Moses was assigned the burdensome task of leading the people out of Israel. Moses, who had been away from Egypt for 40 years, was reluctant. He questioned what he should say to the people when they asked the source of his authority. At this point, God did a new thing; he gave Moses a specific name to call him instead of just "God" which was the tradition of all of the generations of Jews before him. God had no name, he was just God. He had no title, he was just God.

Moses was told to tell Pharaoh that his name is "I Am That I am" The name that God chose was more an affirmation of God's deity than a name. The Hebrew equivalent of the letters of the name God chose is YHWH, or Yahweh in Hebrew and in English, Jehovah. The full meaning of God's name is "I am who I am" or "I will be who I will be" or "I cause to be what is."

Moses was told to tell Pharaoh in no uncertain terms that Yahweh is the one that will cause the liberation of the people. He is the same God who was called upon by Israel for 400 years. Now he had a name rather than just a general reference.

In chapter Exodus 6:3 God reassures Moses that he would deliver the people from bondage and again encourages him to invoke his name, Jehovah, which was not known unto them at the time.

By giving Moses a name to invoke, God announced his personal involvement in the affairs of his select and chosen people. It was a name which indicated the people were not distant from him, but able to access him on a personal basis, as son would his father.

Those who know God, Know his name

The children of God know him, but they also know him on a first name basis. Sometimes what God is called depends upon the situation. Each biblical reference refers to the same God, however each of the various names suggest how God responded in a certain need circumstance. The bible has many Hebrew names the aspect of God's nature in a situation. English translators in many instances chose to simply use the word "God" for the variety of descriptive names used to describe God.

The Hebrews were unique, they enjoyed a first name styled relationship with God that individualized what they called him, depending on what they needed and what God supplied.

JEHOVAH-RAPHA,Exodus 15:26 The name Jehovah-Rapha means 'I am the Lord that healeth thee'. When God spoke to Israel in Exodus 15 he is addressed as "Lord" the Hebrew name translated was Jehovah-Rapha. God that heals. It is God's nature to heal. Jesus came to reveal God to us. When Jesus was in this world He was constantly healing the sick. From this we understand the nature and the desire of God. God wants to heal and make us whole.

When we are sick, it good to know God on a first name basis. It is good to know that Jehovah-Rapha is a great healer for whatever ails our body or soul.

JEHOVAH-JIREH Genesis 22:14. The name Jehovah means 'the Lord is our provider." We must look to God to meet our needs. This is the lesson that Abraham learned in Genesis 22. It is the lesson that God always provides a ram in the bush for those who trust him. The Lord sent the people of Israel through the wilderness to teach them to depend upon Him. In the wilderness there was no source of help for them. They had to look to God for every need. But God proved that He can meet their need even in the wilderness.

When our supply of food is running low, it is good to know that the Lord will provide.

When our money is gone and provisions have nearly disappeared, it is good to know God on a first name basis. Jehovah-jireh, my provider that is what God becomes in such situations.

JEHOVAH-SHALOM, Judges 6;24. The name Jehovah -Shalom means that God is our peace. In this troubled world we must experience God as our peace. Jesus did leave behind great material wealth or resources for his disciples when he left this world. But He left behind his peace for them. In Judges 6, Gideon was told not to fear, but to be in peace.

In times of confusion, many have found God to be a God of peace.

When there is disruption, or insecurity all around, it is good to know God on a first name basis, Jehovah-shalom. He is the one who brings peace in the midst of confusion.

JEHOVAH-NISSI- Exodus 17;15 The name Jehovah-Nissi means the Lord is our banner of victory. He is the lord of hosts and commands the vast heavenly army. He will fight the battle for us and give us the victory. He will lift our head and honor us. We need not fear shame and failure when we have God as our Jehovah-Nissi.

When we appear to be facing imminent defeat, it's good to know God on a first name basis!

When the chips are down and it appears we have no chance of victory, it is good to know God on a first name basis.

He is Jehovah-nissi, the God of our victory!

There is a name..Jesus

Finally, brothers and sisters, there is a name that commands the respect of the universe, it is the name of Jesus.

The children of Israel knew there was a God, but they did not know his name. They simply described him as Elohim. Elohim is a plural word, suggesting many dimensions. The same dimensions referred to in Genesis 1:26 when he said "Let us make man"- us being the father, the Word and the Holy Ghosts three distinct entities that act as one.

Although Elohim is a plural noun is always followed by a singular verb. It laymen's terms it means if you call on the father you get action. If you call on the Son you get action. If you call on the Holy Ghost, you get action. It doesn't matter which name we call, we get action.

Believers who walk with God may not go through the long list of the names of God. They may be too long to remember.

When our strength is failing, we may not remember to call on El-Shaddai, the almighty God..but there is a name!

When we are walking through the valley of the shadow of death, we may not remember, Jehova-Rohi, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want!"..but there is a name!

When we are feeling like we're making this journey alone, we may not remember "Emmanuel" the everlasting God, but there is a name!

Because we walk with the Lord he has given us a name to call, on a first name basis.

There is no hyphen.

There is no special effort needed to remember certain names.

One name says it all. If you know God for yourself, you call on the name of Jesus.

No wonder the song writer declared, “I come to the garden alone. While the dew is still on the roses. And the voice I hear ringing in mine ear, the son of God discloses. And he walks with me and he talks with me and he tells me I am his own. And the joy we share as we tarry there, none other has ever known”

There is a name that reaches beyond the narrow confines of my loneliness and brings me comfort!

There is a name that reaches below my deepest failure and guides me to success!

There is a name that transcends my weakness and brings me strength.

It’s the name of Jesus! There is none other name whereby we must be saved! It’s the name of Jesus!

No wonder the song writer declared, “There is a name I love to hear. I love to sing its worth. It sounds like music in mine ear, the sweetest name on earth. Oh how I love Jesus. Oh How I love Jesus. Because he first loved me.”

He loved me so much that he hung out on Calvary!

He loved me so much that died for my sins!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power!

All power in his hands!

Tragedy, Tears and the Cross

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "God is our refuge and our strength, a very present help in a time of trouble. Therefore we will not fear though the earth be removed and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; Psalm 46:1-2;The Lord of hosts is with us the God of Jacob is our refuge." Psalm 46:11.

Introduction

How did you feel when you heard the news of terrorist attack on the World Trade Center? When you heard of the second plane crash, what did you feel? When you heard that another plane had crashed into a section of the Pentagon and yet another had crashed outside of Philadelphia, what was your reaction? If you are like most Americans, your reaction was that of horror, anger and a terrible sense of insecurity. No one expected that in our nation, that it would be possible to literally bring the world's most powerful nation to a screeching halt. This week we learned that our sense of safety and security has been misplaced because despite what we have been told, we are extremely vulnerable as a nation and as individuals.

As we watched with terrified eyes the total destruction of the World Trade Center and witnessed the debris and carnage of lost lives and property, many people came to another astonishing realization.. "we no longer feel safe!"

The attacks seemed to target the obvious symbols of power in America.

The World Trade Center, towering at 110 stories high, represented the essence of American economic power. It was the home of giant American financial corporations, which operate, control and direct financial operations around the world. It was the one symbol the world recognized as an icon of American economic strength. The picture of the World Trade Center crumbling into the dust shook our sense of economic security.

The pentagon is the symbol of American military strength. In its walls the security of the entire nation is planned and executed. The movements of millions of soldiers, battleships, missiles and aircraft are orchestrated from the Pentagon. It is well guarded by armed soldiers, anti-aircraft guns, radar, and electronic security of the highest order. In our collective mind, the thought of an enemy, foreign or domestic penetrating such a defensive area was unimaginable. But when a hijacked jet liner crashed into the pentagon, killing hundreds, and wounding even more, we were intimidated. Our sense of military security was shaken.

The White House and Camp David are the residences of our national leader. They are protected by armed guards, air and land security, and the latest in technological advances. On any given day the President of the United States, the Vice President, Chief of Staff and many other leaders of the nation may all be assembled in the same building at the same time. When we learned that a fourth plane is believed to have targeted the president himself and was probably steered off course only by the brave intervention of passengers on board, we were shaken again. When we saw the President being shuttled from one place to another, ducking and hiding to avoid death while trying to lead the country at the same time, our sense of political security was shaken.

When we rode airplanes we felt safe. When we opened packages received in the mail, we felt safe. When we walked the streets of our nation, we generally felt safe from attack from foreign enemies, even if we were a bit intimidated by the enemies within. No matter how the nation responds to the tragedy and the tears of this week, the feeling of security we have known throughout the history of this nation will be lost forever.

Yet, beyond the tragedy and the tears, the terror and the fears, one symbol still stands strong, it is the old rugged cross!

The cross represents the one power in the world that has not and cannot be toppled by terrorism, crashing planes or evil empires. It represents the power of God himself. Christians, more than all others, are reminded that the power of the cross should reaffirm our feeling of safety and security. Our feeling of security is rooted in our faith that God is still on the throne and still controls the universe.

That's why the song writer declares, "Blessed Assurance, Jesus is mine. Oh what a foretaste of glory divine. Heir of salvation. Purchase of God. Born of his spirit washed in his blood!"

It is an assurance for times like these.

It is an assurance that there is still safety in the arms of God.

As Christians, along with the rest of the world, see the fallen symbols of shattered security in New York, Washington and Philadelphia; let us not forget to see the one symbol that still stands tall as a symbol of hope….the cross of Christ!

Exposition

This psalm focuses on David as he encourages believes in times of trouble.

David understood what it meant to be utterly devastated by trouble on every hand. David was acquainted with both the praise of the people and at the same time he was acquainted with trouble. He enjoyed being a hero and saw how quickly popularity crumbled. He soon became hunted. From the wealth of his experience with God, David suggests three things for believers:

Believers should trust and hope in God when times are difficult. In such times we are to remember what God has done for us in the past and look forward with expectation for the great things he is going to do in the future. Scholars think David was reflecting on his own life experiences in 2 Samuel 8, in which he experience difficulties but eventual victory.

David encourages us to sing his praise despite the difficulties of any given moment because he is our eternal strength. He is control and in him we can still find security, continuity and hope.

Tragedy Shakes Security

A tragedy, simply put, is an unfortunate experience endured by an otherwise good person. When bad things happen to good people, we call them tragedies. Whenever tragedies occur our sense of security is shaken, especially if we are not grounded in the Lord.

The most striking example of a tragedy is Job. He was a good man who endured a series of tragedies that resulted in the loss of his family, property and health. Yet in all of his tragic experience, Job was not shaken.

Generally, we feel secure when outside forces cannot intrude upon us. The simplest feeling of security is how comfortable and safe we feel inside our homes when it rains. We hear the roar of the wind and see the waters drench the ground but we feel secure. But if there is a leak in the roof, we worry every time it rains. We don't feel safe.

When David said, "God is our refuge" what he meant is that our sense of security is not derived from our own defenses, but it rests in our faith in God. Psalm 20:7-8 says, "Some trust in chariots and some in horses, but we trust in the name of the Lord our God. They are brought to their knees and fall, but we rise up and stand firm." As believers, we must remember that our feeling of security goes beyond metal detectors, airport security checks, military power, political alliances or the strength of our financial institutions. Our faith rests in a living God.

Security is not the absence of trouble, but the presence of confidence and courage in the midst of trouble. Security is not a promise that it will not rain.

Security is confidence that even if it rains my roof will hold.

Beyond that, security means that even if circumstances beyond my control occur, "it is well with my soul." To carry the illustration further, those who trust in the Lord do not put their trust in the strength of the roof, but live daily with confidence that no matter what tragedy may befall them, they are secure in the Lord. They are unshaken. Psalm 125 puts it this way, " They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be shaken (removed), but abideth forever."

Jesus, talking to his disciples in Matthew 24:6 said, "And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet." Since the word of God is true, we know that tragedies of monolithic proportions are forthcoming. As nations form leagues with each other against others, each action precipitates a reaction. As Cities are bombed, leaders are assassinated, and terrorists invade tragedy increases and the death of the innocent escalates.

In verse 7 of Matthew 24 Jesus said, "For nations shall rise against nations and kingdom against kingdom and there shall be famines and pestilences and earthquakes in diver's places." These shall be! The believer's sense of security is maintained not in a hope that tragedies will not happen but in the knowledge that when they do happen, God is still in control. Thus David in Psalm 46:2 says, "Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea"

Though the great symbols of our security crumble around us, we will not fear!

Though buildings topple and our defenses seem weak we will not fear!

Look at verse 6—We can relate to it especially in these times. We have seen the heathen rage. We have seen powerful constructions melt and crumble before our eyes. Though the work of the ungodly shakes the world around us…David declares in verse 7.."The Lord is with us."

Tears follow tragedy

Whenever there is a tragedy, there are tears. There are tears from those directly affected and those who empathize. We have seen our share of tears in the aftermath of our own personal tragedies. Often our tears reflect our weakness and vulnerabilities at a precise moment. We can't stop them because they flow. They reflect our weakness.

When a young widow, frustrated with the responsibility of raising three children alone shuts herself in a room and cries…her tears reflect her frustration.

When we are helpless to change our circumstance and have tired of wishing that things would be different, but they never are…sometimes the tears flow.

When we eat alone with an empty chair after years of sharing our meal with another who was always there…sometimes, right there, while no one is looking..the tears flow.

David reminded believers that God is our refuge or source of security. He also noted that God is our "strength."

News of a tragedy is enough to buckle the knees of any human being. In an instant our humanity takes control as we sympathize and tears flow. Then the Holy Spirit moves and true believers find strength in the Lord.

Strength is the ability to rise above weakness, even with teary eyes and go forward.

When we are weak our strength is restored by allowing God to move in our lives. In the face of tragedy, when we are overwhelmed with grief and tears, we still need to allow God to act.

Look at verse 10. God says, "Be still and know that I am God. I will be exalted among the heathen." When the heathen rage and cause tears, grief and pain, God will move on the altar of the hearts of the world in such a magnificent way that good will be raised up, love will be exemplified and righteousness will be victorious.

This is what Isaiah meant in Isaiah 40:29, "He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength..but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up on wings as Eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint."

When we shed a tear for a friend, our tears are not lost. In our moment of compassion, God sees our tears. In 2 Kings 20:5 God told Hezekiah, "I have seen thy tears and will heal thee." In Esther 8:3, Esther prayed for the life of Mordecai with her tears, and God heard her prayer. But when it's all over Revelation tells me that "God shall wipe all of their tears away."

Tears follow tragedy, but our tears should not be tears of despair.

Our tears may reflect our frustration, but they should not mean we have given up hope!

Our tears may reflect our grief, but they should not mean that we have abandoned our faith.

Embedded in our grief should be our eternal praise of God, who is bigger than any evil and better than the worst atrocity.

The Cross still stands

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider, that when every symbol of power and achievement in the world falls, the cross still stands.

The ultimate goal of an evil power is to convince good people that there is no hope.

When we see the symbol of financial strength destroyed or the symbols of our political power and military strength laid vulnerable, it indicates that it is all hopeless.

Yet when every symbol that man makes crumbles to the dust, rising like a Phoenix like from the rumble with the hopes of every believer clinging to it. is the cross of Jesus!

When the sun is hidden from view and soot and clouds form a blanket around us, the cross of Jesus beams through the darkness and brings hope!

When it appears that all that we stand for is under attack and lays buried beneath twisted steel, charred dreams, and broken spirits, one symbol of hope still stands. It is the cross of Jesus.

The cross is the helping hand of men and women who give of themselves, beyond human capacity to save lives. Their untiring energy says to the world…the cross still stands!

The cross is the combined prayers of the faithful of every denomination and faith around the world lifted up with one voice. It's a resounding chorus gives one grand testimony…the cross still stand stands!

The cross is our reminder that no matter how difficult times may become..God is still in control.

To paraphrase David, every believer declares:

'Though the earth be removed…the cross still stands!"

"Though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea, the cross still stands!"

"Though waters roar and be troubled…the cross still stands!"

I"m glad to know that in times like these, the cross still stands!

These are times:

—Of Wars and rumors of wars..but the cross still stands!

—When nations are rising up against nations, but the cross still stands!

—When the heathen are raging and the multiple headed monster of evil raises its ugly head…but even in these times, the cross still stands!

The cross stands as a symbol of:

—Strength in the midst of weakness; victory in the midst of defeat

—Comfort in the midst of despair; hope in the midst of hopelessness!

No wonder the song writer declared, at the cross, at the cross, where I first saw the light and burdens of my heart rolled away. It was there by faith I received my sight and now I'm am happy all the day!

Over 2000 years ago, the world saw a tragedy on a hill!

It was a tragedy because a good man was nailed to an old rugged cross!

It was a tragedy because a man who only tried to help people was persecuted by the forces of evil!

But Early Sunday morning the tragedy was turned into a victory!

No wonder the songwriter declared, "On a hill far away stood an old rugged, the emblem of suffering and I'll love that old cross where the dearest and best, for a world of lost sinners were slain.

"So I'll cherish that old rugged cross, till one day my trophies I lay down. I will cling to the old rugged, and exchange it one day for a crown"

Though storms rise…the cross still stands!

Though the heathen rage,the cross still stands!

God is in control!

A Stranger In The House

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 23, 2001

SCRIPTURE: Rid me, and deliver me from the hand of strange children, whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood:That our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner stones, polished after the similitude of a palace: Psalm 144:11-12

Introduction

Is it possible to know the names of every person in your home but still feel that there is a stranger in your house? Is it possible to recognize the shoes under the bed, the shirt or blouse in the closet, and the face in the photograph, but still not recognize the person sleeping in the bed? There are thousands of familes that are frustrated today, because one or more family members have become unfamiliar to the others. They are doing strange things. They are going to strange places. They are acting in strange ways. Even though they look the same on the outside, they have become strangers to members of their families.

Thousands of relationships between men and women are shaken each year as one becomes a stranger to the other. Marriages are shattered and romances are breached for ever when partners become strangers. It is a difficult experience.

Even more frustrating is what happens when some parents look at their children and realize that they don't know them anymore.

Grandparents shake their heads and say, "Lord, Lord, Lord!"

Great grand parents say, "Uh, uh, uh!"

The greatest joy of parents and grandparents is to know that their off spring are clinging to the strengths of the family and avoiding its historocial weaknesses. That's why grandparents are important to families. They provide the perspective of generations. Sometimes grandma sees a trait in granddaughter that was peculiar to her daughter. Great grandma sees it even clearer because her eyes see farther back in time.

If it is a joy to know that children are clinging to the family's strengths, it is equally frustrating to discover one day that our children have become strangers to the family. They become strangers when they extend beyond the familiar, differ from the family's path, and plunge into the unknown, uncomfortable and peculiar.

Strangers rarely call themselves strangers. In fact they don't see themselves as strangers at all. That's what the mother learned when she told her child never to get into a car with a stranger. The little girl was very careful to obey her parents. One day an unfamiliar man stopped at the school and offered to give her a ride home. The little girl said, "Mommie says not to ride with strangers. Are you a stranger?" The man said "no" the girl got into the car and was never seen again. Strangers can't be relied upon to define themselves.

Strangers can get on your nerve too. A man is in bed with his wife when there is a rat-a-tat-tat on the door. He rolls over and looks at his clock, and it's half past three in the morning. "I'm not getting out of bed at this time," he thinks, and rolls over. Then, a louder knock follows.

"Aren't you going to answer that?" says his wife.

So he drags himself out of bed and goes downstairs. He opens the door and there is strange man standing at the door. It didn't take the homeowner long to realize the man was drunk.

"Hi there," slurs the stranger. "Can you give me a push??"

"No, get lost. It's half past three. I was in bed," says the man and slams the door. He goes back up to bed and tells his wife what happened and she says:

"Dave, that wasn't very nice of you. Remember that night we broke down in the pouring rain on the way to pick the kids up from the baby and you had to knock on that man's house to get us started again? What would have happened if he'd told us to get lost??"

"But the guy was drunk," says the husband.

"It doesn't matter," says the wife. "He needs our help and it would be the Christian thing to help him."

So the husband gets out of bed again, gets dressed, and goes downstairs.

He opens the door, and not being able to see the stranger anywhere he shouts, "Hey, do you still want a push??"

And he hears a voice cry out, "Yeah please."

So, still being unable to see the stranger he shouts, "Where are you?"

And the stranger replies, "I'm over here, on your swing and I can't get it to move. I need a push!"

Strangers outside of the house are difficult. They are even more difficult if they are in the house. If those strangers are our own children, it is even more frustrating.

As Christians, we strive to rear our children in ways that will help them reflect the fear of the Lord and the Christian values of our family. Even though they may grow up to look, dress or speak differently, they are no strangers to us, as long as they reflect a love for God and family in their lives.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he speaks of his desire for peace for the eventual prosperity of his children.

The 144th psalm is believed to have been writtten after David was King. His kingdom was threatened with impending war with the Philistines and he was particiularly concerned about the welfare of the kingdom. In this psalm he acknowledges the goodness of God toward him and extols him as his, “goodness, fortress, high tower, deliverer, shield and one whom he trusted.” (v2) In every respect, he saw God as a tower of strength and hope in his life.

In verses 5-8 He asks God to help him in his efforts against his enemies. His prayer is that God would “send thine hand from above” to protect him from invading enemies, who were like strange children, attacking and destroying.

In verses 9-10 he rejoices because he expects complete and total victory over the enemies of the people.

His prayer of hope for the children of his kingdom is that they would not be estranged from God but would be examples of sons and daughters who are well rooted in their commitment to God.

In verse 8 he identified his enemies as strange children. In verse 11 he repeats that same description but asks God to deliver his children and the children of his nation from influences that would estrange them against all that is good and right.

David desired to see the prosperity and fulfillment of the children of his kingdom. He wanted them safe, rooted and given an opportunity to grow and mature in the Lord.

He began verse 12 by saying, “That our sons may be..”. He provides an illustration of his hope when he characterizes his hope for sons by saying he hoped that they be as well rooted plants that have grown in the right way since their youth. He also notes “That our daughters may be..” Here the illustration is that of cornerstones, pillars and well maintained.

David wanted no strangers in his house. To understand this mode of thinking, consider that in ancient times houses were constructed, especially those of the wealthy such as David, with the garden inside instead of outside which is the common practice. Those who entered a house found themselves in a court yard that were adorned with trees and shrubs, fountains and fish ponds, inclusive of elegant stautues that often rested on great columns. These statutes often were of elegantly scuptured figures of women wearing robes. In every court the plants and the statutes were the centerpieces of attention. Other than the house itself, it was the owner’s pride and joy. The young trees which grow up so vigorously within an enclosure and the polished pillars and statues that stand strong and tall represent the sons and daughters of the faithful.

Those whose sons and daughters remain true to God and family are said to be happy in the Lord. (v 15)

That our sons may be like plants

David expressed a desire that the sons of believers should be as plants.

Plants are different from weeds. Weeds are not wanted while plants are prized and cared for. Plants are watered. Plants are regularly exposed to the sun and pruned.

No one cares about weeds. No one waters them,they find their own sun. They are never pruned . They grow wild.

Like prized plants, every family rears its sons the same way. They are regularly watered with love and affection and exposed to the SON. This son refers to religious instruction and religious experiences. Parents who love their sons are careful about the environment in which they are reared and pay close attention to them.

It takes little effort to grow up a houseful of weeds. There are many in our neighborhoods. They grow up without rules, set their own standards of right and wrong and usually have no purpose or value. No business wants weeds, but nearly every business and office has some type of plant. Churches don't want weeds. Schools don't want weeds. Weeds have a way of choking plants at the root and killing them too. No matter how many weeds you collect, their ultimate end is to be pulled up, cast aside and burned.

If you want your sons to become weeds here is the perfect receipe:

1. Let your child see a conflict between your homelife and your church life.
2. Permit your child to choose his own companions without restraint or direction.
3. Give your child a latchkey and allow him to return home at any hour of the night.
4. Make no inquiry as to where and with whom he spends his leisure hours.
5. Insure that he goes to church but one or both parents stay at home
6. Let him expect pay for every act of helpfulness
7. Let him spend his church-time hours outside the building instead of in the church
8. Be careful never to let your child hear you pray
9. Show no interests in your child's school or personal life especially after 6th grade
10. Let your child select the television programs he watches and music she hears.

Follow these rules and one day, it is guaranteed, parents will look upon their sons and see "strange children" in the house who have become weeds instead of plants.

That our daughters may be

David compares believing daughters to strong cornerstones, statues of beauty, grace and strength.

Every believing daughter, in addition to the attributes desire in sons, should examples of strength, grace and beauty-polished and perfected.

There is nothing more beautiful than a young woman who has learned the art of finer womanhood.

She is strong when she has developed a sense of self worth that is independent of the approval of others. She is strong when she is immune to flattery and aware of her inner beauty.

She is strong when she has learned when to say "yes" and when to say "no"; when to hold on and when to let go.

Strength and grace are taught in the home. Parents work hard to teach their daughters to be strong and carry themselves with dignity and grace.

A graceful woman does cuss like a sailor, walk like a man, and fight like wrestler. A woman of distinction is refined, restrained and does not show it all.

Just as there are ways to create "strangers" there are also ways to create sons and daughters who grow up close to the ideal godly family model.

1. Make "home the brightest and most attractive place on earth .by creating an atmosphere of love and warmth

2. Promote responsible behavior dress, conduct and general decorum.

3. Promote healthy relationships by screening companions, organizations and people who influence your child

4. Help your child develop a spirit of helpfulness by doing things for others without pay

5. Stay involved in your child's school life, including PTA and extra-curricular activities, even in high school.

6. Be careful to impress upon her mind that making character is more important than making money.

7. Live uprightly before him at all times; then you will be able to talk to him with power.

8. Admit the mistakes you have made in your life and help your child to avoid the same.

9. Go to church with your child and participate with her in chuch related youth activities.

10. Insist on excellence as a goal rather than mediocrity.

Parents who follow these guides will follow the biblical mandate to "train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from them."

Never be a stranger to God

Finally, brothers and sisters, the greatest benefit of rearing children in the fear of the Lord is that they will never be strangers to the Lord.

When a child is brought up in a God fearing household, he never feels like a stranger in the presence of the Lord.

You are stranger if you are unfamiliar with the ways of the Lord. Every child needs to know how the Lord operates.

Every child needs to know that the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, but no matter what he chooses to do, his response should be, "blessed be the name of the Lord."

Every child needs to know that when times are difficult, God is a shelter in a time of storm.

Every child needs to be told that when he can't find his way, God will make a way out of no way!

You are stranger if you are unfamiliar with the power of prayer!

Every child needs to know that there is power in prayer!

You are stranger if you are unfamiliar with the grace of God!

You are stranger if you are unfamiliar with salvation of God provided by Calvary!

No child should be a stranger to the story of cross.
Every child should know that Jesus died out on Calvary!
Every child should know that Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!
Every child should be able to say with old warriors…I know I am a child of God!
Look at the way I walk!
Look at the way I talk!
I know I am a child of God!

Odd Couples

SCRIPTURE:"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? 2 Corinthians 6:14

Introduction

Have you ever seen a strange couple? Most of us have seen a few strange couples in our lives. Whether it was the short man with the tall wife, or the brain child who married the dumbest, goofiest guy in town. We have seen strange hookups before. Sometimes, we even wonder what makes their relationships work. Secretly we wonder, "What does she see in him?" It's an amazing sight, but odd couples are around us every day.

What is odd? An oddity is an unusual occurrence or relationship. Oddities change as the unusual become usual. A half century ago, interracial marriages and couples were oddities. Today, interracial couples barely get a second look, even in the South. When an old man marries a young woman 40 years his junior many people call that odd. Some unfairly call her a gold digger and him a dirty old man.

The oddest couples we've seen in these times are same sex marriages. People still shrug when they see two men kiss and find it extremely difficult to embrace the thought of two gorgeously beautiful women live as husband and wife. To many that's an odd couple.

There are literally millions of "odd" couples around us every day. We see them and scratch our heads. They are couples that are like water and oil, stripes and plaids; they simply could not mix together.

Life has its odd couples.

There was a very odd couple in the town of Do-wa-ditty. Folks all over town knew the man and his wife to be extremely faithful to each other, but for the entire 40 years they were married they argued every single day. It was an odd picture to see them hug and kiss each other one minute and argue the next.

One day the couple was traveling on a car trip. The argued about road signs, stop lights and just about every thing else. Whichever one lost the argument would tell the other, "I love you dear." The husband never like being wrong. Every mistake had to be his wife's fault. They stopped at a roadside restaurant for lunch. The old woman unfortunately left her glasses on the table, but didn't miss them until they were back on the highway. The husband complained that his wife should be more careful. It cost them both time and money to drive back 50 miles just to get her glasses. When they finally arrived, as the wife got out of the car to retrieve her glasses, the old man said, "While you're in there, you may as well get my hat, too." The wife then said, "And I love you too!"

If you think that's strange, what about the odd couple that insisted on having every thing around them reflect the love of God. They went overboard. The parrot sang hymns. Their telephone answering machine quoted long scriptures before the beep. They bought a dog and cat and named the Jacob and Esau so they could fight. One day they saw an advertisement of a religious pet shop that had a religious dog for sale. The couple bought the dog home and were amazed at its tricks. It became obvious that was self trained by watching TV preachers. When they asked the dog to fetch the Bible and looked up the 23rd Psalms. They told him to turn on the TV and he turned it to the 700 Club. They said "Praise" and the dog held up both paws, howled and jumped around. One night there friends who visited and the odd to show off the dog's skills. The friends were impressed, and asked whether the dog was able to do any of the usual dog tricks, as well. This stopped the couple cold, as they hadn't thought about "normal" tricks. Well, they said, "let's try this out." They called the dog, and they clearly pronounced the command, "Heel!" Quick as a wink, the dog jumped up, put his paw on the man's forehead, knocked him down and said, "In the name of Jesus-heal!" — It was an odd dog for an odd couple.

As Christians, we are aware of the importance of maintaining a relationship with God. It may appear odd to others, but we are maintained in our faith by our love for him.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains the importance of forming healthy relationships in personal and social areas.

Although many take this passage to refer to marriage and courtship relations, Paul, writing to the Corinthians stressed the importance of all Christian relationships.

Being unequally yoked is an agricultural term which refers to the kinds of animals used to plow the field. Two hard working oxen get a better job done than one that does not pull its share of the load. In a similar sense, people who do not share the same spiritual direction do not pull well together but tend to contradict each other.

No one would deny that we are living in a day of deception, compromise, and worldliness, among many Christians who do not recognize the meaning of being unequally yoked with unbelievers. To clarify this problem, Paul asked five questions that deserve our prayerful consideration because they have eternal consequences:

1)What fellowship has righteousness with unrighteousness?

2)What communion has light with darkness?

3)What harmony can there be between Christ and Belial (the devil)?

4)What has a believer in common with an unbeliever?

5)What agreement has (can there be between) the Temple of God and idols?

Paul indicates the obvious. There is a difference between the relationship and interaction. His words here do not suggest that believers have not interaction with unbelievers because to do so would require believers to live in another world. The emphasis is not to develop any relationships beyond the necessary with unbelievers.

True faith not only joins the believer to the Lord, but should also separate the believer in heart and practice, from the world which crucified his Lord and still hates Him. The presence of God demands holiness, for the presence of God cannot dwell in the presence of evil. Wherefore, come out from among unbelievers, and sever your relationships from them, says the Lord, and touch not unclean things; and I will receive you, and I will be a Father to you (6:17-18).

Odd Couples

The world has seen its share of odd couples. We have learned many great truths from studying the couples of the bible.

Samson and Delilah were an odd couple. Samson was a Danite who was a judge of the the people of Israel. He was the epitome of strength. He was also extremely vulnerable. He fell from grace with God when he coupled himself with Delilah, who took advantage of vulnerabilities and brought him down. They were the oddest of couples because instead of complementing each other, they were direct opposites. Their odd relationship ultimately resulted in his loss of strength and power.

David and Bathsheba both were odd couples. David was the ki ng of Israel and was biblically characterized as a 'man after God's own heart.' Yet, despite his close relationship with God, his eye was attracted to Bathsheba, who was already married. When he killed her husband with a royal order, the resulting relationship was and oddity for many years; people saw its oddity but rarely spoke of it openly.

Esther and the King: Esther was a beautiful Jewish woman who became queen of Persia. A Jewish woman married to the King of Persia was certainly an odd couple. However it was an odd arrangement that was ordained by God himself. There are times when God brings relationships together. They are odd in their appearance but nevertheless they are divinely inspired. Esther and the King shared a blessed relationship that saved the entire nation of Israel.

Hosea and Gomer were the epitome of Odd couples. Hosea was the foremost prophet of his time. He was well known in religious circles. His integrity was respected by all. Yet, God told Hosea to marry Gomer, who was a prostitute. The relationship was symbolic, yet it was real. God showed through this relationship how God's people related to him. Even today, there are relationships that are odd in nature but they make a point or statement about life as a whole.

Odd couples are odd because they make us stop and stare. They are not odd because they are grotesque, but because they are unique. Those couples that begin in the Lord, may be odd, but they are pleasing in the sight of God.

The oddest couple: Jesus and me

Finally, brothers and sisters, while there have been many odd couples, the oddest relationship of all is that between Jesus and a born again sinner.

Paul himself is the best of the odd couples. He spent most of his life fighting against Christ, but somewhere on the Damascus Road he saw the light. The people who saw him later question this odd arrangement, but he defended it with a passion.

If you want to see an odd couple, don't worry about trying to see odd couples like Robin Givens and Mike Tyson

If you want to see an odd couple, don't worry about Whitney Houston and Bobby Brown!

If you want to see an odd couple, don't worry about Micheal Jackson and Lisa Presley!

If you want to see an odd couple, don't worry about Ike and Tina Turner!

If you want to see an odd couple, all you have to look at is Jesus and me!

The Lord is so strong and we are so weak!

The Lord is so powerful and we are so powerless!

The Lord is so rich and we are so poor!

The Lord is so wonderful and we are so despicable!

The Lord is so compassionate and we are so merciless!

The Lord is so complete and we are so incomplete!

Who would have ever thought that someone like me who did what I did back then could be doing what we are doing now!

Who would have ever thought that someone like me who went where we weren't suppose to go then could go where we're going today!

Who would have ever thought that someone like me who danced the dance in clubs, could be dancing the dance that David dance today!

What could God possibly see in me? Maybe he saw what that fine woman saw in the fat man! Everybody else said, "I just can't see it!"

What could God possibly see in me? Maybe it's the same thing the handsome man saw in the ugly. Everybody else said, "I just can't see it"

What could God possibly see in me? Maybe it's same thing that the rich man saw in the poor woman, Everybody else said, "I just can't see it!"

What could God possibly see in me? Maybe it's the same thing that the educated woman found in the hard working but uneducated man. Everybody else said, "I just can't see it!"

The word of God answers the question when it says in John 3:16 "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!"

He loved us so much that he died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power!

All power in his hands.

Do It Your Self Projects

SCRIPTURE: Except the LORD build the house, they labor in vain that build it: except the LORD keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain. Psalm 127:1

Introduction

Have you ever tried to do it yourself? It may have been repairing a car, building table, or repairing an electrical wire. If you were dealing in an area in which you have little expertise, did it come out right? Most of us have had our turn playing Mr. or Miss "Do it yourself." Sometimes we did well, but there were also times when the final results were not as pleasing as we desired.

One of the factors that contribute to a decision to "do it yourself" is cost. A lawyer could cost a hundred dollars an hour or more, but do we actually save by representing ourselves? Can a novice save money by repairing his own transmission? Even doctors, who are highly skilled in their profession would not attempt major surgery on themselves. In such cases, cost takes second place to quality of service. In most cases, we save, but we sacrifice quality.

Time may be a factor in a "do it yourself" decision. Some choose the "do it yourself" route because they have more time than money. Some have decided that as practical matter, it is better for them to mow their own lawns, clean their own houses, and wash their own cars; especially since they have more time than money.

There are still others who choose the "do it yourself" route because they enjoy the challenge of completing a task themselves. They enjoy being able to say, "I did it all by myself." It increases their sense of self-worth and value. To them, being able to do it themselves is a statement of independence.

There is a final group which chooses the "do-it-yourself" approach because it believes that no one else can do it better. They live by the philosophy "if you want something done right, do it yourself." It's not necessarily right because they do it, but it will be to their satisfaction, good or bad.

Whether it's a "do it yourself" project or a turnkey professional job, each person should approach life with the eye toward perfection. We should seek the one way we can achieve excellence.

An elderly carpenter had worked many years for the company, under the sneaky suspicion that he was not as great a carpenter as his reputation said. When he reached his last year on the job, his employer gave him one final assignment. Without the assistance of a crew or others, the old carpenter was asked to build one last house, as a favor to the owner.

The carpenter said yes, but in time it was easy to see that while he was a very good carpenter he was not able to build the house alone. In the company of his plumbers, electricians and decorators he had amassed a great reputation. Alone, the plumbing leaked, the lights were dimmed and the project was wreck.

When the carpenter finished his work the employer came to inspect the house. He handed the front-door key to the carpenter.

"This is your house," he said, "my gift to you." The carpenter was shocked! This was his worse project and his first do it yourself project

Many have a do it yourself attitude about life, but the project never seems to come out right. There is no creation so flawed as that of the self made man or woman. We may work to build a life for ourselves, but without the help of God, our do it yourself life project may be our worse project.

As Christians, we understand that there is little we can do in the world without God. We can work and labor, but our best project fails without his help.

Exposition

This text focuses on King David as he gives instruction to his son Solomon on family building. Since it is well known that David wanted to build a house for God, on first appearance it would appear that this text concerned building the temple. Closer inspection reveals that the text had very little to do with building the temple, and much to do with Solomon's attention to his family.

The "house" of this text is not a building, but a family, immediate, extended and cross generational. David's instruction was very simple. He said unless the principles of God are applied in family building, Solomon's efforts will be fruitless.

In his instruction, David encouraged Solomon not to work so hard that he neglects his family. In addition, he was encouraged to view his children as precious gems, or arrows in a quiver, the more the better.

The parent who pays attention to his family and rears it according to the will of God is happy and sleeps well at night.

Except the Lord Build the House

There are many who have a "do-it-yourself" approach to family. The approach is very simple. Get some kind of education and training, get a job, makes some money, pay the bills, send the children off to school, fix things that break, find someone to keep the children, sneak a way for a break, find someone to keep the children, get a better job, make more money, send the kids to school,etc. The cycle continues without end. That's the "do-it-yourself" method of family building. It seems practical and logical.

This approach leaves godliness out of the formula. It emphasizes our own methods and leaves little room for faith or the development of faith based activities.

Often we work ourselves to the bone to acquire skills necessary to succeed in our profession, trade, business or work arena. We tend to forget about our need to rely on God for success.

How does God help us build our families? Does he come to our homes, take a seat and teach us a course or two? God is good for Sunday morning, but in the real world of Monday through Saturday, how does God build the house when we are struggling to pay the light bill, water bill, house note and payments on loans? How does he fit into the real picture? He provides the directions.

Many furniture or toy items look well in the show room because they are completely assembled. Those who assemble them usually rely on the instructions to put them together properly. Without the instructions, the hundreds of pieces would be meaningless. So it is with families. God has the instruction manual for every family, called the bible. Through the bible and through his "family life assembly program" called the church, he shows families how to put the pieces together.

Do-it-yourself projects that fail usually do so because we don't read the instructions, or don't follow the directions to the letter.

A story is told of Henry Ford. One day he and his wife were driving in the country and they came across a man whose Model T had broken down. He was under the hood trying to figure out what was wrong, when Mr. Ford asked if he could take a look. And in just a few minutes, Mr. Ford had the Model T running. The owner was amazed and said, "I'm impressed with your knowledge of Model T's, and I'm amazed that you fixed it so easily." Mr. Ford replied, "I ought to be able to fix it because I'm the one who DESIGNED it." And dear people, that's how it is with God and the family. God says, "I can fix it because I designed it!"

God isn't going to wave His hand over you and your spouse and supernaturally transform the two of you into the Huxtables, the perfect family. Nor will He wave His hand over your children and change them into the Brady kids. God doesn't work that way. Instead, He gives you the necessary instructions and tools and says, "Here's what you need. Get to work. I'll help you every step of the way."

It's a marriage manual, a courtship manual, a child rearing manual, a problem solving manual and a goal setting manual all tied into one.

When it comes to our families, it's better to let God fix it, rather risk a bad experience trying to do it ourselves.

Laboring in vain

Hard work is the American way. However, all of our work and labor is in vain if we lose our families in the process.

All of our hard work does not yield the success we seek unless it also includes the people we love. What good is success, if you look down from the mountain top and no one who loves you is in the crowd?

David told Solomon if there is not a sense of godly purpose in what we do; all our labor is in vain. Godly purpose in life means that each family member should spend time seeking the will of God concerning their life pursuits. Seeking God's blessing means that we know we cannot be successful without his help, thus we want our actions to meet his approval.

We give our time and energy toward pursuits that are godly. Our approach to these pursuits minimizes intrusions into our family life and optimizes every opportunity for quality time with our spouses and children.

If we make millions but lose our husbands or wives in the process, what have we gained?

If we improve our standard of living by our intensive work but lose our children, do we really succeed?

A young boy said to his father, Daddy, how much do you make an hour?" With a timid voice and idolizing eyes, the little boy greeted his father as he returned from work. Greatly surprised, but giving his boy a glaring look, the father said, "Look, Sonny, not even your mother knows that. Don't bother me now. I'm tired."

"But Daddy, just tell me please! How much do you make an hour," the boy insisted?

The father, finally giving up, replied: "15 dollars per hour."

"Okay, Daddy. Could you lend me two dollars?" the boy asked.

Angry with his son's constant pestering, he said, "Go to sleep and don't bother me anymore."

It was already dark, and the father was feeling guilty for what he said. Maybe, he thought, his son needed to buy something for school. Finally, trying to ease his mind, the father went to his son's room. "Are you asleep, son?" asked the father.

"No, Daddy. Why?" replied the boy, partially a sleep. "Here's the money you asked for earlier," the father said.

"Thanks, Daddy!" rejoiced the son, while putting his hand under his pillow and removing some money. "Now I have enough! Now I have 15 dollars!" The father gazed at his son, confused by the meaning of what he had just said, when the boy continued, "Daddy, could you sell me one hour of your time, please?"

Many families are busy constructing "do-it-yourself" home building projects. They are so busy that they have little time for the family left behind.

We need a little help

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that while there are some things you can do yourself, everybody needs a little help sometimes.

David discovered that even as King of Israel, he could not do it all by himself. He said in Psalm 121: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth."

There are many good Christians who have placed their faith in God on hold and have plunged into their own "do it yourself" life building mode.

Are you single but finding it increasingly difficult to find the right person that complements your life? In your pursuit of happiness have you placed your spiritual life on the back burner? Has the pursuit of Mr. Wonderful and Miss Fantastic superceded your bible study, worship and dependence on God? Remember David's words, "Except the Lord build the house, they that labor, labor in vain."

Are you married but feeling frustration in your marriage? Do you have more than you have ever had, but enjoy each other less? In your pursuit of marital happiness how important has it been to you to worship, pray and participate in bible study together? If your marriage relationship is boiling down to simply tolerating each other over the years, you should remember David's words, "Except the Lord builds the house!"

Are you a youth that is working hard to advance yourself in school? Are you an athlete, cheerleader, scholar, band member or school leader that is trying hard to make it but get frustrated all along the way? Are you trying to do these things at the expense of your spiritual life? Do you find that they take up all of your time and from week to week you are praying less and reading your even less? If so, even in your young life you have shifted into a "do it yourself" mode. Remember David's words, "Except the Lord build the house."

There are some things you cannot do all by yourself. You need the Lord, he's like American Express, don't leave home without him.

We can't bless ourselves. No matter how hard we work, we cannot bless ourselves. While it is true that we can be a blessing to someone else we can't bless ourselves. Blessing is not a do it yourself project. If you need a blessing, you have to call on the Lord.

We can't answer our own prayers. No matter how clean and moral we live our lives, we do not have the capacity to answer our own prayers. We may be the answer to someone else's prayer but we can't answer our own payers. Getting an answer to a prayer, is not a do it yourself project. If you need an answer to prayer, you have to call on the Lord.

We can't forgive our own sins. When an offense is committed, only the person who is offended can forgive the offense. We can forgive those who offend us, but we can't forgive our own sins. Sins are offenses against God. Forgiveness is not a do it yourself project. If you want forgiveness, you must you have to call on the Lord!

We can't save our own souls. Salvation is the act of reconciling the differences between God and man. Salvation is the act of cleaning the slate and restoring a good relationship with God.

We can't save oourselves, because there is only one name under the heavens whereby we must be saved. It's not our name, but the name of Jesus!

Salvation is not a do it yourself project but it has already been done!

We can't do it ourselves because the project is already complete!

We can't carry the cross, because it has already been carried!

We can't have nails driven in our hands, because it's already been done!

Jesus died on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave! We can't do it by ourselves, but if we take the Lord with us, everything will be all right!

The Lord Is There

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 14, 2001

SCRIPTURE: It was round about eighteen thousand measures: and the name of the city from that day shall be, The LORD is there. Ezekiel 48:35

Introduction

Have you ever faced the unknown alone? Being alone is an awkward feeling. Most of us feel better when we face a situation in the company of those who make them feel safe and secure. When we are alone, fear sets in and anxiety is heightened. When we are alone, we feel uncomfortable. We feel safer when we are not alone,

When Jesus spoke some of his final words to his disciples he was careful to make sure they knew that he would not leave them alone.

In Matthew 28 he told them, "And Lo I am with always" even unto the end of the world.

Church ministries are difficult and frustrating, but they are much more rewarding when the "The Lord is there."

That's why Christ promised not to eave us comfortless, but promised the presence of God would always be with the people.

In Old Testament times Israel knew God was there when they saw the pillar of fire by night and the cloud by day.

They knew God was there whenever the saw the Ark of the covenant.

They were reluctant to take on any new pursuit unless they could assure that God would be with them. They believed this so much that King Saul went to a which to consult Samuel to find out whether God would be with him in battle.

As Christians, we have learned that any church is a church of power if the Lord is there. Without the Lord a church is heater without fire, sugar without sweet, and water without wet. In all of our doing we should make sure that the Lord is there!

Exposition

This text focuses on Ezekiel's vision of the reconstructed city of God.

Ezekiel gazed into the future and saw what did not exist through the power of God's imagery. Many saw city that Ezekiel envisioned and named it Jerusalem, but he never called it Jerusalem. They believed it would be in Canaan, but he never said where it would be located. The vision was Messianic in that it project a vision for another day and time when Christ would come.

It was a vision of what would be, based upon what was.

Ezekiel's vision of the city of God envisioned a city that lay four square and had three gates on each of its four sides. There would be twelve gates to the city, each of them named after one of the twelve tribes of Israel.

Significant here is the name that Ezekiel uses to describe the city, "Jehovah-Shammah" or God is there.

John saw a similar vision of a city. John called it the new Jerusalem. It too will have walls and gates; 12 in all with the names of the tribes of Israel written upon them. The name John gave "the New Jerusalem" was an equivalent to that Ezekiel gave which was, "The Lord is there." "God is there" implied that there would always be tokens of God's presence among them. They would see his handiworks, good deeds and mighty works. There would never be a time when they would wonder "is God with us." The signs of his presence would be all around them.

The church, likewise would also serve as the temple of God. Each individual will serve as a living temple of God in their bodies and collectively the church would become the temple of God. The idea that the Lord is there for faithful is he that has said, and he will be as good as his word, Lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world. The Lord is there in his church, to rule and govern it, to protect and defend it, and graciously to accept and own his sincere worshippers, and to be nigh unto them in all that they call upon him for. This should engage us to keep close to the communion of saints, for the Lord is there. In making the presence of God the principal matter of its bliss, they both agree. There the happiness of the glorified saints is made to be that God himself shall be with them (Rev. 21:3), that he who sits on the throne shall dwell among them, Rev. 7:15. And here it is made to crown the bliss of this holy city that the Lord is there. Let us therefore give all diligence to make sure to ourselves a place in that city, that we may be for ever with the Lord.

The Lord was there...

The church is the one special place where God dwells among men. Because "The Lord is there" no power formed against the church can prevail. This a great truth that our forefathers knew and promoted with zeal. If "the Lord is there" the church can overcome any frustration.

This church has seen difficult times. There are many who sleep today, whose names are etched into the hollowed history of this church, who spent many sleepless nights trying to help this church weather the difficult storms of its early beginnings. The church survived in part because of their labor but mostly because the Lord was there.

When the old warriors sat on wooden benches without pads and sweated in the heat of the summer and shivered in the cold of winter, they were not intimidated because "the Lord was there."

When Klansmen were blowing up churches and killing little children, the founders of this church kept praying anyway. They kept praying because they knew everything would be alright as long as the "Lord was there."

When its young men went off to war in Vietnam and Mission sisters joined the "War on Poverty" to feed the poor and the hungry, this church did not shut its doors and horde its resources. It joined others that gave and shared, knowing that even if their barrel of meal became dry it would be alright as long as God was there.

When our leaders came into these walls and cried for John Kennedy, Bobby Kennedy, Martin Luther King and Malcom X. Even as we cried we knew that God would rest the souls of our leaders just as he gave rest to the souls of hundreds of mamas and papas, sisters, brothers and aunts who were stretched out before the altar in this little church. Even as we mourned, we knew everything would be alright as long as God was there.

God was there when the old sisters sang, "I know I am a child of God, although I move so slow!"

God was there when the old deacon prayed so hard that he sounded like he was preaching and the preachers sounded like they were praying!

God was there when the heels of the church women clicked against the hardwood floors and the ushers carried smelling salts to revive those overcome with the spirit!

God was there when the saints shouted for joy when they paid off the mortgage on the building and;

God was also there when the church crowned new deacons, baptized sinners and lifted up the name of Jesus!

It has been a long journey, but God was there every step of the way.

The Lord is here

Just as the Lord was there for our forefathers, the church today should get consolation in knowing that God is still here. God "is" here suggests a change of time. It suggests a change from what was to the present time. God "is" here is right now. God is here also suggests a change of place. God "was there" points to God's goodness in times past. It demonstrates that God "was" good to others "back in the day." God "is here" makes special note of what God is doing today.

Jehovah-Shammah should remind every Christian that, regardless of the situation, God is present and is moving in the lives of believers.

When we are able to say, "The Lord is here" we bubble with confidence that whatever the circumstance God is and in control. When the disciples were besieged by a sudden thunderstorm many began to worry about their safety. They saw the winds and waves. They heard the roar of the wind! Then they concluded that death was imminent. Then someone remembered that Jesus was on board. If the Lord is on board the ship of our lives, there is nothing to fear. He may appear to be sleep, but in the nick of time he awakes and calms the angry sea.

When our finances run low, we remain confident if we can say Jehovah-Shammah, the “Lord is here.” That’s the lesson a widow woman learned one day when her resources dwindled to just enough meal and oil to satisfy a single last meal. Her cabinets were bare. Her fuel supply had dwindled to just a few sticks. Yet her faith remained high. She knew that when the “Lord is here” the barrel never runs dry. Because of her faith she had sufficient food stores to maintain her in the drought.

Even in the face of sickness, the beliver still says, Jehovah-Shammah. Often sickness depletes our morale. We give up hope and throw up our hands. Yet in all these troubles there is still a blessing as long as the Lord is here. A sick man sat by the pool for 38 years waiting for an angel to trouble the water and heal his body. For 38 years he watched the water, but was never fast enough. For 38 years he asked for help into the water but found there was none. Then Jesus stopped by. When Jesus showed up the healings began. When Jesus showed up the walking and talking began. If we want healings today we should let Jesus come in!

In the time of trouble God is here. There isn’t a single moment that a believer is abandoned by the Lord. In the midst of our frustrations and difficulties, God is present, providing shelter, succor and protection. That’s why the Word of God not only refers to God in the “was” but also in the “is.”

David said the “Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear!”

The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want!

God is my refuge and my strength!

Each of these say that God is a God of the “right now!”

It is good to know that whenever we need God he “is” present and right by our side.

There Lord is there

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must focus on Ezekiel’s prophecy about the future. The one thing that stands out more saliently than everything else about this prophecy is not the beauty of the City, but the fact that the Lord will be there!

Ezekiel described a millennial city whose beauty is the basis for John’s vision in the Revelation.

Ezekiel saw the new Jerusalem, the future home of the church.

Between Ezekiel and John we see a beautiful picture of what will be.

We see a picture of New Jerusalem that sits on 12 foundations, one for each of the 12 tribes of Israel.

We see a picture of a city with twelve gates. Three gates to the East. Three Gates to the West. Three gates to the North and three gates to the South.

We see a city whose gates are made of solid pearls!

We see a city whose streets are paved with gold!

In the midst of that city is a tree that will bear all manner of fruit. The leaves of that tree will be good for the healing of the nations!

We see a city whose beauty will not be scarred by smog, terrorist threats, and fear!

That’s not the best thing about the city. The best thing is that “God is there.” - God will be in the city!

It doesn't matter how beautiful the church, it's not a church if God is not there!

It doesn't matter how grand the choir sings, the choir can't really sing until the Holy Ghost comes!

It doesn't matter how hard the preacher preaches, you can't have church until the Lord shows up!

When the Lord shows up we are able to face the unfaceable!

When the Lord shows up we are able to conquer the unconquerable!

When the Lord shows up we are able to defeat the undefeatable!

When the Lord shows up we are able to bear the unbearable!

As the church looks up the road to its future, make sure you see the Lord in the picture!

If the Lord is there, everything will be alright!

Until that time, keep on telling the story!

Teach it in Sunday School!

Preach it on Sunday morning!

Testify in your missionary society!

Tell somebody that Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead with all power in his hands!

How Can Anyone So Smart Be So Dumb?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 14, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Philipplians 3:13-14

Introduction

Have you ever met anyone who was very smart but always acted very stupid or did very dumb things? If you have, you probably asked, how can anyone who is so smart be so dumb? We have seen people like that all of our lives, and we have continuously asked the same question.

When we see educated people committing crimes and being carted off to jail, it pops up again.

When a teacher falls in love with student, we shake our heads and say, "How can anyone so smart be so dumb?"

When the rich old man is courted by the pretty but broke coed, everyone can see the motive except him. They shake their heads and say, "How can anyone so smart, be so dumb?"

When the accountant, who knows his every action will be reviewed in an audit, decides to embezzle from his employer he acts against what he knows to be right. We see him led off to prison in chains and say, "How could anyone so smart, be so dumb?"

When the police officer decides to take bribes from the local dealer, he knows that he is breaking the very law he has sworn to uphold. The old lady who watches him out of her window drops her head and says, "How can anyone so smart, be so dumb?"

When people watch the president of the United States have an affair with secret service agents outside the white house door, the whole nation asked in bewilderment, "How can anyone so smart, be so dumb?"

There are some people so smart they could not recognize dumb if they saw it face to face. Consider the not so smart farmer who had a prize dog that knew how to play poker. People came from all around to watch the smart dog play and win. The farmer was a little jealous of all the publicity his dog was receiving. There were newspaper reporters every where. There were T.V. news crews everywhere. Every turn of the corner saw more people coming to marvel at the wonderful dog that could play poker. The people raved over the smartness of the dog. Finally, the cameras came to the farmer, who was really jealous by now. "Tell me, how does it feel to have such a smart dog?" Asked a reporter. The farmer spat out a big juicy blob of tobacco spit and said, "He's not so smart; he wags his tail every time he gets a good hand!"

Humans are the smartest of God's creation. We are able to think, create, imagine and deal with aesthetic issues. Yet, in all of our genius, we still kill, murder steal and rape. In all of our knowledge, we still lack the wisdom necessary to do right. The question could very well be asked of every believer, "How could anyone so smart, be so dumb?"

As Christian, we don't revel in our personal genius. The more we know, the more we realize that we don't know. There is one thing that we do know, however. We know that God is real and only what you do for him lasts. Anyone who hasn't figured that out yet is too smart for their own good.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's response to those whose spiritual intellect was so great that it made them dumb.

Wherever Paul went in the course of his ministry a group of detractors seemed to either follow him or congregate. The group that followed him were what we call today "Judaizers" or scholars who attempted to take the Christian message and apply the rituals of Judaism in a way that made Christianity a branch of the Jewish faith. Their immediate goal was to apply their vast learning to Christianity in way that would make it acceptable or compliant with the Jewish faith.

One of the ways these very smart men attempted to do this was to spread a teaching that even though a person became a Christian, he was still a Jew and thus bound to carry out the command of Moses that required male circumcision. The first verses of this chapter address the argument of these smart men who contended in their smartness, that being circumcised carried out the will of God.

So in verses 4 through 16 Paul explains, the "smart" people think obeying God means to insist on circumcision or observing certain types of diet. He maintains that those who are spiritually circumcised or obedient to God are those who worship God in the spirit, rejoice in living the Christian life, and have no confidence in the saving grace of the rituals of man.

Paul himself knew the reasoning of the Judaizers because he himself had once been among them, thinking himself smart and right in his decision. In his smartness, he persecuted the church, only to find out later that in all his learning, he really knew nothing. When he stood before Festus and argued for Christianity it became obvious to Festus that he was not a dumb man. Festus said, "with a loud voice, Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad (Act 26:24).

In verse 13 Paul puts his vast knowledge and experience in perspective. He says he doesn't consider himself as a man who has "apprehended" or achieved significantly philosophically or theologically.

It was an important statement for Paul because in the eyes of the world he was a "smart" man. In verses 4 through 8 he details how "smart" he thought he was at the time.

In his smartness he claimed righteousness because he was circumcised on the eighth day after his birth as the Law of Moses required. (v5)

In his smartness he boasted about the fact that while the Arabs could brag that they were descendants of Abraham and the Edomites could boast of being descendants of Isaac, he was a descendant of Jacob. (v5)

In his smartness he persecuted the church as enemies of God (v6).

In his smartness he promoted those things that concerned the Law of Moses. He was a very religious man who was a Pharisee and was known for his loyalty, patriotism and conservatism (v6).

In his smartness, Paul considered himself "blameless" (v6).

In his smartness he considered his learning, birthright, religious learning and prestige in the religious community as an asset. However, when he came into the true knowledge of Jesus Christ, all of these things were counted as a loss, no more than dung (v8).

In his smartness he tried to think himself worthy because of his knowledge. But when he came to the true knowledge he found that he was worthy not because he was so smart, but because Christ through his suffering and dying gave him a chance to everlasting life. (v11).

In his smartness Paul acted as if he was "Mr. Big Stuff" having already achieved righteousness before God. That's what he means by the phrase, "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect." In Christ he learned that anything he had become was through Christ (v12).

In the full knowledge of Christ he realized that what he knew and achieved in life was really nothing compared to the greatness of God. Thus, in the text, he says, "I count not myself to have apprehended."

Paul said in his smartness he thought he knew many things. In the faith, however, he only claims to know "one thing" and that is that Heaven is such a great prize it's worth forgetting everything else and committing himself to living for God everyday.

In our Smartness…

Today, there are millions of smart people around us, yet in their smartness they make some foolish spiritual mistakes.

IN OUR SMARTNESS WE AVOID GOD: There are many very intelligent people in our society who avoid God with a passion. They avoid him and those things associated with him as if they were contaminated. It is extremely frustrating to see learned men and women, who are steeped in the arts, and sciences, but are completely ignorant about God. When Paul preached to Felix and Drusilla about the realities of God they avoided making a decision by telling him to come back at a more convenient season.

Even today there are many who make up a variety of excuses for not following God. They point to those who are marginal in the faith and weak at best as their reason for not believing. They argue that Christianity doesn't seem to have benefited its followers. So with their Harvard degrees, leather suspenders and fine cars, they speed through life confident in their smartness that their degrees and professional experience will carry them to a good life. How could anyone so smart, be so dumb? The real joy in life is found through faith in God. We can achieve material success and still not enjoy it. Avoiding God does not make us happier it only deprives us of the chance to really know true happiness. The song writer says, "Without him I could do nothing. Without him, I'd truly fail. Without him, my life would be drifting, like a ship without a sail."

IN OUR SMARTNESS, WE FLIRT WITH TEMPTATION: There are many extremely intelligent people who are literally foolish with regards to matters of the heart. We have seen them all around us. They are fine upstanding citizens who attend church regularly and give liberally. They are models of the faith until it comes to their love lives. It is nothing more frustrating than to watch an intelligent man attempt to cheat on his wife. Here's a man who pays his bills, loves his children, and acts responsibly in every respect; that is until he decides to cheat. Despite all of his knowledge and intelligence he thinks he can cheat and get away with it. There's nothing more puzzling than trying to figure out what would make an otherwise intelligent woman think that a man who lives with her everyday but does not want to marry her is really in "love" with her. Sometimes the smartest people can act really dumb when love gets in the picture. Highly civilized couples have been known to throw pots and pans, cut up each other's clothes and act like complete fools when love gets involved.

Solomon was the wisest man the world has ever known. His wisdom and knowledge had no equal in the known world. Yet, when it came to matters of the heart Solomon was a complete fool. He literally had 1,000 wives and state supported concubines. Many of them were from different countries and had strange beliefs and gods which he tolerated and in some cases promoted. It caused great spiritual harm to his nation, but he continued anyway. When we look at Solomon and at the smart people of our times, we can't help but ask, "How can anyone so smart be so dumb?"

Even the fool knows that if you play with fire, you'll get burned! Yet there are many today, who flirt with temptation. Some experiment with drugs, just one time! Some decide to take a drink just to be sociable. Some make it to the clubs, "just one time." For many that "one time" becomes a lifetime. That one trip to the casino ended up being a life time pursuit. That secret love affair ended up wrecking a marriage. That one night in a hotel with a one night stand ended up with a life time of AIDS. When we look back, we say, "How can anyone so smart be so dumb?"

IN OUR SMARTNESS, WE COUNT ON OUR OWN EFFORTS. There are many today who rely totally upon their own intelligence, imagination and intuition to achieve what they call "success." These are the individuals who believe that with a good education and a little luck, success is just a matter of being in the right place at the right time. They believe it is their skill and knowledge alone that accounts for their climb. They attribute everything else to sheer "luck."

Obviously, education is an important factor in any person's development. Imagination, intuition and skill are all essential to personal development. Yet these do not supercede the need to have God in our lives. In our smartness, we should never revel in the fact that we have graduated from Grambling, Southern, Morehouse, Dillard or some other fine institution of learning. The sheepskin diploma that hangs on our wall attests to what's in our head, but we count on the power of God to take what's in our head and put it in our hands and feet in a productive and spiritual fulfilling way.

When Solomon finished his foolish living he concluded that what's really smart is that we "trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understanding." At best, our understanding of life is miniscule and Lilliputian. Anything one who thinks he succeed by his own efforts is mistaken. He represents the type that makes us shake our head and ask, "How can someone so smart, be so dumb?" We need the Love of God to make life real and meaningful. Instead of simply being a slogan on our money, "In God we trust" should be a testament to what we really want to do with our lives.

One Thing We Know

Finally, brothers and sisters, those of us who are in the faith may not be the smartest people in the world, but there is one thing we know, if we trust in the Lord, he'll make a way!

There is a smart way and a dumb way to do just about anything. The word of God says in Proverbs 14:12, "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death."

It's smart to be a good driver and have an highway worthy automobile, but it's dumb to think you can make it where you going without the protecting hand of the Lord!

It's smart for parents to provide for the safety, nurture and education of their children, but its dumb to believe that they don't need to know about the Lord!

It's smart to save our money and invest wisely, but it's dumb to trust in our 401K plan and bank accounts instead of trusting in the Lord!

Paul said, "I count not myself to have apprehended, but one thing I know…" That's a fancy way of saying in modern times..

I may not know how to mathematically calculate a hypotenuse or calculate the number of degrees in the base angles of an Isosceles triangle, but one thing I know…

I may not know how to conjugate my verbs correctly. Sometimes I may use the wrong words and say "Dis here" and "Dat there" ; but there's one thing I know!

I may not know much about biology, dividing life into species, and learning the difference between the ectoderm and the ectoderm; but there's one thing I know!

I may not know much about history, about the dark ages, crusades, the industrial age and the great revolution; but there is one thing I know!

I may not know much about economics. I may not know the difference between a recession and a depression; inflation, deflation, the stock market and Dow Jones Industrial average; but there is one thing I know!

I may not know much about politics, about Democrats and Republicans, third parties, voting trends, exit polls and campaign finance; but there is one thing I know!

I may not know much about all these things, but one thing I know is that God is real and if you trust in him he will make a way!

If we trust in the Lord, though we're bogged down in Egypt, he carry us to the promised land!

If we trust in the Lord, when our going gets tough, he'll help make it to the other side!

If we trust in the Lord, he'll bring us out of the darkness into his marvelous light!

You may have done some dumb things, but the smartest move of your life is to trust in the Lord!

He will make a way!

Trusting in the Lord is a smart thing because it's a sure thing!

It's a sure thing because he proved his love for us!

It's a smart thing because one evening He hung out on an old rugged cross!

It's a smart thing because He bled and died for the remission of our sins!

It's a smart thing because Early Sunday morning He arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

You may be a smart may or woman but if you turn him down today, the angels in heaven may be shaking their heads saying, "How could someone so smart, be so dumb?"

I Wouldn't Take Nothing for My Journey Now!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 21, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Romans 8:35-39

Introduction

Is there anything that you would trade for the life you now live as a Christian? Is there anything that could prompt you to change your life journey and turn in another direction? The Christian life is one that is challenging and rewarding. Those who live for Christ have reached the conclusion that there is nothing they would trade for the Christian life experience. That is a bold statement because it means believers would reject everything the world offers if it means giving up their lives in Christ.

Anniversaries are milestones. They are points along the way where we pause to evaluate the journey.

Anniversaries tell us how far we have come and they help us measure how far we have to go. Congregations of believers celebrate anniversaries because they help us appreciate the unique nature of one church's journey. As individuals, anniversaries help us to focus on our personal journey to the promised land. Church congregations that have existed many years have long rich histories that speak of dedicated men and women who believed and trusted in God and worked to make the kingdom of God a reality on earth. Church histories are filled with references to the faith of the founders and the strength of their commitment to the church and the kingdom of God.

Church anniversaries give individual members a chance to reflect upon their personal journeys toward perfection. Every church anniversary is an individual anniversary as well. It marks our personal milestones in spiritual development.

As the church celebrates this anniversary, every member is challenged to answer the question, "Is there anything I would trade for the Christian life?" The classic play,

"The Devil and Daniel Webster" raised that very issue. A man traded his soul for a chance to prosper only to learn that they years passed quickly and the devil came to collect.

Is there anything worth giving up the Christian journey? What if you were offered the opportunity to be filthy rich; would you place your Christian concerns on the back burner? What if you were given the chance to become internationally famous? Better still, suppose you were given the chance to have absolute power over the nations of the world in exchange for your Christian life; would it appeal to you?

The words to an old song of our heritage sums it up this way:

"Well, I wouldn't take nothin' for my journey now,
Gotta make it to heaven somehow,
Though the Devil tempt me & try to turn me around,
He's offered everything that's got a name,
All the wealth I want & all the worldly fame,
If I could, still I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now

I started out travelin' down the road many years ago,
I've had a lot of heartache, met a lot of grief and woe.
But when I stumble, then I humble down,
If I could, still I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now."

After traveling 30 years in his earthly journey, Jesus reached a point of decision and reflection. The devil offered him a chance to satisfy himself by turning stones into bread. He offered him world power and international fame if he would exchange his mission. Jesus refused. He told Satan to get behind him. In effect, he told the devil, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now."

As the church celebrates, believers celebrate their personal journeys too. The church has charged forward with an invincibility that remains undiminished. As individuals we too have overcome unbelievable odds and obstacles to reach this point of our spiritual development. As we celebrate the anniversary of the church, we renew our resolve to keep our hand in the master's hand and say with conviction, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now."

As Christians, let us remain firm in our belief that the Christian life is the godly way. Let us also resolve to stay with the church, because it is God's vehicle to help us complete our heavenly journey. We are too close to our final destination to turn around, so we should all say, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now."

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he tells believers that there is nothing that he would exchange for the love of Christ. It is a statement of Paul's commitment to the Christian life after reflecting on a life service to the kingdom of God.

Paul was uniquely qualified to make such a statement because of the nature of his personal journey and also because of his role as progenitor of the church into the Gentile world.

Paul wrote these words to the Romans to reaffirm his personal dedication to the cause of the church, despite the meandering path of his journey with the church and his personal journey with the Lord. His commitment was simple. He would not allow anything to interupt his mission and his walk with the Lord.

Paul made three missionary journeys in the course of establishing the church and one personal journey as he established himself as a child of God.

The understanding of this text is rooted in our appreciation for Paul's journeys and the events and struggles associated with each.

His first Missionary journey took him to Cyprus. Traveling by land he established churches in Antioch, Iconium, Lystra and Derbe. There among the Gentiles he ordained elders in every city to watch over the newly estabished churches.

On his second Missionary journey he returned by land to the churches he had established in his first journey but went further into Galatia. In this second journey he had a vision of a man from Macedonia standing before him saying, "Come over and help us." Responding to that call, he traveled into Macedonia and set up churches in Philippi, and Thessalonica. In Athens he was received coldly but preached anyway. He wrote the epistle of Thessalonians, met Aquila and Priscilla and after some time returned home. Even then he was not willing to exchange anything for his journey.

On his third journey he moved by land to Asia Minor, through Ephesus, Pergamos, Smyrna, Sardis, Philadelphia and Laodicea. He was attacked by angry mobs who sought to kill him because he preached against idols. He was ridiculed, stoned and belittled, yet he sat down in Corinth and wrote the words of this text which was a statement of affirmation for the church and himself. Just as Paul had been a victim, so were those who followed him. His words were to the church:

".For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord"

Paul's three missionary journeys pertained to the establishment of the church, however he had a personal journey as well. His personal journey was that of the man who was born in Tarsus and he spent the first part of his adult life in opposition to the church, until he had an experience on the Damascus Road and spent three days in darkness. After that experience his personal journey took a new direction. Instead of walking away from the Lord, he started walking with the Lord!

When Paul allowed the blood of Christ to come into his own life, his own Christian journey began. The power of this new relationship with God was so intense that he decided that he would let nothing separate him from the love of God.

Our Journey Now

While there were journeys in his life that were associated with the church, Paul's personal journey with the Lord was a continuous celebration. At every step of the way, he said without despair, "nothing shall separate me from the Love of God" –I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now."

Promises of gold and silver and financial wealth were insufficient. They could not buy what he hoped to gain from the Lord- "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Promises of popularity and fame had no appeal. The praises of men are meaningless when our goal is to hear the angels call our name. –"I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Promises of power and control were empty. The power of mere men could not match the power of God. That's why the angels will sing "All the power of Jesus name, let angels prostrate fall. Bring forth the royal diadem and crown him Lord of all." I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!

Our Personal Journey

Paul's personal journey is similar to that of every born again believer.

Like Paul there are many believers who have worked to help build the church. Like Paul, I can hear them say, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Some have lifted their voices as members of choirs, others have washed dishes and mopped floors, but still they proclaim –"I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Some have preached and others have licked stamps, folded envelopes and passed out programs. Some have given their last dollar and others have given until they felt the pain, but still they proclaim, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Some have emptied trash cans, others have stood behind television cameras, snapped pictures, worked with youth, or just been in the midst of the saints for moral support. All have one thing in common. They all say, "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now."

We all say, "I've come too far to turn around."

Some have been on the journey longer than others, but they wouldn't take nothing for the their journey.

Some can remember walking to church on country roads, trying to keep cool while fanning hot air! I've come so far. "I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!"

Somebody remembers a time before there was central heating and air, when the entire church was heated by huge space heaters that drove away the cold until the spirit warmed up the church!-I've come so far, but I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!

Somebody remembers a time before Kurt Franklin, John Pee Kee and Donnie McKurklin. There was a time folks used to sing without music and instruments. Some old sister would sing, "I love the Lord he heard my cry. Long as I live while trouble rise I'll hasten to his throne." I've come a long ways, but I wouldn't taken nothing for my journey now!

Somebody remembers a time before we learned to tithe that members paid church dues where the men paid $1.00 a month and the women .50c. –We've come a long ways, but I' would'nt take nothing for my journey now.

Paul's last journey wasn't to the shores of Asia Minor!

His last journey wasn't to the Hellenistic conclaves of Macedonia

His last journey wasn't to the intellectual citadels of Athens!

His last journey was his most important journey because he was on his way to a city not made with hands!

Every saint shares the same destiny. We're on our way to the New Jerusalem. It's been a long journey, but I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!

I'm on a way to a city that sits on 12 foundations and I'm too close to turn around!

It's a city where the streets are paved with gold!

It's a city where every day is Sunday, it's always howdy and never goobye!

It's a city where we'll never grow old!

I don't know about you, but I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!

I'm going to stick with the church…the old ship of Zion!

She has landed many a thousands!

I'm going to keep on telling the story about God and his goodness!

I'm going to keep on telling the world about Jesus, the Son of the Living God!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who was buried in a borrowed tomb!

Jesus, who arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

I don't know about you but I will continue to testify, "You can have this whole world, just give me Jesus!"

I wouldn't take nothing for my journey now!

Who Let The Dogs Out?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 28, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "Blessed are those who wash their robes that they may have the right to the tree of life and that they may enter the city by the gates. Outside are the dogs and sorcerers and idolaters, and everyone who loves and practices falsehood." Rev. 22:14 Also Roman 7:16.

Introduction

Have you ever cared for a dog as a pet? Many families have had dogs for pets at one time or another. The type of dog that families have varies from big dogs to little dogs, skinny dogs to fat dogs, mean dogs to sweet and cuddly dogs. Sometimes a person's dog even seems to take on the special "look" of its owner. Some owners have developed such an affinity with their dogs that they treat them as family members, feed them from their plates, sleep with them in their beds and buy them special clothes and toys.

Dogs have been called "man's best friend" in some areas and have become the envy of many who admire the "dog's life."

Among youth today, it is an honor to be referred to as "my dog" and one of the most popular of today's rap stars, the dogfather himself is non-other than Snoop Dog.

About a year ago a group of Bahamian natives, using a West African-inspired rhythm as the basis of their music produced a record that stormed the world. It was an apparent response to a news item that was covered heavily in the Southern region of the U.S. about a pair of poodles that were stolen. The headlines daily were filled with the story of the stolen dogs and the headlines asked, ''Who lets the dogs out." In Indianapolis, a high school marching band made up the little song to promote its school mascot which was the bull dog. The song asked, "who let the dogs out?" – The Baha Men, with two of its members from Indiana, seized the idea, made it into a song and the rest is history.

Who let the dogs out? That question is asked in commercials, political circles, and even in churches.

Our national language is sprinkled with references to dogs. When we think it's better to leave a subject alone rather than stir controversy, we say, "let sleeping dogs lie." When we see someone taking life easy and relaxed we say they are living a "dog's life." The ruthless competition of modern society is described as , "Dog eat dog." A person who keeps others from using something he does not use himself is a "dog in the manger." A person who goes from something worthwhile to a low estate is described as "going to the dogs."

In reality we could probably learn a few things from dogs.

Whenever a loved one comes home a dog always runs out to greet him, while we often watch from the window.

A dog will let you know when you have invaded his territory; we often mumble and complain after the person leaves.

A dog eats with enthusiasm, but when he has had enough he stops eating; we often keep eating, even if we are full.

A dog notices when its owner is having a bad day. It sits close by, keeps silent and sometimes nuzzles its owner for comfort. Sometimes we can make our partner's bad day even worse.

A dog will avoid biting, if a simple growl will get the point across. People often bite at each other before they growl.

A dog who is looking for a bone will dig until he finds it. People looking for what they want often give up before they achieve their dreams.

A dog knows how to come home, no matter how far he finds his way. Too often some of us forget where we live.

A dog finds joy in the simplest things and wags his tail. We complain so much that our tails are always tucked in fear or out of ingratitude.

There's a lot we can learn from dogs, but as Christians we've learned one thing about dogs is not true. Man's best friend is not his dog, but the Lord. That's why the song writer wrote, "What a friend we have in Jesus." He is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

Exposition

This text focuses on John as he gives a vision of who will and who will not be allowed into the kingdom of heaven.

Dogs have been portrayed in a variety of ways in the bible. Dogs were used to watch and protect the homes of the Hebrew people. They were also used to protect their flocks of sheep and goats. While there were domestic dogs that were useful and playful, there were also groups of wild dogs that devoured dead bodies and roamed through the streets of cities as scavengers. The dog was considered an "unclean animal" and terms referring to a "dead dog" or "dog's head" were terms of reproach.

Dogs were presented as hungry scavengers in 1 Kings 14:11. Here they were projected to eat the remains of those that rebel against the Lord. When Jezebel murdered Naboth and took his land, the prophet Elijah told the wicked queen that the dogs of the city would lick her blood. In Job 30:1, Job describes the young men who sat with him in his misery as detractors who were no less than the dogs that guarded his flocks. In Psalm 22:16, David referred to his enemies as dogs who surrounded him. Preachers and prophets are presented as watchman over the people. However, in Isaiah 56:10 preachers who sugar coat the gospel are referred to as "dumb dogs" whose greed and self serving sermons and prophesies put them in a position where they "cannot bark." In Matthew 7:6 Jesus warned believers not to give holy things to "dogs" that will trample them under their feet. A woman cried out for mercy to Jesus, asking for a just a small blessing saying in Matthew 15:27 that "Lord, yet even the little dogs eat the crumbs which fall from their masters' table." Philippians 3:2 refers to persons who do evil as dogs and warns believers to stay away from them.

When John received the Revelation of Jesus Christ while on the Isle of Patmos, he was keenly aware of how dogs are perceived in the Judeo-Christian context. Thus, when he revealed the beauty of the coming kingdom he noted that those who enter the heavenly city by the gates will be those who have washed their robes and have a right to the tree of life. Those who will be denied entrance are the despicable types represented by dogs, sorcerers and "everyone who loves and practices falsehood."

This is essentially the same message that Paul wrote to the Corinthians in 1 Corinthians 6:9 when he said, "Do you not know that the unrighteous will not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived. Neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor homosexuals, nor sodomites, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners will inherit the kingdom of God. And such were some of you. But you were washed, but you were sanctified, but you were justified in the name of the Lord Jesus and by the Spirit of our God. "

At the very least, John revealed that the ungodly as represented by dogs and those that promote falsehood will not enter in the coming kingdom of God.

Who let the dogs in?

Today there is a growing tendency to abrogate the things of the world embrace them and bring them into the kingdom of God. That which is unholy is brought into the world of the holy. Little by little the question changes from "who let the dogs out?" to "who let the dogs in?"

As individuals we have increasingly allowed the "dog" of sin into our lives while still expecting that our new "dog" will be accepted by God.

Who said it is acceptable to be a drunkard and hold a position of prominence in the kingdom of God? Who let the dogs in?

Who said practicing adulterers and fornicators could be overlooked in the kingdom of God as long as they attend church regularly and maintained their tithes and offerings? Who let the dogs in?

Who said unrepentant gays and lesbians will enjoy the praise and blessings of God even though they continue to practice a life-style different from his word? Who let the dogs in?

Who said gamblers, cheats, gossipers, and backstabbers could expect a place of prominence in the kingdom of God? Who let the dogs in?

Through our daily actions, we have let the dogs in!

When the bible refers to "dogs" in the negative it obviously is not talking about the lovable little creature in your home. It is used to symbolize a wretched estate.

Dog is the opposite of God. Where God is spelled G.O.D. dog is spelled D.O.G. The implication is that wretchedness of the dog estate is just the opposite of the Godly estate.

Where God is love...the dog hates everybody
Where God is peace....the dog is confusion
Where God is humility...the dog is pride
Where God is glad tidings...the dog is Bad news
Where God is friendship...the dog brings enemies
Where God is happiness...the dog is sadness
Where God is hope...the dog is despair
Where God is beauty...the dog is ugliness
Where God is strength...the dog is weakness
Where God is harmony...the dog is confusion

If God stands for everything that is good, then dog, being the opposite of God semantically, could stand for every thing that is bad. If G.O.D. spells God then D.O.G. must spell "S.I.N."

Who can let the dogs out?

Finally, brothers and sisters, our sinful nature may have let the dogs in, but only the grace of God can let the dogs out!

Each believer has a history. But there should be a point in each believer's life where personal history comes in contact with the grace of God.

Sin lets the dogs in. It's grace that puts the dogs out!

It's forgiveness that puts the dogs out!

It's the overwhelming mercy of God that puts the dogs out!

It's the unchanging power of God's love that puts the dogs out!

In Romans 7 Paul said there was something in him that made him do what he did not want to do.

He wanted to do right, but he ended up doing wrong!

He wanted to be obedient, but he ended up being disobedient!

He wanted to be strong, but he ended up being weak!

He wanted to be wise, but he ended up doing foolish things!

In Romans 7:24 he said, "O wretched man that I am! Who will deliver me from this body of death?

In essence he said, my sinful nature has let the dogs in, who will let the dogs out?

The doggish nature of sin has caused some people to even take on the resemblance of dogs. Who will let the dogs out?

Some folks are SLY DOGS. They try to be slick, throw a rock and hide their hand. Who will let the dogs out?

Some folks are COWARDLY dogs. They are afraid to take a stand. They tuck their tails and run. Who will let the dogs out?

Some folks are HOUND DOGS. They sniff out and latch onto a trail of hot gossip and they never let go. Who will let the dogs out?

Some folks are POINTERS, They are quick to point a finger of blame at the preacher, deacon or choir member, everybody but themselves. Who will let the dogs out?

Some folks are WATCH DOGS. They watch everybody's business and forget that just as they watch others, somebody's watching them.

Some folks are FRENCH POODLES. They try to be cute. They can't come to worship without a new dress, hat, suit or designer patterns.

Some folks are BULLDOGS. Not only is a bulldog mean, but his mean disposition makes him ugly too. These folk will bite your head off and keep a frown on their face. Who will let the dogs out?

I'm so glad that I serve a savior, who is able to let the dogs out?

He's able to put a muzzle on your doggish nature.

He's able to tame the wild and roving spirit within us.

Who can let the dogs out?

That's the same question that David asked in Psalm 24:8, "Who is the king glory? The Lord Strong and mighty? Who is the king of glory? The Lord mighty in battle! Lift up your heads oh ye gates. Lift up ye everlasting doors and the King of Glory shall come in!

Who is it that can forgive our sins?

Who is it that can pick us up and turn us around?

His name is Jesus!

He is Mary's baby!

He died out on Calvary; but early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

Satan will ask one day? I had this believer full of sin. Who let the dogs out?

I had him weak and puny, now he's bold and strong? Who let the dogs out?

I had him thinking he was defeated, down and out, now he believes he can do all things. Who let the dogs out?

He's name is Jesus!

Jesus let the dogs out!

Just Can't Tell It All

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 4, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "And there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." John 21:25

Introduction

Have you ever been so excited about something that you tried to tell it all? Whenever we try to tell it all, what we do tell gets lost in the telling. We've all met the person who tried to tell us every detail of their summer vacation including every photograph, slide, video and restaurant receipt. What began as something interesting ended up being a nightmare because our friend tried to tell it all. During the Monica Lewinsky/Bill Clinton scandal the media tried to tell the world all that was done. Entire sections of newspapers carried transcripts of tapes. Websites were flooded with morsels of gossip and radio and television stations played hours upon hours of tapes on the air. They told the public so much that the people tired of hearing it. They tried to tell it all and told too much.

When does a crowd scream "encore?" Does it cry "encore" when it has had too much, or when it thirsts for more? When a great pianist plays a sampling of his skill, he titillates the spirit just enough that there is a desire for more. When a great singer lifts our spirits and leaves us longing for more, there is a desire for just one more song! A lovely evening that is romantically inspiring leaves us dangling and yearning for more!

However, too much of anything is a bore. No matter how great the movie, if it's too long the public won't see it. No matter how great the performer, after a while even his best fans will walk out the door one at time. One sage put it this way, "too much water will drown a frog!"

Even when it comes to testifying about the goodness of the Lord, how much is enough? There are many, in their zeal to testify about God's goodness, testify so much that they drown their co-workers in testimony. There are testimonies about financial blessings. There are testimonies about healings. There are testimonies about answered prayers. There are some workers who tell so much that instead of convincing their co-workers about the goodness of the Lord, they convince them that they should always avoid testimony time.

The Lord has done so much for us that we just can't tell it all. Whether it's healings, answered prayer or blessings, those that know the Lord realize that they could not make it without the Lord. When we are excited we have to tell someone. That's what happened when Jesus touched the life of the woman at the well. She had to tell somebody, so she ran through the streets of the city and cried, "come see a man, who told me all I've ever done."

As Christians, we know we can't tell it all. However, that which we do tell is sufficient to let the world know, "What a mighty God we serve."

Exposition

This text focuses on John as he describes the multitude of deeds, healings and miraculous actions of Jesus.

In his Gospel account of the life of Christ John revealed many of Christ's deeds that extended from his incarnation when the "Word became flesh" to the resurrection. He told of healings and mysteries that have yet to be explained other than being the mighty works of God himself. The Gospel account of John revealed many great facts about Jesus but even his detailed listing of Jesus' deeds did not begin to describe his greatness. John said, "Many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written."

John's statement is an obvious figure of speech. The Greeks called it a hyperbole or an exaggeration to emphasize a point. The point being that the works of Christ were so numerous that it would literally take volumes to detail and chronicle all of his words and deeds.

He wrote what needed to be said

John saw no need to say more than what needed to be said. The words that John recorded described examples of the teachings and sayings of Christ. What was written was sufficient to document the doctrine that Christ taught and to supply ample cross references. To say more would have been redundant. There are many who do not believe who argue that more should have been written about Christ to make it easier to believe. The truth of the matter however is that if John had written hundreds of different episodes those who did not believe would still not believe.

There are times when the occasion demands that something be said, but not everything, just what needs to be said. Abraham Lincoln came to Gettysburg in the aftermath of the Civil War and stood on the ground where Union and Confederate soldiers died in the quest for what each side called a fight for freedom. It was a time when the nation was hurting, angry and frustrated. When Lincoln rose to speak he began by saying, "Four score and seven years ago, our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation: conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal." He ended it by saying, "that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom. . . and that government of the people. . .by the people. . .for the people. . . shall not perish from the earth." The entire speech was only 272 words but it is remembered as Lincoln's greatest speech. He said just what needed to be said.

Saying more than needs to be said can cause trouble. Consider the man who returned his parrot to the pet shop. "I want my money back" said the angry customer. The store owner asked why he was angry. "It's this talking parrot" said the customer. The owner asked whether or not the parrot talked as advertised. "Yeah he talks all right" said the customer "but he talks too much." Surprised, the owner wanted to know more. "I thought he would say cute parrot things like 'Polly want a cracker' but this parrot talks too much." The owner said this a very smart parrot. The customer said, "My wife has left home because the parrot said, 'your husband came home last night at 2 a.m. He had lipstick on his collar. He cleaned it off while he talked to a woman named Julie on the phone" The customer said, "I'm bringing this smart parrot back until you can teach him how to keep his mouth shut!"

When a woman was brought to Jesus who was caught in the very act of adultery, her critics wanted Jesus to say what should be done to her according to the law of Moses. Jesus gave the them a very short answer, "He without sin, cast the first stone." He said what needed to be said.

When a lame man sat by the pool for 38 years without any hope of getting to the healing waters first, Jesus saw his dilemma and said what needed to be said, "Take thy bed and walk." It was all that needed to be said. The subject was closed.

When God speaks to our situation he says what is needed to address the situation. No more or nothing less. If the storms of life are raging, he doesn't have to say much, a simple "Peace be still will do!" If we are entangled in the deathly grasps of sin, a simple, "Loose that man" is sufficient.

John didn't try to tell it all, he simply said what needed to be said.

He said was advisable

What John wrote were those episodes from the life of Christ that would serve to edify, exhort and comfort. He did not have to say it all. He only needed to write enough about each of these subjects to get us to understand the nature of our Lord. Generally, Jesus' words and deeds served three purposes: to edify, inspire or to comfort. The gospel writers gave us just enough episodes out of Christ's life to show Christ addressing these three crucial areas.

When Christ spoke against hypocrisy and challenged believers to be pure in spirit and motivation, his purpose was to edify. John didn't have to write everything, but he wrote enough to make the point.

When Christ preached about the believer's attitudes and said, "blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God" he intended to motivate the people.

When he spoke boldly to believers saying that even those who were persecuted for his name sake were blessed as well, his purpose was to inspire confidence.. John didn't write everything he said..just enough.

When Christ spoke to those whose hearts were heavy from sadness he said

"blessed are those that mourn for they shall be comforted." John didn't try to tell it all. He told just enough.

Sometimes we try to tell everything we know and that gets us in trouble. Consider the man who complained that his wife told all of his friends and neighbors about everything he did. "I never have a moment of privacy" he told a friend. "She tells everybody everything I do." His friend was impressed, man she must really love you to brag on you that much, how will you celebrate your 20th anniversary?" The man said he planned to take his wife on a trip to Australia. "She'll have plenty to talk about for sure. How will you top that? How will you celebrate your 30th anniversary?" – The man answered…"that's when I'll go back and get her."

John showed the people the various circumstances of life and told what was appropriate to confirm our beliefs.

What we want to know is whether or not Jesus hears and answers prayers! John answers, "Yes, for I heard him say Our father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name!"

What we want to know is whether or not the Lord will respond to our faith. Unlike Matthew, Mark and Luke who wrote accounts about Jesus talking about faith, the word "faith" is not written one time in the Gospel of John. In essence he did not show us Christ talking about faith, he showed us faith in action.

When the scribes and Pharisees came to the lame man and asked him why he was carrying his bed on the Sabbath, he didn't tell them about his faith, only that Jesus told him to take up his bed and walk. John didn't tell us about faith, he simply told show us how God operates.

Although he never used the word faith, he said enough to let us know that God is still in the faith business.

He could not tell it all

Finally, brothers and sisters, John admitted like we admit, when it comes to talking about Jesus, we can not tell it all!

John said Christ did not say everything he could have said to his disciples because they would not have been able to bear it. If John had attempted to write all that Jesus did and said the world would not have been able to comprehend it and the volumes of written material necessary to document what he did and said would have been unbelievably large.

When presidents completes their tenure in office they usually begin a presidential library. That library usually contains all of the correspondence that the president has received. It also includes films, photographs, gifts and many other keep sakes that document his tenure in office. The ten Presidential Libraries, the Nixon Presidential Materials Staff, and the Clinton Presidential Materials Project, maintain over 400 million pages of textual materials; nearly 10 million photographs; over 15 million feet of motion picture film; nearly 100,000 hours of disc, audiotape, and videotape recordings; and approximately half a million museum objects....but still they can't tell it all.

If 400 million pages of written text and 10 million photographs can't tell it all about the four years of a president's term, imagine how hard it would be to try to tell it all about a man who speaks and the birds hush their singing!

If thousands of biographies still fail to capture the essence of George Washington, the father of our country, imagine how hard it would be to try to capture the essence of a man who speaks to the wind and waves and they obey his will!

When it comes to talking about the goodness of the Lord, I just can't tell it all.

What I can tell you is that when I'm sick, he's doctor in my sick room!

When I'm in trouble he is my refuge and my strength!

When I'm weak he is the strength of my life!

When I'm low, he picks me up and turns me around!

When I need a blessing he's always on time!

I can't tell it all but I want you to know that:

—He's a shelter in a time of storm!

—He's a bridge over trouble water!

—He's a lawyer for every courtroom!

—He's a rock in a weary land!

I can't tell it all but I can tell you that one evening about 2001 years ago he died out on Calvary!

I can't tell it all but I can tell you that early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

I can't tell it all but I can tell that he's alive today!

Oh Be Joyful

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 10, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "I will greatly rejoice in the LORD, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decketh with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth with her jewels. Isaiah 61:10-11

Introduction

When is it the easiest to demonstrate a spirit of joy? Usually, we find it easy to demonstrate joy during times when things are going as well or better than we planned. We are joyful when we have accomplished a difficult task, achieved a difficult goal or acquired a long sought after item. We are joyful when we feel loved, respected and appreciated by our peers and loved ones. We are joyful when we have a little money in our pockets and we can stand on our own two feet. Joyfulness is a unique quality that everyone does not have, but many seek in the course of their lives.

The occasions of our joy reflect our understanding. As a general rule we are joyful when we are pleased with the outcome. The believer goes one step further, expressing a joy that issues from a faith that says, "Whatever makes God happy brings me joy regardless of the circumstance for me."

No two people will interpret a joyful situation the same. Consider the man who sat at the bar drinking one whiskey after another until it became obvious to the bar tender that he was about to hurt himself. The bar tender asked, "What's the matter? Are you having troubles with your wife again?" The man nodded his head and began to cry.

The bartender said, "I don't usually get in the business of my customers but your wife should be ashamed of the way she belittles you, talks about you and hits on you in front of other men."

The man heard that and started crying again. "What happened this time?" the bartender asked.

"My wife told me she was leaving me for 30 days" the man said as he cried like a baby.

"Well you should be glad" said the bartender, "As mean as your wife is to you, you should praise God for a joyful month of peace. Don't be sad, be joyful!" At that the man started to cry even more.

"What are you crying about?" The man answered "My wife left me for a month...and today is the last day!"

One man's joy is often another man's sadness.

There is an economy of joy that works in most of our lives. There is a vigorous joy that exists every day and grows stronger continuously. There is an inflated joy that is not all that it is put up to be. When joy suffers from inflation it puts on an act but is not real. There are times when joy goes into a recession. That's when we experience a setback, difficulty or frustration. We are still in a receptive and grateful mood but joy eludes us most of the time. Then there are those times when joy goes into a depression. That's when we are overwhelmed by our own incapacity to control the influences around us such as life and death. Depression plunges us into a slump. It fastens us to despair and fixes our mind and spirit upon the darkness rather than the light.

Believers have learned how to function in the economy of God especially as it relates to the way he blesses us. Job learned this economy lesson well. He received both the good and the hard to swallow from God and after he had received the worst declared, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

As Christians, we have developed an attitude about life that is not inflated, or subject to recession or depression. It is based on one conclusion and that is our belief that whatever God does is good..all the time. Thus, in everything and in every circumstance we have joy.

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah as encourages Israel to be joyful because of the coming kingdom of God.

The closing chapters of the book of Isaiah speaks to the people of Israel directly but they are also Messianic; they also look to the coming of the age of the church. Isaiah details the struggles of the people but he closes his book in its final chapters by looking to Jesus.

It is Isaiah that tells us, thousands of years before it occurred, that he "was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities."

It was Isaiah who said that Christ would be led like a sheep before his shears, but by his stripes we would be healed.

Thus, at the point of this text, there are words of reassurance for Israel as Isaiah looks beyond the present and looks to the future. That's why he encouraged the people to "be joyful." He looked beyond the present moment to the time which loomed on the horizon.

Isaiah projected us beyond the exile of Israel and the difficulties of living in exile.
I

He went beyond the time of wars and second class citizenship.

He went beyond the time of pushing hard and being pushed.

He looked beyond the time of health then sickness, deprivation and loneliness.

He even looked beyond Israel's brief period of physical restoration.

He looked to the return of the Lord and the beginning of the Kingdom of heaven.

That's why he encouraged Israel to "be joyful." The joy he encouraged Israel to have was not over the present situation but the final result.

Not only should the believer rejoice in difficult times, but Isaiah noted that "I will greatly rejoice in the Lord, my soul shall be joyful in my God." Isaiah then told why he could rejoice, "for he hath clothed me in the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness." The reason believers were told to rejoice greatly was because believers have been prepared against the day of trouble and prepared for the day of his return.

The "garments of salvation" points to the personal faith of the believer. It is that undying faith in our redeemer that sustains us despite the difficulties we experience. Like a garment that fits well, believers wear their faith into every situation.

Our faith does not prevent the circumstance but it prepares us against its arrival.

Our faith does not forestall its approach, it helps us to weather the situation.

Then looking to the future, Isaiah makes the comparison of how the believer's faith prepares him to be a part of the bride of Christ, the church. That will be a time of rejoicing for John said he saw a vision of the New Jerusalem coming down out of heaven like a bride adorned for her husband.

When Christ, the bridegroom, comes for the church he will look for the believers that Isaiah talked about in Old Testament times. But he will also look for the believers from the church dispensation and those who will come to believe in the last days during the great tribulation. He will look for those who are the answer to the question in the Revelation, "Who are these?" The answer will be sure, "these are they who have washed their robes in the blood of the lamb!"

Thus, Isaiah says "be joyful" not because of the moment, but because believers have been clothed in the proper spiritual garments that prepare them for the eventuality of the coming kingdom. Be joyful, because whatever this age offers, it is not the end. There is a better day coming.

How to be Joyful

Isaiah told Israel to be joyful while painting them a rather gloomy picture of their immediate circumstance. That raises the question for believer's today, how can I "be joyful" with so many difficulties and problems around me? How can I be joyful?

How can I be joyful when I have fought in two wars and watched the bodies of my comrades shipped home in boxes, sometimes just parts and no body at all? How can I be joyful when I have seen the pain of men suffering and heard their cries in the night?

How can I be joyful when my life is filled with ups and downs, but with more downs than ups? I am healthy one day, sick another day, healthy again then sick three days. How can I be joyful?

How can I be joyful when I have attended the funerals of my father and mother and watched my wife give her life substance just to keep me alive?

How can I muster the strength to "be joyful" under such debilitating circumstances?

We can only be joyful in every circumstance if we have truly learned the meaning of joy. In the Old Testament, joy was closely associated with circumstances. Joy was a mental sensation that was accompanied by an outward expression that was shown by singing, shouting, leaping and dancing. That's what happened when David returned the Ark of Covenant to his people that he was so joyful that he stripped off his clothes and leaped and danced in the streets.

In the Old Testament, Joy was associated with a circumstance. If the people won a battle they were joyful. If they lost a battle there was no joy. If there was a festival they danced and sang. Without the occasion, there was no joy. Their joy was tied to a circumstance.

In the New Testament joy is not viewed the same way. Joy is not associated with any circumstance or situation. Believers derive their joy from the knowledge that there is a great plan unfolding which ultimately ends with their good. Therefore, believers "count it all joy." Believers find reason for joy in every circumstance because we know when the great plan completes itself we will be the victors.

The secret to real joy is to have the assurance that no matter what the circumstance may be, that God is working it out for our good in this life or the life to come. The secret is to quietly know that he will never abandon us, but will continue to provide for us on a daily basis, despite appearances. In such circumstances don't look for us to jump and leap like David did. There may even be a tear in our eyes as we respond to the frustration and pain of the moment, but on the inside there is joy!

That's why, as strange as it may seem, a believer can be advanced in age to a point that he can hardly remember the words of a song and still sing, "Oh be joyful."

Believers who watch a loved one decline in health and slip away in death before their very eyes can still say, "oh be joyful" because they know it is a part of the divine order and as such.."all is well."

Those who want to know how to be joyful must know the Lord.

Only an abiding faith in God can help a wounded family find a reason for joy in the midst of death.

Only a blessed assurance can help a weeping daughter find a reason to keep singing the praises of God.

Those who want to know how to be joyful, must begin their search by first finding the Lord.

Oh Be Joyful

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider the full meaning of what Isaiah's prophecy means, that there is a better day on the horizon, so be joyful.

Isaiah said each believer should be joyful because we are clothed in the garments of salvation and righteousness. That's an assurance for difficult times ahead.

There are some who believe that being a Christian should protect us from trouble, sickness and death. They feel that God is not a good God if he allows sickness and death to invade their family ranks.

True believers know that being a Christian does not keep us from trouble but protects us in times of trouble. We wear rain coats and reach for our umbrellas when rain is threatening. The raincoats don't stop the rain. Neither do umbrellas hold back the torrents. They protect us during the storm. We ride out the storm knowing that there is a brighter day on the other side.

The garment of salvation assures believers that no matter what this life may do to our bodies, we are safe in the arms of the Lord!

The garment of righteousness assures believers that no matter how many mistakes and errors we make or sins we have committed, if we have given our lives to Christ, he will make it right with God for us and guarantee us a ticket on the train to glory!

I'm reminded of a man and his daughter as they stood at a train depot waiting to catch a train. A pretty shiny train pulled up, but it seemed to be filled with people who were gambling. The little girl said, "Let's ride this train daddy!" -But papa wouldn't get on board. A while later another train appeared, it had people who seemed to be drinking and having a wild party on board. The little girl said, "Let's ride this train!" But papa still wouldn't get on board. Late in the evening when the sun was almost down, a single engine train pulled up and papa prepared to get on board. The little girl was surprised, "Papa, the other trains were pretty and filled with people and they were going that way. This train doesn't have many people on it and it's going in the opposite direction. Why this train?"

Papa looked back at his daughter as he handed the conductor his ticket and said, "This train don't carry, no loafers, hobos and cigarette smokers. This train is bound for glory, and I'll shout and tell the story!"

Believers are joyful because they have a story to tell. It's story of rising and falling. It's a story of battles fought and victories won. It's a story of family, friends and a song to sing!

That's what the song writer had in mind when he wrote, "This is my story, this is my song, praising my savior all the day long!"

It's a story that says, "I've been tried in the fire" and I have come through as pure gold!

It's a story about Jesus who said I'm going to prepare a place for you that where I am ye may be also!

It's a story of a place where the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest.

It's a story of a place where Joy will never end!

It's a story that began in a manager in Bethlehem, was interrupted on a cross outside of Jerusalem but will end when He comes back in the New Jerusalem!

Oh be joyful! Weeping endures but a night but..joy comes in the morning!

The Prayer of Jabez

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Avenue Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 11, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "And Jabez was more honorable than his brethren: and his mother called his name Jabez, saying, Because I bare him with sorrow. And Jabez called on the God of Israel, saying, Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed, and enlarge my coast, and that thine hand might be with me, and that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me! And God granted him that which he requested." 1 Chronicles 4:9-10

Introduction

Suppose God granted everything you request in your prayers, would you be happy? We often pray for many things that range from successful careers to riches, but how would our lives change if we actually received everything we prayed for, exactly the way we prayed to receive it? If all of your prayers for success and fame were answered, would you be in worship today? How would your life be different?

Jesus tells us that if we abide in him and he abides in us that we can ask whatever we want and it would come to pass. That's a grand statement that is highly conditional. To "abide" in him means to lose ourselves to his will for our lives. Once emerged into his will, that what we ask is only that what he wants us to have. Thus we only pray for those things that will help us to accomplish his will, nothing more or nothing less. Since what we pray for will help us to carry out his will, then it will be granted.

As Christians, we have learned how to place our lives in God's hands. Because our lives our in his hands we do not seek anything other than his will. In many instances our prayers are answered just as we pray them.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jabez, a man who prayed to God and his prayers were answered just as he prayed them.

At first glance this chapter of Chronicles only presents a long genealogy list. Its purpose, it appears, is only to record the names of individuals in a family; that is until the inspired writer reached the name of Jabez. This one name in the list was emphasized by two paragraphs of notes. Afterward the list continues. The fact that one name in a long list names has a note attached to it attracts attention. Over the centuries there have been thousands of studies, reports, sermons and expositions about this one name in 1 Chronicles 4.

In the highlight we are not told much about him, only that his mother deemed him a son of sorrow and that he grew to be "more honorable" than his brothers. The text does not say that his brothers were not honorable, only that he was "more" honorable than they. To be honorable in scripture meant that he was a man with a reputation for integrity and virtue.

He was highlighted because he did something remarkable. He did not lead an army, build a building or write a great book. What he did was something simple. He prayed a prayer that was answered. The content of the prayer was important enough to be listed in the chronicles by his name.

To Whom Did Jabez Pray?

To whom did Jabez pray? The text records that he addressed his prayer to the "God of Israel." In most Old Testament prayers the names of ancestors were invoked to get a prayer answered. In the New Testament prayers were addressed to "The Father of Jesus Christ our Lord." Christians in their prayers, generally address God directly but ask them in "Jesus name." Thus, the Lord's pray begins with "Our Father." Jesus told us that we should make our prayer request in his name.

Jabez lived before Christ, so he addressed his prayers the old fashioned way. To say, "God of Israel" is the same as saying, the God of "Grandpa Jacob" (whose name was changed to Israel). This was the God that lead his family out of Egypt. This was the God that opened a way for them through the Red Sea. This was the God that fed them in the wilderness. This was that God.

The idea was to invoke the names of persons who stood well in the eyesight of God. In some Old Testament passages the names of "Abraham, Isaac and Jacob" were all invoked at the same time. Jacob's prayer is similar to our own, "Lord, I know you heard great grandma and I know you heard grandma, now hear me."

In the Christian tradition, we pray to God in Jesus' name in keeping with the biblical teaching that there is only one mediator between God and man, and that man is Jesus.

What did Jabez request?

What did Jabez pray for? His prayer had four requests:

BLESSINGS: Jabez said, "Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed." Jabez asked not only for a blessing but a blessing "indeed." What Jabez wanted was a "real" blessing. A blessing "indeed" is a blessing that is received and appreciated. You may be blessed with a bowl of mustard greens in front of you, but it's a blessing "indeed" if you are able to eat them and enjoy them. It's a blessing to have a bed, but it's a blessing "indeed" to be able to sleep well on the bed. By asking God for a blessing "indeed" Jabez asked God for both a blessing and a quality of life that would allow him to enjoy the blessing at the same time. Good Health, a happy family, and peace of mind are all essentials to being blessed "indeed." Because of it's nature, it is possible to be "blessed indeed" and have very few material things to show for it.

REALIZE MY POTENTIAL: Jabez said, "Enlarge my coast." That is another way of saying help me to expand to my limits. What person among us can say that he or she is actually operating at their fullest potential. Most of us are not operating at 100 percent. How many of us have realized all of our dreams? How many us can truly say that we are doing all that we can really do? Jabez' prayer was that he could operate at his fullest potential or to enlarge his coast. He did not pray to acquire anyone else's coast. He wanted to realize his own potential.

GOD'S GUIDANCE: Jabez asked, "That thy hand might be with me." Jabez wanted God's hand to be with him. Jabez recognized that he couldn't go far without the hand of God to guide him. God's hand will guide and point us in the right direction, while at the same time restraining us from going in the wrong direction. There are times when God's people are even chastised by God's hand because "those whom the Lord loveth, he chastiseth." This is a request for God to handle me in such a way that I accomplish his will. It is a prayer of submission.

LEAD HIM AWAY FROM EVIL: Jabez asked, "that thou would keep me from evil that it may not grieve me." Jabez wanted to live the righteous life and wanted to stay away from evil. He acknowledged that the presence of evil in his life would "grieve him." It is the same request that Jesus told us to make in the model prayer, "lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." Participation in evil activities will grieve us. They will cause many problems in life. Thus, Jabez asked for God's assistance to specifically keep him from seeking evil.

The Result of Jabez's prayer

Finally, we must consider the result of Jabez's prayer; God granted his request.

The prayer of Jabez is one of those unique instances in which a man received everything he asked for, just like he asked for it.

Jabez' prayer was a prayer of humility. He asked to be blessed enough to achieve his potential while being led, guided and reprimanded by a loving God. In all likelihood, God granted the first two requests of Jabez's prayer because of the last two requests. There are many today, who want blessings and expanded coasts without placing themselves totally in the hand of God.

Every believer today should look at Jabez and know that if God's hand is guiding us, we have a good chance of being blessed and living to your fullest potential.

The hand of God is a guiding hand! Those who let God's hand lead them cannot go wrong. That's why the song writer says, "Lead me Guide me along the way, Lord if you lead me I cannot stray. Lord let me walk each day with thee, Lead me oh Lord, Lead me!"

If the Lord leads us, we'll be able to climb the highest of mountains!
If the Lord leads us, we'll be strong even though surrounded by weakness!
If the Lord leads us, we'll be able to stand when the world is trying to knock us down!
If the Lord leads us, we'll be able walk when the world around us is stumbling!
The prayer of Jabez emphasizes one important truth, that there is power in prayer!
Prayer can open up doors that have been closed in your face!
Prayer can create opportunities where none exist!
Prayer can chisel victories out of mountains of defeat!
Keep on praying in Jesus' name!
Jesus, who died on Calvary and early Sunday morning arose from the grave!
Keep on praying in Jesus' name!

"Glad"

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 18, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "LORD hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad" Psalm 126:3

Introduction

How do you demonstrate gladness? Each person has his own way of showing gladness that varies in degree. The football player who makes a touchdown or an outstanding play may do a dance in end zone to show his gladness. A person who learns that a relative is safe after being involved in a major catastrophe may show gladness by bursting into tears. A candidate who wins an election may jump up and down and hug his supporters. A child who opens a Christmas package and receives a long awaited toy may scream and run around the room. A mother that learns that a daughter has won a major all expense paid scholarship may show a big smile. A businessman that lands a major contract may respond, "yes!" All these are ways that we use to express gladness.

To be glad is to have a feeling of joy and exhilaration that bubbles and illuminates.

Gladness is hard to conceal it is obvious and visible.

Unlike joy, gladness appears to come from the outside in. Joy is an attitude about life that comes from the inside. Described in Galatians 5 as a "fruit of the spirit" Joy is not conditional and is an endearing part of the Christian life experience. A Christian is joyful regardless of his circumstance or condition. If a Christian is bathed in riches he is joyful. At the same time, the word teaches us that the Christian is also joyful even in abject poverty.

Whether he enjoys the best of health or is lying in a sick bed, the Christian is always joyful.

Gladness however, appears to come from the outside. It is a "cousin" of joy but is usually associated with a condition or circumstance whose outcome is favorable. If a Christian is beset by a misfortune he may rejoice despite his misfortune but he may not be glad about it. A plane crashes or car wrecks and loved ones are injured, a Christian will remain joyful in the Lord, but won't be glad about it. Gladness seems to depend on a circumstance that is positive, while joy is independent of any circumstance.

During a time of praise and thanksgiving, there is both joy and gladness. Those who know the Lord rejoice in his goodness and at the same time are glad for the great blessings he has demonstrated.

Thanksgiving is a continuous response to blessings, not a season that comes once a year. When we give thanks we express our joy and our gladness at the same time. The word teaches us to always give thanks and to show gladness for every blessing received. Thus, we don't wait until a given month, we are thankful everyday the Lord sends.

As believers we rejoice in the goodness of the Lord. We are thankful for his blessing for he has made us glad.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains that God has made him glad.

David had sufficient reason to be glad. His life was filled with outward signs of God's blessing hand. From his rise to reign as king from a mere shepherd boy to his powerful command of the armies of Israel, David had plenty to be glad about.

David pointed out in this text that the source of his gladness is the goodness of the Lord. This is the source of his great expressions of gladness which ranged from dancing in the street when he brought home the Ark of the Covenant or writing songs of praise. Gladness was a way of life with David.

In this psalm David expresses gladness that God returned Israel from its captivity and brought laughter and joy to its lips instead of sorrow. Even the enemies of the nation, described as the "heathen" took note of how God blessed "them."

David lifted God in praise for his how blessings and urged the nation to praise God because his actions toward them made them glad.

David wrote most of the Psalms. In his praise of God he used three words to express the word "glad." Each of his definitions give a clue as to nature of gladness and how it is expressed and understood.

"Chadah" -Gladness after blessing

The first way that "glad" is used is indicated by the word "Chadah" which means "rejoice."

Chadah is a verb which refers to the actions that cause gladness. In Psalm 21:6 David used "Chadah" when he wrote, "For thou hast made him most blessed for ever: thou hast made him exceeding glad with thy countenance."

Blessing from God "made" him "exceeding" glad.

Even today, blessings still make us glad. Every person feels a sense of gladness after receiving a blessing. What person is not glad when they are blessed with a new house, car or long sought after appliance.

When we see the hand of God blessing us with a few of the things we desire, there is "gladness." That's what "Chadah" means in a practical application.

"Giyl" -Gladness means to live in awe

The second way that "glad" is used is indicated by the word "Giyl" which means to tremble.

Giyl refers to a sense of awe, wonder, respect and amazement at the power of the Lord. It is this sense that is reflected in Psalm 118:24, "This is the day which the LORD hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it."

This is the type of gladness that comes after one has considered the universe and how God controls it. It is a feeling of security in the hands of an all powerful God who is so powerful that as James Weldon Johnson declared, "he batted his eyes and the lightning flash, clapped his hands and the thunder rolled." Gladness in this context is to feel protected because of the knowledge that we are the children of an all powerful God.

Glad in this context is what the Mighty Clouds of Joy had in had in mind when they wrote, "It's another day's journey and I'm glad about it. He gave me health and strength and I'm glad about it." No matter what the day brings, it is a day created by an all powerful God and "I will be glad in it!"

"Sameach" -Gladness that is shown

The final way that Glad is used is epitomized by the word "Sameach" which is an adjective which describes ways gladness is displayed.

Sameach refers to gladness that is shown. This is what Psalm 113:9 means when a once barren woman openly praises God when she finally bore a child

Thus, when Psalm 126:3 says, "The LORD hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad" the word used was "sameach" which means to Show gladness

When we are really glad, we should show our gladness.

While it good to feel glad about God after he blesses us and be awed with gladness over God's greatness, every now and then we show some gladness.

Every child of God ought to show a little gladness sometimes.

We can show our gladness through the smiles on our faces!

We can show our gladness when we clap our hands!

We can show our gladness by paying our vows to God!

Showing gladness should not be difficult if we have something to be glad about!

I don't know about you, but I'm glad that Lord woke me up this morning!

I'm glad that he clothed me in my right mind!

I'm glad that he put food on my table!

I'm glad that he saved my soul!

I'm glad that one day, over 2000 years ago, that he picked up an old rugged cross and died out on Calvary!

But if you think Calvary makes me glad!

Every time I remember that Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave, I'm glad!

I'm glad to be a child of God!

A Voice In The Wilderness

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 1, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the LORD, make straight in the desert a highway for our God." Isaiah 40:3

Introduction

Have you ever felt you were wasting your breath? Have you ever asked whether people were actually listening to what you had to say? Often those who have the responsibility to preach the gospel never really know whether or not they are reaching the people. They preach boldly but often find that their words fall on deaf ears. Sometimes those who hear the preacher, hear his words, but do not hear his message. He declares the word of God but his efforts often go unheeded.

The voice of the pastor should always have something significant to say, because the wilderness is crying out for a voice. A few minutes before the famous Shakespearean actor was to perform Hamlet to a packed house in NY, he dropped dead. The house manager solemnly came on stage and announced, "We are sorry to bring you this news. Mr. Famous Actor has passed away in his dressing room, and there will be no performance tonight."

From the back of the rear balcony, a voice cried out, "Give him some chicken soup!"

The stage manager, startled, clears his voice and says "I apologize if in my grief I have not made my solemn message clear. Mr. Actor is deceased, and there will be no performance."

Again, from the top balcony, that voice: "Give him some Chicken Soup!"

Having had about enough, the manager yells back, "Lady, the man is dead. Giving him some chicken soup wouldn't help."

And the voice replies, "It couldn't hurt either!"

The pastor's job is often a lonely one. In the local congregation he is the one voice in the wilderness, constantly pointing the way to the king.

His voice is often a lone voice

His voice often urges that preparations be made. Preparations require advance work.

His voice often urges that a clear path for the Lord be made.

As Christians, we know the value of the man of God who echoes the voice of God in wilderness situations. His voice brings us a word from heaven that is refreshing to our ears.

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah as he describes the one who heralds the coming kingdom of God as a "voice in the wilderness."

Isaiah's words about the "voice in the wilderness" had both an application for the Jewish people and a greater application as well. For Israel, which was subject of an exile, his words indicated a return from Babylonian exile. But it also points to the coming of the Church era, when John the Baptist proclaimed the approach of Christ.

When eastern princes marched through desert countries, ways were prepared for them, and hindrances removed. Isaiah's words seem to reach into a future time and point to one that would come to prepare the hearts of the people for the kingdom of God.

Isaiah noted that voice of the preparer or forerunner would come at a time when Israel and in a greater sense the people of God were experiencing "wilderness" type conditions.

The term "wilderness" usually refers to a desert. A desert is a place of soaring temperatures, desolation, thirst and danger. It's easy to get lost in the desert and not be able to find your way home. When the Israelites thought about the wilderness, they thought of wild beasts, heat, sand, rocky plateaus, desolate mountain country, temptation, and sin. For 40 years, the Israelites wandered around in the wilderness trying to find their way home. For 40 years, the Israelites traveled around in this unfriendly and inhospitable country.

In many biblical references the term "wilderness" also came to mean exile, homelessness, temptation, and danger. The wilderness is not only a geographical description of a very desolate countryside, but it also a description of the desolate, lost state of the sin in people's hearts.

When John the Baptist appears in the Gospels, Isaiah's prophecy becomes clearer in its fulfillment. John's voice echoes through the telling those who would listen to, "Turn away from your sins and be baptised and God will forgive your sins." John was a strange looking man, dressed in animal hair, his breath heavy with locusts and wild honey proclaims that someone was coming, someone so spectacular that it was not good enough to simply wait around for him to arrive. It was time to get ready, to prepare the way, to make hearts and lives right for the coming of the one "whose sandals he is not worthy to untie".

The voice of the prophet serve the purpose of preparing the people for the coming of the Lord. He would announce the glad tidings of heaven to the people. He would urge them to prepare for salvation and be fit to receive it.

A need for water

In the wilderness there is a need for water. The human body must have water to survive. While a person can live a few days without water, there comes a point when every living creature must have water.

Acknowledging this fact, God created the earth so that the cooling waters would come down.

David says that the righteous man is "like a tree planted by rivers of water." David said a man that is well watered shall notice that "his leaf shall now wither and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."

When Israel was in the wilderness one of their regular dilemmas was the lack of water. They complained continuously about the lack of water. It was the constant complaining about water that caused Moses to lose his temper and take credit for a miracle that produce water for the people out of a rock. The commotion over water and Moses' mistake blocked his chance to enter promised land.

Those who travel the wilderness of life search for those things which will water them.

Believers are watered and refreshed by the word of God.

David, writing in the 23rd Psalm said, "he leadeth me beside the still waters." When believers drink from God's "still" waters he "restoreth my soul."

The preacher reminds his congregation that in the wilderness there is an oasis of water. Through preaching the Word the preacher shows believers how to find restoration and refreshment for souls languishing in the heat of the wilderness.

Fertile Ground

When the Children of Israel went into the promised land, they went expecting to enjoy fertile ground. They had good reason for their hopes because forty years earlier the spies returned with a report that the land was so fertile that it seemed to flow with milk and honey. Fertile ground is essential to those who want to grow crops. Soil that is rich in resources contributes to healthy crops.

When Israel was in Egypt there was an abundance of fertile ground. The land of the Nile delta was rich in minerals which extended even to Goshen where Israel lived. Life in the wilderness was different. The land was not fertile, nothing could grow, and there were no nutrients. They needed and wanted fertile ground.

When Jesus talked to his disciples he told the parable of the sower. The sower sowed seeds in thorny ground, hard rock, among weeds and on fertile ground. In good ground seeds can grow. Very little grows in the wilderness because the ground is not fertile.

The preacher is a voice in the wilderness. His voice is powered by God as it heralds the way to fertile ground.

Shelter

While Israel wandered in the wilderness the only shelter they knew was that provided by tents. The tents protected them from the wind, sand and heat. In the Promised Land they built themselves homes of clay and wood. Whether they were in the wilderness or in the Promised Land they needed protection against the elements.

Everyone needs shelter. That's why the Word teaches us that the Lord is our refuge and our strength; a very present help in the time of storm.

The wilderness is crying out for a voice that reminds its pilgrims that there is a shelter. The pilgrims need to know that there is a place to go and a place to hide from the storms of life.

When battered by the storms of his life David found shelter in the Lord. He wrote, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth." Psalm 121.

The search for a shelter lead the songwriter to say, "Rock of Ages, Cleft for me, let me hide myself in thee."

Every believer who is traveling through the wilderness of life needs to be reminded that God is a shelter in a time of storm.

The preacher's voice cries out in the wilderness. It cries out that God is a shelter in a time of storm. He is a powerful God who is shelter to any soul in their time of need.

Food

In the wilderness, Israel often complained because the people did not have enough food. When God supplied food then they complained that they did not have a wide variety of food. God fed them with manna that rained down from heaven and quail meat, but still they complained.

God provides food for body and food for the soul. Food for the body is not all sufficient. This is evident because Jesus told Satan, "It is written, man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

Jesus told his disciples that just as bread was rained down upon Israel in the wilderness that he was their living bread. Those who eat of the living bread will never be spiritually hungry.

Believers trapped in the wilderness of life want to know that there is food for the soul. They cry out in the words of the songwriter, "Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, Feed me till I want no more!"

The preacher is a voice to believers traveling in the wilderness. He constantly reminds the under nourished and those starving for the bread of life that God is bread to the hungry!

Bread, that is always fresh and never stales!

Bread, that is always nutritious and contributes to growth!

For ever wilderness there is a voice

Finally, brothers and sisters, for every wilderness that cries out, there is a word from the Lord!

The voice in the wilderness is a voice that speaks with a volume that cannot be muffled by the cacophony of our times!

The voice in the wilderness is a voice that speaks to every situation of our lives.

It doesn't matter about the nature of your wilderness; for every wilderness there is a voice.

The voice in the wilderness speaks about love in the middle of hate!

The voice in the wilderness speaks about joy in the middle of sorrow!

The voice in the wilderness speaks about strength in the middle of weakness!

The voice in the wilderness speaks about success in the midst of failure!

The voice in the wilderness speaks about going forward when the wilderness says turn back!

The voice in the wilderness speaks about life in the wilderness of death!

The voice in the wilderness speaks about rest in the wilderness of fatigue!

The voice in the wilderness speaks about continuing the journey when the wilderness says give up!

This is the voice that says the Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want!

This is the voice that says to my wandering spirit "Ye though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil for thou are with me!"

It's the voice that says, "surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever!"

The preacher's voice echoes through the wilderness, declaring the good news!

It's a voice that tells the world that Jesus, the son of God lived on the earth for 33 long years!

It's a voice that declares with certainty, that he died out on Calvary; but early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!"

As long as the wilderness needs a voice the preacher must keep on preaching!

Preach the word!

Preach it in season. Preach it out of season!

Tell the world that God is good all the time and all the time God is good!

Gifts from Heaven

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 2, 2001

SCRIPTURE: Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, let us use them. —Romans 12:6

Introduction

The shopping frenzy is upon us. Have you located and purchased all of your gifts yet? Purchasing gifts is both a joy and a chore. It's a joy because we know the right gift can bring so much pleasure to so many people. It's a chore because it is often difficult to find the right gift for the right person. Sometimes we try to buy gifts the recipient would appreciate. At other times we try to get them a gift that will help them in their life work. A plumber gets a fancy tool. A carpenter and a mechanic gets tools too. As Christmas approaches we push ourselves to find the right gift for the right person.

If God had to go shopping at that giant Wal-mart in the sky, what kind of gift would he buy for those who are his children? Would it be toys, certainly we would like fishing rods and sewing machines, cars, and dresses and pretty things. Would it be ornaments such as jewelry? Or would God give us something we could use.

There is no Walmart, Kmart or shopping mall in the sky and God doesn't go shopping for gifts, but God does have gifts available to every person who accepts the task of working in a ministry of the kingdom of God. When we accepted Christ we were like little children in the faith. God decided to give us gifts that we could use in our individual ministries.

Like the carpenter and the plumber are given gifts of tools they can use, God gives every believer a new set of tools to use in the building of the kingdom.

Sometimes we wish that we had the gifts of others. There are times when we watch someone sing and think to ourselves, "I wish I could sing like that." We watch a musician play an envy their gift. Many of us are completely amazed at those who have the gift of making works of art out of what appears to be nothing. There is nothing more exciting than watching a gifted person use his gift.

Some types of gifts are difficult to detect in their infancy. The school system attempts to give tests that can identify gifted persons by their performance on tests. Any written examination will always be insufficient to reveal a truly gifted person. Sometimes people who have certain gifts slip through the testing and are made to feel by default that what they have is not a gift at all. The system's test won't spot a person who has a unique gift for organizing and administering. Neither will it detect the person who has an unusually keen sense of discernment. While some parents can detect the gifts of their children early in life, the children themselves are well into their teens before they begin to realize what God really gave them at birth.

An old man came to the home of a family and knocked on the door. When they answered he asked them for something to eat. The family took pity on the old man who was invited in and given a place at the family table. Afterwards they talked with him and heard of his many travels, hopes and dreams. After many hours he thanked the family. He reached in his pocket and produced a silver dollar and offered it to the family. The family refused saying, "You gave us an opportunity to be a blessing and that's enough." The old man saw the family's little girl who was holding her father's hand and said, "then let me give it to your daughter until she knows what its worth." The family gave in and accepted the silver dollar. They never saw the man again but the little girl kept the silver dollar as a keep sake for many years. One day she happened upon a news article about the value of old coins. She saw a picture of a 130 year old one of a kind silver dollar that collectors were offering thousands of dollars to buy. She ran to her room and looked at her gift from the old man. It was the lost coin. The man gave her a treasure that she carried around most of her life without knowing its true value.

There are many people today who have a variety of gifts from God but do not know what they are or how to use them. Like the little girl, they carry them around for years but do not use them, thinking they are not really gifts at all.

When we don't recognize our own gifts, there is a tendency to think that we have been cheated when we watch others use their gifts. A concert violinist had a brother who was a bricklayer. One day a woman began talking to the bricklayer about how wonderful it was for him to be in the same family as the noted musician. But then, not wanting to insult the bricklayer, she added, "Of course, we don't all have the same talents, and even in the same family some just seem to have more ability than others." The bricklayer replied, "You're telling me! That violinist brother of mine doesn't know a thing about laying bricks. And if he wasn't able to make some money playing that fiddle of his, he couldn't hire a guy with know-how like mine to build his house. If he had to build a house himself, he'd be ruined."

If you want to build a house, don't look up "violinist" in the yellow pages. And if you need someone to play the violin in an orchestra, don't hire a bricklayer. No two of us are exactly alike, and no one possesses every gift. In that way, houses get built and music gets played.

That's the idea Jesus had in mind when he laid out the foundation of the church. Build a ministry that touches people, then give gifts to its members that when used in combination yields a growing, productive church.

As Christians, we know God has given each of us gifts. These gifts were designed for the furtherance of the kingdom of God. We should renew our commitment to use what we have in his service.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul encouraging the Romans to use the gifts God has given them for the promotion of the kingdom of God.

The idea of gifts is sprinkled throughout the New Testament. No single book of the New Testament lists all of the gifts. There is a list in 1 Corinthians 12 that points out nine categories of gifts that could easily be subdivided into hundreds of others. There is also a list in 1 Peter 4 and Ephesians 4. To get the full picture and the variety of gifts God gives to believers you would have to put all of the gifts together into one list and then realize that even this list is not exhaustive. There are others that were not mentioned.

The point that Paul makes to the Romans is that everyone has gifts that have been given to them by God. He calls them "graces" suggesting that they have been freely bestowed on us by God for the specific purpose of making our work for God easy when it would normally be hard. Romans 12:3 makes it clear that God has not given every person the same gifts or the same "measure" of gifts. Thus, one person may not have the gift of intense knowledge at all. Others may have been given a little knowledge and still others may have been given an exorbitant amount of knowledge. That's what Paul means by describing how God distributed gifts as the "measure of faith." Everybody does not have the same gift, and even those who share the same gift do not have it in the same measure.

God created us with a purpose in mind. So he gave us certain gifts, from the point of our spiritual birth. We call these abilities, spiritual gifts. This is an ability God has given us because he wants us to use it in his kingdom. The gift that God gives us enables us to do it so naturally and smoothly and beautifully that others will take note of it, and ask you to do it, and enjoy watching you do it. All they have to do is step back and watch God work through you.

Paul gives examples of the different kinds of gives in verse 4 and 5 noting that all of these gifts are designed to help us become one body in Christ. In 1 Corinthians 12 he notes that all of the gifts come from the same source.

Verses 6-8 tell us that God has given us the gifts we have and we are expected to use them according to what he has given. Verse 6 uses the phrase, "according to the proportion of faith." It means God wants us to use our gifts to the best of our abilities. It may not be better than the gift of the next person but it is the best we know how to do.

In verses 7-8 Paul reemphasizes the point. Whether it is healing, teaching, prophesy, exhortation or showing mercy, we should use the gift God gives us to the best of our ability.

Three kinds of Gifts

There are three kinds of gifts that believers receive from God:

UNIVERSAL GIFTS, these are gifts which every Christian has. Among these are eternal life (Rom 6:23); God's mercy toward us (Rom 11:29-31); and answered prayer. (2 Cor 1:11) These are "charismata," that have obviously been given to every believer. No believer is without any gift.

FOUNDATIONAL GIFTS. These are the gifts that are called "sign" gifts in 2 Corinthians 12:12. They were gifts miraculous of a miraculous nature by which the apostles and prophets of the New Testament confirmed and validated that they were speaking God's message. They also were given to many of the early Christian leaders to help them in their worship and proclamation, to give the new church a strong foundation in a short period of time since the Bible had not yet been written.

These gifts are listed in 1 Corinthians 12 as the word of wisdom, the word of knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, distinguishing of spirits, speaking in foreign languages, interpretation of these languages, apostleship, etc. While they were given to help establish the church's foundation they were not designed to last forever. However, 1 Corinthians 13:8-10 notes that certain foundational gifts will cease.

THE FUNCTIONAL (OR SERVICE) GIFTS; these are gifts that are absolutely essential for the church to function as the body of Christ in our world, gifts that each of us possess, gifts that we must recognize and develop to reach our full potential as servants where God has placed us in His body. The seven service gifts mention in this text include:

1. Prophecy
2. Service
3. Teaching
4. Exhortation (or encouragement)
5. Giving
6. Leadership (or administration)
7. Showing mercy.

Using God's gift

Finally brothers and sisters, we must remember that "what we are is God's gift to us, what we do with what we are is our gift to God!"

The Yuletide season is a celebration of God's gift giving. Beginning with the crude manger of Bethlehem, we see a clear and succinct message that the Christian faith is the celebration of ordinary people who come to possess a very extraordinary power.

When asked to serve, don't say you can't, let God use you!

When asked to minister don't say I can't minister, let God use your gift!

The Christ child in the manger was a gift to the world, what the world does with the gift is left up to each individual.

Your ability to sing, sew, count, dance, draw, crack jokes, listen, remember, calculate, or paint, is God's gift to you. What you do with it, is your gift to God.

Use what you have for building of the kingdom and God will take care of the rest.

Three men went to a farmer asked him for a job. The farmer was reluctant because one of the men had no legs. The second had no arms and the third had no eyes. He did not want to appear to discriminate against the handicapped so he gave them an impossible task. I will hire you if you can pick me 12 bushels of apples directly from the trees by the end of the day. The men agreed on the condition that he would hire all three. At the end of the day the farmer returned to find 12 bushels of apples freshly picked in front of him. He inquired how they were able to pick them considering one had no legs, another had no eyes, and another had no arms. What he heard amazed him. The man with no arms stood on the back of the man with no eyes and held up the man with no legs while he told the man with eyes which way to go so he picked fresh apples from the trees. The farmer paid them saying you are three smart men, you used what you had!

Today the Lord has given every believer a gift, use what you have!

You may not be able to sing like a mocking bird, but use what you have!

You may not be as great as the next person, but use what you have!

Resolve in your mind to say, "Use me Lord in your service!"

When the Lord works with you, powerful things begin to happen!

"Use me Lord!"

"Use me to tell the story!"

Use me to tell the world of the gift of Jesus, who was born in a manger; but died on Calvary!

Use me to tell everybody that Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Star Trek-The Next Generation

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying where is he that is born King of the Jews? For we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him." Matthew 2:1-2

Introduction

How far will you go to find what you are looking for? How hard will you look to find something you really want? How long will you stand in a line to see what you want to see? How much will you endure to acquire that which you consider to be important? If you are like most people there are some things in life you want. There are other things you would like to have. Then there are some things that we simply "must" have at any cost. When a situation exists for us to experience a "must see" movie or concert, people will wait in long lines just to get in. When a "must have" item is on sale, it does not matter how long the lines are; we wait, camp out if necessary, to get what we want. People have been known to travel long distances just to participate in a certain experience. There are some who have no limits to how far they will go or what they will do to get what they are looking for.

How far will you travel to achieve the unreachable? Would the stars be your limit? In1967 a series of television broadcasts began that were the creations of the imagination of science fiction screen writer Gene Rodenberry. The series was called "Star Trek," It featured a crew of people and a Vulcan who traveled through space, following the stars, boldly going where no man had gone before. The show caught the imagination of a generation because it was futuristic and because it routinely showed a group of people who fought injustice, greed and evil in the depths of space and won. They rode in a space ship called the Enterprise and they often fought the evil forces led by the Klingons.

Twenty years later a new series began, called Star Trek The Next Generation. It featured a new futuristic crew that did the same thing as the old timers like Dr. Spock and William Shatner and Scotty. They came 100 years after the original Enterprise but they too fought against evil, greed and wrong doing. As they followed the stars and traveled through the universe, the television show attracted millions of followers. The old school followers of Star Trek were called "Trekkies" while the new followers of the next generation were called “Trekkers.” It was another generation but they followed the same stars for the same cause.

In 1994 Star Trek The Next Generation ended and yet another version of the show began for yet another generation. Beginning in 1995 the show, with another cast of stars for a new generation was called Star Trek Voyager which continues unto today.

Even though the show has gone through three generations, changed the names of its characters and its followers from ‘Trekkies to Trekkers” its cast of characters continues to boldly go where no man has gone before, to fight injustice, greed and oppression anywhere that they find it in the universe.

While the movie Star Trek shows imaginary characters chasing the stars for generations, the bible tells us about the original Star Trekkers. These were men who followed a star in hopes of finally being able to defeat evil, triumph over injustice and to bring peace to the universe. They did not have a space ship or electronic gadgets. In fact, electricity hadn’t been invented and the most reliable travel over long sandy distances was on a camel; yet the bible tells us about their quest to follow a star that would point to a child that would boldly go where no man had gone before.

The men were called Magi, or wise men. Their goal was to follow a strange star that appeared in the heavens and see where it led them. The ancient scrolls had predicted the birth of a child that would change the world and they wanted to see this child. They followed the star path over a journey that took months and extended into nearly two years until they found the Lord. They found him, worshipped him, showered him with gifts and returned home.

Today there are millions of people who are still looking for the spirit of the Christ child. They desperately yearn to find him for themselves and to boldly go where no man has gone before. They are not riding camels or flying through galaxies in space ships, but they are looking in churches, reading bibles, attending Christian fellowships, bible classes and prayer services around the world, looking for a savior. They are the next generation of Star Trekkers, who are looking for the king.

As Christians, we understand the mystery of the star that shone brightly in the heavens. We know what it meant. Yet there is another generation of star trekkers before us who go forward with one change. Whereas those who went before them followed the star and went boldly where no man had gone before; this generation has the advantage of going where many have gone before. Like the wise men of old; every generation that seeks him will find him, worship him and leave rejoicing.

Exposition

This text focuses on the wise men who came to see the infant Jesus.

The word interpreted “wise men” is more correctly “Magi,” a term which designates an order of priests and philosophers which belonged originally to Persia and Media, and who were extensively distributed over the region of the Euphrates. They were professional star gazers and men who studied the movement of the stars and attached meanings to these movements. The “wise men” of this text were probably of the same order as those described in the book of Daniel as wise men, astrologers and magicians. No one knows exactly what country they came from, only that they came from the east.

They came to find the Christ child because they expected him to be a child prodigy. Generally when a child king is born he is given all of the respect due a king as if he was a full grown man. For men who were not Jews to make such a long journey to worship a king that was not of their own race was certainly a part of God's plan that Gentiles as well as Jews be blessed by and pay homage to the son of God.

There are two myths associated with the wise men that are generally repeated unchallenged. The first involves the number of wise men. Popular opinion has it that there were three wise men. Yet, there is no record of three wise men. A popular yuletide song is "We three kings" and drawings and etchings show three wise men bowing before the Christ child.. In reality, the scripture does not designate a number, but only says wise men. Some suppose that because the wise men brought gifts of gold, Frankincense and myrrh that it suggests three people. However, that suggestion is not confirmed in scripture.

The second myth is that the wise men found the babe lying in the manger. This is the image that is projected by artists that show the shepherds and the wise men worshiping the Lord at the manger. In reality, when the wise men saw the star they began a journey that could not be completed in a single night. Their "trek" took them almost two years by some estimates. When they finally arrived they went to Herod looking for the child. (v2). By the time the wise men arrived, Mary and Joseph were not in a stable and the babe was not in a manger. Verse 11 notes that when they arrived they found the family in a "house."

While the myths of the current era have blurred the number of wise men and where they finally found him, one truth was not blurred. After a long journey, having followed a path written in the stars, they found the Lord.

The First Generation

The first generation of star trekers sought Christ for the purpose of worshipping him. In verse 2 the wise men told Herod, "we are come to worship him."

Think of that, they traveled hundreds, maybe even thousands of miles by camel to worship him.

When the first generation of star trekkers found the Lord they did three things:

BOWED BEFORE HIM: Verse 11 notes that the wise men "fell down" or humbled themselves before the Lord. The first generation recognized that they were in the presence of divinity and they humbled themselves. Humility is a virtue that is unique and golden those who truly reverence God humble themselves before him. That's what David had in mind in Psalm 2:11 when he said "serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling." Those who humble themselves before God recognize the holiness and sanctity of God in all that they do. To humble ourselves before him is to submit ourselves to his will, to be guided by his direction.

WORSHIPED HIM: To worship God is to praise and adore him. We worship him privately and we also worship him publicly. Privately we speak to him in prayers and tell him of his greatness and importance in our lives. We read our bible and adore him in our family testimonials. In public we worship him through our singing, public prayers and testimonies. To worship God is to glorify him and lift him up and praise him for his good works. That's why Psalm 106:1 says, "Praise ye the Lord, oh give thanks unto the Lord for he is good and his mercy endureth forever." The 146th Psalm says our very souls should praise the Lord because he is worthy to be praised. Believers worship and praise God both for what he has done and for what he is going to do. We praise him for health and strength. We praise him for victories. We praise him for the rising of the sun and the stars that twinkle at night. We agree with Psalm 150, "let everything that hath breath, praise the Lord!"

OPENED THEIR TREASURES: In addition they opened their treasures to the Lord. They bought him gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh. No true worship of God is complete unless we open our treasures and make them available to him. Our treasures may be financial. We may have received a blessing from God that includes a regular paycheck, retirement income, business income or gifts. We may have allowances and allotments, alimonies and child supports, which are all are a part of treasures even if they are small. The wise men opened "their" treasures and gave to him as they had been blessed. In addition, our treasures may include our talents, gifts and abilities. Many make those treasures available to him for promotion of the kingdom. For the wise men there were three kinds of treasures, for believers there may be even more. But there can be no true worship without "Opening our treasures."

The Next Generation

Finally brothers and sisters, while the first generation of wise men went where no one had gone before, the next generation is going where many have gone before.

Today there are millions of men and women who are still searching for the Lord, but they don't have to blaze a new path to find him. After the wise men found Jesus everybody after that seemed to know where to go.

When the lame needed a healing they didn't have to go where no one had been before, they looked for Jesus!

When the blame wanted to see, those who helped him looked for Jesus!

When those who were dispirited wanted new hope they looked for Jesus!

When Jackie Robinson played baseball for the Dodgers, he was in the first generation of Blacks who played in the big leagues. Now the next generation knows the way.

When Alan Shephard put on a space suit and went into space for the first time, he was in the first generation, but he wasn't the only one because many followed after him.

When John Glen walked on the moon saying, "one small step for man, one giant step for mankind" he was the first generation, but he wasn't the only one because many have walked on the moon since!

When mama and papa found out that the Lord will make a way somehow, they were not the only ones, for the next generation has found out that Lord still makes a way!

When our grand parents found that the Lord is a lawyer in the courtroom they were not the only ones, for there is a generation today that has found out that the Lord is still winning battles!

If you are looking for the Lord, you don't have go where no one has gone before.. many have found him and can tell you where to find him.

Wise men and women are still searching for Lord!

When you find him you'll find a bridge over troubling water!

When you find him you'll find a doctor in your sick room!

When you find him you'll find a mind consolator and a heart regulator!

His name is Jesus!

He was born in Bethlehem and died on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

The next generation of believers has found out the same thing as the first generation..God is mighty good God…all of the time!

And this shall be your sign

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 16, 20001

SCRIPTURE: "Ask thee a sign of the LORD thy God; ask it either in the depth, or in the height above. But Ahaz said, I will not ask, neither will I tempt the LORD. And he said, Hear ye now, O house of David; Is it a small thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary my God also? Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel. Isaiah 7:11-14; "And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger." Luke 2:12;

Introduction

Have you noticed that the number of signs around us seems to be increasing? There are signs virtually everywhere announcing any and everything. Along the highway there are giant billboards that advertise soft drinks, food and truck stops. There are even small signs that announce fresh fruit or vegetables that will be for sale a few miles up the road. Sometimes there are so many signs that they get in the way of each other. There are federal laws about the placement of billboards but that doesn't seem to help. Local communities have laws too about signs that protrude above buildings and proliferate the landscape. Portable signs seem to sit in every yard along commercial strips with arrows and flashing lights announcing one product or another. In Las Vegas and other night spots giant neon lit signs announce the grand casinos. Signs are all around us.

There are signs made of plastic, wood and bright lights, but there are other signs too. There are signs of the times. Metal detectors at schools, armed soldiers at airports, and mail carriers who wear rubber gloves give us signs of the times. These signs are bigger than billboards and flash more brilliantly than Neon lights, yet there are many people who cannot see them every day. Jesus, speaking to his disciples in Matthew 16:3 said there are many people who are learned at predicting the weather and the change of seasons "but can ye not discern the signs of the times." The signs of the times are the indicators all around us that calibrate the social climate in which we live. Consider the woman who filed for a divorce after 20 years of marriage on the grounds that her husband never showed her any sign that he loved her. She felt lucky because her case was heard by a female judge she knew was having problems with her husband too. The judge listened as the woman complained all her husband every did for 20 years was clutter up the house but never showed any sign that he loved her. The judge asked the woman to explain the clutter he leaves. The wife said, "Every day for twenty years he takes my lipstick and draws my name and kisses on the bathroom mirror. When I go in the refrigerator he has notes taped to the door with my name and little hearts on it. He clutters up my mail sending me little cards with a little man shooting an arrow at my heart. Every night for 20 years he puts these notes on my pillow that I'll be dreaming of you. Your honor, I'm tired of him cluttering up the house he bought me, the huge jewelry case he bought me, the car he bought me and the three closets of clothes he bought with all this clutter. Any fool can see this man doesn't love me he just wants someone to pick up his clutter. The judge said, honey, the only kind of clutter my husband leaves me is empty beer cans, I'll take your husband any time!" -The woman couldn't read the signs all around her.

What if God wanted to send the world a message, would he put a sign! There are some clever billboards going up all over the country that purport to be from God. They say things like, "Don't make me come down there!-God!" Is that the way God would he put up a billboard? Would he buy a television commercial and interrupt your favorite broadcast with a message from heaven? If God wanted to send the world a sign what would he do?

The bible says God did want to send the world a sign of hope. He announced that his sign would be the simple birth of a little child that would be born in a manger, wrapped in swaddling clothes. The birth of this child would be God's sign, brighter than the brightest neon light, that hope for a better world existed. Just as the rainbow was God's sign to Noah, so is the birth of Christ God's sign to the world that the hope of peace and joy everlasting continues.

As Christians, we see God's signs all around us. We especially see the significance of the important sign that we received one night in Bethlehem. God said, "And this shall be your sign!" –We receive that as a true sign of God's love for the world and give him the praise and the glory!

Exposition

This text considers how God gave the world the sign it needed even though it wasn't requested.

The subject of this 7th Chapter of Isaiah is King Ahaz, King of Judah in the Southern Kingdom. Ahaz was disturbed over the possibility of Israel, of the Northern Kingdom, and Syria, a foreign nation, getting together to over throw his kingdom.

The details of a plan Ahaz made to gain an ally in this fight are recorded in 2 Kings 16:7-8. He sent tributes of silver and gold to the Assyrian King to persuade him to help to protect Judah. Ahaz felt confident that Assyria would help him and he could be free to continue in idolatry as in times past.

Isaiah chapter 7 focuses on God showing the King that the plans of Israel and Syria to over throw Judah would not succeed and the throne of David would be secured by the promised Messiah forever.

God was going to save Ahaz, but Ahaz knew that meant the elimination of the idolatry and pagan practices going on in the kingdom.

He wanted to be saved from his enemies, with the liberty to continue in his evil ways.

He wanted to be free of the threat of attack but at the same time he wanted the freedom to worship idols and other forms of ungodliness.

Are there not many today who also want to be protected from their enemies but remain free to continue in their evil ways?

At verses 7-10 God speaks to Ahaz and says "I will take care of these problems for you, you don't have to worry about these enemies of yours anymore just let me handle it." At verse 11 God says to Ahaz, "to confirm these things which I have said to you, just ask for a sign and I will show you. Ask what you will, whether it's in heaven or on earth, I'll do it, to show you."

Ahaz rejected God's offer to give him a sign! Why? He did not need a sign to let him know God's power, he knew it and had witnessed it in many times past. He did not want God's help because he felt he already had his bases covered without God.

He coyly responds in verse 12 that he did not want to tempt God.

There are many today who do not turn to God because they think they have their bases covered. Their response is, "I don't need God for my daily living, I have General Motors, my business, and my job. My bases are covered!" Furthermore, with these, I can freely continue this worldly lifestyle that I enjoy.

Those who desire to do God's will reject Ahaz's approach. Not only do they look for a sign from God they ask for a sign to confirm their answer. Gideon's response showed us the way. Gideon felt led to take 30,000 men into battle but before doing so he asked the Lord to send him a sign. (Judges 6:37-40). He placed a woolen fleece on the ground and asked that the Lord would make the fleece wet with dew and the ground dry. When it was answered he asked the Lord for another sign, by doing it just the opposite. When the signs he looked for confirmed what he felt God wanted him to do Gideon then acted upon his faith.

God gives believers signs that indicate his will. Our desire should be to live a life of such spiritual noteworthiness that we can recognize the sign and then have the faith to act upon what we have seen.

What the signs mean

Today, we see the birth of the Christ child in the manger as a sign of things to come. If the manger experience is a sign then we can expect this experience to do what signs typically do.

SIGNS MAKE ANNOUNCEMENTS: Signs often make announcements about upcoming events: ballgames, rummage sales, festivals, concerts and other activities. They announce warnings about hazards ahead and detour that may be necessary. In Bethlehem there was a very big announcement made by the angels themselves. Theyt announced to the world the birth of the Savior. Then both Mary and Joseph received a personal announcement from the angel that was a warning about imminent danger. They acted upon the sign and fled to safety in Egypt.

God often makes very important announcements in our own lives. Sometimes everyone knows the news. Then there are those times when our situation is like that of Mary and Joseph; we receive a private announcement about impending danger or hazards. God still operates the same way. Often there is an announcement that everyone in the community knows. There are other announcements that are private and personal that only you and God know about. These are signs, announcements and proclamations that God makes to all of his children, just like Mary and Joseph. Like them, we should heed them and act upon them.

SIGNS GIVE DIRECTION: If we travel the highways we depend upon signs to give us direction. Signs tell us when to exit and what to expect when we exit. They tell us if we are on the right highway and even if we are traveling to fast or too slow. The sign of the Christ child gave directions to those who sought him. Shepherds in the fields followed the sign. Wise men thousands of miles away traveled in the direction of Bethlehem as they followed a star. Even the scriptures gave the sign, "A virgin shall conceive" Isaiah 7:14 and "Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes" Luke 2:12.

In life we often seek direction for our own life's travels. We should pray and ask God for direction signs. Gideon gave us the model. It is not too much to look for at least two confirmation signs to make sure we did not misinterpret. God is the same God today as he was yesterday. When he answers a prayer he will give us the direction and a sign. Look for it like highway signs. They rarely point to a change a direction with just one sign there are usually several along the way to make sure we get it right.

SIGNS PROVIDE IDENTIFICATION: There are some signs that are so obvious that they don't need an explanation. When you are riding down the highway and see a golden "M" towering above the trees, you don't need an explanation, you know it means McDonalds. A white checkmark called a swoosh doesn't need an explanation, it means NIKE.

So it is with the birth of Christ. We don't need a long explanation the sign of the babe in the manger is the sign of hope.

A young man traveled with a church group to a foreign land. Somehow he and several friends became separated from the group and almost panicked until this young man said "follow me." As they turned many corners and meandering streets they finally reached the church at the top of the hill. Someone asked how they found their way back and the others did not, the young man said, the church sat on the top of a hill and the cross on its steeple reached high in the sky. "I just kept my eyes on the cross and found my way home."

There are many today who can find their way home if they keep their eyes on the cross.

The believer's sign

Finally, brothers and sisters the birth of this child shall be a sign that is still in control.

The reason the world celebrates the birth of the Christ child is because it this child is a sign of renew hope that "weeping endures but a night, but joy comes in the morning."

The birth of this child gives us new reason to sign "I'm so glad that trouble don't last always!"

God has given the world a sign. This child shall be my sign!

—When darkness covers the land, that I am able to turn darkness into light!

—That although war is talked about in every corner, there will be peace on earth and good will toward all men!

—That although problems make life difficult, that God will make a way somehow!

This child is a special child, for Isaiah said in 9:6 for unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; And the government shall be on his shoulder; his name shall be called:

—Wonderful. Counselor. The Mighty God. Everlasting father. Prince of Peace!

This child is a sign of God's unending love. I heard John 3:16 say "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life"

One evening out on Calvary, the world saw the sign of God's abiding love.

For he died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

The empty tomb was sign that he had risen from the grave!

And every now and then I feel a sign that he is alive for I feel him!

I can feel the sign!

SCRIPTURE: "And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." Luke 2:10-11

Introduction

Is it possible for someone or something to steal your joy? There are special times of the year when joy abounds. The Christmas season operates on the fundamental notion that it, "tis the season to be jolly!" Yet, while this is the season to be joyful, there are millions of people who are anything but joyful during the Christmas season. Someone or something has stolen their joy. Bad memories linger to snatch the joy of Christmas from some. Lonely hearts steal the joy from others who sit alone embracing memories of happier days. Poverty can easily steal the joy of your Christmas if you are not happy; so can sickness and frustration. The season to be jolly can be anything but joyful if we are not careful to focus on what brings real joy all year round.

If there is a group of people who should know the meaning of real joy, it should be Christians. That's what we are about! Think of Joy. Think of Christians. It's like the chain store that operates in most major city's Toys-R-Us! Toys-R-US is not just a toy store, it's a mega-store. It's big. They want you to think about toys and their store all year round. If you are looking for toys, think Toys-R-Us!. That's the way it should be with Christians, we are about joys, because we know what joy is all about.

Yet, there are many, even in the Christian family who are the victims of the devil's plan to steal our joy. Dr. Suess, the fable children's writer wrote a classic children's poem called "How the Grinch Stole Christmas." The cute little rhyme, complete with funny caricature styled pictures tells the story of an ugly old Grinch who was upset because the people of the town of Whoville had so much joy at Christmas time. He couldn't stand the noise and the happiness and the celebration. The grinch figured that the secret to their joy was in the toys. So he decided to steal the toys to take away the joys of Christmas. After stealing their toys, The grinch waited to see their response. Dr. Suess put it this way:

"They're just waking up! I know just what they'll do!
"Their mouths will hang open a minute or two
"The all the Whos down in Who-ville will all cry BOO-HOO!"

"That's a noise," grinned the Grinch,
"That I simply must hear!"
So he paused. And the Grinch put a hand to his ear.
And he did hear a sound rising over the snow.
It started in low. Then it started to grow...

But the sound wasn't sad!
Why, this sound sounded merry!
It couldn't be so!
But it WAS merry! VERY!

He stared down at Who-ville!
The Grinch popped his eyes!
Then he shook!
What he saw was a shocking surprise!

Every Who down in Who-ville, the tall and the small,
Was singing! Without any presents at all!
He HADN'T stopped Christmas from coming!
IT CAME!
Somehow or other, it came just the same!

And the Grinch, with his grinch-feet ice-cold in the snow,
Stood puzzling and puzzling: "How could it be so?
It came without ribbons! It came without tags!
"It came without packages, boxes or bags!"
And he puzzled three hours, 'till his puzzler was sore.
Then the Grinch thought of something he hadn't before!
"Maybe Christmas," he thought, "doesn't come from a store.
"Maybe Christmas...perhaps...means a little bit more!"

Dr. Suess was almost right. Instead of "a little bit more" Christmas means a lot more!

While the poem depicted an imaginary "grinch" there are real life situations that threaten to steal the joy from believers.

As Christians, we are the embodiment of joy. Christ gave us a joy that the grinch like fingers of the world cannot seize. The song writer is right, "This joy I have, the world didn't give it and the world can't take it away!"

Exposition

This text focuses on the good news brought by the angel to shepherds watching their fields. It was news that would bring them "great joy."

The announcement of Christ's birth was not an ordinary announcement. It was highly unusual primarily because it was announced by Angels themselves.

The angels told them not to fear because they were bringing news of "great joy." The Greek word for "great" is Megas, which means big, enormous, colossal. It's the word we get the English word "Mega." When mega precedes something it is going to be super big.

The angel announce news that was going to bring "mega joy." It would be mega joy for of Israel. It would be mega joy for the shepherds. It would be mega joys for every believer; that means mega joys for us.

The good news, of course, was the birth of Christ. That is the same good news that lifts our spirits today. The reality that God is with us, should lift our spirits and give us reason to be hopeful, cheerful and excited about life and all it offers.

Guarding Against the Grinch

Yet as happy as this season is there are many who cannot celebrate this season because some "Grinch" is stealing their Christmas. Look at the letters in the word "Grinch" and we'll find six things to do that can stop the Grinch from stealing your Christmas joy.

G-IVE YOUR WORRIES TO GOD: There are many that cannot celebrate Christmas because they worry so much they make themselves miserable. Listen to the list: "How am I going to pay for all this stuff?"; "How am I going to get everything done?" or even little things like, "How am I going to find a parking space at the mall?" The worry list varies from person to person but is never-the-less real. The Greek word for worry is actually two words "merizo and nous" which means to "divide the mind." The English word is based on an old Anglo Saxon word which means to choke or to strangle. The combined meanings let us know that worrying can divide our thinking and choke and strangle our spirit. Excessive worry keeps us frustrated, divided and choked up. It would be better to trust God for a change. Don't worry about finding a parking space, get in the car and go and trust God to show you where a space will open up at the mall and in life!

R-EFUSE TO BE NEGATIVE: There are many who look at their own life situation and turn negative. They focus on what they don't have. They see what everyone else has and become envious and extremely negative. Proverbs 14:30 says, "A heart at peace gives life to the body but envy rots the bones…" So your tree is not as big as the one next door! So what? So you don't have a tree at all? So what? So you are not able to get as much as you like for your children! Love them! They will understand! The Grinch thought he could steal Christmas because he thought things were the secrets. He associated toys with joys. When the "Who's" woke up Christmas morning there were no toys but there were still joys because they focused on what they had and not what they did not have. So let it be with us. Let's refuse to focus on the negatives.

I-NCLUDE TIME FOR REST. There is an interesting passage in Job 9:25 (NCV) That reads this way, ""My days go by faster than a runner. They fly away without my seeing joy." That can easily describe many of us during this season. We can get so busy trying to do so many things that we don't have time for the joy of the season to really soak in. We can be so busy cooking, shopping, wrapping presents, attending programs and activity after activity. We can get so busy that we simply become to tired to enjoy it all. On Christmas morning when all of the food is on the table we'll be too tired to eat. This is the time of year when everyone overloads their activity plate. There is more stress, tension and anxiety because there is very little rest time. There is very little time to think and reflect. When we lose thinking time we lose sight of the real meaning of it all and our joy slips away. During this time of the year it's good to set your "yes" limit and your "no" limit. To give yourself time to rest there comes a point when you must respectfully say, "no" to anyone that wants to put another item on your activity plate. Say "no" to more activity so you can have time to say "yes" to God. We are about mega Joy. But we can't have mega Joy without time to rest.

N-EVER FORGET THE REASON FOR THE SEASON: The Angel said "A savior is born unto you.." That was the word then and it is the word now. The reason for this season is that we needed a savior and God sent him to us in the person of his only begotten Son. The Christ child did not come 2,001 years ago so that we could give each other presents, decorate our houses, drink egg nog, have parties and sit on Santa's lap. NO Christ came - that little baby was born to a virgin, and was laid in a manger for one reason, and one reason only and that was to be a savior for each of us. Today, we still need a savior. We still need God in our lives. Jesus is the reason for the season. If we ever lose sight of that fact, then the Grinch of commercialism can truly steal our Christmas! We are about mega joy, but we can't have mega joy if we forget the reason for the season.

C-ONCENTRATE ON WHAT YOU HAVE: There are many who are miserable at Christmas time because the season brings back memories of things we no longer have. For some it brings back memories of a loved one who is no longer with us, so we feel emptiness and hurt. For others it brings back memories of love lost. Perhaps it was a failed marriage, a broken heart, an abandonment of some kind. Focusing on our losses can make Christmas a miserable time of the year. Instead, why not hear Paul say, "Forgetting those things which are behind, I press forward toward the mark." Focus on what you have now! Focus on what your loved one left behind. Focus on the laughter, the good times, the humorous sayings, the funny moments of the past and tell them with joy when your family meets. Concentrate on what you have now! Concentrate on how God is blessing you now! Concentrate on the goodness of this life now, despite the hardships you have endured. When we focus on what we have we experience "mega joy" because we know that God is with us and has not abandoned us. The Grinch can only steal your Christmas if you focus on your losses instead of your blessings. God is with us and he is blessing us and that should bring us mega-joy.

H-OLD ON TO HOPE. There are many who have lost hope in themselves. They see themselves in the worst way. They feel as if they have failed miserably and are beyond repair. They have given up hope on themselves because they have wasted so many years. That can happen if our hope is misplaced. If we have placed our hope in any person, place or thing, we have misplaced it. People can let us down. Places and things change. We can lose hope in ourselves because we change. That's why the song writer says, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand; all other ground is sinking sand." The presence of hope during this season should bring us joy. The knowledge that because "God is with us" that our lives can be turned around; that conditions can change! That thought alone should bring us mega-joy!

Why Joys R Us

Finally, we must consider the overriding reason why "Grinch" like circumstances can't steal our joy! Because our joys are not in noise and the toys but in the powerful love that comes from above!

Joys R Us! That defines us. It's not a definition that applies only at Christmas time. We are about joy all year round.

We have joy because we know that "all things" work to the good of those who love the Lord, according to his purpose.

In our sickness we have joy, because we know that God is in control of hospitals and doctors and surgical procedures.

In our misfortunes we have joy because we know that what is misfortune today will be our fortune tomorrow if we trust the Lord to work it out.

Even when there is a death in our family, we still have joy, because we know God has done us no wrong when he has given safe haven to a believing member of our family.

Joys R Us describes us! We have mega joy! We have mega hope! We have mega confidence that our redeemer will help us to overcome any obstacle in our way!

Despite our circumstances our lives symbolize not just joy but great joy because we place our hope in a risen Lord.

Author Max Lucado writes: "No man had more reason to be miserable than this one; yet no man was more joyful"

The man is described as having had two homes. In his first home he was a king with servants who attended his every wish. He could snap his fingers and change the course of world history. His name was well known. He had wealth and power and the respect of millions. Then instantly he had nothing.

It still amazes scholars today how he had everything one minute and then everything changed.

His bed became a borrowed pallet. He never had his own transportation and depended upon others for handouts. He often wandered through fields to eat raw grain, picked fruit from trees and sometimes ate only fish and bread.

He knew what it meant to be homeless. He knew what it meant to spend nights in the cold or to sleep in the cold wet hold of a ship on the sea.

In his first home he was surrounded by admirers calling his name in praise. But in an instant he was surrounded by mobs of people who either wanted to kill or beg him to perform tricks for their amusement.

He was accused of a crime he did not commit and witnesses were hired to lie on him. He was condemned to death and hung out on a Roman cross. Six inch spikes were driven through his hands and he was lifted up in ridicule.

In the midst of his pain, he seemed to still have an inner joy. He begged his father, "Forgive them for they know not what they do!"

Even when he died he was buried in a tomb borrowed from someone else.

He should have been miserable. He should have been despondent, but early Sunday morning he arose with Mega Joy! "He is not here" the angel proclaimed. "He has risen as he said."

It's Mega Joy for us because we know that he still lives for us.

That's the lesson that believers teach the Grinch who wants to steal our joy: Jesus is the reason for the season.

Perhaps the Grinch finally got the message. Listen to his words once more:

It came without ribbons! It came without tags!

"It came without packages, boxes or bags!"

And he puzzled three hours, 'till his puzzler was sore.

Then the Grinch thought of something he hadn't before!

"Maybe Christmas," he thought, "doesn't come from a store.

"Maybe Christmas...perhaps...means a little bit more!"

It's Over, Right?

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 30, 2001

SCRIPTURE: And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them. Luke 2:20

Introduction

It's over right? Isn't Christmas over? One of the best known truths about the Christmas season is that the length of the celebration lasts about as long as the object of your celebration. If your reason for celebrating Christmas was to find out what you would get for Christmas, then it was probably over the moment you opened the last package with ribbons flying from one place to another. The moment the new baby doll came out of the box or the new bicycle hit the ground with wheels whirling and chrome glittering the sun, it was over! For some it was over after the last plate of Christmas dinner was eaten and they couldn't force down another bite. For some, it's over! The singing, special activities, decorations and even more have finally ended and for many it's time to start looking at the next planned event.

Whenever we are enjoying something we don't want it to end. That was situation when the faith healer ate lunch at a local café. There were people in the café who immediately recognized him and decided to treat him. One man complimented him on his fine ministry and paid the waiter for his meal. A short while later he was recognized by another customer who decided to leave the waiter a $20 tip on the faith healer's table. The third man saw him and decided to pay for his meals for the entire week that the faith healer was in town. As the faith prepared to leave he shook the hand of the first man and instantly power went from him and the man screamed, "Glory Hallelujah, the back troubles I've been having have suddenly gone away!" The faith healer went to the table of the second man and shook his hands and another surge of power went from him and the man cried out, "Glory to God, the arthritis that has been troubling me all these years has gone away!" Then the healer went to the last man and stuck out his hand for a shake. The third man got up and quickly back away? The healer asked, "Why are you backing away?" The man said, "You touched him and his back was healed. You touched that man and his arthritis was healed. I don't want you to touch me because I'm on disability. You touch me and it's over!" –The man didn't want his good thing to be over!

When do we know when something is over? B.B. King says it's over when the,

"The thrill is gone." Actors say it's over after the final bow. Competitors say it's over when "fat lady sings." Maxwell House Coffee says its over when we have tasted the "last drop." From a spiritual context, as long as the spirit of Christmas lives it's never over; the party continues every day.

The joy of Christmas reflects in our lives everyday. Like the romance of the wedding is not over at the ceremony, but is only the beginning; so it is with the Christmas spirit with all true believers.

As Christians, we may pack away the wrapping paper and take down the lights, but the spirit of hope and faith the Christmas season brings is never over!

Exposition

This text focuses on the actions of the shepherds after they participated in the manger experience.

Shepherds, who were grazing their flocks, were interrupted to participate in the manger experience in Bethlehem. Their normal routine consisted of a rather dreary cycle of watching flocks by day and night. However, whenever the flocks were left unattended for long the possibility of losing some of their sheep always existed because either thieves or wolves were always present. While they were inspired and strengthened by observing the manger experience in Bethlehem they returned to their fields still under the glow and charisma that came as a result of being in the presence of God.

Even though they went back to the fields, the excitement of what they experienced in Bethlehem never ended. It simply continued indefinitely. They returned, glorying God. The Greek for Glorifying in this text is "dox-ad-zo" which means to cause the dignity and worth of a person or thing to be recognized or acknowledged. Thus, the shepherds went to Bethlehem to participate in the manger experience and they returned with an exciting testimony about what they had experienced themselves. Their testimony recognized and acknowledge God in such a way that his respect and reverence among the people was uplifted.

The joy of that night in front of the manger did not end in Bethlehem. Their business as usual routine had been changed forever as their conversation and relationship was changed for their own betterment. Their return was not the end of the manger experience but it was the beginning of a lifetime of praise and glorifying that would never end.

Do what they did

Today, believers should note what the shepherds did after the manger experience. They returned, but their return was not simply to their usual return, but they returned glorifying God.

Exactly how do we keep the spirit of Christmas using the example of the shepherds? We should glorify him as the shepherds did by:

GLORIFY HIM BY RELYING ON HIS PROMISES: One way to glorify God is to rely heavily upon his promises. The shepherds were told to go to Bethlehem and told what to expect. They acted upon his promises. Romans 4:20 encourages every believer not to "stagger" when it comes to trusting in God. We glorify him when we show others, through our bold faith that we trust him completely. In so doing we present ourselves as instruments to be used by him to prove his excellence to the unbelieving.

GLORIFY HIM BY ACKNOWLEDGING HIM: Believers glorify God by acknowledging him as the source of every good thing we do. 1 Corinthians 10:31 reminds us to acknowledge God in everything, including the seemingly small and mundane things such as eating and drinking. Paul in this text says in "whatsoever we do, do all to the glory of God." The act of acknowledging him is not a seasonal occurrence. It never ends. We should praise the Lord 365 days out of every year and glorify him continuously.

GLORIFY HIM BY RIGHTEOUS LIVING: Believers continue to glorify God daily by righteous living. In this context God is glorified when non-believers observe our attempt to live lives that are honorable, praise worthy, law abiding and draped in integrity. In so doing, we glorify God. In Philippians 1:11 Paul told the Philippians that it was essential that they demonstrate what he called the "fruits of righteousness" in their daily living. Doing so would bring glory and praise to God. That means that we praise God every day by simply doing the right things and choosing to reject evil things. Doing right is not a Christmas day thing, but an every day thing that extends well beyond Christmas day.

GLORIFY HIM BY FAITH IN THE FIRE: The greatest glory God receives is when his children, in the midst of the fire, still praise him and cling to him. There is never a year that passes when the children of God escape the fires of life. It is almost as if each of us were one of the three Hebrew Boys being thrown into the fiery furnace. Their response to the king certainly glorified God. When asked would their God deliver them from the fire they responded that, "Our God is able" but even if he chose not to deliver them they would hold fast to their faith in him. Isaiah 24:15 encourages believers to "glorify ye the Lord in the fires." When trouble or sickness or mishaps come, glorify God in times of trouble just as you do in when everything goes well. It's not a Christmas day thing, it never ends.

GLORIFY HIM THROUGH WORSHIP AND PRAISE: The wise men came to Bethlehem to worship and praise the Christ child but their praise and worship continued long after the Bethlehem experience ended. Our praise and worship of God is not seasonal. It is not something we do on special days of the year such as Christmas and Easter. We worship and praise God continuously. Our worship consists of singing and rejoicing, bringing our tithes and offerings as we well as prayers and words of adoration. Psalm 50:23 puts it this way, "whosoever offereth praise glorifieth me" and those who order their conservation in a way that praises God will find salvation. Praising God is not a seasonal occurrence that ends with Christmas. We praise him continuously, all year long.

It's Not Over

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must say to those who think the spirit of Christmas is over that, the spirit and power of the Lord never ends; he abides with us everyday!

Someone who is unfamiliar with the way the Lord works and how believers think, may ask, why is the church still decorated for Christmas? Don't they know that Christmas is over?

A week has passed, why are they still singing Chrismas carols, don't they Christmas is over?

Those who asked these questions, mistakenly think that the spirit of Christmas ends at the close of one day on the calendar. Those who know the Lord, know that the beauty of the believer's life is never over. Once we have been in the presence of the Lord it's never over because we relive it again and again.

Today, there is someone who thinks the excitement concerning the birth of the Christ child is over.

They think it's over because they have taken the lights down. We know it's not over because our light never comes down. Every day of our lives we sing, "This little light of mine, I'm going to let it shine."

There may be some who think because the choir stops singing, "joy to the world,"h that the impetus for that song has left and it is over. But its not over because this joy I have the world didn't give it and the world can't take it away!

There are some who think its over because life is now going back to normal. But we know it's not over because we'll never be the same. I heard the song writer declare, "Since I met the blessed savior. Since he washed and made me whole; since the hand of Jesus touched me; now I am no longer the same!"

Somebody thinks it's over because everyone has stopped talking about the wise men from the east who followed a star. But it's not over because there are some wise men and women today who are still seeking him every day!

Somebody thinks it's over because the choir is no longer singing, "Hark the herald Angels sing!" But it's not over because we are singing with angelic voices, "Glory, Glory, Hallelujah, since I laid my burdens down."

Some have concluded that the season of talking about peace has passed. But we know it's not over because everyday of our lives we praise him for being the "prince of peace and Lord of Lords."

Somebody thinks it's over because all the fine Christmas food is gone. But we know it's not over because in the wilderness of our life experience all through the year the Lord still feeds us. That's why we say, "Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, Feed me till I want no more!"

Somebody thinks it's over because all of the sweet pies, sweet cakes have been put away. But we know it's not over because "every day with Jesus is sweeter than the day before." We know it's not over because "I've found a savior and he's sweet I know!"

There may some who feel that because angelic voices are no longer singing, “Go tell it on the mountain” that there is nothing else to tell because it’s over. But it’s not over because there’s somebody who still has a testimony and a story to tell of how he woke me up this morning and clothed me in my right mind. It’s not over because there are millions of witnesses who have tell the story!

We still have a story to tell!

We still have to tell somebody that he was born in Bethlehem!

We still have to tell somebody that he died on Calvary!

We still have to tell somebody that Early Sunday morning that he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Great is thy faithfulness

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 31, 2001

SCRIPTURE: "It is of the LORD'S mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. They are new every morning: great is thy faithfulness." Lamentations 3:22-23

Introduction

Suppose I told you that I know a person who keeps every promise he makes, would you believe me? What if I added that not only does this person keep every promise made but keeps them exactly as they were promised without modifying them one bit. Would that be harder to believe? Well, suppose I said I know a person who not only keeps every promise, exactly they were promised, but also delivers on the promise at the time promised? That would be even harder to believe! There are very few of us who actually know any individuals that are able to keep all of their promises. We do know of many who work very hard to keep every promise they make, but are often sidetracked by circumstances beyond their control. If I told you I knew a human being that could guarantee a delivery on every promise I wouldn't be telling the truth, but while no human being can guarantee delivery, God can.

Sometimes we promise the unorthodox or that which we know it will be difficult to deliver. Consider the woman who was having difficulty with her husband cheating on her. It really upset her that no matter how she tried he would not pay attention to her. One day she happened upon a magic frog. The frog told the woman that she could have three wishes, but there was one catch. Anything she asked for herself would be granted also to her husband 10 times more. "Fine" the woman said. Her first wish was to be strikingly beautiful and irrestible. The frog reminded her that her husband would also become 10 times more handsome and she would have a problem with other women. The woman said she did not care and the wish was granted. Secondly, she wished for wealthy. The frog said, "But your husband will be 10 wealthier!" The woman said, "I don't care, what's his is mine anyway!" Instantly it was done!. The woman asked the frog one last time, "You promise me that whatever I ask for I will get?" The frog said, "Yes, and your husband will get 10 times what you get." She looked at her cheating husband and said, "For my final wish, I'd like to have a mild heart attack!"

If we look back on the year spent, we'll quickly see that despite all of its ups and downs, good days and bad days, God has delivered on his promises to us, just as he said, when he said he would!

At first glance, especially when we consider the problems we've encountered this year, we might conclude that God has not delivered on his promises to us. If he did, there are some who think he did not do it the way he promised. Even then, there are some who think that he may have responded to his promise but he did not do in the time of their special need. In that frame of mind there are many who conclude that God failed them this year. He allowed a death in the family. He allowed a loved one to become injured or sick. He allowed the loss of our property and possessions. He allowed us to be caught up in a fast moving world that is taking us for a ride so fast that everything of value is falling out of our pockets as we move through life. At first glance, it does appear that God may have been negligent, or at the least, a little slow!

What has God promised us? He has never promised that there would be no mountains; he did promise strength for the mountains. He never promised that we would not walk through the valley of the shadow of death, but he did promise to walk with us. He never promised to immunize us from sickness or trouble but he did promise that he would deliver us and lead us away from temptation if we ask him. Moreover, he promised to be with us always, in every situation and circumstance and to be only a prayer away.

That's what God actually promised us. In that context God has been faithful in his promises to us and has not neglected us in any way. Every day that has passed this year, he has been with us. When he has answered a prayer for us, he did exactly as he promised. When we needed his strength and power and sought him he responded, on time.

He is more dependable than Federal Express, The Post Office or U.P.S. He delivers all the time, on time. This year has been no exception.

As Christians we praise God for his faithfulness to us and give him praise for his wonderful works in our lives during the past year. He has been faithful toward us in the past and we expect him to do the same in the year to come.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Jeremiah as he describes the faithfulness of God despite difficult times.

The lamentations of Jeremiah is a collection of inspired writings by the prophet Jeremiah with the intent of showing Israel the cause of its exiled position, lamenting its present state and providing hope for its future.

It is filled with bleakly colored laments about the difficulty of the times. Yet, there is also the continuous hope and trust that God could and would reverse the circumstances.

Despite their exiled conditions, Jeremiah noted that each morning he saw new evidence of God's mercy and goodness indicating that God had not abandoned them or forsaken them.

The biblical record is punctuated with accounts that indicate to us the extent of God's faithfulness. Psalm 89, is a major text that tells us about God's faithfulness. It tells us that his faithfulness is an inseparable part of his character and nature. His ultimate nature is displayed in the heavens and natural order of things. Psalm 89:2 says, "You established your faithfulness in heaven itself." It's in the order of things, the rising and setting of the sun, the rotation of the earth on its axis, the movement of the planets in the solar system; all are indicators of God's faithfulness, dependability, reliability and timeliness. Thus, Psalm 89:8 concludes, "Your faithfulness surrounds you."

The biblical record is also careful to delineate a difference between the faithfulness of God and the faithfulness of man. Numbers 23:19 - "God is not a man, that he should lie, nor a son of man, that he should change his mind. Does he speak and then not act? Does he promise and not fulfill?" When God says it, it will be done. When God promises it, it will happen and happen on time. The New Testament echoes this theme repeatedly: 1 Corinthians 1:9 - "God . is faithful."; 1 Corinthians 10:13 - "And God is faithful." 1 John 1:9 - "He is faithful."

When we review the biblical record when it comes to God's faithfulness, the preponderance of scripture indicates that being faithful is a part of God's nature. He keeps his word and executes it on time, because if he didn't, he wouldn't be God!

God Has Been Faithful

As we reflect upon the year that has passed, we recognize immediately that God has been faithful to us by providing the essensials for our survival, all of our needs and some of our wants.

FOOD, CLOTHING AND SHELTER: Though we may have complained about some of our food, whether or clothing was fashionable, or the size or location of our home; must of us would have to agree, that God has been faithful in providing us with all three. Just as Israel was in the wilderness for 40 years depending upon the faithfulness of God, we have done the same. In the wilderness Israel found that God provided them food, on time every day; even though they complained about it. He fixed it such that the material that formed their tents held up for 40 years with need of repair. He arranged it so that they wore the same shoes and clothes for decades and they never wore out. The food came on time every day. There was water just when they needed it most. God was faithful to Israel as he provided for them in ways no one could explain. He has been faithful to us in the same way. No matter how we look at it, we have been blessed by the powerful hand of God.

MADE OPPORTUNITIES AVAILABLE: God has been faithful in his promise to open doors for us and to make opportunities for the abundant life available to true believers. Jabez went to God and asked that he would expand his coasts and bounderies. God heard Jabez and made good on his promise, giving him exactly what he prayed for. As we reflect upon this year we see that God has given many of us exactly what we prayed for. He has kept his word. Many have recognized an increase in pay this year. Some have expanded their boundaries to the point that they have taken advantage of job opportunities and other doors that were opened his year. The expanded boundaries are not limited to only the material. There are many who have experienced stronger family relationships this year, in addition to other quality of life measures that cannot be ignored. God has been faithful to insure that many of the things we have asked for, we have received.

PROVIDED FOR OUR EMOTIONAL SUPPORT: This has been an extremely difficult year for some us. There are some families that have encountered physical sickness and death. There are others that are experience strained relationships. These are the believers who will quickly testify that if it had not been for the Lord on their side, they would not have been able to stand the trials and difficulties of these tough moments. Just as the spirit of God lifted David as he mourned for his son or reassured Paul in his weakness, that "my grace is sufficient." We have been sustained by the eternal presence of God in our life situations this year. When difficult times were upon us this year, God was there, he was only a prayer away. Someone can recall how the Lord lifted a burden from their shoulder and gave them renewed strength in the midst of weakness. When Jesus told his disciples, "Lo I'll be with you alway" that meant exactly what it said, he planned to be with us continually.

New Mercies

Finally, brothers and sisters while it is good to look back on the mercies that God showed us this year, as the new year dawns, it is good to remember that God plans new mercies for the new year!

Jeremiah said, every morning God has new mercies for his people!

Every morning God has has new blessings in store for them!

It's good to know that you had something to eat yesterday. But you feel a little better if you know there will be something to eat tomorrow!

It's good to know that you had a job this year, but you feel a little better when you know you'll have a job next year!

It's good to know every thing was alright last year, but you sleep better at night when you know that next year will be an even better year!

This is the message of hope that Jeremiah was trying to get across to Israel. Oh Israel, you have been going through some difficult times in your capitvity, but God has blessed you from his abundant mercy!

He brought you out of some tough times! He sustained you in the midst of your exile and banishment!

He saw you when you hung your harps on the willow trees and said, "How can we sing Zion's songs in a strange land!"

The Lord showered Blessings on Israel during their difficutl time. However, Jeremiah wanted them to know that what God did for them in the past is not a historical footnote.

It's the Lord's mercies that have kept us from being consumed. That's what Jeremiah meant when he said if it had not been for God's mercies we would have been consumed!

Consider the little boy that was told by his father to chop enough wood to keep the fire burning through the night. It was late in the fall, when the weather was warm in the day, but cold at night. The father said a hard freeze was on the way. The little boy was disobedient. It was so warm that he could wear short pants and he couldn't see the need of chopping so much wood. He collected a few sticks and put them in the wood bin. As he curled up on his pallet the flicker of the flames put him to sleep. A few minutes later the flames started to burn low. A cold chill draped the room as the temperature began to drop. The little boy curled up in a ball and began to shiver and shake. When he awoke the next morning there was frost on the ground but the house was warm. There was a blazing fire in the fireplace. When he asked his father, how could this be, his father said, "You didn't do everything I told you to do, but you're still my son. I couldn't let you lay in the cold unprotected. I chopped enough wood to keep the fire going. Every time, it started to burn low, I put on another log. The little boy said to his father, "I haven't done everything I was supposed to do, but you kept the fire going to keep me from freezing. I don't know how to thank you, because every day you're always putting another log on the fire!"

In the winter of our discontent, God keeps putting another log on the fire! He keeps on blessing me!

Jeremiah said, every morning there is another log of mercy placed on the fire! Every new year, there's another log of mercy on the fire!

No wonder the song writer declared, "Great is thy faithfulness, morning by morning, new mercies I see. All I have needed thy hands hath provided, Great is thy faithfulness Lord unto to me!"

He was so faithful that 2001 years ago he sent his only begotten Son to live among men!

Somebody knows him. His name is Jesus!

He was so faithful that he died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning....

No. 877-New Year

I will never leave thee

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

*SCRIPTURE: "Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Hebrews 13:5

Introduction

Have you ever been afraid to take even a short trip by yourself? Often when we travel into unknown territory we feel safer if someone goes with us. There is safety in the "buddy" system. We feel safer at home when we are not alone. In threatening circumstances the sense of terror is lessened if we are in the presence of those who we know. No matter how young or old we are, this feeling of insecurity does not escape us if we are traveling alone.

While there are some who are intimidated with the thought of being alone, there are others who believe that their success is due to their own effort alone. Consider the skeptic who didn't care too much for God or religion. One day a preacher took him to a large empty field and told him that he had vision of the future. He said "You and God can take this large empty field and turn it into something." The preacher then disappeared. A few days later the man, without good credit or references was able to float a loan to buy the field. Even though nothing had ever grown in the field but weeds he planted and harvested a great crop. At the end of the year the preacher returned and said to the man, "See I told you that you and God could do miracles with this field." Not wanting to share the credit even with God, the man said, "If you think God had something to do with this you should have seen this place when God had it all by himself."—There are some that refuse to give God credit for even the smallest miracles he creates in their lives everyday.

There is very little we can do in any given year that does not require the miraculous intervention of the divine. Whether it's putting a safety net around our homes or creating opportunities for us on the job, God is busy 24 hours a day and seven days a week, making things happen for his people. That's what he did for us last year and will continue to do this year.

He will never forsake us or leave us, even though sometimes we believe that what we have accomplished has been done without him.

As Christians, we approach the new year with renewed hope and enthusiasm. We see the great emptiness that lies before us, but we also have enough sense to know that when this year is over and the harvest is great that our success this year won't be because our own work, but because God never forsook us or left us alone.

