling like a high school graduation. After 17 or 18 years a goal has been accomplished, and a dream has been realized. After nearly two decades of trial and error, frustration, failures and setbacks, a shiny moment filled with joy and excitement passes in a blink. It flashed, sparkled and passed as quickly as it came.

Now that graduates have had time to look at their diplomas and hold them close, the question that comes to mind is "What's next?" For nearly two decades graduates have focused on one objective, putting on a cap and gown, walking across the stage and receiving a diploma. Now that the long sought after moment has passed, graduates wrestle with the prospect of the future.

What makes the next step scary is that we don't know what lies ahead. We knew our way around our high schools. We knew the teachers, the principal, and the routine. We knew the location of the library, the Captain of the Football team and school Alma Mater. After all, we were seniors. We were the envy of the school. We were the veterans, the experienced and most mature on campus. But, we are not sure about tomorrow. We just don't know.

We don't know what we shall be; we hope that we'll find love, happiness and success. That's what two childhood sweethearts thought when they fell in love in high school and graduated from high school together. They sat next to each other in the graduation and called each other sweet names. After graduation they went out to eat and called each other more sweet names. After graduation they married, raised a family and were happy. After 60 years of marriage a friend of the family visited them and noticed that they still appeared to be deeply in love. The man constantly referred to his wife as "My Love"," My sweet"," Sugar Dumpling" and "My darling." That impressed the guest who was amazed that after 60 years there was so much love. While the wife was in the next room the guest said, "It is so great to see you share so much love after 60 years. You still call your wife so many loving terms." The old man whispered to his guest, “I have to confess; I call her all of those sweet names because I forgot her real name about 10 years ago.”

While we don’t know what we shall be, we do know what we can become in the hands of God. In God’s hands rough little pieces of coal, buried beneath mountains of dirt and grime can become diamonds. In God’s hands, we can achieve and become more than anyone ever expected.

Today, we are diamonds in the rough, but when God gets through with us, we shall share his beauty and see him as he is.

As Christians, we share the happiness of every graduate. Yet, the happiness of this point is the same happiness that the miner finds when he stumbles upon an ugly stone in the bottom of the earth. On the outside it looks like an ugly cousin to a chunk of coal, but on the inside it is a beautiful diamond waiting to be cleaned, cut and polished in the master’s hand. In God’s hands, “Eye have not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him.”

Exposition

This text explores the future state of every person that is in the family of God. John, writing his first epistle about 57 years after the resurrection of Christ, explains to believers the nature of the Christian relationship to God. He explains first that we who are believers are the sons of God. John, speaking to believers in this text, affirmed that while believers were certain of their relationship as “sons of God,” not everything is known about what we shall be in our future state.

Beyond a few glimpses given to us by John about the coming city of God and passing snapshots of the form of bodies in the life to come little is known about what God has in store for us. However, John points out that while we don’t know every detail we do know that when Jesus makes his appearance we shall understand many things that we don’t understand now.

Today, it is difficult for any of us to visualize all that God has in store for us. We cannot picture it. We cannot imagine it because there is nothing in this life comparable.

Today, we can only see the soot and the coal of life. Yet the word of God keeps reminding us, that in God’s hand, what life has in store for us is beyond comprehension.

Diamonds in the Rough

A Christian graduate is a diamond in the rough. The phrase is a metaphor for the original unpolished state of diamond gemstones, especially those that have the potential to become high quality jewels.

Potential is a word that describes how we are not yet what we can be.

But if we have graduated from high school, isn’t that a sign of success? Haven’t we achieved a great accomplishment?

It takes a lot of work to unearth a diamond. Even in a diamond mine there is only one part diamond per 14 million parts of worthless rock. Approximately 46,000 pounds of earth must be mined and sifted to produce one half carat gem.

In a similar sense it took a long time and a lot of work to unearth what walked across the stage a few days ago. A Christian graduate is a diamond in the rough. It took 17 years of mother's knee, kindergarten, elementary school, Jr. High and High school to bring it to the surface.

Very few see the true value of a Christian graduate; but every child of God can see that value because he can see God chipping away at our rough spots. In the years to come it will seem like he is wasting his time. He will work on us with chisel in hand because he sees our brilliance.

God started searching for us before we were born. What he started in us, he will accomplish. Not just on the inside, but on the outside as well. A few years from now, if you stay in God's hand you'll look back, and you may not even recognize yourself! You will come out with His characteristics. You will not be the same because He has formed and shaped you after His image.

John said he will keep working on us until we are like him.

So the refinement process begins. Graduates have yet to be cut, refined and polished to their fullest potential.

Graduation is not an end; it is the beginning of a polishing process.

Graduation is the point when the next step begins. It's when a girl learns to be a woman; a boy learns to be a man.

For some, this grueling process will take seven or more years. It will be a tough journey in which little rough diamonds are cut and refined.

No Fakes

Because the refining process will require tremendous time, personal discipline and dedication, there will be many who will attempt to take short cuts that will produce something short of the diamond that they should be. Many will be satisfied if they can be something that looks like a diamond, even if it is not a real diamond.

Even today, there are many who are quite comfortable with an imitation of success. Theres is an imitation of the life God would have for them.

There is a difference between a real diamond and a fake diamond.

Fake diamonds look like real diamonds but they are not the same. There are many young people who spend their lives content to have fakes rather than the real thing. They fake grades in school rather study to have the real ones. They wear fake designer clothes, fake jewelry and move away and live lives with fake diplomas, fake careers and fake identities.

Fake diamonds look real but there is a difference.

Fake diamonds are valued at 1/10th of the value of a real diamond, although they often look the same.

Fake diamonds, like cubic Zirconia are pretty like diamonds but are not as durable. They may nick or scratch. It doesn't take much to scratch a fake diamond. Life will offer many tough situations in the years to come, those who diamonds will come through without a scratch on their optimism, enthusiasm or quest for success. They are durable. They are sustained by the glory of God.

Fake diamonds stand to be tested. Real diamonds can be tested for color, clarity, cut and confidence. Fakes can't pass the test. There are many try to pass themselves off as diamonds until they are tested. A Jeweler tests a diamond by looking at its color, clarity and the way it is cut. There are many who may shine like a diamond but they can't pass any societal test.

Fake diamonds are transparent. You can see through them. There is always something inside of a real diamond, like a small rock inside of the diamond. There are many who are obvious fakes. They brag about what they have and who they are but somehow they are transparent. We are able to see clean through them. Some even brag about being happy but are really sad; boast about inner peace but are in turmoil. The Christian graduate is like a diamond that has a rock inside. Who is this rock? He is the rock of ages.

Fake diamonds are always perfect. Real diamonds have flaws. Be wary of the person who claims he or she is perfect. No one is perfect. Neither is a diamond. Real diamonds are flawed and it is the flaws that help it to reflect the light so well. Without the flaws it would not be so beautiful or brilliant. So it is in life, our mistakes, errors and life flaws define who we are. The tragedies, misfortunes and even our idiosyncrasies in life define us. It is our flaws and weaknesses that humble us before God. They perfect man or perfect woman sees no need for God. The flawed man or woman stands on his feet because he knows how to kneel before God.

In God's Hands

Finally, every Christian Graduate should remember that, in God's hands he can be all that God wants him to be.

What God promises is more than the U.S. Army slogan, "Be all you can be." All we can be is limited.

We can be rubies, emeralds, but all of them are not as beautiful as diamonds.

We can stones of jasper and pearl, but all of them are not as beautiful as diamonds.

We can even be Moissanite, which shines more than a diamond but doesn't last as long. It is the next best thing but a diamond is not second best to anything.

All we can be will always be something less that what we can be. However, our God is not to be all we can be, but to be all God wants us to be!

What does God want?

God made us in his image and we are valuable to him!

Today, young graduates are diamonds in the rough, but if they place themselves in the master's hand, he will shape them and cut them and forge them into what he wants them to be.

Consider the drunk who searched the garbage for a taste of wine and found what he believed was an old fiddle. "It's nothing but an old fiddle" he thought and tossed it aside. A second scavenger came and found the old fiddle, he tried to play it but he got was screeches and scratches and he threw it away because it had no value. A third scavenger sold the fiddle to an antique store whereupon a great violinist happened upon it. The violinist tuned its strings and gently rubbed the bow them. Out came the finest sound, much to the amazement of all. As the violinist bought the fiddle and walked out of the door, the owner remarked "it was just an old fiddle, until it was touched by the master's hand."

Brothers and sisters, it is not important what you have in your hands. However it is important that what you have has been touched by the master's hand.

Today, you may be a diamond in the rough, but powerful things happen when you have been touched by the master's hand.

When you've been touched by the master's hand, nothing can stand in your way! Feel free to dream the impossible dream! Fight the unbeatable foe!

In the master's hand, defeat turns into victory!

In the master's hand, failure turns into success!

In the master's hand, loss turns into gain!

In the master's hand, a life not given much chance is shaped!

These are the hands that were nailed to an old rugged cross!

These are the hands that born the prints of the wounds of the world!

These are the hands of the man who died out on Calvary but Early Sunday morning arose from the dead!

In these hands lumps of coal become….diamonds!

The Family That Prays Together

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:" And when he had considered the thing, he came to the house of Mary the mother of John, whose surname was Mark; where many were gathered together praying." Acts 12:12

Introduction

Have you ever noticed that some families seem to be strong, united and happy, while others are not? What seems to keep them together, bond them closer, and make them stronger as the years go by? These families seem to stand invincible to outside attacks, secretly pray hard and lean heavily upon the power of God to sustain them against enemies.

The secret ingredient that has bound such families for centuries is one simple truth: The family that prays together, stays together.

The praying family is not one that grudgingly follows a ritual that has been traditional for many years. The praying family is one that prays for God's will and then passionately acts to carry out God's will.

Without an active faith, the words of a prayer are useless. Families have learned that ritual does not save us. Faith in God does.

A man and his family and a family of bears happened to be in the same area of the woods. The father told his children, "We must stick together and pray." As he spoke, the papa bear told his family, "We must stick together to survive." It had been a while since the man and his family had been to church. In fact, they had actually skipped church to spend Sunday in the woods, after all this was the new generation and the old family traditions were not really important; especially the part about going to church. As they walked through the woods they came face to face with the family of bears, who instantly began to chase them. Running as fast as they could they found themselves up against a stone wall. There was no way out. The bears were in hot pursuit. As the bears closed in the family members said, "We must stick together and pray." They joined hands and cried out in desperation, "Lord we ain't suppose to skip church, we sometimes cuss, we don't pay tithes like we should and we sometimes sleep in church, but please forgive us and save us. Please make that family of bears Christians." Instantly the man's prayer was answered. The bears became Christians. They all fell to their knees and clasped their paws together and said in unison, "God, bless the food we are about to receive.!" –The family must pray together but it must live and pray in a way that is pleasing to God.

As Christians, we know the importance of prayer to individual believers. Morever, we know that things start to happen when a family of believers begins to pray together as they live by the will of God. Such a family makes the old proverb true,"The family that prays together stays together."

Exposition

This text focuses on Peter's deliverance from prison by an angel of the Lord after the prayer of the Christian family.

The Christian family endured considerable persecution in its early years. Those who professed Christ stood to lose life and property. Their only hope to survive was to stay together, help each other and to pray for each other.

The Christian family had already experienced the stoning death of Stephen. It had also lost James. At this writing, Peter was imprisoned. His death had been ordered by King Herod.

To prevent his escape he was chained between two soldiers who had orders to protect him with their lives.

The Christian family meeting in houses prayed for Peter's release. They prayed in faith that God had the power to supercede the order of Herod one way or another. The prayed without ceasing.

God heard their and sent an angel to loose Peter's shackles and lead him out of prison, while the Church family still prayed for him.

Peter's deliverance was a direct result of the prayer of the Christian family to God. They interceded for him and lifted him up to God. As a result of the unity of their prayers God responded and their family circle was not broken by this act of persecution.

The Power of Family Prayer

The people who prayed for Peter were his brothers and sisters in Christ. They were a prototype of the nuclear family. Their prayer model for Peter gave families in every generation a guide and reassurance that families that pray together can stay together.

What truths do we learn from the prayers of the Christian family? We learn that:

FAMILY PRAYER IS NOT ABOUT ME IT'S ABOUT US. Those who prayed for Peter were not praying for themselves individually; they prayed for Peter. The distinction shows us the difference between an individual prayer and a family prayer. When the family prays, it prays for the members of the family. Think back over the history of the family. Think of the elders who endured the hardships of slavery, reconstruction, the depression and civil rights era discrimination. Our ancestors who prayed, prayed for the family. If we listen in our spirit we can hear them praying for their children and grandchildren; great grands and the unborn. Their prayer was that God would protect the family from enemies outside and from evil influences that may filtrate inside the family.

The prayer of the old slaves and sharecroppers was for "us." It is the same way that Jesus taught the Christian family to pray. He said "Our" father; "forgive us…as we forgive," "Lead us not…but deliver us" from evil. The emphasis of the praying family follows this model, we pray for each other. That's why the song writer said, "I pray for you, you pray for me, we all are part of God's family."

FAMILY PRAYER REAPS BENEFITS: When the Christian family prayed for Peter; it reaped an immediate benefit. Every prayer that is prayed gets an answer. It is not always what we like, but it is according to God's plan. That plan includes our best interest. Look at the family today. It has come a mighty long way. Was it because of the strength of the present generation? Probably not. This generation has benefited from the prayer and unity of the preceding generations. The relative peace and happiness that this family enjoys is not an accident. It is a benefit of the unified prayers of our ancestos who prayed under brush arbors, often with tubs over their heads to muffle the sound of their voices. We have doctors, teachers, ministers, and host of other working class and professional members of our family because somebody, way back then said, "Lord bless my grandchildren, keep them safe. Hold them in the hollow of your hand!" As a result of those prayers we have sons who preach and daughters who grow up in the fear of the Lord. As a result of those praying patriarchs before us, this family has become a pleasant resting place for weary souls who know that when the whole world has abandoned them, there is an oasis of support in the dry thirsty desert of America. There is cooling water in from heaven from clouds seeded by the prayers of an axious family that never ceases to pray for our success and safety.

The family that prays together reaps benefits today and in the generations to come.

The family that prays together enjoys the happiness that has been passed down from one generation to another. It is a happiness that is able to sing with joy in the midst of trouble because they know that "trouble don't last always!"

Can't you hear grandma's prayer? "Lord bless my grandchildren!"

Can't your hear grandpa's prayer? "Lord let my grandsons reap the benefits of your saving grace!"

The family that prays together reaps its benefits.

THE FAMILY NEVER STOPS PRAYING: While Peter was imprisoned, the Christian family never stopped praying for him. Even when it looked hopeless, they continued to pray together. They were not satisfied that they had prayed once for Peter; they continued to pray repeatedly. So it is with our family today. We must always pray for our family members, even when it appears that the heavenly decision is already made; we must pray.

We must pray for the family member that has become a victim of alcohol or drugs.

We must pray for the weak family member who has embraced a criminal life style.

We must pray for incarcerated family members.

We must pray for those who are spiritually lost.

We must pray for family members experiencing marital problems.

We must pray for the young and the restless who are standing on the edge of night, going through their secret storms.

We must never cease to pray because the biblical record has shown us that the prayers of the righteous have been known to bend the will of God.

For these reasons, the family must contine to pray, day and night for the wayward, the endangered and the troubled. We must pray until something happens.

GOD OPENS DOORS EVEN AS THE FAMILY PRAYS: As the Christian family prayed for Peter, it was unaware that God was already answering its prayers. When Peter appeared at their home they were praying for him. It must have been joy in that house when they realized that while they were asking, God was answering; while they were hoping, God was delivering! That's what Isaiah 65:24 means when it says, "And it shall come to pass that, before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear." It's the same thing Daniel found out in Daniel 9:20-21. While he was praying God has sent the angel Gabriel to answer his prayer.

Every family needs doors opened; that's why it prays!

The family prays for jail doors to be opened!

The family prays for business opportunity doors to be opened!

The family prays for career opportunity doors to be opened!

The family prays for the doors of divine insight to be opened!

Every saint can testify that there has been an instance in their own lives when we found out that while we were praying God had already begun to open doors for us, just in the nick of time.

No wonder the song writer declared, "He's an on time God, yes he is. He may not come when you want him, but he'll be there right on time. He's an on time God, yes he is."

Praying Together Means Staying Together

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that the big secret of the Christian family is that prays together and stays together.

We have heard this old saying in our family for generation. We can hear its words ringing in our ears, "The family that prays together, stays together."

The word "together" goes beyond just praying at the same time, but it means that the family is praying for the same thing.

Together, means we are on one accord.

In crises, we are together!

In goodtimes and badtimes we are together!

If one family members is down we don't beat him down, we pull toether to give him a hand up.

If one family member is troubled, we don't frown on them in their time of trouble; we pull together and remind them that, "Weeping endures but a night but joy comes in the morning!"

The family that prays together trusts God together for the same common purpose and finds strength in each other.

The family that prays together asks God for the same common good and clings together.

The family that prays together loves each family member with a love that overlooks weakness, faults and shortcomings and sees only the person being loved.

The family that prays together trusts in the power of God.

The family that prays together places its unfaltering hope in the Lord. That's why the song writer declares, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand."

Some think this family has survived slavery, hardship and distress because of the large number of professionals and those who have at least a high school education. But if you talk to the members of the family who know the Lord, they will tell you that it was nothing but the Grace of God.

Although education helped, it wasn't education that opened doors that were closed in our faces.

Although it helped to have a dollar in our pockets, it wasn't money that made a way out of no way.

There is much to be said about hard working families, but even hard work is not totally responsible for the survival of our families; it was nothing but the grace of almighty God.

It was the power of prayer!

Prayer can make the impossible possible!

Prayer can make the improbable probable!

Prayer can give hope to the hopeless!

Prayer can raise up a bowed down head!

Prayer can change a wayward and bring a prodigal son home!

Prayer can turn bitter defeat into the sweet victory!

The family that prays together can stand when everyone else is falling? It's standing on nothing but the blood of Jesus!

The family that prays together can "have" when everyone is losing? It achieves because of nothing but the blood of Jesus!

The family that prays together gets up when everyone around it is falling down? It's able to get up because of nothing but the blood of Jesus!

The family that prays together has hope in times of trouble because it knows God is able. That's why the song write wrote, "It is no secret what God can do. What he's done for others he do for you."

Our families are able to withstand the storms of life because we know that we serve a God that is able to speak to the winds and say "peace be still."

The family that prays together is preserved, sustained and saved by the wonder working blood of Jesus.

It's the power of the blood that makes us sing with new meaning, "I know it was the blood. I know it was the blood that saved me."

One day when we was lost, He died up on a cross! we know it was the blood that saved us!

The family that prays together knows the name of Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who was buried in a borrowed tomb!

Jesus, who arose early Sunday morning with all power in his hands!

Maranatha, Come Lord Jesus

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 16, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "And if any man love not the lord let him be anathema, Maranatha." 1 Corinthians 16:22

Introduction

Have you ever watched the lines at a theme park for a popular ride? Depending on the popularity of the ride, the lines can be tremendously long. Yet, despite the lines, the long wait, the unbearable heat, fatigue, those who want to experience the thrill of a short ride, will bear it all.

Six Flags theme parks are located all over the nation. In the summer months temperatures can range as high as 105-110 degrees. Despite these heats, lines form early in the morning and continue all day for super rides on roller coasters and swinging boats and other thrillers. It is not unusual to see spectators nearly faint, but refuse to leave their place in line. Waiting, anticipating and looking forward to the moment when they will get to experience the big thrill.

When they finally get their ride, participants scream and holler as they twist and turn for a few short minutes, then it's over. They declare, the thrill was worth the wait, the heat, and the frustration.

If that thrill is worth the wait, imagine the thrill that believers can expect when Christ comes home.

We are waiting for his return. In a way we are like those in line at Six Flags. We are enduring the frustrations of this life, complete with its ups and downs, sickness, losses and pain. We are struggling in the heat of this wilderness experience, waiting for his return. However, unlike those at Six Flags, we don't expect a short ride that will be over quickly. We expect first to be caught up with him in the air, in the twinkling of an eye. After the judgment is complete we expect to spend eternity with him in a paradise called heaven.

We are waiting for his return. Sometimes we get anxious and "can't wait."

We want him to come home, because when he comes home, it all begins. So we cry out "Come, Lord Jesus" –Come home!

As Christians, we look forward to the day of Christ's eventual return. It will be a great homecoming. We watch and pray because we do not know the day or the hour. What we do know is that when we all get to heaven, it will be a day of rejoicing that will be well worth the wait!"

Exposition

This text focuses on a benediction of hope given by the Apostle Paul as he encouraged believers to stay focused on the final homecoming of the Lord.

Throughout his letter to the Corinthians Paul addressed a variety of issues that frustrated believers.

There were some that were concerned with whom they should follow, whether Cephas, Apollos or Paul.

There were others who were frustrated in the competition that arose among them concerning the possession of gifts. Some felt more blessed because they had one gift that the other did not have.

The role of women in resolving disputes was addressed as Paul concluded that God is not a respecter of persons, but admonished the women to express opinion on church.

Paul saw the issues, disputes and bad feelings that developed among the Corinthians as frustrations that distracted them from what he believed should be the main focus of the church, the second coming of Christ.

He constantly reminded them that the important thing for every Christian to do is to love God and to love each other. The entire 13th chapter of 1 Corinthians emphasizes the importance he placed on love among believers.

So, in closing his letter Paul used two Aramaic words to summarize the challenge of the Corinthians Anathema Maranatha.

Anathema is a word which refers to those who do not love the Lord, his church or each other. These will be judged by God and will receive his curse.

On the other hand, Maranatha is a word which means "Come, Lord Jesus." The Greek version of this word is used Revelation 22:20 "Come, Lord Jesus." It epitomizes the hope of every believer that Jesus is coming back, and he will deal with the anathemas of this world.

The fact that Christ will come back to reunite the Saints with him for eternity is the glad hope of the church. It is the reason for the church's faith and sacrifice. Paul's expression of "Maranatha" is thus an expression of excitement that is so bold that overshadows the frustrations represented by the anathemas. It is an expression of a wonderful hope of an exciting, refreshing and joyous experience in a new body, in a new place, with all of the Christian family united as one body and praise to God.

Paul summed it up in one word.."Maranatha!" Come Home Lord Jesus, we can't wait.

When He Comes

When Christ comes it will be a great homecoming celebration. It is what we are all waiting for. There are at least three things that we expect to happen when Christ comes. They are the reason that we share Paul's plea for "Maranatha!"-Come, Lord Jesus!

HE WILL JUDGE: When Christ comes he will sit in judgment over the kings of the earth. Matthew 25:31-32 says, "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: And before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats:" This underscores why Paul would use the word "anathema." He knew that Christ would take care of every person who persecutes, frustrates or throws stumbling blocks in the way of believers who are carrying out the will of God. Often, we spend considerable time worrying about the "anathemas" of life to the point that we get stressed out and even sick with anger and tension. When Christ comes home He will take care of all anathemas; those who have cursed you, fought you and hurt you while you tried to live according to God's will.

HE WILL REWARD: Not only will Christ come to execute judgment on the anathemas of the world, he will come to bring a reward for the righteous. It is the promised reward that motivates us to continue in service for the master. Paul told us that he expected to receive a crown of righteousness, but not for him only but to all that believe. In addition, the book of Revelation, paints a clear picture of the rewards we can expect when Christ comes. Revelation 2:7 says, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." Revelation 21:7 says, "He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I shall be his God and he shall be my son. That's why believers are anxious about the return of Christ. We are waiting on our reward. It's the reward that motivates us to endure the frustrations of this life. We endure the anathema because of what will come with the Maranatha.

HE WILL REUNITE: When Christ returns he will reunite all believers together, even those who have died in past generations. 1 Thessalonians 4:13-17 makes it clear that when Christ returns, those who have died in past generations will be caught up, then those who are alive will also be caught up to join him in the air. From that day forth we, our family of believers, will never again be separated from God. We will be reunited. The thought of the day when we will all be together again makes us shout, Maranatha, Come, Lord Jesus! The thought of the day when we will enjoy the presence of believing loved ones all at the same time in the joy of the Lord prompts all of us to say "Maranatha!" Come, Lord Jesus.

God has a place for believers

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that when Christ comes for that last homecoming, he will take us to a place called heaven.

Today, the church is celebrating homecoming, with preaching and singing but this is just a preparation for the last homecoming!

For over 2000 years the church has been passing out invitations to the last homecoming and shouting Maranatha! Come, Lord Jesus!

Jesus told his disciples in John 14:2-3 "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am ye may be also."

The Angels declared in Acts 1:11 "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

We heard their voices and we join the chorus of saints around the world who are shouting, Maranatha, Come, Lord Jesus! Because when you come:

-Doubts will be dissolved; Longings will be satisfied
-Tears will be dried; Hearse wheels won't roll
-Problems will be solved; Thirsts will be quenched
-Burdens will be lifted; Debts will be canceled
-Mountains will be made low; Valleys shall be exalted

I don't know about you but I'm waiting in line. I'm not worried about the anathemas, but I'm looking forward to the Maranathas!

I don't know about you but I can't wait to get to the place called heaven.

In the place called heaven:

-There are no wars because there is only peace; Maranatha! Come, Lord Jesus we can't wait!

-There is no hatred, because there is only love; Maranatha! Come, Lord Jesus we can't wait!

-There is no sadness, because there is only gladness; Maranatha! Come, Lord Jesus we can't wait!

-There is no weakness, because there is only strength; Maranatha! Come, Lord Jesus we can't wait!

-There is no death, because there is only life; Maranatha! Come, Lord Jesus we can't wait!

I know there is such a place because I heard Jesus say, "In my father's house there are many mansions!"

The place called heaven is a land, on a far-a-away strand where we will never grow old.

Maranatha, Come Lord Jesus, we can't wait to get to the place called heaven.

No wonder the song writer wrote: When we all get to heaven. What a day of rejoicing it will be. When we all see Jesus we'll sing and shout the victory!

The World Shouted, Maranatha, Come Lord Jesus and he was born in Bethlehem!

He carried an old cross up Golgotha's hill

Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

I'm so glad that the story doesn't stop there. The world is still shouting! Maranatha, Come Lord Jesus!

I don't know about but I want to be ready when he comes home!

Come and go with me, to my father's house!

There's peace and happiness there!

There no more crying there!

In my father's house there is joy!

Joy! Joy!

The Heavenly Vision

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 2006

Scripture:" Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision: But shewed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judaea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance." Act 26:19-20

Introduction

What vision has God given you for the church? Every Godly leader at some point in his or her life has seen a vision of what should be. That vision is clear, succinct and attainable at the time that it is received. No leader who has led the people forward has done so without a vision from heaven. It is the blueprint, life map and navigation plan by which church leaders operate. Without a vision the church stands still. Without a vision the church does not progress. Without a vision the people perish.

There is a difference between a vision and a mere childhood fantasy. A vision, in the spiritual context, has the characteristic of possibility based on the strength of our belief and vigor of our pursuit. Fantasies are pictures in our minds that we admire but will always be beyond our reach because we don't really believe they can be and are not willing to devote our energies toward their realization.

There are some people who really have a problem with visions, especially those they cannot see. Many pastors are challenged by those who say those immortal words, "I just can't see that Bro. Pastor. I just can't see it." That brings to mind the weary worker who called into his job to say he would be absent from work. Curious he was asked the reason for his absence. The worker said, "I have a vision problem." His supervisor expressed sympathy for his situation and asked the nature of his vision problem. "Do you have glaucoma?" The worker answered "No." Is it astigmatism, are you near sighted or far sighted." The worker said, "I just can't see." The supervisor was getting worried so he asked, "Just what exactly is wrong?" The worker said, "I can't see myself coming to work today. I just can't see it."- That explains why some people can't see divinely anointed visions; they don't want to see them.

In his book The Wilson Era, Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy under Woodrow Wilson, relates how he once asked Andrew Carnegie what was the secret of his remarkable success. Carnegie replied, "I owe it all to my flashes."

"You mean," said Daniels, "that you have heavenly visions, and like the man in the Scriptures you were not disobedient to your visions?"

"Call it that if you like," answered Carnegie, "or call it flashes; but it was the following of those silent admonitions and directions which brought me the success you say I have achieved."

Whatever may be said about the flashes in the business world, there is no doubt about flashes of divine impulse in the moral and spiritual world. When they come, happy is the man who, like Paul, is not disobedient to the heavenly vision.

Every church leader who knows the Lord has shared the experience of receiving a heavenly vision. Unlike, Mr. Carnegie, we don't call them flashes. We call them "heavenly visions." These are moments when God reveals his will for his people. Those are moments that he reveals his plan, sometimes in minute detail.

Unlike flashes, heavenly visions are glimpses of what should be with the promise of God that if pursued in faith, they will be.

As Christians, we know that God provides visions to our leaders for the direction of the church. We constantly pledge ourselves to follow his direction and to help make the visions become realities.

Exposition

This text considers Paul as he pleads his case before Festus and Agrippa.

Paul was a man whose Christian life was vision driven. He was propelled by the power of a "theophany." An epiphany by definition is a sudden intuitive leap of understanding. Paul did not have an epiphany; what he had was more. A theophany is a compelling, commanding, demanding vision or revelation that comes directly from God.

In this text Paul uses the phrase ouranai optasia (Unto the heavenly vision). It is the only place where he describes his experience in this way. It was truly a heavenly vision.

On the Damascus Road Paul had a theophany. Standing before Festus and Agrippa he explained his calling, what he saw, and his motivation.

It is here that he tried to explain the nature of his "heavenly vision" and his obedience to what he saw and experienced.

Paul experienced a heavenly vision that was a commanding power. It was also a demanding power that superseded earthly goals and aspiration. Paul could not confer with men for their direction; neither could he yield to the left or to the right for convenience, compromise or practicality. If he had done so he would have been as Jonah and ran away. Instead he accepted the commission and applied himself accordingly.

At verse 20 Paul said, when he saw the heavenly vision he began "immediately" to follow its plan. He began preaching the gospel then just as men do now when they receive the gospel. They begin to witness for Christ immediately, even while they are studying in seminaries, praying and receiving more revelations, they do not wait they begin immediately.

The vision prompted him to start at home, or the place of his conversion, then abroad. He preached throughout all the coasts of Judea, in the country towns and villages, as Christ had done; he made the first offer of the gospel to the Jews, as Christ had appointed, and did not leave them till they rejected it themselves. He preached Christianity 101. He did not go about to fill people's heads with airy notions, did not amuse them with nice speculations, nor tickle their ears.

Paul carried out what he saw in the vision. He was to preach to Jews and Gentiles around the world. His vision was to challenge them to repent of their sins, turn to God and evangelize others. He remained true to that vision. He traveled around the known world of his day three times, establishing churches wherever he went, remaining true to the heavenly vision.

Some are living in fantasy.

There are many in the church who are nostalgic. Nostalgia is reliving the good old days. Nostalgia has its place but it is a fantasy to believe that we can return to the "good old days."

It is a fantasy to believe that we return to the days when one dollar could buy five gallons of gas, an RC cola and a stage plank.

It is a fantasy to believe that we can return to the days when everyone sat at the table, there were no microwave dinners and James Brown was the godfather of soul.

Nostalgia has its place, but God's vision for the church is always in the present and the future. It's what must be done now to accomplish what he wants done tomorrow.

While it is good for us to remember, the church cannot afford the luxury of lingering in the past, wishing and hoping that things would return to what Barbara Streisand calls, "The way we were."

This means that the church must seek ways to implement the heavenly vision in light of the way things are, not the way we wish them to be.

Every flashy idea is not a vision

Believers should remember that every flashy idea is not a heavenly vision. Dale Carnegie called his visions "flashes." Everyone that has a "flash" is not necessarily receiving a vision from heaven. Jesus warned believers to be on guard because there would be many false prophets who claim to speak words inspired by God. In Deuteronomy 13:1-18 the death penalty is prescribed for persons who claimed to see visions from heaven that later proved not to be true. Dreamers or visionaries whose words have the effect of leading people away from God's plan were given the death penalty. The responsibility to try the spirit by the spirit is upon believers. The false visionary will be punished, but those who walk after false visions will, at the very least, retard their blessings because of their meandering ways.

What is the vision?

God has a vision for the collective church. He also has a vision for each individual unit of the body of Christ.

God has shown one consistent vision to all of the leaders of the Body of Christ. The day will come when evil will be defeated, justice and mercy will prevail and the kingdom of heaven will be a reality.

That's the heavenly vision that motivates believers!

It is the vision that our preachers preach about.

It is the vision that our teachers teach about!

It is the vision that our choirs sing about!

No wonder the song writer declared, "Sing the wondrous love of Jesus. Sing his mercy and his grace. In the mansions bright and blessed he'll prepare for us a place. When we all get to heaven, what a day of rejoicing that will be. When we all see Jesus we'll sing and shout the victory."

To implement the heavenly vision pastors must hear the voice of God and respond to his voice with boldness. This may require pastors to move out of their safety zones and strive for higher heights in the faith.

In addition, churches must be prepared to walk new paths. The vision that God gives may present challenges that represent changes of direction for some congregations.

It may mean giving more to the education of our youth through the support of Selma University and similar efforts.

It may mean giving more to support to positive activities that will help them develop into stronger Christian men and women.

It may mean devising programs that will strengthen the home, promote finer womanhood and build manhood.

It may mean showing more concern for our elderly by increasing our elder care ministries.

It may mean expanding our revival efforts beyond three or five nights or preaching in the church facility and take our efforts into the highways and byways through non-traditional ways.

It may mean expanding the ministries of our churches to respond to new challenges with the changeless Gospel of Christ.

The heavenly vision is compelling and its implementation is even more demanding upon individual churches as well as local districts and state affiliates. We must work together to may the heavenly vision a reality.

The heavenly vision motivates

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that it is the vision of heaven and its great reward that motivates us to serve in the kingdom of God.

If there is no heaven then we are wasting our time going to church on Sunday.

If there is no heaven then we are wasting our money giving a tithe to our churches.

If there is no heaven then we are wasting our lives, sacrificing to attain a state that will never exist.

Yet, we know that there is a heaven.

Through the prophets and thousands of preachers over thousands of years we have been given a glimpse of its greatness and it has inspired us to join the struggle!

It was a heavenly vision that prompted Paul to travel the world in three missionary journeys, setting up churches and preaching the word of God.

It was a heavenly vision that prompted Abraham to leave the safety and security of his homeland in search of a city not made with hands.

It was a heavenly vision that prompted David to store up gold and silver to build a temple for the Lord even if he could not build it himself.

It was a heavenly vision that took Ezekiel into a valley of dry bones, to answer the question, "Son of man, can these bones live again?"

It was a heavenly vision that placed Peter on top of the mount of transfiguration to see a sight so grand that he wanted to build three tabernacles on the mountain top.

It was a heavenly vision that opened up the panoramic curtains of glory to John while exiled on the Isle of Patmos and showed him a Revelation about the world to come.

The beauty of the heavenly vision is that it not only shows us what should be down here, but it also shows us what will be.

The heavenly vision shows us the beauties of heaven.

What is there about Heaven that generates such enthusiasm that men and women would dedicate their whole lives just to see it!

New York City is a great city with many sights to see. But after you have seen the Statue of Liberty, the United Nations and historic Harlem, despite their beauty, the sight to see and the place to be is the place called heaven.

St. Louis is a beautiful metropolis which is home of the famous Gateway Arch. But after you have seen the engineering miracle of St. Louis, the sight to see and the place to be, is the place called heaven!

New Orleans attracts thousand to what some have called the 8th wonder of the world, The New Orleans Superdome, but after you have marveled at the awesome spaceship sized superdome and witnessed the pageantry of Mardi Gras, the sight to see and the place to be is still the place called heaven!

Atlanta attracts millions to see the tomb of Martin Luther King, but after you have seen Dr. King's tomb and visited Atlanta underground, the sight to see and the place to be, is still the place called heaven!

The Alamo of San Antonio draws millions to reflect on the battle cry, "Remember the Alamo" but the sight to see and the place to be is the place called heaven!

Whether its the beautiful homes of the stars in Hollywood, the beautiful view of Lookout Mountain in Tennessee or the rumbling waters of Niagara Falls, the sight to see and the place to be, is the place called heaven!

I don't know about you but I want to realize the heavenly vision!

I want to see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob!
I want to see the streets paved with gold!
I want to see the city that sits on twelve foundations with twelve gates!
I want to see the city where hearse wheels won't roll!
I want to see the city where everyday will be Sunday and it'll always be howdy and never good-bye!
I don't know about you, but I want to see Jesus!
Jesus, the author and finisher of my faith!
Jesus, who said I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am, ye may be also!
Jesus, who died out on Calvary, but arose early Sunday morning!
Come and go with me to my father's house!
No more dying there!
No more crying there!
No more sickness and pain!
Come and go with me to my father's house!
There'll be joy, joy, joy!

What Youth Must Know About God

By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 2006

SCRIPTURE: Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life: but teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons; Deuteronomy 4:9

Introduction

Today's youth know more information than any generation before them, but what do they know about God? While many know a variety of subjects that range from algebra to how to operate an XBOX 360, many know very little about God. Many youth know the entire schedule for the NFL regular season, can recite the words to nearly every new song, but know little about God. Many know the names of every movie star, the track record of every super athlete and all the tricks of the "Grand Theft Auto" video game, but what do they know about God?

There are many ways that children learn truths about life. Most of those ways do not involve any special classes, expenditures or special considerations. Many learn truths listening to their parents telling them truths and interpreting events in their lives in such a way that they grow in understanding, despite their age. The great truths about God are taught first at home through the teaching and examples of parents.

One of the truths taught is that there is a difference between knowing about God and really knowing him. Consider the smart little mouse that knew more information than any mouse around. He read constantly and often led debates about the virtues of living the life of a mouse. One day, since he had such great knowledge, he decided to conduct a class for the other mice. The class would teach them all he knew about Cats. He posted signs everywhere announcing his class. The young mice were excited, because this was one of the smartest mice around. If anyone could help them learn about cats, he could. On the day of the first class, the room was filled with little mice. However, there were no old mice present. Just the little ones. There was a big guy who came too. He sat in the back of the room. The mouse proceeded to lecture the little mice about cats. The cat has nine lives. The cat has fur and great claws. The cat purrs and meows. The cat has peculiar looking eyes. He went on for many minutes. Suddenly the guy in the back of the room stood and showed his teeth and started chasing all of the little mice. The young mouse ran outside the room and barely escaped being clawed. Several days later the little mouse met a group of old mice and he asked them a question. "Why didn't you attend my class on cats the other day?", he asked. One old mouse responded, "You know what the book says about cats, but you had never seen a cat yourself. We didn't come to your class because we have seen cats and we know what cats eat for lunch!"

In a similar sense there are many today who know about God, but their daily lives suggest that they really don't Him.

When parents do what they should, children learn about God and they get to him for themselves. They know who he is, what he does, what he expects and what to expect of him.

As Christians, we begin to know the Lord when we are young. As we mature we know him increasingly better. The responsibility of every believer is to educate the young about the nature of God. They should know his laws and expectations as well as his goodness and grace.

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses in his last days, urging Israel to teach their children and grandchildren what they have been taught about the Godly life.

The Book of Deuteronomy is the last of the five books of Moses. Written in the closing years of his life, Moses repeated again what he taught the people for over 30 years or so. The supremacy of godliness and the strict observance of God's law was the central focus of his teaching.

In this text, Moses notes that he taught the people what God taught him so that they would be prepared for the future that awaits them. He charged them to keep the law, do the law and cherish the law of God all of their days.

Since the moral law came from God himself, it was a treasure that should be taught to each succeeding generation. The law of God taught the importance of godliness, clean living, abstinence and the value of honesty and integrity to his children. Thus, Moses maintained that every parent had the responsibility of teaching these principles to their children; and should they be blessed with long life, to teach them to their grandchildren. They should be taught at home and in the public square. The importance of teaching was underscored to the point that Moses instructed that the laws of God should be taught in the morning, at noonday and at night; that they should be inscribed over the doorposts of their houses.

Thus, Moses closed his life by giving one final lesson to Israel before his death. It was the lesson that the people should fear God, walk in his ways and he will help them to possess the bright future in front of them.

Youth must be Taught

Believers are implored to teach the word of God to each generation. We must teach because the word of God commands us to teach:

Deuteronomy 4:9 says, "..but teach them thy sons; and thy son's sons."

Deuteronomy 4:19 says, "And the LORD commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it."

Deuteronomy 6:6-9 says, "And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart: And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes. And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates. "

2 Timothy 2:14 says, "Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers."

2 Timothy 3:15-17 says, "And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

These passages from the word and others like them make it clear that believers have a mandate to teach the word. Christian education is therefore a high priority in kingdom building.

We Must Study

1 Timothy 2:15 makes it clear, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

To study the Word is to read it for understanding, compare it with other scriptures, visualize it with the help of historical background, and clarify it through repetitious analysis.

Most bible studies in the Baptist Church are done through the Sunday school. The church provides for each family, study materials, or books that give an explanation of the scriptures being studied to aid us in our private and family study. Each Sunday, teachers are present to answer questions and lead discussions on truths or points you have discovered in your study of the word.

Although bible study is essential to strengthening faith, there are too many Christians who neglect bible study. We hear them all over America: "I just don't like Sunday School. When I was a child my mother made me go and I said when I grow up I'd never go again." In other places we hear them say "I don't like Sunday school, they may call on me to read."

Even more unfortunate is the truth that there are many who lead in churches across the nation, whose witness is strong and powerful, neglect the Sunday morning bible study.

Since bible study is crucial to every Christian, the church should pay special attention the caliber of people we select to teach. Those who cannot make themselves available to attend the meetings of teachers and to improve themselves while in service through the church training program should be lovingly phased out!

This training gives him the courage to witness, the faith to endure trials, and the inspiration in moments of desperation.

The word of God:

—feeds me when I am hungry!
—comforts me when I am lonely!
—corrects me when I am wrong
—refreshes me when I am tired!
—satisfies me when I am thirsty!
—lifts me when I am low!
—challenges me when I am indifferent!
—sustains me when I am afraid!
—directs me when I am confused!
—motivates me when I am discouraged!
—soothes me when I am dying!

No wonder the scriptures declare, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path."

No wonder the song writer wrote, "Hide your word in my heart Oh God."

If you hide your word, it will:

—Bless me when I'm burdened
—Cheer me when I'm sad
—Strengthen me when I'm weak
—Calm me when I'm troubled
—Revive me when I'm weary!

Hide your word in my heart oh God!

We must know God for ourselves

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that all the learning in the world is insignificant if we do not have a personal relationship with God.

To achieve success in the Christian life is to go beyond a mere knowledge of biblical facts, we must know the Lord.

To meet the master's directive for educational success, we must be sure that every generation knows more than the words of the Lord, but that they truly KNOW the Lord themselves.

You might be able to explain that there are 66 books in the Bible, 39 in the Old and 27 in the New, but you must know the Lord for yourself!

You may be able to explain that the Bible contains books of prophecy, literature, history and doctrine, but you must also know the Lord for yourself!

You may be able to explain that the Bible has 3,586,489 letters 773,692 words, 31,173 verses, and 1,189 chapters but you must also know the Lord.

You may know that the longest verse in the Bible is Esther 8:9, and the shortest in the English language is John 11:35 “Jesus Wept” but you must also know Lord for yourself!

When you know the Lord for Yourself, you know that when you are:

—Sick, He will be a Doctor in your sickroom!

—In Trouble, He will be a Lawyer in your courtroom!

—Lost and confused, He will make a way out of no way!

—Hungry and thirsty, He will feed you with bread on high. That’s why the old warriors cried out “Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, feed me till I want no more!”

When you know the Lord for yourself, you know He will pick you up when you are stumbling!

When you know the Lord for yourself He will plant your feet on solid ground!

When you know the Lord for yourself, He will give you a new song to sing, a new walk to walk and a new talk to talk!

No wonder the song writer says, “You got to know Jesus, know God for yourself!” You got to know Jesus, you don’t need nobody else!”

Every saint should keep telling the world about the words of God, but we should also let the world know that we know Lord ourselves!

Tell them about Jesus!

Tell them how He lived on this Earth for 33 long years!

Tell them how He bore an old rugged cross!

Tell them how He died out on Calvary!

But, don’t forget to tell them that, early Sunday morning, He arose from the grave with all power in His hands!

Education for the Generation

SCRIPTURE: "Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life: but teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons;" Deuteronomy 4:9

Introduction

What does every believer need to successfully live the Christian life? There are many essentials needed but foremost on the list is the need to know God. Knowing God is the key to a spiritual relationship that will lead to salvation and a happy, fruitful life.

We receive our first education about God at home. When you were a child, what were you taught about God? Today, there are millions of adults whose first notion of who God is and what he is like came from what they heard said at home. Those who were fortunate to live in God fearing homes knew plenty about God even when they were little children. Those who were brought to Sunday school, learned bible scriptures and participated in discussions with their peers, learned much about God. It was not unusual to hear a six or 10 year old able to discuss the attributes of God in an intelligent way, despite their youth. It was a way of saying, "We're young, but we know."

There are many ways that children learn truths about life. Most of those ways do not involve any special classes, expenditures or special considerations. Many learn truths listening to their parents telling them truths and interpreting events in their lives in such a way that they grow in understanding, despite their age.

Parents teach important values to children in many ways. We learn these values so early in life that we literally "know" them before we go to school for the first day.

When parents do what they should, children learn about God. They know who he is, what he does, what he expects and what to expect of him.

As Christians, we begin to know the Lord when we are young. As we mature we know him increasingly better. The responsibility of every believer is to educate the young about the nature of God. They should know his laws and expectations as well as his goodness and grace.

The Book of Deuteronomy is the last of the five books of Moses. Written in the closing years of his life, Moses repeated again what he taught the people for over 30 years or so. The supremacy of godliness and the strict observance of God's law was the central focus of his teaching.

In this text, Moses notes that he taught the people what God taught him so that they would be prepared for the future that awaits them. He charged them to keep the law, do the law and cherish the law of God all of their days.

Since the moral law came from God himself, it was a treasure that should be taught to each succeeding generation. The law of God taught the importance of godliness, clean living, abstinence and the value of honesty and integrity to his children. Thus, Moses maintained that every parent had the responsibility of teaching these principles to their children; and should they be blessed with long life, to teach them to their grandchildren. They should be taught at home and in the public square. The importance of teaching was underscored to the point that Moses instructed that the laws of God should be taught in the morning, at noonday and at night; that they should be inscribed over the doorposts of their houses.

Although Moses lived for 120 years, he knew he would not always be present to be Israel's schoolmaster. Yet, the principles he taught were everlasting and should be continued throughout the generations. Those children of coming generations would need these guiding principles to possess their individual promised lands.

Thus, Moses closed his life by giving one final lesson to Israel before his death. It was the lesson that the people should fear God, walk in his ways and he will help them to possess the bright future in front of them.

Four Education Directives

In the first 10 verses of Deuteronomy chapter 4 Moses lays out four principles for spiritual success that should be taught to each generation:

KNOW WHAT GOD REQUIRES: Just as Moses told Israel to Harken to the commands of God (v1) each generation of believers today should be aware of what God requires. We should know his laws. We should know about the rewards for those who are obedient and we should know the penalties for those who fail to meet his requirements. The prophet asked, "What doth the Lord require?" The answer to the question was that we should be just and walk humbly before God.

KEEP GOD'S WORD PURE: Moses urged Israel to protect God's word from alterations (v2). Each generation should be taught what "thus saith the Lord" not variations based on the teaching of the latest trend. Those who want spiritual success must base that success on the unaltered word of God. The fact that the bible has persevered through all of the centuries should show how he himself has protected its truths. Those truths must be protected and passed on to each generation without adding to or subtracting from its meaning.

KEEP GOD'S COMMANDMENTS: Moses urged Israel in verses two and five to keep God's commandments. To "Keep" the commandments is to go beyond just knowing them. To keep them is to do them. No believer can expect to develop a strong spiritual life without keeping the commands of God. This important truth must be taught to our children. They must keep the commandments of God with respect to their individual lives and in the life of the church.

BE CAREFUL IN OUR DAILY WALK: Moses urged Israel to "take heed" in v.9. To take heed means to be careful. We should be careful as we conduct our daily lives to be sure that we do not forget the laws of God, what he requires of us and who we are. We should walk in the path of the Lord ourselves and then teach our children how to walk in that same path. It is often easier to talk the talk than it is to walk the walk. Here we are encouraged to walk and talk before our children so that they will learn the perfect will of God.

These four principles help believers to hide the word of God in their hearts and to display it in their everyday lives.

It is no wonder then that the scriptures declare, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path."

No wonder the song writer wrote, "Hide your word in my heart Oh God."

If you hide your word, it will:

—Bless me when I'm burdened

—Cheer me when I'm sad

—Strengthen me when I'm weak

—Calm me when I'm troubled

—Revive me when I'm weary!

Hide your word in my heart oh God!

We must know God for ourselves

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that all the learning in the world is insignificant if we do not have a personal relationship with God.

To achieve success in the Christian life is to go beyond a mere knowledge of biblical facts, we must know the Lord.

To meet the master's directive for educational success, we must be sure that every generation knows more than the words of the Lord, but that they truly KNOW the Lord themselves.

You might be able to explain that there are 66 books in the Bible, 39 in the Old and 27 in the New, but you must know the Lord for yourself!

You may be able to explain that the Bible contains books of prophecy, literature, history and doctrine, but you must also know the Lord for yourself!

You may be able to explain that the Bible has 3,586,489 letters 773,692 words, 31,173 verses, and 1,189 chapters but you must also know the Lord.

You may know that the longest verse in the Bible is Esther 8:9, and the shortest in the English language is John 11:35 “Jesus Wept” but you must also know Lord for yourself!

When you know the Lord for Yourself, you know that when you are:

—Sick, He will be a Doctor in your sickroom!

—In Trouble, He will be a Lawyer in your courtroom!

—Lost and confused, He will make a way out of no way!

—Hungry and thirsty, He will feed you with bread on high. That’s why the old warriors cried out “Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, feed me till I want no more!”

When you know the Lord for yourself, you know He will pick you up when you are stumbling!

When you know the Lord for yourself He will plant your feet on solid ground!

When you know the Lord for yourself, He will give you a new song to sing, a new walk to walk and a new talk to talk!

No wonder the song writer says, “You got to know Jesus, know God for yourself!” You got to know Jesus, you don’t need nobody else!”

Every saint should keep telling the world about the words of God, but we should also let the world know that we know Lord ourselves!

Tell them about Jesus!

Tell them how He lived on this Earth for 33 long years!

Tell them how He bore an old rugged cross!

Tell them how He died out on Calvary!

But, don’t forget to tell them that, early Sunday morning, He arose from the grave with all power in His hands!

Waking Up In Someone Else's Dream

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 30, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another. Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; Or ministry, let us wait on our ministering: or he that teacheth, on teaching; Or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that sheweth mercy, with cheerfulness." Romans 12:6-8 Let's just go ahead and be what we were made to be, without enviously or pridefully comparing ourselves with each other, or trying to be something we aren't. Romans 12:6 (Msg translation)

Introduction

Has there ever been a point in your life when you felt you were living a life that was picked out for you by someone else? You dressed the way someone else told you. You joined organizations that someone else picked for you. You wore clothes that someone else selected. You chose a profession someone else named for you. Did you pick your college or did someone plan that for you too? Often we spend most of our lives living out someone else's idea of what we should be. One day after many years pass we finally wake up and realize that we living someone else's dream.

We have seen it in many instances. We have seen the father who didn't make it to the pros, try to live his unfulfilled dream by pushing his son to do what he couldn't do. We have seen the mother who relives her childhood aspiration to be a cheer leader, majorette, beauty queen or debutante by pushing her daughter to walk the path of her secret desire.

When we woke up this morning, did we wake up in our dream, or that of someone else? Is there a wife who is living her husband's dream? Is there a husband who dreads his life because secretly he'd like to wake up just once and find himself living out his own dream?

It's frustrating when others constantly belittle your dream or aspiration by comparing you to others; diminishing your self confidence and self esteem.

Jacob and Esau were twins. Esau being oldest should have received the right of inheritance from his father Isaac. Jacob had no problem with that but his mother thought otherwise. She pushed him to go a direction in life that caused him misery and frustration for nearly 20 years. He lived out his mother's dream and cheated his brother out of his birthright. He lived out his uncle Laban's dream and worked 14 years before he could wake up in his own dream with Rachel by his side.

Even beyond parental influence, sometimes we waste many valuable years trying to live up to someone else's expectations. We spend our lives trying to meet the ideal that they have set for us; to the point that we never really get a chance to be who we want to be.

That was the theme of the Movie, "Runaway Bride." It was about a bride who was engaged several times but panicked several times just as she began to walk down the isle. It turns out that she lost herself in becoming the woman each man wanted her to be and realized as she walked down the isle that she was not living her dream but someone else's and she ran.

But who are we? What did God put us here for? What are we supposed to do with our lives?

Each believer has a purpose and lives that are lived according to that purpose are generally happy and fulfilled. Rick Warren in his book, "The Purpose Driven Life" makes the point that each person has certain gifts and abilities bestowed on them by God for a specific purpose. The challenge is for us to discover our purpose and spend our lives doing what we were put here to do.

That brings to mind the Message Translation of today's text, "Let's just go ahead and be what we were made to be, without enviously or pridefully comparing ourselves with each or trying to be something we aren't." The plain English version of this passage makes it clear that it's not a good idea to wake up living someone else's dream, but that we should strive to "be what we are made to be" and do that to the best of our ability.

As Christians, we give our best in the master's service. We can't be what someone else wants us to be, we must be ourselves and revel in the completeness of our task and the unity of our purpose, which is to glorify God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he reminds believers that they must do what they have been equipped to do for the kingdom to the best of their ability.

Paul made it plain that each individual has a different assortment of God-given abilities. Some abilities or gifts may be similar to that of others, but some are given more than others "according to the grace" (v6) that God chose to shower upon us. No believer should feel that he has to measure up to the gifts of someone else or be in competition with another when it comes to service in the body of Christ. 1 Corinthians 12:4 reminds us that there are "diversities of gifts, but the same spirit." Some gifts are called the "grace gifts or "charismata. These gifts involve communicating or prophesying to others in a variety of ways that range from speaking, teaching, art, music, dance, and variety of other communication based abilities. Our gifts are performed in proportion or in agreement with the amount of faith we exercise.

Paul mentioned six other gifts after he talks about prophesy in verse six. He lists ministry or serving... teaching... encouraging... contributing... leadership, and showing mercy. The six are not often viewed as abilities by some but they really are. There are many who are gifted followers. They are the nameless "Indians" who do the detail work for those who are gifted to be "Chiefs." Everyone can't teach, but those who can, are able to make it plain. Whatever our gifts we should exercise them faithfully as a stewardship from God.

Look at the gifts:

"Exhortation" is the Greek word paraklesis, literally "a calling near" or "a calling for." In other words, exhortation is comfort. Some folk have the gift of being able to comfort. Those who can "exhort" or inspire and encourage have a unique gift.

"He that giveth" is he that shares his earthly possessions. God may have given you a gift of making money — and that is a gift. I know several Christian businessmen who have the Midas touch. That is their gift.

"He that ruleth, with diligence" refers to the gift of leadership. There are certain men who are leaders, and they need to exercise their gift in the church so that everything might be done decently and in order. The business of the church requires a man with the gift of administration. Leadership ability is a gift that is reflected in 1 Thessalonians 5:12 as "standing over" others in the Lord. Everyone cannot lead.

"He that sheweth mercy" indicates the gift of performing acts of kindness. For instance, there are some believers who can bring a sunbeam into a sickroom, others cast a dark shadow.

Paul noted that we were given the gift and put here for a purpose. The question is whether we will do what we are meant to do or whether we will spend our lives living out someone else's purpose.

The Waking Moment

What was your waking moment? That was the moment when you realized who you were, and what you must do with your life? Your waking moment comes when everything that you have learned, seen and heard merge at one precise moment in a way that makes everything crystal clear.

It's the moment you decide that I must do something about my future.

It's the moment you decide I must work the work of him that sent me.

AT THE MOMENT OF YOUTH: For some, the waking moment comes in their youth. Young Solomon was just a youth when God spoke to him in a dream AND challenged him to rise to his destiny. In that dream God told him to ask for anything he wanted. In that moment Solomon decided to equip himself to live out his destiny. He asked for wisdom, received it and woke up each day, not living his father's dream but his own. When Jesus was missing after several days of worship and study in Jerusalem, Mary and Joseph found him studying with the scholars, he surprised them when he told them at age 12 that it was "time for him to be about his father's business." Many young people are struggling to find their own "waking moment"-The point which they finally define themselves and understand what it is that God has for them to do on this earth. At that point they make a conscious decision to live for him and carry out his will for their lives.

AT THE MOMENT OF DESPAIR: For the prodigal son, his waking moment was at the moment of despair. He defined his life by what his friends told him. He defied his parents and demanded his portion of goods instantly. In a far country, he lived the dream of his friends. He partied with them and had good times. Then one day he noticed that all of his friends were gone, along with his money. When he took a job slopping hogs, he reached his waking moment. The bible says, "When he came to himself." Like the prodigal there are many who have to hit the bottom before they realize that they have spent their lives living someone else's dream. When the prodigal woke up he saw himself in a nightmare. He was feeding swine. Likewise the young man or woman who wakes up addicted to drugs or alcohol realizes that he has been living a nightmare, trying to live in someone else's world. The gifts of his birth were not being used. The god-given talents possessed had not been developed. The course that was his destiny was not being pursued. Today, there are millions who should conclude as the prodigal did, "I will arise and go to my father."

AT THE MOMENT OF DECISION: On the Damascus Road, Saul saw the light and heard the voice of God for himself. He was never the same. It was a defining moment.

Moreover, the Damascus road is the road you travel when the Spirit of the Lord opens your eyes and you experience the presence of God for yourself.

Before we experience God we view our abilities as talents. After we experience God we understand that what we have is designed for a greater purpose. My ability to organize, my knack for making money, my ability to counsel, my ability to feel the pain of others, my voice, my musical talent, are all more than just abilities once we know Go. When know God we see them as gifts from God and we seek to use them in his service.

The world gave us a dream life, rich, famous, maids, butlers, cooks, gold trimmed toilet seats and diamonds. Each morning we awakened trying to meet the world's expectation, we get frustrated as we compare what we have with Bill Gates.

But one day we met the Lord and we saw things totally different. We understood our purpose and now we wake up living our own dream life…serving the Lord with all of our might.

On the Damascus Road the Lord gave us a new experience, a new song to sing, and a new testimony.

On the Damascus road we sang, "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore. Very deeply stained within, seeking to rise no more. But the master of the sea, heard my despairing cry, from the waters lifted me now safe am I. Love lifted me."

God blesses dreams according to his will

Finally, brothers and sisters we should remember that if we have been waking up in the wrong dream, the power of God can make it right!

There have been many who have awakened to find themselves in the wrong dream. That's when they realized that they were not using their gifts for his service but were squandering them by the way.

One morning Samson awakened and realized that his head was in the wrong lap. For the sake of a beautiful woman he had told his secrets and lost favor with God. When he finally awakened he could not see with his eyes, but he could see with his spirit and God gave him his power one more time.

One morning Jonah awakened and realized that he was living in a nightmare. Out of disobedience he chose to run away from Nineveh and not preach the word to them. When he finally awakened he was inside the belly of a big fish, he realized that he trying to something than what God told him to do. He repented and preached, and Nineveh repented, as the power of God moved over the city.

One morning Moses awakened and realized that he was living another man's dream. As slept on the silk sheets of Egypt he came to know that he was put on this earth for the purpose of leading Israel out of bondage. Through his life an entire nation became free.

There is somebody here today who is living a life that someone else has chosen, while the life that God equipped them for is untouched?

There is no happiness like the happiness shared by the man and women who know that they are doing God's will. This truth keeps them walking in God's ways.

To walk in God's way is to walk in faith.

Through faith we can achieve the unachievable.

Through faith we can accomplish the impossible.

Through faith we can reach the unreachable.

When we trust in the Lord we don't worry about the frustrating turns that the road of life offers! We walk by faith knowing that the Lord will make a way!

When we wake up in someone's dream we might find:

-Desert, but God will provide an Oasis in the wilderness!

-Hunger, but God will provide a table in the presence of our enemies!

-Unbelievable odds, but God will help us to achieve the impossible

Those who trust in God:

-Think the unthinkable; Reach for the unreachable!

-Believe he unbelievable; Hope for the imaginable

-Live for the incredible; Achieve the improbable!

Those who trust in God know that all things are possible!

Maybe that's why the song writer wrote: I will trust in the Lord, I will trust in the Lord until I die!"

I don't know about you but I've decided to trust in the Lord!

Storms may rise! Winds may blow!

I will trust in the Lord till I die!

When you awaken to a new reality don't forget to tell the story.

Tell somebody about Jesus!

Tell somebody how he died!

Tell somebody how he arose after three days and nights!

Tell somebody that he is alive in your soul today!

Search for the American Idol

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 6, 2006

SCRIPTURE: And Laban went to shear his sheep: and Rachel had stolen the images that were her father's; Genesis 31:19. And now, though thou wouldest needs be gone, because thou sore longedst after thy father's house, yet wherefore hast thou stolen my gods? Genesis 31:30. "Now Rachel had taken the images, and put them in the camel's furniture, and sat upon them. And Laban searched all the tent, but found them not." Genesis 31:34

Introduction

Have you ever worshipped an idol? When that question is asked most believers shake their heads. Most of us have not bowed before statues of strange gods. Most of us are not like those we have seen on uncharted islands who dance naked before giant statues and sacrifice virgin girls them once a year. Most of us quickly answer, "I don't worship idols!" In the primitive worlds, worship of the idol is the focus of every life. The idol is god and they order their lives according to its dictates. Worship of the idol becomes the supreme goal of the primitive. It is more important than anything else.

The television show, "American Idol" weekly showcases individuals willing to brave national embarrassment to become the next "American Idol." Once they become the idol they become the object of worship, adoration, envy and inspiration of millions who want the chance to land a professional career and earn millions of dollars.

It's interesting that while many people quickly claim they have never worshipped an idol, would not hesitate to become an "American Idol."

What is an idol? An idol is a false god. Sometimes it is an image. Sometimes it can be person who is adored excessively, often blindly to the point of consumption. Sometimes it is an object or possession that we do anything to acquire and anything to keep.

What is most important to us is that which consumes our dreams and thoughts. If that is not from God, then it can quickly become our god.

Very few believers acknowledge the presence of idol gods in their lives or homes, but they are there consuming our thoughts and they become the object of life's quest.

They could be the cell phones that beep, ring and blink at us. They make us jump when they ring and they often require a tithe of our income and a free will offering for extra minutes. They punish us when we do not pay with silence, that kills us.

They could be our computers. A maze of little idols sitting on our desks, and laps with funny names like Dell, Sony and Gateway. We carry them on our hips and call them Treos. We listen to them speak and sing to us day and night with little plugs in our ears that block out the world and so we can hear our gods speak through our IPods.

They stare at us from many rooms of our houses: Big screens and flat screens and ready to command our attention for ours at a time at the click of a button. We call them televisions with High definition, surround sound and 100 channels of cable.

They could be closet full of shoes that we clean polish and cherish highly; they could be the shine on our car or the glitter of our rims. Could be the gold we wear on all of our fingers, around our necks and even on our teeth? Could it be an Xbox 360 or our fishing boat or a football?

While there is nothing inherently wrong with owning a cell phone, a car, new shoes a computer, television, automobile or any other possession, believers must be extremely careful not to let the things we use possess us rather than the other the way around. When we pay more for our cell phone bill, cable connection, internet access and other toys than we do to our church, then the extra things of our lives are quickly possessing us. When the pursuit and maintenance of our "things" gets to the point that it takes over our mind, then they are becoming our gods.

How can we tell? Use this measure. Which would upset you the most, to miss a day without television, a phone or internet or to miss a Sunday worship or midweek? That could give us an indicator of how our things are reaching from an obscure abyss and seizing hold of our lives and are becoming our idols.

Why is that millions want to be the American idol? Usually it is so they can make enough money to buy houses, cars, clothes and jewelry. The pursuit of "things" if we are not can become an all consuming passion to the point that they possess us and become our idols.-They even come before what God wants.

As believers, we strive to give God first place in our lives. There are many idol gods in the world but none of them will ever take the place of our real God, who we love obey and trust with all of our being.

Exposition

This text focuses on a passage of scripture that shows how upset a man became when someone stole his gods and what a woman was willing to risk to get and keep them.

The text focuses on Jacob's decision to return home after working nearly 20 years for his uncle Laban. Upon leaving his wife Rachel went into her father's cabinet and stole the family gods. When Laban returned he was upset because Jacob left, but he tremendously upset when he learned that not only had Jacob left with his entire family, sheep and servants, but he also took his idols. This upset him. He overtook Jacob and confronted him with a question "I know you wanted to go home, but why did you steal my gods?"

Jacob was not aware that his wife had stolen the gods and took an oath that anyone in his company who possessed the gods would be killed. Rachel knew the danger but she hid the idols in a camel sack then sat on it when her father came to search. She apologized for not standing and made up a lie about her month cycle being the reason.

She kept the gods. However, before Jacob could return home God commanded him to rid himself of all idols in the camp. It had to be done. They were found and destroyed and Jacob returned home.

The scripture does not tell why Rachel stole the gods, only that she did it. Recent research has revealed that people of the area believed that possession of the family gods meant a right of inheritance. A father passed the gods to his son indicating that he now owned his fathers possessions. Rachel theft of what is called the "teraphim" may have been to insure that she had an ample supply of "things" and possessions once she reached Jacob's homeland.

Jacob's God was powerful, but the teraphim were insurance.

Jacob's God was wonderful, but the teraphim would guarantee that "things" she loved could be acquired.

She trusted Jacob's god but she trusted the teraphim more; with them came "things."

Dealing with Idols

Today, believers must come to grips with the possibility that there may be idols in our homes. These idols are so cherished by us that we are willing to steal, lie or risk death to keep them. How many of us would kill an unarmed burglar who we caught leaving our homes with our television, cell phone and computer? How many of people steal, buy hot merchandise and cheat just to get these same items. Some steal them and risk their lives to have them.

A look at Rachel and Laban in this text sheds light upon the impact of idols on our lives.

IDOLS APPEAL TO OUR CARNAL NATURE: Those things that we idolize appeal to our carnal nature. It is our desire to advance or protect ourselves even at the expense of others. Rachel stole the idols knowing that in her family it meant her brother would not receive his inheritance. The sisterly love she felt was overpowered by the prospect of going to a strange land without an inheritance. She was willing to steal to have the capacity to acquire the lifestyle she enjoyed. Is that not the case today? The things we idolize often motivate us to cheat and steal. Those who shoplift hear the voice of an idol god calling to them? Those who embezzle from their companies hear the same voice? Thieves burglars and others do not steal to eat, they steal to survive; they steal to thrive in the fashion of their gods. The man who steals does not care about the injury or loss to his neighbor, employer or victim. His idol god commanded him to steal even though Jehovah commands, "Thou shalt not steal." The command he follows is the voice of his god.

IDOLS WILL CAUSE OUR PAST TO CATCH UP TO US: When Laban realized that his gods had been stolen he pursued Jacob even though Jacob had a seven day head start. For many days Rachel felt she had gotten away with her theft. She was safe in the mountains. Then one day, out of the blue, Laban showed up. Her past had caught up with her. In a similar way there are many of us who spent our lives running from our past, only to have it catch up with us. Young spend thrifts soon stare their wild pasts in the face when they try to buy a house and are faced with a low credit score. Those who have had secret lives hidden from family and friends are frustrated when their past catches up with them. Crimes, offences and shady dealings of the past usually will catch up with us. Jesus, speaking to his disciples said in Luke 12:2-3, "There is nothing concealed that will not be disclosed, or hidden that will not be made known. What you have said in the dark will be heard in the daylight, and what you have whispered in the ear in the inner rooms will be proclaimed from the roofs."

IDOLS INDICATE OUR THE LEVEL OF OUR TRUST: Our idols indicate the level of our trust in God. Rachel watched how Jacob prayed to God and was blessed. She saw how he prospered despite opposition because of his God. When she agreed to go home with Jacob she was placed in a position of trusting God for herself, not just observing Jacob. She trusted Jacob's God but she trusted her idols more. There are many who share her dilemma. We trust God but we trust our idols more. We trust God but only to the extent that he will get us the idols that we need. It's the idols and what they promise that motivates many people above and beyond what God offers. Jacob however, trusted God, not idols and God provided for him, protected him and brought him safely home. There is nothing wrong with having a healthy bank account, but don't put your trust in money; you have it today and it's gone tomorrow. The song writer said it best, "I will trust in the Lord until I die."

OUR BIGGEST IDOL IS "ME"- Rachel stole the gods but her biggest idol was Rachel. The idols were not for Jacob, but they were for her. Is it possible that the biggest idol that we all have is ourselves? We idolize ourselves and see the world, even the church, from the context how it will help me. If we look at a photograph of ourselves in a group, we judge the quality of the photographic by how well we look in the picture. If we don't look good, it's a bad picture. If we look good and everyone else looks terrible, it's a good picture. We idolize ourselves. We stare at ourselves in the mirror, primp and pamper ourselves. Like Rachel, want a set of gods that will take care of "me." We search for a church that will meet "My" needs and serve me, visit me, call me, pray for me, feed me, pay bills for me, and help me. It never entered our minds that we should seek a church where we can meet the needs of others: feed others, help others pray for others. It never dawned on us to make ourselves available to God for whatever he needs done; we want a convenience store God where we can run get what we need and leave.

An unknown author wrote these words, ""I would like to buy $3 worth of God please. Not enough to explode my soul or disturb my sleep, but just enough to equal a cup of milk or snooze in the sunshine. I don't want enough of him to love a white man or to volunteer at a homeless shelter. I want ecstasy. Not transformation. I want the warmth of the womb not the new birth. I want a pound of eternal life, served quickly; and make that order "to go." I would like to buy $3 worth of God please, make it quick because I'm in a hurry.

When we put ourselves before God, we become our biggest idol. The commandment is still true, that "thou shalt have no other gods before me."-even if that god is me.

Turning Loose Idols

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that our quest is not to become an American idol but to be an obedient child of God.

To be an idol or to possess an idol is to put something in front of God. We hear the word of God in Matthew 6:33, "but seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all things things shall be added unto you."

Idols solicit the wrath of God and if hang on to them they will bring us down, but if we turn loose the idols, God will lift us up.

Today there are many who are generally good, law abiding people who are frustrated by their pursuit of idols that are making their lives miserable.

We know that our idols are taking over when:

—We jump when our phone rings, but ignore a call from God

—Instead of driving the car, the quest to keep and maintain our car drives us

—We keep record of our computer passwords, but know little about the word of God

—When we play games on our cell phones even in a bible study or worship

Idols can take your:

—Happiness and turn it into sadness; Peace and turn it into confusion —Success and turn it into a failure; friends and make them your enemies.

—Can take your love of life and turn it into a secret storm!

—Can tear your marriage to shreds and send you to the divorce courts.

If you can let go of your idols, there is a hand that will lift you up!

If you can let go of your idols and troubling spirits, there is a hand that will reach down and pull you up! It's the hand of Jesus!

If you let go of this world he'll give you a new song to sing. That's what the song writer had in mind when he said "You can have all of this world just give me Jesus!

Jesus! Our shelter in a time of storm!

Jesus! Our rock in a weary land!

Jesus! Who died out on Calvary, but early Sunday morning, arose from the dead!

He is the Lord and him do we trust!

Ordinary People With An Extraordinary Purpose

A Sermon By The Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 2006

SCRIPTURE: Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: 20 Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen. Matthew 28:19-20

Introduction

What do Harriet Tubman, Martin Luther King, and Booker T. Washington have in common? They were all ordinary people whose lives made a difference to millions. Their social circumstances, economic conditions and opportunities were the same as millions of others just like themselves. What they had in common was the fact that they were ordinary people. While they were similar to millions because of their ordinary existence they were different because, unlike the others, they had an extraordinary purpose for being here. History has shown that all of them achieved the purposes for which they were born and our race is better because of them.

Have you ever wondered why God placed you where you are today? What is your purpose? Understanding the mysterious ways of God has been a puzzle to many over the centuries. We are no exception. We often wonder why God selected us, out of all of his creation, and placed us in the unique spot that we occupy in the world today. It is humbling when we consider that God could have chosen anyone, anywhere to do what we do. Yet he chose us.

We ask, "Why me?"

"I'm just an ordinary Joe; why me?"

"I'm just an ordinary Jane; why me?"

When we consider the work that God has placed into the hands of a legion of ordinary believers, each of us is humbled that God has placed the awesome task of reaching the world on his behalf in the hands of such ordinary people as ourselves. For some reason, the master wants to use the simple, ordinary things of life to achieve his great purpose. Perhaps that's what David had in mind when he wrote in Psalm 89:19, "I have laid help upon one that is mighty; I have exalted one chosen out of the people."

Unseen by the hand of man God has exalted an army of the ordinary to do the extraordinary.

Often we cannot make sense of God's choices or his decisions. Often they don't make sense to us. We know he has a reason but we just don't understand why he used so many ordinary common people to become prophets, and leaders. Neither can we see why he would use an ordinary boy's lunch to feed 5,000. We don't know why he does what he does but obviously he has a purpose.

Using ordinary people to achieve a great purpose is baffling. It doesn't make sense. But many godly things don't make sense to us initially. Consider the little rabbit that was fascinated with its newfound speed. The bunny loved to out run the creatures of the wood. He out ran the toad frog and Brer snake could never catch him. In fact, he took on every creature of the woods to test his skill. The little rabbit was disturbed however, because each time his folks let him go to the woods alone, mama rabbit would prick the bottom of his foot with a thorn. When they left, without explanation, the little rabbit limped around for hours in pain. When they returned they said nothing. After a while, the little rabbit was concerned and asked mama rabbit the question, "Why do you stick my foot every time you leave me alone, it doesn't make sense and it seems cruel for you to do me this way." Mama rabbit hopped over to her son and said, "There is a hound dog and hunter that love to chase little fast rabbits. Knowing you, you would give them a run. It may not make sense to you now, but it's better to be a living bunny with a sore foot than a dead rabbit with a fast reputation." It did not make sense to him at the time, but that sore foot was keeping him alive.