Exposition

This text focuses on various precepts needed for Christians living including the assurance of God's presence.

The author of the Hebrews is unknown but is believed to be Paul. The entire book gave noted instructions to Christians about living the Christian life. In the last chapter, many different ideas were listed together, without much comment. The ideas were not in any particular order in this chapter as the letter came to a close, each one was powerful enough to stand on its own.

At verse one he encouraged believers to continue to show love in the brotherhood. Then in verse 2 he urged them not to turn away strangers but to be hospitable. In verse 3 he told them to remember those that are in bonds. In verse 4 he touched reminded them of the sanctity of marriage..

When he reached verse five and six the writer gave advice for living each new day. These to verses turn out to be a formula for facing new opportunities. The writer said, "Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee."

This tidbit of spiritual advice from the word of God said in essence, "Don't talk such much about acquiring new things, money and keeping up with other people, but be content with the things that you; don't worry either because God will always be with you, he will be your helper, so move without fear."

Immediately after the writer, for 19 more verses gives more tidbits. However, the tidbits in verse 5 and 6 are immensely powerful for believers.

These two verses for powerful because they were timely and drew on the power of other biblical teachings. They struck home because many believers were anxious about their personal condition. They did not know what the future held in store for them. Since becoming Christians many had parted with their personal property, forced from their jobs or even been ostracized by former friends.

They were anxious because they did not know what to expect of the future. They did not have the food they wanted. They did not have the money they wanted and it appeared that others were advancing and achieving their goals at a higher rate. They feared that the years ahead would bring more loss and more discontent.

Verse 5 and 6 draws on biblical principles already established. It is what is known as a "gezerah-shavah" where two truths of scripture are linked together in the same verse because of one common word in both phrases. In Deuteronomy 31:6 as the children of Israel faced the prospect of entering a new promised land they were anxious and nervous. They did not know what to expect. Moses spoke to them to console them by saying, "Be strong and of a good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the LORD thy God, he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee. " In Psalm 118:6 David surrounded with the prospect of rejection and failure before men wrote," The LORD is on my side; I will not fear: what can man do unto me?" The common word in both of the texts is the word fear.

Even though the truths of verse 5 and 6 are not elaborated upon any further, the truth lingers. If we are content with what we have, allow God to help us, there will be nothing that the world can bring against us that the team of "us and God" cannot not handle.

Contentment

One of the things that many people fear about the future is the prospect of loss. They fear the loss of prestige, position, power or property. The fear of loss troubles many people from children to adults and we are anxious about any changes that may cause us to lose something or someone.

What is contentment? It is an inner peace that has nothing to do with how much money you have, the type of clothes you wear or the kind of home in which you live. Contentment is not to be confused with lack of ambition. People who are content still strive to climb higher, reach for improvement and ways to build themselves up. The difference is that they do not feel total loss if their ambitions are not achieved immediately.

Contentment is a sense of balance in life that is achieve by having enough God on your side t balance out whatever comes up on the other side.

Contentment is having enough God to balance out the loss of a job if it comes.

Contentment is having enough God to balance out a major sickness if it comes.

Contentment is having enough God to balance out an interruption or dysfunction in your family or personal relationship.

Contentment cannot be bought. It is not acquired by belonging to a church. It is acquired through a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. It is the faith that the combined strength of the Father, Son and the Holy Ghost can balance any trouble that may come against us.

How do you acquire contentment? For some contentment is elusive. They are never happy, never at peace with themselves. Contentment comes when a believer allows God to direct them in a pursuit and accepts, at the beginning, whatever the outcome as God's will.

Thus the loser in a campaign or contest is content knowing that he gave his best but the outcome he desired was not God's will for him at that moment.

It's the same attitude held by those who enter any other challenging situation. We go in to do our best, but will accept the fairly achieved outcome as the will of God.

What comes with accepting the will of God is the knowledge that all things will eventually work to our good, even a failure, according to the will of God. The secret to contentment is put your life in God's hand.

What he promises at the least is to balance any negatives with his power. In some instances it could be his will that we are victorious.

Fear

The fear of what man can do makes many people anxious.

Sometimes what we fear is not something that will happen to us but what people will say about us or what they will think of us.

Franklin Roosevelt, dealing with the fears of the American people after the bombing of Pearl Harbor and just before entering World War II said, "The only thing we have to fear, is fear itself!"

Sometimes our fears can really stop us from advancing. A freshman at Eagle Rock Junior High won first prize at the greater Idaho Falls Science Fair, April 26, 1997. He was attempting to show how conditioned we have become to alarmist practicing junk science and spreading fear of everything in our environment. In his project he urged people to sign a petition demanding strict control or total elimination of the chemical "dihydrogen monoxide."

And for plenty of good reasons, since it:

· Can cause excessive sweating and vomiting.

· It is a major component in acid rain.

· It can cause severe burns in its gaseous state.

· Accidental inhalation can kill you.

· It decreases effectiveness of automobile brakes.

· It has been found in tumors of terminal cancer patients.

He asked 50 people if they supported a ban of the chemical. Forty-three said yes, six were undecided, and only one knew that the chemical was H20 (water). The title of his prize winning project was, "How Gullible Are We?" He feels the conclusion is obvious.

There are many who will enter into the new year afraid of what they don't understand. Fear of the unknown prohibits growth, those who become great are those who dare to go where no man has gone before without fear but shrouded in confidence.

When the writer of Hebrews said, "I will not fear what man shall do unto me?" He made a statement of bold confidence that with God as his helper he would strive to that which is right and truthful and let people think what they want.!

Courage

Finally, we must consider the emphasis this text has on courage for the future.

The writer said, "I will not fear" what ever comes.

This should be the attitude of every believer as we look at the prospects of the new year, "I will not fear!"

Believers take courage as we face the unknown because we the Lord has promised never to leave us alone! That means, through any trouble or difficulty, he will never leave us.

If we fall upon misfortune his words remain true, I will never leave thee!

If we fall upon temporary disgrace or public scorn, his words still resonate, "I will never leave thee!"

If we fall into sickness or despair, the echo of his words fills our ears, "I will never leave thee!"

If our friends forsake us and family turns on us, the sound of his words is loud and clear, "I will never leave thee!"

This promise of God overrides the material and plunges us into the supernatural. It cancels the logical and pushes us into the realm of faith. It padlocks fear and unlocks hope and optimism.

As Israel prepared to march across the River Jordan they were filled with anxiety about approaching the unknown. They did not know what the future would hold, but they heard the word of God say, "I will never leave thee!" and the crossed over Jordan on dry land.

Somebody today has crossed many rivers, but there is still one more river to cross! You may not know what tomorrow will bring but you know who holds tomorrow. Listen to voice of God saying, "I will never leave thee or forsake thee!"

As Israel faced the challenge of walls of Jericho, they were apprehensive. They had no military skills to match those of their enemies. But they heard the word of the Lord saying, "I will never leave thee or forsake thee."

Do you have any walls that seem to stand in your way? Remember God's words, "I will never leave thee or forsake thee!"

If you take the Lord with you during the new year the:

—IMPOSSIBLE can become possible; the IMPROBABLE becomes probable —Mountains that stand in your way can be reduced to molehills!

—Rough places can be made plain, crooked places can be made straight!

Let us move into the new year with confidence that come what may from day to day! My heavenly father watches over me!

If I fall down, he'll pick me up!

If I make a mistake, he will forgive me!

If I stumble, he'll whole my hand!

If I can't find my way, he'll guide me! That's why I'll say, "Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land. I am weak but thou art mighty hold me with thou powerful hand!"

The same hand that touched a blind man's eyes!

The same hand that healed a lame man and made him walk!

The same hands that were nailed to an old rugged cross in death

But the same hands that were raised in victory early Sunday morning!

I want that same hand to guide me every day!

He would not come down from the cross

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 1, 1978

SCRIPTURE:"At that time two robbers were crucified with him, one on the right and one on the left. And those who were passing by were whirling abuse at him and waging their heads and saying you who destroyed the temple and rebuild it in three days save yourself, if you are the son of God come down from the cross. In the same way the chief priests along with the scribes and elders were mocking him saying, "he saved others and he cannot save himself. Let him come down from the cross and we'll believe him." Matthew 27:38

Introduction

This particular passage of scripture focuses on Christ being nailed to the cross. After being nailed to the cross certain groups of people who appeared to ridicule him, challenge him and to poke fun at him. Their purpose was to provoke him to prove for their benefit that he was the God he claimed to be.

There were at least three groups of people that appeared to ridicule him was the common people. They said "you said you were so powerful that you could tear down the temple and rebuild it in three days." They questioned that if Jesus was as powerful as he claimed that he should not have any difficulty removing the nails from his hands. They were disturbed because they had misinterpreted his statements about rebuilding the temple to mean that he planned to tear down and rebuild the temple built by Zerrubabel. However, it was not this temple that Jesus referenced. He referred to his body which would be in the grave for three days and nights and would be arisen after the scripture had been fulfilled.

The common people misinterpreted his humility for weakness. It was similar to the old song that was popular a few years ago that said, "Don't take my kindness for weakness." Because he refused to come down from the cross, his refusal was taken as a sign that he was unable to do so.

2 Corinthians 13:4 teaches us that Christ was "crucified through weakness yet he liveth by the power of God." That means he allowed himself to become weak that he could be raised by the power of God. That would be the greatest testimony of the power of God.

-II-

The common people also told him, “You say you are the son of God.” They reasoned that if Christ was truly the son of God that God would not allow his son to hang on a cross, thus Christ should come down to conform to the will of God. Christ met a similar challenge a few years earlier from Satan while he fasted and prayed in the desert for 40 days and nights. Here, Satan tried to get Christ to prove himself by turning stones into bread and by bowing down and worshipping him. The idea of proving one’s self is often placed upon each of us. Even as young as high school some young men are often heard challenging some young lady to prove her love to him by having sex. This was the same challenge that was given to Christ: prove your love by coming down. However, Christ knew that he would not prove his love by coming down from the cross, but only by staying on the cross until his mission was completed. When the mission was complete and salvation secured, then and only then could Christ prove himself to any doubters.

-III-

The second group of people who criticized Christ were the religious leaders. They charged that he could not save himself because he did not possess the power. They misunderstood him. It was not that Jesus could not save himself, it was that he would not save himself. He possessed the power to come down if he so desired, but he chose not to exercise that power. One of the great common beliefs about any modern democratically dominated society is that those who lead the populus must be individuals who have first done something for themselves. The thinking is that those who cannot protect or provide for themselves won’t be very effective helping others. Thus, the public judges the level of personal success of those who purport to show others the way to success. Using this line of thinking the religious leaders maintained that Christ should be able to save himself by the same power and authority with which he expected to raise himself. They seemed to say, “You can’t show me how to make money if you can’t make money yourself.” If you can’t run your own house then you can’t tell me how to run mine.” And “If you are not doing well yourself, you can’t tell me how to improve.” They took this same line of reasoning and applied it to Christ saying, “He went around saving other folk, but he cannot save himself.” Moreover, the religious leaders were aware that in many instances Christ accompanied his miraculous works with forgiving of sin. Thus, if he could not come down from the cross it would indicate that he was guilty of a sin..that sin being that he claimed to be God, such a sin justified his death.

They also charged that if he was the King of Israel as he claimed, God would not allow him to die on the cross. They contended that if Christ was actually the King of the Jews as he claimed he would have organized the people in a successful revolt against the Roman government; but instead he hung on a cross.

They said, “If you are really this promised king of Israel, why don’t you come down from the cross and we will believe it.” I’m sure that Christ on the cross, being both God and man, must have considered the challenges that were given to him. He must have been affected by the ridicule. However, after hearing what they had to say about him, he decided to die to save mankind.

-IV-

The last group of those who criticized him was represented by the thieves on the cross. One of the thieves challenged Christ to prove his deity by saving himself and the thief as well. He had a selfish motive for his request because he wanted to be freed himself. Even in our prayers, sometimes we have selfish prayers that we ask of God. Fortunately God does not give us many of our selfish request because they will not be for our benefit. Thus, the thief on the cross asked a selfish request. The other thief was different. He saw what Christ was doing and teaching and believed it to be right, despite the fact he was a thief. Likewise there are many in the church who believe what is right but simply do not act on what they believe. The thief maintained that he deserved his punishment but he recognized that Christ had done no wrong. He asked for paradise and received an immediate answer.

The thief on the cross understood that Jesus could not come down if the possibly for heaven was to remain real.

The thief on the cross understood that Jesus could not come down if salvation was to be purchased.

The thief on the cross understood that Jesus could not come down if he intended to be the savior of the world.

He had the power to come down if he wanted to, but he still would not come down.

He had the power to bat his eye and make the lightning flash, but he still would not come down!

He had the power to clap his hands and make the thunder roll but he still would not come down!

He had the power to speak to the winds and make them obey his will but he still would not come down!

He had the power to touch a blind and make him see again but he still would not come down!

He had the power to touch a lame make man and make him walk again but he still would not come down.

He would not come down because he knew that one day in some city in the world there would be somebody down on their knees in the midnight hour say, “Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know. If thou withdraw thy self from me, whether shall I go.”

He knew if he came down from the cross he wouldn’t be able to answer!

He knew that some wife, father or child would ask for blessing for a family member and he wouldn’t be able answer them with the blessing of grace!

He knew that one day in the distant future there would be someone who got drunk on Friday and Saturday nights, or who indulged in adultery and ran around on the mates, or someone who would gamble away their paychecks, or even a child that would be disobedient to a parent that would become weary of their deviant lifestyles.

He looked to the day when the drunk would say, "I'm tired of being drunk every day of the week" or when the adulterer would say, "I'm tired of running around;" or when the child would say, "I'm tired of being disobedient to my parents."-because he knew someone would desire to be saved and repent, he would not come down from the cross!

I can hear the thoughts that must have floated through his mind on the cross.

"I can't come down because I want to be there for the church, in their time of need."

"I can't come down from the cross because I want to bread when they are hungry!"

"I will not come down from the cross because I want to be water when you are thirsty."

"I will not come down from the cross because I want to be a bridge over troubling water."

"I will not come down from the cross because I want to be a lawyer in your court room and a doctor in your sick room."

It's a good thing he didn't come down from the cross because we would have been a lost generation.

When he hung out on the crowds people came from miles to see him and said, if you are the Christ come down and save yourself.

Jesus would not answer them because he knew Satan was tempting him.

I'm glad he did not come down, but he died out on Calvary!

I'm glad that he died, but I'm also glad that early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

No. 879-Prayer

Ask for what you want, want what you get

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 13, 2002

SCRIPTURE: If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. John 15:7

Introduction

Have you ever asked for something, then didn't want it when you received it? Did it turn out to be what you expected? You may have been in a restaurant where you saw scores of delicious looking entrees you saw an item that looked good but, once it was on your plate it didn't look so hot! There have been certain clothing items we have yearned to have, only to find it that once we had them they weren't all that. Some things we were just "dying" to have caused us more problems than a little. There are many who have actually received what they asked God for only to discover that it would have been better if they did not receive it in the first place.

An old maxim is this, "be careful what you ask for, you just might get it!" Many have found that maxim to be true because they have received a few things in answer to their prayers, but did not want them after they received them. In every home there are probably Christmas toys, for the men and the boys, that haven't been touched in a long time. Yet, when we prayed for them we just had to have them!

There was a certain church member who loved to hear the pastor preach about the power of prayer because he was interested in using it to gain advantages for himself in the business world. He knew every sermon the pastor preached on this Subject and became an expert on prayer. One weekend he decided to skip his Sunday church service to go bear hunting in the mountains. As he turned the corner along the path, he and a bear collided. The member stumbled backwards, slipped off the trail, and began tumbling down the mountain with the bear in hot pursuit. Finally the member crashed into a boulder, sending his rifle in one direction and breaking both legs. As the bear closed in, the member remembered the power of prayer and cried out in desperation, "Lord, I'm sorry for skipping church. Please forgive me and save me! Lord, please make that bear a Christian."

Instantly the man's prayer was answered and the bear became a Christian. The bear fell to its knees, clasped its paws together and said, "God, bless this food which I am about to receive." –He received what he asked for, but he did not want it afterwards!

Country and Western Singer Travis Tritt has a song called, "Where corn don't grow." It's about a young man, 17 years old, sitting on the front porch with his dad, drinking a cup of coffee, looking out over all the fields, the fields of corn, that surround their farmhouse. The son says, "Dad, I may be kind of young and maybe there's a lot I don't know, but don't you dream of going somewhere where corn don't grow?" In other words, don't you get tired of corn, planting it, cultivating it, fertilizing it, harvesting it, living around it, looking at it. "Don't you dream of going somewhere where corn don't grow?" The question makes his dad kind of sad. He says, "You're young, and there's a lot that you don't know, but weeds are high where corn don't grow." In the song the son goes to the big city, goes where corn don't grow, and discovers that big city life isn't so grand because weeds are high where corn don't grow.

When we ask God for something, we must be prepared to receive what he gives us in response. One author put it this way:

I asked for strength, God gave me difficulties to make me strong
I asked for wisdom and God gave me problems to solve.
I asked for riches and God gave me plenty of work to do
I asked for courage and God gave dangers to overcome
I asked for love and God gave me troubled people to help
I asked for favors and God gave me opportunities
I asked for power, that I might have the praise of others
I was given weakness, that I might feel the need of God.
I asked for all things, that I might enjoy life
I was given life, that I might enjoy all things.
I received nothing I wanted, but everything I needed.

As Christians, we know that our savior has promised to hear our prayer. We also know that when he answers, he will do so in a way that will be in our best interest. We have learned that instead of asking for what we want, that it is better to ask for what "he" wants and know that we'll want what he gives.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as explain the nature of the believer's ask/receive relationship with God.

Jesus told his disciples that if they continued to "abide" in him and allowed him to abide with them, then they could ask what they wanted and they would receive.

The Greek word for "Abide" in this text is "Meno". It has various meanings but generally means to "remain." Specifically it means to "remain as one, without a difference." When Christ used this word explaining the ask/receive relationship he noted that there should be no difference between his will and the believer's desire or his desire and the believers will. The believer loses himself completely in the will of God and there is no difference.

The second key word of this text is the phrase "ye will." The Greek phrase for "ye will" is "ethelo" which means to "have in mind" or an intention.

When the receive clause of this text is combined with the "ask" clause they seem to say, if a believer's desire is based on the beliefs, teachings and purpose of the savior then whatever he asks will be granted.

The secret of the text the believer knowing the will of God, adopting it as his own, then allow God to respond to their request in his way.

Why we don't want what we get!

Why is that sometimes we get what we pray for and then not want it? What is the reason? One of the main reasons is that we often forget what we ask for ultimately involves. If we change the arrangement of the universe in such a way nothing happens without affecting something else. Nothing exists independent and separate. Everything that exists is connected to something else. A believer who prays for a car may receive it. But the presence of the car changes that believer's arrangement in many ways, one is financially. With the new car comes a monthly note, insurance, gas, car washes, extended service contracts, parking fees and increased liability.

The same is true if a spouse becomes attracted to someone outside of the marriage and falls in love with them. That affair is going to affect a series of changes. It's not going to be confined to "A motel 6" mentality. Relationships with family will change, available time will change, attitude, energy, finances and spirituality will all be affected. We get what we want and usually find out that the affair cost us more than it was worth.

Because believers don't know the full impact of what a request will have on their lives, we trust God to only provide us with those things which will be to our benefit according to his will. He sees the big picture, we don't. Thus, whatever he provides, we are extremely grateful because we know it's connected to something up the road that will benefit us.

Getting what we want from God and then wanting what we get involves five steps

WE MUST ABIDE IN HIM: We must approach God as a partisan rather than as a mercenary. A mercenary approaches the army for pay. He works hard but without loyalty to a cause. He stops working the first time he misses a paycheck. A partisan joins an army because he believes in a cause, pay is secondary. So it is with Christ. Those who accept his cause, teachings, philosophy of life, and objectives are partisans. What they want is what he wants. All others are mercenaries, seeking to get what they want. Because partisans want what's best for the cause, that which they ask for will be granted. The first step to getting what we want is to make sure what we want is in line with the will of God.

WE MUST FORGIVE: We can't get what we want from God if there are people who have offended us in some way and we have not forgiven them. Many people love to read without reading the 25th verse. Mark 11:24-25 says, 11:24 "Therefore I say unto you, What things so ever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them. And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any: that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. If want a blessing, we should not expect to enjoy it, even if we get it by hook or crook, as until we have forgiven those who have injured us.

WE MUST BLESS OTHERS: We receive answered prayers because we share our blessings with others. Those who want to keep the blessing for themselves alone don't expect blessings. Proverbs 21:13 "If a man shuts his ears to the cry of the poor, he too will cry out and not be answered." That's a fact of life. God says if you pay no attention to other people's legitimate needs, why should He pay attention to your needs? Our prayer should be, "bless me Lord and return I will use my blessing to bless someone else."

WE MUST NOT DOUBT: The fourth condition for answered prayer is you must believe that God will answer. You can't doubt. You must expect God to answer. There's only one kind of prayer that God answers: the prayer of faith. Mark 9:29 says "According to your faith, it will be done unto you." God can bless us without faith, but we can speed up the process by the intensity of our faith. We receive blessings by the measure of our faith. A teaspoon of faith yields a teaspoon of blessing. A gallon of faith yields a gallon of blessing. No faith at all results in no prayer being asked at all, hence no answer.

WE MUST ASK IN JESUS' NAME: There is only one mediator between God and man and that is Jesus. Thus, all prayers are addressed to God, but are delivered through our mediator, Jesus. Thus believers read what the word says and tags their prayers, "In Jesus' name." John 14:13 "And I will do whatever you ask in My name so that the Son may bring glory to the Father. You may ask Me for anything in My name and I will do it." The fifth condition for answered prayer: You must pray in Jesus' name.

What in the world does it mean to pray "In Jesus' name?" What does it mean?

A father took his young son and about fourteen of his son's friends to the carnival for a birthday party. He bought a roll of tickets and he'd stand at the front of every ride and as the kids came by — his son and the fourteen friends — he gave everybody a ticket. He was just handing them out. All of a sudden he looked up and realized there was a little boy with his hand out asking for a ticket that he'd never seen in his life. He stopped and said, "Son, are you with my son's party?" No. "Why should I give you a ticket?" The young boy turned around and pointed to the man's son and said, "Your son said you'd give me one." The son waved his hand in the air and said, "Daddy he's alright!"

When we pray in Jesus' name, our Lord tells the father, "Daddy's he's alright!"

I don't know about your experience, but I found out that prayer changes things!

Prayer can take a seriously ill body and make it whole again!

Prayer can take your failures and turn them into victories!

Prayer can take your blunders and turn them into blessings!
Prayer can take your fears and turn them into confidences!
Prayer can take your stumbling blocks and turn them into stepping stones!
Prayer can take your weaknesses and turn them into strength!
Daniel will tell you that prayer is good for the Lion's den!
The Three Hebrew Boys will tell you that prayer, is good for the fiery furnace!
I know what prayer can do! I've tried it for myself!
In Jesus' name, burdens have been lifted!
In Jesus' name, finances have been restored!
In Jesus' name, wounds have been healed!
Jesus, who died out on Calvary!
Jesus, who arose early on Sunday morning!
Abide in him, trust in word, and ask what you will in Jesus' name and it shall be done!

Good To The Last Drop

SCRIPTURE: "And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; "Matthew 26:27

Introduction

Have you ever enjoyed something so much that you wanted more? There are some things in life that are so good that we just want more of them. We can't get enough, no matter how we try. These are the good things in life, the pleasant moments, the wonderful experiences and the grand times that seem too short. If it is an event the time flies quickly. If it is a consumable, it is gone before we even notice it. Vacations seem to end before they begin; honeymoons are too short; and a visit with a good friend flashes by so fast that we lose track of the time. Our natural tendency is to try to get all we can while we can; to milk the moment for everything we can get from it while the opportunity exists.

Maxwell House Coffee has a slogan that says, "Good to the last drops." It says that every drop of their coffee is good, down to the last drop.

When we think about life, there are some Maxwell House moments, when things are "good to the last drop."

A huge succulent, meaty neckbone is a tasty treat (Don't pretend you've never eaten a neckbone). To those who enjoy this treat it can bet so good that you find yourself breaking the bones and sucking them, trying to get to the last drop.

In rural areas of the nation folks once took a large bowl of collard or mustard greens and mashed corn bread in them. Although it was against every rule in the book of etiquette, they took their fingers and ate the greens. It was good! In fact, it was so good that when the greens and corn bread was gone, they licked their fingers! It was good to the last drop!

Watermelons grew on the vines in country fields. On occasion folks stumbled upon a juicy red one that seemed to be dripping with sweetness. Sometimes, if we were not careful we could eat all of the red meat then start scrapping the rhein. It was good to the last drop!

A good bowl of corn flakes can start a day just right. The cereal floats in milk and the taste is delicious. There are times when we have eaten all the cereal but there is still plenty of milk left. It tastes so good that we break every rule of etiquette as we pick up the bowl and drain it..to get to the last drop!

A good movie excites us. We sat on the edges of our seats during the show. But when it was a great show we sit as the names start to scroll across the screen and watch the outtakes and bloopers, listen to the sound track and enjoy it all because it was good to the last drop!

Those who read mystery, romance and science fiction novels have the same story to tell. A great novel is a page turner. You burn the late night oil turning page after page, absorbing the words, scenery, dialogue and drama. A great novel is read down to the last word. It was good to the last drop!

The Maxwell House moment is not unique to just coffee, it describes even our spiritual moments. There are times when the spirit is high that we simply want to freeze that moment forever. Peter, James and John were carried to the top of the Mount of Transfiguration and were shown the glories of heaven. They were so excited that they wanted to stay there. They asked to build three tabernacles so they could stay in the presence of the Lord. They delayed their stay as long as they could before returning, because it was good to the last drop.

On one occasion Jesus healed a man who had been a lunatic. After being healed, the man wanted to stay in Jesus' presence but had to be told that he should return home. Being in the presence of the Lord was so intense an experience that man wanted to stay as long as he could. It was good to the last drop.

As believers, we have come to appreciate every day and every situation as one that is blessed by the Lord. It is worthy of rejoicing and praising him and enjoying. It is good to the last drop!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he encourages his disciples to receive their spiritual destinies by drinking from the cup.

Jesus spent three years preparing his disciples for his death and resurrection as well as the difficulties that lay ahead for them. He often described their immediate future to them in terms of being persecuted, ridiculed ostracized and even hated. In all, he described their experience as their cup and the contents being their life experiences.

As he prepared for the eventual crucifixion that was coming he shared the last supper with them and told them to take the bread and wine and commemorate his life and legacy by sharing this supper as a memorial meal until he returns. We call this meal the "Lord's Supper." He elaborates on its meaning in Luke 22:20, "Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you." "After the same manner also he took the cup," we read in I Corinthians 11:25, "when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood. What Jesus seemed to say was, "Disciples, the cup of the Supper represents all that I have done to purchase your salvation upon the cross, you must continue to drink it." I Corinthians 11:26, "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come."

As he explained the elements he said the bread would represent his body and the wine would represent his blood which is shed for the remission of sins. He then gave them the cup and told them the words of this text "drink ye all of it."

The Greek word for "drink" in this context is "peno" which means to receive into the soul that which will nourish and strengthen it unto eternal life. In using the word "peno" Jesus went beyond the physical and plunged into the spiritual. He went beyond flesh and blood and delved into that which was even greater. He encouraged his disciples to receive the providence of God because it would strengthen them spiritually.

This did not imply that those who "drink" from the Lord's supper table receive special powers or dispensations. It means that those who drink from the Lord's table "receive" providence of God. That spirit of bowing to the will of God strengthens and empowers a believer spiritually.

Jesus made a special point to tell his disciples to drink "all" of the cup. That is to receive everything that is in God's providence for the them. Drink it all. If that providence included joy or sadness, receive it all. If it included success or failure, receive it all. If it included an easy road or a difficult road, receive it all.

Thus, when Jesus told his disciples to drink all of the cup, he told them to receive everything that God gives them with a humble spirit and they would be stronger for doing so.

The whole cup

To understand the full impact of Jesus' words on our lives, we must focus on our lives in the context of "all of it."

There was a time, before fancy coffee making machines that percolated coffee grounds could find their way into a good cup of coffee. We called them the dregs. They were not deadly, but they were definitely unsightly and distasteful. If a person drank the entire cup of coffee he often drank the dregs too!

That seems to be the message that Jesus'' words conveyed to his disciples when he said, "drink ye all of it!" Drink the parts of the cup you like and the parts that are dregs too! Together they will bring you to a point of salvation.

How do you approach your cup in life?

SIPPERS: There are many people who are sippers. A sipper is a person who drinks the contents of his cup in small quantities. Sippers pace themselves, they take their time. In life, the sipper takes one day at a time, experiencing life as it comes. The sipper seems to agree with David when he said, "This is the day the Lord has made, I will rejoice and be glad in it!" No matter how much we have to do in every week, we can only live one day at a time. Those who have learned to "sip" are those who drink the whole cup by gracefully internalizing each day and each experience.

GULPERS: In contrast to the sippers, there are those who are gulpers. The gulpers are those who drink large quantities quickly. Whereas a sipper paces himself, a gulper attempts to drink as much as he can as fast as he can. That is the approach that many have about life. They attempt to do as much as they can in the shortest amount of time. They gulp. A person who gulps gets his drink or food down, but often misses the taste. Psalm 34:8 encourages us to take time to taste the blessings of the lord, "O taste and see that the LORD is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him" When we live too fast, it all passes us by. We build a nice home but never enjoy it. We have a beautiful family but rarely spend time with them. We work hard and earn plenty of money, but we are so busy that we can't enjoy what it buys. Gulping robs us of the opportunity to enjoy the taste of the cup.

SLURPERS: Those who slurp, drink from the cup but they do so with a loud noise. The slurper attracts attention to himself often to the point of disturbing others. There are many who enjoy life but in the course of their enjoyment disturb the peace and serenity of others. It's like those who enjoy their music but don't care in the slightest if their 20" inch woofers are blaring so loudly in their cars that they cause the walls to shake in the homes they pass. There are many who live noisily, the live loud, attract inordinate attention and often disturb others. Just as it is uncomfortable eating at the table with a slurper, it is also uncomfortable trying to live with a slurper. The word encourages us to be modest in all of our endeavors.Avoid slurping.

How Do You Take It?

Finally brothers and sisters, when Jesus urged his disciples to "drink ye all of it" he encouraged them to accept life as God gives it to them.

There are many that cannot drink their cup in life unless they can have it the way they want it.

Jesus says, "Drink ye all of it" and they say, "Lord I can't take it black, I got to have a little cream to make it lighter!"

When the Lord tells us to go through life, he knows there are times when you can't take it black.

These are the times when despair is all around and clouds over spread the sky!

These are the times when troubles seem to multiply and moans come double!

Yet these are the times when the Lord comes to remind us that weeping endures but a night but joy comes in the morning. It may seem dark, but there is a bright side somewhere!

Jesus says, "Drink ye all of it" but there are some who say, "Lord, I can't take it without a little sugar!

When the Lord tells us to go through life, he knows there are times when we can't take it without a little sugar!"

There are times when life gets, bitter but Lord knows just how much sugar to add to make it alright.

Only people who know you well can fix your coffee. They know how much cream you want or whether you want cream at all. They know how much sugar you want, or whether you want sugar at all.

Too much sugar can mess up a good cup!

When Jesus said, "drink ye all of it!" He said it from the standpoint of someone who knows us!

David said he knows our downsitting and our uprising! He knows the thoughts of our minds before we think them!

He knows how much cream you need to make your days brighter. He knows how much sugar you need to get through each day!

Maybe that's why the song writer says, "We are our heavenly father's children.. and he knows just how much we can bear!"

When things get dark he knows how much lighter things need to be. That's why David declared, "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear. The Lord is the strength of my life of whom shall I be afraid?"

When days get a little bitter he knows how much sweetness to add. The song writer said, "Every day with Jesus is sweeter than the day before!"

I heard another song writer say, "He's sweet I know. He's sweet I know. Dark clouds my rise and storms may blow but he's sweet I know!"

I see Jesus in the garden talking to his father!

Father you have given me a strong cup that is black. I don't like it black.

If I take it black, it's going to be strong!

If I take it black, they are going to persecute me!

If I take it black, they are going to beat me and persecute me!

I don't like it black, but nevertheless, not my will but thy will be done!

He drank his bitter cup and died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hand!

If you think your troubles are too difficult to be solved, wake up and smell the coffee!

If you think your burdens are too heavy, wake up and smell the coffee!

His blood has been shed for you!

And it's good to the last drop!

A Generation Without God?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 27, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "All that generation also were gathered to their fathers; and there arose another generation after them who did not know the LORD, nor yet the work which He had done for Israel. {11} Then the sons of Israel did evil in the sight of the LORD and served the Baals..." Judges2:10-11

Introduction

Is it possible to live with someone everyday and not know them? Is it possible to live in a family and the family members not know each other? Each day we interact with people at work, school or in the general community, but we don't really know them! Of course we know their names. We may know a tidbit or two about their background. We may even know a few facts about their hobbies and the names of a few of their family members, but does that mean we know them? There are many homes today in which family members do not know each other. Often children know more about their parents than their parents know about them. There are many children today who are growing up in families without really knowing their parents. They live in the same house but it may as well be a separate world because they close themselves in their rooms and shut out the rest of the family with the glare of the television set or the muffle sounds of a set of stereo headphones. It's a rapidly growing phenomenon of the modern evolving family where each member becomes accustomed to living with "strangers in the house."

How well do you "know" the members of your family? Not just their names, mind you, but how well do you really "know" them?

The old timers gave us a measuring stick to determine whether we know a person.

1) We know a person when we know the path he has walked to get to where he is? Knowing a person's history is the first step to really knowing them. Their history explains many things about them. It explains why they do what they do and why they "do not' as well.

2) We know a person when we know what makes them happy and have seen them happy. When we know these truths about people we know the situations they will enjoy, the books they read, the movies they watch and the kinds of circumstances that bring them joy.

3) We know a person when we know what makes them sad and we have seen them cry. No matter how strong the person, each person has a "cry" level. We know a person when we know the kinds of things that will sadden them. That's when we know the situations, events or words that will bring tears to their eyes. We really know them when we have seen them cry.

4) We know a person when we know what makes them angry and we have seen them tremendously upset. A telltale aspect of any personality is their ability to handle their anger. How do they manage their anger? Are they violent? Do they yell? Are they destructive? Do they curse and swear? Do they get drunk? We really know a person when we have seen them tremendously angry and observed their response.

5) We know a person when we know how they respond to success or failure. Often the strongest and most positive personalities we know become weak and bitter when they fail. We don't know anyone until we have seen them fail. That's when we understand their nature better. Likewise, we know them when we see what happens when they succeed. Success for some is an intoxicant. For others, success is incidental. We know a person when we see them succeed.

6) We know a person when know how the importance they place upon their word. That's when we know whether a person can be counted upon to do what they have said they will do. The valuable of a man's word, is one identifying trait of his character. It identifies his truthfulness, dependability and reliability. You don't know a person until you know the value of their word.

Having made these six points, the question is asked again: "Is it possible to live in the same house with a person and not know them?" The answer is yes!

There are some parents who do not know their children. There are some children who do not know their parents. There are some husbands who do not know their wives. And there are some shacking partners who do not know each other at all.

If that's possible, then it is also possible for a generation of believers not to really know "God." It's possible for us to be in his presence daily and not know the history of his dealings with us or to know what makes him happy or angry, or to know the value of his promises to us. It's possible to come to church every Sunday and call yourself a church member and not really "know" God.

Every generation must learn to know God for themselves. It is the knowledge of God and how he operates in the lives of believers and on the universal sphere of life that helps us to appreciate all that he does for us. Knowing God gives the world sanity and a sense of purpose. Not knowing God is frustrating, troubling and destructive.

As believers we strive to know God for ourselves. Beyond that, we strive to make sure that each generation that follows us knows God as well, because without him we can do nothing. Without him we'd surely fail. Without him our lives would be drifting, like a ship without a sail.

Exposition

This text focuses on Israel's lack of knowledge of God after the death of Joshua.

Joshua carried on the traditions and teachings of Moses for a generation. At the age of 110, Joshua died having successfully brought Israel into the promised land.

However, once in the promised land their actions changed tremendously. They began to familiarize themselves with the habits and practices of the Canaanites and their knowledge of God grew even less.

In the wilderness, Israel was completely dependent upon God. In the promised land they became completely depended upon the idol gods of the area. They began to worship a series of idol gods called "Baals" and Ashtaroths. Baal was a male god. Ashtaroth was a female god. These were fertility gods. How could a people who have been nurtured in the hand of God for generations and who, in their own life times, found themselves the beneficiaries of God's blessings, end up worshipping idol Gods? They knew it was wrong! They knew the ten commandments, but they worshipped idol gods anyway! How could this be?

They had been farmers in Egypt where irrigation was a means of watering the land, so they weren't accustomed to dry land farming. They didn't know quite how to handle the crops nor what to do. When their crops came up the first spring, they were of rather poor quality and straggly. In contrast, the Canaanite tribes had wonderful fields of grain. The Israelites asked: "Well, what do you do? What is your secret?" The Canaanites said, "It is very simple. We have certain fertility gods and we bow down to them and offer them sacrifices. Then they bless our crops. If you ever expect to get abundant crops in this land you are going to have to adjust to our ways." Of course, along with this advice the Canaanites taught them how to plant their crops properly, how to fertilize the soil and so forth, so that next spring, sure enough, after they had bowed down to the gods of the Canaanites, they found the crops were wonderful. The Israelites said, "There must be something to this fertility business. We'd better worship these gods after all." They forsook the God of Israel and bowed down to the Baals and Ashtaroths. Now, what is not recorded here is that these were sex gods and worshipping them involved not only bowing down before dumb idols that could not speak, act or think, but also involved the Israelites in licentious practices. Thus, they gradually drifted off into idolatry.

The book of Judges records what happened to a generation of people who were familiar with but did not know God. Their allegiances, spare time, practical faith and goals were all related to idol based worship and orientations of the Cannanites. Because they did not "know" God they were easily drawn into a world that caused them trouble, loss of glory and power and diminished capacity. The mighty people who once crossed the Red Sea and marched around the walls of Jericho until they fell, were reduced to human chattel; a little more than slaves but far less than their best.

It all happened because a generation grew up that did not "know" God.

Families Need a Sense of godliness

If there is a lesson to learn from observing and studying the Israelites in Canaan it would be that families should become better acquainted with the tie that binds them. After Joshua's generation died off, another generation came along after them, "who did not know the Lord, nor yet the work which He had done for Israel" (2:10). Certainly, we've already seen that Joshua's generation clearly disobeyed the Lord. But at least they were a generation that had heard the word of the Lord through Joshua. They were lazy and disobedient, but they knew the God Joshua was talking about. There was a standard. They knew the rules. And, our text says, Joshua's generation knew the works God had done in the past. They had some sort of heritage. They had some sense of identity of being God's chosen people. They knew they had been delivered from their enemies by God Himself. They knew because Joshua made sure they knew. Read his speeches to the people. He constantly told them of the blessing of God upon their lives.

There are several truths that every family must know about itself.

KNOW HOW GOD HAS MOVED IN YOUR FAMILY: Each believing family should make sure every family member knows how God works his will in your family. God does not work with individual's alone. He moves through entire families to accomplish his will. Certain gifts are bestowed upon families of believers to accomplish his will. Just as there were families of doorkeepers, singers and priests in bible times, there are families of educators, engineers, missionaries, mechanics, leaders, soldiers, etc. Every family member should know the lives of its patriarchs and matriarchs to discover the purpose God uses your family to accomplish.

KNOW THE MISTAKES OF YOUR FAMILY: Each family member has a story. Family members need to know the history of its members. We need to know about our family successes and what we did when we succeeded. Those times when we failed, what did we do? When we suffered, how did we overcome? What mistakes have we made as a family? Does our family history show us that we could have done better if we had avoided certain paths? As a family, what have we learned from our mistakes? When families explore their history and dissect their strengths and weaknesses, it brings great strength and a sense of purpose to young lives

KNOW YOUR FAMILY'S RESPONSE TO ITS MISSION: Every family that has been equipped for a mission has responded to their mission. While there are entire families that have chosen to use their gifts for the betterment of the kingdom of God, there are others that have used them for themselves and have neglected God altogether, not to mention of the kingdom of God. Many families have responded to God in a positive way, using their family gifts in a way that glorifies God and builds the kingdom of God in a grand way. Each family member should be familiar with God and the history of its family's response to God.

Know God for yourself

Finally, brothers and sisters, not only must we know how God operates in our family, but you must know God for yourself.

It will be dangerous if we ever reach the point that there is a generation that does not know the Lord!

When Israel reached the promised land they were more prosperous than they had ever been, but there grew up a generation did not know the Lord!

They had better crops than they had ever had before, but there grew up a generation that knew not the Lord!

They were living better than they had ever lived before, but there grew up a generation that knew not the Lord!

Every family must teach its children about the goodness of the Lord.

When Israel crossed over the River Jordan, Joshua ordered 12 stones to be erected as a memorial. Every succeeding generation would ask, "What mean these stones?" At that time Joshua said the people should tell the story of how God brought us over on dry land?

I'm reminded of three daughters who were raised by their grandmother. They had become successful in life, but they never went to church or took religion seriously. They decided to buy their grandmother a gift for her 75th birthday. When she opened the box the grandmother saw a beautiful and expensive reading bible. It's pages were made of the finest onion skin. It had ribbon of pure silk for a page marker. Her name was engraved on the cover in 14 carat gold. It's cover was made from the smoothest calfskin. It was an expense bible that came with an hard leather carrying case speckles with the name "Holy Bible" on the outside in scores of small diamonds. That grandmother thanked her daughters for the gift, but a few hours later they saw her sitting in her chair reading her old family bible. The girls asked, "Why are you still reading that old bible?" Grandma said, "When you were young, we didn't have much, but I opened this old bible and read, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want! When your mama died of the plague, I read in this old bible, "Yea thou I walk through valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil. When the flood came in 51 and destroyed everything we had but this old bible, its pages was opened to these words, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord!" Grandma said, "Your bible is pretty, but this bible has a story tell. Your bible can't tell my story!"

I've got to tell the story of how we were down and out, and God picked us up and turned us around!

I've got to tell the story of how God healed our sick and open the blind eyes of lost family members!

I've got to tell the story of how he planted our feet on solid ground

I've got to tell the story about Jesus!

.How he died out on Calvary!

-How early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

I've got to tell somebody!

I've got to tell somebody!

Recovering Fumbles

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 3, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." Psalm 51:10

Introduction

Have you ever messed up a good thing? Every now and then each of us gets a golden opportunity that probably won't be repeated to frequently. Sometimes the opportunity involves a career opportunity. Sometimes it's a quest for a higher education. There are times when our "good thing" is a caring husband or a loving wife. It could even be a nice car, job and bright prospects for promotion. Whatever happens to be our particular "good thing" -some of us can recall a time or two when we really messed up and lost or nearly lost our "good thing."

Many years ago the blues singer Etta James wrote a song about a man who had a loving and devoted wife but he was never there for him. While she did everything to please him, he was always somewhere else. When the wife decided to leave him, Etta James sang the words of the song's title, "Your good thing is about to come to an end."

We can all relate to Etta James' words. At some point in our lives, we seen a good thing or too, slip right through our fingers.

The child who has a comfortable room with video games, designer clothes and the best of everything has a "good thing." But when attitudes, low grades or back talk cause these things to be taken away, parents sing that song, "Your good thing is about to come to end."

The wife who has a husband who works himself to the bone to provide for her every need, keeps her looking good with money in her purse and with a nice set of wheels to ride in has a "good thing." But if that wife is unfaithful or takes her husband for granted, he may sing, "Your good thing is about to come to an end."

The same is true for husbands who have those perfect wives who somehow manage to balance a career, rear children and make them feel like a king. Such men have "good things." When husbands take their "good things" for granted there are some wives who will quickly sing the words, "Your good thing is about to come to an end."

When we mess up, we fumble! Like a football player who had the ball in his hands with a golden opportunity to capitalize on a possession and score, we are miserable when we fumble and drop the ball

Fumbles are costly. Depending on the situation at the time of the fumble, they can be devastating, especially in an important game.

Just as winning is a part of life, fumbles also a part of life. The greatest baseball players were also known for a large number of strike outs. The record books show that some of the greatest basketball scoring aces missed more baskets than they scored.

Each time there is a super bowl we remember the big plays, but there has rarely been a game where there were no fumbles; they seemed to come at the worse moments and caused so much trouble.

While the great players messed up good things by fumbling, the record also showed that what made these players great was there ability to recover some their own fumbles and go on to win their games.

In 1996 Tony Banks of St. Louis had the distinction of having the most fumbles, 21, in a single season. He was able to recover 8 of his own fumbles.

Warren Moon made the history books in football for making the most fumbles in a career with 160 fumbles. His career lasted from 1984 to 1998 and spanned three teams including Houston, Minnesota and Seattle. It wasn't all bad though because 55 of those fumbles he recovered. Following close behind Moon is David Krieg with 153 fumbles over his 18 year career with Seattle, Kansas City, Detroit, Arizona, Chicago and Tennessee. He recovered 47 of his own fumbles.

Both of these men are icons in football history. They are known for their successes, but football history also shows that both men have set records for the most fumbles made and most fumbles recovered.- mostly their own.

Is it possible that we have fumbled the ball in one or more of our relationships? Is everything all right at home? At Work? What about our relationship with God? Are we holding on or have we fumbled the ball?

Fumble recovery is specialty of Holy Ghost. He spends a great deal of time drilling every believer on the importance of holding on to the ball. However, just like every good coach, the Holy Ghost also teaches us how to get the ball back and how to get over the mental anguish associated with fumbling.

As believers, we have learned that while it is human to fumble and mess up a good thing, only the divine can give it back to us. Since God is a forgiving and merciful God, no matter how bad we mess up, we can recover our fumble!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he asks God to restore the joy of good relations with God. This psalm is the result of an instance in David's life which he made a major error despite being given a golden opportunity. The inscription of the psalm reads, "A Psalm of David when Nathan the prophet came to him, after he had gone in to Bathsheba."

David enjoyed a grand opportunity during his 40 year reign as King of united Judah and Israel. He raised the worship of God to a high standard and brought peace to the land. He was, by any standard, a successful king. However, in the midst of this prosperity David fumbled the ball. He became involved in the double sin of adultery and murder while he was king.

. The story of David's fumble has been told so many times it has become legendary. He was on his palace roof one day when the army had gone out to battle and he saw a beautiful woman bathing herself. He entered into an adulterous relationship with her for she was a married woman. Her husband, Uriah, was a soldier in the king's army. He was away from home fighting for his nation.

A love child was conceived in the relationship and David panicked and tried to cover it up. He ordered Uriah home from battle and sent him home, hoping that he would sleep with his wife and the child would then be accepted as his own. But Uriah was a soldier, committed to battle, and though he came home would not go home to his wife because he felt it unfair to that he should get to go home and not the other men in his company.

To cover his sin, David ordered Uriah to be put in the forefront of the battle where he would most certainly be killed. When news of Uriah's death reached the king he felt he had safely covered his sin. In Psalm 32 David records how he felt during that terrible time when he was trying to cover up his sin. "When I kept silence," he says, "my bones grew old through my groaning all day long. For a year he tried to live with a bad conscience. But, as the story records, God sent a prophet to David. God loved this king, loved him too well to let him go on covering up and thus damaging himself and his entire kingdom by this hidden sin. So God sent the prophet Nathan to David.

Nathan approached David in a way that he could not deny and singled him out as the man responsible for both adultery and murder. In a prophetic moment the prophet Nathan pointed a finger at the king and said, "Thou art the man!" David knew then that his sin was uncovered.

At this point David recognized for sure that he had fumbled. He fell on his face before God and out of his remorse came the fifty-first Psalm. It gives other believers a game plan for recovering a fumble in life, which is to seek forgiveness from God.

What Causes Fumbles

A fumble can only occur unless someone has possession of the ball. If believer's fumble an opportunity, it means that they at least had possession of the opportunity. It is not a case of a blessing being sought, but rather a blessing possessed then lost.

John Milton wrote a ten volume poem called "Paradise Lost" as he attempted to describe the life long fall from grace of man from the presence of God. Whether it is Adam and Eve fumbling a golden opportunity in Eden or Moses fumbling as he took credit for providing water to thirsty people, the reasons for the loss of "paradise" are varied.

WE SOMETIMES DROP THE BALL: There are times when we lose golden opportunities because we "drop the ball." There is no other reason. We had it in our hands and dropped it. That's what the prodigal son realized after he wasted his inheritance on riotous living. There, standing over a hog trough, he realized that he had dropped the ball. There was no one else to blame but himself. Because believer's are human, bad judgment is a flaw that will always be present. Despite our knowledge and experience, we often make bad judgment calls in the heat of the moment. That's one reason the Word teaches us to always be ready for reconciliation or ready to forgive someone who has offended us. It acknowledges the undeniable truth that while executing the most well thought out play, that even the best players can drop the ball. Thus, the prodigal said, "I have sinned before God and before thee."

SOMETIMES FUMBLES ARE FORCED: Sometimes an opponent can force a fumble. They can execute a blitz and hit us in a way that causes us to fumble. It must be a horrible feeling to be a quarterback on a team and see 300 pound defenders attacking from all sides. Sometimes when everything hits at the same time a fumble occurs. 1 Peter 5:8 warns believers about the devil's blitz when it says, "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour:" That's a fancy way of saying the devil is looking for an opportunity to force a fumble in your career, family, or spiritual life. He's not just waiting, he's seeking someone to utterly destroy.

When a believer is winning the game of life, the only chance the devil has is to force a fumble. Aware of that, every believer should be extremely vigilant to make sure that he holds onto the ball. Even though he may be hit from every side, hold on to the ball. Defenders may pile up on top of you and crush you, but hold on to the ball!

SOMETIMES FUMBLES RESULT IN TURNOVERS: The worse case scenario for a fumbled opportunity is to see your opponents capitalize on your fumble. A turnover occurs when we drop the ball and our opponents recover our loss. Fumbles can be costly. Jesus told the parable of several men who were given talents and told to use them in a way that would make the master proud. In the end one of the men failed to use his talent and buried it. That was a fumble. The master took his talent and gave it to someone that would use it. In a similar sense, fumbles can result in turnovers in life. Opportunities and "good things" that should have been ours can easily fall in the hands of others, for the simple reason that we fumbled the ball. We had it but could not hold on to it. Every year there are literally millions of people who watch their opportunities blossom in the hands of someone else. They fumble a project at work and someone else received the promotion. Even worse they fumbled a marriage and someone else is enjoying the happy relationship that could have been theirs.

Recovering Fumbles

Finally brothers and Sisters, we have seen the different ways that we can fumble the ball. We have seen how the ball can be dropped or taken from us and prompt turnovers. But we need to remember one final thing today, and that's how to recover our own fumbles.

We may drop the ball, but the enemy doesn't get possession of our blessing, if we know how to recover our own fumble.

We have may mess up an opportunity, but all is not loss, if we can recover our own fumble.

If we look closely at David's actions after he fumbled we'll find the secret to how to recover our own fumble.

David showed us a two fold fumble recovery plan that worked for him and will work for every believer.

David's first step was to ask God to give him a clean heart.

He's said "Lord, create in me a clean heart!"

A clean heart means to get rid of anything that would not be pure!

"If I have fumbled because my heart's not right, then give me a brand new heart."

"If I have fumbled because I hate somebody, then take my hate and turn it into love"

"If I have fumbled because I hold a grudge against someone, then take my grudge and give me reconciliation."

"If I have fumbled because I have an impure motive for my action, then take away my impurities give me a divinely inspired motivation."

"If I have fumbled because I have not shown mercy, then take away my vicious spirit and replace it with mercy and compassion!"

I'd like to believe that when David asked the Lord for a clean heart that God reached down and took all of his sins and guilt and washed it white as snow.

That's what Paul meant in 1 Corinthians 6:11 when he said, "And such were some of you, but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God."

The second step that David implemented to recover from his fumble was to change his attitude and spirit. He asked the Lord to "renew in me a right spirit."

To renew means to start all over again.

There are many believers who began their Christian journey with a right spirit. They were dedicated toward the mission, but somewhere along the way they adopted a different attitude or a wrong spirit. David decided that simply getting a clean heart was not enough, he needed to go back to the point where his spirit was with the Lord!

Take, me back to the point where I found joy in my relationship to God!

Take me back to the point when I was enthused about worship and studying my bible!

Take me back to the point when I was willing to give my life on the altar of sacrifice!

That's what the song writer had in mind when he wrote, "Take me back! Take me back dear Lord, to the place where I first received you. Take me back, take me back dear Lord, to where I first believed!"

I heard the song writer declare, "I'm not asking for the riches of the land. I'm not asking for all men to know my name, but give me Lord a clean heart, and I will follow thee!"

If you want to recover your own fumble, ask the Lord to give you one more chance!

The game is not over because you fumbled the ball, because we serve a God of the second chance!

The Lord will give you a second chance!

He'll pick you up and turn you around! He'll plant your feet on solid ground!

Call on Jesus!

He died out on Calvary for you!

Call on Jesus!

He arose from the dead for you!

If you fumble the ball in life, he'll give you a second chance!

*SCRIPTURE:These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so. Acts 17:12 Therefore many of them believed; also of honorable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few. Acts 17:11

Introduction

Have you ever read the biographies of great people? One of the most interesting undertakings is to research the struggle of many of the world's greatest people to rise against expectations and succeed. We see them today as they bask in the glory of triumph, achieving acclaim in various walks of life, without really knowing the whole story. This is very true with respect to the accomplishments of women in general and African-American women specifically. Each generation of women achievers stands on the shoulders of others who have blazed trails and opened the doors of opportunity. We don't know the stories of many of these great women, but we know that for every woman that succeeds today there was another woman before her that brought the entire gender closer to achieving the ideal.

African-American women share a sense of sisterhood that has been created in the womb of oppression and difficulty. This sisterhood extends beyond the present and blurs the lines that divide time and space as it plunges every generation into a perfect union.

The sisterhood of African-American women is tinged with empathy. It is real and has its roots in the soul. Not all sisters share empathy for each other. I'm reminded of the rich woman who lived in a certain city who never gave to the United Way, despite having made millions in the local community. A local volunteer called to solicit the donation, saying "our research shows that you are one of three sisters who were born in this city. Of your sisters, you became wealthy with an income of over a million dollars. However, our research shows that you do not give one penny to charity! Wouldn't you like to give back to your community? The sister thought for a moment and said: "First, did your research show that my mother is dying after a long, painful illness and has huge medical bills far beyond her ability to pay?" Embarrassed, the United Way rep mumbles, "Uh, no." "Secondly, that one of my sisters, is disabled , blind and confined to a wheelchair and is unable to support her six children?" The stricken United Way rep begins to stammer an apology but is cut off. "Thirdly, that another of my sister's husband died in a dreadful traffic accident leaving her penniless with a mortgage and three children?" The humiliated United Way rep, completely beaten, says simply, "I had no idea."

Then the sister said, "...and if I didn't give my mother and my sisters any money, why should I give any to you?" Not everyone Sister acts like a sister.

We call a person a "sister" who has an affinity and connection with our heritage of struggle. Though ebonics has changed both the spelling and the pronunciation, sister and "sistah" both have the same cultural meaning: women who are connected by heritage and struggle.

An ancestor is a person from whom one is descended, especially if that person is more remote than a grandparent. Ancestors are the source of our inheritance whether it be in real property, intellectual or biological. Ancestors make up the sum total of stock from which we are derived.

Then what are "ansistahs?" They are sistahs (sisters) who have served as the forebears of the present generation. They are the women from whom we are descended, beyond our grand mothers. These are the women who are the source of our inheritance whether it be real property, intellect or genetics. They make up the sum total of the stock from which the present generation derives its strength.

They are the ones that Carol Bernard wrote about in 1999 in her work, "A Sistah's Pledge" in which she said,

"I am an expression of God's handiwork, therefore I must love and respect my total being"

"I will use my eyes to see all the possibilities God has for me."

"I will use my ears to hear all that affirms my beauty, my potential and my possibilities."

"I will use my hands to work for the betterment of myself, my family, my community, and my country."

"I will use my voice to speak words of wisdom, so that I might help others to realize their true greatness."

"My feet stand on the shoulders of my ansistahs who have gone before me"

Ansistahs are the ancestors of the female gender who blazed the trails before there were roads and highways. Ansistahs are those women of color who marched forward into the face of the unknown to make it known.

For every sistah that is achieving today there is an ansistah.

For every Alice Walker today, there is a Phyliss Wheatley the first published African-American poet

For every Venus and Serena Williams today, there is an Althea Gibson the Wimbledon doubles champion of 1957.

For every Lauryn Hill and Lil Kim today, there is a Queen Latifah.

For every Etta James today, there is Bessie Smith queen of the blues.

For every Halle Berry today, there is a Hattie McDaniel of Gone with the Wind and Ethel Waters, pioneers of the silver screen.

For every Condeneeza Rice today, there is a Shirley Chisolm or Harriet Tubman walking the halls of government

For every Ophrah Winfrey there is a Madam C. J. Walker who became the first Black female business millionaire.

For every Janet Jackson today, there is a Billie Holiday on the sound stage.

For every Dinah Ross today, there is a Dorothy Dandridge.

Today, women who serve honorably in their communities owe a debt of gratitude to their ansistahs who dared the forbidden and created opportunities.

Today, there are millions of Christian "sistahs" who have spiritual ansistahs as well. These are the women who served as spiritual examples of commitment to God and service to their fellowmen. Every Christian sistah has a heritage of hope and honor that is derived from faith in God. Embedded in the life stories of their ansistah's is the story of how God moved in the lives of our ansistahs to create a better day.

As Christians, we thank God for our sistahs and our ansistah's. Together they have shown the world the path to living faith-based lives that are filled with hope strength through the power of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's conversion of many honorable women on his second missionary journey.

Paul made three missionary treks throughout the known world of his time. In each of his journeys he established churches in the homes of those who believed his preaching and wrote to them regularly to keep the faith burning in them.

In the early beginnings of the church Paul always found many women among the first believers. In Thyatira, there was Lydia, a seller of purple (Acts 16:14). In Thessalonica, there were many women that came forth (17:4) and Berea even more women (17:12);and even when others mocked him there were some who remained faithful. One woman named Demarius is named in Acts 17:34.

Without a doubt, women were among the trail blazers and pioneers of the church. Paul referred to these women as honorable. The Greek word translated "honorable" is euschemon {yoo-skhay'-mone} it means, "respectable, influential, of good standing."

These women were among the proselytes who studied the word of God. Paul used the known scriptures to convince them that Jesus was the fulfillment of promises made by God in Old Testament times. The men and women searched the scriptures daily with an open mind to verify Paul's words. They concluded that he was right and believed on Jesus Christ.

The first followers in every city were the founders of the church in their respective cities. They were the ancestors of millions that would follow in succeeding centuries. The women who followed Paul in Thessalonica and Berea were the spiritual ancestors of many women that would follow in the succeeding centuries. They worshipped often under the threat of their lives and property. Many died for the cause of Christ

Today, African-American women should follow the trail of Godly women who lived with honor and dignity and struggled in hope.

The record of African-American Ansistahs is long and glorious and deserves the study of those who begin the walk themselves.

Every woman who begins a walk down a career path should be able to recognize the foot print of the persons who have blazed the trail.

Those who were successful all had something in common. Paul called it "honor" which meant to him that they lived godly lives, kept their word, and gave service to others.

If this generation gains anything from the study of its ansistahs, it should seek to learn how they prepared themselves, how they overcame obstacles, and how they played the game.

PREPARATION: Women like all others, must be prepared. Gone are the days when it was believed that learning was a man's pursuit because a woman's place is confined to a dish pan and a wash pot. Women of the past learned what was required to compete in their generation. They learned to read and write. In other times they learned to type on typewriters and to operate machinery. Likewise, women must prepare themselves for the challenges of the 21st century which means acquiring verbal and language skills and a proficient use of technology. A woman who has no email address has stamped a date on her preparation that flashes "smart but out of touch." Despite her resume, she presents herself as one who is not prepared to transact business in the mode of this generation. To be women of honor, women must prepare.

STRUGGLE: Women must be prepared to struggle. To paraphrase Frederick Douglass, success cannot come without a struggle. The person who wants success without struggle is like the farmer who wants rain, but does not want the thunder and the lightning associated with rain. The women of our history have shown a unique willingness to struggle. Whether it was the slave mother who labored to protect her children and women who defied laws of segregation as they worked to change social circumstances. Today's women should study the struggles of their career path ansistahs. What obstacles did they meet? How did they overcome them? Such study allows this generation to expect a struggle and to prepare themselves to overcome.

PLAYED THE GAME: Women must play the game with dignity and grace. That is what is learned when we study the record of our ansistahs. They were able to maintain amazing dignity about themselves, despite adverse circumstances. Our ansistahs may have lived in shanty houses with wooden floors, but those floors were kept clean and spotless. They may have worn dresses woven from flower sacks, but they were always neat and clean. The way a woman carries herself is the way she plays the game. The world is wary of the woman that cusses like a sailor and walks like a cowboy. Moreover, the woman who strives to honor her word, care for her family and be true to her husband or vow of celibacy is deemed a woman of honor by the general community. She is revered because of the way she plays the game..

Spiritual Ansistahs

Finally, we must follow the path of our spiritual ansistahs.

Our spiritual ansistahs are those women of faith who answered the question, "What doth the Lord require of us" by giving themselves to his service.

The trail of our spiritual ansistahs is long and clear.

If we follow the trail of Hannah it will find her telling the Lord to take her child and raise him in his courts.

If we follow the trail of Ruth, we'll hear her say, "You people shall be my people and my God shall be your God"

If we follow the trail of the woman at the well, we'll hear her say, "Come see a man" who told me all I've ever done.

Our ansistahs have made it clear that following the Lord is a rewarding experience. Because when you follow the Lord you have somebody who can help you:

-carry your burdens
-face your future
-fulfill your responsibilities
-fight your battles
-solve your problems
-overcome your temptations

What doth the Lord require of us? That we worship him! We should worship him with the:

-spirit of Mary of Bethany
-power and strength of Deborah
-grateful and humble heart of Mary Magdalene
-faith of Ruth and the enduring hope of Rahab

What doth the Lord require? That we live for him everyday and every hour!

Dr. Watts declares "A charge to keep I have, a God to glorify. An ever dying soul to save to fit it for the sky."

What does the Lord require? That we love our neighbor as we love ourselves!

What does the Lord require? That we tell the world of the goodness of the Lord!

I must tell of the goodness of the Lord!

I must tell them how he touched my life one day, picked me up and turned me around.

I must tell them how he picked up an old rugged cross and carried it up Golgotha's hill!

I must tell them that he died for me..

But early Sunday morning ...

He arose with all power in his hands!

SCRIPTURE: " And they shall mock him, and shall scourge him, and shall spit upon him, and shall kill him: and the third day he shall rise again. And James and John, the sons of Zebedee, come unto him, saying, Master, we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire. And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you? They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory." Mark 10:34-37; "But Jesus called them to him, and saith unto them, Ye know that they which are accounted to rule over the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and their great ones exercise authority upon them. But so shall it not be among you: but whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister: And whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all." Mark 10:42-44.

Introduction

Have you ever dreamed of being a member of the Hall of Fame? Nearly every area of interest imaginable has a hall of fame. There is a hall of fame for Baseball, football, Negro League baseball, Rock and Roll, Country Music and many more. You name the area of endeavor and there is a "hall of fame." In Hollywood there is even a "Walk of Fame" which features stars on the sidewalk of the streets for actors who have left their footprints in the entertainment business trail of glory. Those who are inducted into the "Hall of Fame" are those who are recognized by their peers for their excellence and achievement. These are people whose accomplishments are a part of our history. They are being lifted up as the greatest because of their work. Those who are selected for this honor deserve the praise and their place in the hall of fame.,

You name the game and there is a hall of fame. The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame includes the greats of Rock and Roll from Louis Armstrong to Aretha Franklin, Elvis Presley and Micheal Jackson. Johnny Unitas, Y.A. Tittle, Joe Namath and Jim Kelly are all members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Hank Aaron are members of the Baseball Hall of Fame. There is a Pro Hockey Hall of Fame, Bowling Hall of Fame, Figure Skaters Hall of Fame and even a Cow Girl's Hall of Fame. If that surprises you then you'll really be surprised to know that there is a Tobacco Spitting Hall of Fame too.

Amazingingly, a person does not have to be dead to be a member of the Hall of Fame they do not have to be old either. The National Kids Hall of Fame celebrates youth who are making a difference and leaving their footprints for others to follow. Youth such as Shelarese Ruffin of Atlanta, who at age 15 decided she wanted to do something that would help give troubled kids a second chance. As she researched the issue and discussed it with others, Shelarese began to formulate a concept for a program that would appeal to at-risk teens and effectively address their problems, through both individual attention and group interaction.

She began developing an intervention program that enables middle and high school students to confront and overcome drug and other discipline problems instead of being expelled from school. She focused on the issue, brought in professionals and received a $50,000 grant to help Jr. High and High school students avoid drugs and stay out of school. Over 3,000 students participated in the two year project. Miss Ruffin was just 15 years old when she decided to make a difference, but she entered the Kids Hall of Fame.

At this point in your life, what kind of foot prints are you leaving? Would you suggest that others who come after you follow your pattern? Should they study the way you study? Should they dress the way you dress? Should they strive for excellence the way you do? One unique trait among Hall of Famers is that they were all serious, committed and believed in themselves. Youth who desire to leave a foot print in life's walk of fame must do likewise.

Position and power can be attained by many means. However, greatness is not conferred upon a person by virtue of a position but by the quality of the service that is actually performed. For example, being a member of an NBA team does not guarantee that a player will automatically be inducted into the NBA Hall of Fame. Even being a famous singer does not mean that Hall of fame status has been achieved. Not every president was a great president. Even though thousands of people have sold chicken over the years, only a few rank in the same category as Col. Harland Sanders and his famous Kentucky Fried Chicken. Those who rank among the Hall of Famers are those whose actions and deeds deserve preservation.

As Christians, we are concerned about what God thinks of what we do and say. Therefore the accolades of man are appreciated but what we want to hear is God say well done. To be great in his sight is simply to love him and show it through using our talents and gifts to the best of our ability in a way that would glorify him. Every person that does so is virtually guaranteed to be a member of God's Hall of Fame.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he gives a simple formula for greatness to his followers.

Jesus often taught his disciples life stories that would help them as they tried to live the believer's life on a daily basis. Two of the principles that Jesus often referred to were humility and service to others. On the occasion of this text, two of Jesus' disciples came to him with a proposition. Their names were James and John, who were often described as the "Sons of Thunder" because they had a tendency to "go off" whenever things didn't go just as they thought they should.

The two brothers approached Jesus with a special request that angered their friends among the 12. They wanted a guarantee that when he came into power in the new kingdom that both of them would be given positions of power and fame, one on his left and the other on his right. They believed that a new kingdom was coming and they wanted to be famous once it happened.

Jesus questioned the young men at length. He asked whether they knew what they were asking. He wanted to be sure they knew the full implication of their requests. They claimed that they knew and were ready to do whatever was necessary.

In verse 42 Jesus pulls them to the side and reminds them of the difference between how greatness is perceived among believers and how it is perceived among nonbelievers. The truly great man, according to Jesus, is not one who sits high on the left or right of leaders and exercises power, but the one who gives his best in service to others. In the Kingdom of God, those who are considered the greatest are those who give the most to others.

Thus the formula for greatness is revealed. Jesus made it clear, to be considered great in God's sight is not just to gain a position or status, but to use whatever position, status or station in life we attain as a servant to others. The greatest servants are inducted into God's Hall of Fame.

Young Hall of Famers

Youth today can be a member of the Hall of Fame. Just as there is a national "Kids" Hall of Fame God also has a Hall of Fame for young people and anyone else who make contributions to the kingdom that glorify God and help others at the same time.

The Bible is filled with examples of young people who have earned what we could call hall of fame honors. They exhibited four characteristics unique to all persons whose service is of Hall of Fame caliber. They were willing to serve others, were willing to stand for God, build the kingdom and display courage and faith in the process. Some even rose above difficulties and the restrictions imposed by their youth to achieve greatness because they expected great things from God and attempted great things for people with the help of God.

WILLINGNESS TO HELP OTHERS: John 6:1-15 shows how a little boy who wanted to help became a member of God's Hall of Fame. A crowd of people had assembled, over 5,000 and there was concern that there would not be enough food to feed them. A little boy, in his innocence, offered his lunch which was two fishes and five loaves of bread. Jesus took the boy's lunch and used it to feed the boy and 5000 others as well. The boy gave a very small gift in comparison to the need. However, small things become great things in the master's hand. The boy's intent was to use his gift to help people and in so doing he was able to do a great thing. His intent was not to become famous. His intent was to help and give all he had in the process. As a result, God blessed him and the people he touched with abundance. There were many youth present that day, but only one is remembered today; the little boy who gave his lunch and earned a place in God's Hall of Fame.

WILLINGNESS TO STAND FOR GOD: There are three youth who remembered around the world because of their willingness to stand for God at the peril of their own lives. The three men were Meshack, Shadrack, and Abednego. They were promised wealth and prosperity if they used their talents and gifts to help an evil king run his government. They refused and as a result of their refusal they were thrown into a fiery furnace that was especially made seven times hotter than usual, just for them. These three men were not in search of glory of fame. They sought to do what was right in the sight of God and stood up for him in a bold way. Youth today, have similar opportunities and challenges to stand up for God and do the right thing. It may not be popular to do the right thing. It may even get you thrown into a fiery furnace of trouble, but "God is able" to deliver believers from a world of trouble when they stand for him. These young men did not seek fame but they achieved it because they stood for God.

WORK TO BUILD THE KINGDOM: There were many beautiful women in biblical times, just as there are today. A beautiful young woman by the name of Esther won a beauty pageant sponsored by the king. This king did not believe in Esther's God but he was impressed with her beauty and married her. When a wicked man tried to get the king to hurt her people, Esther used her influence with the king to save the people. Those who have influence should use it to help advance the kingdom of God. In Ester's case, her influence was gained through her beauty. Not every beautiful woman uses her beauty for godly causes. The bible tells of a beautiful woman who danced before the king. She danced so well that the king granted her a single wish. She used her wish to ask for the head of God's best preacher, John the Baptist. Youth who use their influence for Godly purposes earn his respect and blessing. Esther was a lowly woman who let God use her grace and it earned her a place in his "Hall of Fame."

COURAGE: One of the most famous youth members of God's Hall of Fame is David. He is known the world over for killing a giant with a single stone from his sling shot. The Lord used David as youth because He believed God could use him to conquer all kinds of giants. (I Sam 17) David, as a young man was inducted into God's Hall of Fame because of his faith and courage. He had faith that God would provide for him and protect him. That faith gave him courage to stand for God when all others were afraid. That is an attribute that makes young people eligible for his "Hall of Fame" -courage to stand against the odds and do the impossible. Youth who stand with faith in God dare to think the unthinkable, do the impossible, and reach the unreachable! Those who are able to do so in a godly way earn a place in God's Hall of Fame.

Hall of Famers must be team members

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that you can't be in the hall of fame without being on a team.

No matter how much we may hope and wish to be inducted into the hall of fame, it cannot be done unless we are members of a team.

No one is inducted from sandlot football into the NFL Hall of Fame. The players must be members of a team.

No one goes from the neighborhood park or recreation center fun activities to the NBA Hall of Fame. The players must be members of a team.

The same is true for those who want to be great in the Kingdom of God. You can't be in God's Hall of Fame unless you are a member of God's team.

It begins with a simple belief that is espoused in Romans 10:9. It begins when we make it known that we believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and that God raised him from the dead. When we tell the world that we want to be a part of the team and will be disciplined by its rules and work hard to carry out the plays of the coach (God), we get to be team members!

There is nothing better than being on a dream team. The dream team is composed of the best players!

When a person joins God's team he's on a dream team, with all of great Hall of Famers!

When you join God's team you're on the same team as thousands of Hall of Famers!

Young Daniel was thrown into a Lion's Den, but when the Lions couldn't tear him apart, he instantly became a member of God's Hall of Fame!

Young Ruth was a woman of great faith. She told Naomi, "Your people shall be my people and your God shall be my God." Her great faith made her member of God's Hall of Fame!

Young Solomon was a man of great wisdom who told young people "Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth, when the evil days come not."- Because he chose to follow God boldly he was inducted in God's Hall of Fame!

But the greatest joy with being on God's team is you get to work with the superstars!

On God's dream team is a man who was born in Bethlehem and wrapped in swaddling clothes!

On God's dream team is a man who at the age of 12 told his parents, "Its time for me to be about my father's business.

On God's dream team is a man who healed the sick and made the blind see!

On God's dream team is a man who picked up an old rugged cross and carried it up Golgotha's hill.

His name is Jesus and he died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

You can join him today as part of God's Dream team, if you only believe!

Regaining Your Cutting Edge

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "So he went with them. And when they came to Jordan, they cut down wood. 5 But as one was felling a beam, the axe head fell into the water: and he cried, and said, Alas, master! for it was borrowed. 6 And the man of God said, Where fell it? And he shewed him the place. And he cut down a stick, and cast it in thither; and the iron did swim. 7 Therefore said he, Take it up to thee. And he put out his hand, and took it." 2 Kings 6:4-7

Introduction

Have you ever tried to do what you once did well but found out you couldn't? There are many times during the course of life that we find ourselves at our best, only to learn that at other times we cannot repeat our perfection. There are times when we think that we can do everything we once did with the same vigor and strength. It's the "old men on the park bench syndrome." The old men talk about their young days and swear to themselves that they have not lost it, they can still do what they once did. The simple reality of life time and circumstance have a great impact on our ability to do what we once did.

There was a time when some could run 100 yards in 10 seconds flat. Now, they are lucky if they can walk to the corner and back in 10 minutes.

There was a time when we could run up a flight of stairs skipping two as we went along. Now, we are out of breath after the first two.

There was a time we could read without our glasses. Now we can barely see the letters with our glasses on.

There was a time when we could walk without a cane or walker. Now we'd prefer to ride in a wheelchair than walk at all.

There was a time when we could crack a pecan with our teeth. Now, we have to get our teeth from a glass before we can crack a smile.

There was a time when we could do many things better than we are doing them today.

There are some things that we once did that are purely physical in nature and no matter how we try to regain that ability it has passed with time. Purely physical abilities are mellowed and tempered with age. Only the foolish think that they still have the stamina and strength they had in another time or age.

Age is a common denominator that has a way of affecting our skills. However, there are abilities we have lost not due to age. When we lose the ability to that which we once did, it is generally called "losing your edge."

When Muhammad Ali was stripped of his heavyweight boxing championship, he stayed out of the boxing ring for several years. When he returned, Howard Corsell and other boxing experts predicted that he would not be the same Ali because such a long time out of the ring would cause him to lose his edge. They counted the number of punches he missed and whether he remained on his toes as often as he had before. They concluded that while he was not what he once was, he was still the greatest.

The same is said of anyone who has not used a skill for a while. If it is not used, experience says it will be lost.

Those who are in the service of the Lord can lose their edge too if they are not careful. The choir member who once sang with power and spirit but now sits in the audience and watches others has lost an edge.

The usher, who once maintained a service with enthusiasm and warmth but now stands coldly in a corner, has lost her edge.

The deacon who prays but now prays a canned prayer that lacks power and spirit, has lost his edge.

The preacher who once preached with conviction and power, but now preaches without purpose, has lost his edge.

There are many in the service of the Kingdom of God who have lost their edge. They are still serving. They have not been affected by physical inability, but they have never-the-less loss the unique qualities and skills that made their service unique and valuable to the kingdom.

There is a way to regain our lost edge.

There is a way to rekindle the flame of enthusiasm and spirit we once enjoyed.

There is a way to restore the joy of our salvation.

As Christians, we rejoice in the fact that God has given us a special cutting edge that helps us to do the work of kingdom building. We rejoice while we build the kingdom. We revel in the truth of his word that if we reach out to him; that which we have lost can be restored.

Exposition

This text focuses on a miracle performed by the prophet Elisha that restored the lost edge of a brother in the faith.

Elisha was the successor to the prophet Elijah. He traveled with Elijah during his life and watched and learned at the hands of the great prophet. When Elijah was taken up to heaven in the fiery chariot, Elisha received his mantle and blessing. For 50 years he found himself able to achieve the same miraculous results as Elijah and even more with a "double portion."

One of the noted miracles of Elisha took place in the context of this text.

The young students who studied under Elisha in the seminary of the times were about the task of building a new "dormitory." Each was assigned to cut down a tree for the construction of the building. They received permission from their trusted teacher Elisha to go to the area of the Jordan River where there were many trees so they could build a larger place to live.

The students invited Elisha to share the experience saying, “Won’t you please come with us?”

So Elisha and his young students headed to the Jordan River to build a new college campus, and when they arrived immediately began to work on cutting down trees. Each student was doing his part, and when one of the young students was cutting down a tree, the iron ax head flew off the handle of the axe he had borrowed and fell into the Jordan River, sinking to the bottom.

This young student lost his axe head, he lost his cutting edge, and he lost his effectiveness in doing his work.

He confessed his problem to Elisha who promptly asked to be taken to the place where the axe had was lost. Miraculously, Elisha caused the axe head to raise from the bottom of the river and reconnect itself with the axe handle. He told the student to hold out his hand. In so doing, the student had a working axe and had “regained his cutting edge.”

Losing Your Cutting Edge

Today, there are many who are like the young prophets in this text. The prophets were believers. In fact, they were ardent students of the word, so they are similar to our circumstance today, we too are believers, but some of us have lost our cutting edge. The young prophet who lost his edge represents the masses of us who have lost our spiritual edge. There are basically three ways we can lose our cutting edge.

NON-USE: There are many people who have talents and gifts but they are not being used in the kingdom. The gifts that we have vary. Some of us have more gifts than others, but none of the gifts do the kingdom of God any good at all if they are not used. For all practical purposes they are buried. Jesus told the parable of talents to underscore the importance of productive use of our gifts. Of the three men in that parable who received gifts, one buried the gift and did not use it. It was taken from him and given to those who could make the most out of it. In a similar sense there are many today who have gifts but non-use is causing them to rust and lose their effective potential.

USING WRONGLY: While many have lost their cutting edge from non-use there are others who have lost the edge, because they used it but they used it wrongly. Often first time campers take to the woods and get excited about having a hatchet. Sometimes such campers, especially children, will take a hatchet and just chop into the ground. Using an axe or hatchet in this manner dulls the edge of the hatchet. It was used but used wrongly. In a similar sense there are many who use their gifts but they do not use them as the Lord intended. In effect, they are beating them into the ground and dulling their edge. Sometimes we misuse our bodies, gifts, and talents so badly that they can be of no use to the kingdom. Some athletes have been gifted with strong bodies and athletic abilities, yet they misuse their bodies and ignore their gift. Many who have gifts to sing, sing for the world and not for God. Not only singers but thousands of others have used their gifts wrongly and as a result have lost their cutting edges.

FAILED TO SHARPEN: There are many who have a cutting edge but they have failed to sharpen it. In the secular world a person sharpens his cutting edge by keeping abreast of the latest techniques and methods in their profession, attending workshops and seminars and other learning opportunities that advance the craft. In terms of our spiritual development, we sharpen our cutting edge through bible study, prayer and worship. Involvement in these three experiences helps us to sharpen our understanding and appreciation for our faith. There are many who have lost their cutting edge because they have neglected the opportunities that promote spiritual growth. For many, it has been months or years since they have attended a bible class or even a Sunday School class. For others, sharpening experiences are nonexistent and the final product is a loss of the cutting edge.

Regaining Your Cutting Edge

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that while there are various ways to lose your cutting edge, if we retrace the steps of the young prophets in this text we can learn how to regain our cutting edge once it has been lost.

The very first thing the young man in this text did was to admit that he had lost his edge. He told Elisha that somewhere in the process, he lost his edge. If we are to regain our edge, we must come clean with ourselves. We cannot blame our loss on anyone else. We must assume the responsibility for our lost edge then act to regain it. There are many today who have slipped in their service. However, rather than say they have lost something they conveniently lay the blame for their loss on someone else: The pastor, the deacons, a particular group of church members, the three legged dog outside...anyone or anything else except themselves.

When David reviewed his acts with Bathsheba he dropped his heart in remorse and acknowledged that he had sinned. In so doing, he asked God to “create in me a clean heart.”

The second thing the young man did was to carry the prophet back to the place where he lost his cutting edge. Likewise, it’s good every now and then for those of us who have lost our cutting edge to go back to the last point when we felt sharp and really good about our service. What were we doing then? What was our routine then? What event or occurrence happened that caused us to lose our cutting edge.

There is great value in going back!

Going back makes us retrace our steps! It prompts us to seek a spiritual renewal that only comes with serious reflection.

Maybe that’s what the song writer had in mind when he said, “Take me back. Take me back dear Lord to the place where I first received you. Take me back, Take me back dear Lord, to where I first believed.”

After going back, the young man was told to simply “reach out your hand.” After reaching out his hand, the cutting edge which he had lost arose from the waters and once again became available to him!

Any believer who has lost his cutting edge must remember that if we admit that we have lost our edge and go back to the place where we lost it, then stretch our hands to God, he will restore our lost spirit, drive and enthusiasm.

Powerful things happen when men and women of God stretch their hands out to God! Miracles happen! Renewal begins!

When we reach our hands out to God, those things which were:

Lost, can be found again!

Broken, can be restored!

Weakened, can be strengthened!

Defeated, can be reinvigorated

Impossible, become possible

When we reach out our hands to God, that which was down goes up! That which was dark becomes light. That which was destroyed and rebuilt!

When we reach out our hands to God we regain that which was lost and in the process regain our cutting edge!

No wonder the song writer declares, "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know. If thou withdraw thyself from me, whither shall I go!"

When we call on Jesus, he gives us another chance!

Lift up your heads, call on Jesus, who died on Calvary!

Don't complain, stretch out your hands and call on Jesus, who arose early one Sunday morning!

Call on Jesus and regain your cutting edge!

The Power of Pain

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 17, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." Isaiah 53:5

Introduction

Have you ever had a pain? Pain is universal. Nearly everyone at one point or another has experienced pain. An infant lying in a crib has pain. A student attending school has pain. Parents involved in the fast paced activities of the work place have pain. Senior citizens have pain. Pain does not discriminate. The rich, the poor, whites, Blacks, males and females, all have had a pain or two in the course of their life's experience. It is almost impossible to journey through life without experiencing some element of pain and discomfort.

The list of physical pains is unending. Everyone has their own list. What's your pain? While one person has headaches another has backaches. Someone has aching muscles and stiffness while someone else has tender joints. Some have writer's cramp and others have carpal tunnel syndrome. Some have aching feet or sore eyes while someone else suffers from sprains, and bruises. The pain of dislocations bothers some, while fractures bothers others. Some pains are not physical at all. There are many that would rather have the pain of a broken leg than the agony of a broken heart. Sometimes pains are caused by the people around us. The doctors have a fancy word for it, "Sciatica" but it is characterized by pain in the buttocks.

As a social phenomenon, entire races of people, nationalities and subclasses can also experience global hurts that are felt by everyone in their particular class. The holocaust in which six million Jews were exterminated during World War II was a pain. The enslavement of Blacks was a pain. The subjugation of women as a gender is certainly a pain. Whether the pain is physical, social or even economic, it still hurts.

Pains are either acute or chronic. An acute pain happens suddenly and at some point ends. It's the pain we get from a broken leg, or an injury. As the injury heals the pain goes away. Chronic pains never seem to go away. They are often related to an ongoing condition or tucked away in the secret corridors of our psyche.

Sometimes we can stumble upon pain. A burglar was cruising through one of our posh suburbs looking for a target of opportunity. At one house he saw a truck unloading a big screen television, stereo, and video outfit. All the gear had to cost thousands of dollars. He made a mental note and went on his way. The next day he was back in the same neighborhood. When he drove past the house with all the goodies, he saw an elderly couple loading suitcases into the trunk of their car. He could hardly wait. That night, without a moon in the sky and a heavy fog, he drove up to the house. He rang the doorbell and when no one answered, broke the lock on the kitchen door and went in. It was pitch black inside as he made his way through the kitchen, then the dining room and into the den where he expected to find the things he wanted to steal.

"I see you and Jesus sees you," a voice said. The burglar froze in his tracks.

"I see you and Jesus sees you," the voice said again.

When nothing more happened, the burglar took out his flashlight and shinned it in the direction of the voice. All he saw was a parrot on its perch.

"I see you and Jesus sees you."

The burglar laughed. "Just a dumb bird," he said. The burglar closed the drapes before turning on a lamp and that's when he saw a big and mean looking Doberman Pinscher sitting beneath the parrot's perch.

"Sic him, Jesus!" The parrot said. Then the burglar understood the meaning of acute pain!

Generally, pain is a signal that something is wrong and needs attention. When a finger is cut it would go unnoticed without the pain. If a limb is injured, it would also be ignored if not for the pain. Pain has a biological purpose which is to alert us that something is wrong an needs adjustment or attention.

Just as there are physical, social and economic signals or pains that alert us to an imbalance, there are also spiritual pains as well. A guilty conscience, a broken spirit, a loss of direction, and a waning spirituality are all signals that something is out of adjustment spiritually.

When we feel physical pain we turn to pain relievers. Over the counter drugs like aspirin or other stronger medicines stop the sensation of pain while the condition the prompts the pain often lingers.

When there is a spiritual pain many plunge into cults and new age "promise-me-the-world religions" that serve as a pain reliever.

There is only one spiritual pain killer that treats the cause of the pain rather than the symptom, that is the blood of Christ. The grace of God deals with the cause of spiritual pain does more than simply make us feel good for the moment but forgives our sin and heals our wounds.

As believers, we are encouraged to know that the blood of Christ is a pain killer and not just a pain reliever. We lean upon his Grace to heal our wounds and strengthen our souls through his love.

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah's prophecy of the coming of the Messiah.

The prophecy does not mention Christ by name but refers to events that point directly to him. It often refers to the events in the past tense as if they had already happened. The prophecy makes it clear that someone is coming to champion God's cause. That someone is first presented in the 52nd chapter beginning at verse 13 and is referred to only as God's "servant" who would be lifted up and exalted.

When Christians read these passages we see Jesus as the "servant." However, throughout the centuries the Jewish community has insisted that the "servant" referred to in these passages is the nation of Israel itself, even to the point of being bruised and wounded. Like many before them the Jewish community expected the Messiah to rise as an earthly king and since Jesus did not accomplish that end have dismissed this text as referring to him because it does not appeal to their vision of the Messiah that would come with might and power to deliver the nation of Israel. They expected him to help them overthrow the Roman domination of their nation and to fulfill the promises of God to make it the chief of the nations of the earth.

The passages, taken as a whole, make it clear that the "servant" referred to in these scriptures is a person and not an entire nation. That person, Christ himself, would come as a substitute for the sins of the people and would bear their penalty in his own body.

The prophecy tracks what Christ did for believers. He was "wounded" for our transgressions, "bruised" for our iniquity. This indicates that the Messiah would absorb the pain, punishment and suffering for the sins of the world. As a result of his act, the pain of sin would not be simply relieved but totally eliminated because the source of the pain will have been satisfied.

When verse five refers to "stripes," reference is made to the physical pain that Jesus endured for his followers. Deuteronomy 25:1-3 notes that the Mosaic law prohibited anyone accused of an offense from receiving more than 40 lashes with the whip. Thus temple scourgings were generally 39 lashes creating 39 "stripes" on the backs of offenders. Matthew 27:26 notes that Christ was ordered scourged as a possible alternative to crucifixion. That scourging produced stripes or torn flesh, blood and pain. Though generally they mean the same, popular references note that through his "stripes" we are healed and through his death on the cross we are saved.

The spiritual pain of the people was caused by sin. The pain was eliminated through Christ's pain and suffering. His death and resurrection lifted his believers from the pain of sin to the power of salvation, through Jesus Christ.

What Pain Does

While no one likes pain, it does have its purpose. Pain alerts us that something is wrong. Like the aggravating seat belt chime in an automobile we can either buckle up or get use to the irritation.

PAIN ALERTS US: The presence of pain alerts us that something is wrong. When David committed adultery with Bathsheba, he attributed the pain in his groin as a result of his promiscuity. Psalm 38 records his lamentations about the cause and effect of his physical pain. David's pain, in this instance, was directly related to his sin. Not only did he hurt physically, but he was unable to sleep well or be at peace. He tried to hide his deed. That was a pain reliever. But when he was confronted by the Prophet Nathan he had to come to grips with the cause of his pain. In the 51st Psalm he cried out "create in me a clean heart O God, and renew a right spirit within me." There are some pains we suffer that are directly related to our own behavior and actions. Pain calls attention to the relationship between our present condition and our past actions. Not every pain is related to a past sin. Job endured considerable pain and suffering, but not because of a sin. He was being tested by God. His painful situation served notice that he was being observed by the creator. In a similar manner it could very well be that some of our suffering may not be sin related but may serve notice on us that we are being observed. If a believer has a sin-based condition he or she should seek forgiveness. James 5:15 reminds believers that after prayer for forgiveness is offered by the elders of the church a sin based pain will be relieved shortly thereafter. If sin is not the basis of the pain then "testing" is and the believer should prayer for strength to endure. That's what Paul found out when he asked three times for the thorn in his side to be removed but it was not. He was told, "My grace is sufficient." Pain alerts us to the need to rely on the grace of God.

PAIN PROMPTS US TO TAKE ACTION: There are many conditions that we will ignore until it begins to hurt. We'll let a leaky faucet drip until we feel the pain of the water bill. We'll ignore our special diet until we feel the pain of a heart attack or high blood pressure. The pain prompts us to take action that we would otherwise put off. There are many people who lead healthier life-styles today because the pain of a previous illness prompted them to take corrective action. We do things in response to pain and often we can be very innovative. In 1897 a chemist working for the Bayer Company tried to find a way to ease the sensation of pain his relative was experiencing. In the process he discovered Aspirin, a product which now sells 80 million units a day around the world. When our old car breaks down for the last time, we'll either walk or get a better car. When the roof leaks so bad that we run out of skillets, pots and pans to catch the water, we'll either bear it or repair it. We may have a tooth cavity for many months and keep promising to do something about it. But when the pain hits, we'll take action quick. Pain prompts us to take action. It was the blindness of the Damascus Road experience that prompted Saul to become Paul. Jonah stopped running from the Lord after he spent an extended weekend in the belly of the fish. Thus, one purpose of pain may be to prompt us to take action.

PAIN PROMPTS SACRIFICES FOR OUR GREATER GOOD: When we experience painful situations we are prompted to make sacrifices we would not normally make to achieve the greater good. Pain and sacrifice are integral parts of the Christian experience. That's why Jesus encouraged every new believer to count the cost. The promise of eternal life would not come without the pain of the cross. In Matthew 16:24 Jesus said, "Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." Before the crown there must be a cross. Before the sweet, easy life of heaven, every believer had to be prepared to go through a little hell on earth. With that in mind, believers have willingly responded to painful situations and made sacrifices of property and life to achieve the aims of the kingdom. Believers have faced lions in the Coliseums of Rome and the torturous death of the cross. They have been boiled, crucified and persecuted through all times. While many have not faced this level of pain there are millions who have had their names trampled upon on the highway and have been called everything but a child of God for defending the purpose of the kingdom. Yet, the words of the song writer are clear, no cross, no crown.

The Power of Pain

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that there is power in pain.

While no one likes suffering or painful experiences, it is true that believers have acquired considerable power while dealing with their pain.

There are many who can testify today that it was while they were dealing with pain and suffering directly or the pain and suffering of a loved one that they developed a greater appreciation for what it means to walk by faith and not by sight.

In our pain, we gain an increased power to keep our eye focused on the power of the Lord rather than our own ability.

In our pain, we recognize our own weakness and lean heavily upon the strength of the Lord.

In our pain, we recognize our own fallibility and lean heavily upon the immutability and eternity of God. While we may not be able to handle a situation we have God who can deal with the issue.

In our pain, we recognize our own inability to control the complex maze of situations that impact our lives while at the same time gaining the power to take our burdens to Lord and leave them there.

No wonder the song writer would declare, "If your body suffers pain and your health you can't regain and you have to get along with meager fare. Jesus knows the pain you feel, he can save and he can heal take your burdens to the Lord and leave it there."

In our pain, we have learned to trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine understanding.

We may not know about tomorrow but we trust in the Lord who holds tomorrow in his hands!

From our pain, we gain the power to say to the world, "I don't know everything about, but I serve a God who is in control of everything!"

From our pain, we have gained the power to stand in the midst of sickness and say, "It is well with my soul!"

From our pain, we have gain the power to see the world and its circumstances from a heavenly perspective. The humanity within us wants to respond to everything with a worldly response, but the power we gain from pain and suffering teaches us to see things from a heavenly perspective.

From our pain, we have learned that we have a higher power who takes over when we have done all that we know how to do.

From our pain we get a perspective that goes beyond the carnal, into the metaphysical and reaches into the spiritual.

This power gives us hope when everyone else has thrown up their hands, because we know that God is able!

Strong winds may blow...but God is able!

Storms may rise....but God is able!

What power did you gain from your pain?

From the pain of falling down, God gave us the power of getting back up again!

From the pain of weakness, God gave us the power to remember that they that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up on wings as eagles. They shall run and not get weary! They shall walk and not faint!

From His pain we have gain the power to stand firm against whatever the world brings and hold to God's unchanging hand!

His pain has given us hope!

His pain has given us a new determination to run on and see what they end will be!

His pain was endured through 39 Roman lashes!

His pain was felt as he carried his cross to Calvary!

His pain was realized as he cried out in agony, "Father, why has thou forsaken me?"

In pain and misery he died on an old rugged Cross, but Early Sunday morning!

His pain...became our gain!

A Whole Lot of Shouting Going On!

SCRIPTURE: "And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Mark 11:9

Introduction

What's the life span of praise? There are many people who offer praise in a variety of areas but it doesn't last long. We praise a coach, until he loses the big game. We praise our stock brokers until one of his tips loses us money. We praise an elected official until he takes an action we don't like. We shower praises on our bankers until they refuse our loan request. Praise is a cousin to flattery and should be received cautiously. People who offer praise have varying expectations and purposes. When those expectations are not met praises often cease. Praises live about as long as we are able to please the crowd!

As a general rule, praise is given in appreciation for something done or in expectation of something to be done. In some cases it's a little of both.

When an employee retires and is praised by the company, it is for something done. When a valued staff member is praised by the company it is usually to recognize an accomplishment and to encourage the staff member to "keep up the good work."

In religious circles around the world there are millions who praise the lord. They praise him for what he has done, in hopes that he will continue to meet their expectations.

There's a whole lot of shouting going on!

People are praising God for blessings, healings, answered prayers and renewed spirit!

People are praising God for giving them what they asked for and restoring their faith.

While many are praising God, their praise is based on the assumption that he will meet their expectations in the future. Some lay it on thick because of a perceived correlation between the quantity of praises and the quantity of blessings received.

There are many who are shouting, waving their hands and singing praise to God for what he has done. There are others who are shouting for different reasons.

The story is told of a minister who was full of energy and enthusiasm for the Lord. One day he went to the hospital to visit one of his parishioners who was critically ill. The minister entered the room and saw the man lying in bed with a whole host of tubes and wires attached to his body. Without any delay the minister strode to his bedside and began to exhort him to be of good cheer. Soon the man became agitated and started to wave his arms. This encouraged the minister, and so he exhorted him more and more enthusiastically. Finally the minister ended with a rather lengthy prayer. At the final "Amen" the minister opened his eyes just in time to see the man reach for a pad of paper and a pencil. Quickly he wrote something and handed it to the minister. Then he looked at the pad and read these words: "You are standing on my oxygen tube!"

Sometimes it is easy to misread people's actions. Not all arm-waving is an expression of exuberance. Not all laughter is the laughter of happiness. Not all tears are tears of sorrow. Not all shouting is the shouting of triumph and victory. And not everyone who says, "Lord! Lord!" will enter the kingdom of God.

There are many who shout praises to God as long as he seems to be doing what we want. But if he steps on our toes or fails to meet our expectations we cry out, "crucify him."

As Christians, we praise God in appreciation for what he has done. We also praise God with the expectation of great things to come. However, we are not specific in our expectations. We praise him for whatever he does in our lives, for everything he does is good and will work to our benefit. We praise him because he is great and his mercy endureth forever!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he made his triumphant entry into the city of Jerusalem.

The arrival of the Messiah had been predicted by the prophet Zechariah many years before. The people of Jerusalem expected a champion to come into the city and establish himself as the one person who would lift their domination by the Romans. In Zechariah 9:9 the prophet wrote, " Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion! Shout aloud, O daughter of Jerusalem! Lo, your king comes to you; triumphant and victorious is he, humble and riding on an ass, on a colt the foal of an ass"

Intoxicated with the idea of liberation the people met Jesus outside of the city singing and shouting "Hosanna (save now)." The expected Jesus to announce a rebellion against the Romans. They expected to see the Roman legions running in fear of the power of Israel. So they sang "Hosanna" -Not just "save us" but save us "now!"

The phrase "Hosanna" was extracted from the 25th and 26th verses of the 118th Psalm. It was a Psalm which was sung by Israel giving praise to God for deliverance from slavery in Egypt. When Jesus came to Jerusalem the words of the Psalm were appropriate. The prophet Zechariah said, "Shout" for your king comes. David wrote the words “Hosanna” -save us now!

The words of the Psalm 118 make it clear what the people wanted.

Psalm 118: “25 Please, LORD, please save us. Please, LORD, please give us success. 26 Bless the one who comes in the name of the LORD. We bless you from the house of the LORD.”

They shouted Hosanna because they wanted a blessing and success.

They shouted Hosanna because they wanted their special interest taken care of immediately.

They shouted Hosanna and showered praises on Jesus because he was seen as the one that would bring them what they expected.

Later, in the same week, many in the same crowd that shouted “Hosanna” were still shouting, but they were shouting “crucify him” when it turned out that Jesus would not meet their expectations.

They cried crucify him when he spoke of being persecuted and making sacrifices!

They cried crucify him when he refused to take up the sword even in his own defense, saying he that lives by the sword will die by the sword.

Their shouts of praise turned to shouts of death, once Jesus failed to meet their expectations.

Sometimes we have to shout

There are times in every life when we have to shout! No scream or complain but simply shout. There are at least types of situations that can easily be identified as shouting time.

WHEN THE WALLS ARE TOO HIGH: There are occasions in every life where situations get beyond our control. These are times when only the power of the Lord can help us. Sometimes our goals and objectives became a blur or seem unattainable because high walls of opposition, red tape or confusion block us from meeting our own expectations.

When the walls get high and the enemy looks fierce, that’s a sign that it’s shouting time. When Israel moved into the promised land they were intimidated by the sight of the cities of Jericho, which were protected by high walls guarded by trained soldiers. Yet, they soon found that when the walls were high, it was shouting time. God told them to march around the walls seven times and on that seventh time “shout!” They shouted until the power of the Lord came down.

Similarly, there are times when we have shout and praise until he power of the Lord comes down! Maybe that’s why the song writer wrote, sing till the power of the Lord comes down. Lift up your head, don’t be afraid, sing till the power of the Lord comes down.

WHEN WE’VE BEEN BLESSED: There are times when we are overwhelmed at the goodness and mercy of the Lord. This often happens when we achieve a long sought after goal or receive a blessing that we desired but felt unworthy to receive. When David succeeded in the getting the Ark of the Covenant returned to Israel, he was so excited and happy that he stripped his clothes to his loin cloth and danced naked in the streets, leaping and jumping and shouting with joy. That's they way we feel when God has really blessed us. We have to shout.

When the Lord blesses us financially in a way that we did not expect, it's shouting time!

When a wayward child starts showing signs of hope, it's shouting time!

When lost family member finds the Lord, it's shouting time.

As Jesus came into Jerusalem his disciples wanted to quiet the crowd but Jesus said, "if these hold their peace the rocks would cry out!" -It's shouting time.

WE SHOUT IN OUR TRIBULATIONS: It's easy to shout when we are being blessed. It's harder to shout in our troubles and tribulations. Yet, even here we should also shout. Tribulations lead to patience and patience leads us to experience and our experience leads to hope and renewed joy in Christ. What the experience of the faith teaches us is that even in the midst of our problems, God is still good.

If there is nothing in your refrigerator but ice cubes, God is still good, shout over ice cubes!

If you lose your job and are forced to walk the street looking for a job, shout over the fact that you still have two feet!

On our sickbeds we should shout thanks to God for your doctor and your nurses and praise God that no one is standing on your oxygen tube!

A Lot of Shouting going on!

When Jesus came into Jerusalem there were a lot of people shouting and there was a whole lot of shouting going on!

Whenever the Lord has done something good for you, there's a whole lot of shouting going on.

Whenever you think about how God has blessed us, there's a whole lot of hand waving going on!

Whenever we think about how God has picked us up and turned us around, there's a whole lot foot patting going!

Whenever we think about how he provides food for us when we are hungry, there's a who lot of hand clapping going on!

When we think about how he brought us out of nowhere and carried us to somewhere. There's a whole lot of shouting going on!

We're shouting because of what he has done.

We're shouting because of what we expect him to do.

We're shouting because he's been to us and we just can't keep it to ourselves.

I'm reminded of the couple that called the police to report a disturbance in the neighborhood. The couple reported that for the last hour the people in the house next door had been keeping up a noise that made it hard for them to sleep. They requested that the neighbors would be arrested. The officer explained to the neighbors the nature of the complaint and listened as the wife explained.

"Well officer, we're sorry, but we just couldn't help ourselves. At 10 o'clock we got a call said our daughter who lives in New York was in a car accident but has survived without a scratch or a scar. We tried to be quiet and my husband and I just hugged each other." She said.

"Fifteen minutes late we got a call that my grandson who lives in California is the recipient of an all expense paid scholarship to Harvard University. It was all we could do, just to keep from screaming with joy.

"At about 10:30 we got a call that said my other daughter who lives in Detroit had given birth to triplets. Despite complications, all the babies are fine and my daughter is alright." It was all we could do to keep from crying out with happiness and gratitude.

"At about 10:45 the phone rang one more time. The doctor reported that my sister, who was in intensive care, had taken a sudden turn for the good. The doctor said he couldn't explain it, but she was going to be alright. All we could do was shout and stomp and praise the Lord.

The people who complained call the police station and filed another report. "We asked you send an officer to stop the noise next door. We expected him to put the handcuffs on our neighbors but he's running in the front yard yelling praise the Lord!. You better send somebody down here, because there's a whole lot of shouting going on!"

I don't know about you, but there are ought to be a lot of shouting going on in the homes of the Saint's.

Everytime you think about the mountains you've climbed and the valleys in your way, you ought to feel a shout coming!

He's been a lawyer in my court room! I think I feel a shout coming on!

He's been a doctor in my sick room! I think I feel a shout coming on!

He's been a bridge over troubling waters! I think I feel a shout coming on!

Though the crowds shouted "Crucify him" he picked up an old rugged cross and shouldered the burden of my sin!

Out on Calvary, he died, that I might live!

They buried him in a borrowed tomb..

But early Sunday morning, arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

I think a feel a shout coming!

He's still blessing me!

I don't know about you, but I think I feel a shout coming on!

Were You There?

SCRIPTURE: "Now when the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jesus, saw the earthquake, and those things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God." Matthew 27:54

Introduction

Have you ever tracked an event or movement so closely that you felt you were "there?" There are many who have fixed on a certain event in history or a certain movement so intensely that they have read everything written on the subject, attended every possible function related to it and have become so intensely involved in it until they feel as though they were there themselves. Some have followed the events of September 11, 2001 when the World Trade Center was destroyed. They have read every article, seen every special report, absorbed all of the photo images and have developed an "empathy" with the victims. In a sense they say, "I was there."

Those who are able to say "I was there" are those who are able to not only sympathize but empathize with another. To sympathize is to share the troubles of another. To empathize is to not only share the troubles of another but to share an affinity with another because of a mutual experience." A family that is dealing with the impact of drugs may get sympathy from a friend who listens but have never had the problem before. However, they would get empathy from a friend who has also experienced similar problems. A school counselor who counsels a child that has been moved from school to school frequently has sympathy for that child's situation, but the counselor who himself was a frequent transfer student has "empathy" because of his own experience. Those who empathize are those who can say, "I was there."

As believers track the events related to the crucifixion of Christ, we have focused so intensely on its details that we have gone beyond sympathy, we have developed an empathy with Christ. We have projected our own circumstances into that day in such a way that we are actually "there" at the scene of his death and conversely, also at the scene of his resurrection.

We can empathize with Christ because we too have been falsely accused by witnesses who pointed fingers at us and accused us of things we have not done. When we watch Jesus stand silently and become the victim of lies, in our meditation, we say, "I was there."

We can empathize with Christ because we too have been abandoned by those around us. When his disciples began to distance themselves from him and say to others, "I don't know him" it must have been disheartening to him, just as it is to us when family or friends abandon us in our weakest moments. When we hear Peter deny Christ three times, then hear the cock crow, true believers say silently, "I was there."

We can empathize with Christ because we have borne the pain, ridicule and suffering of others until it has exhausted us. Although he had committed no crime, Christ was beaten by soldiers, a crown of thorns placed upon his head and humiliated. He suffered unjustly and was "wounded" without regard for innocence or guilt. We too have suffered immensely as we bore the pain of a lost child, a troubled friend or co-worker. When we see Jesus stumble under the weight of the cross, we see ourselves stumble under the weight of the load we carry everyday and we say, "I was there!"

We empathize because our lifestyle is inextricably tied to his. We share both his agony and the ecstasy of his experience. We know what it's like to have the crowds call your name in praise on one day and in scorn another. We have experienced the rejection of everyone around us. Our lives as Christian warriors are so closely tied with Christ's experience that it is easy for us to say, "I was there!"

As Christians, we relive the events of Holy Week and say, "I was there!" But just as we relive Jesus' pain, rejection, crucifixion and death, we also relive the power of his resurrection. When he arose on Sunday morning, we are inspired, but we who were buried with him, also rose with him. When he arose the entire saved world said, "I was there!"

Exposition

This text gives an explanation of the events of the crucifixion including a summation of the persons who were present to witness its execution.

Christ, having been found not guilty of any crime against Rome by Pontius Pilate was never-the-less crucified in an action that was politically expedient. He was sacrificed to satisfy they anger of a mob, despite the lack of evidence of a crime. There were many who were present to witness his crucifixion. The text notes that there were Roman soldiers present. They carried out the sentence against what they considered to be an eccentric but harmless Jew. Some of his disciples were present. Verse 55 notes that there were also many women who were there. There names were given to accentuate the fact that even though they stood at a distance, they were there.

Many of Christ's disciples stood with him at the cross but were with him from the beginning, boldly declaring the truth of the kingdom of God at the peril of their own lives. As each nail was driven into his hands, those who were closely bound with him felt the piercing of their own souls as well.

These were more than simply witnesses, they were fellow laborers. They understood more than anyone else.

While they were present and understood, there were others who were present but who were not "there" in the sense that they shared the struggle.

Collosians 2:20 could easily be a companion to this thought. In this text Paul notes that those who truly believe and have Christ's kingdom at heart can say they were crucified with him and raised up on the cross with him. It notes that true believers have such a close affinity with Christ that we have died with him.

Thus, some of those who were present were "there" while others were just present.

In Collosians 3:1 Paul notes that just as we are buried with him we can also say that we arose with him.

Thus, those believers who shared in his ministry, the humiliation and pain of his crucifixion, also shared the glory of his resurrection. Such believers can truthfully say, "We were there!"

The Cross: He's Been There!

During his suffering and death on the cross Christ served notice to every believer in every generation that, "I have been there." Whatever circumstance that may occur in a believer's life, our savior has experienced the full gamut of human emotions from joy to sadness; from victory to defeat; from life to death. No matter experiences we have, he can say, "I have been there."

That's important for us to know. It's important because it helps us to receive the final judgments of God. If we suffer and wonder why, we share that burden with our Lord, who also suffered and wondered why even though the royalty within him knew why. On the cross, Christ asked his father, "Why hast thou forsaken me?" These are moments when we feel at our lowest. That's when it helps to know that the Lord in whose name we pray, knows how we feel because he himself has "been there."

Have you wandered into a wilderness in your own life experience where you had to sort things out? Jesus says, "I've been there!" In the beginning of his experience he was tempted by the devil on three occasions, but he finally decided to follow the will of God. When we pray and ask for direction, the answer we receive is not given in a void, but it comes from one who has "been there" and understands.

Have you seen those around you lose hope in their ability to do the impossible? Jesus says, "I've been there!" Peter walked on water, doing the impossible but lost hope and began to sink even though he was looking the master in the face. When a storm arose on the sea the passengers and crew began to worry and fret and lose hope even though Jesus was on board. Jesus even watched as Peter denied him repeatedly. When, in frustration, we turn to the Lord and tell him about those who have lost hope in us, we are talking to a savior who has "been there."

The joy of the Christian relationship is that it provides us an opportunity to share our experience with someone who has "been there."

No wonder the song writer says, "What a friend we have in Jesus. All our sins and griefs to bear. What a privilege to carry everything to God in prayer."

Another song writer responded with these words, "If your body suffers pain and your health you can't regain and you have to get along with meager fare. Jesus knows the pain you feel, he can save and he can heal, take your burden to the Lord and leave it there!"

No matter what we are going through, the struggles of Christ's life tell us that he has "been there" and knows how we feel.

Empty Tomb: I Am There

If the message of the suffering and the crucifixion of Christ is, "I have been there" then the message of the empty tomb is, "I am there." The knowledge that Christ is alive today brings us the assurance that Christ is "there" for us.

This assurance, given by our Lord, helps us to know that though you may walk a lonely road in life, you'll never walk alone!

This assurance came when Jesus told all believers, "and lo, I'll be with you alway, even until the end of the earth."

That's probably what James Freeman had in mind when he wrote:

"Do you need me? I am there.
You cannot see ME, yet I am the light you see by.
You cannot hear Me, yet I speak through your voice.
You cannot feel Me, yet I am the power at work in your hands.
I am there when you pray and when you do not pray.
Though you fail to find Me. I do not fail to find you.
Though your faith in Me is unsure,
My faith in you never wavers because I know you,
because I love you.
I am There."

Every child of God has experienced the full measure of the Christian pendulum. We've been down and out and wounded and nailed to the cross. We've been hung out and buried.

But we have also seen a glorious new life.

Anytime anyone questions our faith in God, we are quick to remind them,

"You don't know and you wasn't there. You don't know when and you don't know where!"

You wasn't there when I almost drowned in the sea of self pity.. "from the waters he lifted me now safe am I. Love lifted me! Love lifted me! When nothing else could help love lifted me!

You wasn't there when I was so tired I could not stand!
Tired of being talked about!
Tired of rising and falling!
Tired of seeing more sadness than I saw gladness!

Then I heard the voice of Jesus say, "Lay down, lay down thy weary one thy head upon my breast!

When I think about how good God has been and how much he sacrificed for me on Calvary, it causes me to tremble, just like I was standing there!

The events of Calvary happened over 2000 years ago, and you may have been born in 1949 but yet you can say, “I was there!’

You may have been born in 1956, but you can still say, “I was there!”

You May have been born in 1968, but you can still say, “I was there!”

Sometimes, when I think about how they nailed him to the cross, it causes me to tremble!

Sometimes, when I think about how they buried him in a borrowed tomb it causes me to tremble!

But early Sunday morning, I was there when the angel declared, “he is not here. He has risen from the grave! Come see the place where the Lord lay!”

God's Hors d'oeuvres

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE: But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. 1 Corinthians 2:9

Introduction

Have you seen the little finger foods offered at social gatherings and wondered why there wasn't more? In most situations, these little finger foods are called "Hors d' oeuvres" (pronounced "or-derves). At many social gatherings the food is often served on small plates about the size of a hand. They are usually noted by the peculiar presence of toothpicks perturbing from the tops of each item. Instead of a whole sandwich, one sandwich is cut into several small squares and topped with a tooth pick. Instead of a whole chicken wing, there is usually a half of a chicken wing, called a "buffalo wing.." Also there are little green olives, a few chips and dips, and few crackers, slices of meats and cheeses rolled into cute little circles. Meatballs, cheeses and a variety of other delicacies make up the host of fineries used in finger foods. The food is great but it is usually served on small plates. Sometimes these plates are too small for those who try to get some of everything. When they do they are forced to stack everything into a pyramid. Finger foods are great, but they always leave you wanting more.

That's the whole idea of an appetizer! Appetizers are not designed to fill us up but to wet our desire for more. In many restaurants the appetizers are served while the chef prepares the main course. The main meal may be fillet mignon, stuffed crab legs, T-Bone Steaks, or some specialty item that takes a considerable amount of time to prepare. The appetizer satisfies us temporarily but not completely. It tides us over until the main course is served.

Do our spiritual lives work the same way? Jesus told the parable that said the kingdom of heaven was like a great banquet in which many people are invited. While many are too busy to attend this banquet, those who came would participate in the feast. At any great dinner the appetizers are served first before the main meal. The kingdom of God, which is the fellowship of the saints on this earth is an appetizer to the Kingdom of Heaven which is yet to come. It is a "foretaste" of the main course, which will be life with Christ in heaven.

We are participants in the Lord's banquet as a fore runner of the things to come. He has served us a few appetizers, or samples of things to come, that we call blessings.

They are the small comforts and securities of life that we have been able to enjoy: a bed to sleep in, a plate to eat from, a roof over our heads, sound minds, a reasonable portion of health and strength. All of these are samples of what's ahead. They are the "Hors d' oeuvres!

As Christians, we thank God for every blessing he gives us. We also know that what he has in store for us is worth the wait, especially judging by the Hors d' oeuvres!"

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he looks to the future blessings in store for all of those who trust in the Lord.

This passage comes from the last section of the Book of Isaiah. It covers the events that will occur in the last days. It closely parallels the book of Revelation. As I pointed out when we began this study thirteen weeks ago, the book of Isaiah is in many ways a miniature Bible. It divides like the Bible. The Bible has 66 books, and Isaiah has 66 chapters. The Old Testament has 39 books, and the first division of Isaiah has 39 chapters. The New Testament has 27 books, and the second half of Isaiah has 27 chapters. The theme of the last of Isaiah is the theme of the last of the Bible: the end!

The chapters immediately preceding this text are a cry of desperation from Israel for God to make himself known and to rescue the faithful from the troubles of the world.

In the middle of their despair comes Isaiah's plea that God would show himself by performing mighty acts in a way that would assure the people that he has not abandoned. In all of their lives, he maintained, the world has never seen a God like the one and only God.

What he is prepared to do for his people is beyond human perception and comprehension. That's also the theme of 1 Corinthians 2:9 which also reminded believers of that which is to come: "But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Whatever God is doing for his people now, is only a sampling of that he has planned for us. Whatever pleasures believers enjoy, hope they share and fulfillment they realize is but a foretaste of what is to come. What God has in store for us is unimaginable, great and too wonderful to describe. What believers have now are simply samplings of blessings to come.

Appetizers

Appetizers are a foretaste: The purpose of any appetizer is to wet our appetites for something bigger. That is really the nature of the entire Christian experience. It is a foretaste of things to come. It is a spiritual rehearsal for that which we will enjoy later.

There are some believers who have experience the power of God's presence in their daily lives. They are excited when they see daily evidence of his divine power. Whatever we enjoy it's just a sip and dip? There are believers who have received a few "finger blessings" from the Lord. Our finger blessings include our house, car, television, a few pork chops in the refrigerator and new hat or two; a new pair shoes and a new set of designer finger nails. All of these are finger blessings. Small samples of what God has for us in the new kingdom?

If you think your house is something, just wait until you get to heaven?! Jesus said in my father's house are "many mansions." He noted in that same passage "I go to prepare a place for you!" -Your little house is only a sample of the bigger better things to come.

If you think the silver and gold that you have accumulated in the banks of this world is something, just wait until you get to heaven. John saw the New Jerusalem coming down out of heaven. It had twelve gates made of solid pearl and the streets will be paved with gold! Right now you may have a little money in the bank and after worry about someone stealing it, but when we get to glory, everyone will have gold under his feet because the streets will be paid with precious ores.

Even our health and leisure on this earth is a sample of things to come. We're excited when we go on vacations, have a little time off, just get to walk and see a few sights. If you think what you have not is good, think again, it's only a sample of what's coming. When we get t heaven we'll never need time off because time will be no more. We won't wait for holidays because everyday will be Sunday. It will always be howdy and never good-bye!

Everything we have on this earth is an Hors d'oeuvere, a sample to tide us over until the kingdom comes.

The appetizers are not the meal: In our quest for self satisfaction it is very easy for us to become obsessed with the Hors d' oeuveres and lose our desire for the main meal. Many people go to restaurants and eat so many salads, breads, crackers, and soups that by the time their main dish is served they are too pooped to pop! There are others who are so hungry they can't wait for the main meal so they stuff down as many finger sandwiches as they can. When the main course is served, some have eaten so many finger sandwiches and Hors d' oeuveres that they are no longer hungry.

Likewise there are many who get obsessed with the "Hors d' oeuveres of this life. There are many who have become obsessed with getting grabbing all of the money, houses, clothing, and everything else they can get their hands on in this life. They have become overly consumed with Hors d' oeuvres!

Jesus warned believers about this very subject. He said, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness and all of these things shall be added unto you!" In another instance he warned believers about being overly concerned about possessing the things of this world urging them to build their treasures in heaven with the fear of moths or rust instead of seeking to build a world of wealth for themselves down here.

Our plate is too small to receive everything God has: We have all seen the person at a social event who tried to put more finger sandwiches on the plate than it would hold.

This brings out an important truth, "When our plate gets too full, things fall off!"

One of the seven deadly sins is "greed"-Trying to get more than we really need. The greedy try to put more on their plates than they can hold. That's when things fall off.

There many marriages that are experiencing difficulty because one partner or both have full plates and they are steady trying to stack more on top and things are falling off!

Many professionals have overloaded their schedules to the point that they don't have enough time for themselves and those that are important to them! Things are falling off!

We are going through life's party delicately balancing everything getting more and holding on to it, but at the first little bump...things fall off!

That's the reason that some restaurants don't allow us to serve ourselves, they prepare the finger plates for us. When we serve our selves, we tend to get what looks good to our eye, and get more than we can use..and things fall off!

That's why the saint lets God portion out his blessings every day. In the Lord's prayer we say, "Give us this day our daily bread!" David said, "thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies..."

At the banquet table of life, the buffet of Hors d'oeuveres is to large to fit on our plate. God has more than we can ever possess! Let him prepare the plate and we will be satisfied!

We can't even imagine

Finally, we must consider that there is nothing in this life that can fully prepare us for what God has in store for us.

We may accumulate a few comforts while we are here, but there is nothing that can compare to what God has in store for us.

Don't get too full on the finger sandwiches, because the main course is on the way.

While we are nibbling on the Hors d' oeuveres, the Lord is making a way.

The main course will be greater than anything we can imagine!

What God is preparing for us is:

—Better than good; richer than rich!

—Softer than soft; and sweeter than sweet!

—Eye hath not seen, nor has it entered into the heart of man to understand the many things God has in store for us! For Hebrews 11:6 says: "for he hath prepared for them a city."

Don't get too satisfied with your little house, because Jesus said, "In my father's house are many mansions"

Don't get too comfortable with your newly paved street of blacktop and asphalt, because John said in that city the streets will be paved with gold!

Don't get too comfortable with your digitized alarm clock that wakes you up every morning, because when the main course is served, you won't have to worry about alarm clocks, daylight savings time that springs forward and falls back, because time shall be no!

Don't get too comfortable with your new dress and shoes, that's just a Hors d'oeuvere. Over yonder every saint will put a new robe and slippers. No wonder the old hymn says, "I got shoes you got shoes. All God's chillun got shoes. When I get to heaven I'm going to put on my shoes and walk all over God's heaven!"

Don't get too comfortable with your jobs in the health care industry because it's just an Hors d' oeuvere. Over yonder there will be a tree sitting in the midst of the city that will bear 12 manner of fruit that will be good for the healing of the nations. God's health care plan will have no deductible. It will be the ultimate HMO. It will heal on "His Majesty's Orders!"

I don't know about you but I'm on my way to that city not made with hands!

It's a city, built on 12 foundations!

It's a city, that surrounded by 12 gates!

It's a city, where Jesus is will rule throughout eternity!

On his way to get everything ready he stopped by Bethlehem!

On his way to get everything ready he hung around Palestine for 30 years!

On his way to get everything ready he stopped by Calvary and died!

But early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

He's coming back again!

But until he comes back he didn't leave us comfortless!

He left us the Holy Spirit to and showers of blessings to keep us going until he comes back again!

Traits of Our Mates

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La

April 14, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "Submitting to one another in the fear of Christ. Wives, submit to your own husbands as to the Lord, for the husband is head of the wife as also Christ is head of the church. He is the Savior of the body. Now as the church submits to Christ, so wives should submit to their husbands in everything. Husbands, love your wives, just as also Christ loved the church and gave Himself for her, to make her holy, cleansing her in the washing of water by the word. Ephesians 5:21-26;Now abideth these three, faith, hope and love, but the greatest of these is love. 1 Corinthians 13:13

Introduction

If you could have the perfect mate, what qualities would you like for your mate to have? Should he be taller? Should she be finer? Some, if given the option, would forego the looks if they could find someone with a little money. There are some who have a fix on intelligence. There are others who want the whole ball of wax; they want looks, money and brains all in the same package.

It seems everyone is looking for Mr. Wonderful and Ms. Perfect Delight. Some have found what they have been looking for. Others always seem to be one day too late. Life's cycle involves a complete circle of emotional events that span the entire scope of our lives. We spend one third of our lives looking for love, another third trying to hold on to love and a final third remembering love. Somewhere in between there's a group that can't find love at all. They are the group that is "looking for love in all the wrong places."

What qualities do we look for in the perfect mate? Is there a check list that's fool proof? Is there a guidebook we can purchase to insure that we now have, "Mr. Wonderful?" Can we really use this magic checklist to be sure that we have the right one or to measure the quality of what we have?

Is there any such creature as Mr. Perfect? Is there a perfect woman? To get the answer to that question consider the preacher who stood at a bible class and said, "There's no such thing as a perfect man. Anybody present who has ever known a perfect man, stand up." Nobody stood up. "Those who have ever known a perfect woman, stand up." One demure little woman stood up. "Did you ever know an absolutely perfect woman?" He asked, somewhat amazed. "I didn't know her personally," replied the little old woman, "but I have heard a great deal about her. She was my husband's first wife."

What if I told you that there is a check list for the perfect mate? Would you like to have it? Galatians 5:22-23 gives a list of traits or qualities of the perfect person.

The traits of the perfect mate are: "love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, Meekness, and temperance" This little short verse gives each of us a check list to use. However, this check list is not for us to measure others, it is for us to measure ourselves. Before seeking perfection in others it's good to become acquainted with ourselves.

Am I a person who is capable of loving someone and allowing myself to be loved?

Am I happy with myself, eternally optimistic about life and the conditions around me?

Am I a peace with myself and the circumstances in which I live?

Do I have the capacity to be tolerate in tough times, holding on for the best?

Am I abrasive and destructive or am I considerate of others, handling them gently and with care?

Am a person of intense faith in God, who trust in him reverently?

Am I humble in my manner, returning wrath with a soft response of measured strength.

Am I able to control myself to avoid over indulgences that might destroy me?

These are traits the bible calls the "fruit of the spirit." They represent a subset of character that identifies believers everywhere. They exist in people independent of external characteristics such as: money, looks or education.

It is possible for the perfect man to have all of the biblical traits but not have a six figure income. It is possible for that person have everything that makes her perfect except a beautiful body. He may not even be the smartest person in the world, but he may be perfect for you otherwise. Only a person who has these traits would appreciate them in others. Thus, some may find difficulty finding the right person because God is getting them personally ready to receive Ms. Perfect and Mr. Wonderful once he or she comes along.

If all we can see as important are looks, brains and money, then it becomes evident that we are not ready. Many years ago the Chilites wrote a song that asked, "Have you seen her?" There are many men today who are looking for Ms. Perfect externally. Because they were not spiritually adjusted themselves they were not able to see her when she sat right next to them. Some women have already met Mr. Wonderful, but they could not see him for looking for him.

As believers, we praise God for giving us a loving spirit that helps us to understand the meaning of true love, which is only in and through Christ Jesus. Because he allows us to see ourselves through his eyes we are better able to identify and appreciate the traits of our mates.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's letter to the Ephesians in which he gave instructions to the married. When he wrote to the Corinthians emphasized the importance of love. To the Ephesians Paul made the point in Ephesians 5:21 that love places every believer in a mode of respect. Thus, out of love and respect a husband and wife mutually agree to submit themselves to one another. That is "when he's right, he's right." But it also means "when she right, she's right.

In the context of the same love, a wife agrees to follow the leadership of her husband. Moreover, the husband is commanded to love his wife like Christ loved the church. Paul took the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians to define love in no uncertain terms. Armed with that definition, believers can build relationships in Christ that last.

Establishing Relationships

One of the most vulnerable times for Christians is when they are over 18 and single. It is a time when the dating game is intense, when we should be the most careful. Single Christians should remember what the word of God says:

GUARD YOUR HEART: Proverbs 4:23 warns us to guard our heart because out of it springs the issues of life. Be careful who you share your affections with because our affections influence a great deal of who we are. Therefore, we should be careful whom we date. Every person that is good to you is not good for you.

AVOID DATING NON-CHRISTIANS: Avoid sharing your affections with persons who do not share your value set. 2 Corinthians 6:14 urges us to resist the temptation to be "yoked" with someone who is not of the same faith and value set.

TEST WHETHER ITS LOVE OR SEX: Singles should look for love traits, not sex traits in their mate. 1 Corinthians 13 provides the test. Is your mate patient with you and kind to you? Is your mate one who is never jealous, or envious of you? Does your mate build you up instead of putting you down? Does your mate avoid rudeness, always tell you the truth, trust you and work to protect or defend you? If you are sick or fail in life, will your mate be there for you over the years? Take away the sex and you have the answers to these questions staring you in the face. Sex messes up the picture. It's easy to say "I love in the throws of passion." Remove the sex and see if your mate passes the test.

IF YOU'VE GONE TOO FAR-STOP!: Confusing sex with love, there are many singles who also want to be Christians who have begun to travel down the wrong path. It is not too late to stop and return to the godly path. God is quick to forgive. 1 John 1:9 says, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

DO WHAT CHRISTIANS DO AND GOD WILL SEND A MATE: Many singles frustrate themselves trying to find on their own. Why not try it the other way around. Do what Christians do and God will send the mate in his own time and way. Genesis 24 gives a perfect picture of how Isaac met and married Rebekah. She went about her work as usual, doing what was assigned her hands to do and God pointed the servants of Abraham to her and brought her together with Isaac. The key is for young believers to be busy doing the work of the saints. Help the poor, work with children, teach, sing in the choir, carry on the ministry..God will send the mate in his own time.

Building Relationships

While singles are dealing with establishing relationships, married couples are learning how to build and strengthen relationships. Psychologists at the Minirth-Meier Clinic have identified five stages married couples pass through as they build strong, and deeply satisfying marriages.

YOUNG LOVE: The first two years of marriage are described as the period of young love. During this period a young couple begins to understand each other and begin making adjustments that make them one family. We could easily call these years the Rice Krispy and Frosted Flakes years. They are full of snap, crackle and pop that are just GREAT!

REALISTIC LOVE: Year 3 to 10 is described as the period of realistic love. It is a stressful time when the demands of child rearing, careers and our mate strain relationships. It is a dangerous period because it is often marked with frequent arguments and frustration. It is called realistic love because the couple faces the realities of the real while still loving each other. This is the period where most divorces happen or the seeds for them are planted. These years can be described as the shredded wheat years. It is good for you but it can get hard to swallow.

COMFORTABLE LOVE: Years 11 through 25 are described as the years of comfortable love. During this period many of the adjustments of the prior period have already been made and the couple is beginning to be comfortable with each other, although without all of the snap crackle and pop. One man described these years as the oatmeal years, they are not exactly exciting, but they are comfortable, warm and satisfying. Even though they are warm and comfortable the oatmeal years taste better with just a little sugar.

RENEWING LOVE: Year 26-35 are the renewal years. These are the years when the children have left home and grandchildren are nice little dolls that we can play with and send back home. They are also the years when the couple has experience losses, deaths, sickness, ailing parents and troubles. This is the period of renewal and restoration. These are the Fruit Loop years when life is once again tasty, free and colorful.

TRANSCENDENT LOVE: Year 36 and above is the kind of love that transcends. Free from many of the frustrations and struggles of those who are just beginning those who have experienced this level of love report that is a time when more than ever they have become one. They have transcended doubt, confusion, failure, disappointment, death and sickness and have become one. These years can be described as the "Continental Breakfast"-you get a little of every thing, even a little snap, crackle and pop.

Relationships Need Love to Last

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that what is needed for any relationship to last is "love." But true love cannot exist outside of God because God is love.

The love of God is a powerful sweetener that helps bind broken hearts, heal wounds, and restore lost joy.

Real love is what sweetens the flakes during the years of discovery!

Real love what makes the tough to swallow experiences in which partners often feel like shredded wheat bearable!

Real love is what makes oatmeal sweet!

All snapple, crackle and pop is alright but we still need a little something sweet!

That's where love comes in! Real love has been demonstrated to us by our savior himself.

He loved us so much that he came and demonstrated that no greater love can a man show than his willingness to lay down his life for his friends. It's love that transcends time!

It doesn't matter whether it's been 30 years or fifty years or a thousand years, he still loves us!

We know he loved us because John said, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!

It's a demonstrated on Calvary!

It's a love that proven on an old rugged cross!

It's a love renewed when arose from the grave! No wonder the song writer wrote, "Oh How I love Jesus...because he first loved me!"

Instant Food

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 21, 2002

SCRIPTURE: And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat it in haste: it is the LORD'S Passover." Exodus 12:11; "But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint." Isaiah 40:31

Introduction

Have you ever eaten on the run? We live in a fast paced nworld that has little time for anything. We like instant food, it's quick, tasty and gets the job done but doesn't take long to prepare from the consumer end. (It actually takes the same time to prepare, we just don't have to do it, it's already done by someone else.) When we are eating on the run we are looking to grab a bite as we go. It's not unusual in such circumstances for us to eat snack foods for breakfast, quick serve foods for lunch and boxed or micro waved foods for supper. The quicker the better.

Although nutrionists warn us that eating on the run is not good for us, their warnings seem to fall on deaf ears. Our cupboards are filled with everything from instant coffee, instant oatmeal, instant grits, microwave hamburgers, microwave French fries, rice in a pouch, noodles in a bag, pop tarts, ready to serve Chinese food and there are even bags of salad fixings in which the lettuce and other ingredients are already cut and package ready for instant salads.

Obviously, we live in a instant world where three minutes to pop a bag of popcorn in the microwave or to bring a pot of water to a boil seems like a lifetime.

For some, eating, like filling up the gas tank in our cars, is a necessary interruption, thus we try to get enough in our tanks as fast as we can to get us to the next stop. The thought of standing at the pump long enough to fill up the entire tank is a drudgery. There are some who approach preparing and eating food with the same attitude. They say, "If it can't be popped into the microwave or bought from Church's Chicken, then it's not worth the trouble!"

There are many who approach their spiritual nourishment with the same instant food" attitude. They want just enough spirituality to get them to the next stop. They say, "Make it quick, nutritious, and tasty." Give it to us in an instant, we've got to go!

There are still believers who a squeeze their spirituality into their schedules. They have one minute prayers, one minute devotions, one verse a day bible studies and maybe an hour once a week for a quick spiritual fix. If it takes too long they are usually gone before the benediction. On the bright side, at least these have some kind of prayer and devotional life, but on the other hand, serves the same purpose as instant food, its just enough, consumed fast enough, to get us to the next stop on time.

Instant food gets us by, but it doesn't take the place of old fashion stove top cooking. Fast food chicken may be quick, but somehow it never matches up to that good old chicken that mama fries on the stove. Instant biscuits are quick and fast, but they never seem to match up to the huge fluffy biscuits made from scratch with the butter sparkling on top. Instant coffee can get you through the craving of the moment, but it doesn't match up to the flavor of freshly brewed pot of coffee made from hand grown beans.

Likewise the best worship and praise is not the instant brand but the kind that gives God proper praise and respect for blessing us in ways that only he can do. It's not instant. It's sometimes takes a little longer, but the results linger long afterwards.

As Christians, we want to be able to respond instantly to God's commands and instructions, but we don't want to be in so big a hurry that we miss our opportunity to hear his command to move and be blessed.

Exposition

This text focuses on God's instruction to Israel to prepare the Passover meal and to prepare to eat in haste.

Israel had been slaves in Egypt for 400 years. During that time they prayed constantly that God would free them from slavery and return them to the Promised Land. When God sent Moses to tell Pharaoh to "Let my people go he accompanied his command with 10 plagues, the last of which would be so great that even the might and power of Pharaoh could not resist. After the last plague, that of the death of the first born, the people would be released.

God told the people to prepare to leave in a hurry when the command was given in preparation for the Exodus. Four days before they were to leave the people were told to assemble the ingredients for a memorial meal. Each family was to secure a lamb for the meal. Small families were allowed to join with others for the meal. They assembled the other ingredients as well, bitter herbs and batter for bread which was to be eaten unleavened.

On the evening of the Exodus each family was ordered to kill the lamb and roast it. A portion of its blood was to be used to paint a marking on three sides of the doorway to their houses. The marking would identify them as believers to God's death angel which would visit Egypt and destroy the first born of every house. With the lamb and the unleavened bread on the table that night, they were instructed to eat in haste and be prepared to move at God's command.

They were commanded to do this every year in commemoration of God's great work in delivering them. They were instructed to count their years from this event (v 1,2) by making this event each year, the first year of the month for ceremonial purposes.

The act itself had great significance for Christians as well. The lamb selected was a type of Christ who was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities. The blood shed upon the doorways was a type of the safety and security of believers who are spared the condemnation that comes with sin as long as they are covered by the blood of Christ.

Thus, Israel was told to prepare to eat in a hurry, but the food they ate took four days to assemble and prepare. They ate quickly and were ready to move at God's command. Christians are told to eat bread, not necessarily unleavened bread, as a reminder of the body of Christ who was slain. We are also told to drink wine to symbolize the blood of Christ which is the blood of the new promise to all believers.

Both were told to eat and be ready to move at God's command. For Israel, the command was to move out to possess the Promised Land. For believers, the command is to "Go ye there fore and teach all nations.."

Hurry Up and Wait

Israel was told to prepare their food then wait. It took them four days to do that. We have learned the hurry up part of that lesson, we are bothered by the wait.

We live in a hurry up society that gets impatient when it has to wait.

We don't want to wait on anything!

In most modern homes the bathtub is used less because it takes too long. Showers are faster!

There are brands of shampoo on the market now that have the conditioner in the same container, to save another step!

What we like about Big Macs and Whoppers is not so much their taste, as is the fact that they are fast!

Dominoes Pizza became one of the biggest names in pizza not because its pizza tasted so good but because they promised delivery within 30 minutes or the pizza was free!

In Illinois there is a funeral home that has a drive through window to view the dead, for those who want to quickly pay their respects.

There is a fast lane at the grocery store and the left lane of most interstate highways is the fast lane.

We are constantly running. John Ortberg in his book, "The life You've always wanted" compares our hurry up life to that described by the Red Queen in Alice in Wonderland. The Red Queen said to Alice, "Now HERE, you see, it takes all the RUNNING you can do, to keep in the same place. If you want to get somewhere else, you must run at least TWICE AS FAST as that"

We know that's true, because the week won't pass without hearing the phrase, I'll see you later, I've got to run!

Often we run past our families!

Often we run past our church!

Often we run past our God!

Instant is not always better

Instant is not always better. Old Fashioned oats takes longer but it tastes better. Old fashioned home cooked burgers are slower, but taste better than Big Macs. There are other areas too.

INSTANT RELATIONSHIPS ARE NOT AS GOOD: Instant people have a problem building relationships. We can become so instant oriented that we judge relationships with people based upon how much time that will consume. So, caller-id's on our phones help us to ignore those that will take up our time or waste our time. Relationships take time.

INSTANT LOVE IS NOT BETTER: Instant love is frustrating. Love and instant are incompatible because love deals with two things: feelings and action. Love is a succession of feelings that are nurtured through time spent together. A minute here and a moment there is instant love, but it is also frustrating love. Love is also an action word; it is better shown that spoken. Love that is shown over time is better than instant love any day.

INSTANT RELIGION IS NOT BETTER: Instant people are in such a hurry that they have little time for God. Things that are godly often take up tremendous amounts of time. Bible study is not instant, it takes time. A real prayer life is not instant, but it takes time. True worship is not instant, it takes time. An instant person considers the amount of time set aside for worship, prayer, bible study and spiritual growth as an encroachment upon his schedule. Such a person looks for the quick version that can give a quick fix.

Is there an instant way to tell God thanks for his blessings?

Is there an instant way to praise him for his goodness?

Is it a symptom of our "instant" mentality to pray and then ask God to answer it "right now!"-Instantly!

Wait On an instant God

Finally, it is good that we remember that despite the hurried pace of our world it better for us to wait and let God be instant God that he is.

There was no person whose daily life was more crowded than Jesus. He was constantly surrounded by crowds who wanted to see him or touch him. Jesus always found a way to slow his pace by retreating in a boat, praying in a garden, or crossing over to the other side.

What he came to do could not be done instantly it would take time.

When Jesus told his disciples that he was the bread of heaven, it wasn't instant bread but it was bread that had been prepared from the beginning of time.

Thus, the word of God encourages saints not to be in a hurry, but to learn to wait on the Lord!

Isaiah said, “They that wait on the Lord, shall renew their strength. They shall mount up on wings as eagles. They shall run and not be weary. They shall walk and not faint!”

Psalm 27:14 says, “Wait on the LORD: be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart: wait, I say, on the LORD.”

Because the bible encourages us to wait on the Lord, it does not mean that God is a slow God and that we have to slow down for him to catch up to us. It means we have to be patient for God to move in his own time.

While it’s not advisable for us to hurry God, it is good to know that we serve an instant God.

While it’s not recommended that we tell God when and how to act, it is good to know that we serve an on time God!

Sound travels at a speed of 1085 feet per second, but before we speak the words of any prayer, the answer is on the way!

Light travels at speeds above 5,000 feet per second, but long before we can see it, God makes a way out of no way!

A widow woman with an issue of blood, pushed her way through a crowd. When she touched the hem of his garment, instantly she was made whole!

A centurion soldier asked Jesus to speak the word for his daughter’s healing, and instantly it was done.

No wonder the song writer declared, “He may not come when you want him, but he’s right on time!”

In the fullness of time, God sent his only begotten Son to be a living sacrifice!

He died on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!

One of these days, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye we shall be caught up to meet him in the air! Instantly

Gate Keepers and Door Openers

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 24, 2002

SCRIPTURE: And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to hearken, named Rhoda.And when she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for gladness, but ran in, and told how Peter stood before the gate. And they said unto her, Thou art mad. But she constantly affirmed that it was even so. Then said they, It is his angel. But Peter continued knocking: and when they had opened the door, and saw him, they were astonished. Acts 12:13-16

Introduction

How important is the person you meet at the door of an assembly? Most would agree that the first face you see is an important face at any gathering. The person who meets and greets is extremely important. We should never minimize the role of the greeter. When former Heavy Weight Champion Joe Louis fell from grace, there were many who believed that he lowered himself to become a doorman at a hotel. The hotel didn't think so. He was one the best paid doorman they had ever seen. People from everywhere came to the hotel just to see the world famous Joe Louis. While ushers may not have national renown of Joe Louis people none the less choose their places of worship largely by how they feel about the people who receive them.

Gates and doors have two purposes. They either keep something out or let something in. The person who keeps the door does both.

The gate keeper has a great responsibility. If that responsibility is not taken seriously it can cause tremendous problems. Consider the man who got a job as a night watchman at a factory. There had been a lot of thefts by the workers on the night shift, and so every morning when the night shift workers passed through his gate it was his job to check their bags and pockets to make sure that nothing was being stolen. Things were going along very well the first night on the job until a man pushing a wheelbarrow of newspapers came through his gate. Aha, he thought, that man thinks he can cover up what he is stealing with that newspaper. So he removed the paper only to find nothing. Still he felt that the man was acting strangely, so he questioned him about the paper. "I get a little extra money from newspapers I recycle, so I go into the lunchroom and pick up all the ones people have thrown away." The guard let him pass but decided to keep a close eye on him. The next night it was the same, and the night after that. Week after week it went on. The same guy would push the wheelbarrow of newspapers past the guard's checkpoint. The guard would always check and find nothing. Then one night, about a year later, the guard reported for work only to find a message had been left for him telling him to report to his supervisor. He walked into the supervisor's office and before he could say a word, the boss said, "You're fired!" "Fired?" he asked in total surprise. "Why? What did I do?" "It was your job to make sure that no one stole anything from this plant and you have failed." "Wait a minute, what do you mean failed. Nobody ever stole anything from this place while I was on guard." "Oh, really," the boss answered. "Then how do you explain that there are 365 days in the last year and we are missing 365 wheelbarrows?" -The gatekeeper let the crook walk right by.

What if the gatekeepers of the church are not sharp enough to know the tricks of those who want to slip foreign doctrines and ideas into the church. There are 52 Sundays in a year and every Sunday somebody could get by us without being noticed, if we are not careful.

Ushers are important not only as greeters but as gatekeepers as well. We praise God for good ushers who know their jobs and do them well.

As Christians, our goal is to guard the gate of the church to keep out unwanted ideas, doctrines and practices. At the same time, it is our responsibility to be gate openers, to welcome "whosoever will" to the throne of grace.

Exposition

This text focuses on how the power of God guarded a gate and opened a door for a believer.

Twelve years after the crucifixion of Christ, the church had grown to an astronomical size. King Herod Agrippa became an enemy of the church, much like his brother Herod before whom Jesus stood. As the church began to grow he ordered the capture of James and had him decapitated. James and his brother John were well known among believers. In fact they were called the "Sons of Thunder." When news of his death spread, fear went through the church.

When James was arrested the church took it lightly. They expected him to be released. When he was killed they were shaken. Soon after, Peter was arrested and the church became extremely alarmed. He was kept under guard of four soldiers.

The church did something for Peter they did not do for James. It went into prayer. In the middle of the night an angel of the Lord woke Peter, threw open the gate, and allowed him to walk free. At first Peter thought it was a dream but when he woke, he realized that he was really free.

At Mary's house he knocked on the gate that guarded the house where the disciples prayed. The gate was kept locked to protect other disciples from soldiers or others that might sneak upon them while they prayed and worship. A woman by the name of Rhoda came to the gate and notice that it was Peter. Leaving him outside, she ran back in to tell the others that Peter was free. They did not believe her and insisted it was Peter's angel.

All the while Peter kept knocking at the gate!

Finally the door was opened to him and they heard the good news of God's deliverance!

Gate Keepers

The text points us to a gate being kept and door being opened.

Ushers are gate keepers but as such there are a few considerations they should keep in mind.

GATE KEEPERS MUST KEEP THE DEVIL OUT: Ushers must be very careful to keep the devil out. Often the devil may not come in the front door, because we will be watching for him. Sometimes the devil finds a way to come in by riding in the wheelbarrow with an usher. Ushers must always be careful not to let the devil in their midst. The devil can get into church by getting in with the gate keepers. Usually, the devil will find a way to turn the gate keepers against each other. It's not hard to do. He can make them argue over uniforms, positions and other petty things. He can make them so mad that they refuse to speak to each other or work together. While they are watching the door trying to keep him out, he's sitting in the usher's section laughing up a storm. No wonder the song writer would say, "Don't let the devil ride. If you let him ride, he'll want to drive, don't let him ride!"

GATE KEEPERS MUST KNOW WHEN TO OPEN THE GATE: Rhoda opened the door but she wanted to be sure it was the right time to open the gate. Sometimes ushers open the gate at the wrong time. There are times in a worship service when the doors are closed. The doors and closed during worship, just as they were in this text.

When the church is reading from the word in a responsive reading or a group reading, the gate is closed in respect for the word of God. There should be no one walking or trying to find a seat when the bible is being read.

When the church is praying, the gate is closed. It is most disrespectful for visitors to enter the sanctuary of a church while someone is praying, trying to find a seat for themselves while others are trying to talk to God.

An important part of the worship is the offering. No worship is complete without an opportunity for believers to witness to God through giving an offering. While many churches want as many people as they can get to be inside during the offering; in reality the offering is a part of the worship and the gate should be closed.

GATE KEEPERS PROTECT THE WORD: In the old church, ushers were also consider gatekeepers of the word. Not only was there an usher stationed at the doors to keep the gates from the outside, but there were also members of the Levitical class whose task it was to provide for preaching teaching by ministering to the priests. In the old church there was at least one usher who kept the pastor's door. If someone was upset about something, they had to talk to pastor after he preached, not before. If they had a concern about the operation of the church that might break the pastor's train of thought, they would have a tough time getting pass the usher that kept the pastor's door. In addition, they saw to it that whatever it took to facilitate the preaching of the gospel was provided Such as a glass of water or a fresh hanky; they saw that it happened. In addition, the gatekeepers must study the word. They did not neglect Sunday School and bible study because knowing the word themselves help them to better promote and respond to the word!

Know who to let in

Not only do does a good gatekeeper know whom they should keep out, they know who to let in!

When Rhoda saw Peter standing at the gate, she was not absolutely sure of what she saw. But when the disciples came they hear Peter knocking on the door and they opened it to let him in!

That lets me know that not only are ushers gate-keepers but they are also door-openers!

In this text Peter was a type of Christ because he was knocking at the door! Revelation 3:20 shows Jesus standing on the outside, saying, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

I don't know about you, but I've found out that powerful things happen in the life of a church "when he comes in."

When an usher becomes a door opener, he introduces someone who is lost to someone who can show him the way!

When an usher becomes a door opener, he

-SHOWS THE WEAK how to find knew strength

-SHOWS THE DISCOURAGED how to find new inspiration

-SHOWS THE DISENCHANTED how to find new hope!

When an usher becomes a door opener he gives an invitation to the world to come see a man who can

-Comfort us in our sorrow; Assure us in our difficulties

-Strengthen us in our weakness; Encourage us in our trials

-Direct us in our decisions; Help us in our duties

-Anoint us in our ministries; defend us in our battles

I heard David declare: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in."

Who is the king of glory? The Lord Strong and Mighty!

Who is the king of glory? The Lord mighty in battle!

We never know who comes in because the world wants to know about Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and arose after three days!

Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith!

Keep the gate but open the door of your heart and he will come in!

SCRIPTURE:"For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do. Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." Romans 7:19-20.

Introduction

Have you ever been really hooked on someone or something? I mean really hooked! It can mess with your mind. Those who remember their teen years and thereafter, can remember the times in your life when you were really hooked on someone. All day long you thought about them. In class, you scribbled their names on sheets of paper. Maybe you toyed with the idea of fixing your name with their name just to see how it sounded for future purposes. Sometimes you wrote them letters and mingled the letters in with your paper work to appear to be studying. On breaks you looked for them. You wanted to sit next to this person; touch them and just hear their voice as long as you could. At night you slipped and called them on the phone and maybe even whispered to keep your parents from knowing you were on the phone. When you finally closed your eyes you saw a music video in your head. Of course there were only two people in the video..the two of you. In the morning you spelled the persons name in bowl of Alphabet cereal and wrote it on your books. Day in and day thoughts of this person dominate your every waking hour. When that happens friends, you've got it bad. Your fixation grows into a compulsion. There are some who completely nut up of another person appears in their day dream and messes it up. Then the fixation becomes a fatal attraction and you really nut up! When you can't break away, then you know; you got it bad!

A while back there was song hit the top of the charts by "Usher" The song was very popular and was titled, "You got it bad!"

U got, u got it bad
When you're on the phone
Hang up and you call right back
U got, u got it bad
If you miss a day without your friend
Your whole life's off track
You know you got it bad when you're stuck in the house
You don't wanna have fun

It's all you think about
U got it bad when you're out with someone
But you keep on thinkin' bout somebody else
U got it bad

Obviously when we get in that deep, you got it bad! There is old saying that your "nose is wide open!" You are "Whipped!"

Infatuations are a normal part of teen life. Teens who are infatuated with another person however, should not confuse it with "love." Infatuations come and go and the feel like love at the moment. Your hand sweats, heart pounds and life just takes your breath away at the thought of Mr. Dynamite and Miss Gorgeous.

But there are some done have mild case of infatuation, they have it bad. Real bad. We have seen them. Some people who have it bad unstable people, have mood shifts and angry outbursts with little provocation; they are impulsive in their behavior; can make suicide attempts, often to manipulate others; they seem to lack a coherent sense of self and identity; and cling to others hoping to get it from relationships; terrified of being abandoned and alone. Such people, like Glen Close in the movie "Fatal Attraction" can be dangerous as well.

It's not just people that can get us hooked, but we can get hooked on a passion or pastime. We can get hooked on football, basketball, video games to a point that they are the only things we think about! We get hints that we have it bad when we mistakenly call any adult figure "coach." When we consider leaving home for school "getting off the bench and going into the game" and prepare to "slam dunk" a test! We have it bad when we pass by a computer at school and want to touch the key board to see if our favorite game is installed!

There are some forces in this world that are so strong that once they make headway into our lives, they take control, for better or worse. They are called compulsions. What's your compulsion? Is it wine, women or wild living? Is there another dark passion that has taken over the reigns of your self control?

If so, don't feel like the Lone Ranger, you're not by yourself, there are millions of people like yourself who have "got it bad!"

As Christians, we are happy to know that our attraction to the savior is not an infatuation, fad, pass time or fatal attraction. We are drawn to Christ because he first loved us. That's why we sing, "Oh how I love Jesus, because he first loved me!"

Exposition

Our text first considers Paul writing to the Romans about the relationship of the Mosaic law to his life as a Christian. In short, Paul told the Romans that the law served the purpose of showing him what his sins were but it lacked the power to deliver him from the penalties of sin.

In verses 7-14 he tells how sin was more powerful than the law itself. In verses 15-25 he tells how sin is even more powerful than the man who is a slave to sin himself. In other words, there is a force in the world that is more powerful than any man or woman can handle and can make them do wrong, even when they want to do right.

In these verses Paul describes in vivid detail a man or a woman who "has it bad."

When we don't do what we should; and things that we should do, we don't; and things that we hate we do, then we are stricken with a bad case of the can't help its. (v. 15)

Moreover, when we do things we do not intend to do we are possessed for a moment, a day, or a week by the power of sin. In verse 17 Paul says "It's no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." In verse 18 he explains further that the will to do right is present in me, but the power to do right is just not present.

Listen as verse 19 tells the story: The good things that I want to do, I don't do them; the evil things that I do not want to do, I do them anyway.
It is the classic example of a man or woman who's "got it bad!"

Got it bad

There are many today who have it bad.

POSSESSION OF THINGS: The world of teens is plastered with images of conspicuous consumption. The concept is "if you've got it floss it!" or show it off. There are many who have gone beyond simply having a few nice changes of clothing, they've got it bad! There are some who must wear designer clothing and must wear the absolute latest fashions. They have got it bad! There is nothing wrong with the clothes they have but they want more, shoes, dresses, tennis or anything else that has been worn or endorsed by a star! This is what happened to the rich farmer in a parable Jesus told. He had full barns already, but he tore down his barn to build bigger barns. He had to have more. He had it so bad that it prompted Jesus to ask the question, "What profit a man if he gains the whole world and loses his soul?"

OVERACHIEVING: There are many people who are achievers. Then there are others who are overachievers, those who have developed a compulsion about achievement to the point that nothing else matters. They have it bad! There are some overachievers that want to win so bad that they will cheat on tests and steal to get what they want. This could easily be called the Tonya Harding Syndrome. In 1994 Harding was competing in the Olympics but wanted to win so bad that she reportedly participated in a scheme to injure the front runner, Nancy Kerrigan. Since then her name is always linked to examples of people who want to win at any cost. Ananias and Sapphari wanted the praise of men so bad that they lied about what they gave to the church. They gained a moment of praise but lost their lives because the had it bad.

HARMFUL HABITS: Harmful habits are hard to break. Teens slip around a little have a smoke, then there are two smokes, then a pack and before you know it, they have "got it bad!" The same could be said for drinking, sex and drugs. Someone experiments with a small amount at the beginning and the next thing they know they have "got it bad." Even marginal attitude shifts can turn out to be "bad" –real bad as our attitudes toward life and relationships turn sour.

Many bible characters had it "bad!"

David looked out of his window and saw Bathsheba bathing on her terrace and said to himself, man "you got it bad!"

The rich young ruler wanted the kingdom of heaven but loved his possessions more and he turned down glory for a fistful of dollars because he had it bad!

Samson was a powerful man of God who could tie tails of foxes together and carry the gates of cities on his shoulders, but he met his downfall in the arms of Delilah. When he met Delilah, he realized that he had it bad!

Somebody here today has it bad.
Paul says that when you have it "bad" you are a miserable and wretched man. You are a miserable and wretched woman because you are:

—doing things you don't want to do
—going places you don't want to go —drinking things you don't want to drink
—saying things you don't want to say

I hear Paul say "oh wretched man am I!"

I don't know about you, but I want to make it to the kingdom, but I can't make it by myself.

I want to walk the streets of glory, but I found out, that you can't walk this pilgrim way, and walk it by yourself.

I want to live the Christian life, but I found out that you can't do it all by yourself. Every time you try to do it all by yourself, you'll end up doing what you don't want to do. You can't walk this road all by yourself.

No wonder the song writer wrote: "Walk with me Lord, Walk with me, while I'm on this tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus, to walk with me."

-II-
Christians have it bad too!

Finally brothers and sisters we must consider that Christians "have it bad too!"

Since we have come to know the Lord there are many things that have changed in our lives to the point that others around us say, "You've Got it bad!"

When others on campus see Christian students giving up what they call fun school activities so they go to church and rehearse for the youth choir, they say, "you got it bad!"

When you refuse to dress like a hoochimama and because your faith in God teaches you to be modest in your attire, your friends may say, "you got I bad!"

When you wear shirt tail tucked in, a belt on your pants and keep your hair neatly trimmed, there are some who might say, man you are really into that church stuff, "You got it bad!"

When you talk more about your church, faith and God than you do about sports, movies and videos, your friends will quickly say to you, "you got it bad!"

I hear Paul asking a question at verse 24 "Who can deliver me from this body of death?" That's a question that every child of God can answer when people ask, "How did you get so wrapped up in the Lord?"

There was a time when I didn't like coming to Sunday School, but now I'm regular in my attendance!

There was a time when all I did was play basketball, but now I play basketball and make slam dunks for the Lord!

There was a time that if I had to choose between the church and school, the church would lose!

Satan had me in the palm of his hand, doing what he wanted me to do! I had it bad! Then I heard Paul ask the question, "Who can deliver me, from the body of death?"

I'm caught up in a vicious cycle, doing things that I do want to do and living a life that I don't want to live. Who can deliver me from my "on-again, off-again" relationship with God, where Satan operates mylife at a distance by remote control.

"Who can deliver me from this body of death?" I heard Paul say thank God for Jesus! For he can save us from this body of death.

No wonder the song writer wrote: I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore, very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more, but the master of the sin heard my despairing cry, and from the waters lifted me now safe am I. Love lifted me. When nothing else could help love lifted me.!"

I'm reminded of the mother who took her son to the doctor and explained that he had come down with a sickness that she could not explain. She said "doctor his knees bend frequently, and his hand keeps extending. His head keeps bowing and he seems to have developed a bleeding heart, and this thing gets worse, the closer it gets to Sunday."

The doctor asked the youth what was his problem and the man responded that he had recently gone to a revival and had accepted Christ and it looked like right after that his strange behavior began:

—A STRANGE CASE OF THE BENDED KNEE: Because every time he faced a difficult moment he found himself on his knees talking to the Lord.

—AN UNEXPLAINED CASE OF THE HELPING HAND: When ever someone needed help he was quick to respond. He found himself humming "if I can help somebody as I pass along then my living shall not be in vain."

—UNPREDICTABLE SPASMS PRAISING LIPS: Whatever happened in life in found himself saying praise the Lord and lifting him up!

—UNCONTROLLABLE CLAPPING HANDS and STOMPING FEET: Every time he thought about the goodness of the Lord he had to clap his hands and stomping fee!

The man said he's alright on Monday and Tuesday, but the closer it got to Sunday, he found himself anxious to make it to the house of God. The doctor said there is noting wrong with you but whatever you've got, you got it bad!

There is somebody here today that's got a bad for Jesus!

Tell everybody how he died and how he rose again!
I just can't keep it to myself! I got it bad!

Stay on Course

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "Neither give heed to fables, and endless genealogies which minister questions, rather than edifying which is in the faith: so do. Now the end of the commandment is charity out of pure heart, aynd of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned: from which some having swerved have turned aside to vain jangling." 1 Timothy 1:4-6

Introduction

Have you wandered off your course? The times in our lives when we have been off course are those times when we strayed from the goal or mark that we set for ourselves. We started in the right direction then found ourselves sidetracked for one reason or another. Wandering off course is not unique to any person or race. The educated wander off course just as well as the undereducated. The rich and poor alike, can both wander off course. Those who are just beginning in life can wander off course and so can those who have been traveling for a long time. Anyone can wander off course.

At the beginning of this year, many set goals for themselves, but have already strayed off the course. Was it a commitment you made to your family? Your church? Or was it simply a commitment you made for self improvement that has been placed on the "back burner" of your life or now occupies the bottom rung of your priority list.

There are various reasons why we strayed from our course but all they do is provide an explanation but not an excuse for our present course. Staying on course requires a measure of personal discipline that requires a higher power than ourselves to dictate. We need God to help us stay on course.

When do we know that we are off course? We know we are off course when we begin to sense that we are moving away from our goal rather than moving toward it. If our goal is to complete our education and we drop out of school, we are off course. We may be forced to take fewer classes and carry a lighter load, but we are still on course as long as we stay in school. If our goal is to save our money to one day own a home or start a business, we know we are off course if we start dipping into the savings for purposes not related to the goal.

It is also possible to become spiritually off course. We are spiritually off course when we start out to make the kingdom of God our first priority, but get side tracked by other priorities such as careers, money making opportunities, romance, politics, and social concerns. We can get so side tracked that spiritually we are only a shell of what we once were, going through the motions without substance or strength in any of our actions.

We are challenged as believers to press on toward the mark of the high calling which is in Jesus Christ. Believers must keep their eyes on the cross if they expect to avoid straying off course.

As Christians, we resolve to avoid the temptations and distractions that would pull us off track and lead us away from a stronger relationship with Christ. Our strength is in him. Our hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. We dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the Solid Rock we stand, all other ground is sinking sand!

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul instructing Timothy to guard the instruction of the saints in Ephesus against false teaching to stay the course.

Paul wrote epistles to two young men in the gospel that are generally referred to pastoral epistles. These two young men were Timothy and Titus, both of whom Paul entrusted to insure that the doctrine of Jesus Christ remained scripturally correct.

In verse three he warned Timothy to see to it that no other doctrine was taught.

In verse four he charged Timothy to make sure that believers were not taken off course by fables, genealogies philosophical questions that raise doubt rather than confirm faith.

He pointed out in the same verse that edifying God in faith is something that should be done. Edifying God means to build up or strengthen.

The purpose of the commandments of God is to inspire love and acts of love (charity) that spring from a pure heart, are performed with a good conscience with unfeigned faith (sincere faith.)

Timothy had his hands full for sure. There were many fables that were being promoted during his time, among them were the familiar legends and stories that were circulated among the Jews that were not a part of the divine word of God. . Most Catholic Bibles for example contain 14 such books call the Apocrypha that are not in bibles used by Baptists and other non-Catholics. The Apocrypha contain some very imaginative accounts of some real events but were not divinely inspired.

Just as there were those who moved the church off course with fables there were others who moved the church off track with genealogies.They stressed their ancestry, who they were, where they came from, their family ties,etc. This is what Timothy faced when he addressed the believers in Ephesus.

Straying Off Course

Straying off course is not difficult. There are many who began their journey in the Christian faith completely on course. They sought to make heaven their home, but somewhere along the way they were drawn off course.

OUR COURSE SHOULD LINE UP WITH GOD'S COURSE: In our life's pursuit we should make sure that what we are trying to do in life lines up with God's course. Will the activity that I'm involved in keep me on course with God's course. Or will it take me in a different direction? What is the course that will take me to glory? The road to have is paved with love and acts of love that are performed with a pure heart, by persons who are striving obey God to the best of their ability and can stand before him with a good conscience and a sincere faith in Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior. (v5)

GOD'S COURSE IS DETAILED IN THE WORD OF GOD: The word of God is the compass that we use to determine whether or we are on or off course. We measure every direction we take against the word of God. Just as a compass always points North, the same is true concerning God's word. It always points the way to glory. The word of God teaches us to trust in the Lord, with all thine heart and lean not unto thy own understandings. In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths." Proverbs 3:5-6. No matter which way we try to go, the Word of God points us in one direction, that's the godly way to glory!

GOD'S COURSE LEAVES US WITH A CLEAR CONSCIENCE: Those who choose to follow God's course always have a clear conscience because they have followed God's instruction to the letter. Joshua 1:7 says, "Be strong and very courageous. Be careful to obey all laws my servant Moses gave you. Do not turn from it to the right or to the left that you may be successful wherever you go." Being obedient to God clears our conscience. It gives us the ability to stand before him knowing that we have done what was required of us and have not strayed.

The Course to Calvary

Finally, brothers and sisters, there is no course we can take to spiritual success that will not take us to Calvary!

The essence of the Christian struggle is to glorify God in all that we do and say. We strive to glorify him in a way that builds the kingdom of God.

That's why Paul told Timothy, forgetting those things which are behind, I press on toward the mark of the high calling which is in Jesus Christ.

Those who want to stay on course with the Lord must do the same thing. We keep our eye on Jesus, because we can't make it to glory without knowing the Lord!

There are some courses in life that are nonrestrictive and are all inclusive.

You buy gasoline for your car from Chevron or Texaco, but you don't have know the president of the company. But if you want to get to glory you got to know Jesus!

You can be a member of Sam's Clubs and buy merchandise at Walmart without every meeting a descendant of Sam Walton, but if you want to get to glory you got to know Jesus!

You can by a Ford or a Lincoln without every knowing Henry Ford, III, but if you want to get to get to glory you got to know Jesus!

You can buy a Wendy's hamburger, French fries and a drink without having known Dave Thomas, but if you want to get to glory you got to know Jesus!

No wonder the song writer wrote: “You got to know Jesus. You got to know God for yourself. If you know Jesus you don’t need nobody else!”

You must follow Jesus who told his disciples that if they wanted to get to glory, “sell all you have, take up your cross and follow me!”

Follow me, though the storms rise! Follow me, though the winds may blow!

Follow me, though the mountains are high!

No wonder the song writer declared, follow Jesus, take no chance at getting lost.if Jesus can’t take you to the top, nobody else can!”

Jesus died out on Calvary!But Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave to point us to the way!

Follow Jesus! Stay on Course!

No. 895-Mothers

Before Her Pains Came

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 12, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "Before she travailed; before her pain came, she was delivered of a man child." Isaiah 66:7

Introduction

What if it were announced today that there is a new childbirth technique that would completely eliminate the pain of childbirth? Would there be a market for it? If such a technique could insure that regardless of the instance, no mother would ever have to endure the pain of childbirth again, without a doubt that technique would become the most popular medical innovation of all times. While many mothers speak fondly of the joy of childbirth they also speak with disdain about the pain of labor. In fact, many conclude that childbirth would be a breeze if it were not for the labor pains. Any technique that could guarantee a painless childbirth is always welcomed by expectant mothers, especially in modern times.

Just what is labor anyway? Any mother could easily answer that question. However, for the sake of the fathers and non-mothers among us, the term labor is used to describe the final hours before a child is born. For first-time mothers, the process of labor and delivery takes an average of 15 hours, although for plenty of women it lasts more than 20 hours, and for a lucky few it's over much sooner. For women who've been through labor before, later deliveries average around eight hours.

While there have been a few labors that have been shorter than eight hours the world's longest labor was reported on January 3rd 2000. In Rockville Maryland doctors described what has been called a medical marvel when a woman delivered a healthy baby after 153 days of labor. When Mindy Rosenthal attempted to give birth to twins the first child was stillborn. Moments after the first twin was born dead Aug. 3, obstetrician Sheri Hamersley placed a stitch the thickness of a shoelace at the opening of the womb to prevent the second baby from following immediately and dying as well. 153 days later the doctors at shady Grove Adventist hospital set a world record for the longest case of arrested labor.

The mere thought of a 153 day labor sends chills down the spine of every mother.

Fathers and other women who have never delivered a child, do not have the slightest idea what it means to endure labor pains. A father's idea of labor pain may be the discomfort he feels as he sits on a hard waiting room chair. A father's idea of labor pain could be restricted to the discomfort of drinking several cups of cold or lukewarm coffee as he waits. Fathers have heard the descriptions of labor discomforts from their wives but do not have the faintest idea what it means or feels like to endure labor pains.

Medical experts remind us that long before the actual physical labor pains begin that there is also a period of travail. In this period of doubt and discomfort many Christian mothers have drawn on their faith in God to produce the strength to endure the difficulties of parenting that lay ahead. In fact, many Christian mothers confess that it was in the time "before their pains came" that they learned how to lean on the Lord.

It was before her pains came that the Christian mother saw the great revelations of the coming future.

Before her pains came she was sustained by the thought of tiny hands, hungry eyes, and cuddly bodies all blessed by the grace of God.

In all truth, the Christian mother was blessed before she went into the delivery room, while she endured her labor, and after she gave birth to a child. The God she served blessed are before her pains came and gave her and assurance that even in her sorrow she would find joy.

As Christians, we rejoice in knowing that the God we serve knows about our frustrations, difficulties troubles and long before our pains come, makes a way for our deliverance with joy.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he tells of the wondrous way that God will bless Israel.

The nation of Israel had fallen upon hard times. The glory it once knew as the premier example of how God blesses a nation had become a mere shadow of its former excellence. It now stood in exile, mere chattel, a nation of slaves and vagabonds. The people cried out to God for deliverance and received an answer.

The prophet Isaiah delivered God's response by characterizing the people as a mother facing the ordeal and prospect of birth pains. Isaiah raised the expectations of the people to a new height when he prophesied that God would respond to their pleas even before they had a chance to travail long in their troubles. The answer to their prayers would be delivered even before their travail had been completed.

Isaiah's summary was a paradox to say the least. "Before she travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came, she was delivered of a man child." It was a paradox because it appeared to suggest that God would deliver an answer or a blessing in response to a travailing condition even before the condition completed its cycle. If Israel was compared to a mother with child, then what Isaiah actually said was that God would deliver the nation of Israel without labor pains.

Verse eight asks the question, "Who hath heard of such a thing?" Is it possible? Then the same verse gives the answer, that God delivered Zion as soon as she began to feel her first contractions and set her free.

In a purely physiological sense, there is no biblical precedent for women giving birth without labor pains. The closest the Bible record details of such an event would be the account in Exodus chapter one in which the midwives were ordered to kill the male babies of every household. The midwives refused to slay the male children and made up false tales about the ability of Hebrew women to deliver children so quickly that before the midwives could arrive, the male children had been born, in effect bypassing labor altogether.

However, as a picture of Israel in exile, the example of the child being born before the onset of labor is the exact picture that God wanted to present to Israel. His message was simple. Even though they were in exile in a strange land and were beginning to feel the full impact of their slave status, that before they began to feel the full strain of their travail God would deliver them. Historically, this happened when the king of Persia ordered the release of the Hebrews from their exile and allowed them to return to Jerusalem just as quickly as they had come. Thus, the prophecy was fulfilled, "Before her pains came, she was delivered..."

Before, during and after their hardships and troubles, God made a way for his people.

The Pains of motherhood

What are the pains of motherhood? What are the unique circumstances that challenge mothers today? Is God unaware of the problems of today's mother? Does he have a response that is relevant to the problems and concerns of the modern woman? The word suggests that regardless of the situation, before a Christian mothers pain comes, she is delivered.

SINGLE MOTHERS: A growing phenomenon in modern times in the appearance of the single mother. This is the mother who either by choice or circumstance bears the responsibility of child-rearing from the perspective of both father and mother. In addition to that responsibility single mothers have a tremendous need for support from their family and friends. Various factors contribute to arise in single mothers. Some mothers are single because of divorce or the death of a spouse. Others are single for a variety of other reasons. Regardless of the reason single mothers can feel isolated and rejected if they are unable to see the outstretched hands of love and friendship as expressed by those around them. Hagar was a single mother who was rejected by Sarah, Abraham's wife and banished from their home. Alone and without help Hagar faced the prospect of death in the wilderness. However, before her pain came, she heard a word from the Lord. Would not die, but God would save her life and bless her child to be the father of a great nation. Even today, single mothers who are frustrated over their circumstance should remember that before your pains came, God made a way for you and will not abandon you or reject you because of your present circumstance.

STRUGGLING MOTHER: In many homes today, mothers are struggling to make ends meet. They are fighting desperately to balance what little they have with the great demands of life in modern times. Often mothers find that they run out of things. Mothers often run out of money. Mothers sometimes run out of resources and find themselves stretched from one end to another often robbing Peter to pay Paul. Some mothers have become literal scavengers, saving morsels of bread for a pudding; and recycling rummage items to provide their families. There was a widow woman in Scripture was also a struggling mother. She picked up sticks and scraped her barrel every day. She understood what it meant to struggle. But before she endured the pain of starvation she received a word from the Lord that reassured her that God was aware of her circumstance. Before her barrel ran dry, God kept filling it up again!

AGONIZING MOTHER: The agonizing mothers are a composite of all mothers. Agonizing mothers are single, married, struggling and prayerful. Agonizing mothers see their children for what they are and stand beside them even in the worst times. When Jesus was a child Mary cared for him, worried about him and no doubt scolded him a time or two. She watched as he learned the family trade, taught him the lessons of the Torah until it became obvious that she should have been the student rather than the teacher. When he began his ministry she followed him closely. When he was crucified her eyes welled with pain and her heart broke as she watched her son stripped naked and hanging from a Roman cross. There are millions of mothers today who agonize over their children. They worry about their safety and the direction they take. They lose sleep at night as they worry about their children's future. Many have calloused knees from so many nights of fervent prayer as they agonize over every detail of lives just beyond their reach. Yet even as their children were walking out of the front door to begin their own lives, God was making a way.

Long before our pains came..

Finally, brothers and sisters we should remember that long before we begin to agonize about our children, the Lord is making a way!

That is the lesson that every good mother knows, that long before we ask him, God is already working on the answer to our prayer.

Long before mama started to worry about how to the pay lights, water, and gas God was already planning to show her how to manage!

Without a college degree in business administration, she turned a sugar bowl, mattress and handkerchief into her own Savings and Loan Association, saving for a rainy day. It didn't pay any interest, but God supplied the grace!

Long before mama got a chance to worry about the health of her children, God had already completed the diagnosis and the prognosis and sent help on the way!

If a child had a fever, a little Salhepatica around the neck would drive the fever away. In the cold of winter, a table spoon of Castor oil every other day, kept the doctor away! If there was a splinter in a foot, it was nothing that a little fat salt meat and the Lord couldn't handle!

Long before mama started to worry about what her children would wear, God took the needle and thread of heaven and threw out Tommy Hilfiger and gave them clothes by mommy and His finger!

Somebody remembers how mama would break out the old Singer sewing machine with the foot paddle on the floor or use a needle, thread and a thimble to make the girls dresses out of left over materials, but the left home they looked like they had step out of a Sears Roebuck catalog!

Long before mama had a chance to worry about how she would feed her children, the Lord had prepared a table for her in the presence of her enemies.

The Lord showed mama how to take the scraps and turn them into gormets. It was only the hand of the Lord that could take bread crumbs and turn them into dressing. It was only the hand of the Lord that could that show mama how to bake possoms and coons in giant pans surrounded by candied yams,.

Only the hand of the Lord could show mama how to pickle a pig's feet, fill a stack of Mason jars full of canned peaches and pears and call them home made preserves!

Only the hand of the Lord could show mama how to reach into the throw aways of the hog pen and serve a whole giant plates of fresh boiled chitterlings!

As I close I'm reminded of the mother who was upset with her son because he sold drugs. She told him that she had nightmares of his lying in a pool of blood and begged him not to sell drugs. He left the house packing a suitcase full of drugs and a .45 caliber pistol. But before he could reach his destination he had a flat tire and had to pull to the side of the road. As he tried to fix the flat the police passed by with lights flashing. Soon he could hear gunfire up the way. Soon after he walked to the sight and saw his connection laying in a pool of blood. That son called his mother on his cell phone, and said "Mother, I want you to know if it had not been for a flat tire I would have been lying in a pool of blood. The mother started laughing and praising God." When the son inquired why, she said, "I just remembered something I read in the bible this morning, Long before your pains came, I delivered you! It's wasn't a flat tire, but it was the hand of the Lord!"

Every mother knows that it has been nothing but the hand of the Lord!

Mothers, before your pains came the Lord was blessing you!

Mothers, during the struggles and frustrations of motherhood, the Lord kept on blessing you!

Even today, before you get a chance to worry about your children, remember the Lord is making a way!

Mary cried at Calvary, but long before that dreadful evening God had already started working on Sunday morning. He had already started to assemble the forces of the universe to heal her pains even before they came.

She cried when they nailed him to an old rugged cross! But God was working on Sunday morning!

She cried when they buried him in a borrowed tomb! But God was working on Sunday morning!

Early Sunday morning, before the pain and sorrow of the crucifixion had a chance to settle in,

Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead!

Before her pains came!

The Old Rugged Cross

SCRIPTURE: "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross." Colossians 2:14

Introduction

If you had to create a symbol that represents who you are and what you believe what would it be? If you could devise a symbol that represents the sum total of your being, and post it for all the world to see, what would that symbol be? Would your symbol be a lion that is strong or powerful or a mouse that is weak small. Are you an eagle that soars high in the sky or a dove that is vulnerable and passive. Are you a pork chop or a steak? A Cadillac or a Volkswagen? A penthouse or a shotgun house? Would it be Cash Money or No Limit? Would you describe yourself as a butcher knife or a butter knife? Are you a lion or a kitten? Symbols are important because they define at a glance, who we are and what we believe.

Even people, countries and companies are defined by symbols. Our national flag is symbolized by red, white and blue; stars and stripes. African American Heritage is often symbolized by the red black and green flag introduced to us by Marcus Garvey. The Nike Company is linked to the "swoosh" symbol. As soon as you see it, you know that it's Nike. They're inseparable. A few years back, the musician Prince legally changed his name from Prince to a symbol he drew up. Whenever we saw the symbol we thought of him. Companies spend millions of dollars each year to associate the company "logo" with their name. So, at baseball parks, football fields and countless other places a company name is plastered against a billboard or wall to etch it into public mind. We are often associated with the way we package and present ourselves to others. What we wear in some ways symbolizes what we believe about ourselves and sends a message to those who do not know us that indicates who we are, who we think we are, and what we want people to think we are.

In the religious community there are also symbols that immediately identify a person's religious orientation. The crescent moon of the of Islam immediately conjures images of Muhammad, The Qu'ran or mosques. The Star of David of the Jewish community is associated with Moses, the Torah and synagogues. The Lotus blossom or wheel of Buddhism is immediately associated with temples, large overpowering statues and meditation. Each of the world's great religions selected symbols that suggest charm and attractiveness, radiance and light. However, the universally known symbol for Christianity is an instrument of death- a cross.

Why a cross? Why not a dove, it would have made better pictures! Why not a bible, it represents God's word? Why not a manger or better still, why not an empty tomb? An empty tomb would suggest a confirmed covenant and a risen savior! Why a cross?

The symbol of the Christian faith is a single, empty cross. Romans put thousands and thousands of people to death on crosses. Jesus of Nazareth was one of those victims. The cross was used in ancient times for the purpose of torture and death. Crucifixion was invented by barbarians, but taken over by the Greeks and perfected by the Romans. It has been regarded as the cruelest method of execution ever practiced because it delayed death until the maximum torture had been inflicted on its victim. It was possible for the victim to hang on the cross for days before dying very slowly of asphyxiation.

If the cross is such a negative image, why do Christians embrace the cross? Why do we have crosses on our buildings, mark our graves with crosses and wear gold and silver crosses around our necks? If the cross is an instrument of death, why do use the cross as our symbol?

Historically, the cross has not always been the symbol of our faith. During the late first and early second centuries, the simple outline of a fish was commonly used by Christians to identify themselves to one another. Theirs was an illegal religion at the time, and they used the sign of the fish to identify themselves to one another in undercover fashion. From the second century forward Christians began using the cross as the symbol of faith. The idea it represented was simple, it signified the death of "self" and the birth of a new born again person in Christ not intimidated or conquered by the threat of death. The Christian symbol is not a crucifix, with Christ still attached, because that celebrates how death conquers. The Christian Symbol is the empty cross which shows how death has been rendered powerless over believers.

Armed with this new boldness, Christians wore the cross to signify that they would stand with God even in the face of death. Many were fed to lions and burned at the stakes for their beliefs, but death had no power of their eternal spirits because Christ gave every believer then, as he does today, eternal life.

As believers we believe there is victory in the cross. We wear the cross, but most importantly we bear the cross! It is a witness of our faith to the God we serve!

Exposition

This text was written by Paul as he addressed the relationship between the cross and our sins.

Paul was imprisoned at the time of this writing and wrote many letters to the churches of his day explaining the nature of the relationship between Christianity and the Mosaic law. Many early Christians had difficulties reconciling the differences between living under the law and living under the New Testament dispensation. Such was the case of the Colossians who like many other New Testament churches were not sure about the relationship of their new lives in Christ as compared to their lives under the Mosaic law.

Even though Paul did not establish this church himself he felt compelled to try to explain to them the nature of salvation and the role of the cross.

He explained that relationship in the context of the Mosaic law and the cross. First he noted that the Mosaic law was a list of ordinances or rules that attempted to govern every aspect of a believer's life. When believers failed to live up to any aspect of the laws numerous parts they were condemned to death. He explained to the Colossians just as he had explained to the Romans and others that under the new covenant all of the condemnations that were peculiar to the law have been blotted out.

Inclusive of the Mosaic law was a long list of rituals, ceremonies, and procedures that were followed by believers and were strictly enforced by the religious leaders of their day. Paul tried to explain that under the new testament covenant that the need for such ritualism would no longer exist. In effect, all of these rituals and procedures were declared null and void as they related to an individual's salvation.

The cross, he declared, was the instrument that ultimately paid the price for each individual's salvation. Not the cross itself, but the sacrifice of God's only son which was made upon the cross gave the cross its significance. The cross was important because it's symbolized the end of condemnation and ritualism. The cross also symbolized the beginning of the time when men would realize the presence of God's grace.

The Old Testament law is depicted in this text as being the hand writing against believers. This hand writing would symbolize the charges that the law makes against us for breaking its rules. However, when a debt is paid the hand writing or the paperwork that is held against a debt or is destroyed or blotted out. The law was the hand writing that made it impossible for every believer to expect a chance at glory. The cross symbolized payment of that debt. It also symbolized the destruction of the hand writing that would be held against us.

Whenever a Christian sees the cross it reminds him of a debt that has been paid and a promise that has been kept. The debt was paid by Jesus himself the promise was made to every believer. It was a promise of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Why the Cross

Today, the cross remains the central symbol of faith for Christian believers. It is what identifies a person as a follow-up of Jesus Christ.

The cross symbolizes is at least four different concepts for believers.

How Bad Sin Is: The cross of Jesus is a clear reminder to anyone in every generation of "how bad sin he is." The cross is not a symbol of a tragedy. Neither is it a symbol of an unfortunate accident or an act of terrorism. If it were the symbol of a tragedy the cross would represent how a good man came to a violent death as a result of a personal flaw. If it were the symbol of an accident it would represent how carelessness could result in the death of a good man. If it were the symbol of a terrorist act it would represent how a defenseless people can have its champions destroyed by an enemy within. However, the cross was not symbolic of any of these. The cross is a testimony and our reminder. It is a testimony to the sinfulness of humanity and a reminder of how one man, Jesus, died because of human sinfulness. Each time we see a cross it reminds us of our own fallibility and capacity to sin and the cost that must be paid to compensate for our sin. The fact that there must be a payment for sin is underscored in Romans 6:23, "For the wages of sin is debt but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

How Deep His Involvement Is: Before Jesus was born, the prophet Isaiah in 7:14, noted that a virgin would give birth and his name would be called Immanuel, which means "God with us." When believers see the cross it is a reminder that in any of life's situations God is with us. Whether it is physical pain, mental anguish, social dysfunction or financial disaster, God is with us. Whatever our human predicament happens to be God is with us in the person of Jesus Christ. Whether it's being lied upon by so-called friends or being attacked by enemies, God is with us and shares our predicament. Because of Calvary we know Christ knows the extent of our vulnerability. Because he too has suffered he understands our suffering. Because of Calvary no one can raise a finger of scorn at God and say, "You don't know what it's like!" God did not insulate himself from our predicament but came among us, took our sin to himself, and died for our redemption. The cross reminds us that Jesus knows and cares. Perhaps that's what the song writer had in mind when he said, "Jesus knows the pain you feel he can save and he can heal; take your burden to of the Lord and leave it there."