God gave a great mission to ordinary people. It doesn't make sense to trust such a lofty purpose to the ordinary, but he did. We know his purpose is clear and is just. We don't question his decision; we simply carry out his will.

As Christians, we are encouraged to know that God looks among the lowly and gives them a mighty mission. We may think of ourselves as unworthy, but God plans to use the church to reconcile a lost world back unto himself.

Exposition

This text is known as the great commission. It occurs after the resurrection as Jesus speaks to the disciples giving them their final assignment. He told them to get the word out about salvation and redemption to the entire world, to baptize believers and then teach them the way of life prescribed for Christians.

The believers who were assembled before Jesus as he gave this commission to go into the entire world were ordinary people. They were fishermen and laborers; some were publicans some had been labeled as "sinners" before the met Christ.

They were about as ordinary as could be. There were no leaders of the synagogue, wealthy or powerful people in the group. Neither were their emissaries of the king or representatives of the Roman Empire in this group.

These were simply ordinary people who were given an extraordinary job to do; to evangelize and disciple the known world!

This commission that Christ gave his disciples, in a few short years resulted in the expansion of the faith to Asia Minor, the cities of Greece and to nearly all of the known world of their time. It appeared to be an impossible mission, given to penniless disciples who had nothing to move on but faith in the promises of the savior.

They were ordinary believers who were commissioned to perform an extraordinary task; and they did it well.

The Purpose of the Church

The church began with ordinary people and has existed for over 2000 years, sustained by ordinary people. There have been many who have become great as a result of their work in the church, but the overwhelming majority of the church's army of believers have been ordinary people.

Today, the church still needs ordinary people to achieve its extraordinary purpose.

The mission today the same as the one given to the church in the Book of Acts. We must "Go ye therefore" and teach, preach and reach all nations. That's an extraordinary purpose.

Our mission is not to have a great worship on Sunday, raise a lot of money and go home. We must evangelize. To evangelize means we must reach into the hell holds of the world and extend the firm but forgiving hand of God to an uncaring world. Moreover, we must teach the Word of God to those we save. Beyond that we must equip them to live the Christian life through their relationship with brothers and sisters of the faith.

That's not an ordinary mission. It is extra-ordinary.

Beyond that the church needs to reach out. There are many today who are involved in various forms of outreach for a variety of reasons. Outreach may include providing food for the hungry, assistance to battered families, housing for the homeless, assistance to wayward youth, or promotion of benevolent causes. Outreach is essential to kingdom building.

We must reach out and touch the wounded and the lost of the world in the name of Jesus.

To save the lost, nurture the saved, and keep reaching out in love is not an ordinary mission, it is an extra-ordinary mission.

The Recognizes its Purpose

What makes the church strong today is that it is made up of millions of ordinary people who understand their extraordinary purpose.

This understanding provides believers with the ability to maintain a spiritual balance in this crazy world because they have a sense of purpose and divine destiny. The nineteenth century Polish poet Cyrrian Norwid wrote "To be what is called happy, one should have (1) something to live on, (2) something to live for, (3) something to die for. The lack of one results in drama. The lack of two result in tragedy." Martin Seligman, the eminent psychologist, notes that the lack of meaning in our society today has reached epidemic proportions. He emphasizes that finding meaning requires "an attachment to something larger than ourselves."

All of these smart men and women simply repeat in different words what Jesus tells every believer. "If you want to save your life, lose it. The man that loses his life saves it." That paraphrase explains Jesus' teaching that believers find meaning and purpose in life when we plunge ourselves into a calling and mission greater than ourselves. Those who have a sense of purpose are able to deal with life. Martin Luther King said, "Any man who has not found something for which he is willing to die, is not fit to live." When we find our purpose, then we achieve balance and sanity in a crazy world.

The reason the church cannot be defeated is because its cause is championed by legions of believers who are empowered by God, intent on achieving a Godly purpose, even at the risk of death.

What Shall We Do Then?

Finally, brothers and sisters we must reaffirm our conviction that despite the fact that we are just ordinary people we are determined to carry out our extraordinary purpose.

It is frustrating sometimes to consider that great commission given 2000 years ago. It is frustrating when we consider how improbable it appeared to those who heard the commission given.

An impossible mission was given to an improbable crowd of untrained, unlettered missionaries, sent on a journey to achieve the unreachable and the unattainable.

It was an extraordinary mission.

The ordinary foot soldiers in the army of God must continue to lift Jesus up in extraordinary ways!

The ordinary laborers in the world's vineyard must work until the day is done; until the setting of the sun!

The ordinary believer who prays and works in hope and faith that God will provide an extraordinary increase, must continue without ceasing.

We the ordinary, must keep our eyes on our extra-ordinary purpose.

The church has seen a great example of the ordinary doing the extraordinary.

Down in Bethlehem an ordinary child was born, but that child had an extraordinary purpose.

This child's life was in God's hands. When your life is in God's hand, you go where he tells you to go. You do what he tells you to do.

Down in Bethlehem, a child with a purpose was born.

His mission was to Bring:

—Hope to the disillusioned and salvation to the lost.

—Life and provide it more abundantly.

—Peace on earth and goodwill toward men.

—Comfort in the midst of calamities & strength in weakness.

—Assurance in the midst of agonies & power in the midst of problems.

—Safety in times of trouble and Shelter in time of storm!

Down in Bethlehem a child was born, his name was Jesus!

His purpose was to give us salvation.

Our purpose is to advance his kingdom around the world.

Our mission is to help the world see the invisible hand of God in the affairs of men.

Our mission is to let the world know that if it has made advancements in education, it was God's hand in the plan.

Our mission is to let the world know that if it has made technological advancements, it was God's hand in the plan.

Our mission is to let the world know that if it is to be saved it must acknowledge God's hand and accept him as Lord.

Our mission is to help the world see God's hand in the plans of man.

When God's hand is in the plan..

—The world may kick you down, but God will pick you up!

—The world may strike you out, but God will give you a home run!

—The world may think you are a loser, but God will make you a winner!

—The world may think you are weak, but God will make you strong!

When God's hand is in the plan the impossible becomes possible!

When God's hand is in the plan, the improbable becomes probable!

When God's hand is in the plan, the unthinkable becomes thinkable!

When God's hand is in the plan, the ordinary can achieve the extraordinary!

It's the same hand the carried an old rugged cross to Calvary one day!

The world intended it for bad, but God had a hand in the plan began in Bethlehem and ended early Sunday morning when he arose from the grave with all power!

All power in his hands!

Who Is Your Pilot?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 13, 2006

SCRIPTURE:" In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths. " Proverbs 3:6

Introduction

Have you seen a real funny commercial on television lately? There are some that can really crack your sides. There are three that are absolutely hilarious. One is the set of commercials for Di-tech. They have a series of scenarios that end with the line, "Lost another one to Di-Tech!" Then there is Geico. They have a series of commercials that feature an Australian accented Gecko. But the one that really cracks sides are the series of commercials that interrupt the story line to announce the product.

One funny one deals with a man who gets into a helicopter and the man in the cockpit takes off. Below, on the ground, there is another man waving his arms and shouting. The passenger then asks the man in the cockpit, "You are the pilot aren't you?" The man answers, "No, but I did spend a night at a Holiday Inn Express!" - He wasn't a pilot, the real pilot was on the ground screaming and yelling and waving his arms!

The man jumped into a helicopter and left his pilot on the ground, waving his arms and screaming like crazy! That was funny!

Is it possible that some of us jump into life like it's one big helicopter ride and leave that pilot on the ground? When it happens in real life, it is everything but funny.

Just like the man in the commercial we often ignore those screaming, meddling, busy bodies on the ground. We just want to take off with our lives. We never stop to ask, who or what may be driving our lives.

Many of us have made the mistake of jumping into life and leaving the pilot. We knew we need a pilot but we wanted to get away so badly that we never stopped to ask. We just wanted to get into something as quickly as we could.

As Christians, we recognize that God directs our lives. We never leave home without him. He's in control and is the captain of our souls. He is our pilot.

Exposition

This text focuses on a Proverb of Solomon that points to the importance of allowing God to direct our lives instead of self direction.

Solomon was the third King of Israel. He is respected as a man who possessed great wisdom. Most of his wisdom was given to him by God. However, some of his wisdom was learned in the school of hard knocks.

As a very young man Solomon became King of Israel. He recognized the enormity of his position and prayed for guidance. One night, while he slept, God appeared to him in a dream and gave him the opportunity to wish for anything he wanted as King. God promised to give him whatever he wanted. It was a chance to pick life the way he wanted, down to smallest detail. Riches, fame, possessions and anything else were available to him if he wanted. In 1 Kings 3:9 he decided that it would be best to have an understanding heart and let God lead him.

Thus, much of the Book of Proverbs is a collection of the wisdom of Solomon. It reflects what he had been given by God through revelation and what he learned through the experiences of his life.

Proverbs chapter 3 refers to one of the great truths about life that Solomon learned and reduced to a mere proverb, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him and he will direct your path."

When we think on it now, what it says is simple. Let God be your pilot. Follow his direction, consult him, and he will direct us safely to the path that we should take.

The nature of the Pilot

The way that God directs our paths is strikingly similar to the way a pilot directs a plane.

PILOTS HAVE FLOWN SOLO THEMSELVES. Every licensed pilot knows how to fly a plane because he has flown solo himself. No one would want a pilot who has never flown a plane before. We want a pilot with experience. Yet, often we ignore the wisdom of those who have been where we are trying to go and strike out with a pilot who has never flown himself. When Jesus came to the earth he came on a solo flight. He could have come with the hosts of heaven at his side. Instead, he came to walk the lonely trail of life just as each person does. He experienced danger, hunger, fatigue, failure, joy, acceptance and rejection. He endured pain, agony and even betrayal. That's one of the reasons that we accept him as our pilot because he has flown this life solo before. He knows how we feel. None of us should attempt to travel this life guided by persons who have not experienced life itself. Even with this knowledge however, there are millions today that still take off with a pilot who has never flown solo himself.

PILOTS FILE FLIGHT PLANS: A good pilot files a flight plan with the Federal Aviation Authority before every trip. A flight plan tells departure time, expected arrival time. It also tells what will be done in case of bad weather, how many will be on board and name of the pilot. No one should want a pilot who doesn't know where he is going and doesn't know what to do when the storms break out. When Jesus left heaven, he and his father worked out a plan to save fallen man. They knew when he would arrive. They also knew that 33 years later he would make a departure. When storms came, Jesus had a plan; he spoke to the winds and the waves and the obeyed his will. He knew where he was and where he was going at all times. Today there are many who have no idea who they are or where they are going in life. They have no plan, they just live day by day. We can experience deep trouble when a person who has no plan tries to lead others who have no plan. It's a tough trail to walk when the blind lead the blind. Anyone we accept as our pilot should be one who has a plan and has filed that plan with the FAA with the Father's Approval and Anointing.

PILOTS WAIT FOR CLEARANCE FROM THE TOWER: Pilots never take off, land, change altitudes or change directions without getting clearance from the tower. The air traffic controllers see what the pilot cannot see. They know what above and below them. They also know when the path is clear. Pilots never move without tower clearance. Jesus constantly prayed. On mountainsides, in homes, on boats and ships and even in the Garden; Jesus prayed for direction and clearance. Even on the last night that he spent before his captivity he requested clearance to change course. He did not want to go to Calvary, he sought a route change. Even while he was asking however, he said "Never-the-less" not my will but thy will be done. Today every believer should immolate Christ in this respect. He would not undertake a venture unless he received the approval of the father. Neither should we. Prayer is our communication with the tower. Prayer is our way of asking for permission to take off, land or change course. Sometimes all we need to do is change the altitude, but we ask God about that too. A good pilot never moves without clearance.

When the Lord Is In Control

Finally brothers and sisters, we must consider that we have a better chance of making it home if God is our pilot.

There are many people today who sport license tags on their cars that say, God is their co-pilot. The co-pilot is not the pilot; he's the second man in charge. He takes over only when the pilot cannot.

In this life, brothers and sisters, it is better to be the passenger and let God be the pilot.

When God is our pilot he will lead us and direct our paths.

When God is our pilot it won't matter whether we meet turbulence and strong winds, he is the master of the wind and waves!

When God is our pilot it won't matter if danger lurks behind every cloud, because our pilot can see on the other side of trouble.

When God is the pilot he leads. That's why we say:

Lord lead me. Like you lead the children of Israel as a pillar of cloud by day and pillar of fire by night!

Lead me...through the wilderness of hard times that looms on my horizon.

Lead me...through the dark shrouded midnights that will darken my days.

Lead me...through shadow laden valleys of difficulty.

Lead me...through and meandering streams of uncertainty!

Lead me, guide me along the way, Lord you lead me I cannot stray. Lord let me walk each day with thee, Lead me oh Lord lead me.

I heard an old pilgrim say, "Guide me oh thy great Jehovah. Pilgrim in this barren land, I am weak but thou art mighty, hold me in thy powerful hand!

One song writer said, "I do not know how long twill be, or what the future holds for me. But this I know, if Jesus leads me, I shall get home someday."

I don't know about you but I want Jesus to walk with me and guide my footsteps along the way!

Jesus, my bread in starving land!

Jesus, my way out of no way!

Jesus, my shelter in a time of storm!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning, arose from the dead!

I want Jesus to lead me. Where he leads me I will follow; all the way!

Look where he brought us from!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 2006

SCRIPTURE: "But he brought us out from there to bring us in and give us the land that he promised on oath to our forefathers." Deuteronomy 6:23

Introduction

How far have you come to get where you are? Very few of us have arrived at our present positions in life without going through many experiences. If the truth be told many of us would have to admit that we have experienced a variety of changes in the course of our lives that have helped to shape and mold the way we think, act, and move. For the most part we are not the same as we were many years ago. Most of us have learned some tough lessons in the school of hard knocks. These lessons combined with our experience have given us a great appreciation for those who have succeeded because our experiences have helped us to understand that no one succeeds without struggle. Perhaps that's what Frederick Douglass had in mind when he said, "Where there is no struggle there is no progress."

Booker T. Washington once said that we cannot judge a man by where we find him at the present but we must judge a man by how far he has had to come to reach his present state. Certainly Booker T. Washington could speak to this subject for he was an individual who emerged from slavery to educate himself and to climb above the low expectations of all those around him. Those who visited his fine home in Tuskegee, Alabama had to be constantly reminded that he was not always an educator or a scholar. Neither was he always a man who was acquainted with the president of the United States or other great leaders of the land. Only when we considered his lowly origins could we grasp the enormity of his accomplishment. That's when we, like all others, look in amazement and say to ourselves "look where God has brought us from."

On occasions such as these we gather to celebrate our victory over low expectations and negative influences. We celebrate our victory over obstacles, stumbling blocks, and adverse circumstances. We celebrate our refusal to accept defeat or be conquered by the pessimism of those around us. When we celebrate we also look back, with a nostalgic eye, over the long meandering road that we have traveled. We celebrate our victory over the mud and miry clay that threatened to swallow us and drown us in self pity, a myriad of excuses and an ocean of procrastination. When we look back over the pitfalls from whence we have arisen we can't help but say, "Look where he's brought me from."

When we consider the danger of the moment we realize how blessed we have been. Five years ago we were among millions in this country who became aware of our vulnerability when we saw the attack on the World Trade Center in New York. We are enduring the pain of daily watching the death toll associated with the war in Iraq. We are still trying to heal as a result of the devastating effects of hurricane Katrina a year ago. Yet, despite all that, we stand today as a living testimony that God is able. When we look back we can't help but say, "Look where he brought me from."

As Christians, we are grateful to Almighty God who has raised us and protected us through all the years. He has brought us a mighty long way. In the words of the song writer, "I don't believe he brought us this far to leave us."

Exposition

This text focuses on the final instructions of Moses to the Children of Israel before they entered into the Promised Land.

At 120 years old, Moses was aware that the people would make it to the land of promise, although he himself would not get there with them.

In the first 14 verses of Deuteronomy 28, which means "a second look", Moses looks back over where God has brought them from and peeps over into the future as well.

As Moses stood atop Mt. Nebo, he had to look back for a moment. He had to remember those who left Egypt with hope in their hearts, on their way to the Promised Land. Now as the children and grandchildren of those old warriors stood at the base of Mt. Nebo a sigh of appreciation can be heard across the centuries.

Today, the story must be told of the old warriors who worshipped by the light of lanterns and kept warm by wood burning stoves. The story must be told of the old warriors that kept the church doors open despite depressions, hard times and wars.

When we look back, like Moses, we must say to the world, 'Look where he's brought me from!"

Twas Grace that Brought us

How have we been able to come this far? Was it luck? Was it ingenuity? The words of the old hymn of the church might give us a clue:

"Tis grace hath brought me safe thus far, and grace will lead me home."

Defined, Grace is unmerited favor. It is blessings that have flowed from the providence of God to the undeserving. If any race understands God's Grace, it should be those who have experienced life's bitter pills. Those who have tasted the dregs of life and wallowed in the mud of one man's abuse of another, understands what it means to experience God's Grace.

Our people were brought to these shores, for the most part, against our will but we have broken the shackles that bound us and have risen.

We have picked the cotton, contributed to scientific development, built schools, expanded agriculture, represented this nation on foreign shores and loaned our wealth of inventions, novelties and joy. We have given America the songs of our past, the blues of our sorrows and the spirituals of never dying hope. And we have given America our blood in great battles to guarantee its freedom.

How have we come this far? It was nothing but the Grace of God. James Weldon Johnson puts it this way, "We have come over a way that with tears has been watered, we have come, treading our path through the blood of the slaughtered."

When we look back, we understand the lyrics of the Old Negro Spiritual "How I got Over! My soul looks back and wonders, How I Got over!" Only those who know about the love of God for all of his people, especially the wretched of the earth, can understand the mystery of how we got over!

How He brought us

When we look back we see that God where brought us from, but how did he do it?

How did he bring people like us so far?

He blessed us with his favor in a variety of ways:

Blessed in the Country or the City: Like Israel, we have been blessed whether we lived in the country or in the city. In the country, he protected us in sharecropper shacks with newspaper covered walls and wood burning stoves. He touched the ground with his finger and the cotton we planted grew tall and the bolls were full. Our families grew strong and he protected us from the sicknesses and illnesses that should have destroyed us because of our diet and rural lifestyle. Likewise, in the cities he blessed us. He helped us survive slum neighborhoods, and rat infested apartments owned by absentee landlords. We were not supposed to survive in the city because we had little learning, fewer opportunities and only the work of factory workers and domestics to maintain our families. Yet, whether in the country or in the city, we survived and flourished.

Blessed with large families: Like Israel, God blessed us with a spirit of family and a love for children. We had plenty of babies. Black babies, brown babies, yellow babies. We have babies, babies with plenty of hair, silky hair, kinky hair, and curly hair. Babies with naked bottoms, cloth diapers and Pampers. We had plenty of babies raised by a neighborhood of mamas, aunties, grandmas and next door neighbors. Everybody in the hood was a mama. It worked because somehow God gave us a sense of family that caused us to look at our neighbor's child as our own child and bad children were spanked by all of their mama's and papas in the neighborhood and then by their own too. Our babies came fast and families with 10 brothers and sisters were not unusual. God blessed those families with an abundance of love if they had nothing else; it's the only way that families with so little could be so large and still thrive.

Enemies rebuked before our eyes: Like Israel, we have seen our enemies rebuked and chastised before our eyes. We trembled when men rode through our community in white sheets and called themselves the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. We watched them lynch our mothers and fathers, beat our sisters and spit on our dreams. Some of us fought back like Denmark Vessey, Nat Turner, Marcus Garvey, Huey Newton and Malcolm. But most of us listened to Booker T., and Roy Wilkins, A. Phillip Randolph and Martin and we waited for God to move.

It was hard, but we held our peace until God got ready to move. And when he moved he opened the floodgates. He did it in a way that no one could deny that it wasn't by the power of the people as the Panthers demanded but by the Power of an almighty God.

That's when we all say, "Look where he's brought us from!"

What He brought us to Finally, brothers and sisters it's good to look back and see where the Lord has brought us from. It's also good to consider what he brought us to.

When Israel crossed the River Jordan, Joshua placed 12 stones in the river bed and another 12 on the edge of the river as land marks. He said when the children of future generations see the land mark and ask "What mean these stones" that they should then be told the story of how God brought them through the sea and the wilderness to safety on the other side.

David looked back and concluded in Psalms 126:3 "The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad"

When we look back we see how the Lord has taken our misfortunes and turned them to our advantage.

When we look back we see how the Lord took our:

—heartaches and turned them into hallelujahs

—sorrows and turned them into joy

—deficiencies and turned them into sufficiencies

—frustrations and turned them into faith

—Perplexities and turned them into peace

—miseries and turned them into miracles

When we look back, it helps us to make sure that we are going in the right direction. No wonder the song writer would declare: "Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land, I am weak but thou art mighty, hold me in thou powerful hand!"

When we think about how far we have come, we close up our fancy hymn books and neatly arranged chords and listen to the old warriors declare, "I love the Lord, he heard my cry!"

Look where he has brought us from!

When we were weak we heard the word declare' "But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost be upon you"

When we were hopeless we heard the song writer declare “Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine, oh what foretaste of glory divine!”

When we were defenseless we remembered that “A mighty fortress is my God. A very present help in a time of trouble”

When we remember where he has brought us from we remember that the Lord is ABLE:

-To encouraged the faint!

-To Strengthen the weak!

-Clothe the naked!

-Protect the Feeble!

-Notice the Neglected!

Look where he brought me from!

He brought me from living dangerously to the foot of Calvary!

He brought us from dope and popping pills to salvation at Golgotha’s hill!

He brought us from a life of floss and gloss to a new beginning at the foot of the Cross!

Look where he brought me from!

He brought me along a new road that leads to Jesus!

Jesus!

The same yesterday, today and forever more!

Jesus, who let them drive nails into his hands!

Jesus, who hung out on an old rugged cross!

Jesus, who dropped his head in the locks of his shoulder and died for our sins!

Jesus, who was buried in a borrowed tomb!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!

When we look back, we see that it’s been Jesus walking beside us all of the way!

That’s why our testimony is: “Walk with me Lord, Walk with me, while I’m on this tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus to walk with me!”

You walked with my mother, now walk with me!

You walked with my father, now walk with me!

Lord, I want Jesus to walk with me!

Where Be All His Miracles?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 10, 2006

SCRIPTURE: And Gideon said unto him, Oh my Lord, if the LORD be with us, why then is all this befallen us? and where be all his miracles which our fathers told us of, saying, Did not the LORD bring us up from Egypt? but now the LORD hath forsaken us, and delivered us into the hands of the Midianites. Judges 6:13

Introduction.

Do you sometimes wish you had the spirituality of your grandparents? There are many people today who remember their grandparents as spiritually strong men and women who seem to have a calmness about themselves that defies description. The further back we go, it seems the more spiritually connected our grandparents were, indicating that even in our own opinion we are not as close to the godly ideal as we'd like to be.

Grandparents are important to every family because they are our connection to our past and the immediate source of wisdom and experience.

Those families that are fortunate enough to have godly grandparents are doubly blessed because they set the tone for the family. Often, as long as they live, the direction of the family as a whole remains on course. They provide a sense of direction that keeps family members on target.

Grandparents are important to every family. Their role should never be minimized or diminished.

That was the thinking behind the establishment of "Grandparents' Day" that was instituted by presidential proclamation on Sept. 6, 1979, and occurs each September on the first Sunday after Labor Day.

* It's purpose is to honor grandparents

* To give grandparents an opportunity to show love for their children's children.

* To help children become aware of the strength, information and guidance older people can offer.

The 1979 presidential resolution said, "Grandparents are our continuing tie to the near-past, to the events and beliefs and experiences that so strongly affect our lives and the world around us. Whether they are our own or surrogate grandparents who fill some of the gaps in our mobile society, our senior generation also provides our society a link to our national heritage and traditions."

Honoring grandparents didn't just begin in 1979. Grandparents are recognized in the Bible for their role in our development: “A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children’s children...” (Proverbs 13:22). Even the Apostle Paul commended his young associate Timothy’s upbringing. In 2 Tim. 1:5, Paul recognized Timothy’s “unfeigned faith ... which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois.”

Grandparents seem to have a knack for making the worst situation into a challenging opportunity. Colorful memories, invaluable learning experiences and principles borne of a strong moral fiber are but a few of the priceless particulars of the investments our grandparents made in us.

As Christians, we are grateful for our grandparents. We strive to emulate their faith, strength and patience. They are blessing to every family.

Exposition

This text focuses on Gideon as he is challenged to reclaim the faith of his grandparents before rising to face the challenges of his times.

In the period of the judges Israel had no king. They experienced a succession of dangerous times each related to the degree of their faith in God. They constantly fell on hard times as they attempted to emulate the Canaanite tribes around them, including worshipping their god, Baal.

For seven years they were being raided and attacked by the Midianites. Yet, they continued to abandon the faith and righteous path followed by their grandparents. Gideon’s father was among those who had succumbed to popular traditions and erected a statue of Baal and worshipped in the groves. It was an abrupt departure from the path taken by the grandparents of the nation.

Gideon was personally tapped to raise Israel from its condition, but first they would need to return to the old path. It would be necessary to turn from Baal worship and return to the worship of the God of their grandparents.

When Gideon was first approached about his mission, he was frustrated and angry. He questioned whether the faith in God displayed by his “fathers”-a term for his ancestors or grandparents, was all that it was said to be in the stories told around family campfires.

Around those campfires grandparents talked about the miraculous way that God brought them out of Egypt, through the wilderness, fed them Manna, and brought them into the Promised Land. The family conversation was filled with talk about the miracles of God.

Gideon questioned the relevance of those accounts, considering their present situation. What happened to the miracles that happened in his grandparent’s day? That’s when Gideon learned that he would lead the people to reach back beyond his father’s generation, to that of his grandmother and grandfather and return to God; then the miracles experienced in the past would happen again.

Gideon proved worthy of the challenge. He and 10 men began with his father’s idols and tore down the statues of Baal. They went into the groves and other places of Baal worship and did the same. Soon God performed miracle for Gideon’s generation just has he did for his grandfathers. With an army of just 300 men he defeated the entire 30,000 plus army of the Midianites, without lifting a sword or the loss of a single life.

It was a miracle just like that of his ancestors. It came when the grandchildren rekindled the faith of their grandparents and once again put their trust totally in God.

What Godly Grandparents teach us:

Gideon looked to his grandparents because they seemed to possess the strength that he sought. There were several qualities they possessed that he wanted to reclaim.

GOD IS IN EVERY CIRCUMSTANCE: Gideon's father tried to adjust himself to the circumstances around him, changing his God and values to fit those of his neighbors. However his Grandparents recognized an eternal truth, that "God is in every circumstance.

All godly grandparents seem to share this characteristic. They see God's hand in every situation. Whether it is finances or family matters they see God at work. Even in sickness and distress they feel God's presence. In reality, there is never a time when God is not moving, bending and shaping situations so that they will ultimately be for our good.

That is the quiet assurance that grandparents bring to the family circle; that God will work it out. We've all heard one grandparent or another say, "The Lord will make a way somehow." It indicated confidence and trust in God. It is a truth that is reflected in Romans 8:28, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

It comes to us in those familiar phrases we hear grandparents say, "It's going to be alright","Just trust in the Lord", and "Keep the faith." Although we have heard them repeatedly, they represent the sum total of a grandparents experience with God.

WE STRUGGLE IN THE NOW, GOD MOVES IN THE NOT YET: Gideon's grandparents differed from his generation. His generation could only see the events and the circumstances that were happening to them in the present. Even Gideon at the beginning questioned why God was not responding to their dilemma. His grandparents recognized that even while they struggled that God operated in the realm of the "not yet."

This truth is what we see demonstrated in the lives of our grandparents, God always answers our prayers and is ahead of us, answering our prayer, even though we can see how. That's the meaning of Isaiah 65:24, "And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear. " That means that God operates in the "Not Yet" preparing, opening, and clearing the way for those who trust him.

In the "Not Yet" or the not to distant future, God is working it out.

In the "Not Yet" God is making a way!

In the "Not Yet" he is molding, shaping and creating within us!

That's what Grandparents know and what many grandchildren will come to know as well.

WE SHOULD NEVER LOSE HOPE: Gideon's parents lost hope that Israel would ever achieve its freedom from its oppressors. Gideon worked each day in bitterness and despair over their condition, until he remembered his grandparents.

Any family that loses hope is lost. Hope sustains us in difficult times. It helps us to weather storms, endure droughts and survive catastrophes.

It is this sense of hope that godly grandparents bring to each family. This is the same hope that propelled Abraham to "hope against hope" that he would have a son even though he was 100 years old. It is the hope that motivated Hezekiah to never doubt that Israel's captivity would be turned or that his own life could be extended. It is the same hope that prompted Daniel to pray facing Jerusalem despite a death decree from the king. Such hope is life giving.

Grandparents never stop hoping that a wayward member of the family will come home.

Grandparents never stop hoping that a family member caught in the clutches of Satan will be released or that a son or daughter will find the right path.

It is this hope that endears grandparents to us. They never give up on us. They believe in us and they always have hope that we will succeed and find our way in life.

They show us how to be at peace

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that grandparents show us how to be at peace with ourselves and with God.

Grandparents by virtue of their age and experience have learned the essentials of life. They have learned how to sort out the important from the "not so important" in life, and thereby have learned how to live at peace with God regardless of their situation.

In Philippians 4:11-13 Paul says, "I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need. I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

That means that it does not matter whether the world pitches us fast balls, curve balls or sucker balls, we can handle it. If we get a home run or strike out, we are at peace as long as we come to the plate and give life our best swing.

To be at peace with God means trusting God and walking with God.

Don't ever let anyone play down the significance of walking with God.

—Abraham walked with God and he pledged him the Promised Land!

—Moses walked with God and he built a bridge for him over the Red Sea!

—Joshua walked with God and he carried him across the Jordan!

—Enoch walked with God and "was not!"

No wonder the song writer declared, "I want Jesus to walk with me. While I'm on this tedious journey. I want Jesus to walk with me."

I'm reminded of the grandmother who prayed to God that one of her grandchildren would one day graduate from college. It was a prayer of faith because no one in this poor family had even gone to college; they didn't have the money. One day when grandmother came to visit she placed an empty frame on the wall. When questioned what it was for she said, it would be the frame for her granddaughter's diploma. Years passed and the frame remained empty, but the granddaughter was inspired to make it happen. As the grandmother watched her daughter walk across the staged she smiled and gave thanks. Soon after the grandmother visited her granddaughter who was married and struggled with finances. Before leaving the grandmother left an empty purse on the kitchen table. The granddaughter asked, 'The purse is empty grandma, what does this mean?" The grandma looked up at the diploma on the wall and said, "The same hand that filled the frame will fill the purse."

I don't know about you but I believe that same hand that made a way out of no way, is still making a way today!

Gideon asked the question, "Where be all his miracles?" And the answer is that same hand is doing miracles today.

The same hand that opened up the Red Sea, can open doors today!

The same hand that rained down bread from heaven in the wilderness, could put food on our tables!

The same hand that brought down the walls of Jericho, can bring down the walls of trouble and difficulty in our lives.

This hand is the hand of an almighty God!

If we put our hand in the hand of the man from Galilee, he'll make a way for us!

We should follow grandma's example and keep trusting in the Lord!

We should follow grandpa's example and keep calling his name!

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, the Bright and Morning Star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary..

But early Sunday morning arose from the grave!

Keep calling his name…

The Faith Factor

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 2006

SCRIPTURE: For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." 2 Timothy 1:7; "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. "Hebrews 11:1

Introduction

What is the difference between those who succeed in life and those who fail? Some will answer opportunity, resources, contacts and a variety of other answers. While a combination of these are consistent with success there is one ingredient that is common to everyone who succeeds; that ingredient is faith. Review the life of anyone who has succeeded at a great undertaking and you'll find that they possessed a great amount of faith in their own abilities and an even greater faith that with God's help they could achieve success.

There is a very popular television reality series called the "Fear Factor" that has caught the imagination of the nation. To win a $50,000 prize, three men and three women are recruited from across the nation to compete in three stunts that will challenge their physical and mental strength. Generally, the program challenges participants to overcome their fears to complete a stunt and get closer to winning the big prize.

Just about every kind of fear possible is included: snakes, spiders, deep water, high cliffs, sky diving and dozens more are presented. Contestants have jumped between moving trucks, leapt out of 12 story buildings, bobbed for plums in a tub of snakes and been buried in 300,000 worms. What separates the winners from the losers is their ability to overcome their fear of snakes or their fear of drowning or their fear of death to win the prize. The "fear factor" is what separates the winners from the losers.

Those who are afraid begin to speak fearful words and express doubts. They will also act in fear and actually believe that what they fear will come to pass even before doing it.

Our fears keep us from being all we can be. They hold us back.

We should remember that we are called upon to live by a spirit of faith, not a spirit of fear.

Faith and fear work the same way but the application is just the opposite.

The key to success in life is not the fear factor but the faith factor. The faith factor causes us to triumph over our fear of death, being in want, failure, humiliation or any other obstacle. The faith factor is so intense that it determines the difference between those who succeed and those who hesitate and fail.

As Christians, we walk by a faith that overcomes our fears. This faith helps us to live the rich and spiritually rewarding life of a saint. Our faith in God lifts us above the cares of this world as we seek to build the kingdom of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on advice given to Timothy by the Apostle Paul regarding the superiority of faith over fear.

Timothy was a young man in faith. He had many gifts and talents with a bright future ahead of him, but on occasion he approached his destiny with timidity. Paul left him to minister to the church in Ephesus which was growing in size. There was a tremendous rivalry among many who wanted to be named deacons, elders and even bishops in the church. Many of these had a variety of beliefs, experience and considerable reputation in the local church.

Timothy was intimidated by his youth and relative inexperience. He was also intimidated by critics who doubted his abilities in light of his skeptics.

Paul encouraged Timothy not to be controlled by a spirit of fear. He encouraged him to use the spirit power, love and faith in God to overcome his fears. This courageous spirit would give him the power to overcome any feelings of inadequacy he might have so that he can accomplish his mission in life. For Timothy that mission was to be a minister for Christ.

The 11th chapter of Hebrews is the best definition of faith in the bible, by many accounts. It is the essence of everything we hope for even though we can see how it will happen. The entire chapter gives examples of great men and women of the bible who had faith and hope even though much of what they hoped for was not immediately seen. Their lives will guided by faith alone.

The power of faith is above the power of fear. It is stronger than doubts. It overpowers all apprehensions. This message of faith is what Paul brought to young Timothy and to all believers, “God has not given us a spirit of fear.”

The Faith Factors

Certainly, we are encouraged in scripture to act in faith, not in fear. Faith is the “substance of things hoped for and evidence of things not seen.” When we operate in faith, we do not operate in fear. We are not controlled by the fear factor, but the faith factor.

The faith factor has three important considerations:

FAITH CAUSES YOU TO KNOW IN YOUR HEART BEFORE YOU SEE IT WITH YOUR EYES: A unique characteristic of faith is that those who have it seem to have a confidence and assurance in their hearts, long before they see anything with their eyes. There are many who subscribe to the old axiom that "seeing is believing." They contend that if you see it with your eyes then you can believe it, not until. However, if you have to see it before you can believe then it is not faith. The man and woman of faith believes God even before seeing it. That was what made Abraham unique. He believed in his heart that God would provide a sacrifice, long before he saw the ram in the bush. He didn't know how God would do it, but he believed that God would make a way. Sure enough, just in the nick of time, God came through.

There have been many believers in a similar situation. Faith causes you to know that God will cause a door to open even if every door you can possible see is slammed shut. This kind of faith is described in 2 Corinthians 5:7, "For we walk by faith, not by sight."

Faith is Moses standing in front of the Red Sea knowing that God will make a way, but only seeing a sea of water in front of him. He stood still as his skeptics criticized him and the weak in spirit began to doubt, then God moved and the Red Sea opened.

Is that you? Standing before the Red Sea believing that God will make a way but not knowing when? Fear tries to set in. What if he doesn't do it? What if I fail? Then the faith factor locks in and we hear a small voice say, "Stand Still and see the Salvation of the Lord."

FAITH MEANS TO BASE YOUR ACTIONS ON YOUR BELIEF: Those who have faith often "act" in faith. Hebrews 11:7 says, "By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith." Noah believed that God would one day cause a flood that would destroy the world. But he went beyond just believing it, he based his next action on his faith. He built an ark the size of a small battleship on dry land, acting totally on his faith.

Our challenges are seldom that great, however there are many of our actions that are based on faith alone. Sometimes those actions relate to our families, our businesses, our employment or career. We operate totally on faith. When that happens what we do may seem silly to others, almost as silly as Noah and his family appeared to others, building a ship on dry land.

Faith requires us to visualize the outcome and act. It's just the opposite of fear. The fear factor causes us to visualize what could happen if we fail, put our hand into a barrel of snakes, or bungy jump from a 12 story building. We visualize it and respond immediately, even before we do it. The faith factor works the opposite. We visualize what will happen when God acts and begin to act accordingly. We begin to smile and rejoice now. We begin to feel better when we can visualize the victory that is coming. The fear factor will drive you crazy. The faith factor gives you strength, sanity and a spirit of peace.

Faith feeds courage. Paul Tillich in his book "Dynamics of Faith" says there are permanent doubts like those of the scientist and the transitory doubts of the skeptic in every situation. Faith overcomes both of these by feeding our courage to step over them and act. When Paul was ship wrecked and the men on board lost all faith, he declared in Acts 27:25, "So keep up your courage, men, for I have faith in God that it will happen just as he told me."

Faith is taking actions based on your believe that "it will happen just as he told me."

FAITH IS KNOWING OUR PRAYERS HAVE BEEN HEARD ALTHOUGH WE HAVEN'T RECEIVED THE ANSWER. A person of faith never doubts that God hears his prayer. Why? Faith does not operate outside of obedience. Myles Munroe in his book, "Understanding the purpose and power of prayer" says that when there is willful sin in our lives we are not in harmony with God and God will not hear us. Certainly pastor Munroe's conclusion has foundation in the scripture because Isaiah 59:2 says, "But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear." People of faith know that if we are in harmony, in communion, with God he will hear our prayers, and answer them. Why? 1 John 3:22 says, "..because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight."

Israel prayed the same prayer for 400 years even though they never saw anything happening. They knew God heard them, but waited for him to move in his own time; and he did. Hannah prayed the same prayer for years, but each year she never had a child. She knew God heard her, so she waited patiently for him to act and he did, in his own time.

Faith is knowing that since we are living in communion with God and are obedient to his commands that he hears us, considers our requests and will grant our prayer request according to his will. That's the meaning of 1 John 5:14-15, "And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask any thing according to his will, he hears us: 15 And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him"

Just as faith feeds courage, faith also feeds patience. After we pray we know that our answer is on the way. That knowledge feeds our patience and we quietly wait for God to move. Until God moves we P.U.S.H or pray until something happens. We pray constantly, waiting, knowing and believing that it will. That's the faith factor. We know God hears us and will get answer so we never give up!

Celebrate Our Faith

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must note that those who overcome their fears and walk by faith will never be disappointed.

Those who live by faith in God are never disappointed. So we celebrate our faith

When Job's trial ended, his faith was rewarded, there was a celebration!

When Israel reached the Promised Land, their faith was rewarded; there was a celebration!

When David returned the Ark of the Covenant to Jerusalem, he danced in the streets; there was a celebration!

If we are living by faith today but have not yet seen the answer to our prayers, we may as well get ready for the victory party and let the praise begin!

We don't have to wait until the battle is over, we can shout now!

That's the power of the faith factor! We know that no matter how it turns out, we win because "All things work together for the good of those who love the Lord and are the called according to his purpose in Jesus Christ."

Are dark clouds forming over your horizon? Is fear consuming your actions?

Be of good cheer, "Lift up your heads on ye gates, and king of glory shall come in"

By faith, we believe that no matter how tough our times get, God is still in control!

By faith, we are strengthened when we remember that our God is a God whose:

-Power never weakens; Grace never disappoints

-Love never leaves; Promises never fail

-Glory never diminishes; Joy never ends

-Foundation never shakes;Truth never changes

-Supply never shrinks; Blessings never stop coming!

And he is able! Yes, he's able!

He's able to see our tears in the midnight hour!

He's able to see our concern for our families and loved ones!

He's able to feel our despair over our current situation and while we are still praying about it, help is on the way!

This is faith, symbolized by an old rugged cross!

The cross the marks the place where our faith in God began!

The cross marks the place where we stepped over our fears and started trusting in God!

The cross marks the place where we stepped out of the darkness into the marvelous light!

That's why the song writer wrote, "At the cross at the cross where our first saw the light and the burdens of my heart rolled away. It was there by faith I received the light and now I'm happy all the day."

Because of the cross, We still have faith!

Jesus died on an old rugged cross!

But early Sunday morning, he arose to take all of our fears and replace them with faith in the power of almighty God.

Come Before Winter

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 2006

SCRIPTURE: "I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Philippians 3:14; Do thy diligence to come before winter. 2 Timothy 4:21

Introduction

As the first chills of autumn come upon us, we must ask; "Are we prepared for winter?" During the spring and summer of each year we enjoy the warm air, beautiful flowers and sunshine that each season brings. They were seasons of movement, expansion, relaxation and vigorous pursuit. However, the coming of autumn marks the season of harvest and preparation for winter.

As the leaves lose their fresh green touch and the chilling rust of harvest begins, we ask ourselves, "Are we prepared for winter?

As light sweaters and jackets, replace tee-shirts and bare chests, we ask, "Are we prepared for winter?"

Aesop told the cute little story of the ant and the grasshopper. The ant worked all summer gathering crumbs and other food supplies and carrying it to his ant hill. The grasshopper refused to work; he simply played and hopped around all during the summer months. In fact, he even laughed at the ant and taunted him for working so hard. The harvest months came. Soon after, the chilling snows of winter also came. The grasshopper had no food because he had not prepared for winter. Inside the ant hill, the ants dined and feasted. They had food supplies to last them through the winter. As the grasshopper shivered they were at peace. They were prepared for winter.

Three generations ago most of our people were not city residents. Most of us lived on the farm. We were like the ants. On the farm we stored hay for the animals. Mother stored fruits in jelly jars and canned vegetables. Meat was smoked and salted to carry them through the hard months ahead. There were many who even stockpiled fire wood to keep the fires going through the winter.

It was important to keep the fires going. Without the fire the family would freeze. Even with all of the food, preserves and other preparation the family had to keep the fires going or face the reality of death.

The prepared believer is like the ant; he's prepared for winter. It's not a slow down time, a time where he shivers and starves, but it is a time for him to rejoice because he is ready for winter.

In a greater sense, the believer is prepared for the winter of this world.

The Great American author John Steinbeck wrote two novels that showed us the outcome of poverty and winters of despair. In 1939 he wrote, "The Grapes of Wrath" that was about poor families of migrant workers struggling against the dust bowls of the West. In 1961 he wrote, "The Winter of our Discontent" that was about similar struggles of poor families against odds. Steinbeck painted a dreary picture of life for those unprepared for the chilly responses of this world.

As we prepare for winter, we must resolve that we will ready ourselves for whatever storms that may come and plague us.

Our coats and sweaters are being prepared. Our snow chains and shovels are readied. Our fuel supplies are checked, and our doors and windows are weather stripped. Some even have generators and fuel supplies safely stored away in case of power failure as well as supplies of canned and dry food safely tucked away.

We are prepared for hard times, difficulties, missteps and troubles.

We are prepared because we have sown our seed in the heat of the day, now we are harvesting the product of our seed, and our faith is at its highest peak. We are ready for winter.

But just as our fore parents had to keep the fires burning, we must do the same.

Every time we feel the chill of difficulty, we should throw another log on the fire and keep our hopes, faith and dreams going through the winter.

As Christians, we are not intimidated by the coming of winter. We keep looking forward to the coming of the Lord. Storms may rise. Winds may blow, but we are determined to keep our fires burning and our faith in tact as we serve the Lord with a passion and fervor that swells from our hearts.

Exposition

Our text first considers Paul as he writes to Timothy urging him to come to his assistance before winter.

Paul wrote to young Timothy of his struggles and difficulties and solicited him to come to his aide and give salutations to special persons in the ministry. He urged Timothy to come to him and bring him certain books to read.

Paul urged Timothy to come before winter.

This special urging was necessary because traveling by sea was almost impossible during the winter months. Generally these months ranged from November to March. Even the periods from September to November were risky, but certainly sea travel would not be advisable during the winter months.

Timothy could not sail from Ephesus in winter, but even if he took the overland route north of Greece he would still need to sail across the Adriatic, which was also closed. If Timothy delayed, he would not be able to come until spring—and Paul might not still be alive then.

It was important to Paul that Timothy prepare to come to him before winter as they both prepared to minister during the winter to those in spiritual need.

The despite the approach of the winter of his life, Paul remained focused on what he called “the prize.” His resolve was firm. He intended to press on toward the prize of the high calling of God.

The goal that he emphasizes and describes as the prize, is the same goal that every Christian desires: to reach heaven, to see Jesus and to be rewarded for our works while on earth.

Paul was prepared for the cold winters that lay ahead for him, yet he was not intimidated by their approach. He was prepared to witness for God despite chilling effects of persecution and trouble symbolized by the coming of the winter of his ministry.

Despite the approach of winter, he kept his eyes on the prize.

Three faces of winter

As the harvest begins and the approach of winter becomes a reality, there are three aspects of winter we should consider:

EACH SOUL SHOULD PREPARE FOR WINTER: As individuals, our goal is to live our lives in accord with the will of God and to use whatever talents he has given us in such a way that he will be glorified in the process, even in the winter. We must prepare ourselves to serve the Lord with gladness and to share our blessings with others. In a spiritual sense, we must also prepare for those moments in our lives when we feel the chilly fingers of disappointment, failure and frustration. We know such days will come for as the poet says, “Into each life a little rain must fall.” We must prepare for the rain, cold and the storms of life as individual believers. We must read our bibles, pray and praise our God to build up stores for winters that come into our lives each year. Like the five wise virgins, we should keep our lamps trimmed, watch and pray every day as we keep our eyes on the cross, which is our prize.

EACH CHURCH FAMILY SHOULD WORK IN THE WINTER: As a church family our goal should be to move in the general community in such a way that we make a positive impact on the quality of life of those with whom we come into contact with daily; especially in the winter. We cannot afford to wrap up in the warm blankets of our own security and ignore the condition of others. In the winter the church must provide the warmth of Christ.

A generation or two ago, most folks had space heaters in their homes. Space heaters sat out on the floor with flames protected by grates. When it became cold, people stood by heaters to warm their hands. Often, many backed up to the heaters to warm their back sides. When it’s cold in the winter, those who are victims of the cold expect heaters to have fire in them. In the winter of this life, the church must keep a fire going. One of the worse feelings is to stand in front of a heater with no fire in the cold of winter.

Churches must turn up the fire in the winter. Churches must keep the spirit high, in the winter.

When the lost, frustrated and troubled come for worship they expect to find the fire. They should not come out of the cold into the cold. They should feel the fire of the Holy Ghost in the church community; especially in the winter.

THE COMMUNITY SHOULD RESPOND IN THE WINTER: Every community of believers should prepare to respond to tragedy and the effects of a cold world with the love of God.

Poverty does not know a season, but it seems to flourish in the winter. When there is poverty we must act to relieve it.

Even though winter comes, there is still hunger. Where there is hunger we must provide both the spiritual and physical bread of life to the full extent of our ability.

Even though winter comes we still need life's essentials. Our goal is to seek the full employment of our people, the proper education of our children; to protect our families against destructive forces such as drugs, crime, juvenile delinquency, and declining morality.

Even though it is winter we must not take our eyes off the prize. We must remain focused. To provide housing for the homeless, counseling for the insecure, and a spiritual support group for those striving to live the Christian life is our goal!

Even in the winter we must continue to lift up the name of Jesus and thereby make a difference in the quality of life of the community. That is our goal. We must keep the fire going!

Keeping The Fire Burning

Finally, brothers and sisters, the church should labor to keep the fires of the spirit burning at all times, especially in the winter

We must keep the fires burning because we never know when a wayward child may come home from experiencing a cold, cruel world!

I srael kept the fire burning at the Tabernacle until the construction of the Temple of God.

In 2 Chronicles 7 at the dedication of the temple, Solomon prays to God and asks him to accept the temple as a place of worship and asks God to consecrate it for his worship.

God answered Solomon's prayer lighting the fire on the altar in the new temple just as he had in the tent of the Tabernacle.

He answered Solomon's prayer request by saying, "If my people, who are called by my name would humble themselves and pray, and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven and heal their land."

They kept that fire going...even though the nation later split in two over civil differences.

They kept the fire until they were taken into captivity. Then the fire in the temple went out.

When the fire went out the spirit of the people dropped to an all time low!

When the fire went out hope dissipated!

When the fire went out faith waned!

It is dangerous in the church, when the fire goes out!

People give up hope, when the fire goes out!

People lose confidence, when the fire goes out!

The church grows cold, when the fire goes out!

The fire is gone out when the people are no longer guided by the spirit of God but have been taken captive by a foreign power!

The Old Testament closed with Israel shivered in the winter of its own discontent. They had no word from God. For over 400 years they shivered in the cold, looking for a new fire from heaven!

They were looking for a fire that would not go out!

They were looking for an eternal fire from God!

In the winter months ahead, we need the fire from heaven!

The Holy Spirit is the fire from heaven!

The Spirit of God is not quenched by rising storms or the chill of winter.

He keeps us warm through the power of faith.

The church should labor to keep the fire burning!

We should keep sending up the praises and putting logs on the fire!

Even in the winter we should keep telling the old story!

Even in the winter, tell the world about Jesus!

Tell them how he died out on Calvary!

Even in the winter, tell them how he was buried in a borrowed tomb!

But tell them, that early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Keep the fires burning!

Keep your eyes on the prize!

Keep sending the praises up.

Even though winter comes keep reminding the world that God is still on the throne!

What You Looking At?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

September 24, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "The LORD looketh from heaven; he beholdeth all the sons of men. From the place of his habitation he looketh upon all the inhabitants of the earth." Psalm 33:13-14

Introduction

Have you ever caught someone looking at you? Whenever someone stares at us it makes us extremely uncomfortable. Instantly, we start checking ourselves to be sure that everything is in place. We check our hair and clothing. Women check to see if that slips or not hanging and men double check flies. When someone stares we instantly try to figure out what it is about us that is making them stare. Because staring makes others uncomfortable, our parents often taught us not to stare at people or to point our fingers at them because it makes them uneasy.

People have a tendency to act strangely whenever someone stares. A man takes a beautiful woman in a crowded public place then gets angry because other men stare at her. Instantly, he's in their faces with his fist balled up, angrily yelling, "What you looking at?"

A woman dresses sexy, showing all of her endowments, and then gets mad at other women who are shaking their heads at how much of her personals are on display. In anger, she turns and asks them, "What you looking at?"

It's not proper grammar to say, "What you looking at?" with that end of sentence preposition that irritates English teachers, but that's the way it is said in common vernacular. "What you looking at?"

"What you looking at?" is often a question tinged with confrontation. It is often a subtle warning to cease and desist. Stop looking. Stop staring.

When our friends and neighbors stare at us we say, "What you looking at?" But what do we do if we find out that the one who is looking at us not a neighbor but God?

Do we respond, "What you looking at?" Probably not.

The fact is, God is always looking at us. He watches us 24/7. He sees us and knows all about us. He sees us in every circumstance. He sees us at our worse and at our best.

God does more than stare, he looks at us hard. He sees every strength and he also sees every flaw.

Because God is looking at us all of the time, we can feel comfortable that we are never out of his sight. He looks and he keeps watch over us day and night.

Who is God watching? He is the good Shepherd. He is watching his sheep.

As Christians, we should rejoice that our God is watching over us and looking at us very hard. That gives us the assurance that just as his eye is on the sparrow, we know he watches us.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains both the omniscient and the omnipresent nature of God.

God is the creator of the universe but is not so distant that he is not conscious of the acts and thoughts of each person he has created. God knows his creations better than they know themselves.

While God looks upon "all" of his creation he also looks at each component. He sees both the forest and the individual trees.

In Psalm 139 David referred to the omniscience of God when he noted that God knows what he is thinking even before he thinks it. He knows all, yet looks on his creation with an inquisitive eye, watching each person in a peculiarly personal way.

Because God is omniscient, or has perfect knowledge, he can look at each of us in a divinely perfect way that cannot be hidden from his view or blocked out. He looks at us in ways that no one else can.

Because god is omnipresent, or is present everywhere at the same time, he can look at everyone, around the world at the same time individually, privately and respond to us in the same way.

For this reason, David said God is deserving of praise because he looks on his creation with love and compassion.

When Man Looks

When man looks at us, man generally sees what he wants to see or what we want him to see.

People have a tendency to look for the worst in us. They see all of our flaws and short comings.

They are looking at the mistakes we have made. All of us have made them in the course of our lives. Since our lives are open books, everyone seems to know about our mistakes. They follow us like dark clouds always hovering overhead. When man looks at us he usually sees our mistakes.

When man looks at us he sees our weaknesses. Even the best patriarchs of the bible had weaknesses. You name the great man or woman and you'll find a person with a weakness. David was a man after God's own heart, but he had a weakness for Bathsheba. Solomon was wise but he had a weakness for pretty women. Absalom could have ascended to the throne of Israel but he had a weakness for power. Judas was the treasurer of Jesus' inner circle but he had a weakness for money. We all have weaknesses. It's our weaknesses that our critics see. The say, "he's a good man ..but" or "she's a good woman, but."

When man looks he sees our contradictions. He sees our confusion and he sees our frustration and fear in times of peril.

When man looks he sees everything that is wrong with us.

Since we are imperfect beings he always has plenty to see. Romans 3:23 says, "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God."

When man looks all he can see is how far we are from the glory of God. He sees a pitiful, flawed wretch who, if not for the grace of God, would be condemned forever.

When God looks

God looks too, but when God looks he is not looking for things that are wrong, even though he sees them. When God looks, he looks after us, he looks through us, and he looks at us.

GOD LOOKS AFTER US: No matter who we are, it is good to know that God is looking after us. God sees our troubles and he is looking after us. 2 Kings 14:26 says, "The LORD saw the affliction of Israel, that it was very bitter: for there was not any shut up, nor any left, nor any helper for Israel." God saw the troubles that his people endured under ungodly leaders and taskmasters. He saw that they had no help and responded. God does the same for every one of us. He sees our troubles and knows our afflictions. In our troubles he looks after us just as he did Israel in Egypt, in the wilderness and in the Canaan Land. What is God looking at? God is looking after us every day!

GOD LOOKS THROUGH US: God looks through us. Even though we can fool many of the people around us, God looks through us and peers deep into our inner souls. He knows us better than we know ourselves. Psalm 139 says he knows our "down sitting and our uprising." He even knows the thoughts of our mind before we think them. He knows what we really think and feel. We can't hide it from him. Isaiah 59:15 "Yea, truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey: and the LORD saw it, and it displeased him that there was no judgment." God also sees us when we are at our worse. He sees us when we lie, cheat or steal. It displeases him to see us secretly living against his will then pretend we are righteous. What does God do about it? Verse 18 of Isaiah 59 gives us a hint. He saw what they were doing wrong. It displeased him and responded by giving them a dose of their own medicine (v18). God sees our sins and sometimes leaves us to reap the penalties associated with it.

GOD LOOKS AT US: God looks at us directly. Though there are millions of people in the world God can focus on one individual. He looks at our houses, at the numbers posted on our doors. He looks at us personally. Does that amaze you that God can disaggregate a large crowd and pinpoint one individual? Mark 5:32 gives an example of Jesus moving through a multitude of people and a woman with an issue of blood touched his garment and he stopped and looked. The verse says, "And his disciples said unto him, Thou seest the multitude thronging thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me? And he looked round about to see her that had done this thing." The Lord looks at thousands but he can focus on the problems of one person because he looks at us closely; looking and listening to our words and feeling our pain. That's what happened when a woman was distressed because she had no income. Her husband and son died, she had no source of income. Bills mounted. In frustration she cried. Luke 7:10 says, "When the Lord saw her, his heart went out to her and he said, "Don't cry." When Christ looks, he looks for opportunities to help us and lift us to better our lives. He looks for opportunities to resurrect us and give us new life!

He sees sheep that need a shepherd

Finally, when God looks at us, he sees sheep that need a shepherd.

We are not naïve enough to believe that God only sees our good; we know he sees our weaknesses too. But while he sees our weaknesses, he also looks at our humility before him and repentant spirit.

2 Chronicles 12:7 says, and "When the Lord saw that they humbled themselves" he decided not to destroy them but to give the people one more chance.

We are like sheep that have gone astray, God looks at us and realizes that we need a shepherd.

So David wrote, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want."

He looks after us like a shepherd and leads us beside the still waters.

He looks over us like a shepherd and prepares a table for us in the presence of our enemies.

He looks at us and anoints our head with oil until our cups run over!

When God looks at us he focuses all of the infinite resources of creation on our situation!

When God looks at us he summons the legions of heaven to the edges of glory so they can watch as he pays close attention to the whispered prayer of the least of the saints.

When God looks at us he prepares the angels of the third heaven to harness the powers of time and eternity as he prepares to wave his majestic hands.

What you looking at? We are looking at a God who can take our stumbling blocks and turn them into stepping stones!

What are you looking at? We're looking at a God who can turn our handicaps into handrails.

What are you looking at? We're looking at a God who take our troubles and turn them into triumphs!

What are you looking at? We're looking at a God who can take our inabilities and turn them into initiatives.

Lift up your heads on ye gates and the King of Glory shall come in!

Lift up your heads, look at Jesus!

Just one look and he'll dispel your doubts and renew your faith!

Just one look and he'll ignite your passions and restore your hope!

Just one look and he'll take away your despair and give you joy!

I don't know who you looking at, but I'm going keep my eye on Jesus!

I want Jesus to keep looking after me!

I want Jesus to keep looking over me!
I want Jesus to keep looking through me!
I want Jesus to keep looking at me!
Jesus, he's greater than any burden you may be bearing!
Jesus, he's more powerful than any enemy you may be facing!
Jesus, stronger than any problem you may be facing!
Jesus, Mary's baby!
Jesus, my rock in a weary land!
He died out on Calvary..
But early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!
I'm so glad that he's looking….
At me and you!

Prepare To Change The World

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 2006

SCRIPTURE:"And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ: That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ: From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." Ephesians 4:11-17

Introduction

How many coaches would put their football teams on the field without the proper training and preparation? What about baseball? Would a basketball coach allow his players on the court if they did not know the fundamentals of ball handling, rules of the game, or the fine points of the team's strategy to win?

When coaches of teams whip their players into physical shape, teach them the fundamentals of the game, and prepare them for the contest, they "equip" them for their night under big lights. Only a sorry coach would dare send players on the field who are not equipped with the essentials to play the game.

In reality, this is true in many walks of life. It does not matter about the name of the field of endeavor, we want each practitioner to be sufficiently equipped for their area of service. We don't want an ill equipped doctor operating on us. Neither do we want a poorly equipped mechanic repairing our automobiles. We want them to be fully trained and equipped.

Consider the little boy who wanted to be a fisherman so bad that he could not wait. The boy read many books about fishing and was captivated by the lure of sitting on a boat and catching many fish. One day he decided he would slip away and go fishing. He put on a fishing hat, jumped in the boat and paddled out to the middle of a pond; just as he had seen in many books and movies. He looked at the water for a second or two and waited. Then it dawned on him that he was not prepared to catch fish. He didn't have a fishing pole. He did not have any bait or lures. He didn't even have a container in which to place to fish if he had caught them. The only thing he really had was a desire to catch fish, but he wasn't really equipped for his fishing trip.

Is it possible that often the church approaches its ministries in the same way? We have a desire to catch fish for the Lord or to evangelize and make disciples but we don't have the skills, training or biblical education necessary to either catch men for Christ or to hold them after we catch them. We have plenty of excitement and zeal but we are short on knowledge.

This underscores the importance of Christian Education in every church. Through Christian Education, believers are taught the basics of bible knowledge and principles. Its aim is to help believers become "Christ like" in their everyday living. Leadership Training goes one step beyond. Its goal is to train believers to lead other believers in various areas of ministry. Together they are generally called "discipleship." The goal of discipleship is to help equip believers to better serve the Savior.

As Christians, we know that we should prepare ourselves for kingdom building. Only when we are properly equipped can we expect to give our best service to the master and help change the world.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains that the gifts given to saints were designed to equip them for ministry.

Paul noted that saints are equipped (perfected) for ministry in a variety of areas closely associated with their gifts. He listed evangelists, teachers, pastors, and prophets as examples of various areas of ministry for which believers should be equipped.

Equipping the saints helps create an orderly spiritual state among believers and then works to strengthen, confirm, and advance them in their proper place and function. Operating in this context, each believer contributes to the good of the whole. Proper preparation for ministry insures that the doctrines of the gospel are correctly interpreted and that believers successfully discharge the functions of their specific ministry.

The purpose of equipping or perfecting the saints is the edifying of the body of Christ; that is, to build up the church, which is Christ's mystical body, by an increase of their graces, and an addition of new members. All are designed to prepare us for heaven which is noted in verse 13 with the phrase "Till we all come."

Christ charged believers to go into the entire world and preach the gospel, baptizing, teaching and reaching in his name. He provided believers with certain gifts to equip them to do that task. These gifts, when amplified by the Holy Ghost and training, would equip the saints to do what he wanted them to do.

Preparing to Change The World

To change the world for Christ, believers must be prepared to think, believe and act like Christ. That implies that there are several areas that may need adjusting spiritually. There are several challenges before us.

WE MUST BE EQUIPPED TO THINK SPIRITUALLY INSTEAD OF LOGICALLY: Sometimes we give too much credit to our own knowledge. We often depend heavily upon our intellect and learning and less upon our heart. The world equips us to think logically and to discard anything that is not logical. The man who depends totally upon the logical, practical, and the political, views matters of the heart as secondary. There are many today who test every situation against their knowledge and wisdom and leave little rule for matters of the heart. Perhaps that's why Proverbs 3:5-6 says, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not to thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths." We must be equipped to think without spirit and not always lean to our own understanding.

WE MUST BE EQUIPPED TO RESPOND TO THE NEEDS OF OTHERS: Believers must be equipped to change the social conditions in the world around us. Before we can go to all the world, we must respond to the needs of the local community. Everywhere you look there is poverty around us. We must equip believers to help others to lift themselves out of poverty. We must show them how to effectively respond to the homeless and helpless of our community.

We must equip each believer with the training necessary to snatch our youth out of the jaws of social death that is destroying them little by little. We must also implement programs that will strengthen families, and improve marriage relationships. We must be equipped to deal with a growing crime problem in our community while at the same time preparing to minister to those who are incarcerated.

Nearly every family has someone who has been touched by the criminal justice system. We must equip ourselves to respond by showing our members how to develop prison ministries that minister to the incarcerated and to those who are released.

Right now we are not fully equipped to respond. That's why we need training that we might respond to those who are care givers, those in need of medical attention or even to those who are struggling to learn the basics of personal management.

The "Perfecting" of the saints, in this context, means equipping believers to respond in a way that edifies our savior.

WE MUST EQUIP BELIEVERS TO KNOW THAT THEY DON'T KNOW: One of the hardest tasks of the church is to show believers that there is a need for them to know. Too many believers think they know it all or at the least that they know enough, so they are not interested in Christian education. Sometimes we can delude ourselves into believing that we know more than we actually know.

Consider the smart little mouse that knew more information than any mouse around. He read constantly and often led debates about the virtues of living the life of a mouse. One day,since he had such great knowledge, he decided to conduct a class for the other mice. The class would teach them all he knew about Cats. He posted signs everywhere announcing his class. The young mice were excited, because this was one of the smartest mice around. If anyone could help them learn about cats, he could.

On the day of the first class, the room was filled with little mice. However, there were no old mice present. Just the little ones. There was a big guy who came too. He sat in the back of the room. The mouse proceeded to lecture the little mice about cats. The cat has nine lives. The cat has fur and great claws.
The cat purrs and meows. The cat has peculiar looking eyes. He went on for many minutes. Suddenly the guy in the back of the room stood and showed his teeth and started chasing all of the little mice.

The young mouse ran outside the room and barely escaped being clawed. Several days later the little mouse met a group of old mice and he asked them a question. "Why didn't you attend my class on cats the other day?" He asked. One old mouse responded, "You know what the book says about cats, but you had never seen a cat yourself. We didn't come to your class because we have seen cats and we know what cats eat for lunch!" We must equip believers to realize that they don't know it all.

WE MUST SHOW BELIEVERS HOW TO STUDY THE WORD: 1 Timothy 2:15 says, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

To study the Word is to read it for understanding, compare it with other scriptures, visualize it with the help of historical background, and clarify it through repetitious analysis.

What is the challenge?

The challenge is for the church to reemphasize its commitment to the importance of preparation and training. This commitment reemphasizes that no matter how much we love a brother or a sister and want them to participate on a leadership level of our auxiliary, we refuse to do so if those brothers or sisters are not willing to commit themselves to a minimum level of training and in-service preparation.

This training should equip every member to at least have basic bible skills. To know that Genesis is in the front of the Bible and not the back!

This training should orient every member to know the history, heritage and program of the church and how the church program is reflected in the Word of God.

This training should prepare every leader, through attitude and aptitude, to serve in his chosen area of church work.

But more than that, this training gives each leader a greater appreciation and understanding of his faith. Training helps him to appreciate the songs of the choir, the sermons of the pastor, and sacredness of the worship.

This training gives him the courage to witness, the faith to endure trials, and the inspiration needed for moments of desperation.

We must know God for ourselves

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that we can't change the world for God if we do not have a personal relationship with God ourselves.

You might be able to explain that there are 66 books in the Bible, 39 in the Old and 27 in the New, but you must know the Lord for yourself!

You may be able to explain that the Bible contains books of prophecy, literature, history and doctrine, but you must also know the Lord for yourself!

You may be able to explain that the Bible has 3,586,489 letters 773,692 words, 31,173 verses, and 1,189 chapters but you must also know the Lord for yourself.

You may know that the longest verse in the Bible is Esther 8:9, and the shortest is John 11:35 "Jesus Wept" but you must also know Lord for yourself!

When you know the Lord for Yourself, you know that when you are:

—Sick, He will be a Doctor in your sickroom!

—In Trouble, He will be a Lawyer in your courtroom!

—Lost and confused, He will make a way out of no way!

—Hungry and thirsty, He will feed you with bread on high. That's why the old warriors cried out "Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

When you know the Lord for yourself, you know He will pick you up when you are stumbling!

When you know the Lord for yourself He will plant your feet on solid ground!

When you know the Lord for yourself, He will give you a new song to sing, a new walk to walk and a new talk to talk!

No wonder the song writer says, "You got to know Jesus, know God for yourself!" You got to know Jesus, you don't need nobody else!"

When we have been changed, then we can show others what a changed life looks like!

When the world around us has been changed, then we are ready to change the rest of the world!

Every saint should keep telling the world about the words of God, but we should also let the world know that we know Lord ourselves!

Tell them about Jesus!

Tell them how He lived on this Earth for 33 long years!

Tell them how He bore an old rugged cross!

Tell them how He died out on Calvary!

But, don't forget to tell them that, early Sunday morning, He arose from the grave with all power in His hands!

A Ransom for Our Souls

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 2006

SCRIPTURE:When thou takest the sum of the children of Israel after their number, then shall they give every man a ransom for his soul unto the LORD, when thou numberest them; that there be no plague among them, when thou numberest them. Exodus 30:12; "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; 19 But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot:" 1 Peter 1:18-19

Introduction

How do you say thanks to God? When we look at our history, we see a long journey that has brought us from slavery, through the wilderness, to our present state. We often gather together to celebrate, commemorate and rededicate ourselves to God who is responsible for our lives and being. Each time we meet, it marks an important anniversary, a milestone of faith and another time to reflect and unify ourselves for the rest of the journey.

In 1996 the nation stood in awe as one million Black men assembled on the mall in Washington, D.C. to celebrate what was called a "Day of Atonement." There were pledges made and old vows of manhood were renewed. They celebrated the beauty of our people and our men, but most of all there was a call for us to atone or straighten up our act. They also recognized the need to give more of themselves to make atonement to God.

Celebration is biblical. Whenever believers looked back on what God did for them they celebrated.

When Abraham secured a wife for his son Isaac there was a celebration.
When Moses announced that after 400 years Israel would finally leave Egypt, there was a celebration.

When Joshua led Israel into the Promised Land which flowed with opportunity like milk and honey, there was a celebration.

When David finally secured the return of the Ark of the Covenant to Israel he was so happy that he celebrated by dancing nearly naked in the street.

When the Prodigal son returned home, his father killed the fatted calf and ordered a celebration.

When we meet to celebrate our journey as believers, we rejoice. We rejoice because Jesus gave us the grand opportunity to live God centered lives here and even beyond this life. We rejoice because He gave himself as a ransom for our souls!

That's enough reason to celebrate. It's also enough reason to rally ourselves and give thanks to God for His goodness, mercy and loving kindness.

How do we celebrate this kindness from God? We celebrate differently than those of the world. The story is told of a 90 year old, hard of hearing man, who went to see his doctor for a checkup. The doctor gave him his report and the man celebrated the news. A few days later the old man was seen walking down the street with two gorgeous women on his arms. Later, the doctor talked to the old man who was still celebrating.

"You seem to be doing great" the doctor said.

"I'm doing just what you told me, doc. You said for me to get two hot mamas and be cheerful." The old man said.

Surprised the doctor said, "What I said was, 'You have a heart murmur, be careful!' These hot mamas are killing you!"

When believers celebrate important days we must do it the right way. We must celebrate God's way. We must give him praise, give him our resources and we must give him our contrite spirit.

As Christians, we must let the world know what God has done for us. As we celebrate we should also bring our gifts and repentant spirit before the one who gave himself as a ransom for our souls.

Exposition

This text focuses on the gifts Israel brought to God as a memorial for his great works in their lives and to make atonement for their sins.

Moses ordered all men 20 years old and above to register themselves for service to God. In connection with their registration each was to pay one fifth of an ounce of silver to acknowledge that God had bought back his soul and protected him from the plagues of the wilderness. The ransom was individual in nature. Each man had to stand for himself, both the poor and rich; each paid the same amount.

Those who participated in the memorial acknowledged that they received their lives from God, that they had forfeited their lives to him, and that they depended upon his power and patience for the continuance of them; and thus they paid homage to the God of their lives and avoided the plagues and punishments that their sins deserved.

The money was used in the service of the tabernacle. Wesley notes that some of it was used for the purchase of sacrifices, flour, incense wine, oil, salt, priest's garments and other essentials. In addition the silver collected was used to build a portable foundation for the tabernacle. There were 603,550 men who brought their silver offering to that first memorial celebration. The silver collected weighed over four tons. Most of it was melted down and shaped into a portable foundation for the tabernacle. Whenever Israel moved the tabernacle moved.

The foundation for the tabernacle, made of the atonement offerings of the people, moved too. When the tabernacle was set up in a new place, the foundation was set in place. The entire tabernacle with its lavish curtains, tapestries and gold ornaments rested on a foundation made from the atonement offerings of over 600,000 men.

The foundation of Israel's worship was built on the atonement offerings of the people.

The dwelling place of God was built on a foundation of the sacrificial gifts of the people.

The foundation of faith is atonement. This truth was even symbolized in Egypt as Israel was commanded to paint the three sides of their door posts with the blood of a lamb. While the blood on the three sides of the door posts required only faith in God to do as he said, no blood was applied to the threshold or the floor.

The foundation of complete salvation is in atonement. You didn't have to be an Israelite to be saved from Egypt's death plague; all you needed was enough faith to stand behind the blood. But complete salvation would require atonement. So only three sides of the doors were painted in blood; the final act would require atonement.

In the book of Exodus, atonement was both an individual and collective act. Each individual brought a sacrifice and paid a tribute. The atonements they made brought protection from the plagues of the desert and other hardships, but they did not extend to the life beyond the wilderness.

In the New Testament we have learned that neither silver, gold nor any of the corruptible things of this world can save our souls or guarantee us a place in the kingdom of heaven. Our gifts and offerings are still required to sustain our worship and show our love but they cannot purchase our salvation and redeem our corruptible souls.

As the silver of the atonement offerings of Exodus was the foundation of atonement, the blood of Jesus Christ is foundation for our redemption. This is the point that Peter made in his epistle. We are bought with a price and that price is the precious blood of Christ; the blood of an innocent person, a lamb without blemish and without spot. When Christ shed his blood he redeemed us, saved our souls and guaranteed us a place in the kingdom.

Thus, we saints memorialize our atonement by presenting ourselves as living sacrifices, giving of gifts and celebrating the blood of Christ, the foundation of our salvation, which was given as a ransom for our souls.

We Must Commemorate our Journey

As we focus on the anniversary of the church and its long journey we must commemorate. To commemorate is to honor the memory of something. For the church commemoration is to remember the old warriors who have fought the battles to help bring the church to this day.

We remember those who praised God in more difficult times, without air conditioning, or musical instruments.

We remember those who praised the blood stained banner with Dr. Watts hymns and short metered hymns.

We remember those who gave of their nickels and dimes to build crude worship centers in which to offer prayers for the generations to come.

We commemorate those who continued the journey even though they experience times when they were caught between a rock and a hard place. Those were the times when they faced trouble on every side. During such times they found that all they could really do was to say like David, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth."

We commemorate their dependence on the power of God because they were powerless to help themselves. When we look back we realize that their only hope was for someone bigger than themselves to help them.

We commemorate their faith that God cared about them and loved them.
When we commemorate, we applaud God's helpfulness, and compassion.

We commemorate his goodness to our forefathers and to ourselves for he is good and his mercy endureth forever.