How Great Love Is: While the cross reminds us of how bad sin is it also reminds us of how great God's love is. Each time a believer sees the cross it should serve as a reminder of the love of God. In his knowledge and in his wisdom God knew the extent of man's sinfulness and in the beginning prepared a way for him to be saved. However that way, would require a universal sacrifice that could only be provided by the essence of God himself. Looking down in compassion and love God decided to provide the world with a way to reconcile itself even if that method meant the loss of life on an old rugged cross. John 3:16 says, "for God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." The cross serves as a reminder to believers of the extent of God's love for us. Have you heard the story of the man on the track? It appears that there was a man who was a a rail switcher and a very dangerous bridge crossing. His job was important because each time a train approached he had to pull a lever that allow the train to safely cross the track. If, for a reason he failed to pull the lever, the train would crash. One night he brought his son to work with him. As his son played along the track's he made a mistake and fell through and dangled by one hand. Terrified, the man moved quickly toward his son. At the same time he heard the whistle of the train loaded with over 500 passengers blowing behind him. If he took his hand off the lever the people on the train would died in a collision. If he failed reaches son in time he would not a certain death. As his son cried out "Daddy help me" the father looked at the approaching train and with tears in his eyes, went back and pulled lever as his son fell to his death. He sacrificed his son to save the lives of 500 people. In a similar manner God love the world so much that he gave his son that we might have a chance to eternal life. When we see the cross we remember how great God's love is.

The cross Symbolizes a Living Lord

Finally, brothers and sisters the empty cross represents a victorious and living Lord who has given every believer a clean slate.

Today there are many kinds of crosses in the marketplace. There are golden crosses, silver plated crosses, diamond studded crosses, crosses with elaborate jewels that mark the hand and feet of Christ. There are expensive crosses, large crosses and small crosses. There are crosses on chains that dangle around our necks; there are crosses on the steeples above churches, and on customized license plates and T-shirts.

No matter where a believer sees an empty cross it reminds him of a fresh new start.

It reminds us of a new start because the word of God teaches that any person who is in Christ is a new creature and that old things are passed away and all things become new. While some believers symbolized their faith by a cross which still shows Christ hanging, most Christians symbolized their faith by displaying an empty cross. Only the empty cross symbolizes a new start, a renewed hope, and a living faith.

An empty cross reminds us of a sin record that no longer exists.

An empty cross reminds us of a mistake that has been forgiven.

An empty cross reminds us of an error that has been erased.

But more than anything else an empty cross is reminds us that we serve a living Lord.

The cross marks the place where we came in contact with the power of the Lord.

The cross marks the place where we stepped out of the darkness into the marvelous light.

The cross marks the place where we traded in our lives of sin for the hope of salvation.

That's why the song writer wrote, "At the cross at the cross where our first saw the light and a burdens of my heart rolled away. It was there by faith I received the light and now I'm happy all the day."

As I close, I'm reminded of the young woman whose sister was killed in a train accident and a railroad crossing. The sister placed to small white cross at the railroad crossing as a monument to her sister's life. While she erected the cross as a monument, those who came to the area saw the cross, it there breaks and looked both ways before crossing the track. One day the sister noticed that there was a red rose placed at the foot of the cross and wondered what it meant. Each week thereafter she saw another red rose at the site. Many weeks later she stumbled upon a lady in the grocery store who thanked her for placing the cross at the site.

The woman said, “Three weeks ago I was absorbed in a personal trouble and worried about my family. I didn’t hear the train blow, but I looked up and saw the cross, I hit my break when I looked to the left I saw the approaching train. That cross saved my life.”

The sister asked, “Why do you put a rose on the cross every week?” The woman answered and said “Because every time I see it it reminds me how I was standing on the ‘Edge of Night’ dealing with ‘A secret storm’ worried about ‘All my children’ but because of that cross I still have “One life to live!”

Because of the cross, we still have a life to live!

Because of the cross, We still have hope!

Jesus died on an old rugged cross!

But early Sunday morning, he arose to new life supreme!

It may have been an old rugged cross, but it brought a brand new life!

What's Your Excuse

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 26, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "Then said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many: And sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready. And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come." Luke 14:17-20

Introduction

Have you ever made an excuse? We usually give excuses to explain why we failed to perform a task or why we are unavailable for a specific request. Excuses are common. It appears that everyone has an excuse or two or three. Excuses tend to provide a rationale for noncompliance or a refusal of service. Generally, we give excuses to explain why we missed a mark or failed in some way.

Have you ever made an excuse? When the note came from your child's school requesting your presence at the parent teacher meeting, did you go or did you have an excuse? The appointment you missed the other day was certainly an important one, but of course you had a valid excuse. We were a few days late paying bills last month, but of course we had valid excuses.

Sometimes our excuses start sounding a little ridiculous. John F. King tells the story of GI's on furlough that illustrates point. "The commanding officer was furious when nine GIs who had been out on passes failed to show up for morning roll call. Not until 7 p.m. did the first man straggle in. "I'm sorry, sir," the soldier explained, "but I had a date and lost track of time, and I missed the bus back. Being determined to get in on time, I hired a cab. Halfway here, the cab broke down. I went to a farmhouse and persuaded the farmer to sell me a horse. I was riding to camp when the animal fell over dead. I walked the last ten miles, and just got here." Though skeptical, the Colonel let the young man off with a reprimand. However, after him, seven other stragglers in a row came in with the same story-had a date, missed the bus, hired a cab, bought a horse, etc. By the time the ninth man reported in, the colonel had grown weary of it. "Okay," he growled, "now what happened to you?" "Sir, I had this date and missed the bus back, so I hired a cab ." "Wait!" the colonel screeched at him. "Don't tell me the cab broke down." "No, sir," replied the soldier. "The cab didn't break down. It was just that there were so many dead horses in the road, we had trouble

We even have excuses for our failure to participate in church. The same excuses that we give for our nonparticipation would not hold up if they were applied to our favorite sport. Some years ago Moody Monthly ran a piece which included excuses which a fellow might use for quitting sports. In it they included the excuses that people often give for not participating in church but tied them to reasons for quitting sports. The excuses sounded like this:

I quit sports because every time I went they asked for money.

I quit sports because the people with whom I had to sit didn't seem very friendly.

I quit sports because the seats were too hard and uncomfortable.

I quit sports because the coach never came to see me.

I quit sports because the referee made a decision with which I could not agree.

I quit sports because I was sitting with some hypocrites - they only came to see what others were wearing.

I quit sports because some games went into overtime, and I was late getting home.

I quit sports because the band played numbers that I had never heard before.

I quit sports because my parents took me to too many games when I was growing up.

When put in the context of sports our excuses for not participating in our church look pretty petty.

The excuses that we give today for our failure to make God first place in our lives are not unique. We are not the first persons to make excuses. Neither will we be the last.

But what does God think of our excuses? Is he pleased? Does he accept them? Do we get by?

God has been dealing with me and and their excuses since the beginning of time. We can offer an excuse that has not been offered in some form or another during the course of the history of man can. Solomon said clearly: "there is nothing new under the sun." Neither are our excuses.

As Christians, we should strive to do all we can to keep our commitments to God and to make ourselves readily available for any service required. The words of the prophet Isaiah should apply to us, "if the Lord needs somebody here am I send me."

Exposition

This text focuses upon the parable Jesus gave that explains the nature of a believer's commitment in the kingdom of God.

As he explained to his followers the nature of the kingdom of heaven, Jesus told a parable about a certain man who prepared a feast and invited special people to attend. No sooner than they had received the invitations did the invited guests began to give excuses. The excuses war varied but they all provide explanations and reasons for nonparticipation.

The excuses came in succession. One man said he had just bought a piece of property and had to go and inspect it. His possessions and property took priority over the invitations that he had received and therefore he turned down, or at the least placed on a lower priority the invitation he had received from the Lord. The second man said he had bought a yoke of oxen that he had to go and try them. To try them simply meant that he wanted to go and work them himself. His work took priority over the invitation to labor in the kingdom. The third man also turned down his invitation because he was recently married. According to Mosaic law a man was excused from normal responsibilities in the first year of his marriage including any responsibility to serve in the army. Thus, this man placed his family responsibility ahead of the invitation to participate in the kingdom celebration.

Jesus used these three as an example of persons who turned down invitations to participate in the kingdom for varied reasons whether those reasons are professional, work, or family. In the parable, the servants were ordered to go into the streets and to invite anyone that would come to participate in the feast. Many enjoyed the benefits of the kingdom that were not on the original invitation list because those originally invited had so many excuses.

Many excuses

Today there are many people who have excuses. However, the fact that people have excuses is not something that is original with this generation. Biblically, they have been many people who have given a multitude of excuses in a variety of situations. Many of those excuses sounded strikingly similar to what we here today.

BLAME IT ON SOMEONE (Genesis 3): The most common excuse heard in modern times is the "blame it on someone else" excuse. This was the excuse that Adam gave God in the Garden of Eden. When both Adam and Eve ate from the forbidden fruit, Adam blamed his failure to obey God's command on his wife. He told God that the woman God provided for him was the reason he disobeyed. Even today there are many who blame their faults, figures, and short comings on anyone other than themselves. If they are fired from a job, it's the boss's fault. If they failed a test, it's the teacher's fault. If they don't succeed in life, it is the world's fault.

WHY ME?(Exodus 4): There are many who respond to the call for participation like Moses. God spoke to Moses from a burning bush and told him to go down and tell Pharaoh to "let my people go." Immediately, Moses began to make excuses. He said people would not listen to him. He said people would not believe him. Then he tried to say that he could not be well. Moses wanted to know why God would select him when there were certainly others more qualified for the position. In the course of time however, Moses soon learned that those whom God selects he also he quips for service. The people would not have to believe him they would see the power of God demonstrated before their eyes. He would not have to speak, his brother Aaron would speak for him. Like Moses, there are many today who say, "why me?" They say there are many people who are more qualified than themselves to serve. They overlook the fact that God can equipt even those who feel unqualified with the power of his word and the enthusiasm that his spirit generates.

IT'S TOO HUMILIATING: (2 Kings 5): There are some who refuse to serve because they are asked to do things that appear to be humiliating. This is often the case if a person is asked to follow instead of been a leader. It is definitely the case for many who are asked to be the Indian instead of chief. Naaman was a great leader of the people who had gained weath a great reputation. When he was stricken with leprosy he came the prophet Elisha for healing. He was asked one thing. He was told to give himself seven times in the river Jordan. That was a simple task that was humiliating, because the river Jordan was very muddy. A man of his stature would look silly bathing in muddy water seven times. There are many today who refuse calls for service because the service is "beneath them." They don't want to look silly. They will serve only if the service is equal to their perceived statue and position.

INCONVENIENT TIME: (Acts 24: 24-27) There are many who would serve if the church could find a time or them that was convenient. They would sing in the choir, help with ministries, or perform other services if it were convenient. Paul preached before Felix and told him about the power or of the Christian movement. He preached a powerful message and invited Felix to begin service in the kingdom. Although Felix felt the conviction of the holy spirit he responded by telling Paul that he would do so at a more convenient time. Paul left and there is no record of Felix ever being converted. His convenient season never came. Today, there are many who simply can't find the time for service in the kingdom of God. There are many like Felix who are still looking for a convenient season.

CLOSE BUT NOT CLOSE ENOUGH: (Acts 26: 19-29): There are others who are like Agrippa. Agrippa listen to Paul's appeals for him to join the band of Christian believers. Although he was moved by the appeal he did not see a need for his personal involvement and said Paul "Almost" persuaded him to be a Christian. Today, there are many just like Agrippa who do not see a need for their personal involvement. As they listen to the appeals of their pastor and others to become personally involved in church ministry, they cannot see how their involvement will make a difference. Their whole lives echo Agrippa's fateful decision, "I almost decided to serve, but changed my mind."

No Excuse

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that while we offer excuses for our failure to serve in the kingdom of God, the Lord makes no excuses when it's time to respond to our needs.

From the beginning of time the Lord has listened, as we his people, offered a variety of excuses for our failure to acknowledge him. But history has shown that anytime we needed him, he was always there.

When Jacob wrestled with an angel until the wee hours of the morning, he asked the Lord for a blessing. The Lord could have made and excuse. He could have said, Jacob you have been a trickster all of your life. You haven't been as faithful that you should have been and don't deserve to be blessed. But instead of and excuse, God bless Jacob and changed his name to Israel.

When Samson called upon the Lord in his blindness and asked the Lord for one more surge of strength, the Lord could have made an excuse. He could have said, "Samson, I gave you great strength but you chose to squander it on Philistine women."However, God made no excuses but blessed Samson anyway.

When Saul called upon the Lord after three days of darkness and asked for his sight again, the Lord could of answered him by saying "I gave you good sense and the ability to do mighty works and he persecuted my church, I don't have time." But instead, the Lord gave him not only his sight but spiritual insight as well and changed his name from Saul to Paul.

We may make excuses when it comes to serving the Lord, but I'm glad to know that the Lord doesn't make excuses when it comes to blessing us.

When it comes to opening doors that have been shut and our faces, God doesn't make excuses when he makes a way out of no way.

When it comes to rebuilding our strength when we have exhausted ourselves, God doesn't make excuses he simply takes our weakness and turns it into strength.

That's what happened when God saw that the world needed a savior that could rescue lost mankind from its own sinful nature.

If he had called the roll of all the great ones, they probably would have all head excuses.

If he had called on Moses, he would have said, "I have my hands full dealing with the Children of Israel, will you get someone else."

If he had called on Elijah, he would've said, "I have my hands full gear on top of Mount Carmel."

If he had called on Daniel, he would've said, "I'm down here in the lion's den, can you get someone else?"

If he had called for the three Hebrew Boys, they would've said, "we're here in the fiery furnace, can you get someone else?"

But I heard Jesus say in the words of the prophet Isaiah, "If the Lord needs somebody here my send me."

Without making excuses, he came down through 42 generations.

Without making excuses, he was born of the Virgin Mary and wrapped in swaddling clothes.

Without making excuses, he lived a difficult life among mortal mankind.

Without making excuses, he stood trial on an unfair charge in an unjust court.

Without making excuses, he allowed himself to be whipped and spit upon.

Without making excuses, he allowed himself to be nailed to an old rugged cross.

He died on Calvary without making a single excuse or mumbling a single word of protest.

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

He did not make an excuse. What about us?

Who's In Your Balcony?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 2, 2002

SCRIPTURE:"Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us" Hebrews 12:1-2

Introduction

Have you ever noticed that at most graduations there is always one student or two that seems to attract thunderous applause when they walk across the stage? Graduations are supposed to be solemn occasions. The ideal graduation is one in which the graduates march in uniformly, take their seats, listen to an address, and quietly file across the stage and receive the diploma for which they have worked for so many years. There are two forces at work in any graduation. There is the force of tradition which mandates discipline and order and there is the force of enthusiasm and excitement that is the result of years of anticipation. Despite the best efforts of our institutions, it gets pretty hard to keep people quiet when they witness a momentous occasion such as the graduation of a family member or a friend. Sometimes the crowd of witnesses is so excited and the thunder of the applause is so great that school officials literally give up.

While graduates themselves approach every graduation with a plethora of orders from both their family and school officials, there is very little that can be done about the people in the balcony. The antics we have seen have ranged from the unusual to the bizarre.

There are some who march across the stage and receive a shower of applause. There are others who are greeted with a cheering section complete with bull horns and noisemakers. There are still others that seem to have their own cheerleader section that chants their name, screams and yells frantically. That was the case when all of the hill folks came to the graduation to watch little Essie graduate. It was first time anyone from the hills had ever graduated from High School and they came in trucks and wagons. The principal warned all in the audience against any outbursts and admonished all to observe the solemn occasion. But when little Essie marched across the stage to receive her diploma grandma Ginny yelled loudly "that's my girl!" Immediately the principal stopped the proceedings. He demanded to know the identity of the ignorant person who yelled. Little Essie came to the microphone and told the audience how her grandma had raised a family of 10 children as a widow. She told how her grandma chopped cotton for four dollars a day, sold eggs, and scrubbed floors so that she would be the first in seven generations of a family to graduate from high school. "She may be unlearned, but she's my granny." Unmoved by the story, the principal demanded that the person who yelled to stand up. Grandma Ginny squared her shoulders and stood tall and began to applaud Little Essie alone. However, much to his surprise grandma Ginny didn't stand by herself. Over 1000 people stood including cousins, aunts, neighbors and friends and hundreds of simple country folk who came to see an important event in their lives. When the principal saw over 1000 people standing and applauding little Essie, he threw up his hands. There were too many people in her balcony.

Who's in your balcony? Have you made it this far in your life journey alone? At each step along your educational journey there has been someone in your balcony. When you graduated from kindergarten or received a certificate in elementary school or said your first speech, there was someone in your balcony. Was it a mother or father? Perhaps it was a grandparent. It may have been a neighbor, a teacher, or some individual who always seemed to be there for you. Very few people achieve great heights alone. Nearly everyone known has had someone in their balcony even if it was only one person.

Besides mother and father. Besides teacher and mentor. Besides coach, scoutmaster and favorite teacher. Besides favorite uncles and aunts, there has also been someone else in your balcony rooting for you, cheering for you, and encouraging you on. That someone is God. Along with a large crowd of witnesses, God has been guiding us, correcting us, supporting us, and strengthening us throughout our journey. He has constantly reminded us that we are never alone.

As Christians, it is a joy for us to know that God never leaves us alone. No matter where we go or how complex our involvements God never leaves us alone. He is always in our balcony.

Exposition

This text focuses upon the importance of faith for those who are about to began an endeavor; a faith that has been endorsed by a cloud of witnesses.

Hebrews chapter 12 is a continuation of Hebrews chapter 11. The two chapters speak about the importance of faith to every believer. Chapter 11 listed many patriarchs who were men of faith. Noah, Abraham, Moses, David and many others were listed in chapter 11 as men of great faith and moved in response to their faith. They were listed as men who achieved despite obstacles and lived their lives in such a way that they were successes because they depended upon their great faith in God.

We know each of these men primarily because of their faith. Their lives were witnesses to what God can do for any believer who dares to step out in life, despite the possibility of failure, boldly trusting God to make a way.

Thus, chapter 12 begins by reflecting upon what had been said in Chapter 11. The reflection brings to focus the fact that the present believer is surrounded by a host of witnesses to the truth that if we put our trust in God, he will provide for all of our needs and many of our wants.

The words of chapter 12 seem to be aimed at each new generation of believers that stands at the threshold of life, ready to begin but not quite sure of the future. These words are a statement of dispensational support for babe in the faith about to begin a new venture. Verses one and two make it clear that since believers are surrounded by a cloud of witnesses from the past and the present was very presence testifies to their faith that each believer should lay aside in a weight or sin and prepare to go forth.

The two words "weight" and "sin" used in this text are best understood in the context of recalling what the book of Hebrews is about. It is generally about the importance of faith in our lives. Weights and sin in the context of this verse refer to those things which would hinder us from succeeding in kingdom building such as doubt, fear, apprehension, and scepticism. These are referred to as weights or things that will hold us down. For those who profess faith in God, to be fearful of the future is tantamount to sin. To doubt God's ability to help us achieve divinely inspired goals is also sinful. It identifies us as men and women who talk about lives of faith but are actually unable to live the life we talk about.

Laying aside doubts, we are encouraged to run with perseverance the race that is before us. Perseverance implies a steady pace that is not interrupted, slowed or halted.

The secret to perseverance is in the phrase, "looking to Jesus." Although there are many witnesses past and present who testify to the power of faith, believers are pointed to one who stands beyond the cloud of witnesses. Believers are pointed to Jesus himself who is the author and finisher of our faith. Each believer should move forward in life, according to this text, looking to that one person in that great crowd of witnesses who can help them, strengthen them, correct them, and guide them. That one person is Jesus our Lord and savior.

Perseverance means to keep on trying no matter what happens. It means if you fall down get up and try again. It means if you feel like you are alone in the race keep looking to Jesus and run on until the race is one.

A Cloud of Witnesses

The people in your balcony bear witness to your success and serve as an inspiration for what can be. It is good to have a full balcony of supporters but it is sufficient to have just one. What do the people in your balcony do for you? There are at least three ways that a believer is helped by the cloud of witnesses before and at the moment.

COMMEMORATE THE MOMENT: Every step that a believer makes is the result of sacrifice. Today, we enjoy the faith of the ages but this great privilege came because of the sacrifice of others. The cloud of witnesses that gather for each graduate commemorate the moment. That means that they remember. There are many today who have achieved great ends because of the sacrifice of others who were not able to share that moment. At any graduation there is a mother or uncle or an aunt that watches the graduate march across the stage and they speak silent to themselves "Oh if he could see you now!" or "Oh if she could see you now, she would be so proud." Each steps forward because of the sacrifice of someone else. It is the father who dreamed of seeing of his children educated. It is the mother whose only desire in life was to see her children stand on their own two feet. Those who graduate, walk across the stage in hallowed moments of commemoration as family members reflect on the words and deeds of others in the family whose sacrifices made it possible. One reason many institutions ask for quiet during such ceremonies is to allow the families to observe the procession of history and to hear the voices of a cloud of witnesses that include mothers, fathers, great grandmothers and great uncles and aunts speak from the silent balconies of eternity and say, "well done." It is good to have ancestry in the balcony. Sometimes, other than the voice of God, it is the only voice we hear!

CELEBRATE THE PRESENT MOMENT: There are many people who want to help us celebrate the moment. They share our joy and they share our enthusiasm. Often people come from far and near to share in the celebration. Celebrations are scriptural! When friends of his family hosted a wedding Jesus joined the celebration, indicating that helping others celebrate the moment was an act of friendship and fellowship sanctioned by God himself. Despite the fact that there are thousands of people who come to some celebrations there are certain people that each of us desires to see present to share that moment. Those who know our story, who have seen us grow and mature, fall down and get back up, as well as grow stronger by the year are best able to appreciate and celebrate the moment. Those who know us well know from whence we have come. When we are on in the mountaintop only those who have seen us when we were in the valley can appreciate the full gravity of our accomplishment. It is good to have those in the balcony as witnesses who have seen us at our worse and now see us at our best. When Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Conner became the first woman to sit on the Supreme Court, the day she was sworn in was a great day. There were thousands of people in attendance. But Justice O'Conner, scanned through the crowd to find the eyes of a mother and mouthed the words thank you. As far as she was concerned only one person could really help her celebrate that moment. Believers who accomplish something today must remember that there are only a few people who can really help then celebrate the moment and it's good to have them in the balcony.

ANTICIPATE THE NEXT MOMENT: Those in our balcony are those who help us to dream. These are the people who believe in us, prod us and push us to be the best we can be! No one succeeds in life without a mentor. This is the person or persons who will go beyond the excitement of the moment and will join us as we prepare for the next moment. We need persons who will go before us and prepare the way by speaking a good word for us, giving us a recommendation or swinging open the door of opportunity. It's good to have such people in the balcony. It's even better to know that when all else fails that the power of God is with us, like an ever present force, guiding and protecting us. When many in Israel celebrated the march out of Egypt, God had already moved in front of them, anticipating the next moment. He led them as a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire at night. He was always one step ahead, opening seas, providing water in the desert and raining down bread, just when they needed it. Any believer who goes forth will need a mentor, but more than mentors they will need the Lord on their side.

You are Never Alone

Finally, brothers and sisters, each believer must remember that even when the world turns against you, if you keep your hands in his hands, God is always in your balcony!

Historically, the people of God have always been hesitant to begin any endeavor without first assuring themselves that God would be by their side. They wanted to make sure that God was in their balcony and would cover their back.

When God told Moses to go down and tell old Pharaoh to "let my people go" Moses wanted to know whether he'd be going on his own or with the authority of God. He felt better when he found out that God would work miracles and all he needed to say was, "I am that I am" sent me.

When Joshua set out to cross over the River Jordan he wanted to be sure that the Lord was on his side. He felt better when the Lord told him "wherever you go I'll go with you."

Jeremiah began in the ministry as a young man, but he was hesitant to go in this new direction. Then God told him to "be not afraid of their faces. I'll go with you."

David found confidence whenever he knew God was with him. That confidence prompted him to write, "the Lord is my light and my salvation whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life of whom shall I be afraid.?"

Paul told believer to go forth with confidence because if the Lord before us, who can be against us?

With God on your side you can dream the unimaginable!

With God on your side, you can think the unthinkable!

With God on your side, you can reach the unreachable!

With God on your side, you can do the impossible!

When you graduated from high school, no doubt there was somebody who applauded for you or called your name!

As you move through life there are believer should remember that as long as your hand is in God's hand, there's always somebody in the balcony calling your name!

Maybe that's why the song writer wrote, "When he calls me I will answer, when he calls me I will answer. I'll be somewhere listening for my name!"

When you feel like you are all by yourself there is somebody in your balcony who promised never to leave you, never to leave you alone!

When you feel like you can't go on, there's someone in your balcony who keeps whispering in your ear, "they that wait on the lord, shall renew their strength. They shall mount up on Wayne's as eagles. They shall run and not be weary. They shall walk and not faint."

Who's that in your balcony, who keeps telling you, "My God shall supply all of your need, according to his riches in Christ Jesus!"

Who's that in your balcony, who keeps reminding you that, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want"

When the world asks why you look up when you are feeling down, tell them, "I'll lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, My help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth" The Lord is in my balcony and I will fear no evil!

Whose that in your balcony?

The Lord strong and mighty!

Whose that in your balcony?

The Lord mighty in battle!

Whose that in my balcony? His name is Jesus!

He died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!

Everywhere I go, I've got somebody who walks with me and talks with me and tells me I am his own!

He's in my balcony and he's all right!

When Will You Grow Up?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 9, 2002

SCRIPTURE:"When I was a child I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child, but when I became a man, I put away childish things." 1 Corinthians 13:11

Introduction

Have you ever measured how fast you have grown? There are some children who have a mark on the wall in their homes that shows how they have grown. Some have used little lines that have charted the progress of their growth week by week, as each inch of progress is marked by a line or note. More often than not, there is also a story that is associated with every inch of growth. We know we have grown when our children out grow their clothes and shoes. We can also tell they have grown when their taste in toys changes. Sometimes it's exciting to stand next to the marker and realize that we have grown without even knowing it. Only when we stood by the marker were we able to tell that we had actually grown.

One of the largest jumps in our growth happens between 11 and 13 years of age. As a child enters and exits puberty things start to happen internally and in a matter of months, clothes sizes change, voice pitch and other noticeable changes happen in what seems like an instant. It happens so fast that a child can leave home for a summer vacation with a relative in June and look like a totally different person by September.

There are some aspects of our growth that are obvious. Our height and weight are obvious telltale signs that we have changed. This change in our physiology is impacted by our chronology. There are natural changes that happen to each of us without any action on our part. Whether we study, eat correctly or exercise won't effect our chronology. We will get older without doing anything and it will reflect itself in our physiology. However, there are other factors present, such as our psychology, which reflects our mental capacity and our spirituality which affects the growth of the inner man or woman within us.

While chronology, physiology, psychology and spirituality are tell-tale signs of growth, they don't always develop at the same rate. Just because there is a two inch growth in physical height does not mean that there is a corresponding growth in thinking capacity or spirituality.

The believer comes to Christ as a babe. 1 Peter 2:2 refers to a new believer as a "babe" in Christ that must be fed the milk of the word. However, the goal of every believer is to grow beyond the "babe" stage and step into a deeper relationship with Christ that is sustaining and strong.

The desire of Christian youth, should be to grow in the spirit. They should grow stronger in wisdom and in their understanding of the important things in life. They should also gain a greater appreciation for the power of God to direct and influence their lives and invite him to lead them every step of the way.

As Christians, our goal is to grow in Christ. Our goal is to be more Christ-like everyday. Unlike chronology, spirituality won't happen in our sleep, it has to be nurtured and developed. If you haven't grown in Christ over the years, the question being asked today is an important one, "When will you grow up?"

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's writing to the Corinthians on the issue of Christian maturity.

The Corinthians received many instructions from Paul, some of which addressed issues of spiritual development. Peter also addressed these same issues in his writings to the church.

In Corinth believers were new in the faith and to sustain them, they were given special signs and wonders designed to secure their faith and strengthen their relationship with Christ. In 1 Corinthians 12-14 Paul addressed this subject by noting that many of the special gifts that were given to new apostles were limited in scope and would cease as believers began to fully understand the full weight of their spiritual lives. Love, said Paul, was the most important thing.

As he began to fully understand the meaning of the Christian experience and the importance of "charity" Paul said he grew to become a man in the faith and no longer needed the kinds of elementary supports required of children. He said when he became a man he put away childish things.

As a child we see through a glass darkly. When we mature we see God in a clearer light and understand him as a mature adult in the faith.

Signs of our Growth

If a child can mark his growth with a mark on the wall, how do we mark our spiritual growth? Are there ways to tell whether or not we have grown spiritually?

GROWING IN BIBLICAL MATURITY: Have you grown in your knowledge of the scriptures? One true sign that we are growing in spiritually is our knowledge of and respect for the Word of God. When we are children in the faith we have a raw respect for the words of Jesus. The first stage of our growth is to read our bible from time to time. Not much, but a little here and there. We grow even further when we develop a regular discipline of reading, studying and memorizing scripture. We are really growing when we grow beyond simple bible memorization and reading to the point of meditating on scripture and feeding on its truths. We have grown further if we find ourselves developing convictions and attitudes about life based upon what the bible teaches. We are fully mature when our collective mind and attitudes are controlled by the scriptures. Have you grown any since you began your spiritual journey? If not, when will you grow up?

GROWING IN PRAYER: Have you grown in your praying ability. When we are babes in Christ we say the words of a prayer taught to us by our parents. It is mechanical and routine. It often means little, but serves the purpose. As we grow however, we begin to say words that are not part of the memorized prayer. We begin to offer thanks to God for blessings and for salvation. In the adolescence of our prayer life we learn to pray to God when we have problems and troubles that are beyond our ability. As we grow further, we pray on a regular basis, even if there is no trouble or problem and we prayer beyond the memorized prayer of our childhood. The fully mature Christian prays for the will of God to be done through him and in every situation, regardless of the outcome, giving God praise and glory regardless. Has your prayer life grown any since you became a Christian? If not, when will you grow up?

GROWING IN FELLOWSHIP: Have you grown in the Christian fellowship? When you are a babe in the body of Christ you are still a little uncomfortable in church related sessions. There are some people who you like to be around but for the most part you don't get a thrill out of being a part of the Christian fellowship. The babe in Christ has to be begged to attend Christian fellowship activities, gatherings, socials or programs because he has not grown to appreciate the fellowship. The next level of growth appears when we have grown to attend but not participate or support. When we have grown in the fellowship we are most comfortable when surrounded by Christian friends and in Christian fellowship opportunities. We are uncomfortable outside of this setting. At this level he has at least one other Christian friend in which he has bonded for the benefit of sharing spiritual growth experiences. A fully mature Christian gets joy out of invitations and opportunities to serve and fellowship with other Christians and will give time, energy and resources to improve the quality of the experience.

MATURITY IN CHARACTER: Have you grown in Christian character? A new believer is a babe in Christ. He has joined the church but his character, in many respects remains the same. The first sign of growth is when we recognize the error of our sinful ways and turn from them. We reach the next level when we fear doing anything that is wrong because it will displease God, not because of a fear of jail. We reach another level of maturity when we willingly admit to flaws in our character and turn out flaw over to God completely and totally. Have we grown in character development since we became Christians? If not, when will you grow up?

Grow in Grace

Finally, brothers and sisters, a true measure of our growth spiritually is to measure whether we have grown in grace. To grow in grace with God is to grow in favor with God.

How does a child of God gain favor with the father? First by believing in God and in his Son Jesus Christ.

But beyond that we gain favor with God by obedience to our parents while we are under their care.

We also gain favor with God by avoiding sin, resisting temptation and living the Christian life at home and at school.

We know we have grown in the faith when we begin to recognize that everything we have is the result of God's grace and we have done nothing on our own.

It is a good thing to know that you have the grace of God.

God's grace supplies us with what we need to live life abundantly. 2 Cor. 9:8 says "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you: that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work." When we grow in grace, God gives us what we need to live the abundant life.

It is marvelous to experience the grace of God because his grace supplies the:

-Soul with salvation

-Heart with joy

-Mind with peace

-Hands with tenderness

-Feet with Strength

-Eyes with compassion

The sweetest song that was ever sung was about God's grace!

The greatest sermon ever preached was preached about Grace!

The most gratitude ever expressed was expressed about Grace!

The best knowledge ever attained was knowledge about Grace!

Most children who have not traveled far in life whisper among themselves and want to know why the old people, those over 30, like to sing Amazing Grace.

We sing about Grace because Grace has brought us through -Valleys of loneliness, valleys of tears, winds of persecution, storms of opposition, nights of despair and the trials of suffering.

Through many dangers toils and snares, I have already come. Tis grace that brought me safe thus far and grace will lead me home!

Young people grow in spirit! Grow in Wisdom. Live the Christian life and you'll grow in Grace:

-That touches that untouchable

-That reaches the unreachable

-That loves the unlovable

-That comforts the uncomfortable

Amazing Grace! How sweet the sound that saved a wretch like me. I once was lost but now I'm found, blind but now I see!

Grace, that was paid for by the blood of the savior!

Grace, that was secured on Calvary's hill!

Grace, that was delivered Early Sunday morning!

Early, Sunday morning Christ arose from the grave with all power in his hand!

The Tragedy of Backing the Wrong Horse

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 23, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Mark 8:36

Introduction

Have you ever watched a race, felt sure about the outcome, then backed the wrong horse? There are many people who spend considerable amounts of time at the race tracks studying the horses. They learn the names of the jockeys, the pedigree of the horses, the history of their races and then make predications on the outcome. Many are so sure that they are backing the right horse that they will bet everything they have on the ability of one horse over another. As they stand in the crowd anxiously waiting, watching jockey and horse at the starting line, they have high hopes of victory, confident that they are backing the right horse. When the gate opens and the thunder of powerful hoofs pounds against the dust, their hearts beat with rapid pace as they see the horse of their choice breaking out to the lead. Your hopes are raised as you anticipate great cash rewards for the victory that seems so obvious. As your horse makes the turn, two lengths in the lead you feel relieved because everything thing you owned is backing that horse. You used your mortgage money, pawned your jewelry, and put up everything you had in one giant effort to win it all in one fell sweep.

As they come to the final stretch you almost pass out with joy except for the sight of that strange looking horse that was coming up from the rear, advancing like crazy, moving like lightning, and passing all others. That's when you stand on your feet and yell for your horse, knowing that he can't hear you but it makes you feel better. No matter how you yelled that other horse that was billed as 100 to one long shot was coming too fast. He was now shoulder to shoulder with your horse. The crowd is standing on its feet! Your heart is pounding! You are screaming loudly, waving your hands in the arm! Just a few more seconds and it would be over!" Hang in there! " you yelled. Then just as quickly as it began, it was over. Your horse came in second! Who would have thought it? How could it be? Everyone said your horse couldn't lose! If you had placed just a little of what you had on that long shot you would have been a winner, instead you lost it all backing the wrong horse.

Life is an amazing mystery. Often we are so sure that we are making the right choices, only to learn that we have not chosen wisely. Often despite our best efforts to be cautious, we have to admit, we backed the wrong horse. Some are weary about marriage because they are afraid they may marry someone who turns out to be a bad choice. So they don't marry at all. Others choose their mates based one what everyone tells them, success potential, education, finance, looks. They literally marry by the book, only to find out later they picked the wrong horse.

It happens in other areas of life as well. There are many who back a political candidate with high hopes that they have chosen well, only to discover later that they backed the wrong horse. Some take sides on an issue desiring always to take the popular stance, then find out later that they backed the wrong horse.

There were many who laughed at Thomas Edison when he brought up the idea of the light bulb and put their money somewhere else. They backed the wrong horse!

Those who thought Bill Gates' idea of a computer that could operate on top of a desk was too risky. They put their money somewhere else. They backed the wrong horse!

If all the people who laughed at the Wright Brothers idea of a flying machine could speak today, they would say collectively, "We backed the wrong horse!"

What about our spiritual lives? Is it possible that in all of the life plans and careful selections that we have made that we made some unwise choices? The man or woman who has chosen to live a life outside of God, away from the church and distant from spirituality, makes a choice? Are they backing the right horse?

Jesus was approached by a rich young ruler once. The young man had considerable resources. He had hedged his bet well. He accumulated riches and obeyed the commandments of Moses to the letter. However, when Jesus came to town, he heard that there was another "horse in the race." He came to place a bet on heaven and asked, "What must I do to be saved?" Jesus asked him about following the commandments and obeying the law. The young man felt confident until he heard Jesus say, "One thing thou lackest; sell all you have, take up your cross and follow me." The young man was stunned. Jesus was asking him to bet his whole substance, everything he owned on him. The young man backed away, stuck with his own pursuits in life and ended backing the wrong horse.

As believers, we are convinced that we have made the right choice in Christ. We are certain that he is the way, the truth and the life. We have placed our hopes on the cross of Calvary and pledged our faith. We sing boldly, "I have decided to follow Jesus, no turning back! No turning back!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Christ as he explains the importance of placing our hopes in the kingdom of God instead of vainly seeking what the world offers.

Jesus often spoke to his disciples about the importance of choices. He maintained that many choose to follow the evil course because it appears to be the easiest and most profitable.

At the beginning of his ministry, Jesus himself had to make three critical choices about the direction of his life. In the solitude and loneliness of the wilderness he was tempted to use his ministry for self promotion, power and fame. The devil guaranteed him a successful career and a powerful reign. It would have been easy and certainly would not have resulted in the crucifixion of himself and the untimely deaths of those closest to him. Faced with those choices, Jesus chose to follow the directives of God.

There is a sure way to heaven. Jesus gave his disciples a simple formula: deny yourself, pick up your cross, follow him.

Denying ourselves means that we deny what would normally be our natural right. When we deny ourselves we give up the right to run our own lives and turn our whole being over to God. The natural order of things dictates that we run our own show, make our own decisions, do what pleases us, go where we want to go, do what we want to do, when we get good and ready. To deny ourselves means that we give that right over to God.

Jesus said, "Take up your cross!" What exactly does that mean? To some it means to shoulder whatever burden or hardship you receive as a result of kingdom building. In its purest sense, "take up your cross" has a different meaning. The cross was a symbol of humiliation and degradation. Those who were crucified upon crosses were broken, humiliated and dispirited. It suggested that those who associated themselves with the cross would be broken in spirit, humbled and fully aware they deserve no credit for anything they do because everything they accomplish is done by the grace of God.

The command to "follow me" means believers are expected to obey the Lord. This is just the opposite of our carnal nature which lives in defiance of God. Obedience is not our second nature. It is not even our third nature. Complete obedience to God is the key element to the new life of a believer in Christ.

A person follows this route in life places his bet on the kingdom of God. He is banking on the work of God to be true. They are backing the right horse in the race for eternal life. To do otherwise is what Christ called gaining the whole world and losing your soul. He asked the question, "what doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his soul?

The Importance of Following Jesus

Two Kentucky farmers who owned racing stables had developed a keen rivalry. One spring, each of them entered a horse in local steeplechase. Thinking that a professional rider might help him outdo his friend, one of the farmers engaged a crack jockey. The two horses were leading the race at the last fence, but it proved too tough for them. Both horses fell, unseating their riders. But, this calamity did not stop the professional jockey. He quickly remounted and won the race. Returning triumphant to the paddock, the jockey found the farmer who had hired him fuming with rage. "What's the matter," asked the jockey. "I won didn't I?" "Oh, yes," roared the farmer.

“You won all right, but you still don’t know, do you?””Know what?” Asked the jockey. “You won the race on the wrong horse!”

In a way this explains the dilemma in which many people find themselves. They began the race of life on the right horse but somewhere along the line switched horses inadvertently. They are winning the races that they are running but unfortunately they are riding the wrong horse.

There are many who can testify that they began the race of life riding the right horse. As children, they attended Sunday school, participated in church services, studied the Bible and spent much time in pursuit of the kingdom of God. These were glorious years that were filled with excitement and joy. They learned a lot and were enthusiastic about their service. They were riding the right horse and they knew it.

Somewhere in the excitement of it all, someone stumbled. Somewhere between the joy and the excitement, confusion appeared. Somewhere between the enthusiasm and the happiness of service a mix-up occurred that left many people still trying to win the race of life while riding the wrong horse.

In a horse race the victory is awarded to the horse not the jockey. The jockey is a servant of the owner and does everything within his ability to see to it that the owner achieves the victory. The horse can win the race without the jockey. The jockey only receives the praise of his employer if he wins the race and is riding the right horse.

Unfortunately, there are many people today who are trying to win life’s race while riding the wrong horse.

Many people need to check their horse to make sure they are riding the right steed. Some are riding a horse named success. Others are riding a horse named riches. Still others are riding the horse named fame. However, the only horse that can win the race for heaven is salvation.

Follow Jesus

Finally, brothers and sisters, it is important that every believer remember that the safest thing to do is to follow Jesus and take no chance of getting lost.

They were always challenges believers to question whether or not they are following the right and when they choose to follow Jesus. In a moment of weakness even the strongest believer muses about how much they could have made or where they could have grown in life and they not chosen to live the Christian life. Because they have not chosen to live ungodly lives they often make less, have less, and seem less than their friends who have chosen to ride a different horse. That’s why the word of God keeps reminding believers to “fret not thyself because of evil doers nor be thou envious of the workers of iniquity..”

Believers need to remember that they are riding the right horse, in the right race, and victory is guaranteed.

There is always victory when we choose to be on the Lord’s side.

There is always joy when we choose to be on the Lord’s side.

Elijah stood atop of Mount Carmel and challenged the prophets of Baal to,

"choose ye this day, if God be God then follow him. If Baal be God, then follow him." The prophets of Baal turned their backs on God. They backed the wrong horse!

As the people doubted whether God would help them in the promised land, Joshua stood on the side of a mountain and asked those who would stay with the Lord, to step forward. He told the people, "as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Moses stood at the gate of the camp of Israel and asked the question, "Who is on the Lord's side?"

I don't know about you, but I've found out that it's a good thing to be on the Lord's side!

When you are on the Lord's side, it doesn't matter what happens in life, the Lord will make a way!

I heard the psalmist say,"I have been young, and now am old, but I've never seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging for bread."

It would be a tragedy to spend your whole life, accumulating riches, only to find out that riches can't buy your way into to heaven!

It would be a tragedy to spend your whole life, trying to achieve power, only to find out that the power you achieve is powerless to get you into eternity.

It would be a tragedy to spend your whole life, trying to achieve fame, only to find out that not an angel in heaven knows your name!

Paul told the New Testament churches that he was confident that he was going in the right direction. He asked a question that aroused believers to a greater faith, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. (Romans 8:35-39)

No wonder the song writer wrote, "I have decided to follow Jesus, no turning back! No turning back!"

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, the Bright and Morning Star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!

Follow Jesus! Take no chance at getting lost!

Friends Don't Let Friends Live Without God

SCRIPTURE: Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. John 15:13

Introduction

How many friends do you have? If you are like most people you don't have many friends outside, perhaps, your wife, husband, mother or father. Friends are a rarity. Most of us don't have many friends. All of us have several enemies. In today's society, we are selective about those persons whom we choose to call our friends. We are careful because the terms mean different things to different people. While calling a person a friend is a mark of cordiality, it is also an indicator that the person referred to is much closer than is normally expected. Being a friend today is both an honor and a challenge.

When do we call a person a friend? Different people have different answers to that question. A friend says, "We had so much food left from our reunion, would you care to share some of it with us?" A friend says, "I see you are moving I'll be over to help you it looks like too much for one person to do alone." A friend says, "It's our anniversary will you come and help us celebrate? A friend says, "You are making a terrible mistake, you are about to mess up good fashion." A friend is more than a neighbor. A friend sticks closer than a brother or sister.

Our friends consider our needs. Our friends include us. They open their homes and their arms to us. Our friends open their hearts to us and they give us their time. Our friends often stop whatever they are doing to join us to help us. They warn us if we are heading a wrong direction such as dating a person who is deceiving us. They are able to express their friendship much the same as David and Jonathan did. Good friends are an invaluable asset.

Just when can we call a person a friend? Everyone we talk to, work with, or know is not a friend. Longivity does not mean automatic friendship. Just when is a person my friend? There are perhaps several levels that must be achieved before we can call the person our friend.

The first level is the" never heard of you" stage. At this level we have never seen or heard of an individual. No matter how well known the person may be to other people he or she is a foreigner to us. Because we have never seen the person, neither have we heard the person's name before, it is highly unlikely that this person could consider himself my friend.

The second level is the "name recognition" stage. At this level we have seen the person's face or heard the person's name before. We recognize the person because we have casually seen his name or his face perhaps in a newspaper or magazine or otherwise seen him or her at a distance. Because we have seen his face or have heard his name that fact alone, however, does not qualify the person to be called a friend.

The third level of friendship is the "acquaintance" stage. At this level we meet a person face-to-face. We exchange small bits of information about each other. We learn his name, he learns our name. We learn where he works, he learns where we work. There may be other small pieces of information that are exchanged, such as business information, a phone number or similar contacts. However, the exchange of such information does not qualify a person to call himself my friend.

The fourth level of friendship is the "associate" stage. This level is shared by persons who work together or for the same company. They may work in the same division of a corporation. They may serve in the same platoon in the military. They may be members of the same church. They may work together and know each other's name. They may have met each other in brief contacts. They may know little tidbits of information about each other. However, none of these are prerequisites for friendship.

The fifth level of friendship is the "co-laborer "stage. In this stage, a person shares a common cause and works to achieve a common purpose. Such persons work closely together. They share our mutual interests and a common bond. They do more than simply associate. They are more than mere acquaintances. Yet, despite the closeness of their collaborative effort this relationship still does not qualify as a friendship.

The highest degree of any relationship is to be called a friend. A friend sticks closer than a brother. Friends know all about us, including the dark secrets about our inner selves. Despite what he knows, he still chooses to be our friend anyway.

With that as a definition the number of our friends quickly dwindles to number so small we can count them on one hand. No wonder the song writer would declare, "what a friend we have been Jesus." He alone has proven to be our only friend.

As Christians, we rejoice in knowing that we have a friend in Jesus. He will always love us. He will always be with us. And he will never leave us alone.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains the nature of his relationships to his disciples.

Although Jesus was with his disciples for three years as he trained them and taught them the nature of the kingdom of God, none of them really knew the nature of his mission. He tried to teach them the full extent of what it meant to be a part of the kingdom of God. The concept of self-sacrifice is what he constantly taught. The central theme of his message was that each person should be winning to deny himself, take up his cross and follow him.

The focal point of all of Jesus's teaching was that each believer must learn to love. The love he spoke love was unconditional. It was extended even to enemies. While he explained his concept to his followers, he would soon demonstrate it by dying on Calvary. Jesus could see what lay ahead for him even though his disciples could not. Thus, his words of this text were probably confusing to his followers.

The central point that he makes in this text is that a true friend is willing to go beyond just mere acquaintances of being a laborer in the vineyard. A true friend, according to the Master, is one who is willing to go beyond the ordinary; even to the extraordinary for a friend. No greater love can a person show for another than his willingness to lay down his life in his defense. For Jesus this meant the ultimate sacrifice. It meant his death on Calvary to provide a means for the men and women of this world to have eternal life and forgiveness of sin.

A true friend is willing to lay down his life. A true friend is willing to go the last mile if it will mean saving the life of a friend.

Six Qualities of True Friends

Friends have many qualities that are admirable. The Bible is filled with examples of what should be expected of a person who is a friend. There are a few things that we might consider in this context as qualities of friends that should be emulated. There is a popular slogan that says "friends don't let friends drive drunk." The same could apply to faith and our relationships with our friends. There are some things friends don't let their friends do or do without.

FRIENDS DON'T BORROW FROM FRIENDS WITHOUT PAYING BACK: Whenever we borrow from a person it should be our intention to repay the loan. This should be especially true with respect to our friends. Generally, our friends will strain themselves to help us when we are in trouble. Because they are our friends, some often tap resources in their own homes which endanger their on stability in order to help us when we are in a temporary bind. This principle is promoted in the Bible. In Matthew 5:42 Jesus said, "Give to the one who asks, and don't turn away from the one wants to borrow from you." Thus, a friend tries to find a way to respond to us when we are in need. A person who has been befriended should understand the value of repaying a loan, especially to a true friend. An old proverb says "if you want to fallout with a friend loan him your money." The proverb underscores what happens when a person perceived to be a friend takes advantage of that relationship by paying others and leaving their friend in a strain. A true friend will not take advantage of a friendship by borrowing and not repaying it.

FRIENDS DON'T BETRAY THE CONFIDENCE OF THEIR FRIENDS: Often friends share their secrets together. It is said that our friends and know enough about us to destroy us. In moments of weakness many of us have revealed the great secrets and vulnerabilities to persons that we perceived to be our friends. True friends will never reveal the secrets of or betray the confidence of a friend. Some of the most difficult times in relationships between friends have come when a friend betrayed a confidence. The Bible gives us two extreme examples of this principle. Jonathan could have easily betrayed David and told his father about his whereabouts but even though it put him personally at risk, he chose not to do so. On the other hand Judas knew the whereabouts of Jesus Christ. Jesus had revealed to him his plans and Judas knew his vulnerabilities and the times when he would be alone. Judas used that information for his own profit and betrayed a confidence. A true friend is one that can keep secret and take into the grave with them.

FRIENDS DON'T WALK AWAY FROM FRIENDS WITHOUT AN EXPLANATION: There are times in any relationship between two people when there are differences. Differences even occur among persons who have been friends for many years. People who are friends however, are careful to explain their actions so that there is no doubt in the minds of either party that although they are separating for a specific reason, the friendship itself is still in tact. Abraham and Lot had considerable differences over how their large families would share the same grazing fields. The two relatives realized that they had reached a point when they had to part company. However, when the decision was made both men talked about it and decided to go their separate ways with peace between them. The nature of friendship is of such that we may truly love our friend as a person but cannot walk the same path that he walks. In such a case when friends leave and go separate ways neither leaves without an explanation. Friends don't walk away from friends without an explanation.

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIFT INTO DANGEROUS WATERS WITHOUT WARNING THEM: We often find ourselves involved in activities that aren't dangerous for our spiritual, economic, family, or personal best interest. Often our friends see the danger of our involvements when we cannot. Those who are our friends feel compelled to warn us when we are going into dangerous waters. Often we are angry when they tell us what we don't want to hear. Sometimes we rebel against them, cut them off and even strike out against them. But a friend would not be a friend if they saw us preparing to destroy ourselves and let us go head first into destruction. The friends of Samson constantly told him that it was dangerous for him to work with Philistine women. They saw his habit of keeping company with ungodly women as a sign of his imminent downfall. Samson ignored them and met his destruction. On the other hand the friends of Moses saw that he was stretching himself to thinly trying to judge all of the people of Israel himself. They warned them that he needed to subdivide his duties and let others help them. Wisely, Moses listened to their advice and was the better man because of it. Sometimes the advice of friends who want us that we are nearing dangerous waters troubles us but it is the kind of advice that can be expected from true friends.

FRIENDS DON'T LEAVE FRIENDS OUT OF IMPORTANT EVENTS IN THEIR LIVES: tTere is a time for everything and to everything there is a season. When friends celebrate they are careful not to exclude the persons who have befriended them over the years. In great moments, every person who has befriended us should feel welcomed and be invited to share in the celebration. Friendships should not be dependent upon status or class. A rich man may have poor friends but they are still his friends, whom he wants to share in his great moment. A learned man may have many friends who are not as learned as he but he still wants them to share in his celebration. Jesus made this point when he gave the parable of the man with a great banquet. He asked his friends to attend but they were all too busy and would not share his great moments. He went into the highways and byways and compelled others to come and share the moment. Friends go out of their way to share important moments in the lives of their friends. At the same time, friends who have succeeded do not turn their backs on their friends who are still struggling but includes them in the list of important people sharing their great moments. Friends don't leave friends out of important events in their lives.

Friends don't let friends live without God

Finally, brothers and sisters, friends don't let friends live without knowing the goodness of the Lord.

Every believer has a friend or two that does not acknowledge the goodness of the Lord. In that respect every believer has the responsibility of showing a lost friend how good God has actually been.

Just as no real friend would allow a friend to get behind the wheel of an automobile inebriated and unable to control himself, neither would a real friend watch a friend live while drunk with the wine of worldly pursuits.

A friend cannot sit by and watch a friend build a whole life based on physical things and notice that the things of God are taking second place. A friend looks for the right moment and right way to remind their friends, that it doesn't profit a man anything if he gains the whole world and loses his soul!

If you have a friend who knows the Lord, you have a friend in deed!

A friend who knows the Lord knows a man who came to be our friend.

In John 15:15 Jesus said, "Henceforth I call you not servants, for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends…"

What a friend we have in Jesus, when we can't see our way, he makes a way out of no way! What a friend we have in Jesus, when we have fallen down, he picks up and turns us around!

What a friend we have in Jesus, when he we have dropped our heads in despair, he dries our weeping eyes!

What a friend we have in Jesus, when we feel abandoned, he promises never to leave us. Never to leave us alone!

What a friend we have in Jesus, who showed us the greatest love!

He carried an old rugged cross!

He was raised up and stretched out in humility!

He was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquity!

No greater love can a man show than this, that he would lay down his life for his friends!

Turning Bitter into Better

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 18, 2002

SCRIPTURE: Looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled" Hebrews: 12:15; "Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me. And he went a little further, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt."Matthew 26:38-39

Introduction

Have you ever had a bitter experience? Bitter experiences are those that were troubling, disturbing upsetting, unrewarding and disastrous. Most of us have had at least one bitter experience in the course of our lives. Those bitter moments are those that frustrated us and prompted us to throw up our hands saying, "what's the use!" When we expect justice and receive foul play, that's a bitter experience. When we expect love and only receive hate, that's a bitter experience. When we expect to graduate and learn that we fell short of the requirement, that's a bitter experience. Since bitter experiences are not unique to any particular person, every believer should strive to respond to the bitter situations in a way that takes life's lemons and turns them into lemonade.

There are many people who have been wounded by so many bitter experiences that they themselves have become bitter. We see them every day. Their faces are always curled up. There are always frowning, always complaining and rarely have a kind word to say. They are so bitter they appear to bathe in lemon juice and rub themselves with Castor Oil!

Sometimes our bitterness can make us unbearable. Consider the first grade teacher who was very bitter because she was jilted by her husband who was a Baptist deacon. Anytime she thought about Baptist it left a bitter taste in her mouth, so she quit going to church and became a free spirit. One day in class she announced that she was a free spirit and asked how many in the class thought people who were free spirits were good people? All the children raised their hands because they wanted to be like their teacher!

However, there was one girl in the class who didn't raise her hand! When asked why, she said, "Because I'm not a free spirit!"

"What are you?" Asked the teacher?

"I'm a proud, dyed in the wool, holy ghost filled Baptist" the little girl said proudly.

The bitterness began to swell in the teacher. The girl's statement brought back bitter memories, but she quietly asked, why she was a proud, dyed in the wool, Holy Ghost filled Baptist"

The little girl said, "Because I was brought up to believe that God loves everybody. My mommy and my daddy were Baptist and I'm a Baptist too!"

The teacher said "That's a silly reason. Suppose your mommy was a stupid ignorant moron and you're your daddy was a stupid ignorant moron? What you be then?"

The little girl paused for a moment then said, "I guess I'd be like you!"

People who are bitter rarely seem themselves as bitter. Those around them see them clearly.

The word of God challenges us not to be so overwhelmed by the circumstances of this life that we become bitter for we are "more than conquerors" in Christ Jesus.

As Christians, our goal in life is to turn bitter experiences into better situations through the power of God. We have learned that no matter what circumstance we encounter God can make it sweet and beautiful if we focus on his power and love rather than then bitterness of the moment.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he considers the bitter cup of Crucifixion in the Garden of Gethsemene.

Jesus was a perfect man. Despite his perfection and holiness the world seemed to deal him a series of bitter experiences.

As a man, Jesus showed his disciples how the godly should respond do life's circumstances. He experienced nearly every emotion known the average person: rejection, fatigue, frustration, anger, love, sadness, even destitution. His was a life that was filled with poverty and simple living. Yet, despite the lowly nature of his circumstance he remained positive, trusting and obedient to God.

In the Garden of Gethsemene he made his final report to the father. John detailed how he told the father that his mission was complete and work was done.

What John did not detail was Jesus' request to avoid the "bitter cup" of Calvary. His request was simple, "if there was a way to provide salvation for mankind, short of Calvary he wanted God to excuse him from the cross."

He concluded that God's will was preeminent however, and chose to go to Calvary saying, "not my will by thy will be done."

He endured the bitterness of Calvary but turned it into a bittersweet experience for all of those who would follow him. His resurrection was the crowning achievement of his journey on earth.

He took an experience that was bitter and made it better for the entire world!

The writer of Hebrews presented this book with one single theme, which can be summed up by the word 'better." A better way. A better hope. Better promises. A better covenant. A better testament. A better tabernacle. A better priesthood. The book of Hebrews reminds us that Christ is better than angels, better than Moses, better than Aaron, better than Melchizedek. Because we walk in a better way, believers are warned not to fall prey to the "root of bitterness" that can grow within each of us if we are not careful.

It's Easy to become Bitter

It's easy to get bitter, especially if we feel that we have been wronged.

A man left for work one Friday afternoon. But, being payday, instead of going home, he stayed out the entire weekend partying with the boys, spending lavishly on loose women, squandering his entire paycheck. He wife was extremely angry because. The more she thought about his actions the angrier she became. She reached the point of bitterness.

When He finally appeared at home, Sunday Night, he was confronted by a very angry and bitter wife and was walked him up the wall for nearly two hours.

Finally his wife stopped the nagging and simply said to him. "How would you like it if you didn't see me for two or three days?"

To which he replied. "That would be fine with me."

Monday went by and he didn't see his wife. Tuesday and Wednesday came and went with the same results. But on Thursday, the swelling went down just enough where he could see her a little out of the corner of his left eye! Her bitterness closed both his eyes!

WE GET BITTER WHEN WE BROOD: It is good to look back at our lives and see how far God has brought us. However, it is not a good idea to look back and brood. When we brood and focus on how much we have been wronged we get bitter. Each of us has someone in our past who wounded us or hurt us in some way. Brood over a wrong that happened many years ago makes us bitter. We know we are bitter when we see that person coming and walk the other way. We know we are bitter when we refuse to sit near that person or even be in the same assembly. Brooding is dangerous because if causes us to focus all of our energies on the negative rather than the positive. If we experienced a bitter experience in the past don't brood over it! Don't get bitter, get better! You know you are better when you can treat a person who has offended you kindly! You know you are better when you don't want to take out your pistol and shoot the woman who stole your man! You know you are better when you pray for your enemies rather than wish them harm. Since we are all saved saints, don't get bitter, get better!

WE GET BITTER WHEN WE FAIL TO SEE THE GOOD: Bitterness develops when we can't see the good in the world around us. It's easy to see the bad. It's all around us. There was a time when you could walk down the street and folks would speak to one another, and you could hear people say things like "please", and "thank you", and "no ma'am", and "yes, sir", but now it seems like some people will just as soon shoot you as speak to you. Poverty is everywhere, despite a plethora of programs we still have very little to call our own. It's easy to get bitter. Crooked cops are beating us and trampling our rights! It's easy to get bitter. The school system is failing our children and those teachers who are trying hard find that they are usually underpaid and underappreciated. It's easy to get bitter. We got to blame somebody. Some blame on the Mexicans who are coming across the border illegally. Others blame on the Arabs who have come across the border legally and taken over every store in poor communities across the nation. We blame everybody, hate everybody and have something bad to say about everybody but ourselves. That's when we know we are bitter! Despite the bitter circumstances around us however, we are urged, not to get bitter, but to get better! Out of the bitterness of educational decline let's roll up our sleeves and make it better! If our youth are rapidly sliding down the slippery staircase to degradation, don't get bitter, let's make it better! If others are succeeding in our community let's not get bitter against those who are making it work, let's roll up our sleeves and make it better!

WE GET BITTER WHEN IT GETS INSIDE OF US: To be bitter means that you are in a state of heaviness, to be bitter means that you are in a state of sorrowfulness, of despair, and what happens when we find ourselves in such a state, is that if we don't do what is needed to get rid of that thing, that thing that's bothering us, that thing that's hurting us, it begins to get down on the inside, and it eats away at our joy, it takes away our peace, and we find ourselves becoming mean,vindictive, angry and malicious. That's why our text from Hebrews talks about how a 'root of bitterness' can spring up, and it will not only mess you up, but the text says thereby, 'many' would be defiled.

You are bitter when you've got something against somebody, somebody has offended you, hurt your feelings, and now all of a sudden you decide you're gonna take the situation into your own hands and you end up carrying that "thing" around. All of a sudden you're not what you used to be, you're mean and hateful and cutting, and that begins to affect everybody around you.

When you are you start seeing enemies where there are no enemies, and all of a sudden this one don't like you, and that one is against you. That's what the word means when it says that 'the wicked flee when no man pursueth'. "Don't Get Bitter! Get better!

Some of us think that we can treat people any kind of way, and believe that we can still stand before God and hear Him say "well done"…but the devil is a liar. You who say you're on fire for the Lord, and yet you sit up in church with a bad attitude, can't get along with nobody, sitting in the pews looking like you've been baptized in lemon juice, then have the nerve to say "I can't find no husband… I can't find no wife". Don't nobody wanna marry you…with your bitter self…Somebody look at somebody and say, "Don't Get Bitter

Better not bitter

Finally, brothers and sisters, there may be bitterness in the cup but we can still be better.

This is the lesson that Jesus taught his disciples,; the world around you may be without hope, but we can be better because we have hope.

The people around us may be bitter because they have failed, but we can be better because we serve a God who turns failure into success!

The social conditions around us may be obstructive, but we can be better because we serve a God who turns obstructions into opportunities.

We are in the world that sings a "somebody done me wrong song" but we serve a God that keeps us singing, "God gave a me a song that the angels cannot sing, I've been washed in the blood of the crucified lamb, I've been redeemed."

Every time a child of God even thinks about getting bitter about life, he or she should just look around and start counting his bleesings. That's when he'll say, "The Lord has been so good to me. He's opened doors I could not see!" I won't get bitter, I'll get better.

Joseph was treated unfairly by his brothers and sold into slavery. He was falsely accused and thrown into prison. He could have wallowed in self pity and festered in anger. He didn't get bitter, he became better! Because he was better instead of bitter God lifted him up higher than he'd ever been before!

Has someone done you wrong? Have you been falsely accused? Don't get bitter get better and God will lift you. Psalm 110:1 says, sit close to the Lord, "until I make thine enemies thy footstool!" Don't get bitter, get better!

Jacob was tricked into marrying a woman he didn't love. He worked seven years to marry Racheal but had to marry her sister instead. He could have been bitter and took it out on Leah, but instead he became better! He worked seven more years and ended up with two wives, 12 children and enough money to live in luxury for the rest of his life. He didn't get bitter, he got better and God blessed him!

Has someone let you down in romantic life? Is your heart hurting because you have been betrayed? Don't get bitter, get better! God is a heart fixer and a mind regulator! Put it in God's hand, don't get bitter, get better!

A widow woman put her trust in the Lord but soon found that her barrel had run dry. Even when she was down to her last cup of meal she refused to get bitter. She could have become bitter because she trusted in God but her food and supplies ran out. But instead of getting bitter, she got better! She kept trusting in the Lord. As long as she trusted in the Lord there was always enough for one more meal.

Are times getting tough for you? Is it difficult to make your way? Don't get bitter and lash out at the world, keep trusting in the Lord. Don't get bitter, get better! That's why the song writer says, "I will trust in the Lord! I will trust in the Lord until I die!"

Bitterness takes away from us, but there is a blessing in being better!

Bitterness takes away our joy, but it's better to know the joy of the Lord. When David found himself wallowing in bitterness because of his sin, he decided to get better. He asked, the Lord in Psalm 51 to "create in me a clean heart O' God and renew a right spirit within me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation." He didn't get bitter, he got better!

Bitterness takes away our ability to enjoy the sweetness of life, but it's better to be able to sing "there's a sweet sweet spirit in this place and I know it must be the presence of the Lord!"

Don't get bitter, get better because we serve a God who can take defeat and turn it into victory!

Don't get bitter, get better because we serve a God who can take pain and turn it into gain!

Don't get bitter, get better because God can take our setbacks and turn them into start ups!

Don't get bitter, get better because God can take our weaknesses and turn them into strengths!

Don't get bitter, get better because God can take our losses and turn them into gains!

In the garden of Gethsemene Jesus looked at the bitter cup before him! He could have become bitter and lashed out at his father for showing little appreciation for all he had done. Instead of getting bitter, he got better! He told his father, "Nevertheless, not my will, but thy will be done!

When they took before a court filled with false witnesses, he didn't get bitter, he got better!

When they put a crown of thorns on his head, he didn't get bitter, he got better!

When they whipped him all night long, he didn't get bitter, he got better!

When they put an old rugged cross on his shoulder and marched him up Golgotha's hill, he didn't get bitter, he got better!

When they nailed him to an old rugged cross, he didn't get bitter, he got better! I heard him say, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do!" That wasn't bitter, it was better!

When they buried him in a borrowed tomb that was a bitter experience!

But early Sunday morning, he arose up from the grave! He didn't get bitter, he got better!

It doesn't matter what the world does to you!

Don't get bitter, get better!

SCRIPTURE: "After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them."Matthew 25:19

Introduction

Have you ever been audited, reviewed or evaluated?This is the time when all of our actions are reviewed by superiors or those who have authority over us. Some jobs have regular evaluation periods that occur systematically. There are often peer reviews and quality performance checks in some areas. Some will argue that one of the most painful reviews is the one posed by the Internal Revenue Service when it conducts an audit. It reaches way back and makes us all feel vulnerable and small in the face of an all powerful government. Since we are aware of the possibility of evaluations, most people prepare for them by doing what is expected and keeping the proper records.

There will also be a spiritual evaluation one day. It will be the day that the Lord reviews the quality of our service and determines the extent of our reward based on our service. There is a judgment day coming and every believer will be held accountable for the quality of his or her service on this earth.

Consider the church worker who fell asleep and dreamed he had gone to judgment. All his life he had been relaxed in his church work, personal services and attendance. Standing before the judgment bar the man saw his entire record scrawled on scores of pages and became nervous about the ultimate result. In his dream, the man decided that he would try to talk himself out of what he knew was "serious trouble." When his life came up for review, he heard the question, "In your life, where did you worship and serve?" The man answered, "Here and there!" Another question followed: "What type of service did you render?" The man answered, "This and That!" A third question came, "Has your service been good or bad?" The man answered, "Tit for tat!" The man felt pretty comfortable with his answers until he heard the words, "Depart from me, take him to hell!" As the devils came to claim the man he cried out, "Wait, Lord, how long will I be in hell? When will I get out?" A voice answered, "Sooner or later!" Then the man woke up.

How far we get in life has a lot to do with the way we respond to life's opportunities. Three words and the way we respond to them, usually define the limits of our life experiences. The words are: "potential, production, and procrastination." Each of us has some degree of potential or possibilities. The little voice that sings clearly, "Yes Jesus Loves Me" has the potential to make it to the Metropolitan Opera, that's what Leontynne Price found out. The hands that make cookies in the kitchen have the potential of making cookies that are marketed around the world; that's what Famous Amos found out. Each person is born with potential to one degree or another. What we do with our potential is called our "production." The more we work with what we have the further it takes us and the greater our success. Production is the result of maximizing potential.

Procrastination is the poorest way to respond to an opportunity. It means to put things off. Potential remains a possibility but never a probability when we procrastinate. What we "could be" never becomes real if we keep putting things off. Procrastination is the enemy of production and it owns a graveyard filled with souls with unused potential.

With respect to our spiritual lives and service in the kingdom of God there are many who have great potential for the kingdom but can't quite seem to get the production they desire because of procrastination. These are the ones who have the gift to be Sunday School teachers, youth workers, singers, clerical aides, or musicians, but they just keep putting off making the decision to serve fully. Morever, there are still others who have the potential to be a part of the kingdom of God but they procrastinate about their decision to serve him and never produce anything for the kingdom.

The almighty has given each of us a life to manage. What we do with it has been left up to us. However, there will come a day of reckoning, when we will give an account for our stewardship. When the Lord returns he will review the work of each believer and will reward us accordingly.

As believers, we strive to do the best we can with what we have. We give of our time, talent and resources to promote kingdom building. We do so with the full knowledge that when the master comes home he will review our work and reward us accordingly.

Exposition

This text focuses on a parable Christ told to emphasize the importance of service in the kingdom of God.

Jesus constantly emphasized to his disciples that greatness is determined by service in kingdom building. Kingdom building involves service to others in the name of Christ.

In this parable the roles in the kingdom are symbolized by the master and his servants. The master represents God who is the Lord of the Kingdom. The servants represent the members of the kingdom of heaven. The theme of the parable is that God gives each person a measure of possessions for which he will one day be held accountable.

One servant is given five measures of money called talents. A second is given two. The last is given one. The first two invest their money and return the master a profit. The last buried his talent and did not use it. It angered the Master and resulted in loss of favor with the master.

The message to believers becomes obvious. If we use what God has given us he will be pleased. If we do not, we make him angry and he could withdraw his favor.

Being Held Accountable

WHAT I HAVE IS ON LOAN FROM THE MASTER: What do we really have that belongs to us? Often when we look at our possessions we get the impression that everything belongs to us. Verse 14 shows the master in the parable entrusting his possessions with his servants. The idea that everything we have has been entrusted to us by God is one of the most difficult concepts for many to accept. It is against the carnal nature of man to accept that what we have is not ours, but God's. Yet, that is the attitude of the steward. Everything we have is actually on loan from the master. What we have from God is time, talent and treasures, all of which are subject to the discretion of the creator. It is as if we are the juvenile that has been given the keys to the family car. The juvenile has the responsibility, but the right of ownership remains with the parents who can withdraw the privilege of driving the car at any time. Even those who own a home do not really own it. If you stoop down and pick up a hand full of the dirt around your home you will instantly realize that your home sits on dirt that you have a title to but you really do not own. Your deed only gives you the right to possess it for a while but not forever. Only God will own it forever. Maybe that's what 1 Corinthians 10:26 means when it declares that the "earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof."

WORK WITH WHAT YOU ARE GIVEN: There are many who spend their whole lives grumbling about what they were not given. There are others who choose to work with whatever they have been given. Verse 15 makes it clear that each servant is given possessions according to his ability. An old proverb says, "To whom much is given, much is required." Those with great abilities have more to work with and are usually expected to make a great leap over others in sheer quantity. However, those who have been given little can also enjoy the same proportionate growth. There are literally thousands of success stories in America. These are stories of men and women who were given small advantages but took them and multiplied them. Those who have great advantages at the beginning have even higher expectations at the end. Whether you are a five talent person or a one talent person the expectancy is the same, that is that we use whatever we have been given to the best of our ability. That's why verse 16 notes that "immediately," without hesitation or procrastination, two of the servants began to find ways to multiply the possessions entrusted to them by trading and investing. It is essential that we work with what we have been given.

A DAY OF ACCOUNTABILITY WILL COME: There will come a time when each believer will have to give an account for his service. Whatever we have been entrusted to invest our energies into will one day be the subject of review. What will we be accountable for? We will be held accountable for whether or not we do a lot with a lot or do a lot with a little. Either way, we are expected to do a lot. A great amount of will power and industry can take the smallest opportunity and turn it into prosperity. That's what God will be looking for in the final day when he asks, "What did you do with the little that I gave you?" Those who do not achieve must understand that God will judge our lack of action just as he will our action, that's the essence of accountability. The wise servant will be able to say, "I used my time, talents and resources in your service.

The faithful will be rewarded

Finally, brothers and sisters it is good to remember that while there are those who misuse what the Lord has given them, the faithful will be rewarded.

This is the message of the parable that should not be lost in the telling. Those who labor in the kingdom faithfully will be rewarded.

Every now and then it is good for believers to remember that serving the Lord does pay off after while.

We have to work while it is day because when the night comes, no man can work. Maybe that's what the song writer had in mind when he penned the words, "I'm going to work until my day is done. I'm going to work until the setting of the sun. I'll cease from sorrow. There'll be no tomorrow. I'm going to work until my day is done."

Whatever the Lord has given you, you must use it until your day is done!

If he gave you a voice, sing until your day is done!

If he gave you an artist's eye, then paint pictures, arrange flowers and make things beautiful until your day is done!

If he gave you the ability to speak, then lift up your voice for him, until your day is done!

If he gave you the ability to cook, then keep rattling pots and making tasty meals until the setting of your sun!

There is no reward for those who sit on the stool of good intentions singing, "I shall not be moved" but only for those who use their God given abilities to the fullest.

If you work until the end of the day, the word says, "he that overcometh shall inherit all things!"

I'm reminded of Uncle Doug's hound dog. Every morning that hound dog would greet Uncle Doug as he walked out of the front gate. All day long he chased away strangers, protected the yard and kept a watch out for varmits that would slip up on the farm. Long about sun down every day that old hound dog would lift his lazy eyes. His tail would begin to wag. His ears would stick up straight. Anybody who was visiting would always ask, "Why is that old hound dog suddendly barking and pacing back and forth on the porch.?" Aunt Jenny would answer, "Every morning that hound dog sees Uncle Doug leave. But on the way home from the mill Uncle Doug stops by the local cafe, and gets a fresh bag of scraps for that old dog. That dog is excited because he knows he's going to get a reward when his master comes home!"

I don't know about you but I know there is going to be a reward, when the master comes home!

Through the years I've been rising and falling, but when the Master comes home....

Through the years I've cried many briny tears, but when the Master comes home he'll wipe all our tears away!

Through the years we climbed up the rough side of the mountain, but when the Master comes home, every mountain shall be made low and every valley exalted!

When the Master comes home the bottom rail will come to the top!

When the Master comes home, those who are last shall be first!

When the Master comes home, the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest.

I don't know about you but I can't wait for the master to come home.

When the Master comes home he's going to do a quality check that might sound like he's checking a steak!

He's going to say "Servant, how was a church attendance? Somebody's going to say, it was "rare" because I rarely came to Sunday School, rarely came to church, rarely paid any money!

He's going to say, "Servant, how was your missionary service?" Somebody's going to say, it was medium well, because they did well, but they didn't do all that they could have done.

I don't know about you but when the Master comes home I don't want to hear him say "rare" and do not want to hear him say, "medium well!"

I want to hear him say, "Servant Well done!"

Warriors, keep on telling the story!

Tell them about Jesus!

Tell them how he died on Calvary!

Tell them how he arose from the dead!

But don't forget to tell them that he's coming back again!

When the Master comes home, everything is going to be alright!

And It Shall be so

SCRIPTURE: "So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Isaiah 55:11

Introduction

Has anyone ever told you that you couldn't accomplish a goal? Sometimes our friends have a tendency to doubt our capacity to do great things because they think they know us. When we tell them about our dreams to become lawyers, doctors, educators or other lofty areas of profession requiring skill or special training, they often listen to us but are privately amused because they think that we're fooling ourselves into believing that these things are possible. Often in their conversations with us they tell us that we have very little chance of succeeding or accomplishing our goals because the odds are against us. They often remind us how poor we are or they point to our humble origins and the fact that perhaps we were not born with the affluence necessary to accomplish certain goals. If we're not careful we would listen to what they say to us and limit our possibilities to what our associates consider to be attainable objectives.

Often young people get chuckles from their parents, and sometimes their teachers who are amused when they say they are dreaming about being brain surgeons, engineers, or math specialists. The adults who second-guess youth usually do so because they are peering hard at their performance in the present without considering the potential of the young person that is speaking. If we have learned anything from history it should be that we should ration the use of the word "never." We should be careful when we way something can't can be done. We shouldn't doubt the possibilities that exist for any person who sets his mind on a goal and decides to pursue it with everything he has within him.

One of the challenges youth have is to sort out their potential. Many adults forget how frustrating it is not to know what you are going to do with your life. Young people often find themselves tangled in the frustration of trying to figure out what to do with themselves. At one point in their lives some may have said they were going to college only to change a few years later, deciding that college is so tough that they would prefer a trade school. Some decided one year that they were going to be nurses; but within the next year they decided that they were going to pursue a career in law.

Unfortunately, many young people have shortchanged themselves. They have shortchanged themselves because many have turned away from what they would really like to do with their lives because someone, somewhere, convinced them that their particular dream was unreachable. So the young boy who was born to be a doctorl owered his aspirations to become an orderly because someone told him that he could never be a doctor. The young man who dreamed of being a pro football player contented himself with watching from the bleachers because someone told him that he could never make the team. The girl who dreamed of being a nuclear scientist became content with being a lab assistant because many years earlier she accepted the fact that she could never master the math and science needed to be a real scientist.

Those who tell us that things cannot be only judge what they see at the present. They have no idea what's in store for the future. The experts are often wrong. History is filled with errors of the experts.

In 1932 Albert Einstein dismissed the idea of nuclear energy because mankind would never be able to split the atom at will.

Three days before the bombing of Pearl Harbor the Secretary of the Navy announced to the nation, the U.S. Navy would never be caught napping.

In 1949 a Popular Science magazine said computers would never be useful becomes each would have weigh over 1.5 ton each.

Just before he fired him in 1954, a concert told a young man with a guitar that he should go back to driving a truck. He had just fired Elvis Presley.

When MGM looked at the first takes of the movie "Wizard of OZ" they said no one will want to sit and listen to a girl sing about "Somewhere over the rainbow."

In 1962 a famous music executive said "singing groups with guitar music are on their way out." When he was asked to give his impression of the Beatles.

Their teachers said they would never amount to anything because all they did was play in their garage. The two boys they talked aboutwere Steve Jobs and Bill Gates who founded Apple and Microsoft respectively.

The point is very clear. When it comes to your future, no one should be allowed to put limits on how far you can go. The sky is not even the limit for beyond the sky there is the moon and the galaxies beyond.

That truth is even more important for Christian youth. Many of the people who set out to achieve a personal goal do so because they bring a controlled passion to their quest. It is a passion fueled by the spirit of God, controlled by his hand, and protected by his divine power. Christian youth should turn deaf ears to those who tell them that they can never achieve their goals because they know what the word of God says. They know beyond the shadow of a doubt that if they seek first the kingdom of God and its righteousness that all other things will be added unto them.

If God has spoken it; and God has empowered it; it shall be so.

As Christians, we are confident in our belief that if God has blessed our aspirations and has spoken it into being, his word will not return to him void. That which God has prepared for us can only slip through our fingers if we've failed to prepare ourselves to receive what he has given.

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah as he reminds Israel that anything God has promised will be fulfilled.

The 55th chapter of Isaiah is a confirmation of the strikingly bold promises God made to Israel in the 54th chapter. In the 54th chapter Israel was encouraged to enlarge its boundaries in expectation of the great wonders God would perform. After describing Israel as barren(54:1)Israel was told to enlarge "the place of thy tent" or its boundaries in (v2) because blessings were on the way. It was promised that they would break forth on the right and left and build great cities for the Lord, rising out of the ashes of desolation.

After the promises of the 54th chapter this text is imbedded in the 55th chapter which seeks to assure believers that God will make his word good even though it may not be understood at the moment.

The mystery of God's ways often confuses men who cannot understand the correlation between God's promises and the events of the earth. It appears to some that the promises are made but the results are not immediately seen. In verse 8 God explains it by saying "my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways" God's way of moving and acting is too lofty for us to comprehend. It is deep. It may even seem at times that what God has promised is impractical and improbable to occur, yet believers are encouraged to remember just how God operates.

The example that God gave Isaiah for Israel was that of the rain and snow. The rain and snow fall from heaven. Sometimes when they come they may be perceived differently by those upon whom they fall, depending upon their expectations. Regardless to how they are perceived or received by humankind, they do not return to God in the same state. After having accomplished their work rain drops may vaporize and float back toward heaven but the rain drop itself does not return to God without accomplishing its purpose

Thus, Israel was encouraged to know that God has promised a day of triumph for the people. His word would not return to him empty. They were encouraged to believe it and receive it.

Isaiah's message to Israel was precise. If God has spoken it, it shall be so. It shall prosper in the way he intended for the persons whom he intended to receive it.

It shall not return void

In the scriptures God speaks to Israel. But the same message that God spoke to Israel is relevant to believers today. The essence of the truth of this text remains just as strong today as it was in Isaiah's time. If God speaks a command or wills for a thing to be, his command will not return to him without having accomplished the purpose for which he sent it. The phrase used in the text is that God's word would not return to him void. Returning to him void is a way of saying that God's word will touch the hearts necessary, open the doors needed, and turnover whatever stones required to lay the groundwork for his will to be accomplished. In a very simple sense, it is as if God sends out an angel with keys to open the doors of opportunity, with sledge hammers to weaken the walls and obstacles that stand before us, and signs pointing us the right direction to go. That essence of God's being would not return to him until the opportunity that God wills has been created.

It was highly unlikely that the young boy Samuel would grow up to be a priest. Yet long before he was born God spoke the command that set the wheels in motion for his mother to speak to the priests, for the priests to agree to her request to raise her son in the temple, and for him to receive firsthand the instructions about the ways of God. Whether Samuel became a great priest or not was left up to him. But God's word set the wheels in motion to put his priestly future within his grasp. The same was true for Moses. God fixed every circumstance so that it would favor Moses. He provided him with the opportunities to obtain skills and abilities to lead the people of Israel to the promised land. He spoke the word and his ark floated upon the river. He spoke the word and Pharaoh's daughter found that little bundle of joy. He spoke the word and the wheels were set in motion for the military, organizational, and leadership training of Moses. Whether or not Moses would use what had been a made available to him was left up to him but God's word did not return to him void.

In the same sense, youth today must know that if God has endorse their life's quest, their dream will become a reality no matter how far-fetched it may appear to others. God fixes it such that all the right people will meet you at all the right times. They will say all the right things and help you achieve what needs to be done. Whether or not you accept what God has in store for you is a matter of your own choice; but his word will not return without having created the opportunities necessary to accomplish that which he has promised.

It will accomplish what pleases God

The opportunities that God will create for each young believer will be according to what pleases him. Obviously, God does not create opportunities for those things which he abhors. God would not create opportunities for believers to disrespect him, ignore him, or do anything that would not bring him joy. His word will only be given to sanctify and endorse those dreams and aspirations which are according to his will and purpose.

Samson was a young man who recognized early that he had special physical gifts. However, Samson had a fascination for women of the Philistine race who were off-limits to the men of Israel. Samson had been given strength but the strength was to be used in ways that pleased God. Because Samson chose to use his special gift outside of the will of God he awoke one morning to find himself without his special gifts. He became just as every other man no more or no less. Samson's situation lets us know that God gives us special opportunities that allows us to enjoy them as long as we used them in ways that please him.

Youth today should be aware that we please God when we live our lives that are according to his purpose. Therefore each young man or woman should ask God for guidance to determine his will. If your life pursuit is according to the will of God, this text speaks to you today, "It shall accomplish that which I please."

It shall prosper in us

The last portion of the text verse is unique because while the first section shows God's word going out to create opportunities for us, this last section shows God's word as it germinates in us. In essence, while opportunities are created all around us, God's word has to grow in us for us to seize the opportunities that God is making available. Look at the verse again, "It shall prosper in the thing." That means the word starts growing on the inside of you and the dreams that you have of godly success begin inside before they can reach outside.

The Reverend Jesse Jackson coined a phrase that epitomizes what this text is about, "If my mind can conceive it, and my heart can believe it, I can achieve it." Prosperity begins inside of us. It grows in proportion to our faith in God and confidence in ourselves. Joseph was not the most likely of all of his brothers to be a success. Yet, even while he was a boy he dreamed of a day when he would be so successful that even his family members would bow before him. It was as clear as day to him. He never doubted that it would come to be. Even when he was jailed or falsely accused he still believed what God had shown him in the fields would become a reality. The same was true for the little boy David. He believed God would protect him in any situation. When he was threatened by the king or when he faced Goliath, he remained strong and bold. That which he was destined to be prospered first within himself before he could accomplish anything outside of himself.

Youth today must believe in themselves. You must believe that you have the capacity to do anything with God's help; even master difficult subjects like algebra, calculus, and world history. You must believe that if I apply myself I can program a computer and make video games rather than simply playing them. I can build cars rather than simply driving them. I can earn money rather than simply spending it. Prosperity begins on the inside and that's where God comes in. Faith in God is the key to a young believer's success. It is that faith that motivates you to reach for the unreachable, climb for the unclimbable while you dream the impossible dream.

When God speaks it, is shall be so

Finally, brothers and sisters we must remember that when God speaks it, it shall be so.

If there is one truth about God that every believer knows, it is that when God speaks a word, it shall be so.

When God stepped out on the blackness of creation he spoke a word and said let there be light and there was light.

When God told Noah to prepare for a flood his word did not return void for it rained 40 days and 40 nights proving that when God speaks it shall be so.

When God told Moses to stretch out his hand over the Red Sea and that the people would walk across on dry land, it happened just as he said proving once again that when God speaks it shall be so.

When God showed Ezekiel the valley of dry bones and told him that these bones can live again it wasn't long before Israel became a nation once again proving that when God speaks it shall be so.

Whenever God speaks we don't have to worry about it, his word will not return void.

The same is true when God speaks to our life situations; whenever God speaks it shall be so.

God can speak to our doubts and turn them into confidence!

God can speak to our weaknesses and turn them into strength!

God can speak to our failures and turn them into successes!

God can speak to our insecurities and turn them into assurances!

God can speak to our difficulties and turn them into opportunities!

God can speak to our defeats and turn them into victories!

God can speak to our enemies and turn them into lifelong friends!

Despite growing up in a life of obscurity God spoke to Joseph's dreams and he became the prime minister of Egypt.

Despite growing up as a young girl with no name and no future God spoke to Esther and she became the queen of Persia!

Despite spending his life as a major persecutor of the church, God spoke to Paul on the Damascus Road and he became the greatest ambassador for Christ that the world has ever known.

Every child of God needs to be reminded every now and then that if God is the power behind your dream there is no force on earth that can stop it from happening. When God speaks it shall be so.

There were some who did not believe the power of God but one evening on Calvary they learned an important lesson which the whole world knows and that is when God speaks it shall be so.

They took Jesus and nailed him to an old rugged cross!

They buried him in a borrowed tomb!

To prevent God's word from fulfilling itself they put armed God's around is grave on to learn early Sunday morning that..

When God speaks, it shall be so!

Knowing the Will of God

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "And when Saul inquired of the LORD, the LORD answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets." 1 Samuel 28:6

Introduction

What method do you use to discover the will of God? How do you know that what you decide to do is really what God wants you to do? Are you sure? People have used many ways to try to learn the will of God for their lives. Some are very humorous and others border on the superstitious. Those who are undecided about what they should do with their lives usually seek outside assurances. Some ask God to show them which way to go. We perhaps know of individuals who have unanswered questions about life so they open the Bible and point to a Scripture and take their directions from whatever scripture their finger finds. That was the case with the woman who stood in front of the judge and tried to explain her strange habits.

"Your honor" she began, "the Lord told me to do it. Before I left home I told the Lord to show me what to do. I opened my bible and I pointed to a verse that said, 'my God shall supply all your needs.' When I saw them pork chops laying there and nobody was looking I knew the Lord laid them out there for me." The judge listened as the woman continued. "About that ring. Just before I left home I opened my bible and pointed to a verse that said, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want." When I saw that ring I wanted it. It was so shiny. I took it because the bible told me "I shall not want." The judge praised the woman for her belief in God. Then asked her to come to the bench where she kept her bible open to the Ten Commandments. The judge said point right here. The woman touched the bible and the judge said, "God's got another message for you, you pointed to thou shalt not steal. You got 2 years in jail!"

Strange as it seems people try to find the will of God in many strange and peculiar ways. Some contact mediums, palm readers or call the Psycic connection. There are those who read tea leaves and fortune cookies while others won't move until they read their daily horoscope to see what the stars say about the day ahead. It seems that some people will go to any lengths to find the will of God except talk to God himself.

As believers we have learned that the best way to know the will of God is to stay in close union with God, pray regularly, listen for him to speak to us and strive to live a life that is pleasing to him.

As Christians, we want to know God's will. After knowing his will we want to do his will every day.

Exposition

This text focuses upon King Saul as he sought to learn God's will before going into a battle.

Saul had fallen on disfavor with God and found that because of his sinful nature that God would not speak to him or answer him in any way. The prophet was obviously disturbed. He had become accustomed to receiving advice prior to major military actions by calling upon the prophet Samuel. However, the prophet Samuel had died and Saul found himself without spiritual advice as he faced a mighty Philistine army.

Every possible way that he knew to contact God was gone. He had banned all spiritualists, mediums, and witches. Samuel was dead. When he saw the huge gathering of the Philistines in front of him the text says he was afraid because he did not know the will of God in this circumstance.

The text makes reference to Urim. It is a reference to the Urim and Thummim, by which the will of God was made known in doubtful cases. Urim and Thummim signify light and integrity. There are many conjectures what these were. The most probable opinion seems to be, that they were the twelve precious stones in the high priest's breastplate. Even when he consulted the Urim and Thummim he found no answer.

In frustration he found a witch to try to conjure up the dead spirit of Samuel for advice. God allowed the spirit of Samuel to speak to Saul and give him the message he did not want to hear and the message was that he would suffer defeat and both his sons would die the next day because of his sin.

Had King Saul sought the will of God before, he would have probably avoided this tragedy. However, he waited until he was in trouble to find the Lord and he paid the price.

How to know the will of God

There are four steps believers should take to learn the will of God.

WHAT I WANT TO DO MUST BE CONSISTENT WITH THE WORD OF GOD. Every believer should seek to learn whether a planned action is consistent with the written word of God. The bible sets a standard of general expectations for all of God's people. Whether it's business or school, government, economics, or career choices, the bible has a response. Regardless of the subject, the Word of God has a response. Believers are challenged to study God's word to discover the truths it contains about life. Once these truths are mastered then we are also challenged to live by them. This was the challenge of the young king Joash, who at age seven found the word of God for himself then began to order his life by what he knew to be true. If the Word of God does not endorse the principle of a planned action then it becomes obvious that the action is more than likely not consistent with the will of God.

PRAY TO KNOW THE WILL OF GOD: Sincere prayer is the next step for believers seeking to know God's will. Once we know that an action is consistent with God's written Word we still may not be sure that what we plan to do is consistent with his will. Prayer is the method by which a believer expresses the sincere desire of his heart. When believers pray it should be our desire to live wholly and completely by God's will. Thus, we should pray to God with an open mind and heart. We should not pray to God after we have made our decision. Our prayer should be modeled after Jesus' prayer in the Garden of Gethsemane. He prayed to God that God would spare him the pain and humiliation of Calvary. But he prayed with an open mind and heart that God's will would be done. After expressing his own thoughts to The Father he said, "Never the less, not my will but thy will be done." To pray in this manner is to completely turn ourselves over to him, willing to go wherever he sends us and do whatever he tells us to do.

WAIT FOR GOD'S RESPONSE: After you have prayed, the next step is to prayerfully wait for God's response. Believers are assured to receive an answer from God. The answer we receive may not be the exact answer that we seek but it will be the answer that God wants us to have. We should look for God in the obvious, but we should also look for God in the not so obvious. When Elijah fled from the face of the wicked king he hid himself in a cave. He listened for God to speak to him. There was an earthquake but God was not in that experience. There was also a strong wind but God was not in that experience either. It was not until God spoke in a still small voice that Elijah was able to experience the presence of God. In a similar sense we often look for God in the dramatic or in the catastrophic, when in reality God often speaks to us in the simple and mundane things of life. When God responds it is often in ways that we do not expect. His voice is often the voice of the one we would lease like to hear speak.

Sometimes his voice is that of a child, or even an enemy. Listening for God to speak requires us to be sensitive to the many ways that God speaks to us. We should be fully aware that even the birds singing may be the very object that God uses to answer our prayer.

LOOK FOR CONFIRMATIONS CONSISTENT WITH THE KNOWN WILL OF GOD. We should wait for confirmations when we think that our prayers have been answered. Sometimes we get excited when we sense an answer that appears to be the answer to a prayer especially when that answer is the answer we wanted to hear. However we should not be content with receiving one answer. We should look for confirmations. When Gideon was told by God that he would have to fight the Midianites Gideon wanted to be sure that he was hearing from God and was not simply hearing the voice of his blind ambition. He asked God to send him a sign that would confirm that the instructions he was receiving or actually from God. Gideon placed his doormat outside and asked God to give him a sign by causing the dew to soak the mat while at the same time keeping the ground around the mat dry. Although God gave him that sign Gideon asked for another sign. This time he asked for the mat to be dry and for the ground be soaked with dew. God gave Gideon the sign that he looked for and Gideon felt assured that God would be with him during the battle. He was right because he won his battle against thousands of men without the loss of a single man. We should look for confirmations before we assume that we have the answer to our prayer. Sometimes a confirmation comes in a sermon. Sometimes it is in a song. Sometimes it comes in the voice of a relative, co-worker or friend. Sometimes while you're staring at a television screen the confirmation speak so loudly to you that it appears that the whole world hears what is being said.

Do the Will of God

Finally, brothers and sisters, while it is important to know the will of God it is even more important to DO the will of God.

There are many people who spend a considerable amount of time seeking the will of God but once they learn God's will they refuse to do it. This was the case with the prophet Jonah. He knew the will of God but he wanted to go another way. Jonah jumped on a boat and tried to go as far away from Nineveh as he could. However, he soon found out that you can run from God but sooner or later he will catch up to you.

In a similar sense there are many people today, who know God's will, and they sense it in the soul of their being but they choose to different ways for a variety of reasons.

Doing the will of God is much more rewarding than simply knowing the will of God and refusing to abide by his will.

The will of God is powerful. It is difficult to resist and impossible to impede.

When God wills, nations rise and fall. Even mighty kings such as Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon and Ramases of Egypt who had the power of their chariots and horsemen were no match for the power of an Almighty God.

When God wills, even those who have spent their lives persecuting his cause are brought to their knees. Saul found himself walking down the Damascus Road marching against the will of God only to meet God face-to-face after being brought down to his knees.

When God wills, even a fiery furnace and a den full of Lions are unable to do harm to any person who is in God's protective care. The King was mystified when he saw the three Hebrew boys still standing in the fiery furnace. Another instance saw a king watch in amazement as Daniel arose unscratched from the den of Lions. They learned what we already know, that it is impossible to do harm to a child of God when it is his will that they flourish and prosper.

When God wills, even bad situations work out for the good. Israel stood with the Red Sea in front of them and Pharaoh's army behind them. They were obviously in a bad situation. But God took a bad situation and turned it into a blessed situation when he rolled back the waters of the Red Sea and caused them to cross on dry land. When it's God's will, even the worst situation that we face can be turned to our advantage.

When God wills, even serious illnesses take vacations at his command. Hezekiah had been served notice that he should get his house in order for his days were numbered. But Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and prayed to God and God answered his prayer and gave him 15 more years. Hezekiah learned that even serious illnesses are not too hard for the will of God.

When God wills, even empty cabinets can be filled again. That's what a widow woman learned when she was down to her last cup of meal and her last Cruz of oil. She found out that when it's the will of God that the barrel will never run dry.

When God wills, that which is lost can be found.

When God wills, those who are weak can find their strength again.

When God wills, those who are discouraged can find new inspiration.

When God wills, those who have fallen can get up and start all over again.

When God wills, those who are confused find clarity and meaning.

When God wills, those who are separate and apart can be brought together again.

When God wills, those who have been the victims of life's tragedies will find restoration and joy.

One of the hardest things to do is to pit yourself against the will of God. James Weldon Johnson said it right when he said "your arms are too short to box with God."

Where can you run that God cannot find you?

Where can you hide where God cannot see you?

I hear David in Psalm 139:7 saying, "Where shall I go from thy spirit? Where shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea even their shall thy hand lead me and thy right hand shall hold me."

Every believer should strive to stay in the will of God.

If it is not God's will we don't want it. If it is God's will the world can't stop us from getting it.

The other denominations frowned upon Baptist because we always say "if it's God's will." They say that is a defeatist attitude which presupposes the possibility of failure. We don't know what Bible they are reading but we watched Jesus and listened as he told us how to pray. We heard him say, "Thy kingdom, thy will be done."

Not only that, we watched him in the Garden of Gethsemane and heard him tell his father, "not my will but thy will be done."

It was God's will that he would carried an old rugged cross.

It was God's will that he would die out on Calvary.

It was God's will that he would be buried in a borrowed tomb.

But it was also God's will that early Sunday morning that he who was buried in weakness would rise in strength.

It was God's will that he who was crucified in shame would be raised in everlasting glory.

And it's God's will that he will come back again for all of those who commit themselves to do his will.

Passport to Heaven

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 8, 1987

Scripture: "For God loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth upon him should not perish but have everlasting life. "John 3:16

Introduction

Do you have a passport? The average person has no need for a passport unless he or she is planning to leave the country. Generally, a passport is the credential necessary to allow a person to leave one country and enter another. While it is true that many people rarely leave the country, especially the poor, there are many who have actually had the opportunity to see life outside of the United States of America in a non-military capacity.

To prepare for the journey we need to gather documentation that states who we are, where we are going, and when we plan to return. According to Webster a passport is anything that can get you from one place to another or from one state or condition to another.

With that in mind a passport can not only move us from one country to another but also from one state to another. In the secular world we are bombarded with the idea of passports.

Education is generally flaunted as the "Passport" to a good job. Education makes good jobs possible, but does not always guarantee a job. Without an education the best things in life are not possible.

An abundance of salable talents are also perceived as "Passports" to success. Those who have the gifts to sing, dance or play musical instruments are said to have been born with the passports to success in their fingers.

Economists say that sound financial investment is the "passport" to financial security. They say the wise use of capital is the best insurance against poverty, but they don't tell us how to get the first funds to invest.

If a person wanted to make himself a place in the kingdom of God, what is his passport? What is it that can guarantee him a place in the kingdom?

There are some who believe that the passport into the kingdom of God is simply to join a church and find a place of service on the church program.

Ushering, for example, is a fine place of service. Ushers provide warm salutations for those who come to worship. They are the standard bearers of hospitality and the finest example of the true meaning of the word servant.

But simply serving as an usher is not a "passport" to heaven. Unfortunately there are some who are uniformed but are not transformed, by the renewing of their minds.

Simply looking good and marching down the isles as a choir member is not a "passport" to heaven. Unfortunately there are some who are good at marching on the right foot but their feet don't always walk up the king's highway.

Teaching a Sunday School class or driving a church van are not guarantees for heaven. There are many who believe that such services earns them special awards and privileges in the kingdom of God.

Does the janitor earn his way to heaven by sweeping the floors? What about the church secretary, youth leader or announcement reader? None of these can earn a passport to heaven by simply performing a service.

Salvation is free. It can't be earned by any act of service on our part.

Serving on the program is not a passport into the kingdom of God.

As believers, we have learned that there is only one passport to heaven. This passport is the blood of Jesus.

How Can I Acquire My Passport?

How can one acquire a passport into the kingdom of God? If simply joining a church and serving in an auxiliary like the ushers or the choir is not sufficient, how can such a passport be obtained?

Can this passport be obtained by the accumulation of riches? Can it be bought? This is what perplexed Solomon as he launched out on a pursuit of happiness. He accumulated riches untold and assembled for his use all the pleasure providing vehicles of his time, but concluded they all were vanity.

I hear Jesus speaking of the rich fool when he said, "What does it profit a man to gain the whole world and he lose his own soul?"

The passport that we are talking about cannot be bought by large contributions to the church, that are not accompanied by even larger amounts of faith, repentance and dedication to the cause of the kingdom.

The passport that we are talking about is not for sale. Can this passport be obtained by quite living? If I adopt a lifestyle that is what the diplomats describe as a "peaceful coexistence" …that is, I don't bother anybody and they don't bother me, won't that get me a passport into the kingdom of heaven?"

This was the dilemma of the rich young ruler. He lived a good life. He didn't bother anybody and he didn't break any laws. He felt his good living was enough to earn him a passport. But Jesus said there was one thing more he'd have to do. He would have to sell all he had, take up and his cross and follow "me."

There are many people today who feel that simply living a quite life of coexistence is enough to earn a passport. But just living a low profile life of peace and tranquility will not get us a passport into the kingdom of God.

Can this passport be acquired by tagging along with another traveler. This was the dilemma faced by Elisha who followed closely by the prophet Elijah for many years. But when the chariot came down from heaven Elisha found that it only had room for one. Elisha learned that although he could hold Elijah's mantle he had to make his own mark and reserve his own place in the kingdom of God.

You can do some things in a crowd but you have to talk to God by yourself.

You can hire people to do some things for you but you have to talk to God for yourself.

Someone else can open doors for you but you have to walk through the door of life, yourself.

You can hear the testimonies of others every day but you have to try God for yourself.

Try him…and mountains shall become mole hills.

Try him and valleys shall be exalted.

About That Passport

A passport bears the picture of the traveler and tells his identity.

If you are a heavenly traveler your passport identifies you as a child of the king.

Every child of God can say without doubt, " I know I am a child of God, although I move so slow"

"I've been washed in the blood of the crucified lamb." I've been plunged beneath a fountain that flows from Immanuel's veins.

"If anybody ask you who I am, tell them, I I'm a child of God."

Not only does your passport tell who you are but it tells where you come from.

—We've come through the rocky hills and valleys of destitution.

—We've come through the meandering peaks of hard times and survived the sweltering deserts of hopelessness.

—We've come climbing Jacob's ladder singing our new song, "I'm climbing up the rough side of the mountain, holding on to God's unchanging hand."

A passport is no good unless it also has a seal. The seal notes that it is official and is not a fake and is backed up by the powers of the government.

Every heavenly traveler should know that his passport is:

—written with the pen of life!

—official and includes his place of origin, which is listed as hard times and trouble —inclusive of his destination which is listed as good times and happy days —recorded with his nationality listed as a child of the most high king!

—documented to show his means of transportation listed as a chariot that swings low.

—is signed by the Holy Spirit.

—written in the blood of the lamb!...

"I'm on my way to the Caanan land!

Every child of God should say, "I've got my passport in my hand"

I'm on my way to land on a far-a-way strand

I'm on my way to a land where the wicked will cease from troubling!

I'm on my way to a land where the weary will be at rest!

I’m on my way to a land where I’ll never grow old!
I got my passport and I’m telling everybody!
Follow Jesus, whose name authorizes my transfer!
Follow Jesus, whose blood paid my fare!
Follow Jesus who died out on Calvary…
But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!
I don’t know about you but…
I’m on my way!

Get A Life!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 15, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "..I am come that they may have life and that they might have it more abundantly." John 10:10

Introduction

Is it possible for a family to live in the same house but have no life together? Is it possible to share the same roof, eat at the same table with the same people everyday and still have no life together? Is it possible for husband and wife to be madly in love with each other and still have no life together? Is it possible for parents and children to love each of their siblings as individuals but have no life with them? These are troubling questions that are forcing many families to evaluate the true meaning of family, relationships and love within families. The first sign of a troubled relationship is the reality that "while I love my husband I do not enjoy our life together. While I love my wife dearly, I prefer the company of others rather than our life together." That's when trouble pokes up its ugly head. When we realize that while we love each other the quality of that love is strengthened as we build a life together. Lives built together grow abundantly. They prosper in happiness, joy and everything essential to fulfillment.

Susan Piver wrote a book entitled "The Hard Questions" that was featured on Oprah in 2000. In it she said she dated her future husband for some time before she realized that while she loved him, neither of them, as husband and wife, would enjoy the life that their marriage would require. So, in her book, she posed 100 hard questions that helped them discover the level of enjoyment they would enjoy in their life together. The questions were basic but probing? "What is our relationship with each other's family? Do we like it? How ambitious are we? How will achieving our personal ambitions stack up against our relationship? Which one will be put on hold for the other?

One of the most probing questions in her book was one simple but powerful question: "How will we handle our money? Will we manage it jointly or will we keep it separately, loaning to each other, borrowing from each other and keeping tabs? The answer to that question often indicates the quality of the life ahead.

Even more probing are her questions about God and religion. Will we actively belong to a church or will we visit from place to place? Will we function as partners in a church ministry or will one of us or neither of us do this alone? Will we worship together as a family or will this be something we must do by ourselves or not at all?

While her book delves into the crevices of human relationships, trying to raise hard questions that explain dysfunctional relationships, we cannot ignore the fact that there is a striking similarity between our interpersonal relationships and our relationship with God. In a strange sort of way, there are many who find that while they love God for what he does for them, they are not excited about living their entire lives together with God. They come into the sheepfold to get what the shepherd has to offer but do not relish the idea of living their entire lives together with him.

Generally, most people spend a great portion of their lives trying to make a life for themselves. That life is generally defined by career pursuits and passions that indicate the direction our lives take. For some, the pursuit of that life is all consuming and everything else, even is secondary.

As Christians we have come to learn that the best living is done with Christ, not without him. He shows even the poorest man how to live more abundantly.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains the nature of the believer's relationship to God.

Jesus often told his disciples parables to explain complex religious concepts. One concept is God's promise of the abundant life.

The picture that Christ gives is that of sheep, a sheepfold, a shepherd and a pasture. The sheep are the millions of people who are struggling to live better, more complete lives that are completely and totally acceptable to God. The shepherd is Christ himself who stands at the door of the sheepfold greeting and acknowledging every sheep by name. The sheepfold is the church through which the sheep will find guidance, understanding safety and inspiration.

Jesus said there are many who have presented themselves to the sheep and offered them green pastures but have robbed them of everything essential to live fulfilling happy lives. Many have fallen prey to the words of deceivers who have offered one false hope after another. However, Jesus notes that believers know him personally and he knows them. They know his voice and will not be persuaded by the voice of another. Verse three says, "..the sheep hear his voice and he calleth his own sheep by name and leadeth them out." The sheep develop a daily association with him by following him. Verse four says, "..and the sheep follow him because they know his voice."

In verse nine Jesus makes it very clear that those who come to him will find salvation. "If any man enter in, he shall be saved" means exactly that. What comes with being saved is "eternal life." We come to Jesus to get life! Not just life, but eternal life. Believers come into the sheepfold to get life and the life they develop in the sheepfold is the same life they take with them outside of the sheepfold and that life and relationship helps them find "pasture." Look at verse nine again, "and shall go in and out and find pasture."

Jesus makes it clear that those looking for eternal life can only find it in him.

Those who have found eternal life, have also developed a life while in the sheepfold that helps them to always find "pasture." If you are a sheep, a green pasture is synonymous to happiness. It is what you need in abundance! Thus, Jesus says "I am come that they may have life and that they may have it more abundantly."

We come in to get life. While in we learn a life that is centered around him and with him. This experience helps us to live abundantly and happily in the Lord!

Jesus challenges believers to get a life. Then promises to give them that life and even more!

Get a Life

Those who come in to be with Christ are given eternal life, but they are also given four additional attributes that they learn as they work together with him. We could call the "abundant" life package a special bonus that we gain from being "together" with Christ in the sheepfold.

GET A FAITH FILLED LIFE: Those who live the believers life together with Christ learn to lead a faith filled life. By definition, faith is the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen(Hebrews 11:1). Faith is not automatic. No one joins a church and then instantly becomes a man or woman of faith. No one sits in a chair or signs or membership card then instantly they have the faith of Noah or Elijah or Mary. Faith is a quality that is learned by listening, studying and interacting with God and the people of God over time. There is a correlation between the time we spend listening to the Gospel, studying the bible and sharing with other believers and the intensity of our faith. The stronger our life is together with Christ, the stronger our faith. That's what Roman 10:17 means when it says, "Now faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." We develop faith by constantly hearing the word preached; by constant study of the word and by constant interaction with the people of God as God moves an interacts in their lives. When we hear the word of God preached, study the word, understand how he acts and see how he responds to the faith of other believers, we are strengthened. Living the life of faith is the life of every believer. Those who questioned our commitment to the faith filled life should "get a life" themselves!

GET A JOY FILLED LIFE: A joy filled life is a life that goes beyond mere happiness, it is joyful. Happiness requires a multitude of props. It depends on cars, money, clothing and many other superficial and intangibles for its sustenance. Joy, on the other hand, is like a bubbling fountain that constantly sends up bursting bubbles of enthusiasm, inspiration and hope, regardless to our situation. Take away the props and happiness disappears. But even without the props joy can stand. Those who have learned to live the believers life can have joy even when they have no props. It's possible to live in a one room shack with very little food or creature comforts and still cuddle all of your children in your arms at night, look up to God and give thanks. Joy is an attitude born in gratitude. Get a Joy filled life and an attitude of thankfulness that even considers a negative circumstance as a reason to be joyful.

In fact, 1 James 1:2 says we should, “count it all joy” whenever we are confronted with diverse difficulties. Even though times are tough we should be joyful. The joy filled life is one that remembers the words of 1 Thessalonians 5:18, “In every thing give thanks for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you.” An attitude such as this doesn’t just come out of the air. It is developed through close association to, and living with, God and the people of God. It is learned in the sheepfold for use in and out of the sheepfold.

GET A BLESSED LIFE: Those in the sheepfold have made following Christ their entire life because that closeness with God has given them a blessed life. True believers don’t have enough calculators to count how God has blessed us. If he hasn’t blessed us with T-bones he’s blessed us with neck bones. If he hasn’t blessed us with cable vision he’s blessed us with public TV. We have been blessed in every way imaginable. We learned how to acquire the blessed life since we have been in the sheepfold. Micah 6:6-8 makes it clear that we can get a blessed life if we do right, love mercy and walk humbly before our God. This spirit of humility is the hallmark of the blessed life. It is the spirit that everything we are and our whole substance is an intentional blessing from God for our good!

Get a Grace Filled Life

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that every believer enjoys the benefit of a “grace filled life.

If you want to get a life, get a grace filled life!

Grace is the favor and blessings of God showered down on undeserving subjects.

A Grace filled life is God blessing us when we haven’t done anything to deserve a blessing.

A Grace filled life is God showing mercy toward us, when we don’t deserve any mercy at all.

A Grace filled life is a walking testimony to the goodness of the Lord.

There is someone watching each saint today. They want to know how can they get a life like the one you live.

They notice that you seem to live a faith filled life. You believe that no matter how tough things get that the Lord will make a way!

They notice that you seem to have a joy filled life. No matter what comes your way you count it all joy.

They notice that you seem to have a blessed life; that God just keeps blessing you every day.

They notice that you seem to have a grace filled life; that something is changed about you; that you are no longer what you used to be.

They ask: “How can I get that life?” “Do I just join your church?”

It’s not about joining a church and having your name on a roll, but it’s more about loving God and loving the service of God through the ministries of his church.

In churches across America there are millions of believers who love God but they don't like serving God. They have another life to live.

It's like the husband who loves his wife dearly but he never wants to do anything with her. He lives his life and she lives her life.

It's like the wife who loves her husband to the bottom of her heart, but she doesn't enjoy doing things with him. He lives his life and she lives hers. They have no life together except on special occasions.

There are many that love the Lord but they are uncomfortable with the life he wants them to live. They tell the Lord, "I got another life to live!"

But I heard Jesus say, "I came that they might have life and have it more abundantly!"

When you live the abundant life God gives you a heavenly spirit.

When you live the abundant life God takes your -Weaknesses and turns them into strengths.

-Failures and turns them into successes!

-Defeats and turns them into victories!

-Doubts and turns them into confidence!

When you live the abundant life storms may rise and winds may blow, but God will make a way!

There was a time when most of us had another life! It was a life that was filled with gambling casinos, and midnight crap shoots.

There was a time when we had another life. It was life of secret encounters in cheap hotels, wrinkling sheets in a series of one night stands!

There was a time when we had another life! Our best friends were not Matthew, Mark and Luke but they had names like Jack Daniels, Seagrams and Johnny Walker Red.

There was a time when we had another life. We lived for the weekend, danced till will dropped and the words, "Early Sunday morning" meant that the party was over!

But the word of God says, "And such were some of you" but we have been changed, washed in the blood of the lamb!

I've got a new life!

I've got a new walk!

I've got a new talk!

I've got a new story to tell!

I've got to tell everybody about Jesus!

I've got to tell them how he died on Calvary!

I've got to tell them how he stayed in the grave for three long days!

..but Early Sunday morning!

I've got to tell somebody!

That Early Sunday morning he arose in my life!

The Church's Chickens

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La. 71201

September 22, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!" Matthew 23:37

Introduction

Have you ever been called chicken? One of the most frustrating aspects of being a youth is developing enough self esteem to endure the variety of nicknames which are given to us by our peers. Nicknames are usually associated with the way we are perceived at a specific moment in time. Among the various names that we can be called is "chicken." It means that we lack courage or boldness. "You are not chicken are you" is generally a question that dares us to take one action or another. Many youth, desiring to meet the expectations of their peers often perform dangerous, or ridiculously stupid acts all in the name of bravado. For the most part, adults are not swayed by the "chicken" question. Youth find it a little more difficult to accept the prospect of being labeled "chicken" by their peers.

Why chicken? Why not something else? The array of nicknames seems to have been exhausted. The person who displays flamboyant dress styles that include loud colors plus mix and matches may be called a peacock. The person who is a tell-tale may be called a rat. A person who eyes a target and prounces immediately may be called a hawk. A good friend may be called a "dawg." A sneaky distrustful person may be called a weasel. A person who creates a stink whereever they go could be called a skunk or a polecat, but usually not to their face.

What are the characteristics of a chicken that would earn such a label? Most city youth know very little about the habits of farm animals, but their grandparents may be able to give them some insight. The only thing many youth know about chicken is what they learn at Church's Chicken and KFC. They know about rotisserie chicken, fried chicken, marinated chicken and baked chicken. They know about chicken tenders, drumsticks, breasts and thighs. They know the difference between crispy and original and they know a two piece combo. They know about baked hens surrounded by dressing. They know about chicken and dumplings, chicken soup, chicken salad, and breast of chicken sandwiches. They know about roasted chicken, bar-be-qued chicken, chicken ala king and chicken chop suey. They know about buffalo wings, which is really chicken too! They know singing group called the Dixie Chicks. They know that if they don't groom their hair correctly all of their friends could call them a chic-chic-chicken head!

That's about all they know about chickens.

What is there about chickens that would earn us that label? It can't be that they taste good!

Even Jesus called believers "chickens" although his meaning wasn't the same as ours. Obviously he knew something about chickens that many non-agrian city dwellers would probably miss. During the time he lived people were surrounded by chickens in their pens and roaming freely in yards. People watched them and knew their actions. They understood clearly what Jesus had in mind when he called the people chickens and compared himself to a mother hen. They knew and they understood the nature of chickens which would make even Jesus call us chickens from time to time!

As believers, we are glad to know that Jesus cares for us like a mother hen does its chicks. It's good to know that there is safety underneath his wing. We are safe and secure as long as we stay close to him and are nestled in his protective care.

Exposition

This text focuses upon Christ as he considers the wayward ways of the people of Jerusalem and his love for them.

As the final days of his life approached Christ lamented over the people of Jerusalem. This text finds him outside of the city, looking upon it and brooding over its tendency to act counter to what God wants. Just a few days earlier he had cried over Jerusalem and now he looks at them again.

His lament is prefaced with "Oh Jerusalem"; not the buildings, but the people. This was the city whose heart was so heart that its inhabitants stoned the very prophets of God.

Jesus said he would like the people of Jerusalem to be like humble chicks that respond to the gentle clucking of the mother hen and run to her for shelter and succor. This desire to gather in the lost to himself has always been an attribute of Christ's person. To gather the poor, disenfranchised and loney to himself, much like a mother hen does her chicks.

The idea that there is shelter in God is what Christ refers to. It is the essence of Psalm 91:4 which says, "..he shall cover thee with his feathers." In addition Malachi 4:2 adds that there is even more under God's wings, because he adds that. Shelter, comfort and healing his what he wanted to give the people of Jerusalem just as he desires to do the same for believers today. Yet, like Jerusalem, the people of today exhibited many of the other characteristics of chickens rather than the obedient following of chicks.

Chicks, humble in nature would come to the hen. On the other hand full grown chickens and rooster might operate with the mind of their own and refuse to come to the hen. Recognizing the depth of their opinions and persuasions Christ referred to them as "chickens" and not chicks.

Getting chickens to act right, would be a hard, if not impossible job. So, he wept over Jerusalem.

Chicken Coop Lessons

From Christ's characterizing of the people of Jerusalem as chickens, there is even more to learn when we consider the characteristics of chickens.

CHICKENS DIFFER BUT HAVE SAME NATURE: There are many kinds of chickens. There are Rhode Island Reds, Black Minorcas, White Plymouth Rocks, Barred Plymouth Rocks, Silver-gray Dorkings, White Wyandottes, White Leghorns, Bannies, and many more. In a similar sense there are many types of people in the world who all share one characteristic: We are all sinners. Romans 3:23 reminds us that "we have all sinned." It doesn't matter what kind of chickens are in the coop, when it ends up on the plate, it's just "chicken." To God sin is sin and although each of is guilty of a different kind of sin, we are sinners in need of forgiveness.

CHICKENS FOLLOW THE CROWD: If a chicken sees another chicken running across the chicken yard he'll start to follow him. Somehow a chicken thinks another chicken that is doing something different must know something he doesn't know so he runs and follows. There are many chicken Christians that run after every religion they can find, especially if it sounds new or novel and is drawing a big crowd. In Matthew 15:14 Jesus warns us clearly that "If the blind lead the blind., they both fall in the ditch." There is a tremendous danger in following the crowd. African-American youth have found themselves in tremendous trouble because they chose to follow the crowd to crime and deviant behavior. Ironically, believers are called chickens for not following the crowd, but it is really those who can't say no to the crowd are acting more like chickens.

CHICKENS LOOK FOR THINGS IN THE DIRT: Chickens are constantly scratching around in the dirt. They are looking for a tasty morsel to stick their beeks into. When one finds a tasty morsel all of the other chickens come to share in the tidbit. There are some people who are like chickens in this respect. They love finding the dirt and others gather around when they find it to share in tasty morsel. Once they get hold of a juicy piece of Gossip they revel in it and even fight over who told it first. They cackle and make a lot of noise a bunch of old hens.

CHICKENS FIGHT OVER THINGS: If chicens in the coop spot a tasty worm, they will fight over the worm. They peck each other on the head. They peck each other in the eyes, sometimes until they draw bird as they fight over a worm or insect. Chickens fight over food. They also fight over anything that is shiny. A shiny buttton or piece of glass can spark a chicken fight. If it looks like one chicken wants it, they all want it and the peck and fight until one gains dominance. In a similar sense many people fight over food and "things." Shiny things like cars, jewlry or anything else that attracts attention, like chickens we fight over them. Youth fight over baseball cards, t-shirts, and shoes. Adults fight over things too. Just like chickens we fight. No wonder Jesus wept.

CHICKENS FRIGHTEN EASILY: It doesn't take much to frightened a chicken. That's where the common use of the term chicken comes from. You can wave your hand and frighten a chicken. They run from any perceived threat. Chickens can fly, but very few ever try to fly over the fence. They are afraid of getting their wings clipped if they caught on the other side. Fear of failure stops many people today from flying over the fence of their own poverty. Fear of rejection. Fear of fear itself has stopped so many. But the word of God reminds each of us that "The Lord is my light and my salvation, in whom should I fear!" Don't be chicken! Do what God wants you to do!

IT'S EASY TO PICK OFF A CHICKEN: In broad day light a dog can get into a chicken pen and kill 15 or 20 chickens and they are helpless to defend themselves. Even when a chicken is roosting they are easy pickings. A Coon can slip into a chicken coop and take one chicken one night and leave all of others sleep on their perches. He can pick off one at a time and they never know what happens. A weasel can get in the coop and kill off every chicken in the coop in the same night, picking them off one at a time before anyone of them wakes up. There are weasels and coons in the world today. They wait for opportunities to pick off believers one at a time. A coon will whisper a discouraging comment and pick off a believer and that member disappears. Killed by a lying coon. A weasel can spread rumors that a destroy whole blocks of members. We look around and members have disappeared. Killed by a two faced double tongue weasels. Weasels and coons and dangerous, especially if you are a chicken. 1 Peter 5:8 warns us to beware of the enemy who comes like a roaring lion waiting for opportunity to devour. If you are chicken, that verse in 1 Peter means, beware of weasels, coons and bad dogs that bite.

Chickens are supposed to be fruitful

Finally, brothers and sisters, chickens who are not productive usually end up in the frying pan.

Chickens are not kept for good looks. They are expected to produce eggs.

A good Longhorn chicken will lay a egg a day for up to 260 days a year.

Chickens that don't lay eggs have a special name, they call them fryers!

Chickens that don't lay eggs get the privilege of becoming dumplings!

They are the ones who become two piece combos and who are served in crispy and original nuggets.

esus said "Oh Jerusalem, how I would have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings."

I don't know about you but I'm glad to know that there is safety under the wings of God. Even though a hen is a chicken, she forget she's a chicken when something starts to threathen her chicks.

The mother hen gets defensive when you threathen her chicks!

The mother hen is dangerous when the safety of her little ones is in peril!

The mother hen is protective when the little one come to her for cover!

That's the way God is.

He offers shelter in a time of storm!

He is a rock in a weary land!

He is a bridge over troubling waters!

He is a strong deliverer in times of peril.

No wonder David said, “The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?

Under the wings of God, storms may rise and winds may blow, but I’m safe in the arms of Jesus

Under the wings of God, the thunder my roll and I may feel waves breaking against my soul, but all is well because he promised never to leave me, never to leave me alone!

Under the wings of God, we don’t worry about the weasels!

Under the wings of God, we don’t worry about the barking of the dogs!

Under the wings of God, we don’t worry about the coons!

That’s why the song writer said, “I’m leaning on the everlasting arms. Safe and secure from all alarms. Leaning on the everlasting arms!”

I’m safe in the arms of Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who was buried in a borrowed tomb!

Jesus, who stayed in a grave three days and nights!

..but Early Sunday morning, he arose in my soul!

I’m safe in the arms of Jesus!

He Can Do it- Again!

SCRIPTURE: "Our fathers understood not thy wonders in Egypt; they remembered not the multitude of thy mercies; but provoked him at the sea, even at the Red sea. Nevertheless he saved them for his name's sake, that he might make his mighty power to be known." Psalm 106:7-8

Introduction

Have you ever accomplished a task once but found it hard to do it again? There are occasions when just the right combination of skill and grace coincide to produce the perfect outcome. These are times when we baked the perfect pound cake, or cooked the perfect pot of greens. It's the day that the dressing was perfect or the flowers planted in the spring sprouted perfectly. There are years when the school football team seems unbeatable, playing each successive game without a flaw straight to the championships. How did you fare when you tried to do the same thing again? If you are like most people, you found that perfection, while possible, is hard to duplicate. Even Tiger Woods misses a putt or two. The best singer can hit a flat note on occasion and the best figure skaters slip on the ice while performing the simplest routines. Many can manage the effort necessary to accomplish a feat the first time but they have trouble doing it again.

When something miraculous happens in front of us, we are prompted to ask whether or not it was the real thing or whether it was a fluke. When Muhammad Ali knocked out Sonny Liston to become the heavyweight champion of the world, everyone said, "It was great, but can he do it again?" When Venus and Serena Williams won Wimbledon, the world said it was great, "but can they do it again?" The World's Series champs last year won accolades around the world, but then the sportscaster ask the question, "Can they do it again?"

It's one thing to get to the top, but it's even harder to stay there! Staying there requires the ability to maintain the power and strength exerted to get there over and over again.

What about God? If he blessed us once, can he do it again? If he opened a door for us that seemed impossibly secured, can he do it again. If he healed us of a sickness in the past can he do it again? If he helped us overcome an obstacle once in our lives, is he able to do it again?

Many think of God as a genie in a bottle. When we rub the bottle the genie grants us three wishes and once the wishes are used, there is nothing else that we can do.

Some lose hope in God who helped them in the past because they feel the circumstances have changed today. There was a major sickness then, there is a terminal sickness now. We were laid off from work then, but we are completely out of work today. Because the circumstances have changed a bit we believe that God has somehow used up his power to bless us.

In Malachi 3:6, God reminded the sons of Jacob that "I am the Lord and I change not!" What God did then he can do again! Not only can he do it again, but he can do it in a grander more miraculous way than he did in the beginning.

As believers we are confident that God's power does not dwindle like a drained battery. We believe his power is a never ending flow that ebbs from the battlements of heaven to the edges of every known universe. Whatever God has done before, he can do again.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he muses on the weakness of believers and the power of God.

The 106th Psalm begins and ends with "Praise ye the Lord" or the Hebrew "Hallelujah." It is a praise that sandwiches a litany of reasons why God should be praised despite the doubts and insecurities of the people. So often the people doubted the power of God in various circumstances and as a result when new circumstances were encountered they forgot how God helped them in the past.

In verse six David calls it a sin to forget the power of God. "We have sinned with our fathers: we have done amiss, and dealt wickedly" does not refer to an active break in the covenant but rather to "doubt." Doubting God's ability or willingness to intervene in the affairs of believers is what David calls "dealing wickedly" with God.

Immediately he carried believers to the instances of the people's struggle in Egypt and to their constant murmurings and complaints during that time. Not that these were the only instances, for there were obviously many others as well. However, the Egyptian deliverance is one facet of Jewish History that was known by every Israelite and was a ready reference. In that instance God delivered the people despite their doubts, complaints and forgetfulness. David describes this doubt as a "sin."

Our fathers," he saith, "regarded not Thy wonders in Egypt" (ver. 7). It was a way of saying that our fathers saw the works of God in front of their eyes and fail to receive them with the power and authority necessary. They did not observe the repetitive nature of God's actions on their behalf. They failed to connect the succession of blessings in a way that strengthened their belief that God would ultimately deliver them despite their circumstance.

"They remembered not the multitude of thy mercies" (v.7) They saw God act in a "multitude" of ways but it was not sufficient to warrant an unblemished belief that God would act again on their behalf when necessary. Look at what should have been obvious: while Egypt sweltered in drought they had watered lands in Goshen. When pestilence and disease killed Egyptians, they were protected in Goshen. When they faced the Red Sea God caused them to cross on dry land. When they wandered in the wilderness, God fed them with manna and quail." These a "multitude" of minor miracles should have been sufficient to convince them of God's power but it was not. Faced with new threats, believers "sinned" liked their fathers and forgot that what God did once, he can do again!

St. Augustine says David reproved both their Understanding and their memory. "Understanding there was need of, that they might meditate unto what eternal blessings God was calling them through these temporal ones; and of memory, that at least they might not forget the temporal wonders which had been wrought, and might faithfully believe, that by the same power which they had already experienced, God would free them from the persecutions of their enemies; whereas they forgot the aid which He had given them in Egypt, by means of such wonders, to crush their enemies."

They provoked God in their forgetfulness and lack of understanding. They challenged him and became angry and frustrated because they did not understand his way of doing things. They could not make the connection and were often fearful.

Despite their unbelief God acted in favor of Israel. Had he responded to them by the measure of their faith he would not have acted again. Thus, verse 8 says, " "Nevertheless he saved them for his name's sake." He saved them not because the people remembered and remained loyal to him, but for his name's sake. That is because of his loyal, loving nature.

For such goodness the 106th Psalm both begins and ends with "Praise ye the Lord."

What God did

The 106th Psalm could easily have been written today. Like Israel, we often forget what God has done in the past, or if we remember do not connect what he has done in the past with his ability to repeat that action in our present circumstances. But there are countless references in the biblical record that show God repeating what he has done once-again!

PROVIDING FINANCIAL NEEDS: There are many who face financial needs today who have lost faith. They can't remember a time when God helped them once and have lost sight of his ability to help them again. 1 Kings 17:13-16 shows us how God helped the poor widow of Zarapheth. She was the woman that used all of her resources to the point of only having two sticks, a cruz of oil and a cup of meal. Elijah the prophet told her to act on the command of God, and everyday her barrel had enough meal for food and her oil never ran out. This is an instance where God responded to a household need of a family once. But has he ever repeated that? 2 Kings 4:1-7 shows another woman whose sons were about to be taken in lieu of a debt she could not pay. The Prophet Elisha came to her with a word from the Lord. It seemed silly at the time, but he told her get as many empty pots as she could and place them in her house. Every pot she could get was filled with oil. She was told to sell the oil, pay her debt and praise God. God did it once and he did it again! There is no financial need in our families that God cannot meet! From putting food on the table to giant size problems like mortgages and massive debt. God has done it once he can do it again!

MAKING A WAY OUT OF NO WAY: Sometimes it appears that there is no way for us to escape a dilemma. When we look to the left and to the right there seems to be no way over, under or around a situation. Then we should think like David, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth." We have seen God part impossible waters before. In Exodus 14:21 God caused Moses to stretch out his hand and he parted the water for Israel to cross on dry land. It was a remarkable feat. But did he ever repeat that miracle? Joshua 3:15-16 records how Joshua and the children of Israel were about to enter into the Promised Land but a swollen river Jordan blocked their way. Yet God ordered them to proceed forward. As the feet of the priests touched the water, they miraculously rolled back and the entire host of Israel crossed on dry land. God did it again. 2 Kings 2:8 shows God repeated this miracle not for a who nation but for just two people. Not hundreds of thousands, but a powerful miracle was repeated for just two people! When Elijah and Elisha came to face the Jordan the waters rolled back for them when they were struck with his mantle! God did it for two people. Read down to verse 14 and see where God repeated the same miracle again for just one person! After Elijah had gone to heaven in the fiery chariot, Elisha faced that same river again, and God repeated what he did —again! God will make a way out of no way. He will open doors again and again! No matter how tough things appear God can do it-again!

GOD HEALS AGAIN AND AGAIN: There are times when we consider illnesses and sicknesses, we forget about God's healing power shown in the past. What he did once he has repeated time and time again. Matthew 4:24 says "And his fame went throughout all Syria: and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatic, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them" Over and over again. Blind men, lame men and women, leprosy, even deathly sicknesses were all healed repeatedly. People tore the roofs off houses and pushed their way through crowds just to touch the hem of his garment, because they knew he could do it again! Today as we face a multitude of health related problems we must remember that there is no sickness that is outside of the power of God. God has defied the known science of the day and continues to do it today. Are you stricken with an illness, God has healed you and members of your family before, he can do it again! Are you worried over a dark prognosis? God has reversed dark situations before and he can do it again!

He will do it again

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should remember that God has not run out of blessings, there are still more to come.

The genie in the bottle can only grant us three wishes according to legend, but God is not a genie. He is the creator of the universe! He is not a legend. His blessings don't stop with three but continue to four and many more!

When David chastised Israel because the people often forgot what God could do, he stood as a living testimony.

David is known for facing down Goliath. But long before there was Goliath, there were bears and lions that threatened his father's sheep. He had seen God act before and knew he would act again.

When the Hebrew Boys faced the threat of the fiery furnace they stood in boldness because they had seen God deliver his people before, and they knew he was able.

Sometimes in our weakness with forget that God is able!

He's able to deliver us from the pit and miry clay!

He's able to transform confusion and discord into unity and love!

He's able to make somebodies out of nobodies

He's able to make kings out of beggars!

He's able to make workers out of lazy men!

He's able to make winners out of losers!

He's done it before and he will do it again!

Long before we came to our presence circumstance God has been blessing us!

Like Hezekiah, some of us had come to the end of our lives but he gave us a few more years! I'm glad to know what he did once, he can do again!

Like David, some of us have been surrounded by enemies but he delivered us from destruction. I'm glad to know that what he did once, he can do again!

Like Esther, some of us have been raised from poor backgrounds, just a little higher than before. I'm glad to know that what he did once, he can do again!

I'm glad to know that if I"m sick, he can heal me again!

I'm glad to know that if I'm down, he can pick me up again!

I'm glad to know that if I've failed, he can make me succeed again!

I'm glad to know that if I've lost, he can give me the victory again!

That's why I've got to tell somebody! That I serve a God who has:

—Taken the bad and made them good and he can do it again!

—Taken the hateful and made them loving and he can do it again!

—Taken the proud and made them humble and he can do it again!

—Taken broken families and put them back together again, and he can do it again!

I've God to tell somebody about Jesus!

—The Lily of the Valley!

—The Bright and Morning Star!

Who died on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning arose from the grave!

He came once before..but he's coming back again!

Hold to God's Unchanging Hand

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: "Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: for the LORD upholdeth him with his hand." Psalm 37:24

Introduction

Have you ever held someone's hand or had someone to hold your hand? There are many times and many ways that we have reached out to touch someone's hand or to be touched ourselves. When we think about hand holding, our first reaction is romantic. We think about teenage romance and the magic of holding hands with our first love. There are other times too like the times we held the strong and confident hand of our father or mother in a time of crises or joined hands in a prayer. Even the times when we held the hand of a newborn child at birth was an important moment for us. There is a special magic about holding hands and being held by a strong hand.

We hold hands for different reasons, each of which carries it's own meaning.

Consider the picture of the elderly couple sitting on the porch swing holding hands in the moonlight. That's commitment.

Consider the nurse who takes the face of a small boy who sees his mother rolled into an emergency room, and hold his face up to hers to keep him from seeing her pain. That's sensitivity.

A construction worker as he builds a mighty building holding a hammer. That's strength.

A preacher stands beside a young woman with tears in her eyes as the court grants the final divorce decree; the minister pats her hand gently. The marriage has been painful, but change, too, is painful. That's sympathy.

A mom takes her son to the first day of school. As they approach the classroom he reaches up and takes her hand. That's security.

A husband stands at his wife's bedside. She's been faithful but now she's seriously ill. They have faced much together, but never this. He holds her hand and squeezes it gently. His hands says, "we've face much together. We'll face this too."

A camp instructor takes the hand of each child as they cross a stream— strength, help.

At a wedding A father takes the hand of his daughter and places it in the hand of a young man and thus "gives her away"— That's confidence.

A friend who has been drinking tries to drive but his friend takes the keys out of his hands, grabs him by the hand and puts him in a car for a safe ride home. That's correction and conviction.

Sometimes the reason that people hold hands is not what it seems. Consider the man and wife who won the praises of their friends because they appeared to be so romantic even after 40 years of marriage. A friend spoke to the husband to try to discover his secret. He said, "I notice you and your wife the other day in the mall. You went into a dress store and you were holding hands. You went into a shoe store and you were holding hands. You went into a jewelry store and you were still holding hands. It's amazing and so romantic. Can you tell me the secret to such romance?" The man said, "It's not so much romance. But after 40 years of marriage I've learned that whenever we go into the dress store, shoe store or jewelry store, if I don't hold her hand...she shops like crazy!"

There's a fancy world that is used by the theologians that describes a condition that is applicable to this circumstance. It is called, theo-antropomorphism. It means taking the traits of humans and giving them to God.

That's what we do when we think of holding hands but put God in the picture. Instead of mother or father, or a caring friend, the hand becomes the hand of God. It's the idea that we as believers can put our entire lives in God's care and it would be the same as holding his hand or God holding our hand. There are nearly 100 theo-anthropomorphic references in the bible that refer to God's hand or hands. We read about them. We even sing about putting ourselves in the hands of God.

A popular song puts it this way:

"Time is filled with swift transition-Naught of earth unmoved can stand-
Build your hopes on things eternal, Hold to God's unchanging hand.
Trust in Him who will not leave you, Whatsoever years may bring,
If by earthly friends forsaken, Still more closely to Him cling.
Hold to God's unchanging hand! Hold to God's unchanging hand!
Build your hopes on things eternal, Hold to God's unchanging hand."

As believers, we have come to trust ourselves in the hand of God. He will correct us, conform us, protect us and strengthen us in our time of need.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains the nature of the relationship of the believer with God.

The overall intent of this psalm is to underscore the security of believers in their fate in his hands. Believers are reminded not to be envious of the unrighteous or to be doubtful of their own security with God because of the apparent success of the unrighteous.

Believers are secure with God. The surety of their position is just as sure as the fragile nature of the unrighteous who will soon but cut down like that grass.

The righteous, claims David will never be abandoned. In the course of his entire life he claims never to have seen the righteous forsaken or their seed begging for bread.

The righteous are being held by and are holding on to the hand of God. Because of that fact the Righteous are in the hand of God they will never be utterly destroyed and kept down. Either they climb up with their faith as leverage or he picks them up by the power of his will.

The Blessing of Holding God's Hand

There are immeasurable blessings that come as we hold to God's hand.

GOD'S HAND IS UNCHANGING: In a difficult world where everything changes instantly, it is a blessing for believers to know that God's hand is unchanging. His way of dealing with us is constant and predictable. He won't be with us today, then forsake us tomorrow. The biblical record is filled with reassurances that God will be with us in a predictable manner. When Israel prepared to go into unknown territory Moses reminded them in Deuteronomy 31:6, "Be strong and of a good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the LORD thy God, he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee." In the New Testament this is repeated again for Christian believers. Hebrews 13:5, "..for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." This is a reassurance that whatever situation that may arise God will be there, holding our hand. Even when our parents and relatives seem to change in their relationships toward us, God is unchanging. Psalm 27:10 says, "When my father and my mother forsake me, then the LORD will take me up." In God's hands, we are safe. He will not walk out on us. He will not abandon us. He will be there for us regardless of the circumstance.

GOD IS COMPASSIONATE TOWARD US: God is sensitive to our needs. He understands the burden we bear and how we feel on the inside. There are times when those around us just do not know, but God always knows. The skeptics around us doubt our motives, but God knows. Because he knows, he helps us carry our load and our faith in him somehow makes our burden lighter. Matthew 11:28 finds Jesus saying, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." That's compassion. He continues that if we take his "yoke" upon us our burden will be light. It is a sign that he knows us and knows all about us. A song writer said, "When your body suffers pain and your health you can't regain, and you have to get along with meager fare. Jesus knows the pain you feel, he can save and he can heal. Take your burdens to the Lord and leave it there." While we are in his hands, we are under the protection of a compassionate God who knows and understands us. Out of his compassion and love for us he opens doors for us and makes ways out of no way that we may enjoy life more abundantly. God cares! That's what compassion means. We hold to his hand because he cares about us personally!

GOD'S HAND IS STRONG ENOUGH TO HOLD US UP: God is powerful.

Because he is powerful we hold to his hand to add stability to our own lives. This sense of security we derive from holding on to a powerful hand comes from the fact that God is a pillar of strength. How strong is God? Isaiah 40:15-30 attempts to describe the strength of God. Isaiah painted a picture of God being so big and powerful that all of the nations of the world form but a single drop in the bucket in comparison to his strength. He asks can we compare God to anything? The God who spreads out the skies like a blanket and holds worlds in his hands like so much dust! Can we compare anything to God who sits on his throne hovering over men who appear like grasshoppers before him? There is no strength greater than the strength of the Lord. James Weldon Johnson the poet said, "He batted his eyes and the lightning flashed. He clapped his hands and the thunder rolled. He waved his hands and the waters came down..his footsteps hollowed the valleys out and bulged the mountains up." What does all of this say? It says, "whatever problem I have, whether it is sickness or finance, love or social reform, God is big enough and strong enough to handle it! That's what Jeremiah meant when he said, "Ah, Lord GOD! Behold, You have made the heavens and the earth by Your great power and outstretched arm. There is nothing too hard for You" (Jer. 32:17). There is nothing too hard for God. He can handle any problem set before him. In answer to that same statement Isaiah 59:1 says, "Behold, the LORD'S hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear." So every believer should hold to God's hand. Even in difficult times and wait for him his deliverance. Don't give up. He can and will take care of it.

GOD'S HAND PROTECTS US: God uses his power to secure the faithful. Security is a concern of every person and every nation. There is a security at airports, train stations, schools and even security systems in our homes. Yet, while we rely on these systems for a measure of security the believer trusts in God for his ultimate protection. Another reason we hold to God's hand is because protects us. Isaiah 41:10-13 puts it this way, "Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness. Behold, all they that were incensed against thee shall be ashamed and confounded: they shall be as nothing; and they that strive with thee shall perish. Thou shalt seek them, and shalt not find them, even them that contended with thee: they that war against thee shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought. For I the LORD thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee." That's security. It's security in the hand of God. Those who attempt to harm the anointed children of God take on the power of God himself who has promised to provide security for believers. It's a simple truth. You "mess with a child of God and God will get you!" In times of difficulty, believers find refuge and strength in God. That's what Psalm 46:1 means when it says, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." In a time of trouble, hold to God's unchanging hand!

How to hold to his hand!

Finally, brothers and sisters while we have considered why we should want to hold

God's hand and what we get from holding God's hand, we must finally consider, how to hold God's hand.

There are many who fail to hold to God's unchanging hand because they don't know how to hold to his hand.

To hold God's hand successfully, we must not try to hold on to his hand, as much as we ask him to hold our hand.

When God holds our hand he guides us. Each of remembers a favorite teacher who had the task of teaching how to form cursive letters. There was always some point in our learning where the teacher had to literally take our hand in her hand and guide our fingers as we shaped the letters.

When we allow God to guide us, we allow him to take control of our lives and guide us along the way. That's what the song writer had in mind when he said, "Lead me. Guide me along the way. Lord if you lead me I will not stray."

When we are about to move through life without dotting and "i" he guides us!

When we are about to move on without crossing a "t" he guides us!

That's why the song writer concluded, "..Lord let me walk, each day with thee, Lead me oh Lord, Lead me!"

When God holds our hand, he holds us we might be tempted to let go.

When life gets difficult and tiresome, our hands tend to sweat and to tire and may start to slip in our faith, church attendance, giving and general spirituality.

When God holds our hands, even if we slip a little, he still holds on!

No wonder the old warriors sang, "Lord hold my hand while I run this race, I don't want to run this race alone!"

Hold my hand Lord, while I try to take care of my family, I don't want to run this race alone!

Hold my hand Lord, while I try to deal with the raging storms in my life, I don't want to run this race alone!

Hold my hand Lord, while I try to make sense of the madness that surrounds me, I don't want to run this race alone!

We should let God hold our hand because we can be sure that if he holds our hand that he won't let go. In many of the action movies action heroes such as Sylvester Stallone and others are often shown leaning over the edges of cliffs and mountains reaching out for a person in distress. Sometimes we hear them say, "Give me your hand. I won't let you go!" Then we watch as they use almost super human strength to pull up a lost victim and bring them to safety.

I don't know about you but sometimes I find myself slipping down the mountain of life and I have to cry out to Lord, "Take my hand! Hold me in your everlasting arms!"

Lord, take my hand, when I can't see my way!

Lord, take my hand, when I can't turn to the right or the left!

Lord, take my hand, when I'm confused and don't know what to do!

Lord, take my hand, when I'm weak and give me strength!

Lord, take my hand, when I have fallen and help me up again!

When you find yourself falling and you can't get up, call on the name of Jesus!

Jesus, a strong hand that will not let you down!

Jesus, a mother to the motherless!

Jesus, a shelter in a time of storm!

Call on Jesus, who reaches out to us with nail scarred hands!

Call on Jesus, who died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning arose from the grave!

When the storms of life are raging, reach out with the saints of old and say, "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know, if thou withdraw thyself from me, whether shalt I go!

Build your hopes on things eternal!

Hold to God's unchanging hand!

Is It All About the Benjamins?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 13, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." Ecclesiastes 12:13

Introduction

What is the most important thing in life? The answers to that question vary depending upon the individual asked. To some, the most important thing in life is to be successful. To others, the essence of really living is to be rich. There are still others who contend that the most important thing in life is to be happy and content. The responses to the question continue endlessly and vary depending upon the person who answers the question.

For many people the pursuit of happiness is equated with the possession of as many things as possible. The more "things" a person owns the happier and more successful a person is perceived to be. To acquire "things" we need money. Thus, for some, the pursuit of money as a means to acquire more, bigger and better possessions becomes a life pursuit.

The recent movie by "Ice Cube" entitled "All about the Benjamins" depicted individuals who were willing to kill or steal to acquire diamonds and a $60 million lottery ticket. Getting the Benjamin's, a street reference to one hundred dollar bills, became the goal of the movie's central character.

A few decades ago, the O'Jays produced a hit record that is still sung today entitled, "For the Love of Money." They said people will sell their bodies, murder and steal for the love of money. It's all about the Benjamins.

For an increasing number of people life is "All about the Benjamins." It is about making money and getting money. It's about "Banking." By any means necessary.

We have seen multinational corporations fall in recent months because many of their top CEO's were more concerned the "Benjamins" than they were with giving their investors an honest report.

Youth are being recruited to sell drugs as young as seven and eight years old, because it's all about the Benjamins.

Some parents are neglecting the essentials needed for a quality family life because, it's all about the Benjamins.

Is life really all about the "Benjamins?" Are there values more important than "banking" and "Benjamins?"

Another movie entitled "Indecent Proposal" caught the eye of the nation a few years ago. In it Robert Redford played a rich man who offered a man who was in financial trouble $1 million for permission to spend one night with his wife. The couple faced a real struggle about what was important to them in life.

Yet while the movie presented a fictional situation, there are many who actually make such choices.

How much is it worth to you to participate in the growth of your children? A few thousand a year? A promotion?

How much can you be offered to see less of your spouse each day? Another $100 a week?

If you were told that you could collect $50,000 cash today, with no questions asked but you'd have to promise never to step foot in a church again for the rest of your life. Would you take the deal?

Jesus posed the question that still rings across the corridors of time "What doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his soul?"

As Christians, we have concluded that life is more than just the endless pursuit of "Benjamins." We have resolved that real happiness comes when we put our trust in the Lord and give him first place. When we do that, with or without the Benjamins, we are filled with joy because we do the master's will.

Exposition

This text focuses on Solomon as he draws a conclusion about what really matters in life.

Solomon is credited with being the wisest man of all times. Early in his life he asked God for the gift of wisdom and received it. Yet there were some lessons that he had to learn through difficulty, despite his unique gift of wisdom.

Ecclesiastes is a book that details Solomon's attempts to discover what was really important in life. Since he was king, he had the ability to involve himself in a large number of activities that he thought would ultimately bring him happiness and fulfillment. The results of his life pursuit was recorded in this book as a guide for generations that would follow. He hoped those who came after him would benefit from his experiences and learn from his mistakes.

In Chapter 1 he said he first sought wisdom and knowledge, thinking that after he acquired great knowledge and wisdom that he would be fulfilled. At verse 16, he noted that he had accumulated more wisdom than all of those before him, but yet he concluded that all of his wisdom and knowledge only brought him frustration. In verse 18 he said the more he learned the sadder he became. The essence of life is not simply to accumulate wisdom and knowledge.

In Chapter 2 he explored the possibility of the night life, partying and drinking. In verse one he said he would pursue "mirth" and "Pleasure" two words that indicate that he explored the party scene. Being king he was able to stage the best pleasurable events available. He concluded that it was "vanity." That means that it did not accomplish what he sought. In other points in his life he made the construction of great works his top priority in life. Building became a top priority with him. He fortified many cities in Israel and built what he called "store" cities. In addition, he built a great temple complex in Jerusalem that not only consisted of the temple but various "porches" or pavilions. He even built a palace for one of his special wives. In verse 4 he said he built fine houses, vineyards and other constructions only to see that once completed all of the things he built did not bring him fulfillment.

His quest went beyond building, partying, knowledge acquisition and drinking, but it even included acquiring possessions and money. In verse 7 he detailed how he enjoyed what he thought was the good life with servants, land, cattle and money. He even lost himself for a while in music. He brought in the best singers and musicians who gave command performances for him. He was in a position to lose himself in the best music of his day. In verse 10 he said, "Whatsoever my eyes desired, I kept not from them." If it felt good or looked good Solomon said he did it or acquired it.

Yet even with the music, money, building, wisdom, knowledge and constant parties, he still found that there was something missing. In verse 11 he said, "all was vanity and vexation of the spirit and there was no profit under the sun."

He reached a point when he hated life (v.17) and decided to just "chill out" concluding that there was a time for everything. He became philosophical and decided that life was about living and enjoying everyday because after he dies it can't be done. (v. 22)

At the conclusion of his search for what life is all about he recorded his finding in 12:13, "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man."

The duty of Believers

What is the duty and privilege of a believer with respect to his life's priorities? Solomon gave us the key to understanding what really matters in life. The three points are illustrated in verse 13 and 14 of the text:

FEAR GOD: Solomon said he concluded that one of the truths that he learned about life is that he should fear God. The fear of God that he speaks of is not a spirit of cowardice, but a deep seeded sense of respect and awe for God. Every person should fear God's wrath if his laws are violate or his holiness is violated. This is the reason Israel would not go up upon the Holy Mountain of Sinai. It is also the reason Isaiah was reluctant to speak. He said in Isaiah 6:5. "Woe to me" I cried. "I am ruined For I am a man of unclean lips." When we read the Revelation and see how God's wrath will be poured out it give us reason to be cautious about violating his holiness. While at the same time living in literal respect for his holy will. What Solomon learned was that life was not about accumulating things but about respecting and carrying out the will of God. So the volunteer in the soup kitchen who initiates the will of God by feeding the pour gains as much or more satisfaction by carrying out the will of God as the man who spent his entire life chasing riches. The fear of God leads to worship and praise. Those who do not fear God occupy their time pursuing the world or resting up to continue pursing the world. Those who fear God are quick to report, "It's not about the Benjamins" It's about doing the will of God. We are rewarded for fearing God. Psalm 34:9 says, "Oh, fear the Lord you His saints for to those who fear Him there is no want." The same idea is echoed in Psalm 128:1 "Blessed are all who fear the Lord, who walk in His ways." If we fear God we will be blessed and what we do achieve in life has meaning and significance.

KEEP HIS COMMANDMENTS: How is it that keeping the commandments of God is more important than getting a large trunk of "Benjamins?" Solomon who had more "Benjamins" than he could count, said he concluded that keeping the commandments of God gave him better satisfaction in the end. God told Moses to tell the people, "You will walk after the Lord your God and fear Him and keep His commandments and obey His voice and serve Him and cling to Him." (Deut 13:4) Obeying God's commandments keeps us from self destructing. Obviously, we have failed at making up our own rules. We can't stop smoking, gaining weight, or doing many of the other things our doctors have warned us about. Without a higher command we would simply self destruct. The commands of God push us to be honest in our dealings with others, faithful in our engagements and exemplary in our deportment. A businessman who obeys God's commands places limits on what he will do to make a dollar. "It's not all about the Benjamins" there is a matter of integrity and obedience to God involved in every transaction. It's not about the quick dollar but about earning our living in accordance with God's command to be honest in our daily affairs. When it's only about the Benjamins we will cheat, steal or even kill to gain a few more dollars than the next man. When it's about obeying God, we may lose a few Benjamins, but sleep well at night knowing that God is pleased.

PREPARE FOR THE JUDGMENT: We should set priorities in life that can withstand three levels of judgment. The first is self evaluation. Can each of our actions stand the test of the man in the mirror. Galatians 6:3-4 says, "For if anyone thinks himself to be something, when he is nothing, he deceives himself. But let each one examine his own work, and then he will have rejoicing in himself alone, and not in another." Like Solomon, we often find ourselves doing things for the sake of the Benjamins that conflict with the voice of our conscience. We often fool others, but the man in the mirror keeps telling us that we are on a wrong course. Our conscience speaks with a loud voice, but the Benjamins have a tendency to speak louder. The pursuit of the Benjamins can push us to do many things that we normally consider against our better judgment if we are not careful. Beyond the court of personal evaluation there is the supreme court of God's word. As we set priorities, we should do so while considering that everything we do will one day be brought before the judgment seat of God. In 2 Corinthians 5:10, Paul says, ""For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that each one may receive the things done in the body, according to what he has done, whether good or bad." We can ignore the voice of our conscience and turn a deaf ear to the man in the mirror, but one day we will answer for all that we do before a higher court. Romans 2:16 says that will be the day when, ".. God will judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel."

Solomon came to the conclusion that life was not all about the Benjamins, but it had a lot to do with preparing himself to stand before the judgment bar of God with a clear conscience.

Benjamins Can't Replace The Lord

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that overriding reasons why life is not all about the Benjamins and that is because the most important things in life, even a truck load of Benjamins can't buy!

With a pocket full of Benjamins we can buy companionship. People will surround us as long as we have the Benjamins. But even a truck load of Benjamins can't buy true friendship.

With just a few Benjamins we can buy sex on any street corner. But even a wheel barrel full of Benjamins can't buy true love.

With a few thousand Benjamins given to a worthy cause, you can get a statue built in your memory in the center of the city. But even a boxcar full of Benjamins can't buy the honor and praise of our heavenly father, if our lives were not according to his will.

Today, there are many people who know more about money than they do about the Lord.

If you ask them who is the man on the $100 bill they'll tell you, he's Benjamin Franklin!

If you ask them who is the man on the $50 bill they'll tell you, he's Ulysses S. Grant!

If you ask them who is the man on the $20 bill they'll tell you , he's Andrew Jackson!

If you ask them who is the man on the $10 bill they'll tell you, he's Alexander Hamilton!

If you ask them who is the man on the $5 bill they'll tell you, he's Abraham Lincoln!

If you ask them who is the man on the $1 bill they'll tell you, he's George Washington!

On the back of every Benjamin there is a four letter phrase, "In God we trust!"

I know you know Mr. Benjamin and I know you know Mr. Hamilton, but do you know the Lord?

You may know the Russian Rubal and the Japanese Yen, but do you know the Lord?

You may know the German Mark or the British Pound, but do you know the Lord?

You may know the Mexican Peso and the French Franc, but do you know the Lord?

It's not all about the Benjamins but, it is all about the Lord!

When we are sick, if you call Mr. Benjamin he'll call in the best doctors but the doctors can't heal, all healing comes from the Lord. We've got to Call on the Lord!

When we are in trouble, if you call Mr. Benjamin, he'll get you the best Lawyers, but even the best lawyers can't help sometimes, we've got to call on the Lord!

Call him in the morning!

Call him in the noon day!

Call him in the midnight hour!

A lame man thought it was about the Benjamins but the disciples told him "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have gift I thee!"

Judas thought it was about the Benjamins. He said give me 30 pieces of silver and I'll deliver him in your hands!

He found out it's not all about the Benjamins!

Even though they nailed Jesus to a cross and buried him in a borrowed tomb;

Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

No wonder the song writer declared you can have this whole world, Give me Jesus!

It's not about the Benjamins, its about the Lord!

I Have Finished The Work

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 17, 2002

SCRIPTURE:" I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was. John 17:4-5

Introduction

How do you know when your work is finished? When do you finally acknowledge that there are no more adjustments needed or finishing touches that can be added? For some that is a difficult question because they spend their entire lives striving to get things right and to make things better for those around them. It is difficult because despite their best efforts they never feel they have done enough. Often such people give all they have until one day they finally accept that they have finished.

There are some people who have an easy answer for that question. They look at their watches, notice the hour and say, "It's time to go."There are others who know they are finished because they have done all they plan to do whether they complete their work or not. This attitude reflects a life ethic that limits the amount of work completed to the amount of work pursued. Its an attitude that says whatever I get done is all that will be done. For these, a job is complete when they have done all they are going to do, regardless to whether or not all that needs to be done is done.

Have you ever watched those who work in their yards and keep them immaculate? They begin in the morning, bowed down on hand and knees, pulling weeds, trimming, edging, pruning and arranging. In the heat of the day they continue, with sweat dropping from their brow, fatigued but determined to complete their task before the day is done. Even as the day closes they still see more that can be done to make it prettier, more appealing to the eye.

When is a Saint's work done? When can a believer drop her yard tools, wipe the sweat off her brow and call it a day? When she has done her best and God is glorified. That's when she hears a voice that says come on in, its been a good day.

As Christians, we believe we must work until our day is done.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he prays in the garden of Gethsemane.

For three years Jesus taught and ministered to the people. In the final week of his life he faced the very real prospect of his death by crucifixion. In Gethsemane, he gives his final report. It is this prayer that shows us the humanity of Christ as he communed with his father about the immediate past and the future.

In this prayer he reviews his work which has glorified God. He retraces his entire life and ministry beginning with his childhood in Nazareth and the three drama filled years of his public ministry when he went up and down the hills of Judea and Galilee, preaching and healing and ministering to all the multitudes that followed him. During this time his life work flashed across the panoramic screen of memory and the thousands of people he inspired, the hurting people he comforted and the sick people he healed are all recalled.

Moreover he recalled all the lessons that he taught in the homes of the rich and powerful as well as sinners and publicans, standing on street corners and in synagogues. In that flashback would have also been the tears he shed over Lazarus and how he grieved at one point over the wayward direction of Jerusalem that slayed the prophets.

This review was a review of a life work that glorified God. It exemplified the epitome of godliness within the context of human frailty. It was the best he could do within the limitations of humanity. Yet, despite having giving all he had he also knew that there was so many that did not respond to his call.

Despite his dismay he told his father, "I have finished the work which you gave me to do."

Having finished his work, Jesus turned his attention to going home. He asked in verse 5, ""Now, Father, glorify thou me in thine own presence with the glory which I had with thee before the world was made." He asked to be brought into the presence of God after having completed a life that glorified God on earth.

While he reviewed a work that glorified God he also looked to the future and saw his death and resurrection, both of which would also glorify God. It could not be avoided. It was sure. Yet, even in this instance he wanted to return home in a way that would glorify God.

Shortly after, he died on a Roman cross but arose to new life eternal with glory bestowed upon him by the father for the glory he brought by completing his work and mission on earth.

Glorifying God

Jesus glorified God by completing his work. How does a saint glorify God? What is our mission? Most saints don't have grand missions such as that of Christ which was to save the world. Most don't have the task of being a Mother Teresa or a Martin Luther King. The average saint doesn't have the dangerous tasks of bringing slaves to freedom like Harriet Tubman or building great institutions of learning like Mary McCleod Bethume. Most saints have simple but important missions. The simple yet challenging difficult and important.

MISSION OF CHRISTIAN PARENTING: One of the great missions of the average believer is that of Christian parenting. It is not an easy task, but it is an important mission that requires both precept and example to be effective. The children of Christian parents learn lessons at the breakfast table, around the coffee table and at the church communion table. It is the lessons of honesty, integrity and godliness. At the breakfast table Christian parents talk about the day ahead and point young minds toward progress and success. Around the coffee table parents listen and talk about what is and what should be. Around the communion table at church the family learns the importance of a God centered life. Most importantly Christian parents have the mission of teaching by example. They live the life they teach about on a daily basis. They teach and show their children the importance of Godliness and respect. A child that is blessed to be reared in a Christian home has an immeasurable gift that gives him a tremendous advantage in life. The mission of being a Christian parent is not an easy one. It is sacrificial and sometimes is disappointing and painful. It can drain a person's life energy as parents worry, sacrifice and pray constantly for their children. Yet, when children have been reared to sufficiently stand on their own, some parents live to see their work completed before their eyes and feel a sense of satisfaction in a job well done.

MISSION OF BEING A LOVING PARTNER: Just as Mary had the mission of rearing Jesus, she also had the mission of being a loving wife to Joseph. Being a faithful spouse is a life work. It means sharing a dream, enjoying a family and standing beside a loved one in a way that makes the words of a marriage vow true: "in sickness and in health, for better or worse, for richer or poorer." These are more than just words. God is glorified when a husband is loyal and faithful to his wife. God is glorified when a wife stands by her husband in every aspect of her promise, through difficulties and hard times, sickness, failure and even the prospect of death. When the world sees a Christian carrying out this mission with love and joy and a sense of commitment, God is glorified because he is the source of the power that makes it happen.

MISSION OF KINGDOM SERVICE: Every believer has a mission of kingdom service as well. Depending upon the gifts we are given, our mission may vary. If we are fortunate to have the gift of healing we may help others who are in pain by adopting a life work that helps alleviate the pain and calm the fears of others. If we have a personality that inspires and motivates children we may devote our lives to teaching or otherwise working with children to help them grow and mature. Believers often use their gifts in connection with the church and its ministries. God is glorified. Oh, how God is glorified when believers who serve him all the week in their avocations come together to sing his praises as members of a choir or a congregation of saints. Oh, how God is praised when his saints discuss his goodness and praise him with their friends in a Sunday school class. Oh, how God is glorified when believers work with the church to manifest his greatness and boldness so that all the world can see. God is glorified when we acknowledge him to others! God is glorified when we praise him in the congregation of men! This mission is a service that pleases him and brings him joy!

Come On Up to Glory!

Finally, brothers and sisters, while our mission on earth glorifies God, when our work is complete God glorifies it in a way that only he can do.

When a saints work is complete there is an abundant reward awaiting.

John, in the Revelation, was shown a great vision of things to be. However, just before that vision was shown he was given a message for the seven churches of Asia Minor. In that message God promised great rewards to the saints that overcome.

In Revelation 2:7 we read, "..To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God."

In Revelation 2:8 we read, "..He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death."

In Revelation 3:5, we read, "..He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels"

In Revelation 21:7 all of the saints whose work glorified God will be told "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

This should be encouraging news for every saint, to know that our work for him will not go unrewarded.

It should be encouraging to us to hear the word of God declare that the mother who glorifies God by loving her children with a passion and concern that follows them beyond their childhood even unto their mature adult life will be rewarded!

It should be encouraging to us to hear the word of God declare that loving parents who glorify God by their precepts and examples will be rewarded and glorified themselves beyond this life.

It should be encouraging to us to hear the word of God declare that those who labor with the church serving, singing, teaching, studying and witnessing for God will be glorified themselves when this life is over.

When God is glorified he glorifies!

When God is lifted up, he lifts up!

When God is praised, he raises us higher and higher in his glory!

The question was asked, "When is my work finished?" Maybe the song writer gave us a clue with the words, "I'm going to work until my day is done. I'm going to work until the setting of my sun."

Until that time, whether young and strong or old and feeble and confined to their homes, continues to glorify God with every breath!

We continue to tell the story!

We continue to tell about God and his goodness!

We continue to tell the world about Jesus!

We continue to tell the world how he died out on Calvary and arose after three days! We continue to tell of his goodness until... our day is done!

On Monday, October 14, 2002 Lillie Savannah completed a life that glorified God as a mother, wife and church worker. She glorified God in her life, he now glorifies her in death.

Hallowed Ground

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the New Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 20, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in this place; and I knew it not. And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." Genesis 28:16-17

Introduction

Are there certain places or things that you consider special? What makes your special place sacred or special to you? Generally, those places that we consider special relate to unique experiences that have happened in our lives at a specific time and moment. Newly weds consider the site of their honeymoons or the places where they first met as special places. Athletes revisit the site of great victories and the sight of the large stadiums where they were cheered in victory renews floods of memories of special moments. While there are many places and occasions that we considered momentous, there are other places that are more personal. They reflect points in our lives when our perception, direction or sense of security was unalterably challenged or changed. These are the places where we met our own fallibility and stood in the shadow of a God who is bigger than ourselves. They became more than special; they became sacred.

However, When the families of those who were victims of the September 11, 2001 World Trade Center tragedy visit the site it is more than special to them. When they stand at the memorials erected for over 2000 people who lost their lives to terrorists, they are standing on hallowed ground.

When succeeding generations stand on the sites of great American Battlefields such as Gettysburg or Vicksburg or revisit the beaches of Normandy or stand in the heat of the Saudi Arabian desert, it is more than a special place. They realize a sense of awe as they appreciate the fact that they stand on great battlefields where brave men and women gave their lives for the cause of freedom. They know they are standing on hallowed ground.

This feeling of standing on hallowed ground is what every church congregation feels when it stands to celebrate its anniversary. For African-Americans, the history of a church is inextricably intertwined with the struggle of a people to sustain hope as it struggles to be truly free. The history of an African-American church inevitably announces the roll call of the saints who paved the way for the next generation to have a better opportunity while clinging to an unwavering faith that God will make a way.

The second verse of James Weldon Johnson's "Lift Every Voice and Sing" epitomizes this feeling: "Stony the road we trod, Bitter the chastening rod, Felt in the days when hope unborn had died; Yet with a steady beat, Have not our weary feet Come to the place for which our fathers sighed? We have come over a way that with tears has been watered, We have come, treading our path through the blood of the slaughtered, Out from the gloomy past, Till now we stand at last Where the white gleam of our bright star is cast. "

When we stand on ground that has been watered with tears, we are standing on hallowed ground.

When we stand on ground watered with the blood of the slaughtered, we are standing on hallowed ground.

We are standing on the shoulders of hundreds of men and women who bowed in prayer that we would see a better day.

Without a doubt we are standing on hallowed ground.

As Christians, we rejoice in the knowledge the Lord has brought us a mighty long way. We move forward with ever present reminders that the very opportunity to hope and to have faith in this place was paid for with the blood of Christ. It is holy ground. It is solid ground. All other ground is sinking sand.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jacob's encounter with God in a place that became sacred and holy to him.

In Genesis 28, Jacob was leaving home after a dispute between he and his brother Esau over Esau's birthright which Jacob acquired through a crafty bargain. In anger, Esau pledged to kill Jacob if he ever saw him again.

As Jacob prepared to leave he worried about how he would be received by his angry brother. One night he made himself a ground bed with a stone for a pillow. While sleeping, Jacob dreamed of a ladder, or staircase ascending in ramp-like fashion. And on this ramp, in this dream vision, God's angels are seen going up and down.

Verse 13 records God standing at the top of the ladder renewing the promise he made to Abraham to give him all the land of Palestine including the very ground upon which he slept.

In addition, at verse 15, he promised to be with Jacob in his journey and to bring him back to the special place of promise. Whenever Jacob returned it would mark the anniversary of this promise. It would be about two decades before Jacob would return. When he finally returned, the place where he met God and communed with him would be a special place and a holy place, even though to others it would appear as just another stop along the way.

As the years passed, it took on even more meaning beyond sacred and special it became hallowed ground. It became a place that he described in verse 17 as nothing short of being the house of God. He named that place "Bethel" which means "The house of God."

The place where he met God and received his promise remained in Jacob's memory over the years. When he returned, years later he recognized that he was on hallowed ground.

Four Types of Ground

Jacob's experience at Bethel revealed four types of ground that every believer experiences in the course of the Christian journey, certainly every church.

PROMISED GROUND: God made a promise to Jacob that he made to his father and grandfather that, "all the ground before you will be yours." Neither Abraham, Isaac or Jacob ever doubted God's promises. They were considered sure and reliable. Numbers 23:19 points out that "God is not a man that he should lie." If he said it he shall do it, if he has spoke it, he will make it happen. Just as Jacob trusted God's promise with all his heart, so should believers today. If God has shown the church a vision of what is to be, he shall do it. If he has spoken it, it shall happen. The family saw many difficulties, even years of slavery before Jacob's children saw the dream become a reality. When Joshua prepared to lead the people into the Promised Land after the death of Moses he was met by an angel. Numbers 5:15 says the angel told him to take off his shoes because he stood on holy ground. It was the land that had been promised to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. There are many warriors who have gone to their reward carrying the promise for this church in their hearts. They never realized the promise of a day the church would have a modern building, various ministries and technology, but it was promised. Today, we stand on promised ground. It should be a reminder to every believer that God does not back down on anything he has promised. No wonder the song writer records, "Great is thy faithfulness, great is thy faithfulness, morning by morning new mercies I see. All I have needed thy hand hath provided. Great is thy faithfulness, Lord unto me!"

COMMON GROUND: Jacob named his special place Bethel. Over the years it became a very special place to the people because it was a common place for varying opinions to meet. When Israel looked for a place for the leaders of all of the tribes to meet to divide the promised ground, they came to a place in the suburbs of Bethel called Shiloh. It was common ground. There, people of varied interests met and put their differences aside to worship. Hannah brought her son Samuel to the priests at Shiloh. It was a place where the lowly could touch base with the powerful. It was common ground. Before Jerusalem became the center of worship, Israel traveled to Shiloh to worship because it was common ground. Today, the church represents common ground. It is the place where Democrats sit beside Republicans; blacks sit next to whites, the affluent sit next to the working poor; and persons who may have varying views on a variety of subjects come together in one place on one subject they all agree and that is that, "God is good, all the time!" Every believer should feel that in my Sunday worship I'm on common ground. In the military the officers and the enlisted men eat in separate buildings, but in the church, it's common ground. In the community the rich eat at the country club and the working poor eat in cafeterias and the poor eat at homeless shelters, but in the church it's common ground, we all eat at the same table and sit on the same pews. Acts 10:34 makes it simple: "God is not a respecter of persons." Why? Because we have all sinned and fallen short of the glory of God.

HOLY GROUND: Jacob considered Bethel Holy Ground because there, he met God. So it is with each of us, the place where we meet the Lord is Holy Ground. For Jacob that little spot along the road that he marked with a stone pillar was Holy Ground because it is where he heard the voice of God. There are many who have met the Lord in a variety of places and under unusual circumstances. Some have met him sitting in hospital rooms as they talked to him for the first time. Some have met him after a great personal struggle and that place became a holy ground. For many people, the church is Holy Ground. It is the place where they come to make contact with God. It is the place where humanity reaches out to divinity. It is the place where God speaks through the written and spoken word, songs and prayers. It is the place where, for a few minutes we can feel the power and presence of the almighty in our lives. It is holy ground. When Moses met God at the burning bush he was told to take off his shoes because he was in the presence of God or on holy ground. Thus, when we come before God, we humble ourselves and come with humility as we stand on holy ground. We take off our titles. We are not Drs., mayors, or councilmen. We are not school board members or presidents of corporations, we are on holy ground! We are servants of the most high. Because the church is holy ground we intentionally dress differently and come at our best behavior. Because it is holy ground we bring our hopes and expect to leave with renewed or strengthened faith.

Hallowed Ground

Finally, brothers and sisters, while the church is promised ground, common ground, and holy ground, it is most importantly hallowed ground.

Hallowed ground is different from all of the other types of ground because it is ground that has been watered with someone's tears or blood.

Hallowed ground is the product of pain and sacrifice.

Hallowed ground is the outcome of struggle, conflict, agony, defeat and eventual victory.

When a young couple buys a home and starts a new life together on their own two feet, they are often standing on hallowed ground. It is often ground paid for by the sacrifice of parents, grandparents and great grand parents who spent their lives trying to make life better for their children. That ground is hallowed ground.

When we accomplish great feats in life, win awards and perform mighty works and stand to receive the praise of the public, we must never forget that at that moment we stand, we stand on hallowed ground. The opportunities we enjoy were paid for by thousands, even millions of unsung heroes who made it possible by their personal sacrifices.

That's what the church celebrates today... hallowed ground!

We enjoy a faith that has been secured by the sacrifices of men and women before us who were tortured and slain, and fed to lions in arenas.

We read the words of the apostles who were boiled in oil, decapitated, and crucified upside down for their beliefs.

Despite it all I hear Paul declare: In Romans 8:38-39, " For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

I don't know about you but I have come to view the church as a place to meet God. It is hallowed ground.

It is hallowed Ground because Jesus told Peter, "Upon this rock I'll build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

It is hallowed ground because with the church, I can hear songs of faith that inspired our forefathers in the cotton fields of the South with the master's whip marks fresh on their backs.

When we sing, "I know the Lord will make a way!" Our voices mingle with the echoes of fallen warriors over the centuries. We are on hallowed ground!

When we chant the old words of the saints, "If I can't say a word I'll just wave my hand!" We're on hallowed ground.

When we stand on the rock of our salvation, the voices of our ancestors remind us that no matter how tough it gets, "The Lord will make a way!"

When we stand on the rock, God will turn our:

—Backward steps into forward motions; Failing health into growing strength!

—Losses and defeats into gains and victories; Hard times and bad times, into easy days and good times.

When we stand on the rock we are on secure ground. No wonder the song writer wrote: "On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name!"

On Christ, Mary's baby and the lion of Judah!

On Christ, Ezekiel's wheel in the middle of the wheel!

On Christ, My bridge over troubling water!

On Christ, who carried an old rugged cross to Calvary's hill!

On Christ, Who died and was buried in a borrowed tomb for three days and nights!

And early Sunday morning arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

On Christ the solid rock I stand, all other ground……

All other ground!

All other ground is sinking sand!

Costumes, Masks & Disguises

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 27, 2002

SCRIPTURE:"Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?Matthew 7:16; Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Matthew 7:21

Introduction

Have you ever worn a mask, or a costume? During this time of the year many will wear costumes as they prepare for fall festivals. It's a time of make believe and fantasy. Costumes are fun. Just about everyone can remember a time when they dressed in a costume and paraded around the house wearing the clothing of one parent or the other. Often the pants were too large or the dress dragged the floor. Despite how awkward we felt or how silly we looked, we still had fun. In fact, it seemed that the sillier we looked the more fun we had. Wearing a costume allowed us to live out a fantasy for a short time. We knew it wasn't real but we had a good time playing "let's pretend." The costumes made us laugh. They gave us a chance to become someone other than ourselves. For a time we can even get to act like someone else.

There is a difference between a costume, a mask and a disguise. A costume usually suggests a role. Those who wear costumes are usually playing a role or are a part of an operation or unit that requires a certain look or image. Those who wear masks usually attempt to conceal their identity while a disguise is meant to change our appearance completely.

The famous Black poet Paul Lawrence Dunbar wrote a poem in which he said,
"Why should the world be over-wise,
In counting all our tears and sighs?
Nay let them only see us, while
We wear the mask.

Dunbar said many slaves gave the image of being happy go lucky on the surface but they were hurting on the inside. The mask of contentment and joy with slavery concealed their inner pain and disappointment.

There are many of us who in one way or another can epitomize the truth of Dunbar's poem.

Each of us has an inward self and an outward self. The inward self is who we really are. The outward self is the face that we choose to let the world see, intentionally or otherwise. We wear a sad face at home, burdened with a thousand troubles, yet leave our sad face on the door step as we put on a happy face and go to work or school. There are many children who wear masks that keep others from knowing their unhappiness with their family situation. There are many wives that put on a happy face for the world to see, but secretly they are hurting inside. Husbands? How many masks do we wear? Tough guy? Smart guy? Little guy really afraid of the big guy? How many masks do we wear?

William Butler Yeats developed a theory he called the "Doctrine of the Mask." He believed that all of us don masks when we face the world. He believed we are all so messed up inside that it is easier to mask what we really feal. Carl Jung meant essentially the same thing when he said that each of us needs to adopt what he called a persona, a face, to relate to the outside world. Shakespeare saw life itself as a play with each of as a costumed character who "struts and frets is hour upon the stage and then is heard no more." Athletes understand this principle well. Football players are known for putting on their game face just before a big game. Boxers practice an intimidating stare before the sound of the first bell. We all wear a mask at some time or another.

Masks don't always hide something bad. Sometimes, hidden behind the mask of a shy boy who stutters is a flamboyant superstar with a with mega voice, which was the case with James Earl Jones.

Sometimes hidden behind the mask of the slow learning imbecile who would never learn anything is the wonderful mind of men like Albert Einstein. Maybe hidden behind the mask of the little girl, born blind, deaf and mute, is a naturally brilliant mind, as was the case of Helen Keller. Sometimes the mask of the mean tough guy hides the gentle fellow on the inside.

One great truth of life is that we never really know people until we catch them without their masks; without their game face, without their public personality. We really get to know them when we know them without the mask.

Sometimes we don't like the man or woman behind the mask. Sometimes it frustrates us and makes us angry.

The beauty of our relationship with God is that he loves the man or woman behind the mask. He knows our inner spirit. Despite what he knows about us, he has chosen to love us anyway. Despite what he sees when our masks come off, he still loves us.

As Christians, we have come to love God more than ever. We love him because he looks beyond our faulty masks, disguises and false faces and sees someone worthy of loving. No wonder the song writer wrote, "Oh How I love Jesus, because he first loved me."

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he warns believers not to be deceived by the disguises of deceivers.

As Jesus taught his disciples he warned them that there were many people who were representing themselves to be ambassadors of the kingdom but were actually false prophets. While they wore the costumes of piety and religious appeal they were not completely truthful about the nature of the kingdom and their role in the kingdom.

He warned that they would come disguised as sheep, or children of the kingdom, but they were actually wolves on the inside. He warned that believers should look beyond just the surface into the character of a person to determine truth or a lie.

False faces, false piety hidden under costumes that project a false since of religious security would deceive some but not all of the elect.

Be warned, Jesus said, everyone who claimed to be of the kingdom was not an ambassador of the kingdom.

In teaching this lesson, Jesus warned all believers not to be deceived by the masks of the world but to seek the truth that can only come from God himself.

Some Masks Serve A Worthy Purpose

While the common use of masks is to hide something, this is not always true. Sometimes we wear masks to survive. It's not always wise to say everything we think, respond to every attack, or reveal every secret thought. Just as Jesus never let on to the Pharisees that he was troubled about the prospect of Calvary, or even told men who he was for nearly 30 years, it is often necessary to mask some things and keep them between ourselves and the Lord. Just as an oxygen mask provides a patient with pure oxygen to help him breathe there are times when every believer needs solitude and quite time, just to breath spiritually: without telephones, and cable vision and computer screens and screaming sirens. Like the movie star that puts on a disguise for the privilege of walking and taking in the view, sometimes we need to steal away and find God. Even more so, sometimes masks protect us. Isn't that what a gas mask does? When dangerous poisons are around us, doesn't a gas mask filter them out an allow us to breathe. In times of danger and difficulty such a mask could be a life saver.

The fact that God will be a protective and life giving mask for us in a time of trouble is probably what David had in mind in Psalm 27:5 when he wrote, "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock." God serves as a mask to hide us and protect us and give us room to spiritually breathe and find him.

Some Masks Hide Our True Feelings

When Moses went before the Lord he came back with a brilliance about him that was so awesome that it both amazed and frightened those who saw it. The power that illumined him was so great that he had to wear a mask to veil the power that was behind it. In Exodus 34:33-34 we are provided another insight. When Moses went in before the Lord, he took off the mask he wore in public and presented his real self to God.

There are many today that have a public game face they show the world that hides the fact that they have been in the presence of God. So it is with many Christian youth. There are many youth in this generation who have had a mountain top experience. They have literally been in the presence of God at some point in their lives. They have felt his presence and understood the power of his being. Yet, they hide what they feel on the inside because it would not be the popular thing to do. They want to tell the world but instead they wear the mask of silence. They want to witness but they wear the mass of diminished testimony. Instead of the face of a believer that is happy with the Lord, many youth choose to wear a "hood friendly" mask that helps them to blend in with the crowd and gain popularity and the respect of their peers. What about our true feelings for God? We should not hide our love for God behind a mask. We should be willing to let the world know that 'he's sweet I know.''

God Sees Through The Mask

No matter how brilliantly crafted our mask is, God sees what others can't see. He is able to discern the real us. This is illustrated in the bible when God was looking for a king among the sons of Jesse. Jesse had 12 sons and 11 of them were great figures and stood as likely prospects to be king but the prophet Samuel asked to see the 12th son, who was considered unlikely to ever achieve much. He wore the mask of being a shepherd boy. He could do nothing but write poems and play a girls musical instrument. Despite their mockery, God allowed Samuel to look beyond the outer mask and see what was on the inside. After he chose David to be the next king, Samuel's words ring true in every ear. In 1 Samuel 16:7 we hear him say, "for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart." That truth should encourage every young man. It should motivate every young woman. Despite what they may say about you in school or around the community, God knows the real you. He does not judge you by the same standard as others. He knows what you can be and what you will be. He looks behind your exterior and sees your interior. Sometimes he sees a bundle of talent waiting to be discovered. Sometimes he sees a wounded spirit waiting to be set free. While the world may not understand us, it is reassuring to know that God knows and understand the real "us" behind the masks.

One Day There will be no masks

There will come a day when there will be no masks, disguises or masquerades. It has not come yet, but the day is coming when each of us will see the beauty of God in all of his fullness. That's what Paul meant in 1 Corinthians 13:12 when he said, "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known."

One of these days we won't have to laugh when we really feel like crying!
One of these days we won't have to smile to disguise a broken heart!
One of these days we won't have to pretend that everything is alright to disguise our miserable feelings

Then, face to face we will see the Lord in all of his goodness standing ready to reward the true and the faithful.

I'm glad to know that God looks beyond what we see to see something better. I'm glad that he is willing to accept us when everyone else is ready to turn us away.

I'm reminded of the true story of a young woman named Charolotte Elliott whose body was wretched with pain and misery. She smiled on the outside but was miserable on the inside because of her condition. One day a traveling minister came to her home for a visit when preaching in the area. Before he left he asked the young woman, who was obviously miserable and infirmed if she knew the Lord. The woman considered her condition and took offense to the preacher's words. Three weeks later the preacher happened by again and she told him that for three weeks she was worried about what he asked. She wasn't able to do anything but just sit in her house. She didn't have any strength to be a great witness. She wanted to know how to accept Christ. The preacher looked at her in her affliction and said, "come just like you are!" She accepted Christ that day and God released a song in her heart that is still sung around the world nearly 200 years later:

"Just as I am, without one plea, But that Thy blood was shed for me, And that Thou bidst me come to Thee, O Lamb of God, I come, I come." She went on to write over 150 hymns to a God that looked beyond her frailties and said "come!"