We Must Rededicate ourselves for the journey

As we commemorate our journey we must rededicate ourselves for the journey.
One of the ways to rededicate ourselves is to draw closer to God.
To rededicate ourselves in this context is to renew our pledge to surrender ourselves to his will. One of the by products of surrendering to God and resisting Satan is the fact that these two steps will automatically draw us, closer to him.

Our rededication signifies our desire to walk close to God in the present and future just as we have in the past.

We rededicate ourselves to the support of his church and its various ministries by the giving of our sacrificial service and offerings.

We rededicate ourselves to Christ because he gave himself as a ransom for our souls. We draw strength from our redeemer and want him close. That's why the songwriter wrote, "Draw me nearer, nearer blessed Lord to the cross where thou has died. Draw me nearer, nearer blessed Lord, to thy precious bleeding side."

We should celebrate our Journey

We should also celebrate our journey and give thanks to God for his mercy.
The Israelites celebrated their journey by the giving of special offerings and renewing their pledges of faithfulness to God

They celebrated their journey by giving thanks.
Should we do less?

Every believer's celebration is filled with thanksgiving

We give God thanks for the seen and the unseen.

We thank him for the greens and butter beans, but we also thank him for being able to sleep soundly at night.

We thank him for turkey and dressing, but we also thank him for dressing our souls with his grace.

We thank him for fried chicken, rice and a little gravy, but we should also thank him for spiritual gravy: Joy, love, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, faith, meekness, and temperance.

We thank him for cars, houses and color T.V. but we should also thank him for coloring our lives with faith and hope because they help us to see the world in a different light.

In essence, we should keep the admonition in mind, "In everything, give thanks." When we consider our journey we can't help but give thanks for the help the Lord has given us.

We must tell the story of our journey

Finally, brothers and sisters, as we review where we have been and see the challenges ahead we must tell the story.

We must tell the story of how God brought us a mighty long way?

Today as we commemorate, rededicate and celebrate, we must tell the world that in the midst of these fearful times, there is still a reason for joy; it's a strange combination, only enjoyed by those who know that the church is built on Christ, and that is a sure foundation.

The Tabernacle of the Old Testament was built on a foundation made of the silver sacrifices of 600,000 men.

There has never been a record of the Tabernacle falling down.

It withstood windstorms, sandstorms and rain!

For all of the years of Israel's journey it never fell once, because it was pitched on a sure foundation.

The Church today is built upon an even stronger foundation, Jesus Christ. The solid rock. Because of this foundation we are able to:

—stay CALM in midst of crises

—have PEACE in the midst of problems

—enjoy GLADNESS in the midst of sorrow

—receive ASSURANCE in the midst of afflictions!

—press on in the midst of pain.

—be FRUITFUL in a time of famine!

This foundation is the solid rock!

It doesn't matter what the future brings as long as the Lord is on our side! If the Lord is on our side there will never be a:

—CROSS that we won't be able to bear; MOUNTAIN that we won't be able to climb!

—ENEMY that we won't be able to defeat; BATTLE we won't be able to win!

—DARKNESS so dark that we won't be able to see the light!

—TRIAL that we can't make it through; TEST that we won't be able to pass!

Moses saw the promised land from the top of Mt. Nebo, but I know a man, who is the foundation of our faith

His name is Jesus!

Jesus, somebody here today knows him!

Jesus, the Lily of the valley!
Jesus, the Bright and Morning star!
Jesus, who gave himself as sacrifice for our salvation!
Jesus, who died out on Calvary and rose up early Sunday morning!
Jesus….
He was the ransom for our souls!

Hacking Into Heaven

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. John 15:7*

Introduction

Do you know someone who has been the victim of identity theft? Today, there is considerable concern about protecting our identity against hackers who steal our personal information and buy things in our names. Over the years there have always been persons who were successful at stealing the names and Social Security numbers of others and getting rich on stolen purchases. However, lately we have become overly concerned with this problem with the spread of the internet.

There is hardly a day that passes that we do not hear about someone who has become the victim of hackers. Hackers are persons who are experts at learning secret passwords and codes to gain entry into forbidden areas. No area is immune to hackers. They have hacked into U.S. government files, even the Veteran's Administration and the FBI. They have hacked into banks and stolen millions of dollars from individual accounts. Even student hackers have tapped into school computers and changed grades. Airplanes have been grounded, police departments have been confused and whole cities have been shut down as hackers found their way into secret systems, using stolen access codes and security information.

Despite efforts of many companies, no one has been able to stop the growing army of hackers, some of whom are as young as 13 years old. Why do they do it? Just to show that it can be done.

While hackers have successfully tapped banks and law enforcement agencies, there is one area that seems impregnable to hackers. They have not found a way to hack into heaven.

Believers have access to the greatest resource in the world, the Grace of God, yet there are many who have not yet learned how to access the resources of heaven.

You can't hack your way to God. Even though you may try, you can't steal someone else's identity and gain God's blessings. What God has for those who abide in him and lose themselves in his will, is hacker proof.

As Christians, we are confident that we have access to God through Jesus Christ. He has given us the pass code, which is his name. His name is then compared to the list of names of those who abide in his words, obey his commands and walk in his will. That gives us an access code that even the best hackers can't break.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains the nature of the believer's ask/receive relationship with God.

Jesus told his disciples that if they continued to "abide" in him and allowed him to abide with them, then they could ask what they wanted and they would receive.

The Greek word for "Abide" in this text is "Meno". It has various meanings but generally means to "remain." Specifically it means to "remain as one, without a difference." When Christ used this word explaining the ask/receive relationship he noted that there should be no difference between his will and the believer's desire or his desire and the believers will. The believer loses himself completely in the will of God and there is no difference.

The second key word of this text is the phrase "ye will." The Greek phrase for "ye will" is "ethelo" which means to "have in mind" or an intention.

When the receive clause of this text is combined with the "ask" clause they seem to say, if a believer's desire is based on the beliefs, teachings and purpose of the savior then whatever he asks will be granted.

The secret of the text the believer knowing the will of God, adopting it as his own, then allow God to respond to their request in his way.

There are four passages of scriptures that layout the way believers gain access to God to get answered prayers. John 15:7 says "Remain (abide) in Jesus and his words in you; John 15:16 says, to ask in "My name"; 1 John 3:22 "We receive because we obey his commandments."; 1 John 5:14 "we ask according to his will."

These three truths: Asking, submitting and obeying, form the impregnable security code that guarantees believers access to the throne of Grace.

Hacker Proof

There are three things that must be done to get a prayer through to God. We must:

OBEY GOD: Obedience is required before we hope to get God to hear our prayers. We can't live in disobedience and expect him to hear us each time we pray.

SUBMIT TO HIS WILL: We must ask God for those things that are according to his will for us. It should be our desire not to go in any direction he does not want us to go or do anything he does not want us to do.

ASK IN JESUS' NAME: We should always make our prayer requests in Jesus' name. We are not worthy to stand before God. He is our mediator and ushers us to the throne of Grace.

These three elements are the access code that gets our prayers through.

Those who try to pray to God without the proper access, are trying to "hack" their way into the throne of God. Yet Jesus reminds us that he is the way, the truth and the life. No man gets to the father without him. Despite this knowledge many try to hack their way into heaven anyway.

IDENTITY THEFT: There are many who try to hack into heaven by appearing to be Christians. They attend worship, preach, sing in the choir and serve in church ministries and assume the identity of Christians. They talk church talk and float in church circles long enough to fool the most inquisitive believer. However, they notice that when they pray, nothing seems to happen. Why? They were not able to gain access to the throne of grace because they appeared to be Christians but they were not really walking the walk. Jesus said to "Abide in me" not "Sit beside me." There is a difference. The person who fakes the Christian life can sit beside a Christian but can't get access because the heavenly security code requires us to also present an abiding life that can be verified in the heavenly database.

STEALING THE PASSWORD: There are many hackers who gain access to prohibited information by stealing the access codes and illegally using them. A hacker who can get your login name and your password can usually hack his way into your files. With the proper pin number and your debit card, a hacker can clean out your bank account. So, many try to steal access codes. There are many who try to hack into heaven by praying using the password that they read in the bible. Jesus said, ask it in my name. It doesn't take very long to figure out that the name of "Jesus" is the password, so they pray and use the name of Jesus as if it is a magic password that will instantly open any closed door. So, a man or woman who lives outside of the will of God doesn't understand why their password is rejected. Sometimes they get angry. That's what happened to Cain when his sacrifice was not accepted. He killed his brother. Stealing the words "in Jesus name" out of the bible won't guarantee access but access is encrypted, it requires believers to present a life that is obedient to God and one that is submission to his will to unlock the code. Stealing the Password won't give a non-believer access to God because there are two other parts that are needed: obedience and a willingness to submit to the will of God.

SPIRITUAL FIREWALLS: Some spiritual hackers try to get blessings and other special considerations from heaven by slipping in a disguised prayer. They are not aware that heaven has a spiritual firewall. A firewall is a barrier between a local computer and the internet. It keeps intruders out, but sends and receives mail from those who are authorized. You can't pray a prayer in Jesus' name while living in disobedience or choose not to submit to him and expect that prayer to get pass the heavenly fire wall. Your prayer is the prayer of an intruder and firewalls keep out intruders. Firewalls are selective about who is allowed access. But there are some hackers who speak so well that their prayers sound good enough to pass inspection. However next to the firewall, heaven has virus protector and spam filters. A spam prayer is one that is disguised well but usually gets stopped because it comes from the same source, or ip address. What is a spam prayer. That's short for "Slick, prayer, ain't, much." Spam prayers won't get pass the firewall and the spam filters because they are not from persons who know the access code: An obdedient life, submissive to God's will, requesting in Jesus' name.

If You've Lost Your Password

Finally, brothers and sisters, if you have lost your password or never really had one, you can get another by just asking.

There are many people in the world who have not prayed in a while. In fact it has been so long they have forgotten how. Their lives have been out of touch with God and some have been disobedient. There are still others who have forgotten how to submit themselves to the will of God.

If you have forgotten your password, you always get back. It's just a matter of sending a request and it comes back to you.

Have you been away from God so long that you have forgotten how to really pray? Have you lost the three components that you need to gain access: an obedient life, a desire to submit to his will, and request in Jesus' name? All you have to do is ask God to forgive you and its done. David sinned so bad that God turned his back on his family and the whole nation. But David dropped to his knees and said, Create in me a clean heart oh God. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and renew a right spirit within me.

It's a matter of saying Lord, I'm a sinner who has lost his way. Forgive me. I want to obey you, abide in you and lose myself in your will. Give me access to the throne of grace.

If you have never received a password and want to be able to have access to God, it's a matter of accepting Jesus Christ as your personal savior. His blood will save you. The holy spirit will place a firewall around you and the Lord himself will guarantee you access to the throne of Grace by the power of his name.

It's a great thing to have access to God.

When you have access to God, you know that your prayers get through!

I don't know about your experience, but I found out that prayer changes things!

Prayer can take a seriously ill body and make it whole again!

Prayer can take your failures and turn them into victories!

Prayer can take your blunders and turn them into blessings!

Prayer can take your fears and turn them into confidences!

Prayer can take your stumbling blocks and turn them into stepping stones!

Prayer can take your weaknesses and turn them into strength!

In Jesus' name, burdens have been lifted!

In Jesus' name, finances have been restored!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose early on Sunday morning!

Abide in him, trust in his words, and ask what you will in Jesus' name and God will hear you when you pray.

Friend, Will You Pray For Me?

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 15, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "And the LORD turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends: also the LORD gave Job twice as much as he had before." Job 42:10

Introduction

Have you ever prayed for anyone? We often pray for ourselves. We talk to God about our health and our wealth. We have prayed about our future and the pursuit of our dreams, but have we really poured out our hearts to God for someone else? What about this week, have you really prayed, not just thought about, but really prayed for someone else? This is the prayer of concern we have for a friend who is struggling or even for an enemy who is misdirected. This is the prayer for a co-worker or even for your employer. Most of our prayers are for ourselves, but many of the most powerful prayers we pray are not for ourselves but are for others.

Each time we pray for someone else we access the throne of God and unleash power from heaven on their situation. The more believers pray for others, the more we focus the attention of the almighty on our concern. This is known as "intercessory prayer" or praying on behalf of others who may not even know that are the object of prayers.

Does praying for others do any good? In 2002 citizens on the East Coast were terrorized by the DC snipers who were randomly shooting people in several states from the trunk of a car with a high powered rifle. A group of 50 truckers came together and prayed for the families and for the terror to stop. A few days later, one of the truckers spotted the car in which the two snipers were sleeping. He called in the license plate numbers to the police and parked his truck across the exit to prevent an escape. In 15 minutes John Muhammad and John Lee Malvo were arrested. They were later convicted of multiple murders. John Lantz, one of the praying truckers, attributed their arrest to the power of prayer. He gave the $500,000 reward money to the victims' families and the glory to God.

Praying for others does not always mean praying for someone outside of your household. It can also mean earnestly praying for your spouse, mother, father and your children. When you pray for your wife, it is the time when there is no mention of yourself but your desire for God to bless her. Praying for your husband is directed totally for his uplifting. Praying for your parents means asking God to bless them, enlighten them and strengthen them. Praying for our friends and neighbors is the same way. In these prayers we just lift them up before God with all of our hearts. When we pray for others, we remove ourselves from the picture completely and focus on them.

As Christians, we know the power of intercessory prayer. It unleashes powerful forces in heaven and targets them in a positive way upon those for whom we pray. In a strange way, we are also blessed when we lose ourselves praying for others. When God blesses those for whom we pray, he blesses us too.

Exposition

This text focuses on Job as he prays for his three friends.

Job was a good man whose faith in God was being tested. Satan wagered God that Job would lose faith and deny him if he lost the temporal supports that made his life comfortable. God allowed Satan to test Job with one condition; his soul could not be touched.

Job was afflicted with financial ruin, failing health and the death of his children. It all happened at once. His bright, positive, creative personality was suddenly taken captive by a spirit of bitterness, anger, self pity and depression. Nothing happened. His business plunged even further. His health condition did not improve; he even lashed out at his wife and at God.

Adding to his problem was a visit by three of his best friends. For seven days they just looked at him and said nothing. During this time his friends never prayed at all. Not once. They just looked at him and shook their heads.

When they spoke, they began to accuse Job of hiding a secret sin, that only God knew about. They said no good person could have such problems.

His friends told him that God had abandoned him.

His friends told him to he was the cause.

His friends talked to him and about him, but they never once prayed for him.

They analyzed his problem; they dissected it in many ways. They discussed his problem.

But they never once offered a single prayer for him.

Job became angry at his self righteous friends who condemned him for wrongs he had not committed. He lashed out against them. He grew bitter toward them. He resented their presence.

His mental condition deteriorated further. He could not think. He could not plan new business ventures. He could not use the creative mind that had made him rich and prosperous. The positive godly spirit of optimism and hope that was the reason behind his great success was now held captive to bitterness against God, his situation and his friends.

God spoke to Job's three friends and convicted their hearts for the unfair way they judged their friend. Then God spoke to Job and he too became convicted of his bitterness toward his friends and his doubts about God.

Even after hearing from God, Job was still held captive.

The key verse of this passage is verse 10, "And the LORD turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends: also the LORD gave Job twice as much as he had before." The captivity of Job was his depression, his bitterness, his anger, and his doubt. Even though his three friends made a sacrifice offering to God in remorse for the way they responded to Job, they still would not or could not and did not pray for Job. When Job found it in his heart to pray for them-then his captivity, his depression, his bitterness, his anger and his doubt lifted from him.

He became a brand new man. In time his fortunes returned, even greater than before, when he prayed for his friends.

Whom should we pray for?

There are four types of people who should be the object of our prayers.

PRAY FOR THOSE WHO HAVE HELPED US: Each of us has been helped by someone along the way. We should constantly pray for people who help us. Children should pray constantly for their parents. Spouses should pray for each other. Our employers, mentors and benefactors should be high on our list. Anyone who has given of themselves to help us should be the object of our prayers. This type of prayer shows gratitude and humility. It acknowledges that we were helped and asks God to bless those who have blessed us. God will respond to your prayer in the same way he responded to Abraham in Genesis 12:3, "I will bless those who bless you." When we pray for those who have helped us we tell God that my teacher, my co-worker, my neighbor, my friend has blessed me..please bless them. And God will hear us when we pray.

PRAY FOR THOSE WHO HAVE HURT US: It is easy to pray for those who have helped you. It is harder to pray for those who have hurt us. That was Job's situation. His friends hurt him. He could not forgive them or pray for them and that dark feeling held him captive. Praying for those who hurt us requires us to forgive them. This spirit of forgiveness requires us to say three things: I will not say anything about this ever again to that person; he is forgiven. This is how God forgives us: "He casts our sins into the depths of the sea and remembers them against us no more," (Micah 7:19) Second, it means I will not talk to anybody else about it. I will not complain to anybody; I will not bring it up again and rehash it with anybody. Third, it means I will not talk to myself about it anymore. I will not play it over in secret all the time. I will not set up the motion picture projector in my mind and run it all over again until it arouses me and angers me and gets me all upset again. I will not replay my anger over and over again. When we reach the point in our lives when we can pray for those who hurt us, we turn our own captivity. Job prayed for his friends, even though they did not pray for him, but his captivity was turned because of his spirit. Jesus said in Luke 6:28, "Pray for those who hurt you." When we do, God will hear us when we pray.

PRAY FOR THOSE WHO NEED US: We should pray for those who are need. There are many people who stand in dire need of prayer everyday. Their needs vary from financial needs, to health concerns. Some have family issues and relationship and marital issues. We should pray for those who are in need and keep them before. The Word of God urges us to constantly pray for Saints who are in need. Ephesians

6:18 (KJV) "Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints." Who needs us? The pastor needs you to pray for him because through his strength you are made strong. The choir director needs you to pray for him, because through his spirit you are inspired to sing. The deacons need you to pray for them because out of the strength and solidarity of their homes you can help you build yours. Each believer needs other saints to pray for them because each of us needs to know that there are friends rooting for us, praying for us and asking God's favor on us. We pray for those who are in need and need us, God will hear us when we pray.

PRAY FOR THOSE WHO DON'T KNOW ANYBETTER: There are many people who do not pray or will not pray for themselves or others. Sometimes it is stubbornness but in other times it is because these friends of ours do not know any better. They don't know how to pray. That's why it's important to pray for those who don't know any better.

We pray for the husband and wife whose relationship has deteriorated to a litany of curse words, threats and violence. They have done everything to each other, but neither has prayed for the other. They don't know any better.

We must pray for those who still get a thrill out of the party life of night clubs and bars as the years of their lives pass right by them. They won't pray until tragedy strikes, we must pray that God will open their eyes without the need of a tragedy to bring them to their senses.

We must pray for the young who may race through life without thinking and all the while making a world of mistakes.

We must pray for our friends who know how to do many things but do not know how to pray. We must lift our co-workers and friends up before God in prayer; many of who do not know any better. When we pray for those who do not know any better, God hears us when we pray.

What Happens When we pray

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider what happens when we pray.

Believers should remind themselves that wonderful things begin to happen when we pray for those who have helped us.

We received amazing relief and new spirit when we reach the point where we can pray for those who have hurt us.

We are rejuvenated and energized when we pray for those who need us.

We are showered with blessings when we pray for those who don't know any better.

What happens when we pray?

When we pray, we get the assurance that we need in times of difficulty.

When we pray, we strengthen our faith in the power of God.

When we pray, we release the burdens that cause us grief and despair.

When we pray, we get a feeling of peace and security that flows from the throne of God.

When we pray, we arise with a sense of victory, knowing that we have put it in God's hands.

When we pray, we re-establish our faith on the unshakeable ground of God's word.

I am reminded of the story of an organist who was getting ready to play as the church service began. When he put his hands on the keys there was no sound. Everyone knew something was wrong, so the preacher quickly got up and led in prayer. The janitor was aware of the fact that they hadn't plugged in the organ. So he went during the prayer, plugged in the organ, wrote a note and handed it to the organist. The note said, "After the prayer, the power will be on."

I don't know about you, but after a good prayer, it seems like the power comes on.

When the power comes on you can:

—Resist Temptation and Overcome the devil!

—You can fight a good fight and finish your course!

---You can withstand the heat and survive the storm!

After Job prayed for his friends verse 11 says all of his friends and family came together and brought gifts and celebrated. What a celebration! What a homecoming! What an anniversary!

I was once lost, but now I'm found, blind, but now I see!

Now I see, but I don't see Job praying for his friends, I see Jesus in a garden praying for his friends!

Now I see Jesus, saying father let this cup pass from me, but nevertheless not my will, but thy will be done!

Now, I see Jesus, bearing an old rugged cross for friends who would betray him!

Now, I see Jesus, looking down upon friends too afraid to speak for him;

Friends, to ashamed to own him

Friends, too embarrassed to be associated with him.

Now, I see Jesus hanging on an old rugged cross saying, "father forgive them for they know not what they do!"

Now, I see Jesus, who not only prayed for his friends but died for the; and Early Sunday morning, arose from the dead that they might have life and have it more abundantly!

Now that I have prayed for my friends..

Now, I see Jesus!

When God Builds A House

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 2006

SCRIPTURE: And when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. 13 He shall build an house for my name, and I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever. 2 Samuel 7:12-13

Introduction

Have you ever received good news and bad news at the same time? There are times when we get both good news and disappointing news at the same time. Often the good news helps us deal with the bad news.

Generations ago the old timers treated many sicknesses with a nasty medicine called, "Castor Oil." No one really knew how it worked but it seemed to cure a wide variety of ailments. The old timers would force the sick to take Castor Oil but then they would provide a slice of orange or something sweet to follow it or to "help it go down."

Often life gives us a heavy dose of Castor Oil in the form of our disappointments. Yet, we recall many times when we were able to swallow life's disappointments because they were often followed by a little "orange juice" that helped it to go down."

That's the idea behind today's message. A great king, David, receives some very disappointing news from God, but in the same message he also received some great news that completely overwhelmed his disappointing news.

As Christians we know that God moves in mysterious ways. Sometimes he brings he good news and sometimes the news is less favorable, but no matter what kind of news receive we have learned to see God working in our lives.

Exposition

This text focuses on a covenant between God and David, delivered by the prophet Nathan.

David was the recipient of tremendous favor from God from his youth. God blessed him to rise from shepherd boy to King, and recognized him as a man after God's own heart.

God took David from the sheep-cote or the pasture and raised him. Nathan reminded David of his humble beginnings so that he would never lose the spirit of humility necessary for continued success. Throughout his tenure he was often reminded of his origins so that he would not forget from whence he came.

Nathan reminded David that God had given him success and victory over his enemies (v. 9): "I was with thee whithersoever thou wentest, to protect thee when pursued, to prosper thee when pursuing. I have cut off all thy enemies, that stood in the way of thy advancement and settlement."

God made him famous. He was famous for his courage, conduct, and great achievements, and was more popular than any of the great men of his day.

Verses 10 and 11 give a parenthetical reflection in which David is told that God would make him successful so that the people would be happy with his administration. David was promised a long life that he would enjoy with his grandchildren.

David specifically was promised that he would receive a quiet place, free from invasion, fear of attack or war. He was also promised that he would be able to enjoy the place because the Philistines, (called the "Children of Wickedness) would not attack them as they did during the period of the judges. David, the land, and the people would enjoy a period of rest from the troubles of war.

This chapter began with David expressing concern that there was no permanent tabernacle for God. He wanted the crowning act of his administration, his legacy to be the building of a great temple for God. However, David's desire was not to happen because, instead God had decided to build David a house.

The house that God would build would not be a tabernacle or a building made from stone, wood or precious jewels. The house proposed, would be through a great family through whom the world would be blessed. God had already promised to make David a great name, but now he promises to make him a legend in the nation and in a great family as well.

This great family would be the house of David, built by the hand of God.

God made David promises concerning his son Solomon, his successor to the royal line of Judah. Those promises were: that God would advance him to the throne; that long after David's death that Solomon's reign would be clear and uncontested; and Solomon would build the great temple that David desired.

God promised to establish a father/son relationship with Solomon. He promised that he would take him into the covenant of adoption (v. 14,15): He promised to correct him if there was occasion, just as a father would and would not disinherit him (v. 15). This message Nathan faithfully delivered to David (v. 17); and God kept his word.

God honors those who reverence him

David wanted to show love and reverence for God by building God a house. He had no desire for personal gain; he only wanted to reverence God. Even though God would not allow him to do all that he wanted to do, God honored David by blessing his family. Even today, it is a good thing to reverence God, to please him and praise him. There are many ways that we want to reverence him but find that we can't. Like David, God does not allow us to do all that is in our hearts, but he notices and is impressed with our intent. In return he blesses our families.

David sought Prosperity to glorify God

Much of David's reign as king was spent making the peace and accumulating tons of gold and silver. However, David's purpose in accumulating wealth was not for himself, it was to finance the construction of the Lord's House. That should be a lesson for believers today. As we seek to prosper financially, our upward push should have God in mind. As we prosper, our desire should be that we can use that prosperity to help build God's kingdom. We should be willing to give to the church and its ministries from the storehouses that God has filled for us. We asked to be blessed so that we can be a blessing to God's program. The song writer said, "Make me a blessing. Make me a blessing to someone today." It did not say give me a blessing, but make my life a blessing. As we strive to climb up, let us resolve that the reason for our climb is because we want to be in a better position to bless God's work. When God sees our reason, he will bless our climb.

In the midst of Disappointment God promises us

David was disappointed that he would not be able to build the temple for God, but although he was let down by the words of the prophet, he was inspired and lifted by the promise of God. God promised a long life, a peaceful death, and great family heritage. What a promise! In the middle of his disappointment God turned the despair of that hour into a moment of joy. It was as if God said, "I have some bad news and some good news, which one would you rather hear first." The bad new is you won't get to build my house. The good news is "I'm going to build a house for you." In our disappointments there is always hope. There is an old saying that behind every dark cloud there is a silver lining. The song writer says, "There is a bright side somewhere." In our disappointments God always shows us his grace. In our sickness, tragedies and setbacks, God speaks boldly to our situation and we find hope. That hope is in the promises of God. The covenant that God makes with us is what keeps us going. We have his word that he will make a way for us out of no way and be a bridge for us over all of our troubling waters. Therefore even if life gives us disappointments, we don't give up because God is still on the throne.

A God-Son Relationship

God told David that his son, Solomon would have a father son/relationship with him. That was significant because while God describes the relationship he will have with David's son, who would be his "God-son" he shows us what it means to be a "God-parent." As a god-son, Solomon would literally be adopted into the family of God, complete with all of the privileges of being a child of God. It also meant that the god-son could also expect to be disciplined by the God father as well as protected and provided for by the God father's hand. The God-Father's promise is given in the text, ""If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men and with the stripes of the children of men, but my mercy shall not depart away from him."

God Will Uphold Your House

Finally, brothers and sisters, this text suggests that God will uphold, bless and protect the godly home.

For David, the words were simple but strong, "Thy house and thy kingdom shall be established forever."

It meant God would be watching out for his family over the years, protecting, providing and insuring its survival and growth from generation to generation.

Today, we should get renewed hope when we think about how God is watching over our families.

Because God is watching over our families we can sleep in the midst of the storms of life.

In the midst of slavery our forefathers could sing, "All day, All night angels watching over me my Lord."

Because God is watching over us, we don't get overly concerned when things get tough because "his eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches over me."

Because God is watching over us, we don't wallow in self pity when we slip, because "'we fall down, but we get up!"

Because God is watching over us, we don't wither and shrink in the face of trouble, because we know "trouble don't last always!"

Because God is watching over us, we can have joy in the midst of sorrow!

Because God is watching over us, we can have peace in the middle of confusion!

Because God is watching over us, we can have faith in the middle of doubt!

Because God is watching over us, we can have love although we are surrounded by hate!

Because God is watching over us, we can have happiness although all around us is only sadness!

Because God is watching over us, we can have hope in the middle of panic because " We are our heavenly father's children…and "he knows how much we can bear!"

He knows, yes he knows!

He knows, when we have come to the end of our rope!

He knows, when our faith is challenged and our hope is waning!

He knows, when our names have been put on the highway and we have been called everything but a child of God!

He knows, yes he knows, just how much we can bear!

I don't know about you but I've decided to stay on the battlefield!

I've decided to keep telling the story of Jesus and his love!

I've decided to keep telling the world how he came to this wicked earth!

I've decided to keep telling the world how he died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, arose from the grave

With all power in his hands!

When Children Pray

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 22, 2006

SCRIPTURE: Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them. 14 But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Matthew 19:13-14.

Introduction

Have you ever listened to a child's prayer? A child's prayer is often simple and precise. It is said with meaning and with sincerity that mirrors the best prayers of many adults. Often set in rhymes, children's prayers say in a few words, what adults say with a thousand words.

What child's prayer do you remember?
Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray thee, Lord, my soul to take.

Many of us have heard at least one variation of this prayer:
God is great and God is good
And we thank God for our food
By God's hands we all are fed.
Thank you, God, for daily bread..

These model prayers are meant to be training tools for children to teach them the kinds of things they should say. It is not expected that they should grow into adults and still close their day with "Now I lay me down to sleep." As they mature the model should no longer be needed.

Children understand spiritual things even when we think they don't. The class was studying sea mammals. A bright student asked her teacher if he thought a whale swallowed Jonah as she'd learned in Sunday school. The teacher said, "No, a whale couldn't swallow a man because, though a whale's a huge sea mammal, its throat's too small for a man to pass through." "Oh," said student, "When I get to heaven I'll ask Jonah about it." The teacher challenged her: "But suppose Jonah didn't make it to Heaven but went to the bad place? Then what?" The little girl was full of faith, so she didn't have to think too long about that. She shot back, "In that case maybe you can ask him yourself."

Young children generally have not had their senses dulled by the ways of the world. The young still have the potential for believing things adults have already dismissed as impossible or even ridiculous. Psychologist tell us that there is a space of time in the development of every child in which they extremely open to faith issues, belief in the supernatural, and expectancy that, when they pray with seriousness, their prayers will be answered.

During this period of development children are impressionable. They believe without question and they expect the implied result. Because they trust their parents completely, they believe that a fairy took the tooth from beneath their pillow and replace it with money. They believe in the Easter bunny. They believe that a man in a red suit can fly in a sleigh all over the world in a single night and slide down chimneys. Their parents said it, it must be so. They believe and they expect the implied result.

Believers should be very careful what we allow to filter into the minds of children during the impressionable years when they are open to issues of faith, belief and expectancy. Many children are marked for life believing that witches fly on broom sticks, vampires suck blood and that Jason rises from the dead every Friday the 13th.

It is during this window of time that children should be taught many of the basic faith issues, how to talk to God and what to expect from him. Every child should be taught to say a simple prayer at night and one for mealtime and another for special occasions.

Often, when adults pray, they do so out of a sense of routine and ritual. However, when children pray, it's the "real deal."

As Christians, we are striving to have the essential childlike qualities that will help us to talk to God in a way that is sincere. To reach that level of maturity we should observe the spirit and purity of the young and perhaps in some way emulate the moments, "when children pray."

Exposition

his text focuses on an instance when children were brought to Christ and he received them.

There are two lessons in this text. The first lesson indicates the master's desire that parents should bring the children before the Lord. The parents in this text were bringing young children, even babes to see, hear, touch and be touched by the master. They also wanted Jesus to pray for them. Jesus rebuked his disciples for trying to push the children away, indicating that he considered children important to the kingdom of God.

The second lesson of the text is the matter of faith. Jesus said, "For such is the kingdom of heaven." He noted that the faith of these little children is the kind that adults will need to fully appreciate the kingdom of heaven that he preached.

There are some believers who have been specially gifted when it comes to faith. 1 Corinthians 12:4-11 lists nine categories of gifts. One of these categories is the gifts related to faith. While all believers may have a measured amount of faith others, have an abundance of "child like" faith that is referred to hear. This is the faith that moves mountains and believes the impossible and reaches for the unreachable.

Young children have this great faith at the beginning. They believe in the impossible. Jesus said that is the kind of faith that those who enter the kingdom of God will possess.

Three elements of children's prayer

There are three elements of a child's prayer that adults should emulate:

FAITH IN THE FATHER: Children have complete faith in their parents. They trust that no matter what the problem, that their parents will take care of the matter. They never doubt for a second that their parents have the ability to secure what they need. When a child prays to his heavenly father, it is the same. They have no doubt that God can answer their prayer. Adult believers must approach God like children, in this respect. We must believe that no matter what our concern is that God can handle it and has the power to deal with it in the way that we ask.

Consider the family members who went to the hospital to pray for the elderly grandmother. The little girl learned in Sunday School that God can heal the sick, so she prayed for her grandmother. As the family assembled at the hospital each family member was told to bring something that symbolized their faith in God. The room was filled with adults who held prayer books, bible, crosses and rosaries in their hands. The little girl was the only child in a room full of adults. After about an hour the grandmother awakened out of her comma. As her eyes opened, the first thing she saw was her granddaughter holding a pair of house shoes. Asked why she was holding house shoes the girl said, "They said for each person to bring something that showed how much faith they had in God. I prayed for you to go home. Since I know God can make that happen I brought your house shoes, so your feet wouldn't get cold when on the way home."

We need the house shoe faith of a little child to fit ourselves for the kingdom of heaven.

WE SHOULD EXPECT AN ANSWER: Very young children expect to receive an answer to their prayers. It does not matter whether they prayed for an elephant for their birthday or grow up over night like Tom Hanks in the movie "Big." They expect what they pray for. Children take God literally at his word. If God said it, it will be done. Children have a way of targeting their expectation, to one thing and one thing only. Consider the children who were given snacks after Sunday school there was a pile of apples and a big plate of cookies. The Sunday school teacher put a sign up on the apples. "Take only one apple. God is watching." One little girl took the sign literally, so she made her own sign and put it with the plate of cookies. Her sign said, "Take all the cookies you want. God's watching the apples." She expected God to be focus on the apples. She never once considered or expected that God would stop watching the apples.

That's what many adults have lost, the spirit of expectancy. Too many believers don't expect anything to happen when they pray. We say the words but we really don't expect anything to happen. That's why Jesus says we must become like little children; we must expect God to answer.

WE SHOULD BE PERSISTENT: If you've ever had a child to ask for you something, you know that they can get on your last nerve, asking you repeatedly for the same thing. They never give up. Yet, that is the spirit that Christ is saying we must have when we pray. Since we know that our father in heaven can do what we want, we should never tire of our asking. Jesus told the parable of the importuning neighbor who beat on his neighbor's door at midnight, even though his neighbor was asleep. He kept beating so long that the neighbor finally opened the door to let him in. Jesus called that importunity or persistency. Just as children never give up, adult believers should never give up when we pray. Pray persistently, even when it doesn't look like it will do any good we should pray. Remember to P.U.S.H. (Pray until something happens). God may have already made up his mind but persistent prayer can change things. He has been known to "repent" or to change his mind. That's what persistent prayer can do.

A Prayer of Thanks

Finally brothers and sisters, we must not always pray to God asking for something, we should also pray to say thanks.

It may sound too simple for the adult mind, but it does not take a Harvard scholar to understand that a simple "Thank you" can go a long ways in life.

When God has blessed us we need to know how to say thank you.

We should say thank you because we serve a God who is in the prayer answering business.

If the week is about to begin with financial troubles looming everywhere, take it to the Lord in prayer.

If there is a problem in your family that you can't solve take it to the Lord in prayer.

If there is a job that you are trying to secure, take it to the Lord in prayer.

If there is an opportunity looming on your horizon, take it to the Lord in prayer!

After you have prayed about it, step back and watch God work!

God can take bad situations and turn them around!

God can take unemployed hands and help them find work!

God can take empty purses and filled them with blessings!

God can take failures and turn them into successes!

God can take sicknesses and turn them into examples of good health!

There has never been a problem that God couldn't solve!

There has never been a valley too low to God to pull you out!

There has never been a mountain to high for God to climb!

There has never been a river so wide that God couldn't cross it!

Call on Jesus!

Jesus who died out on Calvary!

Call on Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

Just a little talk with Jesus makes it right!

When Ordinary People Sing

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 2006

SCRIPTURE: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen.Matthew 28:19-20; "Oh, sing to the Lord a new song! Sing to the Lord, all the earth." Psalm 96:1

Introduction

We are familiar with the songs that describe the feelings of the rich and famous, but what are the songs of ordinary people? Frank Sinatra sang, "I did it my way" but what does the ordinary believer sing? Lena Horne sang, "Stormy Weather" and Aretha Franklin sang, "R-E-S-P-E-C-T" but what songs do the faithful sing on their daily journey toward the Canaan Land? Our songs usually describe our experiences and our hopes. They sometimes define where we have been and where we are going.

The songs of ordinary people describe us.

Is there one song that describes your life? If you could pick a song that best expresses your feeling at the present moment what would it be? "Rock me baby?" "I want your body?" "Hood Rich?" or "Amazing Grace?"

Those who have different experiences in life sing different songs. Those who have been hurt may sing the blues with B.B. King. Those who look toward the future may sing, "Don't stop thinking about tomorrow" with Fleetwood Mack.

The songs we sing reflect our experiences and expectations. Those songs change from moment to moment, since our lives are in constant transition. To accurately get a snapshot of who we are, we need a song that tells where we've been, where we are now and where we are going. To do that may require all of us to sing a new song.

Consider the church choir that traveled to New York for an appearance on a national television show. The church, proud of its choir, rented an entire floor of a hotel for them and sent the keys and registration information in advance to the director. All they had to do is get to their rooms and rest before the broadcast. When they arrived in the city, they were brought to an extremely fancy hotel and told that their rooms occupied the entire top floor of the 50 story building. Just as they prepared to go up, the elevator broke down. That meant they would have to take the stairs. The director told the choir, "all things work to the good" and with good spirit they decided to sing as they went up the fifty flights of stairs, each of the 49 choir members would lead a song and the director would sing the last song. As they began they sang, "We're marching to Zion." At the 10th floor they sang, "We are climbing Jacob's Ladder", at the 30th floor they sang, "We're climbing up, the rough side of the mountain," at the 40th floor they sang, "I won't complain." When they made it to the 50th floor the choir director began to sing, "Nobody knows the trouble I see!" The choir members asked why, at the top of the stairs he chose to sing such a sad song instead of a song of victory. The director dropped his head and said, "I left all of our keys at the front desk!"-The choir members looked him and said in unison, you sang the right song!

As Christians, we are on an extraordinary mission from God. Our mission is to go into the entire world for Jesus. We are ordinary people but we are on an extraordinary mission for the Lord. When we sing about our experiences, we also have an extraordinary song.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he commissions his disciples to evangelize the known world.

This text is often called the "Great Commission." It occurs after the resurrection as Jesus speaks to the disciples giving them their final assignment. They were ordinary men to whom he was giving an extraordinary mission. In a few short years, this commission resulted in the expansion of the faith to Asia Minor, the Cities of Greece and to nearly the entire known world of their time.

The experience of the disciples would obviously give them a new song to sing. Because of the challenges that they would face and victories they would achieve.

Singing was part of the Jewish experience. They sang of their humble national beginnings and during their enslavement in Egypt. They sang as they journeyed to the Promised Land. Moreover, they sang in nearly every part of their national experience. The only time they found it difficult to sing was during their captivity. It was then that there captors asked them to sing one of their famous songs and they answered, "How can we sing Zion's songs in a strange land?"

David penned the 96th Psalm and challenged believers to sing a new song. In consideration of how God saved Israel, blessed them and performed miracles for them in the presence of their enemies, David said Israel should sing a new song that encompasses all that God has done for the people involving their liberty, salvation and bountiful blessing.

In the context of the New Testament mission the disciples were beginning a new journey that would require new songs as well.

The new song would be different from the song Moses sang when Pharaoh's army was drowned in Exodus 15:1.

The new song would be different from the one David sang in Psalm 13:6 in which he expressed his joy for the bountiful blessings of the Lord.

It would even be different from the song of Isaiah 12:5 in which the excellence of God was promoted. It would be a new song!

When ordinary believers consider what God has done from salvation to blessings and what he will do in the not so distant future. The song we sing will truly be a new song.

When Ordinary People Sing

When ordinary believers sing, what should be our main points of concern? If we were recording artists, entertainers and performers, we would be concerned about stage presence, projection, marketability of our songs, audience appeal and many other considerations of the music business. However, we are ordinary believers in Christ, what should be our concerns?

OUR SONGS SHOULD BE CHRIST CENTERED: Our songs should be God centered or Christ centered. This means that what we sing should reflect our nature that our lives are God centered. Everything we do and say is centered around our central beliefs about God and his Son Jesus Christ. Our songs are a reflection of that belief. What we choose to sing should be worthy of presentation to the master. Because what we sing will be presented to the Lord, those who sing should feel compelled to rehearse such that they always present God their best. Without proper rehearsal and preparation, then what is presented "to the Lord" is less than the best and is a negative rather than a positive reflection on the singers. No singer should be happy with themselves if they sing with the choir but fail to block out time to adequately prepare. Singing to the Lord is serious business. It comes from roots that are deep in faith and impact the spiritual growth of the church.

OUR SONGS SHOULD REFLECT OUR TESTIMONY: Our song must be in tune with our testimony. Many believers, even those in the choir, are not strong singers. In any given church choir, most will testify that while they can blend in with others, it is hard for them to carry the melody unless there is a strong person in their section to set the tune. When that person is missing, they sing but sing softly, afraid they may sing out of tune.

So it is in life. Many believers, whether they admit it or not, depend upon each other to stay in tune. Outside of the body of Christ it is easy to start singing another tune. It is easy to get distracted and get our lives off track. We depend upon each other, to stay on track.

We depend upon that phone call from another believer who questions our sustained absence. We depend upon words of encouragement and even the words of chastisement we receive from our teachers and ministers to help keep us in tune. We depend upon the support of friends of the faith who have the melody to keep us in tune we lose our note.

For this reason we must constantly pray for those who set the tune for us. We must constantly pray for our pastor, teachers, musicians and choir leaders. Church musicians are those who believe in God and testify with their instruments! Choir directors don't just wave their hands, they testify with their lives! We should pray that they stay in tune with God!

Those who have been on the journey know that it is extremely difficult to sing a melody to the Lord if our lives are out of tune with his word.

It is hard to sing about faith, if we know we have no faith.

It is hard to sing about strength, if all we show is weakness.

It is hard to sing about our hope in the Lord, if we have given up on God ourselves!

Our song must reflect our testimony.

ORDINARY FOLKS SHOULD SING ORDINARY SONGS: Ordinary folks often sing ordinary songs. Some of them are old melodies passed down through the generations. Some are simple tunes. Those who sing to ordinary people should be trained to sing in various forms and styles, delivering the same witness in a variety of ways. Ephesians 5:19 says, "speaking to one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs" Those who sing to the Lord and to others select the style of song appropriate for the moment. The psalms, what we call "Anthems" speak dramatically about the power of God. Every singer should know how to witness with the power of the word transcribed into anthems. Hymns attest to the greatness of God as he relates to us. They are standards that have survived the test of time and linger long in the hearts of believers around the world. Spiritual songs are those that speak from the soul and experience of believers. They testify about what God has done in the life of a believer. They are about blessings received, hope renewed and prayers answered.

Trained music leaders usually insure that varied forms are represented in every worship, hymns, psalms and spiritual songs. This too represents the course of every spiritual life: a devotion to God, dealing with God, and Testimony about God.

THE PRAISE OF GOD SHOULD BE OUR REASON FOR SINGING: When ordinary people sing, they have no reason to sing except to praise God. Man who sings about God in the shower. The housewife who sings while cleaning her home. The mother who sings while attending a child; all have one purpose, to praise God. Those who sing for other reasons might find their songs don't achieve their purpose. Consider the man who bought an African Parrot and discovered it could sing and talk. At home the man and the bird had long discussions about Africa, the slave trade and Negro spirituals. The bird wanted to learn a few Negro spirituals so the man taught him several Negro Spirituals and some of his favorite gospel tunes. It was amazing! He had a talking singing bird. No one at church would believe it. Finally, on the day of the choir musical he decided to take the bird to church with him. It was a strange picture to see a man come to a musical with a parrot perched on his shoulder. When the man told his friends that the bird could talk and sing his friends did not believe him. Before the musical began there were bets being placed everywhere.

No one expected the bird to sing. All through the musical the bird did not say one word. The man began to sweat. By offering time the bird still had not sung. As the service ended, the man had to payoff his bets and was real angry with the bird.

Once in the car the bird started singing loudly.

"Why are you singing now?" The man said "Don't you know I lost nearly $5,000 betting on you. Everybody cleaned up on me."

The bird looked at the man and said, “Don’t be stupid. If they won $5,000 because I didn’t sing at the musical. They’ll bet $20,000 that I can’t sing at the Christmas program. By then, you and I both will be singing a new song!”

Unlike the bird, when we sing praises to God we have no secret agenda or reason. We sing because we are happy. We sing because we are free. His eye is on the sparrow “and I know he watches me.”

Our song tells about our extraordinary journey

Finally, brothers and sisters, when we sing about God and his goodness, it should tell the world that we are just ordinary people with an extraordinary story.

When David encouraged Israel to sing a new song, he wanted them to sing a different song.

When David killed Goliath the people sang a song, “Saul hath killed his thousands but David hath killed ten thousand.” We are not told to sing David’s song, but to sing unto the Lord a new song!

When Israel was in Egypt their song was a song of desperation and trouble. It’s words were directed to God and redirected to Pharaoh “Let my people Go!”

We are not encouraged to re-sing the old song of desperation and frustration. We are urged to sing unto the Lord a new song!

When Solomon dedicated the temple, the people sang a song of accomplishment. We are urged however to go beyond singing a song of a single accomplishment and to sing unto the Lord a new song. David told Israel to look back over its journey and to take in the whole picture.

When you sing to the Lord, don’t just praise him for one experience, but rewrite your words to praise him for entire experience.

Don’t just thank him for the mountain top experiences, but sing a new song that thanks him for the valleys as well.

Sing a new song that thanks him for the sunshine and thanks him for the rain!

Sing a new song that thanks him for the good times and thanks him for the bad times too!

Sing a new song that thanks him for accomplishments we’ve made but also sing a song that thanks him for the lesson learned from failures and setbacks!

Our new song should tell our story. It ought to tell how he picked us up turned us around!

It ought to tell how he planted our feet on solid ground!

It ought to tell how he gave us a new walk and a new talk!

It ought to tell how he gave us a new song to sing!

“I’ve been washed in the blood of the crucified lamb!”

Who died on Calvary but Early Sunday morning arose up from the grave!

Our new song tells where we have been, but one of these old days we are going to sing a new song! One of these days, bye and bye, we’re going to sing, “How I got over! How I got over!

My soul looks back and wonders, how I got over!”

Ashes on the Altar

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 5, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "And they shall take away the ashes from the altar, and spread a purple cloth thereon..." Numbers 4:13

Introduction

Have you ever felt that your prayers never made it through? Perhaps it was a time when you prayed fervently but, despite your most sincere prayer, you felt that your prayer went nowhere? When those moments come we feel frustrated because we desperately need to get a breakthrough in our lives, but we can't get a prayer through.

Many of us are desperately praying for a breakthrough. The clouds of disappointment, trouble, sickness, failure and frustration have overshadowed us for so long that we desperately look for the day when the grace of God will breakthrough and shine on us.

We pray for a breakthrough!

We pray for a blessing!

However, sometimes we get the idea that our prayer for a break through is not getting through.

There may be a reason that our prayers can't get through. This reason would explain why we come to the altar in prayer but leave without reaching the throne of grace.

Could it be possible that we are bringing something to the altar that puts out the fire of God's benevolent spirit toward us?

Are we bringing our ashes to the altar rather than our humbled spirit?

A preponderance of bible teaching makes it very clear that those who have not humbled themselves before God cannot expect to have their prayers heard. If we come to our personal altar in prayer but are not straight with God our prayers don't make it out of the room; certainly not before God's throne.

Look at just a few scriptures: Job 27:8-9 refers to our hypocrisy. It notes that if we say one thing and do another, that God will not hear us when we pray to him in times of trouble. Job 35:12-13 indicates that when we are lifted up in pride and full of ourselves, that God will not hear us or even regard what we say with any degree of seriousness. Those who are living lives outside of God's will find that not only will their prayers not find their way to God, but that God will get as far away from them as he can. Proverbs 15:29 reemphasizes this truth by making it plain that God hears those who are living according to his will but stays far away from the unrighteous. Those who support treachery and death in its various forms will also find it difficult to get a prayer through as well. Isaiah 1:15 says, "And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you: yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood." Based on these truths John 9:31 says, "Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth."

All of these scriptural references point to one truth, if we want to approach the altar of God with our requests and prayers, we must be humble, repentant and live according to his will.

We can't bring sinful ashes to the altar and expect a break through.

As Christians, we know God will hear the prayers of the righteous. We approach the altar of prayer with humility and a spirit of sacrifice, with the full knowledge that God will hear us when we pray.

Exposition

This text focuses on a description of how the ashes of the altar of God were handled.

The Tabernacle of God was a portable tent that moved whenever the people broke camp. There were elaborate instructions given in this chapter about the dismantling of the Tabernacle and for the handling of the altar. Among the detailed instructions were those relating to the handling of the ashes of the altar.

Altars were places where believers made animal sacrifices to God. There were specific rules for handling the altar. Among the many rules were those that the fires of the altars be kept burning perpetually and that the ashes be removed regularly.

The animal that was sacrificed represented a particular sin. The ashes were all that was left behind of that sin. The ashes were carefully removed from the altar, but not even the attendants were allowed to look at them.

Ashes were never allowed to accumulate. The Levites arranged for the ashes to be carried away daily so that they would not suffocate the fire on the altar. The fire on the altar represented the presence of God. Ashes threatened to extinguish the fire.

The ashes on the altar would never be thrown away. They were taken outside of the camp, mixed with water and used in purification ceremonies for those who were impure in some way. The application of the ashes indicated a purity restored.

No attendants were to look at the ashes. A purple cloth was placed over the ashes by the priests so that the Kohathites, who were charge to empty them, would not see them again. The ashes of the sacrifice were considered holy, since they were what indicated God's acceptance and forgiveness of a sin.

Removal of the ashes was essential to maintain the flame on the altar of the presence of God. Removing the ashes symbolized that sins, once forgiven, were never seen or heard from again.

Whenever someone needed purification the old ashes, mixed with water, were applied and sprinkled upon him to signify that he had been restored.

In the New Testament there is no animal sacrifice. Christ himself became our one time sacrifice. We come to him on the altar of our heart and bring him our sins in a spirit of humility and repentance. We go and sin no more. Those ashes, those sins are forgiven and covered with the purple robe of Grace and will never be held against us. Like the ashes in the water was used to help others find restoration, the ashes of our experiences, in the form of our testimony and reformed lives will also help others to find God and atonement for themselves.

Hebrews 9:13-14 says that through sacrificing goats and sprinkling ashes believers of old found forgiveness, but for us Christ is our sacrifice and source of atonement.

When we approach God in prayer, we do so with a sense of humility and repentance from our sins. Because we are humble, and have repented, Christ is our sacrifice and God hears us when we pray.

Without Christ, we simply kneel before God and pour ashes on the altar.

Our Ashes

Many can remember a time when houses, especially those in the rural, had wood burning stoves. Many have memories of cutting wood and feeding the flames of those iron stoves. Every farm youngster learned very quickly that emptying the ashes was just as important as feeding the fire more wood. After a long night of slow burning oak, the next morning those big heaters were filled with ashes that had to be removed before the fire could be successfully revived.

Many of us are unsuccessful with getting our prayer through because there are still ashes on our altars. Here are a few:

ASHES ARE RESIDUES OF WHAT ONCE WAS: When an animal sacrifice was given, the ashes represented all that was left of that sin. There are many people who still have residues in their lives; residues of what once was. Often we come to God in the spirit of the old carnal man or woman. There are residues of our street life, thug life, whore mongering life, gambling life, mean and vengeful life still present in our lives. These residues indicate that we have not fully given ourselves over to God, the old sinful man is still there, controlling, directing and suggesting. We try to pray, but we can't get our break through because we can't get past the residues of a lost love, a painful defeat, an awful humiliation, and lost pride. When we come to the altar instead of bringing our humility, repentant, we bow asking for our break through, with a bag full of residues that we pour on the altar. 2 Corinthians 5:17 says, "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature, old things are passed away, all things are become new."

There are no residues. When we approach God in prayer, the old man or woman will never be seen again but for the purpose of testimony to help restore the faith of others.

ASHES REPRESENT OUR BITTER EXPERIENCES: There are times when our bitter experiences frustrate our prayers and prohibit our breakthrough. In Exodus 32:19-20 Moses was angry with the people for their worship of a golden calf while he prayed to God on the mountain. He took their idol and burned it and ground the ashes and residue into a powder and poured it into their drinking water. Its bitterness reminded them of their sin. There are many today who have had some bitter experiences in life and cannot seem to let go of them. When they try to pray they bring the ashes of that bitter experience with them. When they pray for their children, they can't look at them without remembering the bitterness of their Exes. They pray for their spouses but still remember how they hurt us. They pray for their church, but still have a bad feeling about someone in it who has offended them. They pray for their enemies but still have not forgiven them. We can't get a prayer through because our bitterness has been ground into the fabric of our daily lives. Yet, Christ calls on us to move on with our lives. Didn't Paul say, "..forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. (Phil 3:14) If we try to pray while still in our bitterness, we bring ashes to the altar.

ASHES SMOTHER FIRES: One reason the ashes were removed from the altar on a daily basis is because, ashes smother fires. The fire on the altar represents the presence of God; the very spirit of God himself. However, there are some who cannot experience the presence of God because they pour ashes on the altar. They come before God with so much mess, stress, drama and trauma that they extinguish their own fire. We have seen them come to worship so angry with a family member that they can't benefit from the worship experience. Someone approaches the altar for prayer out of a sense of obligation, hoping that it doesn't last too long; they put the fire out. A prayer is being offered for someone who has done you wrong and that upsets you;you put your fire out. We bring a bag full of our personal ashes to the altar and pour them on the praise, prayer and worship experience, then get upset because our bad spirit-puts out the fire on our altar. When we approach God we should bring a repentant life that is a sacrifice that will not put out the fire it will be embraced by the spirit of God. We can't get our break through until we are through pouring ashes on the fire.

Praying For Your Break Through

Finally, brothers and sisters, remember if we want our prayers heard we must empty the ashes.

When the priests ordered the ashes emptied not single ash was left behind. All residues were carefully raked up and a purple cloth was placed over them so that they would not be seen, even by the persons who would carry them outside of the camp.

When we come before God we must empty the ashes!

We want God to give us a financial breakthrough but we're still playing the lottery and counting on bingo; we've got to empty the ashes!

We want God to repair our shattered marriages but we are still playing musical beds; we've got to empty the ashes!

We want a new house, but we have not prepared a home to put in the house; we've got to empty the ashes!

We want a pay raise on our jobs, but we are not willing to do anything extra to deserve it; we've got to empty the ashes!

We want to be treated with respect, but we treat others like dogs; we've got to empty the ashes.

If we want God to hear us we must come to him in a spirit of repentance and humility. The only thing God wants to hear from a sinner is "I repent. Please forgive me."

John 9:31 says, "Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth." That's a fancy way of saying, if you want to pray for your break through, empty the ashes first, and then talk to God.

Why should you empty the ashes before you try to pray?

The ashes represent yesterday's problem but you are looking for today's solution.

Ashes represent yesterday's questions but you are looking for today's answer.

Ashes represent yesterday's failures, but you are looking for today's successes.

— We may have been fed yesterday, but we need a meal today!

— We may have been blessed last week, but we need a new blessing this week!

— We may have been anointed yesterday, but we need another anointing today!

We need to come before the altar of God today, but we can't bring him yesterdays ashes!

If we come before God with humility and empty yesterday's ashes, we can get a breakthrough for today:

— If we can get a breakthrough today, we can better deal with yesterday's fools!

—If we can get a breakthrough today, we can stop worrying about yesterdays problems!

—If we can get a breakthrough today, we can see the victory ahead instead of dwelling on the failure behind!

Ashes on the altar keep bringing up what used to be, but we have been transformed by the renewing of our minds!

Ashes on the altar keep a bitter taste in our mouths, but we say with the song writer, "I've found a savior and he's sweet I know."

But when you can go to God in prayer, everything looks different.

— BITTERNESS turns into SWEETNESS!

— WEAKNESS turns into STRENGTH!

— SICKNESS turns into HEALTH!

— And HUNGER turns into SATISFACTION!

When the priests in the Tabernacle removed the ashes from the Tabernacle they covered them with a purple cloth so they would never be seen again.

I don't know about you but I get happy when I think about the purple cloth.

When I think of purple I think about Jesus being given a purple robe and a crown of thorns on his heads.

The ashes on the altar were covered with a purple cloth and Jesus wore a purple robe.

It was a purple cloth that covered the ashes of the sacrifice, but it was purple robe on the shoulder of the savior that represented his agony and pain for us.

It was a purple cloth that hid the ashes from prying eyes. But Jesus was wearing a purple robe while everyone watched as he carried the old rugged cross!

That purple cloth hid the ashes, but it wasn't his purple robe that washed away our sins, it was nothing but the blood.

Oh precious is the flow that makes me white as snow; nothing but the blood of Jesus.

He died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning he arose from the dead with all power in his hands!

Singing Your Prayer and Praying Your Song

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 12, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." Colossians 3:16

Introduction

Do you ever find yourself singing songs of faith through the week? There are times when we are performing our routine chores that we find ourselves singing songs of faith. The vacuum cleaner is humming, but there is a believer somewhere that is cleaning up and singing. There are some who sing while washing the car, sweeping, ironing or just driving along in their automobiles. Songs of faith just seem to pop in into our mind and we begin to sing and repeat the words of confirmation in our mind. They encourage us. They motivate us.

When we accepted Christ, he gave us a new song to sing. Before Christ all we sang was a "somebody done me wrong song." After Christ, we began to sing new songs that expressed our hope and faith. Kirk Franklin's famous song, "The Reason Why We Sing" notes that people often ask questions about why Christians sing. He answered in the words of an old song written in 1905, "I sing because I'm happy. I sing because I'm free. His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me."

A trademark of all true Christians is that they pray and carry a melody in their hearts.

We pray to talk to God about our concerns and our desires.

We sing to praise God for his greatness. We also sing to express our joy, hope and sometimes our sorrow.

In our times of trouble we prayed to God for relief; then we sang, "Soon I will be done with the troubles of the world."

In our times of confusion we prayed for direction; then we sang, "We'll understand it better bye and bye."

In times of victory we prayed and gave thanks; then we sang, "Free at last, Free at last, thank God almighty I'm free at last."

In times of death, we prayed for assurance of salvation; then we sang, "Swing low, sweet chariot, coming forth to carry me home."

In times of spiritual fullness we prayed for his anointing, then we sang, "There's something within me, that holdn't the reins."

These are the songs that we sing to accompany our prayers. That's why the role of the church singers is so important. Believers assemble remember the songs that are sung. More importantly they remember the people who sing them. Even as they mop the floors or carry out routine duties at work, the songs and melodies they have heard and faces and testimonies of the singers, give them an opportunity to merrily sing a song that brings them joy, even in the midst of hard times.

As Christians, we know the importance of praying and singing. Combined, they place us in the presence of God continuously praising him for his goodness and his mercy.

Exposition

These texts give examples of biblical teachings about singing and praying. Throughout the written word of God believers are instructed to sing and pray. Individually, they give us specific instances that may seem to indicate that we should pray or sing only in certain circumstances. There are texts that show believers praying only in times of trouble. There are others that show believers singing only in time of happiness.

However, the preponderance of scripture teaches that believers should sing and pray all of the time.

These texts are examples that, when disaggregated from the whole, seem to isolate when we should pray or sing.

James 5:13 says, " Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him sing psalms." Read alone the verse says we should pray only when we are afflicted with a problem, sickness or trouble. The indication is that pray is reserved for tough times and cannot in any wise be considered outside of trouble. The same verse seems to suggest that we should sing when we are happy. The initial implication is that we should sing only when everything is going the way that we want.

Yet, Acts 16:25 gives an expanded circumstance. This text says, "And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them." This text shows Paul and Silas praising God and singing while imprisoned at midnight. By any definition their songs were not reflective of a merry circumstance, yet they were singing in a very depressing situation and at midnight.

The preponderance of scripture teaches that we should sing and pray constantly. While we should pray to God in our afflictions or sing when we are merry, we should pray to God and give him thanks in every situation. Similarly, we should sing his praises when we are merry and even when we are in the midst of the most adverse circumstance.

Psalm 14:33 says, "I will sing unto the LORD as long as I live: I will sing praise to my God while I have my being. "

Colossians 3:16 says, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord."

How to sing your prayer

Our songs reflect the focus of our hope and faith. Our prayers are focused on God's will as well.

OUR SONGS AND OUR PRAYERS ARE UNTO THE LORD: When songs are sung unto the Lord they are objective not subjective. In public or private worship our songs and our prayers should be objective. Objective songs and prayers remove ourselves out of the picture and generally extol the greatness of God and his will alone. The best prayers and songs focus on the Lord's will without "me" in the picture. On the other hand the subjective song and prayer considers "poor me" and ignores the will of God. The song and prayer that focuses on the Lord, brings happiness to the soul by helping us to focus on the greatness of the Lord and doing his will not ours.

WE SING AND PRAY TO GOD REGARDLESS OF CIRCUMSTANCE. Regardless to our circumstance we sing and pray to God. When David watched his father's flock he sang and prayed. When he faced Goliath he sang and prayed. When he was hunted by King Saul, he sang and prayed. Even when he was disappointed with himself he sang and prayed the memorable words, "Create in me a clean heart O Lord..and renew a right sprit within me." We praise God because if we had ten thousands tongues we couldn't clap, sing or praise him loud enough and long enough for all of the blessing he has bestowed upon us.

WE PRAY IN FAITH, WE SING IN FAITH: The desire of every believer, after being saved is to walk the Christian walk and talk the Christian talk. This desire is reflected in the way we pray and what we sing. Our prayer is that God will always be with us. We sing that prayer with songs such as, "I want Jesus to walk with me." This walk cannot be done along. Other songs such as, "Lord I want to be a Christian" clearly state the believer's desire to live the life of holiness with the help of God.

When trouble, difficulties, and hardships come our way, we pray to God in faith. We also sing about our faith in the ultimate righteousness of God. We cling to the word of God that teaches that "all things work to the good" for those who love God, according to his purpose. Thus, our songs look up when everything around us is down. They express faith even in the midst of sorrow. That's when we sing, "It is well with my soul" and "Count it all joy." We sing those words because they reflect our faith that, "The Lord will make a way somehow."

We Pray in Thanks, We sing in thanks

Finally, we should remember that while we pray with a spirit of thanks, humility and gratitude we also sing in a spirit of thanks as well.

In our prayers we acknowledge the goodness of the Lord and give thanks.

When we sit at the table and eat we give thanks.

When we lay down to sleep at night we give thanks

We give God thanks for the seen and the unseen.

We thank him for the greens and butter beans, but we also thank him for being able to sleep soundly at night.

We thank him for turkey and dressing, but we also thank him for dressing our souls with his grace.

We thank him for fried chicken, rice and a little gravy, but we should also thank him for spiritual gravy: Joy, love, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, faith, meekness, and temperance.

We thank him for cars, houses and color T.V. but we should also thank him for coloring our lives with faith and hope because they help us to see the world in a different light.

In essence, we should keep the admonition in mind, "In everything, give thanks."

It's easy to sing and pray when we are being blessed. It's harder to pray and lift our voices in song in our troubles and tribulations.

Yet, even here, we should sing our prayer, and pray what we sing.

Sing what we pray about because we know that regardless of our God is still good.

If there is nothing in your refrigerator but ice cubes, God is still good, we ought to be singing and praying over the ice cubes!

If you lose your job and are forced to walk the street looking for a job, we ought to be singing and praising God for the fact that you still have two feet!

On our sickbeds we should sing and praise God for our doctors and your nurses and praise God that that he's the main surgeon in the operating room.

Prayer can take your blunders and turn them into blessings! That's when you are able to sing "I'm Glad God gave me a second chance!"

Prayer can take your fears and turn them into confidences! That's when we sing our prayer and say, "His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches over me."

Prayer can take our stumbling blocks and turn them into stepping stones! That's when we start to sing, "I know the Lord will make a way."

Prayer can take our weaknesses and turn them into strength! That's when we sing, "All my help comes from the Lord."

Keep singing and praying because God can make a way out of no way!

Keep singing and praying because God can open doors that have been closed in our faces!

Keep singing and praying because God can pick you up and turn you around.

I know what prayer can do! I've tried it for myself!

If you pray and sing in Jesus' name, burdens can be lifted!

In Jesus' name, finances ca be restored!

In Jesus' name, wounds can be healed!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose early on Sunday morning!

No wonder the song writer wrote, "I woke up this morning with my mind staid, on Jesus. Singing and Praying with my mind, staid on Jesus!"

Staid on Jesus!Staid on Jesus!

The Feast After the Fast

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 15, 2006

SCRIPTURE: "If my people, which are called by name, will humble themselves and pray, and seek my face, and turn from the wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and will heal their land." 2 Chronicles 7:14 "Seven days shalt thou keep a feast unto Jehovah thy God in the place which Jehovah shall choose; because Jehovah thy God will bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the work of thy hands, and thou shalt be altogether joyful." Deuteronomy 16:15

Introduction

How do we get God to hear us? When there is something important on our heart and we want to get the attention of the almighty, what can we do to get his attention? We can't jump up and down, wave our hands or post a banner; that won't get his attention. Neither can we expect him to respond to vain repetitions and empty words. The way to get God's attention is to humble ourselves, and atone for our short comings.

That's what Solomon found out when he was about to dedicate the temple and asked if this great building would get God's attention. God's answer was memorable: "If my people, which are called by my name, will humble themselves and pray, and seek my face, and turn from the wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and will heal their land." 2 Chronicles 7:14 If we want to get God's attention, then we must first be willing to humble ourselves and atone.

What God said to Solomon sounded simple, but humbling ourselves is very difficult for some people. Humbling ourselves requires us to suggest that we are dependent upon someone or something for our existence. Humility runs against our very nature. By nature we are proud and self sufficient. Yet, God is saying if you want to get my attention you must humble yourselves and pray.

The word "humble" in scripture is associated with self humiliation or the crushing of self. It is the same word that is used for "fast" in many instances. God requires a degree of humility on our part. It's the point when we empty ourselves to say to God "I need thee every hour. I need thee."

Psalms 35:13 clearly makes this association when it says "I humbled my soul with fasting". Thus, when people in Biblical times were commanded "to humble yourselves", they immediately understood what action was required: fasting.

Believers who fast usually sacrifice something of great value to them to demonstrate their humility before God. Their "Fast" gets his attention. In addition, their humble spirit also introduces an attitude of repentance because it breaks down the barriers of pride and arrogance that may have kept us from atoning for our sins.

The purpose of fasting is not to earn credits, to gain leverage, or to impress people, but to truly humble ourselves so that God's blessings may flow.

When we have completed our fast and made our petitions to God, we should celebrate and praise God for hearing us and considering our prayers in light of our sacrifice.

As Christians, we know that there is power in prayer, especially prayer that is preceded by sacrifice and atone for our evil ways. After we fast and pray, God hears us and begins the process of healing our land.

Exposition

This text focuses on both a fast and feast that was commanded by God for Israel.

The Mosaic Law required all Israelites to restore their fellowship with God by making atonement for their sins. Once each year the entire nation observed a fast on the Day of Atonement and made animal sacrifices to obtain forgiveness for their sins.

The Day of Atonement is the only Fast Day in the Mosaic Law. Leviticus 23:27 required the people to "humble" or "afflict" themselves before the Lord. Humble meant to fast and mourn over the displeasure they caused God by breaking his laws. Anyone who refused to fast on the Day of Atonement would be cut off. Leviticus 23:29 says "If there is any person who will not humble himself on this same day, he shall be cut off from his people."

On that day, the people fasted, for it was on that day that the High Priest entered the Holy of Holies where the Ark of the Covenant was concealed.

Atonement was necessary before the people could receive blessings. Sacrifices were required God before they could expect his continued presence. So the people fasted and prayed as they waited for the priest to go before God on their behalf and present their petitions for redemption on Yom Kippur.

Five days after the fast, the people celebrated the fact that God had heard and received their sacrifices. This celebration was called the feast of the Tabernacles. It lasted for seven days. According to Holman, on the first day, booths were constructed of fresh branches of trees. Each participant had to collect twigs of myrtle, willow, and palm in the area of Jerusalem for construction of the booths. Every Israelite was to live for seven days in these during the festival, in commemoration of when their fathers lived in such booths after their Exodus from Egypt.

After the fast and the feast they returned to their various walks of life, confident that God heard them and received their offerings and sacrifices.

Fasting Focuses on Humility

The spirit of fasting focuses on the need for personal humility. It is essential to getting a prayer answered.

Often we ask God for things but we are unwilling to humble ourselves to receive what he gives. Pride often stands in the way and blocks the door of success for far too many people.

There are many who are unemployed, but rather than take a job below the level to which they are accustomed, many choose to remain unemployed.

There are many who find themselves in tight spots, and avoid seeking help from members of their own families out of pride. There are some who have encountered financial crises and choose to face a loss of dignity in the community and commit suicide out of stubborn pride. The Christian way, however, is a humble way. It is a way of life that places the will of God before our own desires, and places obedience to God first in our lives.

Fasting Brings Us Down To Earth

It is possible for us to become self absorbed, to the point that we believe that the world owes us something. When we humble ourselves before God we realize that he is all powerful and that without him we are nothing.

When we reach that point we hear the Psalmist ask the question, "What is man, that thou art mindful of him?"

We are helpless masses of tissue that cannot be sustained itself without God.

Man has 263 bones, 600 muscles, and 970 miles of blood vessels. He has 400 cups on his tongue for taste, 20,000 minuscule hairs in his ears to tune into sound, 40 pounds of jaw pressure, 10 million nerves and branches. He has 600,000,000 air cells that breathe in his lungs. His heart beats 4,200 times an hour and pumps 12 tons of blood everyday. Without God, none of it works! It's just as mass of tissue.

When we consider our helplessness, we are humbled. We are brought down to earth and recognize that we need God to survive.

Celebrate After the fast

Finally, brothers and Sisters, after we have fasted and humbled ourselves before God we should follow Israel's example and celebrate!

The Feast of the Tabernacles was seven days long and it included praises to God and good food. They celebrated because of their fast, atonement and because of their sacrifice.

Fasting is an exhausting experience, whether it is one day, three days or 40 days. After 40 days in the wilderness Jesus was tempted by the devil to turn stones into bread.

What keeps believers going is the hope of the feast after the fast. It's the day when prayers have been heard and God has answered. That's a day of celebration!

On the last day of our fast, some of us may feel like the author of the poem that said,"

'Twas the feast after the fast, and I just couldn't sleep.

I tried counting backwards, I tried counting the sheep
The leftovers beckoned — The dark meat and white,
But I fought the temptation with all of my might.
Tossing and turning with anticipation
The thought of a snack became infatuation.
So I raced to the kitchen, Flung open the door,
And gazed at the fridge full of goodies galore.
I gobbled up turkey and buttered potatoes,
Pickles and carrots, beans and tomatoes.
I felt myself swelling so plump and so round,
Till all of a sudden, I rose off the ground !!
I crashed through the ceiling. Floating into the sky....
But I managed to yell through a mouthful of cake
My fast is over, it's time to celebrate!
When the fast is over, its' time to celebrate!

We celebrate because our atonement was not made on an Old Testament altar of stone and wood!

We celebrate because our sacrifice was not an oxen or a bull, but our atonement was made by the Lamb of God.

We celebrate because when we have fasted and prayed, Shiloh, the Son of God comes!

We celebrate because good things start to happen when Shiloh comes. When Shiloh comes...

-People who were at the WORST start doing their best!
-People who were living in SIN start striving for HOLINESS!
-Hearts filled with sadness suddenly become filled with gladness!
-Those who walked in the dark, discover the marvelous light!
-Those who agonize over defeat, discover the thrill of victory!
-Those whose lives were out of tune, discover a new found harmony!
-Those who have fallen down, learn how to get back up again!
-Those who were crying, learn how to wipe their tears away!

Who is this man they call "Shiloh?"

Who is this man they call the Prince of Peace, Wonderful Counselor! Lord of Lord and King of Kings!

His name is Jesus, my rock in a weary land!
His name is Jesus, my shelter in a time of storm!

His name is Jesus, who died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Celebrate his greatness!
Celebrate his sacrifice!
Celebrate the King of Kings!

Hold on Church, Help Is On the Way

A By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 2006

SCRIPTURE: Samuel then took a stone and placed it between Mizpah and Jeshanah and named it Ebenezer (meaning, "the Stone of Help"), for he said, "The Lord has certainly helped us!" 1 Samuel 7:12

Introduction

What does the church of today have in common with its founder and its forerunners in the faith? Its founder is Jesus Christ. All believers share a common faith in him. Its forerunners struggled and fought many difficulties, doubts, frustrations and fears to promote the kingdom of heaven. Believers today share similar struggles, fears and frustrations despite the passing of years. Each community of God fearing men and women must hold on to its faith and vigorously promote the kingdom of God with all of its energy. We must hold on just as our fore parents held on. If we feel weak along the way we must remember that "help is on the way."

The world asks a penetrating question about this little community; the same question asked in the biblical record, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" We answer that this community has brought forth generations of God fearing men and women who have made a difference.

This is the community from whose womb many great minds have come forth and as we celebrate the history of this church, in a greater sense we also celebrate the heritage of our community as well.

Conditions are much different than they were many years ago when this congregation was founded.

Then, there were no air conditioners, electric lights or even musical instruments. There were only paper fans, candles, coal oil lanterns and the patting of our feet.

Then, there were no beautiful pews, choir robes and water fountains. There were only hard benches, cotton sack dresses and dippers full of water from the well.

Then, there was no central heating and air and fellowship halls; only the old wood burning stoves, and ash pans and picnic baskets on the grass.

Then, there were no restrooms for men and women with free running water; only the out house out back and a Sears and Roebuck Catalog.

Then, Sunday school was a real school where even the old folks learned the bible and how to read and write.