Somebody here today thinks their life is too messed up to come to Jesus, but God already knows what's behind the mask!

Somebody here today thinks he has failed too badly to come to Jesus, but God already knows what's behind the mask, he'll pick you up and turn you around!

Somebody here today thinks there is no way that the real person inside can ever be acceptable to God, but God already knows just what you are and loves you anyway!

No wonder the song writer declared, I came to Jesus just as I was, weary wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad!

I came to Jesus, who died on Calvary!

I came to Jesus, who was buried in a borrowed tomb!

I came to Jesus, who arose Early Sunday morning!

I came to Jesus as I was!

And he has made me glad!

Sing Unto The Lord A New Song

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 3, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "Oh, sing to the Lord a new song! Sing to the Lord, all the earth." Psalm 96:1

Introduction

Is there one song that describes your life? If you could pick a song that best expresses your feeling at the present moment what would it be? "Rock me baby?" "I want your body?" "Hood Rich?" or "Amazing Grace?" Those who have different experiences in life sing different songs. Those who are have been hurt may sing the blues with B.B. King. Those who look toward the future may sing "Don't stop thinking about tomorrow" with Fleetwood Mack. The songs we sing reflect our experiences and expectations. Those songs change from moment to moment since our lives our in constant transition.

To accurately get a snapshot of who we are, we need a song that tells where we've been, where we are now and where we are going. To do that may require all of us to sing a new song.

Socrates once said, "If I can write the music of a nation, I care not who writes the laws." His statement gave evidence to the power of music to both reflect and define the times in which we live. If our music sings about violence, murder and sadness, it may be because it is reflecting the world around it. At the same time that music reflects, it also projects images of what can be, should be or could be. Music is powerful.

The fact that music can be powerful is something that cannot be overlooked.

Consider the man who bought an African Parrot and discovered it could sing and talk. At home the man and the bird had long discussions about Africa, the slave trade and Negro spirituals. The bird wanted to learn a few Negro spirituals so the man taught him several Negro Spirituals and some of his favorite gospel tunes. It was amazing! He had a talking singing bird. No one at church would believe it. Finally, on the day of the choir musical he decided to take the bird to church with him. It was a strange picture to see a man come to a musical with a parrot perched on his shoulder. When the man told his friends that the bird could talk and sing his friends did not believe him. Before the musical began there were bets being placed everywhere. No one expected the bird to sing. All through the musical the bird did not say one word. The man began to sweat. By offering time the bird still had not sung. As the service ended, the man had to payoff his bets and was real angry with the bird. Once in the car the bird started to singing loudly.

"Why are you singing now?" The man said "Don't you know I lost nearly $5,000 betting on you. Everybody cleaned up on me." The bird looked at the man and said, "Don't be stupid. If they won $5,000 because I didn't sing at the musical. They'll bet $20,00 that I can't sing at the Christmas program. By then, you and I both will be singing a new song!"

One of the most powerful communication tools is singing. David sang to cool the anger of King Saul. Jesus and the disciples sang a hymn before going to Mt. of Olives; The disciples sang before they ate. The word teaches that we should encourage each other by singing spiritual songs and hymns about God and his goodness. Those who have been given that gift have the responsibility and joy of ministering to others in a powerful way.

When God saved us he gives us a new song to sing. It was a song that wasn't about the moment but always entails how salvation, our blessing and our hope for the future. Because of his presence in our lives, we have a new song to sing.

As Christians, we keep singing our song with joy and hope. It is a new song about a familiar subject, which is the goodness of the Lord.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he prepares to encourage Israel to sing a new song unto the Lord.

Israel has always been a nation that sang the praises of God. They sang in their humble national beginnings and during the enslavement in Egypt. They sang as they journeyed to the promised land. Moreover, they sang in never every part of their national experience. The only time they found it difficult to sing was during their captivity. It was then that there captors asked them to sing one of their famous songs and they answered, "How can we sing Zion's songs in a strange land?"

Most of their songs were religious. Nearly all of them sang about God in some way or another. In modern times our songs are either secular or spiritual in nature. However, in biblical times nearly all songs had a religious flavor to them. The idea of singing and songs is referred to over 300 times in the bible. The phrase, "Sing unto the Lord" appears 17 times in scripture with 10 of those times in the book of Psalms. Of the 17 times that the phrase "Sing unto the Lord appears" three of them the phrase "a new song" attached to them.

There are three places where "Sing unto the Lord a new song" appears: Psalm 96:1; Psalm 149:1; and Isaiah 42:10. Each time this phrase is used the Hebrew word "Chadash" is used-which means, "In a fresh and different way!"

In the New Testament the phrase "a new song" is referred to twice (Rev. 5:9; and 14:3). The Greek word "Kainos" is used for "new" in these two instances. Kainos refers to something that has never been experienced before. Because it is referring to something in the future that has never happened before the "new song" spoken of in the Revelation is talking about a song that has never been heard before. Listen to the words of Revelation 5:9, "And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; "

Therefore when Psalm 96:1 suggests that Israel should sing a "new" song, exactly what was meant? What was the emphasis? In consideration of how God saved Israel, blessed them and performed miracles for them in the presence of their enemies, David said Israel should sing a new song that encompasses all that God has done for the people involving their liberty, salvation and bountiful blessing.

The new song would be different from the song Moses sang when Pharaoh's army was drowned in Exodus 15:1.

The new song would be different from the one David sang in Psalm 13:6 in which he expressed his joy for the bountiful blessings of the Lord.

It would even be different from the song of Isaiah 12:5 in which the excellence of God was promoted. It would be a new song!

David considered all that God has done from salvation to blessings and what he will do in the not so distant future. It would truly be a new song.

What's A New Song

The 96th Psalm gives us a very clear picture of the composition of a spiritual song. Different from secular songs which reflect the world, spiritual songs are directed toward God, which makes them totally different. The verses of the 96th psalm form a spiritual checklist by which we can evaluate songs that purport to be for God. Generally, regardless to its popularity, the more of the 96th psalm that is in the song, the more endearing it will be to believers over time.

SPIRITUAL SONGS SING UNTO THE LORD: When songs are sung unto the Lord they are objective and not subjective. In any given worship service there should be songs that are objective. An objective song removes ourselves out of the picture and generally extol the greatness of God alone. Hymns and anthems are generally objective, they sing to the Lord without "me" in the picture. On the other hand the subjective song considers "poor me." It considers the terror and trauma of our lives and sings about our fear, anxiety or anxiousness. While "Nobody knows the trouble I see" sings about the Lord it is more about "my" troubles than God's greatness. "All Hail the power of Jesus" name on the other hand sings to the Lord and extols our desire for him to be crowned Lord of all. The song that sings to the Lord, brings happiness to the soul by helping us to focus on the greatness of the Lord. When we sing to the Lord we praise him for being him! The song is not for us but it is for him!

OUR NEW SONG FOCUSES ON THE SALVATION OF THE LORD. The new song a believer enjoys singing is a testimony about our ruin, remedy and regeneration.

These three "R's" came to us by the hand of God and they become the stuff of which our "new song" is based. Every song that a Christian sings should include his own testimony. No saint can boast that he has saved himself or has lived beyond the need for salvation. Thus, our songs almost always include lyrics such as those in Amazing Grace that say, "I once was lost but now I'm found, blind but now I see" or the words from he touched me, "Shackled by a heavy burden, neath a load of guilt and shame, but then the hand of Jesus touched me and now I am no longer the same." The new song that we sing must always speak of our salvation.

OUR SONGS DECLARE GODS GLORIES AMONG UNBELIEVERS. There are many who do not know the Lord. When they see the joy of the saints in their everyday lives as they sing of his goodness in worships, their musical tribute glorifies God to those who do not know the Lord. That's the tone of the song that says, "Come we that love the Lord and let our joys be know, join in a song of sweet accord, join in a song with sweet accord and thus surround the throne, and thus surround the throne." In face of those who do not know God the second verse says, "Let those refuse to sing, who never knew our God. But children of the heavenly king, but children of the heavenly king may speak their joys abroad, may speak their joys abroad. We're marching to Zion, beautiful beautiful Zion. We're marching upward to Zion, that beautiful city of God."

OUR SONGS GIVE PRAISE TO GOD REPEATEDLY. "Give" is noted here three times. "Sing" is noted in verses 1 and 2 three times. It is the law of repetition. It suggests to us that we should praise God repeatedly. Songs that give glory to the Lord and not to the artist, singer or the performers but to the glory of God. The song "I thank you Jesus" uses repetition often. It says over and over again "I thank you Jesus." Because "You've been my doctor and my lawyer" and a variety of other helps. How many times can we say thanks? If we had ten thousands tongues we couldn't clap, sing or praise him loud enough and long enough for all of the blessing he has bestowed upon us.

OUR SONG REFLECTS THE BEAUTY OF HOLINESS. The desire of every believer, after being saved is to walk the Christian walk and talk the Christian talk. This desire is always reflected in the songs a believer sings. Songs such as, "I want Jesus to walk with me" suggest that the believer wants to live a life in Christ not out of Christ. This walk cannot be done along. Other songs such as, "Lord I want to be a Christian" clearly state the believer's desire to live the life of holiness with the help of God.

OUR SONG REFLECT OUR FAITH IN GOD'S RIGHTEOUSNESS: When trouble, difficulties, and hardships come our way, our songs reflect our faith in the ultimate righteousness of God. We cling to the word of God that teaches that "all things work to the good" for those who love God, according to his purpose. Thus, our songs look up when everything around us is down. They express faith even in the midst of sorrow. That's when we sing "It is well with my soul" and "Count it all joy." We sing those words because they reflect our faith that "The Lord will make a way somehow."

Finally Brothers and Sisters, we must consider that the new song we sing tells our story.

When David encouraged Israel to sing a new song, he wanted them to sing a different song.

When David killed Goliath the people sang a song, "Saul hath killed his thousands but David hath killed ten thousand." We are not told to sing David's song, but to sing unto the Lord a new song!

When Israel was in Egypt their song was a song of desperation and trouble. It's words were directed to God and redirected to Pharaoh "Let my people Go!" We are not encouraged to resing the old song of desperation and frustration. We are urged to sing unto the Lord a new song!

When Solomon dedicated the temple, the people sang a song of accomplishment. We are urged however to go beyond singing a song of a single accomplishment and to sing unto the Lord a new song.

David told Israel to look back over its journey and to take in the whole picture. When you sing to the Lord, don't just praise him for one experience, but rewrite your words to praise him for entire experience.

Don't just thank him for the mountain top experiences, but sing a new song that thanks him for the valleys as well.

Sing a new song that thanks him for the sunshine and thanks him for the rain!

Sing a new song that thanks him for the good times and thanks him for the bad times too!

Sing a new song that thanks him for accomplishments we've made but also sing a song that thanks him for the lesson learned from failures and setbacks!

Our new song should tell our story.

It ought to tell how he pick us up turned us around!

It ought to tell how he planted our feet on solid ground!

It ought to tell how he gave us a new walk and a new talk!

It ought to tell how he gave us a new song to sing!

"I've been washed in the blood of the crucified lamb!"

Who died on Calvary but Early Sunday morning arose up from the grave!

Our new song tells where we have been, but one of these old days we are going to sing a new song!

One of these days, bye and bye, we're going to sing, "How I got over! How I got over! My soul looks back and wonders, how I got over!"

SCRIPTURE: God setteth the solitary in families. He bringeth out those which are bound with chains: but the rebellious dwell in a dry land. Psalm 68:6

Introduction

Have you ever sensed that the success that you seek in life could be achieved much easier if it were not for the obstacles in your way. In a quite moment, we often muse about the prospects of living a life without the obstacles. Obstacles: those people, occurrences and things that stand between what we have and what we want, seem to be everywhere. Some of them are external and beyond us. Others are self imposed, but yet they crush against us just as hard and even harder than any enemy's boot. Obstacles, they are often the excuses that we give for failed visions, unfinished symphonies and victories lost before they were fought. There is not a life that has been lived that has not had its share of obstacles, hindrances, setbacks and difficulties. Yet, there are literally millions who have loosed themselves from the tyrannical imposition and frustration that comes as a result of obstacles.

As a people we have seen our share of obstacles. We know what it means to strive to achieve a level of freedom only to be frustrated in our efforts as we find that the cost of our liberation changed each time we came close to saving enough to buy our emancipation. We know what it means to have the rules of the game changed on us in business, sports, education, civic life and in the halls of justice, just as we learned to play by the rules and win. We know what it means to have a heritage and inheritance stolen from us by a nation who regarded us as only three fifths of a human being. The lack of an inheritance, land and a chance at the brass ring has hindered millions of our people that even a belated cry for reparations cannot justly address. These represent social, political and economic obstacles that have been placed in our way, yet we have overcome despite their presence. They have frustrated us and angered us but we have overcome.

Even in modern times the obstacles have not diminished. We strive to learn and educate ourselves but now we have the cumbersome burden of learning the rudiments of life while trying to focus on standardized tests that measure what we are able to remember on any given test day. It's an obstacle that frustrates our efforts to educate our children. It's almost as frustrating as our inability to find a job, or to ever qualify for the promotion that others seem to get who are often less qualified than we are.

We have learned to deal with obstacles. We have adapted and learned how to cope and succeed despite the obstacles and frustrations. Obstacles make it difficult but they are not as destructive as shackles. By their nature shackles are used to retard or limit movement. When a man is shackled, he can still move, but his movement is limited. When a man is shackled he can still move but if he moves in a direction that is undesirable he can be easily overcome, permanently subdued and taken off his feet.

A recent song by Mary, Mary was entitled, "Shackles on my Feet." The lyrics of that song repeated several times brings to mind the nature of our situation. We have one set of shackles on our feet that have been imposed on us by our oppressors and another set that we have clamped tightly about us so tight that we hinder our own upward mobility. Shackles such as self hatred, doubt, lack of discipline, and loose morals are not imposed upon us by an outside enemy. They have become the enemy within that does more to destroy us than the obstacles that frustrate us in the political, social and economic spheres.

It's not just a social order problem; it also a personal problem. Many of us are shackled, chained and bound in so many ways that we can't get free. Whether it's the frustrated woman who is waiting to exhale one day and trying to get her groove back on another day, or the totally messed up brother who thinks its cool to wear his pants so low that he actually shows his raw behind, complete with brown spots, polka dots and Fruit of the Loom. The fact is that there are shackles on our feet. Shackles on ability to learn and earn! Shackles on our ability to rise and reach for the skies! There so many shackles at home, in our relationships, and at work. There are so many shackles that some can't think, so they drink and they get drunk. It's dangerous to have shackles on our feet.

What does God say about the shackles that bind believers? Is there any hope that we will break free from the shackles that bind us and take the wings of the heaven bound chariot and fly away?

God is sending a chariot of hope for every believer and we are offered a ride! Those who ride this chariot will be those who have broken the chain of sin, doubt, and faithlessness. Those who ride the heaven bound chariot will be those who allow God to break the chains that bind us and set us free.

As believers, we know that no weapon formed against us shall succeed and no chain that attempts to hold us can prevail against us. Christ came and died to break the chains that bind us.

His death and resurrection has set us free.

Exposition

This text focuses on David's faith that God would ultimately break the shackles of those who are in bondage.

David was a warrior king. He spent the bulk of his 40 years as King of United Israel waging war with one country or another. As a youth and as king he grew in popularity with the people because of his reputation as a champion of those who were in bondage and to those who were held captive.

The 68th psalm is a reflection upon the way God used David's life and reign to break the shackles that prevented Israel from enjoying a full national homeland while attending even to the smallest level of enslavement of believers such as the loneliness created by the loss of a father or the loss of opportunity.

In this psalm, David recites the power and glory of God as he projects how God will ultimately bring believers to complete freedom if they will follow him and remain loyal to him.

Thus, David gives examples of God's powerful acts in the past as a clear reminder to present believers that he has acted in their behalf in the past with great power and will continue to do the same.

Believers are encouraged to "extol" or praise him (v4) who has champion the caused of the enslaved for many years. Israel knew this to be true because of their 400 year enslavement in Egypt, their 40 year wanderings in the wilderness and their struggles against overwhelming odds in the Promised Land. Because he is who he is, "Jah" which is a contraction for "Jehovah" is his name. "He is the Lord."

Because of Israel's faith, God vindicated them by setting right whatever was wronged. The innocent were avenged, the lonely were comforted and the chains that bound them were broken. (V6). For this, God is to be praised.

In Luke 4:18-19 Jesus brought wonder and surprise to the religious leaders of his time when he declared that God had sent him as a messenger of hope to those who were oppressed, enslaved and dispirited. Here he said, " The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, To preach the acceptable year of the Lord."

What David said to the people in Psalm 68, Jesus announced as his mission as well. He seemed to define breaking the shackles as 1)healing the broken hearted, 2)giving hope to the dispirited 3)showing those who cannot see a better way 4)freeing those who have been enslaved from shackles.

Those who are shackled by heavy burdens of guilt, sin and doubt can have new hope and joy as they realize that Christ wants to set them free.

Breaking the Shackles

The 68th psalm gives us a formula and a reminder. It tells us how to break free and reminds us that God will break us free.

Let God Arise

Look at verse one again. It contains three powerful words that are the key to breaking the shackles that bind us..”Let God arise!” There is a hidden implication in the very first word.. “Let.” It suggests that believers should allow God to come forth and do the things that he does. For too long we have not allowed him to do great works for us. While Jesus performed miracles in scores of towns and villages, he was not able to do great things in Nazereth. They would not allow him the opportunity. There are many today who have not enjoyed the great opportunities that God has in store for them because they won’t give God a chance. That means stepping out on faith. For some it might be going back to school and retraining ourselves, long after others think its too late. But to break the shackles, we must let God arise! There are others shackled to a very nonproductive life. The scripture still speaks, “Let God Arise!” To let God arise means releasing him to do what only God can do instead of trying to do it all by yourself. Do what you know how to do, then Let God arise. When you let God arise, step back and get ready to watch God work!

Rejoice Before God

Look at verse three again. It too contains three powerful words key relevant to breaking the shackles, “rejoice before God.” It is easy to rejoice when a victory has been won, it is more difficult when we are not sure of the victory. However, David encouraged believers to remember that when it comes to any battle where believers moving at the will of God, the victory is guaranteed! “No weapon formed against us” shall prosper, when our battle is God’s battle. No enemy can keep us down, when we are moving at God’s command. Therefore this Psalm reminds us that despite any shackles that may be holding you down at the moment, praise God, for help is on the way! Consider the woman who was in desperate trouble. She was behind in her mortgage, her bills were due, her husband had been laid off and in six months they expected to be homeless and destitute. As she told her plight to a friend while driving along a busy street she confessed that she put her entire situation in God’s hands. “I’m trusting him” she said. Just as soon as she said those words a there was a huge crash as the woman’s car was hit from behind. She was jarred quickly, the air bag exploded and pounded her in the face, the seat belt cut into her shoulder bone like a knife. As she lay on the ground waiting for the ambulance, the woman lay on the ground smiling, saying “Thank you Jesus!” Her friend was mystified. “Don’t you know that in six months you are going to lose everything you have, you don’t have a job, now you have no car. You turned to God and a crazy driver runs a red light and busts you up!. Why are you saying, Thank you Jesus.” The woman smiled again “The car that hit me...it belongs to State Farm Insurance. God works in mysterious ways!”

He bringeth out

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that no matter how tight fitting the shackles, God will bring you out.

Verse six has three more powerful words. “He bringeth out!” They are words of hope and inspiration that suggest to us that no matter deep we get "in" God can bring us out! No matter how far we fall down, God can bring us up!

Today there are many who have found themselves in a variety of situations that have resulted in emotional, psychological, social and spiritual captivity.

Yet, we hear David reminding us in this psalm that there is no captivity that is powerful enough to hold down a child of God when God gets ready to bring him up.

The Great Houdini was one of the world's greatest escape artists. They could not build a cell that he could not escape from. He was locked inside of steel vaults, only to break free. He was chained upside down over a busy New York street and he escaped in front of the eyes of thousands. No restraints could hold the Great Houdini.

Yet, in all his greatness, the great Houdini's ability get free from locked situations does not compare in any way to what God can do when he gets ready to set a soul free.

There are many people today who understand the words of Mary, Mary's song better than others, because they literally feel like there are shackles on their feet.

These are those who have lost hope because their hands have been tied by situations out of their control.

They cannot move the way they want to because not only are their shackles on their feet there are ankle bracelets on their legs.

There's somebody here today who is frustrated because they can't do what they know they can do, or grasp what they need. Not only are their shackles on their feet and ankle bracelets on their legs there are handcuffs around their wrists.

There is somebody here today that feels restrained and restricted. Every time they try to do something to better themselves they are frustrated. Not only are there shackles on their feet, ankle bracelets on their legs and handcuffs on their wrists; they are wrapped up in straight jackets.

If you can't break free from the chains, the best thing to do is to find somebody who has the key!

I don't know about you but I know the man who has the key!

I saw him use the key when he broke the shackles of lameness that kept a man bound for 38 long years saying, "Take thy bed and walk!"

I saw him use the key when he stood in front of the grave of Lazarus and said, "Loose that man and let him go!"

I saw him use the key when two saints were locked in prison and prayed at midnight. That's when we learned that prayer is the key to the kingdom and faith unlocks the door!

I saw him use the key when he met the woman at the well. She was locked up and tied up in guilt and sin, but when he turned the key she ran through the city saying, "Come see a man who told me all I've ever done!"

Who is this man? His name is Jesus!

At the name of Jesus! Doors will be opened!

At the name of Jesus chains will be torn asunder!

At the name of Jesus the captives will be set free!

He died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the dead! With all power in his hands!

God We thank you for this food

SCRIPTURE:For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving: For it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer. 1 Timothy 4:4-5

Introduction

Have you ever been told to eat all of your food only to find that there was something on your plate that you did not like? Most of us have had that experience. It is discomforting at the least. Everyone has at least one food type that turns them completely off. What one person considers tasty is considered nasty by another. No matter what the food item may be, there is someone who thinks it tastes terrible. We now many people who love chicken, but there are people who are completely turned off by chicken. The same is true of brussel sprouts, okra or even spinach. For every person who loves eating raw oysters on the half shell there is another person that hates the very thought. There are many that can't imagine eating snails or fish eggs, yet there are millions of people who not only eat these items but also call them delicious.

What happens when the food you dislike the most is on your plate? What do you do? You may respond like the little boy who was asked to offer the blessing for the Sunday meal. The little boy gave a typical blessing until he looked down on his plate. He then said, "God I thank you for the fried chicken. I thank you for the rice and gravy. I thank you for the mustard greens and corn bread and I thank you for the bread pudding. I also thank you for the macaroni and cheese. Amen." Puzzled, his mother asked why he asked blessings for food on the table one item at a time instead of his usual "God we thank you for this food." The little boy answered, "I gave thanks for the chicken because I like chicken. I gave thanks for the rice and gravy, macaroni and cheese and bread pudding because I like then. I love greens and corn bread. I thank the Lord for the food I like. Some of that other stuff on my plate I can't stand. If I gave thanks for the whole plate the Lord may get the wrong idea and give me more of what I can't stand!"

God blesses many of us with full plate. In fact, we're like David in the 23rd Psalm when he said, "my cup runneth over." A full plate in this context is not a reference to food but to a wide assortment of experiences that range from good times to bad times. Sometimes the items on our plate excite us and bring us joy. There are others that may be good for us but we don't like them and have no plans to deal with them. At the close of the day many reflect on the day and stop to give God thanks, but not for the whole day's experience. Many of us are like the little boy, we don't want God to get the wrong idea and give us more of what we don't like, so we only thank him for the part of the day that we enjoyed.

The word of God teaches us not to be selective in our gratitude and thanksgiving. We are encouraged to praise God for experience, for all things work according to his will and every circumstance will work to our advantage in the long run. 1 Thessalonians 5:18 says, "In everything give thanks." That means that we should lift God up constantly and praise him for everything on our plate, even the things we don't like.

As Christians, we have learned that God serves us a full platter of experiences that are meant for our good. We look at what life offers and conclude, "I won't complain." We offer thanks for everything on our plate and give God the praise as we clean our plates and revel in every experience.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes a letter of encouragement to believers about receiving food served to them from the tables of gentiles.

Paul's letter was directed at a young minister named Timothy. Timothy faced believers who were being confused by newcomers to the faith who were teaching that they should continue the legalistic requirements of the Mosaic law even to the point of refusing to eat certain foods on their plates. The Mosaic law was very rigid. It placed unusual demands on believers addressing even the most minute of concerns over rituals and ceremonies, including what menu items should be included with every meal.

In short, the orthodox Jews believed that there were some things on their plates that they were not supposed to eat. They said they were unclean. Paul's teaching was based upon the biblical truth that God made everything good and edible. In Genesis 1:29 these words are written, "And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat." So he intended plants for man's consumption. But what about meats? The word answers that question too in Genesis 9:3, "Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat for you; even as the green herb have I given you all things."

There were foods that were considered unclean while Israel was in the wilderness. This was because of sanitary laws designed to keep down diseases, not because the creatures were made unclean.

Paul made it abundantly clear that everything God created is good. If it's on the plate we may not have a taste for it, but it's all good. It may even turn our stomachs, but it's good.

What's important, Paul emphasized, is the spirit of thanksgiving that we approach as we sit down to eat. If we approach the meal with a spirit a thanks, it's all good. When we approach our meal with a spirit of thankfulness we turn even the simple act of eating into a worship, because we show thanks. Likewise when we approach our plate in life with a spirit of thankfulness we turn our entire lives into a witness as we demonstrate our thankfulness and gratitude to God.

Three ways we thank him

When we thank God for our food we do more than just bless the food we demonstrate an attitude about life.

GOD IS ALWAYS GOOD: When we thank God for our entire plate of food we acknowledge his goodness and greatness. Paul said in the text that everything God made was "good." And so it is. That's why the children's grace says, "God is great, God is good, God we thank you for our food. Amen" We thank him for whatever is on the plate because everything on it comes from a great and good God. The fact that God is good is not an issue with believers. We know that to be a fact. Just as a good parent may prepare a meal for us that has some items that are good for us even though we don't like them, we trust God's inherent goodness. We trust that if it's on my plate and God prepared it, then it's ultimately going to be good for me, even if it does not taste good to me. Psalm 107:9 says, "For he satisfieth the longing soul and filleth the hungry soul with goodness." What is on your plate that you do not like? A lost job? A defeat? A disappointment? An illness? When you see items on your plate that you don't particular care for, remember God is always good, so whatever is on the plate will ultimately work out to your good. -All the time!

WE NEED GOD ALWAYS: When we thank God for our food, we acknowledge that we need him, all of the time. The man or woman that sits down to eat without offering a word of prayer does so because they do not see the need. Those who offer prayer do so because they recognize that they have a full plate of food not because of their own good works and ability but because of the will of God. "God we thank you for this food" is an acknowledgment that what is on this plate is not of my own accord but out of thy abundance. Likewise, it is also an acknowledgment that whatever we have in life has come as a result of our own labor but the grace of God. Moreover, it is also an acknowledgment that we cannot succeed without his help and guidance. The song writer said, "I need thee oh, I need thee. Every hour I need thee. O bless me now my savior. I come to the thee!" Blessed soul says, "Lord I have a full plate in front of me. I've been blessed but I need you to help me continue. I lift up mine eyes unto the hills. My help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth!

WE ACCEPT WHAT HAS BEEN SERVED: When we thank God for the food, we acknowledge that we accept what has been served. The life of Christ was a full plate of sorts. He grew up happy and healthy. He had a profession that provided him a living and once he began his public ministry, he found popularity and a following. Despite the good things on his plate, there were a few untasty items. He never had a place to call his own. Once he mused that, "foxes have holes and birds have nests, but the son of man hath no place to lay his head." He rarely had a moment to himself.

People who wanted something from him without having anything to offer him in the way of Godly love often surrounded him. In the garden, as he prayed he saw something else on his plate. It was the prospect of the old rugged cross and crucifixion. He did not like that item on his plate. In fact, he even asked not to be served that portion. He wanted it taken off his plate, but he concluded, "Nevertheless, not my will but thy will be done." He demonstrated to us how to accept what has been served. When we offer thanks, it is a way of saying, "We accept what has been served." Showing thanks to God is a spiritual statement. It is an acknowledgment that we accept his will over our own. We accept his mission for our lives and although it may contain a bitter portion, "Thy will be done."

Compliment the Cook, Clean Your Plate

Finally, brothers and sisters we should remember that the best compliment that can be given to the person who prepares the food is an empty plate!

It doesn't matter how many times we tell the person who prepares the food how much we appreciate their food service, the real testimony is not in what we say, the real testimony is whether we clean the plate.

The cook often peeps around the door to get a glimpse of the faces of those who eat the meal she has prepared. Just seeing the smiling faces and empty plates is enough to compensate for the long hours of toil putting the meal together. If we say we are thankful for the food, but leave it on the plate untouched, the cook gets the real message!

God serves each of us a full plate of experiences, we offer thanks we should offer thanks for everything on the plate.

Job was served a full plate. On his plate there was wealth and prosperity, a large and fruitful family, good health and long life. But also on his plate were trials and temptations, death and sickness, financial loss and loneliness.

His friends encouraged him to curse God and die. But Job gave God thanks for the whole plate. He thanked him for the good times and he thanked him for the bad times and praised his name saying, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

Can't you hear Paul saying in Philippians 4:12, " I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need.

That means that he learned how to deal with the whole plate.

When believers reach this point we say, "I have learned to praise God for abundance, but at that same time I have learned to praise him when things are tough. No matter what's on the plate, I have learned to praise the Lord!"

I don't know about you but I agree with the song writer's thoughts. When I look at my plate I see some good days. I see some bad days. But all of my good days outweigh my bad days, I won't complain!

Sometimes my clouds hang low and I can hardly see the road! I ask why the question Lord, why is there so much pain?

But the Lord knows what's best for me, that's why he put it on my plate, so I say, thank you Lord!

God we thank you for this food. We thank for this plate!

Thank the Lord in the good times!

Thank the Lord in the bad times!

Thank the Lord when the sun is shining!

Thank the Lord when the rain is falling!

Thank the Lord at the noon day but also thank the Lord in the midnight hour!

Thank the Lord when you're up! Thank the Lord when you're down!

I see Jesus in the garden saying father, you gave me a full plate but I've got this last cup filled with stuff I don't like. But nevertheless, not my will but thy will be done!

He took the good with the bad. He rode into Jerusalem when the people shouted "Hosanna!" But a few days later they cried out "Crucify him!"-he took the good with the bad.

They drove nails in his hands, but he never said a mumbling word!

They drove nails into his feet, but he never said a mumbling word!

He died out on Calvary without saying a mumbling word!

Early Sunday morning, he arose from the Grave with no complaints on lips and all power in his hands!

All power in his hands!

SCRIPTURE: I will praise the name of God with a song, and will magnify him with thanksgiving. This also shall please the LORD better than an ox or bullock that hath horns and hoofs. The humble shall see this, and be glad: and your heart shall live that seek God. Psalm 69:30-32

Introduction

Have you ever heard of magic words? We've heard of all kinds of magic. We've seen or heard nearly every revelation of magic there is, including magic beans, magic carpets and magic medicines that can cure anything. When it comes to magic we have just about seen it all. But suppose I told you that there was such a thing as magic words that seem to perform wonders when spoken, would you believe me? People who utter these magic words have reaped mounds of benefits. In fact, millions of people report that these two words have made a great difference in the way they have lived their lives. What are the magic words? They are Please and thank you!

A generation ago there was a children's television program entitled "Captain Kangaroo." The broadcast featured a wacky rabbit, a moose, and Mr. Green Jeans. Among the values the broadcast attempted to teach children was the simple importance of being polite and grateful. Captain Kangaroo called "Please and thank you" the magic words of life. He said they would open doors and create future opportunities as well. These ideas did not originate with The Captain. They were taught in every home, in every school and in every learning situation. Please and thank you truly can take us a long way.

What about God? Does he respond to Captain Kangaroo's magic words? Is he impressed with "Please and Thank you?"

The biblical record is filled with instances of the great and the small demonstrating the power of Please and Thankful before God. Whether in public or in prayer, many of patriots literally begged God for blessings. We also see numerous accounts of the biblical patriots returning to give thanks to God in a variety of ways.

Whether it's in our homes or on our knees before God, "Please and Thank You" have proven themselves to be magical words that make things happen in our relationships among men and before God.

As Christians, we have found that God responds to our pleas and to our words and acts of thanks. That's why we continually ask him for the desires of our heart and then give him thanks when he responds.

Exposition

This Psalm focuses on David as he renewed his commitment to praise God and thank him in a way that will please him.

The Mosaic law spelled out an elaborate ritual in which the people were to show their thanks to God. Nothing was left to chance. Neither was anything spontaneous. It was all spelled out in the law. Special days were set aside called "Sabbaths" in which they were to praise God in a predefined way. They all said the same words. They all brought the same sacrifices. In so doing, the Mosaic law prescribed that God would be pleased with their demonstrations of gratitude. An Old Testament believer could guarantee that God would be pleased by following the formula spelled out in the Torah.

However, in this Psalm David is pledging to go beyond the requirements of the law indicated by his reference to Oxen and Bullocks in Verse 31. He wanted to please God by showing real thanks for all of his mercies.

David spent a considerable amount of time trying to figure out how to please God. In Psalm 116:12 he asked the question, "What shall I render unto God for all his benefits toward me? He answered his own question by saying he would take the cup of salvation, call upon the name of the Lord and pay his vows. Doing these three things was what David called "Thanksgiving." Praise, devotion and vows were essential parts of any act of thanksgiving according the Psalm 116.

Thus in Psalm 69:30 when David says I will "magnify him with thanksgiving" he is talking about giving God verbal praise but also includes in his Thanksgiving definition, devotion, as represented by the cup of salvation, and the payment of vows made.

Such praise is based on words, personal devotion and deeds. Such praise magnifies God and makes him bigger and grander in the eyes of unbelievers.

In addition, saying thanks "Pleases" God. The Hebrew word translated "please" is "yatab" which has a double meaning. In the first sense "yatab" means to glad, joyful and satisfied. This context refers to the recipient of an action, who is God. The second meaning is "to be well placed" which refers to the person performing an action. Together the meanings in the context of this Psalm make a dramatic statement, "when I offer real thanks for God's mercies, I make God glad and joyful and place myself well with him."

Thus, David made a very clear point, if we aim to please God in all that we say and do, he will reciprocate and place us well in his grace.

Pleas

This text suggest another truth, "To really say please, there must be some pleas." The word please itself is nothing without the word "pleas." When we say "please" we are actually pleading for help and assistance. Please is not a demand. Please is not a command or an order. A person who says “please” is one who humbles himself and admits that he stands in the need of something that he cannot provide for himself.

A plea is a request. It is a prayer. The man who prays humbles himself before an almighty God. He asks for something, knowing that he is not entitle to have it, but asks out of mercy and grace.

When Naaman was told by the prophet to go and wash himself seven times in muddy water at first he resisted. He considered himself a nobleman and a man of high station. He almost lost a blessing because he could not humble himself and do the will of God. The Rich Young Ruler came to Christ and asked, “What must I do to be saved?” When he was told that he had to sell all he had and take up his cross, he was not willing to make such a sacrifice. He felt that he was worthy of salvation because he had kept the law since his birth. He left with receiving the blessing because he could not humble himself.

To humble ourselves before God is to offer him a plea. It’s a way of saying “Please!”

When we humble ourselves before him we say “Bless me..please!” “Heal me, please!” “Answer my request...please!”

Naaman found out that when you humble yourself before God, even leprosy can be healed.. if you say please!

Hezekiah found out that even if you facing death that you can be given a new extension on life, if you humble yourself.. and say please!

Please

While it is true that it takes some “pleas” to say Please, it is also true that it takes some deeds to really please.

David told us that to please God there must be three types of deeds or actions that will make him happy. We must praise and speak of him regularly, live a life representative of the cup of salvation, and pay our vows. Without these three deeds, we cannot please God.

Many people spend most of their time trying to please men rather than God. We want men to praise us as successful. We want men to salute us and give us credit. We want Oscars and Grammies, Tonies and Super Bowl Rings. We want the praises of men so badly that it becomes the full focal point of our lives. To get the approval of men we begin to respond to men and to obey them. Yet the word of God teaches us that we, “out to obey God rather than man.” We should want to please God rather than others.

We please God and make him happy when we worship him and testify of his goodness to others.

We please God and make him happy when we live a life that is sanctified and devoted to him.

We also please God and make him happy when we do whatever we have promised him we would do.

Many of us have made many promises to God. In moments of distress or trouble we promises to God. When we keep those promises to him, he is pleased.

Pleasing Place

It is also important to note that when we place ourselves so that we can please God, he places us in pleasing situations!

Remember the word David used, "Yatab." When you please God you make him happy but that also means that if you please God, he'll put you in a pleasing situation.

If you still don't know what that means look at it this way:

When you sit down today to a pleasant meal, that's "Yatab," you pleased God and he put you in a pleasing situation!

When you drive your automobile that gets you to your destination in one piece that's "Yatab," you pleased God and he put you in a pleasant situation.

When you put on your favorite suit of close that's "Yatab" you pleased God and he put you in a pleasing situation!

Malachi told Israel that if they would simply obey God and keep their vows that he would open up the windows of heaven and shower down so many blessings that they would not be able to handle them all.

A widow woman was obedient to God and found that her obedience pleased God and not matter how many times she went to her barrel it never ran dry. She pleased hem and he put her in a pleasing situation.

I don't know about you but I believe there is someone here today that is in a much more pleasing situation than you were just a few years ago.

Sometimes it may not seem like it at the moment, but if we please God he will put us in a better situation.

Daniel pleased God by continuing to pray. He was thrown into lion's den, but when it was all over, God raised him up to more pleasing situation.

Job pleased God by continuing to have faith. He endured considerable loss, but when it was all over, God raised him to a more pleasing situation!

The Three Hebrew Boys pleased God by remaining faithful to him, but not before they went to the fiery furnace. But when it was all over, he put them in a more pleasing situation.

Because God is so good. Because God has blessed us. That's why believers have learned the importance of saying thank you with their mouths; thank you with their consecrated lives and thank you with their service.

He didn't have to do it but he did!
He didn't have to bless us but he did!
He didn't have to help us but he did!
He didn't have die out on Calvary but he did!
But Early Sunday morning he arose up from the grave with all power in his hands!
Thank You!
Thank You Lord!

One Moment In Time

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE:For his anger endureth but a moment; in his favour is life: weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. Psalm 30:5; And the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, shewed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. Luke 4:5;For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. 2 Corinthians 4:17;In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. 1 Corinthians 15:52

Introduction

Have you ever had a special moment in your life that you wish you could save forever? Every life has thousands of special moments that pass by so quickly that we wish we could catch them and freeze them for all time. What was your special moment? The look on your face after a victory? The birth of your child? The painful look of defeat or failure? When we experience great high's and great lows of emotion in an unusual fashion those are moments to remember. The Eastman Kodak Film Company coin a phrase a few years ago describing such moments as "Kodak" moments, because they are moments that defined who we were and how we felt at a particular point in our lives.

As holidays approach there will be many Kodak moments. We will take photographs either digitally or on film of special moments that may include weddings, teas, reunions, and family celebrations. They are happy moments that we want to remember all of our lives. Of course Kodak hopes that everyone will preserve their special moment with a Kodak product.

Life consists of many great moments that define who we are and where we are going. In a moment, a simple ordinary person can be transformed into a national hero.

In a moment the mundane can become extraordinary.

In a moment, a failing child can awaken into a fireball of success.

In a moment, what seems to be a failure can turn into a success.

A few years ago Whitney Houston sang a song entitled "One moment in time." The lyrics defined a special moment:

To taste the sweet, I faced the pain
I rise and fall, yet through it all this much remains
I was One moment in time
When I'm more than I thought I could be

When all of my dreams are a heart beat away
And the answers are all up to me
Give me one moment in time
When I'm racing with destiny
Then in that one moment of time
I will feel, I will feel eternity

Life presents each of us with a multitude of magic moments, windows of opportunity to do or say something that will significantly make a difference. Teachers call such times, "teachable moments." A teachable moment is the time when a student is focused and receptive to an idea or concept. It's a magic moment when the chemistry between teacher and student is just right and learning can be best afforded. There are also "Lovable moments" those times when even the hardest, coldest, rudest, most repugnant person seems accessible and able to give and receive friendship.

Life is also filled with defining moments. These are the moments in which we make decisions that define our direction for years to come. The day we graduate from high school is a defining moment. Yet, the day we decided to drop out of school and never return was also a defining moment that determines our future. The day we ask someone to marry us and the day that we accept, is a defining moment. That decision will change the course of our lives forever.

When God deals with us, he uses the entire package of moments as he relates to us. There are teachable moments, in which he teaches us what is important in life. There are lovable moments, when he shows us the depth of his love for us. There are defining moments when he prompts us to choose between his love and that of the world.

As Christians, we have come to recognize that every moment that God gives us is precious and should be used wisely. We have one life to live and each moment should be lived as if we only had one moment in time. One poet said:

"I only have one minute with sixty seconds in it
Forced upon me, didn't seek it, didn't choose it
But it's up to me to use it, give account if I abuse it
Yes, it is only just a minute but eternity is in it"

Time In The Bible

There is a unique note about the way the length of life is measured in the Bible. With only a few exceptions, when the scripture refers to time as it relates to God the reference is to "years." However, when the reference is made to man it is usually referred to in "days." Thus, Job 10:5 says, Are thy days as the days of man? Are thy years as man's days?" Then Exodus 20:12 says, "Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." The point is clear, when it comes to time, God has years that reach into infinity but when it comes to mankind, we only have a short period of time, measured in days.

Our days are but moments. We don't have many of them so we must learn what God wants us to learn from them.

Look at four types of moments that come into every life:

Difficult Moments (Psalm 30:5)

For his anger endureth but a moment; in his favour is life: weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. Psalm 30:5

No life is complete without some difficult moments. At the time that difficult moments appear they seem to last forever. When David, mused about this fact of life in Psalm 30:5 he concluded that difficulties, which he described as God's anger only lasts a moment. It suggests that the wrath of God is not against the person of a believer but against unholy actions. Difficulties are not permanent. They will not last always.

The Old Warriors understood this principle when they wrote the song that says, "I'm so glad that trouble don't last always."

Are you having a difficult moment? It is not a condemnation. It is not a condition that will last forever. Financial difficulties, family problems, personal motivation, are all difficult moments. Even sadness and grief that bring us to tears are not permanent situations. In the quiet corridors of your mind say, "This too shall pass." It is a reminder that no matter what the frustration of the present, it will only last a moment and will pass.

Tempting Moments (Luke 4:5)

And the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, shewed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. Luke 4:5

Among the most frustrating times in our lives are those times when we flirt with temptation. Temptation comes when we have both the capacity and opportunity to do something that everything human in us says we should do but everything that we know is right tells us that we should not.

We are not tempted by the things we do not like or want. We are tempted by those things which we desire and would like to have but should not have.

That's what happened when Jesus was about to begin his public ministry. The devil carried him into a high place in the desert and prompted him to consider all the ways that he could use his Godly presence for himself. He considered turning stones into bread, and jumping from a mountain side to demonstrate that angels would catch him before he hit the bottom. In Luke 4:5 he was carried to a high mountain where the devil showed him all of the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. He could have had it all if he chose to worship him.

It was a tempting moment. He could have had riches, power, fame, invincibility, all in a single moment; and the man inside wanted all of those things. Jesus rebuked Satan and chose to serve God just as quickly as the opportunity presented itself.

Have you had a tempting moment? Are you faced with one right now? Do the opportunities in front of you appeal to your self interests although they may take you further from the Godly ideal for your life?

The tempting moment is "one moment in time" but the decision made can change the course of your life forever. One song writer said, "Yield not to temptation, for yielding is sin." The decision to yield or not to yield is made in a single moment, but its effects last a lifetime.

Afflicting Moments (2 Cor 4:17)

For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. 2 Corinthians 4:17

Afflictions rarely seem like moments to us. They seem like eternities. Physical afflictions, mental afflictions, and emotional afflictions can be extremely troublesome both for the persons who have them and for those who love them. A long term illness is more than an difficulty, it is an affliction. Yet, the word of God considers even such conditions "light" because they are not outside of the bounds of God to handle.

A woman who had an issue of blood for 12 years found Jesus in a crowd and concluded that if she could just touch the hem of his garment that her affliction of 12 years would be relieved. A man sitting by the pool waiting to be healed for 38 long years had an affliction that seemed beyond reach, until he met Jesus. These instances provide hope to those who deal with long term illnesses that they are not beyond God's power. They pronounce the word of faith that those who have been diagnosed as beyond recovery are not beyond God's power!

While afflictions can be reversed by God there are times, when for God's own purposes he chooses not to reverse an affliction. Paul was one of God's greatest ambassadors who had an affliction that Paul called a "thorn in his flesh." It crippled his efforts to work for the kingdom, slowed his pace and troubled him. Three times Paul prayed to God for relief from his affliction and his answer was always the same as he received in 2 Cor 12:9, "My grace is sufficient for thee."

When you have prayed that same prayer and receive that same answer, then take God's words to be true that his "grace" is sufficient. Paul wrote the Corinthians in 2 Corinthians 4:17 and said, such afflictions are "light" and last but a moment when we compare them to glory that God is preparing for us in the future.

If you are a care giver, frustrated over the weight of the affliction of a loved one, God says "My grace is sufficient."

Transforming Moments (1 Cor 15:52)

I*n a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. 1 Corinthians 15:52*

Just as there are joyous moments that come at the end of difficult moments.

Just as there are tempting moments and afflicting moments, there are also some transforming moments, in which we transform from what we once were to what we will be.

A transforming moment is one moment in time when our entire view about life is changed from what it once was to what is should be. The prodigal son wasted his substance in riotous living in a far country. But as he prepared to slop the hogs in pig sty, with no food to eat and no place to call his own, he had a transforming moment. He said, "I will arise and go to my father and say father I have sinned against heaven and against thee." It was a moment of decision that changed his life forever.

When Saul traveled down the road to Damascus he was intent on persecuting the church and jailing every person that called himself a Christian. However, on the Damascus Road, he had a transforming moment. He saw a light and he heard a voice that challenged him to turn his life around and live for Christ.

Jonah tried to take a ship traveling in a direction opposite from where God wanted him to go. It wasn't until he had a transforming moment in the belly of a great fish that he decided to do what God wanted him to do and go where God wanted him to go.

Every child of God has experienced his own transforming moment. It's the moment when you decided to put down the old life and to pick up a new life!

Somebody here knows what it's like to begin the weekend with a clear head and a big paycheck, but to party so hard over the weekend that you wake up Monday morning with a hangover in your head and no money in your pocket! That kept going each weekend until their reached a transforming moment. In one moment of time they came to the conclusion that something had to change!

Somebody here knows what it's like to get frustrated with school and quit resolving to make it without an education, but just to be hood rich with everything in your mama's name! But in one moment in time, somebody decided that I've got do better. I've got to turn my life around!

When you reach a transforming moment, that's when you realize that it is better to:

-Live on the right side than to die on the wrong side!

-Stand on God's side than the fall with the devil!

-Walk around in heaven than to ride around in hell!

When we reach a transforming moment that's when we decide that "I need thee every hour, oh bless me now my savior, I come to thee!"

Paul said in 1 Corinthians 15:52 that one of these old days the trumpet of God will sound and the dead in Christ shall rise and then those of us who have been:

-Struggling with tough and difficult moments trying to make ends meet!

-Climbing up the rough side of the mountain!

-Crying briny tears in the midnight hour

...shall be transformed in one moment of time and caught up to be with the Lord!

That's why Jesus came down here; carried an old rugged cross, died out on Calvary and Early Sunday morning arose from the grave!

Because one of these old days he's coming back again, in one moment of time...and we'll be caught up!

Caught up!

Caught up to meet him in the air!

When Shiloh Comes

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the New Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE: The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be. Genesis 49:10

Introduction

As a special day gets closer, do you get excited? When special days come many people are filled with the joy and excitement of anticipation. It makes us anxious and we can't sleep at night. Sometimes even in the day, we dream about it. Is it an engagement? A Wedding? Is it the return of a loved one? Graduation Day? A Birthday? Christmas? When that special day gets closer it seems as if the days get longer, the clock ticks slower and the pages on the calendar never turn. "I can't wait" is the phrase we use! We are bursting with excitement.

Sometimes it's hard to wait, especially if you have been delaying something important for a long time. Consider the two boys who sat at the table and argued over which of them would get the first pancake their mother would make. She made the best pancakes in the world and they could not wait. The older brother was five years old and the younger brother was four. The older brother felt he should eat the pancakes first because he was the oldest. He always insisted that the oldest should be first. The two of the argued back and forth until the mother seized the moment and tried to use it for a perfect teaching example. "If Jesus were here" said the mother, "He would say, my brother can go first because I am my brother's keeper. I can wait." The two boys looked at their mother with a blank look, then the older one quickly stood and said, "Mother, you are right. I shouldn't insist on being first all of the time. Today my little brother can be Jesus..cause I sho can't wait!"

One of the hardest things about Christmas is waiting. We can't wait! But it's not always Christmas, it's hard to wait for many things that we want. We do have the joy of knowing that when it finally comes it will be well worth the wait.

Isaiah said that they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength. They shall mount up on wings as eagles. They shall run and not faint. Waiting is not easy, especially when we think about how great it will be when it comes.

As Christians, we are especially excited about the coming of the Christ Child. His arrival on the earth was a sign of renewed hope and faith. As we celebrate the anniversary of his coming 20 centuries ago, it stirs renew hope and about present conditions. Even now we look past the difficulties of our present times to that great time, when "Shiloh Comes."

Exposition

This text focuses on Jacob as he predicts the coming of the Savior.

Jacob was the last of a triumvirate of patriarchs that included his father Isaac; and his grandfather Abraham. Jacob, the last of the three, lived a long and fruitful life that included 12 sons whose descendants became known as The Children of Israel. In the closing days of his life, Jacob called his sons together and talked with them about the immediate and distant future. His words came both as blessings and pronouncements of doom. As he spoke about each of his sons individually, he pronounced a great blessing on Judah.

Jacob prophesied that the leadership of the families would stem from the tribe of Judah for generations. Specifically, he said the scepter or the symbol of power would remain with them "until Shiloh comes." Shiloh was the name given to the one who would come from God to bring complete deliverance, freedom and hope to the people.

Over the years, "until Shiloh comes" has grown to be a statement of hope among believers who looked for encouragement when everything around them seemed hopeless.

When Jesus was born in Bethlehem there was joy on earth because even the stars in the sky recognized that it was time for Shiloh to come.

There was a general expectation that there would be peace on earth when Shiloh comes.

There was a feeling that goodwill would exist among men when Shiloh comes. Because of Jacob's words there was a optimistic spirit that everything will be all right when Shiloh comes.

John, in the Revelation, said in the Revelation that when Shiloh comes the Messiah will be the Lion of Judah, the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. Since the Lion is the King of beasts, John saw the Messiah as the king of king rising out of the family of Judah. Thus, he saw the Messiah's triumphant return in the second advent as the "Lion of Judah" strong and bold.

There were obviously great expectations about changes in personal and world conditions, "when Shiloh comes."

A Word from God

The name "Shiloh" has many meanings, one of them is "Message from God." That is what the world sought, a message from God. As the Old Testament closed and the New Testament opened 490 years had passed without hearing a word from God. There were no prophets. There were pronouncements. No encouragements or condemnations. There was 490 years of silence.

But when "Shiloh" came, the silence was broken. Jesus was both the message and the messenger. John said, “In the beginning was the word and the word was with God and the word was God.” When the word became flesh the message became the messenger.

True believers can’t go long with developing a hunger for the Word of God. There are many church members who can belong to a church and be absent from worship, bible study and learning situations, for long periods of times. They like the man who complained that the preacher at his church only has two subjects. “Every time I come to church he always preaching on the same thing. It’s either the birth of Christ or the resurrection of Christ, it’s time for him to get something new!” Christmas and Easter that’s good enough for some and too much for others. But there is something on the inside of true believer that pushes them to want to hear a Word from God. They want read the Word of God, worship in public, watch on television, and listen to tapes. They want to hear a word from the Lord!

As families make decisions about marriage, careers, children, business opportunities, morality and many other particulars, it is important that they seek the direction from God. Old Testaments Kings rarely went into battle without seeking a word from God. One King, Saul, wanted to hear from God so badly that he tried to conjure up the spirit of a dead prophet, just to hear a word from God.

They want to hear a word because they know that “When Shiloh comes”; when they hear a word from God they will have direction!

When Shiloh comes they can be sure about their decisions!

When Shiloh comes their doubts can be resolved!

When Shiloh comes God will move on the altar of the spirit and motivate them in a way that no other can!

It all happens “when Shiloh comes!

At Peace With God

Jacob gave the pronouncements of this text 1700 years before the birth of Christ. The words, “when Shiloh” comes meant a word from God but they also referred to one who would make peace between God and man. Jacob’s words were prophetic in that they warned him of a time when the people would not be at peace with God.

These words came before the deliverance from Egypt, the rebellions against God in the wilderness, the rejection of God in the Promised Land, and the acceptance of false God’s under the kings. All of these were instances in which the people were doing well, then turned their backs on the very relationship with God that made them prosper and broke the peace between themselves and God.

In a more personal way, we too have broken the peace with God. In our prosperity, there are many of us who have broken the peace with God. In our poverty we prayed hard for a crust of bread to eat and a corner to sleep in. Yet, one step away from extreme poverty, many have broken the peace with God and pulled away from the very qualities that made them successful.

A man passed along a road side and noticed a beautiful flower. He pulled it up from the ground, placed it in a vase and placed it high on a mantel in his home. For a few days that flower appeared the same, but soon it began to wither around the edges. He wondered why? Then it dawned on him that what made the flower so beautiful was they way it was being fed. He placed it in a higher place but he also removed it from its fertile ground. So it is, with the man who begins an undertaking at peace with God but removes himself in search of a piece of the rock. He gets a piece of the rock but is not at "peace with the rock" and begins to wither.

Isaiah 9:6 describes Christ as the "Prince of Peace" because he and he alone could help to restore the peace between mankind and God. 1 Timothy 2:5 says it clearly "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus" Paul tried to explain it to the Romans in Romans 5:1 when he said, "There being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

When "Shiloh"-the sense of being at peace with God, comes there is an amazing change in our attitudes about life.

When Shiloh comes, that which once disturbed us, doesn't seem to bother us anymore!

When Shiloh comes, that which once seemed important is no longer germane to our quality of life.

When Shiloh comes, storms may rise and winds may blow, but our anchor holds!

When Shiloh comes, we can say triumphantly, despite what happens in the world, "It is well with my soul."

Help from God

Jacob's words must have sounded like a riddle to his sons as he said "until Shiloh comes." It was the first time in the bible that the word "Shiloh" had been spoken. Not only did Shiloh mean a word from God, and at peace with God, but it also meant, receiving help or deliverance from God.

Jacob's family spent generations trying to figure out the identity of the "deliverer."

Many felt that Moses was "Shiloh" because he performed miracles and led the people out of slavery. But Moses was not "Shiloh."

There were some who believed that Joshua was "Shiloh" because he too performed miracles and led them across the River Jordan.

From Elijah to Elisha, from Isaiah to Jeremiah, the people have tried to make one great personality or another the promised "Shiloh" who would be a help to the people and deliver them in times of trouble.

But it soon became obvious that there was only one person who could be "Shiloh"

Isaiah 19:20 says, "and he shall send them a savior, and a great one, and he deliver them!"

It doesn't take a great bible scholar to recognize the identity of Shiloh for in Matthew 1:21 an Angel spoke toMary and Joseph and told them they should name their son "Jesus" "For he shall save his people from their sins."

At His birth, the angels declared Jesus to be the Saviour "For unto you is born this day in the City of David a SAVIOUR, who is Christ the Lord." (Luke 2:11)

Shiloh is a savior!

Shiloh is a deliverer!

Shiloh is help in times of trouble!

As I close I'm reminded of the widowed school teacher who fell on bad times and was about to lose her home. She prayed to God and asked him to make a way. After her prayer she looked through an old scrapbook and her eyes fell on an old student of hers who gave her plenty of trouble because he always made trouble and was always late. She found his phone number and called him and when he found out that she was about to lose her house he promised to come to her side. A few days later the old teacher gathered her papers and prepared to go to meet her mortgage holder. She had a smile on her face that puzzled people who wanted to know why she smiled when she was about to lose her home. She only said, "My help is on the way."

As the old lady sat with her mortgager she continued to smile even though she didn't have a dime in her pocket. All she had to say to her agent was "my help is on the way." Just then her student came in the meeting with a check in his hands and paid off her note. With a smile on her face she said, "It took you thirty years to learn my lesson, but you finally learned how to show up on time!"

I don't know about you but I've found out, that "he may not come when you want him to but...when Shiloh comes, he's always on time!"

Good things start to happen when Shiloh comes. When Shiloh comes...

—People who were at the WORST start doing their best!

—People who were living in SIN start striving for HOLINESS!

—Hearts filled with sadness suddenly become filled with gladness!

—Those who walked in the dark, discover the marvelous light!

—Those who agonize over defeat, discover the thrill of victory!

—Those whose lives were out of tune, discover a new found harmony!

—Those who have fallen down, learn how to get back up again!

—Those who were crying, learn how to wipe their tears away!

Who is this man they call "Shiloh?"

Who is this man they call the Prince of Peace, Wonderful Counselor! Lord of Lord and King of Kings!

His name is Jesus, my rock in a weary land!

His name is Jesus, my shelter in a time of storm!

His name is Jesus, who died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

There are just a few more risings and fallings!

There are just a few more briny tears, but he's coming back again!

When Shiloh comes..crying days will be over!

When Shiloh comes....every mountain will be made low!

When Shiloh comes..every valley shall be exalted!

When Shiloh comes...

Please come home for Christmas

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 15, 2002

SCRIPTURE:"And so it was that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn." Luke 2:6-7.

Introduction

How do you know it's Christmas? It seems to come earlier every year! There was a time that the Christmas season began the day after Thanksgiving. We sensed we were in the Christmas season because instantly decorations and lighting sprouted everywhere. Christmas commercials began to air on television and we started seeing pictures of the man in the red suit, flying reindeer and nativity scenes. All that begins long before Thanksgiving in modern times, sometimes as early as late October. In many African-American communities, we know it's Christmas when grandmother or grandpa pulls out an old dusty copy of a song from the 1940's called "Please come home for Christmas."

The three bells that chime at its beginning generally signal that it's Christmas time in African-America. While other communities sing about, "Chestnuts roasting on an open fire" or "I'm dreaming of a white Christmas" the African-American community made its own contribution in the 1940's when Charles Brown and Gene Redd wrote the lyrics to "Please Come Home For Christmas."

Remember them?

Bells will be ringing the glad, glad news
Oh, what a Christmas to end the blues
My baby's gone, I have no friends
To wish me greetings, ooh, once again
Choirs will be singing Silent Night
Christmas carols by candlelight
Please come home for Christmas
Please come home for Christmas
If not for Christmas, by New Year's night

Why do families come home for Christmas? Some families come together from far and near to be together on Christmas day. It is the fellowship and reunion that draws them. It is such a strong draw that they often travel hundreds of miles to share the family setting one more time. They make the trek home, because Charles Brown says, Christmas is "the time of year to be with the one you love."

We come home to old family traditions that have meaning and significance. Some families gather at the main house and sing and pray on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day. For some, it's a tradition to rattle the pots and pans for the biggest meal of the year with everyone in the kitchen at the same time. Decorating the tree and wrapping presents is a ritual in many families. Reading the Christmas story as a family and saying a prayer of thanks before tearing open presents on Christmas day is a tradition in other homes.

We come home for Christmas in search of stability. In a world that changes so fast, we come home looking for that sense of stability and support that fed us and inspired us to continue despite our frustrations. Some come home to make amends. We come home to share a nostalgic moment with family and friends and to remember the good times. "It's the time to be with the one you love."

The best place to spend Christmas is at home. That doesn't mean your house, but where your heart is. That's why so many people travel thousands of miles at Christmas, to be where their hearts are. They want to be somewhere you feel comfortable, where you can be who you really are. Where you love and are loved in return. Home may not be as comfortable as the place you now live. The city may not be as fast paced as the one you see every day. In fact, mama's house may not be as plush as your apartment or condo, but wherever mama and papa and family lay their heads, under any circumstance, it is home. No wonder Charles Brown's simple song has survived for over 50 years; it says what we say to a distant love one, "Come Home for Christmas."

Two millenniums ago God did a strange thing. Instead of staying home in heaven, he decided to leave the comforts of his heavenly home to an uncomfortable, cold and ungrateful world. He left the warm radiance of heaven and braved the chill of the silent night to be among the people he loved. His heart was with the people so he came to make even a manger in Bethlehem a place to call home.

Damien Spikereit of the Berean Christian Church relates the story of a peculiar tradition in his family at Christmas. Every year his family put up a Christmas tree, strung lights and decorated the trees with tinsel and candy canes. At the close of the tree decorating ritual, his parents would take out a manger scene that had been in the family for generations. It was a typical scene with Mary and Joseph, wise men, shepherds and everyone standing around. His parents then placed the manger scene under the tree. It began when he was a child, but he noticed that every year before Christmas the manger was always empty. But on Christmas morning as the presents were opened and everyone hugged each other, he always noticed that the baby Jesus was in the manger! No one saw him put there. No one knows when, but he was there.

When love comes, Jesus comes and the manger is never empty.

As believers, we celebrate the coming of the Christ child into a world filled with animosity and hate, war and rumors of wars. We celebrate because when the one we love comes home, Jesus comes home and the manger is never empty.

Exposition

This text focuses on the details of Jesus' arrival on earth after a long journey to earth.

The book of Matthew details a lengthy genealogy that tells us the extent of the biological journey that proceeded through generations as he tracked the journey of Christ from heaven to this world. It is history that reveals a myriad of peoples, nationalities and races. It is a path that his reached into palaces and touched even the poorest of places. It included kings such as David and dark colored women like Ruth. It included saintly women like Mary and the not so saintly women like Rahab.

When the Book of Luke opens Christ's journey to this world after proceeding for hundreds of years was about to culminate. It begins with a familiar scene of an angel announcing to Mary and to Joseph that "The Holy Spirit has placed a child in you, and not just any child, He is the Son of God, the Messiah."

When Mary and Joseph accepted their surrogate status, Mary instantly becomes a surrogate mother. Joseph assumed the awesome task of serving as stepfather to the Son of God. As Mary and Joseph traveled to Bethlehem to be taxed, the time came for the child to be born. His arrival was not without notice. Shepherds in the field were told by angels of the event. Others soon heard too. When the child was born he was wrapped in swaddling clothes and laid in a manger because there was no room for him in the inn.

The journey Jesus made that is recorded in Luke details his arrival in the home of Mary and Joseph. The rest of the New Testament details the additional stops he made enroute to the home of every believer.

The Days were accomplished

Christ's journey from heaven to earth took centuries to unfold but by the time of this text it was down to a matter of days. When the days were finally accomplished, It was the day God would begin his mighty works among men.

Nothing happens before its time. Ecclesiastes 3 tells us that there is a time and a season for everything, but nothing happens before its time. In youth, we are impatient and want the privileges of adult life without the maturity to handle the responsibilities. This was the case with the prodigal son, who could not wait for his inheritance. He wanted it quickly and instantly. He wanted it long before he was ready to handle what he would receive Adults often hurry God. We can't wait for him to move. We pray and ask him for a blessing but then take matters into our own hand when God doesn't move fast enough for us. We ask him for a mate, then grab the first pretty looking thing that comes along, before God has a chance to move. Sera found this to be true. God promised she and her husband Abraham that they would have a child. Years passed and she was well passed the normal child bearing age. She tried to arrange for her husband to have a child by a surrogate because it appeared that God moved too slow. Then she heard the words, "Is there anything too hard for God to do?"

Galatians 4:4 tells us that when, " the fullness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law." In essence, when the time was right, God made his move.

In our lives today, we must remember that when God is ready, he will act!

When the days are accomplished, the prayer that we have prayed will receive an answer!

When the days are accomplished, the answer we seek will be delivered!

When the days are accomplished, the opportunity we seek will present itself!

She Brought Forth

In Bethlehem Mary delivered the baby Jesus in a stable. The fact that "she brought forth" is significant to us because in a greater sense when Jesus comes in any life he inspires, motivates and pushes us to "bring forth."

There have been many people in life who have testified that they would have given up on their dreams and aspirations but the power of God within them encouraged them to "bring forth." The only reason we would need to "bring forth" something is because it is hidden and latent. We bring forth that which is within us already but has not been realized. We bring forth potential.

When Jesus comes into our lives he helps us to bring forth our potential. He brings forth the courage that we need to tackle tough situations and difficult times. Hebrews 13:6 says, "So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me." When Jesus comes there is a spirit of boldness that envelops every believer. We know that it can be done. We start to believe that all things are possible and the defeat leaves us. All of that happens when Jesus comes.

In the middle of adverse circumstances, she brought forth.

In the middle of tough times and bad living arrangements, she brought forth!

In the middle of whispers and stares from those who were turned off by their relationship, she brought forth!

In the middle of their poverty, she brought forth!

And when Jesus comes, we too can boldly bring forth that which is within.

We should Make room

Mary and Joseph went into Bethlehem and resorted to a manger, which was actually sort of a cave, behind an inn because when they knocked on the door of inn, they learned that there was no room. It was occupied. It was a busy season. They were not the only travelers and all of the rooms had been taken. They were given a secondary accommodation because the main place was occupied.

Often today Jesus knocks at our door but we are too busy to let him in. Revelation 3:20 gives notice, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." How does he knock? Does he appear in person and ring our doorbell or tap on the door?

Usually he calls us gently to serve him through serving others, while many respond; there are others who have no room. Sometimes he calls us to commune with him in prayer, public worship and private prayer time. While many hear his knock and open to him there are others who respond, there is "no room, no time, no way possible to do what he wants because their schedules are filled." In this sense, there are many today that have no room for the savior and relegate him to second place on their agenda while desiring to be first place on his.

We have an advantage that the Innkeeper did not have. Had he known that Mary and Joseph were bringing into his humble business the "King of Kings" he would have made room, even given them his own bed. Had he known that the Lord of Lords would be making history at his establishment he would have made it his business to make room for him. Today, we know who Jesus is and should take advantage of knowing who knocks, and always make room for him.

Our resolve should be similar to that of the prophet Isaiah who said, "If the Lord needs somebody, here am I send me."

Don't Have Christmas Without Jesus

Finally brothers and sisters, we should mindful of the fact that while it is perfectly acceptable to join in the festivities surrounding Christmas; we don't want to come home to a Christmas without Jesus!

It is fine to have a beautiful Christmas tree that is decorated with pretty lights and candy cane, but we don't want to have Christmas without Jesus!

It is exciting to have tables full of food and the best cakes and pies in the world, but we don't want to have Christmas without Jesus!

It is an enriching experience to come home to give and exchange gifts and expressions of love, but we don't want to have Christmas without Jesus!

Christmas without Jesus is like a brand new car without gas!

Christmas without Jesus is like a cake made without sugar!

Christmas without Jesus is like a new toy but the batteries are not included!

Christmas without Jesus is like a cell phone with no minutes, a computer with no internet connection, and a copy machine with no paper!

Christmas without Jesus is like a coffeepot with no coffee, a bank account with nothing in it; and a magazine with empty pages!

No wonder the prayer of every Christian is "Please come home for Christmas" for without Jesus; there is no reason for the season!

When Jesus comes in your home, miraculous things start to happen.

We say, "Please come home for Christmas because we know that when he comes he will:

-Comfort us in our sorrow; Assure us in our difficulties!

-Strengthen us in our weakness; encourage us in our trials!

-Direct us in our decisions; Help us in our duties!

-Anoint us in our ministries; defend us in our battles!

On his way to my life, he stopped down in Bethlehem and made a stop in Nazareth!

He stopped by a place called Calvary and spent three nights in a grave!

On his way to my life, he died but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

One of these days he's coming back again!

I don't know about you, but I'll be somewhere listening for my name!

I want to ready when Jesus comes!

Last Minute Gifts

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 22, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy. And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh." Matthew 2:9-11

Introduction

Have you ever waited to the last minute to purchase a gift only to find out that what you wanted to give is gone? While many people have nearly completed their Christmas shopping, there are others that have not begun. They wait until the last minute then rush through the stores trying to find the perfect gift for a friend or loved one, only to be told that it is out of stock.

Sometimes the frustration of last minute gifts can get on your nerves. Consider the man who had an in-law that really irritated him every Christmas. The woman was a real pest, badgering him repeatedly about getting her a gift. As Christmas approached, with one shopping day left he couldn't find anything she didn't have. She called nearly every hour to remind him not to forget her present. In frustration, he called up his friend at the funeral home and arranged to buy her a funeral plot. On Christmas morning the in-law opened the envelope and saw the gift certificate for a funeral plot. She was pleased because it was a valuable gift. She hugged her relative with a big hug. However, the next year at Christmas she started doing the same thing. Every day she called reminding him about her gift. On Christmas morning however, she did not get a gift from him. Angry she called him and wanted to know why she didn't get a gift. The man said, "Why should I get you a new gift this year, you haven't used the one I gave you last year!"

One of the most frustrating things is to brave the trauma of last minute shopping to buy a gift for someone, only to find out that they never use it.

That may be the way God feels sometimes. The bible tells us that God loved the world so much that he sent his only begotten son to offer salvation. In the past he sent Moses, Elijah, Samuel and many other great prophets, all with a message of reconciliation. When he ran out of remedies to resolve the issues of the world, as a last resort, he sent his Son to the world to bring the gift of eternal life. Yet despite the trouble he went through to get the gift to us, many people have never used what he sent.

When Christ came he was given gifts, but as he left this earth, he breathed the Holy Ghost upon the world and with it came an astonishing array of gifts that, when used, will change the lives of all who are touched by them.

As Christians, we know the importance of giving and receiving gifts. It is important that we use the gifts he gives us so that we can prepare our hearts to receive the new gifts he has in store for us in the years to come.

Exposition

This text focuses on the gifts brought by the magi to the Christ Child.

Much ado has been made about these men from the East who came to worship the Christ Child.

Officially, the wise men are known as "Magi" or astrological wise men. They studied the stars and claimed to be experts in interpreting dreams and other magical arts. The wise men in this text saw the star in heaven that indicated the birth place of Christ. They chose to follow it although the journey would take them outside of their own land. Most theologians believe that the wise men in this text were from Babylon, Persia or the Arabian desert. They were not Jewish by religion or nationality. Popular folklore claims that there were three wise men, but the text does not cite a number. Many believe the number of three came as a result of the three gifts that the wise men brought to the Christ child.

The Magi saw his star in the East and at the last minute, gathered their gifts and went to see him. The wise men brought the Christ child gifts of Gold, frankincense, and myrrh. Since these items were of immense value and were brought such a long way, they suggest the importance that the wise men placed upon the Christ child; who was even recognized by the great leaders of other lands as well. The fact that they came to see Jesus and that they brought him gifts as well, attests to the importance they placed on the deity of Christ. They gave the gifts and departed, asking nothing of him but returning filled with the joy of having seen the Lord for themselves.

When they arrived in Judea, Jesus was no longer in the manger. Verse 11 notes specifically that they came to see the Christ child in a house. The fact that they were not there when the shepherds and others experienced the first Christmas, did not diminish their desire to present their gifts.

The Gift of Gold

The first gift that the wise men gave to Jesus was the gift of Gold. Gold was valuable and used because of its rarity in biblical times. It was used in religious practices of both the Jews and pagans. It was generally a standard of finance and a symbol of physical prosperity.

Beyond the fact that gold has immense value, it is also timeless. Gold will be gold 100 years from the present day. You can melt gold, twist it beat it and shape it, but it still will be gold.

What we have to offer God today should be 24 karat stewardship that can withstand beatings, twisting, anger, confusion and any other malady that may come our way. The beauty of a gold based relationship with God is that the quality of our service is never diminished by circumstances.

Even if we are tried in the fire or polished in prosperity we will come through like pure gold.

The golden gift is the gift our best. It is the best of our time. The best of talents and best of our treasure.

No matter what we give God, it cannot match what he does for us daily. The song writer said it best when he said "You can't beat God giving, no matter how you try. The more you give the more he gives to you. Just keep on giving because it's really true, you can't beat God giving, no matter how you try."

The Gift of Frankincense

The second gift that the wise men gave was the gift of Frankincense. Frankincense was an ingredient used in making perfume for the most holy place in the Tabernacle. It has always been associated with worship in the temples of Jews and the pagan alike.

Christians can give Christ the wonderful gift of worship, just as the wise men did. Praising God in the sanctuary. Singing his praises in songs and testifying to his greatness among the people are great ways to worship him.

We enter worship with an attitude of excited anticipation. We can't wait to worship and praise God.

Many recipients enjoy their gifts better when they know the person who gave the gift wanted to give it and was excited about the opportunity to give. In the same sense, God knows whether we are excited our opportunity to worship him or whether or not we view our worship experience as a chore or a burden that must be endured rather than shared with him.

We give God our devotion and show appreciation for his great works when we worship him and testify to his greatness.

No wonder the song writer encourages us to, "Go tell it on the mountain, over the hills and every where! Go tell it on the mountain, that Jesus Christ is born.!"

The Gift of Myrrh

The last gift that the wise men gave to Christ was the gift of myrrh. Myrrh was an aromatic resin that had many uses in ancient times. In some areas it was used as the main ingredient of anointing oil. In other areas, it was used as perfume and a clothes freshener. Still other areas used its freshening qualities in preparation for embalming. Myrrh is associated with freshness, sweetness, even in moments of sadness.

The Christian can give to Christ, during the celebration of his birth, a freshness and newness of spirit that dwells in his heart each and every day. There should be no such thing as a sad Christian. Just as myrrh is used in funerals, even in the moments of death a Christian still brings to the sadness and melancholy of death a gentle, fresh and sweet spirit.

The sweetness of the Christian life which is found in Christ is probably what the song writer had in mind when he wrote: "There's a sweet, sweet, spirit in this place. ...it must be the spirit of the Lord."

We give God sweetness because he gives it to us daily. We sing about his sweetness in our songs and talk about it to our friends. "He's sweet I know! He's sweet I know! I've found a savior and he's sweet I know!"

Giving the right gift

Today brothers and sisters, people will give many things to each other but it would be great if we could give the Lord what he gave us. He gave us love.

The song writer said, "Oh how I love Jesus, because he first loved me."

It would be wonderful if we would give him our trust and devotion.

This Christmas the Lord would certainly be pleased if we gave the Lord a little more attention and a little less neglect.

It would be great if we gave the Lord a little more love and little less hate;

-A little more peace and little less confusion;

-A little more gratitude and little less ungratefulness;

-A little more prayer and little less lip service;

-A little more compassion and a little less heartlessness;

-A little more real Christian love and little less imitation;

-A little more "do as I do" and little less "do as I say"

-A little more "bended knee" and little less "crooked hearts"

Can't you hear God in your imagination, trying to make a decision!

"I could give them the stars, but soon the stars would stop twinkling!"

"I could give them the moon, but after awhile, the moon would cease to shine!"

"I could give them the warmth of a summer day, but summers last only for short and then comes the fall!"

"I could give them silver and gold, but there will come a time when they will lose their value!"

"I could set them afloat on the calm seas of life!" But there will come a time when storms will rise!

"I want to give them a gift that will be with them always, even until the end of the world!

"I want to give them a give that which will give them:

STRENGTH when they are feeling a little weak; COMFORT when they are feeling all alone!

VICTORY after they have suffered a defeat; HOPE when all hope is gone!

LIFTED HEAD when they are bowed down low; SIGHT when they can't see their way!

What kind of Gift can God give? John gave us the decision:"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life!"

He gave the gift that keeps on giving!

He was born in a manger, but he kept on giving!

He was wounded for our transgressions, but he kept on giving!

He was bruised for our iniquities, but he kept on giving!

They whipped him and tried him all night long, but he kept on giving!

They put a crown of thorns on his head, but he kept on giving!

They hung him up high and stretched him out wide, but he kept on giving!

He died but even in death, he kept on giving!

Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

I'm so glad that God gave me a gift that keeps on giving!

I get a blessing every day because....

He keeps on giving!

Tough Shoes for Rough Roads

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 5, 2003

SCRIPTURE: Deuteronomy 33:25 "Thy shoes shall be iron and brass; and as thy days, so shall thy strength be" Deuteronomy 33:25

Introduction

Have you ever had to match a pair of shoes for an occasion? There are some people who have many pairs of shoes that differ in colors and styles. They also have many kinds of shoes that are made for various types of occasions. Depending on how many shoes are actually in our closets, matching the right shoe with the occasion can be a task. Most people try to pick the right shoe to wear for comfort, effectiveness and appeal. Work shoes are heavy duty. Tennis shoes have a grip. Cleats are needed for the football field. There is even a house shoe to wear around the house. We pick the shoe to fit the occasion.

When we were young our parents picked our clothing for us. They would never allow us to pick our own clothes because we would inevitably pick what we liked, regardless to whether it was suited for the occasion. Parents had school shoes for us; then they also had "church" shoes. We could get in plenty of trouble trying to wear "church" shoes to school unless it was a special day. Our parents considered what was coming up and picked the shoes we would wear.

God does the same thing for us every year. Unlike us, he knows what's ahead and prepares us for what is coming. If left up to us we'd probably slip into the New Year wearing the same slippers we wore last year, slipping and sliding. There would be others that would wear Brogans that would be so big and bulky that they would break or trample anyone in our way. It would be fun to dance right through the year in our dance shoes or spend the entire year looking good in our shiny shoes. However, God looks ahead and prepares us for what he knows is coming and matches the shoes we will need with what is coming. If he sees rain, he pulls out the boots and rain shoes. If it's going to be a year on the beach, he pulls out the flip flops!

God knows what lies ahead for each of us and our faith rests on our belief that he knows what's best for us and will prepare us for whatever is coming this year. He will see to it that as we approach any difficult moment that we are fully equipped to handle every situation. He knows the future!

We don't know what the future holds, but we all have expectations. Consider the three old men who sat on a park bench talking about the future. They decided to take a picture of their shoes and leave for the grandchildren. They spent a day guessing what their grandchildren would say about them after seeing their shoes. The first man said "50 years from now I want my grandchildren to look at my shoes and say I was a man who was very successful at achieving my goals." All of the men nodded their heads in agreement. The second old man said, "50 years from now I want my grandchildren to look at my shoes and say my shoes belonged to a man who loved his family." That was really noble. The third man bought himself a brand new pair of shoes but wouldn't take a picture. He said, "I don't know about you two but 50 years when my grandchildren look at my shoes, I plan to still be in them! –It may be tough pulling it off but I intend to be here!"

As Believers we are confident that if we abide in him and he abides in us that God will bless us in the coming year. Whatever comes our way; God will prepare a way for us and gives us the right shoes for the occasion.

Exposition

This text focuses on the blessing of Asher and the people of Israel as they prepared to enter into a new land.

Asher was the eight son of Jacob. The name Asher means "prosperity, happiness, and fortune." His descendants formed one of the 12 tribes of Israel. As the children of Israel, after 40 years of wandering in the wilderness prepared to enter the Promised Land, Moses pronounced blessings upon each of them. Verse 24 of this chapter focuses upon his blessing upon the tribe of Asher. The blessing Moses pronounced was a blessing of prosperous opportunity. A similar blessing had been given to Asher himself by his father Jacob in Genesis 49:20. Now, as they prepared to enter into the Promised Land Moses says again what has been said before that Asher would be blessed with children and that he would dip his feet in oil, an expression which meant that his descendants would enjoy favor and opportunities to prosper.

Each tribe was given certain portions of the Promised Land to claim as their own. No tribe would possess their land without some element of struggle. Included in the lands assigned to Asher was a mountainous range that was rich with copper, iron and other minerals that would make them a wealthy people.

It was a great opportunity, yet the opportunity was not without its pitfalls. There many Canaanites in the land. Holding the mountains, with such richness would require considerable risk. Even life in the hills would be more difficult and demanding than the simple life of the plains and valleys. Despite its drawbacks, Asher was presented with a huge opportunity that also came with a promise. The Lord promised Asher that he would equip the people for the journey ahead by giving them shoes of "iron and brass." Of course he did not literally mean iron or brass shoes but that he would give them whatever was necessary to seize the opportunity that he was providing.

Under their feet would be iron, and copper and other minerals from which brass and other metals could be made. They would be sitting atop of one the best opportunities available, but it would require much work. God promised to provide whatever they needed to make the journey.

He went further to encourage Asher even more by saying "And as thy days, so shall thy strength be." It was God's promise to Asher that whatever the coming days or years would bring, he would provide them with the strength to meet each new challenge that might deter them from achieving the great opportunity he gave them. If Asher was still nervous, God told all of the people in verses 26 and 27 that the "God who rideth upon the heaven" shall be your help to defeat any enemy.

In verse 28 he promised them that they would dwell in safety in the land that he promised.

If the people would seize the opportunity and blessing that he provided God promised in verse 29 that they would be happy, would be protected by his shield, and their enemies who doubted them would be made liars!

The tribes went forth to claim their territories with boldness. However, Asher, even though they heard the promise of God was reluctant to claim their give. They did not claim the mountain filled with rich minerals, they abandoned it and the Zidonians claimed what should have been their blessing. They did not claim their lands and possess them like the other tribes but instead contented themselves with working with less than their potential. They did well, but could have done better, but they chose to surrender their duty to God in the process. Among the tribes, In short they made a mess with that with which they were blessed because they failed to believe God and act in faith.

Don't be messing with your blessing

Today, there are many people like the people of Asher. They are messing with their blessing. Asher was the recipient of a great opportunity yet they chose to squander it rather than possess it. They allowed others to get what was supposed to be theirs.

In a similar sense there are many today who also fail to capitalize on the blessing and opportunities that God makes available to them. The year ahead will present many blessed opportunities for believers. Some of those opportunities may be in business development, career advancement, job opportunities, home improvement, and personal relationships. However, like Asher's opportunity, what the Lord has in store for us may require a considerable amount of work and involve a level of risk. Nothing good happens to us without hard work. Frederick Douglass once said, "Where there is no struggle, there is no progress." He said the man that wants progress without struggle is like the farmer who wants rain but does not want the thunder and lightning that comes with rain.

It could very well be that the opportunity that God will make available for some believers this year will not come without considerable struggle and sacrifice. Yet the opportunity is there! The opportunity to become spiritually stronger is there but it won't come without a commitment to study and dig deep into the mountain of God's word to seize its treasures. The opportunity to strengthen a marriage is there, but it won't come without difficulty and some element of sacrifice. The opportunity to advance and to succeed in education or career development is real, but it will not happen until we trust God fully and make the first step.

In the year to come, don't go messing with your blessing by short changing yourself and underestimating your ability to achieve!

"You have not because you ask not" James 4:2.

If you fail to seize an opportunity because you think you may fail, you are messing with your blessing!

If you doubt God in any way and fail to do what you know you should do, you are messing with your blessing!

Don't settle for anything less than what God has promised!

Rough Roads need tough shoes

The coming year offers many challenges and opportunities; however, acquiring the blessings that God has in store for us may also require us to travel some rough terrain in the coming months. Like Asher, we receive his promise to provide iron shoes for the tough roads we may encounter along the way. The rough terrain we encounter is the route through which we are to achieve our ultimate reward. Asher was given mountains that were filled with rich minerals. The mountains were the reward of his descendants. They viewed them as too much trouble and gave them away.

What are the mountains we may face this year? They could be that extra responsibility we have assumed. They could be the added burden of a new mouth to feed, a new relationship to build, a new job or no job, a personal quest to achieve. Even overcoming an extended personal illness or that of a loved one is a great mountain.

Where is the blessing in a mountain? Where is the blessing in treacherous terrain? For Asher the blessing was not on the mountain but in the mountain. His blessing was in conquering the mountain. For us, the blessing is not in the challenge itself, the blessing is in the challenge. In itself sickness is not a blessing. It is a mountain. However, the blessing is in dealing with the sickness and watching God work his wonders and his will. Every person who has taken on such a challenge testifies of the intense closeness they experienced with God during and after their ordeal.

If we claim the mountain that we will face this year, God promises to give us iron shoes that will keep us from slipping and falling.

Strength of every situation

Asher and all of Israel were about to go into uncharted territory. They had no idea what lay ahead for them. Yet God promised them "as thy days, so shall thy strength be."

Every year brings with it an assortment of days: good days and bad days and a few lazy days when nothing happens. There are some days coming that will be so easy that the only strength we will need is just enough to push the button on the remote control to change the television channel. Then there will be other days that will be more demanding. These are days when we need considerably more strength. That's why this promise of God is important. It promises that when we need it, God will provide the strength for the journey.

"As thy days" refers to the demands of some future moment.

"So shall thy strength be" refers to the spiritual reserves that God will unleash, on an "as needed" basis. God does not give us everything at one time. He gives us what we need to make it through each day. In the Lord's Prayer we say, "Give us this day our daily bread." He knows how many spiritual calories we will burn up every day and will give us enough strength to sustain ourselves and renew.

When we think we cannot continue, ask for strength and he will give us what we need! We may need regular or high octane; he knows exactly what we need each day. That's why David said, "The Lord is my shepherd I shall not want!"

In the coming year, don' worry, God will supply all of your needs according to his riches in Christ Jesus!

The way may be tough, but God is enough

Finally, brothers and sisters, we are being told that the year ahead will be tough, but come what may, Jesus is enough.

The news is filled with wars and the rumors of wars. It is filled with bad financial news about companies failing, stocks dropping, and investments being lost. There is a good possibility that our sons and those of others on foreign shores may face each other one battle field or another. By all indicators there is a rough year ahead of us.

But we rejoice in the truth that even when the road is rough, God is enough!

We know he is enough because last year was rough and he was enough!

Somebody stumbled along the way, but God was enough!

Somebody became weak along the way, but God was enough!

He helped us move from one level of strength to another.

No wonder the song writer declares: "we bore our burdens in the heat of the day, we know the Lord will make a way, we've come a long way Lord, we've come a long way."

We moved from strength to strength by leaning on the Lord!

When there was no way, the Lord, helped us find a way! Jesus said "I am the way the truth and the life." The road may get rough but God is enough!

When there was no hope, the Lord gave us new inspiration! The poet declares: "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name." That reminded us that the rough may get rough but God is enough!

When there was no happiness, the Lord gave us a renewed joy! David cried out to God "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation"

When there was no strength the Lord taught us the value of patience. “For they that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up on wings as Eagles, they run and not get weary. They shall walk and not faint.” The road was rough but God was enough.

I don’t know what the new year will bring, but I’ve decided, come what may to trust in the Lord, he will be enough!

If I stumble and trust in the Lord, he’ll help me to stand!

If I’m discouraged, he’ll give me new inspiration!

If I get weak, he’ll make me strong!

If I get lost he’ll help me find my way!

If I find myself in the valley of despair, he’s able to deliver me!

I don’t know how long it will be, nor what the future holds for me, but this I know...

If Jesus leads me, through the storm and the rain!

If Jesus leads me, through heat of day and chill of the midnight hour!

If Jesus leads me, through trials and tribulations!

If Jesus leads me...

I shall get home someday!

Let us move into the new year with confidence that come what may from day to day! My heavenly father watches over me!

If I fall down, he’ll pick me up!

If I make a mistake, he will forgive me!

If I stumble, he’ll whole my hand!

If I can’t find my way, he’ll guide me! That’s why I’ll say, “Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land. I am weak but thou art mighty hold me with thou powerful hand!”

The same hand that touched a blind man’s eyes!

The same hand that healed a lame man and made him walk!

The same hands that were nailed to an old rugged cross in death

But the same handsthat were raised in victory early Sunday morning...

I want those same hands to guide me every day!

But if not..

SCRIPTURE:If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up. Daniel 3:17-18

Introduction

What do you do when you ask for something and get "no" for an answer? One of the most frustrating moments in life is to ask for something and get "no" for an answer. Often children ask their parents for an item or two but get "no" for an answer. What do you do when "no" is the answer that you get? If you are a wife and your husband says "no" how do you respond? If you are a husband and your wife won't go along with your idea, what is your response? If you have a business plan and your banker says "no" to your proposal, how do you respond?

The way we respond when things don't go our way reveals a side of our character that is rarely seen and is often hidden. Responses often vary from anger, screaming, yelling, temper trantrums, pouting, vengeful acts and many other troubling responses.

There are some who ask for blessings but expect to receive from God but always expect to get a positive answer when they make a request. Consider the boy who constantly disobeyed his mother. Repeatedly, he did things to anger his mother. Finally, the mother told the son that he should talk to God about it. After a while the mother heard the son praying to the Lord and she walked away with a smile on her lips. After about an hour the son walked out of his room and told his mother that he had thought it over and talked to God in prayer. "Fine", said the pleased mother. "If you ask God to help you not misbehave, He will help you." "Oh, I didn't ask Him to help me not misbehave," said Johnny. "I asked Him to help you put up with me."

God always answers prayer, but his answer may not always be yes. Sometimes his answer is no. As believers our challenge is to trust God and be glad regardless to his answer.

We want to go through this entire year without any problems, but if not!

We want to be free of sickness or physical handicaps, but if not!
We want to be financially secure and prosperous this year, but if not!
We want to be successful in our relationships, but if not!
We want to win and to enjoy the victory, but if not!
We want to expand our boundaries and enjoy unheralded success, but if not!

What we have learned about life is the value of trusting in the Lord. He will provide for our needs, we don't really have to doubt him. We would like for it to go our way, but if not God is still good...all the time!

Exposition

This text focuses on three believers who acknowledge the permissive will of God, the power of God and their acceptance of his will.

The King of Babylon conquered all of the region of Judah and carried most of its craftsmen, scholars and thinkers back to Babylon. He began a three year program to repatriate these Jews so that they would accept the Chaldean customs. Among the three, were four men, commonly known as Daniel, Meshack, Shadrack and Abednego. The four were adamant believers in God's kingdom. They prayed regularly and even refused the king's efforts to re-educate them to the Chaldean political viewpoint and life-style. Daniel interpreted a dream for the King. In so doing Daniel was given the opportunity to serve as a prime minister or leader of governors in the land. It was a position that he refused. However, he recommended similar positions for the three young men who were with him.

As foreigners and powerful political leaders in the land, the three young men and even Daniel himself were often the subject of efforts to oust them from power. One such move came when the King erected a statue of himself and sent out a decree that said when certain music was played that everyone should bow and worship his image. Those who refused to do so would be punished by being cast into a fiery furnace the same day. The king's Chaldean advisors made certain that the resistance of the three was noted. The Chaldeans, who denounced Daniel and his associates to the king, were astrologers who wanted to predict a happier future for the king and his realm.

When the music played, as expected, three of the nation's highest governmental officers refused to bow. The king addressed them by asking whether they understood the order and the punishment for those who defied the order. They acknowledged that they understood, but they still refused to obey the order.

In a frustrating moment the king reiterated his command and the punishment. When he saw that the three Hebrew Boys would not bow he asked "who is that God that shall deliver you out my hand?"

In answering the King the Hebrew Boys made three affirmations: That God may permit it to be so, that he was able to deliver them, and that even if God chose not to answer as they wanted, they still had no plans to disobey him.

The King ordered that the furnace be prepared, but this time that it should be prepared seven times hotter than it had been on other days. The three young men were thrown into the furnace but were not burned by the fire. There was no smell of smoke or fire on their clothes as well. As the people waited for them to scream, there was silence. Instead, the king looked in and called out to them. He then noticed an astonishing revelation. Instead of three men in the fire, he saw four. The fourth one, he said, looked like the Son of God.

Facing the fires

The Hebrew boys by their example give us three attitudes of what to do when we face the fires of life.

IF IT BE SO, SO BE IT: Unlike many of the biblical leaders of the past who had been given a promise of deliverance from God, the Hebrew Boys had received no prior reassurances that they would be delivered. David, when he moved against Goliath said, "This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand." Joshua, Moses, Elijah and many others acted in great faith because God reassured them. The Hebrew Boys, having received no assurances, relied on the nature of their relationship with God; that he would always do what was best for them and would never abandon them. There are many situations that believers face each year. We have not been promised deliverance from hard times, difficulties and sickness. Neither have we been promised that all difficulties will avoid us completely.

Often, like the Hebrew Boys, we face difficulties without knowing whether we will be delivered from them or not. We are similar to these three in that we too are comfortable in our relationship with him to the point that we know that he will direct the final outcome of things such that it benefits our interest. Jesus called this relationship "abiding in him." If we abide in him and his Word abides in us, we have a sense of comfort in tough times that helps us face any enemy or ride out difficult storms.

The words "if it be so" seem to say, "if it is God's will that this difficulty confronts me, then so be it." We are comfortable because we are supported in his word. Even if we have not been promised deliverance we are comfortable because we remember his words to us in Psalm 121:3 "
He will not suffer thy foot to be moved: he that keepeth thee will not slumber." In verse 7 we read "The LORD shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy soul." That knowledge makes us comfortable enough to say like the Hebrew Boys, If it be so, so be it!

THE GOD WE SERVE IS ABLE: The King wanted to know who is the God of the Hebrew Boys that they would think him so powerful that he could deliver them out of his hands. There were fully armed guards standing close by. All of the powers of the government were at the king's disposal. The prospect of deliverance from the king's hands were non-existent. The fire itself presented less of a prospect. It was made seven times hotter. Despite these impossible situations the Hebrew Boys confirmed their belief that "Our God is able."

Like the Hebrew boys, we too must remain confident in God's ability. Two forces usually attack us in varying ways: There are forces more powerful than ourselves that threaten to throw us in the fire; then there is the all consuming fire itself. Often when we are faced with forces outside of ourselves that are overwhelming we begin to believe that even God cannot deliver us. The powers of government are awesome and they can overwhelm a simple person. Subpoenas, police force, SWAT teams, prosecutors, court orders, investigations, FBI, Internal Revenue, legislative auditors and a plethora of examples of government power can be overwhelming. There are very few people that go through their entire lives without facing some aspect of government power being used against them diminishing their personhood and threatening their individual freedoms. Often we feel defenseless against such forces and we feel even more defenseless against the actual flames themselves. When jail doors slam in your face or that of a loved one, our first response it to be overwhelmed. When we are the victims of attack, assault or malicious persecution the fire seems hottest and many are overwhelmed.

Yet the Hebrews resolved that our God is able. Even the power of the government is no match for God. That's what King Ahab found out when the state controlled prophets of Baal were challenged on Mt. Carmel. There, Ahab learned that the state's 400 prophets could not stand against the simple prayer of one man backed up by the power of God. No matter what our situation, God is able. No matter how bleak the picture seems, God is able. No matter how frustrating the moment may be, God is able! No matter how destructive the fire being built against us seems to be, God is able to deliver us!

BUT IF NOT: The Hebrew boys were firm in their resolve to obey God. They knew their relationship with him and they knew his power to deliver them within his will. However, even if he chose not to deliver them, they resolved to be firm in their faith.

This attitude of the Hebrew Boys challenges each of us to adopt a similar attitude of faith. It is an attitude that says, "Even if God does not act in the way I desire, I will remain firm in my commitment to him." This is the attitude of Job. Job lost much of his family, health and property in a series of events that can only be described as a tragedy. Yet, Job decided that despite that he would remain firm. When challenged by his friends to simply curse God and die, Job remained firm even though the temptation was there. His body was covered in sores. His children had been killed. His fortunes had been lost. It would have been simple just to sit at home, curse God and die. Yet we hear Job boldly saying, "Yea though he slay me, yet will I serve him."

For us that has a significant meaning.

It means that even in difficult times we will not retreat from our worship, praise and gratitude toward God. The one thing Satan really wants is our retreat from the service of the king! That's what Paul had in mind when he wrote in 1 Corinthians 15:58, "..be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord. "

When we are in trouble, we won't turn our backs on God!

When we have failed we will not blame him but continue to hold fast to our faith in him!

We want the greatest of health, but if not God..is still good!
We want to be free of financial troubles, but if not, God is still good!
We want to be free of external attacks and troubles, but if not, God is still Good!
Maybe that's what songwriter Douglas Miller had in mind when he wrote:
Though the storms keep on raging in my life and sometimes it's hard to tell the night from day still that hope that lies within is reassured as I keep my eyes upon the drifting shore I know he'll lead me safely to that blessed place he has prepared But if the storm don't cease and if the winds keep on blowing in my life my soul has been anchored in the Lord!

Trust in the Lord

Finally, brothers and sisters it should be our resolve this year that no matter what comes, we will trust in the Lord.

It doesn't matter what comes our way the Lord will do what is best for us. We know this because in his word he has promised us that "all things work together for the good of them who are the called according to his purposes in Christ Jesus"

That means that even a bad thing can be made in to a good thing if we trust in the Lord

Our God is able to take any bad situation like:
FAILURE and turn it into success; DEFEAT and turn it into victory!
SADNESS and turn it into gladness; SORROW and turn it into joy!
HATRED and turn it into love; LOSSES and turn them into gains!
TROUBLES and turn them into triumphs; BROKEN HEARTS and turn them into happy souls!
Today Jesus is still saying the same thing...trust me!
Trust me because I love you!
Trust me because I died for you on Calvary!
Trust me because I rose in victory and claim the power!
Trust me because every day I'm right by your side!
Trust me when you are going through the mountains of frustration!
Trust me when you are struggling through the valley of the shadow of death!
Trust me when the storms of life are raging
I don't know about you but I will trust in the Lord until I die.

A Man Who Turned The World Upside Down

SCRIPTURE:"Then the LORD put forth his hand, and touched my mouth. And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have put my words in thy mouth. See, I have this day set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant." Jeremiah 1:9-10

Introduction

Have you ever met a person who really turned things upside down? In every sphere of our experience there are special people who seem to have aknack for upsetting the status quo, sometimes for the good sometimes for the worse. Usually such people are ordinary people caught up in extraordinary circumstances, called upon to do the right thing in an extraordinary way. When everyone else is going left they usually ask why not go right? Sometimes just the question itself can turn things upside down.

The Children's tale is told of the Emperor's new clothes. It seems that several swindlers successfully persuaded the king that they had invented an invisible cloth that could only be seen by those with superior intelligence. Not wanting to admit that he could not see the cloth the emperor ordered the new cloth and decided to wear it in a gala parade. Everyone around the king knew better but no one would say anything because it would not be popular and would draw the anger of the king. In the parade the people applauded the king. They raved about the beauty of his new clothes, until one little boy saw the near naked king strutting around in his under clothes and shouted, "He doesn't have any clothes on!" That one statement from a tiny lad instantly caused everyone to laugh and the king's world and his stupidity was turned upside down.

History is full of accounts of men and women whose words and deeds stirred the world and turned it upside down. When Galileo suggested the idea that the world was round and not flat, it was considered a dangerous statement. He was instantly brought in by authorities and judged as a heretic. Yet that one single idea which challenged the known order of things eventually turned the world upside down and opened up a whole new world for exploration.

Whether it was Joan of Arc who challenged stereotypes of women and lead armies in revolution, Martin Luther's protestant reformation, or Ghandi who lead the Indian people in a national campaign of civil disobedience to achieve liberation; every generation has seen a personality or two during its time that has stirred the world and turned things upside down.

Many have lived to see one or two such men in their life's experience. John Kennedy posed a challenge to America that lived long after him which was "to ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country." His brother Bobby Kennedy challenged the young to dream and ask "Why not?" Both of these men upset the known system and turned things upside down.

Standing head and shoulder above the rest is Martin Luther King, Jr. He stirred a nation to consider its flaws and improve.

The dream of a nation living up to the true meaning of its creed still survives and it continues to turn the world upside down. While Dr. King was a man of peace, his words often cause violent reaction. The thought of a day coming when a Blacks and Whites would walk and work together as sisters and brothers turned the known world upside down. Implicit in King's dream-weaving - beyond the dream itself - was the sublime notion that it was all possible. That we could do it. That a dream, it may have been, but not a fantasy.

Even today, years after his death his idea of peace, nonviolence and world brotherhood continues to turn the world upside down.

It is not surprising that Martin Luther King was a preacher, from a long line of preachers. God has always provided prophets for every generation armed with the power of God himself to turn the world upside down. When one speaks and acts within the authority of God it upsets the apple crate. It shakes the very foundations of the order of things, angers leaders, raises fears and unleashes a wave of vengeance and reprisal in response. Dr. King was a powerful preacher who was born to turn the world upside down.

As Christians, we rejoice in the knowledge that God has a person in every generation who is willing to challenge what is right while standing on what is right, even if it means turning the world upside down. Even in our personal lives we rejoice in the truth that once Satan had control of our lives, until we met a man named Jesus, who turned our sinful lives inside out and upside down. Ever since we met him we have never been the same.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Jeremiah's response to a call from God to be a person whose life and calling would turn the world upside down.

Like most prophets of his time Jeremiah was born during a time when the everyday life of the Jewish people was dictated by world events. The people of God were mere pawns in a world wide contest for power that shuffled God's people around like so many chess pieces on a game board, sacrificed and lost in the pursuit of world dominance.

The major world players were Assyria, Babylonia, and Egypt each of whom sought to be the dominate world power to secure its own independence and position. As the big nations struggled for power, the people suffered.

To respond to the crises God caused Jeremiah to be born with one intent which was to declare the word of the Lord and to tear up, root down, destroy and build up at the command of God. He was to turn the world upside down.

Jeremiah irritated and vexed six kings of Judah: Manasseh, Amon, Josiah, Jehoiakim, Johoiachin and Zedekiah. Jeremiah often angered the kings as he challenged them to remember God's people. Once King Jehoiakim, cut up all of Jeremiah's writings as he tried to silence the ideas of the powerful voice of God's messenger.

Jeremiah really turned things upside down.

In Matthew 16:14 people saw a young 30 year old man from Nazareth who was doing some of the same things Jeremiah did. He had the audacity to challenge the scribes and pharisees and to suggest the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of all men, including Gentiles. When the people heard him upset the system in such a dramatic way they thought he was the reincarnation of Jeremiah or one of the other prophets. Wherever he went, this man from Galilee upset people although his words and deeds were generally soft spoken and nonviolent.

Jesus lived only 33 years on earth. In the three years of his public ministry, the words he spoke and the deeds he performed led a centurion soldier at the cross to conclude: "Truly this was the Son of God."

He challenged traditional laws

Jesus often found himself in trouble with the established leaders of his time because he challenged the traditions and their application of the Mosaic law. His position was simple: people take precedent over laws, which was just the opposite with the Mosaic law.

Martin Luther King raised the very same issues in a modern circumstance. There were laws that existed by tradition that were unjust. There were laws that said a Black man could not drink out of the same water fountain as a white man. Or that Blacks could not be served in restaurants with whites or sit in the same section of a bus. They were unjust laws.

He turned the system upside down and caused considerable controversy when he suggested that Blacks should challenge unjust laws, knowing full well that when they challenged the law they would be arrested, jailed, beaten or even killed by the forces of government. Yet, millions of Blacks did just that. They challenged the laws in every city in the nation. They kept shaking and marching until the walls of segregation came tumbling down.

Today there are still cruel and unjust laws in our nation. Chief among the unjust laws of our nation is the death penalty, which applies an "eye for an eye" concept that Christ came to end. Because our system of laws is imperfect, even at its best, the death penalty establishes a system that places thousands of men and women on death row, often for crimes they did not commit. For the average citizen the quest is not that big. It is often fighting the small injustices, infringements upon civil rights that guarantee every man and woman equal access to public facilities, information and accommodations and freedom from harassment.

Any person who takes on the system is threatening to turn it upside down and can expect a barrage of attacks on their character and threats to their lives. Their very existence threatens the security of the system.

That's why the political leaders of Jesus' time had to deal with him. He was turning their world upside down.

That is also the premise of the family of Dr. Martin Luther King. In his book "Orders to Kill" William F. Pepper details what the King family has accepted as a planned execution of Dr. King by non other thant the United States Government through the FBI. Why? He was turning the known world upside down!

He promoted world brotherhood

Jesus found himself criticized because he dealt personally with people who were considered untouchables. He often was seen in public talking with publicans and sinners; prostitutes and tax collectors, crazy people, homeless folks and even gentiles. Yet, Jesus persisted and demonstrated the nature of the kingdom of God, that it would be inclusive of everyone.

Dr. King promoted the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. That is a simple idea that said God is the father of us all and each of us are brothers and sisters in that respect. That was a controversial idea because it was a known an accepted truth that Blacks and whites were not equal and should live separately and avoid as much as possible any interactions on an equal ground. That same opinion was true for women as well, especially since they were perceived as weaker, dumber and certainly not on the same level as men.

Dr. King challenged us to tear down the walls that divide us. He kept painting the picture of a world in which skin color or race would be noticed only for its accentuated beauty and esthetic value rather than as a measure of intelligence or eligibility. That would be a world where the "sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners" would be able to sit down at the table of brotherhood. It would be a day when all barriers that divide us would disappear.

He did not want us to stop seeing the beauty of blackness or whiteness. He saw the day when it would not matter.

That idea can turn worlds upside down because even on an interpersonal basis many people still harbor attitudes about people of other races that border on racism. Some of our views about women in this country are truly sexist and divisive.

That's why the political leaders were upset with Jesus, he included too many people in his circle. He diluted the chosen people by including many untouchables and that upset the order of things. He was turning their world upside down.

He turned Satan's World Upside down

Finally brothers and sisters, while Dr. Martin Luther King's actions turned the civil order of this nation upside down, Jesus did something that no man can do; he turned Satan's world upside down.

Satan had a hold on the world but it was Jesus' mission to turn a world under the influence and control of Satan himself, upside down.

That angered a lot of people but he turned the world upside down.

The money changers in the temple were not happy, when he came into the temple one day and turned over the tables and beat them with ropes saying, "It is written that my father's house shall be a house of prayer, but ye have turned it into a den of thieves." That day in Jerusalem, he turned Satan's world upside down.

A man who had been infected by legions of demons came face to face with the Lord. They begged not to be killed and put themselves into a herd of swine and drowned them. The owners of the pigs were upset, he had turned their world upside down.

An adulterous woman who was caught in the very act of adultery, was brought before Jesus for judgment. He responded to them that "he that is without sin among them should cast the first stone." They left angry that day because he had turned their known world upside down.

I don't know about you, but I've found that Satan gets mad whenever somebody he had control of starts following the Lord. He gets mad because the Lord has turned things around.

I've found out that the Lord can take Satan's world and turn it upside down!

Satan gave us an attitude of defeat, but I know a man who took our defeat and turned it into victory. He turned our world upside down!

Satan gave us a spirit of sadness, but I know a man who took our sadness and turned it into gladness. He turned our world upside down!

Satan gave us a spirit of fear, but I know a man who took our fear and taught us to say, "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear." He turned our world upside down!

Satan gave us a spirit of failure, but I know a man who took our failures and turned them in the successes. He turned our world upside down!

He turned the world upside down when he set our souls free and gave us a home over in glory!

He turned the world upside down when he took an old rugged cross and marched it up Calvary's Hill.

He turned the world upside down when he died so hard that the sun refused to shine!

He turned the world upside down when he called upon his father and said "It is finished!"

I know the world was upside down, because a roman soldier, who was on top of the old world, saw him hanging from the cross. But when he saw the power of God in action, his whole world turned around and he said, "Surely, he must be the son of God!"

Early Sunday morning when he arose from the grave with all power in his hands..he turned the world upside down!

Born To Preach

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Jesus Christ Church of God
Monroe, La.

January 12, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations. " Jeremiah 1:5

Introduction

Have you ever wondered just how a minister is called to preach? Does he hear voices in the wilderness? Was he the recipient of a special assignment dispatched straight from heaven? Did God personally select him for this special then notify him in some kind of Damascus road experience? Over the years, we have heard a variety of explanations from men and women who tried to explain the nature of their calling. How do such men and women know they have been called? Do they see signs in heaven? Do they hear voices? The ways vary but the final end seems universal, at some point every person who has been called acknowledged a calling they knew long before the day of their public announcement.

While most religious groups refer to the public ministry as a "calling" it is a matter of tradition in the African-American community to think of a "call" rather than a calling. African-Americans, especially evangelicals such as Baptist and Methodist hold the "call" so high as an evidence of divine anointing that persons who begin in the ministry without professing some type of calling are viewed suspiciously. Some of the calls required a bold imagination. Others, were not so imaginable but were just enough to pass scrutiny of a suspicious or skeptical set of critics.

The bible gives numerous accounts of great men receiving calls from God. As just a lad Samuel heard the voice of God speaking in the still of the night, calling his name. On the road to Damascus Saul received a wake up call from the Lord who spoke to him in a blinding light. Abraham had a visit from angels. Elijah heard the voice of God as a still soft voice.

Have you heard some of the accounts? We have heard those who say boldly that they were plowing the fields and heard a voice calling them in the fields. We have also heard of those who told how they saw their names written in the sky. Whether they heard strange voices in the pastures or saw great visions in the sky, very few in the African-American community dare begin a career in the ministry without acknowledging a call of some kind.

It is closer to reality to understand that most people who experience what we know as a call were not suddenly selected by God to achieve a specific goal. Neither were they randomly selected to respond to an immediate need. When God called Samson into action against the Philistines, his call was not an after thought. Samson's birth was foretold. So were the births of many people who were the instruments of God in the biblical record. They were born to achieve a specific end. They were born, positioned and nurtured by God, prepared for a moment in time that only God knew was coming. What some describe as a call is more their decision to pursue a life calling set in motion at birth than it is a response to an impromptu decision by God made at the spur of the moment. While there are some that speak of seeing miraculous signs most respond to a calling given to them before they were born.

Every believer has a purpose. Each life is equipped with just the right combination of gifts and talents to accomplish a purpose. While believers come equipped to fulfill a purpose, they are not compelled to respond to the purpose. A new car is manufactured with a specific purpose, whether it is used for that purpose, or is used at all, is purely optional. The same is true for those who are designed to accomplish a spiritual end. Some recognize their purpose early in life. Others avoid what they sense to be a divinely inspired purpose for as long as they can. Those who do respond do so because they are literally born to preach.

As Christians, we know that God has a purpose for each of us. Our challenge is to recognize the hand of God operating in our lives, then respond to his call.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Jeremiah's response to his call and God's pronouncement that he was born to preach.

Jeremiah began his ministry as a young man. In his tender years, he responded to God's call by deciding to become a prophet early in life. Like most people who begin a new venture, he was nervous. His anxiety over his youth was so troubling to him that God himself had to put his mind at ease. In Jeremiah 1:5 God told Jeremiah, " Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, [and] I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations. "

God's words came as an endorsement of what Jeremiah felt personally; that God had a great work for him to do. It was well beyond an instant response. Jeremiah came into the world equipped to serve. The only thing that remained was for him to acknowledge what God had prepared him to do and do it.

There were certain advantages to Jeremiah's decision to begin his ministry early. The foremost advantage was the fact that his ministry began before he had soiled himself with unclean living. The ancient biblical scholar Jerome said Isaiah, who had more years over his head, had his tongue touched with a coal of fire, to purge away his iniquity (6:7), but that when God touched Jeremiah's mouth, who was yet but young, nothing was said of the purging of his iniquity (1:9), because, by reason of his tender years, he did not have much sin to atone for.

Jeremiah preached for over 50 years, according to some estimates , but he never wavered from his initial calling which he acknowledged as a child. He began in the thirteenth year of Josiah, when things went well under that good king, but he continued through all the wicked reigns that followed. It did not take long for it to become obvious to any observer that he was born to preach.

Born to Preach

Born to preach salvation: The primary message of every preacher is the good news that salvation is both free and available. That was the good news that John the Baptist brought to the people when he preached in the wilderness of Judea. His message was a message of repentance because the opportunity to possess the kingdom of heaven was at hand. The message that John brought was not accidental. It was a message that was prepared in heaven and sent to the world by heavenly express. John's birth was special and his message was special. Repentance and baptism were the central themes of his message. Thousands responded to his message of hope and deliverance which was a part of his mission from birth.

More than anything else the preacher brings a message of salvation and forgiveness. That message is the good news from heaven that God's grace can cleanse and purge any sin. Forgiveness is good news that broken lives can be restored and sin soaked lives can be made whole again.

Born to preach hope:In Jeremiah's time there was a general feeling of hopelessness among the people. Israel had fallen from its once glorious position during the heyday of King Solomon. The people were in exile and without hope of ever returning to their homeland. The message that Jeremiah brought was one that he was born to bring. He was a divinely inspired instrument of God whose commission began at his conception and continued through his death. He preached words of hope to a people who desperately wanted to know that God had not forsaken them. Just as Jeremiah brought them words of hope and encouragement from the Lord, the preacher today also brings hope to those who are despondent over life's issues. It is the preacher who reminds the world that despite the difficulties of the times that God is still on the throne.

Born to preach justice: The people of God are often mistreated and abused. Whether the reference is to slavery in Egypt or to the Babylonian exile, the people of God have been the victims of an avalanche of injustices that have made life miserable for them. Yet, for every injustice inflicted upon the people there has always been a prophet to address the injustice of that moment. For Israel's enslavement in Egypt, Moses

Born to preach Jesus

Finally, brothers and sisters we must recognize that the people of God need to hear a word from the Lord. To hear that word God has a messenger for every generation.

God has a messenger who brings a message of hope for every generation, as well as a messenger of peace. But there is also the need for a messenger who will bring the good news.

The good news is not about Allah, or Buddha!

The good news is not about Krishna, or the Prophet Muhammad.

The good news is not about world powers, peace agreements and treaties!

The good news is not a bull market on the New York Stock Exchange or an increase in the minimum wage!

The good news is about Jesus!

God has a messenger who was born to spread the good news!

John said he was not the good news, but only one who bore witness to the messenger!

In a similar sense the preacher is not good news himself but he is the messenger born to tell the world about Jesus!

What is the preacher born to declare?

He is born to tell the world that Jesus is what makes water wet and what makes sugar sweet!

He is born to tell the world that Jesus is what gives salt its savor and what makes the world go round!

He is born to tell the world that Jesus is the man who is:

-Strength in times of weakness; Victory in times of defeat

-Healing in times of sickness; Comfort in times of despair!

The preacher is born to tell the world that he came to this earth and lived 33 long years!

The preacher is born to tell somebody that he died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

Every preacher is born with a message! He's got to tell somebody about the Lord!

SCRIPTURE: "They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive." Matthew 20:7

Introduction

Have you ever asked God for a blessing? Often we ask God for blessings of one kind or another. Sometimes the blessing we request is financial. Sometimes what we want is spiritual. There are those who just want peace of mind. What we request of God varies from person to person and even then varies with each circumstance. There are many that ask God for blessings and always seem to get most of their request. There others that seem to miss their blessing one way or the other.

Believers today scan the bible and the panorama of life's experiences to discover the secret to living the blessed life. One of the first things that we notice is that there are a variety of biblical characters who all seemed to be what we can call "receivers." People whose lives were blessed by God.

Joseph was a receiver, even from a child he saw visions of what God would do for him and he remained faithful to the vision despite being falsely accused, thrown in a pit, and being sentenced to jail. It started with a coat of many colors and ended with a high place in the kingdom. Joseph received it all, the bad and the good and God blessed him.

Moses was a receiver. He grew up in a palace, spent 40 years in poverty and rose to lead his people to freedom from Egyptian Slavery. Moses was a receiver.It was not an easy task but he received everything God gave him.

The widow woman with the empty barrel was a receiver. She cared for her family the best she knew how and watched as God miraculously kept food on her table every day of her life. She was a receiver, despite living in the worst of times.

What do we as believers have in common with these and other biblical characters? We too are receivers. God blesses us the exact same way.

There are great parallels between life and organized sports. Among the great sports is football. Two teams are on a field one trying to win a victory over another. Each has a coach who sends in plays to team members whose role is strikingly similar to that of believers in the church today. God is our coach, heaven is our goal, Hell's Angels is our opposing team and we are the Heavenly Crusaders. We are on God's team, a part of the church. We play offense and defense. We have found that we have a good coach who can carry us all the way to victory if we do exactly what he says.

There are many people who love to watch sports events, whether it is football, basketball, hockey, wrestling, it doesn't matter they just love sports. Just as some people love the church, public worship, just about any kind anywhere. Even though there are great parallels between the church and organized sports there is a difference when it comes to the loyalty of the fans. People will stop attending church for a variety of reasons but those same reason's don't apply to their love of sports.

Have you ever met a true sports fan who said, "I'm not going to any more games because before I get in the door good they ask me for money!" –Yet there people who claim to love the church who refuse to worship because they may be asked to give.

Sports fans don't care if the people they sit with are unfriendly, if the seats are hard, or if the weather is good or bad- Yet the people who claim to love the church stop attending because they say the people they sit with are not friendly, the seats are too hard and its to cold to get out.

Sports fans know the coach but many have never met him-yet there are many who claim to love the church because the pastor never came to their home to call on them personally.

Sports fans get angry with decisions of the referee in one game but still show up for the next game. Yet those who love the church repeatedly skip their worship because they upset over some decision made with which they did not agree.

Sports fans often sit with hypocrites and people who do not really love the team. There are even some at the games who do not come for the game at all but just to see the people, but they go anyway. Yet, the people who love the church often say they won't attend because some of the people they sit with are hypocrites and only come

Sports fans have attended games since they were children and love every minute. Yet, those who claim to love the church say they stay away from Sunday School and church because when they were children their parents made them come too frequently.

Some people have a greater love for their favorite sport than they do for the church.

If the church is God's team, then we should play close attention to the starting lineup and find our place on the line. We are all utility players. We play wherever God places us. Sometimes we have to tackle. Sometimes we have to guard. Sometimes we have to call the play and chair an action, sometime we have to run the play. Then there are times we are called to be receivers. When we put it all together it means victory for the church.

As Christians, we know the importance of serving the Lord. We know that if we serve him he will bless us immensely and we shall receive blessings from on high. He calls the play, throws the blessing and we receive, every day of our lives.

Exposition

This passage focuses on Christ teaching his disciples how to work in the kingdom and what to do to receive.

The text is a parable given by Christ to illustrate the nature of service in the kingdom of God. It is a continuation of chapter 19 verses 29 and 30. There Christ told his disciples that those who have given him first place in their lives even to the point of sacrificing their houses and even the friendship of mother, father and other relatives will receive a hundredfold reward.

Jesus planted the idea among his followers that those who wanted to receive the hundredfold blessing that he talked about must be willing to sacrifice and give of themselves. To receive they must first give until it becomes sacrificial. However, when it comes time to receive we will receive abundantly.

The two things believers can expect to receive are highlighted in verse 29: a hundredfold blessing and everlasting life. The conditions to receive both is an acceptance of Christ and willingness to put his cause before all others.

Chapter 20 finds Christ continuing where chapter 19 left off. He gives an example of as a "householder" who employs workers in the field. As each was hired they were promised that they would receive a penny. Those that were called early and even those who were called late in the evening all received the same reward. The premium was not on the length of their service but on the quality of their service.

At verse seven a group of men were standing idle at the close of the day. They too were hired and told "whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive." When the day ended they too received pay for their one hour's work as well as a bonus that made them receive the same as everyone else.

Some who had worked the full day complained that late comers were receiving the same as they received (v12). They felt they should have received more although they received everything they were promised. The householder told them that they should not be concerned about what others received, only about what they received.

In this parable Christ reaffirmed that those who want to receive should be willing to put the interest of the kingdom of God first in their lives. If the kingdom is first then they should expect to become receivers in this life and in the life to come.

You Must Be Eligible to Receive

You must be eligible to receive. In football to receive you must have the right position and be wearing the right number (something other than 50-79). Even if you receive, without the proper authorizations you loose what you received. (all offensive players on the team become eligible once you receive or touch the ball). Those who want to receive blessings from God must position themselves to be receivers. How can that be? Jesus said in John 15:7, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." If we want to position ourselves to be a receiver, we must abide in him. If we want blessings, we must abide in him! If we want to receive anything from him we must abide in him! At first glance that may seem to suggest that only certain people in the church can receive blessings because they are in certain positions. But we need to remember the next rule about receivers and that is after the intended receiver touches the ball, everyone on the team becomes a receiver. That means we get joy when we see another believer get a blessing because that means the whole team can get in on the receiving business! We're shouting for you and we're shouting for all for the Saints because everybody instantly becomes a receiver.

Receivers run a pattern

The best receiver run their patterns: The receiver is told to run a zig zag pattern that looks foolish to the casual observer. It doesn't look like he's going anywhere, but when he gets to the end of the pattern, a good quarterback will have the ball waiting for him on the spot. The purpose of running the pattern is to confuse the opposing team that might try to stop him from receiving. A smart receiver not only knows the pattern but can execute it quickly by outsmarting his defender. In a similar sense those who want to be receivers in the kingdom of God must know how to run their pattern. It confuses the defender. They worship, rejoice, pray, work, serve, pray and worship. Then when times or tough, they confuse the devil by zig, zagging a little and it becomes pray, rejoice study, rejoice, worship, work, pray, pray, serve, rejoice worship! When times are good receivers run their pattern. When the game is intense, receivers run their patterns with the certainty that if they run the pattern that the blessing they seek will be right where it's suppose to be right on time. Even if a receiver runs his pattern he has to make himself open to receive. The devil will be on his case trying to stop him from being open to receive. That's why 1 Peter 5:8 says, "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: " The devil wants to stop you from receiving we must move around in circles and step from side to side to make ourselves open to receive what God has for us.

You must know when to look up

You must know when to look up. Good receivers usually run their patterns without giving away the nature of the play or which direction the ball is coming from. When he has run the play, the good receiver knows when to look up and raise his hands. When he does it just right all a defender can do is tackle him, but its too late the receiver has the ball. That's the way it is with a believer. When we are running our plays the devil is trying to figure how to intercept what God has for us. He watches our moves, but we know how to keep the devil from getting what's ours and we also know how to look up. David said in the 121st Psalms, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord which made the heavens and the earth." If we want to receive, we must make ourselves eligible, run our pattern make ourselves open and look up! If you want to be healed, look up! If you want an answered prayer, look up! If you want a renewed spirit, look up and receive what God has for you!

You must receive the ball in bounds and hold on

Finally, brothers and sisters, if it is your intention to be a believer who is a receiver you must receive the ball in bounds and hold on.

No matter how great the receiver is he must receive the ball inbounds and he must hold on to the ball. He may slip down but if he slips down inbounds it still counts. He may be knocked down, but if he's knocked down, in bounds, it still counts! He may be turned upside down, but if he's turned upside down in bounds, it still counts!

There are many people who are trying to be receivers by being deceivers. They want financial blessings but the want to cheat, steal and rob. That's out of bounds!

They want to live large and have lives full of floss and gloss that they acquire by selling drugs and hot merchandise, that's out of bounds!

They want happy romantic lives but they want to have sexual pleasure without marriage and commitment, that's out of bounds!

They want respectability without accountability, they want to rise how while living low, and that's out of bounds!

When we live lives that are completely "off the chain" and completely out of bounds we may receive the blessing but it will be called back and we lose what we thought we had.

But Jesus said if you, "seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, all of these things will be added unto you." That's inbounds!

When we receive and receive in Jesus name, that's receiving and receiving inbounds!

That's what Jesus meant when he said he came that we might have life more abundantly! It's receiving in Jesus name!

But brothers and sisters the most important thing that any receiver has to remember is how to hold on to the ball.

Even though you receive the ball, defenders will try to take it from you, but hold on!

I don't know about you but I believe the song writer was correct when he said, "this joy I have, the world didn't give it and the world can't take it away!"

I'm going to hold to his hand!

--Winds may blow, but I'm going to hold to his hand!

--Storms may rise, but I'm going to hold to his hand!

--I'm going tell everybody body that I'm on the winning team!

--Jesus is my coach and he has a winning track record!

--He died out on Calvary but arose after three days and nights!

--Hold to his hand, to God's unchanging hand!

Build your hopes on things eternal and hold to God's unchanging hand!

SCRIPTURE:And the LORD came, and stood, and called as at other times, Samuel, Samuel. Then Samuel answered, Speak; for thy servant heareth. 1 Samuel 3:10

Introduction

What does your name mean? Were you named after someone? Is your name supposed to make a political statement of some sort? Or does it reflect the genre of names for your generation, with no particular meaning. Generally, names have a meaning. There are parents who labor over the selection of a name for their children for months because the child's name will often precede him into the world.

While there are many people who labor over the selection of their names there are others who get their names in the strangest of ways. Consider the pregnant woman who was injured in a car accident and slipped into a coma. They were able to save the twins she was carrying, which was a pleasant report when she woke up several weeks later. When she asked about the children she was told that she given birth to twins, a girl and a boy. The woman was a little upset however, when she learned that the children already had names. Who named them? What are their names. The doctors reported that she didn't have to worry that her brother came in and named them for her. The woman went into a rage. "My brother is a complete idiot. He could not think of a name for his dog let alone his niece and nephew. What did he name them?" The doctor said, he named the girl "Deniese." The mother said, "That's not bad. What did he name the boy?" The doctor said, "Denephew!"

As African-Americans, we have been called a variety of names. Most Blacks were imported to this country and their native names were taken from them and another given to them by their slave masters. A striking scene in Alex Haley's book "Roots" is the instance in which the master whipped Kunta Kinte until he accepted the name the master gave him and called himself "Toby." Generally, the slave's name identified him as the property of his master. On some plantations mothers were allowed to give the first name but the last name was the slave master's name. In the 20th century men like Malcom X would appear to urge Negroes to drop what he called the slave master's name and replace it with an "X" which would represent the name we never knew.

Those who hate us called us "Nigger" which is a crude variation of the term

"Niger" used in Acts 13:1 to describe Simeon, one of the leaders of the church of Antioch who was from Africa. In Acts "Niger" meant "the black." While we hate for others outside of our race to call us "nigger" there is a strange paradox in that we often refer to ourselves by the same name, with our own variation, as in "Negguh please!" Even the term "Negguh" is reserved for intra-race use and is viewed unfavorably if used by someone outside of our race.

As we entered the 20th century, we proudly called ourselves Colored People. It was a badge of distinction that identified us with all people of color in the disaspora. Our organizations, such as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People" accepted the name and its association with people of color everywhere.

In the 1940's we became race specific. Our name shifted from "Colored" to Negro. The new colored man was a soldier, fighter, educator and an equal partner in the American struggle. To be called a Negro was an intellectual statement. It was an elevation above the "colored" status that could only find meaning by association with others of color, borrowing from their contributions to establish our own sense of purpose.

In the 1960's we developed a sense of connection with the mother-land. We began to understand the essentials of Pan-Africanism which had been espoused by Marcus Garvey and others two generations earlier. We let our hair grow into large "bush" styles and called the style "Afros" as we wore Dashikis and sprayed our perfectly rounded air styles with "Afro-Sheen" spouting cute terms like "One-Two-Wazuri" (Beautiful People). We were the new Afro-American.

That phase didn't last long. Because by the late 60's we had redefined ourselves again. Our leaders told us that we should not be ashamed of our color. They did the unthinkable, they associated with the color Black. It was very hard for us to say because for so long we made jokes about everything that was black. Black cows give no milk. Black clouds mean rain. Black suits mean death. But when James Brown appeared on the cover of Jet Magazine without his "conked" haircut and put out his song, "Say it loud, I'm Black and I'm proud" the redefining process became popular. We were a new people. We were "Black and Proud."

It took 20 years for us to accept the name "Black." The various generations among us used a variety of names, Colored, Negro, Afro-American and the new name, "Black People." As soon as we accepted that name another metamorphosis began, we became "African-Americans" This time the name referred to the culture rather than the color. It reflects a new trend around the nation, to identify persons by the culture in which they live rather than their color. Thus a Black man who is raised in a Jewish culture could accurately be defined as a Jewish-American. A white person raised in an Afro-centric environment could accurately be defined as an "African-American" by culture and upbringing. Today's names are edging away from color distinctions and favoring cultural distinction.

What matters most? What really matters is not the names that others have called us, or what we call ourselves. What matters is the name that God has given us.."child of God."

As believers, we are proud to be called children of the most high. The words of the song writer summarizes our belief, “If anybody asks you who I am, tell them I’m a child of God.”

Exposition

Our text first considers the boy Samuel who hears God his name.

Samuel was bought to the temple by his mother Hannah and given to the service of the Lord in keeping of a promise she made to the Lord. At the time of this text, most theologians agree that Samuel was about 12 years old.

The aging Eli had sons of his own but they were ungodly and not fit for the kingdom. The young man Samuel became the trusted aide of Eli who lived to be 98 years old. Samuel worked with the aging Eli and assisted him in many of his priestly duties.

He slept near Eli so that he could hear if his mentor called him in the night.

The text projects that on several occasions the young Samuel heard someone calling his name. The lad awoke and went to Eli repeatedly and said you called so “Here I am,” only to find that Eli had not called. Finally, Eli told Samuel what you hear must be the voice of God calling your name. When was instructed to respond to God’s voice the next time he heard it and say, “speak Lord thy servant heareth.”

God Knows our Name

While God is a big God who holds the world in hands, he is also a personal God who knows each of us by name. When he calls us, he calls us by name.

Moses passed a burning bush and heard God call him by name. “Moses, Moses.”

God knows the name we will answer to and calls us by that name. Moses was an Egyptian name which meant “drawn out.” It was given to him by the Pharaoh’s daughter who drew him out of the Nile River while he was floating in a basket. Moses was a few months old at the time. He already had a name which certainly was not Moses. The name “Moses” was the name he answered to, therefore at the burning bush God called him by the name he answered to.

There are some names we don’t answer to. If someone calls out, “Hey, ugly!” We keep walking because we don’t answer to “ugly.” We don’t answer whenever someone calls us out of our names, thus when God gets ready to call our name he calls us by the name we answer to. What do you answer to? “Pookie?” “Shay Shay?” “Jay Jay?” God knows the name you answer to. Just ad a parent knows what name to yell down the street to get your attention and call you home, God knows what name to call.

He called Jeremiah by name.

On the Road to Damascus he called Saul by name.

When God speaks to us he calls us by name because he knows us one and all.

No wonder the old slaves sang “Hush, Hush, somebody’s calling my name. Oh my Lord oh my Lord what shall I do?”

Recognizing God's Voice

Today, there are many who hear the voice of God but do not accept it as such because they haven't learned to recognize the voice of God. In this text, heard the voice of God but thought it was Eli's voice. It never crossed his mind that God could be speaking to him.

There are some like Samuel, who hear God speak but they think it's Eli. Such was the case with Pharaoh as he listened to Moses, pronounce "Thus said the Lord God of Israel, let my people Go." Pharaoh heard the voice of God but dismissed it as the babblings of a deranged wanderer who would have himself be the deliver of his people.

These are those who receive the word of God and his wise counsel from the lips of an uncle, an aunt, a sister, a wife or even a husband. How often it is that we dismiss sound spiritual instruction simply because it comes from a source we can describe as Eli.

This requires each of us to develop an ability to hear God and to distinguish his voice. In John 10:27 Jesus said, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me:" A child knows a parent's voice because they have heard it and understand how it sounds. A stranger's voice they won't hear.

That might require voice recognition training. That's what happened to the prophet Elijah. He hid in a cave for several days trying to hear the voice of God. There was a earthquake, a fire, and a strong wind, but God was not in either of them, only when God spoke to him in a still soft voice did he recognize the voice of the almighty.

Once we are able to hear the voice of God we hear it everywhere. One song writer said, "I hear God, in every church bell that rings. I hear God in every robin that sings." Once we know his voice, it is easy to recognize God's voice speaking, even if the actual words are coming from your wife, mother, pastor, or co-worker.

Samuel heard the voice of God speaking to him, but he never imagined that what he heard could have emanated from the mouth of God...he assumed that is was coming only from Eli.

Every voice is not God's

Just as there are those who hear God speak and think it's Eli, there are also those who hear Eli speak and think it's God.

Although God uses the minister as a vehicle through which he declares the word and points the way, still every Christian is admonished in 1 John 4:1 to "try the spirit" and "believe not every spirit" but test what is said against the word of God.

Have you heard a lesson, sermon, or teaching that sounded suspect. Test them against the word! If they are not supported in spirit by the word of God, it may be Eli speaking rather than the voice of God.

Elijah discovered that the voice of God does not always come in the biggest and the tallest, or the strongest or the boldest but often comes in the smallest, simplest and most subtle of ways.

When God speaks an indelible imprint is made upon the soul of man.

When God speaks, mountains of indecision crumble into pebbles of resolution.

When God speaks, the valleys of despair are exalted to plains of hope.

When God speaks, rivers, filled with the tears of anguish are rolled back, revealing a pathway to brighter days.

I hear the song writer say, he speaks and the sound of his voice is so sweet the birds hush their singing. And the melody that he gave to me within my heart is ringing. And he walks with me and he talks with me and he tells me I am his own; and the joy we share as we tarry there, none other has ever known!

Listening for Your name

Finally, brothers and sisters this text points out that Samuel lay awake that night listening for his name.

It's a good thing to wait on the Lord.

Isaiah told us that they that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength.

They shall mount up on wings as eagles. They shall run and not be weary. They shall walk and not faint.

When God's gets ready for us to serve, he'll call our name.

When God was ready for Noah to build the ark, he called his name!

When God was ready for Moses to return to Egypt, he called his name!

When God was ready for Jeremiah to become his prophet, he called his name!

When God was ready for Peter to become a witness to the word, he called his name!

But one of these days, when it's all over, God will be ready to give us a heavenly crown.

When he gets ready for us to walk the streets of glory, he'll call our names!

When he gets ready to pass ourt heavenly rewards, he'll call our names!

I'm waiting on the roll call every day of my life. I may be driving my car, but I'll be somewhere listening for my name. I may be flying in an airplane, but I'll be somewhere listening for my name.

I can see the roll call as the Saints line up in alphabetical order and

I can see them answer the roll one by one:

Somebody said:

A-Abraham and Aaron moved to the front the line.

B-Boaz and Bartholemew " "

C-Centurion Soldier saved at the foot of the cross, step forward

D-Daniel, fresh from the Lion's den, and David, a man after God's own heart, stepped to the front of the Line.

Jesus, Who arose after the three days and nights!

I'll keep telling the world that he's alive today!

SCRIPTURE: "So they two went until they came to Bethlehem. And it came to pass, when they were come to Bethlehem, that all the city was moved about them, and they said, Is this Naomi?" Ruth 1:19

Introduction

Have you ever browsed the photo album of a friend and stumbled across photos that were taken of them many years ago? Did you get a good laugh? Were they younger? Thinner? Prettier? Wildly dressed? Our old photos tell a story about us. They are invaluable because they become a measuring tool by which we can see how far we have come. They also remind us that we were not always as we are today? Old photos give us a snapshot of the way we were. Some who see those old photos may ask, "Is this you? Wow, you sure have changed! Or time has done you a favor!" Whatever their response those old albums tell the story of where we have been, what we have done and the depth of our struggle.

Even if we hide our old photographs, there are people who shared our journey who remember our experiences just as if they were yesterday. If we return home after a long absence, those who know us will take a long look at us and say, "Is that you?" Even though they are looking at us. Instantly they notice every change. They notice our hairstyle, clothing, conversation, disposition, attitude and spirituality or the lack thereof. If they notice something different they will ask, "Is that you?"

Paul spoke to believers in Corinth about what they once were and urged them to consider how God changed their lives. In 1 Corinthians 6:11 he said, "And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." That speaks volumes to the question, "Is that you?" In many instances, for the better, we are not what we once were.

Booker T. Washington once said we should not measure the value of a person by where he is today, but rather the long road he had to travel to make his arrival. Thus, when we see Christian women today, we must see them in light of the journey they have traveled to reach this point.

God has blessed the African-American woman in so many ways. She has endured some difficult moments in her history, yet she stands as a beacon of strength in the family, community and in the leadership of our race. When we see her today we may ask, "Is this Naomi?" Is this the woman of grace and beauty of our heritage and history. The answer is obvious. She is the new Black woman, phenomenal, mystical, strong and full of faith. The Naomi we see today, is not what she used to be, because God has lifted her, changed her and strengthened her in many different ways.

As believers we triumph in the knowledge that God lifts us up and turns around, and plants our feet on higher ground. When those who see what God has done for us, they are amazed and ask, "Is that you?" And we say, "Yes, thanks to the grace of God!"

Exposition

This text focuses on a woman's struggle to survive, poverty, difficult times and loneliness, with the help of an all powerful God.

Naomi is the central character of this text. She was married to a Jewish man. The couple had two sons. When the land fell on hard times, the family moved into the land of Moab because it had been reported that there was plenty of food there.

In the course of 10 years both of Naomi's sons died leaving only their widows who natives of the land and Naomi herself. Naomi struggled to survive with little help and in the process changed considerably. At points in her struggle she even became bitter and blamed God for her circumstance, but she stopped short of abandoning her faith altogether.

She urged both her daughters in law to return to her own people because she was about to return to Bethlehem, knowing full well she would fight an uphill battle of public opinion and poverty. She left Bethlehem as a member of a financially stable class. She returned impoverished, rugged, bearing a few scars but older and wiser.

One of her daughters in law, Ruth, refused to return to Moab. She stood by the older woman, pledging to stand with her, go with her and to learn from her. "Your people shall be my people and your God shall be my God."

The two women returned to Bethlehem to the judgmental eyes of the Bethlehem community. Ruth was viewed as an outcast. Naomi was viewed in light of the last time they saw her. They saw the beautiful woman of 10 years earlier, and now they saw the rugged woman after only 10 bitter winters. When they saw her they asked, 'Is this Naomi?"

They saw her exterior and its obvious physical changes and asked, "Is this Naomi?" They asked the question before they came close of enough to hear her testimony. If they had they would helped Naomi to see, that despite appearances, God had been good to her, ever faithful and never left her alone.

The woman they saw was a walking and talking blessing, who had survived the toughest ordeal imaginable and was now trying to help another, younger woman to stand on her own.

If they had come close enough they would have known that this woman who stood before them may have changed her appearance but she was truly, "Naomi!"

Her Image and Status Changed

When Naomi left Bethlehem she was the image of beauty and her public image was one of high respect and honor. By no fault of her own, she endured hardship in Moab that robbed her of much of her outward status.

Long before the feminist movement Black women held power and position and were hailed as the greatest examples of beauty and grace that the world had ever seen. Nefertari, the queen of Egypt was married to Rameses II. She was the queen whose love affair with the Pharaoh resulted in great monuments being built on her behalf. Although she was depicted as a white woman in the movie the Ten Commandments, historian confirm that she was African. There were others such "Tiye" the Nubian queen of Kement, or Nzingha, or the Amazon queen of West Africa. The world is often unaware of the fact that 1000 years before the birth of Christ that Ethiopia was ruled by a long line of virgin queens whose beauty and splendor was known around the world. People called Ethiopia many names such as Nubia, Cush, Axum and Sheba. When Solomon reigned in biblical times he was visited by one these beautiful virgin queens, who came with entourage of servants and attendants that consisted of over 700 donkeys and camels and hundreds of guards and soldiers. 1 Kings 10:10 records that she gave Solomon 120 talents of gold, or over $3 million as a gift. There were so many Black queens and strong Black women that history simply scanned them. Cleopatra VII, Candance the warrior and many others help make the point that Black women have historically been women of power and strength.

American slavery became Moab for the Black woman. Forced to live in a different land in a different culture, the world stopped seeing her as a beautiful woman of elegance and grace. It only saw her as a slave, wash woman, and concubine. When the old women told the stories of what Black women once was unbelief inspired by her second class condition.

As the Black woman throws off the shackles of the past, the world asks, "Is this Naomi?"

History says I remember her as a queen and a woman strength. Is this Naomi?

Anthropology says I remember her as a woman of immense beauty. Is this Naomi?

Economist say they remember her as a woman who saved and managed. Is this Naomi?

Sociologist say they remember her as the strong member of the family who could stand behind her man but could stand alone if need be. Is this Naomi?

What the world soon learned is that while her social status may have changed because of geo-centric politics, they were looking at the same Naomi. Having living in Moab for so long she is a little more brassy and sassy, she is the new phenomenal woman. She's still strong, still beautiful, and still willing to stand behind her man but able to stand alone. Yes, this is Naomi!

She mentored another generation

In Moab, Naomi became close to the young women. She shared the rich heritage of her life in Bethlehem. She showed them the godly way. When it was time for her to return to Bethlehem, one of the young women, Ruth, decided to go with her. In Bethlehem, Ruth was unaware of the customs, practices, history or even the social customs of Bethlehem. Naomi, took Ruth by the hand and showed her everything she needed to know. Gleaning fields was the custom for the poor, those who knew the custom knew how to keep food on the table. Naomi showed Ruth how to keep food on her table and she also advised her in her courtship that ultimately resulted in her marriage to a wealthy man. Their marriage produced a child that would be an ancestor to the earthly parents of Jesus.

Just as Naomi gave of herself to insure that Ruth would have a better position in life, women today have the same responsibility. Every woman should be the mentor to a young woman. The Naomi's of this generation are needed to take the hand of the Ruth's of the younger generation and show them the way.

Women who have succeeded in love and marriage should become advisors to young couples and show them the way.

Women who mastered the art of balancing career and family in a way that is rewarding should hold the hand of the young women of the next generation and show them the way.

There is so much to learn that cannot be learned without a mentor. The legacies of women such as Nannie Helen Burroughs and Mary McCleod Bethume who spent their lives promoting finer womanhood is evident in the great women of our times such as Condeleeza Rice, an advisor to the president; and Halle Berry an academy award winning actress, or the Williams sisters, who are world renowned tennis champions. The impetus to keep that flow of success going comes when every woman becomes a mentor for some young woman.

Your mentor is the woman who gets you ready to be on the stage of life, pushes to get your name on the program, then makes sure you have what it takes to look good when you finally make your appearance. A mentor is a connection, beyond mother and father that puts a young woman on the right track and keeps her on that track until she can stand on her own.

Today, women should see Naomi's role as a mentor as inspiration. Despite her age and declining presence, Naomi helped open doors for a young woman whose progeny changed the world.

Naomi was kept by God

Finally, there is one truth that we must not overlook. We must not make Naomi's mistake. In her old age she began to complain about the bitterness of some of her experiences, but forgot that in all of her trials God never left her alone.

Verse 21 is a tremendous paradox. It is a statement of bitterness and sweetness at the same time. It is a declaration of victory and statement of defeat. Naomi said "I went out full" and the "Lord hath brought me home again."

In a moment of weakness Naomi considered the fact that she left home with a husband and two sons, and lost all three of them to hardship, famine and sickness. The human side of her said, “Look at what I used to be, look at what I have now!”

What Naomi did not hear were her own words, “The Lord has brought me home again!”

In all of her difficulties, God never left her alone. There was no way she could have endured the loss of a husband in a strange land without the Lord!

There was no way she could have sustained the loss of both of her sons and buried them in strange graves, without the Lord!

There is no way she could have survived the famine and sickness that took the lives of so many, without the Lord!

Even the fact that she was able to come home again, shows the goodness of the Lord!

Today, every believer whether male or female should take a look around and realize that there is very little we could have done in our history without the Lord!

Even if tempted to complain about life, we should remember that God has always been by our side.

God is always by our side.

I heard the song writer declare, “Winds may blow! Tattered and scorned! Storms my rise in my life, but he’s always right there by my side!”

No never alone! He promised never to leave me alone!

I don’t know about you but I’ve decided that I’ve got to have the Lord everyday of my life!

The old warriors said, ‘I don’t know what I’do without the Lord! When I look around and see what the Lord has done for me, I don’t know what I would do without Lord!”

I can’t even wave my hand without the Lord!”

I can’t even say my prayers without the Lord!

If it had not been for Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

If it had not been for Jesus, who arose from the grave for my sins!

I don’t know what I’d do without the Lord!

On Him They Laid the Cross

SCRIPTURE:" And as they led him away, they laid hold upon one Simon, a Cyrenian, coming out of the country, and on him they laid the cross, that he might bear it after Jesus." Luke 23:26

Introduction

There's a new Black man in town; have you seen him? He's reliable, disciplined, educated, fun loving, giving, goal oriented, financially stable and sensitive. Have you seen him? The thought of such a man gets the attention of women everywhere. Most single Black women are looking for the proverbial "BMW" Black Man Worth something who seems to be increasingly harder to find.

What we define as a BMW seems to change with every generation. Historically a BMW might have been a Black man who could share crop his acreage and provide for his family. It could have been a Black man who had a basic education with the ability to earn and save a few dollars. In recent generations the BMW was scaled down to mean a man who had a decent job. BMW meant "Black Man Working." Some are satisfied if they can simply find a "BMNIJ" A Black man not in jail.

Today, the Black man faces many hurdles that make his life both frustrating and challenging. A tremendous burden has been placed upon him by the society in which he lives that makes his task just as challenging as those of the Black men of history. Just over a century ago Black men fought to be free, to educate themselves and to build schools for their children. Black men fought against racism that threatened to eliminate them by lynchings and mob violence or by government design such as the infamous Tuskeegee syphilis experiment. In the 60's, another generation of Black men faced a new attack as our definition of ourselves changed from that of strong man who provides to the slick man who gets over. With the change in our definition also came a change in our own self expectations, our role in the family and our role as leaders of families and communities.

The image of the historical "Black Man Worth something" is endangered by a plethora of social factors, medical and economic factors that have placed a great challenge on the next generation of Black men. It is the burden to redefine what it means to be a "BMW." The burden is to lift a heavy cross laid upon our shoulders and carry it with the historic strength of our fore father.

What is our burden? We have a burden of protecting our health. Our life expectancy is shorter today because of some race specific diseases that seem affect a higher number of Black men than others such as Diabetes, and prostate cancer and HIV/AIDS. Black men have a life expectancy of 71 years, six years less than white men according to the Joint Center. A Black child born in 1999 is expected to live 67 years, seven years less than a white child.

What is our burden? We have the burden of dealing with an increasingly violent nature developing within our race. In 2002 the Justice-Policy Institute reported that the number of young black men in prison has increased 500 percent over the last 20 years to the extent that there are more Black men in prison today than there are enrolled in colleges and universities. According to the Justice Department We are shooting, kicking, hitting, slapping, cutting, robbing, raping, beating each other in numbers so large that we are filling the prisons. What men should be aware of is that the FBI is reporting that 14 percent of the 20,000 or so murders that occur each year involve family violence. Black families are showing the most increase and black women who are the victims of battering and abuse are killing their mates at a higher rate than any other race.

What is our burden? Our burden is to change our thinking from BMW-where W stands for "with a hookup" to a Black man that is truly worth something, socially, economically and spiritually.

God is also looking for a BMW. He is looking for a "Believing Man who is Willing" following him and carry his cross with a strength that can only come from heaven.

As Christians, we have all decided to take up our crosses and follow Christ. The burden of the world may be heavy, but his yoke is easy and his burden is light.

Exposition

This text focuses on one Simon of Cyrene who was compelled by Roman soldiers to help Jesus carry his cross.

Simon was one of several Black people who shared a close proximity with the beginnings of the Church and witnessed the life and deeds of Christ himself.

Cyrene was the capitol of the province of Libya, located on the continent of Africa, about 11 miles South of the Mediterranean. Its inhabitants were men of dark complexion, enlarged facial features, and kinky hair. Cyrene was populated by people who were descendants of Noah's son Ham, through his third son Phut.

The sons of Ham, after the dispersion at the tower of Babel spread out into various parts of the world. The descendants of Cush, his first son, settled in the area we know as Ethiopia. Mizraim, Noah's second son, settled in the area we know as Egypt. Caanan his youngest son, settled in the area we know as the "promised land." His third son Phut, settled in Libya North Africa. All of these nations were populated by Black people.

During Biblical times many Blacks became converts to the Jewish faith. Although they were not Jews by birth they were impressed with the handiworks of God in their lands and they became believers. Moses married an Ethiopian princess while he moved in Pharaoh's court. The Blacks in Egypt had their armies and land devastated by the plaques of God as they refused freedom to the Slaves. And the Black tribes of the Caanan land trembled in the presence of God as they watched the city of Jericho and others fall under his power.

Black people were loyal followers of the God of Abraham. There were thousands of Black Jews throughout the region, who studied the ways of Yaweh.

The presence of these Black Jews was not unusual in Jerusalem, for there were many. They were so committed to the Mosaic law that when the idea of Christianity was introduced in their circles they met it with vehement opposition. With regards to faith, the Black Jews believed the same as other Jews.

They believed in one God, Yahweh and the Mosaic law.

When Jesus began preaching the Gospel message, there were many Blacks, along with Jewish nationals that demanded his blood as well.

In the beginnings of the Church there was opposition among Blacks to this new Gospel message.

Acts Chapter 6 records how Black Jews rejected the message of Stephen who attended one of their meetings. Chapter 6:9 notes that he went to a synagogue composed of Libertines, Cyrenians and the Alexandrians, three specific Black African nations.

When Jesus was sentenced one of the Cyrenians who was distant from the events in the city was given the burden of carrying the cross. He followed Jesus carrying the cross until salvation was completed.

BMW-Black Man Withdrawn

When Christ was tried and convicted, Simon was not around. He was in the country, away from the center of activity. If we have a dilemma today it is the "Black Man Withdrawn" in the arenas of life where he is needed the most.

In many African-American homes the presence of a Black adult male is nonexistent. An increasing number of homes in our community are becoming female headed creating an imbalance in the family structure the affects of which are felt all over the Black community. There heritage foundation reported recently that there is a direct correlation between the absence of men in Black families and social dysfunctions such as criminal activity.

It is obvious that families are being created all over the Black community without the presence of men, a situation men need to correct.

Men should include themselves in the lives of their children, even if relationships between the adults are strained. Men should be more than, "Just my baby's daddy."

When men withdraw from the family, women are left to assume the role of both provider and home manager at the same time, which is an extremely difficult task which often leaves many loose ends. It's the loose ends that she is unable to handle alone because she is taking care of so many other things, that result in the dysfunction.

The next generation of fathers should "be there" for their children and for their families. It will be a sacrifice but it is extremely important. Men must do what men must do.

BMW-With Assets

The burden was laid on him (Others laid a lot on him, blame, shame, pain) The burden of rising about all three was laid on him.

When the soldiers saw Simon they took the cross and laid it on him. His job was to carry a cross that he did not choose. Yet Simon carried that cross well.

America has laid a lot on Black men. Sometimes Black men thought it was more than they could stand, but with the help of God Black men have been withstanding.

What has been laid on the Black man: blame, shame, and pain! Anything that goes wrong, in the community is instantly blamed on Black men. Even if a child does wrong, many mothers will say you are, "just like your old daddy!"

Black men have the burden of rising above the blame, shame and pain game.

One way to do that is to become a BMW-Black Man With Assets. In our history Black men have sought to achieve many levels of BMW status. At first we wanted our freedom, that's a BMW-F. Then we wanted our education, that's a BMW-FE. Then we needed to be able to work; that's BMW-FEW. Today, we can go one step further, we need a Black man with assets or BMW-FEWA.

The latest model of BMW will require the new Black man to become asset oriented rather than income oriented. That will require a change in our thinking from generating a high income to building assets with that income.

The young Black man can ill afford to waste his resources. Each should strive to use income in ways that will build assets. This begins when each man learns to manage his time and money wisely by: Saving a portion of his income, investing in asset building opportunities in real estate, joint ventures, partnerships or stock or other investment plans.

A black man who earns a six figure income but does not know how to use it to build assets is a man who will be broke shortly afterwards because he lived large on his income but didn't build assets that count. Some of us have the latest cars, fine homes, stock portfolios, and high positions (jobs) in corporate America, but collectively we will remain an income-rich and asset-poor group of Africans in America.

-Income is earning money putting it in the bank. Wealth is owning the bank.

-Income is being able to buy a new car. Asset is owning the car lot.

Jesus added a spiritual twist to this idea when he spoke to his disciples. He questioned the logic of building income on earth without building assets in heaven. Matthew 6:19-20 Jesus said, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal: But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:

Income is being able to borrow. Asset is being able to lend.

The burden of the next generation of Black men is to rise above being consumers to producers

Young Black men must not diminish the need for education. Without an education,

Black men will continue to be pawns in the big picture of life. Despite the lure of NBA and NFL contracts, every young Black man must resist the temptation to become a big spender with a high income rather than truly wealthy in mind, spirit and billfold.

BMW-Walking with Jesus

Finally brothers and sisters, if the world needs anything today it's a Black man walking with Jesus.

The bible record is complete with images of Black men who walked with Jesus and one who helped him carry his cross.

Matthew 10 says Jesus selected 12 men of varied occupations, from varied regions, and even mixed races, to tell the story.

Matthew 10:4 notes that among the 12 there was one Simon, the Canaanite, a descendant of Ham.

When Jesus moved from village to village, Simon, the Black man was walking with him.

When Jesus fed thousands, Simon the Black man was walking with him.

When a woman was healed of an issue of Blood, Simon the Black man was walking with him.

When he moved into the upper room, Simon the Black man was walking with him.

Simeon and Lucius were led by the Holy Spirit to lay hands on Paul to send him on his first missionary journey and carry the story of the cross to the lost.

The Black man's burden today is the same burden shared by Black men of times of old, that is to witness for God and to shoulder the burden of the cross.

We must walk with Jesus.

When we walk with Jesus we see the world from a different perspective.

When we walk with Jesus the world sees us in a different way.

When we walk with Jesus we step out on faith that doors that are closed can be opened.

When we walk with Jesus we stand with confidence that mountains that confront us can be climbed.

When we walk with Jesus we know that questions that are raised can be answered.

No wonder the song writer declared: "I want Jesus to walk with me. While I'm on this tedious journey, Lord I want Jesus to walk with me."

Simon of Cyrene walked the last mile with Jesus, carrying his cross.

Because he walked with Jesus Simon was able to:

-Tell his friends, I was there that day!

-Tell how he took and old rugged cross and put it on his shoulder

-that he carried it to Golgotha's hill!

-told how Jesus died!

Because a Black men along with men of all races walked with Jesus we too can testify that he stayed in the grave for three long days!

But early Sunday morning he arose!

Hood Rich?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 22, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "For you know the grace of our Lord Jesus, that though he was rich, yet for your sake he became poor, so that you through his poverty might become rich." 2 Corinthians 8:9

Introduction

Have you ever dreamed about being rich? Nearly every person has dreamed at one time or another about being rich. It's the dream of having servants to bring you breakfast in bed and to come at your beck and call. Most of us will spend our lifetime trying to reach that dream, climbing over the history of those who have gone before us trying to reach that every changing and elusive plateau we call being "rich." One of the most popular Albums on the Billboard Top 100 is by a rapper named "50 cent" the name of the album is "Get rich or die trying."

Whether or not a person is rich or not depends upon what is being measured and whose doing the measuring. People who value intellect and genius called George Washington Carver a rich man. Although Dr. Carver revolutionized agriculture with his numerous discoveries he refused to patent a single one of discoveries and left them for the world to use freely. Many shook their heads saying they would have patented his 300 ways of making products from peanuts, crop rotation discoveries and other innovations instantly. They measured the value of his accomplishment by the amount of money it would yield, he valued it only by the number of people it would. Even though George Washington Carver died financially destitute, he was intellectually rich.

There are many people who lived their lives happily without achieving what the world calls the status of being "rich." Louis Satchmo Armstrong was one of the greatest Jazz musician that the world has ever known, yet it died leaving very little cash but a legacy of music and history. Harriet Tubman never had much in life but hard times. By some standards she died poor, but yet she had such a rich legacy. The same is true of Sojourner Truth, Phyliss Wheatly and countless others in our history. For varied reasons they all did not amass fortunes, but yet were considered "rich."

To be rich is to have more than is necessary to simply survive. It is to have an abundance of everything essential to living an unencumbered life. Those essentials change with every situation. Tom Hanks considered himself rich in the movie "Castaway" when he was able to finally start a fire. George Jefferson in the television comedy the "Jeffersons" considered himself rich when he moved to a "deluxe apartment in the sky." What is rich to one man is poor to another.

Many of us are doing much better than we have been in the past but we are still poor people by nature, because there are some old habits we have that just won't die.

Many of us have fine bath tubs in our homes, but we still use dish washing liquid for bubble bath.

We have fine kitchens and the most beautiful cabinets but we still stock the shelves with Spam, vienna sausages and baked beans.

Most of us have gas or electric stoves now, but we still save the old chicken grease in a coffee can.

Most of us have television sets but still put aluminum foil around the antenna to see the picture or use pliers to change the channel-or better still, we use a clothes hanger for the antenna!

Most of us have one of two pieces of fine china but still drink water out of jelly jars.

Most of us can afford to wear a piece or two of designer clothing every now and then, but when we do we still leave the tag hanging so everyone can know it's new. Every now and then we get invited to formal occasions that require evening gowns, but we still can't resist the temptation to buy a pretty dress, leave the tag in place and take it back the next day for a refund.

Whether we are truly rich or not has nothing to do with how much we have, but it has much to do with who does the measuring. Jed Clampit, although he became wealthy with oil, was still considered just a Beverly Hillbilly. Loretta Lynn never quite outgrew the folksy ways she learned as a "Coal Miner's Daughter." The people around them set the standard, somehow they never quite measured up to what others called "rich."

The Hip Hop generation coined a new phrase to describe a new generation today that places a tremendous amount of emphasis on appearances. In the Hip Hop Generation it's fine for a young man to step out of a monster ride with chrome plated rims, wearing Tommy, FUBU and the latest Jordans then stand in line at school and eat free because he can't pay for his lunch. Those who have such appearances are called "Hood Rich."

The Rappers called "Big Tyme" captioned the essence of being hood rich in their recent album by the same name. One of the most popular songs was called "Still Fly." The words said:

Gator boots with the pimped out Gucci suits (With Da Gucci Suits)
Ain't got no job, but I stay sharp (Ehh-Ehh Ehh-Ehh, I Stay Sharp)
Can't pay my rent, cause all my money's spent (I Can't Pay My Rent)
But that's okay, cause I'm Still Fly (Uh,Uh, Damn! Cause I'm So Fly)
Got a quarter tank of gas - in my new E class (In My E-Class Benz)
Cause that's alright, cause I'm gon' ride (Hmm-Mmm)
Got everythang - in my momma name (We Got Everythang, In My Momma Name)
But I'm Hood Rich - dadah-dadah da-dah da-dah da-dah (Uh-Huh!)

How would God measure richness? Would he be impressed with our Platinum FUBU, Tommy Hilfiger, or Guicci brands? Would he be impressed with our Escalades, Lexuses, Cadillacs, Hummers and SUV's? Do you think he would say, "that's tight!" and want to get himself all slugged up with a 24 karat grill? I doubt that anything we call being "rich" would impress God at all. If we had "Brewster's millions" he still wouldn't be unimpressed and would say "blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Those who want to see Jesus one day won't spend their lives trying to be "hood rich" because that won't matter in glory. What we really want is to be "God Rich" which is much more important than being simply "hood rich."

As Christians, our desire is to live the abundant life. We ask for everything in Jesus' name and he provides for all of our needs in ways that makes it abundantly clear that we are truly "God Rich!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes his second letter to the church at Corinth about the ultimate goal of the Christian experience.

The general theme of the 8th and 9th chapters of 2 Corinthians is receiving the abundant life then giving of ourselves to help others receive the same.

In this Paul said Jesus set the example. The words of the text echo across the centuries, "though he was rich, yet ... he became poor."

Jesus, as a part of the Holy Trinity had everything. He was rich in power and had omnipotence at his command and could do all things in the universe, yet he became poor. He laid it all aside, he became powerless so that, as he walked here among men.

Ray Stedman says Jesus was rich in love and had all the angels of heaven to adore him, "continually bowing down," as Isaiah tells us, "crying out, 'Holy, Holy, Holy is the Lord of Hosts'" he laid it aside, he became poor and came to be the one of whom Isaiah could write, "He was despised and rejected by men ... we esteemed him not ... he was stricken, smitten by God, and afflicted," {Isa 53:3-4}.

He was rich in resources because the word teaches that, "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof." Yet he became so poor that he told his disciples, "Foxes have holes and birds have nests but the Son of Man has no place to lay his head,"

He had no home, they had to borrow a manger in which he could be born; he had to borrow a penny when he wanted to perform a miracle; he depended on others for his clothes; he went about with no certain dwelling place; and when he died they had to borrow a grave in which to lay his body. He had no place; nothing of his own.

He was rich, yet for our sakes he entered into the poverty of human existence and held absolutely nothing back, not even his own life.

His purpose in doing what he did is that we might be rich in those aspects of life that would contribute to what he called the "abundant life" which is defined by a standard that cannot be measured by the economic standards known to man. Christ described true richness as having "treasures in heaven" that cannot be corrupted by time or stolen by thieves.

His journey on earth was to show believers how to move to the highest level of existence possible, to be "rich in the Lord."

What is Rich?

Just what does it mean to be rich? Jennifer Lopez, in her recent hit "Jenny from the Block" defined rich as having a lot. She says, "Don't be fooled by the rocks that I got I'm still, I'm still Jenny from the block Used to have a little, now I have a lot."

Simply having a lot does not make a person truly rich. It's possible to be a poor man who has a lot. It's possible to be a lonely woman who has a lot. It's possible to be broken spirited, unhappy, lost, dejected and hungry and still have a lot.

We see the accounts of so many people who have a lot who use drugs, commit suicide become alcoholics and otherwise destroy themselves and we wonder, "how could someone who has so much be so unhappy?" The answer lies in the fact that while many people have a lot they are still poor on the inside.

That's what Jesus came to address through his life journey on earth. Paul tried to explain this in Ephesians 3:16 when he said, "That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man." Jesus came to show us how to be really rich on the inside, which operates independent from what's going on outside.

There is nothing wrong with having a lot! There is nothing wrong with wearing nice clothes or living in a nice neighborhood or driving a nice car, but those are not the signs of the truly rich. The truly rich man is the one who could be just as happy living in a shotgun house as he is in a condominium. The truly rich woman is one who could be just as happy washing her own clothes as could having a maid service to do it for her. Having a lot and being rich are not one in the same.

True richness is a sense of well being, security and self worth that comes from the inside. The truly rich woman may be given a shanty in which to raise her family. But come back in a week and she has turned that shanty into a place that is filled with love and compassion. It's no longer a shanty, it is a mansion built by love. That's why papa and granny can sit down to a table full of mustard greens, rice and gravy and fried chicken and feel like it's food fit for kings, because real richness comes from the inside.

As youth begin their journey in life each should strive to become spiritually rich before you get wealthy. Those who are spiritually rich and not overwhelmed when they hit the big time. They are not swept away by the fast life or awed by the money they make. J-Lo's words seem appropriate. They say, "don't be fooled by the rocks I got, I'm still Jenny from the block." Real riches are not in rocks, but in the Rock. His name is Jesus.

The rich have a home

The real rich always have a place to call home.

We have seen the pictures of the homes of the wealthy. Some have 10 bathrooms, movie theaters, and bowling alleys and production facilities all in one place. While there is nothing wrong with such splendor, it good to know that a beautiful house does not make a home.

Some may discount the value of their little apartment or house, but what makes it a home is not where it is located or how much it cost. What makes it a home is the people on the inside.

What makes it a home is love.

The truly rich can have a home in a pup tent, shotgun house or a mansion it does not matter because it is the love of the people that transforms a house into a home.

In his quiet hours Rapper Tupac looked as millions but realized that none of his riches would get into heaven. He asked the question "I wonder if heaven got a ghetto?" Even after his death he still has a hit on the charts called "Thugz Mansion"

Tired of gettin chased by the police and arrested
Niggaz need a spot where WE can kick it
A spot where WE belong, that's just for us
That's the only place where thugs get in free and you gotta be a G at thug mansion
Leave all the stress from the world outside
Every wrong done will be alright (I wanna go)
Nothin but peace (I wanna go) love (I wanna go nigga)
And street passion, every ghetto needs a thug mansion
There has to be a place better than this, in heaven
So right before I sleep, dear God, what I'm askin
Remember this face, save me a place, in thug's mansion

The truly rich don't look for a thug's mansion but for a place in the kingdom of God.

Being God Rich

Finally, brothers and sisters, the essence of the Christian life is not to be "hood rich" but to be "God rich"

We are spiritual ballers banking heavy and flossing blessings and loving every minute of it.

We are "God rich" when we realize that as children of the king we have been given an unlimited debit card on the bank of heaven, with no daily limit.

We are "God rich" when we realize that we have a spiritual cell phone to glory, that never runs out of time, whether we call morning, evening or night, God's always got the minutes

We are "God rich" when we realize that God has a special FUBU line, just for us. He's got FUBU blessings, "for us and nobody but us." FUBU "for us, and nobody but us". He's got FUBU healings, "for us and nobody but us." He's got FUBU opportunities "For us and nobody but us."

We are "God rich" when we realize that Tommy Hilfiger can make us look good but a touch of His finger can turn night into day, bad into good and wrong into right!

We who are God rich don't need platinum chains around our necks, because we are children of the king and have gold under our feet.

Have you not heard, my father is rich in houses and in land, he holds the wealth of the world in his hands!

Unlike the hood rich who have everything in "my mama's name" the God can ask for anything "in Jesus name". I hear Jesus is in John 16:23 say, "..Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you."

When you are God Rich we can ask in Jesus name and if it's in the will of God, we will receive it!

Have you not heard, my father has a special line of shoes worn only by the God Rich. Saints have been wearing them for thousands of years. It's a brand God created when we the children of Israel were getting ready to cross over into a land flowing with milk and honey. But standing between them and the promised land was a wide river that was too deep to walk across and too wide to swim. Right there on that spot, God told Joshua to tell the priests to touch the water with their feet and their feet touch the waters of the Jordan river, the waters rolled back and they crossed on dry land.

Whenever a saint reaches a river that's too hard to climb, he puts on his Jordan's, not Micheal Jordan; not a tennis shoe. I'm talking about God's river crossing shoes and steps out on the word of God.

No wonder the old warriors sang, "I got shoes, you got shoes, all of God's chilluns God shoes, when I get to heaven gonna put on my shoes and walk all over God's heaven."

Those who are "God Rich" are not looking for Tupac's Thugz Mansion, because they already have a mansion. I heard Jesus say, "In my father's house there are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you that where I am ye may be also."

In the hood you might want to be called a "G" because you are a gangsta. But in my father's house there will only be "J's" those who people who belong to Jesus!

If you are a "G" your goal is to be hood rich. If you are a "J" your goal is to be "God Rich"-and belong to God.

No wonder the song writer wrote, "I belong to God. I belong to God. From the top of my head to the mole of my feet, I belong to God."

Come and go with me to my father's house!

There's peace and happiness there, in my father's house!

There's joy in my father's house!

He's name is Jesus!

He died out on Calvary to make a way for me!

Early Sunday morning he arose from the gave with all power in his hands!

Come and go with me to my father's house!

Praise God Anyhow

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 2, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls: Yet I will rejoice in the LORD, I will joy in the God of my salvation. The LORD God is my strength, and he will make my feet like hinds' feet, and he will make me to walk upon mine high places. To the chief singer on my stringed instruments" Habakkuk 3:17-19.

Introduction

How do you act when things are going wrong? When things are going right in our lives we are the most agreeable people in the world. When things are going right, there are smiles on our faces, pep in our steps and we are surrounded by a virtual halo of goodwill, cheer, and enthusiasm. We sing loudly in worship services, give bold testimonies in bible studies and Sunday School classes and generally show off a countenance that says "Praise the Lord." When things are well with us we generally say, "God is good, all the time. All the time, God is good!" However, there are some of us that make a complete turn around when things are not going well in our lives. These are times when there is trouble in our families, or we are besieged with personal woes, there are some who have extreme difficulty keeping that smile on their face, or that pep in their step. That cheer they once had seems to dull and their enthusiasm fades. When things go well, they smile and give God praise, but when things go wrong, they find no joy in the Lord.

Which day is a good day? For the believer, every day is a good day. It is a day of thanksgiving, even days when trouble is obvious. There are some days when you know you're in for trouble. You know you are having a bad day when you call 911 and they put you on hold! You know you are having a bad day when your twin brother forgets your birthday! You're having a real bad day when your birthday cake collapses because of the weight of the number of candles. You are having a bad day when you read the obituary column of the paper and you see your name and picture. These might be extremes, but everyone experiences difficult and trying times.

As a nation we are living in difficult and trying times. We are hearing of wars and rumors of wars. Nations are rising up against nations. For the first time in its history, this nation is rising as the aggressor on the world scene instead of the arbitrator of world peace. Over 200,000 soldiers are poised for war and the national leadership is prepared to spend more than $95 billion dollars to wage war as it prepares to send more of its sons and daughters onto the battlefield. All of this makes believers uneasy. Some even ask, where is God? Why doesn't he intercede and do something to stop the bloodshed that is on the way?

Jesus said such times would come. In fact, In Matthew 24:6 Jesus said we would hear of wars and rumors of wars as we get close to the end of time. He said these things must be, but when we see them they would be a sign that we are nearing the final age. So, how should we as believers respond when trouble comes our way? Whether it's personal trouble or national trouble, the response is the same, keep the faith. God will make a way!

As believers, we are confident that God is still in control of his world. Our faith is not shaken by troubles. We sing with confidence, "I'm so glad that troubles don't last always." We praise him during good times; but even when times are filled with trouble, we will still praise the Lord!

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Habakkuk as he encourages the people of God to have faith despite difficult times.

The prophet Habakkuk had the difficult task of preaching to God's people as their country was threatened with war and trouble. From the onset Habakkuk was disturbed because God seemed to let a wicked nation triumph and appear victorious in its attempts to bring judgment on the people of God. The Chaldeans were sweeping westward and appeared set on plunging the nation into war. The nation was on alert because the reports of the activities of its enemies were coming in daily. There was violence and threats of violence everywhere but God seemed unwilling to act to stop what was certain to be collision between great powers of the day. (1:1-4). This troubled Habakkuk, who could not see the justice in the death of the innocent and he asked why God seemed to ignore the approaching evil. All of the trouble the people faced seemed to arise from a little nation, generally ignored and obscure, but now claiming the attention of every major power in the known world.

God speaks to Habakkuk personally and shows him how he is working in the events that unfold before him to work out his will, even to the point of using what is obviously evil to accomplish an eventual good. In 1:6-11 God characterizes the national enemy as one that is terrible, dreadful and void of judgment or dignity (v.7) which credits its ability to survive and avoid destruction "unto his god." (v11). Yet, there is a vision and response from God for that difficult time because believers were becoming uneasy. They questioned why their sons and daughters would be plunged into a fight with an evil nation without an appropriate response from God.

Responding to the cries of the people, God shows Habakkuk a prophecy and a vision that reassures the people he is not asleep and is moving behind the scenes to accomplish his will. In 2:3 God notes that at the "appointed time" the truth of his word shall speak to the world situation "and not lie." He encouraged the people to be patient. “Though it tarry” means, “it may seem like it’s taking a long time for him to act” but he says “it will surely come.” He encouraged all believers to approach the troubling times with an attitude of faith saying, “the just shall live by his faith.” (2:4)

Habakkuk announced that the world is in God’s control and not of those who worship idols, wreak violence or seem to be victorious in their evil ways. He proclaimed that God is still in control and master of the universe. He said the “Lord is in his holy temple: let all the earth keep silence before him.” (2:20) In essence, be still and watch God do his mighty works in mysterious ways that seem illogical to the unbelieving heart.

Thus, Habakkuk concludes that although there are difficult times ahead and troubles all around, the just should not give up the faith.

Living by faith has implications. Its implications are spelled out in verses 17 and 18. “Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor ... shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls; yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation.”

Tough times are threatening and trouble is all around, the just and believers must resolve to “praise God anyhow!”

Ways to use your praise

What attitudes should believers have in times of difficulty, trial and instability. These passages in Habakkuk give us a clue:

ECONOMY CHANGES BUT GOD IS THE SAME: When the economy changes for the worse, there are many people who lose their praise. When their stock investments, 401k’s, IRA’s and other investment plans are doing well they feel like praising God. But what if they don’t? The symbols of economy in this text are in verse 17. When there are no figs on the fig tree, no fruit on the vine, no olives, the fields produce no harvest and the cattle and sheep are lost, that is a sign that times are obviously tough. The economy has taken a change for the worse. In biblical times these items were barometers of the economy, much like the Dow Jones Industrial Average or other investment reports help us to understand economic trends today. Habakkuk said when times are tough we should praise God anyway! Why? Because economies change, but God does not. Joseph became a ranking government official in Egypt when he predicted that the economy would change, providing seven years of famine and seven years of prosperity. God showed him how to save in good times to prepare for difficult times. Job experienced bad times in which he lost all of his money, investments and business enterprises, in addition to his children and poor health. Job’s response is memorable “The lord giveth and the Lord Taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord.” Our families have endured depressions, good times and bad times. What we have learned is the truth of Malachi 3:6, “For I am the LORD, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.” Because God doesn’t change, it does not matter whether the economy changes, we’ll praise God anyway! If the cost of living goes up we will still praise the Lord because economies may change but God is the same!

WE TRUST IN GOD: There is a reason believers are able to have joy in difficult times; it is because we trust in God, who is the source of our salvation (v18). We may not understand fully what salvation is until we consider that each one of us has someone we count on to help us when we get our backs to the wall. We have a favorite friend, family member, co-worker or lender who we can usually count on to help us out of a tight. The person who helps us in bad situations and saves our skin, is said to be our salvation. We don't worry as long as our personal loan officer is at the bank or our backer is in place. Habakkuk says God is our salvation, he is our backer in all matters. Problems will not step around us because we are Christians, but we deal with them with an attitude of victory because we know the God of our salvation is behind us. Psalm 27:1 says, "The LORD is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? The LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?" That means we have nothing to fear because the God of our salvation will provide for us. David made it clear in Psalm 23, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want." A noted song writer put it this way, "I trust in God wherever I may be. Upon the land or on the rolling sea. Though come what may, from day to day, my heavenly father watches over me."

PRAISE GOD IN TRIALS: The hardest time to praise God is during periods of trial. They seem to tear us apart, and pull us from side to side. Trials, if we are not careful, can steal our praise. Look at verse 19. The word of hope in Habakkuk is that God will "make my feet like hinds feet" or he will lift me up and "make me to walk upon high places." We praise God because we know that we may be on the low ground at the moment but in due time God will help me to walk on higher ground. Whatever valley we are experiencing, in due time God is promising "higher ground!"

We endure the low ground of sickness because we know in due time, he will make me to walk on higher ground!

We endure the low ground of financial distress, but we know in due time, he will make me to walk on higher ground!

We endure the low ground of family dysfunction, but we know in due time, he will make me to walk on higher ground!

Our troubling experience is low ground, but in due time, he will make me to walk on higher ground!

No wonder the song writer records, "Lord lift me up and let me stand, by faith on heaven's table land, A higher plane than I have found, Lord plant my feet on higher ground."

Praise the Lord anyhow

Finally brothers and sisters, while we may be concerned about perilous times or personal troubles, there is a blessing for man or woman who continues to praise God as he prays to God.

If Habakkuk said anything of value to Israel it was that despite the difficulties of the moment they should continue to praise and give thanks to the Lord.

The believer who is living through difficult trial continues to praise God because he knows that "all things work together for the good of them that love the Lord who are the called according to his purpose."

Thus we are admonished to wait, pray and praise, God will work it out.

When we wait on the Lord we put it all in his hands and then praise him in advance for the victory. That's why Isaiah 40:31 says, "But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint"

If we wait on the Lord, he will work it out! I heard him tell Paul, "My grace is sufficient for thee"

Whatever it is that we need God's grace is sufficient and he will supply it, so we praise God anyhow!

If we need to be forgiven, God's mercy is sufficient to forgive us, so we praise God anyhow!

If we need comfort, God's peace is sufficient to comfort us,so we praise God anyhow!

If we need to be satisfied, God's storehouse is sufficient to satisfy us, so we praise god anyhow!

If we need healing, God's touch is sufficient to heal us so we praise God anyhow

If we need to be strong, God's power is sufficient to strengthen us, so we praise God anyhow!

If we need to be challenged, God's work is sufficient to challenge us, so we praise God anyhow!

If we need to be refreshed, God's God's fountain is sufficient to refresh us, so we praise God anyhow!

Why should I praise God in my troubles? When I'm surrounded with sickness, financial difficulties, family woes and money problems, why should I praise the Lord?

We should praise the Lord because such times are the times in our lives when we show the level of our spiritual strength. When it's all over, we'll be more valuable to the kingdom than we have ever been.

A raw diamond is worth thousands of dollars, but once it has been cut, shaped and molded in the master's hand, it is worth millions.

Gold ore, is worth thousands, but once he has been refined in the fire it is worth millions.

Yet some still ask, "Why am I literally being torn apart?" This is the question that Israel asked and in Jeremiah 18:2 God sent Jeremiah to the potter's house for the answer. He showed him a lump of clay on the potter's wheel, but the clay had a flaw that would reduce its value. To fix it, the potter had to tear down the whole lump of clay and reshape it all over again.

Why do I seem to be torn apart? Because the potter is reshaping the clay to increase its value!

A small bar of steel may be worth $5 until it is cut into a set of $50 horseshoes. That same bar of steel is worth $350 if its cut into sewing needles. That same bar is worth $250,000 if it is cut to form springs for expensive watches.

No wonder the song writer wrote, “Have thine own way Lord, Have thine own way, thou art the potter, I am clay. Mold me and shape me after thy will, as in thy presence, yielded and still.”

Every Saint should be ready to be tried in the fire!
Before you go in the fire, praise the Lord!
When you are in the fiery furnace, praise the Lord!
When you come through tell the story, of how you got over!
Tell them about Jesus!
Jesus, Mary’s baby!
Jesus, our rock in a weary land!
Jesus, our bread when we are hungry!
Jesus, who died on an old rugged cross…
But Early Sunday morning arose from the dead with all power in his hands!
Even if times are tough, praise the Lord anyhow!

Candles On the Cake

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La,

March 5, 2003

SCRIPTURE: The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away. Who knoweth the power of thine anger? even according to thy fear, so is thy wrath. So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom. Psalm 90:10-12 "And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever." Rev. 22:5

Introduction

Have you ever celebrated your birthday with a birthday cake? Most of us have had at least one birthday cake in our lives. It's a joyous moment. It begins when we are too young to remember. On our first birthday there are dozens of faces standing around cheering singing "Happy Birthday!" We didn't know why everyone was so happy, but we knew it must have been a great day because there was so much laughter and joy. There was one candle on the cake. As we grew older the number of candles on our cake increased too. Soon there were four candles then eight. One day there were 18, then there were 28. Then we stopped putting candles on the cake in our futile attempt to stop the onward march of time. At some point we simply put one candle on the cake to represent that age we don't want to speak about. It's always easy to blow out one candle thereby securing that elusive single wish, but it takes more effort to blow out candles when there is a large number of them. To some the candles on the cake represent our years. To others they represent blessings. Every candle marks another year that God has smiled on us in his mysterious and peculiar way.

If the candles on our cake represent blessings that we receive from God then we would need more than just one candle for every year. We'd need thousands of candles. We'd need candles for every minute and second we have lived. Every minute has 60 seconds. Every hour has 60 minutes and 3,600 seconds. Every day has 24 hours or 1,440 minutes or 86,400 seconds. Every year has 365 days; that's 8,760 hours, or 12,614,400 minutes or 31,536,000 seconds. There is no cake big enough to hold that many candles. In fact, the Guinness Book of Records shows that the largest number of candles ever put on one cake was done in 2001. Then 2100 candles were placed on one cake to make the world record.

Suppose a person lives a very long time. Suppose a person lives 96 years 364 days and 17 hours. How long is that?

It's 1163 months.
It's 35,404 days.
It's 849,696 hours.
It's 50,981,760 minutes.
It's 3,058,905,600 seconds.

By any measure 96 years 364 days and 17 hours is a long time. Every second represents a blessing from the Lord! It would take a birthday cake as large as the State of Texas to hold that many candles!

There is a poem that reflects moments when we try to measure the length of life with with candles on our cake. It says:

96 candles were glowing in the dark
each one told a story, each one left a mark
There was a time, there were just a few but the numbers grew, and the joys came new

When there were 16 candles, the world was mine
Those 26 candles found me in my prime
Was it 36 candles when I put my hand in his Or was it 56 or 66
that I trusted him to fix-my shaking hand, quivering voice, making him my only choice for this life and the life to come preparing me a place in the glory of the sun?
Which was it?
I can't quite remember from January to December
So many candles, so many claims so many shining moments, so many flames

No cake was big enough for 76 candles
There was no place to put 86 for sure
But I lived, loved and endured and enjoyed every minute,
I had in it as I held tight to faith secured

To help me light one more, you came to light another candle in my name to squeeze in another flickering flame that flutters with every wind, that takes my breath and comes back again

96 candles glowed in the dark
each one told a story, each one left a mark
So, light a candle for old time sake
but don't weep or wake for me
For you see,
96 is all there was to be shared between me and thee
I'm standing on the glorious shores of heaven
No candle
No cake or leaven
For I am with the Lord now
His light is number 97
-Wright 2003

As believers we know that every day we have in this life is a blessing from God. We have pledged ourselves to use each day wisely as we light a candle of thanks for every minute and every second.

Exposition

This text focuses on a Psalm of Moses in which the importance of using our days wisely is underscored.

Biblical scholars believe Moses wrote this Psalm during the wilderness travels about the same time as the events of the Book of Numbers. It emphasizes the importance of numbering wisely using our given time.

Moses makes the clear point that no individual should expect to live forever, especially on this side of Jordan. Therefore each is implored to "number" or carefully use each day to achieve the maximum results out of life.

In the verses preceding the text Moses emphasized that while God himself is beyond time (90:4) and oblivious to its effect, mortal man is not. A thousand years is only like a day to God, but even a few years take a toll on mortal flesh. The general expectancy is about 70 years (90:10) and those who have great strength live beyond that time, but even then, they too are soon cut off and fly away.

Thus, Moses concludes that every believer should seek to use available time wisely to assure that life is lived in a way that is pleasing to God and amasses rewards in the kingdom to come.

Using Time Wisely

Moses prayed that he might apply his heart to wisdom. That means that he desired to use his time wisely. What can be considered a wise use of time? What pursuits in life can be described as wisdom applied.

Since we all share the same sixty second time block together, what is the best way to apply it? One poet said:

"I only have a minute, 60 seconds in it, forced upon me I did not choose it, but I know that I must use it, give account if I abuse it, suffer if I lose it. Only a tiny little minute but eternity is in it."

LIFE OF GOOD WORKS: Our time is used wisely when we can say that our life has been filled with good works. Not necessarily great works that changed the world, but "good" works that changed conditions around us. Men and women should strive to use their available time to make the world around them better. The man or woman who helps someone in distress, assists someone in need, shows someone a better way, uses their life to good works. The word of God says, "Wilt thou know oh vain man, that faith without works is dead." The person who has great faith will also show his works at the same time. A noted song writer summarized the value of good works to believer's life by penning the words, "If I can help somebody as a pass along. If I show somebody that his traveling wrong.If I can cheer somebody with a word or song, then my living shall not be in vain." Those who do good works with their available days, use their time wisely.

STRONG FAMILY PRESENCE: Our time is used wisely when we can say that we used our lives to promote strong family relationships. A mother or father's greatest reward is to know that everything that could possibly be done to help their children and grandchildren stand on their own feet has been done. That includes listening, advising, celebrating, supporting and even correcting them in ways that help them to grow and prosper. Building family takes time. It requires that each of us spend time together, listening, laughing, sharing, debating, working, praying and worshipping together. The person who uses his time to help build family relationships uses his time wisely and does not squander it foolishly.

LIFE OF FAITH: A person who lives a life of faith and service to God uses his time wisely. To some a life of faith is a waste of time because often it does not seem exciting. The life of faith is one that heavily revolves around the people of God. It is a life of Sunday School and worship, prayer, bible study and listening to the Word of God. It is a life rooted in trusting in God and praise. Trusting God is the obvious outcome of faith. It is the "blessed assurance" that come what may, God will make a way. It is a life that does not change with time because faith does not diminish with age. On the contrary faith deepens and becomes an even grander presence with age. The person who spends his or her life in service to the kingdom of God uses time on this side of Jordan building a life on the other side of Jordan that will never run out of time. That's a place that the songwriter had in mind when he wrote, "I have heard of a land on a far away strand; tis the beautiful home of the soul. .tis a land where we'll never grow old."

No more Candles

Finally, brothers and sisters, we have the joy of knowing that while we blow out candles on our cake on this side of Jordan, we are going to a place where there will be no more candles; for Jesus is the light.

In this life we need candles, lights just to see our way, but in the life to come there will be no need.

In this life we get older every second and add candles to our cake. But in the life to come there will be aging, or sickness or death.

In Revelation 22 John describes the beautiful city of God as a place that has streets made of Gold. In the midst of that city will stand a tree that bears 12 manners of fruit, whose leaves will provide healing for the nations, eliminating sickness, disease and death.

In that city, time shall be no more! Minutes, seconds, hours, weeks and days will blur into one long happy holiday.

In verse 5 John said they will need no candles either. They won't need candles to see or to mark the hour of the day or the passing of time because the glory of the Lord will radiant light for everyone and time will be no more!

That's the place where the wicked will cease from troubling!

It's the place where the weary will be at rest!

It's the place where every day will be like Sunday; where it will always be "Howdy" and never "Good-bye!"

No wonder the song writer says, "When we all get to heaven, what a day of rejoicing it will be. When we all see Jesus we'll sing and shout the victory!"

It's a victory won by Jesus out on Calvary when died for our sins!

It's a victory secured when he arose from the dead, Early Sunday morning!

It's a victory claimed when we accepted him as our Lord and savior!

"When we all see Jesus, we'll sing and shout the victory!"

On Saturday March 1, 2003 Luvella Gary went home to glory just hours before her birthday. Her family had come from far and near to celebrate her birthday. Here the poet once again:

96 candles glowed in the dark
each one told a story, each one left a mark
So, light a candle for old time sake
but don't weep or wake for me
For you see,
96 is all there was to be shared between me and thee
I'm standing on the glorious shores of heaven
No candle
No cake or leaven
For I am with the Lord now
His light is number 97

Traffic Jams

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 9, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "They that wait upon the Lord, shall renew their strength. They shall mount on wings as eagles. They shall run and not be weary. They shall walk and not faint." Isaiah 40:31

Introduction

Have you ever been caught in slow moving traffic? Doesn't it always seem to happen when you have little time to get where you are trying to go? Sometimes traffic moves so slow that we can become wedged between a solid line of cars in front of us and behind as well as to the left and right of us. Even when you think about trying to squeeze yourself in another lane it seems like a huge 18 wheeler will pull up on both sides and sandwich your car in place. All you can do in such situations is just stare at bumpers and tap your steering wheel. There are some who get angry and blow their horns loudly at the cars in front of them, even though the car in front of us is helpless because there are 50 cars in front of it. It's frustrating.

What we do to amuse ourselves is interesting. We read bumper stickers. We wave at the children in the car in front of us who make funny faces out of the back window. We also read the messages on the back of trucks that tell us how much the truck pays in taxes every year. There are some who bring work from the office, read books, complete homework, have family prayer and even watch movies in their automobiles.

There are others who get so frustrated that they even get violent. There was a time when people who were upset would stand on the street and yell at each other. Studies have shown that since 1990 a new phenomenon has developed called "Road Rage" in which people not only shout but they pull guns and shoot each other as well as other types of violent responses to their frustration. In fact a study conducted by Mizell and Company of Bethesda, Maryland between 1990 and 1996 pointed to over 12,000 injuries and deaths a year attributed to "road rage" alone.

Waiting frustrates us. We wait at traffic lights at 3 a.m. in the morning when we are the only ones on the street. We wait for phone calls to be returned. We wait for an answer on our job application. We wait for test results. We wait at the post office. We wait in the pharmacy. We like things fast. That's why we have fax machines, cell phones, microwaves, and fast internet connections. A look of gloom comes over a person's face when we announce that we don't have email or a touch tone telephone. Experts say that we may spend six months of our lives sitting at stop lights and five years of our lives waiting in some kind of line. All of that waiting frustrates us.

We get frustrated because things seem to move too slowly. We get angry when we get put on hold on the telephone or if we have to stand in line at the grocery store. Even though the clerk is scanning merchandise at double the speed of a few years ago, we still get upset when she has to stop to verify a check or when someone who has more than 10 items stands in the fast lane. It's not road rage, it's grocery line rage! There are some people in the grocery line that would shoot us dead for asking for price check with a long line behind us.

Traffic Jams frustrate us because they interrupt our normal flow of activity. We have packed out schedules tightly, and then traffic jams get in the way. We have to wait.

Suppose we could transform our waiting into productive time? Suppose use life's traffic jams as opportunities rather than view them as frustrations? When we learn how to do that, then we learn the true meaning of what it means to wait on the Lord.

As believers we try to pace ourselves. We try not to get so busy in life that our time with God becomes an interruption. Waiting patiently for God to move in our lives is a characteristic of the Christian life that we all aspire to achieve. When we achieve it, we know what to do in traffic jams.'

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Isaiah as he tells the people of Judah to patiently wait for God to move without frustration.

For 40 years the people of Israel were shifted from one world power to another. They prayed to God and waited for him to respond to their prayer of relief. The city of Jerusalem and its temple had been destroyed by the Babylonians in 587 B.C. For some forty years the Judeans had lived as hostages in a strange land; they were discouraged repeatedly in their efforts to liberate themselves and to return to their homeland. Their independence seemed to come slow. The stunning victory of Cyrus over the mighty Babylonian power (538 B.C.) and his decree of liberation for the Jewish exiles were events too joyous to recount. They waited impatiently for the time when they would return home, but everything seemed so slow. The prophets came telling them that God would prepare a way for them but the long highway home that they promised, seemed so far and so improbable. The prophets repeatedly told them that God would give them a divine pardon, comfort them in every major problem area, and promised the restoration of Zion and its Temple.

While the people believed God for their liberation, they were impatient. This prompted the prophet Isaiah to declare that they should not become impatient, but to wait on the power of God to help them take the appropriate steps. For Judah the steps included their liberation by the Persian government and the return home. While waiting on the command to return, they raised money, prepared for the journey and arranged their affairs in such a way that they were instantly ready whenever God gave the command.

It seemed like a slow pace for them, but they waited for God to move and eventually he led them back to the promised at his command.

What it means to wait

What does it mean to wait? The common understanding of "wait" is that by waiting we simply sit still and do nothing. It's like sitting in a traffic jam. You tap you figures, pass time and do nothing. Yet "wait" means more than just sitting idly. Because the word "wait" is a verb it is an action word that can mean at least three things:

WAIT CAN MEAN EXPECTATION: While a person waits one of the things he does is to expect or anticipate something. His mind is not a blank, but he is busy anticipating big things to come. A woman who is pregnant is waiting for her baby to be born, but that waiting is hardly inactive. Much is going on. And there is a great deal that the mother does during the waiting that is purposeful and productive in terms of the health of the baby. She takes care that she does nothing that will interrupt or injure what she expects. In the same way a believer who waits with anticipation for what he expects from God. What are you waiting for? Is it something that you have asked God for but it seems as though your answer is not coming fast enough? While you are waiting, you should protect your spiritual life and make sure nothing happens that will interrupt or stop your blessing from happening. To live in expectation is to live constantly aware that we should think positive and prepare for what we are waiting for. A couple preparing for a child begins to do things in advance. They consider names, make a few purchases and even prepare a place where their baby will live. They don't just wait idly, the live in expectation. To wait, therefore, means to live expectantly! Live as if what you are waiting for is about to happen any minute, because in reality it could do just that.

TO WAIT IS TO BE READY: Another definition of wait is to be in readiness. Waiting involves preparation. In other words, it's not just about being still. It's about being ready to move when the time is right. A good illustration of this type of waiting is a relay race. The second runner in the race does not sit on her hands while she's waiting, does she? She stretches and limbers her muscles, then she begins to run alongside the other runner, ready to grab the baton and go. A detective on a stakeout also displays this kind of waiting. The detective works hard to stay awake and remain ready so that when the criminal shows himself, the detective is ready to spring into action. If you are waiting for something you must stay prepared just as soldiers who are waiting for the command to go to war, must stay ready, we too, must stay ready. Jesus told his disciples to watch and pray for they would not know the day or the hour when he would return. On other occasions, he told them to keep their lamps trimmed and to prepare for the return of the bridegroom.

INVOLUNTARY WAITING IS GOOD TOO: Even involuntary waiting is good too. A traffic jam is involuntary waiting. But there are other things that slow us down, such as temporary job layoffs, sicknesses, business failures, and other complications. All of these have a way of bringing our pace to a slow crawl. Despite how frustrating these circumstances can be, even waiting in these contexts can be good. Sometimes traffic jams give us time to think. Sometimes these events which force us to move at a crawl's pace, give us time to think of those things which are really important. There are many who never take time to pray until there is a traffic jam. There are some of us who never talk to our family members, take time to enjoy our homes or anything else of value until we experience a traffic jam. Waiting in this context often has a purpose. There is a plant called the "wait-a-minute." What makes it unique is that it is its very sharp, often hooked thorns. When dealing with it, it would be wise to stop and wait a minute before plucking the flowers from is plant. There are many times in our life when it is wise to wait a minute and think before we move forward.

Even involuntary waiting can prove to be purposeful if we use the time to stop and think.

When God gets in the waiting

Finally, brothers and sisters, waiting becomes powerful when God gets involved.

When we are waiting for a change in our personal direction, rather than just idly waiting, wait on the Lord! That means we should expect something to happen, anticipate its coming by avoiding anything that disrupt and be ready to receive it.

If we are seeking a great opportunity, don't just wait, but wait on the Lord. Expect an answer to your prayer, don't do anything that will disrupt it and be ready to receive it.

If we are seeking direction, don't just wait, but wait on the Lord. That means to expect God to show you the way, don't do anything that will disrupt his direction, and be ready to receive it when it comes.

We are able to take the most frustrating moments and turn them into learning situations because we have learned how to wait on the Lord.

When you wait on the Lord, that which was impossible becomes possible.

When you wait on the Lord, that which was out of range comes a little closer.

When you wait on the Lord:

-Those who are weak get a little more strength. I hear Isaiah declare, "They that wait upon the Lord, shall renew their strength. They shall mount up on wings as eagles. They shall run and not be weary. They shall walk and not faint."

-Those who have fallen down, get back up again! That's why Job declared, "Yea though he slay me, yet will I serve him"

-Those who have lost their hope, find spiritual renewal and power to say, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean on Jesus' name.

Wait on the Lord, and mountains will be made low!

Wait on the Lord, and valleys shall be exalted!

Wait on the Lord, and crooked places shall be made straight!

Wait on the Lord, and rough places shall be made plain!

Hold to his hand, hold to God's unchanging hand!

While you are waiting, keep your faith turned up high and hold to his hand!

While you are waiting, keep watching and praying!
While you are waiting, keep telling the story!
Tell everybody about the goodness of the Lord!
Tell them how he woke me up this morning and clothed me in my right mind!
Tell them how he walks with me and talks with me!
Tell them how he died out on Calvary! But don't stop there..tell them how Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands.
Wait on the Lord ...and everything will be alright!

Old Wine, Old Clothes and New Lives

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the New Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 16, 2002

SCRIPTURE: This our bread we took hot for our provision out of our houses on the day we came forth to go unto you; but now, behold, it is dry, and it is mouldy: And these bottles of wine, which we filled, were new; and, behold, they be rent: and these our garments and our shoes are become old by reason of the very long journey. Joshua 9:12-13; And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles, and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish. But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved. Luke 5:37-38

Introduction

Do you know people who have joined the church but still have many of their old habits? In any given week believers meet individuals in the marketplace or workplace, even in their homes who have associated themselves with a church but who still live their old lives. It is frustrating to believers because often these individuals are seen as examples of what it's like to be a Christian.

Most of us know of people who actively participate in a church without letting go of their previous life-style which are often inconsistent with the word of God. They are in church, but not in Christ and as a result they are frustrated because they have not experienced all that they should from their new relationship with Christ.

We know them. They belong to a church but they still:

-Drink alcoholic beverages and frequent clubs and honky tonks;

--Live with someone as husband and wife without being married; Enjoy pornographic literature, music and entertainment;

--Engage in sex without being married, or otherwise involve themselves in adulterous or impure relations;

Embrace Gay and Lesbianism life-styles as a matter of personal preference.

These friends of ours want the best of both worlds. They want blessings from God and the freedom to live as they please at the same time.

As believers, we strive to make our new lives in Christ real. When we share at the communion table we renew our vows with the Lord and reaffirm our commitment to walk in the newness of the faith with the Holy Spirit as our guide.

Exposition

This text focuses on how enemies of God's people used old bread, old wine and clothes to pass themselves off as believers of God.

Joshua led Israel on a march across the promised land that resulted in victory after victory. The kings of the land were frightened over this powerful army of former slaves that seemed unbeatable. In a valley which dissected two mountains, Mount Ebal and Mount Gerazim two altars were built by the people to renew their covenant with the Lord. They built an altar on Mount Ebal and sacrifices were offered in worship as the whole law and it curses were read from one mountain while the Blessings of the Covenant being read from mount Gerazim. They had held a huge open air worship service and rededicated themselves to God. This was a time of great blessing.

The Gibeonites were not Jews, but they believed that there was great power in the God of Jews. They sought to get the protection and blessing of God without actually being a Jew themselves. Somehow they learned of a Mosaic order given in Deuteronomy 20:10-20 that allowed Israel to offer peace treaties with countries that were a great distance away from them. So, the Gibeonites planned to deceive the Israelites into making a peace treaty with them by getting Israel to think that they represented the people of a nation from 'a distant land' and on that basis to seek to negotiate peace terms.

They decided to masquerade as friends of Israel who were from "a great distance." Verses 3-13 tells how it was done. They got together a delegation of men and made them up in such a way as to appear as though they had been travelling for a long time from a distant country. They put the oldest, most worn out sacks they could find over their donkeys and filled the sacks with dry, mouldy, old bread. They gave them old cracked wineskins and made the men in the delegation wear old worn out clothes. Their plan was to mix in with the Jews and make it appear that they had heard about the mighty things their God had done in Egypt and to the Kings on the other side of the Jordan River and because of what they had heard abut them and about their great God they wanted to make a peace treaty with them.

Joshua saw what appeared to be evidence that these people had been on a long journey. They saw old bread. The saw old shoes. They saw old clothes and immediately took the bait and gave them a treaty without consulting God or praying over the matter. Ultimately, the Gibeonites returned to their home cities. When Joshua came to destroy their cities they held out the treaties made with Joshua as their protection. Joshua honored his word and let them live, having been deceived by men bearing old wine, old bread, and old clothes.

In Luke 5:37-38, Jesus also makes a point about new wine. He said that no one puts new wine in old skins because new wine will burst the old skins. New wine, according to tradition must be put in new skins. That referred to the practice of using freshly tanned goat skins as receptacles of new unfermented wine. The new skins were freshly tanned. As the grapes fermented the skins stretched big enough to hold the contents. If new wine was put into old, cracked skins it would burst them and all would be lost.

Together, the two passages make two important points

There are many who attempt to participate in the covenant blessings of God by appearance rather than practice. The Gibeonites wanted to appear as if they had been on a long journey but really had not. They did so to get blessings from God. There are millions of people today who do the exact same thing. They "appear" but do not "practice." These are the persons who wear a cross but do not bear a cross. They go to church but the church is not in them.

There are many however, who only appear to have been on a journey. They mingle in with the saints, wearing the right clothes, talking the right talk and appearing religious, hoping to get a blessing by their appearance even though there has not been any practice.

It is a dangerous thing to try to sup with the Lord unworthily. 1 Corinthians 11:27-30 notes that, "Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. 28 But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body. For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep."

As a general rule if you are practicing a sin for which you have not repented, you are out of step or communion with God. A believer should, examine himself, readjust, then participate in the Lord's supper at the next time. No blessing is derived from participating unworthily.

The only way the Gibeonites received a blessing by deception was by the failure of Joshua to pray before he decided to give them the treaty they wanted. Had he prayed their deception would have been revealed. At the communion, a participant presents himself to God directly, who cannot be fooled. Paul told the Corinthians that many have found that instead of blessings from sharing in the Lord's supper unworthily, they brought damnation, sickness and even death to themselves.

The nature of the believer's journey is a journey of faith and trust in God. By the time many believers appear at a worship of bible study each week, many of them have come through a long journey of trusting in God, faith and hope.

When you have spent time in prayer and bible study, you have been on a journey.

When you have help the poor and the needy and worked to uplift the kingdom you have been on a long journey.

When you have lifted the spirits of the weak and stood in the gap for the lost, you have been on a long journey.

When you have trusted God for your increase and placed your faith in him alone, you have been on a long journey.

Those who make this daily trek with the Lord have found it to be exhausting and refreshing, draining and rewarding at the same time.

This is a faith walk that God will open doors for us and tear down obstacles that get in our way.

Those who have been on this journey, sing with new meaning the old song, "I wouldn't give nothing for my journey now." With fervor they lift their voices and sing, "I want Jesus to walk with me. While I'm on this tedious journey, I want Jesus to walk with me."

New Skins for New Wine

The second passage points out a new truth, new wine cannot ferment in old skins. Those who want to live a new life in Christ must not live in the old wine skins ways. The two cannot mix. If the life is truly converted it will burst into the old life sooner or later. Married man can't put his new married life in the old single man's bottle. A converted believer can't put her new life in Christ in the old life-style. A spendthrift that stumbles upon a fortune has "new wealth" but if the old spendthrift ways continue, the wealth will soon be lost.

Our new life in Christ is spanking brand new, it does not fit into our old life-style. 2 Corinthians 5:17 says, "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature, old things are passed away, behold, all things are become new."

When the scripture speaks of "all things" what does that mean? It means four things about us change:

1) Attitudes. The way we see life and the way we respond to circumstances changes. As believers we see opportunity in failure, hope in despair and even a chance for victory in defeat. Our old attitude was one of failure, anger, frustration and defeat. Our new faith based attitude and our old spirit of doubt will not coexist together. One will destroy the other.

2) People. The people with whom we surround ourselves frequently define us. If surround ourselves with people who are about everything but the kingdom of heaven, then they have a tendency to influence us. But the "new wine" can't survive in the old skins. It has to change people, not abandon friends, but change running buddies. We are known by the company we keep. The old folks say, "Birds of a feather flock together." A person who is really new in Christ, changes the people with whom he associates.

3) Places. The places we go also reflect our spirituality. People who trust God and live the spirit filled life have little interest in going to any place that does not promote, encourage or build upon the spirit filled life. A truly spirit filled believer gets no fulfillment from going to dance halls, honky tonks, speak easies, discos and night clubs of ill repute. Thus, by his own choice, he narrows his list of places to those that benefit his new life in Christ.

4) Things. The activities in which a new creature in Christ engages are those that will build the kingdom. He's not interested in owning a set of burglar's tools or a device that help him steal cable television programs without paying for them, pornographic videos, and a variety of other "things." To be a truly new creature in Christ means to change the "things" that define us. We want to change them to "things" that will make us whole in Christ.

Our new lives in Christ must be lives that are nurtured in new skins. They can't exist with the old attitudes, people, places and things.

A new cup for a new life

Finally brothers and sisters, we must consider that only those who are new creatures in Christ can drink from "this cup."

In sharing the final meal with his disciples Jesus told them that he would not eat with them until the kingdom building mission is complete. He broke bread and blessed it and urged his disciples to eat bread in this way as a memorial to the sacrifice of his body. He presented them with a cup of wine and urged them to view it as a memorial of his blood which would be shed to seal the new agreement that God was making with all men of every race and nationality who believe.

This cup, as Jesus related it, is the cup filled with "new wine" which is represented by the blood of Calvary.

There was a time, when we were full of the old wine, that we kept bottles of gin, vodka and wine ready for a quick sip.

There was a time, when we were full of the old wine, that we couldn't go to work or even church, without a nip or two!

There was a time, when we were full of the old wine, that we couldn't get through the week without finding a minute for a happy for hour!

But old things are passed away, and behold all things become new.

The cup that Jesus offered is filled with the new wine of salvation. No wonder the old warriors sang, "None but the righteous, none but the righteous shall see God."

"This cup" was to become the cup of victory. It would be sweet and savory to every one who tastes of it because Christ will have drank the bitter dregs himself.

"This cup" would seal the promise of power and greater blessings made to every Christian.

"This cup" when shared in true faith by believers would make: forgiveness possible, hope thinkable, the past bearable, the present liveable, the future faceable, heaven obtainable.

"This cup" shared by every believer washes away the sins of the world. For Galatians 4:4 declares, "for in the fullness of time, God sent forth his son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law..."

"This cup" answers the song writer's question: "What can wash away my sins?" by answering "Nothing but the blood of Jesus!"

Oh precious is the flow that makes me white as snow, no other fount I know, nothing but the blood of Jesus!

Jesus, the burden bearer because he lifts the burdens of oppressed!

Jesus, the good shepherd, for he searches for his lost sheep

Jesus, the faithful friend, for he was willing to lay down his life for a friend

Jesus, the bright and morning star, for he guides lost travelers along the way!

Jesus, the fountain of living water, for he refreshes those who are weary. No wonder the song writer declared "I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad"

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and rose early Sunday morning!

Jesus, who has all power in his hands! All Power! All Power in his hands!

Ain't Gon' Study War No More

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 23, 2003

*SCRIPTURE: "And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat the swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Isaiah 1:4

Introduction

Would you like to see a world where there were no wars? We are preoccupied in modern times with war and the preparation for war. There has never been a time in history when war was not evident some place in the world. Even in the bible, the relative peace and tranquility of the Garden of Eden was interrupted when one brother, Cain, went to war with his brother, and killed him. The various reasons we give for war seem just in our own eyes, but rarely do our victims see our war as justified in any way. If we read the bible we see wars between the Jews and the Assyrians, the Jews and the Babylonians; not to mention the wars between the Jews and the Philistines, Moabites, Ammorites, Hittites, Jebusites and countless others. We have seen nation against nation, we have seen man against man; Jacob against Esau; David against Goliath; Saul against David and the list never seems to end. When we study history most of our studies are about the cause and effect of our wars. We study the glorious campaigns of the Greeks under Alexander the Great. We study about the grandeur that was Rome. We study about the French Revolution, The American Revolution, the American Civil War, The Spanish American War, World War 1 and II, Korea, Vietnam, Desert Storm and countless more skirmishes. Our preoccupation with war is so distracting that we can't focus on anything else.

In modern times we can watch the battles "live" on television.

We can see the devastation. We can feel the pain of millions of hurting people, whether it's decimated families as a result of the bombing of the World Trade Center in 2001 or the weeping and wailing of women and children as they watch families and livelihoods go up in smoke in Iraq.

We see so much war that we yearn for a day and time when there is no more war.

We yearn for the day when we can turn on the television and laugh, rejoice and celebrate with people around the world because we are at peace. When that day comes it will be a day of rejoicing.

In his last Sunday morning sermon before his death, preached at the Washington National Cathedral on March 31, 1968, Martin Luther King, Jr., declared: "I believe today there is a need for all people of good will to come to a massive act of conscience and say in the words of the old Negro spiritual, 'We ain't gon' study war no more.' This is the challenge facing modern men and women."

We ain't gon' study war no more! Those are stirring words that are the center of all of our hope. We desire to see the day when we won't study, prepare for or protect against war.

Such day is hard to imagine, but it is coming.

Imagine a day when men will differ but not feel the need to kill another man or nations of men to resolve their differences!

Imagine a day when men will want more, land, water, oil, and other natural resources, but not feel the need to kill others to possess it!

Imagine a day when we will be so busy enjoying and improving upon the quality of life that we will never want to waste our time or energy studying ways to disrupt or destroy.

The old slaves didn't have much education, but they lived in hope of such a day. It would be a day when they would lay down their swords and shields and study war no more!

As believers we know that as long as the world is populated, controlled and ruled by men who feel threatened by each other, intimidated by each other and who fear each other, there will be war. However, we look for the day that is coming when the Son of God shall rule, and we shall study war no more!

Exposition

This text focuses on the Prophet Isaiah as he looks forward to the coming Kingdom of God and sees a time when men shall study war no more.

Isaiah was a very controversial prophet of his time. He preached to the Southern Kingdom about its sinful and materialistic ways. He was often criticized and sometimes viewed as being unpatriotic because he constantly clashed with many of the kings who reigned during his life.

He verbally chastised them for their obsession with power, greed, and immoral living while at the same time claiming to be a nation the served the true and living God. In chapter 1:10-17 he denounced the nation's claim to be holy and religious as hypocritical. He said their putrid immorality would lead to wars and more wars. Isaiah called those who wrapped their actions in religious piety "transgressors" in verse 28. He said the transgressors and the sinners would continue to clash until they destroy themselves.

That kind of talk was dangerous. There were some who viewed it as traitorous. They expected the man of God to wave the flag of Judah and endorse transgression in the name of nationalism. While many of the kings listened uneasily to Isaiah, one King, Manasseh, tired of the condemning words from the old man. Early Church fathers accepted as truth the historic account that said Manasseh ordered Isaiah fastened between two planks and had him sawn asunder.

While Isaiah talked against the immoral nature of men that leads to war, more than any other prophet, Isaiah kept raising the hope of the people by reminding them of the not so distant future in the timeframe of God. What Isaiah saw coming was a day when there would be no war!

While chapter 1 closed in gloom about destruction, chapter two opens with the hope of construction and renewal for believers who would be a part of the Kingdom of Heaven.

He looked forward, to a time in the not so distant future, when the world would seek the Lord and his salvation and come to Mt. Zion or "the place where God is" and seek to learn to incorporate his ways into their daily lives. Verse three says it this way: "And many people shall go and say, come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

God showed Isaiah a vision of a beautiful time that was coming. Its beauty is shared in verse 4, as Isaiah notes that it would be a time when men would transform their weapons into implements to better the world, that's the meaning of "beat their swords into plowshares." Instead of spending their resources building weapons, they will be transformed into means of feeding the hungry and providing for the improved quality of life of all. That's the meaning of "spears into fishhooks."

He saw a time when nations would not raise their swords or weapons of mass destruction against each other.

Most importantly he saw a time when we "shall not learn war anymore."

He said we "ain't gon study war no more!

War reveals our weaknesses

Isaiah disturbed Israel because he constantly reminded them that beneath their appearances that there was an element of ruthlessness within them. The nation was God fearing and spent a considerable amount of time in worship and in forms of godliness. Yet, beneath the appearances the sinful nature of Israel existed. What Isaiah saw then perhaps still exists today. We would like to believe that we believe in decency and fair play. We would like to believe that other nations are the bad guys because they assassinate, annihilate and destroy to gain profits, power and control, but we do not. War has a tendency to strip away the veneer and we see all men everywhere for what we are: sinful people who cannot avoid conflicts because it's in the nature of humans.. War makes us know that because of our sinful nature we will always be in one spiritual battle or another until the second coming of Christ.

War reveals the weakness of the systems we thought could prevent wars, such as the United Nations. We believed that if we could get the powers of the world to sit down together in the same room that we could resolve conflicts in a United and peaceful way that would establish a lasting peace. When we watched one conflict after another seemingly resolved or reduced in impact by the court of world opinion represented by the United Nations, we felt safe. We saw the fall of the Soviet Union and felt at ease as the threat of nuclear war dissipated. We saw the fall of Apartheid in South Africa, the collapse of the Berlin Wall and other events that gave us high hopes for international peace and economic reform. We saw presidents Richard Nixon open the doors to China and Jimmy Carter make great strides toward peace and Bill Clinton lead us to an era of economic prosperity we had rarely seen before and we started feeling good about things. Then a series of personalities appeared on the world stage whose natures were less congenial. They did not lend themselves to talk. The last of these personalities: George Bush and Saddam Hussein entered the world scene and revealed our weaknesses again. Both men became such impassioned enemies that they openly tried to assassinate each other with under cover operatives who have tried everything from poisoning food to sniper attacks. When all else fails, the two of them plunged their respective nations into what Isaiah called destructive conflicts between the "transgressor" and the "sinner." One points and says the other may have weapons of mass destruction. The other uses weapons of mass destruction to annihilate and destroy the other as the world watches in shock, tears and fear as we see the raw savagery of war. Many tried to avoid seeing it by changing the television channel but it never goes away.

Without a doubt war shows our strength, but it also shows our weaknesses.

World conflict begins small

What happens on the world scene begins small. It begins in marriages and in families. There are husbands and wives who worshipped together and enjoyed lives together who literally go to war with each other in divorce arguments. Often they use every weapon they know to completely destroy the other. Families are at war. One side of a family hates the other side and actively works to destroy the other. Neither has a moral ground, both are what Isaiah called either the "transgressors" or the "sinners." Even friends who sit at a table playing a friendly game of cards go to war with each other. One accuses another of cheating and winning the $10 pot, pulls out a gun and shoots a friend over $10.00. A young man who kills a store attendant to rob him of $50 in his cash drawer does the same thing as a nation that would destroy another to get its oil fields. The core tenet is the same, "Your presence is a hindrance to my ultimate success. I remove the threat when I remove you by any means necessary." That is the essence of war. It's two girls fighting over a boy. It's two young men fighting because one dissed' the other. When we attack each other with sticks, beer bottles, skillets, pots, rocks and bats, we are using conventional weapons. When we pick up a pistol, rifle or a shotgun, we are using weapons of mass destruction. Even though only two people are involved, our intent is to utterly destroy the other and we don't care who gets hurt in the process. World conflicts begin small. What we see on the world scene is the magnification of what is happening all over the world on a smaller scale. That's why Isaiah angered people when he kept telling them that their personal tendency toward immoral acts would ultimately lead to their destruction. Isaiah chapter 3 paints a very morbid picture of conflict and destruction that will result in judgment and destruction. The big wars start with the little wars. In that respect, we are all condemned to be either a “transgressor” or a sinner.

War creates a yearning

Finally, brothers and sisters, war creates a yearning within us for a better world.

That’s when the words of Isaiah in chapter 2 have greater meaning to us. They create a yearning for the time that the prophet Micah said would be so beautiful that the wolf and the lamb will lie down together in peace and people will sit under the cool of fig trees in the summer without being afraid.

The more we hear of war, the more we long for the time that Isaiah talked about when men will turn their swords into plowshares and turn their spears into fishhooks.

The more we hear of devastation, death and destruction, the more we long for the time when God will lead us besides the still water and restore our souls.

The more we see the fallibility and weakness of the present world order, the more believers yearn for the coming of the Godly kingdom, headed by Christ himself.

The more we see the heavens and the earth being shaken by a powerful God, we should be thankful that he offers us a kingdom that cannot be shaken.

Those who know the Lord must be busy during times of war, assured by our confidence that despite the destruction we see, God is in control.

We must be busy showing compassion to those who will be victims of war and to the soldiers and their families on both sides of the ocean who carry out the orders of their commanders.

We must be busy praying for the will of God to be known and shown!

We must be busy raising hope to a world that has been devastated. It is a hope that is based on nothing less than the blood of Christ.

That’s why the songwriter wrote, “My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name.”

On Christ, the author and finisher of our faith!

On Christ, the prince of peace and Lord of Lords!

On Christ, the solid rock I stand, all other ground is sinking sand!

We must continue to see the coming day of our Lord.

When Jesus comes, the wicked will cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest!

When Jesus comes, the mountains shall be made low and every valley shall be exalted!

When Jesus comes the rough places will be made plain and the crooked places shall be made straight.

When Jesus comes, the old spiritual will have new meaning, “I’m going to lay down my sword and shield, down by the Riverside and study war no more!”

Tell the world it won’t be long.

When You Can't Get Enough!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 6, 2003

SCRIPTURE:"The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want." Psalm 23:1

Introduction

Do you know people who never know when they have enough? Gluttony is one of the mystical seven deadly sins, because it refers to people who do not know when they have enough. While it is frustrating not to have enough of things that are essential, it is also a problem when you have a sufficient amount of everything but still think you need more.

There are millions of people who don't know when they have enough. They have more shoes than they can wear and yet they still want more. They have more dresses than they can wear but they want more. They have more suits of clothing than they can ever think of wearing, but they still want more and more. They have difficulty answering the question, how much is enough?

Psychologists tell us that sometimes our desire to have more may reflect our past. If we have never had enough food, we may always want to get more food to insure that we have enough. If we've been deprived of other essentials, sometimes our inner spirit keeps telling us to get more to protect against the day when we won't have them. When we've been poor we want to get more to insure that we will never be without again. If we never had creature comforts, sometimes we want more to make sure that we have an ample supply for hard times.

There is a difference between our wants and our needs. Our needs are those things that are essential. We must have food, clothing and shelter. Our wants usually build upon our needs. We want certain kinds of food, certain kinds of clothing and certain types of shelter. Our wants and needs are different.

The Bible teaches us that to live well we must learn to know when we have enough. That means we must know the difference between our needs and our wants. We have enough when our needs are being met sufficiently. It is possible to have everything that we need without having everything we want.

Learning when we have enough is a difficult lesson to learn because we are constantly bombarded with the message that we need something else in order to be happy. If we don't have the newest, fanciest, or hottest item, then we're missing out on all the fun. This message extends to all areas of life. If we don't look like the most beautiful people we see in the magazines, if we don't have a life like the rich and famous, or if we don't have the exciting friends and family that we see on TV, then we must be doing something wrong.

In the 1960's there was a song whose words included the phrase "I can't get no satisfaction!" Today, there are millions who are struggling in life without being satisfied. They push themselves harder and harder. Many have a loving spouse but are not satisfied, so they look outside their homes. They have a few dollars in the bank but they are always seeking ways to get more. They "can't get no satisfaction." Even in bible times they could have easily sung the words, "I can't get no satisfaction." In the beginning men were prosperous on earth, but they were not satisfied here; so they built a tower that they thought would reach heaven, only to have their languages confused for ever.

When is enough enough? When do we push back from the table of "more" and say enough is enough? The answer escapes us, but the outcome plagues us and is always present.

One of the benefits of being a Christian is that the spirit of God gives us a spirit of satisfaction. That spirit does not take away our ambition or our desire to succeed, but it does allow us to appreciate every day as a blessing and to trust God for our daily bread, one day at a time.

As Christians, we are proud to acknowledge that since we have found the Lord, we have developed a renewed appreciation for what we have without being uncomfortable or anxious about the things we do not have. We have come to learn that God cares for us and will supply all our needs, someway or somehow. God will make a way.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains the nature of the relationship between God and his people.

David's life was one living example of all of the extremes of life. He enjoyed the comforts of being king of a united Judah and Israel. He also knew what it meant to be a hunted man, always struggling for existence and survival. The range of his struggles took him from being a mere boy who faced lions and bears in the field to challenging stand before the giant Goliath. Though surrounded by his enemies on all sides he was fed and sustained by the hand of God. He was as target for death repeatedly but survived it all.

In all of these situations God provided David with his needs, sometimes in ways that appeared strange to others.

When he faced the lions in the field or stood before Goliath, David may have wanted a sword and shield but God gave him what he needed; a slingshot.

When he was being hunted by King Saul and had nothing to eat, he may have wanted a steak dinner, but God gave him what he needed; bread from the priests table.

In all of his experiences, David concluded that what God gave him was more than enough to sustain him. This prompted him to write, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want!"

David's words did not mean that he did not desire anything, but that he would not be left in want of those things essential to his well being, including green pastures, still waters, an anointed head and strength for the valley of the shadows of death.

The essence of Psalm 23:1 is that God will provide what we need and what God provides is more than enough to satisfy the hungry soul.

There's Enough in the Cup!

Today, we should pay close attention to how David evaluated his situation in Psalm 23. First, he took an inventory of what he had. He noticed that God had given him a sense of peace, shown him green pastures, prepared a table before him in the presence of his enemies, and anointed him with a level of prosperity that was enviable. When he measured it he concluded his cup was full. He was blessed so much that his cup was beyond full but actually ran over.

If believers today would take the same inventory we'd would come to the same conclusion. God has truly blessed us in so many ways. Our inventory list would include personal blessings, a few comforts, reasonable health, a hearty appetite, and a reasonable portion of strength. Like David, we could easily say, he has anointed our heads with oil. We've been blessed so much that if he blessed us anymore we would not be able to handle any more. Maybe that's what the song writer had in mind when he wrote, "Count your blessings, name them one by one. Count your many blessings see what God has done!"

When we measure what God does for us on a daily basis and really think about it we must conclude that God gives us "enough."

When Elijah ran from the face of King Ahab and hid himself by the brook, what did God do for him? Every day he was brought food by a raven and water from the brook. It was enough!

When the Three Hebrew Boys refused to eat the food of the king's table, the king was amazed that their meager personal diet sustained them. God had given them enough!

When that widow woman went to her barrel every day, she could have complained that God never filled her barrel, but she praised him every day because, every day she went to her barrel there was enough!

Enough doesn't change with the size of the cup!

There are many people today who are unhappy because they have enough! If that sounds strange, we must consider the real world in which we live. Once many people realize that their cup is running over, they change the size of the cup! They get a bigger cup. Our cup of blessings is proportioned by God to each of us. What we need is given to us by God independent upon what size container we try to put it in.

We have food, clothing and shelter, that's enough. Enough may mean a two bedroom house, with a little car, a change of clothes and food for each day.

However, if we change the size of the cup, enough is still enough. Enough doesn't change because we change the size of the cup. We may have a three bathroom house now, but all we really need is one, we have more than enough! We may have five pairs of shoes now, but all we really need is one, we have more than enough. We may have two cars now, but all we really need is bus fare, we have more than enough!

In Luke 12:16-18 Jesus gave a parable about a rich man who had filled his barns to the point of overflow. Yet he decided to build himself a bigger barn thinking that would certainly be enough for him to eat, drink and be merry the rest of his life. The man in the parable was chided for thinking the bigger barn would be enough. He did not realize that his salvation wasn't in the barn but in God who fills the barn.

In a similar sense, those who are succeeding at reaching higher levels should always remember that the salvation is not in "bigger" or "more," but in understanding that everything comes from God who supplies more than enough for us to eat, live and be happy.

If a man and his wife are not on one accord about the handling of their finances, opening another account want make them happy!

If a family is filled with hatred and frustration, building a bigger house won't give them peace.

If a man hasn't learned how to love one woman, having five girl friends on the side won't make him happy at home.

Enough doesn't change with the size or number of the cups.

Grace makes our cup Enough

One of the most important lessons we learn about being a Christian is that God provides what we need, when we need it, in proportion to our ability to receive it on an as needed basis.

Often those who are involved in building projects get letters of credit from a bank that guarantees that they have access to a certain amount of funds. As they need the funds they draw from their line of credit on an as needed basis.

In a similar sense every believer has a blessing account in glory. Our blessings come on an as needed basis. They don't come all at once and neither do they come without some conditions. Sometimes blessings come with restrainers to protect us from ourselves. That line of credit that is suppose to pay a contractor for building a building is available at the bank, but when you draw it down the check is made out to the contractor and the account owner to protect the account owner from himself. It's possible with that much money in hand at one time, someone might act the fool and forget about what's owed the contractor. So the blessing comes but it's made out to two parties rather than one.

Paul discovered that while God blessed him with many powerful blessings in his life, he sent every blessing coupled with a thorn in his flesh. Three times Paul prayed to have God remove the thorn so he could operate more freely, but God answered him each time by saying, "My Grace is sufficient!"

When we accept the Lord as our shepherd, we recognize that he provides and satisfies our daily needs. That's the level that we are trying to reach. We are striving to reach a point in our spiritual maturity in which we say, God provides my needs from his storehouse daily, I will not ever be without what I need, one way or the other. That means when I am lonely, if the Lord is my Shepherd, God will supply a sufficient amount of comfort for me. When I am sad, if the Lord is my shepherd, he will supply a sufficient amount of inspiration to make me glad again! When I am without a roof over my head; if the Lord is my shepherd, he will supply a way, through some means for me to have shelter. If my financial resources are low; if the Lord is my shepherd, he will provide what I need when I need it by making opportunities available for me! The level we want to reach is the level that truly believes that we have a friend in Jesus who is close to us that he will take care of our needs, in proportion to our ability to receive on an as needed basis.

When we reach this level of maturity the words of the old hymn have more meaning, "Jesus is all the world to me, my life, my joy, my all. He is my friend from day to day, without him I would fall. When I am sad to him I go, no other one can cheer me so. when I am sad, he makes me glad, he's my friend."

Jesus tried to get his disciples to understand this one simple truth: As long as long as the Lord is my shepherd, there will always be enough.

One day Jesus was preaching to a crowd of 5,000 people. Somebody said, "Lord, how are we going to feed these people. All we have is two little fishes and five loaves of bread; and that's not enough"

In Matthew 14 He fed the 5,000 people in one day with 12 baskets left over! It was more than enough.

In Matthew 15, his disciples were worried again. They complained that they had 4,000 in the crowd but there were only seven loaves of bread and a few fishes, they said, "That's not enough!"

Jesus took the seven loaves of bread and fishes and blessed them and fed 4,000 for three days, with seven baskets left over.

The word for baskets in chapter 14 means "little baskets" the word for baskets in chapter 15 is "big baskets"

I don't know about you but that seems to say to me, that no matter what size your basket is, the Lord is "more than enough!"

He's got enough healing, to make you whole when you are sick!

He's got enough wisdom, to help you know right from wrong!

He's got enough sensitivity, to feel you when you fall on your knees and say, "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know. If thou withdraw thyself from, whether shall I go?"

Gideon thought he needed more than 300 men, but found out that God was enough!

Moses thought he needed more than just a rod, but found out that God was enough!

The world thought David needed more than five stones and a sling shot, but found out that with God it was enough!

The Testimony of the Stones

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 13, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "And he answered and said unto them, I tell you that if these should hold their peace the stones would immediately cry out." Luke 19:40

Introduction

What if every place we have been and everything we have touched could suddenly talk and tell what we did there, would that be a story worth hearing? A famous blues singer, Little Milton Campbell had a popular song entitled "If walls could talk!" The premise of Little Milton's tune was that if the walls of hotels and secret meeting rooms could talk they'd have a story to tell. He even included shoes and other inanimate objects in his lyrics. It caught the imagination of millionsof people who wondered with amusement, just what story could be told if the things we touched in life could tell their encounter with us.

Each person has a story to tell. As we move from place to place we leave behind a testimony that will be told long after we leave. When a famous person visits a particular site or location, those who recall the visit will tell what happened when the famous person came to town. They will point to a place where he sat, a restuarant where he ate dinner and a hotel where he slep. Each point of interest has its own story. Those who travel and tour the country are often told hundreds of anecedotes about what famous people did when they came to certain places in their locality.

What if the things we touched could testify about us, what would they say? What would the books we read say? Or would they have anything at all to say? What would our bible say about the passages that we freqently read, or were the pages read at all? If called upon to testify about us, what would the movies we watch say? Would our home phone or cell phone reveal secret truths about us? If the inanimate things that we touch as we pass by were to testify to what we did and said when we passed by, it would be interesting to say the least.

The power of God touches every life in some way every day. Everyone of us has a story that we can tell about the day we came face to face with the power and presence of God. It is a testimony worth hearing!

As Christians, our lives are living testimonies to the goodness of the Lord. When all the world keeps silent, we should be living evidence that God is truly a good God whose mercy endureth forever!

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus' entry into the city of Jerusalem and the accolades given to him by the crowds.

Jesus was a popular figure at the time of this text. He had healed many people and his words were stirring hope in the crowds. When he descended the Mount of Olives on a donkey there was great excitement because many viewed him as a promising king who would liberate them from Roman domination. Those who walked ahead of him no doubt announced him coming.

Jesus entered Jerusalem about five days before the Passover. It was a time when families prepared to observe the Passover. Each Israelite family chose the lamb they would sacrifice for Passover on the tenth day of the month. As the people shouted "Hosanna," they didn't realize they were choosing the Lamb of God as their sacrifice. By their actions, the people were publicly proclaiming Jesus as the Messiah. When Solomon was anointed king, he rode into the city on a mule, to the shouts and praises of the people (1 Kings 1:43-45). Zechariah prophesied the Messiah would arrive the same way "gentle and riding on a donkey" (Zech. 9:9).

The people began to take off their garments and to throw them on the ground before him and continued to shout "Hosanna." They were expecting Jesus to reveal Himself fully in power and glory as their Messiah-King.

As their excitement grew to a fever pitch the Pharisees were disturbed. They demanded that the noise of the crowd be silenced and that they enthusiasm they were showing for Jesus as the Messiah would be diminished. Despite their best efforts the crowd grew louder.

As the crowd shouted for him Luke 19:40 records Jesus saying, "I tell you that if these should keep silent, the stones would immediately cry out."

The implication of his words were powerful. That if the people were silenced that the very rocks around him would stand to testify of his mighty works.

The story the stones would tell

Jesus touched many lives in the course of his three year ministry in Palestine. It was a place filled with stones. If indeed the stones were called upon to testify there would be a variety of truths about him revealed. He walked on stones, sat on stones, prayed on stones, wept on stones and healed on stones. If the stones were to testify, what a story they would tell.

TEMPTATION STONES: Matthew 4:3-4 records the testimony of the temptation stones. When he began his ministry, he went into the desert for 40 days and nights. One of the first temptations he had involved the stones. The devil tempted him to use his power to turn the stones into bread because he was hungry. Jesus looked at the stone, then dismissed Satan, saying, "It is written, man shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." These stones testify of his sinless nature and refusal to put himself before his people. In the wilderness, he obeyed God, just as he did on Calvary

STONES AT THE WEDDING: John 2:6 records the testimony of six stone water pots that were filled at the marriage reception in Cana. Jesus attended the wedding and at the request of his mother, when the wine ran out, had the stone pots filled with water and turned it into the finest wine. These stone pots testify to his ability to provide and to literally make something out of nothing. He is still doing that today. He is still Jehovah-Jireh. That's why Philippians 4:19 reminds us that "..my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." The stones testify that we should never forget the Lord will always make a way!

UNTHROWN STONES: John 8:7 records the testimony of dozens of unthrown stones. A woman had been caught in the act of adultery and was brought before Jesus. Moses' law said such a woman should be stoned for her sin. Jesus told the crowd, "Let him who is without sin among you, cast the first stone." No one was able to stone her because no one was without sin. Jesus told the woman to go and sin no more. The stones that were never thrown testify to the forgiving nature of the savior. When all others are ready to accuse us, he is willing to forgive. When all others are ready to condemn us, he is ready to give us one more chance.

TOMBSTONES: Matthew 8:28-34 records the testimony of the tombstones. A man had lived in the cemetery for many years running naked and was filled with demons until he encountered Jesus one day. On that day the demons left the man and Jesus made him whole. Then John 11:39-44 gives the testimony of the stone that blocked the tomb of Lazarus who had been dead for four days before it was moved. Once removed the people heard Jesus say, "Loose that man and let him go." The stones testify that whether it is a personality that is spiritually dead like the man in the grave yard or physically dead, that Jesus can take a life that has been ruined and hell bound and turn it around again. The tombstones testify to his amazing grace and ability bring new life to things long thought dead.

STONES AROUND PALESTINE: In Luke 19:40 Jesus said the stones upon the ground where he walked could testify about him. The stones around Jacob's well would tell of a day that he met a woman sitting at the well and gave her living water. She ran through the streets of the city saying, "Come see a man, who told me all I've done." The stones on the street where a blind man stood testify that one day he healed a blind man and made a lame man walk. These stones testify to the power of the living God. That's a testimony that every saint can share, because no matter where we go we tell the world that God is able. He'll leave no stone unturned until he answers our prayer!

The Star Witness

Finally, brothers and sisters, if there is testimony to be given we cannot ignore the testimony of the star witness.

The star witness is the stone that has the testimony that is crucial to proving the case!

Stones that were used by Noah to build an altar after the flood, testify to the mercy of God, but there is another stone that needs to testify. That stone is the star witness!

Jacob erected a stone on his way home and called the place, Bethel. That stone testified to power of meeting God, but there is another stone that needs to testify.

Joshua took 12 smooth stones and set them up as a memorial when the children would ask, "What mean ye by these stones?" They testified to the power of God to deliver, but there is another stone that needs to testify.

The stones of the Garden of Gethsemene testified in Luke 22:41 that he came to the garden to pray that this cup would pass away. But these stones heard him say, "Nevertheless, not my will, but thy will be done." But there is another stone that needs to testify

The stones of Jerusalem's streets were under his feet as he carried the old rugged cross up Golgotha's hill.

These stones saw the women cry out and felt the burden of the cross as it dragged along one step at a time.

He died out on Calvary but there is still one more stone to testify…

They carried him to Joseph's tomb and placed him in a brand new grave.

I hear that stone testify, "They rolled me in front of the door and put a seal on me to keep his disciples from stealing his body. I sat in front of his body for three days and nights."

But can't you hear the stone getting happy when he told the rest of the story. "Early Sunday morning, I felt an unseen hand moving me away. It was an angel of heaven, rolling me away.!"

He's arose from the dead with all power in his hands!

I don't know about you, but I don't need a stone to testify for me

God is good!

He'll rock you when you get weary!

He'll wipe tears from your eyes!

He'll be a bridge over troubling waters!

He'll make a way out of no way!

He's all right!

He's all right!

A Heritage Worthy of Celebration

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 2003

SCRIPTURE-" Preserve me, O God: for in thee do I put my trust. O my soul, thou hast said unto the LORD, Thou art my Lord: my goodness extendeth not to thee; But to the saints that are in the earth, and to the excellent, in whom is all my delight. Their sorrows shall be multiplied that hasten after another god: their drink offerings of blood will I not offer, nor take up their names into my lips. The LORD is the portion of mine inheritance and of my cup: thou maintainest my lot. 6 The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage. . Psalm 16:1-6

Introduction

How many ways can you say thank you? If you were in Mexico you would say, "Gra-ci-ous." If you were in Germany you would say,"Dan-Ka" and "Mercee" is what the French would say. There are many ways to say thank you, but they all express our heart felt emotions. It doesn't matter what language carries the thought. When we look at the sum total of an experience and consider how far we came to reach where we are, we can only look back and say "Thank You!" Whenever a believer takes time to look back at the goodness of the Lord it is a time to celebrate. It is a time to celebrate the goodness of the Lord!

Our heritage is the sum total of our experience. It is our present reflected in the mirror of what we were. If we pause for just a few moments on the roadside of life, and reflect on the goodness of the Lord we would instantly see the rich heritage of faith and blessings that have followed us a long the way.

Celebration is biblical. Whenever believers looked back upon what God did for them they celebrated.

When Abraham secured a wife for his son Isaac there was a celebration.

When Moses announced that after 400 years that Israel would finally leave Egypt, there was a celebration.

When Joshua led Israel into the Promised Land which flowed with opportunity like milk and honey, there was a celebration.

When David finally secured the return of the Ark of the Covenant to Israel he was so happy that he celebrated by dancing nearly naked in the street.

When the Prodigal son returned home his father killed the fatted calf and ordered a celebration.

At family reunions we celebrate our family heritage with a festive atmosphere, which includes plenty of food, reflection and praise to God for being wonderful, benevolent and protective towards us.

As Christians, we also celebrate our personal salvation. We give thanks to God for Calvary, for it is through Calvary that the blood of Christ gave us a reason to celebrate.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he gives "golden" advice about finding the path to everlasting life which is rooted in a goodly heritage.

This psalm has the title "A Mitcham of David." Five other Psalms have a similar title. There is no conclusive evidence as to what exactly is meant by 'mitcham." Many think it refers to its literal meaning "Write in gold letters," indicating that it is truly a 'Golden Psalm.'

One of the golden nuggets in this psalm is in verse six, "I have a goodly heritage."The other is in verse11: "Thou wilt show me the path of life!" This is the path that man has blindly groped for ever since he has been on earth. It is a right of way into the presence of God. The singer of this psalm tells of one who has found the way through, presumably a messianic reference to Christ. This is the path of our heritage. This path is described as a goodly heritage.

The path of life begins with our inheritance in him (v5). David notes that those who would enjoy life to its fullest participate in the divine inheritance. The way of life is within the boundaries or lines he has set for us. (Vs.6). God blessed David, as he does every believer. That blessing results in what he calls a goodly heritage which is worthy of thanks, celebration and joy!

Reasons to celebrate

Despite difficult times in which we have seen wars and heard rumors of wars, there is still reason to celebrate. Even though in recent times we have seen nation rise up against nation and experienced the bitter sting of terrorism, there is still reason to celebrate.

CELEBRATE OUR ESCAPE FROM DEATH: The church has helped believers withstand the troubles of our times. Our heritage is one that is filled with struggle and difficulty. Whether it has been our ethnic struggle as a people of color or as individuals striving to overcome our personal fights with life threatening situations, we have reason to celebrate because God has helped us to survive our difficulty and even to escape death itself. The Psalmist writes, "Thou maintainest my lot" (v. 5) When our world is turned upside down by tragic events, it is easy to become cynical and disillusioned with life. When we witness how evil some people can be, it becomes difficult for us to trust anyone. Yet, we are able to celebrate when others are not because we know that God will never forsake us. Because we know he will never leave us alone, we should celebrate! Because he has been with us as we walked through the valley of the shadow of death, we should celebrate!

CELEBRATE THE HELP HE HAS GIVEN-When we consider our heritage we can't help but give thanks for the help the Lord has given us. Every believer has experienced a time or two when we have been caught between a rock and a hard place. Those were the times when we faced trouble on every side. During such times we found that all we could really do was to say like David,'' I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and the earth.'' We discovered in our life journey that only the power of God could help us because we were powerless to help ourselves. Our only hope was for someone bigger than ourselves to help us. So the writer of the Psalm says, "Then I called on the name of the LORD: 'O LORD, save me!'" (verse 4). Roy Buck tells the story of a little boy who was tugging at a big rock and doing his best to lift it. He was grunting and pulling at it but it didn't budge. His father came along and asked him if he was having any trouble. He said, "Yes, I am trying and trying and can't move the rock." The father said to him, "Well, son, are you using all available energy?" The boy replied, "Yes, Father, I think I am." Then the dad looked at him and said, "No, son, I don't think you are, for you haven't asked for my help." An important life lesson is that asking for help is usually a good idea. Asking God for help is an even better idea. Even if it seems as if nobody cares, God cares. Just ask Peter who found himself drowning after walking on water or cried out, "Lord, save me!" Immediately Jesus reached out his hand and caught him. In the same way Jesus has helped every one of us. No wonder then that the song writer would declare 'All my help comes from the Lord.' When we celebrate, we celebrate his helpfulness. We celebrate his compassion. We celebrate his goodness; for he is good and his mercy endureth forever.

CELEBRATE WHAT IS STILL TRUE: If there is a final reason to celebrate it should be the fact that what we celebrated in the past as a part of our heritage is still true today. The undeniable truth about God is that while conditions may change, our God does not change. He is still God. God did many things for those who are the heroes and heroines of our heritage, but what he did for them he is still doing!

Look at the stars they're still there! There is still a sense of order and purpose in God's creation!

Look at the moon it is still there! There is a still a calm sense of God's watchful eye over us at night!

Look at the sky, it is still there! It still forms a canopy over us to protect us, shower us and provide a thin veil through which we occasionally glimpse the heavens!

In our heritage experience we have come to learn some things about God that are still true today. God is: 1) Gracious-he loves me with a love I don't deserve. 2) Righteous-he always does what is just and right. 3) Compassionate-he has pity on me and doesn't give me the punishment I do deserve.

These alone are sufficient reasons to celebrate our Godly heritage! God has been good to us. He has been better than we have been to ourselves.

Let the church celebrate

Finally, we must consider that the Black church has a heritage of rich, emotional and heart felt expression of our faith in God. We have plenty of reasons to celebrate.

Celebrate the church because the church transcends any man. The church supercedes the mortal capacities of mere humans because it is a spiritual entity, built upon a foundation that is sure and strong.

Celebrate the church because it is molded and shaped by the will of God. The church that God builds is different from the church that man builds. The church that man builds is a:

MOTEL: for people just passing through on Sunday on their way to someplace else.

VACATION SPOT: where people come only once or twice a year.

ZOO: Where people come to watch other folk eat like hogs and act like monkeys

MUSEUM: Where people only remember "what it used to be like" and the good old days.

FASHION SHOW: Where people come to display the latest styles and their new wardrobes

PICTURE SHOW: Where audiences sit quietly as the deacons, preacher and choir put on a show

CERAMIC SHOP: Where everyone becomes easily chipped and have to be handled with care

ICE HOUSE: Where people with cold hearts give each other the cold shoulder.

But the church the God builds is different from man's church. It is a place of celebration.

Celebrate and give thanks for a church heritage built on faith in God. Celebrate because the church is a:

LIGHTHOUSE: Giving light to a dark and stormy world.

HOSPITAL: Ministering to those who are sick of sin and shame.

DIVINE FLOWER SHOP: Only in the church can you find the sweet Rose of Sharon and Lily of the Valley in the same place at the same time.

LIFE BOAT: Rescuing victims from the raging sea of life. The song writer declared: "Tis the old ship of Zion, get on board, get on board!"

SIGN POST: Guiding the lost to the straight and narrow path. That's why thousands cry out: "Guide me oh thou great Jehovah, pilgrim through this barren land. I am weak but thou art mighty, hold me in thou powerful hand"

Our fathers brought their families to church and served as the spiritual leaders of their homes. We must not neglect this rich heritage of celebration and praise. We must continue to lead our families in spiritual growth. We must continue to celebrate the goodness of the Lord.

Whether we are singing the Dr. Watts Hymns or whooping from the pulpit we should continue to praise the Lord with a spirit of celebration.

We are a people whose heritage reflects that we have been sustained by an unfaltering trust in God.

It doesn't matter what generation we are from, good things happen when we trust in the Lord. When you trust in the Lord. A family that is:

WEAKENED by internal problems, can find renewed strength!

TROUBLED by disturbing questions, can find its answers!

FRUSTRATED by its failure to achieve goals, can find renewed hope!

BURDENED by the increasing problems of life, can find help in the time of need!

When Israel moved across the Jordan into the promised land there were some who wanted to abandon the God that brought them out of the wilderness. I can see Joshua, standing on the side of a mountain challenging all of those that would be faithful to God to come forward. I hear him declare "but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord!"

Brothers and Sisters, stay on the Lord's side! Celebrate.

In good times and bad times, stay on the Lord's side and celebrate!

Through all of your risings and fallings, stay on the Lord's side!

Tell your children about the Love of God!

Tell them about Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Tell them about Jesus, who arose from the grave after three days and nights!

Tell them about Jesus, who is alive today!

I don't know about you, but as for me and my house...

We will serve the Lord!

Celebrate!

He's Still Rolling Stones Away

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 20, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "And, behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it." Matthew 28:2";And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre? And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great." Mark 16:3-4

Introduction

If your biggest problem was a stone, what kind would it be? Would it be a pebble; something that's bothersome but can easily be thrown aside? Would it be a hand sized stone, that can do considerable damage if it comes against us with enough force? Would it be a rock; big enough to get in the way, but not so big that we can't get rid of it with a little effort. Would it be a boulder, massive in size and impossible to move? The answer to the question is a matter of perception. One man's pebble is another man's boulder. What one person perceives as a major issue is considered small by others. There are times in every life when we feel like our entire lives are filled with pebbles, stones, rocks and even a few boulders. Whether they are small irritants that trouble us like pebbles or large rocks like discrimination, unemployment or player-haters, we all seem to have a stone or two in our lives. Most of us even have a few boulders too.

Generally, when stones get in the way we try to move them. We take off our shoes and easily rid ourselves of pebbles. We kick stones to the side! We walk around rocks, climb over them or just sit on them. But boulders are a different story. These are the ones that we feel are just too big to move. We have tried but they won't budge. That's when we realize that we can't do this thing alone.

Sometimes our response to the boulders and the rocks in our lives is down right crazy. Consider the two men who stood in the park every day at the same time acting very strange. One man seemed to lean and push against something huge and strained himself to move it. The other man always stood a few feet away from him and waved his arms. They were a sight to see, one pushing and the other waving every day. Finally, a curious passerby stopped and asked the man who was pushing a question, "What are you doing?" He asked. "Everyday I come to the park somebody keeps putting this big stone in the middle of the road." The passerby was curious because it was obvious that there was no stone, but the man was convinced and continued straining trying to move it. “If I don’t move this stone, there is no telling what can happen.” The man said as he strained and pushed. The passerby asked the man who was waving, what he was doing. Without missing a single wave he told the passerby, “See that man over there. He’s crazy. Everyday he comes to the park and thinks he’s rolling a stone. He’s really crazy!” The passerby then asked the man, “What are you doing?” The man answered, “He rolls that stone in the middle of the street, I’m directing the traffic so no one will hit it!”

The hope that the resurrection brings is the good news that Christ is alive! The God who rolled the stone away for him is still rolling stones away today!

As Christians, we are excited to know that God is still in the business of rolling stones away. The empty tomb and the resurrected Lord are our best reminders that the God we serve is still alive and is able to easily move aside any stones that frustrate our Christian experience. God did it that Easter Sunday morning and today, he’s still rolling stones away!

Exposition

This text focuses on events that took place after the crucifixion as the women came to anoint the body of Christ. According to the text, Christ had been in the grave for three days and nights as he predicted in Matthew 12:40. Early on the first day, which was Sunday morning, Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of James and Salome set out to anoint his body with spices. While enroute the thought came to them that there was a stone covering the entrance of the tomb. This was no small pebble or lightweight rock. It was a huge stone, taller than a man, and requiring the services of several men to move. It had been placed in front of the tomb to keep Christ’s disciples from coming in the middle of the night, stealing the body, and claiming to the world that he had risen from the dead. The intent of the stone was to keep believers away from Christ. As they walked toward the tomb they became concerned about “who shall roll for us the stone away?” Although they were concerned, the women were not dissuaded, they went forward anyway! Once there, they learned that the stone had already been rolled away. An angel, which appeared as a young man, told them not to fear because Jesus had risen. They were told to go and tell the disciples about his resurrection.

The women left excited because not only had the stone been rolled away from the tomb, but the stone of doubt and fear had been rolled away from their hearts.

There was no doubt in their mind that although they met an angelic face at the door of the tomb, it was God who rolled the stone away.

Rolling Stones is God’s Work

The women came to anoint the body of Jesus with the full knowledge that there was a stone in from of it. Yet, despite that knowledge they went anyway, choosing to do their work living the other work to God.

There are millions of people who sit back and calculate the impossibility of their dreams and never pursue them because they see the stones. These are the ones who spend the rest of their lives saying "What if" and "I couldn't been but.." There are others who knew the odds were against them but prepared themselves to take advantage of any opportunity that presented itself.

Blessed opportunities are everywhere! But believers must not be intimidated by the stones. We should do our work and let God do his work. Our work is to prepare and take action. His work is to roll stones away.

When God told Abraham to sacrifice his son Isaac, that was a tremendous challenge. Abraham obeyed. He took his son, laid him on an altar and then discovered that God had rolled the stone away, and provided him a ram in the bush.

When Israel fled from Egypt with Pharaoh's army in pursuit, they faced a watery death in the Red Sea of death by the king's army. Yet Moses marched forward anyway, only to learn that God had already prepared a mighty East Wind to roll back the waters and let them pass. He rolled the stone away.

When the Daniel was threatened with death if he did not stop his regular prayers, he continued doing what was right before God. When he was eventually thrown into the den of lions, he was not touched or scratched by the hungry beasts, because God had gone before him and silenced them. He had rolled the stone away.

In a similar sense believer should not be overly consumed with the difficulty of a task. If God has ordained it and what we seek is in his will, then we should prepare for it with certainty. Acting in faith is our duty, rolling stones is the work of the Lord.

Stones Were Meant To Keep Us Out!

The purpose of the stone in front of the tomb was not to keep Christ in, but to keep believers away from Christ. The religious leaders believed that Christ disciples would come and steal his body during the night and claim that he arose. The purpose of the stone was to keep them from Christ.

Today there are millions of people who are frustrated by stones that have purposefully been placed in their way. Sometimes the stones are the work of enemies that seek to prevent our success in a venture or achievement of some particular goal. These are the individuals who are afraid that if certain opportunities are opened to you that you may climb higher and succeed faster. To "slow your row" they put stones in your path. They reveal your weaknesses to others, or even invent weaknesses that do not exist. They become small armies of player/haters who try to stop you on every hand. Player/Haters who call themselves stopping a saint actually cause them to get bigger and better blessings. Matthew 5:11-12a says, "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. ÿRejoice, and be exceedingly glad: for great is your reward in heaven."

At other times the stones are the work of our own hands. They represent our mistakes in judgment, bad habits, and weaknesses and tend to stand between us and success. Whether they have been placed by enemies or come as the result of our own mistakes, stones are hindrances in our secular life.

There are millions of people, like the women on Easter morning, who want to come closer to God, but have found their way blocked by great stones put in our way by Satan to keep us away from God. Because of our own weaknesses we become consumed with a desire to party, drink alcohol, use drugs, indulge in illicit sex and other activities of the flesh. Our desire to involve ourselves in these interest has come between us and God.

As a result a stone comes between ourselves and God. We come to church but we feel nothing. We are no longer excited about our church involvement, we can't wait until it's over so we can get back to the world. These stones are not physical. They operate on the inside as the devil quietly steals our spiritual joy.

Like the women on the morning of the resurrection, there are many that are aware of the spiritual stones in their lives. They know they have not been as they should and they wonder whether or not they can regain access to God. Whether they can feel him again; whether he can live in their spirit again. They ask "Who shall rolls us the stone away?" Yet like the women of the text, when we come before God we find out certainly that God has already rolled the stone away, all we need to do is come to him.

God took Care Of the Unknown too!

The women were concerned about the stone in front of the door, because that's what they knew was there. What they didn't know is that not only was there a stone in front of the tomb, but it had been sealed and there were soldiers in front of it. The purpose of the soldiers was to keep believers away from Christ, even at the expense of their lives. The women knew about the stone, they didn't know about the soldiers! It was an unseen danger!

Today many of us worry so much about what we think are possible dangers ahead of us, without even knowing the unseen dangers that God has protected us from, just this day alone.

Sometimes they are noticeable, such as the times we barely missed an accident or were spared a misfortune and called it lucky. Those are the dangers we see, but there are countless dangers that we do not see every day, and never experience them, because they have been removed by an unseen hand on our behalf.

If God is taking care of the unseen dangers that we do not know to worry about, doesn't it seem self defeating to worry about the few dangers that we know of. The same God that removes the unseen soldiers, can roll the stone away?

His Stone was rolled away, so were many others

Finally, brothers and sisters, while the text focuses on the fact that God rolled away the stone in front of Jesus's tomb, believers should take note, that after Jesus arose there were many other stones rolled away.

In our excitement to tell the world about the stone that was rolled away from the tomb of Christ, sometimes we forget about hundreds of other stones that were rolled away on Easter Sunday morning.

Matthew 27:51-53 records these words, "ÿAnd the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, ÿAnd came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many."

The same God that rolled away the stone in front of Jesus' tomb, went to the tombs of hundreds of saints and rolled their stones away as well!

It wasn't just for his only begotten Son, but God rolls away the stones for all of his children!

On this Easter Sunday morning, we should rejoice because if his stone was rolled away, our stones will be rolled away because he's still rolling stones away!

Someone woke up this morning worried about a variety of problems. They are worried about a stone that has already been rolled away!

Worry makes us look at meager finances and ask, "Who shall roll us away the stone?" and help my ends to meet. But I hear faith answer from Philippians 4:19 "But my God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in Christ Jesus."

Worry makes us look at our loneliness and ask: "Who shall roll us away the stone?" and be a constant friend; but I hear faith answer from Hebrews `13:5 "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee"

Worry makes us look at all of our troubles and ask: "Who shall roll us the stone away?" and faith replies from Romans 8:28 "And we know that all things work for good for them that love God, for them who are called according to his purpose."

The joy of the resurrection is that we don't have to worry about the stone in front of the tomb he's still rolling stones away!

The same power that rolled back the stone on Easter Sunday morning is still rolling stones today. No wonder the song writer declared "King Jesus will roll our burdens away!"

When the question is asked, who shall roll the stone away?

Lazarus, who shall roll the stone away? "I was in my grave, but I heard a voice declare, Lazarus come forth!"

Blind man, who shall roll the stone away? "I was once blind, until I met a man helped me to see again!"

Woman at the well, who shall roll the stone away? "Come see a man who told me all that I've ever done!"

Today the invitation is the same, "Come see a man!"

Come see a man who was crucified for our sins!

Come see a man who was buried behind a stone of rejection

His name is Jesus!

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley and the Bright and Morning Star!

Jesus who died out on Calvary!

He was held down by a stone of hatred!

He was locked down by a stone of prejudice!

He was blocked down by a stone of death

But early Sunday morning, the power of God ... Rolled the stone away!

Don't Just Stand there, Do something

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 23, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "..Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1:11

Introduction

What is the easiest ministry in the entire church? There are many that will say that the ushering ministry is the easiest. In the choir there are weekly rehearsals, music and words to be memorized, but ushers they just stand. Sunday School teachers must prepare lessons and materials as well as attend a teacher's meeting, while ushers just stand. Youth workers attend practices, drive vans, and put up with hard to deal with children, while ushers just stand. Deacons visit homes, fellowship with the sick and infirmed and spend countless hours, in personal service ministry, but ushers just stand.

Ushering is a frustrating ministry because it requires so much standing. When others are sitting, ushers are standing. When others are enjoying the soft comfort of the seats, ushers are standing. When others are refreshed and rested ushers are standing. Most of the ministry of ushers is standing and walking. It takes a very unique person to participate in the ushering ministry.

Is standing the entire ministry of ushers? Does an usher have to know anything, do anything, give anything or do anything other than stand. There are many that believe that the only thing ushers need to do is stand. That was the case of a platoon was about to stand before a General's inspection. There was one in the platoon did not understand well, but all of his buddies told him that all he had to do to pass any inspection was to stand up, look serious and answer the question. They insisted that he didn't have know anything or do anything. When they heard the name of the general that would do the inspection they were relieved, because this general always asked soldiers the exact same questions. The nervous private was assured that the general would never ask him to do anything. All he would have to do is stand. If the general asked any questions, they knew the answers. They decided to help him. They coached him telling him what to say when the General asked. When the general asks how long have you been in the army, you say 2 years. When he asks how old are you, you say 22 years. When he asks are you getting good food and good care, you say both. The day of the inspection the General asked questions just as the buddies said, however the order was different, he asked how old are you and the man responded 2 years, sir. Well how long have you been in the Army? 22 years, sir. The general was getting agitated and asked What do you take me for a fool or an idiot? And the man responded BOTH.-

A soldier has to do more than stand at attention, and an usher has to do more than just "stand." Although it may come as a surprise to some, ushers are first and foremost Christians. Ushering is one of the courtesy ministries of the church associated with worship, but ushers have to do more than stand a post. There are many who think ushering is very easy because all that is needed is a pretty uniform, a warm smile and a wall to lean against. While that may be the common conception, those who do the work of an usher, know that it requires more than just standing and smiling, but usually that's all that is ever seen by the general public. They, like all other Christians, must study, prepare, and work the work of him that sent them while it is day, because when the night comes, no man can work.

As Christians, we take every opportunity we get to become doers of the word. We plunge ourselves into kingdom building with a zeal and excitement that cannot be matched anywhere in the world. Those who usher do more than just stand, they do the work of the Lord.

Exposition

This text considers Jesus' disciples watching the savior as he was caught up on a cloud and slowly ascended into heaven. Each disciple stood on his feet and gazed as the master drifted out of sight. When he could not be seen anymore they were still gazing into the heavens. Two angels appeared to them and asked them why they were gazing into the heavens trying to see Jesus when he will be coming back again. "Why stand ye?" was the probing question that jolted these believers from passive amazement to active service. It was a question that challenged them to act on that which they knew was right and build the kingdom of God among men.

Rather than stand gazing these were awakened from their amazement and inspired to stand together, on one accord and work to build the kingdom Christ envisioned, as servants of the Lord.

Rather than stand aimlessly gazing, they chose to stand for the master in prayer and in supplication.(v14).

They chose to do more than just stand, they chose to do something.

The word "stand" has several meanings, or ways in which it may be used. It can be a noun or a verb. It can refer to posture or to ones conviction (his "stand"). It may be used as a word of admonition. Or it may be a word of command.

In the text it is a verb, indicating more than a passive existence but expected action.

In the New Testament this word "stand" is found in connection with some very important ideas that require believers to do more than just "stand."

Stand Against the Devil

Ephesians 6:11 reminds us stand against the wiles of the devil" That means we should do more than just stand still, but we should actively join the church's fight against the influences of the devil in the local community and around the world. The devil works to destroy individuals, families, communities and nations. We see the results around us as crime increases, drug use becomes common place and more children become the mothers and fathers of children. We should do more than just be members of the local church, but we should actively involve ourselves in ministries of the church that are addressing these problems.

You may stand, as an usher but you also need to take a stand against hunger. Don't just stand there, do something!

You may stand as an usher but you also need to take a stand against crime in our neighborhoods, don't just stand there, do something!

You may stand as an usher, but you also need to take a stand against juvenile delinquency. Don't just stand there, do something!

You may stand, as an usher but you also need to take a stand against hunger. Don't just stand there, do something!

ou may stand as an usher but you also need to take a stand against crime in our neighborhoods, don't just stand there, do something!

You may stand as an usher, but you also need to take a stand against juvenile delinquency. Don't just stand there, do something!

Stand for right way

2 Thessalonians 2:15 reminds us of the importance of standing fast and holding on to the traditions of the faith.

There is a right way and a wrong way to de everything. Those who know the right way cannot afford to stand idle and allow wrong to succeed. One great philosopher once said, "The only way for evil to triumph is for good men to do nothing." Believers cannot afford the luxury of standing on the sideline and watch as time tested traditions and values are threatened. We must make ourselves committees of one so that we can meet the challenges that are before us on every hand. We must join hands with other auxiliaries of the church that are working to demonstrate the right way. We cannot disassociate ourselves from the rest of the ministry and resolve that "After I stand, I've done my part."

You may stand as an usher, but you need to help keep the worthwhile traditions of your church alive through your participation. Don't just stand there, do something!

You may stand as an usher, but you also need to attend Sunday School and bible study and become better acquainted with the word of God, so you can teach others. Don't just stand there, do something!

You may stand as an usher, but you also need to visit the sick, and pray for the weak and troubled. Don't just stand there, do something!

You may stand as an usher and take up offerings for the church, but you should also give in the offering before you take an offering from anyone else. Don't just stand there, do something!

Stand in God's Grace

Finally, we must consider that 1 Peter 5:12 reminds us that we stand in God's grace. We are saved by the grace of God, not so that we can enjoy salvation in solitude, but so that we can save others.

When Jesus prepared to leave his disciples he did not say to them "Stand ye therefore" but go ye therefore and teach all nations!

His command was not just to revel in the fact that they had experienced the grace of God themselves, but to do something!

Maybe that's why the angel questioned them in our text, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing in the heavens" They were told to witness but they were gazing!

Jesus said Go ye therefore and teach, but they were standing gazing!

Jesus said Go ye therefore and baptize, but they were standing gazing!

Jesus said Go ye therefore and Teach them to observe whatsoever things I have told, but they were gazing in the heavens!

Don't just stand there, do something

If the Lord has been good to you, don't keep it to yourself! Tell somebody!

If the Lord has blessed you, don't keep it to yourself, bless somebody else! No wonder the song writer wrote, "Make me a blessing, make me a blessing, out of my life my Jesus shine. Make me a blessing oh savior I pray. Make me a blessing to someone today!"

As I close, I am reminded of Pretty Patti, a young usher who was excited about her new uniform. Pretty Pattie enjoyed standing at her post at the back door passing out programs. She didn't mind passing out a program but she never wanted to do anything that would get her uniform wrinkled or even slightly soiled. So she was always given a position at the back door. As time passed she became jealous of Wrinkle up Winnie because Winnie's post was always down front where she could be seen. Before church was out each Sunday, Winnie's uniform was wrinkled and didn't look like Pretty Patti's. At the usher meeting she complained that she should be allowed to stand in the front instead of Wrinkle up Winnie. The president told Patti, "You are young. You have a lot to learn. The reason Winnie's uniform ends up wrinkled every Sunday is because she stands next to Big Bertha who shouts every Sunday and Winnie has to wrestle with her. Sitting next to Bertha is Snuff Dipping Sally, she likes to shout too, but she sprays snuff all over Winnie. You see, you think it's all about standing and looking pretty, but when the spirit gets loose, you might get a little wrinkled up and get makeup all over your pretty uniform, but when but the spirit is high you can't just stand there, you gotta do something!

A woman with an issue of blood saw Jesus coming, everything in her said, don't just stand there do something.

A widow woman whose son died, held her son's body in her arms. Everything inside of her said, don't just stand there do something!

A man who was sick tried to get to Jesus who was healing in a house. When they couldn't get pass the crowd somebody said, don't just stand there, do something!

I don't know about you but when I think about the goodness of the Lord, I can't just stand there, I got to do something!

When I think about how God blesses me every day, I can't just stand there, I gotta do something..I'll wave my hand!

I can't just stand there because there is work to be done!
I can't just stand there because there is a fight to be fought
And a victory to be won!
I can't just stand there because there is a testimony to be shared!
And a fire to keep burning
I can't just stand there because there is a prayer to be prayed
I can't just stand, because there is a story to be told!
Tell the old story, how Jesus, Mary's baby, died and rose from the grave!
I'll tell them that he rose from the dead and is coming back again!
I can't just stand. I've got to do something!

What to do after being blessed

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

150th Church Anniversary

April 27, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "And he said unto them, arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole." Luke 17:19

Introduction

We spend much of our time asking God for a blessing, but what do we do after we have been blessed? There are many people who spend their whole lives trying to get a certain blessing, then once they receive it, find themselves completely lost.

If you land a new job or a position, goal that you have worked hard to achieve; what do you do next?

If you achieve certain educational goals such as high school graduation, a goal that has consumed nearly 18 years of your life, what do you do next?

If your number finally comes up after you've waited decades to win big, what do you do next?

Our responses to such situations vary. Some are blessed and adopt a spirit of gratitude. Some are blessed and never look up or look back.

When a church celebrates an anniversary, after having struggled for 150 years, what does it do? When it has been blessed to overcome the struggles of building, maintaining an expanding its ministries over many generations, what does it do next? When it has been blessed by the leadership of the sainted seven for 150 years, what does it do next?

There is a blessing in the numbers themselves. There have been seven pastors here in 150 years: Pastors, Wyatt, Shackey, Thomas, Copelin, Carmbs, Clark, and Woods. For a few months in the 1930 the church was led by small group of seven.

There something special about sevens. There are seven days in a week. Daniel saw seventy weeks of seven. Joseph saw seven fat cows and seven skinny cows.

There were seven letters written to seven churches in Asia minor.

Every seventh year in biblical times was a Sabbath year and after seven sets of Sabbath years the 50th year was called the jubilee, when all debts are settled and chains were broken asunder.

When this church celebrated its first jubilee in 1903, it had overcome internal strife, the civil war, reconstruction and the after effects of the Spanish American War.

When this church celebrated its second jubilee in 1953, it had overcome the great flood of 1927 which killed thousands, a depression and two world wars.

Now the church is celebrating its 3rd jubilee in 2003, after having overcome, the civil unrest of the 60's, Vietnam, and celebrated the election of Black city leadership and intense spiritual growth.

Since 1853 there have been 21 groups of sevens and three years of jubilee, making 150 years of blessings. There were no doubt some fat cow years and some skinny cow years, but through it all, God was blessing!

But two questions linger, "How was the church able to survive such a long a time?" The answer escapes those outside of church, but it is obvious to believers, "It was only faith and the power of God that brought us thus far."

After having come to this the third jubilee, the second question also lingers, "What do you do when you've been blessed?"

As believers, we know the answer to that question, we'll keep praising the Lord!

Exposition

This text focuses on the actions of a man whom Jesus healed of a crippling disease.

The man was among a group of men who were crippled by the disease of leprosy. The group was composed of both Jews and Samaritans, who were normally segregated from each other by Jewish custom. However, since they all had leprosy, all shared the same treatment by the general community.

Leprosy is a generic term applied to a variety of skin disorders in biblical times. Its symptoms ranged from white patches on the skin to running sores to the loss of digits on the fingers and toes. Anyone who came in contact with a leper was also considered unclean. Therefore, lepers were isolated from the rest of the community so that the members of the community could maintain their status as worshipers.

Jesus did not consider this distinction between clean and unclean valid. A person's outward condition did not make one unclean; rather that which proceeds from the heart determines one's standing before God. Therefore, Jesus did not hesitate about touching lepers and even commanded His disciples to cleanse lepers.

When Jesus decided to socially mix with Lepers he made a statement about the nature of the kingdom. When he decided to heal 10 of them of their leprosy that made an even bigger statement.

Once the ten men had been healed they left shouting and rejoicing. Their entire lives had been changed. Cured of leprosy they would be able to enjoy life fully. They left with great excitement. Nine of them forgot about the man who healed them and changed their lives forever.

However, as they left one of the ten, a Samaritan, returned and gave thanks to Jesus.

All of the men were healed but only one returned to give thanks.

Hermeneutically speaking the text is about healing.

Homiletically speaking the text is about the power of faith and gratitude demonstrated.

Dramaturgically speaking, that is looking at what actually happened, the text shows us what to do when we have been blessed.

Arise

When the leper was healed he came to Jesus' feet and glorified him and fell at his feet in humility. The first word Jesus unto him was "arise."

If we have learned anything about the Lord over the years it is that he lifts us up, picks us up and turns us around. No matter how low we have fallen he gives us another chance. The song writer is correct when he says, "We fall down, but we get up!" We are able to do so because Christ lifts the fallen spirit within us and stands us up again.

When the demonic man fell at Jesus' feet after spending years wandering among the tombs he was told to rise.

When the lame man who had not walked for 38 years met the Lord beside the pool he was told to rise, "Take thy bed and walk."

Even today, the church pauses in gratitude to say thanks for the power of his outstretched hands.

We have struggled through many difficult years, but thanks to the power of God, still we rise!

We have weathered storms of sickness, death and indecision, but thanks to the power of God, still we rise!

Satan has attacked us from the outside, and sometimes within, but thanks to the power of God, still we rise!

We have evangelized, and witnessed, preached and reached, sometimes with little more than hope in our pockets, but still we rise!

The leper of this text shows us the first thing to do when we have been blessed, arise!

If you have fallen down, and have been blessed to get up, arise!

If you were tired, and have been renewed, arise!

If you were dispirited, but have been restored, arise!

If you have tired along the way, hear the words of the old warriors, "I don't feel no ways tired, we've come too far from where we started from, nobody told me that that road would be easy. I don't believe he brought me this far to leave me."

Arise!

Go Thy Way

The man who was healed was told to "go thy way" or to return to your friends and be a witness.

The command to "go" is a call to action that was given by the savior to believers on many occasions after he blessed them.

When he met an adulterous woman who was caught in sin, he forgave her and told her to "go" and sin no more!

After resurrection he told his disciples, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations…"

The command to "go" given to the leper gives us the second action we must take when we have been blessed. When we have been blessed we should be a blessing to someone else.

After being blessed with the gift of salvation, the church should work to save others.

We should work to feed the hungry and give sight to those blinded by the hopelessness of an ungodly world!

We should continue to work to heal he wounds of the broken hearted and proclaim liberty to the captives!

Not only that but we should go and tell somebody about the goodness of the Lord!

Thy faith hath made you whole

Finally, Jesus told the leper, the ultimate reason for his blessing, "thy faith hath made thee whole."

This is a unique statement because there were 10 men healed, nine of them were healed because the Lord had mercy and compassion on their pitiful situations as expressed in their plea for help. However, the Samaritan man was distinguished from the rest. He was made whole because of his faith.

Intrinsic in this text is a dogma that has proven irreversibly true, that is that while prayer is the key to the kingdom, "faith unlocks the door."

How has the church survived all these years? The answer is in this text, "Thy faith has made thee whole."

In Luke 7:50, he told the woman with the alabaster box, "Thy faith has saved you."

In Luke 8:48 he told the woman with an issue of blood who touched the hem of his garment "Thy faith has made you well."

No wonder the song writer declared, "We've come this far by faith, leaning on the Lord. Trusting in his holy word, he never failed me yet."

As I close this morning I'm reminded of the man who was injured in an automobile accident. As the paramedics rushed him to the hospital no one noticed that his right severed right hand was lying on the floor board of the car. His son saw the hand and wrapped it up and carried to the paramedics. A team of specialists were brought in and the man's hand was reattached to his arm. Months later the man came home completely healed. He spoke to his son and said, "Son, tell me how did you know what to do with the hand." The boy looked his father in the eyes and said, "When I was in church I heard you pray, father I stretch my hand to thee, no other help I know, if thou withdraw thyself from me, whether shall I go?" The boy said, "I knew if I put your hand in God's hand, everything would be alright." The father said, "Son, thy faith has made me whole!"

Today, believers should remember that no matter how tough it gets, hold to his hand.

No matter what comes your way, hold to his hand!

No matter how strong the opposition gets. Hold to his hand!

No matter how tempted you are to leave, hold to his hand!

If you hold to his hand there will be:

—Answers to spiritual questions

—Defeat for your demons

—Help in carrying your burdens

—Victory rather than defeat

—Stability in your crises

—Freshness in your testimony

—Depth in your devotion

—Power in your prayer

Hold to his hand; God's unchanging hand, build your hopes on things eternal and hold to God's unchanging hands!

Since God has blessed you, tell the world about his goodness!

Tell the world about Jesus!

Tell them how he died and stayed in the grave for three days!

Tell them that Early Sunday morning, he arose from the dead!

God has been good; so hold to his hand!

God Moments

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE:"And between the passages, by which Jonathan sought to go over unto the Philistines' garrison, there was a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side: and the name of the one was Bozez, and the name of the other Seneh." — 1 Samuel 14:4 (KJV)

Introduction

Have you ever had to make a tough decision? We decide many things every day, but often those decisions are not really hard to make. We decide which dress to wear, or which tie is a better match. We decide which movie to watch, which restaurant at which to dine or even which articles to read in a magazine. We decide many things on a daily basis. However, ever so often we have to make a tough decisions. These are the kind we labor over in thought and prayer and worry about the outcome. They are even tougher if they involved life and death or life direction. Sometimes when we make such decisions we find ourselves between a rock and a hard place, in a difficult fix.

When we face the moment of decision and incorporate our faith in God in the decision making process, such moments are called "God moments." God moments determine our future; they are made at cross roads. No matter which way we choose we will never be the same. In his book, The Journey of Desire, author John Eldridge says believers often experience "God" moments when they have to bring a halt to business as usual and look to him.

The bible is filled with instances of "God moments" of decision. Abraham had his God moment when he laid his son on an altar of sacrifice. Moses had a "God moment" when he had to choose between being an Egyptian and living a life of luxury or that of being a Hebrew slave. Even Jesus had a "God moment" as he endured his temptation in the wilderness. Each believer will face many "God moments" in the course of their life's experience.

It's not always easy to make decisions. Consider the Farmer who hired a man to work. The man was young and strong and appeared quite able to handle any chore that he was given. First the farmer assigned him to paint the barn, a job he thought would take about three days. To his amazement the hired man finished the work in one day. The next day he asked his worker to cut a pile of wood and store it for use in the woodshed. It was a large pile, so he assumed that the job would take at least four days to complete. However the worker, completed this job too in just one day.

Finally the farmer presented the worker with a pile of potatoes and told him to sort them into three stacks. In one stack he wanted those that could be used as seed potatoes and replanted in the field. The second pile should consist of those that were good enough to be sold in the market. The third stack was to consist of those that were not fit for seeds, or to be sold, but could only be fed to the hogs. The farmer figured this task should take a few hours, especially since his new worker was so quick on the job. However at sun down the farmer returned and not a single potato had been separated. Instead of three piles there was still only one large pile of unsorted spuds. The farmer was baffled. This was the worker who painted the barn in one day and did four days wood cutting work in one but yet he had not sorted the potatoes by the end of the day. When he asked the worker the reason, his stumped worker responded: "I can work hard and fast and do anything that I am told. I'm sorry sir, but I can't do anything if I have to make a decision." Likewise there are many people who have considerable trouble making a decision.

God moments are moments of decision in which we make tough choices. They are not easy; but they are easier, if we let God help us decide.

As Christians we are often called upon to make decisions. At times we feel as if either choice we make will be insufficient. It's like being caught between a rock and a hard place. In such situations we have learned that the best decisions are those we make after we let God guide us in the decision making. When caught between a rock and a hard place we have found that the best way out is to "lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth."

Exposition

This text focuses on Jonathan, the son of King Saul, as he finds himself between a rock and a hard place trying to free Israel from its oppressors.

The new nation of Israel was constantly at risk of invasion or was the subject of invasion by outside enemies. Chief among its enemies were the Philistines. At the time of this text the Philistines were the conquering forces in Israel. The swords and spears of the people had been taken from them. All Blacksmiths had been removed from the land to prevent them from making swords and spears to wage war against the Philistines. Very few in Israel had weapons, including the soldiers in King Saul's armies. As the Philistines pressed the people of Israel on every side King Saul stood powerless with 600 of his weaponless soldiers. According to this text the only person in this group that had a sword was Jonathan, the king's son.

When a Philistine scouting patrol was spotted on a mountainside, Jonathan considered their vulnerable estate and decided that even though he had only one sword that he would take on the entire garrison of Philistine soldiers. With his amour bearer at his side he began to climb the rugged terrain to the Philistine camp. He soon found himself in a physical strait that was symbolic of his political position: either way he turned in his climb to the top there was a hard rock on both sides. It was the same dilemma he faced in reality; death at the hands of his enemies at the top or death at the hand of his enemies at the bottom. He was between a rock and a hard place. Faced with that choice, Jonathan chose to go up. Once on the mountain top he took on the Philistines single handedly and slew 20 men himself and sent the others running in a panic. He was in a peculiar and awkward position, but he chose to go forward in faith and God rewarded him with the victory.

God moments Are Rarely Isolated

Times of decision come upon all of us, only rarely do we ever have a week in which we only have to make one decision. God moments are rarely isolated. They come in threes, fives and double digits. They rarely come one at a time.

There are many today who are quite capable of handling such moments as long as problems come one at time. One problem at a time, makes problem solvers out of many. However, many do not fare very well when problems come from all sides and plummet us with a rapidity that is mind boggling. There was once a commercial for such moments that they medicine described as an "Excedrin Headache."

Double density problems are mind-boggling. The man that is working hard to deal with financial misfortune in his family has a big problem. He is trying to find a source of income to maintain his family and is trying to stay economically alive. It is extremely difficult when that problem is compounded by another major problem at the same time, such as ill health, which complicates matters even worse..

The woman that suffers sex discrimination in the work place and is persecuted outside her home has a major problem. At work she has to fight to maintain her respect and keep the forces of institutionalized sexism from diminishing her worth as a human being. However, if at the same time that she is fighting battles outside of her family she has to come home and fight battles in her family or with her family, the situation is made even worse.

Add to situations similar to these: failure and death, and there is a mixture of situations that many people find impossible to handle. Some give up. Some take their own lives. Some drag alone in awe.

In such situations we are undoubtedly between a rock and a hard place. What we should do when caught with double density adversity coming from every side, is follow Jonathan's example: when he couldn't go to the left or right because rocks were on every side, he chose to go up. Likewise, we should go up into the consolation of God.

God Moments Require Faith

A great truth that many learn is that God moments require faith. Believers who face such moments are guided by one overriding principle, "Where God guides, he provides." If God has launched you on a certain course and your actions are according to his will, he will provide a way. That's why prayer is essential before we make great decisions, because God only provides if he guides. We pray because we don't want to be like the accountant who received an offer from the company to head the accounting division of this multinational company. The new job would pay him five times more than he presently made complete with stock options and large package of benefits. The accountant, told his superiors that he would have to pray on the decision. Several days passed by and friends of the family were curious as to the family's decision. One day a friend was talking to one of the children and asked, "has your dad decided whether he will take the new job or not?" The boy answered quickly, "Dad is still praying about it, but mom has everything packed and ready to go!" Even golden opportunities require us pray before we act.

When we face God moments without faith, we have a tendency to climb down, back down, or fall down.

David, when caught between the possible public scorn of a king that had committed adultery and the wrath of God climbed down to murder and killed Uriah.

Peter faced with the apparent destruction of the cause of Christianity and his own possible persecution, climbed down and disowned Christ three times before the cock crowed

Aaron faced with the disappearance of Moses into the top of a mountain for 40 days and the cries of the people for a god they could see, climbed down and helped them with their ungodly acts.

Yet verse six of this text finds Jonathan making a bold statement of faith: "For there is not restraint of the Lord to save by the many or by the few."

There are many when caught between a rock and a hard place who act out of practicality instead of faith and as a result, they climbed down.

"God Moments Mean it's Time to Look up!"

Finally, brothers and sisters, when we face "God moments" men and women of faith should look up, get up, and climb up!

That's the conclusion that David reached in Psalm 121. He said, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and earth."

David had many God moments.

When he faced wild animals and that threatened his father's flocks, those were "God moments."

When he faced Goliath with only a slingshot and five smooth stones, that was a "God Moment."

When he was chased by Saul and treated as a criminal, those were God moments.

When surrounded on all sides, he still decided it was best to "look up!"

When faced with the tough decision about leading the people Moses climbed up into the mountains to talk with God, and God spoke to him and showed him the way.

Abraham, a man of great faith, took God at his word that his family would be blessed and would multiply and went up into God's will.

Daniel refused to be intimidated by the prospect of hungry lions and went up into God's protection.

The Hebrew Boys faced with death in a fiery furnace or eternal shame before God chose to go up into God's perseverance.

All of these men faced "God moments" they decided it was best for them to go up to God.

When we go up to God he will show us the way!

When we go up to God he will take our:

—Questions and give us answers!

—Problems and give us solutions!

—Indecisiveness and give us decisions!

—Rough places and make them plain!

—Mountains and turn them into molehills

I don't know about you, but I am convinced that no matter what the problems, God has a solution!

No matter how big the battle, God has a victory!

No matter how wide the chasm, God can help us to cross it!

No matter how big the adversary, God can help us to defeat him!

We serve a God who takes hollows out valleys and levels mountains!

We serve a savior who walks on water, floats on clouds and sits on the right hand of God.

When in distress, just call him.

Remember, God is still on the throne!

But the best demonstration of a God moment that we have ever seen is that provided by Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemene. There, he had to decide whether to drink from the cup or to let it pass.

I heard him say, "Never-the-less, not my will but thy will be done!"

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning, he arose from the dead with all power in his hands!

No. 9044-Mothers Day

A Mother and a Friend Through Thick And Thin

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 11, 2003

SCRIPTURE: Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son! Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home. John 19:25-27

Introduction

Have you ever had any fair weather friends? Fair weather friends are the ones who are with you when the going is easy but seem to disappear when you really need them the most. When your health is good and your circumstances are favorable fair-weather friends are in abundance. In fact, they seem to come out of the walls. But when the storm clouds begin to gather and the thunderous winds of change and turbulence begin to blow, fair weather friends are no where to be found. They vanish until times seem better. True friends are those who celebrate our sun shiny days and struggle with us through our storms. True friends are few in number. As a general rule, real mothers have proven themselves to be more than just biological agents by which life is given, but both mother and friend to the children they bare.

Unlike fathers, as a general rule, mothers have a special affection for their offspring that is unique, personal, and long lasting. While there are many fathers who are concerned, caring and protective of their children, a father's touch somehow lacks the longevity and depth of a mother's love. The term mother is used in the context of nurture rather than nature. Nurture cares for a child while nature simply births a child. In that context mothers, especially in the African-American community are often persons who may not have nature but who definitely participated in the nurture of a child. With all of its short comings, the African-American family still believes in supporting its own. It is not uncommon for a sister, uncle, aunt or the lady down the street to be called "mother" while our real mothers are called something else. One is a mother by nurture and the other is a mother by nature.

All of our years have revealed an undeniable truth about real mothers: through thick and thin, they love and support their children. Because mothers stand with their children through a myriad of circumstances does not mean that they support their errors, mistakes and mis-directions. It does mean that they love them despite their flaws, errors and mistakes.

In a way, a mother's love is similar to God's love for all of his children. He is protective, supportive, and corrective in his dealings with us. He supports us on a daily basis. He corrects us whenever we go astray and he protects us from many dangers seen and unseen. That could easily be the description of good mothers. They are ever protective of their children, always supporting them and often painfully correct them. Because of the similarities, God may have given mothers a special blessing.

As Christians, we salute our mothers, who have been more than fair weather friends for us, they have stood with their children, through thick and thin. Even to the end, we lift our hearts in praise and thanksgiving for women we reverently call "mother."

Exposition

This text focuses on the sayings of Jesus' from the cross with the respect to his mother.

Mary is often cited as the perfect example of motherhood. Many mothers of the bible depict important truths about the believer's life. The widow woman, whose barrel never ran dry, showed a mother who prayed as she worked and God kept her barrel from running dry. The woman with the issue of blood depicted a woman who overcame illness because of the power of God. Sara is shown as a woman who was blessed to be a mother despite advancing age. However, Mary's life shows us many additional truths about God and the believer's expectation.

Mary was a participant in the life and ministry of Christ from conception through his resurrection. For thirty years Mary raised Jesus, attended to his physical needs and stayed close by his side. Only one event of the 30 years she raised him as a ward of house and supported him as an independent adult, there is only one event in the history of Jesus is recorded that being his going up to Jerusalem when he was twelve years of age, and his being found among the doctors in the temple (Luke 2:41-52). We see Mary and Joseph when Jesus was lost in the crowd. Shortly after scholars believe Joeseph died since there is no reference to him after the Jerusalem incident.

When Jesus began his public ministry little notice is taken of Mary. She was present at the marriage in Cana. A year and a half after this we find her at Capernaum (Matthew 12:46,48,49), where Christ uttered the memorable words, "Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren!" The next time we find her is at the cross along with her sister Mary, and Mary Magdalene, and Salome, and other women (John 19:26). From that hour John took her to his own abode. She was with the little company in the upper room after the Ascension (Acts 1:14). From this time she wholly disappears from public notice. The time and manner of her death are unknown.

There is enough documentation in the Word of God to truthfully say, without fear of contradiction, that Mary remained supportive of Jesus through his childhood, adult ministry, crucifixion and resurrection. When he was praised, she was there. When he was nailed to the cross, she was there, through thick and thin.

She was "there" for us

One salient characteristic of every good mother is the fact that she is generally "there" for her children, in every circumstance, giving personal love if not endorsement. Mary's associations with Jesus give us three ways that scriptures point out how Mary as a mother was "there" for Jesus.

THERE FOR US IN CHILDHOOD: Mary gave birth to Jesus and nurtured him in her home until he became a man. Good mothers today are "there" for their children. Today, there are millions of mothers who are making personal sacrifices to be "there" for their children. In today's time that is much more demanding that in Mary's time, but yet good mother's today are finding ways to "be there" for their children. They are attending school events, participating in school PTA, selling cookies for the Girl Scouts, cheering their children on the athletic fields and traveling countless miles to watch their children perform with school teams. Being "there" is more than showing up occasionally, it means being a part of a child's life experiences, which can be very traumatic at times. Being "there" sometimes means listening when children talk, paying attention to their doodlings and drawings and praising them accordingly. Being there means teaching life skills necessary for success and providing quality time for relationship building. Just as Mary was "there" for Jesus to hold his hand and support him, that spirit of "being there" is what is celebrated by children who know instantly that in every respect, good mothers have done their best to "be there" for them.

THERE FOR US WHEN WE ARE LOST: When Jesus was 12 he became separated from the family after leaving Jerusalem. The scripture shows Mary's absolute panic when she thought Jesus was lost. Mothers try to "be there" for their children when they sense that they are lost. Mothers live in a daily fear that something might happen to cause them to lose their children. Whether its being kidnapped by predators or stripped away from them by other means, mothers are always trying to "find" their children. Mothers spend an inordinate amount of their time either looking for lost children or trying to insure that they are never lost. In a greater sense, mothers also spend time trying to help children who have lost their way in life. Most children lose sight of their goals at one time or another. On occasion they drift far from the mainstream. When mothers sense that their children are losing it, they often stop what they are doing to try to help them find themselves. Some father's don't understand it, but every mother does. Mothers seem to have a maternal instinct to find their children when they are physically lost or lost in life. Many wandering sons and daughters have found their way back home because mother found them at their lowest point and showed them the way back. When we are lost, mothers help us to find our way home. They always leave a light on for us and rarely sleep until they know we are safe.

THERE FOR US IN CELEBRATION: When Mary attended the wedding with Jesus it was a joyous celebration. It was a happy moment. Good mothers are those who try to share our happy moments with us. They celebrate our birthdays with us and cheer for us when we graduate from kindergarten. They are in the crowd at our pee wee league baseball games and they work to help us become cheer leaders, student council officers and earn slots on the homecoming court. They help us look pretty for the prom, sit in the audience when we perform at school and stand with us as we graduate from college or vocational school. At our weddings, she shares the important moment with us. Our scrapbooks are filled with snapshots of the magic moments in our lives, most of which mother was a part, even if by long distance. She listens as we tell all of the details of our celebration. She laughs with us and helps us enjoy the moment. Achievements in life are important, but they are even more important if the people we love are there to share those moments with us. In this respect mothers enter the sacred ranks of those we call our best friends. She is among that small group of people whose presence is essential at each magic moment and milestone in our lives. Good mothers know the importance of "being there" to celebrate with their children. It's because she is "there" to share our moments, that a good mother is showered with praise and love by her children.

THERE FOR US IN DIFFICULTY: Not only do good mothers share our magic moments; they also share the heart wrenching moments of difficulty, embarrassment and public scorn with their children. When Mary stood at the cross with Jesus, she was close enough to hear his trembling voice. Most of the others withdrew themselves in fear or embarrassment, except Mary, who stood by his side even in his most difficult moment. Good mothers are just like Mary, they stand beside their children when everyone else has abandoned them. Sometimes we really mess up our lives by dumb actions, stupid mistakes and insensitivity. Sometimes our actions prompt us to fail or otherwise suffer embarrassment. Despite their distaste for the stupidity of our decisions in life, good mothers never give up on their children. They stand with them publicly even if they find it necessary to bless them out privately. When the crowds disappear and our fame has turned to infamy; mothers are there for us. When we are being nailed to the cross by enemies and tragic circumstances. Mothers are there for us. When we are stretched out on hospital beds unable to care for ourselves, mothers find a way to see that we are cared for, often personally doing it themselves. When the world laughs at us she hears the words of Jesus, "Woman behold thy son!" She doesn't see a felon in a courtroom she sees her son or daughter. She doesn't see a person wrongfully accused in the court of public opinion, she sees her child, and though he or she is hanging on the cross, a good mother often risks her own safety and security to "be there" for a child who has reached the lowest point in his or her life. In difficulties, mother is always "there for us."

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that, whether it was in a manger in Bethlehem or at the foot of a cross on Calvary, Mary stood by her son, through thick and thin.

That's the testimony of every good mother, in the thick of things, when times are good, mother is there! Acts 1:14 lets us know that when Jesus ascended to heaven that Mary was in the crowd too. Among the disciples confident of his return who were comforted by his promise never to leave them but to send them a comforter.

She had had been with him through thick and thin. Good times and bad times.

She had been there at the manger and was there in his finest hour. Through thick and thin, like a good mother she was there.

Good mothers in this respect are just like Mary. They are with their children through thick and thin.

Even in the thin of things, when times are tough, mother is always there.

Though times are difficult good mothers are there for their children, but who is there for mothers?

When children are frustrated and wake crying in the middle of the night, mother is there, but is there anybody there for mother!

When children need somebody to listen to them and tell them which way to go, mother is there, but is there anybody there for mother?

When the storms of life are raging children count on mother to calm the winds of doubt and confusion, but is there anybody there for mother?

Just like mother is there for her children, God is there for every good mother. He's only a prayer away.

I'm reminded of three elderly ladies who reflected on their lives. One lady, bragged that she didn't need anyone to provide for her and and bragged that she had a .357 magnum to protect her if anyone came to bother her. The second lady said she too lived alone but she had a .44 and knew how to use it. The third lady said she had 1-44 and a 27:1 and she was ready no matter what came her way. One night the newscaster announced that a burglar had been caught in the neighborhood of three old ladies. The next day talk about their experience. The first woman said "I tried to use my .357 but I forgot to load it and the burglar took all my belongings. The second woman said she fired her .44 but it knocked her through the door and the burglar got away. The third woman said "Nothing happened at my house. I'raised seven head of children. I've learned what to do." The two ladies wanted to know her secret and she replied: "While you carried a .44 I carried Psalm 144 which says 'Blessed be the Lord my strength...my goodness, my fortress, my high tower, my deliverer, my shield, in whom I trust.." To her friend she said "You carried a .357, but I carried Psalm 27:1 ' The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear. The Lord is the strength of my life of whom shall I be afraid?' When you went home you were alone, but I've got somebody who will never leave me alone!"

I heard him declare and "Lo I am with you alway, even until of the earth"

No wonder the songwriter wrote, "I've seen the lightning flashing and heard the thunder roll. I've felt sin's breakers dashing, which tried to conquer my soul. I've heard the voice of my savior he bid me still fight on. He promised never to leave me, never to leave me alone!

No never alone!
He promised never to leave me ..never to leave me alone!
He has
—Muzzled the mouths of lions that came to devour us!
—Quenched the flames of fires that tried to consume us!
—Conqueredthe enemies that came to destroy us!
—Penetrated the walls built to divide us!
—Unlocking the prisons designed to hold us down.
No never alone!
All the way to Calvary, through thick and thin!
All the way to a borrowed tomb, through thick and thin!
Early Sunday morning he arose with all power in his hands!
One of these days, through thick and thin he's coming back again!

What's For Dinner?

SCRIPTURE: And he sent Peter and John saying, go and prepare us the Passover, that we may eat. Luke 22:8

Introduction

Did you know that what you serve or do not serve for dinner says a whole lot? Dinner time, that's what they say up North (it's supper down South) is an exciting time of renewal and family fellowship. What's on the table or not on the table usually sets the tone for the evening. If we come home for dinner and silverware is set and the fine China dishes are on the table, then we know guests are expected. If there is turkey or duck on the table, it must be Christmas or Thanksgiving. If there is home fried chicken on the table it could mean that it's Sunday; and if it's Kentucky Fried or Churches, it could be any day of the week. Chitterlings and Hog maws mean grandma's at home because you can't cook chit'lins in the microwave and that's all mama knows. If we all have to sit at the table together instead of going into separate rooms there must be something going on, especially if it's not a holiday. Bar-be-que could mean something too. It could be the fourth of July or Labor Day or Memorial Day. If we get home and see take-out boxes from Sunday on the table, it means somebody's tired. If mama tells daddy to go in the kitchen and fix it himself, that means there's going to be a fight. There is no doubt that much can be learned from watching the table.

If there are many place holders on the table there is a good chance that grand parents have prepared the table.

If everybody is fixing their own plate, right out of the pot, it could mean a young person prepared the food and can't see the value of messing up too many dishes just to wash them again. If they prepare the food, what won't be on the table is anything that has to be washed after it's over. There may even be paper plates.

What's on the table may give a hint to who is expected to be at the table. When some family members come for dinner, the food is soft and there is no salt. When others come the whole hog is on the table and there are plenty of salt shakers everywhere.

To a large extent our culture dictates our table. At most Afro-American tables there will be some "heart attack" food somewhere. Hispanic families are not far behind with helpings of beans and grease. German families drink beer at most meals, even the children. In some parts of the world wine is served with meals along with the water.

What's on the table is often dictated by our culture. There won't be any pig feet at a Jewish table. Muslims won't be asking for a slice of ham. They don't eat pork. Hindu families will have no meat at all. The cultural differences are distinct and unique.

What happens at the table gives a hint about the family's relationship with God. At some tables people will dig in instantly, with the exception of Thanksgiving. In Christian families everyone pauses to bless the food and to give God thanks. Whatever the family eats for dinner is considered a blessing from God and worthy of thanks.

Those who have been blessed to come home to prepared dinners a few times a week can testify to their anticipation. They know the ability of the cook. While they may not know what's going to be served, they know that it will be prepared to the fullest and will be good for them.

As Christians, we believe God prepares a table for us everyday. Even spiritually, God prepares a table for us that will refresh us, keep us and strengthen us until he the return of Jesus in his glory.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he prepares to observe the Passover with his disciples.

The time of the text was just before the time of the Passover feast. It was one of the special observances that was ordered by Moses. It celebrated the rescue and deliverance of the Israelite slaves from Egypt. When it was instituted, the Israelites were directed to take a male lamb without blemish, one year old, and kill it on the 14th day of the first month. This was to be done during the evening, and the lamb was to have it's blood sprinkled with a branch of hyssop on the two side posts and lintel of the door of the Hebrew houses. This was done so that when the Lord passed through Egypt on the night of Passover, He would see the blood on the door post, and would spare the first born child of that house.

Many Jewish homes still observe the Passover in the orthodox sense. Very little has changed about the ingredients or procedure used to observe the Passover.

Each ingredient in the meal had a significance and meaning. None was selected for health or taste reasons. The only significance of the meal was purely spiritual in nature

The actual dinner Passover dinner was called a SEDER or a chance for the story of God's deliverance of people to be retold in the family cirle. Included in the Passover Feast are the following items, MATZOS or unleavened bread, the ROASTED SHANKBONE or slain lamb, the ROASTED EGG, the MAROR or bitter herb's, the HYSSOP PLANT and the KARPAS or green vegetable.

The MATZOS or unleavened bread represented the separation of the Israelites from Egypt and their hurried departure. This came about because during the time of the exodus, the Israelites did not have time to wait for the bread to rise in the oven, so they removed it, hot and flat, and that is what they ate.

The ROASTED SHANKBONE or slain lamb represented the Paschal Lamb, a special animal sacrifice was offered on the altar of the great Temple in Jerusalem on the Passover Holiday.

The ROASTED EGG represented a second offering that was brought to the Temple on Passover. It was known then as a festival offering, becoming a symbol of the triumph of life over death.

The MAROR or bitter herbs reminds us of the bitterness of slavery under Pharaoh, and the unpleasantness of the slave experience.

The HYSSOP PLANT was very common plant which signified faith that the Lord would indeed spare their children and their houses from any hurt harm or danger by using the plant to apply the blood of the lamb to the door posts.

And finally, the KARPAS or green vegetable served as a reminder of freshness giving hope and renewal.

What for Dinner

What's on the table for the Passover has not changed. However, Jesus took bread and wine and blessed it and gave a new meaning to the observance for Christians. The Passover represented the old covenant between God and man but the Lord's Supper would represent a new agreement. The Passover was symbolic of a people leaving one experience, while the Lord's supper represented believers beginning a new relationship with God based on faith in Jesus Christ.

THE BREAD: Jesus took the bread and blessed it. In so doing he told his disciples that the bread would no longer represent the haste with which Israel left Egypt, but it would now represent his body which would be given as a sacrifice for them. The disciples were not eating his body, the bread "represented" his body. The bread does not transmortify, or turn into his body, it only "represents" the physical sacrifices of Christ that were given so we might have a new agreement with God. In the Passover, a slain lamb was the sacrifice, prepared with bitter herbs, and eaten with a roasted egg that meant a triumph of life over death. For the Christian, the body of Christ embodies all of these symbols and more. His body is the slain lamb given in the bitterness of the Calvary experience to give us triumph over life and death. It does not matter what kind of bread we use, because it is just a symbol. The Passover required unleavened bread but believers use all kinds of bread: wafers, soft dough bread and even crackers. The symbol is not in the type of bread but in what it represents.

The bread represents our belief that life consists of more than merely existing to acquire bread but to please God. Jesus made that clear when he said, "Man doth not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

The bread also represents our belief that our God provides for our daily needs according to his will. In Christ we pray in the Lord's prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread."

When a believer sees bread on the table. He or she sees Jesus, our provider and sustainer, making a way for us in spirit and in the body. He remembers Jesus saying that Moses gave Israel bread in the wilderness but he was the bread of life that came from above. That's why believers sing, "Bread of heaven, bread of heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

THE WINE: In the Passover, the Hyssop plant represented how the people used it to paint the door posts of their houses to escape the death angel. For believers, the blood of Christ represents the payment made for our sins by Christ. Wine was not mentioned in the original concept of the Passover, however, traditionally wine was later added by the priests. Each person was obligated to have four cups of red wine at the Passover meal, even if it had to be paid for out of the public treasury. A blessing was given and they drank the first cup of wine and ate bitter herbs. Secondly the son of the house would ask the importance of the Passover and the father would tell everyone present the meaning. Then they drank the second cup of wine. After the third cup a grace was said after the meal. They drank the fourth cup to complete the celebration. In Luke 22:20 Jesus took that last cup and said, " Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you. " That last cup had no special significance. Jesus told his disciples that the cup would represent his blood.

Early believers gathered in large crowds for the Lord's supper. They mixed the Passover's four cups of wine and roasted lamb together with their new faith and turned the Lord's supper into what was known as "love feasts." The food and wine became a focal point of the Lord's supper to the point that in 1 Corinthians 11:17-34 Paul had to chastise believers for coming to the Lord's supper to eat and drink instead of doing that at home. As a result, today we have the symbols of a small cup of juice or wine and a crumb of bread. This emphasizes the symbol rather than the food and the wine.

The wine represents the blood of Christ.

The blood of Christ is the power of salvation

Because of the blood of Christ we have the hope of a new life and a guaranteed place in the kingdom of heaven.

One song writer summed up our belief this way, "There's power, power, wonder working power in the precious blood of the lamb."

When believers see the wine on the table we see the sacrifice of Christ who shed his blood for us. It doesn't matter whether the symbol is grape juice, grape drink, or real wine, it represents the blood of Christ which was shed for us.

Get ready for the meal

Finally brothers and sisters, God is getting the table ready for us but are we ready for the table?

Somebody can remember their childhood when grandma stayed in the kitchen for long hours with no air conditioning, with a sweat towel over her shoulder making corn bread and with something frying on every eye of the stove. She worked all day to be sure that the dinner was ready.

When we ran in the door, we ran straight for the tables, but she would make us get up and go wash the dirt off our hands and sweat off our faces. The table was ready, but we were not ready for the table.

Since the beginning of time God has been preparing a table for us, making things right. from the beginning of time. There is no fancy table cloth. No shiny silver ware, but everything on the table was just what we need.

Jesus the master table setter stood back in heaven and —Surveyed our valleys, and said I'll put some valley food on the table.

—Measured our mountains, and said I'll put some mountain nuggets on the table.

—Calculated our losses, and said I'll put some victory food on the table —Comprehended our sorrows, and said I'll put some happy food on the table!

—Inventoried our mistakes, and said I'll put some correction food on the table

—Counted our failures, and said I'll put some success food on the table

When God lays out the dinner table, he prepares so much that there's always something left over.

On day Jesus spoke to 5,000 people. There was not enough food to feed such a large crowd, they only had two little fishes and five loaves of bread. But God had already set the table. There was enough food to feed the multitude with plenty of leftovers!

Maybe that's where those old fashioned mama's get the idea. When they cook, they cook for the neighborhood.

It's not one two or three or slices of bacon, but whole slabs of bacon!

It's not one or two pieces of chicken, but enough to feed the family for days!

It's not an ear or corn or two, but there's corn on the cob for days!

That's the way God prepares our table.. he's got more than we need!

When dinner is ready and the table is set, somehow everybody gets the word.

When we were in the country, the bell would ring and hurry from the fields singing, "it's getting late in the evening and the sun is almost down."

If we were playing under the street light in the project and heard big mama's voice, we cut through a few back yards and over the over the fence to rush in the back door!

We were excited about getting home because supper was on the table.

One evening Jesus assembled his disciples around a supper table in an upper room. He prepared a table of remembrance. He told them to eat this bread in remembrance of me! Drink this wine, in remembrance of the blood that would be shed for them!

In the Upper Room there the dinner table was ready, and the Savior who was ready for the Table!

As Saints eat from the Lord's table, we are eating from God's dinner table.

To prepare the table, Jesus had to live among men for 33 long years!

To prepare the table, he had to suffer the humiliation of his critics!

To prepare the table, he had to pick up an old rugged cross and carry it to Golgotha's hill.

To prepare the table he had to die out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

The table is ready! Are "we" ready for the table?

Are We There Yet?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the New Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: Behold, "I have set the land before you: go in and possess the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them and to their seed after them." Deuteronomy 1:8

Introduction

Have you ever taken a trip and asked the question, "Are we there yet?" It usually happens when the family is traveling from one destination to another and the little ones in the car are really excited about the trip to Disney Land, the beach or to grandma's house. It seems that the car is not driving fast enough. The highway seems to crowded and the minutes that pass seem like hours as the anticipation grows. The aggravating question is asked repeatedly by little minds, "Are we there yet?" It's especially aggravating when it is asked only 30 minutes into a five hour drive and is asked repeatedly every five minutes. For the youngsters in the back seat things are going toO slow. The anticipation is killing them. When they think about the fun and excitement they expect they can't wait, so they ask again, "Are we there yet?"

That's the way it is with graduation. For 18 years a student has had one goal in life and that is "graduation." When it finally comes and they walk down the isle with their tassels dangling in the corner of their eye and cameras flashing as the make each proud step, they feel a sense of accomplishment. When they walk across the stage and receive a diploma, shake a principal's hand and wave to the crowd that admires their accomplishment it is a great moment. Once in their seat, they open their case and steal a quick look at their name scripted in fancy letters on a sheep skin diploma and they swell with pride. After the celebration is over, the gifts are received and the praises subside, there is a question that graduates must answer, "Are we there yet?"

Is high school graduation the end goal? Have we finally arrived? Are we "there" or do we still have quite a ways to go to get where we trying to go?

How far is the distance between "here" and "there?" There is no universal answer to that question because "there" is defined by each person's life goal. For the person who aspires to great heights in life, "there" is a distance away. For others, "there" may be just a little closer. "Here" represents the sum total of our life journey to this point. It accounts for everything we have experienced, information we have learned and directions we have taken. “Here” represents the point in time where yesterday and today meet. “There” represents the terminal point in the distant future that is the focus of our journey. Between “here” and “there” is a meandering life journey that will be full of challenges, blessings, successes and failures. Although the distance between “here” and “there” may be short in actual time required, the weakness of our humanity may make the journey longer than necessary. Sometimes we even learn that we have taken a wrong turn and need to get back on track.

In a spiritual sense, we are also on a journey. A journey towards heaven. We’re not there yet, but we are taking one step at a time, toward God’s promised land.

As Christians, we press toward the mark of the high calling. From “here” to “there” is a lifetime journey, but we have pledged ourselves to go forward and never look back, with faith as our guide and heaven as our goal.

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as he gives final instructions to Israel in the short period before they actually crossed into the promised Land.

Generally, the book of Deuteronomy has three divisions that recite for the hearing of the young, how God cared for the people in the wilderness, how he gave them the law and finally what future blessings he has in store for them. The first four chapters review God’s love and care of Israel in the wilderness. Most of the people he addressed his remark to were only children when, forty years earlier, God performed miracles for their parents and gave them a renewed promised of the prosperous land. So Moses chose to recite for their hearing the wonderful love that God showed the people while they were in the wilderness as he led them with a pillar of fire by night and the cloud by day, and guided them through the trackless, howling desert. He tells how God brought water from the rock to satisfy their thirst in a vast and waterless area. And how he delivered them from their enemies again and again; how he fed them with manna that did not fail.

The second division is a great resume of the law. The Ten Commandments appear in the Bible for the second time here, beginning with chapter five, verse 27. Here are the laws on divorce, on faithlessness and the various penalties they could expect if they broke God’s laws once in the promised land or on their journey.

The third division of the book, chapters 27 through 34, is a mighty revelation of the future, both in terms of blessings and of curses upon Israel.

In the text, Moses begins by talking to the young people who are about to begin their journey; encouraging them to possess what the Lord has given them and not to wander along the way.

Possess What God has Promised

Youth today must be willing to walk the straight and narrow path toward the mark of the prize of the high calling of God. God has promised each believer a joyful, fulfilling and blessed life if they follow his rules (That does not guarantee any life style, bank account or state of mind or body) He has promised each believer the victory if they possess what he has given.

Youth can answer the question, "Are we there yet?" When they can truthfully say, "I have possessed that which God has for me, with my faith, integrity and Christ centered life in tact. If we possess what God gives but lose our Christ centered life, faith and integrity along the way, then we are not "there" yet. We are there, when we have done what God wanted us to do, the way he wanted it done.

There are three steps to possessing what God has in store for us.

THERE MUST BE A DESIRE TO POSSESS: If you are content with what you are today, then you will never be any better than you are now; you may become worse. Israel was first told to possess the land 40 years earlier by Joshua and Caleb, but they went around in circles for 40 years with no desire to possess the land because it was too difficult to do. To posses what God has for us we must "want it" bad enough to pursue it with a passion. We must want to be a doctor, lawyer, engineer, nurse or auto technician bad enough to block out all distractions and pursue it with a passion. In Matthew 5:6, Jesus said there is a blessing for those who "hunger" for righteousness; they shall be filled. The years between 18 and 25 (depending on your profession) are "possession years." Generally 25 to 35 are the years in which we secure what we have possessed. We spend 36 to 65 cultivating our possession and 65 until death being supported by our possession. With a few exceptions, the years between 18-25 are crucial years in which you stake our claims or let them slip away.

THERE MUST BE AN UNDISTRACTED FOCUS: Many begin the journey through young adult life with a passion for success only to be distracted along the way. Those who seek to possess God's blessings, must keep their eyes on the prize. The distractions will be numerous, all of which promise you that you will be able to handle them and that you are not really being distracted. Some distractions involve the party life, fatal personal attractions, early parenthood, fast track, get rich the quick way schemes and scams, larceny, drugs and alcohol, and the intoxicating liquor of success itself, distracts many. Possessing what God has to give means never taking your eye off him or the prize. Paul said he was persuaded that nothing would distract him: life or death, things past or things present, height or depth, neither angels or principalities. Young graduates should begin this next phase of their lives with the same resolve. Nothing will take me off the goal or reduce my love, faith, worship and service to God.

YOU MUST BE PREPARED TO SEIZE THE MOMENT: Life presents special moments when opportunities are ripe for the claiming. When he spies gave their report, the moment for Israel to claim their possession was upon them, but they did not seize the moment. Carpe Deum, is the Latin phrase for "seize the moment." It means that we must act in faith when opportunities appear. That means we must prepare for the moment. When the job you're looking for appears in the want ads you may get all excited, until you see the training requirement posted with it. You have the ability and the skill but lack the academic training necessary to seize the moment. The years between 18-25 are the years when your basic academic training is secure. Some areas may require longer. The amount of training, experience, and academic preparation you receive in the next seven years will determine whether your possession in your generation will be a mountain, molehill or desert plain. To a large extent they determine whether you will be the coach or the water boy, supervisor or the worker, the one who designs video games or the one who plays them; the producer or the consumer. It all depends on the direction you take in the next seven years. Prepare now for the door of opportunity that will be opened for you in a few short years. When the opportunity comes "seize the moment."

Are we there yet?

Finally, we should consider that while we know where we have been we don't know what the future holds. We don't know what the future holds, but we know who holds the future.

As graduates move forth to take possession of the rewards of their faith they should always remember that no matter what the distance between here and "there," God is only a prayer away.

God's guiding spirit will let us know when we are traveling the right path, even though we might think we have made it.

When we graduate from high school we learn quickly that we are not there yet?

When we get scholarships or enroll in college are we there yet?

When we graduate from college and land the job of our dreams, are we there yet?

When we find a mate and marry, and begin a family, are we there yet?

When we have achieved success in our chosen fields, are we there yet?

For the believer, even a young believer, we have not made it there until we live our lives in a way that will be pleasing to God and in his mercy he welcomes us into the kingdom of heaven.

A young lady began a career as a dancer after being the student of an aging but world renown dance instructor. Anytime the young lady made errors, the dance instructor would carefully point out her strengths and the errors too. "Never be pleased with what the crowd tells you. You have made it only when he who gave you the gifts is pleased with how you have used them." For years, the young lady won accolades and prizes for her dancing but she would never be satisfied, she'd call her teacher and ask in a childlike manner, the same question she had asked for many years, "Have I made it?" But the answer would always be the same. Draped in success, robed in diamonds, furs and jewelry, the dancer became extremely famous, but the old lady gave the same answer. It troubled the dancer that she had fame, money and influence but her teacher always said the same words. One night she had an inspiration. She went to church and volunteered to teach spiritual dance to elementary students. There were no flashing lights, or limousines, but she gave the little girls the best she had. When she called her teacher and told her of her actions the teacher said, "Now you are on the right path." –You have made it only when he who gave you the gifts is pleased with how you use them.

As you begin this seven year journey put Jesus first, because he can guide you safely through.

We don't know what rivers we'll have to cross, but we know that if we put Christ first, he will guide us safely through.

I'm reminded of the story of some travelers who followed a trail to a town located high in the Swiss mountains. They were warned that sudden snows could wipe out the trail and they might get lost. The guide told the travelers not to worry but to keep looking for the cross! Soon a storm came and the paths were covered. The people panicked because the covered trails and because their guide was walking in the horizon looking for a cross. They felt doomed. As they all gave up hope the guide returned shouting: "Follow the cross, follow the cross." He pointed to a giant lighted cross high on a hill in the horizon. It had been erected by the townspeople to guide travelers lost in the storm.

The storms of life might cover your path, but keep your eye on the cross!

Follow Jesus: the truth that never lies; friend that never forsakes, fountain that never runs dry, the way that never deceives, and anchor that never fails!

Follow Jesus who died and arose for our sins!

Another song writer put it this way: "Where he leads me I will follow. I will follow, follow, follow him!"

Walk Right Or Get Left Behind

SCRIPTURE*: "And walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour." Ephesians 5:2*

Introduction

Is it possible to be the only person doing the right thing while everyone else is doing wrong? Often Christians are frustrated because they refuse to go along with the crowd when the crowd is doing the wrong thing. We have seen it so many times. Everyone at the office party takes a drink to be sociable; everyone but you. Everyone seems to fake injuries if there has been a minor accident; everyone but you. Everyone keeps the change if a clerk gives them too much change; everyone but you. Sometimes believers draw criticism because they do the right thing instead doing the wrong thing like everyone else around them. Yet, the goal of every believer is to do the right thing, even if they must do it by themselves.

Sometimes our willingness to go along with the crowd can get us into a world of trouble. Consider the mice that came to the mouse convention with some exciting news. It seems that the humans had left cheese lying around the building without covering it up as they usually do. One young mouse came to the podium and addressed the convention. "There is opportunity all around us. There is free cheese everywhere all we have to do is go out and grab some." All of the mice squeaked their approval; that is all except uncle Fat Rat, the old veteran of the mouse convention. He was a wise old mouse who had lived many years. Uncle Fat rat did not jump up and down with joy like the other mice. He didn't join the army of young mice who went out to get some of the free cheese that was lying around everywhere. Neither would he let his nephew Mickey move from his side. He only shook his head. Mickey protested that everyone else was going and he shouldn't be the only one sitting by himself. After a while there was an awful snapping sound all over the building, followed by the squeaks and skirms of aching mice who had been snared as they reached for the cheese. Uncle Fat Rat looked at Mickey and said, "Let this be a lesson to you son, free cheese always gets your tail in a trap; even in a crowd."

The bible warns believers to beware of following the crowd, especially if the crowd is ungodly. Psalm 1:1 says "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, or sitteth in the seat of the scornful." It's a stern warning for believers to be influenced by the ungodly and the worldly. At the same time, Jesus warned his disciples that the road to destruction is wide, but straight is the gait and narrow is the way that leads to the kingdom of God. The masses seldom follow the narrow path but take the super highway approach to life. Believers are encouraged to take the narrow road, even if they have to walk by themselves.

As believers, we praise God for showing us the right path. We praise him for giving us the strength to resist temptation and live for him constantly; because it's not easy to walk right when everybody is walking wrong.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he gives instructions to the Ephesians about Christ like living.

Paul, in writing to the church at Ephesus, emphasized the importance of walking right before God. Believers were encouraged to "Walk in love as Christ hath loved us."

Paul told the Ephesians how they should walk and he also advised them where not to walk. Walking after Christ is the desired walk. Walking after the world is the walk believers are encouraged to avoid. Believers are instructed to do those things which are "acceptable unto the Lord" (v10) and to avoid fellowship with those things which are wrong. Fellowship implies participation and endorsement. Believers won't be able to always avoid contact with ungodly activities, but that does not imply that they must endorse or participate in them.

By verse 15 Paul's point is clear. Believers should carry themselves in ways that reflect their walk with God. Many will find God only by walking in the footsteps of believers. They are the only bibles that many will ever read.

A Closer Look

A closer look at verse 15 in the Greek gives us the full power of the text:

SEE: The Greek work for "See" (Blepo) means "to discern" or to see with the spirit. Discernment is a spiritual gift that is noted by Paul in 1 Corinthians 12. It is the ability to view life situations with a spiritual rather than a carnal eye. It is difficult to walk in the dark because it is difficult to see. With the carnal eye we see people, but when we discern we see the spirit within them. Those who see things spiritually see well when no one else can see anything of value, but they can also see in what appears to be good. So Paul first says, "See" with a spiritual eye so that we might walk right.

THEN: The Greek word "then" (Oun) means "therefore" or to take into consideration the preceding. What Preceded verse 15 was Paul's warning to believers about what they should stay away from. Beginning at verse three he lists whoremongering, filthy talking, and generally acting in ways that are not becoming of Saints as being frowned upon. Believers are the only bible that some read, thus their actions or failure to act reflects on the faith.

THAT: The Greek word for "that" (Pos) means "in what way." It means "what, how, and why." It challenges believers to consider what we do and say, how we say it and do it and why. Each believer is called upon to consider the how, what and why of all of our actions because they comprise the nature of our life in Christ.

WALK: The Greek word for "walk" (Peripateo) means "to be occupied." It also means how one moves and regulates himself. Our walk in life does not refer to literal steps but to the way we occupy and direct the course of our daily lives. Are we occupied in pursuits that would please God? Are we regulated by him or are we out of control? Paul told the Ephesians that we should strive to be occupied doing what God wants us to do, always regulated and directed by the Holy Spirit.

CIRCUMSPECTLY: The Greek word for "Circumspectly" (Akribos) means "exactly, diligently or accurately." The person who is circumspect attempts to do things according to the will of God. His desire is to accurately depict the spirit of the kingdom of God and to diligently work to bring it about.

FOOLS: The Greek word for "fools" (Asophos)means being unwise. Being unwise is not a measure of intelligence, but a measure of how intelligence is used. The unwise person knows that a certain practice or relationship is dangerous for them but their intelligence cannot translate what he knows into wise acts. When we act unwisely we become fools. The entire book of Proverbs as well as other biblical accounts warns believer repeatedly to distance themselves from fools because their unwise actions will affect them ultimately.

WISE: The Greek word for "wise" (Sophos) means to "formulate the best plan and execute the best action. The wise person considers all options then takes the best route, even though it may not be the most popular or the easiest route.

Taken collectively, Paul's words to the Ephesians say, "View life with a spiritual eye that discerns beneath the surface of what we see and experience, so that we might see clearly where we are going, avoiding sinful activities as we strive to accurately reflect the Christian lifestyle in a way that shows wisdom rather than foolish living."

Walking the Right Road

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that those who walk the right road are on their way to glory.

Jesus told his disciples that his teachings would not be easy, or popular, but they would be demanding because the majority of people will shun you because of your commitment to him. You will travel a road where only a few will go.

But yet Jesus encourages us to enter into the strait gate! Walk the road traveled only by a few.

We should not be discouraged by the loneliness of the walk. For although there are few travelers, it is a walk that was started by Jesus himself.

As the trailblazer of our salvation, Jesus blazed a trail that was followed closely by his 12 disciples so much so that it became clearly recognizable.

The early church, growing by the thousands, walked that narrow trail until it grew into a rugged, but rocky road.

There are many who have walked the road in the past, but the travelers of this generation are still being called upon to enter in the strait gate. The road to destruction is wide. It is no longer a trail, but has become a super highway.

It is traveled by some of our class mates, sorors, frat brothers and club members. It is traveled by some of our political allies, bosom buddies and even some of our church members.

But this road is an ungodly road...and it leads to destruction.

This road leads to drinking and gambling in all of its varied forms.

This road leads to hatred, envy, and evil conversations.

This road leads to sexual infidelities and all forms of ungodliness.

But children of God is encouraged to keep their hands wrapped in the winding chain and to walk the road to Glory.

Although the road might get a little rough we are encouraged to walk on.

Walk On! Though tear drops cloud our eyes.

Walk On! Though disappointments place stumbling blocks in our way.

Walk on! With hope in your heart and you'll never walk alone!

There are three roads that we must walk before we get to glory.

First, we must walk the ROAD TO DAMASCUS. Saul found God on the Damascus Road when he had a conversion experience with the Lord.

The Damascus road is the road you travel when you give your life to Christ.

The Damascus road is the road you travel when the Spirit of the Lord fills you for the first time.

On the Damascus road the Lord gives you a new experience, a new song to sing, and a new testimony.

Travelers on the Damascus road sing, "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore. Very deeply stained within, seeking to rise no more. But the master of the sea, heard my despairing cry, from the waters lifted me now safe am I. Love lifted me."

There is another road we must travel and it's the JERICHO ROAD.
Jesus said it's not good enough just for us to be saved and filled with the spirit...but we must walk the Road to service to our fellow man.

He told the parable of the good Samaritan to point out to us that our obligation is not just to our own, but to go out into the highways and byways and show God's love to all those we find.

When we travel the Jericho road we ask not for "whom the bell tolls" for we know it tolls for the least of these it tolls for us.

When we travel the Jericho road we show the love of Christ when we help a hungry child, give shelter to a homeless stranger, or provide comfort for those who are in despair.

I heard a songwriter say, "If I can help somebody as I pass along, then my living shall not be in vain, If I can cheer somebody with a word or song, then my living shall not be in vain."

There is another road, and it's the road to Calvary.

No matter how many others that we help we must continue to show lost sinners the road to Calvary.

We must tell the word that a living God came and died and arose on the third day.

We must tell them that the journey toward forgiveness begins with a walk on the road to Calvary.

Tell them Jesus died on Calvary that they might have life.

The road to Calvary puts out feet on the road to the New Jerusalem.

Every child of God should be on his way to the New Jerusalem.

I hear David say, "Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil for though art with me."

I'm on my way to the Canaan Land!

The road gets rough and the going gets tough and the hills are so hard to climb...I started out a long time ago, there is no doubt in my mind I've decided to make Jesus my choice.

Your Title is On Your Towel

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 8, 2003

SCRIPTURE: He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself. After that he poureth water into a bason, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded. John 13:4-5; "He that would be chief among you, let him be servant." Matthew 20:27

Introduction

How many sets of towels are there in your home? Most families have at least two sets of towels in their homes. Depending on family size, there could be as many as 10 or 15 sets of towels in a home. Generally, a towel set includes a bath towel, wash cloth, and a hand towel. They are usually beautifully decorated and come in all sizes and colors. Some towels are fluffy and soft, others are see-through thin. Some are very expensive or some are bargain brands. No matter how many sets of towels a family has, there is probably one or two sets they get used more than others. Many people use, wash and reuse the same towel for years until we finally retire it to join other retirees that are generally used to wash the car.

While there are a few towels in our homes that are pretty and decorative, most towels, whether they are cloth or paper, are designed to be used. They have a job to do. Whether they are soft and fluffy or thin and see-through, they have a job to do. The nature of the towel is to be of use and service.

If we think about it, every believer is like a good towel. We too are designed with a purpose and have a job to do. Sometimes, like the decorative towels that hang in our bathrooms for guests to see, we just hang around and look pretty. Most of the time, however, we are a little ragged around the edges because we do what towels doâ•¦we serve.

The best towel is the one that gets the job done. It can be ugly or cheap, but it's a good towel if it gets the job done. Even a good towel is no good if it can't be used because it's just for show. A good rule of thumb is: If the towel can't be used, then take it off the rack!

As believers we are called upon to be servants in the kingdom of God. The highest honor of every believer, especially those who lead, is to be called a servant. When the Lord returns, we expect him to reward us with the words, "Servant, well done."

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he gives an example to his disciples about the nature of service in the kingdom of God. It comes on the night of the last supper. With all of his disciples surrounding, him Jesus makes one final attempt to get his disciples to understand the meaning of service in the kingdom of God. Just a short while earlier two of his disciples came to him requesting to sit on his right hand and his left hand when the kingdom of God became a reality. The two, James and John, desired to have high positions in the new kingdom. They sought to ensure themselves a position of power and influence in the kingdom by securing a promise from Jesus that once the kingdom of God was in place that they would have the highest positions. Their desire was to be great. Jesus rebuked them by letting them know that greatness in the kingdom of God was not the same as greatness among men. His words to them were simple, "he that would be great among you let him be your servant."

When he dealt with James and John Jesus gave an example, but in this text instead of simply having an example Jesus decided to show his disciples an example of what he meant my greatness in the kingdom of God. As all the disciples were gathered for the last time, Jesus stripped himself of his garments took a towel and wrapped it around himself; took another towel, and a basin or water and began to wash the feet of his disciples. As Peter watched Jesus wash the feet of his disciples he refused. As he saw the man he had come to accept as the son of God kneeling down with a towel and a pan of water washing the feet of his comrades, it seemed a very humiliating picture. When Jesus came to Peter, Peter's response was to say to him that he would not be allowed to wash his feet. And Jesus responded by saying that if Peter refused to allow him to wash his feet then he would have no part in the kingdom of heaven. At that, Peter responded that he wanted the Lord to wash him all over.

The purpose of the illustration was to show the disciples how to acquire real greatness in the kingdom of God. The illustration that Jesus gave also pointed out the importance of humility in the service. If the son of God himself could bow on his knees and wash the feet of his friends then certainly those who chose to follow him could be expected to do the exact same thing. In no uncertain terms Jesus made it very clear that in the kingdom of God those who wear a title acquire the title through their use of the towel.

As his ministry came to a close Jesus gave his disciples instructions about the nature of their contributions to the kingdom of God. In a similar sense, deacons in the church receive a similar charge, "He that would be greatest among you let him be your servant."

In Matthew 20:27 the word used for servant means slave, bondsman or a person who gives himself up to another's will. There is one word in the New Testament that is always closely associated with descriptions of the leaders; that word is "Diakonos" which means "one who executes the command of another." In the King James version of the bible the word "Diakonos" has been translated to mean one of three English words, "Servant, Minister or Deacon."

In modern times two of the words: minister and deacon have become titles by common use, while servant has been relegated to a lower status. In our sexual bias, we have associated the words "deacon and minister" to men and the seemingly empty description of "servant" to women. Yet, the Greek makes no such distinction. The same word, "Diakonos" that described Phebe as a "servant" in Romans 16:1 is used in 1 Timothy 3:10 to describe the office of deacon. In Matthew 20:26 Jesus uses the word "minister" to describe those who would be truly great, but when we strip away the English translation and look at the original Greek, we get the word "Diakonos" or servant. Whether it referred to a man or a woman, diakonos, meant "one who carries out the will of another."

In the Kingdom of God, greatness is not determined by the title one wears because they are superficial. When we strip away the titles we get to what really counts, the "diakonos" or the service. The emphasis in each of the three ways the word diakonos is translated is upon service to others. Whether the person is called: minister, deacon or just plain servant, they all mean the same thing because greatness is not in the title but on the use of the towel.

Three Towels

The responsibility of every deacon can be summarized by a set of towels, each of which represents an approach-attitude which will be necessary for the fulfillment of their charge.

FACE TOWEL: Face towels are usually used in personal grooming. It's what each person uses to wipe away uncleanliness from their own person and a make themselves presentable to the public. Every deacon needs his own face towel. This emphasizes the importance of deacons keeping their own spiritual lives in check. Deacons constantly monitor their own family life, their own spirituality, and their own relationship with God so they may be able to present themselves faultless before the throne of grace. The deacon is a perpetual student of the scriptures. He or she takes the words of 2Timothy 2:15 to heart, "Study to show thyself approved, a workman that needeth not be ashamed, but rightly dividing the words of truth." James 1:23-27 says each person should stand before the mirror of God's word and examine himself and make corrections if what he sees does not measure up to God's expectations. The title of deacon is empty and meaningless if the lifestyle associated with the title doesn't match. The deacon who doesn't study, pray, worship, or present himself as one close to God is one who has a title but has no towel. The good deacon begins with the face towel, securing his own spirituality as he prepares to serve others. The title is on the towel.

CRYING TOWEL: There is a small portable towel that many carry with them every day is called a handkerchief. Often a handkerchief is used to wipe away stains. They are also used to wipe away tears. The deaconâ•™s ministry sometimes can be very frustrating as it appears that people are not very receptive, yet deacons must wash away their tears and frustrations and serve anyway. A popular poem puts it this way:

People are often unreasonable, illogical, and self-centered; Forgive them anyway.
If you are kind, people may accuse you of selfish, ulterior motives; Be kind anyway.
If you are successful, you will win some false friends and some true enemies; Succeed anyway.
If you are honest and frank, people may cheat you;
Be honest and frank anyway.
What you spend years building, someone could destroy overnight; Build anyway.
If you find serenity and happiness,
they may be jealous; Be happy anyway.
The good you do today, people will often forget tomorrow; Do good anyway.
Give the world the best you have, and it may never be enough.
Give the world the best you've got anyway.
You see, in the final analysis, it is between you and God;
It was never between you and them anyway.

So, use your crying towel to wipe away the frustrations that may come in your heart. The good deacon serves out of humility and love for God, not for the accolades of the public. The deacon's title is not in the position; the title is on the towel.

DISH TOWEL: Contrary to popular belief a person who becomes a Deacon is not one who is called to be a decorative towel; one that looks pretty but is never to be used for fear of getting dirty. The best deacons are really dish towels. Dish towels come into service after the celebration is over and the company is gone. The dish towel comes in contact with the dirt and grime of life and life's leftovers. Jesus said, "ye are the salt of the earth" implying that true servants must come in contact with tasteless elements of life and bring flavor and meaning.

The deacon touches people at their point of need and spends considerable time working with them, helping them clean up their act, and washing them with hope and inspiration. There are many homes that have used the same dish rag for so long that they have become "holy" towels because there are so many holes in them. They are reluctant to throw that old dishrag away because it somehow cleans the dishes just right. As deacons minister to members of a congregation the start with a title, but after they have visited the sick, helped resolve family problems, prayed for the frightened and otherwise responded to the needs of those in trouble, they become "holy" towels. No longer Brother Jones or Sister Smith, they suddenly become "Deacon" Jones and â•œDeaconâ•• Smith because their service has made them "holy" in the eyes of the membership.

Some dish towels do the washing, others are called dry towels, because they absorb the moisture from dishes. Some deacons are good at that, they listen and absorb and feel our pain. Many members have found that they feel better after talking to their favorite deacon who took the time to listen to their family trouble, absorb it and not wring it out for the world to see. Not only do many people have dish towels that are holy, there are many who have dry towels that are holy too. Deacons become special men and women in the sight of those whom they serve when their towel is used so much that they become holy. That's when it is clear that the title is on the towel.

Help Lift Him Up

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that the function of the deacon is to assist the Pastor as he lifts Jesus up.

The good deacon contributes to the spirituality of worship and helps create an atmosphere in which the people can see and feel the presence of God.

The good deacon has a responsibility both to the pew and the pulpit. The responsibility to the pew is to promote spirituality and provide individual service. The responsibility to the pulpit is to promote protect and provide for the Pastor.

His obligation to his pastor is to promote the vision that God has given him for the congregation. He should use all of his resources to help explain it, teach it, encourage it and implement it.

His allegiance to his pastor also requires him to protect his pastor. The deacon, through his personal and private consultations, advises his pastor in matters that will protect him from harm. He protects the pastor's reputation by defending him against untrue accusations, insults, and malicious attacks.

Finally, his obligation is to provide for his pastor. The deacon's allegiance to his pastor motivates him to insure that the pastor has what it takes to take care of his family, and to represent the church in the community and the assembly of the Saints.

When a good deacon does his job well the people are able to see Jesus.

When a deacon does his job well he becomes a sweat towel. One who labors in the morning and prays at night for the betterment of the church.

A good deacon is a man or woman of spiritual cloth. A cloth towel is better than a paper towel. Paper towels are temporary and good for light jobs, but can't be used but once. A good cloth towel can be washed, dried and used again.

A good deacon has been washed in the blood of the crucified lamb, and is ready to serve over and over again!

A good deacon is not a beach towel that is good for laying around and chilling out. A good deacon is like a hand towel, that is always close by and ready to serve.

That's what the prophet meant when he declared, "If the Lord needs somebody, here am I send me!"

If the Lord needs somebody to help minister to the lonely, here am I send me!

If the Lord needs somebody to offer prayer for those in distress, here am I send me!

If the Lord needs somebody to shout hallelujah and say Amen, "Here am I send me!"

If the Lord needs somebody to tell the world about Jesus, â•œHere am I, send me!"

When it's all over the true value of a deacon will be whether his service helped us to see Jesus!

When we are lonely, the good deacon, helps us know that Jesus is a comforter in our lonely hour

When we are sick, the good deacon, encourages us to never give up hope because Jesus is a doctor in our sickroom!

When we are in trouble and can't see our way, the good deacon reminds us that Jesus can make a way out of no way!

When we are lost, the good deacon reminds us that Jesus is the way the truth and the light!

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, the Bright and Morning Star!

Jesus, died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

If you want to be a good deacon.

Help us lift him up!

What to do in an Emergency

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 29, 2003

SCRIPTURE: For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock. Psalm 27:5

Introduction

Have you ever been in a threatening situation that required a quick response on your behalf? Whether we are young or old, most of us have faced an emergency situation at one time or another. Such situations required quick responses on our behalf or there would have been considerable loss of life limb or property. When a person has faced an injury from an accident or some other source, quick action is required. Knowing what to do in emergency situations can often be the difference between life and death.

The circumstances that prompt emergency situations vary from the major to the minor. Emergency situations can arise from something as simple as tripping over an item and falling down a flight of stairs to an airplane crash. Each situation can introduce variables that can result in emergencies that require immediate attention. Every spirit of endeavor has its emergencies. There are financial emergencies; medical emergencies; as well as social and political emergencies. There are generally five situations that require immediate assistance as it relates to human health. Generally, these cases involve stopped breathing, no heart beat, severe bleeding, choking, and poisoning. Sometimes an emergency situation will not result in a loss of life, bleeding or choking , but it can introduce unfavorable result if not attended. That's what happens when nature calls and the words of the commercial become a reality, "Gotta go, gotta go, gotta go right now." Now that's an emergency!

Those who are called on to respond in emergency situations must do three things: stay calm, take action and get help.

We know what to do when there is a fire. Instinctively we also know what to do when there is a flood or natural disaster. But what do we do when there is a spiritual emergency? What do we do when our spiritual lives are in danger and we need an emergency response? Saints spend most of their lives preparing for such emergencies. We study the Bible, worship and praise God and learn what to do when emergencies arise. The response for the Christian in a spiritual emergency is the same as it would be in a natural disaster. When we face a spiritual emergency we should stay calm and remain confident that God is in control.

As Christians, we are confident that no matter what the situation, the God we serve is able to deliver us. We do not panic in emergency situations; we do what we must and when we've done all we know how to do, we know how call for help!

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains his confidence that God would readily be available to help him in times of an emergency.

Perhaps more than any other Old Testament character, David was familiar with emergency situations. His entire life, at some point or another, seemed to be either a major or minor emergency. As a child he attended the flocks of his father and was faced with emergency situations repeatedly. Wild animals such as lions and bears came to attack his sheep, David responded to each instance by staying calm and taking control. Even when he faced the giant Goliath, David knew what to do in an emergency situation. His life was in imminent danger, yet he displayed confidence. As a musician for King Saul his life was often threatened as the King threw his spear at him in rages of jealousy. As a hunted out law he was repeatedly surrounded by the armies of King Saul and faced life-threatening circumstances in every circumstance. David remained calm, did what was necessary, and always called on God.

In the 27th Psalm David demonstrates two aspects of his emergency preparedness plan. The first aspect of his plan was to trust in God. His statement of trust was, "The Lord is my light and my salvation." That statement was an affirmation of his belief that God was in control of every circumstance, every situation and every emergency. The second aspect of David's plan prompted him to take whatever action that was necessary to correct a situation that was within his power. In some instances, David was the instrument of forgiveness and compassion such as the time when he entered into a cave and had an opportunity to slay the sleeping Saul but did not do so he could show a compassionate spirit toward his adversary. In other cases it was necessary to correct himself that he might be able to act quickly to resolve a national dilemma. That's what happened in the 51st Psalm when David declared, "Create in me a clean heart and renew a right spirit within me." David also knew how to call for help. In the 121st Psalm David made a declaration and plea for help when he said, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who maketh the heaven and earth."

Whatever the situation David seemed prepared to respond. He was confident in God, knew what to do, and knew how to call for help.

Confidence in God

The most salient characteristic of the Christian experience is faith and trust in God. Confidence and faith in God sustains believers in difficult and tough times. Without trust in God believers would be unable to survive the treacherous times in which they live. The confidence of the secure believer inspires hope in others. In difficult times it is this feeling of confidence that inspires the believer to say "all is well." Even when those around them are panicking believers are able to stand boldly, assured that God is still on the throne and still hears and answers prayers. Such confidence inspires believers to sing the words of the songwriter, "The Lord will make a way somehow." When Israel stood at the Red Sea with pharaoh's armies behind them and the Red Sea in front of them there were many people who recognized they were in an emergency situation. Many people panicked. They complained against God and also complained against Moses. It was Moses who stood on the bank of the Red Sea and said to the people, "Stand stilll and see the salvation of the Lord."

In a similar sense, modern-day warriors also stand firm in the face of a dangerous time, confident that God will make a way out of no way. Our confidence is based on the fact that God has actually moved and acted in our lives. He has made ways for us. He has opened doors for us and made a way out of no way. Thus, in dangerous times we act in confidence because we know that our God is able. The confidence we display inspires all those who see us move with less fear and apprehension. Those who are less likely to be strong in dangerous and emergency situations draw strength from those who appear to be in control because they act in faith. Their faith cheers us. Their faith makes us bold. Their faith calms our fears. Maybe that's what the songwriter had in mind when he wrote, "beneath his wings of love abide, God will take care of you."

Take action in faith

In an emergency situation confidence alone is not enough. Confidence must be followed by direct action. In a first aid situation the person who provides the first aide is simply giving first and needed care until the services of a doctor can be acquired. The first aide we provide is not the ultimate solution but is a temporary action designed to bring a dangerous situation under control until a higher power takes over. A person who has lost hope and has given up on life is in an emergency situation. We may counsel with that person, pray with them and encouraged them in that moment of weakness but our action is an emergency response not a permanent solution. The permanent solution is for the person to find hope in the hands of a loving God. We may console a friend was lost a loved one and is bordering depression but our response is only an emergency response not a permanent solution. Our friend can only be comforted by a power higher than ourselves. Yet, while our response is temporary in nature it is just as necessary as the response of a paramedic in an emergency call; it keeps them going until they are in more capable hands.

To responsibly respond to an emergency situation each first aid care giver must be prepared to respond. A little advanced training helps out a whole lot. When people face emergency situations, sometimes they are helped if someone who is confident and in control prays for them. In an emergency, sometimes people do many other things but they forget to pray. The confident believer usually finds a quiet way to reinstate hope in a person who is in a dangerous situation by leading them in prayer. When the apostles found themselves in a dangerous situation and were locked away in a jail cell they decided that it was a perfect opportunity for them to pray. There, in the middle of the night, they prayed and God answered their prayer.

When things are going wrong in the family, that's an emergency situation, it's a good time to pray.

When we face unemployment and don't know exactly how ends will meet, that's an emergency situation; it's a good time to pray.

When we face long-term sicknesses and life-threatening ailments which elude modern medical cures; it's a good time to pray.

When we make mistakes that may cost us opportunities, fortunes or careers as a result of our blunder that's an emergency situation; it's a good time to pray.

To respond to emergency situations we need to be prepared. Out preparation should include how to pray and it should include the knowledge of what God has done for others. When we face emergency situations where household funds seem to be low and there's nowhere to go, we should know from our preparation how God took the widow whose barrel was almost empty and kept it from running dry.

When we face emergency situations where we are threatened because of our ideas and beliefs, we should know from our preparation how God stood behind Daniel and the three Hebrew boys even in the face of the threat of the Lions Den and the fiery furnace.

When we face situations where it looks like the tears will never cease to fall and we cry all night long, that's when we remember from our preparation how the word of God says, "Weeping endures of the night but joy comes in the morning."

When we face situations where it appears that God will not hear our prayer and has abandoned us, that's when we remember from our preparation the words of the old hymn, "I know the Lord will answer prayer, for I've tried him for myself."

When we reach an emergency situation we should be prepared, and know how to pray!

Call for help

Finally, brothers and sisters, in emergency situations, everyone should do what you know how to do, but always call for help.

Most cities have emergency response systems in place that responds to community calls for help. A citizen who calls the fire department expects a team of firefighters to arrive in minutes to help put out a fire. When our lives or property is in danger we call the police department because they are trained to handle dangerous situations. When there is a medical emergency we call for an ambulance with hopes that the emergency response team can get us to a hospital in time.

There was a time when homes prepared for emergency by posting the phone numbers to the fire department to ambulance and the police department a prominent places near telephones around the house. Today, most homes only use one number-911. When we call that number we get help from everywhere. The 911 operator always speaks to you in a calm voice, tells you what to do, then sends help. If you don't know where you are, your address flashes on the screen.

God has his own emergency response system. In case of emergencies we can dial 1-1-1, one for the father, one for the son and one for the Holy Ghost. All we need to say is "Father I stretch my hands to thee, no other help I know; if thou withdraw thyself from me whether shall I go?"

We don't have to give an address because the word says in Psalm 139, "If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; Even there shall thy hand lead me."

Nearly everywhere you go there are things that remind us what to do in emergency situations. There are signs on the walls and notes on the labels of cans and packages. They are written in English and Spanish, with pictures for those who cannot read and Braille for those who cannot see.

If you are riding an elevator you may see a sign that reads: " In case of fire do not use the elevator, use the stairs." The elevator give us a quick way up and a quick way down, but in an emergency an elevator is not dependable because it may get stuck or the cable may break. Maybe that's why there is no elevator to heaven but there is a stairway to Heaven. Jacob said he saw that stairway to Heaven with Angels ascending and descending. We are climbing Jacob's ladder and every round goes higher and higher.

If you go to a theatre, you will see rows of little lights on the floor. They are not for decorations, but they show you the way out in case of emergency. No wonder the scripture declared, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path."

Many senior citizens who live alone wear an emergency bracelet. When they fall on the floor or can't move themselves they just push the button and say, "Help, I' have fallen and I can't get up!" The prodigal son must have worn an emergency bracelet. There, standing by the pig sty he declared, "Help I've fallen and I can't get up!"

In every car, invisible to the eye, hidden behind the dashboard and inside the steering wheel is an emergency device called an air bag. In an emergency situation it instantly inflates and forms a cushion all around us to protect us from colliding forces. No wonder the word of God has shown us that God builds a hedge around the righteous to protect them in from dangers seen and unseen. David said, "For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me

Every public building is prepared for emergency situations. They are equipped with smoke detectors, sprinkling systems and fire extinguishers. It's the same for spiritual warriors too. When the Three Hebrew Boys were in the Fiery furnace one of the must of read the spiritual sign that says, "In case of fire..call on the Lord!" They didn't needed the sprinkling system, the fire extinguisher was never used and the smoke detector couldn't detect any smoke because there was a fourth man in the fire.

In case of an emergency, we should read instructions some cleaning fluids in your cabinet, "in case of ingestion, do not induce vomiting, call the poison control center."

In case of emergency don't try to take matters into your own hand! Call Jesus!

Jesus, our shelter in a time of storm!

Jesus, our rock in a weary land!

Jesus, our bridge over troubling water!

Jesus, who died for us out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, arose from the grave with all power in hands! In case of emergency, call on Jesus!

Punctuation Marks

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the New Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 13, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord; and he delighteth in his way." Psalm 37:23

Introduction

Have you ever read a letter or document that wasn't punctuated properly? Did it have questions without question marks? Did it show great emotion at points without exclamation points? Were there commas missing or semi-colons used where colons should have been? Such a letter can be read, but we can often miss the meaning if the punctuation is misplaced or is not placed at all. If you were asked to choose a punctuation mark that best describes your spiritual life, what would it be? When we read or write, punctuation marks give us clues about the mood, tone and state of mind of the subject matter displayed or discussed. When we see periods we dropped the inflection of our voice and stop. When we see question marks, we raise the inflection of our voice indicating uncertainty. An exclamation point indicates excitement while a comma indicates a pause. The believer's life is best described not by a single punctuation mark, but by several which, in combination, demonstrate a life correctly punctuated for the Lord.

One of the great challenges of biblical translators was to translate the words of the original Hebrew and Greek texts of the bible into English in a way that would help the modern reader understand the tone, mood and power of God's word. What made it difficult is the fact that neither the Hebrew or Greek text had any punctuation marks. There were no commas. There were no semi-colons, periods or even paragraphs to indicate when one thought ended and another began. Trying to understand the word of God became a prayerful labor of love that required the direction of the Holy Spirit.

There are many people we meet in life whose lives seem to lack punctuation. We can't figure them out. We can't tell when one point of their lives begins and the other ends. Like a run on sentence, their Christian life runs on into a worldly side of them that pops up without notice. We can't figure them out. They are like question marks! They run on and on without commas or periods that indicate order and organization. Making matters worse, they even have trouble deciphering their own lives.

A life without proper punctuation is confused and frustrated. A life punctuated by the spirit of God is just the opposite because it has meaning, definition, and excitement, all provided by a God who provides the key to our ultimate happiness.

As Christians, we are proud that God has given meaning to our lives by answering life's big questions and showing us the true purpose and meaning of life.

Exposition

This text focuses on David's reminder to believers that God orders and gives meaning to their lives so that he is pleased with the result.

The text comes as David explores the frustrations of believers who are troubled by the apparent success of those who do not choose to be faithful to God. The search for meaning and importance in the life of a believer is a central theme of the 37th psalm as David points out that the unrighteous may at times appear to succeed but will ultimately have their day of reckoning. David's answer to that frustration was to assert that God orders the steps and the lives of those who are faithful to him and put their trust in him.

David said two important things in the 37th psalm and verse 23. First he said, "The steps of a good man are ordered." The reference to "man" is gender neutral in the sense that the phrase "man" can refer to both a man or a woman. The steps mentioned in the text refer to the usual, daily, and regular routine of those who strive to do that which is right in the eyesight of God. The steps refer to the incidents of our lives. These are the high moments and low moments. These are the days of excitement, thrills and joys as well as the days of struggle and trial. The steps are not ordered by God in the sense that they are commanded by him. They are ordered by God in the sense that he arranges them for us in such a way that we are able to understand, appreciate and gleaned from each day its fullest meaning. In this sense, God punctuates the daily routines of our lives in a way that causes us to pause at the right places, stop when we should, and get answers to the right questions.

The second part of the verse says, "and he delighted in his way." At first glance it appears that this verse refers to the good man or the good woman. It appears that God orders the life of each individual and the individual is pleased with what God has done. However, the verse more likely suggests that God is pleased by the individual who allows his life to be ordered by God. The emphasis of the text is not upon an individual who helplessly allows God to mold him and shape him against his will, but on an individual who pleases God because he freely allows God to shape him in a way that pleases the almight. God delights in the correctly punctuated life. It has meaning, order and a sense of divine purpose that pleases him.

The believer who seeks the ordered life is the believer who says to God, "order my steps" in a way that pleases you, "I submit myself to your will."

Punctuation Marks God Uses

God uses a variety of punctuation marks or our lives in ways that will be pleasing to him among those punctuation marks that he uses are:

—QUESTION MARKS: Life poses many situations which raise questions in our mind. For David the question was why do the ungodly seem to prosper while the godly seem to suffer? For Job the question was, "Why the righteous seem to suffer when they have done apparently no wrong?" Every life seems to be filled with one question or another. Usually the questions come in our lives when we meet trying and frustrating moments. Death brings questions. Sickness brings questions. Failure brings questions. Questions are a part of the believer's experience. They are not out of place neither do they suggest any disrespect or lack of faith in God. Some of God's best have asked questions. The prophet Malachi asked the question, "Will a man rob God?" Even Jesus on the cross asked "why hast thou forsaken me?" When believers have questions we are compelled to turn to God for the answers. Only God can give us the assurances that we need and the answers to the interrogatives that trouble us. Maybe that's what the songwriter had in mind when he said "where can I go but to the Lord?"

—PERIODS. Periods provide a notation of finality. Whenever there is a period at the end of the sentence we know that a complete statement has been made. In the same since periods have a sense of closing Does not lives. A life is Miss punctuated often we placed question marks where we should put periods. We asked questions on label or what troubles instead of closing that chapter of our lives. We focus on why he did this and why she did that instead of placing a period and closing that chapter and moving on. They are many believers today who still maintain open files on their past. They have difficulty closing out their old lives as they watch the old and the new collide in run on sentences that only cause confusion and misunderstanding. When Moses left Egypt he put a period after the 40 years that he spent as a Prince of Egypt in pharaoh's court. If he had tried to continue he would not have been the ambassador for God that he turned out to be in the last phase of his life. Failed marriages, failed relationships, and failed experiences have caused many people considerable hardship simply because they could not put a period on that chapter of their lives and move on. We thank God for the periods in our lives that help us to close one episode of our lives and move to something new.

—COMMAS: Commas separate components and indicate a slight pause, in the sentence. When we get to a comma, the sentence is not over. We slow down for a bit but we continue. When God punctuates our lives sometimes he inserts commas to force us to pause, slow down and reflect. He does not bring that episode of our lives to an end, but he just wants us to pause. When we are going too fast, sometimes he has to force us to pause. When we refuse to take a break, he has to force us to pause. The forced pauses are those times in our lives when God inserts commas that do not bring us to an abrupt halt but do slow us down long enough to make it to the end. The "ordered" steps of a good man are those steps which have periods, commas and question marks in all of the right places.

—COLONS: Colons suggest that a series or a list is about to begin. When we see a colon we get ready for one action to follow another. The colon is the warning. So it is in the believer's life. Sometimes difficulties and blessing come in rapid succession. There are days when everything seems to go right and one good thing happens right behind the other. Then there are those days when everything that can go wrong does just that. Appliances break, cars won't start, keys are lost, and the succession seems to never end. Colons warn us that these are expected. When Jesus spoke to his disciples he placed a colon in their understanding of world events by saying they should expect to hear of wars and rumors of wars, nations rising against nations, fathers against sons, and mothers against daughters; these would be the beginning of sorrows. It was a listing or series of events that was given as a warning. Sometimes God gives us warnings and signals of what is to come. Without the colons we are not prepared for the series that eventually comes. The life that is ordered is forewarned and prepared for whatever comes and is able to say, "It is well with my soul."

—APOSTROPHIES: As a general rule, apostrophes are used to indicate ownership or to join two words in a contraction. They are important because they let us know when ownership is claimed and when it is not. A believer's life is punctuated in ways that shows those things which God accurately calls his own. Once, Jesus was shown a coin and asked whether it was lawful to pay taxes. Jesus answered by saying, "Render unto Ceasar the things that are Caesar's and render unto God the things that are God's." The believer's life is filled with apostrophes because he realizes that everything he has belongs to God. It is God's car, God's house, and God's money, on loan to us. A properly punctuated life recognizes the ownership of God and respects David's claim that, "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." We recognize that God holds the universe in hands and owns everything in it.

Exclamation Points

Finally, brothers and Sisters, while God punctuates our lives with question marks, commas, periods and colons, he also gives us exclamation points!

The Exclamation point is a vertical line underscored by a dot. It signifies some dynamic, powerful and enthusiastic interjection.

Exclamation Points are reserved for life's strong points and profound accomplishments that excite the spirit and set our hearts on fire.

Exclamation points in prose are used sparingly, but the believer's life is sprinkled with exclamation points. The exclamation point marks the moment in a believer's life when he has something to shout about!

While the King James version of the bible has many periods, question marks, colons, commas and apostrophes, there is one thing missing from the King James version of the bible, there are very few if any exclamation points!

You would think that when David killed Goliath and the women began to sing Saul has killed his thousands but David has killed his ten thousands," that such a deed would have included an exclamation point!

You would think that when Moses stood on the bank of the Red Sea and declared, "Stand Still and see the salvation of the Lord," that such a dramatic moment would have included an exclamation point!

You would think that when Daniel arose from the Lion's den without a scratch on his body, that such an accomplishment would have merited an exclamation point!

You would think that when the Three Hebrew Boys came forth from the fiery furnace without a single trace of smoke on their bodies that such a task would have mandated an exclamation!

You would think that when the woman at the well ran through the city saying, "Come see a man that told me all I've ever done," that such a moment of excitement would have been followed by an exclamation point.

Exclamation points in our lives are self defined. They define those special moments when God has given us something to shout about. One man cannot look at another man and determine where the exclamation points should be.

Some people have lives that seem to be filled with exclamation points. They always have something to shout about.

They see the sun rising in the morning and going down in the evening; that gives them something to shout about!

They see a few neck bones in a bowl, a slice of piping hot corn bread with a mess of fresh picked greens and that gives them something to shout about!

They turn the ignition of their brand new car and start clapping their hands and praising God! It may not seem like a big thing to some people but the man whose had nothing but old jalopies that never started gets excited when he finally gets a car that starts! It's something to shout about!

I can't tell you where to place the explanation points in your life. You can't tell me where the shouts go!

You don't know like I know, what the Lord has done for me! You don't know, you "wasn't" there, you don't know when and you don't know where. You don't know what the Lord has done for me!

When Jesus came to the world he gave everybody something to shout about!

When he healed the sick and raised the dead he gave everybody something to shout about!

When he died out on Calvary and arose Early Sunday morning....He gave the world something to shout about!

What City is This?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE: "And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Revelation 21:2

Introduction

Have you ever traveled the highways and found yourself in unfamiliar surroundings? Those who travel are familiar with such moments. Those were the times when you dozed off in the back seat only to awaken and find yourself in an unknown place. After quickly scanning the landscape for a recognizable landmark or sign post without much success, we sometimes ask, "What city is this?"

Cities are defined by their citizens, culture and heritage. They are usually recognized by their skylines and specialties. We recognize St. Louis by the Gateway Arch. We know we are in New Orleans when we see the Superdome. The Space Needle towers over Seattle just as the Eiffel Tower looms over Paris. Sometimes cities are defined by the people who live there. Large signs announce that the city is the home or birthplace of one personality or another. The signs help those who pass by to identify the city, set their bearings and continue in the right direction.

Every year magazines across the country print lists of the best cities in which to live. Safety, low crime, community, culture, entertainment, and economy are many of the factors that are used to determine whether the cities selected are truly the best cities. Major cities complete for these honorable mentions and promote themselves as a great place to live or the safest city or even the cleanest city.

While we have seen many cities in our experience, none that we have seen will be able to compare with the city God is preparing for his people. The word explains that, "Eye hath not seen" the greatness that God is preparing. The patriarch Abraham moved through out his region "Looking for a city." He never found what he was looking for as he moved from place to place. Paul wrote that believers have a place prepared from them, "not made with hands."

The City of God is such a lure to us that we sing about its coming. Dr. Isaac Watts wrote words that summed up our hope when he wrote: "Come, we that love the Lord, and let our joys be known; Join in a song with sweet accord, Join in a song with sweet accord and thus surround the throne, and thus surround the throne. We're marching to Zion, Beautiful, beautiful Zion; We're marching upward to Zion, the beautiful city of God."

As believers, we live in this city, but we are looking for the city of God, the beautiful city of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on John as he paints a picture of the coming city of God. The book of Revelation is a picture of hope for the believer. It gives us the snapshot of the events to expect in the last seven years of time. Its first three chapters provide encouragement and warnings to the seven churches of Asia Minor. Chapters four through 20 contain the vision of the events that will occur during the last seven years of the world as we know it. It provides pictures of the great White throne surrounded by 24 elders and a host of Angels and God himself who holds the book of judgment in his hand. John presents a vision of the final days of this earth when Satan will be bound and the millennium kingdom of Christ will be established for 1000 years. It also presents a picture of the coming Day of Judgment when the ungodly shall stand before God and receive their final sentence for the lives they live contrary to the will of God.

The final picture the Revelation presents is one on hold to the believer. John said he saw coming down out of heaven like a bride adorned for her husband, the city of God. This new city would be the capital in God's new creation of heaven and earth. What John saw was both the city and the population called the bride of Christ. This new city will be populated by all of the Old Testament believers, members of the church, and those who will come forth out of the great tribulation. This new city will be different from any city that anyone will have ever seen. It will truly be the city of God.

Who Will Live there?

When the city of God becomes a reality, we live there? The heavenly city will be a community of people who have fellowship with God. There will be no class distinctions with a rich sections and poor sections. There will be no racial distinctions with segregated sections for Blacks in one side, Whites in one side, Hispanics on another, and everybody else stuck in a corner.

The redeemed will live there. The people of God will be there. Every group of believers will be judged by the spiritual dispensation that governed them. Old Testament believers, judged by the Law of Moses and the spirit of godliness that existed before Moses, will be there. Members of the body of Christ, commonly called the church, will be there. Those who will come to accept Christ during the last seven years of tribulation and trouble will also be there. Combined, they will be called the "Bride of Christ."

Most importantly, God will be there. John heard a voice, "Now the dwelling of God is with men, and he will live with them. They will be his people, and God himself will be with them and be their God" (3). That's the whole point of heaven, God is there.

The City's Light

One unique aspect of the City of God is that it will have no sun or moon to provide its light. On this earth we depend on the sun and moon for light but in the city of God the sun and the moon will no longer exist. Instead of receiving reflected light from a star, we will receive our light from God himself.

He shares much of that light with us today. His light brings understanding, peace and hope to a troubled world. We are reflectors of his light in the world. He's our light because he has brought to us a saving knowledge of God.

In the City of God the presence of God will radiate everywhere. There will be no light bulbs, florescent lamps, flood lights, flash lights, laser lamps, or even Christmas lights. We will live in a world where darkness in presence, thought or spirit will not exist. His glory will shine all around us, as we truly come to understand that Jesus is the light of the world.

The City's Size

In verse 16 John said the city was laid out like a square, 1500 miles in all directions. The city will have a wall that symbolically assures the inhabitants of safety and security. The thinking of Revelation is rooted in the Old Testament. The prophet Isaiah said, "We have a strong city; God makes salvation its walls and ramparts" (26:1). Looking at the city more closely, John noticed that it had 12 foundations on which appeared the names of the 12 apostles. They were the founders of the faith and gave their lives to secure its blessing. In a similar sense, every church door opened today owes a debt of gratitude to its founders, men and women whose lives and dedication laid the foundation for what we know today. Their lives and contributions are seen as precious stones in the foundation of the City of God.

The city will have 12 gates that will never close. Verse 25 says, "And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there." The gates, like the walls are for symbolic purposes only, they will never be closed. No doors will ever again be closed in our faces. No opportunities will ever again be denied us. No blessings will ever again be stolen from us. On the gates will be written the names of the 12 tribes of Israel, for the City will be the dwelling place of the true Israel, the redeemed Church.

City's Life Source

In Chapter 22 John describes the city's life source. In verses 1 and 2 he says, "And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." Adam and Eve had the Garden of Eden for their abundance and lost it, but the new city will have its own symbol abundance, the tree of life. It's described as bearing fruit 12 times, yielding its fruit every month and its leaves for the healing of the nations. That means the end of sickness. It means the end of cancer, AIDS, Sickle Cell Anemia, and Arthritis. All sickness and death will come to an end in the City of God.

What city is this?

Finally, brothers and sisters, the joy that believers share will be heightened when we make it to the city.

On our way to Zion we'll pass through many cities. Like Abraham, we are looking for a city that has foundations; a city that was made by the hands of God.
What city is this?

If the city has a hospital in it, we have not made it to the city. The city we are looking for will have no hospitals for there is a tree that sits in the middle of it that will bear 12 manner of fruit that will be good for the healing of the nations!

If the city has street lights in it, we have not made it to the city. The city we are looking for will have no street lights because the glory of the Lord will surround the day and night.

If the city has a cemetery in it, we have not made it to the city. The city we are looking will have no morticians, cemeteries or tombstones because death will be a thing of the past.

If the city has a police station, we have not made it to the city. The city we are looking for will have no laws to be broken because its citizens will be governed by the love of God.

What is this city? It's a city not made with hands!

Is it Babylon? Babylon was known for it hanging gardens, one of the seven wonders of the world but it was not a city made by the hands of God.

Is it Bethel? Bethel was a place where Jacob wrestled with an angel one night. It was not a city made by the hands of God.

Is it Bethlehem? Bethlehem was certainly an important city. It was the birth place of David and the birth place of Christ; but Bethlehem was not a city made by the hands of God.

What city is this? There is no place we know that equal its beauty and grandeur! New York City is the largest city in the United States, and is the center of world trade. Even its five boroughs that have combined to make the, "The big Apple" can't hold a candle to the City of God.

Although Denver is a city that sits a mile high in the mountains, with a mile high stadium, and is the place that makes most of the country's coins and holds large deposits of its gold, even Denver, cradled between the cliffs of the Rocky Mountains can't compare with city of God whose streets are paved with gold.

Even though Atlanta prides itself as the city too busy to hate and is the home of great names such as Martin Luther King, Ralph Abernathy and CNN, all of the pride that Atlanta can muster cannot compare to the pride believers will have in the City of God.

Dallas has oil wells, football and basketball teams, universities and a huge number of millionaires but even the rich succulence of Dallas won't be able to compare with the City of God.

The music of New Orleans with its Cajun food, Mardi Gras parades and jazz music, will be no comparison to the good times that will roll when the Saint's go marching in the City of God.

Although Chicago sits snugly on the Chicago River as the 3rd largest city in the nation and boasts an historic history that includes being the home of the world's first skyscraper, it cannot compare with the City of God.

Los Angeles is known as the City of the Angels, and is praised as a city of sunshine, hope, and culture. But Los Angeles loses is luster when compared to the City of God that is filled with angels and won't need the sunshine because God is there!

What city is this?

Then John said, "I saw a new heaven and a new earth...and I saw the holycity New Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven prepared as a bride adorned for her husband."

It's a city not made by the hands of men!

It's a city with not one foundation but 12 foundations!

It's a city with 12 pearly gates! Three gates to the North! Three gates to the South. Three gates to the East. Three gates to the West.

It's a big city that measures 1500 miles square, with more mansions than a thousand Beverly Hills. Jesus said, "In my father's house are many mansions if it were not so I would have told you."

What city is this? It's a city called heaven!

What city is this? Its streets are paved with gold!

What city is this? It's always howdy and never good-bye!

What city is this? Nobody in it wears eyeglasses, there are no wheel chairs and old folks homes!

What city is this? It's a land where we'll never grow old!

What city is this? It's the beautiful city of God!

Until I get there I'm going to keep telling the story about Jesus!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary, but arose early Sunday morning!

Come and go with me to my father's house!

No more dying there!

No more crying there!

No more sickness and pain!

Come and go with me to my father's house!

There'll be joy, joy, joy!

When Generation X Meets Jesus

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 27, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "This is the generation of them that seek him, that seek thy face, O Jacob, Selah." Psalm 24:6

Introduction

Are there any similarities between one generation and the next? During the late 60's and early 70's a strange thing started happening to young people. They started to distance themselves from their generation before them. Whatever their parents were for, they seemed to rebel against. They protested against the old ways and decided to live a life filled with, love, pot and sex. The sociologists called it a "Generation Gap." For the first time, on a national basis the young generation was rejecting the predefined standards of their parents and grandparents.

In 1991 Douglas Coupland wrote a book and coined a phrase. The book and the phrase was entitled, "Generation X." Coupland describes those individuals who were born in the period between 1961 and 1971 as those who generally resent the generation that came before them and blame them for the ills of the world. Coupland is also the author of another book which is entitled, "Life without God." In all of his books Mr. Coupland takes a cynical look at the postmodern society and comes to the conclusion that those born in the late sixties and after are the first generation of individuals in this country to live without God. This new generation that Coupland sees lives in a world where everyone makes their own rules, does whatever pleases them because each individual is believed to be his own universe, is his own god, and maps his own course.

The music of that generation reflected that idea in its infancy. Isaac Hayes wrote, "Do your thing" and the Isley Brothers, followed with, "It's your thing, do what you wanna do!" Free from the restraints imposed upon what they believed to be an absentee God, the generation promoted the idea that "If it feels good, do it." Time Magazine even promoted the idea on its front cover in April of 1966 by asking the question, "Is God dead?"

Generation X became the first generation to experiment with living a life without God.

While many in generation X attempted to live their lives without God, there were others who concluded that God was essential to life. However, they chose to modify their concept of God from being one who rules and controls to one who is a facilitator of the individual as he strives to "do his own thing." So, even though they still profess God they do so only to the extent that he is useful to accomplish their personal goals. A generation of BK believers evolved. BK or Burger King is known for its motto, "Have it your way" and the generation X believers became those who molded their belief in God to fit their way of life.

Thus, generation X rebelled against most of the teachings standards, customs and rules of the generation preceding them. If they were challenged about their apparent lack of godliness those of Generation X quickly responded that God wanted them to come "as you are." The inference is that God's role is to assist, promote, build and protect without constraining the individual with obsolete rules and biblical mandates. In this context, God had an obligation to individual believers but generation X felt its obligation to God only required an acknowledgment of God, occasional praise and a private sense of spirituality. Believers of generation X founded themselves a religious perspective in which God plays a part, but not a commanding role in their daily lives.

As each generation struggles with its own search for identity and relationship with God many might find Solomon's conclusion as their own. Solomon concluded after trying to live without God that the whole essence of life was to, "fear God and keep his commandments for this is the whole duty of man."