Despite what they didn't have, the old warriors, fresh from slavery, believed that even in this community God could bring forth a great people.

That's why this anniversary is important today, because it marks a milestone in our journey in which God helped us to reach out of our poverty and despair and grasp a star of hope.

So, we have assembled ourselves here to give tribute to what has been, what is, and what will be by the Grace of God.

As Christians, we recognize that the trail of life that marks our journey is speckled with markers, large and small. We stand today to testify of the strength of our fore parents and to affirm our own faith that we will not give up the struggle but hold on until the end. It's been long journey has been difficult but rewarding. rough. Today, we say to all those who may be tempted to give up, that God did not bring you this far just to leave you. Hold on, your help is on the way.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Samuel as he raises a stone that recognizes God for his past, present and future work in the life of Israel.

The Ark of the Covenant had been out of Israel's hands for 20 years. Over the course of the 20 years, they labored in hope and in prayer, that God would bless them with its return. Assembled in the wilderness the people prayed to God for forgiveness of sin. In an elaborate ceremony, they poured out water on the ground to symbolically demonstrate their humility before God. They made a public confession of their sin, condemning themselves and praising God for his goodness.

As they met in the wilderness, committed to living for God, the Philistines saw them and prepared to attack them with a vengeance. However, God confused the Philistines in their attack amidst a great thunderstorm. Despite the Philistine's overwhelming numbers, Israel, for the first time in a long time defeated its enemy and arose victorious.

In an act of Praise, the prophet Samuel erected a great stone to commemorate God's great work in their lives. He called the stone "Ebenezer" which means "the stone of the help."

Erecting stones, altars and monuments was not unusual to Israel.

In naming this site, Samuel says "hitherto" the Lord hath helped us.

The word Hitherto in Hebrew is "Ad" which suggests a continuum in time. It is different from the "has" helped us which suggests that the time of God's help has passed. It is different from "did" help us because it suggests that the help is over. Hitherto, being a continuum reaches back to what God has done, brings it to what God is presently doing and carries it further to what God will do in the future.

The Ebenezer stone therefore was different from all other stones. It marked what God did on a certain day in time, what he continues to do and what is expected in the future.

We look at how they held on

The church today celebrates history today. In effect, we stand by our own Ebenezer Stone as we look back and remember the struggle.

The old warriors obviously did not have what we have today, but what they had then was a tremendous faith in God. It was a faith that carried them through many trials.

The history of this church is inextricably intertwined with the struggle of the people of this community to sustain hope as they struggled to be truly free.

Our history is inevitably a roll call of the saints who paved the way for the next generation to have a better opportunity while clinging to an unwavering faith that God will make a way. As that roll is called we hear the names called and revere them all as gallant warriors on the Christian battlefield in this hallowed county.

When we look back we sense the struggle of the founders as they began this congregation.

As we look back we can sense the great meaning of the second verse of James Weldon Johnson's "Lift Every Voice and Sing" when it says, "Stony the road we trod, Bitter the chastening rod, Felt in the days when hope unborn had died; Yet with a steady beat, Have not our weary feet Come to the place for which our fathers sighed? We have come over a way that with tears has been watered, We have come, treading our path through the blood of the slaughtered, Out from the gloomy past, Till now we stand at last Where the white gleam of our bright star is cast. "

When we stand on ground that has been watered with tears, we are standing on hallowed ground.

When we stand on ground watered with the blood of the slaughtered, we are standing on hallowed ground.

We are standing on the shoulders of hundreds of men and women who bowed in prayer that we would see a better day.

These were men and women who resolved that despite racism, the Ku Klux Klan, lynchings, cross burnings and hard times that they would hold on

In the midst of high water and droughts, scorching heat and chilling cold they resolved to hold on to God's unchanging hand; to build their hopes on things eternal and hold to God's unchanging hand.

We must hold on too!

The Ebenezer Stone is not just about the past but it looks at what God is doing now. While we celebrate the struggles of the past generation we also focus on our present struggles. That's the beauty of the Ebenezer stone. It does not simply say God was good for Daniel and the Three Hebrew Boys, but it also says that God is still able to deliver.

The Ebenezer stone does not simply say that God was good for grandma! It does not simply say God was good for grandpa! It does not simply say that God was good back then, but it also says that is still good right now!

Hitherto reaches over into the past and brings God into the present.

Our forefathers faced many challenges and held on.

In a similar manner we too face our challenges and, like them, we must hold on.

The church must inspire every young believer in this community to believe that he or she can achieve greatness with the help of God.

We have the same challenge as our ancestors, we must disprove the notion that because we are from Antebellum South that "no good thing can come out of Nazareth."

We must help every believer struggling against the odds to survive and thrive to hang on to their faith because God is still on the throne; help is on the way.

We must fight against illiteracy, poverty, broken families moral decay just as our fore parents did the same.

We must hold on to our faith, just like the old warriors and sing, "I am on the battlefield for my Lord. And I promised him that I would serve him till I die; I'm on the battlefield for my Lord."

Hold on to the Corner Stone

Finally, brothers and sisters, we celebrate how the old warriors held on to the Ebenezer Stone, but today we celebrate because we are holding on to Jesus the chief corner stone.

We are on a journey toward the Canaan Land. Each believer in the chief is a beam, brick or floor board in the heavenly kingdom.

God is building a heavenly kingdom, in which each saint is a living stone and a living sacrifice. The kingdom of God, though built with living stones, must have a cornerstone.

The cornerstone is the foundation upon which the kingdom is built.

The corner piece of the kingdom of God is the same stone that the builders rejected!

The corner stone of our hope is not made of bricks or mortar.

The corner stone of our trust cannot be affixed to the edge of a building!

The corner stone of our faith is the substance of our hope!

I don't know what the tomorrow will bring, but I know what God has done in the past. I know what God is doing right now! I'm going to hold on until my change comes

"I do not know how long it will be or what the future holds for me, but this I know, if Jesus leads me, I will get home someday!

We should hold on because there is a reward for believers who overcome!

Rev. 2:7 says, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life..." so hold on!

Rev. 2:11 says, "..he that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." So hold on!

Hold on because he that overcometh will inherit all things.

We should hold on because as long as the Lord is on our side there will never be a:

—CROSS that we won't be able to bear; MOUNTAIN that we won't be able to climb!

—ENEMY that we won't be able to defeat; BATTLE we won't be able to win!

—DARKNESS so dark that we won't be able to see the light!

—TRIAL that we can't make it through; TEST that we won't be able to pass!

The Lord is the justification for my faith!

The Lord is the chief corner stone of my hope!

Jesus, somebody here today knows him!

Jesus, the Lily of the valley!

Jesus, the Bright and Morning star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and rose up early Sunday morning!

No wonder the songwriter declared, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand...

All other Ground!

All other Ground is sinking sand!

A Good Thing Is On the Way

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: "Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel and to the house of Judah." Jeremiah 33:14

Introduction

Have you ever wondered how anything good can come out of your present situation? There are times when it appears that circumstances and condi tions are hopeless. A child seems hopelessly lost. A marriage seems hopelessly beyond repair. A friendship seems hopelessly scarred. A relationship seems hopelessly flawed. When that feeling comes, it leaves us frustrated. We feel beyond help. Yet, the promises of God still loom over us and linger near. "In the days ahead, I will perform that good thing."

We are surrounded by promises. Sometimes we hear so many promises that we become immune to them. Politicians promise to change things, but we usually get the same thing. Spouses promise to love each other until death do them part but it usually means until they get tired of each other. Salesmen promise us that the product they are hawking is an amazing bargain, but often it turns out just the opposite. We even promise ourselves that we are going to do better, but usually end up making better promises.

We hear so many promises that it gets hard for some to believe any promises; even the innocent sounding promises. "I promise you, tomorrow will be a better day." "I promise you, everything is going to be alright." "I promise you that if you do good in school in eat your vegetables you will be pretty and strong, strong, loved and liked."

Unfortunately, there are many who live by the promises of their family and friends only to discover that reality is not able to keep up with their promises. The world is notorious for breaking its promises. They all seem too good to be true.

What about the promises of God? Can we count on them? The great D.L. Moody said, "God never made a promise that was too good to be true." If God said it, you can believe it. If God promised it, it will come to pass.

It gets hard to remember that when things are not going well, but it is still true. God will keep every promise that he has made to you and your family. The coming of Christ reminds of his words, ""In the days ahead, I will perform that good thing."

During advent our attention focuses on the coming of Christ into the world. That also reminds us of the new life and renewed blessings that are associated with his coming. His coming was the fulfillment of God's promise to mankind. His coming is also a reminder of God's promise to every believer. When we think of that it gives us hope, regardless of our situation. Why? Because God's word promises that "In the days ahead, I will perform that good thing."

As Christians, we are encouraged by the knowledge that God never makes a promise that he cannot or will not keep. When he promised the world a Savior, he delivered. He has promised some good things to us as well; he will deliver.

Exposition

This text focuses on a promise of God given at a time when it seemed like everything was lost.

The words of this text were given at a time when the city of Jerusalem was surrounded by the Babylonians who decided to lay siege against the city and starve its residents into surrender. The people saw nothing good in their situation. For many it was hopeless (32:1). The words of this prophecy came as an assurance from God that through his power that he would destroy Babylon, and restore Judah after their exile. However, God warned them that for now there would be no immediate relief for their situation. (30:12-15).

However, in the future, God would restore Judah to health, rebuild her cities, and fill the nation with joy (30:17-22). In His loving-kindness God would restore His covenant with them; it would be an everlasting new covenant written on their hearts (31:1-3,31-37).

Even though the prophecy did not promise any immediate relief, it gave the people hope because God promised a good thing to them in the interim. The fact that they would be restored also meant that they would not be destroyed. That was a good thing. They would survive and rebound.

Jeremiah believed God's promises that the nation would return to the Promised Land. Since God created the earth and controls everyone on it, it is possible to believe that God could cleanse the sins of Judah, restore people and joy to the land, set the messianic branch from the line of David on the throne, and reestablish worship in the temple (33:1-22).

The Good thing that God promised Judah was that there would be a deliverer. There would be savior born among them.

The coming savior would be a good thing. He would be a good thing for the nation and he would be a good thing for every believer. He would bring restoration and a new kingdom.

As God promised, Judah was taken captive. They did experience a hard time in exile while in Babylon, but they were also returned to their homeland, just as God promised.

Under the Persians they were finally allowed to return to their homeland. The remnant restored to the land became the channel through which the promised Messiah came, born in David's natal city Bethlehem. They became the bridge through which the promised Messiah would come.

As Israel waited, they heard the words of God declaring, "In the days ahead, I will perform that good thing."

Five Promises of God

What has God promised believers? There are many promises God has made to believers, some were specific to an individual. Others were specific to an entire generation. The promises are varied but follow these five patterns:

I WILL NEVER LEAVE THEE: God has promised believers that he will never leave us alone. Hebrews 13:5 reminds us not to be overly disturbed about what we don't seem to have because not a day passes in which God leaves us alone. "I will never leave thee or forsake thee."

I AM THY SHIELD: Often believers are weary about directions that we face in life. We are like Abraham who was sometimes hesitant to act because of the large mass of enemies around him. God says to us what he said to Abraham in Genesis 15:1, "I am thy shield and thy great reward."

I WILL STRENGTHEN AND HELP THEE: When we are weak or caught in a weakness, we are overwhelmed by our own inabilities. That's when God speaks to us like he spoke to Isaiah and reminded him that what strength he needed God would supply. God spoke directly to Isaiah but he spoke to us too in Isaiah 41:10 when he said, "Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness."

I WILL GIVE YOU REST: A great promise of God is to find rest and relief from our many burdens and problems. Jesus told those who followed him that one of the rewards of living the believer's life is the ability to find peace and rest. God promises to give us that rest. Christ reaffirmed it in Matthew 11:28, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest"

NO GOOD THING WILL HE WITHOLD: Believers have the reassurance that any good thing that true believers desire will not be withheld from them. Good things are those things which are according to God's will. If what we want is in God's will it is a good thing and it will never be withheld. That's a promise that is reaffirmed in Psalm 84:11 which says, "No good thing will He withhold from them that work uprightly"

Responding to the Promises God

The promises of God are real and sure. However, there are many in the world who are skeptical of God's promises because they have seen the promises of so many others fall by the wayside.

That is not the case with God. Anything that God promises he can deliver.

There are many who cannot bring themselves to trust God because men have failed them. Their employers have failed them. Their co-workers have failed them.

These are the individuals who find themselves doubting God.

Like Sarah, they find it amusing when God makes a promise that seems impossible in light of the circumstances.

Like Pharaoh, they believe that faith in God's promises are the folly of the ignorant and whatever signs we see are cheap magician's tricks.

Like King Saul, they believe that should follow their own mind because God's will should only be trusted when his will mirrors our will.

The coming of the Christ child should say to those who may doubt God, that he is truly able to do exactly as he says.

The skeptics doubt God and dismiss this celebration as an opportune time to celebrate anything they desire. However, the believer does not see it that way.

Believers are anxiously excited about this time of the year because it reminds us of one of the greatest evidences of God's power, the incarnation of his Son in Bethlehem.

In Bethlehem we see God's promise to Israel realized.

In our own lives we revisit over and over again how God's promise effects our own lives. When we think of the baby and the cradle in Bethlehem, we are reminded that "In a few days, I will perform that good thing."

It won't be long

Finally, this text reminds us that it won't be long before God acts on his promise to us.

The text says, "Behold the day is coming" which is an announcement of truth that God is not slack, the good thing is coming.

In a similar manner each of us should say to ourselves, the good thing that God has promised us has not been forgotten but it is on the way.

Behold the day is coming, when there shall be peace on earth.

Behold the day is coming, when the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest.

Behold the day is coming, when we will lay down our sword and shield and study war no more.

There may be some who might believe that God has forgotten his promise as it relates to their situation, but God is not slack. Whatever he promises he will bring to pass.

How long will it take that good thing to reach you?

How long will it take the blessing that you seek to finally arrive?

How long will it take the good thing that you are waiting for to finally happen?

How long will it take for you to finally turn the corner and things begin to look up?

When we consider that answer we must look at Bethlehem.

There had been no message from God for 400 years, then suddenly a star appeared bringing them hope.

Long before they saw the light from the star, the light was on its way? How long did the light take to reach earth?

The answer might amaze you. Our solar system is about 6 billion miles across. Our galaxy, the Milky Way, contains roughly 400 billion stars, the nearest of which (Alpha Centauri) is 26 trillion miles away, or 4.5 light-years.

At the rate of 186,324 miles a second, light travels about 5.8 trillion miles in a year.

When God decided to cause the North star to shine brightly, it took 400 years for that light to reach earth from the North Star.

The star the wise men saw, began shining at the close of the old Testament and took 400 years to get to the earth. Long before they saw it, God had already begun to make good on his promise.

Are you frustrated because it appears that your good thing never seems to come, be assured that the words of this text are still true, in a short while God will perform the good thing he has promised.

Can God do what he says? The record bears testimony that God is able!

He's able to take our:

—Fears and turn them into faith; SADNESS and turn it into gladness!

—WEAKNESS and turn it into strength; RESERVATIONS and turn them into confirmations!

—FAILURES and turn them into successes; LOSSES and turn them into gains!

Down in Bethlehem, God performed a good thing!

A baby was born in a manager!

That baby changed the world!

Down in Galilee, God performed a good thing. The sick were healed and the blind were given their sight.

Down in Jerusalem, God performed a good thing, the price for our salvation was paid on an old rugged cross!

Jesus, Mary's baby!

Jesus, the Lion of Judah!

Jesus, was born in a manger and died on an old rugged cross!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!

Don't worry about it anymore!

Your good thing is on the way!

How Far is Bethlehem?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 17, 2006

SCRIPTURE: And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judaea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David:) To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child. And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn. Luke 2:4-7

Introduction

Is it possible that there can be a great distance between you and something that is actually really close? There are some distances we expect even though they are disheartening to think about. The drive to California through Texas is long, but it doesn't seem long when we divide it into 200 mile jumps. It is totally discouraging, however, to reach Amarillo and see a sign that says "Los Angeles 1,073" miles. Then suddenly, California is a long distance. Air travel has reduced travel time from days to a matter of hours anywhere in the world. Distances in actual miles remain the same but the time it takes to get there has been reduced tremendously.

It's a long distance from one side of the world to another.

It's a long distance from one side of the country to another.

It's a long distance from one end of the state to another.

But there are even closer destinations that are farther away.

Iran, Afghanistan and Iraq are located next to each other on the map. They share the same religion and economic interests but they are millions of miles apart.

Democrats and Republicans share seats in the United States Congress but they won't sit on the same side of the aisle. On many issues there are millions of miles apart.

One side of the city is only a few minutes drive from the other, but it may as well be thousands of miles away; the two sides of town rarely meet in mutual exchanges.

Even within our families there are members who are only a phone call away but it may as well be a million miles away because the phone rarely rings.

There are spouses who live in the same house but live a million miles apart.

Often we can be so close-but so far away.

If you have ever traveled the highway and glanced the mountains in the horizon; you have probably noticed that after you have driven a hundred miles or so, the mountains still seem far away. In frustration, we look at the fuel, expense and time we have expended and it appears that we have come no closer because the mountains are still far away. We know we have traveled some distance it doesn't appear any closer.

We have traveled many miles in our own lives this year. Some feel that they are no closer to the mountain than they were when they began the year.

We feel we are no closer to the mountain if we only focus on how far we have to go and how long it will take to get where we are going.

However, we feel closer to the mountain if we focus on the distance already traveled, what we have accomplished so far, and what we will do when we get there.

Mary and Joseph traveled from Nazareth to Bethlehem by foot. It was short by airline standards of today, but it was a great distance for a pregnant teenager and her fiancée' who had to travel over rough trails, ridges and down valleys. For those riding chariots or wagons the distance was shorter. For Mary and Joseph it was a great distance.

How far is your Bethlehem? How far is the destination, goal or aspiration you have set for youself? If you are moving toward slowly toward that mountain, no matter how far away it seems; it's getting closer every day.

As Christians, we are on our way to the Promised Land. Sometimes in our frustration, we think we are not moving as we should, until we look back to see from whence we have come. That's when we realize that the Lord is brought us a mighty long way and we resolve to march on until we claim the prize.

Exposition

This text focuses on the details of Jesus' arrival among mankind.

It was a long and tedious journey, but yet it was necessary.

For Jesus the journey was from heaven to earth. The book of Matthew details a lengthy genealogy that tells us the extent of the biological journey that proceeded through generations as he tracked the journey of Christ from heaven to this world. It is history that reveals a myriad of peoples, nationalities and races. It is a path that his reached into palaces and touched even the poorest of places. It included kings such as David and dark colored women like Ruth. It included saintly women like Mary and the not so saintly women like Rahab.

When the Book of Luke opens Christ's journey to this world after proceeding for hundreds of years was about to culminate. It begins with a familiar scene of an angel announcing to Mary and to Joseph that "The Holy Spirit has placed a child in you, and not just any child, He is the Son of God, the Messiah."

For Mary and Joseph, the journey was shorter but just as far. When Mary and Joseph accepted their surrogate status, Mary instantly became a surrogate mother. Joseph assumed the awesome task of serving as stepfather to the Son of God. As Mary and Joseph traveled to Bethlehem to be taxed, the time came for the child to be born. His arrival was not without notice. Shepherds in the field were told by angels of the event. Others soon heard too. When the child was born he was wrapped in swaddling clothes and laid in a manger because there was no room for him in the inn.

The journey Jesus made that is recorded in Luke details his arrival in the home of Mary and Joseph but his journey did not stop there. The rest of the New Testament details the additional stops he made enroute to the heart of every believer. In some cases that journey was farther away than any other.

Journey to Bethlehem differs for Many

In miles, Bethlehem was not far from Nazareth, but in terms of the mindset of those involved, the distance varied. When we look at the mindset of the major characters related to journey of Mary and Joseph to Bethlehem, we may find ourselves embedded within some of them. Their distance from Bethlehem might also be our distance from really knowing and responding to God.

FOR MARY AND JOSEPH IT WAS A JOURNEY INTO FAITH: Every Jewish man resented paying taxes to Rome. His journey had to be a journey of resentment mixed with patriotic shame? It was an act of faith because it meant he would take his pregnant fiancée through the public roads and suffer the humiliation and stares of those who would see an unmarried couple walking to Bethlehem. For Mary, the journey to Bethlehem meant the prospect of delivering her child on the roadside. Her ancestors delivered children in the desert, but the journey to Bethlehem meant she would need the same strength. Both Mary and Joseph knew God. They acted on faith not their fears. Today, there are many among us who know God as well. The distance between the fulfillment of our destines and this present moment may very well be the degree of our faith above our fear. How far is Bethlehem? It is as close as our faith in God.

FOR HEROD IT WAS NO JOURNEY: King Herod sat in his palace, five miles away from Bethlehem, but it could have been 5,000 miles. He saw the Christ child as a threat to his power. He was only five miles away, but he would not go to worship him, in fact he sent soldiers to try to kill all male babies. He was only five miles away, but he was so far away from God. For Herod the distance to Bethlehem unfathomable; it was too great to even be considered. Yet, even today, there are many who for reasons of their own, will not come to God. There is a church in every neighborhood, but they will not walk in the door. There is preacher on nearly every television channel, but they flip right past them. For these the acceptance of God and humbling themselves before him requires a nearness that they escapes them. Perhaps that's why the song writer declares, "draw me nearer, nearer, blessed Lord to the precious bleeding side." How far is Bethlehem? For those who still refuse to praise God or to acknowledge their need for him, the distance is great; not because God is faraway from them, but because they refuse to come close to him.

FOR THE SHEPHERDS IT WAS A JOYOUS JOURNEY: There were shepherds close by who watched their sheep by night? They were only a few minutes from the shelter where they found the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger. For them, the journey from the pasture to the manger was a short joyous jog. They heard the song of the angelic hosts and they were happy.. Without doubts and anxieties they left their flock and walked full of songs and praises of joy singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace to men of good will." The same is true today of those who are close to God. We sing his joy and his praise constantly. We know that it was God who woke us up this morning and it will be God who will put us to sleep tonight. We know that he provides for us and protects us, so we gladly sing his praises for all the world to hear. How far is Bethlehem? For the true believer the journey to worship on Sunday is no distance or trouble at all. It's a happy time that brings us closer to God. How far is Bethlehem? For the true believer it's not close enough?

FOR THE WISE MEN IT WAS A LONG JOURNEY: When the wise men finally arrived, they brought gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh. They traveled a great distance to be in the presence of God and brought him the best that they had. It was a long journey that took them many months, but they took the journey because they wanted to see the Son of God. Today, there are many who come into the presence of God after having made a long journey themselves. There are some of us who have been through difficulties, death, fear, suffering, incarceration, financial loss, family problems, marital dysfunction and many other ills in the course of our lives. We come before God bringing him tithes of our time, talent and resources much as the wise men brought their three gifts. We offer ourselves to his service because we are thankful for the journey. We've come a long ways to be in God's presence and we thank him everyday for his mercy and his grace? When God has brought you through; how far is Bethlehem? It's not far at all when we think of his goodness and his grace.

How Far Are We From God?

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should consider that the distance between ourselves and God can only shortened only by the blood of Christ.

As we celebrate the advent of Christ there are many today who are still a great distance from him; just as we are great distances from those family members we do not speak to, those enemies we cannot stand, and those haters who frustrate us.

The gap between ourselves and God is too great for us to forge alone. That's why Christ came to the earth to build a bridge for us to reconcile and come together again with God. His love is the same bridge that shortens the distance in estranged relationships. Without him it cannot happen.

Each believer should ask the question, "For me, how far is Bethlehem?" What is my spiritual state? Am close but still far away?

Those who find themselves at a distance from God should resolve to come close and let the love of God flow in their hearts.

The distance from us to God is a close as the cross of Christ, he is the mediator between God and man.

When God saw the condition of the world he sent out the divine call for a messenger and Christ answered, "Here am I send me."

It was a long distance from heaven to earth, which took light years to travel.

However, it was an even longer distance from Bethlehem to the hearts of mankind.

For the non-believer today, Bethlehem is a long distance.

However, those who know the Lord know that our God is never distant; he's only a prayer a way.

How far is Bethlehem? How close is God?

He's close enough to:

-Comfort us in our sorrow; Assure us in our difficulties!

-Strengthen us in our weakness; encourage us in our trials!

-Direct us in our decisions; Help us in our duties!

-Anoint us in our ministries; defend us in our battles!

On his way to my life, he stopped down in Nazereth and stopped by a mange in Bethlehem.

What began in a wooden manger as a sign of God's love on a wooden cross as a sign of man's hate!

What began in Bethlehem:

— made the long journey to our heart in the form of a merciful God

—made the long journey to our souls in the form of a forgiving God

—made the long journey to our faith in the form of a hope giving God

God so loved the World that he gave his only begotten son that he gave his only begotten son!

It was a long way to Bethlehem, but he traveled through 42 generations.

He was born in a manger, on his way to a place called Golgotha!

On his way, he stopped by a place called Calvary and spent three nights in a grave!

On his way to my life, he died on an old rugged cross, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

How far is it to Bethlehem?

He's only a prayer away.

What do I do with all this Stuff?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 31, 2006

SCRIPTURE:"And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? 18 And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. 19 And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." Luke 12:17-19.

Introduction

Ask children what they received for Christmas and a few might answer, "I got a bike, a computer, a game and a lot of stuff." Some have looked at all of the boxes, paper, and other wrappings and scratched their heads as they asked, "What do I do with all of this "stuff?"

Stuff; it's everywhere. You have stuff in the kitchen. There are pots and pans in our kitchens that haven't been used in years, but we keep them. Cups, mugs, jars, plates and other dishes have accumulated too. There are seasonings in our cabinets that are so old that they can't give taste anymore.

Our closets are filled with stuff too. Some hanger rods are bending from all of the stuff we hang on them. If we put one more box on the top shelf everything would fall. We have stuff on the hangers, stuff on the floors, and stuff in the corners.

We have stuff stacked in the hallways.

We have stuff in boxes and hanging out of boxes.

Our carports are filled with stuff. Our attics are filled with stuff. Our storage houses are filled with stuff. Even the trunks of our cars are filled with stuff.

Now that Christmas is over we now have more stuff –to stuff somewhere among our other stuff.

Stuff has a way of generating more stuff. Harvard economist Juliet Schor theorizes that stuff has what she calls the "Diderot Effect." The idea is that one new stuff item has a tendency to generate more stuff. Someone gives us a new piece of china, so that requires a new goblet, glassware and even a new cabinet. A new pair of shoes generates a new dress to match and perhaps a scarf, hat and other accessories as well. Stuff begets more stuff.

Neuro scientists at UCLA have produced a study that suggests that we get a good feeling from accumulating the most stuff. It is somehow related to serotonin, a chemical that is produced in the brain. It seems that the university studied 19 tribes of monkeys over a period of time and concluded that the most dominant monkeys in every single tribe had 50% more serotonin in their systems.

The connection made is that when we get stuff, serotonin is released. Somehow we feel the more stuff we have the more successful we are. This serotonin release thing contributes to the feeling that we win in life if we have a big house with rooms that we never use, two cars, a boat, clothes we rarely wear, toys with visit occasionally, and tons of gadgets, utensils, artifacts, collectibles and more money than we can spend. We could stack it all in our front yards and take a picture and declare "We won!"- Why? Because we collected the most stuff. In the terminology of the UCLA study, we are the dominant monkeys on our blocks.

Conversely, there is something in us that concludes that we are less successful if we get rid of some of our stuff. No serotonin is released when we throw away stuff or give it away. So we accumulate stuff and find that it's hard to get rid of it.

As we prepare to enter the new year, we now have to decide how we are going to deal with all the stuff that we handled this year. Not so much the gifts received from Christmas, but the stuff that we accumulated this year.

Consider the young woman who had found herself a new apartment and was preparing to move. Her girl friend had come to help her but found her sitting in the middle of packing boxes crying. When asked to explain her tears she said, she never realized how much "stuff" she had accumulated. "I'm not going to be able to take all of this to my new apartment" she moaned. "What am I going to do with all this stuff?" There were what-nots and souvenirs, gifts, mementos, gadgets and plethora of others. She was a complete mess. "What am I going to do with all this stuff?" Her friend, who had faced the same dilemma once said: "Take only what you need to get where you're going!" With that, the young lady painfully decided to leave behind many things which tied her to the past and took only those things she needed to claim her future.

As the new year begins, we are faced with a similar challenge, "What am I going to do with all this stuff?"

As Christians, we have learned that there are many things in life that we think are important but they are really not. What matters is the stuff related to God and family. All of the other things just get in the way. So in the new year we will carry on the stuff that will bring us closer to what's really important. The rest we will leave behind.

Exposition

This text focuses on a parable Jesus told to illustrate the futility of accumulating material goods without laying up treasures in heaven.

The parable presented a man who had accumulated a tremendous amount of material goods. In the agricultural setting of scripture, a man who had great harvests stored them in his barn for the difficult times. A full barn meant that he had what he needed to make it through the tough times of the winter months ahead. However, this man had accumulated much more than he needed. Rather than share it with others, he posed to tear down his barn and build a bigger more spacious barn so that he could keep all of the "stuff" he had accumulated. In so doing he proposed that he would be able to eat, drink and be merry for many years.

The man in the parable associated his ultimate happiness with "stuff." He did not consider the source of the stuff, but only that the more he accumulated the happier he thought he would be. The source of his stuff was the blessing of God on his labor. Verse 16 says he "brought forth plentifully." That means God gave him increase more than he needed. Rather than focus on the source he focused on the stuff. He focused on the harvest and thought his joy would come from what was reaped and stored.

This was the same mistake that some Israelites made when God rained down manna from heaven for them during their wilderness journey. Many saw the manna on the ground and attempted to accumulate it even though they knew they were forbidden from doing so. Those who tried to get more manna than they really needed found that it was infested with worms the next day. Yet, many insisted on gathering more of that manna stuff.

Verse 19 makes it clear that he believed that the man in the parable believed his security, pleasure and happiness rested in his goods. He looked at all of his stuff and said, "And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry."

The parable gave a warning that should not be misinterpreted. The parable warned that those who focus on the stuff rather than the source will find that they will pay a high cost for all of their stuff: their souls. However, those who value God foremost are in connection with the source of the stuff and will always have access to more.

The parable should not be interpreted to mean that there is something wrong with having a big barn, being successful or being blessed in material ways. The parable does warn that each should remember that there is a concern more important than stuff. That concern involves God and family.

What do we really profit if we accumulate a lot of stuff but endanger our relationship with God and our relationships with those we love in the process?

Too much stuff can get in the way of real happiness. That comes from the blessings of God and the love of family.

Effect of Lots of Stuff

What is the accumulated effect of having lots of stuff? Stuff affects us in many ways because while we have a great deal of material stuff we also have lots of emotional stuff too. When we consider stuff we should remember that:

TOO MUCH STUFF GETS IN THE WAY: During the previous year have you found yourself dealing with so much stuff that you really could not focus on important things in your life. Before you could finish dealing with one issue there was another and another. There was so much stuff that you had to deal with that it prevented that quality time you wanted with your family or that service you wanted to give to the church. All of the stuff that you dealt with last year didn't make you any happier; mostly it posed stumbling blocks for you. Hebrews 12:1 suggests that we should turn aside from stuff that blocks our way. It says, "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." In the new year, we must not let stuff get in the way.

DON'T LET OTHERS DUMP THEIR STUFF ON YOU: There are many who received problems that others dumped on them during the year. What kind of stuff gets dumped on you? These are the things that others should do but don't want to do so they looked for someone to dump it on. There are many who have been frustrated this year because we have been handling stuff that was dumped on us by someone else. In addition to your own issues, many have had to spend much of this year dealing with unsolicited issues dumped on them by others. If you let them people will dump their stuff on you, and leave you to deal with it. This does not suggest that we should be insensitive to the needs of others, but it does suggest that you select what you want to receive rather than being dumped on. But if we are to see the new year with a clear mind, it gets easier without dealing with the "stuff" dumped on us by others.

GET RID OF STUFF YOU DON'T NEED: Often we accumulate stuff that we thought we wanted or needed at the time. Often we visit bargain sales and garage sales and come home with our arms filled with stuff that that we think we want. In a few hours, the novelty wears off and that stuff takes its place along side all of the other stuff that we purchased in the past thinking we either wanted it or needed it. Do we really need so much stuff? Probably not, but we thought we wanted it. Life is the same way. Why do we have so many shoes, suits, dresses, hats, sweaters; some we haven't worn for years? We thought we needed them at one time. Somehow life teased us that things would improve if we only purchased a little more stuff. As we consider the new year we might want to lay aside some of the stuff we thought we wanted but didn't. We can leave it behind in the new year, especially if it does not take us where we want to go.

SOME STUFF IS GOOD STUFF: Before you throw out all of your stuff, remember that some stuff you have is good stuff. Granted that there is much stuff we don't need, there is also plenty of good stuff we need to keep. Be careful not to dump good stuff along with the other junk. Take an inventory of what you have. What can you live happily without? We have some stuff that bothers us sometimes but when we think about it, its good stuff. If you have a wife who loves you, is faithful and caring; that's good stuff, think twice before you throw her away. If you have a husband who loves you and provides for you and meets you needs, despite his flaws, he's good stuff. Are you in a relationship that has some trouble but overall it is growing in trust, faith and happiness? That's good stuff? Are you on a successful career track but are irritated by a few things that happen on the job, think about it; the job you have may be good stuff. Any stuff that you have that will help you get to where you want to go, is good stuff.

Remember, if you throw away good stuff, someone else will pick up it up before you get a chance to turn around because "one man's trash is another man's treasure."

Get the Right Stuff

Finally, brothers and sisters we must remember that there is nothing wrong with having stuff, but we must make sure we have the "right stuff."

Jesus said the man in the parable had a lot of stuff, but he didn't have the right stuff.

He had a barn filled with the fruits of his labor, but he didn't have the right stuff.

He had plenty resources at his disposal and successes under his belt, but he didn't have the right stuff.

The right stuff is those things essential to building our relationship with God.

As we prepare to go into the new year, we must strive to carry only the stuff we will need to get where we are going.

We need to leave fear behind, because it causes us to miss opportunities that God has in store for us. Fear is the wrong stuff.

We need to leave worry behind, because it causes us to doubt God's ability to make a way out of no way.

What we need for the new year is the love of and the grace of God…that's the right stuff.

The grace of God gives us:

—Peace when the storms are raging!

—Hope when all around me are in despair!

—Courage to fight our battles!

—Determination to fulfill our duties!

—Believe when others doubt!

—Go Forth, when others hold back!

—Work, when others sleep!

—Love, when others hate!

What we need to do in the new year is to trust in the Lord. When we trust and obey, he'll make a way for us!

Trust in him who will not leave you!

I don't know about you but I'm going to trust the man who had the right stuff.

Nobody else could do it: Not Moses or Elijah; not Peter, John or Paul!

His name is Jesus, he had the right stuff!

He came and he died on an old rugged cross!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the dead because he had..the right stuff!

Return to Everlasting Joy

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 2007

SCRIPTURE: "And the ransomed of the LORD shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Isaiah 35:10

Introduction

Have you ever wondered why a Christian funeral is often called a "home going celebration?" What could there be to celebrate at a memorial service? What reason would anyone have for celebration at the time of death?

The answer is simple. In the Christian mindset, those who are absent from the body are present with the Lord. That is the goal of every Christian, to live a godly life on earth and to return to the presence of God when this life has ended. At a home going service, we celebrate the "return" home of a saint and renew our faith that soon we shall do the same.

The reasons for rejoicing in the face of death are obvious to believers.

We rejoice because, despite the difficulty of living in uncertain times, God has blessed a loved one to live a long fruitful life. For many women a fruitful life means to pursue a godly dream, live a Christian life and to bear at least one child. A woman who does more has achieved the ultimate success. That's a reason to rejoice.

To survive wars and difficult times with faith in tact is a reason to rejoice.

To live faithfully through seven decades in which others are falling, doubting and trembling, is a reason to rejoice.

Today, we celebrate two important truths. We celebrate a life lived in our presence and we celebrate a life that has returned to the presence of God to live forever.

The life that has been lived with us has brought us help, strength and great inspiration.

The spirit that we memorialize has returned to God is has been rejoined with the creator for all eternity.

That is a reason for celebration!

As Christians, we are those for whom Christ died to pay the ransom for our salvation. We live for him in this life's journey. But when this life ends, the ransomed will return to God. When the ransomed return, that will be a great day of celebration.

Exposition

This text shows the prophet Isaiah telling the dispirited that those who have been ransomed by God shall return to his joy.

In the first nine verses of Isaiah 35 the prophet paints a picture of a hopeless people, living in a dry land with despair everywhere. Into the seemingly hopeless situation the word of God brings a message of joy and hope. The deserts will be transformed and be filled with pools and streams. The desert and wilderness will be given the glory of Lebanon and the splendor of Carmel and Sharon.

In the middle of what appeared to be a sad situation, Isaiah brought a word of joy and hope to Israel. Isaiah saw an earth full of joy because it had been restored to perfection.

He saw the land of hope and glory.

He saw the paradise of every believer's hopes and dreams.

He saw a reason to celebrate.

Verse10 pictured the joy of the ransomed as they returned to enjoy the promise of God.

For Israel the ransomed would return to Zion. They would worship God fully and freely as God opens doors of escape for them from Babylon.

For Israel the return of the ransom would be a time of singing, rejoicing, praising and living in the city of God.

For Israel the return of the ransomed would be a time of celebration.

For the church the return of the ransomed has a similar meaning.

When believers in Christ return to God there is great celebration in heaven. There is rejoicing and singing. There is a spirit of reunion.

The greatest joy is yet to come. When all of the Saints of the New Testament and the believers of the old dispensation come together at the throne of Grace that will be a time.

When the ransomed of the Lord return, it will be a great time.

The Ransomed Live Full of Joy

Those who know Christ as Lord and savior live their lives in joy. They are able to maintain a sense of happiness despite their difficulties because they know God's promise.

Our sister was one of the ransomed. The fact that she maintained her faith despite advancing age and all of the difficulties of rearing her children remains a mystery to those who do not know the Lord. They ask, How could she be joyful facing so many of life's frustrations as well as those of a mother and grandmother?

How can we be joyful when we have wrestled with sickness, failure, frustration and moments of fatigue and loneliness?

How can we be joyful when our lives are filled with ups and downs, but with more downs than ups? We are healthy one day, sick another day, healthy again then sick three days.

How can we be joyful?

How can we be joyful when we have attended the funerals of family members and friends and watched the world around us diminish a little at a time.

How can we muster the strength to be joyful under such debilitating circumstances? We can only be joyful in every circumstance if we have truly learned the meaning of joy. Real joy comes from our reliance upon God for each day and the knowledge that he is always there.

The Ransomed Live above Circumstance

The ransomed of Isaiah 35 lived above the adverse circumstances of their day because they were sustained by the hope of their return.

In the Old Testament, joy was closely associated with circumstances. Joy was a mental sensation that was accompanied by an outward expression that was shown by singing, shouting, leaping and dancing. That's what happened when David returned the Ark of the Covenant to his people that he was so joyful that he stripped off his clothes and leaped and danced in the streets. In the Old Testament, joy was associated with a circumstance. If the people won a battle they were joyful. If they lost a battle there was no joy. If there was a festival they danced and sang. Without the occasion, there was no joy. Their joy was tied to a circumstance.

However, in the New Testament joy is not viewed the same way. Joy is not associated with any circumstance or situation.

Believers derive their joy from the knowledge that there is a great plan unfolding which ultimately ends with their good.

Therefore, believers "count it all joy." Believers find reason for joy in every circumstance because we know when the great plan completes itself we will be the victors. The secret to real joy is to have the assurance that no matter what the circumstance may be, that God is working it out for our good in this life or the life to come.

The Secret of their Joy

The secret of this joy is to quietly know that he will never abandon us, but will continue to provide for us on a daily basis, despite appearances. In such circumstances don't look for us to jump and leap like David did. There may even be a tear in our eyes as we respond to the frustration and pain of the moment, but on the inside there is joy! That's why, as strange as it may seem, a believer can be advanced in age to a point that she is not what she once was and still sing, "I've Joy, Joy, Joy Down in My heart."

Believers who watch a loved one advance in age and slip away in death before their very eyes can still say, "It is well with my soul" because they know it is a part of the divine order and as such.."all is well."

Those who want to know how to be joyful must know the Lord. Only an abiding faith in God can help a wounded family find a reason for joy in the midst of death. Only a blessed assurance can help a weeping daughter find a reason to keep singing the praises of God.

Those who want to know how to be joyful, must begin their search by first finding the Lord.

The Ransomed Will Return With Great Joy

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that when this life is over the ransomed will be ushered into the presence of the Lord.

The prophet Elijah sensed that his time was drawing near. He began to walk toward the destination in which he would move from this life into the next. When the time came, he moved instantly from this life into the next, aboard a mighty fiery chariot. He was on his way home.

Enoch walked with God all of his life, sharing intimate thoughts and dreams. One day at the close of his life, his family looked for him and he was gone. The bible says he "was not" because he walked with God. He had returned home.

The Apostle Paul said in 2 Timothy 4:6-7, ". I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

I am ready to return home!

I have lived the Christian Life for seven decades. I am ready to return home.

I have confessed my belief in Jesus Christ as my personal Lord and Savior. I am ready to return home.

I have worshipped and praised you when I was young and in my golden years. I am ready to return home.

I have testified to your goodness and everywhere I have glorified your name. I am ready to return home!

When the ransomed return home there will be a lot of shouting in heaven.

Even though we are crying right now, there are many saints in this family that are shouting on the inside.

I don't know about you, but there ought to be a lot of shouting going on in this family.

Every time you think about the mountains this sister has climbed and the valleys in her way you ought to feel a shout coming on!

Why? Because God has been good to this entire family.

He's been a lawyer in your courtroom! We ought to feel a shout coming on!

He's been a doctor in your sick room! We ought to feel a shout coming on!

He's been a bridge over troubling waters! We ought to feel a shout coming on!

We ought to shout because he picked up an old rugged cross and shouldered the burden of my sin to ransom our souls!

We ought to shout because out on Calvary, he died, that we might live!

They buried him in a borrowed tomb..

But, early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

I think I feel a shouting coming on!

When the ransom return home there’s going to be a lot of sing!
When the ransomed return home there’s going to be a lot of shouting!
When the ransomed return home there there’s going to be a lot of joy!
Joy!
Joy!
Joy… When the ransomed return home!

Go Forth In His Presence

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 7, 2007

SCRIPTURE: And he said unto him, If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence. Exodus 33:15; "Nevertheless, in their presumption they went up toward the high hill country, though neither Moses nor the ark of the Lord's covenant moved from the camp." - Numbers 14:44

Introduction

What have you planned for the new year? Have you talked to God about it? There are many people who make plans to do a variety of things but seldom take time to talk to God about their plans. The success or failure of any venture depends greatly upon the grace of God. We can make business plans, arrangements for our careers, and even plan a variety of extracurricular activities but none of them can come to fruition without the grace of God.

There are many people who mistakenly assume that what they want and what God wants is the same thing. They assume that God sits in heaven and tells each believer "thy will be done." They also assume that the good life they have been leading entitles them to the victories, successes, and blessings that they desire. Because they assumed themselves to be worthy they move forward in life with certain presumptions based on their assumptions. Unfortunately, many soon find out that it is not a wise thing to move forward in the future with the presumption that God will bless our endeavor. Every believer should strive to hear from God in the year to come. It is only by hearing from God that we can be sure that we are moving in the right direction.

There are many people who assumed much about life and we operate on assumptions. Consider the church that mourned the loss of its finest members and everyone was completely lost about what to do. The member's name was "Someone Else." The church deacon was asked to give the eulogy for Someone Else. He said, "Someone Else's passing created a vacancy that will be difficult to fill. Someone Else has been with us for many years, and for every one of those years, Someone Else did far more than the normal person's share of the work. Whenever leadership was mentioned, this wonderful person was looked to for inspiration as well as results. Someone Else can work with that group. Someone else was very popular in the church. Whenever there was a job to do, a class to teach, or a meeting to attend, one name was on everyone's lips, "Let Someone Else do it." It was common knowledge that Someone Else was among the largest givers in the church. Whenever there was a financial need, Everyone Else just assumed that Someone Else would make up the difference. Someone Else was a wonderful person, sometimes appearing super-human, but a person can only do so much. Were the truth known, everyone expected too much of Someone Else. Now Someone Else is gone. We wonder what we are going to do. Someone Else left a wonderful example to follow, but who is going to follow it? Who is going to do the things Someone Else did?" In the obituary the church felt relieved when they saw Someone Else had a child. They shouted for joy when they learned that the child's name was "Anybody Else." They hoped anybody would grow to be the member that someone else was?

Sometimes we assume too much and make great mistakes because we operate on our assumptions.

As Christians, we know that we can be successful. However, we will presume that he will bless us. We will diligently seek his and ask favor, knowing that if his presence Goes with us we will be victorious in the year ahead.

Exposition

This text focuses on the importance of God's presence in any direction we take.

In Exodus 33:15 Moses asks God for his presence and pledged not to move until his presence went with them. Each time it was time for them to move God came in the form of a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night. When the cloud moved they moved, not before or after.

Numbers 14 gives us a striking contrast to Exodus 33. Here, the people were camped at Kadesh Barnea, near the border entrance to the long-awaited Promised Land. There were 12 spies sent to investigate the new land but Joshua and Caleb were the only ones who announced faith in God to take them into the land and conquer their enemies. The other spies saw all the dangers and refused to take the risk. The people of the camp shrank in fear because of their report. They decided not to enter in.

The ten spies who caused the people to doubt and murmur dropped dead instantly (Num. 14:37). God was angry about their murmuring. Moses interceded and asked God to forgive them. Thinking they had been forgiven the people quickly decided, on their own, that they would now go up and claim the promised land. But they thought their repentance was enough to right their wrong. They presumed this was all that was necessary.

Moses informed them they were wrong to assume that they had God's favor but they ignored him and went to battle against the Amalekites anyway. They were defeated and did not understand why God promised them the land but allowed them to lose it on their first attempt to take it.

They did not wait for God's presence as Moses did in Exodus 33. They jumped in without his favor and blessings and could not claim what he had for them because they did not move at God's direction.

Because of their presumption God made them wait 40 years before they claimed the promise.

Moving Into the New Year

There are several considerations we should bear in mind as we move into the new year.

If we doubt God's promise someone else may claim it. The 12 spies reported that the land was fruitful. Yet, 10 of them doubted the ability of the people to claim it. They took into consideration their lack of military experience, armaments of war and battlefield knowledge. They were people who had lived as slaves for 400 years unaccustomed to the strategies and disciplines necessary. They had shear numbers, but nothing else. They doubted and caused others to lose faith. As a result, they died and others claimed what should have been theirs. If believers today approach the promise of God with a spirit of fear and skepticism, we too might suffer the same fate. There are doors of opportunity that are being opened for many this year. Some will doubt their own abilities to and fail to act. When they fail others will step in and take their places. What is it that you doubt? A career move? A relationship shift? A business decision? If we move into the new year and we fail to act out of a spirit of fear it is most certain that someone else will take advantage of the door we would not open. Why not decide to step out on faith this year and claim the promise that God has for you?

We should not move without the presence of the Lord. Moses in the wilderness was a type of the Christian traveler. He told God definitely that he would not move without his presence. "If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence," v. 15. He speaks as one that dreaded the thought of going forward without God's presence, knowing that their marches could not be safe, nor their encampments easy, if God was not with him. We are the same. Believers know that we dare not venture into the new year without the presence of the Lord. We need him. Despite our mistakes and errors, blunders and mess ups in the past we need him as we venture into the unknown. Our prayer is simple, "If God is not going with me, I'm not going." What is your venture? Marriage, business, education, career development, family improvement? The answer should be "If God is not going with me, I'm not going in that direction."

Despite the promise, wait for God. What happened to Israel should be a lesson for believers today: "Even though God has promised it, don't act on the promise until God says it is time to move." That's what believers must glean from this text. The land of Canaan had been promised but many of the tribesmen wanted to attack before God gave the order. In fact God told them to retreat to the Red Sea, wait because certain defeat awaited them. They however they presumed that God wanted them to have the Promised Land so it was their destiny to be successful. Because of their presumption, they did not wait on God's command and were bitterly defeated in their quest. They went forward but failed because they presumed that God would automatically be with them in their quest. It is possible that God wants us to approach a problem but in a way totally different from what we have in mind. What God had in mind was miraculous. It included a river rolling back to reveal dry land. It included the sun standing still. It included mighty walls falling down. He wanted them to wait.

They wouldn't and paid a price.

A young man accepted for the African missionary field reported at New York for passage, but found on further examination that his wife could not stand the climate. He was heartbroken, but he prayerfully returned to his home and determined to make all the money he could, to be used in spreading the Kingdom of God over the world. His father, a dentist, had started to make, on the side, an unfermented wine for the communion service. The young man took the business over and developed it until it assumed vast proportions. His name was Welch, whose family still manufactures Welch's grape juice to this day. He has given literally hundreds of thousands of dollars to the work of missions every year. He has done much more for mission work through his grape juice donations than would have been accomplished by his own plan.

At first he assumed that God wanted him to personally go on a missionary journey. When he acted on his presumption he failed only to see why. God had a bigger and more effective plan in mind. The same is true for believers today. Don't assume that every opportunity that falls in your hand is something God wants you to use in a pursuit you have selected. Pray and seek what God wants you to do with it.

When God Gets Ready

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that while we can't move until God gets ready, when God gets ready, we've got to move.

While Israel acted foolishly when they first approached the Promised Land, over the course of the next 40 years, they learned to trust in the Lord and move at his command.

Every time the pillar of cloud lifted in the day time, they were ready to move!

Every time the pillar of fire lifted in the night time, they were ready to move!

At God's command they packed their tents and moved at a moment's notice!

Moving forth into a new year, is like obeying spiritual traffic signals.

There are times in our forward progress we come to a stop light.

Moses brought Israel to the Red Sea but God said stand still "and see the salvation of the Lord." Lest anyone get the notion that it was the power of Moses, stand still.

Lest anybody be confused as to the source of your miraculous activity, stand still and watch God work!

Then there are times we approach a caution light, flashing warning us to proceed with care. As Israel journeyed through the wilderness God said, I'll provide meat and bread for your table, but proceed with caution. Don't get more than you need.

In the new year, God promises to provide for our needs, but we need to proceed with caution. Don't move to slow, but don't move too fast. God will make a way.

When God gets ready he'll give us the green light.

When God got ready Israel moved into the promised land and walls started to fall down!

When God gave the command flood waters rolled up and they crossed on dry land.

When God gave the command the earth ceased its natural orbit and the sun stood still.

When God gave the command the victory shout was declared.

I don't know about you, but I've decided to move at God's command!

I won't worry about the clouds!

I won't worry about the storms!

I'll just keep my bags packed, because when God gets ready, I've got to move!

I do not know how long it will be nor what the future holds for me, but this I know, if Jesus

The Lily of the Valley,

If Jesus, the bright and morning star!

If Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

If Jesus, who arose after three days and nights!

If Jesus leads me, I shall get home some day!

This Jordan

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 13, 2007

SCRIPTURE: Then ye shall let your children know, saying, Israel came over this Jordan on dry land. Joshua 4:22

Introduction

If you had to select a body of water to represent your life what would it be?There are many who would choose an ocean because their lives are expansive and huge in their scope.

Some would say their lives were lakes. They were beautiful but counted on others to keep them filled.

Still others would describe their lives as quiet streams that formed from gathering the fallen drops of blessings while flowing quietly through life, purifying itself along the way.

There are many whose lives have been bayous and ponds, relaxing, fulfilling and peaceful.

There might even be a few swamps in the picture. These are the lives that turned out to be wasted, unproductive and desolate.

If our lives were like the Sea of Galilee they were be subject to sudden storms. If they were like the Nile, they would overflow every now and then.

Many believers have lives that are typified by the Jordan River.

The Jordan River is significant in the biblical context.

It empties into Lake Huleh, but before the Jordan empties itself it takes several paths. It begins with a seven mile journey that makes its way through areas of marsh consisting of reeds, bulrushes, and papyrus. In this area there were many dangerous lions in biblical times.

On leaving Lake Huleh, the Jordan flows for about ten miles to the Sea of Galilee. In this short stretch, it descends to 696 feet below sea level and carves a deep and winding course for itself through the center of the valley. Much of its course is characterized by rocky gorges and valleys.

From the Sea of Galilee to the Dead Sea. After leaving the Sea of Galilee the river passes through an especially fertile region. The length of this stretch is between 55 and 65 miles, but the river curves and twists for during this distance.

This Jordan marks a 73 mile journey of ups and down, twists and turns, gorges and valleys through many dangerous marshes reeds.

If this Jordan marked the trail of a life, it would parallel the various nuances of that life including its ambitious beginnings, meandering turns, sudden drops and steady march to the sea of the dead. Yet there is a mystery about the waters of the Jordan that also parallels the life of all believers. It's a mystery whose trail empties into the sea of the dead but continues beyond. Only the faithful know the secret of the Jordan's waters once poured into the Dead Sea. Only the faithful can answer the plethora of questions that have puzzled the curious for centuries about these mysterious waters we call Jordan.

As Christians, we know that our lives take many paths. We sometimes rise and sometimes fall. Like a river we flow, twist and turn. We encouraged to know that when we come to the end of life's twists and turns, we shall empty ourselves into the arms of God.

Exposition

This text considers Israel as it crosses the River Jordan and enters the Promised Land. The crossing of Jordan was the first new miracle that was performed under the leadership of Joshua. It required the waters of the mighty Jordan River to roll back and hold still for a day as nearly 600,000 people crossed over on dry land.

The Jordan posed a formidable obstacle to Israel. Its banks had overflowed and made crossing impossible. Yet, Joshua prepared to cross on the command of God.

He commanded representatives of the 12 tribes to take 12 stones out of the river and place them in a heap in the river and to carry 12 other stones with them from the river bed to the other side. Once on the other side the stones were set up on the bank as a permanent tribute to God for his wonderful works.

When children, in future years, come to the site and see the huge stones standing in a pile in the midst of Jordan and another, just like them, on the right bank of Jordan, they will ask the meaning of the stones. Their questions will give the elders an opportunity to tell them of the great things God did for Israel when he helped them cross Jordan.

The stones symbolized the presence of God in the past and the need for God's presence on the other side of Jordan as well.

Those who looked into the waters of the Jordan would see the stones and know that God was with them.

Considering This Jordan

As we consider this Jordan, the life before us, we can only see the wonderful way that God has touched this life.

THERE WAS HEALING AT THIS JORDAN: The bible gives an account of the Prophet Elijah ordering Naaman to bathe himself seven times in the River Jordan to be healed (2 Kings 5). Though Naaman reluctantly obeyed, he still found that there was healing in this Jordan. So it has been with the life before us. In the course of these many years, this life has been dipped many times in the healing waters of God's graces. Even as we stand on the banks of "This Jordan" and see the stones that mark how God moved, we should remember that there is no sickness that is outside of the power of God. God has defied the known science of the day and continues to do it today. At this Jordan we look at how God has blessed a life with healing and restoration repeatedly over the years, it should remind us that God has reversed dark situations before and he can do it again!

THERE WERE MIRACLES AT THIS JORDAN: The Jordan River was the site of many miracles. When its waters rolled back for Joshua that was a miracle. When Elijah and Elisha smote its waters with a mantel and it also rolled up like a scroll, that was a miracle too. When we stand today and peer into this life, those who are close can recall many miraculous events over the years. These are the things that happened that should not have been or things that should have happened because of recklessness that were miraculously prevented. When we peer into "This Jordan" and see the stones, they remind us of these miracles. Our moment of reflection makes it obvious that what we have achieved has been done only because God has provided us with his miraculous intervention every day. In his own miraculous way he opened doors of opportunity and miraculously made a way for us out of no way.

THERE WAS WORSHIP AT THIS JORDAN: The first part of Jesus' ministry was centered around the Sea of Galilee but the remainder of his ministry found him pursing a course down the East Side of the Jordan River. At the Jordan River, thousands came to worship him. At the River, thousands came to be spiritually fed and to learn from him. As we peer at the stones in "This Jordan" we also see the reflection of a life that enjoyed worship and was regularly in the presence of God. This should be the epitaph of every believer; to live a life of praise, worship and peace within. In the presence of the Lord we find hope, renewed faith and peace. As we look into "This Jordan" we see the stones that show a life that enjoyed the presence of the Lord.

THERE WAS SALVATION AT THIS JORDAN: John the Baptist performed most of his baptisms in the River Jordan. Here those who repented for their sins found forgiveness and the grace of God. Even Christ himself was baptized in this Jordan. When we see the stones that mark the course of "This Jordan" we should see a soul that was given to God in humility and subjection. We should be happy about this Jordan because it was at the point of conviction that he wiped our slates clean. Isaiah 53 reminds us that he was "..wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities……with his stripes we are healed." When we consider this Jordan we are happy because it was that he picked us up and turned us around and give us a brand new life.

Where do the Waters Go?

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider the answer to the question first posed. When the waters of the Jordan reach the Dead Sea, is that all? Where do the waters of the Jordan go?

There a strange phenomenon about the waters of the Dead Sea that also typifies the life of a believer. The Jordan River empties an average of six million tons of water every twenty-four hours into the sea. There are no outlets from the Dead Sea. No rivers or streams flow from it. With so much water pouring in daily from the Jordan, why doesn't the Dead Sea fill up? Where do the waters of the Jordan go?

There is only one place for these waters to go. They must go up! The intense heat of the Dead Sea and the acidity of the waters cause them to evaporate and they return to the clouds.

What a picture of a life that has flowed through mountains, valleys, and gorges for 73 years to reach what some would call the sea of death.

Yet, every believer is encouraged to know that while there is no way out the hands of death for the lost; those who believe and trust in Christ shall be caught up, in a twinkling of an eye to meet him in the air.

Don't look for the waters of this Jordan in the Dead Sea, they are not there!

They have been caught up. It happened in an instance! They were returned to the presence of God.

Don't look for believers among the sea of the dead. We must remember the question of the angel to the troubled on the resurrection morning, "Why seek ye the living among the dead?"

What happens to the waters of Jordan when they have emptied themselves into the Dead Sea?

What happens to waters that have flowed through valleys, and gorges and alleys and nursing homes?

What happens to waters that have emptied themselves into the cold chilly hands of death?

They are caught up!

When a believer comes to the end of this life she stands and sighs in the words of the old hymn:

"On Jordan's stormy banks I stand And cast a wishful eye
To Canaan's fair and happy land
Where my possessions lie
All o'er those wide extended plains
Shines one eternal day
There God, the Son forever reigns
And scatters night away.
I am bound, I am bound, I am bound for the Promise Land"

We are caught up into the arms of the savior!

Caught up into the arms of Jesus!

Who died for us out on Calvary and early Sunday morning arose from grave!

Caught up to be the Lord!

9241-Reunion

Together Again

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 2007

SCRIPTURE:And Jonathan said to David, Go in peace, forasmuch as we have sworn both of us in the name of the LORD, saying, The LORD be between me and thee, and between my seed and thy seed for ever. And he arose and departed: and Jonathan went into the city. 1 Samuel 20:42

Introduction

Have you ever attended a reunion? Those are times when those who have been apart for many years reunite to remember the past, celebrate their present and to anticipate their future. Reunions are joyous occasions because, for a moment, those who have walked different paths in life all walk the same road. Whether it is a high school reunion, family reunion, or the reunion of distant friends or groups, these gatherings have special significance to all involved.

Even more significant is the reunion of friends separated by years but conjoined in the spirit.

Today, circumstance has brought these friends together again.

Together again they reaffirm their faith in God.

Together again they renew their commitment to promoting the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

Together again they stand before God pledging to continue their mutual love and respect today and in the years to come.

As Christians, we celebrate our uniqueness and individuality. However, we also celebrate how together God has blessed us to do his great work in a mighty and more powerful way.

Exposition

This text focuses on a pledge of trust that existed between the descendants of two families across the generations.

David and Jonathan were close friends, despite the fact that Jonathan's father, King Saul, made it unlawful for anyone to befriend David and had pledged to kill him as a threat to the throne.

Despite the circumstance these two men responded to each other as friends. Jonathan promised David that he would find out whether it was safe for him to return to the King's palace and would notify David by a secret plan they developed. The two promised each other that regardless of their situations that the succeeding generations of each family would find friendship because of their pledge together.

David escaped capture that night. The pledge made between the two men lasted for generations. The men and their families were bound by a pledge of trust that would last for many years.

When the bond was made it was expected that David might be the ultimate victim of Saul's hatred. Jonathan was prepared to keep his pledge to David's descendants. However, The end of 1 Samuel reports the end of Saul and three of his sons, Jonathan, Abinadab, and Melchishua, at Mount Gilboa (1 Sam. 31:1-13). Their bodies were first hung on the wall of Beth-shan and later retrieved to Jabesh. Many years later, when David became King he showed mercy to the descendants of Jonathan throughout his reign. He kept his promise to descendants of those who had befriended him.

The Way We Were

Whenever there is a reunion, there are reflections. The first reflection is upon the way we were. Barbara Streisand had a hit song a generation ago entitled, "The way we were." In it she said we have "Misty, water colored memories of the way we were." She added that what is too painful to remember, we just choose to forget.

AT FIRST THEY WERE NOT EQUALS: When Jonathan and David first met they were not equals. One was the son of privilege; the other was a mere musician; a servant. In our first encounters we are often mere prototypes of what is to come. We remember the silliness of youth, brash and foolish stunts, and the clarity and intensity of our dreams and idealism. In our first encounter one might be the quarterback and the other the water boy. One might be the homecoming queen another one who never made the court. One might have been the favorite and the other the constant reject. Circumstances beyond anyone's control resulted in our first encounters which were sometimes strained and awkward. Our best memories are of the acts of kindness shown despite our differences. Our worst memories reflect the ill feeling some harbored because of our differences.

THEY TREATED EACH OTHER WITH RESPECT: Despite the differences of their stations David and Jonathan treated each other with respect. Friends and the strongest adversaries are mutually bound forever whenever there is a respect between them. A man can be slave and hold his head high with dignity. A man can, by law, be a master but is not obligated to be a brute as well. Aretha Franklin sang about it in the 1960's in her song, R.E.S.P.E.C.T. Everyone wants respect. Two tough teams fight for a championship but only one wins. They both leave the game with a respect that lasts for a lifetime. When we reflect upon the way we were, we do so often with an eye of respect for what was then. It is a respect that has lasted a lifetime.

THEY REUNITED WITH JOY: When David and Jonathan met briefly in the wood (1 Samuel 23:16-18) their reunion was filled with joy. They exchanged friendly embraces and spoke of old times. They were happy to see each other. Whenever old friends meet a sense of joy fills the air. There is laughter and rejoicing because those who reunite share a common victory over time, adverse circumstances and struggle.

It is joy that cannot be duplicated and emulated. It ensues from the heart.

THEY PLEDGED TO SHOW KINDNESS: When David and Jonathan met they pledged that they would be faithful and kind to each other from generation to generation. That is a byproduct of great reunions. Many opportunities are gained for the descendants of friends, for the "sake" of an old friendship. Many youth have found doors opened to them because of someone who knew their grandparents well. Some have been the recipients of special benevolence because of pledge made many years before. Reunion is also a time to renew pledges of support, love and trust through the next generations out of respect for "the good times." Over the years love and mutual respect has existed, despite the adverse circumstances around them. Today, we should pledge to let brotherly love continue throughout all of our generations.

Where we are going?

Finally, brothers and sisters, while reunions such as these reflect on the way we were, we would be remiss if we did not peek into the future and take a glance at where we are going.

Over the years these have been separated but we look forward to day when we will be together. We look to the day when we will be together again at the feet of Jesus.

When we are finally together again there will be neither white nor black, Jew or Greek, slave or lower class!

When all of God's children get together again we're going to have a good time!

When we are together again, we'll sing and shout as "My soul looks back and wonders how I got over!"

When we are together again, we'll tell the story of how we struggled together, cried together and overcame together!

We will tell the story of the savior, who gave his life for our sins!

We will tell the story of how he died out on Calvary!

We will tell the story of how Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

When we are together again, at the foot of our savior, that's going to be a powerful meeting day.

I don't know about you, but I want to be at that great camping with the Lord!

I want to be at the meeting.

I want to be there when they declare him king of kings!

I want to be there when they crown him Lord of Lords!

I don't know about you, but I want to be at the meeting!

I want to be there when the saint's go marching in!

When we are together again, what a Time!

Every day will be Sunday! What at Time!

It'll always be howdy and never goodbye! What a time!

Over yonder, the hearse wheels won't roll and crying days will be over! What a time!

Light Bread

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 21, 2007

SCRIPTURE: And the people spake against God, and against Moses, Wherefore have ye brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness? for there is no bread, neither is there any water; and our soul loatheth this light bread. Numbers 21:5 And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst. John 6:35.

Introduction

Have you ever eaten light bread? Those who are from the South are immediately familiar with the term "light bread." However, those from other areas of the world may scratch their heads and respond differently when we asked to describe "light bread."

Southerners use the term so frequently that we often forget that the rest of the world gets a totally different picture of the meaning of "light bread."

When we say, "light bread" we often refer to loaf bread that is made of wheat flour and leavened with yeast. Others may think of "light bread" as a synonym for "white bread." Some may even think that "light bread" refers to the color of the bread. Therefore, wheat bread and raisin bread is not considered "light bread" because it's too dark.

We Southerners refer to "light bread" as way of distinguishing it from cornbread, hot water bread, cornpone and biscuits.

There is a reason behind this madness. The term "light bread" actually refers to the fact it is made from yeast that "lightens" it and makes it rise. Light bread, in reality, can be either the whole wheat type (brown) or white, as long as it is made with yeast.

Many of us have fond memories about light bread. We make sandwiches with light bread. Kids like peanut butter and jelly sandwiches made with light bread. We put light bread in a small oven and make toast. We crumble light bread and make dressings and puddings.

While many people love light bread, there are times when we complained about so much "light bread." We wanted rolls. We wanted hot corn bread with butter oozing out of it. We wanted biscuits. We wanted sweet bread and every now then a few hoecakes. Even though it was filling, we complained if all we had was "light bread."

Is it possible that we approach our blessings from God in the same way? Is it possible that there are some who tire of the same old blessings and complain because we want some variety? Do we tire of the same old house; the same old car; the same bed; the same old food; the same old husband; the same old wife? We're doing reasonably well, but do we sometimes become dissatisfied with satisfaction?

As Christians, we rejoice in the fact that God provides us with our daily bread. Each day is a blessing. We never tire of his mercy. The more grace she showers upon us the more we are happy to receive. He is the light of the world and the bread of life. We can never get too much "light bread."

Exposition

This text focuses on Israel's complaints about "light bread" and God's response.

Numbers 21 gives an account of the wonderful way God blessed Israel as it approached the Promised Land and their response to him with grumbling and complaints.

As Israel approached Canaan they were attacked by the residents of Southern Canaan. God led them victoriously in the battles that ensued and they were victorious. It seemed that they were invincible. God was on their side.

They were anxious. They wanted to march into the Promised Land through the land of Edom but the king of Edom would not grant them permission. They became frustrated and began to complain.

Their complaints were retrospective. They complained about the fact that they had wandered in the wilderness for 40 years. They complained that they hadn't had any new clothes during that time. They complained about the fact that they were not able to secure food and water like others, but had to depend on miracles from God for 40 years.

They complained because they received "manna," the food of the angels, which they called "light bread." Charles Spurgeon says it was easy of digestion, healthful, and the very best kind of food for them in the wilderness; but they wanted something more substantial, something that had a coarser flavor about it, more of earth and less of heaven.

This term "light bread" is found only in this text. The Hebrew word for light as it is used here (qel?q?l) means contemptible, worthless, and vile. They complained about the bread they received from heaven and dismissed it as "light bread" and looked upon it with contempt.

They complained because God was personally taking care of them in miraculous ways.

The actions of Moses, the people, the light bread and the brazen serpent were types of Christ found in the New Testament.

In the New Testament people complained and grumbled against God. Paul referred to it in 1 Corinthians 10:5. Many people rejected Christ who was the bread of heaven. In John 6:35 Jesus refers to himself as the bread of life. He noted that those who receive him as the Son of God will see approach life in a new way that will cause them never to thirst or hunger for the things of this world. Yet, the people tired of this man who called himself the light of the World and the Bread of life.

In the wilderness they complained about light bread. When Christ came, he too was light bread from heaven. They complained and crucified him because they were tired of "light bread."

Bread of Life Issues

ISRAEL COMPLAINED RETROSPECTIVELY: There are many who complain even while they are being blessed. When Israel could not have its way and found the route through Edom blocked the people began to complain retrospectively. This angered God.

It angers God when we constantly bring up perceived problems of the past while dealing with the issues of the moment. Even in our relationships we have a tendency to drag up what was once done wrong, repeatedly. It is never forgotten but relived. We complain retrospectively, even though what we complain about may not be related to present situation. When Israel did this, God became angry, just as we do when people do the same.

Instead of complaining retrospectively, it would be better to recall the "good times" retrospectively. Think of the goodness of God, the blessings of God and the mercies of God in the past and it will minimize our complaints.

LIGHT BREAD WAS SUBSTANTIAL: Though Israel complained and rejected "light bread" it was substantial for them. Through 40 years in the wilderness, unable to plant crops or secure supplies of fruits and vegetables, they existed on light bread (manna) quail meat and water. Just as big mama found many ways to make bread in our past, they did the same. They baked it, fried it, rolled it, boiled it and prepared it a variety of ways. God provided both the taste and the nutrients necessary to feed their bodily systems. Light bread was more than enough. Not only was it substantial but it was available in abundance. It was not rationed.

In our wilderness we have found that God provides blessings for us too, on time every day; even though we complain about them. No matter how we look at it, we have been blessed by the powerful hand of God.

THEY WANTED MORE THAN LIGHT BREAD: Israel complained because they felt they deserved more than light bread. This was a sign of ingratitude. The ungrateful person feels worthy of all blessings and murmurs when he does not get more. Is that why we complain so much? Do we really deserve any blessings that we receive? The faithful have found that Christ is more than enough for us. In fact, if the truth is told, many of us would have to confess that we are having trouble dealing with the blessings we already have.

Thank God for the Light Bread

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should give God praise for every slice of light bread he puts on our table.

Jesus is the light of the world and bread of life. He is our light bread. When he comes into our lives he comes to put bread on the table.

Whenever God prepares a table, it is an overflowing table.

There are many that instantly place anything called lite into a category of things that have little substance or weight or importance.

When people in the world think of light bread they may be tempted to put our spiritual light bread into the same category with bread lite.

Bread lite, could mean bread that is low on calories. What we have is not bread light but light bread.

Some may confuse light bread with Budlite, Miller-lite, low calorie beers or lite music and lite entertainment which is not strong any direction.

When saints talk about light bread we are talking about the man who said in John 8:12, " I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in the darkness, but shall have the light of life.

When saints talk about light bread we are talking about the man who said John 6:35, "I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall not hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

We don't complain about our bad days, because our good days out number our bad days.

Whatever each day brings is another slice of God's light bread.

When we are blessed with finances, we that's a light bread blessing!

When we are blessed with healings, that's a light bread blessing!

When we blessed with spiritual renewal, that's a light bread blessing

As Saints eat from the Lord's table, they are eating from a As Saints prepare to eat from the Lord's table, we are mindful of the fact that on this table is God's light bread, Prepared in heaven and delivered in Bethlehem, which means the house of bread.

On this table is God's light bread which took many generations to prepare and 33 years to deliver.

To prepare the table, he had to suffer the humiliation of his critics!

To prepare the table, he had to pick up an old rugged cross and carry it to Golgotha's hill.

To prepare the table he had to die out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

I thank God for the light bread; and I won't complain!

No. 9242-Building Fund

Rise Up and Build

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 2007

SCRIPTURE: Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good work. Nehemiah 2:18

Introduction

Did you know what it takes to successfully complete a building project? It takes vision, cooperation, resources, patience and prayer. Many believers walk into fine buildings that have been erected by others and admire what they see without knowing the extent of the sacrifice and dedication of those who led the building effort. Building a building for God is more than a "notion." It is a labor of love and faith.

Those who succeed in such projects are empowered by a burning vision that drives them to see the project through, despite opposition and frustration.

Frustrations and opposition are expected. Very few building projects have been completed without one of the two or both. The reasons that people oppose projects range from promotion of their personal agendas to doubt about the builders or the building plan itself.

There were once two evil brothers who opposed the church's building project. They were rich but they used their money to fight the building project because they wanted the land for personal reasons.

They hired others to fight against the church's project while they sat piously in church worships. They even hired protestors to attend zoning meetings. They used their influence to cause confusion among church members. They were purely evil in their intent to stop the church's project.

Suddenly, one of the brothers died. Even in death, the remaining brother sought to control things. He went to the pastor and presented him with a check for the completion of the building project, in full. However, the gift had one condition. "I have only one condition," he said. "At the funeral, you must say my brother was a saint." The pastor thought about all that these two brothers did to fight the church, but reluctantly gave his word and deposited the check.

The next day, at the funeral, the pastor did not hold back. He shocked the congregation when he told them of all the evil ways that this brother had tried to stop the church's building project. "He was an evil man," he said. In addition, the pastor added, “He cheated on his wife and abused his family.” The surviving brother was visibly angry. He gave the pastor an eye that said he wanted his money back. The pastor ignored him and finally concluded by saying, “but despite all of his evil, deceptive and crooked ways, compared to his brother, he was a saint.”

Overcoming opposition, building unity and inspiring hope is the challenge of those who venture to lead any building project for God.

As Christians, we know that building for God is a challenge. However, if we trust God and follow his direction, we shall be successful and the glory will go to God.

Exposition

This text focuses on the challenged faced by Israel as the people rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem.

Almost 100 years after the Jews had returned from Babylonian exile to Jerusalem, the walls around the city and the gates had remained in ruins. The people were disillusioned, in debt and intimidated by the awesome commitment that rebuilding the walls would require. They had excused their failure to rebuild the walls on fierce opposition from surrounding nations and their poverty.