As Christians, we are part of a special generation. The Bible calls it a chosen generation which is called out of darkness into his marvelous light.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he asks the question, "Who shall ascend unto the hill of the Lord?"

This text presents the majesty and grandeur of God. It raises the question of eligibility to stand in the presence of God. It presents life as a climb toward a spiritual level of maturity which will allow us to stand in the presence of God. Generation after generation has sought to make itself worthy to stand in God's presence. David presented a very simplistic formula for any believer to adhere to and then expect to be worthy to stand in the presence of God. In David's mind all that was required for a person to achieve perfection was that he had to have a clean heart, clean hands, and a morally straight life.

In the New Testament Jesus built upon the essential core morality that David gave as a basic foundation. Jesus taught that despite man's best effort he will never be able to achieve perfection on his own. The sinful nature of man causes one of the three essentials in David's formula to always lack something. Either our hands are not clean, our heart is impure, or our lifestyle is otherwise tainted. The New Testament teaches, "All have sinned" and fallen short of the expectations of God. In the context of the New Testament we cannot make ourselves pure or make our hands clean enough to stand before God. Even at our best we are still just filthy rags. What each generation comes to learn is that we need Jesus to make us perfect enough, righteous enough, clean enough, and justified enough to stand in the presence of God.

David concluded in verse six that the generation that learns what it takes to stand in the presence of God is the generation that seeks God and searches to see God and know him in the beauty of his spirit. That happens when Generation X meets Jesus.

X-Box

The games of Generation X reflect the overall philosophy of the generation. The games the children play represent a child's version of the system and order they aspire to achieve. Whereas an older generation may have played games such as, "Mama may I?" or "Kick the can" the children of generation X find little interest in these games. "Mama may I?" Suggest following the rules and getting permission. The children of the x-generation prefer games where they are in control and make the rules rather than have to follow rules. Tapping into the psychology Microsoft developed a computerized set of games for the children of Generation X. It is called Xbox.

The Xbox is a Microsoft game station with all kinds of action games. The Sony Play Station is a competitor of XBox. The Play Station has some good games but are not as inspiring as those of the Xbox. Number one is "Sims - There goes the neighborhood." The sideline of this game says: "Now you control mom." Other games include: "Grand Theft Auto, Mortal Combat, Ghost Recon, Halo, Steel Combat, Enter the Matrix, and The Hulk.

X-box games put kids in control. Here, everything is relative depending on your position inside or outside of the matrix. In some games, you decide who wins and you decide who loses. You are in control.

The children of generation X find it easier to live inside the box than outside of the box. Inside of the box they are in control. In the world outside the box they are controlled by others. So, many youth live inside of their Xboxes and similar video games. It is a world which they understand and can control the final outcome.

While many youth bury themselves in the matrix on the Xbox there are others who have come to the conclusion that life is more than an Xbox. Many have come to the conclusion that they are not yet ready to be in control and need to be controlled by a power greater than themselves. In the Xbox they set the rules and determine the destiny, but outside of the box they learn very quickly that they need the power of God in their lives.

Many youth around the world have come to know Jesus and have said to him, "Have thine own way or have thine own way thou art the potter I am the clay."

X-files

These days the hit TV show "The X Files" has prompted another revival of interest in extraterrestrials, alien abductions, government conspiracies to cover up the truth, and generally all that is paranormal and weird. They generally feature Agent Scully trying to track down a strange creature who, when she finally finds him, turns out to have some weird characteristic.

The X files grew out of the early 1970's fascination with space aliens and the unknown. X obviously stands for the unknown.

Today, there are many young people who have opened their own X file. Like Agent Scully, they are trying to track down the unknown. Many challenge the system and order before them and want to explore the unknown. Ironically, what is unknown to most youth is known to their parents. Yet the unknown is a provocative enticement to the young who unnaturally curious.

The young world is marked by many things which have warnings or advisories attached to them. Certain movies they buy are marked with an X. Certain magazines are marked with XXX's. There are even CD's and DVD's that are marked with XXX's. These are the forbidden and the unknown.

They are marked with Xes because the Xes indicate that the contents could have a damaging effect upon the values and direction of young people who are exposed to the contents. Yet the very presence of X increases the curiosity of young people who want to know the contents of the package marked X.

There is a sexual X-file. To the very young it is an unknown realm. Some are drawn to explore this realm even before they are ready.

There is a social X-file. This is a world of night life and parties, that sometimes involves drinking, smoking or drugs. It is a world of loose living, fast action and multitudes of temptations. Many young people who open this file find it difficult to get back on the right track.

Youth need a guiding hand to keep certain X files closed and to keep them focused on developing their mind and body. That which is forbidden is forbidden for a reason. That which God places out of our reach is done so for a reason. It is God's way of protecting us from ourselves. Thankfully God controls the joystick and not we ourselves!

X-Man Meets Jesus

Finally, we must consider what happens when generation X meets Jesus.

Many of the children of generation X are fascinated with the X-man, cartoon character which has been made into a movie hero. The X-man is a mutant. He changes from one thing to another. The X represents his changing nature.

There are many young people today who are X-Men and X-Women. They are social and moral mutants who change from day to day.

X-men may change moods, personalities, attitudes and directions constantly, always running always trying to escape. Many find it difficult to deal with the children of Generation X and write them off and useless and incorrigible.

While the world is ready to throw away the X-Man and the X-Boy, Christ is standing ready to receive them, forgive them and help them ascend into the presence of God.

A strange and powerful thing happens when X-men meet the Lord!

There is a powerful influence that changes lives when the people of generation X come in contact with the power of an almighty God.

The bible tells of a biblical X-man who ran through the grave yard naked. He was called a wild man by some and a lunatic by others. He was an X-man because everyone had written him off as useless, but when that wild man came face to face with Jesus, demons left him and he sat at the feet of the Lord.

The woman at the well was an X-woman. She had five X-husbands and was working on number six. But when she met the Lord at the Well, she ran through the city saying, "Come see a man who told me all I've ever done."

When the X-man meets the Lord he is transformed from the X-generation to the chosen Generation. That's why 1 Peter 2:9 declares, "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a peculiar people, that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light."

When X-generation meets the Lord he turns over the joystick and the controls of his life to the powerful hands of God. He says, "Use me Lord in thy service!" That's what the word means when it says, "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature, old things are passed away and behold all things become new!"

When Generation X meets the Lord they open a spiritual X-File. His old life is marked with an X. He becomes an:

-X smoker;X drinker; X drug user; X Delinquent

An EXamination of the EXplanation can EXplain, this EXclamation, "I've found in him a resting place and he has made me glad!"

It doesn't matter what generation you are from, powerful things happen when you meet the Lord!

When generation X meets the Lord, powerful things begin to happen!

I'm not talking about just joining a church, singing in the choir, or being on the usher board but when you really meet the Lord!

David asked, who shall ascend into the presence of the Lord? The answer is those who have a clean heart, clean hands and a saved soul!

When you come into the presence of the Lord, sometimes tears come to your eyes and clapping gets in your hands!

When you come into the presence of the Lord, you feel a little prayer wheel turning. You feel a little fire start burning.

Like fire shut up in my bones!

You have to tell somebody!

I've got to tell somebody about Jesus!

Jesus, who died for our sins!

Jesus, who arose early Sunday morning!

I've got to tell somebody!

Can You Hear Me Now?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE:" Seek ye the LORD while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near:" Isaiah 55:6

Introduction

Have you ever tried to use your cell phone only to find that you had no signal? It doesn't matter what kind of phone you use or how elaborate the services to which you subscribe, if you can't get a signal. You may have a phone with unlimited minutes, but it is no good if there is no signal. You may have a phone with a large array of features such as call forwarding, instant recall, voicemail, and a variety of other handy features, but none of them are many good if you can't get a signal. In fact, no phone has a value at all if you can't make a connection. If the call can get through on its way out or on its way then the phone has very little use and value.

There is a television commercial for Verizon that shows a man walking around the countryside asking "Can you hear me now?" He will pause and then say, "Good" and move to the next location where the conversation is repeated. This happens over and over again. Apparently, the intent of the commercial is to let you know they have better cellular coverage than the competition. The nature of cell phones is that they are able to provide communication because of a vast network of cellular antennas stationed around the country. In highly populated areas there are a large number of antennas that both pickup and broadcast signals. There are places in the country where there are very few of these special units. If you happen to be between antennas there is a possibility that you may be out of range because you're in one of the dark areas between the reach of the nearest antenna. In such case your phone may give a message that there is "no service." When there is no service no matter how elaborate your phone, it is useless until you come into range of an active cellular antenna.

That's the way it is with God sometimes. Often in the busy rush of our lives we can find ourselves so far away from God that we can't find him. Those are the times when it appears that despite our best efforts to connect with him, he can't seem to hear us. We pray, but it does not seem that our prayers get through. We cry out, but it seems as though our prayers and cries do not reach the ears of God. It's as if we have moved out of range and position ourselves in a dark valley, so dark and so deep that God cannot or will not respond to our cry.

There is never a time when God does not know where we are or what we are doing.

There is never a time in God is not aware of our faults, faults, or troubles. He knows where we are because he is omnipresent which means he's everywhere as the same time. He knows what our faults are because he is omniscient, which means that he knows everything. We are never beyond his power because he is omnipotent, which means that he is all powerful. While there is never a time when God does not know where we are, there are times when our actions, attitudes or states of mind make it very difficult for us to hear God or to find him.

Whenever we find ourselves unable to connect with God, we can do like the man in the commercial and move from place to place trying to find the magic spot where God will hear us or we can switch carriers. That was the point of the commercial in the first place. The idea was not to keep moving from one place or another asking "can you hear me now?" The point was to switch to a carrier with a strong enough signal to connect with us wherever we may be on the face of the Earth.

As Christians, we rejoice in the fact that we have a good connection with God. We hear him and he hears us. We don't need a special place to talk to him because he always knows where we are. We rejoice in the fact that the God we serve always hears and answers prayer.

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah's prophecy in which he appeals to the people of God to listen and "hear" the Word of God to receive both life and abundance.

The 55th chapter of Isaiah begins with an invitation to everyone that has a "thirst" for righteousness to come before God's presence (55:1). Many are working futile efforts to build godless lives that will reward them little. Thus the prophet asks in verse 2 "wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? Why do you labor for that which does not satisfy?" The appeal is made to Israel: "Incline your ear and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David." (v3) God appealed to all to end their merry-go-round experience and come to him with the promise that he would provide for their needs and shower them with the blessing of happiness as well as peace of mind and soul.

Yet, he warns that those who seek him should take advantage of the opportunity while it exists. Verse six says, "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near." In essence they were challenged to take God's offer seriously and respond to it quickly."

Hear Us When We Call

When we call on the Lord we fully expect to get a response. God hears us:

WHEN WE PRAY: The best way to make a connection with God is to pray. He always hears our prayers. It may appear at times that God is not listening or is not present but he is always present and he always hears a believer's prayer. The daughter of an old man was worried about him because after being hospitalized he began talking to a chair. She asked the new pastor of the church to visit him. Sure enough the pastor found the old man talking to an empty chair. When asked to explain the old man said, "I've never told anyone this, not even my own daughter," said the man. "But all my life, I've never known how to pray until my best friend said to me: 'Joe, prayer is just a simple matter of having a conversation with Jesus. Here's what I suggest. Sit down on a chair, and place an empty chair in front of you, and in faith, see Jesus on the chair. So, I've tried it and liked it so much that I do it every day. I'm careful though. If my daughter saw me taking to an empty chair, she'd either have a nervous breakdown or cart me off to the funny farm." Two nights later, the daughter called to tell the pastor that her dad had died that afternoon. "Did he seem to die in peace?" the pastor asked. "Yes, when I left the house early that afternoon, he called me to his bedside, told me one of his corny jokes, and kissed me on the cheek. When I got back from the store, I found him dead. But there was something a little strange, in fact beyond strange — kind of weird. Apparently, just before Dad died, he leaned over and rested his head on a chair beside the bed." When we pray, no matter when or where we pray we will get a connection. If we pray from a church pew or a hospital bed, we can connect with God. If we pray in car or on the side of the road, we get through. No matter where we are we get through loud and clear.

WE ARE IN TROUBLE: "The righteous cry out, and the LORD hears, and delivers them out of all their troubles. (Psalms 34:17) When we are in serious trouble its good to know that we still have a storm proof connection. That's what the disciples of Christ learned when the storm began to rage and they feared they would drown. In the storm they called on Jesus who was asleep below and quickly found out that even in the storm, Jesus is still master of the winds and the waves. It is reassuring for each of us to know that even in the storm we still have a good connection. In our troubles we cry out:

—Lord, I'm head over heels in debt, can you hear me now? Good!

—Lord, I'm experiencing family troubles that are tearing us apart, can you hear me now? Good!

—Lord, I'm being persecuted by my enemies on every side, can you hear me now? Good!

It is reassuring to us to know that regardless to our situation, God hears us.

IN OUR PROSPERITY: "In everything give thanks, for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." 1 Thessalonians 5:18. While we call on God in times of difficulty and distress, we also call on God in good times, just to say thanks. There are many who know how to call on God in 9-1-1 situations but they forget how to call him when things are going well. That was the situation when Jesus healed 10 lepers. As they all left, one of the men came back to say thanks for the healing. There are many believers want to be sure that God hears them in their time of trouble but they also want God to hear them in their moments of triumph, blessings and victory. These are the ones who say:

—Lord, I thank you for my health and strength, can you hear me now? Good!

—Lord, I thank you for my family and friends, can you hear me now? Good!

—Lord, I thank you for my achievements and accomplishments, can you hear me now? Good!

There is no special place to give thanks to God. We don't have to wait until a church worship service. We can connect on the job, at school, or even while we are driving our cars. God will hear us wherever we happen to be!

Listen When God speaks

Finally, brothers and sisters, while we want God to hear us when we are in trouble or distress, we must also listen to God.

Just as we ask the question, can you hear me now? God also asks the same question.

Sometimes God answers us directly. Then there are times when God answers but we must listen to hear his response. That's what the man learned who was drowning in flood waters. He prayed to God saying "Lord, I'm out here on your word, please save me. Let me hear from you." As the flood waters rose a man in a boat came to help but the drowning man refused saying, "I'm waiting to hear from God." Soon after, another boat came and the man refused again. Later a rescue crew in a helicopter came to save him but the man refused again saying "I'm waiting to hear from God." As the man began to drown, he saw the glories of heaven open up and an angel appeared. He asked the angel, "Why is God letting me drown, why didn't I hear from him?" The angel responded, "He sent you two boats and helicopter, what more do you want? He answered you just didn't hear!"

Often God speaks, but we don't hear him even though powerful begin to happen.

We should listen for God to speak because when he speaks things change.

When God stepped out on the blackness of creation he spoke a word and said let there be light and there was light.

Noah listened when God spoke and prepared for a flood.

Moses listened when God told him to stretch out his hand over the Red Sea and that the people would walk across on dry land.

Ezekiel listened when God showed him the valley of dry bones and told him that these bones can live.

When we God speaks he often responds to our life situations

God can speak to our doubts and turn them into confidence!

God can speak to our weaknesses and turn them into strength!

God can speak to our failures and turn them into successes!

God can speak to our insecurities and turn them into assurances!

God can speak to our difficulties and turn them into opportunities!

God can speak to our defeats and turn them into victories!

God can speak to our enemies and turn them into lifelong friends!

No wonder the song writer declares, "Savior, Savior, hear my humble cry. While on others thou art calling, do not pass me by!"

God has tried to speak to mankind for generations, but the world would not hear him.

What he has been trying to say throughout all time is that he loves every man woman and child, but the world never seemed to hear him.

Down in Bethlehem he sent his son, born of a virgin, and seemed to ask, "Can you hear me now?

When Jesus was baptized in the River Jordan, the voice of God spoke saying "this is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased." Can you hear me now?

When the blind were given their sight and the lame were able to walk again, that was God demonstrating his love, asking "Can you hear me now?"

One day on Calvary Jesus, was nailed to an old rugged cross. When the sky turned dark and the earth began to shake, it was God asking, "Can you hear me now?"

But Early Sunday morning, Jesus arose from the dead!

The angel declared, he is not here. He has risen from the dead, just as he said!

As an astonished world looked at the empty tomb, God seemed to speak from heaven say, "Can you hear me now?"

Dead Man At the Dinner Table

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 17, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection: Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. Romans 6:1-6; "Then Jesus six days before the passover came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead. There they made him a supper; and Martha served: but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him." John 12:1-2.

Introduction

What did your friends say when they first heard that you were born again? Were they enthusiastic? Were they skeptical? Were they cautiously optimistic? There are many people who knew us before we knew the Lord. They knew us before we attended church, read our bibles, and lived the spirit filled life. Many of them went to school with us. Some of them were our drinking buddies, party friends, and partners in crime. When they heard the news that you had given your life to Christ what was their reaction? Some of our friends believed us while others took a wait and see attitude. We became a curiosity. We became a person to be observed from a distance as old friends and acquaintances monitored our movements and actions to see if our conversion to this new life in Christ was for real. Some made it their business to challenge our new life, which threatened their own. Others were influenced by our change and did the same themselves. As time passed, many came to believe that we were truly sincere when we announced our new life in Christ and that our old sinful self was truly dead.

One of the realities of life is no matter who we are today there is someone who remembers us the way we were. There are many successful people today who live balanced Christian lives, are conservative in their thought, and are models of respectability. But before they became the models they are today, there are those who can remember what they once were. They remember the wild party man. They remember the girl who teased all the guys. They member the boy who cheated on every test he ever took. They remember the braggarts and the thugs. They remember the promiscuous and the wall flowers. In fact, many who knew you at another time have difficulty accepting the fact that you and no longer the person you used to be. At reunions, your old life is constantly rehashed. Your old antics and episodes of bad behavior are constantly retold for the amusement of all present. What many of them fail to accept is the reality that the person they refer to in their moments of amusement died at some point and a new man or woman in Christ now lives. Some like what they see; some don't.

There are some people who are very hard to convince. They don't believe water is wet and neither do they believe that fat meat is greasy. When you tell them that the person that they knew no longer exists, they laugh. They can't believe the person they remembered so well has truly changed. Consider the crazy man who had trouble accepting the fact that he was not a dead man. He had strange dreams of himself being a dead man walking. His family became wary and sent him to a psychiatrist who spent many laborious sessions trying to convince the man he was still alive. Nothing seemed to work. The man was convinced that he was dead. Finally, the doctor tried one last approach. He put aside his medical books and decided to use a little homespun horse sense. As the session began the doctor asks his patient, "Do you believe a dead man can eat?" The man answered "No." He showed him pictures of funerals and caskets and asked what he believed the dead men ate for lunch. The crazy man was finally convinced that dead men can not eat. The doctor felt good. So he put the crazy man to a test to see if he was cured. He carried him into the next room and showed the man a table full of the best food this side of heaven. When the crazy man saw the table filled with collard greens, fried chicken, yams, rice and gravy, corn on the cob and piping hot corn bread he became excited. The doctor felt good. He had cured his patient. As he placed an overflowing plate of black eyed peas, neck bones, macaroni and cheese and home made sweet potato pie in front of his patient the doctor asked a question as his patient dug in. "You believe that you are dead. Now that you are eating all of this good food, what does that tell you?" The crazy man looked up with a chicken bone in his hand and said, "I guess I was wrong. Dead men can eat!" It's just hard to convince some people!

Many who haven't seen us in a while are surprised to learn that we are truly different people. Our interests have changed. Our conversation has changed and our direction has changed. We are truly new creatures in Christ; old things are passed away and everything has become brand-new.

As Christians, we rejoice in the fact that we enjoy our brand-new life in Christ. The old sinful man and the old sinful woman that once was, no longer exists. Those who come looking for the dead man they knew will be disappointed because in the place of that dead man or woman is a new creature washed in the blood of the lamb.

Exposition

The two passages of scripture that form the basis for this text both show instances of new life.

Paul, writing to the Romans tries to explain what happens to a person when he becomes a Christian. When a person becomes a Christian his old life, which enjoys sinful activities dies. In the first six verses of Romans Chapter six Paul addresses the question of whether or not a person can be a Christian and still maintain a lively interest and involvement in life styles that conflict with a Christian way of life. Can a man or woman be a true Christian and maintain the lifestyle of a swindler, drunkard, fornicator, adulterer, homosexual, slanderer or thief? Paul's answer is in verse two. Those who are true Christians have died to their old sinful ways and have no desire to walk that path again. A person who is really and truly a Christian loses all desire to do anything that would be against the will of God. For all practical purposes, the old person who lived before he knew Christ dies.

When we become a Christian we make a spiritual connection with the body of Christ. We are baptized by the Holy Spirit in a way that buries our old personality and raises up a new person connected to the body of Christ, going in a different direction, with new interests, new desires, and a new walk. This spiritual death and spiritual resurrection is what is commonly referred to as the baptism of the Holy Spirit. It's the point in which our old inclination dies and our new perception in Christ rises. It happens on the inside and it shows on the outside. After we have been spiritually baptized believers are baptized with water as a sign to others that there has been a change on the inside.

John the Baptist told his followers, "I indeed baptize you with water, but there comes One after me, greater than I, who will baptize you with the Holy Spirit" John 1:33. Ray Stedman notes that "The baptism of the Spirit happened first, historically, on the day of Pentecost, when the Holy Spirit came upon 120 people who were gathered in the temple courts, fusing them into one body, joining them to the head, which is Jesus, and thus formed the church, one body in Christ, all members one of the other and members of the Lord Jesus himself." Since that time millions have been baptized by the Holy Spirit into the body of Christ, as they left their old lives behind and began new lives. While some teach that the Baptism of the Holy Ghost is something the comes after a person believes and evidences itself by special feelings and signs and wonders, the bible teaches that the Baptism of the Holy Ghost is the process by which a sinful person dies and is buried with Christ and emerges spiritually connected with the body of Christ.

A person who continues a lifestyle of sin never died to sin in the first place. That person was baptized with water but not with the spirit. That person had the symbol but not the substance. If the old sinful man or woman still lives then the person is not a part of the body of Christ.

People are naturally curious whenever a person claims to have died and now lives again. The case of Lazarus was even clearer because his death and resurrection was not a spiritual event but a physical one. The resurrection of Lazarus was exceptional. In two other cases persons were resurrected a short time after their death. Critics could claim it could just be a mistake concerning their real deaths and that the supposed "miracles" of Jesus were just a coincidence. Since the resurrected ones were children, their testimony might be considered suspect. But Lazarus was a respectable citizen of Bethany, old enough to answer all the questions many wanted to ask. Because he had remained four days in the grave, no one could question that he was really dead. The friends of Jesus were present at this supper and, according to verse 9 the common people as well. They were probably numerous, drawn by the same curiosity: to see a man who had been dead!

Not only were they curious but there were many who felt threatened by Lazarus, especially the Sadducees who did not believe in the resurrection of the dead. Yet, the new life that Lazarus was given was a great witness for Christ. While the scriptures don't tell us what happened to Lazarus, oral histories of the church report that Lazarus became a leader of the church in Marseilles and served as the pastor of that flock until he was beheaded by Domitian in the second half of the first century. All of his life he was living proof of the resurrection power of Christ.

Curious About the New Life

When Jesus ate supper in the Bethany home, Lazarus was there at the time. The apparent presence of both Jesus and in Nazareth attracted a crowd of curiosity seekers. These were men women who could not resist the temptation to get a candid look at both the man who was raised from the dead and the man who raised him at the same time. People were naturally curious to see a man who was once dead living again. Word spread quickly through the city and the crowds began to assemble.

People are curious about believers who say they have been born again as well. At work, they are observed by coworkers who watch them from a distance. At school they are also observed by schoolmates who privately take mental note of every action and deed of students who claim to be born again. Lazarus had been brought back to life and people were curious to see if it was real. Those who are born again claimed to have a new life and people are equally curious to see if that new life is for real. The first test of that new life comes when the curious see that we are actually alive in Christ and dead to the world.

Ephesians 2:2 says, "Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience." The curious soon find that you are truly a new person, alive in Christ but dead to the world. The man that looked pornography, and made sexual advances toward his co-workers died. The woman that was angry, hateful and vengeful toward everyone around her died. The student who regularly breaks the rules, disrupts class and causes problems for the entire school died. Those outside the faith watch to see if it is so.

Curious About the New Relationship

When the curious found Lazarus they were impressed because not only did they see him alive but they also saw him with Christ. The passage says Lazarus and Christ sat at the same table. When the curious saw Lazarus they also saw Christ. People who were initially attracted to the phenomenon of Lazarus' resurrection got a chance to see Christ too because when they found Lazarus they found Christ.

It is very seldom that you'll find a child of God outside of the presence of the spirit of God. A saved individual abides in Christ and Christ abides within that saved heart. Regardless of circumstance a saved person is always with Christ. In difficulties Christ is with him. In success Christ is with him. In sickness Christ is with him. The saved man or woman remembers Christ words when he said in Matthew 28, "and Lo I'll be with you always even until the end of the earth."

So the curious watch to see if there's truly a new man or whether the old man still lives but is just dressed differently. Those who have been truly washed in the blood can sing the words of the song, "and he walks with me and he talks with me and he tells me I am his own and the joy we share as we tarry there none other has ever known."

Convinced by His Testimony

Finally, verse 11 notes that many who heard Lazarus' testimony believed and followed Christ.

The Sadducees wanted to kill Lazarus because his new life was attracting so many people away from Judaism. It was a foolish thought, however, because the same God that raised him once could simply raise him again if he desired to do so. Yet the strength of Lazarus' testimony proved strong enough to convince many people to follow the Lord.

Today there are many people who watch believers and are either drawn to the cross or repelled from it by what they see.

Those who know us well, will be the first to know whether or not the person they once knew has died or whether or not he just joined a church. Those who know us, know whether we are really new creatures or whether we are truly born again.

The curious come to see a dead man at the table, but what they find instead is a new person alive in Christ.

They came to see a defeated man at the table, but what they find is a man who has been given the victory.

They came to see a confused man at the table, but what they found was a man confident in the God he served.

They came to see a dead man at the table but what they found was a man with a story to tell.

Every child of God ought to have a story to tell.

Tell the world about a dead man they once knew, who led a wild life that was tamed and turned over to the Lord.

Tell the world about a dead man who was lifted up high in pride but the Lord showed him that "Blessed are the poor in spirit of theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Tell the world about a dead man who was inconsiderate of the feelings of others but the Lord showed him that "blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy."

Tell the world about a dead man who sought revenge, looking for an eye for an eye, but the Lord showed him that "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth."

Tell the world about a dead man whose motives were not pure but the Lord showed him that "blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Jesus extends an invitation, saying "Behold I stand at the door and knock."

If the old man has died and a new man lives, join me at the supper table.

If your old watering holes has lost its flare and tempting attraction; join me at the supper table

If there is a newness about you that makes you want to strive for complete perfection in the Lord, join me at the supper table.

If your old life was filled with hate but your new life is filled with love, join me at the supper table!

If your old life was drenched in despair but you new life is filled with hope, join me at the supper table.

If your old life was punctuated with wrong doing, but your new life is showered with good deeds and forgiving spirit, join me at the supper table

If your old life sweltered in the wilderness of sin but your new life bathes freely in the oasis of salvation..the table is ready!

The world may be looking for a dead man at the supper table but he picked me up and turned me around and planted my feet on solid ground.

I've got to tell somebody, that my old man has died!

I've got to tell somebody, that I met a man who changed my life!

I've got to tell somebody, that he died out on Calvary!

I've got to tell somebody, that early Sunday morning he arose from the grave

I've got to tell somebody….

He Ain't Heavy, He's my Brother

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another" Romans 12:10

Introduction

What makes a brother a brother? Is it mere biological proximity that makes a person a brother or sister? Is it simply being a person who shares a common parent, is raised in the same family setting, and shares a common heritage sufficient to earn the title brother? Is being a brother a mere biological statement? Certainly biology plays a part in the initial designation of brotherhood and sisterhood but we cannot limit those whom we choose to called brothers and sisters only to those who share the same parentage. While many brothers begin their life experience together sharing common genealogy and common history not all continue to relate to each other in ways that would be expected of those who share such a common bond. Brotherhood and sisterhood goes beyond familial ties. True brotherhood and sisterhood is rooted in love and compassion.

In the African-American community we have generally defined persons who share the same mother as whole brothers and sisters. Those who share the same father but not the same mother we refer to as half-brothers and sisters. Yet, there have been many people who have learned that designation such as half-brothers and half-sister have no meaning because they grew up relating and responding to each other without any distinctions whatsoever. If one brother broke a rule who was a half-brother he did not get half a punishment he received a whole punishment. And when parents passed out hugs and kisses the half-brother or the half-sister did not receive a half of a hug or half of a kiss but whole hugs and kisses. In fact in many African-American homes there are many who lived in our homes, share in our families, and labored with our family experience but were not related to us by blood. Nevertheless, we refer to them as our brothers and sisters. The designation of a person as a brother or a sister in the family context, from the African-American perspective, has as much to do with actions and demonstrations of love as it does biology.

The story is told of the cripple boy who wanted to go to school like the other members of his family but he was unable to walk. They were poor and lived five miles from the school with no transportation. Each day, the little boys brothers would take turns placing him on their back and would carry him the five miles to school. Even in the rain, cold and biting snow, they carried him on their backs. One day a school mate, amazed at the fact that the little cripple boy never missed a day at school, stopped one of the brothers as they walked in the door and asked, "You carry your brother on your back to school everyday, then carry him back home, doesn't that bother you? Isn't he heavy?" To that the brother responded, "He ain't heavy, he's my brother."

In the late 60's Neil Diamond wrote a song entitled, "He ain't heavy, he's my brother." The words say:

The road is long, with many a winding turn
That leads us to - who knows where, who knows where
But I'm strong, strong enough to carry him
He ain't heavy - he's my brother
So on we go, his welfare is my concern
No burden is he to bear, we'll get there
But I know he would not encumber me
He ain't heavy - he's my brother

A sense of family and brotherly love ignores the difficulty, weight and frustration that may come with standing with a brother or sister. That love runs so deep that the difficulty itself is comparatively light.

As Christians, we share the love of God with everyone we meet, especially to the members of our family. There is no bond that is stronger, no burden too difficult for us to share: "He ain't heavy, he's my brother."

Exposition

The text focuses on Paul as explains the nature of the brotherly relationship.

The essence of Paul's teaching is that true brotherhood is best demonstrated through love in action. "Kindly affectioned" carries with it a sense of compassion and action. Consider it in its context, "Kindly affectioned to one another in brotherly love." In C.S. Lewis' book, The Four Loves, he says there are four basic kinds of love. He gives them their Greek names: agape — the God-like self-giving love even toward enemies; philia — the love of friendship and camaraderie; eros — the love of romance and desire and sexual attraction; and storge — the love of affection that arises through natural attachment. The word in Romans 12:10 is a form of this last word, storge. To be specific, it is philostorgos — tender affection, especially toward precious family members.

The word for "love" or "be devoted" refers to a special kind of love. It's used only here in the whole New Testament. But it is not a rare word outside the New Testament. The word is "Philostorgos" which means to cherish one's kindred. It refers to "tender affection, particularly family affection" this verse underscores the unique element that is present in every real family, a sense of affection toward each other that goes beyond mere family membership but affectionate actions and deeds.

But Paul goes even further. He notes that brothers should "prefer one another." It means that brothers and sisters work to "Out love" each other. There is a constant exchange of acts and deeds that sometimes appears as if one brother is trying to do more good things than the other. One good deed is returned by an even greater kindness as family members try to "out love" each other. It creates a warm feeling of oneness that can only exist where love abides.

Families that are strong are those that demonstrate tender affection, love and concern for each other.

What makes brothers unique?

What is it that makes brothers unique? There are several qualities that are unique to brothers and distinguish them in a very unusual fashion. While these qualities possessed by most brothers there are a few exceptions to the rule.

BROTHERS SHARE THE SAME HISTORY: most brothers share us similar history. Many brothers are fortunate to have shared many years with each other. Whether these years were good or bad they still form the foundation of the family experience and are the stuff from whence memories are made. Whether they hailed from a peaceful fun loving family or one that was filled with trauma, brothers share the same history. Their memories are the same. Their experiences, especially in their early childhood are strikingly similar all the old their interpretation of those instances and experiences may be strikingly different. Although Jacob and Esau when different directions in their adult life, they shared the same childhood experiences. Obviously Jacob's interpretation of their childhood was totally different from that of Esau's but yet their memories were the same. Today, brothers and sisters may live in different parts of the country but they share the same family history. They recall the same events and the feeling of oneness that develops between them is often caused because they touch and agree in their history. Many brothers were fortunate to have good parents who taught them in the old way and that history is recalled as they teach their own children in similar ways. That history is recalled each time they reflect upon their past.

BROTHERS KEEP EACH OTHER: In the Garden of Eden Cain asked an important question of God. He asked, "Am I my brother's keeper?" We have learned that since that time that true brothers keep each other. The Bible gives us at least five ways that brothers keep each other.

First, Brothers look out for one another and attempt to protect each other from hurt or harm. 1 Timothy 2:1 lets us know that brothers look out for one another.

Secondly brothers rejoice in the prosperity of other brothers. In verse 15 of this text we see this clearly underscored. Brothers do not respond like Joseph's brothers when he dreamed of prosperity by throwing one brother or the other in a ditch; they rejoice in the prosperity of their brothers.

Thirdly, brothers share each others' misery. That's the spirit of Isaiah 63:9. It's a spirit that says we will share each others' are times and troubles. One brother's burden becomes the burden of another.

Fourthly, brothers forgive one another's injuries. Matthew 6:14,15 makes it clear that forgiveness is a mark of the believer. In the course of life brothers will often offend each other to the point of anger but true brothers are forgiving in nature.

Lastly, John 3:17 reminds us that brothers help each other in times of necessity. These are the times when you can't look after yourself. These are the times when you are no longer strong and able to fend or provide for yourself; that's a good time to have brothers for true brothers help one another with necessities with respect to sickness, finances, and other resources. When a brother is a real trouble that's when he learns the value of having a real brother.

BROTHERS SHARE THEIR FAITH: Brothers share their faith with each other. One brother who is strong in the faith feels a responsibility to share that faith with a weaker brother. That faith is shared in two ways. Sometimes it is spoken of in family circles and in one-on-one encounters. These are times when those brothers who are strong in the faith share the strength of their testimony with weaker brothers. The best testimony is a second way. It is by example. These are the occasions when one brother doesn't talk about his faith but he lives it in front of his brothers. In hard times and good time he demonstrates his belief in God and faith in Christ in ways which are undeniable to his brothers; he loves them. Sharing faith among brothers is evidenced in the Bible. When Young Andrew heard Jesus speak he was impressed with the words of Christ and he came and brought his older brother Peter to the Lord. Brothers constantly work to seek the salvation of their kindred. They are never satisfied; they continue to witness, to testify and nudge each other closer to the Master's feet. In any family there's always a family member or two that needs a little help in matters of faith and godliness. That's when it's good to have a brother to show us the way.

Closer than a brother

Finally, brothers and sisters, it is good to have a brother, but it is even better to know Jesus; then we have a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

Many know the joy of having brothers or sisters, but that joy is surpassed by the joy of knowing the Lord, because he is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

Yes, a brother shares the same history with us, but we serve a God who knew us before we were born, struggled with us in our cradle and will know us long after we are gone, he's a friend who sticketh closer than a brother.

Our brothers look out for us, but true believers have come to know that the Lord is always looking out for us because he always makes a way out of no way.

Our brothers share our hard times, but the God we serve has never abandoned us or left us alone, he's a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

No wonder the song writer would say, "What a friend we have in Jesus, all our sins and griefs to bear. What a privilege it is to carry everything to God in prayer."

There are some things that brothers, despite their best intentions, can't do for us. The time will come when you can't take care of ourselves. That's when we learn to sing, "Be not dismayed what ere' betide, God will take care of you!"

There will come a time when your body gives away and you your strength slips into weakness, that's when we remember to sing, "All my help comes from Lord."

Brothers and Sisters, we it comes time to cross from this life into the next, our brothers can stand by our bed side, but there is another hand that helps us over to the other side.

That's the hand of Jesus, he sticketh closer than a brother!

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, our bride of troubling water!

Jesus, our bright and shining star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and arose after three days!

Jesus, still calls out to all of his brothers and sisters, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. For my burden is easy and my yoke is light."

Windows in Heaven?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 31, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "Then a lord on whose hand the king leaned answered the man of God, and said, Behold, if the Lord would make windows in heaven, might this thing be? And he said, behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof." 2 Kings 7:2

Introduction

Have you received a blessing that you could not explain? These are the kind of blessings that have no rational basis for their occurrence. They just seemed to fall out of heaven. When you explain these blessings to your friends they are very skeptical. They look for some practical reason that is the basis for your blessing. They do not accept your explanation that what you have received came from God himself. Yet, there is no way to explain it except that God opened a window in heaven and poured out a blessing upon you.

The kinds of blessings that we have received in these ways are varied. Sometimes the blessings are financial. These are the times we receive money, land, all other assets that we were not expecting and that would normally evade us. There are times we receive physical blessings. It's those mysterious times when we were expecting a major illness, surgery, or lengthy rehabilitation only to receive a blessing from heaven that eliminated the need for surgery or long-term-carealtogether. There was no explanation for it; it seemed to just fall right out of heaven. Even job opportunities have been made available to many of us without much intervention on our part; again they just seemed to fall right out of heaven.

Those who do not believe as we believe doubt the fact that there is any such thing as miracles or divine intervention. We have been taught however that the God we serve rewards those who are faithful, obedient, and trusting by opening the windows of heaven and pouring out blessings upon them in ways so numerous that they cannot be comprehended fully. The prophet Malachi spoke of one such window when he told believers that those who bring their tithes and offerings to the store house position themselves to be recipients of God's blessings as he opens up windows in heaven for them. Similar blessings are pronounced upon believers who trust God, and obey him in every respect. Jesus said those who seek first the kingdom of God and its righteousness should prepare to receive an abundance of blessings that will follow their obedience.

God promises to open the windows for us and to give us a chance to share in the bounties of heaven.

Sometimes open windows present opportunities that are too difficult to resist. Consider the man who was arrested for burglary after he was caught with a handful of watches and jewelry while standing outside of the home of his intended victim. With his hand still in the open window, officers arrested him and carried him to jail. At his trial his lawyer came up with a very clever defense. The attorney told the judge that his client saw an open window and for some reason his arm got a mind of its own and decided it would go through the open window feel around and take what was inside. The lawyer said the rest of his client's body did not participate in this activity. The only part of his client that went through the open window was his arm. The lawyer said it would be unfair to punish his client's entire being because his arm went through the window and committed a crime. The judge commended the young lawyer for his unique defense. In fact, the judge agreed with the lawyer. Only the man's arm was guilty of theft. The judge said, "Using your logic I therefore sentence your clients arm to five years in prison. Either the arm can go by itself or the rest of him can go along too!"-The open window was just too much to resist.

God does open windows of opportunity for the faithful. We can't explain it. We don't know how he does it. Neither do we know when he will do it. But every believer has experienced at least one time in his own Christian experience when God has opened up the windows of heaven and poured out unexpected blessings upon them.

As Christians, we maintain our hope that no matter how difficult our times may become, God is able to make a way out of no way. We agree with the songwriter who wrote, "The Lord will make a way somehow when beneath the cross I bow."

Exposition

This text focuses on an instance in which God opened a window in heaven, poured out a blessing, and baffled all of those who doubted the faith of those who believed.

The text focuses on Elisha the prophet in the circumstance of Israel's siege by the Syrians. The Syrians had surrounded the city and placed it under siege. The Syrians resolved that rather than fight the Israelites they would simply surround them and starve them to death. As the siege continued month after month food disappeared. Starvation loomed and the Israelites became so hungry that they ate their horses and then they even began to eat each other. (6:28-30). Every effort to find food inside of the walls of the city was fruitless. Inside the city they faced death. Outside of the city they faced death at the hands of their enemies. It seemed hopeless.

The King, for the most part, had led the people away from the worship of God. The prophet Elisha constantly prophesied against him. In many instances Elisha foretold the fall of both the King and the Kingdom of Judah. When the famine came as a result of the siege the King blame much of the nation's plight on the prophet Elisha and sent a messenger to tell him that the king had ordered his death.

As the messenger approached, Elisha made a prophecy that in one day's time food would be so abundant that a measure of flour would be sold for a shekel and two measures of barley could be sold for a shekel, indicating an abundance of food.

The messenger responded in verse two, “If the Lord would make windows in heaven, might this thing be?”

Elisha responded that it would come to pass but the messenger himself would see it with his eyes but never enjoy it.

On the next day there was food every where as if the Lord had truly opened a window in heaven and provided it, and in the rush to get to it the people trampled the messenger under their feet.

The appearance of food in the midst of the siege had no rational basis. There was no way to explain it except that it was a miracle from God. The miracle served two purposes. It reminded the faithful that even in the worst of times that God can make a way. It served as a warning to skeptics to never doubt God’s ability to deliver his people and those who of faithful regardless of how difficult to situation may seem.

Windows in Heaven

As we consider our relationship to God in may help us to understand it we could give that relationship in the context of one kind of window or another. For certainly there are portals in heaven through which God views, hears, and responds to human need. If we view our relationship in the context of five types of windows we might better understand our relationship to God.

PICTURE WINDOWS: Picture windows are large windows that provide for high visibility. We can stand in a picture window and see a large portion of the street. At the same time picture windows allow us to see out, they also allow others to see in. A picture window without a curtain or a blind offers any passerby a look into the inner workings of your home. We understand our relationship with God better if we can see it as a picture window. God has a giant plan for each of us. The more we study his word and the more we know him the better we are able to see and recognize his hand in all aspects of life. When we have a picture window relationship with God we recognize that all things will ultimately work to our benefit as long as we abide in him and his Word abides in us. That picture window perspective helps us to be able to weather any storm with a full knowledge that God will ultimately work out any circumstance to our advantage. While the picture window allows us to see God’s plan the picture window also less God’s see us. I heard the Psalmist say in Psalm 139: “Thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising.. thou knowest my thoughts afar off..Whither shall I go from thy spirits. If I ascend into heaven, thou art there, if I make my bed in hell, thou are there. God knows all about us. There is a picture window in heaven through which we can see him and he can see us.

SHATTER PROOF WINDOWS: Some windows are made of very thin glass that shatters easily. Such windows can be broken, cracked or completely destroy by even the smallest pebble. Then they are other windows which are shatter resistant or shatterproof. So it is with the faithful. There are many life instances that can shatter the hope of the faithful and crumble it into small pieces. Sometimes the smallest things can shatter our excitement demolish our enthusiasm and utterly kill our hope. It may be something as simple as a setback, a lost love,a lost job, a troubled marriage, a personal difficulty, or a sickness that set us back and throw us for a loop. Yet the believer's relationship with God is one that is synonymous to shatterproof glass. Nothing that this life can offer will dissuade us from keep in the faith with God. Job was a righteous man. Despite a series of difficulties that would have destroyed the average person, Job refused to allow his faith in God to be shaken or shattered. When his friends saw his failing health his financial difficulty and the death of his children they urged him to curse God and die. Yet Job refused to allow his faith to be shattered. He responded, "Yea though he slay me, yet will I trust him." That's the commitment of every believer; to be committed to God regardless of the circumstance. That was a commitment of Paul when he told the Romans in Romans 8:38-39, "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

If difficulties come our way, our faith is shatter proof!

If we are hit with set backs and disappointments, our faith remains shatterproof.

The Lord will make a way.

PORT HOLES: We get an even deeper understanding of our relationship with God when we are able to recognize life's portholes. Portholes are openings on the sides of ships that allow light and air to come in. Unlike regular sized windows portholes are small. They let the lighting and but they're not big enough to let you out. They are some experiences that we have in life that seem very difficult. As the ship of our life rocks and reels it is the portholes that allow us to see glimpses of light and get fresh air and restore our hope while we work our way out of our circumstance. There are dark times in life when difficulties weigh us down. These are the times when it seems as though everything is black. That's when we get a beam of light that seems to shine directly from a portal in heaven. That's the moment when we are freshly inspired to remember that weeping may endure for a night but Joy comes in the morning. If that single portal of hope that motivates us to go on remembering that God is still on the throne. From time to time God sends that single ray of hope; that isolated moment of inspiration; that unique message of perseverance that carries us on the wings of faith.

Maybe that's what the songwriter had in mind when the words of the old standard him were written, "beams of Heaven as I go through this wilderness below guide my feet in peaceful ways turn my midnights into days. When in the darkness I would grope faith always sees a star of hope and soon from all life's griefs and dangers I shall get home someday." It's portholes that sustain us day by day and they remind us that God will make a way.

STAINED GLASS WINDOWS: Stained-glass windows are associated with worship. They have a tendency to inspire a sense of all and the presence of God within us. Inside a sanctuary a person worship God and stained-glass window has a tendency to block the world out while letting the light of God's word illuminate his presence. Stained-glass windows should remind us to constantly seek God's presence. In the presence of God we can hear him speak. In the presence of God we can worship him in spirit and in truth. In the presence of God we can get a sense of direction for our lives. In the presence of God we receive encouragement and sometimes reprimand as we struggle to live according to his will. In worship, we block the world out and let God in.

Stained-glass windows are unique in that they reflect the light of God in different ways for different moments. One who worships in a church service gets one look of the church at 11 a.m. through stained-glass windows. However, sitting in the same seat at 4 p.m. with the light coming from a different direction and angle the entire edifice of the church with stained-glass windows looks entirely different. What that says to every believer is that in worship God's light shines upon us in a way that will provide us a clear perspective for that moment. If we worship him and bring before him out sadness his light brings us gladness. If in our worship we bring to him out burdens his light lifts our burden and makes them bearable. If in our worship we bring him our praise, his light brightens our countenance and deepens our joy. That's why the Psalmist would say, "I was glad when they said unto me let us go into the house of the Lord." In the presence of the Lord we are renewed and given new strength.

Keep Looking Up

Finally, brothers and sisters, our relationship with God should be like a skylight, every time we look up we see the Lord.

There are many buildings that have skylights, or glass openings in the roof. Skylights keep bad weather out but they always give us a chance to look up and see the heavens.

David reminded us that there is a blessing in looking up. In the 121st Psalm he said, I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help my help cometh from the Lord which made the heavens and the earth."

When Daniel was thrown into the lion's den, with lion's all around him, he kept looking up, and God delivered him!

Whatever our situation today, we should remember that it is not hopeless; God can open up a window in heaven and make a way out of no way.

We don't know how God does what he does, but we know that he always makes a way!

I don't know about you, but I know there are windows in heaven from whence blessings flow!

I've seen that window open and:
-heartaches turned to happiness
-burdens turned to blessings
-weaknesses turned into strength!
-doubts turned into convictions!
-problems turned into opportunities
-sadness turned into joy!
-sickness turned into health!
-suffering turned into rejoicing
-lost souls found salvation at the cross!

There must be a lot of windows up there, because everyday I get a blessing.

On Monday, I get a blessing! On Tuesday, I get a blessing!

I know the source of my blessings. His name is Jesus!

He was born down in Bethlehem! He was raised down in Nazareth! And one evening on a hill called Calvary he died for my sins! But early Sunday morning a window was opened in heaven and he arose from the dead, with all power! All power in his hands!

Joy Comes In The Morning

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 12, 2003

SCRIPTURE: For his anger endureth but a moment; in his favor is life: weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. Psalm 30:5

Introduction

Have you ever felt like crying? There are times in every life when each of us feels like crying. Crying is universal. Everyone cries. Babies cry and adults cry. No matter what sex, race or nationality we happen to be, we cry. Usually our tears represent the condition of our spirit at the time. When our spirit is full, one-way or the other, we cry.

Sometimes we cry when we are sad. Death, sickness, failure, and disappointment are powerful emotions that control our spirit and move us to cry. David wept over the sickness of his son. Jesus wept at the tomb of Lazarus. It is not unusual for us to weep in times of trouble or despair; it is a way of emptying our soul.

Sometimes we cry when we are happy. We cry at weddings, reunions, graduations and special ceremonies marking achievement. If we watch a movie that has a happy and sentimental ending, the tears flow like a river. They are tears of joy. These are moments when we are so happy that we cannot contain ourselves.

Sometimes we cry for no apparent reason. Consider the little boy who would not stop crying. No matter what his mother did, he would always cry. The lady next door thought she knew the answer to the problem and assured the mother that she could stop her son from crying. So, the mother took him to the neighbor kicking and crying. The neighbor tried many of her "stop the child from crying" methods but to no avail. Finally, the neighbor asked, "Would you like to eat something?" The child's crying dwindled to a whisper. "Yes Ma'am" he sniffled. "I want some worms." The neighbor was hopeful so she went into the yard and dug a cupful of baits and brought them to the boy. She said, "Here they are." The boy sniffled, "I want them fried." Since his sniffles were less and her plan seemed to be working, the neighbor ran into the house and fried the worms. When she presented them boy said he only wanted one. There was only one sniffle now, so the neighbor picked one worm out of the plate and presented it to the boy. Then the boy sniffed once and said, "I only want half and you eat the other half." The neighbor reluctantly swallowed one half and gave the other to the little boy. Then the boy fell on the floor and started crying louder than ever before. The doctor said, “What’s wrong. I dug up the baits. I fried them for you. I selected one for you. I cut it in half and even ate half for you. What’s wrong?” The little boy said, “You ate my half!”- There are times when nothing we do will stop us from crying.

Though everyone cries, there is a day coming when crying days will be over. There is a day coming when weeping and lamentations will end. There is a day coming when sadness, sickness and death will no longer exist. John stared at that day in the Book of Revelation and heard the voice of God say, “And God shall wipe all their tears away.”

As Christians, we look forward to the day with great hope. When it finally comes, the joy that will accompany its arrival with overshadow whatever sadness we have experience in this life to the point that we will share David’s testimony that, “Weeping endureth but a night, but joy cometh in the morning.”

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains the transient nature of weeping and the eminent approach of joy in the aftermath of difficult times.

This psalm was used in liturgical services many years after David’s death. At the time of its writing, theologians believe that the song was a Testament to David’s joy in having overcome difficulties of his own personal failure. The occasion of the psalm is believed to be the dedication of a palace that David built for himself shortly after becoming king. After being confirmed by the elders of both Israel and Judah, David was anointed king over all Israel, and sought out a new seat of government. He chose a Jebusite fortress, “the stronghold,” on the hill of Zion and made it Israel’s capital, and established here his residence, and afterwards built for himself a palace by the aid of Tyrian tradesmen.

When the palace was complete, he dedicated it to God. Matthew Henry notes that when the new palace was dedicated this psalm is believed to be the song of dedication that capsulated God’s activities in David’s life through favor, difficulties and ultimate salvation.

Before he entered his new house the very first time, David gave praise to God, upon reflection, for his life’s experience.

The psalm extols or praises God for lifting him up over the course of his life and showering him with great favor. It even praises God for difficult times referred to as times of weeping and for the joy of overcoming described as the morning.

With the elders of Israel observing, David stood at the threshold of his new house, looked back and lifted his heart in gratitude for being the recipient of God’s favor, which had brought him out of the pastures as a shepherd boy, and rescued him on many occasion from the hands of death.

When David looked back he saw the merciful hand of God that helped him endure his own weaknesses and personal trials and thanked God for being with him during his weepings and lamentations.

Before he entered, David considered a great truth that when compared with the sum of his days, his times of difficulty were but a night that would shrink in comparison to the joy that would come in the morning.

The new house he would enjoy was a testimony to the truth David discovered, "Weeping endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

Experiencing God

David's reflection upon his life is the same as that of any believer. We too have shared the same three experiences that David shared in his life time.

GOD'S ANGER: God's anger is a terrible thing. Generally, we bring down the wrath of God upon ourselves by some deviant act or another. The cities of Sodom on Gomorrah were destroyed by the anger and wrath of God because of their ungodliness. Annanias and his wife Sapharia both died because their hypocrisy angered the Lord. Those who work against the people of God also draw God's anger. That's why the entire army of Pharaoh drowned in the Red Sea because they angered God by attempted to re-enslave Israel. In the course of every life there are times when we anger God because of our lack of faith. Even while he's doing great things for us sometimes God's get angry with us. That was the case when the disciples saw the wind and waves rocking their ship and called upon Christ in fear. Even as he rebuked them asking, "Where is your faith?" he stilled the winds and the waves saying, peace be still.

There is no life lived that that at some point has not angered or frustrated God. All have sinned and fallen short of the glory of God. Yet, in all of our faults, he has looked beyond our faults and saw our needs.

Life gets slippery when it wet. This life before for us, like all others has slipped along the way somewhere and drawn the anger of God. Yet the words of the songwriter constantly remind us that, "We fall down, but we get up. A saint is just a sinner who fell down and got up!"

When we get up, we find our way to the house of God then we serve, teach and praise him with the full knowledge that is a forgiving God and that his anger endureth but a moment.

GOD'S FAVOR: The ultimate blessing for any believer is to receive the favor of God. When a person is a favorite, he receives special treatment, access and considerations that may not be required. They are received because someone has a special attachment to us. Although Jacob had 12 sons, Joseph was his favorite. He received a coat of many colors not because he earned it but because he was favored by his father. Jacob and Esau were twins, but Jacob was favored by his mother who worked to secure him the blessing from Isaac. What he received was not deserved but given out of favor. When a believer considers his life, he immediately recognizes that he has been the recipient of God's favor. It is great to be blessed but is better to be favored by God. Blessings indicate reciprocity; that is a reward for work performed. Favor on the other hand, includes blessings for no reason other than the fact that God loves us and counts us among his special children.

When a man or woman lives a long full life, reaches retirement and is able to enjoy most of the fruits of their labor, that is an indication that they know what it means to enjoy the favor of the Lord. When we realize that we have been favored that's when we can truly say, "He didn't have to do it but he did."

He didn't have to bless me but he did!

He didn't have to heal me but he did!

He didn't have to save me but he did!

While others revel in the fact that they have been blessed, those who have learned this truth are able to say, "I'm more than blessed, I'm enjoying the favor of the Lord!"

WEEPING: There have been times in our experience when we've had to weep. The very first thing we do when we get into this world is cry. But shedding a sentimental tear at a wedding or at the happy ending of a movie is not the same as weeping. The Hebrew word for "weeping" in this text means continuous like a steady dripping. Jeremiah, was so concerned over the lost glory of Israel that he steadily lamented over her lost estate, enough to fill the entire book of Lamentations in the bible. We've all had to weep. Whether it was over a family member that seemed to go astray or the condition of the world. We've all continually wept. This is the kind of weeping that Jesus did for Jerusalem before he entered. He said he'd like to take the entire city under his wing like a mother hen would her chicks and protect them and nurture them.

Sometimes we weep like that. Mothers weep for sons and daughters. Fathers weep for families. Sometimes its uncles, aunts and grandparents, who are concerned about the affairs of each family member to the point of weeping

Those who weep also learn how to trust in the Lord. It is only their trust in the Lord that allows them to stand strong for their families. That's when the words of the song become real, "I learned how to lean and depend on Jesus. He's my friend and he's my guide. I found out that if I trust him he will provide."

Those who weep learn quickly how to take their concerns to the Lord in prayer and leave them there!

Joy in the morning

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider David's epitaph, "Weeping endures but a night, but joy comes in the morning!"

David wrote his own epitaph as he prepared to enter into his new house.

He had experienced the anger of God.

He had experienced the favor of God.

He had experienced the valley of weeping.

Now as he stands on the threshold of his new house, David declares, "Weeping endures but a night, but joy comes in the morning."

David's words are but a type of what every believer should expect who experiences the valley of weeping.

It's the same testimony shared by the old warriors who labored in hope despite difficult times singing, "I'm so glad that trouble don't last always."

The saint who has labored in the vineyard and weathered the melancholy loneliness of the night looks forward to the breaking of the dawn; because he knows that joy comes in the morning.

The saint who has faithfully visited the sick and prayed the prayer of faith, looks forward to the rising of the sun, because he knows that joy comes in the morning!

The saint who has helped the poor, fed the hungry, and shared the compassion of God with the forgotten masses looks forward to the break of day, because he knows that joy comes in the morning!

I don't know about you but I've found out that you can move from weeping to joy!

I've found out that:

-The darkest nights are followed by the brightest days!

-A great and heavy burden is followed by a multitude of blessings!

-The sorrow of today is followed by pleasant times of tomorrow!

-The weakness of the moment can be the blessing of the hour!

-The difficulty of the day can prove to be the blessing for the week!

I've found that no matter what comes my way that the Lord is able, to make a way out of no way!

The Lord will provide:

-Patience in the middle of problems!

-Contentment in the middle of criticisms!

-Support in the middle of suffering!

-Stability in the middle of strain!

-Hope in the middle of hardship!

He's able to lift up a bowed down head

He's able to dry a tear stained eye!

Just like David stood in front of his new house, looked back, and gave God thanks, one day, every saint of God is going to leave his old house and get a brand new home in the heavens.

Paul told the Corinthians is 2 Corinthians 5:1, "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

Servant, you cried tears of sorrow over the pain and misfortunes of your friends; you cried through the long night as you visited the sick and elderly!

Servant, you cried tears of compassion when you saw people with no food to eat; you cried as you stumbled through the night carrying plates of food in your hand!

Servant, you cried tears of concern when you saw family members confused and dispirited; you cried as you struggled through the night to show them the right path!

Servant, you cried tears of disappointment as your health began to fail; you shed tears of steel as you struggled to cope with your faith.

Servant, you cried tears as you told men and women about Jesus who died out on Calvary and arose on Sunday morning!

Weeping endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning!

In the morning, there will be no more sadness!

In the morning, there will be no more heartaches!

In the morning, there will be no more disappointments!

In the morning, crying days will be over because there will be joy!

I heard a songwriter say, “One of the mornings and it won’t be very long, you’ll look for me and I’ll be gone….” I’ll have new legs and I’ll be walking around heaven all day!

Come and go with me, to my father’s house!

In my father’s house there is joy!

In my father’s house there is peace!

No more crying there, in my father’s house

There’ll be joy! Joy! Joy!

Lifted by the Hand of God

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 14, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose." Mark 9:27

Introduction

Have you ever had to ask someone to help you? Every now and then everyone needs some help from somebody, sometimes. Whether it is a large under taking or something small, we all eventually need a little help.

Sometimes we need help and won't ask for it.

Sometimes we need help and won't accept it.

Sometimes we try to help ourselves. Self help is generally described as those actions which tend to improve one's social or economic condition. In the 60's there were a number of efforts made to assist people as they tried to lift themselves by their own "boot straps." Some worked to help people get jobs, or acquire homes, others worked to help people improve socially.

There were some people who couldn't be helped by a self help program because they were spiritually lost. Their desire and thirst for personal achievement had vanished. The inner drive needed to climb out of their dilemma was not present. They were hopeless.

That's where the Lord came in. When we could not help ourselves, Jesus gave us a helping hand. When we were spiritual wanderers, Jesus showed us the way.

As Christians, we are ever thankful to God for his mercies and kindnesses, for without his strong, saving hand, we would still be sinking in the sea of life.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus healing a child who had been declared lunatic or dumb on the request of his father. The people of the community were curious to see how Christ would handle the healing of this youth, especially since his cure escaped his disciples. Christ rebuked the evil spirit and charged the spirit to come out of him immediately. It was an effectual, clean removal of the evil spirit within the boy that barred his return. Had the spirit left of its own accord it would later returned but it was removed by Christ himself and it would not return. Facing the superior power of Christ the evil spirit released the boy and Jesus took him by the hand, Matthew Henry notes that the emphasis is on kratesas means he took fast hold of him, and strongly bore him up, and he arose and recovered, and all was well.

Jesus took his hand

The text verse first notes that the boy who was lifted came in Christ himself. Jesus took his hand.

There are many great things that can happen when our hand is in Jesus' hand. Outside of his hand and on our own power we can do nothing.

Today there are too many people who will not put their hand in Christ's hand. Even in this text, the boy did not give his hand to Christ, Jesus took his hand.

There are many circumstances in life when the Lord must take our hand because we are too stubborn, obstinate and too mean to take his hand.

Perhaps that's why the Lord often pushes himself into our picture and simply takes our hand. He interrupts our busy schedules, and intrudes on our daily lives just enough to take our hands.

No wonder the songwriter would declare, "Take my hand precious Lord, lead me on and let me stand. I am tired. I am weak. I am worn."

Jesus lifted him

There are many today who desire to be lifted but they have no strength.

But God has a plan to lift every one of his children. It is not his intention that his people wallow in despair, live in poverty or be in want. There four considerations that each of us should make as we ask God to lift us.

WE MUST GET A NEW LIFE: The first step to lifting ourselves is to get rid of our old lifestyle and to get a new life. Our old lifestyle is filled with negative attitudes and habits as well as empty spirits. The new life Christ offers includes a completely new approach to life. 2 Cor. 5:17 reminds us that any man that is in Christ is a "New creature" and that old things are passed away and all things become new.

WE MUST INFUSE OURSELVES WITH INSPIRING IDEAS: The second step involves receiving the flow of inspiring ideas, encouragements and supports that come from the Holy Spirit. Many can't reach their goals because they can't get themselves motivated or fired up to go for it. Christians who are climbing out of the marrow of life must make time for the Holy Spirit to speak to them through bible study, regular worship and personal prayer.

This inspiration that we speak of serves the great purpose of encouraging us when we despair by reminding us that when we can't see a way that Jesus is a way maker. It reminds us that when we can't open the door of opportunity that we serve a God who opens closed doors.

WE MUST DEVELOP A BOLD FAITH: The third step involves developing a strong faith that God will provide. There are many who are in a miserable estate because they have lost faith in themselves, their fellowman and in God. They have concluded that nobody cares. But when friends, family and loved ones have turned their back on you, our faith tells us that God Cares!

What is faith? Faith is knowing that you are walking the tightrope of life unsure whether you will make it to the other side without falling, but you step out anyway knowing that if you fall that God's safety net will catch you and put you back on your feet again! Faith is the Substance of things hoped for and evidence of things unseen. Faith is stepping into the dark corridors of unknown tomorrows confidently saying, "I don't know what the future holds, but I know who holds the future"

WE MUST TRAIN OURSELVES: The fourth step needed is training. Without training we cannot realize the full potential of what God has in store for us. We lose much of the inspiration available if we are not trained. Our faith is never fully developed if we are not trained to use our bible and to understand our faith. Even in the secular sense training is required. Many apply for jobs with little or no training and although they get out to seek opportunities they cannot get them because they are not ready to receive them. 2 Tim 2:15 reminds us to "Study to show thyself approved a workman that needeth not be ashamed but rightly dividing the words of truth."

The Man Arose

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must notice that the man who was down allowed the Lord to lift him up and he arose.

The fact that he arose is significant, especially since many people resist efforts by others to help them. Many people have devoted their entire lives to trying every effort possible to lift others by their own bootstraps only to find out that those they try to lift still will not rise.

There are many who have drug dependencies and despite the efforts of well-meaning friends, government agencies, churches and a plethora of assistance efforts, they still do not rise.

The fact that this man, holding on to the hand of them Lord stood to his feet suggests a powerful desire on his part to stand once again.

If we want to stand and the world has knocked us down; the Lord is ready to lift us up.

Somebody here today knows that the Lord is a rock in a weary land and a shelter in a time of storm. He will pick us up!

I hear the saints testifying through the years:

—A woman with an infirmity for 18 years who was bowed and could not be lifted up was touched by Jesus and stood tall and straight.

—Peter's Mother in law who had been stricken with a fever was healed when Jesus took her by the hand and lifted her up!

—Peter walking on the water began to sink and cried out to Jesus Lord Save Me!

Somebody here can testify with the songwriter: “I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore, very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no, but the master of the sea, heard my despairing cry, from the waters lifted me, now safe am I.”

I was sinking in the sea of:

—Foolishness but love lifted me and gave me wisdom

—Weakness but love lifted me and gave me strength

—Sorrow but love lifted me and gave me joy

—Despair but love lifted me and gave me hope —Loneliness but love lifted me and gave me comfort for my soul!

When nothing else could help..love lifted me!

But before he lifted me up he had to be lifted up himself.

I hear him say, “And I, if I, be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto me!”

They lifted him up on an old rugged cross!

He died out on Calvary, but early Sunday morning he arose from the dead!

Like us he was down, but God lifted him up!

The world had counted him out but God lifted up!

When God lifted him up, he started lifting me and you up!

I don’t know about you, but I’m so glad that Jesus lifted me!

I’m so glad that he picked me up and turned me around!

I’m so glad that he gave me a new song to sing!

I’m so glad that Jesus lifted me!

Air Pudding

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 21, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "It shall even be as when an hungry man dreameth, and, behold, he eateth; but he awaketh, and his soul is empty: or as when a thirsty man dreameth, and, behold, he drinketh; but he awaketh, and, behold, he is faint, and his soul hath appetite: so shall the multitude of all the nations be, that fight against mount Zion." Isaiah 29:8

Introduction

Have you ever heard of air pudding? It is an amazing food that is great! If your mind can an imagine it, it just pops up right in front of you. Do you like steak? Air steak pops up in front of you. You see it just as plain as day. You can see yourself slicing it watching the succulent juices flow. You can see the fork as it brings each morsel to your mouth. You can chew it and swallow it easily. However, when you finish, all you had was air pudding.

Do you like chocolate cake? An air cake will just pop up in front of you, whenever you are ready. The cake has a rich icing! Can't you see it? Put your finger on it. Lick your finger. Doesn't it taste great? As you swallow the slice of cake, you can taste it rolling around on your tongue and sliding gently down. But when you finished, all you had was air pudding.

Air pudding an imaginary food that you eat when you cannot get what you want. You see it just as if it is there and go through all of the motions as if it was there but it is just imaginary. Air pudding can be anything: Steak, pork chops, rice and gravy. Air pudding never fills you up. You just keep eating but you are never satisfied because it is an illusion.

Many are trying to achieve, succeed and do great things in life with only a superficial belief in God or no belief in God at all. They dream of happiness and the good life. Without God that dream is simply air pudding, an illusion that will always escape them.

As Christians, we know that if we, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God" and his righteousness, all of the things we dream about can become a reality. If we fail to put him first, they will always slip through our fingers and all we end up with is "air pudding."

Exposition

This text focuses on Isaiah as he gives a prophetic warning to Israel that about vain hope in the power of man instead of the power of God.

Historically, the text describes an instance in which the prophet Isaiah prophesied that there would be a day when Jerusalem, called "Ariel" in verse 1, the City of God, would be surrounded by its enemies.. Jerusalem was the City of David. It was the place where the altar of God existed and where sacrifices were made. It was called "Ariel" because Ariel means "Lion of God."

When surrounded by enemies many put trusted Ariel as it came to represent their rituals and sacrifices. Their confidence rested the fact that historically the people followed the ritual to the letter and religiously went to the City of God as commanded.

Isaiah notes that the people of Jerusalem would ultimately be saved from the impending attack of its enemies. The army that sought to enrich itself by Israel's destruction would soon be destroyed. Its dreams of riches and war spoils would become like a bad dream in which a man dreams that he is eating in the night and wakes up hungry.

Isaiah's prophecy did materialize. The armies of Assyria came to lay siege against Jerusalem. Rather than fight the people, they tried to starve them out. Inside the walls, the people trusted the history of the city itself and its history of sacrifice and ritual as a 'Holy Place" that made the invulnerable. Outside the Assyrians waited with dreams of riches and victory. Ultimately, God sent an angel that destroyed the army of the Assyrians, on the spot, in a moment. The next morning what bothered Israel was no more. It was like a dream in the night.

The message of the prophecy is two fold. Believers should keep trusting in God not in empty rituals or symbols. Those who think that holy things, or places will vainly put their trust in that which is powerless. At the same time, those who seek to fight against the people of God and seek to prosper at their expense are dreaming an "empty" dream that will not come to fruition.

Trusting in Symbols Is Like "Air Pudding"

The text notes that Israel placed a lot of hope and faith in its symbols or religion and ritual. When surrounded by enemies there were many among the people who felt like their association with the city of God alone would protect them from their enemies. They held on to their symbols. Yet, Isaiah warned that counting on symbols was like dreaming of "air pudding."

GOOD LUCK CHARMS: There are many who place and inordinate amount of trust in good luck charms. They wear them around their necks, wrists, and ankles, and place them in strategic places around their homes. Some carry a rabbit's foot on a chain. Some have medals and medallions around their necks. Whether it is a horseshoe over your do way or special hoodoo powder that you think will keep the Hanks away, there is no saving grace or special protective powers that can protect you from the enemy in times of trouble. Neither is there any protective grace in religious symbols. Placing a cross in certain places in your home does not make your home more spiritual or blessed. Sprinkling holy water on your furniture does not make it special or protect it from harm. Posting a large bible in your living room that is never read, does not bring luck to your home. Trusting in symbols is like air pudding. It's a nice dream but in times of trouble don't count on it.

RITUALISM: Ritualism is not a panacea either. Many believe that by simply showing up at a church service every now and then that they are somehow insulated from troubles and protected from enemies. They believe if they stand, sit, clap their hands, and otherwise participate in the ritual that these exercises alone will protect them in difficult times. Just as Isaiah warned the people of God in this text that their reliance upon their ritual and sacrifices in the city of God would not sustain them or protect them in difficult times believers today must also remember that our salvation is not in simply showing up and participating in a ritual but in our daily walk with God. The salvation is not in the ritual or the tradition, while both have their place, it is in our faith and trust in God. We should participate in the ritual "because" of our faith not in the "place" of our faith. Those who count on their occasional appearance at a worship service to earn them brownie points in heaven are trying to spiritually survive on air pudding.

Expectations of success without God is "air pudding"

In a similar sense, those who expect to succeed in life without God are also dreaming of air pudding. The world poses many dangers and obstacles to the quest of every believer to achieve success and fulfillment as each pursues life goals. Those who believe that they can achieve any level of success in this world without the assistance of the almighty are dreaming a dream based on air pudding. Without the power of God believers will find it impossible to reach the heights they seek because it is the power of the Holy Spirit which empower, strengthens and fortifies us for the struggle necessary for success in kingdom building.

Those who think they can work hard and their work alone will ultimately result in success without an active faith in God, have a life dream that is based upon air pudding.

Education, while essential, is not the totality of that which is required for a believer to achieve. We must also have God.

Training is important but it never supersedes the need for God in our lives. Ambition is important but it never supplants our need for the presence of God.

The songwriter said it clear, "Without God I can do nothing. Without him, I'd surely fail. Without him my life would be drifting, like a ship without a sail."

Trusting in God Brings Victory.

Finally, brothers and sisters, those who put their whole trust in God will get more than just "air pudding" out of life; they will be the recipients of the favor of God, which is better than being blessed.

The enemies of Judah camped around Jerusalem seeking to destroy the people of God. They expected a victory against God's people.

They dreamed of the day they would take Judah away captive. But it was air pudding!

They dreamed of how good they would feel once they destroyed the people of God. But it was air pudding.

In this text, the enemy is Assyria, an army that surrounds the people of God. In the lives of believers, the enemy is Satan who goes to and fro every day of our lives trying to destroy the people of God.

It is his dream to destroy everyone who calls himself a child of God. But his dream of conquering a child of God is air pudding; because we are more than conquerors in him who loved us.

Believers enjoy a special relationship with God. He may chastise us but it's a dangerous thing for anyone else to hurt a child of God.

It's a dangerous thing to rise up against a child of God.

If the enemy is dreaming that he can destroy a child of God by knocking him down, it's air pudding. Because we fall down, but we get up!

If the enemy dreams of halting our progress by giving us the spirit of fear, it's air pudding; because, "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid."

If the enemy is dreaming of hurting a child of God but cutting off his supply of income and resources, it's air pudding; because, "My God shall supply all your needs, through Christ Jesus."

If the enemy is dreaming of destroying your optimism and forcing you to look down on life, it's air pudding; because David said, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord who made the heavens and the earth."

If the enemy is dreaming of stripping you of all your resources and leaving you in want, it's air pudding; because, "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want."

If the enemy is dreaming of a day when you'll turn your back on God, it's air pudding; because "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

I don't know about you, but I've found out that trusting in the Lord is not illusion, but it's the real thing.

If you trust in the Lord he will take your:

—DOUBTS and give you confidence; WEAKNESSES and give you strength

—DESPAIR and give you hope; DEFEATS and give you victories

—PROBLEMS and give you solutions; FAILURES and give you success!

No wonder the songwriter said, "I will trust in the Lord until I die!"

Though storms rise in your life, trust in the Lord!

Though winds may blow, trust in the Lord!

Trust in the Lord, who died out on Calvary!

Trust in the Lord because Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

Stay on the battlefield and trust in the Lord!

Putting First Things First

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

September 29, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father. Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead: but go thou and preach the kingdom of God. And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell, which are at home at my house. And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." Luke 9:59-62; "Seek ye first the kingdom of God" Matthew 6:33

Introduction

Do you ever have problems deciding what should be done first? One of the most difficult life lessons to learn is how to set priorities. Priorities refer to those things which are most important. Those who have mastered the art of prioritization have learned to make a list of those things which are important in their lives and then spend the remainder of their lives working the list. Youth often find themselves unable to work their list themselves so their parents set a priority list for them, then force them to work the list. As youth mature, they begin to make their own priority list, which is often different from the one designed by their parents. Learning to set priorities, then stick to them is an important life lesson for any youth.

Learning to prioritize is not a youth specific dilemma. Many adults have difficulty prioritizing their lives too. On paper, the lists of both adults and youth look admirable. A typical list puts the things related to God first, family second and career and education last. Such a list implies that worship, service and obedience to God is a person's first priority; everything else is secondary; Second are family concerns such as the health and welfare of family members, as well as marriage and relationship concerns come after God. Finally, concerns about employment, education, career advancement, and personal fortune are last on the list. In reality many believers struggle with their life's priorities, trying to keep them straight. Some have dismissed a list that always puts God first as impractical. They have revised their priorities slightly to keep God at the high end of their lists but not necessarily at the top.

The priority list of a non-believer usually includes a number of actions, but worship, service and obedience to God is not on the list.

How does your life priority list read? There are many youth whose priority lists are similar to this one: 1) Succeed in school and get good grades 2) Be popular 3) Have Fun 4) Worship, serve and obey God. Many adult priority lists usually read similar to this one 1)Career and economic concerns 2) Family and Relationships 3)Worship, service and obedience to God.

As Christians, we are resolved to put God first in our lives, confident that he will provide for all of our needs in return.

Exposition

These text address the importance of setting priorities then once selected sticking to our chosen priorities.

Matthew 6:33 refers to setting priorities. Jesus spoke to his disciples about setting priorities. They too were individuals who had to balance their secular needs and desires with their desire to advance the kingdom of God. Jesus made it very simple but still challenging. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." In essence, Jesus said put the things of God at the top of your list and all of the other concerns you have will come in due time. The challenge he posed was one that put serving God above every other consideration. A rich young ruler was given that challenge and told that it would mean forsaking his riches for the cause of the kingdom. The ruler went away without becoming a Christian, having already set his priority list.

While Matthew 6:33 refers to setting priorities, Luke 9:59-62 refers to keeping our priorities straight once we have set them. The former refers to make a Christian priority list while the latter refers to actually working the list. In Luke Jesus explains the commitment necessary of those who choose to serve in the kingdom. It involves three individuals that are presented with an opportunity to serve in the kingdom, one requested to serve and two were asked to serve but all were awed when they discovered what was expected of a servant in the kingdom.

One man volunteered to serve and made a bold pledge to go wherever he was needed. He pledged to follow Christ "withersoever thou goest." It was a bold pledge and Christ sensed that he may not have understood the extent to which he was committing himself, so he explained the prospects of hardship, poverty and homelessness that might come upon those who truly follow him. He noted that even foxes have holes and birds have nests, but Christ, and those who follow him have neither. Whether the man was intimidated by these conditions it is not said, but no one that is truly a Christian would be dissuaded by the price of following Christ.

The second man was asked to serve, but he had family concerns and wanted time to take care of them. The immediate concern was the death of his father and he wanted time to bury him, which by Jewish would have taken a week because of the purification period required in the law. Jesus responded that he should, "let the dead, bury the dead" as a way of saying that the things of the world should be taken care of by the people of the world, but those in the kingdom must concern themselves with kingdom building.

A third man was also asked to serve, but he took his service as a suicide mission of sorts and needed time to say farewell to his family and friends. He wanted time to set his affairs in order because he considered that he may never return. Jesus rebuked him for his hesitation and his slow response to heaven's invitation.

In these three examples Jesus underscored that those who commit to serve and go back on their pledge for reasons of family, business, or friendship are not fit for the kingdom. The greatest servant is the one that puts his hands on the plough and does not turn back.

Combined, the two texts say that would should put God first and once have done that, keep our commitment to him by faithfully working our priority list.

Discover the main thing

Youth who are trying to learn to manage their own lives should consider three truths necessary to their spiritual and personal growth.

One big decision of every Christian youth is to discover, "Who I am, and what I will do with my life." Children constantly watch television screens, read magazines and review other sources of information to focus on images that suggest to them what they can be. At first the focus is on a profession: a doctor, fireman, police officer, or some other highly visible profession usually appears. They look exciting. In teenage years youth begin to think of lifestyles and begin to select careers that will produce enough income to support the life style they desire. At this juncture, the life style and not the career is the main thing.

At some point, youth starting asking, what does God want me to do with my life? That's when youth start considering ways to serve God with their talent and abilities. But what about the lifestyle of riches and fame they considered. Lifestyle becomes secondary when doing the will of God becomes the main thing. Jesus has promised that if we make contributing to the kingdom of God our highest priority, all of the other things will be added.

Many youth have decided that they want to help heal people who are sick or to improve the living conditions of the poor or even to write music that would lift broken spirits of the lost. This became their "main thing." In their teen-age years they decided on a course of life that plunged into a life work dedicated to a particular area of service in the kingdom of God. They decide to teach school to help build the kingdom; finance is secondary. They decide to become missionaries to advance the kingdom, life style is secondary.

Step one for every youth is to set priorities in their lives to discover their main thing in life then devote all of their energy toward achieving the main thing.

Is my main thing and God's thing the same thing?

Christian youth always want to do what is right in the sight of God. That means they want to know whether my thing and God's thing are the same thing. Before he began his public ministry Jesus had to make a similar decision. In the wilderness for 40 days and nights he wrestled with the issue of making his thing the same as God's thing. Satan presented him a variety of opportunities to turn his talents and abilities into avenues that would make him famous and powerful. Jesus wanted his main thing in life and God's thing to be the same. Ultimately he rebuked Satan and chose to make God's thing his thing. Each Christian youth that is deciding upon a life priority should ask themselves whether their the choice they are considering will build the kingdom of God or tear it down. The young girl that sees herself as the next "Trina" or J-Lo, should ask whether or not such a life will help build the kingdom of God or destroy it. The young man who desires to be a hard core rapper should ask whether or not that that main thing and God's kingdom are the same thing.

It is just as difficult for youth and young adults today to decide about their main thing as it was for Christ in the wilderness. The world offers so much temptation. Choosing the Godly way often seems to be the road to less power, less fame and less money. Yet, the words of Jesus keep ringing in our ears, "and all these things shall be added unto you."

Choosing your main thing usually begins in Jr. High School. That's when a girl says, "I want to change the world so everyone has a place to live and food to eat." That desire, is a Godly dream, becomes her main thing. Another youth says, "I want to use my voice to inspire to people to reach higher. That goal becomes the main thing. Another says, "I want reach thousands of lost boys on the corner and show him a better way." That becomes the main thing and could be the reason that explains a sports career choice for some. It gives them a way to do their main thing and help thousands.

Keep the main thing, the main thing

Finally, brothers and sisters, while every youth must discover their main thing, figure our whether their main thing and God's thing are the same; they must also stay focused to keep the main thing, the main thing.

It is very easy to get distracted in life and lose focus.

Many college age young adults lose focus of the main thing and get off course.

Many adults have squandered many years of their lives because they failed to make achieving their main thing, their main thing.

Jesus told his disciples that a person who decides on a Godly life course then switches to something else is not fit for the kingdom.

For believers, working for the Lord is the main thing. We must keep the main thing, the main thing.

Samson was born a Nazarite, with a mission to protect the people of God. But when he allowed himself fall for an ungodly woman, he lost his power and ended up blind. He didn't make the main thing, his main thing.

David was a man after God's own heart. He wanted to build a kingdom that was dedicated to God.But he found himself sidetracked by an affair with Bathsheba and the country suffered. He asked God in the 51 Psalm, "Restore unto me a clean heart and renew a right spirit within me." He had to make the main thing, once again his main thing.

Job showed how it should be done. He was a man of immense wealth and influence who lost both health and wealth at the same time. When his friends told him to curse

God and die, Job remembered the main thing in his life, which was to serve and trust God. He said, "yea thou he slay, yet will I trust him." He kept the main thing, the main thing.

Serving God and obeying him should be the believer's first priority. As it relates to serving God the health and welfare of our family's should be the believer's next highest priority, fame, riches, and power are only important as they relate to achieving the main thing.

Our goal is to keep the main thing, the main thing.

The youth who is able to say no to activities that will keep him away from the things of God is one who has learned how to keep the main thing, the main thing.

The youth who is able to hang up the telephone, turn off the television set and focus on his or her studies in school, is one who has learned how to keep the main thing, the main thing.

The athlete who has learned that no matter how great he is one the football field, he must develop his mind and spirit as well, is one who has learned how to keep the main thing, the main thing.

The youth who decides to follow Christ rather than the world is one who has decided to make heaven his choice. This is the young man or woman who has decided that being a favored child of God is the main thing.

Christian youth want to walk with the king. It becomes their main thing!

Christian youth want to live lives that are pleasing to God. It becomes their main thing!

Christian youth want to do something with their lives that will make the world better in the name of God, that's the main thing.

But we must keep the main thing, the main thing.

Jesus said once we have decided that the kingdom of God and its righteous is your main thing, we must stick to our commitment.

Simply putting your hands on the plough won't guarantee that you can plow a straight row. This the secret that the small boy learned as he watched his father plough the fields with a one man plough. He noticed that his father put his hands on the plough, stirred the horse and ploughed straight ahead. His rows were always straight, it seemed easy. One day the father gave the boy his chance to plough a straight row. His father went to the end of the field and said "keep your eye on me." The boy stirred the horse and the plough moved. He kept his eye on the blade of the plough and watched out for stumps and rocks. He looked back to see how far he had come and amused himself at what an easy job it was. When he made it to the end of the row his father showed him his handiwork, instead of a straight line, the boy had plowed an "S" because he took his eyes off his father, looked down, around and back. His row would have been straight if he had kept his eyes on his father.

I don't know about you, but I've decided to keep my eyes on the cross and follow Jesus.

One song writer said, I have decided to follow Jesus. No turning back, no turning back!

Follow Jesus, who died for us on Calvary!

Follow Jesus, who arose Early Sunday morning!
Make Jesus the main thing, and all other things will be added!

Life Savers

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "For whosoever will save his life will lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." Luke 9:24

Introduction

Have you ever saved anyone's life directly or indirectly? Has anyone saved yours? The value of human life is so important in our society that awards are given to those who go beyond what is expected and save lives. Soldiers on the battlefield, public servants such as firemen and police officers and even ordinary citizens are often recipients of public praise when a life is saved. Often those who save the lives of others do so at the risk of losing their own. A fire fighter who plunges into a burning building does so at the risk of his own life. A police officer who enters a dark and suspicious building to save the life of a victim does so at the risk of his or her own life. Such meritorious service is the stuff that elicits our praise and thunderous applause. There are many people who are alive today because of a life saver.

There is a popular candy called "Life Savers" which, despite its age, is still popular in every part of the nation. The multi-flavored candy comes in strawberry, watermelon, cherry, raspberry, and blackberry. In the 1970's there was a famous television commercial where someone would lose a game or mess up something important and a person nearby would offer them a life saver candy to cheer them up. Giving a person a Lifesaver became a way of saying cheer up, "everything is going to be alright." It was a positive suggestion to persons surrounded by negative influences. It was a small but friendly sign of hope that despite the darkness of the situation better times were ahead.

Believers know what it means to be saved; they have been saved themselves. Believers know what it means to face the fiery flames of public scorn or to feel themselves drowning in the sea of life. Likewise, believers also know what it means to be lifted from the jaws of death, despair, and failure at the very moment when it appeared that all is lost. Nearly every believer has had what can be called a "Peter moment." That is a moment in our experience when we felt ourselves sinking and cried out to God for help and salvation. We were saved from our predicament only by the grace of God.

Sometimes God altered circumstances to save us. Sometimes God saved us through the advice of a family member, friend, or coworker. Sometimes God saved us from ourselves by closing certain doors to keep us from totally destroying ourselves. Our very lives have been saved by the grace of God.

Just as we have been the recipients of life saving grace, believers also try to be life savers to others. In thousands of silent, seemingly invisible ways, believers lift the spirits of those who are sinking in life.

Each time they feed a meal to a hungry person, they become a lifesaver.

Each time they help a family drowning in financial difficulty, they become a life saver.

Each time they direct a child to a path that is clear and straight, they become a life saver.

Each time they show a lost soul the way back to Calvary, they become a life saver.

When they bring words of inspiration and hope to those who are at their wits end; just in the nick of time, they become "life savers."

As Christians, we owe our lives and our salvation to our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Even today, in moments of depression and despair we can feel his gentle touch as he reminds us to cheer up because our God is a "life saver."

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explains the nature of self-denial.

As Jesus explains the nature of the kingdom of God to those who are listening, he appears to introduce a paradox. In order to gain the kingdom of God one must be willing to do just the opposite of what human nature demands. Jesus introduced the concept of self-denial. In verse 23 he makes it clear that those who would follow him must be willing to pick up their cross of self-denial and plunge into the unknown world with Providence as a guide; willing to lose all if necessary to achieve the ends of the kingdom.

This idea of self-denial is paradoxical because it asks human beings to do that which is not of their nature. The nature of a human being is self preservation. In fact, it is generally said that self preservation is the first law of nature. If that is true, then what Jesus says in this text is that self preservation is the LAST law of God. Self denial, in its purest form, is the act of placing the will of God before our own will. This means that we are not to do our own will in anything. Self-denial ultimately means that we refuse to follow our own will in favor of the will of God.

Jesus says the man that wants to save his life must lose it and conversely the person who is not willing to lose his life cannot save it. It is a round about way of saying that each believer is challenged to plunge himself into the service of God and the building of the kingdom as a primary motive and reason for every action they do; even when everything in them says that instead of building the kingdom they should build a better life for themselves. Building for ourselves is our nature. Building for the kingdom is the nature of the new creature that is born within us when we accept Christ as our Savior.

Kingdom building becomes the higher cause that motivates individual pursuits rather than self interests when a person denies himself. Self-denial is a disciplined and restrained pursuit of a higher calling. It is the quality about an individual that causes him to forgo the pleasures of the moment for the greater good. The person who chooses to lose what he could possibly gain out of life for the purposes of the kingdom is the person who chooses to gain in the kingdom even if it means a measurable difference in what he is able to achieve in this world.

Jesus called on every believer to be saved themselves and then to become a life savers. The challenge he presented was for every believer to allow the power of grace to leave them from oblivion; then allow themselves to be used as instruments of God to save others. A life saver is a saved life that works to save others.

Thus, when Jesus challenge believers to be willing to lose their lives in order to save it he actually challenged them to put their own immediate concerns second-place and the put the cause of the kingdom first place in their lives.

Reaching for the higher good

The quest of every believer is to pursue the highest good. The highest good always reflects the will of God. Sometimes the highest good does not offer the highest immediate benefit. The highest good in any endeavor is that which will glorify God because it lifts fallen humanity, heals broken spirits and restores hope to those in despair. The highest good is reflected in every endeavor of life from the smallest activity to the loftiest undertaking. When we achieve, or seek to achieve the highest good we seek to do that which will help the kingdom of God to become a reality. The man who opens a business to provide a service or product that will be beneficial to the public seeks to highest good. If his only purpose in the business is to make money, than often the highest good is lost. Many Christian businessmen earn far less because they choose the highest good over their self-interests. They are others who make more but they do so by ignoring the appeal of the highest good. Such a Christian businessmen shows a willingness to lose his financial opportunity while preserving his place in the kingdom. That's what Christ meant by being willing to die for the cause of the kingdom.

In every endeavor that we undertake we should seek the highest good. We should view it as an opportunity to help someone, comfort someone, or otherwise make life better for others. That means our energies are dedicated to a cause greater than ourselves. The Freedom Riders who rolled buses in the sixties did so at the threat of their lives. They were involved in a pursuit that was higher than their personal pursuits and they were willing to lay down their lives for the greater good. The same is true for people who make similar sacrifices but in less dramatic ways. The man who donates a kidney does so at a sacrifice. The person who cosigns a note for friend does so at a considerable risk. The parent who foregoes personal advancement to seek the advancement of their children; and many others are examples of persons who to denied themselves to achieve the greater good. It is this greater good that Christ speaks of when he points to the value of self-denial which is necessary for any person who would call himself a believer.

Achievement without a higher good is empty

Achieving personal goals without pursuit of a higher good is not a satisfying experience. There have been many people who have plunged themselves into a variety of activities designed to achieve personal goals that have divorced themselves from a higher good. Those who have done so have generally found that although they often achieve their goals what they achieve was empty and did not satisfy them. They bought a house but they did not get a home. They married a mate but they did not marry a husband or a wife. They have a job but they hate going to it every day. They make money but even the money they make does not satisfy them. They sought to satisfy themselves but not to achieve a higher good. Perhaps this is the reason why so many people are unsatisfied with their position in life.

There is a direct correlation between pursing a higher good and satisfaction. Many earn comparatively little in their jobs, but find their work satisfying. They enjoy what they do. Those who volunteer to help the elderly, tend to the sick or to help those who are fallen in a variety of ways, do not expect to earn great amounts money; yet they are extremely satisfied because they are serving a higher good.

Pursing the higher good brings rewards

Finally, brothers and sisters, pursuing the higher good does bring its rewards.

While Jesus told his disciples to be willing to lose their life in order to save it, he was not implying that those who choose to serve a higher good will not be rewarded. Neither was he implying that serving the higher good is a thankless pursuit.

If the scriptures teach anything they overwhelmingly say one thing with a solid voice; serving the Lord will pay off after while.

Included in the message John was given for the seven churches of Asia minor was the phrase, “I know that works.” That means that God is aware of our dedication to the kingdom. Just as these churches were told of a reward that awaited those that overcome, the same is true for believers today.

If you have been saved and you are working to save lives and lost souls then your work is not in vain.

The God you serve is both a life saver and a life giver!

Tell the man who has fallen on skid row that Jesus saves!

Tell the woman who has throw up her hands in despair that Jesus saves!

Tell the wandering spirit that can’t find his way, that Jesus is the way!

For I heard him declare I am the way the truth and the light. No man cometh to the father except by me.

Tell the man with a bowed down head, that Jesus lifts bowed down head’s.

Tell the woman who can’t see a way out, that the Lord will make a way out of no way.

Tell them that not only does he say lives but he also gives life.

Lazarus found that when all hope was lost that he gave him a physical life.

The woman at the well found that he gave her new spiritual life, so much so that she ran everywhere saying, “Come see a man.”

Tell your neighbor sinking in a world of problems that just in the nick of time he is a life saver!

No wonder the song writer declared, “I was sinking deep in sin. Far from the peaceful shore. Very deeply stained within, sinking to rise no more. But the master of the sea heard my despairing cry and from the waters lifted me now safe am I. Love lifted me. Love lifted me. When nothing else could help. Love lifted me.”

To save my life, he picked up an old rugged cross!

To give me new life, he died on that cross!

Somebody said, he saved others but he can’t save himself!

After three days and nights the world soon saw that our God is not only a life saver, but he’s also a life giver!

Early Sunday morning. he who saved lives, was given new life.

Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

So Close But So Far Away

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "When Agrippa said unto Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian. 29 And Paul said, I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds." Acts 26:28-29

Introduction

Have you come close to completing a goal but stopped short of succeeding? That's the time when you were just one step away from victory; one score away from passing; one mile away from arriving; and one interview away from being hired. Sometimes it's more frustrating to come up just a little short than it is if the degree of separation were even larger. It's frustrating to stand in the long line, then get to the counter only to find out that the person in front of you is the last customer of the day. It's equally frustrating to play a long hard game only to lose about one point. That's when we get a clear appreciation for what it means to almost succeed.

We are all familiar with almost. Most of us have an "almost" story. Whether it's the gamble that almost paid off or the big sale that was almost closed, we all have an "almost" story. Some people we know seem to have a suitcase filled with "almost" stories. It's their claim to fame. "Did I ever tell you about that giant fish I had on the line? I wrestled with him for almost 10 minutes before he got away. I almost had him."

The confused job seeker always had an almost story. "He said he would have hired me but he needed someone with brown hair. I almost had that job so I went back the next day and he said he needed someone with red hair. I almost had it so I dyed my hair red and he said he hired the last red head just before I walked in the door. I almost had that job too!"

Have you heard it? "Did I ever tell you about the time I was almost selected as the Employee of the Year?"

"They say he almost made the big leagues."

There is a never ending stream of people who almost won the battle, who almost climbed the mountain, who almost found the treasure.

"Almost" is a cousin to "nearly," "next time," "if only," and "just about." When someone says "almost" it usually refers to missed opportunities, aborted efforts, and fumbled chances. It's honorable mention, 1sst runnerup, second place, burnt cookies and what would have been a beautiful cake if it had not fallen in the oven.

Consider “Almost Annie Car Sale.” Almost Annie Almost finished school but should never quite pass a test. She was almost married but groom ran away at the altar. Her life was filled with “almosts.” When her started giving her trouble she tried to sell it but couldn’t. She said, “I almost sold the car until the buyer looked at the speedometer and saw the car had 200,000 miles on it. All day long people were looking at it and just before the plunked down the cash the saw the mileage and changed their mind. I almost had that car sold. What can I do? Her friend whispered, “I know how to get it sold, it’s not quite legal but I have a friend who knows what to do.” She gave Almost Annie the phone number and disappeared. A few days later, she saw Annie in the market and asked, “Did you sell the car.” Annie said, “Almost.” The friend asked, “What went wrong this time?” Annie said, “Nothing went wrong, someone was trying to buy it and I almost sold it to them until I looked at the speedometer and saw that it only had 50,000 miles on it. If that’s all the miles it has on it, I may as well keep it for myself.”

These six letters have written the epitaph of many people today.

“He almost got it together.”

“They almost worked their marriage out.”

“He almost got control of himself.”

The most disheartening of these is the epitaph that reads, “He almost became a Christian.”

As Christians, we are glad we serve the true and living God. We are not undecided or straddling the fence. We are not “almost” believers; we know God is real because we can feel him in our hearts.

Exposition

This text considers Paul as he invites King Agrippa to be a Christian.

The Jewish leaders were disturbed about Paul’s teachings. Repeatedly they had appealed to the Roman government to prosecute him. He had appeared before Festus and found no fault in him and then recommended him to King Agrippa for his opinion.

King Agrippa was the last of the Herods. These were the kings who, although not exactly Jews, nevertheless belonged to the Jewish faith. They were Edomites, descendents of Esau, the twin brother of Jacob. The first of the line was Herod the Great, who killed all the babies in Bethlehem when our Lord was born, in an attempt to prevent the ascension of the Messiah. His son, Herod Antipas, had John the Baptist beheaded in prison. His grandson, Herod Agrippa I, put the Apostle James to death with the sword. Finally, his great-grandson, Agrippa II, was appointed by the Romans to be tetrarch of Galilee, to have authority to appoint the high priest in Jerusalem, and to administer the temple. He was a Roman vassal, but all Jewish and Roman historians agree that he was a scholar and an expert in Jewish affairs..

Our text first considers Paul as he addresses Agrippa who had a knowledge of God, and of godly things. However, Agrippa’s understanding was more toward the philosophical than belief.

In this context, Paul comes to preach in a private audience with the king. He told of his Damascus Road experience and no doubt talked of temperance, justice and judgment to come, just as he had to Felix and Drusilla a little earlier. It was a powerful, stirring, and demanding message that appealed both to the intellect and to the heart of King Agrippa.

Agrippa's response was very clear. Almost he was moved to take the step toward being a Christian; but not quite enough. Felix heard Paul deliver a similar message and asked Paul to come back at a more convenient season. Aggippa's answer was "almost." That answer brought him close to being a Christian; close to the kingdom of God; close to the throne of grace…but so far away.

The word almost is descriptive of the present circumstance of many people today. They are so close but so far away!

Some fail because they ride the rail

There are many people who are straddling the fence. They desire to live the Christian life but the world seems so inviting. They don't want to turn loose one and take hold of the other, they want to hold on to both. They want a wife and girl friend. A husband and a secret lover. They are afraid to take a stand. They find it easier to hang on to both. The late Charles Kuralt was host of CBS News' Sunday morning for many years. He was a respected journalist and family man. That much was known to everyone. But when he died, many were shocked to learn that he had two families; neither knew about the other for nearly 20 years. He straddled the fence. He tried to love and take care of them both. With respect to faith, there are many today who straddle the fence. They proclaim a faith in God on Monday, but they really put their faith in the horses, dice, bingo parlors and gambling casinos. They want to hold on to both to hedge their bet. Elijah faced this dilemma when he challenged the prophets of Baal to a contest atop of Mt. Carmel. He asked, "How long halt ye between two opinions, if God is God, follow him. If Baal is God, then follow him." There are millions of people today who attend church on occasion. They try to live right and obey the law. However, despite being so close, they have never given their lives to Christ. Simply being close to the cross does not substitute for picking up the cross and following Jesus. The Rich young ruler walked away in defeat when he was told to deny himself and follow Jesus. Like many of us he was so close but so far away.

Satisfied with being Stratified

A person who is stratified is a person who reaches a certain level and gets comfortable. The quest to win is replaced by a quest to simply place. The quest to be an honor student is replaced with just being happy to pass. The quest for excellence is replaced with an acceptance of mediocrity. The young man or woman who almost graduated from high school, becomes satisfied and stratified, when they become comfortable without a high school diploma. The family that lives on public assistance becomes stratified if it becomes comfortable with a life of welfare and stops trying to improve their education, training and living conditions. While the bible teaches that believers should be content or at peace in whatever state that life gives them, it does not mean that they should give up and throw in the towel. A person who plays a game of cards doesn't quit because he's not dealt a good hand. He plays the hand he is dealt with every skill he has available. Many people who begin the game of life with a bad hand, end up winning because they refused to be satisfied and stratified.

Do you have a speech impediment? Don't resolve that I could have been a great speaker if…… Do like James Earl Jones, refuse to be satisfied and stratified and rise above it!

Do you have an physical impairment? Don't resolve that I could have been a great athlete if… Do like Wilma Rudolph, who overcame braces and trembling feet to become an Olympic champion. Refuse to be satisfied and stratified.

Were you born poor and find life gives you a hard way to go? Don't resolve that I could do but if…Rise up like John H. Johnson of Johnson Publishing company who took pennies and turned it into million. Refuse to be satisfied and stratified.

Refuse to almost succeed!

Refuse to almost get your GED!

If you do, you'll join the ranks of those who are so close but so far a way!

What was far away, gets closer every day

Finally, brothers and sisters, while this text focuses on those who are so close but so far away, it must also be noted that for believers, what was far away, gets closer every day!

For those who give up, "almost" is a statement of finality. It indicates a frustrating end that came up short. However, for those who are still struggling, "almost" means what was once far away is coming within our reach.

To those who have not given up on, "almost" has a new meaning.

Almost means that you have been running a steady race, the finish line is in sight.

Almost means that you have been climbing life's weary mountain and now you can see the summit at the top.

Almost means that you have been through the horrid weaping of the midnight and the dawn is on the horizon.

Somebody asked the question, "How far is the promised land?" It's closer to day than it was yesterday!

And I'm too close to turn around!

John in the Revelation heard the souls of the martyred saints and asked, "How long?" Just a little a while longer, came the answer, we're almost there.

Almost; just a few more risings and fallings!

Almost; just a few more settings of the sun!

Almost; after while, bye and bye, it will all be over down here!

One songwriter answered with these words, "I do not know how long it will be or what the future holds for me, but this I know,

If Jesus leads me, who carried an old rugged cross!
If Jesus leads me, who died out on Calvary!
If Jesus leads me, who arose early Sunday morning!
If Jesus leads me, I shall get home someday!

A Crazy Faith that Makes A Whole Lot of Sense

Introduction

How do you maintain a healthy mind and spirit when the world around you is so crazy? It's not an easy task that's for sure, but the daily struggle of every believer is to maintain a balance in an unstable world. What gives us a sense of sanity in such situations is a healthy Christ centered spirituality that helps us balance the craziness of this world with the assurances of the kingdom of God. Without the sense of a godly presence or divine master plan in which we are integral parts, this whole world be uselessly crazy.

This is a crazy world. Our nation spends $100 billion or more to bomb a country and destroy its infrastructure then spends $150 billion to rebuild what it tore down! That's crazy.

A poor child stands in a lunch line in school wearing a $200 pair of shoes, $100 pair of pants, a $400 gold chain around his neck, diamonds in both ears, and a thousand dollars worth of gold in his teeth. What makes it crazy is this million-dollar man is eating free lunch. That's crazy.

When churches need armed guards; schools need metal detectors and law enforcement profiles anyone who wears a turban as a possible terrorist, we know we are living in dangerously crazy times.

Such times really challenge our mental stability. Believers struggle hard daily to overcome our fixation on these crazy situations, because we see so much craziness all around us. Consider the two men who stood in the park every day at the same time acting very strange. One man seemed to lean and push against something huge and strained himself to move it. The other man always stood a few feet away from him and waved his arms. They were a sight to see, one pushing and the other waving every day. Finally, a curious passerby stopped and asked the man who was pushing a question, "What are you doing? He asked. "Everyday I come to the park somebody keeps putting this big stone in the middle of the road." The passerby was curious because it was obvious that there was no stone, but the man was convinced and continued straining trying to move it. "If I don't move this stone, there is no telling what can happen." The man said as he strained and pushed. The passerby asked the man who was waving, what he was doing. Without missing a single wave, he told the passerby,

"See that man over there. He's crazy. Everyday he comes to the park and thinks he ís rolling a stone. He's really crazy!" The passerby then asked the man, "What are you doing? The man answered, "He rolls that stone in the middle of the street, I'm directing the traffic so no one will hit it!"

If we are not careful, we can worry so much about this life that we make ourselves crazy with grief, anguish and pain. It is better when each of us is able to consider the circumstances of life from the context of being a child of God and resolve that, "All is well, because God is in control." That's not in the psychology book, but it's certainly in God's book the Holy Bible.

As Christians, we see the craziness of this world but we are not overwhelmed by it because we know the Lord. Knowing him gives a sense of balance, spiritual strength and mental stability that exceeds human understanding. Whatever craziness life brings, we know a God who makes meaning out of crazy things and that gives us peace.

Exposition

This text focuses on how lives that operate on faith display confidence, despite circumstances, that God will meet the needs of those who are called according to his purpose. Such faith provides assurance and balance for believers that contributes to a balanced spiritual and mental health.

The prophet Elisha's life was illumined by mighty miracles. Each had a special purpose and served as a demonstration of the power of God. On one occasion, Elisha came to say regularly at the home of an elderly god fearing couple that had no children. At verse 16 Elisha, acting as God's emissary, announced that she would have a child within a year's time as a reward for the kindness she had been shown. The next year the woman conceived. She had a son that grew old enough to walk and play. One day the child became ill and then died while sitting on her lap (v20).

Even though her child had died, the woman did not panic. She carried the boy into the room used by the Elisha on his overnight stays and shut the door. As she left to seek out Elisha, she told her inquiring husband "It shall be well." When she reached Elisha his servant asked: "Is it well with thee? Is it well with thy husband? Is it well with thy child?" Though her son lay dead upon a bed in her house, she responded, "It is well." That seemed a bit odd. To some it may have even appeared a little crazy, but to the woman it made a whole lot of sense.

Her statement suggested that she looked beyond the tragedy she saw earlier in her home. She looked to the God of Elisha. She felt if she could reach Elisha he could intercede with God and the situation could be reversed. She was so confident that she refused to leave until Elisha accompanied her home. Once there the prophet inspected the situation and then after a short while walked from the room with a living boy.

To the woman it was no surprise, she was confident that God would supply her need.

That is exactly the point that Paul makes as he writes to the Philippians. He noted that in his life time he had experienced abundance and periods of depravation. Through it all, he learned not to get excited, but God has always supplied his needs.

Together, these two biblical passages give a clear picture of confidence in the power of God to deliver. Faith in such a God may seem crazy to those who do not believe, but it makes a whole lot of sense.

Believers deal with reality rather than reject it

M. Scott Peck defines mental health as our ability to be dedicated to reality and truth at all costs. In fact, Peck, believes that the tendency to avoid reality and the problems inherent in it that is the primary basis of all mental illness. Reality for some people is disturbing. It is easier to escape it rather than live through it. A common phrase in our vernacular is "Deal with it!" That means tackle the realities around you rather than retreat from them.

How? That's where our faith becomes the crucial factor that provides the spiritual balance needed to overcome tearful situations with the love and embrace of an all powerful God. The links between spirituality and mental health are impressive. According to a Gallup poll, Americans who were identified as being spiritually strong were twice as likely to say they were "very happy" than those identified as being low in spiritual commitment. Spiritually oriented people are also much less likely to abuse alcohol and drugs, be divorced or unhappily married, to commit suicide. While spiritual commitment does not guarantee immunity from suffering or escape from stress, it does seem to be linked to enhanced joy and mental health.

The spiritual man or woman has learned how to deal with it. This sense of spirituality brings perspective. Consider the man who was driving his custom-made truck along the highway with a neighbor. The truck drove and rode well. Everything went well until the neighbor notice that the gas needle pointed to "E." Even though the needle pointed to empty, the driver never seemed to flinch. There wasn't a service station for miles, but yet the driver was so cool and collected. His passenger didn't take it so calmly. He kept watching the needle and looking desperately for a gas station. As the needle dived over into the red, he saw the driver push a little red button and he kept driving. When they finally reached a station the passenger said, "why weren't you worried when your gas tank hit empty." The driver smiled and said, "When I custom made this truck I installed two tanks. When my regular tank runs out, I just switch to my auxiliary tank and keep driving. The "E" means exchange tanks. It means, "Everything is under control!"

When the world gets crazy, believers know how to switch tanks and ride on "E."

A Sense of purpose

A man or woman who knows the Lord is able to maintain a spiritual balance in a crazy world because they have a sense of purpose and divine destiny. The nineteenth century Polish poet Cyrrian Norwid wrote "To be what is called happy, one should have (1) something to live on, (2) something to live for, (3) something to die for. The lack of one results in drama. The lack of two result in tragedy." Martin Seligman, the eminent psychologist, notes that the lack of meaning in our society today has reached epidemic proportions. He emphasizes that finding meaning requires "an attachment to something larger than ourselves."

All of these smart men and women simply repeat in different words what Jesus tells every believer. "If you want to save your life, lose it. The man that loses his life saves it." That paraphrase explains Jesus' teaching that believers find meaning and purpose in life when we plunge ourselves in a calling and mission greater than ourselves. Those who have a sense of purpose are able to deal with life. Martin Luther King said, "Any man who has not found something for which he is willing to die, is not fit to live." When we find our purpose, then we achieve balance and sanity in a crazy world.

Keep Your Eye on Jesus

Finally, brothers and sisters, we are able to overcome the craziness of this world when we are able to keep our eyes on Jesus. That's when we remember that despite difficult times, all is well.

In a crazy world of discrimination and hatred, Martin Luther King saw Jesus and maintained his dream of a future reality where love and peace would abide. Considering the times in which he lived, it was a crazy, but since he knew the Lord, it made a whole lot of sense!

In the crazy world of Nazi Germany, German theologian Dietrich Bon Hoeffer endured two years in a Nazi concentration camp clinging to his belief that God loves everyone even Jews and Blacks. Considering that he was about to be executed for his beliefs, it was a crazy position, but he knew the Lord and that made a whole lot of sense.

In this crazy world, believers still maintain a vibrant hope. As Rubin Alves put it, "Hope is hearing the melody of the future, faith is to dance it."

David dance nearly naked, it was crazy, but considering the blessing he enjoyed, to him it made a whole lot of sense!

On the day of Pentecost when the Holy Spirit descended, folks thought believers were crazy and drunk. However, they were not crazy; they were in the presence of God and that made a whole lot of sense!

It may seem crazy to praise God when you're sick, but since God is able to heal the sick, it's not crazy, it makes a whole lot of sense!

It may seem crazy to praise God when you don't have any money in your pocket, but since the word of God declares that, "the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof" then praising God makes a whole lot of sense!

It may seem crazy to praise God when a loved one has died, but since Jesus has promised us life after death with him in heaven, then praising God makes a whole lot of sense!

It may seem crazy but believers are able to smile in the midst of troubles and stand firm in the midst of strong winds, because God is still on the throne. It may seem crazy but it makes a whole lot of sense.

Faith in God takes an ugly situation and makes it beautiful

Faith in God finds

—Strength in the middle of weakness; success in the midst of failure; peace in the midst of confusion; joy in the midst of sadness; comfort in the midst of loneliness.

In closing, I'm reminded of the true story of Horatio Spafford, who was a successful businessman who suffered extreme financial failure. His son died and the world seemed to topple around him. To take a rest he sent his wife and four children overseas on a boat to later join them. But the ship had a wreck and his four children died along with others. As he joined his grieving wife, Spafford read his bible and considered all that had happened to him and looked at the waters that had buried his children. His whole world had been destroyed, but yet he sat down and wrote these words, "When peace, like a river, attendeth my way, when sorrows like sea billows roll, whatever my lot, thou has taught me to say, it is well, it is well with my soul!"

I don't know about you but I have learned how to say, "It is well!"

Storms may rise, but it is well!

Winds may blow, but it is well!

It is well because Jesus, my fortress in the storm is on board!

It is well because he died, and rose for my salvation!

It may seem crazy, but I still declare, It is well! It is well, with my soul!

..and that makes a whole lot of sense!

The Lord has blessed this house

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE: "And the LORD said unto him, I have heard thy prayer and thy supplication, that thou hast made before me: I have hallowed this house, which thou hast built, to put my name there for ever; and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually." 1 Kings 9:3

Introduction

Have you ever had an occasion to look at your entire family and say to yourself the Lord has truly blessed this family. Every family has experienced a variety of situations over the years. Some of those situations have been joyful while others were painful. But, in those moments when we reflect upon our family, considering both the good and the bad; we still conclude that the Lord has blessed this house.

On special days, we reflect on the journey we have taken to reach this point. We see the mountains and the valleys in which we have spent so much time sharing each others joy or crying on each others shoulder. When we sort out the good days from the bad day's we still conclude that the Lord has blessed this house.

Though the years have brought us a mixed bag of health and sickness; youth and age; strength and weakness; through it all we still conclude that the Lord has blessed this house.

Though we have trudged through financial hard times when money was extremely tight or none existent, before seeing our way through, we still conclude that the Lord has blessed this house.

Though the years have sometime brought us disappointment, death and disability that challenged the very core of our faith, now looking back, we still conclude, that the Lord has blessed this house.

In a similar manner church families also reflect. Churches also see good times and bad times; fat years and lean years; mountain years and valley experiences. When churches pause to reflect, churches often respond in the same way as the individual family; "the Lord has blessed this house."

As Christians, we pause to review our journey so far with the Spirit of gratitude; fully aware that the God we serve has blessed us more than we deserve. When we think of the long journey, we can only conclude that the Lord has blessed this house.

Exposition

This text focuses upon God's response to a prayer made by King Solomon.

Early in his reign, Solomon asked God for wisdom to lead the people. Later in his reign asked for God's blessings upon his plans to build a house for God. This text focuses upon God's answer to Solomon's request. In his answer God reveals that the temple constructed by Solomon's hand was an acceptable offering. In verse three God says, "I have hallowed this house." It is a noteworthy phrase because the fact that God hallowed this house meant that he had consecrated it for divine purposes. It was offered by the hands of men; it was accepted by the power of an eternal God. It was God's prerogative to hallow it—to sanctify or consecrate it. Matthew Henry says, "Men cannot make a place holy, yet what we, in sincerity, devote to God, we may hope he will graciously accept as his; and his eyes and his heart shall be upon it. Those whom God hallows or sanctifies, whom he sets apart for himself, have his eye, his heart, his love and care, and this perpetually." God promised Solomon that he would establish him and his descendants upon the throne of Israel for ever, provided they served him with an upright heart.

Solomon dedicated a building and God hallowed it. However, in the New Testament we are told God no longer lives in a building. Instead he lives with the body of every believer because our bodies are the temple of the living God. 1 Corinthians 6:19 says, "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? " New Testament Christians do not refer to any building as the "house of God." Church buildings are not the houses of God — believers are.. When believers gather together in one place, the whole place becomes the temple of the living God; God dwelling among his people by the Spirit. Jesus said in Matthew 18:20, "Where two or three are gathered together, there am I in their very midst.

While Solomon acknowledged God's blessing of the house of stone,wood, gold and silver; believers praise God for blessing their temple, which is their bodies.

Like Solomon, when we look back, we see that God has blessed this house.

Blessed The facility

God told Solomon, "I have hallowed this house" the immediate reference was to the temple. The temple was an elaborate construction. Using money that David stored for the project and taxes, Solomon began the project with a sum that is estimated at two to three billion dollars. It took seven years to build the temple with the labor of 183,000 Jews and strangers, 153,600 Canaanites, 80,000 hewers of wood and stone, and 3600 overseers. The parts were all prepared at a distance from the site of the building, and when they were brought together the whole immense structure was erected without the sound of hammer, axe or any tool of iron. (1 Kings 6:7). The facility was huge and elaborate.

The house was designed as the house of God, not for the people; therefore there were no pews in it and only priests, by strict rules, were even allowed inside. God said, "I have Hallowed this house."

The homes of believers are special places, hallowed by God. Our houses should be special. They should be places where God lives because our houses are where God lives.

Have you wondered why you can live in a fine hotel for several days, but yearn to get back to your house, which often is without the luxuries of a five star hotel? The bed in the hotel was nice, but there is no bed like the bed in your house. Your bathtub, your chair, room, sofa..they all seem special. For the believers the meaning is simple God has "hallowed this house." We should be careful about what happens in "this house" because God has hallowed it. Cursing, alcoholic beverages, lewdness, illegal drugs and ungodly activity should be out of place in any house which God has hallowed.

It is the same with church facilities. They are the places where we learn, fellowship and worship. They may not be as elaborate as those of others but they have meaning to us because God has "hallowed this house."

Blessed the Family

Solomon's blessing extended beyond the facility, it reached to his family. God promised Solomon the same blessing that he gave to David his father. He promised to bless his family as long as it remained within the arms of God. It was a family blessing for the House of David.

The term "house" is often used in the bible to refer to an extended family. The "House of David" refers not to the facility or his dwelling place but to his family. The House of Abraham or the House of Jacob referred to family. This makes God's words to Solomon even more meaningful, "I have hallowed this house" or this family.

Anniversaries are family celebrations. As the church celebrates, it also marks the celebration of family involvement and fellowship with the church family. Older families, celebrate their memories of learning and sharing burdens and moments of happiness with the church. New families celebrate new beginnings and expectations. Church anniversaries are times of family celebration and happiness because it is not just the anniversary of the church, but a celebration of the blessing that God has shared with every family within the church.

The church anniversary is a family celebration because its strength is tied to the success and welfare of its families. The old maxim is true, "So goes the family, so goes the church."

Families should celebrate because it is with the church that they said their speeches, performed in plays, played the piano, danced spiritual dances, sang in the choir, spoke, taught, learned, traveled, wrote, laughed, cried, married and buried their dead.

Families should celebrate because it is with the church, that families have found counseling in times of trouble, help in times of need, and even reprimand when it was going in the wrong direction!

Families celebrate because God has "hallowed this house" and this family.

Blessed Legacy

Solomon's blessing began with the temple, extended to his family and ended with his legacy. A legacy is something that is passed from one generation to the next. It is a heritage of custom, ritual and expectations that are intrinsic to a family and inseparable from its sense of purpose and destiny. In verse five of the text God promised, "I will establish the throne of thy kingdom upon Israel for ever, as I promised to David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Israel." That's a promise of legacy. It's a promise to Solomon's posterity. It's a promise that House of David would be sustained because God has "Hallowed this house."

Every family has a legacy. Many today live in houses paid for by their parents, own land left to them by their ancestors, and are the recipients of benefits that have been provided by someone in a previous generation. Very few people rise high without drawing on the resources of someone who loans them the benefit of their treasure or good name.

Likewise, no church can celebrate its anniversary without reflecting on those who plowed the ground and planted the seeds of faith to bring it to its present point. Many church founders have gone to their rewards; their work lives on after them.

They left a legacy of tradition, custom, pride an even idiosyncrasies that have inspired us and moved us to climb higher toward our eventual destiny.

The memories of the deacons, ushers, choir members, Sunday School teachers and youth leaders who have gone before us linger in our mind. When we reflect, we see how God "hallowed" their lives as they pushed us one step closer to the ideal.

We celebrate the old warriors who, without pianos organs, praised God on dirt and sawdust floors and lifted their voices high!

We celebrate the old warriors who, without formal education learned and taught the word of God to us until it was etched in our hearts

We celebrate the old warriors who declared, "I know I am a child of God, although I move so slow!"

We celebrate them because God has "hallowed this house."

There's a blessing in this house

Finally, brothers and sisters, while we celebrate our history, heritage and legacy, we must also remember that there's still a blessing in this house!

God's promise to Solomon was not a one time pronouncement on the day of dedication, it is a statement of truth to all generations. There is a blessing in this house!

There is a blessing in this church family!

There is a blessing in this fellowship!

There is a blessing because God has "Hallowed this house."

Today brothers and sisters, every believer should resolve to be faithful to the church because there is a blessing in this house!

The church is more than a mere religious institution it is a fellowship of the redeemed who all believe that there is a blessing in this house!

The church is more than an organization, it is a living organism of those who have been saved by grace, born again and work together because they believe there is a blessing in this house!

The church is a fellowship of those who are washed in the blood and sanctified for the service of the Lord. The church is an army of saints who all believe there is a blessing in this house!

The church is a bond of believers who have come to learn that God is a mighty present help in a time of trouble!

There are those who believe that those who worship with the church waste their time, but we know that there is a blessing in this house!

There are those who laugh at our faith in an unseen God and our weekly pilgrimage to be in his presence, but we don't laugh because we know that there is a blessing in this house!

I don't know about you, but I've found out that when God blesses; it's a real blessing.

When God blesses the impossible becomes possible!

When God blesses the unreachable becomes reachable!

When God blesses the unattainable becomes attainable!

God blesses in this house. We don't know how he does it, but he does!

Maybe that's why the songwriter wrote, "There's a blessing in this house for you. Even though you can't see it the Lord knows you need it! There's blessing in this house for you!

It's a blessing that was paid for on an old rugged cross!

It's a blessing that was secured with a crown of thorns!

It's a blessing that was guaranteed when Jesus died out on Calvary!

But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

He's still blessing…

He's still blessing this house today!

SCRIPTURE: O house of Israel, cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the LORD. Behold, as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel. Jeremiah 18:6

Introduction

Have you ever read a fairy tale? Fairy tales are children's stories about unbelievable things that happen in other worlds to funny, amusing and amazing characters that in many ways emulate and imitate the people children see in the real world. In fairy tales, children learn about good and evil and they dream. There is always a witch or evil person and simple but understandable characters always represent good. There are hundreds of short fairy tales. One full-length fairy tale of the 1930's was the "Wizard of Oz" it was complete with a good witch, a bad witch, a tin man, a scarecrow, a lion, Dorothy and a dog named Toto. Everyone knew the tales were not true, but we dreamed of the Emerald City of Oz and believed that if we could be as courageous as Dorothy could we'd get home one day.

Every generation has its fairy tales. There has been a storm of protest over the five books of British author J.K. Rowling about a young British boy who is plunged into the magical world of Hogwarts to fight evil and champion good. The series is a modern day fairy tale complete with all of the figures of most fairy tales, witches, magic and goblins. The protest over the books is that many think they encourage children to believe in the occult.

Critics of the books say children will be attracted to Satanic forces as well as experiment with magic and the occult because of reading the books and watching the movies that follow. There have been book burnings and revival crusades around the world against the Harry Potter books. The protests have proven the old maxim to be true, if you want someone to do something, "tell them not to do it." As a result, over 150 million copies of the Harry Potter books have been sold.

Connie Neal in her book, "What's a Christian to do with Harry Potter?" suggests that there are many parallels between the fairytale world of Harry Potter and that of young believers. She suggests that Christian parents should help children see the parallels and use Harry Potter as a tool in the Christian faith, like any fairy tale, rather than view it as heretic literature that should be banned.

Who is Harry Potter? Young Harry Potter is a fictional character who lived with harsh relatives called the Dursleys, where he was forced to sleep in a closet at the foot of the stairway. Soon he realized that that he had some very special powers.

One day he a special invitation to visit the land of the Hogwarts, a magical parallel world that exists along side this world. Harry was invited and convinced that if he entered into this parallel world that he would find his true destiny. If he chose to accept the invitation, he would be shown how to enter the magical world by stepping through an invisible transport station between tracks nine and ten. Once in the world of the Hogwarts he would be schooled in the magical arts and prepared to meet his destiny.

Once in the magical realm he attended school at the Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. Young Harry was to be the champion of good over evil, but before doing so however, he would have to face many evil persons and use the magic that he learns in the world of the Hogwarts to save himself and others depending on him.

Harry Potter is a modern fairy-tale, much like Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, Cinderella, Hansel and Gretel, Alice in Wonderland, Little Red Riding Hood or the three Little Pigs. In fantasy worlds like these, good always wins and evil loses.

Children need to understand the complicated world in which we live. Fairytales help young minds sort things out and invite them to dream about magical places where evil does not win and people do live happily ever after.

Is there such a place? Is there a miraculous kingdom beyond the looking glass, where love will abide and the evil wolves, trolls and goblins will not exist?

Can there possibly be a place where no child will ever attend another funeral, see another relative get sick or be hurt so badly that he or she cries? Can there be such a magical place where the fun of a good day never ends because there will be no night? Is it possible to find a place where no one gets old, no doors have locks and there are never any fires, drive by shootings or drug dealers?

Is there such a place where there are no more housing projects, rent collectors, nights without utilities, or fear of any knock on the door at night?

Wouldn't it be nice if there were a place where the streets were made with gold, all houses were mansions, and peace was everywhere and everyday would be Christmas day forever?

Today, the good news is that there is such a place! Unlike Harry Potter, you will not find it in the land of Hogwarts. It is called the kingdom of Heaven. There is nothing magic about it. It is no fairy-tale.

It is a land prepared by God himself for every believer.

As Christians, we see the troubles of this world and dream about a better place. As children we played in fantasy worlds of make believe. As we grew in grace, we soon learned that our Lord is not a fantasy or make believe but he is real and is alive today.

In the Potter's House

Every believer who seeks to understand his own relationship should consider three houses, the first of which is the Potter's House.

Jeremiah 18 focuses on God telling the prophet Jeremiah to visit the Potter's House to understand how Israel and each person is in the hand of God. Jeremiah went to this house and noticed a man who worked with clay, called a potter. The man molded and shaped the clay in a variety of ways. On some occasions, the potter noticed that there was trash or a foreign object in the clay so he tore it all down and rebuilt his creation. In verse six God asks, "Cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the LORD. Behold, as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand."

The lesson young believers learn first about the real world is that we are all in God's hands. He makes us, shapes us and molds us. Why would God want to do that? Because in the new world he is creating for us only certain kinds of people will live there. Galatians 5:22-23 gives us a clue as to the spirit of these people. They will possess love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, Meekness, and temperance. Like a piece of clay, God molds us and shapes us to prepare us for a life in the kingdom.

When we become believers, we tell God to hold us in his hands and have his way. His way is often different from the ways of those around us. At school, the Christian youth is often different from many others on campus. He or she talks different, studies different and relates to others differently. They are not different in a Nerdy way, but different in a good way that singles them out as individuals who are obviously being shaped and molded for some great work.

It becomes obvious to those who watch Christian youth that they have been to the Potter's house and are being guided by the master's hand.

The Doer's House

Matthew 7:25 focuses on another house, which is the next step needed to prepare for the Kingdom of God. It's the doer's house. Jesus said people who hear his words and teachings and actually live by them will be like a man that built his house upon a strong foundation or a rock, which stood when storms came. Jesus said, "And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock."

The house in this illustration is the life direction of the individual believer. It is personal. It is direct. The person who expects to enter the kingdom of heaven must be a person who actually believes in and lives by the principles of Christ.

To be a doer, we must hear the gospel preached, believe what we have heard then act on what we believe. Belief and repentance are essential, even for young people.

There is an old myth that says a child is free to sin because his sins are counted toward his parents. The reality is that no parent is held responsible for the sins of their children. A child who does not know right from wrong is covered by grace or the love of God alone. A child who knows right from wrong and chooses to do wrong will answer to God for himself, even if he is six, eight or 10 years old.

A child who builds his life on the right decides to do the right thing. Being honest is the right thing. Refusing to steal is the right thing. Honoring your word is the right thing. Giving your best is the right thing. Living a life that is based on what you learned in Sunday School and bible study is the right thing. It's what Christ talked about when he referred to building your house on a solid foundation.

These are difficult times, but if you get a reputation for always trying to do what is right, you will weather the difficult times that will come in your life.

There is an old saying that says, "When you are right, God joins your fight. When you are wrong, you fight alone."

Maybe that's why the songwriter declares, "In times like these, we need an anchor. In times like these, we need a savior. Be very sure. Be very sure. Your anchor holds and grips the solid rock."

My Father's House

Finally, the believer who has been to the Potter's House and has secured a Doer's House is ready to go to "My Father's House."

Jesus constantly talked about his father's house. It is the final destination of every believer, including young people, who have been the Potter's House and built their houses on the solid rock.

"My Father's House" is a reference to the kingdom of heaven. It is a reference to the coming place where the saints of God will spend eternity.

While Harry Potter's land of the Hogwarts is a fantasy world of make believe and magic, the Kingdom of Heaven will be a real place.

In John 14 Jesus told his disciples that he is presently preparing a place for all believers in his father's house. In verse two he said, "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you."

Where is "My father's house?" The entire universe is my father's house! It is too big to even imagine and comprehend. Isaiah 66:1 says, ".. The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest?"

In "My Father's House" there are many "abiding places" that will provide a homeland for the soul.

Jesus said he's going to prepare a place for us. Why would he need to prepare a place for us? It's because he knew then what scientists now call the second law of thermodynamics; that this world is winding down! Time is coming to an end.

As we begin to hear of wars and rumors of wars, we hear Jesus say, "I go to prepare a place for you."

As we begin to hear of earthquakes, famines and pestilences in diverse places, we hear Jesus say, "I go to prepare a place for you."

As we begin to hear of global warming, diminished ozone protection, and cloning of human beings, we hear Jesus say, "I go to prepare a place for you."

Come and go with me, not to Harry Potter's House, but to my father's house!

In my father's house, the wicked will cease from troubling!

In my father's house, the weary will be at rest!

In my father's house, every mountain will be made low!

In my father's house, the crooked places will be made straight!

In my father's house, everyday will be Sunday. It's always howdy and never good bye!

Bye and bye when the morning comes, we'll tell the story of how we've overcome.

We'll tell the story about Jesus, and how he saved our souls!
We'll tell the story of how he died out on Calvary and arose from the grave!
Come and go with me to my father's house!
There is joy! Joy!
Joy!
..Not in Harry's Potter's house..
But in my father's house!

Victory Songs for Every Day Battles

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE:"And when he had consulted with the people, he appointed singers unto the LORD, and that should praise the beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army, and to say, Praise the LORD; for his mercy endureth for ever. And when they began to sing and to praise, the LORD set ambushments against the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, which were come against Judah; and they were smitten. For the children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy them: and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped to destroy F83 another. And when Judah came toward the watch tower in the wilderness, they looked unto the multitude, and, behold, they were dead bodies fallen to the earth, and none escaped. 2 Chronicle 20:21-24.

Introduction

Have you ever reached a low point when you could not even smile? Those days come when you leave for work or school with a heavy load on your shoulder and you feel low. Times such as these come when we face difficult tasks, moments of uncertainty, or feel overwhelmed by the enormity of a problem. Those around us notice our sullen demeanor and try to cheer us up, because the look of fear or defeat is apparent in our eyes. Whenever a believer is caught off guard, those days do come. Most of the time, however, believers constantly remind themselves that no circumstance or weapon formed against them can prosper, if their cause is just and God has promised a victory. In our darkness midnight we still have a song to sing.

There is never a single day when the enemy, Satan, does not attempt to surround the people of God. His motive is to seek and destroy.

Since there is never a day that the enemy is not waiting for an opportunity to ambush us, then Saints should constantly be aware of his presence and prayerfully approach each day.

Our days should begin with a song of victory that begins when we tell Satan to get behind, because victory is mine!

Satan doesn't know what to do when a saint begins to praise the Lord. Confusion sets in and he is frustrated.

Praising God is both an act of affirmation and an act of gratitude. It is a statement of faith in what's coming-affirmation; and a statement of thanks for what has been done-gratitude. When Satan does his best to defeat a believer and he keeps on singing praises to God, he doesn't know what to do.

A country preacher sold a mule to a friend, and told him that the mule was not an ordinary mule, he was a holy mule that had been trained to run in an instant fast trot anytime he heard the words, "Praise the Lord," and to stop only when the rider said, "Amen."

The buyer mounted the beast and commanded, "Praise the Lord," and the mule shot off like a rocket. The startled rider panicked. "Whoa!" he screamed. The mule was headed straight for a cliff, "Whoa! Whoa! Whoa!" At the last second he remembered the minister's instructions. "Amen!" he shouted, and the mule screeched to a halt right at the edge of the cliff. As the new owner peered down at the valley below, he wiped his brow and sighed, "Praise the Lord." -Without waiting a second, the mule took off!

As Christians, we begin each day with a song of victory on our lips. The day ahead will include several skirmishes and a battle or two. We sing a song a song of victory as we walk out of our doors because the battles ahead are not ours but the Lord's.

Exposition

This text focuses on a battle in Israel's history that wasn't fought by soldiers but was led by the choir.

Jehoshaphat was the King of Israel at the time of this text. He spent most of his reign trying to do what was right in the sight of the Lord. He made the worship of God the primary religion of the land again. He established mobile schools run by the prophets to go to the various sections of the land. In all his ways he attempted to do what was right and pleasing to God.

Despite his goodness, enemies formed against him. Conspiracies and coalitions were put together by Moabite and Ammonites. Another invading horde of desperado came in from the North to join the invasion parties. None of the groups that rose up against Jehoshaphat were natural allies. They were suspicious of each other, greedy and treacherous.

When Jehoshaphat learned that they had formed a powerful alliance to destroy his people he called the people to the house of God and prayed. He called for a national season of fasting and prayer. (V. 3 and 4). Hebrew kings that were faithful to God often did just as Jehoshaphat did, they called on God for answers to pressing national dilemmas. In verses 6-12 he prayed to God and listed all the ways he had been loyal and faithful. Then he asked God to protect the people from their enemies.

In verses 14-18 God answered Jehoshaphat by sending the prophet Jahaziel to deliver the oracle from the God. The prophet told him that the battle that Jehoshaphat was about to fight would not be his battle, but would be the Lord's.

It would be a complete victory.

There would be no doubts about its outcome and it would be complete and undeniable.

Jehoshaphat received the prophecy with reverence and gratitude. At verse 18, it is noted that he bowed his head in prayerful respect.

Because he had received the promise from God, Jehoshaphat did a strange thing. Instead of ordering his foot soldiers to ready themselves for a fight or that black smiths would make more swords. He called upon the singer and musicians, the entire tribe of Levites, which consisted of thousands of singers and musicians to lead the army singing and playing music that gave praise to God.

As the armies of Israel marched praising God without sword or shield, before they arrived all of the coalition of the Ammonites and Moabites turned on themselves in a dispute. The survivors of that group then clashed with the horde of Edmonites from up North. They fought so hard that they killed each other off, down to the last man.

When Israel came marching up the way with their hymnbooks, and musical instruments the battle had already been fought and their enemies lay sprawled on the ground.

It took them three full days to collect all of the gold, silver and other things of value from the dead bodies.

Just as God had promised, they won the battle. Their only weapons were songs of praise and musical instruments.

Three Times To Sing Praises

There are three times we should sing praises to God:

PRAISE BEFORE THE FIGHT: Before we begin each day we praise God for what is going to happen. It is our personal affirmation or statement of trust in the promise he has given us. We don't praise God to get a promise. We don't send the praise up SO a blessing will come down, we send the praise is because a blessing IS ALREADY coming down! Praise is the dynamic force that brings the immutable promises of God in contact with the quickening Spirit. Praise is not coercion; it is a catalyst. A catalyst is an agent that causes a reaction between two or more forces, and yet remains unaltered when the reaction is finished. The affirmation of praise is the same both before and after the victory is won! You can praise God today for what He has promised, and you can praise Him tomorrow for what He has accomplished. One songwriter said, "You don't have to wait until the battle is over, shout now!"

PRAISE GOD DURING THE BATTLE: Praising God does not insulate us from facing the enemy. Jehoshaphat received the promise of God that he would be victorious, but he still had to face the enemy. The difference is that that they had the promise of the Lord. Upon hearing God's promise of victory, they began to praise the LORD! Moab was still waiting in the trenches. Ammon was preparing for the battle. The enemies on Mt. Seir were sharpening their swords. The battle plans were drawn. Alliances had been made. The enemy was just as real, and just as ready to fight. The only difference was Judah now had a promise. J. O. Sanders says, "Peace is not the absence of trouble but the presence of God!" Therefore, we don't praise God because there are no battles but because he is with us in the battle. We don't praise him because all of our enemies have given up on us but because despite their presence we have the promise of victory.

PRAISE AFTER THE BATTLE: The most obvious time to praise the Lord is after a battle has been won. Then it is a statement of gratitude for victory.

In Exodus 15, Moses sang a song of praise to God after Israel's enemies were defeated and drowned in the Red Sea. In Exodus 15:1 Moses said, "I will sing a song unto the Lord for he hath triumphed gloriously.."

While it is a good thing to praise God for blessings received, believers must be careful with our praises. We should not keep God on probation, withholding our praises until he gives us something we want or responds to our circumstance in the way we desire. Our praise should not take on a complimentary air that says, "You did a good job, God, keep up the good work!" Our praise to God should not be conditional. We praise God because he is good, not because we won! We praise God because he is merciful, not because we were victorious. Even if things don't turn out the way we want, we praise God anyway, because he is good and his mercy endureth forever.

Keep Singing your song

Finally, brothers and sisters every saint should always stay close enough to God to keep singing your song.

In Psalm 66:1 David said, "Make a joyful noise unto God, all ye lands." The indication is that we should prepare to sing a song to praise to God in any circumstance.

In 2 Corinthians 4:8-9 Paul said, "We are hard pressed on every side but not crushed, perplexed but not in despair: persecuted but not abandoned, struck down but not destroyed." No matter what the situation, if God has made you promise, let God fight the battle and keep singing your song.

In 2 Corinthians 6:9 Paul said Christians were known yet regarded as unknown, dying yet live on; beaten yet not killed; sorrowful yet always rejoicing; poor yet making many rich; having nothing, yet possessing everything!

No matter how tough the battle, if God has made you a promise, keep singing your song.

No matter how difficult the road ahead, keep singing your song!

In the midst of sickness and despair, keep singing your song!

If you have a song, you can encourage yourself with a melodic reminder that the battle is not yours but the Lord's.

Therefore we should be careful not let any circumstance steal our soul, lest we forget the victory that's on the way.

Paul showed us that if you have a song of faith, you can sing your way out of jail!

You may sing like a frog, but don't let anybody take your sing!

Your voice may be so bad that that the woodpecker stops pecking and the humming bird stops humming, but don't lose your song.

You may be in the shower, it's alright to sing your song!

You may be driving along in your car, it's alright to sing your song!

You may be carrying out your duties at work, it's alright to hum your song!

Whenever you lose your song, you lose your hope! That's what happened to Israel while it was exile. They were in captivity, a long ways from home. They hung their harps on the Willow Trees and said, “How can we sing Zion’s songs in a strange land.

As saints, we should never let anyone take away our song.

You may lose friends but don’t lose your song! That’s what the songwriter meant when he said, “Winds may blow, friends may go. But he’s always right there by my side.”

You may lose your time, but don’t lose your song. That’s when you say, “I do not know how long t’will be, nor what the future holds for me. But this I know, if Jesus leads me. I shall get home someday!”

You may lose your way, but don’t lose your song. That when you sing, “I said to my soul, take courage oh, the Lord will make a way somehow!”

You may feel abandoned, but don’t lose your song. That’s when you sing, “Be not dismayed whatever betide, God will take care of you. Beneath his wings of love abide, God will take care of you. Through every day, over all the way, he will take care of you!”

You may be troubled by your test, but don’t lose your testimony!

In the midst of trouble, keep singing your song!

In the midst of bad times and heartache, keep singing your song!

In the midst of persecution, keep singing your song!

In the midst of indecision and doubt, keep singing your song!

“I sing because I’m happy. I sing because I’m free. For his eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me!

With a song on your lips, keep telling the world about Jesus!

Tell them how he died out on Calvary!

Tell them how he arose after three days and nights with all power in his hands!

Keep telling the world that the same love that lifted him, lifted me one day; when noting else could help, love lifted me!

When Love Don't Love Back!

A Sermon By Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 8, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." John 1:11

Introduction

Have you ever loved someone and he or she didn't love you back? Many people today are frustrated because they seem to give their all to others but never get back anything close to what they give. Sometimes it involves married couples. At other times, it involves people who are dating. This feeling of frustration sometimes involves relationships between parents and children or between siblings. It is a part of human nature to want our acts of love appreciated and returned. When our affections are not returned we are thrown for a loop and suffer as a result.

There are four types of love. All but one of them requires love to love back to exist. Eros, or romantic love is the kind of love that generally exists in romance. It operates at its best when both partners love back. Philia, or brotherly love also works best when it is returned. Acts of brotherly love, compassion and friendship thrive when they are returned by the recipient in some way. Storge, or the love that exists between family members such as father to son, mother and daughter is also dependent, to a great extent upon reciprocity. When a mother loves a child, this type of love grows best when the mother is loved back.

The ideal type of love however is Agape. It is the kind of love that God has for everyone. It is the kind of love that God has; it does not require the recipient to love back. It exists and even grows stronger even if it is not returned. Most of us spend our lives trying to achieve this level of love. Some parents have achieved it for their children. They love, even though they are not being loved back. Some who work to help their fellowman, continue to show love even though the people they help seldom love them back and often hurt them. There are some in relationships who have perfected Agape love to the point they have perfected the ability to love a spouse even when that love is not returned.

Sometimes we spend many years running around in circles, frustrating ourselves until we learned that we've been involved in one sided love affairs. Consider the man who filed for a divorce against his wife. When he stormed out of the house, he said he would never come back again. Two weeks later, he wrote her a very beautiful love letter that said, “Darling, I am so angry with myself. You have tried to love me but I wouldn’t love you back. You gave me your heart and I broke it. You gave me your affections and I trampled them. You gave me your love and I squandered it. I now realize what a fool I have been. I can’t sleep thinking about you. Being away from you is breaking my heart. I want to love you, like you have loved me and enjoy our life together as partners. Will you forgive me?” –With All my love, your husband. P.S., Congratulations on winning the $100 million lottery last week!-There’s nothing like $100 million to jolt us into reality!

As Christians, we are learning to love as God loves. Our goal is to perfect the act of perfect love. He has given us the example. He loved us when we wouldn’t love him back. Even in our stubbornness, he loved us anyway. That’s the kind of love we are striving to achieve. Most of us have not achieved it yet, but working on it everyday!

Exposition

This text shows us how God showed loved to the world but his love was not received.

John tells us in a moment, the nature of God’s love for the world. God loved the world with intensity. He loved the world so much that he sent the word, to be born among men, to show us how to really love each other in response to God’s love.

The verse, “He came to his own and his own received him not” has a twofold meaning according to Ray Stedman. The phrase “He came to his own” in the neuter gender means he came to his own home, his own things and his own place. The second time “his own” is used it is in the masculine gender implying his own associates, his own relatives, his own family; “received him not.”

The Jews were Jesus’ own people. Palestine was his own place, because it was promised to Abraham generations before. He came to show love to his own people in his own place and they received him not.

What was Jesus’ response? He loved them anyway. He was wounded for their transgressions and bruised for their iniquities.

He came in love. They did not love him back.

He loved them anyway.

Track the way love acts

Love has telltale signs. 1 Corinthians 13 4-7 tells us how love acts. “Love suffereth long and is kind. Love envieth not. Love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up. Doth not behave itself unseemly. Seeketh not her own. Is not easily provoked. Thinketh no evil. Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in truth. Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.”

It understands, endures, believes, trusts, and turns itself inside out as it considers how one would like to be treated in the same circumstance.

Love is not the possession of a thing. Rarely will those who feel like they are a thing, love back.

Love is not the manipulation of a tool to achieve another end. Those who feel they are being used rather than truly loved, rarely love back.

Love is not the ownership of a slave. Those who feel denigrated to little more than a servant have difficulty loving back.

When love doesn't love back, perhaps we should check to see whether what are giving is really love at all.

We Love like that, when we've been loved like that It's easy to love when you have been loved. It's harder if you have never had an example of real love in action. God has given an example of love for all of us to pattern after, even if we have not seen it in operation in our own experience.

"Watch what God does, and then you do it, like children who learn proper behavior from their parents. Mostly what God does is love you. Keep company with him and learn a life of love. Observe how Christ loved us. His love was not cautious but extravagant. He didn't love in order to get something from us but to give everything of himself to us. Love like that." Ephesians 5:1-2.

We have a tendency to love others the way we have been loved. If we have not received the fullness of love, we do not complete give the fullness of love to others. When we have been loved, we know what it means to love. God showed us what it means to be loved when the word became flesh and dwelled among men.

Paul Jones says "Christian love is one's total response to being totally loved without deserve, without limit, and without qualification." God loves us without deserve, without limit, and without qualification. We love like that, when we've been loved like that.

We can love back, when we recognized that we have been loved like that.

Ready to love

Sometimes love doesn't love back because everything is not in place.

Love does not love back if the right person comes along but at the wrong time in our lives. The right person often comes but we are not ready for love. We are not ready to love unconditionally. We want to be loved but we have not reached the point in our lives when we want love someone else the way we want to be loved. We can't be loved because we are not ready to be loved. Love happens when we are ready to love and be loved, not simply be the recipient of love.

Love does not love back if the time is right, but we have the wrong person. We are ready to love. We are ready to share and show compassion but the person we have chosen is not ready to love. The person is ready for good times but not ready to love. The persons\ is ready for sex, but not ready to love. The person is ready for sharing an apartment, splitting the bills and shacking, but not ready to love. When that happens, we love but love doesn't love back.

God figures into the equation when he creates within each person the desire to give love without considering or expecting to be loved back. When both partners love like God loves they discover instantly that they have right person; and because they both know God, the time is right.

When this happens, they love and love back at the same time.

Love until it no longer hurts

We are learning to love as God loves. In the process of growing stronger in our capacity to love, all but a fortunate few grow through a period of hurt. We hurt because we expect to be loved back and our partners, family members or friends never quite meet our expectations.

When you love, do not expect something in return. Love with all your heart.... until it hurts... and until it no longer hurts."

It hurts to love and not be loved back.

It hurts to be concerned, but the one you are concerned about is not concerned. Be concerned until you no longer expect concern to be returned.

It hurts to support the one you love but the one you love does not appreciate your support. Support until you no longer expect appreciation for your support.

It hurts to give of yourself to the one you love but the one you love does not notice your giving or even try to give back. Give until you no longer expect the one you love to give back, just to receive.

It hurts to be injured in your spirit by the one you love because of betrayed trust and repeated breaches of faith. Keep hoping and trusting until it no longer hurts. God compensates you for trust betrayed and the injuries become less noticeable.

Love keeps coming back

Finally, brother and sisters, we should consider that the most salient feature of Godly love is that love keeps coming back!

Ibra January notes that God's love in its simplest sense is that it keeps coming again and again, and again, and again, and again!

We are not quite able to understand God's love but there are times in our experience when we have seen it in action.

Renita Weems, an African-American scholar and theologian, writes this about Godly love in the context of a growing relationship:

"If our hearts could speak, they'd confess that we've walked away from each other untold times. We've failed to honor each other with the names we've called each other to each other's face and behind each others back; cursed each other for not recording checks; felt revulsion for each others bodily sicknesses and have gone off in our minds and married, bought homes, and had children with others, fitter and finer than the one were wedded; to all of this we have done millions of times. And we've returned to each other again and again, remarkably, mysteriously, wondrously, begging each others forgiveness, sheepishly, desperately, earnestly, disremembering what it was that drove us away, pledging again to talk before giving in to the urge to walk away. We keep coming back to each other. To keep a vow is not to keep from breaking it but to keep trying to discover its meaning."

To know real love is to know how to keep coming back, forgiving and starting again and again.

This is the kind of love Jesus spoke of when he said in John 15:13 "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

We will never know what to do when love does not love back until we know the Lord in a special way. It's then that we can see how he loves us. As we duplicate how he loves us, we learn what to do when love does not love back!

To know what to do we must know the Lord and comprehend the depth of his love.

The Savior could have remained in the celestial realms of paradise, yet he chose a lowly birth in a Bethlehem stable.

He could have remained seated in the courts of heaven, yet he pulled off his royal robes walked the dusty streets of Galilee.

He could have spent the remainder of eternity, listening to angels extol the greatness of his name; but he chose to suffer humiliation and insult at the hands of people he came to save.

He loved the world, but the world received him not!
He loved the world, but the world rejected him!
He loved the world, but the world put a crown of thorns on his head!
He loved the world, but the world put a purple robe on his shoulder!
He loved the world, but the world nailed him to an old rugged cross!
He loved the world, but the world stuck a spear in his side!
He loved the world, but the world didn't love back!
But Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!
He's still loving the world!
He's still lifting us up!
He's still lifting broken spirits!
He's still lifting bowed down heads!
He's still mending broken hearts!
Oh How I love Jesus! Oh How I love Jesus! Because he first loved me!

Eating Between Meals

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 16, 2003

SCRIPTURE: For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come. 1 Corinthians 11:26

Introduction

Have you ever eaten snacks between your meals? Most of us have enjoyed a fine meal only to find ourselves snacking on a variety of treats before the next meal. The typing quantity of our snacks differs from person to person. Chips, cookies, candies, and a variety of treats are commonplace for many people who nibble and crunch between every meal. Besides the fact that we increased our calorie intake as well as our sugar and carbohydrate levels, eating between meals has a tendency to dull our desire for the next meal.

Many children do not understand why their parents frown upon snacks between meals. They insist that even if they eat a candy bar, a bag of chips, a soda pop, and a sweet cake or two, they will still eat a hearty meal. Parents lead their children away from snacks between meals because they know that despite their children's bold mental appetites they know that eating between meals makes it harder to eat the main course.

Snacks in themselves are not detrimental to our health. Many snacks are both tasty and nutritious. In balance, they provide energy, and reasonable calorie intake when considered alone. However, in abundance, or preceding major meals snacks can have a negative effect.

There are many believers who have at one time or another, eaten a full meal at the Lord's table only to lose their appetite for the next meal, because in between time they have dined on a variety of snack foods. The snack foods have dulled their desire for real spiritual sustenance at the Lord's table. As a result, they're not hungry when it's time for the Lord's supper to be served because they have satisfied themselves with a variety of snack food. Because they're not hungry, some miss the Lord's supper altogether. Others dine out of habit but are not excited about what's on the table. In this sense, snack foods give believers the false impression that their needs have already been met because they are not hungry.

It's a main course that brings the nutrition necessary to sustain us. For the believer, the Lord's supper represents the main course. It's the time when he or she spiritually renews their vows to God and commits himself or herself to a life of faith that is rooted in our dependence on God.

As Christians, we appreciate the Lord's Supper because it symbolizes our relationship with Christ and his promises to us. From week to week and month to month, we live on those promises and we hunger for their renewal. When it comes to renewing our relationship with Christ, snack foods won't do.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul's explanation of the Lord's supper, its purpose and the frequency of its observance.

Early believers, especially in the church at Corinth, observed the Lord's supper frequently. The observances became so large that they became what was known as "love feasts." There was plenty of food and drink for everyone. Somewhere in the observance, the Corinthians lost sight of the real meaning of the Lord's supper. This prompted Paul to write the words of this text reminding them of its true meaning.

The Lord's Supper is a reminder of the sacrifice of Christ. The wine or juice used in the observance reminds believers of the blood of Christ which was shed for our sins. The bread is a reminder of Christ's body that was given as a ransom for our salvation.

Corinthians were warned that they should not come to the observances just to eat. In fact, in verse 34 believers were told to stay and home if they were hungry and attended the Lord's Supper just to eat.

Paul addressed the matter of frequency of the Lord's supper by using the words "as often" to describe the frequency of the observance. "As often" leaves the matter of frequency to local congregations. Thus, various congregations around the world have different levels of frequency. Some Eastern churches observe the Lord's supper only once a year. The Church of England requires its participants to observe the ordinance at least three times a year. Catholic churches generally observe it at nearly every mass. African-American congregations of nearly all denominations usually observe it once a month, with some describing it as their "pastoral" Sunday.

Many contend that things done too frequently lose their significance, thus long intervals exist between each observance. All agree that matters of frequency are not as significant as the meaning of the observance.

The Lord's Supper is a spiritual meal. Spiritually, we renew our vows to God and examine our relationship with him. It is a time of reflection and introspect, wherein we inspect the quality of our service to the kingdom. For many, it is a time when they see God clearer and with more meaning than any other worship service. They hunger for its return and make haste to find a seat at the Lord's Table.

There is a blessing at the table; that's why many hunger for the observance and protect the solemnity of the moment.

Between Meals

Since the Lord's supper represents the sacrifice of Christ and is a blessed moment in the life of a believer, what do we do between meals? Many believers are tempted to nibble on snacks between blessings and lose their hunger for God in the aftermath.

SWEET THINGS: There are many people who have a craving for sweet things between meals. Sweet things give a surge of energy and temporarily satisfy cravings. There are many who have a few sweet things that destroy their spiritual appetite. Men have sweet things. Women have sweet things. Sweet things, whatever they are, dull our hunger for spiritual things. In fact, there are many who lose their entire appetite for spiritual matters because they are living on a diet of sweet things.

NUTTY THINGS: There are many who have plunged themselves into "nutty things" that occupy their time and seem to satisfy their needs to the point that they have lost interest in spiritual things. As African-American men move into the middle class many routinely skip Sunday worship, even the Lord's supper to play a round or two of golf. Some women have found Sunday to be a perfect time to shop and browse the isle of their favorite store. One person's recreation is another person's "nutty thing" such as, sky diving, mountain climbing, high adventure treks or just sitting home and watching one sports event after another on television. It's easy for our recreation and pastimes to take the place of spiritual growth and strength. Those who exist on such a diet aren't very hungry for the things of God.

WET THINGS: There are still others who have developed a taste for "wet things" other than water. Beer, wine, and hard liquor have become regular fare for them to the point that they must have a "wet thing" associated with any activity. If they fish, they must have a "wet thing." If they hunt, watch television, or even mow the lawn, they must have a "wet thing." Over consumption of alcohol has been a destructive force that Has destroyed families, careers and lives. Those who must have "wet things" find little interest in the Lord's Supper which only offers a taste of grape juice that has no kick. They soon lose interest in spiritual things as they focus on their need for "wet things" to satisfy themselves.

The Main Course

Finally, brothers and sister, the Lord's supper is the celebration of a seven course meal, portions of which have been served to us all week.

Those who have dined in a five star restaurant are familiar with a seven course meal. If you have eaten a heavy load of snacks, very few people could actually eat a full seven course meal.

Depending on the restaurant, a seven course meal includes, (1) Breads and butter; 2)A salad 3)A soup or pasta, 4)A meat entrée 5)Fish or seafood Entrée 6)A desert and fruit 7)Coffee, Tea and cheeses.

God serves believers a seven course meal every time we come to the Lord's table. He prepares us with appetizers, feeds us two main courses and leaves us with dessert.

Yet, there is no room for such a meal if, in between the meals, all we have is a diet of snacks.

What does a believer do between one blessing and the next? Do we need a worldly snack to tide us over! Because we know the Lord provides us with a full table, believers avoid snacks between meals.

There are many that look at the full plate that the Lord offers and conclude that "he has prepared a table before me in the presence of mine enemies. He annointest my head with oil, my cup runneth over."

After a good meal, those who shared the meal, usually thank the person who provided and prepared the meal.

That's why those who have received blessings from the Lord, give him thanks everyday.

What should we do between blessings? We should praise the Lord!

Between one blessing and the next, we should be busy praising God!

Praise him because he is good and mercy endureth forever!

Praise him because of his wonderful works!

Praise him because he continues to give us a full plate every day of our lives!

Praise him because he came to earth, born of the virgin Mary!

Praise him because he lived among men for 33 years!

Praise him because he died on an old rugged cross for the remission of our sins!

Praise him because Early Sunday Morning he arose from the dead, with all power in his hands!

The Last School Bell

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 22, 2003

SCRIPTURE: Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the LORD my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it. Deuteronomy 4:5

Introduction

Do you remember answering school bells? Most of us remember the school bells. When we were students, they signaled the end of one class and the beginning of another. Sometimes, there were recess bells. At other times, there were lunch bells. A few times a year, there were fire drill bells. The ringing of each bell indicated that one process or another was either beginning or ending.

Generally, we have been conditioned to live by the bell. Like the proverbial Pavlov's dog, we respond to the ringing of the bells. In some Sunday schools, the superintendent rings a bell to begin worship or to begin class. In some stores and shops, we ring a bell to get service. Visitors at our door usually ring the doorbell. Farms and ranches generally have a dinner bell. There are wedding bells and there are church bells. There are warning bells and there are death bells.

There was a time when the ringing of a church bell during the week signaled death. The slow tones of the bell rang throughout the community as those who heard it wondered who had gone to meet their fate.

In 1631, John Donne a noted clergyman of his day, sensed the approach of death. He wrote his own funeral sermon and posed for a painting in his funeral shroud. He had seen the phases of his life and was comfortable with his end as he wrote these memorable words, " ....No man is an island, entire of itself...any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind; and therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee."

If ever a profession understands the reality of bells it would be the teaching profession. It seems at times that one bell or another governs the entire life of a teacher. The beginning of class is signaled by a bell. The end of the school day is also signaled by a bell. After many years on the job, some teachers dread hearing the first school bell of the year, and rejoice greatly when they hear the last school bell.

Between the first bell and the last bell teachers mold and shape young minds. Henry Adams once said, "A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops." Between the first bell and the last, teachers spend the bulk of their lives lecturing, preparing, scolding, begging, pasting, filling out reports, recording grades, checking papers, worrying about students, being frustrated with administrators, and staying up late at night searching for the best way to reach the children they teach. Between the first bell and the last bell, teachers prepare students for life; the best teachers prepare them for eternity as well.

There has been considerable debate about how much time teachers teach. Some feel that football and basketball coaches should be given extra compensation because they work long hours after class. Certainly, that claim is true, but it is also true of every good teacher. Long after the school bell closes a day, most teachers are still at work, investing in the lives of their students as tutors, sponsors, play directors, program planners, band leaders, dance instructors, trip coordinators and many other unknown, thankless and payless jobs. Even at home, teachers find themselves reading essays, preparing bulletin board material and working often into the wee hours of the night. Long after the bell tolls an end to the teaching day; good teachers linger out of a sense of pure dedication alone.

Between the first bell and the last bell teachers do what comes natural to them. They teach. That may seem easy to some, but most people know that "everybody can't teach." The worse thing that can be said about a preacher is that he can't preach. The worse scorn that can be said about a teacher is that she "can't teach." Consider the notorious gambler who was ordered by the court to take his child to school. The gambler protested that he taught his child everything he needed to know and didn't need school. On the first day of school, the teacher wanted to see how much her students already knew. She asked the gambler's son for a demonstration of what he knew. The teacher asked, "What comes after one?" The boy answered, "two, three and four." The teacher was impressed. "What comes after five?" The boy answered, "six, seven and eight." It seems that the boy was really learning at home. "What comes after nine?" Asked the teacher. The boy quickly answered, "Ten." "What's after ten?" The boy smartly answered, "That's easy, Jack, Queen, and King!"-Everybody can't teach.

Between the first bell and last bell teachers love. An old school teacher celebrated her 80th birthday with a grand party. It proved to be a marvelous occasion, highlighted by the presence of a great number of her former students. It seemed that she taught school in one of the worst sections of the city. Despite the rough neighborhood and the tough students she faced, she saw many of them become doctors, others lawyers, educators, ministers, honorable craftsmen, and skilled technicians. When news of her 80th celebration spread, many of her former students showed up. She was asked what secret made her teaching so rewarding? She said, "Oh, I don't know. When I look at the young teachers in our schools today, so well-equipped with training, computers, technology and their fancy teaching techniques; I really wasn't prepared to do all of that. I had nothing to give my students but love."

Good teachers teach, but somewhere between the close of the school day and the first bell, they also live. Good teachers are mothers, grandmothers, fathers and grandfathers. They laugh and talk, wash dishes, iron clothes, shop, read, and enjoy their families. Somewhere in a crowded day they find the time, perhaps in the wee hours of the night, to pray and talk to God; he gives them strength for the journey and renewed inspiration.

As Christians, we celebrate the life of good teachers. We rejoice that God gave them to us. When we hear that the bell has tolled for one of our teachers, we too are diminished, because that bell has told for me.

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses in his last days, urging Israel to teach their children and grandchildren what they have been taught about the Godly life.

The Book of Deuteronomy is the last of the five books of Moses. Written in the closing years of his life, Moses repeated again what he taught the people for over 30 years or so. The supremacy of godliness and the strict observance of God's law was the central focus of his teaching.

In this text, Moses notes that he taught the people what God taught him so that they would be prepared for the future that awaits them. He charged them to keep the law, do the law and cherish the law of God all of their days.

Since the moral law came from God himself, it was a treasure that should be taught to each succeeding generation. The law of God taught the importance of godliness, clean living, abstinence and the value of honesty and integrity to his children. Thus, Moses maintained that every parent had the responsibility of teaching these principles to their children; and should they be blessed with long life, to teach them to their grandchildren. They should be taught at home and in the public square. The importance of teaching was underscored to the point that Moses instructed that the laws of God should be taught in the morning, at noonday and at night; that they should be inscribed over the doorposts of their houses.

Although Moses lived for 120 years, he knew he would not always be present to be Israel's schoolmaster. Soon the last bell would ring. Yet, the principles he taught were everlasting and should be continued throughout the generations. Those children of coming generations would need these guiding principles to possess their individual promised lands.

Thus, Moses closed his life by giving one final lesson to Israel before the last bell rang for him. It was the lesson that the people should fear God, walk in his ways and he will help them to possess the bright future in front of them.

The Ringing of the Bells

Every life could easily be characterized by various periods. In each of these phases of our lives we learn things about ourselves and our relationship with God, our family, and other people. It's as if life is a preparatory school, preparing us for a greater experience in eternity.

FIRST BELL: The first bell of our lives awakens us to who we are and where we are going. It also awakens us to the existence of God and our relationship to him.

When the first bell rings, we attend Sunday school, we learn about Christ, participate in church activities, and we learn that God is truly a good God. At some point in the first phase of our lives many people accept Christ as their personal savior. And begin a spiritual journey that we will follow all of our lives. There is an inherent beauty in that first phase. Our ideals are pure and our view of the world is not contaminated by failures and frustrations. The first bell is our youth and adolescents.

SECOND BELL: The second bell of our lives signals our pursuit of marriage or a career or both. If God is merciful and benevolent as he always is and desire a mate, he helps us find the right mate, exchange our vows, and begin a life journey with our soul mate by our sides. It's during this second bell that we perfect our craft and intensify the effectiveness of our witness. It's the phase where good teachers get better and better teachers achieve their best. For some, it's also the time when we learn to be good wives and husbands and struggle to learn, love and live lives with another person

THIRD BELL: The third bell of some lives is parenting. That is a hard period of time that usually covers between 20 to 25 years. It is a time of sacrifice and struggle, joy and frustration that all seem to come at the same time. When the third bell rings, babies cry, school buses roll, and there is an endless rush to PTA, choir rehearsals, youth meetings, recitals, teas, and debutante balls. The third bell is hectic as one child after the other demands a moment of time to kiss a hurting finger or to solve a major problem. The third bell is a tough period.

FOURTH BELL: The fourth bell is retirement. It's like a lunch or recess. It's a time to relax and reflect. It's a time when there are a few minutes to yourself to contemplate and enjoy. Even then, some teachers are not completely free because many have to pull lunch duty or keep their eye on a class. Even so, many, even in retirement, find that when the fourth bell rings, their retirement is cut short when they are called back to the classroom to substitute or fill in because they are needed. That's when teachers learn that good teachers never really retire, they keep teaching until they run out of chalk.

The Last Bell

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that just as there is a first bell that begins every life, there is a last bell that indicates that it's time to go home.

Teachers love the classroom, but they don't want to live there forever. When the last bell rings they want to go home.

So it is with the life before us. This life, lived so well, answered the call of every bell.

When the first bell rang, she accepted Christ and dutifully decided to live for him all of her life, working in the church and to the best of her ability.

When the second bell rang, she married a handsome man and pursued a teaching career. In sickness and in health she stood by him in love and devotion as she taught the children of others.

When the third bell rang, she gave birth to her children and reared them in the Godly way. As Moses commanded she preached to them and lectured them about honesty, cleanliness, Godliness and the way of honor. Throughout their lives they never left her classroom as she gently urged, suggested and even demanded that they stay the course.

When the fourth bell rang, she retired from the classroom, only to be called back on occasion. She worked in her church and enjoyed her family well passed her three score and ten years.

Every teacher knows that when the end of the day draws near there is an axious feeling that begins to bubble inside. It's anticipation!

We've enjoyed the laughter, but we anxiously await the last bell to ring!

We've enjoyed the smiling faces, but we impatiently watch the clock, waiting for the last bell to ring!

That's what Paul had in mind when he said, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness!"

When the last school bell rings, teachers pack away their chalk and erasures, overheads and roll books

When the last school bell rings, desks are cleared, drawers are emptied and bulletin boards are cleared.

When the last school bell rings, the weary teacher breathes a sigh of relief, takes a breath of hope and looks forward to going home!

Home, where the wicked will cease from troubling

Home, where the weary will be at rest!

Home, where every day will be Sunday and it's always howdy and never good bye!

Home, where crying days will be over!

Home, where we'll be in the presence of God!

Home, the place Jesus came to tell us about!

Home, the place Jesus called "My father's house!"

So we would have a place to call home, Jesus, the divine superintendent carried an old rugged cross up Golgotha's Hill!

He died out on Calvary, but early Sunday morning he arose from the grave!

He's tolling the bell for every saint saying, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy burden I will give you rest!"

Come home!

Come home!

Come and go with me to my father's house!

On Sunday November 16, 2003 Retha Lewis heard the last bell ring. She erase her board, packed her papers, folded away her plans and quietly went home.

We Are Pilgrims Too

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 23, 2003

SCRIPTURE: These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city." Hebrews 11:13-16

Introduction

When did you first learn about Thanksgiving? Most of us learned about Thanksgiving in school. Like children, today we learn that the Pilgrims came to America in 1621 on ship named The Mayflower. We were taught about the difficult times they endured as they went through their first year in the new world. They endured a tough winter, cold, diseases and misunderstandings with many of the natives. When the first harvest was complete and food abounded they decided to have a day of thanks to God for helping them survive that first year. That was generally known as the first official thanksgiving observance in America.

In 1789, President George Washington declared that November 26, 1789 would be observed as a day of Thanks in all of the United States. However, it was not repeated the next year. It was a one time celebration. In 1863, President Abraham Lincoln issued a proclamation naming November 26 at a national day of thanks. Finally, in 1941, Congress made the last Thursday in November Thanksgiving Day.

It began with the pilgrim's act of gratitude an ended with a holiday that is observed only in America.

For some, Thanksgiving day does not have the meaning that George Washington had in mind. It is just turkey day.

For some, Thanksgiving day does not mean what it meant to the pilgrims, it is just a good day to watch the Thanksgiving Day parades and football games.

Those who view it as a day to praise the Lord, you will probably gather their families together under one roof and reflect upon a year of activity and give God praise and thanks for the good times.

We celebrate Thanksgiving in America by looking first to the pilgrims who came to this country seeking a way to worship and please God commensurate with their conscience. Here they found a land and peace with God.

But we too are pilgrims. We too are seeking God. We have not found eternal peace because we are citizens of another country on our way home, praising God all the way.

It all began with the pilgrims, but it's not about the pilgrims of Plymouth Rock. It's about the Pilgrims who believe in the Rock of our Salvation, because we are pilgrims too.

Just as the pilgrims who came to America endured difficulties and hard times, we too have seen our difficult days. We are pilgrims too!

Just as the pilgrims suffered sickness and death; we too have seen our share. We are pilgrims too.

Just as the pilgrims struggled to survive that first year, we struggle to survive every year, we are pilgrims too!

As Christians, when the official Thanksgiving Day comes, we give thanks to God for his mercies and blessings because we are pilgrims too!

Exposition

This text, inspired by God but written by an unknown writer, describes every believer as a pilgrim on the journey toward the Promised Land.

Generally described as the faith chapter, Hebrews 11 traces the activities of several of the patriarchs of biblical faith as they journey from one place to another in faith that God would lead them safely. Each sought to find a place to worship God, give him praise and live in peace. They were looking for a city that would resemble the paradise of Eden. The city they sought did not exist and cannot exist as long as the frailties of man exist. Such a city would have to be a city not made with the hands of man.

By describing believers as pilgrims, it is suggested that this earth is not our home, that we are on a journey looking for something. After finding it, we expect to return home.

We are Like the Pilgrims

Since we are pilgrims on this earth, we share similarities with the pilgrims of Mayflower and as a result should give praise to God for the same reason.

WE HAVE SEARCHED FOR GOD: Like the pilgrims, many of us have searched for God and found him. Over the years, there are many who can testify that they have truly come to know God in a better way than they have ever known. Many have turned from their wild ways and have given God a higher place in their lives. Many are reading their bibles more, talking about God more and have developed a thirst for information about and insight into the will of God for their lives. The moment we actually find God is a powerful moment. It is an exciting moment that cannot be described. The pilgrims of Plymouth Rock came searching for a place to worship God and realize his presence. When they found it, they gave thanks. We give thanks to God for leading us to him. We give thanks for his mighty works in us and for the relationship he has created between us. We give thanks for the feeling of joy and appreciation that exists in our families as one member after another also finds God and way more personal than ever before. We give thanks because we are pilgrims too!

WE HAVE ENDURED DIFFICULTIES: Like the pilgrims, we too have endured difficult times. For the Pilgrims it was a difficult winter. We understand that because we endured many difficult winters, summers, springs and autumns. Yet in all of our difficulties God has been good.

We have faced sickness in our families as well as, failure, frustration and financial trouble.

We have wrestled with wayward children, struggled to hold on to marriages and have worked fought against attempts to destroy the unity of family bond.

We have even faced the pain of death. Yet, God has still been good.

When the winter passed, the pilgrims assembled themselves and gave thanks. A cynic would have counted their losses and blamed God. But the pilgrims looked back with a sense of gratitude.

We are pilgrims too. We agree with the songwriter who said, "I've had my good days, I've had many hills to climb. But all of my good days, out weigh my bad days. I won't complain."

Not only do we not complain, but also we give thanks and celebrate the goodness of God in all things. We are pilgrims too.

WE HAVE A SPIRIT OF THANKS: Like the pilgrims, we have a general spirit of thanks for what life has put on our plate. They could have had a different spirit, but they gave thanks for everything. We are thankful to God for everything, not just those things that we like. Consider the boy who sat down to thanksgiving dinner with his family. The food was piping hot and it appeared that this thanksgiving would be one to remember. The table was covered with all kinds of foods! There were meats, pies, cakes, dressings, ducks, hens and turkeys. The food looked delicious. Except for the broccoli. He hated broccoli! When his mom fixed his plate she killed his appetite when she put the biggest spoonful of broccoli on the plate. His stomach turned. Soon his father asked him to bless the food for the family. All heads bowed, but the boy never said a word. They waited and despite his mother's urging, the boy would not bless the table. Finally, his father asked him to explain the problem. "I don't know what to do. I can't give thanks for the food because mama put broccoli on my plate. If I had gave thanks from broccoli, I'd be telling a lie-and what's worse, he might give me more!" Like this little boy, some people are unhappy with some aspect of their lives and they believe giving thanks might bring more of it, so they don't give thanks at all.

The pilgrims gave thanks for the cold and the disease and for those who survived. They thanked God for bitter winter and for warmth of the summer.

Since we are pilgrims too, we should thank him, remembering that the word says, "In everthing, Give thanks!"

Everyday is Thanksgiving

Finally, brothers and sisters while the pilgrims observed Thanksgiving after their first winter, and George Washington declared a single day of thanks in 1789, modern day pilgrims should not wait for a presidential decree, but should give thanks everyday!

God blesses us everyday, so we don't have to wait until the last Thursday in November to give thanks. Everyday should be thanksgiving.

The word indicates that we are to offer thanks to God every day!

1 Chronicles 16:18 says, "Give thanks unto the Lord, call upon his name, make known his deeds upon the people!"

Psalm 92:1 says, "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord and to sing praises unto thy name!"

Psalm 106:1 says "O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: for his mercy endured for ever!"

Psalm 140:13 says "Surely the righteous shall give thanks unto thy name: the upright shall dwell in thy presence."

When we wake up in the morning, give thanks! However, Psalm 119:62 says even "At midnight I will rise to give thanks unto thee because of thy righteous judgments!"

When we break bread, give thanks!

When we close out a day, give thanks!

We give the Lord thanks for giving us a:

—Peace that can never be troubled!

—Foundation that can never be moved!

—Promise that can never be broken!

—Refuge that can never be conquered

—River that can never run dry!

—Victory that can never be lost!

—Wealth that can never be stolen!

We offer thanks for Jesus who died out on Calvary and rose after three days!

Thank you Lord for giving us one more day!

The View From Mt. Nebo

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Mt. Nebo Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 23, 2003

SCRIPTURE*: "And Moses went up from the plains of Moab unto the mountain of Nebo to the top of Pisgah, that is over against Jericho. And the Lord shewed him all the land of Gilead, unto Dan." Deuteronomy 34:1*

Introduction

Have you ever seen a breathtaking view from a high place? When you are able to see things from a high place, they seem different. From a high place, a man can see the entire forest, when all he has seen before were individual trees. From a high place, a man can see an entire city, when all he saw before was individual houses and streets. From outer space, we are able to see the entire earth, when all we could see before that was our little portion of the earth. Things that you considered big when you were on the base of the mountain look small when viewed from the top. When we climb higher, we get a panoramic view of things that allows us to see a wider, broader picture of life rather than a narrow perspective.

Many people have trouble understanding the big picture. It is difficult for them to see how they relate to the whole forest because all they ever see is individual trees. A child sees the little picture of life. He receives a "D" on his report card and feels his parents should be pleased because he passed. He can't see the big picture of how that "D" will compare in the competitive world where brain and intellect are rewarded and "D's" are completely disregarded. A person unfamiliar with a route may become discouraged as they travel a back road and only see trees and unfamiliar sights. But, the person who charted the course knows where the road leads and how traveling this road will connect with a final destination. He can see the big picture.

So it is with churches. Often church members can't see the big picture, they get frustrated along the way because all of their efforts seem futile.

Every now and then, as churches stop to reflect on their journey, God takes them to the mountaintop to allow them to see the big picture. From a high place, they are able to see from whence they have come and see where they are going. They see the hills, valleys and deserts they have already crossed and they see the tough terrain ahead.

The view from the mountaintop gives them both an appreciation of the past journey and inspiration for their new journey.

The view from the mountaintop breaths hope for those who have perhaps concluded that it is all fruitless and non-productive.

The view from the mountaintop revives their spirits as they prepare to go forth into an unknown future.

As Christians, we thank God for mountaintop experiences. Anniversaries, such is the one celebrated today, gives us a chance to look back at the long journey, and to look forward to the great land promise that lies ahead.

Exposition

This text focuses on Moses as God shows him a view of the promised land from atop Mt. Nebo.

Mt. Nebo is part of a range of mountains of which Mt. Pisgah and Mt. Nebo are alternative names for the same location. God called Moses to the top Mt. Nebo and allow him to see the beauty of the land of promise.

From Mt. Nebo, Moses was able to see Gilead, Hermon, Tabor, Ebal and Gerizim.

From Mt. Nebo, he could also see Jericho, the lower Jordan, and the Mt. of Olives.

From this panoramic view of the Promised Land Moses was reassured that that the 40 year journey from Egypt to the River Jordan was not in vain. The land was truly as God had promised, flowing with opportunity, as freely as milk and honey.

Shortly, after Moses died but the people marched on to enter the promised land and claim the promise of God.

From Mount Nebo

Every Church that celebrates an anniversary climbs Mt. Nebo for moment. From that mountaintop experiences it draws three conclusions:

THE JOURNEY AHEAD IS WORTH THE STRUGGLE. Believers should be encouraged when they look to the future; God has great plans for his church and its individual congregations. There is poverty all around us, but from Mt. Nebo we can see a day when all of God's children will enjoy the riches of God's treasure. There trouble all around us, but we can see a day coming in the kingdom of God when there will truly be peace on earth. There is hardship and difficulty now, but we can see the day coming when crying days will be over. The Word of God teaches us that, "he that overcometh shall inherit all things." Martin Luther King used this picture of Mt. Nebo, when he said, "I have been to the mountaintop. I have seen the promised land." Every believer should also say in his heart that God has great rewards in store for us. "Eye hath not seen nor has it entered into the hearts of man" to even imagine the great things that lie ahead for us.

THE JOURNEY HAS BEEN WORTH THE SACRIFICE: Believers should be encouraged as they stand at this point in their journey, atop Mt. Nebo, to know that the sacrifices they have made have not been in vain. The very fact that Moses was able to stand atop Mt. Nebo and view the promise land was a blessing in itself. It meant all of his obedience and sacrifice was not in vain. Many believers have made great sacrifices to promote the kingdom of God. Many have served when they were sick. Some served sacrificially unto their dying day. Many have given of their money and land until they could not give anymore. Many have given their best years to the promotion of the church. To these the Lord will respond, "I know thy works." Sacrifices will not go unrewarded. Sacrifices have been meaningful; so meaningful that the songwriter wrote, "I wouldn't give nothing for my journey now!" The church has reached this point because of the sacrifices of believing members and God will reward every sacrifice in a great way.

THE JOURNEY IS A CREDIT TO THOSE BEFORE US: as Moses stood atop Mt. Nebo, he had to look back for a moment. He had to remember those who left Egypt with hope in their hearts, on their way to the promised land. Now as the children and grandchildren of those old warriors stood at the base of Mt. Nebo a sigh of appreciation can be heard across the centuries. No church should ever forget the contributions of the old warriors that have paved the way. New members to a congregation should be aware that whatever comforts they presently enjoy, were provided by a generation of saints before them. Their names are varied and the contributions many, but the record would not be complete if their sacrifices were ignored. The story must be told of the old warriors who marched out of slavery to establish churches with little more than faith and a handful of dirt. The story must be told of old warriors who worshipped by the light of lanterns and kept warm by wood burning stoves. The story must be told of the old warriors that kept the church doors open despite depressions, hard times and wars.

Who will tell the story?

Finally, brothers and sisters, as we stand atop Mt. Nebo and see the challenges ahead, the question is asked, who will tell the story?

Who will march forward into the future telling the story of our past as we hold up the blood stained banner?

Who will tell the story of how God brought us a mighty long way?

Who will tell the story of how we marched through hardship and trouble into this present day?

Who will be willing to face tomorrow with confidence and say like Joshua, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord!"

I don't know what tomorrow will bring, but I know what God has done in the past. I know what God is doing right now!

"I do not know how long it will be or what the future holds for me, but this I know, if Jesus leads me, I will get home someday!

It doesn't matter what the future brings as long as the Lord is on our side! If the Lord is on our side there will never be a:

—CROSS that we won't be able to bear; MOUNTAIN that we won't be able to climb!

—ENEMY that we won't be able to defeat; BATTLE we won't be able to win!

—DARKNESS so dark that we won't be able to see the light!

—TRIAL that we can't make it through; TEST that we won't be able to pass!

Moses saw the promised land from the top of Mt. Nebo, but I know a man, who saw the world from the top of Mt. Calvary

His name is Jesus!

Jesus, somebody here today knows him!

Jesus, the Lily of the valley!

Jesus, the Bright and Morning star!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary and rose up early Sunday morning!

Go forth from Mt. Nebo, in pursuit of the promised land and holy ground!

Keep trusting in God!

"My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean on Jesus name. On Christ the solid rock I stand...

All other Ground!

All other Ground is sinking sand!

So Blessed, I'm A Mess

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 27, 2003

SCRIPTURE: 22 And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father; and he felt him, and said, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau. 23 And he discerned him not, because his hands were hairy, as his brother Esau's hands: so he blessed him. 28 Therefore God give thee of the dew of heaven, and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine: 29 Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee: be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee. Genesis 27:22-23; 27-29.

Introduction

Have you ever been in a mess? Ideally, life should be sensible, orderly, logical and righteous. Most of the time it is a mess. What is "mess?" It is the absence of logic, truth and order that we call "mess." If it is not logical or does not make sense, it's mess. If it is not true, it is "mess." If it is disorganized and out of order, it's "mess."

When an issue is illogical or does not make sense, we say it's a bunch of mess.

If several people are gossiping and spreading untruths about someone, we call what they say, "mess." If a meeting is disorganized and everyone speaks out of turn, we say the meeting was a "mess."

When a house, room or situation is out of order and in complete disarray, we say it's a "mess."

To avoid being a mess we must have all three: logic, truth and order. Whenever anyone of the qualities are absent from a situation, it becomes a mess.

It's possible for a situation to make sense and be truthful but fail because it is terribly disorganized and has no order. It becomes a mess.

It's possible for a conversation to be orderly and logical but not have an ounce of truth in it; it becomes mess.

Whenever one of the three qualities is missing, it's a mess.

When our lives are out of control, in disarray or when we begin to do things that are illogical, stupid, and unfaithful to the truth, we start to feel that our lives are a complete mess.

When we can't get control of our time, reel in our bad habits, arrange our lives in the way we know is right or discipline ourselves, we say we are in a mess.

Most people have made a mess of our lives because we either lost, logic, truth or order in our lives. Some of us have made a complete mess of our lives because we have lost all three.

In the midst of our mess, there is God, who restores sense, truth and order to our lives. Thus, in our mess, we are blessed by his eternal presence and willingness to favor us with benefits even though we are not worthy.

As Christians, we are thankful to God for his mercies and his benefits to us, despite the fact that we are unworthy to receive them.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jacob receiving a blessing from his father.

Jacob and Esau were twins but Esau was the oldest of the two by minutes. Rightfully, Esau should have received the blessing of inheritance but their mother tricked the aging father into giving the blessing to the young Jacob. Jacob was not worthy to receive the inheritance blessing.

Isaac blessed Jacob to have increase, lordship and success. It was a powerful blessing for a life that was really a mess.

Jacobs's life was really a mess. Because of the stolen blessing, he and his brother were at odds. In fact, his brother threatened to kill him the next time he saw him.

He worked seven years to get the woman he loved, and then discovered that he had to marry her sister too and work seven more years. After 21 years, he had 12 sons by two wives. He was blessed but he was in a mess.

He returned home but had to face his angry brother.

In that mess, he wrestled with God until he received a final blessing that changed his name from Jacob to Israel.

He was so blessed, he was a mess!

Even in his difficulties, frustration and self created mess, Jacob was blessed!

In our Illogical Mess God Continues to Bless

It made little sense for Israel to turn to a golden calf when Moses went into the mountain for 40 days and nights. God brought them from Egypt and drowned their enemies in the Red Sea. It made little sense for them to claim they needed a God they could see. When Moses returned from the mount with the 10 commandments in his hands, he found a people that were completely blessed, but were yet in a mess.

What Israel did, made little sense. When we think about our lives, there are times when we have done some things that have made little sense. We have said cruel things to a spouse who has done nothing but love us. We have wasted resources we know should have been used for better purposes. We have done all this, with the full knowledge that should be doing better. It doesn't make sense.

Even as it relates to God, we have really related to him in ways that have not made sense. We doubted him in our times of trial, when we know that he has never abandoned us in the past. We have turned to other gods that demand our time and attention, when God has never failed us. It doesn't make sense. Often our spiritual lives are a complete mess.

Moses had to tear down the golden calf, bring Israel to its senses and challenge the people to be on the Lord's side.

When we come to our senses, we realize that God has been good to us. Even while we are doing stupid things that make very little sense, creating a big mess for ourselves, God loves us. In our illogical mess, God continues to bless.