Nehemiah refused to accept their excuses and despite the danger inspected the walls at night (2:15). He then called an assembly and convinced the people of the need for a building program. He was an excellent leader who demonstrated engineering knowledge and brilliant organizing ability (ch. 3). He encouraged them while reminding them that they would have to watch, fight and pray.

Nehemiah presented the challenge and the people responded to the challenge with the common consensus “let us rise up.” It was a testament of faith for a people that had sat idle for so long. The work began.

Trouble arose from without and from within. Sanballat, in league with other leaders of the area, opposed Nehemiah’s rebuilding of Jerusalem. If the Holy City regained prominence, it would erode the powers of the surrounding cities. It was a political contest designed to keep Jerusalem from becoming the economic power and influence of its golden years.

Sanballat and his friends tried to stop the work, but without success (ch. 4). Trouble from within was economic. Building the walls suffered because of a labor shortage; farms were mortgaged. Many could not work on the walls or support the building program because they were plunged into their personal financial woes. Even this did not dissuade Nehemiah. He sat out to improve the financial condition of the people so they could turn their interest toward rebuilding the wall. Some received direct financial aide that helped them become strong enough to help.(ch. 5).

The people had a mind to work and the massive task of rebuilding the walls was continued. It was massive work requiring thousands of workers spread out over miles of landscape. Even as the people worked, enemies both within and without kept a steady stream of delaying tactics flowing.

As in the past, Sanballat had done all he could to stop their work through ridicule and threats. He then sent word to Nehemiah, saying: Come, let us meet together in one of the villages in the plain of Ono (Nehemiah 6:2), about 28 miles from Jerusalem. But Nehemiah sent messengers to them, saying, I am doing a great work, and cannot come down. Why should the work cease, while I leave it, and come down to you? (6:3).

After Sanballat had made five attempts to meet with Nehemiah, he finally resorted to accusing him of rebelling against the king of Persia (6:5-7). When this failed to stop Nehemiah, Sanballat hired a prophet to prophesy Nehemiah's death. Nehemiah did not yield to their threats for he had faith that the God of Heaven . . . will prosper us. . . . So the wall was finished . . . in fifty-two days, far sooner than even they themselves had imagined.

Meeting the Challenge

To meet the challenge of building, today's believers must study the pattern of the Nehemiah experience and follow it for direction.

LEADERS MUST BE CONVINCED: Leaders of Godly building projects must be convinced that God's work must be done and informed of the need for the work. At the same time that this is being done, leaders must be aware of the need for spiritual strength for God's work to succeed.

OPPOSITION SHOULD BE ANTICIPATED: No project has ever been completed without some form of opposition. Leaders should not be surprised that some individual or group of individuals oppose a worthy building project. Rather than being surprised, leaders should anticipate opposition and attempt to resolve points of opposition in through careful planning and involvement of others. Some opposition is not to the plan itself, but stems from the fact that some feel excluded from a worthy project.

ORGANIZATION AND COOPERATION NEEDED: To meet the challenge of a building enterprise that merits God's blessings, leaders must be prepared to work hard, organize well, solicit cooperation and be willing to give credit where credit is do. The project that succeeds does so because the leader is up to the challenge and his sense of commitment inspires others to help.

WEARY WORKERS MUST BE ENCOURAGED: Not only was Nehemiah a great organizer, but he was also a person with the ability to encourage those who were weary of the struggle. That happens in the course of any building project. People get tired. They want to give up. However, leaders who are convicted to complete God's work must be able to encourage and motivate believers to continue. They cannot be driven; they must be inspired to continue for the sake of the kingdom of God.

The Church must meet the challenge

Finally, brothers and sisters, the church must meet the challenge to build because we are building for the Lord.

To meet that challenge the church should make sure that we have the right tools.

We will certainly need many tools that include:

A MEASURING LINE: The distances in the master plan are drawn to scale. One inch on paper equals several feet in practical distance. Those who build in life must be able to practically apply the principles of the Bible and our faith to real life situations. These truths prevent the believer from going off course or making steps in life that are off course. The good builder measures his actions and knows just how far to go. Psalm 37:23 puts it this way: " The steps of a good man are ordered by the LORD: and he delighteth in his way."

A PLUMBLINE: For the building to stand solidly every part must be level. An instrument called a plumbline was used in the bible to allow the builder to know whether or not a board, a window, or wall for example lined up correctly. Similarly each believer needs to check himself against the standard of God's word to make sure his action lines up with the will of God. Like a building, it is possible to nail down a board that is out of line, but it will show up later. That's why the psalmist wrote: "Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts: And see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." Psalm 139:23

SAWS AND HAMMERS: We must have saws and hammers to cut through the apathy and discontent of those who oppose the work. We must have the hammer of God's word to drive home nails of wisdom, strength and power that will hold the project in place.

To meet the challenge, leaders must stay focused on the mission.

The church should not be dissuaded from its mission and should rise to meet the challenge.

All of the Patriarchs before us have done great works. They have risen to meet the challenge.

Noah's Great work was to build the ark. Though critics assailed him, he said in his heart, let us rise up and build!

Moses' Great work was to lead the children of Israel to freedom. Though many doubted him and wanted to return to Egypt, he met the challenge and said let us rise up and march to freedom!

David's great work was to secure the kingdom of Israel. He was tempted on every hand to hang up his sword and shield, he rallied the people by saying let us rise up and build a nation!

Solomon's Great work was to build the temple. Though discouraged at the complexity of the task and the complaints of the people, he encouraged the people to rise up and build a temple.

But there was another great challenge that we need to tell you about.

Come and go with me out to Calvary and see the challenge of the cross! It was the challenge of building the kingdom of God!

Hanging out on the cross, a great work was criticized and despised!

I hear the critics at the cross saying your great work seems to be:

A battle lost; A horrible defeat; A pathetic end to a glorious beginning

It didn't seem like much, sitting out on a hill, but the great challenge of redemption was underway!

The cross was a great challenge because it represented the greatest of all victories.

The cross was a great challenge because it was highest of all accomplishments!

The cross was a great challenge because it was the finest of all hours!

The cross was a great challenge because it was noblest of all events!

I heard somebody say to Jesus, “If you are who you say you are, why don’t you come down?”

He didn’t come down, but Early Sunday morning, he got up!

With all power in his hands!

Jesus’ Great challenge was to save my soul by going to Calvary.

I’m so glad that he me the challenge rebuilding my life all over again!

Touchdowns in the Wrong End Zone

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 4, 2007

SCRIPTURE: Say to the people of Judah: 'This is what the Lord says: When people fall down, don't they get up again? And when someone goes the wrong way, doesn't he turn back? Why, then, have the people of Jerusalem gone the wrong way and not turned back? They believe their own lies and refuse to turn around and come back. Jeremiah 8:4-5

Introduction

Are there times in life when you feel yourself working harder for the other guy than you are for yourself? These are the times when our mistakes, goof-ups and fumbles in life are so numerous that we did more to hurt our own cause than to help it. If we were members of a football team, the other team would cheer every time we ran onto the field because we are guaranteed to do something to help our opponents win.

There are also times when we analyze our own activity and realize that there are times when we are our own worst enemies. Many of our problems are the result of our own ineptitude. if we were football players, we would be the fumbling quarterback, the slippery fingered receiver or the tackle who does everything but tackle.

Even worse, we are often the guys on the team who get big chances to do great, recover fumbles, then run the ball to the wrong end zone, giving the opposing team a safety.

Adam Sandler played a dysfunctional water boy in the 1998 movie, "The Waterboy." In one episode he found himself running at super speed in the wrong direction. While audiences laughed at Sandler, there have been instances where this has actually happened. We have seen it many times in the pee-wee leagues, when an excited player ran in the wrong direction.

Running in the wrong direction is not just something done by those in the pee-wee leagues of life. However, we have also seen it in professional football as well. There are many so-call pros who often do the exact same thing.

On October 25, 1964 at Kezar Stadium in San Francisco, CA during a contest with the 49ers and Minnesota Vikings, Defensive End Jim Marshall, pursuing a scrambling 49ers QB from behind, recovered a fumble and ran with the it in the same direction he had been pursuing the play toward his own end zone. In other words, the WRONG way. It went down in history in football history as obviously one of Marshall's most embarrassing moment.

The best players can get confused in the excitement of the moment and run in the wrong direction. They hear the cheers in the stands, but the cheers are from the folks supporting the other team!

As Christians, it is good to know that we serve a God who won't stop loving us, even if we after we have fumbled miserably in life. We are encouraged to know that he always gives us another chance and through his grace, gives us an opportunity to win the game of life.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Jeremiah as he described the stubborn way that Israel backslide against the Lord, going the wrong way and refusing to turn back.

Jeremiah spent most of his days as a prophet trying to warn Israel that its sinfulness and backsliding ways angered God. The people had a history of turning from God to other gods. They trusted political allies instead of God. They followed the leadership of foreign kings rather than godly kings and they abandoned their devotion to the almighty God. God sent prophets, Jeremiah being one of them, to warn them but they would not hear. God called their actions "forsaking" him.

In this text God gives a message to Jeremiah to deliver to the people. It was received in light of their stubbornness. Verse one of this passage continues from chapter seven, enumerating ways in which Israel would be humiliated and desecrated by its enemies. It begins by pointing out that the bones of their relatives would be pulled from their graves and left to rot in the sun as a conscious affront to them. Such humiliation was a result of the sins of the people, which could be rectified by repentance, but Judah stubbornly refused. Jeremiah, relaying God's message, said the people were stubborn in their sinfulness; so stubborn that they would not correct themselves. Verse four makes it clear that even if a man falls down he rises to his feet again. If he turns the wrong way he tries to return to the right path. Yet, Israel, in its stubbornness, would not even use the logic of the ordinary; that is, use its common sense to correct itself after going in the wrong direction.

Matthew Henry asks the question, "Why do not they, when they have fallen into sin, hasten to get up again by repentance? Why do not they, when they see they have missed their way, correct their error and reform? No man in his wits will go on in a way that he knows will never bring him to his journey's end; why then has this people slidden back by a perpetual backsliding?"

The backsliding ways of Israel are compared to the ways of a sinner who knows he is going in the wrong direction but continues without a pause. In the old Testament it is called backsliding or forsaking God. In the New Testament it is called apostasy. When faced with such an indictment the common response is to correct ourselves, regroup and find our way back to the right path. However, the man or woman that is caught in the grip of sin, not only does not turn back but continues to forge ahead, oblivious to the fact that his course does not help him succeed but hurts him more than anything else.

Israel went forward, despite the shouts of God through Jeremiah that they were going the wrong way, to turn around and correct themselves. They realized an ultimate return only when they heard the voice of God and returned from their captivity to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem under Nehemiah.

End Zone Truths

THE CLOSEST END ZONE MAY NOT BE THE RIGHT GOAL. Israel often made alliances with neighboring countries to guarantee its safety. Following God was the long term goal, but that was a distance away. Alliances and deals with foreign neighbors were closer, quicker and more tangible. Like Israel, many of us have assumed the same attitude about life. We seek to realize our dreams by running to the closest end zone, taking the shortest cut, or bending the rules just a little bit. Sometimes we are on the 10 yard line facing a 90 yard march. In football, 90 yards is long way. It would be so much shorter if we could just turn around and run a touchdown in the end zone nearest us. It would also be easier to get rich through trick schemes, theft and deception. We could cheat a few people and steal a little too, each of these methods would get us into AN end zone, but it would not be the RIGHT end zone. Sometimes we want to take the road to least resistance. Paul wanted to travel to Asia Minor to establish churches. It was nearby, but God sent him to Macedonia, a long ways away; that was his goal. Phillip wanted to be a missionary in the big city but God sent him on a missionary journey in the wilderness, a long ways from anywhere; a single eunuch riding in a chariot was God's goal for him. The shortest cut, the quickest route, the fastest way, may not be what God has in store for each of us. We could easily cross into an end zone that's close by, but it would only be the right end zone if following the will of God is the goal.

END ZONES OFTEN LOOK A LIKE, WE MUST KNOW THE DIFFERENCE. There are times in life when goals and objectives can be confused. Believers must constantly study to remain focused and know the difference. Among Israel's various ways of angering God was a practice it established of setting up two places of worship when God ordered one. One was set up in the tribe of Dan, designed to prevent the people of the North from traveling to Jerusalem to worship at the temple. It had a ritual, sacrifice and claimed that its goal was the same as the same as the one in Jerusalem. Caught in the middle, many of the people could not see the difference and stopped at the closer worship site, angering God. Even today, it gets hard for many, in the confusion of religions, ideas, denominations and non-denominations, to discern what is right. They get turned around. In their zeal they run hard, but later discover that they have been running in the wrong direction. In football a player must know his end zone and remain focused on his goal. Believers, must do the same. We must know our goal and not lose focus when tempted to join look a like religions, denominations and non-denominations. Many who fall into these traps can't tell the differences and fall prey, thinking they are all the same. Paul told Timothy a simple solution in 1 Timothy 2:15, "Study to shew thyself approved, a workman that rightly divides the word of truth." The same is true in every matter of life. Goals and objectives should not be so confused that we neglect to our main priorities to achieve lesser objectives. It's easy to get off track thinking that we are going in one direction while traveling in a totally opposite direction. We must keep our eye on the prize and press toward the mark of the high calling of Jesus Christ. In so doing we must be extremely careful not to waste time and energy running toward what appears to be right, but is actually the wrong end zone.

YOU CAN'T CHOOSE ANY GOAL YOU WISH AND WIN. One of Israel's preoccupations was their tendency to follow the most convenient god of a foreign nation. They worshipped God, but they also had a few other wooden images too. This angered God too. In verse 19 God said, "Why have they provoked me to anger with their graven images, and with strange vanities?" It became obvious that they simply could not choose any god that was convenient at the moment and run with him if they wanted God's blessing. In football, plays can choose any end zone they wish and run toward it and expect to win the game. Their end zone is predetermined for each half. They can't change it at a whim. In life, the same wisdom applies. We can't make up the rules as we go along, doing as we please and expect to win. Yet, there are many who try to do just that and unsuccessfully attempt to please God or somebody else, whichever appears to pay more at the time. As believers, we must keep our eyes on the prize. We have but one goal, that is to please God, and through his grace, attain citizenship in the kingdom of God. To achieve that goal we press on toward our final end zone and don't turn back.

We can Turn Around

Finally, brothers and sisters we must remember that if we have been running toward the wrong end zone, we can still win the game.

Israel was stubborn. The people knew they were running in the wrong direction but they would not change. What we should observe is that although they were running in the wrong direction God still offered them a chance to return.

t does not matter how we became disoriented. It does not matter how we ended up on the wrong track, running furiously toward the wrong end zone, God offers us, even begs us to turn back.

On New Year's Day, l929, Georgia Tech played UCLA in the Rose Bowl. In that game a young man named Roy Riegels recovered a fumble for UCLA. Picking up the loose ball, he lost his direction and ran sixty-five yards toward the wrong goal line. One of his teammates, Benny Lom, ran him down and tackled him just before he reached the end zone. The Bruins were forced to punt. Tech blocked the kick and scored a safety, demoralizing the UCLA team.

The strange play came in the first half. At halftime the UCLA players filed off the field and into the dressing room. They sat around on benches and the floor. But Riegels put a blanket around his shoulders, sat down in a corner, and put his face in his hands.

When the timekeeper came in and announced that there were three minutes before playing time, Coach Price looked at the team and said, “Men, the same team that played the first half will start the second.” The players got up and started out, all but Riegels. He didn’t budge. The coach looked back and called to him. Riegels didn’t move. Coach Price went over to where Riegels sat and said, “Roy, didn’t you hear me? The same team that played the first half will start the second.”

Roy Riegels looked up, his cheeks wet with tears. “Coach,” he said, “I can’t do it. I’ve ruined you. I’ve ruined the university’s reputation. I’ve ruined myself. I can’t face that crowd out there.”

Coach Price reached out, put his hands on Riegels’ shoulder, and said, “Roy, get up and go on back. The game is only half over.”

I don’t know about you but I’m glad to know that the game of life is not over at half time.

Life is not over because we made a mistake or two or three. We can still win, this game! It’s just half time! Amazing things happen in the second half of our lives.

In the first half Jonah ran as far away from God as he could, but in the second half he preached so hard in Ninevah that he saved a nation!

In the first half, Saul persecuted the church with all of his mind and soul, but in the second half he became the champion of the cross!

In the first half, the woman caught in adultery was condemned to death, but in the second half she was forgiven and told to sin no more.

In the first half, the woman at the well, came to the well looking for a man, in the second half she ran to tell everyone, come see a man who told me all I’ve ever done.

In the first half they took a young 33 year old man from Nazareth and tried him before unjust courts.

In the first half they found him guilty and put a crown of thorns on his head.

In the first half they nailed him to an old rugged cross.

In the first half they stuck a spear in his side and buried him in a borrowed tomb!

When they closed him in the tomb, the first half ended.

Something was going in the locker room during half time because the earth quaked, the thunder rolled, the lightning flashed, the veil of the temple was split into.

Early Sunday morning, the second half began!

Early Sunday morning, the he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

If you’ve been running the wrong way, get back in the game. God will give you the power you need for the second half and your final victory!

His Eyes Are On The Prize

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 2007

SCRIPTURE: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, 14 I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Philippians 3:13-14.

Introduction

Why do we celebrate the ministry of a pastor? We celebrate the anniversary of a pastor's ministry because it helps us place a milestone in time, marking progress made toward the goal. We celebrate such occasions because they involve our own accomplishments as well. When the pastor succeeds we succeed. Whatever he has accomplished, we have accomplished. When he fails we fail. So our celebration is a pause to encourage a pastor who marches vigorously toward the prize of the high calling of Jesus Christ.

There are many who are called to preach, but not everyone has the personality or strength of character to be a pastor.

Pastors, unlike counselors, must give advice and also be able to take advice.

Pastors, unlike managers, must be able to manage resources and create resources as well.

Pastors, unlike analysts, must be able to discern the strength of an approach but be able to act upon the results.

Pastors must remain focused at all times keeping their eyes on the prize that Christ has offered to every believer.

Only the foolish pastor will waste his time in meaningless battles, frivolous disputes and unnecessary confrontations. Pastors are men of God; they have little time to waste with sparring partners. He always keeps his eye on the main event.

At anniversaries, whether they are long term or short term in nature, we both celebrate and evaluate the pastor.

What we usually find when the evaluation is over is that the great pastor never takes his eye off the prize.

Whenever men evaluate a pastor there is always a conflict between the ideal and the real; between what we want and what we will settle for. If men were to evaluate the pastor he would always come up short because:

If the pastor is young, he lacks experience; if his hair is gray, he's too old for the young people.

If he has five or six children, he has too many; if he has none, he's setting a bad example.

If he preaches from notes, he has canned sermons and is dry; If his messages are extemporaneous, he isn't deep enough.

If he uses too many illustrations, he's neglecting the Bible; if he doesn't include stories, he isn't clear.

If he preaches the truth, he's too offensive; if he doesn't preach the truth then he's a hypocrite.

If he fails to make everybody happy, he's hurting the church; if he does make them all happy, he has no convictions.

If he drives an old car, he shames his congregation; if he buys a new one, he's stealing the church's money

If he receives a large salary, he's in it for the money!

If he gets a small one — It's because he can't preach anyway and that's all he's worth!

As Christians, we know that we are on our way to the Promised Land. That is the prize that we all seek. We celebrate our spiritual leader for his efforts to keep us focused on that prize as we continue our daily pilgrimage to the land of promise.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's Epistle to the Church at Philippi summarizing his own great faith, purpose and life ministry.

Paul's pastoral ministry was energized by the Holy Spirit. He was vigorous in his support of the Church and the work of the saints. Despite his circumstances he committed himself to "follow after" (v12). The phrase is from the Greek word "di?k?" which means to pursue with vigor. That is the definition of his ministry and that of any others similarly situated.

The young pastors who would pick up the mantel behind great men such as Paul would hopefully embrace the spirit of "di?k?" that would help them learn to follow after the predecessors with a degree of wisdom and respect, while leaving a trail of their own for others who will "di?k?" or follow after them.

The essence of Paul's ministry was to accomplish his goal in the name of Christ. Always, he pressed towards that mark. He pursued his ministry as a runner who runs a race never stops short of the end but continues to victory. Heaven is called the "mark," because it is that which every good Christian has in his eye.

Ultimately, Paul wanted to go to heaven. It was the prize he preached about for every believer and for himself. It was the mark of the prize of the high calling.

Thus, Paul wrote this letter to the Christians in Philippi to tell them of the joy of serving the Lord and to encourage them to keep their minds focused on their purpose in life. These passages reflect three dominant themes that permeated Paul's ministry: Humility, intense focus, and a sure goal.

A Spirit of Humility

The pastor is celebrated because of his/her humility. It is not easy to be humble; that is why the church celebrates this quality in its leader. The greatest pastor is the one who is a humble servant. When the pastor begins his pastorate he/she begins with an empty title. The pastor must earn the title through a humble spirit and faithful service. Jesus said, he that would be greatest among us should be our servant.

Humility is a character trait that should not be ignored by any pastor because the wise man knows that he does not know everything and can be wrong in matters of policy, procedure and tradition, but is never wrong about the surety of his faith.

Paul remained humble, throughout his life. Obviously, God had endowed him with great talents and gifts but he always received them with an attitude of humility. Although Paul was a learned scholar who spoke many languages fluently and was well versed in the scholarship of his day, he told the Philippians, "I count not myself to have apprehended" that is to note that while he had learned much in life, he was keenly aware that he did not know everything. He counted heavily on the Holy Spirit to reveal many things to him and to call others to his remembrance. Knowing that God spoke and moved through him, Paul was always humbled to know that he had not accomplished anything alone, but it was always God working through him.

The best men in the world readily own their own imperfections. They are aware that they have flaws and work tirelessly to insure that these imperfections do filter through to their life work.

Pastors must always remind themselves that they too are imperfect. Sometimes pastors even behave foolishly, making unnecessary mistakes and causing injury. The wise pastor will recognize the error of such a position and apologize for his own imperfections and adjust accordingly.

The humble pastor also studies intensely because he/she knows that they do not know everything; hence they continue to study to show themselves workmen that need not be a ashamed but workmen who divide rightly the words of truth. Only the fool thinks that he or she knows enough or even worse, thinks he or she knows everything. Matthew Henry puts it this way, "Those who think they have grace enough give proof that they have little enough, or rather that they have none at all; because, wherever there is true grace, there is a desire of more grace, and a pressing towards the perfection of grace."

An Intense Focus

The pastor is also praised because of his intense focus on the ministry. It is not difficult for a congregation to lose sight of its goal. The pastor remains focused and keeps the congregation on track. That's why the congregation celebrates his intense focus; because he keeps them on track; and when they lose their way, helps them find their way back.

Paul's life was intensely focused on his goal. He chose not to focus on his past accomplishments, which included his education and training, conversion on the Damascus road, three missionary journeys, and the conversions of countless numbers to the faith. It would have been very easy for him, especially considering his confinement and approaching death, to dwell on the past and constantly reflect on his achievements. He chose to focus on the future rather than on the past. Whatever was done in the past remains as history. He chose, even in a moment of crises, to always look to the future.

The wise pastor looks back with appreciation on the works of those who preceded him, giving praise and honor to those who paved the way, while at the same time remaining focused on the future. The pastor's eye is always on the prize. It is always on Calvary. His eye is always on Christ, the Solid Rock.

A Sure Destination

The pastor must be sure of his destination, firm in his faith, and unwavering in his belief that God's promises of heaven are true and forthcoming.

Paul knew what he wanted and where he was going. His goal was the prize of the high calling of God. It did not lay in the praise of men, or the accumulation of worldly things. He concluded that he would not be dissuaded in his journey. In Romans 8:35 he asked, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?" Then he answered in verse 37, "Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."

His goal in life was set, it was clear and in focus, he had decided to use his life as a witness to the power of God and there would be no turning back.

Eyes on the Prize

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that our prayers should never cease for the pastor because we need his eyes to stay focused on the prize.

The great pastors are those who keep their eyes on the cross and never lose sight of the reason for their ministry.

The church should always pray that the pastor does not get distracted to the point that he can't find Jesus. When that happens it means his eyes are NOT on the prize.

I'm reminded of the metropolitan church that was looking for a pastor. It had a list of applicants with impressive resumes. However, among the applicants was an elderly country preacher who came to stand before the pulpit committee. "What are your qualifications? Where is your resume?" The preacher was asked.

He then opened a large paste board box and said "this is my resume" He pulled out a "rub board", a pair of knee pads, and a compass with stone glued to its backside.

When asked to explain the country preacher, with fire and eloquence said, "This rub board is the first page of my resume' it tells you who I am. It says that I'm a child of God, washed in the blood of the lamb."

Holding up the knee pads he said, "These knee pads suggest to you that I know and believe in the power of prayer, for prayer changes things.

This compass says when things get dark and we can't see a way, that I know how to follow the direction of his word and find the rock that is higher than I. Brothers and sisters I know how to find Jesus!" When he finished an old member of the committee stood and said, "One of our applicants is from Harvard, another is from Yale, but this man knows how to find Jesus, he's got his eyes on the prize!"

When the pastor has his eyes on the prize, the church is able to see Jesus!

When we can see Jesus, it doesn't matter how rough the road becomes; we know everything will be alright!

When we can see Jesus, our faith is reaffirmed!

When we can see Jesus, our strength is renewed!

When we can see Jesus, joy is restored!

Preach the word preacher!

Preach it in season and out of season!

Keep your eyes on the prize!

Tell them about Jesus!

Jesus! Who died out on Calvary!

Jesus! Who arose from the dead!

Tell them that he's coming back again to claim his own!

Until that day…keep your eyes on the prize!

Women Knead Their Dough

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 11, 2007

SCRIPTURE: The children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead their dough, to make cakes to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto other gods, that they may provoke me to anger. Jeremiah 7:18

Introduction

Have you ever watched a small ball of dough rise. As children, many have watched their parents prepare breads the old fashioned way. They watched as mother took the lump of dough in her hands and squeezed it, turned it, shaped it; and even powdered it. We watched through the glass door on the oven as the dough seemed to sit for a while with nothing happening. Then, as the temperature began to increase, we saw the dough begin to rise and enlarge. We watched a mother guarded the kitchen and would not allow anyone to slam doors or open the oven. She protected the kneaded dough until it grew firm. We saw it form a brown crust. We smelled the aroma. We saw dough turn into bread.

But first it was kneaded.

When something is kneaded it is pressed or squeezed into a uniform mass as by folding, pressing or stretching with the hands. Before many breads are prepared the dough is kneaded first.

Often we only see the final products of bread stuffs. We do not see how they were first kneaded, shaped and plunged into the heat of the oven to become what we admire.

Many women today can relate to the entire concept of both being the bread maker and being the dough. As bread maker, many women are functioning as home managers and even career managers. They are working in the market place and functioning successfully in the world of commerce. Yet, these same women who are so strong in once instance are also very fragile in another.

Women need to be kneaded.

The successful women of history have been kneaded: squeezed, pulled, shaped and turned. Theirs is the story of women who have overcome obstacles placed before them involving gender and race. They have triumphed despite the pulling and turning; despite the heat of the oven.

J. Clay Smith, in her book "Rebels in Law" chronicles the struggles of Black women to succeed, especially in the area of law. She began with the struggles of Charlotte

E. Ray, the first Black woman lawyer in 1872 and continued through the struggles of Anita Hill with her famous fight against now Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas. Her litany of women who struggled includes: The Late Barbara Jordan, Patricia Roberts Harris, Carol Mosely Braun, Patricia Roberts Harris and many others. Smith detailed the crucible of testing set before women in the legal profession but not before detailing the struggles of all women to endure the same.

Like a lump of dough that sits alone, there is a fear of being alone. It is good to know that they are not just sitting idly but that they are being watched over carefully by an eternal hand.

The struggles of women in the past have proven to be the substance that helped them rise.

Like the dough on the pan, women and everyone who hopes to succeed need to be kneaded. They need careful attention; to be watched over like the dough in the oven to keep them from falling. They need someone greater than themselves to check on them from time to time to be sure that that they don't over bake and are not under-risen.

They can become a perfect loaf if kneaded properly, watched carefully and nurtured while they rise.

That's what God does for all of us. He kneads us from time to time. He shapes us, molds us and then allows us to feel the heat of the fire but keeps us from falling flat, and removes from the fire after we've had enough heat to help us to stand on our own.

As Christians, we rejoice in knowing that our God keeps us and protect us and kneads us, like dough, until we rise.

Exposition

The text focuses on women of Israel kneading dough.

Jeremiah constantly preached to Israel concerning its allegiance to God. He often depicted the people in the context of being shaped and molded in God's hand like pieces of clay at the Potter's House. Despite God's goodness to them Israel often strayed. This text is one of the examples of how far they strayed.

There were two pagan gods served most by nations that surrounded Israel, Baal and Asheroth his wife. She was called the "Queen of Heaven." She was often represented by the moon. The sale of moon shaped objects and artifacts was a prosperous trade of the period. Those who had something moon shaped in their homes seemed to succeed. So, many Israelite families followed suit.

One of the ways they adopted the pagan practice was to make moon shaped cakes in honor of Asheroth. They believed the practice would help them become successful. Entire families pitched in to make the moon cakes. Thus come the words of verse 18, "The children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead their dough, to make cakes to the queen of heaven…"

While they were doing it for a pagan reason, the text sheds light on division of labor in the ancient household, the children gathered wood, the fathers kindled fire and the women kneaded dough." Kneading dough was considered women's work.

Kneading the dough was considered her function and so it remained for hundreds of years.

Kneading Dough

Today, women are still kneading dough. They are still homemakers and professionals, cooks, and teachers, ambassadors and presidential candidates. Women are kneading the dough all over the world.

In the African-American community women are kneading the dough as they assume leadership of an overwhelming majority of our homes, fill our classrooms and lead our families.

Women knead to provide for their families.

Women knead to gain self respect!

Women knead to help build the kingdom of God!

While women are kneading the dough, women themselves are being kneaded by the society in which they live.

How are they kneaded? Black women are most often rape victims, according to Africana Voices Against violence. Every nine seconds in America a Black woman is punched, slapped, kicked or emotionally abused. According to EUR World, every two seconds a Black woman is referred to as a "ho" or female dog.

Even in their own race black women are kneaded and discriminated against. Schools promote young black girls as sex objects at athletic events by dressing them in thinly clad uniforms for the amusement of crowds of mostly paying men. Black preachers humiliate Black women preachers by belittling them in public and refusing to honor their calling. And some black churches tell them that God thinks they are second class citizens doomed to forever follow in the shadow of men in the kingdom of God.

Add this to her struggle for economic independence, and intellectual freedom, and it becomes obvious that the black woman is certainly being kneaded, twisted, turned and pulled every which way but loose.

It is from this torment that today's black woman emerges; still standing, despite the insults, humiliations, obstacles and frustrations before her. She continues to rise.

Maya Angelou's famous poem, "Still I rise" expresses every woman's hope of triumph over adversity and trouble.

You may write me down in history
With your bitter, twisted lies,
You may trod me in the very dirt
But still, like dust, I'll rise.

You may shoot me with your words,
You may cut me with your eyes,
You may kill me with your hatefulness,
But still, like air, I'll rise.

I rise! I rise!

Women are Needed

Lest the all knowing men of this world forget, God made Eve, who was the first Black woman nested in the Kenya in a garden on the continent of Africa. He made Eve because women are needed.

The late James Brown wrote a song once that said, “This is a man’s world, but it wouldn’t be nothing without a woman or a girl.”

The African-American community today would be lost without the Black woman. She is needed because she is the cornerstone of our race.

The statistics tell the story. While there is a good chance that 28 out of every 100 Black men will spend time in state or Federal prison, only 3 out every 100 Black women are expected to do prison time. There are two times as many black women in college as there are men.

Black women are in Congress, there is Black woman serving as Secretary of State and Black women are leading our communities, dominating our politics and holding our communities together. There is no doubt that Black women are needed. Without them, there would be no life as we know it.

Women need to be needed

Our women need to be needed. The world often treats her as if she is of little value, but in the words of Isaac Hayes, she “needs to be loved by someone.”

She needs to be held high instead of trampled down!

She needs to be embraced for her accomplishments rather than put down!

She needs to be lifted up for her strength rather than ridiculed for her weaknesses.

She has needs to rise.

There are many women today who are being kneaded by circumstance but have not risen because they, like many others, have too little patience. It takes time for a sweet, tasty bread to rise. In Old Testament times the children of Israel were ordered to eat bread without yeast when they were on the move. Even when they prepared to leave Egypt they ate bread without yeast. Leavened bread had to rise, then be baked. Those on the move ate unleavened or flat bread because they didn’t have time for it to rise.

Today, women need time to rise. In the rush of preparing for family and career, women need time to rise. It’s a moment of solitude in which you can read, reflect and finally exhale. In addition we need time to speak to God in our solitude. That means time to pray and to listen to him speak to us.

If we are to rise, all of us need time. Being on the go all of the time requires flat bread. It also results in flat pie crusts that we reluctantly call spiritual lives.

Women Need God

Finally, brothers and sisters, while women are kneaded by life's circumstances and the evils of the world, we must also remember that women need God.

In this respect, women and men share the same need. We all need God.

We need God to help us overcoming the bitter stings of adversity we face every day!

We need God to motivate us to continue to rise above the despondency of our circumstance!

No wonder the song writer declared, 'I need thee, oh I need thee. Every hour I need thee. O bless me now my savior I come to thee!

We need the Lord to turn our midnights into days!

We need the Lord to take our weaknesses and turn them into strengths!

We need the Lord to take our failure and convert them into triumphs!

I don't know about you but I agree with the song writer who said, "I don't know what I would do without the Lord. When I look around and see, what the Lord has done for me, I don't know what I would do without the Lord!"

I can't even wave my hands without the Lord! When I look around and see what the Lord has done for me. I don't know what I would do without the Lord!"

We need the Lord in the morning!

We need the Lord in the midnight hour!

His name is Jesus!

The lily of the Valley!

The bright and morning star!

He died out on Calvary!

But early, Sunday morning….he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Peace, At Last

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 2006

SCRIPTURE:He hath delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me: for there were many with me. Psalm 55:18

Introduction

What does it mean to really be at peace? Between birth and death each of us struggles to achieve three states: fulfillment, joy and peace. These three intangibles always seem beyond us. As soon as we get close to them, they seem to slip through our fingers or linger just beyond our fingertips.

Fulfillment

Fulfillment is elusive. It begins with a dream that is larger than we can perceive but still small enough for us to receive and believe. We are fulfilled when we realize the dream in our own lives. Sometimes we dream of love and being loved. Being loved means being appreciated for oneself; not for what we can do for others. To be loved is to inhale the compassion of those who care for us and to exhale the same spirit in all that we meet. Many spend their lives trying to find someone to love them. The direction it comes from does not matter; we feel fulfilled when we are loved.

Joy

Joy is elusive too. We often substitute happiness for joy only to find out that happiness depends upon intangibles to exist. Many have reduced happiness to one word definitions that glow with the fleeting glimmer of comet then vanish. Happiness is sexy. Happiness is fame. Happiness is fortune. Happiness is glamour. Those who grasp for happiness often find that despite its illusions that it is no substitute for real joy. Happiness is superficial.

Joy is different. It does not depend upon fortune, glamour and the flashes of a thousand cameras. Joy wells from within us. It is a delicate mix of dreams, achievement and godliness that makes it all worthwhile. Many achieve happiness but find that it's like a melting cone in the summer; it doesn't last long. Those with inner joy have something that money, beauty, glamour and fame cannot buy. Happiness comes from things, but it dwarfs in comparison to joy. It is like a spring before a sea; it is a stream, but joy is an ocean. For this reason joy is elusive, evasive and is obtained only by those who know the difference. God shows the secret path to joy to those who know him and teaches them the difference between happiness and real joy.

Peace

Peace is the crown jewel of our life's quest. Each person desires peace. When we have peace the hostilities end. The pushing and shoving ends. The reports and misinformation ends. The words of commentators, anticipators, prognosticators and haters, end too. When we are at peace the tongues still wag but we soar above them or fly below their radar. When we are at peace the headlines may continue to blare but we won't read them or be affected by what they report. As others quarrel, dispute and concern themselves with trivialities, formalities and insecurities; we soar above them, or just below their radar, oblivious, insipid and unnerved. Peace is not just the cessation of hostility. It is not a cold war or a cordial agreement to continue in disagreement without the appearance of disunion. Peace is silence while the world screams. It is tranquility while the world anguishes.

Peace is elusive too. The rich seek peace, but often find that their money gets in the way. The famous seek peace, but often stumble over the notoriety of their own names. The beautiful seek peace but discover that it is hard to find because of the glare of a thousand flashing lights that leave them groping, searching, reaching but never quite grasping what they want most: to be noticed, but left alone.

Exposition

This text, written by David, expresses his joy at finally finding peace.

Psalm 55 details a life that was frustrated, weary and worn. This psalm represents the cry of a soul that, though surrounded by many was lonely, afraid and frustrated. Listen to the words of the Psalmist in verses 4-6, "My heart is sore pained within me: and the terrors of death are fallen upon me. 5 Fearfulness and trembling are come upon me, and horror hath overwhelmed me. 6 And I said, Oh that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at rest."

These are the musings of a soul that was surrounded by many people who were battling him. They fought him and they fought over him. They questioned his intentions. They mocked his loyalties and second guessed his friendships, relationships and involvements. The words of David, inspired by God for this record, echo across the centuries in verse 18, "He hath delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me."

The battle that was against David came from many angles. He was a target of the government, critics, Philistines and many others. There were many against him; so many that he wished he toyed with the idea of taking the wings of a dove to soar into the heavens and escape it all.

However, while David considered those that were against him, he also considered that there were many who were not his enemies. He considered he had many admirers, supporters and defenders. He considered the priests who offered him showbread when he was hungry at considerable risk to their lives. He considered the hundreds of men who followed him in battle and fought bravely to defend his honor. When he considered these, he remembered that while there were many against him, "there were many with me."

These thoughts set his mind at ease.

These thoughts gave him a sense of calm.

These thoughts gave his soul peace.

David found peace by calling upon God. In verse 16-17 he said, "As for me, I will call upon God; and the LORD shall save me. Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud: and he shall hear my voice."

Together these texts givesa clear message: Those surrounded by hostility, trouble, ridicule and vicious words, can find peace in the presence of God.

To Be At Peace

What does it take to be at peace? In a statement from "Walden," Henry David Thoreau said, "The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation." There are others who quite certainly who live their lives in public desperation, searching, yearning for peace.

In the bible in Luke 2:36-38 there is a woman named Anna. She married at a young age, became a widow a short time after and spent her remaining years in search of a child. Any other comparison we might have of ourselves or anyone we may know to the Biblical Anna would certainly be oxymoronic. It would be contradictory because the biblical Anna reached a level of perfection that would make most of us, or anyone we know, pale in comparison. The one aspect of Anna's life that we might all share is the desire to find, see and touch the child that defines our legacy.

When life's curtain falls, we can be at peace if we are buried with those we love and can be assured that our offspring are provided for and loved.

Those who want to bring us peace can help this happen. In the bible Joseph was a famous man in Egypt. He was prominent, wealthy and powerful. He could have been buried among the Pharaohs of Egypt but his request was to be buried among those whom he loved most. When Israel marched out of Egypt 400 years later, they carried the bones of Joseph with them, to bury them among his loved ones, so he could finally rest in peace.

Those who want to help us rest in peace should focus on those we leave behind; our living legacy.

If you want us to rest in peace..take care of our offspring. Love them. Nurture them. Embrace them.

That knowledge will help us approach our graves in the words of William Cullen Bryant, "not like the quarry-slave at night, scourged to his dungeon, but…like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

When we finally rest with those we love having provided for the nurture and maintenance of those we leave behind, we can find, in death, the peace that often escaped us and evaded us in life.

Rest in Peace

At the close of each life there is an epilogue. It is the final statement that our lives leave to the world.

It is what we learn from a life experience.

We have learned much from the life that we celebrate today. We have watched this life rise from obscurity to notoriety. We have scrutinized every detail. We have observed its search for fulfillment, joy and peace. We know the quest. We know the struggle. We know the pain. As we observe and read its epilogue we can relate to the errors because we have made them. We can admire the successes because we aspire to them and we can embrace the search closure because we want that too.

As Christians, we recognize our own frailty and inability to always do the right things or make the right choices.

It has been my experience, that those who love God most find the most fulfillment, joy and peace.

Those who trust God most, rise above the storms of controversy that this life creates.

Those who depend upon God most, go to their graves confident that "all is well."

This confidence comes because of our faith in Jesus Christ, who came to this world fully flawed like all of us.

He endured the humiliation of the cross and an undeserved death but arose from the grave on the third day to bring hope to all believers.

This hope is that despite our weaknesses..

Despite our failures and flaws..

Despite our doubts and insecurities..

Despite even untimely deaths…

Despite what is written, or spoken about us..

Through him we can rest in peace..

At last.

A Postcard from Heaven

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 10, 2007

SCRIPTURE: "Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took him out: and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, Is there any word from the LORD? And Jeremiah said, There is .." Jeremiah 37:17a

Introduction

Have you ever received a post card in the mail? Post cards are simple little cards that contain short messages. We usually enjoy post card messages. On the front there is usually a beautiful picture that describes a picturesque setting. On the back there is a small space for a message. Usually the message is short: "Having a great time, wish you were here!" The post cards bring smiles to our faces because they are reassuring. They let us know that everything is alright.

Today there are all kinds of cards: Post cards, greeting cards and e-cards. It is even possible to get a living card. Those who want a special way to sing happy birthday or Merry Christmas can purchase a singing card; that's when live singers appear at your loved one's door and sing happy birthday or some other cheery message. They sing the message then disappear.

A card can often say the exact words we want to say. Sometimes when we say things the words come out wrong. Consider the maid who always answered her boss by writing messages on small cards. One day she started talking to her boss but wouldn't only say one phrase. One day the boss woman sat on the porch talking to her maid. The woman said, "On my first anniversary my husband brought me a diamond bracelet." The maid looked at her and said, "Isn't that nice?" A few minutes later she said, "On our second anniversary, my husband bought me that Mercedes Benz in the front yard." The maid looked at the car and said with a nonchalant smile, "Isn't that nice?" As an afterthought the woman said, on our third anniversary my husband bought me this beautiful five bed room house." Again the maid answered, "Isn't that nice?" Then the woman asked the maid, "What did your husband give you for your anniversary?" The maid answered by saying, "When he heard I was going to take a job working in this neighborhood. He told me to write everything on cards; then he gave me a month's tuition in a charm school." The woman said, "Why would he do that?" The maid, answered, "I learned how not to say what I want to say. Now, I have charm. When I really want to say, "Who really gives a cotton pick? I have learned to say…"Isn't that nice?"

We all like receiving post cards and greeting cards, but wouldn't it be nice if we could receive a post card from heaven? Just when we are at our lowest, wouldn't it be nice to get a word from heaven that said everything is alright? Just when we are overcome with grief and sadness, wouldn't it be nice if there was a special delivery from heaven with a few short words that put us at ease?

The person who sends a greeting card is sympathetic, able to feel the need of others for a moment of joy and happiness. Each card they send may be on a piece of paper, but the words they contain are from the soul. They are little messages from the heart of a concerned soul.

God sends us messages from heaven on a regular basis, too. Sometimes he gives us visions. Sometimes he gives us dreams.

Sometimes he shows us his love by sending us mothers whose lives are living, talking, preaching, teaching and loving post cards that send us a message that God loves us.

As Christians, we are grateful for the many ways that God blesses our lives with messages from heaven. When we are sad he sent us "melodies from heaven." When we needed guidance to find our way, he sent us mothers, with a lifetime of short messages direct from heaven.

Exposition

This text focuses on a question that was asked of the Prophet Jeremiah.

In the Old Testament, whenever a king or a leader wanted direction, inspiration or information from heaven he often sent messengers to the prophets asking, "Is there any word from the Lord."

It was a phrase that expressed their desire to receive a word of hope or inspiration from heaven. In Jeremiah 37:17 the king sent a messenger to the prophet Jeremiah to seek a word from the Lord before entering into battle. Sometimes the kings were happy with the word they received. There were times, such as in this text that they received bad news.

Whether it was good or bad, they wanted a word from heaven.

In Jeremiah 23:35 those who sought a word asked, "What has the Lord spoken?" It was their desire to hear from heaven.

God has sent messages from heaven in numerous ways. Sometimes it was through the direct voice of God. When Moses went into the mount for 40 days and nights and returned with the 10 commandments, he heard the voice of God. When the people heard God's voice directly they were afraid and asked that he would speak to Moses instead.

Sometimes a message from heaven came in the form of visions. Ezekiel was given the vision of the dry bones in the valley. Through this vision the people learned that the people would be restored if they would listen to the word of the Lord.

Another way that God sent messages from heaven was through dreams. Daniel displayed the unique ability to dream dreams and to interpret dreams as a way of helping them understand messages from heaven.

Then there were times when messages from heaven were delivered in person. When Sara learned that she would bear a child in her old age, the message was brought by angels, in person. Angels, in person, went to Sodom and Gomorrah and delivered a message to Lot and his family that saved most of them and condemned the cities at the same time.

Thus, believers have received messages from heaven through the preached word, dreams, visions and through the physical presence of message bearers from heaven.

Godly Mothers are post cards

A good mother is a like a living messenger from heaven in a family. Not all mothers are good mothers, some are hell's angels; but good mothers are different.

Our mothers are the mirrors by which we measure ourselves. They are our frame of reference. We emulate their strengths. We want to stay away from their weaknesses. Like mirrors we tilt them, turn them and sometimes crack them, but they still remain the one constant by which we measure ourselves.

We hear their messages constantly. In reflection they seem to be the same words we hear from preachers on Sunday. They seem to be the same words we read in the bible. We hear them in our sleep and think about them every day.

Do you hear her messages in your sleep? It was a post card from heaven!

When you go into the world, never forget who are? Hold your head up high and respect yourself?

Never lie, because if you lie you will steal!

Always worship God, give him your best!

Godly mothers never stop sending us messages. They call us on the phone; they send us emails. They visit us and celebrate with us and even in the middle of the celebration; they send us more messages.

When God wanted to send us a post card from heaven; he sent us mothers.

One last Postcard

At death, wouldn't it be nice if we could receive a post card or little greeting card from our loved one; to reassure us that everything is alright?

The words of the little poem would certainly apply:

When you get where you are going
Drop me a line or two
Just to let me know you got there safe
Just a word or two
Not a book or long letter
Just a post card or two
In my dreams, in a song
Just a word will do.

Yet God has sent us a post card in his word to remind us that everything is alright.

John 1:1 says, "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. 2 In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. 3 And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." – That's a message from heaven.

2 Corinthians 5:1 1 For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." That's a message from heaven.

2 Corinthians 5:8 We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." That's a message from heaven.

God sent us a Living Post Card

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that God sent us a living post card in the form of his Son Jesus Christ.

Hallmark Cards is a multimillion dollar company that specializes in marketing greeting cards with the right words for every situation. The company's slogan is, "When you care enough to send the very best." They have cards for all occasions: sympathy, birthday, all seasons and sometimes the cards say, "Just thinking of you."

That's what God did for the world. John 3:16 says, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Before Hallmark, God cared enough about us to send the very best.

Jesus was our living post card from heaven to remind the world that no matter how bad it gets, God still loves us.

When we feel low we ask, is there a word from the Lord?

And after while, bye and bye, we get a post card from heaven!

No matter what our situation may be, the post card we get is always the right one because he is the right card for the occasion.

Jesus is the world's best all occasion card.

In our moments of sadness, he's the right card because he brings us gladness.

In our moments of sickness, he's the right card because he brings inspiration and hope.

In our moments of despair, he's the right card because he brings us renewed faith.

The despondent ask, "Is there a word from the Lord?"

And every believer answered that there is a word from the Lord!

He was a postcard from heaven…delivered through 42 generations..

He was God's loved letter to the world!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

On Saturday, March 3, 2007, Joyanease Gill went home to be with the Lord. She left one final post card that reads, "Having a great time! See you when you get here."

The Twelve Tribes of Israel

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 2007

SCRIPTURE: "All these are the twelve tribes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake unto them, and blessed them; every one according to his blessing he blessed them." Genesis 49:29

Introduction

Building campaigns require teamwork, but have you ever looked at your team and concluded that your team can't win? Whenever we conclude that what we are trying to do is impossible, then we have already given up. Sometimes, when we look at the members of our team we doubt our own ability to see the project to the end. This doubt comes because we forget what our team can do in God's hands.

Those in the church are not alone. In many walks of life there are people like us who embark on a project feeling the final outcome is fruitless. Teachers feel that way sometimes. They give their best energy and time to prepare a lesson that seems to go in one ear and come out the other. Parents feel that way too. Those who work in the criminal justice system often see so many cases of misplaced values parading before them that they wonder whether there is an end to the revolving door that seems to have trapped some in an endless spiral and will not turn them loose. Those who help the poor, the elderly or the homeless reach the same point. In frustration, many good people often wonder whether they should continue their good work. They wonder they should keep ringing the bell for the Salvation Army, collecting food for the needy, or working to help the homeless. All of these efforts build the kingdom but they are frustrating to many.

When a church building project is divided into 12 groups, it is reminiscent of the 12 tribes of Israel. Sometimes groups would like to pick their own members to get the perfect team, without realizing that it is not the team but the power of God that makes the team work.

The founders of the tribes were 12 brothers who looked like a losing team. Among the brothers were many who could not get along, one who was guilty of incest, several who were hot tempered and violent and many who were talented. Despite what appeared to be a clumsy, flawed, team of brothers, God used this family of brothers and blessed them in such a way that the world has become a better place because of them.

As Christians, we have learned that nothing is impossible in God's hands. He can help us build and succeed if we have a mind to work. It does not matter who is on our team or committee. What matters is whether our team is in God's hands. If we trust in him, God favors us with blessings from on high. Together we can build a great work for him and he will get the praise.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jacob as he blesses and prophesies the future of his 12 sons who later became known as the Children of Israel.

Throughout the bible there is reference to the 12 tribes of Israel. This reference is to the descendants of Abraham through his grandson, Jacob.

Abraham and his wife, Sarah, gave birth to Isaac, the son of promise, who was married to Rebekah, granddaughter of Nahor.

To Isaac and Rebekah were born Jacob and Esau.

Jacob married both Leah and Rachel, daughters of Laban.

To Jacob and his wives were born twelve sons, who, having migrated to Egypt, became the foundation for the twelve tribes and for the fulfillment of the promises originally made to Abraham.

Jacob wrestled with God and he was blessed. His name was changed from Jacob to Israel. Thus, his 12 sons became known as the children of Israel. Each of them headed a specific tribe.

Though Israel had 12 sons, there were actually 13 tribes when Israel moved into the promised land. This happened as the tribe of Levi was set aside to care for the worship of God. The tribe of Joseph was split into two half tribes named: Ephraim and Mannasseh. In the promised land references to the 12 tribes of Israel include all 13 tribes.

The Tribes blessed

Reuben: Reuben was blessed to be the firstborn of Israel. That carried with it the prospect of honor and privilege. Yet because he had relations with his father's wife he was punished. Although Ruben repented his tribe bore the mark of his indiscretion. In the history of this tribe there were no judges, prophets or priests. They were not allowed to excel, according to v4. "Thou shalt not excel." The Tribe of Rueben remained loyal to the nation and fought to build its great legacy. From Rueben we learn how our actions can have an adverse affect on the future of our families. But also from Ruben we learn humility and repentance as we work to build the kingdom.

Simeon and Levi: Both blessings and hardships became the lots of Simeon and Levi. The character of Simeon and Levi was similar. They were passionate and revengeful, fierce and uncontrollable; their swords were weapons of violence. Jacob prophesied that these two tribes would be separated from the rest (v7). Simeon's descendants were scattered among the tribes, always looking for settlements. The descendants of Levi received no inheritance in the Promised Land. Verse 7 notes that Jacob was upset with their anger and cruelty, but not with them as individuals. He never stopped loving these two sons who were overtaken by fiery passions. Today, we too should remember that God often hates some of the things we do, but he never stops loving us. He often chastises us because of our actions, but we are still counted among the children of God.

Judah: A great blessing was given to Judah because he was a child of continual praise to God in worship and in lifestyle. Judah's name signifies praise, in allusion to which he says, Thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise, v. 8. God was praised for him praised by him, and praised in him; and therefore his brethren shall praise him. Judah became a royal tribe, producing princes and kings. Judah also became a strong and victorious tribe, through whom the promised savior was born many years later in Bethlehem. When our lives are lived according to God's will we praise him both in our worship and through our lifestyle. He is praised through us. He is praised by us. As a result those who, like Judah, live lives that praise God will be rewarded.

Zebulun: The tribe of Zebulun became a prosperous tribe by the sea coast. Jacob fortold their future before his death; that Zubulun's posterity should have their lot upon the seacoast, and should be merchants, and mariners, and traders at sea. This was fulfilled when, two or three hundred years after, the land of Canaan was divided by lot, and the border of Zebulun went up towards the sea. It proved that God's promise, after all the years, did not return empty. Like Zebulun many of our forefathers were made promises about the future of their children. Though interrupted by slavery, hard times, depression and racial discrimination, those promises are being fulfilled this very day. God never forgot the promise to Zebulun, just as he never forgets promises he made to our fore parents concerning us. We are blessed today because of the prayer requests of a thousand grandmas and grandpas who prayed for the success of their descendants.

Issachar: The tribe of Issachar became known for the hard working nature of its people. They were strong and industrious, fit for labor, particularly the toil of husbandry. They succeeded because they worked so hard they appeared to be slaves to the land. Yet they found peace in the labor. Today, we should remember that God blesses the family that works hard and obeys his will. He gives that family something that money cannot buy; peace and happiness. This was the great gift of Issachar, the gift of peace and a reward for working to build the kingdom.

Dan: Dan became a tribe known for producing the great judge Samson. He was strong and bold, yet sometimes he was like Jacob described, "a snake on the road." In his strength Samson glorified God. In his weakness, like a snake that bites the heel of horse, he brought the nation shame. Dan brought Israel hope but it also was the source of its shame at times. Samson in his last days proved the strength of the Lord when he destroyed the Philistines in one last act of courage. Even today, the best of believers are sometimes like Dan. Somedays we are strong. On other days we are so weak that we bring shame on our families and even the church. Thanks to the mercy of God, although we fall down, we do get up to give him the ultimate victory as we work to build the church.

Gad: The Gadites were men of war fit for the battle. In the Promised Land they were constantly exposed to attacks by their neighbors, the Moabites and Ammonites; and, that they might not be proud of their strength and valor, he foretels that the troops of their enemies should, in many skirmishes, overcome them; yet, that they might not be discouraged by their defeats, he assures them that they should overcome at the last. We, like the Gadites should be soldiers in the army of the Lord. We should be aware that we will have to fight Satan many times. There will be time when Satan appears to win but ultimately we, like Gad, will overcome at last. The Lord has promised us that, "He that overcometh, shall inherit all things."

Asher: The tribe of Asher was a prosperous tribe. Their works were blessed and they became a very rich tribe, replenished not only with bread for necessity, but with fatness, with dainties, royal dainties. They sold their produce to other tribes, and perhaps to other lands. Like Asher, believers who live in obedience have the blessings of Asher as an indicator of their reward. Asher did more than just survive, it was a tribe that thrived; and God received the glory. Asher's success is a picture of hope for every believer, that even in this life, we can enjoy many of the creature comforts of this world, while working to build the kingdom of God. God provided all of Asher's needs, and most of their wants. He will do no less for those who trust him today.

Naphtali: Naphtali was a tribe that lived true to its blessing. Like a doe finds freedom by the strength of its hind legs and escapes capture, this proved to be the destiny of this tribe. It was known for its wrestling, and the blessing entailed upon it signifies prevailing; it is a hind let loose. The same is true for believers today who have the spirit of Naphtali; to be escape the troubles and discord of life. Those who have this spirit seem to escape the worries and musings that trouble others, as if they were propelled by spirit hind legs that help them to retreat from the troubles of the world and find peace with God. For Naphtali, this blessing was a gift. To those who have the spirit today, it is also a blessing.

Joseph: The tribe of Joseph was very large and full. Joseph is compared to a fruitful young tree; for God had made him fruitful in the land of his affliction. His two sons were as branches of a vine, or other spreading plant, running over the wall. More is recorded in the history of Israel concerning Joseph than concerning any other of Jacob's sons; and therefore what Jacob says of him is historical as well as prophetical. Joseph was the object of the special love of Jacob and was blessed accordingly. Today, God has no special children to which he gives coats of many colors. Everyone of God's children is special in his eyes. In response to his love we can expect the blessings that Joseph enjoyed. He and his children were blessed, despite family troubles, hard times and even imprisonment. When we are the loved of God, despite our circumstance, God will raise us too.

Benjamin: The blessing of Benjamin was that his would be a warlike tribe, strong and daring, and that they should enrich themselves with the spoils of their enemies- that they should be active and busy in the world, and a tribe as much feared by their neighbors as any other. There was something special about the people of Benjamin. Most of them were left handed and they were respected. From Benjamin came Ehud the second judge, and Saul the first king, were of this tribe; and so also in the last times Esther and Mordecai, by whom the enemies of the Jews were destroyed, were of this tribe. Even St. Paul was of this tribe. There are many of us today, who live on the left hand side of life, but God can bless and use us to build the kingdom. Like Esther, he can raise us up for "Such a time as this." Like Paul, he can give us strength to "fight the good fight and finish our course." As we build the kingdom today, we should keep the vigor and passion of Benjamin in mind and let our work and energy earn the respect of those who watch as we build the kingdom of God.

God is the cornerstone

Finally, we should remember that God is building a heavenly kingdom, in which each saint is a living stone and a living sacrifice.

The kingdom of God, though built with living stones, must have a cornerstone.

It does not matter what tribe you represent or where your stone is placed in the wall of faith, as long as Jesus is the cornerstone of your hope.

The cornerstone is the foundation upon which the kingdom is built.

The corner piece of the kingdom of God is the same stone that the builders rejected!

The corner stone of our hope is not made of bricks or mortar.

The corner stone of our trust cannot be affixed to the edge of a building!

The corner stone of our faith is the substance of our hope!

The Lord is the justification for our faith!

The Lord is the chief corner stone of my hope!

I heard the song writer declare, "The only hope we have is in Christ Jesus. Confusion is great in the world today. Persecution my come with such a heavy weight but we have this hope and it''s in Jesus!"

Jesus, somebody here today knows him!

Jesus, the Lily of the valley!

Jesus, the Bright and Morning star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and rose up early Sunday morning!

No wonder the songwriter declared, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand...

All other Ground!

All other Ground is sinking sand!

Dig My Ditch

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 18, 2007

SCRIPTURE:" And he said, Thus saith the LORD, Make this valley full of ditches. For thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not see wind, neither shall ye see rain; yet that valley shall be filled with water, that ye may drink, both ye, and your cattle, and your beasts. And this is but a light thing in the sight of the LORD: he will deliver the Moabites also into your hand." 2 Kings 3:16-18

Introduction

Has anyone every dug a ditch and intended it for you? Digging ditches has a negative connotation in many areas of the nation because the phrase generally means that a person who digs a ditch for us is attempting to entrap us in some way. They want us to fall. They want our progress to stop. Usually our enemies dig ditches and hope we will fall into them, like hunted animals, and meet our death. Over the years, thanks to the grace of God, many have avoided life's ditches.

What it means to dig ditches depends on the purpose. In warfare a ditch may be a short hold in the ground that may be filled with pointed poles designed to entrap an enemy. In olden days an enemy that attacked would fall into the ditch and be pierced by the pointed poles. Thus, those who dug ditches in this context were attempting to defeat those that they perceived as enemies, whether the perception was real or imagined.

A long ditch is called a trench. Trenches were often used for protection against enemies. Soldiers in battle often dug trenches on the front lines to protect themselves against mortars and the gunfire of an enemy. In this context the ditch was a shield rather an instrument used to destroy and enemy.

In medieval times, the Lords often built huge castles. Around the castles were deep ditches that were filled with water. These ditches were called moats. They protected those inside the castle from attack.

Ditches even mean different things in different parts of the country. In the South poor neighborhoods are marked by the presence of drainage ditches in front of homes and huge drainage ditches and pump stations located near residential areas. If the ditches are clogged a person who comes to clear our ditches is welcomed. The crew that cleans the ditch in advance of a rainy spell is actually invited to "dig my ditch." If you dig my ditch my water will flow and there won't be a flood in my yard.

There are parts of the country that fight over ditches. For example, in Colorado where water is scarce, it is illegal for a landowner to stop someone from coming onto his property for the purpose of clearing or digging out a ditch to help water to flow. In fact, in Colorado, your ditch can run through my land but I don't have a right to use any of the water in it or from it. Digging ditches and diverting water is a big issue in a state where ditches are used to move water from one place or another.

What if God told the saints, that he was going to bless us but to get his blessing we would have to deal with a few ditches? Could you handle that? Suppose God said, not only will you face ditches but you must dig your own ditch, if you want his help; could you handle that? If God said something like that would digging a ditch be a good thing or a something that would hurt us?

As Christians, we know that those who trust in the Lord will be guided by his directions. Even if he told us to dig our own ditch, we know that it would ultimately work to our advantage because he seeks only to save and strengthen us. If God tells us to dig our own ditch the response of the real believer is, "How deep and how wide?"

Exposition

This text focuses on a prophecy of Elisha in which believers are told to dig ditches and receive a blessing.

The circumstance of this text is that Jehoram, son of the evil King Ahab and Queen Jezebel, had formed an alliance with Jehoshaphat and the King of Edom to quell a rebellion by the king of Moab. Enroute to their battle the three kings wandered in the wilderness of Edom so long that their combined army was almost devastated from thirst.

They learned that the prophet Elisha was in the company and begged him to ask God for a blessing for them. At first, Elisha refused to help Jehoram. He told the king to appeal to the prophets of his father Ahab and his mother Jezebel. However, for Jehoshaphat's sake, he asked God for direction.

After hearing from God Elisha ordered them to dig many ditches to hold the water that woud come the next day without wind or rain.

He moreover predicted that Moab would be utterly defeated. Everything that Elisha prophesied actually happened and God's promise was fulfilled.

Because they dug their ditches, they had water to drink and achieved a great victory.

Ditch Digging

ASK GOD BEFORE WE ACT: 2 Kings 3:6-8 indicates that the King of Israel asked two other kings to help him fight a battle. They went up together to fight, but there is no record where they asked God first. Verse 9 says they, "fetched a compass" which means they went around in circles for seven days. When they ran out of water and had no other alternative, then they started looking for a way to talk to God.

Often, the humanity in us leads us to take matters in our own hand. Our humanity often overpowers our spirituality. Just as the kings acted without consulting God we often do the same. Without God's guidance they wandered in the desert for seven days going around in circles.

The same happens to us today when we lean toward our senses, knowledge and experience without asking God for direction. In business, education, relationships and life in general, all too often we act first and pray after we have walked around in circles for several days, months or even years. The bible encourages us to "trust in the Lord and lean not unto our own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy path."

If the matter concerns our finances, pray and ask God for Guidance first!

If the matter concerns our family, pray and ask God first!

If the matter concerns our relationship or marriage, pray and ask God first!

Don't act, get lost, then look for God to show you the way out. Precious time is lost wandering. God will answer, but he will not give back the years we lost wandering in the wilderness. It is best to ask God before we act.

DO WHAT HE TELLS YOU TO DO: The kings asked Elisha to talk to the prophet and shortly afterwards the prophet gave them an answer from God: "Make this valley full of ditches." It sounded very weird. They were told to dig an entire valley full of ditches, but they were also told that there would be no wind or rain or storms to fill the ditches. It seemed like an exercise in futility.

Even today, obedience to God can seem like a futile exercise. That's where trusting God comes in the picture.

There are some things that God tells us to do that seem very difficult and impractical such as loving our enemies, doing good to those who despitefully use us, or giving the person who sues us for our shirt our coat as well. Those are difficult, but sometimes what God asks us to do even seems impractical. It seems a waste of time to keep calling a business about a job when they have turned us down every week for the last 10 weeks. It seems illogical to give food to others when we have very little for ourselves. It definitely doesn't make sense to dig ditches in a dried up valley.

Proverbs 14:12 says, "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man; But the end thereof are the ways of death." If we want to survive and thrive in this world we must learn to follow God's way. If God says, "Make this valley full of ditches" then get out of the way and let me "dig my ditch."

It seemed silly to Naaman to wash himself seven times in the muddy waters of a river. But when he did what God ordered him to do, he came up a healed man.

When the widow woman needed money to keep her house afloat, God answered her with what seemed to be a very dumb response which was to go her neighbor and borrow as many empty vessels as she could and put them all over her house. In the morning she found every vessel full of expensive oil.

It made little sense to the host of the wedding to fill jugs with water when what they needed was wine. But they did it and water turned to wine.

If God says dig a ditch, dig the biggest widest ditch you can dig and then get ready for God to do his thing.

DON'T WORRY HOW GOD WILL DO IT: The scripture never told us how God performed this miraculous deed. He never told them how water would come in the ditches without rain or wind or through any of the usual ways; he just willed it to be so.

Likewise, we don't know how God plans to open that door that closed in our faces, We just know that he has the power to do it.

God is sovereign. He can respond anyway that he pleases. If we are sick he can heal us through a doctor or a hospital or without any medical instruments whatsoever he can will to be so. He can resolve our financial crises by giving us a great job or he can will a settlement to come your way that was completely unexpected.

The water that filled the ditches did not come in the usual way, but God filled the ditches. A promise from God is a promise received.

God moves in mysterious ways his wonders to perform.

We don't quite know how he will do it, we know that God can work it out!

We don't know how Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead after four days, we just know he did it!

We don't know how the woman with the issue of blood was healed by just touching the hem of his garment, we just know that he did it!

We don't know how the man who was blind from birth was able to see, we just heard him say, "I was once blind, but now I see."

Trust God to the point that you may not know how he will do, but you know the Lord will make a way somehow.

There is more to come

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that God told these kings that if they would make ditches in the valley, there was even more to come.

Look at how easy it was for God to respond to their needs. Verse 19 says, "And this is but a light thing in the sight of the Lord."

To the men thirsty in the desert it was a heavy situation, but God says, "this is but a light thing in the sight of the Lord."

Today, we are struggling to keep or heads above water, but God says, "this is but a light thing in the sight of the Lord."

To us the monthly house note and utility bill is a heavy burden, but God says, this is but a light in the sight of the Lord."

To us the frustrations of keeping a relationship together is a troublesome load, but God says, this is but a light thing in the sight of the Lord."

Our health is failing, but even that is a light thing!

Our career challenge is not taking off, but even that is a light thing!

Our personal goals seem to be bogged down, but even that is a light thing!

When you think about it, all God wants us to do is to trust him and make the first steps. He wants us to make ditches in the valley. He wants us to do all that we know how to do, "then take your burdens to the Lord and leave them there."

If God says make ditches in the valley, the man of faith does not grab a hand trowel; he makes sure that he gets the biggest shovel he can find; even a backhoe.

When your enemies see you digging a ditch, that is, you are walking by faith; they think you are silly because they don't understand!

They don't know like we know that when God gets ready, he doesn't need the thunder, the wind or the rain, he showers us with blessings.

When Noah spent a hundred years building the ark, the people laughed but he was digging his ditch!

When Jabez asked God to expand his territory, it looked impossible, but he was digging his ditch!

When Abraham acted on faith and put his son on the altar, it looked fanatical, but he was digging his ditch.

I don't know about you, but when God tells me to make ditches in the valley and get ready for a blessing, I tell the world… get out of my way and let me dig my ditch!

When Jesus came into the world people tried to stop him, they thought they were digging his ditch, but he was digging my ditch! He was getting ready to bless me!

When they arrested him in the garden, they thought they were digging his ditch, but he was digging my ditch!

When they whipped him all through the night, they thought they were digging his ditch, but he was digging my ditch.

When they nailed him to an old rugged cross, he was digging my ditch!

When they stuck him in his side, that was a light thing in the sight of the Lord!

When they buried him in a borrowed tomb that was a light thing…because

Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Every day he's still blessing me!

Every day he's digging my ditch!

Christ is Worthy

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 2006

SCRIPTURE: Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created. Revelation 4:11

Introduction

Have you ever looked at the stars and the moon against the backdrop of clear summer night? If you have, there has probably been a time in your life when you were amazed with the power of God. He put everything in place. He fixed the stars in the sky and hung the moon and the sun.

Our God is an awesome God. The stars in our galaxy remind us just how great God is and how worthy he is to be praised.

Not only the stars, but when we look around the universe we see so many reasons that we should lift up God's name and give him praise.

He is worthy.

We don't need the Hubble telescope to peer into the emptiness of space to tell us that he is great; we realize it every time we see a shooting star flash across the horizon or gaze upon the big dipper and the little dipper. We know he is worthy.

As Christians, we too are fascinated with the beauty of the universe and with the stars, moon and sun. However, it is not these alone that excite us; it's our desire to know more about the one who made the universe. It is not the creation of the planets that fascinates us; it's the creator of the planets that captures our spirit. The more we know about him the more we conclude that he is worthy of our praise. Our quest is to know our God in a closer, more personal way each and every day.

Exposition

This text focuses on John's description of the glories of the Lord in his vision of the end times.

John received this vision while he was in exile on the Isle of Patmos. The entire book of Revelation covers a 1007 year period of time in which judgments will be released upon the world that remains, the Anti-Christ will rise, Satan will be locked up for 1000 years and the enemies of God will be defeated.

John's vision is a beautiful picture of what is in store for the saints. It is also a picture of what lies ahead for the ungodly.

Chapter four begins with a picture of John being called into a throne room where he sees three kinds of beings.

First, God the Father is described, ruling his universe in unquestioned sovereignty.

He also sees four living creatures that Ezekiel calls "cherubim." Ezekiel chapter 1 describes a very similar set of details to what we see in Revelations 4. Ezekiel saw a giant chariot with great wheels. He also saw four creatures with the same kind of faces that John saw. (Ezekiel 1:10)

The third kinds of beings that John saw were twenty-four elders. These individuals are not described clearly anywhere else in scripture. The elders are on thrones, as is God, and they are beautiful in appearance as he is.

Opening The Door

Chapter four of the Revelation explains to us in an undeniable way, that God is worthy of our praise. It shows us through sights and symbols of a vision how the very universe itself recognizes his greatness and pronounces that he is worthy to be praised. Verse by verse it explained to us in the context of his vision.

Verse one begins with the phrase "After This." What does mean? After what? It is a reference to the glories that had been revealed in chapter 1 and the messages to the seven churches which were given in chapters 2-3. After these things John saw a door opening and a voice saying "Come up hither."

The fact that John heard a voice parallels the experience of the Saints in 1 Thessalonians 4:16, they will hear a voice at the rapture. Also like John the saints will be transported into heaven (1 Thessalonians 4:17). Morever, like John, the Saints will hear a voice before being taken into heaven in the rapture (1 Cor. 15:52)

In verse two John says he was "in the spirit." It is a similar phrase which was also used by Ezekiel in Ezekiel 1:3 and 3:14. While in the spirit John was allowed to see, in vision form, the great throne room of God. It was surrounded by 24 elders who represented the tribes of Israel and the 12 apostles. These elders are not angels. In scripture angels are never shown wearing crowns or sitting on thrones.

Verse five makes references to thundering and lightnings proceeding out of the throne of God. This indicates the power and majesty of God represented by the awe and respect that thunder and lightning commands from every creature of the universe.

The seven lamps of fire represent God's continuous judgment and the seven spirits are the same ones referred to in Revelation 1:4.

While there are seven spirits, there are also seven aspects or characteristics of the Spirit of God. They are characterized in Isaiah 11:1-2. As you read this text you should note the seven aspects of the spirit: he rests on us, he gives us wisdom, he gives us understanding and counsel, might, knowledge and fear (respect). Those who claim to possess the spirit of God show these evidences of his presence on a daily basis.

In verse six, two phrases, “Sea of Glass” and “Four Beasts” appear. The sea of glass refers to the shiny floors of the throne room. They were so shiny that they appeared to be a sea of glass. The four beasts represent all of creation, which is usually the meaning of the number “four” in prophesy. Being full of eyes means all of God’s creation calling attention to his holiness.

All of these beasts that are listed in verses 6 and 7 represent all creation praising God for his holiness and greatness.

A great hymn of the church is based upon this passage. The words are: Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty. Early In the Morning Our Song Shall Rise To Thee; Holy, Holy, Holy, Merciful and Mighty. God in three Persons, blessed Trinity”

All creation, including the 24 elders, bows down before him. Even though they sit on thrones and wear crowns, they will cast their crowns before him. It is a picture of how all of creation will acknowledge the omnipotence of God.

John’s words make it clear why we should assemble ourselves and give him praise; because he is worthy! Listen at John’s words again:

“And when those beasts give glory and honor and thanks to him that sat on the throne, who liveth forever and ever,

The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him that liveth forever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying,

Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created!”

The testimony of every saint today should be the same as the majesty words of John..He is worthy!

He is worthy because he is good

Christ is worthy because he is good.

We see the goodness of God because we study his word. We cannot turn many pages without being reminded of the goodness of God.

Psalm 31:19, “Oh how great is thy goodness which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee.”

Psalm 100:5 “For the Lord is good, his mercy is everlasting and his truth endureth to all generations.”

Psalm 106:1, “Oh give thanks unto the Lord for he is good and his mercy endureth forever.”

Inherent in God’s goodness is mercy and grace. When God shows us mercy he goes beyond what is fair and gives us what we do not deserve, which is the benefit of his favor.

He’s worthy because he gives us strength when we should be weak!

He’s worthy because he gives us victory when we should suffer defeat!

He’s worthy because he gives us hope when we should be in despair!

He’s worthy because he gives us health when we should be crippled with sickness!

He's worthy because he gives us joy when we should be saddled with sadness!
He's worthy because he gives us peace when we should be filled with confusion!
He's worthy because he gives us faith when we should be sinking in doubt!

Christ is Worthy

Finally, brothers and sisters, John makes it clear that despite the presence of angels, cherubim, and elders, it is Christ who is worthy

Standing in the presence of God, he saw the great throne room of God, with floors shining like a sea of glass, and 24 elders sitting before him.

In his hand he held a book that was bound together with seven seals.

John lets us hear the thunderous voice of all creation ask the question, "Who is worthy to open the seals" that will pour out the wrath of God upon the world in the time of tribulation?

Who is worthy to usher in the closing events of this present age? Who is worthy?

None could answer for themselves, but all recognized the Lion of the tribe of Judah and the Root of David.

They were looking for the lamb.

Isaac, as he climbed to the top of the mountain of sacrifice asked Abraham his father: "Where is the lamb?"

As Jesus approached the River Jordan, John the Baptist declared for the entire world to hear: "Behold the lamb of God"

Now John in Revelation declares "Worthy is the lamb!"

The lamb is worthy because is both eligible and qualified!

Salvation required someone who was able to live a life without sin!

Salvation required someone who was able to bear the criticisms of men and suffer the sting of their hatred!

Salvation required someone willing to lay down his life in payment for the sins of the world!

Revelation 5:9 gives the answer "Thou are worthy ..for thou was slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people and nation.."

What makes the Lamb Worthy? Because he was "wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquity, and the chastisement of our peace is upon him, and with his stripes we are healed!"

What makes the lamb worthy? Because he and he alone has taken our:

—Darkness and turned it into light; Sadness and turn it into joy!

—Failure and turned it into success; Defeat and turned it into victory!

—Weakness and turned it into strength; Misfortunes and turned them into opportunities

He's worthy because one day he picked up an old rugged cross and carried it to Calvary! There he died!

But Early! Early, Sunday morning! He arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Speak Now or Forever Hold Your Peace

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 1, 2007

SCRIPTURE: "And he answered and said, I tell you that, if these shall hold their peace, the stones will cry out." Luke 19:40

Introduction

Has there ever been an occasion when you knew you should have said something but you didn't? If you are like most people there are many times in which you have felt the urge to say something that needed to be said but you just didn't do it.

There are times when we should have spoken against an evil, but chose to keep quiet. Those who speak against a popular but immoral practice will not be appreciated by the majority. In a society of thieves, a man who speaks against stealing is not very popular. In a society of crooks and cheats, the person who speaks against crookedness and cheating is often hated. When faced with the option to speak against evil and face possible ostracism by friends and co-workers, many choose to hold their peace.

There are also times when we should speak up. Those who witness crimes are often afraid to speak up. They know information that can help resolve a crime but they refuse to speak up. They are motivated in this instance by a desire to avoid involvement or interruption of their daily routines. When those who should testify refuse to do so often justice is miscarried. When faced with the request to testify to the truth, many choose to hold their peace.

There is a time and place to speak up. If we miss the window of opportunity, what we say amounts to very little. If we are sued, there is a prescribed amount of time for us to speak up and deny the claims, otherwise a judgment is entered. Many criminal offenses are governed by a statue of limitations that sets the length of time a person has to act. After the time passes; the case is closed. If we fail to speak at the right time, we lose the opportunity.

There is a component to traditional marriage ceremonies that asks whether any person in the audience knows any just cause why the couple should not be married to "Speak now, or forever hold your peace."

What if that proposition was reworded to read, "If anyone present knows any just cause why God should be praise, let him speak now or forever hold his peace." There would be many who speak up instantly. There are others that will remain silent.

Too frequently, concerned about public opinion, we keep the good news about what God has done for us quiet. We boast about the big fish we caught, our promotion on the job, and a host of other secular achievements. We can hardly wait to tell our story to others. It's as if we are ripping at the seams, and bubbling over, we have to tell somebody. If it's about the world we freely testify, but sometimes, if it is about God, we are reluctant.

How often it is that those who know God best fail to tell of his goodness to their friends and are ashamed to let others know that are trying to obey his will in every respect.

Trying to hold back praises to God is difficult, for God will be praised.

As Christians, we should always be ready to speak up for the Lord. We should be ready to testify, that God is good all the time and all the time God is good.

Exposition

Our text first considers Jesus on the occasion of his entry into Jerusalem, the final leg of his journey to Calvary.

His arrival sparked considerable interest since the Sanhedrin Council had concluded that he must die as result of increasingly attractive and Persuasive miracles that, in their eyes, did good but divided the people at the same time. The healing of an impotent man on the Sabbath (John 5), A blind man on the Sabbath (John 9:16) and the raising of Lazarus from the dead had attracted many people to Jesus who viewed him as the one person who could unite them in battle against the Romans and restore the kingdom. The Sanhedrin plotted to kill Lazarus so that he would not be walking proof of Jesus' power and they plotted to have Jesus himself crucified.

Upon his entry into Jerusalem on Friday the 9th of Nisan (March-April) the People were ecstatic! They cut branches from palm trees, waved them and threw their coats along the way to welcome him as a conquering king.

The cried "Hosanna" "Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord." The Christian church recognizes this event as the day of the Palms and celebrates it each year on the Sunday preceding Easter as "Palm Sunday."

When he entered the city, the scribes and Pharisees saw the crowds and were visibly upset that his followers were shouting and praising him for his Lordship. They warned Jesus to tell his disciples to be quiet. That's when Jesus declared to them that if they were to be silent the very rocks would cry out to him.

It was ironic however, because by Wednesday morning, Nisan 14 (The day before Passover), that same crowd that was shouting "Hosanna" a few days earlier now shouted and cheered when he was nailed to a cross.

If he has helped You, Speak Now!

One reason that people shouted for Christ is because he had helped them. He had healed a blind man and raised Lazarus. They had something to shout about.

In a similar sense, each believer should speak of for God, especially when we consider what he has done for us.

We can all remember times when we were caught between a rock and a hard place. Those were the times when we faced trouble on every side. During such times we found that all we could really do was to say like David,'' I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth.''

That's when we had nowhere to go but to the Lord.

We should speak now, because the world needs to know that God is still in the blessing business.

We should speak now, because the world needs to know that God still heals.

When we speak now, we acknowledge the fact that when we were powerless to help ourselves we called on the Lord and he helped us.

When we speak for him, we celebrate his divinity, and his infinite goodness.

When we speak for him, we celebrate his helpfulness.

When we speak for him, we celebrate his compassion.

We lift high his goodness for he is good and his mercy endureth forever.

If he has saved you, Speak Now!

In the crowd on the day of his triumphant entry, were many people who Jesus helped by healing them, but there were others who were speaking up for him because he saved them.

The woman at the well didn't wait for a crowd, she ran through the streets of the city saying, come see a man! The woman caught in adultery was another whose sins were purged. Voices like theirs were certainly intermingled in the crowds that shouted Hosanna.

Every believer should be willing to praise the Lord because he has purged us of our sins.

We speak now because he purged our sins. He wiped our slate clean. Isaiah 53 explained how it was done. He was "wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities……with his stripes we are healed."

Whenever we consider what we once were, we should be willing to testify that, "I'm not what I want to be. I'm not what I'm going to be, but thank God, because of Jesus, I'm not what I not what I used to be."

The simple truth of the matter is that the blood of Christ "purged" us of all of our sins. Think of it! No matter what we have been in the past has been wiped clean. It's gone. 1 Corinthians 6:11 reminds each of us that, "And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God."

We should speak now because he picked us up and turned us around!

We should speak now because he planted our feet on solid ground!

We should speak now because while we were yet sinners, he died for us!

Speak now, he's coming your way

The crowds gathered to greet Christ because he was coming their way. They wanted to see him and to be in his presence. They shouted for joy because the Lord was passing by.

Good things happen to us when the Lord passes our way.

A lame man who had been ill for 38 years found that he was able to walk when the Lord passed by.

A man who had been blind since his birth was able to see, when the Lord passed by.

A woman with an issue of blood for 12 long years was able was made who when she touched the hem of his garment. She received a healing with the lord passed by.

When the Lord passes our way, we don't want to be silent! We know if we can just get his attention he will call on us. When the Lord passes by is the wrong time to keep silent.

Perhaps that's what the song writer had in mind when he said, "Pass me not oh gentle savior. Hear my humble cry. While on others thou are calling, do not pass me by."

Those who need a blessing should cry out, "Savior, Savior hear my humble cry; while on others thou are calling, do not pass me by."

If you need a blessing, speak now..Savior!

If you need a healing, speak now..Savior!

If you need a new spirit, speak now..Savior! Hear my humble cry!

The best time is now

Finally, brothers and sisters we should remember that best time to testify to the goodness of the Lord is now!

When Jesus came into Jerusalem there were a lot of people shouting and giving testimony to his fulfillment of prophecy.

They spoke then! They did not wait!

Whenever the Lord has done something good for we should speak now!

Whenever we think about how God has blessed us, we should speak now!

Speak now, whenever we think about how God has picked us up and turned us around

Speak now when we think about how he brought us out of nowhere and carried us to somewhere.

Speak now and testify to what he has done.

Speak now and testify to what we expect him to do!

Speak now and testify to what he's been to us!

Every time you think about the mountains you've climbed and the valleys in your way, you ought to be ready to speak now!

If he's been a lawyer in your courtroom! Speak now!

If he's been a doctor in your sick room! Speak now!

If he's been a bridge over troubling waters! Speak now!

Speak now because though the crowds shouted, "Crucify him" he picked up an old rugged cross and shouldered the burden of my sin!

Speak now because out on Calvary, he died, that I might live!

Speak now because they buried him in a borrowed tomb..

But, early Sunday morning, arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

If God has been blessed you, you ought to speak now..or forever hold your peace!

We Shall Wear A Crown

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 8, 2007

SCRIPTURE: And they clothed him with purple, and platted a crown of thorns, and put it about his head:" Mark 15:17 "Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Revelation 2:10

Introduction

Have you ever been frustrated to the point that you felt yourself being crucified wearing a crown of thorns? Sometimes our troubles make us feel that way. We feel that instead of wearing a crown of victory, all we get is a crown of thorns. What are our thorns? Troubles, heartaches and disappointments; thorns!

Financial loss, relationship dysfunction, career failure; thorns! Depression, divorce and disease are just some of the thorns we deal with daily. Despite their troublesome nature, at least the thorny crowns we wear deal with our personal troubles. Suppose you had to wear such a crown for someone else? If you can understand that, then you can understand the enormity of the sacrifice Christ made for us on Calvary.

The crown of thorns that was placed on the head of Jesus has become an important symbol for Christians around the world. It symbolized his pain, agony and death. Christians see the crown of thorns as a symbol of his suffering on our behalf. For that reason there was considerable controversy in 2006 when rapper Kanye West appeared on the front cover of Rolling Stone magazine wearing a crown of thorns. Two months later Madonna opened her world tour by wearing a crown of thorns on the first night. Believers don't appreciate anything making a mockery of the thorns because they represent Christ's suffering for us.

Pieces of the crown of thorns have been passed down through generations. Many of the relics of Christendom began circulating around the world after the capture of Constantinople in the 13th Century. Among the relics were pieces of the cross, a bottled tear of Christ, blood from the cross, parts o the sponge and reed used to feed Jesus vinegar and the purple robe. Most precious was the crown of thorns, which was dismembered and given to different monarchs as trophies. In return for ten thousand pieces of silver the crown of thorns was sold to the kings of France by Baldwin III. Today several countries purport to have thorns that were on the original crown of the thorns. In France, the Notre Dame de Paris, displays the Crown of thorns (without the thorns) once each year on Good Friday. In Naples Italy, the Santa Maria Incoronata displays a fragment of the crown of thorns. The Cathedral in Barcelona Spain displays a single thorn; The United Kingdom, Belgium, Pisa Italy and several other places in Europe all claim to possess one or more of the thorns from the original crown.

The crown of thorns that Jesus wore at his crucifixion was a symbol of his suffering for us. It was a forerunner of the crown he would receive later as King of Kings. Those who faithfully follow him also expect to wear crowns similar to his. We expect to share his suffering and pain. We also expect to wear crowns of victory in heaven.

While Spain, France and England all claim to have thorns from the original crown, today true believers know that we also share the same thorny experience of Christ as we strive to live for him. We share his thorns, not with a thorn in a glass case, but through our own sacrifices and pain as we strive to live the Christian life.

Like the Apostle Paul who prayed that his "thorn" would be removed, we too have one or more thorns. Al though we have prayed for their removal God has seen fit to leave us one or two. The thorns that Christ wore were meant to demean, belittle and harm him, but they only lifted him higher toward his purpose. Likewise, our thorns were meant to cripple us, humiliate us, trouble us and break us, but they will become our badge of honor in the hands of God.

Every time a believer experiences a "thorn" we should remind ourselves that God takes thorns and turns them into jewels for our crowns.

As Christians, we are grateful for sacrifices Christ made for us. His crown of thorns will soon be replaced with a crown of glory. The message of the resurrection is that because he lives, we have hope. He came in humility, died and lives today. Like him, we shall wear both a crown of thorns and a crown of victory.

Exposition

This text focuses on the crown Jesus wore at his crucifixion. It also causes us to consider the crown of victory he will give all believers when he returns.

Three of the four evangelists, Matthew, Mark and John detail the crucifixion in a way that describes a crown of thorns that was placed on his head. The event takes place after the Lord's Supper and after Christ is arrested at the garden. He had been tried before Jewish leaders and was brought before Pilate for final judgment.

A large crowd had assembled and according to J. Vernon McGee, there were many individuals planted in the crowd with orders to begin a chant to crucify him. Pilate asked repeatedly what he had done to merit death. The hired chanters screamed louder "Crucify him!" At that point Pilate yielded to the demands of the crowd and washed his hands to the entire affair.

Christ was turn over to the soldiers, as was any criminal. The soldiers were brutal and misused prisoners sentenced to die. It was not unusual for the soldiers to torture prisoners and to play cruel games with them, designed to humiliate them. In Jesus' case the soldiers mocked him by placing a purple cloth around his shoulder, purple being the color of royalty. They placed a reed in his hand, then a crown of thorns on his head. It was the akanthine (Acanthus) crown, shaped like a wreath of victory but filled with thorns. They saluted him in mockery as they ridiculed him.

Later that morning both the purple robe was stripped from him and he was crucified wearing his own clothes, wearing a crown of thorns. After three days and three nights he arose in victory.

For Christ, the final victory will come when he returns from heaven surrounded by the hosts of heaven to defeat Satan and destroy this system as we know it today. Revelation 19:12 says when he returns he will be wearing, not one crown, but many crowns. After returning with his many crowns, believers who endure will be given a crown as well.

John, in Revelation 2:10, writes a word of encouragement to believers in the church at Smyrna. They were told that they may endure many trials and tribulations for the cause of Christ, including imprisonment for some of them. Yet despite the difficulties they faced, they were encouraged to keep the faith because those that endured to the end would be given a crown of life.

Our Crowns

In this life we are motivated by our desire to receive our crown in glory. It is this hope that is renewed when we celebrate the resurrection of Christ. With respect to our crowns the bible makes it abundantly clear that we shall be a crown and be crowned. We shall bear a crown of difficulty but we shall also wear a crown of victory in the end

WE ARE CROWNS: Isaiah 62:3 says, "Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the LORD, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God." The church is God's pride and joy. Each believer showcases God's handiwork. The prophet Isaiah made it clear that those who had ridiculed believers, doubted their faith and mocked them will be put to shame because believers are the crown of God's glory. God holds believers in his hand. Our very lives are in his hand. He heals us, blesses and protects us because we are "royal jewels" in his sight. We are children of the king. While there are times when we don't shine like we should, in fact we need a little rubbing to bring back our gloss; we are nevertheless jewels in the eyesight of the Lord. We are his crowning achievement. We are crowns in God's hand.

WE ARE CROWNED: Psalm 21:3 says, " For thou preventest him with the blessings of goodness: thou settest a crown of pure gold on his head." The word used for preventest means before he rises. David made it clear in this text that God crowns believers with blessings of goodness even while they are sleep (preventest); while we rise. The verse says before we rise God crowns us with good blessings. Before a true believer rises in the morning God has already crowned us to have a blessed day. Before we open our eyes. Before we get in the shower! Before we walk out the front door we have been crowned! The true believer doesn't have to ask for a blessing, it's automatic!

THERE WILL BE THORNY CROWNS: Mark 15:17 says, "And they clothed him with purple, and platted a crown of thorns, and put it about his head," It shows us that despite the fact that we are a crown, and wake up with a crown of blessings from God, there are evil people and circumstances in the world that will bring thorns into every life. The soldiers put the crown on Jesus' head but they did not act alone. The Sanhedrin council, Pontius Pilate, Herod, a lying witness, a friend who denied him, all worked together to put the thorns on his head.

Look at that!

He made the blind man see, but they gave him, a crown of thorns!

He made the lame man walk again, but they gave him, a crown of thorns!

He called Lazarus from the grave, but they gave Him a crown of thorns!

He fed the hungry and forgave men of their sins, but they gave Him a crown of thorns!

For all of His work and sacrifice, all He received was a crown of thorns to wear and an old rugged cross to bear!

We should not be naïve to believe that the devil leaves us alone because we become a Christian. He looks for ways to stick a thorn in our side. He searches for ways to destroy us and to make life miserable. For Christ the crown of thorns and the agony of the cross were part of the price that had to be paid. He could not achieve one without the other. Believers should remember if there is no cross there is no crown. If there is no pain there is no gain. Each time we are pricked by the thorns of life, we must remember that the thorn is necessary to get to the crown.

We shall Receive a Crown

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that because of the resurrection of Christ, we shall wear a crown of glory.

1 Peter 5:4 puts it this way "And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

It means that those who have been faithful to the cause of Christ will be rewarded. We shall wear a crown.

The crown that we plan to wear will be given to us by God himself and not man.

That's what happened to Jesus. The soldiers gave him a crown of thorns. It was a crown made by man.

When man gives you a crown he gives you a crown, it usually turns out to be a thorny crown. When man gives you a crown it usually turns out to be a:

—BURDEN, and not a blessing

—CANCER, and not a cure

—HINDRANCE, and not a help

—SORROW, and not a joy

—LOSS, and not a gain

—PAIN, and not a pleasure

—CONDEMNATION, and not a pardon

—TORMENT and not a treasure

They took Jesus, with a crown of thorns on his head, and marched him toward Calvary!

With a crown of thorns on his head, he who was:

—JUST suffered for the unjust; HOLY suffered for the unholy

—BEST suffered for the worst; HIGHEST suffered for the lowest

—DOCTOR suffered for the sick; LAMB suffered for the wolves

—MASTER suffered for the servants; KING suffered for the beggars

—PRINCE suffered for the paupers;

When they nailed him on the cross, he was wearing a crown of thorns!

When they pierce him in his side, he was wearing a crown of thorns!

When he dropped his head and died, he was wearing a crown of thorns!

But Early Sunday, morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

That Sunday morning he traded in the cross..

He traded in the crown of thorns…

And paid for our salvation!

No wonder the song writer declared, "So I'll cherish the old rugged cross. Till my trophies at last I lay down. I will cling to the old rugged cross and exchange it some day for a crown!

Because he lives we have hope for tomorrow!

Because he lives, one of these old days…

We shall wear a crown!

The Lord of the Rings

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE*: And they twain shall be one flesh: so then they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. Mark 10:8-9*

Introduction

Do you have a wedding ring? Do you want one? A great social ethic has developed in our society with respect to wedding rings. People who love each other to the point that they want to commit themselves to a lifelong relationship, wear wedding rings. One of the things that attracts women to wedding rings is the presence of one or more diamonds which dazzle and shine on their fingers. Some men have wedding bands made of gold, without the diamonds. Our fascination with rings grows is enormous. When we are in love we show them off. When we are in trouble, we pawn them. When our love turns sour, we never want to see them again.

Today we wear rings on our finger to indicate our marriage status; but it wasn't always that way. The wedding ring was part of a dowry and in the bible the first ring given for marriage was actually an earring. In Genesis 24:22 Abraham's servant was sent to find a wife for Isaac his son. The Lord led him to Rebekah and the initial token offered for her hand in marriage was a large golden ring and two bracelets. The King James Version calls it an earring. The other versions simply call it a ring.

Ring customs have changed over the years and vary from place to place. In Greece, a double ring ceremony presents a silver ring to the wife and gold ring to the husband. In ancient times the people of Pliny sent irons to the betrothed to indicate marriage intentions. Some rings were made of brass, others were made of copper. Some were circles worn on the hand but there were some that were shaped like keys. Some parts of Irish peasantry still believe that a marriage without a gold ring is not legal and that every real woman had a wedding by the time she was 13. The Amish and Quakers wear no rings because they have pagan origins. The Church of England requires a ring for its ceremonies, no matter what its material. In America brides and grooms wear rings of gold and silver on the fourth finger of the left hand because the ancients believed that there is a vein that runs from that finger directly to the heart which is the seat of love.

The rings symbolize a union that is forever. There are times when some forget what forever means. Consider the man who dreamed that he died and went to heaven with his two best friends. It was a beautiful place, but all three men made it there before their wives. The dreamer was met by a tall angel with a clipboard who was making transportation assignments. Since each new arrival was a sinner saved by grace, everyone in heaven received rewards based on their works in life. Transportation, in the dream was given based on one's faithfulness to his spouse. "Were you faithful to your wife?" The dreamer was asked. "Yes. I never cheated on her. See I'm still wearing my ring." As a reward for his faithfulness he was given a Rolls Royce. The angel met his two friends and asked the same question. The first friend said, "I cheated once. It caused us a great problem, but we worked it out. I'm still wearing my ring!" The angel smiled and said, "You can drive that SUV over there!" The second friend confessed that he had really been a bad boy. He chased every woman in town; but the last one was a preacher who made him repent; that's how he made it in. The angel frowned at a man who cheated on his wife so much, but since he was saved by grace he was given a small Volkswagen bug to use with no gas card. Considering their pasts, all three men felt good about themselves. One day the dreamer parked his Rolls Royce against a cloud and cried like a baby. His friends asked why he was so sad. "I saw my wife today?" His friends were happy. She made it in, too. "Was she still wearing her ring?" The dreamer nodded his head but started crying. "Why are you still crying?" The man looked at his friends and said. "She was not wearing my ring and she was riding a skate board!"

J.R.R. Tolkien wrote a series of books that were later made into movies called "Lord of the Rings." It was based upon ancient beliefs that there were Ring Lords who controlled the world by the possession of a set of rings. Tolkien said, there was "one ring to rule them all, one ring to find them; one ring to bring them all and in the darkness bind them." It was believed that he who had the rings had to power to rule, bind and control.

Today, we give and exchange rings in engagement and marriage, but who is "The Lord of the Rings?" What power controls, directs, binds and motivates our marriages? Who is it that brings us together, finds us and binds us?" We have rings, but who is the Lord of the rings?

As Christians, we have one Lord and one savior and he is Jesus Christ. He has loved us with an unconditional love that makes him supreme in our lives. He is the Lord of our lives and the Lord of our rings.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus teaching that God himself is the Lord of Christian marriages.

The text notes that there is but one Lord of a union that has been created by God. God himself joined together a divinely sanctioned union.

He is the power that attracts them, builds them and sustains them. He has, in wisdom and goodness, appointed them who are thus joined together, to live together in love till death parts them.

Man did not invent the institution of marriage. It is a divine institution. It is to be religiously observed because it is a figure of the relationship between Christ and his church.

Because Christ will never leave his church, never abandon his church and always provide for his church, and the marriage relationship is symbolic of that union, marriages are forever. Just as Christ is Lord of the lives of every believer; he is also Lord of the Rings.

Who Is the Lord?

There are many today who wear wedding rings that are beautiful. The true value of the ring is not in how many carets that are in its diamond but in the symbolism that it represents. Initially the ring represents a promise made. But the ring also represents that entity you respect as the Lord of the Ring. The controlling power and influence of the marriage is the true Lord of the ring. Each believer must ask the question: Who is Lord of my ring?

CONVENIENCE SHOULD NOT BE LORD OF THE RINGS: There are many couples who marry out of convenience. In this instance the marriage is based on something other than love. King Solomon had about 300 wives and 700 concubines. Each of his 300 marriages was for the purpose of convenience. If he married the daughter of an opposing King he avoided war with her father and won an ally. He had no real interest in her, just the convenience the relationship provided. Today, there are many who marry for convenience. Some are look for a maid, cook or a sugar daddy. Like some immigrants who come to this country and marry for sole purpose of getting a green card and a right to stay here there many others who marry for convenience. Convenience is the Lord of the rings. It dictates everything. When it is no longer convenient the marriage dissolves because it was not based on real love.

SEX SHOULD NOT BE THE LORD OF THE RINGS: There are many who marry for the benefit of intimacy. Samson had an unusual sexual attraction to Philistine women. He married one and had a career ending relationship with another named Delilah. His carnal attractions drove him to do things that were fatal for him. That attraction became his Lord. Even today, there are many who marry only for intimacy. Every decision in their lives is based its effect on their intimate moments. When intimacy becomes the overriding concern of a marriage then sex becomes the Lord of the Rings. But if health or some other factor interferes with intimacy; the Lord of the Rings is suddenly incapable of keeping a couple together.

MONEY SHOULD NOT BE THE LORD OF THE RINGS: If a couple marries with financial concerns as their primary reason for unity, it is a formula for disaster. 1 Timothy 6:11 says, “For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.” It’s a simple way of saying that when money and money concerns become the reasons for our actions and decisions it is an invitation for sorrow. Too many marry because he has money and or she has money. Some marry because of the potential for money and much divorce over dispute involving money or lost financial potential. When money becomes the Lord of the Rings, it will prove powerless to help couples to navigate the rapids of troubling times. Money as Lord of the Rings cannot save the ship from sinking, but those onboard who blindly seek it or vainly try to guard it, go down with them ship and increase their sorrows.

It's not in the ring but the Lord

Finally, brothers and sisters, when believers see the rings that symbolize the sacred trust, our joy is not in the ring but in the Lord of the Rings.

Rings alone are meaningless. They are just bands of gold. The real power is not in the rings, but in the Lord of the Rings.

If convenience is not the Lord of the rings; and neither is sex or money; who is the Lord of the rings?

Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God must be the Lord of the Rings. He is the only ring lord who is able to deliver us.

The wedding ring worn by a marriage partner symbolizes a vow made between them. However, it also symbolizes a trust in God.

Marriages that are built upon an unfaltering trust in the Lord, will survive any storms that the world brings because we put our trust in him.

We don't place our trust in our rings, but in the Lord of the rings.

The man who wears a ring may sometimes act the fool; that's why we keep trusting in the Lord of the rings.

The woman who wears the ring may raise suspicions and doubt.; that's why we keep trusting in the Lord of the Rings.

When we trust in the Lord we don't worry about the frustrating turns that the road of life offers!

Guided by Lord of the rings, we walk by faith knowing that the Lord will make a way!

Standing in our way might be a:

-Desert, but God will provide an Oasis in the wilderness. It's not in the ring but the Lord!

-Hunger, but God will provide a table in the presence of our enemies! It's not in the ring but the Lord!

-Unbelievable odds, but God will help us to achieve the impossible. It's not in the ring but the Lord!

Those who trust in God:

-Think the unthinkable; Reach for the unreachable!

-Believe he unbelievable; Hope for the imaginable

-Live for the incredible; Achieve the improbable!

Those who trust in God know that all things are possible!

Maybe that's why the song writer wrote: I will trust in the Lord, I will trust in the Lord until I die!"

Why is Christ the Lord of the Rings? He is Lord of the rings because he has demonstrated real love. He has shown us the meaning of love.

He is Lord of the rings because he loves us with a love that is —higher than the heavens —deeper than the oceans

—lovelier than the sunsets
—sweeter than the honeycomb —stronger than the wind
—fresher than the morning dew

He is Lord of the rings because he loves us with a love that cannot be:

—measured for it is immeasurable
—described for it is indescribable
—evaluated for it is invaluable
—comprehended for it is incomprehensible
—explained for it is unexplainable

He is Lord of our lives because when we were too stubborn to love ourselves, he first loved us!

He is Lord of our lives because when we thought we were beyond forgiveness he gave himself for us!

He is Lord because one day he picked up an old rugged cross and went to Calvary!

He is Lord because he hung on a cross to bless us and benefit us.

He is Lord because he died so that sin would not penetrate and saturate us

He is Lord because early, Sunday morning he arose to glorify and magnify us!

Because he is Lord, not just of rings but lives, he blesses us every day!

When Women Pray

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 2007

SCRIPTURE: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." 2 Chronicles 7:14

Introduction

Should women pray? While the church world is divided over the role of women in the church, there is no question that women, as well as all believers, should pray.Why should women pray? Women should pray because prayer is the key to kingdom and faith unlocks the door. Women should pray because their families count on them to be connected with God. Women should pray because the task before them each day requires them to be fully prayed up to successfully accomplish their goals.

When should women pray? The Word of God says all believers should pray unceasingly. That means we pray all of the time. In the morning, we pray. While we are driving our automobiles, we pray. At night, we pray. During all of the times in between, we pray.

Where should women pray? We should pray whenever and wherever the spirit moves. Elijah prayed on a mountain top. Jonah prayed in the belly of a whale. Noah prayed in a ship. Jesus prayed in a garden. There is no special place for us to pray. The old warriors once sang a song that said, "Every time I feel the spirit, moving in my heart, I will pray!"

What should women pray for? All believers should pray that God's will would be accomplished in their lives. In that respect we pray that God would guide us in the direction that will help us to realize his will. Jesus prayed and simply said, "Not my will, but thy will be done." Women should pray that God's will would be done.

Jesus tells us that if we abide in him and he abides in us that we can ask whatever we want and it will come to pass. Once immersed into his will, what we ask is only that what he wants us to have. Since what we pray for will help us to carry out his will, then it will be granted.

As Christians, we have learned how to place our lives in God's hands. When we pray we say to God that we are willing to humble ourselves before him, repent and seek his face. He has promised us that when we do that that, he will hear us and heal our land.

Exposition

This text focuses on God's response to a prayerful request for the presence of God by the children of Israel.

Solomon constructed a great temple that was to become the literal house of God. He prayed prayers to God that the building would be consecrated for the presentation of their sacrifices to God. It would be a very holy place of worship. God seemed to answer the prayer when mysteriously a fire from heaven ignited the altar in the temple. It appeared that God had answered their prayer.

The real answer to the prayer came later in the night, as Solomon slept. That's where verse 14 takes place. God spoke to him in a dream and gave Solomon the details associated with the answer to their request. The people asked for forgiveness, healing, and salvation. They saw the fire and took it to be the sign. The fire was symbolic of half the promise. Acquiring the other half would be the responsibility of the people. To keep the fire of God's presence going, symbolizing the healing of their land, the people would be required repent and turn from their wicked ways and to continuously seek the mercy of God.

Their initial prayer brought the first fire from heaven. However, it would be their continual prayer, repentance and dependence on God that would keep it going, symbolizing the healing of the land. Only the introduction of "strange fire" would interrupt the flow of God's blessings.

Thus, the prayer of the people attracted the presence of God on the national scene. However, verse 14 makes it clear that national prayer, plus repentance and humble, holy living would be required to keep that fire going, bringing true healing to the land. God expects that his people, who are called by his name, if they have dishonored his name by their iniquity, should honor it by accepting the punishment of their iniquity. They must humble themselves under his hand, and pray for the removal of the judgment, and seek the face and favor of God; and yet all this will not do unless they turn from their wicked ways and return to the God from whom they have revolted.

Women should pray

We should listen closely to God's words to Solomon because in them lies a great truth. If we want to heal our family, our community and our nation, we must pray, seek God's face and turn from our wicked ways.

We can't pray without repentance and humility before God. Therefore, we must acknowledge that real prayer is needed. Real prayer will be associated with repentance.

God called on Solomon to be a king of prayer. He's calling on women and every believer, to be men and women of humble, repentant, prayer as well.

WOMEN SHOULD SURRENDER TO GOD: When believers pray to God we draw nigh to him and humble ourselves before him. When we draw close to God he will meet us half way, and meet us at our coming. Staying close to God is not as easy it seems. There are things that we do to stay close. To stay close to someone we want to be in their presence, talk with them, listen to them, and share experiences with them. It is a natural tendency for us to be drawn to those who want to be around us and to shy away from those who don't want to be close to us. In this respect, God is the same way. He is close enough to us to know our needs, sense our weakness and to respond to us in the nick of time. We are close enough to him to know his will, appreciate his love and give him praise. That's why the songwriter wrote, "Draw me nearer, nearer blessed Lord to the cross where thou has died. Draw me nearer, nearer blessed Lord, to thy precious bleeding side."

PRAYING WOMEN SPEAK TO THE ROCK: Women who place their hopes and trust in God know that when they pray they speak to the Rock of Ages. In the wilderness, Moses was told to speak to the Rock and He would bring forth the water. In the same sense, women have learned through that there is power in talking to the Lord.

Our families have survived many difficult times because it learned how to talk to the Lord.

Hezekiah was appointed to die, but 15 more years were added to his life, after he spoke to the Rock.

Elijah brought down fire from heaven and consumed the prophets of Baal, after he spoke to the Rock.

Peter and John were able to heal the sick and perform great miracles, after they had a little talk with the Rock.

The history of the church is filled with examples of believing men and women who weathered difficult times because they learned the art of speaking to the rock.

It has been the experience of many that when the church talked to the Lord, he heard its cries.

Perhaps that is what prompted Dr. Watts to write, "I love the Lord, he heard my cries and pitied every groan. Long as I live while trouble rise I'll hasten to his throne."

Maybe that is what the songwriter had in mind when he wrote, "What a friend we have in Jesus; all our sins and griefs to bear. What a privilege it is to carry everything to God in prayer."

Women who speak to the rock know what the songwriter meant when he said, "Just a little talk with Jesus makes it right."

He will hear us when we pray

Finally brothers and sisters, women should note that as long as we are children of God we and we are called by his name; he will hear us when we pray.

If my people! Listen at that!

If my people, those who are washed in the blood of the lamb!

If my people, those who are climbing up the king's highway!

If my people, who are on the battlefield for the Lord!

If my people, who are called by name, shall humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven and will forgive their sins and will heal their land!

If we come before God in humility and repentance, he will hear us.

When we come we should come looking for mercy and grace!

We come to the throne of God, looking for grace although we don't deserve it. We come in confidence that God will look beyond our faults and see our needs.

Praying women who are called by God come before his throne seeking his mercy and his grace.

His grace is sufficient for:

—The poor, no matter how pathetic their poverty.

—The tired, no matter how feeble their steps.

—The burdened, no matter how exhausted their body.

—The lonely, no matter how pitiful their situation.

—The wretched, no matter how despairing their circumstance.

—The sick, no matter how painful their diseases.

Grace can:

—Take heavy burdens and make them bearable.

—Take high mountains and make them climbable.

—Take deep valleys and make them crossable.

—Take lonely nights and make them livable.

—Take lost souls and make the savable.

I heard a song writer say, "Amazing Grace how sweet the sound that saved a wretch like me!"

We come before the throne of God looking for Grace!

We come before the throne of God looking for Jesus.

If you you're looking for Jesus you can find him by simply opening your heart and calling on him and he will come when you need him and he's always on time!

Call on the name of Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who was buried in a borrowed tomb!

Jesus, who arose from the grave early Sunday morning!

Call him! Call him!

And he will hear from heaven and heal our land!

Rebounders

SCRIPTURE: "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit." Psalm 51:12

Introduction

Have you ever faced a high goal, took your best shot and missed? Very few of us have ever been 100 percent successful in every endeavor. Even the best of us have missed a few goals, somewhere along the line. Our team doesn't always win. Our cause does not always arise victorious. Our plans do not always succeed. Our investments do not always pay off. Our dreams are not always realized; at least the way we envisioned them. When we give life our best shots and miss; we can respond in one of two ways. We can sulk and wallow in despondency or we rebound, regain control and mount another effort.

It's important to take your shot in life, but it's equally important to be prepared to rebound, if you miss.

A rebound in basketball is the act of successfully gaining possession of the basketball after a missed field goal or free throw. We often hear about great basketball legends like Michael Jordan, Wilt Chamberlain and Allan Iverson who seem to score about 30 points in every game with very little effort. What we don't hear much about are some of the most important players on a basketball team; it's rebounders. These are men such as: Wilt Chamberlain, Bill Russell and Bob Pettit. They specialize in saving bad shots and recovering missed shot by other players.

There are two types of rebounds: There is a defensive rebound. This person capitalizes on an opportunity that has been missed by others. When Joseph was thrown into a pit and later into prison by his brothers out of sibling jealousy; he rebounded from their action and rose to become the Minister of Agriculture of Egypt. That was a defensive rebound.

There is also an offensive rebound. This is person who bounces back after his own missed opportunity. When Samson erred by trusting the secret of his strength to Delilah he missed his shot at destroying an enemy of God. However, in the end, though blinded and captive he rebounded after his own mistake and brought down more Philistines at once than he had ever done before. Peter was a strong supporter of Christ until one night he showed cowardice by denying him three times in the same night. He rebounded from that one weak night to become one the strongest champions of the Christian cause.

When it comes to basketball there is no name that can equal the name of Wilt Chamberlain. Wilt Chamberlain led the NBA in rebounds in 11 different seasons, has the most career rebounds in the regular season (23,924), the highest career average (22.9 rpg), the single season rebounding records in total (2,149) and average (27.2 rpg), most rebounds in a regular season game (55) and playoff game (41) in the NBA, has the most career All-Star Game rebounds (197). That's a powerful record on the basketball court.

In matters of faith in God what is your rebound average? When opportunities missed by others opened themselves to you, did you act on them? When you missed your shot at a special goal did try again or give up. Were you able to bounce back from a failure, setback or disappointment or did it cost you the game?

As Christians, we know that we serve the God of the second chance. Through his grace if we fall down, slip or miss our chance, we can rebound through his power and become all that he wants us to become.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he asks God to help him rebound from a tragic error that cost one man his life and brought shame on the nation. This psalm is the result of an instance in David's life which he made a major error despite being given a golden opportunity.

David was on his palace roof one day when the army had gone out to battle and he saw a beautiful woman bathing herself. He entered into an adulterous relationship with her for she was a married woman. Her husband, Uriah, was a soldier in the king's army. He was away from home fighting for his nation.

A love child was conceived in the relationship and David panicked and tried to cover it up David ordered Uriah to be put in the forefront of the battle where he would most certainly be killed. When news of Uriah's death reached the king he felt he had safely covered his sin. In Psalm 32 David records how he felt during that terrible time when he was trying to cover up his sin. "When I kept silence," he says, "my bones grew old through my groaning all day long. For a year he tried to live with a bad conscience. But, as the story records, God sent a prophet to David. God loved this king, loved him too well to let him go on covering up and thus damaging himself and his entire kingdom by this hidden sin. So God sent the prophet Nathan to David.

Nathan approached David in a way that he could not deny and singled him out as the man responsible for both adultery and murder. In a prophetic moment the prophet Nathan pointed a finger at the king and said, "Thou art the man!" David knew then that his sin was uncovered.

At this point David recognized for sure that he had fumbled. He fell on his face before God and out of his remorse came the fifty-first Psalm. He asked God for forgiveness. Once restored, he rebounded to become the greatest King in Israel's history.

Rebound: Regain the Initiaitive

Despite our best intentions there are times when our best attempts fail. We give life our best shots and they miss. Those are the times that we must remember to rebound. When we rebound we regain the offensive. We take the initiative again. We regain control of our lives.

There are times when it appears that everything is going wrong. When that happens we must remain positive and plan to rebound. If we don't rebound our lives will always be on the defensive.

Barely making it every day is a defensive action.

Keeping things from falling apart is a defensive action.

Just trying to survive is a defensive action.

To rebound is go beyond playing defense. We have to get on the offensive in order to win in the game of life.

Whether it is your career, family, relationship or business the ability to rebound is what makes the difference.

Great rebounders take whatever comes their way, hurl themselves at the ball, and take possession of it for the sake of the team.

Our challenge is to let the power of God use us in a way that we rise above any obstacles that come our way. No matter what hits us, we keep getting back up.

If the world hits us with defeat, let's rebound with an attitude of victory.

If the world hits us with failure, let's rebound with determination to succeed.

If our relationship misses the goal; let's rebound by giving it another shot.

Redound: Do something that counts

If you watch a basketball player closely you'll notice that it's not enough to rebound the ball. After he regains possession of the ball he must do something with the ball. Rebound is to get it back. Redound is to do something with it once you get it. To redound something is to get a result or have an effect.

When Peter failed Christ on the night of the trial, he had to rebound. But Peter went further, he became a redounder. He began to encourage and build the faithful in a way that helped the church to grow beyond its fondest imagination. When Paul redounded he became the greatest missionary and ambassador for Christ the world had ever seen. He went beyond just getting possession of missed opportunity, but he made a difference after he got another chance.

In basketball, it is extremely frustrating for one team member to work hard to get a rebound only to lose it because he cannot redound-or turn it into points on the board.

It's that way in life too. Many people get that second chance, that golden opportunity but find themselves unable to make it work for them. Opportunity literally falls in their laps but they can't redound!

To capitalize on a life that is rebounding from drugs, we redound by remaining drug free and helping others do the same.

To capitalize on a life that is rebounding from cancer, we must redound by giving hope to others by sharing our experience.

To capitalize on a marriage rebounding from trouble, we must redound by helping others who may be walking our once failed path.

To rebound is to come back, to redound is to make a difference with our comeback in the name of the Lord.

Abound: Get Right With God

When we rebound, and redound the result is to abound. To abound is to be filled or plentiful.

When David prayed to God, he prayed for restoration. He was making rebound, with a pledge to redound. His goal was to abound in the joy and salvation of the Lord. However, he knew that he could not do this unless he straighten things out with God. Herein lies the key to abounding. It's what David did.

When Saul prayed to God but when he prayed, his prayer was that God would save his reputation, despite his sin. When David prayed, he asked God to create a clean heart within him, regardless to the impact it might have on his reputation. He truly wanted to get right with God.

That's the final key to the three-fold rebounding process. Get right with God, regain the initiative and take steps to make it count.

A rebound makes little difference if the redound does not lead to abound.

What we want from a rebound is to abound again.

David said, "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation."

When David turned his life over to God he demonstrated to God that he was willing to give him another chance. He rebounded and lived out the remainder of his reign in the glory of the Lord. Not only did he rebound but he also abounded in the name of the Lord.

Resound

Finally, brothers and sisters, if God has given us a chance to rebound, redound, and abound, then we should be willing let our rejoicing resound loud as the rolling sea.

When something makes a lasting impact, when it lives in memory beyond the normal length of its days, when it reverberates beyond space and even time, we say that it resounds.

To resound something puts it on a grand scale.

How grand are the mighty works of God?

David, in Psalm 8:3-4 asked the same question when he said, "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, The moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; 4 What is man, that thou art mindful of him? And the son of man, that thou visitest him?

The greatness of his creation resounds to the battlements of heaven!

The greatness of his healing power resounds to the borders of the Promised Land!

The greatness of his restoration power resounds to the limits of the heavenly realm!

No wonder James Weldon Johnson would declare, “Let our rejoicing rise, high as the listening sky, let it resound, loud as the rolling sea.”

Because God has blessed us, our praises should resound!

That’s what the woman at the well did, she ran through the street saying, “Come see a man who told me all I’ve ever done.”

She let her praises resound!

Because God has plucked us from the very mouth of despair and given us a chance to rebound, we our praises should resound!

Because God has lifted our lives out of the miry clay and placed our feet on solid ground, our praises should resound with a thunderous roar of victory!

We should be glad to let our praises resound in every hill and valley! In every state and city!

“Bless the Lord, oh my soul and all that is within me, bless his holy name!”

I was down, but he me to rebound. More than that he helped me to abound!

We should be willing to tell the story!

Tell them about Jesus, whom they nailed to an old rugged cross!

Tell them about Jesus, who was crucified for our souls!

Tell them how they thought he was down until…early Sunday morning arose to make the rebound, gave us the faith to redound and sent the Holy Spirit to help us abound!

Thank God for the rebound!

Thank God for Jesus!

No. 9257-Mothers

Mother by Nurture

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 13, 2007

SCRIPTURE: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem." Isaiah 66:13

Introduction

Is there a difference between being a "baby mama" and a mother? The common term "baby mama" refers to a female who gave birth to a child. The term became popular in the Hip Hop Generation. It refers to a female who gives birth and that's all. The term mother implies more than just the act of birth. It implies that everything essential to a child's survival is provided: food, clothing, shelter, love, encouragement, environment, protection, education and motivation. The sum of all conditions and acts that influence a child's development is called nurture. A baby's mama is a mother by an act of nature. The real mother is a mother by nurture.

Sociologists have differed over the years as to the importance of nurture. Robert Pool, a U.S. Science journalist, says for three hundred years the idea that nurture is the determining factor in human actions has existed. As a result efforts have been made to change people's environments, because of the belief that we can make a better humanity; reduce crime, fight poverty and change the social order. Pool notes that nurture only goes so far because other factors such as intelligence, personality traits, perhaps even propensity to commit crimes may be the result of inherited nature.

In essence a mother by nature puts us here and with the help of the father, stamps us with certain personality traits, physical characteristics and propensities. The mother by nurture is the person who has to deal with us after we have been gene stamped in the womb and put here.

The mother by nature and the mother by nurture are not always the same person.

The natural mother is a mother by nature. The one who gives meaning to life is the mother by nurture.

As the nation celebrates motherhood, it celebrates the millions of women who are mother's by nurture.

Just who are the Mother's by nurture? Mostly they are birth mothers who also nurture their children. Very few African-American women officially give up their children to adoption, even if they can't nurture them. A 1996 study by Mosher and Barach tracked a significant decline in the number of African-American women who gave up their children through adoption to less than two percent. What that study doesn't take into account is the fact that while many young black women don't give up their children for adoption; the real nurturing has been turned over to: grandmas, aunties, sisters and "ladies down the street." It is so common, that in many areas of the black community it is common place to see grandma and auntie officially acting on behalf of a child.

Since grandma is the one providing the attention, encouragement, discipline, education and other needs; grandma is often the unofficial mother by nurture.

The same could be said for adoptive mothers and stepmothers who did not bring a child into this world but have provided all of the nurture needed for someone else's child.

It is difficult to be a godly mother in an ungodly world. It's even more difficult to be a mother by nurture. The stepmother who tries to nurture is often frustrated when she hears an angry teen yell, "You are not my mother" despite her best efforts. The woman who could not have children herself is often frustrated at her own inability while striving to love an adopted child as her own. A grandmother whose patience, health and nerves are not what they once were, wrestles to pour out love and attention on another generation's child, left on her doorstep for nurture.

Each year over 140 million greeting cards are sold for Mother's Day along with $7 billion for presents and Mother's Day dinners. Sixty million roses are delivered and more long distance phone calls are made on this one single day than on Christmas. The praises are to the Mother by Nurture: Mothers, grandmas, aunties, stepmothers and "The only mothers we've ever known."

Whether by nature or by nurture, good mothers deserve praise and respect. Proverbs 31 says such mothers are praised by their children because they are great examples of the virtuous woman.

As Christians, we celebrate those who have birthed and nurtured us. We also celebrate those who have provided us Christian nurture even though they were not our biological mothers. They are the ones through whom God has blessed us and as we praise him, we praise them as well.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he tells of the wondrous way that God will bless Israel.

The nation of Israel had fallen upon hard times. The glory it once knew as the premier example of how God blesses a nation had become a mere shadow of its former excellence. It now stood in exile, mere chattel, a nation of slaves and vagabonds. The people cried out to God for deliverance and received an answer.

The prophet Isaiah delivered God's response by characterizing the people as a mother facing the ordeal and prospect of birth pains. Isaiah raised the expectations of the people to a new height when he prophesied that God would respond to their pleas even before they had a chance to travail long in their troubles. "Before she travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came, she was delivered of a man child." (v7) The answer to their prayers would be delivered even before their travail had been completed.

Isaiah's summary was a paradox to say the least.

From the lips of the prophet Isaiah God characterized himself as a mother and soon to be delivered Israelites as his newborn children who would be delivered so quickly that it would prompt people to ask, "Who hath heard such a thing? Who hath seen such things?" (v8)

In the prior verses God compares Israel to a mother, but at verses 12-14 God compare himself to a mother. By noting that he would nurture them or care for them by providing for their survival and comfort. Not only would he be like a mother for his own chosen people he would even extend his loving nurture to gentiles, who were not his own, like a flowing river (v12.)

Scripture usually relates three fifths of the nurture of a child to its mother: Isaiah 66:13 lists her as a comforter; Proverbs 31:1 characterizes her as the primary teacher of a child; and Zechariah 13:3 says that she is the disciplinarian of the child. The other two functions: Provision and protection are assumed to be the role of the father. However when a mother was a widow or a single parent like Hagar they assumed all five of the functions.

In this text God assumes the role of the nurturing mother, promising in Isaiah 66:13 to comfort believers like a mother comforts her child.

He will provide nurture for believers by doing what good mothers do: comfort us, teach us, discipline us, provide for us and protect us.

The nurture of God.

The text shows us how God promised to provide nurture for Israel. By comparing himself to a mother, we discover certain truths by looking closely at the word "comfort."

AS A MOTHER COMFORTS: God promises to comfort us as one who is comforted by a mother. How do mothers comfort? Mothers comfort us through healing our wounds . We learn very quickly that good mothers seem able to heal wounds that are as simple as pricking a finger or as complex as marital problems or career failures. Mothers have the capacity to heal.

Mothers also encourage us. When we are dispirited a little talk with a good mother can often inspire us to move forward and never quit. Their words motivate us. Since God says he will be to us like a good mother, then the song writer must have had it right, "Just a little talk with Jesus makes it right."

Mothers forgive us. Loving mothers are not always pleased with our actions, but they never stop loving us. We know that behind all of that tough talk and rough exterior there is a compassionate spirit that is always willing to forgive and receive a repentant child.

Mothers teach and discipline us. Loving mothers teach us what they know and then help us get the best teachers when what we need extends beyond what they know. They teach us right from wrong. They teach us the value of truth, honesty and cleanliness. They also teach us to pray. Not only do they teach but they also discipline us and force us to grow up straight as trees rather than wild as weeds.

God told Israel in the text that he would nurture them the same way that good mothers nurture and comfort their children.

I WILL COMFORT YOU: God says "I will comfort you." It is a personal promise from a personal God. Think of yourself talking to God, just as you would a good mother. Transpose your mother's voice for that of God saying "Mama gon' take care of it baby, mama gon' take care of it." With our heads leaning on his everlasting arms, we should picture ourselves telling our problems to God and listening for his promise to personally respond. "God's gon' take care of it." That's when we take our concerns about our sickness to him and know that "God's going to take care of it." That's when we take our financial worries, our marital problems and our career frustrations before him knowing that his response will be "I will comfort you."

Isaiah 41:10 says, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God." Maybe this passage is what the song writer had in mind when he wrote, "Be not dismayed what ere betide. God will take care of you. Beneath his wings of love abide. God will take care of you. God will take care of you, through every day, ore' all the way. He will take care of you. God will take care of you."

COMFORTED IN JERUSALEM: The comfort that God promises believers in this text would be provided in Jerusalem. Jerusalem had a twofold significance. They were discomforted because of the destruction of Jerusalem, its temple and its walls. It was the immediate focus of their discomfort. But Jerusalem was also the place where they met God. By saying that he would comfort them "In Jerusalem" God promised to comfort them at the point of their frustration. The point of our frustration may be a specific loss or a family problem. "In Jerusalem" is God's promise to meet us at the point of that frustration and comfort us by doing exactly what a mother does, cutting through the fine talk and saying it bluntly, "Boy you better shut your mouth and listen to what I'm trying to tell you!" In the same way, God met Jonah trying to run and Saul trying to persecute on the Damascus Road. He meets us at what old warriors called the "turn row" and comforts our souls.

But "In Jerusalem" also has another meaning. Jerusalem was the focus of Israel's worship. In Jerusalem they met God, paid their tithes and made their sacrifices. In Jerusalem they met God. Maybe that's why so many mothers saw to it that their children made it to church on Sunday because they knew that "In Jerusalem" God would help them find their way.

Even today millions of mothers are warning wayward children just as God is warning us, "Girl you can't make it in life without God, you need to find your way back to the church house."

Can't you hear mother saying, "You can't find God in a club, you got to find your way back to the church. What you looking for ain't there. God has to provide it, son.

The comfort you seek is in the hands of the Lord!"

She Wants To Be Like Him

Finally brothers and sisters, this text shows God comparing himself to a good mother. God knows that we often can't understand his ways, so he compared himself to a good mother, not because he wants to be like her, but because he knows that all godly mothers want to be like him.

Godly mothers try their best to replicate the way God loves us through the way they love their children.

When God compares his love for us to a mother it is not because she has stumbled upon some eternal secret that he desires for a pattern. He uses her for an example, because a Godly mother is trying to be like him.

When God says he will teach us, like a mother teaches, it's not because he wants to emulate her teaching methods but because she often emulates the way he teaches us. He walks with me and talks with me and tells me I'm his own!

When God says he will discipline us, like a mother disciplines, it's not because he wants to duplicate the way she disciplines but because she tries to discipline us the way God disciplines us, with love and forgiveness. How is that? "With arms wide open he'll pardon you!"

When God says he will even provide for us, like a mother provides, it's not because he wants to copy the way she provides but because she often tries to provide the way God provides. She's confident that "God will make a way somehow!"

When God says he will protect us like a mother protects, it's not because he wants to pattern himself after the way she protects, but because he knows that she often protects her children the way God protect us; he builds a fence all around us every day!

"Who is the woman we honor?" She is more than just a mother by nature, "just my baby's mama!" She is a woman who tries to love us the way God loves us. More than that she is a woman who trusts in the Lord.

Good mothers have found that when you trust in the Lord, he will turn your:

-Hardtimes into good times; Setbacks into leap forwards

-Defeats into success; Failures into victories

-Darkness into light; Weaknesses into strengths!"

Who is this woman? She is the one who has learned that "weeping endures for a night but joy comes in the morning!" She is the one that declares "I know the Lord will answer prayer for I've tried him for myself."

Mother is a woman that has decided to keep her hands in the winding chain and hold on just a little while longer.

Hold on mothers because one of these days…

Jesus, the fairest of ten thousand!

Jesus, my rock in a weary land!

Showers of Blessings

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 2007

SCRIPTURE: "And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing." Ezekiel 34:26

Introduction

Everyone has, at one time or another, asked for a blessing, but have you ever asked to be made a blessing? It's easy to ask God for a financial blessing and wait for the cash flow to begin. It's also easy to wait for a physical blessing and wait for the healings to commence. The same is true for blessings for our families, careers and other pursuits. It is more difficult to ask God to make our lives blessings to others. That would mean that the purpose of the blessing is so that we might be better positioned to bless others with the blessing that we receive.

The pastor of a church prays for a blessing, so that he will be able to bless others.

For that same reason churches pray for their pastors to be blessed, so that he will better able to bless others.

In 1924 two men were roommates in the Moody Bible Institute. Both of them were anonymous and had no idea how God was going to bless them to bless others. The men were: George Shuler and Ira Wilson. At the institute, they combined their talents and wrote the lyrics and music to a cute little song that had a powerful message. They called the song, "Make me a blessing." Wilson wrote the lyrics and Shuler wrote the music. At first, the song was rejected by music publishers, so Shuler had one thousand copies printed to distribute on his own. It still fell on deaf ears. Then God seemed to move and one of the 1,000 copies fell into the hands of George Dibble, an outstanding singer who was at that time director for the International Sunday School Convention in Cleveland, Ohio. Dibble asked for permission to use the song and it was granted. Soon, people everywhere were singing the song and publisher requested to distribute copies. Between the time Ira Wilson wrote the lyrics and the time the song began to be so well know, Wilson apparently forgot he was the author. Until he died, he never remembered that he had written the words that had blessed so many lives. It was insignificant to him, but God took the words of a young man studying the bible, and blessed them in such a way that they continue to bless millions today.

The words to the song are: "Out in the highways and bi-ways of life. Many are weary and sad. Carry the sunshine where darkness is rife, making the sorrowing glad. Make me a blessing. Make me a blessing. Out of my life may Jesus shine. Make me a blessing, oh savior I pray. Make me a blessing to someone today.

That is the mission of every Christian; to live in such a way that the light of God's love will shine through us and bring light to a darkened world. We want to be blessed, so we can bless others.

As Christians, let us continue to ask God to bless our pastors. Let us ask that he would shower them with blessings. We want God to bless them because through our pastors, God blesses us.

Exposition

This text focuses on the Prophet Ezekiel as he foretells the coming of the church and a true pastor, through whom the world would be blessed.

Israel was in ruins. This once great nation, at the time of the text, was scattered all over the known world. Their homeland was destroyed and its the best minds co-opted. They were so scattered and broken in spirit that at one point the prophet Ezekiel saw them as dry bones in a valley. Yet, God constantly sent them a word of hope that they would be revived.

The bones could live again and great blessings were on the way.

This text is another of those places in which God told Israel they would be restored. Verses 11-16 speak of how the people were scattered because of ungodly leaders, who often posed as religious leaders and destroyed their heritage and their faith. (v. 2-6) Yet God says he himself would seek out his people and promised to intervene personally on Israel's behalf. Specific to Israel, God promised to restore Israel to her land and to pasture her like sheep in good grazing land. He promised to do what the false shepherds had failed to do and that is to bring them back, strengthen them and to shepherd them.

The great promise that God made to Israel and to all believers is that the congregation of the broken hearted, dispirited, lost and hopeless will have a shepherd set over him them (v 23-24)and through him God would bless the people and resurrect their lost hope.

Through the great Shepherd, which would be Christ, believers or the church would be the recipients of showers of blessings as he worked to restore the people and bless them with peace and joy.

The Preacher is a Blessing

A congregation is blessed in relationship to the way its shepherd is blessed. If the shepherd is blessed with a logical and organized mind, the congregation is blessed in the same way. If he is blessed with a keen insight into the scriptures, the congregation is the recipient of excellent teaching. If he is blessed with a charitable spirit, the congregation is blessed because of his benevolence. Thus, every congregation should pray that the pastor is blessed because when the pastor is blessed the congregation is blessed. Look at what God said to Israel in this text:

"I WILL MAKE THEM A BLESSING": None of us can bless others unless God has first blessed us. We need God's divine anointing. We need divine workmanship. God blesses the congregation by first divinely blessing the pastor. God helps the pastor in many ways, but all of those ways work together to place him in a position where he can be a blessing to the congregation of the saints. We need God's help for every action that we undertake. We can do nothing alone. The same is true for the pastor. He is not self sustaining. He needs a blessing and we need a blessing. We want God to bless him because we are blessed through the strength of our faith which is strengthened regularly by the preaching of the word.

I WILL SEND THEM SHOWERS: Pay close attention to this promise in the text. Watch what it says and also watch what it does not say. It does not say, "I will send them drops," but "I will send them showers." It does not say I will send them a mist of blessings, but showers. It does say not say he would send them a drizzle of blessings, but showers. What does that mean? It means that believers who are faithful to God and heed his word can expect an outpouring of blessings in God's own time and in his way. Remember, God has said that he will set up his shepherd and through him he would send these showers. Through him we would hear the word declared and learn, week by week, how to gain access to our own showers of blessings. Most of us know this is the truth because we have experienced showers when we listened to the preached word and also experienced droughts when we did not. Though we may have complained about some of our food, whether or clothing was fashionable, or the size or location of our homes; must of us would have to agree, that God has been faithful in providing us with all three. He has been faithful to us in the same way. No matter how we look at it, we have been blessed by the powerful hand of God. These blessings came to us in undeserved showers and torrents.

NOT JUST ONE BUT SHOWERS: If you read the text closer you will see another truth. God used the word shower in its plural form. He could have said, "a shower of blessing." However, he said, "showers." That means more than one blessing and more than one kind of blessings. On any given Sunday the pastor pulls a drawstring tied to God's grace that unloads showers of blessings upon believers. What is our need? Food? That's a shower! Clothing? That's another shower! Shelter? That's a shower, too. We often worry about our physical need for food, clothing and shelter. But thanks to the Grace of God we receive it in showers from on high. Israel wandered in the wilderness for 40 years. There was no way for them to make new clothes or shoes, but God provided for them by allowing their clothes to last, in perfect condition, for 40 years. In Matthew 15:36-38 Jesus took seven loaves and a few fishes and multiplied them enough to feed the crowd and leave seven baskets of leftovers. When Israel moved into the Promised Land they lived in houses they did not build and ate from crops they did not till. In every instance, in the nick of time God provided more than enough for their physical needs. If we are running through dry spells, God's got a shower on the way. Get your umbrella ready! That's what the preacher does for us, he reminds us that despite wilderness of this life's experience that God will make a way. We need to keep him in our prayers so that he can keep reminding us that there are showers of blessings on the way; not just barely enough, but more than enough to sustain us!

SHOWER FOR THE SEASON: Not only has God promised to provide showers for believers, but he has also promised to bring "the" shower in season. That means that while there will be many showers that will come to the faithful, all of those showers won't come at the same time. Each will come in his season. However, the preacher must keep reminding us about God's benevolence, goodness and sometimes angry nature. He must preach to us in season and out of season so that we will be ready to receive our blessing when its season comes. We are often frustrated because we ask for snow in the summer and do not receive it or ask for spring rains in the dead of winter. Some things do not come until their season, but when they do come they will always be on time. When our season comes God's grace will be poured out upon us.

When we have God's grace, we have more than enough!

When we have God's grace, the barrel is never empty!

When we have God's grace, we never walk in a courtroom with an able attorney!

When we have God's grace, we never enter a sickroom with a first class physician!

When we have God's grace, we have more than enough!

God Blesses The Pastor

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must remember that God has exalted the pastor and blessed him so that he can bring the good news of salvation to the people.

God has not exalted this pastor and showered him with blessing for his personal praise, honor or glory.

This pastor is being blessed so that he can advance the kingdom of the Lord and to bring salvation to the people.

The pastor is blessed so he can continue to raise a standard for our people.

This is why God reached down into the ranks of the people and found men and women of character and strength and raised them to positions of influence.

That why we stop to show appreciation. A little praise can go a long way. A pat on the back can often compensate for a multitude of iniquities.

Every child of God should set up a milestone in his life that says, "Thank you Lord for what you've done for me...you've been better to me than I have been to myself."

Today, we show appreciation, in anticipation of continued showers of blessing from our Lord!

Today, we are commemorating deeds and works, in anticipation of more to come.

Every child of God lives in anticipation of the revealed promises of God.

Every child of God wants to see the day when everyday will be Sunday, it's always howdy and never goodbye.

Every child of God wants to see the day when the mountains will be made low and the valleys will be exalted, the crooked place shall be straight and the rough places made plain.

Every child of God wants to see the holy city, with 12 gates made of pearls, sitting on twelve foundations.

Through preaching of the word, we have received our spring showers! Our Summer Showers and even our winter showers!

I don't know about you but I'm glad that regardless of my season, I've got a shower on the way!

Brother Pastor, Preach the word! In season and out of season! Preach the Word!

Tell them about Jesus!

Tell them about Calvary!

Tell them how he died on an old rugged cross!

But don't forget to tell them Early, Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

He lives!

And he's sending down showers of blessings every day!

Don't Forget to Remember

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 27, 2007

SCRIPTURE: "Then ye shall answer them, That the waters of Jordan were cut off before the ark of the covenant of the LORD; when it passed over Jordan, the waters of Jordan were cut off: and these stones shall be for a memorial unto the children of Israel forever." Joshua 4:7

Introduction

Are there times when you must be reminded to remember? It's easy to forget to remember so we mark our calendars with special notes to remind ourselves to remember a birthday, an anniversary or some other important event. There are some things that are too important to forget, so we establish markers to help us remember. We call those markers, memorials; they testify that something important happened and someone worth remembering lived.

That's what Memorial Day is all about. It's about remembering. The bible has about 230 references to remembrance and remembering. In each, believers are encouraged to appreciate the value of remembering what was done for them by others. As Israel cross the Jordan 12 stones were erected so that the children could remember how God delivered them. Similar acts of remembrance are recorded throughout the bible, including Christ's memorial meal at the last supper. Even here, he said, "Do this in the remembrance of me."

Memorial Day is the time that the nation remembers that our freedoms have been bought with a price. In the Civil War, 365,000 Northern soldiers were killed, and 133,000 soldiers from the South died. In World War One, 116,000 American soldiers died. In World War Two, 407,000 American soldiers died. 54,000 American soldiers died in Korea, 58,000 died in Vietnam, 148 died during Desert Storm. As of Friday of this week there were 3,438 American Soldiers that have died in Iraq and 390 in Afghanistan. While thousands have died, others have become disabled. In the Iraq war the non-fatal casualties include: 22,091 soldiers, 795 Navy, 2,157 Marines; and 1,145 Air Force combatants.

Obviously, tomorrow is not about bar-be-ques or days in the sun. It's a day to watch, listen, learn and pay respect to those who have given their lives and those who have placed themselves in harm's way to protect our way of life.

There are many whose Memorial Day reflections spand many years as they think of fathers and grandfathers. Others think of just a few years ago; or two weeks ago. Still others think of sons and daughters who are this very day, standing in the mouth of danger.

The following words were written a generation ago by the late W.T. Purkiser. He edited a Christian publication named "Herald of Holiness." His words were not in recognition of a national holiday, but they certainly apply:

"God has created us in such a way that we can remember. If we could not remember, we could not grow. We would be forever confined to an immediate present. We would be quite literally going around in circles, and very small circles they would be. But God has also created us in such a way that we can forget. If we could not forget, we could have no future. We would be tied to the past in such a way that we could never get free. We must actually do both. We must remember. And we must forget."

Perhaps Mr. Purkiser was right; there are some things we should forget. We should forget bad things that have been done to us, that remembrance ties us inextricably to the past. We should forget past sins that condemned us and brought shame on our lives. We should even forget the errors, blunders and mistakes we made because they often make us afraid to go forward. But just as we should forget we should also remember. We should remember the good that has come from the events of the past. We should remember how God has blessed us. We should remember the price that has been paid by others as we ask ourselves what price we are willing to pay.

In a memorable moment in the movie "Saving Private Ryan" Tom Hanks played a soldier who died trying to save the life of private Ryan who was the only remaining son of a woman who had lost all of her other sons in War War II. Many men died to bring Ryan home safely to his mother. In his dying breath Hank's character challenged Ryan to make his death count for something. "Make it count" was his dying charge.

As Christians, prepare to celebrate this day of memorial, we will fly our flags on our porches and reflect back on those in our families who paid the price. Our challenge, as the current recipient of American freedom is to insure that their sacrifices on their altar of freedom be without purpose. Our challenge is to make it count.

Exposition

This text considers Israel as it crosses the River Jordan and enters the Promised Land.

Joshua commanded representatives of the 12 tribes to take 12 stones out of the river and carry them to the other side. Once on the other side the stones were set up on the bank as a permanent tribute to God for his wonderful works. When children of the future come to the site and see the huge stones standing in a pile in the midst of Jordan and another, just like them, on the right bank of Jordan, they will ask the meaning of the stones.

Their questions will give the elders an opportunity to tell them of the great things God did for Israel when he helped them cross Jordan. Those on the bank also stood as a sign of their expectation of great things to come from God in future generations. Together, the stones symbolized the presence of God in the past and the need for God's presence on the other side of Jordan as well. It was the children of the post Jordan generation recognizing the great work God has performed for their fathers and expecting the same for themselves.

Remember the soldiers who died

John 15:13 reminds us that there is no greater love that can be demonstrated than the fact that a man is willing to lay down his life for his friends.

As we remember, we must keep in mind that since the beginning of this nation over a million men and women have died for our freedoms. From Crispus Attucks to Iraq, African-Americans have given their lives for this country. Even in the American Civil War African-Americans fought for both the Union and Confederate sides. Literally thousands of Blacks were Confederate soldiers who fought and died, with the promise of freedom, to preserve the South. Even though many Blacks were segregated in War War II units like the Tuskegee Airmen took to the airways and Navy men died on ships at sea. Ten thousand Black soldiers built a highway across the ice in Alaska to protect our Northern borders and thousands of others died.

We must remember those of our own race who are have died on recent battle fields in Iraq, 340 or about 10 percent of the dead in Iraq are African American, most under the age of 25.

We don't celebrate Memorial Day, we commemorate. We remember that Freedom is not free. Our freedom has been bought with a price.

Remember the warriors in our families

Moses told Israel that a day would come when the children would ask, "What mean ye by these stones." He said their question would give occasion for the sacrifices of their ancestors to be retold for their hearing.

In every family there have been warriors who may or may not have been soldiers; but they were nevertheless warriors. They fought for the survival of our families. Slave mothers and sharecropper fathers. Maids, butlers and janitors, Pullman Porters, cooks and cab drivers; all were silent warriors fighting battles to help their families reach their present levels of achievement.

On Memorial Day, as we remember, we also remember the soldiers in our families. Those who fought in the military and the grandpa's and grandma's who ran our households like generals. We remember them because they fought for our survival, often defending us against abuse, threats and death.

Memorial Day is an appropriate time for families to place a flower on the grave of the old warriors of the family, especially those who fought for their families and their country as well.

To children, Memorial Day has little meaning until it is put in the context of our personal experience. When the story of your father and grandfather is told to a child, Memorial Day becomes something personal. Until then, it's just a day off.

Remember the savior

As we remember what sacrifices have been made for our freedom, we should also remember what price was paid for our salvation; and who the made the ultimate sacrifice for us.

Before we came to Christ we were without hope. We were sinners condemned to die because the payment for sin is "death." (Romans 6:23) Yet, Christ made himself the ultimate sacrifice on our behalf.

"He was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquity." He was chastised for our faults and failures and because of his sacrifice; we have a chance to the tree of life.

We should always remember that "freedom is not free." Someone always pays.

Someone had to pay all of our drinking and gambling!

Someone had to pay for all of our adulterous acts!

Someone had to pay for our abuses and misuses!

Someone had to pay for our miscalculations and mistakes!

Who paid? The song writer says, "Jesus paid it all. All to him I owe!" Sin had left a crimson stain but he washed it white as snow!"

As we commemorate Memorial Day let us remember the God of our salvation, without whom we would have no hope.

As we commemorate, let's lift up in praise to the God of our salvation!

Praise him for his mercy!

Praise him for his goodness!

Some years ago, a noted photographer spent months taking pictures of people as they came and went from the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington, D.C. One morning, before anyone else was there, he noticed a new remembrance at the wall. There was a picture of a soldier, a medal, a picture of Jesus, and a simple, three-word inscription. As he was focusing his lens on the scene, an elderly man came up behind him and put a hand on his shoulder. "Excuse me," he said, "but do you like it?" The photographer told him how impressed he was with it. The man replied, "I'm glad. I put it there." Suddenly, that little three-word inscription came to life for that photographer. It said, "Only one son."

God brings us to a cross where His "only one Son" gave His life for us and he is asking us to remember!

He's asking us to remember that when we faced our Jordan how he rolled the water's back for us!

He's asking us to remember that when we are in the midst of the river of our difficulty that there was a rock on the other side.

The stone upon which this generation stands is the same stone upon which your parents stood. This stone is Jesus, the chief cornerstone of the church. He is the stone which the builders rejected.

Don’t forget to remember that the God of yesterday is God in this present age as well.

Don’t forget to remember that the Lord is still in the blessing business.

Don’t forget to remember that there is no:

-Weakness that the Lord cannot strengthen!

-Pain that the Lord cannot ease!

-Burden that the Lord cannot lift!

-Loneliness that the Lord cannot comfort!

-Door that the Lord cannot open!

-Prayer that the Lord cannot hear!

I’m glad that there is a rock on this side of Jordan.

This rock is Jesus: The center of hope!

Jesus, the savior of all souls!

Jesus, Our helper in a time of trouble!

Jesus, who died on an old rugged cross, but Early Sunday morning arose from the dead!

Jesus, the rock of our salvation!

I heard the song writer declare: “My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name! On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!”

Little Ships Need A Big God

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 3, 2007

SCRIPTURE: "And the same day, when the even was come, he saith unto them, Let us pass over unto the other side. And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was in the ship. And there were also with him other little ships." Mark 4:35-36

Introduction

After graduation, what's next? Graduates are familiar with life on this side of graduation, but what's on the other side? We understand Head Start, pre-school and kindergarten, because they are on this side of graduation, but what's on the other side? We understand elementary and middle school because they are on this side of graduation, but what's on the other side? We understand high school and have adjusted ourselves to its demands and rigors; but high school is on the other side?

Life on the other side of graduation is a world which graduates have not experienced. They have learned from a school system with teachers, grades and a battery of tests on this side. But on the other side of graduation there is another school which also has teachers, grades, classes, and many extremely difficult tests. It is called the school of hard knocks.

In the school of hard knocks, life is the curriculum, tough times is the teacher, challenges are the classes, ups and downs are the tests, and whether you succeed or succumb are its tests. You can't avoid the school of hard knocks. If you try to avoid going because you don't like what it teaches, it will track you down. The teacher in the school of hard knocks is extremely tough; tougher than any teacher you had in high school. This teacher gives tough assignments such as how to pay your own rent. How to stay out of jail. How to succeed. Unlike school, this teacher never gives an easy assignment, never uses a substitute and could care less if you pass or fail.

Graduates are about to board a boat to cross a channel towards their future. Marian Wright Elderman, head of the Children's Defense Fund is often noted for her saying to children, "The sea is great, but all we have is our little boat." Our boats are small, the sea is great, but God is big and greater than the sea.

In that context, Graduates must consider themselves as youth about to begin a journey to the other side of graduation in a journey that appears to be a "piece of cake." At graduation the sea is calm and it appears to be an easy ride, but make no mistake, the strong winds will blow, the gales of wind with blow incessantly and the journey will be challenging. Yet graduates should not be intimidated. They should remember: our boats are small, the sea is great, but God is bigger and greater than the sea.

As Christians, we face the future with confidence. We don't know what the future holds, but we know who holds the future. As long as we keep our trust in God, it won't matter how tough the sea, we will make it safely to the other side.

Exposition

This text focuses on an instance in which Jesus took a boat to cross the sea to rest on the other side and the storm those who followed him faced along the way.