In our unfaithful mess, God continues to bless

Hosea was a great prophet of God who was told to marry a prostitute to make a grand demonstration of God's love to an unfaithful people. Gomer was a prostitute, yet Hosea married her, loved her and cared for her, despite her continued wicked ways. She was unfaithful to him yet when the world abandoned her and left her in a mess, Hosea embraced her and continued to love her, despite her mess.

In this way God said to Israel, you have not been truthful or faithful to me, yet I have loved you. I have loved you but you have cheated on me. I have loved you but you have played the harlot.

Even today, we have created a mess for ourselves being unfaithful to God. He blessed us with a television and we spend more time with the television than him. He blessed us with a set of golf clubs, but we know more about our putters, drivers and irons that we do about him. He blessed us with a job, but we know more about our career than we do about his love. Largely, we have been unfaithful to him.

If we are untrue or unfaithful in any way then we create a spiritual mess. It's a mess of our own creation.

Gomer found out that the worldiness around her was not true. Only God's love was true. In her mess, God was there.

There are many today who are completely caught up in the world. It has created a mess for them as they abandon the faith and give their allegiance completely to their pastimes and recreational pursuits. Yet in all this mess, God is still blessing us and loving us and calling us to come home.

In our disordered mess, God has blessed us

Paul wrote the Romans and explained that sin keeps our lives in a mess. We want to do right, but ultimately do wrong. We desire to do the right thing but somehow we always end up doing the very things that we do not want to do.

In Romans 7:24 after looking at his miserable estate Paul said, "Oh wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from this body of death?" He concluded that it was Jesus who straightened out his mess and blessed him.

Like Paul, many today are in a terrible mess when it comes to many things. We can't seem to get a grip on things. Every new year we resolve that we will do better but just a few days later we are back in a mess.

We want to do right, but we can't get a grip on things; but we end up in a mess.

We want to be active in the church but we are so disordered that it never happens; our worship attendance is a mess.

We plan to read our bibles more and to prayer with others more, but we end up doing other things; our bible study and prayer life ends up in a mess.

We said we were going to spend more time with our family and to put a cap on our spending practices, but we ended up in a mess.

Yet, even in the mess we have made of our lives, God has been merciful to us. Often we have lost control, but he remained in control.

We have failed to do our part but he has always succeeded and has blessed us by doing his part.

We have come up short on our end but God has blessed us anyhow!

Blessed despite our mess

Finally, brothers and sisters, God is not blind to the mess we have created for ourselves. He blesses us despite our serious efforts to mess up our lives.

He has blessed us in spite of the mess we created!

He has been good to us, even though we constantly mess around!

In spite of our mess, God has continued to bless.

He blesses us not because he endorses our mess but because he loves us more than he hates the mess we created.

He blesses us out of love, to give us one more chance!

David, messed around and took another man's life and his wife. When he saw the mess he created, he said in the 51st Psalm "Create in me a clean heart oh Lord, and renew a right spirit within me!"-God blessed him despite his mess.

The prodigal son was knee deep in slop, in a terrible mess. He stopped to think how the servants in his father's house had food to eat but he was hungry and feeding swine. He said, "I will arise and go to my father, and say Father I have sinned, before God and before thee." That father blessed him, despite the mess he had made of his life.

While David and the Prodigal son strayed away and caused a mess, Job was in a mess because of his success. He had committed no sins. He had been faithful in every way, but his life was still a mess. Death had invaded his family. He lost all of his money. His health began to fail, all at the same time. Yet, Job said, "Yea though he slay me, yet will I trust him." –He blessed Job despite the mess Satan made in his life.

When we've been a mess..

When we've been IN a mess..

And when we have been hurt BY mess and God still blesses us, what shall we do?

We shall praise his name and say thank you Lord!

Thank you Lord, for blessing me despite the mess that I've made of my life!

Thank you Lord, for taking my weakness and turning it into strength!

Thank you Lord, for taking my doubts and giving me assurance!

Thank you Lord, for taking my failure and giving me victories!

Thank you Lord, for taking my discouragement and giving me hope!

Thank you Lord, for taking my test and giving me a testimony!

Thank you Lord, for looking beyond my faults and shortcomings and seeing my need!

Over 2000 years ago, Jesus came into a messed up world to make it a blessed up world!

He came among messy people, who called him Lord to his face and tried to get him killed behind his back.

He came among messy people, who shouted "Hosanna" on one day and "crucify him" a few days later.

In middle of the world's mess, God sent his best!

The world was messed up but he came to be lifted up that all men might be saved!

A messed up world, put an old rugged cross on his shoulder!

A messed up world, nailed his hands and feet!

A messed up world, stuck a spear in his side!

And he died, out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the dead with all power in his hands!

I'm not worthy for all these blessings because I'm messed up!

Thank you Lord, for blessing me one more!

God's Way, Not My Way

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

November 30, 2003

SCRIPTURE:Being sent out by the Holy Spirit, they went down to Seleucia. . — Acts 13:4; There is a way that seems right to a man, But its end is the way of death. Proverbs 14;12

Introduction

Have you heard the song "I did it my way?" In the late 1960's a number of artist began singing a song first published by Paul Anka but made famous by Frank Sinatra. It was also a part of the regular repertoire of Sammy Davis, Jr. and Nina Simone. The Song rejected the opinions of others and even the direction of God. It promoted the idea of doing our way, regardless.

Some of the lyrics give a clue:

Yes, there were times, I'm sure you knew
When I bit off more than I could chew.
But through it all, when there was doubt,
I ate it up and spit it out.
I faced it all and I stood tall;
And did it my way.

I've loved, I've laughed and cried.
I've had my fill; my share of losing.
And now, as tears subside,
I find it all so amusing.

To think I did all that;
And may I say - not in a shy way,
"No, oh no not me,
I did it my way".

For what is a man, what has he got?
If not himself, then he has naught.
To say the things he truly feels;
And not the words of one who kneels.
The record shows I took the blows -

And did it my way!

Frank Sinatra sold millions of copies of that record. Years after his death a new generation still sings that song and believes that it is important to do it "My way." Have you ever stopped to wonder whether "My Way was God's way?" Many who are doing things their own way and are satisfied.

Sometimes "My way" and God's Way" are two different ways.

As Christians, we desire to do it God's way or no way at all. Most of us have tried the Burger King approach to life; that is, "Have it your way." We have since learned that God's way is the best way.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul and Barnabas as they take the Gospel message outside of Antioch to the world following God's direction.

The Book of Acts gives a record of the beginning of the church. It shows church leaders wrestling with whether or not to take the Gospel message beyond Israel or to keep it for their race alone. It also records their response to the will of God.

Chapter 13 records that the church, growing in large numbers of Jews, was led by the Holy Spirit to expand into a different direction; that is, to take the Gospel message to other parts of the known world.

The church responded by sending Paul and Barnabas on what was called their first missionary journey. They went first to Seleucia, which was about 15 miles away then to several other ports.

They overcame their first hesitation about the mission and decided to follow God's orders. In doing so, their efforts were blessed and their reward was great.

Our way or God's way is the theme of Proverbs 14:12, which says there is a way that appears "right" in our eyes, but yet is not God's way. "There is a way that seems right to man" implies that we think our way is what God wants, but our way usually leads to death and destruction.

The greatest reward comes from those who seek God's will then follow it in their lives.

Four Parts of God's way

If we look closely at the first 12 verses of this chapter, we can see the result of doing things God's way. God blesses what we do if do it his way. Watchman Nee a Chinese writer says, when something is done God's way four things happen:

GOD INITIATES IT: Verse 2 of this text notes that it was the Holy Ghost that gave them the idea to take the missionary journey. The idea came from God. Where did we get the idea to be a Hip Hop rap star? Did it come from God? The idea to be a doctor, teacher, medical assistant, nurse, musician or preacher, did it come from God. If God gives the idea us then he will bless it because he initiated what we do. If God does not initiate the idea then it is "my way" not "God's way."

IT DEPENDS ON GOD TO SUCCEED: Verse 3 says they "Fasted and Prayed." That means they sought God's direction and help to make the plan succeed. They were just two poor men who were about to take the gospel message on foot around the world. The possibility of success was extremely limited without God. In fact, they depended totally on God for their success. Many who are doing things God's way are counting totally on him for its success. Before they began, they prayed and fasted. They needed God's help to succeed and so do we. If what we do does not depend on God to succeed but our own efforts, then we are doing it "my way" not "God's way."

IT WAS CONSISTENT WITH HIS WORD: Verse 5 says they preached the word of God. They stuck to doing what God said do. For these two, it was to preach; others must be true to the word of God as well. Everything we do must be consistent with the spirit of the Word of God to be blessed. Dope dealers, pornographers, and those who profit for illegal activities are involved in undertakings that are inconsistent with the word of God. When it is consistent with God's word then it is blessed because it is "God's way, not my way."

GOD IS GLORIFIED. Verse 12 notes that when they finished their work, God was glorified because those who heard were "astonished at the doctrine of the Lord." When it's done God's way, he gets the credit in the end. Whatever we do is done for God's glory. Our career, business or life mission has one purpose, that those who benefit from our life work will be "astonished" at the power of God. When we do that, we do it God's way, not "My way."

God's Way is the Blessed Way

Finally, Brothers and Sisters we must consider that God's way is "blessed way."
If we want what we do and say to be blessed by God then it must be "God's way."
God's way is the blessed way.
When our actions reflect the will of God they will, without a doubt be blessed.
My way leads to being lost, but God's way is a sure direction.
My way leads to weakness, but God's way is blessed with strength.
My way results in discouragement but God's way results in new inspiration.
My way results in confusion but God's way is blessed with clarity and meaning.
Every believer should strive to do what God wills not what "I will"

If we proceed God's way then nothing can stop of from achieving our goal, because it is in his will.

Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane made the point clear. We heard him tell his father, "Not my will but thy will be done."

It was God's will that he would carried an old rugged cross.
It was God's will that he would die out on Calvary.
It was God's will that he would be buried in a borrowed tomb.

But it was also God's will that early Sunday morning that he who was buried in weakness would rise in strength.

It was God's will that he who was crucified in shame would be raised in everlasting glory.

And it's God's will that he will come back again for all of those who are willing to live life..God's way!

Mary's Christmas

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 14, 2003

SCRIPTURE: And she gave birth to her firstborn son; and she wrapped Him in cloths, and laid Him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn Luke 2:7

Introduction

How will you spend the days leading up to Christmas? Cooking? Shopping? In prayer and fellowship or perhaps a little of it all? During this time of the year, many people greet each other by saying, "Merry Christmas!" It is a greeting of cheer that sometimes comes from those who would not normally give us a simple good morning on the elevator. "Merry Christmas is a salutation that is supposed to help spread a spirit of cheer, joy and happiness across the land.

On the first Christmas morning, there were no plans for shopping, family feasts or numerous presents. The air was cold, the ground was hard and accommodations for a young man and his wife were limited. Yet, in a little town called Bethlehem, a mother by the name of Mary spent the days before Christmas praising God and spent Christmas day and nearly every day for the next 33 years singing a Christmas carol 365 days a year.

As believers, we join the thousands who wish each other a merry Christmas. As we look closer at the attitude of this divine mother, we learn that what we really pray for is that every would have a "Mary Christmas!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Mary as she celebrates the birth of her firstborn son.

Mary was about 15 years old at the time she learned she was pregnant with the Christ Child. She was awed and afraid at learning that God had selected her and that she was already pregnant. "How can this be?" She asked. He answered her that the Holy Spirit would come upon her so that the child's conception would be divine. Then he gave Mary the added confirmation that nothing is impossible with God by telling her that her kinswoman Elizabeth who was old and barren was also pregnant.

When she saw her kinswoman Elizabeth, her soul leaped with joy. It was a confirmation of what the angel said. She immediately recognized that God was about to change the course of all human history; the most important three decades of all time were about to begin.

She was awed that God would occupy himself with an obscure, humble,young virgin.

Mary was so moved by this vision of God, the lover of the lowly, that she broke out in a song that has come to be known as the Magnificat. “My soul magnifies the Lord, and my spirit rejoices in God my Savior, for he has regarded the low estate of his handmaiden For behold, henceforth all generations will call me blessed; for He who is mighty has done great things for me, and holy is His name.

When she gave birth to Jesus, Mary celebrated the first Christmas. Before anyone else in the world had a chance, Mary celebrated Christmas sitting next to a manger holding a little child.

Mary’s Christmas

The sure way to celebrate a merry Christmas is to observe closely Mary’s Christmas.

WE CAN HAVE A MERRY CHRISTMAS, IF WE HEAR WHAT MARY HEARD. In the days preceding the birth of the Christ child and on the day of his birth, Mary heard the voice of God. She heard God speak to her about her coming birth. When Christ was born she heard the voice of a cackling little baby, but she knew it was also the voice of God among men. Between the sounds of wrapping paper, ringing bells, and Charles Brown on the radio, we must be sure that we heard what merry heard if we want to have a Mary Christmas. She heard the voice of God. Even if you have experienced the death of a loved one or have had some difficulty, Christmas is a happy time if we can hear what Mary heard. She heard the voice of God telling her that everything would be alright and that she would be blessed. We too, must listen for the voice of God with our own individual messages. The very fact that we can hear God is a blessing in itself. That’s what the songwriter had in mind with the words, “I come to the garden alone; while the dew is still on the roses. And the voice I hear, falling my ear, the son of God discloses. And he walks with me and he talks with me and he tells my I am his own. And the joy we share as we tarry there, no other has ever known.

WE CAN HAVE A MARY CHRISTMAS IF WE ARE WILLING TO LEAVE OUR COMFORT ZONE. Mary had to walk at least part of the way to Bethlehem. In her ninth month of pregnancy that must have been an uncomfortable walk that a great distance enduring many days; yet she was willing to leave the comfort of her home in Nazereth to obey God. It would have been easy for her to make an excuse. Even after Christ was born, she did not hesitate to step outside of her comfort zone. Matt 2:13-14 shows us that both Mary and Joseph were willing to leave their respective comfort zones to obey the will of God. We can find happiness when we do something for someone else. Sometimes doing that forces us to come out of our “comfort zones. We often seek the security of our safe havens of assurance and fail to act to help others, when something on the inside of us tugs at heart to move outside of the safety of our comfort zone as we reach out to someone else. We can have a

Mary Christmas if we make someone else happy. It may take some risk on our part, but it's the way to enjoy a "Mary Christmas."

WE CANHAVE A MERRY CHRISTMAS IF WE ARE WILLING TO ENDURE A LITTLE SUFFERING. Jesus promised a reward to those who endure suffering, persecution or hard times because of their belief in him. Despite the misery that accompanies childbirth, even when there is a comfortable hospital bed and a midwife or doctor, childbirth is still painful. Yet, when Mary was told that she would conceive and bare a child she was willing to endure the suffering to please God. Not only endure the suffering of the childbirth itself, but also the suffering of those who would ridicule her because of an awkward relationship between herself and Joseph. Today, there many who have learned how to be joyous, despite their difficulties. They say like Paul that they "count it all joy" to be in diverse circumstance of suffering because they know that ultimately God's overwhelming purpose will prevail.

If there is sickness all around us, we can find a reason for joy if we consider Mary's Christmas.

Mary's Christmas was optimistic. It reveled in the joy that trouble don't last always.

Even in our discomfort, we can say with the songwriter: No cross, no crown; no pain, no gain.

Sing Mary's Song

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that we can have a Mary Christmas if we learn to sing Mary's song.

During the Christmas season, we hear many songs.

Sometime we may hear, "Silver Bells."

Sometimes we hear, I' dreaming of a White Christmas!

There are times we hear, "Merry Christmas Baby or Please Come Home for Christmas."

Singing Christmas carols alone does not guarantee us a joyous Christmas unless we've learned to sing what Mary sang.

While our text tells us about Mary giving birth to the baby Jesus, Luke 1:46 tell us what she started doing while she waited for Christmas, she sang, "My soul does magnify the Lord!"

It we want to have a Mary Christmas we must learn to magnify the Lord!

When a soul magnifies the Lord, praising God becomes an everyday experience. In the days leading up to Christmas, this was Mary's song daily. Mary's song must have been what the songwriter had in might when he wrote, "This is my story, this is my song. Praising my savior all of the day long. This is my story. This is my song. Praising my savior all the day long."

As we wait for Christmas, believer's should praise God with an intensity that ignores the difficulty of our time but recognizes the greatness of God

Even if there is no room in the Inn, we still declare God's goodness because his mercy endureth forever. No wonder the songwriter declared "then sings my soul, my savior God to thee. How great thou art! How great thou art!"

When we have a Mary Christmas we'll sing, "My soul doth magnify the Lord."

We magnify God because only he can take a:

Drunkard and make him sober; LIAR and fill him with truth!

THIEF and make him an honest man; PERVERT and make him pure again!

SAD HEART and make it glad again; WEAK SPIRIT and give it new strength

LOST SOUL and him find his way; BROKEN HEART and make it whole again!

My soul magnifies God because only he loved the world enough to send his only begotten son into it!

My soul magnifies God because of a Little town called Bethlehem and baby wrapped in swaddling clothes.

My soul magnifies the Lord because one day out on Calvary, Jesus...

Mary's Baby! The Rock of My Salvation

Jesus, the lily of the Valley!

Jesus, Fountain of my joy!

Died on an old rugged cross!

But Early Sunday morning he arose from the Grave, with all power in his hands!

Destiny's Child

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 21, 2003

SCRIPTURE: For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Isaiah 9:6 ;"..The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men and be crucified, and the third day rise again." Luke 24:7

Introduction

Have you ever looked into the eyes of newborn and wondered, 'What shall this child become?' It is a mystery to us what the Lord has in store for every little child that is born. Those who have become mothers this year have joined millions of mothers before them wondering what God has in store for their sons and daughters.

Society has a way of stereotyping persons and limiting their ability to achieve by virtue of the circumstance of their birth. What could possible come from a child born in a small town on the poor side of the tracks with the wrong skin hue? What possible good can ever come from such a child?

If the birth of the Christ child says anything to us, it is that each child is born in this world with a divine purpose that is not altered by its circumstance but is nurtured by its circumstance. The talented child has a purpose. The smart child and the physically strong have a purpose. However, the mentally challenged child has a purpose too. The poor child and the child with few gifts also have purposes.

Destiny is generally defined as "A predetermined course of events considered as something beyond human power or control." In a spiritual sense, destiny can be described as a prepaid plane ticket to a destination already set, if we accept it, buckle our seat belts and take the journey.

As Christians, we thank God for sending his son to this world. It was his destiny to insure our salvation. It should be our destiny to live our lives according to his purpose.

Exposition

This text focuses on an episode in the life of Israel in which the prophet Isaiah prophesied about the coming of the Messiah.

In describing the birth of Christ, hundreds of years before his birth Isaiah makes it abundantly clear that the birth of Christ was not a chance occurrence, but part of God's divine order. The world, having known sin would be given a chance to know salvation in the person of Jesus Christ. The fact that Isaiah described all of the names by which Christ would be called using the word "shall" indicated that his coming would not be a chance happening but would be essential to the process of redeeming mankind.

The child that would be born would be wonderful and a mighty counselor. The child would be born with a destiny. That destiny was to show mankind the way to back to God.

If destiny indicates purpose then the purpose of Christ's coming was to provide us with the chance of spiritual adoption. To accomplish this end he had to pay the penalty for sin. To do that, the Law of Moses required death. That is why our text verse in Luke 24:7 says, "The son of man MUST be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again." Christ was born to die, but he died to rise again to give us hope of renewed life in the kingdom.

Destiny Clarifed Leads to Determination

The circumstances of Christ's parentage and birth gave an indication of his destiny. While Mary and Joseph knew the nature of his being, they were not sure, at his birth, the nature of his final destination.

Jesus was born in a small town, to poor parents, in very restricted and impoverished circumstances. His destiny, in these circumstances was not clear it had to be discovered. By the age of 12 it appears he had learned his destiny because after being found in the temple with the scholars he said, 'It's time for me to be about my father's business."

Clarifying who we are and what we are about is important to every person. Often others who observe us, know us better than we know ourselves. Sometimes they see all of our faults and shortcomings as well as our strengths. We only see our strengths and often overlook everything else. Determining destiny requires determination.

The circumstance of Christ's birth did not limit his destiny but sensitized him to the circumstance. Similarly, our birth circumstance does not mean that you cannot become an attorney, physician, scientist or educator. Having walked a mile in this shoe, we know what it means to live this experience and are prepared to respond.

Destiny, once accepted, leads to destination

In Bethlehem, Christ's destiny is indicated by the circumstance of his birth. In Jerusalem, he became aware of his purpose and father's business. However, it was in the wilderness that Christ accepted his destiny and locked in his destination.

Christ knew his destiny but he did not fully accept that destiny until he went into the wilderness for 40 days and nights. It was a time of soul searching and deciding life direction.

At the time of this crossroads, Christ was 30 years old. His decision was not about a job or occupation. He already had a job, he was a carpenter. He already had a way to make a living. His destiny decision was not about a career but about fulfilling a life purpose.

Often our destiny decision and our career decision are not the same. While there are a few whose destiny and careers are congruent, most have little correlation between their destiny and their job. A person flips hamburgers at McDonald's to earn a living, but a person should be living to carry out a greater purpose. A person may run a business, but that business is a means to live but he or she lives for a greater purpose and that purpose is our destiny.

Many parents work jobs that tear away at their health, and rob them of their energy. Those jobs are not their purpose. They see a bigger purpose. They work the job to help their children make the big difference that changes the world. They see their purpose as being the one to make their children's purpose become realities.

Once we have accepted our purpose, our destination is confirmed. Like the Christ Child in Bethlehem, we were born with a destiny. Once we accept that destiny, then we become a child of that destiny or destiny's child. When we truly become destiny's child, everything we do and say is dictated by our perceived destiny and our destination becomes clear.

When Superman puts on the Superman suit, what comes after is predetermined. Once Batman puts on the Batman suit and drives the Bat Mobile, what he does and things he says are pre-determined. Once Spiderman puts on the Spiderman suit, the rest is history. Once a believer puts on the whole armor of God, his destination is locked in and becomes clear.

Romans 8:30 underscores this thought by making it clear that once we accept our purpose the rest is pre-determined. We are predetermined to be called, justified and glorified in the eyes of God.

Because of our destiny, we are able to sing with the songwriter, "I'm determined to walk with Jesus, yes I am. I'm determined to walk with Jesus, yes I am. Through hard trials tribulations, persecutions I am determined. I'm determined to walk with Jesus yes, I am."

Destiny, once pursued, leads to glorification

Finally, Brothers and Sisters, once we have decided to pursue our destiny, it will lead to glorification!

The prophets announced Jesus' destiny hundreds of years before his birth.

The angels declared his destiny to Mary and Joseph and announced it to shepherds grazing in the fields.

Jesus clarified his destiny when he talked with the scholars in the temple.

He accepted his destiny after 40 days of prayer in the wilderness.

However, in the garden, he made one final decision, to pursue his destiny, regardless of the costs, to the glory of God. He did not want to face Calvary but his prayer was “Never-the-less, not my will but thy will be done.”

It was his destiny to be born in Bethlehem because he was a destiny’s child.

We have seen many children born with a destiny, but they were not Destiny’s child.

Jacob and Esau were twins. They both became fathers of great nations. While each of them were children with a destiny, neither of them was Destiny’s child.

Moses was born in slavery but rose to become a prince of Egypt, and a deliverer of his people. While he was obviously a child with a destiny, he was not destiny’s child.

John the Baptist was a born a child with a destiny to be one crying out in the wilderness, repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. While he was a child with a destiny, he was not destiny’s child.

Down in Bethlehem someone more than a child with a destiny was born.

If all he had was just a destiny, then he would have grown up to become rich and famous!

If all he had was just a destiny, then he would have had buildings named after him and occupation pages in history books.

If all he had was just a destiny, he would have been a great historical figure represented by statues in the silent halls of museums.

If You a child with a destiny you may try to set your own direction and determine your own destination.

However, When you are destiny’s child, your life is in God’s hands. You go where he tells you to go. You do what he tells you to do.

Down in Bethlehem, Destiny’s child was born.

His mission was to Bring:

—Hope to the disillusioned and Salvation to the Lost

—Life and provide it more abundantly

—Peace on earth and goodwill toward men

—Comfort in the midst of calamities & Strength in weakness

—Assurance in the midst of agonies & Power in the midst of problems

—Safety in times of trouble and Shelter in time of storm!

Down in Bethlehem a child was born, his name was Jesus!

It was his destiny to be born in Bethlehem!

It was his destiny to be raised in a town called Nazereth.

It was also his destiny to carry an old rugged cross up Golgotha’s Hill and die for our sins!

But, just as it was his destiny to die on Calvary, it was also his destiny to be raised from the grave, early Sunday morning!

Go tell it on the mountains, over the hills and every where that Jesus was born in Bethlehem and one of these old days, it is his destiny to come back again!

Why Then Call Ye Me Naomi?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 27, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "I went out full, and the LORD hath brought me home again empty: why then call ye me Naomi, seeing the LORD hath testified against me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me."Ruth 1:21; "And the women her neighbours gave it a name, saying, There is a son born to Naomi; and they called his name Obed: he is the father of Jesse, the father of David." Ruth 4:17

Introduction

What do you think your parents had in mind when they gave you your name? Does it have any significance? If you were named after a parent or grandparent or another relative, have you ventured to wonder what qualities your parents saw in these persons that would warrant them giving you their names? If you were named after an uncle or an aunt, what about their lives appealed to your parents to urge them to name you after them?

In biblical times, names had meaning. The name given to a child had significance. It was never given because of its beauty or sound, but it had importance. Isaac named his first son "Esau" because he saw the redness of his skin. Pharaoh's daughter saw a little boy floating in a basket and drew him out of the water. She named him Moses, which means "Drawn out." When he was in exile, Moses named his first son "Gershom" because he said, "I have been a stranger in a strange land." Mary was told to name the little boy born in a manger in Bethlehem "Jesus" because he would "Save his people" and thereby be called wonderful, counselor, almighty God and prince of peace.

In the not so distant past, many African-Americans followed the biblical tradition. We named our children after bible characters because we wanted them to emulate the characteristics of the great personalities of the bible. There were men named, Paul, James, Peter, Samuel, Ben or Benjamin, David, etc. There were many women named Mary, Martha, Deborah, Elizabeth and others. In the African-American tradition, there were two names that were rarely, if ever, given to Black Children. One of those names was Jezebel, the evil wife of King Ahab. The second is the name Jesus. While it is common in Hispanic communities to find children named "Jesus (Heysus), it is extremely rare among African-Americans.

Buried in a biblical name, is often the secret purpose of a life. It embodies the hopes and dreams of parents, perhaps even a divine revelation of things that are to come.

What is the meaning of this name Naomi? In Hebrew it means, "Sweetness" or "graciousness." A mother who names her daughter Naomi could possibly have hoped that the spirit of Naomi would guide this new life. If so it would be a life that would endure bitterness, but remain sweet. It would be a life that would achieve an ultimate godly purpose, and it would be a life that would know the way to God and show others the same way.

As Christians, we believe that every life has a purpose, which is not always clear to us. We rejoice in all of God's ways know that all things work to the good of them that love Lord, according to his purpose.

Exposition

This text focuses on a woman who struggled understand the reason for affliction and realized it in her offspring.

Naomi is one of two central characters in the book of Ruth. She was married to a Jewish man. The couple had two sons. When the land fell on hard times, the family moved into the land of Moab because it had been reported that there was plenty of food there.

In the course of 10 years both of Naomi's sons died leaving only their widows who were natives of the land and Naomi herself. Naomi experienced both joy and affliction in the course of her life. There were points in her struggle she even became bitter and blamed God for her circumstance, but she stopped short of abandoning her faith altogether. On the contrary, she had that faith renewed significantly.

She urged both her daughters in law to return to her own people because she was about to return to Bethlehem, knowing she would fight an uphill battle of public opinion and poverty. One of her daughters in law, Ruth, refused to return to Moab. She stood by the older woman, pledging to stand with her, go with her and to learn from her. "Your people shall be my people and your God shall be my God."

On occasion, Naomi considered her situation and questioned her affliction. Her name, Naomi, implied sweetness. Yet, during some of her difficult times, she found life to be anything but sweetness. At one point she concluded that her name should have been Mara, or bitterness because she felt the Lord was unfairly afflicting her. In reality, Ruth was the epitome of sweetness. She was dutiful in service and kind and gentle to her daughters by law. She even showed sweetness to Ruth.

What possible blessing could God have in store for Naomi? After experiencing such a difficult time, what blessing could possibly await her that would warrant the affliction and difficulties she experienced?

Naomi could not see God's purpose at the time. In fact, she died without even knowing what a tremendous impact she made on the history of the world.

She worked to position her daughter by Law, Ruth to marry Boaz. Out of love for Ruth, Boaz reinstated the inheritance which her husband lost when he moved to Moab. When Boaz and Ruth bore their first son, it legally became the grandson of Naomi. The women of the community came out to celebrate the birth of the child. Yet, they did not celebrate "Ruth" they celebrated the fact that Naomi had an heir and found meaning for all of her difficulties. At the moment, it seemed insignificant except that this child, born out of the sweetness of Naomi's life work would be the grandfather to King David, the greatest king of Israel. Because of her sweet life's work, even further down the line, a child would be born in Bethlehem, who would save his people.

Ruth's ultimate life purpose was to pave the way for something greater. Her offspring were the reasons for her being, her affliction and her return home. Through her life and influence, the world was ultimately blessed.

Endure Bitterness but Remain Sweet

What do we learn from Naomi's life? First we learn how to endure bitterness but remain sweet.

It would be great if life was a bowl of cherries, mostly sweet with a few pits; but the reality is that life often deals us a few lemons.

The challenge is to endure life's lemons without losing our own sense of sweetness. In the bible Naomi had to deal with a number of bitter situations that included death, poverty, and hard times. They seem to come one after the other. No sooner than she could overcome one, others came.

At one point she almost became spiritually bitter. Somehow she continued to do sweet things. She worked and helped others. Hundreds of kindnesses she displayed made it clear that she was the sweet woman everyone knew, despite her difficulties.

We should be the same, when we endure life's bitter moments and experience sickness, death and despair. We should resist the temptation to become bitter and angry with the world. Yes, we should continue to help others, counsel, assist the hurting and to bring sweetness to others. We should endure the bitterness that life gives us but remain a sweet savor for all who know us.

Achieve our Godly Purpose

A second lesson we learn from Naomi is that she achieved her godly purpose.

The ultimate purpose for the biblical Naomi was to pave the way for the birth of King David and ultimately, Jesus of Nazareth. During her lifetime she didn't know what a great impact she would make, but she achieved that end.

The biblical Naomi took many years, until her old age to achieve her purpose. Yet, it is not always prescribed that our life's purpose will require 70 or 80 years. It could be 15, 20 or 39 years.

The Apostle Paul, having completed his purpose wrote 2 Timothy 4:6-8, "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

Every believer should strive to identify his purpose and achieve it in a way that will glorify God.

Know the Way to God

The final lesson we learn from Naomi is that she knew the way back to God and brought somebody with her.

Naomi, following her husband, lived in the land of Moab but never forgot God. Her heart always longed to go home. Ultimately, she decided that she had to go home. In the process, her great faith in God influenced Ruth to follow her. Following her home, Ruth said, "Your people shall be my people, and your God shall be my God."

When we know how to find the Lord, it doesn't matter how difficult life gets, we have a blessed assurance!

When we know how to find the Lord, in moments of despair we are able to call upon him.

After suffering difficulties and hard times, Naomi said, "I'm going home!"

There are many people who believe they can make it through life without attending church, reading the bible or worshipping the Lord." The inherent danger is that you can stay away so long, that you forget the way home!

Jacob stayed away from home for over 20 years, but after-a-while he had to say, "I'm going home."

The Prodigal Son lived in the far country and wasted his substance, but when he came to himself, he said, "I'm going home."

So, what have we learned about the life named Naomi before us?

We have learned that it was a life whose purpose was to bring sweetness and graciousness to all she met.

We have learned that the purpose of this life was not tied to its longevity but to the power of its example!

Thirty nine years may seem a short period of time. But at 39, Martin Luther King had taught the world how to dream. At 33, Alexander had conquered the world. At 21, Tiger Woods dominated the world of Golf and Mike Tyson was heavyweight champion of the World. At age 20, Venus Williams and her 21 year old Sister Serena, turned the world of tennis upside down by sweeping the major world championships.

But down in Bethlehem a baby was born and he was given a special name. His name was "Jesus" because he would save his people!

At the age of 33 hanging on an old rugged cross he said, "It is finished."

However, the story doesn't stop there because Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands.

He's coming back again to get his own.

When he comes he's going to give us new names.

If you came here named "sadness" then get ready to be called "gladness!"

If you came here named "Failure" then get ready to be called "success!"

If you came here named "Defeat" then get ready to be called "victory"

No wonder the songwriter declared, "I got a new name, over in glory and it's mine! Mine! Mine!"

Come here Naomi, you stayed sweet down here, despite sickness, and trouble, over yonder your name will be sweeter! Because, "Every day with Jesus is Sweeter!

Sweeter!
… than the day before!”

Thirty Nine years ago a child was born and named Naomi. True to her name, Naomi Pollard-Seals, remained sweet despite bitterness, achieved her purpose and went back home.

Throw Away the wrappings, not the gift

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For The Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

December 28, 2003

SCRIPTURE: A gift is as a precious stone in the eyes of him that hath it: whithersoever it turneth, it prospereth. Proverbs 17:8

Introduction

What did you do with all the trash that accumulated on Christmas day? Many families bagged up their trash and prepared it for collection. Across the nation landfills were deluged with millions of tons of boxes, ribbons, bows, packing materials, lace and other debris that was discarded to make room. Depending on the number of people in the house, especially the number of children, many families found themselves walking in a virtual sea of trash as anxious mothers went around the house stuffing wrapping paper into trash bags to make room.

Christian homes spend a considerable amount of time focusing on Christ during the Christmas season. They make sure their children understand the real meaning of the season. They sing Christmas Carols, and read the story of the incarnation from the bible. They attend special Christmas programs with the church and enjoy a heightened sense of spirituality during the Christmas season.

However, as Christmas ends many people instantly begin to take down the decorations. The lights are removed from the houses. Christmas postcards are removed from the yards. Trees are dissembled. Artificial trees are packed away until next year. Live trees are tossed away or submitted for recycling. The elaborate decorations that adorned our homes are removed. Even, the left over turkey is recycled into turkey salad, freezer bags are stuffed; and soon after Christmas, there is little sign that there was a Christmas celebration.

Nearly everyone can remember an instance of a gift of one kind or another becoming mixed with the wrappings. As the trash was thrown out, so was the gift. The picture of taking down and throwing out after Christmas is reflection of what happens in many lives. The words of hope embedded on cards are thrown out, the star that points to God is removed, and the lights that remind us of “the light of the world” are taken down. Manger scenes disappear too.

Sometimes gifts, especially small ones are tossed out with the wrappings, trappings and trash. Those who pilfer through the trash at the curbside are amazed at what people throw away. Some gifts are discarded accidentally. Others are discarded on purpose. Whatever the case, there are many who throw away the gift along with the wrappings.

As the Christmas season ends and a new year dawns, Christians should throw away the trash and unwanted things in their lives as we prepare for the year to come. However, we should be careful, not to throw away the wonderful spirit of love, charity and brotherhood we felt at Christmas, just because the day of celebration has passed.

Exposition

This text considers the importance of gifts, for they tend to prosper the recipient.

Solomon was the writer of the proverbs. They are the accumulated wisdom of his life experience.

As King of Israel Solomon received many gifts from both the subjects of the land and foreign dignitaries. The Queen of Sheba traveled by caravan to meet him. She brought with her gifts from Africa. Solomon had 300 state arranged marriages that came with gifts or dowries, as well as special political treaties that brought peace to the land

Thus, Solomon concludes through his experience that gifts are precious in the eyes of the recipients. Used wisely, good gifts can lead to increase.

In a similar sense, Jesus came to the world as a gift. He was not wrapped in special paper, but swaddling clothes. He was not an object to be admired but a person to love and be loved. He was, by any definition, a gift to man. He was the embodiment of man's hope to reconcile himself with God and live with him forever. This is what prompted Paul to write to the Romans in 6:23 "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Christ Jesus our Lord."

Jesus was the perfect gift, given by God. Yet, After Christmas, many began to push him aside to make room for new challenges and adventure. Just eight days after he was born the people started trying to re-wrap and him and send him back to God. Herod's decree found many boy children slain as the government tried to get rid of any semblance of the Christ child. They wanted nothing left. They destroyed everything related to him. His family had to flee to Egypt to hide. Later, his hometown shunned him. Some of his brothers and sisters doubted him. The leaders planned to kill him and one of his disciples deserted him, another betrayed him and those he came to save shouted, "Crucify Him!"

He was a gift from God but the people were throwing away the gift while clearing out the wrapping paper.

What To Throw Out

As we prepare for the new year, there are many things that should be thrown out because they cloud our spiritual development. Throwing out the spiritual trash should be a sign of the times.

TAGS: Nearly every item we purchased during the Christmas season came with a price and a label. We should throw away the tags and labels. Many spent all of this year trying to acquire a specific tag or label on their suits, shoes sweaters and cars. Sometimes the pursuit of those labels and tags overpowered us. Why not remember that the word of God teaches in 1 Corinthians 6:20 "For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." The only tag that we really need to keep is the one that says, "God's child."

WRAPPING PAPER: There will be tons of wrapping paper thrown away after Christmas. Wrapping paper is only used for outside appearances. Some gifts are beautifully wrapped but don't match what's on the inside. Many spent a great portion of this year on wrapping paper matters of life. We worried more about appearances than we did our spirituality. We worried more about our nails, hair, suits, clothing and outward trimming than we did how we looked on the inside. However, the word of God teaches us that it's the inside that counts. 1 Samuel 16:7 says, "..For the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."

PACKAGING: Nearly every gift comes in a package. Whether in a box or plastic wrap, the purpose of the package is to keep the gift in place. The idea is to keep the gift safely within the box. This year there are many people who were boxed in by life. It's frustrating to be boxed in, sealed so tight that you can't get out and it's almost impossible for anyone else to get close to us. Careers, business opportunities, and personal improvements are often boxed-in by those who told us what we want to do is impossible. We can't achieve because it cannot be done. Next year why not operate out of the box? What not shoot for the impossible. Matthew 19:26 reminds us that "With Men this is impossible, but with God all things are possible." Don't be boxed in next year, throw out the boxes!

UNMAILED CARDS: There are many people who intended to send cards to their friends and family this year, but they never got around to mailing them. They are addressed with dated personal messages, but somehow how we never found the time to mail them. That's what happened to many of us this year we have been crippled with procrastination, or putting things off. The list of things we put off doing this year grows by the day. Now, next year's list is already filled because of this year's leftovers. Parents, students, and Christians have really procrastinated immensely, especially when it comes to improving their relationship with God. We said we would study our bibles more, but put it off. We said we would pray more but put that off too. We found it so hard to do what we said. Joshua 24:15 says, "..choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." Throw away procrastination.

BEER CANS: There are some church members (not Christians) who celebrated Christmas by getting drunk and partying heavy. Our trash will tell the story. Some will have beer cans as well as wine and whiskey bottles in their trash this year. For many, being drunk with the wine of the world has become a habit they have found hard to break. Many cannot have fun, watch a football or basketball game on television or enjoy the fellowship of their friends and family without alcohol and drugs. That's unfortunate because the word of God reminds us in 1 Peter 5:8 "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour:" We need to be spiritually sober as well. Throw out the intoxicating fixation we have on the world and sober up next year.

Don't throw away the gift

Finally, brothers and sisters, while we are throwing away the wrappings, don't make a mistake and throw away the gift.

There are many who are trying to make plans for the new year, but even before this year ends, they have already crowded their schedule with expectations and plans that do not include the things of God.

The gift of God is available to men today. It is free to all that will accept him, but many are throwing away the gift.

Jesus came as the gift of God to a dying world. He came, saying to the:

—CORRUPT, if you accept my gift, I'll make you pure.

—FOOLISH, if you accept my gift, I'll make you wise.

—WEAK, if you accept my gift, I'll make you strong.

—TEMPTED, if you accept my gift, I'll help you overcome.

—LOST, if you accept my gift, I'll help you find your way.

—SINNER, if you accept my gift, I'll save your soul!

Jesus presented himself as the perfect gift but many threw away the opportunity.

Nicodemus threw away the gift when he was told that he had to be born again!

The Rich Young Ruler threw away the gift when he heard that he had to sell all he had, take up his cross and follow Jesus

However, when Jesus met the woman at the well and told her that the gift of God stood in front of her. He offered her living water that she would never thirst again.

She didn't talk about throwing it away!

She didn't talk about refusing the offer!

She ran through the city shouting, "Look what I got, Come see a man!"

Come see a man, who died out on Calvary!

Come see a man, who rose on Sunday Morning!

Come see a man who saved my soul!

No. 9078-New Year

No Fear in the New Year

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 4, 2004

SCRIPTURE: The LORD is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid? Psalm 27:1

Introduction

What is your greatest fear for the New Year? Do you fear failure, defeat, sickness or loss? Depending on the person, the new year brings with it the propensity for fear and caution. Fear is regular with most of us. We wrestled with fear when we were children. Then it was fear of darkness and monsters like the Boogie Mann. When we were teens, we were no longer afraid of the Boogie Man but we were afraid of being rejected by our friends or being the object of jokes. We also feared any kind of humiliation and we were plagued by the question, "What if I mess up?" When we reached adulthood, our fears grew up too. Our Boogie Man has become the fear of disease, death, financial problems and other storms. Last year we wrestled with many of our fears. Some are bringing old fears into a new year.

What does it mean to have "No fear?" It means the elimination of general anxiousness and specific apprehensions. In Hebrew the word for fear used in Psalm 27:1 is "Ary" which means to stand in awe of something. In The New Testament the word for fear is "Phobia" which is the fear of a specific thing. The person who stands in awe of another force is defeated before they began. That's why boxers stare down their opponents at the center of the ring to make them stand in awe of them.

A person who is generally fearless can suddenly become fearful in a Phobic situation. There are over 700 kinds of phobias: Acrophobia, the fear of high places; Claustrophobia, the fear of tight close places; Agoraphobia, the fear of open places, Ergophobia, the fear of work; Phobophobia, the fear of fear itself. These are the kinds of fears that can reveal a woman strong enough to fight off a male attacker, but will run and stand on top of a table at the sight of a mouse. It's the fear that makes a man laugh at the face of danger but whimper when he sees a spider because he has a fear of spiders.

Last year many of us stood in awe of the mass of problems that surrounded us. We were also haunted by specific fears about certain things that troubled us all year. As the new year begins, we are tempted to bring our old fear into the new year.

As Christians, we should sing the words of David with great joy, "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?"

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains the source of his strength and faith. Some scholars believe that David wrote the 27th Psalm in his old age at a point when he fainted in battle while facing the son of Goliath. (2 Samuel 21:16-17). In that instance, one of his soldiers, Abishai rescued him just as the giant was about to kill him. After that battle, the people resolved that David would no longer go to the front of battles because he was the light of Israel. If were to be slain, the light of Israel would be put out.

In writing the 27th Psalm, David responds to Israel who looked to him as their light by saying that the Lord is his light. Even in old age or in the face of unknown obstacles, he still maintained that he would not be afraid. He viewed himself as a reflection of the light of God rather than being a light, just as the moon reflects the light from the Sun rather than shine on its own power.

David's statement of faith suggested that even as the unknown approached him that he was not hesitant because the presence of God was always with him and gave him courage.

It is this courage that he seemed to carry with him everyday that prompted him to ask the question, "Whom shall I fear?"

David earned the right to make this declaration of faith. He probably knew more about fear than any king of Israel. Most of his life he was on the run and did not know from one year to the next whether he would live or die at the hands of King Saul. Later on in his life he was threatened by his own son Absalom. Through all of these situations, he learned to overcome his fears by placing his trust in God.

Trust and obey became David's watch words. In the face of fear, trust God. In the face of doubt and confusion, obey God. He learned quickly that to trust and to obey was the secret to overcoming fear.

This Year, Fear Will Disappear

Many people have learned how to overcome adversities by trusting completely in God. They have learned the secret to perfect peace.

In Isaiah 26:3 God said, "I will keep in perfect peace all who trust in me, who thoughts are fixed on me!"

Perfect peace does not mean that there will be no storms, but it does mean that when storms come we are confident that the God we serve is able to keep and protect us from all harm and danger.

The idea of Psalm 27 is to focus on God rather than our fear. Focus on the fact that God can deliver.

Rather than fear what you will do if your job plays out, focus on the fact that even if it does play out God can make a way, has made a way, and will make a way.

Rather than fear what may happen if you get a bad diagnosis from your doctor, focus on the fact that even if the news is bad, that God is able!

In the face of fear, In verses 4-7 David is focused on God. He is living in his presence, looking at his beauty, and listening to his voice. Because of this focus on God and dwelling in his presence, David can lift his head with confidence and sing with joy as we see in verses 5,6. In vs. 7-14 he again is focused on God and prays to him in the midst of this trouble and is reminded that God will never forsake him (vs. 10) and will always guide him (vs. 11), therefore even though he does not receive an immediate answer or relief he can still say in verse 13, "I am still confident..."

Anxiousness Will Disappear this year!

If we stay focused on God this year our anxiousness will disappear. Philippians 4: 6-7 says, "do not be anxious about anything, but in everything, by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving, present your request to God. Then the peace of God, which transcends all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus."

Anxiousness is a form of fear. It is an uneasiness that we develop because we worry about the outcome of a situation. "What if?" becomes our worry.

What if I get fired?

What if I get sick?

What if I lose?

Anxiousness comes because we fear that a negative result will work against us in many ways. Yet, that is just the opposite of what believers come to know about God. Those who distrust God worry about the outcome of a situation, those who trust him know that regardless to the outcome, it will be for their good and according to the will of God.

The word teaches us that "All things" work for the good of them who love the Lord and are following his purpose in life. Millions of believers have experienced this truth. God works out the situations that are entrusted to him for our advantage.

Does that mean that believers should not plan or be concerned about the days ahead? Certainly not! We should make plans, but don't worry about the outcome of the plans. We should run the race but not worry about the outcome of the race.

A general rule of thumb for believers is, "If you are going to worry, don't ask for God's help. If you ask for God's help, don't worry."

A worry free new year is a year that we really begin to trust God for the outcome.

A worry free new year is a year that anxiousness disappears and trust and faith appear in a bold new way!

When trouble is near, still no fear

The new year won't be a vacation year from trouble. Trouble doesn't stop looking for ways to taunt and destroy us just because there is a new year. Yet, despite the presence of troubling situations, we should have no fear in the new year. Verses 2-3 indicate that David expects to have trouble in his life - note that he says, “when evil men...” And “when my enemies...” David’s use of the word “when” is indicative of the fact that he expects to have times of trouble in his life. God makes a way for us to be free from troubled hearts but not from troubled times. David’s conclusion was “and army beseech me my heart will not fear.” David says, “even then I will be confident.”

Confidence like that only comes when we are sure of the outcome. That’s where the believer has the edge. The word of God teaches that when a believer is operating in the will of God “No weapon formed against me shall prosper.” When we are moving in the path that God wants to go, no obstacle, enemy or trouble will be able to slow our march toward fulfillment because God himself will clear a path and make a way for us out of no way.

The point of David’s psalm is not to expect trouble to disappear but to be confident that when trouble comes, God will make a way.

He did not expect his enemies to lay down and roll over, but he was confident that God would give him the ultimate victory as long as he operated within God’s will.

To fear trouble is to doubt God’s ability to arise victorious!

To fear trouble is to second guess God’s power over the enemy!

To Fear what can happen casts a shadow over the ultimate triumphant outcome that every believer expects.

The old warriors of our faith would look trouble in the face then begin to say, “I’m so glad that trouble don’t last always!”

Somebody else would sing, “Victory is mine! Victory is mine! Victory today is mind. I told Satan to get thee behind, Victory today is mine!”

It’s a New Year But the Refuge is Still Here

God is our refuge our strong place to hide in storms. In the new year, that refuge is still here.

Last year God proved himself to be a refuge or place of shelter in times of storm. The calendar has changed but God is still the same. He is the same God we served last year and his power has not diminished because another year has passed. It may be a new year but our refuge is still here!

As we begin a new year, believers should resolve to keep a resolution we had last year, and that is to keep trusting in the Lord!

It does not matter whether it is a new year or an old year, but it’s a good idea to keep trusting in the Lord.

We trust in the Lord because history has shown us that those who trust in the Lord face the unknown without fear.

We trust in the Lord because saints who have trusted him have been rewarded with answered prayers, a few earthly pleasures and heavenly glory!

We are not by ourselves:

—Noah trusted the Lord and he brought him through the great flood!
—Abraham trusted the Lord and he showed him the Lamb in the bush!
—Ruth trusted the Lord and she found happiness while gleaning fields!
—Moses trusted the Lord and he lead Israel out of bondage
—Daniel trusted the Lord and he protected him in the Lion's Den
—Three Hebrew Boys trusted the Lord and he shielded them in the fiery furnace!

Job declared that though his health was slipping away, his children were gone and his wealth was lost that he would still trust the Lord. I hear him across the centuries declaring, "Yea though he slay me, yet will I trust him."

There will be no fear this year because if I am:
—Sad, the Lord will be my fountain of joy!
—At Fault, the Lord will be stronghold of forgiveness!
—Weak, the Lord will be my pillar of strength
—Discouraged, the Lord will be my pool of inspiration!
—Defeated, the Lord will be my crown of victory!
—Darkness, the Lord will be my light!.
—Lonely, the Lord will be my friend
—Helpless, the Lord will be my help.

The Lord is my refuge and my strength a very pleasant help in a time of trouble!

No wonder the songwriter declares! "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear!"

I'm reminded of a family in the hill country often walked a path over the hills and through the valley to visit relatives. One night the father walked with his wife and children along that beaten path, but a sudden fog appeared. No one could see anything because of the thick fog but the father kept moving at the same pace. The son called out to his mother, "Mother shouldn't we slow down. We can't see where we're going." The mother said, "I can't see how to put one foot in front of the other myself. But your father has walked this trail since he was a boy. When he walked backed and forth to grandma's, he walked this trail. When he carried wood for Aunt Carrie, he walked this trail. When he came home late at night from working in the fields, he walked this trail. No, son, I can't see anything, but your father knows the way, we'll just hold his hand!

You may not be able to see how to put one foot in front of the other, but your father in heaven knows the way!

Hold to his hand! God's unchanging hand!

The same hand that was nailed to an old rugged cross! Hold to his hand!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning, he arose from the dead!

Hold to his hand, the Lord knows the way!

My Kindness shall not depart from you

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 11, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations: spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes; For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited. Isaiah 54:2-3; For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the LORD that hath mercy on thee. Isaiah 54:10.

Introduction

Have you made plans to change anything this year? While no one should simply change for the sake of changing, there are some things we need to change to come closer to the Christian ideal We may need to change our diet to improve our health. We may need to change our financial practices to get control of our business affairs. We may need to change our bible study and worship habits to improve our spirituality. We may need to change our general attitude about life to enjoy its bounties fully. What is for certain, those who do not change anything will probably get no further than they have in the past.

There is an old riddle that says, Two toad frogs sat on a stump. One took a notion to jump off, how many are left? Two! One took a notion to jump, but that's all. Many of us have "Notion Motion." We take a notion to improve ourselves but more often than not, our notions never translate to motion."

If we are to personally progress in our spiritual relationship to God it must be more than just a notion.

If you've decided to save money toward the house of your dreams, put some motion in your notion!

If you've decided to spend more time with your family, put some motion in your notion!

If you've decided to improve your grades in school, put some motion in your notion!

If we do everything the same we get the same result. Consider Two hunters got a pilot to fly them into the far north for deer hunting. They were quite successful in their venture and bagged six big bucks. The pilot came back, as arranged, to pick them up. They started loading their gear into the plane, including the six deer. But the pilot objected and he said, "The plane can only take four of your deer; you will have to leave two behind." They argued with him; the year before they had shot six and the pilot had allowed them to put all aboard. The plane was the same model and capacity. Reluctantly, the pilot finally permitted them to put all six aboard. But when the attempted to take off and leave the valley, the little plane could not make it and they crashed into the wilderness. Climbing out of the wreckage, one hunter said to the other, "Do you know where we are?" "I think so," replied the other hunter. "This is just about the same place where we crashed last year."

If we do the same thing we did last year, we end up in the same place.

What about our relationship with God? Will it be the same this year as it was last year? Have you taken a notion to do better or is your notion in motion? Has the resolution you made to intensify your bible knowledge and participation in the church remained a simple notion or have you actually begun to put your notion in motion?

As Christians, we remember the words of James which remind us that "faith without works is dead." Let's plan to increase our spirituality and service this year by "enlarging our spiritual territory." When we do, God has promised that his kindness will not depart from us.

Exposition

This text focuses on God encouraging Israel to prepare for God's continued blessing in the time ahead.

In this passage, Israel was at a very low point. They had gone through a succession of wicked rulers who had led them astray from God. The Kingdom had been divided and weakened. First the northern, and then the southern kingdom had fallen to their enemies. The land had been laid waste, the walls torn down. Even the temple of God where they worshipped had been ram sacked and destroyed by their enemies.

Most of Israel's problems were self-inflicted in that they resulted from their failure to remain true to God and God hid his face from them.

In 54:2-3 Isaiah calls them to: "Enlarge the place of your tent, stretch your tent curtains wide, do not hold back; lengthen your cords, strengthen your stakes. For you will spread out to the right and to the left; your descendants will dispossess nations and settle in their desolate cities.

It is an expansion in spiritual capacity. It is expansion of their faith in the ability of God. They were reminded that God has done great things for them in the past, but here Isaiah wants them to know that God is going to do even greater things for them in the near future. They cold not see it then, but it was on its way.

They were encouraged to prepare for changes, to stretch their boundaries and expand in powerful ways!

Verse 10 is a statement of assurance. Even if mountains and hills are somehow moved, God will remain loyal to his people. He will continue to bless them immensely and his kindness will continue. The people were told to remember his promises and prepare to receive a mighty blessing in the near future.

Enlarging your capacity for God

It is possible that God wants to do a bigger work in your life this year than he did last year? What stopped him from doing that last year? What will stop him from doing it this year? It's possible that last year our tent was too small for any big work and we were not staked properly?

If you have ever camped, you know that tents come in different sizes: Two person, three person or even cabin size tents that can sleep eight to tent people comfortably in separated rooms. What won't work in a camping experience is a "big man in a little tent."

Last year, many of our lives were little "one man" tents. There was just enough room in our schedule for what we wanted in life. Some had a two person tent and there was cramped space for two; maybe a spouse or immediate family. But our schedules and lifestyles weren't big enough for God to fit.

We were plagued with little tents all last year!

We expected little. But, he is a big God who just can't fit into our small expectations.

We achieved little. But he is a big God who does big things and can't fit into little tent achievements.

We even dreamed little! But he is a God who does things beyond our fondest dreams, he's too big for our little tent dreams.

If God is going to do a great work in our lives this year, we must change our tents. That's what Isaiah had in mind when he said, "Stretch forth the curtains of thy habitation."

Get a bigger tent!

In this context, a bigger tent is not physical. It is not a bigger house or automobile. It is not a larger collection of shoes and hats. A bigger tent means stretching out to provide more room for God.

More room for God means, more room for personal bible study and prayer.

More room for God means more time for worship and praise.

More room for God means more time for kingdom building activities in association with the people of God.

More room for God means more time for Christian fellowship and interaction with the family of God.

Making room for God often requires making some drastic changes in the way you do things. It may mean dropping some things, adding some things or at the very least changing some things to make room for God.

He's a big God, but he can't fit in a little tent!

Don’t put a big tent in the wrong place.

Many of us had the right size tents last year, but we ran into trouble anyway because we tried to put a big tent in the wrong place.

Tent placement is important for a happy camper. A person who pitches his tent on the side of hill with the door facing uphill, will catch plenty of water if it happens to rain, even though he’s in a big tent!

A person who chooses to pitch his tent at the bottom of hill will also find himself swimming in water if there his hard rain.

Regardless to the size of the tent, if it is pitched in rocky, or muddy terrain, it will be an uncomfortable situation.

Often many spiritually strong believers pitch their tents with the wrong crowds and experience tough times as a result. Abraham and Lot decided to part company. They had to choose between the mountains on one side and the valleys of Sodom and Gomorrah on the other. Lot, a religious and God-fearing man, chose to pitch his tent in the profitable, but spiritually dangerous city of Sodom. He pitched his big, god fearing tent, in a city filled with gays and lesbians. Ultimately, he lost his wife and fortune because he pitched his tent in the wrong place.

Often as believers, we involve ourselves in some spiritually dangerous enterprises, because we can make money doing them. Quick hustles, get rich quick schemes or even gambling experiences that involve people who are otherwise spiritually strong, are clear cut examples of people who have a big tent but they pitch them in questionable places. How many big tents are frequently seen pitched at the bingo parlor, casino, nightclub, betting parlor, racetrack and other places that don’t allow enough space for such a tent to spread?

Isaiah warned Israel to enlarge the “place” of their tent. Be sure you pitch your tent in a space big enough to accommodate the Mighty God that you serve. It may very well be that last year, we pitched our tents in the wrong places, and despite our faith in God, where we chose to pitch our tents, caused us considerable problems that would not have ordinarily been the case.

This year, we may need to make a few changes.

We need to pitch that big faith that we have in a God on the right terrain, pointed in the right direction, in a way that will give God the space he needs to do what he want to do in our lives.

Strengthen thy stakes

There is one truth about life that is inescapable: big tents need heavy duty pegs and stakes.

Believers have chosen to change their tents this year, must read this last phrase of verse 3, “strengthen thy stakes.” Make sure the pegs that hold your down your bigger tent are secure.

When we operated in a little one man tent we may have used a little peg or no peg at all. After all, the tent wasn't that big and our weight alone could probably keep it in place. However, when we change the size of our tent, we can't use the same little pegs or no pegs that we used on the little tent!

Big tents need heavy duty stakes to keep them in place. The bigger the tent, the bigger the peg needed to keep it in place.

If you have a big faith, you can't keep in place with a small peg.

Big faith is fed by regular worship and praise. You can't switch to a big tent this year and your worship and bible study habits are the same as they were with the little tent.

You can't switch to a big faith experience, but your Sunday School record remains the same as it was last year!

You can't switch to a big faith experience and your level of bible knowledge is the same as it was with the little tent.

How do we get bigger stakes? First by hearing the word of God regularly. Romans 10:17 says, "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God."

Secondly, we study more. 2 Timothy 2:15 says, "Study to shew thyself approved a workman that needeth not be ashamed but rightly dividing the word of truth."

Thirdly, we should pray more. 1 Thessalonians 5:17 says, "Pray without ceasing."

Strengthening your stakes may require changing something. To keep the strong place God has in your life alive and secure, we may need to change something this year! We may need to change a few things to make it happen the way he wants.

One thing is for certain: Big tents need heavy duty stakes

God's Kindness will not Depart

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should consider that those who make room for God in their lives can expect his kindness to be with them, regardless to what the rest of the year brings.

Isaiah told Israel that it had endured difficult days, "Like a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit." Yet, God reminds them to prepare to receive the kindness of God in a way that will not be interrupted!

While we all acknowledge that we must change the size of our tents, where we pitch our tents and how we secure our tents, we assured that in our changing, God's kindnesses toward us will not change.

We must change to get closer to him, God does not and will not change the way he shows kindness to us.

We must change to show more thankfulness to God, but God's kindness to us, will never change!

Even though we didn't have room for him in our little tents last year, God was kind us!

Even though we often pitched our tents in the wrong places, God was kind to us!

Even though we often failed stake our tents with proper amount of study and prayer, God was merciful to us. He looked beyond our faults and saw our needs.

I don't know about you, but I'm glad that the kindness of God remains the same.

I'm encouraged when I read that "mountains may be removed" but my kindness will not depart from you! Hills may be removed, "but my kindness will not depart from you!"

God's love for us, does not change!

God is still the same!

When we learn that God is changeless, the changing times in which we live cannot affect us!

Because God's kindness will not depart from us,

—There is no battle we can face that will stop us!

—There is no mountain that will be to hard for us to climb!

—There is no valley too deep for us traverse!

—There is no night too dark for us to make it through!

—There is no crisis that we cannot control!

—There is no storm so strong that we cannot weather it!

—There is no enemy so frightening that we cannot defeat it!

I'm glad to know that, when I've failed, he still turns failure into success!

I'm glad to know that, when I'm weak, he still turns weakness into strength!

I'm glad to know that, when I have questions, he still provides the answers!

I'm glad to know that, when I am frustrated, he still gives me hope!

It sure feels to know that even if I mess up, he might whip a little bit, but "my kindness shall not depart from you."

It was a kindness that began in a manger in Bethlehem and ended on an old rugged cross!

It's a kindness that makes miraculous things possible, if I call on the name of Jesus!

You know him…

Jesus, who carried an old rugged cross!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who arose early Sunday morning!

No matter what comes this year, remember…

God's kindness

…shall not depart from you!

Who Is He That Overcometh?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 18, 2003

SCRIPURE: "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God? 1 John 5:5

Introduction

Have you ever heard the song, "We shall overcome?" In the year 1900, an African American, Charles Tindley, who was the pastor of a Methodist Episcopal Church, wrote a hymn called, "I'll Overcome Some Day." Some 60 odd years later, that hymn was the basis for the civil rights anthem, "We Shall Overcome." Today it still symbolizes the struggle for freedom - freedom from oppression, freedom from pain and suffering, freedom from everything in this world that attempts to pull us down and convince us that all hope is lost.

The words speak of triumph over life's struggles, and they speaks of signs of the fulfillment of hope - people walking hand in hand, walking free, without fear, without being alone, we shall overcome.

The chorus reads:

Oh, deep in my heart
I do believe
We shall overcome some day

Martin Luther King was the face and the voice of a movement that began many years before he was born. The quest to overcome, despite circumstances motivated slaves and slave leaders such as Nat Turner and others to vigorously protest the institution of slavery at the risk of their own lives. Women like Sojourner Truth championed the cause of freedom even while chains and shackles rattled in the South.

The giants of our race repeatedly reminded us that we should resist until we overcome. A. Phillip Randolph successfully organized the brotherhood of sleeping car porters and in 1937 forced the giant Pullman Co. to recognize the importance of the Black man in America. But even then we had not overcome.

Mary McLeod Bethune, Nannie Helen Burroughs and hundreds of women made significant inroads with President Franklin Roosevelt threw his wife Eleanor for the advancement of our race. Even though President Truman ordered the integration of the Armed Forces it still became apparent that we had not overcome.

Roy Wilkins, Thurgood Marshall and the NAACP won a significant battle in 1954 in the Brown versus school board decision. Even though the Supreme Court of the land said segregation must be ended with "all deliberate speed" even then, it became apparent that we had not overcome.

When young women like Rosa Parks and thousands like her found themselves forced to sit in the back of the bus, buy their food at restaurants at the back door, and sit in the colored sections of public accommodations it became obvious that we had not overcome.

A. Phillip Randolph called for a national march to dramatize the fact that African-Americans were still not first-class citizens in the eyes of the law. He called for the march and Bayard Rustin organized the march on Washington in 1963 that resulted in the flamboyant Martin Luther King telling the world, "I have a dream." As 200,000 people cheered Dr. King that day, it became apparent that we still had not overcome.

In the succeeding years the civil rights act and voting rights act was passed, a man walked on the moon and Blacks were elected to public offices in increasing numbers across the nation. Three Blacks who ran for president Julian Bond, Shirley Chisholm, and Jesse Jackson raised our sights and pointed out our needs to and national audience. Yet with Blacks on the Supreme Court, thousands of black elected officials across the country, new law's and protections on the books, and the segregated public accommodations, it still became apparent that we had not overcome.

It became apparent that overcoming was going to require something more than simply getting new legislation, or electing people to office from our neighborhoods.

Overcoming was going to require a new mindset and national attitude predicated on love and respect for the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

He that overcometh will do so not by the power of his own might or even through the force of law, but will do so by the power of God almighty.

As Christians, we still sing "we shall overcome" but we know that the final victory will be won when the power of God is recognized by every man woman and child.

Exposition

This text focuses on John as he explains the unique relationship between believers and Jesus Christ.

There had been a false teaching circulated among believers that sought to make a distinction between Jesus and the Christ. It seems that the teaching suggested that Jesus was an anointed individual who at his baptism became the Christ when God spoke in the form of a dove and said this is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased. John's discourse in this fifth chapter makes it plain that Jesus and Christ are one in the same.

John maintained that because Jesus and Christ were the same believers who followed his teachings could expect to overcome all obstacles that stood between themselves and the heavenly ideal.

John introduced idea of the "world" as anything that opposes the kingdom of God. In John's day, the world most certainly meant the Roman Empire as well as Jewish cynics who persecuted and prosecuted Jews for their belief in Christ. When John spoke of the world he made reference to circumstances that were hostile to all that is in the Christian heart and mind.

It is a world to be overcome because it stands in the way of the realization of the Christian ideal.

It is a world to be overcome because it stands in the way of universal love for all people.

It is a world to be overcome, because it is a world war and violence that is just the opposite of what the kingdom of God represents.

It is a world to be overcome because it represents the antithesis of the Christian ideal. In this passage, then, the world means human life and society, so far as it is alienated from God.

In John 16: 33 Jesus made a very conclusive statement. He said, "I have overcome the world." It was a concluding statement to a life that had refused to become a part of those things in the world that world against the will of God. In the wilderness, Satan offered him three chances to seize the world for himself and he overcame and rejected Satan three times. He was tempted on many occasions to use his considerable power and influence for himself and refused to do that too. He even refused to hate those who hated him and who spitefully worked against him. He continued to promote that message, refusing to bow to the world, choosing the high ground rather than the low ground. This allowed him to say, "I have overcome the world."

Following in the footsteps of Jesus Christ Himself, the poor man, the beaten man, the unsuccessful man can yet say, "I have overcome the world." What does that mean? It means despite adverse circumstances, tragedy, and difficult situations we continue to do that which is right, strive for that which is godly, and oppose anything that would alienate us from the will of God.

Revelation 21:7 finds John using the same phrase again this time echoing the words of Jesus, he that overcometh shall inherit all things.

Tough love is true love

One of the great truths about Martin Luther King is that he promoted the concept of brotherly love. In verse two of this text John makes it clear that it is difficult to love God and not treat God's children. In the same context, is impossible to love God and not love God's children. Whenever children of God suffer injustices God is not pleased. Poverty, racial discrimination, social injustice, and economic inequities leveled against one segment of society by another indicates an imbalance that makes it difficult to enjoy the fruits of the kingdom. Often it becomes necessary to use tough love to create a situation where real love can exist. Tough love acts are those deeds and actions that appear to be adverse to the idea of love but whose purpose is ultimately to demonstrate love.

It's tough love that forces a parent to discipline a child going astray. It's that same kind of tough love that calls a nation going astray to task. Sometimes tough love is disruptive. Sometimes tough love causes controversy, but it must be done. To get the world to see what is done to the "least of these" is also done to God. John said, when we love the children of God, we love God.

Even though the world hates those of different races, we who know God have overcome hatred and have learned to love everyone

Even though the world hates those of different social classes, we who know God have overcome classism and have learned to loved everyone regardless to class or status.

Bringing that to the world's attention often gets us in trouble. It's a tough love that must be done.

Martin Luther King, promoted brotherly love and compassion for the poor to the extent of marching, protesting and even going to jail. It was a tough love. This tough love required participants to absorb the hatred and anger of their enemies without fighting back or returning hate for hate. Those who followed Dr. King were certainly among those who learned the principles of tough love.

We must overcome the world

The perfect world that Martin Luther King envisioned has not been realized. It is a world where men will be judged by the content of their character; not by the color of their skin. That world has not arisen yet. We are still in a world that still belches the same hatreds that it did when King was alive but just in different ways.

Verse 4 of the text gives us the key factor that has brought us thus far and will help us to overcome; that word is "faith."

We who have faith in God, will overcome.

Dr. King spoke against a pointless war in Vietnam, and this generation faces a war for oil profits in Iraq. Young men and women are dying needlessly as large corporations reap in billions of dollars to clean up and rebuild what we bombed and tore down. Bleak as it seems, we shall overcome.

Young Black men were being lynched, bombed and beaten in Dr. King's time. While the lynching method has changed young Black men are still being lynched today. Beginning in the fourth grade millions of young black men are being placed on a track that begins with special education and for too many ends with lives of poverty or even worse prison or death. Racial profiling has made a new set of crimes across America called, "Driving while Black." –Even in this respect, through faith in God, we shall overcome.

We may get discouraged when we learn that that the fastest growing industry in America is prisons. It's troubling to know that we have more Black men in prison in America than we do college. It's ironic that even Black neighborhoods profit from prison related jobs and cry for help when prison populations drop and threaten closings in a particular area.

But even in this respect, we shall overcome!

Our families are taking a social whipping right now, but we shall overcome!

We have desegregated our schools but we have not integrated our hearts, but we shall overcome that too!

Dr. King spoke against poverty and led a poor peoples campaign that championed the cause of poor people, working people and the less fortunate. When he died in Memphis Tennessee, he was trying to help garbage workers who were complaining about low wages. Poverty still exists in America. The federal government has reduced its assistance to the poor, without at the same time increasing efforts to provide job training and job opportunities.

Our history tells us that there was a period under the New Deal when the government provided jobs for millions, building roads, repairing streets, writing music, teaching literacy and thousand of occupations, but someone called that a give-a-way. But no one seems to mind that this country is spending billions to rebuild Afghanistan and Iraq after we bombed them searching for two men. We spend billions there but we won't spend $1 billion in our own country to guarantee a decent job, a warm bed and a crust of bread to the least of these our brothers.

We shall overcome that too.

We shall overcome these injustices because the God we serve is still on the throne. He that keepeth Israel neither slumbers or sleeps.

We shall overcome because God still holds the faithful in the palm of his hand.

James Weldon Johnson said it right, "God of our weary years, God of our silent tears, thou who hast brought us thus far along the way. Thou who has by thy might led us into the light, keep us forever in the path we pray. Let our feet, stay from the places our God where we met thee, lest our hearts, drunk with the wine of the world we forget thee. Shadowed beneath thy hand may we forever stand, true to our God true to our native land.

When we overcome

Finally, brothers and Sisters, we must consider that in verse five John asked a question and provided an answer. He asked, "Who is he that overcometh the world? Then he answered it by saying, "He that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God."

If you looked closely at verse 4 you read as the the word declared, "Whatsoever" is born of God overcometh the world.

Whosoever specifies the person and ignores the circumstance. But whatsoever, includes both the person and the circumstance.

"Whatsoever" is big enough to deal with the problem of poverty and but it is specific enough to feel the pain of the poor man.

The poor of America, living in cardboard boxes and rat-infested shanties, can still sing we shall overcome!

"Whatsoever" is big enough to deal with the problem of unemployment, but is specific enough to focus on one man's quest to find a job

The unemployed of America, who have worn out there shoes walking from place to place trying to find a job can still sing, we shall overcome!

"Whatsoever" is big enough to embrace the problem of education in America, but it is also specific enough to focus on the struggles of one teacher and one student trying to see the light of day

Those who educate and those who are falling between the cracks of a system that puts more priorities on tests than classroom performance, can still sing we shall overcome!

"Whatsover" is big enough to look at the troubles of the entire African-American culture, but is specific enough to see the struggle of a single Black mother who knows that trouble don't last always.

Those who are the victims of race related troubles on the job, in school and in the community, can still sing, "We shall overcome!"

John asked the question, "Who is he that overcometh?

He that overcometh is the man who believes that God I serve is bigger than the problems I have!

He that overcometh is the woman who believes that no matter how tough the road gets, the Lord will make a way somehow!

He that overcometh is the man who believes that you must stand for something in life or you'll fall for anything!

He that overcometh is the man who declares that God is able, as for me and my house we will serve the Lord!

John said in the Revelation of Jesus Christ, "He that overcometh, shall inherit all things!"

He that overcometh will enjoy that day when the wicked shall cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest!

He that overcometh shall enjoy that day when the mountains will be made low, rough places will be made plain and the crooked places will be made straight!

Storms may rise! But he that overcometh shall inherit all things!

One of these days, by and bye, it'll all be over down here!

He that overcometh will keep telling the story!

He'll keep telling the world about Jesus and a place called Calvary!

Bye and Bye when the battle is over, we'll tell the story!

How he died on an old rugged cross!

We'll tell the story!

How he rose from the grave

We shall overcome!

Oh deep in my heart, I do believe..

We shall overcome someday!

Upgrade Your Expectations

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 25, 2003

SCRIPTURE: "According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death." Philippians 1:20

Introduction

Have you ever used an outdated product? There are many products on the market today that will be out of date before the end of the these times, it will be outdated shortly after it is taken out of the box, requiring an update.

In the 60's the world raved over Boom Boxes. They were large radios that had powerful sounds, but they were soon made out of date by Walkman headsets that could deliver the same sound without disturbing anyone else. Those who had Boom Boxes had to update

Those who bought 78rpm records found that the 33rpm albums were better, forcing an upgrade. Those who bought albums soon needed to upgrade because Eight Track tapes were the new craze. They were quickly replaced by Cassettes, forcing another upgrade. Cassettes were short-lived when CD's became available.

Upgrades are everywhere. VHS movies are now being replaced by DVD's. If you own VHS players, you will soon need to upgrade.

Rotary telephones require upgrades to touch tones. Microwave ovens are displacing stovetops for warming food and digital cameras have almost replaced film and made Polaroid photos a blast from the past.

Even television is switching to digital and digital is switching to High Definition. If you have an old television in the near future, you will have to upgrade to see anything because everything will be HDTV.

When you thought you were comfortable With CPM computers and 5 ½ inch floppy drives, then came Windows 95 and 3 ½ floppies. No sooner than you adjusted to that, you had to upgrade to Windows 98, Windows 2000, Windows ME then CD ROMs instead of floppy drives. Some have already discovered that their Windows 2000 needs upgrading to Windows XP.

As long as you want the same results and nothing breaks, there is no need to upgrade. If your 8 track tape still works and you like only those tapes, then you will never need anything else. But when something goes wrong, or you want something new, that's when you know its time to upgrade.

What about our relationship with God? Have we upgraded our relationship or is it unworkable? When we accepted Christ as Savior, we expected and received Salvation. But, many have not upgraded our relationship to the next level which is to accept him as our Lord.

Is it time for a spiritual upgrade? Is it time for us to study on a deeper level or do we still need the picture stories? Is it time to know how to pray or should we be content with "Now I lay me down to sleep?" Is it time to walk in the spirit with Christ as our Lord or should we continue walking in the dark?

We know it is time for an upgrade when our new CD circumstance won't play in our old 8 track method. It's time for a spiritual upgrade.

As Christians, we continually upgrade our relationship with Christ. We want to be closer, reach higher, and dig deeper to know him and realize his purpose for us. Each time we upgrade, he takes us to another level that takes us closer to our ultimate goal.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul explaining his expectation to move to the level of spirituality that would magnify Christ the greatest.

Paul spoke of his "earnest expectation" that Christ would be magnified completely through his life's work. It was the final level of accomplishment that he sought for his own spirituality that had moved from being a persecutor of the church to a promoter of Christianity in the world order.

Paul's experience in the faith was a continuous upgrade. He upgraded from a reprobate to an advocate. He upgraded from an advocate to a champion. We read how he described the faith as a continuous upgrade like a babe that begins with milk then needs the meat of the word. We read his letter to Corinthians in which he spoke of maturing in his thinking and understanding saying, "When I was a child I thought like a child, I spake like a child, but when I became a man I put away childish things."

In this text, he speaks of his desire and expectation to upgrade to one final level, that of being a catalyst through which others might better see Christ. It's the highest level of spirituality. He wanted to achieve this level, not for himself but for the God he served.

Upgrade our personal life

Is it time to upgrade our personal lives? When we stop to think about it, we may have a personal life that is moving but it is not getting us anywhere. We are not growing, maturing, or getting stronger. What we are doing is O.K., but is it time for an upgrade? Our ability to effectively manage our time, resources and affections usually reflect themselves in quality personal lives.

Time management is a killer. In the African-American community, we have a declining respect for time. We usually start everything 30 to 45 minutes late and never know when to end. That reflects a time management problem. Success at any venture requires the ability to manage time. There should be time for the three "Ps" Planning, paperwork and prayer. We need time to adequately plan, do the necessary paper work to accomplish goals and time alone to pray, read and think. If you have not been allocating the kind of time needed to advance yourself, maybe it's time for an upgrade. Like that old 8-track tape, what you are doing now may work fine, until something breaks. Then you'll realize you should have upgraded many years ago.

Managing our money is another killer. Since most of us are just one paycheck away from poverty (If we miss one paycheck we're in serious trouble), money management is extremely important, yet it is one of the areas in which we are extremely vulnerable. We tend to buy with our eyes rather than with our heads. Often we look for symbols rather than substance and as a result, most of us spend ourselves into debt. Credit cards usually kill us because a person who owns multiple credit cards with a zero balance is still considered in debt because they have the capacity to charge huge sums. We know we only need one card, but we can't find the courage to cut up the other seven. Many of us have no savings or investments. Even the poorest person can save something if he or she really wants to save; all we need to do is take one week out of each month and spend nothing! Not a bag of chips, cup of coffee, candy bar, or movie rental. Save that week's money and we have a plan! It may be time to change the way we manage our resources. What we are doing now works, until something breaks. Then, like the old 8 track tape, we discover we should have upgraded several years ago.

Some may have to pay attention to our romantic lives. There are many singles whose romantic lives are completely out of control. In a desperate search for mates and happiness many have plunged themselves into a downward spiral that is endless. Broken hearts, crying, arguments, fights, cheating and wrinkling sheets is getting to be so regular that we think it's normal. If you are dating a man or woman that makes you happy but in the back of your mind you know you are incompatible, it might be time for an upgrade. If you've been shacking and playing house for a while now but one of you is hesitant to get married, it may be time for an upgrade. It may be time to upgrade to love rather than lust. It may be time to upgrade to commitment rather than convenience. It may mean dumping the old 8 track and getting a CD, a person who is committed and devoted.

The same is true for those who are married. If couples are experiencing strained relationships, it may be time to upgrade, to get help and not simply continue doing what we've been doing. If we keep doing that which did not work last year, we'll get the same results this year. Upgrade!

Upgrade Family Life

Is it time to upgrade our family relationships? The strength of the family is directly related to several elements: Quality time, understanding, support, and love. Generally, that's what makes families work well.

Too many families underestimate the importance of quality time. Quality time is time dedicated to the interest of other family members, with nothing else on the agenda. It's the time that a husband and wife spend together doing what others might call the mundane and ordinary. It's the family gatherings, the in-house talent show, the animated funny moments when everyone feels free enough to let their guards down and laugh and relax. It's the shared moments that make quality time essential to every family. Look at your plan for this year, how much quality time is planned. Are family trips in your schedule? If your kids are participating in school activities, will the family participate with them or will they go it alone and you pick them up afterwards? Do have a get-a-way in the plan? If not, then maybe it's time to upgrade your family plan. What you are doing now may seem to work fine, like the old 8 track. But when something breaks, then you realize that you should have upgraded years ago.

The same is true for support, love and understanding. Families support each other. Family members rarely involve themselves in major undertakings without the support of their family. When the family supports a family member it means defense and offense. It defends family members when they are wrongfully attacked in pursuit of a stated goal. At the same time a supportive family takes the offense and uses all of the resources at its disposal, including time, talent and money to help a family member achieve a goal. A family loves its family members even when the tears roll in disgust over some mistake and bad turn. That's family support. Has your family been supportive of family members in the past? If not, maybe it's time to upgrade. What we have been doing in the past may seem to work fine, like that old 8-track tape. When something breaks you find out you should have upgraded years ago.

Upgrade our spirituality

Finally, brothers and sisters, there may also be a need to upgrade our relationship with God.

Our relationship with God defines the level of our expectations from him. The more we know about God the more we know what to expect from him.

The more we study about God, the more we understand his ways!

The more we study his ways, the more we understand the movement of his hand!

We can't approach a Digital God with 8 track expectations!

We need to upgrade our expectations to match the power of the God we serve!

When a widow woman realized that she was down to her last cup of meal and her last cruz of oil. She expected to eat her last meal and die. Then she heard a word from the Lord that told her to upgrade her expectations. When she expected more from God, and acted in faith, every day she went to that barrel, there was food to eat. Bur first she had to upgrade her expectations!

There's somebody like this widow woman today! Our resources are running low. Our money is drying up and we expect complete failure. But we should not expect a total loss on anything, we should upgrade our expectations and know that the God we serve is working it out!

Job's friends saw his miserable situation and could see no way out. His money was gone, health failed and only fragments of his family remained. They concluded that Job should just curse God and die. Job's friends had an 8 track expectation that needed to be upgraded.

I hear Job declare, "Oh Eliphaz, Bildad and Zophar. Oh Elhu, you need to upgrade your understanding of God.

Just because you heard that I lost all my money, you expected me to give up on God!

Just because you heard that my children were killed, you expected me to give up on the Lord!

Just because you heard that my health is failing me and I covered with sores, you expected me to give up on God!

You need to upgrade your expectations! Everything I have belongs to God. The Lord giveth and the Lorth taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord.

Yea though he slay me, yet will I serve him!

If you are holding your head down today, thinking that everything is lost, upgrade your expectations! God is still on the throne!

I hear the word of God declare, "Lift up your heads oh ye gates and the king of Glory shall come in. Who is the king of Glory? The Lord strong and mighty? Who is the king of Glory, the Lord mighty in battle!"

Upgrade your expectations! As long as God is still on the throne, if you are:

—Praying for Rain, you need to get your umbrella ready!

—Praying for bread, you need to grease the pan!

—Praying for a job, you need to get your resume ready!

Why? Because God is able!

God is able to take our:

—TROUBLES and turn them into triumphs!

—MISFORTUNES and turn them into good fortunes!

—STUMBLING BLOCKS and turn them into stepping stones!

—DEFEATS and turn them into successes!

—SET BACKS and turn them into step ups!

Don't stop expecting God to bless you!

Don't stop expecting God to make a way for you!

Don't stop expecting God to open doors for you!

There is only one door. I heard him say in John 10:14, " I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved"

His name is Jesus!

He came and died to raise our expectations and give us new hope!

He died on an old rugged cross to raise our hope!

Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave to secure our hope!

No wonder the songwriter declares, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness, I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean on Jesus name!

Yes, Jesus Loves Me

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

January 31, 2004

SCRIPTURE: That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, May be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God." Ephesians 3:17-18

Introduction

If you had to name one song you learned as a child, what would that song be? For many people that song would be "Yes, Jesus loves me." Whether it was vacation Bible school or in a Sunday school class, those who grew up around church related activities are familiar with the song, "Yes, Jesus loves me." Its simple words entail some great truths that are not diminished by time. Though many years have passed since many of us have sung those words as children, we still know them because they are engraved in our spirit. We hold the simple words of the song with a sacred trust and endearment that is equaled only by our love and respect for those persons who taught us the simple words and lived them in front of us.

Do you remember the words? "Jesus loves me this I know for the Bible tells me so. Little ones to him belong, they are weak but he is strong. Yes, Jesus loves me. Yes, Jesus loves me. Yes, Jesus loves me. For the Bible tells me so."

The words to the simple song are over 140 years old. Millions of children have sung these words around the world as they have been translated into thousands of languages. The song was written by Anna Warner, the daughter of a wealthy New York City lawyer. When he lost most of his fortune in the 1837 depression, the family was forced to move to a home on Constitution Island in the Hudson River. It was then that Anna and her sister Susan began writing to earn money. Among the first songs she wrote what the words to this little song. In her hard times and difficult moments her simple statement of truth was sold to make ends meet. As if God himself had blessed the words, her family was able to survive and millions of others since that time have been encouraged by the words of this hymn, "Yes, Jesus loves me."

The person who teaches this song to children teaches the more than just a song. They teach them a personal belief that is reflected in the life they live and in the testimony they give. A child learns the words to the song, and then looks to the teacher for life examples of what the song means.

Children are like new converts to the faith, they have a feeble, unrefined, even unpolished sense that God loves them but it is not sustained in knowledge but only by the example that they see in front of them. The teacher who teaches the words in an example that lasts long after the Sunday school class has ended. Even as adults, on some infant level he may remember having heard, "God loved the world so much that He gave His only Son..." and rest comfortably with the knowledge that God loves and cares for us.

As Christians, we rejoice in the fact that God loves us. His love transcends our weaknesses and shortcomings. We know this because the Bible tells us so.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes to the Christians in Ephesus about the nature of God's love. Not only did Paul talk about the love of God, but he demonstrated it until his dying day. He wanted all believers to know the full measure of God's love.

Paul felt that fully knowing God would help them to receive and appreciate the "fullness of God." Only through understanding the full nature of God's love can Christians comprehend the value of Christ's sacrifice and the beauty of the Christian life.

Paul said a Christian can consider that he has comprehended the fullness of God when he knows about God's love in four different ways, all of which he tried to demonstrate in his own life. We cannot comprehend what the words "Yes, Jesus loves me" really mean until we see the words dramatized in at least one life lived in front of us. For believers, Jesus himself was the example. He gave us a pattern to follow as we love others the way he has loved us. God loves us with breadth, depth, length and height. We should love others the same.

How Jesus loves us.

The one who teaches children about God's love has the responsibility of teaching more than just the song but they have to give an example in the course of their lives that they truly believe that Jesus loves them. They demonstrate this in all four aspects that Paul referred to in his letter to the Ephesians.

BREADTH: What is the breadth of God's love? When we use the word 'breadth', we think 'wide' and 'broad.' To demonstrate the breadth of love means to show compassion and love that reaches out beyond our own sphere of operation. The breadth of God's love is best described by the simple children's song that says: "Jesus loves the little children, all the children of the world. Red, yellow, Black and White, they are precious in his sight, Jesus loves the little children of the world." His loves takes in the whole world, but that does not mean that he ever loses sight of the importance of the individual. While Jesus' love is expansive enough to take in the whole world, it is narrow enough to focus on my personal estate. He cares about the world and about me too. That is why the emphasis in the children's song is on two words, "love" and "me." He loves everybody in general and he loves me in particular.

The teacher who teaches such a song to children, shows them her willingness to love everyone, of every race and class with equal intensity while remembering that God also loves the teacher too.

LENGTH: What is the length of God's love? It refers to the persistency and consistency of God's love to man. It is a measure of the course that God's love has traversed to reach each individual. God's love is so long that it has reached from the infancy of creation through the ice age, stone age, creation of man, the great world flood, the rise and fall of Egypt, Babylon, Assyria, Persia, Greece, and Rome. It has withstood the inquisitions of the dark ages, survived the American civil war, two world wars, Korea, Vietnam and Operation Desert Storm. God's love is so long that it has extended from the beginning unto this present moment. The trail of his love leads right to your doorstep. What all that means to a child is that when we love like God loves you stick with things a long time.

The teacher who has to teach this value to children demonstrates it by her ability to be consistent and persisted and all that she does. They are usually big numbers that indicate the longevity and persistence of a great teacher. A marriage that lasts over 50 years is an indicator of length. It teaching career that lasts over 40 years is an indicator of length. Even to teach children one single song for over 50 years is an indicator of length and persistence.

DEPTH: What is the depth of God's love? How deep is God's love? The depth of Christ's love is further demonstrated when we consider how far he had to travel from his throne in glory to finally get to us. For us, it shown by how far we are willing to go to show love. There are many who love, but their love is shallow and superficial.

There are many who love genuinely. They exemplify the breadth of love and show respect and love for all people. They show a length of love in that they have loved for a long time without giving up.

However, the depth of love is shown not by how many people you love, or how long you have loved, but how much risk you are willing to endure for the person you love. This is the kind of love displayed when a mother sees her child standing on a railroad track with a speeding train only seconds away and dives to save the child at the risk of her own life.

This is the kind of love Jesus spoke of when he said in John 15:13, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

The teacher who teaches this aspect of God's love must show by example that there are no limits to what they will do to make just one child happy. Love them, give them a card, or even adopt a child and love him like her own. It is the depth of love that is demonstrated by the one who teaches the song, "Yes, Jesus loves me."

The height of God's love

Finally, bothers and sisters there is a fourth aspect to God's love that we must grow to understand, it is the height of God's love.

The height of God's love shows what he has lifted us from and where he is taking us.

It was the love of God that reached down and picked us up from the miry clay of sin, washed us in the blood of the lamb and set us on a course toward heaven.

Paul said this final dimension of the love of God shows us the height of his love. he shows us this height by lifting us up higher than we have ever been before.

The teacher who teaches this truth to children must be able to say, "I came to Jesus as I was, weary, wounded and sad. I found in him a resting place and he has made me glad!"

I came to him low, but he has lifted me higher!

I came to him in sadness but he gave me gladness!

Yes, Jesus loves me, because he lifted up my bowed down head!

Yes Jesus, loves me, because he fixed my broken spirit!

Yes, Jesus loves me, because he healed by wounded soul!

Yes, Jesus loves me, because when I wasn't able to take care of myself he put me in caring hands!

Yes, Jesus loves me, because before I drew my first breath, he came to this old earth, lived for 33 years, died and rose again to give me one great opportunity.

He died, to lift me up!

He died, to take me higher!

He died, so that when this life is over, I would take the wings of eagles and fly away!

On Wednesday, January 28, 2004 Lucille Toston went home to be with the Lord. For over 50 years, she taught and sang to little children, what she believed in her heart and demonstrated in her life, "Yes, Jesus loves me."

The Play of the Day

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 1, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "And the Lord said unto Joshua, "This day will I begin to magnify thee in the sight of all Israel, that they may know that, as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee." Joshua 3:7

Introduction

Have you ever done something that saved the day? Most of us have had at least one experience of doing something that affected the outcome of something important. It may have been in an athletic competition or fast action taken in an emergency. It could have been an innovative idea you introduced to your employer or some other action that had the net result of saving the day. When we do what is necessary in a spectacular or extraordinary way, just in the moment of time, it's a special moment.

The 'Play of the Day" is a special feature of a sports cast in which commentators tell of special plays that made a difference in the outcome of a game. It's not unusual to see replays of 90 yard touchdown runs, or interceptions that have been returned for touch downs. As teams ready themselves for Super Bowl competition nothing would suit any team member better than to get an opportunity to make the "Play of the Day" in a super bowl contest.

A play of the day is a memorable moment. In 1998, the Fox News network showed an unbelievable play of the day. The play was from a high school basketball game between a big huge high school, and the smallest school in that division. The big school was heavily favored going in, but somehow, the small school managed to hang on throughout the game. Finally, there was only one second left in the game, the small school had the ball under their own net, and they were one point behind. They called time out and went over to confer with their coach. When they came back, one boy lined up with the ball outside the court. He slapped the ball before putting it into play. When he did, several of his teammates got down on all fours and starting barking like dogs. The players on the other team turned around to see what was going on. And when they did, the boy with the ball passed it to the team's ace shooter and he lofted it through the air. The clock ran out as the ball swished through the net to win the game. It was the play of the day.

A play of the day is an exciting moment. Sometimes players get so excited when they have made outstanding plays that they jump up and down with joy and demonstrate their excitement sometimes by dancing in the end zones, much to the anger of their owners and managers.

The greats of Super bowl history are known for making many great plays when it counts. From Bart Starr in 1967, Joe Namath in 1969, Doug Williams in 1988, to Tom Brady in 2002 to Dexter Jackson in 2003, football world has been fascinated with its most valuable players, those who repeatedly seem to be able to make the "play of the day."

God needs a few MVP's. Those who are willing to go out each day and, through faith, make the play of the day.

All of us are on God's team. He has devised a playbook and game plan for our eventual victory. Each of us should begin each day fired up, motivated and determined to make each day a victorious day for God.

As Christians, let us resolve to approach today and every day as a day of victory. A day when we resolve that "This is the day that the Lord has made, I will rejoice and be glad in it!"

Exposition

This text focuses on Joshua as he is told by God to prepare for a great day because planned to magnify him in the eyes of the people.

For Joshua, the time following the death of Moses was an extremely difficult time. For 40 years, Moses led the children of Israel. He made the big plays. It was Moses whom God used to bring down the 10 plagues of judgment on Egypt. It was Moses whom God used to stretch forth his rod over the Red Sea and cause the waters to roll back. It was Moses who showed the people bread from heaven in the wilderness and delivered God's ten commandments. Now, Moses was dead and Joshua was the quarterback.

God reassured Joshua that he would stand with him, just as he had stood with Moses. He was told to prepare for a victory, "This day will I magnify thee in the sight of all Israel." Joshua went forth that day, not knowing exactly what God would do, but prepared to work the game plan. Under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, the priests were told to proceed toward the swelling River Jordan. When their feet touched the water, the waters rolled back for them, just as they had for Moses a generation earlier. It was a feat so miraculous that it was obvious that only God could have caused it to happen. On that day, the rolling back of the Red Sea was the defining moment for Joshua. It was the day in which he was magnified in the eyesight of the people.

Joshua 4:14 gives the report of the impact of that one day on the life of Joshua. It says, "On that day the Lord Magnified Joshua in the sight of all Israel:and they feared him, as they feared Moses, all the days of his life."

On that day, it was the rolling back of the River Jordan, but that was not the only day. On another day, it was the sun standing still. On another day, it was falling walls around Jericho. Day after day, God seemed to work with Joshua to pull off mighty acts of faith, to the point that the people came to expect him to be a man used by God to make the big plays in their national life.

The word makes it clear, what Joshua already knew. The great feats that Joshua accomplished were not performed under his own power, but by the power of God. Joshua was magnified in the eyes of the people, but Joshua himself gave God the praise and the glory for he was the real source of Joshua's great acts.

He Sanctified Himself

In late 2003, Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants made a tearful confession in a news interview with 60 minutes. In his confession of drug use and other problems, he also told how he and other team members hired prostitutes and sent them to the hotel rooms of the opposing teams in big games, with the stated purpose being to tire them out before the game. The gullible players could not resist and usually entered the game unrested and fatigued.

Joshua told Israel in verse 5 to "sanctify yourselves." To sanctify yourself means to set yourself apart from the rest.

If believers want to have any chance at all of making the play of the day for the Lord, each of us must sanctify ourselves and commit ourselves to the goal of lifting up the kingdom of God. Just as Taylor and other plays attempted to do things to weaken their opponents, Satan is busy trying to weaken believers as well. Daily he travels throughout the world going to and fro, seeking someone to devour and destroy.

Sanctify ourselves means to be prayed up and spiritually charged!

Sanctify ourselves means that we have put on our game face and are ready to face the world!

Sanctify ourselves means that we are spiritually and mentally ready to tackle whatever comes against us.

Review The Game Plan

In the locker room and in pre-game sessions, the coaches often review the game plan. No team enters a big contest without a game plan. It's the strategy that takes into account the strengths of its team and the known weaknesses of its opponents. Therefore, the coach of a team takes special pains to review the game plan and make sure that each person is acquainted with what is to be done.

That's what happened in verse eight. Joshua called the people together to rehearse the game plan. The priest would carry the ark of the covenant in front of the people. The people were to stay back about 4/5th of a mile. When the priests feet touched the water, they would trust God to do a big work and prepare to move when God responded as expected. That was the plan. It was executed to the letter and the rest is history.

Every now and then believers should review their game plan and the instructions from God. There are some plays that we don't understand but we must carry out anyway and trust the wisdom of the coach. When we face every day trusting God, he will roll back the waters and make the big plays possible. He'll open up the holes in the line. He'll make complete the passes and ward off blockers. But we must trust him every step of the way.

We may not understand all that God wants us to do, but our resolve should be, "If the Lord wants me in the game. Here am I send me."

Whatever you want me to do.. Wherever you want me to go.

Here am I, send me!

Get Ready for the Victory

Finally, brothers and sisters, every good team comes out of the locker room fired up and ready to pursue the victory. Usually there is a band playing and a crowd is cheering!

Joshua told Israel that God was planning to do a great work for the people. He said the opponents of the nation would see the glory of the Lord revealed before the end of the day.

Every believer should be just as confident as a football player coming out of the locker room. He or she should be fired up and ready to live each day for the Lord.

One thing is for certain, no player has every made the play of the day if he refused to get in the game.

For believers, we get in the game when we pick up our cross and follow Jesus.

Jesus never said to his disciples that bearing the cross would be easy, only that it was necessary.

There are many who have never made the play of the day because they turned down the opportunity to bear the cross, despite its many blessings.

The Rich young ruler turned down salvation because he wanted it without taking up the cross. Must Jesus bear the cross alone?

Felix and Drusilla turned down the cross because they wanted to wait until a more convenient season. Must Jesus bear the cross alone?

Agrippa turned down the cross although he was almost persuaded. Must Jesus bear the cross alone? I don't know about you but I found out that "There's a cross for everyone and there's a cross for me!" Brothers and sisters there is power in the cross. At the Cross the:

-Neglected get attention and the outcast finds a new home!

-Problems find solutions and lingering questions find evasive answers.

-Heartaches go away and hurts will be healed

-Crying eyes will be dried and burdens will roll away!

When Jesus died on Calvary, was buried in a borrowed tomb and arose early on Sunday morning!

It was more than just the play of the day! It was the play of a lifetime!

That's why the saints are still singing, "Victory is mine!" Victory is mine!"

I told Satan to get thee behind. Victory today is mine!

Where do real men stand?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE:"And Elijah came unto all he people, and said, How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word. Then said Elijah unto the people, I, even I only, remain a prophet of the Lord; but Baal's prophets are four hundred and fifty men." 1 Kings 18:21-22.

Introduction

What is your definition of a real man? The answer to that question varies depending on the respondent. Recently a pollster toured various high school campuses asking young men their definition of a real man. The standard responses fell in four categories, physical, defiance, social, and sexual issues. These were standards used by the young describe a real man. It seems that many concluded that a real man is the biggest, badest and toughest. So, many young men, to prove themselves men set out to be the baddest and the toughest on campus, proving themselves to be strongest and the fastest of the their. Strength was associated with manhood. Social priorities were also considered the measure of a man. The man who had the most friends, the most money or was the most influential was considered a real man. So young men struggled to hold positions that would gain them social prominence. They believed social prominence would make them a real man. The third area was sexual. Most high schoolers believe that the many who could "score" more with the ladies was a real man. In fact, the higher his reputation as a lady-killer, the more he is considered a real "man." Therefore, many young men felt the need to prove their manhood to their peers. The third category was Deviance. There were many who defined their manhood by their willingness to defy the accepted standards of the day. If they were successfully able to drink, gamble, steal or use drugs in addition to any other activity that defied the rules, they were considered men. The poll found a large number respondents believed that a real man is someone who does whatever he wants to do, when he gets ready, regardless to what anyone else feels.

Even though the study only polled high schoolers, there are many adults who still share that same view today. Real men in their eyes must be physically strong, have money, power, influence and sexuality. Anything shorter than that is less appealing.

While there are many variables that determine real manhood, it has become a proven truth that a man who can do the right thing when all others around him are doing wrong and is willing to shoulder responsibility for the care of himself and those in his charge, has learned the secret to real manhood.

As Christians, men have learned through the generations that those who have the courage to stand for what is right and to obey the command of God have been characterized as real men, in the sight of God.

Exposition

This text focuses on the prophet Elijah as he stood alone against a wicked king.

Elijah was one of the great prophets of the Old Testament. Perhaps the greatest moment in his life is epitomized by his challenge of the prophets of Baal atop Mt. Carmel. Elijah was the prophet of record during the reign of King Ahab and his wicked queen Jezebel. Jezebel worshipped an idol God named Baal and influenced her husband, the king, to do the same. This displeased God, who moved Elijah to challenge Jezebel and Ahab. On numerous occasions, Elijah went before the queen and pronounced judgment on the royal couple's wicked ways. Obviously, she was not pleased. A unit of the king's soldiers was sent to arrest Elijah, but the great miracle worker, called down fire from heaven and consumed them at God's command.. Jezebel threatened Elijah with death. It is an understatement to say that she hated him.

Elijah's decision to stand against the evil dictates of Ahab and Jezebel was courageous. It was certainly life threatening. Jezebel was known to be vicious and wicked. She was a destroyer. In all of Israel, only one man would challenge her, a fact that irritated her to the point of paranoia. Yet, Elijah stood strong.

In a great contest on Mt. Carmel, Elijah completely humiliated the prophets of Baal. He challenged the false prophets to get their God to answer them by answering from heaven with a fire that would consume an animal sacrifice. Despite the dancing, wailing and pleading of the Baal prophets, there was no answer. When his turn came, Elijah quietly called on God and he immediately answered with fire from heaven that consumed the sacrifice as requested.

When he decided to stand for what was right. Elijah proved himself a man. When he chose to be active rather than passive about the problem he faced, he proved himself a man. But, when he chose to stand on God's word, he was more than just a man, he was a faithful man in "godly hands."

The Issues That Face our People

Where do real men stand on the issues that face our people? While there are thousands of men who are taking bold stands when it comes to the socioeconomic issues that effect our people, too many are still not willing to take a stand.

FAMILY: Where do real men stand when it comes to the family? The Black community is suffering today because of lack of male leadership in the family. Our women have become single parents operating as heads of households. Too often, even those families that have husbands still find wives, for the most part, operating as if there were no husbands, because the men of the family go separate directions from their wives and children. When it comes to family, where do real men stand? Our history tells us that the man was once a strong presence in Black families. Despite slavery and racial discrimination, Black men stood strong as defenders of the family and the faith. It was Black man who braved who the threat of lynching and physical abuse to stand firm with his wife and children at all costs. Yet, today only a dwindling minority of African-American families have the benefit of a real man in the family. The real man dedicates every resource at his disposal to care, nurture and protection of his family, even at the risk of personal loss. The real man takes the lead in his household, and is wise of enough to delegate tasks to the most capable family members without deserting the responsibilities of the same. The real man does not have to earn more money than his wife, neither does he have to be physically stronger than anyone in his family. He is a man by virtue of the strength of his character and richness of his wisdom. A real man leads his family spiritually. He represents Christ in his home. When his children close their eyes at night, he is keenly aware that his daughter's prayer to God "Our father, who art in heaven." He is careful, because his son's image of God what he sees in his own father. The real man stands strong in his family because he defends it in every way possible.

ECONOMIC FREEDOM: Where do real men stand with respect to economic independence. For years, our men fought for social freedom. Once freed, we found another slavery, which is the slavery of economics. When jobs are scarce and money is little to nothing, where do real men stand? Some have the notion that a man should do anything to feed himself and his family. This is true, if by anything it is mean any "moral and just" thing. Many men have taken the road to least resistance today. Too many are selling drugs, bootleg movies and CD, stolen merchandise, and involving themselves in a variety of unlawful activities all under the guise of economics. They brush off the illegality of their actions by saying, "A man's gotta do, what a man's gotta do." Despite hard times, no real man defends crime as an economic necessity. Our history shows that we have lived through wars, slavery, floods and depressions, but, for the most part, the men of our families refused to steal or involve themselves in wrongdoing in the name of "doing what we gotta do." Real men don't steal to get money. Real men don't abrogate that which belongs to others just to enrich themselves. Real men make tough choices to build economic security. Real men complete the training they need to be competitive in the economic market. A young boy who claims he's a man but can't force himself to study or complete his education, may wear a man's pants, but he's still not a man. The man who throws his money away gambling, drinking and living large, may have fun, but he's living loosely like a boy, and is a far cry from the man he wants to be. Our history shows some unique patterns. We have seen men with little or no resources rise high in the world of business, finance and economics because they used they had faith, courage and a willingness to work hard. We can't have economic freedom if we are not willing to work. We can't have freedom if we are not willing save and invest. We can't be independent if we spend everything we have on keeping up with Joneses. Where does the real man stand? He stands on the side of wisely using his resources instead of wasting them away.

SOCIAL AND POLITICAL FREEDOM: Where does the real man stand in the social order? For many years, we have sought many political solutions to our social situations. In the process, many of our men conveniently forgot themselves in the process. The ultimate goal of the Black man is to pull himself out of poverty and social decay, then reach down and pull himself up. Many people spend their entire lives trying to break the chains of bondage and get free only to spend the rest of their lives trying to sip mint juleps and tea with the master in the big house. They operate on the false notion that if they make enough money, buy big enough houses, and go to enough parties at the big house that eventually the master will forget they were once slaves. That's a mistaken notion. The master will never forget, neither will his children. You may be dressed up with diamonds around your neck, but in his mindset, you are still a slave. Rather than emulating the master, real black men, use their resources to help the poor, distress and the huddled masses who still yearn to be free. Real black men have a sense of connection with the mother race to the point that they can never distance themselves from the problems and issues that effect the poorest of those left behind. Where does a real Black man stand? A real black man stands on the side of issues that will help the poorest of his people in the shortest period of time. The real Black man may find it necessary to stand alone against the prophets of Baal, who yell at him and ridicule him on every turn. But, real men will stand anyway!

"A Godly man"

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that there is only one thing better than a real man and that is a good man in godly hands.

Elijah was a good man. By any standard, he was a real man. Strong, independent and courageous. But what made Elijah more appealing is the same quality that made many of the strong men of the bible great, they were real men in godly hands.

Abraham was a good man, but when he put his trust in God and moved at his command, he became a good man in godly hands.

Jacob was a good man. He prospered with material wealth and became respected as a man with a head for business. But one night he wrestled with the Lord and refused to let him go. From that night forward, he became a better man, because he was a good man in godly hands!

David was a good. He was a great leader and military strategist. But one day he realized his own vulnerability and said, "create in me a clean heart oh God and renew in me a right spirit." –He became even greater because he was a good man in godly hands.

A good man in godly hands is a powerful man because God uses him!

A good man in godly hands is an influential man because God controls him!

A good man in godly hands is an effective man because God directs him!

Where do real godly men stand?

Real men stand on the side of the Lord!

That is why Joshua told those who chose differently, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

As men go forward in the world they should always remember to take the Lord with you!

If you take the Lord with you, your greatest enemies can be conquered!

If you take the Lord with you, your greatest obstacles can be overcome!

If you take the Lord with you, your gravest doubts can be overcome!

If you take the Lord with you, your heaviest burdens can be lifted!

If you take the Lord with you, your highest mountains can be climbed!

If you want to make this journey, you got stand on the Lord' side; you got to walk with the King!

Storms may rise, but you got to walk!....

Winds may blow, but you got to walk!

All along this tedious journey, tell the world, I've got to walk with the King!

Who died out on Calvary!

Who arose Early Sunday morning!

I've got to walk with the king!

For Such A Time As This

SCRIPTURE: "…and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" Esther 4:14

Introduction

Are there any strong Black women in your family? Is it a mother, sister, grandmother, or aunt? If there are, you probably are among those who realize that such women as these always seem able to tackle the problems that exist and rise to the occasion. Whatever the problem, many families always seem to have a granny, aun-tee, or Muh-Dear, who appears to be given to the family by God for "such a time as this."

The African-American community has a rich history of women's heritage. Black women have played important roles in advocating, promoting and championing the causes of our race. It seems that God has always touched a few women in every generation to rise above the norm and speak, lead and champion the cause of their families specifically or our race in general.

We have heard the names before and know them like the backs of our hands. Women such as Sojourner Truth, Harriet Tubman, and Phyllis Wheatley are the champions we study about in school as they fought against slavery, prejudice and the right of our people to be free.

In the time when America had accepted the institution of slavery, the thundering voice of Sojourner Truth, raised its consciousness to a new level. The attention she received and the impact she made was if she was born for "such a time as this."

Harriet Tubman, dangerously moving into the South to help slaves escape on the Underground Railroad, came at a time when slaves were looking to be free but could find no way. Her boldness made it clear that she was born for "such a time as this."

Wheatley wrote poetry and prose in a time when Negroes were thought to be incapable of constructive thought. She raised that consciousness in way that made it obvious that her very birth was divinely timed so that she could be available for "such a time as this."

No matter what generation of our history we study, from Nefertari in Egypt to Carol Moseley Braun in America, there are Black women who always seem to rise to champion the cause of our race. Their very lives seem to suggest that they were born, especially suited for times "such as this."

No generation has been without great women who have championed our causes. However, the greatest champions are not in the history books. They are in our own families. Each family that looks into its own history won't have to look too long before it finds a long line of women who seemed to have been born for "such a time as this."

Our history is that of mothers, grandmothers and great-grandmothers who seemed to have been equipped with the essentials necessary to address the circumstance of the family. In the time in which they lived, they had what it took to get the family through. Whether it was courage, scholarship or willingness to rise above depravation, God always seemed to use them in peculiar ways, as if they were born for "such a time as this."

As Christians, we salute the African-American woman because God has used her beauty, courage and strength throughout the generation to help lift our race. Today, she is still doing the same. It is if her very existence is for "such a time as this."

Exposition

This text focuses on Esther as she is told that her rise to throne of Persian was destined so that she could save her people from destruction.

The story of Esther concerns a king called Ahasuerus, the grandfather of Cyrus the Great, who married a young Jewish girl named Esther, a captive taken from the city of Jerusalem. It also involves her cousin, Mordecai, who became a judge in the city gates in Susa, the capital of Media-Persia; and an officer of the King's court named Haman.

The events of the Book of Esther take place when Israel was in captivity under King Ahasurus. Many of the Jewish people had been allowed to return home to rebuild the city of Jerusalem and restore their worship, others for various reasons stayed. The story is that of a king and his kingdom. The king divorces the queen who is at his side when the story opens, and thereby becomes a lonely man by his own decree. He is powerless to change the decree after it is issued, and in his loneliness, he begins a search for a new queen. Esther, under the control of her cousin, Mordecai, is brought before the king and he falls in love with her. Because of her beauty, he immediately chooses her to be his queen and exalts her to the second place in the kingdom.

Esther's rise to the throne was well timed. There was a movement being planned by Haman to destroy the Jewish people. She would ultimately be the single presence that would make the difference. Haman managed to pull the wool over the king's eyes and deceive him into signing a decree to destroy all the Jews in his kingdom. Haman and Mordecai are instantly in direct conflict because Haman was "the enemy of the Jews." Learning that Mordecai is a Jew, he vows to eliminate him from the kingdom. Mordecai overhears the plot and gets word to Queen Esther that she would need to act to save the people. He is confident that the people would be saved, either by her hand or by someone's hand because God would not allow his people to be destroyed. Thus he utters the words of this text, "and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?"

Eventually Esther is able to expose Haman's plans, and save the people but not before watching Mordecai raised to a position of prominence and Haman hanged from gallows he built for Mordecai.

Potential to Position

Esther had considerable potential. She had natural beauty, charm, wit and intelligence. What she did not have was position.

African-American history has shown that Black women have always had natural beauty, charm, wit, courage and strength. Until recent times, Black women have been historically blocked from positions where their intrinsic value could be utilized fully.

While barriers against Black women are falling, many still remain. The U.S. Department of Labor reports that while 62 percent of Black women are now in the American workforce, most of the jobs are still technical, sales, and administrative support areas. These are jobs that do not offer high wages or full packages of benefits. Slowly the barriers are falling. In 1987 there were 172,200 businesses owned by Black women. By 1996, there were 405,000. Black women are moving into the workforce, business community, government and world leadership in large numbers. Sociologists point to the Black woman's attention to education as a primary reason. In the last decade there were 918,000 Black women enrolled in higher education, with only 55,300 in prisons, according to the U.s. Justice Department (1995). That is significant for our people because it is just the opposite of what is happening to Black men. In the same time period there were 556,000 Black men in college and 711,600 in prison.

The declining presence of Black men in educational circles and in leadership is paving the way for Black women who are moving from potential to position, for "such a time as this."

As women move from potential to position, they should always remember the "Esther Factor." Esther never forgot who she was and used every opportunity at her disposal to help her people. The Esther Factor, is the challenge of Black women today who are being encouraged not to forget that they are Black. As they begin to move in social socials outside of their own community, don't forget the huddled masses of your people who still need your help. Use your influence to reach down and help someone else.

Once in a position, Esther risked losing it all to help her people. She succeeded but she could have lost it all. The Esther Factor is the combination of faith and remembrance that prompts every successful woman to do what she can to help those who follow after her.

Esther Appealed to the King

Once in her position, Esther appealed to the King to save the people. Likewise, the Black woman cannot afford to become silent. The barriers are falling but she must continue to raise the consciousness of America.

While 62% of Black women are in the work force, they still earn only 89 percent of the salary of white women.

The fact 62 percent of Black women are working reflects other factors as well, one being that 62 percent of Black families are headed by single women. Marriages are declining in the Black community. In 1950, 62 percent of Black families were headed by a married couple. By 1998, only 37 percent of our families have a marriage presence.

This is no time for Black women to become comfortable. Black women still face a dilemma. In America 41 percent of all abortions are performed on Black women. The pregnancy rate for young Black women 15-19 years of age is twice that of white women. Rates of domestic violence among Black women are three times the rates of white women.

On top of all of that, the educated Black woman has a man problem. The field of available educated Black men is declining as more Black women become professionals with fewer Black male professionals from which to choose. This fact has increased the "jungle fever" syndrome as black women start looking to other races to find a mate.

The Esther Factor in this circumstance, focuses on the need to keep raising the consciousness of those around us that the social ills that are destroying our people are real. Therefore, women's organizations should intensify their efforts to attack the problems that effect our people. We cannot ignore them, we must appeal to the king! Appeal to the government! Appeal to the school boards! Appeal to the ruling powers of this nation on behalf of the huddled masses who are desperately in danger of destruction.

Women who have achieved have been placed in their position, "for such a time as this."

God's Hand in the Plan

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that Esther was successful because God had a hand in the plan.

The name of God is not mentioned in the book of Esther. Even though his name is never mentioned it was evident that his hand was in the plan.

Esther rose from obscurity to prominence in way that could only happen unless God's hand was in the plan.

Esther was able to change the course of events that would have destroyed our people, only because God's hand was in the plan.

Black women who have succeeded historically may give some credit to changing times, increased education and increased opportunities; but what's really making things happen is that God's hand is in the plan.

I'm reminded of the church mother who was always so confident that the Lord would make a way. The young women of the church asked her one day, "Tell why you are so confident." The old lady said, "When I was girl, my mother taught me to ride my bicycle and she ran beside me. I could feel her hand holding me as I paddled along. One day, I rode a long distance. When I stopped I realized that mama wasn't beside me. I asked mama, how was it that she was not there but I still felt her hand. She told me that she gave out of breath but she knew the Lord was beside me. I didn't see his presence, but I felt his hand. Ever since that day, I've learned that if God's hand is in the plan, everything is gon' be all right!"

Every man or a woman who makes a move in this life, should recognize God's hand in the plan.

If you have made advancements in education, it was God's hand in the plan.

If you have made career advancements, it was God's hand in the plan.

If you have made achieved family goals, it was God's hand in the plan.

When God's hand is in the plan..

—The world may kick you down, but God will pick you up!

—The world may strike you out, but God will give you a home run!

—The world may think you are a loser, but God will make you a winner!

—The world may think you are weak, but God will make you strong!

When God's hand is in the plan the impossible becomes possible!

When God's hand is in the plan, the improbable become probable!

When God's hand is in the plan, the unthinkable become thinkable!

It's the same hand the carried an old rugged cross to Calvary one day!

The world intended it for bad, but God had a hand in the plan.. and early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power!

All power in his hands!

SCRIPTURE: "One thing have I desired of the LORD, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the LORD all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the LORD, and to enquire in his temple." Psalm 27:4 "And let the beauty of the LORD our God be upon us: and establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish thou it." Psalm 90:17

Introduction

If your life could be depicted by a painting, would it be a DaVinci, Picasso or graffiti? If your life were described as a piece of music, would it be a well-composed symphony or the disconnected loud chilly sounds of rock? If your life were portrayed in a dance, would it be a ballet, a slow drag or something in between? Each of our lives is a work in progress. Whether it becomes a masterpiece or a mass of confusion without meaning and significance is up to each person. We daily make decisions and take directions that either contribute to the beauty of our work or detract from its overall importance.

There is a little artist in each of us. There is a little dancer, a little musician, a little painter, a little flower arranger, a little decorator, a little designer in each of us. There are others that are born with more than just a little artist in us; they are born with a giant inside of them that looks for ways to get out and express itself. Schools try to expose children to various art forms to help them discover whether there is a little artist within or whether there is a giant waiting to get out. Most of us do not get beyond drawing stick people, singing Old McDonald, and painting with finger paints. There is a little artist in most of us. Then, there are others who seem to blossom. They have something bigger than the rest of us. They have a special eye; a special ear; or a special touch that helps them see what we cannot see, hear what we cannot hear and feel what we cannot feel. That person is the artist.

The artist is the person who prescribes to the philosopher's assessment of art by saying, "God is beauty and beauty is God. That's all you know and that's all you need to know."

There are generally two terms that we used to describe the way we perceive those around us. There are some people we describe as "a piece of work." Generally, when a person is described as a "piece of work," it usually means that that person defies normal expectations. It's generally not a term of flattery, but is more of a putdown. On the other hand, when anything is called a "work of art" it generally means that it exemplifies the essentials of perfection and workmanship requiring great skill and attention to detail.

Consider the little boy who learned a lot about God's skill by looking at the snow. Little Bobby was spending the weekend with his grandmother. His grandmother decided to take him to the park on Saturday morning. It had been snowing all night and everything was beautiful. His grandmother remarked... "doesn't it look like an artist painted this scenery? Did you know God painted this just for you?" Bobby said, "Yes, God did it and he did it left handed." This confused his grandmother a bit, and she asked him "What makes you say God did this with his left hand?" "Well," said Bobby, "we learned at Sunday School last week that Jesus is sitting on God's right hand! So if Jesus is sitting on God's right hand then he did all of this with his left hand!"

When God made the world in six phases, it was a work of art. When he created the rivers, streams and oceans, it was a work of art. When he clothed the earth with flowers, trees and grasses it was a work of art. When he made man and placed him in the Garden of Eden, that too was a work of art. Sin found a way to corrupt God's perfect man in the garden. Since that time, it seems men and women have spent their lives trying to recapture the perfection lost in the garden. Those whose lives come close to the godly ideal are said to have led lives that were works of art.

As Christians, we strive to live according to the godly ideal. We strive for perfection but often find that it is elusive. Despite our best efforts, we still see flaws and mistakes. We have the assurance, that if we trust him and overcome, that he will give us a crown of life. It is the artist's reward.

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he expressed his desire to give pleasing service to the Lord.

In Psalm 27 David made it clear that one of the major objectives of his life was to live in communion with God. Living in communion with God cannot be done without a humble and committed spirit. This spirit helps believers create a life work that is a masterpiece or a work of spiritual excellence.

David said his entire life was consumed with one desire. That desire was to live in the presence of God in a way that was pleasing to him. As a shepherd boy, a wanderer and as king, he wanted to please God and do those things that would meet God's approval.

David did just that, most of his life. He had a few flaws and made some mistakes along the way, but his life is described as enviable. He was described as a man after God's own heart.

In Psalm 90, he asked for the beauty of God to be upon his life work in a way that all men would truly see God's beauty. He asked that God would "establish the beauty of God" upon those who live for him. Through him, they sought to create great works. Matthew Henry reminds us that God's servants cannot work for him unless he work upon them, and work in them both to will and to do; and then we may hope the operations of God's providence will be apparent for us when the operations of his grace are apparent upon us.

We can do no good work on our own, without the power of God.

If a life is a work of art, then the hand of God is upon that life.

How to create a work of art?

Just how can we create a work of art? If a man or woman wanted to shape their lives into a work of Art for God, what should he or she do?

There are many people who are born with an artistic touch. Even without joining a church, believing in God, they can write music, draw, arrange flowers, decorate and a plethora of other expressions. However, the person who wants to use that gift for God must get to know him on a personal basis and accept him as his personal Lord and Savior.

This is the man or woman who goes beyond mere art and begins to shape their lives into works of art.

INNER LIFE: The godly artist reflects an inner life in all that they do. The inner life is the communion he or she shares with God. God's spirit communes with them in special ways through this inner life that helps them see what appears to be a bunch of weeds and arrange them into flowers. People who desire to make their lives a work of art, cannot do so without a spiritual communion with God. It's that inner life that brings peace, joy and satisfaction.

INNER EYE: The godly artist has an inner eye. The inner eye of the artist sees value in what others have thrown away and can always find a way to take something ugly and make it beautiful. This inner eye helps them see what others cannot see. It is a special gift that comes from God. The artist can take a vase of flowers and arrange them in a way that inspires. The artist can see the value of a scrap of paper, pop sickle sticks or bottle tops. Others pass these things by and think little of them, but the artist sees "value!" This is the same way God sees those who are less fortunate, down cast and lost. He sees our value and takes something that others call ugly and makes it beautiful.

INNNER TOUCH: The godly artist has an inner touch. We feel with our hands. But the godly artist feels with her soul. Very few godly artists can create anything until they are touched themselves. A variety of terms are used such as "inspired" or "moved." Ultimately, the net result is that the godly artisan can do nothing until God touches them. The godly singer prays for God's touch. The godly musician prays for God's guiding power. The godly artist stares at the canvass waiting for God to send a beam from heaven. The person who desires to create a work of art of their lives is one who desires to move at God's command and direction.

A work of faith

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that a life that is a work of art, is a work of faith.

A person who creates a work of art is one who is never fully pleased with what they do, but they are stirred by hope and faith in God.

Artists are sometimes cranky and hard to get along with. Sometimes an artist can be argumentative and just down right hard to cantankerous.

What of the woman who tries to make her life a work of art? What should she do?

The woman who wants to make her life a work of art must go beyond the natural talents, she possessed from birth. She must transcend the natural and seek God's help for the supernatural.

When she transcends herself she is able to realize, what David meant when he said wanted to be saturated with the beauty of Lord.

The woman who wants to make her life a work of art must know the Lord.

She must acknowledge him, serve him and be obedient to him!

She must live her life in accordance to his will and let him use her to create as much beauty as she can in her home, in a classroom full of students, or in her church!

She must see with godly eyes!

She must hear with godly ears!

She must touch with godly hands!

Even when advancing age slows her steps, dims her sight and dampens her spirit she must continue to see God in the beauty of the flowers and hear God in the birds that sing, and feel God in a sister's last touch!

The woman who wants to make her life a work of art must keep her faith in the eternal Christ!

She must remain faithful to Christ, who died on Calvary!

She must remain hopeful that Christ, who arose on Sunday morning, will be with her in a dying hour!

She must hold to his unchanging hand..

.. until her dying breath!

On Sunday February 15, 2004, Ozelle Taylor, a godly woman who tried to bring beauty into this world, took her last breath. Her life was a work of art!

What's In Them Genes?

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 22, 2004

SCRIPTURE:"Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of the water and of Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John 3:5

Introduction

Have you been keeping up with all of the news concerning gene research? Science has discovered that we are born with a set of genes that determine our race, physical traits, and abilities. They have found ways to isolate these genes and discover what makes them work. They can even alter some of them in ways that will prevent diseases. What's amazing is that they can reproduce DNA and can produce clones, or duplicates of living creatures. They have done it successfully with sheep, cows and other animals. While it is illegal in the United States to clone human, it will only be a matter of time before the process will be applied to humans as well.

We are born with genes that control our physical lives. Yet, spiritually God is challenging every believer to be "born again."

Our physical genes control the way we look and other factors but our spiritual genes control our soul. We are born with a set of spiritual genes that are sinful in nature. Our entire focus in life is self-preservation and self-promotion. We are encouraged spiritually to look hard at that set of spiritual genes and trade them in for spiritual genes that are born of God.

As Christians, we revel in the fact that we are born, but we rejoice in the fact that we have been born again.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he spoke to his disciples about the importance of being born again.

Being born again is the phrase that is used to describe the process of regeneration. It means that a person becomes different in his thinking, actions, goals and motivation. Being born again puts a believer on a different spiritual track. It is a track toward the kingdom of God. Jesus said no person could expect to enter the kingdom of God unless he is truly born again.

A person who is born of the water and of the spirit is controlled by a different set of spiritual genes.

He is truly a new creature. Old things are passed away and all things become new.

Influence of Our Genes

Three factors influence what today's Black youth will become: genes, environment and the hand of God.

Social scientist have been studying the differences between Black or poor children and white children for years. Generally, they have concluded that heredity or "genes" play a large role in determining how far a Black child or any poor child goes. Heredity is our history. It's what we get from mama and papa and great grandfather. It is passed down from one generation to the next in the biological make-up of children and siblings.

There were two ideas about us. The white community said Black children were taught that they could not learn because they were intellectually inferior to whites. They said we scored poorly on tests and could not succeed in any capacity that required us to think because our brains were smaller than those of whites. They said running was in our genes. They said playing basketball or football is in our genes, but thinking and decision making was not a part of our heredity. Even when we played football, many doubted that a Black could be a quarterback in the NFL because quarterbacks have to think.

The leaders of the Black community would not accept that idea. Men like W.E.B. Dubois, writing in the Crises magazine kept pointing to the mental ability of African-Americans. Paul Lawrence Dunbar and others of the Harlem Renaissance composed music, wrote books and plays that marveled America. Carter G. Woodson blasted the white man's assessment of Negro intelligence in what he called the 'Mis-Education of the American Negro." He started Black history week so the Blacks could see the proof of their own worth and not buy into the notion that something in their genes made them intellectually inferior.

Even though Black scholars dispelled the myth, the white opinion about our inferiority continued. That opinion held until Blacks started doing things in he white man's world that required undeniable intelligence by his standard. When James "Shack" Harris became the first Black quarterback in the NFL, opinions changed. Arthur Ashe moved in the tennis world. Others like Warren Moon and Doug Williams, dispelled the notion because they showed that Blacks could think, even on the football field. Jesse Jackson ran for President, Andrew Young became the Ambassador to the United Nations. When Blacks by the thousands began to graduate from college earning terminal degrees and began heading major corporations, writing books and heading Fortune 500 companies, it became obvious that there was nothing wrong with the genes of Blacks. There was no trait of ignorance among our people that was hereditary. Even the worst critics of our race concluded that ignorance is not something that is peculiar to Black people. It's not in the genes!

Influence of Environment

In 1994, Herrnstein and Murray released an 845 page study called "The Bell Curve: Intelligence and Class Structure in American Life." The premise of the study was that intelligence is hereditary; whites and the affluent have it, but Blacks and poor whites will always be 15 IQ points or so behind.

The study questioned the value of programs like Head Start, which attempts to give poor children exposure to the essentials of learning at an early age to offset the impact of their poverty. The Bell Curve conclusions affirm what Head Start critics believe, that the programs like Head Start can't help the poor because the children are gene deficient.

In 2003, the Journal of Psychological Science released a study that challenged the Bell Curve. It showed that environment, not genes alone, also impacts the intelligence and success potential of children, especially poor children and Black children. The study was important because it confirmed what Black people already knew, there is nothing wrong with out genes, there is something wrong with what goes on in many of our neighborhoods and homes.

As a general rule, we have become very relaxed with respect to education expectations. We have accepted mediocrity as par for the course. We are not angry when white students who sit in the same class with our children score high on tests but ours score low. We are not upset that school systems allow our boys to play sports even if they have less than average grades. We are not upset if poor children, whether they are Black or white are given the same experiences as those in schools dominated by the more affluent. We have accepted mediocrity as norm for ourselves and have lost our fight. Those who can afford it have stopped fighting altogether, they have pulled their children out of public education and placed them in private schools. Those who lead public schools should study what works. Head Start, around the nation works. Why is it that poor Black students in Head Start do well, but that same student, once in the regular school system begins to perform poorly. Head Start is parent oriented. Its teachers visit homes and plans programs and activities for at risk children that transcend their class. The results of Head Start is not measured by standardized tests that place pressure on teachers. Its students, even at four years old attend plays, ballets, participate in dramas, go to the library, visit the mall and hundreds of out of class experiences that impact their thirst for learning. Leaders should study what is working and fight every effort to accept the present system that does not work.

It's not all in the school system. The bible says, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." Too many of our families are raising children rather than rearing them. Many of our families need serious adjustment. It's not in the genes, it's what goes on and what does not go on at home. It's not a child's genes that makes him leave home with his pants so low his underwear shows. It's not a child's genes that makes a girl makes a girl wear a dress so short that her panties show! It's not a child's genes that keeps him in front of a television set until after midnight watching BET videos instead of studying Math, English and Science. It's not the genes that makes a 12 year old find a Walt Disney movie boring because it's not rated "R." It's not in the genes, it's in the parenting. Parenting is a hard job. Single parenting is even harder, but it has to be done.

If our youth do not excel, it's not in the genes. What we do at school, home and the neighborhood makes a difference too.

Influence of God's Hand

Finally, brothers and sisters, there is a factor that has not been measured by the Bell Curve or the Journal of Psychological Science, that is the importance of religious upbringing.

There is something about a child who knows the Lord.

There are no significant studies to document this truth other than what is generally known among believers, children who know the Lord and are taught the Word of God approach life with a different attitude than others.

The child who lives in a godly home walks out of his door every morning feeling good about himself and the day ahead. Even at 10 years old, she says in her heart, "the Lord will make a way."

The child who knows the Lord, lives confident that no matter where he lives God cares!

Somebody here knows something about the Lord. You don't claim to be a scholar or an expert but you have had some dealings with the Lord.

I don't know about you but I have found out that when nobody else:

—Cares, that the Lord is concerned about me

—Forgives me, that the Lord is willing to forget

—Accepts me, that the Lord receives me with arms wide open —Wants me, that the Lord accepts me as a child of the king

The difference between a child of God and others is not in the genes, it's in the soul. One deals with the DNA and other deals with BA or Born Again!

The difference between a child of God and others is not the environment they are from but where they are going to!

The difference between a child of God and others is in the spiritual genes.

When the world talks about jeans it means Levis, Prada, but God is talking about spiritual genes!

When the world talks about jeans it means BabyPhat and Calvin Klein but God is talking about spiritual genes!

When the world talks about jeans it means Iceberg and Sergio, and wonders with Ginuwine, "What's in them jeans?"

Spiritual genes are designer genes, made in heaven and custom made to fit every believer!

Those who have God's spiritual genes, never give up hope, because their hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness!

Those who have God's spiritual genes, never stop trying because they are holding on to God's unchanging hand!

Those who have God's spiritual genes, don't worry about what neighborhood they are from, they believe they can achieve because "I am a child of the king"

Spiritual genes are so impressive that the world wonders, "What's in them genes!"

God is looking at our spiritual genes, the condition of our souls, and is asking, "Is there any room for me in them genes?"

Is there any room in your life to give a little praise to the Lord?

Is there any room in your life to send up a prayer to heaven?

Is there any room for the King of Kings and Lord of Lords?

Is there any room for the one who died for you on Calvary but rose Early Sunday morning?

When you look at your spiritual genes you can say like the old warriors, "I know I am a child of God, although I move slow!"

Ye Shall See
The Glory of the Lord

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

March 7, 2004

SCRIPTURE:"In the morning, then ye shall see the glory of the Lord; for that he heareth your murmurings against the Lord: and what are we, that ye murmur against us?" Exodus 16:7

Introduction

Has there ever been a time when you looked at something but could not see it? Have you ever been in a situation and looked in every direction but could not see a way out? If you are like most people, you probably remember a time or two when good things were happening but all you could see were the things that were going wrong.

An old proverb says "It's hard to see the forest, if you're looking at the trees." That's the way it is in life, sometimes we miss the beauty of the forest because all we can see is the chipped bark on a single tree. There are times in every person's life when we complain a whole lot about what we do not have and forget about the great blessings that we do have.

A poor family lived in a shack on the outskirts of town. There was great alarm in the city when the fire bells began to ring and the volunteer fire department made a mad dash to put out the flame. By the time the flame was finally extinguished, there was nothing left but a pile of charred rubble. The husband pulled his wife and children together and hugged them and as he looked at the smoldering remains of his little shack he said, "Thank you Jesus." The son was puzzled. "Daddy, what are you happy about? Our house is gone. Our clothes are gone. Everything we have is gone! I can't see anything to be happy about." The father looked at the son and said, "All you can see in the pile is what we lost. I look at that same pile and praise God that what could have been in the pile, is not there and that is us!"—Sometimes it's good to be able to see good that happens in every difficult situation.

African-Americans have a proud and rich heritage that stands tall. We have often complained about the adverse circumstances that have beset us, while at the same time failing to see the great blessings that God has given us as a people.

We who are the great grand children of slaves and sharecroppers have much for which to be thankful, if we just look around and see the big picture.

As Christians, we see the difficulties of our past. We also see the troubles of the present moment. We are strengthened because we have the assurance that one day we shall see the glory of the Lord!

Exposition

This text focuses on a promise received by the children of Israel that God would shower blessings upon them after hearing their cries.

The children of Israel were in bondage in Egypt for about 400 years. As slaves, they were treated as chattel, and forced to build the mighty architectural wonders that have awed the world for centuries.

During the time of their captivity, the children of Israel prayed to God, but they also complained to God. At times, it appeared that they complained more than they prayed. They often accused God of ignoring their pleas while at the same time failing to see all the different ways that God blessed them.

This text focuses upon Israel as they journeyed toward the promised land. In the course of their journey, the whole nation murmured against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness (v2). They complained about everything they did not have, whether it was food, water, or protection from their enemies. In many instances God heard their complaints and responded with immediate aid and assistance. As their complaints continued, God made them one additional promise in verse seven. He promised that in the morning he would give them a blessing so unique that the people would glorify him as being a God who provides for his people in times of trouble.

Although God blessed them repeatedly during their 400 year enslavement Israel was not able to see it. What they saw was the bitterness of their enslavement. They did not see all of the ways God blessed them despite their unfair political and social circumstance. However, this text finds God making a promise that he would provide bread in the wilderness, in a way they could see and he would be finally glorified.

What the could Not See

During Israel's enslavement, there were many ways that God sheltered and protect them but they could not see them. Their focus was so intense upon the tragedy of thir circumstance that they could not see how God's hand moved in their situation. Today, like Israel, we too have often been guilty of failing to see the many ways that God has blessed us as a people despite the hard and difficult history we have endured in this nation.

COULD NOT SEE GOSHEN: While the Israelites could see Egypt they had difficulty seeing Goshen. Goshen was the area in which Egypt kept the slaves. It was not fertile. It was difficult ground, yet God seemed to bless Goshen in ways that were uniquely obvious to everyone except the Israelites. When water turned to blood in Egypt, the water in Goshen was pure. When disease covered Egypt, the same diseases did not impact the people of Goshen. When the death angel struck down the first-born of every home in Egypt, those in Goshen who had to blood of the lamb over their door posts were protected. Yet, despite these obvious ways in which God blessed them Israel still complained. They could not see Goshen.

In a similar sense, African-Americans often focus on the tragedy of our slave experience while failing at the same time to see the way God blessed us in Goshen. We talk about the slave masters whip, and our bitter feelings about that, but we failed to see how God sustained us despite our enslaved state. We talk about how we were forced to eat the scraps and leftovers from the master's table there were fit only for the hogs, but we fail to see how God took the leftovers and turned them into gourmets. Obviously, we have had a slave history, but that history was also a time when we felt the mighty hand of God moving throughout our lives in a powerful way.

COULD NOT SEE THE RED SEA: even though it was a truly miraculous event, the children of Israel even had problems seeing the Red Sea when they faced a difficult moments. As they left Egypt, the king's army follow them but was prevented from reaching them by a pillar of fire that stood between the army and them. At the Red Sea, they had reached a point of no return with their backs seemingly against the wall, and God opened up a way out of no way. The children of Israel grumbled on the other side and somehow could not see all the ways that God had blessed them as they met and overcame one obstacle after another. Even today, we sometimes complain about the obstacles that are set before us without seeing the varied ways that God has caused the walls to tumbledown. Whether it was legal slavery, the separate but equal doctrine of Plessey versus Ferguson or the Brown versus the Topeka Kansas school board decision, it is obvious that each time we came before you Red Sea or faced destruction by the approaching armies of our enemies, God has stood in the gap on our behalf. Every battle we have fought, we have done so realizing the presence of God without whom no victory could have been won. Even today, as we complain about difficulties and troubles that we face, we must always see the ways in which God is dealing with one problem or another just in the nick of time.

COULD NOT SEE IN THE WILDERNESS: Just as Israel could not see in Egypt or could not see at the Red Sea, they also found it hard to see in the wilderness. In the wilderness, they often suffered difficulties associated with the nomadic life. Water was always short and resources were few. They could not plant crops, or make new clothes. They were susceptible to disease and without military protection while they were in the wilderness. Yet despite this susceptibility, God blessed them but they could not see.

They could not see how they wore the same clothes for 40 years but they never wore out.

They could not see how they were protected from their enemies despite their own ability to defend themselves.

They could not see how they were provided water out of nowhere despite a drought situations. God bless them, but they could not see.

In a similar sense, African-Americans today are living in the wilderness of America. We complain about the disadvantages that have crippled us, while at the same time ignoring the many ways God has blessed us.

We who once slaves are now advisors to the president, governors of states, mayors of cities, and leading communities in thousands of elected positions across the nation.

We who were once slaves have developed a spiraling Black middle-class, business community and cultural community.

We who were once slaves in the wilderness of America have been uniquely sheltered, protected, and nurtured by nothing other than the hand of God.

And while we aggressively work to make our way through this wilderness, we must not be so narrow in our focus that we fail to see what God has done for us in the wilderness.

In the wilderness, God has been our rock in a weary land.

In the wilderness, God has been our shelter in the time of storm.

In the wilderness, God has been our we out of no way.

In the wilderness, God has been out of bridge over troubling waters; even if we could not see it.

Glory in the morning

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider God's promise to Israel and his promise to us today, "In the morning ye shall see the glory of the Lord."

When Israel traveled in the wilderness of Zin, they could not see the many ways that God blessed them, even though he gave them quail meat every day. Yet, I hear God saying, "In the morning, ye shall see the glory of the Lord!

When they could not find water to drink, they could not see how God led them to a placed called Marah and gave them sweet water. Yet, I hear God saying, "In the morning, ye shall see the glory of the Lord!"

When they were thirsty and needed to wet their dry lips, they could not see how God led them to a place called Meribah and gave them water from a rock. Yet, I hear God saying, "In the morning, ye shall see the glory of the Lord."

It does not matter whether we came to this nation on the Mayflower or on a slaveship, we should be able to look at our own family history or struggle and say in our own mind, "Look where he's brought me from."

Whether it's from the poverty of the barrios or the abject neglect of the ghetto, every child of God should be able say, "Look where he's brought me from."

Whether its from sleeping four to a bed on corn shuck mattresses or eating hog bacon for breakfast, pig ears for lunch and hog chit'lins for supper, every child of God ought to be able to say, "Look where he brought me from!"

God told Israel, "I have one more thing to give you, that you definitely be able to see."

God said, I have given you:

—WATER in the wilderness, but in the morning, ye shall see the glory of the Lord!

—FOOD when you were hungry, but in the morning, ye shall se the glory of the Lord!

—CLOTHES on your back, but in the morning, ye shall see the glory of the Lord!

In the morning, I'm going to send you bread from heaven.

I heard Jesus say, Moses gave you bread in the wilderness, but I am the bread of life.

In the morning, we'll be able to sing, "Bread of Heaven, Bread of heaven. Feed me till I want no more!"

Hang on brothers and sisters, there is a new day coming!

In the morning, it won't matter whether you are black or white!

In the morning, it won't matter whether you are Hispanic, Asian or Native American

In the morning, every mountain shall be made low!

In the morning, every valley shall be exalted!

And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed!

No wonder the songwriter said, "Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord, he is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored. He has loosed the faithful lightning of his terrible swift sword, his truth is marching on!"

Glory, Glory Hallelujan, his truth is marching on!

It started marching over 2000 years ago!

It started marching to a hill called Calvary!

He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead!

In the morning, we shall see his glory!

Glory!

Glory!

The Man That Feareth the Lord

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

February 14, 2002

SCRIPTURE: "Behold that thus shall the man be blessed that feareth the Lord." Psalm 128:4

Introduction

Have you ever met the man who claimed to be fearless? There are some men who readily boast that they are not afraid of anything. They brag that they are not afraid of pain, death, danger or anything walking or breathing. Such men boldly claim to be invincible Titans who fear nothing.
Even young men have a tendency to take on immense danger to prove themselves. Sometimes the smallest guy on the campus decides to take on the biggest and baddest guy he can find just to prove that he is fearless.

The macho feeling that many men have derives from their desire to impress upon everybody everywhere that they are afraid of nobody.

In reality, all of us are afraid of something, even though we may act otherwise.

Everyone is afraid of something. Some of us are afraid of the dark.

Some of us are afraid of losing our positions or our jobs.

Some of us are afraid of what people say.

When it comes to men there are generally two categories: The self made man and the man who fears the Lord.

What can a man do to guarantee he will be blessed by God? Is there a certain thing he can do or say?

If he fears the Lord, both his wife and children shall be a blessing to him.

The self made man and the God fearing man

The self-made man is one who believes that he is the captain of his own ship and the controller of his own destiny.

He says "I and I alone" control my future. They used with vivid magnification, that word "I." They said, "I am this and I am that." Sometimes they can believe that they entire world circulates around them. This is the condition of the man who wakes up in the morning, looks in the mirror and truly believes that he is God's gift to women.

He feels that women should fall on their knees and thank God for the privilege to look at him.

Have you seen the self-made man? He is the one who says, "My education!" "My hard work!" are responsible for my success! The self-made man uses these words many times in the course of his life.

Some self-made men are so conceited that they believe they can do things without anyone else.

A self-made Man had one focus in life, earn money and nothing else mattered. One night he had a dream that he was being served in a fine restaurant filled with rich and important people. He ordered a variety of fine cuisines and dishes for himself and his guest that were expensive and prepared by the world's finest chefs. However, each time the waiter brought out his tray instead of the fine foods he ordered, all he was served was a slice of bread.

"There must be a mistake" he told the waiter noting that he had ordered several fine selections. The waiter said there had been no mistake. Angry, the man left and went to several other restaurants and at each place all would receive was a slice of bread. Finally, the man went to the owner of the restaurant and asked for an explanation.

The owner said the customers of the shops in this land can only be served by the concerns of their heart. "You see customers here with meats and sweets because their lives are concerned with substance and compassion. You see some with cooling drinks and tasty entrees because they drink from the fountain of life and commune regular with the Saints." The man looked ate his plate and asked "But why did you give me just a slice of bread?" The owner responded, "because your sole interest in life is making a living and acquiring the material possessions that life has to offer." The thought "I have to have more than just a slice of bread every day!" Then the man looked at the face of the owner and recognized the face of Jesus and he woke up from his dream.

Disturbed, he opened his bible to read and fell upon this verse: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

As Christians, we know that there are things in life more important that possessions, money, power and influence. These things come from God. They are means to achieve an end but they are not an end in themselves. We cannot live happily with just what this world offers us. There is a more evasive but substantive truth we all know, that to be really happy we must walk in the Lord, and cling to every word that proceedeth out of his mouth.

Exposition

This text focuses on God speaking to Israel explaining the reason he caused them to endure the hardships of the wilderness and the good things that can follow if they obey his commandments.

At the time of this text, Israel had wandered in the wilderness about 40 years on a journey that should have taken weeks. They were moving from slavery toward a brighter future. Along the way, they were exposed to a variety of troubling setbacks that frustrated them, troubled them and delayed their entrance into the promised land for years. On the way to the promised land, they were pursued by enemies, scorched in the desert, exhausted from the lack of food and water, and plagued by internal rebellion. God in this text says all of these hardships were intentional. They were part of grand design that was arranged to teach Israel the one lesson they would need to enjoy the great things that would be available in the land God was preparing for them. They would need to learn humility.

In the midst of each struggle God had to teach Israel, just as it stood on the border of the promised land that it should always remember the source of any opportunities that come its way and never become high minded. When they feared that they would be recaptured and returned to slavery, God opened up the Red Sea and saved them. When they feared that they would starve to death for lack of essential nutrition, God sent them quails for meat, rained down bread from heaven and caused water to spring out of a rock when there were no streams. In total disorganization, disputing among themselves, he caused them to wander into they could number and organize themselves, establish a system of leadership, repel rebellious influences and band together behind one leadership for a common cause.

God's intent was not to destroy Israel but to humble and season Israel as a nation that it might be prepared for the great opportunities that were going to be available to them and still be God's people at the same time. So, although it appeared at once that they would be recaptured and returned to slavery, God opened the Red Sea to allow their escape to let them know, that they survived only because there is a God in heaven. They complained about meat and water and God supplied it in a way that they knew had to come from God and him alone. They had no bread and God did not lead them to green pastures where they could grow the wheat themselves and mistake the source of their blessings, he rained down bread from heaven, such that there would be no mistake. He made his purpose altogether clear: "that he might make thee know, that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live."

The man who fears the Lord

The man who fears the Lord is a man who lives a good life before his children and his wife., but most importantly, he lives a good life before God God.

The man who fears the Lord is an example of trusting in God and holding to his word.

When the young men of a congregation see men tell the story! They tell the story of mountains climbed and valleys traveled!

They tell the story of a young man who came to himself in a pigpen and decided that "in my father's house" there is plenty of what I need.

I heard somebody testify, "I met God one morning, my soul feeling sad, heart heavy laden, with a bowed down head. He lift my burdens and made me so glad all that I know is, there is something within."

They tell the story of answered prayer. A man who knows the Lord knows that the Lord will answer prayer.

You don't have to be an old man to talk to the Lord!

You don't have to be a rich man to talk to the Lord!

You don't have to be an educated man to talk to the Lord

All you need is a clean heart and contrite spirit and you can tell him what you what!

They tell the story of men who bowed down before God to worship and praise him! Tel the story of the prophet who said, "Here am I, send me!"

The man who fears the Lord tells the Lord to have his way. He agrees with the songwriter who said, "Have thine own way Lord. Have thine own way! Search me and try me, master today. Whiter than snow Lord, wash me just now, as in thy presence, humbly I bow!"

Men who fear the Lord tell the story of salvation and redemption.

Men who fear the Lord are quick to testify that one day the savior "picked me up and turned me around and planted my feet on solid ground"

I heard the songwriter declare, "Shackled by a heavy burden, neath a load of guilt and stain, but then the hand of Jesus touched me, and now I am no longer the same"

He touched me!

He touched me! And oh the joy the floods my soul!

Something happened and now I know, he touched me and made me whole.

A man who fears the Lord has to tell somebody about Jesus!

Jesus, who carried an old rugged cross!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

Jesus, who stayed in the grave for three long days!

But Early, Early Sunday morning he arose from the dead!

The man who fears the Lord has to tell somebody that Lord is my light and my salvation, "Whom shall I fear?"

He's got to tell somebody!

Tell somebody!

Hunger Pangs!

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

SCRIPTURE: For he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness. Psalm 107:9

Introduction

When was the last time you were really hungry? I Mean really hungry? On occasion, most of us have a few hunger pangs you get when it's time for a meal. It's a little signal we get, like a growl in the stomach, that says it's time to eat. This usually happens when you have missed more than one meal and you have become weak and shaky and your stomach is contracting and creating acids that are reacting against your stomach lining because their is nothing there to absorb them. You know you are really hungry when it's been so long since you have had something to eat that chewing on a toothpick actually tastes good. You dream of a T-bone steak, cooked to perfection, smothered in onions and a little gravy, with a baked potato drowning in butter and sour cream on the side. You know you're hungry when you are trying to work and you are dreaming about fried chicken, rice and gravy and butter beans. You know you're hungry when you can taste the food in your mind and feel it going down.

Along with hunger comes thirst. When you get really hungry you also get thirsty. That's when you have this dry condition in your mouth that feels like it's full of cotton. Your lips are parched and you can't even get enough saliva to spit. You are almost delirious with thirst. You dream of immersing yourself in cool clear water, and drinking a couple of buckets full.

Most of us have not really experienced real hunger and thirst. We've been a little hungry. We have missed a meal or two, and we have been a little dry. We have heard our stomachs growl a time or two, but somehow we did not actually starve, we found something to eat and something to drink. We understand this kind of physical hunger. Even with our brief encounters and yearnings for Big Macs and Pork chops, we can imagine what it's like to be in real hunger, with nothing but a dream to feed upon.

When was the last time you were spiritually hungry? Not the guilty feeling we feel because skipped church, or bible study or Sunday school, but spiritually hungry. The guilty feeling we have is like a growling in our soul. It's our soul's way of saying that there should be something here for me to feed on but there is nothing. Spiritual hunger is discomforting. It is unsettling. The longer it goes, the worse it gets. It churns. We feel lost and we wander. We start complaining a lot. Our lives seem to get out of control. We panic. Frustration sets in easy. We despair.

When we are spiritually hungry, we can't focus and everything is out of balance. Spiritual hunger is devastation. If we go to long with spiritual food we reach a point of starvation. We lose substance, fire, inspiration, faith and hope. A Christian who has lost, substance, fire, inspiration and hope becomes a bag of bones. God showed Ezekiel an entire valley of dry bones and asked, "Son of man, can these bones live?" The answer he gave is that they could live if they were fed the Word of God.

As Christians, we constantly feed ourselves the word of God. It satisfies our soul. It's the thought that prompted the songwriter to say, "Jesus, Jesus, Jesus. sweetest name I know. Fills my every longing. Keeps me singing as I go."

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he meditates on the ability of God to fill the hungry soul.

David, as King of Israel, often mused about the goodness of God. In reflection, he remembered the times when he was not king that he was hungry and exhausted. Hunted by King Saul as a criminal and a vagabond, David was hungry and drained on numerous occasions. On one occasion he even ate the sacred bread that was reserved for worship, just to survive.

More than his physical exhaustion, David was also spiritually drained. As a shepherd boy, he fed his soul regularly singing psalms and praising God on the hillsides as he watched his father's sheep. Through the long days and nights he constantly fed himself with psalms, prayers and other meditations that kept him focused on the goodness of God. These moments of meditation were food for his soul. They were times when he was spiritually nourished. However, when he became a hunted man, David was constantly on the run. He seldom found the time to feed his body let alone his soul. He was both spiritually and physically hungry.

This psalm reflects David's praise of God and reiterates his belief that faith in God satisfies the "longing" soul. Longing in this context is from the Hebrew word "Shaqaq" (Shaw-kak) which means to rush to and fro or to churn. The longing soul is uneasy, it churns and is unsettled. The longing soul is the yearning soul. The longing soul is the searching soul. The longing soul is the hoping soul. David said, "The longing soul" is satisfied by the goodness of God.

Spiritually Starved

There are conditions that contribute to spiritual starvation that are first indicated by hunger pains.

FAMINES: Whenever there is a famine, there is a lack of available resources to maintain the body's systems. We have seen the product of famines in areas of the world such as Ethiopia, Somalia, and Iraq after the Persian Gulf War, and the conflict between the Serbs and Croats in former Yugoslavia. We have seen what starvation can do physically. Yet, there are spiritual famines too. A spiritual famine exists when there is no worship, praise, prayer and study available anywhere. This was the situation with our forefathers who often slipped away from their slave huts at night and put their heads under tubs and prayed and sang to the Lord. It's what many of those who have moved away from their roots find themselves yearning for, some good down home preaching, old Dr. Watts Hymns, and a few foot stomping songs. When no true worship exists, there is a famine. When no true praise exists, there is a famine. When the word is not being taught, there is a famine. When famines occur there are hunger pangs and starvation can result. The church must insure that there is no spiritual famine. It must insure that the worship, praise, prayer and study are available to all who hunger for more.

MALNUTRITION: Malnutrition occurs because a person does not get enough of the essentials necessary to sustain a healthy existence. We need a certain amount of water and nutrients on a daily basis to maintain our health. Those who are mal-nourished begin with the regular hunger pangs, but it goes further as time passes. Dizziness and weakness occur. There is also a loss of bone mass. There is a loss of fat deposits and large quantities of water. The liver, spleen and muscle tissue then suffer great losses of weight. The starving person becomes extremely weak and lethargic as body temperature, pulse rate, blood pressure and basal metabolism continue to fall. Eventually a starving person dies. The same is true spiritually. There are many believers today who are mal-nourished. While there is no famine, they simply are not getting enough of what they need to maintain themselves spiritually. Every now and then we feel the spiritual hunger pangs that give us the sign, that we need to be fed, but we continue on a self imposed spiritual strike that is destroying our spiritual health. We become spiritually weak when we are mal-nourished. Our metabolism rate slows down as we become inactive in the ministries of the church. We lose substance, we start acting dizzy and doing really dumb things when we are spiritually starved. It won't be long before we are walking zombies, only shells of what we once were because we have drained ourselves of what is needed. No wonder Jesus told Peter in John 21:16, that if he loved him he must "feed my sheep." Each believer needs a regular method of meditation, prayer, bible study and a set time for private devotion and public praise. It's the way we nourish ourselves. The alternative is to try to feed on what you once did. That only goes so far. Spiritual death is the ultimate end.

FASTING: Fasting is a religious discipline that is sanctioned in scripture. Those who fast do so as the result of a spiritual hunger pang. Jesus fasted for 40 days in the wilderness. We don't know the extent of his fast or what kind of fast he endured but the fact that he fasted confirms the spirituality associated with fasting. In Matthew 17:21 Jesus teaches about moving the mountains of life through fasting and prayer. Those who fast have felt a spiritual hunger pang and respond in penitence, mourning, and supplication. Those who fast suggests a self-denial that opens one to God and to the immaterial aspects of life. Through fasting believers focus themselves on a specific area of their spiritual need and intensely pray for its resolution. Fasting is different from dieting. A person who diets thinks about the body alone. A person who fasts thinks about body and soul. A person who is concerned about his health may go on a diet and feel hunger pangs afterwards. On other hand, a person who is concerned about his soul feels spiritual hunger pangs first and THEN goes on a fast.

Those Who Hunger Shall be filled

Finally, brothers and sisters we should remember that Jesus said in Matthew 5:6, that those who hunger and thirst after righteousness, shall be filled.

Like David, every believer has a longing that needs to be satisfied. It is an insatiable desire to do God's will and to be in his presence.

There are some things that are essential for our substance, that when we are not able to get to them, we start to get hunger pangs.

Every now and then, you may go to a fine restaurant with the real napkins and solid silver utensils. You may look at the menu and see Squid Ala King, Caviar, and Escargot But after a few days of that you start to get hunger pangs and dreaming about real food. You'd trade it all for a bowl of mustard greens and corn breads. Even if you had no silver utensils, you'd eat it with your fingers.

Every now and then, you may get a chance to hear the New York Philharmonic orchestra or hear the Mormon Tabernacle Choir sing Handel's Messiah. But after a few of days of that you start to get hunger pangs to hear a real choir sing, "The Lord will make a way somehow!"

If you understand that then you understand what David meant when he said "he satisfies my longing soul." He satisfies every longing. He fills every empty cup. He provides bread for every hungry soul. I heard him say, "I am the bread of life. He that eateth of this bread shall never hunger!"

Somebody here today knows what it's like when your soul gets hungry.

When your soul is hungry you only see the impossible, but after you are fed the —IMPOSSIBLE becomes possible.

When your soul is hungry you only see the improbable, but after you are fed the —IMPROBABLE becomes probable.

When your soul is hungry you only see the unbelievable, but after you are fed the —UNBELIEVABLE becomes believable.

When your soul is hungry you only see the unconquerable, but after you are fed the —UNCONQUERABLE mountains are made low.

After you are fed

—IMPASSABLE valleys are exalted.

—UNDESIRABLE rough places are made plain.

—UNRELIABLE crooked places are made straight.

I hear the old warriors say, "Bread of Heaven, Bread of Heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

Lord, I hold up my hunger for more faith, feed me till I want no more!
Lord, I hold up my hunger for strength, feed me till I want no more!
Lord, I hold up my hunger for obedience, feed me till I want no more!
Lord, I hold up my hunger for blessings, feed me till I want no more!
The bread we need to feed our hunger pangs was not baked in a bakery!
The bread we need was not delivery in a bread truck!
The bread we need cannot not be found on the shelves of a store!
The bread we need came down here over 2000 years ago into a little place called Bethlehem, “The house of Bread”
He died on an old rugged cross, between two thieves!
But Early Sunday morning!
Early Sunday morning, he arose, with all power in his hands!

Faces in the Crowd

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: "And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen" Luke 19:37

Introduction

Have you paid close attention to the faces in a crowd? Anytime an important personality comes to town there are a variety of people that come out to meet him. Not everyone in the crowd is supportive. Some are critics. Some are skeptics. There are even enemies in the crowd. The rule is true of any crowd. If a popular preacher comes to town, there are faces in the crowd. If a rock star comes to town there are faces in the crowd. If an elected official comes to town, there are faces in the crowd; some smiling, some angry, some happy, some sad. Only the fool believes that all of the faces of any crowd are what they seem to be. The wise are well aware that among the variety of faces in the crowd is a mixture of optimism, pessimism, truth and deception. They all make up the faces in the crowd.

Often sports events are broadcast on television. The stands are filled with thousands of people. Generally, the people are faceless until the network cameras zoom in close and we see the faces in the crowd. Sometimes we see the strangest things when the camera zeroes in on the individual faces in the crowd. Sometimes we see people cheering wildly. Sometimes we see a man sitting alone. Perhaps we see a father and a son or a group of seniors. Each person has his own reason for being present. Each face has its own story.

What the world sees on Palm Sunday is a savior who is uniquely familiar with the faces in the crowd. He is not oblivious to their struggles, fears and aspirations. It's not the physical face that he sees. He's not noticing our eyes, lips and our brows. He knows the face of disposition. He looks beyond our game face to see our inner face. He knows whether we are truly saved or whether or not we have the face of a believer but not the heart. He knows the face of our spirit. He is not adverse to our hopes and dreams. He sees and knows all about us and feels what we feel and weeps over our failures as he rejoices with our triumph.

Luke is the only Gospel writer that records what happened after Christ saw the cheering faces in the crowd that shouted Hosanna so loudly. Beginning at verse 41 he records how Jesus paused before entering the city and wept over the thousands of nameless faces reaching for hope and salvation but were lost in a maze of trouble. Jesus wept after seeing the faces in the crowd. He was not a happy man. There were too many that that smiled before him that would instantly be willing to cut him down if given the chance.

As Christians, we know we are not nameless faces to God. The God we serve knows us and is concerned about us in so many ways. We are more than just names, faces and Social Security numbers to him; we are children of the King.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus on the outskirts of Jerusalem, as he prepares to enter the city.

Jesus' ministry carried him to many of the towns surrounding Jerusalem. In each of these instances Jesus was a humble servant who sidestepped public acclaim. He often told those He healed to tell no one. When the crowd started to swell, He moved on. But now Jesus deliberately comes into Jerusalem in a fashion that would strengthen the people's conclusion that Jesus was the Messiah.

The Book of Zechariah says, "Rejoice greatly, O Daughter of Zion! Shout, Daughter of Jerusalem! See, your king comes to you, righteous and having salvation, gentle and riding on a donkey, on a colt, the foal of a donkey." Zech 9:9

By coming into Jerusalem Jesus was in effect proclaiming that He was the one they have been waiting for; the one who was righteous and was bringing salvation. The people cheered for Jesus using the words of Psalm 118. This Psalm was commonly used to greet pilgrims coming to Jerusalem for Passover. But this greeting seemed different. The people believed that the one they had looked forward to for all these years was now riding into the city of Jerusalem.

As Jesus rode into the city the pilgrims who had come to Jerusalem for Passover took off their coats and put them on the ground for the donkey to walk upon. They took Palm branches and waved them and also threw them on the ground in front of Him. It was the equivalent to rolling out the red carpet today.

As Jesus passed through the crowd, there were many faces that flashed by him in a blur. Poor women, religious leaders, angry Zealots, and children. They all pushed and shoved and shouted his name. Except for the fact that he was the Son of God and knew the concerns of each of them, they would have all simply been …"faces in the crowd."

Doubting Faces in the Crowd

When Jesus passed through the crowd, there were many who were prepared to crown him King that day, but before the end of the week would change their cries for a crown to shouts of crucify him. Who was in the crowd?

There were Pharisees in the crowd. Filtered throughout the crowd were Pharisees. They were not interested in being identified with Christ, they wanted to monitor his actions. They weren't shouting. Neither were they singing or waving palm branches or laying their coats down. They decided that Christ was an imposter and made a decision not to follow him. They were a stubborn kind. They were in the crowd but they were not a part of the celebration. They stubbornly resisted. If they had a favorite hymn it was probably, "I shall not be moved." Even today there are Pharisees in the crowd. Those who stubbornly resist Christ. They attend a worship service because they have to be there but they have stubbornly said in their hearts, "I may have to be here but I don't have to enjoy it." The Pharisees in any crowd are the disinterested observers who note the enthusiasm of others but seldom join in the celebration.

The Curious were in the crowd. Jesus was no doubt a curiosity. People came from everywhere to just to see the man who could raise the dead, feed five thousand with two little fishes and five loaves of bread, or the man who could heal the sick. They just wanted to see. Even today there are a large number of people who are curiosity seekers. They just want to see what's going on. They want to see the parade they don't want to be in the parade. They want to watch the worship; they don't want to participate in the worship. The curious are fascinated by the process and attracted to the crowd itself. The bigger the better. However, curiosity does not save our souls. Neither does curiosity bring us closer to God Judas was in the crowd. Christ was surrounded by his disciples. He didn't go far without all 12 of them being close by. Undoubtedly, Judas was in the crowd. When the crowds cheered Judas was happy and smiled because he thought Christ would become what he was not, an avenger of the people. On Palm Sunday, his face was among those smiling. However, in just a few days he would be meeting with the Sanhedrin to plan ways to betray him. Even in the church today there are those who expect one thing from the church and when they do not receive it are ready to betray it for 30 pieces of silver. There are many who expect the church to pay their bills for them and when it doesn't happen they betray the church. There are others who expect the church to perform a variety of services or assume a variety of positions and when that does not happen they abandon the crusade. Their faces are in the crowd on Palm Sunday, but they are the same faces in the crowd that shout crucify him, days later.

Committed Faces in the Crowd

Finally, brothers and sisters, while there were many doubting faces in the crowd, there were many believing faces in the crowd!

The crowd shouted Hosanna and rejoiced with great hope! While there were doubters in the crowd there were other faces in the crowd that truly believed.

The healed were in the crowd! Jesus healed many people of sicknesses that ranged from being lunatics to leprosy. Some of those whom he healed were no doubt in the crowd!

Is there anybody here in the crowd today, who can testify that God is a healing God?

Is there anybody here who can say, when I was sick, he healed my body and cooled my fever?

Is there anybody here who can say, he's been a doctor for me in my sick room; a Balm in Gilead?

In that crowd were those who received miracles because of their faith.

I see an old lady who had an issue of blood for 12 long years. Even though others doubted, I can see her pushing her way through the crowd saying, "If I can just touch the hem of his garment I can be made whole."

Is there anybody here who stepped out on faith and put their trust in the Lord?

Is there anybody here who can say, "I know the Lord will answer prayer, because I've tried him for myself"

In that crowd were the followers of John the Baptist who placed great hope in the coming of the Messiah!

Is there anybody here who has placed all of his hope in the power of the Lord?

Is there anybody here who continues to hold on when everyone else lets go?

Is there anybody here who can sing, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame, but wholly lean on Jesus' name!"

In that crowd there were some whose lives had been blessed by the Lord. I see Mary Magdalene and the woman at the well, whose lives were turned around. I see Lazarus who was raised from the dead! They were shouting Hosanna like the rest of the crowd because they had already been blessed!

Is there anybody here who can say, the Lord has blessed my life?

Is there anybody here who can say, I've been blessed more than I deserve!

Is there anybody here who can say, that he saved my soul, picked me up and turned me around?

Is there anybody here who can testify that when I was:

—WEAK he gave me strength

—LONELY he gave me comfort!

—CONFUSED he gave me direction!

—LOST he showed me the way!

Is there anybody here who can call his name?

Jesus, the Lily of the Valley!

Jesus, the Bright and Morning Star!

Jesus, the Fairest of ten thousand!

Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

But, Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Is there anybody here who knows him?

Is there anybody here?....

The Women, The Tomb and the Scars

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 11, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you." Matthew 28:6-7 "And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great." Mark 16:4. "And when he had so said, he shewed unto them his hands and his side. Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord." John 20:20

Introduction

Suppose someone you thought was dead showed up a few days after the funeral? What would be your reaction? For some the initial response would be fear? Others would be skeptical. They would demand proof that the person they saw was not a ghost or a figment of their imagination. The evidence would need to be clear and undeniable. Then and only then would they believe that what they saw was not just a hallucination.

This was dilemma that the disciples faced on the day of the resurrection. They had witnessed the crucifixion in all of its gory detail. Now, they were being asked to believe that the man they saw crucified and buried was indeed alive.

Theirs was a circumstance of hope lost and found again. They were cautious before accepting this new truth demanding to consider the testimony before they believed.

It is the same with anyone who has participated in what seems to have been a failed experience. When reassured that all is not lost we want to be sure, by the testimony, that the evidence is clear and the assurance is sound.

In the case of the resurrection of Jesus the evidence of his death was certain. These 11 men were with him in the garden when the temple guards came to seize him.

They were close by when he was tried by the Sanhedrin Council and found guilty.

They were close by when Herod mocked and ridiculed him.

They were in the crowd when Pilate handed him over to the soldiers for crucifixion.

They watched as he carried a cross toward Golgotha.

They watched as he was nailed to the cross and lifted up high.

They were present when he gave up the ghost and died.

They saw him buried in a freshly hewn tomb.

They saw the stone rolled in front of the tomb and guards placed in front of the tomb.

For the disciples there was considerable evidence of Christ's death. What they needed to breathe new energy into their hopes and dreams was testimony and evidence that he was truly alive.

They received their evidence in three different testimonies that resulted in the disciples being glad instead of sad.

Similarly, today there are thousands who face the prospect of failure, defeat and hopelessness. The message of the resurrection is that despite what seems to be lost, hope is still alive, failure can be overcome, and the power of God has not been conquered. Like the disciples, we look for evidence and the events of resurrection provide the testimony.

The Testimony of the Women

The first evidence came from the testimony of the women. Three days and three nights earlier Christ had been crucified and buried in a tomb belonging to Joseph, a friend of the cause. Several women, including Mary Magdalene, Joanna and Mary the Mother of James (Luke 24:10), prepared spices to anoint his body and waited until both the Sabbath involving the Feast of the Passover and the Weekly Sabbath had past; then came to the tomb to complete their task "very early" in the morning on the First Day of the week. They found that the body of Jesus was missing.

An angel told them "He is not here, but is risen." The angel explained how Jesus predicted his resurrection and how its fulfillment resulted in the empty tomb. When the women remembered his words, they returned to the disciples excited an inspired as they told what they had seen. They had come to the place of the dead seeking a dead leader and they left knowing that they were serving a living God.

The women gave a testimony of their experience. They told what they had seen and heard.

Even today, those who are low in spirit and face impossible situations receive their first inspiration from those who have shared their experience with God. Those who have been touched by the hand of God perform a mighty work when they share what God has done in their lives with others.

There is nothing more encouraging to a person who faces the prospect of fighting cancer than to hear the testimony of a cancer survivor. The words of a person who has failed in business and found success after failing multiple times is encouraging. The encouraging words of persons who have overcome adversity serve as evidence that we too can do the same.

That's why it is important for every believer to share the benefit of their experiences in life with others. Each time we testify about God's greatness, power and strength, we provide a testimony that helps convince someone else that no matter how dark it gets, there is always a bright light in heaven. Each time we testify, we say like the songwriter, “He touched me, he touched me. And oh the joy that floods my soul. Something happened and now I know he touched me and made me whole.”

The women gave the disciples their testimony, but they were not completely convinced.

The Tombstone’s Testimony

The second evidence was the testimony or proof provided by the tombstone that was rolled away. The Roman government placed sentries at the site of the tomb and sealed it to keep his disciples from stealing the body in the night. The entry to the tomb was blocked by a huge stone, taller than a man, and requiring the strength of several men for movement. As they walked toward the tomb they became concerned about “Who shall roll for us the stone away?” Although they were concerned, the women were not dissuaded, they went forward anyway! Once there, they learned that the stone had already been rolled away. An angel, who appeared as a young man, told them that Jesus had risen and invited them to see the place where Jesus had lain. The women proceeded with great confidence throughout the entire experience. They never flinched or became afraid.

That too is the message of Easter; that stones which represent troubles, and problems in our lives can be rolled away.

The stone rolled away by the power of God was a powerful testimony. It was undeniable. So is the testimony of anyone who has had stones rolled away in their lives.

It is difficult for anyone who has been incarcerated for a crime they did not commit to maintain hope until they see others for whom jail doors have been opened and convictions overturned.

It is difficult for those who have been victimized because of their race, sex or age to maintain hope until they see others who have achieved despite the stones.

Although the stone was an inanimate object with no mouth of its own, it could not have spoken louder if it had ten thousand tongues. It was undeniable evidence that God was in the business of resurrecting that which is dead and breathing new life.

The joy of the resurrection is that we don’t have to worry about the stone in front of the tomb because it’s already been rolled away!

The same power that rolled back the stone on Easter Sunday morning can roll back the stones in our lives. No wonder the songwriter declared, “King Jesus will roll our burdens away!”

The Testimony of the Scars

The disciples themselves were secluded in a room with the doors shut and locked and Jesus appeared in their midst saying “Peace be unto you.”

The disciples were amazed and thought they were seeing a ghost. But when Jesus showed them the wounds in his hands, side, and feet (Luke 24:39) they instantly believed him.

Thomas, who was not present at Jesus' first appearance to his disciples came to the second meeting very skeptical. He had heard their stories about how Jesus came through locked doors and appeared in their midst but he vowed not to believe until he himself could put his fingers in the wounds of the risen savior himself. When Thomas finally saw Jesus and saw the scars left by the nail prints in his hands and feet, it did not require his touch but he instantly responded, "My Lord and My God." (John 20:28)

It was the testimony of the scars that made believers of the disciples in the first meeting.

It was also the testimony of the scars that convinced Thomas.

Scars tell a story. Every scar or scratch on a person's body has a companion testimony.

One scar might have been received in an automobile accident, that should have been death but God save us, and left a scar.

Another scar, may have been from a battle wound that could have taken our lives, but God snatched us from the hand of death and left a scar to remind us.

There is a scar on someone's head, another on someone's hand or leg. Each scar testifies to a time when God saved us from death, and left a scar to remind us.

Those who know the Lord have a story to tell and he leaves his mark on you.

When you meet the Lord he leaves his mark on you and you begin to see things differently. When you meet the Lord the:

—SKIES seems to be bluer
—SUN seems to shine brighter
—BIRDS seem to sing sweeter —FLOWERS seem to blossom fuller
—AIR seems more refreshing
—STARS seem to have more luster —BURDENS seem lighter
—FAITH seems stronger
—HEAVEN seems closer

No wonder the song writer declared, "I met God one morning, my soul was feeling sad, heart heavy laden with a bowed down head. He lift my burden and made me so glad, all that I know there was something within."

John said when the disciples saw the evidence they were glad!

Just like those disciples, every believer has something to be happy about!

Somebody is glad today; glad to be reminded that God is still able!

He's able to:

—Take our valleys and raise them to mountain tops
—Take midnight's and turn them into noon days
—Take our briny tears and turn them into mighty cheers —Defeats and turn them into victories
—Take our losses and turn make them work for our gain

We are glad because we still have an opportunity for new life.

We are glad because we still serve a risen savior who gives us hope!

No wonder then that the songwriter would say, “Because he lives, I can face tomorrow. Because he lives, all fear is gone. Because I know, he holds the future and life is worth the living because he lives.”

Today we celebrate the victory of life over death and joy over sadness.

Though he was tempted in the wilderness, betrayed him in the garden and crucified him on an old rugged cross..

He lives!

The Stranger on the Road

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

April 18, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them. And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them. And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished out of their sight. And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures? And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them," Luke 24:29-33

Introduction

What road have you chosen to walk in life? Early in each life we decide the road we will travel. Some travel the road traveled by many. Others take what M. Scott Peck calls the "The Road Less Traveled." It is the road that takes us to a predetermined destination, although traveling alone.

Roads sometimes begin as simple trails blazed by pathfinders like Lewis and Clark who cut trails and navigated rivers from the Northern to the Southern boundaries of our nation. Others like John C. Fremont blazed trails through the Rockies as our nation pushed West to achieve its manifest destiny.

Those paths became trails that were followed by wagons that carved them into roads. Today many of those roads are the super highways and expressways that cris cross our nation in a never ending series of loops, turns and stretches.

In our Christian experience there are also some roads that each of us must take. These roads lead to one destiny or another, determining our fate and leading us to higher heights.

Those who choose to walk the Christian road don't find a crowd. They often travel alone. This prompted Jesus to say in Matthew 7:13, "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat:"

Since the Christian road is a lonely road, any stranger we encounter on the road gets our attention. Any person who shares the wisdom of his experience along that road will motivate us and inspire us to higher heights.

As Christians, we don't expect the road we walk to be filled with the crowds. While we know we may see an occasional stranger on the road, we all want the Lord to walk with us. David said even if the road carries us through the valley of the shadow of death, he comforted in knowing that "thou art with me."

The songwriter summed it up by saying, "I want Jesus, to walk with me. All along this tedious journey. I want Jesus to walk with me."

Exposition

This text focuses on the events immediately following the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus.

Two men who had witnessed the crucifixion of Jesus and heard the news of his resurrection walked the road to Emmaus. They discussed the events they had seen and suddenly Jesus joined them as they walked, but they did not recognize him immediately. He showed them in the scriptures how the events that occurred had to be, because they were a part of a divine plan.

It was not until he began to break bread with them in his familiar fashion that they recognized that they were in the presence of the Lord and their hearts "burned within them" with excitement and enthusiasm.

They Walked With Him Without Recognizing Him

The men on the road to Emmaus walked with Christ but did not recognize him. Even today, there are many people who walk with Christ without knowing him. There are millions of people who have been associated with the church, work in its ministries, sing, pray and even attend its worships but do not know him.

There are many who are church members but are not Christians. They are members of a church but they are not a part of the body of Christ.

Is it possible to walk with a person and not know him or her? Is it possible to live in the same house with people and not know them?

Often people live with each other for many years only to discover a side of a mate that they had never known because the situation had never occurred. There are many who have never seen their mate cry or handle a devastating defeat or a debilitating sickness. Some are surprised to learn that they have been living with a stranger.

Even family members can get to be strangers in our own houses. We become strangers when we know little about each other's dreams, aspirations. Parents who are unfamiliar with the social lives of their children soon become strangers. Children who don't know their parents as something other than simply "parents" usually are strangers in the same house.

Even in a church it is possible to sit on the same pew with a person for years but not know much more than the person's name and what kind of work they do.

The men on the Emmaus Road had an excuse for not recognizing Christ instantly; they had not been around him much. But what excuse do we have for not recognizing the person who lives in the same house with us?

In 1972 Harold Melvin and Blue Notes wrote a song entitled, "If you don't know me by now, you will never, never, never know me!" The same message was contained in a song by Roy Orbison entitled, "You Don't Know Me!" He sang about man who was really the best person for the woman of his dream but she took someone else's hand because "You don't know me."

Husbands and wives should get to know each other.

Co-workers should get to know each other.

Church members should get to know each other. In so doing, we are all better able to see how each is trying to work out their salvation in light of the walk on the Emmaus road.

They had an eye opening experience

The men on the road to Emmaus were not able to see Jesus until they had an eye opening experience. It was not what he said, so much as what he did. He broke the bread and offered it in a way that was uniquely his style. Once they had an eye opening experience they were able to see Jesus.

When Jesus broke the bread it was a defining moment for the men traveling on the road. The moment of the "breaking" was decisive because at that point they understood. There are many who now testify that they have had defining moments, when they were able to see clearly what they had not been able to see before.

For many, their defining moment was not the Emmaus Road but the Damascus Road. On the Damascus Road, Saul saw the light and heard the voice of God for himself. He was never the same. It was a defining moment.

What was your defining moment? For years your parents warned you about certain pitfalls in life, but you could not see them. What was your defining moment? You may have dated your husband or wife for months or even lived together before you married. What was your defining moment? What opened your eyes to beauty of your relationship?

Defining moments come when everything that you have learned, seen and heard merge at one precise moment in a way that makes everything crystal clear.

It's the moment you decide that I must do something about my future.

It's the moment you decide I can't go on like this, something must change!

It's the moment you see that my present course is leading me toward disaster.

Moreover, the Damascus road is the road you travel when the Spirit of the Lord opens your eyes and you experience the presence of God for yourself.

On the Damascus Road the Lord gives you a new experience, a new song to sing, and a new testimony.

Travelers on the Damascus road sing, "I was sinking deep in sin, far from the peaceful shore. Very deeply stained within, seeking to rise no more. But the master of the sea, heard my despairing cry, from the waters lifted me now safe am I. Love lifted me."

They were excited about what they saw

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that after they met the stranger on the road they were excited about what they saw.

The men on that road did not recognize Jesus until he broke the bread. What did he say? What did he do that made them recognize him? It is not recorded what he did, but we know the last time he broke bread with his disciples he told them that the bread represented his body that would be given for many. He said the wine would represent his blood that would seal the New Testament.

When they saw him do something that was uniquely associated with the ministry of the Lord, their eyes were opened and they became excited about what they saw. Verse 31 says that after they saw him, he vanished. They looked around and he was gone, just as quickly as he appeared, but not without exciting them.

They said, "Did not our hearts burn within as he talked with us by the way?"

It's hard to know you have been in the presence of the Lord and not get excited!

The woman at the well found it was hard to contain her excitement. She ran through the streets of the city saying, "Come see a man who told me all I've ever done!"

Jesus healed 10 lepers one day, as they all walked away, one was so excited that he came back to say, 'Thank you, Lord!"

When the Lord has picked you up and turned you around and place your feet on the right road, it's not hard to get excited.

We may have begun our journey on the road to Emmaus, but after our eyes were opened we started walking the road to glory!

Every child of God is encouraged to keep his hands wrapped in the winding chain and to walk the road to Glory.

There is only one road from here to glory, because I heard Jesus say, "I am the way, the truth and the light!"

There may be wide roads and there may be side roads, but there's only one road between here and heaven.

An old man took his small grandson on a trip to what grandpa called home. The little boy fascinated with the fine highway. He loved count to lines in the highway and see the pretty cars as the raced by. After a few hours however, his grandpa turned on an old dirt road. Gone were the hard pavement, brisk traffic and brightly colored lines. The road was bumpy. It wound through trees and went over hills. At some points it was filled it pot holes. The little boy asked his grandfather, "Why did we have to take this ugly road with all of these mud holes. Nobody is on this road? Why could we stay on the pretty road with all of the cars" The grandpa looked over at his grandson and said, "Look up on the top of that hill, that's we're going. There's only one road up that old house and it goes straight up that hill. The highway is pretty, but it won't take me where I'm trying to go and that's up that hill!"

On a hill far away, stood an old rugged cross, the emblem of suffering and shame!

To get to that cross you have to walk the road to Calvary!

We must tell the world that one day we walking the road to destruction, but we met a stranger on the road who turned our lives around!

We must tell somebody that his name is Jesus!

We must tell somebody that that he died on Calvary, but…

Early! Early, Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Give it up for God

SCRIPTURE: "Then I said, I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name. But his word was in mine heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and I could not stay." Jeremiah 20:9; "Quench not the spirit." 1 Thessalonians 5:19

Introduction

Have you ever watched the master of ceremonies of a comedy show introduce an entertainer? Generally, the MC will say a few words to the audience to loosen up the crowd and prepare it to receive the next act. If the next act is a relative newcomer or an unknown the MC will say, "Let's give it up for…" and ask the audience to receive the coming performance. The lights in the auditorium flash "applause." Prompting wave at the studio audience and urge them to applause for the performer.

The purpose of asking the audience to "give it up for" a performer is to create an atmosphere that welcomes the performer and encourages him to do his best. The audience is asked to release its good will and warmth to receive what is coming.

Two things rarely happen. It is rare for the MC to ask the audience to "Give it up" for a known crowd pleaser. The star elicits his own applause because of his greatness. Secondly, after the entertainer has finished his return, the MC does not have to come back and ask the audience to give it up for them again. What he did drew its own applause.

When we say, "Give it up for.." we are turning loose and letting go!

What happens however if are we about to praise God? Those who don't know him need someone to tell them to "Give it up for God!" Those who have seen him work and watched him operate in their lives don't have to be told to "Give it up for God" because they start cheering just as soon as they hear his name!

Those who know the Lord don't need an applause sign or a cue to praise the Lord. Neither do they look over their shoulder to see if anyone else is praising him; they do it because that "at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that he is Lord of Lord!"

As Christians, we feel compelled to praise the Lord because he is good and his mercy endureth forever. Whether we clap our hands, stomp our feet, or just nod our heads and smile, we have to respond when we think of the goodness of the Lord.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul writing to the church at Thessalonica about giving true praise to God.

Verse 19 is a short but powerful verse, "Quench not the spirit." It was an admonition to the church to allow the free expression of enthusiasm and excitement about God's goodness in the assembly of the saints or the working of his will in the congregation. The verse explains that no one should work against the will of God or expressions of acceptance and excitement about the will of God being fulfilled.