Jesus often taught crowds of people for long periods of time. This text focuses on an instance in which he desired to withdraw to rest. That was difficult because the crowds found him wherever he went. On his occasion he sought to the other side of the Sea of Galilee. As he departed in his boat, there many who sought to go to the other side as well. They followed in little ships.

The historian Josephus records that were often as many as 300 boats on the Sea of Galilee at one time. There were many boats available, but few would risk taking the sea during certain periods because they knew the nature of the Sea of Galilee. The wisest travelers stayed clear of the sea at night and when weather threatened.

Despite what they knew about the dangers of the sea, the disciples in the boat with Jesus set sail, only because they trusted him. But the book of Mark records there were other little boats that followed him. The Book of Mark is the only Gospel account that focuses on this little detail.

The people in the other boats were prepared to face the unknown, to get to the other side. Despite the threat of the sea they didn't worry about the dangers ahead they followed Jesus. They were willing to risk their lives and fortunes to follow him.

As they journeyed to the other side a storm broke out. Jesus was on board the main ship, asleep. As the waves began to rage and the thunder rolled, those on board the ship became nervous. Those that followed in the little ships were nervous, too. Yet, the navigated by following the boat that carried Jesus.

The disciples and those in the little boats made it to other side, because they followed Jesus through dangerous waters.

Their boats were small, the sea was great. They made it to the other side because God is bigger and greater than the sea.

The Sea Ahead

Christian Graduates, who want to make it to the other side, must take a note from the believer's in this text: Though the sea was great, and the prospects of danger was great, they launched their little boats and followed Jesus. Before you begin your journey to the other side should:

CHECK YOUR SAILS: Boats were propelled in ancient times by paddles or sails. Paddles required a tremendous amount of manpower to move even a small boat. Sails were able to harness the power of the wind to move them along. Experience sailors knew how to position their sails to catch the wind. Even when wind comes from a different direction the sails on a sail boat shift to catch whatever wind is available and push the boat forward. Graduates must prepare themselves to keep the wind in their sails. There will be many experiences in life that will seem to work against you. Don't worry about which way the wind blows, shift your sails to harness whatever wind comes your way. If life throws you lemons, shift your sails and make lemonade. Anyway the wind blows set your sails to harness every opportunity.

The wind of a Christian's sail is faith that God is bigger than any ill wind you may face. Luke 18:27 says, "..things which are impossible with men are possible with God." To keep our faith in tact we must stay in the wind. If two sail boats are racing, one will try to get in front of the other to catch the wind. The one that catches the first wind moves ahead, the other drops behind for lack of wind. Graduates should be careful not to let worldly activities steal their wind. Stay in church, never stop praying and worshiping God. These activities build your faith. Faith is the wind that fills your sails and propels you to the other side.

SEA LEGS: Those who travel on boats learn that while they are steady on land, it takes a good set of sea legs to stand firm on the sea. The constant movement of the ship, rocking from side to side, unsettles some. People are known to throw up and get sea sick. For graduates, the journey to the other side will require sea-legs. The waters ahead will be rocky. They are not for the faint hearted. It's important you not panic as you travel to the other side. God has not given you a spirit of fear, but of power and strength. When storms rise keep your sea legs. Prepare, think it through, seek spiritual guidance, but don't panic. There are many kinds of crises that include everything from financial failure to tragedy? If our fear of the unknown is greater than our faith...we are likely to panic. That's what happened to the disciples when they were aboard the ship and a storm developed. The shipped rocked and turned and many on board envisioned themselves as dead men. There was no escape. The winds were too strong and they were too far away from the bank to swim. Death appeared imminent. Then someone remembered that Jesus was on board.

Our fear sees the worse that can happen. Our faith knows the best that can happen.

Our fear sees the downside of the situation. Our faith sees every situation as an opportunity to stir the dormant power of God within us that speaks to the storm and says, "Peace be still."

COMPASS: Every ship has a compass. It helps them find their direction. The compass remains sure in the day or night. It always points the ship in the right direction. The biggest obstacle graduates will now face is the challenge to remain focused. It's easy to get lost if you lose focus on what is important in life. The world tempts us with many opportunities to get off track, they will be distractions. Young graduates walked across the stage on the day of their graduation excited and happy. Some graduates have already lost their focus and traveled down dangerous side roads. If your dream is to be a doctor, lawyer, fashion designer, musician, stay focused. Stay on track. That's what's unique about God. We may change our direction but God is constant. The word says he is the same yesterday, today and tomorrow. He is a constant. If we keep our lives focused on the will of God he will take us in the right direction. The people who followed Jesus in the little ships probably had no compasses in the little fishing boats. Knowing they were in dangerous waters, they kept their eyes on Jesus. Even when the storm raged, they kept their eyes on Jesus.

When the storms in your young lives rage, keep your eyes on Jesus.

On the other side

Finally, graduates, remember we need faith to take us to the other side, but we need an anchor to keep us from drifting on the other side.

There are many adult Christians today who successfully made it through the storm of young adult life and made it to adulthood because they set their sales, had strong sea legs and keep their eyes on Christ. However, once they became adults they forgot that ships that are not properly anchored will drift back into the sea.

The devil won't stop working in your life because you weather a few storms. He will look for opportunities to get you back on the sea. That can happen if you are not anchored.

Each believer must anchor their lives. Big ships need heavy anchors.

You can't use anyone else's anchor, because their anchor may not fit the size of your boat.

Crossing over into adulthood you must keep your eyes on the Lord.

If we keep our eyes on the Lord even though the lightning flashes and the thunder rolls and the rain pours; we are not worried because our little ship is following Jesus In the years ahead, whether on the college campus or in the military, it doesn't matter how the winds blow as long as Jesus is on board.

When storms rage we must remember Romans 8:28 that "all things work to the good for them that love God."

These are terrible times and without an anchor you can drift aimlessly back into the storm!

In times like these, you need a savior. In times like these you need an anchor, be very sure. Be very sure. Your anchor holds and grips the solid rock.

This rock is Jesus, the lily of the valley!

This rock is Jesus, the bright and morning star!

This rock is Jesus, who died on Calvary but arose early Sunday morning!

Be very sure, your anchor holds and grips the solid rock!

But Then, Face to Face

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 2007

SCRIPTURE: "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known." 1 Corinthians 13:12

Introduction

Has someone helped you in life? Most of us have had someone to help us along the way. They mentored us, loved us or reared us with such intensity that we felt that they were like a brothers, sisters or mothers to us. Upon reflection we, we realize how much our survival and success depended upon the benevolence and charity of that one person in our lives who made the difference.

When that person is no longer with us, do we feel empty? When we feel empty, it is as if everything we have has suddenly disappeared. We feel empty when we reach for that which has always been there and it is there no longer. Nothing can create the feeling of emptiness and spiritual poverty like the death of a loved one. We're at a complete loss when that happens. We don't know what to do. We become weary and our souls wander.

These are the moments that our souls cry out for just one more look; one more face to face conversation. One more chance to say thank you!

Many today are able to enjoy a better life because someone emptied themselves to show them the road. Perhaps it was a father, who worked quietly to provide a home, education and an opportunity for his children. Perhaps it was a mother, who gave of herself until there was nothing else to give.

Perhaps it was someone who reached down and snatched you from the very mouth of hell and placed you into the arms of God. This is the person who caught you in your waywardness, placed your feet on solid ground then pointed you in the right direction.

There are millions of people who can testify of how they found a better life because someone gave them the best they had. They gave the richness of their lives in making it possible for others to find the way.

When our lives come in contact with a person such as this, we meet love face to face. We see love in action in front of our eyes.

When people pour out their love for others their lives become beautiful songs that are sung before us every day. We hear them sing a melody with their voices, but we watch the melody of their lives. Even after they are gone from us we can still hear their melodies lingering.

They helped us with a life that sang, “If I can help somebody as I pass along. If I can cheer somebody with a word or song..then my living shall not be in vain.”

They gave us a spirit of joy with a life that sang, ”I’m happy with Jesus alone!”

They gave us a spirit of fellowship with a life that sang, “Oh I want to see him, look upon his face!” and “What a fellowship, what a joy divine, leaning on the everlasting arms!”

When our loved one is no longer with us, our soul sings a song that looks toward the future, “Only a look at Jesus!” is our great hope!

When the death of such a mentor, whom we loved like a mother, father, brother or sister, we long to see them one more time; face to face; to tell them thanks for a job well done.

As Christians, we praise God for the rich experiences that he has allowed us to share with wife, mother or someone who was like a sister to us. We praise him for lovely song that was lived before us and we anticipate the day when we shall see each other again, face to face.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul’s epistle to the Corinthians, emphasizing the importance of love.

In chapter 12 Paul detailed nine categories of gifts, describing them as being from one source. In chapter 13 he emphasized that none of the gifts superseded love.

Our best gifts and acts of love only reflect our imperfection. We do what we do because we are acting on what we know. However, Paul said, we know in part. Our best knowledge and abilities are imperfect.

When love is demonstrated in this life, we get a glimpse of the nature of God.

When love is shown through the kind deeds of others, we see a small snapshot of the compassion of God.

When love is evidenced in the warm caring life of a believer, we get a peek into the hidden nature of God’s soul.

“Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face!”

The joy of every believer, especially in times of death or peril, is wrapped around the words, “but then.”

“But then” speaks of a time after the sadness of trouble is over!

“But then” speaks of a time when crying days will be over!

“But then” speaks of a time when we are through rising and falling!

Our faith is tied to the “but then” of this text because it points us to a time when we shall see Jesus. Then, face to face, we shall see clearly the true meaning of love!

When we see Jesus we will see love personified!

When we see Jesus we will see love glorified!

When we see Jesus we will see love identified!

Now, we see a little love, shown to us in the lives of a few people around us, but then..face to face, we shall see Jesus and understand!

Our Life is Our Song

The life we live is a song. It's either a song of praise and joy or it's a song filled with melancholy and blues. One reason we enjoy the songs of some believers more than others is not because they sing better, but because they live the songs they sing about.

There are some who love to sing.

They sing from their souls.

Yet, what made their songs important to us is that they reflected what they really believed. "Amazing Grace how sweet the sound that saved a wretch like me, I once was lost but now I'm found, blind but now I see."

They believed it when they sang, "He's sweet I know!"

We could feel their anticipation when they sang favorites such as, "Only a look." It was if she anticipated a day when she would see Jesus face to face!

When they sang, their songs came from their experience, conviction and hope. They characterized their lives and dreams.

On a lighter note, all of us should take a page from our sister and make our lives and our songs meaningful. Consider the church choir that traveled to New York for an appearance on a national television show. The church, proud of its choir, bought an entire floor of a hotel for them and sent the keys and registration information in advance to the director. All they had to do is get to their rooms and rest before the broadcast. When they arrived in the city, they were brought to an extremely fancy hotel and told that their rooms occupied the entire top floor of the 50 story building. Just as they prepared to go up, the elevator broke down. That meant they would have to take the stairs. The director told the choir, "all things work to the good" and with good spirit they decided to sing as they went up the fifty flights of stairs, each of the 49 choir members would lead a song and the director would sing the last song. As they began they sang, "We're marching to Zion." At the 10th floor they sang, "We are climbing Jacob's Ladder", at the 30th floor they sang, "We're climbing up, the rough side of the mountain," at the 40th floor they sang, "I won't complain." When they made it to the 50th floor the choir director began to sing, "Nobody knows the trouble I see!" The choir members asked why, at the top of the stairs he chose to sing such a sad song instead of a song of victory. The director dropped his head and said, "I left all of our keys at the front desk!"-The choir members looked him and said in unison, you sang the right song!

A Life of Encouragement

A great Christian's life is a life of constant encouragement and love to others. They do what all believers should do; we should encourage each other and let our lives sing! That's why the word of God says "speaking to one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord." God calls us to encourage one another. To sing to each other we should get together and sing as a congregation and as small groups. We should sing in each other's hearing and want to be heard by each other. We should let our lives sing!

She helped others stay in tune

Strong Christians not only love to sing, they help others stay in tune. If you've ever noticed a church choir, there is a truth that many will admit cannot be denied; many people in the choir are not strong singers. In any given church choir, most will testify that while they can blend in with others, it is hard for them to carry the melody unless there is a strong person in their section to set the tune. When that person is missing, they sing but sing softly, afraid they may sing out of tune.

So it is in life. Many believers, whether they admit it or not, depend upon each other to stay in tune. Outside of the body of Christ it is easy to start singing another tune. It is easy to get distracted and get our lives off track. We depend upon each other, to stay on track.

We depend upon that phone call from another believer who questions our sustained absence. We depend upon words of encouragement and even the words of chastisement we receive from our teachers and ministers to help keep us in tune. We depend upon the support of friends of the faith who have the melody to keep us in tune we lose our note.

Some of us need a person who carries a great tune beside us to help us find our pitch! They keep us in tune!

When we are sad, they cheer us!

When we are angry, they calm us!

When we are disappointed, they give us reason to rejoice!

They can do this because they keep helping us restore our faith.

It is hard to sing about faith, if we know we have no faith.

It is hard to sing about strength, if all we show is weakness.

It is hard to sing about our hope in the Lord, if we have given up on God ourselves!

It is hard to sing about walking the narrow road, when we are running down the road to destruction.

When our faith gets weak, it's good to have someone close to us, whose life is in tune who can help us tune in to the life we should be living; to get in tune with God.

When the Savior Returns

Finally, brothers and Sisters, Paul reminded the Corinthians that the love we have seen shown in the life and works of those around us is only a glimpse of what is to come when the savior returns.

The joy we have known in this life cannot compare to the joy he has in store for us!

We see people helping others in the neighborhood that's a glimpse through a glass darkly, but when we see Jesus, face to face; that's when we will see perfect love!

When we see caring souls doing great works in the name of the Lord, that's a glimpse through a dark glass, but when we see Jesus, face to face, that's when we will see perfect love!

When we see a believer pour out to others from the depths of the soul, that's a peek through a translucent glass, but when we see Jesus, face to face, then we will see perfect love!

Our friend had a song that said, "I'm happy with Jesus alone." Some don't understand that kind of happiness because they can't see Jesus. But one of these days, bye and bye, we are going to meet him and he will give us a new song.

He's coming back again! That's when we will see him face to face!

When he comes back, he will give strength to the weak!

When he comes back, he will give hope to the distraught!

When he comes back, he will give joy to the saddened!

When he comes back, he will bring victory to the defeated!

When he comes back, he will give us all a new song to sing!

That's when we shall sing, "I sing because I'm happy! I sing because I'm free! His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me!"

I sing because when I'm weak he gives me strength!

I sing because when I'm lonely he comforts me!

I sing because when I'm failing he gives me victory!

I sing because when I'm falling he picks me up!

I sing because when I'm filled with sadness, he gives me gladness!

Even death has invaded us and our hearts are heavy the saints of God still sing, "To God be the glory, to God be the glory for the things he has done! With his power he hath raised me! With his blood he has saved me! To God be the glory!

Glory, for his life on this earth!

Glory, for his death out on Calvary!

Glory, for his rising Early Sunday morning!

To God be the glory for the things he has done!

Christ Only, Always

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 2007

SCRIPTURE: For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." 1 Corinthians 2:2

Introduction

What is the mission of the church? What is its primary focus? If those questions were asked to the average pastor or lay member of a church congregation the responses would be as varied as the number of people asked. Many people have varying ideas about the mission of the church, its focus and message.

Some feel that the mission of the church is to worship the Lord. Worship and praise is the primary focus of their interest. As a result they spend most of their time planning programs to worship the Lord. There are special worship programs, praise programs, anniversaries, youth worship programs and a variety of other programs that promote worship. Associated with worship are music, ushering and other particulars associated with the formal liturgy. Giving God true praise is the mission of the church in this context.

There are others who feel that the mission of the church is to minister to the less fortunate. They believe that they are accomplishing their mission if the church offers a variety of programs to help the needy and to relieve the suffering of the general community. As a result, such churches emphasize: homeless programs, programs for homeowners, credit repair and others that address the social ills of the community. Those who hold this view feel that responding to the needs of the less fortunate is the primary mission of the church.

There are some who feel that church should be the place where people can find Christian mates, improve family relations and participate in clean, healthy social encounters. They spend considerable time trying to address the socialization needs of their members by planning marriage retreats, singles ministries, family programs, counseling ministries, encounter groups and many other ministries aimed at developing life around the Christian model.

Some see church growth as the main mission of the church. They believe that the church's mission is to get as many members as it can and to build the associated buildings and facilities to nurture them. As such, these churches spend time promoting attendance and activities that will increased the church numerically.

They think the mission of the church is to reach thousands, to bulge the membership rolls, tear down church buildings and to build the biggest church in the city. Increasing income, building buildings, and showing members how to grow in the same way is seen as the mission of the church.

Spiritual growth is seen by others as the mission of the church. They perceive that teaching members to grow spiritually is the main emphasis of the church. As a result they enthusiastically promote prayer vigils, prayer meetings, prayer conferences and personal spiritual growth programs that will help members to become less carnal and more spiritual minded.

Evangelism for some is the primary focus of the church. They believe that the entire mission of the church is to promote revivals and outreach ministries designed to gain converts to the faith. Their idea of evangelism is to stage religious events called revivals in which a guest speaker is invited, paid several thousand dollars to preach and members attend. If a crowd comes to the revival and a few people join the fellowship they feel they are meeting the Christian mandate to "Go ye therefore…" Such churches have a spring revival, fall revival and maybe even youth revival, all usually have offerings that generate revenue for the church, which is also a secondary motive for many of their so called evangelistic efforts.

Are any of these alone, the primary mission of the church? When Christ charged his disciples to "go ye therefore" what was the essence of their mission? It was not to establish large buildings, raise money, establish extensive programs and plethora worships. The mission was to go to the world and preach Jesus and him crucified!

While ministries of the church may be vehicles to put the principles of Christianity into practice, the church should not forget that its primary ministry is to preach Jesus only, always.

The goal of the revival should be to preach Jesus only, always!

The goal of the worship should be to preach Jesus only, always!

The goal of any programs or projects the church undertakes should ultimately be to preach Jesus only, always!

It's not about politics, church buildings, money or large congregations; it's about Jesus only, always!

As Christians, we know that we have been given a mission to reach the world for Christ. Our efforts should always focus on Jesus only, always. That is mission and the primary focus of all of our efforts.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains that his primary mission is to preach Jesus and him only.

Paul was a very learned man. He could speak several languages, thanks to the gift of tongues; he was also a scholar, politician and religious student. He had many gifts and by virtue of his training could address a variety of subjects in his personal appearances and writings. Yet, in his letter to the Corinthians he noted that despite his vast knowledge, he decided not to focus on any effort other than to preach Jesus Christ and him crucified. His focus was to make a show of no other knowledge than this, to preach nothing, to discover the knowledge of nothing, but Jesus Christ, and him crucified.

The good news is about Christ. The good news is about his message of salvation and hope. The good news is about his death and resurrection. This is the sum and substance of the gospel, and ought to be the great subject of a minister's preaching and the primary mission of the church.

The church's primary business, Paul explained, is to display the banner of the cross, and invite people under it. Any one that heard Paul preach found that this was his constant theme. He was an educated man but he preached about Christ only, always. If there was a warring spirit he preached about Christ only, always. If there was trouble in the land, he preached about Christ only, always. It often appeared that he knew nothing but Christ and him crucified. Whatever other knowledge he had, this was the only knowledge he demonstrated. He taught and preached that Christ is the solution to all.

When he preached Christ only, the Holy Spirit came and provided the power.

When he preached Christ only, the Holy Spirit empowered the church to respond in ways that could not be mistaken. It became obvious that God was the power that resolved the problem; not the the potency, practicality or the originality of anything performed by man.

Thus, Paul encouraged the church preach Christ only, always; and God would do the rest.

Preaching of Christ only, always involves thee major components: Redemption, Propitiation, and Justification. When these three are addressed by the church, Christ only is preached. When they are abandoned the church becomes a faith based organization eligible for government grants and state support, but it ceases to be the living presence of God among the people.

SALVATION: Too many churches have neglected the message of salvation, substituting it with praise and worship, or mentioning it only on special days such as communion Sunday or during revivals. The nature of the church is that it constantly reminds the world that Christ offers salvation or redemption. Redemption stresses the "ransom payment" made by Jesus' blood in delivering us from sin (Titus 2:14). The ministry of the church is to seek the salvation of the lost within the House of Israel and in the Gentile world. That means among church people and non church people. The message of Christ is the message of salvation. We should preach Christ as the only source of salvation because he was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities and by his stripes we are healed.

PROPITIATION: The church performs many good works through its ministries, but those ministries do not satisfy the wrath of God or provide salvation. The word "propitiation," which refers to Jesus' death as "satisfying" God's righteous wrath (Rom. 3:25; Heb. 2:17). Because of Christ's death we have a chance to the tree of life; the payment of death having been satisfied. The church must preach the grace of God. We must constantly remind the world of the source of that grace which is Christ only, always.

It is the grace of God, provided by the blood of Christ, that gives us an opportunity to do build a better community and revive the spirit of liberty within our people. Our history as a people is evidence of the grace of God. Our history as churches give evidence to his saving grace. Our families and our individual lives all give evidence of God's grace.

When we preach the grace of God, we must remind the world that it can come from Christ only, always; because there is no other name under the heavens whereby we must be saved, but the name of Jesus. That's why the church must continue to preach Christ only, always!

JUSTIFICATION: When the church preaches Christ it also preaches justification. Justification is the results of Salvation and Propitiation. It shows us the results of the cross. It pronounces that we have been acquitted or declared righteous and free from the punishment of guilt although our actions have made us guilty. (Rom. 3:24).

The cross introduced us to the mercy of God.

The church must continue to preach Christ and how he came and died to pay the price for our sins and because of Christ we have been justified and are the recipients of his mercy.

It's the mercy of God that forgives the undeserving.

It's the mercy of God that lifts the fallen.

It's the mercy of God that heals the sick.

It's the mercy of God that turns the defeated into the victorious.

When we preach Christ only, always; we constantly preach Christ as the author and finisher of our faith. Christ only, always. It is through him that we live and have our being.

Always preach the cross

Finally, brothers and sisters, just as no real sermon excludes Calvary and the cross, no church should exclude Jesus and him crucified from its ministry.

Today, preachers have become too modern. They are preaching sermons about how to avoid stress, live prosperously, without high blood pressure.

Is that what Christ commissioned the church to do? Did he say "Go ye therefore and teach all nations how to avoid stress, live prosperously while avoiding high blood pressure?

We are challenged to promote Christ only, always.

There is a Wal Mart store in nearly every community. Written above the doorway of every store in giant letters is the word "Always." The advertising slogan is that the store is dependable and reliable.

Yet, despite the slogan, there are times when Walmart is not "always" available. But, when we preach "Christ only, always" we are preaching about a God who will always be there for us.

Always is not a slogan from Walmart, when it comes from God it means that he will be there for us "always."

The church should remind the world that God is there, always!

When the world presses, Jesus says just call my name, I'll be there! "Lo I'll be with you alway, even unto the end of the earth."

I hear the Lord declaring, wherever you go I'll be there! Psalms 139:7-12 declares "Whither shall I go from thy spirit?...If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold thou art there!"

He was there when:

—Sun first began to shine; and the moon first began to glow; so preach Christ only, always!

—Moses led Israel across the Red Sea; When Hezekiah received 15 more years; so preach Christ only, always!

—5000 were fed with two little fishes and five loaves of bread; so preach Christ only, always!

—Lazarus was raised from the dead; so preach Christ only, always!

—Paul and Silas called to him in a midnight prayer meeting; so preach Christ only, always!

—John was shipwrecked on the Lord's day out on the Isle of Patmos; so preach Christ only, always!

When our burdens get heavy he'll be with us always!

When we are facing an extreme danger he'll be there always!

Preach Christ only, always.

Tell the world about Jesus!

Jesus, who carried an old rugged cross.

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who rose from the grave after three days, is still saying, "I'll be with you always!

Christ only, always!

Christ only, always!

Always!

Feed the Flock

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 2007

Scripture: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." Acts 20:28

Introduction

Who feeds you when you are hungry? When we were children we counted on our parents to feed us or provide for someone to feed us. Either they put the food on the table directly or they arranged for someone to feed us or put food on our plates. We recognized that the food we received was coming by way of our fathers and mothers.

It is the same with our spiritual food. God feeds us. Sometimes he feeds us directly. Most often he arranges for our spiritual food to be served to us through the pastors of our church, whose job it is to give us a balanced meal that will be good for our souls when we hunger and thirst.

Most of us have not really experienced real hunger and thirst. We've been a little hungry. We have missed a meal or two, and we have been a little dry. We have heard our stomachs growl a time or two, but somehow we did not actually starve, we found something to eat and something to drink. We understand this kind of physical hunger. Even with our brief encounters and yearnings for Big Macs and Pork chops, we can imagine what it's like to be in real hunger, with nothing but a dream to feed upon.

When was the last time you were spiritually hungry? Not the guilty feeling we feel because skipped church, or bible study or Sunday school, but spiritually hungry. The guilty feeling we have is like a growling in our soul. It's our soul's way of saying that there should be something here for me to feed on but there is nothing. Spiritual hunger is discomforting. It is unsettling. The longer it goes, the worse it gets. It churns. We feel lost and we wander. We start complaining a lot. Our lives seem to get out of control. We panic. Frustration sets in easily. We despair.

When we are spiritually hungry, we can't focus and everything is out of balance. Spiritual hunger is devastation. If we go to long with spiritual food we reach a point of starvation. We lose substance, fire, inspiration, faith and hope.

A Christian who has lost, substance, fire, inspiration and hope becomes a bag of bones. God showed Ezekiel an entire valley of dry bones and asked, "Son of man, can these bones live?" The answer he gave is that they could live if they were fed the Word of God.

Our pastors are charged with the responsibility to watch over the church and to feed the hungry sheep of God's flock. Through them God feeds the rest of us.

As Christians, we count on the shepherds of our flocks to feed us the word of God. It satisfies our soul and fills our every longing.

Exposition

This text focuses on instructions given to ministers for the care and nurture of the church.

Paul encouraged ministers to pay attention to the flocks over which they have been placed giving their care and spiritual maintenance his utmost attention.

He urged ministers to:

Take Heed: The various ministers in the church were instructed to "Take heed to the flock" to see to it no part of it is neglected. Ministers are charged to look beyond their own households to show a constant regard to the souls of those who are under their charge, as shepherds have to their sheep, that they may receive no damage.

Holy Ghost: The Holy Ghost in this text is referred to as a person of the trinity. This indicates that God has placed the pastor in his position. God has breathed his blessing upon his ministry and God has given him the authority to act and move.

Overseer: In this text, the word "episkopos" is translated overseer. In other places such as 1 Timothy 3:2 or Titus 1:7 the same word is translated bishop. A bishop is a preaching elder to a little flock, not an administrator and leader of many flocks. Acts 14:23 refers to elders in the same way. Thus, the terms overseer, bishop or elder all refer to the local pastor and are used interchangeably according to the tradition of the local congregation.

Feed the flock: Ministers must spiritually feed the church by performing all of the parts of the shepherd's office. The choice of words in this text narrows the focus of the pastor to a single congregation rather than a large conglomerate of congregations. The Greek term " poimnion" is used for "flock." It means, little flock. It indicates that pastors should focus ministries upon the flocks that they have been given to shepherd. They are charged to lead the sheep to green pastures, lay meat before them, do what they can to heal those not inclined to eat, provide a wholesome doctrine, and see that nothing is wanting that is necessary.

Watch Yourself

The pastor of any congregation has the great responsibility of watching over the flock but before he can do that, he must watch himself.

Pastors must be good stewards of their own spiritual lives, ruling well their own households and ministering to their own families. There are many pastors that neglect their families as they try to minister to the house of God. The word of God places primal importance on the leader's ability to manage his own affairs well.

He who cannot manage his own finances, cannot effectively steward the finances of the church.

He who cannot manage his own family cannot advise the church about the management of many families.

He whose moral life is a shambles is in no position to edify others.

He who has little time to study the bible cannot encourage others to do what he is not able to do himself.

Thus, before the pastor can watch over the flock of God he must "take heed" of his own spiritual life and be sure of his own salvation. Paul was a great evangelist and teacher but before he could get others straight he had to find the Lord on a street called straight.

As pastors, we must lead by example. We must tithe, by example. We must lead others to pray by being a praying example. We must lead moral lives by example. We show others we are willing to learn and they will learn.

Before we try to watch over others, we must watch ourselves.

Watch The flock

Pastors must watch over the flock. This word "watch" is not in the sense of observing, but in the sense of protecting the church from evil influences and observances.

Generally, pastors must guide the congregation away from ungodly practices and beliefs. This is not always well received. Consider the new preacher who came to Hollow Creek Baptist Church and immediately started to change things. The members of the congregation became upset with him, especially when he replaced their straw offering basket with one of those big city style silver trays. Weekly there were changes one after another. While there were many critics, one sister always seemed to support him, Miss Cassie Bell. When he told drinking Joe he had to keep his licker outside, Cassie Bell said "You right Reverend!" She told the members, "It's his place to do that!" When he told Carrie Mae that her dresses were too short, Cassie Bell said "You right Reverend!" Again she said, "It's his place to do that!" But when he told Miss Cassie Bell to stop dipping snuff in the church service things changed. Cassie Bell jumped to the floor and yelled, "Wait a minute church, this preacher done got off track. We need to put this preacher in his place!"

When pastors correct there is often resistance. Yet, despite the resistance, the pastor must keep watch over the flock. Interpersonal differences, feuds, and petty arguments between members can causes breaches in the faith that can do irreparable damage to the body of Christ. It is the awesome responsibility of the pastor to Watch over the flock in this respect.

Feed the Flock

Pastors must also feed the flock of Christ. To do that he must be present.

There are too many absentee pastors who are trying to pastor churches by remote control while they conduct 40 revivals a year and travel the country making a name for themselves. While there is nothing improper about a pastor taking on a revival or two each year, pastors must remember they are called to feed and shepherd a flock. An evangelist travels the country. A pastor stays put. The pastor is a like a good husband. He can't take care of his wife and family if he is gone most of the year showing others how to take of theirs.

The pastor feeds the flock through the preaching of the word. There is something about the pastor helps the members connect with the word. It is good to have a guest occasionally, but spiritual food goes down better when served by the pastor. Prolonged absences by the pastor usually results in a church with spiritual malnutrition.

The pastor is a motivator and inspires the church to serve and give. When congregations learn that the pastor will be away for a length of time, there are many who will not attend worships (or give) until he returns. It should not be that way, but unfortunately it is a reality. Absentee pastors hurt both the attendance and finances of a church congregation, because our folks have a way of misplacing their focus on the person who delivers the word rather than the word itself.

Pastors must prepare themselves to feed the flock. There is nothing worse for a worshipper than to come to a morning worship to find out that the pastor has not properly prepared himself. Members can tell when the pastor has been in the word. They can also tell when he has not fully prepared their spiritual meal because they can taste the rawness of his half done delivery. Pastors must study to prepare themselves for each sermon, but in the broader sense they must also seek to formally educate themselves. An honorary doctorate does not mean we have studied, it means we have been honored. We must formally educate ourselves with the broad body of knowledge necessary to feed the flock.

Pastors must feed the flock because there are predators waiting to destroy it.

Pastors must feed the flock because spiritual famines mean death to a congregation!

Pastors must feed the flock because Christ commands us to do so.

If you love me, feed my sheep!

When Sheep are fed and led

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider what happens when the pastors properly watch over the sheep they are both fed and led to live the abundant life.

When there is a watchman on the wall, the church is warned against impending danger. In a time of peril the question is asked, "Watchman, what of the night?" Keep the watchman on the wall so he can herald the condition of the night!

When the Pastor watches over the church the Lord will show him visions that will give us hope! That's why Ezekiel said "The hand of the LORD was upon me, and carried me out in the spirit of the LORD, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones, And caused me to pass by them round about: and, behold, there were very many in the open valley; and, lo, they were very dry. And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live?" Ezekiel 37:1-3

When the pastor watches over the church we will hear the gospel declared and our faith will be strengthened. "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" Romans 10:14-15

When the pastor watches over the church Jesus is lifted up.

If we lift Jesus up mighty things begin to happen!

If we lift Jesus up, the wicked will cease from troubling!

If we lift Jesus up, the weary will be at rest!

If we lift Jesus up, no matter how dark the hour, we will remember that joy comes in the morning!

If we lift Jesus up, no cloud will overshadow our sky!

If we lift Jesus up, the sinner can find salvation!

If we lift Jesus up, the despairing man can find hope!

If we lift Jesus up, the world will come to know him for he said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

As long as the pastor watches over the church there will always be a way to hear a word from the Lord!

When there is a word from the Lord:

—We can see victory in the midst of defeat; Triumph in the midst of tragedy

—We can enjoy peace in the midst of confusion; Joy in the midst of sadness

Because the pastor watches we have somebody who can tell us the old story!

Because the pastor watches he can tell us about Jesus!

Jesus, the lighthouse in the stormy sea!

Jesus, the leaning post in a trying time!

Jesus, the river of water in a dry thirsty land!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and rose after three days!

As longs as the pastor watches, he can keep reminding us that one of these old days, Jesus is coming back again!

He's coming!

He's coming back again!

SCRIPTURE: And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. Genesis 1:26-28 "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet: Psalm 8:4-6

Introduction

Black men, like all men, have a purpose; have you figured out the reason you are here? Have you ever wondered why God placed you where you are today? Understanding the mysterious ways of God has been a puzzle to many over the centuries. We are no exception. As we read the word, sometimes we wonder why God selected our gender, out of all of his creation, and placed us in the unique spot that we occupy in the world today. It is humbling when we consider that God could have chosen any animal in his creation to do what we do, but he chose us.

We are not alone in the query, many others before us have also asked the same question. David said in Psalm 8:3-4, " What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him? "Job asked in Job 7:17, "What is man that thou should magnify him?" Psalm 144:3 asks, "What is man that thou takest knowledge of him?"

The psalmist question has enormous implications for expectations that God has for such a lowly creature as man. The psalmist words, linger: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him."

What is man? He has 263 bones, 600 muscles, and 970 miles of blood vessels.

What is man? He has 400 cups on his tongue for taste, 20,000 minuscule hairs in his ears to tune into sound, 40 pounds of jaw pressure, 10 million nerves and branches in his body.

What is man? He has 600,000,000 air cells that breathe in his lungs.

His heart beats 4,200 times an hour and pumps 12 tons of blood every day.

What is man that God would give him such an awesome task of leading and dominating all of creation?

As Christians, we know God created a beautiful world and placed man in control. He is a great who has a reason for all that he does. Christian men have the responsibility to live up to our commitment to exercise leadership in the home, church and general community as stewards of God's great creation. He made us a little lower than the angels, but if we carry out our mission he'll give us a song that even the angels can't sing, "I've been washed in the blood of the crucified lamb, I've been redeemed!"

Exposition

These texts focus on two passages of scripture that describe the purpose and function of man.

Genesis gives a description of God's creation of the world by singular spoken phrases such as, "Let there be light," and "Let there be a firmament," and "Let the earth, or waters, bring forth." However, God decided to make man it switched from a singular act into a word of consultation, "Let us make man." The creation of man was a collaborative effort between the Father, Son and the Word, indicated by the phrase, "let us."

Man was created with an expressed purpose in mind, for which the rest of the world was created as a preliminary. Now that the preliminaries were settled God said, "Let us make man."

Let us make man so he can have dominion over the rest of creation.

Let us make man of flesh and spirit, earth and heaven, and given him authority over creation.

Let us make man and ally him with the elements, from the dust, but full of life; of the animals but far superior, but just lower than the angels.

Let us make man in our image. In the image of the fatherly God. In the image obedient son. In the image of the empowering, forceful and inspirational Holy Ghost.

Both Genesis 1:26-28 and Psalm 8:4-6 indicate that man was created with the idea of having dominion over the earth.

The power to dominate creature is not intrinsic. Man does not have it within himself. That power comes from God. God gives him the power over the earth and living thing that moveth upon the earth, which are more under his care and within his reach.

When man fell into sin in the garden, much of the original power he possessed obviously diminished, yet his charge to have dominion continues. It continues so strongly today that it is necessary to provide safety, support and nurture and survival.

Whenever man is not dominating the other creatures devour him. In a contest between man and a lion, if man fails to dominate the lion survives and man becomes breakfast.

Men were created by God, for the dominance of created world.

Today, men of God, commit themselves to do what they were created to do: serve, protect, and nurture the part of the world that God puts within their grasp.

Lack of Commitment

God told men to exercise leadership and responsibility in the world. However, there is an obvious lack of commitment among African-American men, many of whom have abandoned the godly charge to exercise "dominion" or responsibility in the home, church and general community.

This increasing lack of commitment is leading to a troubling trend among Black men. It is a trend that is threatening our very existence.

There is a trend toward violent crime that is making young Black men an endangered part of our society. Three out of every five Black boys is expected to have a run with the law, be in jail or dead before they reach the age of 30. That's staggering. According the United Negro College Fund, the number of Black men attaining college degrees since the 70's has been outpaced by the number of Black women who have increased 55 percent while Black men have increased only 20 percent. Black men are having women problems as they are viewed less eligible by a more educated professional Black woman who refuses to marry down to a man who is not her equal.

The trend toward absentee fathers is destroying our families. The image of the Black man is under attack. Gone are images of the strong Black father of yesteryear who took nothing but grabbed a shotgun to protect his wife, children and land. Gone are the images of men so proud that they would rather die free than live as slaves. Gone are the images of the hard working, God fearing Black man who believed in teaching his children about God, keeping his word and giving an honest day's work for an honest day's pay. Gone are the images of the Black father who understood the value of a dollar and saved to provide a future for his children.

This trend is so troublesome that it is the focus of much concern by our leadership. The National Urban League released a report this year entitled " The State of Black America 2007: Portrait of the Black Male, will focus upon the plight of black men in the United States." It concludes that "Empowering black males to reach their full potential is the most serious economic and civil rights challenge we face today."

Despite the problem there seems to be a lack of commitment on the part of our black men around the nation to address the issue.

What type of Commitment is Needed?

God made men in his image, with a commitment to take charge and lead. What can men do to carry out their godly mandate? There are three things our families, churches and communities need. But there are three that Christian men should consider that are within their abilities to do but will still require committed men.

FAMILIES NEED PROVIDERS: A man who provides for his household to the best of his ability commands the respect of his both his wife and children. He can't exercise "dominion" if he is not the provider. He can't be the boss if he can't shoulder the cost. The provider is not expected to do that which is beyond reason, but that which is within ability.

Children who see their fathers doing their very best to provide a roof over their heads and putting food on their table, develop a respect for them. Even when a woman has lost her romantic attraction for her former mate, she still respects the man who does not abandon his children and provides adequately for their care, education and safety. Men who provide for their children are not compelled to do so by the courts. They do so out of love. In the context of marriage most of his resources would be applied to the care of his children. Even outside of marriage, the man who provides knows that the costs are the same. He assumes his responsibility without an order from a court. Such a man is never described as "just"' my baby's daddy, He is my father, my provider.

FAMILIES NEED STRONG MEN AS ROLE MODELS: A man who lives a life that is exemplary before his wife and children commands their respect. Abraham became a role model for his family because he sought to do the things that were right and just in the eyesight of God. Because this was his standard, his children and associates came to respect him for the moral tone of his life. Likewise, the man who obeys the law, works hard and lives a clean cut, ordered life, is a commanding presence. Those who refuse to involve themselves in illegal activities, public drunkenness and wild uncontrolled actions command the respect of their children, who know the real deal. His children take note. His mate takes note. The community takes note. When he is in the presence of his family, he is welcomed not frowned upon. When he is in the presence of his wife or even his former mate, she treats him with respect because he is always the gentleman and refuses to stoop lower than the standards he purports. When a man does this he is more than just a human who wears pants, he is viewed as a real man.

FAMILIES NEED GOD FEARING MEN: A man who orders his life by the word of God commands the respect of his wife and his children. Such a man may not walk the streets daily with a bible in his hands or have a huge cross dangling around his neck, but the principles of godliness are hung around his heart and nailed to the door posts of his soul. The man who is led by God shows it in his Lifestyle and manner. In a society that casts a god fearing man as a wimp, there is a tendency of some to shun the image of being a spiritual man. Yet, that is the very characteristic that drew Abraham close to God, the fact that he was willing to walk the walk, not just talk the talk. The God fearing man seeks the will of God and strives to follow it, thus shepherds his family in the direction of the almighty.

Committed man in Godly hands

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that there is only one thing better than a good man and that is a committed man in Godly hands.

Our charge is the exercise leadership in the family, church and community. To do that requires commitment. It requires men to be more than just good men, it requires them to be committed men.

Elijah was a good man. He was strong, independent and courageous. But what made Elijah more appealing is the same quality that made many of the strong men of the bible great; they were committed men in godly hands.

Abraham was a good man, but when he put his trust in God and moved at his command, he became a committed man in Godly hands.

Jacob was a good man. He prospered with material wealth and became respected as a man with a head for business. But one night he wrestled with the Lord and refused to let him go. From that night forward, he became a better man, because he demonstrated that he was committed man in Godly hands!

David was a good man. He was a great leader and military strategist. But one day he realized his own vulnerability and said, "Create in me a clean heart oh God and renew in me a right spirit." He was great because he was a committed man in Godly hands.

A committed man in Godly hands is a powerful man because God uses him!

A committed man in Godly hands is an influential man because God controls him!

A committed man in Godly hands is an effective man because God directs him!

Where do committed men stand?

Committed men stand on the side of the Lord!

That is why Joshua told those who chose differently, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

As men go forward in the world they should always remember to take the Lord with you!

If you take the Lord with you, your greatest enemies can be conquered!

If you take the Lord with you, your greatest obstacles can be overcome!

If you take the Lord with you, your gravest doubts can be overcome!

If you take the Lord with you, your heaviest burdens can be lifted!

If you take the Lord with you, your highest mountains can be climbed!

If you want to make this journey, you've got to stand on the Lord' side; you got to walk with the King!

Storms may rise, but you got to walk!

Winds may blow, but you got to walk!

All along this tedious journey, tell the world, I've got to walk with the King!

Who died out on Calvary!

Who arose Early Sunday morning!

I've got to walk with the king

Giants

(The Bigger They Are The Harder The Fall)

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: And David put his hand in his bag, and took thence a stone, and slang it, and smote the Philistine in his forehead, that the stone sunk into his forehead; and he fell upon his face to the earth. 1 Samuel 17:49

Introduction

Have you ever faced a giant? Probably not in the sense of physical person, but many of us have faced giant sized problems, situations and obstacles. These are frustrations and obstacles that stand in the way of the accomplishment of our dreams.

What could stop you from pursuing your dreams? What could possibly come against you that could stop you from achieving your spiritually ordained goals and dreams? The giants we have may have different dreams but each has the same purpose which is to stop us from succeeding. They intimidate us and make us afraid. They yell at us, and make us feel small in their sight. They push us to conjure dreams of failure and defeat. They make us think the only result possible for us is failure.

Once, Israel sent 12 spies into the Promised Land to bring back a report. They came back with a report that said that they could not win because the land was filled with giants who made them feel as small as grasshoppers. Yet, there were two men among them, Joshua and Caleb who said that God was bigger than any giant and he ordained their future. They would not listen to these two and they wandered aimlessly for 40 years until the whole generation died out. The Giants intimidated them and they cowered down.

As Christians, we should not be afraid of the giants that try to intimidate us. Our God is bigger than any giant. If our life goals are in accord with the will of God, nothing can stop us from achieving our destinies, except our own fear and unwillingness to put our trust in him.

Exposition

Our text focuses on the Children of Israel under King Saul. They were faced with the challenge of ridding the promised land of the hostile Philistines.

A challenge had been issued by the Philistine champion, Goliath, to send their best man to fight him in a duel to the death.

The Israelites however, could not control their fears. They shook in their sandals and wondered who would be the one that would fight Goliath. King Saul, himself a great warrior, would not meet Goliath. His sons were great warriors but they would not fight either. They were all afraid of the size of Goliath. Their fears got the best of them.

However David, a little shepherd boy, took up the challenge. He refused to wear the king's armor or to use swords and shields. He chose only to carry his shepherd's bag and his sling shot.

Though he went forth there was certainly concern in his heart because of nature of his foe. That concern was reasonable because he faced a giant, fabled to be 13 feet tall. There was fear in his heart.

He faced an opponent who wore a coat of armor that weighed 194 pounds.

David was concerned but not intimidated.

Goliath's spearhead weighed 23 pounds and his shield was so large that it required a man to carry it in front of him as he walked. There was fear in David's heart.

But something on the inside of the young man helped him to get a hold on his fear and he stepped forward to the side of the brook and selected five smooth stones with which he killed the mighty Goliath with a single stone.

Giants of Youth

Youth today face many giants as they pursue their futures. Without the confidence that comes from God some may be intimidated. A 2007 poll taken among thousands of young adults revealed what they believed to be the giants that faced their generation.

The survey of 600 young people between16 to 22 years found that they are inwardly focused — on their future marriages, parenthood, homeownership, education and communities, with most worried about family breakdown, the prospect of poverty, becoming a victim of violence and the fear of failure.

To deal with the giants they will face youth should remember:

GOD WORKS INSIDE OF US TO TACKLE THE GIANT OUTSIDE OF US: When David went forth to tackle Goliath God had already created one spot of vulnerablity. David had to be ready on the inside to face the giant. While God's word goes out to create opportunities for us God's word also germinates in us. Youth should strive to study the word of God intensely because it will take root on the inside to give us the courage to tackle the outside.

The Reverend Jesse Jackson coined a phrase that epitomizes what this text is about, "If my mind can conceive it, and my heart can believe it, I can achieve it." The belief that we can tackle the giant begins inside of us. It grows in proportion to our faith in God and confidence in ourselves.

Joseph was not the most likely of all of his brothers to be a success. Yet, even while he was a boy he dreamed of a day when he would be so successful that even his family members would bow before him. It was as clear as day to him. He never doubted that it would come to be. Even when he was jailed or falsely accused he still believed what God had shown him in the fields would become a reality. The same was true for the little boy David. He believed God would protect him in any situation. When he was threatened by the king or when he faced Goliath, he remained strong and bold. Faith in God is the key to a young believer's success. It is that faith that motivates you to reach for the unreachable, climb for the unclimbable while you dream the impossible dream.

REMEMBER YOUR SUCCESSES FORGET YOUR FAILURES: When asked why he thought he could defeat the giant, David told everyone who asked that he had been attacked by lions and bears while guarding his father's flocks and had overcome them all. He remembered his successes. He could have remembered how he was teased by his tougher, older brothers but he remembered his successes. Likewise, when we face our giants we must forget our failures.

During your school years there have been many times that you did not succeed. You may not have won election to a student post or a spot on a coveted team. You may have failed or performed poorly on a test or just plain messed up in other ways. If you are going to succeed, expect to fail sometimes, get over it and keep going.

Thomas Edison tried dozens of prototypes for the light bulb before he got the right one. The Wright Brothers crashed many times before they finally made their air plane fly. Babe Ruth and Hank Aaron struck out more times than they made hits but they became Home run champions because they kept coming back to the plate.

Philippians 3:13 says, "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Forget the failures remember the successes and keep trying. When you encounter the giant prospect of failure remember the words of Winston Churchill during a commencement address during the middle of World War II. Of all the speeches he gave to graduate this speech is remembered nearly 70 years later. Mr. Churchill rose to the podium, looked at the graduates and said, "Never give up." He waited about 30 seconds then sat down.

Never Give up!

USE WHAT YOU HAVE: The giant that David faced well armed and shielded. David could have used the weapons others used but found them to be cumbersome. He used what he had and knew best: his slingshot and five smooth stones, only one of which would be needed, when guided by the hand of God.

Every child of God needs five smooth stones to fight against the fear of Satan.

Preparation: We should take every means possible to prepare ourselves by diligently studying the word. The word of God is sharper than a two edged sword and more deadly against sin than a spear.

Determination: We should be reverently committed to living the Christian life.

We should be dedicated to the Godly pursuit and prepared to follow it, come what may.

Motivation: Motivation is the inner instinct that inspires one to act. No war can be won unless the troops are moved to carry the battles. There must be a will to triumph if fear is to be conquered.

Inspiration: Inspiration is a driving spiritual force. It sprinkles down from the throne of God and endows mortal man with faith and hope.

Salvation: There is no way to fight off the fear of attacks by Satan without Salvation. We must accept Christ and be covered by his blood in all of our ways, and he will direct our paths.

The Bigger They Are…

Finally brothers and sisters every believer should remember that big giants should not intimidate them because the bigger they are the harder they fall.

The soldiers in Saul army did not have David's faith. They assumed that the bigger the enemy, the bigger their fall. But David kept his distance from the giant, to give him falling room.

In the same since, young believers should not try to face giants to closely, stay prepared, inspired, motivated and prayed up, but keep your distance, so that when the giant you face falls, he won't fall on top of you.
Expect him to fall and leave him falling room.

Once the Lord gave Zachariah gave the people a word from the Lord when they faced challenging situations.

That word was simple. Walk in my ways and I will help you to walk in places you've never dreamed.

This promise is just as good today as it was then, face your giants with faith in God and he will bring you into the land of your dreams.

Believers are encouraged to walk each day by faith.

To walk in God's way is to walk in faith.

Through faith we can achieve the unachievable.

Through faith we can accomplish the impossible.

Through faith we can reach the unreachable.

Those who trust God and step out to pursue their dreams must resolve that although there may be giants, can still succeed!

The giant standing in the way of our dream might be a:

-Desert, but God will provide an Oasis in the wilderness!
-Hunger, but God will provide a table in the presence of our enemies!
-Unbelievable odds, but God will help us to achieve the impossible

Those who trust in God:

-Think the unthinkable; Reach for the unreachable!
-Believe he unbelievable; Hope for the imaginable
-Live for the incredible; achieve the improbable!

Those who trust in God know that all things are possible!

Maybe that's why the song writer wrote: I will trust in the Lord, I will trust in the Lord until I die!"

I don't know about you but I've decided to trust in the Lord!

Storms may rise! Winds may blow!

I will trust in the Lord till I die!

When you giant falls, don't forget to tell the story.

Tell somebody about Jesus!

Tell somebody how he died!

Tell somebody how he arose after three days and nights!

Tell somebody that he is alive in your soul today!

The Pursuit of Happiness
A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 1, 2007

SCRIPTURE:" The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." John 10:10

Introduction

What does it mean to be happy? Many have spent most of their lives in the pursuit of happiness. From the child striving to find happiness in a toy to adults trying to find it in automobiles or mansions, most of us have spent a considerable amount of time in pursuit of happiness.

In America, we celebrate what we believe to be our God given right to chase our dreams.

We fought a war with Great Britain because we believed that each individual should be free to chase his own dream and forge his own future.

The words of the Declaration of Independence, written by Thomas Jefferson on July 4, 1776, summed up the thought processes of the great thinkers of his time. In declaring our independence from the tyrannical rule of King George of England the Declaration said:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident,
That all men are created equal,
That they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights,
That among these are: Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."-

Despite its flaws, America still provides most of its citizens the golden opportunity to pursue happiness, chase dreams and follow after rainbows.

A while back, Will Smith starred in a movie called "Pursuit of Happyness." It detailed the true story of a man who had a dream of being a stock broker and would not abandon that dream despite a series of setbacks that left him as a single dad who was both homeless and unemployed. Despite his difficulties, he persevered and achieved his dream. Because he became a millionaire, many think that was the reason for his happiness. However, in the movie he had both a dream and a commitment to his son. His happiness was complete when he could be a father for his children.

What is your definition of happiness? Some believe that if they had a park bench to spend the night they would be happy. Those who have the park bench say they would be happy if they had a soft bed on which to sleep. Those who have a soft bed believe they would be happy if they had a big house in which to put the bed. Those with a big house believe they would be happy if they had a bigger house than their neighbors. The neighbors believe that they would be happy if they could live in a neighborhood so big that you couldn't follow them, trying to be happy.

The search for happiness took Solomon on a meandering course through his life. He attempted a serious study of nature and astronomy but found no happiness in his studies. He built a temple, a palace and many fine buildings and still was not happy. He gathered tremendous wealth and splendor during his reign and found no happiness. He tried women: He married 300 women and maintained 700 state support concubines; but even 1,000 beautiful, sexy women could not make him happy. He tried music, art and even idleness, too. He finally concluded that the real way to happiness was through the fear of and service to God.

To Pursue real happiness is to pursue God. To find him and know him for yourself is the epitome of real happiness.

As Christians, we know that real joy and happiness comes from God. The abundant life that he promises is not so much about accumulating things as it is about having a joyous relationship with him. That is a joy worth pursuing.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains the nature of the believer's relationship to God.

Jesus often told his disciples parables to explain complex religious concepts. One concept is God's promise of the abundant life.

The picture that Christ gives is that of sheep, a sheepfold, a shepherd and a pasture. The sheep are the millions of people who are struggling to live better, more complete lives that are completely and totally acceptable to God. The shepherd is Christ himself who stands at the door of the sheepfold greeting and acknowledging every sheep by name. The sheepfold is the church through which the sheep will find guidance, understanding safety and inspiration.

Believers come into the sheepfold to get life and the life they develop in the sheepfold is the same life they take with them outside of the sheepfold and that life and relationship helps them find what verse nine calls "pasture."

Jesus makes it clear that those looking for the abundant, joy filled, life can only find it in him. Those who have found eternal life, have also found meaning for their lives that is described in these verses as "pasture." If you are a sheep, a green pasture is synonymous to happiness. It is what you need in abundance! Thus, Jesus says "I am come that they may have life and that they may have it more abundantly."

We seek Christ to acquire salvation. Once we receive salvation we learn how to really live and be happy in Jesus. Jesus challenges believers to pursue the abundant life; not riches, affluence, although these may have their place, but a life that gives them a deep appreciation of the things that really matter in life including church, family and the community of God.

We hear the phrase quoted often, “Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.” When John Locke first said it the phrase was: Life, Liberty and Property. Locke believed that no one had the right to acquire possessions. Later Adam Smith coined the phrase, “Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Property.” Jefferson went further by replacing property with the idea that everyone has a right to pursue his own idea of happiness free from government intervention.

Yet, when the believer hears these three ideas, we cannot help but reflect on the teachings of the savior about:

LIFE: In John 17:3 Jesus said, “Now this is eternal life: that they may know you, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom you have sent” It means that you are now really living until you know God. There are many who swim the beaches of Caribbean and tour the beauty of South sea islands. They cruise on ships, fly first class, and relax by a cool pool; but they really don’t know what living is until they know God in the truest sense; not belonging to church or singing a praise song or, but really knowing him. Those who know God are set free to really live. It’s really living to be able to buy a pair of shoes and not feel compelled to buy a name brand. It’s really living to be able to laugh and have fun without the need for a strong drink. Yet, there are many who have known life with its crutches; so their entire life is a pursuit of the crutches rather than the the good life that somehow evades them because of a lack of divine purpose, sanction and direction. Thus, those who know God, learn how to live and to live more abundantly.

LIBERTY: John 8:36 says, “If the Son sets you free, you shall be free indeed” Liberty is the ability to move and act without restraints. Sin enslaves us. It keeps us in bondage. An alcoholic is in bondage. He or she cannot make it through the day without a drink. A person addicted to cigarettes is in bondage. A drug addict is in bondage. So is a person who hopelessly entangled in an adulterous relationship, homosexuality, lesbianism and a host of other sinful addictions that range from gossiping to theft. The saving grace of Christ sets us free from these shackles. It’s like chains falling off our legs and arms. When we are saved we are finally free. We have liberty in Christ.

HAPPINESS: Our text indicates that true happiness comes when we know how to live abundantly, joyfully, without the necessity of anything that chains us, binds or hinders us. True happiness for believers is the joy of the Lord. Joy is greater than happiness because joy is not dependent upon anything other than the grace of God. Happiness needs money, cars, houses, and many things to survive. Joy needs only the grace of God. The love of God carries us beyond the mere pursuit of happiness.things; but the real joy of the Lord. With the love of God abiding in him, a man or woman could live in a shack, drive an old car, and eat grits and gravy for breakfast and be filled with joy every day. That’s why David, when he lost it, prayed to God to “restore unto me the joy of thy salvation.” We want to live beyond just being happy, because the pursuit will never end. We want to revel in the joy of the Lord.

Finally, brothers and sisters, there is a state that is better than happy; it is to live a life that is favored by the Lord.

A favored life is one that is better than lucky, and more excellent than being blessed.

The favored life is one that is filled with joy even in the absence of the incidentals associated with happiness.

The man or woman who is favored has learned the joy of living and has been set free from the rat race of pursing happiness.

Jesus said, "I came that they might have life and have it more abundantly!"

When you live the abundant life God gives you a heavenly spirit.

When you live the abundant life God takes your

-Weaknesses and turns them into strengths.

-Failures and turns them into successes!

-Defeats and turns them into victories!

-Doubts and turns them into confidence!

When you live the abundant life storms may rise and winds may blow, but God will make a way!

There was a time when went out of our way in pursuit of happiness. We filled the gambling casinos, bingo parlors and midnight crap shoots.

In pursuit of happiness we engaged in countless secret encounters in cheap hotels, wrinkling sheets, kissing three frogs trying to find one prince.

In the pursuit of happiness, our best friends were not Matthew, Mark and Luke but they had names like Jack Daniels, Seagrams and Johnny Walker Red.

But when we found the joy of the Lord, we stopped looking for happiness because we've been changed, washed in the blood of the lamb!

We once sang, Don't worry be happy. Now we sing, "This joy I have, the world didn't give it and the world can't take it away!

I've got a new life!

I've got a new walk!

I've got a new talk!

I've got a new story to tell!

I've got to tell everybody about Jesus!

I've got to tell them how he died on Calvary!

I've got to tell them how he stayed in the grave for three long days!

..But Early Sunday morning!

I've got to tell somebody!

That Early Sunday morning he arose in my life!

SCRIPTURE: "One man of you shall chase a thousand: for the Lord your God, he it is that fighteth for you, as he hath promised you" Joshua 23:10

Introduction

Have you ever looked at the world around you and felt helpless? You probably asked, "What can I do about it, I'm just one person? I can't change the world!" If there is injustice in government can one person make a difference? If children are not learning in school, can one person change that? If there are hungry people all over the city, can one person make a difference? The answer is "yes" one person can make a difference. History is filled with instances where one person made differences that changed the world around them.

We are familiar with many people who changed the world as we know it today.

We know of Susan B. Anthony who changed the way the world treats women though her life work.

We know about Martin Luther King, who changed the way America responds to race and humanity issues.

We know about Mahatma Gandhi who changed life for millions in India and around the world through his use of passive resistance.

We know about Bill Gates and Steve Jobs who changed the way the work communications through their work with computers.

There may be others that we do not know like Julia Butterfly and sat in the branches of a 1000 year old tree for two years to save it from destruction and thereby called attention to a national need for more environmental concerns.

The historic record extensively documents the many ways that one person made tremendous contributions that changed the world around them forever. Their efforts demonstrate the power of "one."

What can one person do? Alone, probably very little. But one person with God can do more than anyone expects; in fact such a team is always the majority. That's the way God has worked in history. He called one person, blessed their efforts and changed the world.

As Christians, we know that with God all things are possible. There is no battle that he cannot win and no problem he cannot solve. When we act in fact, he multiplies our actions and multiplies the power of one in a way that makes the impossible, possible.

Exposition

This text focuses on a farewell sermon given by Joshua as he admonished Israel to boldly claim the promises God made to the people.

At the time of this writing Joshua was an old man who was speaking to the tribes in the last days of his life. What we would call a convention was convened for the purpose of hearing his last words to them. In this chapter he details what God had done for them (v. 3,4,9,14), and what he was ready to do yet further

He urges them to persevere in their duty to God and cautions them against all familiarity with their idolatrous neighbors.

During Joshua's lifetime many of the Canaanites had been driven from the land, however there were still many present. In some places they were unusually strong in number. Joshua encourages the people to know that if they remain true to God that he would give them the land as promised.

Joshua 23:6,14 both make it clear that those who desire to be blessed must obey the word of God. If we do, not one word of his promise to us will go unfulfilled.

Signs of that would come in the form of single individuals who would perform miraculous feats that would cause thousands to flee. In the years that would follow such as the time in 1 Samuel 14:13 when a thousand men ran from Jonathan, or when David chased away the armies of the Philistines by single handedly destroying their champion Goliath; Or Samson as he defeated thousands of Philistines with jawbone of a donkey. Each case demonstrated the prophecy of verse 10 and the power of one person, whose life is in the hands of God.

Passion and Purpose

Brett Blair wrote this famous phrase, "I'm only one but I am one. I can't do everything but I can do something and what I can do I ought to do and that by the grace of God I will do."

How can you make a difference? You are just one person. We begin to make a difference when we pursue a problem with passion. We are the most effective when we attack a problem with what Mahatma Gandhi called, "Saturga" or soul force; the unwillingness to stop until the desired end is achieve if only by sheer force of the soul alone.

Things start to happen we one person decides to become an unbeatable foe. Such a foe, powered by purpose alone will eventually arise victorious.

Robert Kennedy once said, "Never underestimate what one person can do." One person can stand up and drop the pebble in the water, but when that person learns to organize himself to get others to drop pebbles, then the world takes notice. Alone, the world dismisses us as oddballs, weirdoes and square pegs that can't fit into round holes. But when the world notices that others are latching on to your idea, it begins to take notice and gradually things change.

Changes are made when one man or woman of faith decides to take a stand. That is the first stone in the pond. The ripple begins when that person learns how to network with others in a vigorous effort that causes other stones to be dropped in succession; enough to create a wave, enough to make a change.

The power of one gets personal when you receive a mental phone call from God. That's when he brings a problem to your mind and pushes you to say, "somebody ought to do something." We realize the power of one, when we react to that mental phone call by answering, "I will do something about it."- That's the power of one.

It's one man who will stand up to the government on behalf of others to oppose a wrong.

It's one parent who will change a policy of a school system that is wrong.

It's one neighbor who refuses to allow the destruction of a neighborhood.

It's one worker who dares speak up about workplace injustices.

That's the power of one.

When does it begin?

When does the power of one begin? It begins when we respond to "if only" situations. It's when we respond to situations with a "yes."

If only someone would feed the hungry. The power of one is realized when we respond "I will be that someone."

If only someone would help the children. The power of one is realized when we respond, "I will be that someone."

If only someone would help the poor. We begin when we say, "I will be that someone."

I will give time to make it happen.

I will give money to support it.

I will give my energy to help move the mountains of resistance.

I will answer the phone call from heaven which asks me "who will" by answering "I will be the one."

An unknown author once said, I will be the one because:

One TREE can start a forest; One SMILE begins a friendship

One STAR can guide a ship at sea; One CANDLE wipes out darkness

One LAUGH will conquer gloom; One HOPE will raise our spirits

One TOUCH can show you care; One LIFE can make a difference

Are You The One?

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that when God wants to respond to the troubles of the world, he could send legions of angels but he usually sends just one.

Hannah had no idea that Samuel would be a judge when she brought him to the temple, after all the priest Eli already had two sons, but Samuel was the one.

Esther had no way of knowing that she would become Queen of Persia, but God used her to save his people. She was the one.

That's the way it works, you may be the one that God has sent.

Are you the one who God has anointed to rear an abandoned child?

Are you the one that God has appointed to mend a breach in your family?

Are you the one that God has ordained to speak to the problems of your generation?

Are you the one that God has sent to respond to special situation? At the time you may not look like or even feel like you are the one; but looks are deceiving.

David did not look like he was the one that was to save Israel by slaying Goliath. He was just a boy, but he was the one.

Saul did not look like he was the one that would establish the church around the world because he was its main detractor, but he was the one.

Samson had no real desire to champion the cause of God against the Philistines, after all he loved their women, but he was the one.

John baptized many people in the river Jordan and while he was locked in prison he sent word to the master to ask "are you the one?"

"I know you are from a town called Nazareth, but are you the one?!

"I know your stepfather was a poor carpenter and your mother was poor too, but are you the one?

When God was ready to save the world he could have sent cherubims riding chariots to rain down fire, but he only sent one.

Who is the one sent from God? His name is Jesus! He is the one!

Jesus is the one.

When nobody else cares, he cares because he is the one!

When nobody else knows, he knows, because he is the one!

When nobody else can, he can, because he is the one!

When we need assurance, he is the one!

When we need inspiration, he is the one!

When we need comfort, he is the one!

I don't know about you but I've found out that there is only one God and one mediator between God and man and that's Jesus!

There is only one way to heaven and Jesus "I am the way, the truth and the life, no man cometh to the father, but by me." When you want to get to heaven, he is the one!

There is only one name that can save us from our sins. "..for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." It's the name of Jesus, because he is the one!

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, the Bright and Morning Star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!

He is the one!

A New World Order

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 2007

SCRIPTURE: "And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write: for these words are true and faithful." Revelation 21:5

Introduction

Have you ever imagined how beautiful heaven will be? We have no idea what lies in store for us in the kingdom of heaven; what we do know is that it will be beautiful to the eye and to the soul.

Each of us has a different perception. Some of us envision a land filled with lakes and rivers that will make heaven a sportsman's paradise.

There are some who see a land where the sun never sets, clouds never fill the sky and everyday is Sunday.

The sociologist sees a world where every person is respected, valued and treated with dignity. If the world is ordered by social planners there would be no poverty, disease or ailments to hinder our progress. In this world war would cease and friendships would abound.

The economist dreams of a new world, too. In her world there is a balance of trade, no interest rates and zero unemployment. The gross national product would always be high and the economy would always be lively. In this world, all bills would be paid on time and in full at the end of each month.

Politicians dream of a world in which their party is in control and power is in their hands. The politician's dream world would have no term limits, ethics restrictions or investigations into wrong doing. In the politician's world there would be elections, be there would never be an opponent; forever.

Everyone has a personal concept of what a new world order should replicate, imitate or duplicate. No two people have the same idea. Consider the cat and the mouse that lay side by side on a porch one day, musing about their idea of dream world. The mouse was fat a plump and lay on his back looking into the ceiling. He said he would have a perfect world if he could have all the cheese he wanted, without fear of mouse traps. He dreamed of a world that offered all the leftovers needed to make a skinny mouse fat. As he talked, the skinny cat stared at him instead of the ceiling. The cat began to talk about his dream world. The cat saw himself surrounded by his favorite foods, but unlike the mouse it was not cheese and leftovers. His dream world would be to live in a land filled with what every mouse loves; mice.

When the mouse heard that, the cat's dream became his nightmare!

Today, the church is preparing believers for life in a different world. It is a world that will be new and eternal; much different from the world we know today. While we each have a different world in mind, our Lord has a different world in mind for believers. The church is challenged to prepare us for it because it will be one that will be completely out of this world!

As Christians, we know God is preparing a better world for us. We look forward to the promised kingdom of God. It will be a new world order. It will be a different world from this world. It will be a better world than this world. It will be different and because Christ will be there, it will be a glorious world for us all!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus' revelation to John about the future state of the church and the relationship of all believers to God.

John painted a picture of the most glorious of the end time events, the coming of New Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven like a bride adorned for her husband. This is the beautiful home of the saints, the final destination of the church and millions of believers. They will be in the presence of God.

The emphasis of verse five is that everything in the new order will be new. New implies that it will be unused, untarnished, untouched and pure. The new order that God promises will be wonderful because it will be a place where believers will be in the presence of God.

The new world's greatest attribute will be the fact that it will be the dwelling place of God.

A voice will announce (v3) some very important words, "Behold the Tabernacle of God is with men and he will dwell with them and they shall be his people and God himself shall be with them and be their God." It is a statement of finality. It suggests the end of a long struggle to achieve oneness!

John saw a picture of the new world that is to come. He saw God finally dwelling with his people in a way that he would be their God and they would be his people.

What John saw was a picture of the great day when God himself comes to dwell among men in an eternal order ordered by his own presence.

As the Church Celebrates

As the church celebrates its journey; it should celebrate its humble beginnings, its present state and its future. It remembers what was, what is now, and it looks forward to its future state.

Churches should strive to remember "From whence cometh thou?" The humble beginnings of every congregation in comparison to its present always remind a congregation of the great work that God has done through its members. In addition, congregations that reflect also see how God has lifted them and related to them in a personal way that has magnified his name and their greatness in his eyes.

Churches are encouraged to remember to continue striving to advance the kingdom of God with the reward in view. The reward is promised to the churches in Revelation 21:7 "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

LIFE IN THE NEW WORLD: The church helps believers realize that they are heavenly travelers, on a journey to a new world.

What's valuable and important to us in this world will have no value in the new world to come.

Our Porsches and other imported vehicles are extremely valuable in this world, but in the new eternal world, they won't be worth a heavenly dime.

Our Rolex watches are worth thousands in this world, but in the new eternal world, watch will have any value because time will be no more.

Our tailor made suits and designer clothing, may fill our closets in this world, but in the new eternal world, the angels won't be wearing Tommy Hilfiger, Liz Claiborne and FUBU. I'm going to put on my robe and tell the story!

Our designer shoes won't have any value up there, because we're going to put on golden slippers and walk all over God's heaven!

Our diamond rings and pearl necklaces will have no value when we get to heaven, for the very foundations of the city will be made of precious stones and the 12 gates of the city will be made of giant pearls!

Our 401K and our IRA, Stock Portfolios and investment plans are good in this world, but it won't mean anything in glory, because there my father is rich in houses and land and he holds wealth of the world in his hand!

NO RACISM IN THE NEW WORLD: The church must continue to remind believers that the new world is coming; it will be a world here the racial injustice will not exist.

While racism exists in this world, in the world ahead, color will not be a criterion. In the new world order, Jews, Chinese, Japanese , Africans and a thousand other races will work side by side because all

NO MONEY PROBLEMS IN THE NEW WORLD: When the New kingdom begins believers will live a different economic world. There will not be a high emphasis on money in the new world, because money is only used to possess "things" and services; up yonder everyone will have access to the same things and all believers will struggle to serve rather than be served themselves. Gold will be plentiful because every street will be paved with it. Precious gems will be plentiful because the holy city will sit on 12 foundations made from precious gems. There will be no money problems in the new, eternal world.

God has a place for believers

Finally, brothers and sisters we must remember that when this old world is over, God has prepared a new world for all of the people he has made perfect with his blood.

There may not be a place in this world that is heavenly, but there is a place called heaven.

Abraham traveled all of his life, looking for a new and eternal place, a city not made with hands!

Elijah received a one way ticket to the new and eternal place,

-There are no wars because there is only peace, in the new and eternal world.

-There is no hatred, because there is only love in the new and eternal world.

-There is no sadness, because there is only gladness, in the new and eternal world.

-There is no weakness, because there is only strength in the new and eternal world.

-There is no death, because there is only life in the new and eternal world.

I know there is going to be a new world because I heard Jesus say, "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am ye may be also!"

The place called heaven is a place on a far-a-away strand where we will never grow old.

The New Jerusalem will have perfect streets, made of solid Gold!

The New Jerusalem will have perfect lighting, because it will be illuminated by the glory of God!

In the new and eternal world there will be no medicine, because there will be a tree in its midst that will be good for the healing of the nations!

I don't know about you, but I want to go the place called heaven.

If you want to go with us it begins when you believe in God who had a perfect son!

If you believe he lived a perfect life and died a perfect death on an old rugged cross! If you believe he's alive because he arose early Sunday morning; then

Come and go with me, to my father's house!

In the eternal kingdom that is coming there will be peace, joy and happiness!

Come and go with me!

Come and go with me!

Nehemiah's Challenge

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 2007

SCRIPTURE: Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good work. Nehemiah 2:18

Introduction

Have you ever had a vision that only you seem to see and understand? Heavenly visions are those that are inspired by God and powered by the Holy Spirit. David had a vision for the building of a temple. He spent his lifetime beginning the work and his son completed what he began. Joseph had a vision about the relationship between himself and his brothers. In Egypt he built grain storage bins that were successful and his visions became true. Peter had a vision on a roof top. It was a vision of the disciples building the church on the principles of faith and carrying it around the world. We are familiar with visions. However, it is only when we embrace them with a mind to work that they ever become realities.

God has a great plan for the church. Generally, he gives his plans for such undertakings to his appointed leader. In a local congregation it's the pastor. In a district, it's the moderator; on a national basis it's the president. The unique nature of God's vision is that every small vision given to local congregations is somehow tied into a larger vision that he has in mind. God builds several small churches and according to his grand plan, often it is expected that the small churches band together and build an even greater work than none of them could do alone.

Usually there is not much problem between the time that God gives the vision from heaven and the time that is received by the preacher. The preacher receives the vision for the church and sees it clearly. He is aware of his meager resources but does not question God; he just accepts the challenge. The problem usually comes when the vision is shared from the pulpit to the pew. Church folks don't usually respond the way God wants them to respond.

Sometimes we can really complicate building projects. Imagine what would have happened to Noah had he received the command to build the ark today, among people like us. Imagine that Noah that in a few months that he planned to destroy the world and would make it rain until the whole earth is covered with water and all the evil people are destroyed. Imagine that the Lord told Noah that he planned to save a few people, so he was commanded to build an ark. In a flash the Lord gave Noah the plans for the ark. No one could really see the full picture but him.

Now imagine that after a few months the rain clouds began to form in the sky and the rain began to drizzle. Noah had not cut the first board, gathered the first animal or any food. From Heaven The Lord shouts,

"Hey Noah, where is my ark I told you to build?? He sent a lightning bolt to wake up Noah and added a thunder clap for emphasis. The skies began to cloud up and rain began to fall. The Lord saw that Noah was sitting in his front yard, weeping. And there was no Ark.

Noah said, "Lord please forgive me but when I told all the church folk about the ark one told me that we couldn't start without a church business meeting. Another man told me that the church should not be in the building business but in the soul saving business. One man said he didn't think it was such a good idea because I didn't have any boat building experience. Another said the plans need review by a committee to be sure they meet building codes. One group said they would not give a dime on such a fool hearted project. I had trouble getting money for the project because some said it would take away from their projects.

Suddenly the rain stopped and the sun began to shine. Noah said, "Lord, are still going to destroy the world?" The Lord said, I still plan to destroy the world but I think you've stumbled on something worse than hell?" What's that? Noah asked. The voice answered, "A world full of Church folks will make a hell out of any plan."

Perhaps that's what God often trusts visions in the hands of a few to be shared with many. When too many people are involved there will be committees and committees usually spell the slow death of many building projects.

As Christians, we should strive to clearly see the vision that God has inspired and embrace it its sanctity. Then we should roll up our sleeves and prepare to make the vision and reality in the name of the Lord.

Exposition

This text focuses on the Israel as it accepted the challenge to rebuild the walls.

When Nehemiah returned to Jerusalem he was shocked at what he saw. The walls around the city and the gates had remained in ruins. The people were disillusioned, in debt and intimidated by the awesome commitment that rebuilding the walls would require. They had a variety of excuses they gave for why the walls had not been rebuilt. Anything he suggested, they said it would not work. Every new idea he presented, they said, "we've tried that before."

Nehemiah accepted the challenge of building but he refused to accept their excuses. Despite the danger he inspected the walls at night (2:15). He then called an assembly and convinced the people of the need for a building program. He was an excellent leader who demonstrated engineering knowledge and brilliant organizing ability (ch. 3). He encouraged them while reminding them that they would have to watch, fight and pray.

Nehemiah presented the challenge and the people responded to the challenge with the common consensus "let us rise up." It was a testament of faith for a people that had sat idle for so long. The work began.

The people had a mind to work and the massive task of rebuilding the walls was continued. It was a massive work requiring thousands of workers spread out over miles of landscape. Even as the people worked, enemies both within and without, kept a steady stream of delaying tactics flowing.

Nehemiah was an unusual person. He was strong yet persuasive. He was humble enough to be cupbearer to the king but he was strong enough to push the project to the end. He was a man of action; he got things done. He knew he could reason with the people but he also knew how to use the power of his office.

Meeting the Challenge

As the church undertakes building projects today, it is a good idea for believers to study the way Nehemiah approached the challenge of building. There are three points for us to consider:

HE EXPLAINED THE PRESENT CIRCUMSTANCE. Nehemiah challenged the people to look at their circumstance. They looked at the broken walls and the abandoned city. Although he had been in Babylon, Nehemiah said, "Ye see the distress that we are in." Today, the challenge is the same. We who lead building campaigns must help the people "see" the distress of the situation. Why is it that they lived in Judah but could not "see" the circumstance? Their eyes saw the need but their heart could not accept the challenge to rebuild. They were in a state of denial. Nehemiah boldly said what many of them knew was right; the challenge had to met. It is the same today; the challenge of building to increase our opportunities for missionary work is before us. Like Nehemiah we can say, "Ye see the distress we are in." Many who hear the sermons and presentations know the need that has been ignored because of an unwillingness to "see" with the eye of faith, what could be done. Yet, the challenge must be met.

HE TOLD THEM OF THE ORIGINS OF HIS PLAN: Nehemiah explained the origins of his plan. He said, "I told them of the hand of my God which was upon me." Often the pastor of a church or the moderator of a group of churches is given a vision that is shared with no other. He has no other choice, because God gives it to him. When God makes a plan, he also chooses a man who can stand to deliver it to the people. Today, those who face the challenge of building see the man, but they need to know the origin of the plan.

When the church builds it is not for financial gain or pride.

When the church builds it is not a petty competition to outdoor others or footrace to see who can build the most first.

When the church builds it is responding to the command of God to expand his kingdom, promote its mission at home and abroad. The origin of the church's plan is God himself. We have felt the hand of God on us. He has position us, and empowered us. It is now up to us to meet the challenge of building.

THE PEOPLE RESOLVED TO MEET THE CHALLENGE: After

Nehemiah presented the situation, he encouraged them to join him in the work. He had the authority to mandate many things because he had letters from the king; Yet he spent precious time convincing them of the need. When their eyes were finally opened and they could "see" their situation with eyes of faith; they knew what needed to be done. When they learned the origin of the plan; that it was from God, the people resolved to rise up and build. It was not just lip service. They fell in line in large numbers, working day and night to rebuild the walls.

The project was finished ahead of schedule, because they had a mind to work together.

They faced opposition, but they had a mind to work.

They faced grumbling in their ranks, but they had a mind to work. They faced the prospect of attack from enemies, but they proceeded forward because they had a mind to work. They "Strengthened their hands" and did what was needed to be done in the name of the Lord.

Meeting the Challenge

Finally, brothers and sisters, those who want to meet the challenge of building should rise up and resolve like Judah and say, "Let us rise up and build."

Donald Campbell, in his book "Man in charge" says there were many ways that Nehemiah met the challenge of building:

—He established a reasonable and attainable goal.
—He had a sense of mission.
—He showed respect to his superior.
—He prayed at crucial times.
—He made his request with tact and graciousness.
—He was well prepared and thought of his needs in advance.
—He identified himself as one with the people.
—He set before them a reasonable and attainable goal.
—He assured them God was in the project.
—He displayed self-confidence in facing obstacles.
—He displayed God's confidence in facing obstacles.
—He did not argue with opponents.
—He was not discouraged by opposition.
—He courageously used the authority of his position.

To meet the challenge, leaders must stay focused on the mission.

The church should not be dissuaded from its mission and should rise to meet the challenge.

To meet this challenge we need the power of God. We can't meet this challenge on our own.

There are some things we cannot do by ourselves. We need the Lord, he's like American Express; we don't leave home without him.

Our work will need blessing, but we can't bless ourselves. No matter how hard we work, we cannot bless ourselves. While it is true that we can be a blessing to someone else we can't bless ourselves. If we need a blessing, we have to call on the Lord.

Our work will need answered prayers, but We can't answer our own prayers. No matter how clean and moral we live our lives, we do not have the capacity to answer our own prayers. Getting an answer to a prayer requires us to call on the Lord.

Our work will require save souls, but we can't save our own souls. Salvation is the act of cleaning the slate and restoring a good relationship with God. We can't save ourselves, because there is only one name under the heavens whereby we must be saved. It's not our name, but the name of Jesus!

Before we meet the challenge of building, therefore, we must meet the challenge of the cross.

Come and go with me out to Calvary and see the challenge of the cross! It was the challenge of building the kingdom of God!

Hanging out on the cross, a great work was criticized and despised!

I hear the critics at the cross saying your great work seems to be:

A battle lost; A horrible defeat; A pathetic end to a glorious beginning

It didn't seem like much, sitting out on a hill, but the great challenge of redemption was underway!

The cross was a great challenge because it represented the greatest of all victories.

The cross was a great challenge because it was highest of all accomplishments!

The cross was a great challenge because it was the finest of all hours!

The cross was a great challenge because it was noblest of all events!

I heard somebody say to Jesus, "If you are who you say you are, why don't you come down?"

He didn't come down, but Early Sunday morning, he got up!

He got up, with determination in his heart!

He got up, with vision in his eyes!

He got up, with salvation in his blood!

He got up, With all power in his hands!

I'm so glad that he got up with the power to meet the challenge of raising us and saving us!

I'm so glad that he met the challenge of rebuilding my life!

The Watchman's Challenge

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 2007

SCRIPTURE: "I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day nor night: ye that make mention of the LORD, keep not silence." Isaiah 62:6

Introduction

Why do you need a pastor? There are some skeptics who believe that the church does not really need a pastor. They believe it can run efficiently by a board of deacons and trustees who can get someone to preach for them Sunday by Sunday. They mistake the pastor for a mere motivational speaker, hired to give a speech, who should collect his check and go home. Yet, the pastor is more than a mere speaker; he is God's voice in these turbulent times. Moreover, he is the conduit through which God speaks to the people and through whom the concern of the people is kept before God.

The pastor's job is often a lonely one. In the local congregation he is the one voice in the wilderness, the sole watchman on the wall who is constantly pointing the way to God and reminding God of the needs of the people.
His voice is often a lone voice that offers words from heaven that encourage the church in difficult times and speaks to God in ways that he will hear.

From his vantage point, the pastor sees the big picture of the flaws and strengths of his people. That same vantage point gives him access to God on their behalf that no mere motivational speaker has.

As Christians, we know the value of the man of God who echoes the voice of God in our life situations. His voice brings us a word from heaven that is refreshing to our ears. It also brings our petitions before God in these turbulent times.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he presents the man of God as watchman on the wall.

Isaiah constantly reminded Israel that its concerns would constantly kept before God and that God would keep his word before them.

The prophet would be the instrument through whom God would speak to the people and hear their collective concerns. In some instances Isaiah characterized the prophet as a “voice in the wilderness.” In this text he is compared to a “watchman” on the wall.

This comparison is important because in biblical times watchmen were placed in the towers and walls that surrounded cities to warn the people of any approaching enemy. While on guard they never slept. At certain points they would check in by indicating with a prearranged sign that all was well.

Using the comparison of watchmen, Isaiah indicates that pastors, like watchmen, were to always be on guard for the benefit of the people. Watchmen were charged to give themselves no rest until the petitions of the people were brought before God and until the promises of God to the people were realized. That’s the meaning of the phrase “No rest till he establishes Jerusalem;” the pastors, or watchmen were to continuously warn the people about dangers and pray to God for the people.

The “watchmen” were to hold God to His promises, knowing that is what He desires. God’s people should pray for things even when they know God has promised them.

The voice of the prophet served the purpose of preparing the people for the coming of the Lord, warning them of danger, and keeping their concerns before God. He announced the glad tidings of heaven to the people. He urged them to prepare for salvation and be fit to receive it.

What Watchmen Do

There are three functions that pastors as watchmen must undertake:

WATCHMEN WARN OF DANGER: God told Israel “I have set watchmen on the wall.” It indicates that God has appointed pastors and caused them to be placed in a high position for his purposes, one of which is to warn the congregation of danger in turbulent times.

Our modern times are dangerous. Our communities are filled with news of drive by shootings, school murders, the war in Iraq, health problems, marriages dissolving, and a general decline in morality.

The world is thirsty for news from heaven. It is thirsty for divine direction in the wilderness of these turbulent times.

The watchman on the wall must constantly remind the church of the dangers of relaxing our guard and flirting with the enemy. We are often tempted to copy the ways of those who are embracing the world so that we can attract large numbers and build larger congregations. The watchman on the wall must warn the people of the dangers ahead in these turbulent times.

The watchman also reminds his congregation that despite the danger of these times and the dryness of the wilderness there is an oasis of water; there is a word from the Lord.

Through preaching the Word, the watchman shows believers how to find restoration and refreshment for souls languishing in the heat of the wilderness and to protect themselves against the wiles of the devil.

WATCHMEN NEVER STOP PRAISING: The watchman never rests from his prayer and praise vigil for the people. He knows the concerns of his congregation and is constantly talking to God about them. In addition, to praying for them he is constantly thanking God for his blessings and leading the people to do the same.

In these turbulent times, it is easy to focus on the dangers that exist and forget how God has blessed us. The watchman leads us in our prayer requests but he also leads us in giving God thanks for his mercies.

The watchman constantly reminds us to pray and give thanks to God.

We should pray "unceasingly" and give thanks for everything.

We should give God thanks for the seen and the unseen.

We should thank him for the greens and butter beans, but we also thank him for being able to sleep soundly at night.

We should thank him for turkey and dressing, but we also thank him for dressing our souls with his grace.

We should thank him for fried chicken, rice and a little gravy, but we should also thank him for spiritual gravy: Joy, love, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, faith, meekness, and temperance.

We should thank him for cars, houses and color T.V. but we should also thank him for coloring our lives with faith and hope because they help us to see the world in a different light.

The watchman on the wall, reminds us to constantly pray and praise the Lord.

WATCHMAN NEVER RESTS: The text indicates that the watchman on the wall never stopped reminding the people of God's expectation. However, if you look closely at the text you will note that he also never stopped reminding God of his promises to the people. The text says the watchman "give him no rest." God implores believers to ask him for their desires. In fact he expects us to ask him repeatedly.

Jesus told the parable of the man who had settled in his bed at night and was asleep when his neighbor knocked on his door at midnight seeking help. The man tried to ignore the neighbor but he kept knocking. Finally, because he kept knocking the man opened his door and helped the neighbor in need. He told believers to have a spirit of "importunity" or constantly asking God.

The watchman never lets up. He is always asking God to bless the people, save the people and restore the people.

It's the watchman who declares in the words of the song writer, "It's me, it's me oh Lord standing in the need of prayer! Not the preacher, not the deacon but it's me oh Lord, standing in the need of prayer!"

It's the watchman who declares, Lord remember your people in these turbulent times!

It's the watchman who declares, Lord we are out here on your word, don't leave us alone!

It's the watchman who declares, Lord we have wrapped our hands in the winding chain, forget not your mercies toward us.

The Watchman Must Speak Out

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that this is no time for the watchman to be silent, he must speak out!

Israel needs to hear a word from the Lord in these times of uneasiness over the war, the economy and the state of our family.

We need to hear a word from the Lord when our children are having children, fathers are abandoning their families, and opportunities seem to evade.

Every believer looks to the wall and asks the question, "Watchman, what of the night?" He waits to hear a word from the Lord.

The watchman on the wall should speak with a voice that cannot be muffled by the turbulence of our times!

The watchman on the wall is a voice that speaks to every situation of our lives.

The Watchman on the wall speaks about love in the middle of hate!

The Watchman on the wall speaks about joy in the middle of sorrow!

The Watchman on the wall speaks about strength in the middle of weakness!

The Watchman on the wall speaks about success in the midst of failure!

The Watchman on the wall speaks about going forward when the world says turn back!

The Watchman on the wall speaks about life in the midst of death!

The Watchman on the wall speaks about rest in the midst of these tiring turbulent and fatiguing times!

This is the voice that says the Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want!

This is the voice that says to my wandering spirit, "Ye though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil for thou are with me!"

It's the voice that says, "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever!"

The preacher's voice echoes through these turbulent times, declaring the good news!

It's a voice that tells the world that Jesus, the son of God lived on the earth for 33 long years!

It's a voice that declares with certainty, that he died out on Calvary; but early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!"

As long as there is danger in the world, the preacher must keep on preaching!

As long as storms of war, poverty and injustice continue to rise the watchman on the wall must keep on preaching

Preach the word!

Preach it in season. Preach it out of season!

Tell the world that God is good all the time and all the time God is good!

Tell the world about Jesus!

Tell the world that he died, but early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave.

From the walls declare God is still on throne!

From the walls declare God is still in control!

God Will Make A Way

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 5, 2007

SCRIPTURE: Behold, I will do a new thing; now it shall spring forth; shall ye not know it? I will even make a way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert. Isaiah 43:19

Introduction

Have you ever faced a difficult path and wondered how you would make it through? Most of us face paths of uncertainty on a regular basis. We know when we are facing such a dilemma when the way around, through or over it is extremely difficult, if not impossible.

We've all faced impossible situations but we remember, that while can't see a way; God makes a way for his own, if we patiently wait for him to move.

Consider the little girl who was taking her first train ride. Wide-eyed with fascination, she watched as telephone poles, cars, and farms whizzed by. When the train approached a river, she became frightened and cried out, "Mommy! The train is going into the river!" But a bridge carried it across to the other side. Later, as the train sped toward a mountain, the child again called out in fear, "Mommy, we are going to run into that mountain!"But a tunnel at its base let the speeding train pass through. "Oh," said the youngster, "someone must have gone ahead and made a way for us."

That's what God does for every believer. He runs ahead of us and makes a way. All we can see right now is the mountain, but he's cutting tunnel's just high enough for us to get through.

One of the ways that Satan intimidates Saints is by giving us a spirit of fear. When we are afraid we are edging toward defeat because it indicates that we have lost our faith. The believer concludes that we do not control what mountains, rivers or roadblocks that may hinder our journey, but we know that if we traveling the path God wants us to go, he will go ahead of us and make a way.

As Christians, we are confident that our God is able to make a way for us, even when the situation appears gloomy. When it gets really bad, the faithful will always remember, "The Lord will make a way somehow."

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he reminds Israel of God's promise to be with them in return for their faithfulness. Much of Isaiah's prophecy deals with warning Israel to trust in God rather than its own devices, political allegiances, knowledge or ways. The nation faced the prospect of destruction at the hand of the Assyrian army. The Assyrians were a devastating world power. They were destroying all that came in their path. Israel spent decades trying to secure themselves against possible attacks by the Assyrians. Israel made alliances with Egypt and other smaller countries. It built its own army to its maximum potential. Israel rested upon what it had learned and its connections in the world of diplomacy to protect the nation.

However, they heard from the prophet Isaiah that they should not depend heavily upon the alliances, knowledge or their military strength, but to "wait on the Lord." His constant theme was let "the Lord lead you."To reassure them, Isaiah began to remind them of the great wonders God had done for them in the past. He reminded them how God had made a path for them that carried them through the red sea and across the desert. He urged them to look back at the victorious journey of their ancestry and take heart because that same God was still with them with undiminished power and ability.

This chapter of Isaiah focuses on his attempts to show the people the mighty acts God has done for them in the past and to point them to the future. His purpose is to reassure them that their future is safe in his hands. Isaiah 43:2 is a clear example of God's words of hope to them, "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee." It is both a prophetic statement and a vision of hope. It is a statement of fact because it suggests that there would be a time when Israel would pass through the water and walk through the fires of life. It is prophetic because of the assurance in his words: "I will be with thee."

After rehearsing how God's power had been displayed in times past and reminding them of how God broke the powers of mighty nations opposing them in the past (v17) God tells Israel at verse 18 not to dwell on the past, because he would do a new thing for the people. Just like he had blazed a path for their forefathers he was about to do a great thing in their lives as well. God promised ". I will even make a way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert." (v19)

This 43rd chapter of Isaiah is important to believers because it recalls God's promise to Israel and to every believer faced with the prospect of the unknown, that whatever the circumstance, those who trust in him will find that God will make a way.

How He Makes A Way

HE IS A BRIDGE OVER TROUBLE WATER: God became a bridge over Israel's troubled waters. His bridge is not like the bridges of men. When the bridge across Interstate 35 in Minnesota collapsed, it caused a national fear because this bridge collapsed. This bridge shrinks by two feet each when the temperature reaches -20 degrees and expands as much as 12 feet in heat of the summer. It carried 141,000 cars a day. In time it simply collapsed. But the Federal Highway Administration says there are 152,000 more just like it in the U.S. today. Made man bridges collapse, but when God becomes a bridge over our trouble water, there ain't no danger.

Sometimes God doesn't bother with bridges at all he just parts the water. In Exodus 14:21 God caused Moses to stretch out his hand and he parted the water for Israel to cross on dry land. Joshua 3:15-16 records how Joshua and the children of Israel entering the Promised Land but a swollen river Jordan blocked their way. Yet, God ordered them to proceed forward. As the feet of the priests touched the water, they miraculously rolled back and the entire host of Israel crossed on dry land. 2 Kings 2:8 records how Elijah and Elisha came to face the Jordan the waters rolled back for them when they were struck with his mantle!

He can be a bridge over troubling water, or he can simply part the water; either way, He can make a way of no way.

EVEN WHEN WE CAN'T SEE HIM, HE'S MAKING A WAY: When we are faced with difficulties we can't see clearly. That's when our faith has to keep reminding us that, even when we cannot see him, God's is making a way. Israel could not see God working in Egypt or at the Red Sea, they also found it hard to see in the wilderness. In the wilderness, they often suffered difficulties associated with the nomadic life. Water was always short and resources were few. They could not plant crops, or make new clothes. They were susceptible to disease and without military protection while they were in the wilderness. Yet despite this susceptibility, God blessed them but they could not see.

They could not see how they wore the same clothes for 40 years but they never wore out.

They could not see how they were protected from their enemies despite their own ability to defend themselves.

They could not see how they were provided water out of nowhere despite a drought situations. God bless them, but they could not see.

In the wilderness, God has been our rock in a weary land.

In the wilderness, God has been our shelter in the time of storm.

In the wilderness, God has been our way out of no way.

In the wilderness, God has been help in times of trouble even when we could not see it.

IF JESUS IS WITH US, WE WILL MAKE IT THROUGH: There are times when life hits us hard and feel that we are down for the count. That's when we panic. Panic situations may involve the disability of a loved one, a fire, an automobile accident or death in the family. If our fear of the unknown is greater than our faith...we are likely to panic. We are less likely to panic when we remember that as long as God is with us, we will make it through.

That's what happened to the disciples when they were aboard a ship and a storm developed. They panicked until someone remembered that Jesus was on board. Jesus came to the deck, unmoved by the storm and said, “Peace be still.”

Our fear sees the worse that can happen. Our faith knows the best that can happen.

Our faith remembers that as long as God is with us, he will make a way.

God will provide what we need

Finally, brothers and sisters we should remember that when God sees our need, sees our faith and sees our sacrifice, he will make a way.

Brothers and sisters we are strengthened when we remember that sees what we need and he also sees what we have done to build his kingdom.

He sees what troubles us and he knows that we have given him our best in service, there should be no doubt in our minds that he will make a way.

To make a way for us he becomes many things. He becomes:

JEHOVAH-JIREH, because he will provide.

JEHOVAH-RAPHA because he says, ’I am the Lord that healeth thee’.

JEHOVAH-SHALOM because he provides peace in the middle of confusion.

JEHOVAH-NISSI because he is our victory in the presence of our enemies.

When there is disruption, or insecurity all around, it is good to know that God can bring peace in the midst of confusion.

No matter how tough times get, we must remember that the Lord is still able to make a way. He can make a way because he is a God whose:

-Power never weakens; Grace never disappoints

-Love never leaves; Promises never fail

-Glory never diminishes; Joy never ends

-Foundation never shakes; Truth never changes

-Supply never shrinks; Blessings never stop coming!

God sees our tears in the midnight hour, he will make a way!

God sees our concern for our families and loved ones, he will make a way!

God sees our despair over our current situation and even when we can’t see it, our help is on the way.

Our help came down through 42 generations!

Our help was born in the little town of Bethlehem!

Our help is the same help that healed the sick and made the lame walk!

Our help is the same help that made the blind see and raised Lazarus from the dead!

Our help is the lamb of God

His name is Jesus!

He died out on Calvary! But early Sunday morning arose from the dead!

Every day, he is still lifting bowed down heads!

Every day, he is still wiping tears from weeping eyes!

Every day, he is still making a way out of no way!

When Storms Come

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 12, 2007

SCRIPTURE: And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full. And he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow: and they awake him, and say unto him, Master, carest thou not that we perish? And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm. And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith? And they feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him? Mark 4:37-41

Introduction

When storms rise in your life, how do you respond? There are a variety of ways to respond to every storm that comes through our lives, we all have our way. There are some who run and hide when storms rise. When we put our heads under the cover, somehow we feel that the storm will have less intensity if we don't see the lightning, the bending of the trees in the wind or hear the thunder roll. There are others who recognize the strength of a storm and seek shelter; because in storms it gets hard to see, hold your footing or see the signs. Then there are others who ignore the storm and foolishly travel full speed ahead into the unknown. It is not a question of whether storms will rise in our lives; the question is when and then how we will respond.

Max Lacado tells the story of a boy and man who both build castles. The little boy builds a castle on the beach. He takes time to build the castle with popsicle sticks, bottle caps and everything else he could find. It was a labor of love. The man built a castle for himself, too. He formed a business out of nothing; it was a hard struggle. The boy built his castle on the beach and knew the waves could wipe it away at anytime. The man built his castle but tried his best to protect it from the rising tide. He worried about taxes, bills and other concerns. The man and the boy both built castles but their attitudes were totally different. The man hovered over his castle and worried constantly about things that would make it fall. He screamed at the tide and said, "You can't have it! It's mine, I built it!" The boy saw the tide rising tide and kept building his castle and enjoyed it every day. One day the tide came in on the boy's castle in the sand; he jumped to his feet with no regrets. The wave crashed his castle. The man tried to stop the tide but it came despite his best efforts. The boy picked up his tools and smiled. He walked away holding his father's hand.

That is the secret to handling storms; always hold the father's hand. We should enter storms with the full knowledge that God is still in control, and that anything that results a part of his perfection and divine will be for our good.

As Christians, we know that storms will come. Our best efforts won't stop them from coming. If we worry for years, they will still come. What matters is that we are able to face them, holding our father's hand.

Exposition

This text focuses on an instance in which Jesus restored peace in the middle of a storm.

Jesus and his disciples were riding in a boat to reach a place of peace and rest from the crowds that followed him. As his disciples, most of whom were able boatsmen, handled the ship Jesus went below deck and went to sleep.

In Palestine, there were two rainy seasons: the early rains of October and the latter rains of March. Between autumn and spring the Jews expected the rain to fall in large quantities and prepared themselves for its coming. The winter rains often brought thunder and lightning, strong winds that toppled houses and caused destruction. On the sea these rains often came quickly and with little warning.

This is the context of this passage. Without warning, a great storm arose and the shipmen became afraid because of the severity of the storm.

As the wind and waves increased in intensity many feared for their lives until someone remembered that Jesus was on board. They went to him and found that he was asleep. One cried out "Master, the tempest is raging, carest thou not that we perish?" Jesus awoke, saw the tempest and quieted the storm with the simple words "Peace Be Still." Immediately the storm ceased.

If We Meet Storms..

There is no person who can expect to go through this life without encountering one storm or another. Since we know there is a likelihood of storms we should prepare to meet them head on.

WE NEVER KNOW WHEN STORMS WILL COME: On the sea in this text, it was extremely difficult for those on the water to know when a storm would arise. The area was known for instant storms, even when the skies were clear. The Sea of Galilee sat 680 feet below sea level and it was surrounded by mountains when formed a funnel that could instantly blow in hurricane force winds. Those who traveled the sea had to stay ready. It's the same with every believer; we never know when the storms will rise, even though the sky appears clear.

Each day when we rise we have no way of knowing whether a storm will break out before the day ends. The believer approaches each day confident that no matter what happens in the course of a day, God will work it out because he has promised that "all things work to the good" of those who are trying act according to his purpose. We assume the attitude of the song writer who said, 'I do not know, how long it twill be, or what the future holds for me, but this I know, if Jesus leads me,

I shall get home someday."

NEVER LET STORMS CATCH YOU UNPREPARED: If you live in an area that is subject to instant storms you should be prepared. We shouldn't be like those we see often who hear a storm is coming but wait until the last minute to get storm supplies. We should be ready for the storm.

To weather a storm we need a sufficient supply of faith, stored up before storms, just for such occasions. That's why we worship and hear the word of God regularly because "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."

We should prepare for times when the light of hope will go out and have our own little light that will shine in the darkness. Moreover, we should have a known safe place of refuge and we should know how to get there. The word of God says, "God is our refuge and our strength, a very present help in times of trouble." A refuge is a safe place. Believers know the way to God and constantly lean and trust him to take them to higher ground. Maybe that's what the song writer had in mind when he said, "Lord lift me up and let me stand, by faith on heaven's table land, no higher ground I have not found, Lord plant my feet on higher ground."

WE CAN SOAR ABOVE THE STORM: When storms rage, it sometimes appears that it's everywhere. However, technology now lets us know that a storm may exist over a city or just your side of town and not affect anyone else. Likewise storms don't take up the whole sky. Charles Lindbergh was known for his transatlantic solo flight. At one point in his flight he came upon a sudden storm. He couldn't turn his plane, called the Spirit of St. Louis, to the left or to the right. It seemed that the storm was everywhere, until he did an unusual thing for his time, he took his plane up into the storm and the above it. Above the storm he saw the sunshine. As storms rage in our lives with hurricane force, perhaps we too should soar above the storm so we can see the SON. David said, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth." When storms come, lift up your eyes so you can see the SON; soar above it riding on the wings of faith.

When Storms Come

Finally, brothers and sisters, when storms come keep your faith in the power of almighty God.

When storms come, they can upset our nerves and shake our confidence.
When storms come, they can weaken our strength and try our patience.
But when storms come, they can never destroy our faith in the power of God.

That's what Kirk Franklin had in mind when he wrote these words,
"Because of faith I have a brand new day. The sun will shine and I will be Okay.
That's when I told the storm to pass. Storm you can't last, you got to go away!"

That might be a good idea, to talk to your storm; because when you talk to the storm in your life you are actually defying the devil. You are serving notice that you are prepared for the long haul and that while he rages you intend to keep your eyes on the SON.

When Jesus was awakened below deck on the ship being tossed in the sea, he did not shake; in faith he talked to the storm, saying, “Peace be Still.”

Believers, when storms rise we should speak a word of faith to our storms. What we speak should be our testimony of confidence that no matter how the storm rages we know God is able.

Talk to your storm and defy its furious winds!

Storm, you won’t take away my hope, because, “My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and Righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name.”

Storm, you won’t take away my trust in God because, “I trust in God wherever I may be. On mountain peaks or on the raging sea. Though come what may. From day to day. My heavenly father watches over me.”

Talk to the storm!

Tell your storm, “I know a savior, his name is Jesus”

Tell your storm you will not be defeated by hopelessness and fear.

Tell your storm that ‘I know a man who can speak to the winds’ and they will obey his will.

His name is Jesus!

They nailed him to an old rugged cross.

He died on Calvary..

But early Sunday morning…

A Green Olive Tree In the House of God

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 19, 2007

SCRIPTURE: "But I am like a green olive tree in the house of God: I trust in the mercy of God for ever and ever." Psalm 52:8

Introduction

What is the state of your spiritual life, right now? Are you happy with the quality of your life in Christ? Most of us are not totally happy with our spiritual lives because we are constantly fighting against time and circumstances that seem to eat away at the small amount of time we have available to be alone with God. Our spiritual lives should be a contrast to the world around us, not a reflection of the hustle, bustle and business of a multi-dimensional, multi-tasking age. Our spiritual lives are important, especially to the Christian because the spiritual contact we have with God is the very essence of what we are about.

The Bible often compares those who are strong in the Lord to trees. Psalm 1:3 says, "And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."

Repeatedly, God makes the comparison of the believer to trees. The trees he selects to make the comparison are not random selections. Each is chosen because it has certain characteristics that are unique to the believer's life.

There are many trees God could use to compare us to but they somehow fall short.

He could compare us to Maple trees because there are times when many of us act like saps.

Our hard heads makes it easy to compare us to coconuts.

There are days when could call us pecan trees because we act like nuts; or banana trees because we often act like monkeys and lose track of our manners.

It's a good thing he didn't compare us to any of these.

When we think of fig trees we think of lives cursed like the tree that bore no fruit. When we think of gopher wood, we think of the tree used to build Noah's ark. When we think of Palm trees we think of Christ's grand entry into Jerusalem; and when we think of the Dogwood tree we think of Christ's crucifixion on the cross.

When it comes to spirituality, the tree most often associated with God's spirit is the olive tree. King Solomon considered olive trees a great source of national wealth. In payment for his service Solomon gave Hiram, over 140,000 gallons of olive oil in payment. In Matthew 25:1 it was olive oil that the 10 virgins needed in the lamps, because it was burned for light. Olive oil was used for baths, too. That's what Naomi told Ruth in (Ruth 3:3) about taking a bath an anointing herself before seeing Boaz. Prophets were anointed with oil when they began their ministries and priests were anointed with oil before they began their duties. In the New Testament the sick were often anointed with oil as in James 5:14 as a symbol of healing presence of God.

The olive tree is therefore closely connected to anointing and the spiritual presence of God in scripture.

When the word says, "But I am like a green olive tree in the house of God:" it is pointing to the nature of the spirituality of the believer."

When we think of our spirituality we have this shining example before us that the spiritually strong are like a green olive tree in the house of God.

As Christians, our desire is to become spiritually strong. We want the anointing of the Holy Ghost upon our lives. We want his presence and his power for our lives every day.

Exposition

This text finds David contrasting the life of the righteous with that of the unrighteous.

David had been plagued by an evil Edomite by the name of Doeg. In the first six verses of this passage David details the nature of Doeg, an unrighteous man. He deviseth mischief, works deceitfully, loves evil more than good, lying more than righteousness, and loves to devour others with a deceitful tongue. He predicts the downfall of the evil one by noting that God would destroy him and root him out.

By describing the nature of Doeg, in this text, David also describes the nature of the ungodly, unholy and spiritless person in any generation. The man void of spirituality is not guided by the spirit of God and works deceitfully and sinfully in the world. He will ultimately be cast down.

In Psalm 37:35 David described the wicked as a green "bay tree." Green bay trees, grow big and green in rich soil, but they ultimately yield no fruit and are cut down. In Psalm 1:4 David says, "The ungodly are not so, but are light the chaff which the wind driveth away."

At verse 8 David them speaks of himself as a symbol of the righteous man. He characterizes himself as green olive in the house of God.

Because the believer strives for the anointing of God on his life and the presence of his spirit daily, he will flourish. David said he would praise the name of God forever, because of what he had done in his life. The unrighteous man who lives without God's spirit is destined for doom. The man led by the spirit of God will survive and flourish, like a green olive in the House of God.

Like Olives

David made some comparisons to the spiritual nature of believers when he said, 'I am like a green olive tree in the house of God." A Closer look at this phrase is where we find ourselves in this text.

NOT JUST OLIVES BUT GREEN OLIVES. David did not say he was an olive tree in the house of God but he was a specific kind; a green olive. Green olives and black olives both come from the same tree. The difference is that green olives are picked and preserved before they ripened and black olives are preserved after they ripen. Green olives are slightly tart and will add a flavor to bland foods. Black olives just blend in without making much difference. Believers who are strong in their faith are like green olives in that the strength of their testimony and spirituality strengthens others who are not so strong.

Believers who have a strong faith and sense of God's presence are those who come from spiritual rootstock whle those around them but have chosen another path. Rather than be a mighty oak in the forest of the devil they have chosen to be a "green olive in the house of God."

GREEN OLIVES GO THROUGH SOMETHING: Olive trees take beatings. In ancient times, the green olive was preferred. Because it was green it did not fall to the ground like the black, ripe olive. The tree was beaten with sticks repeatedly until the green olives fell. Then they were placed in a brine and pickled. After pickling them for several months, then they were ready for use.

Green olive trees go through something. Many of us have grown stronger in our faith today, because we have been through something. We've been beaten by the sticks and stones of life. We've been whipped by circumstance and kicked by catastrophe. We've been tried in the fires of life and dipped in the salty waters of disappointment and failure. We understand what David meant, because "we've been through something."

Yet we hear the words of the song writer say, "I've been through the storm and the rain, but I made it." We made it through the ups and downs and bitter tears; we made it through!

OLIVE TREES ENDURE DROUGHTS WELL. Olive trees endure droughts because their roots are deep. Strangely enough olive trees grow best in hot, calcareous regions. They can even grow on top of dry clay. It doesn't matter much because their roots run deep. When their roots run deep they find the underground water supply that keeps them flourishing although all the earth around them is dry and parched. They grow on the sides of mountains, hills and stony areas. In America, some parts of California have olives because have enough heat and calcareous soil.

When it gets hot, olive trees are cool. When droughts dry out everything above ground, olive trees reach underground. If we are like green olive trees, we too have roots that sink below eye level. We have a powerful, rooted faith, that helps us to survive and thrive even when the ground around us is parched, dry and baron. Paul Jones must have been thinking about the green olive when he wrote. "I've had my good days and I'd have some hills to climb. I've had some weary days and some sleepless nights, but when I look around and think things over; all of my good days, outweigh my bad days. I won't complain."

The Mt. Of Olives

Finally, brothers and sisters, there is something else we should think of when we think of the Olive Tree, and that is the Mt. of Olives.

The Mt. of Olives was not just one tree; it was a mountainside full of olive trees.

The Mt. of Olives was a 2 1/2 mile mountain ridge that was covered with hundreds of green olive trees.

The Mt. of Olives rose 200 feet above the city of Jerusalem.

David crossed the Mt. of Olives when he ran away from Absalom

Ezekiel saw a fiery chariot coming down from heaven and landing in the Mt. of Olives.

Zechariah saw a vision of the coming day of the Lord, from the vantage point of the Mt. of Olives.

In a remote corner of the Mt. of Olives, was a place in which caretakers would take the fermented olives and pour them in a vat. Sometimes, large stones would be placed upon them and the oil would be pressed from the olives.

At other times there were some who took off their shoes and stomped the olives until the oil came out.

The Hebrews called this place, "Gethsemane" because it was placed where they came to press out the oil.

Somebody here today has had your own "Gethsemane" because you have had to press out the oil.

Gethsemane is the place where weary knees bow in prayer before an all powerful God to press out the oil.

Gethsemane is the place where tear filled eyes lift up to the hills from whence cometh their help as they press out the oil.

Gethsemane is the place where weary hands are lifted up to God declaring, "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know. If thou withdraw thyself from me, whether shall I go!

Jesus stood on the Mount of Olives and told his disciples to go into Jerusalem and prepare for the Passover.

As they supped, he took the cup and blessed saying, "This is my blood, which is shed for you." He took the bread and said, "This is my body which is given for you, do this in remembrance of me."

When he finished the meal he went out to the Garden of Gethsemane, because it was time to press out the oil.

Can't you hear that conversation?

Father, I've done all that you assigned me to do.

Father, I've made lame walk and the blind can now see!

Father, I've made disciples and commissioned them to go throughout the earth!

I just have one request. If it's possible, let this cup pass from me, but never-the-less, not my will, but thy will be done!

He prayed so hard that his sweat was like blood, he was pressing out the oil!

They led him before three tribunals, he was still pressing out the oil!

They whipped him all night long! He was still pressing out the oil!

They nailed him to an old rugged cross, he was still pressing out the oil!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power!

All Power!

All Power in his hands!

Pleasing Him For Whom We Serve

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 2007

SCRIPTURE: But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. Hebrews 11:6

Introduction

Are there Saints that you know who have pleased God through their service in the church? There have been men and women throughout the ages who have committed themselves to living faithful lives that would please God. Living a life of faith is not gender exclusive. Men can lead lives of faith and women can do the same. The great commission that God gave to all believers in Matthew 28 is that we all should go into all the world and teach, reach and baptize in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. We please him when faithfully carry out the mission of reaching the lost for Christ.

As every saint reflects upon life, one of the most satisfying feelings experienced is to know that the time, talent and resources that have been poured into what we believe is an honorable service, is truly acceptable and pleasing to him that called us into his service. Nothing could be worse than to live our entire lives, only to learn that we were driving the right way, but on the wrong street.

What pleases God is to see believers live by faith and trust. When God's sees men and women who have put their hand to gospel plough and refuse to look back, he is pleased.

As Christians, we rejoice in the fact that we faithfully serve our God by giving him the best of our service. God is pleased when we walk by faith, live by faith and serve by faith each and every day.

Exposition

This text focuses on the importance of faith for any believer.

New Testament believers are reminded that faith is essential to the Christian life. It's very nature is the unseen. It is the belief with sufficient physical evidence to confirm.

Much of what believers know about God has been through our past experience. Based upon our past experience combined with what we read in the word we make a projection about the future. That projection is what is called faith. It is a hope rooted in the nature of God and our past experience with him. Without faith we cannot please God because we must accept that he is God and come to him first.

Matthew Henry says, we must believe that God is, and that he is what he is, what he has revealed himself to be in the scripture, a being of infinite perfections, subsisting in three persons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Observe, the practical belief of the existence of God, as revealed in the word, would be a powerful awe-band upon our souls, a bridle of restraint to keep us from sin, and a spur of constraint to put us upon all manner of gospel obedience.

We cannot please a God we don't know. To know him fully, we must try him for ourselves.

Marks of the Faithful

THOSE WHO SERVE GOD MUST SERVE IN FAITH. The telltale mark of every believer is the motivation for his/her service to God.

Consider the ancient king who wanted more women enlisted into his army of house servants. He sent out word that a contest would be held to determine those best fit to serve in the king's elite group of servants. Fifty women answered the appeal. Most considered serving in the king's service as a chance to advance themselves. The king's servants had fine living quarters, daily food supplies, money in their pockets and glory. They trained themselves for what they thought would be the test of their worthiness. When they entered the courtyard, the king brought all fifty of them into his kitchens and complained about the dullness of his silver goblets, plates, knives and forks. Suddenly, the king turned and asked his 50 competitors if they would help shine his silverware. All 50 agreed. As the day wore on the women began to grumble. "We came to train for the royal service, not to be silver polishers."

At the end of the day they were ushered out of the palace gate, but only 49 women left. The next morning they returned and the guard noticed that one was missing. The guard soon found the 50th competitor all soiled and fatigued. He had spent the entire night shining all of the king's silverware. The King announced that only one of the 50 competitor's was worthy to be in the royal service. He kept the 50th competitor. Answering the questions of the 49 he said, "Your test was not in your ability to impress me with your manners or dress, but in your commitment to the king. The 50th competitor had one thing none of you possessed. She was willing to faithfully please the king!

Those who serve in faith are those who please God.

POOR SERVICE DOES NOT PLEASE GOD: Service that is poorly rendered does not please God. Consider the brother who flew on a plane for the first amid all of the talk of late arrivals, he was a bit nervous. He dashed in at the last minute, found a set and at exactly 3 p.m. in the evening the plane landed. Leaving the plane the brother was smiling. He never understood why the others on the plane had such bad attitudes. He first congratulated the flight attendant and then shook the pilot's hand.

"I want you to know captain, that I don't quite understand why the others are grumbling. I think it's great that this plane was schedule to arrive at 3 p.m. and at 3 p.m sharp it landed, as promised. I hear so much bad news about planes and people grumble so much that I just had to compliment you for getting us here at 3 p.m. on the money. In fact, I'm going to call your home office and let them know how pleased I am.

The others should be pleased too.

The pilot was about to accept the compliment but a man behind the brother said, "What you don't know is that this plane was scheduled to arrive at 3 p.m. yesterday. It's a day late and whole lot of people are not pleased."

The difference between the life work of a nonbeliever and that of a saint is that the nonbeliever serves for personal glory, profit and fame while the saint does his service without thought of personal gain. He does it to please the King!

THROUGH FAITH WE MAKE THE JOURNEY: We who are trying to please God sometimes stumble. We are only able to make the journey because of our faith. Sometimes Christians forget the power of their faith.

When faith seems to falter, we need to remind ourselves that although it looks dark and defeat appears imminent God is still on the throne. Every child of God believes in miraculous God. We constantly remind ourselves that no matter how frustrating the situation might seem it never reaches a point of complication beyond the miraculous power of God.

The songwriter said "God is still on the throne, within you bosom you have the phone" Your miracle is just a prayer away, God is on the line.
Another songwriter said "Jesus is on the mainline, tell him what you want, if you sick and you want to get well, tell him what you want."

THROUGH FAITH WE NEVER GIVE UP: In effort to please God there are many who have made great personal sacrifices as they have worked to build the church. They worked in faith but never gave up. If we listen closely we can hear them say, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Some have lifted their voices as members of choirs, others have washed dishes and mopped floors, but still they proclaim –"I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Some have preached and others have licked stamps, folded envelopes and passed out programs. Some have given their last dollar and others have given until they felt the pain, but still they proclaim, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Some have emptied trash cans; others have stood behind television cameras, snapped pictures, worked with youth, or just been in the midst of the saints for moral support. All have one thing in common. They all say, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now." We all say, "I've come too far to turn around."

THE BIGGER THE GOAL THE STRONGER THE FAITH: Those who

acting on great visions that God has given them, must be reminded that the bigger your goal the stronger the faith that is needed to achieve the goal. It's what every Boy Scout knows. If you put up a big tent you need be stakes to hold it down. The bigger tent, the bigger the stakes.

If you have a big dream you can't keep it in place with a small peg of faith. Big faith is fed by regular worship and praise. To feed that faith our worship and bible study habits must change.

Big dreams require big faith experiences but we can stake out our dreams if our level of bible knowledge does not grow to fit our dream.

How do we build faith? First by hearing the word of God regularly. Romans 10:17 says, "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God."

Secondly, we study more. 2 Timothy 2:15 says, "Study to shew thyself approved a workman that needeth not be ashamed but rightly dividing the word of truth."

Thirdly, we should pray more. 1 Thessalonians 5:17 says, "Pray without ceasing." Strengthening your stakes may require changing something. To keep the strong place God has in your life alive and secure, we may need to change something this year! We may need to change a few things to make it happen the way he wants. One thing is for certain: A service that pleases God requires a strong faith.

God will provide what we need

Finally, brothers and sisters we should remember that when God sees our faith and sees our sacrifice, he will provide our needs.

That's what faith is all about; knowing that God will make a way.

Faith reminds us that whatever we need, God will supply.

When we go to God with medical needs, he says, we call him JEHOVAH-RAPHA because that means 'I am the Lord that healeth thee'.

When we go to God for peace amidst terrible storms, we call him JEHOVAH-SHALOM because that means that God is our peace. In this troubled world we must experience God as our peace.

When we go to God for victory over adversity, we call him JEHOVAH-NISSI because that means the Lord is our banner of victory. He is the lord of hosts and commands the vast heavenly army. He will fight the battle for us and give us the victory.

When we want our needs met, we call him JEHOVAH-JIREH because he both sees our needs and provides.

No matter how tough times get, faith reminds us that God is still God. He is still our God whose:

-Power never weakens; -Grace never disappoints

-Love never leaves; -Promises never fail

-Glory never diminishes; -Joy never ends

-Foundation never shakes; -Truth never changes

-Supply never shrinks; -Blessings never stop coming!

We walk by faith, we step out each day, confident that God sees what we are going through and he will make a way. That's why the song writer wrote, "We are our heavenly father's children, and he knows just how much we can bear!

God sees our tears in the midnight hour!

God sees our concern for our families and loved ones!

God sees our despair over our current situation and while we are still praying about it, help is on the way!

I know he'll make a way because he loves us. John 3:16 says, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!"

Every day we faithfully work to please him!

Every day we faithfully work to glorify him!

Every day we faithfully work to lift him up!

His name is Jesus!

He died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning arose from the dead!

By faith, I'm going to work to please him!

I'm going to work until my day is done!

Heavenly Music in the Church

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 2007

SCRIPTURE: Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord; 20 Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Ephesians 5:19-20

Introduction

Have you ever listened closely to the music in the church? When we hear a popular worship selection today, if the first thought that comes to mind is "that sounds like" a secular song we have heard, then that music will do little to usher believers into the presence of God. It will cause the worshipper to stand in the sanctuary in what appears to be godly praise but imitate the actions of those in the secular world.

If we listen with a secular ear we may hear the sounds of popular music transposed for use in a spiritual setting. Our secular ear may hear the chords of the organist that remind us of Lionel Hampton, the syncopated beat of the drums that reminds us of Max Roach, and the twang of the guitar that reminds us of B.B. King's "Lucille." In some cases, if we listen with our secular ear we can feel the pulsating rhythm of Kirk Franklin but we think of James Brown.

In that context, instead of worship, the music creates a false middle zone for the believer, allowing us to have a piece of the world and praise God at the same time.

Music in the church is extremely important because it draws the line of separation from the spiritual and secular. It is representative of our culture but at the same time it is definitely not of the world. Its purpose is to praise God.

With or without accompaniment, Christ based music, gives believers a chance to praise God and to testify about his mighty works.

The best church music is not the music that sounds best to the ear, but the music that gives a testimony of our experience.

Consider the case of Sad Sally who came to church frequently but rarely moved her lips whenever the congregation sang. She sat politely and stared at the choir and other members, but never sang a word herself. She continued this practice for many years and it disturbed some members who entertained bad thoughts about her because she would never sing. One Sunday however, the entire church was pleasantly surprised when they saw Sad Sally singing. Her face lit up and she was beaming with enthusiasm. After the service several members surrounded her and asked why she seemed so jubilant. Sally told her friends that she had been fishing the day before and was caught out in the middle of lake when a storm suddenly came up from nowhere.

It blew the waters and top sized her little boat. She prayed to God for mercy because she knew she was seeing her last day. Just as quick as the storm started it stopped and soon she could see the sun again. When she was plucked from the water and brought to shore she thanked the Lord.

"This morning I just had to sing along when I heard the choir say, 'When the Storms of life are raging..Stand by me.' I've heard it many times but somehow I understood it when we sang 'I was sinking deep in sin far from the peaceful shore, very deeply stained within sinking to rise no, but the master of the sea heard my despairing cry and from the waters lifted me, now safe am I.

"I almost shouted when I heard the words "Love Lifted me!"

When you saw me grinning, it was because the choir was singing "There's a bright side somewhere.

My lips couldn't be still when I heard the choir say "Amazing Grace how sweet the sound that saved a wretch like me. Because I was lost but now I'm found, blind, but now I see."

At that point the church members knew why Sally was singing so much in the service; she had found something to sing about.

So it is with the music of the church. It should reflect our experiences, yet always lift Christ and glorify his name.

As Christians, we celebrate God's goodness without music and songs. As African-American Christians, we have much to sing about; thus we lift him up high in every way we can, leaving the world behind us, and keeping the Cross of Calvary in front of us.

Exposition

Paul, writing to the Ephesians encouraged them to praise the Lord continuously by being filled with the spirit and singing his praises. He urged them to sing one of three kinds of songs when moved by the spirit of God: Psalms, Hymns and Spirituals. These were offered to Christians as alternatives to the drunkenness and lewdness offered by the world. In them, Paul notes Christians who walk circumspectly in the world "redeem" their time and use it wisely to witness for Christ, which includes the songs they sing.

Paul encouraged the Ephesians to demonstrate their joy and gladness in music and song, designed to both praise God and encourage each other. More so, Paul encouraged believers to use their music, singing and psalms to give thanks to God for everything; his acts of kindness, his mercy and for affording us hope in times of hopelessness.

The first of the three kinds of songs Paul mentioned are Psalms. These are great collections of poems, mostly written by David, that express gratitude and thanks to God for his mercy and goodness. When the early church sang Psalms the reference was to the 150 selections that were taught in the synagogues. These included: “The Lord is My Shepherd, I shall not want” of Psalm 23 and “God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble” of Psalm 46. These songs, in modern times, are called anthems and sing to God and praise him for his goodness, greatness and graciousness to mankind.

Paul also noted the Hymns. These are expressions of faith in the cause of Christ whose ultimate purpose is to inspire us to continue in the Christian struggle. They often speak of 0ur trial, suffering and triumph as well as our continued faith that his victory will lead us to a better and brighter day in the kingdom of God.

Thirdly, Paul encouraged the Ephesians to sing spirituals. These are songs that express the mood of our soul and spirit in hard times, frustration, failure, and death. They tell how we feel at the moment, but also express our faith that despite the frustrations of the hour, hope still lingers on the horizon.

Paul encourages every Christian to make melodies in their hearts that give praise to God, and express our faith. Even in our darkest hour, he suggests that we should give “thanks always for all things unto God.”

Hymns are for God

Studies of the style and manner of ancient Jewish worship note that much of biblical worship involved praise of God, worship of God and sacrifices to God. The overwhelming majority of the music used in worship was for God’s hearing. Solomon built a billion dollar temple for God that had no pews, because it was for God. There were families of Levites who sang continually in the Tabernacle, but there was usually no one present to hear them, because they were singing “to God” and for his hearing alone.

In comparison, today, much of the music in the church is “for the audience” and little is to God.

Paul urged believers to sing hymns, but many churches today no longer sing hymns. In fact there is a concerted effort to completely remove hymns from the worship in Black churches, substituting them with praise songs. Despite the popularity of many new trends the word of God is unchanged; we are encouraged to include hymns as we as sing songs of praise and encouragement.

The late Dr. C.V. Rodgers, a noted church musician and pastor once said, “For the definition of a hymn, we would have to allude to Saint Augustine who stated, “it is the praise of God by singing; included in this statement would be praise, and devotion to God, and if both are not present, then there is no hymn.”

The hymn as we know it and sing it today could be defined as a song of adoration and praise to God.

In the church of the first century, the term “hymn” was applied to all songs in praise of the Lord.

A happy person will sing. One of the best ways of praising the Lord is through song. Singing is not only praise, worship and prayer; it is also dedication and determination to serve the Lord. Singing praises change the whole attitude of man. You cannot sing and complain at the same time. Singing will not only help you have victory over sin, Satan, and self, it will also help you keep the victory.

If music is the universal language, hymns of confession, of praise, of petition, of hope, of comfort, of adoration and hymns of consecration could easily become the medium through which rejoicing Christians can join one great chorus expressing their deepest feelings. With these thoughts uttermost in our minds, let us make maximum use of the great hymns of our Church and make them an integral part of our worship service.

Music should reflect biblical truths

Church music should always represent biblical truths. Not every song that sings about Jesus or God reflects what the bible teaches. In 1973 the Angelic Gospel Singers produced a hit Gospel selection entitled, "Jesus will never say no." The song said whenever we ask Christ for something and believe he will never say no. In 1996, The Williams Brothers updated it, noting that believers can call him in the morning or evening and he will never say no. The Same song was again revisited by the Florida Mass Choir using the same thing. For over three decades of believers have been told in song that that if they pray and believe that whatever they ask for can be received.

In reality the bible teaches that we must abide in Christ and his words abide in us. Our abiding is of such that we tag all of our prayers with "thy will be done." That being the case, there are many times when we ask, but we get the answer, "no" or "wait a while."

Believers should not sing a composition that is not in keeping with the teachings of our faith regardless of its beauty, sweetness or piety. We should ask, what Christian truth does it express? Is it in keeping with my religious beliefs? Does it set forth truth supported by the scriptures or is it just pretty and sound good? What action or commitment does it demand of me or is it just "jazzy"? Do the words challenge me to some higher or clearer plane of Christian growth? If we can answer "yes" to these questions, we are headed in the right direction.

Music from our experience

It is difficult to sing songs about the Christian faith with enthusiasm, unless our lives are in tune with the Lord. The words come out but don't have meaning. A sound comes out of our mouth but without power and witness. This text suggests several measures Christian believers should take to stay in tune with God and give meaning to the melodies their lives sing.

SINGING IS TO BE FROM THE HEART: If a church choir held an audition, it wouldn't be the criterion? The criterion should be whether or not a person is a great singer, for most church choir singers are not, but they are individuals who have a heart for the songs they sing. Verse 19b "singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord." Many think of the church choir as a show place to make a name for themselves. They do just the opposite of verse 19, instead of "singing and making melody with your heart" they "sing and make melody with their mouths. The phrase "with your heart" signifies that you mean what you sing and you feel it!

SINGING IS TO BE TO EACH OTHER: In the shower, a believer sings to himself and for himself. Those who sing in public should sing to each other. They should look at the people they are singing to and reach out to them. Look at Verse 19 again, "speaking to one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord." We can't obey this teaching in solitude. God calls us to speak in song to one another. To sing to each other we should get together and sing as a congregation and as small groups. We should sing in each other's hearing and want to be heard by each other. The second implication is that it is justifiable to sing songs that are not directed toward God but toward each other for the purpose of testimony, edification, and exhortation.

SINGING IS TO BE "TO THE LORD." Singing to the Lord implies that songs should be God centered or Christ centered. This means that what we sing should reflect our nature that our lives are God centered. Everything we do and say is centered on our beliefs about God and his Son Jesus Christ. Our songs are a reflection of that belief. What we choose to sing should be worthy of presentation to the master. Because what we sing will be presented to the Lord, those who sing should feel compelled to rehearse such that they always present God their best. Without proper rehearsal and preparation, then what is presented "to the Lord" is less than the best and is a negative rather than a positive reflection on the singers. No singer should be happy with themselves if they sing with the choir but fail to block out time to adequately prepare. Singing to the Lord is serious business. It comes from roots that are deep in faith and impact the spiritual growth of the church.

Music should glorify God

Finally, brothers and sisters, the music of the church should glorify God and not ourselves.

There are many who sing, but their reason for singing is to "make a name" for themselves.

There are many who play instruments but their reasons for playing the music is to get into the sound and to earn a reputation for themselves.

Yet, when we praise God with music we should remember the words of Psalm 150:

"Praise him for his mighty acts: praise him according to his excellent greatness.

Praise him with the sound of the trumpet: praise him with the psaltery and harp.

Praise him with the timbrel and dance: praise him with stringed instruments and organs.

Praise him upon the loud cymbals: praise him upon the high sounding cymbals.

Let every thing that hath breath praise the LORD. Praise ye the LORD.

I don't know about you, but I've found out that you may not have the best voice in the world but when you are praising God from the heart and God gets in your song, it always comes out right!

When you know the Lord, you can sing his song!

When you know the Lord, you can lift him up in praise!

When you know the Lord, you can sing, "I've tried the man and the man's alright!

When you know the Lord, you can sing, "The Lord will make a way somehow!"

When you know the Lord, you can sing, "I don't feel no ways tired, I don't believe he brought me this far to leave me!

When God gives us a song to sing, we need to be sure we sing it in the right key.

There are seven notes in a musical scale and seven days in a week. How each week goes depends on the key we select at the beginning of the week. If we begin the week in the Key of F we will have at least one sharp along the way. If we begin with the key of B Flat we will have at least two flats.

But there is one Key that every believer should know. It's the key of C, the same letter that begins the word Christian. In the key of C there are no flats or sharps. Not because every day is going to be perfect, but because no matter what comes our way, we "count it all joy!"

If sickness comes my way, if I begin my week in the key of Christ, I count it all joy!

If heartache comes my way, if I begin my week in the key of Christ, I count it all joy!

If disappointment comes my way, if I begin my week in the key of Christ, I count it all joy!

I don't know about you, but I'm going to keep my eye on Jesus

If I follow Jesus, he will direct my paths!

Follow Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Follow Jesus, who arose early Sunday morning!

Follow Jesus, take no chance of getting lost!

When the Bridegroom Comes Again

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 2007

SCRIPTURE: But the days are coming when the bridegroom will be taken from them, and then they will fast. Matthew 9:15;"Then I saw a new Heaven and a new Earth, for the first Heaven and the first Earth had passed away, and there was no longer any sea. I saw the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, coming down out of Heaven from God, prepared as a bride, beautifully dressed for her husband." Rev. 21:1-2

Introduction

Wedding ceremonies are exciting experiences, but suppose the promise is made but the groom is swept away by fate before the ceremony? Those who are left behind are frustrated, and distraught because of so many lost expectations, hopes and dreams. It is easy to be dismayed at the sheer irony of such a situation.

Believe it or not every believer has experienced this case. How? As believers we are the bride of Bride of Christ. Christ is the bridegroom. He courted the church for several years but was abruptly taken away, leaving his bride saddened, but not without hope, because he promised to return again and one day complete the ceremony.

Christ is called the bridegroom in scripture many times. In Matthew 9 and 25 he is called the bridegroom six times. John the Baptist referred to him as the bridegroom in John 3:28-36. In 2 Corinthians 11:2 the church is referred to as a virgin or a woman who is engaged to one man who is Christ the bridegroom.

If the groom is gone and the bride is left alone, what should those in the wedding party do? How should those who are left behind feel? What consolation do we have? Perhaps we could follow the example of a young woman named Anne Steele. Miss Steele encountered one trial and disappointment after another. Being a devout Christian, she continuously sought to praise God—even in sorrow. She was engaged to be married, and had looked forward to her wedding day with eagerness. The big day finally arrived and so did the guests—but the groom was missing. After about an hour of waiting, a messenger brought the tragic news that Anne's fiancé had drowned. The sudden shock was almost too much for her, but after a while she regained her spiritual composure.

Later Anne Steele penned the song that is still found in many hymnbooks:

Give me a calm, a thankful heart
From ev'ry murmur free;
The blessing of Thy grace impart,
And make me live to Thee.

That's what those who are left behind should do, give God thanks for the moments of grace that have been shared: for friendship, children, and a life lived with expectation and love.

That's also what the church is doing. We are thanking God every day and walking with him in our spirit. The song writer said, "I come to the garden alone, while the dew is still on the roses And the voice I hear, falling on my ear The Son of God discloses And He walks with me and He talks with me and He tells me I am His own; and the joy we share as we tarry there None other has ever known."

As Christians, we are always saddened when we think of the bridegroom, Christ, leaving us. The pain of the loss of the savior in the flesh is overcome only when we remember that he is coming back again to complete the ceremony and to take his bride at last.

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he explains the nature of his disciples to himself; they as the groomsmen and himself as the bridegroom.

The followers of John were critical of the disciples because unlike other followers of John they did not participate in regular fasts. They pointed to the fact that they and the Pharisees fasted often to demonstrate their piety but the disciples did not.

Christ seized the opportunity to teach a lesson about the relationship between himself, and his followers who would be known as the church. He explained that his disciples were the "children of the bride chamber" or the groomsmen at a marriage. They were celebrating because the bridegroom, Christ himself, was with them. However, soon the bridegroom would be abruptly taken from them, and then they would fast and pray.

Here he paints the picture of himself as the bridegroom.

John in Revelation 21:1-2 was shown the New Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven, adorned as a bride for her husband. The city and its inhabitants are referred to as the bride of Christ. The bride of Christ refers to both a place and a populace. The City is the New Jerusalem. The populace is the large congregation of believers from all times that will live with Christ under the new "covenant" marriage throughout eternity.

Together, these passages present Christ as a bridegroom who will be taken away before the ceremony, but not before engaging himself to the church.

Unlike today, in biblical times, a woman was officially the bride once an engagement was announced. There was no union of course, but for all religious and legal purposes they were husband and wife. The groomsmen or "children of the chamber" had the job of traveling to the home of the bride to bring her to the ceremony. The wedding feast itself would last for 7 days, but the bride was considered married a month before the actual ceremony. The month before the ceremony was called the "days of the marriage" (Manners and Customs of Bible Lands).

Christ said his disciples will fast and mourn for a while when he left before the ceremony, but he constantly reminded them that he would not leave them comfortless, but he would send the Holy Spirit to comfort them. He also reminded them that he would return again to complete the ceremony.

Christ makes it clear that he is not a runaway groom who leaves his bride standing at the altar never to return. He is coming back again. In the New Testament, there are 318 references to Christ's second coming. That averages one out of every 30 verses. Furthermore, 23 of the 27 New Testament books refer to his return.

That's what John saw in the Revelation, the bride coming to the ceremony. He saw the church and all believers like a bride finally coming forth to complete the marriage ceremony with the Lamb of God.

What Should we do?

What should a bride do if the bridegroom is suddenly taken away? What about others who would have been in the bridal party, the family and friends? They all should respond the same way the church is responding to the absence of Christ.

GIVE THANKS: The church, in the absence of the bridegroom, lives with an attitude of thanks. We thank God for all blessings that he has given us and continually praise him for his wonderful works. The same should be true for those who have had a loved one seemingly snatched from before them by providence. We give God thanks for the pleasant memories, and the warm words of faith, and hope that have been shared. The children give God thanks for having known a father. The parents give thanks for having had such a wonderful son. The bride gives thanks for promises made and for a lingering love that will last forever. 1 Thessalonians 5:18 says, "In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." Even in death, we should give thanks.

SERVE IN FAITH: The church, in the absence of the bridegroom, serves in faith. Jesus commanded his disciples, in his absence to love their neighbors and to show that love through their words and deeds. The same charge is given to those who mourn today. In the absence of the bridegroom of this family, show love to each other and to others. Plunge yourselves into the welfare of the surviving family members, the nurture of children in the family, the care of the aged and promotion of loving acts and deeds. Those who expected to be in the bridal party should not be idle they should spend each day in service to God through their relationships with others. This we should do humbly and consistently all of our days.

NEVER LOSE HOPE: In the days immediately following the death of Christ the church was reminded by Peter and the other disciples, not to lose hope, but to keep the faith. Even when Jesus rose to heaven on a cloud, an angel stirred their hope when he said in Acts 1:11, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Today, the bridal party, friends, family and the bride should not give up hope. God is still on the throne. He has not run away. He has not abandoned us. He still loves us and will provide for us every day of our lives. That's why the song writer said, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand. All other ground is sinking sand."

When the bridegroom comes

Finally, brothers and sisters, the joy of the church is the same joy of a believer; one of these old days, the bridegroom is coming back again.

We don't know the day or the hour but when it comes, the music of Heaven will play and the shout will go out.

Matthew 25:1-13 gives the parable of the 10 virgins who had their lamps trimmed waiting for the wedding ceremony. After waiting a long time the shout went out "the bridegroom cometh" but some were not ready.

I don't know about you but I want to be ready when he comes!

The church, the bride of the Christ, needs to be ready when he comes!

The coming of the Bridegroom will begin the day when those who are a part of the Kingdom of God will enter into the Kingdom of Heaven!

When the Bridegroom comes, there won't be tears in her eye, but there will be joy in her heart, for God shall wipe away all tears!

When the Bridegroom comes, there won't be any fear of sickness or death, for the former things shall be passed away!

When the Bridegroom comes, every saint will have a new song to sing!

When the Bridegroom comes it will be too:

TREMENDOUS to talk about; too THRILLING to think about!

DELIGHTFUL to dream about; too SATISFYING to sing about!

PRACTICAL to preach about; GLORIFYING to gloat about

I don't know about you but I want to be in that number when the bridegroom comes!

I want to see Him; See Him face to face!

I want to tell him about my journey, trying to run this race!

His name is Jesus, the Bridegroom of the church!

Jesus, the lover of my soul!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose from the dead!

I want to be there when the Bridegroom comes!

They That Wait On The Lord

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 16, 2007

SCRIPTURE: But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint. (Isaiah 40:31)

Introduction

How much time to do you spend every day waiting? Most of us detest waiting. It seems that we spend most of our lives waiting on something. We wait for the coffee to brew. We wait for water to boil, popcorn to pop, and for all the commercials to pass before we can watch our rented DVD.We wait for the train to pass. We wait for our tax refund check. We wait in lines at stores. We go out to eat and wait in more lines. Before we come home we wait in a traffic jam.

If we call someone on the phone we wait. If we get them on the phone we while they put us on hold because they have call waiting.

We wait in line the doctor's office, the first day of school and at the health clinic.

We finally get enough money for cablevision then have to wait a week to get it installed.

We can't wait for our children to be born, and then spend the next 18 years waiting for them to leave.

Most of us don't like waiting, we have very little patience. Most of us have as much patience as the truck driver who dropped in at an all-night restaurant. The waitress had just served him when three gangsta types came in riding pimped out motorcyclists. The gangstas seemed as if they were spoiling for a fight. One grabbed the hamburger off his plate; another took a handful of his French fries; and the third picked up his coffee and began to drink it. The trucker did not respond as one might expected. He waited patiently for them to stop. Then, he calmly rose, put the check and his money on the cash register, and went out the door. The waitress followed him to put the money in the till and stood watching out the door as the big truck drove away into the night. When she returned, one of the cyclists said to her, "He ain't much of a real man is he?" She replied, "He ain't much of a truck driver either, he just ran over three motorcycles out in the parking lot."

Sometimes we all run out of patience.

But suppose we are waiting on God? Do we run out of patience? If the world snatches our burgers, steals our fries and drinks our soda do we run over its cycles? The ability to wait on the Lord is characteristic of the Christian life that is learned over time. We don't become Christians and instantly learn how to be patient, it develops as our faith and trust in God grows.

Our quest in the faith is to learn to wait patiently, knowing that when we do, God will lead us in the right direction.

As Christians, we strive to become more patient by trusting God more and walking each day in faith. When we know God is working on our situation, we can patiently wait until he works it out and shows us what to do.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he tells the people of Judah to patiently wait for God to move without frustration.

For 40 years, the people of Israel were shifted from one world power to another. They prayed to God and waited for him to respond to their prayer of relief. The city of Jerusalem and its Temple had been destroyed by the Babylonians in 587 B.C. For some forty years, the Judeans had lived as hostages in a strange land; they were discouraged repeatedly in their efforts to liberate themselves and to return to their homeland. Their independence seemed to come slow. The stunning victory of Cyrus over the mighty Babylonian power (538 B.C.) and his decree of liberation for the Jewish exiles were events too joyous to recount. They waited impatiently for the time when they would return home, but everything seemed so slow. The prophets came telling them that God would prepare a way for them but the long highway home that they promised, seemed so far and so improbable. The prophets repeatedly told them that God would give them a divine pardon, comfort them in every major problem area, and promised the restoration of Zion and its Temple.

While the people believed God for their liberation, they were impatient. This prompted the prophet Isaiah to declare that they should not become impatient, but to wait on the power of God to help them take the appropriate steps. For Judah the steps included their liberation by the Persian government and the return home. While waiting on the command to return, they raised money, prepared for the journey and arranged their affairs in such a way that they were instantly ready whenever God gave the command.

It seemed like a slow pace for them, but they waited for God to move and eventually he led them back to the promised at his command.

Six Ways to wait

What does it mean to "Wait on the Lord?" Some confuse waiting on the Lord with foolish idleness. The utility bill is due but the misinformed believer watches television, waiting on the Lord. The car is out of gas but the misinform believer keeps driving, waiting on the Lord. To wait on the Lord does not mean that a person should sit around and wait for their dreams to fall out of the sky fully developed. To wait on the Lord means to have confidence while working that God will provide the strength persevere and the outcome according to his will.

In 1985 David Maister in a study entitled "Psychology of Waiting Lines" noted that those who approach waiting with positive attitudes usually feel that their waits were not long. Those who approach periods of waiting negative attitudes usually concluded that the same period of time was longer. Our attitude about waiting determines the waiting experience.

There are six truths every believer should consider about waiting:

DO SOMETHING WHILE YOU WAIT: Isaiah encouraged Israel to prepare for action while they waited. In the interim they raised money and made other preparation. As we wait for God to move in our lives we should not spend our days staring at the calendar. There is an old saying, "A watched pot never boils." Do something while you wait. It is true that occupied time feels shorter than unoccupied time. If you have applied for a job, don't sit and watch the phone all day. Those who busy themselves in kingdom building activities find that it is easier to wait and the time quickly passes.

ANXIETY MAKES THE WAIT LONGER: If while we wait we begin to doubt our decisions, the wait seems longer. It's like choosing a checkout line at store then worrying if you chose the right line when the other line starts to move and yours stands still. Sarah had an anxiety attack as she waited on the promise of a child. She saw others having children and herself getting older and the wait seemed endless. She decided to change lines and hire a surrogate only to find that she was in the line in the first place. When you choose to place a matter in God's hand, don't waste time worrying about your decision. If you are going to worry, then don't give it to God. If you give it God then don't worry, he will work it out.

UNCERTAINTY MAKES WAITS LONGER: The end of Israel's wait was never assigned a date. Isaiah assured them only that in God's own time he would come. Appointments raise expectations; waits are longer when appointments are not kept. A person will arrive 45 minutes early for a 9 a.m. appointment, but grow impatient if the appointed time is extended or missed. When we know what to expect the wait is shorter. When we don't know, it gets longer. If God gives a time expect it. When he told Israel to prepare to leave Egypt in the morning, they packed and waited and the morning they left. Usually, however he gives no specific time. Even when Christ came to earth the scriptures report that he came "in the fullness of time" or when God was ready.

Believers who place a date and time when they expect God to act frustrate themselves because God does not move by our time. They wait seems longer because we have placed a time limitation on God's action. What we do know is that when the time is right God will move. The saying is, "He may not come when you want him, but he's always on time.

UNFAIR WAITS SEEM LONGER. We don't like people to cut in front of us. When we see others who have not waited as long as we have get blessed our wait seems longer, but is it? Believers sometimes frustrate themselves by watching the ungodly skip the line and seem to get ahead in life. That frustration makes our godly life seem to move at a snail's pace. What does the word of God say about this? Psalm 37:1 says "Fret not thyself because of Evildoers neither be thou envious of the workers of iniquity." Worry about them, makes your wait seem longer because you perceive that you are being treated unfairly. Just remember God says Psalm 37:25 says, "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." No matter how life cuts in front of us, remember God won't run out of blessings before we get to check out.

WAITS ARE LONGER WHEN YOU WAIT ALONE: Those who wait have longer waits. The line moves a little faster if there is someone to share the experience. The lines at Disneyland and Six Flags can be long but children are not intimidated by the wait because they usually stand in line with a friend. They spend the time sharing ideas, experiences and chatter as the line edges toward the front. If believers wait on God alone, it seems such a long time. Those who interact with others in the faith in bible studies, classes, ministries and other activities find that before they know it their turn to be blessed has arrived. Hebrews 10:25 says believers should not forsake assembling with other saints to encourage and inspire each other. We help others in their wait; they help us in our wait.

THE MORE WE WANT IT THE LONGER WE WAIT: We are willing to wait longer for what we really want. If we perceive the value of an object to be great, then we will endure wait to achieve it. If we think a college education is essential then we will plunge into the four or eight years needed because we value the outcome. When the last version of Harry Potter was released the lines formed a day before. Apple's Iphone had lines wrapped around buildings. People waited long periods of time because they wanted what was being offered. What does God offer us? He offers us his blessings on our lives. Believers are prepared to wait for him to bless us because they believe his blessing is important enough for the wait. Job said in Job 14:14, "all the days of my appointed time, I will wait until my change comes."

Wait on the Lord

Finally, Brothers and Sisters we must consider that those who patiently wait on the Lord, won't be disappointed, because what he's got for us is well worth the wait.

Every believer is going to wait on something in this life. It is not whether we are going to go through a lot of waiting in our lives, but how we are going to wait. Isaiah reminds us that that "they wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength." The flip side of this is, "Those who wait without the Lord shall wear themselves out!"

Those who wait without shall spend many sleepless nights!

Those who wait without the Lord, shall get old with worry before their time.

Those who wait without the Lord, will expend all of their energy and run out of steam.

The Word of God encourages us to wait patiently on the Lord.

Galatians 5:22 says, "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness faith." Longsuffering is the ability to wait on the Lord.

Psalm 27:14, says, "Wait on the Lord, be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart: wait, I say, on the Lord."

Lamentations 3:26 says, "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord."

Isaiah said they that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength.

We are able to take the most frustrating moments and turn them into learning situations because we have learned how to wait on the Lord.

When you wait on the Lord, that which was impossible become possible.

When you wait on the Lord, that which was out of range comes a little closer.

Everybody is waiting on something.

What are you waiting for?

The defeated are waiting for the final victory. Jesus has promised that victory. He told John, "He that over cometh shall inherit all things."

The weak are waiting for more strength? The faint in strength are waiting for God's promise to Isaiah that their strength would be renewed.

The discouraged are waiting for encouragement. In his discouragement David said, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth."

The confused are waiting for answers! "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understandings. Acknowledge him in all thy ways, and he shall direct thy paths."