The Holy Spirit is often represented in scripture as a holy fire. John told his disciples that he baptized them with water, but one coming after him would baptize them with fire. He represented the Holy Spirit as fire. In Acts 2:3 the Holy Spirit descended upon believers on the day of Pentecost like fire.

It is the fire of the Lord that breathes life into ministries and the works of God. Without that Holy Ghost fire it stops. It is the fire of the Lord that motivates churches to reach out to the needy, care for the sick, heal the broken hearted and to keep reaching for the impossible. It is also the fire of the Lord that prompts believers to stand boldly before the throne of Grace expecting God's blessings on them as they carry out his will.

In this first instance, therefore, "Quench not the spirit" has reference to doing or saying anything that has the effect of slowing, stopping or otherwise hindering the work of the ministry. In our way of understanding it, "Quench not the spirit" means don't rain on God's parade. Quench not the spirit is not a request; it is a command to believers. We should be extremely careful about placing ourselves in the way of God's moving hand. It is a contest that we cannot win.

In the second instance, "'Quench not the spirit" refers not so much to the carrying out of the will of God but to expressions of appreciation about the will of God being done. Believers who are baptized in the spirit are driven by an inner fire that burns without ceasing. It is this fire that Jeremiah referred to in Jeremiah 20:9 when he thought about keeping the Gospel message to himself and telling no one, only to discover that he was motivated by something within him that was like fire shut up in his bones. He said he wasn't going to tell anybody but could not keep it to himself.

Those who are excited about what God has done for them, show it in many ways. The bible has shown us a variety of ways in which people have shown their excitement about God's actions. David was so excited about the return of the Ark to Israel and other blessings that he danced nearly naked in the streets. The Psalms suggests that we should come before the Lord with singing; even lifting holy hands is described as an acceptable way of praising God. The 150th Psalms says we should praise him upon the cymbals and the harp and the loud sounding cymbals as we "let everything that hath breath praise the Lord.." Moreover we are told that we show praise to God through keeping our vows to him, sharing in the work, drinking from the cup with him.

It is clear that the preponderance of scripture teaches a variety of ways to let the spirit manifest itself. There is no certain way to praise the Lord. Therefore, one group should be careful not to impose its standard of praise upon another. Whereas one person praises God with silence an order, another group doesn't feel that job is complete unless they stand on their feet and "give it up for the Lord!"

Paul's advice to the Thessalonians was simple, "Don't try to stop the work of the spirit neither try to stop those who want to praise the spirit for His work."

Even in so doing, Paul warns us to be careful that we don't receive every pretense as a working of the spirit. In essence, a work may be done by the church but it may not be empowered by the spirit. We should try the spirit with the spirit. Likewise, everyone who claps his hands and stomps is not always praising God. It is possible that other spirits might be at work. We should be cautious about the sister who is filled with the Holy Ghost one minute but is ready to cuss you out the next. The Holy Ghost doesn't leave us, he is always with us. The woman who cusses us out after he finishes shouting may have had a good shout but it wasn't the work of the Holy Spirit. In verse 21 he urges believers not to receive "all" spirits without trying them first.

The sum total of the teaching is that we should not stand in the way of the Holy Spirit's work by either trying to stop the work from happening, refusing to do our part, or talking it down. Neither should we attempt to stop anyone from true spirit led expressions of gratitude for God's goodness.

Three reasons to give it up

We should be willing to "give it up for God" without hesitation because he has helped in so many ways:

HIS FIRE PURGED US: Every believer should be willing to give it up for God because he has purged us of our sins. One of the functions of the Holy Spirit is to purge our sins. That is, wipe the slate clean. Isaiah 53 reminds us that he was "wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities……with his stripes we are healed." Whenever we consider what we once were, we should be willing to give it up for God. Every believer can testify that, "I'm not what I want to be. I'm not what I'm going to be, but thank God, because of Jesus, I'm not what I was." The simple truth of the matter is that the blood of Christ "purged" us of all of our sins. Think of it! No matter what we have been in the past has been wiped clean. It's gone. Our neighbors and friends won't ever forget but God forgives! 1 Corinthians 6:11 reminds each of us that, "And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God. So when it comes to giving God praise, those who have been picked up and turned around should be among the first to "give it up for God!"

HIS FIRE REFINED US: The Holy Spirit refines us. Whenever gold or other precious metal was extracted it had to be refined. The process was to heat the ore to such temperatures that the gold separated itself from the rock, mud and other minerals. Biblically, it is called being "tried in the fire." Every believer knows what it means to be tried in the fire. That's when we get our little test. It comes in different ways. Sometimes we are tried with health issues. At other times there are financial problems. Our test could even include relationships, career challenges or major career difficulties. Those who have weathered such storms know what it means to be tried in the fire. When we come through, like pure gold that is refined, all of the raw ore seems to float away leaving behind a purer spirit, a more sensitive nature, and a closeness to God. We went into our situation crudely but we arose more refined and able to stand whatever life throws at us. The Holy Spirit is the refining agent. The Holy Spirit separates and then polishes us as we prepare for greater service. Anyone who has been to God's refinery has no trouble "giving it up for God!" No one has to prod us or push us or prompt us. Whenever we remember the refinery, we are quick to "give it up for God!"

HIS FIRE MOTIVATES US: The Holy Spirit motivates; that's what Jeremiah learned. Sometimes, just as he did Jeremiah, he motivates us to continue. There are other times when he has to take extraordinary means to motivate us. Jonah tried to go in the wrong direction. He ignored every warning. It took three days in the belly of a whale before he was motivated to do what he should do. The same was the case with Saul who had to be stricken on the Damascus Road. After three days and nights of blindness, he was motivated to do the right thing. The Holy Spirit directs us and motivates us. Those moments when we found ourselves in a slump were impossible times. We came to a complete halt and it was only the Holy Spirit that prompted us to get going again. The same is true when we were saved from big mistakes. Sometimes it was the stumbling block that frustrated us that saved us from the troubling situation. When we have been motivated to go the right direction by the Holy Spirit, it is no problem for us to "give it up for God." When we has picked us up and turned us around and place our feet on solid ground, it's not hard at all to "give it up for God!"

He gave it up for us

Finally, brothers and sisters, we should give it up for Christ, because he gave it up for us!

Long before we saw a need to give it up for the Lord he gave it up for us.

We know God gave it up for us because the bible tells us, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

He gave it up for us by showing us his love.

It was a love that was:

—higher than the heavens —deeper than the oceans
—lovelier than the sunsets
—sweeter than the honeycomb —stronger than the wind
—fresher than the morning dew

It was a love that could not be:
—measured for it is immeasurable
—described for it is indescribable —evaluated for it is invaluable
—comprehended for it is incomprehensible
—explained for it is unexplainable

There's no other love that can:
—bless and benefit
—penetrate and saturate
—glorify and magnify
—satisfy and beautify
—encourage the discouraged!

We should give it up for God because he first gave it up for us. No wonder the songwriter declared, "Oh How I love Jesus. Because he first loved me."

Somebody came to the worship service today sporting your DC degree. Day Care Center Certificate. It certifies that you know how to act! You were told in Day Care to sit politely and to be quiet in your seat. We may forget many things, but we remember what we learned in Day Care. Somebody came to the worship today, determined to keep their praise turned down low.

I said I wasn't going to tell anybody but I can't keep it to myself.
I've got to tell somebody about Jesus!
Jesus, who died on Calvary!
Jesus, who arose early Sunday morning!
I said I wasn't going to tell anybody but I got to give it up for Jesus!

Introduction

What is the secret to personal success? Books have been written that purport to reveal the secret to success in nearly every walk of life. Many are so taken with the drive for success that they are willing to do just about anything. A recent television series looked at the mothers of little children who rob their children of their childhoods as the prep them to win beauty pageants. Fathers who want their sons to be professional athletes begin them on a ritual in that direction before they can begin walk. It seems everyone is looking for the secret to success.

There are thousands of books that tell us how to succeed. Donna Brooks' "Seven secrets of successful women" is a bestseller. Erin Conroy has a book called "20 secrets to success with your child." Og Mandino has one called "Secrets of Success and Marriage." The list of success driven books, videos and audio tapes is unending. It seems everyone wants to write a book about how to succeed in something. The reason they are so popular is because it seems, "everyone wants to know."

Whether we are successful in life depends heavily upon how we define success. If we define success in terms of material things, then we spend our lives trying to accumulate as many material things as possible. We count ourselves a success if we have them and can keep them and we say we have failed if we cannot get them or lose them. If we define success in terms of quality of life concerns such as peace, happiness, and inner joy, then we may find success with or without material things. If we are looking for a "secret to success" the bible gives us a very unusual way to succeed that is totally different from what the world teaches. In fact, it is so unusual that many reject what it teaches because it does not appear logical in light of today's times. The bible says to be "exalted" or "lifted up" that means to succeed, we must "humble ourselves before God" and God will do the rest. That means, do the will of God without seeking success itself and God will take care of the rest.

Consider Uncle Willie's great success. Uncle Willie was a humble man who never tried to force his way on anybody. In fact, many would describe him as a pushover. He never said much. He never said anything when a construction company parked bulldozers and heavy machinery on his land while they were building a road close by. He never said much when he heard some of the workers shooting a rifle and laughing one night. But when be easy pickings. He pressed Uncle Willie hard to except a full settlement of $10,000 for the cow. He was surprised that Uncle Willie never asked for anything, he just listened. The lawyer insisted that Uncle Willie should sign the settlement document. Neither party could reverse the settlement once made. It was final. After they made the settlement and the check was delivered, the young lawyer could not help but brag. He told Uncle Willie, "You know, I hate to tell you this but I put one over on you in there. If you had gone to court, I couldn't have won the case. The men were on your land unauthorized. They were shooting a rifle and drinking. We would have lost the case without a doubt. Uncle Willie didn't want to brag, but he had a confession to make too. "Well, I'll tell you, I was a little worried about winning that case myself, because much to my surprise, that old cow came home this morning!"

As Christians, we have learned that doing God's will has its rewards. Sometimes we receive them in material things, everything we receive them in heaven. We are successful if we surrender ourselves to his will and allow him to take control of our lives.

Exposition

This text focuses on James, the brother of Jesus, as he gives believers a very unusual formula for success: Stay close to God and he will lift your up.
In the first eight verses of James 1 he encouraged Christians to do good works with the full knowledge that there will be those who will detract from the work as they attempt to thwart its success.

He described these efforts as "divers temptations." It is used to suggest that the world will attack persons trying to live the Bessie, his prize-winning cow didn't come back from that same field the next morning Uncle Willie filed a complaint. The company, fearing a lawsuit, sent a smart young lawyer to settle with Uncle Willie out of court. The young lawyer saw the humble old man and decided he would Christian life from all sides.

In Chapter 4:7 he begins to reveal several secrets to success. He says to gain God's favor we should: submit ourselves to him, resist the devil, draw nigh to him, cleanse ourselves, be serious, and do our work with a spirit of humility.
This spirit of serious, humble work for the kingdom, despite "divers" temptations requires a total surrender of self to the cause of Christ. In essence it requires us to lose our own life to the cause of Christ. We are victorious only if the cause of the Christ is victorious.

Success is defined not by personal standards but by our participation in a life plan that is bigger than our own, endorsed in heaven.
To achieve this goal we must surrender all.

In John 5 told his followers the source of his great deeds was not in himself but was in God. His hand touched the lame but it was God that made them walk. He spoke the words to the blind but it was God that made them see. Lepers were made whole after leaving his presence only because God willed it so. The simple acts and words he spoke would be powerless and empty were it not for God taking them and making them into powerful instruments to perform his will.
In John 5:30 Christ said "I can do of mine own self do nothing." He pointed to a great truth. To do his mighty works he had to reach a point in his life in which he decided to lose himself in the will of God. It was the point when he decided to surrender all, and God decided to lift him up.

The Five Secrets to Success

James lists five secrets to success for every believer.Together they guarantee each believer a successful spiritual life.

SURRENDER TO GOD: The first step is to surrender ourselves to God. What does that mean? It means that we must give up our entire way of seeing and measuring things and see the world through "Kingdom" glasses. First we have to surrender our sense of personal confidence. This is the notion that we can accomplish anything, alone. When we surrender to God we change our attitude to one that says, "I can't do anything without God." I can't succeed in business, school or my profession without God's blessings. Once that is done, then kingdom building becomes the highest priority. Surrendering is not easy. Everything in us wants independence. Everything in us says, "Seek your own, do for yourself, and reach your own goals." Surrendering requires us to put our own goals on the back burner and to put those of Christ on the front burner. Those who are unable to surrender, will also find the remaining four secrets difficult as well, because they are almost impossible to accomplish without an attitude of surrender. Those who are able to surrender themselves can say with the songwriter, 'All to Jesus I surrender, all to him I freely give. I will ever love and trust him; in his presence daily live. I surrender all. I surrender all. All to thee my blessed savior. I surrender all."

RESIST THE DEVIL: The second step to spiritual success is to resist the devil. The devil pushes us to promote ourselves in many ways. He promotes us to do things so that we can receive personal pleasure, credit, praise or power. We are told that if we want to spiritually succeed we must resist these motivations. We should ask the question, "Why am I doing what I am doing? What is my motivation? When it is over do I expect praise, credit or power?" If so, we are encouraged to resist devilish impulses. The weapons we use to resist the devil are: faith and prayer. A man or woman who operates on faith and prayer is able to resist the devil. God will help us recognize that a certain act is not according to his will, when we pray before we act. He will also help us to stand when the devil attacks. To resist the devil we cannot afford to abandon our prayer lives. If we went through this week without taking time to read our bible or share in a moment of personal prayer, our resistance will be low. Satan will find plenty of room to impose himself on our thoughts and actions. He can't get a word in if we are constantly focused on the Lord and his kingdom.

STAY CLOSE TO GOD: One of the by products of surrendering to God and resisting Satan is the fact that these two steps will automatically draw us, closer to God. Review the verse again, "Draw nigh unto God and he will draw nigh unto you." It means that when we draw close to God he will meet us half way, and meet us at our coming. Staying close to God is not as easy it seems. There are things that we do to stay close. To stay close to someone we want to be in their presence, talk with them, listen to them, and share experiences with them. It is a natural tendency for us to be drawn to those who want to be around us and to shy away from those who don't want to be close to us. In this respect, God is the same way. If we want to be close to him, then he makes special effort to be close to us. He is close enough to us to know our needs, sense our weakness and to respond to us in the nick of time. We are close enough to him to know his will, appreciate his love and give him praise. That's why the songwriter wrote, "Draw me nearer, nearer blessed Lord to the cross where thou has died. Draw me nearer, nearer blessed Lord, to thy precious bleeding side."

BE SERIOUS: We are warned to "cleanse ourselves" if we want to succeed in spiritual things. This means we should make sure our motives and reasons for doing things are pure. Jesus said, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." When we do any work for the Lord it should be with one objective only, "that God be praised." If we sing so we can be praised, perform a service so we can be praised, or minister so we can be praised, then we need to check our motives. The text says, "purify your hearts." To be successful in Christ, we must do whatever we do for the intent of glorifying God. It is not sufficient for example, to give God praise for a work that was not intended to build his kingdom. An explicit rapper who gives God the praise for his media success does not praise God in this manner because the purpose of an explicit CD was not to build the kingdom of God. God would get the praise from the work, not from the words of praise given at the award ceremony.

HAVE, A HUMBLE SPIRIT: The last step James gives is to approach everything with a humble spirit. That too is against the normal flow of humanity. Usually, we like being praised for what we do. It is our nature to seek that praise because it helps promote our personal agenda. The humble person knows that he or she is not able to accomplish anything notable without God's help; thus they shy away from being boastful. We can't accomplish anything unless we are willing to put ourselves in the background. Humility is hard because it is against our nature. It is easy, if we have surrendered ourselves to God in the first place. When that happens, we don't want to take credit for his work in our lives.

He will lift you up

Finally, brothers and sisters, those who surrender themselves to God have this assurance, "He will lift you up."

To be lifted up means to be raised up in honor and respect.

To be lifted up is to be picked up when you have been knocked down!

To be lifted up is to have doors opened when they have been closed in your face!

To be lifted up is to be set free when you have been a captive all of your life! He's brought me from a mighty long way!

Those who surrender to the will of God are those who trust him for everything and put him first in their lives. The Lord has promised in Matthew 6:33 that those who "seek ye first the kingdom of God and his "righteousness" shall all of the other things added unto them.

If I surrender all, when I've failed, some way or another, he will turn my failure into success!

If I surrender all, when I'm weak, some way or another, he will turn my weakness into strength!

If I surrender all, when I have questions, some way or another he will provide the answers!

If I surrender all,, when I am frustrated, some way or another he will give me hope!

I surrender all!

I surrender all!

All to Jesus, who died out on Calvary!

All to Jesus, who arose Early Sunday morning!

All to thee my precious savior, I surrender all!

Behold Thy Mother

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.

SCRIPTURE. "Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home. " John 19:27 "These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren." Acts 1:14

Introduction

Have you ever taken a good at your mother? Beyond the facial features and other physical attributes, good mothers have qualities that are often reflected in their faces. Look at the lines above your mothers eyes. These lines form when we think a lot. Mothers who have lines carved into their foreheads are said to be mothers who fought a lot during the course of their experience. If there are lines between eyebrows is saying that they suggest she frowned a lot and probably spent many hours upset about one thing or another. If there are lines around her nasalabial folds at the comers of both sides of her mouth, then she is said to be one who smiled a lot and shared many happy moments. The faces of mothers usually reflect an assortment of smiles and frowns and thoughfulness that we often overlook until we take a good look at our mothers.

If we take just a single day and observe the mother in our home without saying a word, what would we see? In many homes we would see mother change quickly from one role to another. In one instance she is an alarm clock; but in another she is a gourmet chef. For some she becomes the crossing guard, the van driver and parttime chauffeur. In just a few minutes she instantly transforms into a working mom dashing into the workplace and dashing back home at the end of the day, just in time for cheerleader practice, church rehearsals, spring training and lastminute grocery shopping. In between the time, somewhere in the day she finds time to pray, pay bills, fix what's broken, and think of ways to keep from breaking what's not broken. If we take a good look at the mother in our family, many would come close to this description.

Children watch their mothers. Even when their moms are not looking, children always seem to observe the various moves of their mothers. They watch how she walks. They watch how she talks. They know when she's feeling good. They also know when she's down in the dumps. Just as moms watch their children, children also spend time watching their mothers.

The little ones watched mom for many days make tea without tea bags. It was strange, but mom ordered special tea leaves to make her brew. On Mother's day her children decided that it would be a great idea to treat mom by bringing her tea in bed. That morning the kids proudly marched into Mom's bedroom and awakened her with a kiss and shout, "Happy Mother's Day!" Mom was surprised to see her little ones, four, five and six years old had a tray prepared with folded napkins, a flower a Mother's Day card and a piping hot cup of her favorite home brewed tea. "I didn't know you knew how to make tea" Mother said. "Oh yes, said the six year old, we watched you every day. We put the tea leaves in the water and let it boil." Mother was delighted as she lifted the cup to her lips the six year old added, "We couldn't find the strainer you used so we used the fly swatter! "The mother also dropped the tea cup. "You did what?" The six year old quickly added, "Don't worry we didn't use the new one you just bought, we used the old one." The mother hugged each girl and told them they were so sweet she lost her taste for tea!

There are many examples of good mothers in the Bible. The most fascinating example however, is that of Mary the mother of Jesus. In the manger, in celebrations, in times of trouble, even hanging from the cross, Jesus kept his eye on his mother. She was never far away, from his cradle to his cross, to his grave; his mother was right by his side.

As Christians, we have learned that the qualities of Godly love are displayed in both godly fathers and mothers. If we want a description of Godly love and all we need to do is to observe a godly mother and we will see God's love in action. If you want to truly see what God's love is about then, "behold thy mother."

Exposition

These two texts give us striking snapshots of Mary, the mother of Jesus as she stands by her son at the foot of the cross and as she stands with other women waiting for the descent of the Holy Spirit.

Mary is the consummate picture of motherhood. In the course of her life she experienced nearly every emotion shared by mothers of every generation. Whether it was the joy of childbirth or the pain of watching her son in disgrace or the ecstasy of seeing him glorified, Mary's experience in motherhood is strikingly similar to that of every in the mother in the world.

John shows us Mary at the cross. No one but a mother can understand how she must have felt standing at the foot of the cross watching the child she carried in her womb fastened to a Roman cross by both hand and foot. John records the words of Jesus from the cross as he looked down at his mother and commended her care into John's hands. His words, "behold thy mother" were an invitation to John to embrace Mary as his own mother and for Mary to embrace John as her own son. His words to Mary were, "Woman behold thy son."

The Act of the Apostles shows Mary for the last time. She is gathered with other women who were praying for the power or of the Holy Spirit which had been promised by Christ in his last days. Even though she was the mother of Jesus, she did not neglect joining the other women in prayer and supplication. No one knows what happened to Mary after this text. She is never mentioned again in the New Testament. The Bible does not say what she did, where she lived, or where she died. What we know about Mary is that she spent most of her adult life being a mother to her son; through miraculous good times and tragic bad times, she was always by his side.

Mary at the Manger

The first place we see Mary is at the manger. The Bible introduces Mary as a young woman of humble spirit who is selected by God to bring into the world the promised Messiah. At the manger, and all of its associated incidents, Mary gives us the first picture of motherhood. The historic picture we have of mothers is that of a mother holding a child in her anus. The most important times in a child's life are those years spent in the presence of a loving mother. As an embryo or fetus a child learns its mother's voice and becomes attached to her in both body and spirit. Good mothers are careful about the manger experience of their children's lives. Good mothers know that these are the most impressionable years. They give of themselves to help mold and shape their children into the best that God would have them to be. The manger represents the formative years in a child's life. It's the time when his selfconcept is formed and his personality is shaped. It's a time when he learns the meaning of love, discipline, and discernment between right and wrong. Good mothers resist the temptation to delegate this responsibility to others. It's something that only a mother can do. At the manger, in her home, or in the company of the family, Mary demonstrated what a good mother does in the formative years of a child's life.

Mary at the marriage

The bible gives an account of a marriage celebration in which Mary and her family were participants. This is the famous account of the incident in which Mary asked Jesus to provide more wine for the guests when the supply ran out. At the marriage we see Mary involved in a family celebration. It was a happy time. It was a festive time. She shared in this moment. Even today good mothers follow Mary's example because they share in the celebrations of their children. Whether it's a birthday party, or the celebration of some achievement at school or on the athletic field, good mothers are part of the celebration. Celebrations only have value if they are shared by those who can appreciate the significance of the moment. Since mothers know the difficulties that led up to the moment of celebration they know the importance of the moment. When every child thinks back to their first birthday party, many recall the face of mother and granny and the one who played mother at all of their important moments. Mothers know the importance of sharing celebrations and great moments. They seemed to tackle the words of Diana Ross when she said, "Success is nothing unless you have someone you love to share it with you." In this respect, mothers show the love of God by sharing moments of celebration.

Mary at the cross

The Gospels give us a striking account of Mary in the crowds following her son, listening as they called for his crucifixion, watching as he carried a cross on his shoulder, as they buried him in the tomb. What the Gospels show us is a mother who shared the full gamut of her child's experience including his tragedy. There are many mothers today who understand how Mary must have felt standing at the cross watching her son dying in humiliation. One of the most striking scenes in the movie "The Passion of the Christ" is the scene that showed Mary desiring to reach out for her son as she saw him fall under the weight of the cross. Every mother in the audience could relate to her and the tears began to flow. Good mothers feel the pain of their children. They may be thousands of miles away but there seems to be a builtin instinct that signals to every mother when something is going wrong with a child. Mothers have the ability, it appears, to empathize with their children. They can feel them and touch their inner souls.

At the cross many of Jesus' friends deserted him. The Bible says they watched from afar. But Mary stood by her son and watched him in his most vulnerable moment. Likewise, mothers today stand with their children even when the world has deserted them and their standing in their most vulnerable moments. Mothers do not always agree with the circumstances of their children's affliction, tragedy or accusation. When their children have done wrong, they support them but their support does not mean that they endorse wrongdoing. Like most God fearing women they detest the wrong that their children may have done but they still love the children. Similarly, God loves us the same way. He detests the wrongs that we do, but yet, he still loves us as individuals. At the cross, Mary shows us the extent and the depth of the mother's love. At the same time she shows us the compassion of love at work even in our most vulnerable moment.

Never Left Him

Finally, brothers and sisters, we see Mary in prayer waiting to be sustained by the power of God.

Jesus said "Behold thy mother!" As we behold Mary, we see the complete picture of motherhood.

When we behold Mary in the crowd in prayer, waiting for the power of God we see what motherhood is about.

If we want to see a snapshot of motherhood then we have to behold women like Mary.

Modem society has cheapened motherhood. Since 1993, an average of 1.5 million babies have been aborted each year because those babies would have inconvenienced the mother or interrupted her career opportunities. Yet, even as millions cheapened motherhood, there were millions more who exercised their right of choice and chose life over death.

That choice was a Godly Choice. It was the choice of love.

Motherhood gets even cheaper as society experiments with cloning, fertilizes eggs in testtubes and grows babies in artificial wombs.

Motherhood has been cheapened so much that the world is looking for examples of real motherhood.

If you are searching for that good example, listen to the words of Jesus, "Behold thy mother!"

Behold thy mother and you will see a mother who would work herself into the ground to put shoes on her children's feet, while her own shoes may have holes in the soles.

Behold thy mother and you will see a mother who will feed her children a full course meal even if it means going to bed hungry herself.

Behold thy mother and you will see a mother who is so strong that she will fight off a legion of enemies attacking her children, but so meek that she will cry if she reads a few kind words on a card of thanks.

If you want to see an example of how God can make a way out of no way, behold thy mother!

If you want to see an example of how God can help you fight the battles of life and keep a smile on your face, behold thy mother!

If you want to see an example of how God can build you up when you are torn down and can plant your feet on solid ground, behold thy mother!

On the day of Pentecost, Mary was in prayer. That gives us the final picture of the godly mother. She is a praying mother.

A praying mother knows that if she puts life's concerns in God's hands he will make a way out of no way!

A praying mother knows when she has fallen down, God will pick her up again!

A praying mother knows that when she has failed, God will give her a second chance!

A praying mother knows that when she is weak, God will renew her strength!

A praying mother knows that if she can wait on the Lord, he will realize his will. The word says, "They that wait upon the Lord, shall renew their strength. They shall mount on wings as eagles. They shall run but not get weary. They shall walk and not faint."

If you want to see somebody that the Lord has brought a mighty long way, "Behold thy mother!"

If you want to see somebody that has a story to tell, "Behold thy mother!"

The story that mama tells is the same story that the godly father tells. It's a story about God's amazing Grace.

It's story of Mary's son!

His name is Jesus!

He died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday Morning....

Shortening Bread

SCRIPTURE: And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst. John 6:35

Introduction

What if there was a magic cure for every problem or ailment that we could conceive? What if there was an answer to every question we could pose? What if there was an instant solution to every problem that we face; would it be considered something important? We have seen many miracle cures, magic snake oils, and cure-alls from all around the world. No matter how they are promoted as the singular cure for everything that's wrong with the world how bodies and humanity, these magic cures always seen to fall short of our expectations. In simpler times, Grandma seemed to have a cure for everything. There were a few things that Grandma gave to everyone that appeared to be the cure for everything wrong with us. Among those things was something called Castor Oil. If you had a stomachache the solution was Castor Oil. If you were constipated, the solution was Castor Oil. If you were simply feeling bad, the solution was Castor Oil. If you broke the family rules the punishment often included a couple of spoonfuls of castor oil. If it wasn't Castor Oil it was B.C. Powder. Grown folks seemed to take B.C. powders for just about everything. If not that it was Standback. The commercials on television said take a Standback and snapback. In every home there seemed to be a few magic solutions to every problem.

One of those surefire remedies for nearly every illness whether it was real or imagined was a strange one. One miracle cure all for just about everything wrong with every child with a small problem was something called shortening bread. Shortening bread was one of those cure-alls that seemed to heal nearly every sickness of the body. When we think of shortening bread what immediately comes to mind is the words of the children's song. They took him to the doctor, and the doctor said, "Give them children some shortening bread." Shortening bread was so popular a solution to illnesses that did not require major medical attention that even doctor's prescribed the home remedy. Those who remember the children's song have heard many versions of it but many other lyrics are similar to this: "Mamma's little baby loves shortening, shortening, Momma's little baby loves shortening bread"

One of the verses is, "Three little children, lying in bed, two was sick and the other most dead; Sent for a doctor, and the doctor said, feed those children some shortening bread." No matter what our ailment, it was believed by many that shortening bread was the cure.

That brings to mind some familiar words of Jesus as he spoke to his disciples. He often told them about the nature of the Kingdom of Heaven and his relationship to the Kingdom. He often characterized himself in many ways, one of which was to use inanimate objects to personify himself. In one instance he said he was he was a door by which everyone had to pass to make it to the Kingdom. In another instance he said he was water that would keep those who were thirsty and satisfy them. In John 6:35 he compares himself to bread. The verse reads, "And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger..."

It was supposed that shortening bread was good for whatever ails us. Whether it was children or any other ailment, the prescription was shortening bread. However, Jesus is the bread of life, he's better than shortening bread.

As Christians, we know there is no magic cure for the illness of the world. But there's something else that we know. We know there is one name that we can call when we stand in need of help whether it's spiritual or physical. That name is the name of Jesus. He's better than shortening bread. He is the savior of the world.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus as he explained the nature of his ministry.

Crowds followed him wherever he went in hopes of catching a glimpse of one of his famous miracles, or better still to be a participant in a miraculous event..
The people were so excited about what they saw that they immediately wanted to make Jesus their king because they envisioned feasts for everyone under his administration. They wanted more fish and more bread. Jesus rebuked the crowd for following their growling bellies, seeking food. He offered them food, but it was not of mere fish and bread. He told them that just as Moses gave them manna or the "bread from heaven" in the wilderness so had the father made it possible for them to have a greater bread. He summed up this truth by telling them "I am the bread of life: he that comethto me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." What Christ told the crowds was simple, "If its fish and bread you seek, keep looking; but if its food for your soul that you want, I can satisfy your needs."

What's In Shortening Bread?

Jesus said I am the bread of life. Have you stop to think that means? Let's break down the ingredients in the traditional shortening bread recipe and see what they mean in the Christian life.

FOUR CUPS OF FLOUR: Many of the modern moms made shortening bread with fancy store-bought flour. It's the kind that comes in the package marked enriched white flour. There's something that should get our attention about that word enriched. If we look closely we will find that the enriched flour is not really enriched at all. When you purchase flour in the store, the fiber and natural vitamins have been removed and the flour is 'enriched' (man made vitamins are added at the discretion of the manufacturer) and bleached to preserve shelf life. Enriched really means stripped of its natural fiber and vitamins. The old-fashioned flour was not enriched. In fact, it was so old-fashioned that Grandma had to sift the flour to reduce the number of grains that finally made it into a recipe. Jesus said I am the bread of life pointing to another troop about flour. When we eat whole-wheat bread or grains or cereals we absorb a sufficient supply of fiber and other nutrients that help us to avoid a variety of illnesses and diseases. The fiber absorbs toxins in the digestive system and moves them out of your system quickly when combined with drinking plenty of water. When Jesus referred to himself as the bread of life, was he speaking of bread made of whole-grain or enriched flour? Probably not.

The bread of bible times was not "enriched." Today, there are many people who profess Christ but what they are really professing is an enriched version of Christianity. This version of Christianity is stripped of all the vitamins and fiber need to make it the real bread of life. It's a bleached out version that is convenient, quick, and marketable. This version of Christianity is sold to millions who are fooled by its fancy wording, thinking that empty religion is really the way to an "enriched" life. We must remember that whole-grain foods are living foods. When we eat a piece of meat, it is dead. When we nibble on a potato chip it is dead. But whole grain foods are alive. If we planted any one of the kernels of wheat in whole grain bread, it will grow. All it needs is the proper surrounding and it will sprout! When Jesus said, he is the bread of life he meant he gives life. He gives new life to dead things. "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature; behold old things are passed and all things become new." Good Shortening Bread used plenty of living bread; so should every believer.

ONE POUND OF BUTTER: One of the main ingredients in shortening bread is butter. Even though the name says shortening bread there is no shortening in the bread. However there is a substance in it that makes baked goods soft. That ingredient is butter. The typical shortening bread recipe calls for 1 lb. of butter. That's about four sticks of butter. That's a whole lot of butter for just 4 cups of flour. When mixed with the other ingredients, butter tends to make the whole batter soft. A few generations ago butter was hard to come by. A cow had to be milked, and the milk had to be churned through a time intensive process called churning. Producing butter was not as simple as going to go to market and buying a few sticks for the refrigerator. It required a whole lot of work. A whole lot of churning. It took a lot of time. People who have been married for many years understand churning process. Their successful marriages took time to churn and work out their differences slowly and laboriously until the cream rose to the top, and the butter appears. Butter is the end result of a tremendous amount of work. This is true for all relationships. You don't get cream and butter without churning. A full churn of butter can soften up a lot shortening bread. Perhaps that's what Jesus had in mind when you get speaking to his disciples about the great sacrifice they would make to usher in the Kingdom of Heaven. There were many wanted him to incite a more vigorous, violent, and aggressive Kingdom. However, what he sought to do was to inspire a gentle approach to Kingdom Building. It was one that encouraged forgiveness and turning the other cheek. What he wanted was a whole lot of butter. In these tough times we too need a gentler spirit for a world on the brink of war every day.

ONE CUP OF BROWN SUGAR: Shortening Bread is basically a soft dough that is sweet. Many folks don't call it shortening bread at all, they call it sweet bread, because it contains a cup of sugar; not just any sugar, but brown sugar. If there are two cups of sugar sitting on the table, what's the difference if one is brown and the other is white? Plain white sugar is pure sucrose. It's been processed a lot. Brown sugar is often sticky and is often made by adding syrup or molasses to the mix which gives it its color. Both cups of sugar give the same amount of sweetness but brown sugar, when mixed with the other ingredients has a tendency to stick. In shortening bread, the brown sugar not only sweetens but it binds the mixture together. It's a great truth about the spirit of Christianity, it has a tendency to bind and hold together that which is falling apart. Put another way, "A little sweetness goes a long way." How many people are trying live their lives without sweetness? Husbands and wives are bitter, citizens in the community are bitter, church members are bitter, sisters and brothers are bitter. But, a little brown sugar goes a long way! The experts we get more calories from brown sugar, as well as nutrients. A cup of brown sugar contains 187 milligrams of calcium, 56 milligrams of phosphorous, 4.8 milligrams of iron, 757 milligrams of potassium and 97 milligrams of sodium. A little brown sugar goes a long way. Families and churches who show each other just a little love have a tendency to stay together. The song writer said, "I need you. you need me. We are all apart of God's family." Love is sweetand . God is Love. He is a sweet presence that prompted the songwriter to say, "There's a sweet sweet spirit in this place. And I know it must be the spirit of the Lord."

The Bread of Life

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that what Jesus offered his disciples was not shortening bread, but the bread of life.

The people were accustomed to bread, but this notion of the bread of life was something new.

They were accustomed to unleavened bread, but the bread of life was more than just unleavened bread.

They were familiar with the showbread which was used by the priests at the temple; but Jesus talked about unleavened bread.

Jesus said those who have the bread of life would never hunger.

He was God's wonder bread.

God's bread gives:

STRENGTH to those who are weak; INSPIRATION to those who are frustrated and confused!

HOPE to the hopeless; RENEWAL to those who are in despair!

PICKS UP those who are let down; LIFTS UP those who have been let down!

SAVES those who are lost and gives NEW ENERGY to those who wait on him. For I hear the word declare that "they that wait upon the Lord shall mount up on wings as eagles, they shall run and not be weary. They shall walk and not faint!"

God's bread is

QUICKER that hoe cakes. While we are still praying, our help is on the way!

LIGHTER than light bread. Those who wander in the dark will find that he is the light of the world!

SWEETER than raisin bread. His goodness takes the bitterness of hard times and sweetens its taste. No wonder the song writer said, "I found a savior and he's sweet I know!"

MORE FILLING THAN SHORTENING BREAD

MORE ASSORTED THAN CORN BREAD. Corn bread is good with greens, rice and gravy, stew meat or chicken. If there is nothing else, corn bread goes good with just corn bread and gravy. But God's bread goes with every situation. In my days of happiness, God is there! In my moments of sadness, God is there too! When my soul is hungry, God is there! No matter what my situation, God is there!

God's bread is better than wonder bread because he helps us to grow in many ways.

No wonder the song writer declared: "Bread of heaven, Bread of heaven, feed me till I want no more!"

When God saw a world hungry for the bread of life, he decided to share his only begotten son to feed them the power of salvation!

One evening, 2000 years ago, Jesus, the bread of heaven, took an old rugged cross and carried it to Calvary!

He died on that cross so that we might live!

But early Sunday morning, Quicker than instant biscuits in a hot stove!

Early Sunday morning, faster than light bread browns in a hot toaster!

Early Sunday morning, God's shared bread arose from the grave with....all power in his hands!

Pursuing Your Dreams

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
Pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

May 20, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "Thus saith the LORD of hosts; If thou wilt walk in my ways, and if thou wilt keep my charge, then thou shalt also judge my house, and shalt also keep my courts, and I will give thee places to walk among these that stand by." Zechariah 3:7

Introduction

What could stop you from pursuing your dreams? What could possibly come against you that could stop you from achieving your spiritually ordained goals and dreams? As a general rule, the first thing that stops most of us is the fear of failure. We are afraid that we might try and might fail in the process. We are afraid that we would not be accepted or the we may lose in the venture. Our fears and apprehensions are generally those things that stop us from achieving our dreams. On occasion, forces outside of us also work against us. These enemies and adversaries who spend most of that time planning and plotting ways to prevent us from succeeding. Notwithstanding our personal fears and the activity of our adversaries, what else is there that could stop us from pursuing our dreams?

Many people have some very ambitious plans for their lives that were made many years ago. At the start of each new year many sit down to evaluate whether or not any progress has been made toward achieving those goals. Sometimes our own reality check reveals startling results. Sometimes we discover that while we've had a year of activity, in reality we are no closer to our goals than we were a year ago. Misdirected activity may keep us going at a steady pace, but almost always takes us where we don't want to go. A year of misdirected activity usually concludes with little progress toward realizing goals.

What about our personal dreams? Are we any closer to making them become realities than we were a year ago? Are we pursuing our dreams or have we given up on them and dismissed them as unreachable? Robert Fulghum in his book "It was on fire when I laid down on it" tells of a young lady who was sitting on a suitcase and crying in the airport for several hours. He learned that she had run out of money. She had spent two days waiting in the airport standby with little to eat and too much pride to beg. Her plane was about to go and she had lost her ticket. She had been sitting in that one spot for hours just crying. She lost all hope of ever getting home. A nice couple wiped the girl's eyes and agreed to talk with the airport officials to help solve her problem. She stood up to go with them, turned around to pick up her belongings.

And SCREAMED. They thought something terrible had happened to her but no...it was her ticket. She found her ticket. She had been sitting on her ticket the whole time.

In a similar sense many of us have been sitting on our tickets to fulfillment and success afraid to move or feeling sorry because of our circumstance. Some have spent whole years sitting on their tickets watching others catch flights towards their destinies. They too could do the same except they have given up on themselves.

Satan attacks us in many ways and attempts to stop us from achieving our dreams. He likes for us to believe that dream is impossible. He likes for us to conclude that the obstacles all insurmountable. The image of the dream ordained by God stands on one side while on the other the enemy is standing with sword drawn. Many back away from their dreams thinking they are impossible. They simply sit on them.

As Christians, we know all things are possible! If our life goals are in accord with the will of God, nothing can stop us from achieving our destinies, except our own unwillingness to pursue our dreams with vigor and persistence. God holds the reins of life. He also showers blessings upon those who choose to use their life tickets rather than sit on them!

Exposition

This text focuses upon assurances given to the prophet Zachariah by God himself concerning Israal's dreams and hopes for the rebuilding of the kingdom.

The book of Zachariah is a book of encouragement. It serves the same purpose for the Old Testament as the book of Revelation serves for the New Testament. It paints a picture of hope for every believer struggling to achieve a stated purpose or goal.

Zechariah was a contemporary with Haggai, one of the prophets who ministered to the remnant who had returned from captivity in Babylon. Although they were back in Jerusalem rebuilding the temple and the city, they were still vassals of Babylon, still subject to the Gentile nations around them, without much hope for the future. They had one goal and one dream, which was to rebuild the walls. Zecharaiah's words came as an inspiration to the believers who, on occasion, were frustrated with the entire process and watched their dream fade in front of their eyes.

In a series of five visions Zachariah is shown how God will ultimately restore Israel and the priesthood to the picture they saw in their dreams. Chapter three focuses on the fifth vision which shows an image of Joshua the high priest and Satan. It depicts the high priest attempting to achieve the dream and Satan attempting to resist the fulfillment of the dream. It shows a quest and it shows an opposition to the quest. It shows a desire to succeed and an opposition to that desire to succeed.

Zachariah presents an image of Satan opposing the efforts of believers; then shows how God rebukes Satan as he attempts to put stumbling blocks in the way of believers. At verse two God speaks to Satan and says he rebukes him. To be rebuked is to be rejected, reprimanded or chastised for some wrongful act or infraction of the rules. In the vision, Satan is rebuked because he worked against the dream of the people to rebuild the temple and restore the worship and praise of God.

In the context of this vision Joshua represents the hopes and dreams of Israel and Satan represents all forces working against that dream. At verse seven the central focus of this text, an angel delivers an important reminder to Joshua. The angel's words were encouragement and reassurance. "If thou wilt walk in my ways and if thou wilt keep my charge" the angel began; then God will fix it so that the people of God will be able to achieve their dreams according to his will

Two important factors were listed for those believers who wanted to succeed in realizing the rebuilding of the kingdom and the restoration of the temple which were their immediate dreams.

Those factors were that every believer should walk in God's ways and keep his commandments.

That formula was clear in the book of Zachariah. The essence of the message remains true for believers of all generations.

Rebuke Satan

One of the important things that Zachariah Chapter three says to us is that if we are going to pursue our dreams successfully, Satan must be rebuked. God will rebuked him especially when his efforts interfere with the attainment of a godly ordained dream or aspiration. Translated to our day, Zachariah's words simply mean we should not allow Satan to steal our dream. Stay in contact with God give him your best and God will take care of Satan for you.

Don't let Satan or any of his imps, steal your dream.

Woodrow Wilson, the 28th president of the United States, did not begin school until he was nine years old. Despite that slow start he harbored a dream of being the President of the United States. Once educated and matured he became a college president, governor and was finally his name was submitted as a nominee of the Democratic Party. The party turned Wilson down 46 times until he was finally nominated and elected President of the United States.

Concerning the achievement of dreams Wilson said: "We grow great by dreams. All big men are dreamers. They see things in the soft haze of a spring day or in the red fire on a long winter's evening. Some of us let these great dreams die, but others nourish and protect them; nourish them through bad days till they bring them to the sunshine and light which comes always to those who sincerely hope that their dreams will come true." Don't let anyone steal your dreams!

Today there are many young people who will begin to weave the fabric of opportunity on the loom of life to make their dreams come true. As school bells begin to ring again, young people are faced with the challenge to seize the opportunities provided in school and weave them into learning experiences that will help them move closer to realizing their goals.

However, believers should be careful and remember Woodrow Wilson's advice: "Don't let anyone steal your dreams!" There are many ways that your dreams can be stolen from you, but the ones that happen most often involve negative self talk, misplaced opportunity, and twisted visions.

Three Ways Satan steals Your dream

NEGATIVE SELF TALK: Negative self talk refers to "putting yourself down" or under estimating your own ability to achieve. The young man who dreams of being an airline pilot must not convince himself that he can't achieve his goal. If he constantly tells himself it can't be done, he steals his own dream. The young lady who considers the amount of study required to become a nurse, steals her own dream if she starts to tell herself that she's not as good as others who have achieved the same goal.

The road that leads to your selected dream may be bumpy and difficult, but it begins with Positive self talk. I can make it. If they can do it, so can I. The secret is to learn as much about your dream as possible, find out what you need, and then be willing to set out on a course to make it happen; regardless of what others say.

As Christians we constantly feed ourselves with positive self talk. "I can do all things through Christ that strengteneth me."

MISPLACED OPPORTUNITY: Some miss the chance to realize their dreams because they failed to use the opportunity to prepare themselves. Though it may not appear important, all information you learn today may help you seize an opportunity tomorrow. There are millions today who are singing a sad song. They are saying "If only I hada" each time they see their opportunity pass them by. Today the subjects you learn in school may seem unnecessary and even boring, but learn them anyway. It is better to have it and not need it than it is to need it and not have it.

TWISTED VISIONS: Some have their dreams stolen from them. Like the Swindlers who cheated the emperor some will never achieve their dreams because they are convinced that taking a short cut can make it happen faster. Some athletes have lost dreams because they took short cuts, taking steroids to boost their natural capacities. Some professionals have chosen to steal and cheat their employers to achieve their goals and have their careers ruined because they tried to take the short cut. Some sell drugs. Some use drugs. It is the devil's nature to attempt to steal your dream. When the devil steals your dream, it is no longer a dream, but a nightmare.

Walk with God

Finally brothers and sisters there is a word of hope for those who are pursuing dreams; walk with God and he will facilitate dreams that are according to his will.

Israel was frustrated over the presence of Satan in their lives as they attempted to rebuild the walls and reinstitute to worship. In their frustration, Zachariah gave them a word from the Lord. That word was simple. Walk in my ways and I will reestablish your house keep your courts and help you to walk in places you've never dreamed.

This promise to walk in unknown places as others stand by is God's promise to believers to mystify their critics to a complete halt as they watch believers achieve God's ordained goals.

Believers are encouraged to walk in God's ways.

To walk in God's way is to walk in faith.

Through faith we can achieve the unachievable.

Through faith we can accomplish the impossible.

Through faith we can reach the unreachable.

Those who trust God and step out to pursue their dreams must do so with the full knowledge that as long as their dreams are in accord with the will of God for their lives they will succeed! It may take time! Their may be obstacles, but they will succeed!

Why are you sitting on your dream? Look at verse 8!

To achieve our dreams we must stop sitting on them and trust in the Lord!

When we trust in the Lord we don't worry about the frustrating turns that the road of life offers! We walk by faith knowing that the Lord will make a way!

Standing in the way of our dream might be a:

-Desert, but God will provide an Oasis in the wilderness!

-Hunger, but God will provide a table in the presence of our enemies!

-Unbelievable odds, but God will help us to achieve the impossible

Those who trust in God:

-Think the unthinkable; Reach for the unreachable!

-Believe he unbelievable; Hope for the imaginable

-Live for the incredible; Achieve the improbable!

Those who trust in God know that all things are possible!

Maybe that's why the song writer wrote: I will trust in the Lord, I will trust in the Lord until I die!"

I don't know about you but I've decided to trust in the Lord!

Storms may rise! Winds may blow!

I will trust in the Lord till I die!

but as you reach for your dreams don't forget to tell the story.

Tell somebody about Jesus!

Tell somebody how he died!

Tell somebody how he arose after three days and nights!

Tell somebody that he is alive in your soul today!

Clay Feet

SCRIPTURE: "Thou, O king, sawest, and behold a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee; and the form thereof was terrible. This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay." Daniel 2:31-33.

Introduction

How long did it take you to discover that someone you admired was riddled with imperfections? When you were a child you thought your parents knew everything, could handle everything, and made no mistakes. How old were you before you learned differently? When you started dating your husband or your wife how long did it take for you to discover their imperfections? In your long discourses and conversations with your friends have you discovered their areas of weakness as well as their strengths? One the most frustrating experiences in our lives is to discover that those whom we admire are not perfect. Perfection is an elusive quality. Very few of us have experienced any relationship that is completely and totally perfect. What we learn in the long run is at all of us have our strengths as well as our weaknesses. We learn very quickly that the Superman that we admire may be strong and invulnerable too many things, but even Superman has a weakness call kryptonite.

Even the strongest person discovers sooner or later that he or she has a vulnerability; an area of weakness. Often we delude ourselves into believing that we have no weaknesses that whatever faults and problems that we encounter all the results of the weaknesses of others. If we failed it was not our weakness it was the fault of someone else. If a bad decision was made we did make a bad decision, someone else is the blame. And if we acted illogically, it was only because someone else made an error. Sooner or later we will come face-to-face with the truth which is that we too have faults and shortcomings.

We make this discovery in a variety of ways. No two people come to this realization in the same way. Sometimes, it's over a period of time. Sometimes it's a single incident that strikes home the truth that we have a flaw. Usually other people will see it before we do. Sometimes our flaws are minor and they can be overcome quickly. Sometimes they are devastating in their effect. Nearly every hero in the Bible demonstrated great strength and also some level of humanity that demonstrated a flaw. Even Jesus in his humanity was so angry with the moneychangers in the temple that for a slight moment he forgot the principle of turn the other cheek and ran the moneychangers out of the temple beating them and turning over tables. If Jesus, in his humanity, not in his godliness, had a flaw it should not be a surprise then, that we too have flaws.

Consider Sister Caledonia was a proud member of the Do Right Baptist Church. The members lived in fear of her scornful eye and mean disposition whenever they broke the rules or tradition. Most folks thought Sister Caledonia was a perfect woman. She never did anything wrong. However, the children of the Church seem to notice that every Sunday she would leave out of church at least twice. At the beginning of each service and the middle of each service Sister Caledonia would say, "Don't worry and don't care, I'm just going to get some fresh air." She did this every Sunday without fail. One Sunday, the little children decided to follow and to see what the perfect member did once she was outside. They noticed that around back, behind the church that Sister Caledonia reached under a loose board and produced a square bottle kept in a brown paper bag. It had to be water, what else would Caldonia be drinking; and it was clear. She took a big swallow and then breathed in the fresh morning air, then replaced the bottle. After a little fresh air she returned to the church service waving her hands and praising the Lord. The little children noticed that the little bottle was nearly empty. So they decided to do Sister Caledonia a favor. They poured out the contents of the bottle and replaced it with fresh water from the well. When Caledonia returned for some more fresh air she was angry when she tasted the contents. She stormed back into the church service and sat down angrily. When asked the nature of a problem she said, "I do believe and I do declare that the devil done polluted all my fresh air."—Even Caldonia was not perfect.

In fact, most of the Bible heroes that we know were all flawed individuals
Eve ate the fruit
Cain killed Abel
Noah got drunk
Moses murdered a man
Samson liked his women
David had an affair
Solomon got a big head
Jonah refused to obey
Peter denied the Lord
Thomas doubted
Paul persecuted Christians

The list could go on and on. And this is the same for me and you. If each of us were to write a list of all our imperfections it would take a volume to record them and we would still need more paper.

Are you looking for the perfect husband? He hasn't been born yet. Are you looking for the perfect wife? She hasn't been born yet. Are you looking for the perfect child or perfect parent, there are no such creatures. Every person with whom we share a relationship comes with a bag of relationships that includes strengths as well as weaknesses.

As Christians, we are happy to know that the God we serve is aware of our weaknesses and chooses to love us anyway. The song writer put it so succinctly, "he looked beyond our faults and saw our needs."

Exposition

This text focuses on Daniel's interpretation of the dream of a king who dreamed he saw a great statue but fell because it had clay feet.

King Nebuchadnezzar had a dream and his heart was troubled. What made it worse was the fact that he could remember what the dream was and this troubled him ever the more. He determined to force his soothsayers and wise men to ease his troubled heart. He commanded them to tell him what he saw in his nightmare. The second command was that they give him the right interpretation of what he had seen in that dream. If they failed they and their families would be killed.

The wise men could tell or interpret the dream. However, after considerable prayer, Daniel came before the king with the answer he sought.

Nebuchadnezzar's dream involved a statue with a Head of Gold, Breast and Arms of Silver, Belly and Thighs of Brass, Legs of Iron, and Feet and Toes of Iron and Clay mixed together.

It was interpreted as being a dream that depicted all of the history of man from the time of Nebuchadnezzar (head of Gold) and the Babylonian Empire, through the rise of the Medio-Persian Empire (chest and arms of silver), then the rise of the Grecian Empire under Alexander the Great (bronze stomach and thighs), then the rise of the Roman Empire under the great Caesars (Legs of iron). Then the Roman Empire would split into the two divisions shown by the legs and the Iron. The final earthly kingdom would be represented by the feet and toes of mixed iron and potter's clay to show just that while there is strength and power in this final kingdom, there is also much weakness and impurity.

The last world kingdom will be crushed by the Rock who is Jesus Christ. The Rock will become a mountain that fills the whole earth. His kingdom will never end.

For Nebuchadnezzar the dream was devastating. It meant that with all of the power, knowledge and splendor he had been able to amass, he still had "clay feet."- a vulnerability.

Exposition

Nebuchadnezzar's statue depicted the rise of a flawed world power. On a personal level, it could also represent our own quests:

HEAD OF GOLD: The head of gold represents our tendency to depend heavily upon our intellect and learning and less upon our heart. The man whose life is ruled by a head of gold depends totally upon the logical, practical and the politically expedient. Matters of the heart play a secondary role. In the Star Trek movie series, Dr. Spock was is Vulcan who is incapable of making any decisions that are not logical. He does not respond to emotion or passions such as love, hate or fear. If it is not logical it does not compute. Likewise there are many today who test every situation against their knowledge and wisdom and leave little rule for matters of the heart. Perhaps that's why Proverbs 3:5-6 says, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not to thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths." Head of Gold. A man with a head and no heart, is a smart man but a heartless man who will do anything to accomplish an end. A woman with head without a heart is very intelligent woman who is prone to do some very stupid things.

ARMS OF SILVER: The arms of silver represent our outreach. There are many today who are involved in various forms of outreach for a variety of reasons. Outreach may include providing food for the hungry, assistance to battered families, housing for the homeless, assistance to wayward youth, or promotion of benevolent causes. Outreach is essential to kingdom building. We must reach out and touch the wounded and the lost of the world in the name of Jesus. Yet, even our outreach must come from the heart. It must be pure in its intent, not a mere photo opportunity designed to promote other goals and causes. When we help others it must come from the heart. It must be done out of love. That's what 1 Corinthians 13:3 means when it says, "And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned and have not love it profiteth me nothing."

BELLY OF BRASS: The belly and thighs of brass represent our self indulgencies. When we think of the belly we think of satisfaction, getting full; getting what we want. The brass belly people are those who are ruled, not by their heart but by their sense of self. They are carnal in nature, self seeking, party animals who live only for the next pleasing moment with no thought of its effect on others. A man who does not want to marry a woman or commit himself to her but still wants to have sex with her, could care less what happens to her afterwards. He wants to be satisfied. That's what matters most. We've seen this belly response in presidents, governors and great men and women of our times. Smart people who did many great things, but were flawed because of brass bellies. These are the things that we do because it satisfies us, even if it hurts others. Polished brass looks good. In many cases, it looks as good or better than gold. But it soon loses its luster and has to be frequently polished to maintain its luster. So it is with those with brass appetites. They find that satisfaction eludes them and although they have plenty, can never get enough!

IRON LEGS AND CLAY FEET: The legs of iron represent our determination. Many of us have determination. Determination is a quality that is important to every life. It takes a determination and will of steel to pursue a dream until it is realized. It takes a strong determination to motivate ourselves to keep going forward even when others around us are slowing their pace. However, what we are determined to do must be in line with the will of God. It is good to have an iron will. It is good to have an iron determination, but that will must be according to the purpose of God, otherwise iron will is mixed with the will of man-which is clay. Strong determination, based on something other than the will of God will not stand. Jesus said if we abide in him and his words abide in us that we can ask what we will and get it because our will and his will are one. In the Lord's prayer he said, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done." It is good to be determined, but let's make sure what we are determined to do is in line with the will of God, otherwise our iron will is mixed with clay and we fall.

Broken Man Restored

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider that Nebuchadnezzar saw the kingdom of his dream toppled by a rock that became a mountain and filled the whole earth.

For Nebuchadnezzar, the presence of this rock was a nightmare. It signaled that what he envisioned would have to give way some greater power.

In the same sense, each of us cannot not achieve what God wants on our own. Our will and our desires must be broken, reshaped and remolded into the will of God. That's the point when we say with the songwriter, "Have thine own way Lord, Have thine own way. Thou art the potter, I am the clay. Mold me and shape me after thy will. As in thy presence, yielded and still."

Nebuchadnezzar had a great kingdom, but it had clay feet that would be broken by a rock.

It would be replaced by a kingdom of believers were broken by the rock but are now standing on the rock!

What is this rock that is so strong that it can bring down the mighty but build up a mighty nation? What is this little rock that is so small that it could appear insignificant at its beginnings yet grow to cover the entire world?

This little rock superseded the empire of the Babylonians.

This little rock surpassed the empires of the Medes and Persians!

This little rock surpassed the glory that was Greece and the Grandeur that was Rome!

This little rock began in Bethlehem and continued to grow in Nazareth

This little rock grew larger has he fed thousands, healed the sick and raised the dead.

This rock is Jesus.

This rock is Jesus, yes he's the one! He's the one who died on Calvary!

He's the one who was buried in a borrowed tomb!

He's the one who arose, Early Sunday morning!

This rock is Jesus, the only one!

Be very sure! Be very sure! Your anchor holds and grips the solid rock!

SCRIPTURE: "For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." 2 Timothy 1:7

Introduction

What do you think would happen if you brought home a very bad report card? Would the family celebrate or would there be tension in the air? Homer Simpson in the cartoon, "The Simpsons" says his family is a family of underachievers. Whenever his son Bart brings home a "D" the family gives a party and celebrates. Underachieving is the Simpson family tradition. That probably would not happen in any other home. Most families would be upset with students who brought home bad grades, especially if the grades did not reflect the student's best effort.

Thinking about grades brings on nightmares. It is directly related to student stress and parent high blood pressure. Many homes are tense in the aftermath of a report card review.

Consider the boy who received his last set of grades before graduation. He was always a slow kid and sometimes he never got the point. With nine weeks left before graduation he received his grades. He had three-F's and one A. The young man looked at his grades and bowed his head. He asked to meet all of his teachers in a conference at the same time. As he paced the floor he had the look of fear on his face. "My dad can be pretty mean. I've seen him nearly rip a phone book in half when he gets angry. One day I saw him break a two by four with his bear hands; he knows Karate. It's just one more report card before graduation. I thought you should be warned. I'm not trying to scare you or anything, but my dad says, If my grades don't change, even if I'm a senior, somebody's going to get a spanking!"-He still didn't get the point.

For High School seniors there is no day that can bring emotions to a peak like roll call day. Even those who know they have done well in their studies are nervous on roll call day. They want nothing to go wrong. They want it to be official. They want to hear their name called among those who will graduate and receive the reward of their diploma.

Graduation day is exciting, but it won't be as exciting as the day when the saints of God will hear the roll called up yonder! That will be a great day when every believer will graduate from mortality to immortality. It will be the day when we will put on our robes and tell the story of how we made it over!

As Christians, we look to our graduation day with great hope. The band won't play "Pomp and Circumstance" and neither will there be a stage full of diplomas. But we'll be in the presence of the Lord and will hear him say well done. Until then, we must struggle to make the grade, counting on his grace to give whatever extra points we need to make it through. To get a spiritual passing grade we must keep our faith in tact, never fear or stray from the course and always remember that God is by our side.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he writes final instructions for his young student Timothy who was about to graduate into full manhood in the Gospel.

This text is written at the close of Paul's long and the lustrous career in the ministry. He traveled the known world three times in missionary journeys. In these journeys he established churches in every part of the known world. As far away as Greece and Asia minor. As close as Jerusalem and Antioch. During the course of his experience Paul learned to depend upon the Lord. In moments of weakness he learned that God's grace is sufficient. He had been jailed once and was falsely accused for the cause of Christ. He was now in his second imprisonment under colder and harsher terms. Now a letter is being written to his young student by the name of Timothy, giving him instructions that will help him as he graduates in his own life experience.

In his first letter to Timothy, he gave him instructions concerning his own moral character. He advised him to be an individual who was of good report, sober in his thinking, and rules well his own house. In his second letter he encourages him to remember that he comes from a faithful household. He recalls the strength and power of Eunice as he reminds his young student that much of the strength, faith, and power that he saw in Eunice he also sees in him. What he sees in Timothy is a natural gift and ability that is lying dormant waiting to be tapped. He encourages him to stir up the gift. This phrase "stir up the gift" is meant to encourage Timothy to use the talents that he has been given to its maximum potential.

In verse seven which is the focus of this text, he encourages Timothy to go forth with boldness without a spirit of fear. His reminder to him is that God has not given us a spirit of the but a spirit of power and of love and of accomplishment. This was an important message to Timothy because he was a young man who would soon be standing on his own. He was a young man who was comfortable standing in the shadows of Paul. He was a young man who was comfortable as long as he was sheltered and secured under the wing of the master teacher. Paul saw himself decreasing and he saw young Timothy increasing. In short, Timothy was about to graduate and this was his baccalaureate sermon.

Paul's message was very simple, go forth but don't go forth with timidity. Go forth, but don't go forth afraid. Go forth, but don't go forth expecting to do anything except succeed.

Three F's

Paul's message to Timothy seemed to contain three F's. These three principles would be a guiding Light to the young graduate and show him the way as he stepped into the world as a man in his own right.

FACE YOUR FEARS: If you are to succeed in life you must learn to face your fears. Everyone has fears. Whether or not you have fears is not question. Whether your fears control you is the question. A brave man is not one who does not have fear, but one who can do the right thing in the face of fear. Young graduates are in the same situation as young Timothy of this text. You have always been in the company of a great teacher whether it is at home or at school. Now you are graduating to another level. There will be fears. It is natural, but don't let your fears control you. A recent study at a prominent university made a startling discovery about how fear controls our actions. In a class, 10 students were selected to participate. Nine knew they were participants, the other did not. Two lines were drawn on a black board, one shorter than the other. Each student was told to identify the shortest line. One by one, each of the nine students did as they were instructed. They picked the short line and said it was the longest. The 10th person knew they had picked the wrong line but since they all seemed very confident in their answer, he also picked the short line as the longest. He was afraid to be different from the rest. Henry David Thoreau challenged a generation of young minds when he told the world that he "marched to the beat of a different drummer." He did not want to do things just because everyone else did it; but listened to a cadence set by a distant conductor. It meant he had to be courageous enough to face his fears and do the right thing.

This may mean refusing to participate in activities that clearly violate your principles.

This may mean supporting that which your mind tells you is best, even if the crowd goes the opposite way.

This may mean reaching inside yourself for an inner strength to face the enemies of life, even though you are afraid.

God has not given you a spirit of fear, but of power and strength.

Prepare, think it through, seek spiritual guidance, then stick to your guns, come what may!

FORGET YOUR FAILURES: The second principle we should remember is to forget your failures. During your school years there have been many times that you did not succeed. You may not have won election to a student post or a spot on a coveted team. You may have failed or performed poorly on a test or just plain messed up in other ways. If you are going to succeed, expect to fail sometimes, get over it and keep going. Thomas Edison tried dozens of prototypes for the light bulb before he got the right one. The Wright Brothers crashed many times before they finally made their air plane fly. Babe Ruth and Hank Aaron struck out more times than they made hits but they became Home run champions because they kept coming back to the plate. Philippians 3:13 says, "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Forgeting failures doesn't mean completely. We should forget the pain, frustration, and the overwhelming spirit of defeat we feel when we fail. After we have done that we should analyze every failure to learn why we failed and devise ourselves a plan of action. Why didn't I do well in school? Is it because I'm dumb? Probably not! Generally the reason lies somewhere between our study habits, home environment and learning atmosphere. All three of those are variables that can be changed. If I try again, changing the variables my result may be different.

Figure out why you failed! Analyze and capitalize! Synthesize then realize!

The Victory of a failure is not that it knocked you down; it's knocking you down so hard that you never get up and try again. That's when failure gets a victory.

There will no doubt be times ahead in which you will fail. When it comes, get up and try again. Keep trying!

When you encounter failure remember the words of Winston Churchill during a commencement address during the middle of World War II. Of all the speeches he gave to graduate this speech is remembered over 60 years later. Mr. Churchill rose to the podium, looked at the graduates and said, "Never give up." He waited about 30 seconds then sat down.

Never Give up!

FIX YOUR FOCUS: One of the hardest things for young graduates to do is stay focused. For years your parents have kept you in focus. They have reminded you to study; stopped you from over obligating yourselves and even selected your friends. They have tried to help you keep your feet on the ground by stirring you away from the fast lane, into a more controlled path. Your parents have stirred you away from activities and associates that detract from your goals. They have kept you in focus. Many who have gone before you quickly lost their focus as soon as they left home. The temptations and freedoms of young adult life took them off the straight and narrow path down a winding road of parties, buddies and a thousand other distractions. It became hard for them to focus. Once out of focus they were unable to see straight. Just as a camera can momentarily focus on a shiny object we wear and jump out of focus, so can a human life. We must keep our eyes on the prize. Paul asked, "Who shall separate me from the love of God?" Then he concluded that nothing would pull him away from his intended goal that was to demonstrate the love of God.

One way to stay focused is to worship regularly. If you get away from regular worship and bible study the very first thing that happens is you get out of focus. When you are out of focus sex, making money, partying or some other activity catches your eye. The next thing you know, you are completely out of focus.

There are some times in your life when you need to be in church the most. You need to be in church between 1 and 17 because during this period you learn the rudiments of life. You need to be in church between 17 and 25 because this is the time when you are tempted to get out of focus the most. You need to be in church from 25 to 50 because these are the difficult years of temptation, frustration as well as opportunity. You need to be in church between 50 and 100 because these are the years when you need to be anchored in your faith in an unchanging God. Anytime before age 1 and after 100 you can probably afford to miss a week or two of worship and bible study.

Fix your focus and you will never stray.

Always Acknowledge Him

Finally, brothers and sisters, I have give you three F's: Face your fears, Forget your Failures and Fix Your Focus; but there is one final letter, it is "A." In all thy ways "Acknowledge Him" and he will direct your path.

Acknowledging God means more than just saying Lord help me get my diploma. It means in everything you do, ask whether what you do is true to the will of God. If you submit yourself to the will of God, it does not matter what anyone else says or thinks, he will direct your path.

In all thy ways, that means college and technical school!

In all thy ways, that means climbing the career ladder and pursuing a family!

In all thy ways, acknowledge him and he shall direct your path.

Follow your faith, and you can do the impossible!

Follow your faith, and you can reach the unreachable!

ollow your faith, and you can achieve the impossible dream!

That faith has been secured for you by a God who loves you. I know its true because John 3:16 says, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

That faith has been assured to you by a savior who said in John 15:13, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

That faith has been declared to you by a savior who promised us that no weapon formed against you shall prosper as long as you stay in the will of God.

That faith has been proven to you on an old rugged cross on Calvary's Hill!

It was proven with nail scarred hands, a wounded side and a bowed down head!

It was proven Early Sunday morning when he arose from the grave!

Face your fears!

Forget your failures!

Fix your Focus!

In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he will direct your path!

My Life Guard

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

June 13, 2004

SCRIPTURE*: "Behold he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep. The Lord is they keeper: The Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy soul." Psalm 121-4-7.*

Introduction

How safe do you feel if you swim in a pool without a life guard? Lifeguards are important people. As the summer approaches many will cool them selves as they swim in pools, ponds, bayous and rivers. Generally, it's a good idea to have a life guard anytime we are swimming in enough water to drown ourselves. In the rural South there are many places that are popular for swimmers, but they are also dangerous. Rivers claim the lives of hundreds each year as persons are caught in currents and dragged away. Bayous, ponds and even backyard pools have claimed their victims as well. It's obvious that those who swim or recreate near or in open water need a life guard.

As a rule, lifeguards are trained in spotting people who are in trouble, dashing to their rescue and reviving them if they have taken in too much water. There was a recent television series called "Baywatch" which focused on the lives of lifeguards on the beaches of California. The television show gave us a glimpse of what life guards do. It was also popular because it showed well built men and gorgeous women running around in swimming suits all day. The essence of Baywatch was that it underscored the importance of lifeguards. They are important people.

Sometimes we live our lives like careless swimmers or those who recklessly play near the water. We can easily get in over our heads, get caught in a current and find ourselves going down for the last time. That's when it's good to know that we have a life guard. Our life guard does not sit on a high chair in the sun or run around in a bathing suit. God is our life guard. He watches over us every day in every way, even when we are not in water over our heads.

As Christians, we are reminded that God is always by our side. He watches and protects us. He doesn't take a break or go to sleep. He is on the job 24 hours a day, seven days a week. He is truly "My Life Guard."

Exposition

This text focuses on David as he explains the nature of the believer's security in God. The believers are urged to remember the source of their protection and security is in God himself. For Israel, the mountains and hills of Palestine afforded them protection against enemies and a certain sense of security. The Psalmist, pointing to the hills, was not implying that the assurance of every believer is in the literal mountains and hills around them, but in the power of the God who provides the protective environment in which they are able to sleep secure each night.

The God we serve protects us and keeps us continually. The first line of reference is the hills themselves, but beyond that, it is God's hand, moving through the hills that brings our greatest assurances. The hills are symbolic. They represent the way God provides help. They are not the help themselves.

The 121st Psalm presents God as the perpetual protector of the believer. This psalm presents the believers journey as one that is filled with perilous climbs through rocky mountains and hills. The idea that God will not suffer about what to be moved represents the truth that God will not allow us to slip outside of that which he wills. That is to say that he protects us from any slips, falls or attacks from enemies that are not according to his will. No enemy can approach us, or defeat us, unless for some reason it is God's will.

Verse 4 presents us with a reassuring promise that the God who protects us is always on the job. "He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep" is the phrase that is used to describe how God maintains a constant vigil around us, watching us, protecting us, encouraging us, building us, and saving us from dangers seen an unseen. We may sleep but God never takes a break nods or takes his eyes off of us.

The 121st psalm presents God as the believer's body guard, life guard, night watchman and security system. It is through the knowledge that God is always there watching over us that we journey through life confident that we are never alone.

Life Guard Watches Over Us

There are many similarities between the nature of a life guard and the protective nature of God. The similarities help us to understand how about protects us get the same time explains how even with these protection we seem to find ourselves in dangerous situations.

THE LIFEGUARD SITS HIGH: As a general rule the lifeguard sits high enough to see every aspect of the domain of a swimmer. Because he sits high he can see East and West North and South and can observe many swimmers at the same time. The same is true with God. From his throne in heaven God is able to observe all of his creation. He sees everything we do. From his vantage point there is no escape or hiding place. David referred to the hills indicating that God sat high and looked low with a penetrating vision that recorded all activity of the creatures below. Thus, we are reminded that God always sees us. Whether we are driving a car or sitting at home.

Whether we are on the battlefield or relaxing on fishing pond God always sees us. We are never outside of his view.

THE LIFEGUARD CAN SPOT TROUBLE: The lifeguard knows how to spot trouble. At a swimming pool or recreation area the lifeguard will often blow a whistle to warn swimmers who are engaged in dangerous activity. Like playful children in a swimming pool we are not aware at times that what seems to be fun can actually be dangerous. The lifeguard warns us to walk and not run. He warns us not to dive into shallow water or engage in dangerous horseplay such as holding someone underneath the water. His whistle is a warning to us. Sometimes we heed the warning and at other times we ignore what the lifeguard tells us to do. Because the lifeguard sees trouble in our actions, sometimes he puts us out of the pool. God operates the same way in the lives of believers. He often observes the dangerous activity in which we get ourselves involved. He watches as we dive into shallow waters. He sees some activities that we get ourselves involved in which endanger ourselves and our families. He warns us in many ways. Sometimes he warns us in our conscience. Most often he warns us through the preached word. He often sends us signs and signals; but often we ignore them. Sometimes, for our own good, He has to move us out of one arena of life to another. Sometimes, for our own good, he has to remove us from certain situations for time until we learn to follow the rules. That's one reason we have a lifeguard. Not only does he sit high but he also is able to warn us when we are going astray.

THE LIFEGUARD KNOWS WHAT TO DO: The lifeguard knows exactly what to do if we get in trouble. By virtue of his training and experience the lifeguard knows how to throw us a lifeline, reach for us with a pole, or dive in and bring us to the shore. Even the best swimmer can get in trouble. Leg cramps, Charlie horses, and fatigue can cause even good swimmers to sink. The lifeguard knows what to do when a swimmer goes down. He is trained in rescue techniques and is strong enough if necessary to make a leaping dive and to bring in a drowning swimmer. So it is in life. Even the strongest Christian reaches points in life where fatigue, and cramping experiences cause them to go down. These are those moments when we experience of temporary losses of faith, when we question God, or doubt his abilities. These are those moments when we are tempted to stray from the godly path. In such moments the lifeguard knows what to do. Sometimes all that is necessary is for him to tug at our conscience. At other times he has to pull us out of some situations by slamming doors in our faces or causes things to happen to make us change course. Then there are times when the full grace of God has to dive in and gets us when we are in deep and over our heads. He knows what to do!

When there is no life guard

The believer moves daily with the knowledge there is a lifeguard on duty. The person who is outside of the faith, swims even when he sees the sign "No lifeguard on duty, swim at your own risk." It's dangerous to swim without a lifeguard. It means no one is watching. No one who has a trained eye is on duty. No one who will warn us if we are going to far is around. No one who can pull us out if we go under is available. When we swim in these circumstances, we swim at our own risk.

There are millions today who are trying to live their lives with no spiritual lifeguard on duty. They are living at their own risk!

We don't like it when the lifeguard blows the whistle and tells us to stop one activity or another, but we know it keeps us safe!

We feel comfortable knowing that if something goes wrong that the lifeguard can pull us to safety!

However, those who swim where there are no life guards do so at the risk of losing their lives or injuring themselves. Spiritually, when we operate without our lifeguard, we run the risk of falling into sin and away from the favor of God.

Without a lifeguard we can get involved in a thousand activities that can hurt us. Without a lifeguard we can plunge ourselves into a thousand currents that can pull away from safety.

Without a lifeguard we risk losing heaven!

Life Guards No How to Save Us

Finally, brothers and sisters we must remember that the Lifeguard knows how to save us when we appear to be lost!

One reason we feel safe when there is a life guard on duty is because we know he knows how to save us.

Even when we have taken in too much water and appear to be breathless, the life guard knows how to revive us.

No matter who we are, there are times when we find ourselves sinking in the sea of life.

Burdened by the cares of life there are many who have given up hope!

Weighted by the frustrations of life there are many who retreated from the faith!

Consumed by the issues of life there are many who have absorbed so much failure, so much misunderstanding, so much hardship that they are sinking to bottom of the depths.

Overcome by the troubles of the world there are many who are overwhelmed by the concerns of everyday life!

No wonder the songwriter declared, "Throw out the life line! Throw out the life line, Someone is drifting away! Throw out the life line, Someone is sinking today!"

I don't know about you but I'm glad to know that I have a life guard; for like the songwriter, "I was sinking deep in sin, sinking to rise to rise no more, but the master of the sea, heard my despairing cry. From the waters lifted me, now safe am I."

But even the life guard has limitations. These limitations are placed on him by those whom he is charged to save.

It doesn't do any good to have a life guard if we ignore his warnings!

It doesn't do any good to have a life guard if he tells us to stopping running around and we keep on running!

It doesn't do any good to have a life guard if he tells us not to dive in shallow water or try to swim in water over our heads and we do it anyway!

It doesn't do any good to have a life guard if he tries to throw us a lifeline but we won't grab it or he dives in to save us but we won't let him bring us in!
I know a life guard who sits high and looks low!
I know a life guard who never slumbers or sleeps!
I know a life guard who is trained in the soul saving business!
He's not on Bay Watch but he is on faith watch!
He's watching when I get up in the morning!
He's watching when I go to sleep at night!
His name is Jesus, the Alpha and the Omega!
He is the beginning and the end!
He died out on Calvary, but Early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

Rise and Shine

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 10, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the LORD is risen upon thee. For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: but the LORD shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee. And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising." Isaiah 60:1-5.

Introduction

What happens when you get up on the wrong side of the bed? Getting up on the wrong side of the bed is a colloquialism that refers to a person who begins his or her day with a bad attitude. Generally, when we begin a day grumpy, complaining or disinterested, someone will comment, "He got up on the wrong side of the bed today." It has nothing to do with the side of the bed, but it has a whole lot to do with the attitude with which we begin each day.

There is a correlation between the way we begin a day and the way the day progresses. If we begin the day with a frown, it seems that the day frowns on us. If we begin the day with a growl, it seems that the day growls and barks at us. If we begin the day with a smile and a spirit of rejoicing then the whole day, regardless to what happens seems to smile back at us.

When we begin the day without God's presence, either side of the bed is the wrong side. Nothing is right, everyone is wrong, the world is dark and pessimism is the order of the day.

The psalmist tells us how to rise each day. Psalm 118:24 puts it this way, "This is the day the Lord has made, we will rejoice and be glad in it." That's how to rise, no matter what side you arise from. If God gives us another day, it's going to be a good day, so go forth and rejoice and enjoy it to its fullest.

No matter what side of the bed you rise from, people will notice. If you are grumpy, they will notice. If you are cheerful and exuberant, they will notice that too! When they ask why, it gives us the opportunity to answer and tell of the goodness of the Lord.

The spirit that begins the day, rules the day. Many teachers are frustrated when they see students angry at school. Many soon learn that they left home that morning amidst arguments and confusion. Sometimes a boss who has had an especially difficulty time at home comes to work bring his bad day with him. In the same sense, the person who leaves home with a positive spirit, powered by the Holy Ghost is beaming with enthusiasm as he walks in the door.

The same is true about failures, troubles and setbacks. Since we all face these difficult moments, how we handle them depends upon our attitude. If we face them alone, we see every day as a bad, dark, miserable day filled with more trouble, more bad news, bill collectors, difficulties and failures that seem to come one after the other. When we feel this way, every side of the bed is the wrong side.

But when we put our trust in the Lord, we are able to rise each day and know that though difficulties may come, the Glory of the Lord will shine on each day that we put our trust in him. Psalm 31:1 says, "In thee oh Lord, do I put my trust" That trust gives us the confidence to rise each day confident that God will work it out.

As Christians, we trust God everyday to do the Clint Eastwood thing for us, "Make my day." He does it every time!

Exposition

The Jews were in exile for many years. Isaiah prophesied of their triumphant resurrection after their long period of exile. He used the term "Arise" which means to get up from the dust. Even more, the chapter is prophetic. It looks far beyond their present moment and sees the time when the church of God will rise out of the exile, subjugation and domination of Israel to be a recognized presence among men.

Shine, in this context means "to be enlightened to enlighten." The day of their imminent return to better times was approaching. Yet in their rising they are told to "Shine" not in the context of showing off but in a way that enlightens others to the glory of the Lord.

Darkness covers the earth, thick (gross) darkness upon the people. Those outside of the knowledge of God often see the darkness of current conditions and even get pessimistic about people in general, seeing only their dark side. It is described as a "thick" darkness, implying that no light was shining anywhere. But the glory of the Lord hovers over the people of God in that they continuously see hope even in difficult times because the glory of the Lord shines upon them.

The people of the world, represented by the term "nations" will take note of the power and spirit of believers and will be drawn to God as they witness what he does for his people.

Arise

Today believers must hear the words of this text in the context of their own lives.

DARKNESS: Darkness for Israel was their exile, for individuals it may mean many things. Darkness represent times when we can't see our way or stumble along in confusion. Whole nations can be plunged into darkness as evidenced by the declining world situation around us. Individuals reach dark periods too. It is dark when it is hard to see and there is pitch black darkness when we can't see anything. Those who have lived in the rural have experienced pitch black nights. With no street lights or other helps, a walk down a country road on a moonless night is pitch black. Sometimes individuals reach a point when life appears "Pitch black" or darkness covers us with a surreal "thickness" that does not show any sign of light.. It's pitch black when all hope is lost. It's pitch black when you decide to give up trying. It's pitch black when you throw in the towel. It's pitch black when you can't see a light at the end of the tunnel. Many marriages are pitch black. Many financial situations have reached pitch black levels. What is our response? Believers have learned that though they often walk through dark periods, it is never pitch black as long as God is on the thrown. Like Motel 6, in dark times, he leaves a light on for us, so we can see our way! An old song by the Mighty Clouds of Joy says, "There's a bright side somewhere!"

ARISE: For Israel the command to arise" was a national call to prepare to move. It has the same meaning for individual believers. Arise means, get up from where you are. Life often knocks us down, but we are encouraged to arise. A great scene from the Movie "Rocky" showed Rocky on the canvass and his corner man shouting "Get up!" With everything hurting and though badly bruised Rocky stands and says "I ain't going down no more." Succeeding in life does not mean that you won't be knocked down, but real success comes when you know how to rebound after being knocked down. The command to rise is personal. It means do not wallow in your failure and drown yourself in anguish and self pity. Get up from where you are! To arise is to gather new strength, just as Samson who lost his strength and his sight, found new strength to do a final great work for the Lord. To arise is to see a new perspective, just as Saul wallowing in the dust of despair on the Damascus Road, arose with a new look on life. As believers, we too can receive a new perspective when we see every situation in light of God's word.

SHINE: Believers must shine. When the Bible encourages us to shine, it does not mean we are to showcase, gloat or brag. We are to shine in the context of the three dimensions of its meaning. To shine is to emit light. Our light is the Lord. The psalmist says, "The Lord is my light and my salvation. Our confidence in God should radiate from us. It should blossom, bloom and envelope us. Not only emit light but shine also means to reflect light. We are reflectors in the sense that we have no real light of our own, we only reflect the joy that we receive from the Lord. Just as the moon has no real light but only reflects light from the sun, we too should reflect the never yielding light of the Lord every day. To shine also means to be "apparent." That means that the source of our joy, strength and salvation should be obvious. God is our strength and light in darkness and our strong tower. Our speech, actions and daily activities should shine. We are not asked to sparkle or bling, bling, we are asked to shine! If we sparkle then people would look at us and marvel at our accomplishments. If we bling bling, then people will praise our craftiness as the reason for our success. However, we are asked to "rise and shine and give God the glory!!"

His Glory is Over You!

Finally, brothers and sisters we must consider what happens when we rise; the world takes notice and the glory of the Lord is seen.

Isaiah makes it clear that after a believer overcomes darkness, rises and shines, that the glory of the Lord is seen by both non-believers and the kings of the earth.

The believer who begins each day trusting in the Lord, is covered by the glory of the Lord! It surrounds us on ever side. The glory of the Lord calls special attention to his miracle working power and causes the skeptics to consider the power of our God.

The believer who rises to face each day with a positive attitude is illuminated by the glory of the Lord. This light from heaven provides a path through the darkest night and a road protection against any malady or ill will that comes against us outside of the will of God.

We face each day with a positive attitude, even if we face dangers, because God is still on the throne!

We face each day with an upbeat spirit, because we God is still in control!

We face each day with a feeling of confidence, because we know that no matter what happens today God is our protector, shield and strength.

Consider the old lady who was trapped in a winter storm in the black of night. As the snow began to build higher, the townspeople began to worry when she was reported missing. The old lady was too weak to move the snow that was covering her. With the little strength that she had remaining she said, "Lord be a fence all around me." The snow covered her completely in the night. However, the townspeople searched through the night. Just before daybreak a townsman spotted yelled to the group that he found the old lady. After they dug her from the snow and warmed her by a fire, the rescuer said, "We never would have found you if you had not thought to hang your flashlight over where you laid." The old woman said, she never hung a flashlight. "But it had to be," said the volunteer "we saw the light shining just over where we found you." The old lady said, "that was no flashlight, that was the glory of the Lord, he is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path."

The glory of the lord is a beacon light in the middle of our nights!

The glory of the Lord shows us the way when we are lost!

The glory of the Lord brightens our midnights!

The glory of the Lord builds a fence of protection around us. I heard David declare,

"He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep."

Isaiah said when God blesses you, "His glory shall be seen upon you!"

In the morning when we rise, if you say thank you Lord for a good night sleep, his glory shall be seen upon you!

In the morning when we step forth in faith, his glory shall be seen upon you!

In the morning when we greet the world with a smile, his glory shall be seen upon you!

No wonder the song writer declared, "I woke up this morning with my mind, staid on Jesus. I'm walking and talking with my mind, staid on Jesus!"

If you are down, arise and shine and give God the glory!

If you have failed, arise and shine and give God the glory!

If you are down in the dumps, arise and shine, and give God the glory!
Glory!
Glory to his name!
Glorify God who sent his only begotten son!
Glorify him who died out on Calvary!
Glory to him who was buried in a borrowed tomb!
But early Sunday morning, after three days nights, I heard a voice from heaven say, “Arise and Shine!”
Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave, with all power in his hands!

The Way It Used To Be

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

July 18, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "Thus says the LORD, `I will return to Zion and will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem. Then Jerusalem will be called the City of Truth, and the mountain of the LORD of hosts will be called the Holy Mountain.' "Thus says the LORD of hosts, `Old men and old women will again sit in the streets of Jerusalem, each man with his staff in his hand because of age. `And the streets of the city will be filled with boys and girls playing in its streets.' "Thus says the LORD of hosts, `If it is too difficult in the sight of the remnant of this people in those days, will it also be too difficult in My sight?' declares the LORD of hosts. "Thus says the LORD of hosts, `Behold, I am going to save My people from the land of the east and from the land of the west; and I will bring them back and they will live in the midst of Jerusalem; and they shall be My people, and I will be their God in truth and righteousness.' Zechariah 8:3-8

Introduction

Do you believe there will never be a time when things will return to the way the used to be? There was once a time when people felt safe, God was supreme, and life was much simpler than it is today. Do you believe such a community atmosphere can exist once again? God says, it's not impossible, in fact, the day is coming when things will be the way the used to be.

Those who have been away from home for a while, often get homesick. They yearn for the place of their past. Those who have never left, look with a nostalgic eye to their past and wonder if it's ever possible to go back to the way we were.

There are many who can remember a quieter more friendlier time. They remember being able to sleep with only the hook on their screen doors latched. They remember times when neighbors were friendly, children were respectful and there was a general feeling of love. They remember a time when churches were filled, the spirit was high and things were at peace. Many look for those times again, only to learn that they are distant memories.

Time marches onward and the past marks time, keeping pace with a steady walk rather than a brisk trot.

Those who have known a time of peace and tranquility yearn for its return. It is invaluable to them. A wise old gentleman retired and purchased a modest home near a junior high school. He spent the first few weeks of his retirement in peace and contentment. Then a new school year began. The very next afternoon three young boys, full of youthful, after-school enthusiasm, came down his street, beating merrily on every trash can they encountered. The crashing percussion continued day after day, until finally the wise old man decided it was time to take some action.

The next afternoon, he walked out to meet the young percussionists as they banged their way down the street. Stopping them, he said, "You kids are a lot of fun. I like to see you express your exuberance like that. In fact, I use to do the same thing when I was your age. Will you do me a favor? I'll give you each a dollar if you'll promise to come around every day and do your thing." he kids were elated and continued to do a bang-up job on the trashcans.

After a few days, the old-timer greeted the kids again, but this time he had a sad smile on his face. "This recession's really putting a big dent in my income," he told them. "From now on, I'll only be able to pay you 50 cents to beat on the cans."

The noisemakers were obviously displeased, but they did accept his offer and continued their afternoon ruckus. A few days later, the wily retiree approached them again as they drummed their way down the street.

"Look," he said, "I haven't received my Social Security check yet, so I'm not going to be able to give you more than 25 cents. Will that be okay?"

"A lousy quarter?" the drum leader exclaimed. "If you think we're going to waste our time, beating these cans around for a quarter, you're nuts! No way, mister. If you want somebody beat on those cans for you, you do it yourself!!"
And the old man enjoyed peace and serenity for the rest of his days.

Even though many people have become prisoners in their own homes, locked behind dead bolts and padlocks, bars and security systems, the good news is that God is still on the throne. "He that keepeth Israel neither slumbers nor sleeps." He has promised to restore the joy of our salvation in his own due time.

As Christians, we live in hope that better times can be restored on this earth, with the full knowledge that the God we serve is able to preserve the good of today, while restoring the peace and tranquility of a simpler time.

Exposition

This text focuses upon Zechariah's prophecy that God will re-establish his kingdom on earth.

The text takes place at a point in time after Israel returned to Jerusalem from many years of exile. Although they were back in Jerusalem rebuilding the temple and the city, they were not completely free. Old times had not been restored. They were still vassals of Babylon, still subject to the Gentile nations around them, without much hope for the future. It was a discouraging, depressing and difficult time for the people. Zechariah makes this prophecy in this midst of this circumstance.

The prophecy begins by noting that God "jealously" guards his people and despite their exile he still considers them his people and will not allow evil forces to destroy them completely.

It will be a kingdom that will be like no other, filled with prosperity and peace. This is a messianic prophecy, which looks beyond the present into something that is coming in the future. It is a sign of hope for believers.

God spoke of Jerusalem in the positive. Whereas in the past he spoke of Jerusalem as a harlot that cheated on him with idol gods, he projects that Israel once returned from exile would no longer be considered a harlot but the "City of faith." It was a hard lesson, but the words of the prophecy have been realized. Not once, after Israel returned from exile did it ever worship idol Gods again. It took separation from home and total destruction of everything they held sacred to make them once again a "City of faith."

Verse four notes the social climate that God would restore. It would be an atmosphere of peace and serenity that would contribute to peaceful golden years and happy times.

Verse five makes reference to boys and girls playing happily in the street without worry or fear. An abundance of children is seen as a great sign for the future. If a community has no children its existence is threatened. When they left Israel in exile, death was everywhere. Men, women and children were killed. The future was dark. However, a brighter day is envisioned here. It is a day when children will be playing happily in the street.

Verses six and seven notes how Israel upon returning to Jerusalem and seeing the walls down and destruction everywhere doubted God's promise. It appeared an impossible task. All that they had known was gone. It appeared beyond repair. God told Israel that the promises he makes may seem impossible in light of what they saw, but he warned them to never doubt his power to make good on his word to them. These great truths of the omnipotence of God are repeated throughout scripture. Believers in every generation are reminded never to doubt what God can do.

Although it appeared impossible, from the east to the west, God promised to regather and restore his people to a splendor and grandeur they once knew.

Hope for Difficult Times

This text makes two important points for this generation.

TOUGH TIMES DON'T LAST: Israel endured a multitude of setbacks during its period of exile. It was carried a long ways from home and stripped of its association with all things that were important. The days of exile were tough times. They were depressing times, yet a word came from God that Tough times won't last always; things would return to the way they used to be and better. Modern believers often find ourselves in the same predicament as Israel, facing tough times and enduring difficult moments. It is very easy to consider the condition of our world and become pessimistic. African-Americans experience similarities with the children of Israel in their exile. Like Israel, we have seen the life we once knew taken from us. We see families that were once strong that are now weak. We see men whowere once at the forefront now wittingly taking a backseat.

We see the destruction of our children, often by influences outside of our control, but often by situations we create. We see children now who dress, act and talk like adults. We see a declining quest for excellence in Education and increasing number of about children targeted for social and economic failure. Comedian Bill Cosby has created a storm of protest around the country recently because he spoke out loud what many people are thinking. He said we are producing a generation of children who are not ready to integrate themselves into the mainstream. Their failure to learn to speak English language correctly, know how to dress correctly, and to acquire necessary Education and skills will doom them to a life of ghetto mediocrity. The Black politicians became angry with Mr. Cosby but millions of parents nodded their heads in agreement. We see moral values that we once held dear degenerating before our eyes. When we see all of this we come to the inevitable conclusion that these are hard times.

In the midst of all this, God sends a word to modern day believers just as he said a word to Israel through the prophet Zechariah. The walls can be rebuilt. The life you knew can be restored. The pride you once had can be rejuvenated. The drive you once demonstrated can once again be seen. Dr. Robert Schuller has a book entitled, "Tough times never last, tough people do." It is a basic truth that every life will experience tough times. It is also a basic truth that tough times don't last always. Those who have been toughened own the tanning racks of time have learned that with God's help they can endure the most difficult time. That's what the old timers meant when they sing the song, "I'm so glad that trouble don't last always."

GOD CAN DO THE IMPOSSIBLE: When God told the Children of Israel that he intended to reverse the difficult times in which they were living, there were many who thought that was impossible. When he said the times would be wonderful again, peace and safety would be returned to the point that old men would sit on their porches and enjoy the day and children would safely play in the neighborhood, many thought that was too marvelous. God asked them the same question that he asks us to day, "Just because it is too marvelous for your imagination, does that mean it is too hard for God?" God's answer to them is the same answer he has for us, don't think that it can't be done because you can't visualize it, believe that it can be done if God wants it done. Nothing is too hard for God. That's the lesson Sara learned when she was informed that although she was approaching 100 years of age she would have a child. She laughed at the prospect. Then God asked, "Is there anything too hard for God?"

Many who have left home and returned are appalled at what they see. All around them they see boarded up buildings, decay, and neglect, and they wonder to themselves whether they will ever know the joy of the time of their youth. They can, with God's help. This was the hope that God restored to Israel and it is the same hope he brings today, that from East to West, he will bring things together again, but we must roll up our sleeves and prepare to make it happen and receive it when it comes.

Better than it used to be

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that when God puts it back together, it will be better than it used to be!

Israel hoped to see the same walls rebuilt. It could not envision anything better than the sacred walls of Zion.

Israel hoped to see the same streets, synagogues and rituals restored, it could not imagine anything better than coming into the city for the feasts and enjoying the excitement of Passover and other great celebrations.

Israel's hope only extended to the restoration of what once was.

However, God planned to go much further than simply returning them to the old days, because even the old days were not without their own unique problems and difficulties.

God promised to gather the people from the East to the West and be in their midst. He was not talking about rejuvenating the Old Jerusalem, he was talking about bringing them into a new Jerusalem, that would be better than it used to be!

How can anything be better than the way it used to be? We can't imagine it, but "eye hath not seen" nor can we imagine the good things that God has in store for those who love him!

The way it used to be, folks had clothes that they wore to work during the week, then they had their Sunday clothes. Everybody had Sunday clothes and Sunday Shoes. God's got something better than the way it used to be, because in the new Jerusalem, everyday will be Sunday. It will always be howdy and never good-bye!

The way it used to be, whenever folks got sick, big mama always had a home remedy, Sassafras was the laxative, hot totties when you had a cold. But God has something better than it used to be, because over yonder, in the New Jerusalem, God's going to plant a tree that will bear 12 manner of fruit, whose leaves will be good for the healing of the nation!

The way it used to be, children were told to come in before it gets dark, because it gets dangerous when it gets dark. God's got something better than it used to be, in the new Jerusalem it will never get dark, because the light of the Lord will shine everywhere!

The way it used to be, when someone had a problem friends would gather around them and wipe their tears away. But God's got something better than the way it used to be, because in the new Jerusalem, God shall wipe their tears away!

By and By when the morning comes, we'll see a day that will be better than it used to be!

By and By when the morning comes, we'll enjoy a life eternal, that will be better than it used to be!

By and by when the morning comes, no matter how good it was, we'll enjoy a life that will be better than it used to be!

By and By when the morning comes, when the saints of God are gathering home. We'll tell the story of how we've overcome!

We'll tell the story!

We'll tell the world about Jesus..how he died on Calvary!

And Early Sunday morning, arose from the Grave!

By and By, it will be better than it used to be!

SCRIPTURE: O God, thou hast taught me from my youth: and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works. Psalm 71:17

Introduction

When you were a child, what were you taught about God? Today, there are millions of adults who believe in God. Their first notion of who God is and what is like came from what they heard said at home about God. Those who were fortunate to live in God fearing homes, knew plenty about God even when they were little children. Those who were brought to Sunday School, learned bible scriptures and participated in discussions with their peers, learned much about God. It was not unusual to hear a six or 10 year old able to discuss the attributes of God in an intelligent way, despite their youth. It was a way of saying, "We're young, but we know."

There are many ways that children learn truths about life. Most of those ways do not involve any special classes, expenditures or special considerations. Many learn truths listening to their parents telling them truths and interpreting events in their lives in such a way that they grow in understanding, despite their age.

Parents teach important values to children in many ways. We learn these values so early in life that we literally "know" them before we go to school for the first day.

Tony Brown in his book, "What Mama Taught Me" refers to seven core values that he was taught as a child by his mother. Brown said he was taught:

a) The value of being yourself
b) The value of understanding your purpose
c) The value of being of one race, the human race
d) The value of understanding history
e) The value of being true to yourself
f) The value of living joyfully
g) The value of keeping the faith

These were values that were taught in Brown's home and most other homes in the God fearing African-American community. We were young, but we "knew" these principles like the back of our hands.

When parents do what they should, children learn about God. They know who he is, what he does, what he expects and what to expect of him. They may be little but they know.

As Christians, we begin to know the Lord when we are young. As we mature we know him increasingly better. Even today, the youth of Christian homes, have one thing in common with other believing youth around the world, and that is they "may be little but they know."

Exposition

David prayed that God would stay with him in his senior years as he did in his youth.

In his youth he was taught by his parents what he should know about God. It was a prerequisite of Jewish households that fathers teach sons about God. David, coming from a God fearing home was taught early what it means to worship and serve God. What David learned helped him immensely through the trials of his young adult life, his ascension to the throne as King of Israel and gave him strength in his old age.

This text shows David in his old age, still remembering what he was taught in his youth about his security with God and the power of God to hold and protect him.

All believers experience the same cycle. We learn about God in our youth. The principles that we learn stay with us, all through our lives.

Taught the fear of God

One of the first truths that children are taught about God is that we we should fear and respect God.

Many can remember grandparents who required children to sit still when it rained or stormed. They would point out the window and acknowledge God's work. In the spring they would point to the flowers and the green grass and associate it with God.

One strange teaching always bothered some; that was the saying that whenever it rained that "God was doing his work." Many children wondered why God's work was only the rain, but never the sunshine, until they heard grandparents say, "What a beautiful day God has made."

Deuteronomy 6:1-3 encourages all believers to "...Fear the Lord...." The idea is to show children the power of the God we serve. He is an awesome and powerful God as evidenced by the earthquakes, darkness, thunder, and lighting on Mount Sinai when Moses was given the Law. That would naturally cause them to "fear" him. But the fear that Moses was really speaking of is that feeling of awe, respect, and reverence one has toward a loving God who offers joy, peace, and eternal life.

This idea of fear is not a matter of trembling and shaking. It is the fear that springs from recognizing that he is God, our Creator, and we are his creation. It is the fear that comes from recognizing that it is he who gives us the very next breath of life on this earth, and as a result we find our hearts filled with love for him and thankfulness to him.

It's the kind of fear and respect that the songwriter had in mind when he wrote, "Oh Lord, my God, as I in awesome wonder, consider all the world thy hands have made. I see the stars, I hear the rolling thunder and marvel at the power thou hast displayed. Then sings my soul, my savior God to thee. How great thou art. How great thou art."

It's what makes even the little children say, "He's got the whole world in his hands!"

When children learn to fear and respect God they accept his majesty and his presence in their lives everyday.

God Loves Me

The second truth that we learn about God as children is that he loves everyone including the little children.

Often Jesus was criticized for taking up so much time with children, who would often surround him listening to what he had to say. Jesus' response to those who wanted to cast children aside was "suffer the children to come unto me and forbid them not, for such is the kingdom of heaven." He encouraged adult believers to be as honest and straight forward in their faith as children and they would posses the qualities that would make them inhabitants of the kingdom of heaven.

Every child needs to know that God doesn't just love adults, but he loves little children too. Every parent and grandparent should make it their duty to teach this truth to the children of their family.

The bible teaches that God loves everyone in the world. It's the truth imbedded in the simple song, "Jesus loves the little children, all the children of the world, red and yellow black and white, they are precious in his sight, Jesus loves the little children of the world."

But beyond the fact that Jesus loves the world, every child needs to know that God identifies with them personally, not as a group, but specifically. That's hard to understand. How a God so big, could know my name and address. It's mind boggling to realize that God is so powerful and personal that he can focus on me alone.

When we grasp that idea then we start to understand the power of the children's song, "Yes, Jesus love me. Yes, Jesus love me. Yes Jesus loves me, for the bible tells me so."

Children may be young but they know, Jesus loves the little children of the world.

Depend upon God

Another great truth that ever believer knows about God is that he will provide for their needs.

In our prayers, we say, "Give us this day our daily bread." That's a prayer that says we count on God everyday for what we need to survive and thrive in this world. It's a truth that we learn we are children.

In God fearing homes, children have heard grandpa and grandma say, "The Lord will make a way" more times than once. It's a truth they start to learn about the grace of God. Often we worry about what we have or do not have in life. Our worries reach a point that we cannot sleep at night and we toss and turn. However, some remember what they learned in their youth. God will make a way.

When his disciples had such concerns Jesus told them to look at the natural activity around them. In Matthew 6:25 he said, "Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns, yet your heavenly father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?" Birds go out each day, not knowing what they will find but yet God arranges for them to fall upon what they need for that day. He challenges us to think, "If he will do that for the birds, then he'll do that for me.

That's the truth imbedded in the song, "Why should I be discouraged. Why should the shadows come. Why should my heart be lonely and long for heaven and home. For Jesus is my portion. A constant friend is he. His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me."

Children may be young, but they know he watches over them.

How to Pray to God

A child who learns how to pray learns a wonderful lesson. There are many adults today who still do not know how to pray.

Prayer is talking to God. Children learn to pray in steps. They begin by learning their "Our Fathers." After that they learn to make their prayers personal by asking God to bless "grandpa and grandma, teacher" and some add the family dog and other children's concerns. In a simple way, children begin to learn that talking to God is easy and simple. Some are taught the children's bedtime prayer.

Now I lay me down to sleep
I pray the Lord my soul to keep.
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.

This is a prayer of confidence in God as the ever-present protector of one's life on earth, during death, and into eternity.

As adults face trying times in their lives they remember what they learned in their youth: tell God and he will hear.

That's what the songwriter had in mind when he wrote, "What a friend we have in Jesus. All our sins and griefs to bear. What a privilege to carry, everything to God in prayer."

Prayer is the key to the kingdom. Faith unlocks the door.

When children are reared in God fearing homes, they may be little, but "they know."

How to Trust in God

A great truth that is taught to every believer is that we should trust in the Lord. David, in Psalm 31:1 said, "In thee oh Lord do I put my trust." It means that we depend on God. It means we count on God. It means we put our confidence in God that he will protect us, guide us and bring us into his perfect will.

Those ideas are taught to us as children. We are taught to do the best that we can in any situation, then afterwards, trust God to do the rest.

A grandfather had spent much of his life teaching his grandchildren great truths about God. One thing he taught them was two words "Let God." He told them to let God work it out. One of his grandchildren formed the letters of "Let God" with blocks. He was proud of the blocks and kept them on his mantle for many years. After the death of his wife, the grandfather was hurt and alone. He would not talk to anyone, not even his grandchildren. He could not shake the bad feeling he had about the loss of his wife. One day when his great-grandchildren came to see him they tried to cheer him up. His favorite grandchild pointed to the words on the blocks and said, "God changed them!" When the grandfather turned around he saw that the letter "D" had fallen to the floor and what remained shook him like a message from heaven."Let go!" Trusting God also means to let go and let God's will be done.

So we sing the song, "I will trust in the Lord, until I die."

Children may be young, but they know what it means to trust in the Lord.

God always forgives

The final truth that children learn is that no matter what they have done, God will forgive them and give them another chance.

The idea of forgiveness is essential to our faith. It is what separates God from false gods of the heathen idol worshipers of the world, that require human sacrifices and mercilessly destroy the ungodly. Our God forgives.

It's an important truth for every person to learn because as we grow to become adults we quickly learn that we make many mistakes, do dumb things and get into loads of trouble. When we are children, we learn that God always forgives us when we tell him we are sorry and stop doing the wrong things.

When we ask forgiveness God takes a spiritual eraser and erases all of the bad things we did and gives us a clean blackboard.

Some people think that's not possible, but little children learn to sing the song, "Only Believe, all things are possible, only believe."

It works that way for children who have made mistakes as well as adults.

What makes the eraser work?

When it comes to sin it is the blood of Christ who died on an old rugged cross and arose from the dead that he might have the power to erase the sins of anyone who asks him forgiveness.

Are you that person?

You may be young, but you can come forth now and say, "I am young, but I know the Lord."

They Considered Not the Miracle of the loaves

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 8, 2004

SCRIPTURE:" For they considered not the miracle of the loaves; for their heart was hardened." Mark 6:52

Introduction

Have you ever forgotten something you should have known? That's one of those occasions when the answer you sought was known to you, but for some reason escaped you. It was a simple answer, if fact, its simplicity made the fact that you missed it astonishing. Sometimes we dismiss such moments jokingly by saying, "I knew that!" We knew it, but we just could not see it at the time.

Often truths are right in front of our eyes but we can't see them. A young lady has a companion who loves, respects, and admires her but she can't see him. She spends years looking for the perfect love without considering what was before her. What she needs is close by, but she is looking for another. A trusted service provider has solved your service problems over the years successfully and on time, yet when a new service need arrives we scan the yellow pages looking for an expert, without considering what we have trusted in the past in the same situation.

Sometimes we forget or simply ignore what is before us or what has worked for us in the past. We look so hard for answers that we can't see them when they appear. When we finally see what we should have seen all along, we are astonished at ourselves and respond, "I knew that."

That's the way Israel was with God. They constantly sought solutions to perplexing problems by every means except the one that had always proven true for them in the past. In Egypt, God provided special provisions for them in the land of Goshen. In the wilderness he provided food for them for 40 years and clothes that never wore out. Yet, in the promised land, they desperately worried about how they would survive without the daily rain of "manna" and turned to other gods. They didn't consider all that God had done for them in the past. When they were promptly reminded by Joshua and others, their collective response was strikingly similar to, "We knew that."

In a similar sense, we often forget who God is, what he can do and what he can do for us. In our daily struggles we wrestle with many difficulties, often forgetting the one that has successfully helped us through countless situations in the past. That's why a regular study of the bible keeps God's image before us. In times of trouble we remember that God is a refuge and a source of strength a "very present" help in time of trouble.

After worrying and struggling for so long, we suddenly remember God then conclude in our embarrassment, "I knew that.".

As Christians, we should never forget what God has done for us. Neither should we forget that what he has done before he can and will do it again. We keep his name before us so that we can remember that he is an awesome God who reigns supreme over every situation.

Exposition

This text focuses on a situation in which the disciples worried needlessly about storms and troubles when they forgot the power of the Lord.

After performing a great miracle in which he fed 5,000 people with two fishes and five loaves of bread, the disciples were seen aboard a ship toiling in a storm. Jesus appeared walking on the water. They were amazed at how the wind ceased.

John 6:21 describes this same incident an added a detail the others Gospel writers omitted, " and immediately they were at the land whether they went."

This was not the first time that Jesus had quelled a storm. In Mark 4:39 he came to them in the midst of a storm and spoke to the wind saying, "Peace be still" and the winds ceased. In chapter 6, he simply came on board their ship and the wind ceased.

The disciples were amazed that not only did Jesus walk on the water and quite the storm but they were immediately zipped over the water to their destination.

Their amazement or wonder is explained in verse 52 "for they considered not the miracle of the loaves." Neither did they remember the previous time when he silenced the storm. Their hearts were not focused on the power of God and they forgot, for a moment, what an awesome God they served.

The disciples had been in Christ's presence when he performed miracles in the past. They should not have been surprised when he performed any miraculous act, because they, more than all others, should have known his power and ability.

He provided the bread

The miracle of the loaves was not a singular act. Jesus performed a similar miracle on at least one other occasion. In Matthew 14 He fed the 5,000 people in one day with 12 baskets left over! In Matthew 15, his disciples were worried. They complained that they had 4,000 in the crowd but there were only seven loaves of bread and a few fishes. Jesus took the seven loaves of bread and fishes and blessed them and fed 4,000 for three days, with seven baskets left over. They saw how he repeatedly provided bread for them, but they did not consider what he had done for them in the past.

When we struggle to earn, preserve and manage our daily bread, is it possible that we forget the miracle of the loaves?

A simple life reflection makes it obvious that what we have achieved has been done only because God has provided us with our daily bread. We worry about the light bill, water bill, house note, car note, medical bills and a plethora of other problems. Often we make ourselves sick without considering how these same problems were handled in the past. We prayed and asked God for help and strength. In his own miraculous way he opened doors of opportunity and miraculously created a way for us to keep bread on the table.

In the bible it may have been 5,000 people who miraculously received bread, or a single widow woman whose barrel never ran dry. In either instance God provided the bread that was needed. In our lives, the miracle may not be for 5,000 people but it could very easily be a family of five, or eight, or ten, etc. In the past, God has provided the miracle of loaves for our families repeatedly. In one instance it may have been a job that was provided. In another instance it may have been a loan application that was approved. In yet another instance it may have been a great shopping bonanza that provided what was needed at a price when your means. In hundreds of ways, God has provided the bread for us; yet like the disciples we sometimes worry because we forget "the miracle of the loaves."

Perhaps that's the meaning of Psalm 103:2-5, "Bless the Lord oh my soul and forget not his benefits, who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases, who redeemeth thy life from destruction, who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies, who satisfieth thy mouth with good things so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's."

If we are worrying about our bread today, it is because we have forgotten the miracle of the loaves.

The Storm

The disciples were troubled by the storm that was quelled when Jesus came aboard. This was not an isolated event, it had happened before.

In the instance of this text Jesus came in a storm and it ceased. In Mark 4:39 he was asleep below deck on a ship when a storm arose and he questioned their faith as he spoke to the winds and the waves saying, "Peace Be Still."

There are many today who react to storms like the disciples who lost faith. Even though they knew Jesus was on board in Mark, they screamed, "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" Even though they knew Jesus was close by in Mark 6, they were still intimidated by the storm.

Even today, believers who know what God can do, are often intimidated by the storms that toss them to and fro. Storms are just wind and rain. On other occasions there is thunder and lightning or even winds of hurricane force. We worry whether we will be able to weather this storm.

This storm could be the loss of a job.

This storm could be the sickness of a breadwinner.

This storm could be a family difficulty.

This storm could be a serious marital problem.

This storm could be a financial disaster.

When we worry about the storm, it may be that we have forgotten that we serve a God who can speak to the winds and they will obey his will, or just by his mere presence, storms will disappear.

That's why we love the song that says, "When the storms of life are raging, stand by me."

Walking on Water

The disciples saw Jesus walking on water, but walking on water was not an isolated event. In Matthew 14:26-32 Jesus is shown walking on the water. Peter came to him walking on the water and for a few moments did the impossible, until he stopped to think about it.

When Jesus walked on the water it was, by all interpretations, an impossible feat. It was equally impossible when Peter walked on the water for a few moments. Despite its impossibility the bible record tells us that it happened. They did the impossible!

Life often present us with impossible situations. These are the times when the odds appear stacked against them and there is no way to succeed. Sometimes the situations are economically based.

Money problems worry many people. On any given for some, debts are increasing and income is decreasing. Some have lost jobs or experienced investment losses. Many people think their finances are such a shambles that it is impossible to repair. It's the kind of problem that requires them literally to walk on water to resolve. Troubling Interpersonal Relationships create impossible situations. Many have reached crucial points in their marriages and relationships. Some marriages seem beyond repair. Trying to mend such relationships requires the ability to walk on water.

While we worry about the impossibility of our situations, we forget that with Christ, we can walk on water. We can do the impossible! Even though Peter is known for sinking when he tried to walk on water alone, we often fail to remember that when Christ pulled him from the water, he walked on water, holding to Christ's hand until he returned to the ship.

Are you in an impossible situation? Does it require you to walk on water? With God's help, we have walked on water before. If we despair it's because we have forgotten the miracle that God helped us perform in the past.

God can do it

Finally brothers and sisters we must remember to remember the God of our salvation.

The disciples were astonished because the considered not the miracle of the loaves. Neither did they remember the miracle of Christ walking on the water. Moreover, they did not remember how he quieted the storm.

Today, we must remember to remember where our blessings come from.

Before we burden ourselves with unnecessary worry, we should remember that we serve an awesome God who reigns and blesses us in many ways.

The disciples saw Jesus operate and thought it was incredible because they forgot what he had done before.

Is it incredible that the those who are sick are healed? Only those who have forgotten how God healed their sicknesses and lifted them from their sick beds are amazed at his healing power!

Is it incredible that those who have failed have been given second chances? Only those who have forgotten how they repeated failed in life but have been restored over and over again are amazed at his spirit of forgiveness.

Is it incredible that the lost find their way again? Only those who have forgotten how they took the wrong paths in life, only to be placed on the right road again are amazed at the direction of the Holy Spirit.

Believers are don't worry today, because they remember what he did yesterday.

Somebody remembers that when they were:

WEAK he provided them strength

DOWN he picked them up!

DEFEATED he gave them the victory

DISCOURAGED he restored their hope!

LONELY, he gave them comfort

TROUBLED he gave them peace of mind

Somebody remembers how he came to a little town called Bethlehem

That he died on an old rugged cross!

Somebody remembers that Early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave!

He's still blessing us today, just like he did yesterday!

No Shortcuts

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 15, 2004

SCRIPTURE:" And the devil said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread. 4 And Jesus answered him, saying, It is written, That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God." Luke 4:3-4.

Introduction

Have you ever taken a short cut? In today's time there is a demand for getting things done fast. To achieve the desired result, many look for short cuts and seem to achieve their goals quicker than others who take the long way around.

Everyone knows of short cuts. Children who walk to school often find short cuts through alleys and across yards. Students in college read the "Cliff Notes" version of novels or watch videos instead of reading the books. Drivers try to avoid traffic by cutting through neighborhoods only to be stopped by buses, trucks and trains that take even longer.

Some short cuts actually cost us more in the long run. The student who copies information takes a short cut to get good grades. In the long run, .the short cuts cost the student, in lost opportunities. Some athletes take steroids and drugs to help them win competitions; they are short cuts that often end in elimination. There are many who want riches quickly, so they take the short cut and steal. There are homebuilders who build homes from inferior materials. Their shortcut often means high profits but losses down the road. Some cooks take shortcuts in the kitchen that often result in failed recipes. Stockbrokers take insider trading shortcuts and often land in trouble with the law. Too often short cuts cost more in pain, suffering and frustration than is gained.

Even though shortcuts often mean sacrificing substance for symbol; despite the risks, shortcuts are still appealing to many.

Consider the man who worked hard all of his life to earn a living. Despite his best efforts he was never able to accumulate anything more than enough to pay the rent and keep his head above water. At the rate he worked it would take him 20 years to save enough money to get the things he wanted. So, when his neighbor left for a vacation he decided he would take a short cut; he'd steal a few of the appliances and things from their home and sell them for extra money he would use to get ahead. Inside the home he saw jewelry, and clothing items that would be valuable. As he began to bag a few items he heard a voice that said, "Jesus is watching you." He was horrified. Someone saw him. Then the voice yelled again, "Jesus is watching you!" In a panic he turned on the light only to see a talking parrot. He was relieved. "Was that you talking?" the man said, "Sure was!" answered the parrot. "What's you name?" asked the man? "Charlie." Came the answer. "That's a dumb name to give a parrot. What kind of idiot would name a parrot Charlie?" The parrot answered, "The same kind of idiot that would leave all this jewelry and money at home and name that killer pit bull behind you, Jesus!" —The man took a short cut, that didn't pay off.

There are times when taking a shortcut is acceptable even advisable. However, there are some things in life that are too important for shortcuts. We do take shortcuts with out education, careers, our personal relationships, professional training or quality of life. Neither do we take short cuts when it comes to our faith and relationship with God. The bible warns us that the road to destruction is broad and traveled by many, while the road to glory is narrow and traveled by only a few who choose to travel through life on highway 111, despite the appeal of life's short-cuts

As Christians, we are challenged to look for the best roads but to avoid dangerous shortcuts that can lead us to unknown destinations or dead ends. The words of the songwriter are very true, "Follow Jesus; take no chance at getting lost." It may often seem like the long way around, but it the long run is the shortest road to paradise.

Exposition

This text focuses on Jesus after he had communed with God for forty days. During this time he was tempted to take three short cuts in his life, all of which he turned down.

Those forty days must have been a wonderful experience. He had just come from the baptismal scene which had ended when God declared, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." So, in the beginning of his ministry, Jesus faced a crucial decision making period in which he had to decide whether to take the long way around or take the short cuts.

The passage shows the devil meeting Jesus at a point in his 40 day fast and meditation. The devil presented Jesus with three temptations: 1) To turn stones into bread and satisfy his human needs and desires 2) To worship the devil and free himself from being plagued by the devilish plots and tricks that would follow him all through his ministry and 3) Throw himself off the side of mountain in the full view of thousands of people below who would witness when God sent angels to catch him before he hit the ground.

All three of the temptations would have jump started Jesus' career with popularity, fame and certain world power. There would be no doubt that he would be the one true Messiah because he would be the one man who could turn stones into bread and be rescued by angels dispatched from heaven.

He could change the world from such a position. He could order governments to follow his rule. He could outlaw hypocrisy and open the floodgates of opportunity for thousands.

The short cut that was presented to him presented him with a quick opportunity to do many things, but it would not do the one thing he came to do, obey God and carry out his will.

Jesus recognized Satan's three offers for what they were: shortcuts. He refused them and went the long way around. It was a way of sacrifice and pain, but it provided what the world needed, which was salvation.

Road to Success is not quick

The essence of the Christian experience is best demonstrated by the story told by an old preacher by the name of J. Wallace Hampton. It seems that there was a very wealthy man who owned a construction company who was fond of his foreman. He left on a long journey but entrusted the foreman with a large sum of money, a set of plans and instructions to spare no pains or expenses in building this fine luxury home. Whatever it cost in money or time was to be dedicated to this building. The foreman was irritated at the amount of time that this project would take because some of the materials needed would have to be imported from other places. The foreman proceeded to build the house. He used materials that were less than specification. Molding, trimming and finishings were quickly thrown together. Instead of imported gold he used he used imitations. In many areas he used quick to attain inferior materials that helped him save time but was less than acceptable quality. When the owner returned he looked at the house with great pride. Without inspecting it, he called all of his workers together and presented the foreman with the keys to the house. "You have been so faithful to me, that I wanted to reward you with a house built solid, secure and lacking nothing. I give you the keys. The house you built is yours." –The foreman could have had a lavish mansion; instead he had a house made of shortcuts.

So it is with our lives. We often build our lives on shortcuts, even our spiritual lives. Yet there are no shortcuts to building secure lives in Christ.
1 Peter 1:6-7 says, "Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations:

That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." It indicates that

The Christian life is sometimes stressful and difficult, but it is more precious than gold once achieved.

The Christian life involves three elements for which there are no shortcuts:

NO SHORTCUTS FOR FAITHFUL LIVING: Faithful living is the central part of the Christian life. It means that we live daily trusting in God and walk by faith. There are no short cuts to trusting God. Sara lived most of her life trusting God's promise that she would bear a child. When years passed and she bore no children she decided to take a shortcut, using her maid Haggai as a surrogate. It didn't work out. It caused problems. When she was nearly 100 God's promise was fulfilled, but not before she took a shortcut that nearly ruined her family.

There are no shortcuts when it comes to trusting God. We walk each day by faith.

In matters of finance, family, career opportunities, education, and spiritual strength there is no substitute for trusting the power of God. One songwriter summed up the issue by saying, "Trust and obey for there's no other way to be happy in Jesus, but to trust and obey."

NO SHORTCUTS FOR SERVICE: There are many who want to fulfill their obligation to serve God by taking shortcuts. God gives each of us certain gifts that are to be used in his service during our lifetime. Among these gifts which are outlined in 1 Corinthians 12, are: knowledge, faith, healing, wisdom, insight, arts and communication skills, and language skills. Although every member has at least one gift, there are many that have several gifts but choose not to serve. They seem content with shortcuts, one time "show your face" type acts that may or may not be repeated. It means a gift that is expected to be used in kingdom building is being used elsewhere but not in the kingdom building process on a regular basis. Service to God through serving others is time consuming. Helping the poor, the needy, the old and feeble, the young and helpless requires time, energy and money on a regular basis. There are no shortcuts, no quick ways to do it.

NO SHORTCUTS FOR WORSHIP: There are many want to worship God but they want the quick micro-wave version. They desire a quick fix that will last them come back in about two months. They like quick seminars or 1 minute manager type sessions that can result in quick faith. Yet worship and praise are not designed to be quick fixes for worshipper, they are expressions of praise and gratitude for God.
A quick fix worship has the same effect as a high school graduation in which you are marched across the stage hurriedly, given a sheet of paper then pushed off the stage quickly. The quick fix worshipper does not have time for the worship, he or she comes late and leaves early and is usually impatient. Yet there is no quick fix for worship. Although a worship may be televised, that is a quick fix. Although you show up once a month, that is a quick fix that does not build faith. Even though we have heard many songs that the choir sings, they build faith. Even though we have studied many of the Sunday School lessons before, their study builds our faith. Even though we are familiar with many of themes of the pastor's sermon, they strengthen our faith for the lean years. Romans 10:17 reminds us that "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." There are no shortcuts.

There are no shortcuts to heaven

Finally brothers and sisters, we must consider that there are no shortcuts to heaven.

We live in a world that proposes shortcuts for everything. No matter what it is, someone has found a shortcut, but there is no shortcut to heaven.

Late night infomercials sell shortcuts to everything. One man has a shortcut to riches in one month after using his plan.

Another has a shortcut to losing weight promising as much as 50 pounds in 50 days. Another sells a machine that offers as shortcut to producing abdominal muscles and losing fat. Each promises a shortcut to real estate wealth, business success, and physical health in 60 days or less. There are companies that offer college degrees over the internet. All you do is put in your credit card and click whether or not you want a Baccalaureate, Masters or PhD degree.

Yet there is an unseen commercial that is broadcast on channel 666, the devil's channel, 24 hours a day. It offers a shortcut to heaven.

That commercial says, "Get the best of both worlds. Have fun on earth and enjoy the streets of gold in an all expense paid lifetime in glory. With our easy plan you can join a church, rarely participate, rarely give an offering, rarely serve and still walk the streets of heaven. Our plan has been successfully used by millions who have learned the secret to getting blessings without really trying or serving. If you want to join millions who are taking the shortcut to heaven without worship, service or faithful living, call this number right now 1-800-666-6666." At the end of the commercial there are small words that scroll across the screen, "Shortcuts to heaven require a layover in hell and may be hazardous to your eternal life."

There are no short cuts to heaven! The only way to the kingdom of heaven is through faithful service to Jesus Christ. I hear him say in John 14:6, "I am the way, the truth and the life, no man cometh to the father but by me."

When God was ready to save the world, there were no shortcuts. It needed a spotless lamb without sin that would be the eternal sacrifice for the sins of men!-There was no shortcut!

He needed someone who would be willing to bear the horrors of the cross and the humiliation of men. There was no shortcut!

He needed someone who would be willing to be wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities, there was no shortcut!

God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son.

He didn't take a shortcut. He sent him down through 44 generations!

He sent him by way of Bethlehem, Egypt and Nazareth! There were no shortcuts!

Down in the garden, I hear Jesus ask, is there another, shorter, more painless way than the way of the cross? The answer came-there are no shortcuts!

He died on Calvary and stayed in the grave for three long days!

But early Sunday morning he arose from the grave with all power in his hands!

He didn't take a shortcut!

He talked the talk and walked the walked!

He did it all just for me!

New Seasons are better than Re-Runs

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 22, 2004

SCRIPTURE:"If any man be in Christ he is a new creature. Old things are passed away and all things become new." 2 Corinthians 5:17

Introduction

Are you tired of watching re-runs? Broadcast television usually takes the summer off and the airways are bombarded with re-runs of popular shows. Whether the show is "Martin", "CSI" or "Monk" –there are re-runs in the summer. Generally, the producers spend the summer months preparing for the new season with better shows and better, more entertaining versions of old shows. Until the new season begins however, everyone is stuck with re-runs.

Dejavu is a word which closely resembles "rerun." It means that we visited this experience before. When someone sees anti-war protesters on television protesting against the Bush Administration, it looks like a re-run to those who saw Vietnam protesters do the same thing. Some who listen to modern Hip Hop music insist that they are really hearing reruns of James Brown, Roberta Flack, the Isley Brothers and the Temptations. Others who watch political events, economic down turns and plethora of other situations, feel a sense of dejavu-"we've been here before."

As a new school year begins many students will begin a completely new season. There will be many who will improve their grades, act more mature, manage their time more wisely, and grow spiritually during the new year. However, there are others who will not see a new season at all. Beyond the fact that they have a few new clothes and new notebooks, for many students, this school year will be a re-run of last year.

What if last year was not our best year and this year is a re-run? The results will be the same. The only way to have a new season is to do things differently from last year. Our new season may have the same format but with a fresh new storyline, a few new character twists and other changes that will make our "show" an improvement over last year. However, if our study habits are the same and our relationships and personal performance is the same as last year, then we already know how the show will end because it is a rerun—it will end just like last year. No matter how many times you watch a re-run, it always ends the same way. You can stop the tape, play it backwards, or fast forward, but it will end the same way. The same is true about the school life experience, if we do everything like we did last year, we can do it faster, slower or little backward, but the end will be the same…a re-run.

Ironically, the same is true about our spiritual lives. We won't grow any closer to God if we continue to approach him the same way we have in the past. The best we can get is a re-run, and re-runs end the same way. If we want to draw closer to him then we must do something differently than we did in the past. If we worship the same way, serve the same way, study the same way, or pray the same way—then we get the same results-a re-run.

As Christians, we strive to come closer to God every year. Christian youth should strive to begin a new school year with new enthusiasm and expectations. We should be determined not to repeat the mistakes of the past as we move closer toward our educational and spiritual goals.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains the nature of the new life in Christ.

Jewish believers were often confused about the relationship of their new Christian life to their Jewish upbringing. Many viewed Christianity as simply an important addition to their Jewish faith. The believed they could continue their devotion to ritual and Mosaic law and simply add a few Christian components that would make their lives complete.

Paul echoed the teachings of Christ when he told them that the Christian life was a completely new experience, not a addition to their former faith. The old faith, the old allegiance to ritual was no longer meaningful.

In addition, he challenges the old way of life that is based upon appearances rather than true faith. In verse 12 he uses the phrase "glory in appearance" as a way of explaining how the old carnal man related to Christ. It was a matter of superficial living, doing that which appeared real but was actually not real. The emphasis, he noted, should be from the heart, which is the way of the new believer.

Thus, he concludes that any person who is truly a believer of Jesus is a "New creation"- a believer from the inside out rather than the outside in. His life is a brand new episode rather than a re-run of past mistakes, errors, or false notions about life.

What Paul said was simple, "living for Christ" should not be a re-run of our worldly lives with "church" added, but a completely new experience that begins with Christ as the center and God as a guide.

Seasons often end with a cliff Hanger

Today there are many people waiting to see how this next chapter in our lives will unfold. Some youth ended the last school year with a cliff hanger ending, just like the closing episode of a television. A cliff hanger is where the audience is kept in suspense as to the outcome of a traumatic experience. Often they don't learn the outcome of the final episode until they see the beginning of the new season. That's what happened to Paul on the road to Damascus. His experience on the road was filled with trauma. For three days and nights no one knew the outcome until he arose three days later to announce that he would live for Christ. The same was the case with Jonah aboard the ship. When he was thrown overboard, no one knew how the episode would end. It was a cliff hanger. No one knew how it would end until he emerged three days later.

How many youth ended the last school year with a cliff hanging experience that did not clearly indicate what would happen the next year. Some had a bad experience academically. School closed on an academic cliff hanger. Some had a discipline problem and even their tenure in school was questionable. School closed on a disciplinary cliffhanger.

Cliff hangers are dramatic. Cliff hangers mark great turns and shifts in direction.

There are many today who are ready to begin a new season after a cliff hanger ending to the last season. Will there be a change? Will grades improve? Will we be better this year? Last season closed with these questions, now it is time for the new season to begin.

Ratings Determine the life of the show

Why is it that many popular shows are continued into the next year? It's because the shows are supported by sponsors who have their reasons, usually public demand, why they support a particular show. If the sponsor likes the show and it shows positive signs, it is continued and often expanded into the next year. If the show has no prospect of growth or profitability, it is dropped and all the public gets is re-runs.

In a similar sense, every believer has a sponsor, who is the Lord. There are some segments of our show that have very low ratings. The rating company is not the Nielson Company that will conduct an overnight viewer poll, but from the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit does not rate how popular an action is or whether or not the majority of your friends support what you or approve of what you have done. It measures what we do and say by one standard, which is God's law.

How does the Holy Spirit rate our favorite music? What kind of rating would our music videos garner? Would we get a favorable rating for our night activities? Our sinful lifestyle can get us in deep ratings trouble that threaten to pull our "show."

One way that God pulls our "show" is to withdraw his peace. The peace of God comes with his warm embrace. When we knowingly draw low ratings with God, he removes his peace from us. Psalm 95:11 says that those who sin will not "enter into my rest." Peace at home. Peace at school. Peace in our personal lives is one of the results of good "God ratings." In addition, when our ratings drop, we may lose our heavenly sponsor. Jesus speaking to his disciples said in Matthew 7:23 that those who practice sin will hear him say, "depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Thus, it behooves us to consider what we did in our last season. If it rated low, then we need to seriously consider changing our content before we lose our sponsor.

Every believer knows the futility of trying to succeed without God.

Even though we are smart, we can't pass a single test without God.
Even though we are strong, we can't win a single game without God.
Even though we are popular, we can't achieve a single goal without God.
The songwriter put it this way, "Without God I can do nothing. Without God, I'd surely fail. Without God, my life would be drifting. Like a ship without a sail."
Without God, all we get is re-runs of bad seasons.

A New Season

Finally, brothers and sisters we must resolve to begin a new season, without re-runs of last year.

Unless our last episode was sheer perfection, with no room for improvement, then we don't want a re-run.

Unless our grades were absolutely perfect, we don't want a re-run.

Unless we achieved every goal we imagined without once slipping in our own sight or in the sight of God, we don't want a re-run.

Paul reminds us that if a person is in Christ "Old things are passed away, and all things become new!"

Paul emphasized that beginning anew is more than just having a new appearance, but more importantly it is having a new motivation and direction.

So while we begin the school year with new shoes on our feet, they should mean that we are planning to walk a new walk this year.

While we begin the school year with new pants and dresses, they should mean that we are planning to dress for success and put on the whole armour of God this year.

While we begin with new books, notebooks and book bags, they should mean that we are planning to not only have new ways to carry our books but new ways to learn what's in the books we carry.

Old things are passed away.
School suspensions are passed away!
Less than our best grades are passed away!
Frequent tardies are passed away!
Confrontations with teachers and principals are passed away!
Cigarettes, alcohol and drugs are passed away!
Illicit sex, wild parties and riotous living are passed.
Old things are passed away and all things become new.

The new season should also show evidence of our renewed commitment to continue trusting God and praise his Holy name!

When we put our trust in the Lord he makes our:
-RACE worth running and our BATTLE worth fighting!
-COURSE worth finishing and our FAITH worth keeping!
-DIFFICULTIES worth facing and our BURDENS worth bearing!
-ANXIETIES worth enduring and our TEARS worth shedding!

When we trust in the Lord, we turn dark days into sun shiny days; MIDNIGHTS into noontimes and hard times into good times!

As our new season begin we should continue to praise the Lord.

We should praise the Lord because his:

Grace is always sufficient; Love is always abundant

Mercy is everlasting and; promises are sure!

We should praise the Lord for the burden he's going to lift off our shoulder!

We should praise the Lord for the hill he's going to help us to climb!

We should praise the Lord for the bills he's going to help us to pay!

We should praise the Lord for the job he's going to help us to find!

We should praise the Lord for the home he's going to help us to buy!

To guarantee a new season without re-runs millions of dollars are paid to create a new season. As the new season begins, it doesn't happen without a price.

To guarantee us a new season, without re-runs somebody had to pay the price.

The price couldn't be paid in dollars, but only by the ultimate sacrifice.

The song writer said, "Jesus paid it all, all to him I owe. Sin had left its crimson stain but he washed it white as snow"

Jesus came and died out on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning, he arose from the grave, guaranteeing my new season!

God of the Valleys and Alleys

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

August 29, 2004

SCRIPTURE:"Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee; in whose heart are the ways of them.ÿWho passing through the valley of Baca F257 make it a well; the rain also filleth the pools. They go from strength to strength, every one of them in Zion appeareth before God." Psalm 84:5-7

Introduction

Have you every been in a dark alley, all by yourself? It doesn't matter whether you have walked through an alley a thousand times, there is still an unsettling feeling about going through a dark alley alone. We don't know what lurks in the darkness. We are nervous about the unknown. We contemplate a plethora of tragedies that could possibly beset us as we walk or drive through an alleys.

There are two words that describe the same situation for different folks. City folks describe a passageway that leads between or behind two buildings or rows of buildings as an "alley." They are usually narrow passage ways often used by garbage trucks or delivery vehicles to collect refuse. They are not usually well kept and are out of sight of the main thoroughfare. City folks are familiar with alleys. They are usually dark, lonely and often they are dangerous. Out of the sight of prying eyes, many tragedies occur in alleys. Distant from help, alleys offer few ways to escape, no place to run. Alleys make us claustrophobic. We feel cornered in alleys. That's why we don't like dark alleys because we know what can happen in them.

Country folk don't see many alleys, but they have many valleys. In many ways a valley can be similar to an alley. A valley is an area of land that lies between two mountains or high regions. Those who travel through valleys are vulnerable to enemies who may lurk unseen in the mountainside. In times of peace and prosperity the valley is a beautiful place. However, in times of peril, attack and storm, the valley is a dangerous place. No one embraces the idea of going through the valley, with all of its shadows, alone.

Sooner or later every life will face either a valley or an alley. Whether it's the immediate tragedies of life posed by poverty, social decay or despair that result in alley experiences, or the deeper, personal life wrenching experiences that rob us of hope and inspiration in valley experiences, sooner or later all of us will have either a valley or alley experience, both are just as frustrating and dangerous. Either one is difficult to face alone.

As Christians, we are reassured that our God is a God both of the valleys and the alleys. We don't know what evil lurks in the alley or the valley, but if we should travel through them holding to his hand, he will provide for us, bring justice upon anyone who attacks us, and show us the way out.

Exposition

This text focuses on David's confidence that God would bring him before his presence despite traveling through the Valley of Baca.

The temple, built by Solomon, drew worshippers from across the nation. Many walked the long dangerous journey to Zion, braving weather, wild animals, and thieves. For some, the journey took weeks and was a great expense. Some met sickness, misfortune and hardship along the way. It was a difficult way, but they constantly marched forward, by the thousands, with the single purpose of worshipping God at Zion.

Along the way, they cheered themselves singing about the blessedness of being in the presence of God. Verse two notes their "yearning" to be in God's presence. They sang about how their souls "cried out" for the living God. Their desire to make it to Zion was intense. Though they walked several weeks to attend a worship service that occupied the smaller part of one day they resolved in verse 10 that "a day in thy courts is better than a thousand." They traveled day by day with their minds focused on the Lord!

The hardships and struggles they encountered along their way is generally described as "passing through the valley of Baca." Whether Baca was a real place or not, it had significant meaning to the pilgrims. Most think that the Valley of Baca refers to the line of Baca-Trees or mulberries that lined the valleys surrounding Jerusalem from any direction. In the heat of the day, travelers would find them for shelter from the sun. In the valley of Baca-Trees they often found wells of water, replenished by the rains that helped strengthen them for their journey. Those who passed through the valley of Baca, were said to have passed through the valley of "weeping," for it was a hard and frustrating pilgrimage that brought many tears. When the pilgrims reached Zion they sang about their victory over the valley as in verse 6: "who passing through the valley of Baca, make it a well. The rain also filleth the pools."

There are many "Baca" situations in life.

Just as the pilgrims could not get to Jerusalem without going into the Valley of Baca, modern Christians will find that we can't make it to the kingdom of heaven without encountering our own Valley of Baca. The Valley of Baca is that experience that challenges your faith, shakes your confidence, weakens your spirit, and dashes your hopes. A valley is a depression. When you go through a valley you begin at a high plane and start going downward until you reach the lowest point. To get out of a valley requires a great commitment, because it is harder to climb up than it is to walk down.

When times get tough and you can't see your way, you have entered the Valley of Baca!

When you look for help but only get hurt, you have entered the valley of Baca!

When you seek pleasure but only get pain, you have entered the valley of Baca!

When you seek satisfaction but only get sorrow, you have entered the valley of Baca!

When you look for hope but only get despair, you have entered the valley of Baca!

We serve a God who is a God on the mountain top, but he is also a God in the valley!

The three Hebrew Boys faced the fiery furnace, in the valley, but they told the world "our God is able to deliver us."

Daniel met ferocious lions in the valley, but remained confident that God could turn lions into kittens.

David met the cold hand of death, in the valley, and resolved "Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil."

Life's blind alley situations

At various turns in life we enter blind alley situations. Blind alleys are those circumstances in which we are cornered by no action of our own, but the unfair unjust circumstances of life take us on a path in which we cannot see an escape.

Often we are frustrated by life's blind alleys. They are the circumstances that result in bad things happening to good people. That's the essence of a tragedy, when a bad thing happens to a good person. It's what happened to Job. He was a good man who faced a blind alley situation. Bad things were happening to him repeatedly, death, financial disaster, loss of family and many other problems. There was no place to escape and no place to turn. Yet, even in the blind alley of life, Job resolved to remain faithful to the Lord. The poor widow woman faced a similar blind alley. With no money or resources she did all she knew how to do. Finally she gather two sticks and her last cruz of oil and prepared to make a final cake of bread for herself and her children.

Every believer knows what it's like to face a blind alley situation where you are helpless against powers greater than yourself, defenseless with little room for escape or retreat and your every action is falsely interpreted with often terminal results.

What's your blind alley? Is it a sickness that you cannot overcome?

Is it a financial loss that seems colossal?

Is it an unwarranted attack by enemies upon you or your family?

At first glance, we are frustrated by blind alley situations. Why is it that the just suffer injustice?

Why is it that the good suffer at the hand of the bad?

Why is it that those who labor in the vineyard of life seem to have such a difficult time?

Why doesn't God help the helpless avoid blind alleys?

These are questions we all face when we find ourselves in life's alley looking down the barrel of situations that are being used against us, to an undesirable end. What purpose comes from allowing a believer to wander into a blind alley only to fall into the hands of enemies?

That was the question that the disciples asked in John 9:1-7 when they noticed a blind man who stumbled through the alleys all of his life. They wanted to know the purpose of situation. Was it a family sin that brought this upon him? Did he do something wrong? Jesus answered by saying that the man's entire purpose in life was to provide an opportunity for Christ to do a great work through his circumstance and thus bring salvation to many.

Since each of us has a purpose in life, our blind our alley situation could very well be the one circumstance that God uses to correct wrongs that exist for generations to come. He did it so many times. People received a new view of mentally disabled people when Jesus cured the man who ran wild in cemeteries. They began to see the mentally disabled as human beings. The woman at the well came from a blind alley circumstance, but Christ used her social stigma to show the value of every human being, even those once thought dispensable. Even Lazarus was allowed to die to demonstrate the power of the Lord over life and death situations.

The great preacher Robert Schuler, underwent a sickness that incapacitated him for a while. In the interim he wrote a book by the title, "Life is not fair, but God is good."

That should be our resolve, Life may present us with unjust situations, but God is still good!

When we reach blind alley situations and can't see our way out, we only have one resolve, to "lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord who made the heaven and earth."

Rivers run through Valleys

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that rivers run through valleys and all alleys are not dead ends, if we walk with the Lord.

The presence of a river running through a valley reassures a believer that there is a way out, for every river flows somewhere.

Every alley has at least one way in and one way out. Even if a mountain blocks our way, we have the assurance of knowing that we serve a mountain moving God.

So, David in verse seven sends a word of hope to the pilgrims in the valleys and alleys of life. One way or the other, every pilgrim, every believer will appear before God.

Whether we walk through the valleys and alleys of this life or have to be carried through on the wings of Eagles, we shall all be brought before the glorious presence of God.

The great satisfaction of every believer is that no matter how deep the valley or dark the alley, there is always hope.

No matter how difficult the terrain or treacherous the path, there is always hope!

No matter how frustrating the moment or aggravating the circumstance, there is always hope!

No matter how challenging the obstacle or intimidating the foe, there is always hope!

That's why the songwriter declares, "My hope is built on Nothing less than Jesus blood and righteousness. I dare not trust the sweetest frame but wholly lean on Jesus name!

We have hope that"

If we stumble and trust in the Lord, he'll help us to stand!

If we are discouraged but trust in the Lord, he'll give us new inspiration!

If we get weak and trust in the Lord, he'll make us strong!

If we get lost and trust in the Lord, he'll help us find our way!

If we find ourselves in the valleys and alleys of despair, he's able to deliver us!

I don't know how long it will be, nor what the future holds for me, but this I know...

If Jesus, who gave his blood for us on Calvary..

If Jesus, who was buried in a borrowed tomb..

If Jesus, who arose after three days and nights

If Jesus leads me, through the storm and the rain!

If Jesus leads me, through heat of day and chill of the midnight hour!

If Jesus leads me, through trials and tribulations!

If Jesus leads me...

I shall get home someday!

Ushered Into The Presence Of The Lord

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church

SCRIPTURE: We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord. 2 Corinthians 5:8

Introduction

What makes ushers important to the ministry of the church? It's not their uniforms or the fact that they often distribute programs or meet people at their point of need. It's not their stations or the fact that they help make us comfortable. What makes ushers important is that they usher us into the spiritual presence of the Lord. They prepare us, set our mood and position us so that we can fully experience his presence in our worship life.

What ushers do for believers in relation to the regular worship is a precursor to what every believer can expect when it comes time to meet the Lord face to face. That will be a grand day when we are ushered finally into the physical presence of the Lord.

Everyone who comes to worship does not have the same predisposition. Some of us are rather strange. The people they meet at the door must meet even the most eccentric person and usher them into the presence of the Lord.

A certain college student attended the university worship services regular. They called him Kookie Kelly because all Kelly ever wore was a T-Shirt, jeans and he usually wore no shoes. He never bothered anyone, he just had a strange way of doing things. It was not strange to see him come to the university worship services, since he was saved, dressed in what he believed was acceptable. He was surrounded by college students who thought little about his attire.

One day Kelly decided to attend church at the giant church across the street. It was a very well dressed and quite conservative congregation. Kelly, wearing his trademark T shirt and jeans appeared at the front door, where the ushers looked at him with a strange look. Kelly felt proud of himself. He wore a freshly washed and ironed pair of jeans and his favorite T-Shirt was clean and wrinkle free. He even wore shoes that day. The ushers were about to tell him about the church dress code when Kelly simply walked past them looking for a seat. The church became silent.

All the seats were filled. There were no empty seats in the back, so Kelly walked to the front. It was filled too. So, just as he often did at college worships, he sat on the floor next to the front seat and reverently waited for the worship to begin.

The members were astonished. They were even more astonished when the head usher, an 80 year old man with a serious look on his face and a cane came walking toward Kelly. Everyone expected the worse for the college student. As the head usher walked slowly up the row the church fell silent. All eyes were on the old man as he raised his cane after each step, with his eyes fixed on Kelly. Everyone knew what he was going to say to Kelly. They waited. When the old usher reached Kelly, he slowly laid down his cane and with a great deal of effort sat next to Kelly, smiled and said, "I can't let you be the only one who gets a front row seat." Kelly smiled. He had just been ushered into the presence of the Lord.

As Christians, we know our time on this earth is limited. We look forward to the day when we shall step out of mortality into immortality. When that day comes, it will be the day we will no longer be an usher but will actually be ushered, into the presence of the Lord.

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he explains how a Christian moves from this life to the presence of the Lord.

Paul describes our present bodies as "Tabernacles" or dwelling places of the spirit. In this life our spirits groan about the discomfort and claustrophobic conditions in which they are forced to live. In this life, our bodies are but shells that contain our spirit before it returns either to God or eternal damnation. The longer we live, the more cramped the living space. Bodies wear, and health fails. Paul says in verse four, "For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened."

Paul's words are encouraging to believers who need to know what happens next. Believers need to know the order of things. We need to know what to expect.
He answers the question, "What happens to a believer when this tabernacle is dissolved?" His answer is brief and concise. When we are absent in the body, or at the moment of our departure, we are instantly taken into the presence of the Lord.

In this body, we walk by faith because we cannot see. We are not fully in his presence, here. Here we live on his promises and dream of being in his presence to realize the fullness of his glory. We approach his presence when we pray, worship or praise him. We are "fully" in his presence when we are able to see him in his fullness. In 1 Corinthians 13 Paul said, "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face."

Our Christian life experience prepares us and literally shows us the way to the throne of grace. It is the sum total of that experience that ushers us into the presence of the Lord.

How to be ushered

This text verse is very short. It gives us a real truth: When we are absent from the body, we are present from the Lord. We have to go just a little further to understand how this statement is true for a believer. We need to know how we are instantly transported from this life to the presence of the Lord. We need to know what we need to do to get ready for such a departure. We need to know how to get our feet planted firmly on the ramp and prepared for takeoff! There are a few things we need to make this transition real in our experience.

WE MUST WANT TO BE IN HIS PRESENCE: No matter how experienced the usher, no one can bring a person into the presence of the Lord that does not want to be there. Ushers can open the door, but we must want to enter into the presence of the Lord. There are many who do not want to be in God's presence. We see them every time the saint's gather. They prefer to stand outside and talk, or linger in the bathrooms, kitchen or lobby areas. Many come late so their time in the presence of the Lord will be limited. They clearly don't want to be in the presence of the Lord.

Yet, powerful things happen when we open up and come into his presence. The story is told of the man whose wife grieved over the death of her sister. She took the death very hard and mourned an unusually long time. The husband tried everything to bring her out of her depression. He bought her gifts, roses and even carried her on a two week cruise. None of those things seemed to lift her spirit. One Sunday morning, he opened his bible to the 23rd Psalms. He held the bible with one hand and her hand with the other and read to her. Many months after they sat on their porch and reflected back on that dark period and the wife confessed to her husband, "I really appreciated the roses, gifts and the attention you showed me when my sister died. But when I heard you read the words, "Yea thou I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, though art with me;' you ushered me into the presence of the Lord." Then, my burden was lifted and I saw the light."

Ushers can only open doors. Those on the outside must want to be in the presence of the Lord. True believers want to be in the presence of the Lord because:

-Burdens are lifted in the presence of the Lord.

-Problems are solved in the presence of the Lord!

-Spirits are revived in the presence of the Lord!

Even if we cannot see, we want to be in the presence of the Lord!

Even if we must walk on a walker or move around in a wheel chair we want to be in the presence of the Lord!

Even if doing so is a struggle week after week, we want to be in the presence of the Lord.

WE MUST WANT TO BE INTIMATE WITH HIM: Persons who want to know the Lord, must allow themselves to be intimate with him. When we leave this world and come into his presence, we must be prepared to continue an intimacy that began in this life. What does it mean to be intimate? Intimacy and being in the same room with a person are not one and the same. Intimacy is best described as "In-to-me-see." Those who are intimate allow others to see into their inner being. Those who are intimate with us know our faults and failures. They are also know our strengths and good points. They know our fears as well as the level of our courage. They know how we think because of "in-to-me-see." That's the way it is with God. When we come into his presence we do not come to watch a choir sing or hear a performance by a preacher. We come to be in the presence of God. He listens as we pray and hears the thoughts of our hearts. We listen as he speaks through the ministry of song and his spoken and written word.

We don't just want to be in the worship, we want to be closer. The songwriter said, "Draw me nearer, nearer blessed Lord, to the cross where thou hast died. Draw me nearer, nearer blessed Lord, to thy precious bleeding side."

This intimacy we share down here grows so close that we don't even need to be in a church service to talk to him. In the quiet of a nursing home we can talk to him. In the wee hours of the morning when others are sound asleep he can talk to us. No wonder the songwriter declares, "I come to the garden alone. While the dew is still on the roses. And the voice I hear falling on my ear, the Son of God discloses. And he walks with me and he talks with me and he tells me I am his own. And the joy we share, as we tarry there, none other has ever known.

To be prepared to be in his presence requires spiritual intimacy in this life before we reach the other side.

I am ready

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must be ready to be ushered into the presence of the Lord.

The prophet Elijah sensed that his time was drawing near. He began to walk toward the destination in which he would move from this life into the next. When the time came he moved instantly from this life into the next, aboard a mighty fiery chariot.

Enoch walked with God all of his life, sharing intimate thoughts and dreams. One day at the close of his life, his family looked for him and he was gone. The bible says he "was not" because he walked with God.

When a saint senses that time is growing short, she begins to sing the words of the late Rosemary Clooney's song, "This old house:"

This ole house is afraid of thunder
This ole house is afraid of storms
This ole house just groans and trembles
When the night wind flings its arms
This ole house is gettin' feeble
This old house is needin' paint
Just like her it's tuckered out
But she's a-gettin' ready to meet the saints
Ain't a-gonna need this house no longer
Ain't a-gonna need this house no more
Ain't got time to fix the shingles

Ain't got time to fix the floor
Ain't got time to oil the hinges
Nor to mend the windowpane
Ain't a-gonna need this house no longer
She's a-gettin' ready to meet the saints

The Apostle Paul said in 2 Timothy 4:6-7, ". I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith"

I am ready!

I have lived the Christian Life for decades. I am ready!

I have confessed my belief in Jesus Christ as my personal Lord and Savior. I am ready!

I have worshipped and praised you when I was young and in my golden years. I am ready!

I have ushered believers into your presence, to glorify for your name, Now I am ready!

I have testified to your goodness and everywhere I have glorified your name. I am ready!

I have told the world that Jesus died on the cross, but he arose from the dead and is alive today

Now, I'm ready!

I'm ready!

I'm ready to be ushered into the presence of the Lord!

The Perfect Storm

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 19, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full. And he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow: and they awake him, and say unto him, Master, carest thou not that we perish? And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm. And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith? And they feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him? Mark 4:37-41

Introduction

Have you ever been through a storm in your life? What was the most memorable? Recently, the entire nation has been glued to television sets listening to reports about the impact of Hurricane Ivan in the Southern portion of the nation. We have seen the gruesome photographs of property damage in the billions of dollars, lives lost and destruction that will take years to repair. We empathized with the people of the Florida, Alabama and other areas that have suffered the impact of these storms that have come with rapidity. Some areas have endured three hurricanes in the same month. Even storm prepared communities that live along the coast seem at their wits end as result of this month's great storms. While there was a great amount of physical devastation, there was very little loss of life due to early warnings and evacuations.

We never really get accustomed to storms. Last year it was Isabel, and Isadore in 2002. In 2001 it was Allison and before that Leslie. Each year the storms seem to get bigger and more destructive. Each year they seem to come with more frequency, if only in our perception.

Of all the hurricanes through the centuries, only one has been called the perfect storm. The perfect storm occurred on Halloween day in 1991. On this day a very strange thing happened. Three different weather elements collided in the aftermath of Hurricane Grace that created one enormous storm that has was unprecedented. Those who study the weather tell us that a high pressure on the edge of a cold front, the remnants of Hurricane Grace and a low pressure system that hung around and didn't move, resulted in a collision of the three that resulted in a great storm in the Atlantic that produced tidal waves 100 feet high. A movie entitled "The Perfect Storm" was a hair raising account of this great storm and the helplessness of the people who were caught within its grips. The best selling book by Sebastian Junger, upon which the movie was based, gives its readers a sense of what it feels like to be caught up in forces beyond your control or understanding.

We know something about storms, the physical kind and the storms of life.

We know about Hurricane Grace, Andrew, and Ivan but what about the storms of life? Can there be such a thing as a perfect storm?

The perfect storm with respect to the weather is created when all of the conditions are right for a big disaster.

However, the perfect kind of storms to have in our lives are the ones where we enter them with the full knowledge that God is still in control, and that anything that results a part of his perfection and divine will be for our good.

As Christians, we know that the perfect storm in our lives is not based on the intensity of the storm or the amount of damage that is caused, but its perfection is seen as the result of God's perfect and divine will.

Exposition

This text focuses on an instance in which Jesus restored peace in the middle of a storm.

Jesus and his disciples were riding in a boat to reach a place of peace and rest from the crowds that followed him. As his disciples, most of whom were able boatsmen, handled the ship Jesus went below deck and went to sleep.

In Palestine, there were two rainy seasons: the early rains of October and the latter rains of March. Between autumn and spring the Jews expected the rain to fall in large quantities and prepared themselves for its coming. The winter rains often brought thunder and lightning, strong winds that toppled houses and caused destruction. On the sea these rains often came quickly and with little warning.

This is the context of this passage. Without warning, a great storm arose and the shipmen became afraid because of the severity of the storm. As the wind and waves increased in intensity many feared for their lives until someone remembered that Jesus was on board. They went to him and found that he was asleep. One cried out "Master, the tempest is raging…carest thou not that we perish?" Jesus awoke, saw the tempest and quieted the storm with the simple words "Peace Be Still." Immediately the storm ceased.

Preparing for Storms

Those who live in storm tossed environs usually prepare for storms. They understand the severity of storms and many have what is necessary to survive. Some may ask, how can a person continue to live in areas plagued by hurricanes and storms? The same question could very well be asked of those who live in artic climates where temperatures drop to 15 and 20 degrees below zero or in desert areas where drought destroys crops and sweltering heat waves turn fertile ground into dust. The tropical islands that lure us to postcard vacations are often plagued with earthquakes, volcano eruptions and tycoon winds that bring death and destruct. Go north and get the chill and the cold. Go south and get the blistering heat. There is no paradise on this earth, that does not have its share of discomforts.

Likewise, there is no person who can expect to go through this life without encountering one storm or another. Since we know there is a likelihood of storms arising we must be prepared. Some have found it useful to prepare by:

STORING AMPLE SUPPLIES: Veterans of storms know that once a storm hits, certain items are difficult to obtain but necessary, among them are drinking water, food supplies and medicines. Many who live in storm prone areas try to store ample supplies to sustain themselves during storms. We do the same in life; we store up the essentials of faith during calm times to be used during stormy weather. We don't know when stormy weather will come but when it comes we reach into our storehouses for the essentials needed to wait out the storm.

POWER SUPPLIES: In great storms there is an instant power loss. When power is lost everything stops, food spoils, mobility is limited, communication is crippled, and modern life screeches to a sudden crawl. That's why many in storm prone areas maintain personal generators and fuel, designed to provide limited power during storms. Every Christian should know how to get power during and after a storm. The songwriter said, there is power, power, wonder working power in the blood of the lamb. In times of calm we store up power to be used in the storm. How do we store up power? We hear the word of God in times of calmness and it builds our faith. Romans 10:17 says, "Now faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God. Hearing the word builds faith and we draw on this faith during the stormy periods of our lives, without it we would not be able to survive.

KNOW WHERE TO GO: Sometimes, no matter how much preparation we make the storm is greater than we can handle. That's the way it was with Hurricane Ivan, Andrew and others. No amount of preparation could help them once the winds began to blow. That's when the wise began to evacuate to safe ground. In these communities there are signs posted everywhere designating evacuation routes. They are not necessary for the locals, because they know the way out, but for those who may be new to the area, these signs show them the way to higher ground. In times of storms believers know how to find a refuge. We don't need an evacuation sign. The word of God says, "God is our refuge and our strength, a very present help in times of trouble." A refuge is a safe place. Believers know the way to God and constantly lean and trust him to take them to higher ground. Maybe that's what the songwriter had in mind when he said, "Lord lift me up and let me stand, by faith on heaven's table land, no high ground I have not found, Lord plant my feet on higher ground."

The Perfect Storm

Finally, brothers and sisters, we must consider that what makes a storm a perfect storm is the faith that we carry into it; that after the rain, the sun will shine.

That's the way to endure the perfect storm; remember that no matter how destructive or massive the storm, that after the storm, the sun will shine. God is still on the throne.

The disciples on the ship encountered the perfect storm because any storm is a perfect storm as long as Jesus is on board.

Today storms still break out in our lives, but it's good to have Jesus on board. The storms of life are varied. Storms are sometimes economic. Money problems wreck lives like tidal waves, as relationships crumble and families shatter. However, no matter how fierce the storm, there is still hope as long as Jesus is on board.

When Jesus is on board there is:

-Hope for the hopeless

-Light for darkened paths

-Inspiration for the dispirited

-Encouragement for the discouraged

As long as Jesus is on board, we can call on Jesus and he can speak to the winds and command them to "be still!"

When Jesus speaks to the storm he summons the eye of God to shine upon us. Many people believe that the eye of the storm is the most dangerous part, but in reality, in the eye of a hurricane the wind does not blow, there is a stillness all around.

In the eye of the storm, there is a wall all around those within.

It's a good thing to be in God's protective eye. The songwriter says, "His eye is on the sparrow and I know he watches me."

Every Christian family knows and expects storms to occur at any given time. We don't pray to have lives without storms, we anticipate storms and prepare to make them perfect storms.

The perfect storm is the family difficult that threatens the life, security and happiness of its members, but all faith remains in tact because each knows that God is still in control

Families that have enjoyed the sunshine of life, also should expect its storms, periods of crises, death, and sadness.

The way we respond when these moments come, transform them into the perfect storm because they reflect our faith that God's love for us has not been diminished by the winds and the wave.

That's when we remember that even though the lightning flashes and the thunder rolls and the rain pours ...after the rain, the sun will shine again.

When the storms of life begin to rage the Christian responds, "My soul is anchored in the Lord" as we trust in his word. That's the perfect storm!

His word reminds us that after the rain, the sun will shine again.

When the rains come, we remember Romans 8:28 that "all things work to the good for them that love God."

When the storms have raged for a long time we become weak; but we are strengthened when we remember that God said, "My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness" That's the perfect storm!

When the storms come, we remember that even as the winds howl and the waters rise, Romans 8:37 still remains true: "in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." That's the perfect storm.

When the storms rise, it is important for every Christian family to have Jesus on board.

When Jesus is on board we are in the perfect storm!

When Jesus is on board, we have the assurance that no matter how rough the storm, the sun will shine again!

It's a perfect storm when it paints a trail of tears as we consider our losses, but we remember that after the rain, the sun will shine!

It's a perfect storm when it burdens our hearts and makes our souls heavy, but we remember that after the rain, the sun will shine.

It's a perfect storm when we remember that, after the storm, crying days will be over!

After the storm, the SON will shine!

When the Son of God shines hope is renewed!

When the Son of God shines faith is revived!

When the Son of God shines Happiness is restored and joy will never end!

The world tried to hide his glory in a storm of protest!

His enemies tried to destroy his majesty by nailing him to an old rugged cross!

His detractors try to bury his omnipotence in a borrowed tomb!

But Early Sunday morning, after storm....

The SON was shining again!

The Three Bears

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

September 26, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "2 Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ; 5 For every man shall bear his own burden. 17 From henceforth let no man trouble me: for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." Galatians 6:2,5,17.

Introduction

Have you ever been fascinated by fairy tales? Most adults can remember a time when we lived in the world of fairy tales. It was a land of witches, and wicked stepmothers, wolves, grinches and trolls. Our eyes were fascinated as the stories were read to us by our parents or teachers. Sometimes we found it difficult to sleep as we thought of the hideous creatures, conjured in our vast imagination, that we described as demons and little imps that were the characters of every fairy tale.

We have heard a variety of fairy tales. What's your favorite? Snow White? Hansel and Gretel, The Three Little Pigs? Little Red Riding Hood? While they are depicted as children's stories, by today's standards they would be considered inappropriate. An evil queen trying to kill Snow White? Hansel and Gretel putting an old lady in the furnace? Two pigs die and one kills the wolf in revenge! An innocent little girl eaten by a wolf! By today's standards, the fairy tales of old are fading into the dusty corners of book shelves.

Generally, fairy tales have some moral. Sometimes they don't. Such is the case with Robert Soutney's 19th century story of the "Goldilocks and the Three Bears," The story gives the account of a family of bears: Mama, Papa and Baby Bear, whose home was stumbled upon by a little girl by the name of Goldilocks who was lost in the wood. Goldilocks, finds their home empty but eats out of their food, sits in their chairs and sleeps in their beds before dashing out of the window. Though disturbed at her intrusion, the three bears seemed ready to bear it all with understanding, but Goldilocks was gone before they got the chance to say anything other than "there she is…"

Countless versions of the three bears have been told over the decades. Even the one that found baby bear standing in front of judge in a custody battle between Papa Bear and Mama Bear.

The judge asked Baby Bear would he prefer to leave with Papa Bear.

"No sir" said Baby Bear" "He beats me all of the time."

So the judge offered to allow him to stay with Mama Bear.

"No sir. That would be even worse because she beats me more than he does." Said the Baby Bear.

Asked where he would like to go, the Baby Bear said he had an Aunt Bertha in Chicago.

"What makes you think your Aunt Bertha won't beat you like Mama Bear and Papa Bear."

"Well, your honor, "said Baby Bear. "She lives in Chicago and the Chicago Bears don't can't beat anybody!"

So it appears that fairy tales have three bears, baseball has bears and comedians have three bears.

Many people may not have paid it much attention but there are three bears in the bible too! David killed a bear that attacked his father's flock 1 Samuel 17:34-37. Children who made fun of a bald headed preacher were attacked by a bear in 2 Kings 2:24; and Daniel had a vision of a rising powerful nation and depicted it as a bear in Daniel 7:5.

Those are three physical bears, but there are three more bears that point to three great truths about our relationship to God and each other and all three are in the same book of the bible: Galatians chapter 6.

As Christians, we should learn the lesson of the three bears of Galatians 6. They teach us the importance of knowing who we are, accepting responsibility for our actions and help us shoulder their burdens. Together, they tell the bible's story of the three bears.

Exposition

This text presents three ways in which the spirit of Christ is shown in the life of a believer.

The Book of Galatians is part of a set of Epistles written by Paul that address the idea of "Christ in you" or daily living with the spirit of Christ in your life.

Galatians is not a letter written to a single church but is addressed to a number of churches. These were churches begun by Paul when he was on his very first missionary journey, traveling with Barnabas into the cities of Antioch, Iconium, Derbe, and Lystra.

In Lystra, on one occasion, he was stoned and dragged outside the city and left for dead after having first been welcomed and treated as a god. In all these cities he experienced persecution.

Why was he persecuted? Was he a thief or murderer? No. He was persecuted because he promoted the idea that those who are in Christ are different people, who bear the marks of Christ in their own lives and live with a burden to help bear the burdens of others until his return.

The purpose of all of the epistles is to present Christ on a kindergarten level of truth that is easy for us to understand, exactly what it means to be a Christian.

Galatians 6 is a continuation of Galatians 5 in which Paul taught believers about having the fruit of the spirit. In Galatians 6 he shows us how this spirit of meekness, love, longsuffering, patience and general compassion shows itself when life has invaded our inner sanctums, places of refuge, and disturbed our peace.

Galatians 6 focuses on three ideas that demonstrate one aspect of the Christian attitude. It indicates that we belong to God, are held responsible for our actions and should help others who are struggling trying to shoulder their responsibility.

Paul uses the word "bear" three times in Chapter 6 in verses two, five and 17. These three "bears" paint a simple picture of what it means to be a Christian.

"I" Bear

If we look at the three bears of Galatians 6 in the reverse order of their appearance, we get an easy to understand picture of the Christian life.

Verse 17 says, "From henceforth let no man trouble me: for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." Those questioned his loyalty to the cause of Christ were reminded that his life was living testimony that he belonged to God.

Those who know the Lord, usually have a story to tell. When Paul told the Galatians about the marks in his body it was a gentle reminder that he been stoned, beaten and left for dead. In 2 Corinthians 11:24-27 he paints the picture clearly:

"Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep;In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness.

Thus, Paul made it clear that he had earned the right to say, I belong to God, for "I bear" the scars that testify of my sacrifice. He could have easily sung the words of the songwriter, "I belong to God, from the top of my head to the soul of my feet, I belong to God."

There are many today who can say with Paul "I've been there. I bear the marks."

The obligation of every believer is to share a personal testimony that says "I have been where you are going, now let me take you where you have never been."

Someone has tried alcoholism, and overcame it only by the Grace of Jesus. They say, "I bear the mark."

Someone has led a life of crime and survived it only by the power of God. They say, "I bear the mark."

Someone has led a loose sex life and overcame their compulsion only through the blood of Christ. The say, "I bear the mark."

"I bear" is a personal testimony. It confesses that I have not always belonged to God, but I have made many mistakes and suffered for them.

"I bear" is a way of saying "I have paid my dues." I know I am a child of God for he has touched my life and left his mark on me in ways that have changed me forever.

"You bear"

There is a second "bear" in Galatians 6. At verse five we read the words, "For every man shall bear his own burden." While the word bear in verse 17 refers to marks that witness, the word bear in verse five refers to "responsibility." Each person must be responsible for his/her own actions. The old timers put it this way, "Every tub must sit on its own bottom."]

Each believer has to account to God for their own stewardship in this life. 2 Corinthians 5:10 puts it this way, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad."

For what things are we obligated to bear responsibility?

We must bear responsibility for our sins. Every sin we commit is recorded in God's Holy book. Sins for which we have not repented will come up again. This doesn't include just the biggie size sins but the regular and small size sins as well.

We must bear responsibility for to our families. This is something that no one can do but you. No one else can take the place of parent who reads the bed time story to a child. No one else can take the place of husband or wife who desires quality time with their best friend in the world. No one else can shoulder our responsibility to our family. "You bear" has the responsibility of keeping marriage vows and holding them sacred.

In the same sense "You bear" has a responsibility to God and the church. Each believer bears the responsibility to keep vows that you made to God. Many promised God that if he would give them a job that they would do certain things. "You bear" is held responsible for that promise.

"You bear" responsibility for the vow you made in your hour of need. God expects you to do exactly as you promised. "You bear" the responsibility to develop a quiet time when you and God alone can communicate through prayer, inspirational reading, and personal devotion.

"You bear" the responsibility for doing your part to support the worship, study and ministries of the church.

"You bear" the responsibility to give liberally from the blessings that God has put within your grasp. "You bear" bear the responsibility to pray for the sick and seek the salvation of your kindred and acquaintances.

Because we bear the mark of Christ and belong to him, we also bear the responsibility to demonstrate our faith in our personal behavior, relationship with our family and support of the church.

Let's Bear

While verse 17 uses the word "bear" as a witness and verse five uses it to indicate "responsibility," verse two uses it to indicate "a heavy load."

Verse two says, "2Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

What does it mean to bear another's burden?

I recall an episode from my childhood in which I had a red wagon. I wanted to ride my friend in the wagon but the other boys in the neighborhood jumped in too, including colossal sized "Genebo." I couldn't pull the wagon. A couple of friends helped by pushing the wagon. Then one of them said to me, "Somebody's got to get out of the wagon." When we took a few boys out, it was easier to pull.

When we take a "Let's bear" attitude we done one of two things or both. We help a friend in need pull a heavy load and find a way to convince to unload unnecessary burdens.

Everyone has a life wagon that we are pulling. If all we had to pull was our personal concerns we could handle that load. However, family problems jump in the wagon, finance problems jump in the wagon, health problems jump in the wagon; then on top of that a few "Genebos" jump in the wagon such as adultery, gambling, alcoholism, crime, drug addiction. When all of that gets in the wagon its heavy to pull.

That's where the third bear comes in, "Let's bear."

"Let's bear" is that small group of Christian friends who we will allow access to our situation. Let's bear is that friend who doesn't mind pushing with you, but is also close enough to you to say, "You have to put down the whiskey bottle." Or "You must stop cheating on your husband", "or "You have a gambling habit, you must seek help," or "You have allowed your business interest to pull you away from God, come back"

Let's bear is the believer who is willing to push and pull with us, but who is also strong enough to us to tell us we need to unload and not care if we get angry.

We are compelled to labor with our friends in the faith when they are carrying heavy loads not of their own choosing. We are also compelled to help friends in the faith who are caught up weaknesses that they do not even comprehend.

"Let's bear" is different from the other bears because "let's bear helps a brother or sister struggling with a load."

"You bear" is different from the other bears because "You bear" places responsibility on each of us for the load we create.

"But I Bear" is even more different because I bear doesn't say, "you bear" but "I bears" says,

"I have found a friend who is all the world to me, his love is ever true. I love to tell how he lifted me and what his grace can do for you."

Saved by his power divine. Saved to new life sublime~

Life now is sweet and my joy is complete for I'm saved! Saved! Saved!

Somebody here today is not just one of the bears, but there is somebody here today who has a "three bears" testimony!

Somebody knows what it means to be "You bear" for they have borne their burdens in the heat of the day!

Somebody knows what it means to be "Let's bear" because they sing, "If I can help somebody as I pass along, then my living shall not be in vain."

But then there is somebody who can say, "I bear" witness that our God is able.

I've been down and he has picked up;

I've stumbled but he has put me on my feet again!

I've cried and he'a wiped the tears from my eyes!

I bear witness that if you trust in the Lord and lean not to your own understanding, he will direct your path!

No wonder the songwriter said, "What a friend we have in Jesus, all our sins and griefs to bear. What a privilege to carry everything to God in prayer."

He is a prayer answering God! He is a burden bearer!

His name is Jesus!

He carried a heavy old cross up Golgotha's hill.

The songwriter asked, "Must Jesus bear the cross alone all the world go free. No there's a cross for everyone and there's a cross for me!"

He died on Calvary!

But early Sunday morning…

A Place Called Perfect

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 3, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." 1 Corinthians 13:10

Introduction

Have you ever dreamed of a life in which everything is perfect? Most of us at one time or another have sought the ideal for ourselves and the world around. As young people we dreamed of a perfect world, a perfect family, a perfect school, a perfect church, and generally a perfect life.

As adults, we gradually folded our dreams of the perfect world and tucked them away. Occasionally, a book or a movie revives our thoughts about achieving perfection. The movie, "The Stepford Wives" showed a community with perfect wives, although they were mechanically created. The movie "Pleasantville" showed another perfect community where everyone lived in the perfect television world of the 50's families in black and white.

Our desire for perfection is probably residual. As part of God's perfect creation we naturally desire perfection. When God created the first family he placed them in the perfect paradise! He called that paradise Eden. There, everything was perfect. God designed us to live forever and to prosper in everything that we wanted to do. We were given dominion over all creation and told to go forth and fill the earth. Whatever happened to that place called Perfect? Can did such a place actually exist? Man has searched for "Utopia" which only another name for a place called "Perfect", but it seems that the harder we try to find it, the farther it goes away from us. There can be no place called "Perfect" as long as mankind is absolutely imperfect. There was a place that was perfect. It was a place of no pain, no sorrow, no sickness, no death and no sin. God created the Garden of Eden and put Adam and Eve in that garden in their perfect state of innocence.

It wasn't very long until their perfection and innocence were destroyed and all of mankind has had to suffer the consequences of Adam's rebellion and disobedience, but, don't just blame Adam, for there is not one of us who would not have done the same as he did if we would have been in his position. It is obvious, in the beginning, God wanted man to live in a place called Perfect!

Recently, Walgreen's began a series of commercials that revived our quest for perfection. This is the commercial that announces that a place called "Perfect" has been found. In that place called "Perfect," there are no dirty clothes or dishes to wash, no alarm clocks to wake up to, no sickness, no pain, no arguments, no bills to pay, nor is there anything that will make life anything less than absolutely perfect. Of course the commercial, reminds us quickly that everyone who hasn't found the place called perfect have found Walgreen's.

Most of us have had to settle for less than perfect because we have failed miserably in our search for perfection.

We have tried looking for the perfect man but then he was either good looking but broke. If he had some money and good looks he didn't know how to treat a woman. Some men have sought the perfect woman but either she was too tall or too short. She rarely had everything necessary to complete the entire picture of what we called the perfect woman.

It is doubtful that many of us live in a place called "Perfect" It is also doubtful that many of us have found the perfect husband, wife, mother, father, sister, brother church or school.

As Christians, we know that the closest we can come to perfection in this life is to draw close to God. True perfection in this life is impossible to achieve. Here, we see through a glass darkly, but one of these days we will come face to face with God's perfection and he'll prepare for us "A place called perfect."

Exposition

This text focuses on Paul as he wrote to the Corinthians about the nature of the Christian's struggle to live out the full meaning of the Christian life in this world.

His immediate discussion was about the importance of love, which he said was the greatest of the gifts. This life, he explained is but a prototype of the life to come. We see through a glass darkly in this life, but when we have come into the perfection of Christ we will see everything clearly.

What is perfection? In Greek, the word translated "perfect" often in the New Testament is "teleios." "Teleios" shows up many times in the New Testament, and it almost always is translated "perfect." It almost always means "mature."

Thus, when Matthew 5:8 uses the word "Telios" when it says, "Be ye therefore perfect" it shows Christ commanding disciples to grow in maturity in the faith. Perfection comes with time and experience.

We are not expected to instantly come into the full knowledge of God or to instantly become sinless. We are expected to mature in our relationships, thinking and understanding coming closer to the elusive goal of perfection. If we should come up short in that maturing process, we fully expect the grace of God to cover all the ground that we left uncovered.

You don't have to be perfect

You don't have to be perfect to live in the place called perfect, but it doesn't hurt to try. One of the fallacies circulating about salvation is the belief that coming to Christ requires us to achieve perfection first. Many are reluctant to become Christians because they know that there are many issues in their lives they feel must be worked out first. The issues are varied. They often include alcoholism, adultery, drug abuse, or criminal activity. They are not the only items on the list, but most of us believe that the list of imperfections must be perfected before we can honestly consider becoming a Christians.

This is flawed conception because we are unable to perfect ourselves, even though perfection is our goal. In church circles, we call it "sanctification." Sanctification is the process of becoming perfect. The old timers call it "working out your soul's salvation." In essence, we accept Christ in our present state and then begin working to achieve perfect. Little by little we overcome first one imperfection then another, getting closer to the idea. Any believer who has been loyal to the faith for a while can testify that while they are not what they want to be, they are much stronger in the faith now than they were when the first came to Christ.

If I'm not perfect how do I get there?

If we are not perfect, how can we expect to get to the place called perfect? If God is perfect and God is looking for people to take to a perfect place, how can we really expect to go to the place called perfect if we have so many imperfections. While God is perfect, he is not looking for perfect people. He is looking for people who are willing to do their best to achieve perfect and trust him to make up the difference. This idea of "taking up our slack" is called "grace."

Some of the strongest and most effective voices for God have been people who were imperfect, but were made perfect by the "grace" of God. In Genesis 6:8, we read that Noah "found grace in the eyes of the Lord." When God decided to flood the world and destroy everything left living on the face of the earth, he spared Noah. Why? It wasn't because Noah was perfect. If we know anything about Noah we know that he had a bad habit of getting drunk. That fact alone lets us know that Noah was not perfect. While he was not perfect, Noah found grace in the sight of God. Samson had a lot of strength, but he wasn't perfect either. He had a love for strange, ungodly women. Yet God used him to help deliver Israel. Peter was a bold man but he denied Christ three times. He certainly wasn't perfect. Paul, by his own confession, was far from perfect. In 1 Timothy 11:15, "This is the faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am the chief." God can use imperfect people to achieve his perfect will. You don't have to be perfect to begin our journey to the place called perfect.

How can I be made perfect?

You may not be perfect, but you can be made perfect. There is a slight difference in the meaning of the phrases "made perfect" and "make perfect." The difference explains how the Holy Spirit works in a believer's life. When we think of "make perfect" we tend to apply this phrase to ourselves. We think we should make ourselves perfect before we come to Christ. Repeatedly, however the scriptures refer to being "made perfect." For example, when Jesus prayed his last prayer In John 17:23, he said he had completed his mission to have them "made perfect." In 2 Corinthians 12:9 Paul asked for the thorn in his side which made him imperfect to be removed, but God answered, "My grace is sufficient for thee and my strength is made perfect in weakness."

To be made perfect is to be justified. For every sin we commit, grace balances the scale. For every wrong, Grace helps make us right with God.

This is not a license for us to keep doing wrong things, it is what is given to every believer, automatically who believes in Christ. Those who are trying to do right have the knowledge of knowing that even if they don't get everything right, that God understands and will take care of the rest. We are not perfect, but his grace fills in the blank spaces and makes us perfect in the sight of God.

How do you start the process? Romans 10:9 spells out how it happens. First you believe in Jesus Christ as the son of God and that God raised him from the dead. Tell that belief to someone else in a church service or otherwise. If you do this, you are still a person who is not perfect, but your new trust in God starts a process that from that day forward, changes things so that you are "made perfect" in the sight of God.

A Perfect Place for Made Perfect People

Finally, brothers and sisters we must remember that when it's all over, God has prepared a perfect place for all of the people he has made perfect with his blood.

There may not be a place in this world populated by perfect people, but there is a place called perfect.

Abraham traveled all of his life, looking for a place called perfect, it was a city not made with hands!

Elijah received a one way ticket to the place called perfect!

In this place called perfect:

—There are no wars because there is only peace, in the place called perfect!

—There is no hatred, because there is only love, in the place called perfect

—There is no sadness, because there is only gladness, in the place called perfect!

—There is no weakness, because there is only strength in the place called perfect!

—There is no death, because there is only life in the place called perfect!

I know there is a place called perfect because I heard Jesus say, "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am ye may be also!"

The place called perfect is a land, on a far-a-away strand where we will never grow old.

It will have perfect streets, made of solid Gold!

It will have perfect lighting, because it will be illuminated by the glory of God!

It will have perfect medicine, because there will be a tree in its midst that will be good for the healing of the nations!

I don't know about you, but I want to go the place called perfect!

If you want to go with us it begins when you believe in God who had a perfect son!

If you believe he lived a perfect life and died a perfect death on an old rugged cross!

If you believe he's alive because he arose early Sunday morning; then

Come and go with me, to my father's house!

There will be perfect peace!

Perfect joy!

Perfect happiness!

In my father's house!

Behold the Tabernacle of God

A Sermon by Roosevelt Wright, Jr.
For the Tabernacle Baptist Church
Monroe, La.

October 17, 2004

SCRIPTURE: "And I heard a great voice from heaven saying, Behold the Tabernacle of God is with men and he will dwell with them and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and he be their God." Revelation 21:3

Introduction

Have you ever moved into a new house or apartment? It's a little unsettling to move. Even though we look forward to our final destination, moving itself is a pain. Not many people go through their entire lives without moving at least once. For some, moving has become such a regular phenomenon that they keep their bags packed, and very few items are ever taken from their storage boxes. There is a sense of permanence and finality that comes with being one place, at least, where we won't have to move again

If moving is unsettling, then regular changes of roommates can also be unsettling. College students learn quickly about room mates. Sometimes we get good roommates who thoughtful, clean and orderly. Then sometimes we get roommates from hell. Those are the ones who are everything but orderly. Forrest Gump's rule also applies to roommates, "Roommates are like a box of chocolates; you never know what you are going to get."

It would be great if we could live in one great place, with a roommate straight from heaven! Such a place would be a Godsend. It would be great!

Suppose I told that God has been trying to live with us since the beginning of time but we have either, put him out, shut him out or have lived so badly that we were like roommates from hell? That is the whole story of the bible in a nutshell. God has been trying to live with us in many ways but often we have turned him away. In some cases, he moved in and we moved out. He came close and we moved away. In other cases we just moved altogether. 1 Chronicles 17:5 says, God had no real place to live with us and he moved from "tent to tent and from one tabernacle to another."

We are encouraged however, because while the bible shows us the many ways that God has tried to live with us and in us, it ultimately shows us that one day he will finally live with those who want to be his people and he will be their God.

As Christians, we look forward to the day that God is not only around us, and near us, but that will be with us through all eternity. Our hearts will jump with joy when we hear the angels proclaim, "Behold the Tabernacle of God.!"

Exposition

This text focuses on the John's revelation of the future state of the church and the relationship of all believers to God.

John painted a picture of the New Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven like a bride adorned for her husband. This is the beautiful home of the saints, the final destination of the church and millions of believers. They will be in the presence of God.

A voice will announce (v3) some very important words, "Behold the Tabernacle of God is with men and he will dwell with them and they shall be his people and God himself shall be with them and be their God." It is a statement of finality. It suggests the end of a long struggle to achieve oneness!

The word "Tabernacle" is used in verse three. It means "Dwelling Place of God" in scripture. It is the place where God lives. It is the place where he and his people meet each other. The name has its origins in the Old Testament. God instructed Moses to build a tent in which he could be present with the people in their journey from slavery to freedom. Thus, he commanded Moses in Exodus 25:8 that the people should build him a sanctuary "so that I may dwell among them." In verse nine God refers to this dwelling place as a "Tabernacle." Moses constructed it according to seven principles God laid out.

It was to be constructed and maintained by offerings from the people (Exodus 25:2)

It was to be constructed by people who God would give the wisdom to guide its construction (Exodus 36:1-8)

It was to be constructed in every detail by the divine pattern (Exodus 25:40)

Exodus 39:32 says Moses finished the work. Although it was a meticulously constructed tent with lavish trimmings, people still could not get close to God as he wanted them to be. It had beauty and grandeur. It indicated that he was God, but it did not indicate that the people who came near it were his people.
